DEPOSITORS PROTEST INTEREST RATE CUT Egyptian Mutineers Surrender After Compound Bombarded

FERGUSON ASKED WHY RATE CUT

Association of Depositors Is Awaiting Reply to Its Recent Protest.

FIFTEEN BRANCHES Depositors Claim They Have Right to Know More About Bank Policy.

Special to The Advertiser.
Ottawa, Nov. 29.—The association of the depositors of the Ontario Savings office, Ottawa branch, formed recently at the capital, in protest against the reduction of the interest on savings in the provincial banks from 4 to 3 per cent, is awaiting a reply from Premier Ferguson to a letter sent this week, requesting a statement of the finances of the bank and a full explanation of the motives underlying the reduction in question. In the opinion of the association, the claim of Mr. Ferguson that the effect of the rate cut is to "cheaper to borrow money by issuing bonds, is not a sufficient justification for the action taken. It being estimated that the cost of operating the savings system is not more than one-half of one per cent.

Demand to Know Motives.
The association desires to have proof that the action of the government was inspired by the desire for economy, otherwise it will be inclined to the belief that the purpose of the government is to abolish the savings office altogether and to further strengthen the so-called credit monopoly, at present controlled by the private banks. It is claimed by the association that much more important principles are involved in the matter than that of the reduction in interest rates.

"We have sent a letter to Premier Ferguson," said Controller Charles T. Tully, chairman of the association, last night, "asking for a brief financial statement of the savings office, so that we can arrive at our own conclusions as to the statement that he is reducing the interest for economic purposes. We want to open up a few ideas, namely, that the depositors upon whose deposits credit is based should have some say in the policy of the banks. It is quite probable that the Home Bank disaster would never have occurred."

Fifteen Branches.
There are three branches of the savings office in Toronto and fourteen or fifteen in the whole province. It is hoped that the depositors of these will also form associations to protest against reduction and to cooperate with the Ottawa association in pressing for the application of the new idea.

FRENCH PARLIAMENT HEARS EGYPT'S PROTEST

Associated Press Despatch.
Paris, Nov. 29.—A copy of the Egyptian chamber's telegram, which was sent to the league of nations and all the world parliaments, protesting against the British action in the Sudan and in Egypt, was read today before the French chamber of deputies before the league of nations. No action was taken on the matter, however, as the regulations do not allow committees to make any decisions on texts originating outside of parliament.

YOUR RESPONSIBILITY

Monday the electors of London must choose officers to manage and direct their $69,000,000 business—it's a big job—if you choose badly you must pay the piper—THE ZERO HOUR OF THE STREET RAILWAY FIGHT.

You, the electors of the city of London, have a responsibility to discharge on Monday. You are the shareholders in a corporation, with assets valued at $69,000,000, subject to a bond in excess of $9,000,000.

The corporation—the mayor and representatives—has empowered and directed to levy upon you the tax on the basis of your personal earnings for taxes in excess of this great corporation.

Tax on Income.
The $2,700,000 mark this year. Whether you are an owner or tenant matters nothing. You pay.

YOUR SERVANTS RULE YOU.
Your chief executive officers, your mayor and council, have more in their hands than the right to tax you. You empower them to enter and deal for you. You entrust to their wisdom, their business experience and their faithfulness to your interests the negotiation of agreements, the enforcement of contracts, and the formulation of policy in matters bearing on the public good.

THIS LOOKED PROMISING.
You have probably wearied of campaign promises. You have a right to suspect them.

IS THIS WHAT YOU ORDERED?
He pledged himself to reforms in the system of government, including the CENTRALIZATION OF PURCHASING TO LOWER COSTS AND END EXTRAVAGANCE AND WASTE. AND CONDITIONS TODAY ARE EXACTLY AS HE FOUND THEM.

HE PLEDGED HIMSELF TO AWARD ALL CIVIC WORK ON A COMPETITIVE BASIS AND TO FORCE THE CITY ENGINEER TO STAY WITHIN HIS TENDERS. Since his election $698,489 HAS BEEN EXPENDED ON PUBLIC WORKS CONSTRUCTION WITHOUT TENDERS and without check on the city engineer.

HE PLEDGED HIMSELF TO UNDERTAKE NO LARGE EXPENDITURES WITHOUT A VOTE OF THE PEOPLE AND TO END THE MISUSE OF THE CITY OF LONDON BILL TO OBTAIN LARGE DEBENTURE ISSUES. In the two years of his regime HE HAS ADDED $425,000 TO THE PUBLIC DEBT where there was NO EMERGENCY by the process he employed, and WITHOUT THE PROMISED VOTE OF THE PEOPLE.

HIS PLATFORM WAS A SCRAP OF PAPER.
Finally he pledged himself—and it was principally for that purpose he was elected—to have a "showdown with the London Street Railway Company," to compel the company to live up to bylaw 916 in all matters relating to improvement of service, construction of new extensions and replacement of obsolete rolling stock, but particularly in the matter of paving.

WHY THIS CHANGE OF HEART?
Mayor Wenige's showdown has become a backdown. With his unaccountable acquiescence the company today sets at defiance every stipulation of the franchise agreement under which it has been granted the free use of London's streets. Paving obligations are contemptuously flouted, and orders emanating from the aldermanic board are ignored.

LONDON'S ZERO HOUR.
March 8, 1925, is London's zero hour. The company boldly announces that it will be "unable to maintain service, just as it is unable to pave its track allowances. Mayor Wenige tells you NOTHING CAN BE DONE ABOUT IT.

IS THIS PUBLIC SERVICE?
Read his own list of his "activities" in 1924. He was banqueted at the Tecumseh house by the London street railway on Friday, Oct. 2. Less than three weeks later, on Oct. 20, he voted alone in the city council to give YOU NO OTHER CHOICE THAN TO PAY THE COMPANY'S PRICE OR GIVE THE COMPANY A NEW FREE FRANCHISE WITH A RESTORATION OF THE HIGHER FARES.

WENIGE CANNOT WORK WITH MEN.
Ald. John Anderson in these vital matters has by his vote and argument in council opposed the policy of Mayor Wenige. Mayor Wenige in both years of his administration has started with a majority of aldermen supporting him. In both years by his own acts he has driven his own supporters to oppose him. With Wenige there can be no co-operation.

THE PEOPLE NEED A CHAMPION.
London needs a trustworthy, business leader, a champion of the public rights in the mayor's chair in 1925—needs him more urgently than at any time in the past decade.

THE ADVERTISER BELIEVES LONDON'S INTERESTS WILL BE BETTER SERVED BY ANDERSON.

TOTAL VOTE OF LONDON IS 28,000

Women and Single Men Have Same Standing as Land Owner.
FIFTY PER CENT
Minority Election Return May Pass With Present Keen Fight.

In the elections of Monday 28,000 citizens of London are entitled to vote. Reports show that there will be many housewives and some single men who may exercise the same franchise of male householders. There is no difference at all between the voters' privileges. All those who are included on part one of the latest voters' list are entitled to vote once on all questions.

Married women have the same privilege as their husbands in municipal voting this year. There is no necessity for a voter being a taxpayer. Tenants and housewives have just the same privilege as the freeholder. All are entitled to vote.

Many folk will say: "I don't want to go and so to be in office, but I am not personally acquainted with the other man—so I will not vote at all, and let the others decide." That spirit has been evident in many places in former years, and, according to statistics tabulated by City Clerk Sam Baker, less than 50 per cent of the people have elected the city council of the last 15 years. There has been representation of the minority of voters in every case due to the disinterest of the greater number of franchise holders.

Last year there was only 41 per cent of the voters who exercised their franchise. Of the men eligible to vote 57 per cent went to the polls and of the women only 25 per cent voted. Change in statutes a few years ago gave women equal privileges with men, with the expectation that they would be fully represented in the voting. Every effort is being made by women's organization of the city to get the women to vote on Monday.

Some Confusion.
With the change in sub-divisions this year, some confusion may be noticed on Monday by voters attending the polling booths to which they have been accustomed. There they will find the voters list for, say, sub-division 25 or 26, and their names omitted. In such a case they should communicate with the city clerk's office immediately and see if their names are on the voters list in some other sub-division. Such cases have been discovered in the past, and citizens should not overlook any opportunity to vote.

Names are sometimes not spelled quite correctly on the voters lists, but the officials have no way of checking these until the time for election comes round. An initial or transposed letter sometimes make it appear that a voter has been accidentally disfranchised. However, even this may be overcome by the voter showing proof that he is the person whose name was intended.

$50 WARNING GIVEN ELECTION "REPEATERS"

Close Check Will Be Made on Double Voters, Baker Declares.
City Clerk Baker issues a warning against double voting on Monday. "The double voter or the 'repeater' as the returning officers call them are the bughbear of a municipal election," he states. "They are the voters whose names are in part two of the voters' list and they are the most difficult thing with which we have to deal at election times.

"They are the men who live in one ward and hold property in others. That means that they have the right to vote on a full ballot in the ward they live in and to vote on aldermen only in the others. However, last year we had a well-known lawyer in the city who voted seven times on the full ballot.

"This year the returning officers have received instructions to write the words 'warned not to vote' on their poll books, and we shall make a thorough investigation after the election to see where repeaters have tried to carry on their old game. I would like to make it very clear that there is a fine of $50 for this offence and that the city will take every step in its power to proceed against anyone infringing the voting laws on Monday next."

MOTOR CRASH VICTIM REMAINS UNCHANGED
Charles Rider, of 835 Lorne avenue, who was struck by the mayor's car on Thursday evening and taken to Victoria hospital, where he was thought to be suffering from a fractured skull, is reported this morning as being in an unchanged condition at the hospital today. It was stated that no complete diagnosis had yet been possible and that the patient was in an unchanged condition, and semi-conscious.

BOY AND GIRL TWINS HAVE DIFFERENT BIRTHDAYS

One Baby Is Born Just Before Midnight, the Other Shortly After.
UNUSUAL CASE
Eccentric Babes Pick Different Locations, Too—Both Are Doing Well.

When two little twin babies born in London this week grew to the age when they will take an interest in birthdays they will find that they have to celebrate on different days. The boy will have his birthday first and the girl on the day following.

Dr. F. R. Clegg, who attended the case, says it is one of the strangest in his records, as one of the twins was born just before midnight and the other shortly after. To make the case still more unusual the first baby was born at home on Talbot street the other at St. Joseph's hospital. The doctor, however, says that the twins are doing well and are fine babies so the difference in time and place of arrival has done them no harm.

Victoria hospital also has something out of the way as far as twins are concerned. This week two sets of twins have been born in Victoria, all of them are girls. In this case too they are reported as "doing fine," and the staff feels duly proud of itself in raising such a distinguished family. Four girl twins in one week is not an everyday occurrence in any hospital.

WHISKEY PROFITS NOT FOR SCHOOLS

Dr. E. J. Rothwell Objects to Plan to Defray Educational Costs.
Canadian Press Despatch.
Victoria, B. C., Nov. 29.—Opposition to the profits of the sale of liquor under government control being used toward the most of educating children of British Columbia was expressed in the provincial legislature yesterday by Dr. E. J. Rothwell, Liberal member for New Westminster, during the budget debate.

"If a man wants his whiskey, let him have it at a reasonable price, but don't let us use the profits for education of our children. Just think what the future generations will think when they find they have been educated on whiskey profits," said Dr. Rothwell.

ELECTRIC CAR RUNS INTO HEAVY TRUCK

All Escape Injury at Wellington Street Crossing Crash.
While crossing the Wellington street intersection at 10:07 this morning an L. and P. S. car operated by Motorman Phil Stevenson crashed into a truck owned by Langford and Edwards and driven by Victor Olson. Both the car and truck were moving slowly and this alone prevented serious accident as it was, the truck was damaged. Witnesses said that the bell on the car was ringing and the whistle blowing though the driver of the truck apparently did not hear the approaching radial.

A humorous touch was added to the incident when the smashed radiator spilled its alcoholic contents of anti-freeze and the consequent opinions of the drivers and bystanders that someone was drunk. The spirits were traced to the shattered radiator.

BUILDING WORTH $163,600 AUTHORIZED IN NOVEMBER

Building permits for November registered in the office of the building inspector total 195 with a value of $151,610 as compared with 131 permits and a valuation of $163,600 in 1923. It must be remembered that 1923 was London's record year in construction value of new building and construction. There are no permits issued this month for any unusually large or expensive buildings. The majority of the permits are for alterations and the construction of residences.

ALREADY SHIPPED.
Edgar Bogue, district fruit inspector, stated this morning that the majority of apples packed by the fruit associations in the vicinity of Strathroy had already been shipped. Mr. Bogue declared that total figures regarding the shipments were not yet available, but that the quantity was not as large as last year.

FOUR RACE HORSES DIE IN TIA JUANA BLAZE

San Diego Police Probe Report That $50,000 Fire Was Incendiary.
Associated Press Despatch.
San Diego, Cal., Nov. 29.—Carcasses of four race horses were found last night in the ruins of a fire which destroyed five barns at the track of the Tia Juana jockey club late yesterday afternoon. The horses lost are Run George and Kilkare, owned by John Singleton; Cannonball, owned by E. Boyle, and Balta, a two-year-old said to belong to Guy Grey.

The loss in horses and property is estimated at $50,000. Rumors prevailed last night that the fire was of incendiary origin, and a police investigation is being made. Several who saw the fire start say the flames burst out at several places in the Eastman stables. Five barns and 604 stalls were destroyed and 200 horses were taken out in safety, according to latest reports.

James Coffroth, president of the jockey club, announced today that the races would continue according to program.

INFORMER IS GIVEN $100, LOCATING STOLEN GOODS

The $100 check personally given by Lieutenants Walter Bolton to the man who informed county police where goods stolen from the store of W. C. Barons at Belmont were stored in London has had the check turned over to him by the authorities, it became known today.

STAMP COLLECTORS MEET.

The junior stamp club of the Y. M. C. A. organized yesterday at the association building. The members are made up of boy collectors under 12 years of age. George Montgomery was elected president.

KILLING GREETINGS POLICE THREAT

Two Die in Last Tong War Outbreak in New York's Chinatown.
Associated Press Despatch.
New York, Nov. 29.—Hard on the heels of a police announcement that tong warfare must cease, Tom Hong, 43, Hip Sing member, was fatally shot in his Brooklyn laundry last night by an unidentified Chinese, who escaped.

Hong was the fourth victim since the resumption of the counter-war against tong hostilities Thursday. An hour before Hong's murder, another Brooklyn laundryman, Gong Sing, 31, was shot and probably fatally wounded by two Chinese gunmen, who escaped in a closed automobile.

The shooting of Sing was preceded by the stabbing to death of Cok Un, as he slept in a Chinatown tenement.

PREPARATION FOR WAR SEEN IN JAP OIL PROBE

Official Mission Arrives in Rumania to Tour Fields.
Associated Press Despatch.
Bucharest, Nov. 29.—An official Japanese mission, including Masaji Yamaguchi, director of the Nippon Petroleum corporation, and a number of geologists, arrived in Bucharest yesterday. The purpose of the visit is to study the Rumanian petroleum situation. The authorities here are arranging for the mission to make an extensive trip over the oil fields.

Commenting upon the visit of the Japanese, the press states that "foreseeing an inevitable conflict with the United States, the Japanese government is anxious to be assured of its sources of oil supply." Hence its lengthy interview with Premier Zivov Pasha. The report is reiterated that the murder plots alleged to have been discovered in Egypt were aimed at Lord Allenby.

NIAGARA FALLS LINEMAN ELECTROCUTED IN DUNDAS

Canadian Press Despatch.
Hamilton, Nov. 29.—Harry Baker of Niagara Falls, aged 35 years, a hydro lineman, was electrocuted in Dundas late this afternoon. Baker had just ascended a pole when he came in contact with a line carrying 22,500 volts. Struck by the shock, he lost his balance and fell to the pavement. His skull was fractured, and he died in a few moments.

SURVIVING MUTINEERS SURRENDER

Two British Officers and Eight Men Are Wounded in Battle.
FIRE IN COMPOUND
Telegraphic Communication Is Restored With Points in the Sudan.

Associated Press Despatch.
Cairo, Nov. 29.—The surviving mutineers at Khartoum have given in to the British it was announced here today at noon. The mutiny among the troops was confined to two platoons of the 11th Sudanese and the mutineers who survive surrendered after a bombardment of the compound of the Egyptian army hospital. British officers were killed and eight men were wounded.

NOT CONSIDERED CRITICAL.
Associated Press Despatch.
London, Nov. 29.—The Egyptian situation as the result of the latest messages was described in official quarters in London this afternoon as serious but not critical. Interest mainly centered in the Sudan, which appeared to have been quieted.

Telegraphic communication with Sudan was restored at 12:50 o'clock this afternoon. It is announced in an agency despatch from Cairo.

MOVE TO PREVENT SURRENDER.
Associated Press Despatch.
London, Nov. 29.—While the mutiny of Sudanese troops at Khartoum is not taken as necessarily heralding serious trouble in the Sudan, the possibilities of grave developments there are not overlooked, and an undercurrent of anxiety is noted in this morning's press comment.

Since the British conquest of the Sudan and the subsequent establishment of order with the development of the country's resources, which Roosevelt so warmly praised, it had become axiomatic here that the Sudan had grown attached to British rule while they distrusted and despised the Egyptians.

According to recent reports, however, the Egyptian propaganda in favor of independence has had some success in the Sudan and uncertainty regarding the extent of that success is one of the contributing causes to the disquiet here. It is rumored there have been signs of disaffection in other Sudanese regiments besides the mutinous eleventh, which, it is recalled, was concerned in the rebellious outbreak last August.

If the trouble spreads, its suppression may be a stiffer job than if the mutineers were Egyptians, for the Sudanese are noted for their bravery and are likely to stand up to the British if they possess arms and ammunition of order. It is, however, that the British hold all the magazines under strong guard, and that the Sudanese soldier can have only a limited supply of cartridges.

NO CHANGE SHOWN.
Victoria hospital authorities state that there is little change in the condition of Peter Glen, well-known artist of this city. Mr. Glen was taken to Victoria hospital on Saturday last suffering from cerebral hemorrhage. Mr. Glen is in a comatose condition. Dr. Kenneth McLean is attending him.

ITALIAN STEAMSHIP IS REPORTED IN DISTRESS
Associated Press Despatch.
London, Nov. 29.—A Lloyd's despatch from Valencia says the Italian steamship Enrico Toti, out of Baltimore on Nov. 9, is in distress at latitude 37.14 north, longitude 55.08 west. The German steamship Passalus is proceeding to her assistance.

The Enrico Toti, a vessel of 3,000 tons, returned to Baltimore on Nov. 18 after going around, necessitating the lightening of part of her cargo of coal, destined for LeClon. She sailed again two days later. The Passalus does not appear in the shipping registers.

ANDERSON INDEPENDENT OF FACTIONS OR PARTIES

Candidate For Mayorality Denies He Is Receiving Financial Backing in Campaign—Takes Mayor To Task For Switching on Street Railway Stand.

FINAL GUNS OF ELECTION FIRED LAST NIGHT

Bringing to an official termination the election campaign of the past twelve days, last night's mass meeting at Masonic Temple was well attended by citizens. Speeches were heard from the majority candidates, as well as some of the nominees for aldermen and board of education. After over 50 meetings, better attended than in any campaign in recent years, the guns of election were finally silenced, and the issues of the municipal voting for 1925 are now before the people to pass judgment on. It has been a keen campaign, though many of the ward meetings have shown more "fireworks" by far than last evening's mass meeting.

C. H. Mitchell, chairman of the board of health, made a most efficient chairman.

Anderson Speaks.
John Anderson was called on by Chairman Mitchell to speak. He was greeted with applause and cheers. It was the second time in the whole campaign that he was given precedence over the mayor in speaking. He expressed regret that he had been unable to attend ward meetings on Thursday night, having been confined to his home by doctor's orders. "I want to clear the atmosphere here and say that no organization or any financial corporation is behind me," Ald. Anderson declared at the outset. "I have been asked on many sides to stand for mayor and there has been a very hearty response to my general appeal."

"Two years ago the mayor was elected on the platform that there was going to be a showdown of the street railway, but this year the mayor never came to the street railway question. He was advocating co-operating with the street railway. The co-operation has always been had 99 per cent of the co-operation in its favor. Evidently the mayor took a question, flop on the street railway question, and then showing the street railway down, they showed him up."

The Mayor Switches.
Mr. Anderson went on to cite definite instances where the mayor had switched over his attitude on the street railway question. "He says it was the spanking of a bad boy. The spanking was the other way. The mayor says he never was in favor of the five-cent fares, but we have here an authentic newspaper report that the reporter is willing to take an affidavit on," declared Mr. Anderson amid some cheers. Mr. Anderson's speech was well received by many in the audience.

In his address Mayor Wenige gave a lucid repetition of his addresses throughout the week. He had little to add to what he had already said. He took the same stand and dealt with in general reference. However, he claims that the street railway issue is of little significance, since the Ontario legislature has undertaken the control of its actions until 1930.

"The government has taken over the railway issue, and it is no longer a bone of contention to the London civic body," said his worship. "Yes," replied a taxpayer, "they have called for the showdown, which you didn't get."

The mayor's onslaught was another point which the mayor attempted to clear up. The substance of his remarks on this started with a frank admission that he had intended to have a "showdown" with the London street railway. From this he switched to a criticism of Alderman Anderson's platform, but failed to state what happened in the matter of securing the promised "showdown."

Feeling that he would be questioned concerning the remodeling of the East London hall, the actual work of which has run up a bill much in excess of the estimated amount, he turned on the former building inspector to make the blame there. "The same thing happened in the estimates for the market shed," said Mayor Wenige. "When the matter was looked into, it was found that the estimate did not include the roof. The same 'cob-webs' in this case."

Apart from these salient features, the mayor's address had little that is new. He did, however, repeat his list of accomplishments, and stated that the residents of London West were so unaccustomed to pavements that they did not know how to use them when they were first laid down. "While the six aldermen and candidates who took the opportunity of speaking from the platform were given a courteous hearing, they represented only wards one, two and four, and appeared to be strangers to many in the audience. "Not having had such a powerful broadcasting station as the mayor, you may think my speech is rather tame," declared Ald. Allan Towe of ward one, who dealt with his activities on No. 2 committee, the juvenile court committee, and as chairman of the traffic committee.

Ald. L. H. Douglass and James Donahue spoke as ward two candidates. Ald. Douglass favored the university grant, but was opposed to the other plebiscites which will be presented to the people on Monday. "You have at least always known where I stood," Mr. Donahue declared. "I come to you with clean hands, and I feel confident of your support."

