The Imprisoned Heiress

—OR—
The Spectre of Egremont.

CHAPTER IX.

"By the way, my lord, have you come to any decision in regard to that Kepp? I feel guilty in allowing him to remain free so long. He may be at this moment fleeing the country, as his father did before him. Every moment that your assalant remains at liberty seems like an age to me."

"I have not yet decided, my lord," answered Lord Ashcroft. "The truth is, I should like to see the man, and have a talk with him before he is apprehended. I wish you would defer taking any step in the matter until I have seen Kepp."

CHAPTER X.

At the farther extremity of Egremont Wood, sheltered by overhanging trees, stood the cottage occupied by Gosman Kepp and his mother. It was not an ornamental chalet, like the home of Donald Kay, for its position was less prominent, but it was nevertheless a pretty little home, and with many indications of a refinement scarcely to be expected from its inmates.

In consequence of the refined look of his home, and his fondness for books, Gosman Kepp had won from his fellows the sobriquet of "The Scholar," and was looked up to by men many years older, and was honored among them as one of superior mental attainments. Yet it was also known that no youth among the gentry of Egremont was feeter of foot or stronger of arm than he, that not a fosterer was more vigilant in the exercise of his duties, or could shoot more accurately at a target.

As he never showed, by look or word, a knowledge of his superiority over his fellows, he was a great favorite among them, and the daughters of the miller, and blacksmith, and others, would have given all their good looks and small dowries could they have passed over the threshold of Kepp's cottage as its rightful mistress.

On the morning subsequent to the attempted assassination of Lord Ashcroft, and long before the family of Egremont had arisen from their beds, Dame Kepp was astrid and bustling about in preparation of the morning meal. Breakfast was always served at an early hour in her household that Gosman might have a fair start at his day's labor; but on this occasion it was later than usual, owing to the fact that the master of the house had neglected to light the fire, as was his usual custom.

"Poor boy!" soliloquized the good dame, with a glance at the door of her son's room, as she proceeded to put the coffee-pot over the chery fire. "He hasn't seemed like himself for a day or two. I fear he is going to be ill."

The dame was yet in her prime—a fair, portly woman, with smooth hair, light blue eyes, and a smiling mouth. Despite her smile, she had a melancholy look, as though she had been much acquainted with sorrow. She had been in her youth a pretty, coquette maiden, and it was through her coquetry that her sorrow had arisen.

The sitting-room was as bright and neat as hands could make it, and the dame's costume was equally tidy; and the table, with its dish of bacon and eggs, buttered toast, and hot coffee, was tempting enough for an epicure, when Mrs. Kepp proceeded to the door of Gosman's room, and knocked loudly.

As there was no response, she hesitated a moment, and then cautiously entered her son's chamber.

The next moment she uttered a cry of astonishment.

The couch had not been occupied the preceding night.

"What can this mean?" cried the dame, as if she expected the empty bed to answer her question. "Can Gosman have deserted me as his father did before him? Oh, Heaven! It was fully an hour afterward, when the breakfast things had been cleared away, that the sound of a familiar step startled her, and her son entered the room.

There was a wild, strange look about him that alarmed her. His hair was rough, and hung in masses about his face, which was pale and haggard, as though he had passed a sleepless night, and his clothes were in a half-dry tate, clinging to his form.

"What ails you, Gosman?" cried the dame. "Are you ill, or in trouble?" "Don't worry me with questions, mother," he returned, wearily. "I am cold, wet, and hungry. Give me something to eat."

Mrs. Kepp would have questioned him further, but there was something in the expression of his countenance that arrested the questions on her lips, and she obeyed his request in silence.

When she had filled his plate and poured out his coffee, she ventured to express something of surprise, and to make an effort to comprehend his conduct.

"I suppose you had breakfast at Kay's," she said, pleasantly, and not at all as if she had a thought beyond the remark. "I said to myself an hour ago, when I found you were not in your room, Gosman has gone over to Kay's, and will stay to breakfast there, but he'll be home for a cup of mother's coffee. See if he don't. Think I, even pretty Jessy Kay—"

"Don't, mother! I can't bear to hear you talk of her. I haven't been to Kay's since yesterday, and I have had nothing to eat since last night. Another cup of coffee."

Dame Kepp refilled his cup, and exclaimed: "Not been to Kay's! Where, then, did you spend the night?"

"In the forest," was the moody response.

"In the forest, in all that storm!" Her son nodded assent.

"What was there to be done, Gosman, that you had to be out at such an hour, and in such weather?" "Nothing. I would rather not talk, mother."

"But your actions are so strange, Gosman," said his mother. "Tell me, have you quarreled with Jessy, Gosman?"

"Yes, no. Her father won't let me have her, because—because—"

"Because what?" "Because of father's running away. I suppose he's afraid I'll serve Jessy in the same way, or thinks I come of a bad lot. Jessy loves me, and will be true to me to the last."

"That she will," said the dame, soothingly. "Jessy's a sort of Will-o'-the-Wisp, but she's got a true heart after all, as I had, if your father had but known it. Be patient, and wait, Gosman, and it will come out all right in the end. You've got a little something laid by, and your situation here is sure, and you're certain to be head-forester after Donald Kay, and I can see why he should let a matter that is dead and buried arise now. I will see him and have a talk with him. Cheer up, lad!"

"Your talk with Kay will do no good, mother," returned the under-forester, moodily. "If he would refuse Jessy's tears and pleadings, he would never hearken to a neighbor."

"But he owes me a kind turn, Gosman; for it was on account of Donald Kay your poor father was jealous. I used to smile on all the lads when I was a lass, and Donald had a fancy for me, but I refused him for Douglas Kepp. I married Douglas, and you were born, and Douglas thought everything of me. But somebody told him one day that Kay had once loved me, and as Kay was his most intimate friend, and came here often, Douglas got jealous, and finally ran away. I was a true wife to him, though, and some time he may know it," said the dame, hopefully. "But, as Kay knows, I was never to blame. I don't doubt he will give you his lass when I speak to him."

"It goes for nothing, my good reputation, and your blamelessness," said the young man, bitterly. "If I were only rich, Mr. Kay would gladly give me Jessy. It is enough to make a man commit a crime—what was I saying?" and he suddenly checked himself and glanced about uneasily.

"The truth is, mother, I'm going away from Egremont. You can have the furniture, and books, and money—all but enough to take me to Glasgow. I shall want no clothes but those I wear."

Makes a Family Supply of Cough Remedy

Really better than ready-made cough syrups. Buy ready-made and ready and quickly prepared.

If you combined the curative properties of every known "ready-made" cough remedy, you probably could not get as much real curative power as there is in this simple home-made cough syrup, which is easily prepared in a few minutes.

Get from any druggist 2½ ounces of Pinex, pour it into a 16-oz. bottle and fill the bottle with syrup, using either plain granulated sugar syrup, clarified molasses, honey, or corn syrup, as desired. The result is 16 ounces of really better cough syrup than you could buy ready-made and saves easily $2. Tastes pleasant and never spoils.

This Pinex and Syrup preparation gets right at the cause of a cough and gives almost immediate relief. It loosens the phlegm, stops the nasty throat tickle and heals the sore, irritated membrane so gently and easily that it is really astonishing.

A day's use will usually overcome the ordinary cough and for bronchitis, croup, hoarseness and bronchial asthma, there is nothing better.

Pinex is a most valuable concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract, and has been used for generations to break up colds, coughs, and other respiratory ailments, and does not accept anything else. Guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money promptly refunded. The Finex Co., Toronto, Ont.

"Don't you hold yourself too cheap."

my father used to say.

"Never for a passing whim toss all your life away;

Don't be careless with your fame, and here's the reason why: you've got to You'll get the name of liar here, if once you tell a lie.

"Don't be reckless with yourself, don't run around the town,

Don't give your smiling company to boys who'll drag you down;

The world has countless eyes to see and countless tongues to tell, And what it says about your friends 'twill say of you as well.

"Don't you cheat in sport or game to save yourself defeat.

For when you come to larger things you'll wear the brand of cheat;

Don't think to-morrow's soon enough to prove yourself a man, Your character is shaping now so build it while you can.

"Don't you think success can be achieved by one great leap,

That you can break a promise small and larger promises keep;

Don't think you can be false to-day, to-morrow strong and true, Men tell your reputation by the worst they know of you.

"So, don't you hold yourself too cheap, insure your honest name,

Beware the pleasure which the sport which drag you into shame;

PEARS' SOAP has been used by people of refinement for 133 years. If it were not superior, it would not have outlasted a century. PEAR'S SOAP is preeminently the favourite Soap of Ladies and Gentlemen. The better class shops sell PEAR'S SOAP.

A few years ago, Messrs. A. & F. Pears, the makers of PEAR'S SOAP, produced a series of toilet articles which they named the "Golden Series." The articles which comprise the Golden Series are as follows:—

- |                              |                       |                                  |
|------------------------------|-----------------------|----------------------------------|
| Pear's Shaving Powder        | Pear's Shaving Sticks | Pear's Talcum Powder             |
| Pear's Nail Polishing Crayon | Pear's Baby Powder    | Pear's Compact Complexion Powder |
| Pear's Dental Paste          | Pear's Lip Salve      | Pear's Solid Brilliantine        |

These new productions of Messrs. Pears possessed such excellent qualities, that many Ladies and Gentlemen desired an entire toilet table equipment bearing the familiar and reliable name of PEAR'S, so PEAR'S Tooth Brushes and Shaving Brushes were added. The above mentioned Toilet articles will be on sale in St. John's next week. The names of shops where PEAR'S Golden Series may be purchased will be published in this paper.

Please bear in mind that PEAR'S GOLDEN SERIES represent 133 years' experience. PEAR'S Golden Series of Toilet articles have merited the approval of Their Majesties King George and Queen Mary and H.R.H. the Prince of Wales.

