POETRY.

An Eastern Legend.

There's a tender Eastern legend,
In a volume old and rare,
Of the Christ-child in His garden
Walking with the children there.

And it tells—this strange, sweet story—
(True or false, ah, who shall say?)
How a bird with a broken pinion
Dying, in a garden lay.

And the children, cruel children,
Lifted it by shattered wing,
Shouting, "Make us merry music,
Sing you lay follow, sing!"

But the Christ-child bent above it,
Took it in his gentle hand,
And alone could understand.

Whispered to it—oh, so softly
Laid His lips upon its throat,
And the song die, swift returning,
Sounded out in one glad note.

Then away, on wings unweary'd,
Joyously it sang and soared,
And the little children hearing
Called the Christ-child "Master—Lord."

CHAPTER XIII.—Continued.

"Why?" asked Rob, quickly.
"Oh, well," said Mary.
"He has been the best friend I have ever made," Rob continued, warmly, "though he says our only point in common is a hatred of rice-pudding."

"He told me," said Mary, "that you write on politics in the 'Wire.'"

"I do a little now, but I have never met any one yet who admitted that he had read my articles. Even your brother won't go as far as that."

"I have read several of them," said Mary.
"Have you?" Rob exclaimed, like a big boy.

"Yes," Mary answered, severely; "but I don't agree with them. I am a Conservative, you know."

She turned up her mouth complacently as she spoke, and Rob fell back a step to prevent his going a step closer. He could hear Mr Meredith's line tearing the water. The boy on the next house-boat was bailing the dingy, and whistling a doleful ditty between each cast.

"There will never be such a night again," Rob said, in a melancholy voice. Then he waited for Mary to ask why, when he would have told her, but she did not ask.

"At least, not to me," he continued after a pause, "for I am not likely to be here again. But there may be many such nights to you."

Mary was unbuckling her gloves and then buttoning them again. There is something uneasy about a woman who has a chance to speak and does not take it.

"I am glad to hear," said Rob, "that my being away will make no difference to you."

A light was running along the road to Hampton Court, and Mary watched it.

to stand like that and talk about things in general now.

"Mary," said Rob.
The boy ceased to whistle. All nature in that quarter was paralyzed, except the tumble of water across the river. Mary withdrew her hand, but said nothing. Rob held his breath. He had not even the excuse of having spoken impulsively, for he had been meditating saying it for weeks.

By and by the world began to move again. The boy whistled. A swallow tried another twig. A moon-ben thought in the river. They had thought it over, and meant to let it pass.

"Are you angry with me?" Rob asked.

Mary nodded her head, but did not speak. Suddenly Rob started.

"You are crying," he said.
"No, I'm not," said Mary, looking up now.

There was a strange light in her face that made Rob shake. He was so near her that his hands touched her jacket. At that moment there was a sound of feet on the plank that communicated between the "Tawny Owl" and the island, and Dick called out.

"You people up there, are you coming once round the island before you have something to eat?"

Rob muttered a reply that Dick fortunately did not catch, but Mary answered, "Yes," and they descended the ladder.

"You had better put a shawl over your shoulders," said Rob, in rather a lordly tone.

"No," Mary answered, thrusting away the shawl he produced from the sloop; "a wrap on a night like this would be absurd."

Something caught in her throat at that moment, and she coughed. Rob looked at her anxiously.

"You had better," he said, putting the shawl over her shoulders.

"No," said Mary, flinging it off.

"Yes," said Rob, putting it on again.

Mary stamped her foot.

"How dare you, Mr Angus?" she exclaimed.

Rob's chest heaved.

"You must do as you are told," he said.

Mary looked at him while he looked at her, but she did not take off the shawl again, and that was the great moment of Rob's life.

The others had gone on before. Although it was a white night the plank was dark in shadow, and as she stepped off it she slipped back. Rob's arm went round her for a moment.

They walked round the island together behind the others, but neither uttered a word. Rob was afraid even to look at her, so he did not see that Mary looked once or twice at him.

Long after he was supposed to be in the hotel Rob was still walking round the island, with no one to see him but the cow. All the Chinese lanterns were out now, but red windows blinds alone warm in several footsteps, and a terrier barked at his foot-posts. The grass was silver-tipped, as in an enchanted island, and the impatient fairies might only have been waiting till he was gone. He was wondering if she was offended, and whistling a doleful ditty between each cast.

