ENJOYING A REST.

Is Roughing it With A Companion on the Little South West.

"Rev" Sanford, founder of the sect of the Holy Ghost and U. S. is at present in the Miramichi woods. He arrived here Tuesday night May 2nd. and at once proceeded up river where he has a number of followers at Sillikers and Lyttleton. He arrived there on Wednesday May 3rd. but almost immediately left for Samuel Mutchies' lumber camp where he will remain with a companion for some time or until "God wills him to move on." To our correspondent he said he came to the Miramichi for a rest. Our correspondent thinks that he could not have selected a quieter place for a rest, until fly time arrives, when no doubt he will be kept busy.

We have not been able to interview the gentleman and ascertain from him if it is his intention to have his palatial yacht built here for him, or whether he will hold meetings in this section.

On Sunday Mr. Sanford was driven from his retreat to the home of Mr. White, Lyttleton, and on Sunday preached to a congregation made up of his followers.

He was hunting bears with Guide Ed. White.

Mr. Sanford drove down river Sunday night and took the express south Monday morning.

IS THERE NO REMEDY

Scotch 'Cloth Peddler Becomes Impudent When Turned Down.

For some time Newcastle and vicinity has been infested with a number of Scotch cloth peddlers, who we believe come from Quebec. These gentry claim to be able to sell an all wool suit for very little money in fact about one third the regular price of the genuine article, and it is surprising how many victims they have.

Last week the Advocate had a call from one of these gentlemen of the road who offered a fine suit for very little money as he expressed it. When we told him we did not believe in patronizing parties who tramped about the country with their wares on their backs, and no reputation at stake, but rather from our town's merchants, we received a very sarcastic reply. He assured us that he had money to burn and could buy half the stores in town if he so minded, and intimated that our legitimate trades people were sharks.

We know, and every person with judgment knows that the goods they are offering are nothing but the poorest shoddy and hardly worth the making up.

Is there no way this class of peddlers can be kept out of our town. They are not even in the same class as our regular peddlers who do a fairly legitimate trade but here today to make all the money possible then jump to the next town and we never see the same ones again.

St Mark's congregation of Douglastown gave an "At Home" last Thursday evening to the Rev. Mr. and Mrs. McIntosh, prior to their departure for Scotland. A choice program was carried out after which refreshments were served. During the evening Mr. McIntosh was presented with a well filled purse. Several clergymen from Chatham were present at the gathering.

A DELEGATION TO OTTAWA.

Newcastle Board of Trade to Press Missing Link Matter

PRESIDENT HENNESSY

With a Delegation From Town Council will go to Ottawa.

A meeting of the Newcastle Board of Trade was held in the Town Hall Monday evening, President Hennessy presiding. The meeting was called to discuss railway matters and to take some action to bring memorials and petitions recently circulated to the attention of the Hon. Minister of Railways. Mr. Troy who at a former meeting was appointed a delegate to proceed to Ottawa with Mr. Allan Ritchie appointed by the Town Council explained that through pressure of business Mr. Ritchie was not able up to the present time, to go, and nothing further had been done.

It was the feeling of the meeting that a delegation should go to Ottawa as soon as possible and press the matter home.

Mr. Troy said that he would not be able now to go and asked that he be relieved.

President Hennessy was then appointed a delegate, and in a neat speech signified his willingness to go and do all in his power to have the Minister attend to this matter. He expressed the desire that a number of delegates from the up river parishes be asked to go to Ottawa with the Newcastle delegation.

After discussion it was decided to ask a number of up river business men to form part of the delegation.

Minor details were discussed and the meeting adjourned to meet Friday night at 8 o'clock.

SEMI ANNUAL DIVISION.

Sons of Temperance of New Brunswick Will Meet Here.

The semi-annual meeting of the Grand Division of New Brunswick will convene in the Temperance Hall here on Wednesday evening at 8 o'clock. This will of course be a business session open to all Grand Division members and also to all members of subordinate Divisions in good standing in possession of the quarterly pass word, or who can be vouched for. It is to be hoped that all members of our Division as well as those from neighboring Divisions will avail themselves of this opportunity of becoming acquainted with the Grand officers. The session will be continued on Thursday until the business is completed.

On Thursday evening there will be a public meeting in the Temperance Hall open to all. This meeting will be addressed by H. C. Tilley Grand Worthy Patriarch, C. A. Everett, Grand Scribe, and it is hoped by A. J. Armstrong, P. G. S. and others. A cordial invitation is extended to all to attend this meeting. There will be no admission fee and no collection.

SAD DEATH

Mrs. J. S. Hackey, of Bathurst Village Died Last Week.

The death occurred here on Tuesday morning of Mrs. Hackey, wife of Mr. J. S. Hackey, merchant, after a prolonged illness of heart disease and possibly brought on by the sudden death of her son John a few months ago by accidental shooting, the shock of which she never seemed to overcome and worked over her whole system. She was 58 years of age and leaves a husband and three children to mourn their great loss, one daughter Sister Sophia of Mount St. Vincent, Halifax, and two sons, Donald and Bennett who were at her bedside when she died. Mr. Hackey and family have indeed the sympathy of the whole community in their recent bereavement and their repeated mournings during the past year which casts a gloom over their once bright home. The funeral took place Thursday and was largely attended.

THE R WORK IS APPRECIATED

Chatham Board of Health Unanimously Tender vote of Thanks

CHAIRMAN HONORED.

Smallpox Epidemic is Nearing its end—Guards Taken Off

That the Chatham Board of Health has no hard feelings against the Chairman or members of the Town of Newcastle or County Boards of Health is evidenced by the following resolutions which were passed at recent meeting.

Chatham, N. B., 13th, May 1905

R. Maltby Esq.
Chairman of the Board of Health
Town of Newcastle, and County of Northumberland.

Dear Sir:—
At a meeting of the Board of Health of the Town of Chatham, held late yesterday afternoon, the Board placed on record the vote of thanks to your two boards and the following is a copy of the resolution passed.

