To the Citizens — AND — Ratepayers of St. John's.

CITIZENS:—Having been requested by a large number of RATEPAYERS to place MYSELF in NOMINATION for MAYOR at the forthcoming MUNICIPAL ELECTION I have decided to do so, and respectfully solicit your VOTES and influence. I promise, if elected, to do my utmost in forwarding the best interests of the CITY. WALTER A. O'D. KELLY. Jun12,21

NOTICE!

Complying with widely expressed public opinion as voiced by the Press and individual citizens, the undersigned members of the Municipal Board, deem it our duty to offer our services to the City for the next two years. While making this announcement as a body, we wish it to be clearly understood that we are standing as individuals, and desire to express our readiness as individuals to work with any Mayor or with any other Councilors that the Citizens may see fit to elect.

In respect to the Charter which has been submitted to the Legislature, we beg to state that, while firmly of opinion that its adoption will enable the City to be more effectively governed than at present, we have always recognized that some of its provisions are debatable. We have supported that the Legislature and the Citizens would carefully consider such sections and would arrive at some decision in respect to them which would be generally satisfactory.

We can point with some satisfaction, if not with pride, to the improvements which have been made during our short term of office, and it is in the hope that we may be able to complete and perfect the work begun, and to institute further improvements, that we now signify our willingness to serve the City for another term of two years.

W. G. GOSLING for Mayor.
CHARLES P. AYRE for Councillor.

TO THE CITY RATEPAYERS!

GENTLEMEN:—You hardly need to be reminded that six years ago you honored me with a seat at the City Council. At the expiration of that term I was appointed by the Government as one of the members of the Commission holding office temporarily pending arrangements for holding a new election. Having had during all that time exceptional opportunities for gaining more knowledge in civic affairs, I now feel that my experience warrants me in asking you for a renewal of that confidence at the forthcoming election. I intend to again put myself in nomination, and should I once more have the honour of representing you, my very best efforts will be devoted to conserving the interests of the taxpayers of the City, and to co-operating to the best of my ability with the gentleman, whoever he may be, whom you may select to fill the Mayoralty Chair. Respectfully yours, J. J. MULLALLY. Jun13,20

CHAPTER XIII
A Letter From Home.

"Jeb, tew the minute, you bet!" remarked the landlord, not moving a peg, and the next instant the door was thrown open with a bang and two men entered, followed by a rush of cold air and a drift of snow.

"Wal, old hoss," exclaimed the first, a short, thick-set man, clothed from head to foot in furs, and having a stout leather bag strapped round his waist. "Wal, old hoss, guess I'd find you all freeze up! If gov'ment don't provide snowshoes next trip for the darned critters outside, calc'late there'll be no mails for Woshano after this date. Sho! I'm tired of this cold beat. I'm going to hand in my checks and take the Polar track fur a change."

And with a cheery smile he rubbed his hands before the fire, and showed his teeth all round.

The second, a tall, thin man, of the true Yankee build, and dressed, like the mail-master, in beaver fur, stood a little behind and peered round in silence.

"Jem's safe with the horses, I calc'late," resumed the mail-master; "so hurry up, landlord, and serve out the supplies. Cold night for an empty stomach, stranger," and he turned to Percy.

Percy assented. He had put Kyra in the corner near to the mantel, and had drawn his own chair to the back, to make room for the newcomers.

"Have you come far?"

"Some two thousand miles," was the reply, tapping his postbag; "all for these. How d'ye do's. Can't think what folks want to write letters for; 'curs to me it's a unnecessary nuisance that the gov'ment ought to put down to once!"

There was a grin all round, and two of the trappers asked if there were any letters for them.

"I forget," said the mail-master; "and I'm certain I shan't remember till I've had my supper. Mr. Jackson, won't you thaw?"

The tall Yankee thus addressed came forward. As he held out his hands to the fire his keen eyes shot a glance from under their drooping lids at the face in the corner, and the glance, after dropping for a moment

Had a Nervous Breakdown, Could Not Sleep or Work

Is Now Cured and Attributes His Recovery to the Use of Dr. Chase's Medicines.

Some splendid results have been reported to us from the combined use of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills and Nerve Food. In complicated cases they work together with great success.

While the Kidney-Liver Pills arouse the action of liver, kidneys and bowels, and so overcome derangements of these organs, the Nerve Food enriches the blood, strengthens the nerves and builds up the system in a general way.

Mr. R. B. Hillman, Purbrook, Muskoka, Ont., writes: "About four years ago I was all run down and could not work, and as to writing a letter, I could not do it on account of my hand shaking so badly. My nerves were unstrung and I was troubled with a nervous breakdown. I could not with a startled suddenness, returned, and rested for a long, scrutinizing minute on Kyra's face.

Then he rubbed his hands slowly, drooped his head, peered for a minute in an underhand way at the stalwart figure of the Englishman, and, at last, slowly moved to the table at which the mail-master was already attacking the stew.

For a time there was a silence of expectancy, broken by the clatter of the mail-master's knife and fork, the ring of his horn cup as he set it down, the smack of his lips, and the "Har!" of satisfaction as a particularly rich piece of fat met his teeth.

The companion, Mr. Jackson, ate very greedily, and expressed no satisfaction whatever.

Percy, comfortable and luxuriating in the rest and warmth, watched with his usual grave composure, now and then touching Kyra's hand or stroking her hair.

Presently, the little head drooped against his arm, just as it had done for many nights past on the horse's back.

He took the child up in his arms, and, carrying her to a large settee behind the fire, laid her gently down, and covered her with his riding cloak, then he returned to the fire, and as he did so noticed that the guest, Mr. Jackson, was eying him over the knife and fork with a close regard. So close and absorbed that, meeting Percy's cold, clear gaze, he seemed compelled to speak.

"Child seems tired, stranger," he remarked, in a dry rasping voice.

"She is very tired, almost exhausted," said Percy. "I was going to ask the landlord if he could find some small room or cupboard in which she could get a quiet sleep."

The landlord stopped and knocked his cap a little farther off his head.

"Old gal's out, gone around to a neighbor, I guess she'll fix the young critter up when she comes back, stranger."

Percy expressed his thanks and took a turn up the room; then he asked for some tobacco and took out his pipe.

He filled his pouch—crammed it, and in taking a light, handed him by the mail-master, set the pouch down on the table. The pouch was one of those elaborate knick-knacks, upon which gentlemen of Mr. Chester's class continue to waste such large sums of money, silver and seal skin, with his crest silver-mounted on the front.

Smoking with evident enjoyment, he paced slowly up and down. The clatter of knives and forks was soon supplemented by that of tongues; the room grew full of smoke, the landlord sauntered in with frequent relays of whisky. Percy looked at the sleeping child with grave anxiety. It will be remarked that he had not once hinted at a desire to know the name of the place in which he had alighted or the direction of the nearest large town. Percy Chester had traveled too often and variously to rush upon such an inquiry and so display his ignorance and his plans until it was absolutely necessary; some one of the characters might let out the information he wanted.

Presently, as he stood with folded arms before the fire, the door opened and the landlord's wife entered. She was wrapped in a large cloak drawn over her head. Snow was falling fast. Percy lost no time, but with a bow of greeting drew her attention to the sleeping child.

"What's that?" said the woman. "It's nare a child."

"Yes, indeed it is, and a very tired and weary one," said Percy, quietly. "I have been waiting your return with some degree of anxiety. Your husband tells me he thinks you can find some little quiet nook for her to rest the night in. She will not take much room."

The woman nodded.

"No, that she won't," responded the woman. "Poor child, it's an ill night for such a mite. Tut, tell me to think. Why, you've been on the trail!" she exclaimed, as her quick eyes noticed the snow stains on the edge of the cloak.

"Off it, rather," remarked Percy, bending over the child. "We lost our reckoning and—what is the matter?"

"Why, man, it's an Injun!" broke in the woman, dropping the cloak she had lifted, and turning with something like indignation to Percy.

