

LOST CHANCE TO BUY STREET RAILWAY

Thieves Crack Old Safe in Public Library; Steal $60

EFFECT OF COUNCIL VOTE PRACTICALLY TO EXTEND CHARTER FOR FIVE YEARS

New City Hall and Springbank Dam Proposition the Only Two Questions Likely To Be Voted On in the December Elections.

STREET RAILWAY PURCHASE LOSES OUT

Last night's session of the city council cleared the air of many things, and permits a fairly clear view of the issues which will go to the voters next month.

The most important move last night was probably the decision against a vote on the purchase of the street railway.

This is in itself quite as important as a vote of the people because it means that the franchise of the London Street Railway Company will now automatically extend for a five-year period. London will now have an opportunity, under existing legislation, to acquire the railway before 1930.

The strategy of the next five years will undoubtedly be to force the company into circumstances which make necessary a sale at any price.

Of all the questions which have been trumpeted within the last year only two seem at all likely to be sent to the electorate for decision in December.

These are the city hall bylaw and the new Springbank dam proposition.

The remaining issues, including the street railway purchase, the mayor's famous $800,000 municipal motor bus bylaw and commission form of government, are all out of the arena.

"Old Faithful" Alone.

As a matter of fact "Old Faithful" the city hall bylaw is the only measure definitely sent to the people by the city council.

The proposal to construct a new dam in the vicinity of Springbank has passed its second reading and may pass the third at a special session November 14. It may not go to the people because all ward two councillors are opposing the Springbank dam and will exert every effort to win a majority of the board to their line of thought before the next session.

With Ald. Drake clinging desperately to the bridge, the mayor's omnibus project, representing a proposed expenditure of at least $800,000 went down rapidly once the reef was struck. Before all members of the council had voiced their opinion the mayor shouted "It is enough. You have a majority now."

Double emphasis is laid upon those members of the council who again refused to allow the commission form of government at least to go to the people for an opinion.

The question was reopened with little difficulty but the effect was hopeless. The mayor found new supporters, but strange to relate, Ald. Wilson was one of them. Faithful to the last again was Ald. Edmund Hayden. At the last minute, and rather than deny the people the right to vote, Ald. Frank McKay supported the project.

What of Future?

What sort of street railway service are Londoners to enjoy until 1930 is the leading issue at this moment. Sir Adam Beck will accept no less than $1,425,000 for their lines. With remarkable alacrity the councillors, excepting the Labor members, agreed that the price was far too excessive to even send to the people.

"Drive the company off the streets," the council has decided to plan of campaign now contemplated. The company's franchise will automatically extend in 1925 for another five years unless the city gives notice by March, 1924, that the people desire to take over the road. Whether this notice can be legally delivered without an expression of opinion from the public is a debatable point.

But the expectation is, however, that the company will be forced into such financial difficulties by 1925—the expiration of the franchise—that the city will be able to purchase the road for the proverbial pence.

This is the proposal. In the opening session of the Ontario legislature, Sir Adam Beck will move to definitely establish the fact that the company's right to levy a 5-cent fare, granted by the late Drury administration, dies with the expiration of the franchise—1925. And the game will be not to renew that privilege; let the fares then be as before—7 and 10 tickets for 25 cents.

It is the belief of many city administrators that the company will be forced to turn to Page 2, Column 4.

What chance would Mayor Wenige have to secure a purchase price from the London street railway corporation more favorable than the $1,425,000 reported yesterday by Sir Adam Beck?

Mayor Wenige did not state today that he contemplated any such overture with the company authorities, merely contenting himself with the vigorous declaration that "it was not too late to do something yet, about sending the street railway bylaw to the people."

"What could be done?" he was asked.

"How about it if the mayor secured a price?" he countered, declining to discuss further that phase of the question.

From what R. G. Ivey, vice-president of the company, had to say, however, small hope could be extended Mayor Wenige or anyone else in that venture.

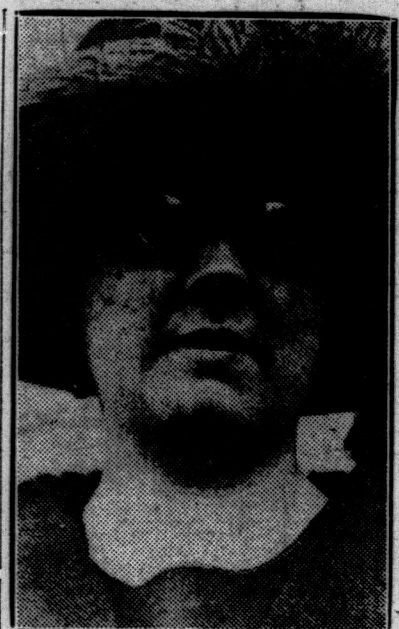

The mayor flayed those members of the council whose vote last night prevented a vote of the ratepayers in December. "I have maintained all year," he asserted, "that the people should be allowed to decide these questions, and I fail to understand why the council did not allow this issue to go to vote, irrespective of prices submitted."

His worship claims further today that he voted with the Labor aldermen, John Coburn and Frank McKay, to send the question to the people, and he protested at the city hall this morning that the minutes of the meeting were not correct.

City Clerk Sam Baker consulted the minutes in question and found it duly recorded that Mayor Wenige had voted "nay" on the proposal. But two councillors supported the motion, the mover and seconder, Aldermen McKay and Coburn.

"That is not so," declared the mayor, "and I will bring this to the attention of the council at the next session, and have myself recorded in the negative. I have always maintained that the people should decide, and while I feel that they would vote against the $1,425,000, that is only my opinion. They should say that. Personally, I would also vote against it."

The city clerk maintains, however, that the mayor voted in the negative, pointing out that likely he did not intend to do so.

CITY GIRL CONTRACTS INFANTILE PARALYSIS

First Case in City For Several Years Reported to City Medical Officer.

IS DOING WELL

Precautions at Once Being Taken To Prevent Spread of Dread Disease.

The first case of infantile paralysis in London in several years has been reported to Dr. Downham, medical officer of health.

A 9-year-old girl, living in the central part of the city, contracted the disease, and when it was reported to Dr. Downham the house was immediately placed under quarantine. The child was reported this morning to be slightly improved, but will be in quarantine for three or four weeks.

This is the first case reported in London for seven or eight years, said local doctors. Not since the epidemic in the United States eight years ago, when thousands of children were stricken, has a case been reported here.

Infantile paralysis is regarded as a communicable disease, with the peculiarity that it can be contracted mysteriously, as in the case of the local girl, who was stricken with it on Sunday. The period of incubation is not definitely known, and consequently physicians are at a loss to trace where the girl could have contracted it. The institute of public health, however, is taking every precaution to prevent a spread of the disease.

Only Five City-Born Men On Fire Dept., Says Chief

Chief Aitken Says Preference in Appointment Always Given to London Men.

EFFICIENCY TEST

Sees No Reason Why He Can't Hire "Outsiders" as Well as "City Chiefs."

At last night's session of the city council Ald. John Coburn questioned Mayor Wenige if he knew whether Fire Chief Aitken has recently been hiring "outsiders."

The mayor replied that if such was the case it was contrary to a resolution passed early in the year that citizens of London must be given the preference when jobs were vacant.

Chief Aitken, asked as to the truth of the allegation, said that almost every man on the force came from the country, and that probably only five were London-born.

"We have a man with us, a country boy, whom I hired temporarily to take the place of men on their holidays," said the chief. "Preference is always given London men, but if a person applies for a job and appears to me to be efficient and capable, I hire him. I know nothing about a resolution saying that preference must be given citizens of London when jobs are vacant. It stands to reason that the proper man to hire for a position is the most efficient."

The police department employ out-landers, and I see no reason why this department should not do likewise, providing the so-called outsiders are better men."

MORE HELP ASKED FOR TREASURER JAMES BELL

Examining Auditors Report That His Work is "More Than One Can Handle."

SUGGEST CHANGES

Say Complete Reorganization of Treasury Department Would Be Advisable.

More assistance for City Treasurer James Bell and a complete re-organization of his staff is recommended in the city of London audit for 1922 just completed and submitted by Oscar Hudson and Company, a firm of private auditors who made their survey at the direction of the 1922 council. In their preamble they state that "the amount of work shouldered upon the city treasurer is absolutely more than one person can handle efficiently."

The auditors recommend further "a complete re-organization of his department for the purpose of coordinating duties of the staff and to promote greater efficiency, but above all to insure that the work is kept up to date and within the requirements of the law."

Several changes of routine are suggested, not with a view to criticize or cast reflection upon the treasurer or his staff, but in fact, to facilitate the work. These proposed changes are much in accordance with the views expressed by Dr. Horace L. Brittain and his associates who also surveyed this department last summer.

"London is in a very enviable position," the auditors continue, "with regard to tax collection. The efficiency of the staff is amply attested by the small percentage of uncollected taxes, in comparison with other municipalities."

The report points out that the city council of 1922 spent $38,292.65 net provided for the estimation of 1923 while a deficit of $18,208.48 was shown in the revenue account.

COLIN LEITCH SHOWS MARKED IMPROVEMENT

Thorndale Man, Skull Fractured, Makes Remarkable Rally in Hospital.

Colin Leitch, Thorndale, who was taken to Victoria Hospital Sunday night suffering from a fractured skull and shoulder as a result of being hit by a car driven by Robert McKay, Embro, on the Governor's road, was reported by hospital officials this morning to be greatly improved.

He spent a good night, and although yesterday little hope was held for his recovery, he rallied so quickly overnight that it is now expected he will recover.

DELEGATES TO WOMEN'S CONVENTION REACH CITY

More Than 300 Members of Western Ontario Women's Institutes Already Registered.

With more than 300 delegates registered this morning, the ninth annual convention of Women's Institutes of Western Ontario got away to a flying start.

From an early hour until noon a steady stream of delegates arrived by every train and poured into the registration office at the chamber of commerce where they were received by Mrs. George Edwards, Komoka, president of the Federated Women's Institutes of Ontario. After registering they were notified of their billets and the place where the meetings of the three days would be held.

With Mrs. D. Buchanan, Thamesville, presiding, the opening session at the Masonic Temple started at 1:30. Community singing in which the hundreds of women joined was followed by devotional exercises led by Bishop David Williams of the Diocese of Huron.

At the close of the service, "O Canada" and the "Institute Ode" were sung.

Reports that were optimistic in the extreme and containing record of the successful and valuable work done by the institutes during the past year were then presented by delegates from the different branches. These met with much applause as they outlined the work completed and the work looked forward to. Increases in membership were reported from practically every branch while the financial state of all also seemed to be excellent. A discussion of reports will be held at 4:30 p.m.

Mrs. H. Dummer, Carleton Place, Toronto, vice-president of the provincial federation, then gave an address on the Eastern Ontario convention. Mrs. Dummer is also president of the Eastern Ontario federation.

One thing that has struck the officers of the association is the ready response made by Londoners in answer to the request that billets be provided for the visitors.

Although the action of the city council last night disposes of commission government as an actual issue for the present time, Professor Freeman's address contains information of value to every citizen.

MAJOR WENIGE MAKES REQUEST IN BEHALF OF THE CITY. TO HAVE PORTRAIT The Advertiser Will Secure Finest Possible For Public Building. STUDIOS ARE BUSY First Photograph Comes From Four-Year-Old London Boy.

The City of London has asked for a portrait of the Loveliest Child in the western counties.

Late yesterday afternoon The Advertiser received from Mayor Wenige a letter written in behalf of the city.

The letter requested that a portrait be made of the child finally chosen as the loveliest in Western Ontario and that this portrait be presented to the City of London by The Advertiser.

And The Advertiser agrees. When the six judges name the Loveliest Child from all the photographs which arrive before December 12, the finest portrait possible will be secured, and this portrait The Advertiser will present to the city to hang in whatever public building may later be considered most fitting.

The list of inquiries continued all day yesterday by mail, by telephone and in person. Most of the questions were about the Christmas party which The Advertiser is going to give, when the honors will be paid the loveliest children. But those questions couldn't be answered—not even a hint.

The first photograph actually to reach The Advertiser was that of a little four-year-old London boy. He will be given to you in the paper before the end of the week.

In the meantime, photographers in London and Woodstock and St. Thomas and Chatham and Sarnia, and all through the twelve counties, are already busy making appointments. Little girls are having their curls brushed and little boys are having their faces washed, and they're all looking as lovely as possible.

One of them is going to be chosen before Christmas as the Loveliest Child in the western counties—Midsex, Oxford, Elgin, Perth, Waterloo, Wellington, Grey, Huron, Bruce, Lambton, Essex and Kent.

Complete returns of yesterday's referendum of Calgary city show a majority for Clause D of 8,158. The total vote was: A, 8,995; B, 292; C, 353; D, 17,068.

LOOT SAFE IN LIBRARY AND STEAL $60 FINES

Safe of Ancient Pattern Proved Easy Prey For Nocturnal Visitors.

POLICE ON CASE

No Clue Yet as to How Thieves Obtained Entrance to the Library Building.

Sixty dollars was taken from the safe in the Public Library last night by someone who carefully opened the safe door and after breaking in the inner door abstracted the cash. The money kept in this safe is made up of small sums collected in the way of fines for the retention of books by readers over the allotted time. Chief of detectives Thomas Nickle said today that there was no evidence of anyone breaking into the library building. Detective Bolton is working on the case.

This is the first time that anything has been taken from the Public Library, but when Fred London was the librarian he once said that he never understood how it was that the library had never been provided with a really reliable safe as he always regarded the old one as an aggravation. There are manuscripts in the building that might have been taken but that would not have been of much use to the average safe breaker and would have been very difficult to change into cash in London. This is the first burglary for some time in the city where such a large sum has been taken and may mark the beginning of a winter season of denigrations. The public are warned to pay careful attention to the fastenings of their doors and windows now that the long evenings have arrived.

