CHAPTER XVI.

"THERE'S MANY A SLIP..."

In the warm early evening of the day following Sydney's visit to Stillcote-Upton, Mrs. Alwyn and her nephew strolled up and down the lawn at the Dale in conclave of a peculiarly private nature.

Each had a design, definite and very similar, at heart. Both were bent on having it discussed and done with before Sydney's return, which was expected in some half-hour; and their conversation hovered about the important point, like bees over a blossom, undecided whereabout to commence operations. Leonora, rather partial generally to a twilight stroll with her London cousin, kept out of the way now, obedient to a hint from her mother. But she made herself heard, if not seen. Her florid exclamation of "Rupert, the sparrow from their nets in the ivy about the drawing-room windows, though it was quite past their proper bedtime, and her "grace pour moi, grace pour toi," pierced the still air beyond the Dale to coëscure remembrance, evoking the doubtful compliment that "young miss yonder, she could screech mighty fine, an' no mistake."

"Your father admires that cavatina so much," said Mrs. Alwyn, when the last vocal entreaty died out, exhausted, on the final D; "he remembered Grisi singing it, and thinks Leonora almost equal to her in it."

Mr. Rupert's glance followed the gyrations of a bat overhead to conceal a suspicious smile. His excellent father knew about as much of music as count would he ginsay the major's fattery. So he agreed, "Leonora does sing brilliantly indeed. We must get MOTHER naturally thinks of the possibilities of the fabric shrinking in the wash. It is therefore a relief to her to know that the fabric will not shrink or lose its charm if Lux is used for its cleansing.

Durability, charm of colour, quality of texture, the freshness of newness—these are preserved to all good fabrics washed with Lux. A packet of Lux—a bowl of warm water—and dainty hands can cleanse delightful fabrics in a delightfully easy manner.

The beautiful pure Lux flakes are whisked into a creamy, bubbly lather in an instant. Gently squeeze this cleansing foam through and through the soiled texture—then rinse in clean water and hang to dry. Lux cannot harm a silken thread, it coaxes rather than forces the dirt from the clothes.

to-morrow with Sydney's peculiar arrangements. I think you and I should undertake them."

"Most willingly, Aunt Helen."

"You won't consider me premature, I trust?"

"Not the least likely."

"Then I had been considering, that as possibly you will not wish for a very long engagement—"

"A month. Not a day more. A fellow feels unsettled with—with that sort of thing" (and others unnamable— unpaid bills, to wit) "hanging over him. I must make Sydney look at it in the same light, and fix the middle of July."

"Then the middle of July will be a very expensive time to me, Rupert."

Mr. Villiers barely restrained a chuckle. Of all moves on the board, this was just the most advantageous for him that Mrs. Alwyn could have made. Now he thanked his stars he had got the cue to cutting his difficulties short.

"A very expensive time!" he repeated, gravely. "Ah! I suppose so. You ladies won't be contented, I presume, unless you have the ceremony in grand style."

"Grand! Oh, dear, no! But becomingly. And you have no idea how expenses run up at such a time."

"Ah! I haven't a doubt of it," Rupert acquiesced. "I've been thinking of pretty much the same sort of thing myself. You see, when a fellow gets married he has to clear up all round, as it were, and confoundedly awkward he finds it sometimes."

"I quite believe it."

"I'm glad you do. The pater, you see, hasn't a notion of how much is wanted for this sort of thing; though—with a twinge of compunction—"he means to be liberal, of course. But figures run up so—"

"They do indeed, Rupert."

"And house-furnishing makes off with ten times more than a man with my short income can get together. And—"

"Unquestionably, Rupert. But I am sure if this is put in the proper light to Sydney she will see that it is her duty, her delightful duty, to assist with what you name."

"Oh, you think she won't object to that!"

"Certainly not—if explained as I should take care to explain it. You would probably have to restrain her being too free-handed. But everything, with her—forgive me the expression—peculiar disposition, depends on how the matter is put before her."

"Then, my dear aunt, to be perfectly candid, will you undertake to see if she has any objection to leaving a—"

"thousand or so—a couple, perhaps, just loose, so as to start us off respectably, and leave us a margin for well things—"

"—not very businesslike, is it not so? Which brings me to what I was going to mention to you—for really we ought not to trouble your father after

"Nor at any other time, Rupert!"

A gentle reminder, this, that other interests were on the carpet besides his own. Mr. Villiers answered the helm instantly.

"Nor at any other. Dear me, no! Least of all at such a time as I hope we are coming to. I'm certain, Aunt Helen, Sydney and I would both think it unfair for you to bear the outlay that is for our glorification."

"Especially, as you see, my income is on the verge of being lessened."

"Exactly so. I should think if Sydney asked you to manipulate all her first quarter's income over the business, that wouldn't leave you much to the bad, would it?"

On the contrary, it would leave her an appreciable trifle to the good. Rupert was thoughtful beyond his sex. What an excellent husband he would make poor Sydney! Mrs. Alwyn felt quite a glow of regard for him, pleasant fellow that he was! She took his arm affectionately, with "That would do! That would do!"—ample, she was on the point of saying, but substituted, "as I should conceive it." There was roomed to arm Rupert with the notion that he was acting very liberally. She preferred the obligation to rest with her. So she concluded, "And I will arrange that other point, Rupert, and take the pains to settle it speedily, as you wish."

"Thanks, very much." It took a load off his mind, and he could add, with quite a cool air, "Of course you see why it is so desirable?"

"Perfectly." ("Hang it, I hope not!" thought the gentleman.) "And now, if we are to dine at eight, I think it time we went in-doors, Rupert."

He took off his straw hat with "Then an revoir, mamma!"—and profoundly contented with the compact just concluded, went gayly into the house, up to his own room three steps at a time, singing "Love in her eyes sits playing" so lustily over his quarter of an hour's dressing that the persecuted sparrows outside had no chance of beauty sleep till he had descended to the drawing-room in that evening garb which, if he might believe he testimony of many mirrors, invested him with his most gentlemanly and attractive exterior.

"Sydney not come!" he said, impatiently, on entering, and Leonora, the one occupant of the apartment, replied, rather sensitively, "though all this exaltation of Sydney was needless means to a desirable end, she was getting thoroughly tired of it."

"No, actually not here yet, poor, poor Rupert. So you must wait a little longer before you can verify the charming ditty you have been winking up the echoes with so melodiously."

Side Talks by Ruth Cameron

DO YOU DRIVE THE MACHINE OR YOURSELF?

Does it tire you to drive an automobile or does it rest you? I have a friend who regards it as a great nerve strain to drive a machine. He drives because it is the easiest way to get to places, but he does not especially enjoy it and a trip of any length leaves him nervously tired.

I could not understand why he felt so strongly on the subject until I drove with him and then I fully understood.

He doesn't just drive the machine, he drives himself.

Why He Gets So Tired.

It is a point of honor with him to pass all but the highest powered cars on the road, although his own car is a light one, in traffic. Instead of going with the rank and file, he weaves in and out, constantly jockeying for position; if he is held up anywhere by a railroad train or a drawbridge he strains constantly at the leash of the interruption. And this is not only when he is in a hurry but all the time.

Do you wonder that he considers driving a nervous strain? I don't.

The five, or at the very most ten miles an hour that he gains in this way are taken right out of his own nerves, to say nothing of the nerves of anyone who drives with him.

Is it worth it?

Are those extra five miles that represent the difference between comfortable, relaxed, calm driving, and tense, concentrated, nervous driving ever worth while unless one has some extremely cogent reason for getting somewhere in a hurry?

They Feel the Strain Without Knowing It.

Personally I don't think that they are. I know many people will claim that they can drive this way without feeling any strain. They may not consciously feel the strain and yet subconsciously be experiencing it.

In my own case I know that an hour's unhurried driving (and that doesn't necessarily mean slow driving, just a pace which I can easily maintain) rests me less than a few minutes pushing past everyone. Several times I have foolishly tried keeping up with heavier cars and found that bunch of nerves which centres just over the solar plexus bound up in knots in a few minutes. Whereas two or three hours leisurely driving hardly tired me at all.

Other people will say they enjoy driving in this tense concentrated way. Very likely. Just as many of us enjoy other forms of nerve stimulation that are bad for us.

Many People Live at the Five-Miles-More-an-Hour Rate.

I think there are many people who not only drive their cars but live all the time at this five-miles-more-an-hour rate. And that extra five miles an hour takes more out of them than the 25 or 30 miles an hour to which it is added. This is the law of energy. It takes a certain amount of horse-power to make a motor boat go eight or ten miles an hour, for every mile beyond that you gain you must put in an entirely disproportionate amount of power.

And it is the same with men and women. Is it worth it in life—any more than in auto driving? I doubt it. That is unless one has some very urgent reason for getting something done in a hurry and, having counted the cost, is willing to pay the price. But one should realize the price and should realize that one cannot keep on paying it without putting a mortgage on one's future health and strength.

Household Notes.

Meringue will stand up nicely if sugar is added from the beginning and plenty of it used. Add a pinch of cornstarch also.

Angelica makes an attractive garnish for little frosted cakes and whipped cream. A small amount will last a long time.

If the metal tips come off your shoe laces, dip the ends in melted beeswax and twist tightly between thumb and finger.

For serving cold beverages on the summer porch, use paper cups in a wire frame such as is used for sterilizing infants' bottles.

Different sized oblong granite pans are nice to use in the refrigerator for "left-overs." They fit in snugly and save space.

Restoring Nerve Power.

In many people the tissues of the nerves have suffered from the strain of War and from the shortage of fats. You can restore your nerves in a natural way by eating "Skippers." The pure olive oil in which they are packed is worth its weight in gold to those who suffer from "fat-starved" nerves.

Your retailer will supply you with a tin of

"SKIPPERS."

A guarantee on every can.

League of Nations Will Handle Silesian Question.

Disarmament Conference Have Big Job Ahead--Fish Canning Taken Over by N.S.W., Government.

SILESIA SOLUTION.
PARIS, Aug. 12. The League of Nations, it was announced here today, will handle the Silesian question. This question, which involves drawing the frontier between Poland and Germany, in Upper Silesia, was postponed yesterday to the meeting of the Supreme Allied Council. The decision was considered here today to be a solution of the crisis that arose between France and Great Britain. The League of Nations, it was made known, will handle the matter by referring it to the League of Nations, and Premier Lloyd George immediately. On the question of additional troops for Silesia, the Supreme Allied Council has decided to refer the matter to the League of Nations. The League of Nations has handed down its decision on the Silesian question. Great Britain, France and Italy each to send a representative to the League of Nations. Meanwhile the Supreme Allied Council is sending a warning to the German and Polish Governments that their must be maintained in the disputed territory.

