

CIHM
Microfiche
Series
(Monographs)

ICMH
Collection de microfiches
(monographies)

Canadian Institute for Historical Microreproductions / institut canadien de microreproductions historiques

© 1995

Technical and Bibliographic Notes / Notes techniques et bibliographiques

The Institute has attempted to obtain the best original copy available for filming. Features of this copy which may be bibliographically unique, which may alter any of the images in the reproduction, or which may significantly change the usual method of filming, are checked below.

L'Institut a microfilmé le meilleur exemplaire qu'il lui a été possible de se procurer. Les détails de cet exemplaire qui sont peut-être uniques du point de vue bibliographique, qui peuvent modifier une image reproduite, ou qui peuvent exiger une modification dans la méthode normale de filmage sont indiqués ci-dessous.

- Coloured covers/
Couverture de couleur
- Covers damaged/
Couverture endommagée
- Covers restored and/or laminated/
Couverture restaurée et/ou pelliculée
- Cover title missing/
Le titre de couverture manque
- Coloured maps/
Cartes géographiques en couleur
- Coloured ink (i.e. other than blue or black)/
Encre de couleur (i.e. autre que bleue ou noire)
- Coloured plates and/or illustrations/
Planches et/ou illustrations en couleur
- Bound with other material/
Relié avec d'autres documents
- Tight binding may cause shadows or distortion along interior margin/
La reliure serrée peut causer de l'ombre ou de la distorsion le long de la marge intérieure
- Blank leaves added during restoration may appear within the text. Whenever possible, these have been omitted from filming/
Il se peut que certaines pages blanches ajoutées lors d'une restauration apparaissent dans le texte, mais, lorsque cela était possible, ces pages n'ont pas été filmées.

- Coloured pages/
Pages de couleur
- Pages damaged/
Pages endommagées
- Pages restored and/or laminated/
Pages restaurées et/ou pelliculées
- Pages discoloured, stained or foxed/
Pages décolorées, tachetées ou piquées
- Pages detached/
Pages détachées
- Showthrough/
Transparence
- Quality of print varies/
Qualité inégale de l'impression
- Continuous pagination/
Pagination continue
- Includes index(es)/
Comprend un (des) index

Title on header taken from: /
Le titre de l'an-tête provient:

- Title page of issue/
Page de titre de la livraison
- Caption of issue/
Titre de départ de la livraison
- Masthead/
Généralique (périodiques) de la livraison

- Additional comments: /
Commentaires supplémentaires:

This item is filmed at the reduction ratio checked below /
Ce document est filmé au taux de réduction indiqué ci-dessous.

10X	12X	14X	16X	18X	20X	22X	24X	26X	28X	30X	32X
<input type="checkbox"/>	<input type="checkbox"/>	<input type="checkbox"/>	<input type="checkbox"/>	<input type="checkbox"/>	<input type="checkbox"/>	<input checked="" type="checkbox"/>	<input type="checkbox"/>	<input type="checkbox"/>	<input type="checkbox"/>	<input type="checkbox"/>	<input type="checkbox"/>

The copy filmed here has been reproduced thanks to the generosity of:

National Library of Canada

The images appearing here are the best quality possible considering the condition and legibility of the original copy and in keeping with the filming contract specifications.

Original copies in printed paper covers are filmed beginning with the front cover and ending on the last page with a printed or illustrated impression, or the back cover when appropriate. All other original copies are filmed beginning on the first page with a printed or illustrated impression, and ending on the last page with a printed or illustrated impression.

The last recorded frame on each microfiche shall contain the symbol \rightarrow (meaning "CONTINUED"), or the symbol ∇ (meaning "END"), whichever applies.

