SHOCKING OCCURRENCE IN A DUBLIN MUSIC HALL.

Lady Lion Tamer Bitten by a Lion.

LAST evening a painful sensation was caused by an alarming occurrence in Mr. Dan Lowrey's Star Music Hall, Dublin, when Mademoiselle Senide, the lady lion tamer, was bitten by one of her animals, and sustained very severe injuries in the face and neck. Mademoiselle Senide, who for some weeks past has been carrying on an engagement in Mr. Lowrey's Music Hall in exhibiting her troupe of wild animals, had taken her benefit last evening. One of the feats she was in the habit of undertaking was one common enough among daring performers of her class - namely placing her head within the mouth of one of her lions, and retaining it there for some time. She had hitherto accomplished the feat without accident and got through it successfully during her performance last night. However, when the entertainment was over, and the audience gone, a photographer from Mr. Robinson's was in attendance to take views of the daring artiste in her most thrilling performances. He took two photographs of Mademoiselle Senide along with her lions, and the third view was to consist of the lady lion-tamer in a cage with her head in the lion's mouth. It required a considerable time to arrange the preliminaries, and the lion, it appears, grew impatient under the delay. Meanwhile Mademoiselle Senide was holding her head in the animal's mouth in the manner which she was in the habit of appearing before the audience. When the photographer turned on the magnesium light used in the process the flash startled the animal, and he closed his mouth suddenly on the unfortunate artiste's head. For some seconds his massive jaws remained closed on her neck, till her manager, Mr. Carlbeckmann, a German, rushed into the cage and beat off the lion. The injured woman fainted away, and, with her neck streaming with blood, was taken from the cage. A messenger was sent for medical aid, and an assistant of Dr. Cahill, of Dame Street, was immediately in attendance. It was found that one of the immense tusks of the brute had been buried in his tamer's neck, and that her breast was severely injured by a scratch from the claws of the lion, which tore away the flesh. Mademoiselle Senide was placed in a cab, and at once conveyed to her residence, 49 Great Brunswick Street. Five stitches had to be placed in her cheeks. The operation was extremely painful, and the victim of the accident is much prostrated by the shock to her nerves which the sudden bite of the lion caused. However, she is not regarded as being in any serious danger. The lion appeared impatient under the operation of being photographed, but still his action is not regarded as being a hostile attack on his keeper. But for the presence of mind displayed by Mr. Beckmann in rushing to the assistance of Madlle. Senide the result might have been fatal. The lion is stated to have been very tame, and to have shown no insubordination previous to last night. The effect of the occurrence will be to stop the performance of Madlle Senide in Dublin.

The situation in Sikkim continues to be strained. The Rajah, it is true, has returned from Tibet, but he is residing at some distance from his capital of Tamlong, and is said to be surrounded by Tibetans, whose intrigues cause much jealousy among his own subjects. Meanwhile, the Tibetan force which entered Sikkim more than a year ago continues to occupy the fort which they built at Lingtu, on the road from Darjeeling to the Jelapa Pass. As this aggression on and interference with a feudatory State cannot be tolerated, representations have been sent to the Chinese Government, urging it to direct the Tibetans to withdraw from Sikkim and abstain from meddling with its affairs.

BILL NYE AND THE BARBER.

He Goes to Have His One Hair Trimmed and Encounters Misfortune.

New York World.

TO-DAY I got shaved at a barber-shop, where I begged the operator to kill me and put me out of my misery.

I have been accustomed to gentle care and thoughtfulness at home and my barber handles me with the utmost tenderness. I was, therefore, poorly prepared to meet the man who this morning filled my soul with woe.

I know that I have not deserved this, for while others have berated the poor barber and swore about his bad breath and never-ending clatter and his general heartlessness, I have never said anything that was not filled with child-like trust and hearty good-will toward him.

I have called the attention of the public to the fact that sometimes customers had bad breath and were restless and mean while being operated on, and then when they are all fixed up nicely they put their hats on and light a cigar and hold up their fingers to the weary barber and tell him that they will see him more subsequently.

