LONDON PAYS DEEP TRIBUTE TO GEORGE REID

Rev. H. J. Uren Elected President of London Conference

CONFERENCE ELECTS CITY PASTOR AS PRESIDENT

Rev. H. J. Uren Honored by Methodists at Windsor Gathering.

LONDONERS LEAD

Rev. A. E. M. Thompson and
Rev. John A. Agnew Were Second and Third in Voting.

By OLIVE HOGG,
Special to The Advertiser
by a Staff Reporter.

Windsor, June 5.—Rev. H. J. Uren, pastor of Colborne Street Methodist Church, London, with a vote of 155 out of 279 votes cast, was elected president of the London Methodist Conference at the session today in Central Church. He succeeded Rev. W. E. Milson. Three London pastors led the voting. Rev. A. E. M. Thompson of Central Church was the runner up with a vote of 48, and the next in order was Rev. John A. Agnew, pastor of Ridout Street Methodist Church.

In his inaugural address as president, Mr. Uren took from the morning papers what he declared to be one of the optimistic signs of the day with regard to the question of church union. "The papers this morning," he said, "tell us that Rev. Dr. Clarence McKinnon has been elected moderator of the general assembly of the Presbyterian Church in Canada. I regard this as a sign of the great courage of the sister church in possession of the right spirit, and that it is manifest in the election of a man who is not only so staunchly and steadfastly for the cause of church union."

Church Challenged.

It seems that this mighty stream of the great river of God has been obstructed for a time. The underbrush of denominational bigotry and jealousy has gathered to stop its passage. There is the sill of the moment. The waters are rising higher, and as they rise they gather strength. Still they move on at last, washing away with their flood all obstructions in the path of this mighty, forward stream."

On the question of the O. T. A. Mr. Uren said the church was directly challenged.

"When the fight comes, I am sure that Methodism will stand, as it has always stood, in the forefront of the conflict."

A period of retirement, he said, had been recognized as a necessity by the political leaders of the country, but he urged that this be not extended to the church, and especially not to its missionary departments.

"It is with heartache," he said, "that we think of withdrawing our workers in the home missions of our land because we have not the sinews of war with which to send them forth. Shall we not all get under the burden, satisfy ourselves with less of luxury and minister and man alike share the sacrifice of giving the gospel of salvation to all the world."

Ordained 25 Years Ago.

Mr. Uren's election carries with it a feature of unique interest, one of Please See Page 4, Column 1.

SLAIN CHICAGO BOY WAS AGAINST PENALTY

Robert Franks Had Debated
Capital Punishment Two Weeks Before Death.

Associated Press Despatch.

Chicago, June 5.—Robert Franks, kidnapped and slain schoolboy, on whose account the state is seeking indictments against two minors on two charges, punishable by death, two weeks before his death debated against capital punishment. His team upheld the negative verdict, and against a team, including his brother Jack, in a school debate on: Resolved, that capital punishment is justified."

"Would it not better serve the community," he asked, "to put weak and mentally depraved criminals in institutions where they can be reformed, they would no longer be a menace? Punishment should be reformative, never vindictive."

LEOPOLD-LOEB TRIALS MAY COMMENCE JULY 15

Fund of One Million Already Created For Defence of Youths.

Associated Press Despatch.

Chicago, June 4.—Trial July 15 of Nathan Leopold, Jun., and Richard Loeb, "millionaires' sons," admitted kidnappers and slayers of Robert Franks, schoolboy son of Jacob Franks, millionaire real estate man, will be sought by the state. That is the earliest date consonant with Illinois procedure.

Two indictments against each youth, charging kidnapping for ransom, and murder, both capital offences, have been prepared and await the report of the grand jury, expected to complete its examination of witnesses today. Arraignment is scheduled for Monday.

The grand jury will continue to examine witnesses after reporting the case, however, said Robert E. Crowe, state's attorney, in order to get the testimony on record on oath and thereby prevent a changing of statements or intentional forgetfulness.

Clarence Darrow, chief of counsel for the defence, was said to be considering retention of a corps of experts, including New York and Chicago attorneys, for retention of which $1,000,000 has been created. Pitted against them, State Attorney Crowe, in personal charge of the case, said he would have three assistants identified with the case since the finding of the boy's body May 21.

State's attorneys are not sure the signed shorthand notes of the confessions of the youths would be admissible at their trial, but believe the chain of evidence against them otherwise is complete.

Authorities have scant attention to efforts to connect the youths with the murder last fall of Freeman Louis Tracy, university student, and the mutilation attack on Charles Ream. Chief Hughes said: "Neither are we interested. We are not interested."

MODERATOR MAY FORBID DEBATE ON UNION ISSUE

Head of the Presbyterian
Assembly Takes Definite Stand.

Canadian Press Despatch.

Owen Sound, June 5.—The committee of the assembly on church union met today and adjourned to meet at the call of the chairman. It is stated that the committee has nothing ready to submit to the assembly. The subject of church union is to be brought up on Friday afternoon, but it is considered certain that nothing will be done at that time, unless there are developments at Ottawa. The belief is that the committee on church union will be in session all Saturday afternoon when the assembly takes recess. The deliberations of the committee will be prepared at that time and will probably be submitted to the assembly on Monday morning first thing.

It is now pretty generally conceded that no debate on the principle of union can occur at this assembly; and no speech on this subject can be delivered under any cover. The moderator of the assembly will, it is said, take the definite ground that the matter of union has not been decided so far as the assembly is concerned, and that the question of the general principle of union cannot be discussed.

It is said that the considerable proportion of the present assembly opposed to union may make a determined effort to secure a discussion of some phases of the principle of union and that if this is not granted there may be a spectacular development. It is conceivable that at some point an actual cleavage may occur, and that a walkout which was anticipated at Port Arthur may develop here. This is not, however, actually contemplated and could only occur as the development of very strong feeling at this assembly.

Sen. Robertson Sponsors Motion Measure.

Canadian Press Despatch.

Ottawa, June 5.—On the motion of Senator Robertson, the senate today referred the industrial disputes act to its railway committee, so that interested parties could give evidence on these. Senator Robertson read a memo, signed by the representative of the railway engineers, firemen, conductors and trainmen, and also by the Trades and Labor Council, representing the railway shopmen, asking this be done.

Senator Beaudry read a letter from the Asbestos Mine Operators' Association of Quebec, protesting against the proposed amendments. He agreed to complete its examination of witnesses today. Arraignment is scheduled for Monday.

The grand jury will continue to examine witnesses after reporting the case, however, said Robert E. Crowe, state's attorney, in order to get the testimony on record on oath and thereby prevent a changing of statements or intentional forgetfulness.

LAST HONOR PAID GREAT LONDONER BY CITIZENS

Remains of Late George M.
Reid Laid to Rest at Oakland Cemetery.

IMPRESSIVE SERVICE.

Hundreds Fill Church As Final
Tribute Paid Noted Citizen.

The mortal remains of George M.
Elroy Reid, philanthropist and public worker, were laid to rest this afternoon in Oakland Cemetery. London mourned a great citizen who had worked in the interests of his fellows for nearly a half century and its tribute to his memory was outstanding.
Respecting the wishes of the late Mr. Reid's family, privacy was observed in the brief, simple service at the residence on Central avenue.
But at the later service in First Presbyterian Church a vast throng of representative citizens gathered.

Those at the church came from every calling in business and professions, from every walk of life and from divergent welfare organizations.
But they came to pay a last personal tribute to the remains of a man who had been a friend to all, rather than as official representatives from organizations.

As if in tribute to a great citizen, a man who had brought sunshine and happiness to the needy, a warm sun shone, with a bright, clear sky, all during the ceremony and long after the last rites had been observed at the cemetery.

Brief Private Service.

Gathered in the drawing-room of the old Reid home on Central avenue were only immediate members of the family and a few close friends. Mrs.
Reid, the widow, Col. Eric Reid, D.
S. O., the only son, Miss Dorothy and Miss Marjorie, daughters, as well as brothers of Mr. Reid were present, as Col. the Rev. Dr. Beattie read the brief private service. The ceremony was short, just a brief, simple tribute amongst those who had been dearest to the prominent man.

At 2:30 o'clock the remains were taken from the home, and tenderly conveyed by the bearers to the funeral car. The family and others who had gathered at the private service entered cars, followed by others carrying floral tributes.

The procession made its way to the First Presbyterian Church, just two blocks distant.

Great Crowd Paid Tribute.

A great crowd waited to honor the friend whom London has lost. From Clarence street to the church entrance they stood with bowed heads as the cortege came slowly up the church walk. The bearers conveyed the casket up the center aisle and brought it to rest at the front of the church.

Members of the family, the clergy, the mayor and aldermen and directors and members of the chamber of commerce followed and took places reserved at the front of the church.
Representatives of a host of public organizations followed, and the great church was filled.

Rev. William Beattie, D.D., C.M.G., minister at First Presbyterian Church

the church, with the Very Rev. L.

Murdock Probe Chairman Rules Cabinet Minister Not Obligated To Reveal Names

BANK DIRECTORS GIVE TESTIMONY

E. Guss, Porter Is Unable To Force Answers From Cabinet Minister.

PROBE CONTINUES

Associated Press Despatch. Ottawa, June 5.—A ruling by Chairman Joseph E. Archambault that the oath of a minister of the crown will not permit him to divulge the names of those attending a meeting of the cabinet met with strong opposition in the preliminary committee investigating the charges this morning against Hon. James Murdock, minister of labor. E. Guss, Porter, member for West Hastings, who made the charges against Mr. Murdock on the floor of the House of Commons, was questioning Hon. George P. Graham, minister of railways and canals. He had asked Mr. Graham whether a meeting of cabinet was held on the morning of Aug. 15, 1923, following the midnight visit of J. E. M. Stewart, a director of the Home Bank, to the prime minister, and had received an affirmative reply.

Question Is Barred. "I won't allow that question," objected the chairman, who went on to say that Chief Justice McKeown has ruled such evidence out of order during the Home Bank inquiry. "We are not bound by that ruling," Mr. Porter said. "I am not asking what occurred at the meeting." Mr. Archambault would not allow the question. E. B. Ryckman, Conservative member for East Toronto, appealed, saying that matters were being "driven to an absolute absurdity." A vote resulted in the chair being sustained 16 to 5.

A large number of witnesses appeared before the committee this morning. J. E. M. Stewart, a director of the Home Bank, concluded his testimony. Though Testified. R. P. Gough, president of the defunct bank, and S. Jones Jones, another of the directors, were examined and told of their visit to Ottawa and Montreal in a last-minute attempt to save the institution. Mr. Graham and Hon. James A. Robb, acting minister of finance, were also examined. Both of these ministers said that they had no recollection of discussing the condition of the bank with Mr. Murdock outside of cabinet and evidence in regard to what took place in the council chamber was of course barred. Mr. Robb admitted, however, that the representatives of the bank were brought to the condition of the bank were of sufficient importance to bring to the attention of his colleagues.

UNREST IN RUMANIA DENIED BY OFFICIALS

Stock Market Jugglers Blamed For Recent Sensational Rumors.

Associated Press Despatch. Bucharest, June 5.—Formal denial of sensational rumors regarding the internal situation in Rumania is made in a semi-official statement which attributes the dissemination of the stories to persons seeking to affect the stock market. One of the rumors was that General Averesco, former premier, was marching on Bucharest at the head of 50,000 peasants. It is explained that General Averesco merely presided at the annual congress of his party outside Bucharest and that the meeting was peacefully dispersed. The semi-official statement also declares "exaggerated reports" concerning the loss of life in the recent arsenal explosion near the city. Regarding the general situation it says: "The most perfect order prevailed throughout Rumania."

COUNCIL WILL HEAR OF LIQUOR SUPPLY

Report On Consumption At House of Refuge To Be Made Today.

County council guns were being well-oiled this morning in preparation for the barrage that will undoubtedly be laid down this afternoon when the report of the special committee on liquor consumption at the House of Refuge is made.

The report itself is very mild, it was learned, and will recommend that a small quantity of liquor only be kept at the house in future.

Some councillors with prohibition leanings will probably want to know whether the inmates received all the whiskey ordered by the keeper. It is what happened to the rest of it. No names are mentioned in the report. The grant of $4,000 to East Williams for a bridge promised at the January session will also be before the council, and last night's debate on the matter will be mild to what state of affairs, Mr. Horst declared, the council visited the new bridge at Dorchester this morning and inspected the new branch of the Bank of Toronto in that village.

