

IMAGE EVALUATION TEST TARGET (MT-3)

Photographic Sciences Corporation

23 WEST MAIN STREET
WEBSTER, N.Y. 14580
(716) 872-4503

CIHM
Microfiche
Series
(Monographs)

ICMH Collection de microfiches (monographies)

Canadian Institute for Historical Microreproductions / Institut canadien de microreproductions historiques

© 1993

Technical and Bibliographic Notes / Notes techniques et bibliographiques

The Institute has attempted to obtain the best original copy available for filming. Features of this copy which may be bibliographically unique, which may alter any of the images in the reproduction, or which may significantly change the usual method of filming, are checked below.

L'Institut a microfilmé le meilleur exemplaire qu'il lui a été possible de se procurer. Les détails de cet exemplaire qui sont peut-être uniques du point de vue bibliographique, qui peuvent modifier une image reproduite, ou qui peuvent exiger une modification dans la méthode normale de filmage sont indiqués ci-dessous.

- Coloured covers/
Couverture de couleur
- Covers damaged/
Couverture endommagée
- Covers restored and/or laminated/Couverture restaurée et/ou pelliculée
- Cover title missing/Le titre de couverture manque
- Coloured maps/
Cartes géographiques en couleur
- Coloured ink (i.e. other than blue or black)/ Encre de couleur (i.e. autre que bleue ou noire)
- Coloured plates and/or illustrations/Planches et/ou illustrations en couleur
- Bound with other material/Relié avec d'autres documents
- Tight binding may cause shadows or distortion along interior margin/La reliure serrée peut causer de l'ombre ou de la distorsion le long de la marge intérieure
- Blank leaves added during restoration may appear within the text. Whenever possible, these have been omitted from filming/Il se peut que certaines pages blanches ajoutées lors d'une restauration apparaissent dans le texte, mais, lorsque cela était possible, ces pages n'ont pas été filmées.

- Coloured pages/
Pages de couleur
- Pages damaged/
Pages endommagées
- Pages restored and/or laminated/Pages restaurées et/ou pelliculées
- Pages discoloured, stained or foxed/Pages décolorées, tachetées ou piquées
- Pages detached/Pages détachées
- Showthrough/
Transparence
- Quality of print varies/Qualité inégale de l'impression
- Continuous pagination/Pagination continue
- Includes index(es)/ Comprend un (des) index

Title on header taken from:/ Le titre de l'en-tête provient:

- Title page of issue/Page de titre de la livraison
- Caption of issue/Titre de départ de la livraison
- Masthead/
Générique (périodiques) de la livraison

- Additional comments:/
Commentaires supplémentaires:

This item is filmed at the reduction ratio checked below/Ce document est filmé au taux de réduction indiqué ci-dessous.

10X	14X	18X	22X	26X	30X
<input type="checkbox"/>	<input type="checkbox"/>	<input type="checkbox"/>	<input checked="" type="checkbox"/>	<input type="checkbox"/>	<input type="checkbox"/>
12X	16X	20X	24X	28X	32X

The copy filmed here has been reproduced thanks to the generosity of:

La Bibliothèque de la Ville de Montréal

The images appearing here are the best quality possible considering the condition and legibility of the original copy and in keeping with the filming contract specifications.

Original copies in printed paper covers are filmed beginning with the front cover and ending on the last page with a printed or illustrated impression, or the back cover when appropriate. All other original copies are filmed beginning on the first page with a printed or illustrated impression, and ending on the last page with a printed or illustrated impression.

The last recorded frame on each microfiche shall contain the symbol \rightarrow (meaning "CONTINUED"), or the symbol ∇ (meaning "END"), whichever applies.

Maps, plates, charts, etc., may be filmed at different reduction ratios. Those too large to be entirely included in one exposure are filmed beginning in the upper left hand corner, left to right and top to bottom, as many frames as required. The following diagrams illustrate the method:

L'exemplaire filmé fut reproduit grâce à la générosité de:

La Bibliothèque de la Ville de Montréal

Les images suivantes ont été reproduites avec le plus grand soin, compte tenu de la condition et de la netteté de l'exemplaire filmé, et en conformité avec les conditions du contrat de filmage.

Les exemplaires originaux dont la couverture en papier est imprimée sont filmés en commençant par le premier plat et en terminant soit par la dernière page qui comporte une empreinte d'impression ou d'illustration, soit par le second plat, selon le cas. Tous les autres exemplaires originaux sont filmés en commençant par la première page qui comporte une empreinte d'impression ou d'illustration et en terminant par la dernière page qui comporte une telle empreinte.

Un des symboles suivants apparaîtra sur la dernière image de chaque microfiche, selon le cas: le symbole \rightarrow signifie "A SUIVRE", le symbole ∇ signifie "FIN".

Les cartes, planches, tableaux, etc., peuvent être filmés à des taux de réduction différents. Lorsque le document est trop grand pour être reproduit en un seul cliché, il est filmé à partir de l'angle supérieur gauche, de gauche à droite, et de haut en bas, en prenant le nombre d'images nécessaire. Les diagrammes suivants illustrent la méthode.

5. 2

20

S E R M O N

On the nature of Justification through the imputed righteousness of the Redeemer.

By the Reverend ROBERT Mc: DOWALL, Minister of the Reformed Protestant Dutch Church at Ernestown.

PUBLISHED BY REQUEST OF HIS CONSISTORY.

2 G 1338

38129

Y O R K:

PRINTED BY JOHN BENNETT.

—1805.—

PROLOGUE

THE HISTORY OF THE

REIGN OF

CHARLES THE FIRST

BY

JOHN BURNET

OF THE UNIVERSITY OF OXFORD

IN TWO VOLUMES

THE SECOND

VOLUME

LONDON

PRINTED BY

JOHN BURNET

AT THE UNIVERSITY PRESS

OXFORD

1704

BY

JOHN BURNET

OF THE UNIVERSITY OF OXFORD

IN TWO VOLUMES

THE SECOND

VOLUME

LONDON

PRINTED BY

JOHN BURNET

AT THE UNIVERSITY PRESS

T
du of len
Ge
bu
law
ste
rig
eve
the left
of his
Go
fo
Sav
dien
glor
imp from nefs
S T
trin
NA

S E R M O N .

