In 1868, Mr. Bradlaugh was a candidate for Parliament in Northampton, but had five competitors. In 1880, he was elected for Northampton, and was twice put out of the House of Commons because it was alleged he was an atheist. His constituents stood firmly by him, and he was finally admitted on affirmation. The resolutions affecting him, passed at this time, were expunged from the records of the House while Bradlaugh lay on his death bed. In 1873 Mr. Bradlaugh visited this continent and lectured on various topics. A redeeming feature in Mr. Bradlaugh's character was the strong position he took in favor of the workingmen. Arrest of a Diamond Thief at Windsor—Part of the Plunder Recovered.

Windsor, Ont., Jan. 3.—Officer Nash, of Windsor, and Detective McDonnell, of Detroit, made a very clever capture here yesterday when they arested a young man named John Ladoceter charged with being connected with the robbery of $7,000 worth of diamonds from the Fifth Avenue Hotel, New York, on Nov. 29. Ladoucier came to Windsor a fewdays ago. A Chicago detective was in Wadsor Wednesday, but could not find hir. Serious Illness of Leonard Jerome.
London, Jan. 30.—Mr. Leonard Jerome's condition is such that he may live for weeks or only days. He has been confined to bed for two months in Brooke Street Hotel. He is gradually sinking. Lady Randolph Churchill, Mrs. Leslie, and Mrs. Trewen are with him much of the time. They do not consider the case serious, and the doctors talk of removing him to Brighton. This is impossible. He may die any day. Lady Churchill does not expect such a result, or she would send for Lord Randolph, who is at Monte Carlo.

T. W. Russell (Irish Unionist) said he would not oppose the principle of arbitration, but he must resist arbitration as a sort of curative lymph likely to effect a complete cure of the plan of compaign. The folly of the plan of compaign. The folly of the plan of campaign was the greatest the Parnellites had ever committed, and he could understand their anxiety to get rid of the costly business through the intervention of anybody, even through the Government whom they were accustomed to revile. The plan of campaign was not brought into operation to benefit the tenantry. Its basis and aim was a social revolution and destruction of landlordism. It was invented and used as a political machine. It was easy to talk about arbitration, but quite another affair to get awards carried out. In the case of the Gweedore arbitration the rents had been fixed through Father Mc-Fadden, but the tenants had not even paid the terms decided on by their own friend. What was the Land Court but a court of arbitration? What was the use of piling arbitration upon arbitration?

BARS IN DRUG STORES.

Bew Lefevre, could not have consulted Mr. Parnell or Mr. Gladstone. Nothing could be worse for the cause in which they were engaged than a resolution displaying to the English people the seamy side of one of the most contemptible political agitations ever adopted, and showing the Irish tenantry how illusory were the promises of support which the agitators made four years ago. Mr. Shaw-Lefevre should leave such work to men who were adepts at the game, and of Shiawassee county, wastt the Griswold House yesterday, having ome to the city to subpens a witness it a liquor case.

"Senator Wilcox, of our datrict, thinks the present Legislature will pas a uniform $300 license law for saloons, breveries and drug stores," said Sheriff Merice. "I don't live game of revolution since 1879, and was not the spon-Engish tenants? The plan of campaign was a move made in the game of revolution since 1879, and was not the spontaneous outcome of the rejection of Mr. Parnell's bill, as had been asserted. Mr. Balfour attacked the plan of campaign at great length and expressed indignation at the language which Mr. Shaw-Lefevre had used in reference to the Irish landlords. He granted that the Marquis of Clanricade had faults, but these, he contended, were not sufficient to justify the tended, were not sufficient to justify the plan of campaign. The tenants had a remedy in the Land Court for excessive rents, but had not availed themselves of it. If he were au Irish landlord he would beg his bread rather than submit to the plan of campaign.

Dr. Charles Tanner (Nationalist) here jumped to his feet, and, pointing at Mr. Balfour, exclaimed, "You are a canting snob!" but immediately afterward withdrew the expression.

The speaker warned Dr. Tanner against a repetition of the offense.

Monmouth, Pa., Jan. 30.—There is nothing to be done at the mines now but search for the remaining dead and care for the living. A legislative committee from Harrisburg is investigating the disaster. A call for assistance has been issued by all Pittsburg labor organizations and newspaper and business offices are receiving subscriptions. President Rae, of the United Iron Workers, says the gas pocket theory is ridiculous and the explosion occurred from a long accumulation of gas. It seems that some masked persons visited the hotel kept by Mrs. Phebe Jones, and administered with a cow's tail a dose of tar to her person and to that of John Staunton. The woman, who was half clad, when released ran towards Constable Lesterly's house, veiling "murder." The constable leased ran towards Constable Lesterlys house, yelling "murder." The constable repaired to the hotel and found furniture was lying about the room in confusion. No one save Staunton was to be seen, and he was not strictly sober. He was so plastered with tar as to be barely recognizable. Mrs. Jones was also covered with the thick solution of a similar nature.

OTTAWA, Jan. 31.—The political pot continues to bubble. The Cabinet meets in conneil daily. It met again yesterday at 4 o'clock. Government supporters and tariff men continue to come to Ottawa in person and to send telegrams to the Premier or his Ministers. The very best reason for believing that a general election will be decided upon within ten days is that the Premier, with all his prestige and persuasion, could not hold his Cabinet together through another session. PROLONGED CABINET CRISIS.

Not only are the Quebec Ministers at daggers drawn, but on every important question now up for decision scarcely three of the Ministers think alike. Mr. Tarte's threat that if the forces of McGreevyism are employed to crush Sir Adolphe Caron it will seal the fate of the Government, is known to have come from the Minister of Millitia himself, who "feels his oats" since he carried a bye-election single-handed, and he will not consent to be snuffed outby Sir Hector Langevin. Withreference to Sir Adolphe's threat, a Montreal M. P., one of Sir Hector Langevin's intimate friends, says that while the Minister of Public Works was in Quebec he discovered that the War Minister was the chief instigator of Mr. Tarte's articles on "McGreevyism." On returning to Ottawa Sir Hector informed the Premier of his discovery, and stated that either he or Caron would have to leave the Cabinet. Sir John took sides with Sir Hector, but when the matter came befor the Cabinet it was found that both Sir John Thompson and Mr. Chapleau sided with Sir Adolphe. Sir John still stands by Langevin, and so the matter stands pending the anxiously looked-for arrival of Sir Charles Tupper.

A DECISION EXPECTED TO-DAY.

A special Ottawa dispatch to the London Free Press says:

OTTAWA. Ont., Jan. 30.—The question of a dissolution of Parliament continues to engross public attention here. There is no doubt that this matter has been under the serious consideration of the Government for some days. It was felt that a decision would have been reached to-day meeting of the council. It is believed, however, that a definite conclusion may be looked for to morrow. SOUTH OXFORD LIBERALS.

WOODSOCK, Jan. 31.—The annual meeting of the South Riding of Oxford Reform Association was held at Mount Elgin Thursday. In spite of the unfavorable weather there was a very fair attendance of representative men of the party. Mr. Waterworth occupied the chair. He warned his friends in the constituency that we were on the eve of a general elec-tion, expressed his confidence in Mr. Laurier as leader of the party, and ex-pressed the hope that in this and every other riding Reformers would be ready for satisfied with receiving his lost property. On the platform were Hon. A. S. Hardy, Wm. Patterson, M.P.; Mr. Carpenter, M.P.P. for North Norfolk; Mr. H. H. Dewart, Toronto; President C. B. Heyd, of the South Brant Reform Association; Vice-President Wm. Roddick, Mayor S. G. Read, Jos. N. Shenstone, treasurer; Wm. Watt, jun., secretary of the South Brant Reform Association; Dr. Levi Secord and Mr. J. T. Hewitt. President Heyd opened the meeting with a practical address. Mr. H. H. Dewart, from the Toronto Young Liberal Club, was enthusiastically greeted end won the interest of his anditors by an excellent speech descriptive of the work accomplished by the Toronto Liberal Club and the advantages sure to accrue if one be formed and rightly conducted in Brantford. The next speaker was the Hon. Mr. Hardy, whose rising called forth round after round of hearty applause. His address was of unusual interest and value, dealing with many historical characters and principles of Liberalism, and followed by numerous reasons for and advantages to be derived from the contemplated association. Wm. Paterson, M. P., met with an ovation from his enthusiastic admirers. His clear description of the contrast between Tory and Liberal principles were especially good. Mayor Read briefly made known his entire sympathy with the movement and desire for its success.

