COMMITTEE ROOM WILL NOT HOUSE CROWD ATTENDING

Apply To Mr. Speaker Lemieux For Permission To Hold the Sessions of Private Bills Committee in Chamber of the House of Commons.

SIR ROBERT FALCONER BEGINS DISCUSSION

Canadian Press Despatch.
Ottawa, April 30.—The church union issue brought to the parliament buildings this morning one of the biggest crowds that has been seen here in a long time. The bill to create the United Church of Canada came before the private bills committee of the House at 11 o'clock, but long before that time arrived the corridor of the building outside the committee room was crowded. So great was the crowd outside that the committee room that the opening proceedings were conducted amid interruptions by poundings on the outside of the closed door by those seeking admittance.

SUGGEST A LARGER ROOM.

As soon as the preamble of the bill had been read, Dr. R. M. Anderson, Conservative, Halton, moved that in view of the large number from outside the city who desired to hear the discussion, the meeting should be adjourned to the House of Commons chamber.

This was adopted without debate. The sub-committee which waited on the Speaker reported back that they were unable to get in touch with the Speaker, but would take the matter up with him later.

SEND COMMITTEE TO MR. SPEAKER.

"Is there any rule which gives the Speaker special jurisdiction over the chamber?" asked Hon. Jacques Bureau, minister of customs.

The chairman explained that the committee had already been given the largest room in the building except the chamber. The sub-committee would again see Mr. Speaker and see what arrangements could be made.

CIVIC GOLF PLANS WILL BE STARTED TOMORROW

Sufficient Capital Is Received To Go Ahead With Construction.

LIST IS CLOSED

Ralph Connable Presents a Check in Order To Complete Total.

Work will be started on the Civic Golf Course tomorrow morning sharp at 7 o'clock said the manager of the public utilities commission after consulting his morning mail today in which were enough new subscriptions to meet the financial requirements of the course. He is putting on a sufficient number of men to have the course ready for play in the first week of June.

Ralph Connable of Toronto, who addressed the golf course committee, and who is one of the most enthusiastic golfers in the Dominion, was so keen on getting the London course under way that he offered his check for more than $300 in order to make up the deficiency between what had been raised and what was needed.

This offer, together with the extra names which arrived in the mail, brought the amount up to the desired total, so the civic golf course is now ready to become one of London's outdoor recreations and will be the pride of the puttee, masher and the caddy who will have a new outlet for their afternoon energy.

The committee appointed to look after the details of the course consists of: J. C. Anderson, A. G. Calder, F. W. Farncomb, A. McPherson, Dr. Bateson, who will be glad to answer any inquiries as to either the same or course. Further information can always be obtained from the public utilities commission in connection with the course.

E. V. Buchanan, who together with the commissioners, is sponsor for the course, says that no more members will now be accepted for the first year of the course and that with the 600 members and their friends playing the course it will be too busy to allow further players.

Ralph Connable, who looked over the course yesterday, was pleased at the natural lie of the ground and the condition of the turf, stating that the cost of making it into a playable nine-hole course would be much less than in the case of many other courses where the natural benefits were less. Mr. Connable is the man who started the Toronto civic course at Humber Valley and made it possible.

MURDER IS ATTEMPTED FOLLOWED BY SUICIDE

Chatham Man Drinks Iodine, Then Shoots Self—Said To Be Jealous.

Special To The Advertiser.
Chatham, Ont., April 30.—Attempting the life of Mrs. Margaret Busche, 23, a Belgian woman, who resides on concession 10, Raleigh Township, Frank Gielis, 35, a fellow countryman, whose home is at Eberts, drank iodine and then shot himself.

The shooting occurred last night at 9 o'clock. Mrs. Busche was sitting in her home, talking with friends, when Gielis approached the window of the living-room through which he fired two shots. The first found effect, in the woman's left shoulder. Arthur Millerviel, who was in the room, threw a chair at the window. The second shot almost hit the man.

Jealousy is said to be the motive of the attempted murder and suicide. Yesterday afternoon, Gielis stopped the woman as she was returning to her home. She refused to ride with him in his car. A quarrel followed, during which Gielis threatened the woman. According to the police, the man had stated to his employer, Joe Dampin, that some day he would kill a man and woman and end his own life.

Information, which the county police have been able to secure, would indicate that Gielis was angered by the woman marrying Charles Busche about three years ago. Mrs. Busche is in St. Joseph's Hospital in a critical condition. According to Dr. W. A. Elgie, who attended her, the bullet was shattered and created a serious wound in the neck.

TREASURER FOR BOARD IS NEW POSSIBILITY

New Accounting Plan For the Educational Offices Hints At Move.

In the proposal to establish a duplicate accounting system in the board of education offices, city officials foresee the "thin edge of the wedge," to eventually appoint a treasurer for that branch of the city's administration.

But as a matter of fact, City Treasurer James Bell "sees no objection" with the proposal to install a new system in the educational department, similar to the procedure at the city hospital.

The treasurer points out, of course, that while the hospital authorities are not empowered to appoint their own treasurer, that alternative may be adopted at any time by the school trustees.

CITY ENGINEER HAS NOT PROPOSED BUNNELL

Near States No Report Prepared for Town Planning Commissioners.

A. E. K. Bunnell has not been recommended by City Engineer W. P. Near to consult with his department in the completion of the Thomas Adams report, he announced today.

In fact, the engineer explains that he has not prepared any report upon this situation for the town-planning commissioners, nor has he given any thought as to who should be hired to undertake the work, should the commission decide to take over that duty this year.

While Engineer Bunnell appeared at a recent session of the commission and asked consideration of his request for that work, the engineer relates that another engineer, Horace Seymour, filed a similar request with the commissioners last fall.

AEMILIUS JARVIS IS IMPLICATED IN CHARGE

Former Ontario Treasurer Said To Have Conspired With Stock Brokers.

OTHERS CONCERNED

Official of Home Bank Also Mentioned in the Latest Charge Made.

Canadian Press Despatch.
Toronto, April 30.—Ten new charges were laid against Peter Smith, former provincial treasurer of Ontario, this morning, when he appeared in police court to answer to a blanket charge of conspiring to defraud the public.

Among the charges is one that he conspired with J. Cooper Mason, A. H. Peppall, Aemilius Jarvis and Aemilius Jarvis, Jun., to defraud the public.

Inspectors Greer and Boyd of the provincial police, yesterday afternoon, accompanied by auditors acting for the government, executed a search warrant at the offices of Jarvis & Co., bankers, Bay street, seizing such documents as the auditors deemed may be required in the prosecution of Hon. Peter Smith, who is charged with conspiracy with "Andy" Peppall to defraud the provinces through transactions in succession duty free bonds carried out through the Jarvis firm. Aemilius Jarvis is expected to return to the city today from England.

INQUIRY STARTS MAY 7.

Canadian Press Despatch.
Toronto, April 30.—Ten new charges preferred against Peter Smith, provincial treasurer in the Drury cabinet came as a surprise when he appeared in police court this morning for a renewal of bail and remand until the May 7.

Coupled with the reading of the charges was the statement of Crown Attorney McRuer that the preliminary inquiry would proceed before Judge Denton, senior magistrate, on May 7, and would continue to a conclusion, even if late sessions of the court were necessary. Defense counsel were notified to be prepared to meet this wish of Judge Denton.

DR. SCHRAM UNDERGOES SERIOUS OPERATION

Condition Believed Due to the Strain From Rescuing Swimmer.

Dr. John Schram underwent a serious operation at St. Joseph's Hospital on Tuesday, and his condition is reported as serious.

Pressure of professional work made it necessary for him to delay the operation as long as possible, but at the first of the week his condition became so serious that immediate action was found necessary, and Dr. W. J. Stevenson was called in to perform the operation.

It is thought that Dr. Schram's condition is due to the terrific strain to which he was subjected last August, when, in a stormy lake, he battled for 20 minutes in an effort to rescue a swimmer who was on the point of drowning off the pier. By superhuman efforts Dr. Schram brought the swimmer to shore, collapsing after doing so.

MAYOR WOULD GIVE ST. THOMAS CONTRACT

Believes Contract Procedure Should Not Be Tampered With.

Mayor George Wenige will oppose any move in the board of works to call for new tenders for the 1924 supply of iron castings.

PAVING CONCERNS HAVE MERRY FIGHT FOR CONTRACTS

Engineer Reports All Are at Present Keeping Clear of London.

BIDS ARE TOO HIGH

Unknown to the general public, paving contractors are waging a merry war throughout the province. City Engineer W. P. Near reports that contractors angling for paving projects have been fighting rather than of the more aggressive and optimistic of them did approach him not long since, he relates, to ascertain "how chances were slim then and now," it is explained. The contractor wanted to know the city's costs for last year's work, and when he found that it cost to lay the famous Richmond street pavement and track allowance last summer, he scratched his head in obvious perplexity and wonderment, as to how it was done.

Idea of Bids.

The engineer had a fairly good idea of bids offered in other municipalities, right at that period, by the contractor in question, and he was well aware that the city's figures were considerably lower than his, even including the costs of engineering and the costs of testing the pavement throughout the time of the work.

So the war rages on all sides of London, according to reports. As many as 22 tenders were received during the last two or three weeks during the last week in March, the councillors have called for tenders upon two occasions, and have just thrown them all out again when a dispute arose.

In the meanwhile the local engineering department, with its municipal paving plant in readiness, is merely awaiting the word from the city council to proceed with full steam ahead, as a lengthy program mapped out lacks only final decisions as to the street railways, and the street cleaning allowances.

With respect to the fight among the paving contractors, however, it is reported that some of the companies have even sent out representatives among the various municipalities, who are now known under a brand-new name—"paving promoters."

These gentlemen arrive in the community, size up the situation, select the most suitable unpaved streets and start petitions among the ratepayers thereon, asking for pavements.

And needless to explain, the "promoters" will naturally exert every effort to see that the petition calls for their particular type of pavement.

SICKNESS OF TEACHERS COSTS $7,200 A YEAR

But All Education Boards Recognize Expense as an Inevitable One.

Sickness on the part of teachers in the public schools costs the local board of education about $7,200 a year for substitutes. Under the contracts on which the teachers are engaged the board allows them 20 days sickness time in the year without loss of pay, but the cost of supplying substitutes during the time that teachers are absent costs from $300 to $1,000 a month throughout the year.

The record so far for any one month is $1,300 which occurred during an outbreak of flu some years ago. London is not any higher than other cities in this respect and an allowance for teachers' sickness is an inevitable expense that educational authorities expect everywhere.

STEFANSSON NOW TO VISIT HOTTEST REGIONS OF EARTH

Arctic Explorer Leaves To Study Barren Tracts of Africa and Australia.

WILL USE AEROPLANE

Australia Is the First Goal, the Trip To Start From San Francisco in May.

Associated Press Despatch.
New York, April 30.—Vilhjalmur Stefansson, Arctic explorer, who has spent twelve years in the polar regions, left last night for Los Angeles on his way to Australia and Africa, where he will explore regions hitherto considered uninhabitable but which, he hopes, may be found to be reclaimable for habitation. He will sail from San Francisco on the Sonoma, May 6.

Mr. Stefansson said his trip would be the next step in his life study of parts of the world which are supposed to be barren because they are supposed to be too hot, too cold, fever barren or too dry. Australia will be the first goal. The expedition will be led by the Arctic explorer, who served in the Australian forces during the war and who has been preparing for the expedition, awaits Stefansson with an aeroplane which is to be used to reach otherwise inaccessible places. The trip will start late in May and will continue for three months.

From Sydney, the expedition will head for the outskirt of civilization, the so-called Great Australian Desert, and the "Never Never Lands" of the interior. Later Stefansson will go to New Zealand, where he will engage in political research. That completed, the last step will be Agra, where he probably will spend two years.

Baby Buffalo Is Dead At Zoo

"George W" Meets Untimely End, and Utilities Mourns.

All true Londoners and lovers of wild animals will regret the untimely passing of "George W" last night in the Springfield zoo. "George W," who was christened on Monday afternoon, was the son of the Mr. and Mrs. Canadian Buffalo and arrived at the park on Sunday morning. The chilly atmosphere of London or the effect of the christening, or a fit of homesickness for the prairie of his domains interrupted his young life and the garden at Springfield has lost a young hopeful on which the keepers and utilities commission had set great store of publicity for the city in the days of his budding manhood, the buffalo, when he would be an ornament to the park and a credit to his city.—RIP.