Now, however, I feel differently. This barber no doubt had never heard of me. He thought I was an ordinary plug, who didn't know anything about luxury.

I shall mark a copy of this paper and send it to him. Then while he is reading it I will step up behind him with a pick-handle and kill him. I want him to be reading this when I kill him, because it will assist the Coroner in arriving at the immediate cause of his death.

The first whiff I took of this man's breath I knew he was rum's maniac.

He had the Jim Jams in an advance stage. Now, I don't object to being shaved by a barber who is socially drunk, but when the mad glitter of the mania is in his eye, and I can see that he is debating the question of whether he will cut my head off and let it drop over the back of the chair or choke me to death with a lather-brush, it makes me nervous and fidgety. He honed his razor on his breath, in fact.

This man made up his mind three times that he would kill me, and some one came in just in time to save me.

His chair was near a window, and there was a hole in the blind, so that when he was shaving the off side of my face he would turn my head over in such a position that I could look up into the middle of the sun. My attention had never before been called to the appearance of the sun as it looks to the naked eye, and I was a good deal surprised.

The more I looked into the very center of the great orb of day the more I was filled with wonder at the might and power that could create it. I began to pine for death immediately, so that I could be far away among the heavenly bodies, and in a land where no barber with the delirium triangles can ever enter.

This barber held my head down so that the sun could shine into my darkened understanding, until I felt that my brain had melted and was floating around and swishing about in my skull like warm butter.

His hand was very unsteady, too. I lost faith in him on the start, when he cut off a mole under my chin and threw it in the cuspidore. I did not care especially for the mole, and did not need it much, but at the same time I had not decided to take it off till the weather got warmer. In fact, I had worn it so long that I had become attached to it. It had also become attached to me. That is why I could not restrain my tears when the barber cut it off, and then stepped back to the other end of the room to see how I looked without it.

BILL NYE AT LARGE.

STORMS AND STEEL RAILS.

How Rain Appears to Follow the Laying of Railroad Tracks.

THE SAFETY VALVE.

A SINGULAR theory has been promulgated in Mexico concerning an alleged relation between the steel rails of railroads and the prevalence of storms. The northern section of the Mexican Central road has been seriously damaged by washouts, and people who observed the phenomena express the opinion that the water-spouts which burst on the track were attracted by the rails and the telegraph wires. An electric current, they say, runs along the track, which makes a convenient avenue for storms. This would appear to be a somewhat fanciful conjecture, but the engineers employed in building the Guadalajara branch of the Mexican Central Railroad offer testimony which gives it at least an air of plausibility. They state that as fast as the construction advances rain follows, and they believe it is due to the large quantity of steel rails on flat cars which are carried forward as fast as the work permits. The country, according to their report, is dry in advance of the construction trains, and also behind them for many miles, but in a circle of a few miles in diameter, having its centre at the point where the steel rails are, the rain comes down in torrents.

It appears that enough importance is attached to these theories to induce scientific men to make them a subject of study. We do not, however, anticipate any immediate practical results of great value. With all the skill and knowledge which the Government can bring to bear, it has not yet succeeded even in predicting storms with such certainty as would be desirable, and when it comes to producing or preventing them we shall probably have to wait some time before the matter assumes the character of an exact science.

ADELAIDE CAMERON'S "SHADOW LOVE."

By the Author of Dora Thorne.

CHAPTER XLIII.

Should she tell them she was there for no other purpose than to read the will? Should she clear herself and tell them how Lord Rylestone's wife had stopped to intrigue and deceit to recover Lord Rylestone's gold? Should she tell them to fetch Miss Cameron, and then, when the girl who preferred honor even to love, stood before her, should she tell who she was, what she had done, and why she had done it?

She shrunk back with a shuddering cry; she could not look into Miss Cameron's fair pure face and tell her sorrow; she thought to herself that even if she did she would not believe her. She would send to Lord Rylestone and ask him if the woman whom she believed to be a thief was indeed as she proclaimed herself to be, his wife.