Dr. L. Secord was then selected as provisional president and Mr. J. T. Hewitt as secretary. A call was made for the signa-

HON. DAVID MILLS AT COLLINGWOOD.

COLLINGWOOD, Jan. 31.—The meeting here last evening addressed by Hon. David Mills was a most gratifying success. Mr. Mills arrived in the morning from Toronto, and was received at the station by a deputation of leading Liberals, including E. Stewart, president of the Collingwood Reform Association; R. Bruce Burt, secretary; Dr. Aylesworth, John Birnic, W. J. Frame and others. Mr. Mills was driven at once to the residence of Mr. Stewart, being the guest of that gentleman during his stay. In the afternoon he took a drive about the town, seeing it for the first time. The meeting in the evening was held in the Music Hall, the largest hall in town, and the place was crowded to the doors, while many were turned away unable to find even standing room. The audience was composed of all classes. The gallery had been reserved for ladies and their escorts, and this space, like the rest of the hall, was filled to its utmost capacity. Mr. Stewart presided. The proceedings opened with an address from the Reform Association to Mr. Mills, welcoming him to Collingwood, and assuring him to the admiration of the people for his scholarly attainments and his eminent service to the country. Mr. Mills' speech was, as usual, scholarly, interesting and effective, and its close was marked by such an outburst of cheers as could only have been elicited by a speaker who had completely won the sympathy of the audience. The speech in the evening was the first of a series Mr. Mills proposes to deliver in different parts of the Province.

Subsequently a sally was made on the Fletcherland police station, and there a regular bombardment took place. The police, only numbering four, retaliated with stones which happened to be lying in the yard. At last, however, when the police were on the verge of being annibilated, the fire alarm was rung and a large posse of constables arrived in charge of Inspector Wedderburn. A communication was received from Grey, County Council asking co-operation in memorializing the Dominion Government for a refund of bonuses granted to railways by local municipalities to sid in construction of railways, since declared to be for the public interest. Petitioning Committee.

The London General Hospital account was received from Dr. Balfour, and showed a balance of $166 24 due.

Communication from the city of London laying before Council the portion of the mayor's inaugural address recommending that the City Council ask the County Council's permission to use the southern part of the court house square for a park. Referred ts Jail Committee.

The account of the equity solicitor, E. Jones Parke amounted to $481 92. Finance Committee.

The first report of the Educational Com-

Grenville, re Legislative grants to public and high schools, no action be taken; that G. G. German's letter be filed. Adopted. The Land Transfer Committee reported that it believed the Torrens system afforded. a cheap and safe method for the tranfer of a cheap and sate method for the transer of real estate, and recommended that the Ontario Legislature be petitioned to extend the provisions of the system to the whole Province, as now enjoyed in Toronto and York county. Adopted.

The report of the Jail Committee, S. McLeod, chairman, was adopted. It recommended:

McLeod, chairman, was adopted. It recommended:
That no action be taken in regard to the Prisoners' Aid Association: that the warden and clerk sign a petition to the Ontario Legislature, praying that the control at present held by county councils over jails be not curtailed; that no action be taken on the proposal to erect scales for the jail. and found everything exceptionally clean, there being at present nine maics and three females incarcerated.

Jos. Rosser's Prinsing Committee awarded the printing contract to Evans Bros., of the Strathroy Age, at $57 39. Adopted.
The report of the Petitioning Committee, D. Leitch, chairman, was adopted as follows:

lows:

That no action be taken on the communication of the Huron Council asking co-operation in regulating railway traffic; that no action be taken on R. P. Smith's motion to amend section 13 of 51 Victoria, chapter 28, to allow municipalities to summarize their accounts instatof a detailed statement; that in connection with A. P. McDougal's motion, we recommend that the Houst of Commons be petitioned to amend the General Railway Act to bring railway lands under the jurisdiction of the drainage laws; that the same Parliament be several provinces apply to Indian reservations to allow drains commenced in adjacent lands to be carried across such reservations and make the latter assessable for the amount by which they were benefitted.

The Agricultural Committee's report, submitted by Chairman A. W. Augustin was adopted. It recommended:

That the warden, M. McArther and J. H. Hodeles be the representatives of the county to the Western Fair Association, said delegates to meur no expense to the county; that Messess McDougald, Duffin and the chairman be a computer to consider amplications of students.

popularity in Canada."

This opinion bears much weight, as it comes from a disinterested source, and from a gentleman of high attainments in his profession. There are scores of other physicians in the Dominion who could add milar testimony, as many have used similar testimony, as many have used. Paine's Celery Compound in their practice. This scientific remedy is the great restorer and toner of the nervous system; it feeds the brain, giving it renewed power; it builds up the body in flesh; it gives tone and vigor to the digestive organs and the bloom of health to the pale face.

A genuine feeling of sorrow pervaded the Counsil chamber last evening during the short session of the Board of Education. Those present were: Chairman Jeffery, Trustees Dewar, Rowlands, Cook, Craig, Turner, Love, Childs, Allaster, Johnston, Yates, Brady, Tanton, deffers and Stephenson, and Secretary Abbott.

In calling the meeting to order Chairman Jeffery said: "This, as you know, is a special meeting of the Board called on account of the very unexpected death of our late publifo school inspector, Mr. J. B. Boyle. You will all shoubtless remember special meeting of the foard called on account of the very unexpected death of our late public school inspector, Mr. J. B. Boyle. You will all shoubtless remember that one week age to night he was in his accustomed place in this room. Some of us have at times had occasion to differ from him hat I think we were always careful to show every respect to him as an old and faithful servant. He was a man of pronounced ideas and always acted upon them, but he has doubtless during the past done much to advance the educational interests of the public schools of this city."

Acting one a suggestion from the chair the Board appointed Trustes Jeffery, Dewar, Stephenson, Johnston and Yates a committee to draft a resolution of condelence to the bereaved family and then adjourned at the pleasure of the chair.

On resuming Trustee Dewar presented the following address:

It having pleased God our Heavenly Father to remove from our midst James B. Boyle, Esq. for many years inspector of public schools of the city of London, and a gentleman honored and respected in every walk of life:

New York, Jan. S.I.—Special telegrams to Bradstreet's point out only a few instances where general trade has expanded noticeably during the past week. In industrial lines makers of seasonable dress goods at Philadelphia are running the machinery at full capacity, and in some instances being reported behind on orders. Jobbers in boots and shoes, hats and caps, drygoods and rubber goods at leading interior chies report those staples in fair demand, with rather less activity in groceries, drugs and hardware. The drain in winter wheat and the demand for general merchandise has stimulated wholesale houses to extend their territory. Though the West has stimulated general trade some Southern buyers of drygoods Though the West has stimulated general trade some Southern buyers of drygoods appear backward. THE ISSUE CLEARED UP. The letters of Secretary Blaine, of the United States Government, published in another column of to-day's ADVERTISER, must set at rest all question as to the attitude of our United States neighbors on the reciprocity question.

Interested parties, doubtless with the view of influencing the coming Dominion elections, have been circulating the idea that a treaty of unrestricted reciprocity between Canada and the United States was on the cards, and that the Canadian, British and United States Governments have it under consideration.

There is no solid foundation for this

The British Minister, it appears, recently informally approached Secretary Blaine on the trade question. He got an answer, and it was that so soon as he was ready the United States Government would be ready to discuss the question of unrestricted trade between Canada and the States. Sir Julian made no further approaches. Secretary Blaine now authorizes the contradiction of the report that reciprocity negotiations of any kind are under way, and further asserts that no proposition looking to reciprocity in natural products only will be entertained by the United States Government. This is the Republican attitude in regard to reciprocity with Canada. It is, we believe, the So does the movement in Canada for the attitude of the Democrats also. There is, indeed, no party in the States in favor of one-sided and unrestricted reciprocity. The Canadian restrictionists may as well

HOW TO GET OUT THE VOTE. What, on the eve of a general election, do he political leaders in both parties detest? Is it not the time, expense and trouble incident to getting out the vote?

From the moment that dissolution is announced down to 5 o'clock on polling day hundreds of the best men in every community will be harassed and worried in their endeavors to secure what they believe to be the triumph of right principles.

All this turmoil is undertaken in a coun try where everyone is supposed to be educated to think and to act for himself, and to be able to exercise his franchise when opportunity is presented.

