Wealth and Beauty at Stake!

CHAPTER XXXIII.

"Well, there was some little misunderstanding," Mr. Davison says, faintly, "about a very trifling matter—can be put to rights in a moment—but Dallas—Mr. Dallas—Captain Glynn, I mean—was very much displeased—a most trifling cause, I assure your ladyship—very confidentially to Lady Pentreath—and I left her last night or this morning."

"And his present address, please?" the younger lady asks, with a flash of her eyes, opening her silver card-case and taking out the pencil.

"Captain Glynn left no address, madam," Mr. Davison answers, sourly, seeing that neither his bows nor smiles nor his personal appearance produce any effect on these rigid members of the British aristocracy. "He will call for letters, doubtless, either to-day or to-morrow; and if you or Lady Pentreath have a letter or message, it shall be delivered to him instantly."

"I have left my card," the countess says briefly, looking at her companion, and not at Mr. Davison. "We can do no more, Isabella."

"No," agrees Isabella, watching Mr. Davison very keenly. "If you will please give Captain Glynn Lady Pentreath's card and message, that will be all."

She inclines her head slightly—the countess has already moved on—and they both sweep out to their carriage again, leaving Mr. Davison staring after them and gnawing his mustache recklessly, to the great detriment of the shining brown cosmetic with which it is dyed and glossed.

"I've a dashed good mind to pitch my lady countess' card into the fire, and say nothing about either it or her message!" he mutters, savagely. "I will, too, if that stuck-up boggler, my Lord Dallas, cuts up rough with me the next time he shows up here!"

WOMAN'S HEALTH RESTORED

She Claims Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Did It After Everything Else Failed

Milwaukee, Wisconsin. "I feel that I ought to let you know about my case. I was ailing and could hardly do my housework and washing. I was so run-down, just from having one child. I took a lot of medicines and had doctors. Then I gave up all up and took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and I feel wonderfully good now. I am every year younger and feel as young as I did when I was first. I am thankful for what the Vegetable Compound has done for my health and for my family."—Mrs. Mary Lawrence, 944 22nd Street, Milwaukee, Wisconsin.

"Letters like these testify to the value of the Vegetable Compound. These women speak from the fullness of their hearts. They describe as correctly as they can their conditions. First, those symptoms that affected them most conspicuously; and later the disappearance of those symptoms. They are sincere expressions of gratitude. For nearly fifty years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has been praised by women."

chit of a lady wife and his countess and duchess! I don't care a fig for the whole bill' of 'em!"

"We can do no more, Isabella," the countess repeats, wearily, as the carriage rolls homeward. "I am very much disappointed. I wished so much to see Dallas Glynn again! His poor, little wife, too! You must go over to Rutland Gardens after dinner, Isabella, if he does not come, and explain the delay to her. Poor child!" Lady Pentreath says, sadly. "She is counting the hours until she sees him, I suppose!"

She is counting the hours—nay, the very minutes she had turned into a gigantic sum, from which she joyfully subtracts every ten that pass.

She has had his room prepared for him, and has stolen in herself after the housemaid has gone, to put fresh roses in the delicate pink specimen glasses that stand here and there, to fill the massive cut-glass toilet bottles with perfume, and to place some of his favorite poets' and novelists' work on the writing table and cabinet shelves. As she stands at the door for a final glance at the dainty apartment all delicate pink china and white lace, embroidered linen, snowy fur rugs, and crimson carpeting, she tells herself that Dallas cannot help being pleased with his room. It looks charming, and it is sure to be much nicer than any room Dallas has occupied lately, even at the Baltimore Hotel.

It is certainly much nicer than Captain Glynn's present apartment—a dingy "tidy" room, a second-hand back in a "decent" street near Theobald's Road—a street the aspect of which is suggestive of a model convict prison in the vicinity—where, on a small iron bedstead fronting a narrow painted, wooden washstand, Dallas Glynn is lying helplessly from a badly sprained ankle, for which he has to thank a hasty omnibus conductor and some greasy mud—out of a situation, homeless, friendless, and with six pounds in the world between him and destitution.

And the next day comes, and the next and the next, but no message or letter from Dallas Glynn reaches any one.

His poor, young wife has written twice to him—tender and beseeching letters, begging even for his address. Lady Pentreath has written, and finally mademoiselle has called at the hotel. But Mr. Davison only informs her curtly that all letters addressed to Captain Glynn are lying there awaiting for him, but he has never called or sent for them.

"And I guess I don't expect he will call here again," adds the manager, with disagreeable significance. "It is five days later than the day on which he had left his situation at a few hours' notice, in consequence of the unbearable insolence of Davison, the manager, when Captain Glynn, pale and ill, gets feebly out of a cab and limps into the hotel office with the aid of his stick."

"Any letters for me, Mr. Marsh?" he asks, briefly, but civilly. "Mr. Davison has your letters, Mr. Dallas," Marsh replies, glancing with a hurried, uneasy look into the inner office and avoiding Captain Glynn's eyes. "Mr. Dallas has called for my letters, Mr. Davison," he says, putting in his head and speaking in a queer, dubious voice.

"They are all afraid of their lives through this vulgar bully," Dallas thinks, with bitter contempt.

"All right!" the gentleman in the inner office responds, coolly; and, walking out presently, with a patronizing smile he hands Dallas three letters. "There you are," he says, evasively. "What's wrong with your leg—hurt it?"

"Thank you," Dallas says, quietly, taking the letters and ignoring Mr. Davison's questions. "These are all!"

He cannot keep the tone of sharp pain out of his voice. He does not know that his enemy was waiting to hear it, and is gloating over it and the look of blank dismay that is in his eyes; for a dagger seems to quiver in his breast at the sight of those letters. He knows the writing of all three—one is from a man who owes him money and pays him in apologies, the others are from acquaintances about an appointment to dine at the Exhibition. Not one line from his wife, Yolande!

"Yes; did you expect more?" Davison asks, with insolent amusement in his subtle eyes. Dallas does not answer this question either, being almost speechless from the shock of his cruel disappointment. "She repeated of her generosity; or perhaps my mother talked her out of it!" he thinks, setting his lips hard lest he should betray himself by a word or a sigh. "Thank you. Good-morning," he says, very quietly, in a low voice, and then goes away without a word or a question more.

CHAPTER XXXIV.

One week later Lady Pentreath has bidden Yolande "a last farewell," as she herself says, and gone back to Wales to die. The doctors can do nothing for her; they tell her so in effect, though they still affix to "remedial measures" and to "keep very quiet." And Dr. Sutherland Smith is to "run down" to Pentreath Place in the course of next month. But the truth remains the same—she has gone home to die.

"And I have but two regrets, Isabella," she says, discussing her condition calmly—she who used to exhaust the resources of medical skill at every fresh hypochondriacal fancy. "One, the greatest, is that I have not made a better use of my life and my opportunities."

"You have been good and kind and charitable, chere comtesse," Isabella protests, earnestly, with something like honest emotion, while tears dim her eyes. "You have been patient and amiable and forgiving to every one!"

"I have been an unprofitable servant, Isabella!" the countess says, gravely, "and my few poor efforts to atone for the wasted years I trust will be graciously received. If I had tried to comfort others, I should have been comforted myself. If I had tried to satisfy the afflicted soul, light would have arisen on the darkness of my lonely path. You must do better than I, Isabella. You have been a faithful friend and companion to me, I know, and I am grateful to you for it. Whatever were the motives that prompted you to devote your time and thoughts to me—whether from a sense of duty, mercy, or kindness or heart, or ambition—you have been both kind and faithful in your services, and I will try to reward you when I am gone. Would you like to know what I have bequeathed to you, Isabella, or would you rather wait until my will is read, after my funeral?"

"I don't want to know anything about it!" Isabella answers, bursting into tears, and sobbing agitatedly, for she is both ashamed and frightened. "I don't want to hear you speak about your death and your funeral; it cuts me to the heart! You are the best and kindest friend I have ever had in my life, and—and—I cannot bear to think of losing you! I want to stay with you always—as long as I live!"

Romance of the Red Shield.

How the Rothschilds Rose to Wealth and the Power that Riches Give.

It was a sordid, evil-smelling street in the Frankfort Ghetto that the dazzling fortunes of the great house of Rothschild were cradled in the latter half of the eighteenth century. Their founder was Meyer Anselm, son of a poverty-stricken dealer in ornaments, who took his name from the Red Shield (Roth Schild) which hung, as a trade-sign, in front of his modest shop.

Before he had reached his twelfth birthday young Meyer was known far beyond the limits of the Judengasse for his business astuteness. He was a collector of coins and curios, and was able to drive a better bargain than men of three times his years. But he quickly found Frankfort and curio-collecting too cramped a sphere for his ambition; and, packing up his few belongings, he started one day, with a stout stick and a stouter heart for companions, on the long tramp to Hanover. There the bright-faced lad soon found a place in the office of a banker.

First Steps to Success. By hard work and thrift, he managed to save the capital which enabled him to return to Frankfort in a position to start as a dealer in bullion, curios, coins, and bills of exchange on a large scale.

Customers and wealth began to pour in on him so rapidly that, within a few years, the son of the Ghetto was recognized as the wealthiest man in Frankfort, and was dubbed the "Honest Jew," a title which pleased him more than his reputation for riches.

