POETRY.

The Highway Cow.

The hue of her hide was dusky brown,

Her body was lean and her neck was slim;

One horn was turned up and the other turned down.

She was keen of vision and long of limb;

With a Roman nose and a short stump tail,

And ribs like the hoops of a homemade pal.

Many a mark did her body bear,

She had been a target for all things

known;

On many a scar the dusky hair

Would grow no more where it once had grown;

Many a passionate, parting shot

Had left upon her a lasting spot.

Many and many a well aimed stone,

Many a brickbat of goodly size,

And many a cudgel swiftly thrown

Had brought the tears to her loving eyes,

Or had bounded off from her bony back

With a noise like the sound of a rifle crack.

Many a day had she passed in the pound

For helping herself to her neighbor's

corn;

Many a cowardly car and bound

Had been transfixed on her crumpled

horn;

Many a teapot and old tin pail

Had the farmer boyed to her time-

worn trail

Old Deacon Gray was a pious man,

Though sometimes tempted to be pro-

phane,

When many a weary mile he ran

To drive her out of his growing grain.

Sharp were the pranks she used to play

To get her fill and to get away.

She knew when the deacon went to town

She wisely watched when he passed by;

He never passed her without a frown,

And an evil gleam in each angry eye,

And would crack his whip in a surly way

And drive along in his "one-horse shay."

Then at his homestead she loved to call,

Lifting his bars with crumpled horn:

Nimble scaling his garden wall,

Helping herself to his standing corn;

Eating his cabbage one by one,

Hurrying home when her work was done.

His human passions were quick to rise,

And striding forth with a savage cry,

With fury blazing from both his eyes,

As lightnings flash in a summer sky,

Reider and reider his face would grow,

And after the creature he would go.

Over the garden round and round,

Breaking his pear and apple trees;

Trampling his melons into the ground,

Overturning his hives of bees,

Leaving him angry and badly stung,

Winning the old cow's neck was wrung.

The mosses grow on the garden wall,

The years went by with their work and play,

The boys of the village grew strong and tall,

And the gray-haired farmers passed away

One by one, as the red leaves fall:

But the highway cow outlived them all.

From "The Humbler Poet."

were tears in everybody's eyes and dark, mysterious John Ruth actually sobbed. After this, this lonely man came to know and be better known throughout the town.

One night when the rain beat against the window panes and the wind brought fearful tales of shipwreck and drowning men, John Ruth sitting in his parlor, heard a knock at his door.

When he opened the door a wet, muddy, wild-looking woman staggered into the hall. The hall light was very low, and he could see no more than this, but the fumes of liquor nearly choked him.

"Kin yer give a poor critter a night's lodin'," she asked in a muddle way. He had never seen humanity more degraded, nor God's image more defaced, but his charity was large. He answered:

"Yes, come into the parlor." He placed her on the sofa and went out for a lamp. When he returned he raised the flame that he might see her plainly.

At that instant John Ruth's form bent as if under some great weight the woman uttered a shrill cry of delight, and her laughter, horrible to hear, filled the room.

The woman glared at him with her bloodshot eyes, and grinning said: "At last I've found you, John! At last—at last!"

She rocked to an fro in her drunken glee, like a pleased wild beast. "To think," she went on, "I'd give up findin' ye, and to stumble on ye this way. It's a Providence, John—it's a Providence!"

The woman falls upon the floor and drops asleep.

A month had gone by—a month of torture to John Ruth. He had given his wife money to go away, but he found her the same day lying stupefied with drink in the hall.

He must fly from her as he had often done before. But it was hard, and his heart ached. For years he had isolated himself from the world to escape this woman. He had loved her once, but after marriage he saw that he had but dreamed.

He sometimes feared that he would kill her. Wherever he fled, with strange cunning she had tracked him. There was no shaking her off; nothing left but flight. But here he had new friends. The whole village knew his story, for the woman in her cups was loose of tongue, and told the children who she was.

It was a stormy night, just such a one as that on which she had knocked at the door. The tempest without seemed in its fury no wilder than the tempest within his soul. Hamilton, though but a country village, had become his world; the rest of the world but a desert.

There was a knock at the door. "It is not my wife," he thought. "She would have fallen against it."

He stepped into the hall. His own suffering did not destroy nor for a moment put aside his charity.

He opened the door. No beggar stood there, but Squire Brady and the parson, bearing the form of John's wife. Here's was not the face of one intoxicated, for the rays of the hall light shining on it showed it to be like the face of the dead!

The Squire whispered, as men do when death seems near, that they had found her thus, white and insensible, on the roadside, the storm beating upon the uplifted face.

