PRINCE ARTHUR REACHES OTTAWA

His Royal Highness Receives an Enthusiastic Welcome to The Capital.

A BANKRUPT PROVINCE

The Maritime Provinces Eagerly Await Readjustment of Federal Indemnities.

OTTAWA, April 14.—(Special).—The Easter recess has brought quiet within parliamentary circles, but the city is all agog over the visit of Prince Arthur of Connaught. The people of the capital dearly love pomp and pageantry. One would have thought that the display in connection with the opening and closing of parliament would long ago have paled upon the citizens of Ottawa, but year after year as this function rolls round, densens of the capital with their country coats pack the Senate chamber. The governor-general is now a familiar figure on the streets of the capital, but Ottawa does not receive a prince of the royal blood every day and therefore the crowds that were out to get their first view of Prince Arthur were very great. ... Representing His Excellency and Sir Wilfrid Laurier and seven other members from the government, besides the general in chief, the chief of staff, the headquarters staff, a guard of honor was furnished by the 43rd Rifles. ... CONCESSIONS IN THE YUKON

The policy of the government in granting large concessions to favored friends in the Yukon was challenged in the house this week in connection with the arrangement in which Mr. Beaton, the member for Ottawa, got mixed up. Mr. Thompson, the member for Yukon, said the subject of concessions was a matter of all concessions which had been granted and still remaining most inequitable was the one known as the Brownson and Rays. This was investigated by a commission appointed by the government, consisting of Judge Britton and the late Benjamin Bell. It comprised a tract of land commencing two and a half miles from the mouth of Bonanza creek and extending up that stream for a like distance. This and other concessions were granted by the late Mr. Beaton, and Mr. Beaton, a well known mining expert, formerly of the geological survey. In order to keep the concession going Mr. Beaton put into the concession several hundred dollars of his own money and when he endeavored to recover from the principals through the courts then it was that all the facts came out. Mr. Beaton had bought the land from the principals and had taken care to have the house and quoted freely from letters and documents filed in the court at Dawson. The documents showed that the firm of Beaton and McDougall were to receive stock to the value of $100,000 in the company for their influence with the department in keeping the concession alive and for professional services. Although it may be, as contended by Mr. Beaton in the house, that nothing improper was contemplated by the agreement between the company and his firm, yet it raises in a most pointed manner the question of members of the house accepting fees for professional services in the promotion of bills before parliament or matters coming up before any of the public departments. Mr. Beaton, at St. John, said the practice was degrading to the public life of this country and was unfair to the legal profession. As far back as 1895 the Imperial parliament had laid down the principle that the offer of money or other advantage to any member of the house for the promotion of any matter whether impending or to be transacted in parliament is a high crime and misdemeanor and subversive of the British constitution. Repeatedly since then have the principles been restated by Premier Laurier quite concurred with. ... The new law laid down by Mr. Beaton, in his opinion, was a high crime and misdemeanor and subversive of the British constitution.

ROOSEVELT IN THE PUBLIC EYE

His Advocacy of the Curtailment of Big Fortunes Interests Britishers.

LIMIT TO BIG INCOMES

Same System is Said to Be in Practical Effect in England.

LONDON, April 16.—Most of the morning newspapers devote their leading articles to President Roosevelt's speech at the ceremony of the laying of the cornerstone of the new office building of the house of representatives at Washington on Saturday. Their comment generally is favorable to the president's words. In the view of the papers it was a bold speech, but only what was to be expected of President Roosevelt. His defense of public men appeals strongly to Englishmen. Too Much Popularity Mr. Roosevelt, the articles say, is commencing to suffer from too much popularity, and already comment and abuse are heard where a year ago not a single voice was raised against him. His outspoken words in the suggestion of a progressive tax to prevent any individual inheriting over a certain amount, the critics believe, will make him more enemies in America, but here, they say, the words do not sound dreadful, as England has what he is aiming at in an income tax combined with a system of graduation and a succession duty, which does not limit the amount an heir may inherit, but produces a big revenue from estates. Kaiser is Condemned Emperor William's telegram to Count Goluchowski, the Austro-Hungarian minister for foreign affairs, thanking him for the support of the Austrian representative of a loyal ally, and assuring him of "my rendering the same services on like occasion," is also loudly discussed, but where President Roosevelt is commended the emperor was severely censured. The passengers, amongst whom were Master Shaughnessy, son of Sir Thomas Shaughnessy, president of the C. P. R., and his tutor, are well. A SERIOUS PROBLEM IN IMMIGRATION Toronto Board of Trade Complainants of Dumping of Paupers in Canada. TORONTO, April 16.—The board of trade is taking up the question of the dumping of undesirable immigrants in Canada. A prominent member of the board, who returned here from England in March, forwarded to F. G. Morley, the secretary, clippings of the poor law guardians there as sending paupers to Canada. Mr. Morley was instructed by the board to bring the case of the paupers before the board of British newspapers reporting the matter to the attention of Sir Wilfrid Laurier. The Premier replied, stating that the complaint had been referred to the minister of the interior. The superintendent of immigration, W. P. Scott, wrote on April 12 that the complaint had been sent to the high commissioner in London. The board of trade followed the correspondence up by securing the co-operation of Dr. Sheard, medical health officer, who says that the arrival of "Helpless or Indigent Immigrants in Toronto is getting serious. Mr. Morley today received a letter from Dr. Sheard, furnishing a list of 67 persons of 11 nationalities who have been applied as indigents for hospital maintenance, chargeable to the city, since July 1, 1905. The letter reads: "The number of applicants for relief, other than hospital relief, who have been less than three months in Toronto, number 369. CASTRO'S RETIREMENT

Matter Does Not Appear to Be Clearly Understood in Venezuela.