Those were the troublous times when Napoleon was flooding Europe with the horrors of war, and when great thrones were tottering and falling on all hands. When the destroying armies at last threatened Hesse Cassel, Landgraf William thought it high time to seek refuge in flight. In his hurry to pack up and be off, he had no time to secure his cash, which he had only too glad to leave in the hands of his banker, though probably he had misgivings as to seeing it again. It was safer, he thought, in the hands of Rothschild than in those of Napoleon.

Autocrat of Finance. The sum thus left to the Jew's custody amounted to £250,000, and Meyer was quick to see that, at a time when coal was so scarce and in such universal demand, it only required a cool head and sound judgment to turn this capital to considerable advantage.

To Napoleon himself he lent large sums at high interest; the Danish Government came to him as a suppliant for loans; and he made £150,000 by acting as the agent of the British Government in transmitting money supplies to Wellington in the Peninsula. For several years towards the close of his life this once despised son of the Ghetto was the financial autocrat of Europe, in a position to influence the destinies of the greatest nations on earth.

When the Landgraf was restored at length to his small kingdom, Meyer was dead. His eldest son, Anselm, returned to the prince his £250,000, with interest. It is said, at five per cent—a circumstance which so delighted the young banker knight, on the spot, and led to an opportunity of introducing him to his friends among the sovereigns of Europe as the most trustworthy of bankers.

At For Each And Each For All.

Of the five sons of Meyer, Anselm remained in charge of the Frankfort house; Solomon established a branch at Vienna; Nathan had already achieved great prosperity in England; Charles made Naples his headquarters; and James, the youngest son, migrated to Paris—each son, in a different land, thus setting himself to work to make the house of the Red Shield the greatest financial power in Europe.

Since then, each generation of Rothschilds has helped to swell the family riches, and has continued the same traditions of financial skill and scrupulous fair dealing; the blood of Meyer Anselm, the child of the Ghetto, has been allied with that of some of the proudest of our noble families—and to-day the Rothschilds, still presenting a united front, are incomparably the wealthiest family in Europe, and probably in the world.

If you do not wish to take the time to stuff tomatoes for baking, merely slice off the tops, sprinkle with bread-crumbs, add a little butter, salt and pepper to each and bake. Set aside a small cup, with a cover, for the sole purpose of melting chocolate. As the can will not have to be washed out after every using a great deal of chocolate will be saved.

Greece Hands Back the Islands of Imbros and Tenedos to Turkey--Canada's Refunding Loan of $172,000,000 is Being Successfully Floated--American Liner Lexington Ashore.

CANADA'S REFUNDING LOAN GOING WELL.

TORONTO, Sept. 21. Subscriptions to the new Dominion of Canada refunding loan totalled $17,800,000 dollars to-night, exceeding the preliminary offering by $1,800,000 dollars. Dealers in charge of marketing expressed complete satisfaction with the character of response and predicted the entire amount of one hundred and seventy-two million dollars required by the government to refund the 1923 victory bond issue which matures on November first would be raised in Canada without difficulty. Outside of the time financing the present offering represents the most important piece of financing ever undertaken in the Dominion.

TURKEY GETS ISLANDS BACK.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Sept. 21. The islands of Imbros and Tenedos, at the entrance of the Dardanelles, were handed over yesterday by Greece to Turkish authorities. These islands comprise the last portion of Greek territory, occupied by Greece, which has to be returned to Turkey in conformity with the Lausanne Treaty.

Standardize the Cure.

Editor Evening Telegram.

Dear Sir--As you see this box which you have received contains fish. I have sent them to you as a sample of the quality that we should be sending from this country each succeeding year unless the weather is exceptionally bad for curing. As you know we have always talked a good deal about our markets and what ought to be done towards protecting our trade within those markets. We talk a great deal each year on the curse of the consignment system and worry ourselves thin in trying to hatch out a remedy when we ought to have sense enough to know that the protection or retention rather of our markets can be literally secured for ever by sending out a quality of fish like or even nearly like the sample (if they haven't got damp) you have before you. If we but made up our minds to do this we would quickly restore confidence in our customers and before we could realize it the curse of the system of consignment would pass out automatically. To me it has always been a source of much irritation to find fish buyers paying the man who has taken no pains with his product, either in cleaning or drying considerably more than the person who practically worries himself over every detail of the process. The buyer pays him extra for his carelessness because by an overdose of salt and refusal to dry his fish properly he gains surprisingly in weight and therefore his returns are much higher. To put it plainly fish buyers all along have stuck to a system of penalizing the man who keeps open the bare possibility of selling our fish at all. The consequence is that those who produce a good quality of fish are getting tired of trying to maintain a reputation for products for which there is no recompense. There is certainly small consolation in the fact that his extra labors sell the other fellows laborers in the market, and of course irritation is the obvious result of bad fish keeping in a position where no one will dream of buying from us at all until what we have to sell has been very expensively conveyed to their very doorstep. Those of us who have given any thought to the matter know better than to blame the fishermen. Just as long as laxity and indifference took profitable very few men will take a strike to get out of it, but if fish buyers only realized their duty toward the maintenance of our fishing industry, and kept in view a fair conception of justice to the men who take extra trouble to produce a good article much of our worries about foreign competition and consignment would be a thing of the past. It is quite true that every fisherman cannot expect every year to turn out a special quality of fish. There are different things to be considered. For instance abnormally bad weather; changing from one quality of salt to another, or engaging salters who have previously had little or no experience, but in spite of all difficulties instead of exporting fish, the greater part of which is inferior we could, and in our own interest we should, be selling an article that would bring us credit; but before this can be done the individual fisherman must be paid according to the quality of his fish and the merchant risk himself of the very damaging expedient of mixing good and bad qualities. As you know, doubtless, there has been much controversy over the best kind of salt to use to insure a good quality of fish. Just at present I am offering no opinion on this matter. I give up the hope that publications created expressly for fishermen and fishing interests will ever do much to benefit either; consequently I am leaving you the option of a guess from a study of the fish sent you as to what kind of salt I am using. A possible awakening of interest is my object and incidentally an explanation by further correspondence.

Yours truly,

FISHERMAN.

Trapped by a Tongue.

THE CHAMELEON'S LEGS ARE SLOW, BUT ITS TONGUE IS ONE OF THE FASTEST THINGS ON EARTH.

The chameleon, as everyone knows, has a wonderful way of changing its colour to suit its surroundings, but scientists all agree that the most remarkable thing about it is its tongue. This can only be seen properly when in use. The length of the chameleon's tongue is astonishing. When out to its full extent it is of exactly the same length as the chameleon itself, yet, when not in use, it can be packed away neatly inside the mouth. It is somewhat club shaped, widening out towards the tip, which is covered with a sticky substance. When attacking its prey the chameleon creeps forward stealthily, its movements being almost imperceptible. When six or seven inches from the hunter stops and, after fixing the prey with its eye, to be sure of its aim and range, cautiously opens its mouth. Out shoots its tongue, and is drawn back into its mouth with the victim sticking to the tip. The whole operation is carried out at lightning speed. Swivel Eyes. The chameleon is an insect-eater and quite an expert in catching flies, butterflies, moths, and even grasshoppers. Its enormous eyes are so set in their sockets that they can be rolled in all directions, acting independently of each other. The eyeballs are conical in shape, which greatly adds to the quaint appearance of the animal. Its habit of changing colour is well known. This change is partly voluntary and partly a response to heat and cold, light and shade. The normal daylight colour is greenish, with brown spots. This makes the chameleon almost invisible in the shruberies in which it usually lives. It is very inactive when on the ground. This is due to the peculiar shape of the foot, the toes of which are tied together into two bundles on each foot. They are formed thus to enable it to maintain a secure hold on the branches of trees. Its movements are ungainly, and it walks in a slow, deliberate way that is particularly exasperating to watch. In fact, all its activity seems concentrated in its tongue. Particular attention has been paid to the several important trap shoots of the Dominion, and accounts of the B.C.R.A., the Bisleby Team in England, a write up of which is given by Major Crowe, the Maritime Trap shoot, and the O.R.A. are all contained in the October issue.

Rod and Gun.

One of the treats in store for the sportsman in Rod and Gun in Canada in the October issue is a story by H. C. Duffus on "Bear Hunting up Bute Inlet, B.C.," which is written in a particularly readable manner. Bonycastle Dale has a good article on the "Virginia Deer of Nova Scotia," while F. V. Williams and Martin Hunter and Martin Hunter have two good stories in this issue. Guns and ammunition is particularly well filled with articles by men such as A. A. Haines, E. T. D. Francis, and R. Leckie-Ewing, all well known to Rod and Gun readers. Robert Page Lincoln, J. W. Winson, and F. H. Walker have good departments, while "Along the Trapline," edited by M. U. Bates opens again in the October issue.

National Biscuit Company Reaping Remarkable Sales

In speaking with the company's local representative today the "Telegram" ascertained from Leo A. Duffy an exact report of their past week's business and was informed that since Monday a most remarkable increase has been noticed in national sales here. Local grocers in every section, Water Street, New Gower Street and the Higher Levels are all well pleased to testify to this glowing report and it is with confidence we state that "every day in every way, the demand for Uneda Biscuits is growing greater and greater. Of course it would be merely doing Uneda Biscuits' merit that is justly theirs that they are certainly the most delightful varieties that have ever been sold in this dominion. The stores that prominently display Uneda Products are highly dependable. Confine your dealings to these up-to-date houses and realize what satisfaction means to you.