Electric Arc Welding in Mining

The use of electric arc welding as an agency in the production of minerals is a fact that has not been fully appreciated by most mining companies. It may seem that arc welding is rather distant from mining but a careful consideration of the many applications of electric arc welding will demonstrate that by its use in the maintenance and repair of mining equipment, it will aid greatly in reducing repair costs, delays from breakdowns, and in this way increase the efficiency of the workings.

The first application that occurs to one is the attaching of bonds to mine tracks. A copper band having a head with a steel face is quickly and securely attached to the rail joint by metallic electrode process. By welding these bands to the rails the conductivity of the return circuit is increased, thus reducing the power losses.

In many places the vibration of passing cars causes the fish plates to become loose on mine tracks. This may be avoided by welding the plates to both rails at the joint, making a solid joint. This may be done by setting the bolts of the joint up tightly and then running a heavy head of arc weld metal at the top and bottom of the fish plate. Smoother joints may be obtained where the rail joints have become cupped by filling these worn spots with arc weld metal making a level smooth joint. Where the wear is very severe an on crossings a high carbon electrode that will give a hard wear resisting surface can be used.

If manganese parts are used in frogs and crossings, manganese electrodes may be successfully used in building these joints up when worn.

The severe service to which the rolling equipment of a mine is subject calls for considerable repair work. Owing to the dampness of most mines there is considerable corrosion of metal parts. Deraillments are responsible for much broken equipment. Repairs to this class of equipment are easily and quickly made by the electric arc welding process. Where metal has been corroded or worn away it may be replaced with approximately the same grade, or a harder metal. The ease and speed with which repairs can be made by arc welding reduces the necessity of maintaining a large stock of repair parts.

Many repairs on rolling equipment can be made without dismantling, thus reducing the idle time of the equipment. Where steel tires are used on mine locomotives, the sharp curves and uneven tracks rapidly cut and wear the tire flanges so sharp that the locomotives have difficulty in riding the rails. By the arc welding process a hard resistant metal can be used to build up these worn flanges to their normal shape. When the work is done by an experienced operator, the necessity of machining or grinding is avoided and the work done without dismantling the outfit. In most cases the repaired flanges will give a longer life than the originals.

Beside the railway equipment of a

BRICK'S TASTELESS is evidently come to stay, it is not one of those "come-to-day and gone-to-morrow" Patent Medicines. It is a good reliable tonic that does its work every time and people who have taken it always take it again when they need a good TONIC and BUILDER.

mine there are many other repair jobs that arc welding will simplify. Broken pulleys and gears may be repaired and put back into service in the time it would take to get out an order for a new one. Repairs to steel tanks, hoppers and chutes are cheaply and very quickly made by arc welding. Stripped shafting and damaged key ways may be built up to their original conditions in the erection of small structural steel buildings and crane ways, it has been found that, where arc welding has been used instead of riveting, a decided saving has been made and the

of two classes, the single operator set used to supply welding current to one operator and the multiple operator motor generator set. In the former class are constant motor generators operating at arc voltage while the load is applied making this a very efficient outfit. Where it is desired to supply current to more than one operator as in a shop, the multiple operator motor generator set is used. This set operates at 60 volts constant voltage. The welding current of the individual operator is regulated by separate control panels. Two, three, five and eight operator sets are built supplying three hundred, five hundred, seven hundred and fifty, and one thousand amperes.—Westinghouse International.

PREPARING FOR THE STORM.

LONDON, Nov. 25. All reports from Egypt to-day agree that the population is quiet and Cairo is calm. If it is the calm before the storm there are innumerable indications that the British are prepared. Several grey warships flying the White Ensign are proceeding to Egyptian waters and troops are being sent to strategic situations in that country. An entire battalion is being moved across the Mediterranean from Malta. The Second Dorsetshires have left Suez for Port Sudan, and a Scottish Borders Battalion is being transferred from Alexandria to Iamboula. In Cairo British troops conduct occasional marches through the streets and British correspondents report to their readers back home that this is having a salutary effect upon the temper of the people. To-morrow the citizens of Cairo will be given an opportunity to see a whole brigade of British infantry marching through their streets with fixed bayonets.

REINFORCEMENTS FOR EGYPT.

VALETTA, Malta, Nov. 25. The British dreadnaughts Iron Duke and Malaya sailed from Malta to-day for Egypt. The steamship Maglan took on board the East Lancashire regiment and is proceeding to Alexandria.

EGYPTIAN PARLIAMENT ADJOURNED.

CAIRO, Egypt, Nov. 25. The Egyptian parliament was adjourned by royal decree to-day to December 25.

AN ASSISTANT FOR ALLENBY.

LONDON, Nov. 25. Neville Mayrick Henderson, British Counsellor at Constantinople, has been appointed temporary Minister Plenipotentiary at Cairo. The appointment is understood to have been made in order to strengthen the position of Viscount Allenby, British High Commissioner in Egypt, by giving him an assistant in the diplomatic service.

ANOTHER DIRECTOR FOUND GUILTY.

TORONTO, Nov. 25. C. A. Bernard, K.C., of Montreal, one of the Directors of the defunct Home Bank of Canada, was this morning found guilty on three counts under the Canadian Bank Act arising out of the collapse of that institution. The three charges are that he did make a wilful false or deceptive statement, unlawfully use a false or deceptive statement, and did negligently sign, and approve or concur in, an account containing false or deceptive statements. The statement referred to in each case is the annual report of the bank's affairs for its fiscal year ending May 31, 1923, to the Minister of Finance. Another Director, Lieut. Col. C. F. Smith, of Montreal, was convicted on one count, as were also Ocean G. Smith, former chief accountant, and Sidney H. Jones former auditor. J. F. M. Stewart, a third Director, is now being tried with these previously convicted. Bernard will be sentenced on December 1.

A SUGGESTION UNLIKELY TO BE ACCEPTED.

LONDON, Nov. 25. The contention by some foreign newspapers and publicists that the Egyptian trouble ought to be referred to the League of Nations is received with considerable impatience in these quarters here, which support the British Government's action following the assassination of the Sirdar.

CARDINAL LOGUE LAID TO REST.

ARMAGH, Ireland, Nov. 25. This was a city of mourning to-day, the occasion being the funeral of Cardinal Logue, Primate of all Ireland, who died last Wednesday. Despite the heavy downfall of rain, thousands came here to attend the obsequies. The crowds would have been larger had it not been for a railway mishap which held up many hundreds at Kely station. Virtually all of Ireland were represented, the mourners coming from Dublin, Belfast, Derry and other outlying points.

WRECK OF PLANE WASHED ASHORE.

SACKET HR., N.Y., Nov. 25. Wreckage of the plane in which pilot Carl Groby and Harry D. Conn, of Ogdensburg, left the city Sunday afternoon, and for which a search has been conducted, was washed ashore near Little Sandy, seven miles north of the Big Sandy Life Saving Station, late to-day. No trace of the men was found by the life guard who discovered the wreckage.

TANKER ASHORE NEAR SALEM.

BOSTON, Nov. 25. The tanker Trinidadian was reported to have run aground late to-day on the rocks of Bakers Island, off the Massachusetts coast, near Salem. She was pounding hard and her fore hold was filling with water, it was said. The tug Juno was dispatched from this port to her assistance.

RECIPROCAL BROADCASTING IS ONLY PARTIALLY SUCCESSFUL.

LONDON, Nov. 23. The first attempt on a large scale at reciprocal broadcasting by North American and British and Continental Stations made in the early hours this morning, was only partially successful.

LABOUR LEADER RE-ELECTED.

EL PASO, Texas, Nov. 25. Samuel Gompers, leader of the American Federation of Labor since its organization in 1881, to-day was unanimously re-elected to the presidency for the coming year. There were no other nominations.

FOUND GUILTY.

CHICAGO, Nov. 25. William J. Fahr, former Postal Inspector, and James Turray, politician, were found guilty on five charges of robbing the mails and one charge of conspiracy to rob the mails in connection with the $2,000,000 Rondout mail robbery, by a Federal Jury here early to-day. Walter McComb, chauffeur for Turray, was acquitted.

CANADIANS HAVE NARROW ESCAPE FROM FIRE.

LONDON, Nov. 25. A party of Canadians had a thrilling escape from being burned to death early this morning in a fire in the annex to the British Empire Club, Piccadilly Street, which is used as resident quarters for Overseas visitors. The housekeeper, a woman, lost her life, but all the visitors escaped unharmed, although early editions of the London evening papers state other lives were lost in the fire.

WILL BE GIVEN FINAL SCREENING AT NICKEL TO-NIGHT.

To-night is positively the last opportunity to see "The Spoilers." You may not shout, but you will feel like doing so. You may not find yourself poised precariously on the edge of your seat—but you are likely to, if you see "The Spoilers." You may not find yourself digging an elbow into your companion's ribs, to direct his attention to some scene—but if you did, your companion won't mind it, if you are seeing "The Spoilers." In other words, this picture is a real nugget of screen entertainment, and has everything that is demanded by exacting film fans. The awe inspiring scenes in this picture ring true, because of the author's intense love for the Northern wilds, and his own thrilling experiences in the Yukon region. There is a terrific battle between two infuriated giants that is half-raising in the extreme. The combatants are none other than your old favourite Milton Sills and Noah Beery. Sills is an ex-college heavyweight boxer in the college team. Another favourite to St. John's movie fans is Anna Q. Nilsson, who, in this film is seen to excellent advantage. Miss Eleanor Mews, St. John's gifted Mezzo-Soprano is delighting her hearers each night by her beautiful singing. Miss News is indeed a talented artist, who has a voice that is unusually sweet and inspiring. Watch for "The Lover of Camille" which is coming to this theatre shortly, and also that wonderful production with Ramon Novarro and Barbara LaMar entitled "Thy Name is Woman." When its unusual you may depend the Nickel has it.

