When the Dumb Speak.

By RUTH CAMERON.

Every now and then some letter friend urges me to say something about cruelty to animals. Hitherto I haven't said much on that subject. Not because it isn't very close to my heart but because the duty of being kind to dumb creatures seemed to me so obvious that to say anything about it was superfluous.

And yet perhaps this duty may be one of the many obligations which people neglect, not because they are deliberately cruel, but simply because they grow careless or hardened. The summer time approaches, and with it the annual tragedy of the poor little house cat turned out to shift for itself while its owners take their summer vacation. Everywhere we see the pathetic creatures eagerly trying to find a morsel of food in the ash can, chased by dogs, skulking about alleys. What must they think of it all? They who were once petted and fed and loved. Loved? No, I take that back. No one who really loved an animal could ever impose such suffering on it. A mistress who had the least real affection for her cat, if it were not possible for her to take it with her or find it a home, would buy a little chloroform and put the cat gently and painlessly to sleep.

Many people board their cats while they are away, in cat homes. In places where there is no such asylum, I wonder why it would not pay some stay-at-home lady to advertise in the local papers that she would shelter and feed cats during the summer for some such moderate price as fifty cents a week.

I have spoken chiefly about cats because this is the time of year they particularly need to have a word spoken for them, not because they are the chief sufferers from our brutality and carelessness.

The look of patient suffering in an ill-used horse's eyes, the hopeless droop of his head, I think touch me more than any of the appeals our dumb friends make. They say you can tell by the look in a horse's eyes if he is well treated or not, and I will believe it. We call these creatures dumb, and dumb they are, so far as vocal speech, but the starved alley cat's gaunt body, the dying horse's humid eye, utter cries to Heaven and to the heart of merciful man as piercing and unforgettable as any voice that ever spoke.

I wanted to speak of many other abuses, such as carelessness about leaving water for dogs in summer, and the wicked way in which hens are sent to the market, crowded so close that they cannot move at all and often left without water. I know not how long. Once I asked a market man to put a drink of water in the coop. He did it willingly; he had been careless, not intentionally cruel. And to see those poor creatures frantically dip into the water must have been a lesson to him.

Did you ever suffer with thirst? Were you ever hungry? Were you ever so tired that you felt you could not go another step? Then have mercy on all these poor creatures. Help them in any way you can whether it be to ask a market man to put some water in the coop for his hens, or to report the owner of an abused horse, or put out a dish of water for thirsty dogs in summer, or feed the birds in winter or to work for humane laws.

I can't help thinking that "a cup of cold water" and "inasmuch as ye did it unto the least" applies to God's dumb creatures as well as those whom he has made more able to look after themselves.

Ruth Cameron

Ponderous Personages

By GEORGE FITCH.

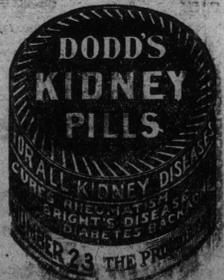

Author of "At Good Old St. John's." Cotton Mather was born in Boston in 1683 and was graduated from Harvard College at the age of 15. At the age of 18 he was assistant pastor of his father's Congregational Church and at 25 was minister of the largest congregation in New England, and was giving advice to governors, lawyers and such odd kings as applied for it.

It will thus be seen that Cotton Mather was a very learned man. In fact, he knew more Greek and Latin than most college professors and was one of the best writers in America. His life is used by posterity not to illustrate the great value of learning, but to prove how distantly related learning and wisdom may be, for this same Cotton Mather, who was so stuffed with education that his brow protruded like the breast of a pouter-pigeon, was the man who started the witchcraft persecutions in Salem in 1692.

Mather was at that time twenty-nine years old and could out-quote anyone in the colonies in literature and religion. But he believed in witches, and started out to hang those which afflicted Salem. If he had not been so learned it would not have been so serious. As it was, his college diploma proved fatal to a number of innocent people. A little learning is a dangerous thing, but not half as serious as a large wad of badly digested information.