JEREMIAH, XXIII. 6.

“THE LORD OUR RIGHTEOUSNESS.”

TO settle faith on the meritorious righteousness of the Redeemer, which is its proper foundation, and to deduce obedience from the efficacious operations of the spirit of grace, which is its proper foundation, are the real excellencies of the gospel ministry.—To shew, that the Son of God, through all his incarnate state, acted not for himself, but for us men; and that under the curse of an avenging law, he endured misery in all its various forms, in our stead, that we by his obedience, might be made the righteousness of God in him, is the indispensable duty of every gospel minister.—This doctrine, though branded by the self-righteous with contemptible names, is nevertheless (blessed be God) to the pious humble Soul, the source of his strongest consolation, and the very foundation of his eternal hope. For as on the two commands of love to God and our neighbour hang all the law and the prophets, so on the legal transfer of all the sins of the saved to the Saviour, and on the legal transfer of his meritorious obedience to them, hang all the privileges and the whole glory of the gospel Church. In discoursing this very important truth, I shall in humble dependence on assistance from the great God endeavour to shew Firstly, What we are to understand by the righteousness spoken of in the text.

Secondly, How this righteousness becomes ours.

Thirdly, Answer objections brought against this doctrine: And Fourthly,

Fourthly, Close the subject by making some practical observations on the whole.

In the first place, we are then to consider what is meant by the righteousness spoken of in the text.

THE Lord, who is here called our righteousness, is undoubtedly the Lord Jesus Christ. He has a two fold righteousness. The one is his eternal and essential righteousness, which is common to the three Divine persons. The other is his mediatorial righteousness. And this is the righteousness, of which the Prophet speaks in the text. By Christ's mediatorial righteousness we are then to understand his holy life, or active obedience in fulfilling all the positive requirements of the divine law, in our stead, as well as his passive obedience, or suffering the penalty of the curse, which was denounced in case of disobedience.

This righteousness is, therefore, sufficiently distinguished from his eternal, essential and necessary righteousness. For we can conceive of no necessity, that the Lord of glory was under to bow the heavens, come down, take our nature on him, and suffer and die, in the stead of us criminals. All his obedience from his cradle to his grave was voluntary, Psal. xi. 7. 8. Then said I, Lo, I come: in the volume of thy book it is written of me; I delight to do thy will, O my God: yea, thy law is within my heart.

This righteousness, which he performed by his obedience to the precepts, and by suffering the penalty of the divine law, being voluntary and so distinguished from his eternal and essential righteousness, he did not owe for himself, but subjected himself to it, that by means of his obedience, many might be made righteous, Rom. v. 19.

This brings us to the second thing to be considered; namely, how this righteousness becomes ours.

THAT our forefather Adam broke the divine law, which he received from his Creator, and which enjoined perfect obedience, on pain of endless misery; and that we his posterity are involved in his guilt, are truths so clearly taught in the volume of inspiration, that none, but such as are disposed to equivocate will presume to deny. All have,

have merit
shou due to
of di
of th law
place
gress holin 21.
No
dy be
—Ne
deepl inviol
and to Son c union which sweral fulfill tened
Sin, h and gl vation
tions.
richest
To
becom
people the wo
body, h
Sins w punish might have, therefore, forfeited their title to happiness, and have merited eternal torment. Man has ruined himself. Now should he be restored without suffering the punishment due to his crime, and threatened by the law-giver in case of disobedience, what will become of the truth and justice of the JUDGE? or how shall the honor of his righteous law be maintained? Should these consequences take place, sinners would be emboldened to multiply their transgressions, and tempted to think, that God of truth and holiness was altogether such an one as themselves. Pf. L. 21.

Now shall man be miserable forever? or shall a remedy be provided in order to prevent these consequences? —None but his Maker, from whose authority he had deeply revolted, could restore him. Therefore to maintain inviolate the everlasting dignity of the divine government, and to restore man to the favor of the Most High; the Son of God assumed the human nature into a personal union with the divine, took on himself the obligations, which his people owed to the broken law, and became answerable for all their guilt. In this capacity he perfectly fulfilled the precepts of the law, and submitted to the threatened sentence of death; and by the expiation of their Sin, has established for them an irrevocable title to bliss, and glory. Thus he has purchased for them a great salvation to the unspeakable glory of all the divine perfections. The demands of the law are satisfied, and the richest grace exercised to the honor of strict Justice.

To shew more effectually how Christ's righteousness becomes ours; the Scriptures actually declare, that his people were chosen in him BEFORE the foundation of the world, ¶ and that he is their head, and they are his body, by a mystical union §. By virtue of this union, their Sins were transferred to him, that he might sustain the punishment due for them, and that by his Stripes, they might be healed. In like manner the obedience of Christ as ¶ Eph. 1. 4.

§ Eph. 5. 30.

at their head, is placed to the account of the Saved as his body, and he imputes it to them, and considers it as their own. They may, therefore, rely upon it wholly for pardon and acceptance before God.

THE types and figures, which were ordained to be used under the law, may serve to give us a true and proper idea of redemption, imputation, &c. In Gen. xxii. 13. the victim is by divine appointment directly put in the place of Isaac, and slain in his stead. No words can more clearly prove a translocation, or imputation of iniquity, than the history of the two goats in Levit. xvi. The high priest, on the solemn day of atonement, killed one, to shew thereby, that they all deserved to die, and that Christ the antitype should in the appointed time die for them. The high priest was also to put all the iniquities of Israel on the scape-goat, which was to bear them, and carry them away into the land of forgetfulness. This was the imputation not of any thing done by the devoted animal, but it was the imputation of all the transgressions of the house of Israel to the scape-goat. Man's sin was imputed to the goat. And the effects, which followed plainly pointed out a translocation of guilt. For the congregation was so cleansed, that their iniquities were carried away, and to be found no more; but the goat was so defiled, that it communicated pollution to him, who conducted it into a land uninhabited. Now unless this be a typical reference to Christ, its institution would have been altogether unworthy of God, and altogether insufficient to answer the purpose, for which it was designed.