Adriatic Battled With Hundred Mile Gale

ENGINES GOING FULL SPEED DID NOT MOVE THE 25,000 TON LINER.

New York, Nov. 18.—With a sheath knife between his teeth, Fourth Officer John Collins of the White Star liner Adriatic crawled along the hurricane deck while a cyclone was raging last Wednesday to cut adrift the starboard emergency lifeboat that was hanging from the after davit. A sailor was blown overboard and drowned, another lifeboat was stove in and for six hours the 25,000 ton liner was hove to with her engines going at full speed to keep her head on to the precipitous seas.

The Adriatic arrived yesterday with her forward deck coated with ice. Her passengers spoke highly of the skilful seamanship of Captain Frank Beadnell, R.N.R., and his officers for the way they handled the ship during the terrific storm last Wednesday, when only members of the crew were allowed on deck. The passengers were battened down below and watched the heaving seas through the glass Paris.

On Tuesday, November 11, at 5 p.m., the glass began to fall and a fresh gale started to blow from the south-east, which increased during the night, and by 4 a.m. the next day, as Chief Officer William Weston and Fourth Officer John Collins relieved the bridge, it was blowing at a velocity of seventy-five miles with high head seas.

At 6.30 the wind veered to the northwest and blew at a ninety-mile rate, and later to 100 miles.

It was evident that the Adriatic was near the centre of a cyclonic storm and Captain Beadnell, who was on the bridge, relieved the two officers in order that they could see the lifeboats were properly lashed down. Number 2 boat on the starboard side was lifted from its solid wooden chocks by the cyclone which carried them over the side and the stern of boat No. 15, aft on the same side, was torn from the chocks and hung over the side of the second cabin island, as it is called.

Fourth Officer Collins went aft with eleven men of the port watch and H. Strickland, the bosun, to make the boat fast. Just as they had completed the job, boat No. 20, on the opposite side, broke adrift and had to be secured. John Edward Nelson, a sailor, was told to climb under the boat to catch the gantline when it was passed over from the deck top by the bosun from the deck. There was a collapsible boat lashed to the deck under the swaying lifeboat, and Nelson lay on it face downward with his head aft.

As he raised his right arm to catch the rope the wind got under his oil-skin coat, which filled out like a balloon, and before the members of the crew could realize what had occurred, the unfortunate seaman was whisked out from under the lifeboat and blow overboard like a piece of paper.

Two lifebuoys were thrown overboard from the island where the port watch were standing and another was thrown over by Quartermaster Thomas Ryan from the after bridge. The seaman said that Nelson was beyond all aid. He had on a pair of rubber sea boots which would have filled immediately, they said, and which would have dragged him down. The Adriatic was then barely keeping head-on to the seas and could not have turned round without endangering the ship. Besides pitching forward the stern went down at intervals and took over waves which swept over the after bridge.

At seven bells, 7.30 a.m., the emergency boat swinging at the davits on the starboard side, just aft the bridge, was torn away by the wind at the forward end and left hanging against the side of the ship.

Fourth Officer Collins had an old sheath knife, a relic from sailing ship days around Cape Horn, which he had sharpened on the stone two days previously to cut up two plugs of tobacco. Anticipating that some gear might have to be cut away before the storm had spent its force, he had wrapped a towel around the blade, having no sheath, and placed it in the pocket of his pilot coat.

When Captain Beadnell gave the order to cut away the boat, the chief and fourth officer started to crawl along the starboard side of the hurricane deck to get at the after fall. Collins held the knife between his teeth and the captain followed him to clutch him by the legs and act as anchor so that the wind could not blow the fourth officer overboard. It was a hazardous task and well done. The spray came right over the crew's nest on the foremast and the wind shrieked so that it was impossible to hear oneself speak.

The velocity of the wind began to abate about 10 a.m. on Wednesday, and by noon it had dropped to seventy-five miles, which is a whole gale. The passengers described the motion of the Adriatic in the heavy waves like being on a continuous switch back.

The ship behaved well and rode out the cyclone without doing any damage except to the lifeboats.

The Ward Line steamship Monterey arrived to-day from Vera Cruz, Tampico, and Havana, with her decks

NO KICK.

WALT MATHEW

The other day I read a book in which there was no slaughter, and no detective chased the crook who'd kidnaped someone's daughter. No coroner pursued his quest, no cops dispensed their bullets, or said, "The knave we will arrest who swiped the widow's pullets." The hero didn't wade in gore, he had no warlike spirit; he didn't measure forty-four around his chest, or near it. And yet this story was intense, a wondrous grip possessing; it had the merit of suspense which keeps the reader guessing. A story of a haysed town, with all its jaspers striving to hold their little corners down, some falling, some surviving. When old Aunt Sarah winds the clock the action seems as fateful as any drama now in stock, with villains fierce and hateful. And when old Uncle Hiram sticks a mortgage on his dwelling, it discounts tales of gory thicks, pivoting, shooting, yelling. It had no kick, this little tale, it kick means lawless doings, as lynchings by the county jail, prize fights or basement brewings. And yet it bound me with a spell, with hoops of steel it bound me; I did not hear the dinner bell or mark the boarders round me. But few will read it or admire, it is too mild a story; the hero doesn't wade through fire, his whiskers are not gory.

Democracy and Despotism

London Morning Post: Democracy is found to be much more akin to despotism than freedom. It is one of those elements, known to chemistry, which cannot exist except in combination with something else. It is always in process of degeneration towards its opposite—tyranny. This character of democracy is inherent in its circumstances for two reasons. In the first place, it means majority rule; and majority rule means the subjugation of minorities. The ascendancy of the common mind implies the bondage of convention at the expense of originality; and, as John Stuart Mill discerned, the encouragement of every form of eccentricity is essential to true progress, because it is only through infinite variations from type that evolution achieves itself. How far democracy may be repugnant to liberty we see in America, where a majority impose the most despotic restraints upon purely self-regarding actions, and where an executive enforces them with a high-handed disregard of the individual which the Tsardom would have shrunk from.

Turks Persecute Greeks

"The Turks continue to behave with equal folly and cruelty in their treatment of the Constantinople Greeks," says the New Statesman. "We always deplored the arrangement for 'exchange of populations' though in all the circumstances it was, no doubt, the only thing to be done. But Turkey has not behaved fairly in the carrying out of it. "It had been agreed that Greeks 'established' in Constantinople before October 30th, 1918, were not to be expelled; but the Turks disputed the meaning of the word 'established,' and eventually withdrew from the Mixed Commission whose duty it is to supervise the business. Now, it appears, all the unfortunate Greeks are subject to arbitrary arrest and expulsion. Large numbers of them have, in fact, been rounded up by the police and stuffed into a concentration camp. The Greek Government has appealed to the League of Nations, and it is expected that the Council will consider the case at its meeting in Brussels.

CATCHING HOLD OF PEACE.

Did you ever have a feeling as if for a moment you had caught hold of the tall end of peace? That phrase is not mine. It was coined out of a moment of emotion.

We had been sitting for four or five minutes in silence upon a knoll to which we had climbed, looking out upon a landscape of low hills and fertile valleys and apple orchards and pleasant farm houses and golden pumpkins piled high against gray barns. Hardly a breath of air was stirring, the long shadows of late afternoon lay quiet, over all was the exquisite haze of a perfect September day.

Have You Ever Felt That Way? Neither of us spoke for a moment and then my friend drew a long breath and said: "It seemed to me then as if for a moment I had caught hold of the tall end of peace."

I don't know whether that phrase means anything to you or not. But if it doesn't, there may come a time when it does. A time when you, too, will feel for an instant as if all the tumult and the restlessness and the discontent had fallen away from you and perfect peace came to take its place for a little while.

Sometimes, as in this instance, it is beauty that opens the door of our hearts and lets the restlessness out and the peace in.

Then again, such a moment may come to one when one is reaching out toward the infinite in prayer and for an instant seems to make the connection with that toward which one is reaching.

When We Let Go. Self-abnegation is another one of the keys that can sometimes unlock the door of self. We let go, and in letting go suddenly something tight and hard and eager in our hearts seems to melt away and peace comes to take its place.

In the joy of service one can sometimes get away from the restlessness and discontent and sense of ultimate futility that so often haunts one in moments of would-be pleasure, and can lay hold of the sense of peace. One does not perhaps think of love and peace together. One thinks of love as more a troubling emotion. Yet I think there is also a kind of love that Tennyson meant when he said "Love took up the harp of Life and smote on all the chords with might, smote the chord of self, that trembling, passed in music out of sight."

The Peace That Lasts. Amiel has a most beautiful definition of the way to find peace. It is a tribute to religion as the surest door to peace that he does not promise us that we shall have peace for a little while this way, but suggests a peace that will last. Says Amiel: "To win true peace a man needs to feel himself directed, pardoned and sustained by a supreme power, to feel himself in the right road, at the point where God would have him to be, in order with God and the Universe."

Household Notes

Chopped nut meats improve the date pudding.
Crisp sweet wafers can be served with the fruit salad.
Hot milk is nice served with any of the prepared cereals.
Garnish the breakfast omelet with cubes of tart jelly.
Almost any hashed meat is improved by tomato sauce.
With each serving of roast goose serve apple marmalade in individual paper cups.

Fruit cake may be steamed for an hour before being baked.
Rabbit is excellent when baked and served with milk gravy.
Fry sausage in round, flat cakes and serve with tomato sauce.
Very handy in the kitchen is the new dishmop of tangle wire.
One can purchase rubber corks that expand to fit any bottle.
Serve cold baked ham sliced in a border of hot scrambled eggs.

Hon. A. B. Morine Demands Proof

OR RETRACTION OF SLANDER.