"That the Local Board of Health of the town of Chatham hereby tenders to the chairman and other members of the County Board its sincere thanks for their courtesy in meeting with this Board on the 7th inst. and for their valuable advice given in dealing with the disease now afflicting the town of Chatham."

Also to the Local Board of Health of the Town of Newcastle the following:

"The Local Board of Health of the Town of Chatham hereby conveys to the Chairman and other members of the Local Board of Health of the Town of Newcastle its hearty thanks for their kindness in meeting with this board and for their sound advice given in dealing with the disease that now afflicts the town of Chatham."

These resolutions were carried unanimously.

I am, Sir,

Yours truly,
G. B. FRASER

Secretary of the Local Board of Health of the Town of Chatham.

The smallpox situation in Chatham is much improved, only one case has been reported for a week and that was in a quarantined house.

Another case or cases of smallpox has been discovered in the home of Jas. McDonald, Napan. The necessary precautions have been taken by the County Board of Health to prevent its spread.

The doctor who vaccinated the inhabitants of St. Margarets reports that the only family in that district which refused to be vaccinated is the one in which smallpox now exists.

THE DRIVES.

Very Little Progress Being Made But men are Still Working

The drives on the Northwest and Little Southwest are by no means in safe water and unless rain comes some of them will be hung up. The drives are working hard and a little progress is made each day. On the main Southwest the drives are all practically safe and will reach the boom.

On Friday afternoon of this week the Co. S School Convention, which has already been advertised in these columns will, open in the Methodist church here. Delegates are looking forward with expectancy. Dr. Bachman, the principal speaker comes to us highly recommended; also Mr. G. C. Tuller, and Prof. Brower, musical specialists; while many in the county have not yet had the pleasure of meeting the new Field Sec'y, Rev. J. B. Ganong. These four gentlemen have during the past ten days been holding successful meetings in various sections of the province, and we feel that to miss this Convention will be to miss a great source of help and inspiration for future work. Local preparations for the Convention are about complete. An encouraging number of names of delegates has been received, but not enough to fill the homes offered. The programme for Sunday's services will be announced from the Convention platform on Friday. Delegates coming by train should secure standard certificates.

The Sabbath in Scotland Today

That a great change is taking place in public sentiment in Scotland regarding the question of Sunday observance was never better exemplified than in the case of Dunfermline. About thirty years ago Mr. Andrew Carnegie presented to his native city a suite of baths which at the time were regarded as the best that could be provided. They cost somewhere between £4,000 and £5,000, and were handed over to the corporation for the benefit of the community. These baths being now of date, Mr. Carnegie has presented to this favored town an institution which is calculated will cost at least £40,000, consisting of baths and gymnasium. By experts who have visited them from different parts they are regarded as having no equal in Great Britain. A year or so after the original baths were gifted, a proposal was made to open them for two hours on Sunday morning. The mere suggestion met with violent opposition, and the Town Council of the day rejected it by a majority. Now, however, the Carnegie Dunfermline Trust, in whom the management of the modern building is vested, have quietly announced a Sunday opening, and not the slightest protest has been raised by any section of the community. Dundee, one of Scotland's largest manufacturing and shipping cities, is still, however without Sunday trainways.

HUNDREDS KILLED BY THE TORNADO.

Death in the Storm That Demolished a Small Town in Oklahoma—Dead and Injured Strwn Along the Road of the Relief Train.

CUTHRIE, Okla., May 11.—Reports received here indicate that between three and four hundred lives have been lost at Snyder, Okla., by the tornado. Relief trains have been sent to the scene from a number of neighboring towns. Details of the disaster cannot be learned until some of these trains return, all wire communication with the stricken town having been interrupted.

News has been received from the Frisco station agent at Mountain Park, Kiowa county, a neighboring town of Snyder, to the effect that the town is only partially destroyed, but the list of dead will total something between three and four hundred. The agent made a personal visit to Snyder, where he observed the details of the calamity.

Relief trains sent out from Hobart have not as yet reported or returned. It is the intention to send out another train from that place.

Chickasa has so far no intelligence of the relief trains sent from that town. Rumors to the effect that other towns in southwestern Oklahoma were destroyed are declared by the telephone exchanges to be incorrect.

Snyder is a town of about 2,500 inhabitants in Kiowa county, Okla., in the Kiowa and Comanche Indian country opened to white settlement in 1901. The town was laid out largely by the St. Louis and San Francisco railway at the junction of two of its lines, and the company erected the important buildings there. Snyder is the division point for the Quanah division of the road.

VISITED THE SCENE

The first man to reach Snyder and return to a telegraph point was the station agent at Mountain Park, a neighboring town. He walked into Snyder, reaching there at daylight, and after taking a hasty view of the situation, and without gathering any exact details of the storm effects, returned to Mountain Park. This man reported the town partially destroyed, and asserted that the list of dead would reach would reach somewhere between 300 and 400. The injured, he said, were to be seen everywhere, and their number undoubtedly will reach into the hundreds.

While the tornado seems to have been wide, rumors that other towns in southwestern Oklahoma had been destroyed were declared by telephone exchanges to be incorrect, but much damage to property and loss to life had occurred in cut lying districts.

St. Louis, May 11.—At the general office of the Frisco railroad here, a brief despatch from the division superintendent at Sapulpa (I. T.) said that it was estimated that from 200 to 300 persons had lost their lives in the tornado at Snyder (Okla.) Details are yet lacking.

EVERY HOUSE DESTROYED

Kansas City, Mo., May 11.—A despatch to the Star from Oklahoma City states that every house in Snyder, with the exception of the waya hardware store and the St. Louis and San Francisco round house, has been destroyed. It is estimated that 200 persons have been killed and 500 injured.

The first relief train is expected to reach Hobart from Snyder at 11 o'clock.

NO WEATHER THERE.

"I lived among the people of Japan for four years, said the Cincinnati man, and I pledge you my word that not once in all that time did I hear one single person make any reference to the weather. You can judge what a relief it is here and elsewhere the weather is a constant topic.

"Was nothing said when it was hot or cold or stormy?" was asked.

