HOW 11 OF ONTARIO'S GIRLS HAVE WON FOR THEMSELVES A FREE TRIP TO LONDON TOWN

How the World's Unprecedented Offer of Summer Vacation Across the Sea Was Taken Advantage of is Vividly Shown in the Accompanying Table of Results—Winning Candidates Tell of Their Campaigns For Votes.

A LONG JOURNEY.

The "Trip to London" means a long, but pleasant journey for the fortunate eleven. The distances, approximately given, are:

Toronto to Montreal	330
Montreal to Quebec	190
Quebec to Liverpool	2600
Liverpool to London	185
Total	3305

The party, with an escort from The World staff, will leave Toronto Thursday morning, Aug. 1, in a special car attached to C.P.R. 9 o'clock express, arriving at Montreal at 6 p. m. A drive around that city will dispose of the time before going on board the Allan liner, Virginian, in which the trip across the briny will be made. The railway run from Liverpool to London will give the tourists some splendid English scenery. In London, the party will stay at the Hotel Cecil, and will be given an opportunity to visit many of the famous spots in and around that wonderful city. A side-trip to Paris is also on the program. The return trip will be made so as to bring the ladies home 22 days after having left Toronto. The expenses of the party throughout the entire trip are defrayed by The World.

Well, it's all over. The lucky eleven who start on The World's excursion to London the Great are known. It was not until daylight yesterday that the special staff of clerks who have been taking care of the ballots and votes that flooded the office during the past few days concluded the reckoning up. All yesterday there were enquiries, personal, by telephone and by telegram, for an intimation as to the result, but it was not until last evening that The World was able to apprise the girls of their success. And while glad enough to fulfil that pleasing duty, The World's pleasure is tinged with a reflection of the disappointment which must be felt by many an earnest aspirant for the enjoyment of the trip to London offered.

The Toronto Girls. The six successful Toronto girls who will be receiving the congratulations of their friends this morning on their success in the contest were in the front rank from the very first, when the votes began to pass the hundred thousand mark. In an early list Miss McGregor stood first with 135.29 votes, Miss Skene third with 115.70, Miss Vandemark fourth with 112.24, Miss Virtue fifth with 108.02, Miss Hodgson sixth with 81.22, and Miss Stephenson seventh with 71.60. It is therefore evident that these fair contestants entered with a determination to succeed, and with staying powers which three months did not exhaust. From time to time, of course, the fortunes of those competing varied, and their position in the lists changed, but relatively to the other competitors they maintained their lead all thru the voting. Miss McGregor held the lead time after time, but towards the close she slipped down, and was even inclined to be dependent over her chances. All six girls are genuine Canadians, mostly of the third generation, and with one exception born in Toronto. Each of them represents a distinct circle of interest, and enlisted the support of that particular group. They Won. Miss McGregor, who is a bright and able young business woman, applied her business experience to the problem that faced her, and by dint of personal canvass and the sympathy of a host of friends and neighbors, who have known her as "Lizzie" in the home she was born in and still lives at, she managed to roll up her enormous total. Miss Hodgson was nominated by William L. Bell among the first and secured the support of the important interests associated with the Western Cattle Market thru her father. She had a lot of powerful friends, one of whom polled 32,500 votes for her. He will be wanted as a repeater next January. Miss Vandemark was assisted by an immense number of people, who associate her with the pleasant half-hour of the day, when they go to dine at Williams' Cafe, where she officiates as cashier. Mr. Williams good-naturedly fell in with the plan of campaign and became as much interested in Miss Vandemark's success as anyone. Miss Virtue received the suffrages of members of the Canadian Order of Oddfellows, and also exerted a large amount of influence in outside areas, which told for her advantage. Like most of the candidates she found The World an acceptable offering, which no one grudged to subscribe to. Miss Skene is another bright Toronto girl, an old neighbor of Miss McGregor, her mother being godmother to that lady. Miss Skene became the candidate of the Masonic Order in a special degree, being the orphan of a Freeman and assisted in her canvass by many of the ancient and accepted ones.

General Favorite. Miss Stephenson received the largest number of individual votes, the laborers of the city making an active canvass in her favor and securing all The Daily and Sunday World coupons available. They turned in 25,000 on Monday of these single ballots. The firemen and police force were also interested in this charming young lady, who hails from Lindsay, but has lived three years in Toronto. She has a position in the Labor Temple and is queen of trades unionism in the Queen's City. And, without reflecting on the assistance which her loyal subjects rendered, she likes to say a special word for the firemen in the downtown stations especially. At fire headquarters alone she polled over 100,000 votes in a short time. The street railway employees also organized into committees on every route and few were in-

The Out of Town Winners.