No; she had injured Allan enough—she had done him harm enough—she had deprived him of a noble fortune and a high-born lovely wife. She would not disgrace him. They might suspect her of theft, if they would, they might accuse her, and do as they would with her, but she would never clear herself by using his name. Perhaps she might be thrown into prison and there die. Let it be so: death—her death—would clear a way for him to fortune. Like a flash of light, the evil of what she had done came to her. She had thought of heroism—she knew it was dishonor.

'Let me reap as I have sown—let me suffer for my sins,' she said, and, still crouching before those witnesses, she vowed to herself that she would not clear herself by so much as one word. It was the very insanity of despair—the very madness of self-abnegation.

'Thank Heaven she is found out!' said Mrs. Grame. 'I knew from the first that she was no good, and I hated to see my young lady imposed on, sir,' she continued, turning to Mr. Beale. 'I have had it on my mind some time to tell you. This woman came here in disguise months ago—came to peer about the place and lay her plans. I knew her again when I saw her with Miss Cameron. Ask her if she can deny that she came here under the false pretense of wishing to see the place.'

'Do you deny this?' asked Mr. Beale. He never forgot the awful pallor of the face raised to his.

'I do not deny it,' she replied. 'Because she cannot,' said Mrs. Grame. 'I tell you, sir, she came here for a bad purpose; she knows it—she does not offer to deny it. The night before last she tried to get my lady's keys, but I baffled her—last night for a time she baffled me. I am quite sure that she came here to steal my lady's jewels—see, she has them.'

Margarita raised her head with a sudden passion that almost startled them. Should they call her thief? A hot flush crimsoned her face—indignant words of denial sprang to her lips, and then she sunk back with a low cry. Let them say what they would, she would not disgrace Allan by saying that she was his wife.

'I did not come here to steal,' she said, slowly. 'I do not deny that I came into the house for a purpose of my own. It was not to steal. I am not a thief.'

'If you had no wish to steal,' asked Mr. Beale, 'why have you obtained possession of Miss Cameron's keys—why have you opened the safe? What are you doing here at this hour of the night with these bank-notes and all this gold about you?'

'I never intended to take them,' she said, wearily. 'That is a lame story. Where a person is caught in the very act of crime such a defense is useless. If you did not intend to take them, why did you open the safe?'

He saw the indignant flush die from her face, and the startled horror return.

'Answer me,' he said. 'If you did not want the jewels, why have you come down like a thief in the night to the safe?'

'I have nothing to say,' she moaned—'I have no answer to give.'

'Look at her,' cried Mrs. Grame—'see how she is dressed, so that no one could see or hear her. I have baffled her. I knew she was after my lady's keys; I knew she would get them, and would watch and wait until the house was all silent. So did I. I watched her. When she crept down here, I crept after her; when she thought she had locked the library door, I looked in, and saw her at the safe. While she emptied it I fetched you, sir. Mercy or pity in her case would be out of place, sir.'

'Have I ever done you any harm?' asked Margarita, raising her despairing face.

'Yes, you have,' was the reply; 'you duped me—you made me the victim of your fraud. In one fashion you made me betray my trust; you coaxed me into taking you round the house of which I had charge. I wish I had been dumb before I said one half to you that I said that day.'

'You are pitiless,' said Margarita.

'Yes, to such as you—you who have stolen into the house, and have deceived my mistress—you, who have won her confidence only to injure her—you, who would steal her money and her jewels if you could. I am pitiless to such as you, who plan and maneuver and deceive.'

'Let me see Miss Cameron,' said Margarita.

'No,' refused Mr. Beale; 'you shall not see her. You have deceived her quite enough—you shall not impose on her again. I take it upon myself to refuse you all access to Miss Cameron. I shall give you in charge for attempting a robbery. Mrs. Grame, we will not have these things touched; we will have a detective here the first thing in the morning, and he shall see for himself.'