"There will never be such a night again," Rob said, in a melancholy voice. Then he waited for Mary to ask why, when he would have told her, but she did not ask.

"At least, not to me," he continued after a pause, "for I am not likely to be here again. But there may be many such nights to you."

Mary was unbuckling her gloves and then buttoning them again. There is something uneasy about a woman who has a chance to speak and does not take it.

"I am glad to hear," said Rob, "that my being away will make no difference to you."

the question he caught a crab. Mary, with her yellow sleeves turned up at the wrist, a great straw hat on her head, ran gaily after her pole, and the gust jerked past. If there are any plain girls let them take to punting and be beautiful.

Dick, who was paddling rather than pulling stroke, turned round on his young brother sharply.

"Whom do you mean?" he asked, speaking low, so that the other occupants of the boat should not hear him, "Mary and Downton?"

"No," said Will, "Mary and Angus. I wonder what they see in her."

They were bound for a picknicking resort up the river, Mrs Meredith, Mary and Sir Clement in the punt, and the others in the boat. If Rob was engaged, he took it gloomily. He sat in the stern with Mr Meredith, while Nell hid herself away beneath a many-colored umbrella in the prow; and when he steered the boat into a gondola, he only said, vacantly, to its occupants, "It is nothing at all," as if they had run into him. Nell's father said something about not liking the appearance of the sky, and Rob looked at him earnestly for such a length of time before replying that Mr Meredith was taken aback. At times the punt came alongside, and Mary addressed every one in the boat except Rob. The only person in the punt whom Rob never looked at was Mary. Dick watched them uneasily, and noticed that once, when Mary nearly followed her pole into the water, Rob, who seemed to be looking in the opposite direction, was the first to see what had happened. Then Dick pulled so savagely that he turned the boat round.

That morning at breakfast in his chambers Rob had no thought of spending the day on the river. He had to be at the "Wire" office at ten o'clock in the evening, and during the day he meant to finish one of the many articles which he still wrote for other journals that would seldom take them.

The knowledge that Sir Clement Downton had been to Moseley disquieted him, chiefly because Mary Abinger had said nothing about it. Having given himself fifty reasons for her reticence, he pushed them from him, and vowed wearily that he would go to the house-boat no more.

Then Dick walked in to suggest that they might skip out in the train a subtle guess about Sir Clement that he intended asking Mary, but on reaching the plank he saw her feeding the swans, with the baronet by her side. Rob felt like a conjurer whose trick had not worked properly. Giving himself just half a minute to reflect that it was all over, he affected the coldly courteous, and smiled in a way that was meant to be heart-rending. Mary did not mind that, but it annoyed her to see the hand of his necktie slipping over his collar.

Paine's Celery Compound Proves a Wondrous Blessing.

Mrs Parr Says:
"After the First Dose I Felt New Hope and New Life Coming."

Nervous Prostration, Mental Depression, and Excruciating Sufferings Are Banished.

PAINE'S CELERY COMPOUND THE GREAT LIFE BUILDER AND VITALIZER.

WELLS & RICHARDSON CO.,
DEAR SIR:—For several years I have had weak nerves, and was gradually running down, and last March I was prostrated with nervous debility. My sufferings were excruciating in the extreme; I really thought there never was another who suffered quite as much with mental depression and weak nerves.

This lasted about three months, and I was taking doctors' medicine continually, but was getting worse instead of better.

One day, while feeling quite discouraged and wondering if I was ever to get out of my dreadful state, a dear friend said to me, "I wish you would try Paine's Celery Compound." As I had intended to try it I acted upon her advice and started using it the very same day, and from the first dose I felt new hope and new life coming. I continued using it, and am still taking it once in a while, always asking God's blessing on each bottle. I am very much improved, and cannot say too much in favor of the medicine, and would recommend it to all suffering from nervous prostration and mental depression.

Years faithfully,
L. E. PARR, Crystal City, Man.

Notes of a Sermon

PREACHED BY REV. HUGH R. HATCH,
M. A., OF NEWTON CENTER, MASS.,
IN THE BAPTIST CHURCH, WOLFVILLE, SUNDAY MORNING, FEB. 13TH.

(Reported for the Acadian by Rev. D. O. Parker.)

Text and Theme—the Vision of Isaiah.—Isa. 6: 1-8.