WILLIAMSTED, April 16.—Passengers arriving here today from Venezuela say that the action of General Castro in resigning from the presidency in favor of Vice President Gomez is not clearly understood in Venezuela but the general opinion seems to be that his retirement is only temporary. General Castro has gone away as private citizen unattended and paying his fare on the railroad. His wife has gone another way, and the former president's sister arrived here today. The resignation of the Venezuelan president is also causing some speculation. The ministers retired when Castro gave up the reins of power, but Gomez has not appointed a new cabinet and therefore the old ministers have retained their portfolios.

On the other hand, Castro's followers are scattering, leaving the capital in different ways.

At Caracas the political atmosphere has completely changed as is apparent on all occasions. The opinions expressed here, the nearest point to Venezuela are equally conflicting. The Venezuelans, as a rule, are reticent when questioned on the subject. They generally say that Castro is sick, but they hesitate to give their opinion of his retirement from the presidency.

VEUVIUS CEASES SIGNS OF ACTIVITY

Volcano Has Spent Itself and Is Now Covered With Smoke Pall.

DEVASTATION IS COMPLETE

Ten Years Will be Required to Bring Desert Under Cultivation Again.

NAPLES, April 13.—The period of danger has passed, and only extreme desolation and slowly declining panic remains. Mount Vesuvius has ceased to show any signs of life. The lava flow seems to have spent itself in an enormous convulsion. Director Matteucci, who heroically holds his position in the observatory, believes that the eruption has ended, and every outward indication confirms this view. No more rumblings come from the bowels of the earth, giving terrifying warning to the inhabitants. The volcano is hidden behind a thick curtain of smoke, which rises from the crater and then spreads in a vast circle, enveloping a vast circle within semi-darkness. Naples is just beyond this circle, and today the city was bathed in sunshine, while the ugly black pall hung to the westward over a belt midway between Rome and Naples. Vesuvius today all over Naples, and although above the city the usual gray cloud is discernible, the fall of ashes has almost entirely ceased. Ashes, however, continued to fall through the night, adding several inches to the accumulation in the streets. Nearly 6000 people are employed in clearing the roofs and main thoroughfares. Gangs of men are engaged in piling the ashes in the middle of the narrow streets, which makes the passage of vehicles exceedingly difficult and obnoxious to the discomfort of pedestrians. The Neapolitans have become to a certain degree sun worshippers. One day they are plunged in the depths of despair because the sun was obscured by falling ashes, and the next day their spirits are buoyant for the sun shines and no ashes are sprinkling over Naples. Today the inhabitants of Naples are particularly happy, for not only is the sun shining brightly, but the air is clear of ashes and invigorating, with the result that automobile coats and goggles in ash storm costumes have been replaced by the usual gray-colored apparel. People are driving about in open carriages, and so much color returned to the surroundings that the grayness of the buildings, palms and other objects covered in ash makes a pleasant contrast with the sapphire-tinted sea. Several men apparently have braved the terrors of the lava wastes of lava about the royal observatory on Mount Vesuvius. One of them returned here and gave an account of the most interesting conversation which he had with Professor Matteucci, director of the observatory, who was in a very hopeful mood when Vesuvius left him. The professor said: "Very little is known of the volcanic forces, so we can only safely predict what is going to happen."

THE OLYMPIC GAMES.

BELLES ALL POPULAR

which represent the monster clearly outlined against the sky. This smoke and ashes by day and fire by night. Today not the slightest outline is visible of the crater or of foothills, all being swallowed up in dense black pall. There is the same obscurity tonight, unrelieved by flames or reflected light, such as are seen during other periods. Vesuvius quietest is picturesque, but active or smoldering it is terrible only in its blackness and in the noise of the lava.

AN UNCANNY PHENOMENON

The sun, though shining, was invisible. Its light seemed to come through smoked glass, shedding a sickly glare upon whitened vegetation. Everything was covered with a thin white powder. The locomotives were coated as though they had plowed through ash. The houses were covered with a fine dust, and dripping with mud, and people were busy on the roofs shovelling off the snow. In the Shanghai riots a foreigner was killed, although a more or more natives lost their lives in the hands of foreigners, and forty or more were injured. At Liang the Chinese were killed, and three English killed, and a day or two ago a Chinese lives in a wild stampede made them to escape through the city gates. The reports say that the foreigners were coming to destroy their

PICTURES OF WAR

"O KATA SAN OF NIPPON DENJI"

ON an arid August day O Kata came limping over a deep-rutted road and sat beside me; his comrades, bandaged and with coagulated blood and caked dust on them, staggered on to where a red-cross flag flew over a wretched hut. The heat-haze covered all.

Indistinct in its steamy mist flames fared high beyond the castellated city wall, the sentry thirty feet of brick and cement built by Manchu spear-men centuries before. Dimly seen in the pitiless glare fire-flashes gave place to whips of white smoke as hundreds of shells broke over the towered gates, the city, screaming, twanging like the snapping of wires magnified a thousand fold, howitzers hurled missiles from batteries buried in waving mist, masked cunningly beyond vision of the enemy's balloons or his look-outs on the high hills; field-guns flashed and whizzed from the mazes of trenches to redoubts and trenches beyond the plain.

On the sands of the river, now nearly dry, the marquee of the surgeons showed plainly, the canvas showing boldly against the field of glaring yellow sand. Banders concentrated there, bringing blood-spattered men to rest with a tissue of oiled paper between them and the caustic sand until surgeons, blood-smear'd and wearied, washed the torn flesh, probed the wounds and bound new linc about them. At the foot-hills, amongst the burial-mounds about the wrecked temple, huddling forms in khaki crawled nearer the entanglements whose wires glittered in the bright sunlight; they crept nearer the trenches where faint-seen forms in steel-grey showed at intervals.