She made no effort to stop them as they went out of the room. She asked for no pity, no compassion, no mercy, as they passed out. She fell with her face on the ground, and lay there motionless and still.

Has she fainted? asked Mr. Beale.

'Not wishing to be too hard upon her, I should say, sir, it does not matter whether she has or not, after using my mistress so.'

'But we must have common humanity,' observed Mr. Beale; and he went back to Margarita. 'I—I hope you are not ill?' he said.

She did not raise her face.

'I wish I were dead,' she replied—'I wish I were dead!'

'Come away, sir,' requested Mrs. Grame, 'this woman can act any part; and they went, leaving her to her despair.'

Through the remsing hours of the night she lay crouching there, fighting over and over again the battle in her own mind. Should she own who she was? Should she tell all to Miss Cameron, or should she let them punish her as they would?

'They would not believe me,' she said to herself. 'Let the worst come, I will not hold up my finger to save myself.'

All the jealousy, the bitterness, that had laid dormant in her heart rose into active life now; and with it there came sullen defiance—angry gloom.

'They may say what they will—do as they will—but I will utter no word.'

Meanwhile Mr. Beale and Mrs. Grame discussed what, under all circumstances, it was best to do.

'Don't you go near my lady, sir,' said the housekeeper; 'she is young, and easily imposed upon. She would be for letting this woman go free. It would not be just. She would let her go, and say nothing. She must be punished. Take my advice, sir—lock the door, and send Gregson off early in the morning and give her in charge.'

'She is so young,' observed Mr. Beale, hesitatingly, 'and so beautiful.'

'Ah,' rejoined the housekeeper, 'that is, if she had a plain face she would be punished for her sin; having a pretty one, she goes free. That is a man's idea of justice.'

'Nay,' said Mr. Beale, 'I do not think she ought to be spared. I have no thought of sparing her. It is false mercy to let a crime like hers go unpunished. But I am sorry for her, as I said before. She is young—and beautiful.'

'So is the mistress she would have robbed,' observed Mrs. Grame; 'and I love my mistress best. I should have little pity on any one who would injure her.'

'The housekeeper's advice was taken; the library-door was locked, and early in the cold bleak dawn of the September morning, Mr. Beale sent to Lutdale for a detective.'

CHAPTER XLIII.

It was now quite light when Mr. Beale opened the library-door, and showed the detective into the room. He was a hard-faced man, who had grown callous and indifferent, because for long years he had seen only the worst side of life; but even he, accustomed as he was to sin and misery of all kind, looked with something like compassion on the prostrate figure of the beautiful woman.

ST. JOHN'S, FEBRUARY 21, 1888.

WHEN THE BATTLE BEGINS.

A Lively Debate Anticipated.

The House met at 3.30 p.m. to-day, and the Committee appointed for the purpose reported a draft address in reply to the Speech from the Throne. It was read a first and second time, and referred to a Committee of the Whole, after which the House adjourned.

To-morrow the battle will begin in earnest, and then the Opposition will be heard for the first time this session. Doubtless a lively debate may be anticipated, and tickets for "seats upon the floor" will be in demand. Admission to the upper gallery will be free, as heretofore, and we understand that an inducement to ladies to attend will be held out by reserving for their use a portion of those seats under the gallery, technically called "the floor of the House," in which the representatives of the press are installed when present.

It seems quite probable, then, that the session will be a very interesting one in various ways. Of course the presence of ladies—if they could only be induced to honor our legislative halls by attending some of the sittings—would have a mollifying effect on the tone of the Assembly, and, better still, it would, perhaps, make some of the "Conscript Fathers" a little more particular with respect to their attire as well as their conduct generally. At any rate, they would hardly care to sleep in presence of the ladies, or put in an appearance at all when out of temper or too much under the influence of their favorite beverage.

Since we went to press yesterday letters bearing additional testimony as to the unpopularity of the Government have come into our hands. In all the districts, north and west, the popular feeling against Premier Thorburn and his Executive associates has been greatly intensified since the close of last year's session, and it is safe to say that, if an appeal were made to the country to-morrow, the present governing party would not come back with a corporal's guard.