WHOEVER is intimately acquainted with the book of God, must know, that the doctrine of imputation was familiar to the apostles, and appeared rational to them. For the illustration of this, I shall produce a well known fact, which will cast much light on the doctrine of imputed righteousness. Onesimus, a slave to Philemon, stole and carried off some of his master's property. He providentially met with Paul, and was captivated by the victorious grace of God. Paul, having understood his dishonest conduct,

duct, u offende
thus, L
to mine written impute much a idea of tation o
I wo
Lord pe eternal
make re cess of h obedien fishmen
in the di
for an o
and the
in his ow
these thi
are accep
of our p cepted a
Thus
from one whole bo
All th
from the them, an them, in cordingly
laid on h astray, Su rows; ye
afflicted.
brused so
upon him

Saved as his s it as their lly for par-

to be used
 proper idea
 xii. 13. the
 in the place s can more equity, than
 The high ed one, to that Christ
 for them. es of Israel
 carry them
 he imputamal; but it the house uted to the pointed out
 as so cleans-
 and to be at it com-
 into a land eference to r unworthy
 he purpose,

he book of ion was fa-them. For known fact,
 of imputed
 n, stole and e providen-
 victorious
 honest conduct,

duct, undertook to bring about a reconciliation with his offended master; and in behalf of the poor criminal writes thus, If he hath wronged thee, or oweth thee ought, put that to mine account, greek "impute it to me." I Paul have written it with mine own hand, I will repay it. That is impute his whole guilt to me, I will be answerable for it as much as if I myself had contracted it. This gives us a just idea of proper legal imputation. For here is a plain imputation of that to another, which was not his own before.

I would infer from this, that what Paul offered, the Lord performed.—We revolted from God, and merited eternal woe. But the compassionate Jesus undertook to make reconciliation. That nothing might hinder the success of his mediation, he placed himself in our stead. The obedience, which we owed, he performed. The punishment which we deserved, he endured, as our surety in the divine law. And as when a bonds-man pays a debt for an original debtor, he does it for him, and in his stead; and the payment is accepted as if the original debtor had in his own person paid it and cancelled his obligation; so these things being performed for us, by our divine surety, are accepted for us, and imputed to us, as the foundation of our pardon, and the procuring cause of our being accepted as righteous in his sight.

Thus you see the doctrine of guilt being translated from one to another is uniformly taught throughout the whole book of God.

All the violations of the divine law must be translated from the saved, and imputed to Christ, and he must bear them, and sustain the punishment due on account of them, in order to become the Lord our righteousness. Accordingly Isaiah informs us, in his liii. Chap. that God laid on him the iniquities of all the SHEEP, which went astray, Surely he hath borne our griefs, and carried our sorrows; yet we did esteem him stricken, smitten of God, and afflicted. But he was wounded for our transgressions, he was bruised for our iniquities; the chastisement of our peace was upon him; and with his stripes, we are healed. And he is remarkably remarkably particular in explaining and confirming this important scheme of doctrine. All we like SHEEP have gone astray; we have turned every one to his own way: and the Lord hath laid on him the iniquity of us all. And lest any should mistake the extent of this imputation, he expressly adds, for the transgressions of MY people was he stricken. And our Divine Master saith, I lay down my life for the SHEEP. The apostle Peter vindicates the imputation of their sin to him, in these very forcible words, who his own self bare our sins in his own body on the tree. To this St. Paul adds his indubitable testimony. He hath made him to be sin for us; and a curse for us. If these Scriptures do not plainly mean, that God laid our sin on the Lord Jesus Christ, and that he took them on himself, and consequently from us, no words, no language, can.

That there was a real imputation of man's sin to the Saviour appears from the nature of the covenant of Grace. For it is a remediable covenant, which was made between the Father and the Son, Zech. vi. 13.

To illustrate my argument and to obviate objections I will quote a paragraph from a late excellent writer, of the Church of England. "It is frequently affirmed, that Christ expiated the sins of the whole world. This is laying no more than the Scripture has repeatedly said. The point of enquiry is, what does that phrase the whole world import? Surely, not every person, without exception, who did, does, or shall exist; for in that sense, it seems impossible that Christ should die for all. Some, for instance, in our Lord's time at least, were guilty of that sin which his self has pronounced absolutely unpardonable; and would he die for the pardon of those, whose sin, he avers, shall never be pardoned? This would be like a man's paying down an inestimable price for such as, he knows at the very time of paying it, neither will nor can be set at liberty. Besides, what shall we say of those many final impenitents, whose departed souls had been in the place of torment, ages and ages before Christ was crucified at all? Full four thousand years had elapsed, from the creation, before the Messiah was even manifested in the flesh. And the Scripture will not permit us to believe, that the whole of mankind who died within that extensive period, were glorified in heaven. Now it would both impeach the wisdom, and affront the dignity of Christ, as well as infinitely depreciate the value of his sacrifice, to suppose, that he could possibly shed his blood on the cross, for those very Souls, which were, at that very time, suffering for their own sins in hell. The tenet, therefore, of a redemption absolutely universal, will not stand the least either of Scripture, reason, or the analogy of faith. Shall we, for example, affirm, that Christ died for the salvation of Judas? The fact seems impossible. It is plain that Judas slew himself, subsequently to the apprehension, but antecedently to the actual crucifixion of Christ. The soul of Judas, therefore, went to its own place of punishment, before Christ had offered himself in sacrifice to God. And I cannot for my own part, see, with what propriety Christ could die to save a person from going to hell, who was actually there already." Agulha's Topicaly page 86. 87.

