

Aubrey's Revenge.

CHAPTER XXXVI.

He was crouching far back in the corner of the carriage, and something in his attitude suggested a beast of prey that meditated a spring. His face was horrible beyond conception, dark, exultant, devilish, the face of a madman.

To her dying day Kelpie never forgot the horror of that moment. Like a lightning flash she comprehended the situation and realized that she had been caught in a trap. She had gone to the corner of Myrtle Avenue, expecting to meet Tom Holland, and had fallen into Tulliver's hands instead.

The match flickered and went out, and with this awful conviction forcing itself upon her, Kelpie was again left in darkness.

Tulliver's horrible laughter broke the silence that followed. He seemed to be in a high good humor.

"You weren't expecting to see me, my dear," he said, when his laugh was over; "the look of surprise on your face when the light flashed out was too amusing. But you're glad to see me all the same, of course? You couldn't help being glad to see me when you and I were such good friends when we lived together at New Castle Light."

"You remember that last night, of course, when I wanted to put out the light, and you blazed away at me with that city chap's revolver? I told you then that I'd get even with you some day, and I've kept my word, you see."

"Let's have another look at your pretty face, sweetheart," he went on, and snap went another match, revealing the madman, still crouching in the corner of the carriage, and this time he held a glittering revolver in his hand, and there was an expression of fiendish triumph on his dark face.

Kelpie's heart stood still, but she kept back the cry of terror that leaped to her lips.

"It was your turn that night, at New Castle Light, but it's mine now," Tulliver went on, as the light of the match died out. "I've got you as snug and secure as if I had you shut up in a cage. The man on the box is a good friend of mine and he won't stop the horses until daybreak unless I pull the strap. Do you understand, my pretty Kelpie?"

Kelpie was silent, and Tulliver went on, his eyes glittering like a wild animal's in the dark.

"Why don't you speak? Has the cat got your tongue, as the children say, or are you too dignified now that you are playing the grand lady to speak to a poor fellow like me? You're going to marry that city swell who hung about New Castle Light last summer, they tell me. Well, now, my pretty Kelpie, bear in mind that I've got something to say about that; besides, as you have doubtless heard, possession is nine points of the law. I've got you, thanks to my clever management, and, what's more, I'm going to hold on to you!"

"Won't the city swell and your lady mother, as she calls herself, raise a racket when they find that you've run away! But no matter how much they fuss and fume, it won't mend matters."

HEADACHES

Thousands of men and women suffer from headaches every day, other thousands have headaches every week or every month, and still others have headaches occasionally, but not at regular intervals. The best Doctor knows how to find the cause of many of these headaches, and in most other cases, knowing the cause, he does not know what will remove it, so as to give a permanent cure. All he can do is to prescribe the usual pain relievers, which give temporary relief, but the headache returns as usual, and treatment is again necessary. If you suffer from headaches, do not waste what their nature, take Anti-kamnia Tablets, and the results will be satisfactory in the highest degree. You can obtain them at all druggists in any quantity, 10c worth, 25c worth or more. Ask for A-K Tablets.

SICK-HEADACHES
Sick-headache, the most miserable of all sicknesses, torments the nerves when A-K Tablets are taken. When you feel an attack coming on, take two tablets, and in many cases, the attack will be wanted off. During an attack take one A-K Tablet every two hours. The next and onward forth which follow, can be obtained in no other way.
Genuine A-K Tablets bear the A-K monogram. At all druggists.

See If The Child's Tongue Is Coated

Mother! Don't hesitate! If cross, feverish, constipated, give "California Syrup of Figs."

Look at the tongue, mother! If coated, it is a sure sign that your little one's stomach, liver and bowels need a gentle, thorough cleansing at once.

When peevish, cross, listless, pale, doesn't sleep, doesn't eat or act naturally, or is feverish, stomach sour, breath bad; has stomach-ache, sore throat, diarrhoea, full of cold, give a teaspoonful of "California Syrup of Figs," and in a few hours all the foul, constipated waste, undigested food and sour bile gently moves out of its little bowels without griping, and you have a well, playful child again.

You needn't coax sick children to take this harmless "fruit laxative"; they love its delicious taste, and it always makes them feel splendid. Ask your druggist for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which has directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups plainly on the bottle. Beware of counterfeits sold here. To be sure you get the genuine, ask to see that it is made by "California Fig Syrup Company." Refuse any other kind with contempt.

I've got you, my pretty darling, and you'll be my lawfully wedded wife before the good friends you've left behind can pull themselves together and start out in pursuit of you. Won't that be no end of a joke?"

He laughed uproariously, and, putting the revolver on the seat beside him, drew an ugly-looking knife from his breast pocket and began to drag the keen blade across his sleeve.

It was still very dark, there was a tinkle of sleet against the carriage window, and the horses seemed to be going at a risky rate of speed. But Kelpie took no heed of this. She sat motionless, almost breathless, her eyes fixed, with a sort of fascination, on the dark figure in the corner.

"I had quite made up my mind to take your life," the madman went on, after a moment. "I've got a revolver and this knife besides, and it's got a fine, keen edge. It would be the easiest thing in the world to slip it across that pretty white throat of yours. I should like to do it immensely; then I'd put a bullet in my own head, and that would be the end."

Kelpie heard him get on his feet, and felt rather than saw that he was moving stealthily toward her. He got so near to her that she could hear him breathe, and she the glitter of his eyes in the dark. She did not move a muscle nor utter a sound.

That curious feeling of indifference that comes to us sometimes in moments of great peril made the little lighthouse girl strong and calm.

Sitting there in the dark with the crouching figure of the madman coming nearer and nearer, an incident of her lonely life flashed like lightning across her brain. She was out in a little dory with her grandfather when a storm overtook them and tossed the little boat about like an egg-shell, and when, trembling and terrified, she had clung to the old man, he looked down on her, calm and smiling, and said:

"What's the use of being frightened, little woman? We are in God's hands, and whether we live or die, He will care for us."

The words came back to Kelpie and gave her strength as she sat there in the dark, with the flash of the madman's murderous knife before her eyes.

"I am in God's hands," she said to herself, "and whether I live or die, He will care for me."

Tulliver came nearer, and, with a thrill of terror, she felt his touch on her wrist.

"I had made up my mind that we would die together," he said, his hand closing over hers with a grasp like hot steel, "but all things considered, it will be just as well to make you my wife. Don't you think so?"

"Why, of course I do," answered Kelpie, wondering at her own calmness.

"You're a sensible girl," said Tulliver, with an exultant chuckle. "Since you're willing to marry me, I'll hand you my weapons, and put an engagement ring on your finger. I've got a real diamond right here in my vest pocket."

He produced a ring as he spoke, and, not daring to refuse, Kelpie suffered him to put it on her finger.

"Why, how cold your hand is," he said. "Dear little hand, it is mine now."

Raising it to his lips, he covered it with burning kisses.