Isaiah was the most brilliant of the kings who had reigned on David's throne since the time of Solomon, but his brilliant career ended in gloom; and in withering blight his life was snuffed out. Among the young men of Uziah's capital, and standing in close relation to the court life, was Isaiah ben-Amos. It is a significant fact that the call to be a prophet came to Isaiah in the year that Uziah died. Strange date surely for one's call to be a prophet, unless there is some connection between the two events. Possibly there was some such significance as the death of some friend or loved one may have held to our own turning towards God. In the year that mother, or father, or a sister, or a brother, or a friend has died God has lifted our thoughts unto himself and to the here-land, and has given us a vision of the supernatural full of quickening power for our life. So we may imagine that the death of Uziah furnished for his young countryer the occasion for deep meditation, if not bitter grief, in the midst of which God flashed into his heart this vision which made him a prophet.

I. It is a vision of God's sovereignty. Isaiah's mind is turned from the earthly king to the Eternal Sovereign, from David's throne to the throne on high, from the pageantry of the earthly court to the dazzling splendor of the court of the Heavenly King. Judah's brilliant king is dead—dead, smitten of leprosy, the plague of God—and his small territory lies in the line of march of the great conqueror from beyond the Euphrates. But to Isaiah's devout spirit comes a vision of Him in whose hand is all the earth, and whose glory cannot be manifested in the world.

The Christian heart to-day needs a vision of the Eternal in his sovereignty and majesty. We need to recognize the overlordship of the Most High. Good men die and we think their places can not be filled. But good men have multiplied themselves many fold and consequently have projected themselves into far-off future scenes; so that the words of Christ to his disciples, "greater works than these shall ye do," are in a very large sense true of them and their disciples. Jehovah is a God of infinite resources, and the progress of his kingdom does not depend upon any one man, or any one group of men. We need a vision of Jehovah's sovereign lordship, especially when we think of the power of sin, the unworthiness of excellent men and the weakness of mortal strength. Doubt, scepticism, vice, crime abound, we know; but this, too, we know "the battle is the Lord's," and the vision of God's sovereignty brings hope and strength to those to whom it comes.

II. It is a vision of God's holiness. Before that holiness the seraphs veil their feet and their faces, and the vision of God's sovereignty brings hope and strength to those to whom it comes.

III. It is a vision of God's purity. In contrast with God's purity Isaiah sees how black his own sins are, and how small and mean is his accomplishment in righteousness.

Sometimes we flatter ourselves on our goodness. We have done a kind act, or controlled our temper. Possibly some may think they are living a holy life, and there is much of this self-gratulation in the heart of each one of us—but, like Isaiah, we need only to look into the unfathomable depths of infinite goodness in order to see the true likeness of our little self, and to cry out, "Woe is me, for I am unclean." As God flashes into our heart some realization of his purity, how must our soul shriek within us and in utter humility exclaim, "Unclean, unclean!" God, however, shows us himself that we may know the true measure of our self, and may understand the is and the ought to be.

III. It is a vision of God's love.

purifying love. Isaiah desired fellowship with God. Uncleaness of heart is the bar to that fellowship. Accordingly in symbol Isaiah's iniquity is purged, his heart renewed.

We, too, need the touch of God's redeeming, purifying love upon our lips, in our hearts. When we think of the words, the thoughts, the ambitions that somehow are making character for us, must we not hide our faces and cry, "Unclean, unclean! O God, cleanse us, save us."

IV. Lastly, notice the result of this vision upon Isaiah's life—It makes him God's messenger to men. Through it Isaiah realizes that God himself is the standard for man, and that God demands of man likeness, to himself. Isaiah understands not only his own uncleaness, but also the iniquity of his fellow countrymen. They need God's purifying. They should be brought in touch with Jehovah. Accordingly, when he hears the voice of God saying, "Whom shall I send and who will go for us?" his heart quickly responds, "Here am I; send me."

The vision brings the man and duty together.

This vision is repeated in Christian experience. In some form it comes to those who are seeking to know God and his will, and brings the seeker for God and the needs of the world close together. He, too, hears "Whom shall I send and who will go for us?" and to the call his heart replies, "Here I am, Lord, send me."

Let us, then, pray for a vision of the Eternal—pray that it come to uplift us, to convict us of sin, to assure us of God's mercy, and, last of all, to make us messengers of God's grace to our families, to our neighbors, to our community and to the world. Let us remember

"the good we all may do While the days are going by,"

and, in response to the call of God for helpers to minister to the needs of suffering men, let us consecrate ourselves this day unto God with the cry of his servant of old, "Here am I; send me."