Ten miles of trenches spluttered lead. No smoke indicated the riflemen, only a rumbling roll, now soft, then roaring with intervals of staccato sputtering. The huddling forms in khaki of men almost indiscernible because of the similarity of uniform and the sun-parched land, scattered groups of men the sunlight glimmering on their bayonets like flashes of distant heliographs. Faint, in intervals, were the whips of these fighting-men sound, their mad war-cries drowned in agonised shrieks, death-screams of impaled men dying horribly on stakes in the night; the wild "hanza" obtained the cries of those whose flesh was torn from them by cruel barbs of secret of the riflemen, only a sun-scattered plain; mimes exploded into a confused mass of men, the mangled dead—the whole atmosphere pulsated with the tumult of war: the rifles made their way with the myriad noises of battle.

Back over the dust-filled roads torn by lumbering carts and heavy guns. The custom was still and between the lifeless, litter-laden ways of the men plodded by me, the life's blood of victims, the mangled dead, the mangled dead—the whole atmosphere pulsated with the tumult of war: the rifles made their way with the myriad noises of battle.

ONE FINE ASSET.

That Victoria has one fine asset as an attraction for tourists and pleasure seekers was demonstrated Friday when on the occasion of the Good Friday holiday the departure of the E. & N. morning train was delayed for over an hour, so great was the crowd of passengers, until more coach accommodation could be arranged for. The Mecca for the travelers, who were equipped in nearly every instance with rod and reel, were the splendid fishing grounds up the line. In a few hours they would be transported to scenes of sylvan beauty, far from the maddening crowd's ignoble strife, and given opportunity to whip stream and lakes in pursuit of the seductive trout at points which cannot be equaled for their sport-giving qualities anywhere on the continent of America so adjacent to a city the size of Victoria. This close proximity of fine hunting and fishing grounds is something which is not adequately appreciated by the average Victorian. It requires no prophetic eye to note that when the big C. P. R. tourist hotel is in operation, Vancouver Island, with its innumerable lake and mountain retreats, where fish and game abound, will be thronged at almost all seasons of the year with ardent sportsmen, attracted hither from all quarters of the globe. Victoria has an asset in this feature of the island's attractions, the importance and value of which is not properly estimated. The newly formed "Advancement Club" will find in the island's attractions for the sportsman and pleasure-seeker a theme upon which it would be profitable to dwell at a very considerable extent in all attempts to "boost Victoria."

WAR CLOUDS AGAIN.

A German official announcement that the government is unable to recommend a Russian loan to the German market is exciting attention in all the European capitals. There is widespread opinion, despite an official intimation that no political consideration is involved, that Germany's refusal is intended as a snub in return for Russia's failure to support Germany at the Algiers conference. The St. Petersburg correspondent of the Telegraph depicts the situation of which the German refusal is an indication in quite an alarming manner. He says: "Clouds are again fast gathering over Europe. The fair weather which the Algiers conference was expected to bring about is further off than before, for the cause of restlessness, which hindered normal tranquility until then, not only continues operative, but has increased in intensity, and now two great empires are looking askant at each other. Germany, resolved to make herself heard, is deliberately upsetting Europe's political arrangement, with results which may become much graver and far-reaching than is generally anticipated. Every power which contributed to isolate Germany at Algiers has been or is being punished more or less." Her punishment, according to the correspondent, is this sudden and insidious change of attitude. The correspondent dwells at great length upon Germany's disabbling act in refusing to recommend a Russian loan. The Berlin correspondent of the Tribune records the satisfaction of the German Russophobes at the refusal, and their tendency to regard it as an international snub, but other correspondents at Paris and Berlin represent the German attitude as being due to Germany's own serious need of money, both for the empire and Prussia, the latter alone wanting $100,000,000. Germany's contribution to the Russian issue was to have been nearly equivalent to this sum. The total issue will now be reduced by that amount and the operation confined to Paris, London, New York, Brussels and Amsterdam.

THE MUNICIPAL TELEPHONE.

Discussing a statement attributed to Mr. Henniker Heaton, M. P., in which he proposes a telephone for every house at the cost of a shilling a week, the Montreal Gazette says there is no prospect of realizing this dream and states that a telephone service at $12 a year is a commercial impossibility, though it meets acceptance among those who do not know any better, and among those who believe that government control of telegraphs and telephones has been a success in Great Britain. It is true, says the Gazette, that they carefully omit any reference to the efficiency of the service supplied. As a matter of fact, but if it did not have the national treasury behind it, it would have been hopelessly bankrupt long ago. It is, indeed, almost as striking an example of the inability of governments to conduct a business enterprise as the Intercolonial railway. A return made to parliament the other day and covering the operations of the post office telegraphs, which includes telephones, supplies all the proof necessary for this assertion. According to this return the earnings of the department for the year ending March 31st, 1905, were $10,078,952. To earn this amount necessitated an expenditure for operation alone of $23,553,842, a deficit of $13,474,890. In other words to earn a dollar the British telegraph and telephone system spent $1.24. If the amount of the interest charge on the capital invested in the department were added, the cost of earning a dollar of revenue would be increased to $1.38. And if a reasonable allowance be made for depreciation, the cost of earning a dollar would be easily $1.50. This condition of affairs is absolutely startling. Yet it is being held up to us by those who do not know any better as ideal.

