Our Deep-Sea Fisheries A Wiser Policy To decide to contribute a ten-million dollar Dreadnought or two might easily be done. But the far wiser line was adopted when, as a matter of fixed policy Canada was committed to a Canadian navy for the defence of Canadian interests, and available, as the Canadian militia would be, in the service of the Empire. That is the policy for Canada. Self-defence is the first obligation. And that self-defence is made doubly effective when it is fitted in intelligently and wisely with the larger plans of Imperial defence being worked out by the British Admiralty. Canada neither plays a lone hand nor pays toll, but as a partner in a great world-empire desires to bear her fair share of the Imperial burdens and responsibilities. And this policy is meeting with the approval of the best informed British opinion.---Toronto Globe.

LOCAL AND SPECIAL

Schr. Mattie J. Alles arrived Tuesday to load pulp for Norwalk, Conn.

Time table of steamer Viking from June to September received too late for this issue will appear next week.

Large schools of pollock are at Whirlwind Point on the Canadian side of the water. They are dipping and spearing them in large quantities.

The improvements made in school building and surroundings at Leland make it one of the picturesque spots of the county. Teachers and scholars are deeply interested in their work, and the results are most satisfactory to trustees and parents.

Shirtwaists, skirts, undershirts, white skirts and hose in endless variety at J. S. Clark's. Watch his ad. next week.

The officials of the highway board appointed for the parish of St. George--B. Dick, Secty. The parish is divided into six divisions, designated as A, B, C, D, E, F, and a commissioner appointed for each district, viz: Isaac Dick, Vaughan Condie, Robert White, Wm. J. Maxwell, Hugh Goss and Henry Gillmor. Supervisors are also appointed to carry out certain provisions of the act. The highway board of the parish of Bonfield elected A. B. Haykin--Chairman. J. J. Justason--Secty. George F. Past, Percy Trainor, Walter Boyd, Matthew Harding and Owen Riordan, Commissioners.

Mrs. J. D. Williamson was given a pleasant surprise on Tuesday evening, when the members of the junior choir met at her home, and presented her with a beautiful parlor lamp. These young people deserve much credit for the manner in which they are using their musical talents. The earnest wish of their leader is that, as their voices so sweetly blend in harmony from time to time, they may all without exception learn to sing the new song. "Song that floweth ever Sweeter every day, Song whose echoes never, Never die away."

Pain anywhere stopped in 20 minutes sure with one of Dr. Shipon's Pink Pain Tablets. The formula is on the 25 cent box. Ask your Doctor or Druggist about this formula! Stops womanly pains, headache, pains anywhere. Write Dr. Shipon, Racine, Wis. for free trial to prove value.

DEER ISLAND

(Too late for last issue)

Miss Nellie English and Miss Annie Gowan, returned home last week, to spend the 24th, with their parents.

Richard English has gone to St. John, after lumber for his summer residence which will soon be erected. ed Mitchell arrived home from Clay lake Monday, with a fine string of the speckled beauties.

Schooner Jack, owned by Hazen Stuart arrived in port Wednesday with a load of oats and potatoes. They were not long being disposed of, as they are very scarce on the Island.

Walter Stuart is busily engaged building his new weir the "Cradle" which is thought by all to be a killer.

Kenneth Stuart is erecting a new summer cottage at Butler's Point.

George English, spent Sunday with friends in Stuart Town.

Alver L. Stuart while trouting in Clay lake last week, fell over backwards into the water, and was pluckily rescued by Steadman Fountain.

In the dense fog last week, Matthew Mitchell got lost and rowed for a long while before he found the land.

THE TREATY OF GHENT

The Close of the Last War Between Great Britain and United States

It will soon be one hundred years since the treaty of Ghent brought to a close the last war--and the last for all time, let it be hoped--between Great Britain and the United States. Never since that time has the patriotism of the Canadian people been roused and their resources been drawn upon by the defence of their soil against invaders. True, the peace of the country was disturbed from within during the uprisings of 1837-38, and the frontier was to some extent harassed during the Fenian raids of 1866 and 1870 but these occurrences were not of sufficient magnitude to deserve the name of war, which in its true and awful sense the people of this country have not known for almost a century. And yet that century did not pass without its dangers of conflict. On several occasions they loomed dark and threatening upon the horizon, and were dispelled only because a wise and humane diplomacy proved stronger than the spirit of strife--strong enough to hold the dogs of war in leash and adjust the intrajudicial differences without an appeal to the stern and illogical arbitration of force.