Recent revelations have caused a feeling of despondency in certain quarters, as the people fear for the future of the colony, already taxed to its utmost capacity. But we must check this feeling as much as possible, and strive to get poor old Terra Nova once more fairly started on the road to prosperity. Let the fact that Sir William Whiteway is at this moment organizing what will prove the strongest and best political party ever formed in Newfoundland inspire us all with hope, and nerve us to grapple with, and effectually strangle, the OFFICIAL CORRUPTION which since 1885 has been sapping the very foundations of the Commonwealth.

We would not go so far as to say that political dishonesty injuriously affects the catch of fish. But we do assert that unclean Government, incompetency, and imprudent legislation exercise a pernicious influence over the foreign markets, and greatly militate against local prosperity, as far as our fishing industry is concerned. The consequences of political corruption are far-reaching and fearfully disastrous; and it is folly for the people of Newfoundland to expect any permanent or appreciable improvement in the outlook until the public affairs of the island are placed in the hands of honest, competent and reliable men.

As in private life, so in politics. Our Senators must learn to be economical if they expect their policy to succeed and the colony to prosper. They should endeavor to learn the sage maxims of our parsimonious ancestors, and attain the salutary arts of curtailing expense; for without economy none can be rich, and with it few can be poor. The mere power of saving what is already in our hands must be of easy acquisition to every mind; and as the example of Lord Bacon may show that the highest intellect cannot safely neglect it, a thousand instances every day prove that the humblest member of our local Legislature may practise it with success. As Johnson forcibly puts it:—"Economy in the Senate is the parent of integrity, of liberty, and of ease; and the beautiful sister of temperance, of cheerfulness, and health; and profuseness is a cruel and crafty demon, that gradually involves her followers in dependence and debts; that is fetters them with 'irons that enter into their souls.'"

Let us take care, then, to support Sir William Whiteway and his party, whose mission it is to restore things to their normal condition by the constitutional means of CLEAN AND ECONOMICAL GOVERNMENT.

The first overland Northern mail, inclusive of the post from the mining settlements of Notre Dame Bay, is expected to arrive here to-morrow.

HOUSE OF ASSEMBLY NOTES.

The "Rupert of Debate" in a New Role.

EASY WAY TO "RAISE THE WIND."

The House met yesterday at 4 o'clock p.m. and, without doing any business, the Speaker, after taking his chair, adjourned the sitting until this evening at the same hour, for the want of a quorum. This was done to oblige the brilliant "Rupert of Debate"—the gentlemanly, scholarly and diplomatic A. F. Goodridge—and a few others on the Government benches, who wanted to close their mail for the Newfoundland. The four Opposition members were at the post of duty, and sat grim and silent, and in anxious expectation for the session's fight. Captain Duff, who presides over the "stormy myrmidons" of the gallery, raised the command of "order" high above the clatter and noise of the heavy-booted democracy, who clambered over the benches of their time-honored resort. Louder and more angry were the tones of the deep-chested hero of the "bloody pans," one of the last and oldest of our one time numerous seal killers, Captain John Hally, who now, in his old age, "keeps watch and ward" over the door leading to the Assembly floor. "Stand back there," he cried; "Do you think it's a seal's fo'castle you're in?" The crowd of men outside was large and the denunciation of Speaker McNeilly, who introduced the ticket system, was at once both fierce and just. It is not at all just that class distinctions should be drawn in the House of Assembly, and that the poor man should have a seat in one part of the House, while his fellow-citizen who may have a little more wealth than him, should have a cushioned and luxurious seat in another part of the House. All men are alike and equal in the eyes of the law; but it required the Thorburn administration and Speaker McNeilly to introduce a system of admission to the House of Assembly in contravention of this long established maxim of the English constitution. Perhaps this inroad on the usages of our parliament may be shortly followed with a breach of the privileges of the House and that, as a means of making up the shortage in our revenue Mr. Speaker McNeilly will issue an ukase charging an admission fee. A government can pass what laws they please regarding parliament or any other institution, and the Thorburn Government, having done so many foolish things in the past, may do this in the near future. Just imagine an exciting debate on to-morrow. Subject—"Prohibition"; McNeilly to speak against it, after which there will be a farce, by Mr. Carty, the member for St. George's, attacking Mr. Morine. Admission 50 cents; children half price. Don't fail to come! Then, instead of the debates, we would have a column or two in the government organ explaining the noble patriotism of the government gladiators who wretched in the "political arena" the night before. If this plan were brought forward at a "party-meeting," and a promise of benefit nights at the close of the session, made to the needy members of the Government, no doubt a majority vote might be secured. But a truce to this jesting. There is no act of Mr. McNeilly's political life, outside of the few attempts that he made from time to time to suppress or curtail the freedom of the press, that has brought him so much into ridicule and public contempt as this last despotic act with reference to tickets for admission to the Assembly. It is no doubt a pleasant pastime for a business man who is desirous of getting admitted to hear the debates on the policy and politics of his country, to go chasing a member of the Assembly around all day for the purpose of securing a ticket. They scarcely have the time to spare. If the object of the Government, in this ticket business, be to pack the House with their own supporters, however unjust it would be, we would be inclined to forgive them, for then there would be a shadow of reason for their insane conduct. This, up to the present, has not been assigned as a reason. Mr. McNeilly will be doing queer things, and the public must draw from some quarter a supply of merriment, and the Speaker has furnished them with all they may require for a time.

