HOCKEY MATCH.

Chatham and Home Teams
Put Up Good Game

CAMPBELLTON WINS

After a Hard Fought Game
with Score of Four to Two

The hockey match on Friday, or strictly speaking Saturday morning, between the Chatham team and the Victorias of Campbellton resulted in a victory for the latter after the hardest fought game ever witnessed here.

The game was billed to start at 8 o'clock but the local express on which the Chatham boys were coming did not arrive until 12:30. They pluckily decided to go on the ice immediately and play the game despite their slow and tiresome journey without anything to eat since dinner time, save a light lunch which was brought on board the train for them at Bathurst.

During the long wait until the train arrived the crowd watched the games, hockey, the first one between two teams of young school boys, which afforded considerable amusement. The second game was between the High School Ramblers and a team composed of commercial travellers which resulted in an easy victory for the former, the travellers not travelling as fast as their opponents.

When the train did arrive it did not take the boys very long to line up and this is how they presented themselves.

Play started a little tamely, the puck being kept in Chatham territory most of the time, until the Chatham forwards by a combined rush swept down the ice and shot a goal, which however was not allowed on account of off-side play.

After the face-off the Campbellton boys seemed to warm up a bit and by a clever piece of combination work pocketed the puck in the Chatham net. This was repeated almost immediately after the face-off. Then the puck was hammered up and down the ice for several minutes. Brown, Campbellton's cover putting up a fine defence rarely allowing the rubber to pass him. The Chatham men were setting a lively pace but all attempts to break through their opponents defence proved unsuccessful. In one of their rushes Mowat received a heavy body check which disabled him for a while and time was called. Not long after play started again Miles was knocked into the side by Watson and remained unconscious for a few minutes. His head struck heavily on the wall, with such force that many thought his injuries were much more serious. All were glad to see him come upon the ice again in a few minutes and play was once more resumed. The puck was soon dangerously near the Chatham goal and finally a pretty side shot by Miles deposited the rubber in the net. This proved the last goal scored by the home team and the last for the half, the visitors being blanked.

Play in the second half started with a rush, the visitors evidently being bent on evening up the score. Perry at Cover was changed to the forward line and W. Crombie brought back to cover. This strengthened the team work considerably for the Chathamites put up some swift rushes. For nearly fifteen minutes the teams pounded the puck, and still neither side scored.

DIVISIONAL POINT.

Newcastle Claims Being
Pressed by Mr. Loggie.

TOWN URGED TO ACT.

Board of Trade Taking up the Matter
Also.

(Newcastle Advocate.)

Mr. W. S. Loggie, M. P., has already pointed out to the department of railways the advisability of making Newcastle a divisional point on the Intercolonial. Mr. Loggie advises immediate action on the part of the Newcastle Board of Trade. As a consequence President Hennessy has called a meeting of the Board for Friday evening. It is altogether likely that a delegation will be appointed to proceed to Ottawa and lay the matter before Mr. Emmerson and his colleagues. It is generally recognized that resolutions of this sort are scarcely worth the paper they are written on and that if anything is to be accomplished, a trip to the capital will have to be made. A large attendance is looked for.

Railway men seem to be in hearty accord with the suggestion although the new divisional centre would relieve some of a good deal of detention pay. A few days ago there were at one time between Campbellton and Newcastle six specials and four regulars. In order to move the latter the despatcher was compelled to side track the former for hours, thus piling up a large detention account. It is argued that if Newcastle were made a divisional point thousands of dollars of detention money would be saved every year and the I. C. R. deficit materially decreased. The fact that the Maritime express makes the short run is evidence that other trains require it.

Not long ago an I. C. R. official made this remark to a Campbellton despatcher: "I think we'll have to get one or two American despatchers up this way to show you fellows how to do things."

You wouldn't get an American despatcher to sit here for five minutes, was the retort.

This despatcher knew what he was talking about. It is an imposition to ask men to move trains regularly over the enormous distance which the Campbellton despatchers are compelled to cover. A change is bound to come sooner or later and it behooves Newcastle to be up and doing.

Then the Chatham boys got hold of the rubber and making a combined rush dodged past the wary Brown and Mowat and scored. After the face-off almost before the home team could realize it, the visitors repeated the performance. It was certainly a quick piece of work, but the Vics staidied down to play and until the end of the game the puck was nearly always in Chatham territory, the score being 4 to 2 in favor of the home team at conclusion of the game.

The game throughout was the fastest ever witnessed here and by far the best exhibition of hockey. There were a few heavy checks one or two trips, and one of the Chatham forwards hit Mowat over the back with his stick. Apart from this the game was a clean one. The acquisition of Brown and Price to the home team certainly strengthens it a good deal, but all the boys did well. The game was no doubt won by their superior combination work and playing in their positions. The three goals shot by McCarvell were on passes from the sides. The Chatham boys have a strong team and put up a good fight despite the disadvantages they were labouring under.

"DOOR OF HELL"

Such Was Subject of Rev.
H. E. Thomas' Sermon

ON SUNDAY EVENING

Card-Playing Denounced in No Uncertain Sound by the Speaker

On Sunday evening a large congregation were present at the Methodist church to hear the Rev. H. E. Thomas' sermon on "Campbellton's door of hell." His subject had reference to card playing and he hoped before the conclusion of his remarks to convince his hearers that his words were not too strong.

After a reference to the different classes which were assembled before him, some bitterly opposed to card playing, so it is most earnest devotees, some without knowledge of its evil even although engaging in it; the preacher then dealt with the different arguments urged in favor of the game.

It is said by some that this is a matter of little significance—why make such a fuss about a little matter. But is it little matter? Cards are played on board train, on ocean liner, in front parlors, in old shanties—is it a small matter when some people do not accept the entertainment of some kind without saying, "This is pretty dry; couldn't we work a little game?" Is it a little thing when our town this winter card club is a card playing have been made such a craze. Is it a little matter when in many homes the family altar has become a wreck, a card table has taken its place. It was said after that there was no harm in cards per se. But this could be said of gunpowder or dynamite and yet no one brought these to their front parlor—Cards the speaker claimed were founded upon a false principle. The man who can boast of giving his opponent was successful—Poker was only a great big game of bluff. There was no such thing as an honest gambler. To prove this a quotation was given of evidence given by a famous gambler of New York: "There is no harm in cards by themselves, why is it the conscience is quickened to question the moral features of this game as none other is questioned. The Saviour of men said that our own father and mother and sisters and brothers were to be forsaken if they stood in the way of our discipleship, and what harm was there in these per se and if that principle applied to those treasures of the heart, certainly it applied to cards. Another excuse offered for indulgence in the game was that refusing to play kept one out of certain society—What in all earnestness are we here for? said the preacher, to get into society, or to save our souls, to put fine clothes upon our children and give them a social standing or to have them grow up to be godly men and women? As far as society is concerned, if card playing is a standard and a line is drawn with those who play on one side and those who do not on the other—he would not be ashamed to stand with those who do not play—in the ranks of the other side would be found the gambler, the murderer, the thief, the convict, that is where society places us. There wasn't a low dive from here to Tokio and back but there cards were to be found, and this the game that some have admitted to their front parlors. In answering the objection that even ministers differed on this question it was said that possibly they did, but not in this town—Speaking for the Protestant clergy, he knew that not

GASPE COUNCIL.

Meeting Held at Perce on Tuesday.

C. LAMB ELETED MAYOR.

There Was Very Little
Other Business Before
the Council.

(Special to Events)

Perce, Jan. 31.—A meeting of the Council was held here to-day, all councillors being present. Besides the election of a new Mayor, nothing important came before council this session. After the reading of proceedings of last meeting by Mr. W. Flynn, Sec. Treas., the election of Mayor took place. It was proposed by N. Langlais and seconded by Jean Lafamme, that Charles Lamb be appointed for the coming term. The motion was carried unanimously. Mr. Lamb thanked the councillors for the mark of confidence they had shown him, but declared that he preferred to vote to re-select Mr. O'Brien, but owing to the council being unanimous in their choice and Mr. O'Brien leader in the movement to that end, he acquiesced in the appointment.