The biggest ceremonial ever held by any sanatorium in Canada is being held by Thebes, No. 25, of this city, and monster plans are being prepared in honor of the visiting Orientals. All the Orientals will gather at Victoria Park at 2 p.m., where Mayor Wenige will deliver an address of welcome, after which a gorgeous street parade will form and proceed through the principal streets, ending up at the Winter Garden.

Principal speakers will be on hand for the banquet to be served in the Masonic Temple at 5:30 p.m., when the Supreme Monarchs, Clericus and Kalifah will be present. BALL TEAM SELECTIONS ARE NAMED BY DRAKE

City Council Has Real Material For a Slugging Outfit, He Declares.

"Things are terribly slow," Ald. Gordon Drake announced in order to "get things under way," he proposes a city council baseball team for Wednesday afternoons. "I have some real material," Ald. Drake explained, and if his colleagues are ready to co-operate, he is confident that they could trim the policemen to a "hard-boiled finish," any day of the day.

A tentative lineup was submitted by him today. He has reserved for himself a place in the field, far from the "maddening crowd." Mayor Wenige would be the best to throw the ball, he suggests, with Ald. Leonard Douglass on first base, Ald. Harry Bottrell in his choice behind the old plate. Ald. Towse was first assigned to shortstop, but upon consideration, Ald. Drake withdrew his motion, fearing that Allan would talk too much while on the field.

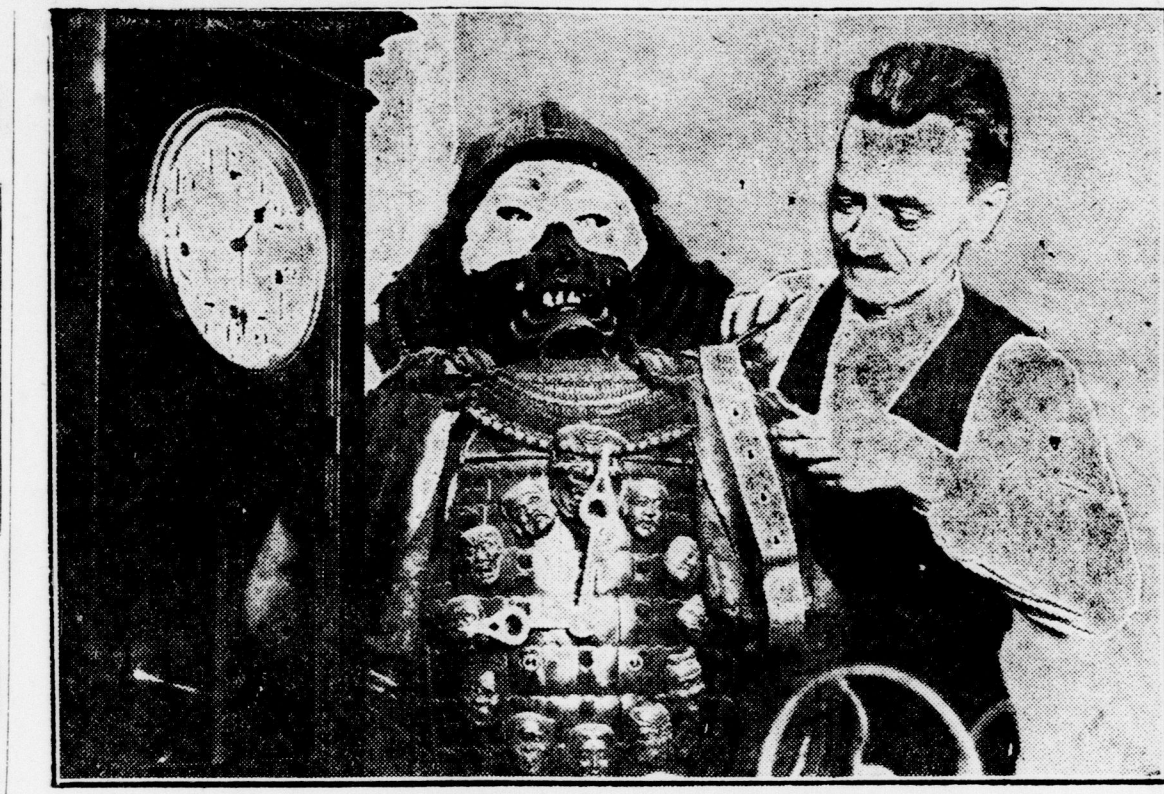

"Jack" Anderson is heavy enough for third base, with "Jack" Greer and "Ernie" Shaw to complete the infield. The council has oodles of fielders to choose from. It may be necessary to toss them all up in a blanket to pick the lucky one. Ald. Drake will cover center and right field. He may need a little help in left.

What to do about "Ed" Smith has proved a weighty problem for Ald. Drake, who had forgotten about him entirely, but it is understood that the Mayor would consult the city solicitor about this development.

HAT-TRIMMING RACE TO BE HELD FOR MEN

Preparations are being made to receive 500 members and friends, and the big program, that has been timed to start at 8 p.m., will afford splendid entertainment for all who attend. The events include a straddle ball relay team, basket ball, mixed relay, ministers' presidents' and secretaries' touch-and-out contests, hustle ball, walk, stunts by "Y" senior leaders, concluding with Madam De Moins and Madam De Christy, who will do the milinery act, and tell the fortunes of all those who visit their department. There will also be a musical program. Miss May Griffiths, R. P. Liddle will be singing leader. Her lordship the bishop will present the awards. D. Dunderidge is chairman of the committee.

W. C. T. U. HEARS MRS. G. WRIGHT

Asks Women To Rally To the Support of the O. T. A. in Address at Wallaceburg.

Special to The Advertiser.
Wallaceburg, April 30.—Mrs. Gordon Wright, Dominion president of the W. C. T. U., addressed a large gathering in the Methodist Church last evening. She spoke of undesirable conditions in Canada which, however, were better than in some countries. Regarding parliamentary discussion on the retention of the O. T. A., she said, the act was a very fine one. She admitted, however, that it lacked enforcement, and had its weak points. She dealt largely on the unfortunate conditions prevailing in Quebec and British Columbia under government control.

"The O. T. A. is not responsible for drinking amongst our young people," said the speaker. "The whole Dominion is looking to Ontario in this big crisis. Other provinces would follow Ontario's lead. All denominations should unite against the out-laws of the liquor traffic. From every pulpit should be sounded the warning against government control. Quebec in its present state was becoming humiliated. British Columbia and Alberta, with their rich resources, laboring under government control, were becoming degraded and jeopardized. Every woman should belong to the W. C. T. U., regardless of any other organization she belonged to. If the O. T. A. appeared to be a discard in Wallaceburg, officials for enforcement were not alone to blame.

Other items on the program were numbers by a mixed quartet, and an address by Mrs. Little, county president, who said that a standing army was required to overthrow the liquor traffic, just as much as it was required by England in the great war. Mrs. A. D. Brander led in prayer; Rev. Armstrong read the Scripture; Rev. J. S. Leckie closed the meeting with prayer.

DE MARKY TO ASSIST AT CHOIR'S CONCERT

Noted European Artist Promises Musical Treat For Londoners.

The choir of St. Peter's Cathedral is giving its first annual concert tomorrow evening in the Central Collegiate auditorium. They are to be assisted by Paul De Marky, European concert pianist, who has been stopping in the city with Louis Balogh, Ph.D., the choir leader and organist of the cathedral. Mr. De Marky's stay in London has been in the nature of a rest from his continued appearances as a concert pianist on the other side of the Atlantic, and early in the fall, he is commencing a concert tour of the United States. He will make only the one public appearance in London, and this, the audience of tomorrow evening is expecting something unusually fine in the way of piano performance. A sufficient number have been privileged to hear Mr. De Marky to put beyond question the fact that he is a master of the instrument and one of the most superbly skilled pianists who have visited the city. His selections tomorrow night will give ample opportunity for display of his remarkable technique. They include numbers from Chopin, Grieg, Schumann, Liszt, Rubinstein, Scriabin, Sodermann, Tschaiikowsky.

CONGESTION MISSING AS FORMS POUR IN Public Giving Fine Co-operation, Federal Income Tax Inspector States.

Large wire hampers of mail matter containing 5,000 or more letters were delivered one after another to the offices of the Department of Federal taxation this morning. The large amount of mail makes the last of the last-minute rush to file income tax returns, as this is the last day.

Speaking of the final rush, G. T. Tambling, the inspector of Federal Taxation said this morning that the staff was right up with the work of handling the returns, and all mail is handled the same day as it is received. This means that for checks received today an acknowledgment goes out to day.

The inspector pointed out that although there are always many who leave the filing until the last day, the public has in the last couple of years co-operated with the department and filed early. Mr. Tambling warned that files that are returned tomorrow are subject to the penalty of five per cent of the tax that is required by law.

COOLIDGE VICTOR IN OHIO PRIMARY

Is Given Six-to-One Indorsement Over U. S. Senator Hiram Johnson.

Associated Press Despatch.
Columbus, Ohio, April 30.—Both President Coolidge and former Governor James M. Cox, of Ohio, the Democratic candidate for president in 1920, won sweeping victories in Ohio's primary elections yesterday. The vote, however, was not the highest ever cast in an Ohio primary election, it being officially estimated at about 18 per cent of the potential vote.

President Coolidge not only won the state's 51 delegates to the national convention, but also was given better than a six-to-one indorsement over U. S. Senator Hiram Johnson in the presidential preference contest.

Mr. Cox probably will go before the Democratic national convention with his home state's 48 votes pledged to support him and backed up by a popular indorsement of his party by a 24-to-1 vote over William Gibbs McAdoo. His probable 48 votes will be represented by 52 delegates, but half a vote.

PLEDGED TO COOLIDGE.

Boston, April 30.—With the lone candidate favorable to the presidential candidacy of Hiram Johnson overwhelmingly defeated, a delegation of 29 solidly pledged to President Coolidge was elected to represent Massachusetts at the Republican national convention in the presidential preference primary yesterday, according to returns virtually complete today.

APRIL FIRE LOSSES LOWEST IN MONTHS

Chief Aitken States That 43 of 49 Alarms Came Over Telephone.

Whether or not the boosting of the fire insurance rates for the city of London has checked the number of fire during the month of April, the fire loss in this city did not exceed two thousand dollars and, according to Chief Aitken, who submitted his monthly fire report today. It is the lowest figure in months.

During the month a total of 43 calls were received ranging in variety from rescuing cats in trees to fishing out a dead mud turtle from the Thames yesterday. Of this number eighteen were fires, sixteen grass fires, seven chimney fires, six false alarms and two emergencies.

That more people use the telephone rather than the alarm boxes is clearly illustrated, when 43 of the 49 calls were turned in by the former. The remaining six were divided as follows: three from the boxes and three verbal.

REV. W. ARMITAGE IS EXPECTED TO ACCEPT POSITION

London Rector Named Rural Dean of East Middlesex—Is Out of Town.

ADDRESS ON JAPAN

Rev. W. L. Armitage stands as rural dean of East Middlesex pending his acceptance and the sanction of the bishop. Mr. Armitage was elected to the office left vacant by the resignation of Rev. G. G. Warner at the semi-annual deanery meeting in St. Matthew's Church last night. Out of town at the time, his acceptance was not given, but the clergy in attendance at the deanery believe that when he returns to the city tonight Mr. Armitage will accept the office, and this will be sanctioned by the bishop on his return to the city.

This morning's session of the deanery was given over altogether to the celebration of the holy communion by Rev. T. J. Charlton, rector of St. Matthew's Church, and a quiet hour conducted by Rev. H. A. Crowley, of Delaware and Mount Brydges. Mr. Crowley's subject was "The Joy of the Ministry."

The semi-annual meeting of the deanery branch of the Women's Auxiliary met at the same time. The election of officers resulted in the return of the former executives to their posts, with Miss Bray as president, and Mrs. G. A. Abey as secretary. A brilliant feature of the morning was an address on Japan by Miss Isaac, a missionary home on furlough, where she addressed the deanery women this morning, to a wide and varied experience of mission work in Japan. Her address was chiefly of the Japanese women, whose picturesque costume she wore while speaking. What the missionary had to tell, however, was not the Japan of the tourist, but the more intimate details which have to do with the domestic life of the Japanese women, the conditions in which Japan factory workers exist.

To a body of women whose special function is the support of the mission fields, Miss Isaac's address was of very special interest. Representatives of a new branch auxiliary formed at Christ Church were welcomed at the meeting, among other matters which occupied the remaining time.