Hoover was "pinned" by Constable Nollie making 27 miles an hour on the Pipe Line road on Sunday night from the Cove to McAlpine street. Questioned by Nollie, he said he didn't think he was going that fast and asked the officer to let him go. He was fined 10 and costs.

W. H. Murch Was President of Ontario Library Association.

Special To The Advertiser. St. Thomas, June 4.—W. H. Murch, one of St. Thomas' leading citizens, passed away at his home, 34 Elgin street, Tuesday evening, after a lengthy illness. Mr. Murch was considered one of the best versed men in the city and an authority on books. His literary and unrivalled knowledge of literature has always been at the service of the citizens.

Born in Devon, England, he came to Canada when a boy and ventured into the photography business. Soon he entered the services of Archibald MacLachlan, publisher. Six years later he started for himself in the book-selling business. In 1901 he sold out to M. G. Hay, and took over the management of the Southwestern Loan Company, which later amalgamated with the Southern Loan Company. After serving an indefinite period with the loan corporation, he entered the bond business with offices at the Royal Bank Building, retiring last winter because of ill-health.

He served many years on the St. Thomas library board, and was recently appointed to the chairmanship of the Ontario Library Association. Music was a favorite hobby. He was associated with Dr. Vogt in a Glee Club here many years ago, and was a familiar figure in opera productions in the old Opera House. In other work of the city he has also been prominent. The Alma College board of directors, the Y. M. C. A. board of directors, the Elgin Historical Society and activities associated with the First Methodist Church welcomed him. He is the author of "History of Methodism in St. Thomas." Travel had a great fascination for him, as he visited Great Britain, Europe, the Mediterranean, California, Florida and Western Ontario. He was past grand master of the Knights of Pythias of the domain of Ontario and a charter member of Rathbone Lodge.

Surviving him are his widow and four children, Mrs. John A. Murch, Mrs. Jeffrey, and Mr. and Mrs. Murphy of Ottawa. The funeral will be held Friday at 2:30 to the St. Thomas Cemetery.

BARBER SHOPS HOMELIKE NOW THAT "BOBS" ARE HERE

Mayor Remarks On Improved Tone in City "Chin-Scrapping Dens."

SAME OLD STORIES

Feminine Magazine Even Discovered Among Pile in the Corner.

Another blessing that has come with bobbed hair, in the opinion of the mayor, is the greatly improved tone of the barber shops in the city. A few days ago, while sitting in one of those silver-dipped thrones in a local chin-scrapping den, he felt that there was something unnatural about the comparatively aesthetic atmosphere that was far removed from the usual repertoire of stories and anecdotes commonly featured as the day's latest.

When he escaped from the steam cloths he discovered two fair things having been tressed trimmed by a most obsequious knight of the shears and came to the conclusion that the bobbing of female hair had done more to rehabilitate the barbering industry in the minds of customers than any other innovation since beards and long hair for men ceased to be fashionable.

Nice and Homelike. "It was wonderful," he said, "how homelike that barber shop seemed. The barbers talked just as much as all barbers do, of course, but they talked of other things, of ships and shoes and sealing wax and cabbage and kings' like 'Jo Walrus in Alice in Wonderland,' and the wild stories of 'Impossible fish caught with imaginary rods and lines of super-strength with the skill of old Isak Walton himself were all quietly dumped into the discard, which was a benefit to all of us."

As for the girls, he talked of such things as weddings and presents, and Advertiser mama dolls, and the latest dance step, and what the fall fashions would look like on stout and thin girls, and the "History of the Universe," and what would happen to the hairpin manufacturers now that all the hair was bobbed, and so on.

Most Refreshing. "In one way and another it was the most refreshing and it was the first time I have seen a barber willing to shut up and listen to what his client was saying. I happened to go by the time of the accident, and he found the windows bright and clean, the mirrors polished up, the floors brushed, and the magazines piled neatly in a corner, and generally a kind of spring cleaning air about the place."

What is more, a feminine publication was featured in the magazine rack. I tell you, whether the bob is the ideal top knot for girls or not, it has done quite a lot in one barber's place and what's more, that's the gain I am getting out of it. From now on, I can get quicker service, a cleaner place to sit in, and I don't have to listen to the same old set of stories every day. What more can a man ask for in the tonorial way?"

Alex. Beemer Convicted of Speeding On Richmond Street Hill. Alex. Beemer used to have a reputation among the police as a speeder, and Sergeant Tomblin caught him speeding down the Richmond street hill, between St. James and Oxford streets, Sunday afternoon at a fairly snappy rate.

Mr. Beemer appealed to the sergeant for a "character," for the last eighteen months, and Sergeant Tomblin did not fail him. The officer declared that Beemer had been driving very carefully during that time.

Giving evidence, Sergeant Tomblin declared he was standing at Oxford and Richmond streets Sunday afternoon when he saw two cars coming down the street apparently racing. Mr. Beemer was in front and was traveling fully 20 miles an hour. When he saw the sergeant and Constable Loader he slowed up and the other car passed him at Piccadilly street.

The other man had paid his fine. "If I wanted to race I would go out in the country," declared Beemer. "It is just as illegal there as in the city," pointed out the court.

"I've given up speeding, the officers will tell you that," stated the young man.

"I'm afraid you were on this occasion. Ten dollars and costs," replied Mr. Graydon.

BUYERS COMPLAIN BIRDS INFECTED

Health Inspector Points Out Little Danger of Catching Disease.

BUY FROM ONE

City Health Inspector Sanders has been worried more or less lately by innocent but irate citizens, who having purchased chickens on the market square, find on getting home that the birds have tuberculosis. Then they either ring up the inspector or go down to his office and demand that he shall come back to the market, help them find the culprit who sold them the fowl and take the necessary action.

"All of which," as the inspector says, "shows that they appreciate the work of this department, but it is entirely impossible for them to fasten the guilt of supplying a diseased chicken on to any particular person on the market, and it is just a waste of time for me to go back with them to the square."

On several occasions when I have done this, the buyer has been apparently quite sure that he bought the bird from a certain man or woman, only to have the fact strenuously denied by the person approached. I would imagine that the best way would be for people to buy as much as possible from someone they know, and then they have some redress. Of course, this is not always possible, and also it is now always possible for the average woman to know a diseased chicken when she is buying it."

The inspector, however, says that science has never known of avian tuberculosis being transmitted to a human, and that the danger from this cause is not as great as might be supposed.

MARKET CONDITIONS WILL BE INSPECTED

Proposed Improvements Cause of Tour by City Officials.

Members of the finance committee, the city engineer, building inspector, and the mayor will pay a visit to the market square this afternoon to investigate conditions under which the local improvements, which consist of new sheds and new cement floors are being undertaken.

The city engineer yesterday estimated the cost of doing the cement work at $14,800, and it was pointed out that the erection of the steel roofs by the building inspector, which is nearly completed.

Aid Smith has been urging the immediate conclusion of this work for some time past, and the delay was due to the fact that the engineer's department was not notified in the spring of the work to be done.

An improvement suggested by Aid Anderson is that the sidewalk on the west side of the "butchers' pavilion" should be reduced in width by three feet, so that cars might have room to park here back to back. At present there is not room for this.

CHIEF MAY PROVIDE WATCHES FOR OFFICERS

Will Put Stop to Any Speeding On the Paved Streets.

"The stop watch will set you, if you don't watch out!"

Although speeding was not particularly on the increase, Chief Birrell is thinking of equipping his men with stop watches to further curb motorist speeding. The watches would be used on the morning that accidents in which people were hurt were on the increase, and something would have to be done about it.

Seventy-five per cent of the most careful drivers exceeded the speed limit on occasions, the chief declared. He would not say how frequently he "stepped on the gas" himself, and certainly wasn't talking on the matter for publication.

Mentioning speeding in Toronto, the head of the department stated he received summonses for London motorists at least once a day. American cars had to be summoned on the spot, otherwise they frequently managed to safely cross the border, where nothing could be done.

Referring to the defence of a young man in court, that he didn't have a copy of the highway act and wasn't conversant with the speed laws, Chief Birrell pointed out that his officers were covered with motor league signs notifying motorists of the proper speeds, and that at the entrance to all villages speed signs were posted.

COUNTY CONDITIONS GOOD, HUMANE INSPECTOR SAYS. Inspector George Furtin of the Humane Society made an inspection in certain sections of the county this morning and reported that everything was in the best of shape.

The bylaw passed by the council several weeks ago prohibiting dogs that are not on the leash to run about the streets will be enforced starting tomorrow. The inspector says that he has answered several emergency cases in the last few days where dogs have been injured because they have been allowed to run loose.

He said that people who owned well-bred dogs kept them shut up and away from the streets and that it is usually the mongrels that cause all the trouble.

"Back was Very Painful I am now Well Again"

Mrs. Wm. Walker, Webbwood, Ont., writes:

"I was sick for several months with my stomach, I had pains in the back, and how I used to dread wash day, for my back would pain so that I couldn't lie down when night came. I also had gas on my stomach, and my appetite was so poor that sometimes I did not care whether I ate or not. The doctor gave me medicine, of which I took a number of bottles without benefit. At last I started to use Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, and although I have only used three boxes, I am quite well again."

REV. DR. C. MCKINNON IS CHOSEN MODERATOR

Halifax Man Elected to High Post in Presbyterian General Assembly.

UNIONIST VICTORY

Halifax Man Elected to High Post by Overwhelming Majority.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY

Dr. Alfred Gandier, Retiring Moderator, Delivers His Valedictory Address.

Special to The Advertiser

Owen Sound, June 4.—In the election by an overwhelming majority of Rev. Dr. Clarence McKinnon as the new moderator of the Presbyterian general assembly, the unionist element scored a decided victory last night at the opening session of the 50th assembly.

It was plain that the contest for the chair was virtually a trial of strength between union and anti-union forces, though Rev. Robert Johnston of Calgary, who nominated Rev. J. Goforth, missionary to Honan, as rival to Dr. McKinnon, was careful to state he did not know his nominee's views on church union. It was notable that, as far as could be gauged, the solid anti-unionist vote went to the veteran missionary, and with it a few others.

Dr. McKinnon, however, had a long lead on his opponent, and though the figures of the official count were not announced it was more than 3 to 1 for the Halifax man.

Rev. Dr. A. Stewart of Perth, who was pastor of the assembly church 20 years ago, was nominated, but retired.

Dr. Gandier Speaks

The assembly listened with almost breathless attention to the sermon of Rev. Dr. Gandier, retiring moderator, which was a challenge to the church to progress, to take the forward and upward look, and not to confine itself to dreams of the glories of the past.

The three principal divisions of Presbyterianism were represented in the nominations placed before the assembly—the theological colleges, the mission fields, and the rank and file of manse and pulpit.

Rev. Dr. Christie of Winnipeg nominated Dr. McKinnon as a man specially suitable to be in office in the jubilee year. As a boy in a manse by the sea he had waited for the return of his father 50 years ago from the first general assembly of the Presbyterian Church. He paid tribute to his gentle voice, those strong incantations of faith that bring all men to his feet.

Dr. D. C. MacGregor of London seconded the nomination and extolled him as a great soul, who, having said his experience in both east and west, could interpret one part of Canada to the other and thus kill the spirit of sectionalism.

Rev. Dr. Johnston of Calgary

followed, submitting to the assembly the name of Dr. Jonathan Goforth. "We have grown past Dominion consideration or empire building," he declared, "we are world citizens, our church is a world church. We have taken world responsibility in the great church of Jesus Christ. Let us stand in a critical hour. Let us pray that we may indeed unite the spirit of the church and that the spirit of God may fall upon us in power."

Dr. Johnston declared that he did not know the views of either Dr. McKinnon or Dr. Goforth upon the subject of union. The nomination was seconded by James Rodgers of Westmont.

From Glenora Presbyterian, strong-hold of ancient highland tradition, came the third nomination of evening. The name of Dr. A. H. Scott, D.D., of Perth, was proposed by Rev. Dr. Leslie Howard of Van Kleek Hill, as that of the retiring moderator, the kind of man needed in the moderator's chair at this juncture in our history.

In touching upon Dr. Scott's qualifications, his nominator recalled that more than thirty years ago he had been pastor of the church in which the present moderator was minister. The nomination of Dr. Scott was seconded by Rev. M. D. Morrison of Dalhousie Mills.

Dr. Scott Withdraws

Immediately following the closing of the nominations, Dr. Scott requested, in the interests of harmony, that he be allowed to withdraw his name. The motion was carried.

The moderator was chosen by a standing vote and the result was obvious soon as Principal McKinnon's supporters rose to their feet.