DISARMAMENT DISCUSSION.
WASHINGTON, Aug. 12. Aside from a hint that naval armaments would logically come first in consideration of the proposed Disarmament Conference, the formal discussion of the United States to Great Britain, France, Italy and Japan, which was held yesterday afternoon, was devoted to disarmament discussions. That relates to "new weapons of warfare," control of which is the most important in the interest of humanity. Under this heading, it is said, special attention will be given to gas, dissemination of disease germs, and enemy lines, and similar questions.

GOVERNMENT IN BUSINESS.
LONDON, Aug. 12. A Reuter cable from Sydney, N.S.W., says that the Government has decided its operations to fish canning. It has already placed a variety of fish foods on the market several hundred per cent cheaper than private enterprises.

REMOVERS AND IRELAND.
LONDON, Aug. 12. Rumors that the reply of Eamon de Valera to the British Government's fish peace proposals, which was received here yesterday, had produced serious crisis in the Irish situation, were generally discredited here today.

A CURIOUS BYE-ELECTION.
LONDON, Aug. 12. Political England is following with interest and some little amusement the progress of the bye-election at the Abbey Division of Westminster, fought about by the death of the late member, Burdette Coutts. The present state of the Coalition Party and the prominence achieved by the anti-waste campaign directed against the Government is having a curious effect. Col. Applin, Anti Waste candidate, immediately started a vigorous campaign along the lines which had been successful in the neighboring constituency of St. George's. Meanwhile Brigadier-General Nicholson has come into the field as an "Independent Conservative" Conservative, promising general support to the Coalition, but reserving entire independence concerning expenditure of the money. Thus no straight Coalition candidate is in the field. The local Coalition Liberals refusing support Nicholson, in view of the fact that a Labor candidate has been provisionally adopted and a woman candidate may be forthcoming, but the bye-election will probably resolve itself into a lively competition between the General and Colonel as to which of these two gallant officers will show himself the sternest economist.

REFERENDUM SUGGESTED.
QUEBEC, Aug. 12. President John McFarland of the International Typographical Union, in his address at the 44th annual convention here yesterday, suggested that it was not really a fight between the 44 hour week, but a struggle for the open shop. He claimed that home laborers were willing enough to work up, but insisted upon this being done in secret. He suggested that a

CUTICURA HEALS SKIN TROUBLE
Pimples On Face, Itched So Hard To Rub Them. Burned and Hurt.
"My face was a mass of pimples and I had an unusual amount on my forehead and chin. They were red and red and later they came to heads. They itched so I would rub them, and then they started to burn and hurt."
"I saw an advertisement for Cuticura Soap and Ointment and tried them and found they helped me. I purchased more and when I had three cakes of Cuticura Soap and one and a half boxes of Cuticura Ointment I was completely healed."
Miss Anna F. White, Carroll, Ohio, Dec. 6, 1919.
"Cuticura Soap, Ointment and Pills cured my skin trouble."

species of terror was an existence. While six thousand men were jobless over this question, thirty thousand were working under a 44 hour week agreement. It is asked that the convention be petitioned to give the Executive Council the right to re-open negotiations with publishers, ultimate ending could then be submitted for referendum. His suggestions were accepted by the convention unanimously.

MAY RELEASE DEBS.
WASHINGTON, Aug. 12. Attorney-General Daugherty announced today that he hoped to submit to President Harding by the end of the month recommendations concerning a pardon for Eugene V. Debs, the imprisoned Socialist leader.

THE ANSWER UNCERTAIN.
DUBLIN, Aug. 12. The letter from Eamonn De Valera delivered to Mr. Lloyd George yesterday, is neither an acceptance nor a rejection of Irish peace proposals, it was learned here today. The letter raises various questions to which an answer is necessary. The answer may serve to facilitate future dealings, it was said, and is not expected to lead to a break in negotiations.

Civic Commission.
The weekly meeting of the Municipal Council was held yesterday afternoon. Mayor Morris presided. Councillors Vinicombe, Peet, Jackman and Collier were present.

The minutes of previous meetings being confirmed the following matters were considered. A communication was read from Councillor Mullaly enclosing certificate from Dr. Scully, stating he had been advised by the Doctor to avoid all meetings for some time to come. The Prime Minister informed the Board that the application for cheque to liquidate loans due to the Royal Bank of Canada had been forwarded, the Auditor General to be verified.

The Secretary-Treasurer of the Newfoundland Motor Association thanked the Council for the prompt action taken in the repairing of Millin's Bridge.

The Royal Stores Ltd., asked attention be given to their water main near their factory, Duckworth St. The matter has been attended to.

Colin Campbell Ltd., replying to Council's communication regarding condition of open space fronting their premises, stated they would be only too pleased to have space cleaned up if the Council would compel owners of adjoining property to erect boundary fence.

Solicitors Higgins, Hunt and Emerson on behalf of their client, Mr. W. Reid, Pleasant Street, referred to the manner in which retaining wall was being repaired. The Engineer will arrange matters satisfactory to the party concerned.

A petition was read from the residents of Franklin Avenue complaining of the condition of that street and also the need of having an electric light installed in this locality. Regarding the former, residents who have thrown up gravel will be instructed to have same immediately removed but the request for a light will be acceded to.

A letter was read from Mr. Mart McCarthy, Leslie St., in reference to McKay Street sewer and the necessity for a storm sewer down Leslie Street. When McKay Street work is completed there will be no need of the storm sewer referred to.

Rev. C. A. Moulton asked that attention be given to the grading of Quill Vidi Road. Road Inspector will be instructed to attend to same.

John J. Neville, on behalf of the City Cabmen, wrote regarding roads recently oiled, asking that same be covered with crushed stone to prevent horses from slipping. Council will do the best to meet the wishes of horse owners.

A letter was read from Mr. T. Soper on behalf of Road Committee, Nfld. Motor Association, congratulating the Council and Inspector Neville on the work done on Cornwall Avenue, and hoped the Council would still improve the road by having it oiled. If sufficient oil is left after other work arranged for is completed, it will be attended to.

A lengthy communication was read from G. W. B. Ayre on behalf of the St. John's Gas Company, pointing out the disadvantages under which the Company was operating and asking that it be relieved of the tax on gas coal. The Council while in sympathy with the Company was unable owing to lack of funds, to accede to the request, but decided to give the matter further consideration and will communicate with the Prime Minister in relation to same.

Solicitor Carter reported on the application of the St. John's Amateur Athletic Association for the use of the Parade Grounds for sports and games. The Council were unanimous the grounds should be used for the purpose referred to and a Committee of Council will meet the officers of the Association to discuss the matter. Plan submitted by Geo. Butt, for dwelling, Franklin Avenue, was passed subject to the approval of the City Engineer.

Tender of W. J. Ellis to supply E. W. pipes was accepted. Commissioner Jackman brought up the necessity for extension of the Street Car Service to Bowring Park. It was thought that the time had arrived for this much needed improvement and a Committee of Council will confer with the Prime Minister and President of the Reid Newfoundland Company on this matter at an early date. Reports of City Engineer and Health Officer were read, after which the pay rolls and bill were ordered paid. The meeting then adjourned.

Deceptive and False.

No greater arraignment of the honor of a responsible Minister of the Crown could have been made in the House of Assembly than that in which Sir Michael Cashin, Leader of the Opposition, characterized the Budget Speech of Sir Richard Anderson Squires, Prime Minister and Acting Minister of Finance, with eleven years experience as head of the Finance and Customs Department in peace time and war time knew every phase of the financial working of the Government, and was not to be cajoled into the belief that everything put forward was true because certain figures said so. Every detail of the working of the Customs and Finance Department was familiar to him, and it was useless for a tyro in finance to bring down figures in an endeavour to prove that the present administration had conserved the interests of the people during their term of office. The strictures passed by Sir Michael on the Prime Minister were most severe, yet that gentleman swallowed them, because he performed had to, and could offer no refutation. The charge that the country had been presented with an inaccurate and erroneous financial statement, and that the public accounts had been cooked to suit party exigencies was not denied by the Prime Minister with any degree of force. It is a long time since a Finance Minister has been accused of manipulating public accounts in order to present an official statement favorable to the Government of which he is a member, but Sir Michael made this charge without hesitation, and Prime Minister and Government alike were obliged to swallow the nauseating dose administered. There was not one solitary attempt made at a defense of the financial position as presented in the Budget Speech, for the simple reason that not one private member knew any more about it than a new born babe, and the executive members naturally were pledged to sit tight and say nothing.

The general tenor of the 1920-21, 1921-22 Budget Speech has already been discussed in this column, and certain comments made thereupon for the information of the public generally, but the main details could not be furnished until the whole weight of the criticism of experience had been brought to bear upon it. There is, therefore, can be no question of the ability of Sir Michael Cashin to discuss the present Budget on its merits or demerits, the latter preponderating. He has turned the searchlight of his own knowledge upon its falsity so powerfully that all who read his able speech cannot fail to be convinced of the sincerity of his utterances and the incontrovertibility of his statements. Accounts have been made to appear different from what they really are. Sir Michael contended, and figures have been cooked so as to make a better showing than is actually the case. Transfers have been made from one account to the other with malice aforethought and intention to deceive, and the whole contents of the Budget bristles with inaccuracies. Such charges must generate a feeling of doubt in the minds of the public that things are not being conducted as they should be, nor in the best future interests of this much-abused and misconducted island. The awful financial condition into which Newfoundland has been precipitated by incompetent rulers will leave a bar sinister across the hitherto fair south-eastern of the Colony, one which may not be erased for years to come and then only by tremendous efforts on the part of a brand new party, absolutely divorced from the principles of extravagance and deceit to which the Liberal Reform Party have wedded themselves. Only by and with the direction of men who place country before self can Newfoundland be brought out of the political Slough of Despond into which she has been cast by a Government utterly devoid of the first principles of the knowledge of fair and equitable administration.