Maps, plates, charts, etc., may be filmed at different reduction ratios. Those too large to be entirely included in one exposure are filmed beginning in the upper left hand corner, left to right and top to bottom, as many frames as required. The following diagrams illustrate the method:

anks

L'exemplaire filmé fut reproduit grâce à la générosité de:

Bibliothèque nationale du Canada

y

Les images suivantes ont été reproduites avec le plus grand soin, compte tenu de la condition et de la netteté de l'exemplaire filmé, et en conformité avec les conditions du contrat de filmage.

ad

es-

na

d

Les exemplaires originaux dont la couverture en papier est imprimée sont filmés en commençant par le premier plat et en terminant soit par la dernière page qui comporte une empreinte d'impression ou d'illustration, soit par le second plat, selon le cas. Tous les autres exemplaires originaux sont filmés en commençant par la première page qui comporte une empreinte d'impression ou d'illustration et en terminent par la dernière page qui comporte une telle empreinte.

Un des symboles suivants apparaîtra sur la dernière image de chaque microfiche, selon le cas: le symbole \rightarrow signifie "A SUIVRE", le symbole ∇ signifie "FIN".

Les cartes, planches, tableaux, etc., peuvent être filmés à des taux de réduction différents. Lorsque le document est trop grand pour être reproduit en un seul cliché, il est filmé à partir de l'angle supérieur gauche, de gauche à droite, et de haut en bas, en prenant le nombre d'images nécessaire. Les diagrammes suivants illustrent la méthode.

MICROCOPY RESOLUTION TEST CHART

(ANSI and ISO TEST CHART No. 2)

4.5

5.0

5.6

6.3

7.1

8.0

9.0

10

11.2

12.5

14.1

16

18

20

22.5

25

28

32

36

40

45

50

56

63

2.8

3.2

3.6

4.0

2.5

2.2

2.0

1.8

1.6

APPLIED IMAGE Inc

1653 East Main Street
Rochester, New York 14606 USA
(716) 482-0300 - Phone
(716) 288-5989 - Fax

IN NORTHERN SWISS

AND OTHER POEMS

SERVICES

Rev. John MacFarquhar
With the admiration & respect of the Author.

Jan - 1923

IN NORTHERN SKIES

Webs of silver, spun in the twilight's travail,
Spring into sight when the orange rim has pass'd ;
Silver webs that a diamond dew-world spangles,
Webs of crystal glittering at glowing angles
Flash into flame at the zenith, rosily massed ;

Crowns of silver, colossal, jewelled, mighty,
Serenely set upon brows straight, bright, and bland ;
Girdles that grace a priestess high in the azure,
Zones that encircle a queen in her safe embrasure,
Shine on the verge of midnight's velvet strand ;

Shields of silver, studded with fires of topaz,
Harps that are silver-strung, rimmed pale with pearls ;
Rapiers rich with gems that the gloom encrusteth,
Scythes and scabbards that never a wet moon
rusteth,
Wheels of gold that a tireless helmsman twirls ;

Sails of silver, spread to the spacious ether,
Ships of state that ride with a burnished keel ;
Galleys tall that float to a magic measure,
Dipping divinely down in a radiant pleasure,
Hulls of gold that round with the star-worlds wheel—

All go by—sails, shields, crowns, gems and girdles.
Hearken the ring of the mighty silvern chains !
Hearken the clang and the clash, the reverberations,
The golden din, as the gleaming constellations
Slowly swing and sink to the dusky plains !

IN MARCH

Here on the wide waste lands,
Take—child—these trembling hands,
Though my life be as blank and waste,
My days as surely ungraced
By glimmer of green on the rim
Of a sunless wilderness dim,
As the wet fields barren and brown,
As the fork of each sterile limb
Shorn of its lustrous crown.

See—how vacant and flat
The landscape—empty and dull,
Scared by an ominous lull
Into a trance—we have sat
This hour on the edge of a broken, a gray snake-
fence,
And nothing that lives has flown,
Or crept, or leapt, or been blown
To our feet or past our faces—
So desolate, child—the place is !
It strikes, does it not, a chill,
Like that other upon the hill,
We felt one bleak October ?
See—the gray wood still sober
'Ere it be wild with glee,
With growth, with an ecstasy
Of fruition born of desire.
The marigold's yellow fire
Doth not yet in the sun burn to leap, to aspire ;
Its myriad spotted spears
No erythronium rears ;

We cannot see
Anemone,
Or heart-lobed brown hepatica ;
There doth not fly,
Low under sky,
One kingfisher—dipping and darting
From reedy shallows where reds are starting,
Pale pink tips that shall burst into bloom,
Not in one night's mid-April gloom,
But inch by inch, till ripening tint,
And feathery plume and emerald glint
Proclaim the waters are open.