WARDEN OPPOSES GRANT FOR BIDGE

Method of Trapping Speeders Is Discussed by Middlesex County Council.

After enjoying themselves at Stratford yesterday afternoon at the laying of a cornerstone of the Stratford hospital, it was expected that Middlesex County Council members would have indulged in a short quiet session last night, but the meeting developed into a warm affair.

It all came about when William Ross, reeve of East Williams, asked that a bylaw be passed confirming the council's grant of $4,000 at the January session towards new bridges in East Williams. Warden Henry thought it was time the council stopped giving money to the people's money. Councillor Sullivan also opposed it, stating such grants were the cause of high taxes.

Council to Task

E. T. Reynolds took the council to task, declaring the members always wanted to discuss something after the damage was done. All townships should receive a grant if one township was not to receive a grant.

It was decided that the council should not turn round and do a thing. The highway committee, which recommended the grant at the January session, when it was passed by the council, declared no person opposed the matter in committee. It was too late now to put up a kick, he said.

B. Pike thought the whole discussion was unfair to Mr. Ross. The contract had been let for the bridge, and now some wanted the grant withdrawn.

Queries Warden

"Why didn't Mr. Henry, the warden, get up at the January session and complain like a man?" demanded William Ross, who went on to suggest that possibly the ratepayers of the town had been on the warden's trail in that matter.

Warden Henry denied this, stating no man in the township had ever spoken to him about the grant. He said he had been on the council's trail in that matter.

Councillors Sullivan and McDougall then crossed the warden, and like trouble for Chairman Hugh Brown. Mr. McDougall declared Mr. Sullivan was present when the resolution was passed in January, and he didn't hear any complaints. Mr. McDougall voted for the resolution in January, and he would vote for it now. It looked like peculiar business to take advantage of it because of a little error.

Hotly Denied. Mr. Sullivan hotly denied he had changed his mind. He was in the treasurer's office preparing a report when the matter was before the council in January. He didn't oppose it as an initial payment, but as a reward for the services of the warden. He was in favor. He noticed that Mr. McDougall changed his mind in some things.

Chairman Brown, sending thoughtfully for order and glanced in the direction of the warden. Mr. McDougall, however, swallowed what he said and said he was interested in the matter. He said he was in favor of the resolution. Mr. Sullivan said that he wasn't at the council in January and that he was present when the resolution was passed in January.

Mr. Ross finally withdrew the resolution, stating he was quite content to have it go back to the committee.

Wharton Gives Report

High Constable Wharton presented a satisfactory report as to his activities from March 1 to June 1. During that time he had received 480 calls, all of which had been attended to, an average of five every 24 hours. He drove 3,396 miles on police work, and spent 1,000 hours in the office.

He thanked County Clerk Stuart, Crown Attorney Judd, License Inspector Bolton and Provincial Constable Wharton for their splendid support and co-operation.

He asked that Constable Dawson of Springfield Park and Prefect McDougall of the Bytown Sanatorium be sworn in as county constables, and that all county constables be asked to make a report each month to him of their activities.

Warden Henry stated this would be looked after before the session was over.

Novel Speed Trap

A. L. McDougall asked if all county constables were to be sworn in, and told that no reports had been received from them. No constables were out specially for speeders, Mr. Wharton said.

The high constable said Constable Campbell at Lobo had a speed trap with strings and bells 30 rods apart. He heard of it as a last resort, and had referred Campbell to the county engineer about it. That was one reason he would like to have a report of activities by constables.

"Do you approve of that system?" asked J. L. McDougall.

replied Mr. Wharton, "Why tolerate it?" demanded Councillor McDougall.

Mr. Wharton explained that every person drove a car beyond the speed limit where there was no open road and no hazard. Just before attending the council meeting he had followed a man from Lambeth going 30 miles an hour. He didn't stop until the driver started to weave in and out between cars that he had taken his number, because then it had become a hazard.

How Much?

What does Campbell get out of his fine?" asked J. L. McDougall.

"One dollar and a half," replied the high constable.

"Quite a profitable business," commented the reeve of Adelaide.

"That's why we changed the system from that kind of thing," declared Mr. McDougall. "I think that system (Campbell's) should be changed."

"I think Mr. Campbell's system is the high constable. In the United States on the big highways speed officers take cars off the road if they are not doing 25 miles to see what is the matter with their cars. These people come over here with no instructions and think 35 is the proper limit. Mr. Campbell is the only county constable doing anything that I didn't think he should do off."

Heroic Mother and Two of Her Children Burned To Death

Mrs. Aileen Peppall, wife of Harry Peppall, and two of her children, Ned, aged 5, and Rosemary, aged 3, were burned to death when their summer home near Eastbourne, on Lake Simcoe, was destroyed by fire yesterday. The elder daughter, Aileen, on the right of the above photograph, and the maid, Nellie Slack of Earlscourt, escaped. Mrs. Peppall perished in a vain attempt to save her two youngest children, and had managed to get them to the roof of the veranda when they were all overcome and died. Mr. Peppall was in Toronto when the fire occurred, having returned by automobile the night before. The above photograph was taken only last week.

FRAUD CLAIMED IN THEATRE DEAL

Suit Filed by Trans-Canada Theatres Against A. J. Small Executors.

Canadian Press Despatch. Toronto, June 4.—A suit was launched today at Osgoode Hall by the shareholders of Trans-Canada Theatres, Limited, to recover the money paid by the company to Ambrose J. Small, in 1919, for his string of theatres.

The plaintiffs, Percy W. Abbott, James Ramsay, James Ramsay Limited, John Gillespie and C. C. Tatham, suing on behalf of themselves and all other shareholders of Trans-Canada Theatres, Limited, "Claim against the defendant, Ambrose J. Small, if he is living, and against the Capital Trust Corporation and Thos. Small as executors of the estate of A. J. Small, if he is dead, rescission of the contract dated November, 1919, for the purchase of certain theatres and theatrical rights from A. J. Small, the rescission being sought on the grounds that the execution and carrying out of the contract was obtained by the fraudulent misrepresentations and concealments of A. J. Small in fundamental matters."

"The plaintiffs ask for repayment to the Trans-Canada Theatres, Limited, all moneys received by him and for all declarations and orders necessary to reconvert the properties and to restore the parties or parties to their original positions, and for damages payable by A. J. Small or out of his estate for deceit in connection with the fraudulent and consummation of the contract."

Ambrose Small received $100,000 from Trans-Canada Theatres, Limited, as an initial payment in December, 1919, the day he disappeared. His wife, Theresa Small, has been probated as the executrix of his estate, and will leave the entire estate to herself.

The spirit manifested on the part of the opponents of organic union, Mr. Millson said, had been the matter was brought before the House of Commons been anything but Christian, and the terms used by the agitators during the entire campaign had cast reflections upon all unionists that would take long to live down. The whole question, he declared, was a matter of principle, and a discussion which was not at all calculated to help matters religious or Christian.

Explains Opposition. With reference to the opposition of Mr. Millson in his address included (1) a section of the Presbyterian church who from conscientious or denominational reasons opposed the movement; (2) the record shows that members of the private bills committee at Toronto and Ottawa who were of other denominations voted to destroy the church union; (3) all liquor and gambling interests were solid in the opposition.

But we must not forget that the great majority of the Presbyterians were absolutely true to the principles of organic union. It should also be known that every concession possible was made by the unionists, but to no purpose. "One naturally asks the question, 'Why do we do this?' These of other denominations stand in opposition? All this makes the heart sick, yet in the face of the evidence of the church unionists, I commend our people for their general steadiness during all the discussion on church union. The Methodist policy has been one of silence, not because we have not realized with keenness the situation, not because of any lack of interest, not because of any lack of appreciation of the feelings of our people, but rather that peace might be within all hearts, and our church might preserve her solidarity, and continue to carry on her God-given task. Of course there have been few, very few, evidence of an over-enthusiasm to consummate union. This attitude of quiet has been sorely tested and underneath the surface there has been a surging feeling of victory. Our union must now be consummated or negotiations be broken off. Let us go back to our own task with renewed vigor and zeal."

Keep Ship Intact. The general policy has been, however, to maintain our standing entirely so that when we go into union, if we ever do, we may go in with not only our full numerical strength, but with our whole ship intact, with all our departments working to full capacity, and our colors flying at our mast.

With regard to the matter of prohibition, Mr. Millson confined himself to an earnest exhortation of the entire congregation to continue with renewed vigor its war against the liquor traffic.

"For the past few years," he said, "we have been lulled to a kind of stupor as the result of a great victory that was won in 1916 and repeated in 1919, but we have recently been rudely awakened and we became suddenly aware of the danger that we are in."

This awakening found us in a new position, for the ballot is now being drawn up by our enemies. Hitherto we were on the offensive, now we are on the defensive. In this matter there is every reason for most earnest consideration. Oh, that the whole church might catch some definite and clear vision of the danger that we are in, and that the situation which confronts Canada at the present time. We have not known a more critical situation in the past fifty years, perhaps never.

WICKED TO FIGHT UNION METHODISTS ARE TOLD

Rev. W. E. Millson, President of Conference, Delivers Annual Address.

SPEAKS ON O. T. A.

Warns Ballot Will Be Prepared by Enemies To Prohibition.

Special to The Advertiser

Windsor, June 4.—Characterizing the opposition of the anti-unionists as wicked antagonism, Rev. W. E. Millson, president of the London Methodist Conference, in his pastoral address, formally adopted by ministers of the conference in Central Church here this afternoon, declared that the greatest growing movement in all history had been held up by those who combined to oppose an organic union of the Methodist, Presbyterian and Congregational bodies.

Mr. Millson touched on all leading matters before the church, warning the conference that the greatest ground must be carefully defended, and urging them to stand fast as Christians while the battle waged between modernism and fundamentalism.

The spirit manifested on the part of the opponents of organic union, Mr. Millson said, had been the matter was brought before the House of Commons been anything but Christian, and the terms used by the agitators during the entire campaign had cast reflections upon all unionists that would take long to live down. HEWITT'S GUILTY ONE CHARGE ONLY

Convicted of Having Stolen Goods—Freed of Theft Count.

Special to The Advertiser

Stratford, June 4.—Stratford has a decided freak in the form of a chicken three weeks old that crows and has been growing for the last two weeks in the back-yard of H. Robbins, 31 Strachan street. He is a self-appointed guardian of a family of nine, for a few days after the brood was hatched the mother hen died and this young offspring, almost too small to tell the difference between a bug and a handful of bread crumbs, took over, with the authority of an adult, the arduous duties of looking after the family care.

Hewitt will be sentenced by Judge Macbeth in the course of a few days. J. M. McEvoy, K.C., asked that the chief himself be on duty all hours of the day or night, and the purchase of gas masks, were adopted.

Chief Aitken took the same attitude in connection with the employment of relatives on the force. He was absolutely opposed to this practice. The recommendation of the report that this be abolished was carried.

Move Wall Back. A suggestion of the mayor to move the front wall of the central fire hall back twenty feet from the sidewalk, so as to give a low room for the cars to turn as they leave the hall on a run, was agreed to. This was also a recommendation of the committee.

Other recommendations included the inception of a fireman's training school which would be both physical and technical. The cost of heating the central fire hall last winter had been $890, and that at certain hours of the night the heat was turned off. This will be investigated by the committee who thought that a cheaper way of heating the building with a furnace in the fire hall, suggested by the chief, would be more convenient.

You may not believe it, but if you can tell us what does it at the Mystery House, we will confess you can read riddles.—Adv.

On Bail One Year. Hewitt, who has been out on bail over a year owing to ill health, was led away to the cells by County Constable Ed. Guest. He turned a shade paler when the jury rendered the verdict, but otherwise was quite calm. Hewitt was the last witness for the defence when court convened yesterday afternoon at 2 o'clock. He denied the story of the Packers who stated that he was in the store when the police arrived. Two hours were taken up by counsel and the judge in summing up the evidence.

Of the argument in progress at present between modernists and fundamentalists, Mr. Millson said: "There are those in the life of the church who would apparently divide the church into two camps, one into the banner of fundamentalists and the other under the banner of modernists. It has been said by some that they are neither, but are a mixture of the two. This would appear to be a pretty safe ground, and it would be well for the church to refuse to be driven to either of these extremes. We certainly cannot be preachers of blue ruin on the one hand nor of professional optimism on the other, but with a belief that Jesus is still with us, and that he will give us the power to solve our problems, we are alive and alive for evermore."

Over-Organization. The charge of over-organization has been levelled at the modern church from several quarters, and though Mr. Millson said a church with the scope and strength of the Methodist body was in essential need in operation, yet he warned against placing upon it too much responsibility.