This canvassing, negotiating, importun ing is all wrong.

Every voter should be obliged to poll his own vote. Why should he not? Is it not a sacred trust, reposed in him by the community collectively, to be exercised for its benefit? What a world of trouble, of temptation to ask for and to give bribes, of canvassing, of holding back till sent for, the system of obligatory voting would abolish ! Assuredly it is in the best interests of the country, of the individual, and of the political parties to bring about a system which shall have for its object the making of every man responsible for the polling of his own vote. We have not heard of one valid reason why this reform should not be decreed and carried out at as early a date as possible.

OUR BEST FAMILIES.

OUR BEST FAMILIES.

By this term is certainly not meant merely rich families. Some rich families are physically and morally superior, by the source of the state of the source of the so capsized and three salors, which are the stardy, and other soft-handed people who live in cities are also often lacking in the physical vigor which is essential to a good family stock. Our best families are the sturdy, hard-working, capable and trustworthy people who are generally in comfortable circumstances, simply because their qualities are those which command reasonable material as well as moral success. The industrious and respected, though seldom rich or highly educated, who work with their hands, hold town and county offices, lead in village enterprises, are independent, upright and robust—these are the best families in the country. The one kind of family which ought especially to be multiplied and perpetuated is the family in which gentle manners, cultivated tastes and honorable sentiments are hereditary. Our government should show that it cannot only ameliorate the average lot, but also produce as the generations pass a arger proportion of highly-cultivated peo ple than any other form of government.

This is the object. What are the means

The first is country life. The aristocratic and noble families of modern Europe still have their principal seats in the country, and go to town only for a few months of the year. These customs maintain vigor of body and equability of mind. Study the family history of the actual leaders, for the time being, in business and the professions in any city, and it will be found that a large proportion of them were country-bred. Country breeding gives a vigor and an en-durance which in the long run outweigh all city advantages, and enable well-endowed country boys to outstrip their city-bred

A very practical question is how to resist n the interest of the family the tendency to live in cities and towns. During the pas 30 years there has been a great increase in the number of well-to-do families using two ouses, and the tendency in such families as been to spend a longer and longer time in the country or by the seaside. There must also be noticed the adoption of suburban life by great numbers of families both poor and well-to-do, the heads of which must do their daily work in cities. It can hardly be too often repeated that to off-set the evil effects of in-door occupations, every city family which aspires to vigor and permanence should assiduously seek fresh air and out-of-door pleasures or occupations. European nobilities have always been an agricultural class, loving good land and good crops, rejoicing in horses, dogs and cattle, and delighting in hunting fishing, shooting, racing and all other forms of open-air sport. Our best families are not to be found in large and costly houses built on parrow lots. Another means of producing whatsoever things are good in a nation's best products its families—is a permanent abiding place. The identification of a family with a place is comparatively rare, and to this must be attributed the loss of social dignity and repose and the diminution of local pride and public spirit. In any village or rural town permanent family dwelling is always an object of interest and satisfaction; and to ocure, keep and transmit such a hometead is a laudable family ambition. The madic habits of our population robs family life of its dignity and worth. Still, n many cases a wholesome love of home prevails, and instances are increasing where prosperous men who have made money in business or by their professions return to the places where their ancestors lived and repossess themselves of ancestral farms which had passed into other hands.

PERSONAL AND GENERAL. -General Booth's scheme for the amelioration of the condition of the masses in old world cities thrives by opposition.

-Leading merchants say that a general election this spring would demoralize business, but the Ottawa Conservative mana grant of from $3,000 to $6,000 to provide work for the large number of workmen now out of employment in that city. ADVERTISER is truly sorry to learn that even in Hamilton, despite the protestations of the Spectator, the high tax policy fails to perform the contract entered into by its projectors to provide plenty of work at good wages to everyone willing to work.

This is rather more readable than the average paper-covered novel, though it compels the reader to associate with a famous woman (who gives no evidence in her conversation of the qualities which win fame), and with at least two men who have loss their good name. —It is wonderful how soon, in these progressive days, science comes to the aid of man when nature fails him. Gum arabic, which was once universally used, has bewatch over the youths of disorderly carriage, and see that they behave them selves comelie, and use such raps and blows as in his discretion meet."

Lippincott's Magazine. (Philadelphia: J. B. Lippincott & Co.) R. H. Stoddard, in his essay on Thomas Buchanan Read, voices the thought of very many when he voices the thought of very many when he says: "A reader of books all my life long, beginning, I may say, almost before I knew what books were, I have always wondered how the majority of the people continue to exist, as they do, without them." Julian Hawthorne makes his description of the Kew Gardens in England a plea for the establishment of "An American Kew." Joaquin Miller tells in picturesque language of "The Mountain-Mirage." He has the art of putting things vividly. "Now, this Salmon River," he says, "was, is, and will be to the end of all rivers, one of the roughest, swiftest and ruggedest in all the mountains of Idaho, and that is saying a heap. Everything had to be carried into the new mines on the backs of either men or mules. The trail twisted and curved and corkscrewed and clung and writhed like a serpent in torment on the rocky and almost perpendicular bluff. It hung in the air along the shelving and sliding banks hundreds of feet above the foaming waters. If a mule lost his foothold, good-bye mule, good-bye man!"

A singular scene was enacted in the cemetery at Wolverhampton on Monday week. A coffin containing the body of a woman was being lowered into a rather deep grave, and on reaching the bottom a peculiar noise was heard. The noise was really caused by the crunching of the hard frozen earth beneath the weight of the coffin, but the relatives of the deceased maintained that the noise came from inside the coffin, and the sexton and manager of the cemetery had to descend into the grave and rap several times on the lid without receiving any reply before the sorrowing friends were satisfied.

During the past few days a large number of most daring burgiaries, have been perpetrated in South London, in which the thieves have in every instance succeeded in getting clear away with their booty. Early on Sunday morning the premises of Measrs. Cohen & Co., tailors, Westminster Bridge road, were entered, and three suits of clothes, several other articles and a small sum of money stolen. The police found on the floor pieces of a half-smoked cigar, an empty whisky bottle and several sandwiches, the thieves having evidently enjoyed themselves. They, however, left the following note behind:

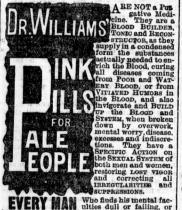

Your clothes, Mr. Cohen, are good and fit well—

Your clothes, Mr. Cohen, are good and fit well— As well as the money we've sneaked from your till:

The shooting mania has reached No. 6 ward, and considerable sly target practice has been going on of late. As a result, a match was arranged, two squads of four each, at a 6-inch target, 5-8 bull's eye, under Captains McPherson and Samons. There were five rounds, ten shots each, with a possible of 50 points for each round. The result was a good exhibition of steady shooting, the final result being only nine points, in favor of Captain McPherson's men. The scres are attached:

On every hand satisfaction has been expressed with the way in which the refreshment stand has been managed. The great majority of sportsmen preferred taking their meals at the club house rather than come to the city.

Sportsmen throughout the State will be pained to learn of the death of John, or 'Jack,' Jardine, for no one ever spoke to or of him except by the familiar name of 'Jack,' and his friends and acquaintances were almost unnumbered. For the past fifteen years he has been a prominent gentleman sportsman with the rod and gun, and was for a time a deputy game warden, doing excellent work in enforcing the game laws. He died yesterday morning at his residence on Fourth street.—

BASEBALL. Sloux City will not be in the Western Baseball Association the coming season. The stockholders have decided not to put a team in the field. The club came out of last season $6,000 in debt. If there are no further desertions the St. Paul and Minneapolis managers favor the admission of Grand Rapids, Mich., as being the nearest of the applicants to the old circuit. If, however, Lincoln and Denver can be induced to withdraw, Detroit, Toledo and Indianapolis will be invited to fill the three vacancies.

His Mind Was Impaired.

FORT WORTH, Tex., Jan. 30.—The jury in the case of Rev. Dr. William Mitchell, a Presbyterian minister, charged with forgery, last night brought in a verdict of guilty and fixed his punishment at two years in the penitentiary. The verdict is a surprise, as Dr. Mitchell's bitterest enemies admit that his mind was impaired.

Accident to an Adelaide Farmer.