The contest in Hamilton was in reality confined to Miss Board and Miss Corner. The World is sorry that such a good campaigner as the defeated candidate proved should have to fall defeated. The regret would have been the same had the result been the other way. Miss Board, however, earned her triumph with a clean majority of 100,000.

In district 3, Miss Allin of Whitby has been in the forefront from the first. Miss Thompson of Peterboro was the last one to "get in the game," but her friends rallied around her in remarkable style. Miss Richardson of Oshawa also thanks her large circle of friends for her success, while Miss Flanagan of Kingston is none the less grateful for those who assisted her. All these ladies, in another column of The World, tell of their "plan of cam-

YOUNG MILLER CONVICTED ON HIS PALS' EVIDENCE

VICTORIA B. C. REPORTED BURNING

Victoria, B.C., July 23.—(Special.)—The western portion of Victoria is in flames, which have gotten beyond control. There is no adequate supply of water.

Frank Stephens, 29 Cowan-avenue, Parkdale, committed suicide last evening about 7:30 by taking cyanide of potassium, a deadly poison.

Mr. Stephens had been despondent, and was thought to be brooding over financial affairs, as all was harmony in his domestic life. It was not thought, however, that he was seriously embarrassed and the rash act he committed came as a great surprise to those in closest touch with him.

Yesterday morning he went down to work as usual, but on his way home for lunch dropped into a drug store in Parkdale and purchased the poison. A few hours later he took the fatal draught.

Dr. Clemens the family physician, was immediately summoned, but he could do nothing to save the man's life, as the poison had already had its effect.

The deceased was a bookkeeper in the employ of the W. R. Brock Company, and was considered a most trustworthy employe, and held quite a responsible position.

Burke and Logie Swear He Produced Bogus Notes; He Swears He Didn't.

LINDSAY, July 23.—(Special.)—Cheers rang thru the courtroom here to-day when it was announced that the crown had withdrawn the charge against John Logie, of having forged notes in his possession.

George Miller, who also appeared for trial, was let out on bail of $200 in five sureties. Magistrate Moore will give judgment on Friday, when he sentences the "quintet"—Burke, Logie, Wynne, Evesleigh and Hoyau.

Miller went into the box immediately after Logie and Burke had sworn that he (Miller) had printed and procured paper and ink for the printing of $5 bills two years ago last January, and denied the whole business. He explained his trips to Logie's house, and the trips to Belleville and Peterboro, where Logie had sworn he went with Miller to pass the bad money.

Mr. Bayly examined the prisoner at length, but failed to shake his story, although in some slight unimportant instances there was corroboration of Logie's story. Miller could not account for Burke and Logie making up the yarn to blight his life.

Counsel Miller pointed out that there was not a tittle of corroborative evidence on the story of the two accomplices, and that there must be further corroboration to have any case against Miller. The magistrate acquiesced and reserved judgment.

As the present time there will be no more arrests, although Burke has told where he got the bills and who made the plates. Detective Parkinson left for Peterboro to-night on his way to Ottawa. Inspector Rogers goes to Toronto to-morrow.

OUR TRIP TO LONDON.

To-day The World announces the result of the most stirring competition ever held in Ontario, or for the matter of that, in Canada, under newspaper auspices. From the morning when its readers were first invited to nominate candidates for a 'free trip to the Imperial capital, down to the actual closing of the lists, public interest grew and culminated on Monday night in a scene only paralleled when the fate of a government hangs in the balance. This is sufficient of itself to show how alluring are the romantic anticipations attaching to a visit to that old homeland which so many of our young people long to see, the few manage to attain their desire, while the heart is young and care sits lightly on the brow.

Now that the long and arduous struggle is over, what does it all mean? When The World resolved to send the eleven most popular young ladies of Ontario to London, it scarcely realized what magnetic and fascinating personalities it was enlisting. The offer was an experiment. The innovation was a novel one, but the appeal to the sporting instincts of Canadians proved irresistible. In its own way, the competition has been a test of friendship, of good humor, of business ability and of chivalry. Nothing has been more gratifying than the fairness that has marked every stage of the race for leadership and the determined spirit that has taken from the fluctuations of fortune only added vim and earnestness. This is the way to fight, so that even if the immediate object is missed a real and great gain remains.