"One of our difficulties," he said, "is that we are liable to depend too much on organization. Some have said that when we meet a new condition we set up a new organization to solve it, but we forget that our needs cannot be solved with a new plan. The real inner problem that we have to face and solve is the problem of the human heart, and this necessitates an acknowledgment of our need and an exercise of faith in God and in Jesus Christ, His only begotten Son."

Mr. Millson urged upon every minister of the conference a recognition of the fact that the church is as an anchor to hold the world fast in the present days of disquietude.

The following were admitted as probationers: Windsor district, A. E. Lash, Theodore Turner; Chatham district, Gordon Hargreaves, Howard Robinson; Ridgeway district, W. B. Kaine, George H. Penrose; St. Thomas district, Hugh C. Wilson, St. Chant, St. Stephen Maitland, John P. Cook, Frank A. Galt, M. M. Bartlett; Exeter district, R. E. Southcott.

Charles E. Leslie of Wingham and Harold H. Hargreaves of Kingsville were received as probationers. The submission of their names caused a flurry of concern among the ministers. The conference, which has been a matter of some concern, caused profound concern.

Forced To Accept Amendment in New Housing Problem Resolution.

Associated Press Despatch.

London, June 4.—The House of Commons tonight agreed to a resolution introduced by John Wheatley, Minister of Housing, involving expenditure of great sums of money for building construction to meet the housing requirements throughout the country. The government, which has been again compelled to execute a quick about face to avoid an adverse vote.

The plan to solve the housing problem comprises a system of state subsidies of £34,000,000 annually, extending over many years, with a possible ultimate expenditure of nearly one billion and a half pounds. The subject was discussed in the House yesterday, but no vote was taken.

Sir George Macrae moved an amendment providing for the withholding of contributions in the absence of the minister, involving the expenditure of great sums of money for building construction to meet the housing requirements throughout the country. FIREMEN'S UNION IS UNMOLESTED

Members of Force May Join Union At Own Discretion.

MOVE STATION WALL

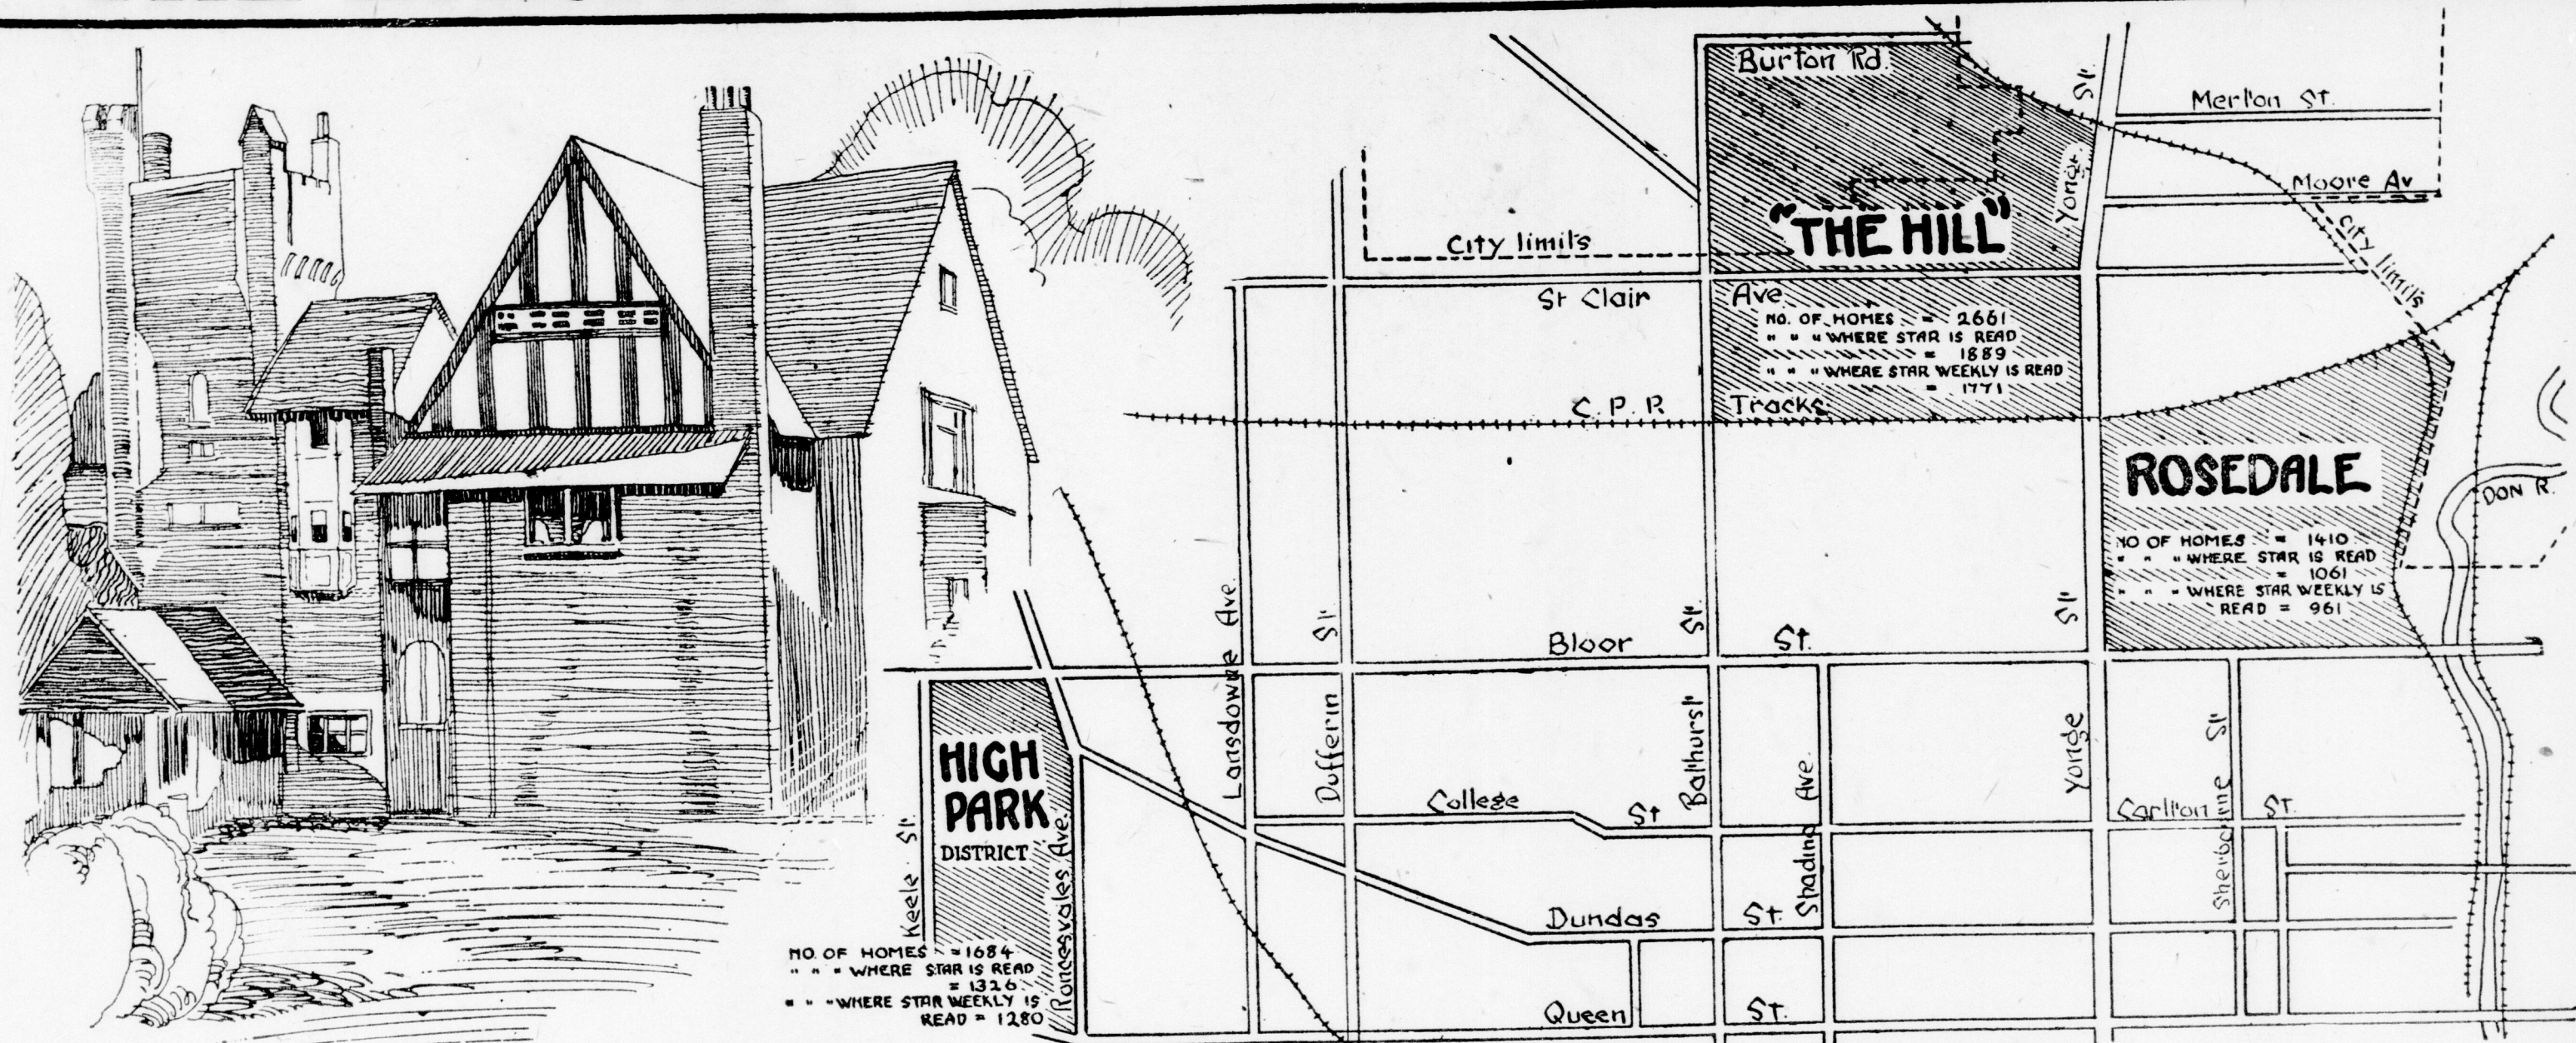

That there should be no interference with the firemen's union, and that the men should be allowed to join or remain without the union as they see fit, was unanimously agreed upon last night by the finance committee as a recommendation to the city council on the motion of Ald. McKay.

Mr. McKay having obtained information as to the rules of the International Firemen's Union, told the committee that while there was no objection to any man joining and holding an official position, that no officer over the rank of captain could hold office, though he could join the union if he wished. The chief is allowed to join the local, but not the international union. Dr. Britain's report declared that the presence of a union was not in the best interests of the discipline of the force.

The meeting, which was called upon to deal with Dr. Horace Britain's report with the employment, also adopted several clauses of the report, which will be brought to the council for ratification.

THE SECRET OF EVE

Beauty for Half a Cent a Day

Eve, the eternal woman, awoke with the dawn. Her eyes, clear as crystal pools, opened with eager anticipation that another day had come. Pink lips, with breath as sweet as rosebuds in the dew of a summer morning, she stretched her firm, white limbs, glowing in their lissom beauty. Eve was a woman such as nature designed her.

And when, rising with a song on her lips, she glanced in her mirror, she laughed with glee. For the reflection showed a radiant face, its contour firm, its texture softly beautiful with the roses and lilies of health. Even her hair, which formed a dusky frame to her laughing face, was vibrant with life and beauty.

Eve could laugh at the salons of beauty doctors. She feared no fees to medicine men. Each new day came to her as an adventure, filled with glorious possibilities.

For Eve was healthy, and when woman is healthy she is beautiful. No beauty doctor in the world, no expensive complexion cream, powder, or rouge-pot can work the wonders due to perfect health, which gives the impression of youth even when birthdays deny, which provides that vibrant feeling of LIFE, so that a woman seventeen or

CITY ENGINEER TOO BUSY TO GO INTO WORK NOW

Expert Asked To Collaborate With Kitchener Man in Activity.

CITY NEEDS PLAN

Local Commission Discusses Problem Raised by Unfinished Work.