Cheaper Gas a Necessity

In the two closing sessions of the House a subject, most important to the citizens, was discussed, and the remission of the duty on gas coal used for manufacturing purposes. Mr. Higgins, senior member for St. John's East, in an exceedingly clear and logical speech introduced the subject and showed how anomalous, how unjust and unfair it was to tax gas coal, the raw material from which the gas is made. Recently manufacturers had petitioned the Legislature for protection on their products, but the Gas Company's price was not protected, but its raw material was taxed to the extent of seventy cents per ton. The Gas Company is a public utility. It has been operating for over three quarters of a century. It has served the public, and were the city today to be suddenly deprived of gas and electricity, the citizens would realize how extremely necessary to their deprivation. The electric light and power are comparatively new on the market. The Gas Company in the past held the field alone as the sole provider of light. To-day gas is absolutely necessary for heating and power purposes. Its convenience in domestic use is not yet recognized as much as it should be. To have an old established company whose large capital is to a great extent held by widows and orphans, a company which spends over $25,000 a year in labor, to have such a company go out of business would be sheer madness. If it went out of business there would be a vacuum which would have to be filled by the St. George's Coal Fields supplied the city with coal, no tax could be levied, so it was absurd now to tax the gas which is produced from the coal. The price of gas to-day was far too high. The company is moving heaven and earth to lower it. With cheaper coal, increased consumption and the tax remitted, the company will be able to get the price back to what it was at the time of the war, so that every citizen will be able to take advantage of what should be in every home, a necessity and not a luxury. Fancy what a convenience would be to the housewife if instead of having to carry coal from the cellar to the attic, the house were equipped with gas stoves. All that would be necessary would be to apply a match and the fire is ready. As the domestic problem becomes more acute the necessity for such labor-saving devices is multiplied by the Gas Company Branch, come more apparent. It is only a question of time and cheaper gas when every home will be equipped with gas for cooking and heating purposes. The Premier, Sir R. A. Squires, and Mr. John R. Bennett expressed themselves to the effect that the company should be facilitated in every way, and the Premier assured Mr. Higgins that the Council, who gets the tax, would be consulted with in order that other methods might be devised to raise the money, so that gas coal might be exempt and the company enabled to put gas within the reach of all the greatest possible number of citizens. This is an important matter, and the Premier, Mr. Higgins and Mr. Bennett, representatives of the city, deserve the very best thanks of the citizens for the stand they have taken.

In the early hours of Thursday morning an attempt was made to burglarize the office of the Franklin Agencies. An entrance was forced through a side window and the office was badly ransacked. Much of the furniture was smashed. The burglar failed to get any cash which, it is evident, is what he was after.

Schr. "Huntley" Sold.

The four masted auxiliary schooner "Huntley" which was wrecked some time ago and towed to port, was sold at sheriff's sale to-day by order of the Supreme Court to satisfy a claim for towage. The sale was held in the Court Chamber, Sheriff Blagford's room being occupied by the Rosalind prospective purchasers. At noon, the Sheriff, after reading the particulars of the vessel as taken from the Register, analyzed the percentage of the vessel was $500 made by Mr. A. E. Hickman, and about seven bids were made when the vessel was "knocked down to Captain A. Keen for $1,000. The vessel was built in 1913. Her spars are practically intact except for one topmast. She has two gasoline engines and her sails are believed to be in good condition. It is considered that Captain Keen has made a good bargain. As yet he has not made any plans as to what he will do with his purchase, but it is likely he will put her on dock for repairs.

Not Up to Standard.

A milkman was charged before Judge Morris this morning with supplying milk to the Sanatorium which was not up to the required standard. He pleaded not guilty and was defended by W. J. Higgins, K.C. E. Leo Carleton, and Early Jersey. The case had not been concluded. Health Inspector Lawlor, Dr. Rendell of the Sanatorium and D. Jas. Davies, Government Analyst, were present at the hearing for the prosecution. The last stated that of the two tins of milk one three gallon and the other four gallon, analyzed the percentage of fat in the first was 1.64% and in the second 4.53. Mr. Davies was cross-examined by Higgins, K.C.

Where Women Win.

"It is becoming serious," I said, in seeming reply to a remark made by my wife Priscilla, across the breakfast table. I spoke in an automatic fashion with my eyes still glued on the newspaper; the latest "moonshine" case was absorbing my attention and the realization of the hopeless task imposed upon the law officers—that of preventing the manufacture of "Sagars"—was distressing me. "It is becoming serious," I repeated, "what we want in this country is an army of Sherlock Holmeses." Priscilla put her hand on my sleeve. "It is serious, George," she said, "but I was not speaking of moonshine; it was of breakages." "What again?" I demanded. "Yesterday, two glasses, one cup, one glass dish—value One Dollar and Seventy-five cents she said, drily, as if reciting the alphabet. "You must dismiss the girl!" I stormed. "We can never stand it." My wife smiled irritably; "and where do you imagine we can get another maid?" she asked. "But do you realize," I continued, "that we are living in very hard times—that probably—next month I will have to reckon with—a coal bill. Why the damages must be shocking. You must manage things better—make the maid pay." Again a cynical smile was the only return for the rising anger showing on my face. In the car going down to business, I whispered my troubles to an old friend. "Tut, tut, man," said he, "you can replace them all at one of those small cheap bazaars or stores along— Street." A gulp of relief was my only answer; we did not resume conversation. All day I was possessed with the idea of teaching Priscilla a very necessary lesson. Now that women were striding their virtues and their special qualities, not least among which they name housekeeping, surely a mere man might show them he could beat them at their own game. That evening, after tea, I sauntered down the street mentioned by my friend, and then, a little sheepishly, entered one of those small stores. I found everything marked a good bit higher than he had led me to expect, but I was undaunted; I had made careful mental note of the articles enumerated by Priscilla and, growing a little bold, sought them out. I was little pliant. To be sure I suffered the pangs of disillusionment—as I say there was nothing there really cheap. Still Priscilla's Dollar, Seventy-five's worth could be replaced at a Dollar, and Twenty. It was a victory. Arriving home, I placed the articles on the dining-room table with a laudatory air. "There," said I, "there are the glasses, the cup (with saucer) and the dish—all for a Dollar and Twenty—and yet men are no good at these things." My head was at an interrogative angle, yet my triumph was brief. Priscilla flung herself into a chair and laughed loud and long. "Why," she cried derisively, "I replaced them all to-day at the Royal Stores for Fifty Cents." —GLENER.

TO-DAY'S MESSAGES.

MUCH MORE TO BE DONE.

PARIS, Aug. 12. The Inter-Ally Military Commission, which is sitting at Versailles, under the chairmanship of Marshal Foch, reports to-day to the Supreme Council that much still remains to be done regarding the disarmament of Germany, and that control must be continued.

PREPARING WARM RECEPTION.

DETROIT, Aug. 12. Immediate steps to prevent the immediate smuggling of liquor across the International border from Canada have been taken here, following a report of Magistrate Gundy that Canadian Customs officials had right to stop liquor shipments to United States. Michigan State Constabulary reported for duty to C. P. Champau, Detroit representative of the Michigan Public Safety Commission. This detachment will be divided into patrols to patrol the United States side of Detroit river and a portion of Lake St. Clair for the purpose of preventing an export of liquor. Additional operations are being made to put high powered motor boats into commission on Saturday. These will be manned with troops armed with rifles.

APPROVES BRIAND'S ACTION.

PARIS, Aug. 12. The French Cabinet at a second session held this afternoon with President Briand presiding, unanimously approved the action of Premier Briand in agreeing to submit to the League of Nations the question of the Upper Silesian boundary question. Briand's action was regarded as a victory because although the League of Nations must be consulted, the League Council can decide by a majority vote. Any motion of the Council of the League of Nations must be unacceptable to his Government.

HUGHES WILL ARRANGE.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 12. President Harding has definitely designated Secretary of State Hughes to head the United States delegation at the Disarmament Conference, and has placed in his hands the task of arranging all remaining details of the mission. Other members of the delegation have not been selected.

BUMPED BY BERG.

CHRISTIANIA, Aug. 12. The Norwegian steamer Bergendal, which was damaged yesterday by hitting an iceberg while off Cape Horn, was during a dense fog. The iceberg was seen below the water line, and one blade of her propeller was bent so that the liner was forced to reduce its speed. There was a panic however, among passengers. The ship will be dry docked and examined here.

FORTY KILLED.

BERNE, Switzerland, Aug. 12. Forty persons have been killed, and many persons are burned, in the disaster which occurred in the village of Klausen, in the back valley of Austrian Tyrol, which has been partially destroyed by a landslide. The disaster was due to a heavy storm, causing mountain streams to overflow and send torrents of water to the village. Fifteen houses were destroyed.

SHORT CROPS.

OTTAWA, Aug. 12. An extremely light field of potatoes throughout the country is forecasted by a bulletin issued by the botanical branch of the experimental farm to farmers. Farmers are warned to examine their crops early, and to place them in the market, because of a danger of the potato crop failure.

ESS COMMENT ON ROYAL ECONOMIST.

LONDON, Aug. 12. The action of the King in realizing the Royal estates in the city of Lancaster, to avoid cost of maintenance of the Royal household further on public funds, has provoked appreciative criticism. Comment, however, is accompanied by a number of criticisms. Some aspects of the question, more particularly the announcement of His Majesty that he is prepared, if it is thought desirable, to make curtailment of the splendour that has been usually associated with the British throne. The Daily Telegraph is convinced that the Government did right in advising the King that the people of not only Great Britain, but of the whole Empire, desire that the dignity of the Crown be maintained without any notable curtailment of this character. "It is not," says the Telegraph, "as if there was anything grandiose or unattractively about functions under British monarchy." The Daily News takes the opposite view, remarking that the British Nation, which was in its infancy when the Royal family will require to be reduced at an early date. The Westminster Gazette remarks that it is obvious that the whole position of the Royal family will require to be re-arranged at an early date. Money goes into ceremonial, and the maintenance of worship, which must become irksome to the people.

NOT TRUE.

LONDON, Aug. 12. A Canadian Press statement that the Hon. Mr. Law was returning to Ottawa shortly to resume the Unemployment in the Commons, was denied here to-day. The official statement was accompanied by a statement that the Hon. Mr. Law is under the leadership of Anstey.

FARMERS IN CONTROL.

EDMONTON, Aug. 12. Premier Stewart placed his resignation in the hands of the Lieutenant-Governor, and Herbert Green, leader of the Farmers' Party, announced the personnel of his ministry.

Personal.

Mr. J. J. Walkins (Joe) is leaving on Monday for Conception Bay on a short vacation. One of the popular events at the Guards Sports, Wednesday, will be the Mercantile Relay. Don't miss it.—aug13,11

Fordney Bill May Be Combated.