Prohibition Beaten Decisively in Many Parts of Province.

AWAIT RETURNS

Thirty-Six Constituencies Favor Government Control of Liquor.

Canadian Press Despatch. Calgary, Nov. 6.—In by far the largest vote ever polled in Alberta on a liquor question, prohibition yesterday was beaten decisively. Seven years ago, the province gave a dry majority of 20,000, in a total vote of 95,000 on the abolition of the retail sale of liquor. In 1920 the matter of importation came up, and with a total vote of 106,000, there was a majority against importation of 18,596. Yesterday's vote will go close to 150,000, and the majority against prohibition standing at the moment at about 24,000, probably will approach 30,000 when the returns are complete.

Complete returns of yesterday's referendum of Calgary city show a majority for Clause D of 8,158. The total vote was: A, 8,995; B, 292; C, 353; D, 17,068.

STATES WENIGE "DONE" IF HE MISSES SESSION

Drake Hears the Mayor Will Dodge Salary Responsibility.

The mayor expects to be away when the city councillors finally dispose of the salary question Nov. 14, Ald. Drake stated this afternoon. "The mayor will be away, and so miss it," he stated, "then no responsibility will be attached to him. He's done if he says away. There will be no argument at all, I guess, and the recommendations will go through."

"The recommendations from the finance committee will go through, in any event, as we have drafted them. It is now up to the board of works to bring theirs in after all their shenanigans. Let them have an overdraft if they want it, as they seem to be able to get money for most everything else but wages."

MAYOR DENIES "STALLING" ON QUESTION OF SALARIES

No attempt is being made to "stall" the salary question, Mayor Wenige countered today.

"It is just the reverse," the mayor claimed. "It is the members of the finance committee who were attempting to 'stall' the question by recommending increases for nearly $8,000 when we had but $5,000 to distribute among all city employees entitled to an increase."

POLICE CONTRA-BANDIT POLICE IN MELBOURNE CASE

REBATE ON LUXURY TAX IS DEMANDED BY AUTO DEALERS

Loss Due to Repeal of Levy Is Estimated at $659,809.

TO PRESENT CLAIM

Automobile dealers in the dominion lost $659,809.22 when the Federal Government repealed its luxury tax two years ago and left them with a large number of cars on their hands on which they had already paid the tax and for which they were unable to collect it from their prospects.

This loss was one that was common all over the country and London dealers were losers to the extent of some $25,000 in this way. J. R. Dixon, member of the legislative advisory committee in Ottawa who was in London last night addressing a meeting of the local retail automobile dealers, explained the situation of the automotive section of the Retail Merchants' Association, and what is being done toward getting a rebate of this tax from the federal government. Mr. Dixon is preparing a statement of the claims of the dealers from coast to coast showing how their losses have been, how they have, in many cases, been forced into liquidation by the cancellation of the tax in the way that was done, and how the association is fully determined to see the matter through to a conclusion and to present the real facts of the case to the minister of finance when the time is ripe.

Mr. Dixon, who has covered the country thoroughly, has met with a complete understanding of the position, and a general recognition of the justice of his claims wherever he has been, from men in all walks of life and he is confident that this amount of the luxury tax will eventually be remitted by the government when the whole case is laid before it.

Calls Action Urgent.

A point in the position of the retail dealer which Mr. Dixon made very plain last night to the London dealers was that Mr. Drayton had told the committee of the association that remittance of any tax already paid was impossible and entirely out of the question. Since that time, however, he has been able to present some very illuminating facts on the use and practice of the luxury tax in Canada.

Average Loss $2,700.

He gave the following figures to show that if everyone in Canada had paid a tax in proportion to the luxury tax paid by the car dealers that the national debt would have been wiped out three times over. The loss by the tax of the average dealer in Canada was $2,700; the population of Canada is estimated at 8,769,430, and a similar amount paid by the entire population would have produced the enormous sum of $23,683,200. Just now the whole national debt is only $2,248,868,624.

The losses of dealers in some other cities in Canada are given as: Ottawa, $27,000; Hamilton, $20,000; Toronto and Montreal about $200,000 each; Quebec city, $35,000; and Vancouver, $40,000.

The history of events that have led up to the present situation, as told last night by Mr. Dixon, is this, in brief:

"On April 30, 1918, a luxury tax of 10 per cent was imposed upon autos, among other things. It was made retroactive on autos, so that the dealers had to pay the tax on cars already on hand. They paid the tax direct to the government. Thereafter, the manufacturers paid the

City Police Are Certain "Pat" Norton Was Fourth Man In Melbourne Case

Inspector Nickle Says All Rumors to Contrary Have Been Investigated.

HAVE NO BASIS

Expresses Hope Advertiser's Reward Will Lead to the Bandit's Capture.

The reason police officials did not divulge the name of the fourth Melbourne bank robber ("Pat" Norton) until some months after the robbery was that they hoped Norton would think they didn't know his identity and that it would be just that much easier to capture him.

This was the statement given to The Advertiser by Inspector of Detectives Nicholas Nickle this morning.

"We were correct in our assumption," declared the inspector. "We knew where Norton's relatives lived in the States, and information was furnished the sheriff of the district by which Norton could be identified. The sheriff did see him and arrested Norton, but the latter got away from him in some way."

"Norton knew then that we knew where he was, and that we were after him. There was then no real reason why the public should not be informed who the mysterious fourth man in the Melbourne robbery really was."

"I know that stories have been in circulation regarding the man Norton, and that he was a prominent figure in the underworld, and that from information and a description given of the man by Melbourne police, I was able to dig up a picture of Norton, and took it down to the people, who all identified it as a likeness of the man who escaped. He and no other was the fourth man in the Melbourne robbery, I swear."

"On April 13, 1921, just two days after the Melbourne robbery, I swore out an information for the arrest of Norton before Squire Chittick. I was told from information from us, given to the American sheriff, that Norton was arrested by him near Detroit."

"Every member of the London police department is anxious to see Norton captured, and we hope that The Advertiser's broadcasting of police captures offering $1,000 reward for his capture is a step toward his capture."

Halifax, N. S., Nov. 5.—Captain Angus Walters, skipper of the Lunenburg schooner Bluenose, former champion of the North Atlantic fishing fleet, today denied that he regretted his action in refusing to race again this year against the Columbia of Gloucester when ordered to do so by the sailing committee of the international schooner race. A splendid meeting of the Women's Missionary Society of the Talbot Street Baptist Church was held last week, when Mrs. A. R. Kennedy gave an interesting paper on the work at Grand Ligne. Several new members were inducted at this meeting, over which Mrs. D. H. McCormick presided. The Bible lesson was read by Mrs. Holland, and a solo was rendered charmingly by Mrs. W. A. Kennedy.

MARION KEITH CLUB.

ST. MARK'S A. Y. P. A.

Last night's meeting of the A. Y. P. A. of St. Mark's Church was particularly interesting. The program was given under the general heading of "Why I Love My Profession," and two splendid papers were given by Miss Annie Dunstan, and Mr. John Mirehouse, the president. Miss Dunstan spoke of the profession of a teacher, commencing with a recent quotation from a public speech of the lieutenant-governor of the province, in which he affirmed the determination to defend the republic and its constitution from all attacks from within and without.

The school, Miss Dunstan said, is the greatest force for civilization and Christianity in the world today. It bore the responsibility of instilling into the child the principles which make for good citizenship. Lasting, Miss Dunstan concluded, co-operation between school and home is essential in the proper training of children.

John Mirehouse gave the paper on "The Teacher's Problem." He pointed out that the teacher's problem is a modern one, and that the modern forms of modern engraving was given in a splendid style. In addition to the school, Mr. Mirehouse told something of its important place in modern life.

A short address was also given by the pastor, Rev. A. L. Beverley.

PLAN TO UNITE TWO OFFICES OF EDUCATION BOARD

LONDONERS SPLIT AS WETS CONTROL ALBERTA BY VOTE

J. M. Donahue Glad People of West Return to Sane Thinking.

SEES CHANGE HERE

The decision of Alberta, the province that holds the ranch of the Prince of Wales in High River, to go back from complete prohibition to a status where the government will control the sale of liquor and where beer will be sold by licensed hotels is met in London with a mixed reception. J. M. Donahue, who stood at the last provincial election for the city, said today in comment: "I am glad to see the people of the west getting back to a sane way of thinking on the question. I believe, too, that right here in old Ontario there will be a difference of opinion expressed on the same subject before very long."

Several London proponents of the ruling conditions and who have been opposed to any form of interference with absolute prohibition, view the Alberta Niagara with misgivings in private but without any statements for publication. They feel in general that the cause has been betrayed in some measure that is beyond their understanding, but believe also that in the not too distant future the tide will turn again and that prohibition will come back stronger and more firmly entrenched than ever in public opinion, and that with its second advent it will come to stay and to remain as one of the final decisions in the minds and the legislature of the Province of Ontario.

GRAHAM CONFERS ON PLAN OF EMPIRE WIRELESS CHAIN

Associated Press Despatch. London, Nov. 5.—Sir Laming Worthington-Evans, British postmaster-general, and Hon. George P. Graham had a conference today on the subject of the imperial wireless chain.

In regard to the difficulties which have arisen in connection with the establishment of British stations, Mr. Graham took the view that these were entirely a domestic matter for Great Britain to deal with. So far as Canada was concerned, she had given a license to the Marconi Company, and saw no reason for a change of policy.

City Board of Education Wants Its Own Treasurer; May Move to Make Change

Idea Is To Unite Offices Now Held by Tanner and Bell.

EFFECT SAVING

Proponents Say Combined Office Would Be Cheaper and More Efficient.

An important change in the internal workings of the board of education will be considered tomorrow afternoon at a special meeting of the chairman of the standing committees and the chairman of the board, A. N. Udy, when the question of combining the office of secretary and treasurer will be discussed.

At present the secretarial work of the board is done by W. A. Tanner, while the treasurer is looked after by City Treasurer James Bell.

This arrangement, made when the board was a much smaller body and the expenditures much lower, is not satisfactory at present, owing to the growth of education in London and the fact that expenditures now reach practically one million dollars annually.

Several recommendations in connection with the proposed change will be introduced tomorrow and discussed fully. These point out that a saving of approximately $700 per annum will result from combining the two offices. The board now pays the city treasurer's office $2,800, while under the new plan a female bookkeeper at $1,400 and a filing clerk at $700 will be necessary, making a total of $2,100.

Change Bank System.

If the change is effected, it will mean the adoption in the board office of a double-entry system of book-keeping, together with all the necessary books, etc. These include a purchase record ledger, appropriation ledger, sales ledger, bank book, petty cash book and journal.

In addition to these, a complete system of records would also be installed, these dealing with teachers' salaries, a perpetual inventory of stock in the storehouse, a register of resolutions, insurance, property and buildings, in order that all information that may possibly be asked for by the trustees may be available when wanted. At present, sometimes a request for information comes up which is not noted until some time later.

The additional duties that would be taken care of by the secretary would be the purchasing of all supplies and payment for same, the supervision and care of the banking account.

Capture Liquor Worth $375,000

Associated Press Despatch. Jacksonville, Fla., Nov. 6.—The British auxiliary schooner Louise F. was captured after a three-hour chase yesterday by federal authorities and 3,900 cases of liquor, valued at $375,000, were seized, the officers reported on their return here tonight.

The capture was effective within the twelve mile limit off South Pablo beach, and the captain, H. A. Johnson, of Harbor Island, British West Indies, and six members of the crew were arrested. They are being brought to Jacksonville, where they will be charged with violating the customs laws and the national prohibition law, officers said.

Monthly Balances.

It is pointed out that with the combination of the two offices, a trial balance would be struck once a month, thereby putting the trustees in a position to know just what amount had been expended and what remained.

Attitude Unknown.

There is much mystery as to who was responsible for asking Mr. Churchill to accept the candidacy, but it is said to have come from the Independent, that is to say, the Asquithian side. It is quite unknown whether Mr. Churchill is a party to this sudden move, or whether he will accept.

Political quarters differ completely in their views on this point. Some asserting that Mr. Churchill's candidature would be likely to result in the co-operation of the two Liberal wings, while others say it would stress the cleavage and would inevitably lead to the nomination of an Asquithian candidate to oppose him, he being an adherent of the Lloyd George faction.

Seek Reunion.

A third opinion is that Mr. Churchill would be unlikely to contest for a seat in the Glasgow central division, where the Liberals made a feeble showing last year.

It is said by some that Mr. Asquith has completely lost hold of the Liberals through lack of energy; that the new party is not a plebeian Independent Liberalism, but a querulous and that Mr. Churchill is the only man qualified to reunite the party.

Associated Press Despatch. Leamington, England, Nov. 6.—Wearing a fashionable black satin dress, furs, long diamond earrings, and red-heeled shoes, the Countess of Warwick made her first platform appeal to the Socialist and Laborite electors here last evening.

Countess of Warwick Makes First Appeal

It had been stated that the countess was to tour the constituency from which she seeks a seat in the House of Commons. Her ladyship arrived at the hall without ostentation. She was well received, but most of the audience was not of that social class popularly associated with the traditional aspirations of Labor.

The countess told her hearers that there were only two classes in the world—workers and idlers. Brain-workers such as lawyers and doctors, she said, must leave to regard themselves in the same category as hand-workers.

Mistreating Horses Draws Two Fines

Charles Quick Assessed $20 by Magistrate Hawkshaw On Second Offence.