At a meeting yesterday the London Town Planning Commission decided to ask Mr. Thomas Adams, who undertook to draw a town planning scheme for the city in 1922 and who later abandoned the plan, whether he would delegate the work of completing his plan to a Mr. Seymour of Kitchener, under the terms of the original contract, which called for a further expenditure of $1,300 on the completion of the plan this year.

A delegation from the London Chamber of Commerce, consisting of J. J. Vining, E. V. Buchanan and W. T. McFarland, in stating the position of the chamber, asked that the plan be completed by Mr. Seymour of Kitchener, a personal friend and collaborator of Mr. Adams, and who will work under his supervision.

The adopted suggestion was offered by the city engineer, who remarked that in his opinion Mr. Adams had abandoned the original contract with necessity, as he was still to a certain extent owing the city services in connection with the plan, and that this request would show the commission what he was willing to do in meeting his obligations under the terms of the contract.

Purely Business.

Jared Vining as spokesman of the chamber of commerce delegation stressed the purely business side of the matter and said "The whole question at the present time is whether it is good business to have this plan, which is generally conceded by all who are interested in town planning, to be abandoned immediately, completed by the department of the city engineer or by Mr. Seymour under the supervision of Mr. Adams."

"I would like to make it very clear that there is no criticism on the part of the members of the chamber of commerce of the ability of the city engineer, and that the only reason they want the plan completed by Mr. Seymour, acting under the direct supervision of Mr. Adams, is that Mr. Adams, as the originator of the plan, had an exceptionally thorough knowledge of the basis on which he intended to develop the plan later."

"As a matter of plain business which it is not profitable to the citizens, who have already expended about $1,200 on the plan, to allow it to be abandoned in this way at a further cost of $1,300, of which the chamber of commerce is willing to supply what may be necessary over and above the money already allocated by the city council."

Pressure of Work Great.

Replying to this the city engineer stated that in his opinion the work could quite efficiently be carried out by his department, Roy Garratt having been detailed to the work. It would not be possible, however, to have the plan completed before fall, owing to the pressure of work.

"I believe," he said, "that Mr. Adams, according to a letter of the plan and even asked that it might not be known by his name. If he were asked to complete his own report under the terms of the contract that will, I think, settle the point as to how it shall be completed to the satisfaction of the commission."

Conceding that Mr. Adams, taking the side of the engineer, thought that the city's engineering department was capable of completing the plan efficiently and in accordance with the needs of the city, he believed that the city officials knew the future requirements of the city more accurately than an outsider. He, however, was agreeable that an outside consultant might be called in at the request of the engineer at any time.

OLD DIVORCE BILL TO BE READOPTED MORE POWER PLANNED BY COMMISSIONERS

Canadian Parliament Will Continue To Give Right of Remarriage.

Increased Hydro Is Prospect For Northwestern and Eastern Ontario.

Canadian Press Despatch.

Ottawa, June 4.—Parliament will continue to give the innocent party to a divorce the right of remarriage without mentioning the rights of the other party. This decision, it is understood, has been reached between the Senate and the House committees on divorce, and in consequence, the House committee put back in some ten divorce bills the old section conferring the right mentioned.

The Senate divorce committee this session introduced a new form of bill which merely dissolved the marriage and omitted all reference to the right of remarriage. There was local opinion to support the view that this change did not alter the rights of the parties, as in the past, though no mention was made of it in the bills, had always been assumed that both parties had the right to marry again. However, as there was a fear that the new form of bill might create legal difficulties as regards remarriage, the Commons committee on divorce this morning decided to go back to the old form of divorce bill.

IRISH BOUNDARY CHAIRMAN NAMED

New Commission Head To Be Announced by Premier MacDonald.

Associated Press Despatch.

London, June 4.—Prime Minister MacDonald, in a statement today in the House of Commons on the Irish negotiations, said the government had secured a chairman for the boundary commission, and declared that his name would be announced tomorrow.

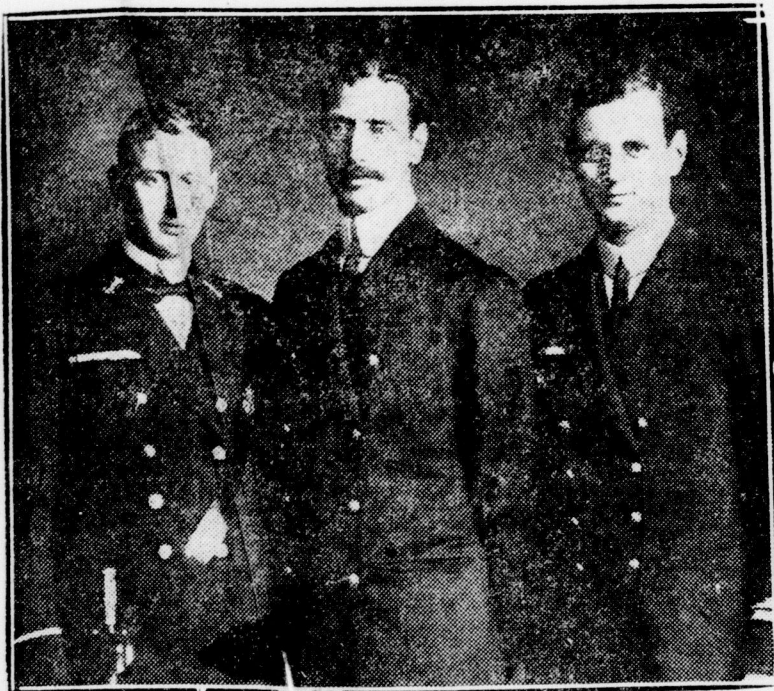

The government had decided, he said, to set up a judicial committee to solve the actual and legal issues of such a boundary commission. The committee would include Chief Justice Sir Adrian Knox of Australia and would sit during July.

It was reported in the lobby of the House of Commons this afternoon that the chairman of the Irish boundary commission would be Sir James Ross-Innes, chief justice of the Union of South Africa.

THURSDAY, JUNE 5, 1924.

Attacks on the Senate Will Continue.

Senators resent the criticism that has been made in certain sections of the Canadian press regarding their hostility to the Canadian National Railways. Senator Dandurand, leader of the Liberal wing in the Senate, moved what amounted to a vote of censure on the press that criticized their actions, and this was seconded by Sir James Longhead, leader of the Conservatives in the upper chamber.

In taking this stand the senators came together, and recognized no political lines in the defence of their position.

It is well that they have done so, because the people who own the National Railways—the taxpayers of Canada—take exactly the same position. They recognize no political lines in this issue. It is a straight, clear-cut issue, for the success of the railway, or against it.

When Senator Dandurand, a Liberal, and Senator Longhead, a Conservative, worked together to subject the business of the National Railways to a sort of miserable inquisition at the hands of its competitor in business, they placed themselves in the same category, and they cannot escape the charge that their interest in the public ownership plan of operating the National Railways is of a negative or harmful sort.

Both these senators claim that the C. P. R. did not come forward and offer to act as critics of proposed extensions to the National lines. Senator Longhead says "they were summoned by the committee." That makes things plainer, but not better. The committee of the Senate had carefully planned to stage the whole performance. The idea was to hold up the work of development. The fight that had been so stubbornly carried on in the Commons by Sir Henry Drayton had to be maintained in the Senate. For that purpose the senators concerned were able to bury their political differences and find common ground in their mutual opposition to the progress of the National Railways. That was where Senator Dandurand, Liberal, and Senator Longhead, Conservative, came together, and that is where they stand today.

Senator Watson stated the position accurately when he said that the criticism of the Senate had been brought about by their own action. He faced the facts and drew the proper conclusion.

The senators, Liberal or Conservative, who planned to bring in C. P. R. officials to criticize the program of the National Railways do not leave themselves any ground on which to stage a defence. They know perfectly well that the C. N. R. and C. P. R. are competing lines, and both of them are out to get all the business they can. Could the senators, by any stretch of their imagination, conclude that a C. P. R. official would be a fair, unbiased witness to report on the probable success of the National lines opening new territory to secure more business?

The Advertiser has urged before that there is a degree of urgency in making the National Railways a success that is greater than any possible political consideration. If Liberals have it in their mind to hamper development then they must be told, and told plainly, the same as Conservatives or Progressives, that they are wrong.

When the matter came up in the Commons a few days ago the speakers who defended the National Railways rose in various parts of the chamber. W. F. Maclean, Conservative; Robert Forke, Progressive; Frank Cahill, Liberal, and so on. This support comes on non-political lines, and it is stronger for so doing.

The senators can protest until they are out of breath about the attacks made on their attitude toward the National Railways, but the attacks will continue. The senators know they are wrong in the light of looking after the most urgent piece of business the people have on hand. It is time for public men and the press to declare themselves on this issue. The taxpayers have a right to know where their leaders of speech and thought stand in regard to the most ambitious undertaking a country the size of Canada ever tackled.

The Churches Are Gathering.

Religious bodies are gathering this week all over Ontario. It is a time for meeting and taking stock of the problems in hand. At Niagara Falls and at Windsor, two of the border centers at opposite ends of Western Ontario, the Methodists are in conference. They are proceeding with the stationing of ministers as though the question of union had been dropped; there is no other course open to them. The Methodists are committed to church union almost unanimously, but for the present they must proceed on the old basis.

In the north, at Owen Sound, the general assembly of the Presbyterian Church in Canada has opened its doors. The unsettled condition of the union bill at Ottawa places it in a somewhat similar position to the gatherings of the Methodists. Should the bill pass without entangling amendments, this may be the last gathering of this historic association. It is certain that the matter of union will bulk large in their deliberations. The debate will be keen and intelligent, because the presentation of both sides of the case at Ottawa showed beyond doubt that the debating talent of the Presbyterian Church had strength, conviction and fearlessness.

Some of the synods of the Anglican Church are in session, notably at Toronto, and it is notable that Right Rev. James Sweeney in his charge to the diocese expressed the hope that the difficulties in the way of uniting the Presbyterian, Methodist and Congregationalist churches might be amicably settled. He made it clear that he was speaking simply as an onlooker viewing one of the greatest developments in church history.

The Baptists have been gathering in their inter-county associations. Differing from the others in this regard, they have no central body that can exercise any jurisdiction over the individual church. Several of these associations have been held, while Middlesex and Lambton churches are now in session at Forest.

The Congregational Union has gathered in Toronto. Like the other two parties to church union, the Congregationalists must meet again as a separate organization and plan their immediate work as such.

These gatherings should have beneficial results. There is a tendency to launch out and declare for a definite stand on the great moral issues of the day. There is nothing so contagious as the vigor of a new idea, and nothing so impelling as the glimpse of a new and greater vision, and the people who attend these gatherings are well qualified to point to higher planes even though approached by rugged paths.

An Opportunity He Missed.

Howard Smith, president of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association, has delivered his annual statement. It was a gloomy statement. Mr. Smith pictured himself as the only man who had the courage to stand out and state definitely that Canada was going to the dogs. Like Elijah of old, "I, even I, only am left."

Mr. Smith insisted that things were bad in a business way in Canada, and that there were no bright spots. He discounted all statements and editorials written to the contrary. All who were inclined to take a hopeful view were simply whistling to keep up their courage, or they had some ulterior motive for refusing to join in the Smithsonian lamentations.

Mr. Smith used all this as a preface to lead up to a position that was evident from the start. There could be only one cure, and that more protection.

His argument was weakened by the excess to which he went to get a proper setting for his final scene.

The country was prepared to look for something more keenly analytical from the head of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association. He had an opportunity to divorce business from politics for the time being, and interpret all the cross-currents as they ran against Canadian trade. Instead he delivered a Conservative campaign speech. He missed a great opportunity to show leadership and give vision to Canadians who have not had the opportunity that has been his of looking over the business field in a big way.

Toronto a Great Place.

The Mail and Empire has decided that Toronto is a great place. In its news columns it breaks into song like this:

"The sunshine nowhere gives such light as in Toronto;
The flowers nowhere bloom so bright as in Toronto;
The birds sing nowhere quite so sweet,
And nowhere hearts so lightly beat,
For Heaven and earth both seem to meet in Toronto."

Which suggests the second verse that would be put together somewhat like this:

A union station nowhere has less trains than in Toronto;
Rake-offs for business bloomed so bright down in Toronto;
Charles Matthews ambled down the street,
Detectives snoozing on their beat,
He seemed to crawl right through their feet, in Toronto.

Dr. Frank Crane

THE CALL OF THE BLOOD

He did not like music, nor art, nor books. He read slowly and with difficulty.

