SENATOR LaBILLOIS?

Claims Being Pushed by Influential
N. B. Politicians.

In northern New Brunswick the filling of the Senate vacancy is creating great interest, and strong influence is being brought to bear on Sir Wilfred Laurier to appoint the Hon. Chas. LaBillois. This would give universal satisfaction to all classes.

The St. John Freeman says:—

"When it became known in New Brunswick that a Frenchman rather than Mr. Costigan might be appointed to the Senate, friends of Dr. E. T. Gaudet, of Memramook, began a lively fight for his appointment rather than that of Mr. LeBlanc. They caused it to be understood that they were in no way anxious to interfere with Mr. Costigan's chances, but if that

"However, there is no object in my denying that I am in the race for one of the vacant seats in the red chamber, and I may say further that my claims to the position are being strongly supported."

Mr. LaBillois referred to the canvass that was being urged against him in some quarters that he was a native of Quebec. This he says is not the case, as he has been informed by his parents that he was born at Dalhousie, in this province, on the 18th day of December, in the year 1826. Although his personal recollection of the event is somewhat indistinct, Mr. LaBillois believes this information to be accurate. He says gentleman was not to be appointed they gave many reasons why the new senator should be Dr. Gaudet rather than Mr. LeBlanc. In the meantime a member of the Federal government, belonging outside of New Brunswick, informed friends of Hon. C. H. LaBillois that there was really a good chance of a Frenchman being appointed to the Senate; that Mr. LaBillois would probably be acceptable as a "dark horse," and because of his belonging to Restigouche, which was one of four Northern counties without any representation in the Senate. Mr. LaBillois, it is understood, talked the matter over with some friends and became a formal applicant for the Senatorship with it is whispered, the support of at least one of the M. P.'s who had before leaving Ottawa recommended Mr. LeBlanc.

HON. C. H. LaBILLOIS.

Mr. LaBillois is reported to have said:—"The statement that I have been promised one of the vacant New Brunswick senatorships is premature."

also that his father had been engaged in business at Dalhousie for about twenty years previous to that event.

He says that the four north counties are solid for him, and the general feeling throughout the province he believes to be very favorable to him. This sentiment, he has every reason to believe, is gaining ground. He was agreeably surprised at the hearty assurances of support he had received from his friends in St. John.

Mr. LaBillois takes it for granted that the Acadians in view of their rapidly increasing numbers and advancement along educational lines, are entitled to another representative in the senate, and believes that his appointment would be favorably regarded by the great majority of his compatriots, and by the people of the province generally.—Sun

HAS HIGGINS CONFESSED?

ST. JOHN, Oct. 10.—John Smith, who was released from Dorchester yesterday, is in the city today, and told the police that Frank Higgins, who worked inside the penitentiary, had confessed to him that he killed Willie Doherty, for whose murder he was convicted two years ago. Smith says Higgins seemed absolutely callous, and showed no regret for the crime.—Gleaner.

The annual shoot of the Restigouche Rifle Association took place on Thursday and Friday of last week. A high wind was blowing during the competition and taking this into consideration the scores were good.

K. Shives who has held the cup during the past year. The highest score at any single range was made by Dr. Cates—83 out of a possible 85 at 200 yards.

BONAVENTURE NEWS.

The Railway at Paspebiac—
An Agricultural Orphanage.

As the result of an understanding entered into between the Atlantic & Lake Superior Railway and the Atlantic, Quebec & Western Railway (New Gaspé Railway) track laying will be commenced on Monday next and the line extended to Paspebiac into which passenger and freight trains will run regularly after Nov. 1st.

Mr. Nimmo, the engineer of the railway, who makes this statement in a letter to Mr. Marcell, M. P., adds that the line is practically located five miles past St. Godfrey. Plans to Port Daniel will be completed by Christmas so that the road may be extended there early next season. This will be good news for the people of that district.

Last year Mr. Marcell received a letter from Rev. Abbe Cramillon, of Paris, France, former Chaplain of the French fleet, stating that he was anxious to establish an agricultural orphanage at Paspebiac. This priest has lately visited Paspebiac with some lady relatives, and after conferences with the Quebec Government, the Archbishop of Quebec and others, it is practically settled that the institution will be established there with a land grant to help it.

Tenders have been called by the Marine Department for the reconstruction of the Point Macquarrie Light House lately destroyed by fire.

STOLE A HORSE

Another Couple make a Bold
Stroke at Horse
Thieving

Some few days ago a couple of men drove down the other side of the river ostensibly for the purpose of trading horses. They appeared to find it hard to get the proper kind of bargain and so coming across a fine looking horse in a field at Nouvelle they quickly removed the harness from their own jaded and poor-looking brute and hitched up the fresh horse. They drove to Cross Point, crossed over to Campbellton and started off down the coast. A constable is on the look-out for them and it is hoped the racals will be captured.

