THE PREMIERS' CONFERENCE

Provincial Leaders Discuss the Maintenance of Lieutenant-Governors.

Will Consult Chamberlain With View of Easing the Burden of the Provinces.

London, July 2.—The Canadian Provincial Premiers, Messrs. Ross, Murray, Tweedie, Roblin, Peters, Durnan and Haultain, also Treasurer Duffy, of Quebec, again conferred to-day at the Grosvenor Hotel, and discussed the maintenance of the Lieutenant-Governors. It was decided to confer with Mr. Chamberlain with a view to easing the burden of the provinces, and also to ask for an authoritative statement on precedence and the official status. The Provincial Ministers intend to seek Sir Wilfrid Laurier's co-operation.

THE DOMINION DAY DINNER

Dominion Day was never celebrated in London with greater éclat and enthusiasm than at last night's banquet, which was followed by Lord Strathcona's reception. The Queen's letter, which Lord Strathcona read, returning heartfelt thanks to Canadians and others, was cheered again and again. Sir Charles Tupper found opportunity to beg the British and Canadian Ministers to seize the chance to make the Empire the greatest in history by the adoption of a principle of mutually preferential trade. Sir Charles also paid a passing tribute to his "distinguished and eloquent friend, Sir Wilfrid Laurier, by whom he had been compulsorily retired after 25 years of public service." Sir Frederick Borden significantly urged the retention of complete colonial control of the self-governed and self-contained colonial forces, as contrasted with the Imperial defence nostrums propounded in certain quarters. He said:—"We do pretty well now in the Empire, and it is a good motto to leave well alone."

CANADIAN ATLANTIC CABLE

The subject of a Canadian Atlantic cable will likely be discussed at the forthcoming meeting of the colonial premiers. There is a doubtful feeling as to the general result of the conference. The impression prevails that it will be little more than a good-natured talk and interchange of views and opinions, for none of the premiers can pledge their Parliaments, and the expressed French-Canadian sentiment naturally hampers Sir Wilfrid Laurier.

TRAIN DERAILED

Disaster to the Troy-Montreal Express—Twenty-Five Injured.

Bennington, Vt., July 2.—The Troy-Montreal express, due at 8:20 a. m., was derailed at a switch about a mile from here. Twenty-five people were injured, five seriously and one probably fatally.

Later, As a result of the Troy-Montreal express being derailed at a switch at Hoosick Junction, N. Y., about seven miles from this city, at 8 o'clock this morning, about twenty-five people were injured, five seriously and one probably fatally. The seriously injured are:—Allen Hucksusius, Philadelphia, boy, injuries to back, will probably die; John Provenche, baggage-master, Rutland, back and side injured; Daniel O'Brien, North Adams, Mass.; William Doyle, New York; J. R. Hutchinson, Sheldon, Vt.; R. B. Parsons, conductor of Rutland. The train was the regular night express to Montreal, over the Boston & Maine Railroad, and was made up of four passenger and a combination car. While passing over a switch, a loose wheel on the combination car caught between the rails, and the cars were derailed, three coaches being totally wrecked. The injured were brought here, and the seriously injured were taken to the hospital. The tender and four cars, including the mail car, rolled down an embankment and into a trestle work of the Bennington & Hoosick Valley Railroad Company's coal pit. The last car telescoped the car ahead. The doctors from Hoosick Falls immediately responded to a telephone summons for assistance.

Charles Lynn and James Robbins, of this city, are spending a few days in Buxton. They both took part in a concert given there last night.

WHITNEY WINNING HIS OWN IN STRUGGLE WITH MACHINE

LENNOX COUNTY GOES CONSERVATIVE BY THREE.

Carscallen Given the Seat on Appeal Recount—In North Grey the Liberal Majority is Reduced to Two—Ross Hangs on by a Thread.

Toronto, July 2.—The Ross Government this morning has a majority of one in the House, with the North Renfrew seat vacant. The majority was reduced from three by the decision of Justice MacLennan in the Lennox case, given out this morning. The judge rules that ballot 4,032, marked for Madole with a circle instead of a cross, and allowed by the county judge, was improperly counted, and that ballots 4,004 and 406, which were ruled out, should have been counted. No. 405 had a cross in Carscallen's half of the ballot, though in the white margin, and one limb of the cross intersected the line. No. 4,004, which had been disallowed, had a distinct cross for Carscallen, but there was a letter "M" in the left portion of Madole's compartment. The changes made give Carscallen (Con.) a majority of three. Mr. Madole's cross petition is still to be heard, but in the meanwhile the seat goes to his opponent.