His wife was fond of all these things, but he had no interest in the house except to oil his boots and look over his fishing tackle.

So, when spring came, with it came a great uneasiness, a desire to be away somewhere in the vast distances and in the wild woods.

For he loved all the living things that crept and scurried and flew in the wild outdoors. He could tell one kind of insect from another; he knew if a bird lived on the fruit of the land or on vermin; he knew hickory from oak, and the best fishing places where the bass lie and the pools where the trout jump.

So he was lonely in the city, and the sight of the multitude irked him, and when the spring came it brought with it a great homesickness.

He longed to be away, and when he had fixed his boots and rough jacket and put them on, he went away whistling to the north woods happy at what was before him and no less glad for what was behind him.

Before him were the still places; behind him the crowded streets and families, one upon another, in apartment houses.

He loved his kind, but as the Indian loved his kind; the sort of man you can keep still with and sit by a fire in the open and smoke tobacco that you have cut out of a plug. He scorned tobacco that came made in packages. He scorned cigars and other pieces of tobacco that you smoke in other places than in a pipe or in a cigarette you roll yourself. Two sucks of the latter were worth more than forty otherwise.

He valued tobacco merely as the scent of humankind. A man should smell of tobacco just as a woman should smell not at all or of soap. He liked cooking, but it was beans and soup, and he cooked for himself over the open fire. He scorned fancy food.

He liked cleanliness, but the cleanliness of the open, bathing in water where you had to brush the ice from the surface and rubbing down with a coarse towel, not the cleanliness of the bathroom.

So he went away whistling into the north woods. He had not spoken much in the city. He was going where they did not speak much at all.

He went away to the north woods because they called him by a thousand tongues we could not hear. He left the city because it repelled him in a thousand ways we could not feel.

Ye Old Swimmin' Hole

Ah well I mind first week in June, when sun was working toward the pole, the youngsters from the village streets they gathered at the swimmin' hole.

There was no tank in tile and glass with water tempered to the skin, we shivered on the bank a bit a-darin' someone to go in.

And in that pool where willow trees bent weepin' down across the bank, we had what seemed to us just then the world's most famous swimmin' tank.

And in that place, that muddy place, we chased the bullfrog from his home, we scared the leaches from their hut when diving for the lucky stone.

And snappin' turtles dwell therein, disputin' when we came to swim, a-bitin' at some luckless lad and barkin' pieces from his shin.

Of course it seemeth crude just now, it ain't the style of '24, a-dryin' off beside a fire we built upon the muddy shore.

There weren't no swimmin' lessons then, they grabbed the kids and shot them in, and givin' them the choice they took to either sink or start to swim. Yet I allow as each kid went and choked and sputtered for a spell, that in one lesson of that sort he started swimmin' pretty well.

Of course them boys has went and gone, they're scattered like the leaves in fall, if I went back unto that spot they wouldn't be 'round there at all.

Praps it's best as how they go and swim in tanks with bathin' suits, and prance and swim around a bit and slide upon the slippery chutes.

But let them have their tanks and towels, I'd like to call the village roll, and have the gang out just once more and plunge into that swimmin' hole.—ARK.

Gossip As a Tonic

(From the Manchester Guardian.)

It is pleasant to see, that among graver matters, the prime minister has found time to say that "nothing gave him personally more delight and recreation than half an hour's gossip—real good old-fashioned gossip about things and people."

That is the spirit, especially for statesmen and economists and all who have a great deal to do with such abstractions as "the ordinary man," "the working class," "the ratepayer," and "every thinking person."

Gossip, the proper gossip about concrete individual persons and things—the Shakespearean gossip of the two county justices about the recent death of old Double, and the price of a bullock, and the wild doings of little John Dolt and black George Bare and Will Squeale the Cotswold man,—has the place of salt, or at any rate pepper, in the mind's normal diet, especially for the great and wise.

Henrietta Stocum.—Didn't Eugene Field write the poem beginning:
"There, little girl, don't cry."
And what is the rest of it?
Dear Eric: We are under the impression that Laura Jean Libby was responsible for a thing like this:

There, little girl, don't cry, my dear,
Long curls may merit such rage,
But a boyish bob ain't proper, my dear,
Till you've reached your grand-mother's age.

These Trusts!

I was standing at the rim of the Grand Canyon of the Colorado, writes Elizabeth M. Norris, and trying my best to get some idea of the greatness of the chasm before me. An old lady, standing near me, interrupted my musings with the remark: "They told me it was a mile wide and a mile deep and it 'aint either." Turning away in disgust, she added: "Huh! I bet the railroad company dug this thing just to get people to come out here."

Parents find the hardest task is striving to conduct themselves in a manner that will meet with the approval of their children.

On With the Play!

Playwright: "Everybody's writing plays nowadays. Even my barber has just finished a mystery drama called 'The Tonic.'"
Critic: "It must be a hair-raiser."

CROP OUTLOOK IN LOBO IS FAIRLY ENCOURAGING

Special to The Advertiser.
Lobo, June 4.—Farmers have been very busy for the past week preparing the land for corn and roots. Most of the roots are now sown and many of the Lobo farmers have also finished with the corn, but potatoes are mostly still to plant. Those who put potatoes in early report a heavy loss owing to cold and wet, so it looks as though early ripe potatoes will be unknown this year. The apple blossom is now out and June so far promising, as the busy bee can do his work these days. The fruit growers report Baldwin, spy and russet a very light bloom, while duchess, Mack's and other fall or early varieties ties a mass of bloom, as are plums and pears also.

CLASS OUTING.

Cheapside, June 4.—The first outing of the season was celebrated when the Sunshine Class of the Baptist Sunday school held a picnic at Dundurn Park, Hamilton. The day was ideal for the motor ride of 40 miles.

Cycling Safer Than Walking

A CHILD who suddenly darts out from the sidewalk into the road in a game of tag, or one who jumps from behind a standing vehicle, is far more likely to be run down by a motor car than a child on a bicycle.

In fact, Police Statistics show that cycling is safer than walking both for adults and for children.

Take the City of Toronto, for example, where the traffic is as heavy and congested as in any place in Canada. The carefully kept records of the Toronto Police Department shows that out of a total of 2,173 accidents of various kinds in 1923, cyclists were only involved in 42, and 36 of these were cases of collisions of cyclists and pedestrians. There were practically no accidents between motorists and cyclists. Cycling in smaller cities and in the country is even safer than in Toronto.

There are good reasons why Cycling is Safe.

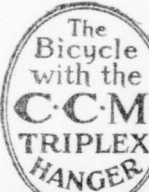

A child on a bicycle has his attention on riding and watches traffic closely. A child on the sidewalk is very likely to engage in some game that makes him forget himself and run carelessly out into the path of motor cars.

DECORATE GRAVES AND PROTEST WAR

Women's Labor Party Will Attach Cards of Protest to Floral Tributes.

Deciding to take part in the decoration of soldiers' graves on Sunday, June 15, the Women's Labor Party, meeting last night in the Labor Temple, planned to assemble in a body on that occasion and place flowers on the graves of the fallen. But attached to the beautiful floral tribute to the dead will be a card voicing their protest against war. The card will state that the Women's Labor Party as a body of women honor the fallen, yet at the same time they stand solid to work to the end that such sacrifices need never again take place, nor be possible.

The meeting was of unusual interest and marked by a very large attendance. Arthur Mould was the speaker for the occasion. It was decided to hold the annual picnic at Port Stanley on Saturday, July 19, Saturday being chosen in order to give the husbands a chance to spend the afternoon at the picnic.

An invitation was received from the Trades and Labor Council asking the Women's Labor Party to elect a delegate to act with the men on the reception committee for the trades congress to be held in London in September next. Mrs. S. W. Wells was appointed delegate. The members were reminded of the social evening at the home of Mrs. William Stinson, 908 Princess avenue, on Tuesday, June 10.

Women of the Future.

At the conclusion of the business the women were addressed by Arthur Mould on "The Future of the Women's Movement."

Mr. Mould dealt very comprehensively with the subject in a brief space of time, reviewing the status of woman from the beginning of civilization to the present time. He remarked that the women of today were living in a history-making epoch and one in which women will play a mean part.

Women, he said, would be a big factor in education, in politics, in the abolition of war and the education of the world for peace, making men failures stepping-stones to higher and nobler ideals.

MRS. GEORGE ST. JOHN, formerly Miss Mona Wilson of this city, whose marriage in St. Paul's Cathedral this morning was one of the most interesting nuptial events of the month.

About the Franchise.

He pointed to the granting of the franchise in Britain to all women of 21 years of age, thereby making the women outnumber the male voters and making it possible for the use of that franchise to carry out any reform of education they set their hearts on.

The speaker also remarked that women were taking hold, an interest was being created. It was not necessary to go outside of the building to be convinced of that fact, the magnificent attendance was sufficient proof in itself. He claimed that women had it in their power to do much for education of the people and alleviation of the abuses of the underprivileged, if they but set themselves to the task.

At the conclusion of the meeting a social half-hour was enjoyed about the tea cups.

HIGHLAND LADIES PLAN CONTESTS

Arrange For Spring and Fall Handicap Tournaments—Trophies Offered.

The ladies' committee of the Highland Golf Club has drawn up an interesting program of events for the coming season which begins on Thursday, June 12, with competitions in clock golf, approaching and putting, the prizes to be donated by Miss Emery. On Thursday, June 26, the first medal round will be played with a handicap.

The committee members have arranged that every Thursday will be an important golf day for the lady players. On the second Thursday of each month, approaching putting and two-ball foursomes will be played, while the fourth Thursday will be marked by the playing of the monthly medal handicap. Wednesdays and Saturdays have been chosen as the days for the men's competitions.

On Thursday, June 12, the spring handicap tournament for ladies will begin, the contestants playing for the Vining trophy, offered by Jared Vining, of this city, and it is expected that the draw for this handicap tournament will be made some time early next week.

On Monday, September 8, the ladies will begin to play in the fall handicap tournament, for which Frank White, M.P., has offered the trophy. And on October 1 the first round for the club championship will be begun, the play to be for the trophy offered by Russell Magee.

Mrs. Jared Vining, chairman of the ladies committee, and Mrs. Walter Gump, captain of the team, and their committees, have been busily engaged preparing this attractive program for some time past, and it is expected that the season's play will be very successful as a result.

Timmy and Mrs. Timmy Return To Their Home In the Green Forest

By THORNTON W. BURGESS.

Timmy the Flying Squirrel and Mrs. Timmy did a little watching on their own account. They knew where Spooky the Screech Owl lived, and they hid where they could watch his home. So it was that just as daylight was breaking they saw Spooky return. Then they knew it was safe to go back to their own house. They knew that Spooky would not bother them again until the Black Shadows came creeping out from the Purple Hills in the early evening.

Back in their house they talked matters over. "What shall we do now, dear? Spooky knows where we live now, and he will spend half his time watching this house, in the hope of catching one of us," said Timmy.

"Oh, dear, I don't know what to say," replied Mrs. Timmy. "I don't know what to say, I love this house. It can't be that bad. We never have had a house I liked as well. But from now on we never can leave it or come back to it after dark without being in danger of being caught."

Whenever Spooky has nothing better to do he'll sit and watch for us. I guess we are smart enough to keep out of his claws, but I am afraid that if we have some babies he will catch every one of them when they are big enough to take their first lessons in jumping."

"I don't want to leave here any more than you do," replied Timmy. "But what you say, my dear, is very true. This house is going to be watched every night. Spooky is chucking to himself this very minute. He probably thinks it is going to be an easy matter to catch one of us. Much as I dislike to say so, it seems to me there is only one thing for us to do and the sooner we do it the better."

"What is that?" asked Mrs. Timmy. "Go back to our old home in the Green Forest," replied Timmy.

"For a moment or two Mrs. Timmy didn't say a word. Then she sighed sorrowfully. "You are right, Timmy," said she. "I don't see any other way out of it. Our old home is a nice home, but I like this one better. Why business had that round-eyed robber to come around here, anyway?"

"I suppose we can stay and take a chance," said Timmy. Mrs. Timmy shook her head. "No," said she. "Taking chances with one's life never pays. There is always chance enough, anyway. We'll go back to the old home and we'll do it right away."

"Why not wait until night?" protested Timmy, who was already curled up in a soft bed and feeling very sleepy.

"Because Spooky might follow us and discover that other home," replied Mrs. Timmy promptly. "Then we wouldn't be much better off than we are now. No, sir, the time to go is now, before jolly, round, red Mr. Sun gets any higher in the blue, blue sky. Come on."