Later on Cotton Mather sobered up spiritually and regretted his crusade against witches very much indeed. However, the alleged witches remained dead.

Mather came near to being elected president of Harvard College in 1707, but the Liberals of that time were too strong and he was defeated. Later on he persuaded Elihu Yale of New Haven to start a college. This was the beginning of Yale College, and every time Yale has beaten Harvard in football since then Cotton Mather has chuckled softly in his tomb.

ATLANTA, Ga., May 8. Two were killed in Mississippi, a number injured and thousands of dollars damage done to growing crops by storms which swept the Southern States.

LONDON, May 8. Imposing ceremonies, which were witnessed by King George, Queen Mary and many other notables, marked the funeral of the Duke of Argyll to-day. The services were conducted in Westminster Abbey, which was thronged by members of Parliament, envoys from the diplomatic corps, and prominent persons from the ranks of private life. Ambassador and Mrs. Page were among those present.

SYDNEY, May 8. Frank W. Haynes was hanged at 5.41 this afternoon, for the murder of B. S. Atkinson, August 15th last. The prisoner walked to the scaffold unaided. Everything connected with the hanging passed off smoothly. Haynes made a full written confession of the crime, in the presence of Jailer Carn and Captain Fullerton. This document was handed over to the High Sheriff, and will remain in possession of the Crown. Officials say it will not be made public at any time.

TORREON, May 8. Interviewed to-day, General Villa, commander-in-chief of the Constitutional army said that the United States embargo on the exportation of arms was prolonging the struggle uselessly. Mexico should be pacified, he said, and we cannot gain this, and quickly, while we suffer from lack of ammunition. The sooner we can secure the arms and ammunition we need the sooner the country will be pacified. Villa declared that it would be the height of folly for the United States and Mexico to come to blows over a man like Huerta. It seems to me, he added, that the entire civilized world would laugh if this should come to pass.

MEXICO CITY, May 8. The Acting Minister of Foreign Relations has complained to the South American mediators of American troops landing at Vera Cruz, and of other military preparations in progress here, thus breaking the armistice. In reply the mediators wired that they will make representations to President Wilson regarding the matter. The Foreign office has issued a statement thanking the mediators. It says that the Mexican Government, in view of the mediators' attitude in the case of Carranza's refusal to suspend hostilities, and the new landing of American troops of war and material at Vera Cruz, is much obliged for the precedence and good will shown by the mediators.

Divorced Life

Helen Hessong Fuessele

Pawning Her Marriage Ring

The problem of divorce is most striking and significant among the great middle class. The woman of wealth who resorts to separation doesn't find herself confronted by the dire problem of self-support. She may bide her time and marry again, if she so prefers, and may fill the embarrassing interim with travel to foreign lands.

The very poor rarely seek divorce. Here poverty prompts marriage primarily for economic reasons, and the ever-present gnawing of the wolf at the door does not give rise to so-called temperamental antagonism. Remaining married is the poor woman's sole refuge from the grinding toil of the factory or shop. She accepts with stoic resignation whatever abuse her husband sees fit to visit upon her, and, if religious sentiment is in her blood, she prays for strength to endure and awaits her reward in heaven.

But in the middle class one beholds the storm center of domestic conflict, and its most austere consequences. Here exist neither the ease of divorce which obtains among the wealthy, nor the practical impossibility of it that obtains among the poverty-stricken. Its records of alimony are rarely commensurate with the comfort the divorce was accustomed to under her husband's roof. She must usually find a job, and, even if she prefers the job of a second marriage, she is apt to find more prejudice against a divorcee who is a candidate for marriage, than is present among those who are so wealthy that their social position overrides popular prejudice.

The events which followed upon the heels of Marian's divorce reveal, in a sense, a cross section of the trend of affairs in the lives of countless American divorcees of the middle class. The stage has called and will continue to call to innumerable young women who have dissolved the bonds of marriage, and few there are who do not sooner or later fall prey to the hawk of the Rialto.

