Lloyd George's New Residence Wrecked by Infernal Machine

House of British Chancellor Near London Partially Razed by Bomb Supposed to Have Been Placed by Militant Suffragettes.

London, Feb. 19.—An explosion, believed to have been caused by militant suffragettes, partially wrecked early this morning the country residence in course of erection for Chancellor of the Exchequer David Lloyd George at Walton Heath, near London.

A bomb had been placed in one of the rooms of the residence, which is a modest one adjoining the golf links on which Mr. Lloyd George plays.

The infernal machine was so powerful that neighbors who were attracted by the explosion, found the thick walls of the house split in all directions, and most of the rooms were wrecked. Hat Pins the Clue.

Two seven-pound tin-cans of black powder also had been placed in two separate rooms among heaps of wood shavings, which had been saturated with oil, and in the centre of which burning candles had been fixed. The only clues obtained by the police are two broken hat pins, which were found among the wreckage. It was declared by the neighbors that an automobile containing several people passed through a near-

ECIDEDLY different expresses the new features not too strongly. In the separate coats there has been an entire transformation in the styles from what has been shown for many seasons. The charm they possess is borrowed from the second empire period. The new cutaway effect is charmingly suited to the 45 and 48 inch length coats, which are fastened well over to one side. Buttons are a prominent feature in trimmings. New cloths and colorings are shown in fancy ratine, eponge and soft tweeds, also the new Bedford and whipcord worsteds and matelasse in checks, stripes and plain weaves. Two and three color combinations are prominent in the tweed effects, and some lightweight chinchillas in white or tan.

One New Feature After Another

When we view the display of ladies' and misses' suits, the one thing that appeals to us is the variety of novelty styles. Many pretty tricks in finishing, giving exclusiveness and individuality, are notable features of this early showing of spring models, a personal inspection of which is necessary to get a correct idea of their beauty, or to inform yourself re the new spring styles. If you wish exclusiveness, look early. Second Floor.

LONDON, WEDNESDAY, FEB. 19. AN ELECTION PORTENT?

Mr. Turriff's amendment to the second reading of the naval bill, calling for an immediate redistribution, seems to indicate that the Liberal members of the House have decided to try to force an appeal to the country, western provinces got a square deal entitled to at least 25 more seats on forced by the Opposition, made it impossible to put through a properlyconsidered redistribution bill in the session of that year. The census was not begun till June, and the results were not known till October. The House dissolved in July, and the election was held in September.

The Opposition is on impregnable ground in demanding justice for the west, whether preparatory or not to a determined fight on the naval issue.

There is no shadow of an excuse for further delay in giving the west its dues. The Government has been installed for over sixteen months, and the second session of Parliament. The shelving of redistribution has plainly a strategical relation to the naval bill. The Government knows that the Liberal party would be greatly strengthened in the west in an election with the new seats, and has loaded the dice. It can be compelled to dissolve Parliament by resolute obstruction, but it cannot be forced to pass a redistribution bill. The claims of justice and fair play will count for nothing; the only thing that will weigh with the Government is western resentment. The fight of the Opposition rights of the western provinces will put the Conservative party, particularly western Conservatives, in a position as uncomfortable as indefensible.

A Conservative member, Mr. Mac Yean, of South York, in moving that the Railway Commission report upon the bona fides of the application, raised the general question of public control of mergers and of company capitaliza-

Replying to the contention of Mr. Carvell that Parliament should begin to regulate the capitalization of public service corporations, the Finance Minister said that such legislation must come gradually, and must be extended even to industrial companies, but "the time was not vet.'

Two years ago the Conservative party in the House of Commons thought the time had then arrived. It supported a resolution by Mr. Monk calling for a public investigation to ascertain how far recent mergers, or the methods of carrying them out, affected the public interest. Mr. Borden complained that in Canada there were several branches of industry whose output and prices were "absolutely reg- didn't hear it. ulated by direct and positive orders from great corporations in the United States," He pleaded for immediate action by Parliament in these words:

"Whether or not we agree with the remedy he (Mr. Monk) proposes, are worth it whether or not we agree with the terms in which he has couched his resolution, I think we must all admit that he has done a public service in bringing the subject to the attention of Parliament. For my part, I am in-clined to think that instead of investigation we want some legislation. I am inclined to think that Parliament is at the present time pos-sessed of about all the information necessary to enable us to put some legislation on the statute book of

AN ART GALLERY FOR LONDON. London has yet no civic art gallery no permanent collection of pictures which the artiloving citizen can visit and enjoy at will. Is the time not ripe for a beginning?