The civilized opinion so marked by an ever growing sentiment against war conducted with shot and shell, with bullets and bayonets, there is no success in the strenuous contest for commercial and industrial supremacy. Nation against nation, city against city, individual against individual, is the keynote of twentieth century economic conditions. Nowhere is the struggle for wealth and for the power that wealth brings waged more fiercely than in the new countries of the west. This is the vigorous atmosphere into which the youth of Canada and the United States are born, they breathe it and it is reproduced in the keenness of our games and sports quite as much as in the sphere of business enterprise. The World's trip to London contest drew largely on this natural attribute. It gave life and animation to the mimic campaign and drew out every resource that ingenuity and skilful strategy could devise.

"Victory," remarked Napoleon the Great, "usually rests with the big battalions." This was certainly true of The World contest that ended on Monday at the stroke of midnight. "There is only one thing worse than a great victory," said Napoleon's conqueror, "a great defeat." But The World hopes its contest will leave behind it no traces of regret save the shadow inseparable from defeat. Joy to the victors, woe to the vanquished, is the law of na-

BIENVENUE! WELCOME!

The greeting that welcomed Sir Wilfrid Laurier home again is spoken; the crowds are gone; the lights are out; "The shouting and the tumult dies."

It is natural now to review and to recall these events, not without their possible place in history. What do they mean? Was all this great demonstration spontaneous? To what extent was it artificially stimulated? What will be its effect upon politics? How far is it significant, as voicing the popular estimate of Sir Wilfrid Laurier? To what extent does it reflect the true attitude of Canada towards the imperial conference, and the position which he took therein?

These questions naturally arise. No one can pretend to definitely answer all of them. But those who witnessed the premier's progress from Rimouski to Montreal will not differ among themselves as to many impressions made upon them.

To begin with, it must be admitted that the demonstrations everywhere in the Province of Quebec were magnificent. Were King Edward VII. or Pope Pius X. to visit the ancient capital, he could not receive, the people could not give him, a more remarkable ovation.

And in that great concourse of last Friday night, it must be borne in mind that but few were stirred by the mere curiosity to see a famous man, which often draws a crowd together. Sir Wilfrid Laurier is no stranger in Quebec. For 30 years he has been a frequent visitor. A vast number of the people who followed his carriage and pressed upon him knew him quite well, at least by sight. They were upon the street that night to do him honor.

The ride from the Chateau Frontenac to the market-place, where, from an improvised platform, the premier spoke to the people, presented many scenes of passing interest. Quebec is quaint and curious always, with its narrow, winding streets, suggesting some ancient city in a foreign land. Among the flags and decorations, the tricolor was abundant.

The windows, doorways, sidewalks, were filled with people, and in many cases they overflowed the street so as to make the premier's progress slow and difficult. Every home, however humble, displayed a light; there was no darkened house front along the entire route. Electrical signs were abundant—all of them in French—many of them acclaiming Sir Wilfrid Laurier as the protector of liberty, the "defender of our language, laws and customs," the creator of a new nation. Many signs were smaller, and merely flashed "Bien Venue" in welcome to the guest.

What struck a stranger most was the quiet, respectful attention of the crowd. There was little or none of the cheering, shouting, horn-blowing, din and racket, which might accompany a scene like this. So, too, the great crowd that stood in the market and patiently listened to the speeches, but seldom interrupted with applause. Strange to say, the French-Canadian, however deeply interested he may be in the speaker or the speech, but seldom gives assent by noise of any kind. Of course, there were sky-rockets and fireworks in abundance, and they were kept in place, and at no time disturbed the meeting, or even the parade, except immediately after the meeting, when the coachmen in waiting for Chief Laurier and his braves had some trouble with their horses.

Two of these braves—Aylesworth and Paterson—did not use the language of the tribe: They spoke in English briefly, and were heartily applauded. Indeed, at no point did the minister of justice address the crowd in French, altho now and then, in the house, he answers a question in that language, and is even said at times, in Room 16, to address in his own tongue some friendly deputy from Quebec.