On four occasions in particular did dangers of war with our neighbors darken the horizon of the Canadian people during the past one hundred years. The first occurred in 1837, and it grew out of the destruction of the steamer "Caroline" the vessel, it will be remembered, employed by the so-called "patriots" in fact, were evasive Canadians filibustering Americans in possession of Navy Island in the Niagara River, and from which the motley crew with Wm. Lyon Mackenzie among them, threatened the peace of the Canadian frontier. Colonel MacZab, a prominent little later as Sir Allan, sent a small force across the river, and after a short but sharp fight captured the steamer, cut her out from her moorings on the New York shore, towed her out into the swift current, set her on fire and left her to be swept to destruction over the Falls. Among the five or six killed in the affray was Amos Duffee whose body was found on American territory, and a British subject named Alexander McLeod was arrested on the charge of murder. By avowing the destruction of the "Caroline," the British Government assumed international responsibility for all that had been done, claiming that Great Britain and not the men engaged in the act was answerable. Britain, therefore, demanded the release of McLeod. The demand was refused, and while the long drawn-out negotiations were being carried on McLeod in October, 1841, was put on trial at Utica, N. Y., and acquitted. It was pretty clearly established that McLeod was a party to the cutting out of the "Caroline," and the verdict was therefore contrary to the evidence, but it was a fortunate one for the peace of the continent. It cut the Gordian knot of international complication, and probably prevented a war between Great Britain and the United States.

THE NEW BRUNSWICK FRONTIER PROBLEM While the delicate international complications created by the "Caroline" affair were unresolved, and the McLeod case pending, the New Brunswick frontier became the scene of a number of hostile acts so serious and threatening as to acquire throughout the Maritime Provinces the name of the "Aroostook War." The boundary between Maine and New Brunswick had not yet been fixed, and Maine claimed a big and exceedingly valuable slice of the western forest area of her Canadian neighbor, or more correctly her British neighbor, for that was long before Confederation, and New Brunswick was a separate colony. While the ruffians who followed in the wake of Mackenzie's uprising were threatening the frontier of Upper Canada from Ogdensburg, Buffalo and Detroit, a gang of timber thieves, in defiance of the laws of both Maine and New Brunswick invaded and disputed territory and cut much valuable timber. The Governor of Maine sent a Sheriff and posse to drive them off and seize their logs, and at the news of this a band of New Brunswick lumbermen gathered to repel the men from Maine. A fight took place in the forest in winter, when one of the Maine leaders, a land agent named McIntyre, was made prisoner and carried to Fredericton, in retaliation the men from Maine seized a man named McLaughlin, the New Brunswick warden of the disputed territory, and carried him captive to Augusta. Then came on quickly the danger of war. Maine sent eighteen hundred militiamen into the Aroostook district and Sir John Harvey, the Governor of New Brunswick, sent up two regiments of the line with artillery and some volunteers from the St. John district. Upper and Lower Canada sent to the sister colony sympathy and offers of aid, and Nova Scotia voted all her militia and £100,000 to aid New Brunswick in her quarrel. Strange to relate, the London Times advocated not only the seceding to the Americans' claim, but that they are given all of New Brunswick west of the St. John river. About all the hot-heads in the United States, clamored for war, but amid the uproar President Van Buren was calm and reasonable. He sent General Winfield Scott to the scene, Scott and Sir John Harvey had opposed each other at Lundy's Lane and Stony Creek in the War of 1812-14, and each respected the other. They soon came to an agreement under which a temporary joint occupation of the disputed territory was arranged, and the "Aroostook war" came to a close. Baring (afterwards Lord Ashburton), and Daniel Webster settled the boundary dispute. Of twelve thousand square miles of territory claimed by Maine and New Brunswick ten thousand were given to the latter five thousand. It was a bitter pill for New Brunswick to swallow. When the Ashburton treaty went before the United States Senate for ratification, it was stated that opposition to the treaty was not allayed until behind closed doors. Webster produced a map which he had by him all through the conference, but which he had kept carefully from the eyes of the British Commissioner, showing the boundary to be exactly that claimed by New Brunswick. If that is correct Webster's trickery and Ashburton's stupidity enabled Maine to rob New Brunswick of seven thousand square miles of timber lands. At any rate, the United States Senate hastily accepted the bargain, and ratified the treaty.

