The Curse of the Ages.

It has been said that every man should go through the world with both ears open-one to catch the sounds of joy, the other to hear the sounds of woe. Those who are fortunate enough to live in the Last West must surely be attentive if they the Last West must surely be attentive if they the mountains provide. From the unbroken regions the mountains provide. From the unbroken regions come the whispering of the reeds, the noisy but musical call of the myriad wild fowl, the ceaseless chatter of the woodland songsters; and from the forests comes the majestic murmur of the pines, the roar of the mighty cataracts and the ripple of the singing brooks. And where man has placed his habitation new voices take up the theme of prase. The waving fields of grain whisper their adoration to the rising sun, and the cattle on a thousand hills join in the proclamation that "All is good." Above all, where men and women congregate there is heard the sweet music of speechthe sobered tones of age, the lusty accents of youth and the innocent prattle of childhood. The ear of man is charmed with the wealth of sound. Nature and art, country and town, fireside and market-place rich in its harmonies. He who wishes may listen, and if his heart so impel him he may join in the ceaseless anthem of praise.

Sounds of Woe
Yet as one turns his head he can hear other sounds,-sighs and groans, and bitter curses. Above the cries of physical suffering caused by pain and moanings of those who have secret burdens to bear -whose hearts are breaking because hope has died, or because faith and love have ceased to be verities. These minor chords of woe! After all we find them dominant at times and we endeavor to console ourselves with the reflection that it is well they should be so. No life is perfect without capacity to suffer.

The Cry of the City. Have you listened to the sounds of woe in a great city? How varied! How ceaseless!-Children weeping ere the sorrow comes with years, and maidens in their revelry converting peace and rest into discord and unseemly commotion, mothers moaning as they face the cold and hunger and the loveless future; yes, and worse than all, the incoherent mutterings of those whose rolling eyes and uncertain ways pronounce them to have lost their reason. It is not pleasant music this, that is given out by suffering humanity. Discord and broken melodies are never any too pleasant. Yet these hearts of men can be brought into unison. And this unison will not be possible so long as in our fair land that greatest damning power among the ing power of drink.

The Toll of Misery.
Our asylums and reformatories are peopled by its victims; our jails and prisons are crowded with its slaves; the haunts of vice and crime are all crimes is a record of its ghastly triumphs-not family but has some tale of horror to 'relate, not a field of activity but can illustrate the effect of its ravages. It is the mother of rapine and murder and lust; it is the partner of vice and hatred and crime. It spares neither rich nor poor, it respects not age, nor sex, nor condition. It is the archnot age, nor sex, nor condition. It is the archenemy of peace and happiness and prosperity; it is the one great stimulant to all that is bestial and low and degrading. Beauty of form and beauty of character disappear in its presence; under its. influence, man who was made a little lower than the angels sinks until he is lower than the brute. Yet we permit the traffic to go on. We sacrifice all that is purest and best in thought and feeling,

THE OLD YEAR.

Shall we let the Old Year go Without a tear, without a sigh, Like a beggar in the snow We would shun and hasten by? Are we blind we do not see He was our good company
When the days were young, not old And cold?
Ought we rather not to stay Clasp his hand while yet we may, Wre swept onward by that tide Rudely forces friends apart; Listening not while they in vain Complain?

Shall we pass our old friend o'er For this young and stranger guide, While he sojourns at our side? Heeding not that he may show Death's snare?

Should we rather not recall Those dear days which now are dead;
Love and laughter, hope and all Those bright paths which ever led To the fields of light and sun,
To some hearts desire won?
They are gone wtih the dear Old Year.
Then my grateful thanks to thee, As thou diest now, Old Year, Sad at heart because I see Thy last day is drawing near True to me thou wast always In the dear departed days, here's peace in Old friend.

Orchard Fearon
all that is sweetest and best in companionship, all that is most comely and graceful in person, to this is a Latin inscription which bears the beautiful interpretation, "If you would see my monument, look monster whose appetite is never satisfied, and whose power for evil has no limit. The story of its work is too horrible to be repeated. The pictures of blighted homes, of ruined hopes of hopeless agony are too pictured to those who can look around. On the pictured to those who can look around. On the tomb of Sir Christopher Wren, in St. Paul's, there around," In a malign satanic way, this great evil of drink can point to decrepitude, and sin and misery just look around."

What are we to do with an evil of this kind? Need there be a moment's indecision? Why should we voluntarily harbor in our midst an enemy that robs us of wealth and honor and self-respect? Just nineteen hundred years ago the sons of men wild in their rage and envy, chose Barabbas and rejected the Annointed One. Can we not after so many years, when we have learned the wisdom of His teaching, reverse the cry of that day and pointing. not to Him but to the vile product of Satanic in vention cry, Away with it! Away with it!
There is nothing else to do. We owe it to ourselves and to our children, we owe it to truth and honor and prosperity, to cast out this modern Ishmael. The son of the bondwoman can have no Ishmael. The son, of the bondwoman can have no partnership with the son of the promise. Why should we delay? Is it a matter of money? Then reckon how much we are adding to our riches each week by pouring down our throats three million week by pouring down our throats taree minion dollars. Where is the return? Tell us again, where is the return? Truly in all commerce we expect something. Even in the Congo district the brutal agent of a brutal king gives something for the labor of those whom he has coerced into unwilling subjection, but King Alcohol robs us of health and wealth, and honor, peace and purity, and gives less than nothing in return.
$\qquad$

The Opposition.
What is in the way of suppression of the traffic? In the last analysis we find that it is the organized opposition to those who are making money out of the trade. Let us then face the problem as we the trade. Let us then face the problem as we face all others that have a national bearing. No man in a community of men can claim unrestricted freedom. His action does not pertain to himself alone, but to, everyone in the society of which he is a member. Since the trade in drink is a menace to national safety, the cry of private interest and vested rights must not be allowed to prevail. Local option? Yes, but only as a weak preparation for that final action which will render the manufacture of the cursed stuff an impossibility, and its distribution a crime. All temporizing expedients are comparativey useless. All compromises only aggravate evil conditions. We have reached the time for heroic action. On physical, financial and moral grounds there is every reason for the enactment of a prohibitory liquor law that will apply to the whole of Canada. We are ready for it, and if we can rise above party littleness we shall have it. hear those words of the Master, "Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these disciples ye have done it unto me."

The One and the Many.
Yet it will be said that to prohibit the manufacture and the sale of liquor is to interfere with individual liberty. Men should be allowed to indulge themselves if they please. No argument is so shallow as this. Man may have the fullest liberty provided it does not interfere with the liberty of others. When a man does that which interferes with the happiness of his wife, the permanent welfare of his children, and the peace of society, surely it is time that the community asserted that the will of the many must prevail over the wish of the individual.

The old butler still remains, and he and I occasionally try and talk over old times, but it is but a poor attempt as a rule man's arrived at estate as my grandfather's room.

After his death his widow would not allow a thing in it to be touched. Everything was in its place just as he left it; and there she would sit for hours thinking of her "man," as she always called the husband who was as devoted to her in his lifetime as she was to him.
Notwithst
Notwithstanding its heavy old-fashoned furniture, it was the cheeriest windows opening on to the mistress's rose garden, with a view of the park and the country beyond, which would have gladdened the heart of a landscape painter. But its special charm for me was the decidedly sporting tone that prevailed.

Two of its sides were given up to bookshelves, which, with the exception of a hundred volumes or so of the "Annual Register," were entirely deAnnual Register," were entirely devoted to books of sport of every kind. Over the mantelpiece hung a portrait in oil of Sir Harry, the winner of the chester 'Cup, and the best racehorse my again a fox's mask and a over that again a fox's mask and a couple of brushes to match; while scattered about the room in rich profusion were other paintings, by Herring and Ferneley, of favorite racehorses and hunters; sundry shooting bits by Cooper, and numerous smaller fry in the shape of highly colored prints after Alken and others. A capacious gun cupboard occupied one recess, and an old-fashioned bedstead, to which my grandfather was in the habit of taking himself off when laid low by the periodical attacks of gout he was subject to, another Last, but not least, there hung on a hook on the door a bright green pinkhook on the door a bright green pink-flowered silk dressing gown. An ordinary garment enough, but one whic for years had a peculiar fascination for e, for the reason that I felt there was history of some sort attached to it.
never remember my grandmother ngry with me but once, and that was one wet day during my periodical visits in the Eton holidays, when, having nothing better to do, it occurred to me to "dress up," as I called it, in grandpapa's dressing gown, and, having done so away I danced to the drawing-room in high glee to show myself off. . To my intense astonishinent, instead ed she would have been, my grand mother was downright angry. Divest ing me of the sacred garment on the spot, she made me promise there and then-the tears were in her eves as she did so, I noticed-never to iay my saerilegious hands upon it aqain.
Many a time after this did I endeav or to extract from my grandmother the mystery in which I felt sure the green dressing gown was enshrouded but I was invariably met with the same answer. now, my dear; not now. Wait until you are a man, and then I'll tell you all about it.