WEEK-END NOTES.

RAILWAY MATTERS—PROSPECTIVE.

In continuing our railway notes it will be quite in order to accord a word of congratulation to Mr. Russell, the newly appointed manager. Mr. Russell has faithfully earned his promotion, and he brings to the position an all-round experience in railway work which fits him for the duties of the post, and which marks him as the right man in the right place, and at the right time.
 Much will depend upon the new management; but if the faithful services of the past may be taken as a criterion for the future, it is very reasonable to expect efficient service. That there will be draw-backs is certain—one of which is the fundamental drawback of our narrow gauge line. The history of the railway presents many blunders, but among the lot none were greater, and none more to be deplored, than that of the narrow gauge. The narrow gauge line was the one weak point in the pioneering of our railway work, and because of that, the task of fighting our snow drifts has been greatly intensified; and during the twenty five years of our cross-country traffic, the amount of money spent on clearing the track, and the amount of business lost, would at least have paid the interest upon the extra cost of a wide gauge railway. The obstacles thus caused still remain, and will mean many a worry for our railway staff; and if the cause is to be averted, there is one economic and business-like way to do it, and that is to shut out the cross-country trains in the vicinity of the Gulf Topsails, for at least ten weeks of the winter. The amount of suffering and toil, and financial loss, endured by the Messrs. Reid and their staff for the past twenty five years, should be sufficient reason for the new management to adopt a different policy, and to introduce a better way.
 There is nothing to be lost by such a step, but rather there much to be gained, and what is better it would be a more business-like practice to shut down for a while, than to continue the waste, which mid-winter running entails. Not only would it prevent many losses, but it should also prevent disappointment and unnecessary delay. Perhaps it took us twenty five years to learn this lesson; but it is about time we learned it. There are some who never learn, and who will not learn, but ours should be a better policy. The prospects of the railway for the immediate future are certainly favorable. In addition to the regular traffic of the country, there will be the increased traffic, and additional transportation, in connection with the Humber development. To expect too much from the Humber, or from any one particular new industry, is one of the mistakes into which we have fallen, and by which our people are too easily misled.
 By making a moderate estimate of the situation as based upon the present outlook, there is every indication of increased traffic, and therefore of increased earnings. This is what our railway really requires, because part of the loss which has hitherto been sustained has been from want of business. Increased freight traffic in a general sense, means increased passenger traffic also, and these imply the circulation of more money, all which goes to build up communities. The enterprise of the Humber will mean a busy centre at the other end of the line, and this must certainly result in busy transport at both ends. Looking thus ahead, the railway seems to have in its favor a chance of paying its way. The pioneer railway operators paid a big price in experience, worry, and criticism, and the lessons which they learned should be beneficial to their successors. From their experience they learned the weak points, and the danger spots of railway life. With these experiences to guide, and with increased traffic at hand, and with a better feeling amongst our people, it is not too much to expect that greater returns are due from the railway, and that the new management will prove worthy of their trust, and make a good showing.

 As our readers are aware, the railway is now owned, controlled, and operated by the Government. How long this will continue is not easy of discernment; but it is quite within the limits of logic to surmise, that in due time the railway will pass into other hands, and thus become more of a private speculation than government ownership implies. As to who the likely purchasers will be is a doubtful problem; but it may be safe to suppose that the companies would consist of people and corporations now operating within the country; or who are directly interested in its development. This suggestion brings with it, its own interpretation, for it is known that the concerns now directly interested in what may be called "the new or development of Newfoundland," are the Harmsworth Co., the Armstrong-Whitworth Co., the Bell Island people, and Mr. Hy. Crowe. If there is to be any internal development worth while in Newfoundland, then these are the agencies into whose hands the work will fall. If these people fail to make a success of their enterprise, it will be just as well to make up our minds that Newfoundland is destined for a fishing country and nothing else. The second quarter of the century should tell a lot in this direction; however, it looks at present as if the enterprise of these companies will prove their worth, and that a better day is in store for Newfoundland. This better day cannot come by fishing only. We have tried this one industry long enough. Our people are not going to fish as did their fathers. The change is rapidly setting in; hence, we look ahead, and in doing so we are confronted with the problem, of who will own, control, and operate our railway? There may be various answers suggested; but it does not need a vision to see, where, when, and by whom, the problem is to be solved.

Frost-Proof Flowers.

Now is the Time for Bulb-Growing—Ash-Bed Devices Which is Well Worth-While.

(By the Editor of "The Smallholder")
 What is the secret that enables the market-gardener to fill the florists' shops with tulips, daffodils and snowdrops, in full bloom, round about Christmas-time, and through the darkest, dreariest days of winter? The ordinary amateur gardener, of course, seldom even expects his bulbs to bloom before March at the earliest. The secret, which is really no secret at all, is this: The professional begins to think about bulbs in August and September; the amateur only bothers about them in November; the professional starts his bulbs a good two months ahead of the amateur, and because those two months are months of good growing weather he gets his flowers three months earlier. There is no difficulty in buying bulbs thus early in the season; they are now being sold everywhere. They may be a little dearer than they would be later on in the autumn, but they are of much better quality. Only the remnants and left-overs, many of them too far gone to do themselves justice, are sold cheaply in November and December. Of course, bulbs cannot be planted in the open to bloom in the depth of winter. They have to be grown in pots or in boxes, but that is no disadvantage. They are only wanted for brightening the greenhouse or parlour whereas growing flowers last twice as long as cut flowers. There is another item in bulb-growing, besides early September planting, which goes a long way towards bringing them quickly into flower. The bulb should be forced to make roots before it starts to shoot its leaves. This is done by keeping it in darkness for a time after it is planted. Here is the professional plan in a nutshell, a plan which the amateur can adopt with equal success: The pots or boxes are three-parts filled with a soil mixture made up of five parts of the best mould from the garden, well sifted, with one part of decayed manure and half a part of sand. Then the bulbs are spaced out in them, three inches apart in the case of big sorts, two inches apart when small sorts, like crocuses and snowdrops, are being planted. The bulbs should be lightly pressed into the soil just so that they stand upright, flat and down, of course. They should be covered in by adding more soil, which, when pressed down fairly firmly, should just obscure their tips. A good soaking with water completes the planting process. Now for a hint which will almost guarantee success. Instead of following the usual method of placing the pots, or boxes, in a dark shed, stand them close together out in the garden, but against a wall or fence and cover them over to a depth of 3 inches with a layer of ashes sifted from the kitchen fire. Let them also stand on a layer of ashes. It is this spell in the ash bed that performs the invaluable trick of forcing the bulbs to concentrate on root formation before thinking of anything else; it results in earlier and far better flowers, strong stalks, rich green foliage. Next comes the Polyanthus variety of narcissus, commonly known as paper white, followed by the Duc Van Thiel variety of tulips—those small red or white or yellow flowers the florists sell by the box—and a whole crowd of daffodils. There are also several early varieties of ordinary hyacinths—those blue and white, and, of course, snowdrops should never be missed out.

ADVERTISE IN THE EVENING TELEGRAM.

The Bishop of London Condemns Conditions in London Parks.

London society is considerably stirred by the statement of the Bishop of London that the conditions prevailing in our parks and open spaces is scandalous. His Grace himself has not conducted a personal investigation, but a certain council for the promotion of public morality has employed men of great experience to "observe." These men state that they have seen many cases of impropriety. The Chief of the Office of Works, however, says that officials of his department visit Hyde Park night after night but never see anything more shocking than two young people kissing each other behind a bush. It was George Gissing who observed that the streets were the drawing room of the poor, in which case we may regard Hyde Park as their parlour. It is rumored that the Bishop desires an alteration in the bye-law which governs parks and open spaces, and intends to ask that Hyde Park may be closed at an earlier hour. While the army of overlookers shall be increased. The point is likely to be raised in the House at the next session.

Fine Fashion Show.

Mita Naldi in the Paramount Picture "The Glimpses of the Moon."

A superb fashion show, such as will delight all feminine screen-lovers, will be seen in Allan Dwan's Paramount production of "Glimpses of the Moon," which is announced by the Majestic Theatre beginning Monday next.

In addition to the luxurious furs, gowns and wraps worn by the principal female characters, which are played by Bebe Daniels, Mita Naldi and Ruby de Remer, Director Dwan secured the services of a dozen mannikins from Hickson's and from Clark's, two foremost dress-making establishments in New York. These girls have been trained in the art of displaying costumes in a manner that will get under the skin of even the most hard-fisted of husbands and compel them to buy the gowns in the fond belief that the attractive clothes will transform their perhaps unattractive wives.

Why Does a Whip Crack

MINOR MYSTERIES OF EVERYDAY LIFE WHICH SCIENCE CANNOT EXPLAIN.

We have discovered radium, we see through the human body by means of X-rays, we have transmuted metals, and yet we don't know why a whip cracks—or, rather, why it makes a noise when cracked.

What cracks? Is it the whip or the air? A small problem, but a puzzling one.

As any man of science will tell you, Nature is full of puzzles and mysteries which are still insoluble to man. How does a firefly or glow-worm emit light? If man wants to make light he has first to produce heat. The fireflies and the deep-sea fish, as well as many fungi and plants, can and do produce cold light.