The story of the secret map has recently been denied. Whatever may be the truth of the matter one thing is certain--those forests along the Aroostook nearly caused war between Great Britain and the United States, just seven years ago.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven Catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from ten drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials. Address: F. J. CHENEY & CO., Toledo, Ohio.

H. W. Lucy Tells of Budget Night in British Commons

Not since Sir William Harcourt rose to expound his financial scheme embodying the principle of Death Duties has there been a Budget of such momentous interest as that unfolded by Mr. Lloyd-George. Even at ordinary times the Budget holds the field in respect of the interest excited, not only within the House, but outside its walls. The introduction of big bills, or the incidence of a Ministerial crisis, crowds the benches and fills the side galleries. More fully than these, and more certainly; the Budget packs the Chamber. In one way or other, directly or indirectly, it comes home to every man, who is richer or poorer, according as taxes are put on, taken off, increased, or reduced.

THE FOREIGN MINISTERS

Amongst other things, Mr. Lloyd George's first Budget was memorable by reason of the empty space yawning behind the double row of Front Benches, crowded by Peers, and, in their section partly filled by Foreign Ministers. From time immemorial the Stranger's Galleries packed on Budget night from lowest line of benches to topmost range, completed the aspect of intense human interest the occasion evoked. On Thursday they were empty, as they have remained since the edict of expulsion followed on the organized brawling of the Suffragettes. Strong pressure was put upon the Speaker to remove the ban in time for the public to enjoy their ancient privilege on Budget night. Whilst yielding to the extent of shortening the period of exile Mr. Lowther was not to be unduly hurried. Ministerial attempts at legislation on the subject having ludicrously failed, he taking in his own hands a business which ex officio rests with them, resolved to reopen the Galleries on the reassembling of the House for Wednesday. On further consideration he saw his way to grant the boon as early as Monday week.

FUNDAMENTAL CHANGE

Within the memory of some who still sit in the House of Commons a fundamental change has come over the method and manner of a Budget speech. Forty years ago Mr. Gladstone, revealing in the opportunity, set the fashion of prodigiously lengthy exposition, adorned with wreaths of eloquence, sparkling with gems of quotation from the ancients, happy poets who never heard of the Income Tax. On one historic he kept the House enraptured for a period of five years and a half. Considering how, as Lord Morley records in his Life, he in Cabinet Council made preliminary discourse on the subject for the full space of three hours, that was not excessive. Mr. Lowe was the only Chancellor of the Exchequer of modern times who equalled Mr. Gladstone in the felicity and point of classical quotations. It will be remembered that in one case the passion proved fatal. There is no doubt that the fancy of decking matchboxes with the motto "Ex luce lucellum" had considerable effect in determining him to load his Budget with a tax that nearly brought a powerful Government to grief, a fate averted only by sacrifice of the Budget.

SIR WILLIAM HARCOURT

Like his old chief, Sir William Harcourt delighted in the opportunity for prolonged speech provided by the Budget. He also imitated him in the matter of classical quotations, superadding a few jests that lightened the performance. Mr. Gladstone rarely jested, never on Budget night, an occasion much too serious for the display of levity, however well-intentioned. Sir Michael Hicks-Beach, in his ordinary contributions to Parliamentary debate, was almost equally punctilious in the habits of eschewing jocularity. But on Budget night, having absolute command of a thorough audience hungering and thirsting for arrival at the stage when they would learn the secret of the Budget he condescended to dally with a joke. One of his most successful had something to do with the consumption of rum. I am ashamed to say I forgot its point, but remember its succeeding success, possibly in part owing to the surprise occasioned by the ebullition from so unexpected a quarter.

When Mr. Asquith was Chancellor of the Exchequer he, disregarding tradition, made the Budget speech a plain businesslike statement, equally devoid of exordium and peroration. This is a style that exactly suits the capacity and custom of Mr. Lloyd-George, and was on Thursday night enforced upon him by the weight of a great deficit.