All this will come,
The panting hum
Of the life that will stir,
Glance and glide, and whistle and whir,
Chatter and crow, and perch and pry,
Crawl and leap and dart and fly,
Things of feather and things of fur,
Under the blue of an April sky.
Shall speak, the dumb,
Shall leap, the numb,
All this will come,
It never misses,
Failure, yet—
Never was set
In the sure spring's calendar,
Wherefore—Pet—
Give me one of your springtime kisses !
While you plant some hope in my cold man's breast—
Ah ! How welcome the strange flower-guest—
Water it softly with maiden tears,
Go to it early—and late—with fears ;

Guard it, and watch it, and give it time
For the holy dews to moisten the rime—
Make of it some green gracious thing,
Such as the Heavens shall make of the Spring !

The trees and the houses are darkling,
No lamps yet are sparkling
Along the ravine ;
A wild wind rises, the waters are fretting,
No moon nor star in the sky can be seen.

But if I can bring her with thinking
The thoughts that are linking
Her life unto mine :
Then blow, wild wind ! And chafe, proud river !
At least a Star in my heart shall shine.

Had I not met her, great had been my loss,
Had I not loved her, pain I had been spared.
So this life goes, and lovers bear the cross,
Burden borne willingly, if only it be shared.

Had I not met her, Song had passed me by,
Had I not loved her, Fame had been more sure.
So this life goes, we laugh, and then we sigh,
While we believe 'tis blessed to endure.

IN APRIL

There is so much that I would say,
When I am walking here alone,
Walking alone this April day.
There is so much that I should fear
Anyone else should ever hear,
So much that is meant for his own ear.
The ways are dry in the woods,
And the buds are red on the tree—
I should like to bring him now,
And I could, for I well know how.
But could I ever atone
To my weak, rash self if I stirred
A finger to bring him nearer,
Or showed to himself he was dearer
Than anything—all beside?
By something I am deterred.
But hard, in this beautiful weather,
Not to enjoy it together!
Hard, to stand by the gate,
With that sense of a dead, dull weight
Pressing upon the heart,
Settled above the brows,
The sense of a sad frustration
That no hope of a meeting allows.
What use in the rest of things
If we are not together?
What goodness or glory brings
The wonderful April weather
While friends like us walk apart?

Even to-day 'tis too late,
For some of the flowers we prize

Are over, their petals shaken
To earth, and their places taken
By later and hardier ones.
The bloodroot buds awaken,
First of the blossoms pure,
And after the warmer suns
Have shone for a day or two
On the ivory immature
Of crumpled petal and plume,
There steals on the air the perfume
Of the sweet arbutus, tinged
With the faintest of rose. Star-fringed
Will the edge of the wood soon be
Where the clustered anemone
Make of earth a milky way.
The delicate star-flower, too, will be seen
Set in its whorl of pallid green,
And tall splashed trilliums, mauve and pink,
Green and purple, striped and gay,
With here and there
A specimen rare
Of deepest puce, with a heart of ink ;
And up in your path,
With that way it hath
Of flaunting, sudden, in empty air,
The aquilegia's jester's frock
Will gaily flare.
At the side of a rock
You frequently meet his red and yellow ;
He is the wit for all the wood,
Known by his color and pointed hood.

Already the beauty of noon has passed,
As I stand by the gate
And moodily wait

For a face, or a sign,
I dimly divine
A change in the air,
A chill, a despair,
That is foreign to Hope,
To shimmering green
On the wooded slope
Of the rushing river.
No one will come, though I wait all day.
Go in—go back—what use to stay?