They bore her up stairs and laid her upon a bed. There was something in the face that reminded John Ruth of the old love. It was as though death, before taking the woman to his dark abode, had washed from her the stains of the years.

She did not become sensible nor open her eyes till the doctor had come. She heard his words: "The end is very near." Then, as her eyes opened, she murmured: "My husband will come to me?"

John Ruth took her chilling hand, and leaning over her, whispered: "I am here, Helen."

"God bless you, John, for answering the cry of my poor heart. You heard what the doctor said just now. It is a dying woman who asks the forgiveness she does not deserve.

He does not answer her in words, but in token of pardon kissed her lips. The white lips smile, the blue eyes shine with its innocent light of childhood. God's minister trembling says: "The thief upon the cross saw God."

John Ruth feels a slight pressure of her hand. The woman has fallen asleep.

Death has made her face like the face of a child.

Throat and Lung Troubles.

Boston is often abused without cause, as being the natural home of more cases of throat and lung troubles than any other part of the universe. One proof that this is not true of Boston is more than many other portions of this country, is the fact that during the past winter when the epidemic la grippe, swept over the whole country Boston fared no worse than many other towns and the death rate from the after effects of the grippe was no greater in that city than elsewhere.

That disease was an epidemic of bronchitis, influenza or catarrhal cold, and as every one knows tended to seriously affect every weak part of the patient's system and augment any natural weakness or disease. Reports from all parts of our country show that the number of persons who have been left with a sort of chronic catarrh, laryngitis, catarrhal sore throat and bronchial affections likely to cause serious throat and lung troubles if not checked, is in proportion to the population about the same the country over.

All of these troubles are a more or less serious inflammation of the mucous lining of the nose, throat and bronchial tubes liable to cause death in one place as much as another, from croup, ulcerated sore-throat, pneumonia, bronchitis and Consumption; and which ought not to be neglected but treated by means which will allay the inflammation causing the trouble in each case.

One of the most effectual remedies for any form of inflammation is an anodyne treatment. The universal verdict is that Johnson's Anodyne Liniment has the past winter as in the last half century relieved and cured more such troubles than any one single medicine. It has been generally used by young and old, rich and poor, physicians and laymen. The wrapper around each bottle contains a vast amount of information about its use, or I. S. Johnson & Co., Boston, Mass., will send a forty-eight page pamphlet free to any address sent them on a postal card.

A Mother's Love.

Talmage says a mother kept burning a candle in the window every night for ten years, and one night, very late, a poor wail of the street entered. The aged woman said to her, "Sit down by the fire," and the stranger said, "Why do you keep that light in the window?"

The aged widow said: "This is to light my wayward daughter when she returns. Since she went away, ten years ago, my hair has turned white. Folks blame me for worrying about her, but you see I am her mother, and sometimes, half a dozen times a night, I open the door and look out into the darkness and cry, 'Lizzie! Lizzie!'"

But I must not tell you any more about my trouble, for I guess from the way that you cry, you have trouble enough of your own. Why, how cold and sick you seem! Oh, my! can it be? Yes, you are Lizzie, my own lost child! Thank God that you are at home again! And what a time of rejoicing there was in that house that night! And Christ again stooped down, and in the ashes of that hearth, now lighted up, not more by the great blazing logs than by the joy of a reunited household, wrote the same liberating words that he had written over eighteen hundred years ago in the dust of the Jerusalem temple. Forgiveness!

How to Reduce a Church Debt.

In New York a life insurance company has lent $120,000 to a church and the church has had the lives of a number of its members insured in favor of itself. The life insurance company have agreed, every time one of the members who is thus insured dies, to reduce the debt of the church by the amount of his policy. Every time the church has a funeral of one of these it lops off a slice of debt; in other words members and debt disappear together.

This in thought should enable the pastor to read burial services with almost cheerful resignation and to point out more clearly the beneficence of an all-wise providence in thus providing a gold or silver lining even to the dark cloud of death.

THAT HACKING COUGH can be so quickly cured by Shiloh's Cure. We guarantee it. Sold by Geo. V. Rand.

TEMPERANCE.

Edited by the Members of Wolfville Division

RUM AND GRAY HAIRS.

Perhaps some of the readers of this column, will think the subject a peculiar one. But, notwithstanding the peculiarity of the subject, they must admit that rum and gray hairs are often found together.

Gray hairs suggest age. We speak of gray hairs with reverence for them. Although we do not cherish the idea of becoming old ourselves, we respect those who are old, and love the aged people. We feel ourselves inferior to those who are "blossoming for the tomb," we look up to them as persons far above us, who have experienced many trials, and have been burdened with many sorrows, and who now in the winter of their years, are near that rest all Christians are waiting for.

