Poetry.

WHAT IS WEALTH?

Wealth is something more than gold,
More than luxury and ease;
It is the power to do good,
To help the poor and needy;
It is the power to be true,
To stand by friend and foe;
It is the power to be brave,
To face the world's annoy;
It is the power to be kind,
To love the lowly and the poor;
It is the power to be wise,
To see the good in every door;
It is the power to be strong,
To stand against the foe;
It is the power to be pure,
To keep the heart and soul;
It is the power to be true,
To stand by friend and foe;
It is the power to be brave,
To face the world's annoy;
It is the power to be kind,
To love the lowly and the poor;
It is the power to be wise,
To see the good in every door;
It is the power to be strong,
To stand against the foe;
It is the power to be pure,
To keep the heart and soul;

Miscellany.

TWO KINDS OF PLEASURE.

BY SYLVANUS COBB, JR.

He's a mean, niggardly fellow, and you Can't make anything else of it, said James Black, addressing half a dozen companions, and speaking very emphatically.
So he is, echoed another.
Ay, a regular skinflint, added a third.
I wouldn't ask such a fellow to go any where, chimed in a fourth. I wouldn't have him at my rate.
It's a pity that such a good-hearted fellow should be so mean, resumed Black. I suppose he would be on hand for any kind of fun.
These were young men, ranging from twenty to thirty years of age, all fond of what they denominated life. They lived in a large suburban village, where sport was plenty and the means of carrying it on abundant. They were none of them really bad youths, but they lived fast.
What's all this? asked a young man, who came up just as the last remark was made, and whose name was London Merritt.
We were talking about Tom Thornley, replied James Black.
And what about him?
What do you find mean in Tom Thornley?
Why—everything. Here he is right among us just in the prime of youth, money enough, and yet he won't pay a cent toward any of our fun. Only this morning I went to him and asked him to subscribe towards our club, and what do you suppose he said?
He just told me very coolly he couldn't afford it. Now what do you think of that?
Well, I don't know. I've swined Merritt.
Of course he could. Afford? Why, he not only has a salary of a clear thousand a year, but I know that he has ten thousand at interest, besides the splendid house his father left him. He's a mean chap, any way.
How much did you ask him to put down?
I didn't name any sum, but told him I had put down fifty dollars for the year, and most of the others had done the same. But he couldn't afford it! Bah! he's a miser—a regular young skinflint! Why, I supposed as soon as he got back from college, he'd make a glorious companion for us. I meant he should go to our races, join our boat club, put up a whiffing at poker once in a while, and make himself happy generally. But, now look at him. There he is, at home every evening, and afraid to come out lest he should lose a cent.
Who's that, James? asked a voice close at hand.
The party turned and saw Thomas Thornley, himself, who had just come round the corner of the building before which they stood. He was a young man, not over five-and-twenty, and wearing the appearance of a true and intelligent man.
What is it? Who is it that has thus merited your disapproval?
All hands were silent for a few moments, but Black saw that his companions expected him to speak, and he did so.
I'll tell you, Tom, he said. We were talking about you. I want say a thing behind a man's back that I wouldn't say to his face. I was saying that I was disappointed in you.
Ah, how so? asked Thornley, with a smile.
Why, in not joining with us in our sports, and bearing your share of the tax.
But mind, we aren't anxious for you to do so, if you don't wish to.
And I suppose it is my wish not to do so that you condemn?
Yes, I thought, for a chap who had so much money as you have, it looked rather small to be hoarding it away like an old miser.
But, my dear friend, you forget that every man naturally follows that which he thinks for his lower depths. If you find yields him the most pleasure. If you find the most pleasure in spending your time and money in boating, horse racing, card playing, and in wine suppers, I shall not bow-fault with you, though I sincerely believe you could spend time and money to better advantage.
That's your opinion.
It is.
Well, then, mind. After sticking to business all day, I think we have some rights to a bit of recreation for the evening. And once in a while, of a pleasant day, we'll trot a horse, or sail a boat, and burn nobody.
And you do so, do you not?
Of course we do.
Then why find fault with me?
Because you keep from us that companionship we have a right to expect. If you were a regular Jack, we shouldn't care; but you're too good a fellow to sneak away from us in this fashion. You love fun as well as any of us only—I speak plainly—Certainly; go on.