Marian was now down to her last few dollars. She had paid the bulk of her brother's remittance for the glittering generalities and suave platitudes of Walter Hartmann, whose studio had seen a multitude of similar force-tragedies staged at the expense of the unwary.

She did not know whether to turn or what to do. Her bitter experience with the Eclipse Vaudeville Circuit had put a temporary dent into her theatrical ambitions. In woful need ready money, she knew she could no longer temporize. Her landlady belonged to the tribe which exacts payment in advance, and Marian was in no mood to haggle with her.

She took from the drawer of her dresser a little box which held her marriage ring. She had hated the sight of it ever since her separation from Frank, and she now resolved to be rid of it.

That evening she took it to a pawn shop, and after twenty minutes' argument with the professional haggler behind the counter, keen to read the intrinsic value to him of the woes of all luckless comers, she surrendered the band of gold for a paltry two dollars and a quarter. It was the first time she had ever entered a pawn-brokers', and a wave of shame went through her as she hurried away, lest any of her acquaintances might observe whence she came.

TRIMMING TREES.

"If you had the least symptom of energy," exclaimed Mrs. Turnover, "you would trim those dead branches from the trees around the house. Mrs. Whinnerty was here to-day and she says the trees will die if those dead branches are not removed. Her husband trimmed their trees early in the spring, and didn't have to be coaxed or argued with, but he doesn't put in all his time reading silly magazines and novels."

"Mr. Whinnerty is a man I have long admired," said Turnover. "The aggressive energy of that man is most astonishing. In view of which it is rather surprising that his wife has to take in plain and fancy sewing to help pay the butcher and baker and candlestick maker. Every time I go past her house I see her seated at the window sewing, and she looks rather weary and bored. One would think that a woman with such an exemplary husband would leave her sewing machine every few minutes in order to turn a few handspins, from sheer happiness."

"You must admit, my dear, that, with all my fatal blemishes of character, I provide all that is needed to keep family in comfort, and you don't have to make overalls, or wash shirts, or take in floors to scrub, in order to keep the treasury from going bankrupt."

"My leisure hours I devote to reading detective stories and other uplifting fiction. Mr. Whinnerty, when he is not manicuring shade trees, spends most of his time arguing political questions with other remarkable men of inexhaustible energy, and arguments of that sort usually lead to unpleasantness. Only last evening I walked home with Mr. Whinnerty, and he had a black eye, and his nose was pushed over to one side, and three of his front teeth were loose. I saw him meet his wife in front of his house, and when she viewed his countenance she didn't seem to be overjoyed. In fact, she rebuked him in the bitterest terms, and told him he wasn't worth the powder that would blow him to Hannibal, Mo."

"It seems strange that women are so unappreciative where husbands are concerned. In Mrs. Whinnerty we see a woman who is singularly blessed. She has a husband who goes out and trims the trees promptly and cheerfully, without argument or urging. What more can any reasonable woman ask? Yet, Mrs. Whinnerty seems to think it would be a good thing for the earth if her husband would fall off it."

"You are wrong, however, my beloved, in assuming that indolence prevented me from trimming the trees. I am passionately fond of such work. I know of nothing more exhilarating than to climb a tree with a bucksaw in one hand and an axe in the other. In the topmost branches of a lordly sycamore one has a magnificent view, and can breathe the pure air of freedom undefiled by city smoke. If I were a single man I'd spend all my time in the treetops, and when the wind blew my cradle would rock."

"But I have a family to think of. I cannot wantonly imperil my life, which is valuable from a commercial standpoint, if from no other. Life in the tree-tops is dangerous, my pet, I once had a dear friend, Algernon Snifter by name who had a mania for trimming trees. His beautiful young bride begged him to desist, as a fortune teller told her that he would perish by falling from a great height, but he laughed her fears to scorn."