For working his horse in an unfit condition, D. Windling, 269 Thompson avenue, Chelsea Green, was fined $10 and costs by County Magistrate Hawkshaw in the county court Monday morning.

Charles Quick, also charged on information laid by George Tustin, Humane Society inspector, was fined $20 and costs, it being his second appearance in court for cruelty to animals. He was told by the magistrate to look after his horses and keep them in a better condition or he would be dealt with more severely.

Claims Pulp Embargo Would Save Forests

Edward Beck, Paper Official, Suggests Remedy Before Royal Commission.

Canadian Press Despatch. Ottawa, Nov. 5.—An embargo on the export of pulp wood from Canada "offers a prospect of a considerable improvement in forest conservation, is constitutionally and economically feasible," reads a statement made by Edward Beck, secretary of the Canadian Pulp and Paper Association, before the royal commission investigating the Canadian pulp and paper industry in its opening session here this afternoon.

Mr. Beck read a long printed statement, illustrated with a number of charts giving statistics of Canadian pulp and paper business and drawing deductions relative to consumption and destruction of forests. An embargo of the export of the raw product, it is contended, would mean the establishment of mills in Canada by American paper interests. Canada now gets some $10 a cord out of the pulpwood export, half of which goes to the railway.

Will Have Judge Probe Charges of Controller

Canadian Press Despatch. Hamilton, Ont., Nov. 5.—Controller Etherington will have to prove his charges of improper practice against members of the fire and jail committee. The board of control this afternoon decided to have a judicial inquiry by the county judge.

"If I cannot establish wrong-doing, then I will resign my seat in the city council," declared Controller Etherington.

Mayor Jutten read the statement of the controller, submitted at the last meeting, and stated that the only serious charge contained was one of improper practice in connection with the appointment of a controller.

WILL CHURCHILL RE-ELECT LIBERAL PARTY IN BRITAIN?

Refuses To Comment Upon Rumor of His Seeking Glasgow Seat.

INTEREST GROWING

Associated Press Despatch. London, Nov. 6.—Interest in domestic politics for the moment is focussed on the representation of the Glasgow central division in the House of Commons for a successor to the late Andrew Bonar Law, to be elected forthwith.

The attention of the public was sharply drawn to that district last evening by a report that Winston Spencer Churchill had received an invitation from local Liberals to become their candidate. Mr. Churchill declines to confirm or deny the rumor, but there seems to be no doubt that the invitation was received.

The incident has caused a great flutter in official quarters, and in both factions of the Liberal party, who are keenly interested in the question whether the invitation involves an attempt to reunite the two wings of the party—the Asquithian and the Lloyd Georgeian groups.

There is much mystery as to who was responsible for asking Mr. Churchill to accept the candidacy, but it is said to have come from the Independent, that is to say, the Asquithian side. It is quite unknown whether Mr. Churchill is a party to this sudden move, or whether he will accept.

Political quarters differ completely in their views on this point. Some asserting that Mr. Churchill's candidature would be likely to result in the co-operation of the two Liberal wings, while others say it would stress the cleavage and would inevitably lead to the nomination of an Asquithian candidate to oppose him, he being an adherent of the Lloyd George faction.

Seek Reunion.

A third opinion is that Mr. Churchill would be unlikely to contest for a seat in the Glasgow central division, where the Liberals made a feeble showing last year.

It is said by some that Mr. Asquith has completely lost hold of the Liberals through lack of energy; that the new party is not a plebeian Independent Liberalism, but a querulous and that Mr. Churchill is the only man qualified to reunite the party.

Would Decorate Graves In City On Armistice Day

Special Council Committee Meets Veterans and I.O.D.E. on Matter.

WILL ASK FOR BAND

Decoration of graves and monuments was suggested as the chief portion of the civic program for Armistice Day by members of a special committee of the city council, meeting at noon today.

Mr. Douglas, Hayden and Burdick were in attendance with Mayor Wenig. As the chairman pointed out, Armistice Day is now to be considered more as a sacred holiday, and his suggestions were considered favorably.

The council is willing to expend $250 in this direction, and the committee will meet the I.O.D.E. and the Great War Veterans to complete arrangements.

The militia department will also be consulted with regard to the service of a band.

WENIG REOPENS BATTLE TO GAIN COMMISSION RULE

Three times and out.

Once again Mayor Wenig will launch a fight to send the commission form of government proposal to the people.

A special session of the council has been called for Thursday night, when the proposed bylaws for a new city hall on the Mountain side will be presented to the council.

Property owners only will be allowed to vote upon the Springbank dam and city hall questions, as they will be sent to the people in the form of a "money bylaw" and not a plebeian Independent Liberalism, but a querulous and that Mr. Churchill is the only man qualified to reunite the party.

WILL BALDWIN MODIFY PLANS OF CANADIANS?

Delegates At Economic Conference Adopt Attitude of Watchful Waiting.

By GEORGE HAMBLETON. Canadian Press Cable. London, Nov. 6.—The much-anticipated discussion on the British preference proposals will be continued before the economic conference today, following the disposal of the committee reports and the question of the creation of a permanent economic committee.

The Canadian delegates at the economic conference have prepared detailed information showing the bearing on Canada of the British preference proposals so far as submitted, and there is considerable curiosity as to what modifications, if any, the Baldwin government intends to make to such proposals as a result of recent pronouncements by the British prime minister. Canada in the matter in continuing her policy of "watchful waiting."

So far the Canadian representatives have no counter proposals, but should any further British proposals be presented to warrant such a course, modifications may be suggested.

Avoid Interference.

There is an obvious desire on the part of the Canadian representatives not to do anything which might be interpreted in the slightest degree as interference in the hot fiscal campaign, which already has opened in British politics.

While the economic conference continues its deliberations a committee will consider the Spaulinger treatment of tuberculosis. Dr. Spaulinger, the Swiss discoverer of a serum and vaccine for the treatment and alleged cure of tuberculosis, has been invited to attend a meeting of the committee. It is questionable, however, if the conference will be in a position to do anything more than discuss the question of giving financial aid to Spaulinger in order to make available his serum and vaccine, which is the point at issue.

No Decisions Reached.

Following the meeting of the economic conference today the main impression was that the discussion generally the business still before it, including the foreign policy, and possibly the question of Dominion participation therein. A number of suggestions have been made in the latter regard, but so far no decision has been reached. Something may be done with respect to keeping the Dominion governments better informed on the course of foreign affairs than has been done, but no great change in the constitutional relations of the dominions with the motherland is anticipated.

EXPECT TO KEEP PRESENT STAFFS IN CITY PLANTS

"Unemployment in London this winter will be largely a matter of how many outsiders come into the city in the winter, and how much seasonal work is done by contractors and other employees of labor," is the opinion of London manufacturers. None of them expected to lay off any men or girls, as they have already reduced their normal size commensurate with the winter volume of production. They feel that as there is not a great deal of unemployment now, any added number of idle men will come from the ranks of those who have been employed in some outside work all summer, and who are made idle by climatic conditions. This is added to by the influx of outsiders, who are always attracted to the city in the winter time.

Some of the contractors were able to keep most of their help all last winter by having buildings to work on that had cement floors and cement work under cover, so that the frost did not affect them. While there are not many large public buildings in the city, the contractors are busy with the architects' offices at present are hoping for something to turn up.

In the government labor bureau the only positions in waiting for lumbermen in the northern woods, who must all be skilled, and for men to work on the farms in the winter, are the most cases for a somewhat low wage. The city scheme of doing a certain amount of sewer work will take care of a number of men who are bona fide residents of London. This is expected to alleviate whatever conditions may result this winter, which is not expected to be any more severe than in previous years.

CHECKING UP CHILDREN OF KINDERGARTEN AGE

Attendance Department Begins Survey of Primary Classes in City Schools.

Having completed the check-up on primary and secondary schools in the city, the attendance department of the board of education is now at work on the children in the kindergarten ages.

This will be carried out in the same manner as that of the higher grades until all at completion, the whereabouts of all the children of more than two years will be known. The work is done by checking back on the names given in when the census of children in the city was taken last year. This included all children in the city, no matter what the age, as long as it was under 16 years of age when compulsory education finished.

As time goes on a list of births and deaths of children is kept, in order that the department may know at any time the children who should be at school. As the younger ones, under five and six years grow older they are added up, so that they start school when their age permits.

AFRICAN PAPER DENOUNCES PREFERENCE PROPOSALS

Bloemfontein, South Africa, Nov. 5.—The Free Press newspaper, commenting on the question of preferential treatment for the dominions in the British market, says the need of Great Britain for unskilled food and raw materials is so great that any such plan is impossible. If a workable and acceptable compromise between Great Britain and the dominions is not reached, the dominions will be forced to seek trade understandings elsewhere. This raises the question of the right of the dominions to enter into treaties with foreign countries, therefore, it puts the highest status of the dominions to the test.

"The preference problem strikes at the foundations of the structure of empire, and a way out is imperative," concludes the paper.

NO VOTE THIS YEAR ON STREET RAILWAY PURCHASE

Labor Aldermen Alone Voted To Send Purchase Of Railway To a Ballot

Sir Adam Beck Tells Council Price Asked by the Street Railway Too High.

ASK $1,425,000

Commission Government Also Defeated and Will Not Be Voted On This Year.

Two members of the city council voted last night to send the street railway purchase bylaw to the people for a mandate, both Labor men—Frank McKay and John Colbert.

But they were hopelessly outnumbered in view of the fact that their colleagues entertained the opinion that it would be a waste of time and effort to ask the opinion of the ratepayers in this respect.

Sir Adam Beck submitted his report that the street railway authorities would seek $1,425,000 for their holdings. Sir Adam did not state his own valuation, but proffered the belief that the company's figures were excessive. And the council, with the two exceptions, accepted his advice, upon the motion of Ald. Leonard Douglas.

Mayor George Wenige made a desperate attempt to send the commission form of government to the people, supported by James Gray and a strong deputation of orators from the chamber of commerce. All sorts were of little avail, however, and the project awaits the pleasure of the city council of 1924 and the Ontario Legislature.

While the council felt that the people should not vote upon the street railway issue, they thought that the time was opportune to vote upon the proposed construction of a dam at Springbank and the purchase of certain necessary land at an aggregate cost of $150,000. This has passed its second reading. The third reading must pass at the next session.

Once again the council cleverly disentangled itself from the meshes of a highly involved salary debate. All proposals from the finance committee were shelved pending a special session of the council in November. The proposed bylaw to grant holidays to all civic employees with one year's continuous service was also referred back to the committee for definite action is promised when salaries are discussed. Ald. Douglas wanted to insure that no inequalities would result. And the mayor's motor-bus bylaw was also voted down by a large majority.

As Ald. Douglas was the one to move that Sir Adam Beck secure a price from the street railway, it seemed right that he should be the one to move that no vote of the people be taken, in view of the "people's" price, as recommended by the member for London.

Ald. McKay Objects.
Ald. Peter J. Watt seconded this proposal, but Ald. Frank McKay asserted that the council was practically in the same position as last year. He charged that it was very unfair for them to deprive the citizens of the right to express their opinion upon this important question and in accordance with bylaw 916.

"It wasn't to be expected that Sir Adam or anyone else would get a price," he challenged, "that the council would feel was reasonable to send to the people. We only repeated what we had already done."

The proposal was then made that the company be given notice next March that its franchise would expire in 1925, but Ald. Colbert questioned by what authority the council could take such action without a mandate from the people. He warned the councillors that they were adopting an improper attitude.

When the vote was taken the two Labor aldermen voted in the negative, all others voting no action. Ald. John Greer was absent.

Four representatives from the chamber of commerce then delivered a strong plea to the council, asking that the people be given an opportunity to voice an opinion relative to the commission form of government. Ald. John T. May voted alone not to reconsider the former stand by the council.

Ald. Burdick vigorously opposed the project. He disapproved of any suggestion to bring in a city manager and dictate to the city treasurer or the the council objecting—Ald. Douglas, May, Wilson and Judd.

As anticipated, the "huckster" bylaw was passed without opposition, but certain proposed elevations in market rentals were rejected unanimously. Ald. Burdick withdrawing former objections.

The council authorized a grant of $250 toward a ceremony on Armistice Day, the question as to the method of expenditure being left with a special committee, comprising Ald. Douglas, Burdick, Judd and Hayden.

Ald. Wilson's motion to submit an alternative city hall bylaw to the people—a hall on the Spencer site—was ruled out of order, while the $500,000 bylaw will be definitely settled for submission to the people at the special session on the 14th of the month.

PLAN TWO-DAY BAZAAR IN ST. MARTIN'S HALL

Many Varied, Useful Articles To Be Sold From Attractive Booths.

When the doors open Thursday afternoon at 4 o'clock in the basement of St. Martin's Church, corner Cathcart and Duchess avenue, one of the biggest and finest bazaars of the season will be launched for a two days' run. The bazaar, which is being staged under the auspices of St. Martin's Club, will be unique in that admission is free, no tickets are to be sold on the floor during the bazaar, and the prizes are unusually good.

The booth arrangement also is unique, and during the two days entertainment will be provided for visitors.

Fancy work, aluminumware, hand-made clothing, handkerchiefs, silk and wool hosiery for men and women, candy, fowls, cigars, groceries, farm products, and refreshments will be sold from the different booths. A Japanese tea garden has been built on the stage and tea will be served there. Supper can be obtained Thursday and Friday nights from 6 to 8. Articles from Japan and Hawaii will also be sold from the tea garden.

Donations to the bazaar include very handsome and valuable gifts. And it is a splendid sign to see such all of which will be disposed of during the two days.