BRONCHITIS CURED NOTICE

For fifteen years Mr. John Pearson, who was principal of Melvern Square High School, is convincing evidence of the exceptional curative powers possessed by Catarrhazone. "For fifteen years," writes Mr. Pearson, "I suffered constantly from Bronchitis and Throat Irritation. Doctors failed to relieve but Catarrhazone cured quickly."

The remarkable recovery of Mr. Pearson, who was principal of Melvern Square High School, is convincing evidence of the exceptional curative powers possessed by Catarrhazone. "For fifteen years," writes Mr. Pearson, "I suffered constantly from Bronchitis and Throat Irritation. Doctors failed to relieve but Catarrhazone cured quickly."

"For months I doctored with different physicians and was not benefited. My trouble grew more severe and extended to the lungs, and I feared I would end in decline. "Provisionally I was advised to use Cataarhazone, and I believe it really saved my life. Its immediate effect was to relieve the throat trouble sufficiently to give me perfect ease in speaking. Within one short week all symptoms of Bronchitis had disappeared. I can fervently recommend Cataarhazone. I know it has no equal as a sure and speedy cure for throat trouble and bronchitis."

Every air cell and air passage, all parts of the breathing organs are reached and breathe by the antiseptic vapor of Cataarhazone. It soothes and heals the inflamed mucous surfaces, stops the cough, clears the nose and throat, and drives every symptom of bronchitis right out of the system.

To purify the blood of all poisons, and to build up the system, Ferrozone Tablets, which are included in every Cataarhazone outfit, are very highly recommended. This local and constitutional treatment in Bronchitis, Catarrh and Consumption cannot be equalled.

Cataarhazone is endorsed by physicians and ministers and thousands it has cured. Two months treatment costs $1. Small size, 50 cts. Sold by all Druggists, or N. C. Polson, Kingston, Ont.

THE LATE GEORGE MEREDITH

George Meredith, whose death occurred recently at the age of 81, follows to the grave his loyal friend and admiring critic, Algernon Charles Swinburne. The latter was the last of the great Victorian poets; Meredith, with the single exception of Thomas Hardy, was the last of the important novelists of the Victorian era. He was a poet, of course as well as a novelist, Meredith the great psychologist of English fiction. He was a painter of portraits rather than a creator of character. Behind these portraits, as a background, he saw psychologist problems in the abstract rather than in the concrete, in their relations to society rather than to the individual. His acute intellect centred upon the problems of responsibility, moral and social, and he demanded the same attention for flaws in general structure of modern society that earlier writers, like Dickens and Charles Reade, demanded for specific abuses. It is natural, therefore, that his influence should, in his own day, have been regarded by many as subversive, though it is less clear that this is true in a social than in an artistic sense. He overcharged the novel as a form of art, covered his canvass with so many fine strokes that often he obscured the larger design, or even neglected to carry this to completion. But his work is never without a seriousness of intention, and a sensitive to beauty through all its range, from physical to moral and spiritual, that make his example as a man devoted to art as a concern of the intellect, one of the noblest in English literature. —Boston Herald.

CIRCUMSTANTIAL EVIDENCE

John F. McIntyre, counsel for the defence in the Hains murder trials and formerly Assistant District Attorney for New York County for twelve years, presenting 716 cases of homicide during that period, including the Kennedy and other famous trials, says:—

"I regard circumstantial evidence as the best kind of evidence, chiefly because it does not admit of perjury. Personally, I have never known of a case of circumstantial evidence in which a man suffered the penalty for a crime of which he was afterward proved to have been innocent.

"Persons that deny circumstantial evidence do not understand it; they do not know what constitutes circumstantial evidence. A man stands in the doorway and sees me holding a revolver. It is discharged and you fall dead. Ninety-nine out of a hundred men would say that the testimony of the man in the doorway would be direct evidence. On the contrary, it would be circumstantial evidence. He could not have seen the bullet in its flight. The prosecution would have to show that the bullet was of the same calibre as the revolver, the course taken by the bullet, and other circumstances.