Why are land birds so rarely white, while the great majority of sea birds have white plumage? There must be a reason, but it eludes us. Why are carnivorous animals so frequently striped or spotted while the grass and grain eaters have seldom such markings? Why are there no blue British moths? Why is there no blue rose? There are colour puzzles which take

HOW DOORMATS DO HARM.

There is a certain cartoonist somewhere on this terrestrial globe (unless he has passed on) whom I should very much like to meet.

I want to quarrel with him about a cartoon he once drew. I never saw it. But I have heard about it. Often.

The cartoon pictures the tombstone of a man who was killed in an automobile accident. It says something about the fact that he had the right of way, he took it, and now he is dead.

A Craven Philosopher. I don't remember the exact words, though I have many times had them quoted to me. I don't want to remember them. I don't like them.

They are a craven philosophy. They represent the sort of attitude which tends to make one section of the population insolent and overbearing,—because another section of the population offers itself to be overborne.

People with the doormat attitude will always produce people who will try to wipe their feet on the rest of the world.

Of course one has to do a certain amount of playing safe when one is driving an automobile, to save one's own skin, but the man who quotes that cartoon to me, quotes it to prove that when a big insolent car comes along with the apparent intention of a deal of consideration. Incidentally, why is a purple blossom so common in poisonous plants? A goldfish has been frozen in water to a temperature of twenty below zero, left for three months cased in solid ice, then, after those twelve weeks in ice, it has been slowly thawed out and found to be alive. A frog can bear freezing to 20 below zero, and a snail to 110 degrees. How is this?

Glass is queer stuff. Though so brittle and breakable, it is amazingly elastic. Take a hollow ball of glass with a hole in it, hold the ball in the hand and stop the hole with one finger, the ball will fly to pieces through the mere warmth of the hand.

A vessel made of glass that has been suddenly cooled can resist quite hard blows from outside, but will be instantly shattered to pieces by a small stone no larger than a pea dropped into the inside. This is a very puzzling phenomenon.

Salt's Little Ways. Magnetism is full of mysteries. The ordinary magnet is made of soft iron, but the metal manganese has also magnetic properties. Tin has no such qualities, yet an alloy of tin and manganese does show them, as do quite a number of other alloys. A mixture of manganese, aluminum, and copper makes a magnet as good, almost, as one of cast iron.

Put a little salt in a glass of water and it dissolves. Boil the water away and the salt reappears. That seems simple enough, but the catch is what has become of the salt while it is dissolved in the water? In a dilute solution of salt and water there appears to be little, if any, salt present. The water, it would seem, decomposes it into particles highly charged with electricity. For this statement we have the authority of Professor Ira Remsen, who adds that other substances dissolved in water do not act at all as does salt.

Last Night's Big Amateur Contest.

CRESCENT THEATRE THROUGHT TO THE DOORS.

Standing room was at a premium at the Crescent last night by expectant patrons from all sections of the city. The Amateur Contest was the best witnessed in many years and the building fairly rocked with merriment.

The affair was conducted in excellent manner by Mr. Pat Harrington who gave each performer an equal chance. The leading light was however Mr. Frank O'Malley, the War Veteran who sang till the rafters shook. Other favorite performers were those including Morrissey the Step-dancer and Peters the comic singer and others equally as famous. The whole thing was a huge success and patrons got their money's worth in laughs.

Apart from the Contest the regular show went on as usual. Pat Harrington was in good trim and his novelty numbers went over in good style each item receiving enthusiastic applause. Harold Lloyd in "Grandma's Boy" was never seen to better advantage and this together with the contest completed a programme worth double the admission fee.

MINARD'S LINIMENT USED BY PHYSICIANS.

Washing Woollens Made Easy.

IF YOU GO ABOUT IT THIS WAY.

Woolens or artificial silk jumpers often shrink after washing, but provided special care is taken during washing and drying, there is no reason why they should not look as good as new again.

The garment should first of all be shaken to remove dust. Washing may then be carried out in warm, soapy water, the dirt being removed by gently kneading and squeezing the jumper under the water.

Avoid too hot water and too much soap. A light lather is enough, and all preparations of this kind must be made before the clothes are jammed in any way.

The garment must not be lifted up and down in the water, and on removal from the tub, it should be lifted out in a heap and not by any particular part, or the weight of the water in the unsupported part will cause it to stretch.

All soap must be removed by rinsing in water of the same temperature as the washing water. Speed in washing and rinsing is most essential, and the garment should never be allowed to remain in the water any longer than is absolutely necessary.

Woolen jumpers or coats should never be wrung out in the ordinary way, as twisting or being put through a wringer with tightened tension will stretch or injure them. As much water as possible should be gently squeezed out, and then the garment may be placed on the table between two cloths and the rest of the excessive moisture can be pressed and beaten out with the hands.

A knitted jumper should never be actually hung up to dry until all excessive moisture has been removed, or the weight of the water, which runs down and collects in the hems and cuffs, will pull it out of shape.

Pegs or a coat-hanger should never be used for suspending the garment from the line as they stretch it on the shoulders. If a long stick is put right through from one cuff to the other, the weight will be evenly distributed, and the garment is more likely to keep in shape. Early morning, before the sun is very powerful, is the best time for drying.

Shetland wool or thin, artificial silk jumpers should never be hung up at all, but should be placed flat on a table, and dried in a warm room.

When practically dry, the garments may be carefully pressed with a warm iron to give a finished appearance, and they should be thoroughly aired before being put away.

THE CUTTING DETERMINES THE LINES.

Give Our Customers the Real Article.

We have received from our correspondent at Flat Islands, Bonavista Bay, some samples of ordinarily cured salt fish, which by the general excellence of the article indicate what can be accomplished by care and cleanliness, and conscientiousness.

That is a well-known fact, but what mitigates against it is that no encouragement is given by the merchant to produce in all cases an A. 1. article.

Sufficient ink to float a ship has been used in discussing this vexed question, but we are still hard and fast around. The suggestion has been made that we should lighten the cargo by restricting output.

Recently we were visited by a prominent citizen who had spent many years and his father before him in prosecuting the Labrador fishery.

The adoption of new methods in the fishing industry and the securing of new markets are ventures that should certainly occupy our attention.

They must do likewise, one of our greatest troubles would disappear. While the merchant is to blame for accepting fish below standard, the fisherman himself cannot be relieved of the whole of the responsibility.

How to Hurt Business

(London Advertiser.) First, overlook a remark on the street about some concern; be sure not to get it all, but don't drop the words that sound alarming. Then grab the next man you meet, pass the time of day and just as he is going to leave get him again, close to the walk or in a door-way; tell "I don't want you to repeat this bit, it's just heard on good authority that so-and-so is in a pretty tight corner. I've been looking for that for some time. Of course, don't take my word for it, but it didn't surprise me."

Large Paper Plant for Newfoundland.

PROMOTERS PROPOSE TO ERECT ROSSING PLANTS AND 600-TON PAPER MILL.

H. J. Crowe, Toronto, and Malcolm Mooney, Quebec, have concluded an agreement with Newfoundland Government for the establishment of a large paper plant on the island. At White Bay, Crowe held 700 square miles of timberland and has secured others until he has consolidated in all about 1,600 square miles secured from J. C. Hepburn, St. John's. This latter tract is in Hamilton Inlet, Labrador. This will ensure a year-round supply of raw material for the 500-ton mill which it is proposed to erect.

The agreement with the Newfoundland Government calls for the building of the plant within three years, and the expenditure of $300,000 within a year of the signing of the agreement.—Financial Post.

At St. Bon's College.

Yesterday Master George Power, the winner of the Jubilee Scholarship, 1923, paid a farewell visit to his Alma Mater. The occasion was availed of by Rev. Bro. Ryan to have him meet the assembled students in the Aula Maxima. After extolling his success the Principal, in a brief address, pointed him out as a splendid type of young man, one in every way worthy of the commendation of his fellows. Congratulations were tendered on behalf of all foregathered, to which were added sincere good wishes for his continued success in the course of studies which he is about to pursue at Toronto University. In reply George expressed his gratitude, paying a tribute to the painstaking efforts of his teachers, which excursions he was thus enabled to bring his College career to such a successful termination. He then concluded by asking for his many admiring young friends the privilege of a half-hour which was willingly conceded and which of course was received by them as the most acceptable manner of marking the occasion.

The following is the list of the members of the College team which carried off the inter-collegiate honors last winter. At the request of the Principal the presentation was made by Rev. Brother Strapp, who in a short speech, having first complimented the scholarship winner, gave to the hockeyists their well merited word of praise. He also took occasion to place on record the munificence of the donor whose generosity, combined with his interest in his old college, made the presentation possible. Rev. Bro. Doyle was then called on to speak, and in a few well-chosen words emphasized the fact that without the whole-hearted co-operation of George Power, the success attained would have been impossible. The Principal also expressed his appreciation of the practical manner in which Mr. McGrath sought to repay his indebtedness to his Alma Mater. On behalf of the team Raymond Halley, as captain, gave fitting expression to his feelings of gratitude, after which cheers were given for George Power, Mr. McGrath, and the following recipients of the medals:—Raymond P. Halley, John A. Cotter, Cyril S. Egan, Lawrence P. Furlong, William F. Ryan, Claude A. Fraser, Charles E. Donnelly, Gordon P. Higgins and Ashley R. Graham.

The Problems of the Unemployed.