¶ Joh. 10. 15. † 1. Pet. 2. 24. ‡ 2. Cor. 5. 21. ¶ Gal. 3. 13.

confirming this, SHEEP have their own way: and all. And lest, in expectation, he ex- pect people was he- ly down my life. rates the impu- ble words, who- the tree. To He hath made If these Scrip- ture sin on the n himself, and ge can. man's sin to the the covenant- enants, which a, Zech. vi. 13:

quote a paragraph from frequently affirmed, that is more than the Scrip- does that phrase the ception, who did, does, it should die for all, if that sin which him die for the pardon of would be like a man's the very time of paying I we say of those many e of torment, ages and thousand years had en manifested in the the whole of mankind. even. Now it would as well as infinitely de- possibly shed his blood time, suffering for their (absolutely universal, will of faith. Shall we, for The fact seems im- to the apprehension, but ul of Judas, therefore, red himself in Sacrifice propriety. Christ could heat already." Aguldo

21. Gal. 3. 13.

And the counsel of peace shall be between them both, and therefore his blood is called, the blood of the covenant. Heb. x. 29. Now the condition of the covenant, which Adam broke, must be the condition of any covenant made for the recovery of fallen man. For it was the rule of that moral relation, which exists between God as sovereign Lord, and man as his rational dependent creature, and must, therefore, remain forever unalterable: Because man's rebellion could never dissolve his obligation to duty. And as God is not man, that he should lie; neither Son of man, that he should repent, Num. xxiii. 19. So his immutable truth, and inviolable faithfulness bind him to execute the penalty of the curse, either on the guilty criminal, or on his substitute, Gen. ii. 17. For the complete obedience, and holy qualities of nature, required by this law, can never be relaxed. The volume of inspira- tion, therefore declares, that Christ as our substitute has fulfilled the righteousness of this law. For what the law could not do in that it was weak through the flesh, God sending his own Son in the likeness of sinful flesh, and for sin condemned sin in the flesh; that the righteousness of the law might be fulfilled in us, Rom. viii. 3. 4. Christ came not to destroy the law but to fulfil it. Every jot and tittle of the law must be fulfilled.

That Christ might effectually fulfil the law, for, and instead of his people, it was not merely the obligation to punishment, which arose from sin, but it was the sins themselves, that were laid on Christ, Isai. liii. 6. 11. 12. Joh. iii. 4. Their violations of the law, which is the foundation of God's displeasure, were removed from the Redeemed and laid on their surety, to be atoned by the blood of the cross, Dan. ix. 24. 1 Pet. ii. 24. He had as divine surety* to take on him the payment of that whole debt of his chosen, which secures them from eternal woe, and intitles them to immortal bliss, Rev. v. 9. Matt. xx. 28. Rom. v. 15. 21. Dan. ix. 24.

B

To

* Heb. 7. 22.

To establish this point clear beyond misapprehension, we may consider sin as a debt, Matt. vi. 12. in order to a discharge from which, proper payment must be made to the law; and satisfaction given to the justice of the Judge: Accordingly our surety has given himself a price, an infinitely precious price, a ransoming price, to pay our debt, Matt. xx. 28. 1 Pet. i. 18. 19.—We may also consider sin as a real enmity against God, Rom. viii. 7: for which proper satisfaction, must make reconciliation for us. Consequently our surety in the divine law, takes away this enmity by the reconciling sacrifice of himself, Col. i. 20. 21. 2 Cor. v. 19. 21.—Sin may be further considered as a crime, which makes us guilty before God our Judge, and for which, a full satisfaction must be given to the law, in order to expiate our guilt. That the Son of God might effectually accomplish this; he as our surety, placed himself in our stead, took on him our sin, and by offering up himself a sacrifice to divine justice, has borne a satisfactory and meritorious punishment for our guilt, Gal. iii. 13. 1 Pet. ii. 24. Dan. ix. 24. Thus he has taken on him, and by his blood has removed our violations of the divine law, which is the foundation of God's displeasure.

What can be clearer from scripture, than that our sins were the meritorious cause of his sufferings? And if so, then our guilt must have been charged on him, and punished in him. For he has delivered us from the curse of the law, how? by being made a curse for us. Do not these words plainly imply a translation of punishment? Not we, who were guilty, but he, who was innocent, suffered the penalty, which the law denounced on us, in consequence of disobedience. The law denounceth, Cursed is every one, that continueth not in all things written in the book of the law to do them. To this curse Christ, as our substitute, submitted. He endured that very curse, which we deserved. And if this be not suffering in our stead, nothing can be called by that name.

That Christ fulfilled the condition, and suffered the penalty penalty

the na
canno ble, an holy, j
ter's w pardon
and ju
be a pr purpos
justice say, at strictly godly,
the end
Rom. 1
was to grace, because coveña
price.
it be b disannu

The
order to tice sho
God. C
sinned,
engaged
avert th
broken
could n ceived i made to the shed
That t ed invid
the inte

penalty of the covenant made with Adam, appears from the nature of the law, and the justice of the Judge. He cannot set aside his justice, which is eternal, unchangeable, and infinite. He cannot set aside a law, which is holy, just, and good. Paul, who knew much of his master's will, plainly shews us, that God does not exercise pardoning mercy, by laying aside the demands of law, and justice; but that he hath set forth the blessed Jesus to be a propitiation through faith in his blood, for this express purpose, to declare his righteousness, even that vindictive justice, whose office is to punish transgressors, to declare, I say, at this time his righteousness; that he might be just, strictly and inviolably just, even when he justifies the ungodly, which believe in Jesus, Rom. iii. 25. 26. For Christ is the end of the law for righteousness to every one that believeth, Rom. x. 4. From this, we see, that the remediable covenant was to Christ a covenant of works, but to believers of grace, of pure grace; and therefore, it is called a testament, because Christ as testator bequeaths to his legatees, all covenant blessings, freely without money and without price. Because, speaking after the manner of men, though it be but a man's covenant, yet if it be confirmed, no man disannulleth, or addeth thereto, Gal. iii. 15.