The delegates were entertained at luncheon by the Guild of St. Matthew's Church. At the deanery session this afternoon, the missionary address will be given by Rev. W. N. Trivett of Honan, and the Huron College jubilee fund comes up for discussion.

PROMISSORY NOTE SUIT IS SETTLED FOR $200

Action Between G. F. Neely and W. R. Webb Closed Today.

After a conference today between Judge J. C. Judd, the plaintiff, and the defendant, a $200 settlement was arrived at in the division court action for $255.50 between G. F. Neely and W. R. Webb of Dorchester.

The plaintiff commenced his action to recover $324.50 on a promissory note given by the defendant several years ago for his share of Neely, M.P.P. for East Middlesex, and which, after the death of the latter was transferred to his son, G. F. Neely.

The defendant did not deny making the note, but filed a counterclaim running during 1911 and 1912 of several transactions between the late Mr. Neely and himself, the balance of which he claimed should be set off against the note.

After conferring with his Honor, the plaintiff agreed to accept $200, each party paying his own costs.

CHRIST ONLY TRUE SCIENTIFIC HEALER, SPEAKER ASSERTS

John R. Dunn, Boston, Addresses Members of the First Church of Christ, Scientist.

QUOTES SCRIPTURES

Stating that Christ was the only true scientific healer, John Randall Dunn, C.S.B., of the Mother Church, Boston, told members of the First Church of Christ, Scientist, Monday evening that the work of Jesus in curing diseases was not usually regarded with the importance it deserved.

He added that Christianity was the way out for all human problems, and that the marvel of a world nominally Christian is that Christ is looked on today merely as a saviour from sin. The principles of science enunciated by Christ, however, could always be counted on to rid the world of disease if properly applied.

"Let us consider one of the many examples given us in the Scriptures of Jesus simply and yet so marvellous handling of sickness," Mr. Dunn said. "Take one of his early healings as recorded in Luke's gospel. He is besought to help the mother of Simon's wife, who is seemingly gravely ill. Apparently the Master makes no inquiries as to the symptoms. He merely stood over her and rebuked the fever. It immediately left her."

"You will not find that there was no period of convalescence, no gradual abating of the fever, and Christ did not advocate diet or any form of treatment."

"The explanation of this is that the healing was wholly mental. This mighty understanding we see rebuking unclean spirits, healing epilepsies and all manner of diseases."

The speaker then outlined the early religious history of Mary Baker Eddy, founder of Christian Science. He told of how Mrs. Eddy, as a little girl, was filled with religious inspiration and how she was later struck with the idea that healing merely meant the application of Christ-like principles.

"It can be plainly seen that the idea of Christian healing had been budding throughout Mrs. Eddy's earthly existence, and, therefore, it was perfectly natural in her case, when she found herself near the gates of death again, for her to turn her thoughts toward spiritual aid. She called for the Bible and opened to the ninth chapter of Matthew. As she read the story of the healing of the man with the palsy, in the years that followed there was unfolded to Mrs. Eddy the method of Jesus in healing. She was then able to heal others."

"Then she set about sharing with the world her discovery, and in her textbook 'Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures,' she had revealed the science which Jesus revealed the apostles and the prophets did their mighty works."

Shriners Make Merry While Forty-Three Candidates Are Hurried Across Hot Sands

Hundreds of Red-Fezed Tribesmen Inade City For Spring Ceremonial.

OFFICERS INSTALLED

Ceremonies Take Place In Majestic Theatre and Masonic Temple.

Forty-three candidates to the Ancient, Accepted Order of the Nobles of the Mystic Shrine crossed the burning sands of Arabia yesterday at the spring ceremonial of Mocha Temple, and those candidates who successfully passed the test are well qualified to the title of Shriner.

Shriners from all parts of Western Ontario and the United States were guests in the city yesterday, principal among these being Conrad V. Dyckman, Brooklyn, N. Y., imperial potentate of the Mystic Shrine in North America. He arrived in London at noon yesterday, accompanied by imperial officers, and was handed the keys of Mocha Temple by Acting Potentate A. Carrothers, who headed the official reception committee. It was estimated by officials in charge that well over a thousand Shriners were present, this being the largest number in years.

Mocha Temple's spring ceremonial got under way at 2 o'clock yesterday afternoon in the Masonic Temple with the election of officers and the discussion of business. Encouraging reports relative to the financial and membership conditions were presented by the acting officers and the discussion of business. Frank Harley Elected. Frank E. Harley was elected to the office of outer guard, and thereby begins the journey towards the highest gift in the hands of Mocha Temple nobles.

Following this session of the Shrine, the members either stayed at the Temple, where a buffet luncheon was served, or repaired to the Teacup House, where by the death of Dr. G. A. Routledge, Dr. Routledge was elevated to this post at the winter ceremonial, held in December, but since the time of his death A. Carrothers has been acting potentate. Other officers elected were: A. J. Smith, to the post of chief rabban; W. C. Forbes, assistant rabban; T. M. Fawkes, high priest; C. Parquharson, Oriental guide; H. Hayman, first ceremonial master; G. E. Logan, second ceremonial master; W. Woollett, marshal; Thomas Kirby, inner guide.

At 7:30 last night the ceremonial started proper, when candidates were presented for initiation in the Majestic Theatre, which was packed to capacity with red-fezzed tribesmen. To the strains of martial music rendered by the Mocha Temple Band, each candidate, accompanied by a Shriner in full oriental garb, entered upon the stage of the theatre there to receive his certificate of admission to the fraternity of Shriners.

Every one of the 43 acquitted himself nobly and well, there being none who were refused admission.

The older Shriners entered into the spirit of the occasion, and with many anecdotes recalled from the days of their initiation, regaled the candidates during their periods of waiting.

Secrecy was the watchword of the whole procedure, no one unless in possession of a special card being admitted to the building.

Vaudeville Shows Follow.

After the initiation of the candidates a vaudeville performance was presented. At the conclusion of this, the members from out of town returned to their respective hotels or to their special trains.

According to those who participated in the spring ceremonial, it surpassed by far the winter ceremonial in attendance and the number of distinguished visitors present for this occasion. Shriners from Toronto and Sudbury numbering 250 arrived yesterday afternoon by special train. N. R. train, while special cars carried Hamilton and Kitchener Shriners to the city.

A large party of United States visitors arrived on the 1:15 C. P. R. train from Detroit.

The head of the Shrine Order was accompanied by Potentate Clifford H. Brady and divan of Kismet Temple, Brooklyn; E. A. Fletcher, imperial ceremonial master.

By the time the initiation was underway last night at the Majestic Theatre, no less than eight ruling potentates and divans of Shrine Temples in United States and Canada were present for the ceremonial.

Guests from out of town as recorded by W. H. Abbott, Mocha Temple recorder included: Potentate Thomas Tunks and divan of El Khurafat Temple, Savannah, Fla.; Potentate Henry A. Page and divan of Zenobia Temple, Toledo; Potentate Harry L. Glendinning, officers and Arab Patrol of Ramsey Temple, Toronto; and many others.

GOLFING EXPERT GIVES HIS ADVICE ON CIVIC COURSE

Ralph Connable Says Proposed Location Is Ideal.

ESTIMATES MADE

Optimism as to the possibility of a civic golf course was very much in evidence at the meeting of the subscribers' committee in the Teacup House last night, when they were addressed by Ralph Connable, general manager of the Woolworth Stores, who made the Humber Valley course in Toronto possible.

Mr. Connable pointed out that the course which has been laid out at Springbank is the most natural one that he has ever had the pleasure of seeing.

"It is, in every way," he said, "a wonderful work of nature and a better or more suitable location could not be found in the vicinity. There is a natural drainage, a rolling surface, nicely placed shade trees and the site is also close to the river which makes it convenient for watering purposes."

"After looking over the course this afternoon I drew up an estimate that will cover the cost. The course is a nine-hole one, and at an approximate cost of $200 a hole, the total expense will be about $1,800. This takes in the cost of tools for the work and the men needed to look after the upkeep of the grounds."

All the estimates were made in comparison with the Humber course, which started out as a loss to the directors, and which now is paying a large annual dividend and has grown to be one of the finest golf grounds in Canada.

Mr. Connable added that this course would not be the expense the Humber grounds were on account of the natural situation, which makes it decidedly economical.

It was also shown that a 100 per cent profit could be obtained by establishing a refreshment booth on the grounds, and that they could count on getting $600 a year from fees.

There are now 520 listed members on the subscription forms, and as only 50 more are needed to make the course a possibility the leaders of the movement are optimistic as to the success of the proposition.

No decision was made at the meeting as to the time when the actual operations would begin, but after hearing Mr. Connable's report the sponsors of the movement declare that action would be taken much earlier than it would have, had not a favorable report been turned in.

The excellent training given them during the last few months by the orchestra leader, Dr. James Smith, was much in evidence in the splendid showing they made. Dr. Smith now holds the gold medal, donated by H. H. Hunt for the best orchestra leader in the province in the 20-instrument and under class, and also is holder of the silver medal crediting him with being among the best in the class in the 10-instrument and under. Dr. Smith is also the choir leader at the Askin Street Church.

ASKIN ST. CHURCH ORCHESTRA WINS CHAMPIONSHIPS

Sunday School Musicians Capture Two Prizes In Provincial Competition.

DEFEND SHIELD

Members of the Askin Street Methodist Sunday school orchestra have again added to their laurels as provincial musicians, when they successfully defended their shield in the class calling for twenty instruments.

They also captured the second prize diploma in the forty pieces and under class in the competition among the best musicians in Ontario at Toronto yesterday.

They defended their own shield against Cobourg, winning by a wide margin. In the other class, in which they took second place, they were not as successful, but, nevertheless, deserve much credit for the showing they made against the winner, Peterboro.

The excellent training given them during the last few months by the orchestra leader, Dr. James Smith, was much in evidence in the splendid showing they made. PRINTING CLASS AT TECHNICAL SCHOOL FAVORED

Representatives of Printing Trade Unanimously Pass Resolution.

REPORT ON TOUR

Following a long discussion of the merits of a course in printing, proposed to be established in the London Technical School, representatives of the printing trade in the city, in consultation with members of the technical committee of the school, last night passed a unanimous resolution in favor of the introduction of the class.

Principal Deal of the Technical School, together with A. R. Kennedy and J. B. Wright, who formed the committee which two weeks ago went on a tour of inspection to the technical schools in Buffalo and Hamilton to see what was being done in the way of printing classes there, met representatives of the London printing trade for the purpose of an informal discussion on the merits of the proposed course and to get the ideas of local printers on the subjects which should be included in the course.

Outlines Object. Principal Deal, in outlining the course as proposed, in which school, stated that the object of a printing class in a technical school, as in the case of all classes, was twofold; first, so that the boy might, by trying it, see if he had any strong inclination toward the work, and second, in the event of his choosing it, he might have sufficient training in the school to enable him to go out and start in a shop with some workable knowledge of the duties expected of him.

He added that in the city of Buffalo, over 92 per cent of all pupils of the technical school actually working in the trade in the city, and that in Hamilton it was impossible to get into the printing trade unless one had been through the technical school. The chair would not, he said, in any way prejudice the trade in the city, as no work was accepted of performance in the school, expressed the intention of the committee not to include the class in the school unless the printers of the city agreed that it would serve a useful purpose to the trade, and asked the representatives for opinions in this connection.

Twenty-Four Pupils. The equipment of the class, in conformity with the usual practice of technical schools, would be sufficient to engage a class of twenty-four pupils, and would include the customary equipment of a small job printing plant. The idea of the course was to act as a preparation for the trade, and in the case of boys already working in a plant to follow their early experience and give them further knowledge of the essentials of their business.

A. R. Kennedy, in the chair, pointing out the importance of the printing trade in London, and stated that the addition of a printing class to the school would do much to supply a better qualified apprentice to the printing employers in the city, who were often forced to find a boy who not only was suitable for the work, but had had some actual experience along the lines required of him in the shop.

White slippers were worn, and she carried a shower of Sweetheart roses. Miss Reta Mullins was her sister's bridesmaid, and wore a smart frock of henna anson, with trimmings of blue and silver lace. She also wore a gray georgette hat, trimmed with blue flowers and gray streamers falling on the left side. Her bouquet was of sweet peas. Mr. Aubrey Doyle of Detroit acted as best man.

Following the ceremony a wedding breakfast was served at the home of the bride's parents, in Dundas street. The house was prettily decorated with spring flowers, and the guests numbered twenty-five.