That the premier had wonderful weather for days is not to be overlooked. He arrived at Quebec on a moonlight night, so inviting that one naturally sought the open air, the wharf and the river. His meeting night at Quebec on Friday last was equally propitious. Bright weather smiled upon him from Quebec to Montreal, filling the river with canoes and launches and the landing-places with happy, expectant people.

Had it rained hard on Thursday, Friday and Saturday of last week, the Laurier homecoming might have lost much of its grandeur and glory. But, in consenting to these great meetings of welcome, the premier was taking a chance on the weather. He took the chance, and he won!

Meeting a man arriving on a boat, by going upon another boat to greet him, simply means that you see him go by.

The first boat to reach Grosse Isle last Thursday was the Lady Evelyn, the new mail tender, which brought Postmaster-General Lemieux and party from Levis. Soon other boats arrived, and for some anxious moments everyone was trying to sight the big ship, with the big chief on board. Meanwhile, these boats had turned around, and, as soon as the Empress came in view, they were racing at full speed ahead of her up the river. Not but that she soon overtook them, passed them, and was lost to view. Indeed, when the Lady Evelyn landed at Quebec, there was some uncertainty among the passengers as to whether Sir Wilfrid Laurier was still upon the Empress, or had gone to the hotel. As a matter of fact, he and Lady Laurier were even then at the chateau, and very brown and strong and pleased he looked, with his friends assembled about him.

There is a curious bit of gossip going about respecting the boats that went out to meet the Empress. "They" say that the postmaster-general sailed from Levis without crossing to Quebec, where Hon. Jacques Bureau was waiting to board the Lady Evelyn.

There was some misunderstanding somewhere, but, as a matter of fact, the solicitor-general came along in the Druid, and the gossip current may have no foundation, so far as any slight was intended by Mr. Lemieux, beyond the rumored lack of good feeling between these two distinguished leaders from Quebec.

The demonstration at Montreal was wonderful, but there was more done here in the way of expenditure and management, and it was, therefore, less significant than the outpouring at Quebec. It is claimed that 100,000 people were upon the streets. This is hard to verify. There were 15,000 at Jacques Cartier Market and the spaces about the city hall, and fully 10,000 at Dominion-square. As a rule, the line of march was flanked by large crowds of people.

At Montreal, however, the Dominion, provincial and municipal governments had expended money lavishly.

Ottawa fell 'way behind. Of course, there Sir Wilfrid Laurier is an old story. Then, again, it was a miserable, rainy afternoon.

And what does it all mean? It means unmistakably that Sir Wilfrid Laurier still has the Province of George H. Broadhurst, The World says to them:

 Here's to the girls who lose! The touchstone of true worth is not success;
 There is a higher test—The fate may darkly frown, onward to press,
 And bravely do one's best.
 Here's to the girls who lose! It is the vanquished's praises that we sing,
 And this the toast we choose: "A hard-fought failure is a noble thing—
 Here's luck to those who lose."

of Quebec in the hollow of his hand. This was seen no less plainly at Sorel and Three Rivers than at the City of Quebec.

How far was enthusiasm artificially stimulated? Brass bands, sky-rockets, parades, and the like, undoubtedly bring people together and generate a certain enthusiasm. President Roosevelt, for example, if he visited Canada, would no doubt be accorded a big reception. But, after all is said and done, there was everywhere manifested an unmistakable pride in and affection for Sir Wilfrid Laurier. Discount and disguise it as we may, the Canadian people look upon Sir Wilfrid Laurier differently than upon any other man in Canada.

Here is one test: Suppose the Empress had gone down and the premier had been lost, would there not have been universal grief, a feeling of personal affliction in every home in Canada? We were, all of us, proud to have our country represented by him when the nations of the empire assembled in London. We, all of us, had a comfortable feeling, 'way down in our hearts, that Canada led, even tho our feeling might be voiced in the refrain:

"I don't know where I'm going,
 But I know I'm on the way."

Among other features of the reception were courtesies extended to members of the press by Postmaster-General Lemieux, Mr. Templeman, the acting minister of marine, and Hon. Jacques Bureau, who had the great task of organizing the whole demonstration.

The British journalists, by the way, arrived with Sir Wilfrid, and were looked after by the ever-youthful George Ham of the C. P. R. They were taken up the river from Quebec to see the famous Quebec bridge, but slowly approaching completion.

To sum up, Sir Wilfrid Laurier has returned with new strength and vigor. It is no secret that he intends to reorganize his cabinet, and then to bend his energies to bringing about the "all red line" and the building of the Georgian Bay Canal. His friends think it is not impossible that, like Sir John A. Macdonald, he will die premier of Canada.