NOTE.—IN MARCH. The late Mr. Edmund Clarence Stedman wrote of this poem to the author: "I greatly regret that your beautiful lines, "In March," have reached me too late to be included with other extracts from your work in my "Victorian Anthology." I regret this the more that the personal note would have brought new life into the Canadian section. As it is, I am greatly pleased with the variant that your poetry makes in the space allotted to Canada." The lines originally appeared in The Week, and were entitled "Fleming" (a fragment) with the sub-title "March."

PROPHET

I am not yet so very old,
Yet hidden things can I descry,
And mysteries can I unfold.

And curious things can I foretell,
And the Lord's purposes read as well.
Yet you shall not find me bowed,
Nor perceive me with a flowing beard.
Nor find in me eyes that are study-bleared.
I should say that in a crowd
I must look like all the others,
Which suits me best, for it is the test
That, learned or dull, we are all brothers.

Many kinds of lore there are,
And I know little of moon or star,
Beyond that moons are round and bright,
And stars are points of silver light ;
But to me the astronomer
Is not more wise than the carpenter.

Many books are there left to read,
And sometimes a book is a friend in need,
But although the poet may work in his way,
The way of his work is not the only way.
He rhymes in fourteen, or in six, or in eight,
Or not at all, in epics of state ;
The sailor on the wide grey seas
Tries in his way his Lord to please.

Though he would prove but a raw empiric,
Bearing a hand with lay or lyric,
He can tie over twenty different knots,
And at last he quietly rots
In the brine below, as the poet in earth,
What difference then in death, at birth ?

Many trades and arts there be under the sky.
I have seen the wheels move, the sparks fly.
I have watched the large ships climb the locks,
And watched them unloading along the docks.
Strife have I seen, and nearly a battle,
Bitter talk have I heard and cruel tattle ;
Of good I've known much, yet more of evil,
And always together—in flour, the weevil ;
Under the rose-leaf, coiled and snug,
Sleeps the green horned slug.

Many times have I thought that the race of men
Must come to the first of things again ;
The gazer at stars be forced to measure
Planks—not worlds and planets—at leisure.
The poet who writes beneath garden trees
Be sent to roam the wide grey seas,
Growing a proper sailor man,
Hairy-chested and strong and calm,
For inky finger a horny palm.

Many trades, many arts there surely be.
The worst of it is—only one for me !
As long as there's anything left to say,
Prophet I am and must be alway.
Still I think if I knew how chairs were made,
Or if I had strength for trowel or spade,
Or the wit to fashion straws into braid,

I would not be Prophet for long.
Prophecy, fancy, prayer, song,
These are not the delights of our age.

So I wonder if when the race of men
Comes to the first of things again
I shall be Prophet still by choice !
Thus, to that end, I will keep my voice
In practice. Lord, but touch my lip,
So that Thy teaching may not slip !
So will I serve in my Oracle-shop
Until Thou bidst mine arm to drop.

NOTE — Lucette. This is the 45th Villanelle written quite recently by the author, who included 44 in "Pine, Rose and Fleur de Lis." Mr. Stedman wrote of these: "As to the remarkably picturesque series, "Down the River," it is a novelty, indeed, to find the French form so spontaneously mastered and put to an absolutely fresh use."

I desire to thank the editors of periodicals at home and abroad for permission to reprint "In Northern Skies," "At Valois" and "Propbet."

NOTE.—Eadwine the King. The story of the conversion of the King of Northumbria has occupied many pens, but the suggestions for the present poem are to be mainly found in Green's History of the English People. The well-known incident of Coifi, the Priest, hurling his spear at the altar of Godmanham, might have followed upon some such scene as the one treated by the author.

ORION

Spanning the winter heaven, a slanting tower
Of strength, with pose defiant, his panoply
Flashes ; the glittering hilt, the belt of three
Bright stars gleam out to comfort the dogs that cower
Mute, wistful, ever-ready, till the hour
Of dumb probation pass and they are free
To rise and follow in joyous mutiny
The master, upon whose feet their kisses shower.

Forever striding towards a distant goal,
Forever travelling within a mighty ring,
Set in the awful solitudes that cling
Around his giant frame—this fearless soul,
Remembering that Beginning which he saw,
Holds not one doubt of Everlasting Law.