tend the Chester races, which were on that very week, the time-honored Chester Cup, now no longer the important event in the racing world it was in ant event in the racing world it was in former years, being run, oddly enough former years, being run, oddly enou as it turned out, on my birthday. I had never been to Chester, and in a way I was disappointed., But my dear grandmother's happiness at "having me all to myself," as she said all to myself," as she said, more than made up for it. An additional salve too arrived in the shape of a telegram during the afternoon, informing me that the horse I had backed had won; so that it was in a very contented frame of mind that 1 sat down to dinner that night, tete-a-tete with the best loved relative, barring my mother, I had in the world.
"And now,
"And now, my dear," said my grandmother as she rose to la "when you have finished your wine join me in your grandfather's room, and I'll keep my promise of years ago to you, and tell you the story of the green dressing gown."
It may readily be imagined that grandmother's excellent claret and still more excellent port had little or no attraction for me that night, so great was my anxiety to get at the bottom of the mystery; and my aged relative I fear, had hardly time to settle herself in her easy chair before $I$ joined her Her dear old face brightened up as I entered. "I thought you wouldn't be long, my lear," she said, adding: "And now, sit own oprticular chair, light a cigar, then listen to me whilst I tell my tale; I should say, make my confession." Like a good boy, I did as I was told, and as soon as she saw my cigar was well an der way my grandmother commenced as follows:-least, for you wy deare only a hearsay at he died, what a keen sportsman your grandfather was. Hunting shooting fishing,--he was an adept at them all. The Turf too he had been fond of all his life. But it was not until his hereditary enemy the gout laid such a heavy hand upon him, putting in a great measure to an active participation in all the amusements which I have mentioned, that he embarked upon it in earnest. it in earnest. "You see. mr dear." explained my grandmather." You can't do your shont-though you can your hunting after a fashion, that is to say if pounding along a road and looking on at hounds running in the distance, with every chance of your heading the fox into the bargain, is good enough.
"But that sort of thing didn't suit your grandfather at all. He was one of those sort of men who if he couldn't do a thing thoroughly, would let it do a thing thoroughly, would let it alone. Consequently he gave up-and, alone. Consequently he gave up-and, ah me! how reluctantly!-all his favorite field sports one by one, and went in for racing-the only anusent in for racing-the only amusement, as he said, which was left to him-heart and soul. In a very short time indeed he was thoroughly infatuated with it; and I am afraid," sighed my grandmother, shaking her head with a self-re proaching air, "that I was as bad as he was." "Oh, if my dear old man could have only won the Derby," she exclaimed, "what a happy day it would have been for both of us!" "But we never bad the tune," she went on. Everything wo bred, promising though many of them looked when sent to the trainer, turned out moderate to a degree, to the grea as you may imes and it pocke as you may imagine; and it was not success. For though it was still frequented by those who had still freof old-by country laborers, commercial travellers, even by gentlemen farmers and their like-cyclists, mofarmers and their like-cyclists, motorists, and even the ordinary pedestrian who did not know the country nor very well, would pass it by without a glance, especially as the lane between it and the high road was often tween it and the high road was often deep in mire. The old red-brick deep in mire. Thing passed for a farmhouse, rather than a respectable inn. A mile or two further ahead, on the high 1 oad, there was a Cyclists' Rest, while Burley, which boasted of at least one Burther Burley, which boasted of at least one hotel, and innumerable public houses. It is to be feared, also, that the modern traveller prefers modern furniture and electric light to the niture and electric light to the old-world appurtenances of the "Fleetwood Arms." Everything in the old house was certainly spotlessly and the oak furniture was polished until it shone like a mirror; nevertheless, there were signs of decay about less, there were signs of decay about the place, for things that were broken the place, for things that were broken were not always repaired, and it was rumored that the roof was in need of mending, and that the stables and outhouses were growing mouldy from want of use.

Amidst the desolation of declining prosperity there was still one ray cf sunshine in the inn, and this lay in the presence of Margaret Elwyn, who chad lived there ever since she was a child of eight, and She was now just over twenty-three. She was a distant relation of the late proprietor of the house, and had been almost like a daughter to his wife, Mrs, Hallard, daughter to his wife, Mrs. Hallard, who was left a widow when Margaret who was left a widow when Margaret was twelve years old, and had much ado to keep things going and make ends meet. But the widow always comforted herself with the thought that her son Nicholas, who was thirteen when his father died would build up the prosperity of the house once more, when he attained to years of discretion. But eleven years had come and gone, and affairs had grown irom bad to worse. Nicholas was a fairly good man of business, but he fairly good man of business, but he was not a good innkeeper, seeing that he was inclined to be sullen, morose, and overbearing, his presence did not +end to make the guests comfortable, and, in homely and, in homely words, they very greaty preferred "his room to his company." Even old customers were driven away by his want of courtesy and conviviality. Old Mrs. Hallard looked on despairingly, and did her best to remedy matters by her kindly best to remedy matters by her kindly cheeriness; but as her health declined, and her days advanced, this became clouded over, so that all the brightness that the house afforded came from the girl Margaret, who had grown up with a really beautiful face, grown up with a really beautiful face, 7 strong yet graceful figure, and a gay voice, with which she carolled about the dark passages like a lark. "The Mid inn would be nothing without Margaret," the guests used to murmur sometimes; and it was cer mur sometimes; and it was certainly she who proved the centre of attractinn to young and old. As long as Margaret remained at the "Fleetwood side, who wanted to get a word with her; while the older men liked to be erved by a pretty girl who had a served by a pretty girl who had a laugh and a jest for them when they were merry, or a word of consolation when they were sad.

All things come to an end, and with the death of Mrs. Hallard, Marwell for her to make a change.
"If you go," said Nicholas, slowly, it will be the end of the old house, "Oh, no, it won't, Nicholas," said Margaret, almost pleadingly. will get a good housekeeper, and perhaps a fresh servant-that girl Sally is no good at all-and there would be just as many customers as ever." "And how many are there?", said Nicholas, sourly. He was seated at the centre table of the bar-parlor, where Margaret was looking atter his thete guests himself. There was some excuse for this, seeing that he had been out all day and had come in soaked to the skin with rain. Possibly the bad weather-or some ill-success in his business affairs-had affected his temper, for his dark face wore an expression which was singularly gloomy and unpleasant. He was a tall man with broad shoulders, but ointed and awkward in movement. His face would not have been badlooking but for the sulien discontent with which his brow was usually disfigured. But the brow was narrow, the dark eyes small and rather deep set, and the thin lips, though half conset, and by a growth of black beard and moustache, were anything but amiable.
"The old chaps that used to come in my father's time are dropping off, one by one, like dead leaves from tree, and as for the farmers' sons and clerrs from Burley, well, we all know what they come for. And a precious lot we shall see of them when you're gone." the girl, looking down with a troubled face. "It sounds, somehow, as if I were trying to get them here for my own sake, and you know very well

"But you would never, do that, Nicholas? Why, your people have had this house for nigh upon two hundred years." "There won't be much left of it in a year or two longer then," said Nicholas gruffy. "It's mouldering away before your eyes. It would no sell for much. The price would not did not intend to remain in perpetuity "If you go at all," he said to her, "tit's no particular matter to me when yo go. As good one day as another." "But have you got a housekeeper? asked Margaret, anxiously. I sho; and don't want one. I shall shut up the place when you are "Oh, no, Nicholas."

asking after the last summer's crops with the greatest interest. It turned out that he was a member of the Missouri Legislature, on a little tour for health and pleasure, and Eli cheer fully gave him a great deal of infor nation concerning the country in which he lived.
"You know, I always feel at home among the farmers," said the gentle large number of my constituents are farmers, and whenever I can get away I go down among them for an outing. Such good country fare as they give me! Such fried chicken-such the Waldorf-Astoria can compare with it!"
"I wish't ye'd call in on me as you're goin' back," said Eli, warmed you're goin' back," said Eli, warmed to the heart "We've to the heart. "We've got a pretty housan' up to the city now to put it in bank." The member of the Missouri Leg islature looked alarmed. "He looked alarmed.
"Hush! Don't tell that to every one, he whispered. "Have you where you are going to put up?"' "I don't know yet," said Eli, visibl swelling; "but I reckon I'll strike one of the big hotels for dinner-somethin along about forty or fifty centsdon't mind expenses, this trip. An there can't no confidence man git the do-an' the first one that comes up an' calls me his long-lost uncle is go in' to get pasted over the head with this here umbreller!"
"But sometimes there are several of them, working together," said the concern. "Let's see-a friend of mine gave me the address of a place he al ways goes to-if I haven't lost it-ah here it is! He says it is a very plain piace, but the meals are fine. Suppose ye both go there; and I'll keep you in sight after dinner till you get you money banked. Really, Mr. Barrows ofter the interesting conversation w have had you morning, I shall not fee bank." And they reached the ity And they reached the city, and Eli Missouri Legislature, and was lost in the crowd.

II.