Kelpie shivered with terror and almost unconsciously made an effort to free her hand, but her mad lover held it in a grip of steel.

"Maybe you don't like me to kiss your hand," he said, with an ugly laugh. "If you object, all you've got to do is to say the word. I'd just as lief draw the knife across your pretty throat."

Then, even as he uttered the horrible words, Kelpie felt the touch of cold steel on her face.

Frantic with terror, she tore her hand free of the madman's grasp, and, with the strength born of desperation, she threw herself against the carriage door. The glass crashed and shattered, the door gave way, and Kelpie was thrown out with terrible force.

Realizing what had happened, Tulliver leaped after her, with the yell of a demon.

The crash of the breaking glass had frightened the horses in the meantime, and they shot off at a breakneck speed, and instead of alighting on his feet, Tulliver was precipitated down an embankment with terrific force and landed amid the debris of an old mill race, where he lay like one dead.

CHAPTER XXXVII.

In the meantime, having recovered from the shock of her fall, Kelpie rose to her feet and stood looking about her like one dazed. She felt a trifle dizzy, and her hands were cold and bruised, but otherwise she had sustained but little injury.

Her first thought was of escape. The frightened horses, with the carriage rattling at their heels, and the driver tugging vainly at the reins, had long since vanished from sight, and Tulliver, as has already been stated, lay down below, amid the debris of an old mill race; so the way seemed clear.

The night was bitter cold; a fine rain that congealed into sharp sleet before it reached the ground was falling, and there was not a rift to be seen in the lowering clouds.

The situation was not a pleasing one, but Kelpie drew a long breath of gratitude as she stood, solitary and alone, by the wayside, and again the words of her old grandfather came back to her:

"What's the use of being frightened, little woman, we're in God's hands, and whether we live or die, He will take care of us."

The little girl took heart of grace, and cast about her as to which way she should go.

Before she had made up her mind, the sound of approaching wheels fell on her ear. She darted into a thicket near by like a frightened bird. Was Tulliver coming in pursuit of her? In dismay, she watched from a covert of tangled vines with terror-filled eyes.

A Million Corns Went Last Month

Last month, a million corns were ended in this easy, simple way. And every month a million more go like them.

To each corn was applied a little Blue-jay plaster. In every case the corn pain ended there.

Then the wax in the plaster—the B & B wax—gently freed the corn. In 48 hours nearly every corn came out, without any pain or soreness. A few stubborn corns required another plaster.

That's the story of some seventy million corns ended by this invention. It will be the story of your corns in 48 hours if you treat them in this scientific way. Your friends will testify to that.

If you don't do this, in all probability, those corns will stay for years.

In a very short time a buggy, with a lamp burning brightly on each side, came in sight. Two men occupied the seat, a colored driver and a gentleman with a long white beard.

Kelpie's heart gave a curious thrill.

"He's an old man," she said, peering forth from her hiding place, "his beard's white like daddy's. I wonder if he wouldn't help me if I asked him. I shall freeze to death if I stay here."

Impelled by an impulse which seemed over and above her own will, she darted forth as the vehicle was passing by.

"Please, sir, won't you stop one moment?" she called.

The driver drew up instantly at the sound of the pathetic young voice.

"I'm a stranger here, and don't know where to go," explained Kelpie, going close to the wheels, "and it's so cold."

"Take her up, Jim," said the gentleman with the white beard, and a moment later Kelpie found herself tucked away under a buffalo robe, with a feeling of safety and security in her heart that made her eyes brim over with grateful tears.

"Don't attempt to explain matters to-night," said her protector kindly. "You're too tired. I shall put up for the night at a roadside inn, just a little way ahead, where we'll get supper and lodgings, and in the morning you shall tell me your story, and I'll do what I can to help you."

Kelpie's heart was too full for speech, so she hid her tired head under the warm robe and sobbed like a child.

The roadside inn turned out to be a very cheerful place, with roaring fires and a hot supper that filled the house with appetizing odors.

"I want you to take this young lady to a warm room," said the gentleman with the Rip van Winkle beard, presenting Kelpie to the landlady who came in for orders. "She's too tired to go to the table, so you'll kindly have her supper sent up to her."

Great Dramatic Playlet at Rossley's.

There was a very crowded house at Rossley's last night, when the Great Ballard Brown and Miss Madge Locke presented the beautiful one-act drama entitled "As it was in the Beginning," one of the most fascinating playlets ever seen here. The drama deals with a young Indian girl who has nursed back to health one of the Gordon Highlanders, who had been hurt while on a visit in America. Then comes the news of the war, when he is compelled to leave the Indian girl who has grown to love him; he must choose between love and duty and he chooses duty. The Indian dance is very fine. Mr. Brown sings the March of the Cameron Men, which brings unbounded applause; Miss Locke, with her marvelous voice sings two songs; and last night a prominent St. John's citizen asked for that great dramatic recitation "The Charge of the Light Brigade," and they finished with "Excelsior."

They were encored again and again; both have magnificent voices. "As it was in the Beginning" with the beautiful scenery and costumes, is worth ten times the price of admission. Besides the full house a large box party of the elite of the city were present. On Monday the act is entirely Irish, and Mr. Rossley has secured the film of the Regatta, also a film of the boys leaving Government House Grounds, going on board the Neptune and being transferred to the Dominion. See yourselves on Water Street, at the wharf; see the boys wave their last farewell to the crew of the Neptune when on board the Dominion, on Monday these wonderful films.

C. A. KING, M. D.

WHEN SHIPS COME IN.
When our ships come in from the sea of dreams, where the sea-breeze zephyrs blow, all our cherished plans and our golden schemes will then in an hour come true.

No more to toil for a pauper's pay, no longer to hew and spin, we shall all be glad on that joyful day, the day when our ships come in. There are many things I would like to do, if I only had the price; I'd give the orphan a needed shoe, the widow a cake of ice; I'd help the pastor repair the church, but I'm always short of tin; to raise a dime takes a lengthy search, and will till my ship comes in. I'd help the poor in a lavish way, if I were a millionaire; I'd feed them oysters three times a day, and banish their grief and care, I'd like to battle with stark disease in slums that are dark with sin, but I can't get busy with things like these till my good ship comes in. I do no good as I plug along, for I'm always dreaming dreams; I haven't the money to combat wrong, or baffle the wicked's schemes. I'll do fine things on a future day—to that theory my faith I pin, when over the sea and over the bay, my beautiful ship comes in.

THEN SPAKE THE DEAD.
It was a great gathering, and there was a great gathering of the deceased's family, quarrelling, as relatives will, over the division of the spoils. The lawyers engaged chuckled, for the suit seemed likely to be prolonged and complicated.

There were many lawyers, too, and the judge marvelled at the immensity of the deceased man's family as silk and stuff rose in rapid succession, introducing themselves with the usual formula: "And I, my lord, am for the nephews, or nieces, or fifteenth cousins removed, as the case may be, of the deceased." The procession seemed interminable, but at last it came to an end. Then a small voice was heard timidly saying from the back of the court, "May I be allowed to speak, my lord?"