Judgment was given also by Judge MacLennan in the North Grey case, in which it was alleged that four ballots had been spoiled at No. 9, St. Vincent, by the placing of a faint cross for McKay (Liberal) in the same compartment as his name, the ballots having been properly marked for Boyd (Conservative) by the voters. The judge said he was entirely unable to agree with Judge Morrison that there was any evidence that these marks had been made after the close of the polls and the counting of the ballots. They were, he said, simply not observed in the hurry of counting. Even at the recount the judge himself did not notice them on a first examination. There was hardly any room even for the suspicion complained of, that the faint crosses over McKay's name were made after the counting of the ballots. He thought the county judge did right in throwing out these ballots. Judge MacLennan disallowed two McKay ballots and allowed one for Boyd that had not been allowed, and made McKay's majority two. He therefore holds the seat.

WITH P. M.

L. E. & D. R. R. Will Establish a New Traffic Arrangement With This Road.

During the present month the L. E. & D. R. R. will inaugurate a working agreement with the Pere Marquette railway for the transfer of cars. Under this new traffic arrangement it will be possible to ship cars direct from points on the Michigan road to Ohio and vice versa. The L. E. & D. R. R. own the car ferry International and this will be utilized to transfer cars between Sarnia and Port Huron. The Lake Erie railway also owns the Sherrago, which will carry cars between Conneaut, O., and the terminal of the L. E. & D. R. R.

Manager Woolatt is confident that the working agreement will prove of mutual advantage and will increase freight traffic very largely, as there will be a direct route between shipping stations on both sides. It is expected that the International will be ready to go into commission by the end of this month.—Windsor Record.

ARSON CASE

The arson case was further adjourned till Tuesday next and the accused let out on their bail. The case dragged along at the police court till late yesterday afternoon. All the crown witnesses were heard but one. He was out of the city, and the case adjourned to give the crown an opportunity to secure his attendance.

Frank W. Sharpe was not a willing witness, and the court had to promise to deal severely with him before he would answer Crown Attorney Bell. After some hesitation he acknowledged that Miss Kerr had threatened to shoot him when she got out if he gave evidence against her. He said he thought she was joking. The evidence of this witness seemed to amuse both Miss Kerr and Miss Marsland, and they laughed quite heartily. Arthur Marriatt, the Crown's star witness, went to pieces. Marriatt told the police that he had seen a man with a lantern and a woman go into the house on the night of the fire. In court he said he could tell the man, but McDonald, the prisoner, was not the man. Under cross examination the witness broke down and wept. O. L. Lewis is conducting the defence.

KILLED ON THE G. T. R.

Kingston, Ont., July 2.—Arthur Chown, of Belleville, was killed on the G. T. R., near Kingston Junction, this morning. He got off the night express and later his mangled remains were found. He was aged 45 and married, and was coming to Kingston on a holiday. His father was the late Arthur Chown, of this city.

AT POLICE COURT

Julius Leguille, charged with being drunk, was released on suspended sentence. Sarah Lang, charged with vagrancy, was dismissed.

MORNING BATH

Charles Stein, who works at the wagon works, had a very unpleasant experience while going to work this morning. Mr. Stein lives in South Chatham, and each morning crosses river in a boat. This morning, however, he got as far as the middle of the stream when the boat in some unaccountable manner capsized and the occupant was given a free plunge bath. Fortunately for Mr. Stein he is a good swimmer, and experienced no difficulty in reaching the shore. He returned home, changed his clothes, and arrived at the factory a few hours late.

KING EDWARD STILL GAINS

Maintains His Strength and Makes Steady Progress in Every Respect.

His Majesty Sends Colonial and Indian Troops a Complimentary Message.

London, July 2.—King Edward has passed another good day. The quiet and routine of the royal sick room was varied to-day by the excitement of listening to the music and cheers of the Indian troops as they marched past the palace and greeted Queen Alexandra on the balcony. King Edward demanded a full account of the review, and the formal report made by the Prince of Wales, was supplemented by the personal narrative of the Queen. His Majesty dictated a letter to the Duke of Connaught, commanding him to compliment the colonial and Indian troops upon their excellent appearance, and to thank them for their expressions of loyalty and sympathy, which he had heard with pleasure in his sick room. King Edward was somewhat disappointed that he was not able to see the march past of the troops. He had hoped that this would be possible from an invalid couch in a window of the palace, but the King's doctors were unwilling that their patient should risk exposure and excitement, and His Majesty had to content himself with hearing the troops without seeing them.