Mr. and Mrs. Bridgeman left later on a honeymoon, which will be spent in Montreal and Quebec, the bride travelling in a gown of brown canton crepe, with shoes of the same shade, and a sand shade coat and hat to match. Upon their return they will reside in Windsor.

Oliver October

INSTALLMENT III.

WHO'S WHO IN THE STORY: OLIVER OCTOBER BAXTER is born on a dreary October day. His proud father.

OLIVER BAXTER, senior, entertains a number of congratulatory callers during the evening of October's birthday. Among these are HORACE GOOCH, Baxter's brother-in-law, a stingy, disagreeable "tax shark," and his wife.

IDA GOOCH, REV. HERBERT SAGE, an impoverished young minister, deeply in love with his handsome young wife, JOSEPHINE SAGE, who has given up her ambitions to go on the stage for him.

SILAS LINK and JOSEPH SIKES, Baxter's two old friends, and SERPETA GRIMES, who takes charge of the Baxter household during Mrs. Baxter's illness.

In the presence of this group a strolling gypsy fortune-teller prophesies that Oliver October shall attain great honor and wealth but shall be hanged for a crime which he did not commit, before he reaches the age of thirty.

As Oliver October grows older, many of the gypsy's prophecies are fulfilled. His mother dies while he is still a boy. On his graduation from college he takes an excellent engineering position, which he gives up to enlist with the Canadians and go to France. Meanwhile, Josephine Sage has left her home to go on the stage, where she is a tremendous success.

JANE SAGE, her pretty daughter, and Oliver are boy and girl sweethearts, but as they grow older the relationship is more platonic.

SAMMY PARR is Oliver's chum.

CHAPTER VII.

Home from the War.

The war was over. Oliver October Baxter came through without a scratch.

In April, 1919, he sailed from Brest and on the 10th of May arrived in Rumley, discharged from the army jobless. On the way home he stopped over in Chicago, where he met employers that he would be ready to resume work after a month's much needed rest. He was blandly informed that as soon as anything turned up they would be pleased and happy to take him back into the concern, but at present there wasn't a vacancy in sight.

Being a captain in the army and used to plain speaking, he told the astonished general manager what he thought of him and the whole works besides, and airily went his way.

This time there was no delegation at the station to meet him. His father and Sammy Parr were waiting for him when the train pulled in.

Old Oliver eyed his son narrowly. "What's this I hear about them not taking you back on your old job?" he demanded. He extended his hand, which young Oliver gripped in both of his.

"Aren't you glad to see me back, alive and well?"

"Of course, I'm glad you're back, sonny—of course, I am. I've been praying for this ever since you went away. But, didn't I say you were a fool for giving a $7,000 job to go over and mix up in a war that wasn't any of our business?"

"Oh, I'm not down and out, you know, dad," broke in young Oliver. "So, cheer up! I'm not worrying."

"Course you're not worrying," was his father's sour retort. "You've got me to fall back on, with a good home and grub and a darned fine business to drop into when I'm dead and gone!"

His son could hardly believe his ears. He was bewildered, hurt. Sammy gave Oliver a significant look.

As the two young men hurried across the platform with the bags and bundles, he found opportunity to say to the new arrival:

"Your father will be in a good humor in a minute or two. It's just a habit he's fallen into since you've been away. I guess it's that infernal gypsy business. He's as peevish as blazes a good part of the time."

They drove off in Sammy's car while Oliver plied his old friend with questions.

"Where is Jane?" he asked suddenly.

"Jane Sage? Oh, she's around, somewhere. Things are a lot easier for Mr. Sage now. I guess maybe you haven't heard about his brother dying out in California and leaving him quite a bit of money. It looks like a pretty serious affair between her and the Lansing."

"What's that?" demanded Oliver, startled.

Hospital Library To Be Organized

Women's Auxiliary Asks For Subscriptions For Magazines.

It is expected that a circulation library, in connection with the public library will be formed shortly at Victoria Hospital. Mrs. H. A. Winnett, convener of the magazine and book committee of the newly-formed women auxiliary of the hospital board has suggested the plan to the city librarian, Richard Crouch, and further developments are being awaited.

Mrs. Winnett spoke at a meeting of the mothers' clubs this week, suggested that these organizations assist the work of the auxiliary by supplying subscriptions for magazines, to be delivered at the hospital for the use of the patients. Mrs. Winnett pointed out that the need of books in the hospital by patients who had no friends to supply them with reading matter, especially in the public wards, was a great one. She explained, however, that she was not only appealing to the mothers' clubs but to all citizens to assist with this work.

The report of the work will be presented at the meeting of the auxiliary being held Monday evening next at the home of Mrs. A. T. Edwards. Mrs. Winnett stated that she hoped to secure Sunday school papers to be delivered weekly to the patients.

"Good evening, Jane," said young Lansing as he came up to the steps. "How are you, Captain Baxter? Wonderful night, isn't it?"

"Wonderful," said Oliver, who wasn't thinking at all of the physical aspects of the night.

Twenty minutes later he looked at his wrist watch, uttered an exclamation, and sprang to his feet. "I must be going, Jane," he said. He took himself off in well-simulated haste. As he strode off down the street he was conscious of an extremely uncomfortable feeling that they were glad to be rid of him. A queer little chill of dismay struck in upon him. For a moment he felt utterly desolate and bewildered. He felt lost. Why, it meant that he and Jane couldn't be playmates or chums any longer.

Four days later Jane met him face to face in the street, and looking straight into his eyes, asked:

"What is the matter, Oliver? What have I done?"

"Don't be stupid. Have I offended you? Why haven't you been up to see me?"

He decided to be quite frank about it. "See here, Jane. We've always been pals. I don't know exactly how things stand with you and Lansing. But, while I'm not a suitor, it's only fair that you should know of my feelings."

Her free, joyous laugh interrupted him.

"Oh, you don't know how relieved I am," she cried. "So that's the explanation, is it? You wanted to give me every chance in the world to catch a beau—and to keep him. It's awfully kind of you, Oliver, but it's also very silly. Don't let me find you staying away again!"

And so June drew toward an end with Jane and Oliver back on the old footing—not quite the same as before, owing to the latter's secret conviction that he was playing hob with the doctor's peace of mind.

Oliver's otherwise agreeable and whimsical stay in Rumley was marred by his father's increasing despondency and irritation over the fact that he not only was out of a job, but apparently was making no effort to obtain one. There were times when the old man's scolding became unbearable, and but for the pleadings of Serpeta Grimes and the counsel of Mr. Sage, Oliver would have packed his bags and departed.

"Don't pay any attention to him, Oliver," begged Serpeta. "He's cranky, that's all. He doesn't mean what he says. It would break his heart if you were to get mad and go off and leave him."

"Exactly."

"If I really believed that to be the case, Uncle Herbert, I—I would stay."

Jane, who had been silent during the brief colloquy between her father and Oliver, was studying the young man's face intently. She was puzzled by his manner and by his expression.

"I came over by the back road, along the swamp," he explained, catching her in the act of staring at his muddy shoes. "Father walked part of the way with me. Gee, what a panning he gave me! It was terrible, Mr. Sage. I saw red. I—I had to run—I couldn't stand it. God, how miserable I am!"

Jane and her father listened, speechless, and presently Mr. Sage

CHAPTER IX.

A Mysterious Disappearance.

Shortly before 3 o'clock on the afternoon of June 23, the day before Oliver October was to leave for Chicago and a new position, old Oliver Baxter stepped into the bank at the corner of Clay and Pershing streets and drew out $3,500 in currency. He gave no reason to the teller or to the cashier for the withdrawal of so large an amount in cash.

Oliver October, ten minutes later for supper that evening, found his father in a surprisingly amiable frame of mind, but Mr. Baxter's good humor did not endure. He received a dispatch they had had in the store earlier in the day. The old man had that day offered him an interest in the business if he would remain in Rumley. Oliver was grateful, but he declined the offer, saying he had a profession in which he wanted to make good.

Mr. Baxter's reversion to the subject came when Oliver, before his watch, announced that he must be running along, as he was due over at the Sages to say good-bye to Jane and her father.

"Well, I'll walk part of the way with you," said his father crossly. "I'd like to see if I can't coax you to change your mind about coming into the store. If you don't mind, we'll take the lower road along the swamp. It's a short cut for you—saves you a quarter of a mile or more."

A few minutes before 9 o'clock Oliver October appeared at the home of the Rev. Mr. Sage, somewhat out of breath and visibly agitated.

"I'm awfully sorry to be so late," he apologized. "Father and I had a long and trying confab and I—I couldn't get away. God knows I hate to say it, but I'm glad I'm going tomorrow."

"No, you shouldn't say it, Oliver," said Mr. Sage. "Poor man, he is really not responsible these days. You see, Oliver, for nearly 30 years he has lived in dread of—well, of the absurd thing that gypsy woman said."

"And that is why he wants me to stay here, so that he can watch over and protect me?"

"Exactly."

"If I really believed that to be the case, Uncle Herbert, I—I would stay."

The long and the short of it was, Oliver Baxter had vanished as completely as if swallowed by the earth—and it was the general opinion that that was exactly what happened to him. The long and the short of it was, doubt in the minds of his horrified friends that he had wandered out upon the swamp and had met a ghastly fate in one of the countless pits of mire whose depths no man knew or cared to fathom even in speculation.

Young Girls Need Care

FROM the age of twelve a girl needs all the care the thoughtful mother can give. Many a woman has suffered years of pain and misery—the victim of thoughtlessness or ignorance of the mother who should have guided her during this time.

If she complains of headaches, pains in the back and lower limbs, or if you notice a slowness of thought, nervousness or irritability on the part of your daughter make life easier for her.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is especially adapted for such conditions. It can be taken in safety by any woman, young or old.

Read How These Mothers Helped Their Daughters

Vancouver, B. C.—"My daughter is a young girl who has been having severe pains and weak and dizzy feelings for some time and had lost her appetite. Through an older daughter who had heard of a woman who was taking it for the same trouble, we were told of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. My daughter has been taking it for several months and is quite all right now. I am never without a bottle of it in the house, for I myself take it for that weak, tired, worn-out feeling which sometimes comes to us all." Mrs. J. McDonald, 2947, 26th Ave. East, Vancouver, B.C.

Hamilton, Ontario—"When my daughter was fifteen and until she was fifteen, she suffered every month so that she could hardly move around the house, and when she would have the pains in school she would have to be carried home. She also had headache, dizzy and faint spells, and soreness in her back. I saw your advertisement in the 'Hamilton Spectator' and got Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for her. She does not have the least bit of trouble now, and we recommend your medicine. She works in a candy-shop now and seems well and strong."—Mrs. I. P. CLAGGE, 83 Oxford St., Hamilton, Ontario.

Study Your Type and Dress
the Part

Give a Girl the Chance to Express Individuality and Develop That Elusive Personality—Make Most of Whatever You Have.

The girl who wishes to cultivate that elusive something that we call personality well to pay much attention to her dress. This sounds like superfluity to the sex whose brains are mostly cut on the bias and shirred in the middle, and which is more concerned over the hang of a skirt than it is over the state of its immortal soul.

It is not too much to say that three-fourths of women's thoughts and interest in life and heartiest desires and envies are concentrated upon clothes, and the marvel always is that they can put so much effort on a subject and get such poor results.

For the great majority of women only think of dress in terms of fashion, and they follow the mode of the moment as sheep follow their leader over a wall. They wear blue or purple, pink or green, short skirts or long skirts, tight ones or full ones, without any reference to their complexion, or whether their ankles are sylphlike or like legs of a piano, or whether they are living skeletons, or have feather-figures.

That is that thousands upon thousands of women look as if their worst enemy had bought their clothes, and that their hats were a premeditated insult to their faces. But they go their way, serene and happy, having done worst they could by themselves, but blissful in the knowledge that they are wearing what everybody else is wearing.

Apparently it never enters the average woman's head that by dressing herself in the feminine uniform of the hour she makes herself indistinguishable in the mob, or that she could call attention to herself by breaking away from it, and dressing to suit her individual type. Still less does it occur to her that her clothes offer an invaluable mode of self-expression, and that by them she can emphasize her good points and camouflage her defects.

Very moving picture, every play she sees, offers a girl an object lesson in the psychology of clothes that she does not heed. She never asks herself the innocent, trusting maiden, too artless for her own good, always a white muslin and a blue sash; why the ingenue is always a mad fluffy ruffles; why the betrayed heroine always wears a slinky black; why the adventuress is clothed in crimson and spangles; why the invariably wears long jade earrings, and a quart of beads, and verily else.