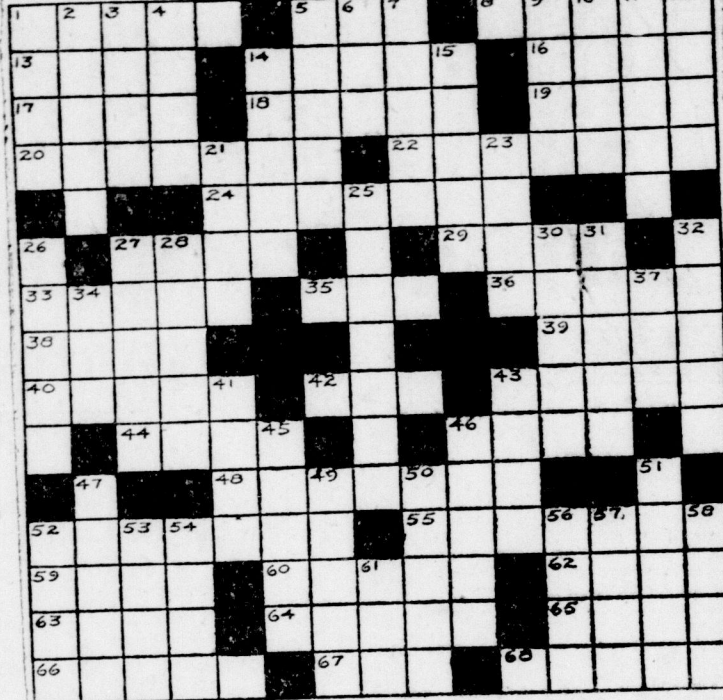

Ald. Edwin Smith, Thomas Clift and Homer Neely spoke as ward four candidates. Ald. Smith was personally in favor of the three plebiscites to change the form of municipal government, the increased police commission and the university grant. Mr. Clift, as an endorsed Labor nominee, pointed out that he had been a party to the election in London for nearly 30 years, and had lived in ward four for 10 years more than that. He had the support of other citizens of the ward than those affiliated with the Labor party. He believed in the co-operation of labor and employers, and was ready to offer his best services. He dealt with the unemployment problem at its source. He was opposed to a city grant to the chamber of commerce for industrial publicity, but looked after unemployment relief. He stood for cutting off unnecessary expenditure.

Among the board of education candidates who addressed the meeting were Mrs. Hunt, F. R. Lawson, David Mills, Mrs. Tutt and Wm. Murray. In her brief address, Mrs. Hunt outlined the improvements which deal with the matter of school property. She also stated her intention to work for a continuance of the practice of using only London-made building products which are used by the school board as a spending body. Mr. Lawson drew the attention of the meeting to the proportion of the city's money which was expended in education. Although admitting that the total is a large amount he was able to show that compared with the cost in other cities in Ontario, London's cost was very low. He remarked that the city's school matters by the present board.

BECK MAY RETIRE FROM PUBLIC LIFE

Sir Adam Declares He Is Considering Return To Private Life.

IS STILL UNDECIDED

Something of a flurry was caused among friends of Sir Adam Beck in London, and, in fact, in the province at large, yesterday by the announcement that he had informed the Kiwanis club at luncheon that he would possibly retire from public life within a week.

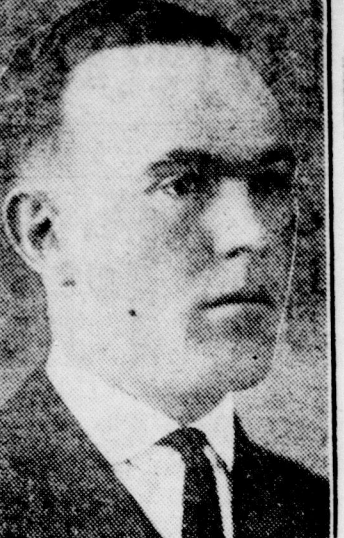

Sir Adam, who had unexpectedly returned to the city at the Kiwanis meeting at the Tecumseh hotel at noon yesterday, was given an ovation, and invited to the head table.

Still Undecided.
Sir Adam later, when asked by The Advertiser if his words admitted of any other interpretation, stated that he simply meant what he had said, namely, that he is now retiring, but not that he has reached any definite decision to retire.

Sir Adam called to the attention of the Kiwanians that he is now approaching his twenty-fifth anniversary of his entrance into public life in London, the greater portion of that time being devoted to the germinating of the hydro electric and subsequent successful establishment of the hydro power systems in all parts of the province.

PERMANENT REDUCTION IN TAXES IS URGED

Dr. Horace L. Brittain Addresses Women Voters in Hyman Hall.

Dr. Horace L. Brittain, head of the citizens' research institute of Canada, speaking yesterday afternoon to women voters in Hyman hall, stated his belief that there would never be a time when a permanent reduction in municipal taxes in Canada could be achieved. The reasons for this, he declared, were the fact that each year the municipalities were demanding more in the way of municipal services, and that public utilities in Canada were not operated at a profit as in most European cities.

"It is wise, I think," he said, "to urge a reduction in taxes for a period of perhaps ten years, because heavy taxation is the greatest drag on Canadian business at the present time and because business must be free of this drag if it is to prosper. But when we look into the more distant future, when our children and grandchildren will be in the hands of the municipal government and control, I do not see that we can reasonably expect any permanent reduction in taxes."

Dr. Brittain, who earlier in the day had spoken to the London Kivnans club presented the women with his reasons for supporting abolition of the ward system of election, reduction of the city council from twelve to eight members, and a city manager form of civic government.

"It has been decided generally," he said, "after long experience on this continent that a unity of command in the affairs of a city has brought economy and efficiency to the conduct of city business. The idea that city manager government is not democratic is exploded. The city manager can only carry out the policies laid down by the elected representatives of the people. He cannot pass a budget, or pass a by-law or fix a tax rate or decide on improvements, and he is at the command of the people, and is appointed and discharged by them."

"As to reduction of the council which by the way, I heartily support, it has been found in practice that it is better business to have a deliberative body of such size that it can meet around one table and discuss its problems. When you have a body so large that it must gather round a large circular table, where each member has a separate desk, there is always a tendency to play to the gallery, which destroys at once its usefulness to the community. A staff of seven or eight is the ideal number for a city council."

Favors Ward Abolition.

"In the matter of abolition of the ward system, I would state that in the American cities where it has been carried out, it has been a great improvement over the old system. In some cities they have a system whereby instead of abolishing the ward system, they nominate candidates in the wards and elect them from the city as a whole. That seems to work out very well. The ward system means log rolling, and trading expenses in the council and adds very considerably to the expense of running a city."

"Another matter which, I am told, comes up for your decision on Monday is the two-year term of office for aldermen. This, if put into effect, will give a continuity of policy which is impossible under your present system. A new man in a city council is never much use, in the first six months. Then come three slack months in the summer, and in the next three the aldermen are thinking of re-election. If you had a two-year term the men would be really useful in their second year. This lack of a continuous policy in a city's business as in a private business spells higher overhead. The only way most municipalities today can keep from bankruptcy is that the city council draw on the people for taxes to cover a deficit. This is not good business or good management."

Col. W. J. Brown, in introducing the speaker, asked a favorable consideration of the voters in the matter of the grant to the university of Western Ontario, which is a piggyback for this election. He stated that the six hundred odd students in residence, spend in the city about $500,000 a year. The board bills alone amount to $200,000 annually, he said. He pointed out that the city has been making a grant of $50,000 a year for the last ten years, and that the university was the reason of many people coming to London to live.

FAMOUS DETROIT PREACHER WILL SPEAK IN LONDON

Rev. Dr. M. S. Rice of Detroit, author, preacher and lecturer, will visit London on Thursday, Dec. 11, and will speak in the Colborne street Methodist church.

Dr. Rice has an international reputation, and is recognized as one of America's greatest preachers. He is pastor of the new Metropolitan church, Detroit, which is constructed of marble, and where proud congregations await him every Sabbath.

Dr. Rice is eloquent, humorous and intensely human. He has a pleasing personality and an imposing presence. These, with his great scholarship, make him a prominent leader among men.

This lecturer visits London on his way to Ottawa, and his lecture on Dec. 11 promises to be one of the right treats Londoners have experienced.

FISHERMEN AT PORT CHEATED BY ROUGH SEAS

Followers of Isaac Walton at Port Stanley have been sorely disappointed during the last week as it was far too rough to venture out of the port in a rowboat. This is the means to get to the famous pier, where so many fish are caught.

Local men who fish with the rod say that the season is over now owing to the fact that the perch start moving as soon as the water becomes cold.

Fishermen with hook and line were seen fishing at the resort up to a week ago.

RUBY WERNER IS WINNER OF ESSAY

Victoria School Pupils Compete in St. Andrew's Day Event.

In the flag day essay competition among the public schools of the city, Victoria school was given St. Andrew's day, which falls on Nov. 30. The best composition in the school was written by Ruby Werner, whose essay was as follows:

"St. Andrew was born at Bethsaida, on the lake of Galilee. He was a brother of Simon Peter, and was a disciple of John the Baptist. He lived in the time of Jesus Christ, and was one of the first to follow him.

"He is said to have preached in Scythia and Asia Minor, and along the Black Sea as far as the Danube River. For this reason he became patron saint of Russia.

"According to tradition, he was crucified at Patras, in Greece, in the year 69 A.D., on a cross of the form called CRUX DECUSATA (X). He was scourged, and then his hands and feet were fastened by cords to the cross. He remained in this position for two days, teaching and preaching till he died. The day dedicated to him is St. Andrew's day.

"The venerable stories state that his relics were removed from Patras to Constantinople and thence to Scotland.

"In 369, Regulus, a monk, took the remains of St. Andrew to Angus, king of the Picts. Angus gave Regulus a tract of land called the Boar Chase. "Philip the Good, Duke of Burgundy and Brabant, brought a part of what was said to have been the cross to Brussels. In honor of St. Andrew, Philip called his kingdom the Golden Fleece," who, for the badge of his order, wore a pattern of St. Andrew's cross.

"Scotland, as Russia chose St. Andrew as patron saint of their country. The national flag of England was the banner of St. George, and soon after the union of the crowns of England and Scotland this was united with the Scottish national flag, or banner of St. Andrew, introducing the white diagonal cross on the blue field, thus forming the first union flag. On the union with Ireland, the red diagonal cross of St. Patrick was added, and we have the flag as it is today."

Vote YES on reducing the number of aldermen from twelve to eight. It is the first step toward a simplified form of running city business. Eight aldermen will do all the work necessary.

CANINE ASSOCIATION PLANS 1925 PROGRAM

Officers Elected at Meeting Last Night—Vincent Perry Named President.

A meeting that will go down in local canine association history as being one of the most harmonious and businesslike ever on record, was the annual meeting of the London canine association, held in the association's rooms last night. At this meeting election of officers was the main business and a complete slate was elected by unanimous vote.

The following Thrusies were elected: Honorary president, Dr. Palmer E. Smith; honorary vice-president, Mr. J. E. Keyes; president, Vincent G. Perry; vice-president, Fred J. Ship (St. Thomas); secretary-treasurer, Fred Simmons. The executive committee elected comprises the following members: Mrs. C. E. Singleton and Messrs. Jas. Murphy, J. C. Lunan, C. S. Welber, Fred Simmons, Fred Manning, J. C. Fitzgerald, R. Oke, H. White, W. E. Potts, A. Ship and H. Whitsitt.

Indications point to the biggest and most successful year the association has ever enjoyed. Optimism was the keynote of the annual meeting, and it is felt that the 1925 season will be a banner year in every sense of the word. The new executive, elected at the meeting, pledged themselves to put forth every effort in the carrying on of the next year's business and show activities.

QUEEN'S OFFICIAL LAUDS LONDON "U"

Prof. Manley Baker Tells of Early Struggles of Canadian Universities.

Speaking at the annual banquet of the Western Ontario Queen's alumni association last night, Professor Manley Baker of Queen's university commented upon his visit to the university of Western Ontario yesterday afternoon.

"It was more than struck with the beauty and adequacy of the buildings and grounds," he said. "You have every good reason to look with confidence to the future growth of your university."

The speaker lauded the county of Middlesex for "having done justice to itself" in the erection of a memorial tower, which, tower will always mark the center of the university no matter how large it may become in the future.

Referring to Queen's university, Queen's had to secure recognition and financial assistance from the province, which the speaker believed that that very fact had made it easier for Western University to turn secure assistance from the government.

"Supporters of Toronto university used to oppose grants to other universities that the government believed that what others got would be at the expense of the Toronto university. Such has not been the case, however, for the appropriations for the Toronto institution have been increased, while at the same time the work being done by other universities has been recognized by grants to which they are entitled."

Professor Baker stated that insurance companies were issuing an educational policy today which meant "even an artisan and the man on the street" to provide a college education for his children. Small monthly payments to the company from the time the child was six months old to 15 years of age guaranteed for the child a four-years' college course.

"In fifteen years, there will be a regular army of young people ready to enter university under this plan," said Professor Baker, "since so many parents are taking advantage of the plan. The provision of college accommodation for this army presents a real problem, which will have to be met in the not-distant future."

The speaker in detail the progress of Queen's university since it was founded in 1841 in a story-and-a-half frame building, with two professors, and ten students, and an endowment of $80,000, until today it comprises 21 stone and two frame buildings, with 2,800 students in attendance, an administrative staff of 100 instructors above the rank of lecturer.

REMOVAL OF STONE ORDERED BY BOARD

Change in Ealing School Brings Criticism From Ratepayers.

A number of ratepayers in ward three have expressed chagrin over the cornerstone of Ealing school had lately been removed.

Since no explanation of the removal of the stone seemed forthcoming, the Advertiser secured the following information: A two-roomed brick school was first built at Ealing 36 years ago and designated as S. S. No. 22. In 1912 two rooms were added to the school and a stone placed over the entrance bearing the name of the school, and its three trustees, Richard Dengate, Thomas Branton and Adam W. Palmer.

The following year, Ealing district became annexed to the city of London, and S. S. No. 22 automatically became a unit of the city public school system.

In 1921 the local board of education added five rooms to Ealing school, as it had been renamed, and included in the building contract was the removal of the old stone over the entrance and the erection of one in its place bearing the inscription "Ealing school."

The contractor, A. E. Nobbs, completed his contract in 1921, with the exception of the change with regard to the stone over the entrance. Last summer, by way of completing the original contract, the name of the school, together with the names of the three trustees, was chiseled off, and the new name, Ealing, chiseled into the stone, which was left in its original position.

The explanation of the removal of the names on the stone as it was first placed at the school is that it was removed under order of the board of education.

ASKIN STREET ORCHESTRA.

On Thursday night the prize winning orchestra of Askin street Methodist Sunday school entertained their friends at a banquet. Short speeches were given by the manager, Mr. Millard, the three superintendents of the Sunday school, Messrs. Walker, Moorhouse and Richmond; the leader of the orchestra, Dr. Smith, and the president, Mr. Biggs. Mr. Millard told the orchestra he had heard of them long before he came to London, and hoped that they would go to Toronto for the next competition and again win honor for the Sunday school. The orchestra played a few selections for their guests and then the remainder of the evening was spent in games, under the direction of Messrs. Chapman and Whitehouse.

CIDER PLENTIFUL.

Cider offered in large quantities again brought cheer to the hearts of many people on the local market this morning.

Made chiefly from large King apples, the product, according to one old gentleman, who believed in buying by the gallon was the best he had ever tasted.

It is thought that this will strengthen the troops as reorganization will take place following the holidays.

DON'T FORGET THE DATE— THURSDAY, DECEMBER 4.

Orioles Getting Ice Workouts

Junior City League Teams Almost Intact.

The Orioles apparently are going ahead with their workouts, despite the fact that the team has been scattered. It is uncertain where they will play, but the team has had some workouts in the arena. Elwood Biggs, Palmy, Marnell, Howard and Wood were the only players out. Biggs played junior O. H. A. and Howard played with D. S. Perrin last year.

Askin Hawks won the championship last year, and it is expected that most of their men will again be eligible this season. In fact most of the teams that last year's crews are almost intact, which should speed up the brand of play.

OF all the countries of the earth the climate in India is probably the most trying to pianos.

The fact that we ship Sherlock-Manning Pianos in increasing numbers each year demonstrates its durability and lasting excellence beyond question.

Shall He Show Her His Love or Keep Her Guessing?—Is There Any Way to Cure a Girl Who Is Too Talkative?—Shall She Take Back Her Wandering Husband?

Dear Miss Dix—How does the average girl like men to treat her? Does she like a man to show that he is wild about her, or to keep her guessing? I am in love with a girl and want to win her, but I do not know whether to show her how much I care for her or not.

Of course, it flatters a girl's vanity for her to know that a man is desperately in love with her, but unless she is in love with him herself it is a good policy for him to let her feel too sure of him. The thing that is difficult to get is the thing we value more than the thing we can have any day for the taking. And that is true even of hearts.

Answer: So it is just as well to keep the girl you want on the anxious seat a little, and make her feel that she will have to sit pretty if she gets you. Never make the mistake of being humble in your love for a woman, or making a doormat of yourself for her to trample on.

No girl who gets surfeited with her friends that she has got you on the leash, and can put you through your tricks, and make you jump through the hoop, and cut out of her hand, and play dead, at her command. No woman ever really loves the man she doesn't respect, and no woman respects the man she does not dominate.

The winning play is to make a girl feel that you love her deeply, and romantically, that your love surrounds her, and protects her, but that you are too strong a man to be made the slave of love, or become any woman's tame cat.

The mistake that many a man makes when he is courting a girl is to be always Johnny on the spot. He is always hanging about her. He is always underfoot. He sulks when she speaks to another man, and has jealous fits when she dances with others. The result is that she gets fed up with him. She gets surfeited with his society, and she begins to chafe at the tyranny that he enforces upon her.

A lover far better serves his purpose if he visits a girl seldom enough to make her anxious to see him instead of so often that she dreads his coming. And, in particular, he is wise if he does not try to monopolize her. If he shows that he is not afraid of comparison with other men, and does not want her to marry him because he has driven all the other men away, but because she likes him, but they don't want to marry a spendthrift, and they don't want a man to make them feel as if he thought they could be bought. When you take a girl out, do not spend more than you can afford. She will have a shrewd idea about that, and will despise you as a bluffer if you are pretending to be better off than you are.

But spend what you are going to spend freely. Don't haggle over pennies. Don't complain of restaurant prices, and the cost of theatre tickets. A girl would rather go to a ten-cent movie and have a glass of soda afterward than to have orchestra seats at a theatre and a restaurant supper with a man who spends the time discussing about how much it costs.

But girls aren't hard to please. They are dying for attention, and they eat up love talk, so you can't go astray in your wooing.

DOROTHY DIX.

Dear Miss Dix—I have a girl chum who is most attractive, but she loses out with the boys because she simply talks too much. She is good-looking, and dances well, and mean as far as her death. She is never holds them, and they never come back the second time because she talks too much. Is there any way to stop her?

CURLY LOCKS.

Answer: You might tell her that "Mum" is the word that spells fascination in women, but I am afraid it would not do any good. When a woman is in the babbling-brook type she runs on and on forever, and no matter how much you dam her you can never stop her flow of speech.

Her only surfeit was to find a boy who doesn't like to talk, and who is glad to leave the conversation to any one who will undertake the job. Even now and then we meet up with a silent man who is married to a woman who is a human phonograph, and they seem to get along very comfortably together.

Generally speaking, however, a girl can have no more fatal fault than a perpetual motion tongue. Most men avoid her as they would the plague, not only because nothing is so boring as to have to listen to a monologist but because men like to do the talking themselves.

The chief object of interest in the world to the average man is himself. That is a subject upon which he can spout for the hour, and have a perfectly glorious time telling about his fads and fancies, his car, his dog, what he said to the boss, and what the boss said to him; the girls he has known, and how he knocked the James cold. And wise, indeed, is the girl who listens to these reminiscences without countering with any of her own.

The chatter boxes are seldom popular with men. It is the beautiful but dumb matrons who can listen unobtrusively by the hour, and who contribute nothing to the conversation but "Oh, how wonderful!" "How strong and brave you are!" "It must be simply grand to be a maid like yours," who need a bookkeeper to keep all of their dates.

POWDER PUFF INTIMACY IS DANGEROUS TO FRIENDSHIP

Greater Reserve Usually Leads to More Lasting Friendship.

NEVER ABUSE IT

By JULIA HOYT. What constitutes an intimate friend—what is permitted in an intimacy and what not? This is a question about which there are many different opinions, and one that is quite often discussed. Personally, I believe that the work "intimacy" should mean a mental understanding and friendship, but not a freedom towards one's friends' personal belongings or private life.

I remember some years ago a certain woman came walking into her room one day and found an "intimate" friend of hers using her powder puff. She never saw anything of her friend and never heard anything of her. That was carrying the feeling I mean to an exaggerated point and yet, to a great extent, can understand what made her do it. Probably, if she had not a quick temper, she would have merely told her friend that she preferred not to have her personal toilet articles used by any one else. She told me afterwards, however, that she always felt that any one who would use someone else's personal articles without her permission would also read one's letters; in other words, was someone who did not in any way respect one's private property.

Never Abuse It. I do believe that the only way for an intimacy to be bearable and to have any chance of lasting is for the people concerned never to abuse it. Intimacy in the true sense of the word means that we have studied the other person, and if we really know the character of our friend, such an unnecessary abuse of someone else's sensibilities as the ones I have mentioned could never happen. The offender in question should have known that though she might use someone else's powder puff without giving offense, she could not use this friend's. No matter how unreasonably or foolish she might feel that to be it was up to her to respect that feeling.

In the same way, I feel that because one considers oneself to be an intimate friend of a certain person, it does not give one the right to probe into her life, to ask personal questions and give unasked-for advice.

DARKENED WINDOWS

By CORNELIA KANE RATHBONE.

The Cane Tops. John Graham, junior partner in the long-established law firm of Graham, Keith & Graham, was not given to profanity; he regarded an oath as he might a snarl of an unfeeling dog.

There was nothing to be done. Registering a black mark against the entire French nation, Graham jerked himself resentfully into the other man's habitations, and strode out into the night air. The coat was enough like his own, he acknowledged, but he was either in great haste or deeply engrossed, might have accepted it without recognizing the mistake. Graham's gloves were some with his coat and instinctively his hands sought the protection of the other man's pockets.

It was a brief note typed on a single sheet of paper, the address stamped upon which was that of a street in the same section of the city in which Graham himself lived. It began without formal heading: "Come at 9 o'clock. I have arranged everything. I am sure that he suspects and I can bear no more. Tonight must end it."

The note was signed with two initials, E. H., and it bore no date. It broke in on Graham's light comedy of clothes with a sudden suggestion of tragedy.

"My overcoat has evidently gone where it has no business to be," he reflected. He had his clue, but the following it would be clear that the note was some delicacy. The thought of tracking a strange man to a strange house and breaking in on what would seem to be a lover's assignation was not to be lightly considered.