IMPROVEMENT CONTINUES.

THURSDAY, JULY 3.

HONOR THESE HEROES.

The following, from the Hamilton Herald, The Planet heartily endorses: Canadian heroism on the battlefields of South Africa has been celebrated in verse and prose, and the world now knows pretty well that the people who inhabit the northern half of this continent are not lacking in the physical courage that is needed to win battles. But courage of a rarer and higher type than the courage of the soldier was that which was so nobly exercised last week by the men who rescued Joshua Sanford from his living death at the bottom of a well near Paris, Ont.

Very rarely has it happened that so much toil has been expended, so much risk incurred, so much money spent for the saving of one human life. The story of the rescue, as told in the newspapers from day to day, has thrilled the public heart, not only in Canada but in the United States as well. Seldom has the preciousness of human life received more striking illustration than in this memorable episode. The man in the well was an ordinary workman; but the efforts to save him rivaled in public interest the bulletins from Buckingham Palace, where science and skill were battling with death for the life of the King.

This interest was largely due to the fact that the rescuers were taking great risks. The anxiety was for the rescuers as well as for Sanford. The public instinctively recognizes true heroism and venerates the hero. There were scores of men who displayed true heroism in this rescue of Sanford, but the leading workers, who incurred the greatest risks, were John Carmie, Richard Doyle, George Blanchard, Robert Hamilton, George Wentworth and Henry Allen. These men, toiling underground for days, with no thought of reward, knowing well that at any moment the treacherous quicksand might cause the earth to cave in and bury them, displayed a heroism superior to that of the soldier who charges up to the cannon's mouth. Theirs was a heroism which should be publicly recognized. The medal of the Royal Canadian Humane Society should be awarded to each of the noble men whose names we have mentioned, and also to Dr. Duntion, who, at great personal risk, cared for the man in the well while he was yet imprisoned there.

FORMER PERILS.

The incidents of the week, points out the Ottawa Citizen, have recalled the former perils of King Edward, through which he fortunately passed in safety, but in some cases not without a period of profound anxiety on the part of the British nation. Briefly stated they are as follows:—

1. While a schoolboy at Oxford a boat in which he was rowing was overturned. He saved himself by swimming ashore.
2. Upon returning to England in 1860, after his visit to the United States and Canada, his voyage was so delayed by storms that warships were sent in search of the warship Hero.
3. In 1871 an attack of typhoid fever threatened to result fatally. His life was despaired of, but was saved through vigorous rubbing him with brandy.
4. In 1875, while tiger shooting in India, a tiger sprang upon the Prince's elephant. His life was saved by Colonel White, of his suite, who killed the beast.
5. In 1898 he slipped and fell on a stairway, sustaining an accident to his knee which threatened to make him lame for life. Within a few months he had completely recovered.
6. On April 4, 1900, while en route to Copenhagen, was shot at by a half-crazed youth named Spido, at the Brussels railway station. Two shots were fired, both of which missed the mark.
7. While on a visit to Emperor

8. He missed death by just 10 seconds on Shamrock II. last summer while the yacht was on a trial spin. He was a guest of Sir Thomas Lipton, the boat was caught in a squall and the mast and rigging went over, imperiling the life of the host and his guests.

THE PHILIPPINES.

Some interesting figures concerning the Philippine war are given out by the Buffalo Enquirer. Since the close of the trouble with the Boers, our American cousins have been giving more attention to their own affairs, and the cost of the little conquest in the South Pacific is attracting not a little attention.

"During the last fiscal year," says the Enquirer, "the war in the Philippines cost us $177,000,000, or nearly as much as was expended upon the civil government of the United States including President, Senators, Representatives, Courts, and clerks in the various departments. It is the greatest expense incurred in any year since the war began with Spain in 1898, except in 1899, when the total was $229,841,254, due to the fact that both the Cuban and the Philippines campaigns were being conducted in that year. The following totals of expenses tells the story:—

1897	$48,950,267
1898	91,992,000
1899	229,841,254
1900	134,774,767
1901	144,615,687
1902	177,000,000

The above is merely for the army expenses. During the same time the cost of the navy has grown from $34,000,000 to $76,000,000. Upon every man, woman and child in the United States there would have to be levied a per capita tax of $2.15 to pay the cost last year of the army and navy in our unholy war of conquest. This onerous tax for the pastime of killing people and taking away their government does not include the enormous amounts taken from the treasuries of these islands to defray other expenses. The Philippines war alone has cost us more than $250,000,000, and what is there to show for it except national humiliation, and the publication to the world that we have repudiated the Declaration of Independence and the Constitution."