As stage managers have found that the surest way to make an audience visualize a woman in a certain way is to have her dress the part. A girl, of course, be as innocent in a crimson dress as a white one; a girl might be as heartbroken in a pink silk and lace negligee as she is in a grabbed black alpaca, but it would take a long argument to convince us that we wouldn't weep nearly as freely over her woes as we do when we have an eye for her in the clothes that tell us at once just what a poor, timid, persecuted heroine she is.

Why this would suggest to every girl the wisdom of retiring to her closet and having a heart-to-heart session with her wardrobe, and a vivacious party with her character, and thereby try to find out how to dress herself as her body, so as best and most effectively to present her individuality, so to speak.

If she is of the bold and dashing type, let her flaunt herself in a sunflower in daring costumes and flaming colors, but if she is of the quiet and gentle sort, soft fabrics, chiffons and laces and steel shades belong to her, and make her look like the traditional violet that every man dreams of securing as a wife.

The girl who is flat-chested and athletic rejoice in her sport clothes. Her note, and brings out a certain plump boyishness which is her great attraction. But let the girl who is plump and gracious curves, make most of her femininity by decking herself out in the frilliest froth that she can find. Each will lose in charm if she swaps her plumage with the other.

Dangling ornaments, floating ribbons and jingling bracelets belong to the gay and foolish and frivolous, but they detract from the dignity of the stately, thoughtful, serious-minded woman. A tailor-made suit is equal to a certificate of virtue, and when a girl is going for a job a plain, dark-colored suit will do more to land her position than a gilt-edged reference. Nobody ever believes that a girl in a low-necked, no-sleeved frock can ever be a competent business-woman. She doesn't look it.

Every woman knows that her eyes seem twice as blue if she has a blueing to her hat, and that she can turn a spotlight on her every freckle by wearing a spotted dress. In the same way she can bring out her characteristics by the way she dresses. If she wishes to emphasize her cuteness, she can do it by dressing like a baby doll. If she wishes to be a goddess, she can add to her divinity by long-trailing robes. If she wishes to be thought a good sport and treated as a pal by men, sport clothes hers, while if domesticity is her long suit, she can turn the trick wearing ruffled little white aprons at home.

So study your type, girls, and dress the part, if you want to be the most of whatever charms with which nature has endowed.

WOMEN and THE HOME

It Was All Jerry Muskrat Could Do To Reach His Castle In the Bank

By THORNTON W. BURGESS.

There was no doubt about it, the time had come to move. The water was already up around Jerry Muskrat's ankles in his bedroom. "Well," said Jerry to himself, "I guess I've got to go. This water may not last long in here, but it will be pretty damp for a while. I'm glad I've got that snug room high up in the bank. If I hadn't I would have nowhere to go."

He dived down through the tunnel leading from his bedroom to the bottom of the Smiling Pool. He swam out and up until his head was above water. Then he started for what he called his castle in the bank. "My," exclaimed Jerry Muskrat, "it is all I can do to swim against this current."

Now, Jerry is a good swimmer. He is a very good swimmer. But though he swam with all his strength, it was slow work getting over to the bank. The water was rushing down through the Smiling Pool so swiftly that it was all Jerry could do to move ahead against it. At last he got out of the swift current, and swimming became easier. When he was right opposite the entrance to his castle in the bank he drew a long breath, dived and swam to the entrance, which was under water. He was surprised to find how far up in the tunnel that water was. But at last he came out of the water and scrambled up the long tunnel to the snug room he had prepared quite a distance back, and just under the grass roots on the Green Meadows.

"Phew!" exclaimed Jerry. "That was a hard trip. But now I'm here I have nothing to worry about. I will live here until the water goes down and my house dries out. I don't like these spring floods. No, sir, I don't like these spring floods. I'm always glad when spring comes, but I do hate these floods. There's one thing about it, and that is they do not last very long."

Truly it seemed that Jerry had no cause to worry about anything. His castle in the bank was a snug room far back, and as I have said before, just under the grass roots. From it a tunnel led down and branched into several short tunnels, each with an opening under water. This was to give him more than one way of escape should he find an enemy in there.

"Phew!" exclaimed Jerry. "That was a hard trip."

Then there was a very private back entrance from the Green Meadows. Jerry had worked hard digging that castle in the bank. He even had some food stored there.

So moving wasn't really so bad after all. He could be just as comfortable here in the bank as he had been in his house out in the Smiling Pool. Still, he did dislike to leave that house, and he was worried for fear the water might wash it away. He had worked so hard building that house that he couldn't bear to think of losing it.

Jerry first carefully looked and smelled all about in his tunnels and his bedroom to make sure that no stranger had been there unknown to him. There wasn't a trace of anybody. There was no odor of another Muskrat or of Billy Mink. Satisfied of this, Jerry opened his back door and went out on to the Green Meadows. He sniffed the soft, warm air.

"It is going to be warmer than ever," said he. "That will mean that the snow will melt faster than ever. There certainly is going to be a big flood this year. Well, I have nothing to worry about over here, and floods don't last long. There is nothing like having two homes."

Dr. Slack Speaks To Trained Nurses

Gives Interesting Address to Edith Cavell Nurses.

Dr. A. J. Slack, distributor of insulin for London and Western Ontario, gave an instructive talk at the regular meeting of the Edith Cavell Association of trained nurses held this week at the Institute of Public Health. In his talk he explained the distribution, preparation and method of administration of insulin and also spoke of diabetes, showing how the death rate from this disease has been lessened since the discovery of insulin. He gave many valuable suggestions to the nurses in regard to nursing patients being treated with insulin.

A number of nurses of St. Joseph's and Victoria Alumnae were also present at the meeting, which was presided over by the president, Miss Blanche Rowe, who also gave an interesting report of the Graduate Nurses of Ontario convention held recently in Windsor, at which she attended as a delegate.

The next meeting of the association will be held at Byron Sanatorium through the courtesy of the authorities, and an address on tuberculosis will be given. The meeting is being held the last Monday in May.

WEDNESDAY, APRIL 30, 1924.

The Woodsworth Amendment Stands

Hon. Arthur Meighen made the best of a poor position in trying to convince Mr. Speaker Lemieux that the Woodsworth amendment to the budget was only a straw man. The leader of the opposition took several runs and several thrusts at the thing, but the Speaker waved him aside. Mr. Meighen claimed that a private member had no right to put in an amendment calling for a tax on the expenditure of public moneys, but precedent was quoted to show that it could be done, and the Speaker also held that the rights of private members should not be too closely confined, otherwise they might find themselves in a position bordering on positive exclusion.

So there it stands. The Hon. Arthur cannot get over it or around it, so he must face it. The amendment calls for a further reduction in the tariff. But Mr. Meighen cannot countenance such a thing. Therefore when it comes to a vote he must vote against it, and probably in favor of the budget as it stands, because there is nothing else to vote for.

The situation may provide a nice turn in the rules of debate, but it also has in it a humorous situation that cannot pass unnoticed. It leaves the Conservatives in the House in the position of being all dressed up and no place to go.

They have a nicely worded amendment of their own, one that would draw forth applause in any Tory caucus, but they have no place to lodge the thing. On the political stage there is only one seat reserved for Mr. Woodsworth sitting there, legs crossed, and with no intention of getting out before the performance is over.

So Hon. Mr. Meighen and his supporters can thunder away for a week or so, but certainly the hour will come when the division bell rings, and the record of the votes must be made. When the Conservatives in the House rise to support the budget of the government we hope no person smiles or applauds too vigorously. Or it may be that by that time they will vote willingly and seriously for the government. There is no saying when a great light of new vision may burst across their dark path. There are wonderful possibilities in the situation.

Should Have Had One Definite Rule

There is confusion in making out income tax papers this year. Some have claimed an exemption allowance of $500 per child, while others have paid on the old basis of $300 allowance.

There is an amendment to the budget, in the name of Hon. Mr. Robb, providing for the $500 limit, but it is not yet law, although it seems certain that it will be.

The man who paid on the $500 basis takes the chance of that amount becoming law before his papers are dealt with; if his guess is good he has saved $8 per head on his children. The man who paid on the $300 basis will have to wait to get a rebate.

If they have to start in to make rebates to those who have paid too much, or collect more from those who have not paid enough, there will be a lot of work that could have been avoided by a definite ruling one way or the other in the first place.

Mr. Manion Runs Wild

Hon. F. G. Manion, of Fort William, will be a sorely disappointed man if Canada is not ruined or swallowed up by United States. In his address at Ottawa he harped upon one string, and it was a doleful tone that he brought forth. His high spots were struck in such remarks as:

"Injure or ruin the Canadian industries."
"A mad desire to retain power at any price."
"Not merely national suicide, but national homicide."

"Betrayal of interests and disregard of pledges."

"Canada a mere commercial appendage of United States and might lead ultimately to annexation."

That is the attitude of Mr. Manion on the budget. He can see no good thing in it, and so he is prepared to give battle as he and other Conservatives did in 1911 on the question of Canada being annexed to United States.

The utterance of F. M. Morton, general superintendent of the International Harvester Company at Hamilton, does not read like the statement of Mr. Manion. He admits that competition will be more severe for his company, and that it will be harder work to make progress, but he is determined to go ahead and make the best of it. He did not post a notice telling the employees that the works would close, but rather will every energy of the firm be bent toward making progress under the altered conditions, so that they may be in position to take advantage of any increase in buying as a result of the change in the price of farm machinery.

Mr. Manion uses the "national suicide" and "betrayal of interests and disregard of pledges." Those are strong phrases, and the man using them must be prepared to live with them.

The budget brought down by the King government does not aim to destroy any Canadian industry; no government would be fit to hold office that knowingly embarked on any such program. Mr. Manion knows that the policy seeks an all-round development of Canada; seeks the bringing about of favorable conditions for people to live, and aims to develop the resources of the country in a way that will leave the benefit right here in Canada.

Mr. Manion's bombastic utterances cannot be justified even on the grounds of extreme and blinded partisanship. His utterances constitute a scarecrow to Canadian business. They are made with the idea of spreading discouragement in order to create political capital.

If all the people in Canada started talking in a similar strain it surely would not be long before we were seeking some nation to swallow us up. He is helping to accomplish the very purpose he pretends to deplore.

The King government can stand constructive and reasonable criticism of its budget or anything else it does. As a government it should welcome the advice of any and all members, regardless of where they sit, providing it is sound and delivered in good faith. But when Hon. Mr. Manion makes use of his place in the Canadian Parliament to preach a gospel of woe, of political hatred, and of treachery and betrayal on the part of the government he has simply put himself out of court through the nonsense of his utterances and the harm he seeks to work on Canadian business in general.

One Nation Is Very Liberal.

The Los Angeles Times says:

"There isn't any Liberal party in this country. But most of the European countries seem to think our government ought to be liberal to the point of absolute recklessness."

That may be very good material for American consumption, but it is not true to fact.

The greatest of all European nations, Britain, is paying to United States every dollar it owes from war debt, contracted when Britain was fighting a battle that United States had to join in her own interests at a later date.

Britain is paying all this, and is paying interest as well, a matter that might very well have been wiped off.

United States papers know all these facts, and they should be the first to recognize them.

A Lesson From Taxation

When a man goes in to pay his income tax he begins to realize that there is a great deal more truth than he generally admits in a number of political phrases. He has heard a good many times the words, "The burden of taxation," or "Taking the money from the people."

Too often he has associated all these sayings with political meetings; they sound very well around election time, and of course politicians have to talk about something. Further than that he may not have paid much attention to the matter.

But when he goes over to the taxing office, puts down what he earns and what he can claim exemption on, and is asked for a check for the amount as a direct contribution to the carrying on of the business of the country, he begins to see things in a different light. It is no longer a matter of phrase-making at political gatherings. It is a serious business of putting up real money that he could probably use just as well as the government for a dozen and one things.

He begins to realize that the more money a government spends, the more he has to put up. He gets a very pointed lesson on the often forgotten truth that there is no such thing as easy money from the government. He knows for a fact that when the government wants money there is only one source to draw from, viz., the people.

If we had learned that lesson years ago by direct taxation, or by any other means, there might not be such a call for public funds today. It will have the effect of making people think hard and think twice before they launch any more deputations showing Ottawa how to spend money. It will have the effect of causing us to tell any government that happens to be there to spend less.

The paying of income tax is a real lesson in the fact that the family purse is in reality the government purse.

Being Run As a Railway

J. G. Robichaud, M.P. for Gloucester, N.B., protested in the Commons at Ottawa against the Intercolonial Railway being submerged in the Canadian National system.