A writer in a London newspaper hears an interesting instance of the good nature of J. M. Barrie. Having made his literary fortune out of "Thru the Keyhole" he proposes in a small way to pay back the debt by bringing over, on an excursion to London, as many local villagers as possible, so that they may see the metropolis and at the same time obtain glimpses of his play, "The Little Minister," which is still running to crowded houses at the Haymarket. One of the actors in the present cast of the play was, it is said, born in Thruma, and several of his fellow Thespians have a strain of Scotch blood in them.

THE ACADIAN.

WOLFVILLE, N. S., FEB. 25, 1898.

Editorial Notes.

In the death of Frances E. Willard the Women's Christian Temperance Union loses its general. She was one of the greatest women of this or any other age; remarkable alike as a leader, lecturer, teacher, writer and organizer and to her wonderful personality and clever, skillful management is due much of the success of the great body she was so long identified with.

It is surprising that our citizens manifest so little interest in the affairs of the town, as evidenced by the very small number who attend the regular meetings of the council. These meetings are open to all and the citizens should attend and see how the business is transacted. Moreover the meetings are often quite interesting and visitors would enjoy the discussions that take place on matters pertaining to the welfare of the town.

A project is on foot to establish a packing establishment in this county. It appears that a wealthy firm in Ireland has offered to assist to a considerable extent in the establishment of such an industry here. There is no doubt but that an undertaking of this kind would be greatly to the advantage of our farmers, and Kings being essentially a farming county, our people are naturally deeply interested in whatever pertains to the advancement of this class of industry.

The annual meeting of the Canadian Press Association will be held in Ottawa, March 10-11. Among the important matters to be considered will be the postage question, insolvency legislation, and the visit of British journalists to Canada. Frank A. Muzey, who has been without doubt the most successful modern publisher, will deliver an address on and discuss the "Elements of Success in Newspaper Publishing." It is hoped that one or two of the following representatives of the British Institute of Journalists will be present: Lord Glenesk (London Morning Post), Sir Hugh G. Reid, M. P., J. M. Macdon, M. P., and Sir Edward Russell. The dinner will take place as usual, when a number of important speeches will be made.

On the last page of the financial report of the town, published last week, appears the following item: "W. J. Balcom, horse hire for criminals, $14.00." While we have no wish to question the fairness of the charge, we think the item requires a little explanation. To the careless reader it would naturally appear that our civic rulers out of the goodness of their hearts had been pleased to appropriate a small amount of the funds entrusted to them for the purpose of furnishing Mr. Balcom's nobby turnout for the recreation of those who have transgressed against the laws of our land. Such, however, we believe to be not in accord with the facts. The money was expended in a laudable endeavor on the part of our town government to bring these gentry into the hands of the law that a just punishment might be meted out to them. The teams were, we understand, for the use of the officers of the law and not the criminals. We make this explanation in order that a correct understanding as to the meaning of the item may be had by the readers.

Missionary Meeting.

The missionary meeting held in the Methodist church of this town on Sunday evening last was a most interesting and successful one. The church was well filled. The meeting was under the auspices of the Woman's Missionary Auxiliary and was presided over by Mrs. Hemmings. After prayer by Rev. Mr. Ainsley and reading of Scripture by Mrs. Hale, an interesting paper on India was presented by Mrs. Hutchinson, who was attired in the costume of an Indian woman. Appropriate readings were given by Mrs. C. M. Vaughn, Mrs. E. G. Bishop and Miss Hazel Woodman, all of which were well received. An address was given by Mrs. Whiston, of Halifax, on the work of the society. Music was rendered by the choir and members of the Mission Band, a quartette of the Band being especially enjoyable. A pleasing feature of the evening was an exercise by members of the Mission Band, conducted by the president, Mrs. F. W. Woodman. At the close the pastor, Rev. Mr. Hale, gave a short address.

If you have not seen the ad. in another column of the wonderful "Hot Air and Vapor Bath Cabinet," look it up without delay. Mr. J. E. Albro, the agent, has a list at his office of hundreds of Halifax and St. John ladies and gentlemen who are using this cabinet. Several attempts have been made in Halifax to establish a regular Turkish Bath plant, but the advent of the Vapor Bath Cabinet has put a damper on the enterprise, as any one can now have a Turkish Bath at home, and at a very nominal cost. The cabinet takes up no room when not in use, being applied to the back of the ordinary wood bottom chair by a clamp and standing up automatically against the wall. The seating apparatus is most unique.