STRATHROY, Jan. 31.—A. very unfortunate accident happened to Mr. Dan. Campbell, a highly respected farmer of Adelaide, while teaming wood into town yesterday morning. He was sitting on the front tier of a heavy load, and when coming down Scott's hill the supports gave way, causing Campbell and the wood to fall between the horses. The wheels passed over his left arm and right leg, making two very bad and painful breaks. He was also badly cut and bruised by the wood. Drs. McCabe, Hoare and Thompson attended his wounds. He is likely to recover.

Buffalo Cattle Men Kiok.

Lockrokt, N. Y., Jan. 31.—The Secretary of Agriculture has issued an order directing that all live stock entering this district from Canada should be inspected and guaranteed at Suspension Bridge, instead of at East Bufalo, as Feretofore. This will necessitate the rebuilding and repairing of the old cattle sheds at Suspension Bridge by the railroads centering there, and will compel considerable outlay on the part of the New York Central and Eric roads. The Buflalo cattle dealers and others interested in the live stock market are making a big kick on the change. A committee has been appointed to visit Washington and try to have the secretary of Agricultural rescind the order.

Tory Levalty Very Flexible.

Sol. White, the good Tory M.P.P. for North Essex, has been delivering an address before the Michigan club, of Detroit. He not only comes out for reciprocity in trade between the two countries, but he goes much further, and declares that, "we should unite upon fair terms, and become one grand country on this continent." -[Pachange.

While the Empire is yelling that everyone is a traitor and annexationist who opposes its restrictionist masters, the above extract shows how one of its Tory pets talks openly in Detroit. Sol's blatant annexationism is very objectionable, but we fail to notice that the Empire has yet read him out of the party. Had some Liberal talked in that way in Detroit, there would have been a howl from the Tory press which would have shook the raiters of the Dominion from Vancouver to Cape Breton. But as it comes from one of Mr. Meredith's and Sir John's lieutenents, why—it's all right! Tory loyalty was all-ways very liexible.—[Galt Reformer.

Evangelist Macdonalds Meetings.

The seating capacity of the Sunday School room of King Street Presbyterian Church having been found inadequate to accommodate the increasing attendance at Evangelist Macdonald's meetings, the services of last evening were held in the auditorium of the church. The song service, prior to the opening of the regular meeting, was of a pieasing nature, and the congregation joined in heartily with the choir. Mr. Macdonald's discourse took the form of an illustrative address on "The New Birth," taking as his text, John, ili.: "Jesus answered and said unto him, except a man be born again he cannot see the kingdom of God." The subject in its various phrases, from the time a sinner was convicted of his sin until he was safe in Christ, was dealt with by the evangelist in an able and affecting manner, each step being impressed on the hearers by some fitting illustration. The unsaved were strongly warned by Mr. Macdonald in the course of his remarks of their danger, and their need of repentance was pointed out in a clear way: hypocrites received a just criticism at his hands, and true Christians were encouraged to go forward in the fight. A large congregation is expected to be present his evening, when Mr. Macdonald will preach in Victoria Hall.

Attributed to the Continuous Presence of Ferns and Plants.

Washington, Jan. 30.—Mrs. Harrison has nearly recovered from her recent attack of diphtheretic sore throat, but Mrs. McKee has been taken ill with a severe case of tonsilitis. Dr. Frank A. Gardner, after examining the premises carefully, has decided that much of the sickness at the White House is due to the almost continuous presence of the large ferns and plants used in decorating the rooms on the occasions of dinners and receptions. The boxes in which they grow contain a large quantity of earth, which exhales odors that are not beneficial, and the plants accumulate an unhealthy amount of dampness. It was but a week or so ago that the decorations were allowed to remain in the house for four days, until the air in the east room became as heavy and oppressive as that in a greenhouse, and the windows reeked with moisture.

Manston, who had just loosened himself from Edward's grasp, seemed at this moment to renounce his intestion of pushing the conflict to the end. I give it all up for life—dear life!" he cried with a hoarse laugh. "A reckless man as a dozen lives—see how I'll baffle you all yet!"
He rushed out of the buse, but no further. The boast was his ast. In one half a winter more he was heliess in the hands minute more he was helpess in the hands

Edward staggered to hisfeet, and paused to recover his breath. His thoughts had never forsaken Cytherea, and his first act never forsaken cytherea, and his first act was now to hasten up the lane after her. She had not gone far. He found her leaning upon a bank by the roadside, where she had flung herself down in sheer exhaustion. He ran up and lifted her in his arms and thus aided she was embled to stand upright—clinging to him. They walked slowly towards the house. The distressing sensation o whose wife she was could not entirely dissent the resuscitated pleasure he felt at he grateful recognition of him, and her conting seizure of his arm for support. He coveyed her carefully to the house.

A quarter of an hour laser, whilst she was sitting in a partially ecovered, half-dozing state in an armchair, Edward beside her waiting anxiously until Graye should

Old and dry mud-splashes frm long-forgotten rains distigured its whels and sides; the varnish and paint had sen scratched and dim; ornament had long been forgotten in a restless contemplation if use. Three men sat on the seat, the midle one being Manston. His hands were bound in front of him, his eyes were set disctly forward, his countenance pallid, hardund fixed.

springrove told Cytheres of Manston's rime in a few short words. He now said solemnly, "He is to die."

"And I cannot mourn for him," she replied with a shudder, leaning back and covering her face with her lands.

In the silence that followed the two short remarks, Springrove watched the cart round the corner, and heardthe rattle of its wheels gradually dying away as it rolled in the direction of the county lown.

CHAPTER XXI.

CHAPTER AXI.

THE EVENTS OF EIGHTEEN HOURS.

I. March the twenty-inth. Noon.
Exactly seven days after Edward Springrove had seen the man with the bundle of straw walking down the streets of Troominster, old Farmer Springrove paid a visit to the county-town, twenty miles off. He stood on the edge of the pavement, talking to his friend, Farmer Baker.

There was a page in their discourse.

There was a pause in their discourse.
Mr. Springrove was looking down the street at some object which had attracted his attention. "Ah, 'tis what we shall all come he muttered.

to, he muttered.

The other looked in the same direction.

"True, neighbor Springrove; true."

Two men, advancing one behind the other in the middle of the road were what the farmers referred to. They were carpenters, and bore on their shoulders an empty offin covered by a thin black cloth.

"I always feel a satisfaction at being breasted by such a sight as that," said Springrove, still regarding the men's sad burden. "I call it a sort of medicine."

"And it is medicine. . . I have not heard of anybody being ill up this way lately? D' seem as if the person died suddenly."

"May be so. Ah, Baker, we say sudden death, don't we? But there's no difference in their nature between sudden death and death of any other sort. There's no such thing as a random snapping off of what was laid down to has longer. We only suddenly light upon an end—thoughfully formed as any other—which has been existing at that very same point from the beginning, though unseen by us to be so soon."

"It is just a discovery to your own mind, and not an alteration in the Lord's."

"That's it. Unexpected is not as to the thing, but as to our sight."

"Now you'll hardly believe me, neighbor, but this little scene in front of us makes me feel less anxious bout pushing on wi' that threshing and winnowing next week, that I was speaking about. Why should we not stand still, says I to myself, and fling a quiet eye upon the Whys and the Wherefore, before the end of it all, and we go down into the mouldering place, and are forgotten."

"Tis a feeling that will come. But

are forgotten."
"Tis a feeling that will come. But t'won't bear looking into. There's a backward currant in the world, and we must do ward currant in the world, and we must do our utmost to advance in order just to bide where we be. But, Baker, they're turning in here with the coffin, look."

The two carpenters had borne their lead into a lane close at hand. The farmers, in common with others, turned and watched them along the lane.

common with others, takes to them along the lane.

"Tis a man's coffin, and a tali man's too," continued Farmer Springrove. "His was a fine frame, wheever he was."

"A very plain box for the poor soul—just the rough elm, you see." The corner of the cioth had blown aside.

"Yes, for a very poor man, Well, death's all the less insult to him. I have often thought how much smaller the richer class are made to look than the poor on extreme occasions like this. Perhaps the greatest of reconcilers of a thoughtful mind to poverty—and I speak from experience—is the reconcilers of a thoughtful mind to poverty—and I speak from experience—is the grand quietness it possesses him with when the uncertainty of his life shows itself more vividly than usual.

As Springrove finished speaking, the bearers of the coffin went across a graveled square facing the end of the lane, and approached the grim and heavy archway. They paused beneath it, rang a bell, and watted. Over the archway was written in Egyp-Over the action tian capitals,

COUNTY JAIL.