There was dead silence as his lordship adjusted his spectacles and asked, rather dejectedly, "Who are you?" The answer was, to say the least, unexpected.

"I am the deceased, my lord," said the modest voice from the back of the court. That ended the action.

Quite unknown to his relatives, the "deceased" had turned up from the wilds of Rhodesia. Obviously a man of humour, he must have taken a delight in watching how "the best-laid schemes of mice and men gang aft a-gley."

At the House

THURSDAY, April 8th

Petitions were presented by Cooker from Brigus, Burnt Head, Head, Bryant's Cove, Job's Cove, Bay de Verde, asking for the appointment of a commission to fix the price of Labrador fish.

Billis relating to the Sale of Coal on the Labrador Coast; The Amendment of the Customs Act; Naturalization of Aliens; Administration of Local Affairs; the Seal Fish, Patents and Trade Marks, were presented.

The Local Affairs and Sealing Bill will be discussed by a Committee of the House before going to the Committee for consideration.

The report of the Committee on the draft of the Address in Reply was presented by Mr. Downey, after which a speech from the Throne was read with.

Mr. Clift in opening the discussion referred to the Great War, and reviewed the work of the Special Session in September last, when a war cloud hung over the world, which since then has been to some extent lifted. In a forceful speech emphasized the necessity of unity of purpose on the part of the House, the cause of the Empire during the great crisis. He paid a high tribute to the part played by Newfoundland since the outbreak of hostilities in equipping and sending of some of its men for both services. He said that authorities differ as to the probable duration of the war, and though he is assured by those who have charge of affairs that success will eventually crown our efforts we must prepare for the days that are to come. In response to the call of the Empire, he has indeed been a noble one, but the needs were brought home to the response would be still greater. He wished to heartily congratulate men who have offered their services on land and sea and the grand display of loyalty displayed by the sons of Terra Nova Newfoundland when they God speed, and feel sure that they will return with victory upon their banner. "Only because we have an Army and Navy," said Mr. Clift, "are we assembled here to-day, our trade and commerce are conducted as usual because of the protection to those who rally round the British flag. Therefore our paramount duty is to the Empire and to show as loyal subjects of the Empire to give the Empire first consideration."

It was gratifying to note that our per measures will be taken to provide for the assistance of those who will be left behind. Our soldiers and sailors have gone forth on their heroic mission to protect us and we should do all in our power to assist those whom they have left behind who have made such a noble sacrifice. He was pleased to see that the efforts of the Patriotic Association had been rewarded with a substantial fund, which he felt sure would be further augmented when the object of the fund which have been so far forth in clearer terms and greater details were better known. He insisted to place on record his appreciation of the work done by the Women of Newfoundland both in supplying comforts for the men in the trenches and the whole-hearted sympathy shown the Belgians, who suffered so early at the early stages of the war. His sympathy for these heroic people was widespread and of the amount subscribed for the Belgian Relief Fund three-fifths of the sum consisted of unsolicited subscriptions from the outports. He then went on to speak with the Colony's finances. He feared for the deficit for the past year. During the past 5 or 6 years the annual expenditure had been increasing. While the fixed annual charges of the country continue to increase, revenue may not so increase. In order to maintain the financial standing of the Colony it was necessary to regulate affairs so that the deficit might be made up, at the same time providing for indispensable requirements. How the Government proposed to do this he did not know.

He felt that it was absolutely necessary to cut down expenses but would not favor of indiscriminate cutting of the Civil Service as it was one of the best assets of a country. There were men in the Civil Service who were adequately paid, and were rendering faithful service, whereas others were altogether overpaid for the amount of work they perform. To make the Civil Service the asset it should be it was necessary to increase the salaries of the deserving ones and decrease altogether with the inefficient. In the speech from the Throne he mentioned the reference to some wonderful industry that is now on the horizon but felt that this project would have the fate of some of the others he had often heard mentioned at the opening of the House, and from which substantial results had ever resulted.

Mr. Clift endorsed the remarks of Mr. Clift, and spoke briefly on the splendid spirit of self-sacrifice shown by Newfoundlanders in their rally.

Information Sought for Intelligent Deliberation.

In view of the grave disclosures made in the Speech of the Governor and in the remarks of the Prime Minister on Wednesday as to the financial condition of the Government, particularly as regards the failure of the Revenue proposals of March 1914 and September 1914 to bring about an equilibrium on current account between the income and the expenditure, and the increasing obligations on the Colony on account of branch railways and other public works on the one hand, and the Great War on the other, it is essential that information in regard to such matters shall be furnished to the House as early as possible. Without a careful consideration of this information, the discussion cannot be intelligent, suggestions cannot be helpful, nor can the deliberations result in wise decisions. Members of the Opposition are taking an early opportunity of asking for information on these matters in order that the Government and the departments affected may furnish it in ample time for its proper digestion. Information has already been asked about payments for land and arbitration and other fees under the Railway Extension Act, at other payments to the contractor and others under the same Act, under various separate headings. Information has also been asked as to borrowings made during the current year, and as to financial assistance from the Imperial Government. A statement is also sought as to the condition of the balances of the Government in the banks or the various current accounts on March 31st last. The Minister of Finance has also been asked for statements of the quantities of goods imported on which an increased tariff was levied in March, 1914 for the fiscal year ending June 30th last, the amounts realized by the revenue and the increased revenue derived from the increases in duties imposed at that time. He is also asked to give similar information in regard to the current year up to March 31st last; and also to give similar information in regard to the special War taxes of September last. We have no doubt that the Hon. M. P. Cashin, the Minister of Finance and Customs, will appreciate the wisdom of making a special effort to give the information sought at the earliest possible moment.

ATTEMPTED ASSASSINATION OF SULTAN OF EGYPT.

LONDON, To-day.
An attempt was made at three o'clock yesterday afternoon to assassinate the Sultan of Egypt, Hussein Kempti, according to a Reuter despatch from Cairo. As the Sultan was leaving Abden Palace a native fired a shot at him. This went wild and the native was immediately seized. The Sultan paid his intended visit to various officials and a crowd assembled around the palace and gave him an ovation when he returned. His assailant in a statement described himself as a native Egyptian, 25 years of age, and a merchant hailing from mansuran. He was perfectly composed.

MILITARY EXPEDITION AGAINST TURKEY READY.

PARIS, To-day.
French troops from Africa are ready to assist the Allied fleets and the British expeditionary forces against Turkey. The following official statement was issued by the War Office: The Expeditionary Corps of the Orient, which was placed under command of General G. L. Damade and concentrated at Bizerta (a fortified seaport of Turkish Africa), to perfect its organization, has effected a voyage of the Levant under the best conditions. It had been ready since March 15th to aid the Allies' fleet and the British Expeditionary Corps in waiting. It was deemed advisable not to prolong the stay of the troops aboard the transports, and for this reason the hospitality of Egypt was accepted. The French forces have been debarked at Alexandria and are installed at Ramleh where they are resting and perfecting their organization. They are ready to proceed without delay to any point necessary.