"I don't want to leave here any more than you do," replied Timmy.

Timmy sighed dolefully. He yawned and stretched, and then followed Mrs. Timmy out of the house. Together they started for the Green Forest.

Dorothy Dix's Letter Box

Before Marrying a Man Watch the Way He Spends Money—Should the Family Skeleton Be Revealed Before Marriage?—The Idealistic Girl Who Thinks Herself Temperamentally Unsuitable to Her Practical-Minded Fiance.

Dear Miss Dix—What would you do if you went out with a young man who always lets someone else foot the bills? FLAPPER.

Answer: I would certainly never marry such a man, for he has shown that he is miserly, and a husband can have no worse fault than this. Indeed between a good, moral, upright man who is stingy, and one who is a rounder and generous, the rounder makes the better husband, and is the more loving and more pleasant to live with.

The wife of the tightwad lives a life of perpetual mortification and humiliation, nagging and discord. She never has a penny of her own to spend as she pleases, but she has to go like a beggar to her husband for every cent, and then endure the insult of being questioned about what she did with the quarter that he gave her week before last.

This outrages a woman's sense of justice because she knows that the work she does in the home is worth far more than her board and clothes, which is all she gets out of matrimony.

Niggardliness about money will kill love quicker than anything else in the world, and I have never known a tightwad's wife who loved him, nor a tightwad's widow who didn't wear a look of ineffable relief and peace under her mourning bonnet.

A stingy man's wife lives in perpetual strife because you cannot run a home on air. It takes money to buy food and clothes and pay rent and gas and water and heat, no matter how cleverly you manage. The first of the month is a time of terror for the penny pincher's wife, because when the trembling wife presents the bills he raves like a mad man and treats her as if she had eaten every bit of the food and absorbed all the heat in the household.

You are a wise little flapper to observe the manners and habits of the men with whom you are going to marry. In this way you can make a very shrewd guess at the kind of husbands they will make.

The man whose hand is always in his pocket and who invariably pays for the crowd will make the too-generous husband. He will indulge his family in the things they cannot afford, and will want to live beyond his means. He is not a very good choice, though he is preferable to the stingy one who never pays at all. Pick out the man who pays his fair share, who never gruffs on anyone, and who spends freely but not extravagantly. He will be neither a miser nor a waster, and he will make the best husband. DOROTHY DIX.

Dear Miss Dix—I am engaged to a splendid young man, who has very high ideals, and who believes the best of everybody. But my trouble is this: My mother is a woman who will not let me marry a man who is not a faithful son of my father. Sooner or later my fiancé is bound to find this out, and the question is: Shall I tell him before we are married? Telling him may make a difference in our lives, as he might think that I would be like my mother. But God only knows how much I grieve over her, or how dreadful it is to me that she has a lover. What shall I do. MABEL.

Answer: Ordinarily, I am for keeping the family skeleton closeted tight and fast. But if the door is bound to be opened, it is better for you to do it than for a stranger. You can at least shape the grisly figure within it in whatever excuses and extenuating circumstances that your affection for your mother can conjure up.

And it will be better to do it before you are married than afterward, because it will show the young man that you gave him a square deal. If he finds it impossible to overlook your mother's conduct and it shakes his faith in you, it will be less sorrow for you to give him up now than it would be to live with his continual reproaches and suspicions.

Of course, the old saying, "Like mother, like daughter," is generally true, and you cannot blame a man for being the son of a bad mother. It is lacking in moral principle and not only has not been reared with any ideals of purity and innocence, but has been taught, by example at least, to follow her own inclinations.

But very often a mother is not an example that a daughter follows, but an awful warning to her not to do certain things. Many a girl sees her mother's fault so clearly that she flies to the opposite extreme. Just as among men some of the most fanatical prohibitionists are the sons of drunken fathers, so some of the most discreet and austere virtuous women in the world are the daughters of lazy, loose-living mothers. Indeed, there is a proverb among women that a weak mother makes an industrious daughter, and that the thriftiest housewives are the daughters of shiftless housekeepers.

Your sweetheart need have no fear that you will follow in your mother's footsteps, but you cannot expect him, if he does marry you, to want you to be much like her, nor to be under her influence. Still less will he want his children to be brought up at the knees of a grandmother whose petticoats are mud bespattered.

You say your mother has been a wonderful mother to you. Perhaps for your sake and to secure your happiness she will be willing to sacrifice her own guilty love and turn back to the straight road. DOROTHY DIX.

Dear Dorothy Dix—While in college I fell in love with a co-ed. She returned my affection and we became engaged, and for a while we were very happy.

But, later on, she broke the engagement because she decided that we were temperamentally unsuitable to each other. She said that she was too highly idealistic to marry a man who was as practical as I am. Personally, I think that most girls are idealistic by nature, and that men are more practical, don't you? And, inasmuch as we have the same tastes in books, and amusements, and many other things, this should not separate us. What do you think? J. O. F.

Answer: I think the young lady is kidding herself. Lots of women like to think that they are All Soul, and that they yearn after the Whiteness of the Waltz, and the Aintiness of the Tis, and they affect to despise as materialists every one whose feet are on the ground instead of dangling from the clouds.

But it is all tommyrot. Just a pose. When you come down to brass tacks, these transcendentalists hanker after the fleshpots just as much as the balance of us. They come down out of the ether for three square meals a day and are just as keen about good clothes, and good cars, and good houses as the go-getters who are expected to supply them.

Personally, I think that you will escape a lot of trouble if you miss getting the idealistic young woman for a wife. But you won't. Just give her time, and she will have a gleam of sanity in which she will see the advantage of having a practical husband.

The idealistic men who are the soul mates of the idealistic women never have enough money to get married on. DOROTHY DIX.

The House of Five Swords

A Romance of Old Virginia.

By TRISTRAM TUPPER.

Leading Characters.

EDMUND CARTWRIGHT, heir to Colonial House, is expelled from West Point and exiled from his home. He disappears.

COL. CARTWRIGHT, his father, who has disowned Edmund, adopts CRYSTAL MACLAURIN, called the Robin, an orphan, who, when a little girl, falls in love with Edmund.

LAWYER LIVINGSTON, one of those who advise the Robin and the colonel to move to the old bootshop to economize after the colonel's financial ruin.

AARON JETT, a former apprentice of Crystal's father, who is courting Crystal. Jett hates.

DR. KARL LURGENMILLER, a man of mystery, who rents Colonial House and falls in love with Crystal. When war is declared, Lurgemiller under suspicion of being a German spy, is forced to leave town.

Installment X.

Two years passed. The colonel, already weakened by age and ill health, succumbed; the invisible visitor came through the high windows of the library and took him back to the kingdom from which there is no return.

But Colonial House took upon itself new life in the spring of 1913. The windows were thrown wide, musty odors were swept out by the crisp clean wind of the river; the thirteen oaks of the driveway put forth their tassels and leaves with new exultant sap, the lawn became an emerald cloth beneath the hands of gardeners—not a blade taller than its brothers and sisters—who the hedge marking the southern boundary became a fantasy of roses and lilacs. Riverport was again.

A letter had been received by Lawyer Livingston and by him translated into a glowing (and almost wholly fictitious) account of the wanderings, accomplishments and adventures of Edmund Cartwright. In his letter, Edmund Cartwright had stated merely that he had been connected with field hospitals during the war and was now in England. He had heard of his father's death. Also, he mentioned a Golden Hill hospital. Plans were inclosed and the lawyer was requested to secure him a room in the city for his return.

Livingston took the letter to the shop on Railroad avenue, which had been tenanted since the Robin's return in March. "I am sure," said Crystal after comparing Edmund's letter solemnly with the story in the Bugle, "I'm sure you've missed a good deal. You should have been a novelist. But how in the world did you think of so many things to make him do? And Lawyer Livingston, Edmund did not leave Riverport until—until years after the Boer war. You have him fighting at Spion Kop!"

"Crystal," replied the lawyer severely, "Edmund may make what serve recollections please, but this will serve my purpose. I'm going to turn out the town to welcome him upon his arrival."

"Remember," laughed the Robin, "the last time you turned out the town was to welcome Aaron Jett."

Edmund was scheduled to return "some time in May." Word was received setting the date May 12th. On the 11th, early in the evening when the crab apple tree in the yard of the shop was in full bloom, with white blossoms Crystal was sitting at the window looking upon the tangled garden, fragments of lilacs, mysterious with shadows and halit streaks of moonlight sloping down from the top of the cracked wall. The lilacs, indeed, were in full bloom, and then ever before, she told herself, and this was because Edmund was coming home tomorrow. She would come, what she would say, what he would say. Crystal had a role to play, a difficult role, and she was hoping rather wildly that she would act it well and not be too stiff and ridiculous and altogether unnatural. These thoughts were vaguely occupying her mind when she was brought sharply back to the present by an unmistakable rapping of masculine knuckles on the shop door.

She jumped from her chair and ran across the unlighted room. The uncontrollable flutter in her breast for a moment ceased, and she opened the door. In the dim, uncertain light a man was standing—gaunt, tremulous, and looking at her with a gaze that was in the hollows of his cheeks and upon his strong, smooth-shaven chin. His eyes were entirely in the shadow, looking calmly at her. "Miss Cartwright?"

"Won't you come in?" "I'm Crystal Cartwright; and you are?" "Edmund?" "Throughout her life the Robin had never been quite able to conceal her emotions. Her voice was a little tremulous. She laughed. "I was sitting here in the dusk because I was waiting for you. Have you one?"

He searched his pockets, standing in the center of the room. "Let's go out there," he suggested, indicating the open window. "I remember you used to have flowers in the garden, growing by the side in the borders. Also, some kind of tree."

"Do you remember what kind of a tree it was?" "Yes," said he simply, "a tree of dreams."

And when they were seated beneath the tree, the Robin found the role she had to play was, after all, quite simple. "Edmund," said she, "you must not call me 'Miss Cartwright,' for whether you like it or not I'm your foster-sister. Shall I talk, or will you?"

"You," replied Edmund promptly. "The reality and the unreality of a nocturne in May was theirs to look upon—the intimacy of a small garden; the infinite night with its young stars blue and brilliant, old old suns like chips from faded rubies; the ethereal blue bloom through which the planets wandered; the clean odor of earth and the heavy sweet odor of honeysuckle and jasmine moving noiselessly together, with the fragrance of lilacs; the Robin's voice, the silence of the man, the pallid irregular spots of moonlight that came down through the branches and touched her knee and rested in her cupped hands when she held them out idly on her knee.

Edmund was in the shadow; but now, as she looked at him, Crystal noted the mark above his eye, the small flat mole that gave a semi-whimsical expression to his face even in repose. She was talking of the colonel. "You knew," he went on, "that I came here to the shop for his boots after the day I danced over the swords in the library, not once until my father, John MacLaurin, died. No one else came that night, so he came. He told me at the door I was to live on Golden Hill. . . . The wonder of this was in Crystal's voice. The next day he sent for Lawyer Livingston and . . . that day I became your foster sister."

He had paused. Edmund moved. The girl's voice, something she had said, or else her nearness to him seemed to have drawn him from out the shadows. His foster sister. He touched the palm of her upturned hand. "You are telling it like a tale from Grimm or Andersen."

"It had always been just that," replied the Robin.

"Even to the part," he laughed, "where I returned to take from you the house on Golden Hill. Shall I continue to tell you about it?"

"Every word."

But she paused in the clear narrative when she came to the renting of Colonial House. This had troubled her. How could she tell this to Edmund? It would be strange indeed—for a stranger than one might suspect—though she knew she would have to come back to Lurgemiller. "After a little while, Daddy Cartwright realized it was very fortunate—the renting of Colonial House. Instead of having gardeners when we moved to Railroad avenue, we planted them ourselves, spending hours over seed catalogues, walked together, played cribbage, read aloud, and people came to see us at all times of the day and evening. I think people had been a little afraid of Colonial House, a little awed by its formality. And Daddy Cartwright said he had never really known Riverport until he came here. People came quite often for advice, which pleased him. . . . Crystal," she said, "I never saw you again. Now she turned to Edmund with a queer catch in her throat."

"We're in Colonial House to Dr. Karl Lurgemiller. That wasn't really his name, you know. He was at West Point when you were there. And Lurgemiller. . . . Yes, that was a nom de guerre."

"The last day he was at Riverport was the day he was killed," continued the Robin. "He told me he was one of the four who came to Colonial House that November. Her voice was steady now, gazing into his eyes at the shadows made by the garden wall. "You tell me what became of him, Edmund."