Not a word—not the slightest hint. No matter whether it was pouring rain or the sun was shining, nobody spoke of it. The nearest I ever heard any Japanese trench on the weather was when my valet one day asked me for half a day off. When I hesitated over it he said:

"You excellency, I have—a corn on my—toe and I want to get the thing fixed before next winter sets in and freezes the—thing off."

Examining Physician—"Do you sleep well at night?"

Patient—"I have not had a night's sleep for eleven years."

Physician—"Why, it is wonderful you are not dead or insane. Does it interfere with your business?"

Patient—"No doctor, not a bit."

Indeed! What is your occupation may I ask?

"I am the editor of a morning paper."

Headaches

When the Head aches and the Tongue is Coated

it is Biliousness or Constipation. Torpid Liver is at the bottom of the trouble. And it takes Fruit-a-tives to make that lazy liver work. Fresh fruit is fine for these troubles, but one can't eat enough fruit to do much good. The medicinal elements are in too small proportion in the ripe fruits. A clever Ottawa physician discovered a method by which fruit juices could be combined so that their medicinal action would be increased many times. Fruit-a-tives are these fruit juices in tablet form. They sweeten and tone the stomach and liver, cure Constipation and remove all blood impurities. One Fruit-a-tives tablet has the same curative effect on liver and bowels as dozens of oranges, apples, figs and prunes. And this action is as gentle as the fruit juices themselves.

"I have been suffering with Torpid Liver and Constipation, and find that Fruit-a-tives are just what my system requires to relieve these complaints. I hope many more sufferers will try them."

Diamond Dyes has a most enviable past and present history for successes in home dyeing. Their fast, rich and fashionable colors have made them the most noted home dyes in the world. The fastness, saturation and crade dyes made and sold for the home by these dye brands, the makers of such trash, only result in dire destruction to useful and expensive goods requiring re-coloring. These adulterated dyes may be tolerated by some sections of our Indian population, but not by the cultured women of America. Diamond Dyes when they need pure, full and brilliant colors for home dyeing.

The proprietors of Diamond Dyes are not obliged to offer premiums to dupeigate their dealers who sell their dyes. Our progressive dealers are not so easily duped by their customers the best dyes, do not ask for special inducements to sell Diamond Dyes; they are satisfied with the profits they make on their vast and daily increasing sales of Diamond Dyes.

The adulteration of the common and crade dyes who is obliged to offer a few paltry cents to stockholders to get them to introduce and push their deceptive dyes. It is not the retailer of the common dyes that should be paid by the manufacturers, it is the unfortunate women, who, after using such dye stuffs, and their dresses, skirts, jackets, capblouses, ribbons and other materials ruined.

Diamond Dyes give the ladies a choice of 48 colors, thirty-two for wool and silk, and sixteen for cotton and all mixed goods, each dye guaranteed to do its special work.

The makers of the adulterated dyes deceive the people when they tell them that the colors of their dyes will color any kind of fabric. Such a statement is stupidly false.

It is asserted by the able color chemists that the Diamond 4 Dyes are the only fast and reliable colors for home use and that they are the only dyes that give special colors for wool, silk, cotton and mixed goods, is the true and correct one.

Seeing that imitation and crade dyes are sold by some dealers, ladies who ask for the Diamond Dyes should see to the name—DIAMOND—appears on each package. Remember, "It's easy to dye with Diamond Dye."

A New England minister often speaks in this way of certain charity work. He has a graphic way of telling incidents, and at the close of one meeting, at which he had spoken with great effect, a little old lady approached him. 'Oh,' she said earnestly, 'I've been so interested in hearing about these poor, dear children! And I suppose a great many of those stories you told are really true, aren't they?'

OUR NEW CITIZENS.

Collier's Weekly devotes considerable space to Canada's emigration policy, and endeavors to read her a lesson as follows:—

"It can not be surprising that there should be a vigorous protest against the landing of ne'er-do-wells on Canadian shores, and yet, despite the eagerness of American farmers to people the Dominion, there are many reasons why Canada should follow Mr. Haggard's suggestion and deliberately solicit immigration from abroad. The Dominion dimensions are so generous that were the sparsely settled provinces to be filled with Americans alone, the States would be depleted by more than half. This is plainly impossible. Hence Canada must sooner or later accept the overburdened people of the Old World. A nation with Canada's vast and untended fertile acreage can no more refuse to help the miserably congested people of the world than can any individual deny assistance to the drowning.

If Canada will receive the healthy, eager, and oppressed populace of the mother land with open hearts as well as open lands, and give moral help as well as soil help, and build her Empire in the great wide open and not in narrow tenement rows, then she need have no fear of the idle and the unskilled, and her great democracy will rise above colonial politics, and become, in fact, as Mr. Haggard predicts, the most glorious and enduring land which has found its political creation in the genius of empire with which Britain has enveloped the world. She has an opportunity such as no other nation has ever had, for no other has ever had at once a rich and almost vacant land as large as Europe and all the resource of twentieth century science for its development.

Canada has not objected to the healthy, eager but oppressed population of the mother land but welcomed them with open arms. It is the making of Canada a dumping ground for European criminals that we object to, and seriously object to, which is only right and proper.

At the present time Canada has less crime and lawlessness than any county of its population and we desire to preserve its good name. All emigrants willing to abide by the laws and to earn their daily bread are welcome to this great country of ours.

The U. S. government have a nice little deficit of about $35,000,000 for the past year.

BOARD OF TRADE.

It is to be regretted that Newcastle possesses only a handful of business men who are interested in the town's advancement, or who can spare an evening occasionally to discuss ways and means of advancing the town's interests.

Only about a dozen members were present at the Board meeting called by special notice for Monday evening.

As one of the members in the course of his remarks said Newcastle has allowed itself to be hedged in on all sides until now we have only the trade of the Chaplin Island Road and part of the North West to rely on. We had allowed others by persistent pushing to oust us, now it was time to awake.

Yes let us awake and endeavor to place our town in the position which is hers by rights. A full attendance is requested at the Board meeting to hold Friday night.

THE MISSING LINK.

That the piece of road from Indian town to Blackville known as "The Missing Link" should be opened is conceded by all who are acquainted with the circumstances.