The Allies are considering the advisability of opening Four Parties with the Bulgarian Government to learn definitely what position that country intends to take in the European crisis, says the Petit Parisien, which adds that these negotiations are desired by pro-Russian elements in Bulgaria, who wish to act in co-operation with Triple Entente.

Railroad rolling stock is being withdrawn by Italy from the Swiss frontier for the transportation of troops and ammunition in Northern Italy, destined for the region bordering on the Austrian Tyrol. The Lausanne Gazette states that the towns of Mantua, Verona, Peschiera and Legnago, which formed the famous Quadrilateral are garrisoned with fully equipped troops, which lack only heavy artillery, and this will be supplied soon. An aerial fleet is ready for the operations at Milan. The despatch says that at a mass meeting held last night attended by five Liberal deputies from Milan, a resolution was adopted characterizing as absolutely necessary the participation of Italy in the war.

GERMAN SPIES ARRESTED ON SENSATIONAL CHARGE.

LONDON, To-day.
Charged with sending military information to Germany by means of invisible ink, three men have been arrested and will be tried in the Civil Court. The authorities intimate that the case is one of the gravest importance. The approaching trial of Anton Kuapferle, a German-American, on a charge of high treason promises to prove sensational. It is no exaggeration to say the authorities consider Kuapferle's arrest the most important of its kind since the outbreak of war, enabling the authorities to lay bare a most elaborate system of obtaining most valuable information about military and naval plans and transmitting it to the enemy. One of the suspects, Kuapferle, professes to be an American, another, Muller, claims he is a naturalized Englishman, while a third, who gives the name of Hahn, does not deny that he is a German subject. Kuapferle came here from the United States, first visiting Dublin, then coming to London, where he is said to have been awaiting passage across the Channel.

OFFICERS AT PRZEMYSL HAD FOOD; CIVILIANS STARVED.

London, April 3.—The common soldiers and the populace were the only sufferers from starvation in Przemysl; the officers had abundant food, wines and cigars to the last, according to the Times Przemysl correspondent. The correspondent declares that the available supplies were not economically expended and that moreover the fortress was three times over-garrisoned.

"In the last days," says the correspondent, "cats sold for two dollars each and dogs for five dollars, for food purposes, as there was no more horse flesh left, except that of the officers' thoroughbreds, which were not killed until just before the Russians entered the city. One of the most pathetic sights of the Russian entry, according to Russian officers, was to see the famished Austrian soldiers gathered around the body of an officer's horse in the street tearing out chunks of flesh which they ate raw."

England Fights for Life Says Lord Haldane.

ASKS FORBEARANCE OF AMERICANS WHILE BRITAIN IS PROSECUTING THE STRUGGLE—EXPLAINS THE BLOCKADE.

Chicago, April 1.—Edward Price Bell sends to the Daily News, an interview with Viscount Haldane, the British Lord Chancellor, on the progress and promise of the world war: "From first to last," Mr. Bell says, "the words of the Lord Chancellor—carefully chosen words—seemed to me full of force and fine feeling, deeply serious, unembittered, eloquent, illuminating. I hasten to quote him on an urgent topic:

"We ask you in America—call whether for or against us, heirs of the early struggles of our races—to realize that when we say we are fighting for life we use no figure of speech. Hyperbole there is in plenty of course but this is not hyperbole. We are fighting for life, and we ask the forbearance of America while we prosecute the struggle. If we appear in a wholly new situation to go beyond some of the rules of the books, we shall not violate the dictates of humanity, and shall not turn back the clock of civilization. We take it that our interest in ending the war quickly—ending it in the only way in which the Allies can afford to see it ended at all—is also the interest of the United States.

"Germany's submarine warfare on belligerents and neutrals alike is a thing with no analogue. We are compelled to meet it. In devising a plan we have given anxious study to the interests of neutrals. We have studied upon certain general principles that seem to us more favorable than are the hitherto sufficient principles of international law.

"If we had recourse to the full rigors of the conventional blockade, we could claim to confiscate ships and cargoes seeking to evade it. What we wish to do is to spare neutrals all possible inconvenience and injury—spare their crews, ships and cargoes—and still throw the last ounce of our naval strength into the effort to break the system that despotism has set in operation against the happiness and prosperity of the world.

"About America let me say two or three things with all emphasis. We do not assert any right to ask America to come into this war. One has heard it said that your country, as a result of the fact it has in the security of peace, is so unprepared for war, as to be relatively negligible in a warlike sense. This notion we do not share. We have not a doubt that America would be a most formidable factor in any war in which it might engage. But we do not claim that your country should throw its sword into the scale on our behalf.

"We ask no nation to do this. Such a question as that of peace or war, we think, should be decided by every nation with sole reference to its own view of its duty and needs. We sympathize with President Wilson in what we regard as his honorable fidelity to his official trust.

"What do you think of the German argument that America should not export munitions to the Allies?" was asked.

"It seems to me unfair," Lord Haldane said. "For years Germany was heaping up armaments. She made the most formidable army that has ever existed, and a navy by no means negligible. Her arsenals were filled with munitions. She had collected her own time for a stupendous war of aggression. We were much less prepared. Parenthetically, Germany had constructed a great system of strategic railways—parallel to the Russian frontier; Russia had done no corresponding thing.

"Now, fully prepared for war, with colossal accumulations of war material, Germany decides upon the moment for war and declares war. Is there any fairness, any chivalry, in her trying to prevent us in full accord with international usages from going into neutral markets to buy the implements that Germany's action causes us so direly to need.

"I am glad to know that American thought rejects the German proposal."

WORLD'S LARGEST FLAGPOLE
The tallest single-piece wood flag pole ever erected has been placed in the Panama-Pacific Exposition grounds at San Francisco. It is trimmed in the shape of a hexagon on the trunk of a Douglas fir tree, 240 ft. in height, cut in Oregon. The pole is 4 ft. in diameter at the base, 15 in. at the top, and weighs 35 tons. When erected it was imbedded in a reinforced-concrete foundation and anchored solidly. After the cement had set, all the guy cables were removed, leaving the great shaft without a bar, other than its base. Three large derricks were used in lifting it into place. A spiked ball, weighing 620 lb. and measuring 19 ft. over all, was placed at the apex. When the exposition is opened the pole will fly a 46 ft. American flag.

A GREAT SHIP BUT SLOW.

(From the London Advertiser.)