CHARGES JUGGLING OF SALARY QUESTION

Ex-Mayor J. Cameron Wilson Sees Continuance With Next Year.

J. Cameron Wilson, ex-mayor, charges that Mayor Wenige is "juggling" with the salary question. "There are those who will recall the last session of the council during 1922," the ex-mayor stated, "when we proposed making the same salary readjustments as are now under contemplation by the 1923 city council."

Before last night's session, he thought it would be best to leave further consideration of the wage question for the new council. Mayor Wenige was at that meeting and we turned to him and asked his opinion. And he promised that these employees would be fairly dealt with directly the new council assumed office.

"And what has happened during 1923? The question has been argued the chairman of the board, and the indications it is not at all unlikely that the whole thing will go on until next year."

Before last night's session of the council opened the aldermen gathered in little groups, and then it was that the mayor lined up his majority to send the salary question on to a special session.

It was Ald. Wilson who insisted that the mayor name the day, else he would not support the move. Nov. 14 was named.

NEW DAY DAWNING THROUGHOUT CHINA SATS MISSIONARY

Miss Agnes Dickson Addresses Women's Meeting at the World Conference.

PROGRESS IS SLOW

"There is a cry for liberty and equality in China today. One hears it everywhere," declared Miss Agnes Dickson of South China, before the women's mass meeting in the First Methodist Church yesterday afternoon, and called in connection with the World Mission Conference. Representative women from Methodist, Presbyterian and Congregational churches were in attendance, filling the whole body of the church and part of the gallery.

Miss Dickson was the first speaker and her message was graphically told. Japan and its place in the modern mission field was also explained by Rev. Dr. D. Norman, but recently returned from that country.

Miss Dickson referred to the fact that the Chinese women of today are coming out and taking their place in China as teachers and doctors. "A new day is dawning in China," she said, "A day that will bring gladness to that country. And it is coming through the progress of Christianity. The progress of Christianity and social chaos a new nation is growing up."

Progress Slow. There are bright and hopeful periods, only to be followed by times of retrogression. In Canton but a short while ago there was a great movement towards purifying the life of that city. Laws demanding the abolition of impure books, moving picture shows, prostitution and slavery, were introduced and almost seemed as if Canton would become a purified city.

But this movement died down, and the citizens returned to their old life again. "A spirit of nationalism and patriotism is characteristic of the Chinese schools today. They have now come to the time of the great revolution. And it is a splendid sign to see such a country as China trying to foster a spirit of patriotism where it has been so lacking."

"In the last fifteen years there has been a sort of renaissance in China—a new thought movement. The trend has been down with the industrial evils, down with slavery and superstition, down with the old and difficult mass reading."

Hostility Fading.

"And during this period the nation has been opposed to Christianity. But it seems as if this phase has largely passed, and with it the hostile attitude toward Christianity. The speaker referred to the extreme ignorance of the masses of Chinese women in regard to Christianity. Some of the women felt that idol worship was futile, but had continued their heathen worship, because they had nothing better to put in its place. The women of the Kingdom were easily converted to Christianity and became enthusiastic missionaries themselves."

There were now Chinese missionaries supported by the Christian Chinese Church, who were working in Chinese home mission fields. This was a thing which the missionaries to China had longed for.

Dr. Norman, the second speaker of the afternoon, traced the history of Christianity in Japan, pointing out how that country had been Christianized by the Catholic Church three hundred years ago.

Bitter Persecution.
"That early Christianity in Japan failed through bitter persecution," he said. "Yet throughout the years that followed, the tiny seed of Christianity sown in those evil days, prevailed. And although the people were afraid to come out and acknowledge themselves Christians, parents handed down secretly to their children the Christian traditions."

"When at last the doors of Japan were opened, Japan was determined that Christianity should not get in. She opened her gates to western commerce, to modern education, and all the inventions of science, but not to Christianity. However, Christianity was bound to make its way there. The first convert was a Japanese military official, who was deputed to see that no Christian influence entered the country by way of the harbor and ships. It so happened that he found a Dutch new testament floating on the water, and was so curious to know what it was all about, that he learned the Dutch language and eventually became a Christian."

"And so from this early beginning Christianity crept into the country, and now many of the outstanding men of the country say that Christianity influences every realm of thought in Japan today."

Gravel Lure For Electors

Councillors Have Roads Repaired Throughout London Township.

While some London aldermen who will seek office again at the coming civic elections in December are busy shaking hands with every voter in their respective wards, county councillors are "saying it with gravel." In other words, township councillors are anxious to direct the affairs of their township for another year, are endeavoring to put themselves in a favorable light with the electors by seeing that a plentiful supply of gravel is being spread on the road in front of the homes of the "doubtful."

"It's an old, but at the same time, ever-green election dodge," stated one county councillor today when asked why there was so much gravel being spread so late in the year all over the county. "The councillor who sees that your road is well gravelled stands a pretty good chance of being re-elected. I know because I've worked that dodge myself."

SAY STRIKE HAS LITTLE SOCIAL SIGNIFICANCE

Doubt Australian Labor Will Back Action of Melbourne Police.

Associated Press Despatch.

London, Nov. 6.—Press comment here on the riots in Melbourne in connection with the Melbourne police strike, is not disposed to regard the trouble as of any social or political significance, although the riots are serious.

The Times says that Melbourne always has been regarded by those who know Australia as the most conservative capital of the most conservative state in the Commonwealth. In other quarters, it is pointed out that the police strike arose mainly from similar causes as operated in producing a strike of the police in Liverpool, namely, how far can the state allow the police the same rights of combination as civilians. In England a national union which sing to the tune of the police in Liverpool, namely, how far can the state allow the police the same rights of combination as civilians. In England a national union which sing to the tune of the police in Liverpool, namely, how far can the state allow the police the same rights of combination as civilians.

There is a doubt generally as to whether the labor unions, even in Australia, although more democratically advanced there than in Great Britain, would support the principle of the policeman's right to strike.

Fred Zoeler and Alexander Thompson, employees of the Seaman-Kent factory in West Long, who were taken to St. Michael's Hospital a week ago suffering from injuries received in a fall in an elevator shaft, were reported today to be greatly improved.

Zoeler suffered a badly crushed leg, but since an operation several days ago to reset the foot he has shown rapid recovery. Thompson has been suffering from a broken knee cap. The men will not leave the hospital for several weeks.

MEDICAL HEADS DECLARE SCHOOL CREDIT TO LONDON

Visiting Committee Seeks Advice of Students on Revision of Curriculum.

GOING TO KINGSTON

The committee on matriculation and the curriculum of the College of Physicians and Surgeons of Ontario, consisting of Dr. William Spinkie, Wolfe Island; Dr. Edmund King, Toronto, and Dr. T. W. H. Young, Peterborough, left the city this morning for Kingston, where they will complete a series of visits to the different medical teaching centers of Ontario.

Yesterday and this morning the committee met the medical faculty of the University of Western Ontario, the house surgeons of Victoria Hospital, and the fifth-year medical students of the university to obtain information which would help them in preparation, and enforcement of a curriculum which would keep pace with the march of science, and would not overlook training designed to render licentiate in eminent degree practical, commonsense medical men.

All three physicians expressed themselves this morning as being highly pleased with their visit to this city. "The University of Western Ontario Medical School is a credit to your city," said Dr. Spinkie to The Advertiser. "Although we cannot draw comparisons between it and other schools, we would say that it ranked with the best."

The special committee of three eminent doctors was appointed at the recent annual meeting of the medical council to investigate and take the whole question of curriculum under advisement. The committee is visiting the three medical universities in Ontario, Toronto, Queen's and Western, with a view to enlisting the sympathy and courting the counsel of those best qualified to express convictions upon the question of matriculation and curriculum. Where possible the committee have interviewed the medical faculties, city and county medical societies, hospital internes, recent graduates, the student body, and all who are giving medical education serious attention.

Motorist Saved By Stone Wall

Canadian Press Despatch.

Hamilton, Nov. 6.—A stone wall on the Waterloo road on top of the Dundas mountain, though partly wrecked by the crash, was all that saved M. Smith of Toronto, and a new touring car from dropping of a hundred feet or more last night. He ran into the wall trying to avoid another car on the slope while driving in a drizzling rain. Smith escaped with slight injuries to his arm and leg.

CONSERVATIVES OF TORONTO RAP PROHIBITION LAW

Association President Terms O. T. A. Disgrace to Law-Abiding People.

LOOK TO ELECTION

Canadian Press Despatch.

Toronto, Nov. 6.—Opposition to the Ontario temperance act was expressed at a meeting of the North Toronto Conservative Association last night, when President J. H. Armitage, after declaring that the Ontario temperance act was "a disgrace to any law-abiding people," announced that the next meeting of the association would be devoted to a discussion of the O. T. A. under direction of J. A. McCausland, J. A. Currie and E. W. J. Owens, the three Toronto members of the legislature who have attacked the act.

The meeting, however, was not all of one mind. "I am not prepared to countenance the vaudeville antics of McCausland and Currie," said a member of the audience. "They have already done too much damage to the reputation of the Conservative party in Ontario. If we go on shouting about how dry we are, we are going to lose thousands of voters at the next Dominion election—and that's not very far away."

He moved that the O. T. A. discussion for the next meeting be canceled, but got only three supporters for his motion.

DECLARES COUNCIL LACKS POWER TO ISSUE DEBENTURES

City Treasurer Bell Comments On Proposed Improvement to Market.

MOVE WEIGH SCALES

The city council has no power to issue debentures, as proposed, for the construction of another covered stand upon the market square, at a cost of from $5,000 to $7,000. City Treasurer James Bell advised today. It is now proposed, however, by Mayor Wenige, that ample provision for this undertaking be made in the 1924 estimates. Market Clerk Maker's opinion has been that sufficient tenants could be secured for the new structure. The mayor also believes that the building would be self-sustaining.

His worship claims today, referring to the plan to move the weigh-scales from the city market, that the same are not even self-sustaining and that the municipality would not lose by their removal to another section of the city entirely.

"We scarcely receive a sum in fees from this enterprise, to enable us to pay the salaries of attendants," City Treasurer Bell advised the mayor, "to say nothing of repairs and so forth. And there is getting to be less need for hay as time passes."

Mayor Wenige still insists that the scales should be moved to another convenient section of the city, as the space so occupied now interferes seriously with the proposal to erect another covered building.

"I have always claimed," he declared, "that the market gardeners will be willing to pay if we can give them more accommodation, and the weigh scales interfere with that plan."

FUN AND SPLENDOR IN "RUNNIN' WILD" MAKES REAL HIT

Ed. Daley Show, Now At the Grand, Ranks Among the Best.

PROLOGUE IS NOVEL

Decidedly sprightly and really built, Ed Daley's "Runnin' Wild" has opened a three-days' engagement at the Grand, and proved more enjoyable than its predecessor under the same ownership. "Runnin' Wild" is speedy, principal and chorus working at top notch all the time and one number following another with almost bewildering rapidity. The Daley show ranks among the best on the Columbia Amusement Company circuit. This season they are well up with the top notches in the amount of business done to date, and it is only necessary to witness one of their productions to understand the reason why, for they are staged with a lavishness approached by few other attractions of the kind and which the old-timers in burlesque would have regarded as impossible.

Like all the Columbia shows a novel prologue is used. This one shows the exterior of an office building in which the producer's office is situated. A representative of the play-going public appears and informs the producer the sort of attraction the public will appreciate. Mr. Producer then proceeds to build it to order, calling his writers of book and lyrics and engaging other principals for his new show. All this is done in recitative song over the telephone and service as an attractive introduction for the bery of gaily dressed chorines who next appear. Katharine Adolph and girls then take the stage for their musical introduction of "Glad Days," one of the hits of the show. It is very well done. Harcourt and Hillier, the comedians, get their first chance at the laughs in "Stewed Prunes," a hit at the present dry laws and the harvest they garnered from the audience established them at once as prime favorites.

A wooden soldier dance is well presented by Hazzard & Spellman as an act in one "A Hospital Case" introduces Babe Healy, Harcourt and John Grant. The skit concerns an ex-patient father, whose wife is in hospital, and while the lines concerning the event are decidedly risqué the principals manage to smother this feature with the laughs they produce and get away with it nicely.

In the next number, an elaborate costume flash, the Japanese score with "You Left the Door Wide Open," while "Lovin' Mad," again presents Babe Healy and attractively-gowned girls.

The Stevens Girls who joined the company in Detroit last week are good in several dancing numbers, contributing materially to the dancing strength of the company. "Apple Sauce," a skit on burlesque lines, closes the first part.

For the opening of the second act a massive set is used and the chorus and principals appear to distinct advantage. Hitover and Jones, a classy team of negro dancers, are then introduced and practically stop the show with their stepping. The finale is among the cleverest in their line ever seen in London, and it is a strong indication of the quality of the show that they are able to proceed in excellence by another team of white dancers, Hazzard and Spellman, who execute difficult steps with consummate ease.

A Hawaiian number gives opportunity for elaborate staging, light effects and costumes, as well as clever dancing. "An Artist's Dream" introduces a number of shapely models garbed to best present their physical charms. This is a big attractive number and scored a decided hit with admirers of the feminine form.

A well worked out prologue introduces Velocita's Leopards, one of the best "cat" acts seen here, and which has long been a strong attraction on circus and vaudeville bills. The finale brings the entire company on in front of the steel-barred arena, a sensational finish to a clean, clever and attractive show. "Runnin' Wild" is the elaborate and costly scenic investiture provided for every number. More silk drops are used than usually seen, and the costumes are all pretty and attractive.

Altogether, "Runnin' Wild" ranks with the best of the sort sent here this season.