THE MARSHES

In mist-draped pools, lagoons of dull dark green,
A league along the broad lakeshore they wind.
Gray skies at morn and blue at noon but find
And leave them dim and dank, the fit demesne
Of writhing things and creeping, dismal grave
Of crimes unknown, where knotted ends of rope
Twist, tangle around the slimy roots that grope
For fresher air unwashed by a fetid wave.

Yet out upon these marshes there is glow,
Radiance illimitable, when the crest
Of distant hills is outlined black below
The broken splendours of the burning West.
Then, each tall rush becomes an argent spire,
Then, the dim pools are flooded red with fire.

AT VALOIS

Long leafy headlands stretch into the green
Of mighty Saint Laurent, while on the mead,
Dark Ottawa's tawny waters rush and recede ;
Dorval floats, shimmering ; turbulent Lachine
Sparkles in dipping silver crests between
Rich shores of elm, fringed with glistening reed ;
That dim red web is the bridge ; around us speed
The brown canoes, for sunset port grown keen.

Ah ! It is summer sweet ; it is fair, it is fair !
That tapering spire to the right is little Pointe Claire.
Afar in the sun-flushed fields a woman stands
Motionless, resting, behind her antique plough,
Shading from too much glare a beautiful brow
With sunburnt, resolute, hard and horny hands.

THAW

Shower-spotted panes that let in too much light,
A dull white glare, lasting the livelong day.
The roof drips and the trees ; on soaking clay
The snow slides stealthily, or drops at night,
Loosened by rain, with sudden thuds that fright
The watch-dog wearying in enforced sleep
For play with children who at home must keep.
Silently steals over house and lawn a blight
Welcomed by only one within my ken,
The quick red squirrel of the neighbouring glen.
With keen eye glancing sharp in hungry mood
He quits the tree, drops swiftly to the ground,
And finding the precious morsels that abound,
Praises the weather that has brought him—food.

LUCETTE

I seem to see you still, Lucette,
Down in the Vale of the Richelieu,
'Tis fifteen years since last we met.

Dark red skirt and apron blue,
Little gold cross and chain of jet—
I seem to see you still, Lucette ;

A little taller, paler, yet
Still but a girl, and merry, too.
'Tis fifteen years since last we met

And I must not, my friend, forget
The change Time may have made in you.
I seem to see you—still, Lucette,

Wearing that little amulet,
“Marie, secours! Priez pour nous!”
'Tis fifteen years since last we met.

Heaven grant no grief, no wild regret
Have reached you since we said “Adieu,”
I seem to see you still, Lucette,
'Tis fifteen years since last we met !

EADWINE THE KING

Eadwine the King,
King of Northumbria,
He the wise overlord,
Lord over all,
Sat once at meat
In his fire-lighted hall.

Bravely the logs burned,
Brightly the flames danced,
Flickered and wavered
High on the wall.
Ruddy the meat showed
Red in the fire-glare ;
Broad were the platters piled
Brown with the venison,
Capon and hare ;
Deep were the cups of brass
Filled to the brim,
Round and well hollowed out,
Frothed at the rim,
Waiting for warriors
High to uplift them,
Singing their war-songs,
Shouting their battle-hymn.

Thus in the firelight,
Waiting for torches,
Sat the great overlord,
King of Northumbria,
Eadwine the King.
Through his tired brain
Weary thoughts fluttered,

Heavy his heart was
With troubles unuttered,
Set down untasted,
The beaker of brass ;
Grown cold and wasted,
The food on the platter.
So in the red light
Sat the great lord,
Sickened with slaughter,
Weary of warfare,
Tired of the sw.

Heavy his heart was,
Troubled his life,
For once more at Eastre
News from the outworld
Reached him of strife,
Of pillage and plunder,
Murmurs and moanings,
Doubts of the High Gods,
Gods of the Thunder,
Woden and Thor.
Merged with his dreaming,
Troubling his mind,
Tales of the "white bread,"
Tales of a White Christ
Martyred and innocent,
Gentle and kind.