There are those, however, who while cognizant of the actual state of affairs, excuse it by claiming that the rates charged are so much lower than those in effect in this country. So far as the telephone service goes there is no truth in this statement. The man in London, for instance, must pay the post office 45 per cent for his telephone and a penny for each call he makes. If the person he wants more than two miles away he pays 2d. For an unlimited service he has to pay $17 per annum. Toll line charges appear low, but are deceptive. Thus, for a five-minute conversation with a person a subscriber to the National Telephone company, residing 120 miles away, the charge would be 3s. 3d. about 80 cents. The same conversation with Ottawa would cost a Montreal man 80 cents. The same thing is true of the telegraph charges. The rate is 6d for the first twelve words, and a half-penny for each subsequent word. Out of these 12 words must come the address of the receiver, and unless a person is in business, and has a registered address, this means that most of the 6d goes for what the Canadian company sends free of charge. Thus the name and address of the receiver, and the name of the sender might easily take up the whole of the twelve words allotted, leaving the receiver to pay a cent a word for the actual message, and bringing the total cost up to just about what a Canadian company would charge. As a matter of fact considering the density of the population and the comparatively short distances, the British telegraph charges should only be half of those charged in Canada, for the telegraph, unlike the telephone, shows decreases in operating expenses as the volume of business increases. A Canadian charge of double the British charge can be very easily justified when the higher cost of labor, equipment, capital and taxation is taken into consideration.

FRENCH AND GERMAN ARMIES.

Appropos of "certain boasts in the French press," the semi-official Continental Correspondence (Berlin) takes occasion to call attention to the German army's points of superiority. The year-books put the French military establishment in time of peace at 613,000 men against Germany's 594,000. The "active army and reserves" of Germany, however, foot up to 2,200,000, against France's 1,625,000. The Germans spend more money on the army than the French do, says the Correspondence, and hence the German soldier is less often in the hospital and the army is more efficient. The proportion of combatants and non-combatants in these armies, too, stands in favor of Germany, and many other points are cited in which the German soldier may be considered superior. We are told, to his Gallic counterpart. Indeed, it is almost amusing to see the manner in which the fighting forces of the republic, like children standing back to back, and sometimes even rising on tip-toe to compare their heights. Of the average expenditures in France and Germany we read:

"The German expenditure on the army of late years has been approximately $40,000,000 more than the French. This extra expenditure is to be attributed not only to the greater number of men, but also to the more careful provision made for each individual. Germany spends in feeding, clothing and providing for the health of each soldier more than $70, while France spends only a little over $55. The extra cost for Germany is money well spent, for there are only a quarter as many invalids among German soldiers during their military service as among French. The better health of the German soldier is naturally of the utmost importance in case of war, because healthy men will be able to endure great hardships. The army too will be in better working condition, when composed of strong and healthy men."

In numbers also the Germans are practically superior to the French, we are informed, in infantry, cavalry and artillery. Thus: "While the French army in time of war would be subject to heavy losses on account of sickness, it is also to be noticed that whereas in the French army there is one non-combatant to every 19 combatants, the proportion in Germany is only 1 to 27. This would naturally tend to increase again the numerical superiority of the German army in the field." "With regard also to the peace strength, the French are behind the Germans in all arms of the service. In the infantry and the cavalry the Germans are superior to the French by a tenth each, in the artillery by two and a half tenths and in the engineer troops by as many as three and a half tenths." Among some statistics and other details relating to the French army, recently published by General Langlois, of the chief military council of France, the assertion was made that the quality of the French artillery service was superior to that of the German. This the Continental Correspondence denies, and adds that the German army is better officered than the French. To quote: "The French are fond of asserting that in the important arm of artillery they have a qualitative superiority, because they have better guns at their disposal. Whether this is a fact or not can not be discussed here, but it may be pointed out that in 1896 the Austrians had a much better cannon, and in 1870 the French a better rifle, than the Prussians or the Germans. But in spite of both defeated. It was especially evident with the latter that the better quality of the weapon is of no avail when the training is deficient. In this respect, however, the German artillery should be superior to the French, just as in 1870 the German infantry was better trained in marksmanship and fire discipline."

"A word in conclusion on the officers of the two armies. The German officers are subject to strict discipline, for it is impressed on the youngest officer that he who would command must first learn to obey. In France quite recently some officers had to be punished on account of disobedience to commands from superiors. This is a scandal quite impossible in Germany."

A BRITISH ESTIMATE OF A CANADIAN POET.

Not long ago the Colonist contained an editorial review of the published poems of William Wilfrid Campbell in a collected form. Its estimate of his poetical genius was a high one, and we are glad to note that it has been backed up by so good an authority as the London Standard. In fact, the opinions of the Standard are much more laudatory of Mr. Campbell's work than were those which the Colonist expressed. In its issue of March 2 it says:

Wilfrid Campbell is a name known to far too few English readers of poetry. It is the name of a Canadian poet, a real poet, the most stirring of whose songs are inspired by as fine a spirit of Imperialism, as patriotic a fervor, as any writer within the confines of the Empire has shown us. Messrs. Fleming H. Revell Company have now published his collected poems, of which we should like to see an authentic English edition receive general attention in this country. Mr. Campbell's message is not for Canada alone, deep-rooted as is his devotion to the splendid land that gave him birth; it is a message to British men and women the world over, from Ottawa to Delhi, from Vancouver to the Cape. It hits the fire and zest in it which belong to the highest kind of young life, born of the early days of great nations. Chaste as Galahad, but throbbing with the splendid virility of youth, the soaring idealism of the ardent patriot, it is a message of which we have a need here in the ancient centre of a world-wide dominion. These songs come from the banks of the Ottawa River; they bring a gift to London, they merit a glad hearing in England.