There was only one course open in dealing with this matter, and that was to make the Intercolonial part of the national system and operate it as such.

The old Intercolonial provided too many free rides for people in the maritimes, and was a long, long way from being run as a railway on business principles.

It is in the National Railways system, and there it will have to stay. On no other grounds could we have a national railway system.

Fighting for Supremacy.

Seaplanes, on the round-the-world trip, are having a chance to show what they can do under any or all forces. The "Seattle" landed in a creek in Alaska. To get away again it was necessary to fly out in the face of a combination gale and snowstorm.

The machine did it in the face of a hurricane that drove the snow with blinding force. Quite different to many of the performances given under picked weather conditions.

It is such battles as this that aircraft must fight in order to win for themselves a permanent place in the affairs of the world. Nature and the elements that go with it are fickle and steady in turns, and the engineering world must learn to match wits with its every whim.

Note and Comment.

The trembling citizen who goes to the income tax office gets a real thrill. A red-coated officer to the right, another to the left. As he marched down this line he forgot all the things he was going to say to the collector.

Three officers surrounded Hon. Peter Smith's strong box in a Stratford bank while Peter himself turned the key for the official opening. Like old Mother Hubbard who went to the cupboard, the strong box had no bones.

Chicago's plot to steal water from the Great Lakes is likely to be defeated. The defeat should come decisively, quickly and in such certain terms that never again will such a miserable trick be attempted.

MORE IMPOSSIBILITIES.

You won't believe this tale, and I confess it made me wonder; I telephoned today and I was given the right number.

I never got a ruder shock Since first my teacher spanked me; A nickel, I the waiter tipped, And he—Great guns!—he thanked me.

I took Min to a restaurant, 'Twas far beyond my means; The menu said "Frogs' legs and squab," But Minnie ordered "Beans."

My wife went out to buy a chair; "That walnut is divine," She told the clerk, "But it's so dear, You'd better give me pine."

I said I'd let her buy a hat If she could just contrive To pay not more than thirty bucks, So she bought one for five.

The mayor, it is understood, favors the suggestion that civic officials organize a baseball team. "Of course," he said in an interview, "I won't allow it unless they make me the pitcher."

"The first thing to do," he added, "is to join a league. I am personally in favor of the Drama League, but Ald. Towe prefers the Ontario Motor League."

"I understand that Ald. Anderson is a Moose. It would be great to have a moose for mascot."

"I believe it would be a wonderful team," the mayor continued. "We'd put the assessment commissioner on the collecting end. Aldermen Greer, Drake and Smith are always opposing my policies, so we would make them stay on the bench. They would make splendid utility men."

"I admit I never threw a ball before, but as a boy I pitched a mean tent."

Ald. Drake denounced the idea. "Baseball is a brutal game," he declared. "If I attempted to play I am sure Sir Francis would turn over in his grave."

"It's a good chance to put London on the map," opined Ald. Smith, "but I refuse to play if the people are going to throw pop bottles. I don't care to go through life pop-eyed."

"Furthermore," Ald. Smith enunciated, "I refuse to play unless I am the pitcher. I have better curves than Mayor Wenige. If you don't believe it, look at me some day in a bathing suit."

Ald. Greer declined to comment on the subject. "I have nothing to say for publication," he stated. "There is one member of the council, however, who would not make an acceptable player, because he is almost invariably off his base. Remember, I have mentioned no names."

Although not officially announced, it is a practical certainty that the position of catcher would go to Ald. Towe. "If I get the job," Ald. Towe said, "I will not wear a mask like other catchers. I am not afraid of showing my face behind a plate. It doesn't matter whether it's a plate of beans or a plate of spaghetti."

Sir Adam Beck thought the scheme splendid. "If they light their diamond with hydro," he said, "more power to them."

His Way of Farmin'

I heard a man the other day stand up and speak a long oration, how farmers on concession ten would have to rise and save the nation.

They had no business, so he said, with fist a-poundin' like a smithy, to leave the sod where they belong and check their baggage for the city. Their business was to stay to home and gouge great holes into the ground, and not to bother with the business of other folks who wander round.

He said they had within their power to feed the people oats and hay, if they'd just settle down for good and at their diggin' stay and stay.

He took the bread clean out of us, as he spoke on red after red, aroun' in our humble mind a wish to dwell upon the sod.

It would be great, thinks I for one, to go and work with such a gent, a-dwellin' in the clover fields and campin' there in sweet content.

So when he'd done says I to him, I'd like to work for you and chore, and wield a hoe upon your claim, concession ten and on lot four. I'd drive the brindle cows each day, and feed the swine their bran and whey, my horny fist shall smite the weed and gather up the fresh chopped hay.

But then this spouter turns on me, his fists were white and chubby too, he smiled at my poor simple faith at thinkin' what he said was true. Says he to me, young man look here, I'm not a farmer chasin' dew, but I am paid my daily bread for tellin' others what to do.—ARK.

Dancing

A PREACHER recently put the gospel trumpet to his lips and sounded the charge against dancing.

He declares it to be "an institution founded by Satan," and "Satan's masterpiece of super-devilry and sex satisfaction."

Let the sexes try dancing separately," he says. "You know as well as I do that if men and women danced separately the dance would lose its natural magic, and instead of the fascination of hugging to music you would have just movements cold and unemotional."

The reverend gentleman is correct.

But does that condemn it?

The attraction between man and woman is the most powerful, insistent and unescapable of all the natural emotions.

AND the thing to do with a natural emotion is to idealize it, not suppress it.

Suppressed, it becomes sneaking, poisonous, dangerous.

Expressed, under proper control of intelligence and good manners, it becomes wholesome.

It is of no use for people, even preachers, to attempt to escape being human. They are liable to become devilish.

It is the function of society, of art and of religion not to extirpate the natural instincts, but to put them in their place, to subordinate them, to make them sound and beautiful.

The wise have tried to uphold desire. It has never worked.

The Buddhists tried it, and the ascetics and celibates of the middle ages.

The wise have never pleased. It was often tragic.

Why not frankly admit that we are human beings? Why not quit talking about wickedness and talk a bit about disorder? Why not cease struggling to be impossible unsexed saints and bend our efforts toward making of ourselves decent, disciplined and intelligent human creatures?

WHERE MEN ARE KILLED

ONE hundred and eleven men were down in the Benwood mine, West Virginia, on Monday.

They all went in there in the best of health, ready for their shift at the working place, perhaps one mile, two miles, or maybe three miles, from the mouth of the mine.

There will be none of them taken out alive.

That statement might just as well have been made the minute the explosion occurred, for the history of mine accidents, although full of daring rescue work, gives little hope of any of the men entombed ever coming out alive.

It is only after hours and days of desperate work that the men are taken out. They are dead, some of them injured by the force of the explosion, but the most of them without a mark of injury—poisoned.

It is not a mark of injury in their tracks with not a chance in a thousand of getting out alive.

The man surveys his coal bin, and he complains about the occasional clinker he has to take out of the grades of the furnace. He knows nothing of the romance, or rather the tragedy, that may have accompanied the work of taking that coal from the bowels of the earth.

There are different methods of mining, according to the lay of the coal and the location of the claim. Many of the mines, in British Columbia, for instance, are entered right into the side of the mountain. Coal Creek, five miles from Fernie, illustrates this kind of mining, and it has had its disasters, fortunately not so frequent in recent years.

The First Precautions.

GOING into the wash house safety lanterns are secured. They are a hardy little outfit, made of a series of gauze through which the gas finds its way, and they are fastened to the miner's head by a strap. When lit the little flame at best can't boast of anything more than a quarter of a candle power. An inquiring man on duty asks the privilege—demanded it—of looking through your pockets for matches or any inflammable article. One of the pit bosses happened to be on the spot that day and he undertakes to show you through.

Armed with the lamp we enter the mouth of the mine, making sure that none of the little dump cars are on the way out. These are drawn by air pressure for a certain distance inside the mine. It is not possible to use electricity for fear of a spark, for there is gas in this mine.

We enter a place that looks like a culvert under a railroad crossing. It is high enough so a tall man will hardly hit his head, but no higher. Timbers support the sides and top and thousands of these timbers are used every week in driving the working places farther and farther back in the quest for coal.

Perhaps we have guests in a hundred yards when the pit boss suggests that we sit down for a while until we get "mine eyes." He has noticed that the light of the lamp is not sufficient. The suggestion is an agreeable one, for previously you have bumped your head against the rock in the roof, where it has sloped sharply down.

Timbers are not needed at this sort of the mine. But when you sit at the side of the track for five minutes. At the end of that time you can see the rails, the walls, the man who is with you, and your little quarter candlepower lamp has become quite an efficient instrument of illumination.

A Maze of Roads.

SO on you go. Another hundred yards, two, three hundred yards. A horse trots along with a string of cars. He has brought them from away back in the mine and taken them out to where the air of the mine and then to the tippie for weighing, screening and shipping.

We first turn to the right and then to the left; then north from a piece, along what look like streets without names and without direction. After what seems like a trip of miles, you hear a sharp pick, pick, and the miners, three in number, in there are having a good day. At last we are at the coal. The air is right in front, a great, black wall, and the miners hewing away at it, under-cutting and taking it out in the most expert way. The trackmen have followed right into this spot, and the rails haul the little cars in to be filled and taken away again. Water drips from the roof, more of it is on the floor. It is a wet spot, the miners are wet from the drip and from walking in the pools below, but it's all in a day's work.

The timbermen are there, too, ready to set up their sturdy framework along the sides and over the top. But in this spot there seems to be no top. The coal keeps on running down. It's good, and good coal, but there is too much gas up on top.

"Let's see your lamp, son, and I'll show you where the gas is," remarks one of the timbermen from the top of a stubby ladder on which he is standing.

Plenty of Gas There.

WE'RE not particularly anxious for any demonstration, but being in there to see all that is to be seen, the lantern is handed over. He places it a short distance above where the roof should be. The flame, formerly bright, turns to a sickly-looking yellow, and gets into a long, drawn-out shape. It looks as though it were going to die out there, but the miner knows what he is doing and he takes it down, with the none too pleasant remark that "there's enough gas up there to blow the top off the mountain."

Well, then, how about getting air in such a place? It is very carefully figured out. The term brattice is often seen in reports of mine disasters. Brattice work is made almost entirely of a substance that looks like burliap. It is really a tunnel for the taking of air into the mine. It is estimated in advance. The number of horses and mules and human beings in the mine is known. The animals are mentioned first, for they must breathe the just the same as the men, and in cubic feet of air they eat their share. There must be a certain amount of fresh air put into that mine and a certain amount of foul air taken out, otherwise there would be trouble.

No Chance To Fight.

COMING out of that working place, the fire boss, in one of his few secular moods, asks which way we will turn. Our guess is to the right, but he says no, "you'd never get out going that way." It's when you are away back in the mine there that it is possible to get some faint idea of what it means to be in there when a fire explosion takes place. That is the worst of them all. The way that accident at Benwood makes it almost certain that it was a fire explosion.

An ordinary "bump" or gas explosion is localized and it does not run through the mine. But when the fire gets a start, only a spark some- times, it feeds on gas and coal dust, and runs the limits of the mine, burning out all the life-giving qualities of the air, and leaving nothing for the miner to breathe but the deadly "choke-damp."

Even his trusted little safety lamp can't live in that stuff. It sputters, turns yellow and dies, and so does the miner. Left there in that terrible darkness, nothing around him but poison gas, what chance has he to get out? Practically none. He may make a desperate attempt, with a wet handkerchief over his nose, to make his way to an air tunnel, but the chances are all against him. He can't even put up the struggle for which his sturdy frame so well fits him. There have been cases where miners, by superhuman effort, and by their expert knowledge of the underground workings, have made their escape, but these cases are pitifully few and far between. The man who has been in through a coal mine cannot read the disaster at Benwood mines without a shudder. He has some idea of what those poor victims went through. They will not take miners out alive, and the world pays for its coal in blood and sorrow, as well as in dollars and cents.

Beatty's Men In Top Form For Getaway M.-O. Clash In Saginaw

LONDON TECUMSEHS SET FOR MINT OPENER TODAY

Coogans' Eleventh Hour Arrival Means Stronger Pitching Staff.

BEATTY CONFIDENT

Individual Prowess and Youth Are Features of Forest City Outfit.

By C. S. GRAFTON, Sporting Editor of The Advertiser.