"One evening he took his implements and started to climb a huge tree he had already trimmed several times, and his wife's pleading were in vain. He climbed a mile high, then two miles, then three, and just as he was approaching the top of the tree a branch broke under his foot, and we stood there for ten minutes watching him fall. We had to dig him out of the ground, and I made up my mind right there that I'd never break the heart of a loving wife in that particular manner."

"How considerate you are!" sneered Mrs. Turnover.

Where Responsibility Lies.

No matter how large, or how small, a business may be, nobody can deny that its Office is the nerve centre of the firm. Every transaction, important or trivial, must be recorded at the Office. An order is received at the Office, its history is recorded at the Office, and finally payment is received at the Office. If the Office makes an error the firm stands the loss. That's why you must be sure that your office is modernly and dependably equipped for the care of all important papers. To do this effectively you need the up-to-date equipment of the "GLOBE-WERNICKE CO." When sixty offices in St. John's have found this necessity this equipment can surely be of use to you. JOHN KIELLY.

There died at Holyrood on Thursday, John Kielly, an old and respected resident of the South Side. He had been ailing for the past winter and his death was not unexpected. The deceased was born at Holyrood sixty-eight years ago and was possessed of very charitable and pious characteristics. From early boyhood days he prosecuted the Labrador fishery until within a few years ago he abandoned it and went into farming. He was a member of the Star of the Sea Association since its inception, and attended all its meetings and took a lively interest in its doings. He was for several years chairman of the South Side Cemetery Committee, and performed the duties of his office diligently and faithfully. His funeral took place on Saturday morning, the members of the Star of the Sea Association taking part as a body. After Requiem Mass at the Church of the Holy Cross, the Rev. W. P. Finn, P.P., officiating, the funeral procession proceeded to the South Side Cemetery where the remains of a good citizen, pious Catholic and an honored member of Society were interred. The deceased has three sons, James, John, and Phillip, who fill positions of trust and responsibility in the United States. To them and to his sorrowing wife and daughter the Telegram extends its sympathy.

ICE BOUND.—The R.M.S. Sardinian now 9 days out from Philadelphia, has not yet arrived and will not be able to make port until the ice moves off.

GOEY TOEY FISHING.—About 50 young men left by the Stephano yesterday for New York, whence they will engage at goey toey fishing during the coming season.

VESSELS DETAINED.—Several vessels are now due here from Barbados with cargoes of molasses, and are likely detained off the coast by the ice blockade.

BOYS UNLOAD STEAMER.—Owing to a meeting of Longshoremen, last night, no men could be had to discharge the s.s. Digby, and boys had to be engaged to do the work.

DANGEROUS PRACTICE.—Boys are seen daily trouting on the ice of Quidi Vidi Lake. We would advise them to stop this dangerous practice as the ice is honeycombed and an accident may occur.

ALLAN SHIPS.—The R.M.S. Mongolian is now a week out from Liverpool, but like the Sardinian and Pomoranian, it is not unlikely she will reach port for another day or two, owing to ice conditions.

POLICE RESIGNING.—We learn that a half dozen policemen have sent in their resignations and will look for more remunerative employment. Some of them will go to Grand Falls and others will take part in the cod-fishery.

VESSEL REFUSES TOW.—The Fogota returned to port at 7.30 p.m. yesterday, having been out to the schooner, reported in the ice at Cape Spear, as referred to in yesterday's Telegram. The schooner proved to be the Annie S. Warren bound here from Barbados with a cargo of molasses. The Fogota offered to tow the vessel to port, but the offer was not accepted, as the captain considered his vessel was in no danger.

RAFTING ICE DAMAGES PIER.—Quite recently a large quantity of rafting ice damaged the Reid Co.'s pier at Clarendville, and repairs to the same will entail a considerable amount of time and expense. Nearly two hundred feet of the breastwork of the pier was carried away, and a shed that was built on the wharf was thrown out of position. A number of men are now employed making repairs, which will likely be completed towards the end of next week.

More Fires.
Fires provoke immediate sympathy for the sufferers and also thankfulness for personal escape. Another thought should be whether one is personally and sufficiently protected? An insurance policy with Liberty Johnson would provide for you the desired security and at small expense. Have you enough insurance?