Editor Evening Telegram.
Dear Sir,—I shall be grateful if you will publish the enclosed letter, addressed to "R. G. Winsor, Ex-H.M.A.," and so help me to run down one piece of defamation.
I shall not be taking the true measure of Mr. Winsor's spirit if he promptly answers my letter. I expect him to maintain a sullen silence, or to represent that he was merely repeating a rumour, the author of which he will not name; or, at the most, to be insolent and evasive in his reply to me; and I shall be extremely surprised if he either attempts to prove his alleged statement about me, or manfully apologizes and withdraws it.
But I have not been able to conjure up any other manner than this of exposing the slanderous nature of the charge referred to.

Yours truly,
ALFRED B. MORINE.
St. John's, Nov. 25, 1924.

R. G. Winsor, Esq.,
Ex-M.H.A., Westleyville.

Dear Sir,—I heard, soon after the recent bye-election, that you, in the course of a speech in Bonaville Bay, had made or repeated a statement to the effect that I had received a large sum of money for drafting the "Liquor Control Act," passed by the Legislature at its last session.

Not conceiving it probable that any intelligent persons would give credence or even serious thought to so monstrous a falsehood, so loosely made or repeated, I have paid no attention to the matter, but to-day I was amazed to be told that a Reverend gentleman, holding high position in the Colony, had expressed the opinion that it was my duty to refute the slander; not, mind you, your duty to prove it, or apologize, but my duty to prove my innocence. It seems probable, therefore, that there are many capable of entertaining the same perverted notion of what should be done by a man to defend his reputation, and I have decided to run down this slander, as far as a lie may be overtaken after having once been given circulation on a public platform.

It is, of course, open to me to bring an action against you for slander, and to take upon myself all the difficulty of proving where, when, and how you made the statement, and to face what is now almost the certainty in this country that the issue would lead to a disagreement of the Jury along political or personal lines, affording my enemies the opportunity to say that my guilt had been established, through my inability to get a Jury to affirm my innocence. I do not propose, however, to take any such absurd course, but to bring this matter, through the press, before the public, in a manner even more general than the original assertion. I call upon you, therefore, to ask if you made any such assertion; and if so, what, and where, and when, and upon what basis; and I further call upon you, if you have any proof whatever of the truth, of what you said, to publicly produce it without further delay, or to publicly apologize for having made, or for having repeated it, as the case may be. If you did not make or repeat the statement, it is almost as necessary for your reputation as for mine that you should say so; and if you did make it or repeat it, incautiously, the opportunity is now offered you to tell the public on what basis you were proceeding. In any event, please do not take refuge in silence, and refuse to answer this letter, for I intend to at once publish it and your failure to reply will be looked upon by the intelligent reading public as altogether to your discredit.

Classic Modes

An interesting movement is on foot to receive classic lines in dress. The present mode, with its skin-tight, cramped outline, offends the artistic sense of some of our dressmakers, who are making a stand against what they call the "uniform of 1924."

Lovely materials are called into use for their creations. Hand-painted silks and velvets, so treated that the ornamentation appears to be actually embodied in the fabric, rather than a surface application, are a notable feature.
Designs for the new gowns, cloaks, and coats are inspired by paintings of old masters of the Italian school.
"We want to suggest personality in dress," said one dressmaker, whose models have already attracted much attention. "Women have become to appear like a regiment of soldiers—neatly turned out to a pattern. They have lost the art of personal dressing and do not strive for striking effect; our aim is beauty of line and simplicity."

Black and Gold.
Bold ornamentation in gold made a notable garment of a long sleeveless house coat of black panne, which was worn over a plain slip of soft black satin, girdled by a narrow tooled black and gold leather belt.
Every detail in these "picture" dresses is carefully thought out. Shoulder straps—which would have been obsolete if made of gems—on one lovely pale pink gown were invisible because they were made of flesh-coloured unbound tulle.

Article 16
Here is the famous Article 16 of Labour Party arranged. This says:—the proposed Russian Treaty which the Labor Party arranged. This says: "The contracting parties solemnly affirm their desire and intention to live in peace and amity with each other, scrupulously to respect the undoubted right of a State to order its own life within its own jurisdiction in its own way, to refrain and to restrain all persons and organizations in receipt of any financial assistance from them, from any act, overt or covert, liable in any way whatsoever to endanger the tranquility of prosperity of any of the territory of the British Empire, or the union of Soviet Socialist Republics, or, intending to embitter the relations of the British Empire or the union with their neighbors or any other countries."

I shall thank you to reply to this letter for publication in the newspapers, and as it is not a matter which I can afford to allow to drop into silence, I shall write to you again at the end of ten days, if I have not in the meantime heard from you.

Yours truly,
ALFRED B. MORINE.

Mrs. Asquith on Children AND CONVERSATION.

Mrs. Asquith, writing "Without Prejudice" in the London Magazine, says:—

"When people say there are too many children born, I reply that the joy and the hope of life lie at the feet of the children. If the population of countries depended on the rich, every country would be clamouring—like France is—for Security, and I think it safe to say that the selfishness of the rich can be depended upon not to produce the large families of past generations. It is through children, and children alone, that men and women are enabled to fight every inch of the way to despair.

"If, instead of birth-control, everyone would preach drink-control, you would have little poverty, less crime, and fewer illegitimate children. It is not crimes of fraud so much as crimes of violence that fill the prisons. I speak feelingly; for as my brother, Harold John Tennant, and I were the last of twelve children, it is more than probable we should never have existed had the fashion of birth-control been prevalent in the 'eighties.

"Silly children bring out the best qualities in love and science, and, if it is a question of poverty, let anyone out of kindness of heart (and belief in birth-control) offer to take a child from an overburdened mother and see what the mother will say. It may be bad for many reasons to have too many children, but it is worse to have too few, and only children have nothing like the same chance in life as those who have brothers and sisters.

"Good conversation depends more upon rapping in as many of the circle you are talking to than on any good story. To be uninterruptible has a deadening effect, and even smart phrases are apt to cut off the heads of well-chosen topics. Mr. John Burns is one of the best talkers I have ever met, and no one can put forward a new conception with more picturesque and original expression than Mr. Winston Churchill.

"It is a fine art to subordinate the interest you are taking in how you express yourself to the interest you are taking in the subject under discussion; and if you can add to that a desire to know what the listeners are thinking you will probably become a good talker. Lord Moulton, Lord Morley, Robert Louis Stevenson, and John Addington Symonds were among the best conversationalists I ever talked to, and the Master of Balliol (Jowett) made the most suggestive and caustic comments on what was said."

Alberta to Have Big Beet Factory

SALT LAKE CONCERN INTERESTS WESTERN GROWERS — HUGE OUTFIT.

CALGARY, Nov. 19.—(Canadian Press)—The Utah-Idaho Sugar Company has decided to erect a large sugar beet factory at some point in Southern Alberta. B. R. Smoot, general superintendent of the company, stated here yesterday. The initial expenditure will total $1,500,000.

"Farmers of the south country have guaranteed us 6,000 acres of beets on cultivated irrigated land," Mr. Smoot announced, "which would be sufficient guarantee to warrant our building a factory."
Mr. Smoot intimated that the proposed factory would be the first of what would eventually be a chain of refineries. The headquarters of the company are located at Salt Lake City.

The Last Chance to See "The Go-Getter"

MAJESTIC ARTISTES IN FINE SOLOS.

There is much that is unique and thrilling about the latest Paramount-Cosmopolitan production, "The Go-Getter," which was shown with great success at the Majestic Theatre Monday and last evening. T. Roy Barnes, in the leading role of Bill Peck, a War "vet" working for the Ricks lumber company, has a hard time getting re-established after his discharge from the army, but the "only girl in the world" arrives in time to see that her father takes care of him. Naturally Bill falls in love with Mary (Sena Owen) at first sight, and what pace he doesn't have to go through to satisfy her father that he is worthy of her aren't worth mentioning.

JAMES RONALD MacDONNELL.

We announce with profound regret the passing of Mr. James R. MacDonnell, which occurred at 11.30 o'clock last night at the General Hospital.

James Ronald MacDonnell was the eldest son of the veteran, Richard MacDonnell, for many years Stipendiary Magistrate at St. George's. He was born at Harbor Main in 1890, but early in life accompanied his family to the West Coast. Educated at St. Bonaventura's College, he at first embraced the teaching profession, being for several years in charge of the boys' school in Torbay, where his close association with the scholarly Father Clarke, of lamented memory, was undoubtedly instrumental in arousing his ambition to the pursuit of further studies. He entered the National University, Dublin, with the intention of joining the clerical profession. This plan he soon relinquished, but he proceeded to the completion of his scholastic course, gaining his Baccalaureate with high honors with the additional distinction of the Presidency of the Literary and Historical Society—no mean honor—and of the T. M. Kettle medal, for debating, awarded him by no meaner judge than the present Governor-General. Mr. MacDonnell then decided on reading for the Bar which he did for over a year at the King's Inn, Dublin, when the condition of his health, always precarious in spite of powerful frame, compelled his return to Newfoundland.

Shortly after his return, Mr. MacDonnell obtained the appointment of Assistant Superintendent of R. C. Schools which he held with distinction until the year 1919, when he entered the political arena, being returned with a handsome majority for his home district of St. George's. In the Assembly his commanding talent as a debater stood him in good stead, his well-stored mind, apt and incisive phrasing and quickness of repartee making him facile princeps. His political career came to what appeared at the time a merely temporary setback with his defeat in the contest of 1923, when he retired to his native district and engaged in farming. But his bodily condition, always uncertain, recently changed definitely for the worse, and the end came last night. He died peacefully in the midst of his dear ones and with the Church's consolations.

It would be impossible to convey to those who did not know him the irresistible verve and wit of his conversation or the frank charm of his personality.