"Exactly," he returned, with a haughty stare.

"An Injun!" she repeated. "Why, where on 'airth! Boss, look here," and she turned to her husband.

"Go ahead!" he chanted, nodding to her.

"Here's an Injun—a young girl—and I've been making as much fuss as if she was this stranger's own daughter!"

"Pray consider her so still if it will be any inducement to you to make haste in finding her a refuge for the night," said Percy. "I am willing and shall be happy to pay liberally for the best accommodation you can afford her. The child is my ward."

The hesitation was slight, yet not so slight but it attracted or rather confirmed the attention of every soul in the room.

"Your ward, stranger?" said the mail-master, over his glass. "That's kinder queer, eh, Mr. Jackson."

The tall Yankee rose in his chair and reached for a light, and in doing so continued to approach the settle with an indifferent air of curiosity.

"Stranger things have happened," he said with a little smile that did not at all improve his general expression of countenance. "Still it's strange. May I ask, sir, how you came to be the guardian of an Indian girl. No offense!"

"I cannot understand why you should intend any, sir," replied Percy, fixing his eye on the sunken, half-leaden eyes, "and I am as gulleless of any such intention when I parry your question by one of my own. What business is it of yours?"

There was a slight movement on the part of all. A quarrel is simply a delicious luxury under such circumstances, in a snowed-up inn of a back settlement.

"Curiosity, natural curiosity, perhaps," replied the Yankee, with a keen glitter of his eyes.

"A curiosity which I feel has no claims for satisfaction on me," said Percy.

And, with a slight gesture, he motioned to the woman to raise the child. As she did so the Yankee put up his hand.

"Stop a minute, mistress," he shouted. "I'd like to see that child, if you please."

With a stride Percy was before him.

"Your curiosity has developed into an insolence which, if persevered in, I shall feel compelled to punish. Stand back, my good fellow."

"Easy, stranger," said the Yankee, his lantern jaws sinking; "I demand a sight of that child."

"Demand!" said Percy, with a smile that was not pleasant to look at. "By what right?"

"By the right which my commission as United States Commissioner gives me. Postmaster, tell this stranger who I am."

Thus appealed to, the postmaster nodded.

"That's so, Mr. Jackson. Stranger, you'll have to cave in; this gentleman is a commissioner of the United States, and has the pull over any Injuns found within a hundred miles of this city."

"That is so," drawled the landlord. Percy considered a moment.

"Give me the child," he said. "Now, sir, I yield to your authority. Oblige me by making your official scrutiny as short as possible."

The Yankee, with a cunning smile, sauntered up to the child, and was about to draw her cloak aside.

"Permit me," said Percy, drawing back a little, as he uncovered the beautiful face.

The Yankee looked down at it, then smiled, slowly:

"I know this child—"

Percy turned on his heel with marked indifference.

"She is no ward or belonging of yours; you have no more right to her than you have to a stolen horse or a stolen anything."

Percy smiled.

"Right or no right, I have her in my charge, and no man shall take her from me, save a relation or a legal guardian."

"That's me," said the Yankee, tapping his breast. "I am the guardian of every redskin within a hundred miles circuit of this bar. I'll trouble you to resign her to my charge, and account for your possession of her."

As he spoke he drew out a small parchment document and held it toward Percy.

Percy took it, read it through coolly, and returned it.

"That settles it, I think," said the Yankee. "I see, sir, you are a sensible man."

"Yes, it settles it," said Percy. "I refuse to give up the child, and I back that refusal by undertaking to appear before any publicly constituted tribunal to answer for that refusal. My name is Percy Chester."

The Yankee was smoking with aggravating coolness; at the name, however, he drew the pipe from his mouth, and held it halfway with a stare, then, suddenly remembering himself, pretended to yawn and turned his back.

"My name is Percy Chester. I am well known to the consuls at New York and Philadelphia, and I place myself at their disposal. I absolutely and emphatically refuse to give up the child, and that is the last word I have to say."

To the surprise of every one, Percy included, the Yankee commissioner appeared quite satisfied.

"Perhaps you are right, sir; well, well, an Injun—that is not much to fight over, and—yes, I'll just take your name and address—and—ah, put the little 'un to bed, mistress, and, boss, the gentleman will honor us by joining us; let us have one all round."

Percy nodded haughtily, and instead of relinquishing the child to the woman, said: "Go on, I'll carry her."

Taking a candle from one of the tin scones, the land-lady led the way to a small room—a slip at the side—and hastily raked a pile of furs together.

"The queen couldn't have a more comfortable room in the Tower of London, stranger," she said. "Warm as a possum she'll be, before you can say knife."

Percy thanked her heartily, and set the child down, covered her up with furs, and proceeded to follow the woman back again, glancing as he did so at a small window—too small to admit of a man's shoulder—that was set up toward the ceiling of the room. Percy noticed that there was no other exit beside the door at which they had entered, and this opened directly on the public room.

me. Postmaster, tell this stranger who I am."

Thus appealed to, the postmaster nodded.

"That's so, Mr. Jackson. Stranger, you'll have to cave in; this gentleman is a commissioner of the United States, and has the pull over any Injuns found within a hundred miles of this city."

"That is so," drawled the landlord. Percy considered a moment.

"Give me the child," he said. "Now, sir, I yield to your authority. Oblige me by making your official scrutiny as short as possible."

The Yankee, with a cunning smile, sauntered up to the child, and was about to draw her cloak aside.

"Permit me," said Percy, drawing back a little, as he uncovered the beautiful face.

The Yankee looked down at it, then smiled, slowly:

"I know this child—"

Percy turned on his heel with marked indifference.

"She is no ward or belonging of yours; you have no more right to her than you have to a stolen horse or a stolen anything."

Percy smiled.

"Right or no right, I have her in my charge, and no man shall take her from me, save a relation or a legal guardian."

"That's me," said the Yankee, tapping his breast. "I am the guardian of every redskin within a hundred miles circuit of this bar. I'll trouble you to resign her to my charge, and account for your possession of her."

As he spoke he drew out a small parchment document and held it toward Percy.

Percy took it, read it through coolly, and returned it.

"That settles it, I think," said the Yankee. "I see, sir, you are a sensible man."

"Yes, it settles it," said Percy. "I refuse to give up the child, and I back that refusal by undertaking to appear before any publicly constituted tribunal to answer for that refusal. My name is Percy Chester."

The Yankee was smoking with aggravating coolness; at the name, however, he drew the pipe from his mouth, and held it halfway with a stare, then, suddenly remembering himself, pretended to yawn and turned his back.

"My name is Percy Chester. I am well known to the consuls at New York and Philadelphia, and I place myself at their disposal. I absolutely and emphatically refuse to give up the child, and that is the last word I have to say."

To the surprise of every one, Percy included, the Yankee commissioner appeared quite satisfied.

"Perhaps you are right, sir; well, well, an Injun—that is not much to fight over, and—yes, I'll just take your name and address—and—ah, put the little 'un to bed, mistress, and, boss, the gentleman will honor us by joining us; let us have one all round."

Percy nodded haughtily, and instead of relinquishing the child to the woman, said: "Go on, I'll carry her."

Taking a candle from one of the tin scones, the land-lady led the way to a small room—a slip at the side—and hastily raked a pile of furs together.

"The queen couldn't have a more comfortable room in the Tower of London, stranger," she said. "Warm as a possum she'll be, before you can say knife."

Percy thanked her heartily, and set the child down, covered her up with furs, and proceeded to follow the woman back again, glancing as he did so at a small window—too small to admit of a man's shoulder—that was set up toward the ceiling of the room. Percy noticed that there was no other exit beside the door at which they had entered, and this opened directly on the public room.

LONDON, June 12.

In a message to the men of the fleet given here officially to-night, Admiral Jellicoe said our losses were heavy. We miss many of our most gallant comrades, but although it is difficult to obtain accurate information as to enemy's losses, I have no doubt we shall find they certainly were not less than our own. Sufficient information is already received for me to make that statement with confidence.