That it will be of great benefit to the people of the section of country through which it runs is also admitted and no doubt when these facts are placed before the Minister of Railways by the delegation which is shortly to go to Ottawa he will have the necessary work undertaken at once.

MENNONITE HARDSHIPS

THEIR FUEL AND HABITS IN WINTER ARE NOT LOVABLE.

Hob-Nailed Expert With the Cue—Use the Best of Implements—Rich People Who Hibernates in the Cold Weather—A Letter From Manitoba.

Writing from Winkler, Man., J. P. McConnell, says in The Toronto Star: "The Mennonite reserve, of which I have now made a complete tour, as a market possibility is interesting. The Mennonite's standard of living differs greatly from that of Ontario farmers generally. The Mennonite is a great eater and smoker. Apparently he eats everything eatable on the market. One finds on sale on the reserve all the very latest breakfast foods, pickles, canned goods of every description, California fruits, etc., and everything of the very best quality sold in little buckeye stores out on the prairie. The corresponding class of store in Ontario is one where the stockkeeper is the postmaster and hangs long boots and may rakes outside—where the store racks of coal oil, smoked ham, and moccasins. Now just fancy selling a big bill of the latest breakfast food to that kind of store in Ontario. Yet in every store I visited in the Mennonite district I found them all stocked largely with these goods.

Signature in Winter. The Mennonite hibernates almost in winter. He feeds no cattle, has no fire-wood to cut. His grain is hauled to market mostly as fast as it is threshed. He sits around his 'peat' fire absorbing smoke, reek, and victuals. He never ventilates his house, summer or winter. Not ten per cent. of them have sound stomachs. They absorb great quantities of patent medicines. Once a medicine helps a case the whole community proceeds to liquidate on that particular brand for every ailment. When they find it won't cure everything they all cease to use it at all. Thus a druggist told me he handled fifteen gross of a well known patent medicine in six months. The last month he sold five gross. Since then he hasn't sold five bottles, and the last one was over a month previous to my conversation with him. The same druggist tells me when they do catch on they can't get enough, but once they quit they quit. This is a point that may be useful to those who have curative designs upon the simple-minded Mennonite.

Cheap, Strong Clothes.

The Mennonite wears the cheapest and strongest boots, clothes and caps he can get. I found little or no fine goods in most of these lines. Men, women and children all wear the same grade of stuff so far as quality is concerned. Each man and woman has a "best" suit or dress to wear to "meeting," but the man's everyday clothes are of the cheap class entirely, consisting of overalls, checked shirts and long boots, with coarse, heavy underwear. The Mennonite is a great smoker, but he seldom uses either pipe or cigars. He smokes cigarettes exclusively, which he rolls himself. He buys his tobacco in tins, and the same grade of goods sold in the best shops of Toronto and Montreal finds a big sale in this district. Where in an entire country of a Mennonite there is a big sale of expensive tinned tobacco? The Mennonite is temperate in drinking. He drinks very little, if any, alcoholic liquors. The hotels in the reserve observe the law very strictly, closing the bars sharp at 10 o'clock and remaining so. The bars of most of these hotels appear to be well stocked with all the better known brands of Scotch, both Scotch and Canadian, but they are evidently used more by the traveling public than by the local people. I have not yet found a good cigar in them. I am told that most of the cigars retailing for ten cents here cost no more than 45¢ per thousand. I don't know whether this is true or not, but the cigars smell as though it were.

The accommodations of these hotels are crude. The beds are hard and cheap. The furniture is cheap. The hotels are innocent of any sanitary arrangements. Their cooking is abominable. The first steak I ever tackled (and the last) in one of these hotels was a specimen in the art of converting best beef into material suitable for lining brakes on freight trains. The steak was cut thin as a lead pencil, then it was fried, or rather stewed, in dripping till it curled at the edges and was mixed in the middle. I don't say any man not equipped with a set of cast-iron jaws to render it fit for a human stomach. I have since seen steaks in different hotels in this district, and they are all alike. However, I will say that outside of his poor beds, his lack of sanitary arrangements, his awful cooking and his cigars, the Mennonite reserve is not a bad sort, and he is as you feel at home.

Every hotel has its two or more tables, and the rustic congregates every night to play the game, and play a sort of English pool on the American table, and I have seen some wonderful playing among them. I saw a thresher-man, a big burly fellow with bushy whiskers, hands like a bear, wearing long boots that left nail marks in the floor, put down thirteen out of fifteen balls after knocking the break in straight and. That kind of playing is scarce, even among our most accomplished sports.

Traveling Is Expensive. A traveler carrying sample trunks with this or any other part of the outfit will find it expensive, as even with Ontario rates. Sample trunks cost not less than 50¢ per room 50 cents, hotel to $2 per day. Driving costs $5.00 to $8.50 per ten miles, owing to the state of the roads. The goods are good and the rigs are comfortable. There are about a dozen towns in the Mennonite reserve, and each town consists of a row of elevators on one side of the road and a row of houses and stores on the other. You would not think to look at the places, there was business enough in them to last an hour. There are from two to six stores, and every store carries stocks of $5,000, $10,000, and up to $80,000 worth of goods. In groceries you will find all the best lines. In clothing the cheapest. In hardware and furniture, also cheap stuff. The Mennonite uses good cook-stoves. I found only the best makes in the stores. He does his cooking with a sort of manufactured home-made peat. The basis of this peat is found in the cow stable, and it is mixed with straw to a certain consistency, dried out, and piled up convenient for use. A pile of this partly animal matter fuel stands near the door of each Mennonite farm house. If you happen to pass to the ward of a Mennonite house just after the fire has been started to cook supper I guarantee you won't have much appetite for yours. This peat is their chief fuel, very little wood being available.

Of course the farm implement trade is good among the Mennonites. They use the best implements and wagons, have first-class horses, are good farmers, and are all well-to-do. They raise grain exclusively; they sell no meat or other produce than grain that amounts to anything, and the bulk of it is wheat.

The crops this year, so far as I have observed, are below the average. The season has been very backward.

FINE WORKMANSHIP.

This Factory Now Making "Best Chairs Make in Canada.