PRINCE LOUIS ON HUNTING TRIP

Petitcodiac, Oct. 4.—Prince Louis of Battenberg, Capt. Kerr of H. M. S. Drake with two sailors arrived here this morning on No. 9. John Maloney, an Indian guide, met them and they went to Canaan to spend a few days hunting moose.

A few years ago a witty but not over industrious Celt was one of the street gang at Newburyport, and a few minutes before noon he threw his shovel into the gutter, sat down on the curb-stone, and proceeded to fill and light his pipe. Just as he extracted the first puff of smoke Superintendent of Streets Pritchard came around a corner and, seeing Pat, roared out: "Here; what are you throwing down your shovel for at this time of day?" "To cool it, sir," said Pat, whereupon the Superintendent dodged around the corner to get his face together.

ACROSS THE ATLANTIC.

Graphic Description of a Trip To the Old World.

(Written Especially for Events by Geo. D. Bain.)

In my previous letter I spoke of Hampton Court Palace and attempted to describe some of the rare and magnificent furnishings of the apartment called the Great Hall. I will now endeavor to give your readers an idea of the character and decorations of some of the other rooms.

WILLIAM III'S PRESENCE CHAMBER.

Facing the entrance to this room hangs the Canopy of State beneath which was formerly placed the chair of state. Here is where the King used to receive Ambassadors and statesmen. The Canopy is of crimson damask; at the back, the arms of William III and his motto "Je m'en tiens droit"—old French which would now be written, "I think—'Je m'en tiendrai'." The arms and motto are worked in silver. Three old-fashioned looking glasses, with gilt frames and bevelled edges, as well as several stools which are here, form part of the original furniture of this room. There is a fine silver chandelier hanging from the ceiling, said to have been placed here in William's time. On a mantle piece are two pieces of oriental ware, which belonged to Queen Mary.

THE HAMPTON COURT BEAUTIES

The well-known collection of the Beauties of the Court of William and Mary painted by Sir Godfrey Kneller and styled the Hampton Court Beauties, are found in this room. Among them are Lady Diana de Vere, Duchess of St. Albans, Lady Mary Bentwick, Countess of Essex, Carey Fraser, Countess of Peterborough, Lady Margaret Cecil, Countess of Renelagh, and several others.

WILLIAM III'S STATE BEDROOM.

The ceiling of this room, which is painted with designs emblematic of sleep shows in one part, Endymion nestled in the arms of Morpheus, with Diana watching him as he slumbers. In another part is a fine figure of Somnus with his attendants.

The bed is not Wm III's but the state-bed of Queen Charlotte, George III's Queen. The embroidery, which is on lilac satin, is said to have been worked by the Clergy Orphan School, and is a very beautiful piece of work. Near the bed is an old clock which has been here for nearly 200 years. It only requires winding once a year, is still in good repair and wound up regularly.

QUEEN ANN'S STATE BEDCHAMBER.

The size of this bedroom is 36 ft by 25 ft, and thirty feet high. On the ceiling is a beautiful painting representing Aurora, rising out of the ocean on her golden chariot drawn by four white horses (life size) and attended by Cupids; below is a design representing Night and Sleep. The drapery around the bed in this room is of very fine crimson Genoa velvet, with stools, etc., to match. Near the bed are two large blue bowls, which belonged to Queen Mary. A silver chandelier very elaborately decorated hangs from the ceiling.

QUEEN ANN'S DRAWING ROOM.

This room is said to have been built by Sir Christopher Wren in 1694. Its decoration, however, dates from the reign of Queen Ann, 10 years later. It is the central room of William III's East Front, towards which all the lines of the garden walks and avenues of the park converge. The chief decoration of this apartment consists of the paintings on the wall and ceiling. They were executed by Nerrio in 1704-5 and cost about £1,000. They are a good specimen of his exuberant design and gaudy coloring. The painted ceiling has been visible ever since it was finished by the artist. The existence of the painted walls, however, was unknown and unsuspected, until discovered about 25 years ago by means of a rare tract published in 1741 and found in the library at the British Museum. In this work it was stated that "on the sides of this room are more paintings of Verrio, representing the British Fleet and Prince George of Denmark pointing to it; and the four parts of the world shown by four figures" but that they had been "covered over with green damask".

Permission was got from the authorities to examine the walls and soon the paintings were discovered behind the canvas. In 1809 the canvas and paper were stripped down and the painted walls, hidden for 164 years, were once more brought to light. The paintings were found to be in good condition, except in places where the plaster had been cut away and holes made by nails for hanging pictures on. The restoration of the pictures occupied about three months. This room presents exactly the same appearance now as when Queen Ann occupied it.

Could not be Better.

The uniform success of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy has won for it a wide reputation and many people throughout the country will agree with Mr. Chas. W. Matison, of Millford, Va., who says: "It works like magic, and is the best preparation I know of. It couldn't be any better." He had a serious attack of dysentery and was advised to try a bottle of this remedy, which he did, with the result that immediate relief was obtained. For sale by all druggists.