We learn that Mr. E. Shipman, of Smith & Shipman, the American fish buying firm, who arrived from New York by the Roseland, will go into the fish purchasing business again. Speaking to a Telegram reporter this morning, Mr. Shipman said he is now making preparations for the purchase of fish. Asked if the Fordney Bill will be as detrimental as was anticipated, Mr. Shipman said that great opposition would be expected from private members of the Senate, particularly in reference to herring. An effort is being made to have the gross weight method of taxation removed and a straight duty of so much per barrel, probably $1.25, put on instead. The Commercial Union of America is strongly backing this movement and being a powerful trade body their efforts are likely to succeed. Some people who are on the inside track are of opinion that the Fordney Bill, or at least a great portion of it, will be shelved.

Parade Ground for Sports.

The agitation which has been conducted for many years by Mr. G. W. B. Ayre has at last been successful, and the Municipal Council has decided to devote the Parade Ground to the purpose of sport. A meeting will be held between a Committee from the Council and the officers of the Newfoundland Amateur Athletic Association, of which Mr. Ayre is president, to confer on the matter. Mr. Ayre deserves to be congratulated upon obtaining for the public what will in time, it is hoped, turn out to be a splendid sports ground and a credit to the city.

Junior Football.

Last evening an interesting football match took place on the Methodist Guards practice field, the contesting teams being the Gower Street Boy Scouts and the C.C.C. The latter won by a score of 4-0. At a previous game between the same teams the C.C.C. were also winners.

Some Dates.

Lampblack was invented by Mini in 1844.
Chloral was discovered by Liebig in 1831.
Water pipes of lead were first made in 1236.
The folding envelope was first used in 1839.
Coal was first used in Britain as fuel in 1350.
Telescopes were first made by Jansen in 1609.
Barometers were invented by Torricelli in 1643.
Alcohol was discovered in the thirteenth century.
The electrolyte was the work of Spence in 1837.
Coal oil was first used as an illuminant in 1826.
The Gatling gun was the work of Gatling, 1861.
Bombshells were first made in Holland in 1495.
Ice was first made by machinery by Carre in 1860.
Steel needles were first made in Britain in 1545.

Slips of the Pen.

Even your favorite author might have been apt to make mistakes sometimes, as well as less favoured mortals. Shakespeare wrote of King John and his barons fighting with cannon many years before these implements of war were invented. In another of his plays one of his characters mentions a printing press two hundred years before the art of printing was known. In "Julius Caesar" he speaks of striking clocks. Thackeray given an instance of forgetfulness when he kills and buries Lady Kew, and afterwards brings her to life. Anthony Trollope made Andy Scott come "whistling up the street with a cigar in his mouth." When it was pointed out to him that this was an impossibility, he refused to admit it, and endeavoured to show his critics that such a thing could be done. He did not succeed, and the cigar was dispensed with in the next edition. In Ouida's novel, "Sigmata," Bruno smashes Sigmata's violin. Sigmata sits up all night trying to mend the instrument, but it was quite useless. The wooden shell he could piece well enough, but the keys were smashed beyond all hope of restoration, and for the broken silvery strings there was no hope. "Certainly repair the keys" of a violin sounds a hopeless task; to discover them would be the first difficulty.

Useful on a Long Walk.

Nature's most ardent lovers cannot enjoy a long tramp over hills, fields and country roads, if a blister on the foot has presented itself. A simple remedy, often marvellously beneficial comes from the Old Country, merely the use of a cabbage leaf. Cut a piece of the cool leaf larger than the painful area. Then place it over the spot and fix down the borders with stamp and fix down the borders with stamp paper. If the cabbage plaster is applied that it will not seriously hamper the putting on of the stocking and shoe. A wonderful sense of relief is experienced, and it is possible to continue the walk without pain. Of course, if a little rest can be taken after the cabbage leaf has been placed on the painful part so much the better.

Liners Race to Save Man's Life.

ARMLESS SEAMAN'S FLUCK.
How an Atlantic liner raced to meet another vessel so that the former's surgeon could save a man's life, was described on the arrival of the Cunard liner Albania at Liverpool recently. When more than 200 miles from the Irish coast, the Albania received a wireless message from the steamer Tamaqua, bound for London from Montreal, stating that one of the ship's firemen had his arm torn off and asking for advice. The Tamaqua was about 100 miles away, but was unable to carry out the surgeon's instructions. The Albania then steamed to meet the Tamaqua and reached her in 5 hours. A boat was lowered from the Albania with the ship's surgeon, who found an immediate operation was necessary, and he signalled instructions to the Albania. The wounded man had shown the greatest endurance after the accident. He had climbed unaided up the engine-room ladders and was walking about the deck before his condition was noticed. He was transferred to the Albania's boat, and, although weak from the loss of blood, asked the doctor for a cigarette, and as the boat was approaching the

TRINITY.

The oldest minute book that I can find in connection with the doings of Old St. Paul's, Trinity, begins with a notice of a meeting of Pew-holders and Householders of the Trinity Church, for the purpose of providing the Church accounts and settling the Church Warden's for the year ending...

The next year, 1827, William Kelson and Thos. was Drawbridge were elected Church Wardens. On June 17th of this year, John, Bishop of Nova Scotia, and bearing Episcopal jurisdiction in the Island of Newfoundland, visited Trinity...

A reader of my items of the past has intimated that they would be more interesting if I did not confine them so largely to the doings of Old St. Paul's and the Church of England in general. The kind critic, however, overlooked the fact that, during the first two hundred years of organized settlement in Trinity, the Church of England was alone and integral with the place, and that it cannot be separated from the history of those years...

In 1838 the tower was built on Old St. Paul's. It was—as some of us remember—a square structure, with a flag staff in the middle, and a post at each corner, on which was a copper cross. and James Collis were the Church Wardens of 1838. Charles Granger was "grave-digger," and Charles Perchard was Sexton.

In 1844, the new Parsonage was built by Robert Straith, carpenter, at five pounds a month, "to die himself and to find his own tools." Ten thousand bricks were imported from Hamburg for the chimneys. George Old, an able carpenter, to Garland's dock yard, made the window frames. Mr. Old removed to Cape Breton, and two of his daughters are still living there, each being over eighty years old.

In 1840, Bishop Spencer, the first Bishop of Newfoundland, paid his first official visit to Trinity. Previous to his having been chosen as Bishop of the Diocese, he had been the parish priest of Trinity for several years. Upon his arrival at Trinity he was presented with an address of welcome by the parishioners, in which was the following paragraph:

"It is a source of no small gratification to us, that we hail in the first Bishop of Newfoundland, the once diligent pastor of this humble settlement, in which there are many still living, who remember with lively emotions your earnest exhortations and faithful labours, and in which all are anxious to have the blessing of God upon your person, and upon your sacred ministry."

The first paragraph of the Bishop's reply was as follows: "Among the many marks of attention, with which I have been honored since my arrival in this Colony, I remember with peculiar satisfaction the congratulations of the inhabitants of the district endeared to me by the indelible recollections of reciprocated confidence and kindness, and of whose prosperity I have frequently heard with thankfulness."

On the following Sunday the Bishop held an Ordination in St. Paul's Church, at which David Martin was ordained a Deacon.

In May, 1841, Rev. William Bullock resigned the Mission of Trinity, and left for Digby, Nova Scotia, where he entered upon his duties as rector. A parting address, accompanied by a memento of the affection of the parishioners, was presented to Mr. Bullock, signed by Benjamin Sweetland and F. C. Hepburn, Church Wardens; and thus they parted out from Trinity and Newfoundland, land a priest—the full extent of whose influence for good, eternity alone will reveal; and whose name is still known and revered from Bonaville to Bay de Verde. May he rest in peace.

The removal of the old "Bank" and from Mr. Somerton's dwelling house, together with the neat new fence around it, has wonderfully improved the property.

"Mayor" Crocker is having the public drains opened up. It is a difficult undertaking to get those drains to empty into the main, and there is a water-difficult, but most important to the health of the town.

A substantial crane has been added to the new wharf, which will often be found very useful.

The one thing lacking about the new wharf is sufficient light to make it safe during dark nights. One man has already walked over it into the water. An electric plant like that of Mr. Erikæns, installed on Mr. Morris's premises would, I am sure, be of great value to him in store, shop, and dwelling house; and the number of lights that would surely be taken by the Government for the wharf, the telegraph office, etc., and by Mrs. Jenkins in the Hotel, would go far towards paying interest on the money invested, whilst during the day, the dynamo could be used to run a saw mill, and put to other practical uses.

We are sorry to see the old Lockyer garden so neglected, so sadly neglected, for the first time in its history. It used to be a model vegetable garden of tidy appearance and fine productiveness. It is now a garden of weeds, broken fences, and a rendezvous for goats, which have already destroyed all the trees in it. The property, which is owned by one who does not live here, is sadly out of harmony with a tidy, well kept town.

Mr. French, of the Evening Telegram staff spent a few days in Trinity last week and returned to duty on Wednesday, his wife and family going with him. Mrs. French is a daughter of our old citizen, Richard Woolridge, and we were glad to have her with us again though only for a short time. (Aug 8th.)

Master Harry Mott is having the time of his life in and around Trinity, as the guest of Mr. Somerton.

The Marguerite Ryan discharged about three hundred and fifty tons of coal.

We are glad to hear that Mr. E. Grant is doing well with the fish at Blanc Sablon. His success means our well being.

Mr. Morris has been repairing his wharf, and it is now ready for every requirement.

The old salt-water-soaked-posts that came out of the old public wharf, have been a boon to those who needed posts for their roofs, and the rotting decayed supports under their houses.

Re the landing of the cable at Heart's Content, to which I referred last week—I have in my possession a piece of the shore end of it. It is 3/4 inches long, 2 1/2 inches in diameter, and weighs 2 pounds. It was given to Dr. White, after the landing as a souvenir of the occasion. There are, no doubt, several of such pieces through the country, that were given to people at that time, and to-day are interesting curiosities.

Mr. John House, of the staff of Ayre & Sons, St. John's, is spending his holiday at Trinity. Last month, Mr. House and the children spent a month there ahead of him.

McKay Declares He Sees a Big Change in His Mother-in-Law

Customs Officer at Beaver Hr. N.B. Says Wife and Her Mother Have Both Been Benefitted.

"Both my mother-in-law and my wife are enthusiastic about Tanlac and they ought to be, for it certainly has been a wonderful help to them," said G. W. McKay, Customs Officer at Beaver Harbor, Charlotte County, N.B.

"My mother-in-law was about as badly run-down as people get to be. She had stomach trouble in a bad form. Her appetite left her and what little she did manage to eat caused her great distress afterwards. She suffered so much that her nerves finally gave way and she complained of not being able to sleep at night.

Trinity by Monday's express, and will spend his holiday here.