NEW YORK, June 12.

A despatch from Buenos Aires to the News Agency here to-day, says that Hipolito Irigoyen has been chosen President of the Argentine Republic to-day by the electoral college, he being the first radical to have ever reached the Argentine Presidency. Pelagia Luna was chosen Vice-President. The election of Senor Irigoyen follows the bitterest political struggle in the history of the Argentine Republic.

SECRET COMES OUT.

DUBLIN, June 12.

An incident in the Irish rebellion, which heretofore has been kept secret, came out at the court martial to-day. It concerns a shooting by the Sergeant of the Guard at Guinness's Brewery, of an officer and an employee of the brewery, whom he took for Flood. The defendant is Sergt. Robt. Flood, of the Royal Dublin Fusiliers. He is charged with shooting Lieut. A. Lucas, of King Edward's Horse, and Wm. J. Rice, who was employed at the brewery. The prosecutor explained that Lucas took over the command of the guard on the night of April 29th. It was very dark at the time. Lucas was unknown to the Sergeant. When he opened a window which was contrary to instructions, Flood ordered his arrest, the prosecutor said, and later his execution as well as that of Rice. Later, Lieut. Warwick arrived at the brewery, and rushing toward the guard, also was shot. According to the prosecutor, the guard was very jumpy. Some commands which Lucas gave were misunderstood by the guard, the prosecutor said, leading him to suspect that the lieutenant was not what he represented himself as being. It was too dark to recognize his uniform.

STEAMER MINED.

LONDON, June 12.

A despatch from Malmö, says that the Swedish steamer Emmy has been destroyed by a mine off Falsterbo.

FRENCH OFFICIAL.

PARIS, June 12.

German infantry attacked French positions west of Fort Vaux on the Verdun front last night. The assault failed entirely. The official report of to-day says that the Germans continued bombardment in the region north of Souville and Tavaness Forts. West of the Meuse there was heavy artillery action in the vicinity of Chantonnay.

Accident Averted.

Just after alighting from a street car early yesterday afternoon on Duckworth St., Const. E. O'Flaherty had a narrow escape from being run over by a passing automobile. Fortunately the accident was averted owing to the promptness of the driver who applied the emergency break of the motor vehicle in time and nearly casized it at the risk of his own life. Those who were in the street, car thought at first that the police officer had been cut down.

THE NEW SERIAL DRAWS BIG CROWDS.

Immense audiences attended the performance at the Nickel Theatre yesterday afternoon and last evening. It was the opening day of the greatest of all serials, "The Strange Case of Mary Page." This wonderful story is running in several of the large American and Canadian cities and is drawing larger audiences everywhere. The story centres around a beautiful actress who is loved by many. She reciprocates the love of childhood days and spurns the man of the world. The opening chapter shows Mary Page scoring a great success in her profession. Then her troubles begin. Edna Mayo and Harry B. Walthall play the leading characters to perfection. The opinion of all present last night was that the serial promises to be the best ever shown in St. John's. Those who were unable to attend last evening should be sure and go to-day. Bert Stanley made another big hit last evening in his singing of "The letter that never reached home." The comedy last night was very funny. To-morrow there will be a big holiday bill, including "The Romance of Elaine."

LIGHT, HEAT, COMFORT!

The proprietor of one of the best known multiple shopping systems is credited with saying, "Give me any old shop, in any old street, and I'll guarantee to make it in twelve months the most widely known and best frequented shop in the district." He was asked to explain. Holding up three fingers he said, "I believe in the trinity of LIGHT, WARMTH, COMFORT. I should dazzle the moths until the candle drew them, I should bring them into a warm, comfortable shop, filled with a soft, pleasing radiance, and the rest is—well, mere child's play."

Mixed metaphors, perhaps, but expressive. Now we can more than imagine the kind of shop this well-known individual would open, for we pass it in almost every town—always a landmark to the street. No one fails to notice it. There is an indefinable air of welcome and invitation as one stands for a moment on the pathway and lets one's gaze travel inside it. The subdued, restful lighting effect that so charms because of its very unobtrusiveness, the absence of dark corners, the intangible feeling that if one would step inside one would be sure of experiencing a delicious sense of warmth and comfort and cheerfulness—all these are part of its appeal. Truly a shop with an individuality.

We cordially invite all progressive business men to visit our showroom and see our latest Lighting and Heating Appliances. By the adoption of which the ideal outline in the above extract from a London paper may be easily secured. Our new RADIO X Lamp and GASTEAM Radiators fill all light and heat requirements.

Wilhelm Bombastes.

The cable messages have made frequent references to the Kaiser's rhetorical celebrations of the North Sea "victory." We give here a short excerpt (we may be sure he said a great deal more) from his Wilhelmshaven speech, which our readers will peruse with a good deal of amusement.

Text of the Emperor's Speech:
Berlin, June 6, via London, June 7. — In the complete account of the Emperor's speech to the sailors of the fleet at Wilhelmshaven yesterday, which was published here to-day, the emperor is quoted as saying that the great naval battle off Jutland has destroyed Britain's supremacy on the sea.

"When the great war came," the emperor said, "envious enemies suddenly attacked the fatherland. The army, by desperate fighting against superior foes, slowly conquered one after another, but the fleet waited in vain for a real fight. In numerous individual encounters the navy clearly demonstrated its heroic spirit, but was forced to wait month after month for a general battle."

"Repeated efforts were made to bring the enemy out, but this proved fruitless, until the day finally came last week, when the gigantic fleet of Albion, ruler of the seas since Trafalgar was fought 100 years ago, appeared in the open, surrounded with a nimbus. Instantly our fleet engaged this superior British Armada, and with what result? The English fleet was beaten. The first blow was dealt the English fleet whose tyrannical supremacy was shattered."

"The news electrified the world and caused unprecedented jubilation every where that German hearts beat. Your success in the North Sea fight means that you have added a new chapter to the history of the world. God Almighty steered your arms and gave you clear eyes to accomplish this."

"I, standing here to-day as your supreme war lord, thank you from the bottom of my heart. As the representative of the Fatherland, I thank you and in the name of my army I bring you its greetings, because you have done your duty unselfishly and only with the one thought—that the enemy must be beaten."

"At a time when the enemy is slowly being crushed before Verdun and when our allies have driven the Italians from mountain to mountain, you add new glories to our cause. The world was prepared for everything, but not for the victory of the German fleet over the English."

"The start which you have made will cause fear to creep into the bones of the enemy. What you have done you did for the Fatherland, that in the future it may have freedom of the seas for its commerce. Therefore I ask you to join me in three cheers for our dearly beloved Fatherland."

"This is delightfully indefinite, but strangely enough, some parts of it are true. As for instance, 'The world was prepared for everything, but not for the victory of the German fleet over the English.' It wasn't, but it was quite prepared to hear a royal oration announcing it; in neither particular has it been disappointed. We print in another column a vivid description of the battle and the strategy employed. It shows how the falling light alone saved the German fleet from a defeat that might have approached annihilation."

Our Thanks Again!

It is again our very pleasant duty to thank a contemporary for kind words of welcome and encouragement. The article which we give below is from to-day's Daily News. If we can do something to deserve the personal references in it we shall be more than satisfied. At the same time we are glad of this opportunity to add to our acknowledgments a word of appreciation in return. Always an interested reader of the Daily News, we have, since the war occupied all sections of the press so fully, found in its pages almost daily inspiration, as well from the large imperialistic spirit that has pervaded it, as from the material information it has contained, to which we know we shall be increasingly indebted. We thank the 'Daily News' most sincerely:

"Mentioned in Dispatches."
His Excellency the Governor has received a copy of the London Gazette of Friday, May 12th, 1916, containing a list of awards of medals and "Recognition of services rendered by Petty Officers and men of the Eastern Mediterranean Squadron between the time of landing in the Gallipoli Peninsula in April, 1915, and the evacuation in December, 1915—January, 1916."