London possesses a creditable num. ber of art connoisseurs and buyers, and artists as well. Anyone visiting the art display at the Western Fair in September last, could not but note how favorably the work of local artists compared with canvases from outside point. There are also in the city several excellent private collections. These are proofs of an art appreciation and art atmosphere, which should yield some public achievement.

Mr. William Thom son in the Farmers' Advocate of this week, describes the valuable collection contained in the Detroit Museum of Art, which he recently visited. From a small beginning in 1883 the collection has been enlarged until at the present time three-quarters of a million would be a moderate valuation of the museum." We heartily concur in Mr. Thompson's wish that the foundations of an art

The structure of British industry stands ound and solid today. The thing that dees show signs of cracks and crevices s the crazy construction which he and he other tariff "reformers" have been endeavoring to erect. This very handsome young woman is fortunate in having what is called a "stock" figure, for in buying things ready-made she requires no alterations, which is again a saving. Allied to her shrewdness in buying is great natural taste and great commonsense. For example, she never buys a shopworn or

OF MUNICIPAL LIFE SAYS MAYOR HOCKEN

Alpha Brotherhood and Friends Hear Stirring Address From Queen City's Chief Executive.

Counsels Press and Public to Encourage and Not Find Fault With the Aldermen.

Mayor Horatio C. Hocken of Toronto addressed two hundred members of the Alpha Brotherhood of the First Methodist Church on "Civic Government" in Wesley Hall Tuesday night, Remarking on the number of young men present, Mayor Hocken declared that when half-dozen signed contracts to the any city succeeded in getting the betlocal club, among them, his own. Mr. E. R. Dennis, who presided, in introducing Mayor Hocken, said he bethe Rube. His name is John Mulin, asome more signed contracts soon. The citizen who is unwilling to bear his share should not be entitled to enjoy the privileges of a citizen.
"In our day," said Mr. Hocken, "the citizens of every city expect the city fathers to make life easier for them. It is the business of municipal government to do for the people what they cannot do for themselves. The problems of civic government today are deeper problems than they were in the socalled 'good old times,' when there were no systems of municipal light, water, heat or power; when the streets were unlighted and unpaved, and there were Free Ferries to Toronto.

"Today we have playgrounds for the oung, and parks for the old, and cities are doing more and more for both the education and entertainment of their citizens. New York is giving free concerts on a large scale in its public parks and recreation centres. The day is not far distant when we will be running free ferries from our city Toronto Island, and when your city will be running free ferries down the Thames to your summer resort.

"The protection of the youth of the ity is one of the most important problems of civic government. It does not do to idly criticise the police departments, because occasionally a Chinese ioss house is discovered in the city.
Toronto's Theatre Problem.

"Another great and urgent problem of municipal government is the care of the feeble-minded. One cannot over-emphasize the danger which the feeble-minded girl is at large. "I do not advocate waste or extravagance, but economy should not be practiced at the cost of doing without nstitutions and improvements that are necessary, and can only be deferred at the most for a very short time."

Politics Good For Health. "It is often said in extenuation of civic and political abuses that men are not in politics for their health. But I say that men, and young men, ought to be in politics for their health, for their own moral health and the moral health of the community. And down in my town I am doing my part to get he young women interested in polities.

"Party politics should not enter into municipal affairs. There is no reason why a Tory should vote for a Tory or a tiberal for Liberal should vote for a Liberal election to the city council. The city council has nothing to do with the tar-ist or other national questions. You should not vote for a man merely because you know him. It is your duty to know the other man also.

Under No Obligation. "There is a misapprehension that the man who is elected is under an obligation to the people who elected him, but f the representative performs his duiles rightly, it is really the eltizens who are under obligation to him.

"The city government is the most important government in existence. The Federal Government touches us at the customs house and the postoffice, and the Provincial Government provides us with prisons and insane asylums, but the civic government touches us every time we go out of doors. ### The Toronto Globe announces that Bobby McWhirter, former catcher of the London Baseball Club, has quit the game and gone into business in that city.