"If a man saw me strike you with a knife that would be direct evidence, but observe the chance for perjury here. A false value would be likely to be attached to his testimony and he might be lying. Circumstantially evidence deals with the tangible facts surrounding an act. And facts are not so apt to lie as individuals. The accused is amply protected in cases of circumstantial evidence by the law, which says that when the circumstances point equally to guilt and to innocence the verdict must be for acquittal. There must be no shade of a chance for another hypothesis than that of guilt."

BY THE WAY

Hope June will do better.

Summer, with a cold wave in her train.

"Heaven is as near by water as by land."

What is required is a sincere desire for the public good, sprinkled with common sense.

A British steamer flying the Stars and Stripes at her fore peak, in St. John harbor, a few days ago caused some comment.—E.

A K. of P. procession from St. Stephen was held up in Calais a few days ago for carrying the Union Jack. Troublesome times these.

The annual surveys and measuring by engineers, have commenced at Letang. If we can find out what it all means, we will be glad to give the information to our readers.

It is hard sometimes to make officers of the law understand that they are not to lord it over people after the manner of despots. They sometimes have an exaggerated idea of their authority.

It takes one hour to know a Frenchman, one month to know a German, almost a lifetime to know an Englishman.—well.—Corriere, Rome.

"I am so happy," she said. "Did your ancestors have a family tree, Mr. Maguire?" "Family tree, is it, ma'am? One of me ancestors controlled the entire privilege of the Garden of Eden."—Tit-Bits.

There is no room on earth for us; therefore, let's take to the sky in flying machines. Invention is doing its best to provide this sky ship. Be patient. Science is on the creature's trail.

The beauty and advantages of this town as a summer resort might be prominently brought before the people of other places by a system of advertising authorized, or carried on by the Mayor and Council. Many towns in Maine are doing this, and the results have been most gratifying.

The cost of improving the streets should not impose burdens which entail severe and restrictive economy, in other directions, in order to keep within the income the town has at its command. Cut the coat by the size of the cloth. The town has not an overflowing purse from which to draw money needed for reckless outgoes.

As Jones wended his uncertain way "Whoever heard of a drunken man reading a book?"

Later Mrs. Jones heard a noise in the library. "What in the world are you doing in there?" she asked. "Reading, my dear," Jones replied cheerfully. "You old idiot!" she said scornfully, as she looked in at the library door. "shut up that valve and come to bed." —Success Magazine.

An illuminating incident occurred in a New York court room when an Italian youth, the brother of the defendant, left the room after testifying against the man who has been convicted of murder. As he was leaving the court room, somebody whispered in his ear: "You will not live the day out: I will kill you tonight." And the man who made the threat has not been caught. It is this sort of thing which too often paralyzes the attempt to convict. The threatener should be caught and punished.—Boston Advertiser.

Reflections on the Dandelion

The dandelion now observe, The freshest plant of all, It has the most exalted nerve, The most colossal gall, "Get all you can," so runs its creed, "And give a blame sight less; These are the simple rules that lead To glittering success."

When other flowers have closed their eyes, The dandelion labors, And everlastingly it tries To overcome its neighbors. The bluegrass and the clover flee Before its competition; It has no social sympathy To check its fierce ambition.

Although its harm is something great Its worthlessness sublime, It gets a lot of real estate By rooting all the time. So nerve and front and diligence Will surely take us far, It makes no special difference How no account we are. —Newark, (N. Y.) Evening News.

Warm weather is required to make progress in farming.

The heavy loads of lumber being hauled from the mill to the public wharf for shipment, resembles scenes of the old lumber days.

Philo Hanson who has a large flock of pure bred plymouth rock hens, last week filled an order for eggs to be shipped to Wisconsin.

The Exchange Hotel was re-opened this week by Mr. and Mrs. Edmund Holt. This hotel is in good shape and should get a good share of public patronage.—Beacon.

A. C. Gilmor will make extensive repairs to his coal wharf this season. When completed, the coal can be handled to much better advantage than in the past.

The motor boat belonging to Mr. H. R. Lawrence is a great sea boat. With the gallant commander at the wheel she demonstrated her sea going qualities May 24th, being the only boat of the fleet to "venture out."

Frauley Bros. are showing a line of summer footwear that can rarely be found in towns of this size. They have a line that covers practically the entire field of footwear from the cheaper grades to the finest and most expensive.