SAUCE has a unique character that everybody likes

It was with an uncomfortable slinking of the heart, unnoticed past the open door, or advance boldly and plead the circumstances which were unavailing for his presence. Common sense counseled the latter course, for if caught sneaking down like a thief he would be in a worse case than if he frankly declared himself. He thought he could carry it off—open door—blood—drilling—impetuous youth! He decided on publicity.

DRESS By MARY MARSHALL

Simple, Comfortable Clothes Give Best Service for Golf.

"Heather tweeds are intertwined in our thoughts with the Scotch game of golf," says Margaret Story in her helpful volume, "How to Dress Well." "With a three-piece tweed suit is generally worn a heavy silk shirt when it is warm, or a sweater or knitted jacket when it is cold."

Intimacy in the true sense of the word means that we have studied the other person, and if we really know the character of our friend, such an unnecessary abuse of someone else's sensibilities as the ones I have mentioned could never happen.

WISE AND OTHERWISE

WHEN YOU USE DATES. Date Sponge With Lemon Sauce. One-third cup flour, one-half cup sugar, one and one-half cups hot milk, three egg yolks, one tablespoon butter, one cup chopped dates, one teaspoon vanilla, three egg whites. Mix flour and sugar together. Add milk slowly, stirring constantly until smooth and thick. Cook in double boiler ten minutes. Add beaten egg yolks, butter, dates, vanilla, and stiffly beaten egg whites. Mix thoroughly and pour into buttered baking dish. Set in pan of hot water and bake in moderate oven thirty minutes. Chill and serve with lemon sauce.

Stuffed Dates With Cream. Three-fourths of a pound of dates, one-half cup walnut meats, one-half cup sliced crystallized ginger, one cup cream. Remove pits from dates and fill with half a walnut meat and small piece of ginger. Arrange in sherbet glasses. Chop finely remainder of ginger and mix with cream and sliced chopped dates and nuts with it. Heat on top of dates and serve.

SETS OF SIX. Handkerchiefs are frequently sold in sets of six. Rose, soft blue, light yellow, green, lavender and gray, for instance, are the colors of each set. The dark with the darkest, each of which shows banding of white near the edges. Another set is made of rose and blue, and lavender and green.

Prof. Mulveny Answers Telephone Call

Hello! Is that Prof. Mulveny's, Parkdale 4837?

Yes, Prof. Mulveny is speaking. Have you a worm remedy for children?

Yes. Could you tell me, if I brought my little girl down, if she had worms, would you examine her?

No, lady. I cannot do that. I have worms.

You can't? No, madam.

Couldn't you tell me if I told you all the symptoms?

No, madam. My remedy called "Mother's Friend and Builder," good for the nerves, and is an excellent medicine for regulating the bowels, drives away all flat and small intestinal worms, is perfectly harmless, and can be given to children of any age without fear of doing harm.

A lady who is living on Shaw street got a bottle of this medicine for her baby, two years old. She said she had no peace with this child night or day for two months. The doctor was calling regularly and did not help the child in the least. The little girl was choking, the mother opened its mouth and pulled out a stomach full of worms. She had purchased a bottle of Mother's Friend, and the second day she was cured. She was horrified at the sight, and brought the worms to me, which I have here in a bottle in my office, and many others from other happy mothers. So if you think it is not necessary to examine your children here, as I do not practice medicine, and have only the one remedy for children here, you can give your children Worms if they are there. It is an excellent medicine for children.

Call or send to 211, Dundas street, Toronto, Ontario, Canada. Telephone Parkdale 4838. Mother's Friend in powder form, each medicine for $1.00; no danger of breaking and no need for sending. Just a word.

Facts About Optometry

An ethical optometrist does not feature the "price" of his service. No, he is not able to do so, even if he had the desire, which he has not. Then the Optometrist has no definite value before the nature of the service is determined by an examination.

No, until the examination is completed no idea of the nature of the service required can be known even to the optometrist. For that reason he cannot quote prices in advance.

ANNUAL RUGBY DANCE PROVES HAPPIEST OF SEASON'S EVENTS

Winter Gardens Gaily Decorated With Colors of University. NOVEL FEATURES

The Winter Gardens was transformed last night with the purple and white colors of the university of Western Ontario. It was the occasion of the annual rugby dance, generally acknowledged to be the happiest of the season's events.

Charming co-eds held their heads higher as they danced with the heroes of the rugby field. In a special dance reserved for the players alone, and as a symbol of their achievements in the field, everything was arranged in acknowledgment of the fine efforts of the team in the recent struggles on the field.

Novelty Dances. Among the novel and attractive dancing was a parlor dance, during which the merry couples danced beneath bright-colored parasols. The music was furnished by a string orchestra.

Every waltz was a moonlight waltz, and the other numbers on the program were attractive, ending in the ever-popular serpentine dance, during which the guests danced in a line, following the leader of the brightly-colored streamer.

Between four hundred and fifty and five hundred were present for the function which by permission of the dean, continued until 1 o'clock. Supper was served at the end of the tenth dance.

Among those present at the dance were Grant Wylie, prefect of the school, Evans Davis, Jack White, Miss Marjorie White, Miss M. G. Cranmer, Miss Sylvia Granger, Miss Sterling Westland, Miss Helen Boughner, Miss Marjorie Boughner, Miss Margaret Jordan, Miss Gordon, Miss Gwen Williams, Miss Connie Givens, Miss Virginia Harper, Miss Eleanor Robinson, Miss Marion Aiden, Miss Phyllis Walker, Miss Katharine Belts, Miss Phyllis Walker of Detroit, Miss Helen Talbot, Miss McMillan, Miss Morrison, Miss Gordon, Miss Kathleen Richardson, Miss Marion Tanton, Miss Lucy Cook of Sarnia, Miss Helen Keating, Miss Mary Fletcher, Miss

Social and Personal

Mr. Victor Pidgeon was a guest with friends in Woodstock recently. Mr. Fred Howell of this city was a business visitor in Woodstock this week.

Miss Rose Rayfield of Toronto is a guest with her brother Mr. S. H. Rayfield 801 Colborne street. Mr. A. H. Gibson and Miss H. E. Gibson were guests at the King Edward in Toronto on Thursday.

Mrs. A. R. Boug entertained on Wednesday evening at three tables on her home on Thornton street. Mrs. H. Melville, missionary on furlough from Africa, is a week-end guest with Mrs. Thomas Hill, Tecumseh avenue.

Mrs. D. J. Nolan, Richmond street, entertained at a delightful little card party for her club last night. Seven tables were in play.

The Beta Kappa chapter of the Alpha Kappa fraternity, Western University medical school is arranging a dance to be held shortly after Christmas.

Miss Kathryn Slay of this city and Miss Gladys Slay, whose guest she has been in Sarnia, left on Thursday for London, Tecumseh and other northern points.

Miss Evelyn Mitchell, W. M. S. secretary, who was to have spoken in different churches of the L.O.D.E. presbytery, has been forced to cancel her whole itinerary owing to illness, and has left for her home in Toronto.

Prof. Manley Baker, of Queen's university, was the guest of Mr. and Mrs. V. K. Greer, coming to the city yesterday to be present at the annual banquet of the Queen's university alumnae, held at the Smallman and Ingram tea room.

Prof. J. D. Dewler, of the University of Western Ontario, is a delegate in Guelph attending a conference of the entomological association, where he gave an address on Thursday. Mr. Hodgins, Hise street, and returned to their home this morning. Mr. Hodgins had not been in the city for of the auxiliary and was so well patronized that nearly sixty tables were in play. An interesting idea was carried out when each of the military euche tables were named after some country, the Italian table, with Mrs. J. J. MacDougall, Mrs. Winifred MacDougall, Miss Gertrude Mann and Mrs. Robair winning the prizes. In bridge, Mr. Farr and Mrs. O. I. Cunningham carried off the prizes. The committee had carried out its scheme of helping out a hospital by giving as prizes the handiwork of the maids at Westminster hospital.

The members of Orphan chapter were the hostesses of a very successful bridge euche and dance last night at the De Luxe cafe. About forty tables were in play.

The bright red of the military uniform was used as the color scheme for the soldiers' wives' league musicale and tea program given yesterday afternoon in the officers' mess at the armories.

The nurses' residence at Victoria hospital was on a festive night for the benefit bridge and euche held by Mrs. Robert Duret, violin soloist in the orchestra.

KNOX LADIES' AID GIVES GAY BAZAAR

Many Purchasers Wend Their Way to South London to Visit Fete.

The ladies' aid of the Knox Presbyterian church held a most successful bazaar yesterday afternoon when many purchasers came to do their Christmas shopping at the prettily decorated booths.

Each stall had a most attractive display of goods, from the plum puddings at the door, all the way around the room to the men's booth opposite it.

There was a home-cooking booth, in charge of Mrs. C. Smith, where delicious cakes, pies and other edibles were for sale.

The men's booth, which was really a store, was presided over by A. MacDonald, and here many manly articles helped nilady select a gift for her gentleman, so hard to please.

The evening Charles E. Percy presented a splendid program, securing John Kahan and his group, who delighted the shoppers with the sweet strains of their Hawaiian music.

Let The Women Tell Their Story

Every woman is interested in another woman's letters, and we shall give the women a chance to present their experience with Dr. Chase's Nerve Food by quoting from their letters. If you do not find anyone you know among these ladies, write us for references from people in your community, or ask your friends and neighbors for particulars about Dr. Chase's Nerve Food.

"From my experience as a wife and mother I find that the majority of users of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food are women, especially women passing through the change of life; next by young mothers to regain strength after baby comes, and also by mothers for their young daughters entering their womanhood. While it is good for all classes of humanity, I am sure it is especially so for women, as they seem to be troubled most by nervous diseases." MRS. H. ALCHORN, 23 Gerald Street, Charlottetown, P.E.I.

Girlhood. Mrs. M. E. ROSSON, 170 Dublin St., Peterborough, Ont., writes: "My daughter of 15 lost appetite, color and was on the verge of nervous collapse. Five boxes of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food completely restored her health and strength."

Motherhood, Middle Life. Mrs. A. ERNEST, R.R. No. 4, Walkerton, Ont., writes: "For some time after the birth of my first child I was in a weak, nervous condition. I could not sleep well, had frequent headaches and buzzing in the ears. I also had neuralgic pains through my body, twitching of the nerves and was subject to weak spells. I had indigestion and seemed tired and languid. I began to use Dr. Chase's Nerve Food and found the result most satisfactory. I have used a great many different medicines, but never found one as good as Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. It is especially good for quieting the nerves and I feel very grateful for the good it has done me."

Critical Age. Mrs. C. NICOL, Gormley, Ont., writes: "I consider that I owe a prolonged term of life to Dr. Chase's medicine. Like many others, when at the critical stage of middle age, I threw aside doctors' medicine and turned to Dr. Chase's Nerve Food and Kidney-Liver Pills. For three months I continued to use this combined treatment and cannot find words to tell how much it helped me. I have recently been using Dr. Chase's Catarrh Powder for a stubborn case of catarrh, and it has relieved me greatly, having stopped the pain in the head and frequent headache from which I have been suffering."

Womanhood. Mrs. N. C. McDONALD, R.R. No. 2 Colborne, Ont., writes: "When a girl, my health became run down. I was sleepless, had nervous headaches and finally developed St. Vitus' Dance. I was completely relieved by a course of treatment with Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. I am married now, have three children and have had no return of the old trouble."

Advanced Years. Mrs. MARY ROWDON, 22 North St. St. Catharines, Ont., writes: "My husband died in February, 1923, at the age of 74 years, and after that my nerves became very bad. I started taking Dr. Chase's Nerve Food and have found it all my claim to it. For run down constitution and tired, exhausted nerves, there is nothing like it."

Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. It is woman's greatest friend at every critical stage in her life and is endorsed by women everywhere. 60 cents a box of sixty pills, all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto.

Other officers of the lodge for the coming year are: Deputy mistress, Mrs. W. Barnett; chaplain, Mrs. D. Middaugh; recording secretary, Mrs. W. L. Gowd; treasurer, Mrs. M. J. Kelly; secretary, Miss Mildred Skelly; lecturers, Mrs. Arthur Wilkes (re-elected); lecturers, Mrs. Edna Coulter, Mrs. F. Graham, Mrs. M. J. Jones, Mrs. J. C. Smith; outer guard, Mrs. C. Smith; outer guard, Mrs. James Clugston, senior member of the committee, Mrs. Fortner, trustees, Mr. and Mrs. S. Campbell and Mrs. M. Haldane; auditors, Mrs. M. Haldane and Mrs. J. Clugston; guardian, Sydney Bell; pianist, Mrs. A. Fortner; past mistress, Mrs. Sydney Campbell.

W. C. T. U. MOTHERS. The young people of the Hamilton road Presbyterian church put on their clever little play, "Baby's Bobs," at the W. C. T. U. rooms, Clarence street, last night, for the W. C. T. U. mothers' club. The proceeds will be used for work among needy families. Mrs. Ida Harrison occupied the chair. Following the presentation of the play, refreshments were served.

ARGENTINE WHEAT CROP. Associated Press Despatch. Nov. 28.—The statistical department of the Argentine ministry of agriculture, in its final official estimate of grain crops for 1924, received here today, states that the total wheat crop area is 2,500,000 acres, an increase of 50,000 acres over its first estimate. The annual wheat average for the past ten years averaged 2,640,000.

COWS TO GOLDFISH FIND HOME IN CITY

London Humane Society is Life for Dumb Friends

A Can On His Tail, No Friends, Home or Food—Where Can a Poor Pup Go? The London Humane Society Answers That.

By OLAF RECHNITZER.
Illustrated by H. B. West.

To dogs of all descriptions, scavengers of the alley and derelicts of the street, dogs who know man only as a creature of savage kicks and imprecations, the London humane society must be something akin to heaven. All kinds of dogs, from the cringing mongrel to the quivering thoroughbred, are cared for there. All kinds of cats, too, not to mention all varieties of cows, horses, pigs, chickens, yes—and even goldfish.

For the London humane society is to the animal kingdom what hospitals and sanatoriums are to humans. It is the refuge of the starving pup, a haven for ill and neglected domestic pets. It ministers to the unfortunate and stricken in the world of dumb creatures. It is equipped and maintained by persons endowed with the God given gifts of pity and sympathy. Persons to whom the torture of a beast is no less to be condemned than the torture of an innocent babe.

A visit to the society quarters gives an intimate glimpse of the work and a deep appreciation of its manifold benefits. Here you see contented cats purring pleasantly which a week ago were vermin-infested and writhing in agony. Here are convalescent dogs, victims of man's brutality. Here, too, are shaggy wafers of the street feeding leisurely on luscious chops before being painlessly executed by Humane Inspector George Tustin.

In his time Mr. Tustin has nursed more than 20,000 dogs and an equal number of cats, cows and horses. He personally investigates an average of 14 cases each day. These involve cruelty, accidents and disease. He is the animals' friend because it is his job to fight their battles and to inflict punishment on human beings who either heartlessly or thoughtlessly abuse them.

Two Kinds of Humans.

From the point of view of the animal lover there are two classes of citizens: The large majority whose natural instinct is to treat animals kindly, and the small minority who regard dumb brutes as machines or inanimate objects incapable of joy and devoid of feeling. With the aid of the first class the humane society is forever making war on the second. Its gospel is one of tolerance to dumb creatures. And those who, by their actions, refuse to recognize that gospel are prosecuted with vigor and effect.

The society's headquarters at 3 Victoria street is nominally the home of Mr. Tustin and his family. But it is actually a home for many ill-used animals. They are the inspector's guests. On his living-room radiator he has thawed out scores of frozen cats and dogs. When the tiny animal hospital in the rear is crowded he provides comfortable lodgings for his dumb friends in his own home.

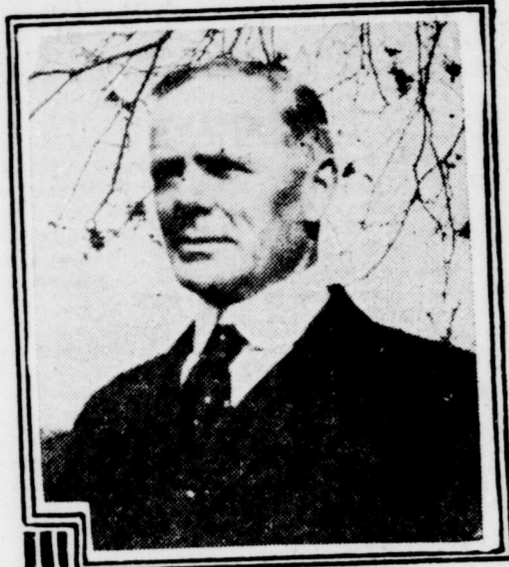

The London humane society's territory includes practically the whole of Western Ontario, and many are the tragic and sometimes laughable experiences Mr. Tustin knocks up against in his travels through the district. His errands of mercy have taken him to the mansions of the rich and the hovels of the poor. Curiously enough, it is the comparatively prosperous and well-to-do that are the worst offenders in cruelty cases. Mr. Tustin once prosecuted a millionaire for ill-treating a prize bull. Some of his experiences are well worth recording.

In 1920, while investigating a cruelty charge, he came across a wild duck lying wounded in a swamp. It had been shot down and was starving to death. The inspector carried the creature home, nursed it back to health, and trained it. "Pat," as the duck is called, is now an extraordinarily intelligent bird that will quack for you as often as you designate up to ten.

Calls On Goldfish.

A few years ago the inspector visited a house to prescribe treatment for a couple of sick goldfish. On examining the bowl he discovered somebody had flung cigar ashes into it, making the fish ill. Tustin rushed them to the humane society for first aid. One died, but the other is still there as healthy as a fresh water trout.

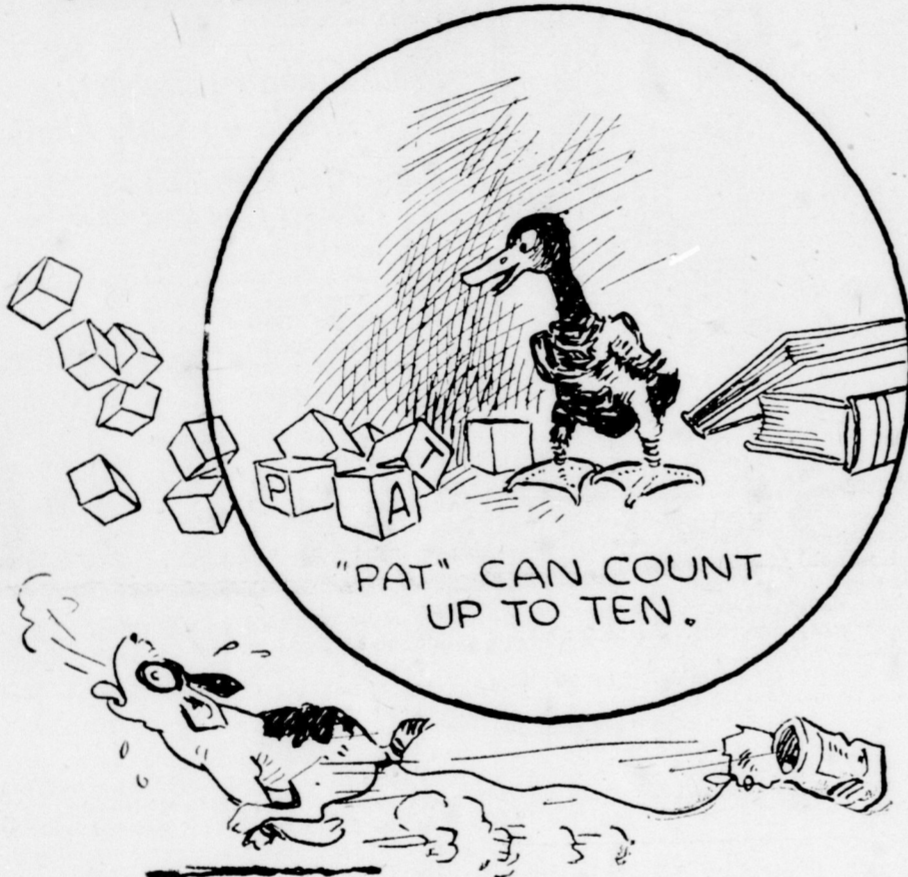

Another time a citizen came rushing to the humane society with his pet alligator. The reptile had swallowed a pin and the frantic owner asked the inspector for advice. Tustin baked some potatoes and fed them to the lizard. This prevented perforation of the alligator's intestines, and he recovered.

These, of course, are exceptional cases. But they illustrate the scope of a humane inspector's work. A specimen of complaints and queries covering a single day, taken haphazardly from the society's files, is as follows:

Dog killed on Bruce street. Dog complained of by Mrs. ——. Dog diseased; advice sought. Mrs. — has cat with vermin. Mrs. — complains of man kicking dog. Starving and diseased horse seen carrying load of coal by Mrs. —. Mr. —'s parrot sick. Dog with rabies reported seen on King between Burwell and Maitland. Ridout street resident complains of dogs in garden. Pet ferret sick on Pipe Line road. Canary burned; advice sought as to treatment. Dog with broken leg on Lyle street.

In responding to accident calls Mr. Tustin carries a fully equipped first aid bag and a revolver. The latter is to destroy suffering animals and prevent needless agony. Before the society was prosperous enough to afford a car he was forced to trudge long distances and take trains to out-of-the-way hamlets and towns throughout Western Ontario. Some of the cruelty cases he has been associated with are astonishing.

Perhaps the most gruesome happened four years ago, when certain citizens complained about the disappearance of their dogs. The animals would mysteriously vanish one by one with no apparent justification. The theory, of course, was that someone was systematically stealing dogs in the neighborhood. One citizen determined to investigate. Entering the barn of a neighbor, he observed three dogs hanging from the rafters. On questioning the owner of the barn, the latter confessed he had been acting dogs and hanging them "just for the fun of it." The culprit was subjected to a mental examination and found insane. He is now confined in an institution.

Radmore Case.

The case of the Radmore sisters near Chatham was probably the most sensational with which Mr. Tustin ever came in contact. On complaint of neighbors, he visited the great Radmore farm lands and found a condition which none imagined could exist in a civilized country. The farm was the property of Mrs. Radmore and her daughters. An inquiry revealed that one of the daughters had not changed her clothes for ten years, that all slept on the floor in abject squalor, that cattle, pigs and chickens were dying of starvation, and that the large farm was so filthy as to menace the health of persons living hundreds of yards distant.

Mr. Tustin shot 27 head of cattle, several pigs and horses. The Radmore sisters were at first believed insane, but this was not proven at the subsequent trial, and they were permitted to return to the farm on payment of a fine.

Called to investigate a cruelty case in Arkona, Huron county, this year, Mr. Tustin found two horses in the last stages of cancer. The germ-ridden beasts could not stand up, but the owner ascribed this to perversity and inflicted a form of torture one would scarcely credit to the dark ages. The horses were hoisted to a standing position in the barn with ropes, and permitted to remain in that posture for days without food. Mr. Tustin shot the unfortunate brutes as soon as he arrived and laid a criminal charge against the owner. The latter was fined $200 and costs and sentenced to three months in common jail.