An Advocate reporter had the pleasure of inspecting the Anderson Furniture Company's plant and found things on the hum. We found that chairs of different varieties are being turned out and in appearance and workmanship they compare favorably with any we have seen. In fact they bear out the remark of a Newcastle furniture dealer who said the Anderson Company were making the best chairs in Canada. At present the company is working on stock. A car load was shipped for export last week and the local dealers have been supplied. About fifty men are now employed and others are being put on as they can be procured. A rotary mill is being erected to manufacture round lumber into dimensions suitable for furniture and will be in running order at an early date.

H. M. S. DOMINION

One of Four New Battleships Named in Honor of Canada.

This magnificent battleship is one of four sister ships built by the British Government and recently launched, and which have been named respectively, Dominion, Commonwealth, New Zealand and Africa. They are all of the same tonnage, and are the largest and finest battleships in the British Navy.

The names have been given to the respective ships out of compliment to Canada and the other countries whose names have been adopted. Australia, New Zealand and South Africa have each raised subscriptions and made presentations to the different ships respectively named after them.

Canada should not be behind her sisters, and a subscription limited to twenty-five cents from each person is now being made. The amount collected will be used to purchase books for the ships library, trophies to be competed for by the different crews of gunners, or plate for use in the wardroom of the ship, all of which will be presented to H. M. S. Dominion as a birthday gift from the Dominion of Canada. The Royal Bank of Canada and the Bank of Nova Scotia are receiving contributions for the above purpose. As yet the list of contributors is small, but we trust by thus bringing this matter before our readers many more will contribute.

If any of our readers desire they may send contributions to the Advocate when they will be published each week and the funds handed to one of the above banks.

Send in your twenty-five cents at an early date.

DRUNKNESS AND IMMORALITY.

These Were the Chief Factors in Defeat of Russians at Mukden.

Berlin, May 11.—Emperor William addressing the higher officers after a review of troops at Strassburg today, said, according to the Strassburg Burger Zeitung, whose statements may be taken with some reserve: "The Russian army which fought at Mukden had become enervated by immorality and drunkenness. Only in this way can its defeat in Mukden be explained. As Russia has shown weakness in the presence of the yellow danger, circumstances might arise which would place upon Germany the task of opposing this danger. Officers and men must spend their time well, so that they shall not fall into immorality and intemperance."

Uncle Terry

CHARLES CLARK MUNN

Copyright, 1900, by LEE & SHEPARD

CHAPTER XXXV.

"I'm going to give ye a taste o' mackerel fishin'," said Uncle Terry the next morning after breakfast. "We'll go over to the fish house, an' ye can put on some o' them old save yer good clothes." On the way they met the well remembered old lady Albert had first noticed at the prayer meeting. She recognized him, and offering a rather soiled hand, for she had been spreading fish on the rocks, exclaimed: "In the Lord's name I thank ye, Mr. Page, for rememberin' a poor old creature like me an' sendin' that dress. I make sure the Lord's teched yer heart, an' if ye ain't a believer yet ye will be."

"I am glad my little remembrance pleased you," answered Albert pleasantly. "It was only a trifle, and you need not feel obligated for it." He kept on after Uncle Terry, not wishing to waste any time, but she followed to add more thanks, ending with, "God bless ye, sir, an' may he warm the heart o' one good girl, fer ye deserve it."

When he had donned a suit of oilers and Uncle Terry was pulling out of the little cove Albert said: "That old lady is the most pious person I ever met. No one could doubt she means every word she says."

"What, it's about all the consolation she gits out o' life, an' 'twixt you an' me, she takes more'n all the rest o' the believers here," answered Uncle Terry, "an' at times I must envy her fer it. She's sorter cracked 'bout religion; leastwise that's my notion, an' maybe it's lucky she is, seein' she's poor an' nothin' but that fer comfort. She's smart 'bout other ways, though, an' there ain't nothin' goin' on here she don't know. She's kind hearted, too, an' if she had anything ter give she'd share her last cent with ye. If anybody's sick she's allus ready to help. That's lots o' wuss folks in the world than the Widder Leach. And then, as if that crowded the sum o' her virtues, he added, "Telly an' Lissy thinks lots o' her."

He paused for breath and, turning to see if they were bending right, resumed his strong and steady pulling. "That," observed Uncle Terry, pointing to a long and narrow ledge, "is what Telly started fer shore all these nineteen years ago last March. And then he added while he watched Albert's averted face. "Twas an unlucky day fer the poor sailors an' a lucky one fer us, fer she's been a heap o' comfort ever since."

"Telly me, Uncle Terry, why it is she feels so sensitive regarding her history, and what is the cause of the peculiar moods you spoke of last summer. I noticed it last evening, and it pained me very much."

"It's hard tellin', she's a girl that's given ter broodin' a good deal, an' maybe when she was told the facts she began ter suspect some o' her ancestors would be lookin' her up some day. She allus has been a good deal by herself since she got her schoolin', an' most likely doin' lots o' thinkin'. But Telly's all right, an' the most willin' an' tender hearted creature I ever seen or heard on. She'll make an amazin' good wife fer some man if she ever finds the right 'un."

When they reached the island Uncle Terry landed, and going to the top of a cliff, scanned the sea for signs of fish. "Mackerel's cur's fish," he observed to Albert, who had followed. "They're a good deal like some wamin'-ye never know what ter find 'em. Yesterday mornin' that cove jest inside o' the point was 'live with 'em, an' today I can't see a sign o' one. We better sit here an' wait a spell till I sight a school."

To a dinner like Albert Page the business ocean view he now enjoyed lifted him far above mackerel and their habits. His mind was also occupied a good deal by Telly, and while he desired to please the kindly old man, who imagined fishing would entertain him, his heart was not in it.

"Don't let us worry about the mackerel, Uncle Terry," he observed as they seated themselves on top of a cliff. "This lone, uninhabited island and the view here will content me until your fish are hungry."