How much better it would have been for the United States had they let the Philippines take care of themselves, instead of paying Spain $20,000,000 for such a white elephant! The colored problem has assumed such proportions in the States that we marvel at the people on their adding further to their troubles by taking in several millions more. Of course, the Philippines are not negroes—they are for the most part savages, treacherous and unprincipled. It will require an immense standing for an indefinite period to keep them in order, because their peace treaties and agreements are not worth the paper they are written on. It is costing the Americans a pile of money now to keep up appearances in the Philippines, and it does not appear as though their troubles are near an end.

LOCKED UP

At the Request of the Woman
She was Incarcerated with Her Lover.

"Aaron Siddals, disorderly conduct, remanded for a week," is the way a record appears at the police court, but there is quite an interesting story behind this most ordinary entry.

One night last week Arthur Marriatt appealed to P. C. Darr. Arthur was in real trouble. He went up to his rooms on the market square where he lives in Domestic felicity. He found the door locked. Arthur was surprised. He was some more surprised when he found that his wife and Aaron Siddals were on the inside of the locked door. They told the husband that they didn't need him. Arthur got tired singing that popular melody "Open that door," so he appealed to P. C. Darr. Siddals and Mrs. Marriatt refused to open up even for the policeman. At last Siddals said that if the policeman would go away he would come out. The officer went down the hallway and waited. Pretty soon Siddals came along and Officer Darr gathered him in. The police wanted Siddals. In fact they had desire to cultivate his acquaintance since last September. He had been arrested on the charge of disorderly conduct and being released on bail, had never returned to the police station. Therefore P. C. Darr arrested Siddals. Mrs. Marriatt refused to be comforted when she learned of the arrest and followed Siddals to the police station. She asked to be locked up with him. This the police refused, but she bothered them until they locked her up in a cell adjoining Siddals. Then the woman was happy, but not so her husband. Arthur, the wronged, hung around outside, waiting for his wife. When Siddals had been remanded to jail for a week, then did the wife, not willingly, but of necessity, leave him. She was sad, but suffered herself to be comforted and led away by her husband. By the hand, the husband led his wife back to their humble domicile. Arthur said he had nothing against his wife so he took her by the hand and led her away as lovingly as could be.

GRANDEURS OF PEAK AND CHASM

The natural attractions of Colorado are by no means confined to her mineral springs, resorts, her splendid parks, nor to her beautiful mountain lakes. In whatever direction the traveller may choose by rail, if he go to the mountains, his journey is a succession of glorious scenery, varying in the characteristics of placid beauty grotesque ruggedness, an awe-inspiring grandeur. Up the canons, by heavy grades and difficult curves, are projecting rocks that hang suspended over the train as it glides smoothly by it is a panorama of wonders and grandeur, such as belong only to the Rocky Mountains.

To enable persons to reach Colorado resorts the Union Pacific has placed in effect during the summer months very low rates.

Tuesday was a very busy day on the Lake Erie. The first of July being a general holiday the traffic was increased all over the line. About 1625 passengers were taken to Bond Eau. The railroad was rather handicapped for coach room for the Eau service. The coaches from the Sarnia and London trains, however, were taken to the Eau at night and all of the excursionists were brought home. The Lake Erie deserves great credit for the splendid manner in which they handled the large crowds.

ROLFF :-
:- HOUSE

BY :-
G. H. BENEDICT.

"I said I would consider your claims, but the fact is, my dear Mr. Bruyn, I do not wish to sell the place at all. My ambition has been to put it in repair, and deed the place to my son as a wedding present, of course calculating also to make it my own home for the balance of my days. If there were any immediate prospect of Ralph getting married, I might still adhere to my plans—in fact, I undoubtedly would; but it is an expensive project, and one I would not care to undertake without the boy was to make good match with a young lady who would have something to add to his own fortune and enable them to support the place in the style it would require. As matters are, however, there seems no immediate prospect of Ralph succeeding with the only matrimonial suit he has yet undertaken—of course, my dear sir, you know to what I refer—and the old place is rather a weight on my hands; and I don't know as I am justified in refusing such an excellent offer. Of course, my dear Mr. Bruyn, I would like to oblige you, if my interests rendered it in any way admissible. The truth is, I have indulged the fond hope that Ralph would succeed in his suit with your daughter and that thus our two properties, which seem destined naturally to be united, would come together as the joint property of our children. But, of course, you know, Mr. Bruyn—

"No, I don't know," interrupted the old man. "I thought we understood each other pretty well on that subject, and as far as I'm concerned, I don't see why there is any trouble about it."