Cruelty to animals is frequently the result of negligence. A case in point is that of a London resident who left a bulldog in his summer home at Port Stanley for a week. In some curious manner the dog broke out and made his way to London. Many observed his emaciated state. He was so ugly and fierce looking, however, that those who were inclined to feed him could not summon up the courage. Finally Mr. Tustin was called, and the dog was given its first meal in more than a week. The next day the owner advertised and received his pet back.

Bother of Feeding.

Another primary cause of cruelty is dilatoriness and unwillingness to part with a few coppers to keep animals in a healthy state. This was exemplified in a shocking incident at Wilton Grove recently. Eighteen cattle, horses and chickens had been left to starve in a farmer's barn through the winter because the proprietor did not care to take the trouble of feeding them. An investigation disclosed the man's granary was full and that he was worth more than $70,000. When summoned before a magistrate, the farmer said he was experimenting. He wanted to find out whether his cattle and horses could survive the winter in good condition without feed.

One of the most hideous cases of juvenile depravity Mr. Tustin knows of was that of a lad who was recently found guilty of burying a number of kittens alive.

"Cruelty is usually the result of negligence, ignorance and downright viciousness," Mr. Tustin said. "Most people who cause suffering do so through indifference, but many are so ignorant of animal requirements that untold hardship is endured by their pets. An instance of this came to my attention last week. A man telephoned for me to attend his collie, which he said had gone mad. When I got there the dog was frothing at the mouth and nobody would go near it. I made an examination and found the dog suffering from strangulation. The owners had put a collar on him while a pup and had neglected to enlarge it as he developed and his neck grew. As soon as I cut the collar the collie stopped gasping and was quite all right in a couple of minutes.

"In all my experience I have never seen more than two mad dogs. Dogs may froth at the mouth and show every sign of hydrophobia, but its ninety-nine chances in a hundred that they are suffering from fits. Fits are not a disease, but a symptom, like a headache or cough. They arise from such a variety of causes that it is a wonder every dog does not have at least one fit in his lifetime. Teething puppies have fits. Broadly speaking, any disturbance of the digestive tract may result in fits, which are encouraged by hot weather and poor condition.

Few Mad Dogs.

"When a dog has a fit, his coat becomes stiff, his eyes are wild, he runs madly about or ducks into some dark corner, he has convulsions, he snaps, a white, frothy saliva forms in his mouth. Do you recognize the proverbial description of a 'mad dog?' The dog with these symptoms is no more mad than you or I. A bite from such a dog is no more dangerous than any cut or scratch—not one-tenth as dangerous as a cut from a dirty tin or the jab of a rusty nail. Yet hundreds of these poor creatures are slaughtered each summer, and thousands of people are scared out of their wits."

Distemper is the worst affliction a dog can have, Mr. Tustin added. Some canine infections can be transmitted to humans, but no dog is ever as dangerous to the health of the individual as a cat. Cats are potent germ carriers. Any mother of young children who keeps a cat in the house is subjecting her offspring to all kinds of contagion.

"I would no more allow a child under three years to play with a cat than I would allow him to play with a stick of dynamite," is the way the inspector puts it.

Pet monkeys are even more to be avoided. Ninety-seven per cent of all the monkeys of North America reek of tuberculosis, Mr. Tustin says.

In London the inspector is informed of cases requiring his attention by telephone. He jots down the information given on a pad and, after making his investigation, writes out a report of just what was done. These reports are submitted to the executive of the society each month. An average report would show about 40 accidents, 15 cases of cruelty, 85 complaints regarding stray dogs or cats, 30 requests for the inspector's services as animal executioner, and 120 questions from citizens in connection with treatment for sick pets.

Clean Up City.

Before the humane society was organized on a sound basis thousands of homeless cats and dogs customarily roamed the streets, invaded garbage pails, and made themselves a general nuisance to householders, car owners and pedestrians. Since then the society has launched an aggressive campaign intended to clear the city of unwanted animals. How effective this campaign has been every Londoner appreciates who recalls the innumerable hounds that used to wander about the city unchecked. Practically all unattached animals have not been disposed of.

"When I see a dog without a collar annoying citizens, I don't order him to be destroyed unless I am positive he has no owner," Mr. Tustin added. "You can usually tell whether a dog is homeless or not by the condition his body is in.

If it's dirty and emaciated you may be reasonably certain that he does not belong to anybody.

"Ten years ago horses were made to work while enduring agony from body sores, starvation and mistreatment. Nowadays when a horse is in such a condition I am usually informed by some lover of dumb brutes, and the owner of the animal is immediately warned to send his horse to a veterinarian. If he does not comply and the animal is seen again in unfit condition, the owner is summoned to court."

Since summer furs have become the fashion the London society, in common with societies of the nature throughout Canada, is doing its utmost, by means of well-directed propaganda, to discourage the vogue. It is a pitiable sight to those who know what trapping means to see a delicate and refined woman clothed in skins and dangling tails and heads of creatures that have been sacrificed to serve her craving for barbaric decoration. It is claimed that women wear furs, not so much for warmth as for vanity. If you do not believe this, wait till January and watch her "when winter weather rankles, a sealskin sash upon her back and gauze upon her ankles."

Wonderful Progress.

In spite of some rare retrogressions, such as the fad for summer furs, humane work in London has progressed wonderfully. The society, which is headed by Col. Eric Reid, D.S.O., is adding new members to its roll each month. Members, of course, have nothing to gain personally and their efforts on behalf of the oppressed animal world are gratuitously given. They are animated by a deep spirit of sympathy for all living creatures who suffer needlessly—a spirit that has only for its reward the mute thanks in a mongrel's eyes.

"I hope some day to see a first-class animal hospital in London," one member of the humane society said. "Although our facilities are as good as any in Canada, they are not yet adequate. The great thing, of course, is to give the people large doses of humane education. Then there would be no necessity for animal hospitals.

"Just now I would like to remind citizens going away for the winter that their cats must be provided for before leaving. Last winter our inspectors were kept busy rescuing starving cats whose owners were sporting themselves at high-priced winter resorts. This is the kind of forgetfulness that is criminal.

"There is an immense satisfaction in humane work. It does not matter whether pain or injury is inflicted on a bird, a beast, or a child. In any case it is wrong. That is the thought we are striving to put over, and I think we are meeting with success."

AFTER A 43-YEAR BATTLE HE'S LEAVING THE BRIDGE

Samuel Gompers, Grand Old Captain of American Labor, Makes His Preparations to Hand Over the Helm

SAM GOMPERS is stepping down. The battle-scarred veteran of a thousand and one labor struggles, who has been fighting ever since he could crawl, has announced that he will hand over the helm of organized labor in America and retire. He may retire, but the odds are ten to one that he will not rest.

Since Gompers first saw the light of day in a slum district of England, his life has been one steady succession of troubles. His parents were Jewish, hard-working and anxious to give their son a better chance than they themselves had had. They wanted to help him, but they couldn't. They had no money and they were happy if they were able to provide food, shelter and clothing of a sort for their flock. Sam, it seemed, would have to look after himself.

But if someone had predicted in 1859, when Sam Gompers was a little ten-year-old urchin on the streets of London, that this unknown British lad would, sixty years later, be settling in council with the rulers of the royal grandchild of Queen Victoria, Wilhelm of Germany, then a year old, would be an almost forgotten outcast, he would have been laughed at and probably taken to the bestialist.

The lines on Gompers' face to-day are mute evidence of the struggles he has passed through. At the age of ten, he went to work in a factory; every sixpence was almost a fortune in the Gompers' family. He soon found his first job an unconvivial one and left it. As his father was a cigar-maker, he determined to follow the same trade, and when he was thirteen he had managed to rake together enough money to get to America.

While he continued at his cigar-making tasks he studied everything on which he could lay his hands. He read night and day and he was an active leader in the organization of the first cigar-makers' union.

His fellow-workmen, too, had a passion for learning, an appetite for learning that seems nothing short of unbelievable in these days, for they agreed among themselves that it would be a very good idea for all concerned if Gompers were to read aloud to them most of the day while each one rolled a few cigars for him and made up the lecturer's share of the day's work.

It was in this musty, smelly shop that Samuel Gompers developed that clear, mellow voice which has been perhaps his greatest platform accomplishment.

In 1881 he helped to form the American Federation of Labor, which was begun in an attempt to form a country-wide organization which would also preserve the autonomy of locals. In support of this principle, he and the Cigar-Makers' Union had to fight a society known as the "Knights of Labor." They won, and the American Federation of Labor stands to-day as a monument to Samuel Gompers' singleness of purpose.

His Monument

THE federation was formed in 1881, and he was that year asked to accept the presidency. He refused. The following year it was forced upon him, and he has led the working man of America every year since that date, with the solitary exception of 1895, when he was defeated by John McBride, the coal miners' leader. He has kept his place at the helm for nearly half a century.

The record of his work in that time is too stupendous to even synopsise, and the announcement of his coming retirement means that American writers will soon commence to pour forth a flood of biographies in any case.

But his war-time services were much too valuable to pass over. He took the point of view of the pacifist, but he also took the stand that the German working man should have refused to fight because his cause was unjust and that the allied workman was in duty bound to step forward in the cause of democracy.

"He tore the mask from the Labor peace party," says one biographer, "denounced the embargo conference as a Hun propaganda, and refused to send delegates to the 'peace' conference in Sweden and Switzerland."

He kept American labor free from entangling pacifist alliances and had his followers lined up and ready when it came the United States' turn to step into the fray.

Gompers has been criticized as a Bolshevik leader and as a labor reactionary. He has always been opposed to strikes and has had to overcome opposition within his own ranks on a hundred different occasions. He has been sworn at and wept over, worshipped and hated. He has been called everything from an over-ripe tomato to a scalded rat.

But his little southern secretary discovered a resemblance that no one else had ever suspected. She saw a likeness in the grand old man of labor to Uncle Remus' Br'er Rabbit.

And if you look on Samuel Gompers' desk to-day before he clears it out and bids his farewell to the temple where he has been the high priest for nearly a lifetime, you will see a battered brown cottony rabbit with a dangling ear, a cork leg and a fake eye. It has fought with Samuel Gompers through many a stiff campaign and like him it bears the honorable scars of battle. Br'er Rabbit is Gompers' mascot.

AH! WHAT LOVE!

HERE is a tale with a "love interest." It concerns Mary Anderson, the beautiful English actress, who retired from the stage how many years ago?

"An American much in love with her is said to have declared his passion in the following, extremely unpoetic manner. Said he, 'Mary, I love you. I love you—oh! I love you!'"

"But she wanted to know more; why did he love her? how did he love her? and so on. 'I love you,' he began again in a puzzled tone. 'Well, I just love you,' and noticing still that his lady love was not satisfied, he groped wildly in search of a simile and clutching at last as a drowning man at a straw, he blurted out:—'"

"Oh, I love you, as hard as a mule kicks." THE son of Mr. Robert Smille, British M.P., is a bricklayer. Mr. Smille, jun., seems to be following in his father's footsteps. He has taken to addressing political meetings and is said to be developing as a speaker.

Adorns Himself With Crown of Ripe Oranges Declares He Was Appointed "Czar of Heaven"

Sam Komenschoff of Grand Forks, B.C., Tells of Making Two Visits to the Celestial Regions—Carries Sceptre Decorated With Dried Fruit

THE people of Canada have become more or less accustomed to the rude parades of the more visionary of the Doukhobor colonies. These were practically abolished under the stern rule of the late Peter Veregin. But there remain many eccentric characters among these primitive but deeply religious folk, who develop obsessions which are generally harmless but which gave both the late Doukhobor leader and the civil authorities considerable trouble.

One of these is the "Czar of Heaven." The name under which he came to Canada is Sam Komenschoff, but he insists that his correct title is that of the "Czar of Heaven," and it is under this name that he is generally spoken of in the town of Grand Forks, near which he lives. Like all monarchs, he wears a crown on occasion.

Oranges constitute its chief elements, and this fruit is also used by him in making his official staff and armlets. He is therefore a very good customer of the Greek fruit vendor in the little city in the B.C. hills.

Peter Veregin sternly forbade Sam to use this regalia, and when the latter insisted, gave him the option of dropping it or leaving the colony. Sam left the colony, his going being considerably accelerated by the strong right fist of Peter, who dealt a blow in keeping with his great physique.

Thereupon, the outcast monarch betook him to a brush tepee which he built in the woods. He asked Peter for his portion of the goods that he supposed fell to him out of the community chest of the colony, but Peter advised him that he had no share in it. So he went to work with a section gang on the Kettle Valley Railway near Grand Forks.

He explains his adornments by the statement that he has been to heaven on three separate occasions, and declares that he was there instructed to wear the crown in question. He insists that if he were to die without his headpiece he would lose his right to enter the celestial regions.

Notwithstanding the fact that about 40 per cent. of the Doukhobors have withdrawn from the official colonies and become independents, either through personal or other differences with Peter Veregin, these all flocked to his funeral, many of them reverting for the day to the quaint dress of the sect. Sam was among them. He tried to board the special train which the Doukhobor colony of Grand Forks chartered to accompany the remains of their leader from that town to Brilliant, where he was buried. But the orthodox Doukhobors (remembering Sam's differences with their leader) refused him permission to accompany them. So the night before the funeral he boarded the regular express to Brilliant, prepared to take his part in the observances of his former chief.

Sam took a room at the hotel at Castlegar, a station about a mile and a half from Brilliant, which has no public accommodation. On the register he inscribed only the words, "Czar of Heaven" in perfectly good English characters. The young Scotch landlord surveyed him from head to foot, scanned alternately the crown on Sam's head and the name on the register, and demanded: "What's the 'big idea—'Czar of Heaven?'"

"That's my name," was the reply. It was the only one to which the curious guest would subscribe.

But uneasy lies the head that wears a crown. Sam was not allowed to occupy his room for long. There had been much suspicion that he explosion which caused the death of the Doukhobor leader was not due to an accident but was the work of some of his enemies, and the police were afraid that during his funeral some other untoward incident might follow, unless proper precautions were taken. So they followed Sam to his room, and told him they wanted him. The czar had not only disrobed, but had done what he refused to do for his former leader—he had laid aside his crown. It took him half an hour or more to restore his headpiece, and he was then taken quietly to custody, in which he was kept until after the funeral. A harmless his deterioration was merely for the purpose of making insurance doubly sure.

He was kept under surveillance for a few days and then released.

Sam is a native of Besarabia, where he states that his wife and several children still reside. He came to the Saskatchewan colony of the Doukhobors many years ago, and later moved with a portion of the people to Grand Forks, when Peter launched the fruit orchard settlements there.

What is Your Greatest Ambition in Life? How Twelve Famous Britishers Answered

OVER a score of English celebrities were recently canvassed by a well-known British publication in an effort to discover exactly what went to make up their greatest ambition in life.

They included men and women of various degrees of prominence, though the majority were either authors, artists or theatrical notables. The results were amusing to a degree as well as interesting.

A few of them are given below, including Basil Dean, considered one of Britain's greatest theatrical producers and at present on this continent; W. J. Locke, the author whose newest book is now on the way into the best-seller class; E. Phillips Oppenheim, who is too well-known to require any comment; Rose Macaulay, young novelist of world-wide reputation. Here are their opinions:

Basil Dean

TO make two actors grow where one grew before.

May Edginton

MY ambition in life is to make enough money to enable me to live openly up to my sincerest and most honest opinions and ideals; and then to do as much construction work as possible for this very good world before, regretfully, I leave it.

Gilbert Frankau

I HAVE so many ambitions in life that I am afraid it is impossible for me to put them into any less space than that of a full-length novel.

One of my ambitions, however, which may interest you, is to be able—once day—to give up writing novels and take once more to my first love—poetry.

W. L. George

I HAVE never known a successful man print the details of his ambition. I shall follow this excellent example.

E. Temple Thurston

MY ambition in life is to be allowed to do my work without interruption.

William LeQueux

LIKE most boys, I suppose, my first ambition in life was to drive an express passenger locomotive. My father gave me a taste of it by one day at the central station at Genoa, in which city they were living, putting me in charge of the driver of the Rome-Paris express, while he traveled in the train as far as Alessandria. At first it was delightful, but when we entered the long Ronco tunnel, which is the dirtiest and the foulest air of any in Europe, I found my ear-drums bursting with the noise, and half suffocated with smoke, while my best suit was ruined beyond cleaning, so I decided that engineering was not my metier.

I had met Ouida in Florence, for even then I traveled a good bit. I admired her work, for I knew the Italian peasant. Then I met Zola. He persuaded me to carry on my amateur scribbling, and hence I drifted into writing mystery stories. Why, I really don't know!

W. J. Locke

WHEN I was ten years old I dreamed of being a novelist. It took over twenty years for the dream to come technically true. Since then I've had no ambition. I don't know what it is. I've only done my day's work to the best of my ability in the path that seemed to be ordained. The "joy of the working" has been enough for me, and the rewards, whatever they may be, have been fortuitous.

John Oxenham

MY only remaining ambition in life is to be of some service in the world and to make some people happy.

Compton Mackenzie

MY chief ambition at present is to be able to give up writing novels and write history instead. At the same time I have an ambition to acquire a 300-ton auxiliary sailing-ship, and I don't see how that will ever be gratified by writing history.

Rose Macaulay

MY ambitions in life are too numerous for recital. Among them are to find (a) a hitherto undiscovered island; (b) a secret passage; (c) a treasure (large enough to make me wealthy and idle for life).

Alfred Noyes

THERE is more than one ambition, I think, in most lives. The most important, of course, are those which are not published and belong to the private individual. Of the other kind, I see no harm in saying that my own highest ambition is to be among those English poets who, by their music, have helped to make life clearer, more intelligible and better worth living. I believe that these aims are not incompatible with the highest artistic ambitions, as is so often supposed; but, in fact, that the latter necessarily include the former.

E. Phillips Oppenheim

I CAN only say that my ambition in life is to write a better story than the one which I have previously accounted my best.

Says Helen and Ulysses Still Causing Trouble

Reading of Greek Classics in Schools Involves British Empire in No End of Obligations?

LORD DARLING, Britain's famous judge, recently rose and convicted a well-known story of being a falsehood. It was at a London Press Club dinner that the deed was done, and the fiction in question was that he used to quote Greek in the House of Commons.

"Far from having quoted Greek in the House of Commons," he said, "I do not even know the Greek letters. I think Lord Byron threw away his life in fighting for them, and I have always been of opinion that this country has got itself into no end of trouble in the East simply because Greek is a compulsory subject in public schools and universities, and has misled many sensible persons, notably the late Mr. Gladstone, into involving this country in no end of obligations for the sake of the Greeks, all because they have read about Helen, Menelaus, and Ulysses, who, to my mind, was a most disreputable person."

"The consequence of this education is that we have fought all sorts of battles for the Greeks—Navarino and many another. I have escaped this infection for the simple reason that I never went to the university—because I had not been to school. I would not have quoted Greek in the House of Commons, first, because I did not know it, and also because hardly anyone there would have understood it, except Mr. Gladstone, whom I never attempted to gratify, and Mr. Asquith."

"But if I do not know the Greek letters, I know what is much more rare, and that is English. If I take the trouble, I can write it, and I wish more did."

New Cuban Discovery Made by Col. Denison

Veteran Cadi Finds That This Little Isle Produces Very Poor Cabbages

WHEN Oliver Macklem, Toronto barrister and brother-in-law of that veteran of the police court bench, Col. G. T. Denison, returned from a visit to Cuba, he brought back with him as a Christmas present for the colonel, a box of very excellent cigars.

A law student, now a prominent Canadian lawyer, was working in his office at the time and this student liked a good cigar himself. He bought a number of "two for a nickel" cigars of the same size and shape as the imported Cubans and removing a handful of the choicer smokes from the centre of Mr. Macklem's package, replaced them with the cheap substitutes.

At Christmas time, the cigars were duly presented to the colonel. The day after he said to Mr. Macklem, "For goodness sake, Oliver, where did you get those cigars?"

"In Cuba, George," was the reply. "Well, that's the first time I knew they grew such poor cabbage in that country," was the colonel's comment.

It took the law student exactly twenty years to get up enough courage to tell the colonel what he had done.

ALWAYS COOL AND CALM

ONCE at Sherborne in England during the lifetime of the late Lord Sheborne a very bucolic guest was desirous of proposing marriage to a girl staying in the house. He was not only bucolic, but of an intensely phlegmatic disposition.

While sitting in the smoking room, he rang the bell and told the footman to go up to Miss Z—'s room and ask her to come down to him, as he wanted to propose to her!

Newest Wreck Styles

AFTER three attempts, the average reader would not be within four city blocks of guessing the details of this photograph. Above is shown Victoria Van Arcken, Chilean beauty, just after she was rescued from the wrecked liner Zaopra. Evidently shipwrecks are much more genteel affairs than they used to be.

MEET MR. WEISS OF WIS. YOU MUST KNOW OF HIM

Perhaps You Would Recognize Him More Easily Under His Assumed Name—Houdini, Handcuff King

MR. WEISS, of Appleton, Wisconsin, is a world-famous gentleman, whose name very few people know. He is readily recognized by his footlight cognomen, however, Harry Houdini, the handcuff king.

The author of the famous phrase concerning the difficulty of putting over on all the nations of the earth all of the time was most certainly not a bosom friend of Mr. Houdini, nee Weiss, as he was called before he became wedded to the stage. Had he been, he might have changed his phrasology.

For Houdini's life work is the task of putting it over on the public. His mother used to keep them in a locked cupboard and the wizard-to-be used to feel at times an overwhelming longing for a slice of New England's favorite desert. He began by picking the lock.

From this it was but a step to a job in a locksmith's shop, and he was picking up the business at an amazing rate.

But this soon became too tame a life for the adventurous pie-eating locksmith. He ached for something brighter in the way of lights and felt the call of the land of the pink lemonade. When the next circus came to town he attached himself to it and proceeded to apply the principles of showmanship to his knowledge of locks.

He began to develop what is laughingly referred to as the magician's art, and graduated successively from the circus, the tent show, the medicine show, and the spiritualist act till he eventually landed in high-priced vaudeville.

By this time he was a man of no mean reputation. He specialized in re-appearing out of double-decked jail cells, making the handcuff a mockery as far as its effect on himself was concerned, smilingly slipping out of straight jackets and accumulating for himself a multitude of tricks which never failed to mystify his audiences.

The life and work of Houdini is a great boost for the famous old adage that "honesty is the best policy." Houdini had the intelligence and the accomplishments to make himself the greatest and most successful burglar who ever cracked a safe. He could have walked into any bank and carried away everything from a wheelbarrow load of bills to the stenographer's powder puff.

Locking him in a jail would have been successful a method of shutting him up as trying to keep him unguarded in a park pavilion. His work would have been "la creme de la creme du crime."