And after him, the deluge!

MANY SAVED FROM DEATH BY EXPLODING BOILERS

Freak of Providence in the Wreck of the Steamer Columbia.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 23.—The steamer Pomona arrived in San Francisco from Eureka to-day with one of the surviving passengers of the wrecked vessel Columbia, and the 32 members of the Columbia's crew, who were saved out of her total complement of 69. The passenger is Miss A. Leidel of this city. There were 107 survivors landed at Eureka yesterday.

Just before the Columbia went down Miss Leidel said Captain Doran tied down the whistlecord, and, throwing his hands up, cried: "Good-by, God bless you!" That so many escaped death when the Columbia sank is accredited, strange to say, to the fact that the explosion of the boilers when the steamer was sinking counteracted the tremendous suction and saved many from being drawn into the vortex and down with the wreckage. The back wave from the sinking steamer threw many who were swimming for their lives back from the point of danger and gave them a chance to escape. Not a few of the passengers on board the Columbia were teachers and their friends, who had been attending the National Educational Association in Los Angeles.

UNPROTECTED CROSSING.

Cause of the Railway Fatality at Ingersoll, July 23.

INGERSOLL, July 23.—(Special.)—The death of Win. McIntyre, the young Scotchman struck by a G.T.R. freight train Saturday night, according to the verdict returned by the coroner's jury, was due to the unprotected state of the Thames-street crossing, and they believed that the company is culpable.

The recommendation was made that the council take the matter of better protection at this crossing before the railway commission with a view to having it protected by gates and a day and night watchman.

TROOPS FIRE ON STRIKERS.

MOSCOW, July 23.—The strike of the men employed in the cotton mills of the Sava Morosoff Co., situated at Orlikovozne in Vladimir Province, has assumed dangerous proportions. Over 40,000 men are out. The movement is accompanied by violent political agitation. Troops were summoned, and had to fire before the 'crowds would disperse.

Tunnel in the Alps.

VIENNA, July 23.—The work of piercing the five and a half mile tunnel thru the Tauern Mountains in Tyrol has just been completed. The work has occupied six years, and it is the last important work in the completion of the Alpine railways.

SHOULD WELCOME ALL HARDIE TELLS LEAGUE

Visits Hospice on Front Street and Addresses Strikers at Labor Temple.

J. Keir Hardie, M.P., the British Labor leader, visited the British Welcome League and the Labor Temple yesterday. He delivered an address at the Temple and earnestly inquired into the work of the Welcome League. "Is there any such place for Danes and other nationalities?" he asked, where it will not be necessary for workers to strike. If you desire, or hope, to obtain any success in the political life of this country you are bound to be united or you will fail."

At the Labor Temple Mr. Hardie addressed the strikers—the plumbers, machinists, stonemasons and electrical workers. "I am a trades unionist, because it is a strong protective organization," he said, "and I am a socialist because socialism stands for a state of society where it will not be necessary for workers to strike. If you desire, or hope, to obtain any success in the political life of this country you are bound to be united or you will fail."

STRUCK BY ENGINE.

W. H. Collins May Die as Result of Injuries Received. W. H. Collins, 77 years of age, 102 Victor-avenue, was struck by G.T.R. yard engine No. 23 at the Carlaw-avenue subway yesterday noon. He is probably fatally injured, his skull being fractured and several ribs broken. An operation was performed at the General Hospital at the time of the accident.

At the time of the accident the old man was taking a lunch to his son, John Collins, who has charge of the crossing, and was just climbing the bank at the track when the engine swung round a curve, striking him on the side of the head.

Quebec Merchants Annoyed at Strike-breaking Scheme. QUEBEC, July 23.—Owing to the C. P. R.'s decision to bring Quebec ocean freight to Montreal and ship it back by rail on account of the dock laborers' demands the merchants here propose to hold a meeting to arrange for boycott of C.P.R.

Keep the Ostriches and Goats. CAPE TOWN, July 23.—In the house of assembly during a debate on a bill to prohibit the export of ostriches, J. T. Molloy suggested that the prohibition be extended to Angora goats, because of the efforts being made to introduce them into the United States.

Through Steamers Meet C.P.R. Trains at Bala.