In Memoriam.

Mrs. Grace Mullooney died at Holyrood last week. Her demise was rather sudden, being in fairly good health the day before. In her dying moments she had the consolation of having the priest at her bedside. Her funeral which was well attended from all parts of the parish, took place from her late home on Friday, to the Church of Holy Cross, where High Mass of Requiem was chanted for the repose of her soul by Rev. Fr. Finn, P.P., thence to the central cemetery where the remains of a good and pious woman were laid to rest. Deceased leaves behind her to mourn, a sorrowing husband and large family, including four nuns—one in Indiana, U.S.A., two in Carbonar Convent and one in St. Jacques, Margaret at home, Mrs. Foley, St. John's, and Richard, engineer at Grand Falls, to all of whom we extend our deep sympathy. Requiescat in pace. Amen.

OUR STAPLE.

To-day we have before us the official report of the speech of Mr. Hickman on our staple industry. Mr. Hickman develops certain ideas which have stood the test of the knowledge and experience he has gained from a life time of handling and marketing fish. He is at one with the general feeling as to the need of grappling with the problem of an improved cure of our staple.

"The matter is now becoming a serious one and something should be done to establish a uniform cull. I agree that the only way in which this can be done is to submit the matter to a committee or a commission who shall take it up from every standpoint and find out what are the necessary measures to be adopted to satisfy both the fishermen and the exporters."

He is of the opinion that it would not work out satisfactorily to have either the Board of Trade or the Marine and Fishery Department in charge of it. "In one case it might resolve itself into a merchants' cull and in the other into a political business. He wants if possible cutters as independent as Judges of the Supreme Court, and he thinks he can approach that position by putting cutters under the control of the Magistrate's Court. For the outports he believes ex-politicians would fill the bill.

We agree with him as to the desirability of finding an independent board of cutters, free from bias and free from politics. The difficulty, however, is a practical one of how to find such a board. The need of a better cull he shows by the difficulty experienced in supplying certain markets. He says we have an experience of that at the present time. "Certain markets want some of our first-class fish, and they are willing to pay a high price for it. We have not got the fish to give them and we cannot supply any other quality except at a low price—too low down in fact."

Mr. Devereaux in the same debate told a story, which is most illuminating. Here it is:

"I bear in mind the year after the crash when the fishermen of Trinity Bay and fishermen generally were asked by the merchants to put up a surperior article. The fish put up in the previous year could not be sold in the Mediterranean for any money and the merchants were told that they could not sell it unless it was better put up. Circulars were sent round the island asking the people to put up their fish in a better way and to be more particular in salting and curing it. In one piece, Selly Cove, thousands of quintals were made in a splendid way, the men even taking off the "black" according to the Norwegian method. The fishermen could not have put up their fish in a better way and when they brought it on to St. John's in the fall they expected very naturally to receive fifty cents or a dollar more than those who did not make it up well, but they did not get it and since that time, in any bay in the colony they (the fishermen) will laugh at you if you suggest that they put it up better because of the way in which the merchants treated the fishermen in that year. What encouragement have the fishermen received ever since to make better fish? None whatever."

Cable News.

Special to Evening Telegram.
ROME, To-day.
Countess Aberdeen yesterday was re-elected President of the International Council of Women.

LONDON, To-day.
The special correspondent of the Daily Express, in a despatch from Belfast, says politicians may talk vaguely at Westminster about honorable settlement and the outside world may think Ulster is about to relapse into peaceful security, but meanwhile General Macready is busy inspecting strategic positions for troops, soundings, who now control, as to their willingness to assist in the execution of the Anti-Home Rule counties, while the citizen army continues its preparation for the launching of an effective striking force. At first sight the situation suggests a truce between the two armies that may be ended at any moment rather than a lasting peace. The despatch further states the correspondent was told that one of the plans put forward, presumably on the authority of the Army Council for crushing Ulster was to surround Belfast with a cordon of troops, while the police made arrests, searched for arms and confiscated documents, but that when the scheme was submitted to the police authorities, they vetoed it as impracticable and held that only troops in large numbers could cope with the Ulster army.