"It allus sets me thinkin', too, an' wonderin' what we cum from an' what we air here fer. An' our stay is so amazin' short besides! We air born, grow up, work a spell, sit old an' die, an' that's the end. Why, it don't seem only last year when I cum to the Cape, an' it's goin' high on to thirty now, an' I'm a'most through my spell o' life. What puzzles me is what's the good o' bein' born at all if ye've got ter die so soon! An', more'n all that, if life's the Lord's blessin', as the widder believes, why are so many only born to suffer or be crippled all their lives? An' why are snakes an' all sorts o' vermin, to say nothin' o' cheatin' lawyers, like Frye, ever born at all?"

Albert smiled at the coupling of Frye with vermin. "There are a good many wiser heads than mine, Uncle Terry, that have never been able to answer your question," he replied, "and I doubt if they ever will. To my mind the origin of life is an enigma, the wide variations in matters of health and ability an injustice, and the end a blank wall that none who scales ever recrosses with tidings of the beyond. As some one has expressed it: 'Life is a narrow vale between the cold and barren peaks of two eternities.' We strive in vain to look beyond the heights. We cry aloud, and the only answer is the echo of our walling cry."

"An' right that," put in Uncle Terry earnestly, "is what I allus envy the believers, as the widder calls 'em, fer they are satisfied what is beyond an' have it all pict'ed out in their minds, even to what the streets are paved with an' the kind o' music they're goin' ter have. It's all guesswork, in my way o' thinkin', but they are sure on't, an' that feelin' is lots o' comfort to 'em when they are drawin' near the end. I've been a sort o' scoffer all my life an' can't help bein' a doubter, but there are times when I envy the Widder Leach an' the rest on 'em the delusion I believe they're laborin' under."

"But do you believe death ends all conscious reasoning her history seriously. "Have you no hope, ever, of a life beyond this blank wall?"

"Sartin I have hope, same as all on us has, but I wish I was more sure my hopes was goin' ter be realized. Once in awhile I git the feelin' that ain't no use in hopin', an' then a little suttlin' keeps sayin' 'Mebbe-mebbe-mebbe'-an' I feel more cheerful again."

Albert looked at the roughly clad and withered old man who sat near, and in whose words lurked an undertone of sadness mingled with a faint hope, and in an instant back came a certain evening memory before when the Widder Leach had uttered a prayer that had stirred his feelings as no such utterance ever had before. All the pathos of that simple petition, all its abiding faith in God's goodness and wisdom, all its utter self abnegation and absolute confidence in a life beyond the grave, came back, and all the consolation that feeling surely hold for the old and poverty environed soul who uttered it impressed him in sharp contrast to the doubting "mebbe-mebbe" of Uncle Terry.

As Albert looked out to where the waves were breaking upon a ledge, and back again to this old man sitting with bowed head beside him, a sincere regret that it was not in his power to utter one word that would aid in dispelling the clouds of doubt came to him. "Since I lack in faith myself," he thought, "all I can say will only increase his doubt. I wish I had as much faith as the widder, but I have not, and possibly never shall have."

For a long time he sat in silence, living over the years during which skepticism had been slowly but surely growing upon him, and then Uncle Terry suddenly looked up at him. It is likely the old man's keen eyes read at a glance what was in Albert's mind, for he said: "It don't do no good ter brood over this matter o' believin', Mr. Page; I've wished I thought different many a time, an' more so now I'm gittin' near the end o' life, but I can't, an' so that's no use in worryin'. Our 'pions' 'bout these matters are a good deal due to our bringin' up an' will. We air born, we've met with. Mine, connected with those as has perished religion, has, to say the least, been unfortnited, but, as I said afore, I wish I believed different."

He paused a few moments and then added sadly, "This hopin' ain't allus best fer some on us either, fer it's hopin' fer some one to cum year after year that's what Telly what she is an' grieved Lissy an' me more'n she ever knew."

Albert looked curiously at the old man beside him, and a new feeling of trust and affection came to him. In some ways Uncle Terry seemed like his own father. Then, following that, came a sudden impulse to be frank with him.

"Uncle Terry," he said, "I have a little story to tell you, and, as it comes close to you, I believe it's right that you should know it. The first time I saw Telly I said to myself, 'That girl is a prize any man may feel proud to win.' I asked her if I might write to her, and what with her few letters and the little I have seen of her I feel that she is the one I want for a wife. I have not even hinted it to her yet, and before I do I would like to feel that you are satisfied with me. May I have your consent to win her if I can?"

Uncle Terry reached out and grasped Albert's hand and, shaking it cordially, answered, "Ye hev my best wishes in the matter, an' I wouldn't say that if I didn't think ye worthy o' her." Then he added with a droll smile, "Lissy an' me sorter 'spected that Telly was the magnet that drew ye down here."

"I thank you for your confidence and consent," replied Albert gratefully. "I am earning an income that is more than sufficient for two, and if Telly will say yes I shall be the happiest man on earth. And now," he added, "let's go fishin', Uncle Terry."

"I guess it's 'bout time," was the answer, "fer that's two schools workin' into the cove, an' we'll have some fun."

Three hours after, when they landed at the cove fairly sated with pulling in the gamy little mackerel and happy as two boys, Telly met them with a smile and the news that dinner was ready.

CHAPTER XXXVI.

"We'll go in my boat," said Telly the next afternoon when she and Albert were ready to start on their trip to the cove, and, unlocking a small annex to Uncle Terry's boathouse, she showed him a dainty cedar craft, cushioned and carpeted. "You may help me launch the Sea Shell," she added smiling, "and then you may steer."

"No, that is the lady's privilege in all voyages," he answered, "and we must begin this one right."

It was a good four mile pull to the mouth of the inlet, and when he helped his fair passenger out he said: "Do you mean to say you rowed up here alone every day to work on that picture, Telly? You will let me call you Telly now, won't you?"

"Why not? All my friends do, and I feel you are my friend." Then she added: "Now I am going to have my revenge and make you post while I sketch this time. It was the other way before."

"I am glad it is," he said, "for my arms are too tired to use for an hour. How do you want me, flat on the rock fast asleep, the way I was when my boat drifted away?"

"Oh, no, that would look as if you were dead, and as this is to be my reminder of you I want you very much alive." As for the pose she wanted Albert to assume, she could not determine which she liked the best.