M'Lindy Ann had heard the distant rumble of the early-morning train a the field and sped away to the little town, two miles further on. Break fast was ready, and she was keeping warm on the back of the stove.
The entire house was speckless In its best Sunday speckless and strange to relate, so was M'lindy Ann, Her worn black dress was brushed to the last déree, and showed its threadbareness forlornly. Her shabure on the bedroom waiting her pleasblack cape hung over a chair rusty for use at a moment's notice.
She was at the door, watching the bend of the road. Her face was colorless, even to the lips. Unconsciously her fingers plucked and twisted the ends of the ribbon bow at her throat into little black spirals. M'lin throat was plainly much disturbed. When a little cloud of dust came crawling around the bend of the road, M'lindy Ann bestirred herself and set The breakfast on thired herself and set thing was ready when Eli Everyat the door, and Mhen Eli stepped in up, pretending not to notice that he was trembling from head to foot, and that he leaned against the door for support. What she really did notice were muddy, that his coat was torn, and that his hat had bee M'lindy ann hastily set a dish down on the tabie. I see how it is," she said. "You've been run over by one o' them street cars, Ell. Which ome your bone roke?" Eli burst into futile tears, and sank "It's worse'n that, M'lindy Ann!" he sobbed, with his arms on the table among the dishes and his head on his arms. "I've been robbed and drugged. I've lost the whole pile-an' is esky int'mate with a stranger-but he said he was a member of the Missouri Legislature, an' how was I to s'pose he was lyin'? An' the game they howed me-I could 'a' beat it with one han' tied behin' me. I seen my or so, to put in the bank along with the other; but they must ' $a$ ' put somethin' in the beer-I didn't drink more'n half a teacupful, M'lindy Ann -an I couldn't move hand or foot took the whole pile. An' then they come back an' kicked me all around', $\mathrm{an}^{\prime}$ tramped on my hat; an' when woke up I was jes' in tıme to ketch the train back. I'm ruined, M'lindy Ann! The money I've worked so hard Ann! The money ?, "I've worked pretty hard for it myself," said M'lindy Ann drily.

She had made the same remark the morning before, but now there was new quality in it. Eli'groan give ye half of it, M'lindy," he said sadly. "Ye ain't worked as hard as what I have, but maybe you're entitled to half-fur ye've kep' the house mighty nice; but M's all gone! What's the matter, ye all dressed up fur at this time o' day?"
An soon as breakfast's over, I'm Koin' to start for the city," said ing her coffee. She had laid her bonnet on a chair with the cape; and beside it was a bundle wrapped in pa"Goin' to the city?" gasped Eli in dieep amazement. ome money goin' to the city to put

"M'lindy Ann, you've got that money?" he cried in broken speech, "You'd taken it out before: I lef home? The man-the man from Mis"Euri didn't get it?" "Eli Barrows, you went up to the city with a piece of wood in your satchel, wrapped up in newspaper," said M'lindy, hooking the old black cape under her chin. "I hope the man from Missouri felt that it done him good. Take keer of the placer water, an' don't forgit to wind the clock, an' be shore to put the cat wut of the house every night. I'd tell oo wash the dishes every day, buty know good an' well you won't do it. This day week you can meet me at the friain. You might as well drive down to the depot now, so's you can bring the team back."
"M'i's jaws made connection slowly. "M'lindy Ann," he said meekly, We could get 'Liza Briggs to mind the place; an now that I know the topes-"" "You stay right here," said M'lindy Ann composedly. "I don't want nothin' to do with none o' the ropes ou learned while you was in the city!" And with this parting thrust a very small and very erect woman walked small and very erect woman walked out to the buggy, followed by a tall out to the buggy, follow and abject-looking man.
"'Tain't right for a lone woman to go off on the train with all that mongo off on the train with all that money, he said as they drove up beside the little red station. "No tellin" what'll become of ye, M'lindy Ann." "There won't nothin' become of me,' said M'lindy Ann composedly me,' said M'lindy Ann composedly. 'You have the buggy here to mee the evenin train one week from today-an' you look after the house. There ain't much to do, you know You tol' me yestidday that my work didn't amount to nothin': After which M'lindy Ann, the hec-tored and brow-beaten, disappeared tored and brow-beaten, disappeared into an unknown world.

III.

Perhaps there may have been years that were as long as the week of M'lindy's absence, but Eli had never experienced them. The work put new cricks into his back and unexpected cricks into his back and unexpected blisters on his hands; and he had no "straightened up" that he had to be gin on another, and get 'them unstraightened again.
The same thing was to do over and over and over, not only over and over, not only every day, but three times a day. He looked at but three times a day. He looked a the soiled dishes with loathing, and swept in the middle of the floor, shun ning the corners faithlessly. He milked and churned the first day, but after that he merely milked, considering that butter was too dearly bought.
After all, it did seem that M'lindy Anns' work was not the easiest in the world, though it had this saving grace -she was used to it. No doubt when one got used to it everything was very smooth sailing. saw M'lindy Ann step from the train and walk toward him with the ligh step of a girl.

know. "The whole house is in a mess, know. The whole house is in a mess, i s'pose? Well, never mind-I'll soon get everything, eleaned up!"
And he drove briskly home, waitAnd heydrove briskly hothe, waiting for her to begin until she was seated in the kitchen, with the lampseated in the kitchen, witession in her light showing a new expresser "pes. "Well, M'lindy Ann," said Ell, mild ly, "how'd ye come on in the city?" He had purposely made the speech noncommittal. He was ready, if she and sneer at her forever and a day; but he would not begin until he had heard her story. He was not quite sure of M'lindy Ann. He had lived sure of M'lindy Ann. He had lived with her twenty years, but it took with her twenty years, but it took more than that to learn all about M'lindy Ann.
She turned up her dress skirt so that the fire would not "draw" it, and began taking things out of her satchel-the same satchel which had satchel-the same satchel which had journeyed with Eli while he was learning the ropes.
"Well," she said deliberately, "the money's in bank-half in the Firs National an' half in the Germania. I divided it, so's in case one o 'em broke. I've got two bank-books and two check-books-there they are. Every check of that money'll have to be Just sit down now and write to us for full particulars of the best business proposition you are likely to hear this year. Let us tell you, in plain words, how very little money will start you in the profitable business of poultryraising The Peerless Way. Let us show you why it will pay you well to present product-and it grows bigger day by day. Poultry-raising is the best business for any farmer, any farmer's child. Pays better for the time and money invested. Profit is surer. Isn't over-crowded-and never will be.

Poultry ought to be a side-line on every farm-

The poultry-crop is the one crop that never fails. Every farmer certainly ought to make poultry a 'side line,' at least-it is a certain profit for him, no matter how bad a year he may have with his other crops. And the Peerless customer need feel no worry about finding a market for all he wants to sell in the way of poultry or eggs. We look after that for him. We find him a buyer who pays the best market prices in spot cash.

Your credit with us makes it very easy to start-

Your credit is perfectly good with us. You can equip yourself fully for successful poultry-raising, and you don't need ready money to do it. We trust you; and we will make the terms so easy for you that you will never feel the outlay. In fact a Peerless Outfit pays for itself, and quickly, too.

One PEERLESS user will sell 200,000 fowl this year Scores and hundreds-ten thousand people in fact,-all over Canada, are following The Peerless Way to their profit; More than eleven million dollars' worth of eggs were sold in Canada last year. Yet with all this output prices stay high for every sort of good poultry and eggs. The market is far bigger than the adopt the Peerless methods, to make use of the advice and aid of the Peerless Board of Experts-pay you well, and profit you speedily.

Let us ship you this and trust you for it. We pay the freight and sive for 1 . We a 10 -year guarantee.

1 PEERLESSusers get valuable help and service free Besides finding a buyer for our customers' poultry products (which we do free of any cost to you) our Board of Experts stands ready always to advise, counsel, help with practical suggestions-free, entirely so, to Peerless users. These practical men have developed the greatest poultry business in CanadaThe Poultry Yards of Canada Limited. Long experimenting in the hatcheries of this great plant brought the Peerless to perfection, and proved it as the one successful incubator for use in every section of the Dominion.

More than 10,000 PEERLESSusers are successful-

Poultry-raising with the difficulties taken out of it-that is the reason why The Peerless Way has proved profitable for over ten thousand people, scattered all over Canada. There is not a reason on earth why it would not do as much for you as it has for the most successful of them. No matter where your farm is, you can do well The Peerless Way-and you won't need to depend much on plain farming, either.
Send right away for interesting offer and FREE very valuable information You will know why The Peerless Way is the way to get profit from poultry, once you have read the big and plain-spoken free book we want you to ask for. With the book will come an offer to outfit you for poultry-profit on terms that will meet your wishes and fit your means. Please write and ask for this now-make your start nowit will pay you to.

being magnificent. He believed that it is in the long run ignorance alone that divides: that knowledge undermines race prejudice, and weakens, if it cannot wholly dissipate, the hatred of nations. And it is just of mutual knowledge that a Rhodes scholarship is the almost unique opportunity. It gives a man, at an important moment of his life three ifie, three years of contact with new institutions, new types of character, new ways of looking at things. It gives him, quite apart from the time he spends at Oxford, opportunities of learning something of the literature and the life and the life of European peoples; or perhaps, not to be pretensions, we had better say, of some one European people. It gives him, indeed, more than that. For it is the opportunity at once of travel and of something something more. Travel is much in education, but not the whole And cer. tainly from the point of view of the sympathetic understanding neighbors, the knowledge which travel gives is gives is at the best incomplete. Illuminating it may be, but its light is stil upon the surface. We need to supplement it with something more intimate and penetrating; something which only friendship can give. Travel widens the ity that blurs the vision the insulareven of those whose homes are not on islands; but its work is preparatory and cathartic; and when prejudices are cleared away, sight and understain remains for inoccupy their place. But the surest way to insight, perhaps even the only sure way, is through friendships. And a Rhodes Scholar who spends three years in the rare intimacy which Oxford College life encourages can hardly fail to foge life encourages can hardly fail to form just such friendships - friendships that count because they open the way to understanding.
It will indeed be strangely disappointing if a Rhodes scholarship does not make at least for sanity of joes ment and breadth of sympathy. We have heard something of the risk of "denationalizing" a college boy

PROBLEM IN BEHAVIOR.
The problem for this month is as fol lows: and Mrs. Brown, age 50 and 48, live on a farm of 160 acres. They owe of farm implements to the extent of $$ 250$. With hard work they manage to save $$ 500$ a year. They have two girls age 12 and 14 , both fond of music. Should they spend part of their earnings in providing music lessons for their children? This would of course necessitate the purchase of an organ.-Proposed by

NOVEMBER PROBLEM.