Your too miserly to pay for it; and that don't look well for one who has so much money as you have.

For some moments Thornley was silent.
A single instant there appeared a flush upon his cheek, but a meaning smile soon took his place.
Bore, he said at length, you do not understand me. But come with me to my home, and I will explain. Come, I cannot offer you wine, but you shall have some as nice fruit as this section can afford; and if I do not satisfy you that I am right, I will give you a hundred dollars for your club. Come I will not detain you long.

As the young man spoke, he turned back towards the point whence he had come, and the others followed him. The walk was not long, for at a short distance from the dusty street they came to a cottage-like mansion, before which spread a wide park, with neatly gravelled foot and carriage paths, along the borders of which grew all sorts of flowers and evergreens. Thomas led the way up to the verandah, and under the shade of the trellised walk he stopped and pointed to some marble statues that had been recently set up near an artificial fountain.

How do you like those, he asked.
Splendid, answered several.
I take a great deal of pleasure in having them there; and though they cost me quite a sum, yet I do not regret it.

Next he led them into the house, and conducted them to a room which he informed them was his own place of resort. The apartment was spacious and airy, and the ceiling high and richly frescoed. Around the walls were hung several splendid paintings, together with quite a number of very richly framed engravings. At the angles of the wall were niches in which stood statues and elegant vases and busts. One side of the apartment was wholly occupied by a library, within which were over a thousand volumes of good, substantial works. On a wide table were drawing, painting and writing materials, while in a recess, constructed on purpose, stood a beautiful horse organ.

Thomas was upon the point of speaking, when one of the doors was opened, and a female entered. She started back on seeing such a party, and would have instantly withdrawn had not the host called her back.

Here, Susan, he said, "some of my friends have come to see our little game—my wife, gentlemen.

The young lady turned back into the room and with a sweet smile welcomed her husband's guests. Susan was a lovely, beautiful woman, and seemed just the companion for a man with such tastes as young Thornley displayed.

Can we have some fruit? the host asked, after his wife had returned the company.
I think I can find some, replied the wife, and thus speaking, she left the room.

Now, boys, said Thomas, you see here some of my sources of pleasure. I suppose the articles in this room have cost me not less than five thousand dollars. It is quite a sum, but I had the money to spare, and I laid it out after my own taste. You see that painting there over the mantle. I bought it of a gentleman who attended the sale of an estate at Seville, and this he obtained there. Did you ever see such exquisite touches?

All admired the picture, and while they were looking at it, the others, the young hostess returned, accompanied by a servant bearing trays of fruit. There were peaches, pears, grapes, and some beautiful plumbers. The repast was luscious; and when it was finished, Thornley arose and asked his friends to follow him into the garden.

Here they found about an acre of ground laid out into an orchard, vineyard and tillage, and looking neat and tidy. Here and there were little trellised arbors, within which were mossy seats, while flowers and grapes hung overhead.

Here, said Thornley, after they had walked through the garden, I spend some of my leisure time, and I assure you I find much pleasure in the cultivation of my fruit. My wife attends to the flowers, while I see to the trees and grapes and when the night comes we repair to our library, when reading and music give us pleasure and profit. Then again, I sometimes have leisure hours from my business when the weather will permit us to work in our garden. We then write, and draw, and paint. But come let us go in once more and you shall examine my library.