COUNTY JAIL.

A small rectangular wicket, which was constructed in one or two iron-studded doors, was opened from the inside. The men severally stepped over the threshold, the coffin dragged its melancholy length through the aperture, and they both entered the court, and were covered from sight.

"Sombody in jail, then?"

"Yes, one of the prisoners," said a boy, scudding by at the moment, and who passed on whistling.

"Do you know the name of the man who is dead?" inquired Baker of a third bystander.

"Yes, 'it's all over town—surely you know, Mr. Springrove? Why, Manston, Miss Aldelyffe's steward. He was found dead the first thing this morning. He had hung himself behind the door of his cell, in some way, by a handkerchief and some some way, by a handkerchief and some strips of his clothes. The turnkey says his features were scarcely changed, as he looked at him with the early sunlight shining in at the grating upon him. He has left a complete account of the murder, and all that led to it. So there's an end of him."

It was perfectly true; Manston was dead. The previous day he had been allowed the use of writing materials, and occupied himself for nearly seven hours in preparing the following confession,

"Having found a man's life to be a wretchedly conceived scheme, I renounce it and to cause no further trouble, I write down the facts connected with my past pro-down the facts connected with my past proceedings.

"After thanking God, on first entering my house, on the night of the fire at Carriford, for my release from bondage to a woman I detested, I went a second time, to the scene of the disaster, and, finding that, nothing could be done by remaining there, shortly afterwards I returned home again in the company of Mr. Raunham.

He parted from me at the steps of my porch, and went back towards the rectory. Whilst I still stood at the door, musing on my strange deliverance, I saw a figure advance from the shadow of the park trees. It was the figure of a woman.

"When she came near, the twilight was sufficient to show me sher attree; it was a

"When she came near, the twilight was sufficient to show me sher attire; it was a cloak reaching to the bottom of her dress, and a thick veil covering her face. These features, tegether with her size and gait, aided also by a flash of perception as to the chain of events which had saved her life, told me that she was my wife Eunice.

Refuse in the River.

Some of the ratepayers living on the bank of the river near the Ball Electric Light Company's station presented their grievances before a meeting of No. 2 Committee last evening. They charged the company with dumping refuse into the river, thereby blocking the channel and causing it to overflow, to the damage of adjacent property. The committee decided to order the removal of the deposit, and notify the offenders to cease such practice, as it was a contravention of the bylaw. The engineer and member for the ward will report on the complaint. George Elliott, who paid $27 frontage tax for a sidewalk on Quebec street before amalgamation, and as it has since been torn up, desires a rebate. The city solicitor's opinion on the frontage tax bylaw will be obtained. Ald. Bartlett and Mayor Taylor were the absentees of the meeting.

Gambetta's Mother.

The story of the death of the mother of Gambetta, the great statesman of the third French Republic, which has just been related by his friend, M. Emmanuel Arene, is one of rare pathos, and at the same time one of great simplicity. Gambetta's parents were exceedingly simple country people; his father was a tradesman of Cahors, in Southern France. After Gambetta became a famous man in France, his father and mother went to live at Nice, where they were faithfully cared for by an old servant, and where they were often visited by their famous son.

Toward the end of his career, and when he was at the height of his power, being in fact, though not in title, the head of the Republic, Gambetta's mother was seized with a sudden desire to go to Paris. "I must see Leon," she said.

Her husband protested, and the womanservant, Miette, threw up her hands in horror. "To Paris, madame, at this time of year!" It was winter. "There's no sense in it!"

There was no sense in it, but Madame Gambetta was determined to go. She went to the train with more of vigor than she had shown for years, and traveled straight to Paris.

There she went to the house of her daughter, and arrived quite prestrated 2. Find our property, and don't meddle with it except where you are sure after serious consideration, that you can better it. Protestant Power Up to 1853, the Edict Board of Japan made it a capital offense for a Christian to set foot on the island empire. Now there are 30,000 professed converts and 17,000 children in Sunday schools. One in 28 of the elect members of the new Parliament is a Christian church member. As the Christians of Japan number but 1 to 1,200 of the population, it will be seen that the proportion of Christian members of Parliament is 43 times as great. This impresses us as one of the most remarkable signs of the power of Protestant missions in Japan. The contributions of native converts were about $50,000 last year, nearly $2 a head!

"Wives and Daughters," edited by Mrs. John Cameron and Miss Ethelwyn Wetherald, is a publication that shows how our Canadian cousins are marching on in their day and generation to the great empire and beautiful land of men and women. We live at present in the men's world; we hope never at present in the men's world, though we think it would perhaps be fully as good as the men's; but one bisected globe is sufficient. What we want to see is the men and women's What we want to see is the men and women sworld, and its luminous orb rises even now above the horizon. This new monthly will help to hasten that luminary toward its proper place in the zenith, for the new mapazine conserves the home idea, and tells how to make home what it should be in small and great affairs alike. It has a winsome kindliness of visage, and we believe will become the attached friend of all Canadian in utterances, and to Yankee women also if they will but have the wit and wisdom to subscribe. Boundary Lines.

Those who have occasion to sleep with children will appreciate the afflictions of a little boy who said Georgie didn't leave him room to sleep in; and when asked if Georgie didn't give him half of the bed, replied, "Yes, but he takes his half out of the middle, and I have to sleep on both sides of him." Readers of the House-keeper's Weekly whose little bedfellows have "taken their half out of the middle" may be interested in the experience of a may be interested in the experience of a mother who tells in Babyhood of the way she adopts to circumvent a sweet little

"Little Gracie," she writes, rolls about in her sleep like a billiard ball. Sometimes it is her curly head that I find softly nestled against my cheek; sometimes her feet are thrown across my cheat with as much freedom as her little arms, that pull at my heartstrings in a way that defies resistance when they give ne "love taps" in her dreams. I think that waim heart is more grateful even for this spontaneous is more grateful even for this spontaneous when they give ne "love taps" in her dreams. I think that wam heart is more grateful even for this spontaneous and unconscious affection of a child than the demonstrations we expect in waking hours. But aside from the romance of such a charming fellowship there are calm reasons for regarding the pleasure it affords in the light of a dissipation not to be indulged in too freely. A crib for each little child is well, but not always practicable, and the expedient that we have tried serves a very good purpose when it becomes necessary for two young children to occupy the same bed, or when an older person is called upon to share his couch with a little chick too young to lie still. The device is simple enough to have occurred to anyone, but not every one with sleep thus broken has thought of it, or taken the trouble to try it.

What is wanted is a long piece of wood, wrapped with cloth and placed under the bedclothes, lengthwise of the bed, to serve as a gentle reminder of boundary lines. A curtain pole makes a good foundation, and one is not far to seek in a house where the heavier poles have been replaced by lighter ones. If you buy something for the purpose, a light piece of joist is just the thing. It need not be more than four or five inches thick, after being wrapped in an extra sheet or blanket, and this is not too high for the warm dimpled hands to reach across for little "love taps." One appreciates them all the more with merves refreshed by sound unbroken sleep.—[Housekeeper's Weekly.

Mrs. Cleveland's Popularity.

It is thought that a very important factor in the next Presidential campaing will be the great and growing popularity of Mrs. Cleveland. When a committee, formed of a number of the rich a leader whose judgment is admirable and whose aim is high. Her thorough knowledge of the world and unvarying common-sense are constantly attracting comment. When a committee, formed of a number of the rich and charitable women of New York, submitted to Mrs. Cleveland a list of presents which they proposed to give to poor children who were to attend a charitable Christmas party, Mrs. Cleveland at once objected to nearly everything on the programme. The presents were to have been candy, sweetmeats, ornamental gandy little shawl-pins. The selection of these gifts indicated the generally lofty and intellectual level of the ideas which New York society women exhibit on state occasions. Mrs. Cleveland pointed out that there was a certain measure of grim and cruel satire in giving candy to a child who had nothing to eat, button-hooks to a street gamin who had no leots and report levies and savel the program of potatoes, throw, witbout particular of the same of the great outside world.—[Housekeeper's amount of potatoes, throw, witbout particular of potatoes, throw, witbout particular of potatoes, throw, witbout particular of potatoes, throw without particular of pa pointed out that there was a certain measure of grim and cruel satire in giving candy to a child who had nothing to eat, button-hooks to a street gamin who had no boots, and paper-knives and shawl-pins to children who could not read and who had never been able to indulge in the wild and dissolute extravagance of a shawl. So the serseless mass of trinkets and luxuries were exchanged for woolen stockings, warm caps and jackets, gloves, and the like. They were distributed in a fashion that was also due to Mrs. Cleveland's accurate intuition in such matters. The presrate intuition in such matters. The presents were all laid on a table and the children were closely watched. Whatever their eves sought most eagerly was noted, and that object became the child's Christmas present. Home Science Clubs. The work of Mrs. Ellen S. Richards, of the Massachusetts School of Technology, and her co-laborer, Mrs. Mary Hinman Abel, in behalf of the advancement of the knowledge of domestic science, is well known. In a paper recently presented by Mrs. Richards before the Intercollegiate Alumanæ Association on "The Relation of College Women to Progress and Domestic Science," she prophesied that before long a department of domestic science would be a part of the curriculum of every college department of domestic science would be a part of the curriculum of every college admitting female students. She said:

First, the subject should be put in the college curriculum on a par with other science and as a summing up of all the science teaching of the coarse; for chemistry, physics, physiology, biology, and especially bacteriology, are only the stepping-stones of sanitary science. Therefore, in the junior or senior year, after the student has a good groundwork of these sciences, there should be given a course of at least two lectures a week and four hours of practical work, the lectures to treat of:

1. The house and its foundations and surroundings from a sanitary view point, as well as an architectural one.

roundings from a sanitary view point, as well as an architectural one.

2. The mechanical apparatus of the house, heating, lighting, ventilation, drainage, etc., including methods of testing their efficiency.

3. Furnishing and general care of a house, including the chemistry of cleaning.

4. Food and clothing of a family, applied physiology, chemisty of food, and nutrition.

5. Relation of domestic service to the general question of labor, with a discussion of present conditions and proposed resorms.

The practical work should consist of:

1. Visits of inspection, accompanied by the instructor, to houses in process of construction, to those of good and bad types, of both old and new.

4. Practical work and original investigation in the laboratory of sanitary chemistry.

Think you a young woman, after a year of this study, will be less fitted to manage a modern household than one who has made beds, washed dishes, or learned darning all through her college course? I venture to say that no work more worthy of the collegiate alumna or more far reaching in its possibilities for good can be undertaken than the formation of Home Lesace Clubs, not only by every association branch, but wherever half a dozen women can be found with patience and courage enough to study the local conditions affecting home life.

It is this scientific study, and the care that will follow as a natural result of this study, that will remove many of the evils in American homes and in the lives of American womed. The division of time will be much more rational, and the understanding of principles will make much of the feeble, blind work now done in our about a want of time we know that precious hours are wasted, or so misused as to be practically wasted. When the Home Science Clubs rival in number the literary and progressive clubs, we will have fewer crazy cushions, fewer diagraphs and progressive clubs, we will have fewer crazy cushions, fewer diagraphs and progressive clubs, we will have fewer crazy cushions, fewer drapries at our windows, fewer pieces of bric-a-brac, fewer chairs held together by ribbon bows.

Misapplied energy is the cause of much of the inartistic, tawdry, unhealthy surroundings that make both homes and life a snare and a burden to many housekeepers.

LETTER BOX.

DEAR AUNT PRUDENCE:

I can't tell you how much pleasure it gives me to think you would have my letter printed with the rest of my cousins' letters. How I wish I could see you and have a chat with you. I must tell you we had a good time on Christmas. We all went down to Auntie Maggie's. We had a nice dinner and had a good time. Ma and pa went to church in the evening to hear the saints preach. Ma says they were nice singers. You know she loves to hear any-body sing and can sing some herself; so can all of us little ones. Oh, yes, I almost forgot tell you that old Santa Claus came to put good things in our stockings. We got some candy and gum and a set of beads, and if you come to see us I will lend them to you, for I know you would want to try them on. Well, Aunt Prudence, I am going to write to two of my other aunties that live in Canada. I have eight aunties besides you, and have evers so many cousins. My little brother Robie is a great boy to play horse. Pa has a nice colt and Robie calls it his. Is name is St. Nicholas. He thinks she is the nicest colt he ever saw. Pa is trying to get somebody else to take the ADVERTISER too, and I guess he will. I guess I will have to bring my letter to a close, so good-bye from your loving niece.

[I am very glad to hear from, you again, Julia. You letter was very interesting to me.

to you. ______ [I am very glad to hear from you again, Julia. You letter was very interesting to me. If you had ever so many cousins, you have a great many more now, for of course all the lite boys and girls who become my nephews and nieces must be your cousins if you have the same aunty. I am glad you had such a good time on Christmas. AUNY PRUBENCE.]

DEAR AUNT PRUDENCE:
You will wonder at my long delay in writing after what I intimated in my last, but he truth is, I have been so busy preparing for the entrance that I had not time even to read the lovely little letters from your young correspondents, Now that the fiesy ordeal is over, I am glad to be able to say that my marks were among the highest given in the riding. I will now busy myself with those studies necessary for the intermediate, which I will try as soon as I find myself qualified. Pa says I may try at the end of the year and get two or three subscribers for the Advertriser. I will do my best on your account. Very truly yours, Joseph NEPHEW.

If am very proud to know that one of my nephews has been distinguishing himself. I am glad you are not like one boy I know who escapes 'the fiery ordeal' by staying home from the exams. Thank you for trying to get new subscribers for the Advertiser. The editor tells me to send you his thanks also.—

AUNT PRUDENCE.

DEAR AUNT PRUDENCE:
You wanted me to write again and tell you about gophers. Well, they are something similar to the chipmunks in Ontario, only twice as large, and they do much harm, for they destroy fields of corn and lots of other grain. Their color is a gray with stripes of white on their back. They have holes in the ground and are very quick; little boys and girls can seldom eatch them. But sometimes little boys and girls gat seldom eatch them. But sometimes little boys and girls gat them in their holes and nour in a rail of water and get them out, then cut off their tails, and they get 2 cents for each tail. It seems funny to see people take gophers' tails to sell. Yes, I think my white cat would get the prize; but one day it got sick and my Uncle Elmer killed it. My mamma is away to-day and I am writing before she gets home. I will close now, for I want to iron Dolly's clothes. From your leving niece, Marion Monames, Cortlandt, S. Dak.
IThat is very interesting about the gophers.

That is very interesting about the gophers, Marion. But don't you think it is cruel to cut off their tails. Poor little kitty, I am so sorry you had to be killed.—AUNT PRUDENCE.]

BROOKDALE, Jan. 6, 1891.

DEAR AUNT PRUDENCE:

I have written to you before, and as you asked which of my studies I liked the best, I thought I would write again. Well, I like geography and arithmetic. I have a cat and I call her Tabby, and she is quite au old pet. There has not been hardly any sleighing here this year. I milk our two cows most of the time. Well, I will close this long letter. From Katie C. L. McDonald, [It seems strange, but girls generally are poor at arithmetic and dislike it, while boys are oftener fond of it. Of course there are exceptions to every rule, but the mathemathical part of a boy's brain is likely to be better developed than his sister's.—Aunt Prudence.]

CORTLANDT, Jan. 6, 1891.

DEAR AUNT PRUDENCE:

I am going to write you about blizzards. The winters of '85 and '87 were very severe, but since then the winters have been quite mild and pleasant. There is not any snow, and we have not had a blizzard this winter. The worst blizzard ever known in Dakota was on Jan. 12, 1887, and there was a great many lives lost. In the morning it were very warm and calm, and all at once it turned cold and began to blow very hard. The snow was so line and thick in the air that we could not see there feet from 'ne door. The men could not get to the stable to take care of the stock. The storm lasted all day and night. The reason we have so many blizzards is that when it snows the air mosphere is so cold the snow freezes and is so fine it blows easily. Then there are no trees to break the force of the wind, and this is a very windy country. We do not have school in this country during the winter because of the blizzards, but we go to school in the sumer. I am in the Fourth book, and expect to goin the Fifth and also to study history. When school starts I am to study reading, arithmetic, geography, physiology and spelling. I will close. From your affectionate niece.

JANE MCNAMES. CORTLANDT, Jan. 6, 1891.

I am sure all my boys and girls will know more about the blizzards of Dakota than they ever did before. Both your own letter and your sister's are of the sort that please me very much.—AUNT PRUDENCE.]

BRANDON, Man., Jan. 8. Brandon, Man., Jan. 8.