The November problem brought a great many solutions and it was difficult greaward the prize. However, the editor

Soth question
Ond answers are given below:

Question.

Mrs. Hall hears on Wednesday that an acquaintance of hers, Miss Brown, is to be married the next day, Thursday. She sends her a few lines of good wishes to reach her on her wedding day. note from Miss Brown saying that even although she is exceedingly busy, she must write and thank her for the lovely present, which is just what she wanted and which she has not got. Mrs. Hal has sent no present, and did not intend doing so. What should Mrs. Hall do.

Answer.

This is certainly a very embarrassing situation for both Mrs. Hall and Miss Brown. If Miss Brown has received gift which she believes came from Mrs, the donor of the present and also to her self to put Miss Brown right in the matter. Miss Brown being but an acquaint ance it would not be well for Mrs. Hal sending a present even though she may feel forced to do so by circumstances or coercion. Mrs. Hall should seek a per sonal interview if possible, and if not she should write a kind, straightforwar expressing her very best wishes. Such conduct would display honesty to herself, to the sender of the present, and to Miss Brown. If Miss Brown does not appreciate such action and feels hurt, then No grief should throb the heart, No tears be shed.
For friendship that is bought 'Twere better dead.
1.-Mrs. Hall should send Miss Brow a small present, with a note of explanation, otherwise, her conscience will never rest easy. Miss Brown has probably made the mistake of confusing someone's present, thinking it was sent by Mrs. Hall, a natural result of the "topsyturvy" state of affairs owing to preparations for her marriage. Another explanation might be-that Miss Brown thinks more highly of a few lines of kindly wishes than an expensive present, carelessly sent, more as a duty to ho got rid of, than from any real feeling of esteem or affection for a bride. eem or affection for a bride. Miss Brown to say that she sent a note of good wishes, but did not send any gift. She should express a hope that Miss and should conclude a friendly note by a renewed expression of good wishes." 3.-" Mrs. Hall, having done all she inended, should take no further action in Thursday morning, Miss Brown would most likely find that she had made a stupid mistake-pardonable, perhaps, on the ground of excitement; but for either party to make any attempts at explanation would only be to render confusion worse confounded." 4.-" Mrs. Hall should take an early opportunity of calling on her friend (formerly Miss Brown) after she is settled in her own house, and then she should explain pleasantly that Miss Brown had not diving thanks where thanks were not due, and ask her if she has discovere 5.-It seems to me that if Mrs." wishes to cultivate the friendship of Miss Brown and spare her feelings, she is "stuck" for a present. But how to send it and smooth out the affair, that is the question. Perhaps the present accompanied by the following letter would clear up the atmosphere and make every body happy.
My Dear Miss Brown:-
You will understand how surprised I was to receive your letter of thanks when I inform you that I did not send the pre You have evidently mistak

Should I begin a business letter to an unmarried woman with "Dear Miss"? or is "Dear Madam" correct for either a married or single woman? "Dear Madam" is correct, whether the woman addressed be married or single.

Siam. This particular set of horns is second best amongst a total of eight specimens in existence.
The collection had not been in existence many months before it was enrich and splendid trophies secured by Mr. A S. Reed, an English sportsman, during an extensive series of hunting adven tures in the wild Northwest, and which for three years has been on exhibition for three years has been on exhibition at the Union Club in Victoria British Columbia. It included heads of the giant moose, caribou, Alaskan brown bear, white mountain sheep, and walrus. Owing to the disappearance of the big game of Alaska, it is doubtful whether it would be gether a similar collection of such fine specimens. The Reed trophies were well known among the sportsmen of Europe part with them was because he has paken up his residence in this country When he left Victoria and finally settle in England he gave instructions for his collection to be sold, and fixed the price at $£ 2,000$. It went begring for some time, when it was finally secured for America's national collection for $£ 1,000$ through the generosity of Mr. Emerson McMillin, a member of the Camp Fire Club. This was the sum offered for the heads and horns, there being a great number of very large skin rugs in the collection. When Mr. Reed received this offer he replied that he would not like

Music and the Drama.

The rotations of the wheel of "sea sons" and "tides" in our religious life, are fast becoming m ingless-and useless.
Ages ago, when the world had time to worship, and rejoice in the birth of the Saviour, the Christmastidewas of charity, music, and piety-lasted for a whole week. But who could imagine our modern-day Winnipeg with its stores, banks, real estate, law offices, etc., closed for a whole week in mutua agreement, celebrating the advent of the Saviour of the World! That, indeed, is a hard task for the imagination; but it is a far harder task to imagine our churches wide open during a whole week, crowded with people engaged in devo the rich sharing their wealth with th poor.
Granting that such would be extrem conditions in these days, it is to be re gretted that heir are churche short hour on the real Christmas day and that many of our stores and offices are doing their usual business.
The custom in these days is to make either the Saturday before or the Sun day after the real Christmas day do double duty both as a Christmas and a Lord's day. If this is carried on much longer the 25th of December will hav no more significance than any other secular date on the calender-except as racing, fighting (human fighting, in these days), all sorts of "sports" and general debauchery.
The Christmas of holy rejoicing and praise-giving has almost already vanish
In the face of these facts how ridicu lous-how atrocious it is that the Christmas musical offerings in our churches should be squeezed into the ordinary ervices of a Sunday It would be very noble of our choir leaders were they to arrange an musical festival on Christmas day, and unite, every church of each denomination, or better still, all the denominations together-it would be very noble of them could they but arran ally for such a musical feast.
The fact that secular musical societies are the sole promoters of oratorio music, i.e., in its entirety, in this city, does not redound much to the credit of our churches and to our church piety. he oratorio rightfully belongs to into the degrading slavery of secular $\underset{\text { We }}{\text { ends. }}$
We need raise the tone of Christmas in our city and maintain that tone a; keeping Christmas day at all. We now pack the remnants of its holy and sacred functions into the ordinary Sabbath, for the sake of being free on the 25 th of December to indulge in the most materialistic functions that this world can entice us to participate in.
Music is our only hope-music of the pious master-and the only means by which can be effected the desired improvement in psychological evolution of of that something in us which baffles the understanding, and which elevates our standard of life.

Therefore the danger is that if no ennobling and refining forces are supplied to modify the methods that are now employed in the better draw the veil over that beautiful and momentous scene in Bethlehem, and forget it forever

I was at a concert the other evening when every number was encored. The performers, of course, always like to be applauded, in fact some of them live applauded, in fact somplause, but it is hardly fair to make them give two concerts instead of one, for that is what it amounts to.
Audiences are often very thoughtless Audiences are often very thoughtless in demanding too many encores, and in demanding to many encores, and sometimes the artists let them know that will be seen from the following extracts from "Musical Canada" for this month:
M. de Pachmann, one of the greates intelpreters of Chopin, gave a recital at the Queen's Hall recently, charming a arge audience by his wonderfully expressive playing and by the equally expressive gestures and remarks in which he indulges during his performances, An amusing incident occurred after his rendering of Schumann's Sonata in G. When he returned to the platform in response to a persistent demand for an encore, he began Schumann's "Vol encore, he began Schumann's "Vogel als Prophet" at a rapid tempo, breaking off at the eighteenth bar with the words It is enough!" This seems to be an effective, if slightly undignified, way of reproving the encore fiend who is always so much in evidence at the recitals of popular artist.
A somewhat similar incident occurred lately at Plymouth at a concert at which Caruso was singing. The great tenor, of course, scored a great success, but he could not content his hearers who persisted in demanding more. After granting several encores he declined to do more; but the audience remained unsatisfied and continued to applaud. After coming on the platform severa times, Caruso at last appeared with his hat and overcoat, and when the audience had become silent, he said in his best Italian-English: "It is finished; I am tired, I want my supper!"
The secret of many a lawyer's success is strikingly divulged in Charles. Klein's great masterpiece of modern topical playwriting, "The Third Degree," which comes to Winnipeg during January. Richard Brewster, the celebrated exponent of international law in "Tha Third Degree" says to the wife of his best paying client: "The painful part of our profession is that the client's of our profession is that the client's weakness is the lawyer's strength When men hate each other and rob each other we lawyers don't pacify them. We dare not. We encourage them. We dare not. We encourage for profit. If we didn't they'd go to some lawyer who did. When a man wants to do the wrong thing, he's al ways willing to pay a lawyer a good price to advise him to do it." price to advise him to do it." Promising young attorneys will find a great deal of sound philosophical wis dom in "The Third Degree," and inci dentally prospective legal contestants will glean much wholesome advice which, if sought direct of any recognized and reputable authority, would cost a pretty penny In explanation of this prelendid and clear insight into the methods of barristers by the playwright it may be stated that Charles Klein is a lawyer of ability, having studied law admitted to the English bar.