One section recites that "the following Petty Officers and men have been mentioned in despatches by the Vice-Admiral commanding in the Eastern Mediterranean Squadron for good services in action during the period above referred to," and mentions "Seaman, R.N.R. (Newfoundland), Edgar H. Smith, O.N. 1304, X."

"FAREWELL AND HAIL."
"Last night's issue of The Evening Telegram carried a new name in its imprint. Dr. Lloyd is now freed from the responsibilities of the editorial chair, and Mr. H. Winter succeeds him in that responsible position. Whether or not to congratulate the Doctor on his change from journalism to law we are uncertain. Each has its annoyances, each its anxieties, each its pleasures. Law is, at least, more lucrative, and we trust that it may prove abundantly so to Dr. Lloyd. It has been our fortune, whether good or bad, to differ with him on local politics, but, on the other hand, it has been our privilege to see eyes to eyes with him on many of the greater questions which are agitating the Empire and the world to-day. We take this opportunity of paying a tribute to the conspicuous ability displayed by Dr. Lloyd, especially during the first twelve months of the war in his leading articles dealing with the situation in Europe. A close student of every move on the various fronts, he wrote with authority, and his articles were instructive, and his deductions fully and indeed much more so, than those of the majority of war experts, so called. Many of these articles we found personally helpful, and to their perusal we looked forward from day to day with interest. We have already wished him every success in the practice of his profession. To-day we regret that we wish in all sincerity. And so, farewell!"

"Having speeded the parting, it is now our privilege to welcome the coming. Mr. Harry Winter, Bachelor of Arts and Rhodes Scholar, like Dr. Lloyd, is a lawyer. The one goes from journalism to law, the other from law to journalism. Mr. Winter inherits a great name and has won laurels on his own account. The son of Sir James Winter will find a host of friends both for his father's sake and his own. At present Mr. Harry Winter may not be well known outside St. John's, but in the city he has already won merited fame as a writer. He is wielder of the pen of a scholar, and writes it well. The Telegram is fortunate in securing the services of a gentleman of such high scholarship and undoubted gifts. We extend to him a very cordial welcome to the ranks of journalism, and are confident that when, after years, he is many or few, of the brain-vexing and anxiety inseparable from an editor's duties, he too, retires, it will be with a consciousness of having rendered good and faithful service to his countrymen, to Newfoundland and the Empire."

Official Letter of Condolence

Mr. George McF. Hennebury, whose son Thomas was killed in action on the Western front, May 27th, has just received the following communication from Major General Sam Hughes, Minister of Militia and Defence for Canada, dated June 5th, 1916:

"Dear Mr. Hennebury,—
Will you kindly accept my sincere sympathy and condolence in the decease of that worthy citizen and heroic soldier, your son, Private Thomas Hennebury.
While one cannot too deeply mourn the loss of such a brave comrade, there is a consolation in knowing that he did his duty fearlessly and well, and gave his life for the cause of Liberty and the upbuilding of the Empire.
Again extending to you my heartfelt sympathy,
Faithfully,
SAM HUGHES, M. G.,
Min. of Militia and Defence for Canada."

BARQUE DAMAGED BY SEA. BARBADOS, TO. The American barque Norma from Halifax, March 14th, 1916,bourne, before reported, arrived leaky having sustained some damage. The vessel's bulkheads are strained and slack, and the hatch beams broken under the weight. The cargo is being discharged.

CZERNOWITZ REPORTED FLEEING

PETROGRAD, TO. There is a rumor in circulation that the Russians have occupied Czernowitz, the capital of the Austro-Hungarian Bukovina. The news lacks official confirmation, but has been given color by the capture of Czernowitz by the Russian army. The line here extends to Okna. From these points good roads lead to Czernowitz, and according to authorities they are the only ones in this direction capable of being used. A telegram received from Bucharest, Roumania, says the Austrians have evacuated Czernowitz and retreated to a line four miles west. The Russian successes of the Russian army are more surprising as the Austrians the first shock of the Russian advance appeared to have rallied forces and to offer a more determined resistance. This is indeed the fact that they were unable to mass sufficient forces in the north of Kalki north of Lutsk to cause the Russians to retire across the border. Not only here but at other points the Volhynian front furious attacks characterized the last hours fighting but without being able to check, except momentarily, the advance of the Russian army. It is believed here that the Germans are sending many troops to aid the Austrians. It is pointed out that in one instance during Russian tactical Carpathian campaign many sent a large number of troops to the relief of the Austrians. It was always their practice to undertake an offensive to draw the line in the endeavor to draw the Russians. It is the opinion of those here that this is not improbable, that the Germans are more likely to attempt an offensive on the section of the Russian front by weakening their lines by detaching any number of men for the purpose of stiffening the Austrian defense.

BRITISH REPORT.

LONDON, TO. British official midnight: The no infantry action during the last 24 hours. Operations were confined to artillery and mining, the most serious occurrence was heavy mutual bombardment between Hill 60 and Loos. This afternoon south of Loos the Boisselle we effectively bombarded hostile works with heavy guns. Mining was active near Neuve-Vaast, in the Loos Salient. The weather was cold and rainy.

GREECE FEELING THE EFFECTS

ATHENS, TO. There is a divergence of opinion here over the holding up by the tentative Governments of the invitation to Greece of the conference which the blockade will be imposed. They probably will be present tomorrow. It is believed that the conditions will call for the declaration of the Greek Army and in its chief policy, thus drawing the teeth of the present Government. American Legation is being besieged by protests from American representatives in all Greece against the blockade. American firms is being held Kavalas.

BARBADOS, To-day.

CZERNOWITZ REPORTED FALLEN.
PETROGRAD, To-day.
There is a rumor in circulation here that the Russians have occupied Czernowitz, the capital of the Austrian Crownland Bukovina. The rumor lacks official confirmation, but has been given color by the capture of Czernowitz, a commanding point ten miles to the northeast. From both these points good roads lead direct to Czernowitz, and according to military authorities they are the only points in this direction capable of defence. A telegram received from Bucharest, Roumania, says the Austrian army has evacuated Czernowitz and moved to a line four miles west. The continued successes of the Russians as recorded in to-day's official are the more surprising as the Austrians after the first shock of the Russian advance appeared to have rallied their forces and to offer extremely stubborn resistance. This is indicated by the fact that they were unable to make sufficient forces in the vicinity of Kolki north of Lutsch to cause the Russians to retire across the Styr. Not only here but at other points of the Volynian front furious counter-attacks characterized the last forty hours fighting but without being able to check, except momentarily the force of the Russian advance. It is not believed here that the Germans are sending many troops to aid the Austrians. It is pointed out that not only in one instance during Russian's spectacular Carpathian campaign did Germany send any large number of men to the relief of the Austrians, instead it was always their practice to undertake an offensive on some other line in the endeavor to draw off the Russians. It is the opinion of observers that this is not improbable, and that the Germans are more likely to attempt an offensive on the northern section of the Russian front than risk weakening their lines by detaching any number of men for the purpose of stiffening the Austrian defence.

ON ALL FRONTS.