Two important real estate transactions have just been concluded. One is the sale of Mr. George Gear's residence, formerly the old Barnes' homestead, Barnes' Road, for the sum of fifteen hundred pounds (£1,500). Sheriff Carter was the purchaser. The successful manager of the negotiation was John T. Gillard, Esq. The other was the sale by auction yesterday morning of the dwelling, once the property of H. M. Gibb, adjoining the above, which was knocked down to Mr. Stephen Knight for one thousand and fifteen pounds (£1,015), Robert Prowse & Sons being the auctioneers.

Widow Rachael Green, and two small children, equally destitute; neither family had either flour, tea, or molasses. There are a number of orphans depending upon the charity of people who took them, on the death of their parents, entertaining the hope that, with the small amount received towards their support from the Government, they would manage to pull through and keep the poor children from perishing. That aid has now been taken from them. The guardians say: "We can't keep ourselves." These children have no parents living. Government will not assist to maintain them. What's to be done?

There are other instances—a few of which will suffice for the present. I must mention John Hindy, a poor cripple man—paralyzed—more than 70 years of age—is now informed that he is to receive no further aid from Government. In the next settlement to this, Turk's Cove, lives an old and infirm woman, a Mrs. Dean, whose age is over 80 years; also a very aged man named Patrick Moores, so crippled that two crutches supply his means of locomotion. In both these extreme cases the Government have erased their names from the poor list and stoutly refused to grant them further assistance. There are other cases which I shall draw your attention to later on, Mr. Editor. Let the Government call this "Retrenchment and Reformation" if they will; but the people of all classes and denominations term such conduct high-handed dealings, cruelty, injustice, oppression, wrong and robbery. Our members, or representatives, have been referred to and consulted in this matter, but say "they are unable to do anything in it. It is an order of the Government and cannot be revoked." Would the investigators of this measure turn their attention for a few moments to Exodus 22nd ch., 22nd, 23rd and 24th verses. Read there of the doom awaiting those who afflict the widow and fatherless. Mr. Editor, have these starving widows and fatherless children, these aged and crippled men and women, to yield up their Government mite to help pay for that $8,000 Jubilee Ball held in the Colonial Building last summer? Some of us thought as much at the time. Oh! when will this reign of oppression and injustice have an end!