C.P.R. express trains leaving Toronto at 2:30 a.m. (sleeper open at 9 o'clock) and 11:30 a.m. are now met at Bala by Muskoka Navigation Company steamers, which run through to Beauport, Port Carling, Windsor, Royal Muskoka and other resorts without change. To all of these points the C. P. R. route makes splendid time, second to none from Toronto.

Personal. V. D. Gagne of the agricultural department, Ottawa, who has been spending his vacation in town, leaves for the capital to-day.

FREE TO MEN UNTIL CURED.

With good vigorous health every-thing is possible—wealth, happiness, success. Without it there is only failure. Electricity furnishes all that goes to build up a strong, hale, confident, successful man—from the blood, vim and fire for the nerves and brain strength for the muscles, good digestion. It does all that medicines do, as well as what they fail to do. In my forty years' success I have proven this to the thousands of wrecks I have restored after other treatments failed. To convince every sufferer from debility, varicocele, loss of power, rheumatism, lame back, etc., I give my famous Electric Belt absolutely Free Until Cured not asking a penny in advance or on deposit. You only pay price of belt when cured, and in many cases as low as $5. or for cash full wholesale discount. Forty years' continuous success has brought forth many imitators. Beware of them. You can try the original, the standard of the world, free until cured, then pay for it. Call or send for one to-day, also my illustrated book, giving full information free, sealed, by mail.

SITARAH INQUEST OPENED.

Engines Were in Good Shape According to Owner Jarvis. Three witnesses were examined at the adjourned sitting of the Sitarah explosion inquest at the city hall. The light was cast on the accident by the evidence heard. The inquest was adjourned to July 31, at the city hall. Jacob Joranson told of putting 55 gallons of gasoline in the supply tank of the boat. As to what transpired after the explosion his recollection was hazy.

Charles Backstrom, deckhand, whose examination and replacing them immediately before the explosion. Aemelius Jarvis, owner of the boat, told of her purchase, and swore that her engines were in good shape, having been examined on May 23rd last. The witnesses could cast any light on the cause of the explosion.

It appeared that Nels Olson, one of the injured, is not a qualified lawyer. The law did not require him to be so qualified.

Miss McGregor Tells How She Worked for the Prize.

Young Lady Who Headed the Poll by a Remarkably Large Vote.

Miss McGregor was found at 236 St. Clarens-avenue, in the old homestead, where she was born, and where, with her family, she still resides. She is of Scotch descent, and takes a practical, business-like view of things, aiming to make even her pleasures yield something to utility. There was no staidness, however, in her reception of the news of her success. She was honestly delighted, and said she had been as well pleased, though the idea of the ocean voyage seemed somewhat disturbing to the quiet house-maker.

"I shouldn't say it before her, but she is the best girl we ever raised," was her mother's tribute to her happy daughter. Miss McGregor is one of a family of seven and comes of good old stock. Her uncle and father did business as ropemakers with James & Co., away back in days when they traded as A. & D. McGregor. Miss McGregor has been with the Robert Simpson Company since before the big fire of 1896, and has met with great success in her special department. She takes pride in her skill as a mantle expert, and looks forward to the practical value of the trip to London in the experience she may gain in the great costume houses of Vanity Fair.

"It seemed as if it was planned out for me," she remarked. "I refused to consider the trip to the St. Louis Fair, and said at the time if there was one for the old country it would be worth while. One of the girls reminded me of that and pleaded with me for half a day to go in for it. I entered on the third day and got third place on the first list afterward. It was six times first and three times second. Then I dropped to sixth. I didn't ask them for help, but I let my friends consider that I wanted assistance.

"I canvassed myself and had no paid assistance. One ardent friend assisted me greatly. Friends came out after I came home at night. Sometimes I hardly knew how to contain myself. Oh, my! but I consider her hot chase. Friends came forward in a great army, and I must thank them all. 'No, the store did not help before the last day. Monday the coupons came in like hail. Honestly, I could not attend to them. Friends came forward in a great way. I had over a million votes on Monday alone. Most of them were from the suburbs. More than that they were for new subscribers from Quebec to Calgary. 'That's where I gained the ground. I felt confident in The World, and you don't have to read it half an hour to know what you want to know. I got a lot of help, too. One of them said the other day: 'I didn't use to think much of Billy Maclean, but I'm beginning to come round to him. He's doing a lot for the farmers.'