The first covenant rendered is absolutely necessary, in order to the recovery of fallen man, that the sword of justice should be sheathed in the innocent bleeding Son of God. God had solemnly declared, that in the day, man sinned, he should die. The truth and justice of God stood engaged to execute the awful threatening. And none could avert the sword of justice, but by taking the curse of the broken law upon himself. Our obligation to punishment, could not therefore be cancelled, nor fallen man received into favour, without a true and proper satisfaction made to the law and justice of the Lawgiver. For without the shedding of blood, there is no remission of sin.

That the truth and justice of the Judge might be preserved inviolate, there was a real infliction of punishment on the intervening surety. This alone can clear up the great Evangelical mystery, JUST, yet the JUSTIFIER of the ungodly: Shame, death, and divine wrath were the principal ingredients of the curse. These even the curse of the broken covenant, did Jesus as our substitute undergo. Was ever Shame-like unto that, which he bore? The prince of the kings of the earth born in the abject inclosure of a stable. Banished in his infancy from his native home, and driven an exile into foreign land. Loaded, in his public life, with the most scandalous crimes, and branded with the blackest names; apprehended as a traitor, and condemned to the cross as the vilest of malefactors,—a robber, a murderer is preferred to him! His executioners pour contempt on all his mediatorial offices. And to expose him to the utmost shame, he is fixed to the accursed tree, defiled with spitting, disguised with wounds, and exposed to the gazing eyes, and reproachful scoffs of numberless spectators.

Follow the Saviour to Gathsemane, there you will see him sustain the wrath of God. No remorse could alarm his spotless conscience; yet there, even there, fear and trembling came upon him. No external violence was offered to his sacred body, yet a dreadful perplexity overwhelmed him. It was cold night, and amidst the fall of chilling dew, when our divine Master lay prostrate on the earth, sweating, sweating blood, sweating great drops of blood, running down in streams to the ground. All this is but little to be wondered at. For it was then he suffered the inexpressible anguish, pains, and terrors of hell. And so insupportable were the agonies of his Soul, that he was constrained to cry out, My Soul is sorrowful, exceeding sorrowful, sorrowful even unto death. What cause equal to this amazing anguish, can be assigned, but the inexpressible wrath of his Almighty Father, who treating him no longer as the Son of his love, becomes his inexorable JUDGE, and sheathes the sword of divine vengeance in him as the SURETY for the unnumbered millions of the election of grace.

We saw it was unavoidably necessary to procure the redemption reden

bear their ages
And
such hater
could ment
whic
Sp
forta will ation
he w alone
enou bruis
and j
the a
at. I of the unto n
his fi
guilt able o
me?
He
cover
cross,
is spir
All th
his pe
AL
AMC
fender
was c and a
TY.

redemption of the Lord's people, that their surety should bear all their divine wrath, which was due on account of their sin. All the sins of the saved in all places and in all ages of the world, were charged on Christ as their surety. And could the infinitely holy and righteous God behold such a deluge of iniquity, that abominable thing, which he hateth, without manifesting his fore displeasure? Or how could the surety make full satisfaction for it by punishment, without a painful sense of the inconceivable wrath, which it deterred?

Spiritual death consists in the absence of God's comfortable presence, and in sensations of divine wrath. This will make it easy to account for the prodigious consternation of the Son of God. His God had forsaken him, and he was now to tread the wine-press of his Father's wrath alone. This was the time, when no created arm was strong enough to give the plow, it therefore pleased the Lord to bruise him, the Most High God bent his bow like an enemy, and stood like an adversary. The prophet's description of the anguish of his Soul is therefore not to be wondered at. Is it nothing to you, all ye that pass by? behold and see if there be any sorrow like unto my sorrow, which is done unto me, wherewith the Lord hath afflicted me in the day of his fierce anger, Lam. i. 12. It was this inexpressible anguish, which wrung from his breaking heart, that lamentable exclamation, My God, my God, why hast thou forsaken me?

HERE are the ingredients of the curse of the broken covenant, which the Son of God endured, shame of the cross, pains of death, suspension of the divine presence, which is spiritual death, and terrible sensations of divine wrath. All these, even the whole punishment due to the sins of his people, did the Son of God endure.

ALL the wrath due to every sinner redeemed FROM AMONG men, which, had it been executed on the offenders, would have continued them in everlasting misery, was contracted into one inconceivable dreadful blaze; and at once, poured out upon their interposing SURETY.

The

THE utmost suffering, which the most exalted creature could endure, is nothing, when compared to the demerit of the sin of God's elect. Their sins are beyond calculation Psal. xl. 12. The substance of the law is, to love God with all the heart, with all the soul, with all the mind, and our neighbour as ourselves, which makes the thought of foolishness sin, Prov. xxiv. 9. for it divides the mind so that it cannot be wholly employed in love to God. The sin of their nature is a continued provocation, which produces new guilt every moment; and by its influence over the faculties produces a stream of actual transgression. The burden of wrath due on account of all the sins of the elect, was great beyond imagination. But it was the great God even our Saviour Jesus Christ, who gave himself a ransom for us, and purchased his Church with the price of his own blood. His sufferings have therefore an all-sufficiency of merit and efficacy; and though temporary, yet with respect to his infinite nature, they are more than equal to an eternity of ours.

ALL these he endured for us, and on our account, and therefore they are reckoned to our account, and imputed to us.

CHRIST'S active obedience, in fulfilling the commands of the law, are also imputed to us. For he was under no necessity of meriting eternal happiness for himself, by any obedience he could possibly perform to the legal covenant. For his human nature had all possible happiness secured to it, by means of its union with the person of the Son of God. And the subjecting of himself to obey the precepts of the law arose wholly from his covenant-engagement for us, and being performed on our account; may, and ought in justice, to be imputed to us. Because it was on our account, that he performed that obedience, and therefore it ought to be reckoned to our account.