By a large section of the American press the newly launched United States super-Dreadnought Pennsylvania is being hailed as the greatest of all battleships. Magnificent fighting machine that she is, however, she is lacking in one vital factor, that of speed. The Pennsylvania is a 21-knot vessel, which is several knots slower than half a dozen battleships of different nations that have been placed in commission during the last year or so. In point of armament and defensive features, the Pennsylvania is the very latest thing in naval fighting monsters. Only the Queen Elizabeth is her equal in these respects, but the British vessel has the advantage of the American in speed by four or five knots, and the war has demonstrated in a sensational manner the prime necessity of speed in naval operations. Other powers have grasped this fact, and even Russia, a land power, is rushing to completion a half-dozen battleships that will carry the hitting power of the Pennsylvania, but will be speedier by at least six knots. Japan, too, is building a super-Dreadnought that will have a speed of 22 knots, and Great Britain before the year is out, will have launched a half-dozen more of the Queen Elizabeth type that will be much faster than the latest and best ship of Uncle Sam's navy. The Pennsylvania as a fighting craft is one of the most formidable things in existence, but because of comparative slowness she cannot be called the greatest fighter afloat.

EASILY EXPLAINED.

Buffon, the great naturalist, one day entertained a company of distinguished savants at dinner, at the conclusion of which they all went into the garden. It was a very hot summer's day, in the centre of the grounds there stood on a pedestal a large glass globe, which one of the guests happened to touch with his hand, when he found, to his astonishment, that it was warmer on the shady side than on the side turned towards the sun. He communicated his discovery to the other guests, who at once proceeded to verify the statement. What could be the cause? An animated discussion ensued, in the course of which every imaginable law of physics was made to account for the strange paradox.

At length the scientists agreed that it must be so owing to the laws of reflection, repulsion, or exhalation, or some other law of physics with a long name. The host was, however, not quite convinced, and, calling his gardener, he said to him:

"Pray tell us why the globe is warmer on the shady side than on the side turned to the sun."

The man replied:

"Because just now I turned it round for fear of its cracking with the great heat."

PHOTOGRAPHING MOVING BULLETS.

Moving pictures have unlimited possibilities, apparently, for the study of rapidly moving objects. An apparatus capable of making pictures at the rate of 10,000 a second has been made. With it seventy-two pictures of a revolver bullet were taken while moving 10 inches.

Pictures of a bullet passing through a stick of wood showed a curious condition. The bullet passed completely through the thin stick, and was well on its way before the wood gave any signs of distress. Then some tiny splinters started out, following the bullet; the stick began to split, and after the bullet had proceeded some distance the stick suddenly fell to pieces.

No camera shutters are fast enough to take pictures at anything like this speed, so no shutter was used. Instead, a series of electric sparks was flashed, the sparks following one another at the rate of 100,000 a second, each spark making a picture. The film was mounted on a wheel about 3 feet in circumference, and the wheel was revolved at the rate of 9,000 revolutions a minute. When all was ready the bullet was shot, the spark flashed, and the wheel revolved, the actual exposure being limited to a fraction of a second, so as not to pile up pictures one over the other.

WAR NOT POPULAR WITH TURKISH PEOPLE.

New York, March 31.—A special to the London Daily Express and New York Herald from Athens says:

Envoys despatched to the Porte by the Governors of the Asiatic provinces describe the war as markedly unpopular among the Turkish masses, who are greatly impressed by the loyal attitude of Musselmans in the countries of the Christian belligerents.

Certain of the leading Musselmans in Anatolia recently sent a secret mission to the Grand Sheriff of Mecca, to request him to guide them concerning the attitude they should maintain toward the war.

Choosing,

By RUTH CAMERON.

Two young folks were engaged in the fascinating occupation of studying the various record catalogues to select just what music they should buy with the ten dollars at their disposal.

They compiled list after list, selecting, rejecting and selecting again, delighting in some fortunate find or sighing to discover that some longed for record was beyond their means.

Which is the Real Pleasure?

Finally one of them threw down her catalogue with a gesture of impatience. "O dear," she bewailed, "this is so tantalizing that there's no fun in it. I wish I had money enough to order anything I wanted. That would be real pleasure."

The other girl looked thoughtful. "I wonder if it would be so much more fun than this?" she questioned. "We have to plan and sacrifice and contrive, and so we love what we get. Would we love our records so much if we had them without effort? Wouldn't having anything you wanted and never having to select or contrive be rather flat and tasteless as soon as you got used to it?"

What do you think about it, reader friend? Choosing is sometimes very hard, but after all isn't it part of the spice of life?

Why Rich Men and Their Wives Keep Working.
Doubtless that's the reason the rich men who have money enough to buy anything they could possibly want with the scratch of a pen, keep on working—not because they want more money but because only in their work can they find the chance to contrive and plan, to scheme for something that is hard to get, and to taste the spicy savor of difficult attainment.

And doubtless it's for the same reason that their wives struggle to get into the exclusive circles of society when they might have just as interesting and worthwhile friends outside the pale.

We think we are forced to contrive and scheme and choose, but as a matter of fact we want to.

"I Choose This."

It's one of our most deeply rooted instincts. Don't you remember how you and your brother or sister used to go through your picture book saying, "I choose this," "I choose that?" The whole picture book with all the pictures in it was yours but you wanted to choose.

Selection is self-expression. A man's choices are his personality and his life.

Great poverty or great wealth alike take away the power of choice. Let's be happy then that you and I have neither.

EVERYDAY ETIQUETTE

"Please tell me what I should do with my wraps when entering a restaurant. I have just moved to the city and this experience is new to me," inquired Theima.

"A woman may leave her wrap in the cloakroom, if it is a very small one, she may prefer to keep it around her shoulders while at the table. She does not remove her hat. At the table she unpins her veil, if she wears one, or merely pushes it off her face and readjusts it at the conclusion of the meal. Her gloves she takes off directly after she has seated herself and replaces them before rising from the table," were the detailed directions given by her sophisticated cousin.

TALKING HIM OUT.

A young lawyer was defending an old convict on the charge of burglary in one of the American States where the court rules allow each side one hour to address the jury. The young lawyer, somewhat nervous, consulted a veteran member of the Bar who happened to be standing near.

"How much time do you think I should take up in addressing the jury?" he asked, in rather pompous manner.

"Take the full hour," was the gruff reply.

"The full hour! Why, I intended to take only fifteen minutes."

"Take the full hour," repeated the old lawyer.

"But why?"

"Because the longer you talk the longer you will keep your client out of jail!"

The Recruit and His Bayonet.

HOW HE LEARNS TO USE IT.

"The can't stand the bayonet," is what our soldiers say of the Germans, for cold steel in the hands of the Britishers soon makes the Huns break and run. The British soldier excels in this form of fighting because he is so thoroughly trained in the use of the bayonet. In the Army each bayonet instructor only trains four pupils at a time, so that he can give every man individual tuition.

"Tommy's" first lesson with cold steel is to prod a padded jacket hung on a wall. He thus learns to thrust or parry and to jump forward or back. It also instils in him the important rule of always keeping his foe outside his steel blade, for once the enemy gets "inside" the point of that bayonet the soldier is practically helpless. In bayonet fighting, in fact, the whole of the rifle must be kept in front of the body, and the soldier never draws his weapon back before making a thrust.