"Ah, but Ralph informs me that your daughter positively refuses to give up her belief in the good faith of her former lover, Claude Rolff, and makes every prospect of his winning her hand dependent upon her being first fully assured that young Rolff will not return to fulfill his pledges. Of course, that creates an obstacle whose removal is so uncertain and indefinite that it seems absolutely foolish, from a business point of view, to refuse a good offer to sell in order to take such improbable chances."

"Farmer Bruyn sat down the glass he had been holding in his hand, and leaned forward in his chair.

"And so Rosa tells Ralph she intends to marry Claude Rolff yet?" he asked.

"That's about it," replied the lawyer. "She seems to have full faith that he will come back, and is resolved at least to wait and give him the chance to claim her."

The farmer leaned back in his chair, and laughed heartily.

"Ah, sir, she's a rare girl, and, by my under, I believe she's got some of her own grit in her. But do you fear sir; she'll never throw herself away on that young scamp. I'll take care of that. She's always been a good girl, and she'll do as I say, I'll warrant. I've taken a liking to Ralph myself, and Rosa will like him too, yet. But he's a dunder head. Why don't he spunk her so as to cut out the young scamp? Ain't got the courage of a mouse, eh, sir—ha, ha, ha! 'Twasn't so when I was a young man. I never gave my wife any peace till she said she'd have me. She was bound she wouldn't marry me, but I was bound to have her, and I got her. No, no; Rosa's all right. It's Ralph that don't know how to manage. Well, I must see to it—must see to it. It won't do to have our plans broken up."

"It would grieve me exceedingly," replied the lawyer. "I had already begun to make my estimates for having the old house repaired and fixed over, when this offer came, and, together with Ralph's despondent report, set me to thinking seriously. But, of course, my dear Mr. Bruyn, as you say, we must not allow our plans to fall through so easily. I am disposed now to agree with you that the fault is partly Ralph's. I must talk to him, and give him some advice. These young people need the supervision and advice of their parents, Mr. Bruyn.

"Aye, that they do; and I mean my daughter shall have it."

Thus under the influence of wine and the blandishments of the lawyer, the old farmer was fully caught in the trap that had been laid for him; and, after some further talk, he started for home, full of thoughts and plans that boded no happiness to Rosa.

CHAPTER XXII.

Some days passed by, and the toils about poor Rosa Bruyn grew more distressing and hard to bear. She could see that her father had fully set his mind on her marrying Ralph Saybrook. She was aware that he was a man who, with all his kindness of heart, never could brook being thwarted in any way and was altogether too practical and coarse in his nature to appreciate her sentimental objections to the proposed matrimonial agreement. He apparently did not consider that her objections could be anything more than temporary, or that sooner or later she would not forget Claude Rolff and be ready to accept Ralph in his place with all her accustomed cheerfulness and obedience.

At the same time, a change was going on in the nature of the old farmer. He had for two or three years retired from the more active labor in managing his farm, and now found time every day to spend a few hours in the village, and was certain to make thither a regular evening trip. This spare time was mostly spent either in the tavern or in the company of lawyer Saybrook. The lawyer not only liked a social glass himself, but was well aware of the effect of good spirits in promoting a friendly and complying disposition in those he wished to influence, and, interested as he was in securing the welfare of Ralph with the old farmer, he did not fail to ply him with his best liquors as often as he called. Moreover, the old man took pride in supporting the character of a free-hearted burgher, and did not escape from Ronk's tavern of an evening without having indulged in more strong spirits than was good for him.

Mrs. Bruyn and Rosa could both notice that the effect of these politeness was to increase the irascibility and obstinacy of the head of the household when he was crossed, while the constant brooding to become the possessor of more lands, and particularly of the rich fields and heavy woods adjoining on the side of the Rolff estate, became the means of the old farmer took to influence his daughter—or, rather, the attitude and disposition toward her which were a natural result of his feelings and wishes—were such as to greatly increase her distress and weaken her resolution.

He used no harshness toward her. His irritability showed itself rather in a quarrelsome and dictatorial disposition toward his farm laborers, and a fault-finding habit about the house which was a source of great anxiety to Mrs. Bruyn.

The generous-hearted girl was deeply grieved thus to see herself the innocent cause of trouble to others.