Should he believe them,
Should he accept Him,
What would he gain ?
Feared he the quick knife,
Feared he the death-stroke,

Should he disdain
The Gods of the people,
Woden and Thor.

Thus while the red light
Flickered and wavered,
Entered the warriors
Bearing the torches,
Shouting and singing,
Ripe for the feast ;
Entered the King's friend,
Coifi, the priest.
Then as a silence
Fell like a pall,
Eadwine the King
Strode down the length of his fire-lighted hall.

“ Men of Northumbria,
Bidden to feast,
Ealdormen, warriors,
Coifi—my priest,
Well have you followed me,
Well have you served me,
Hurling the sharp spear,
Flashing the broad blade
High in the air.
For this I thank you,
Helped you the High Gods ?
Here do I swear,
I—your true Lord,
Sickened with slaughter,
Tired of the sword,—
Never again to your Gods will I pray.
Have we not followed them ?

Have we not served them?
What have they brought
But warfare and weeping,
Murmurs and moanings,
Pillage and plunder,
These Gods of the thunder,
Woden and Thor!
So—from to-day,
Eating the "white bread,"
Taking the White Christ,
Lo—I have done
With praying to false Gods,
Woden and Thunder!
Gods of the people,
Of murder and plunder!"

Steady the King stood,
Lifting his right hand,
Facing the war-band,
Fronting the warriors
Baulked of their feast,
When from his place rose
Coifi, the priest.

"Well have you spoken,
Eadwine our King.
I, too, am weary,
Weary of smiting,
Sickened with fighting.
Give us the "white bread,"
Give us the White Christ,
Gentle and kind.
Too long have these false Gods
Troubled my mind."

But ere the tumult
Brooded and broke,
Flashed through the air
A traitor stroke.
Eumer, the envoy,
He, the wi'd Wessexborn,
He, the base Saxon,
Drew forth the quick knife,
Rushed on the King.
Out crashed the tumult then,
Up rose the warriors,
Brandishing torches,
While with a spring
Ere the quick death-stroke
Took the King's life,
Lilla, the churl,
One of the war-band,
Fell on the knife,
Staggered and sank,
Died, for his King.

Bravely the logs burned,
Brightly the flames danced
High on the wall.
Lilla, the churl,
Lay on the floor of the fire-lighted hall.
Knelt by his bosom,
Coffi, the priest ;
Silent, the warriors
Turned from the feast,
Gazing at Eumer,
He, the base traitor,
Closing upon him,
Burning to slay him,

Breathing out vengeance,
Eager for slaughter.

Wounded, the King stood,
Trembling a little,
Lifting his left hand,
Keeping his right hand
Hid in his breast.
"Pagan or Christian,
Woden or Christ,
Love for our brother,
That is the test.
That hath sufficed.
See—how he lies there,
Nought more to give ;
Felt he the death-stroke,
Took he the home-thrust
That I might live.
Therefore I honour him,
Therefore I love him,
Trusting to meet him,
Hoping to thank him,
In the far soul-world,
In our Christ's heaven.

But for this other—
He, the base traitor—
What must I say ?
He is my enemy,
Me would he slay.
Yet hath Christ taught me,
He, too, is my brother,
Though he would slay me,
Bind and betray me.
See—how the red blood
Drips from my right hand !

Yet—it is nothing.
Lo—I command you,
You, my true warriors,
Men of Northumbria,
Coifi, my priest,
For the dear Christ's sake
Him must ye spare ;
Let him pass scathless,
Let him go forth now,
Free—as the air."
Then the great King dropped—
Faint, in his chair.

Eumer, the envoy,
Heard and recoiled,
Looking around,
Saw the tall warriors
Sheathing their spears.
Saw the pale corse
Clay-cold on the ground ;
Saw the King's face
White, like the Christ's,
Saw—through his tears—
Tears of contrition,
Tears of remorse,
For the wild action,
For the great sin.
Hiding his face,
Creeping abjectly,
So he fared forth
From the King's presence,
Eadwine the King,
He the great overlord,
Lord over all,
Sitting at meat
In his fire-lighted hall.