LONDON, To-day.
Although the desire for a settlement of the Irish question is very keen on the part of the leaders of both sides, the attitude of a section of the Diehards was such that leaders are compelled to keep up a certain semblance of determination, in order to satisfy those insurgents. The party of Diehards who waited upon Bonar Law, urging him not to listen to federal proposals merely received the stereotyped answer that their views would receive the best consideration. Many followers of the Opposition, both inside and outside Parliament, are showing resentment at the stereotyped answer that their views will be no settlement by consent except by the absolute exclusion of Ulster. Similarly many supporters of the Government are incensed at the Ministry, because of its refusal to penalize gun-runners.

The Record Benefit at Rossley's.

There was a capacity house at Rossley's last night, and Rossley's can safely say that he does to hand over more money for one performance than any benefit yet given. But what the Rossleys do, they always do well, and when the genial proprietor and his talented wife stepped out, they certainly received an ovation that ought to make the heart of any performer glad. After being before the same public nearly four years, Mr. and Mrs. Rossley are beloved and esteemed by all because the people of St. John's know this is not their first effort to help by a good many. Well to speak of the splendid programme presented: it was the best ever seen. Watron and Molloy set the ball rolling. Then the Rossleys and her Quaker girls were splendid. Quaint, Novel and pretty. Young Harry Noonan in a pretty ballad—then the Rossleys in a little skit. Mrs. Rossley brought down the house in Irish blood. The Carolina girls, the Baby Rabbits, the Rossley boys, Joe and Percy, the clever young fellows that get her all the time. Joe Burkhardt, the rising young comedian can give some of these New York fellows a big start with due respect to the New York fellows. Tommy Levene had the house in roars. Felix Martin and his dainty wife were very good and Felix, of course, came in for a big share of laughs and applause. But to come right down to it, Mrs. Rossley's pantomime girls can't be beat. Their singing was splendid, while Handford and Squires, and the babies Dodd and Kelly—we hope to see more of them. Mrs. Rossley deserves great credit by all St. John's people the way she has trained up the city children, and another good quality about Rossley's they are open handed and generous. Anyone has only to ask help and they are there every time. The same show will be repeated this afternoon for children and at night for those who could not attend last night. Mr. and Mrs. Rossley wishes to thank all those who attended. The money will, when collected in, be handed to the Disaster Fund. Send the children to see the big show.

A SPLENDID DONATION.

The Hand cap.

Oh, youthful guys, if you would rise, your breath you'll never tarnish with pint or quart of any sort of good old coffin varnish. When you are dry you'll shun old rye, and round the hydrant of old; there's naught in town will keep you down like flagons alcoholic. When trade is stale and merchants quail, the grocers and the drapers wait, the clerks who drink the old red ink first get their walking papers. When railways fire the men they hire, and tell them they must travel, the ones who slug the old brown jug are first to hit the gravel. When merchants say, "To raise," the ones who use the dark red booze are last to get promotion. When there's demand throughout the land for husky men and handy, employers say, "Oh, fade away," where'er he goes a million were surrounded the chronic boozier; it's men who pay for work all day, "I'm afraid," when drinkers come to court her; so, youthful lads, improve your ways, and dodge the ale and porter.

Here is a Short Sharp Statement.

IT SHOWS THAT DODD'S KIDNEY PILLS ARE NO FAITH CURE.

Patric Cote had Kidney Disease—He Sent for Dodd's Kidney Pills Just to Try Them—They Made Him Well.

Patric Cote, Gaaspe Co., Que., May 8 (Special).—Patric Cote, well known here, makes the following statement:

For five months I suffered from Kidney Disease. I sent for two boxes of Dodd's Kidney Pills to try them. They made me well.