Toward herself, however, her father was more than usually kind. He treated her obstinacy in clinging to her faith in Claude with a bluff and hearty ridicule, but under it his love for her shone out in a certain tenderness of look and tone that belied his curt words.

Rosa recognized this, and it added to the difficulty of her position. Her nature was naturally a self-sacrificing one. Were her own happiness alone involved, she felt that she could yield without a murmur to anything that her father wished. But her word was pledged; deep in her heart she felt convinced of Claude's constancy and faith; she could not face the reflection of his returning one day to find that she had been weak and false.

Thus, all the efforts of her father to convince her of Claude's unworthiness only resulted in her clinging more firmly to her faith in him.

The old farmer was withal amused with her display of firmness, and rather admired her spirit. Had it not been for his frequent visits to lawyer Saybrook's office and the skill with which that accomplished schemer played on his ambition and avarice, he probably would have left Ralph to his own fate.

But the fear of seeing Rolff House go into the hands of a stranger, and the loss of the lands he had coveted for so many years, spurred him on.

He sat on the front stoop one day, in his accustomed chair, smoking his pipe. It was early autumn, and his eyes could wander over a portion of his own land, and down to where the woods and meadows of the Rolff place joined his own line. Over the crest of the intervening hill, the gables and chimneys of Rolff House rose clear against the sky.

It was a beautiful view, and Rosa, who had appeared at the back door stood awhile passively admiring it, indulging, no doubt, sad reflections as to the future.

"Come here, Rosa," said the farmer. She stepped quietly to his side.

"See there," he said taking his pipe from his mouth with one hand, while with the other he pointed toward Rolff House, "there lies the best bit of land in the whole country. The old house there, in my day, was a grand place, and everybody thought it a palace. It's in bad shape now—'twasn't in the best of it when I kept it up. Ah, it's bad-blood, girl, it never could keep what it didn't gain honestly. That place now is Anthony Saybrook's and he tells me he is going to sell it if Ralph don't get married, but if he does he will give it to him. A grand place it would be if it was fixed up and the spooks driven out. It can be yours and Ralph's, and with enough money to make it as grand as it ever was. Now, I am going over to Mr. Saybrook's to-night, and if I tell him you are willing to marry Ralph, he'll draw up a deed giving the whole property to you two, and of course what I've got will be yours, and in my old age I'd be happy to see my little girl the lady of the country."

Rosa grew pale, and was silent a moment.

"The place is Claude's, father," she said finally; "it was left to him; it ought to be his."

"Tut, tut, girl; he gave it away for the money to waste and riot in a foreign land. It's his no longer. I knew he would never keep it; but I never thought he'd be such a dunderhead as he was about it."

"He was cheated; there is fraud somewhere; Claude would never have given up Rolff House," replied Rosa, speaking low but with painful intensity. "What's done is done, girl," said the old man, resuming his pipe. "I saw the paper deeding the old place away, and it had Claude's name to it. I know his writing well enough. He's lost it, and lost it for good, and there isn't much chance that he'll ever come back here. Come, Rosa, give up your foolishness about Claude, and take a man that's got brains, and knows how to make money and keep it, too. You'll never get a better chance."

"Oh, father, you do not know what you ask me," replied the poor girl, breaking into tears.

"Yes, I do; I ask you to give up a vagabond and scamp for a steady, honest young fellow, who's got everything I want the man that marries you to have. Don't be foolish, girl. It's too good a chance to throw away. I don't want to see anybody else have that property I've wanted to see you buy it to settle on you when you marry; but now it can be yours with just a word. When Ralph speaks to you next time, Rosa, take an old man's advice, and don't put him off for a poor cool who never meant to marry you."

Poor Rosa could not reply. She attempted to speak, but her tongue refused to perform its office. Finally overcome by her feelings, she turned and walked slowly away and entered the house, her manner showing only too plainly her deep agitation.

The old man turned and gazed after her as she slowly disappeared.

"Ah, poor girl," he muttered. "She's sore hurt by that young scamp, and I was fool enough to let it all happen when I might have nipped it in the bud. But it's better she should suffer now for a little while than all her life. She'll come around. I can trust her; she's got rare good sense; and as soon as her eyes are opened, she'll think more of Ralph than she ever did of that vagabond."

And with this comforting reflection, the old farmer puffed anew on his pipe, and turned his thoughts to the bargains he could drive with the shrewd lawyer when it came to arranging the terms of the marriage settlement.