We remember that dblissful, self-con ained creature with long hair and neck wear, and short cash and brains with his apings of Coquelin and Booth-bu he has dropped behind in the modern ace, to accept the "ten-and-cakes. It

A Canadian Province Yet to Be

It is pleasing news that Newfoundland is now enjoying a time of unusual prosperity. Our fellowthem as fellow-Canadians-living in that great island which stands sentinel in the island which stands sentinel in the mouth of one of the greatest of our country's many great rivers, can stand a period of good times, for they have can stand a period of good times, for they have hid more than their share of bad times. The fishing been exceptionally ing has been exceptionally good during the past season, and much progress has been made in the mining of iron and copper. Mining is a comparatively new industry in Newfoundland, and one seemingly which is capable of great expansion. And al remarkable activity in railway building, which is the great developer of any country that has anything to develop. In due time Newfoundland will come tapping at the door of Canada, and will be welcomed into the Dominion.

Our Rallway Mileage.

The death of James Rankin, who helped to build remendous advance the Grand Trunk, recalls the thade within the space of a single lifetime. In 1836 there were but sixteen miles of steel in Canada. In 1867, when the Dominion was formed the ada. In 1867, when the Dominion was formed, the total trackage was 2,278 miles. To-day there are total trackage was 2,278 miles. To-day there are in Western Canada, to say nothing of the rest of n Western Canada, to say nothing of the rest of the Dominion, no less than 11,472 miles of railway of which the C. C. P. R. has 6,097 miles, having laid 404 miles during 1908, the Canadian Northern 3,500 miles, having laid 250 miles during 1908, the Grand Trunk Pacinc 1,385 miles, having, laid 403 miles during 1908, and the Great Northern 490 miles. The total mileage of railways with whieh the whole Dominion enters upon the new year is close upon 28,000 . Canada thus leads the world, with one mile of railway to every 300 people. In the United States there are 381 people to every mile of railway.

A Great Change For the Better

The entirely true statement made recently by the Secretary of State at Ottawa, that alcoholism is not at all a prevalent vice in Canada to anything like the same extent as in European countries, calls attention anew to the change which has taken place tention anew to the change which has taken place in the last few years in the attitude of employers ity towards "the social glass" was regarded rathe as a qualification than otherwise in some branche trade. Commercial travellers were supposed to sell more goods on the strength of it; promoter to sell more stock. Intoxicating beverages wer regarded as part and parcel of private hospitality The clergy themselves were in some cases, not so ong ago, welcomed with something stronger than ould now be offered. The habit of getting polit y drunk was tolerated-treated as a matter o ourse. Now all these things are changed, and whil here are still appalling numbers of patients in he alcoholic wards of city hospitals, over-indulgenc in liquor is being educated out of the people. Every nd as the Secretary of State pointed out of Dominion Parliament just before the adjournmen for the Christmas holidays, the railroad companie and other business concerns, large and small, are ployees. - But much remains yet to be done befor our country is rid of the evil of intemperance.

The Hudson Bay Route

During the session of the Dominion Parliamen which began in November no document of greate public importance was submitted by the Governmen than the report embodying the complete survey of the available routes to Hudson Bay. The grea ago associated in remoteness with the Northwes Passage and the polar regions. There was th same prevailing ignorance about the northern water as there was concerning the northern lands of th continent. It is now realized that Hudson afford the best grain route to Europe and the best route for the varied supplies needed by Western Canada. It is a notable fact that despite the great transportation development or the past quarter o a century, linking Eastern and Western Canada, th Hudson Bay Company still finds its original rout preferable for much of its traffic both ways between this country and England. It is known that the fisheries of Hudson Bay are among the richest in munication will develop extensive fishing industries which will improve the food supply of this and the neighboring country. The most important ques tion dealt with in the report laid on the table of of the route for marketing the grain of this country. The surveys indicate tha- the Port Nelson route is preferable to the more northerly course by Fort way connection with the existing route from railway connection with the existing railway system $$ 16,426,000$, and by the Fort Churchill route $$ 19,108$, 000 . These figures include harbor terminals, that railway construction. The Port Netc., as well as the advantage of being only 410 miles route has as compared with 477 miles to Fort Churchill. ## King Leopold and the Congo.

The event of the past month which has claimed the lion's share of the world's attention was the death of King Leopold of Belgium, whose from the world was, after all, a matter of but little more importance than that of any other public man who has passed the allotted three score years and ten. There were not, and are not, any political complications in Belgium to uncertainty or unrest, and the change in occasion the crown will mean nothing politically to the Belgians. It is to be believed that they are glad as husband and father was- so scandalous. behavior a man of most extraordinary ability-in the was of accumulating enormous riches for himself. In his eagerness to amass millions he neglected great opportunities to do something which the Recording Angel might have written to the credit side of his account. The Congo country and its inhabitants were entrusted to his charge by the European powers, because it was believed he would rightly discharge that trust. A mistake more tragic was never made. was horrors and atrocities for which Leopold knows something of. Only a few days before Leopold's death Sir Arthur Conan Doyle was cheered while he described "the public meeting in London, ing it "not only a crime, but the congo," callever committed in the history of the world," and telling of the immense numbers of human beings and of the vast areas that had cruel treatment and of devastated in order that "the been plundered astute, perverse Leopold" might wring his $$ 180,000$, 000 from the Congo, which in extent is somewhat arger than Germany, Austria-Hungary, France, tated in the cable dispatches that combined. It was stated in the cable dispatches that King Leopold's last illness was partly caused by worry over the denunciations of his course in regara wo the Congo. If this is true, it,stands as a further illustration that a man will sometimes worry about criticisms of his conduct, who did not worry at all about the bru-

Keep Things Moving

The artist who arranges and re-arranges the goods in the windows of yonder departmental store has a great genius for "re-adjustment". He loves The eye is ever hungry for a new view of created things. I have no doubt that the Almignty had this in mind when He arranged for a perpetual chang for floating. Let the built the clouds with a genius for fioating. Let the young, preacher who always

Yes, free. I don't ask a cent of your money -I don't want you to keep the phonographI just want to give it to you on a free loanthen you may return it at my own expense.

Read the Offer:

I will ship you free this grand No. 10 outfit, Fireside Model, with one dozen Gold Moulded and Amberol records. You do not have gages. I want you to get this free outfit-the masterpiecce of Mr. Edison's skill -in yourhome. I want you to see and hear Mr Edison's and hear Mr. Edison's final and greatest improvement in phonographs. I want to convince you of its wonderful superiority. Give a free concert, give a free minstrel show music, dances, the old fashioned hymns, grand opera, superiority. Give a free concert; give a free minstrel show, music, dances, the old fashioned hymns, grand opera, comic opera-all this I want youto hear free of charge-all in your own home-on this free loan offer.

MY REASON - My reason for this free loan offer, this extra liberal offer on the finest talking machine ever

MR. EDISON Says: "I Want to see a Phonograph in " every Home."

The Phonograph is the result of years of experiment; it is Mr. Edison's pet and hobbv. He realizes fully its yalue as an entertainer and educator; for the phonograph brings the pleasure of the city right to the village and the farm home. Now, the new Fireside Edison Phonograph of our outfit No. 10, 1910 Model, is the latest and greatest improved talking machine made by this great inventor. Everybody should hear it; everybody must hear it. If you have only heard other talking machines before, you cannot imagine what beautiful music you can get from the outfit No. 10. This new machine is just out and has never been heard around the country. We want to convince you we want to prove to you that this outfit is far, far superior to anything ever heard before. Don't miss this wonderfully liberal offer.
MY TEASO I I don't want you to buy it-I don't ask you to buy anything. But I do feel that if I can send you this great phonograph and cor vince you of its merits, of its superiority, you will be glad to invite your neighbors alu friends to your house to let payment and, at the same time, a rock-bottom price. Perhaps you, yourself, would want a Phonograph, and if you ever intend to get a phonograph, now is the chance to get the brand new and most wonderful phonographever made, and on a most wonderfv. y liberal offer. But if neither you nor your friends want the machine, that is $O$. $K$. I simply want you to have it on a free loan, and perhaps somebody who heard the machine will buy one later. I am glad to send it on a free loan offer anyway. I will There are no strings on this offer, absolutely none. It is a free loan that is all. I I ask not for one cent of your money, I only say if any of your people want to buy a phonograph, they may get one for $$ 2.00$ a month, if they want it.

A Chicago restaurant boasts of an Irish Munchausen 'who acts in the Trish Munchausen who acts in the humble capacity of waiter and adds much to the entertainment of customers. Some of thrse gentlemen had been spinning some guod yarns one evening. One of them on being served with a small lobster, asked -"Do you call that a lobster, Mike?", "Faix, I do believe they do be callin' thim lobsters here, surr! We call 'em crabs at home!', "Oh," said the diner, 'you have lobsters surr!, said the diner, 'you have lobsters
"Oh lo in Ireland ?" "Is it lobsters? Begorra,' the creeks is full of 'em! Many a toime have I seen 'em when I've leaped lobsters grow in Ireland?" "Well," said Mike, thoughtfully, "to spake widin bounds, surr, Pd say a matter of five or six feet." "What five or six feet." "What! Five or six feet? How do they turn round in those feet? How do they turn round in those creeks" Bedad, surr, the creeks in Ireland are fifty or sixty feet wide!" said the unaboshed Mike "But" said said the unabashed Mike. "But," said the persistent inquirer, "you said you the persistent inquirer, "you said you

Lord Strathcona's New Year's Message to the Canadian West.

Specially Written by His Lordship for the "Western Home Monthly."