One of them contended it and every one of them opposed it—To those who said that the Scriptures had not a word to say against card playing, it might be said that the scriptures had nothing to say about counterfeiting or cheating or an extortion, but a principle was given which included them all. We would do it honestly, so the scriptures tell us to do it. Answer the four questions: "did you ever know anyone not one of them contended it and every one of them opposed it—To those who said that the Scriptures had not a word to say against card playing, it might be said that the scriptures had nothing to say about counterfeiting or cheating or an extortion, but a principle was given which included them all. Picturesque Old French Buildings Seen in Quebec

THE MATAPEDIA VALLEY

A Winter Garb Cannot Conceal the Beauty of the Scenery

(The Transcript)

Ottawa, Ont. Jan. 24.—From Moncton to Montreal on the maritime express is a trip that the average person will not soon forget. In mid-winter one naturally sees less of the magnificent scenery along the Intercolonial than in summer, when tourists from various parts of the continent avail themselves of the opportunity of viewing some of the finest scenery in Canada. But even at this time of the year the snow-clad hills and valleys along the Intercolonial are not without special interest.

As the "maritime" glides out of Moncton, leaving the glimmering lights of west end in the rear, and Berry's Mills, is passed there is a straight-away course of half a hundred miles over the plains northward. The "maritime" leaving Moncton, has a fine opportunity to make excellent time on this part of the northern division. With a good locomotive out of the Moncton yard, and plenty of steam up, the run from Moncton to Newcastle occupies comparatively little time.

Since the Ocean Limited was cancelled—as Transcript readers are aware—it is necessary for passengers on the maritime to travel through the northern part of New Brunswick and the famous Matapedia valley during the night or early morning. The scenery however is of a type familiar to a New Brunswicker until the train begins winding its way about the St. Lawrence river; or with two Pullman cars on the maritime a comfortable repose takes precedence even over a glimpse of the rugged bluffs along the Matapedia.

As the light of day appears on the horizon the passenger awakens to find himself in a country quite different in appearance to that separated from him by the mountainous stretches of Gaspé peninsula. Fine up-land farms appear but the buildings—and also the way in which the farms are divided seem altogether different from those of New Brunswick and Nova Scotia.

To the average Canadian the panoramas at once suggests Quebec. The farms are cut up in long strips, and are usually at right angles to the Intercolonial. The French Canadians have divided the properties in this way among their sons and grandsons. Their farms are "sliced" off, so to speak, instead of being measured in squares or oblongs from half a mile to a mile wide.

The buildings, too,—as I have said—are different from the farm houses of New Brunswick. They are chiefly wooden, and appear to have been built many years ago. Many of these structures in Quebec have stood the ravages of the weather for two or three generations. The residences are constructed on prinipals that existed in France a century or more ago.

They are plain wooden buildings. In most of them a conspicuous feature is that the windows instead of rising, when opened, are swung back like doors, following the old French style. The rafters of the roofs seemingly curve inward instead of forming a direct line from the eaves to the peak.

Yet, with their farm houses and buildings somewhat antiquated, the French-Canadians along the Intercolonial are evidently prosperous and happy. If they have large, modern built and equipped farm-houses painted and furnished to suit the tastes of the modern house-wife; and if the French Canadian farmers have not commodious stables, barns and storehouses fitted up with wind-mills and other labor-saving devices, there is one fact suggested to the onlooker—they are a happy, law-abiding people. Happiness is the key-note of their lives. They live in communities, and they are apparently content to live quietly within sight of the homesteads on which they were reared, and to enjoy at all times the sociability of their neighbors. Their farms, in fact, are divided with this object in view. The buildings are invariably grouped together in each community instead of being scattered with a half mile or mile intervening between each which is usually the case in New Brunswick.

In nearly every village or collection of farm houses one sees the church. Usually the churches are massive stone structures. They give evidence of having brought forth the best skill in masonry and persistent efforts in having the church in the most magnificent among the edifices of the land. In many of the Quebec villages there is nothing very elaborate about their buildings except the churches which are always handsome and well cared for. Whatever they attain in the arts of modern life, there is every evidence of unity and devotion among the French Canadian farmers.

The principal town on the Intercolonial, between Campbellton and Lewis, is River du Loup. This is an important terminal point on the I. C. R. It contains many stone buildings. The town has a pretty appearance. At this time of the year one of the first things to attract a Monctonian is the large toboggans which bear a striking contrast to the puns of New Brunswick. These large black painted toboggans are usually two-seated and richly equipped with fur robes. They are common all through Upper Canada while in New Brunswick they would be looked upon as a rarity.

One of the finest sections of Quebec province, east of Lewis is St. Anne's. The passenger may peer through a car window for five or six miles across meadowland that, in the distance, appears to be completely covered with wooden fences. Here and there huge bluffs rise abruptly from the level farm lands.

The scenery around Quebec has been described so often, and portrayed so familiarly from school book to railway time-table, it is scarcely necessary to elaborate on this historic spot. Every Transcript reader has either seen this citadel or its picture. Any one who has seen its picture would recognize the original I had not seen it for six years, but there stood the grim old fortress as familiar as if it had been yesterday.

There is individuality about Quebec quite different to other Canadian cities. It is familiar, and yet possesses a peculiar fascination that holds the attention. Whether the onlooker is interested merely in the grey rock towering above him,—or travels back in fancy to the time when the great English, French and Indian warriors held sway over this ancient spot—there is something about Quebec that lingers in the memory.

From Lewis westward there is comparatively little scenery for a long distance, as the railway traverses a new section of country. In approaching Montreal, however, one of the finest and oldest agricultural sections of the continent may be viewed from the train. It differs greatly from the Eastern and middle sections of Quebec. The farms are large and well cultivated. The men who operate these farms are in it as a business and apparently carry on their work on scientific principles.

The scenery in this portion of Quebec makes one speak the name of Canada with pride. It is calculated to awaken in the mind of the easterner a conception of a broad and resourceful country, that contains every natural requirement to make it the finest in the world.

Evans.

Mr. J. P. Whitney was elected in Dundas by five hundred majority.

In West Middlesex, Hon. G. W. Ross was elected by about thirty majority.

Toronto elected four Conservatives and Hamilton two, London also returned a Conservative. Brockville and Kingston each returned a Liberal. Ottawa, which was one of the surprises of the election, elected two Liberals and with Gleggery constituted the Liberal gains. The Conservatives gained twenty-eight seats and lost but three. The Liberal gains were three and their losses twenty-eight.

Toronto, Ont., January 27. The latest returns regarding the Ontario elections give Mr. Whitney a majority of 42. One seat is still disputed.—This is Port Arthur and Rainy River, which the Conservatives claim for Preston by 150, but which the Liberals say has elected Kennedy by 50 majority. The defeat of Hon. W. A. Charlton in South Norfolk is confirmed, the majority against him being 5.

Currie, Liberal, is elected in Prince Edward, by the narrow majority of 3, while in Monk, Hon. R. Harcourt's majority is down to 20, with two polls missing. He is however, is probably elected by a small majority. In West Huron, the Liberals claim the election of Cameron, Liberal, by 4, while the Conservatives declare the result a tie. The popular majority of the Conservatives in the province is estimated as in the neighborhood of 30,000.

The three seats which have changed to the Liberal column since yesterday are Essex South, Huron East and Oxford North.

As the shadow of night falls the maritime glides over the long Victoria bridge and slowly moves up to Windsor station. The passenger suddenly realizes that he is in another atmosphere quite different to anything in the East. He is in Montreal—the cosmopolitan city—the metropolis of Canada.