After learning to attack, the soldier is taught how to defend himself against an onslaught by bayonet. He has to move his rifle quickly from right to left to throw aside a bayonet thrust at his chest. If the attack is made low he swings down his rifle to parry it, his bayonet being slightly embedded in the turf. One of the most difficult forms of bayonet attack to combat is that known as the "Throw point." The soldier throws himself down on his left hand or his knee and gives an upward thrust with his bayonet, generally with disastrous results to his foe, unless the latter unarms his adversary with a sharp blow from his own weapon.

At first recruits find it difficult to make the quick, short jabs characteristic of bayonet fighting, but their clumsiness is overcome by means of an ingenious machine. A square frame of wood about 10 feet high is erected in the ground, and down the centre runs a wire on which are threaded a number of balls composed of thickly woven straw. A mechanical device releases them, and as they travel down the guide wire in rapid succession the man with the bayonet has to stab each of them with a quick movement, withdrawing his instrument in time to hit the sphere following closely behind. The advantage of this machine is that not only does it teach accurate bayonet work, but it develops the muscles of the wrist necessary to withdraw the weapon immediately it has completed its deadly work.

Secreting Art Treasures.

During the war of 1870, when the German army drew near the French capital, one of the first measures the Parisians took was to place the art treasures of the Louvre in safety, as they have done in the present war. The paintings of Raphael, Titian, Paolo Veronese, Rembrandt, and Rubens were carefully packed and shipped to Brest. There they could, if necessary, have been put on shipboard and taken from the country.

It was not so easy to save the pieces of marble statuary, for their weight and fragility made them difficult to handle; but the French determined that the famous Venus of Milo, at least, should not fall into the hands of the Prussians. So they took her down from her pedestal and laid her in a casket carefully padded and wrapped. At night the casket was taken out through a secret door and hidden securely in the cellar of the police prefecture, at the end of a secret passage.

They walked in the casket and cleverly gave the wall an appearance of great age and antiquity. In front of this wall they laid a number of valuable public documents, so that if they should happen to be found their importance would lead the discoverers to think there was nothing else hidden there.

German Scheme to Secure Gold.

Send Iron Rings to Sympathizers to be Exchanged for Gold Rings.

Ottawa, April 2.—The postal authorities here have held up a number of iron finger rings addressed to German sympathizers in Canada, and at the same time unearthed a peculiar scheme to assist the "Fatherland." The plan is being carried out by certain German newspapers in the United States. People are asked to send in their gold rings, which are said to be forwarded to Germany, ostensibly to assist the Red Cross fund, but it is believed to help swell the Kaiser's gold reserves. In return for the gold ring the donor is sent an iron band, to be worn as a mark of devotion to his country. The rings are inscribed, in German, "To the old Fatherland, my faith to prove I give in time of stress gold for this iron."

The scheme is understood to have been worked extensively in the United States.

Absolutely Pure

Never Questioned

Royal Baking Powder is absolutely pure and wholesome. It is made from highly refined, pure, cream of tartar, an ingredient of grapes. Not an atom of unwholesomeness goes into it; not an unwholesome influence comes from it. It perfectly leavens the food, makes it finer in appearance, more delicious to the taste, more healthful.

Its superiority in all the qualities that make the perfect baking powder is never questioned.

Fighting With Water.

When the Belgians opened the sluice gates and let the sea into the basin of the Yser River to stop the German troops in their desperate attempt to advance along the coast from Ostend to Calais, they placed an obstacle in the way of the invading army that was apparently decisive in turning the issue to the advantage of the allies. This means of defense is not new. It has been used repeatedly by the people of Holland for stopping or destroying an invader, and in one case—that of the siege of Leyden, in 1574—the cutting of the dykes resulted not only in the relief of that city, but in the drowning of thousands of the invading Spanish army. There seems little doubt that the flooding of the Yser basin in the early days of November, 1914, was the direct cause of an even greater loss of life than occurred at Leyden.

If Meals Hit Back And Stomach Sours.

"Pape's Diapepsin" ends Indigestion, Gas, Dyspepsia and Stomach Misery in five minutes.

If what you just ate is souring on your stomach or lies like a lump of lead, refusing to digest, or you belch gas and eructate sour, undigested food, or have a feeling of dizziness, heartburn, fullness, nausea, bad taste in mouth and stomach headache, you can get blessed relief in five minutes.

Ask your pharmacist to show you the formula, plainly printed on these fifty-cent cases of Pape's Diapepsin, then you will understand why dyspeptic troubles of all kinds must go, and why they relieve sour, out-of-order stomachs or indigestion in five minutes. "Pape's Diapepsin" is harmless; tastes like candy, though each dose will digest and prepare for assimilation into the blood all the food you eat; besides, it makes you go to the table with a healthy appetite; but, what will please you most, is that you will feel that your stomach and intestines are clean and fresh, and you will not need to resort to laxatives or liver pills for biliousness or constipation.

"This city will have many 'Pape's Diapepsin' cranks, as some people will 'all them, but you will be enthusiastic about this splendid stomach preservative, too. If you ever take it for indigestion, gases, heartburn, sourness, dyspepsia, or any stomach misery."

Get some now, this minute, and rid yourself of stomach trouble and indigestion in five minutes.

Kitchener's Favourite.

SIR LESLIE RUNDLE'S CAREER.

Some time ago a well-known soldier said, "If Kitchener ever has to send for anybody in a hurry it will be Rundle," and these words have proved to be true. Recently K. of K. instructed Sir Leslie Rundle, the Governor of Malta, to return to England to take command of the Fifth British Army now in training, and no one was surprised, for the English Commander-in-Chief has long been an admirer of the military genius of the soldier who was his right-hand man in the Sudan. Sir Leslie, like his brother-in-law, Sir Francis Wingate, and Sir Archibald Hunter, spent many years of his career under the guidance of Kitchener. Possibly this is why he has so much of the Kitchener manner.

Sir Leslie Rundle has had nearly forty years of soldiering. Although his ancestors, who date from the Elizabethan period, were mostly sailors—his father was a naval captain and his mother a sailor's daughter—the commander of the Fifth Army made up his mind to become a soldier almost before he left the nursery. He was trained at the Royal Military Academy at Woolwich, and later was drafted into the Royal Artillery. Since that time he has fought in the Zulu War, the Boer War of 1881, and the Garnet Wolseley campaigns in Egypt, and was adjutant-general under Kitchener during the Khartoum Expedition. In the last South African War Sir Leslie commanded a division, and it is interesting to note that in his campaign Sir Archibald Hunter outstripped Sir Leslie Rundle in the race for promotion after a rivalry of many years. Rundle and Archibald Hunter became brevet majors, brevet lieutenant-colonels, brevet colonels, and major-generals each on the same day as the other. Now the old rivals are each commanding an army in the war.