This announcement brings to mind the release of McWhirter by Frank Bowerman last spring, when the Toronto fad reported here. Although McWhirter looked better than any catcher London had at that time Bowerman released him simply because of his knocking a couple of the other players on the team and praising himself. In other words, Bobby McWhirter was "canned" because McWhirter came to London from the Guelph club the season previous, and it turned out later that he was practically released from the Leafs for the same thing for which London let him go last ear. McWhirter finished the season with London under Joe Keenan, and later in the year when the management vacancy occurred, the report was circulated in Toronto that Bobby was to be the new manager of the London team. The report is believed to have been originated by McWhirter, who made frequent applications to the London club for the position and almost demanded that he be given it.

When he reported to London last spring he was in good shape and when he donned a uniform and mitt, and got out on the diamond, Bobby had more pepper than any other player. Bower-man was pleased with him at first and nothing would have prevented the Toronto lad from making the team and holding a place all season. But his natural bump of conceit got working overtime after the practice. That evening he tried to tell Manager Bowerman just how to run the team and what players to release and who to sign. The next morning McWhirter was surprised when he from the morning workout, and was handed his own re-The story got around the circuit, and not a club made an effort to get the catcher.

His bungry eyes feasted upon every ing tree strand of her hair, as though each were an dindividual Julie. It lay massed in rich folds upon the top of her head, and at the temples and in the gentle nape of her neck escaped in tiny silken tendrils. He followed every line for her body with strendtrils eagerness. He made no attempt to check his passion. For the moment he gave himself up utterly. If at any time during the last few months he thought he had fought a good fight and won, he now realized the mockery of his supposed victory. Never had he felt the sheer intoxication of love as now; he had never as now realized the power and grip of that passion. He might as well have tried to check single-handed the onrush of a broken log jam as his present emotions. The gift was part of his very soul, part of his very being. He would nave had to lie to every instinct in him to have denied this. He was able to connect her with no past save his own; with he present no future, save that.

connect her with no past save his own; with no present, no future, save that. The present picture told him what should be. If circumstances had altered that decree, then they were basely wrong. Here she was and here she belonged, nd the child in her arms should have been their child. Trembling and dizzy, he watched her; with dry lips and an aching heart he watched her; with a joy that was almost pain he watched her. She was rocking back and forth, with her head bent over the child. Though the lad had long since gone to sleep, she still sang on in a low monotone. She raised her head, and with her eyes on the crimson embers continued her song. Her face grew infinitely ten-der, infinitely wistful. It was a mother's face Nat saw then as she sang on, not to the child in her arms, but to her own dream children. And those dream children dren were his dream children. They were the same who had watched him at his building, who had watched him at his building, who had watched him in the dawn of those glorious purple mornings, who had played about the barren sills when his building was done. To them she was crooning; to them who had moaned because they were motheriess. It was a black lie that she belonged to anyone

She rose with the child in her arms, she rose with the child in her arms, and, still singing, tiptoed into the dark of the bedroom. After she had disappeared, Nat still heard her voice, and even without seeing was able to follow her movements as she tucked the little fellow into his crib. Then there was a pause as though she were praying there. Then she stole out, pausing on the sill a moment to make sure the boy was asleep. He heard her sigh as she came on across and she covered her face with her hands.
Nat strode to her side. She raised her head and stared up at him. In one long unfettered gaze he met her eyes and then fell upon one khee in front of her.
"God' forgive me, Julie," he choked. "But it's true now. as it's always been."
She neither moved nor spoke. Right or wrong, wife or not, no woman could resent the honest, whole-souled confession expressed in that cry. The sight of him there with bowed head, his big frame shaken in his terrible struggle for control, gave her courage. She knew that in the end he would win—that he would be strong. Though his very presence

The Cry of a Hungry Heart.

But always she had been a silent figure. He had never heard her voice. And now—the wonderful melody of it to him who had not heard it for six long months! It was this which made her now a glorious reality.

His hungry eyes feasted upon every strand of her hair, as though each were a separate and individual Julie. It lay massed in rich folds upon the top of her head, and at the temples and in the gentle nape of her neck escaped in tiny silken tendrils. But even as his strength was strength, so his weakness was her strength also. "Nat," she said quietly, "I don't think you know what you're saying."