Now Christ's whole obedience to the commands of the law, and his suffering the penalty of the curse, for us, and on our account, is what I call Christ's righteousness, which is imputed to us.

Here

is a whi
how right sona is to 25,
and justi
plein
Col Isra
Col
Chri
O
ness but perfe
thou
nant
on a
in o
T
puta Chur
is the
This
THE
son c incor ness
W
v. 9.
the ob
their dienc
Lord
is our

HERE is a perfect, an all-sufficient righteousness, which is answerable to all the demands of the divine law, and which is unto, and upon all them that believe. You will, however, observe, that I am not speaking of inherent righteousness, which is called sanctification, and is a personal qualification, but of a justifying righteousness, which is to be found only in the Lord Jesus, Isai. xiv. 24. 25, surely shall one say, in the Lord have I righteousness, and strength.—In the Lord shall all the house of Israel be justified. And therefore the Colossians are said to be complete in him, who is the head of all principality and power, Col. ii. 10. This justifying righteousness is not in the Israelite, or true believer, but in the LORD. And the Colossians were complete, not in themselves, but in the Christ.

OUR justifying righteousness is, therefore, the righteousness of God in Christ, and becomes ours not by infusion, but by imputation, Christ alone performed it, but he performed it in our stead, and on our account. And though he alone possesses it, yet he possesses it as our covenant-head. God therefore imputes it to us; and accepts us on account of it more freely than if we had performed it in our own persons.

THE LORD is therefore our RIGHTEOUSNESS by the imputation of his mediatorial righteousness to us. And the Church of God, which he hath purchased with his own blood, is therefore called by the same name, Jer. xxxiii. 16. This is the name whereby she (the Church) shall be called, THE LORD OUR RIGHTEOUSNESS. Now no satisfactory reason can be assigned, for the Church being called by that incommunicable name Jehovah, but Jehovah's righteousness being actually imputed to her.

WE are therefore said to be justified by his blood, Rom. v. 9. and by his obedience made righteous, verse 19. By the obedience of ONE shall many be made righteous. Not by their own obedience, however exalted, but by the obedience of another shall they be made righteous. In the Lord have we righteousness and strength. For the LORD is our righteousness.

Thirdly.

Here

Thirdly, I proceed to remove objections, which are brought against the doctrine of our Lord's righteousness imputed.

O ye advocates for armenianism; for what did the immaculate Jesus suffer, bleed and die?—only to put man into a saveable state? Will ye thus impoverish the exceeding riches of his grace, by comparing the all-wise God to a foolish workman, who builds a ship, launches her into the deep, and says, “Now you may last, upon condition you provide yourself with a helm, and steersman.” Was it through a defect of wisdom, that he laid his plan of redemption so exceedingly ill? or was he so deficient in power, as to be unable to execute it in opposition to the perverse inclinations of men, insomuch that many of those for whose salvation he intentionally died, are so much wiser, or more powerful than himself, that he cannot make them willing in the day of his power; nor keep them by the power of God through faith unto salvation? or is it through a defect of goodness, that he is not willing to exert power sufficient to subdue their perverse dispositions?—Such a scheme represents the great God as sporting with the death of his Son and insulting the misery and weakness of men, by suspending the whole efficacy of redemption on an impossible condition.

BUT blessed be God, this is not the import of Christ's mediatorial work. Having an absolute power over his own life, he became a substitute for the guilty, and shed his blood for the remission of their sins. The vengeance, which would otherwise have been executed on them, fell on him. For he suffered the just for the unjust, that by making a full and perfect satisfaction for all our guilt, he might bring us to God. And they who can torture the genuine sense of words at such an extraordinary rate as to make remission of sins, a satisfactory substitution, and bringing to God, to signify nothing more than putting men in a saveable state, can turn the clearest expression into any meaning whatever.

BUT should any of my readers object; “that if we be temperate, temper

man ance
with justi
ditch yet if he da
son,
Now
exerti
our n termi
to pur instea
free p
But v
is shor
the cov
For th
fective fication
Obj
will int
creatur
of God
were no
BUT It is the Acts v.
nor the themsel
ly influ
God, a confess accepta
heart-fel

temperate, and to the utmost of our power keep the commands, that this will be a sufficient foundation for acceptance with God."—I answer and a poor foundation seen with all its sufficiency. For although it be a principle of justice founded on the nature of things, that the debtor be discharged, when he has paid the utmost mite of his debt; yet if on the contrary, instead of discharging the debt, he be daily increasing it, can he then on the principles of reason, or justice, expect a legal discharge.—Surely not. Now God's law demands that we love him with the utmost exertion of all the faculties of both soul and body, and our neighbour as ourselves, without any reserve, or permission. But you must do more than all this in order to purchase the pardon of past transgressions; otherwise instead of claiming a reward, you will stand in need of a free pardon. This shews the propriety of the figure, but very expressive language of Isaiah. The covering is shorter, than that a man can stretch himself on it, and the covering shorter; than that a man can wrap himself in it. For the least transgression renders your duties utterly defective, and therefore absolutely insufficient for your justification.

Objection, "But if we repent, and ask forgiveness, that will intitle us to acceptance."—Astonishing! poor, guilty creature, talk of intitling yourself to divine favour! It is of God's wonderful patience, and forbearance, that you were not long ago wrapt in the flames of hell.

But you mistake the very nature of true repentance. It is the gift of God: Jesus is exalted to give repentance, Acts v. 31. This gift makes men hate sin, loath and abhor themselves as sinners, renounce all dependance on themselves, or on any thing they can possibly do, as utterly insufficient to recommend them to acceptance with God, and constrains them like the returning prodigal to confess themselves to be unworthy, utterly unworthy of acceptance, and like the penitent publican, who from a heart-felt sense of inbred corruption, cried mightily to God,

C

God,

God, for mercy, free mercy, unmerited undeferred mercy. Any repentance short of this is to be repented of.