But Houdini stuck to the straight and narrow path, made a great deal of money, gave himself a world-wide reputation and had a lot more fun. To-day he is as well known a man as the premier, president or prime minister of any nation.

Incidentally it is worth while noting that he has not the least faith in spiritualism and spiritualists. He declares that he can duplicate any spiritualistic seance ever given, and though he has been investigating the work of mediums for 25 years, he says he has never yet discovered any evidence of supernatural powers being employed.

Perhaps the greatest tribute to his marvellous ability is the fact that he mystifies his fellow-magicians. He appeared before them at a private show in New York and baffled them completely when he wound up by making an elephant disappear from the stage before their very eyes and then walking off through a brick wall.

No wonder Appleton, Wisconsin, is proud of him.

Tiger is About to Die? In 100 Years Perhaps

A Touch of the Pathetic About Clemenceau These Days—The Man With the Iron Physique

IT did not become known publicly that when Georges Clemenceau returned to Paris the other day from his fishing-shack by the sea-shore, he caught a violent cold and his intimate friends whispered among themselves. "This is the end."

Clemenceau is in his eighty-fourth year. At that age a severe bronchial cold is more often fatal than not.

One of the Tiger's friends found him in a state of intense depression, and unable to converse except by nods of the head.

What was his surprise on returning two days later to find that Clemenceau had completely thrown off the cold and was apparently in better health than ever!

The old Tiger sees few people nowadays, with the exception of intimate friends. This is not because he is difficult of approach, for almost anybody may obtain an interview with him, at any time. But he will not talk politics, and as that is what most of his visitors want to discuss they soon tire of attempting to draw him out. He does now and then discuss political matters briefly with his most intimate political friends, but only to reveal a deep bitterness which is more painful than silence. He feels that his energy as prime minister during the last year of the war was what made victory possible, and has never been able to understand why, as soon as the peace treaty was signed, he should have been cast aside. He would have liked to be elected president of the republic as a reward for his formidable labors during the war, and when the parliament threw him aside in favor of the colorless Paul Deschanel, a mere routine politician, he turned his back forever on politics.

WHITE BEAR OF NORTH STALKS THROUGH SNOW, DREAD ENEMY OF ALL

Bravest Animal in Arctic Lives
On Through Terrific Cold.
BEAST ON TOP
Explorer Seeking Picture, Runs Into Bear—Falls Into Pit.

By DONALD B. MACMILLAN,
Commander of the Bowdoin Expedition, and Special Correspondent of The London Advertiser.

This is the second of a series of articles giving dramatic pictures of an explorer's life in the Arctic, written by Dr. MacMillan, who went into the polar regions on the latest of his several trips in June, 1923, on the schooner Bowdoin, carrying radio and going as special correspondent of The London Advertiser.

Nannook is rightly called the "King of the North." When the sun swings low along the southern horizon and darkness steals over the north, the polar bear does not hibernate, but stalks over the fields in bitter temperatures of 60 to 70 below zero. The Eskimo admires him for what he is, the hardest and bravest animal of the Arctic.

When the natives congregate in the igloos during the winter nights to relate their experiences of the past year, the polar bear is the theme of their conversation. A pair of new white bearskin pants is a badge of honor. Every detail of the successful chase must be told by the proud possessor. Legends and traditions galore are existent in the minds of all men, women and children concerning this powerful animal.

As I look back over 16 years of Arctic work, the high lights of the long trail always center around Nannook, as he is known to the Eskimos. A glorious day, a powerful team of 14 and 16 dogs, a good level ice surface, and the Eskimo in heaven. We were in Peabody Bay, off the big Humboldt glacier, plodding along through a deep, freshly fallen snow, and studying through our amber colored snow glasses every detail of the great stretching ice fields: for polar bears at times are hard to detect, especially when lying low at a seal hole.

We crossed a fresh trail. Heavens! What a trail! The noise is as loud as the size of the tracks in deep snow. It doesn't seem possible that any animal in the world has such feet, a wise provision of nature for deep snows, for the animal is on snow shoes.

Dogs Keen on Trail. The dogs swing on to the trail, their noses to the snow, their tails deeply curled, their traces as tight as middle strings. We followed on for an hour, scanning the trail for ahead, but as yet not a sign. An excited "Ta-ko!" from one of the Eskimo boys directed my attention toward an imbedded iceberg near which could be detected a yellowish-white body moving toward a distant berg.

We immediately snapped our whips out over the heads of the dogs to stop them. The traces were untangled to give each animal a chance for his life. Rifles were taken from their cases, magazines filled.

As we cut across toward the second iceberg the dogs sighted the bear. There was no need of urging them now. They were on the dead jump. The bear stopped, stretched out his neck as if sniffing the air, then reared up on his hind legs to get a better view. He dropped, wheeled around and disappeared in the rough ice. We slipped four of the fastest dogs to overtake and round him up. Within a few minutes we were within a few yards, when all dogs were released.

It is a magnificent sight to see a big polar bear surrounded by 30 and 40 dogs. His great body was swaying lightly from side to side, his head and neck turning slowly from right to left, not a dog dared to go near. Finally one dog, encouraged by my approach to within 25 feet, decided to get a grip on the bear if he could.

As the dog edged closer, the bear deliberately turned the other way, and remained with head turned in that direction until he was certain of reaching his enemy. Suddenly the head snapped around and I saw the dog in the air. My first thought was that the dog's head was in his mouth. The bear whirled him over and over, then shook him as a terrier would a rat, and finally lifted his head and slammed him down on the ice, apparently a lifeless mass.

Dead Dog Takes To Heels. "He's dead," I exclaimed to myself. But within a few minutes the dog was a hundred yards away and still going! He had learned a valuable lesson—never to get too close to a polar bear.

Another time we were a party of nine, which meant nine sledges and 90 dogs. Suddenly one team swerved sharply right and with uplifted noses started for the middle of the sound. Near a small pressure ridge where seals are wont to make their holes the faint outlines of a bear could be detected against the snow-white background. To my astonishment the eight Eskimo men were now yelling at the tops of their voices, flying their long rawhide whips to turn their dogs toward the game. And they continued to yell. I learned, afterwards, that this method of attack is often employed. The natives declare that such ear-splitting yells so astonish the bear that he is rooted to the spot with curiosity to know what in the world can make such noise.

These war whoops from eight were more than this one could stand. I ambled away with his body bent back on itself almost double, wondering if we were really in pursuit, or if so, why, since nothing had ever attracted him before.

Bear and dogs were now straightened out, and going at full speed toward a smooth ice. When I reached across my load to get a grip with my knees my big gray dogs, with Nooka's second in the rear, were all in the camera hood. I endeavored to bring the bear in focus, but my nature broke neck speed.

Camera Gets Him—Close! Suddenly the whole ground glass funder was blurred with a furry mass! I had picked up the bear on the bow of my sledge, the two prongs passing beneath his belly. All desire for pictures vanished instantly. Closures are good things, but not too close.

When I turned following a short sprint to the right, the bear was standing on top of my loaded sledge surrounded by my yelping dogs. The other 80, released from their traces, were approaching with flying traces, were approaching with shouting Eskimos and brandishing their rifles and sealing irons.

The bear seemed to leap right into the midst of the mass and—disappeared! There was one grand mixture of dogs' traces, a few yelps, cries of pain, and now and then a flash of white, which I knew to be the bear. The Eskimos were dancing like mad around the great moving mass of fur, growls, and wagging tails. No one dared to fire a shot lest a dog be killed.

Nu-ka-ping-va brandished a kill-firing iron, his father Akkomo-ding-va rushed here and there with a 35-calibre Winchester fully cocked. I fearing for the safety of my dogs, I struck the muzzle in between two dogs against the body of the bear and pulled the trigger. The snapping of the r-whide whips, compelling the infuriated dogs to release their grip upon the body of the dead bear, ended the stirring fight.

A Slide Into a Bear Pit. We (another party, this time four of us), were a bit discouraged. We were compelled to retreat because of a lack of food. Our dogs had not been fed for four days. We had seen no bears, yet tracks were numerous. While we were dropping, a bear could go before dropping, a bear showed his head around the corner of an ice hummock. He dashed at my team of dogs, suddenly stopped, turned, and ran in the opposite direction.

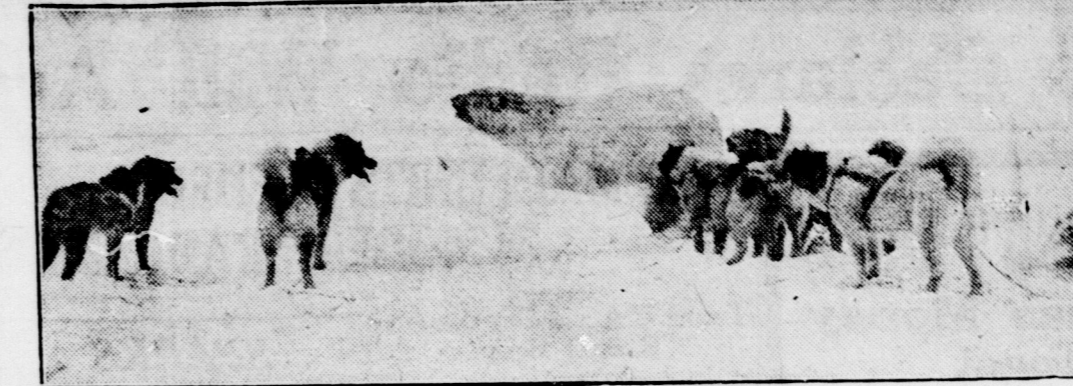

I reached instantly for my camera. The Eskimo boy driving his team a few yards distant seized his rifle. As the bear turned, the boy fired from his sledge with his two dogs on the jump. A good shot under such conditions, for the bear rolled over, bit savagely at his thigh, but was on his feet in a few seconds and scrambled up over the top of a snow bank and disappeared.

I should have released my dogs as did the Eskimo, but my eagerness to get as near as possible to get a picture restrained me until too late. My dogs darted up the slope and dropped out of sight on the edge.

I still clung to the sledge, hoping to get my picture. It flashed up be-

HAULING HIM ABOARD.
Never does a real bear look so much like a ragged teddy bear as when he has been trapped afloat on a bit of ice, killed and hauled through open water. Icicles hang from the carcass of this one, and hauling him aboard the whaleboat is a ticklish job. (From Donald B. MacMillan's collection of photographs in the American Museum of Natural History, New York. By courtesy of the Museum.)

JUST BEFORE THE DEATH BLOW around in a vain hope for escape. The unleashed sledge dogs panting and all! I scrambled away from the bear, looking low me as I took the plunge into the hole—the bear on his hind legs knocking dogs right and left. I snapped the camera—a wing shot—and grabbed for the edge of the snow bank. I tore away in my grasp and down I went into the hole, sledge and all! I scrambled away from the bear over and through the dogs as quickly as possible and regained the edge of the bank just as Nooka-ping-va arrived out of breath, and just in time to get the full effect of the discharge of his big Winchester. My ears rang for hours.

My only consolation following the chagrin of displaying myself as a mere tenderfoot was that I might have the bear's picture! I turned it back to re-wind, but there was no film in the camera!

The Tale of an Orphan Cub. What could it be? First we thought it must be a seal. When we moved we decided it to be a lone white wolf. Our dogs had now sighted the strange object alternate-ly appearing and disappearing in the rough ice a half mile ahead, and were rapidly overtaking it. It proved to be a cub bear, evidently an orphan.

With difficulty we controlled the dogs and with considerable more difficulty we succeeded in roping the little fellow, which weighed about fifty pounds. I bound him to the top of my load and started on, having decided to keep him as a pet.

When we made camp at night I released him, wondering what he would do. He snuffed at my sealskin boots, then stuck his nose into the fur of my sealskin pants, arose on his hind legs and looked inquiringly up into my face, thinking possibly that I might belong to his family.

The next day, without an attachment of any kind, he followed close behind my sledge for thirty miles. Bowdoin, as I called him, proved to be a very interesting pet. Each day we went upon our long walks together far up the fiord, and to the tops of the high cliffs in search of the eggs of the glaucous gull. These delicate morsels were cream drops to him. And each day we walked out over the harbor ice to the edge of the open water, now alive with birds and seals, a new and wonderful world to him.

How he loved that water! Although three degrees below the freezing point of fresh water, he rolled around in it as a child in a warm bath. When at last I would persuade him that we must start for home, he would drop his head, stick out his upper lip and cry like a baby with the group.

At length he became so strong that I made a harness for him and hitched him to a small sledge. Of we went for many a ride together, but always going where he wanted to go, never where I did!

The Call of the Wild. Fearing that the larger dogs might break loose while we slept and kill my little companion, I placed him at night in a strong cage. One morning I found him seated on top of his house, looking intently out over the stretching ice fields and apparently listening to the sea. He consented to walk and to play with me for a few days, but I noticed a decided change.

One morning he was gone. His footprints in the new fallen snow pointed toward the water—his home. Here there was plenty, all that one would wish, fat juicy seal meat, a good home, and kind treatment, but out there the waves were running, icebergs glittering, seals playing, and birds flying. To get his food, not to wait against the rest of the animal world, against storms, boisterous winds, grinding ice fields, darkness and terrible biting cold, these were the reasons why my little bear went out into the world alone. When winds and drift whistle through our rigging and snow in clouds settles on our decks, seated amid the comforts of my warm little cabin I wonder.

TWO MAIN UNITS NEEDED IN MODERN RADIO SETS

Tuning Unit and Detector Are Basis of Equipment.

MANY REFINEMENTS

Every radio set must have in some form or another these two units, (1) the tuning unit, (2) the detector unit. The tuning unit, or tuner, is for the purpose of selecting the broadcasting station you wish to hear and rejecting all others. It is composed of one or more coils (of wire) and condensers, the electrical values of which can be varied by means of the knobs on the panel of the radio cabinet. Just as the violinist tunes his instrument to the piano which is to accompany him, so the radio set must be tuned to the broadcasting station it is desired to hear.

The detector changes the electrical impulses received from the broadcasting station into such a form that they will actuate the phones, and thus reproduce the sounds which originate in the broadcasting station studio.

Radio Refinements.

The above units represent the radio set in its simplest form. Improvements on this two-unit radio set almost invariably take the form of (1) low-frequency amplifiers (commonly called audio-frequency or tone-frequency amplifiers), and (2) high-frequency amplifiers (radio frequency) and the tuning units which the latter include.

The low-frequency, or audio-frequency amplifier, serves one purpose, to build up the currents given out by the detector to a point where they are stronger, usually for the purpose of operating a loud-speaking horn. Regardless of the strength of the incoming signals, a detector alone is not sufficient for this.

High Frequency.

The high-frequency, or radio-frequency amplifier, serves one or more of three purposes. (1) It builds up signals which are received in the aerial out too weak to actuate the detector, to a point where satisfactory reception is possible, or (2) it makes the use of an aerial unnecessary, due to its great sensitivity, or

SPARKS

More than nine million vacuum tubes were sold last year.

England has more than eight hundred thousand broadcast listeners.

Smear vaseline over positive terminal of storage battery to prevent corrosion.

(3) by means of the tuning coils embodied in the amplifier, it gives great selectivity, that is, assists the primary tuner to reject unwanted signals. The radio-frequency amplifier comes ahead of the detector, and is used only for the above purposes. There are so many types of sets it is better to consult your radio dealer about the type best suited to your needs.

OSCILLATIONS

By using a pulley and weight fastened to the end of your aerial, you can prevent the aerial breaking when a tree to which it is attached sways in the wind. The line that connects the aerial, insulator and weight should be flexible steel cable to prevent wearing as it works in the pulley.

Two short pieces of standard lamp cord twisted together make a fairly good neutralizing condenser when one end is hooked into the circuit and the other remains free. Proper capacity can be obtained by twisting or untwisting the wires.

To prevent the dial scraping the panel as it is turned, cut a circular piece of felt and glue it to the back of the dial.

Rest the rubber end of a lead pencil between the edge of the dial and the panel to get micrometer control when tuning.

To revivify a sick vacuum tube, light the filament a half hour with the B battery disconnected.

DOCTOR CLAIMS PLAN WILL HELP

Believes Radio Will Benefit Those Affected With Cancer.

Chicago, Nov. 28.—Dread cancer is to be laid low by radio. So predicts Dr. L. D. Rogers, prominent Chicago physician-scientist.

He backs up his claim with a little weird-looking machine. This device, says the doctor, can detect the electrical waves emanated by every cancerous growth.

In Doctor Rogers' opinion a cancer is a miniature broadcasting station.

Its sending power is microscopic compared with the wave length of real stations.

"The cancer wave is only six millimeters, or about a quarter of an inch long," Doctor Rogers points out.

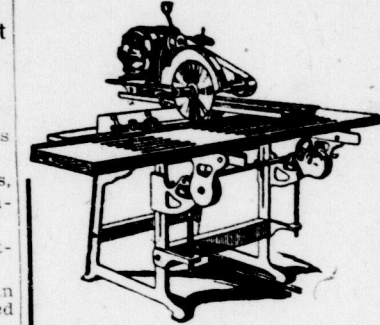

These waves move at the rate of 30,000,000,000 per second.

The cancer-detecting radio consists of two pieces. One part tunes in on the minute waves indicating the presence of absence of cancer. The other measures the amplitude of the disease and indicates its growth.

Co-inventor of the device with the physician is F. C. Ellis, Chicago engineer.

Together they are making sufficient progress in this new research to claim the attention of scientific bodies. Doctor Rogers believes that his experiments may eventually lead to harnessing the delicate currents within the body for accurate diagnosis of ailments that now need the surgeon's knife for discovery.

FRENCH STORMS TAKE MANY LIVES

Rowboat Sinks, Drowning Eight at Nantes—Train Service Crippled.

Associated Press Despatch.

Paris, Nov. 28.—A violent tempest wrought havoc both along the western seaboard and in the interior of France, occasioning also some loss of life. At Nantes a rowboat ferrying homeward-bound workers from the shipyard across the Loire filled and sank when struck by a large wave, drowning the eight occupants. A seaman was swept off a ketch while trying to make harbor and was drowned.

In the Cherbourg region houses were unroofed and trees uprooted while a pontoon used in harbor improvement work was torn from its moorings and driven against the steamship Castor lying in the roads. All steamboat services to Havre were delayed.

Near LeMans, the wind started two freight cars, blowing them into a passenger train and three persons were injured. Other freight cars were blown off the tracks nearby, causing long delays in train service.

Numbers of fishing craft have failed to return to their home ports and it is feared some may have been lost.

TONG WAR LAYS CLAIM TO ANOTHER CHINAMAN

Associated Press Despatch.

New York, Nov. 28.—The tong war resumed here yesterday, three hours before the On Leong-Hip Sing Armistice was to have ended, claimed another victim today, when Cok Un, aged 51, was stabbed in a fight in an Eldridge street tenement. The Chinaman sustained half a dozen times, died after being taken to a hospital.

Potash and Perlmutter Now With Hollywood Vamps at Grand Monday.

From the two lovable characters, Potash and Perlmutter, famed in fiction, play and motion pictures throughout the entire world, there is a lesson to be learned by every argumentative man and wife in the country.

argue with him, is the way Butler explains it, and he takes Potash and Perlmutter as examples. The entire reading and theatrical public of America realizes that these cloak and suit partners never could agree — yet seldom has there been a story written which so vividly shows the depth and strength of friendship. RUSSIAN DANCE QUEEN WILL VISIT LONDON

Beautiful Karsavina Coming to Grand Under Auspices of Concert Club.

From Russia, the land of beautiful dancers, comes the most beautiful of all—Thamar Karsavina. This great artist, heralded by the critics of Europe as greater than Pavlova, is now making her first American tour.

Karsavina is handsome, is brilliantly talented, and is versatile. Witness her triumph in London, England, when the famous dancer started the English with her originality by dressing as an American flapper and dancing to the music of the typewriter.

"Richard Strauss is one down!" exclaimed the Daily Mail. "He never had a thought of the typewriter! Walk up ladies and gentlemen, and see Karsavina dance to the accompaniment of a typewriter! It is simply the maddest piece of fooling ever seen on any stage."

The mail order list opens today at the Grand opera house, London, by remittance and self-addressed envelope. The reserved seat plan will open to the general public next Thursday at the Grand opera house. This is one of the real attractions of the year, and seats should be secured well in advance, since Karsavina's appearance is bound to attract widespread interest.

Scene from "The Bat" which the Majestic Players will offer for the approval of theatregoers here all next week, commencing Monday evening at 8:30, with Wednesday and Saturday matinees at 2:30.

Europe and Britain went wild when they saw Thamar Karsavina, the queen of Russian dancers, who is billed to appear at the Grand opera house one day only, matinee at 2:15 and evening at 8:15, next Saturday, Dec. 6, under the auspices of the Concert Club.

George Sidney and Alexander Carr in "In Hollywood with Potash and Perlmutter" appearing in the funniest picture of all time, "In Hollywood with Potash and Perlmutter," which opens at the Grand Monday for three days, with three shows daily. Vaudeville and special added attractions make the bill one of outstanding interest.

GREAT MYSTERY PLAY COMING NEXT WEEK

Majestic Players to Offer "The Bat" as Second Vehicle of the Season.

Can you keep a secret? That is the question you will be asked before you see "The Bat," the sensational dramatic success of all years by Mary Robert Rinehart and Avery Hopwood, which the Majestic Players will present at the Majestic theatre, commencing Monday evening at 8:30, with matinees Wednesday and Saturday at 2:30.

"The Bat," as you probably know, has proven the success of the theatre. It has played for more than a year in New York, and is still playing. It has a run of one entire year to its credit in Chicago, the longest run, incidentally, ever scored by any play in that city.

Scene from "The Bat" which the Majestic Players will offer for the approval of theatregoers here all next week, commencing Monday evening at 8:30, with Wednesday and Saturday matinees at 2:30.

"Married Flirts," Metro-Goldwyn's picture of "Mrs. Paramor," which was recently published, is the feature at Loew's theatre next Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday. It is the first production for this company by Robert Vignola, director of "When Knighthood Was in Flower," "Yolanda," and other successes.

The cast of "Married Flirts" comes in the category of "notable." Besides Miss Frederick it includes Conrad Nagel, Mae Busch, Huntly Gordon, Alice Hollister, Patterson Dial and Paul Nicholson.

FRENCH GALES SHOW SIGNS OF REVIVING

Many Brittany Fishing Boats Still Missing - Channel Is Rough.

Associated Press Despatch. Paris, Nov. 28.—Thursday's gale shows signs of reviving with added force after its brief lull. The sea is running high both in the English Channel and the Atlantic, doing considerable damage to ports, and the gales are showing a tendency to extend inland and to the Mediterranean.