LONDON, To-day.
Heavy fighting is in progress over virtually the entire eastern front from the Gulf of Riga to Bukovina, a distance between 600 and 700 miles. From Riga to the Jasioika River northwest of the Priepet marsh region the Germans have taken the offensive against the Russians, probably in an effort to divert the attention of the Russians who are in the second week of the drive against the Austrians and Germans from the Priepet marshes southward to Bukovina. On all sectors of the northern line the Russians have successfully withstood the German onslaughts, and have driven the attacking forces back. They have even gained ground against them north of the Tirul Marsh southwest of Riga, says Petrograd. In southwest Russia in the region of Lutsch fresh advances against the Austro-Hungarians are reported by the Russian War Office. Likewise is this the case across the border through East Galicia. In the southern part of this region the Russians are nearing Czernowitz, capital of the Austrian Crownland of Bukovina. Although the Austrians at numerous points are vigorously counter-attacking, the only place the Russians have been forced to give ground before them was near Bobulintz north of Buczac in Galicia, where the Austrians were reinforced by German troops. The Russians captured here by the Teutonic Allies exceeded 1,500. The total of men made prisoners by the Russians since their offensive began has grown to more than 114,000. Northeast of Verdun the Germans with heavy effectives have thrown successive attacks against the French positions north of Thiaumont, but all assaults have been repulsed with serious losses. Heavy bombardments by Germans in this region extended from Thiaumont eastward to the west and south Fort Vaux and to the French second line of positions at Fort Souville and Fort Tavannes, about three miles northeast of Verdun. On the remainder of the front in France and Belgium there have been only artillery duels and sapping operations, except in Champagne where Berlin reports the penetration of the French positions and the capture of more than one hundred men and four machine guns. South and southeast of Trent the Italians are continuing to drive back the Austrians. According to Rome gains have been made by the Italians in the Arna Valley and the Passbia sector along the Bosnia Astico line and southwest of Asiago. Farther north in the Augana Valley fresh progress toward Maso Torrent is recorded for King Victor Emmanuel's men, who repelled two counter-attacks near Scurelle in the Lagariva Valley. The Austrians are heavily bombarding the Italians on Coni Cugna. A Russian cavalry force of 1,000 men operating between the Caucasus and Mesopotamian fronts has been annihilated by the Turks, who also captured a large amount of war material, according to Constantinople. On the remainder of the front in Asiatic Turkey there is no change in the situation.

BULGARIA CLOSES FRONTIER.

LONDON To-day.
The Bulgarian Legation at Bucharest has received information that the Bulgar-Roumanian frontier will be temporarily closed against passengers or merchandise, says a Reuter despatch to-day from the Roumanian capital. It is believed, adds the despatch, that Bulgaria has taken this step to mask important troop movements.

LAUREATE'S TRIBUAE TO KITCHENER.

LONDON, To-day.
Times to-day prints a sonnet to the late Earl Kitchener written by Dr. Robert Bridges, British Poet Laureate. The sonnet follows:—

"Unflinching here, watchful to foresee,
And face thy Country's peril where-soever."
Directing war and peace with equal care,
Till by long toil ennobled, thou wert he Whom England called and badeest, "My arm free
To obey my will and save my honor fair!"
What day the foe presumed on her despair,
And she herself had trust in none but thee,—
Among Herculean deeds the miracle,
That massed the labor of ten years in one,
Shall be thy monument. Thy work is done
Ere we could thank thee, and the high sea swell
Surgeeth unheeding where thy proud ship fell
By the lone Orkneys ere the set of sun!"

CONSTANTINE TOES THE LINE.

ATHENS, To-day.
King Constantine decided to-day to order the complete demobilization of the Greek army.

VERDUN SLAUGHTER RENEWED.

PARIS, To-day.
The battle for Verdun has broken out with unusual violence on the east bank of the Meuse, after the lull following the capture of Fort Vaux. The Germans put the respite to good use. They brought up fresh effectives, reformed their lines, and advanced their artillery to positions from which they have begun a methodical pounding of the main French defenses, especially the powerful batteries at Tavannes and Fort Souville. At the same time the French advanced line, which was plastered with shells all day Sunday, as been subjected to a series of fierce onslaughts. At Thiaumont the positions on which the line pivots, the French on their part have not been idle during the past few days. Thiaumont Farm bristles with well-placed machine guns and the German masses toiling up the slope which leads to the French position have been driven back again and again, while their reserves have been kept copiously showered by sprays of shells from the French batteries at the rear and on the other side of the River. The fighting continues as desperate as ever, but the situation on both sides remains unmodified so far. The fighting is characterized by an eye witness as infernal. It is estimated that the Germans used up 30,000 infantry assaults on the trenches west of Fort Vaux and at Thiaumont. The attacks followed each other in such close succession as practically to merge one in the other.

ADVANCES BY ULSTER.

LONDON, To-day.
The Daily News says it has received an official statement from Ireland stating that the Ulster Unionist Council has authorized Sir Edward Carson, the Ulster Leader, to negotiate for a settlement of the Irish question on a basis of the proposals of David Lloyd George, but has expressed detestation of Home Rule and has reserved to itself freedom of action if negotiations are abortive.

From a neutral Swiss who has been intermediary for the Exchange of prisoners between the British and Germans, I learn though given all reserve, that it will not be surprising if the Germans ask for armistice on all fronts in a few weeks. Signed Roland Hill.

Our Brave Boys Out on Parade.

See them marching through the city—Smiled on as they pass along. By the maidens and the witty. They are now six hundred strong; Heads erect, all danger scorning. May their courage never fade. We look on with joy each morning. When they're out upon parade.

They belong to our dear Island. Manhood's stamp is on their brow. From the low land, and the high land From the mire and from the plow. They have come to fight for freedom. And of war they're not afraid. True men on the field will lead them. Our brave boys out on parade.

They have come with hearts a-glowing From the north and from the south. They can make as grand a showing As the Home-land can, no doubt. They are strong, robust and daring. Fit to learn the soldier's trade. And the Huns they are not fearing, Our brave boys out on parade.

And the hearts that's in them beating Is as pure as those at home; And to them they send a greeting Far across the deep blue foam; And e're long they'll see the Island A whose feet their love they lead. True hearts from your land and my land. Our brave boys out on parade. JAMES MURPHY. June 12th, 1916.

Inter-Collegiate Rugby.

Feldians Win by 5 Points to Nil.
The first inter-collegiate rugby match took place yesterday afternoon at the Collegian football field on Mundy Pond Road at 4.15. The contesting teams were Bishop Feild College and Methodist College. At the appointed hour Mr. J. G. Green, Master of Science at the Methodist College, who acted as referee, called the men together and facing off, the Feldians defended the south goal with the Collegians defending the north. The game opened with a rush by the former which was quickly checked, and up to half time play was evenly divided. The teams crossed with no points scored by either side. On resuming play the Methodist boys made a determined effort to score but lost within a few inches of the desired spot. Play for a short period, was confined to the Feldian territory, when Stein broke loose and dashing down the field scored a try for the Feldians. This counted three points for his team and allowed the privilege of a free kick for goal. It resulted in Stein adding two more points to the count. No more points were scored and the game closed with a victory for the Feldians by 5 points to 0. The attendance which was not large, included the teachers of both Colleges. Should the games in future be played in some field nearer the centre of the city, we feel sure that a grand old English game would become more popular.

Citizens Committee Meet Last Night.

The Citizens Committee met in the Board of Trade Rooms last night at 8.25. After the minutes of the last meeting were read and adopted, a letter was read which was received from the Colonial Secretary, acknowledging a communication forwarded by the secretary of the Citizens Committee asking that a broad interpretation of the 1902 Act, in relation to the qualification of voters, be submitted by writing for publication prior to the forthcoming Municipal election. Considerable discussion arising out of the minutes of the last meeting as to sections deferred then took place. The bill was then taken in detail and several sections were gone through thoroughly. The meeting adjourned at 10.30 to meet again at 8 p.m. sharp on Monday.

NEW PLANT AT BAY BULLS.

Mr. W. J. Ellis came in on the Trepassy train this morning from Bay Bulls where he was inspecting the construction of the plant of the Newfoundland-American Packing Co.

Hardy flowers should not have their winter covering until the ground has become frozen hard the idea being to prevent the ground around the flowers is bad for plants. Even home-made awnings and hammocks, if one cannot have any other kind, will add greatly to the comfort of a farm porch.

Doing Little Things Intelligently.

By RUTH CAMERON.

RUTH CAMERON

"A woman with an unusually intelligent and interesting face sat opposite us in the trolley the other day.

After she left the car, the Authorman, who had turned in his seat to watch her depart, said:

"Nice looking woman, wasn't she? And did you notice how intelligently she got off the car?"