Rum suggest misery, degradation and ruin. All Christian people should loathe the very name of it.

Rum brings gray hairs to shame. When the two are brought together a mournful picture presents itself before us. Many of us have seen the sad spectacle. Gray hairs in the gutter. Aged men staggering in our streets. Men with but a step between them and eternity; on the verge of the tomb, sacrificing their only hope of Heaven, for rum. They are drunkards, and "no drunkard shall enter the kingdom of Heaven." Think of it! temperance people, some lost souls that you might have saved.

Indeed it is sad to see a man living a drunkard's life, but it is sadder to see him dying a drunkard's death. Friends, who while the man lived told him not of his danger, now gather round his death-bed and have heard the words "too late" from the dying man's lips, and are all unconscious that they are in a way responsible for that man's eternal welfare.

You who laugh at temperance work, who call temperance workers fanatics, who you dulle "God's Temple," remember that your own hairs will be come gray, and your head may be brought to shame if you continue to be a slave, and to grovel in submission to your own greedy passions.

How terrible must be the experience of the dying man whose soul is destroyed, whose body is corrupted, and whose very breath is pregnant with the odor of rum.

A Russian physician asserts that strychnine is an infallible remedy for drunkenness, administered by subcutaneous injections. The effect of the strychnine is to change the craving for drink into positive aversion and this change is effected in a day. One grain of strychnine is dissolved in 200 drops of water and 5 drops of the solution injected every 24 hours. After treatment for eight or ten days the patient may be discharged.

The star of Bethlehem of the temperance reform stands over the school-house. If we save the children to-day, we have saved the nation to-morrow.—Mary H. Hunt.

THE HOUSEHOLD.

WASTEFUL ECONOMY IN THE KITCHEN.

"Many a young wife," said a motherly woman the other day, "would find the wheels of her household moving much more smoothly if she would spend a little less money on the furnishings of her drawing-room and devote it, instead, to supplying her kitchen with labor-saving appliances and plenty of utensils. Economy in kitchen utensils may easily be pushed too far, and there is one place where a woman may be more readily excused than another for extravagance it is just there.

"To have to stop in the middle of making a desert in order to clean a saucepan or a kettle in which the soup had been prepared, because you have not another, is folly when soup kettles can be had for twenty-five cents each, or to let a good knife remain dull because you think you cannot afford to spend ten cents to have it sharpened, is a real waste of strength out of all proportion to the saving. To have nothing by which you can measure your ingredients accurately, because it costs more to buy a set of weights or a graduated glass measure than to trust to guess-work and an old tea cup, has spoiled many a good dish that cost just as much and has brought humiliation on many a good cook. To scrape your porridge pot with a spoon because you will not buy a patent pot-scraper for twelve cents which wears out ten spoons to one pot-scraper, and the hired girl invariably selects your best spoon for that purpose. Sifting the coal ashes is such a dirty business it is usually performed and the servant kicks against it so vigorously that the most economical housekeeper soon abandons it in despair. A patent ash-sifter that allows no dust to escape and preserves all the half-burned coal, will pay for itself in one winter and last five. A cheap refrigerator can be had for one-third the cost of a good one of the same size, but if you buy it your ice bill will be twice as large.

"There is hardly anything in the kitchen of which there are not two varieties, the cheap and the dear, and the result of the use of either is generally its exact opposite in actual cash. "But in comfort to one's self and to one's husband and children, a saving of time, temper, brain-worry and back ache, they repay their own cost many times over every week."

Political Warfare.

The people are evidently become disgusted with the methods of conducting elections as carried on in other years. All around we hear the cry against dishonest canvasses and bitter personal encounters.

Our Inshore Fisheries.

The idea of stocking the lakes of this and adjoining counties with young fish has within the past few years received considerable attention.

Halifax City Notes.

The great event of the moment is the opening of the new City Hall, which has just been occupied by the civic officials.

Beef is rapidly getting among the luxuries, our American supply being heavily taxed the dealers find themselves confronted with a scarcity, and have raised prices accordingly.

A great improvement has lately been made in our system of street lighting and it was much needed.

Two warships are now in port, others of the North American squadron will follow.

Activity in deal shipments continues. Every berth at the Richmond wharf is engaged for some time ahead.

The People's Ferry, to be run by the town of Dartmouth is assuming a definite reality. A suitable steamer to replace the one temporarily secured, has been purchased in New York for $15,000 and will go on the route at once.

Halifax has once more survived the throes and dissipation of "moving-day," May 1st. There are those who seem to look forward to this red letter day with unusual delightful anticipations, and to them it would be martyrdom to live more than 12 months in any house.