Colt Stakes for 1905

The president and secretary and others of the Digby Driving Park Club contemplate offering colt stakes to be raced for in September, 1905, on their track. The inducement should be sufficient to enable them to make it a grand success as they propose to put in a stake for three-year-olds for $300.00 and one for two-year-olds for $200.00. The stakes will be open to the maritime provinces. They propose to make them early closing events. Nominations to

CANADA, THE NATION

Collier's Weekly, one of the few American publications which condescend to give Canada a place on the map seemed to be charmed with our future possibilities. We like the way it sizes us up.

The United States must realize that her greatest future trade is likely to be with Canada. Furthermore, Canada is sure to develop into her closest competitor for foreign trade. The Dominion today is one of the four greatest exporters of wheat, and her water power, as yet but little utilized, will some day make her one of the globe.

Already the United States is looking to her forests for timber, and her railroads are destined—from the most conservative estimates—to double their mileage in the next ten years. Even today, Canada exceeds the railway mileage of Italy and Spain combined. Her trackage is equal to about three fifths of all the systems of Russia or Germany, and it is more than three-fourths of all Austria-Hungary's. It almost equals the total mileage of the British Isles; and Argentina excepted, Canada has more railroads than all the countries of South America combined. The whole continent of Africa has less than half as many laid rails; and the systems of any minor power of Europe could be added to that of Australasia before the Canadian roads would be matched. In short, Canada has more railroads than Belgium, Netherlands, Switzerland, Portugal, Norway, Sweden, Serbia, and Greece, all combined, and yet these nations have a total of more than six times Canada's population. There is both a political and a commercial significance in all this which the world is just beginning to see. There is no other dependency in the world of Canada's power and proportions. Her climate matches that of Russia, while her domain is vastly greater. The railroad development is the barometer test of a country's civilization, natural wealth, and enterprise. It is not the outgrowth of her colonial days, and is in fact a nation taking a foreplace in the industry and commerce of the world.

Campbellton this season is earning a reputation as a winter resort second to none. While almost every other town in the Maritime provinces has been visited with very heavy snow storms and the strong winds have piled the snow in huge drifts, we have been enjoying the most beautiful winter weather one could imagine. Bright clear sunshine, with just enough frost in the atmosphere to make one feel like living in the daily round of good things from the weather man. We have escaped all the heavy storms this winter, including the last two blizzards that have paralyzed traffic on all railroads in the southern part of the province and Nova Scotia.

Afraid of Strong Medicine

Many people suffer for years from rheumatic pains, and prefer to do so rather than take the strong medicines usually given for rheumatism. Not knowing that quick relief from pain may be had simply by applying Chamberlain's Pain Balm and without taking any medicine internally. Rev. Amos Parker of Magnolia, North Carolina, suffered for eight years with a lame hip, due to severe rheumatic pains. He has been permanently cured by the free application of Chamberlain's Pain Balm. For sale by all druggists.

PRESENTATIONS

To Rev A. F. Carr, D. D. and Mr. R Barclay Gerrard

On Thursday evening, of last week a number of his friends surprised Mr. Barclay Gerrard at his home and presented him with a violin, accompanied by the following address:

Campbellton, N. B., 26th Jan'y 1905

Dear Barclay:

For a long time your unfailing good nature and many sterling qualities have been a matter of comment among your many friends. We have, perhaps, been often thoughtless and selfish in making use of your talent as a musician for our own enjoyment. You have seemed to take a pleasure in giving pleasure to others. Those who know you best realize this most.

Our mutual friend—Mr. Charles Adams—a few days ago broached the idea of remembering you in some way, and he informs us, it met with general approval.

We would ask you, Barclay, to accept this slight token of our good will and esteem. May it remind you of the many pleasant times we have had together, and may its strings bind your heart to ours. When you handle this bow, may it call to your mind the many other Beams, tripping the light fantastic to your music. May its keys remind you that you hold the key to our affections, and in the years to come, when "we have all dispersed and parted" may its bridge be a thoroughfare over which memory may pass to "the friends that's awa'."

The company were afterwards pleasantly entertained and a very enjoyable evening spent by all.

At the annual meeting of the congregation of St. Andrew's Presbyterian church held on the 1st inst the pastor Rev A. F. Carr D. D. was presented with a fur lined coat accompanied by the following address:

To Reverend A. F. Carr D. D.

Rev and Dear Sir:

The members and adherents of St. Andrew's Presbyterian church, desire to take advantage of this Congregation meeting to give expression in a tangible manner, of their regard for you personally and of their appreciation of your ministrations both in the pulpit and in your whole pastoral work. The healthy condition of the church today is in no small degree, due to your zeal and energy and faithful labours in the Master's cause.

We ask you to accept this coat as a small token of the universal esteem in which you are held amongst us, at the same time trusting you may have health to wear it.

That the same harmonious relations which have always existed between us may continue and that you may be long spared to preside over us is the fervent prayer of your people.

Signed on behalf of Saint Andrew's Congregation

D. C. Firth Chairman } Trustees
Wm. Andrew Secretary }

It is understood that the River du Loup Hockey team will play our local team here on Friday or Saturday night of next week. If the game is to be played on Saturday night, arrangements will be made with the management of the rink to give the skaters Friday evening instead of Saturday.

Our local team will in all probability go to Chatham on Tuesday 14 to play a return game with the team of that town.

It is also understood that a Moncton team will play here on Friday evening, Feb. 17th.

ed particularly for their piety who played cards—Isn't it true that those who are to-day engaged in practical spiritual work are not found at a card table—As far as card players are concerned there would be to-day, a weak, worldly, sickly, cold and dead church and in many cases none at all—One result of a revival where God became real to the soul, was the renouncing of the cards and if a revival came to Campbellton every card club would be broken up. All that is needed is for people to get converted. Then again this practice took away a person's influence—All that the most of us can leave this world, is not money, or lands or hospitals or libraries, but the influence of our little life, but a Christian goes to the cards and flings that influence in God's face—What influence would a minister have if he threw open his doors and opened his home to a card party and ended the evening with a social dance—A terrible thing that would be and yet is not every one just as responsible for the Salvation of men's souls as a minister—How can we expect to retain our influence when a man looks into one corner of the town and sees men playing for dollar and cents, and then goes to another corner and sees the game played for silver spoons and dishes and boxes of candy—Isn't it a fact that a person desirous of becoming a Christian never wanted assistance from a card player—Wasn't it a fact that unchristian people have little respect for the religion of those who play and other facts were given—Surely when cards do this, it is not to strong language that declares that cards as an agent of a world of darkness—Then a conclusion it was claimed that cards were as bad as this because they were indissoluble associated with gambling. Of course, men might gamble over anything, but cards men associated with and led to gambling as did nothing else—A great many striking illustrations were given of the feature of the game to show that from the game at some social gathering the player had been led on and on to ruin—Look said the speaker at this game as it is played in the town—On a certain night, in the week before last if you had stood at a particular spot on the front street and looked across to the other side you would have been able to count sixteen of our prominent citizens going into one of the gambling dens of the town—That was after nine o'clock—it isn't easy to know when they came out, but it is cards they played, and it is cards with which they gambled—It is cards that have ruined their reputation even tho' they hold very prominent positions in the town. Cards are gamblers tools and it doesn't matter whether you find them in a low dive or in the house in town where they played them last week.

In a certain town a railway man went down to the store one evening some years ago to procure some goods for his family—The pay car had come in and he intended settling for the last month's account any one of the gamblers going into one of the gambling dens of cards was upon him and he played and played until all he had was upon the table and with one sweep it all went from him—The man's heart failed him and walking out of the door he sobbed like a child His months pay gone nothing but an empty pocket—Do you know where that happened said the preacher—In this town in which we live and who knows but in your parlor he learned to play. In conclusion the congregation was urged to live a clean and holy life—God will settle this question in the whirl of emotion, but as they loved their fellow men and as they loved their fellow men and Heaven, to settle it, in that inner chamber of the soul, where only God is seen, only God is heard and God only listens to our cry of penitence.