Although in military circles Sir Leslie has earned a reputation as a grim, unsentimental campaigner, he is a popular society "lion," and in the past he has been the delight of many a country-house party, keeping everyone amused by his practical jokes and endless fun. A story attributed to him concerns an Irish recruit who desired to obtain leave after several weeks of rigid drill. "Would you give me a week's pass to go and see my poor old mother, who's ill?" said Mick to his color-sergeant. "What's the matter with her?" asked his superior. "I don't 'zactly know," was the answer, "but the doctor says as 'ow she wants plenty of attention, and after the drilling yez given me I think I'll be able to give her plenty of attention and standin' at atize, too, if she requires it." Mick got his pass.

TORPEDOES WHICH FOLLOW SHIPS.

It is said that the belligerent nations are much interested in the recent invention by a young American of a torpedo which, according to its maker, is more effective than any other ever used. By means of a magnetic electrical device, which is affected by any great mass of metal, the rudders guiding the torpedo is also affected in such a way that it will steer in that direction. So sensitive is this device that if the missile be discharged at a ship at a range of two or three or even five miles that ship is doomed. The torpedo has two arms of nickel silver plated on either side, projecting at right angles. At the ends of these arms are wire magnetic coils, about four inches in diameter. Upon these magnetic coils hinges the success of the torpedo. A high-frequency current passes through them, and the presence of any great mass of metal charges the self-induction which affects the electrical relays, and these in turn operate the motor controlling the rudder. So the torpedo will follow its target, and will steer for it, no matter how often the target may change its course or position.

Arranging Big Credits for Allies.

New York, March 27.—Conferences among bankers here, it was announced to-day, have brought near conclusion arrangements for the extension of credits to Great Britain, France, Italy and other countries, in addition to the $10,000,000 loan to Germany.

The French credit, it is expected, will be the first to be closed. The amount has not been definitely fixed, but may, it is said, be as large as $50,000,000.

The English credit, it was said, may be twice as large as that for France. Negotiations are in progress for a loan to Russia in addition to the $25,000,000 she recently obtained. Italy is likely to obtain a credit.

Most, if not all, of these loans are expected to take the form in which they can be sold to the public in order that the banks may not have to carry the big sums involved out of their own resources.

Bankers engaged in these negotiations say that it is greatly to the interest of both capital and labor in this country that the European countries should be put in position to continue their purchases here. Labor, they believe gets the lion's share of the money so spent, and the extension of these credits makes it possible to keep mills running and workmen employed that would be idle except for the extraordinary demand due to the war.

Laid to Rest.

All that was mortal of the late Mr. William Dowden was laid to rest at the Church of England Cemetery yesterday afternoon. A large number of citizens attended the funeral, amongst the mourners being the employees of Job Ross. Southside premises where the deceased had worked for over a half century. At the graveside Rev. A. Clayton officiated while the mourners rendered "Abide with Me."

Velvet ribbons are used for hat streamers and bows.

THE WAY OUT

Change of Food Brought Success and Happiness.

An ambitious but delicate girl, after failing to go through school on account of nervousness and hysteria, found in Grape-Nuts the only thing that seemed to build her up and furnish her the peace of health.

"From infancy," she says, "I have not been strong. Being ambitious to learn at any cost I finally got to the High School but soon had to abandon my studies on account of nervous prostration and hysteria.

"My food did not agree with me, and I grew thin and despondent. I could not enjoy the simplest social affair for I suffered constantly from nervousness in spite of all sorts of medicines.

"This wretched condition continued until I became interested in the letters of those who had cases like mine and who were being helped by eating Grape-Nuts.

"I had little faith, but procured a pkg. and after the first dish I experienced a peculiar satisfied feeling that I had never gained from any ordinary food. I slept and rested better that night and in a few days began to grow stronger.

"I had a new feeling of peace and restfulness. In a few weeks, to my great joy, the headaches and nervousness left me and life became bright and hopeful. I resumed my studies and later taught ten months with ease—using Grape Nuts every day. I am now the mistress of a happy home, and the old weakness has never returned."

OFFICIAL.

LONDON, April 8.
The Governor, Newfoundland:
The French Government reports that Belgian forces attacked and dislodged the German detachment which crossed the Yser, south of Diegracht. The French forces have maintained all gains and are progressing between the Meuse and Moselle. They made an important advance at Les Eparges and have repulsed all counter attacks there and at Bois Dailly.

The Russian Government reports that in the Carpathians, despite counter attacks by the largely reinforced enemy, the Russian offensive continues between the River Toplia and the Uszok region.

HARCOURT.

ST. PIERRE BULLETIN.

PARIS, via St. Pierre, April 8.
A German detachment with 3 maxims, managed to gain footing on the left bank of the Yser, south of Diegracht, but a counter attack, delivered by Belgian troops, compelled the enemy to retreat.

An attack delivered by us in the vicinity of Etain gave us possession of Hautbois farms and hospital, with heights 219 and 221.

At Eparges we gained ground and maintained the same, capturing 60 prisoners and three officers.

Near Bantessart we mined and blew up a German position.

Weather continues very unfavorable on the whole front, nevertheless operations are particularly active between the Meuse and the Moselle, where we have progressed and maintained our gains. East of Verdun we captured two lines of trenches. On Tuesday night at Eparges we made important progress. All day the Germans counter-attacked most fiercely without regaining one inch of lost ground. Their last attack was particularly violent, but they were mown down by our fire.

The same result was in Achly Wood. After several counter-attacks on the part of the Germans, which were all repulsed, we hold the position occupied yesterday in that district, and numerous prisoners were also taken.

Amongst the prisoners captured in Hartmanns-Willerkopf district, figure several soldiers of the Guard.

CONCENTRATED AROUND VERDUN

PARIS, April 8.
A vast French army of 200,000 has been concentrated around Verdun in the Woëvre district between the Meuse and Moselle Rivers, for the drive which the French are making against the Germans. This army is supported by artillery which the French have been moving to the

LONDON BUDGET.

LONDON, April 8.
There were persistent rumors in London this evening that Germany had either declared war on Holland, or that her troops had occupied that strip of Dutch territory that extends from the Belgian frontier on the coast to the River Scheldt. The reports lack confirmation, and are not credited by those who should know if either action had been taken. It is possible that the reports arose from the news received the last few days from Dutch sources that the Germans were strengthening their positions around the Dutch frontier, and much uneasiness prevailed at the Hague and other Dutch cities as a result of the seizure and sinking of Dutch steamers by German submarines. The Dutch people are strongly opposed to intervention in the war, but their army is ready to repel any invasion of Dutch territory, complete preparations with that object having been made long ago.

Another diplomatic report which created immense interest is that from Rome, to the effect that Austria is seeking a separate peace with Russia but this, likewise lacks confirmation, and is not credited, as it is not considered likely that Germany would be sending reinforcements to the Carpathians if there was any doubt of Austria's loyalty to her ally. Italy takes the matter more seriously than the other nations, for should it prove to be true it would end her hopes of gaining territorial concessions from Austria. However, the stubborn way in which Austria is resisting the Russian advance in the Carpathians, seem to contradict the suggestion that she is ready to seek peace at Russia's terms.