Notes from Ottawa.

(By Our Regular Correspondent.) OTTAWA, May 7th.—The signs of the closing of Parliament are fast approaching. The M. P.s are anxious to get home and business is being rushed.

The British Columbia members have already left for home, evidently satisfied that they have done all they can do for their Province this session.

The death of William Howe, of the Dept. of the Interior, caused considerable sympathy in civil service circles in the capital. He was a son of Hon. Joseph Howe, who was in 1873 Lieut.-Governor of Nova Scotia.

A large party of immigrants, numbering nearly 3000, have passed through the city the last few days. 900 of these came by the Sardinian.

Mr Eisenhauer brought up two complaints of the mill owners on the La Have River, N. S., who were prohibited from emptying sawdust in the river, as it spoiled the fisheries.

Inspector J. R. Kinney gives a detailed report of the fisheries, particularly referring to King's county. It shows a large deficit as there were 44 vessels less engaged last year than in the previous year.

This large deficit falling largely to the aggregate take of codfish, which item alone shows a decrease of 1,217,000, nearly one-half of which is the year's decrease in the take of Lunenburg county.

Three hours added to time of leaving Hantsport or Maitland will give time of leaving Parraboro for St. John. Boats run on Halifax time.

The communion of the Lord Supper was celebrated. The sermon was preached by Rev. Mr Dawson, of Canada. The church was well filled.—Rev. Hants County Matters.

Mr EDWARDS.—The coming election campaign was practically commenced or opened in this county by the appearance of candidate T. B. Smith at a public meeting very generally attended this evening in the hall of this place. Mr Smith gave a satisfactory explanation of his political course and his present candidature. His friends have now successfully initiated him and send him out from this town, the north-east corner of the county, for the favorable ballots of the electors, in the full confidence that he will be advanced to a representative seat. His colleague, Adams McDougall, was present and is also enthusiastically sent out upon the suffrages of the people. SHIBOLITH.

The Dominion Illustrated for May 3d comprises an even richer than usual variety of good things relating to nature and life in Canada. The portrait gallery includes fine likenesses of the late Mr Charles Gibb, the great pomologist; of the late Prof. Lareau, M. P. P.; the distinguished writer on literature and constitutional history; of Mr J. Lorn McDougall, Auditor-General; of the Hon. Judge Landry and of Albert Ebenbeck, the "Hero of Hespeler." Some samlings of Montreal's Conservatories, Raising the steamer Armstrong at Brockville, the Wreckage of Clark's Wharf, Sarnia, and some capital glimpses of Mounted Police and of Indian life in the North-West, make up an extremely attractive number. The reading matter is of corresponding interest, comprising another of J. Castell Hopkin's articles on the Britanic Empire, the conclusion of May Austin's story, "The World, the Flesh and the Devil," a poem by Bliss Carman, etc. Address: Dominion Illustrated, 73 St James street, Montreal.

PENMANSHIP.—Quite a number met in the schoolhouse last Tuesday evening to form a class in penmanship under the tutorage of Prof. Snell, of Snell's Business College, Windsor. All present were greatly pleased with the system and the teaching. Arrangements are in progress so that the class may be open to all who wish to attend, free of expense. A subscription list is being circulated among our citizens by members of the class and if a sufficient sum can be raised to warrant the Professor in proceeding in this way he will do so. If not he will teach a class for a stipulated sum to be paid by each member. Both sexes are invited to attend the class. It is to be hoped that our people will lend their support, as they will be well paid by doing so.

I think a boy of fourteen who makes such letters fast is well started in one of the business accomplishments—what do you think? These letters are photographed from the actual writing of Alfred Shaw of this city; they were written as fast as anybody ought to or needs to write. "Fred" has been in my Business College here but a short time, and that in the evening; and when he began, he showed no signs of writing either so well or fast; he was much as boys of his age are apt to be with the pen, and he has been learning many other useful things besides writing. A rich man compelled to pawn his watch for a square meal and a night's lodging. That, writes the New York correspondent of the St. Louis Globe-Democrat...

And the young man was an absolute stranger in New York!

"Your people in the West Indies took my good money for that draft and I want it back again. Am I to infer that this is a bankrupt institution?"

He got no satisfaction, lost his train and had to pawn his watch for a meal and a bed.

A fellow-passenger identified him the next day. I was disgusted to find that on that day with a very liberal American who has had much banking and mercantile experience here and abroad.

"Americans," said he, "are the worst people in the world. They don't know the first thing about banking. Even to the smallest details foreigners can give you points. The methods pursued in the mere pawning and receiving of money in New York suggest the idea that every man who enters a bank is a possible thief."