BIG CONVENTION

Agents of the Frost Wire Fence Co. Meet at Hamilton

The big three day's convention of the agents of the Frost Wire Fence Co. opened this morning in the company's fine new buildings on Sherman avenue, with about 75 agents from all parts of Ontario in attendance.

This morning from 8 o'clock until noon Mr. Frost and Mr. A. L. Page had a personal talk with each of the agents and this was limited to ten minutes to each one. This afternoon from 1 o'clock until 5 o'clock Messrs. Page, Frost, C. H. Hanson, R. H. Maccomb, P. Dresback and F. Page each conducted parties of about 20 agents through the works, which were in full operation.

To-morrow, the convention proper, will commence, when matters of general interest to the company and its agents will be discussed. In the evening the company will tender the visitors a banquet in the Royal Hotel. A fine spread will be served and a good toast list carried out, which will combine to make the night a jolly one for all. The company is not stopping here, however, in its endeavor to give the visitors a royal good time, and has chartered a special train, which will leave the G. T. R. station at 8.30 on Thursday morning for Niagara Falls. Electric cars to take the party over the Gorge route have also been engaged and the day will be spent in sight-seeing. The agents will, return to Hamilton in the evening, and then leave for their homes.

The company believes in taking care of its employees, and as an evidence of the good feeling existing between them it may be stated that with two or three exceptions the entire force came with the firm from Welland, where it was formerly located, to Hamilton. To retain the good men who enter the service, which aids materially in keeping up the high standard of the goods, is one of the aims of the company.

Progress is another motto of the company and $25 in prizes is being offered for the best suggestion in writing handed in to any of the officials not later than 8 o'clock to-morrow morning, for general improvement in any department. This is divided into $10 for first, $5 for second and ten prizes of $1 each.

The company has been in business in Canada about eight years, having its headquarters in Welland. These have now been moved to Hamilton, and the works here are nearly four times as large as the old buildings were.—Hamilton Times 13th ult.

Wm. C. Hamilton, Black hands, is one of the local agents of this company.

ENGLISH BEAUTIES.

Why They Are Such—A Dissertation on That Type of London Journalist Which Glorifies High Life.

If you take up a copy of one of the weekly papers that abandon themselves to the glorification of high life, says a writer in The London Express, you will probably read something like this: "The Duchess came late with her enchanting daughter, Lady Magnolia, who is quite one of the beauties of the season. The Countess of Putney was lovely in pearls. Lady Siston, who is just now in great good looks, brought her pretty girls, who attracted much attention. Mrs. Smith and her daughter were also present."

Upon analysis, we discover that the adjective is nicely chosen to the position of the ladies to which they refer. They form, so to speak, a descending scale of admiration in which the description varies with the rank.

That a duchess or the near relation of so exalted a lady should receive a more prominent notice than a mere plebeian is quite in accord with the etiquette of Belovet. The Times and the British constitution generally. Even an Anarchist might hesitate to quarrel with the writer upon so obvious a point.

Yet the fact that Miss Smith is a real beauty, a graceful, stately English maiden, while the Lady Magnolia is a snub-nosed little vixen who powders her nose between the dances and is not wholly innocent of rouge, causes, not unreasonably, a sense of irritation against the social paragraph that so confounds them.

This is a sad thought; but our ancestors, in the days when Park Lane was a muddy road and the Riviera unexplored, when grouse moors were inhabited by wild persons with dirks and yachts went buccaneering in the West Indies, were, after all, very un-English in their tastes. They were not so much interested in the social life as we are to-day.

When a girl is not a girl? There we find another of those modern dilemmas which will agitate the mind of the conscientious enquirer after truth who stalks the ballrooms like a social bloomer.

On hearing that "Lady Blunderbore brought her pretty girl from Park Lane to Lady Blank's magnificent reception" he will be surprised to discover that the lady in question is a demure spinster who may ride in the front rank with the Quorn of Fytschley, but has left her teens, and the manners and appearance associated with that extraordinary age, a good 12 years behind her.

New and again—for the stock exchange is a disconcerting element—the social paragraphist will perform a little miracle all by himself. For example, Mr. Binger springs to golden heights in the world of finance; promptly Miss Binger removes from Brixton to Mayfair, orders dresses in Bond Street and diamonds in F. cent street and henceforth is known to the admiring world as "lovely Mrs. Binger, who was lately fully gowned in."

The gowns of the good lady have improved in those essentials that vary a five from a fifty-guinea frock. But surely her face remains her own, and no one in Brixton regarded it as anything out of the common when she went shopping to the butcher's.

The photograph fraud is another and quite common method of establishing a social beauty and deceiving the public. A woman is as old as she looks—that is an ancient proverb; but a beauty is always older than her photograph. There is no necessity to blame her. If at five-and-twenty she made a charming picture, can we be surprised if ten years later she avoids risking a further experiment? Yet the comparison between the photograph and the original will astonish the uninitiated, just as homely Anne of Cleves startled the expectant gaze of Henry VIII.

This may be an ungallant criticism, better suited to the deponent of Mr. Crookland. Yet it differs from the majority of that scribbled opinion in that it happens to be true.

CHOOSING A LOVER.

She Is a Wise Maiden Who Waits Until She Is Twenty.

It is rather a difficult matter to say exactly at what age a girl should have a lover. Circumstances alter cases, and an age which might be applicable to one girl would be inadvisable in the case of another. One is fairly safe in saying, however, that in the great majority of love affairs the happiest are those which are never thought about until a girl has passed her twentieth birthday. By that time a girl may be said to have reached the age of discretion. She has probably had opportunities of meeting various types of men, gained a clear insight into their characteristics and acquired that knowledge of men and their ways which prevents her fixing her thoughts and affections on the first man who attracts her particular attention.

She has got past the schoolgirl age, when a maiden is apt to vote every member of the opposite sex charming and lovable if able to talk and flirt in a fascinating manner. The sensible girl who is well past her teens, however, probes deeper beneath the surface, so to speak, and does not judge a man when he is on his best behavior at a ball or a party. It is quite possible, of course, for her to make a mistake and bestow her affections on one who is unworthy of them, but the girl of twenty or twenty-one makes fewer mistakes in estimating a man's character than sweet sixteen or seventeen, and consequently saves herself much unhappiness by choosing at the right time no lover but "Mr. Right"—American Queen.

ARE YOUR KIDNEYS SICK?

Let your morning urine stand for 24 hours in a glass or vessel, and then if it is milky or cloudy, or contains a reddish brick-dust sediment, or if particles or germs float about in it, your kidneys are diseased. If the kidneys are well they filter just so much blood, but if they are sick or weak from any cause, they leave the poison in the blood, and this poison affects the entire system.

It is natural to pass urine three times a day, but many who regard themselves as healthy are obliged to pass water six to ten times daily and are obliged to get up frequently during the night. They have sick kidneys and bladder and don't know it. Smith's Buchu Luthia Pills cure Rheumatism and all Kidney and Bladder diseases, and make new, rich blood.

We will send you a generous sample post paid free, together with our large book on the above mentioned diseases. Address, W. P. Smith Co., 185 St. James Street, Montreal, Canada.

Uncle Terry

CHARLES CLARK MUNN

Copyright, 1900, by LEE & SHEPARD

It may have been the pain in his face, added to her own desolation, that overcame all else, for now she bowed her head, and the tears came.

"I thank you for so much, Terry," he answered tenderly, "and God bless you for it. I do not give you up and shall not if I have to wait all my life for you. I can be patient if I only have hope." He brushed his face with one hand and, still holding her, arose and drew her up. Then Albert stily put his arm around her waist, and as he drew her to him he whispered, "Just one, Terry, my sweetheart, to make this spot seem more sacred."