INVASION OF ENGLAND.

Speech of Hon. Mr. Balfour On the Subject.

The speech delivered by Mr. Balfour, the British Prime Minister, in the Imperial House of Commons, on Imperial defence, has been issued in a revised and corrected form of Longmans, Green & Co., London. It will be remembered that this was the speech in which Mr. Balfour discussed the possibility of invasion by France, and declared it a possibility that need not be seriously considered. Though France was the country named in the hypothesis presented, it was not the country specially in the minds of the speaker and the audience. Germany was the nation both had in view during the discussion. Here is that portion of the speech dealing with the question of the landing of an army of seventy thousand men, the worst imaginable conditions for Great Britain. Mr. Balfour having first shown the infinite danger such an army would run of destruction by British warships in attempting to reach the English coast:

"Let us, however, assume that this huge convoy has escaped attack on its voyage, and has reached our shores in safety; what then? Disembarking 70,000 men on a coast such as that between Portsmouth and Dover is not an easy operation; above all it is not a quiet operation. I do not believe anybody will estimate the time it would take as less than forty-eight hours. My advisers inform me that such an estimate is sanguine for calm weather and that in rough weather the feat would be impossible. Forty-eight hours means two days and two nights, two opportunities, that is to say, for the submarine and two for the destroyer. How does anybody imagine that this fleet of undrilled transports, improvised with ships (since nets can only be used by ships which are structurally devised to this purpose), how is it possible that this helpless mass of transports could escape the attacks of these coast defence vessels, even if unsupported by the force of battle-ships, cruisers and other craft always to be found in our ports? The thing is surely impossible. Conceive the position of the invading soldiers—the pick, no doubt, of the invaders' army, they would not be asked to fight for glory on a stricken field. But, close packed in transports, commanded by captains ignorant of war, not knowing when or where or how the threatened attack would take effect, knowing only that if it did take effect they could not strike a blow in self-defence, these helpless battalions would be required to await their fate. I do not know whether we have the right to measure the courage of our opponents by our own, or the readiness of their leaders to take responsibility by that of British officers, but I am certain there is no Admiral in our fleet who would willingly undertake a task such as I have endeavored to describe. No British Admiral would regard the conveying of vessels carrying 70,000 men across at least 75 miles of sea, and their subsequent protection for two days and two nights in positions not only fixed, but perfectly ascertained, in waters swarming with torpedo craft and submarines, as other than the enterprise of a lunatic. And what a British Admiral would regard as insane is scarcely likely to be considered as practicable by sailors of other nations."

PSYCHINE

(PRONOUNCED SI-KEEN)

Has Made Him a Strong, Healthy Man—Has Brought Him From a Bed of Lingering Illness Where He Hovered Between Life and Death.

The cause of almost every organic disease is traced to a weak throat or affected lungs. The lungs being the primary organs in circulation of the blood, if they become diseased the blood takes on impurities which are delivered to every part of the body. You say you are RUN DOWN, have STOMACH TROUBLE, KIDNEY TROUBLE, CATARRH OF THE STOMACH, OBSTINATE COUGHS OR COLDS, LOSS OF FLESH, NIGHT SWEATS, CHILLS, AND FEVER. All of the above are the outcome of diseased lungs and are the allies of CONSUMPTION.

LUNGS MADE STRONG WITH PSYCHINE REMAIN STRONG

MOTORMAN WALDEN, to be seen any day on a Broadview Ave. car, Toronto. Cured with Psychine six years ago, his lung trouble has not returned.

Motorman Walden's Story of His Illness and Subsequent Recovery Through Using Psychine.

Mr. Walden says: "About six years ago I was taken down with a gripe, then pneumonia, and typhoid fever, inducing serious lung trouble, which soon developed into consumption. I had a serious trial of it, and was under treatment by several physicians of Toronto. The disease gained such headway that hospital treatment was resorted to, but gave me no hope of recovery. I also spent some time in the Convalescent Home, but the disease returned with increased severity, and I was regarded as a hopeless case. I left the city for the country under the belief that I would renew my strength and make me well. On parting with my brother he said afterward that 'he never expected to see me alive again.' While out of the city I began using Psychine, and I am proud to say it has been a blessing to me. I was enabled to return home after using it for a short time, and continued the treatment until several bottles had been used and I was able to go about. When I began the remedy my weight had been reduced to 140 pounds—now I weigh fully 210 pounds. Psychine is a wonderful flesh-producer. I do not know its medical properties—only that Psychine, and nothing else, has restored me to health. Those who know me are aware of what my condition was and the hopelessness of my case. There is no medicine in the world like Psychine for lung trouble, and I am sure if it had not been for it I WOULD HAVE BEEN A DEAD MAN."