And now, said Thornley, after his friends were ready to retire, you have seen my sources of pleasure. Keep industrious men with fair fortune may have the same, though many may not go quite so far as I have gone.

but I only speak in general terms. If I could find pleasure in the sports you have tried to urge upon me, you may be assured I should not only join in them, but I should also cheerfully pay my share of the expenses. But such things have no real pleasure for me—not generally. Once in a while I love to sail, and I love social gatherings; but my fullest joy is here with my wife, my books, my music, my pictures, and my garden. My home is open to you whenever you may wish to join me in my kind of pleasure, and you may be sure you ever be-kindly received. And one other thing I will tell you—I have subscribed a thousand dollars to the new Athenaeum in the city, and when any of you may wish to visit there and see the splendid specimens of art there collected, I will give you a pass.

The party had reached the verandah on their way, but they hesitated, as though something should be said. At length James Black spoke:

As I commenced the discussion which has led to this, I want to say, I ought to speak what I think to be the truth now. Tom, you are right. Your pleasure is surely better than ours, for it has more to wear to it, and—and—well, I may as well tell the truth —it's got more sense to it. I'll never had fault with you again; but one thing I will do—I shall accept your invitation to spend an occasional evening here.

All agreed with Black, and when they turned away from Thornley's home they were wiser than before. They had learned what they had not previously understood, and that was that there is another kind of real pleasure besides that which they followed. Argument might never have convinced them; but the good look at his domestic arrangements, opened their eyes. Never again did they ask Thomas Thornley to accompany them upon any of their scrapes, but they often visited him, and they were not long in finding that an evening spent beneath his roof, with music and sensible conversation, and a simple collection of fruits and nuts was better by far than a wine supper, with its boisterousness and its consequent depression and head ache of the morning following.

GENERAL DIRECTIONS FOR PRES-SERVING.—Perhaps at the present season a few general hints on preserving, for the use of a young housewife, may not be unacceptable. Several of the directions may appear needless; but there may be some inexperienced persons to whom they may be beneficial.

1. Let everything need for the purpose be clean and dry, especially bottles.

2. Never place a preserving-pan on the fire, as this will render the preserves liable to burn to, as it is called; that is to say, to adhere closely to the metal, and then to burn the lower bar of the kitchen range.

3. After the sugar is added to them, stir the preserves gently at first, and more quickly towards the end, without quitting them until they are done; this precaution will prevent their being spoiled.

4. All preserves should be perfectly clear from the scum as it rises.

5. Fruit which is to be preserved in syrup must first be blanched or boiled gently, until it is sufficiently softened to absorb the sugar, and a thin syrup must be poured on it at first or it will shrivel instead of remaining plump and become clear. Thus if its works of sugar is to be allowed, and boiled to a syrup with a pint of water to the pound, only half the weight must be taken at first, and this must be boiled with the water more than fifteen or twenty minutes at the commencement of the process. A part of the remaining sugar must be added every time the syrup is raised, unless it should be otherwise directed in the receipt.

6. To preserve both the true flavor and the color of fruit in jams and jellies, boil them rapidly until they are well reduced, before the sugar is added, and quickly afterwards, but do not allow them to become so much thickened that the sugar will not dissolve in them easily, and throw up its scum. In some seasons the juice is so much richer than in others that this effect takes place almost before one is aware of it; but the most which adheres to the skimmer, when it is held up, will show the state it has reached.

7. Never use tin, iron, or pewter spoons or liners for preserves, as they will convert the color of red fruit into a dingy purple, and impart, beside, a very unpleasant flavor.

8. When cheap jams or jellies are required, make them at once with loaf sugar, but use that which is well refined always for preserves in general, as it is a false economy to purchase an inferior kind, as the inferior great waste from it in the quantity of scum which it throws up.

9. Pans of copper or bell-metal are the proper utensils for preserving fruit. When used, they must be scoured bright with sand.

Tinned pans turn and destroy the color of the fruit that is put into them. A stephen made of iron, coated with earthenware, is very nice for preserving.