It was not refused.

"Come out on the point, dear," he said as she tried to draw herself away, "so we can see the ocean better. I will tell you the story I promised last evening." He still held her a half prisoner, and when they were seated where the waves were beating almost at their feet he began his recital. When he came to that portion in which Pope played a part, and ending in such a ghastly denouement, she shuddered.

"That is the one horrible part of taking your own life," she said, "to think how you will look and what those who find you will say. If I were to do such a thing I should first make sure no one would ever find me."

"No, no, not that way! Only if those who love me were taken from under and by virtue of a power of sale contained in a certain Indenture of Mortgage, bearing date the 9th Day of June, in the year of our Lord, 1903, made between the said Alexander Watt, Junior, and Ella May Watt, his wife, of the one part, and Dennis A. Arsenault, of the Parish of Balmoral, in the County of Restigouche, and Province of New Brunswick, Surveyor, of the other part, and which Mortgage was duly registered the 31st Day of June, A. D. 1903, as No. 6538 on pages 711, 712, 713, and 714, in Book "C" of the Records of the County of Restigouche, there will for the purpose of satisfying the money secured thereby, default having been made in the payment thereof, be sold at Public Auction on Monday, the sixth day of February, A. D. 1905, at two o'clock in the afternoon, in front of the Court House, in the Town of Dalhousie, in said County of Restigouche, "All and singular the eastern half of that certain lot or parcel of land, situate, lying and being in Balmoral, in the Parish of Balmoral, in the County of Restigouche, and bounded as follows:—

When the old cart had made half its daily journey Albert pointed to a low rock and said, "There is a spot I shall always be glad to see, for it was there Uncle Terry first found me."

Telly made no answer. In fact, she had said but little since they started. When they reached the little landing no one else was there. No house was in sight of it, and the solitude was broken only by the tide that softly caressed the barnacled piles of the wharf and the weed covered rocks on either side.

The remark startled him. "Telly," he said as she tried to draw herself away, "so we can see the ocean better. I will tell you the story I promised last evening." He still held her a half prisoner, and when they were seated where the waves were beating almost at their feet he began his recital. When he came to that portion in which Pope played a part, and ending in such a ghastly denouement, she shuddered.

to love her. As it is, it is useless for me to think of her as a friend. It was good of her to pay me a visit, though, and I enjoyed every minute of it."

"And what about Frank? Did he not say a lot of sweet things to you?"

Alice colored.

"Oh, he is nice enough," she answered, "and tried to make me believe he had fallen in love with me, but it won't do any good. I am sure his managing mamma will marry him to some thin girl with a fat purse."

"So that is the way the wind blows, my sweet sister, is it? And yet my possible future law partner has been humming 'Ben Bolt' nearly every day for the past two months! You must have smiled on him very sweetly when he was here."

"Please do not say any more about him, Bert," she answered with a little pain in her voice. "He is all right, but I am too poor and too proud to satisfy his mother, so that is all there is to it."

Then she added in self protection, "Tell me about the island girl I heard you fell in love with on the yachting trip and for whom you deserted the crowd."

Albert looked confused. "It is true, Bertie," she said quickly, "I can see it in your face. That explains your short letters. I shall feel more desolate now than ever."

"Alice, my dear sister," he replied, resolutely drawing his chair near and taking her hand, "it is true, and I intended to tell you all about it, only I hated to do it at first and so put it off. She is more than pretty, she is beautiful, and the most unaffected and tender hearted girl I ever met. But you need not worry. She is so devoted to the two old people who have brought her up that she will not leave them for me as long as they live."

Then he frankly told Alice the entire story of his visit to the sea and how she had refused to yield to his pleading.

"And now, sweet sister," he said at last, "I have a plan to unfold, and I want you to consider it well. I am now earning enough to maintain a home, and I am tired of boarding house life. It is not likely I shall marry the girl I love for many years to come, and there is no need for us to be separated in this way. I think it is best that we close the house or rent it for the present, and you and Aunt Susan come to Boston. I can hire a pretty flat, and we can take down much of the furniture as we need and store the rest. What do you think of the plan?"

"Oh, I shall be so glad of the change, Bertie! It is so desolate here, and I dread the long winter. But what can I do in Boston? I cannot be idle."

"Will not housekeeping for me be occupation enough?" he answered, smiling, "or you might give music lessons and study shorthand. I need a typewriter even now."

"But what will Aunt Susan think of the change?" he asked.

"Go a little way back, my darling," he whispered, "until the boat is gone. I do not want any one to see you have been crying."

When her misty eyes could no longer see the boat that bore her heart away, she turned, and all the long, lonely way back Bertie's tears lingered on her lashes.

CHAPTER XXXVII.

THE mountains around Sandgate were asfame with the scarlet and gold of autumn before life seemed quite as usual to Alice Page. The summer had passed, and though it left a scar on her heart she had resolutely determined to put the sweet illusion out of her mind. "I was very foolish to let him see that I cared," she thought, "for it can never be, and by and by he will forget me. If he does think of me it will be to recall me as one of his summer girls who had a lot of silliness."

Her heart ached at times, and in spite of all resolution her fingers would once in awhile stray to the chords of "Ben Bolt." She answered his letters in a cool, matter of fact way. Occasionally, when he referred to his heart hunger and how hard he was studying in hopes that she might think better of him, she wished that he had no pride and was a poor fellow, and her next letter would be a bitter sweet thought was the fact that the colder she answered him the warmer his next letter would be. He happened to mention once that his mother had spoken of a certain young lady, who belonged to the cream of Boston society, as an eligible match and advised him to show her a little attention. It did not help his cause.

How grateful she was all through those melancholy autumn days that she had a large school to absorb her thoughts. She was having a long and hard fight with her own feelings, and imagined she had conquered them when Thanksgiving time drew near and her brother announced he would run up and spend the day with her. She almost cried for joy at the news, for proud spirited Alice Page was feeling very heart hungry when the letter came. Albert was just a little surprised at her vehement welcome.

"Oh, I have been so lonesome, Bertie," she said when they were alone, "and the evenings drag by so slowly! Then you do not write me as often or such nice letters as formerly, and Aunt Susan never seems to notice that I am blue. If it were not for my school I should go crazy, I think."

"I am very busy these days, sis," Albert replied, "and my mind is all taken up with work. Mr. Nason's business is increasing, and I have many clients besides him. Then he added, "How did you like Blanch Nason?"

"Oh, she was very nice," replied Alice coolly, "and if she were a poor girl and lived here I could easily learn to love her. As it is, it is useless for me to think of her as a friend. It was good of her to pay me a visit, though, and I enjoyed every minute of it."

"And what about Frank? Did he not say a lot of sweet things to you?"

Alice colored.

LOVE'S BLACK SHADOW

By HARTLEY WILLARD

Copyright, 1904, by C. B. Lewis

"I tell you, gal—I tell you I'd rather see you dead twice over than find to be Taylor. Beto I would see it cum about I'd kill one or t'other of you with my own hand. What's your pride? What's your shame? What's the respect you owe your dead mother?
If you was lined up to Abe Taylor's reckon me an' your brother Bill could hang around yere agin what folks would say? D'ye think we could look our neighbors in the face arter that?"