Saginaw, April 29.—Jack Beatty's Tecumsehs blew into town tonight from Northville ready to do battle in the Mint League opener here tomorrow. This morning Earl Stimpson was sighting a tour of the small hamlet of Northville, and it backfired on him. The only person he met in Northville was the doctor who told him it was strained tendons in the wrist and five or six days of rest.

Fortunately Parker, an experienced outfielder from the Cotton States League, arrived this morning to join the team, and Beatty is not so worried over Stimpson's accident as he might otherwise have been.

Bill Coogans was also an unexpected arrival yesterday. Coogans, who steadily maintained up going three weeks ago that he wasn't going to play, and was on the retired list, changed his mind, and he has been changing trains for the last 36 hours, getting to this region from his home in New York City and trying to catch up to the Beatty men who were on the flit.

Beatty wasn't altogether downcast over Bill's appearance, although he had made arrangements to complete his squad in the belief that Coogans was going to spend the summer at home. He was even less downcast after he saw the big fellow, who toiled both in the outfield and on the hill regularly last season, work several innings.

Coogans is in condition. Coogans says he has been training at home, and his work this morning at Northville showed it, according to Beatty. The squad is in splendid condition, except they've all got cricks in their necks, looking at the tall four-story buildings since they left the pastoral surroundings of Three Rivers, where there was nothing but one movie in the way of entertainment. The rush and bustle of Saginaw have them all flustered.

The squad now numbers seventeen. Beatty, whom London's fans are going to like when they get really acquainted with him, wears a satisfied expression. He realizes that he has a young team, and isn't making any predictions. He likes the squad in every department. His outfielders have shown plenty of hitting power in their last few games, and the infield looks unusually good. Beatty is particularly impressed with Sandquist, who has been playing to third. He's impressed with reservations, as Beatty's long experience has taught him all about "the flowers that bloom in the spring, tra-la." Barbelon is going better at shortstop, his regular position.

Naleway, the Tigers recruit, has been shifted over to second, which means a totally readjusted inner works, except Beatty himself.

Pitchers Strengthened. Coogans is certainly going to add strength to a pitching staff that looks strong already. Last year Coogans had little chance to show real form, as he played the outfield and took his regular turn in the box, and sometimes more than that.

Harris, however, is drawing the pitching assignment for tomorrow.

SATURDAY WILL DECIDE INTERNATIONAL ICE ISSUE

Canadian Press Despatch.
Montreal, April 29.—The fate of international hockey as far as it affects the N. H. L. will be settled at noon when a meeting of the governing body of the N. H. L. will be held in Toronto. Such investigations as has been made by league directors up to the present leads them to believe that the U. S. interests will not be ready for next season, and if that is the case they do not wish discussion to continue.

No representatives of the American interests will attend Saturday's meeting. A definite announcement will follow the conference as to whether the N. H. L. will admit U. S. clubs to the loop for the 1924-25 play.

A request will be made that before any money is paid out for outfitting the Olympic committee, the qualification of the divers, officials and the proper selection of competitors be thoroughly investigated."

CENTRAL C. I. RUNNERS PREPARING FOR MEET

That Central Collegiate athletes will endeavor to hold the Wossa shields, emblematic of the junior and senior championships, in the meet on May 31, is evident in the fact that they have already begun their trials. Last night at Queen's Park, under the direction of E. O. Hall, the trial for the senior mile was run off, the honors falling to Basil Flood, who made the distance well under the time limit. Dick Hungerford, ran a close second. Both boys will represent the school.

Arrangements have been made for further trials tonight, and tomorrow night, when the jumpers and sprinters who are to represent the school will be decided upon.

U. S. OLYMPIC RUGBY TEAM REACHES PARIS

Nobody To Meet Stars As They Arrive At Station.

Associated Press Despatch.
Paris, April 29.—Tired and disheveled, the United States Olympic rugby team reached Paris late last night. They neglected the formality of having French visas on their passports before they left England, and when they landed at Boulogne, after an exceptionally rough passage, they fell into a red tape entanglement, from which it took all afternoon to extricate them.

The French reception committee, having given them up for lost, there was nobody to meet them at the Paris terminal. They did not know where to go or what to do, when providence, in the shape of a newspaper correspondent, appeared and piloted them to a hotel on the other side of Paris, where rooms had been reserved for them.

Milwaukee, April 29.—The local footballers have commenced practice in earnest, and there is plenty of good material available. It has been decided to enter a junior and intermediate team in the W. F. A. series.

Cardiff City is making a bold bid with Huddersfield to win the English League first division.

Leeds United are almost certain of promotion with Bury as their companions.

Chelsea have won their last three games, and those without Andy Wilson and Weehan, who are both out for the rest of the season, but it is almost too early to say a miracle can save them from relegation with Middlesbrough.

Wolverhampton and Rochdale are running neck to neck in the third division. The famous Wolves, hanging on to top place by goal average only.

Millwall are making every effort to win the southern section, with Portsmouth in close attendance.

Never before have the different leagues had such a close run for honors as this year.

Zev Defeated By St. James

Three-Year-Old Takes $6,000 Paumonok Handicap.

Associated Press Despatch.
New York, April 29.—Making his first appearance under colors as a four-year-old, Zev, the Ranococas stable's thoroughbred champion of 1923, and greatest money winner of all time, was decisively beaten today by St. James, George D. Widener's crack three-year-old colt, in the $6,000 Paumonok handicap at Jamaica track, opening feature of the metropolitan racing season. The time was 1:11 3-5 for six furlongs.

Zev, ridden by Earl Sande, made a gallant bid for victory, but the advantage of eighteen pounds in weight which the Ranococas star conceded, proved too great a handicap.

SOCCER SKICK-OFFS

Saturday's games in the London and District League call for C. N. R. at St. John's Rovers; Maple Leafs at St. Andrews, and R. C. L. at United Vets in St. Thomas.

Thursday night of this week the L. and D. executive will meet in the Tecumseh House to arrange games for the trophy series during the coming summer.

Newcastle has evidently shaken off the jinx. Their first appearance at the new Wembley Stadium resulted in the Geordies getting the cup. It was expected to have been a bitter pill for the Villans, especially as it was their jubilee year. Not one of Newcastle's team had ever played in the final. Much, their experienced goalie, having to stand down at the last minute. Nine of Newcastle's team were Scotchmen, while the Villa's team was all English, with the exception of one.

Cardiff City is making a bold bid with Huddersfield to win the English League first division.

Leeds United are almost certain of promotion with Bury as their companions.

Chelsea have won their last three games, and those without Andy Wilson and Weehan, who are both out for the rest of the season, but it is almost too early to say a miracle can save them from relegation with Middlesbrough.

Wolverhampton and Rochdale are running neck to neck in the third division. The famous Wolves, hanging on to top place by goal average only.

Millwall are making every effort to win the southern section, with Portsmouth in close attendance.

Never before have the different leagues had such a close run for honors as this year.

Two New Softball Leagues Planned For London This Summer

GREAT EXPANSION SEEN BY SOFTBALL BACKERS

Plans Laid To Form Merchants and Inter-Club Circuits.

MEETING ON FRIDAY

Provincial Association Anxious To Include Every Community in Competition.

Softball is due for great expansion in London, this summer judging from the interest already in evidence not only among the clubs which composed the local league last season, but also by several other organizations which are anxious to take up the popular summer pastime. A meeting has been called for Brisco's store, Friday night to effect organization.

It is the intention of backers of the game here to conduct three circuits this year, a retail merchants' league and a club loop, as well as the original city league. New entries to date include Smalman's, Street, Railway, R. J. Young's, and several more are expected before the meeting, Friday night.

All last year's teams, including Richard-Wilcox, Perrin's, O. R. George, White and Sons, Pennin's and Alert Club, will in all probability come in again this summer.

All games will be played on the federal square, and if enough teams enter there will be matches every night.

Progress Marked
Almost unprecedented progress has been made in the growth of the Ontario Softball Association since its inception in Hamilton last year. From but a small nucleus this circuit has expanded until this year it comprises no less than twenty-one teams in various parts of the province, with the possibility of many more entering before the season is under way.

The 1924 executive is anxious that every community where softball is played be represented in the association this year.

The association has as its object the development of the popular summer pastime in Ontario and controls the play-offs for provincial honors. It is expected that there will be senior, intermediate, junior and girls' divisions of the association, and the grouping will be such as to give every league represented a chance to win the handsome silver trophies provided by the association.

The entrance fee for the senior divisions is $10 for each league affiliating and $5 for each player. Playing certificates and official rule books and constitutions are provided. The 1924 rules are just at press and copies will be supplied on request.

The following main points will no doubt be of interest.

Softball Rules
1. The size of ball shall be 14 inches in the senior, intermediate and junior divisions and 12 inches in the girls'. Inseam ball to be used.
2. Pitching box shall be 33 feet from centre of home plate to pitching slab.
3. Baseline shall be 45 feet in length.
4. A baserunner must hold the base until the ball crosses plate, irrespective of whether batter makes safe hit or not.
(a) If baserunner leaves base before ball crosses plate and is hit he shall return to base originally occupied. If hit is made the batter shall advance only to the last unoccupied base.
(b) If a baserunner, in trying to steal, leaves the base before the ball crosses home plate, and is played on successfully, he shall be declared out.
(c) A baserunner may be doubled on a foul tip caught. He may, however, advance on foul tip caught if he holds his base until the ball has been caught.

LONDON JEWELER COMMITS SUICIDE

Edward Pearce, Becher Street, Takes Dose of Poison.

The death of Edward Pearce, watchmaker, living at 80 1/2 Becher street, under tragic circumstances, came as a shock to his wide circle of friends in London. Mr. Pearce ended his life by taking a dose of poison, cyanide of potassium being used.

He had conducted a business in London as an expert watchmaker for some years, being located on Dundas street next to the Belvedere Hotel. He was joined in this business about a year ago by his brother from England. He enjoyed a good volume of business, and his affairs there were in a satisfactory state.

His relatives and friends are at a complete loss to establish any motive for his last act.

Mr. Pearce was a member of the choir and made a quartet in the Street Baptist Church. He was in his place in the choir on Sunday, both morning and evening, and the latter service taking tenor solo parts in a cantata after the regular service.

He was of a particularly bright and congenial disposition, and there was nothing in his actions on Sunday to indicate that he contemplated anything unusual.

He leaves a widow and one boy, three years of age. An inquest was not considered necessary.

R. L. FOSTER RECEIVES INSURANCE POSITION

Appointed Provincial Superintendent, Succeeding V. E. Gray.

Canadian Press Despatch. Toronto, April 29.—The Ontario government today appointed R. Leighton Foster to the position of provincial superintendent of insurance, left vacant by the recent resignation of V. E. Gray. The new incumbent of the position is a lawyer.

Mr. Foster has been retained by the government for protracted periods during the last four years as sessional law clerk, and two years ago he served as secretary to the select committee of the Legislature, which sat during the recess to consider the report of the Hon. Mr. Justice Masten, insurance commissioner.

BRITISH DEMAND IS HEAVY FOR CANADIAN CATTLE

Canadian Press Despatch. Ottawa, April 29.—The market possibilities for Canadian store cattle in Great Britain are almost unlimited. J. H. Grisdale, deputy minister of agriculture, told the agriculture committee of the House of Commons here today. With Ireland shipping as many as one million head per year to England and Scotland, the market is there for Canadian store cattle. Up to the present Canada had only shipped a small number, owing to the cost of marketing, he said. The market for chilled beef in the United Kingdom might be made very profitable if the position of the Canadian product could be made secure.

MARLER, LIBERAL, TO VOTE AGAINST THE 1924 BUDGET

Montreal Member's Announcement Makes First Break In The Liberal Ranks.

OUTLINES POSITION

Canadian Press Despatch.

Ottawa, April 29.—Herbert Marler, Liberal member for St. Lawrence-St. George, Montreal, today announced in the House his intention to vote against the budget. It was the first definite break in government ranks.

At the same time Andrew McMaster of Bromie (who crossed the floor from Liberal ranks because he was unable to accept last year's budget) intimated his intention to support the budget. And an announcement by Premier King lent added piquancy to the day. It was that Rt. Hon. W. S. Fielding, minister of finance, "is wholly and heartily in sympathy with the acting minister of finance in the budget he has brought down, as is every single member in the cabinet."