Deepest sympathy is extended to his aged parents, to his brothers and sisters, and, above all, to his young wife of less than a year (nee Miss Stella Pieroway, and their son, his namesake). Theirs is immeasurably the greatest loss, but all who have learned to know him have some share in their sorrow for a keen intellect, a strong personality, a loyal friend, suddenly cut down in his prime.—Requiescat in pace.

MRS. LEAH WAGHORN.

On Oct. 7th in Melrose Hospital, Mass., unexpectedly, Leah, the devoted wife of A. T. Waghorn, brother of the late Rev. A. C. Waghorn, and of Mrs. Bull, Explots, died after an operation. Mrs. Waghorn is very well known in this city, where she has resided for twenty-seven years, her husband being in the employ of the Public Works Department of this city in the capacity of civil engineer for over thirty-years. She was actively identified with the Episcopal Church, being a member of the Docas Chapter and always a willing worker in any of the welfare works of that church. She was a member also of the Melrose Hospital Guild. Mrs. Waghorn is survived by her husband, two sons, Albert Charles and Frederick Harry Waghorn and one grand-child. Her sudden and unexpected demise will come as a great shock to her many friends and neighbors by whom she was held in highest esteem and by members of Trinity Parish who will always remember her as a woman of unusual Christian attributes. Funeral services was held on Sunday morning, Oct. 10th, from the Episcopal Church, Rev. Hugh Wallace, Smith officiating.

Wesley Y.M.L.C. Debate

Resolved: "That the present Government was justified in repealing the Prohibition Act." Such was the interesting topic of debate at Wesley Young Men's Literary Class last night. The affirmative was led by Messrs. B. Simmonds and W. Grouchy and the negative by A. E. Hayward and Henry Francis. The affirmative contended that after a trial of over seven years the Prohibition Act has been branded by public opinion as a farce and a demoralizing Act. It did not prohibit; it turned out to be a huge joke. Plenty of rum could be got with a script and the present Government was certainly justified in repealing an Act which did not serve the purpose for which it was introduced. They also claimed it would be absolutely ridiculous for a newly-elected Government to abolish an Act which gave satisfaction and served the purpose for which it was intended, but it was because it turned out to be a huge joke, and because rum could be got just the same as if there was no prohibition, the present Government threw it out. The people demanded that something be done with it and the members of Parliament being the mouthpiece of the people were certainly justified in repealing the Act.

The negative contended that the present Government was not justified in repealing the Act when they had nothing better to put in its place, and their attitude in doing something with it should have been the enforcing of the Act right to the letter. The negative further claimed that nearly all laws are sometimes broken, and the violating of a law was not an argument that it was a failure and no good. The negative despised the bottle-a-day system and maintained that it would demoralize the men of our country.

After the set speakers had finished the debate was thrown open for speakers from the floor and many spoke for and against the resolution. On a vote being taken it was found that the negative had won by a majority of nine votes. Four visitors were present and were invited to speak on the subject after the vote was taken and they delivered some very interesting points on the debate.

THEY'RE THE BILL BRUCE SPIRIT IN MOST OF US.

(By ANDREW SOUTAR.)

Hang their politics! Confound their knavish tricks! Me for the open air and the open sky and the company of men like Bill Bruce, famed as a hunter and guide throughout Northern Ontario.

In the welter of political strife and the choking of the newspapers with the vapourings of candidates, Bill's letter to the Prince of Wales (you read about it this week) came as a draught of sparkling champagne to me.

The letter was scrawled on a piece of birch bark (his ink should have been the blood of the moose he had just brought down with unerring aim, but I'll forgive him that):

Dear Prince:—This part of your dominion is the best moose country in America. Stop off a day with me and I'll prove it.—Respectfully yours, Bill Bruce.

And if I know my Prince and the glorious spirit of adventure that thrills his youth, he will stop off, and all the ceremonial of Court and statesmanship and rank will fall away like the skin of a snake, and for many days, not one, he will follow the trail with the redoubtable Bill through canyon and forest, by stream and mud-ringed swamp.

Never Crushed.

There's the spirit of Bill Bruce in most of us, though many in the staidness of middle-age and the respectability of citizenship will deny it. The spirit of eternal youth is never wholly crushed.

"When I was a boy," says the toothless old gentleman in the chimney-corner who has given his life to city drudgery in order to make sufficient money to justify his leaving a will when he dies, "when I was a boy I used to read the trash about hunting buffalo and trailing Indians, but I soon learned that it wasn't real life. All the same, he edges a little nearer to listen to the tale that's going forward.

Worry and debt, overdrafts and snappish bank managers, bills that accumulate like dead leaves on the lawn these days, income tax sleuths searching at your elbow, City friends betraying your confidences, growing seas asking amid the turmoil: "What are you going to do for me?" rain and fog and cold and doubt and the walls of your house a prison, or your job the only gulf between you and starvation.

Where's your sanctuary lie? Isn't it when you see Bill Bruce in the silences of the wood where you may slay your dander before you may eat, where Bill has no significance, and you may close to a beard until it intertwines with the easy swing of your gait?

Always Big.

Of course, there's a selfishness about the life, you'll say. Cavemen who shirk the responsibilities of the race, nomads who live in the wild and contribute little or nothing to progress. Somebody must stay at home and do the real work. Put them in the City for a spell, you say, and mark the evanescence of the strong, silent men stuff. They wouldn't have the courage to endure the torments of a struggling suburban clerk.

Wouldn't they? The fellow who can be big in the big things of life is just the fellow to be a giant in the small. The fellow who has blazed a trail in a far away country and slugged along on native food is just tickled to death, as he would say, when circumstances over which he has no control push him into a draper's shop—when a bearded old lady murmurs across the counter while ordering mittens: "Young man, you should go West and broaden your mind."

You say they never come back to the cities. That brings me to tell you of one of the greatest of the Bill Bruce tribe I have ever met, and I say to you now that his courage at the end of his great adventure was the finest thing of his career. You shall have names and places, for Squarey wouldn't mind. And many of my readers who were in the North Russian Expeditionary Force (I receive many letters from them) will recall the man of whom I write. Bill Bruce's letter to the Prince brought it all flooding back.

The Reindeer Transport.

Capt. E. M. Squarey, to give him his military rank, he was just "Squarey" to everybody from the general downward, organized the reindeer transport from Murmansk. Reindeer were the only solution of a difficult problem for us, for outposts were scattered all over the snow-laden country. The Laplanders are the only people in the world who know how to get the best out of a reindeer.

Squarey, a son of our oldest colony, Newfoundland, a sealer, a no-nonsense, a man moved by all the wanderlust of the virile writers of the Yukon, came out to Russia from France, and Lt.-Col. T. C. R. Moore selected him for the job of getting in touch with the Lapps and enlisting them into the service.

As lean as a fence post, Squarey might have stepped from the pages of Bret Harte. He went out with an interpreter's make new allies of the Lapps. He sent the interpreter back at the end of a fortnight and himself picked up the trail to the villages of the Lapps; he ate with them, slept in their tents, bargained with them, and, in his own words, treated them like white men.

"The Life."

In the result, five hundred Lapps, with two thousand reindeer and six hundred sleighs, were pressed into our service as transport. The Lapps were rationed and paid three kopeks per pood (36lb.) per verst for all they carried on their sleighs. Sometimes Squarey threw in a tot of rum.

The transportation of the mobile column, 11th Battalion Royal Sussex, from Petchenga, in the north, to the garrison at Kola, a distance, by the trail of 113 English miles, was done by reindeer. At the time when Squarey received instructions, the reindeer and sleighs were scattered between Murmansk and Kandalaksha—200 miles.

The lot were gathered together at Kola within seven days. In the transporting of the men of the Sussex, Squarey in charge, revolver and knife in his belt as every adventurous schoolboy would have had him, they ran into a blizzard. There was only one mishap during the journey; a soldier cut his foot while chopping wood in the forest beside the trail!

Squarey and I struck up a warm friendship. I trailed with him over twenty-five miles one day, and the two Lapps who drove the reindeer were instructed to make a race of it. "Da, da, captain!" We clung to the strips of hide stretched across the tiny sleighs, and the deer raced like the wind through the snow. I can see old Squarey, now, turning in his seat as his team passed mine and yelling like a boy: "Say, boy, ain't this the life!"

Met Again.

I wandered off the trail with him to where the tents of some Lapps were pitched in the snow. We entered and sat down on some skins while Squarey chatted with the Lapps and played with two little papooses. Squarey could speak only a few of their words, but the human side of the man appealed to the natives. By a gesture he could convey so much. They trusted him implicitly, refused to recognize any other authority, and looked to him for payment and their rations, and set him on a throne of their own imagining.

Never once did he deceive them or take advantage. If they loaded him with humble presents he saw to it that they were repaid. He asked them to take no risk that was greater than he himself would take.

I had to leave Squarey when I went further south to Archangel, and the days passed and the years began to rumble. And he slipped out of mind in the stress of other things and personalities. Then, one evening as I was crossing the booking-hall in the Central Station, New York—it was in late 1921—someone barred my progress, someone dropped two heavy portmanteaux at my feet, someone fairly yelled:

"Boy! Boy! Ain't there another little old war where a fellow can have some fun?"

Squarey! Leaner than ever, since they don't wear reindeer coats in New York. Leaner than ever of laughter and good cheer.

The Youngsters.

"By the Lord, Squarey, what are you doing here?"

"I'm a bum solicitor, boy" (a commercial traveller.)

"You! Of all people in the world!"

"Ha, ha," laughed Squarey. "I hate the damned things (he kicked at the bags), but what's the good of grumblin'? Mighty lot o' fun in this game if you know how to look for it."

"Side, there's a bunch of youngsters up country; I tell 'em about Russia now and again, but" (bless his sentimental heart) "if you were to come along and tell 'em some more about the times we had and the work we did, . . . You know?"