Sunlight Soap

With ordinary soap a woman has to work so hard and so long on wash day she has no time for preparing any of the family meals. Wash day is a trial, and the good wife faces each with a sigh of despair. Sunlight Soap makes all the difference in the world. No toiling—no rubbing—no boiling—less than half the labor with much better results. Most women are all through their wash by twelve o'clock when they wash with Sunlight Soap the Sunlight way. It makes child's play of work. Your money back for any cause of complaint.

5c. FIVE CENTS 5c. LEVER BROTHERS LIMITED, TORONTO 1015

It need hardly be added that Mr. Balfour had throughout taken suppositions most favorable to the enemy, and this most of all in taking France as the hypothetical foe, for whatever the difficulties to France, they would be greatly increased in the case of Germany on account of her greater distance from the British coast line.

The issue of the Prime Minister's speech in pamphlet form may be intended to allay anxiety at the present time, for there is evidently an uneasy feeling abroad as to Germany's intentions.

Since the pamphlet was issued Mr. Balfour has addressed a great meeting of Scottish volunteers on the question of the defence of the island. To admit that there is reason for discussing the subject seems to suggest that the British Premier is hardly satisfied with the soundness of his conclusions as to the impossibility of an invading army reaching British shores. Mr. Balfour had not, however, forgotten his previous conclusions. In fact, he repeated and emphasized his conviction, founded on the advice of naval experts, that Britain cannot be successfully invaded by any army of considerable size. The volunteers might, nevertheless, he said, be called on for the defence of their country. The regular army might be fighting abroad, and while no considerable army would dare make a descent on British shores, it might very well happen that raids would be made, and here the volunteers would prove most useful. The question of defence is, unfortunately, still regarded as a very essential part of British statesmanship.

TO THE SENATE.

Events learns with pleasure that an effort is being made to secure a Senate appointment for Hon Chas LaBillois.

Mr. LaBillois, since his entrance into politics some twenty years ago, has won for himself the respect and esteem of all classes on the north shore who would learn with deep pleasure of his appointment to the Senate. In all ways he is qualified for the position, being young and clever. Besides his personal claims there are many others being advanced and at the present time the chances of his appointment look bright.

A Royal Household Flour Traveller

hears some funny stories about flour sales as he goes from place to place.

He hears about the flour that makes good bread, but is hard to work with, and of that which makes only a tolerable loaf but gives no trouble at all. Identically the same flour in both cases only each case represents a different point of view. He also hears of Mrs. Jones who makes all her bread and pastry from Royal Household and cannot understand why any sensible woman could be bothered with the ordinary kinds. And then he hears of Mrs. Smith who thinks Mrs. Jones' bread is nice enough but prefers her own which isn't nearly as good.

He hears of the man who sent twenty miles to get a barrel of Royal Household because there wasn't any to be had in his own town at the moment, and he also hears of the hotel cook who tried one baking and wouldn't have any more.

Going deeper into the last story, he learns that the hotel man had the flour baked elsewhere and that it beat any bread his own cook had ever produced from any other flour; and so he goes and so his stories grow until he often asks himself,

I Wonder What Will Be Next.

THE REDISCOVERY OF ALBERTA.

Winter-Wheat Transforming The Ranching Country.

High River, Alta., Sept 30.—One of the remarkable features of western Canada is that it is constantly surprising the world by further revelations of wealth. Almost up to the present moment those who spoke of the wheat fields of the west eliminated all that territory lying southwest of a line, say, from Moose Jaw to Red Deer, as being fit only for ranching purposes. To-day the rancher is fighting for his life, compelled to recede before the wave of settlement sweeping up from the American boundary and east from the Rocky Mountains. The sound of the carpenter's hammer is audible almost from the Lake of the Woods to the Rockies as the tide moves east to meet the tide coming west. Just as central Saskatchewan began its transformation three years ago, so is southern Alberta now undergoing an evolution, and settlement has crept up to the very shadows of the snow-capped peaks. The question whether southern Alberta would grow wheat has been answered in the affirmative by practical tests, and this year is expected to show a production of one million bushels. The "land of the chinook" had not been found exactly suited for soft wheat, so when Mr E E Thompson, a shrewd Nebraska farmer, came to Spring Coulee three years ago he tried some turkey red, which had been a success in Nebraska, and to-day's happy conditions are chiefly the result of his initiative and enterprise.

It would be difficult to find any part of the country where such a peaceful and profitable revolution has taken place. The days of the free life of the open range are over so far as this section is concerned, and instead there is the domestic contentment of a farming country. Houses dot the landscape in every direction; this town—one of nearly a dozen between Calgary and McLeod—has doubled its population in a year, having now nearly 1,000 people, and solid business blocks give an air of permanence and prosperity. Three years ago there were plenty of homesteads within three miles of the town, while today they are all taken within thirty-six miles, with a very few exceptions, it being estimated that 5,000 quarter-sections have been homesteaded in that time. During the past eighteen months the Canadian Pacific have sold more than 100,000 acres of railway lands. Settlement reaches out thirty miles to the east, and there is a cry for more railway facilities. It may soon be necessary to grid-iron southern Alberta as has been done in Manitoba. There is already talk that the Great Northern which enters Lethbridge will extend its line up to Calgary, and thence to Edmonton. Surveyors are out, and their statement that they are looking for petroleum is hardly swallowed by the westerners.