CHAPTER XXII.

An Inevitable Fortress.

Yes, he could tell her much. "Three out of four of us who were in the library that day, are gone forever." Edmund's voice did not altogether belie the sincerity of his emotions. "The lives of three out of four of us were exacted by the war."

"Lurgemiller is gone for ever," asked the Robin. "Lurgemiller is gone for ever," replied the man. "Both were silent until the Robin said, 'May I ask one more question, Edmund? Will you tell me what office . . . what position he attained before he was killed?'"

"He had become a staff officer," was the reply. "Lurgemiller finally became connected with the German general staff."

In the silent night a little sob came from the Robin. "I don't want you to think this makes me unhappy. I—I can't explain my sorrow, but it was the thing he had set himself to accomplish. And he did accomplish it. I knew he would."

She never, never so thrilled. Think! Think of it! He did accomplish it. I want you to know, only you, that I shall always think of Karl Lurgemiller setting the wonder of his emotions. "The lives of three out of four of us were exacted by the war."

Paris, June 4.—Walking sticks for women are being made in an interesting variety today. Some have the stolid, masculine appearance which betokens practical use, but others are as frivolous as the crook of a Dresden shepherdess.

BANGLES! BANGLES! BANGLES! Paris, June 4.—At the moment, the feminine arm is a cascade—or perhaps a ladder—of glitters and beads. Bangle is a different color, and the effect is both bright and noisy.

ONE-SLEEVE DRESS. London, June 4.—The one-sleeve dress is here again. It seems to be a happy compromise between the long, tight sleeve and no sleeve at all. Since one arm is quite bare and the other amply draped.

ELEPHANT SKIN SHOES. London, June 4.—There are shoes of elephant skin now. This use for elephant skin has become a fad, since the source of supply is getting scarce. But at the moment several prominent London women have soft-soled shoes made from Jumbo's hide.

SHEARED CONEY FOR SUMMER. New York, June 4.—A favorite fur for trimming summer frocks and wraps at present is sheared coney, in white. Coney is, of course, rabbit, and the sheared fur has a certain appealing lightness of quality.

LEATHER HAND BAG. New York, June 4.—There is a distinct vogue today for leather hand bags and other accessories. One result is a smart little vanity case of Morocco in various colors, not much larger than a purse, yet containing all the essentials.

MANY ATTEND FUNERAL. Lobo, June 4.—The funeral service of the late Mrs. Ann McDonald was held in the Presbyterian Church and conducted by the pastor, Rev. N. A. Campbell. Many friends attended. Survivors are two brothers, Donald and Archibald of Lobo, and two sisters, Mrs. A. Campbell, Caradoc, and Mrs. McIntyre of Iowa, U. S.

LOVELL—WILLIAMS. Special to The Advertiser. Stratford, June 4.—At high noon Tuesday the marriage was solemnized in St. Paul's Anglican Church of Dorothy Williams, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Alford Williams, city, and Lovell, eldest son of Mr. Herbert Lovell of London, England. Rev. S. A. Macdonell, the rector, performed the ceremony. The bride was attired in an attractive gown of white satin with overdruss of lace and wore the conventional veil and wreath of orange blossoms. Her sole ornament was a rope of pearls, the gift of the bridegroom. She was given away by her father and was attended by little Miss Dorothy Fryer of St. Thomas, who wore white silk and carried a bouquet of Ophelia roses. The bride's groom's attendant. The bridegroom's gift to the flower girl was a ring and to his attendant good cuff links.

Following the ceremony there was a wedding dinner at the home of the bride's parents, and in the afternoon the young couple left for a short honeymoon trip to Niagara Falls, the bride wearing a travelling suit of mauve. They will reside on Ontario street.

Confident That Prosperity Is Dependent Upon Their Party.

Special to The Advertiser. Stratford, June 3.—Resolutions of confidence in Right Hon. Arthur Meighen, Hon. G. Howard Ferguson, and in the local member, Dr. J. D. Monteith, were passed at the annual meeting of the North Perth Liberal-Conservative Association at Milverton today. There was a representative crowd in attendance, practically every municipality in the riding having delegates present, and the meeting was most enthusiastic. The resolution set forth the belief of the association that the only way to prosperity for Canada was through the national policy as laid down by the Conservative party. Officers elected are: President, D. A. Dempsey; first vice-president, Mrs. (Dr.) James Moore, Lister; second vice-president, B. Westman, Mornington; secretary-treasurer, A. Stevenson, Stratford. The executive is the presidents of the various municipal organizations, Stratford, H. W. Henry, London, president of the Western Ontario Conservative Association. He had something to say about the picnic planned for Stratford sometime early in the summer. The date is to be fixed as soon as arrangements can be made with the Right Hon. Arthur Meighen and Hon. G. Howard Ferguson, both of whom are expected to be present.

RAILROAD SHARES HOLDING STRONG

Stability in Transportation
Stocks Proves Feature on Wall Street.

Associated Press Despatch.
New York, June 5.—Wall Street, noon.—Stability of railroad shares and heaviness of most other stocks were the outstanding features of the early trading. Accumulation of Southern Railway, leading the stock up 1 1/2 points to a new top at 55, had a strengthening effect on other southern and southwestern rail issues. Missouri Pacific preferred also went to a new 1924 high level at 44 1/2. West Pennsylvania Power soared more than 6 points to the year's best point at 65. With the prices of raw and refined sugars at new low levels the small grain futures were effective in lowering these shares, as well as some of the transportation issues. The general railroad trend, dropping 3 points to 55, a 1924 low, and Kansas yielded 10 points to 55. Call money opened at 3 per cent.

LAY CORNER-STONE OF HOSPITAL WING

Interesting Ceremony Yesterday At Strathroy Largely Attended.

NEW NURSES' HOME

Special to The Advertiser.

Strathroy, June 4.—In perfect weather, before a crowd of 1,500 people from all sections of Middlesex and Lambton, Miss E. M. Morton, superintendent of the Strathroy Hospital, wearing her nurse's uniform and a string of medals won by her overseas service with the Canadian army, declared the corner-stone of the new $200,000 addition well and truly laid.

Rev. A. B. Vincent, his former pastor, unveiled the beautiful portrait of the late David Evans, former chairman of the hospital trust, which was presented to the hospital by his son, Ewart Evans.

Evelyn Bixel, the infant daughter of A. W. Bixel and grand-daughter of James W. Cameron, the donors of the memorial nurses' home, presented the key to Chairman George Lewis of the hospital trust, and unlocked the door. Dr. Kammann of Hamilton, a former pastor of Mrs. Evelyn Morgan Cameron and her daughter, Mrs. Evelyn Cameron Bixel, to whose memory the home has been erected, then addressed and dedicated it to its intended use by prayer.

Those taking part in the trile ceremony were: Lieutenant-Governor Brett of Alberta; Col. Gartshore of London, representing the Victoria Hospital and the Ontario Hospital Association; Warden C. C. Henry, as spokesman for the county council; Rev. George Pugsley, of St. John's Church; Rev. A. B. Vincent, of the Baptist Church; John Stewart, clerk of the county; Thos. N. Dunn, one of the originators of the hospital; James W. Cameron, and Edward Rowland, treasurer of the hospital trust. Judge Duncan Ross of St. Thomas was chairman of the gathering.

Endowments.
During the proceedings, Edward Rowland, who has been for years the treasurer of the Strathroy Hospital Trust, announced that he had provided, by his will, for an endowment for the hospital of $500 yearly, and for the public library of $200 yearly. Judge Ross announced that he had been in communication with a manufacturer of Strathroy, who for reasons of health resided in California, and this generous citizen was arranging for a substantial endowment.

Mr. Rowland, the treasurer, announced the various gifts by citizens to furnish the new home: Mihel and Gill, the carpets; W. H. Cuddy, electric fittings; James Butler, blankets; Wm. Geddes & Co., Ltd., hangings.

Home Town Pride.
In his address Lieutenant-Governor Brett said that he had always claimed Strathroy as his home town, and that he was prouder than ever when he realized what an institution the community spirit of the town had built up.

Mary and Isabel Young, daughters of Mr. Watson Young of London and granddaughters of James W. Cameron, presented bouquets of tulips to Miss Morton and Mrs. Geo. Lewis.

Mr. Cameron told the history of the hospital, of the original bequest by Mrs. Dyer and Mrs. Inch of $4,000, of the gift of the grounds and building by Mr. Thomas Dunn, and the gift of the nurses' home by Mr. Bixel and himself, with maintenance provided for in perpetuity.

The nurses' home was then dedicated and opened to public inspection, after which the ladies of the hospital auxiliary served a luncheon.

Among the many out-of-town visitors were: William Goodison, Dr. James and Warden Newman-Dodds of Sarnia, Dr. W. J. Stevenson and H. A. Stevenson of London.

Mason and Risch Trophy Captured By Frank Shaw

Hal. Collings Declared Winner of Nash Cup in Deciding Trial.

CLOSE COMPETITION

Madeline Berlo and Company
Give Another Splendid Diving Exhibition.

Frank Shaw captured the Mason & Risch Cup in the Loew's-Advertiser diving contest at Loew's Theatre last night. Arnold Ramer won the John A. Nash Cup. The event was the third diving contest of the week, and was for youths 18 to 20 years of age. Seven swimmers, Frank Shaw, Arnold Ramer, Hal Collings, Herbert Smith, Jack Veness, Fergus Donahue and Dan Chapman, entered the contest, and demonstrated their ability to dive gracefully in unfamiliar surroundings and close quarters.

Following Madeline Berlo's act, wherein the water nymphs of vaudeville gave a splendid exhibition of fancy diving, the young men were introduced to the audience by Mr. Thornton, of the team of Thornton and Burgess.

Divers Cautioned.
In beginning the competition Miss Dora Berlo cautioned the boys regarding the shallow water and the narrow limits of the tank, and it was well that the contestants were warned for the tank is indeed small for husky boys, and in their efforts to make a good showing they took some big chances on the spring board, and the surly bathed the members of the orchestra.

Dora Berlo led them first with the rocking chair and seal dives, which they negotiated with ease. The second dive, the "stand and sit" was greeted with enthusiasm by the audience. There was an optional dive, when despite the warnings of Miss Berlo the boys tossed caution to the winds and pulled off the "back-kick" and front and back flips, fortunately without mishap.

Honors Even.
Following the winning of the Mason & Risch Cup, the boys went after the Nash Cup. Honors were so evenly divided between Arnold Ramer and Hal Collings that it was necessary to have them dive again to decide the winner.

Collings elected to do a back flip. Ramer chose a front flip and emerged from a cloud of spray. The adjudged winner by the audience. Tonight is girls' night, when girls from 12 to 14 years of age will compete in fancy diving for the city of London Cup and the Nash Cup.

C.N.R. Demands Tall Policemen

Special to The Advertiser.

Stratford, June 4.—As a result of an order from the investigation department of the C. N. R., all policemen on the railway must reach a height of six feet. The men stationed in this city, who did not reach the requisite height have been absorbed in other departments. Five new men of the desired height have been sworn in and will look after the property of the C. N. R. here in the places of their shorter brethren.

There will be, at least, three entries, Lillian Milner, Barbara Culbert and Patricia Manual. It is expected that this will be one of the feature nights of the contest, when the little girls will follow the big sister act through a series of graceful dives.

Engraving Free.
The Loew's-Advertiser committee announces that those contestants who have won trophies may have them engraved without charge upon presentation to John A. Nash.

In addition to the prizes that are already up, Manager Jackson of Loew's announces that two additional cups will be donated by Loew's Theatre to be contested for on Saturday afternoon, which contest will complete the series.

There will be no contest on Friday evening. On account of the school picnic it was deemed advisable to cancel the event.

The Saturday afternoon contest will be for boys twelve to fifteen years, and for junior boys who have not yet entered a contest.

JUNK YARDS FIRE LOSS OVER $6,000

J. Harris and Sons Building Is Gutted by Blaze This Afternoon.

Fire loss, estimated at from six to ten thousand dollars, was caused this afternoon at the junk yards of J. Harris & Son, 735 York street. The interior of a white brick outbuilding, 2 stories in height, was gutted, and a large quantity of rags, paper and bones burned. The owners stated that they had insurance on $7,000, and that their total loss would run about $10,000.

The blaze started on the ground floor, where workmen were baling paper. The building, situated at the rear of the junk-filled yard, was buried in a dense pall of smoke when the fire department arrived, and the firemen's work was made difficult. Four or five lines of hose were laid and the fire extinguished in good time without accident.