On Tuesday last, August 9th, Mrs. Mary E. Pittman celebrated her 86th birthday, and received the congratulations of her many friends. The general public showed its interest in the occasion by a display of bunting. Mrs. Pittman was married to Mr. William Bullock, who was married to Elizabeth Mary Kelson. She was born August 9th, 1835, and was baptized in Old St. Paul's by Rev. William Bullock. She was married to Mr. William Pittman by Rev. Benjamin Smith on November 17th, 1857. She was "given away" by William Kelson, sr., of the firm of Slade and Kelson, and the witnesses to her marriage were Elizabeth Kelson, Fanny Kelson, Judith Cross, Mary Pittman, Samuel Pittman and John Collis.

Mrs. Pittman is the mother of thirteen children, eight of whom are living. She has also twenty-four grandchildren and one great-grandchild living. Her husband died in 1880. Visitors to Trinity do not consider that they have enjoyed it to the full, till they have visited Mrs. Pittman. A general expression of opinion of those who have met her is: "Mrs. Pittman is a wonderful woman." She is certainly wonderful in more ways than one. She plants and cultivates her own gardens, and works in them early and late—not because there is any need for her to do so, but because she likes them to do so. She is practically without physical disability of any kind, with mental faculties unimpaired, and as active as many a girl of eighteen. She takes an interest in the politics of the country, and has an intelligent grasp of the policies of the respective parties and their leaders, and has her own opinion of them. The buoyancy of her spirits—which is infectious—is exceeded only by the unbounded hospitality of her home and her ready and cheerful willingness to help her judges and lawyers, doctors and sea captains, clergy and laity, rich and poor, during the past fifty years. We join with others in heartfelt congratulations, and best wishes for many happy returns of the day.

The "Anchorage" looks well as the result of repairs and painting. Mrs. John White has had the roof of her house newly shingled and coated. Mr. Kelly's house looks fine in its new coat of paint. It all helps to keep up the reputation of Trinity for a tidy and clean appearance.

Mr. Hutchings, representing McMurdo & Co., registered at Garland Hotel on Monday last.

A good deal of bunting was displayed on Monday last, in honor of the marriage of Mr. Richard Hiscok, of Grand Falls, Miss Ladrow, of Cupids. The marriage was solemnized in St. James' Church, Carbonear. Mr. Hiscok is a Trinitarian, and we wish him and his bride abundance of peace so long as the moon endures. —W.J.L.

Mysteries of the Deep.

Missing Ships and Derelicts.

(H. F. SHROTES.)

Amazing stories have appeared in the American press of late, depicting the mysterious disappearance of ships on the American coast, but one in particular that merits more than passing notice. My reason for referring to this is because the ship in question is somewhat similar to one which occurred in Newfoundland thirty-seven years ago. The American mystery was depicted in a very vivid manner, but it was not out of the question. It is a story of the five-masted schooner "The Resolven" which was discovered floating ashore, with all sails set, on the South end of Diamond Shoals, Cape Hatteras. The previous night had been stormy, although the wind had at no time reached unusual heights. It was not strange that the schooner should have run aground on the dangerous coast, but it was strange that when a man of the United States Coast Guard Service came to her station nearby, he saw no sign of her crew, and was unable to get from the schooner response to their signals. When the coast guards rowed out to the stranded schooner they were unable to find that, although the vessel was resting easily on the shoals, there was no immediate danger of her sinking. A table in the fore-cabin was for a meal, and there was every appearance that the men on board the schooner had left the ship abruptly in great haste. Only one of the boats which the schooner carried was missing, and this one was large enough to hold the Captain and eleven men, who, as was found, composed the crew.

The smallest trace was discovered of her crew, who were all missing. The vessel had apparently been abandoned, and from that day to this not a word has reached the owners to dispel the mystery surrounding the fate of those men. The nearest approach to a solution was a supposition that they may have been attacked and massacred, and their bodies thrown into the sea. But it was an altogether vague and fugitive kind of theory, and no way relieved the tragic incident of its somberness.

THE RAISIN SHIP.

In Newfoundland we have had many instances of vessels being abandoned at sea, and in most cases, the crews were saved. For instance there was the schooner "Caroline Brown" bound for the United States from Greece with a load of raisins in bulk. This schooner was picked up by Captain John Kennedy of Carbonear, who was proceeding to the Gulf seal-fishery in his schooner and brought to St. John's. Never in the history of Newfoundland was "figgy duff" so plentiful. The ubiquitous "small boy" had his pockets continually filled with the fruit, and the industrious and thrifty housewife kept her good men well supplied with cake, figgy pudding, etc. for months afterwards. The vessel was sold here in St. John's, and purchased by the great firm of John Munn & Co., and a switch of the cargo of raisins still remained in the ship, our friends in Conception Bay had a plentiful supply of figgy duff and cake, for many a day afterwards. It is needless to say that it was fully appreciated by our friends over the Bay, as they always had a penchant for such delicacies, possessing as they do—a sweet tooth for such. They were sold for a few cents a pound, but large quantities found their way into the possession of the "small boy" at a much lower price.

OTHER MISSING SHIPS.

Other weird stories are told about missing ships, and one of them is that of the liner "Waratah," which still remains a mystery, and may never be seen again. In connection with the disappearance of the "President" a little story is told. It will doubtless be remembered that Thyrone, the famous Adelphi comedian, was heard on the vessel. A few days after his departure a gasman of the light to whom Power had been very kind, and his wife were aroused from sleep one night by a knocking at the door. He went down and found it was there on the step stood the figure of Thyrone Power, dripping with water. He turned back to call his wife, when he returned to the door the "gas" was gone! The gasman was impressed with the incident that the next day, related it to Ben Webster, the then lessee of the light. Ben Webster, the grandson of the famous Adelphi manager, related the incident. The case of the "Waratah," a well-founded, new ship of four thousand tons, and the time of her loss on her maiden voyage is very interesting. During the Japanese War, she was cruising in Eastern waters, and in October, she called at Hong Kong for orders, and there found a charter party for her to convey coal to Amoy. As the latter was a busy port, the commission was given to her. However, she set out on her voyage for a very long time no news was heard of her, her being so prolonged, in fact, she was posted at Lloyd's as "missing." However, more than a month after her mysterious disappearance, she was found in a wrecked condition at a remote spot on the West coast of Japan, in the Gulf of Itoya, about two hundred miles west of Cape Ogi. But not the little mystery and less doubt about the way in which the men came to their death. Among the particulars given by the Commander of the Millard was that a large iceberg was in the vicinity of where the Resolven was picked up; that fact, coupled with the broken yard-arms and the missing mast, supplied a very probable solution—that during the night or early morning of the 28th or 29th, the vessel came in contact with the iceberg, the alarm was given, and the inexperienced master decided to abandon the ship. The boat was launched, and all hurriedly left the vessel, and that in the wash about the ship, which doubtless was increased considerably by the motion of the berg and the vessel, the boat was swamped and the crew drowned. The boat may have drifted away from the locality, and being filled with water, could not be noticed by the man-o-war. Though the vessel may have swung against the berg for some time, she suffered little damage, but that to the yard-arms, and eventually she drifted clear and became a derelict. Every fisherman knows that a boat will lie by the side of a vessel for hours and receive no damage, the lapping of the water acting as a feather between the boat and the vessel's side. Had the master of the Resolven been a Newfoundland he would not have left his vessel so quickly, but would have watched until she drifted clear of the berg, or till the danger had increased.

A MARINE GRAVEYARD.

The Resolven, Capt. Cole, was lost at Newport, Nova Scotia, on the 27th July, 1888. She had been sent there for a lumber cargo, and after leaving for Harbor Grace next morning, becoming a total wreck. The W. Oulton, the late Capt. Wm. Fitzgerald, with a similar cargo to replace that of the Resolven, was lost at Golden Bay in September, 1889, and the brig Anastasia (formerly Hennebury's), Captain Bransfield, similarly laden, came to grief near the same place July 1890. Part of the last named vessel's cargo was brought to Harbor Grace by the S.S. Iceland, the same summer, but the bulk of the lumber was lost in saving the timber the Iceland damaged fishing traps in Golden Bay so much, that the owners had to pay heavy damages. Altogether the Resolven's history carried with it more or less disaster, and the whole story is one that would give those, who believe in the theory, reason to hold that she was "hoodooed."

Sometimes I hold another theory with regard to the Resolven, viz., that when the boat was launched and the crew on board, a portion of the great iceberg fouled and swamped the boat. The foundering was no doubt hastened by the impact of the ship with the berg. I remember we went making a trip in the S.S. Luzzie about forty-five years ago, from Carbonear to Portugal Cove. The Luzzie was under command of that veteran sealer, Capt. Christopher Pike, uncle of the famous seal-killer and Arctic navigator, Capt. Richard Pike. I noticed we were well out of our course to the Cove, and being a sort of favorite with the good captain, I made a remark to that effect, and laughingly he replied, "Oh, you'll know the reason very soon." There was a very large iceberg to the eastward of us, and we had only proceeded a few miles when there was a roar like thunder, the water went foaming all round, and huge pieces of ice were scattered, rolling, and bobbing up and down in the water in all directions. "Now," said Capt. Pike, "do you know the reason?" But I have never ascertained to this day how he found that the berg was going to founder and topple over. Truly the old Newfoundland sealing masters knew their business, and this accounts for so few accidents and the comparative small loss of life during the days of our great sealing fleet. They were heroes, and nothing escaped their notice in the prosecution of our great industry.

PATIENCE.
Time teaches us a lot of things. In earlier years when we were young, The angry and the hasty tongue Produced a round of bickerings, And many a trifling fault we made Into a sin of scarlet shade. The little disappointments then By selfish eyes were magnified, We could not put our whims aside, Lost joys might never come again, And many bitter days and nights Were spent in battling for our rights. Then we were quick to take offense, One careless word upon our ears Brought hatred and a flood of tears; Young people have no better sense— And we were young and did not know Enough to let the trifles go. But Time has taught us many things, Where once we quarrelled, now we smile, We've learned that anger's not worth while And found the peace which patience brings; Now, sharing all its joys and woes, We take life as it comes and goes. —One-Piece Porcelain Food Chambers—
—Rounded Inside Corners

With food chambers made in one piece, with no seams or joints to collect grease or dirt; lined with hard, non-scratchable porcelain, the Leonard is easy to clean and a constant safeguard against tainted food. Rounded inside front corners, which also make cleaning easy, may be had only in the Leonard Cleanable. Feel for them when you go to buy.