But I was unable to fulfil the promise I made. Somehow I didn't want to see Squarey in a domestic environment, however beautiful it might have been. He was "Captain Squarey, King of the Lapps," to me. But I sent him along a pile of photographs I had taken out yonder, and I know they pleased the youngsters.

And that's what I mean when I say that a fellow who can be big in the big things is just the fellow to be big in ordinary affairs. Squarey had gone back to the city with all his humdrum toil and the responsibility, but he went with a smile.

Nonconformist Stampede

"The British people," says the Sunday Express, "are not prepared to scrap Christianity in order to assist the Bolsheviks to Bolshevise Britain. Mr. MacDonald and his friends rely on Nonconformist votes. They are alarmed by the Nonconformist stampede against the Anti-Christian crusade. That is why at the last moment they have become more Moscophe than the Morning Post. Napoleon's army perished in the retreat from Moscow. Mr. MacDonald's retreat is equally disastrous. It leads straight to 'Waterloo.'"

Newfoundland Poultry Association

(Contributed.)

We give to-day a review of the work of the Association for the past few years to show what has been accomplished by this association for poultry culture in Newfoundland. It has been active since 1910, having been originally organized by the late Judge Emerson, Wm. Barker (Secretary), the late Hon. Geo. Knowling, Percie Johnson, John McNeil, Hon. W. C. Job, Judge Frank Morris, Walter Reid, Otto Rusch, W. R. Butler and others, who had the body incorporated under Nfld. laws, "to introduce superior breeds of fowls, ducks, geese and turkeys into the Colony, and to encourage their distribution amongst its people and arouse a deeper interest in the importance of poultry culture generally as is done by the other countries of the world."

The invitation to form the association was issued by Hon. Judge Emerson and W. C. Job, and the first meeting was held in the Board of Trade Rooms on Nov. 10th, 1910. The first annual general meeting was held February 2nd, 1911, and the Association then had been duly incorporated and forty members had taken shares. The President was Judge Emerson; 1st Vice-President, Hon. W. C. Job; 2nd Vice-President, Hon. Geo. Knowling; Secretary, Wm. Barker; Treasurer, S. O. Steele; Directors, A. MacKeen, John McNeil, Percie Johnson, Walter Reid and H. Parsons. At this meeting P. Johnson reported that he had the pleasure of meeting Prof. J. P. Landry, of the Canadian Government College, Truro, whom he hoped would visit Nfld. and lecture on Poultry Culture. Judge Landry has visited Newfoundland many times since 1910, and is now visiting St. John's again to make the awards on the Poultry Show this year. Newfoundland is under a deep sense of gratitude to Prof. Landry, who has come here often at a great personal sacrifice, in the interest of poultry culture, and he has seen wonderful improvements since 1911 in the quality of the birds shown and those around the country generally. The Association has always had the strong support of the various Ministers of Agriculture, and the present Secretary, A. J. Bayly, has done yeoman service in assisting the Association in every way possible. Mr. Bayly during the past two years accompanied the lecturers of the Association in their visits to suburban localities and villages and has lectured on agriculture, principally on the various diseases attacking our potato crops and giving the public various remedies to overcome the pests. In this connection the Poultry Association has given free illustrated lantern lectures at the following places:—Kilbride, Petty Harbor, Topsail, Kelligrews, Pouch Cove, Mount Cashel, Topsail Rd. Sanitorium, Brookfield School House, Ropewalk Club House, St. Bon's College, Bishop Spencer College and at their poultry shows. The attendance was good and the people were all keenly interested everywhere. As a result some modern poultry houses were erected and pure bred birds and eggs were purchased and the results are now in evidence, the general effect being that with the knowledge gained at these lectures interest has been aroused to more intelligent ways and methods which resulted in increased egg supply and larger birds. This idea of public lectures was inaugurated during the time that Dr. Campbell was Minister of Agriculture. The doctor joined the Association, raised pure bred birds as an example to others, won many blue ribbons at the Annual Exhibitions, and was the first Minister of Agriculture to have done so.

It is estimated that 6 to 8 thousand eggs are distributed every spring for hatching purposes by members of the Association as well as a large number of breeding birds are seen at Hebron, Labrador, St. Anthony, Westport, Fogo, Bonavista, Kelligrews, Placentia, Bay Roberts, Grand Falls, Pouch Cove, Belleoram and many other places too numerous to mention. The Association has issued pamphlets on Poultry Culture through the mails, and have published locally written articles on various subjects of poultry breeding in the press. Two members, to test the quality of birds grown in Nfld., have sent birds to the big Exhibitions in the U.S.A. and have won ribbons there. One member secured five silver cups and sold his six birds for four hundred and fifty dollars, thus showing what can be done in this country. The Association's annual show costs a thousand dollars, and acts as a practical demonstration of the class of birds produced here. The blue ribbon and cash prize of one dollar for first prize are an incentive to breed good stock and maintain a high standard. Members would not import cock birds at a dollar an egg for hatching purposes if no show was held, and the Exhibition is an incentive to do so. Eggs from these high class birds are thus distributed in the Colony and the public get the benefit of it. There is no premium or incentive to breed high class birds without an annual Exhibition. Towards the thousand dollar cost of the Exhibition and the general objects of the Association's work, they receive an annual grant of four hundred dollars from the Department of ### Agriculture, which has been honestly and efficiently used to the best advantage.

Canada and the United States are spending thousands upon thousands of dollars annually for the promotion of Poultry Culture, in running experimental farms, egg laying contests amongst various breeds, paid lecturers with moving pictures, etc., and it would be a move in the right direction if the Nfld. Poultry Association had a larger grant to extend their usefulness.

Cod Liver Oil as a Poultry Food

Now that so much attention is being given to the Poultry Exhibition, we have pleasure in reproducing from the American Poultry Journal showing the wonderful results that Poultry derive from the judicious use of Cod Liver Oil in their food.

The Scientists in London in their investigations on the merits of Cod Liver Oil have been experimenting to a great extent on Albino Rats. By feeding them on special kinds of deficiency food Rickets are produced, and then by administering a minimum quantity of Cod Liver Oil it was possible to obtain definite results as to the vitalizing powers of different kinds of Cod Liver Oil, and in this way it was shown that the Newfoundland oil was ever so much better than any other kind.

Some Scientists in the United States have been experimenting in a much more practical way which is in their own health, but indirectly in their use as human food. Very many chicken soon after being hatched suffer from leg weakness, and this is nothing else but Rickets. A small quantity of Cod Liver Oil in their mash shows the wonderful recuperative powers of this oil by a complete recovery of the chick within forty-eight hours.

Not alone has Cod Liver Oil brought chicken to a healthy condition, but records show that pullets fed in this way have been laying eggs when they were about three months old.

Facts of this kind cannot be too widely known, and the marvelous results can be demonstrated easily by every person who looks carefully after his poultry.

WAMPOLE'S EXTRACT COD LIVER OIL.
Now that the damp, cold, fall weather is commencing it is absolutely necessary to keep yourself warm, dry and healthy to avoid catching cold. If you are not feeling very fit try a bottle of Wampole's Extract Cod Liver Oil. This will put you in the pink of condition. This preparation has had a wonderful sale, though never advertised, one Drug firm alone selling over 4,000 bottles in Newfoundland last year. This speaks for itself and shows that Wampole's must do the work as the sales are always increasing. Weigh yourself, try a bottle, see the results and you will be convinced. Price: $1.20 per Bottle.

Scandinavia and Disarmament

"M. Branting, the veteran Swedish Socialist, has once more been called upon to form a Ministry and to carry out the policy of disarmament which was interrupted by the war," says the Saturday Review. "Sweden and Denmark have now both realised the impossibility of effectively protecting their own territory in view of their small populations and extended frontiers by land and sea. In Denmark the struggle will come when the Disarmament Bill now before Parliament is judged by the electorate by means of a referendum; but in Sweden the last General Election settled the matter and the late Government fell through an attempt to stem the tide. Both countries are now about to test the efficiency of the League of Nations, and their disarmament measures may be expected to fit in with the general lines on which that body is working."

NORTH AMERICAN'S PROGRESS.

Financial Local Increasing—Financing Plans.
(Boston News Bureau, Nov. 19.)
Boston.—In response to the upward tendency of business in general the electric business of the subsidiaries of the North American Co. has been increasing this fall faster than would be expected on the basis of normal seasonal fluctuations. Electrical output for October was twice as far ahead of business for August as the output of October, 1923, was ahead of the output for August last year. Prospects for the calendar year is likely to exceed $50,000,000.

All the company's subsidiaries are making in net earnings commensurate with this figure. The Milwaukee subsidiary made a world record for efficiency in generating electricity, expressed in heat units required to generate a kilowatt hour, at its Lakeside station in October. The Lakeside station was the first station in the world to use pulverized coal on a commercial scale and has shown steadily increasing efficiency during four years of continuous operation. The generating plants since constructed by other subsidiaries all use pulverized coal.

North American's big coal subsidiary, West Kentucky Coal Co., has been operating in black ink throughout the recent severe depression in the coal trade. Ownership of the latest steamer on inland waters and a set of barges capable of delivering coal at Mississippi river points at rates around two-thirds rail rates is partly responsible for West Kentucky's ability to compete in dull markets. The company's mines have an annual capacity of around 4,200,000 tons.

While North American is always in the market for additional properties at a price there are no negotiations on foot. One secret of the company's earning power is its moderate capitalization. At the end of 1923 total capitalization of the company and its subsidiaries, eliminating inter-company items, was less than three times a year's gross. New properties will not be acquired at prices which would cause a serious weakening of its ratio nor will the company depart from its policy of confining its

Our Montreal Letter

(From Our Own Correspondent).
HOUSING CONDITIONS ARE BLAMED FOR VICE.