New York holds a golden door open to Canadian writers, with promises of an audience seventy million strong, and favors in proportion. Few can resist the invitation. Some who have accepted it have besought Wilfrid Campbell to follow them, and even to forewarn in his writings the inspiration of Imperialism, on commercial grounds. Every man to his taste and conscience. This poet has another way, and he adheres to it steadfastly, bidding quietly in his Canadian home, and choosing to follow the dictates of his heart, though they should never fill his purse. British readers the world over should see to it that the Canadian poet does not suffer for his loyalty. They as well as he will be the gainers.

But the poet himself would probably not thank the present reviewer (to whom his collected work comes as something of a revelation) for devoting space to his personality. The work is the thing, and in this book of collected poems we have it in rare quality and unstinted measure. The volume of it, as well as the fine inspiration of this work, has astonished the critics on the other side of the Atlantic and delighted a comparatively few upon this side who have learned to know it. Mr. Andrew Carnegie has purchased five hundred copies of the work, a compliment which means far more than mere compliment. It is, indeed, a rare compliment to Canada to have such a tribute to her writers from such a source of undoubted authority, and what is a compliment and honor to Canada is a still greater honor to the poet himself.

THE TOURIST ASSOCIATION.

When the Tourist Association was established in 1901, the following were the objects that were set forth and decided upon:

A thorough canvass of the city for subscriptions;

The preparation of advertising matter covering the attractions of the city and the island;

The establishment of a bureau of information;

The encouragement of lines of buses to the different places of resort.

The advertising of fishing at points easily reached, and the restocking of lakes and rivers for fishing purposes;

The arranging of home weeks for British Columbians on the lines carried out in Eastern Canada;

The holding of conventions in the city of the various organizations;

The advertising of our registered temperatures in eastern points;

To secure regular band concerts during the summer months;

To agitate for cleaner streets and better roads;

To induce citizens to make their surroundings more attractive.

To induce hotelkeepers and others in the business to cater to the tourist trade;

To secure the insertion in eastern publications of matter in relation to the city and the island;

To secure the co-operation of people everywhere throughout the city and the island with reference to the general objects set forth in the foregoing.

The foregoing is a pretty general statement of the objects of the Tourist Association and a pretty good statement of everything that is at present proposed.

Interest in the subject has been revived by the agitation for a 100,000 club. On Friday morning we intimated the lines which should be adopted in supplementing the work at present so successfully carried on by the Tourist Association.

The first of these is the encouragement of home industry. We are all of us inclined to buy things outside of the city on the score of cost. That is to say, if we can buy a thing cheaper abroad than at home we will do it. As a matter of fact we will pay for foreign things in preference to home-made articles every time. We have an idea that American hams, for instance are better than Victoria hams. We don't know quite why that is the case but it is an impression nevertheless. There is an absolute prejudice against home-made things. We forget that every dollar spent in industry in Victoria is a dollar which has its ramifications in a hundred ways in benefiting the city. The 100,000 club has for its purpose the creation of a sentiment in favor of buying what we can in Victoria other things being equal—in fact favoring the home industry wherever it is possible.

Now, we come to the consideration of new industries. The special duty of the reorganized club will be to ascertain in what lines industry can be expanded. We are simply going to suggest one industry, in which we believe there is great potentiality, viz. the woollen industry. There is a market in British Columbia for certain lines of coarse wools, such as blankets, mackintosh, woollen shirts, etc. When Turner, Beeton & Co. started out in the manufacturing of overalls and shirts they had all kinds of opposition to face. But they have made it a success, because there is a legitimate opening for the goods they manufacture. We believe that in course woollen goods there is a similar opening. We can import from Australia cheap wool and mix it with the home-grown product.

The question of the improvement of the city is one that may reasonably be considered. We believe that it is possible by the use of modern methods to greatly improve the facilities we have in regard to streets. We believe that it is possible to inaugurate a system of public improvements that will give us good streets at a minimum of cost. This is a matter which the 100,000 club can consider carefully.

We have on previous occasions advocated making Victoria an educational centre. It does not mean a university in this city, so much as the building up of schools after the model of Eton and Harrow. We shall never have the British Columbia university in this city, but we can have private schools that will be a great deal more to us.

In a word, it is possible to make Victoria such a centre of business and educational activity that will make it the principal place on the Pacific coast.

REVIVAL OF WOODEN PAVEMENT

Ratepayers of Victoria who have now the question of street improvement before them will be much interested in an article appearing in the Literary Digest respecting "The Revival of Wooden Pavement." In the old American pavements, we are told in The Municipal Journal and Engineer (New York), the wooden blocks were laid on a plank foundation, with tar or paving cement between the joints. As they were not made waterproof or treated to prevent decay, they either swelled and caused the pavement to buckle, or else the wood broomed off at the edges and became soft and uneven. Under these circumstances the cobblestones, which took the place of these pavements, were regarded as an improvement. The writer goes on: "The modern wood pavement is entirely different. The cross-sectioned blocks, . . . which are now being laid in New York, are thoroughly impregnated with a mixture of crocote and resin, . . . and nothing but heart long-leaf pine is employed. The specification provides that 'after treatment, the blocks shall show such waterproof qualities that after being dried in the oven at a temperature of 100 degrees for a period of twenty-four hours, weighed, and then immersed in clear water for a period of twenty hours and weighed, the gain in weight shall not be greater than three per cent.' This is regarded as demonstrating the value of the resin in the mixture, the purpose being to keep water out of the block and prevent the washing out of the preservative, crocote. The foundation of the wooden pavement calls for four and one half inches of Portland-cement concrete, over which is spread a half-inch bed of cement mortar, struck to a true surface exactly parallel to the finished surface of the pavement. Wood blocks, usually eight inches long by four inches wide and three and one-half inches deep, are bedded in this cement with the grain vertical. Sand is then brushed over the street and left for a few days to be ground into the surface of the blocks by traffic, also filling up the joints. Treated in this way, the blocks offer much resistance to the effects of traffic, the wear upon the end grain of the wood being trifling as compared with what happens to flat-laid timber."