"I notice that she had an interesting face," I said; "but I didn't realize that she got off the car intelligently. What do you mean?"

How to Get On a Car Intelligently

"In the first place she was at the door before the car stopped, thus saving her time and ours. In the second place she had a firm grip of the post so that she didn't lose her balance and step on someone's foot when the car stopped with a jerk. In the third place she looked for automobiles before she got off the car, and then after she got off made sure that the other side of the street was clear before she crossed it. I don't mean that she made any fuss about it, just did it all quickly and naturally. It's evidently a process she follows subconsciously because she's intelligent, and does things the right way. If you don't think there's any difference in the way people get off the car, just watch a few."

"I watched, and I had to admit that the Authorman was right.

Several women waited until the car stopped before they started down the aisle, others let themselves get caught midway by a jerky stop and spilled themselves all over the car. One stepped almost into the path of an automobile because she didn't look before she left the car. True, it was the driver's place to look out for her, but intelligent people are willing to do their share in such matters.

There is a right and wrong, an intelligent and an unintelligent, an accurate and a sloppy way to do every little thing.

Education, even when it does not train for any specific work, makes the brain react more intelligently on all the business of daily life.

Haven't you noticed that it is at the grade crossings in the poorer portions of the city where the less well educated people live that the most accidents occur?

Intelligence and Education Are Not Synonymous

Of course intelligence and education are not always synonymous. One may have a good deal of such intelligence without education. But education is a futile thing unless it forms and directs the daily intelligence.

Education may not give us more ammunition, but it teaches us to use what we have with a better aim. And not only when we turn our brains upon big problems, but even when we are dealing with the smaller relations and reactions of life.

South Carolina.

By GEORGE FITCH
Author of "At Good Old Swash"

South Carolina is a state of perpetual irritation situated between Georgia and North Carolina, and somewhere between the Revolution and the Civil War. It is the fighting state in the Union, and is the unsafest spot between the Atlantic and the Pacific in which to discuss the emancipation proclamation or to edit a newspaper with a trenchant pen.

South Carolina is about as big as the front yard of a Texas cattle king. It contains 30,000 square miles, is shaped like a five-cent cut of pie, and its population includes Republicans, Chinese, and Indians not taxed. The population is almost equally divided between whites and negroes, but one white Carolinian when he gnashes his teeth and draws in his breath with a low, hissing sound can make one hundred colored residents go away in search of rest and a change of climate without waiting for the next train.

South Carolina was settled about two hundred and fifty years ago, but has remained unsettled ever since. It has always been noted for its nervous disposition and its willingness to rise up and smite the universe on all occasions. The British were having an easy time in the Revolution when they struck South Carolina, but General Marion soon made them look like a Republican who has criticized General Lee in Charleston. The state helped win the Revolution, but threatened to take its doll things and go home in Jackson's administration, and in 1861 it opened the Civil War by seceding with a prodigious explosion. Later it contributed Tillman to the United States Senate and has listened to the uproarious results with pride ever since. South Carolina was severely shaken by an earthquake in 1885, but did not secede at that time.

South Carolina raises cotton, rice and sweet potatoes, and supplies turpentine and resin to the world at large.

It begins at the Atlantic Ocean in a modest way about six feet below high water, and for many miles inland is so moist that the farmers keep life belts handy on their wagons. It has many fine old towns, full of polite and chivalrous citizens, but the population peters out in the western mountains, where the people eat clay instead of ice-cream and lobster, and empty the hook worms out of their Sunday shoes by pounding the soles with a stick. There are three religions in the state—Protestant, Catholic, and States Rights.

Charleston, a beautiful petrified city on the seacoast, is the metropolis of South Carolina. The hope of the state is in its public schools, but the cotton mills, which are spreading all over it like a heavy rash, are driving hundreds of teachers out of employment.

DOBBIN COMING BACK

It looked as though the horse was doomed, the way the motor business boomed, and Dobbin, steed of sterling worth, prepared to tumble off the earth. Town dwellers tried to give away the surrey and the one-hoss shay, and every other wheeled machine that wasn't run by gasoline. And any man who drove a horse was looked on as a total loss; we wouldn't have him at the Country Club. His wife no longer would invite, when we had tea or euchre night. But we began to realize that he who drives a horse is wise, for no horse owner ever seen to fill his steed with gasoline. A horse eats hay, and hay is cheap; one bale in luxury will keep a charger for three days or five, no odds how hard a man may drive. But if you fill your car with hay, and try to run the thing that way, it will not wag its tail and ears, or go a foot in forty years. The owner of a car, alas, must blow his substance in for gas, and as the sparkling juice he pours, the fierce old price still higher soars.

DRINK PLENTY OF WATER.

Take plenty of exercise and drink plenty of water if your skin is colorless. To say that a long walk and drinking three pints of water will make any woman beautiful would be an exaggeration, but to promise that it will be a wonderful aid to the increasing of good looks is a perfectly true statement. Water properly taken will flush the system, carrying with it all the impurities which work such havoc with the complexion.

Drink the water between meals, a glass at a time, sipping it slowly. Have the water cool, not cold, as this latter reduces the temperature of the stomach to such an extent that digestion is impaired. If you have an absolutely colorless skin which no amount of exercise or water drinking will tinge with color you may wish to resort to the use of a harmless rouge.

Our grandmothers used beet rouge, which is absolutely harmless and can be made easily. Take a red beet and wash and dry it thoroughly. Then press it against a grater until all the juice is extracted. The liquid is then mixed with rice powder or starch until the desired color is obtained. Cover the mixture with a cloth to keep out the dust, and set it in the sun to dry. A few drops of oil of lavender or rose worked into the powder will make it adhere to the skin better, but if this is added the rouge will require a thorough sifting through muslin to make it smooth.

Another harmless rouge is made as follows: Carmine, 1-4 dram; sweet almond oil 1-2 dram; powdered magnesia, 1 ounce. To mix this properly, blend the carmine and magnesia and then slowly work in the oil. Force this preparation through coarse muslin several times, pressing out the lumps. It will be in powder form.

New silk petticoats have corset covers attached to them and made of silk. The smartest blouses have fullness springing from shoulder line or yoke.

GRAPHIC STORY OF BATTLE IN DETAIL.

London, June 6.—The Daily Chronicle publishes from the Glasgow Herald the following realistic description of the various phases of the battle of Jutland:

The first phase: 3.45 p.m., May 31.—Admiral Beatty's battle cruisers, consisting of the Lion, Princess Royal, Queen Mary, Tiger, Infexible, Indefatigable and New Zealand, were on a southeasterly course, followed at about two miles distance by the Queen Elizabeth.

Four enemy light cruisers were sighted and shortly afterwards the head of the German battle cruiser squadron, which consisted of the new cruiser Hindenburg, Seydlitz, Derfflinger, Lutzow, Moltke and possibly the Salamis.

Admiral Beatty at once began firing at a range of about 20,000 yards, which shortened to 16,000 as the fleets closed. The Germans could see the British distinctly outlined against the light yellow sky.

The Germans were covered by a haze, and could be but very indistinctly made out by our gunners. The Queen Elizabeth opened fire. One after another, as they came within range, the German battle cruisers turned to port and drew away to about 20,000 yards.

WHOLE HUN FLEET COMES.

The second stage—4.40 p.m.: A destroyer screen then appeared beyond the German battle cruisers. The whole German High Sea Fleet could be seen approaching on the north-eastern horizon, in three divisions, coming to the support of their battle cruisers. The German battle cruisers now turned right round 16 points and took station in front of the battleships of the High Sea Fleet.

Admiral Beatty, with battle cruisers and supporting battleships, therefore had before him the whole of the German battle fleet, and Admiral Jellicoe still some distance away. The opposing fleets were now moving parallel to one another in opposing directions, and but for master manoeuvring on the part of Admiral Beatty the British advance ships would have been cut off from Admiral Jellicoe's Grand Fleet.