TWO FACE CHARGE OF INCENDIARISM

Alleged Responsible For Very Serious Fire in Warton.

CLEAR UP MYSTERY

Special to The Advertiser.

Owen Sound, Nov. 5.—Released from jail on parole only a week ago, after serving six months on an O.T.A. charge, "Cookie" Wright of Warton was arrested on a charge of arson. He was brought before Magistrate McNabb of Walkerton and was remanded to jail until November 9, at Walkerton. He did not enter a plea. The arrest of Wright was a sequel to investigations carried on in Warton recently by Deputy Fire Marshal Burnett, in connection with the burning of Stead's livery stable there on February 5 last.

James Cochrane, who is now serving three months in the county jail at Walkerton, is also alleged to be implicated in the affair, but it is stated by Magistrate McNabb that it is impossible to try a man while he is serving a sentence. Deputy Fire Marshal Burnett, however, is of the opinion that when the charge is more serious than that on which the man is serving sentence, he can be brought up for trial. Cochrane is to be faced with the charge of arson also.

Both Wright and Cochrane have had reputations in O.T.A. cases in the district.

It is stated that Stead, owner of the burned livery stable, had been driving Provincial Court Judge Flood about on his duties for some time before the fire occurred. His actions are alleged to have incurred the displeasure of the men, and this is the alleged reason for the burning of the barn.

The fire was one of the most serious Warton ever suffered, and the loss was in the neighborhood of $3,000. Mr. Stead had no insurance and the fire entirely wiped out his business. The fire occurred on Monday morning, February 5. The livery stable is a two-story building, with cutters, and two cars were totally destroyed. Hill's blacksmith shop, Burnett's flour and feed store and a shed behind the old Commercial House, were also destroyed.

Mystery shrouded the whole affair, for while the authorities have given all four buildings were in flames.

FOREIGNERS TO WORK BRUCE COUNTY FARMS

Expect Thirty-Two Russian-German Laborers by December Ten.

Canadian Press Despatch.
Toronto, Nov. 5.—A number of Russian-German laborers are being brought to work on the farms of Bruce County, says the weekly report of the Ontario department of agriculture today. The farmers of that district will pay $180 for passage of each man and $150 each on a yearly contract. Thirty-two of these workers are expected by December 10. This experiment is being watched closely, and will be reported on at a later date.

Many of the best herds of cattle have been taken in for the winter, and are responding to the winter feeding much better than those still left on the grass.

EXCELLENT FILM AT LOEW'S SHOWS MEIGHAN AT BEST

"Woman Proof" Is Feature of Unusual Merit Based On Unusual Theme.

GOOD VAUDEVILLE

One finds seldom a bill as well-balanced with possibilities of an enjoyable contentment as that just now at Loew's. First, of course, there is a feature picture, "Woman Proof," which doubtless will add materially to the Tom Meighan reputation as the foremost and most universally popular man on the screen. But in addition, the vaudeville provides a pleasant atmosphere all its own.

Without any particularly striking features, it is nevertheless consistently pleasant. Acts in which tight rope-walking has been featured have been somewhat scarce lately. The company of three who present an act of this sort are very capable. The fact that two or even the three of them persist in keeping under the spotlight at once detracts somewhat from an otherwise clean-cut performance. One thing at a time and a place sufficient to attract and hold the attention, without the distraction of dancing in the background.

The second act was especially neat and delightful. The line of comedy was new, amusing and not without its effective local allusion. The featured dancing was skilled and of a youthful verve, not to forget the concluding touch of comedy provided by the changing music. The three blackface comedians, one should judge, quite merited their volumes of applause.

Unfortunately, the American continent possesses only one George Ade, and since it is quite evident that he cannot see and act in all the moving pictures, it is only reasonable to expect that those which do indicate his handiwork and bear the characteristic Ade moral should be somewhat out of the ordinary. In "Woman-Proof," added to the George Ade touch, there is the Tom Meighan, whom the Paramount Company consider the only male star great enough to have a box office attraction equal to that of the great Pola Negri or Gloria Swanson. Comparisons, of course, can't be made, but the appeal of the Tom Meighan personality, and the class of picture in which he invariably appears, is tremendously attractive. Certain well-known authorities have referred to Tom Meighan's pictures as fulfilling the most exacting requirements for the sort of picture every member of the family views with zest. "Woman-Proof" is not a letdown.

The remainder of the program includes a Christie comedy, the Pathe News reel, and glimpses of the new Ingram picture "Scaramouche," which are to say the least, intriguing.

CALLS POST-WAR DAYS ACUTE STAGE IN MISSION WORK

Dr. J. Stafford, Toronto, Speaks At Concluding Session of Missionary Meeting.

NATIONAL CHURCH

During the World Mission's Conference, if there are included the sessions held in the First Methodist Church and the missionary addresses delivered on Sunday from the local pulpits, between eighty and one hundred missionary messages have been delivered to the people of this city. The conclusion of this striking series of meetings was held last night in the First Methodist Church, when addresses were given by Dr. J. Wardle Stafford, pastor of the Metropolitan Methodist Church, Toronto, and Dr. J. Lovell Murray, director of the Canadian School of Missions.

The audience included at the least one thousand representatives of the various young people's organizations in connection with the city churches. From the life of Robert Moffatt, reviewed in a fashion intensely interesting and embellished with touches of anecdote and humor deftly placed, Dr. Stafford drew a splendid inspiration for missionary devotion and service. Robert Moffatt is known as the pioneer of missionary enterprise in Africa.

Urges Support.

He was a Scotchman, to whom Dr. Stafford pointed as representing the best characteristics of the nation to which he belonged. Dr. Stafford laid emphasis also upon the life of service and devotion of Mary Moffatt, the wife of Robert Moffatt, and his faithful partner through long years of service and devotion. Their daughter Mary became the wife of David Livingstone.

"We sometimes regard missions as an expensive luxury," Dr. Stafford said, after reviewing the hardships to which this couple were subjected. "But by all means, if anyone must go short, let it be the man who stays at home. In this civilized country there is always something for a man to turn to, but in foreign lands, where missions are established, there is nothing. The missionary is dependent not only for the support of the school with which he is chiefly concerned,

St. Paul's Flower Bazaar Opens Doors Tomorrow

A Fairland of Flowers Sets Off Quantities of Linen and Christmas Gifts—Mrs. B. Chadwick General Convener.

A wonderful flower bazaar is what the women of St. Paul's Cathedral have been working on for months past. And the announcement that it is to open in Croydon Hall tomorrow is being received with enthusiasm. Each booth represents a flower, and the beautiful scene which will greet the bazaar shoppers as they enter Croydon Hall, is the result of tireless effort on the part of the general convener, Mrs. B. Chadwick and her host of helpers. A veritable fairland of flowers is promised. Chrysanthemums, morning glories, roses, daffodils, wisteria, poinsettia, poppies, cherry blossoms, hollyhocks, marigolds, all have their place in the lovely decoration scheme.

The bazaar is perhaps the most beautiful booth of all. A great market has been erected over the tea tables, and artistically decorated under the direction of J. Stanley Moore. Among the wares for sale are lovely Christmas gifts, linen, baby things, aprons, pottery and china, books and new, and quantities of other articles. A remembrance booth, contains gifts from people who have left the city, but are still interested in the church bazaar. There is a mystery booth, where fortune telling goes on. On Wednesday night, an orchestra will be in attendance, and on Thursday night, a splendid musical program will be given under the convener'ship of Mrs. Harris Elliott. The bazaar continues Wednesday and Thursday.

Danny Finds a Treat and He Eats and Eats and Eats

By THORNTON W. BURGESS.

Danny Meadow Mouse was having a wonderful time. He had climbed into the aeroplane, which all the little people called a mouse, and which had been left on the Green Meadows near Danny's home. It had taken him time at all to decide that there was no danger there. Having made up his mind to this, he ran all over the machine. That is, he ran all over the parts he could get to. He poked his inquisitive little nose into every nook and corner. So it was that presently Danny found a great treat. The man who had been flying that machine had left part of his lunch there. Danny found it. There were a couple of sandwiches. Danny's nose told him at once that they were good to eat. He began to nibble one. My, how good it tasted! He hadn't tasted anything so good for a long time. Danny forgot where he was. He thought of nothing but filling his stomach with this splendid food. He was greedy. Yes, said Danny Meadow Mouse was greedy. He didn't even think of the danger of being caught. At last he could eat no more, and still there was plenty left. Then Danny thought of Nanny. He knew he wouldn't be able to induce her to come over there. "I'll just take her a piece of this good food," said he to himself. "I won't tell her where I got it. I'll say I found it, but I won't say where I found it."

So Danny took a piece of bread crust in his mouth and crept out of the man-bird. Back home to the old scarecrow he hurried. He wondered if Nanny had missed him. He climbed up to their home. Nanny wasn't there. Danny chuckled. He left the piece of crust just outside the doorway and curled up inside for a nap. He was tired. He was awakened by the return of Nanny Meadow Mouse. He heard her stop just outside the doorway. He knew what she was doing. He saw that she was smelling of that piece of crust. He chuckled down inside.

Back home to the old scarecrow he hurried.

He knew that crust would smell just as good to her as it had smelled to him and that she would nibble it. He knew that once she had nibbled it she wouldn't be able to resist finishing it. Danny waited and pretended to be asleep. After what seemed a long time Nanny Meadow Mouse came in. "Where did you get that splendid food?" she demanded, for she knew very well that Danny wasn't asleep. "I found it," said Danny. "I suppose you did," retorted Nanny. "Where did you find it?" "Oh, I just found it," replied Danny, and that is all he would say. Nanny teased and teased, but Danny wouldn't tell her where he had found that crust. "Well," said she at last, "I'm glad you found it. I hope you can find some more. But, whatever you do, keep away from that man-bird." Danny chuckled, but he took care that Nanny shouldn't hear him chuckle. Then he curled up again for his interrupted nap. (Copyright, 1923, by T. W. Burgess.) TUESDAY, NOVEMBER 6, 1923.

The Alberta Vote.

Alberta has voted to have the government control the sale of liquor, with the sale of beer made possible in licensed hotels.

This is a step farther than government control, and the step is toward the reopening of the public bar. It can have no other interpretation.

Ontario will probably be the next province to face this issue, and it would be a bad move to allow this province to drop back in the matter of temperance legislation.

When people did not have this preventive legislation they worked for it, they prayed for it, and they voted for it.

Now that they have it they are doing very little, outside of passing resolutions, to hold the ground they have gained.

It serves no good purpose to theorize on the why or the wherefore of the Alberta vote.

The message to the temperance forces of Ontario is in two words: "Watch Out."

Good Citizenship.

Cut down—economize—do with less—that is all very popular advice governments, provincial, municipal or federal.

It takes more courage to keep on saying that when the cut comes home.

The Saskatchewan government has decided to close a number of land offices because there is no good reason for their continued existence.

The one in North Battleford is in the list of those to be cut off, and the "Optimist," published at that place says the move is quite right, and commends the government for having the courage to go ahead and do the thing.

The Optimist of Battleford in that stand is taking high ground, and has given a fine example of good citizenship.

Should Go Easily.

Mary Pickford and her husband, Douglas Fairbanks, are going after some of the magazines and papers for stories that have appeared about them.

Perhaps quite right, but this high priced pair should remember that the press, in any of its various forms, has had much to do with making them.

The whole screen or stage would thrive on publicity, so why get all hot up because an occasional skunk cabbage gets planted in a place, that has been accustomed to yield nothing but thornless roses.

A Good Answer.

A London Rotarian, during a discussion of what was needed to change our form of civic government, asked the pertinent question: "Well, what's wrong with London?"

Without waiting he proceeded to answer with his own decision that it is the best city in Ontario, that it is well governed, well managed, and absolutely the finest place in the whole country when it came to living conditions.

Some of his superlatives may have been due to a momentary enthusiasm, because no place ever reaches the stage where it cannot be bettered.

At the same time that Rotarian had a big section of wholesome sentiment in his address.

We spend a lot of time groping around with a dark lantern, when there's a whole lot to be seen if we open the door and get out.

Over a Million a Day.

New York's city budget is in for 1924, and it amounts to $375,000,000. That is, it takes over a million dollars a day to run the town.

That is more than it cost to run the United States government a generation ago.

In six years New York's civic bill has gone up $136,000,000. The reason given is that there are more people needing more police, fire protection, street cleaning, etc.

The answer to that is that the population has increased 20 per cent in ten years, while the city expense has gone up 94 per cent in the same time.

New York ratepayers are like those of communities all over the continent. They want a scaling down and they get a push up.

Municipalities have taken a long time to learn that they must stop spending money, and the big places have been just as slow as the smaller ones in reading and learning the lesson.

City Council

The price named by the London Street Railway Company in a letter to Sir Adam Beck, $1,425,000, for their property in London, caused the city council to decide that the people should not have a chance to vote on the proposal to take the property over at all.

Even the proposal that the people have an opportunity to vote on the matter of taking it over, and arbitrating the price, failed to get any more than two votes from the aldermen.

The aldermen contented themselves with the very pointless and very meaningless assurance that they could give notice to the company prior to March 8, 1924, that the franchise was expiring. This much the company already knows. What else is the council going to say to the company in 1924, and on what authority are they going to say it?

How can the council serve notice on the company when the people have not had a chance to show by a vote whether they want that notice served? The handling of the affair so far has ended the city in a blind alley that leads to no place at all.