LEONARD Cleanable Refrigerator

Such master touches as the removable waste pipe, easily cleaned; the self-closing, air-tight, Leonard lock; ten heat-resisting walls of insulation, the device which positively prevents leaking, thus insuring the durability of the refrigerators and the "non-sweating" waste pipes—these were all created by Leonard and are to be had in no other refrigerator. One out of every seven refrigerators sold is made by Leonard. It is the logical result of Leonard superiority. Don't fail to see the Leonard. Come in today. Old Timer's Annual Visit.

W. J. S. Ryall, our patriotic fellow-countryman who pays his native city an annual visit to view our time-honored Regatta, and have a friendly chat with his old comrades and friends, is returning to New York by the Rosalind to-day. Mr. Ryall has taken a prominent part in the political campaigns of the United States during the past twenty years, being consistently identified with the Republican Party, of which he has been chairman in his district. He is one of those Newfoundlanders who have made good in his adopted country, but he never forgets old Terra Nova, where the seals and cod abound. During his visit Mr. Ryall received a letter from our old friend Charlie McLarty, another well known and prosperous Newfoundland under the Stars and Stripes who wishes to be remembered to all his old friends. Mr. Ryall purposes to return in time for our Regatta next year on historic Quidi Vidi, on the placid waters of which he played such a prominent part in years gone by as coxswain of our racers. W. J. S. is a brother of the genial Sam of Anderson's Dry Goods Store the doyen of drapers in Newfoundland.

House Adjourns.

LONGEST SESSION OF LEGISLATURE TEMPORARILY CLOSES.

"Not a drum was heard, not a funeral note," as the House adjourned yesterday afternoon until December 12th. The obsequies were carried out amidst a silence that was almost impressive and the Government have, at last, received a four months holiday in which to recuperate from the criticism levelled at them by the Opposition during the session. The day of adjournment was considered by many Government members to be the proper time to present petitions and they proceeded to do so unless all that they had saved up since the commencement of the session, at the one time.

Even Dr. Barnes broke silence long enough to permit of his presenting a petition. Two important petitions were presented by Mr. Sullivan. One asked for money to repair the road from Halifax, en route to Bridgewater where the highway will be spent. The best wishes of their host of friends accompany the newly wedded pair for a long and happy married life. After visiting several Canadian cities Mr. and Mrs. Harvey intend to return in October and settle down in St. John's. The bride was the recipient of a number of useful and valuable presents. The grooms present to the bridesmaid was a beautiful gold brooch and to the bridesmaid a much-admired gold stick pin. The Telegram asks leave to join in the numerous good wishes received by the contracting parties.

Mr. Bennett wished to place himself on record as being in favour of the remission of the duty on gas coal imported by the Gas Co. He stated that this company had been working under difficulties and was now trying to establish itself firmly. It gave a great deal of employment and some quid pro quo arrangement should be made between the Government and the Municipal Council in the matter. He read the following memorandum from the Secretary of the Gas Co. putting forth their claims.

- (1) Since the great Fire the Company has paid in Coal Taxes, approximately $100,000.00.
- (2) In addition to the Coal Tax the Company pays annually $333.33 Water Rates, etc.
- (3) With the Gas business about normal the coal used would be from 5000 to 6000 tons.
- (4) The amount paid out in wages runs from $20,000.00 to $25,000.00 per annum, which illustrates the importance of this Public Utility to St. John's West.
- (5) Gas Coal is the Company's raw material, and a tax on same is unjust and inequitable. Other industries get in raw materials duty free, and their products are protected by a high import duty. The Gas Company has to pay $700.00 on every 1000 tons of Gas Coal imported, while the principal products of other concerns are imported free of duty.
- (6) The Gas Company therefore feels that Gas Coal should be admitted free of duty, for the maintenance of the Gas Supply to the City.
- (7) The coal tax hits the Gas Company, but its competitor escapes the tax, because the Reid Company use waste power, hence the inequality of this coal tax so far as the Gas Company is concerned.
- (8) The coal tax as a means of raising City Revenue through the tax on Gas Coal is not only unjust, but vicious, because in the event of the Company going out of business, through stress of unfair competition, the City would not only lose the duty on gas coal, but also the amount of the wages paid out annually.
- (9) In the event of the development of local coal fields and supplies of gas coal obtained from that source the coal duty could not be collected.

BRIEFLY.—Gas Coal is the Company's raw material. It is unjustly taxed. The Company has to meet un-expected competition. It claims similar treatment to that accorded to other industrial concerns doing business in St. John's, and asks that Gas Coal imported by the Gas Company for the operation of its works be admitted free of duty. The remission of this on Gas Coal would benefit the City, reduce the cost of Gas, enable the Company to supply gas at lower rates, increase its business, and proportionately the amount paid out annually in wages.

Mr. Bennett recommended this claim to the favourable consideration of the Government. The Prime Minister was in favour of helping the Gas Co. by the remission of the duty on gas coal, but it was, he said, primarily a matter for the Municipal Council and he hoped the matter would be dealt with in the best interests of the citizens. Soon afterwards the members were summoned to the Council Chamber where H. E. the Governor gave his assent to outstanding Bills. After they had returned to their own Chamber on motion the House adjourned until 12th next. And so ended the longest session of the local Legislature.

Legislative Council.

FRIDAY, Aug. 12.
The House met at 3 p.m. The Revenue Bill was put through the final stages. At 3.30 His Excellency the Governor arrived and gave his assent to the Money Bills, and several others, which passed the House at Thursday's session. All the business of the session being concluded, the Council adjourned at 4 p.m. until December 12th next.

Wedding Bells.

McKAY-HARVEY.

A pretty wedding took place last evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. W. A. McKay, No. 12 Fleming Street, when their second daughter, Marjorie Victoria (Mollie) was united in Holy matrimony to Mr. Harold F. Harvey, son of Mr. C. A. Harvey of Bridgewater, N.S. At the appointed time, and with a number of guests present, the bride, carrying a handsome bridal bouquet, entered the room leaning on the arm of her father, while the wedding march was played by Mrs. C. Kearley. The Rev. F. S. Coffin of St. Andrew's Church, Harbor Grace, came to the city for the occasion and read the solemn words that made the couple one. The bride was attended by her sister, Miss Carrie McKay, while Mr. Fred McKay supported the groom. After a couple of hours were pleasantly spent the happy couple boarded S.S. Sachem for Halifax, en route to Bridgewater where the honeymoon will be spent. The best wishes of their host of friends accompany the newly wedded pair for a long and happy married life. After visiting several Canadian cities Mr. and Mrs. Harvey intend to return in October and settle down in St. John's. The bride was the recipient of a number of useful and valuable presents. The grooms present to the bridesmaid was a beautiful gold brooch and to the bridesmaid a much-admired gold stick pin. The Telegram asks leave to join in the numerous good wishes received by the contracting parties.

Given Military Honors.

By yesterday's train from Deer Lake, there arrived the remains of the late Stephen Somerton, a returned soldier, who was drowned on the Upper Humber River on Tuesday last. The body was met on arrival at the station by President J. G. Higgins, E.A. of the G.W.V.A. of Newfoundland, Mr. J.P. Burke, Chairman of the Wabana Council, Capt. G. J. Whitty, M.C., Dominion Secretary, President N. G. Lodge and Capt. Leo Murphy, of the Bell Island War Veterans, Mr. Harold Mitchell, and many others of the G.W.V.A. who were interested in their dead comrade. Somerton was a very bright and active young man and was a Lance Corporal in the Royal Newfoundland Regiment, although he enlisted while considerably under age. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Reuben Somerton of Bell Island.

The funeral proceeded to Portugal Cove last evening, and interment took place at that settlement. Rev. J. Stead officiated. A firing party from Bell Island, under Sergeant J. L. Mews, was in attendance, and with the "Last Post" there was laid to rest the remains of a loyal British subject, who lives up to the best traditions of his mother country.

Presentation to Popular Clubman.

Last night, a deputation from the Llewellyn Club, headed by Mr. Andrew Carnell, called on Mr. C. E. Hunt, their president, and presented him with a handsome clock as a wedding gift. Mr. Carnell made the presentation and in eloquent language extended the best wishes of the club to Mr. and Mrs. Hunt. After Mr. Hunt had made an appropriate reply refreshments were served and a most enjoyable evening was spent.

Prize Fight of Year 1751 is Recalled.

Paris, Aug. 6.—Carpentier was not the first Frenchman to have the honor of competing and of being defeated in a world's boxing championship match, French statisticians have discovered since the knockout administered to Georges by Dempsey.

On July 28, 1751, a Frenchman named Petit, weighing 260 pounds and standing six feet four inches tall, met Jack Slack of England, then the undisputed champion of the world. The purse was £100.

Petit, a combination of wrestler and boxer, jumped in the center of the grass ring as soon as the word "go" was given and seizing Slack by the throat with his left hand, began placing his right with great force upon various parts of Slack's anatomy. History does not record why the Larry Erlie of the time did not immediately disqualify the Frenchman, but goes on to relate that "Slack swung a mighty right into Petit," much below the belt and with that the Frenchman went down writhing in pain.

When he could summon enough strength to regain his feet, he immediately used one of them to send a well directed kick into Slack's chin. The Briton then swung right and left to the chin and the Frenchman and did not use eight-ounce gloves," concludes the historian.

Romans Burned Coal.

A correspondent has been looking up some of the earliest references to coal in England. Professor Boyd Dawkins has stated that coal ashes found along the Roman wall indicate that coal probably was used by the Romans. The earliest authentic reference to mining rights occurs in 1245, and relates to the Newcastle area. Newcastle grew quickly and was exporting coal to London as early as 1308. In the latter half of the thirteenth century coal was mined at Morley and Smalley, two villages a few miles north of Derby. Coal frequently was brought into the port of Chester in the fourteenth century, the earliest mention being in 1326. Medieval writers usually refer to coal as "sea-coal" (carbone maritimo or carbo de mari), in order to distinguish it from charcoal (carbone). The name evidently arose from the fact that it was brought to some places by water. The name was, however, used of coal which was carted into Chester from Ewloe, and of that found in the middle of Derbyshire. In the reign of Elizabeth coal was measured by the barrel, nine barrels to the ton.

Self-Sufficiency.

We are at last getting it through our heads that the day of self-sufficiency is over, and that we are in any aspect we choose to look at it, our brother's keeper. It was only a little while ago when we said, and believed, "Every man for himself and the devil take the hindmost," but we never believed it in our hearts. Some, at a little later date, acknowledged their responsibility and said, "Yes, these are our brothers and sisters—let's build a jail and keep them there."