Obj. "But allowing our best works to be defective, since Joshua commanded the Israelites to fear the Lord, and serve him in sincerity, will he not accept sincerity instead of that strict perfection required by the law?"—I answer, sincerity is very desirable. But God solemnly declares, Not for thy righteousness, or for the uprightness of thine heart, doest thou go to possess their land, Deut. ix. 5. Now if the earthly Canaan was not given as the reward of outward obedience, or of inward sincerity, how unreasonable to suppose, that the heavenly should be given for either, or for both. God therefore spake by the prophet, Then will I sprinkle clean water upon you, and ye shall be clean: from all your filthiness, and from all your idols, will I cleanse you. A new heart also will I give you, and a new spirit will I put within you, and I will take away the stony heart out of your flesh, and I will give you a heart of flesh. And I will put my spirit within you, and cause you to walk in my statutes, and ye shall keep my Judgements, and do them.—Not for your sakes do I this, saith the Lord God, be it known unto you, be ashamed and confounded for your own ways, Ezek. xxxvi. 25. 26. 27. 32. This shows plainly, that God bestows his favours, not for any worthiness in the creature, but for his own sake.

PAUL gives a true account of sincerity in Phil. i. 10. 11. That ye may be sincere,—being filled with the fruits of righteousness, which are by Jesus Christ, unto the praise and glory of God. He gives three properties of acceptable sincerity. 1. It must produce the fruits of righteousness so abundantly, that we may be filled with them. 2. Sincerity must derive its strength, and its fruits their pleasantness, and both their very existence, from the all-supporting, and all-supplying root Jesus Christ. 3. And instead of terminating in self-justification, they tend to the praise and glory of the giver. For it is not said these shall justify you, but these shall glorify God. For the ability to perform all these

these
there
the O
and meri
him deem
The
the willi dimin
you bolts
forth
man whose you a portio
the L
and u Ob
works that b
Chap.
works
God,
before it relat
this de perfev
were does n 20. B sight o man is

erved men-ented of.

ective, since rd, and serve stead of that wer, sincerity, es, Not for e heart, doest if the earth-
outward obe-
either, or for Then will I
clean : from ill I cleanse ew spirit will heart out of
And I will
in my statutes, om.—Not for
own unto you,
ways, Ezek.
y, that God
the creature,

hil. i. 10. 11.
ruits of righ-
e praise and
ceptable sin-
teousness fo
. 2. Sincerity
pleasantness, pporting, and instead of ter-
e praise and
ill justify you,
o perform all
these.

these flows from the invincible grace of God in Christ, and therefore teach the necessity of an entire dependance on the Redeemer.

Obj. "our good works are recommended by Christ, and have their efficacy for justification only through his merits; so that we still depend on the Redeemer and pay him the highest honor."—What! You depend on the Redeemer! No, you depend on your own performances. These, these are your principal recommendation. You pay the Redeemer the highest honor!! No; you are not willing to give him the undivided honor. You diminish his to exalt your own. You talk of Christ's merits: you despise them. It is your own, not Christ's merits, that you depend on. Far be it from me to deal in the thunderbolts of eternal vengeance; but the sentence has gone forth from the mouth of the great Eternal, Cursed be the man that trusteth in man, and maketh flesh his arm, and whose heart departeth from the Lord. You see then, that you are cursed even on your own principles. For in proportion as you trust to yourselves, your heart departs from the Lord. But blessed is the man that trusteth in the Lord, and whose hope is in the Lord. Jer. xvii. 5. 7.

Obj. "James declares, that Abraham was justified by works when he offered his son Isaac upon the altar, and that by works a man is justified, and not by faith only, Chap. ii. 21. 24.—I answer, Abraham's being justified by works cannot relate to the justification of his person before God, for in that sense he was justified long before, even before he was circumcised, Rom. iv. 10, 11. neither can it relate to what some call the secondary justification, for this depended, according to their scheme, upon his finality persevering in good works, but the works here mentioned, were performed several years before his death. James does not, therefore contradict what Paul said, Rom. iii. 20. By the deeds of the law, shall no flesh be justified in the sight of God, and verse, 20. where he declares, that a man is justified by faith without the deeds of the law. For Paul speaks of the justification of our persons before God by faith in Christ's blood: James speaks of justification before men by proving his faith to be sincere, and by acquitting him from the charge of hypocrisy. These two apostles do not speak to the same persons. Paul was confuting the opinion of those false teachers, who wished to join their works with Christ's merits, and supposed, that both these united together were absolutely necessary to constitute a justifying righteousness, and that the merits of the Redeemer were otherwise insufficient for pardon and acceptance with God. Paul therefore declares, that justification in the sight of God is by faith alone, without the least mixture of works. James was confuting the opinion of those, who held, that a historical faith, which he calls a dead faith, was sufficient for justification. This shews, that God justifies the ungodly, who believe in him by the imputation of Christ's merits, without the least ingredient of works, but he has joined faith and works in the lives of justified persons.

I shall now conclude the subject by making some practical observations on what hath been said.

WE have before us one of the grandest transactions ever beheld. The Lord Jesus becoming a substitute for unnumbered millions of the human family. And therefore emphatically called the Lord our righteousness. From such an important doctrine many benefits must result. And therefore,

The doctrine of justification through the imputed righteousness of the Redeemer is calculated to manifest the vindictive justice of God to the best advantage. It holds up to our view the eternal God maintaining inviolate the dignity of his government even when he pardons the vilest transgressors. Though he pardons sin, yet he will by no means clear the guilty. Every transgression must be atoned through blood. For without the shedding of blood there is no remission of sin. This is verified in the painful and accursed death of the blessed Jesus. When

he
Fath
pleas
up hi
comp
sheph
dread
the po
ble.
for in severi
damn cise p clare purity ble ju

TH
ners t execu imput
heart
the fe
aggra inflict weak
impor
Almigh
imput stinate
broug
more exerci
And w ing sin
tent
heart,
cents
his vei

he stood chargeable with the sins of the Redeemed, his Father cauted the sword of justice to fall on him. It pleased the Lord, to bruise him. God not only delivered up his Son to punishment, but he delivered him up with complacency, and cried out, Awake, O sword against the shepherd, against the man that is my fellow. He poured a dreadful deluge of wrath into his soul. And who knoweth the power of that wrath, at which the pillars of Heaven tremble. The infliction of punishment on the innocent Jesus for man's sin, is a more fearful monument of the awful severity of vindictive justice, than all the torments of the damned in hell. The Great God has determined to exercise pardoning mercy, in no other manner, than to declare the inviolable faithfulness of his word, manifest the purity of his nature, and vindicate the demand of inflexible justice.