High up on the side of the grim old mountain father and daughter sat on the steps of a humble log cabin on a summer's afternoon. He was a man of fifty, loose jointed and a typical mountain man, she was a girl of nineteen, with a face and form that had no equal for twenty miles around. He sat braced with his back to the jamb,

"Pop, you've killed a man, but it's
your own son!"
while she leaned her elbows on her knees and her chin on her hands and kept her eyes on the ground.
"An' why?" she finally asked.
"An' why?" he fiercely repeated as his eyes flashed. "If you don't know why then you're no gal of mine! He-ven's I bin tellin' you why ever since you was able to understand things! Wasn't you ten years old when I brung home
the dead body of your brother Jim?
Wasn't you fifteen when I cum crawlin' home with two bullets in my body? Wasn't you sixteen an' sittin' fired yere on this spot when a bullet fired from the thicket over that knocked my cap into your face? You remember all these things, Mary—you haven't forgot—an' then you ask me why you an' Abe Taylor can't line up. Lawd, gal, but I wouldn't be no' astonished
if you struck me to bionder the tree!"
"See yere, pop," said the girl as she straightened up, clasped her hands over her knee and looked away into the laurels, "twenty years ago, beto
I was too young to get up a fuss with the Taylors."

"They dun got up a fuss with me,
sai."

"Well, there was a fuss. It was about a newfangled or a hawg or sumthin'.

The Taylors an' the Rentreux went to killin'. You dun for the old man."

"Yes, I did."

"An' then one of his boys dun for our Jim."

"Shot our Jim down like a dawg
an' never bin no show!"

"An' then our Bill dun for one of them."

"He did, an' I'm mighty proud of him."

"An' then you git almost dun for."

"That's it, gal. One of them varmints ambushed me an' put two bullets into my body, an' the lead's ther
yet. I've been waitin' a bull year to ambush a Taylor in return, but the damned cowards an' an' cumins' as foxes. The chance will cum, though—it will shortly cum. Me an' Bill will never rest easy as long as that's a Taylor left livin', an', thank God,
that's only two of 'em dodgin' aroun'
on top the airth."

The girl was silent for a moment, rocking to and fro. Then in the same quiet, even voice she said:

"A quarrel lastin' twenty years an'
three or four killin's becase you an'
the old man Taylor fell out like two boys!
You've carried murder in your heart all these years, an' it's that yet. It might be bin so with the Taylors once, but you know they've wanted peace for five years past."

"Bease they ar' cowards, gal!"

"Bease they've got sense, pop. They can't see that the game is with the candle. A year ago I met Abe Taylor over at Bridge Cove. I knowed him on sight, an' he knowed me. We knowed that we oter hate each other like plum becase of the quarrels an'
killin's, but sumhow 'twas jest the other way. We seen each other ag'in an'
ag'in, an' we liked each other better an' better every time. Abe has bin fakin' friends, an' so hev I. We un didn't start the quarrel. We un wasn't skinnin' bo'n then. We un can't feel that these shootin's an' kill-in's is right. Bimeby me an' Abe falls in love an' would git married, but you an' Bill stand in the road. You ar' my pop, an' Bill is my brother, but I'm tellin' you straight that Abe Taylor is as squear an' white as any one of you."

an' he's got a heap less murder in his heart. I'm lovin' him, pop—lovin' him with nuff to be his wife an' do all a wife kin do, but when he wanted me to run away with him—wanted it be-case you stood ready for mo' killin's—I wouldn't agree. I said I'd come an'
tell you all about it an' hear what you had to say. I told you, an' what answer hev I got?"

"You've got my answer that I'll shoot Abe Taylor on sight!" shouted the father in fierce tones. "Yes, gal, if you was his wife ten times over I'd shoot him down. I wasn't spectin' his treachery from you, Mary. I've bin father an' mother to you these many years, an' I've never believed that you would throw your own pop over an side agin him. You couldn't git Bill to do it—no, not if you would offer him
all the land 'twixt yere an' the river."

"I can never make you understand,"
sighed the girl. "I love you as my pop,
an' I'm grateful for all your kindnesses,
but don't you see that I can't pick up this old quarrel an' hate as you do an'
feel your feelings for revenge? It's the same with Abe. He wants peace for friendliness. Together we want a weddin' an' cabin home. I said Abe Taylor is a squear man. If he wasn't would he dun agree to cum over yere and chesed their hands out his hand to you an' ask you to bury the past?"

"Abe Taylor comin' over yere?" asked the father in a voice hardly above a whisper.

"I'm lookin' for him every minit."

The father rose and entered the house and took down his loaded rifle,
and when he sat down on the steps
again the weapon lay across his knees.

"Is it for Abe?" asked the girl.

"For shore. I'll shoot him dead in his tracks!"

"Then you ar' a coward, an' I'm no kin to you!"

For a minute they looked into each other's eyes—his showing the darkest passions, hers revealing contempt—and then they turned their heads. Thus they sat for ten minutes without further speech, and the western sun sunk to the hill tops and blazed full in their faces and half blinded them.
A sudden step caught their ears and both turned their heads to the right.

"Pop, you've killed a man, but it's
your own son!"

"I'll kill him!" growled the man.

Some one turned the corner of the house and stood in the full blaze of sunlight.

The old man lifted his rifle and fired over the girl's shoulder before she could raise a hand to prevent.
For a minute a smoke cloud hung low
and obscured the body on the ground.
Then the girl said quietly:

"Pop, you've killed a man, but it's
your own son!"

The old man staggered over and knelt beside the body, and as he bent his face drawn and haggard and his breath whistling in his throat, a young man turned in from the road and halted
close beside the girl.

"Pop thought it was you!" whispered
the girl.

Abe nodded his head.

"Wait till I bundle my things an'
we'll go."

Merry, but Not Wise.

The saying of Charles II., the King of France, who died in 1644, is a fine epitaph written upon him by the earl of Rochester.

Never said a foolish thing
And never did a wise one.

are many as to show us plainly why he should be so beloved even by those who could not approve his actions. He was a merry monarch, and he was "good company."

His name was a great nickname, and he was widely known as "Old Rowley," the name of an ill-favored horse in the royal stables. One day a young lady at court was in her apartments singing a satirical ballad called "Old Rowley, the King," when Charles knocked at the door.

"Who is it?" she called.

"Old Rowley himself, madam," he returned good-naturedly.

He could convey a reproach with wit and gentleness. When Penn stood before him with his hat on the king took off his crown and bowed.

"Friend Charles," said the Quaker,
"why dost thou not put on thy hat?"

"'Tis the custom of this place," returned the king, "that never above one person should be covered at a time."

Use of Lemons.

The uses of lemons are manifold, and the more we employ them the better
we shall find ourselves. For all people, in sickness or in health, lemonade is not only a safe but a remarkably pleasant drink. It is a specific against worms and skin complaints. The piping seeds, crushed very fine, also be-mixed with water and used as a drink.
Lemon juice is the best antiseptic remedy known. It not only cures the disease, but, what is better than a cure, it is a preventive. Sailors make a daily use of it for that purpose. It is a good thing to rub the gums daily with lemon juice to keep them in a healthy condition. It prevents chi-blains. Lemon used in intermittent fevers is mixed with strong hot black tea or coffee without sugar. Neuralgia may be cured by rubbing the part afflicted with a lemon. It is valuable also to cure warts and to destroy dandruff on the head by rubbing the roots of the hair with it. Lemon juice and glycerin, equal parts, make an unequalled lotion for the hands to keep them soft, smooth and healthy. We think we have said enough to show how valuable, therefore, lemons are—

BATHURST

(Too late for last issue)

The snowstorm of the 22nd was a very severe one leaving the roads in this locality in a dreadful condition.

During the storm on Sunday
last fir broke out at Dunlop Settlement about six miles from town and in a short while the house of Mr. Cecily Chamberlain was burnt to the ground.

Fire also destroyed the house of
Mr. Lazarre Pitre in Tetagouche
on the same day.

A very sad death occurred here
on Monday when after a lengthy illness Mr. Alex Gifford passed away.
Deceased was a nephew of Messrs George and John Robertson of the Robertson Hotel, he came here a few weeks ago with his two children, thinking the change would benefit him, but on the contrary his health failed fast.

Mr. Gifford belonged to Rexton and his wife is ill in the St. John hospital. His remains were taken to his home in Rexton for interment.