How have such astounding figures been set down as expenses, and how incurred? asks some one. Why, simply by living in the highest style and moving in the most fashionable circles to be found in the capital of the United States. Expenses occasioned by holiday trips to Canada, &c. Expenses in the shape of a fabulous salary as Attorney General for Newfoundland. Add to this the payment of an Acting Attorney General occupying the triple position of Speaker, Solicitor General and Acting Attorney General, drawing the salaries attached to each of the three offices, to say nothing of all the fat pickings.

Mr. Editor, is this "Retrenchment?" Alas! poor Terra Nova! Oh! for a saviour to deliver us from money-grabbers and spendthrifts, who are fast depleting our treasury. Was it "retrenchment," when last winter the Government scattered broadcast, in this and other districts, provisions of all kinds, and even tobacco, many recipients of the same being men with money in the Bank and having a balance to their credit with their merchant? for which "relief," as 'twas called, little or no returns were made.

But, sir, it has come at last! Retrenchment and Reform have visited us with a vengeance! But in what form? That poor, helpless, starving widows and orphans, aged and crippled men and women, have had the miserable pittance hitherto allowed them by Government suddenly stopped. The small allowance which has been for years granted these poor and wretched people is now at this season of the year, by order of the Government, withheld. Can any act of tyranny and oppression be more cruel?

"Retrenchment and Reformation."

PROMISES THEY DID NOT INTEND TO REDEEM.

Petty Acts of Political Tyranny.

DEAR SIR,—These were two of the principal planks in the platform of the Reform Party and immediately succeeding that now notorious tissue-paper plank—"No Amalgamation with the so-called Liberal Party." How anxiously have we waited, and with what eager eyes have we scanned the political horizon, endeavoring to peer through the gloom to behold the fulfilment of either the one or the other of these promises. But, alas! the horizon has become so obscured by reason of the political turpitude of those who now wield the sceptre, that one must be gifted with supernatural powers of vision to discern through the "blackness of darkness" the least sign of either "retrenchment" or "reformation" in any act or department of the present Government.

If by retrenchment was meant a curtailing of public expenses, I fail to recognize a single instance where it has been applied. Do not departmental officers and Government officials generally still receive the same enormous salaries? Is not the same reckless extravagance continued, for which this Government, ever since its inception, has been characterized? Do you call it retrenchment to pay a man for sporting about the city of Washington, posing as the Newfoundland representative at the Fishery Commission, but mute, as he himself asserts, with "sealed lips." When, by-and-by, the Hon. J. S. Winter unrolls his long list of expenses and submits the same to the Government for immediate payment, and the poor starving fishermen of this country have got to foot the bill, I will then ask, is this retrenchment?

How have such astounding figures been set down as expenses, and how incurred? asks some one. Why, simply by living in the highest style and moving in the most fashionable circles to be found in the capital of the United States. Expenses occasioned by holiday trips to Canada, &c. Expenses in the shape of a fabulous salary as Attorney General for Newfoundland. Add to this the payment of an Acting Attorney General occupying the triple position of Speaker, Solicitor General and Acting Attorney General, drawing the salaries attached to each of the three offices, to say nothing of all the fat pickings.

The small allowance which has been for years granted these poor and wretched people is now at this season of the year, by order of the Government, withheld. Can any act of tyranny and oppression be more cruel?

About the end of November the Government sent a police officer, Sergeant O'Reilly, through this and adjacent settlements, who, without due enquiry, or without interviewing the people or knowing aught of their circumstances, indiscriminately struck their names off the poor list.

The consequence of this rash and inhuman act on the part of the Government, is that several families in this place are STARVING! This assertion is not made on mere "hearsay" evidence. The writer has visited the wretched abodes of the people referred to, and found destitution, misery, wretchedness, poverty—in a word—starvation, real and existing. (This is no cry, out of which to make "political capital," a compliment which your Prescott Street contemporary has been pleased to pay to writers who have disclosed the poverty of people residing in more northern parts of the island.) Mr. Editor, it is truly heart-rending to witness the distress and suffering. In some cases the small sum of $4, in some cases $6, per quarter, constituted the sole dependence of a widow and several small children.