There are some facts in connection with this matter that should not be overlooked, and the most important one is that the London street railway has no franchise to sell to the city. It has not even the right to sell its property to the city as a going concern. Bylaw 916 under which the company operates makes it very plain that all the company has to sell is rails, wire, cars, etc. The provision is as follows (Section 20):

In determining such value, the rights and privileges hereby granted, and the revenue, profits and dividends being or likely to be derived from the enterprise, are not to be taken into consideration, but the arbitrators are to consider only the actual value of the actual and tangible property, plant, pavement, equipment and works connected with and necessary to the operation of the said railway, which is not to include any land, property or rights acquired or used in connection with the said railway and which do not actually form a part of the same. In arriving at such value the arbitrators are to consider and award only the value of the said property, plant, pavement, equipment and works at the time of the arbitration, having regard to the requirements of a railway of the best kind and system then in operation and applicable to the said city."

The meaning of that is quite plain. The arbitrators are to take a model system as a 100 per cent mark, and the equipment in use in London on the day the arbitration starts is to be set up against that standard and marked accordingly. There is to be no allowance for the fact that the railway has the right to use the streets of London, for these rights simply revert to the city. There is to be no consideration of the fact that the company might be making some money now, or that they figure that in the future they will make money. The arbitrators are to value a car, not by its earning capacity, but simply at what it is worth in its present condition as a car. If it cost $5,000 in the first place, and had run long enough to be depreciated 60 per cent, it would go down at $2,000 in the purchase price. If the tracks had outlived their use, they would go in at the price of scrap rails, and so on. The actual physical value of the property is the only thing to be considered.

The fact that the company asks $1,425,000 for the property may mean much or it may mean nothing at all. The submitting of a definite price, had that price been reasonable, would be the best way out of the difficulty, for it would do away with arbitration proceedings, which are generally expensive. Not being able to do that, the next move is to let the people vote on whether they wanted the road taken over at a price to be arbitrated on. Arbitration costs take dollar for dollar from both city and company, for under the same section 20 it is provided that "each party shall pay half the costs of the arbitration."

As the matter now stands, we have made no progress. The assurance that the council will serve notice next year on the company means nothing at all. We have gone through a lot of motions like morning exercises, but the company still retains its franchise, and next year's council will have no authority from the people to serve notice on the company. The present policy is not fair to the city, neither is it fair to the company. The question will never be settled until it is settled right, and the right settlement can mean only one thing, viz., that the city shall take the road over, operate it, gradually rebuild it, and make it a medium of service to the people of this city.

The 1923 council has not dealt with the street railway at all.

No Vote This Year.

The people of London are not to vote on the commission-manager system of government this year. The council so decided on Monday night. Had the people registered a favorable vote no progress could have been made until the Ontario legislature, or its private bills committee, passed enabling legislation to allow the city to go ahead. They can engage a manager at any time, but the commission part has not been settled.

There did not appear to be a great deal of specific information at the meeting as to how the scheme would work out in London, where the various departments of the city hall are now, and have been for some time under the supervision of very capable men. A long search would not unearth better civic servants than the city treasurer, clerk, engineer or assessment commissioner, tax collector, and so on. London perhaps does not realize how well it is being served by these men.

This does not mean that the plan must stop here, for there is room for progress, but above all we must be sure that when we do make a move it is in the right direction. The next move must serve to co-ordinate all departments, and not to add confusion. In the meantime all those who have shown such a keen interest in the matter should turn their energies to putting the men they want in the civic field; to accepting nomination themselves, and devoting some of their time to civic service. In this way they will be in a better position, close up to the inside of the situation, to carry on a campaign for the new plan, and also present to the people a much more definite and certain proposal than is now before them.

No Right to Dictate.

Quick assent was given to a resolution sent on to London from the Guelph city council, that 50,000 tons of Alberta coal be brought east between now and March at a stated price of $7 per ton. The National Railways was the road selected to do the hauling, and word to this effect will be sent on to Sir Henry Thornton.

There is no argument about the advisability of getting the trade established in Alberta coal, but there is an argument, and a very strong one, about outside bodies trying to dictate to the people's railway when they shall haul coal and at what price. Right now is a poor time to try and get coal brought from the west because the great grain crop is being moved; later on shipping is more difficult because winter traffic is not as easy as other seasons. Then too, it is not known that the National Railways can handle the business at the arbitrary price of $7 per ton, and if that road cannot do it, we should not ask it. The National Railways must run as a business proposition. It is useless to speak of trying to make the road pay its way, and quit grinding out deficits, if we are going to rush in here and there with requests from representative bodies like city councils, and ask for special rates. No city council should be a party to this kind of business.

Once More—Salaries.

Civic salaries came up for air again last night, and disappeared true to form until a special meeting is called for the purpose of considering them. There is a mystery about this salary business that no one seems bold enough to explain. It is unthinkable that at this late date there should have to be a special meeting called. No. 1 committee, as it agreed at the last meeting, went ahead and revised its salary list, adding $8,000 to the total. The other committees and the board of health had not been in session on this matter, and had no report. If they used up a like proportion of money, the increases would be at least three times the appropriation set aside for that purpose. Now the committees will meet together, as they should have done months ago, and see what can be done with the money in hand. London wants to deal fairly with the people it employs, but it must standardize the wages, according to the worth of the work done in the various positions. It would not be advisable to bring in a large over-draft in order to make increases in salaries, for it might have the effect of next year's council rescinding the whole thing. Make the money available go as far as possible first in giving recognition to the greatest possible number of worthy claimants.

Note and Comment.

They're hanging the war profiteers in Russia, sure proof that the place is not civilized yet.

The old red cow up north that gets in the way of a stray bullet always develops a pedigree a yard long when damages are being assessed.

When it was suggested that father dress like a woman for the Halloween party he balked on the plea that he'd catch his death of cold.

The fact that Hamilton is seriously considering putting up a million dollars to have McMaster University moved there ought to make Londoners stop and think what the University of Western Ontario is worth to us.

Several cities are considering the plan used in London since 1921, of having elections in the early part of December instead of in January. The chief opponents to the change are those aldermen who fear they're not coming back. They prefer decapitation at the farthest removed date.

The Guide Post—By Henry van Dyke

A SOCIAL PROPHYLACTIC.
As for our transgressions, thou shalt purge them away.—Ps. lxxv. 3.
"Lo—say, where's Katy?" Gosh, trip again, Aunt Josie!
Aunt Josie was stirring tomatoes into a steaming iron saucepan whose contents filled the room with the heavy, sweetish, overpowering odor of boiling tripe. Denny felt a stir of repugnance. He wouldn't touch tripe nor would Violet, yet they had it at least once a week, for it was Matt Borley's favorite dish. "Your uncle asked for it, Denny. But I've baked potatoes and a nice pie," she wiped the steam from her damp, reddened face, her dull eyes smiling. "An apple pie, Denny, because you like it."
"Gee, you're a peach, Aunt Josie. She's around the corner, playing over to Mason's."
Denny took the box. He had it all planned that he would make Katy guess and guess. She would have to roll the dancing eyes up and down before she'd find out.
As he went through the alley to the Mason's back yard, the big asacala waked its topmost branches. There was shouting and high-pitched cries, then Katy's voice—all sorts of like her mother's. Its joyous fling caught Denny with a sudden pang: "Look, Katydid, it's for you—just like her!"
Denny thought often of the bright, fairy creature who had filled his young life with sweetness; remembered her that last night as she had seemed to float away on the beam of golden light, the smile on her red lips. He remembered piercingly the things he had heard of her. But he did not judge her—never.
Yet, when Katy laughed like that a pang had caught him—a pang, because Katy was just like Queenie. The laughter ripped again—down from some far height in the air. Denny pushed the gate.
Terror froze the heart in him. Katy's hands fluttering like gay white wings, her voice singing, balanced on the outflung limb of that tall asacala, stood thus a moment, gleeful, unheeding—a fearful moment. Suddenly her hands grabbed wildly—a cry that struck into Denny's soul forever—the small form plunged headlong to the ground.
A startled outburst: the children hung back in panic. But Denny was at Katy's side, her head in his arms, calling frantically: "Katy! Katy!"
Her eyes were closed, her lips still, the chestnut curls falling back from the sweet child face.
"Katy, open your eyes—can you hear me? You're not hurt—say something!"
The children began to crowd about, talking in shrill whispers: "Is Katy dead? Ooooh—ain't she white!" They pressed around the motionless figure.

WHO RUNS THE TOWN?
Taxpayer Says There Is Too Much Interference Now With the Office of the Mayor.

Editor of The Advertiser:
Sir,—It is nice to know that we have a guardian of the city in the person of Sir Adam Beck. But would it be impertinent to inquire who gave him the office? Nearly a year ago we voted who should be the director of the city's affairs, and Mayor Wenig was elected by an overwhelming majority.
Yet, when he gets busy, along comes the hydro Napoleon and starts a newspaper campaign of criticism. They would Pro Bono Publico dare to deprive the ratepayers of the right to express their opinion in December? Yours, WARD TWO.

And over fairy paths my fancies led,
Or told of Carol Bird's brief sojourn here.
Black Beauty and the babies Helen
The knights about King Arthur's table round,
And all the friends in childhood's story book,
Again in their quaint company I'm found.
Beside their little beds in my low chair,

And feel again the rapture and despair

HENRY DUBB WRITES.

Talks of Immigration and Work on Farms That Last for About Six Months in the Year.

Editor of The Advertiser:
Sir,—At very frequent intervals one reads glowing accounts of the growing prosperity of the country and the great need of increased immigration. During the past six months the influx of new arrivals to the country has been constant, and by no means small. Next spring we are to have one of the greatest immigration booms in history, not only from the British Isles, but from the greater part of Europe.
A recent local report stated that many domestic servants would soon be available from a region designated as "Central Europe," by which it is apparent that the boom is already under way.
Would it be possible, Mr. Editor, in some way to give publicity to our own city and the surrounding country as to conditions and wages? I am given to understand that in many factories wages as high as $15 per week are paid to able-bodied men, and that farm wages are on the same ratio for at least six months per year, when afterwards they drop to zero.
If some of the cheaper labor of the Central European states could be enticed to Ontario in general, and made to work for about $10 per week, what a lot of money could be saved—in wages! Yours truly, HENRY DUBB.

"Ward Two" Thinks London Should Be Able to Devise a Scheme for Its Own Needs.

Editor of The Advertiser:
Sir,—I have read with interest communications upon the commission form of government from "Pro Bono Publico."

Now from the contents of these epistles, it would appear certain that your correspondent was quite conversant with his subject. But is he altogether fair in his lofty pronouncements, and is it fair to assume that because what has been unsuccessful in one center, must needs meet with the same fate in another?

P. O. Bono Publico speaks quite fluently, it would seem, about the commission government plan, but is it not a fact that such schemes as he has mentioned, provided for numerous commissioners—even more than twelve in number?

Dr. Britain recommends a commission of five, with a city manager. Commissioners tried in various parts of the United States have comprised of any number of commissioners. And even then they have not in every instance encountered the disastrous ending that Pro Bono Publico would picture for London.

The people of London have voted once for the commission form of government. The Ontario legislature did not reject the measure for all time together, but merely told delegates from various cities, including London, to go back to their people and draft a standard form of administration. DENNY BROOKS A STORY OF COURAGE By ELENORE MEHERIN

CHAPTER X.
Denny hid the box behind him as he brushed into the kitchen: "Lo—say, where's Katy?" Gosh, trip again, Aunt Josie!
Aunt Josie was stirring tomatoes into a steaming iron saucepan whose contents filled the room with the heavy, sweetish, overpowering odor of boiling tripe. Denny felt a stir of repugnance. He wouldn't touch tripe nor would Violet, yet they had it at least once a week, for it was Matt Borley's favorite dish. "Your uncle asked for it, Denny. But I've baked potatoes and a nice pie," she wiped the steam from her damp, reddened face, her dull eyes smiling. "An apple pie, Denny, because you like it."
"Gee, you're a peach, Aunt Josie. She's around the corner, playing over to Mason's."
Denny took the box. He had it all planned that he would make Katy guess and guess. She would have to roll the dancing eyes up and down before she'd find out.
As he went through the alley to the Mason's back yard, the big asacala waked its topmost branches. There was shouting and high-pitched cries, then Katy's voice—all sorts of like her mother's. Its joyous fling caught Denny with a sudden pang: "Look, Katydid, it's for you—just like her!"
Denny thought often of the bright, fairy creature who had filled his young life with sweetness; remembered her that last night as she had seemed to float away on the beam of golden light, the smile on her red lips. He remembered piercingly the things he had heard of her. But he did not judge her—never.
Yet, when Katy laughed like that a pang had caught him—a pang, because Katy was just like Queenie. The laughter ripped again—down from some far height in the air. Denny pushed the gate.
Terror froze the heart in him. Katy's hands fluttering like gay white wings, her voice singing, balanced on the outflung limb of that tall asacala, stood thus a moment, gleeful, unheeding—a fearful moment. Suddenly her hands grabbed wildly—a cry that struck into Denny's soul forever—the small form plunged headlong to the ground.
A startled outburst: the children hung back in panic. But Denny was at Katy's side, her head in his arms, calling frantically: "Katy! Katy!"
Her eyes were closed, her lips still, the chestnut curls falling back from the sweet child face.
"Katy, open your eyes—can you hear me? You're not hurt—say something!"
The children began to crowd about, talking in shrill whispers: "Is Katy dead? Ooooh—ain't she white!" They pressed around the motionless figure.

amuse this unhappy little Flora Michels.

Denny told Katy all his triumphs. He won the debate at school and he guessed he'd make the football team. Katy's thin, white face grew rosy with pride, for Denny was so tall and mighty looking it seemed to her. She longed to walk down Hayes street with him and have everyone turn round to stare.

"Like to come home, Katy?" "En I'm coming pretty quick, Denny! Son's ever they take this cast off, I'll just run and run and run. Violet didn't come for a long time, Denny."