According to some of the unemployed there is general dissatisfaction with the relief work which has been started on the Kenmount Road. The men are compelled by reason of the distance to hire a bus to draw them to and from their work. This costs them 50 cents per day, and is considered quite a hardship should they have broken time. On the Higgins' Line the unemployed state that not enough men are being taken on. At present they say there are not more than 30 men working and these have six bosses.

The Value of Fordney Tariff is a Question.

Washington. (By Canadian Press.)—Practically all doubt is removed here as to whether the flexible tariff provisions of the new U. S. tariff law will ever be made really effective in bringing about any considerable changes in rates of duty. The conviction has settled down on Washington that the flexible features of the law, so long as high tariff men remain at the head of the government, will not be permitted to get anywhere. Not only is the tariff commission moving at a slow pace in making its inquiries into differences in cost of production here and abroad, but it is fully expected that an early move will be made to test its powers in the courts. This would mean a long period of uncertainty. Whether it would be practically stopped from functioning while the test in the courts was being made is something not yet clear.

Cells to Become Schools in New Education Plan.

COLUMBUS—Born in the mind of Chaplain T. O. Reed of the Ohio penitentiary as he watched men brood in their cells during idle time, an idea which those who are fostering it declare has been hailed as "greatest step forward in prison work in years," shortly will be put into execution in penitentiaries of the country. The project has been named the Intra-Wall Correspondence Schools, and its object is to provide means whereby convicts in their cells may obtain an education in whatever they wish.

SWITZERLAND ACCUSED OF SHIP- PING DRUGS TO CANADA AND U. S. A.

GENEVA, Sept. 22. The charges that great quantities of harmful drugs are being manufactured in Switzerland and clandestinely imported into the United States and Canada caused a stir in yesterday's discussion of the League of Nations Opium Commission, which on Thursday decided to recommend an international conference for the promotion of a fight against opium. Dame Edith Lytton of Great Britain expressed regret that Switzerland, which had not yet ratified the Hague Narcotics Convention, should be turning out drugs based on opium and morphine and smuggling them by ingenious means into Canada and the United States. Gustave Ador, former President of Switzerland, quickly protested against "the grave accusations." He insisted that Switzerland was doing everything possible in the situation and hoped to ratify the convention next year. Mr. Graham, the Canadian member of the commission, read documents which he declared proved that drugs were being fraudulently exported from Switzerland to both Canada and the United States. Other speakers intervened and saved what appeared to be developing into a most embarrassing situation.

Astronomers Are Watching for Two Vagrant Speeders.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Sept. 20. (A.P.)—Astronomers are on the watch for two comets, both discovered many decades ago, which speeding over their rather unexciting courses through the skies, are about due for reappearance. One of these interesting visitors is Di Vico's "long period" comet in 1848, popularly known as the Mexican War comet because just on the outbreak of that conflict, it was observed by Professor W. C. Bond, of the Harvard observatory, on Feb. 26, 1848. Professor F. Di Vico, of Rome, also found the comet independently, with his telescope two days later, and because he officially recorded its coming, his fellow astronomers have given it his name.

Professor Di Vico observed his comet on Monday, in the Byroad Building, Queen's Road, 7.30 to 9.30 p.m., until for all denunciations. Wedding Bells.

HORAN-TRAINOR.

A very pretty but quiet wedding was solemnized last Thursday evening at St. Patrick's Cathedral, Rev. Dr. Kitchin, Ph. D., officiating. The happy couple were Miss Winifred Horan, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. P. Horan, Southside, and Mr. Richard Trainor, son of Mr. and Mrs. Denis Trainor, Fermeuse. The bride, who was given away by her father, was attended by Miss M. Trainor, sister of the groom, and Miss M. Horan, sister of the bride. The duties of best man were performed by Mr. M. Horan, brother of the bride. After the ceremony a reception was held at the home of the bride's parents, where the customary toasts were duly honoured, after which Mr. and Mrs. Trainor motored to Walsh's, Guide. The next morning they entrained for Fermeuse, where the honeymoon will be spent. They will be sailing on the next "Digby" for Boston, their future home, and wish them many years of wedded happiness.

Our Dumb Animals.

REPORT OF CHIEF AGENT FOR WEEK ENDING SEPT. 21ST 1923.

I called on Mr. Russel, Manager Nfld. Govt. Railway, in company with the President, Mr. Williams, and Messrs. A. V. Ross and John O'Driscoll, directors; to discuss with Mr. Russel several matters brought to the Society's notice in reference to cattle transportation by the railroad. Mr. Russel received the deputation very courteously and assured the Society he would be glad to investigate this question of cattle transportation very thoroughly and to see the beasts were well cared for in future. He also agreed to install troughs for watering cattle on arrival at the freight sheds and improve the watering facilities at Port aux Basques and Bishop's Falls. The deputation thanked Mr. Russel for his businesslike interest in caring for the live stock and for his agreement to improve old methods. I attended two sales of cattle and I saw that the beasts received proper care and attention. I summoned one firm during the week for not properly caring for beef cattle, and withdrew the case on receiving an apology and a promise to carry out my suggestions in future. One of our oldest and highly esteemed firms on Water St., instead of selling an aged animal for fifty lucre requested me to humanely put to death the horse as it had done its duty. We thanked the principal of the firm and hope that others will follow his example. A wild bullock was roughly handled on Robinson's Hill, but I interviewed the owner who said he had to take a motor truck to put the animal upon. Though handlings may have been a little rough it could not be helped. Another complaint of a horse was received of a horse by the Old Tannery, having a sore leg. This is being attended to. All complaints have been dealt with. I received an order from an outport for a picture of "The Horses Prayer," and as I have more ready now, I would like to make some sales of same. Several complaints about riding on loads against the grade have been attended and drivers warned. All lovers of animals are asked to phone reports to 655.

Monday's Stupendous Musical Attraction.

MISSIS ARMSTRONG AND LORING OPEN ENGAGEMENT.

A stupendous musical attraction opens at the Nickel Theatre on Monday, when Miss Marion Armstrong and Miss Louise Loring commences engagement. This is a most unusual attraction for St. John's as both these noted singers have only been touring the North American continent since July and although in great demand Mr. Kiely of the Nickel has managed to secure them for this territory before they proceed to the larger circuits. The engagement however, will be a limited one, judging their past successes an extraordinary musical treat is in store. Miss Armstrong is a Scotch-Canadian soprano who has gained a reputable reputation as a vocalist of rare ability.

Miss Louise Loring, Dramatic Mezzo-soprano has an extensive repertoire, which includes all the standard Operatic and arias from the world famous Operas given in concert form. She is particularly excellent in ballads and modern concert songs. Another big item at this theatre on Monday is Wesley Barry's big photoplay entitled "School Days." To miss "School Days" is almost as disastrous as to miss education, for it carries you back to the dear old days and brings back many a fond recollection.

Curiosities in Will Making.

To attempt to trace the origin of will-making would be a thankless task, but it is known that the Patriarch Jacob left a document more or less equivalent to the modern will. Specimens have been found in Egyptian tombs which were drawn up two thousand years before Christ.

Among the oldest English wills are those of Alfred the Great and William the Conqueror, who bequeathed his newly-acquired realm of England to his son William Rufus.

The palm of revengeful spirit must be given to the man who left to his wife the large sum of $2,500 which, however, she could not make use of, but was to be expended after her death, so that she might have the satisfaction of knowing that she would be buried in a style most befitting his widow.

An example of humor, conscious or unconscious, is afforded by the will of an old Scotchman whose son was a doctor. "I bequeath," he wrote, "my two worst watches to my son, for I know that he will dissect them."

Full of grim humor was the will of a French lawyer, who left ten thousand francs to a lunatic asylum as a mark of restitution to those clients who had been mad enough to engage his services. A thousand pounds each was the legacy left by a testator to his hospital nurse and cook, for their respective kindnesses in driving a pink monkey from the foot of his bed and taking scarlet snakes out of his soup.

It is in the archives of Somerset House that all wills filed for probate are kept, and there are to be found many famous and curious testamentary documents. One is the portrait of a pretty girl, on which a soldier had written, "I leave all to her."

Another is written in shorthand, and dated 1700, nearly a hundred years before Pitman's invented the famous system of cipher-writing, which bears his name. The testator had attached the key to enable his querist will be deciphered. A strange record is the leg of a bed, in which a will was concealed, and to settle a dispute this cumbersome container was filed along with the document.

Napoleon's last disposition was characteristic of his hatred for England. "I die prematurely, assassinated by the English oligarchy." He bequeathed ten thousand francs to Castillon, who attempted to kill the Duke of Wellington.

A Plaque of Mosquitoes.

Cape May—"Mosquito mists" have forced the New Jersey State Mosquito Commission to abandon their inspection of many districts (near here, driven fishermen from their nets and lines and routed traveling salesmen. Swarms of mosquitoes forced John H. Backner, a traveling salesman, recently to abandon his automobile in the woods between Tuckahoe and Dennisville and run two miles to a farmhouse for refuge. He was bitten all over his body, and required attention of a physician.

MINARD'S LINIMENT

Mond Nickel Co. Shift Centre of Operations.