"I want to sketch you in the position most natural to you here," she said finally, "and must ask you to choose that yourself."

"Let us trim the boat the way mine was that day, and I will sit beside it and smoke while you work." The idea was adopted, and while Telly sketched he smoked, contented to watch the winsome face, so oblivious to his admiring glances.

"There," she observed, after a half hour of active penciling, "please lay your cigar aside and look pleasant. I want to catch the expression of your face."

When the sketch was completed she asked if he had any suggestions to make. "Only one. I would like you in the picture and sitting beside me." "I would rather not be in it," she replied soberly. "I only want to see you as you are here today. It may be a long time before you come to the Cape again."

"Would you like me to come often?" "Of course," she answered, turning away her face. "It is so lonesome here, and there is no one I care to talk with except father and mother and Aunt Leach and Mandy Oaks."

Albert's heart began to beat with unusual speed. Never in his life before had he felt the impulse to utter words of love to any woman. "Telly," he said, "I promised to tell you a little story here today, but it's all said in a few words. I love you, and I want you to share my life and all that I can do to make you happy." A trifle incoherent, but expressive.

For a moment, while the tide of feeling surged through that queen's heart and into her cheeks, even to the tips of her ears, she was silent, and then, as both her hands went to her face, she almost whispered: "Oh, no, no; I cannot! I can never leave father and mother alone here! It would break my heart."

"But you do care a little for me, don't you, Telly?" he begged, trying to draw her hands away from her blushing face. "Just a little, Telly; only say a little, to give me hope."

And then, as one of the hands he was trying to gain was yielded and as he softly stroked and then raised it to his lips, she turned her pleading eyes to him and said: "You won't be angry, will you? And you will come and see me once in awhile, won't you? And let me paint a picture to give you when you come?"

It may have been the pain in his face, added to her own desolation, that overcame all else, for now she bowed her head, and the tears came.

"I thank you for so much, Telly," he answered tenderly, "and God bless you for it. I do not give you up and shall not if I have to wait all my life for you. I can be patient if I only have hope." He brushed his face with one hand and, still holding hers, arose and drew her up. Then Albert stily put his arm around her waist, and as he drew her to him he whispered, "Just one, Telly, my sweetheart, to make this spot seem more sacred."

It was not refused.

"Come out on the point, dear," he said as she tried to draw herself away. "So we can see the ocean better. I will tell you the story I promised last evening." He still held her a half that she is the one I want for a wife. I have not even hinted it to her yet, and before I do I would like to feel that you are satisfied with me. May I have your consent to win her if I can?"

The remark started him. "Telly," he said soberly, "do not ever think of such a thing. Would you, whose heart is so loving and tender, burden all those who know you with a lifelong sorrow?"

"No, no, not that way. Only if those who love me were taken I should want to follow them. That is all. Please forget I said it." Then she told him her own brief history, and at last, after much coaxing, a little of the one sorrow of her life.

"Now I know," he said, "why you avoided speaking about the picture of the wreck the first time I came here. Then in a moment he added: "Telly, I want you to give it to me and let me take it away. I want it for two reasons. One is, it gave me the first hint of your life's history. And then I do not want you to look at it any more."

"You may have it," she answered, smiling sadly. "It was foolish of me to paint it."

The sun was low and they were ready to return he said, "Promise me, sweetheart, that you will try to forget all of your past that is sad and think only of a who love you and to whom your life is a blessing."

That evening he noticed Uncle Terry occasionally watched her with wistful

"Oh, no, no; I cannot!" eyes, and, as on the evening before, both he and Aunt Lissy retired early. "They wish me well," Albert thought. The next day Uncle Terry proposed that Telly should drive to the head of the island in his place.

"I'm sorry ye must leave us, Mr.

PRaise FOR A FAMOUS MEDICINE

Mrs. Willadsen Tells How She Tried Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Just in Time.

Mrs. T. C. Willadsen, of Manning, Iowa, writes to Mrs. Pinkham: "Dear Mrs. Pinkham:—

"I can truly say that you have saved my life, and I cannot express my gratitude to you in words."

"Before I wrote to you, telling you how I felt, I had suffered for over two years steadily and spent lots of money on medicines besides, but it all failed to help me. My monthly periods had ceased and I suffered much pain, with fainting spells, headache, backache and bearing-down pains, and I was so weak I could hardly keep around. As a last resort I decided to write you and try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and I am so thankful that I did, for after following your instructions, which you sent me free of all charge, my monthly periods started; I am regular and in perfect health. Had it not been for you I would be in my grave to-day. I sincerely trust that this letter may lead every suffering woman in the country to write you for help as I did."

When women are troubled with irregular or painful menstruation, weakness, leucorrhoea, displacement or ulceration of the womb, that bearing-down feeling, inflammation of the ovaries, backache, flatulence, general debility, indigestion and nervous prostration, they should remember there is one tried and true remedy, Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, which once removes such troubles.

No other female medicine in the world has received such widespread and unqualified endorsement. Refuse all substitutes.

Page," he said when Albert was ready to bid the old folks goodbye. "I wish ye could stay longer, but cum an' in soon, an' remember our hatchstring's silus out fer ye."

When the old carryall had made half its daily journey Albert pointed to a low rock and said, "There is a spot I shall always be glad to see, for it was there Uncle Terry first found me."

Telly made no answer. In fact, she had said but little since they started. When they reached the little landing no one else was there. No house was in sight of it, and the solitude was broken only by the tide that softly caressed the barnacle-stiles of the wharf and the wood covered rocks on either side. No boat was visible across the wide reach that separates Southport Island from the mainland, and up it came a light sea breeze that barely rippled the flowing tide and whispered through the brown and scarlet leaved thicket back of them. Over all shone the hazy sunlight of October.

Telly stood listening and hoping that the boat would be late. A look of sadness came over her face and a more than usually plaintive appeal in her expressive eyes. "I am sorry you are going," she said. "It is so lonesome here, and it will seem more so now."

Then, as if that was a confession he might think unmanly, she added, "I dread to have the summer end, for when winter comes the rocks all around seem like so many tombstones."