This scheme of doctrine is best calculated to turn sinners to God. The thoughts of God's awful severity in executing vengeance on his own Son, when sin was only imputed to him, makes our ears to tingle, and our very heart to quake. This very thing is calculated to awaken the secure, and alarm the presumptuous. All the laboured aggravations of guilt, and all the severity of vengeance inflicted on rebellious angels, and on wicked men, are weak and inexpressive, when compared to the dreadful import of this grand transaction. For if the Lord God Almighty spared not his own Son, when guilt was only imputed to him, how much less will he spare bold, obstinate, and persevering transgressors. These things are brought forward, that they may hear, fear, and do no more wickedly. Inflexible justice opening a door for the exercise of mercy, manifests the riches of divine grace. And while it strikes the deepest terror on every persevering sinner, it cherishes the brightest hope in every penitent transgressor. What so likely to melt the stony heart, as the transactions of Calvary? To see the innocent Jesus hang on a tree, his side torn with the scourge, his veins streaming with blood, and God Almighty, as his inexorable favorable Judge, pouring into his breaking heart dreadful sensations of divine wrath; and to think that we, even sinful we, were the objects, for which he suffered, and our sins, the meritorious cause, must produce sympathy for him, and sorrow on account of our sins.

THE doctrine of justification through the imputed righteousness of the Redeemer displays the free grace of God to the best advantage. It manifests forgiveness of sins, & acceptance of our persons as righteous before God, through the blood of Jesus. It points to the blood of the Redeemer as the meritorious cause of pardon and acceptance. It manifests the divine favour to be of pure, free grace, both with respect to God, who was under no obligation to admit a satisfaction for sin; but might in strict justice, have left the guilty rebels to perish in their transgressions, and of pure free grace with respect to the guilty criminals, who are pardoned. For it is bestowed on them freely without any reward, merit, or desert of their own.

THE doctrine of justification through the imputed righteousness of Jesus Christ manifests the goodness of God to the best advantage. Wonderful goodness appears in allowing a substitute to suffer in the law-room, and stead of unnumbered millions who must otherwise have suffered forever and ever. It appears still greater in providing a substitute, without any solicitation on our part. But the greatest exertion of goodness appears in appointing a Son, an only begotten Son to suffer in the stead of his bitter enemies.

THIS scheme of justification displays the wisdom of God to the best advantage. It harmonizes the seemingly opposite claims of justice and mercy. It not only satisfies each, but magnifies both. Justice receives all her demands, and opens a door for the exercise of mercy. Penitent transgressors are restored to divine favour through the sufferings of a substitute.

THE doctrine of justification through the imputed righteousness of the Redeemer, teaches us to place our gospel obedience on the right foundation. Any extreme dangerous

gerou catio ing in dienc
we m
own.
al de our t God
of Ch
and e Adam
ness o
man's obedi
obedi
and is his wo which
This
formir
count
dience
us the
and ev
the Co
may sa
is not Jesus
we mig works o
be justij
I will
the Lov
them in SHAL
unright rememb gerous. Some make it the matter, or cause of Justification, others the condition of Christ's righteousness being imputed. Others deny the necessity of gospel obedience, and turn the grace of God into lasciviousness. But we must distinguish between Christ's obedience and our own. His is meritorious, ours the duty only of a rational dependant creature. Christ's is performed for us, in our stead, and imputed to us; but ours is performed to God from a principle of love and gratitude. By means of Christ's righteousness imputed to us, we are accepted and esteemed righteous before God, and are as truly so as Adam was or could have been by a complete righteousness of his own performance, Rom. v. 19. For as by one man's disobedience, many were made sinners; so by the obedience of one shall many be made righteous. Gospel obedience is a tribute of gratitude, which we owe to God, and is an evidence of being in a justified state, For we are his workmanship, created in Christ Jesus unto good works, which God hath before ordained, that we should walk in. This scheme of justification teaches us, that after performing a strict course of gospel obedience, we are to count ourselves only unprofitable servants. Our obedience does not make God a debtor to us, but his giving us the justifying merits of his Son, makes us unspeakable and everlasting debtors to him. And now reader, may the God of grace enlighten your understanding, that you may say with the Apostle, Gal. ii. 16. Knowing that a man is not justified by the works of the law, but by the faith of Jesus Christ; even we have believed in Jesus Christ, that we might be justified by the faith of Christ, and not by the works of the law; for by the works of the law shall no flesh be justified. Heb. viii. 10. 12. For this is the covenant that I will make with the house of Israel after those days, saith the Lord; I WILL put my laws into their mind, and write them in their hearts; and WILL be to them a God, and they SHALL be to me a people.—For I will be merciful to their unrighteousness, and their sins, and their iniquities will I remember no more. And therefore, Rom. viii. 33. 34. Who shall

Shall lay any thing to the charge of God's ELECT? It is God that justifieth; who is he that condemneth? It is Christ that died, for our sins; yea rather, that is risen again, for our justification, who is even at the right hand of God; who also maketh intercession for us, to whom be glory for ever and ever. AMEN.

DEECT? It is omneth? It is Christ is risen again, for ght hand of God;
whom: be glory for