The N. S. F. G. Association and Wm. Young.

"There is no terror, Cassius, in your threats; For I am armed so strong in honesty, That they pass by me as the idle wind, Which I respect not."

To the Editor of the ACADIAN.

The fruit growers' friend, Wm. Young, is still pounding away at sundry officials of the F. G. Association, (see ACADIAN and Western Chronicle); and lest some person as guileless as himself, may, from his very persistence, be inclined to believe there is something wrong, I will ask you for space to make a short statement.

First, in regard to the secretary. Mr. Young has stated in public and in the press that the subscriptions received at the annual meeting for 1896, were not paid to the treasurer that year, and perhaps never. That meeting closed at 11 o'clock, p. m., on the 22nd of Jan. Before 10 o'clock on the morning of the 23d of Jan., 1896, I had paid Treasurer Munro $150, which included not only every dollar I had received on that date, but a few dollars more, as I found when I had time to check up the subscription list (see Report for 1897, page 6). From this time till Jan. 1, 1897, I received $18, which appears in the treasurer's report for this year. In 1897 I received $33 50, which was duly paid the treasurer; and during the late meeting, $90, which I paid in some days since, and will appear in Report for 1898. Enough said. If Mr. Young has any sense of what goes to make up a gentleman, he will certainly apologize to me for his dirty insinuations and misrepresentation.

Again, at the Provincial Exhibition in 1894, President Bigelow received a grant of $50, towards making an artistic exhibit. The affair was carried out and cost $100. Mr. Bigelow paid the balance from his own purse and it cost the association nothing. In 1897, $125 was granted and the show cost $300. Mr. E. said to me "I will pay the difference, the association funds shall not be drawn on." Further, during the six years I have been connected with the association, Mr. Bigelow has travelled the length and breadth of the province in the association's interests, and to my certain knowledge has not made a charge of one dollar for expenses. In addition he made a subscription of $50 to the Horticultural School, and his purse and time have been drawn on in various other ways. This is the record of a man whom Wm. Young throws mud at.

Mr. Young wants to know if R. W. Starr got $5.00 a day and expenses at the exhibition last fall. I do not know; it's none of my business, ditto Young. I would further add that all members of the executive committee, during my experience in the association have given much time and ability to the work of the association and Horticultural School, and have not thought of charging for any expenses. The secretary is the only paid official in the association, throw all the mud you like at him, but in the name of common decency do not attempt to berate men who have given time, money and influence without stint to build up and sustain the institution, which is for the common good of all our fruit growers.

Thanking you, Mr. Editor, for your courtesy.

S. C. PARKER.

To the Editor of the ACADIAN.

To enable the public to fully appreciate the job at my expense which Wm. Young perpetrated in his letter published in your last issue, they should know what he fully understood, that before I could possibly pocket the $125 referred to I had to pay from that same pocket $200 according to terms of award on the prize list, as follows: "Sec. 48. To the N. S. F. G. A. for an artistically displayed exhibit of fruits, flowers, plants, vegetables, etc., provided $200 is expended $125."

My offence seems to be that I did not ask the Association to pay me $75. I have had the honor of being unanimously elected President for five years, and have done all in my power to promote the best interests of the Association and the fruit industry of our Province. I have paid all my expenses and spent more time and money than a grateful public will ever know, and have never presented a bill to the Association for payment and do not propose to do so in this case, and when the Association requires money to carry on its work they know my contribution is ready.

I now find myself, much against my inclination, unanimously elected President for another year. I also find Mr. Young elected a member of the executive committee, and with his wealth and ability we expect him to be a power factor in promoting its best interests, as he is now responsible for its success, and I intend to use his pocket to defray the expenses of this year's exhibit instead of my own.

In addition to a better exhibit than we staged last year I intend to select specimens of all the fruits and berries grown in N. S. of commercial value and have them preserved in acid in suitable exhibition glass jars, to be shown first at Halifax and then sent to Colonial Exhibition, London, for a permanent exhibit, for our shame we must confess that N. S. is the only fruit producing colony in the Empire which has not a permanent exhibit in London.

There never was a time in the eventful 34 years' history of this Association when there were so many vitally important measures affecting the fruit industry of this country requiring the united and urgent action of its officers and members, and I propose that we cease fruit-finding and get to business.