The many friends of Mr. James B. Carr of Campbellton who taught school here last year, were indeed delighted to learn of his successful examinations in the study of medicine at McGill during the past term.

Mr. Samuel Bishop left on Monday for a few days visit to Montreal.

Mr. Therence McMannis of Cookston, Minnesota U. S. A.
formerly of Bathurst, arrived here
on Tuesday from Memramook N. B.
where he spent a week with his brothers there, and will remain here a few days, visiting relatives before returning home. Mr. and Mrs. Samuel J. Melanson have given up housekeeping here and will accompany their cousin Mr.
McMannis to the west, but have not just decided where they will make their home. They seem to think the change is for the better and no doubt it is. Their house in the village was sold to Messrs
McKenna Bros. Their departure will certainly be regretted by their many friends in Bathurst who wish them every success and bon voyage.

Mr. Melanson was agent here for several insurance companies and seemingly did very well.

The delay in the trains this week was something like the stormy weather and no doubt felt all along the I. C. R. The local express on Wednesday morning was cancelled. The express from north that morning being six hours late.

The Carquet train did not go down on Monday but got all the way to Carquet on Tuesday and is keeping good time since.

Mrs. Hanson entertained her friends at afternoon whist on Monday.

Mr. Joseph Antoine Hahey
who has been absent from home
for over twenty years is home spending some time with his aged mother and relatives.

Miss Lina Gagnon who has been spending a few months with week.

Mr. F. C. Gaby, electrical engineer who has been here for the past two months superintending the electric lights left on Monday
for his home in Toronto.

Tuesday morning on a business trip to Montreal.

We Offer $1,000

For a Disease Germ That Liquozone Can't Kill.

On every bottle of Liquozone we offer $1,000 for a disease germ that it cannot kill. We do this to assure you that Liquozone does kill germs.
And it is the only way known to kill germs in the body without killing the tissues, too. Any drug that kills germs is a poison, and it cannot be taken internally. Medicine is almost helpless in any germ disease. It is this fact which gives Liquozone its worth to humanity; a worth so great that, after testing the product for two years, through physicians and hospitals, we paid $100,000 for the American rights.
And we have spent over one million dollars, in one year, to buy the first bottle and give it free to each sick one who would try it.

Acts Like Oxygen.

Liquozone is not made by compounding drugs, nor is there any alcohol in it. Its virtues are derived solely from gas—largely oxygen gas—by a process requiring immense apparatus and 14 days' time. This process has for more than 20 years, been the constant subject of scientific and chemical research.

The result is a liquid that does what oxygen does. It is a nerve food and blood food—the most helpful thing in the world to you. Its effects are exhilarating, vitalizing, purifying. Yet it is an absolutely certain germicide. The reason is that germs are vegetables;

and Liquozone—like an excess of oxygen—is deadly to vegetable matter.
Liquozone goes into the stomach,
into the bowels and into the blood,
to go wherever the blood goes. No germ can escape it and none can resist it. The results are inevitable, for a germ disease must end when the germs are killed. Then Liquozone, acting as a wonderful tonic, quickly
restores a condition of perfect health.
Diseases which have resisted medicine for years yield at once to Liquozone, and it cures diseases which medicine never cures. Half the people you meet—wherever you are—can tell you
of cures that were made by it.

Germ Diseases.

These are the known germ diseases.
All that medicine can do for these troubles is to help Nature overcome the germs, and such results are indirect and uncertain. Liquozone attacks the germs, wherever they are. And when the germs which cause a disease
are destroyed, the disease must end,
and forever. That is inevitable.

These are the known germ diseases:
Anthrax, Amnesia, Bacteremia, Blood Poison, Bright's Disease, Bubonic Plague, Cholera, Consumption, Diphtheria, Dysentery, Erysipelas, Gangrene, Gonorrhea, Influenza, Leptospirosis, Malaria, Measles, Meningitis, Mumps, Pertussis, Pityriasis, Rheumatism, Scarlet Fever, Smallpox, Syphilis, Tetanus, Typhoid, Typhus, Venereal Disease, Whooping Cough, Yellow Fever.

Any physician or hospital not using Liquozone
will be gladly supplied for a test.

50c. Bottle Free.

If you need Liquozone, and have never tried it, please send us this coupon. We will then mail you an order on a local druggist for a full-size
bottle, and we will pay the druggist ourselves for it. This is our free gift, made to convince you; to show you what Liquozone is, and what it can do. In justice to yourself, please, accept it to-day, for it places you under no obligation whatever.

Liquozone costs 50c. and $1.

An Odd Record.

The late Miss Julia Moore, Sir John Moore's niece, like many very old people, was extremely proud of her age
and lost no opportunity of showing it.
When she was asked by a friend if she was going to see the coronation of King Edward VII. she answered: "No,
I have been out of London for the last three coronations, and I don't care to alter my record." What an exaltation one must feel at being able to say a thing like that!

Indians With Jewish Blood.

Sir Alexander Mackenzie had an idea that the Indians of the far northwest were partly Jewish in origin. From Lake Athabasca in 1794 he set out at the head of an expedition "in a birch bark canoe twenty-five feet long, four and three-quarters feet beam and twenty-six inches hold, with 3,000 pounds of baggage and provisions and a crew of nine French Canadians. He reached the Pacific coast and returned.
The aborigines he met were "for the most part possessed of strongly religious instincts," said he in his report.

With regard to their origin, all we are prepared to state after a careful survey of their languages, manners and customs is that they are undoubtedly of a mixed origin; come from the northwest and had commerce in their early history perhaps through intermarriage with people of Jewish persuation or origin."

Not if It Cost Ten Dollars.

A bottle would I be without Polson's Nervine, writes J. A. Ruth, a farmer living near Toronto, Ont.: "Nervine is the best household liniment I know of. We use it for stomach troubles, indigestion, headache and summer complaint. I know of nothing better to take in hot water to break up a cold,
or to rub on for rheumatism or neuralgia." Every farmer should keep a few bottles of Nervine handy and have smaller doctor bills. Large bottles 25c. at druggists.

THE CURLING RINK.

Address and Presentation to S. I. Melanson—Social and Personal

No doubt this fine weather is a general welcome after the severe storm of last week. In spite of the several feet of snow to shovel the "good boys" have the rink cleared off and everything is in grand shape. The new house is indeed quite an addition and will accommodate a good many who appreciate the heat needed after a few turns on any open air rink. The skaters wish to thank Mr. T. M. Burns for his kindness in giving the boys lumber to build this house. Arrangements have been made to keep the electric light on all winter and the skaters gladly pay their small fee each week. It is wonderful indeed to notice such an unusual interest. People, young and old, seem to take in skating this winter, and we do not doubt but this rink will be kept open till the end of the season.

The curling rink in the Village is also an item of interest. On Saturday afternoon a very interesting game was played between the following rinks:

Ed. Baldwin	P. J. Veniot
Michael Leahy	Henry White
Jos. Bertain	A. Gayton
Dr. G. M. Duncan	T. M. Burns
skip 10	skip 8

The match played in the evening was also interesting but the ice was poor, effected greatly by a slant due to the falling tide. It was as follows:

VILLAGE	TOWN
J. B. Hachey	John Miller
B. Arsenau	E. P. Mackay
C. Landry	Art. White
J. Baldwin	B. Baldwin

Mr. B. D. Branscombe returned on Monday from a short business trip to Campbellton. Mr. Theronne McManus returned on Tuesday morning to his home in Crookston, Minn., after spending a very enjoyable visit with his relatives here.

Mrs. P. Rive and daughters entertained their friends at afternoon whist on Tuesday.

Mrs. Alex. Melanson of Jacquet River spent Monday in town. Mr. O. F. Frenette left for Moncton Monday morning after spending a few weeks here with his sister, Mrs. Jos. J. Melanson.