Albert put out his hand as if that would aid his appeal, and as his fingers closed over hers he said: "I am going away with a heavy heart, Telly, and when I can come back is hard to say. Will you not promise me that some time, no matter when, you will be my own good and true wife? Let me go away with that hope to comfort me while I work and save for a home for us both. Will you, Telly?"

But the plaintive face was turned away, perhaps to hide the tears. Then she stole around her waist, and as he drew her close she whispered, "When I am no longer needed here, if you want me then I will come to you."

She was sobbing, her head resting on his shoulder, and as he kissed her unresisting lips a boat's sharp whistle broke the sacred spell.

"Go a little way back, my darling," he whispered, "until the boat is gone. I do not want any one to see you have been crying."

When her misty eyes could no longer see the boat that bore her heart away, she turned, and all the long, lonely way back love's tears lingered on her lashes.

REASON NO 17 WHY YOU SHOULD USE Red Rose Tea

Because it is composed of both Indian and Ceylon teas.

The tea bush is indigenous to Assam in Northern India, and botanists are of the opinion that it is the parent species of all the cultivated varieties in India, Ceylon, China and elsewhere. In a wild state, it grows to a height of fifteen to twenty feet, but the cultivated shrub is only three to four feet high.

Assam being the natural home of the tea bush, it is not surprising that this and other districts in Northern India produce the richest, most pungent teas grown in the world—teas that command higher prices than even the finest Ceylons; but Ceylon teas are very flavory and fragrant, and seem to be specially made to blend with the richer, more syrupy tea of India. When combined, the Ceylons give point and piquancy to the liquor; the Indians, richness and strength.

The distinctive characteristic of Red Rose Tea, that rich, fruity flavor, is obtained by blending these fine Indians and Ceylons; and another very important feature of Red Rose Tea, viz., its uniformity of flavor all the year round, is secured the same way, something not possible to obtain where Ceylon or Indian teas are used alone.

The Blue Label is recommended, and unless you like very strong tea, use only three-quarters as much for a drawing as you use of other teas.

Hon. L. J. Tweedie and Hon. William Pugsley returned to day after a trip to Ottawa. When asked by a Globe reporter whether or not the report was true that stated that he and the Attorney General had gone to Ottawa to discuss the provincial subsidies question with the premier of Nova Scotia, Mr. Tweedie replied in the negative. He said, however, that the real object of the trip was that he and Dr. Pugsley might meet the members of the Grand Trunk railway commission. This object was accomplished, and an exhaustive discussion of the question of the best method of protecting the New Brunswick forests along the route of the Grand Trunk Pacific under the act recently passed took place. It was decided that a number of men shall be placed along the route of the railroad throughout the province to see that no damage is done to the forests by fire, etc. As yet it is, of course, impossible to say how many men will be employed in this way or just where their work will commence.

THE FARMER'S REALM. Practical Suggestions For The Improvement of The Farm.

A great deal of misunderstanding having arisen concerning the objects of the Imperial Government in sending officers to this country to purchase horses, or rather to see if horses suitable for the British Army can be purchased, the following short summary of the position should prove of value. This statement may be regarded as absolutely correct and authoritative.

First and foremost, the demands of the British Army in peace time can be easily met within the four corners of the United Kingdom. That demand is not large, and may be taken as a normal one of 2,500 horses annually, rising in certain years to possibly 3,500 of all kinds and classes.

There is an idea abroad, and certain Ministers and statesmen in this country have brought it forward and may be considered responsible for it, that if the Imperial Government will purchase annually a fixed number of horses, say from 300 to 500, in Canada, a great stimulus will be given to horse breeding generally, and to breeding of the military type of horse in particular. Falling in with this idea, the Imperial authorities are anxious to put it to the test and, for reasons of their own, they fully recognize the advantage that will accrue to the Empire from the opening up of a large and limitless market that can be drawn upon to meet the immense demand that will be created in time of war. The real question that has now to be answered by the practical experiment of purchase during the next few months, is, can suitable horses be procured, and at an average price that will, when the horses are landed in England, favorably compare with that paid for remounts throughout Great Britain and Ireland?

The average price paid in England is an open secret: it is £40, or say $200. The cost of freight and insurance will certainly not exceed another $50, leaving $150, or possibly slightly more, to be paid for the animals selected on the spot. A higher price can be paid for horses of special colour and type such as horses suitable for officer's chargers and household cavalry. It is therefore obvious that Canada is on its trial as to its ability to supply a suitable horse for army purposes.

It is, further, of more importance to Canada than to any else that, as the horses purchased will be regarded in England as well as in this country, as typical, it will be in every way a great misfortune if those sent home are of a class and quality that will engender a belief that the Canadian horse is of an inferior type. Such a belief will probably do more harm to Canadian horse breeding and the reputation of Canadian horses than anything else.

Two classes of horses are to be sought.

1st. Riding horses, fit for heavy and light cavalry from say 15 to 15½ hands.

2nd. Draught horses, fit for being driven postilion, with horse and field artillery. The latter must be less than 1250 lbs. 15.2 to 15.3½ hands in height, strong, active, and with good shoulders to enable them to move fast, and even to gallop, when required: the age should be from 4 to 6 years. In all cases the British Government require horses with short backs, good shoulders, plenty of bone and distinct evidence of quality.

In the case of riding horses, those with an near cross of the thoroughbred are most likely to take the eye of the inspecting officers.

The British Remount Officers are in possession of detailed specifications, showing the exact type and qualifications of the horses required.

Poor Editor.

Editing a newspaper is a nice thing. If we publish jokes, people say we are rattle-brained. If we don't, we are fossils. If we publish original matter, they say we don't give them enough selections. If we give them selections, they say we are too lazy to write. If we don't go to church we are heathens. If we do, we are hypocrites. If we remain at the office we ought to be out looking for news items. If we do go out, then we are not attending to our business. If we wear old clothes, they laugh at us. If we wear good clothes, they say we have a pull. Now, what are we to do? Just as likely as not someone will say that we stole this from an exchange. So we did.