To Get Rid of Wrinkles and Bad Complexions

[From Beauty's Mirror.] It is more important now than during the period of profuse perspiration, to keep the pores clean. All cosmetics clog the pores. In winter this interferes greatly with elimination of waste material, injuring instead of aiding the complexion. Victoria Estimates For Year To Be Present at the Next Meeting.

At the meeting of the hospital trust Tuesday afternoon an application from Mr. H. Bastla, representative of the Trades and Labor Council, asking the patronage of the hospital trust for a summer carnival to be held in Queen's Park in July, was received.

Half the net profits are to be divided between the trust and the Trades and Labor Council, the former to be used for furniture for the new tuberculosis ward. Chairman Gartshore and Trustee Meredith will investigate, and if the shows are such as can be approved of the trust will give its support to the exhibition.

The estimates for the year were presented, but were held over until the next meeting as it was thought there might be a few more items to add., It is not expected that they will be larger than those of last year, when the trust asked of the city the sum of $41,000.

It was the determination that the battle in which heavy artillery had been used in the streets since the outbreak of the Diaz mutiny must come to an end, that led a group of senators last night to urge Gen. Huerta to the stroke that would not only terminate the terrible conflict, but at the same time remove the Madero family from the Province of Mexico.

MEXICO'S NEW PRESIDENT

Washington, Feb. 18.—General Huerta, the new president of Mexico, is described by attaches of the embassy as a stern soldier of the type of former President Diaz, a man of great personal bravery, and a friend of the elder Diaz. On account of his long service and bravery, it was said, he was popular with the army, and well known throughout the Republic. Felix Diaz, leader of the revolution, and General Huerta also had been good friends before the Madero conflict arrayed them in opposing

It is not expected that the United States will be in haste to withdraw its battleships and cruisers from Mexican waters. The problems of reconstruction which Mexico must now face will require no little time to inaugurate, and the presence of United States warships will serve as a reminder to all elements that American life and property must be protected. The Elk Lake telegram and the Liberals' abolish-the-bar policy were the bones of contention between the polifical leaders. Sir James nailed colors to his declaration that for weeks he kept the ubiquitous telegram in his desk in the House awaiting a nove on the part of the Opposition to eek through the course of regular par-Hamentary procedure the contents of that document. But his colors would not stay pinned, for both Mr. Rowell and Mr. J. C. Elliott (West Middlesex) conclusively showed the House tha Sir James was evading the point; that repeatedly and vehemently the Opposition had clamored last session for a disclosure of the telegram's origin, and Sir James had as often refused to reveal it. The Premier's reply to these pointed rejoinders was more in the form of retaliation. He made a somewhat sinister personal attack upon Mr Rowell sarcastically alluding to "the emotional platform of my honorable friend in the matter of temperance egislation."

Addresses by Mr. W. Proudfoot (Centre Huron), Dr. James McQueen (North Wentworth), Hon. W. J. Hanna, and the two leaders, brought the prolonged debate to a close.

Mr. Rowell, addressing the House on his temperance policy, declared that his party stood for the abolition of the bar. Lost Conscience.

"If the resolution means nothing," Mr. Rowell declared, "and the Government is not going to go on with the Government in the meantime discovered that the proposal to abolish treating was not as popular as they thought it would be."

On the Elk Lake telegram, Mr. Rowthat whilst the Prime Minister sometimes says he will not do things and told us last session that he would not tell us whether he sent the telegram or not, if we only stick at it we can say with reference to the construction of this branch, between a man in Elk Lake and an officer of the out of the revised railway act. you ask. No, not all, because not all wheat is clean, nor all flour mills.

Wheat is dusty when the flour mills receive it. There are particles of sand in it, and also foreign seed matter. Not until all these impurities are completely removed is the wheat ready for milling.

Even then the most delicate task of the miller still remains—to remove the crease dirt. Embedded in each grain of wheat is a tiny deposit of dark mineral matter. It is called "crease dirt" and must be removed before the miller can make clean flour.

You can always depend on Rainbow Flour for extreme cleanliness. The care taken in its manufacture is almost mysterious. This carefulness begins with the farmer who raises the wheat and ends with the chemist who analyzes every lot of flour as it comes through to be sure of its purity.