Naturally there is more or less feeling on the part of the ranchmen towards the usurpers of their former territory. It comes, however, when cattle are a low price and there is not the same enthusiasm in the business of the cowboy.

The farmers now wonder why the land was not settled long ago, and many declare that its reputation as a poor country for agriculture was due to the deliberate misrepresentation of the cattle men, who wanted to keep the land to themselves. The townspeople, apart from regretting the passing away of the glamor of cowboy life, welcome the change. It will mean a much denser population, and that means more business, as is already seen in the expanding towns all the way from Calgary to McLeod. It will not necessarily mean less beef either, for the cultivation of the soil will produce more feed than grows on the native prairie.

Of course, the ranching has not yet passed away. Some of the larger cattlemen have leased tracts of land for pasture, and there is still the open range off toward Medicine Hat and Swift Current, as well as some pasture lands in the foothills. To-day, however, the landscape gives signs of a fine farming country. Many fields of winter wheat show their green surfaces in strong contrast to the brown grass and wild sage of the prairie. Hundreds of modest new houses are the homes of men beginning life over again, and the piles of straw left by the thrasher and the tall village elevators give resemblance to the scenes in Manitoba.

As yet the crop chiefly undertaken is winter wheat. It is sown in August, grows to a height of six or eight inches in the fall, comes through the winter without "heaving" or destruction, even with the little snow which falls here, escapes the thaw-and-freeze period, which is the bane of Ontario winter wheat-growers in spring time, and is ready to be out about August 1st. Thus it escapes the early fall frost, which is the danger of spring wheat here, though I am told that up to the present there has been no frost this fall. The bakers prefer the winter wheat to the soft wheat, such as Odessa, which used to be grown here, as they say it gives a larger and heavier loaf of bread. A Minneapolis miller is reported to have estimated the difference in value at ten to fifteen cents per bushel. At the same time, judging by this year's yield of 35 bushels to the acre, the production lacks nothing in comparison.

This has been accomplished, too, without irrigation, as that has not been resorted to in this district and does not appear to have even been contemplated. The land here is better adapted for winter wheat than the northwestern States, as it is free from both the hot winds in summer and the blizzards in winter. A good deal of this year's crop will grade No. 1 Northern, which is considered very satisfactory. An element of economy claimed for it, too, is that it does not shell when overripe, as do other varieties. About 100,000 bushels of winter wheat will be thrashed in the High River district this year. This will be greatly increased next year, if success attends, as the area being put in will be from 15,000 to 20,000 acres.

Already the statisticians are estimating the future for winter wheat in southern Alberta. A paper submitted by the Calgary Board of Trade to the Transportation Commission the other day put it this way:—"It would now seem probable that what was looked upon as a purely grazing area would develop into a highly productive wheat-producing one. It contains about 40,000,000 acres, all of which is not fitted for the growth of cereals, but it is submitted that at least 70 per cent or 28,000,000 acres, are probably highly so. Assuming one fourth of it, or 7,000,000 acres, are in crop in each year, and taking as the basis of wealth the average spring wheat yield of Manitoba for the twelve years, 1888-1902, inclusive, 18.5 bushels per acre, you have an output of 129,500,000 bushels, or 27,600,000 barrels of flour per year."

THE RETURN OF SHERLOCK HOLMES...

BY A. CONAN DOYLE

"Yes, sir, I am your prisoner," she said. "From where I stood I could hear everything, and I know that you have learned the truth. I confess it all. It was I who killed the young man. But you are right—who says it was an accident. I did not even know that it was a knife which I held in my hand, for in my despair I snatched anything from the table and struck at him to make him let me go. It is the truth that I tell."

"Madam," said Holmes, "I am sure that it is the truth. I fear that you are far from well."

She had turned a dreadful color, the more ghastly under the dark dust streaks upon her face. She seated herself on the side of the bed; then she resumed:

"I have only a little time here," she said, "but I would have you to know the whole truth. I am this man's wife. He is not an Englishman. He is a Russian. His name I will not tell."

For the first time the old man stirred. "God bless you, Anna!" he cried. "God bless you!"

She cast a look of the deepest disdain in his direction. "Why should you cling so hard to that wretched life of yours, Sergius?" said she. "It has done harm to many and good to none, not even yourself. However, it is not for me to cause the frail thread to be snapped before God's time. I have enough already upon my soul since I crossed the threshold of this cursed house. But I must speak or I shall let me speak."