Mortality.—Most men are, in a dead, to moral principles but that they feel a spontaneous glow of admiration for the man who does right because it is right, no matter if he do make less money by it. Some few men say he is a fool or a lunatic not to make the most of his advantage, right or wrong; but the heart of man is loyal to restitude. We look, and admire and praise—We cannot help it. He who is a selfish, covetous age, when all men are fighting and scrambling for money, stands up, strong in his integrity, and modestly does the thing—not that is legal, not that is as others do, or as many preach, but does the thing which is right—such a man is worthy of all imitation.
The heavenly minded are few in the world.
Are not the righteous few likewise? A more character, that is genuine is seen as rarely as Diogenes' men, when hunted for with a lantern at noonday.

A lawyer somewhat disgusted at seeing a couple of Irishmen looking at a six sided building which he occupied, lifted up the window, put his head out, and addressed them thus:—"What do you stand there for, like a pair of blockheads, gazing at my office?" Do you take it for a church?" "Faix, answered one of them, "I was thinkin' so, till the devil piped him out of the windy."

A RESCUE WIT.—While inspecting a farm in a papered district, an enterprising gentleman could not help noticing the saw, dangling from one of the laborers there, and said, "My man, do you not sweat at that work?" "Why, no, master," was the reply, "mine shilling a week and sweating wages."

FROM THE STATES.

Boston, June 24.
The Herald's Washington despatch says, the following rebel Generals have applied for pardon, Barton, Fraser, J. B. Smith, Cossé, Gordon, Vaughn, J. R. Jones, Marmaduke and Dabney; also the rebel Commodore, John R. Tucker. No persons above the rank of Captain are being released at present.

It is believed that Mr. Seward is opposed to a new Reciprocity Treaty, and that R. J. Walker is also, on the ground, that it is not made that annexation will follow.

The Mexican imperialists at Matamoros are much exercised in mind, regarding the appearance of so many United States troops. The Steamship Golden Rule, from Aspinwall for New York, was wrecked on Rondo Reef, all on board saved.

June 26.
Steamship "City of Boston" arrived Saturday evening with Liverpool dates to 19th. The English armor-plated fleet, on invitation of Napoleon, is to make a tour around the French coast. The French armor-plated fleet is to do the same around the English coast.

The combined fleets will be at Plymouth about the middle of July. Parliament would be dissolved about the 10th of July.

The Morning Post says the negotiations between England and Canada are about to be satisfactorily concluded. Canada is expected to undertake the whole of the West in defence.

The Canals will be deepened, and an efficient Militia be maintained. The Imperial Government will furnish the entire necessary armament, and guarantee a loan to construct an Intercolonial Railroad.

President Johnson in an interview with a South Carolina delegation on Saturday, declared that Slavery was dead, and that the restoration of the Union must be made on that established fact.

Go d-140.
The question of annexation to the United States is again being discussed with a good deal of earnestness by the Canadian papers. The people of the Province, in view of their impoverished conditions and the abrogation of the Reciprocity Treaty, are beginning to think that, perhaps, it could not be a bad idea to unite their fortunes with the great Yankee nation. If they will repent of giving aid and comfort to pirates and rebels—Maine papers—[There is plenty of room for the provincials in their own country. Pay your own taxes.]

COMING HOME FROM THE WAR.—Over a hundred and twenty thousand soldiers have been disbanded within three weeks and eighty thousand have, since the 1st of June, passed over the rail roads from Washington.

SNOOKING MURDER.—The Boston Journal of Monday contains an account of the most terrible murder of a couple of children in Roxbury, a brother and sister, the former twelve years of age and the latter fourteen. The girl was previously ravished, and the murders then followed, evidently for the purpose of destroying evidence of the first terrible crime. The fiendish brutes who committed this series of tragedies are still at large.