DEAR AUNT PRUDENCE:
When I saw you had so many nieces. I thought I would like to be one of them too. We have taken the Advertiser ever since I can remember. Once it was dropped, but did not stay long out of our paper rack. Generally at this time of the year the snow lies about three teet deep on the ground, but this year there is only aslight sprinkling. Not even the oldest pioneer can remember seeing such weather in Manitoba. The name of our farm in the Sioux Indian is "Magaksecha Ska." What do you suppose it is in English! I would like to know what kind of gophers there are in Dakota. We have two kinds here and many other animals never seen in Ontario. Wishing long life to the Advertiser and Wives and Daughters, I remain your loving nice.

I have excived some thousands of liattering testimonials from those who have used it as in more than a restorative of gray or faded hair; also as promoter of the growth and great many of my correspondents ask the questions: "Why is my hair turning gray so early! Why is my hair falling out? As it is impossible for me to answer every one, I take the liberty of encroaching on your valuable space to make a general reply. A great many persons do not seem to be aware that excessive washing and rubbing is injurious to the growth of the hair; such is the case, however. Constant washing and rubbing the scalp and hair causes over irritation and removes the oily substance which gives strength to the hair; undue heat caused by the wearing of heavy headgear is also injurious. "Quick: Leave on your work: we must be moving?"

Something in his voice made the men instantly abandon the work and wheel about. One of them uttered a loud ex-clamation and threw down his hammer. "Pick that up again, and keep still," said Ransom quietly.

Caldwell Ransom arrived at Lake Village with a fund of professional knowledge in his head, a Polytechnic School diploma in his pocket, and in his brave young heart a great determination to succeed.

When he began work assistant engineer of the Addington city waterworks, he found himself at once opposed to a score or so of rude men who could not comprehend his knowledge, cared not a straw for his diploma, and were more than ready to render success impossible.

The 21 laborers—heavy, muscular, broadbacked, hard-handed follows—looked with contemptuous dislike upon the slender young man of 23 years, with his refined face and gentle manners, who had taken the pace of tough old blustering lngals, who was always prepared to back up a rough tougue with a rougher fist.

"Him our boss.! That little whippersnapper? growled Mart Hoxie, strongest man and uglest fighter of the 21, and consequently a sort of leader and spokesman. Why, there aint one of you couldn't put him in your pocket. What business has be givin' orders to men?"

"And getting fitteen hundred a year for it," added another.

"While we break our backs for a dollar and a half a day," concluded a third.

The three specches, expressing the three passions of scorn, envy and discontent, promised anything but an easy task to Caldwell Ransom in the government of the men; but he was prepared. Engineer Franklin had said:

"Ransom, you will be in charge at the upper dam and and gand hear and a half a day," concluded a third.

"Well, yes, that's about it," returned Franklin, relieved at being so well understood. "You see, we can't employ the men we'd like, but must take what we can get, and they're a pretty wild set. Ingalls could whip any of them, and would do it, too, without much pressing, and did not get along very well at that; but as for you

"As for me, I cannot whip them, and I would not," again supplemented Caldwell, still smiling. "If don't believe in that kind of management, but I do believe that I can manage those men. Although I expect more or less trouble at irst, I shall come out all right in the end."

"I know so."

But in spite of his cafidence Ransom could not help feeling that he was like a very inexperienced tamerjust going into a cage of extremely unruly aimals, who were much more likely to eat teir trainer than

"There are two of us for the job," answered Mackey, simply.

How Young English Swells Try Farming in Canada.

Jokes at Their Expense in the Northwest Territories.

Experiences of a Young Londoner Around Indian Head.

Mr. N. W. Rowell, of this city, in a to the ADVERTISER, written from Indian Head, N. W. T., before he returned from his trip through the Northwest, related the following stories of life on the Western plains:

Western plains:

English settlers in this part of the country are very numerous. In Cannington Manor, 40 miles southwest of Moosomin, you have an English country town, with all the scenes and surroundings characteristic of a town in old England, and so exclusive in its social relations that "no Canadian need apply." Young English gentlemen come out to learn farming, "you know." In the past a cowboy's clothing was too precise for them. But now on almost every street corner, along the by-trails and on the township lines, you see them the most dudish of dudes, and the vanest fop in the land could not excel some of them in the land could not excel some of them in the exquisite perfection of their toilet. Not a few of them are evidently laboring under dudish of dudes, and the vanest fop in the land could not excel some of them in the exquisite perfection of their toilet. Not a few of them are evidently laboring under the delusion that their dress or ancestral name places them above the common level regardless of their ability or character, and they care little to associate with plebeian in Canadians. It is only fair to say that all the English people coming to this country are not like these. There are many than whom better settlers or more gentlemanly men could not he found—men who recognize that in this democratic country all are equal before the law, and that a crest or coat of arms must give way to intellect and ability, and ancestral title must bow to true and noble character.

It is almost impossible to credit the many amusing and absurd stories toid at the expense of these young Englishmen in their first attempts at farming. The following incident, among many, was related to me, of two of these young gentlemen, no wiser than many of their fellows, who settled five or six years ago south of Grenfell. They had plenty of money to start on, and laid in a generous supply of all needful, and many not needful, implements, for farming purposes. Among other articles was a short handled plow, purchased from one of the innumerable agricultural implement agents who haunt this country, for go where you will you cannot escape them. In a few days one of them returned, looking not a little worried and annoyed, and with a good deal of vehemence informed the agent that "the blasted thing was no good; the shafts were too short to put the horse in."

A somewhat similar story is told of a young Englishman at Indiam Head. He hired with a farmer and was sent out to plow with a yoke of oxen. It was his first experience, and even the stars might look (down with pity upon such a scene. In an hour or two he returned, completely discouraged, and informed the farmer he could not work the business, the shafts were too narrow to get one ox in, let alone two.

not work the business, the shafts were too narrow to get one ox in, let alone two.

It is a true saying that "a fool and his money are soon parted," but, of a truth, such a saying forcibly applies to these young fellows. It is almost shameful the manner in which many of them are victimized upon their first arrival in the country, such as paying $5 per week, as scores of them do, to learn the science of farming. One farmer in describing another's cropasid, "He has two pigs, one cow, fifteen acres of grain, and three farm students at $5 per week," the students being by far the most profitable part of the crop. Knowing nothing whatever about farming, they are persuaded into buying all manner and sorts of things, useful, and useless. In the manner in which many of them are victimized upon their first arrival in the country, such as paying $5 per week, as scores of them do, to learn the science of farming. One farmer in describing another's crop said, "He has two pigs, one cow, fitteen acres of grain, and three farm students at $5 per week," the students being by far the most profitable part of the crop. Knowing nothing whatever about farming, they are persuaded into buying all manner and sorts of things, useful, and useless. In the language of the West, to be the first man to strike, a green Englishman is to strike a bonanza. Out at Calgary, so I am informed, with that freedom so characteristic of Western life, in things sacred as well as secular, they have practically re-revised the Lord's Prayer, and now render their version, "Give us this day our daily Englishman," knowing if they can but catch one green enough, they are sure of a month's supplies.

The crops in the Moosomin district have this year been excellent, the wheat growing

The crops in the Moosomin district have this year been excellent, the wheat growing so rank upon the ground that many farmers found it impossible to cut the full width of so rank upon the ground that many farmers found it impossible to cut the full width of their reapers, a half or three-quarters being the most they could do. The greater part of the sample is, however, more or less injured by the frost and rain, and considerable of it quite seriously. This district appears specially adapted for mixed farming, and the majority of the farmers are gradually working out of all grain farming to part grain and part stock, the stock being almost sure to return a fair profit, no matter how unfavorable the season for grain growing. The soil is, as a general rule, heavy, a rich clay loom, and as an example of its fertility and the ease with which it is in some cases cultivated, Mr. J. R. Neff, the member for the district in the Northwest Council, sowed over 40 acres of barley this past spring by simply drilling it in upon the stubble, and had a yield of over 40 bushels per acre. This is not by any means an isolated case. A gentleman named Thompson, living twenty miles north of Indian Head, informed me that he had drilled in 30 acres of wheat this year upon wheat stubble, and would have a yield of from 25 to had drilled in 30 acres of wheat this year upon wheat stubble, and would have a yield of from 25 to 30 bushels per acre. I do not cite the above as instances of expert farming, but simply as emplifying the fertility of the soil under unfavorable conditions as to cultivation but favorable conditions to weather.