"This," he continued, "judging from the numerous defractions, might apply to the officers of the bank, but it is most unjust to the public. A person who goes into a store where he is surrounded on all sides by valuable goods is not supposed to have gotten beyond his village days."

Nothing looks more ridiculous to a London mercantile man than to see a long string of persons with books in their hands waiting to open a deposit through a cubby hole with a solitary receiving teller—and it is the same with the payment of money. A bank with a large business ought to have a counter for receiving and as many paying tellers at large, wide, open counters.

Why all these cages and railings and bars and peepholes through which you are occasionally permitted to catch a glimpse of the teller's nose who suddenly and unwillingly hands you your money? They don't have these things in England and the reason is that there are none. Here, despite all these precautions, they are frequent, and a large proportion are committed by those inside of the railing and not by those outside.

"I don't like to be looked upon when I enter a New York bank a stranger as if I had a natural predilection for perjury and forgery, for the teller is not satisfied if you tell him your right name and even sign it—you must be identified. In England checks are usually made payable to bearer."

"I shall cross it," asks the drawer, who means that by drawing two lines across the check and inserting the words "Bank and Co." between the two lines, the money can be collected through a bank or banking firm. Otherwise any bearer can get the cash at the bank without any questions being asked.

"How will you like to have your money taken from you by my check payable to bearer for $5,000—a bank and so will get the money without any trouble. In a New York bank such an amount would create the utmost consternation. The bank's detectives in New York would be immediately rung up to aid the officers of the bank, from present down to junior, in watching the rash intruder. Have a check made payable to order, but a stranger may endorse it in the presence of the teller and he'll never get the money without identification."

"No," says the teller, "I don't know what you mean by the way of letters or cards the holder of the check may have about his person. Of course if a paying teller has a check ready to hand, and a check or draft has been stolen or found he would be justified in refusing payment and holding the party who presented it; but in ninety-nine cases out of a hundred there are no grounds for suspicion. For officers are always grumbling at our stupid rules, and if we were known to refuse payment on a check drawn on a bank in New York that would pay drafts to people without identification such a concern would soon have the cream of the 'traveler's' draft business."

"This attack on the system pursued here, which is certainly unworthy of a great metropolis, recalls an experience I had in London. A friend of mine some years ago gave me a check for $1,200, payable to me or bearer, on the Sixth National Bank of New York. I presented it. 'Don't know what you mean, teller. 'Neither have I the pleasure of your acquaintance,' was the answer, 'but my name is on the check, and I am also the bearer.' 'Can't help it; too large an amount to give to a stranger, and you must be identified.' 'My friends are out of town and I have no one to sign for me in Washington. I can't very well send for him.' 'Well, I won't give you the money.' 'Then write your reasons on the check.' 'No, I won't do that,' said I. 'I am a newspaper man. I shall protest this afternoon and proclaim in Wall street this afternoon that the Sixth National Bank refuses to honor the checks drawn on it.' I got the money."

THE WILD CARIBOU.

How This Noble Animal Amuses Himself and His Mate.

It is as fond of an expedition as a school-boy, and full as ready for a frolic, says Harper's Magazine.

After the ice has formed in November, but it soon follows first by snows, and then by thaws or rain. The winter converts the snow into slush, resting on the firm ice beneath. Now, any sensible creature would keep away from such a mess. But not so the caribou, for to it this makes the very gala time of the year. The herd go out upon the ice in single file, then scatter, and each one falls to pawing up the slush with his forefeet. After they have tired of this performance, they fall upon their knees, and seem to lap the ice with their tongues.

Why they do this is, as far as the writer has been able to learn, a mystery. It certainly is not from thirst, since they have crossed a dozen open brooks in their morning rambles. Perhaps to use one of those long expressions so happily indefinite in leaving unbridled liberty of detail to the imagination of the hearer, "they do it for grandeur." This is the most simple, and indeed at times it seems the only, explanation of many of the vagaries of "this most singular creature. After awhile one or two suspend operations, seem to think things over generally, then go gravely over to another, then, having selected one which is of ice of extra flavor, and proceed to dig it with the utmost vigor. The assaulted party rises to its feet, and meekly resigns its place to the victor, who immediately drops upon its knees and continues the operations of its predecessor, while the ousted either passes along the compliment by routing out another, or proceeds to dig a new spot for itself. Then perhaps it will lie down for awhile, and, though one would think the bed about as congenial as the inside of an ice-cream freezer, it does not end in apparently the acme of bovine comfort. Next, one will slowly rise to its feet, round up its back, and stretch itself, survey its comrades to select the one which seems most comfortable, and then, actuated