Sudbury, Ont., Sept. 20.—After working for over 25 years and to a depth second only to one other mine in Canada, the Mond mine is to be abandoned by the Mond Nickel Co. and the plant moved to the Froid No. 2, less than a mile and a quarter from the heart of Sudbury. The ore from the Mond, which has now given out, has never been very high grade, but modern and efficient mining methods have enabled the company to operate it successfully. When the famous cave-in occurred at the Creighton some eleven years ago, revealing unexpected great wealth in that mine, the Froid was abandoned and all the houses that could be carried through the rock cuts were loaded on flat cars and taken to Creighton. Since that time the settlement at Froid has been practically an abandoned town with John Conley the caretaker, as the mayor, police force and chief politician. Dr. G. Y. Corless, of the Mond Nickel company, said that the equipment will be moved to the Froid No. 2 at once, which will take a number of weeks. As soon as the plant can be put into condition, the work of de-watering the old shaft will be started and it is the intention of the company to develop the mine before working it. The proximity of the new workings to Sudbury will mean considerable more business for the town, when the new shaft is in full operation. The mine will likely begin shipping in the early spring of 1924. While the Mond mine was a deep one, it was by no means the deepest in the world. That honor falls to a mine in Brazil, while there are mines in Montana and in Northern Michigan which are also deeper but there is only one other mine in Canada that has been worked at greater depth.

THE DIFFERENCE.

A man travelling in a second-class railway carriage in England had a little dispute with a woman passenger as to whether the window should be opened or closed.

After an interchange of several frigid remarks, in which the woman had the bigger share, she remarked cuttingly:

"You don't seem to know the difference between second and third class!"

"Oh, yes," he replied, "I am an old railway traveller; I know all about these class distinctions. In the first class the passengers behave rudely to the guard; in the third class the guards behave rudely to the passengers; in the second class the passengers behave rudely to each other."

Exclusive and Important Advantages With Genuine Beaver Wall Board

The Red Beaver Border on Wall Board means:

- 1. The only wall board made from virgin SPRUCE fibre through and through—long, tough, silvery, strong.
2. Positive insulation against heat and cold and sound, because the use of long virgin spruce fibres gives us millions of microscopic 'dead' air cells in Beaver Wall Board.
3. 26 layer construction. Several layers give great strength and stiffness. Beaver Wall Board is 26 layer.
4. The only wall board kiln-dried and seasoned before leaving the mill.
5. Sealed against moisture by our patented sealite process.
6. A wall board specially engineered and primed to produce our 'Fast Surface'. No staining is necessary.

LOOK for the Red Beaver Border and the Beaver trademark on the back edge of every panel. It is your assurance of the original, flawless, economical building material—offering exclusive and important advantages.

Beaver Wall Board makes possible the quick and economical transformation of old rooms, waste spaces, attics, offices and many other places into modern interiors—without muss or litter. Comes in beautiful, clean, sturdy panels. Saws like lumber. Nails right to joists and studs, or directly over old plaster walls and ceilings. Ready immediately for whatever style of decoration you desire.

TRINITY

A WELL SPENT LIFE OF SEVENTY YEARS THAT CLOSED IN 1923.

To the fact that the old Church Clerk whose duty it was to enter Baptisms, Marriages and Burials in the Church Registers at Trinity looked upon those old Registers as more or less personal diaries as well as official records of the parish—to this fact, I repeat, we are indebted for the many little personal observations, comments, etc., that give to those otherwise stereotyped records a value peculiarly their own. The old clerk, of course, had no right to add those personal observations, remarks, etc., in the official records of the parish. The fact remains, however, that he did add them, and I for one, am deeply grateful to him for the same, frequently supplying me, as they have done, with an inspiration to write a Saturday tale, and providing me with a moral to adorn it with. Just now my interest has been awakened in the person and actions of one William Warren, with whose internment-entry in the old Burial Register is associated the old Church Clerk's expression of approval, and admiration of Mr. Warren's good deeds in life. It is refreshing to find an expression of this kind, within the ten years of crime and lawlessness that I have quoted from in my notes of the past two or three weeks.

There were at this time two men in Trinity—father and son—by the name of William Warren. This one, whose name is given in the entry from which I am now quoting, was William Warren, Sr. He was, what many of our people would designate as "an old Englishman." In this designation, the word "old" is not intended to refer to the person's age, but to the fact that he came from "old England." William Warren, Sr. was born "down Zumerst way" in the year 1760. From the time that he was old enough to remember anything, he remembered his father and elder brothers talking about Newfoundland; and although at first he did not know whether long word was the name of an animal or a vegetable, it interested him sufficiently to keep it in his mind. Then, as during his school days he was taught that it was the name of a far-away place where Jim Morley and Bill Rushton had gone to seek their fortunes, his ambition was fired to follow them some day. This decision on the boy's part was deepened day-by-day, by the fact that his father never missed an opportunity to remind his boys that as soon as they were old enough and big enough they were to follow Morely and Rushton's example, by leaving the old home and going out into the big world to carve out their own future in life.

This did not indicate lack of affection on the part of the boy's father. On the contrary, no father in the whole of Somerset was fonder of his boys than was George Warren. Because of the Spartan stuff of which he was made, he knew of no better, practical way that he could show that fondness than by giving them a fair education, and then encouraging them to go out into a new country, where they would have an opportunity and an incentive to develop their latent manhood, and to make homes for themselves. When William Warren was sixteen years of age, he was told to bring his books from school, to say good-bye to his teacher, and to make arrangements for his leaving home. Though two of his brothers had gone to Australia, it was known to all

William's friends that he intended to go to Newfoundland. Arrangements were made by his father for his passage from Poole to Trinity, and when he was ready to leave home for Poole, his father, with his hand on the boy's shoulder, and a voice not too steady, said to him (as he had said to his other brothers when they were leaving): "Good-bye, William, say your prayers morning and evening; go to church for worship when you can; be true and just in all your dealings; choose a wife as much like your mother as you can find one; write to your mother, at least once a year; and meet us up yonder some day."

Then he handed him the usual Five-pound-note which he knew would be supplemented by the English Government which his mother had saved for the occasion and which she would quietly slip into his hand, when she kissed him good-bye at the gate. A new petition was permanently added that night to the prayers of father and mother, in which the boy was remembered at the throne of grace; and eternity alone will reveal how much those prayers had to do with the straight, clear life that William Warren was enabled to live for the next fifty-seven years. Upon William's arrival at Trinity he was assigned to the care and training of Stephen and Ann Taverner, and when the years of his apprenticeship were over, he found himself fully equipped for the duties and responsibilities of Christian manhood. Benjamin Lester had been attracted by the boy's actions all through the years of his apprenticeship, and at once he offered him a position of trust and responsibility in connection with his branch business at Old Perlican, or "Parlican" as it was known to the "old Englishmen." He had carried out his father's advice about his prayers, and his spiritual life in general; and now he was to do the same with respect to the young woman whom he was to choose for his wife.

In the person of Elizabeth, daughter of Richard and Mary Lockyer (Planter in Trinity Eight) he recognized his father's ideal, and with her consent he waited upon the Chaplain of a British Man of War then in port, and as a result of the interview they kneet in his presence, pledged their life-long vows, and were proclaimed "man and wife together, in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost." William was more than thankful for his mother and father were still alive, and that his yearly letters (never forgotten) during the next three years, contained a full description of his wife, and the little girl and boy whom God had sent to them, had at their baptism, been given the names of Mary and George, respectively, after mother and father. William Warren, respected and trusted by everyone who knew him was now in full charge of Lester and Garland's business in "Parlican"; and whilst he devoted his life and talents to the best interests of his employers and their dealers, he was always glad when the time came for his annual visit to Trinity. Then, after settling up the business of the past year, he renewed old acquaintances and spent a few happy days in the place (Trinity) where the foundations of his temporal life had been so firmly laid. His wife always accompanied him on this visit, and was thus enabled, not only to share in her husband's joy, but also to visit her parents at English Harbour. Their married life embodied all the features and blessings of a Christian home. Their mutual love increased with increasing years; their children like the olive branches round about their table. When God called the wife and mother to rest, the boys and girls had grown up into manhood and womanhood, with homes of their own, modelled after the home in which they had been born and trained. During the five years longer that William was to remain, he lived quietly and happily with his son William. At his request, when God called his soul to Himself, his body was laid to rest, beside that of his wife, in the old Churchyard at Trinity; and the old Church Clerk showed his respect and admiration for him by the following quaint entry in the old Burial Register:—

June 2nd, 1778, Interred, William Warren, Sr., of Parlican, in the 73rd year of his age. He lived in a married state 46 years, and decently brought up a numerous family.

 2. At Decapolis with 4,000 guests.
 3. At Jerusalem with 12 guests (the Last Supper).

REMINISCENCES.

There are so many sad, and commonplace things happening every day that one is apt to overlook the funny and the uncommon things that happen quite as frequently in one's own life, as well as in the lives of others; only sometimes one has not the eyes to see, or the ears to hear them. Some of the funniest of things are often those that are so at our own individual, personal expense; and I am always sorry for the man who is so much concerned about his own dignity—real or imaginary—that he falls to see, or to enjoy a joke, because it is at his expense. I have an idea that the clergy are subjects to this ordeal, and taken advantage of in this respect, more so than any other class of people in public life; whilst I believe that, on the whole, they enjoy it; and though perhaps not just at the time, yet when they are alone they recall the incident and thoroughly enjoy the funny side of it. Let me illustrate my remarks. Clergymen are legally entitled to a fee for searching the church records, and supplying the copy of a birth certificate. Some of the clergy always exact the fee, some never do it. I remember one who always did it, and to prevent any misunderstanding, he reminded the applicant beforehand that the certificate would cost him 50c. Now some men are quite cute, and some are mean. One who was as mean as he was cute applied to this clergyman for a copy of a birth certificate. Before the clergyman opened the register he reminded the applicant that the fee for the copy would be 50 cents. "Oh yes, Parson," he said, "I know that, and that will be all right." Then the Parson went to work, and after much searching he found the original entry, and made the copy. He folded it neatly and handed it to the man, who took it and put it away carefully in his inside pocket. Then, as he went out the door, he said: "Parson, you don't get any fifty cents out of me." After the parson got over his surprise, he was filled with a righteous indignation, and I am not sure that he ever quite got over it. I often laugh over it myself, and who would not. I'd like to know?