Financial Review

Associated Press Despatch. New York, Nov. 28.—Maintaining its dominant position, the stock market this morning showed traditional deference to trading as a holiday in Europe. The upward movement of prices was not so sustained as in the first two weeks following the election, however. Trading sagged somewhat early in the week, but was galvanised into renewed activity when a rally in steel shares led the whole list forward.

STOCKS CONTINUE PRICE ADVANCE

Associated Press Despatch. Vienna, Nov. 28.—The commercial treaty between Czechoslovakia and Austria, based on the Austrian tariff recently passed by the national assembly, has been signed. Czechoslovakia concedes duty reductions on one-third of the principal articles exported by Austria.

Trade Treaty Is Completed

Associated Press Despatch. Montreal, Nov. 28.—The feature of today's trading on the local stock market was Montreal Power, which had a reactional influence on some of the other leaders, owing to the fact that it was a substantial pillar of the exchange.

EXCHANGE FEATURED BY MONTREAL POWER

Heavy Selling of Stock Imparts Weakness To Other Issues. Canadian Press Despatch. Montreal, Nov. 28.—The feature of today's trading on the local stock market was Montreal Power, which had a reactional influence on some of the other leaders, owing to the fact that it was a substantial pillar of the exchange.

INDUSTRIALS BREAK HIGH AVERAGE UNDER LEADERSHIP OF U. S. STEEL

Associated Press Despatch. New York, Nov. 28.—Bullish operations were resumed with renewed vigor in the stock market today, prices swinging forward under the leadership of representative industrial issues. Favorable evidence of buying orders over the Thanksgiving holiday infused new life into trading, which ignored the 4 per cent advance in the call money rate.

DETROIT DISCOUNT RATE

Special to the Advertiser. Detroit, Nov. 28.—Detroit clearinghouse banks uniform rate of exchange on Canadian currency for Saturday will be at par.

"JIM" MCCORMICK HONORED ON EVE OF ELECTIONS

James McCormick, "Jim," as he is known throughout the district, was the "chick" for horses, received an illuminated address this morning from his friends of the London Poultry Association, the subject of which is announced in the heading, "We're Crowing for You."

TWENTY FROM DISTRICT LEAVE FOR U.S. STOCK SHOW

Twenty young men and eight girls from the counties of Simcoe, York, Wentworth and Wellington were gathered in London this afternoon and left for Chicago for the stock show. The boys picked the eve of their election as a suitable time to return some of his humor with an appreciation that is sung to the tune of an old song: "We're With You To a Man, and We'll Hear You All We Can."

BENNETT WILL ATTEND TORONTO CONVENTION

Assessment Commissioner Harry Bennett is attending the convention of the assessment commission in Toronto on Monday. This regular meeting of the commissioners is held to consider and discuss amendments to the Municipal Assessment Act. All the commissioners are invited to send in suggestions from time to time as to improvements in the act, and the London commissioner sent in his ideas a few weeks ago, after they had been submitted to the finance committee of the city council.

RECORD ENTRIES MADE IN BIG LIVE STOCK SHOW

Chicago, Nov. 28.—The elite of the stock world in record-breaking numbers was gathered today for the opening of the international live stock exhibition, in which entries have been made by breeders from every state, Canada, Europe and South America. Upwards of 15,000 cattle, horses, hogs and sheep were in stalls being groomed for the various contests. Entries in the "asses" reached the record total of 254.

MERCURY DROPS DOWN TO LOWEST OF SEASON

No wonder the farmers who came in early to the market this morning and the citizens who were early on the streets rubbed their noses and slapped their arms. The mercury fell last night to 14 above, the lowest it has been this year. A week ago it was 20 above, and the farmers thought it cold and snappy. Today's record for this autumn is bringing home to them the approach of winter, and the coal dealers at least are thankful about it. A few of the farmers who know the signs of the sky would be colder on responsibility, but they make a mistake sometimes.

WILL VISIT LONDON

Col. Noble, financial secretary of the Salvation Army headquarters, Toronto, will visit London on Monday on a tour of inspection. It is expected that Staff Capt. Beer will accompany him. The officers will return to Toronto on Monday evening.

TWO CRIMINAL CASES

County court, which opens on Dec. 2 at the courthouse, will see a list of two criminal cases, two civil jury actions and eight non-jury cases, a total of twelve cases.

CHILD DIES

The death occurred at an early hour yesterday morning of the infant daughter of Isabella and David McNarr of lot 12, concession 14, London township. The funeral will be held this afternoon at 2 o'clock. Interment taking place in Becker's cemetery.

ASSIST AT SERVICES

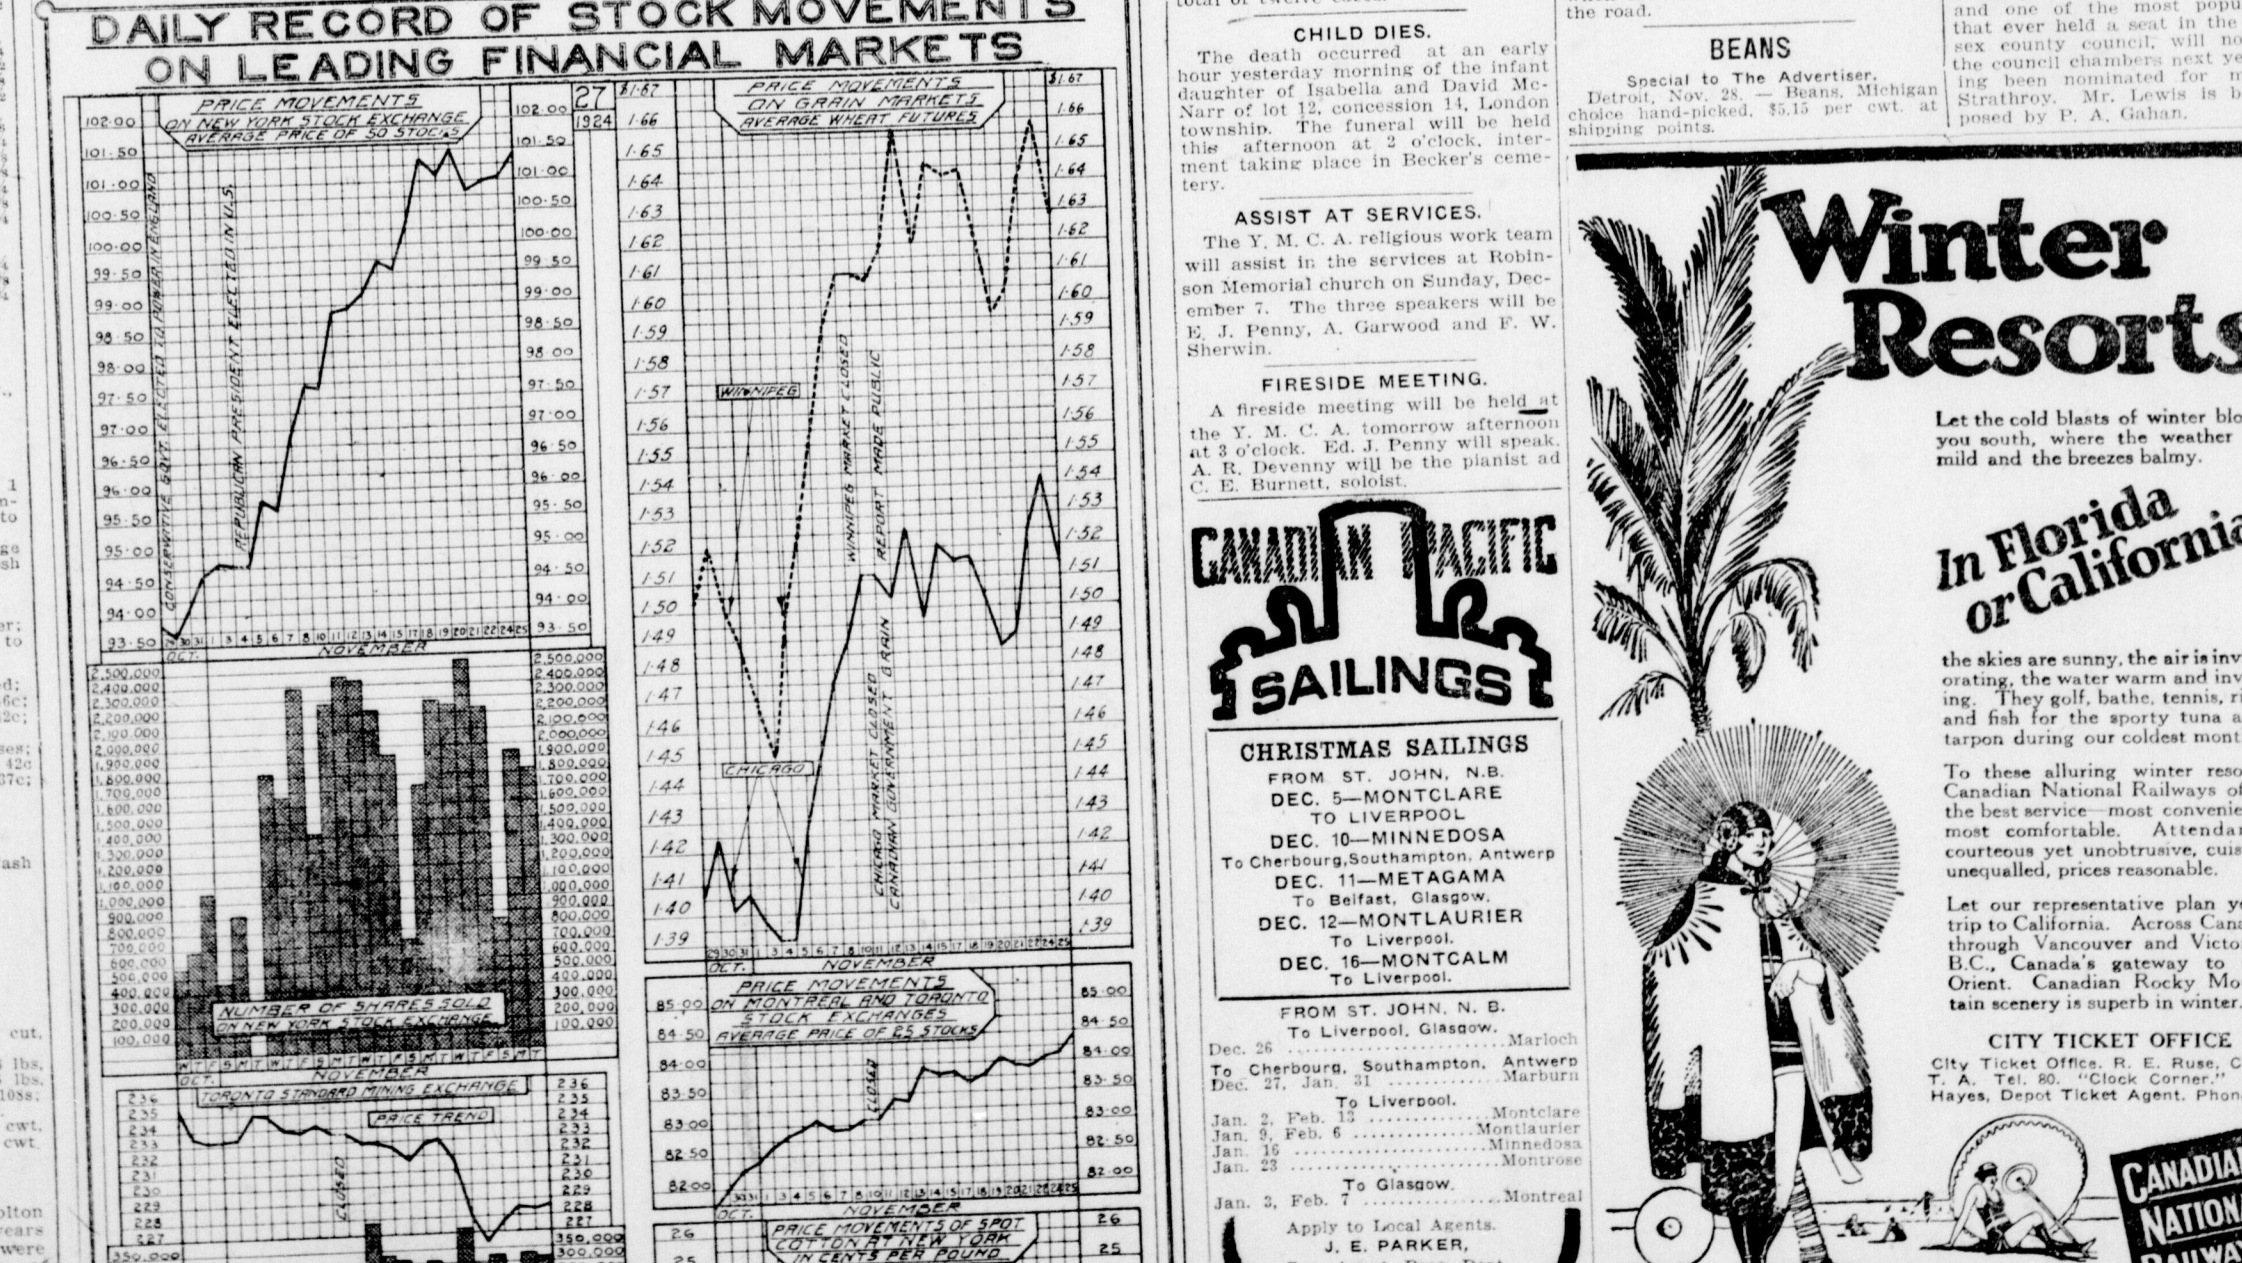

The Y. M. C. A. religious work team will assist in the services at Robinson Memorial church on Sunday, December 7. The three speakers will be E. J. Penny, A. Garwood and F. W. Sherwin.

FIRESIDE MEETING

A fireside meeting will be held at the Y. M. C. A. tomorrow afternoon at 3 o'clock. Ed. J. Penny will speak. A. R. Devenny will be the pianist and C. E. Burnett, soloist.

WINTER RESORTS

Let the cold blasts of winter blow you south, where the weather is mild and the breezes balmy. In Florida or California the skies are sunny, the air is invigorating, the water warm and inviting. They golf, bath, tennis, ride and fish for the sporty type and tarpon during our coldest months. To these alluring winter resorts Canadian National Railways offer the best service—most convenient, most comfortable. Attendants courteous yet unobtrusive, cuisine unequalled, prices reasonable. Let our representative plan your trip to California. Across Canada through Vancouver and Victoria, B.C., Canada's gateway to the Orient. Canadian National's mountain scenery is superb in winter. Transatlantic Air Mail Is Plan

Weekly Zeppelin Service To Soon Be Effected. Associated Press Despatch. Berlin, Nov. 28.—There will soon be a weekly mail Zeppelin service between the United States and Europe.

Church union is a distinct Canadian movement which started in 1817 when the Burghers and Anti-Burghers united in Nova Scotia.

Mr. Fleming suggested that the Canadian and United States governments organize an international body composed of an equal number of representatives and each having powers to carry out the building of the canal system and the water development.

W. M. German, K.C., M.P., Welland, declared that the association did not care who developed the power so long as the people received it.

Officers elected were: President—O. E. Fleming, K.C., Windsor. Vice-presidents—Dr. E. Herbert Adams, Toronto; C. C. Johnston, Parry Sound; Mayor J. C. Hamilton, E. L. Cousins, Toronto; F. H. Keeler, K.C., M.L.A., Port Arthur.

Chiropractic for Eye Troubles

Weak eyes are just like a piece of weak machinery, which fails to perform its work because it isn't getting enough power from the motor which runs it.

Eyes are little round balls, set in the eye-sockets and each of them has a tiny opening in the front, through which light passes. The little opening in the front is called the "pupil" and is the little black spot we see in the center of the colored part. It is like a hollow ball, filled with a clear, jelly-like tissue which light passes through, just as it passes through glass or water. The rays of light from outside pass through this watery substance, and after passing through the pupil, go back until they strike the back part of the eye inside. Here there is a very dense network of nerves which are set in motion when light comes in contact with them, and as a result, the sensation is carried to the brain, and we are aware of objects of the external.

The Eye Is Like a Magnifying Glass.

Did you ever hold a magnifying glass in the sunlight? When you do this you find that many rays of light are concentrated on a small spot, and if you hold your hand under the glass, you discover that this spot is hot. Why? Because there are all these rays of light coming through the glass, and if the two sides of the glass are curved a great deal, you hold it very close to the hand to make the spot more nearly flat, you must hold it further away. In other words, the rays are brought together, quickly if the glass is curved a great deal, while if it is curved less, the rays are brought together further away.

In the eye we have the same thing. The watery substance through which the light rays pass is so arranged that it bends the rays of light that strike the eye from the very end of a post is so bent that it strikes a certain point on the back wall. Also, every ray of light which strikes the eye from the other end of the post strikes another point. So it is with everything we look at. The light from these little things all strike the back part of the eye in such a way that a picture is made of whatever we are looking at. This picture is stamped on the back part of the eye, and the little nerve fibres which lead from here to the brain carry the impression so that we are aware of what we see.

How Does the Eye Work?

Now, this watery substance on the inside of the eye must be changed in shape so we look at different things. As we look at something near, it is of one shape, while we look at something further away, it is of another shape. These different shapes are made possible by the contraction of certain little muscles in the eye, but if they don't contract normally, then we have difficulty in looking at objects far away or close to us.

This is why some people can look at things far away, but cannot look at things close by. It is for the same reason that some people can see things if they are close by, while they cannot see things further away.

Nerve Force.

Now, why is it that these little muscles of the eye do not act properly. It is because they cannot get the proper nerve force from the nerves, which supply them with energy. We all know that if all the nerves which lead to the hand were cut, that hand could not move. Why? Because the muscles of that hand depend upon the energy supplied by the nerves. If they don't get this energy, they cannot contract, and the hand cannot move.

The same is true in the eye. If all the nerves passing to the little muscles of the eye were cut, the eye would be unable to see.

Nerve Pressure.

But we find that if the nerves passing to the hand are pressed upon, the muscles become weak and the hand is not so strong as it was before. So it is with the eyes. If the little nerve fibres supplying the small muscles are pressed upon, the muscles are weakened and they cannot change the shape of this watery substance as it should be. When this happens, the eyes are weak, and can only be used in looking at things at a certain distance away.

Now, why are these nerve fibres pinched? In the first place, we must look for a place where it is possible to pinch them, and we find that place in the small openings where the nerves come out of the spine. There they are pinched, and if the pressure of the little bones of the spine is out of position, and this often happens. When such a condition exists, the eyes remain weak until the little bones are replaced. Then the pressure is taken off the nerve and the eyes come strong again. We could treat the eyes in this way.

Our lives, but it wouldn't take away the pressure from the nerves, and that is the thing which does all the harm.

Sometimes we find that the eyes are "water" and smart. This is because the little nerves which control the tear sacs are pinched, and if the pressure is taken off from them, the eyes get well of their own accord.

It is always easier to correct the condition of weak eyes in children than in grown people, because the little bones of the spine are not held so tightly in place. Every parent should be very, very careful to see that his children's eyes are in good condition. They will need them to get most out of their school work, and you should give them every chance that other children have.

What To Do.

The chiropractor is a specialist in adjusting the little bones of the spine, and if your child or if you yourself have these little bones adjusted so your eyes may get well and strong.

The chiropractors identified with this educational campaign bear the stamp of reliability, educational qualifications and indorsement of the Chiropractic profession.

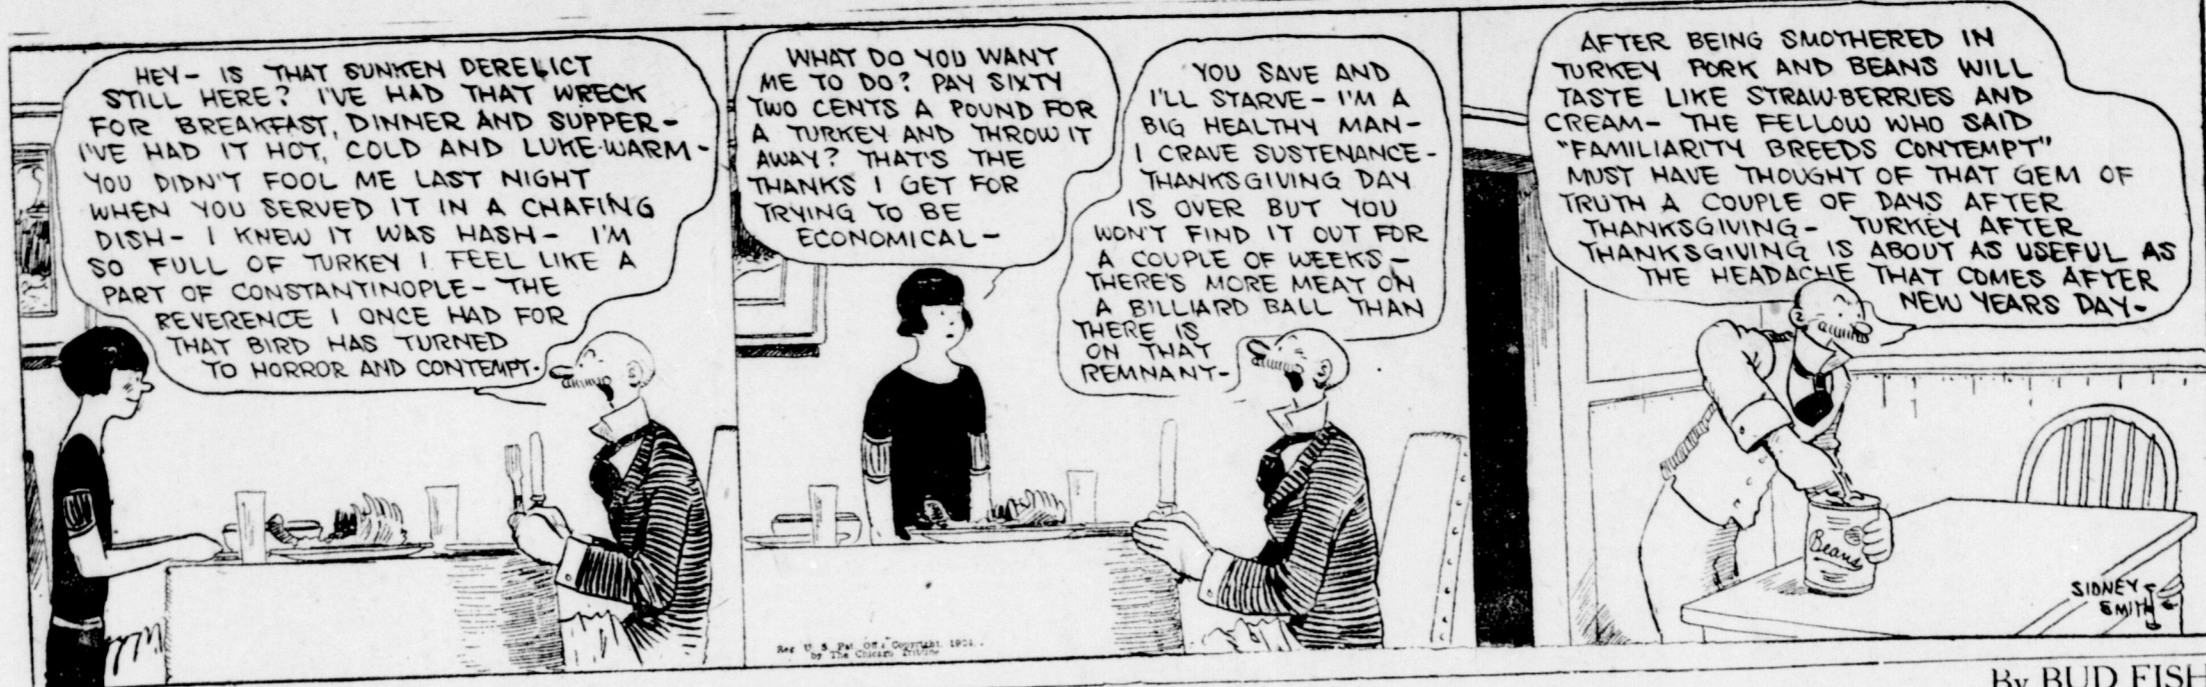

Chiropractic articles will be published in this newspaper each Saturday.