Miss Millie Carter returned on Saturday last from a lengthy visit with friends in Boston.

Much regret is indeed expressed at the departure of our friends Mr. and Mrs. Samuel J. Melanson, who left on Tuesday morning for Crookston, Minn., and intend making the west their future abode. At a regular meeting of the H. F. T. A. Society, of which Mr. Melanson was Treasurer, he was presented with a very beautiful traveller's toilet case and an address read by Mr. Arthur Melanson was as follows—to which Mr. Melanson responded expressing appreciation of their kindness and bidding them all farewell.

To Mr. S. J. Melanson, Treasurer of H. F. T. A. Society, Bathurst Village.

It is with intense regret that we, the members of the H. F. T. A. Society, learn that you are about to sever your connection with us by your early departure for the west. We beg to assure you as a founder and officer of our society that we have always recognized the praiseworthy manner in which you have endeavored to promote the cause of temperance and the regularity with which you have discharged your duties in connection with the society.

Your high character, business integrity and well known zeal in the promotion of every good work will cause you to be missed not only by your immediate friends but by the whole community, who have learned to esteem and appreciate your good qualities.

We have also to record our regrets at the departure of Mrs. Melanson, regrets which we are sure will be shared by all those who know the need of a charitable and christian friend.

That you may both long continue in your new field of labor to be the useful and respected members of society you have been here and that you may enjoy many years of health and happiness and prosperity is the sum of good wishes on your behalf of your fellow members of this society.

In conclusion we request you to accept this souvenir as a mark of our esteem and friendship.

The members of the C. M. B. A. society also met on Monday evening at 8 o'clock and expressed their regrets on his departure, of which society he was also Treasurer, and presented him with an elegant gold-mounted ebony cane engraved; an address was read by Mr. John J. Harrington.

READING ALOUD.

An Accomplishment That Is Neglected Too Much Nowadays.

Reading aloud well is, an accomplishment, ranking next to music as a means of entertainment at home and in the family circle. In a past generation the long winter evenings were looked forward to with pleasing anticipations, which were realized when they were chiefly spent at home, and going to parties was the exception. The children and grandchildren all gathered in the common living room, and one read aloud while others busied themselves with some handwork, and all save very small ones, who had an early bedtime, listened with attention and interest. There is much talk just now about the study of child nature. It would astonish some of these students could they know how much good literature intended for mature minds was comprehended and appreciated by children when they were given a chance to become acquainted with it. Sir Walter Scott's novels and poems, "Paradise Lost," and other similar readings have been a strong factor in forming a good taste in literature when heard by children from seven to ten years of age. Such children have, of their own volition, learned large parts of "The Lady of the Lake," "The Lay of the Last Minstrel," and many small poems of great merit. One lady, recently dead, took pleasure, when long past her eightieth year, in repeating gems of poetry learned in her early childhood.

There is too much light and trashy reading for children. They are left too much to themselves in choice of books. Parents are too apt to be engrossed in their own pursuits to give their children the proper training in reading aloud at home. Too much dependence is placed on their being taught at school. At school there is not sufficient time to give each child all the exercise in this that is needed. Reading aloud should be a home habit. One principal of a school has recognized this, and is making an effort to encourage children in the habit. He gives a credit to children for home reading, and sends a report from the parents, and also gives the pupil an opportunity to tell to his class the things he has read. The responsibility of a child's education is not wholly the teacher's. The teacher is simply to supplement the efforts of the parent, to supply what it is inconvenient or impossible for the parent to give. Schools are not intended to take a parent's place.—Montreal Star.

POSTMASTER AT 86.

Robert Lawrie, of St. Catharines, Has Filled Out His Years.

On the 27th April, 1904, Postmaster Robert Lawrie of St. Catharines celebrated his 86th birthday. He has been postmaster 28 years, and is as hale and hearty as when appointed by the Mackenzie Administration.

Mr. Lawrie was born on April 27, 1818, at Inverkeithing, in the eastern part of Scotland. He left his home on his nineteenth birthday, April 27, 1837, and sailed from Liverpool for New York on the sailing vessel Bridgetown. The voyage lasted seven weeks, and he landed on June 15. From New York he went to Buffalo, the trip consuming ten days via the Erie Canal. Crossing to Canada, the young Scotchman soon found himself taking a strenuous part in public affairs. William Lyon Mackenzie had succeeded in bringing about what is known in history as "Mackenzie's Rebellion." Mr. Lawrie joined a Scotch company of volunteers, organized by Capt. Edgeworth Fisher, at Chippewa, to aid in suppressing the outbreak. The sum total of the military equipment of each company was a musket, an Indian blanket and a Glengarry cap. Nevertheless, they were imbued with a spirit of sturdy loyalty to the established order of affairs, and did yeoman service throughout the "trouble."

Mr. Lawrie has been a member of the board of managers of Knox Presbyterian Church for years.

Mr. Tibbs Knew.
A visitor to Toronto last week was Mr. James Boyle, some time private secretary to President McKinley, and now United States Consul at Liverpool. Mr. Boyle is an old Torontoian, having been at one time a printer on The Mail. He is not noted for suavity, and he had an encounter with Mr. Horace Tibbs, chief clerk of the King Edward, who possesses that quality in large measure. Mr. Boyle was in a great state of mind last Sunday as to whether he could get his baggage duly sent to the station on that day, for he remembered Toronto of old. Mr. Tibbs assured him that the luggage would be sent to the depot on time, and, on Mr. Boyle's fourth or fifth question—and his reassurance—Mr. Tibbs remarked, in all innocence, "The most difficult folks on earth to deal with are Government officials."

"Why?" said Boyle, "I happen to be a Government official myself."

"No amendment," answered Mr. Tibbs.—Toronto News.

Radio Activity in Flowers.

A French scientist has discovered evidence of radio activity in the petals of several perfume bearing flowers. When geraniums or verbenas are placed near selenium with which an electric current has been interrupted, the metal at once displays signs of strange activity and becomes an electric conductor. These rays have been named N rays.

SILCHESTER'S MYSTERY.
Remains of Some of the Old Roman Houses Are Missing.

The excavations carried out during the last fourteen years by the Society of Antiquaries on the site of the ancient Romano-British City of Silchester ("Calleva Atrebatum") have revealed some very curious circumstances which have yet to be explained. The city is surrounded by a large wall nearly two miles in length, overgrown with trees and overgrown with creeping plants, enclosing an area of 100 acres. Outside runs a deep fosse and large mound. This mound—sections of which have been taken—is composed solely of earth soil, while the fosse or ditch has been dug out of the gravel soil which is found a foot or so under the ground all over the country in and around Silchester, and of which one would suppose the mound to be made, since the surface soil would not have been sufficient by itself.

The question is, why was the mound made solely of earth soil, and where did this earth come from? The only explanation is that the mound is composed of all the earth removed from the surface when the foundations of the houses and streets were being formed and laid out; but this seems a curious thing to have done, for a gravel mound would have been far superior. When the remains of the houses and other buildings are uncovered there are found no traces, or very few, of the material of the upper parts, as of other Roman sites, except the foundations and pavements, nor is any of the building material to be seen in neighboring churches, as at St. Albans Abbey, Guildford Castle, and other places, where Saxons and Normans have utilized in their churches and castles material from Roman sites. This seems to suggest that the walls of the buildings only extended a few feet above the ground, wood being used in the upper parts; but this could hardly have been the case in such an important place as Silchester, although this is the only explanation so far to account for the non-existence of the materials of the upper parts of the buildings.

There are also many pits 18 feet to 30 feet deep, at the bottom of which are found perfect pots among much rubbish and broken pottery. How did these come there? Some of the pits were possibly wells, and the pots might have been accidentally dropped in by those fetching water (the water breaking their fall and preventing them from being shattered), and after the wells were "dried up," they were used for throwing in rubbish—thus covering the vessels accidentally dropped in.