The Editor has asked me to write a short article for the New Year Number of the "Westem Home Monthly." I accept the invitation with a great deal of pleasure. It gives me an opporHome Monthly." I accept the invitation with a great deal of pleasure. It gives me an opportunity, which I value very much, of conveying to my many friends in the West the most cordial tunity, which I value very much, of conveying to my many friends in the West the most cordial Seasonable Greetings, and of expressing a sincere wish that the New Year may be a prosperous Seasonable Greetings, and of expressing a sincere wish that the New Year may and happy one for Western Canada and other parts of the great Dominion.

The memories of my recent visit to the West are fresh and vivid. It will not be possible to readily forget either the impressions made upon me by the country through which I passed, or the warm and far too flattering welcome I received everywhere. I thought I had a fair idea of the progress that has been made since my previous visit, but the reality proved to be much greater than my imagination. No matter what one may have thought many years ago of the possibilities and potentialities of the West, views of the kind are strengthened a hundredfold by what can be seen to-day.

I wish many hundreds of the men of light and leading in the United Kingdom could be induced to go and see the land of promise for themselves ; and I mean to do my best to impress upon them the desirability of doing so. One hesitates to give expression to half of what one elieves on this fascinating subject. When the rapid progress of Une century, in spite of the dificulties of transportation, is considered, surely the increase in population in the Canadian West in a far shorter period may be expected to be at least on as large a scale, if not larger. This is not an unnaturally optimistic view, having regard to the facilities that now exist for reaching the country, and for sending to market the produce that is sure to be raised there, as compared with those in existence when the Prairies to the South were opened up.

It must be remembered also when pondering on the matter, that the resources of the Westand in the West I of course include British Columbia-are exceptionally boundiful. Agriculture, Dairying, Stock Raising and Fruit Farmiag employ tens of thousands of families, As to fruit, I received some samples of apples a few days ago grown on the Prairies of Southern Manitoba, which will compare favorably with those raised either in the East or in Bitish Columbia. Then there are Minerals of all kinds, Forests, abundant Fisheries; to crown it all, a network of Railways affords access for all its natural products and manufactures to the local markets, and those of the world are open to them by the Atlantic and Paciic. In these circumstances, enthusiasm about the future of this great Country is not only pardonable, but cannot be helped; and when one begins to think in figures, either of population, of production, or of trade, the estimates are apt to become bewildering on account of their very vastness.

The people inhabiting Manitoba, Alberta, Saskatchewan and British Columbia have a great heritage, and at the same time a great responsibility. I have no doubt whatever that they will prove equal to the occasion. It rests with them to see that the reputation of the British Empire in he observance of law, order, justice, good government, and careful finance, is fully maintained. They must not forget that while belonging to particular Provinces of the Dominion, they are also Canadians in the wider sense and citizens of the great Empire, and that they must look forward to sharing its burdens as well as its joys. And further it is beholden to them to hand down inlact othose who will follow them the priceless heritage to which they themselves succeeded. So long as our race, both in the United Kingdom and in the Dominions beyond the Seas, retains its pride in its history and traditions and its determination to maintain its predominance of many centuries, all will go well, and the British Empire will continue to flourish and prosper.

In making these few remarks about the West, it must not be thought for a moment that I am unmindful of the attractions of the Eastern parts of the Dominion. They can show a record of progress and prosperity in the past of which they are justifiably proud ; and they believe the future has a prospect for them as bright as any that the West can expect. There will be ivvary between the East and the West, that is certain, but it will be of a friendly and faa:ily character, and will form the foundation on which will be built a strong, happy, prosperous, united and contented Canada.

there is a much needed lesson wn the need of forgetting differences of nationality and creed and concentrating celebrations on Dominion Day. When those of all races and creeds, who have come to find homes in the great west, can, without violation of past beliefs or traditions, join heartily in celebrating the birthday of the great new and strong young nation that is being slowly but surely welded together in this half of the North American Continent.
It is a matter of regret that so far read carefully "The New North" by Agnes Deans Cameron, anothor western writer, as I am sure readers of the Wes tern Home Monthly will be interested in that book. By February, however perhaps I may have achieved it. The fact that it deals at first hand with the life of women who have pioneered ially attractive to the women of the middle west.
The present season has been very prolific in new books, but the last of those books that one longs to possess for the favorite bookshelf, is after all a very brief one. In moments when.I have time to read for the pure pleasure of reading I find myself going back to Dickens, dipping into Lorna Doone, re-reading passages from John Halifax, reading passages from John Halifax, Gentleman, and The Autocrat of the Breakfast table. Among the newer books that should be read for the pleasure of dwelling on pure and vigorous English is "Masterman and Son" by W. J. Dawson, D.D., the Author of "Makers of Modern Fiction" etc. By the way it deals with life in British Columbia to some extent and is more accurate than usual for an author who has been only a casuamin.

Petticoats are fuller than they were last year round the bottom but are quite as tight round waist and hips and there is no fulness at all in many of the garments shown.
Very fine Swiss embroidery seems to lead, though there is much lace also and not a few of the finest of hand made garments are trimmed exclusivel with fine tucks with never a frill in sight.

Hand While good machine Work Sewing is always popular, there is - who love dainty women there is a growing demand for handmade garments; of these the very best came from France, where there are whole families who make exclusively one family will house. For example, one family wil for several generations have made nothing but nightdresses another nothing but drawers coats, and so on. It is almost marvelous the low price at which these garments are sold when the quality of the work is considered. It is a temptation to buy rather than to make them, but well with her hands ghould who can sew of her own work in her trousseau. I am sure it will give her a greater feeling of self-respect to look at neatly made and dainty garments and it is surprising what can be accomplished if you in a few stitches in all your iale put ments.

PRETTY MIDWINTER FROCKS

Frocks of the 'midseason are exceedingly attractive. Many of those worn by the older girls are made in cuirass style while for the younger contingent what is known as the college blouse is a favorite. The two illustrated are of charmeuse combined with cliffon and trimmed with applique. The same mod el could be used for a simpler frock, however, for it is just as approprint for a light weight serge as for the silk. It is pretty for combinations, too, and the cuirass could be made of heavier material with the skirt of lighter. For a girl of sixteen years of age will

If you had confidence in some man to select a piano for you would you buy your piano by mail?

I have figured for some time how I could make a satisfactory offer to those who cannot come to the city to select their piano and I am now in a position to make a proposition that should appeal to all.

Is there anyone more qualified to judge an article than the man who makes it? Is there any place that a choice can be made from a number of that article more satisfactorily than the place in which it is made?

Knowing Mr. Harry Durke, the proprietor of The Mendelssohn Piano Co, to be a piano maker of ability, and one who is interested in every piano that leaves his factory I wrote asking if he would consent to personally select pianos for our mail order customers and received the following reply

Lindsay Plano Co., 1,td, Winnipeg

THE FUN OF DOING WELL.
It is related of the late Lord Napier that once he played a trick on some young officers to find out the right man or a certain post. The story is that $h_{3}$ had three ambitious officers to choose colonels at once. Lord Napier sent for these young men, and in due order detailed them to some ordinary routine work to be done. They went to their eral wished to test them and was having them watched for that purpose. The first two, whom I will call $A^{\prime}$ and $B$ con them and discharged them in a very careless and perfunctory manner, while complaining of the affront which they had received in being asked to discharge those duties. The third young office was prompt, energetic and thorough "How is it," demanded Lord Napier, "that you thought such matters worthy of so much care?" The young fellow flushed. He thought the general believed that he was an officer who had lieved that he was an officer who had no great moment.
"Beg pardon, general," he answered, "but it was just the fun of seeing ho The grim old general's face relaxed into a pleasant smile, and he said: "You are promoted to a captaincy. Go and

In the first place, parents should be school boards they elect of the men, professional politicians, men of low moral standards, men without pub. ic spirit, should be forever left in the old when school boards are to be made up. The growing custom of elect. ng women to this office is a most women do like to see things done as they should be. The custom of having on the board those only who have children in school has its merits, too. Our were not only careful to get well quals fied teachers, but they insisted on find ing those of refined, positive Christian haracter. Needless to say, our school ase to high rank, was a joy to us all. A political boss wriggled his way to followed later, and the school suffered woefully.
Parents can do a great deal for the school by talking it up in a friendly pirit, lending their presence to its public functions, making it an important factor in the life of the community So much has been said in the Mother's Magazine about how important it is for mothers to be on terms of friendly acquaintance with their children's teachers, that I need only say my experience justifies every word that has been said, I think parents are not living up to their privileges unless they try to stand in somewhat the same relation to the chool that they do to their childrendians, ready to give it every possibl advantage, to be patient with its shortcomings, to try to remove the diffi. culties that really cripple its efficiency. The school is so close to the home-is the home of the children most of the time-that parents cannot hold its in. erests too sacredly, or give it too much wise, kindly attention. Don't you all gree with me there? If not, why not? M. P. A. in The Mother's Magazine.

The Home Doctor.

NURSING.