The first street in the United States to be paved in this way, we are told, was Tremont street, Boston, in the year 1900. Since 1902 measurements show a depression of only about one-eighth of an inch, most of which, it is claimed, is due to compression, and not to wear. The advocates of the new wood pavement believe that it excels in durability, sanitary and antiseptic qualities, the facility with which it can be cleaned and repaired, its non-slipping surface, and its relative freedom from noise. The writer concludes: "Vehicles pass over this smooth surface without any rattle or bang; blows from horses' hoofs, instead of making a sharp metallic sound, cause only dull hollow thuds as on a dirt road. In fact, the silence of this pavement is among the leading claims made in its behalf. Broadway, New York city, is now to be laid with it from the Battery to Vesey street, a length of 2,870 feet."

DISTRIBUTION OF HEMP BEED.

President of Minnesota Company Writes on Subject.

The secretary of the New Westminster board of health is in receipt of the following letter:

New York, March 28, 1906. Mr. A. E. White, Secretary New Westminster Board of Health, New Westminster, B. C.

Dear Sir—I have your favor of the 22nd inst., and thank you for the kind offer of assistance of your board in the distribution of hemp seed among the farmers. I am under the impression that an understanding was come to between our superintendent, Mr. Chas. H. Weicht, and Mr. Henry Bosa, in regard to the conduct of this business, and I am writing to Mr. Weicht at our mill in Northfield, Minn., sending him your letter and asking him whether he can avail himself of your offer. Upon receipt of his answer I will communicate further with you, but the main point on which we at present are assisting is that of getting the hemp when grown, shipped to our mill in Northfield, and inasmuch as it would be to the advantage of the Great Northern railway to obtain this industry in your district, especially in view of the probability of the long haul cost which would be out of the finished fibre, I should imagine that they ought to be willing to haul free of charge this season to our mill at Northfield, Minn., the few roads of hemp stalk which your farmers are likely to grow. Probably you can make more impression on them in this direction than we can, and if you will kindly take it up, I shall be glad to hear what progress you are able to make. You doubtless appreciate that we could not afford to perform a mill for the manufacture of this article until we had found by this year's experience whether the crop was suitable for its maintenance.

Arthur of Connaught Reaches the Chicago of the North.

Fort William, Ont., April 13.—Despite the unfavorable condition of the weather, some 2000 out of the 11,000 citizens of Fort William turned out this morning to welcome Prince Arthur of Connaught, and a right hearty welcome he received on his first visit to the Chicago of the North.

The Glanders Outbreak

Hon. Sydney Fisher Fully Explains Reasons For Stringent Measures Adopted.

HON. Sydney Fisher, on being interviewed regarding the reported prevalence of glanders in horses in British Columbia, stated that the disease had, during the past (and winter, affected a considerable number of horses in Vancouver and the Okanagan valley, while small isolated outbreaks had been detected and dealt with in various other parts of the Pacific province.

of only such horses as show clinical symptoms. Under the latter policy, in spite of all efforts, the number of horses killed each year shows a steady increase, no progress whatever being made in the work of eradication.

The following extract from a review of the report of the British board of agriculture, which appeared in the London Lancet on July 15 last, voices clearly the opinion of the best authorities in Britain.

"Glanders is admittedly on the increase, and it is time that some radical measures were taken to control the disease. In 1894 there were only 502 outbreaks, but in 1904 there had increased to 1,522, and 2,658 horses were killed as glandered. More power ought certainly to be given to the veterinary inspectors to test the in-contact horses with mallein, as by this agent an almost infallible diagnosis can be made within 24, or at most 48 hours.

"Glanders is a most dangerous and infectious disease, and with which one can not especially under modern conditions be controlled by half measures. The system now followed in Canada is approved of by all the highest veterinary authorities in the civilized world, while the rate of compensation authorized by parliament is much more generous than that prevailing in any other country."

It is, of course, impossible to enforce sanitary measures of any kind without inflicting more or less inconvenience and hardship upon some individuals, but on the other hand, these individuals, and with them, many others, would eventually suffer greater loss if animals plagued were permitted to spread unchecked.

The most serious source of danger to the Canadian horse lies in the continuous importation of infected animals from the western states. While inspection at the boundary is enforced, it is in many cases, impossible to detect the existence of glanders without the existence of mallein. Although considerable inconvenience to importers would result, it would almost appear as if it would be necessary to make provisions for the testing of all horses introduced from the western states.

When the presence of glanders is detected in a stable, the diagnosis is generally verified by the mallein test, although the new plan satisfactory progress has been made, and while the expense is likely to be heavy for a heavy year, he has no doubt that, by consistently following the present methods, most gratifying results will eventually be obtained.

The system pursued is as follows: When the presence of glanders is detected in a stable, the diagnosis is generally verified by the mallein test, although the new plan satisfactory progress has been made, and while the expense is likely to be heavy for a heavy year, he has no doubt that, by consistently following the present methods, most gratifying results will eventually be obtained.

Another serious danger lies in the facility with which, under modern conditions of transportation, numbers of horses may be moved from place to place. While in communities where they are not so numerous, the introduction of glanders may be long delayed, there is always serious risk in any place where the supply of horses is obtained from outside points.

EVERYBODY who handles a needle with any degree of skill, hard as it may be, says, embroidering linen belts. For the craze for linen belts, and, incidentally, for the craze for the narrow width—the craze for the narrow width—all the way round. But a belt that must be crushed down into the buckle is in almost no time, so that those narrower in front are a long way more satisfactory.