THE S.S. Hercules starts for Bay ports this evening and is getting full freights.

THERE will be no practice for the choir of Cochrane Street Methodist Church to-night.

WHAT medical man is assisting in the Hospital during the absence of the Hon. Doctor Crowley?

THAT notable event of gay and happy circles—the Irish Ball—will take place on Tuesday of Easter week.

A DEBATE on the volunteer question takes place in the Academia this evening, commencing at 8 o'clock.

THE catch of the current Norwegian cod fishery to last Saturday, the 18th, is 7,000,000, as against 3,000,000 to the same date of last year's take.

CAPTAIN GUY takes charge of the Polynia to the ice this spring, and Captain Milne of the Esquimaux. These ships are now being outfitted on the South Side.

THE Legislative Council is shorn of some of its best debaters by the absence from the colony of the following members: Honorables Dr. Crowley, A. W. Harvey, Captain Philip Cleary, John Syme, James McLoughlin. The number available to carry on the business of the Council is eight. The full number of members is fifteen according to law; the full number of incumbents at present is thirteen. The number necessary for a quorum is eight.

OLD fishing salts say to each other that "the backbone of the winter is broken." Why shouldn't it be broken when the swollers are getting to rights? Snow we shall have yet, and frost in abundance, but with the 1st of March spring begins in Newfoundland, so the sealers say. The farmers don't endorse this opinion. "Wait till you hear the whistle of the first blackbird," they will tell you, "on the 12th of April, six weeks afterwards, before you talk about spring; and for a month after that the spirit of ethereal mildness will be coy in making up her mind to stay for good—the horrible jade!"

THE House of Assembly yesterday—the first day of its assembling for the practical transaction of business—was counted out for the want of a quorum, a creditable way of attending to the business of the country. We are on the eve of spring, with the 1st of March close at hand, yet the debate proper on the address in reply hasn't yet begun. Formerly at this time, the Money Bills, Ways and Means, and Supply were either passed or very nearly so. Yet at this late period we find that the public business is backward from neglect or procrastination, and that many of the leading supporters of the Government, including the Premier, are absent from their posts.

Some Remarks About the Bait Act.

A MEASURE CALCULATED TO DO MORE HARM THAN GOOD.

DEAR SIR,—We see a great deal in print concerning the names to be given the new coastal mail boats. Why is there nothing mentioned regarding passenger, fares, &c., all of which is but a system of extortion as at present practised? On what waters of the civilized world will you find vessels taking freight and doing as they like with it?—charging twice the usual fare for passage, and giving no equivalent in accommodation,—nothing to eat with, or to lie on, in steerage, and often so in cabin, and getting a larger subsidy from Government than any boat or boats of equal size in America?

These, I think, are matters of somewhat more import than the name. Twaddle! "What's in a name?"

If the coming boats are to be conducted on the same principle as the present, I would suggest that one be named "Humbag," the other "Fraud."

There is another matter now occupying considerable public attention, particularly on the southwest coast, which coast it only interests. That is, prohibition of the sale of bait to French fishermen. What is that for? It can't be to protect the little bait fishes, as they are well protected already, by a business manager something ahead of ours, being plentier at present than ever. By bait fishes I suppose is meant caplin, squid and herring. These fish require no laws to protect them; they multiply in numbers far beyond the means man can bring to bear in their destruction, and one good sized whale would and does destroy more caplin in a year than all the Frenchmen, guano factories and cabbage gardens of the coast.

If there were any sense in the report of the French fish being in our way in the markets, this very bill would serve to increase that difficulty by compelling shop-keepers and others at St. Pierre to go into banking for a living, and such is really the intention, twenty-seven (27) new vessels being added to the St. Pierre fleet this fall, of from 80 to 150 tons. Next year it is thought that about fifty (50) more will be added. The change of denomination of money to dollars and cents, and the reduction of foreign silver, no one seems to heed, these changes being quite in keeping with other proceedings of the present dishonest and bungling Government.

Yours truly,
BAIT FISHES.