To cultivate the faculty of observation should be one of the tirst duties o those who would excel in any scientific pursuit, and to none is this study mor medicine, and, I may add, to his most necessary ally, the nurse. Without the habit of correct observation no one can ever hope to extel or be successful as a nurse. Observation does not consist in a kind of vague looking on, so tc speak, but in the power of comparing the known with the unknown, of con trasting the similar with the dissimilar, in justly appreciating the connection of events, and in estimating at thei correct value established facts. The great Newton has assured us that he new of no difference between himsel and other men save in his habits of mark was made by Locke. The right and ready use of the knowledge gain ed by true observation makes the suc essful nurse
The constitution of the human mind is such that the aequisition of knowledge can only be gradual. Just as there is no royal road to learning so there is no rapid method of gaining experi ence, and she who wishes to excel must not only work assidously, but must be rection. Although the difficulties in the way of observing correctly may appear great, yet, as the habit is daily encouraged, so will the path become labor becomes a matter of almost outine practice. The expression "going through the world with one's eyes hhut" can of a truth never be more ptly, more frequently, or more justly appied than to a very great many old, plume themselves on a most extensive knowledge of disease and its symptoms. The inability to properly appreciate the connection between cause and recently. On my asking a fond mother if her child had been vaccinated with calf lymph or lymph taken from the arm of another child, she replied-"I am quite sure it was calf lymph, bebaby booed like a cow!" Here it was not so much the good person's failure observe as it was that old woman's tories and ancient traditions had warped her judgment. And I may say march with the times will often find it a difficult matter to upset old customs and ideals, based upon ignorance and perhaps superstition, which have a ver The most important part of a medial man's education is undoubtedly to be gained at the bedside, and this can with equal truth be said of the nurse. Unfortunately, from time to time in ease, many diversities of ailment and injury may be met with, and may be carefully observed and investigated in their various stages, as well as the modifications produced upon these ailal agents which have been so bountifully bestowed upon us.

WHAT NOT TO EAT

A little joke floating around in the columns of the press is that of a man doubtful of his skill because he did not forbid him eating everything he liked. Its opposite, said to be true, is of doctor who writes much for the public on the subject of what to eat or perhaps, more accurately, on what not to eat. He had written the usual patter about hot weather diet, sticking to fruit, 'a little cereal," vegetables and water, and the like, and then was oberved one hot day with a dish of $\left\lvert\, \begin{aligned} & \text { ale, which he was stowing a way as if he } \\ & \text { thought it good for him. The average }\end{aligned}\right.$ adult is the best judge of his own diet; he very son learns what diet; he very soon learns what does not "agree" with him, and, knowing this, the consequences of eating it sis, the consequences of eating it serves him right. If anything does serves him right. If anything does "agree," eat it if you like it.

HAPPY HENS.

The other day a neighbor asked me why it was that I had such succes I managed to keep them happy tha smiled, turned away, and took it as a joke. Poor man! He didn't know that hens have dispositions, or tempera ments, and, like men, can do thei best work when optimistic I should rather have one happy hen than two grumpy ones. A happy hen is the one that fatens the pocketbook; a hen with a grouch isn't worth her space, no matter what her breed may space, no matter what her breed may be. An experienced poultryman can be. An experienced poultryman can look at a hen and tell whether she has look at a hen and tell whether she has the blues or is smiling. A downcast hen keeps her feathers plastered down tight, and never runs when you pound on the bucket for scraps. She neve goes around clucking softly and good naturedly. A good-natured cluck is music; a flock of hens clucking contentedly is grand opera to me. The cheer ful hen walks a step or two and then takes a scratch, a long sweeping stroke; while a sour hen goes along with her head down, and when she scratches it is with short jerky strokes.

LIGHT REFRESHMENTS.

For the unexpected guests the tea or hocolate table must do full duty. Those on entertain a great deal shacers and wafers, a small assortment of potted or deviled meats, olives, caviar, anchovies and sardines. These being put up in mall boxes keep well. Where the means are limited the potted meats, mock pate de foie gras, and dainty mock pate de foie gras, and dainty home at a nominal cost. The art of seasoning counts more in such dishes than the money spent.
Among the best and most sightly wafers to se mest and most sightly wafers to serve with tea are butter thins, Roquefort biscuits, five o'clock teas, outing biscuits and fairy wafers. The latter come in three colorsand rose (pink). The spiced or molasses wafers, fairy cakes and raglets seem most appropriate to serve with chocolate or cocoa. When means and convenience will allow, these may be purchased but they may be made at home. If thoroughly baked they will keep for an indefinite time.

SANDWICHES.

Sandwiches, like charity, never fail They are the strength of teas, and the ally of the most imposing festivities.
Cut in dainty strips or triangles, or rolled in tiny cylinders, they play an important part in the various socia functions. But it is as a relish at lunch eon, or a substitute for the persistent cake on the supper-table, that the sandwich is especially valuable to the house-keeper, and a very desirable and wholesome substitute, too. It offers such a satisfactory method of dispos ing of the various "left overs" too good to throw away, and yet not sufficient for a dish alone.
The bread used
The bread used for this purpose it must be cut as thin as a wafer, with a very keen-bladed knife. Trim off all ragged edges; and whatever "filling" is used, make the sandwiches pretty is used, make the sandwiches pretty to look at, and savory in taste.

Fancy Sandwiches of all Kinds. Fancy sandwiches of all kinds $m$ be served with coffee. Thin bread and butter, both white and brown, may also be served. Salads, such as shrimp, lobster, chicken, celer $\gamma$ tomato or ster, chicken, celery, tomato or Egyptian, served with thin bread and butter and coffee, are always in order. lemon, orange or fruit jelly with sponge or sunshine cake may form the sweet. One thing the hostess should bear in mind when serving refreshments, and plain cake, nicely served with a cup of good chocolate or coffee, is better than a great variety of dishes poorly prepar ed and served.

Sandwiches of all Shapes and Sorts.
The appropriate winter sandwiches are chicken, tongue, ham, beef, mut ton, duck, celery, caviar, anchovy and Indian.
Sweet sandwiches are sometimes served, instead of wafers or bread and butter, with tea or butter, with tea or cocoa. They are made from conserved fruits, such as cheeries, pineapple, gages, citron, sul tanas, figs, dates and angelicas. The fruits may be used separately or mix ed, care being taken to use such as ries, pineapple and gages, or cherries and figs, angelicas and cherries.
Fruit sandwiches are, as a rule, made rom bread, and cut either into small rounds the size of a silver dollar, smal crescents, or strips which are called fruit fingers. The crescents mav b cut with a round cutter and then cut in half, If the slices are small it is more economical to serve the rounds and crescents at the same time, as the latter suggest themselves by the edges of the first. The fruits must be chip ped fine, and slightly moistened 1 , range juice or a little syrup, ${ }^{\text {an }}$ spread in a thin layer on the bread or crackers. Do not cover with a secon

LIFE.

"I came that they might have life and may have it abundantly." There is no doubt as to the kind of life of which Jesus as to the kind of hife ore these words, or of the persons He had in disciples and those who should afterwards believe on His name through their word. That touches and embraces the disciple of Christ of today. Then is this purpose of the Life of Christ on this purpose of the Life of His life in earth being fulfilled, or has His this respect been a failure?
Comparing the Church of today with the Church of the beginning of the cenury there is a mighity difference, and swered. But when accomplishment is measured by opportunity one is not so sure of the answer. And when one turns from results to possibilities the conviction is iforced the life is at low standard or something checks its growth. What a fuss we have made about raising one million dollars over the whole Canadian Church? What strenuwhole Canadian Church have been obligous effiorts a few men have be pledge of ed to make in order that the the Church should be fulfilled? Compute even at a rough estimate, the amount of wealth represented by the Presbyterian Church in Canada, then imagine such a scene as transpired in when the members of their own free will came with their wealth and laid it at the Apostles' feet, and how paltry our million dollars would seem. We do not belittle the Thank-Offering of one not belittle dollars with which the Church seeks to open the country. Far from it. The men who have promoted it and who have been largely instrumental in carrying it to a successful issue have brought us into greater blessing than brought us into greater blessing than we deserve. But when we have done it what immeasurable limits of possibility lie yet before us.
We have just tasted of life and its sweetness and power. Shall we go on till life shall mean something, till every act of life shall mean a step forward for ourselves or for others through us, or shall we drop back into existing again? For to live is to be the life of another. When one grasps the life of another. When one grasps the hand of another that other tingles in every part of the soul. An impulse is given to help some other one, and instinstively the eye searches for some one to help. The clear eye, the erect one to help. The clear eye, the erect form, the alert faculties make mere existence impossible. The man who lives must act, and the character of the life that is moving within him makes one line of action the only possible one for him. He must move straight forward. he cannot turn or twist or stoop, he can but go straight on.
Is the religious life of our day helpful? We cannot answer this by noting the statistics of church recorts, or en must stand by the man in daily life. We must note how the master acts towards the man, the mistress towards the maid; how the man in busines meets his fe do business with him; how the man of great gifts and the man of one talent deal with the trust given to them. In all departments of life is if it may delav ourselves? If there is then there is life present. But then, it abundant? That was His desire.

GOOD RESOLUTIONS.

In that thoroughly healthy and at tractive play "The Man in the House," any one in this world may have just what he wants, if he ray have just with his whole heart. Let a man set is until his pockets, his tills, his vault are filled to pockets, his tills, his vaults the Golden Touch is not only for King night thinks and dreams and gloats over his treasures.
But let the wish be for something else. Let it be for love and friendship, for the joys of home, and social com munion. Then if the wish be only strong enough and sieadfast and sincere, friends will be secured in plenty, ove will follow into the soul until it overflows through numberless channel for the blessing of mankind. Home will become heaven, and the countryside a paradise. If a man only wishes it! That is the point.

he is. To this, end I will surrent ,oys and girls with the best of books roull get for them the best teacher the country can provide; I will give them a home and a school that are fit dwelling places for those who are dearest to me. And in ordering my household affairs I will not forget them. They are not young men and women, they are only boys and girls. They love just a little luxury, they love to read stories of heroes and heroines stories of adventure and discovery; yes, they love to dream at times because Heaven lies about them in their infancy and the shades of the prison house have not quite closed about the growing bov.
Because I love my children I will study heir needs, and my first care will be to supply them. I have it in my powe to make them happy, and useful honorable and unselfish, if I but wish it with my whole heart. And because example is so potent, I will in my habits,' my language, my actions, in private and public, so order my life that bat did not come off, as the man realized he had interrupted a "competition," remaufins larking on bis young ragamufins larking on his best green, and made a gruft apology, ever afterwards treating Jimmy as one of the privileged. Indeed, Sandy Grant, the keeper, freely said he would back wee Jimmie Maclean with his dirty brown gutta against any player on the links old or young.