"She's pretty busy, Katy. She's got a surprise for you—"

Violet, growing prettier yet more restless and willful with each year that passed, leaving her still in Matt Borley's crude home, had taken the little parlor—it had never been used—and fitted it up as her "sitting-room." To herself she called it "my boudoir."

There was a golden oak folding bed bought at an auction for $8.75; two golden oak rockers, a table with a scarf Violet had embroidered in orange and brown and in the corner a bureau with pictures of actors and actresses in silver frames.

The walls were Violet's joy. They were tinted a pale amber, and there was the picture of two lovers kissing in the moonlight—a print of Joan of Arc, another highly colored copy of a bride coming down a broad staircase and several Gibson drawings of very handsome young men wooing beautiful girls.

This wonder room—Katy was to share. Denny had done the tinting and hung all the pictures.

The day the cast was taken off, Katy he got a horse and buggy to drive her home. He waited in the corridors with Aunt Josie. The doctor passed.

"She can leave any time now," he said.

"How soon can she walk?" Denny interrupted. The doctor's face blanched.

"Well, lad, well, I don't know—well, probably not for a long while—probably not at all."

"Not at all! Never again—" The life went out of his voice—he leaned against the wall.

"Well, poor lad," the doctor took his hand. "We can hope—"

But when Denny saw them bringing Katy to the buggy in a wheel chair and they lifted her to the seat, he couldn't look into the joyous violet eyes; he couldn't stand that smile on her lips.

"Ain't you gladder'n anysing, Denny? Won't we have the good times, again?"

He bent his head down quick and cried. Katy wouldn't have it.

"You ain't crying for me, Denny? Doncher do it! I'm just as glad as I can be. And last night, know what I dreamed? Ooooh, the loveliest angel came right up to my pillow and luffed down and said: 'Hello Katy—kid—here, just touch my wings—now—you're all better.' En I touched them, Denny. En it's true—every bit of it. En I believe in angels—you'll see, you'll see!"

There was Katy's singing laughter. Denny pulled her to the reins ashamed of the trembling in his chin.

In the Kitchen

The greatest use for OXO Beef Cubes is in the home kitchen—

—to help you make everyday dishes better.

—to help you to originate new dishes.

—to lighten your work and save your money.

There are hundreds of ways of serving OXO Cubes

Here is what one lady says of seven uses to which she puts them— she gives a recipe for every day in the week

SUNDAY NIGHT
I often give the whole family a real treat—so easily too. I make a pancake batter, dissolve two Oxo Cubes in half a pint of water, then beat it into the batter. The pancakes bake beautifully brown and the children always ask for more.

MONDAY
I chop finely the remains of the cold meat left from Sunday, season it with salt and pepper, dissolve a Cube or two of Oxo in hot water, add one ounce sheet gelatine, let the mixture come to a boil, pour it in a mould and when it turns out it and garnish with parsley.

TUESDAY
For four persons, I chop finely six slices of cold meat, add an Oxo Cube dissolved in water, then a small onion minced, a teaspoonful of chutney, and put all in a pie dish, cover with a layer of sliced tomatoes and sprinkle all over with a teaspoonful of bread crumbs. Bake for 15 minutes. I put a small piece of butter. Baking this for three quarters of an hour gives us one of the nicest dishes that we know.

WEDNESDAY
We have breakfast at 7 and dinner at 12.30 and, some days, around 11 o'clock I begin to feel "peckish." I do not like to spoil my appetite by eating between meals. So, I have a nice hot cup of Oxo and find it invigorating and satisfying.

THURSDAY
If the folks at your house like Curry, make it for them this way. Slice an apple and a small onion and fry in butter until brown. Add two Oxo Cubes dissolved in a cupful of boiling water. Put in a teaspoonful of curry powder, a little chutney or sauce and any dry minced meat you have. Stir together for fifteen minutes over a brisk fire, and serve with a border of boiled rice around the dish.

FRIDAY
A Welsh Rarebit is always a happy thought. Oxo Cubes make it a gastronomic joy—something better than you have ever known. After you have heated the cheese, add two Oxo Cubes, dissolved in milk or water. The flavor is delicious and the rarebit is more digestible.

SATURDAY
Last Saturday we took the train to Mother's. Lucky it was that I put a tin of Oxo Cubes in my satchel. We were delayed for six hours and everybody blessed me—almost, they fell upon my neck in gratitude for I was able to give the hungry ones a satisfying, nourishing cup of beef tea.

Try some of these—your experience will suggest many other ways of using Oxo cubes. You will find them a most economical means of improving home cooking.

SARNIA NOT WORRIED OVER OILS' PROTEST

Meantime Newton's Crew Works Out For Toronto Varsity Exhibition Game.

Special to The Advertiser. Sarnia, Nov. 5.—Petrol's threatened protest of Saturday's game is not taken seriously in rugby circles here. It is claimed by the Hard-Oils that the crowd interfered with what promised to be a touchdown by Roy Stonehouse. At the time Stonehouse had about half the field clear before he could have been dangerous. It was true, however, that the arrangements for the game were slowly, and there was but one lone constable to keep back the crowds from the line. It was not known here tonight if the Hard-Oils' protest had been sent to Toronto, but the chances of such action are considered small with time for reflection.

Meanwhile the intermediates, safely ensconced at the head of the district, will continue workouts this week for the exhibition game with University of Toronto on Saturday, Nov. 10, and for the forthcoming trial of strength with Galt.

Cowan's absence Saturday was severely felt, though Fitzgibbon called the plays well enough. Cowan will be carefully nursed for the Galt games.

STRATFORD CITY SENIOR ICE LEAGUE REORGANIZES

HOPPE DEFEATS JAKE SCHAEFER IN SEMI-FINAL

Will Meet Welker Cochran in World's Title Match in Chicago.

SPECTACULAR GAME

Associated Press Despatch.

New York, Nov. 5.—William F. Hoppe, world's champion 18.2 balkline billiardist, defeated Jacob Schaefer II, tonight in one of the greatest matches in the history of the game, 500 points to 447, and will meet Welker Cochran of Los Angeles in Chicago at a date yet to be announced in a play-off for the title, for which they are now tied.

The score: Hoppe—5, 66, 0, 152, 8, 40, 127, 30, 33, 23, 3, 500.

Average, 41.8-12; high run, 152.

Schaefer—76, 167, 87, 20, 27, 31, 28, 0, 8, 447.

Average, 40.7-11; high run, 167.

In the second inning, Hoppe was in great stroke, and immediately began a line nurse at the head of the table, counting 25, then driving the white around for position. At 45 they were both on the line again.

After counting 66, he missed a short two-railer in a corner, finding a hole, and left Schaefer a set-up.

Jake Was Brilliant.

Schaefer was driving frequently, but the balls rolled well, and he never was in serious trouble. He got them together for a nurse at 30. He had them well in hand at 60. Schaefer then was playing at a fast pace. At the count of 90 he had them straddling the bolkin. They were still together at 100, and he continued to count at a rapid pace.

He was at his best now, shooting daringly, confidently and with graceful sweep of arms, effecting a touch that matched even that of the champion in his heyday.

The balls were rolling perfectly for him at the count of 150. He had to spread them, getting out of balk at 100, and missed a one-cushion shot at 167. He led Hoppe 243 to 69.

Hoppe's Wizardry.

Some of Hoppe's wizardry came into play from the 45th to the 55th counts in the fourth inning run.

A freak bank-shot off two rails was the 45th, and this was followed by five long marches and five shots around the table, and then, at the count of 75, he got them together on a line at the foot of the table, and continued.

The ballroom rocked with applause when the champion in his uphill fight reached the count of 100 and brought the balls together. Here was magnificent stroking, a delicate touch that hardly moved the object balls. Hoppe's brow was now furrowed with wrinkles, a sign that he was in his finest stroke. He drove the red ball around at 130, and gathered them back at the head of the table. Hoppe's run ended at 152.

Hoppe slowly crept on his opponent, and passed him at the ninth inning, when the score stood Hoppe 465, Schaefer 436. Schaefer, a bit nervous, only counted eight, three and nothing in his three last innings, while Hoppe also took three more to reach 500.

VARITY, PENN. STATE, TIE SOCCER BATTLE 1-1

Fastest East Eleven Surprises With Adept Knowledge of Association Game.

Canadian Press Despatch. Toronto, Nov. 5.—Varsity's intercollegiate champion soccer team and Penn State College, the smartest eleven in the Eastern States, played to a one-goal draw at the Varsity stadium this afternoon. The game was as close as the score, the American students having the better of the game in the first half and the Toronto team the better in the last.

Varsity was expected to win easily, but the visitors surprised the locals with their knowledge of the game. Individual and not team play marked the contest, and the Americans were constantly at fault for offside, which Referee Defoe did not miss, although by letting small rules slip he helped to make the exhibition an interesting contest. Only a small crowd witnessed the match, and the drizzling rain made the field slippery, which made it hard for the players.

The heavy booting by the Toronto backs kept them out of trouble several times when it looked as though the Penn State would score. Wilson, in the Toronto nets, had more work to do than did the visiting goal.

Guy Fawkes Is Consigned To Flames on City Square

Another Fifth of November has gone by and another Guy Fawkes has yielded his strawy body to the avenging flames. The Guy Fawkes of London this year, and he appeared to be the only one in the city, was a remarkably well-dressed, aristocratic old gentleman with long hair, brought into being by the Orangemen of London, who after withstanding the rain and the inquisitive glances of a large crowd, who metaphorically howled for his blood, or at least for the smoke of his cremation, while he was touring the city in his tumbrel, a motor truck, stood up like a man, and having been soaked with coals in the words of the old song went to a further glory in a blaze.

A call for the fire department at 7:30 coincided with the opening of ceremonies, and when the department turned out to quench a blaze due to a short circuit in the store of the Singer Sewing Machine Company on King street, at the corner of the market square, they were followed by a crowd who stayed to watch the beginning of the Orangemen's parade. To the strains of "The British

SPLENDID CHILD ACTING DISPLAYED IN BIG PAGEANT

Hundreds See Novel and Clever Show At Ryerson School.

HALLOWEEN ACT

"The Pageant of the Year" presented by the pupils of Ryerson School last evening in the school auditorium, claimed hundreds of enthusiastic school children, eager to see their playmates take part in the gigantic spectacle staged by Miss Laura Cook of the teaching staff. Long before the time set for the opening, hundreds crowded the doors. Those who obtained admission were fortunate indeed, for the pageant was probably one of the most effective displays ever put on by London school children.

The story of the year of 1923 was partly unfolded when two little girls dressed as pages heralded the approach of spring and announced that the events of the year would be enacted in pantomime, song and dance. A season when vegetation starts anew was represented by twenty diminutive girls, dressed as violets, symbolic of the first flowers of the year. There followed a bevy of springtime flowers and the first season of the year closed with a spirited song forecasting the approach of summer.

June, when a young man's fancy turns to thoughts of love, with its romantic conclusion, was represented by a marriage in pantomime. Two youngsters dressed in long frock coats, high silk hats and all the trappings of dress which go to make a perfectly-garbed best man and groom, entered the make-believe church, followed by the officiating minister. All waited anxiously and nervously for the entrance of the bride. A pretty maiden, ten years entered solemnly and walked to the altar, where the bride was given in marriage by her father. Twenty girls dressed in green and red, representing American Beauty roses, danced about the bride and groom as they left the church. Summer gave way to autumn with a song and dance representing all the flowers of the season.

That memorable day of autumn, the last night in October, when witches ride brooms in the sky and ghosts come out at dead of night to scare all bad little boys, picture last night in all its ghostliness, had the children of the audience on tip-toe with delight. Weird apparitions changed their forms. Other grotesque figures stalking mysteriously about in the dark to the strains of "Robbers of the Woods" gave the whole auditorium an atmosphere of spookiness. The impression of mystery was quickly expelled, however, when the spooks disappeared and the autumn maple leaves were left their home in the trees, came down to kiss the ground good day. Twenty more girls garbed in the latest costume of the year, in full tone to a Sparkplug, Barney Google, and Gallagher and Shean act, when the popular songs of the year were sung by the choir boys. Spark Plug's antics had the audience roaring, and time and again the juvenile actors were encored.

Fall merged into winter with a surging crowd of dancing maidens dressed in pure white garments. The gigantic pageant of the year of Father Time, and the introduction of a little boy as the 1924 new year.

FERGUSON SAYS DOMINION'S NEED IS IMMIGRATION

Ontario's Premier Delivers Address To Montreal Liberal-Conservatives.

URGES CO-OPERATION

Canadian Press Despatch.

Montreal, Nov. 5.—"I believe that a great deal of good can be done by more frequent intercourse, and as long as I am premier—and I am going to be premier for a long time—it will be my pleasure to come often to the province of Quebec. Much profit can be had by the people of Ontario and of Quebec visiting each other, and by this means we will gain a more unified opinion, more unanimity of thought and greater co-operation in the tasks we all have so much at heart."

These were the concluding words of the address delivered before the large gathering of the Liberal-Conservative Association by Hon. Howard Ferguson, premier of Ontario. Mr. Ferguson commented on the large presence of ladies at the meeting, and said it was not alone in morals or in matters close to their hearts, even in domestic affairs, that women were exercising an influence, but also in big broad affairs. "The women of this country have just as much brains and judgment as the men," he said.

Referring to the two provinces, he declared that Ontario and Quebec had stood together when the strain came after and before confederation. History had shown that when French-Canadians had declared for British supremacy they had stuck faithfully by their bargain.