We have had some painful experiences to go through as communities and as individuals and we have learned that no community is independent of the individuals that compose it, nor can the individuals thrive without the community. One case of some dreadful proves how interdependent we are and how danger lies in the individual. One man with civic righteousness in his heart in a community proves the force of the individual. We are all a part of a whole. Not one of us can live his life rich and full. It is the day of the new slogan: "Each for the other and all together."

Exploring Old Biblical City.

Important developments are expected from excavations now being made at the site of the ancient city of Askelon, often mentioned in the Bible. The exploration, assisted by the Palestine Exploration Fund, was stopped during the rainy season. Among discoveries already made are two architectural statues, some pottery specimens, and the remains of a gigantic statue, the foot of which measured a little over a yard, and the debris of a marble shrine. There are also traces of the Canaanites. One of the excavations now taking place is a site called the "Peace Pool," and a search is being made for the necropolis of the Philistines. It is possible that light may be thrown upon the legendary secret of the Phaestus Disk, an undeciphered document in which, about which controversy has raged in antiquarian circles since Dr. Hermer discovered it on the south coast of Crete in 1908. It is believed to have been of Philistine origin, and the best theory is that it is the oldest known script of music in the world.

Relict of Lost Age.

A tooth of a wild horse, measuring four inches long, one and a half inches thick and having eight rings, indicating the animal's age, is the latest discovery of excavators in the Ilme pits of Torrance, near Los Angeles. Other interesting finds are tusks from the sabre-tooth tiger, sharks' teeth, side bones of whales and bones of animals of gigantic proportions. An ancient weapon of stone, unearthed with the horse tooth, weighs ten pounds. Its sides are hollow, presumably for the purpose of fastening to it a spiced sapling for a handle. The deposits which we are uncovering are estimated to be at least one million years old and all tend to show that at some time animals larger than those found in any other part of the globe lived in this district," said Dr. Edwards.

What are they saying? And where are they going? All making a bee line for BOWRING'S to secure a pair of the boots now offered at SPECIAL CUT PRICES.—a19,31,32,33

Taming Wild Flowers.

Many of the flowers that adorn our gardens have been procured from plants which originally grew wild. They have been changed or improved by the patient art of the professional gardener.

The tuberose was introduced into Europe from East Indies by a Spanish physician in the sixteenth century. It still grows in its wild state in Java and Ceylon.

The chequered lily came from France and Italy about 1550, while the Crown Imperial lily was first brought from Persia to Constantinople. From there it was taken to the Emperor's garden at Vienna, whence it found its way all over Europe.

It is not generally known that the belladonna lily was procured from South America in 1593, while the Guernsey lily was brought from Japan and was first cultivated at the beginning of the seventeenth century in the garden of an Englishman in Paris.

This plant is said to have derived its name from the following episode. A ship, laden with bulbs, was wrecked off the coast of Guernsey. A number of the bulbs were cast up on the shore and took root in the soil, where they grew rapidly.

The first species of the dahlia known to Europeans was discovered in Mexico and sent to a professor at the Botanic Gardens, Madrid, who named it in honour of the Swedish professor, Dahl. The most popular of flowers, the rose, is to be found in almost every country north of the Equator. It derives its name from rhos, meaning red. Of this plant more than one hundred species have been described, and more than two thousand varieties may be procured.

The finest wood grown for the pencil-maker's purposes is the red cedar in the south of the United States, and curiously enough the most used "lead" comes from the adjoining country. Graphite, however, was first discovered in England.

In the early days of pencil-making the Borrowdale mine in Cumberland was the only source of supply. The stuff was so valued that the mine was guarded by an armed force, and in order to conserve the supply it was only worked for six weeks in each year. Then to prevent theft the mine was flooded.

For some three hundred years the Cumberland graphite was used in its natural state, having no rival; but as the supply showed signs of exhaustion a method was invented of using other graphite, ground to powder and mixed with clay. This is now what is commonly used.

The lead pencil that you will some day use—possibly next year—may now be tossing about the Atlantic—the "lead" (which isn't lead, but graphite) in one tramp steamer and the slabs of wood in another.

Shopkeepers, Read This!

Lantic is in Yellow Packages--2 lbs. & 5 lbs.

Next time you open a barrel of sugar, count the bags, the 2's, the 4's, the 5's, the 7's, the 10's, the 14's, you use in weighing up the barrel of sugar. Figure the cost of the bags and twine and time spent in weighing. Don't forget to estimate the wear and tear on your scales.

Next time you're busy weighing up sugar keep your eye on the people who come into your shop to buy something, but finding you busy weighing up sugar, go out without buying anything. Charge up these losses on your barrel of sugar.

Taking your several parcels of sugar from 2 lbs. to 14 lbs. and reckoning that you put up 50 parcels of sugar out of a barrel, consider that you're taking 50 chances of making a mistake. 50 chances to waste a little sugar.

Consider also why it is that grocers in Canada and America use package sugar in preference to barrel sugar? If you carefully consider the above matters you will realize that 1 cent per pound is a fair estimate of your loss in retailing sugar out of a barrel.

If you sell package sugar (you can get Lantic in 2's, 5's, 10's and 20's) you have no weighing to do, each package contains full weight of sugar. Selling Lantic in packages saves you the cost of all wasted bags and twine. Saves you loss from short weight. Enables you to attend to all customers who come into your shop. You'll know Lantic Sugar by the red ball on the YELLOW package. Try a 100 lb. case of 2 lb. packages. Your customers will prefer Lantic.

Girl Stowaway.

FEMALE "JONAH" ON A PLEASURE TRIP.

A tale of a girl stowaway who seemed to bring nothing but trouble to the passengers who have just returned in London after a 10,000 mile cruise from New York to Europe via Iceland and the North Cape in the Kaiser-I-Hind says the London Daily Mail of Aug. 2. The girl became known as "Jonah," and she was eventually put ashore at Leth in the Kaiser-I-Hind, chartered by an American firm of tourist agents, left New York on June 25 with a party of over 450 well-to-do Americans. After leaving Newfoundland four days later the young girl stowaway was found in the steamer. She had apparently stolen aboard in the expectation that the vessel would take her to New York.

Boiler Room Explosion.

"She was kindly treated by the passengers and given clothing," said one of the passengers to a Daily Mail reporter in London yesterday, "but after she had come aboard things seemed to go wrong, and eventually she got the name of 'Jonah.'"

"The day after her discovery there was an explosion in the boiler room, resulting in the death of two of the crew, while others were injured. Then, when approaching Iceland, we got a disappointment in a wireless message from the British Consul advising us that influenza was prevalent on the island, and so the ship did not enter port there."

"All went well again till July 14, when, in the neighbourhood of Fiore, the Kaiser-I-Hind struck an uncharted obstruction below water, but very little damage was done, and after a call at Bergen the voyage was continued to Leth. Here the captain sent the girl stowaway ashore to be dealt with, and after two days in Holland and Belgium the Kaiser-I-Hind duly arrived at Tilbury."

"Here the American passengers learnt that the steamer had been cancelled, and many of them had hoped to return to New York, had been on fire at Southampton and her sailing had been cancelled. Many of them, I believe, are still in London waiting to fix up their passages. The girl 'Jonah' is not a very popular subject with them."

"The stowaway is described as an exceptionally tall pretty girl with large dark eyes, jet black hair, and an extremely vivacious manner. The women on board the Kaiser-I-Hind made a collection of clothing among themselves and fitted her up with some beautiful garments."

"When we first saw her she was dressed very humbly," said one of the passengers, "but it was not long before she came into dinner in smart evening clothes which had been given to her."

"She was not a bit embarrassed by her position, she took her place among the rest of us with perfect equanimity. She played the piano and sang very well."

(The St. John's girl referred to in the above article, is now back home again, apparently having enjoyed a most remarkable and unique trip.—Telegrams.)

The Guards' Sports.

Dear Sir.—Would you permit me to trespass on your valuable space to say that to see the wonderful display of prizes in the window of R. H. Trapnell, Ltd., to be competed for on Wednesday next, is proof positive that the Methodist Guards have returned to the sporting arena with all their old time pep and vim. The mere mention of Guards Sports very forcibly reminds us of the old Guards in days of inter-Brigade competitions. The true spirit of the Guards is again manifest in the splendid trophies offered and excellent programme arranged for next Wednesday. Another feature not to be overlooked is the fact of, as I understand it, all the medals to be presented have been locally made by Trapnell's, and are indeed a credit, as well as endorsing the slogan "Encourage home industry." Come on Guards! Long may your big day last!

Thanking you, Mr. Editor,
Yours truly,
AN OLD GUARD.

Bankers Doing Well.

According to reports brought along by the Portia, which arrived yesterday evening from the Westward, the bankers are doing very well with fish. Capt. Thorburn, of Grand Bank, has already got 4,300 qts., and others are doing almost equally well. With the exception of small catches made in around Lamaline, Burn and St. Lawrence, there is practically no fish along the coast. At Burgeo, Fortune and Hermitage the fishery is a failure and practically the same applies to all places west of these. The trap fishery which is now over a year blank. On the whole this year's shore fishery will be well below the average. The Portia had a very stormy trip, both going and coming. Much fog was met with all along the coast and on Tuesday her ship had to lie up all day at Ramona.

The publisher of the best Farmers' paper in the Maritime Provinces in writing to us states: "I would say that I do not know of a medicine that has stood the test of time like MINARD'S LINIMENT. It has been an unfailing remedy in our household ever since I can remember, and has outlived dozens of would-be competitors and imitators."

King and Queen in the Channel Isles -- Quaint and Imposing Greetings to Their Majesties.

Quaint and imposing to the last degree were the scenes that greeted the King and Queen on their eagerly awaited visit to the Channel Isles. Princess Mary, landed at St. Peter's Port, Guernsey, and had a triumphantly warm welcome. Of the nature of their reception they had had a foretaste the previous night, when inhabitants circled the royal yacht at close quarters, and cheered continually. The scene along the sea front that morning was both picturesque and impressive. Military and naval dignitaries assembled near the yacht slip landing-stage, a guard of honour of the 1st Royal Irish was near the Prince Consort statue, and all the remainder of the available space was occupied by ex-Service nurses, firemen, scouts, guides, general spectators. A Royal salute was fired as their Majesties left the yacht, and when they landed at the yacht slip, the Governor presented to the King the key of Fort Victoria, the fortress that made so gallant a defence in the Loyalist cause during the Parliamentary Wars. The King wore admiral's uniform, with blue trousers and white boots; the Queen wore a blue and white dress. Princess Mary was dressed in cream and blue. After inspecting the guard of honour and reviewing ex-Service men and women and disabled soldiers, their Majesties, in a carriage decorated through the decorated streets, amid scenes of enthusiasm, to the parish church, where they inspected under the escort of the Dean of Guernsey. At the St. Peter's Hall, addresses of welcome were presented by the Bailiff of Guernsey, the Judge of Alderney, the Seigneur of Sark, and by French colony and Bailiff. The King and Queen were also presented a pair of Gold Spurs for certain property. The King's address of welcome made reference to the King's Duchy of Normandy, and recalled the loyalty of the Duke of Normandy and Kings and Queens of England. The King handed replies to most of the addresses, but delivered verbally the one to the Lieutenant-Governor, Bailiff, and States of Guernsey.