Mr. Marler declared before he accepted the candidature in St. Lawrence-St. George he had discussed with those whom he considered first leaders in the Liberal party, and had placed before them the policies in writing on which he was prepared to run. On the tariff these policies included: "The maintenance of established legitimate industries, the encouragement of new industries, the promotion of trade with other countries—with due regard to the economic rights of the consumer." Mr. Marler intended to vote against the budget proposals because, in his view, they were not in accord with the Laurier-Fielding traditions of tariff policy; because they would disturb business and most likely cause unemployment; because they would not tend to retain the English and French-speaking population of Canada and of Quebec in particular.

McMaster Favors Budget.

Andrew McMaster, on the other hand, argued that the Liberal party stood for reduced tariffs. Up to the end of his life the late Sir Wilfrid Laurier had believed in tariff reduction. It was difficult for Mr. McMaster to see how a man could present himself as a Liberal and not

FRENCH PARTIES FAVOR A RULER

Two Groups Suggest "Good Dictatorship"—Duke of Orleans Mentioned.

Associated Press Despatch.

Paris, April 29.—Two of the fourteen political parties of France have boldly decided to recommend a "good dictatorship" to the French voters as the best solution of the problems of the day. One of them picks the Duke of Orleans, pretender to the French throne, as the proper Mus-solini for France, while the other thinks that Moscow can name the proper man. Neither the Royalists nor Communists, however, can count on a large representation in a year ago by his brother from England. He enjoyed a good volume of business, and his affairs there were in a satisfactory state.

He succeeds William Tytler, M.A., who held the position for over thirty years.

Broadcast your up-to-date service

A CUSTOMER receives a letter, an invoice, or a statement from you. How pleasant and inviting it is to find at the bottom (some firms print it in red ink)—

Station-to-Station Long Distance orders receive the immediate attention of our Special Telephone Order Service.

If you can add:—

Deduct the cost of the telephone message from your next invoice

—so much the better.

The customer is made to realize that you are always ready to serve him promptly; that you have a properly organized telephone service that will give him quick and satisfactory service. He recognizes that he will not have to ask for a particular person, to get good service.

If the cost of the message is to be deducted from your invoice, that reduces the cost to you.

Investigation convinces us that many customers who would gladly telephone their orders do not do so largely because they do not know that satisfactory arrangements exist for filling such orders promptly.

Men to Whom Motorists Tell Their Tire Experience Say All-Weather Cord Gives 27.5% More Miles Than Any Other Tire

AUTOMOBILE DEALERS hear thousands and thousands of tire experiences. Their owners praise or denounce the tires they are using. Prospective purchasers tell of the tire service they've had. Cars come in for service regularly and mileage is noted. And the automobile dealer is unprejudiced, because his chief interest in tires is to have the cars which he sells make a good showing on tire mileage.

3 out of 4 say Goodyear
All-Weather Best

We asked 243 automobile dealers if they thought Goodyear All-Weather Cords gave more mileage and if so, how much more than the next best. 74% said Goodyear All-Weather Cords gave most miles—and the average estimate gave them a greater mileage by 27.5% than the next best tire. Another 22% said All-Weather Cords are the equal of any tire. Only 9 out of 243 think any tire excels the Goodyear All-Weather.

"Goodyear All-Weather Cords are dependable, and I believe they will give longer service than any other tire."

"Our experience proves them better than others."

"We cannot say too much for Goodyear Cord Tires, as they have given big mileage and service."

INQUISITIVE TOM-CAT "TIGER" IS BEST PAL OF COOLIDGE

FOUND BY RADIO

President Always Finds Time
To Pet His Faithful Friend.

By WILLIAM C. LYON.
Special to The Advertiser
Copyright 1924.

Washington, April 29. — When the White House recently broadcast a radio appeal for aid in finding "Tiger," one of the executive mansion cats, the nation smiled, little realizing how important was the plea. "Tiger," it develops, is the president's very best pal.

An intimate of Mr. Coolidge today gave the writer a vivid word picture that emphasized the hold of this plain gray-striped tomcat on the affections of the president. He pictured the executive sitting at his desk, reading, or looking over state papers—with "Tiger" climbing to his lap and crawling unmolested up the presidential arm and around the presidential neck, in real "old home style."

Further, it was disclosed, "Tiger" has even partaken of White House meals in the great state dining-room. They were not the formal affairs that publicity-seeking society matrons arrange periodically for their pets. They were "old home style," meals, collected more by morsel, as "Tiger" stalked from member to member of the Coolidge household—not omitting a visit to the head of the table.

Of course "Tiger" dines thus only when the Coolidges are en famille. But he isn't hidden from sight at any time. On all occasions, state or otherwise, he roams freely among the guests. "Tiger" is a studious and inquisitive cat. On more than one formal occasion he has been observed to stop and give a staid diplomat, or an officer with much gold lace, the "up-and-down," as the dignitaries moved about the social chaises. Frequently, bored by the parade and pomp, he hops into a soft chair and curls up for a nap, oblivious of the doings the average American would give an eye to attend.

Michigan Central Railway May
Transfer Control of Detroit
River Tunnel.

Canadian Press Despatch.

Ottawa, April 29.—The first of the Canadian National branch line bills passed the house railway committee this morning. It provides for a branch line between Kingsclear and the St. Croix River, N. B.

The reorganization of United States railways into regional systems came up when two bills to authorize the Michigan Central Railway to transfer its control of the Canada Southern Railway and the Detroit River tunnel were passed.

Hon. G. P. Graham, minister of railways, asked for an explanation of the reason for authorizing transfer of control to an unnamed railway company, and Sir Henry Drayton, sponsor for the bill, stated that the purpose was to facilitate the regional reorganization of railways, which is now being considered in the United States. He said that the bill still maintained the control of the railway commission and of the Dominion government. With these explanations the bills at once passed.

HOW THE SMALL ESTATE IS NOW TO BE DIVIDED

Mrs. Small Agrees To Pay
$400,000 Into Court in Settlement of Case.

Canadian Press Despatch.

Toronto, April 29.—In the settlement of the Small case today, it was arranged that the two sisters and Madeline Small and Percy Small, half sister and half-brother, each receive the income from $100,000 of the sum of $400,000 in the custody of the court, and in the event of the death of either that the money is to revert to the Ambrose Small estate. The settlement is made retroactive for two years, and to each of the four the sum of $15,000, decided upon as the amount of interest accrued during that period, is to be paid immediately.

Mrs. Mullan, aunt, signed the agreement so that her caveat filed against the will is withdrawn, and what she is to get depends on the agreement she makes with the Small sisters. The estate of the missing millionaire is estimated to be now worth approximately $2,500,000. It has been in the hands of the Capital Trust Company pending probate.

Mr. Justice Logie, in giving the seal of the court to the agreement, stated that Mrs. Small "leaves court with her character unstained." He said that certain points of her evidence on which he had made criticisms had been cleared up.

A feature of the settlement is each of the counsel for the Small sisters, Gideon Grant, K.C., and Arthur G. Slaght, K.C., to get $15,000 as their fees in the case. This comes out of the estate.

SETTLEMENT EXPECTED IN L. R. STEEL AFFAIRS

Steels Consolidated May Bid
For Remaining Live Assets.

Canadian Press Despatch.

Buffalo, April 29.—Settlement of the financial affairs of the bankrupt L. R. Steel enterprises, involving widely scattered interests in the United States and Canada, is expected before Referee in Bankruptcy Consolidated, a company recently organized, is expected to bid for all remaining live assets of the various L. R. Steel Companies.

Collisions of the stockholders' protective trust committee from 20,000 holders of L. R. Steel paper have totalled $1,500,000, the committee, of which Walter M. Wilkins, former general manager of L. R. Steel Inc., is chairman, has announced. In the event of the purchase, the protective trust would pay more than $300,000 in addition to $1,000,000 worth of claims purchased from creditors, it was indicated. The old corporations would then be passed along to Steel's Consolidated, the new organization beginning its career with no enterprises, involving claims with no enterprises except the protective trust, through which it would be financed.

CANADIAN AUTO TRADE AFFECTED BY LABOR BUDGET

Termination of the McKenna
Duties Will Have Important
Bearing On Industry.

FALLEN OFF LATELY

Canadian Press Despatch.

Ottawa, April 29.—The decision of the British chancellor of the exchequer not to endorse the further British preferences offered by the Baldwin government at the imperial economic conference will cause regret here, but it was not unexpected. Following the defeat of the Baldwin government at the polls, any other outcome was regarded as very unlikely. There will, however, be considerable curiosity as to the form in which the British Government proposes to bring the question for discussion before the house.

Of chief interest to Canada in the Baldwin proposals were the offers of increased preference on dried fruits, on sugar and tobacco, and the preferential rates offered on raw apples, canned salmon and lobster and on honey.

Termination of the existing McKenna duties is likely to have an important bearing on the Canadian automobile industry. Under these duties, foreign automobiles have had to meet an import duty in Great Britain of 31.3 per cent, with a preferential rate of one-third in favor of automobiles of empire origin. Thus the rate on Canadian cars entering the British market was 22.2 per cent, as compared with a rate of 33.3 per cent on American cars. Since the preferential rate came into force, there has been a considerable development in the export of Canadian automobiles to Great Britain, although it has fallen off to a certain extent lately.

Five years ago, Canada exported only 1,472 passenger automobiles to Great Britain, valued at about three quarters of a million. In the twelve months ended February, $513 passenger cars, the value of which was $5,000,000, were exported from Canada to Great Britain.

LONDON CHOIR WINS PRIZE AT FESTIVAL

Dundas Centre Methodist Organization Honored At Toronto Competition.

Canadian Press Despatch.

Toronto, April 29. — In the continued program today of the Ontario musical competition festival at Massey Hall and the Toronto and Harbour Conservatories, much youthful talent was brought to light in the junior competitions, while the orchestras and the church choirs were pleasing features of the festival. In the evening performance at Massey Hall the criticisms were given chiefly by Herbert Fryer, one of the adjudicators from London, England. Dr. James Lyon gave the adjudication in the symphony orchestra contest in which the Canadian College of Music challenge shield was won by the Riverside symphony orchestra of Toronto with A. M. Glionna as conductor, while the Peterboro symphony orchestra directed by Rupert Gliddon, won the second prize. Mr. Matthew's Anglican Church choir, with John W. Donson as conductor, was awarded the George E. McCann challenge shield, and the Dundas Centre Methodist Church choir, London, under the direction of J. Parnell Morris, won second prize.

In the pianoforte solo open to all Canada, the gold medal donated by Ernest Seitz was won by Eugene Murphy of Red Deer, Alta., who was told by the adjudicator that he possessed decided talent. Miss Margaret Leslie of Weston, won the second prize, and Miss Marguerite Buss of Guelph won third place in the pianoforte solo.

An interesting competition was that of the church choirs. The choirs competing were: St. Matthew's Danforth Metropolitan and Dundas Centre Methodist, London, Danforth Methodist with four points more would have won second place.

The concluding number of the evening program was the band competition, open to towns and cities of population of 20,000 and under. The Oakville concert band under the direction of A. J. Lockley won the shield.

Spring showers bring May flowers! They also bring many delightful additions to the trousseau and hope chests of June brides.

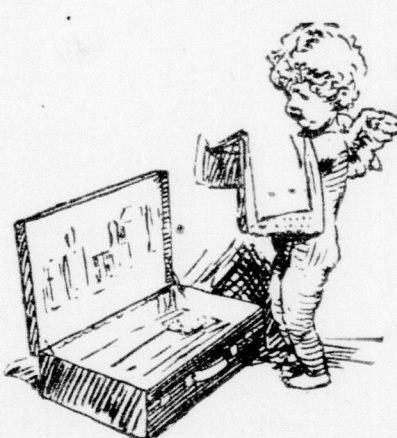

For there are dozens of dainty trifles a bride's friends will enjoy giving her for the hope chest, which is so soon to become a home chest. And I am sure the shower gifts which I saw today will interest you prospective (and perhaps perplexed) hostesses.

Did you know that a very convincing bridal bouquet may be made of handkerchiefs? Do stop at our handkerchief counter and see the array of dainty handkerchiefs in this spring's flower tints with the fluff greenery and ribbon, the streamers and tiny flowerettes of a real bridal bouquet.

Any bride will be delighted with a china shower which furnishes her hospitable tea table; with small pieces of silver in her chosen pattern; with linen doilies or serviettes, or tea towels saucily checked in red or with spoons and scissors and tape and the other fittings for her sewing table.

Kitchen showers offer countless possibilities. You will find an alluring tableau of them in the basement—from aluminum utensils and Pyrex-ware to cookie cutters and spice boxes. And the hostess-to-be is sure to be interested in our distinguishing variety of place cards and candy baskets.