In my own clerical experience of thirty-five years, I never charged for supplying a certificate, though I always expected the person to offer a fee, and to say, at least "I thank you," and usually he did so. A parson, however, who was not a parishioner) once called to see me in Trinity about his birth certificate. He did not know how old he was, so I had to look over the entries for some ten or fifteen years, and did not find the entry then. I never like to be beaten, so I asked the man to sit down whilst I went over those pages again, and again, but with no better success, and I had to admit that the entry was not there. I looked at the man, and the time had come for him either to say "I thank you, Sir," or to ask how much I charged for all the trouble I had gone to. Did he do either? Well, no; he didn't; but looking me straight in the eye he said: "I spose Sir, you got nar fifty cents to give me to buy some nails?" Did I laugh? Well, not for a moment. He got the fifty cents, however, and departed; and then I laughed, and I shall laugh to the end of the chapter, every time I recall the circumstances. It was worth fifty cents; and he would have got a dollar if he had asked for it.

SOME DATES RE THE FINCH FAMILY.

I have been asked for information re the Finch family in Trinity. I have not, however, been able to secure a consecutive date, owing to the fact that some of the first family moved away from Trinity. The following (all that I can find) may be of interest:—

1796—Married, Samuel Thos. Finch of Dartmouth, England, and Elizabeth Piercey of Old Perlican. To them were born: William, John Thomas, Elizabeth, Mary, Ann, Charles, Amy, Susannah, Susannah.

1820—Married, John Thomas Finch and Ann Digham. To them were born: Samuel, Elizabeth, Matilda, and others.

Elizabeth married William Hart, 1849; Matilda married John Collins, 1839. It is possible that Samuel was married by a Wesleyan Minister.

LOCAL ITEMS.

Miss Blanche Earle was a passenger on the Prospero to Trinity from Springdale, N.D.B., (on Sunday last) where she spent an enjoyable vacation with her father.

Mrs. Eriksen and Mrs. Mews report a hundred per cent. enjoyment trip from St. John's to New York, via Halifax, the Annapolis Valley, N.S., and Boston. They will have some time creating stories to tell on their return.

Dr. Fitzgerald of Trinity East was a passenger by S.S. Prospero to St. John's on Sunday last and returned with Mrs. Fitzgerald on Wednesday.

Mr. Alex. Jamieson, representing Dr. Chase, was in Trinity last week; he registered at the Garland, and looked up his customers. He's all right.

Died at Trinity East, Sept. 17th, John Hogarth, aged 75 years.

Magistrate Somerton held court at King's Cove last week; and at present is doing the same at Catalina. Mrs. Somerton is with him at Catalina visiting old acquaintances, and having a good time generally.

Hon. D. A. Ryan registered at the Garland on Wednesday.

ANSWERS TO CORRESPONDENTS.

George H.—Yes, there was a man by the name of Devon in Smith's Sound. His name was Henry Devon. He came from Dorset, England. He was married in Trinity in 1857, to Sarah Waterman, Widow. Witnesses: Robert Grant and Ann Burnell.

T.M.—Two of the oldest people in Trinity Eight are Reginald Mills and Robert Miller, both of Trinity East. Mr. Mills was born in December, 1833, and will be ninety in December. Mr. Miller was born in January, 1834, and will be ninety next January. I have answered this question a good many times.

M. A.T.—At present I have no means of finding out what you ask for. Probably I shall be able to give you the information within a few weeks. Remind me if I forget it.

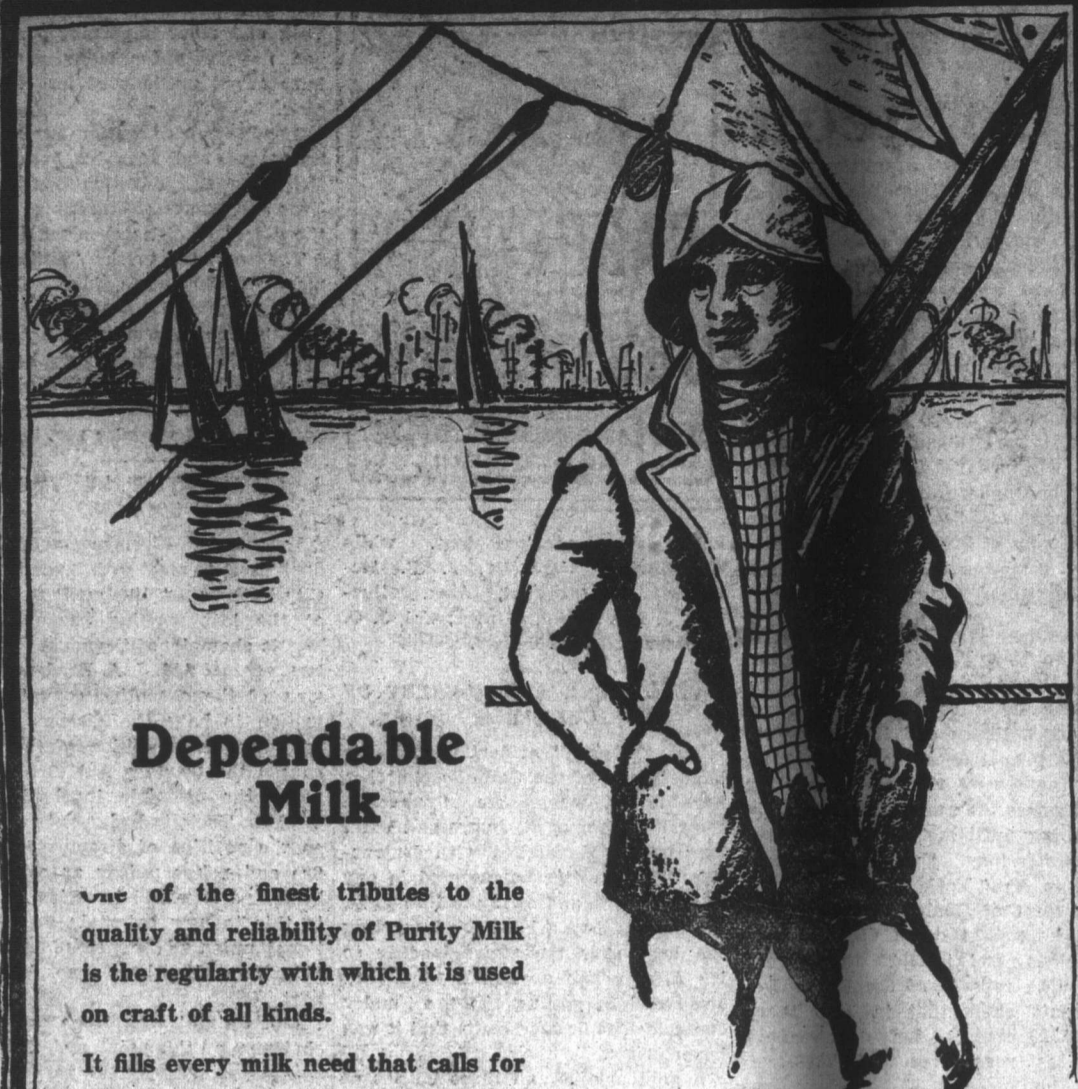

M. W.—Thank you for the bouquet. I am glad to know that efforts are helpful and appreciated. My motto is "I serve." The domestic animal you inquire about is well high extinct as the dodo. Will write.

THE ENTERPRISE ALL CAST PIPELESS FURNACE

is not merely a furnace without pipes. ALL CAST means a heavier furnace—a longer wearing furnace.

ALL CAST means that the radiator too is made of Cast Iron. The radiator extracts all the heat from the fire, and sends it up into the house—not out the chimney.

The ALL CAST Radiator is unaffected by the corrosive action of fuel gases, it will never wear out.

ALL CAST means that expansion and contraction are even,—that the whole furnace is proof for life against leakage of gas, smoke and dust. For this reason it is guaranteed absolutely

Dustproof

ALL CAST means lifetime satisfaction.

Every Enterprise ALL CAST Pipeless Furnace that we install—and being practical Tinsmiths we install them ourselves—carries with it the ALL CAST Guarantee of the makers. "You will be able to go around your house all next winter in your shirt-sleeves, if you install one of these Chill-Chasers in your home."

Tennis Talk.

PLAYING UP AT THE NET.
Mrs. Satterthwaite (the famous woman player).

Nowadays the whole aim and object of the game of lawn tennis is to work up to the net. Many people think that it really means one who is winning all his methods of attack in order to reach the net.

William Johnston (the present singles champion) is an almost perfect example of such a player. His play is not his great feature, but the rest of his game, "whipped" forehand drive, clever back-hand, and all-court shots, are all only a means to an end, and that end is the net.