L. D. Clark, of the firm of L. D. Clark & Sons, one of the largest canners of sardines in the world, died at his home in Eastport, Wednesday, of cancer. Deceased was born in Lubec seventy years ago. He is survived by a wife, four sons and two daughters.

Edna Pendlebury, the eleven year old daughter of Thomas Pendlebury, St. Andrews, died on May 25th, from burns received Monday. With other children she had been setting off firecrackers. While thus engaged her clothing caught fire and she was terribly burned about the body.

Greetings is informed that the construction of the fish way will commence as soon as the water is low enough to allow the work to go on. The work should have been done last year, but was allowed to go over. The government has decided that the whole work must be completed this season.

While not quite so plentiful as they were during the first of the month, sardine herring continue coming to the factories in quantities each day sufficient to keep most of them busy the greater part of the time. The present spring run of fish has been finer in quality and of longer duration than formerly, and manufacturers and employes alike have been able to reap considerable benefit from same.—Eastport Sentinel.

A few days ago, a rat, full of fatal curiosity, ventured into a store, in town, where cheese and food stuffs are kept, and where the smell is mighty enticing to a wandering hungry rodent. A dog, keen and quick, noticed the intruder, and with a bark and a jump interested the clerks. Broom handles and pitch forks soon dislodged the old grey fellow, from behind a flour barrel—an open door offered the only chance of escape, away went Mr. Rat, followed by dog, boy with a club, clerk with meat axe and boss with a pen behind his ear. The attacking party were joined by a government official. The object of all the commotion took refuge in a tree and looked down on the barking dog and band of hunters. Up the tree, with the ability of a cat, went the government man, with a fishing pole, handled with so much skill that the swaying rat came down on the head of his nearest foe.—The dog did the rest. It was a mighty hunt, the fishing pole was broken, the line fence torn down, the boy scratched his face, the clerk tore his pants, the boss lost his pen and the rat died before he had a chance to squeal. The officer is being complimented on all sides for his bravery in climbing the tree in face of great danger.

Owing to the low run of tides the scow, owned by H. McGrattan & Sons, and loaded with granite, has been "nipped on" at Bocabee. It is expected it will float during this week.

At the session of the probate Court, held in St. Stephen Monday a commission was issued for the proof of the will of Joseph Meating late of St. George, who died at Morrill, Texas, after having made his will there. George J. Clark, K. C. proctor.

The Pulp and Paper Co. sent a large number of men up river last week to assist in getting their drive over "long rips". The company have five or six million feet of lumber in the river and the rapid fall of the water threatens to hang the drive up.

Sayre was taken to Port Hood for trial and at the last sitting of the supreme court he was discharged. Yesterday Sayre entered action for damages for false arrest and imprisonment and Kenen was arrested here last evening on the Maritime. On providing bonds to appear he was released. The trial may be on the docket in June, but owing to the shortness of time will not likely be tried before next October.—August News Sentinel.

The Man a Girl Likes

You couldn't get a girl to confess it, but the man she most admires is often—
He whose ideas never coincide with her own.
He who never says that some other girl looks pretty.
He who always appears interested when she airs her little tribulations.
He who does not overlook a slight or forgive a hasty word too quickly.

The New Act
Highway Board

The secretary-treasurer of the highway board shall call a meeting of said board before the 20th day of May for organization and election of chairman.
The board shall, upon receipt of the assessment list as provided for by section 103 of the highway act, 1908, proceed divided lists, and deliver the same to the tax for the present year, shall proceed with the same forthwith by assisting all resident rate payers of the county liable according to Section 8 of the highway act, 1908, and by making out the list as required by section 103 of said act, and deliver the same to the highway board of the parish.

The assessors shall also prepare a road tax assessment list of all rate payers non-the surveyors when and where to begin work in such sub-district.

The commissioners shall, after receiving surveyor's returns, as required by section 20, proceed to collect any taxes which remain unpaid, and when collected, pay them over to the board;

Peculiar Weakness in Women

Many women suffer untold truth from nervous debility arising from disorders of the feminine organs. Day by day they grow worse. A false sense of modesty prevents them using a good remedy like Ferruzone,--and it would cure them. Lost nerve force is brought back--new vital energy is supplied-- irregularities disappear. Ferruzone does restore weak pain women. For those who suffer and find work hard to bare nothing supplies the health and vitality that Ferruzone so surely brings.
Guaranteed free from alcohol and sure to cure, 50c. at all dealers.