"Canvassing is a business. If you get about it half undressed, you get hold of them. I had not an unpleasant thing in connection with the work. See London and Live. The World reporter called on Miss Vandemark. 'Well, I have good news for you.' 'Am I really going?' she demanded. Being assured, she said: 'Well, at last I am about to realize the anticipation of a trip to London. Now that the excitement of the contest is over I commence to feel what it really means, to leave Toronto behind and see all that new world. To me it is the height of recreation. When we leave Montreal and sail down the beautiful St. Lawrence and reach the great Atlantic Ocean it will be a new experience for me, which I will thoroughly enjoy. When we land in England how much interest I will take in the many different sights I shall see. To feel oneself in a far-away country now strikes me as a very interesting thing. He's doing a lot for the farmers. 'I have heard so much of the beautiful scenery of England and the wonderful City of London that I would like a trip to London. They say 'See London and die,' but I want to see it and live a long time to enjoy that satisfaction.

"To live in one of those beautiful hotels, see the Zoological Gardens, Crystal Palace, Madame Tussaud's Wax Works, take a ride on a 'pony bus' or 'tuppenny tube' are experiences which only London can give, and to see the helms of the King and Queen. 'I wonder what their palaces are like? 'Then for a trip across the English Channel to France and to taste the life of Paris are all experiences which I am glad I was fortunate enough to succeed in attaining. 'The World deserves no end of praise for its enterprise. We have all had to work extremely hard, and it has

HOME-MADE MEDICINE

Said to Relieve Kidney Trouble and Rheumatism.

One ounce Fluid Extract Sarsaparilla. One ounce Compound Sassafras. Four ounces Compound Syrup Sarsaparilla. Mixed and taken in teaspoonful doses after meals and at bed time, is stated by a prominent physician to give most excellent results in kidney or urinary affections, and also in rheumatism and sciatica. The mixture opens the clogged pores of the kidneys, thus assisting them in their work of filtering all waste and poisonous matter from the blood, and expels the same through the urine. To allow this poisonous matter to remain in the system causes uric acid, and muscle and untold misery known as rheumatism. The mixture is composed of harmless vegetable ingredients which can be purchased at any good drug store, and mixed at home.

Anyone suffering from any of these afflictions will no doubt be pleased to learn of so simple and highly recommended remedy. Persons interested in what they traded as A. & D. McGregor. Whitby Girl is First

In Province at Large.

Miss M. Allin Says Town Folk Will Be Pleased With Winning Premier Honors.

A remarkable feature of the Trip to London Contest is the fact that two of the successful candidates in District No. 2, the Province of Ontario at large, are residents of Ontario County—Miss Allin of Whitby and Miss Richardson of Cayuga. These towns are but four or five miles apart and the work of the two representatives of the county just closed was a very interesting one. Asked to explain what methods she adopted to bring her to the top of the list, Miss Allin said she had a great desire to go to London and when I first read in The World about this contest I determined that I would be one of the party. Mr. James Routledge nominated me and I went to work at once. I first made up a list of all my friends and I wrote many, many letters. To many of these I received most gratifying replies. In fact, I received more telegrams and telephone messages than I could read. I received many letters for me and that I would be well up in the list.

"At first I did not take the trip seriously. Then some friends were interested in my going, and I stepped into the Temple Building and my nominator, Mr. Bennett, helped me splendidly. But for him I would never have managed it. At first the spirit of competition urged me on more than the trip, but towards the end I began to think more of the trip. It seemed far off at first. I started to kiss babies like the alderman's wife, and my friends certainly worked hard for me. Gives Credit to Friends. Miss M. E. Richardson was seen in the C. O. F. office, Manning Chambers, London, where she was informed. 'All day I have been waiting for some word about the contest, and I could learn nothing. I felt that if hard work accomplished anything I should at least like to see that ancient fane. 'At first I did not take the trip seriously. Then some friends were interested in my going, and I stepped into the Temple Building and my nominator, Mr. Bennett, helped me splendidly. But for him I would never have managed it. At first the spirit of competition urged me on more than the trip, but towards the end I began to think more of the trip. It seemed far off at first. I started to kiss babies like the alderman's wife, and my friends certainly worked hard for me. Gives Credit to Friends.

Miss M. E. Richardson was seen in the C. O. F. office, Manning Chambers, London, where she was informed. 'All day I have been waiting for some word about the contest, and I could learn nothing.