EVENTFUL SNEEZING

HOW A LITTLE THING MAY BE LADEN WITH GREAT RESULTS.

A Sneeze Under London Bridge That Cost Two and Saved Many Lives. A Sneeze That Averted Assassination—One That Caused a Panic.

Exactly at 6 p. m. on the evening of Dec. 13, 1884, a sneeze was sneezed under London bridge which consigned two men to an instant and horrible death.

Their names were Lomasney and Fleming, and they were conspirators. Their mission was to blow up the bridge with dynamite, because it was considered that at that time there would be more people crossing it—workmen, workgirls and others on their way home from business—than at any other and that the loss in human life would be therefore correspondingly more appalling.

All went well at first. The pair of desperadoes dropped noiselessly down the river in a boat, with forty pounds of dynamite in their possession, together with the necessary fuses and detonators. Arrived at their destination, however, they found that the gully hole underneath the southern arch of the structure, wherein it had been their intention to insert the explosive, had been stopped up. Lomasney undertook to remove the obstruction, but it occupied him some little time. The explosion was bitterly cold, and his comrades got chilled and were seized with a sudden fit of sneezing. In his agitation he dropped one or more of the detonators he was holding, and these, falling on the dynamite which was lying in the bottom of the boat, exploded it, with disastrous results. Doubtless, however, that the career of a pair of desperadoes, saved London bridge from destruction.

That the Right Hon. W. E. Forster died peacefully in his bed instead of being assassinated in 1882 was due to a sneeze. Three times the Right Hon. Forster sneezed, but the last attempt was the most determined of them all. Four men armed with heavy caliber navy revolvers were waylaying him as he drove from the viceregal lodge to the castle. Two of the assassins were to fire at him from the first floor window of a house in a certain street, and the other two were stationed at the window of another house a few yards down on the opposite side of the way.

These latter were the "reserves" destined to try their skill should their colleagues miss. Neither of the two firing parties were to show themselves until the near approach of their proposed victim was signalled from the street below. The signal in question was to be the waving of a pocket handkerchief by James Carey, the same man who was afterward killed by O'Donnell.

The plot was excellently planned from the point of view of the participants therein. In fact, so far as human foresight could provide against eventualities the chief secretary seemed as good as dead. Yet it all came to naught and for so simple a reason that the plotters themselves, meeting together afterward at their secret rendezvous in North King street, were fain to laugh at their own discomfiture.

The morning was cold and gusty. Mr. Forster was somewhat late, and Carey, chilled with waiting about, began to sneeze. Instinctively he drew out his handkerchief, the handkerchief that was to be the fatal signal, and in an instant the blustering north wind had flicked it from his numbened fingers and sent it sailing down the street as a twenty mile an hour gale.

At that very instant the chief secretary's carriage turned the corner and came swiftly toward him. Carey ran to the spot which had been previously agreed upon and tried to make his fellow conspirators understand that their victim was in sight by signaling with his arm and pointing.

The result, however, though exactly what might have been foreseen, hardly came up to his expectations. The four men at the windows were waiting for a man with a handkerchief. Instead, they saw one without any such signaling apparatus, evidently excited and pointing wildly up the street. Instantly they conjured up visions of traitors in their ranks and of detectives on their tracks and, dropping their weapons, inconspicuously melted away.

On the evening of Oct. 11, 1878, a policeman on duty near the Coliseum Music hall, Liverpool, noticed an unusual commotion at the entrance. Disheveled boys and girls, their clothing in many instances torn from their backs and some of them covered with blood, were pouring from the gallery exits, while from within the building came the sound of shrieking and loud cries for help. Realizing something of what was happening, the constable seized an ax and smashed in two of the "extra" doors.

His prompt action undoubtedly saved scores if not hundreds of lives, for by this time the auditorium had become a veritable pandemonium, wherein several thousand people, mad with terror, were fighting and struggling with one another for precedence.

Thirty-seven of the number lost their lives and more than twice that number were maimed for life. And the cause of the panic was a fit of sneezing into which a number of girls in the front row of the gallery were thrown owing to some mischievous person tossing some snuff into the air.

A number of these behind, hearing and seeing a commotion in front, rose to their feet. Others joined them. Shouts and cries added to the confusion. An alarm was raised that the place was on fire, and a simultaneous rush of hundreds of frightened people for the narrow exit doors was followed by the results chronicled.

He—I told her I should kiss her ever time she giggled.

She—What was the result?

Why, she giggled the whole evening.

HAVE WOMEN INTUITION?