Sounds of the Night

A cat is a sly beast, a resolute beast, and a beast of a musician. To the ordinary Montrealer the serenade from the roof of the coal-shed is as painful an operation in music as the strains of a Chinese orchestra. It has been the incitements of many a time to what the barnstormer called practical applause, as the cabbage slideslipped on his left eye and knocked a hole in the castle wall. The common story of the hotjack which hurtled through air is a fable, but the tomato can or the ginger-ale bottle on the hurled business is a reality when the stars come out and the street lamps begin to wonder whether it is worth while pretending that they cast a glimmer on the scene.

Still, the cat usually escapes with one life at least, and turns up the next evening, like the hero in the play, after a series of adventures that would wear an ordinary man to a bootlace, feeling wonderfully refreshed.

Troubled though he may be with cats, let it be said, in justice, that the noises of the feline species are only some of an extended series to which we are treated between the time of getting out of it. Houses are so built nowadays that you can tell the time by the clock next door, every second of it.

Condemned by Physicians

Unscrupulous dealers often prepare corn remedies with caustics and acids.
Refuse such, and insist on Putnam's Painless Corn Extractor. It's purely vegetable, safe and sure.

The U. S. Tariff

The history of half a century proves that Canada can place no confidence in the United States markets. The policy of Canada is and has been to cultivate British Empire trade, with markets that can be depended upon to the utmost. It is absurd to suppose that either Canada or Britain can be ejected or ousted from Washington by sneers of tariff threats.—Quebec Chronicle

A Household Necessity

Father Morriscy's Liniment Should be in Every Home

Such troubles will come, but there is no need of suffering much from them. Keep a bottle of Father Morriscy's Liniment in the house, use it freely, and the pain has little chance.

Similarly, applied freely to throat and chest it helps "Father Morriscy's No. 10" (Lung Tonic) to quickly break up and drive away a sore throat, cold in the chest, or cough.

Taken all around it is one of the best family liniments in existence. Price 25c per bottle. At your dealer's, or from Father Morriscy Medicine Co., Ltd., Chatham, N.B.

Then, when I saw you with Edith's baby I thought they had made a mistake, that you were married. And what I suffered in those few minutes was worse than all the years. Now I know differently. Is there any chance for me, Elaine?

Just then, looking into her eyes, he saw a light which could mean only one thing, and drawing her to him he exclaimed: My darling, I love you! Will you marry me!

Her answer was; "Jack" dear, of course, you or no one."

Matrimonial Catechism

What is marriage?

Marriage is an institution for the blind

Why do some people never marry

Because they don't believe in divorce.

When a man thinks seriously of marriage, what happens?

He remains single.

Should a man marry a girl for her money?

No. But he should not let her be an old maid because she's rich.

When a girl refers to a "sad courtship" what does she mean?

She means that the man got away.

Is an engagement as good as a marriage?

It's better.

In selecting a husband why does a girl prefer a fat man?

Because a fat man finds it hard to stoop to anything low.

When asking papa, how should a young man act?

He should face manfully, and never give a chance at his back.

When the minister says, "Do you take this woman for better or for worse?" what does he mean?

He means that he can make her do anything she wants to.

When a child is smart and good, to whose family is it due?

To it's mother's.

When a child is bad and stupid, to whose family is it due?

We refuse to answer.

Is it possible for a married man to be a fool without knowing it?

Not if his wife is alive—United Presbyterian.

Road Unkeep

The roads of Ontario cannot be managed on the local improvement plan any longer. They are of too great importance to the general well being to be left to the free will of County Councils. There should be a provincial roads policy, liberally supported by the provincial funds and leaving nothing to the option of local authorities.—Mail & Empire, Toronto.

Jack's Return

"It must be yes or no tonight. Of course, he has a right to it after these five years."