To the Editor of the Acadian. I have read with interest the controversy between Mr. T. H. Parker and Mr. Wm. Young concerning the F. G. A. I note with surprise the statement of Mr. Young that "no politics and no grists" has been the policy of the association in the past.

Was it to perpetuate that policy that he nominated Mr. Peter Innes for president in place of Mr. Bigelow? What would have been the political complexion of the association if Mr. Young had been elected secretary?

FRUIT GROWER.

A Visitor's Impression.

In the Maine Farmer of the 17th inst. appears an extended report of the "Maine State Pomological Society." The report of the secretary, Mr. D. H. Knowlton, is a most interesting one. Mr. Knowlton was a judge in the fruit department at the Provincial exhibition at Halifax last autumn, and under the head of "Among Our Neighbors," has the following to say of his visit to our Province:

Last fall your Secretary was invited to act as judge of fruit at the Provincial Exhibition of Nova Scotia. No sooner was your Secretary well established at his hotel than he found himself among the most cordial of people, especially the members of the Nova Scotia Fruit Growers' Association, who were unremitting in their efforts to make my stay among them pleasant. This association, if one may judge from appearances, is an organization created for work in the interests of the fruit growers of that province. The cordial relations existing between the organization and the general exhibition authorities were noticeable every hand. The new horticultural building, a model in its way, was made in accordance with their wishes, and the prominence given to the place may be inferred when it is stated that in this hall were held the formal reception, given the Governor General and his wife, and Sir Wilfrid Laurier, the Canadian Prime Minister. There was the best of reasons for selecting this place, for the Nova Scotia Fruit Growers' Association had made it the most attractive place upon the entire grounds. The exhibition was delayed several weeks to please the fruit growers, "because," as the General Manager assured me, "we could not afford to neglect this important industry in our province." Nova Scotia is Maine's nearest rival in growing fruits. In 1896, it is estimated that the province produced 500,000 barrels of apples, nearly all of which were sent to the foreign markets. Halifax is some twenty-four hours nearer the market than either Boston or Portland. It is worth something for us to know of what importance the industry is regarded there, because it sometimes appears as if the industry in Maine were under estimated by the public. They are discussing the same fruit-problems that we are, and at their winter meeting, last month, the disposition of their fruits was given a very conspicuous place.

Perhaps you may expect something regarding the exhibition itself, and I only wish I had the time to speak in detail. There were over 2500 plates on the table, and some 20 or more barrels of fruit for examination, besides the canned goods and nursery stock. This will give you some idea of the extent of the exhibition in fruit, and this was supplemented by a large exhibit of plants and flowers, so that the whole exhibit was made very attractive. The fruit in quality was much better than our Maine fruit last year. It was slightly affected by scab, but very little by insects. There were no traces of the terypta pomonella in any of the fruit examined, and I was assured they had seen none there. The varieties were about the same as grown in Maine, though greater prominence was given to the Gravonstele, Ribston Pippin, Benhiesia Pippin, Fallwater, Golden Russet, Nonpareil and Tompkins, than here. The fruit growers there have the object of fruit growing clearly in mind, and they are intelligently fighting the enemies of fruit culture, studying all the conditions of success known, and investigating for themselves along all lines that will aid in developing the industry which they represent.

Though several varieties were inferior, the fruit growers there assured me it was an off year and the fruit poor.

Canning vs. Junior Victorias.

On Monday evening the Junior Victorias drove over to Canning to play a game of Hockey with the team in that town.

To speak the truth the Vics did not seem to be in it, and Canning had things much her own way from the first.

After the game the visitors were escorted to the Waverley House where refreshments were served to all except the fat man.

When speeches and songs had carried as far into the night, (that is, far for Wolfville boys) thoughts of home beyond miles of semi-snowless roads grew stronger, and in spite of many protests on account of the early (7) hour, we cracked our whips and away we went with the memory, to use the stereotyped expression, that "a pleasant time was had."

Mr. Robert Shaw, of Avonport, was in town on Monday. Mr. Shaw is one of the pioneers in the brickmaking industry in Nova Scotia, having been thirty years engaged in the business at Hantsport, Pictou and Avonport.

About ten years ago he made a trip among the leading yards of Canada and New England, and as a result of his observations he ever since has made his bricks by hand.

By the aid of experience and energy he has been able to compete successfully with other yards where machinery has been used.

His business, however, has grown till he has found it necessary to put in an engine and striking machine.

He is now in Toronto purchasing machinery to equip his brick yard in the best and most approved manner.