An Irishman living near Moose Jaw, while explaining to a friend of mine the depth of good soil, took him to see a well he had been digging, and in the course of conversation said: "I dug the well 100 fate dape, and the last sphadefull I took out would grow whate."

THE REVOLUTION IN MEDICINE.

Remarkable Results Likely to Flow from the Koch System of Cure.

[Austin Flint, M.D., in The Forum, New York, January.] In an article entitled "A Possible Revolution in Medicine," published in the Forum for December, 1888, I wrote, apropos of Dr. for December, 1888, I wrote, apropos of Dr. Koch's discovery of the bacterial cause of consumption: "The science and practice of medicine are undergoing a revolution of such magnitude and importance that its limits can hardly be conceived." I be lieved then that the problem of destroying the bacteria or their products, without killing the patient, would be solved in the near future. The first steps, at least, of its solution are apparent. While the data for an exact appreciation of the cure for consumption proposed by Koch are by no means complete, sufficient facts exist to warrant a discussion of the subject at the present time. If I am measurably correct in my ideas of the processes of cure, humanity has never received from science so great a boon, and tuberculosis will not long be the only grave disease successfully combatted by Koch's method.

In an article published by Koch simultaneously in this country and in Germany, on November 14, 1890, the details of the new treatment of several forms of tuberculosis are given. In a Berlin paper, six days later, is a description of the mode of preparation of the "curative lymph." This description, in all probability, is substantially correct; at least, no correction or contradiction has thus far appeared, and the method is essentially the one that is employed in obtaining poisonous products from other toxic bacilli. The method, as described, consists in placing in an incubating apparatus a pure culture of Koch's discovery of the bacterial cause of the method is sssentially the one that is employed in obtaining poisonous products from other toxic bacilli. The method, as described, consists in placing in an incubating apparatus a pure culture of tubercle bacilli in gelatinized beef broth. The apparatus is divided into an upper and a lower portion, by a diaphragm of unglazed porcelain, the bacilli being placed in the upper compartment. In the course of time the gelatine liquifies, and a liquid slowly filters through the porcelain into the lower compartment. This liquid is the curative lymph.

The lymph used by Koch is simply injected beneath the skin. It undoubtedly acts through the blood, but it has no effect when taken into the stomach. When it is introduced with proper antiseptic precautions, no effects are observed at the point of injection. When the lymph is injected in a full dose into the arm of a healthy person, in three or four hours there is paln in the limbs, with tendency to cough, a feeling of fatigue, and difficulty of breathing. These symptoms continue for one or two hours; then follows a severe chill, with nausea, vomiting, and a rise of nearly five degrees of temperature. The symptoms begin to abate after about twelve hours, and then rapidly disappear. These phenomena constitute what Koch calls the "reaction" produced by the remedy.

It was found that patients with consumption reacted strongly to a small dose of the remedy—less than one-hundredth part of the dose that is required to produce a strong reaction in a healthy person, but as the improvement progressed larger doses could be tolerated, and when the cure was complete patients reacted only to the doses required by non-tuberculous persons. In the progress of the cure, the cough and expectoration, which were immediately increased after the first injection, gradually diminished; the matter expectorated became less purulent in its appearance and contained fewer bacilli; the bacilli gradually disappeared; the cough ceased; and within five or six weeks the patient increased in weight.

be a brogressive, and the increase in temperature is a measure of the activity of the disease. The increase in temperature is a measure of the activity of the disease. The increase in temperature is due to the poison produced by the bacillus, and not to the bacillus itself.

Does the poison produced by the bacillus destroy the bacillus itself. This question cannot be answered definitely, but it is almost certain that the bacilli cannot produce the poison indefinitely. In the course of the disease bacilli are thrown off by expectoration. If no new colonies should be formed, the products of the bacilli might actually cure the disease, but it is probable that in most cases bacilli are transferred from one lung to the other, or from one part to another of the same lung, and that thus the disease is kept alive by autoinfection, the bacilli being able to multiply and to produce the poison again in each new midus in which they find lodgment. Still, there are cases in which consumption seems to be self-limited, in which it seems to cure itself, probably by the action of the course or the poison again in each new midus in which they find lodgment.

seems to be self-limited, in which it seems to cure itself, probably by the action of the poisonous products of the bacilli in throwing off the bacilli, or in destroying the tuberculous tissue.

Koch's idea with regard to the action of his curative lymph is that "the remedy does not kill the tubercle bacilli, but the tuberculous tissue." It may be that there is a conflict between the bacilli and their own poison, that the poison has a tendency to dislodge the bacilli, and that this dislodgment is not complete if the bacilli own poison, that the poison has a tendency to dislodge the bacilli, and that this dislodgement is not complete if the bacilli multiply so fast that they overcome this influence. A logical way to dislodge the bacilli and to throw off the tuberculous tissue would be to reinforce the poison by introducing it into the system. This idea may explain Koch's curative process. He adds the poison without adding bacilli.

It is probable that an active agent in Koch's lymph is essentially the same as the poison produced by tubercle bacilli in the human body, and is a product of tubercle bacilli, which, it may be assumed, grow in Koch's culture medium in the same way that they grow in the lungs, and generate the same product or products.

It is possible, in the light of what has recently been accomplished by Koch, that in the nearfuture many curative lymphs will be discovered, each produced by the special micro-organism of a particular disease. For example, the typhoid lymph, the diphtheritic lymph, the lymph for measles, that for scarlet fever, and so on, will promptly arrest these diseases, and save patients from the degenerations and the accidents which are liable to occur when morbid processes are allowed to run their course; and convalescence will be prompt, because the diseases will not have produced damage which can be produced by time alone. Truly this would be a revolution in medicine, indeed, and it now seems to be impending.

It is related that on one occasion, when Lord Glasgow was paying a visit to his training stables, his trainer, in despair of what to do with such a hopeless lot, said: "I tell you what it is, my lord, if I owned such a lot of brutes I would shoot 'em." "Shoot 'em!" exclaimed Lord Glasgow, excitedly; and then cooling down, to the astonishment of his trainer, he growied out: "Shoot the lot!" and they were shot with one exception, which he gave to a parson. He would never sell a horse. He persevered mest doggedly in his method of breeding, and was always ready to match his big-boned sons of Mise Whip or Brown Bess for a moukey, even against the 2-vear-old cracks. What may be termed fashionable blood he abominated. +++ > > > > > ---

There is no lack of so-called cures for the common ailment known as corns. The vegetable, animal and mineral kingdoms have been ransacked for cures. It is a simple matter to remove corns without pain, for if you will go to any druggist or medicine dealer and buy a bottle of Putnam's Painless Corn Extractor and apply it as directed the thing is done. Get "Putnam's," and no other.

Among the pains and aches cured with marvelous rapidity with Dr. Thomas' Eelectric Oil, is ear-ache. The young are especially subject to it, and the desirability of this Oil as a family remedy is enhanced by the fact that it is admirably adapted not only to the above ailment, but also to the hurts, disorders of the bowels, and affections of the throat, to which the young are specially subject. young are specially subject.

We have no hesitation in saying that Dr.

J. D. Kellogg's Dysentery Cordial is without doubt the best medicine ever introduced for dysentery, diarrhea, cholera and all summer complaints, sea sickness, etc. It promptly gives relief and never fails to effect a positive cure. Mothers should neve be without a bottle when their children are teething.

The New York Sportsman publishes a long article showing that those who rely on "newspaper tipe" in betting on races will come out at the small end of the horn.

Stericker Bros., Springfield, Ill., write: The Norfolk trotter and the English hackney are one and the same breed of horses; they date back to 1733, and have always been renowned for their great usefulness and endurance. They are usually very compactly built, stand from 15.1 to 15.3 high and weigh from 1,200 to 1,400 pounds. In color, bay, brown or chestnut; they are exceedingly stylish and have very high knee action, moving with great force. There

Periodically farmers are consoled with the idea that if they will only breed first-class horses, and fit them up accordingly, they will get good prices despite the McKinley tariff. How far this is correct in the Montreal district may be judged from a recent weekly report issued by the Montreal Horse Exchange:

"The demand for horses at these stables during the week was fairly active, but the prices paid were very small compared with previous years. Twenty-six very fine horses were sold at prices ranging from $75 to $140, and at these figures it is impossible to go to the country and buy horses from farmers to sell in this market at a profit."

"From $75 to $140" is surely not a gilledged return for "very fine horses," as those who breed and train them know full well.