EXPERTS TO PASS ON RIVER PROJECT

Technical Officers Will Confer in Washington on St. Lawrence Proposals.

Canadian Press Despatch, Ottawa, Nov. 28.—As the result of conversations which have taken place between the governments of Canada and the United States on the question of the development of the St. Lawrence river for navigation and the supply of power, the technical officers representing both countries are to meet in Washington next week to consider such of the proposed instructions to the joint engineering board as to which it has not been possible for the two countries to agree.

The joint engineering board has been enlarged from two to six members, three representing each country. They will review the Bowden-Wood report of 1921 and the scope of their inquiry has been extended to include a study of the navigation channels of the entire great lakes system in their relation to the St. Lawrence project. It is understood that agreement has been reached between the two governments as to the

WEBB IS ELECTED WINNIPEG MAYOR

Defeats Labor Candidate by Large Majority—Is Hotel Manager.

Canadian Press Despatch, Winnipeg, Nov. 28.—Lt.-Col. R. H. Webb, hotel manager, is to be mayor of Winnipeg for 1925. Today he was elected by a majority of about 4,500 over S. J. Farmer, Winnipeg's Labor mayor for the past two years. Webb's vote was 22,067 and Farmer's 17,563. Mayor Farmer, an accountant, ran as the official candidate of the Independent Labor party.

Col. Webb, the first Canadian officer to be decorated in the war, came home with the medals of the D.S.O. and the M.C., and the Croix de Guerre, and was six times mentioned in despatches.

Mayor Farmer, having served two years in office, met the customary objection to a longer term in the chief magistrate's chair. Col. Webb claimed that it was "time for a change." Mr. Farmer replied that the little feminine role in "The Fire Patrol," that sensational sex drama which he had produced, had been a failure and incapable of improving conditions.

COUNCIL REJECTS PROPOSAL FOR BARS IN MUSIC HALLS

Associated Press Despatch, London, Nov. 28.—The London county council by a vote of 47 to 42 today rejected the proposal to grant liquor licenses to the newer music halls.

Canadian Press Despatch, Toronto, Nov. 28.—At the special and general meeting of the shareholders of Carriage Factories, Limited, held here today, the old board of directors was re-elected and the officers re-appointed. An agreement between the Carriage Factories, Limited, P. T. Legare & Co., Limited, and S. V. Isaacson, dated Oct. 24, last, was approved and ratified. As a result these three companies will be formed into a new company to be known as the Canada Carriage and Truck Company, Limited. The Brantford plant and the Alexandria plant of Carriage Factories, Limited, will be continued in operation, but it is proposed to discontinue operation of the Dominion Carriage Company plant at Montreal.

A Stubborn Cough Loosens Right Up

This home-made remedy is a wonder for quick results. Easily and cheaply made.

Here is a home-made syrup which millions of people have found to be the most dependable means of breaking up stubborn coughs. It is cheap and simple, but very prompt in action. Under its healing, soothing influence, chest soreness goes, phlegm loosens, breathing becomes easier, tickling in throat stops and you get a good night's restful sleep. The usual throat and chest colds are conquered by it in 24 hours or less. Nothing better for bronchitis, hoarseness, croup, throat tickle, bronchial asthma or winter coughs.

To make this splendid cough syrup, pour 2½ ounces of Pinex into a 16-oz. bottle and fill the bottle with plain granulated sugar syrup and shake thoroughly. If you prefer, use clarified molasses, honey, or corn syrup, instead of sugar syrup. Either way, you get 16 ounces of a really superb cough syrup that you could buy ready-made for $2.50. Keeps perfectly and children love its pleasant taste.

Pinex is a special and highly concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract, known the world over for its prompt healing effect upon the membrane.

To avoid disappointment, ask your druggist for "Pinex" and don't accept anything else. Guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money promptly refunded. The Pinex Co., Toronto, Ont.

"THE BANDOLERO" IS HAILED AS THRILLER

Story of Bandits, Love and Revenge To Be Seen at Loew's.

"The Bandolero" (The Bandit), will be the feature at Loew's Theatre next Thursday, Friday and Saturday.
Made for the most part in Cuba, and in authentic locations in Spain, this picture centers around the picturesque character of Dorando, played by Pedro de Cordoba, who throws up his commission as captain of dragoons in Seville and becomes a Robin Hood type of outlaw leader in the mountains after his wife is brutally murdered in a fight that results from his discovery of the Marques de la Torre (Gustav von Seyffertitz) forcing unwelcome love upon her.
The action is developed upon the revenge which Dorando has sworn to have upon the Marques, and upon the romantic attachment which develops between the Marques' son (Manuel Granada), whom Dorando has kidnapped and hidden in the mountains, and Dorando's daughter (Renee Adoree).
The dramatic situation is further complicated by the intrigues of Concha (Dorothy Ruth), who succeeds in inducing Ramon to become a bullfighter in Seville. It is in a great bullfight scene that the unique picturesque quality of this photodrama is said to reach its climax.
Bullfight Unusual.
This bullfight is not at all of the usual variety. It was made possible only after many disappointments, when Tom Terriss, producer of the picture for Metro-Goldwyn release, secured the services of Canero, reputed to be the most renowned bullfighter in Spain. Canero on his white horse, which is said to be valued at $10,000, evades the bull's charges by the narrowest possible margin, vaults over the bull's back, and finally despatches him with the sword.
It might be mentioned in passing that Mary Pickford and Douglas Fairbanks, then on their way to meet the king and queen of Spain, were guests of Mr. Terriss, during the making of the bullfight scenes, which were staged in Granada, near the storied Alhambra against the background of the biggest holiday festival of the year.
One of the many other interesting features of "The Bandolero" is that it marks the screen debut of Manuel Granada, a young Argentine. Mr.
Terriss chanced to see Granada, thought he saw in him the makings of an actor of merit, gave him a camera test, and directed him most painsstakingly. Granada's performance as the juvenile is the result.

Of the Beery Type.
Another character in the piece, that of a rough Wallace Beery sort of part that may be identified at once by anyone who sees the picture, is played by a big, burly Spaniard, Jose Rueda, who had no previous acting experience of any kind, and who was picked up in Spain by Mr. Terriss. His performance has been considered most amazing.
The company of players that made "The Bandolero" possible, however, is not alone experienced, but known everywhere that motion pictures are shown for their outstanding talent and popularity. Pedro de Cordoba, long a leading man on the stage and screen, has the difficult title role. Gustav von Seyffertitz, the villain of the picture, will be vividly remembered for his portrayal of similar roles in many big pictures, particularly in recent Cosmopolitan productions. On hand, comes to mind particularly his delinquent Professor Moriarty in "Sherlock Holmes," in which John Barrymore was starred. Renee Adoree certainly needs no introduction as a leading woman. While "The Bandolero" is the first picture in which Dorothy Ruth has appeared, she comes to the screen upon the firm foundation of a successful stage career on Broadway. For three years she appeared in Winchell
Smith's productions, amongst them
"The Fortune Hunter," "The Boomerang" and "The First Year."
The sequences taken in Cuba and Spain resulted in most unusual and beautiful, not to mention authentic photographic effects. They were made possible, however, only after setbacks, always embarrassing, but often times amusing, according to Mr. Terriss.

Difficulty Met.
In Cuba, for instance, after the rainy weather first encountered, gave way to sunny skies, it was found that no women would work as extras before the camera. Boys had to be dressed appropriately for the feminine roles. Then, in a fair all the props they could get their hands on, such as candles, sweetmeats, toys, etc., with which the fair booths had been liberally stocked.
In Spain, where the cordons were taken in Cordoba, Madrid, Barcelona, Seville and Granada, the welcome given the company by the populace at large was most heartwarming. The bullfighters' union, however, by exorbitant demands, nearly ruined plans for making the bullfight scene, in which the background of the Sierra Nevada mountains. Mr. Terriss, through the influence of United States Ambassador Moore, had the use of regular Spanish troops as extras. The troopers, transformed into bandits for the occasion, would not work at all the first day. They merely went to sleep. But, after some thought, Mr. Terriss furnished each one of them with a bottle of wine on the second day. After that, they not only didn't sleep, but they went through the fighting scenes with so much vim that, as Mr. Terriss expressed it, "They almost knocked each other's heads off."
"The Bandolero" was adapted to the screen by Mr. Terriss from Paul Gwynne's novel. Rodney Hickok was associate director and George Peters was the cameraman.

one of the outstanding attractions of the season.

Days Only.

Virginia Vall proves a veritable fashion plate for fall and winter styles in her forthcoming production, "In Every Woman's Life," a First National feature scheduled for the Grand for two days only, next Thursday and Friday, with three shows daily. Three acts of vaudeville and the usual added attractions will complete a big bill.
Miss Vall, appearing in this picture through the courtesy of Universal, wears a stunning array of evening gowns, afternoon frocks, suits, coats and hats. They were created specially for her by Clara West, designer for many of the motion picture stars, and are from designs especially selected by Miss Vall in New York.
Among the most striking things shown by Miss Vall is the introduction of a parasol that found favor is of green silk with gray lace over that, and opens outward on one side only. It forms a convenient sunshade without obscuring the view of those around you. It is also used when motoring in an open car.
For sport wear the toque trimmed in leather is coming in vogue. For afternoon the hat with the medium brim will be worn. For street wear the small hat with a long flowing veil, sometimes to the waist, will be worn.
The skirts for street and evening are noticeably shorter. The negligee is longer and flowing.

ANDERSON MEN READY FOR VOTE

Candidate Optimistic and Hopes For Clear Weather on Monday.

With a fine bright day on Monday and a large vote, John Anderson will be elected mayor of London in 1925, is the general opinion of Anderson supporters in the city today. Alderman Anderson, who has now recovered from his nervous exhaustion following the strenuous work of the last two weeks, and who today was looking very well, was also optimistic.

"If we have a really fine day on Monday, and if a large vote is polled I am confident of victory," he said. Evidence of the general interest in the municipal election is the fact that the advance poll will probably touch the record figure of 300. Last year the total advance poll was 75. This year up to noon 122 votes were polled. City Clerk Baker states that as Saturday is always the large day he is expecting that 300 votes will have to be counted in the advance poll, a record number, a figure which has not been equaled in this city in London for many years.

The advance poll is not counted until Monday evening with the remainder of the ballots, so that there is no means of knowing how the vote is going. The advance poll is not counted on anything which means increased interest in the election, and a large vote is an augury of victory, and this "run on the advance bank" so to speak, is pleasing them mightily.

CITY HALL OFFICIALS JOIN LONDON UNITS

Assessment Commissioner Bennett and Walter Dodd Will Join Local Regiments.

In the city hall are two new recruits to London volunteer units of the army. Assessment Commissioner Harry Bennett has applied for a commission in the city of London regiment of the Canadian Fusiliers, and Walter Dodd of the city engineer's department is now a captain in No. 1 company of the C. A. S. C., stationed in London.

Both these officials of the city are overseas men, to whom the fascinating appeal of making them want to keep in touch with the service even in civilian life. There are a large number of ex-volunteer service men in the employ of the city apart from the number of overseas men who work for the city.

As one of the officials said this morning: "If someone came in and shouted 'Shun' all the work in the city hall would stop immediately."

G. L. SPRY,
advertising manager of the Huron & Erie Mortgage Corporation, who was named one of the vice-presidents of the Canadian advertisers' association at the annual conference, which closed in Toronto yesterday.

ASPHALT HEATER MAY BE USED IN LONDON

City Engineer Is Well Pleased With Results Gained in Toronto.

City Engineer W. P. Near was in Toronto on Thursday, inspecting the new coal oil heater which the Queen City has just installed. This heater has been proven to be a saver in materials and labor, and may be recommended to the city as an adjunct to the present equipment of the engineer's department. Mr. Near says that this new heater, in work carried on under his own supervision has effected a reduction of from $1.85 to $1.15 per square yard of surface road. This is a great improvement over effect similar saving in the same kind of work in London.

The heater is placed over the bad spots in the road surface which need repaving. The asphalt is thus softened sufficiently to allow of repairs being made with the material already in the road. This is a great improvement over the present method, which necessitates breaking up the surface with picks and using new material for the filling in. London has no heater now to do this work, and is, according to the city engineer, losing money on all this work, which a coal oil heater would save.

ANGLO-FRENCH ENTENTE AIDED

Refusal of France to Take Sides in Egyptian Trouble Hailed as Good Omen.

By CONSTANTINE BROWN,
Special to The Advertiser

Paris, Nov. 29.—The visit of the Marquis of Crewe to Premier Herriot Thursday to thank him in the name of the British government for the attitude of France in the Anglo-Egyptian conflict, is much commented upon. Those in close contact with the French government state that this conflict has done more than anything else to put the Anglo-French entente on a sound basis. Although it is true that the Socialist papers, including several government journals, are attacking Great Britain for the high-handed way she treated the Egyptians, the French government not only refrained from any representations, but when it was approached by a representative of the Egyptian government in Paris with a request to protest to London against the annexation of the Sudan, it stated that this matter was exclusively between Egypt and Great Britain, and France has no reason to take sides.

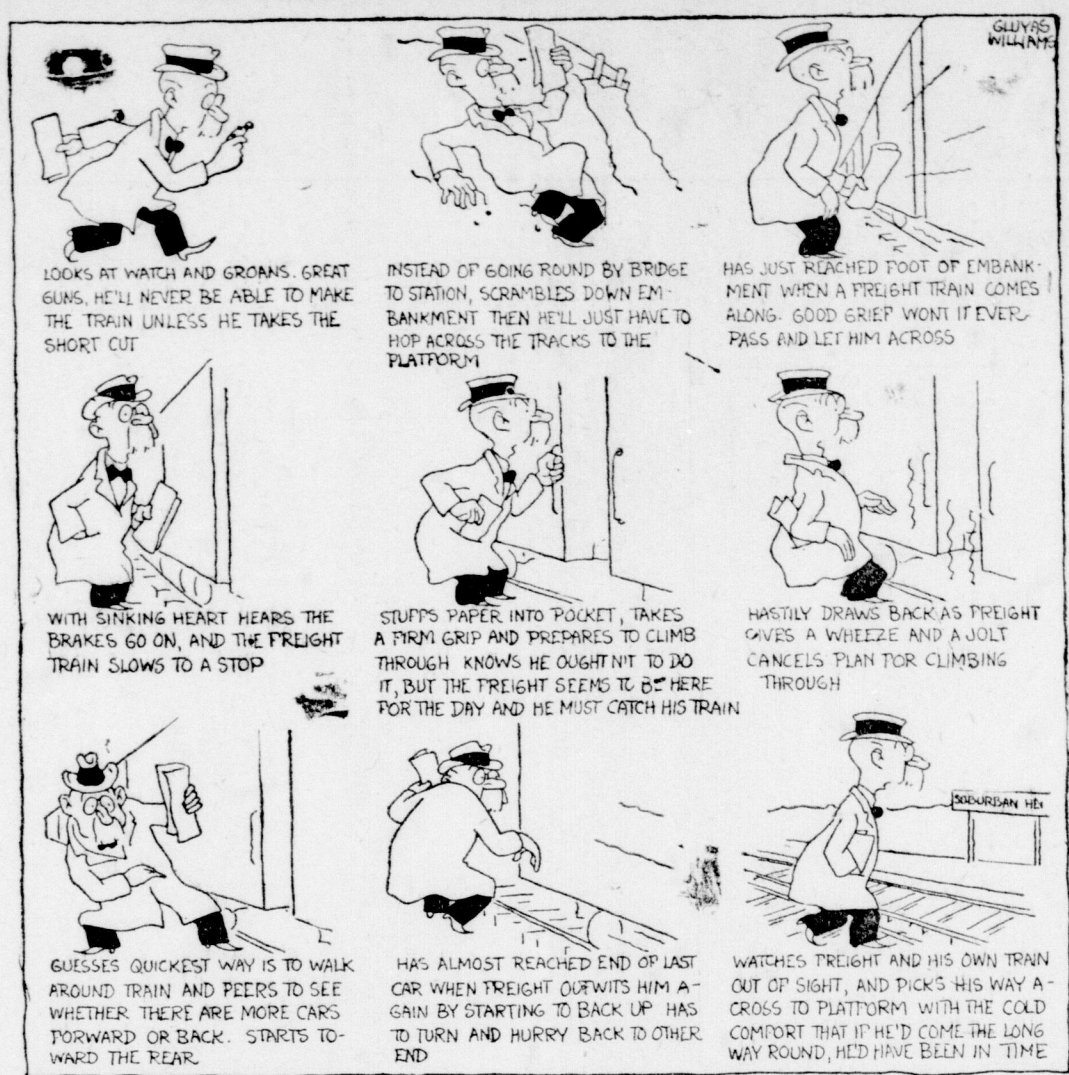

Premier Herriot, it is reliably reported, assured the British ambassador that France will continue to keep her natural attitude in the present conflict, and showed a willingness to refrain in the future from any intervention in the east, thus giving Great Britain a free hand in the middle east of the world.

The writer learned from the same reliable source that the Marquis of Crewe, after thanking Premier Herriot for his friendly declarations, assured him that the Baldwin cabinet, while it is not able to accept the Geneva protocol, is now studying the best means of assuring France's security, and this will be the one main subject of discussion between Premier Herriot and Neville Chamberlain when the latter arrives in Paris next week.

SIMCOE MOTHERS' CLUB.

The school colors, pink and black, were used for the decorations at the Simcoe street mothers' club bazaar held yesterday afternoon in the school kindergarten. The bazaar was one of the most successful undertakings of the club. The many guests were received by Mrs. John Lee, president of the club, and Mrs. Nelson Foster, general convener of the bazaar.

A variety of pretty stalls displayed attractive wares, and were presided over by the following members: Mrs. Dayton, Mrs. W. Thompson and Mrs. Coyles; home cooking, Mrs. W. Mitchell and Mrs. James; fancy work, Mrs. Lumsden and Mrs. Bailey; candy, Mrs. Patterson, Mrs. Crawford and Mrs. Blackwell; fish pond, Mrs. Thompson and Mrs. Warren; tearoom, Mrs. R. McLeod and Mrs. Hartley; ice cream, Mrs. Thatcher and Mrs. Barber.

MAN AND WOMAN GET LONG TERMS

W. Bloomfield and Lillian Heaman Made Home Unfit For Children.

Indeterminate sentences of from three months to two years were passed upon Mrs. Lillian Heaman and Walter Bloomfield of Parkhill this morning by Magistrate A. H. M. Geaydon for having made a home unfit for children.

When found guilty last May of the offense charged against them, Bloomfield was fined $200 and given six months in which to re-establish his home on the proper basis before further sentence was passed. Mrs. Heaman was given a corresponding term in which to reform.

Upon their appearance this morning, Crown Attorney Albert M. Judd informed the court that the conduct of the two during the six months of grace had been "anything but good." "I have kept closely in touch with the situation and have had County Constable Wharton investigate conditions from time to time. Mrs. Heaman has been meeting Bloomfield and had not been trying to let things run smoothly between her and his wife. She apparently has had the intention of doing everything possible to the contrary."

Must Protect Children.
"As long as I am crown attorney, and as far as the crown is concerned," continued Mr. Judd, "this sort of thing will not be tolerated in this county. Something must be done to protect the children, as in this case and act as a preventive for the future."

"Is there any reason why I should not pass sentence upon you, Bloomfield," asked the magistrate.
"No," was the reply.
"It is very disheartening to me," said the court, "to find that after six months there is little improvement in the state of affairs, and that the leniency shown you by this court has gone for naught."

Mrs. Heaman: "There is no truth whatever in the story. I have never met Bloomfield during the past six months."
Information that has come to me personally from independent sources," said the magistrate, "as well as from the crown attorney and the county constable, sources undisputedly reliable, is entirely to the contrary."
"You are a woman without any moral sense at all," continued Magistrate Geaydon scathingly. "You have not had the slightest regard or sympathy for the unfortunate wife of this man. You have broken up the home. You have had every opportunity in the last six months to atone for what you have done, but you have persisted. Such conditions cannot be tolerated from the public point of view nor for your own good. It is almost unbelievable to me that a woman of your upbringing could be capable of such inhuman conduct."

Have Done No Wrong.
"I have done no wrong," affirmed Mrs. Heaman.
"You have lived in the same house with this man; you have born him an illegitimate child and yet you have the effrontery to stand there and tell me that you have done no wrong."

"I mean this last six months, your worship. I plead guilty to the wrong I had done before that. I only spoke to Bloomfield once as he was passing the gate. Mr. Judd gave me permission to speak to him."
"That is absolutely untrue," said Mr. Judd rising.

"All this has happened because I refused to marry a certain man, up there," pursued Mrs. Heaman. "There are three bachelors who want to marry me to get into my home, but I refused because they were low men."

"Take my 300 acres and my children; that's all you want, your worship. You have disgraced me."
"No," interjected the court promptly. "You have disgraced yourself."
Bloomfield protested that he had not been away from home one night during the past six months, and had only spoken to Mrs. Heaman once on a matter of business.
Mrs. Heaman will serve her sentence in the Mercer reformatory, while Bloomfield will serve his in the Ontario reformatory.

MONEY ORDER SWINDLER SOUGHT BY U. S. DEPT.

The United States postal department reports that a swindler has been successful in obtaining money orders for large amount from post-offices without making payment. His practice is to hand the issuing clerk a few dollars less than that for which the order is drawn. If the order has passed into his possession he pretends to place it in an envelope which he seals. He then hands the envelope supposed to contain the order to the clerk, takes back what money he has tendered and leaves the office with the statement that he will return shortly with the full amount.