BURNING OF A NORTH AMERICAN SHIP.—Captain Joughin, of the East Indian trader Cambay, which arrived in Liverpool on the 5th, from Calcutta, reports that on the 16th of May, when in lat. 34 12 N., long. 43 45 W., he fell in with a large North American built ship of about 900 ton burthen. The derelict was much damaged by fire—the vessel, from the mainmast aft, down to the upper gudgeon on the stern-post being destroyed—and also waterlogged. The ship was laden with deals, and had a full female crew, with a wreath of flowers painted white. She was apparently a craft of first-class construction, having built lower-masts painted white, and topmasts and spars painted black. She was rigged with Cunningham's patent-reeling topsails, with wire rigging on the foremast, foretopmasts and foretopgallantmast. She was painted stone color inside, and had evidently been sometime adrift. Captain Joughin was unable to ascertain the name of the abandoned vessel, or the probable fate of the crew. It is possible this vessel may be the Phryne, abandoned some months ago, and the crew of which reached Liverpool all safe.

Two surgical operations have been performed on patients in this vicinity, within the past few weeks, worthy of notice. The first was an amputation of the thigh, performed on a lady sixty years old, who had been suffering from a cancerous disease of the leg for a long time. The second case was that of the colored man, mentioned in our last being injured while blasting at the ore bed, Jacksonville. In this case that most difficult of operations, Trepanning, had to be undergone, which consisted in removing a portion of the skull and relieving the depressed fragments which rested on the brain. Both patients, above referred to are now comparatively well. These operations were skillfully performed by Drs. Wolhansper and Smith of this town—[Carleton Sentinel.]

THE YOUNG PREACHER.—Mr. PETER MORRISON, according to expectation, arrived here last week from Halifax, N. S., where he had been pursuing his theological studies; and preached his first two sermons in the Presbyterian Church—morning and evening. His text in the forenoon was—"Awake thou that sleepest—arise from the dead, and Christ shall give thee the light." It was a practical and heart-searching sermon; and from his earnest attention paid to the young preacher's discourse, it was, no doubt, received, as a good commencement of future usefulness in his Master's cause. Mr. Morrison, we understand will be permanent settled over the congregation.—[St. Stephen Advocate.]

Hugh M. G. Garden, Esquire, to be Justice of the Peace for the County of Carleton, in room of John C. Winslow, Esquire, deceased.

By His Excellency's Command.
A. H. GILLMOUR, Jr.
Secretary's Office, 21st June, 1865.

ST. ANDREWS, JUNE 28, 1865.

The people of St. John have at length succeeded in effecting arrangements for building Western Extension. The Maine Company are to make the line, and receive from the St. John Company $200,000 in cash, the Government subsidy of $10,000 a mile, and when the road is finished to have a long lease of it, for a sum equal to the interest of the $200,000. According to this arrangement, St. John will have a railway connection with the States; but—the Americans will reap all the advantages of building it, and running the trains; and it is probable that the City of St. John, may be only a way station, as the Americans look forward to having a direct communication with Halifax which will be the terminus. It would have been much more beneficial to the Province to have built and worked the line; as this could not be done at present, and the people were anxious to have the line built, they must forego the benefits which will arise from the traffic.

Our old and respected contemporary the St. John "Courier" is, according to the announcement in Saturday's issue, to be discontinued in a short time. The reason assigned is that "the editorial profession has not been congenial to those to whom its management has been entrusted in later years." The "Courier" was first issued by the late Henry Chubb, Esq. in 1811, and was at that time a very small sheet, but it was enlarged from time to time, until it became the largest paper in the Province, and always enjoyed, as it deserved, an extensive and paying patronage. We will miss our old and valued exchange, which it has been our privilege to read weekly, since 1825, many years before our connection with newspaperdom; and tender to its proprietor our grateful acknowledgments for his many acts of courtesy and kindness, wishing him abundant prosperity in whatever pursuit in which he may engage, and a happy relief from the cares and responsibilities of journalism.

A correspondent at St. George furnishes the following item of news:—On the night of the 25th inst., Mrs. Thorpe, wife of Mr. Henry Thorpe, residing at Penfield, while sleeping in bed with her husband and two children was killed by lightning.