"I have said, gentlemen, that I am this man's wife. He was fifty and I a foolish girl of twenty when we married. It was in a city of Russia, a university—I will not name the place."

"God bless you, Anna!" murmured the old man again.

"We were reformers, revolutionists, nihilists, you understand—he and I and many more. Then there came a time of trouble. A police officer was killed, many were arrested, evidence was wanted, and in order to save his own life and earn a great reward my husband betrayed his own wife and his companions. Yes, we were all arrested upon his confession. Some of us found our way to the gallows and some to Siberia. I was among those last, but my term was not for life. My husband came to England with his ill gotten gains and has lived in quiet ever since, knowing well that his Brotherhood knew where he was and that he would pass before justice would be done."

The old man reached out a trembling hand and helped himself to a cigarette. "I am in your hands, Anna," said he. "You were always good to me."

"I have not yet told you the height of his villainy," said she. "Among our comrades of the underground there was one who was known as 'The Doctor'. He was noble, unselfish, loving—all that my husband was not. He hated violence. We were all guilty, it is true, but he was not. He would never dissuade us from such a course. These letters would have saved him. So would my diary, in which from day to day I had entered both my feelings toward him and the view which each of us had taken. My husband found and kept both diary and letters. He hid them, and he tried hard to swear away the young man's life. In this he failed, but Alexis was sent a convict to Siberia, where now at this moment he works in a salt mine. Think of that, you villain, you villain—now, now, at this very moment, Alexis, a man whose name you are not worthy to speak, works and lives like a slave, and yet I have your life in my hands, and I let you go!"

"You were always a noble woman, Anna," said the old man, puffing at his cigarette.

She had risen, but she fell back again with a little cry of pain.

"I must dash," she said. "When my term was over I set myself to get the diary and letters which, if sent to the Russian government, would procure my friend's release. I knew that my husband had come to England. After months of searching I discovered where he was. I knew that he still had the diary, for when I was in Siberia I had a letter from him once reproaching me and quoting some passages from its pages. Yet I was sure that, with his revengeful nature, he would never give it to me of his own free will. I must get it for myself. With this object I engaged an agent from a private detective firm, who entered my husband's house as a secretary. It was your second secretary, Sergius—the one who left you so hurriedly. He found that papers were kept in the cupboard, and he got an impression of the key. He would not go further. He furnished me with a plan of the house, and he told me that in the forenoon the study was always empty, as the secretary was employed up here. So at last I took my courage in both hands, and I came down to get the papers for myself. I succeeded, but at what a cost!

"I had just taken the papers and was locking the cupboard when the young man seized me. I had seen him already that morning. He had met me on the road, and I had asked him to tell me where Professor Braun lived, not knowing that he was in his employment."

"Exactly! Exactly!" said Holmes. "The secretary came back and told his employer of the woman he had met. Then in his last breath he tried to send a message that it was she—the she whom he had just discussed with him."

"You must let me speak," said the young man, in an imperative voice, and her face contracted as if in pain. "When he had fallen I rushed from the room, closed the wrong door and found myself in my husband's room. He spoke of giving me up. I showed him that if he did so his life was in my hands. If he gave me to the law, I could give him to the Brotherhood. It was not that I wished to live for my own sake, but it was that I desired to accomplish my purpose. He knew that I would do what I said—that his own fate was involved in mine. For that reason, and for no other, he shielded me. He thrust me into that dark hiding place—a relic of old days, known only to himself. He took his meals in his own room, and he was able to give me part of his food. It was agreed that when the police left the house I should slip away by night and hide in the room which he had pointed out to me. I took the poison that way you have read our plans. She tore from the bosom of her dress a small packet. "These are my last words," said she. "There is no more to be said. I have said all that I can, and I leave it to your honor and to your love of justice. Take it! You will deliver it at the Russian embassy. Now, I have done my duty, and I stop here."

"Stop here!" cried Holmes. He had bounded across the room and had wrenched a small vial from her hand. "Too late," she said, sinking back on the bed. "Too late! I took the poison before I left my hiding place. My head swims! I am going! I charge you, sir, to remember the packet."