Postmasters in Canada are therefore requested to caution issuing agents against releasing orders until the full amount in payment thereof is received.

FALLS THROUGH WINDOW OF DUNDAS STREET STORE

An unknown man was the central figure in an unfortunate accident arising from some temporary weakness. He was passing the store of the Heintzman Piano Company, Dundas street, when overcome with some sort of weakness or seizure, he became unconscious and fell head foremost through the plate glass window of the store.

First aid was rendered and the man was taken to his home. Fortunately he escaped serious injury.

BRAKEMAN KILLED.

John R. Grimshaw, 29, of Mimico, a brakeman on the Canadian National railways, was killed at Port Colborne last night while switching. A flat car doubled and crushed him to death.

BOYS' PARLIAMENT VOTING IS OPENED

Three Contest London Seats— Frank Green First to Vote.

With a proclamation on the door of the polling booth, with a regulation ballot box, a voters' list and a returning officer in the person of W. H. Swarman, the voting for the members of the fourth provincial boys' parliament started this morning at the Y. M. C. A. boys' committee room. The poll opened at 7 a.m., and will close at 3:30 p.m.

Frank Green, of Chalmers Presbyterian church Alerts, was the first boy to cast his vote. He was on hand at 7:05. He was followed by a steady stream of youthful voters. The results will be announced on Monday. The candidates are Allan Johnston, Alex. Knox and J. Hills Temple.

GIRL INJURED IN CRASH RETURNS TO HOSPITAL

Miss Hazel Franks, of the Wonderland sideroad, Byron, who was one of the party in Frank House's motor car when it was struck by another motor some time ago, has been returned to Victoria hospital suffering from partial paralysis. It is stated at the hospital that the present affliction is an after-effect of the accident, from which it was thought at the time that the whole party had escaped practically unharmed.

Miss Franks was brought back to the hospital on Nov. 25, and the authorities describe her case as partial paralysis of one side. There has been little change in the patient's condition since her return to hospital.

PIONEER INSURANCE MAN WILL BE BURIED TODAY

The funeral of Andrew Ellis, pioneer insurance broker of the city, will be held this afternoon from his late residence, 506 Dufferin avenue, to Woodland cemetery, where interment will take place.

Mr. Ellis was born in England in 1842, and came to Canada when a small boy. His family later moved to London, where he resided ever since.

He was married in 1886 to Fannie Roland, who predeceased him some years.

Mr. Ellis was an active member of the Masonic order, being secretary of St. George's lodge, No. 42, of this city, for over forty years. He recently retired from this office. He was also a member of the Chosen Friends.

Mr. Ellis was an active member of Crown Memorial church. He is survived by one brother, William Ellis, of this city.

The funeral will be held at 2 o'clock this afternoon, Rev. Quintin Warner of Crown Memorial church officiating.

OPEN BABY CLINIC IN LONDON WEST

Clinic at Talbot Street School Will Be Closed After Christmas.

The Talbot street baby welfare clinic will be closed after Christmas, so that a new clinic may be opened in the Empress avenue school, London west, early in the new year. This decision was made at yesterday afternoon's meeting of the women's board of the Child Welfare Association held at the Institute of Public Health. There has been a gradual falling off in the attendance in the Talbot street school district, according to Miss Bertha Smith, supervising nurse, while the need for a clinic in London west was very great.

Arrangements were made for the Christmas clinic parties at the schools, which members of the committee assisted by members of the mothers' clubs of the city will entertain the mothers who bring their babies to clinic.

The Tecumseh school party will be held on December 15, the Ryerson party on December 8, the Talbot street party on December 9, the Aberdeen party on December 17, the Rectory party on December 11, the Boyle Memorial school party on December 15 and the Victoria party on December 12.

Miss Topley Thomas has offered to put on Miss Beatrice Taylor's play, "Barberry Candles" for a second time in aid of the child welfare association. The committee has accepted this offer and has appointed the committee to make arrangements. The committee includes Mrs. Eberhard and Mrs. John Gemmill.

Mrs. Ronald Harris was present at the meeting and was asked to report to the Red Cross Society that the child welfare association was in favor of the organization of home nursing classes in the city.

The suggestion was made that a public meeting for discussion of the matter should be called and a special invitation sent out to trained nursing associations of the city to see whether volunteer help along this line might be obtained. A special speaker will probably be brought from Toronto for this occasion.

A very fine report of the work was given by Miss Bertha Smith, supervising nurse. Arrangements had been made to have protein milk prepared in the diet kitchen at the sick children's hospital, so that poor mothers might be able to procure it at a reasonable cost for their children who needed it. Miss Smith made an appeal to organization interested in child welfare to help out with the milk fund at Christmas time.

TWO CASES HEARD.

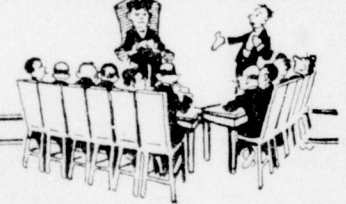

Mr. Justice Fisher presided at the weekly high court at the court house this morning, disposing in short order of the two cases brought to his attention.

Gossip Around The City Hall

Polls open at 8 o'clock Monday morning and remain open until 7 in the evening. There is no eight-hour day for election officials, and electors have the earliest opportunity possible of turning in their votes. The railwaymen's and commercial travellers' advance poll will be open tonight until 7 o'clock.

With the renting of thirteen schools, the Masonic Temple, advertising and printing costs, London's election bill will be heavy. The school board gets $10 a night for the use of their school auditoriums for election meetings.

"I have no slate of aldermen as choices for Monday's election," John Anderson, candidate for the mayoralty, told a reporter. "In ward one, for instance, I am acquainted with all of the five aldermanic candidates. They are friends of mine and I have been assured of their support if returned to the mayoralty. In the other wards, too, there are many men running outside of present aldermen, and I would not name any 'slate'."

Speaking to numerous aldermanic candidates, an Advertiser man finds scarcely any who are ready to declare themselves for Mayor Wenige. They declare that they can get cooperation with Ald. Anderson, though their own election campaigns have taken up much of their time, and they have not been able to do as much as they would have liked for their desired leader.

Fire Chief John Aitken advocates the appointment of a trained electrician to handle the department's fire alarm system and supervise some of the work at fire sites where there are heavy electric systems. For many years Chief Aitken himself has supervised this work, but it is becoming so complicated and detailed, and it is proving so important that he is after a special man for the job.

The Answer to the Roorback:

THIS IS AN ANSWER TO THE ROORBACK.—All arrangements have been made to publish it, not at the eleventh hour, but, figuratively speaking, at a few minutes to 12, in order that it could not be answered.

Let it be known that every question so far has been answered and that George Wenige has conducted a clean campaign for the mayoralty. It is the purpose of this advertisement to answer another question before it is asked and to give it a thorough explanation. Read every word of this pronouncement. When Wenige, over 25 years ago, was an employee in the Red Bird bicycle factory in Brantford, he wasn't satisfied with a $1.50 a day, and even at that time he wanted to do something for all the people. Therefore, he devised a scheme whereby the assembling of bicycles could be done in one half the time and at a relatively lower price. This meant double wages for himself and his fellow-employees, and the production of bicycles at a lower price for all the people. The lower the price of bicycles, the more bicycles were sold. Increasing production meant the employment of more labor at double wages. Of course, there were a few dishonest workers who were indifferent to the proposition and who didn't care to change from the old system to the new, but nevertheless George Wenige put the new idea into effect, doubled the wages of himself and fellow-workers, found employment for more people, and enabled the factory to sell bicycles at a lower price. Let us repeat that even in those days the dominating idea of his life was active. George Wenige was then, as he always has been, for all the people.

READ THE ROORBACK
WHICH THEY THOUGHT WE COULDN'T ANSWER, BUT WE HEARD ABOUT IT IN TIME, AND NOW YOU HAVE THE TRUTHFUL ANSWER.

TRI-COLOR MEETS PADDLERS TODAY

Hughes' Work May Give Beachers Advantage in Kicking.

Special to The Advertiser.
Toronto, Nov. 28.—Many Toronto fans believe that Balm Beach and Queens, fighting for the eastern Canada championship and the right to meet Winnipeg Victorias Saturday for the all-Canadian rugby championship, will provide an interesting and particularly strenuous tussle tomorrow afternoon at Varsity stadium.

Prospects are fine for the football weather and good footing for the players.

Morris Hughes continues to kick the puck in brilliant manner, and Balm Beach may even have an advantage in that department. At any rate, Hughes' practice has been a real deal. He is the best running backfield player on the paddlers, and he has a chance to be a big figure on the beach team. His punting alone is a valuable feature. He played his first senior game in Hamilton three weeks ago, and though new to the game, made a fine impression.

When Mike Rodden commenced his coaching of the O. R. P. U. champions two weeks ago, he stated he wanted to see the ability possessed by every player on the squad and would not make a definite selection until just before the game with the tri-color.

Harry Hennin shares the spot as a main attraction in Toronto Monday night. He meets Edwards of Cleveland, a tough boy, who will have the brick-layer showing everything to mean in his second appearance in pro ranks.

Mr. Working Man and Mrs. Working Woman

I have always had the interests of labor at heart. You know that during the past two years the laboring people of this city have been just as welcome in the mayor's office as the plug-hat folks were in the days gone by.

And not only this, but never have I voted against or acted against anything that was in any way intended to help the unemployed. I stand four-square for the laboring people of the City of London and find no greater satisfaction than in doing the things that help them in their daily work.

You can depend upon me in 1925, as in 1924 and 1923, to do everything in my power to assist the unemployed and to better the status of the employed.

PLAN TO OFFER REEVE POST BY ACCLAMATION
 T. G. Turnbull of Lobo Has Served Town For Many Years.

Municipal elections in the townships are beginning to attract attention. According to a resident of Lobo township who was in the city yesterday, there is a strong feeling in some quarters that there might be a saving of time, money and effort if the whole council were returned without a contest.

T. G. Turnbull, who has served the township of Lobo faithfully for a great many years, but he made the announcement at the last nomination that if elected for 1924 he would do his best work, but it would be his last contest. I have heard it mentioned in several places that as Mr. Turnbull fought so many elections successfully and is not approaching the time when he wants to retire, that if he were given a nomination he would hold office for 1925. I have no reason for stating that he would be willing to accept a nomination, but it would be a nice compliment to pay a man who has given the service to the county Mr. Turnbull has. He is a good man in the council and the same can be said of him out of it. I'd like to see him offered an acclamation, as I think he deserves it.

OFFICIALS OPEN NEW PAVEMENT

S. L. Squires Official at Gathering of Representatives at Thamesford.

S. L. Squires, deputy minister of highways in Ontario government, officially opened the paved highway between London and Ingersoll yesterday at Thamesford in the presence of a large number of officials and other prominent men of London, Ingersoll, Middlesex and Oxford counties, and the London motor club. Hon. George S. Henry, minister of highways, was to have officiated, but was unable to attend because of sickness.

Mr. Squires was met at Ingersoll Friday by Ingersoll officials and motored to Thamesford, where he was the guest of honor at a luncheon held in the Thamesford Orange hall. London was represented by Mayor Wenige, while the chamber of commerce was represented by President R. H. Dowler and a number of directors, and the London motor club by President W. R. Jarmain and Secretary Ed. Bernard. Middlesex county representatives at the ceremony were Warden C. C. Henry, Reeves Allan MacPherson, Bernie Galbraith, T. H. Turnbull, D. McCullum and others.

The opening of the highway links up not only London and Ingersoll, but London and Woodstock by paved roads. This means that tourists may travel over concrete from Woodstock to London and as far west as Delaware.

The University Plebiscite

Every one who has a vote in the municipal election on Monday next, December 1st, has the right to vote on the University Bylaw. This means that every man and woman who has his or her name on the Voters' List should make a point to go to the polls and record a vote for the University Bylaw.

The City of London has authority to make money grants to the University. The plebiscite to be taken on Monday is in the nature of an endorsement or vote of approval. Section 3 of the University Act reads:

"The City may grant annually or from time to time to the Board of Governors for the use of the University such a sum or sums as may be agreed upon by the City and the University, and it shall not be necessary to obtain the assent of the electors qualified to vote on money by-laws for any such grant or payment, provided, however, that any grant in excess of $75,000 in any one year shall first receive the assent of the said electors."

The people of London are proud of the University of Western Ontario. It is the only municipal institution devoted to higher education in the Dominion of Canada.

The City of London has real control, as the following extract from the University Act shows:

"During such time as the City Hall shall pay to the Board of Governors the annual grant or grants provided in Section 3 of this Act the Council of the City shall from time to time appoint four Governors; the Lieutenant-Governor in Council of the Province of Ontario shall from time to time appoint four Governors and the Governors so appointed shall elect four Governors. The Chancellor, the President of the University, the Mayor of the City and the Warden of the County of Middlesex shall be ex-officio members of the Board of Governors."

The University of Western Ontario is a people's university. The farmers send the largest group of students; but of the students now attending the second largest group comes from the homes of the following:

Carpenters, electricians, blacksmiths, millers, machinists, painters, tailors, barbers, furniture trimmers, railway baggage-men, expressmen, signalmen, engineers.

Monday is the day you vote "Yes" for the University Bylaw—vote in the morning—help your friends to get out to vote. London expects every voter to do his duty.

foremen, mail clerks, trainmen, conductors, shippers, salesmen, contractors, sailors, moulders, caretakers, stove mounters, shoemakers, masons, mechanics, tool-makers, plumbers, inventors, teamsters, pipe fitters, gasmen, cabinet makers, factory superintendents.

It is an accepted principle of British Institutional Government that the State is responsible for the education of the people, but the value of education is so great that no municipality shirks this responsibility. All right-minded parents realize the value of a trained mind and endeavor to give their children the best educational equipment which they can afford. Few people, however, are aware of the close relation between education and the production of wealth, and probably fewer still understand fully the extent to which the wealth producing power of any people depend upon the quantity and quality of that people's education.

With the ever-increasing application of science to industry the possibility of any great success for the man or woman without an education is rapidly decreasing. Occasionally someone of very exceptional ability has made a great success in business world in spite of the handicap caused by his lack of formal or college education. So much is said of these men who have not attended college yet attained distinctions, as well as of the few educated men who have failed dismally, that we do not appreciate the true relation of education to success.

The following figures bearing on this phase of the matter are significant:

A person with no schooling has one chance in 161,290 of attaining distinction, with a public school education one chance in 40,841, with a high school education one chance in 1,606, and with a college education one chance in 173. In other words, a person with a public school education has four chances, one with a high school education 102 chances, and one with a college education 945 chances of attaining distinction to the uneducated man's single chance.

EVIDENCE THAT CANNOT BE DENIED!

Thanks for co-operation has been the keynote of hundreds of letters, telephone calls and telegrams poured in upon George Wenige during the present year. Here are some of the letters. The evidence of co-operation cannot be denied. The person who claims that Wenige hasn't given co-operation argues himself unfamiliar with the activities of the City of London.

November 22, 1924.
"Your stand during the last two years, as Mayor of London, has been my pride, and I am glad that you had the courage to bring out both sides of every question in connection with the interests of the ratepayers."
J. B. GRIEVES.
"359 Hamilton road."

May 3, 1924.
"I have been requested by the members of the General Committee of the O.O.H. and P. Convention, held in your city on May 24, to tender to you our sincere thanks for the valuable assistance you rendered to us in helping to make that convention a success."
FRED H. JAMES,
"General Secretary O.O.H. and P. Convention Committee."

February 19, 1924.
"It was unanimously agreed upon at our organization meeting last evening that you be asked to act as honorary president of our club. I take great pleasure in extending this invitation to you and can assure you that we will deem it a great honor to have for honorary president one who has done as much as you have for amateur sports."
T. G. FITTON,
"Secretary-Treasurer East London Athletic Club."

August 12, 1924.
"At a general meeting of Byron branch of the Tuberculous Veterans' Association of Canada, the following resolution was unanimously adopted:
"That the sincere thanks of this branch be tendered to G. A. Wenige, mayor of London, for his invaluable assistance and co-operation during our recent prize drawing."
"That we desire to go on record as being deeply appreciative of the very sympathetic attitude adopted by the mayor at all times towards our association, and the work we are doing."
"I would like to add my personal thanks for your kindness in connection with our drawing, especially with regard to your co-operation at the theatre, as I realize the many demands on your time, and I can assure you that your action was very much appreciated by our members."
R. HALE,
"Secretary Byron Branch, T. V. A. of Canada."

September 13, 1924.
"In appreciation of your valued help and co-operation last March in connection with the Peace Rally Meeting, held in the Collegiate Institute, under the auspices of the Men's Brotherhood Federation, I am sending you under separate copy a copy of The Official Organ of the World Brotherhood Federation, in which a short account appears of the meeting.
"Permit me to say your assistance and kindness on that occasion was most encouraging and much appreciated by the brotherhood."
"DAVID ROSS,
"Men's Brotherhood Federation."

October 13, 1924.
"At a meeting of the unemployed on Friday, the 10th of October, a vote of thanks was passed to your worship for the kind consideration and prompt action you took in the case of one of our unfortunate brothers who was evicted on Friday, and for your promise to pay one month's rent in advance if he is successful in getting a suitable cottage, and also your efforts to procure one for him. The men feel that you did all in your power to give him assistance. Again thanking you."
R. FOXCROFT,
"Secretary to Unemployed."

November 23, 1924.
"Our good-will goes out to you at this time and we hope you will continue as Mayor of London, so that when we have our 'Homes Coming' in 1923, you, as Mayor of London, will show us as good a time as we all had with you and yours in 1923."
"The London Old Boys' Association of Detroit and Border Cities."
"Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Galbraith, Mr. and Mrs. Jack Probyn and son, Mr. and Mrs. Harold Gregory, Mrs. Sarah Probyn, Mr. and Mrs. Edwin Rimeck, Mrs. Charles Hunter, Mr. Morram, Mr. and Mrs. F. J. Pope, Mr. Alfred A. Boyd, Mr. Wm. A. Gibson and son, Mr. and Mrs. D. Tallant, Mrs. Albert Haltir, Mr. and Mrs. Paul Schilling, Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Hendric, Mr. and Mrs. Sam Probyn, Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Alston, Mr. C. Christson, Mr. and Mrs. W. F. Burleigh."

September 11, 1924.
"At the last regular meeting of London Council, No. 630 U. C. T., held on September 6, a vote of thanks was ordered extended to you for your efforts in connection with the entertainment of the Grand Officers and delegates of the Grand Council of Ontario-Quebec United Commercial Travelers of America."
"H. R. HOOPER,
"Secretary-Treasurer United Commercial Travelers of America."

October 20, 1924.
"Let me again express my appreciation of my reception while in London, and to thank you for your kindly interest and co-operation that you have extended."
"J. T. FOSTER,
"Vice-President the Trades and Labor Congress of Canada."
September 30, 1924.
"On behalf of the executive of the C.A. A. Baseball League, I desire to express our thanks for the handsome trophy which you presented to us."
"N. A. FIRRIE,
"Secretary C.A.A. Baseball League."

July 14, 1924.
"I wish to take this opportunity to thank you for the royal reception you gave the bakers of Ohio on their recent visit to your city. It is the consensus of opinion that we return to your city on our next convention."
"R. B. McFARLIN,
"Washburn-Crosby Company, Cleveland, Ohio."

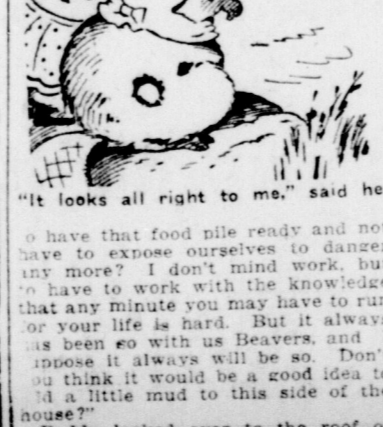

March 6, 1924.
"At our executive meeting this week a resolution was passed as follows:
"That the executive and members of the London Kiwanis Club tender to the mayor a vote of thanks for his interest and assistance in the matter of a boy being removed to Byron Sanatorium."
"We are, indeed, very grateful for your support in this matter and trust that at some time we will be in a position to reciprocate."
"E. B. MANNING,
"Secretary Kiwanis Club, London, Ont."

August 15, 1924.
"On behalf of Myrtle and Prospect Lodges, Knights of Pythias, of this city, I desire to express to you your thanks for your kindness in helping to entertain the Cleveland Pythian Pilgrimage Club."
"E. L. FYSH,
"Secretary of the committee."

Paddy and Mrs. Paddy Take Last Look Then Dive For Their House In the Pond

By THORNTON W. BURGESS.
Paddy the Beaver and Mrs. Paddy sat on their dam eating the bark from some willow branches they had brought over there. "Well, old Jack Frost can come but as soon as he pleases," declared Paddy between bites. "We are all ready for him."
Mrs. Paddy nodded. "I for one am thankful," said she. "Isn't it a relief to have a little rest?"
"It looks all right to me," said he.

their house standing above the water a short distance from where they sat. "It looks all right to me," said he, "but if you say so, we'll add a little mud. We may as well do that as sit around doing nothing."
So together they swam over to the house, and diving to the bottom of the pond they brought up mud and plastered it on the roof of the house until Mrs. Paddy was satisfied. Then they swam back to the dam and looked it over very carefully from end to end. They made sure there were no weak places in it. They swam around their food pile and satisfied themselves again that there was food enough there to last them all winter. Then they floated lazily side by side for they couldn't think of a single thing that needed to be done.
"Some of our neighbors have made fun of us for working so hard," said Paddy, "but some of these same people are going to see hard times before the winter is over, while we will be living in comfort. Now we can sit and sleep and live in peace with not a thing in the world to worry about. I certainly am thankful that when I was young we were taught to work and how to work, and to prepare for the future. A lot of our neighbors seem to think that because today is fair and bright, tomorrow will be the same. They seem to think that good times are bound to follow good times, and common sense ought to tell everyone that the thing to do is to prepare for hard times when times are good."
"Very true, my dear, very true," replied Mrs. Paddy. "Then hard times are never really hard times if we have a hard winter it will mean hard times for a lot of other people but we won't know anything about it. We have a warm, comfortable safe house and plenty of food. What more can anyone ask? And it is all because we have been forethoughtful enough to provide these things by hard work at the proper time. Do you know, my dear, I am finding it rather difficult to do nothing? We have worked so long and so hard that somehow idleness seems wrong."
"I know," replied Paddy. "I feel the same way. We might start a new canal over to that little cluster of trees we will have to cut next fall but it would hardly be worth while, unless I am greatly mistaken, as we will find the pond covered with ice tomorrow morning. I tell you what"

It is, my dear, living by honest work is a great deal better than living by one's wits. I'm going into the house to take a nap."
Paddy took a last look around, then dived for the entrance to the house. Mrs. Paddy followed him. The next morning the pond was covered with ice.