Most of them are made rather wide in the back, shaping down to just about the right width to fit into the buckle in front, although a few are the narrow width—the wide-all the way round. But a belt that must be crushed down into the buckle is in almost no time, so that those narrower in front are a long way more satisfactory.

Even work—those new ones of linen—have initials or monogram set upon the inside; and some odd belts have a little pocket set on one side, with the monogram embroidered upon the flap. Upon lingerie, monogram-marking is becoming a positive fact. And upon handkerchiefs the quaintest effects are got by the blocking out, in a delicate shade of color, a place for the monogram, the letters themselves and a lot of accompanying scroll-work—everything light, and executed with the utmost delicacy of course—done in the finest white thread.

In jewelry, the fashion has expressed itself in scores of ways, one of the most interesting being a round bit of silver, blocked with the initials cut in relief, and set in a ring. It is here that each letter tortured out of all resemblance to itself, looking like some Eastern character, but "you know what it is, starting at you."

The Proper Care of a Child of Two Years

FROM the twenty-fourth to the thirtieth month many sentences and words are usually added to the child's vocabulary, so that by the time he is two and a half years old he can say almost everything. If by this time he does not talk at all, but is unable to use his hands, there is some cause to fear that he is a mental defective.

At this age the child generally becomes much attached to his "mother" and will like to be shown the pictures and hear the rhymes. Some children are especially bright at learning these rhymes.

While it is very wrong to overstimulate the little brain, it is now to spend a quarter or a half hour every day in teaching him some of the little kindergarten finger plays and songs.

The Etiquette That Women Expect From Men

By Eleanor B. Clapp

A GOOD dress is a good address. A good dress is the game of life of many women, and it is here that they will avail themselves of the "new" and "manner" count for a great deal in a man's make-up. Only a millionaire can afford to wear a shabby coat, and even he, if he be well bred, will not do so except in the privacy of his own apartments.

When a young man first begins to go about there are certain little points that occasionally puzzle him. For society, while it allows him great latitude in many ways, has declared that there are certain things he must and must not do under any circumstances.

No man who is a gentleman ever smokes in the presence of ladies without first asking if they object to it. He should always allow a woman to precede him in going through a doorway which he holds open for her whenever possible—in going up or down stairs, or on nearly every occasion when she is in his company.

When he escorts ladies to the theatre or to a concert he lets them pass in front, but after joining them he takes the lead for a moment, gets the programmes, and gives the coupons to the usher. After which he falls behind his companion, walking down the aisle. But if, as is sometimes the case, no usher is to be found near the entrance, the man of the party should precede the ladies down the aisle until the usher comes to his assistance or the seats are found. And naturally, when he is escorting a lady, it would be entirely indefensible rudeness for him to go out between the acts.

In walking down the aisle of a church, on the contrary, he always follows the lady. It is permissible for a young man to ask permission to call on a young lady, but rarely avails himself of this privilege, as the majority of men consider it better to write her until they are invited to do so—either the young lady herself or her mother or chaperon. A call should be made on ladies between four and six in the afternoon or after eight in the evening, arriving not later than nine o'clock. If it is a young man's first call at a house, or a call made in return for hospitality, he should ask to see the ladies, sending up one card for each by the servant, unless he is at once ushered into the drawing room where the family are seated.

When he calls upon a feminine friend to dinner, he must make himself visible to her throughout the meal. He is also privileged to talk to his neighbor on the left, even if his hostess has had no opportunity of introducing them. A gentleman rarely offers his arm to a lady when walking with her on the street in the daytime, unless she is very young or feeble, or in some dire way in need of his support. For several years it has been the custom for a young girl and her escort to walk side by side in the evening instead of arm in arm, but lately it is becoming more the mode for a gentleman to offer his arm to a lady to either walk beside her or to accept his arm. If he offers it, she may shake hands with his hostess with a gloved hand.

At a formal dinner party the young man must offer his right arm to the lady whom he has been asked to take to dinner. He must make himself visible to her throughout the meal. He is also privileged to talk to his neighbor on the left, even if his hostess has had no opportunity of introducing them. Women's Ways of Earning Money

By Cynthia Westover Alden

ONE of the best actresses on the stage, and one of the oldest living stars, says that she has never seen a woman who wants to get into the dramatic profession, if the work is entirely new to her, to attend a preparatory school, and she suggests that no girl take even this first step unless she has shown decided talent for acting.

She says it is not a bad idea to join a good stock company, for there is nothing so advancing as actual experience obtained before the public, where the performances are by professionals as "business in hand." It is difficult to get into a good stock company. Be introduced to the manager, or ask for an interview. Keep asking until you get it. Sometimes you will have a trial, sometimes you will not.

The salary will be small to begin with, but the student will make much of it. She can gain an enormous amount of experience by observing how others treat their parts.

Each manager has his own rules as to salaries. From playing for experience alone the money received runs into thousands, as a rule.

Mrs. W. G. Jones, of New York, "requires much magnetism in a good actress, fall while a little girl who knows little besides her role, may carry her audience by storm, simply because of her personification of a character."

Another professional in this art declares that "voice and physical ability to express a variety of emotions, nervous force, imaginative faculty, dramatic training, as well as training in elocution and carriage, are necessary qualifications for an actress."

To secure work in this line apply to a theatre manager. Call on the theatrical agents. Take with you a personal introduction, if possible, but it is not necessary. A very small percentage of those who apply to the stage become first-class actresses, and the profession is overcrowded with mediocre ones. The earliest one begins her career in this profession, the better. Often experience supplies the place of natural talent, and the later a woman takes up this work as a profession the more natural talent she must have to succeed.