Elaine, looking pale but sweet and wistful, was lying propped up with pillows on the sofa. It was her first day up after a severe illness, and now that she could think again, memories both sweet and bitter crowded through her mind. They took her back to the ball that her father had given her in honor of her 18th birthday five long years ago. How happy she was then! Why shouldn't she be? Only daughter of a wealthy banker, pretty and lovable, admired by many. And the one she cared for, her ideal, "Jack" was to open the ball with her, and probably he would ask her that evening to marry him she had thought since they had been such dear friends pals from childhood and then so much more dear that she had been sure he really loved her. He had just graduated from college, a bright future before him, one who would make a keen business man, being admired and esteemed for high intellect—a chap to care for every pretty girl since few interested him.

And now the same old question, why did he go that evening without a word? It all came back so vividly tonight, though she had lived it over in imagination many and many a time before. First, the ball had been kept waiting until it was shocking to wait any longer, and then she had to open it with Frank Winton, her father's junior partner, whom everybody else considered an ideal match for her. When the waltz was nearly over, there was a stir at the entrance, and her watching eyes discovered "Jack," tall and distinguished, surrounded by a bevy of chattering girls. Intense relief drove away all anger and mortification, so that it was one of her most bewildering "light smiles," as "Jack" called them, that she threw to him around Winton's shoulder as they waltzed by.

It seemed an age till the music stopped, then Mrs. Van Gouver had beckoned them to her seat near the conservatory and insisted on congratulating her in the most loquacious manner possible. Then, as the minutes passed and "Jack" did not come over to her, she looked across to where he had been, and he wasn't there. The rest happened so swiftly—Winton taking her into the conservatory, his proposal, her refusal and promise that they should still be friends, her eagerness to get back to the ballroom where "Jack" must be hunting for her then her sitting out that next dance beside her chaplain in amazed wonderment—the dance that she had saved for "Jack"—and finally Winton's return for what should have been only his first dance. How gay she had been that evening in her bitterness? Since then not a word for five—

Tap, tap, on the door at this point, and there was a visitor—Elaine's dear, dear girl, friend, Edith Somers, with her 4-month-old Baby Warren, to see his sick "auntie." Delightedly, Elaine cuddled the tiny creature to her among the pillows, when Edith, with a mischievous "Now be a good little mother until I come back," ran away on some trivial errand.

Baby cooed and gurgled responsive-ly. And the touch of the soft little hands gave a new impetus to her thoughts. Frank Winton, the true friend and faithful lover for five years noble and good and rich—surely she would do well to accept him, as everyone said. Yet when the sudden ring of the door bell a moment later reached her ears, she sighed and wondered wearily. Oh, that is Frank, I suppose, coming for his answer."

A gentleman to see you," announced the maid.

"Show him up, please," Elaine said, unemotionally. Calmly, too, she listened to the approaching steps, which sounded familiar, yet somehow seemed unlike Frank's; and then, even as the maid repeated his name, she looked up in-graduated from college, a bright future before him, one who would make a keen business man, being admired and esteemed for high intellect—a chap to care for every pretty girl since few interested him.

At this dramatic instance Edith appeared through an opposite door, and spying "Jack's" man forward to greet him delightedly; then, in one breath wanted to know whether he thought Baby looked most like her- self or like husband, Mr. Somers, and didn't he think Elaine looked "too sweet for anything" with Baby nestled there beside her. In another moment both she and Baby hurried away to "meet papa," and they were alone.

"Jack" crossed the room and bent over her. "Elaine, I have come to ask your forgiveness for going away so abruptly," he said. Then he told her how he had been detained by his father the night of her ball to talk over a splendid business proposition, which was to take him to South Africa immediately; how happy he had been in the thought that this would enable him to offer her within six months the kind of a home he wanted her to have if she would accept it, and his intention to ask her that night. On entering the ball-room, however, chagrined at being late yet eager and enthusiastic, he had found her dancing with Frank Winton, to whom, as a lot of chattering girls confided to him, it was expected she would that night announce her engagement. "I wanted to think it all out," he continued, so while waiting to speak to you I wandered into the conservatory. Then you came in, too, with Winton, and I heard him asking you to be his wife. Then I rushed up to the dressing rooms. When I passed out through the hall I saw you again dancing with him, and you looked so happy I thought it must be true. I sailed for South Africa the next morning, and I have been there ever since. It was only two months ago I heard you were free, so I've come home to see if I have a chance. These years past