The fighting in the mountain passes continues as fiercely as ever, although Austria claims that her troops with the assistance of the Germans, have gained success on both sides of the Labarcza valley during Easter. The Russians are, as a whole, much further advanced than they were a week ago, and have now forced Dukla, Lupkow and Rostock Passes, and are pouring troops into the region of the Zakop Pass, where the heaviest battle is now in progress. So far as the rest of the Eastern front is concerned, the only battle of any importance is that in Bukowina, where the Austrians are thrusting at the Russian positions in the hope of compelling the Russians to send reinforcements from the Carpathians. In West Galicia and Poland, overflowing rivers and bottomless marshes prevent movements on a large scale.

These same conditions are hindering the French operations between the Meuse and Moselle Rivers, the French official report to-day stating that heavy rains have rendered the ground difficult for the movement of troops and employment of artillery. There is a very important battle in progress in this region, however, and the French claim to be making advances, a claim which is contested by the Germans, who declare that all attacks have been repulsed, which ever report is correct, there is little doubt that a sanguinary battle is being fought, and that in the attacks and counter-attacks very heavy losses have been sustained.

The people of Europe are expecting awaiting a renewal of the attack on the Dardanelles, this time with land and sea forces, but the only news from that part of the world to-day is that Turkey has decided to call up all men capable of bearing arms, an indication that she expects the Allies to bring exceedingly strong forces against her.

Annual Meeting of M. C. E. I.

Last night the annual meeting of the Methodist College Literary Institute took place, a large attendance of members being present. The Secretary's report for the year just ended showed the exceptional interest manifested in the debates. An average of forty-three members attended the sessions. This is an excellent showing, considering that a large number of members have volunteered for the front. Several are now in training with the Regiment at the C. L. B. Armoury and on that account could not be present at the meeting. The statement submitted by the Treasurer showed the Institute's finances to be in a healthy condition and that the collection of fees was a record one. Mr. George Peters conducted the election of officers, which resulted as follows:

President—W. White.
1st Vice-Pres.—T. Soper.
2nd Vice-Pres.—C. C. Pratt.
Secretary—A. S. Butler.
Asst. Sec.—Leslie Curtis.
Treasurer—Walter Butt.
Librarian—W. Drover.
Asst. Librarian—H. N. Burt.
Committee—S. P. Whiteway, J. S. Currie and R. P. Holloway.

After votes of thanks were tendered to the retiring officers the National Anthem was rendered and the meeting adjourned.

TREATMENT FOR SHOULDERS.

Flimpy shoulders are indeed a blight to beauty. It is very possible that rich food, and too little drinking water is the cause. Plenty of water, both internal and external, and an hour's exercise each day in the open air, will help you in this crusade for presentable shoulders.

An external treatment for shoulders, made up of simple ingredients, consists in covering each pimple at night with some good camphor ice cream.

As the cream will of course rub off during the night, unless covered with a cloth, it would be well for you to gawate your shoulders snugly in thin cheesecloth. Neglect this last bit of advice and your labor in the cause of beauty will be wasted, and your bed linen much the worse for the experiment.

This simple treatment, if given every night for several weeks, will be the means of causing the obnoxious red spots to disappear.

"OURS" IN THE WEST END.

The place was crowded out again last night, the pictures are splendid, the clever sisters Squires in new costumes and new songs delighted every one, and don't forget they are St. John's children and pupils of Mrs. Rossley who is the undisputed originator of pantomime in St. John's. See the beautiful film shown at the East End theatre on Monday, of last season's regatta, also the boys of the Second Contingent going on board the s.s. Neptune, and being transferred to the s.s. Dominion. See yourselves on the wharf, Monday.

Concert by Glee Singers.

Under the management of Mr. H. W. Stirling, L.L.C.M., the St. Thomas' Glee Singers gave a concert in the Methodist College Hall last night before an appreciative audience. The concert was under the patronage of His Excellency the Governor and Lady Davidson who were present, and was a great success. The singers were Misses Pilot, White-way, Job, Dunfield (2), Rendell, Young, Udle, Edwards, White, Stirling, Wood, Piercey; Messrs. Cornick (2), Udle (2), Seymour, Smith, Ruggles, Bastow, Hammond and Snow, who rendered different part songs, including "Let the Hills Resound," by Richards; "The Soldier's Chorus," from Panast; "The Gypsy Chorus," from the Bohemian Girl, and Sullivan's "O Hush Thee, My Babe." Solos by Misses G. Strang, J. Strang, L. Anderson, D. Johnston, Mrs. W. C. Job, and Mr. F. Ruggles; a French horn selection by Mr. A. Bulley; a recitation by Miss M. Doyle; a violin solo by Miss S. Johnson, and a duet by the Misses Strang completed the programme.

The selections were faultlessly rendered and won well merited applause. At the close His Excellency the Governor congratulated Conductor Stirling, who was highly pleased with the success that attended his efforts. To Miss Windeler, who acted as accompanist, and to the other performers credit is also due. The proceeds of the affair are for the city poor.

The Nickel

Has Another Striking All Feature Show To-Day. It is no idle boast to say that when you want to see the cream of motion picture perfection go to the Nickel, for to-day's advertisement of that time-honoured institution shows that the programme promises another exceptionally well-balanced show for the week-end, with the children's big matinee on Saturday taken into special consideration. The head-liner is a Selig three part drama, entitled: "A Modern Vendetta," the title and strength of which is easily appreciated by the importance of the mammoth character of the production. The story is powerfully engrossing—the instance of the judge who sentences his own son to imprisonment after a chain of most peculiar circumstances carrying with it a thrilling story of revenge and human appeal. "Jane" the irresistible social comedy in which the popular F. X. Bushman appears, is a splendid reel; the Keystone Players are there with another sure-fire hit, while "Colonel Heeza Liar" makes a third good support. Arthur Priestman Cameron, the original singer of peculiar songs in his own peculiar way, has two capital numbers, and an excellent show is thus rounded out. Commencing with Monday the Management offer a series of film features not hitherto approached. The opening feature is Klaw and Erlanger's rendition of Theodore Kremer's "The Fatal Wedding," the biggest subject of its class. Others of the same stellar order are to follow consecutively, so that there are many film treats in store for Nickel patrons in the very near future.

The Crooked Path.

"The Crooked Path" is one of the best pictures of the underworld ever produced. It tells the story of a woman's reformation through the influence of a good man and illustrates some of the methods used by crooks to escape from prison; Edwin August and Armin Hawley are featured in this drama. "An Indian Honor" is a fine Indian drama produced by the Kalem Company. A good society drama is "His Sister," the Selig people are responsible for this. "A Connecticut Skunk Farm" shows the way these animals are bred for commercial purposes. "Mrs. Casey's Gorilla" and "Mixed Nuts" are two very funny comedies. The usual extra picture will be shown at the matinee on Saturday; send the young folks along the Crescent staff will take good care of them.