It is no new thing for a woman to be necessary to attend some kind of an architectural school. In some of the Christian Associations an elementary course can be obtained free. From these classes pupils can go to schools of applied design that are now open to women.

In order to make original designs one must know what has been done in the past; consequently, an idea of historical ornament is necessary. If a woman simply enters an architect's office and turns out to be a good tracer, there is some danger of her remaining in that position and never progressing further; but if she had a training first, an architect's office is a step ahead.

The student will work continually and advance gradually. Three hundred dollars will bear away a woman from the school, and there is an unlimited field for women in this profession, especially in the evening.

Miss Alice J. Hand, an architect of renown, says that after a woman has secured technical training, there is no opening wedge for the money-making world like becoming identified with some well-established firm of architects.

For compensation an architect usually receives for services fee—designs and superintendence of construction 5 per cent. of the cost of the building. This rate varies somewhat, reaching a high figure for cost. There is a chief draughtsman who gets from $25 to $50 a week. If a woman wants to learn this business, and there are no schools near at hand, she would be far better to apply to some architect to take her into his office.

One branch of this work is color and perspective drawing. Some women work at this as a hobby, and then it should be very thoroughly taught and finished with a fork, a little piece of butter and a little salt added.

The Summer Girl's Scarf

de chine is another way of lavishing handwork.

But perhaps the most unusual scarf of all is that of voluminous liberty silk, with bits of cluny lace inset into it.

Black scarves honor with white, but it is usually lightened with glittering black sparkles, or embroidered in a heavy, rich way.

Shortening Baby's Dresses

If the baby's slips and dresses are very long, shortening time should be taken. Cutting the skirt of a little dress in half will probably result in a long leftover piece big enough to mount upon a yoke and furnished with sleeves.

That is cut off of the long flannel petticoats will make a new petticoat, if put on the little "body."

And by the way, make his petticoats button on the shoulders; the petticoats button on a yoke and the baby a lot more comfortable.

Now that summer is at hand, and scarves, which have been wonderfully popular all winter, are gaining a new interest.

The prettiest of all show handwork in a pastel tint embroidered heavily somewhat after the fashion of old-time crepe shawls, but done with soft, thin silk that packs together instead of the old-fashioned thick silk, whose every thread showed an aggressive individuality.

Only the ends are embroidered, and those are done in vines or sprigs which blossom all the way up and end with a charming disregard for any other gray that results in an artistic display.

Have your scarf impaled in which it is, as it should be, a delicate shade, and embroidered so that even those faint lines are lost, padding rather heavily.

Knit on a fringe of strands of heavy embroidery silk or hemstitch a deep hem.

Picking the pattern out with mother-of-pearl or white on a flowered grade

It is not too much to say that there were two Don Quixotes, a sneering, vengeful, brigand, who dealt in and blood-stained, and a charming, soft-spoken, one quality remained, a front, whichever side of it happened to be uppermost was a most terrible enemy. "I know no fear," wrote his on one occasion, "I have never known it, but I have an imagination that I can knife to the heart of the this faculty of placing the position of his foe the enabled him to baff made against his liberal life."

It is not too much to say that there were two Don Q's. The one a sneering, vengeful, tiger-hearted brigand, who dealt in death, pain and blood-stained money...

But of this particular point in Don Q's character Don Felipe Majada thought not at all as he lay at ease in a long chair and gazed up at the glorious blue sky of Spain...

Some men would not accept defeat so easily, she remarked. "Sooner than that you would go single-handed into the sierra."

"It is a magnificent plan, my Rosita, and worthy of you," exclaimed Don Felipe in genuine admiration.

"I have to conceal two or three scores men in the gardens of the Casa de Segli—we will seize him."

"So it came to pass that the letter of Dona Rosita de Rivero, which betrayed the plot of the convey of poisoned wine intended to fall into Don Q's hands, lit in his mind a cold and deadly fury against Don Felipe."

Don Q looked keenly from the warm, handsome face of Robledo to his companion's.

"I am about to trust you. I pray you may prove yourself worthy of the honor. I am about to put my life in your keeping."

The sun had already passed overhead and was dropping in the fierce blue sky when the chief mounted his fragile frame on an ambly mule and led a body of followers down toward the plains.

"What shall I do? You, who have so often counselled me, do not desert me now, my beloved! You who are my Minerva and Venus, tell me what I am to do."

"Because our destinies are bound together," he responded with fervor, "to pass an awkward point, the governorship would be given into more capable hands."

"What is that true?" Rosita asked, rising from her seat and standing over him.

"I will implore the assistance of Don Q by letter. He will come down in person to release me. I will tell him in the letter that you are sending some wine through the mountains in the hope that he will intercept it, and so die, for the wine will

Don Q held up his hand for silence. "You deserve to die," he paused, "but this lady loves you."

"No! He is a coward. I would kill him rather than marry him!" Rosita cried hotly.

"Lady, you have courage enough for two; thus, when you and this postscript made one that will be no hindrance. To become his wife has been your desire. You deserve punishment as certainly as he."

THE MIRACLE--BY TROY ALLISON

Esther Blake felt certain that there were positions in life that she would have found less trying than that of an orphan child in a poor minister's parsonage.

"I really don't see how I can go, mamma," she said, finally. "It is impossible for papa to afford it now."

"I can't help wanting his people to think I'm nice—and for him to be proud of me. You understand, don't you, mamma?"

"I don't see why they think I don't want a trinket occasionally—a fan, a bracelet, or something a little bit frivolous, mamma," she said.

"I have nineteen Madonnas hanging in my room, and I have a dozen or so of the prettiest things that I have ever seen."

"I don't see how I can go, mamma," she said, finally. "It is impossible for papa to afford it now."