One Writer Says They Have Never Shown It in Literature.

Literature is the final expression of human thought. If women can lay claim to a special faculty of intuition, why do they not manifest it in their writings? Intuition, if it means anything, means the faculty that gets down to the germ of actions and characteristics and focuses external traits into a central verity recognizable to the general public. Now, there are more female writers than male. No woman poet has ever written an inevitable line, a line that flashes spontaneously out of the unknown and casts an illuminating light upon the abyss. Woman has added practically nothing to our stock of familiar quotations. Take down your Bartlett or your anthology, and you may be surprised to find that from Mrs. Browning to Mrs. Meynell women have never coined a phrase which has passed into the common currency of speech. Mrs. Browning has indeed written fine lines, but nothing of hers can be said to have become a household word.

Nor has any woman novelist created any character that is generally recognized as typical. George Eliot has come closer with her Tito Melema and Mrs. Poyser. You would appeal only to the educated few if you described a person as a Tito or a Poyser. But call a man a Don Quixote, a Micawber, a Dogberry, a Falstaff, a Colonel Newcome, a Bilfil, a Parson Adams or Bob Acres, call a woman a Mrs. Malaprop, a Becky Sharp, a Beatrice, a Diana Vernon, a Meg Merrilies, and even the illiterate will mentally classify the individual as you wish him or her to be classified.

"Ah, but," you say, "in real life women are the true intuitives. They size up a man or a woman at a glance. The trigger of their guess is forgotten to their instincts."

I can only testify to my own experience. I have not found that women's snap judgments of character are imbued with any special verity. They form likes or dislikes quicker than man does because they are quicker on the trigger of conjecture. They can only be one of two things, right or wrong. If time proves that they are right, as they must be in 50 per cent of cases, the right guess is remembered and treasured up by the slower minded man as an extraordinary instance of intuition. The wrong guess is forgotten.—William S. Walsh in Era.

To Save Tempers and Collars.

"You button your collar the wrong way," said the salesman as he was selling neckwear to a customer.

"How is that?"

"You have buttoned the right side last. Now, when you go to take it off you will have to tug at the end of the collar and crumple it, because you can't get a proper hold of it, but if you had the left end on top you could get it off easily, then loosen the collar behind, and the right end could be easily detached. That's why men have so much trouble taking off well laundered collars. Remember to fasten the right side first and then the left, and you will save your collars and your temper."

"I never supposed there was a right and a wrong way of putting on collars."

"Try both ways and you will see."

Astronomical Solutions.

Though 300 years have elapsed since the death of Tycho Brahe, it appears that we are in many lines still groping for the ultimate goal as when he began the great work of exploring the skies before the days of Kepler, when all Europe was slumbering in intellectual darkness. The science of the stars indeed has been refined and perfected in an unparalleled degree and infinitely extended in all directions, but with the bounds of darkness pushed back step by step the goal is not and never will be in sight. An infinity of objects and causes and an endless variety of phenomena are yet to be explored, and in the work of the mind is rather a process of development to the perfect understanding of the universe than the solution of a simple mathematical problem.

She Got a Thrifty Husband.

Mrs. Smith—I reckon our Jane has got a first rate husband.

Mrs. Brown—Well, you ought to be thankful.

Mrs. Smith—I hope I am, Gusty. Of course he isn't much to look at, and he ain't over smart, but there's one thing, and that is he's saving. Why, the very first day after the marriage he told Jane she'd better let him take the engagement ring back and get the money returned. He said there was no longer any use for her to wear it now that she was married.

Out of Place.

Grocer—What have you been doing in the cellar so long?

Grocer's Apprentice—I have been cleaning out the strup measure. It was so choked up that it didn't hold more'n half a quart.

Grocer—Oh, that's what you've been doing? Well, you take your hat and go home and tell your father to put you into the track distributing business. You ain't fitted for the grocery trade.

The Appropriate Vehicle.

"She seems to be a stickler for doing everything appropriately."

"I should say so. She always does her marketing in a basket phaeton."

Gossip is unfair. It is more persistent about a man under suspicion than it is about a man well known to be tough.—Aitchison Globe.

The attention paid to unseasonable things causes us to overlook many that are great.

The popular view of the relation of the blood to human character and conduct is marked in many a familiar expression. We speak of there being "bad blood" between people at enmity, of "blue blood" as indicating ancestry, of "black blood" as describing a treacherous nature, and in many another phrase mark our belief that in the mental, moral and physical man, "the blood is the life."