You have referred--he said--with legitimate pride to the unflinching loyalty which your ancestors have shown generation after generation to the English Throne, and you have pledged yourselves to follow their example. I thank you from my heart for the pledge. The part which Guernsey took in the Great War, now happily brought to a triumphant conclusion, is a sufficient proof that this is no empty compliment, and that if the occasion should arise I can count on its being redeemed in the letter and in the spirit. There is testimony of this in the fine parade of ex-Service men and whom I have just had the pleasure of inspecting, and the courage and devotion of the Royal Guernsey Light Infantry at Cambrai has shown to the whole world that the Guernsey men of to-day have lost nothing either of the loyalty or of the fighting spirit of their Norman forefathers. It is my earnest prayer that by the blessing of Divine Providence the labours of this industrious and loyal community may be crowned with ever-increasing happiness and prosperity.

The King was next asked to "receive the homage and dues from those holders of Royal fiefs in the Bailiwick who owe you faith, homage, and 'dues.' These were duly rendered in accordance with ancient custom, each declarant kneeling, clasping hands.

Speaking in Norman French. The King accepted the homage, holding the clasped hands of each declarant, and reading his reply in Norman French, from a card held by the Queen. Afterwards Sir Derek Keppel stepped forward, and announced the King's pleasure to bestow the K.C.V.O. upon Sir J. E. Capper, the K.B.E. upon Bailiff Osanne, the C.M.G. upon Lieutenant-Colonel Harding, the C.V.O. upon Colonel Macartney, and the C.B. upon Sir Eric Swayne. The Bailiff's neighbourhood was specially popular, and there was great applause as he knelt to receive the accolade, given with a sword which the King borrowed from his Equerry. The next Royal engagement was at Cambridge Park, where children sang their welcome, the orphan daughters of men who fell in the war sprinkled the path of the King, Queen, and Princesses, with rose petals, and bouquets were presented by the daughters of a fallen officer and non-commissioned officer. A visit was paid to the masters and students of Elizabeth College, and lunch was taken at Government House. Princess Mary afterwards reviewed the Girl Guides of the island, who presented her with a silver model of a Guernsey milk can. The afternoon was devoted to some 30 miles of motoring around the island, to see as much as possible of the inhabitants and to inspect some of the chief vineeries in which Guernsey's famous grapes and tomatoes are produced. Occasionally sick people were placed at the roadside, but whether as spectators or as believers in the old tradition of the curative effects of a monarch's near presence did not appear. At one point a halt was made at a field in which the Guernsey Royal Agricultural Society had collected the finest specimens of prize cattle in the island. A milk cow purchased from her owner by the Society was offered as a gift to the King, who promised to place her with his already fine herd at Windsor. After tea with the newly-knighted Bailiff (the hereditary Cup-bearer providing cups for the King and Queen), the Royal visitors returned to the yacht. The port was brilliantly illuminated at nightfall. The enthusiasm shown by the inhabitants of Jersey knew no bounds. Banners across the streets of St. Helier, and of the rustic parishes of the island offered salutations to "nostre duc" and prayers for "the Divine and his line." Salutes from the fort announced the departure of the King's barge from the Royal yacht. A great reception was accorded to the King, the Queen, and the Princess Mary as they ascended to the quay to inspect 2,500 ex-Service men of the British Army and 600 ex-Service men of the French Army. The French contingent including many men

Wearing the Uniform of the Police, and even more in the clerical dress of the Jesuits. At the States Chamber the King was greeted with a right Norman welcome, and halberdiers with halberds of great age lined the staircase. A bouquet of orange-coloured roses was presented to her Majesty, and a pink bouquet to Princess Mary. The procession was led by the Viscount of Jersey, whose title is official and carries duties with it such as that of inquests, by Mr. Denucciator Bailiff, who carried the Royal Macao, and by Mr. Denucciator Scholer, who carried the banner of the Arms of the Bailiwick--the three Lions of Normandy charged on a crimson field. Immediately the King entered, the banner was placed in a canopy above the Bailiff's chair, where his Majesty stood, and there it will remain as a souvenir of the day, which will be marked with some prominence in the history of the island. The Bailiff, as President of the States, read in French an address of welcome to the King, the Queen, and Princess Mary, and a profusion of the warmest welcome and devotion. In the course of the reply delivered in French, the King said:

I set great value on that ancient and historic connection, and I am well aware that its unbroken maintenance for so many centuries is due above all to the constant and unwavering loyalty which has characterized the people of Jersey. They remained loyal to the British Crown and Continental Normandy was lost, and nothing has ever succeeded in shaking the steadfast devotion of Jersey to its lawful Sovereign. I have observed with interest that the walls of the Royal Court still bear record to the impetuous gallantry with which the Jersey Militia repelled the invasion of 1781. Happily this is an exploit which cannot be repeated. The invaders of 1781 are now our friends and our Allies, and as brother-in-arms have fought side by side with us in the cause of the liberty of Europe.

His Majesty also alluded to the part played by Jersey in the Great War, and recalled that no fewer than 6,000 men served. When His Majesty had finished, loud shouts were raised of "Vive le Roi, Vive la Reine," and a Labour member added to this, in English, "God Save the King." From the States the King proceeded to the Royal Court. Throughout the ceremony His Majesty stood in front of the chair. The Seigneur paid homage for their fiefs, each, as his name was called, answering at once with the word "Garde." The Seigneur knelt with clasped hands before his face, which the King enclosed with his own. Then all the Seigneurs offered their homage in one voice in the words: "Je suis votre homme legs a vous porter tel et hommage contre tous." Trumpeters on the tower of St. Helier's Parish Church sounded a fanfare as the Royal Party left for a tour of the island by a fleet of motor cars. In every parish and hamlet a warm welcome was extended to Their Majesties, with cheers of special joyousness by groups of pretty children, who waved banners with frantic enthusiasm. At Springfield the King inspected the prize cattle of the Royal Jersey Agricultural and Horticultural Society, and a beautiful Jesey cow was presented to His Majesty. At Victoria College the King inspected the Officers' Training Corps, while Princess Mary reviewed a merry party of Girl Guides and Brownies in an adjoining field. The gun of the afternoon's drive was a visit to Mont Orgeu Castle. Alighting at the Castle Green, the King walked up to the castle along a rising terrace alive with delightful children. At the drawbridge the Bailiff of Jersey met him with the two great keys of the castle on a crimson cushion. The King touched them and remitted them to the custody of his faithful Bailiff. But even then the way was not clear. "Halt! qui va lu?" demanded the Sergeant of the Guard, placing his halberd across the archway of the castle. "Le Roi," answered the Bailiff. "Passe, le Roi," was the answer, and all halberds were raised at the salute. The castle was then inspected. At the Cenotaph in St. Helier the King stopped his car and stood at the salute for the men of Jersey who made the supreme sacrifice for their Duke. At the Town Hall a golden replica of the Baton de Justice was given to His Majesty by the Constable of St. Helier as a souvenir of the visit. After a journey full of interest and redolent with historic associations, the King, the Queen, and Princess Mary embarked for the Victoria and Albert. In the evening there were fireworks, a torchlight tabor, and a representation of the "Pied Piper of Hamelin," in which hundreds of children danced behind the Piper. His Majesty, during the day, conferred the following honours: The K.C.V.O. upon the Lieutenant-Governor, General Sir William Douglas Smith; K.B.E. upon the Bailiff, Sir W. H. Venables-Vernon, and the C.V.O. upon the Government Secretary, Mr. Whitaker Maitland. Delightful weather prevailed at Portmouth when Their Majesties returned from the Channel Islands, and the arrival yachts, Victoria and Albert and Alexandria, escorted by a light cruiser and two destroyers, provided a sight for thousands of visitors, who lined the sea-front and other points of vantage. The home-coming was marked by little ceremony, but the Royal salute was given by the guards of honour and bands as the King disembarked, while the ships in harbour fired a salute of 21 guns when the Royal train left the dockyard. Their Majesties reached Victoria early in the evening, and as they drove through the streets in an open carriage, they were heartily cheered by large crowds.--News of the World.

Imperial Defence Act's Surprising Service.

On Monday, August 13, 1888, the Imperial Defence Act, having been passed by the Houses of Parliament, and received the sanction of Queen Victoria, became law, and in the late European war it was seen how united is the British Empire for military purposes. On January 26, 1885, Khartoum, near the entrance of the Red Sea, was captured from the British by natives, and the great and good, pious and philosophical, General Gordon, who was protecting it, was killed. Imperial Federation had been proposed in Parliament, but when for rescuing Gordon, military assistance had been spontaneously offered from New South Wales, Victoria, Queensland, and other parts of Australia, as well as from Canada, only the first of these was accepted, which refusal may have caused great delay, and prevented Gordon's escape. But British Colonies were treated differently during the war against Germany, when his late and last emperor was forcing his way into Belgium that he might reach the English Channel and invade Britain. Military forces of natives and British came in large numbers, and by their own will, from India, Australasia, the Cape of Good Hope, the rest of South Africa, and from Canada, and greatly assisted the British in fighting and defeating the Germans by such Imperial Defence.

Hearing a Shadow.

We have all spoken of the proverbial pin to be heard dropping, and the silence that could be felt, but Mr. Graham Bell made a statement on May 17th, 1878, that he could "hear a shadow" by interrupting the action of light upon selenium.

Professor Willoughby Smith carried out this idea, and soon after heard the sound produced by the action of a ray of light upon a bar of selenium in connection with a telephone.

Mentholatum

Bites, etc.

The experiment excited great interest at the time because the telephone and photophone were then in their infancy.

How was it done? A series of flashes of light were allowed to fall upon selenium, causing intervals of light and darkness. The strength of the current varied, and if the flashes succeeded each other quickly enough, and with sufficient regularity, a musical note was heard by a person listening at the telephone.

Moreover, by placing a small mirror whereby light was reflected upon a distant selenium cell, aided by lenses suitably arranged, Mr. Graham Bell was able to obtain articulate sounds at about 700 feet.