Rev. Gerald J. McShane, D.D., S.S., Pastor of St. Patrick's Church, one of the Committee of Sixteen, in an address to the local Rotarians at the Windsor Hotel, scored the one room apartment, as one of the great factors in the problems of Montreal's vice.

Father McShane spoke of the underprivileged child. He gave a page out of his own life describing the work among the orphans of his parish. "For the last seventeen years I have had the spiritual care of a group of people whose homes lie between the waterfront and Pine Avenue and between Mountain Street and Amherst," Rev. McShane said.

Passing to his work in that area he discussed present home life. "The home is the atmosphere for the development of our manhood. Character building in the boys' is the giving them of self-reliance and confidence in themselves. This renders them real citizens and not mere cogs in the wheel," he declared.

For the thousands of orphans a true home atmosphere must be developed and this Rev. McShane and his assistants had tried to do in St. Patrick's parish. "The very best child in an orphan asylum is not equal to a child with a real home, with a father and mother. We have tried to establish a home atmosphere in our institutions."

No rigid discipline, bright class rooms, a certain amount of distracting manual labor, neat family-like dining rooms, no uniforms, all serve to give the children an atmosphere that is akin to the true home, the speaker said.

Briefly, he told of conditions 24 years ago and the changes that have come about lately. Finally he urged that individual attention be given the child.

Passing to the housing conditions Rev. McShane spoke of his personal experiences and of the work of the committee of sixteen in trying to bring about legislation which would get the men responsible for the renting of the properties used for so many illegal purposes. Father McShane concluded with a great appeal for the co-operation of all in stamping out and coping with the manifold vice problem of Montreal.

It was announced that the Peony distribution had been completed and 6,000 peonies had been given out from which $5,400 had been realized. Among those present were Percy Hutchinson, the great English actor, who spoke briefly, John Stiles of Ottawa, who discussed the Scout movement, and Lord Leveson, of Mr. Hutchinson's company.

There are three classes of people who seem to be in trouble nearly all the time. The first are those who spend nine months of the year behind the bars. The second are those who are forever in the Civil Courts. The third are those who are always depending on charity. They form a triangle formed by themselves and peculiar to their own descendants. They are the Trinity of trouble bounded people that are a burden upon society, and constitute a real problem that, we are told, has thus far defied remedial measures.

The problem, exists for a great part, because of environment and heredity, and only evolution can obliterate it. There is, no doubt, that many of the nation's criminals are capable of reformation through education, improved environment and medical observation. A better understanding between neighbours with a little more charity, kindness, honesty, and the curbing of the unruly member, the tongue, would go a long way to prevent many of the cases heard in the Civil Courts. As for those other persons, who are habitually unable to keep the wolf from the door, a little training in steady employment and perseverance as it would certainly make them self supporting. Many of those dependent on charity may claim, that it's easier to beg than to work. It's a crime to any civilized community to have able-bodied paupers depending for a living on the charity of others.

THE CITY MARKETS SHOW INCREASED REVENUE.

In a previous letter I made reference to the advisability of establishing a public market in St. John's. The following is the report of the revenue derived from the Montreal markets:—
From January 1st to the end of September the six public city markets yielded $178,872 in revenue, this being made up as follows: Bonsecours, $89,867; St. Lawrence, $14,889; St. Antoine, $14,681; Maisonneuve, $9,003; St. John Baptist, $8,440; and St. James, $8,448.

This is an increase over the last when $148,952 was collected. Revenue accruing from the two cattle markets, one in the east, the other in the west end of the city, amounted to $18,758 and $15,617 respectively.

The Mount Royal Hotel Company have addressed a letter to the shareholders of the company giving the earnings for the first nine months of this year. The letter says in part:—
"Respectfully referring to our letter of July 2nd, 1924, showing the company receipts as of June 30th, 1924, amounting to $1,108,868.72 in comparison with $1,090,258.83 for the corresponding period of the previous year.

"The company's business for the nine months ending September 30th, 1924, shows gross receipts of $2,005,212.57, in comparison with $1,992,481.18 for the corresponding nine months of 1923, or an increase of $78,728.39.

"The company's business since its opening in December, 1922, shows a net profit of $209,303.67 have been obtained only by the most careful management and supervision, and, notwithstanding the low per centage of room occupancy and while developing a new business.

"The net earnings after deduction of taxes, depreciation, bond interest, repairs and after the payment of all operating expenses for the first nine months of 1924 were $177,746.41 as compared with the net earnings for the same period of 1923 of $98,831.12.

"As heretofore explained to the stockholders, all conditions seem to be favorable to the development of sufficient net earnings to provide therefrom the full amount of dividends on the preferred capital stock, as soon as the proper volume of business is secured, and based on the present cost of operation, interest and sinking fund charges, depreciation, and all other items entering into operating cost, with a maintenance of a corresponding restaurant business, on the room occupancy being increased to 65 per cent, the net earnings will be sufficient to pay the dividends quarterly, on the preferred stock, and on the room occupancy being increased to 75 per cent, the net earnings will be sufficient to pay, in addition, 10 per cent. dividends on the common stock.

RAIL AND AUTO ACCIDENTS INCREASING.

The railways and automobiles still take their toll of human lives. Five were killed lately, three by the railways and two by automobiles. Seven people escaped injury when two automobiles collided and turned turtle at the corner of Clouse and St. Catherine Streets. At St. John's, P.Q., one woman was killed, and eight other persons seriously injured, when the driver of an automobile truck took a chance to cross the tracks, as a train was approaching.

Stewardship of Culture

"Of the many admirable speeches to which I had the pleasure of listening at the Birmingham Copee in April last, there is one, I think, that remains so fixed in my memory as an earnest plea put forward by a young lady for the fuller recognition of the stewardship of culture," writes "G.I." in the Manchester Guardian.

"The Christian conscience, she reminded us, grows daily more and more uneasy concerning wealth which is amassed and used for merely personal ends, but it still suffers to go unproved those who keep to themselves intellectual riches, while yet they do little or nothing to share their great possessions with others. The speaker herself was speaking under the five-minute rule of the Conference, and was therefore unable to develop her theme in any detail, but here surely is an extension of the Copee ideal of service which well deserves to be considered.

"If anybody's Macaulay once wrote in a charming letter to his little niece, 'if anybody would make me the greatest king that ever lived, with palaces and gardens and fine dinners and wine and coaches and beautiful clothes and hundreds of servants, on condition that I would not read books, I would not be a king. I would rather be a poor man in a garret with plenty of books than a king who did not love reading.' And there are thousands who have only tasted of the stream of which Macaulay had drunk so deep who would say the same. But of the lights of culture it is superfluous to speak, as superfluous as to urge its worth and need.

"Without culture, as Matthew Arnold taught us long ago—the knowledge of the best that is known and has been thought in the world—there can be no cure for the despoiled anarchy of our modern life. To most educated men and women all this is obvious enough; what is not so obvious is that this knowledge which has made them free of a large and wonderful world is not merely a treasure to be hoarded and enjoyed, it is a trust to be administered for the common good."

Eggs in Art

Many pictures which pass for oil paintings, says the Boston Globe, were not done with oil at all, according to the directors of the Fogg Art Museum at Harvard. As early as the twelfth century eggs were used for mixing paint in Italy, and for hundreds of years painters all over Europe did their work with pigments so made.

The white of the egg replaced vegetable gums as a binding medium for water and pigments; often the white and yolk were mixed together with water and fig juice, forming a "tempera," from which fine colors were ground and laid on white plaster covered surfaces.

In the perfection of art the yolk alone was used, and the quality of that article was closely examined. A manuscript from the fifteenth century directs that "for the faces of young people you can use the yolk of the egg of a city hen, as it is lighter and less red in color than the yolk of the egg of a country hen."

The art of egg-painting reached its perfection in Italy in the fifteenth century, and having reached it vanished. Nothing in the history of art is more striking than the fall of tempera-painting, which, having spent 800 of 400 years in achieving completion, died of its own perfection.

THE AIR IS FULL OF THINGS YOU SHOULDN'T MISS

"We don't dread the winter any more. Radio brings the companionship of the world right into the living room."

The lonesome evening hours are fast disappearing under the magic of radio.

Now the whole family can enjoy the world's best music, can listen to church services and receive the latest news of the world.

A good radio receiving set will do this, and more—but every radio receiver needs the best batteries, so when you purchase a radio, be sure to buy EVEREADY RADIO BATTERIES to make it operate at its best. THERE ARE NO BETTER.

Insist on EVEREADY RADIO BATTERIES. They last longer.

The Zinoviev Letter

COMMUNISTS TOLD TO FIND GENERAL STAFF.

Executive Committee Third Communist Internationale Presidium, Sept. 15th, 1924. MOSCOW. (Very Secret.)

the Central Committee British Communist Party.

Dear Comrades.—The time is approaching for the Parliament of England to consider the Treaty concluded between the Governments of Great Britain and the S.S.S.R. for the purpose of ratification. The fierce campaign raised by the British bourgeoisie around the question shows that the majority of the same, together with reactionary circles, are seeking the Treaty for the purpose of breaking off an agreement consolidating the ties between the proletariats of the two countries leading to the restoration of normal relations between England and the S.S.S.R.

The proletariat of Great Britain, which pronounced its weighty word in danger threatened of a breaking of the past negotiations, and concluded the Government of MacDonald to conclude the Treaty, must show the greatest possible energy in the further struggle for ratification and against the endeavours of British capitalists to compel Parliament to refuse it.

It is indispensable to stir up the masses of the British proletariat, to bring into movement the army of unemployed proletarians, whose position can be improved only after a loan has been granted to the S.S.S.R. for the restoration of her economic and business collaboration between the British and Russian proletariats has been put in order. It is imperative that the group in the labour Party sympathizing with the Treaty should bring increased pressure to bear upon the Government and parliamentary circles in favour of the ratification of the Treaty.