This opinion of Sandy's had become so rooted a conviction by the time our story opens, that he sory opens, that he, among with some of Jimmies old gentleman friends, persuaded the lad to allow himself to be entered for the great annual competition for the cup which (with badge) is presented by one of the city magnates to the champion of the short-hole courses.
Jimmi
in fact, the very reversemantic figure tle man of a boy with a queer old looking face, which would have been ter large but firm, upon it, je the mouth rather laquare and just escaping coarseness, little stub of a thing, set over a dee upper lip, and with an upward tendency toward the tip. The eyes, however, were his redeeming feature; small and somewhat far apart, they were bright a good-natured twinkle lurking in thei corners. Short and square, he looked as if he had at some time been taller and for some reason had had a portion better days when in the keeping of their original owner, who very evidently had original owner, who very evidently had not been of the same pattern as their present wearer. Longish legs finished off with the boots a size or two too bid off with the boots a size or two too big for the feet they enclosed, the trousers turned up, and a Balmoral bonnet on turned up, and a Balmoral bonnet on his close-cropped head made up the exerior of Jimmie. He was, however, full of goling experience and crammed full of goling experience and crammed full of goling proverbs, cool and deliberate in in word and action, his nerves from the toning they had had in the fresh air, being uney had hroper in the fresh air, quick thing about him being only quick thing about him being those sharp, observant grey eyes. Most of the competitors knew Jimmie and respected him as a caddie, but, along with the stewards, looked somewhat askance at him as an entrant in the great tournament.
The ties were played in the evenings, or at such times as suited the various competitors; for here, if anywhere, the competitors; for here, if anywhere, the democratic character of golf is demonstrated to the full. The competitors are drawn not only from the "cleek arlubs" of Bruntsfield
Links-whose members are mosty artisans, etc.-but also from the also from the young boold olubs. The well-known Edinburgh golf young man who was drawn against Jimmie in the first round belonged to Jimmie in the first round belonged to one of the latter, so he knew not the prowess of hater, caddie, and from the height of his feulte ther contemptuously down on the un-

The first hole, however, set all qualms he might have had at play ing such an antagonist, as ing such an antagonist, as Jimmie did not even give him a chance to halve it not even give him a chance to haive it.
So with the next, and the next, but

So the great day dawned at last, and it was with eager, anxious gaze that Jimmie examined the heavens to see if by any means he might drag the secotia's darling city being a beauty, has all a beauty's capricious whims, and has especially a trick of veiling her charms in a curtain of cold wet mist, On this beautiful June day, however, no traces of mist or rain showed them-were in perfect condition for play. So it wore on till late afternoon, when the crowds began to make their way to the links, to witness the play in the final Short Holes Championship. miliar with the sight of the crowd, the great human tide, the stewards with their ropes to prevent the people from pressing to closely upon the players, the officials connected with the tournament, he could not help feeling nervous as, from his mother's window, he watched inclined to run and hide instead of fac ing all that throng of critical and curious people, but his mother encouraged him with cheering words and laughingly pushed him from the house, saying he was not to return without the Cup.

When the contestants met at the first tee they presented a striking contrast in years as well as in appearance. The other finalist was a tall, robust young man-an artisan evidently, well-dressed, well fed and wholesome-looking. His golfing gear was as well appointed as himself, clean, bright and fairly new. Jimmie was in his only suit of well turned up at the foot, the long jacket discolored by constant exposure, but withal he had such an unconscious air. and spoke so frankly and respectfully and spoke so frankly and respectfully to the officials and his opponent, that the hearts of all those hundreds went out to the lad and wished him well Jimmie's student friend, who had opposhim in the first round, acted caddie to him in this, carrying his old-fash O him in this, carrying his ioned-looking "golfing tackle." Fortunate in the "toss," Jimmie had to lead off, and the crowd could scarce repress a laugh as he turned up his sleeves at the wrists, dived into his sleeves at the wrists, dived into his trousers' pocket and produced the brown gutta. It is one thing to play with the links to yourself and the greens quite links to yourself and the greens quite lear, but an entirely different matte stretching from tee to green. True, the accustomed from long use to remain perfectly still and quiet, but the face all turned towards the players and eager craning of necks, the countless pairs of eyes, all combine to haye an effect upon the inexperienced plaver disconcerting and unnerving him. ${ }^{\text {player }}$ Such seemed to be Jimmie's feeling as "his first" was short of the green, and his more experienced antagonist making no mistake, he had to play "the odd." The hole went to the tall young man, to crowd. However, the youngster of braced himself for the next, driving away th fear he had of playing into the crowd and, maybe, hurting some one. Albeit he could only claim a half, and the same again at the third, but at the fourth he drew level. The crowd felt relieved, and timmies caddie spoke en couragingly to him for the first time.

BROTHER RABBIT AND MISS NANCY An Uncle Remus Story.
By Joel Chandler Harris.
One day, when Uncle Remus had told one of the stories that have been already set forth, the little boy was unusually thoughtful. He had asked his mother whether there was ever a time when the animals acted and talked like people, and she, without reflecting, being a young and an impulsive woman, had answered most emphatically in the negative. Now, this litle boy was shrewder than he was given credit for being, and he knew that neither his being, and he knew that neither hould How he knew this would be diticult to explain, but he knew it all the same. Therefore, when he interjected a doubt as to the truth of the tales, he kept the name of his authority to himself. "Uncle Remus," said the little boy, "how do you know that the tales you tell are true? Couldn't somebody make tell are true The old man looked at the little of doubt in his mind, and the knowledge made him groan and shake his head. Maybe you think 1 done it, honey, but yo you does, de better fer you, kaze I'd set here an' dry up an' blow 'way fo' I kin tell a tale er my own make up; an ef dey's anybody deze days what kin ceiving the cards recognized the handwriting, and, suspecting something, kept them until they ceased coming, when he read them consecutively in the order of "Ridiculous old Bill Brown is the meanest man and the biggest thief in H -,", He at once instituted a suit for slander against the sender. The latter's lawyer, against the sender. The latter's lawyer, however, called attention to the fact that the postal card containing "ridiculous," though sent first, was dated the day after the date, of the card having the word "H-"Moreover, a careful inspection would show that after the word "ridiculous" was an exclamation point, and after the word "H-" was an interrogation mark, so that the series of postal cards might be made to read. "Old Bill Brown is the meanest man and the biggest thief in H-? instead of slandering the plaintiff, his, client had defended him from slander, and this plea was sustained by the court. But all the same the majority of people thought that the first reading of the cards was the correct one.

THE HORROR OF IT.
Vigorous, healthy folks simply cannot magine what a horror, what a death-inightly So has of it and say, "poor Mrs. So-and 'Soms some trouble with her stomach." ills that trouble," forsooth. Of all the misery than Indigetion. It destroy annually more lives than consumption, cancer and cholera combined. If you cannot digest your food - as a steam engine burns coal-your heat,' power, energy, must run down. Continue this condition and your engines will stop!
Food that lies in your stomach undigested distils poisons that are carried by your blood all through your system. This poison clogs the brain, inflames the nerves, muscles and joints, and stagnates all the natural functions. Constipation, headaches, sleeplessuess, pains and wind in the stomach; dizziness and other wretched feelings follow. Mother Seigel's Syrup cures Indigestion by toning up, strengthening, aiding the digestive organs to do their natural work.
Mr. Burton Shortliffe, of Central Grove, Digby County, N. B., writes :-I was troubled with Indigestion a long time and found no medicine to give such immediate relief as your preparation, Mother Seigel's

OUT OF THE DARKNESS OF INDIGESTION
Out of the miseries of bilionsness and constipation; away from headaches and pains that torture the stomach after meals; leaving behind you all sickness and wretchedness, sour stomach, bad taste in the mouth, palpitation, despondency and despair! If YOU want release from such troubles, put your digestion right. Mother Seigels Syrup will bring you quickly, surely, as it has brought thousands, out of the gloom of indigestion

INTO THE SUNSHINE OF HEALTH

Myriads of people have proved that Mother Seigel's Syrup is remedy of the highest medicinal value for all stomach and liver complaints. Made of roots, barks and leaves it is unequalled as a digestive tonic. If your stomach ails or is weak, Mother Seigel's Syrup will strengthen it, will stimulate your liver and bowels to healthy action, restore your digestion, purify your blood, cleanse your system, give you vigorous, buoyant health.

For two years I had pains after eating, with headaches, and arose tired in the mornings from loss of sleep. My tongue was coated. I became pale and thin, with spells of dizziness and heart palpitation. I took Mother Seigel's Syrup and now, after that two years of misery, I am as well as I have ever been." M'me.