Speaking of the great debt of the Dominion, Premier Ferguson declared there were two outstanding things needed in this country today—new peoples and new wealth. "We must have immigration and we must have capital." There was room in Canada for millions of people of the right sort.

RENOWNED ARTISTS DELIGHT HEARERS AT CLUB CONCERT

Boris Hambourg and Murray Davey Appear At Fine Recital in St. Andrew's Hall.

NEW POLICY SUCCESS

If last night's concert in St. Andrew's Hall is a sample of the coming concerts, the Women's Music Club is to be congratulated, indeed, on their new policy of "Every Concert an Artists' Concert." Boris Hambourg came from Toronto in his happiest mood, and the result was "cello numbers which caught at the heart strings of the large audience which had come to hear him. For if there could be but one thing said of the artist, it would be that he plays with intense feeling. Technique, which is almost flawless, is forgotten when he lifts his bow, and reaches the inmost feelings of his hearers.

And with him came Murray Davey, Murray Davey who has sung with the greatest artists of the day. His voice is a resonant bass, with a richness and the result is a rich and beautiful sound. Especially in the lower register is the richness and the beauty of it discovered.

He is a master of tone production and a thorough artist in his rendition of the great composers. Few critics have heard him for the first time, who have not remarked on his appearance. For Murray Davey with his Van Dyke beard and his stately manner on the concert stage, is a personality, which will not be dismissed without mention. And last

At Mimico the child collapsed and it was necessary to stop and administer stimulants. On arrival at the hospital, the baby was placed on the operating table, and in ten minutes time a successful operation performed. Owing to the weakened condition of the little patient, a transfusion of blood was found necessary. The mother, Mr. Gignac and Mr. Williamson offered, and Mr. Williamson was accepted. The child rallied after the transfusion. The hospital staff pronounced the case as one of the most extraordinary which had come under their care, and gave every hope for recovery.

"I FEEL sorry for some of the youngsters at school, whose folks don't realize how much good a Long Distance call would do them.

THE majority of people intend to buy a house sooner or later—almost everybody craves the feeling of satisfaction that goes with the ownership of a home—and then, of course, as an investment the idea is sound.

BUT the first step towards the purchase is often delayed because of the idea that a lot of ready cash is necessary, whereas, in reality, there are a host of houses to be had on cash payments that are within the reach of almost any family.

STRATFORD MEETING

Special to The Advertiser.
Stratford, Nov. 5.—Pointing out that it was Germany that sent Lenin and Trotsky into Russia to stir up trouble, and that it was the German Reichstag that sent gold to Moscow for propaganda purposes, in 1918, Brigadier-General W. D. King, C. M. G., D.S.O., told businessmen at the chamber of commerce today that Germany was biding her time and waiting for the Russian army to be in condition to take the field of battle before starting another great war. The speaker repeated statements he has made recently in Western Ontario that the great Armageddon was yet to be fought, and said the world's salvation would depend on the united front of the Anglo-Saxon races.

He declared that the late war had done a great deal to diminish the prestige of the white races in the eyes of the colored people of Asia. A grave mistake had been made, he felt, in allowing colored troops to take part in the great war in the first place, and during the great European nations had been so spent after the war, they had been forced to grant concessions to Asiatic people, which were not in the interests of peace.

WAITING FOR STEEL FOR BRIDGE WORK

Special to The Advertiser.
Milwaukee, Nov. 5.—The inclement weather is holding up work on the three large steel bridges being constructed between here and Walkerton.

If the weather improves the bridge in the Crinlin swamp will be completed this week, while the bridge near the Otter creek will take another two weeks to complete.

Contractor Schickler is rushing the work as fast as the weather permits. The delay in the completion is attributed to the inability of the steel workers to complete their part of the work on schedule.

YOUNGEST MAYOR OF MAPLE CITY

"Ted" Sulman Has Big Lead
In a Three-Cornered
Fight.

AGGRESSIVE POLICY

Special to The Advertiser.
Chatham, Nov. 5.—With a plurality of 1,644, in a three-cornered contest, Alderman C. D. (Ted) Sulman was today elected mayor of Chatham for the 1924-25 term. The defeated candidates were Ald. M. J. Mindorf, who secured 849 votes, and Ald. Harry Fitzsimmons, who received 741 votes.

Of twelve candidates, who sought election to the Chatham City Council, Ald. A. L. Thompson, E. C. Brisco, ex-alderman, J. R. Newkirk and M. J. Smith were successful. They were chosen for a 2-year term. The defeated candidates were ex-Ald. J. W. Draper, ex-Ald. V. Lauriston, ex-Ald. Ross Huff, J. H. Saddington, ex-Mayor T. A. Smith, G. F. Moss, ex-Ald. John Liddy and Mrs. Sabina Watson.

Elected to serve two years on the board of education were Alex. Clark, Mrs. Kate Coltart, W. J. McGuire and Walter Watts.

Ald. C. D. Sulman, when he assumes the office of mayor at the first of next year, will be the youngest mayor to head the city administration. In his twenty-sixth year, he sought election today, on his fourth year's record as an alderman he served on the parks and cemeteries committee and during the past two years had headed the city property committee. He is a son of G. W. Sulman, ex-M. P. for West Kent. Of the seven thousand odd citizens who were eligible to vote, considerably more than four thousand went to the polls, despite inclement weather which prevailed all day. Unusual interest was shown in the election campaign in view of the platforms advanced by the various candidates, which urged an aggressive policy designed to bring about the industrial expansion of the city and the reduction of the tax rate.

G. W. Wands is public utilities commissioner, and W. G. McGeorge, water commissioner, by acclamation.

LADIES' GUILD DONATES LIGHTING EQUIPMENT

Four Standards Are Erected
On Grounds of Ingersoll
Methodist Church.

Special to The Advertiser.
Ingersoll, Nov. 5.—Through the efforts of the Ladies' Guild of the Methodist Church, four handsome lighted standards have been erected on the church property. Two of the lights have been placed at the church entrance on the lawn, while two have been placed on the boulevard. The latter two are lighted each evening, while the inner two are lighted only on Sunday evenings.

The standards cost the ladies' organization about $420, this being their contribution to the church for the year.

Births Increase.
A substantial increase in the births and marriages over the deaths is shown in the vital statistics for the month of October. The statistics for the month were announced today by Town Clerk W. R. Smith, and are as follows: Twelve births, eight marriages and two deaths.

The death rate for the month is one of the lowest within the recollection of the clerk. The few deaths recorded were of elderly persons.

Plan For Armistice Day.
Arrangements are being made for the observance of Armistice Day in local churches on Sunday. In the morning the services will begin at a quarter to 11 instead of 11 o'clock.

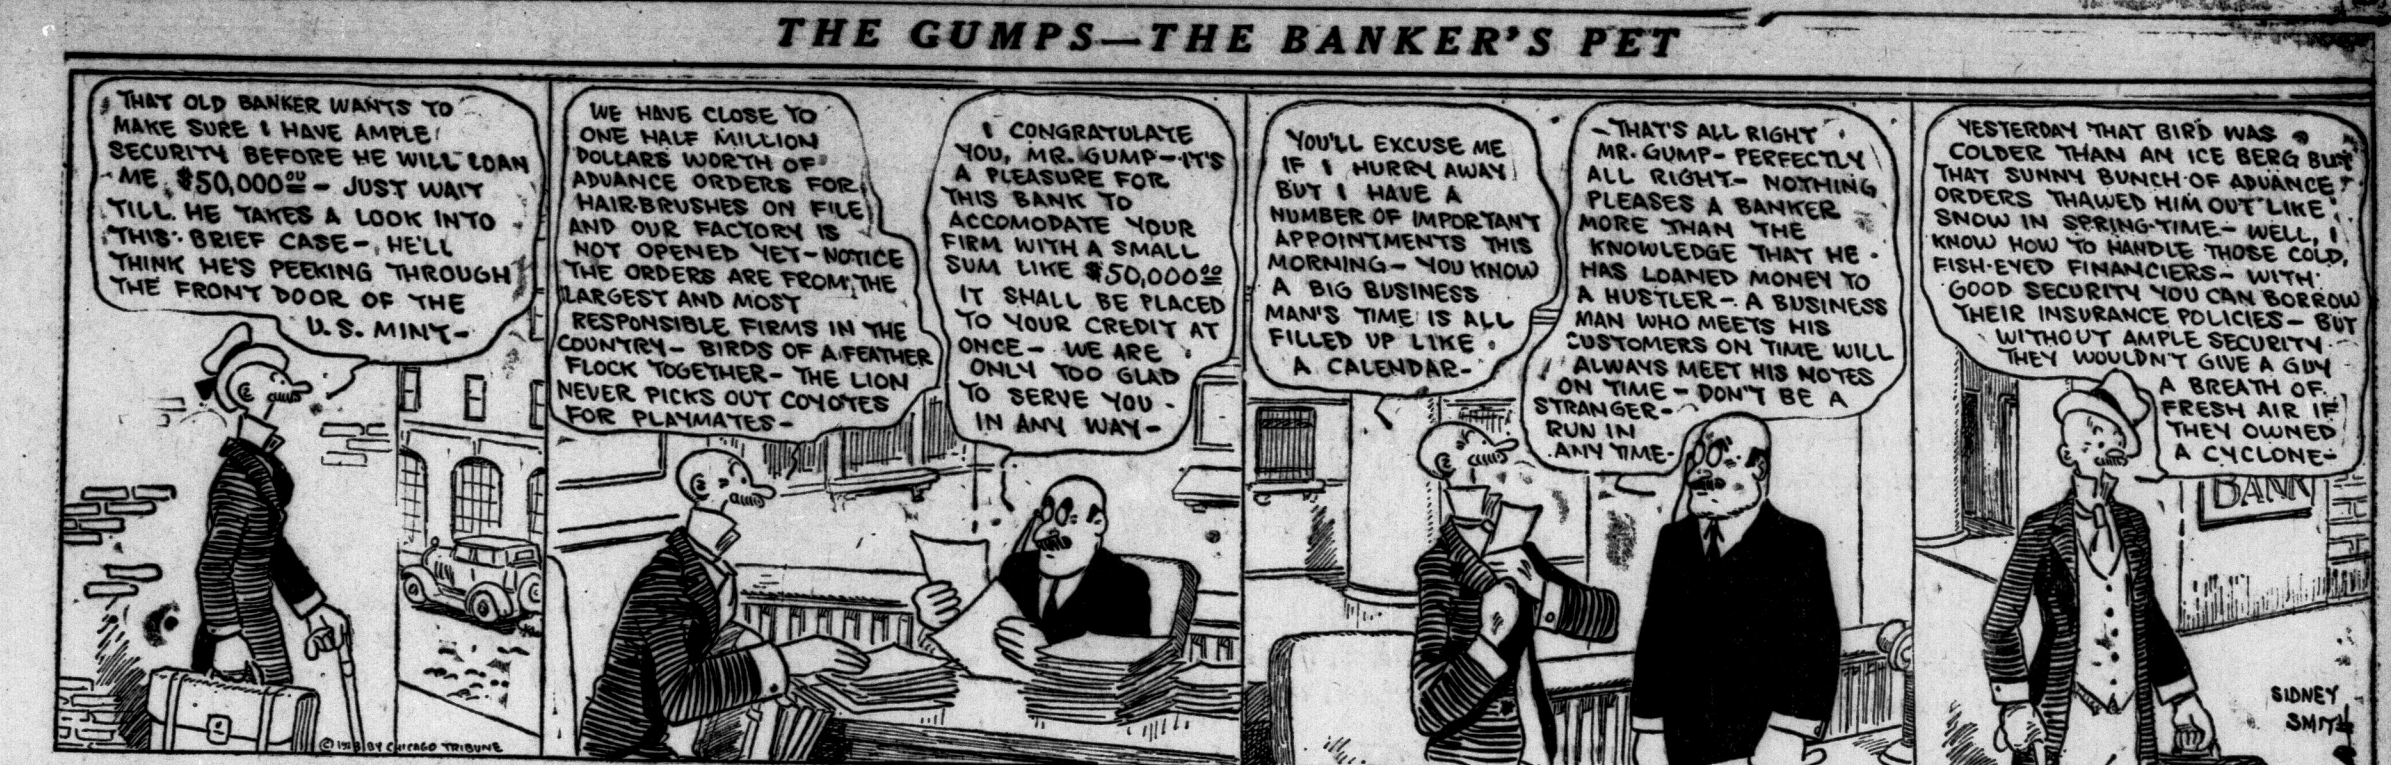

FALLS IN BOILING WATER GIRL IS BADLY SCALDED

Special to The Advertiser.
Cambridge, Nov. 5.—Isabelle, little daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph F. Coe, six line, fell into a pail of scalding water on Friday and was severely burned about the back. Her condition is not thought to be serious.

ANNIVERSARY SERVICES.

Special to The Advertiser.
Wroxeter, Nov. 5.—Anniversary and thanksgiving services were held in the Methodist Church Sunday with the Rev. S. W. Hann, M.A., of Ethel in charge, who in the morning took his text from John 4:35, "There are yet four months and then cometh harvest. Applying this to the spiritual state he held: 'Harvest time is opportunity, all hands must then be at work, everyone for himself that he may reap the graces and comforts of the gospel. Once passed it cannot be recalled.' In the evening his topic was based on I. John 2:5, 'But whose keepeth his word in him verily is the love of God perfected,' in which he emphasized that holiness and obedience are evidences of knowledge of Christ. To be like Christ is to be like him in life.

Large congregations were present at both services and special music rendered by the choir, which included a solo, 'There Never Was One Like Jesus,' by Mrs. Hann, and a trio, 'In the Land of Strangers,' by Messrs. Gibson, Ritchie and Kitchen.