Keep close observation over the leaders of the Labour Party, because these may easily be found in the leading strings of the bourgeoisie. The foreign policy of the Labour Party as already represents an inferior copy of the Curzon Government, organize a campaign of disclosure of the foreign policy of MacDonald.

Armed Insurrection.

The IKKI (Executive Committee Third Communist Internationale) will willingly place at your disposal the wide material in its possession regarding the activities of British imperialism in the Middle and Far East. In the meantime, however, strain every nerve in the struggle for the ratification of the Treaty, in favour of continuation of negotiations regarding the regulation of relations between the S.S.S.R. and England. A settlement of relations between the two countries will assist in the revolutionizing of the international and British proletariat not less than a successful rising in any of the working districts of England, as the establishment of close contact between the British and Russian proletariats, the exchange of delegations and workers, etc., will make it possible for us to extend and develop the propaganda of ideas of Leninism in England and the Colonies. Armed resistance must be preceded by a struggle against the inclinations to compromises which are embedded among the majority of British workmen, against the ideas of evolution and successful extermination of capitalism.

Only then will it be possible to count upon complete success of an armed insurrection. In Ireland and the Colonies the case is different; there is a national question, and this represents too great a factor for success for us to waste time on a prolonged preparation of the working class.

But even in England, as in other countries where the workers are politically developed, events themselves may more rapidly revolutionize the working masses than propaganda.

For instance, a strike movement, repression by the Government, etc.

From your last report it is evident that agitation-propaganda work in the Army is weak, in the Navy a very little better. Your explanation that the quality of the members attracted justifies the quantity is right in principle, nevertheless it would be desirable to have cells in all the units of the troops, particularly among those quartered in the large centres of the country, and also among factories working on munitions and at military store depots. We request that the most particular attention be paid to these latter.

A Class War.

In the event of danger of war, with the aid of the latter and in contact with the transport workers, it is possible to paralyze all the military preparations of the bourgeoisie, and make a start in turning an imperialist war into a class war. Now more than ever we should be on our guard. Attempts at intervention in China show that world imperialism is still full of vigour and is once more making endeavours to restore its shaken position and cause a new war, which as its objective is to bring about the break-up of the Russian proletariat and the suppression of the budding world revolution, and further would lead to the enslavement of the colonial people. "Danger of War," "The Bourgeoisie seeks War; Capital fresh Markets"—these are the slogans which you must familiarize the masses with, with which you must go to work into the mass of the proletariat. These slogans will open to you the doors of comprehension of the masses, will help you to capture them and march under the banner of Communism.

The Military Section of the British Communist Party, so far as we are aware, further suffers from a lack of specialists, the future directors of the British Red Army.

It is time you thought of forming such a group, which, together with the leaders, might be, in the event of an outbreak of active strife, the brain of the military organization of the Party.

Go attentively through the lists of the military "cells," detaching from them the more energetic and capable men, turn attention to the more talented military specialists who have for one reason or another left the Service and hold Socialist views. Attract them into the ranks of the Communist Party if they desire honestly to serve the proletariat and desire in the future to direct not the blind mechanical forces in the service of the bourgeoisie but a national army.

Form a directing operative head of the Military Section.

Do not put this off to a future moment, which may be pregnant with events and catch you unprepared.

Destructing you all success, both in organization and in your struggle, With Communist Greetings, President of the Presidium of the IKKI.

FOREIGN OFFICE PROTEST—REPLY WITHOUT DELAY REQUESTED.

The following is the text of the letter sent by Mr. J. D. Gregory to M. Radovski, the Charge d'Affaires in the Soviet Union:—

Foreign Office, October 24, 1924.

Sir.—I have the honour to invite your attention to the enclosed copy of a letter which has been received by the Central Committee of the British Communist Party from the Presidium of the Executive Committee of the Communist International, over the signature of Monsieur Zinoviev, its president, dated September 15.

The letter contains instructions to British subjects to work for the violent overthrow of existing institutions in this country, and for the subversion of His Majesty's armed forces as a means to that end.

2. It is my duty to inform you that His Majesty's Government cannot allow this propaganda and must regard it as a direct interference from outside in British domestic affairs.

3. No one who understands the constitution and the relationships of the Communist International will doubt its intimate connection and contact with the Soviet Government. No Government will ever tolerate an arrangement with a foreign Government by which the latter is in formal diplomatic relations of a correct kind with it, while at the same time a propagandist body organically connected with that foreign Government encourages and even orders subjects of the former to plot and plan revolutions for its overthrow.

Such conduct is not only a grave departure from the rules of international comity, but a violation of specific and solemn undertakings repeatedly given to His Majesty's Government.

4. So recently as June 4 of last year the Soviet Government made the following solemn agreement with His Majesty's Government:—

The Soviet Government undertakes not to support with funds or in any other form persons or bodies or agencies or institutions whose aim is to spread discontent or to foment rebellion in any part of the British Empire, and to impress upon its officers and officials the full and continuous observance of these conditions.

5. Moreover, in the Treaty which His Majesty's Government recently concluded with your Government, still further provision was made for the faithful execution of an analogous undertaking which is essential to the existence of good and friendly relations between the two countries.

His Majesty's Government mean that these undertakings shall be carried out both in the letter and in the spirit, and it cannot accept the contention that while the Soviet Government undertakes obligations, a political body, as powerful as itself, is to be allowed to conduct a propaganda and support it with money, which is in direct violation of the official agreement.

The Soviet Government either has or has not the power to make such agreements. If it has the power it is its duty to carry them out and see that the other parties are not deceived. If it has not this power and if responsibilities which belong to the State in other countries are in Russia in the keeping of private and irresponsible bodies the Soviet Government ought not to make agreements which it knows it cannot carry out.

6. I should be obliged if you would be good enough to let me have the observations of your Government on this subject without delay.

I have the honour to be, with high consideration, Sir, Your Obedient Servant, (in the absence of the Sec'y. of State) (Sgd.) J. R. GREGORY.

M. C. Radovski, etc., etc., etc.

Bread pudding may be flavored with lemon and served with hot lemon sauce.

Think's Nutting is in Labrador

MAN WHO TRIED TO CROSS OCEAN IN SMALL BOAT MAY BE ALIVE.

HALIFAX, N.S., Nov. 26.—(Canadian Press)—William Washburn Nutting, the New York Journalist, who attempted to sail from Norway to New York in a small boat and has not been heard of for several months, may still be alive, according to a letter received to-day by the Halifax Echo from Rufus W. Sweet of Goldenville, Guysborough county, Nova Scotia, who has just returned from Greenland where he left Mr. Nutting and party on September 8 or 7.

Mr. Sweet, who is well posted on Greenland, believes there is still a good chance that Mr. Nutting and party are alive. They may, he writes, have been picked up by some whaling crew or landed on some remote part of Labrador. In either case they would be beyond the reach of wireless and have to wait considerable time before getting in touch with the outer world. Nutting and Sweet spent two days together at Julianehaab, Greenland, early in September. In parting Nutting told Sweet he intended to strike for the northern part of Labrador and have a look at the natives on his way south and to reach Nova Scotia by the first of October.

Mr. Sweet said Nutting's boat was well built and he did not consider there was much chance of his party being on the Greenland coast.

Mrs. Adams Escapes Operation

The following statement contained in a letter from Mrs. A. A. Adams of Provost, Alberta, should bring hope to other women who are in the same condition she was. She says: "I was in a very bad condition and my doctor said I could not have children without an operation. A friend recommended Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound: I have taken three bottles and now have a bonny baby girl. I am recommending the Vegetable Compound to my friends who have female troubles."

Borgia Poisons

The constant criminal trials in which poison plays a tragical part, brings to mind the myth that the Borgias and other "monsters" of historical infamy possessed knowledge of secret poisons which are unknown to-day. It was shared by their contemporaries, and had its origin as much in the general ignorance of the natural causes of sudden death as in the immunity with which the poisoner could practice his art.

Post mortems were unknown until the fifteenth century, when the popes removed the ancient ban on dissecting the human body. Not that that helped much in detecting murder by poisoning, for no certain method of chemical analysis was discovered before 1836.

Hence in an atmosphere of mystery and terror grew up the fantastic legend of deadly drugs and poisons which destroyed at a touch or a sniff: of great poisons removed by the scent of a bouquet or the wearing of a glove; of precious stones which changed color in proximity with secret poisons. And so when persons of importance died—probably of appendicitis, peritonitis or angina pectoris, and especially if their bodies became discolored or decomposed quickly—death was attributed to poison administered by their enemies.

As a matter of fact, so far from the science of toxicology being better understood in the Renaissance period than it is now, the number of known poisons has more than doubled since the beginning of the nineteenth century, and the staple poison of the fifteenth and sixteenth centuries was nothing more subtle than arsenic. Even the famous Aqua Toffana, arsenic mixed in the brine of boiled hog's flesh—a preparation which was supposed to be more deadly than a plain solution.

In short, it has been said with much truth that arsenic was practically synonymous with poisoning. Vegetable poisons were practically unknown, although the ancient Egyptians, and later the Romans, knew of prussic acid from the distilling of peach juice. The alternative poisons of the Renaissance appear to have been corrosive sublimate—a horrible epidemic about which there could have been no "secret"—and cantharides, an animal poison which enjoyed some popularity.

On such slender and primitive resources have been built up the legend of the Borgia crimes, although there is not a shred of historical evidence worth a rap to associate this much-abused family with poisons, even in the worst enormities with which they are charged. It is true, of course, that poisoning was one of the commonest forms of assassination in past times and was punished ferociously or conviction because it was then so difficult to detect; but much of the romance of historical crime disappears when it is realized that the methods used were those employed by the clumsiest poisoners of modern times.