A simple case, as yet in some ways an instructive one! Holmes remarked as we traveled back to town. "It hinged from the outset upon the pincer-net. But for the fortunate chance of the dying man having seized these letters, I should have been lost. I am not sure that we could ever have reached our solution. It was clear to me, from the strength of the glasses, that the wearer must have been very blind and helpless when he wrote these letters. When you asked me to believe that she walked along a narrow strip of grass without once making a false step I remarked, as you may remember, that it was a noteworthy performance. In my mind I set it down as an impossible performance save in the unlikely case that she had a second pair of eyes which enabled her to see. I seriously consider the hypothesis that she had remained within the house. On perceiving the similarity of the two corridors it became clear that she might very easily have made such a mistake, and in that case it was evident that she must have entered the professor's room. I was keenly on the alert, therefore, for whatever would bear out this supposition, and I examined the room narrowly for anything in the shape of a hiding place. The carpet seemed continuous and firmly nailed, so I dismissed the idea of a trapdoor. There might well be a recess behind the books, as you are aware, such devices are common in old libraries. I observed that books were piled on the floor at all other points, but that one bookcase was left clear. This, then, might be the door. I could see no marks to guide me, but the carpet was of a dun color, which lends itself very well to examination. I therefore smoked a great number of those excellent cigarettes, and I dropped the ash all over the space in front of the suspected bookcase. It was a simple trick, but exceedingly effective. I then went downstairs, and I ascertained in your presence, Watson, without your perceiving the drift of my remarks, that Professor Braun's consumption of food had increased—as one would expect when he is supplying a second person. We then ascended to the room again, when, by upsetting the cigarette box, I obtained a very excellent view of the floor and was able to see quite clearly from the traces upon the cigarette ash that the prisoner had in our absence come out from her retreat. Well, Hopkins, here we are at Charing Cross, and I congratulate you on having brought your case to a successful conclusion. You are going to headquarters, no doubt. I think, Watson, you and I will drive together to the Russian embassy."

Unanswerable. Maiden Aunt Caroline, you don't know how to train children. I've been noticing how you deal with Johnny. Nine out of every ten injunctions you lay upon him are "don'ts."

E were fairly accustomed to receive word telegrams at Baker street, but I have a particular recollection of one which reached us on a gloomy February morning, some seven or eight years ago, and gave Mr. Sherlock Holmes a puzzled quarter of an hour. It was addressed to him and ran thus:

Please avail me. Terrible misfortune. Right wing three-quarter missing. Indispensable tomorrow. OVERTON.

"Strand postmark and dispatched 10.20," said Holmes, reading it over and over. "Mr. Overton was evidently considerably excited when he sent it, and somewhat incoherent in consequence. Well, well, he will be here, I dare say, by the time I have looked through the Times, and then we shall know all about it. Even the most insignificant problem would be welcome in these stagnant days."

Things had indeed been very slow with us, and I had learned to dread such periods of inaction, for I knew by experience that my companion's brain was always active, though he would not admit it. He had been looking through the Times, and then we shall know all about it. Even the most insignificant problem would be welcome in these stagnant days."

the varsity all this year. But that's nothing! I didn't think there was a soul in England who didn't know Godfrey Staunton, the crack three-quarter, Cambridge, Blackheath and five internationals. Good Lord, Mr. Holmes, where have you lived?"

Holmes laughed at the young giant's naive astonishment.

"You live in a different world from me, Mr. Overton—a sweeter and healthier one. My ramifications stretch out into many sections of society, but never, I am happy to say, into amateur sport, which is the best and soundest thing in England. However, your unexpected visit this morning shows me that even in that world of fresh air and fair play there may be work for me to do. So now, my good sir, I beg you to sit down and tell me, slowly and quietly, exactly what it is that has occurred and how you desire that I should help you."

Young Overton's face assumed the bothered look of a man who is more accustomed to using his muscles than his wits, but by degrees, with many repetitions and obscurities which I may omit from his narrative, he laid his strange story before us.

"It's this way, Mr. Holmes. As I have said, I am the skipper of the Rugby team of Cambridge varsity, and Godfrey Staunton is my best man. Tomorrow we play Oxford. Yesterday we all came up, and we settled at Bentley's private hotel. At 10 o'clock I went round and saw that all the fellows had gone to roost, for I believe in strict training and plenty of sleep to keep a team fit. I had a word or two with Godfrey before he turned in. He seemed to me to be pale and bothered. I asked him what was the matter. He said he was all right—just a touch of headache. I bade him good night and left him. Half an hour later, the porter tells me, a rough looking man with a beard called with a note for Godfrey. He had not gone to bed, and the note was taken from him the night before. He had been taken in a chair as if he had been pole axed. The porter was so scared that he was going to fetch me, but Godfrey stopped him, had a drink of water and pulled himself together. Then he went downstairs, said a few words to the man who was waiting in the hall, and the two of them went off together. The last that the porter saw of them was that they were almost running down the street in the direction of the Strand. This morning Godfrey's room was empty, his bed had never been slept in, and his things were all just as I had seen them the night before. He had gone off at a moment's notice with this stranger, and no word has come from him since. I don't believe he will ever come back. He was a sportsman, was Godfrey, down to his marrow, and he wouldn't have stopped his training and let in his skipper if it were not for some cause that was too strong for him. No, I feel as if he were gone for good, and we should never see him again."

Sherlock Holmes listened with the deepest attention to this singular narrative.

"What did you do?" he asked.

"I wired to Cambridge to learn if anything had been heard of him there. I have had an answer. No one has seen him."

"Could he have got back to Cambridge?"

"Yes; there is a late train—quarter past 11."

"But so far as you can ascertain, he did not take it?"