ADMIRAL BEATTY'S STRATEGY.

In order to avoid this and at the same time prepare the way in order that Admiral Jellicoe might envelop his adversary, Admiral Beatty immediately also turned right round 16 points, so as to bring his ships parallel to the German battle cruisers and facing in the same direction. As soon as he was round, he increased to full speed to get ahead of the Germans, and take up a tactical position in advance of their line. He was able to do this owing to the superior speed of our battle cruisers. Just before the turning point was reached, the indefatigable sank, probably from striking a mine, and the Queen Mary and Invincible were also lost at the turning point, where, of course, the High Sea Fleet concentrated their fire.

A little earlier, as the German battle cruisers were turning, the Queen Elizabeth had in similar manner concentrated her fire on the turning point, and destroyed a new German battle cruiser, believed to be the Hindenburg. Admiral Beatty had now got round and headed away with the loss of three ships, racing parallel to the German battle cruisers. The Queen Elizabeth followed behind, engaging the main high sea fleet.

WARSPITE SURROUNDED.

The third phase, 5 p.m.—The Queen Elizabeth now turned short to port, 16 points, in order to follow Admiral Beatty. The Warspite jammed her steering gear and failed to get round, and drew the fire of six of the enemy, who closed in upon her.

I am not surprised that the Germans claim her as a loss, since on paper she ought to have been lost, as a matter of fact, though repeatedly straddled by shell fire, with water boiling up all round her, she was not seriously hit, and was able to sink one of her opponents.

Her captain recorded control of his vessel and brought her round and followed her consorts.

In the meantime the Barham, Valiant, and Malaya turned short, so as to avoid the danger spot, where the Queen Mary and Invincible had been lost, and for an hour, until Admiral Jellicoe arrived, fought a delaying action against the High Sea Fleet.

The Warspite joined them about 5.15 and all four ships so successfully manoeuvred in order to upset the spotting corrections of their opponents that no hits of a seriously disabling character were suffered. They had speed superior to their opponents by fully four knots, and were able to draw away from the part of the long line of German battle ships, which almost filled up the horizon.

At this time the Queen Elizabeth was steadily firing at the flashes of the German guns at a range which varied between 12,000 and 15,000 yards, especially against those ships which were nearest them. The Germans were enveloped in mist, and only smoke and flashes were visible. By 5.45 half of the High Seas Fleet had been left out of range and the Queen Elizabeth was steaming fast to join hands with Admiral Jellicoe. I must now return to Admiral Beatty's battle cruisers. They had succeeded in outflanking the German battle cruisers, which were therefore obliged to turn at full right angle to starboard to avoid being headed. Heavy fighting was renewed between the opposing battle cruiser squadrons, during which the Derfflinger was sunk, but towards 6 o'clock the German fire slackened very considerably, showing that Admiral Beatty's battle cruisers and the Queen Elizabeth had inflicted serious damage on their immediate opponents.

GRAND FLEET TO RESCUE.

The fourth phase, 6.06 p.m.—The Grand Fleet was now in sight coming up fast in three directions. The Queen Elizabeth and consorts altered their course four points to starboard, and drew in towards the enemy to allow Admiral Jellicoe to deploy into line. The Grand Fleet was perfectly manoeuvred, and the very difficult operation of deploying between the battle cruisers and the Queen Elizabeth was perfectly timed. Admiral Jellicoe came up and fell in behind Admiral Beatty's cruisers, and followed by the damaged, but still serviceable Queen Elizabeth, steamed right across the heads of the German fleet.

The first of the ships to come into action were the Revenge and Royal Oak with their 15-inch guns, and the Agincourt, which fired from her seven turrets with the speed almost of a maxim gun. The whole British fleet had now become concentrated. They had been perfectly manoeuvred so as to "cross the T" of the High Seas Fleet, and, indeed, only decent light was necessary to complete their work of destroying the Germans in detail.

The light did improve for a few minutes, and the conditions were favorable to the British Fleet, which was now in line approximately north and south across the head of the Germans. During the few minutes of good light, Admiral Jellicoe smashed up the first three of the German ships but the mist came down and the visibility suddenly failed, and the defeated High Seas Fleet was able to draw off in ragged divisions.

BRITISH GIVE CHASE.

The fifth phase—Night—The Germans were followed by the British, who still had them enveloped between Admiral Jellicoe on the west and Admiral Beatty on the north, and Evan Thomas, with his three Queen Elizabeths on the south. The Warspite had been sent back to her base during the night our torpedo boat destroyers heavily attacked the German ships, and, although they lost seriously themselves, succeeded in sinking two of the enemy.

Co-ordination of the units of the fleet was practically impossible to keep up, and the Germans discovered by the electric rays of their searchlights the three Queen Elizabeths not more than 4,000 yards away. Unfortunately they were then able to escape between the battleships and Admiral Jellicoe, since we were not able to fire as our own destroyers were in the way.

So ended the Jutland battle, which was fought as had been planned and was very nearly a great success. It was spoiled by unfavorable weather conditions, especially at the critical moment, when the whole British fleet concentrated and engaged in crushing the head of the German line. It was an action on our part of big guns, except of course, for the destroyers' work, since at a very early stage our big guns ceased to feel any anxiety from the German destroyers. The German small craft were rounded up by their British opponents, and soon ceased to count as an organized body.

WOMAN PATIENT FOR HOSPITAL.

A young woman named Susie Mills, aged 29 years, belonging to the Coultids, was brought to the city from Sydney by yesterday afternoon's express. She is suffering from a badly affected leg, caused by a severe hurt she received a few years ago. On arrival she was put on board the ambulance and conveyed to the General Hospital for treatment.

Killed in Action.

Captain Manning received an official communication from the Colonial Secretary yesterday confirming the report of the death of his son, Sergeant Manning. The gallant soldier, who was killed in action on June 1st, met his death through the bursting of a shell, which inflicted fatal injuries in the back and neck. The deceased soldier left here with the First Newfoundland Regiment and went through the Gallipoli campaign.

Volunteers and Reservists

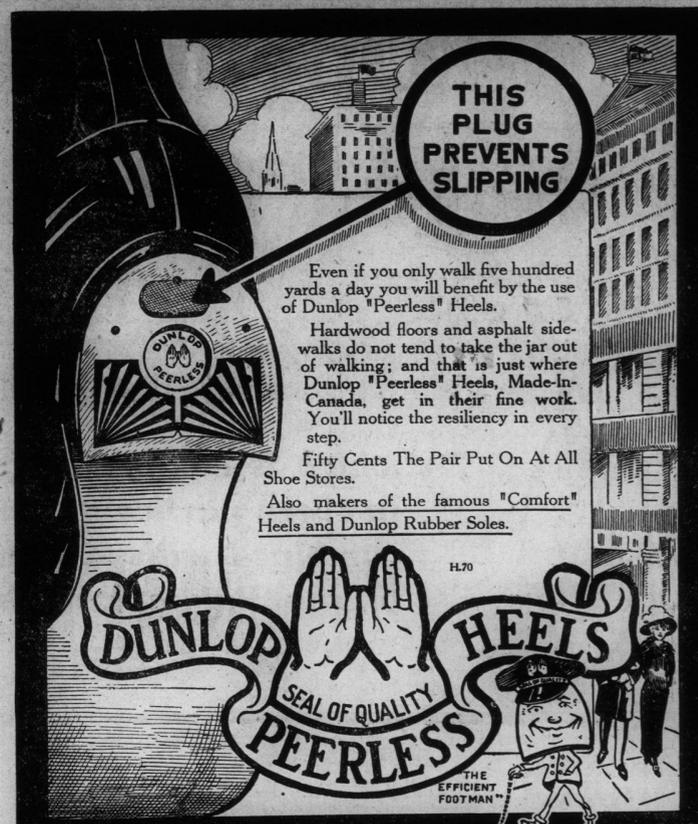

Parade To-morrow With C.C.C. Band. The Volunteers and Naval Reservists will be the guests of the Baseball League at to-morrow afternoon's big opening game at St. George's Field. His Excellency Sir Walter Davidson will review both immediately preceding the opening of the game which is set down for 5 o'clock. After the March Past, Mr. Gosling, Chairman of the Civic Commission, will throw over the first ball thus declaring the season formally open. The C.C.C. band (by kind permission of the officer commanding), have very kindly offered their services to Mrs. John Browning, and will render a specially prepared programme under the direction of Lt. Arthur Bulley. The competing teams will be the B.I.S. and Cubs, and with both nines consisting of purely local talent the game should be fast and exciting. In both lineups will appear some of the lads in khaki. The lady members of the W.P.A. will serve refreshments, etc., at popular prices, and as the entire proceeds of the game will be devoted to the new Soldiers' and Sailors' Club, the stalls will no doubt be liberally patronized.