Her husband was also struck, and was for some time unconscious, and on awakening to reason, he heard his wife articulate six or seven unintelligible words, and then expire. The children were not injured.—The lightning came down the chimney tearing it and bed-room hearth and several beams from their foundation.

LAUNCHED AT ST. GEORGE.—On the 24th inst., from the building yard of Edward Billings, a brig of 200 tons burden, built of blackmahoe, copper-fastened, and is said to be one of the finest vessels built in the place. She is owned by Messrs. E. Billings and A. Young, is intended for the West India trade, and will be commanded by Capt. Jacob B. Mott.

We are assured on the very best authority, that the resignation of Col. Anderson, Adjutant General (with whom originated the Camp of Instruction), was solely owing to ill health, and notes has been erroneously reported, from any difference of opinion between His Excellency, the Commander in Chief, and Col. Anderson. We have much pleasure in making a correction, as an act of justice to His Excellency and the Adjutant General.

On Tuesday showers of rain fell, which were much required, as in some places the grain was suffering from the drought. We notice that some persons have commenced haying. The grass crop looks most promising.

We understand that the Choir of All Saints Church, presented Miss Stone, with a handsome ring and keeper on her retiring from the choir of which she had been for some years a member.

The Frederick "Reporter" states, "that it is now fully understood that His Excellency the Lieutenant Governor, retires from the Government of this Province immediately, and that he will be succeeded in office for the present by Major General Doye."

The University Examen will take place to-morrow, Thursday at Fredericton. The President, Dr. Jack, will deliver the Oration.

TRESPASSERS.—Complaints are made of persons trespassing on fields of grass in the vicinity of the town, picking strawberries. The owners are determined to prosecute any person hereafter found trespassing on their premises; they complain that much damage has already been done by tramping their grass.

LATER FROM EUROPE.—The steamer Damascus arrived at Newfoundland on the 25th, with Liverpool dates to the 15th inst. She brought no news of importance.

Pic Nic.—The Ladies of the Baptist Church intend having a Pic Nic on Wednesday next, to aid in paying off the debt on their new Church. Excursion from St. Stephen, Calais and St. George by Steamer Queen. Particulars given in Bills.

The Training School Examination which commenced on the 23rd inst., was brought to a close yesterday. No less than 43 male and female candidates presented themselves for licence or advancement. John Bennett, Esq., Chief Superintendent of schools, presided as usual.

A considerable time will probably elapse before the Licences can be granted; but our young friends in this county and elsewhere, must bear with the Board of Education, who will no doubt in due time do them ample justice. Wm. Mills Esq., the Principal Mr. John Mills and Miss Alline, were present through the examination, and appeared deeply interested in the welfare of the Students.

ITEMS.

Encourage your own townsmen is a motto to which every citizen should keep in memory. If there is any work you wish done, or any article you wish to purchase, look about among the mechanics and business men of your own town and give them the preference. Such is the very good advice of the Newburyport Herald.

The Calais Advertiser states that a mill owned by J. Granger, Esq., was swept away in the late freshet, also that the mills of Messrs. Hall, Waite and others were greatly endangered. The freshest in the St. Croix was heavy.

The amount of war material now accumulated by Government, both of its own manufacture and capture from the rebels, is almost incredible. Steamboat travel above Woodstock has ceased, owing to the scarcity of water.

The business men of St. Stephen have chosen John Bolton, Esq. of the firm of Chipman & Bolton, to represent them at the Detroit Convention.

PETROLEUM.—Last advices from the Oil region in Canada West report there is very little of Crude Oil being produced, and prices tend upwards.

The quantity of Oil coming forward to market is limited, and stocks here are very much reduced in quantity. The stock of Refined Oil in the city, as nearly as can be estimated, will not much exceed 800 barrels, and as a consequence, prices have advanced during the week from 2c to 3c per gallon.