The great thing about volleying is that the younger you start the better. All you need is a tennis court, a ball or so of old balls and a kind friend who will take on the duties of ball boy and instructor for an hour or so a day.

First of all, make sure that you are holding your racket firmly. I do not mean rigidly, so that you cannot change the grip if you so desire at the moment, but tightly so that it will not slip and so let the ball drop to the racket.

You must always keep the head of the racket above the wrist, and when you have to deal with a low volley well down to it with your whole body, still keeping the racket head above the wrist. When you are in position at the net get your assistant to drive balls at you first on your forehand and then on the back-hand alternating this with occasional lob.

You will be disappointed if you aren't able to "put away" all the shots you remember that with low volleys the great thing is to be able to get the ball back deep into the court. You must wait for the easier higher ball before you can polish it off with one shot.

Keep your racket well out in front of you and be sure that you always meet the ball instead of always merely dropping off your racket. The reason that Miss Ryan is so wonderfully good at the net is because she always goes forward towards the ball instead of drawing away from it as so very many people do.

When you are standing up on your racket's service you should be about two feet from the net and about two feet inside the inner side line. If he has his first service you should be about two feet back, still in the same position as regards the side-line.

Watch your opponents very closely indeed to see if they are going to lob at the last minute. Keep on the look out for that, but at the same time be in to the net as much as you can after each shot, and don't be discouraged if you get "passed" occasionally.

It is impossible to try to "kill" a very deep lob outright, and the wisest will be content to get enough time to get a good length and wait his chance of a "kill" later on.

When you are smashing you should stand at the head of the racket go down behind your shoulder, and above all watch the ball in the air till it is right on your racket.

There is no need always to smash the ball. A great many players can make exactly the same motion with the arm and racket as they would at a hard smash, and at the same time be copping the follow through of the racket as it hits the ball, turn it into a most valuable and deadly shot.

Another extremely valuable shot is the lob volley, where the ball is taken with the face of the racket held almost horizontally and so lifted over the heads of your opponents with an easy lob.

SMOKEY CHIMNEYS

Smoky chimneys are a crime in Scotland under the Smoke Abatement Bill, which has just been introduced by Lord Novar, Secretary for Scotland, and read in the House of Lords. One of its clauses provides that every person who uses or permits to be used any furnace or fire, other than a household fire, so that smoke issues therefrom, unless he proves that he uses the best practicable means for preventing smoke (having regard to the cost), and that he has carefully attended to and managed the furnace or fire so as to prevent as far as possible the escape of smoke therefrom shall be liable upon summary conviction to a penalty not exceeding £25, and upon a second or subsequent conviction to a penalty not exceeding £50. For the purposes of this section, the expression "smoke" is to include soot, ash, grit, and gritty particles.

HEMORRHOIDS

Do not suffer another day with itching, bleeding, or protruding piles or hemorrhoids. No surgical operation required. Dr. Chase's Ointment will relieve you at once and afford lasting benefit. See a box of Chase's Ointment, Bottles, Boxes & Co. Limited, Toronto, Ontario, Canada.

MINARD'S LINIMENT FOR COUGHS & COLDS.

Little Known Tribe of Indians.

Occupying an almost inaccessible and very remote valley in the State of Nayarit, Mexico, is the Huichol tribe of Indians, whose strange rites and customs have just been investigated by a Government commission consisting of Dr. Pedro Monrreal, Jose Rodriguez and Miguel Fernandez all of Mexico City.

These scientists have just arrived at Durango after spending three months with the Huicholes and undergoing terrible hardships. In attempting to reach the mountain locked land of the Indians they got lost, and for three weeks wandered aimlessly in the Sierra Madres. Finally, they reached the valley through a narrow trail and entered upon an experience, the details of which they will make to the Government.

The Huichol Indians are supposed to be descended from the Olmecs, of Tartar origin, who made their appearance on the western coast of the American continent about 1500 B.C., antedating by many centuries the Aztecas, or Aztecs.

The Huicholes occupy that section of the country lying between the southern boundary of the State of Durango and Rio Grande de Santiago, and from Rio Bolanos to the Pacific Coast.

Until recently the Huicholes have led a secluded life among the fastnesses of the Sierra Madres. No stranger dared penetrate their domain. But their country is rich in material, and occasionally a Mexican prospector or explorer would venture among the mountain spurs bordering their territory. When the natives became aware of the presence of a stranger, they quickly expelled the intruder. While they showed intense antipathy to any intrusion on their domain, they were generally peaceably inclined and resorted to no warlike measures.

The use of firearms is almost unknown to them, but with the bow and arrow they bag their game with accuracy. The small, white tailed deer abound in all sections of their territory while in the secluded barrancas roam bear who have never heard a rifle shot.

The Huicholes are a pastoral people and have some wealth, as compared with neighboring tribes, in the matter of herds of goats, sheep, cattle and horses. Having their range in the rocks of the dry cup country of the Sierra Madres, their horses and mules acquire a hardness of hoof unequalled in any other section of Mexico, and sell in the neighboring mining camps at superior prices.

Within their territory can be raised almost any product of the torrid and temperate zones, from the cocoa of the tropics to the potato of the North. Their lands are rich in gold, silver, copper, lead and tin. One of their chief industries is making rope from material obtained from the magney and lechuguilla plants.

From the same plants they also brew the national drink of Mexico, mescal. They manufacture belts, sandals, headgear and other ornaments of beads.

The men of the tribe never cut their hair, but leave it hang down the back longer than that of the women. Wardrobes are limited; when they clothe themselves with a new suit of manta it is worn until time renders a new outfit necessary. While a few speak Spanish, the majority have never heard any other idioma than their own. They are not given to journeying far from their territory and when they make their appearance in a neighboring mining camp they become objects of much interest.

While living under the authority of the Mexican officials in the districts in which they reside and observing the laws of the republic, they also have distinct laws and customs of their own to which locally they give precedence. They generally live in small communities of pueblos, chief among which are La Tupsa, San Sebastian, Santa Maria de Portal, Camatlan and Amatlan de Jora. The last named was a silver mining camp of some 200 years ago. After the Spanish evacuated the town, the Huicholes took possession and have held it ever since.

SMOKEY CHIMNEYS

Smoky chimneys are a crime in Scotland under the Smoke Abatement Bill, which has just been introduced by Lord Novar, Secretary for Scotland, and read in the House of Lords. One of its clauses provides that every person who uses or permits to be used any furnace or fire, other than a household fire, so that smoke issues therefrom, unless he proves that he uses the best practicable means for preventing smoke (having regard to the cost), and that he has carefully attended to and managed the furnace or fire so as to prevent as far as possible the escape of smoke therefrom shall be liable upon summary conviction to a penalty not exceeding £25, and upon a second or subsequent conviction to a penalty not exceeding £50. For the purposes of this section, the expression "smoke" is to include soot, ash, grit, and gritty particles.

Thunderstorms and Superstitions.

Most people are aware that thunderstorms are necessary evils, due to purely natural causes. Yet, even nowadays, many people have a superstitious terror of thunder; a terror, apparently, quite unconnected with the destructive character of the elemental forces, and with the possibility of being "struck."

known of the causes of the disturbance, this unreasoning fear was, naturally, much more general, and gave rise to many curious and grotesque fancies, traces of which still linger among us.

Those representations, by the old Greeks and Romans, of Jupiter, seated on his throne in heaven, with a supply of arrowlike thunderbolts in his hand, ready for launching towards earth, have had an extraordinary influence on popular thought, through many centuries of human progress.

Shakespeare, we remember, makes Othello, in his anguish at discovering Iago's treachery, express astonishment that a thunderbolt did not strike the villain down.

A sixteenth century English writer gives a quaint list of the different names of future events that may be drawn from thunder, according to the different days of the week on which it is heard.

Thunder on Sunday, for instance, was supposed to foretell the death of great men; on Monday, the deaths of women; on Tuesday and Thursday, an abundant harvest; and on Wednesday, Friday and Saturday respectively, bloodshed, war, and pestilence.

The assassination of Julius Caesar is said to have been preceded by thunderstorms of extraordinary fury; and the biographers of Oliver Cromwell have carefully recorded that his great and stormy spirit took its flight

NO BANANAS!

"Yes, we have no bananas—I hear it everywhere, along the green savannas and on the mountains here; the merchant prices is so high, that them in his store, and bathes glistening, repeat it on the shore. The sailor in the rigging, the chuffer in his wain, the sexton, while he's digging, all sing the sad refrain; oh, they have blue bandanas, and other things they prize, but they have no bananas, and burn their blooming eyes. The village pastor hums it, the jurist at the bar, the yearning lover, thrums it upon his cheap guitar; the blent shooting Hannas insist, while carving pie, that they have no bananas and won't have till they die. The blamed disease is spreading, around the world it goes, where Balmoe are stalling it sounda amid the snows; and on the burning reaches of Arabv the blest, one Beldoun wildly screeches bananas to the rest; and Mexico's "mananas" suspended are, they say, while of the ripe bananas the people sing all day. Oh, are we going doty? Are we already there? Is culture tommy-rotty, and should wise men despair? Has horse sense quit her dwelling, enshowered the human throngs since all the world is yelling the nuttiest of songs? Would that some kind Nirvanas would give my soul repose; I'm weary of bananas, and all such fruits as those.