"No; he has not been seen."

"What did you do next?"

"I wired to Lord Mount-James."

"Why to Lord Mount-James?"

"Godfrey is an orphan, and Lord Mount-James is his nearest relative—his uncle, I believe."

"Indeed. This throws new light upon the matter. Lord Mount-James is one of the richest men in England."

"So I've heard Godfrey say."

"And your friend was closely related?"

"Yes; he was his heir, and the old boy is nearly eighty—can't full of gout, too. They say he could chalk his billiard cue with his knuckles. However, allowed Godfrey a shilling in his life, for he is an absolute miser, but it will all come to him right enough."

"Have you heard from Lord Mount-James?"

"No."

They fairly agonize your life. Something powerful and penetrating is needed. Doctors know of nothing so swift to relieve as Nerviline, a strong, penetrating liniment made to cure just such pains as yours. Nearly fifty years in use—a good recommendation, surely.

DAN PATCH'S NEW RECORD.

Pacer Came Under The Wire In Phenomenal Time Without Turning a Hair.

Dan Patch, King of pacers, on Saturday at Lexington, Ky. clipping three-quarters of a second from his own, the world's record, of 1.56, negotiating the mile in 1.54. A crowd of 10,000 persons were already in a high state of enthusiasm over the breaking of the 1905 race record and the world's three-heat record successively, and when Dan Patch's time was hung out excitement approached frenzy.

The great son of Joe Patchen and Zeilika appeared for his trial at 4 o'clock, the track was lightning fast, there was no wind and the weather conditions were ideal. Scott Hudson was behind the pace maker. A strip of cloth between the wheels of the forward sulky to prevent dirt being thrown behind was the only suggestion of a wind shield. Hersey was behind Dan Patch. The books offered four to five either way on the result of the effort. There were cheers when 25 1/2 was hung out for the first quarter. Hope was sustained when 57 was posted for the half. In the stretch the pacer still keeping his even swinging stride, the runner at his sulky wheel began to crawl up. Dan Patch made no last supreme effort. He just finished the mile as he begun it. He scarcely broke into a sweat when led back to receive the plaudits of the crowd.

FIRE AT TRACADIE.

Lumber Mill, Box Factory and Lumber Burned.

CAUGHT IN BOILER HOUSE

Maine Capitalists Owned the Property. Fully Insured.

BATHURST, N. B., Oct. 9.—The large mills of the Tracadie Lumber Co., together with the manager's residence, store and office, also a large quantity of lumber at Sheila, Tracadie, N. B., was totally destroyed by fire on Sunday afternoon. The property was insured, but the amount is unknown.

TRACADIE, Oct. 9.—The Tracadie Lumber Company's mills, hotel, sheds and all the manufactured lumber, shingles, clapboards—every vestige of lumber, indeed—were burned Sunday afternoon. The fire caught in the boiler house and spread so rapidly in a northwest wind that nothing could be saved. Mr Wing is in Bangor and Mr Newcomb was in charge. The property was fully insured.

This property was situated two or three miles from Tracadie village and belonged to Maine capitalists.

The lumber mill was one of the finest in the province, being splendidly equipped with machinery so that all the lumber cut could be utilized for one purpose or another. There was also a box factory, which was well equipped. Fire fighting facilities had been provided and the mill seemed to be in little danger from destruction from fire.

The products of the mill have found a market in the United States, and have been shipped by rail. The quantity of lumber on hand was very large. Mr. R. Wing, of Oldtown, Maine, is the capable manager of the mills, and it will be seen by despatches he was in Bangor when the fire occurred. The loss to the people in Tracadie will be serious for about 120 persons were given employment. It is doubtful if the mill will be rebuilt. The supply of lumber on the company's hands has been reduced so largely that it may be considered advisable to erect another mill. The buildings mentioned—manager's residence, etc., were directly opposite the mill property.

The insurance on the mill properties and lumber is $119,800.

A BOMB IN NEW YORK

Twenty sleeping Persons Hurlled From their Beds

New York, Sept. 29.—A boom filled with both dynamite and a quantity of inflammable oil was thrown at the rear of a crowded five-story tenement house at 143rd street and 8th avenue to-day. Over twenty persons who were sleeping at the time hurried from their beds by the explosion and two of them were carried from the house unconscious. Within a minute after the explosion flames had nearly enveloped the rear walls of the building. The police believe that Black hand Italian assassins threw the bomb. The object of the attack was the rear door of an Italian barber shop, on the ground floor. The fire was extinguished with slight damage.

A Jucious Inquiry.

A well known travelling man who visits the drug trade says he has often heard druggists inquire of customers who asked for a cough medicine, whether it was wanted for a child or for an adult, and if for a child they almost invariably recommend Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. The reason for this is that they know there is no danger from it and that it always cures. There is not the least danger in giving it, and for coughs, colds and croup it is unsurpassed. For sale by all druggists.