At the Yarmouth Y. M. C. A. A Boys' Camp held at Tusket Falls in August, I found MINARD'S LINIMENT most beneficial for sun burn, an immediate relief for colic and toothache.

Death of M's. Ford Winsor.

The many friends of Mrs. Ford Winsor (nee Annie Payne), wife of Capt. Ford Winsor of the Central Fire Station, will hear with regret of her decease which occurred at her residence Fort Townshend, at 8 o'clock this morning. The deceased lady was born at Hr. Grace sixty-two years ago, and was a descendant of one of the pioneer families of the above time. Over two hundred years ago, the Paynes, according to the records, held a large portion of the land in Harbor Grace, in the western portion of the town, and many of them held high and responsible positions in the public service. Her late father Mr. George Payne, was connected with the Customs Department for many years, and subsequently taught school at Borewood. At the time of his demise he was the Nestor amongst the school teachers in the country. Her mother was one of the grand old families of the Cranes, of Upper Island Cove, and the Rev. George Crane, Church of England minister at Glasgow, Scotland, and Mr. Fenwick Crane, of Job Bros. office, St. John's, are cousins. For the past two years Mrs. Winsor had been in delicate health, but she bore all with true Christian fortitude and submission to the Will of God. Previous to her marriage she was school teacher at Exploits, and owing to her sweetness of disposition, her natural ability and her many other endearing qualities she won the affection and esteem of her pupils as well as the people in general. For years she was connected with the church choir both in Hr. Grace and Exploits, and her talent in this connection was fully recognized by the ministers and the congregations. She was ever ready to assist the poor and needy, and many will miss the kind words and helping hand of Annie Winsor. She has left a large family to mourn her loss, Mrs. John Dobbin, Mrs. Will Neal and her youngest daughter Mary in St. John's; Mrs. Collier, of Torbay; Mrs. Hulan, of St. George's; Mrs. Arthur West, of New York, and one son, Ford, in the employ of Hon. Geo. Knowling, besides brothers (George in New York), sisters, and a very large number of relatives and friends. Capt. Winsor has the sympathy of the people of St. John's, as well as the people generally in this country, in his sad bereavement, and the Telegram also joins in its heartfelt sympathy to the family and friends in this hour of their affliction. Requiescat in Pace.

"They Have Won, But They Don't Know It."

(By James Douglas, in the Sunday Pictorial, London).

James Douglas, in an imaginary interview with the Kaiser, has set out the real facts which justify the Kaiser in saying in his own secret heart of hearts, "The Allies have won." Let it be understood that my conversation with the Kaiser was carried on without a single eye-witness or ear-witness. It is possible that the Kaiser will deny that he ever received me. In that case it is his word against mine. Further, I wish to explain that I used a false name. The Kaiser alone knows it. I venture to predict that he will never reveal it. I was naturally forced to dissemble my love for the Kaiser and his brood. A single rash word might have cost me my life. Oddly enough, throughout the interview I did not feel a tremor or fear. Looking back upon the scene, I can scarcely believe that I possessed the hardihood to carry off my imposture. It was only after my safe return that I trembled at my audacity.

What Victories?

After a few conventional remarks about the weather, I congratulated the Kaiser upon his dazzling victories. He frowned. "Victories," he grunted gutturally. "What victories?" "Russia," said I, "is down and out." "I wish Hindenburg thought so," he retorted. "I wish Enver thought so. I wish I thought so. The Russians have so many men that they are sending legions to France." "Phantoms!" said I. "Do you believe in that old myth?" "Look at this," he cried, showing me a sheaf of photographs taken at Marseilles. "The camera cannot lie." "Do you forget your victories at Verdun?" I asked. "Forget them!" he screamed. "Am I likely to forget them? Are my people likely to forget them? My friend, when I die they will find the word Verdun graven on my heart. Harden told me yesterday that after the war he intends to change the title of his paper from Zukunft to Verdunft. Verdunft is the future of Germany. Do you know that Verdun has cost me 300,000 men?"

Turkey Triumphant!

"At any rate," said I, "Turkey is triumphant." "Optimist," he sneered. "Are you aware that old von der Goltz was murdered? Are you aware that the Russians have taken Erzerum and Trebizond, and before long they will cut the railway behind Bagdad? Do you know that the Turks are threatening to make peace if I do not send them more money, more men and more munitions?"

"But Bulgaria is immovable," I hinted. "You are right," he snarled bitterly. "Bulgaria refuses to move. That scoundrel Ferdinand is trying to sell me as he sold Serbia. My only comfort is that nobody would buy the Balkan Judas." "Roumania will soon join you," I remarked. "I do not care for your jests," he replied. "Roumania will rush to the rescue of the victor. I am tired of Roumania. She is the warometer of Europe. When she joins me I shall know I have won. Her motto is 'Wait and see.' The longer she waits the less hope I see."

Why the Kaiser is a Pessimist.

"I fear you have joined the Pessimists," said I. "I have been a Pessimist since the French won the Battle of the Marne, and banged, barred and bolted the door of the West in my face. My good sir, I am Sterne's starling. I can't get out of my iron cage." "The German Eagle caged!" I cried. "Impossible!" "Caged and starving to death!" growled the Kaiser. "Nonsense," said I. "You have plenty of food. Your organizations is the wonder of the world." "I'm organized to death," said the Kaiser. "My people are on rations." "They like it," I said. "The lower their diet the higher their spirit. Remember how long Paris held out in 1870. Your Brandenbursers can hold out for ever."

"Visionary!" he muttered. "A beleaguered city is one thing; a beleaguered empire is another. Seventy millions on short commons that grow shorter every day! I do not like to think of Paris. The comparison is odious. The cards of Providence are not all made in Germany. In 1870 we starved the French. In 1916 the English are starving us."

"But your submarines will soon starve the English into surrender. They cannot fight much longer." "Fairy tales!" said the Kaiser. "I know more about the English than they know about themselves. They are always strafing each other for being lukewarm and lethargic. Heavens! If they only knew what they have done to me!"

"What have they done?" I asked. "Ruined me!" said the Emperor. "They catch my submarines as fast as I send them out. Their seas are alive with devils. Have you heard of their...? The worst of it is that they never blab. Our submarines go out and never come back. It has got on my nerves. And my German pigs imagine that my undersea boats rule the waves! I dare not deceive them. They would kick me off my throne if they guessed the truth. And those infernal Yankees want me to abandon my last bluff. I must give up everything I haven't got! Bah!"

"Will you fight America?" I asked. "How can I fight a nation of a hundred millions? Do you think I'm mad?"

"The English are weary of the war," said I, mendaciously. "Rubbish!" said the angry man. "I know the English. They stick, and stick, and stick. They thrive upon disasters. They flourish on defeats. I pounded them at Ypres. They grieved again. They pretended to be downhearted, but they don't bam-

"You seem to admire the English," said I. "They are the greatest nation on earth," said Wilhelm. "They are also the wildest and craftiest. They duped me—even me! They duped me.