Mr. Cote's experience is similar to that of scores of others in their neighbourhood. They had Kidney Disease, they tried Dodd's Kidney Pills and they found health. They have proved for themselves that no matter how far advanced the Kidney Disease is, the cure is the same—Dodd's Kidney Pills.

Dodd's Kidney Pills are no faith cure; neither are they any cure-all. Thousands of sufferers have tried them who had little faith in them. They found the cure just the same.

Dodd's Kidney Pills simply cure the kidneys. To be sure you had of them curing Rheumatism, Dropsy, Bright's Disease, Diabetes, Gravel and other diseases, but that is because these are all diseases of the kidneys or caused by sick kidneys. The natural way to cure them is to cure the kidneys. Dodd's Kidney Pills cure the kidneys.

Delights its Patrons.

The Nickel Theatre was largely attended again yesterday afternoon and evening and all were charmed with the excellent show, "The Yagat Cur" is a thrilling war drama in two reels. It is a splendid picture combining war scenes with those of pathetic tenderness and devotion. "Black Diamonds" is a vivid description of life in a coal mine. "He waited" is a dainty film by Lillian Walker and Courtenay Foote. Miss Gardner made another great hit in her popular song "What a Fool I'd be," and Mr. McCarthy the "Garland of old-fashioned wares." This evening the programme will be repeated and as this will be the last chance to see it, we advise all our readers to attend.

Crew of Dredge Taken Ill.

Yesterday, Dr. Campbell was summoned to the crew of the dredge Priestman, as they were all complaining of being very ill, having been seized with violent headache and vomiting. The doctor, upon examination, found the men to be suffering from sewer gas poisoning. A large sewer empties into the cove where the ship is operating, and the fumes of the silt affected the crew who were sleeping on board. One of them named Maloney, was badly affected by the poison, but his condition is not serious, and he will be around again in a few days. The men will in future sleep ashore though they will work there daily, there being no danger because of working in the open air.

Down pleasure's stream, with swelling sails you may be driving rarely, but stop and change your course awhile, gaze at the charming beautiful sights, enhancing these choice elegant costumes and lovely hats at Rodgers.

The present styles of hats call for coquettish curls and puffs of hair about the face.

Joint and Muscle Pains Banished by Nerviline

IT CURES RHEUMATISM.

Thousands of people, chock full of the joy of living—happy, glad, bright people, that Nerviline has cured of their pains, all tell the same wonderful story of its power to drive out the aches and tortures of rheumatism and kindred ills.

"My goodness, but Nerviline is a miracle-worker," writes Mrs. Charlotte Chipman, mother of a well-known family residing at Mount Pleasant. "Last month I was crippled up with sciatica and muscular rheumatism as to be almost unable to do a bit of housework. My joints were so stiff and the muscles so frigidly sore that I even cried at times with the pain. For years we have used Nerviline in our family and I just got busy with this wonderful good old liniment. Lots of rubbing with Nerviline soon relieved my misery and I was in a real short time about my work as usual."

No matter where the ache is, no matter how distressing the pain you can rub it away with Nerviline. For forty years it has been curing lumbago, sciatica, backache, colds, chest trouble and all sorts of winter ills. Keep a large 50c. family size bottle handy and you'll be saved lots of trouble and have smaller doctor bills. Small trial size 25c. at dealers everywhere.

ITCHING DUETS.

Red McGehee says: These one-to-nothing games are fine when pitchers put the loco sign on batters, make 'em breeze; when great big husky knights of swat swing hard and find the ball has shot right by 'em—past their knees.

Or when they do connect, they pop that sure to flop right down in some one's mits. No matter how the slugger try, they can't locate their battin' eye they just can't get the hits.

I like those games—to read about But not to look at when I'm out there rootin' in the stand. That one-two-three stuff may be fine but I'll take sluggin' 'bats for mine—the good old single brand. I don't mean pen-and-ink'nuthin' scores, but six-to-five and five-to-four that zig zag all along. With one or two men on the bags there's always action—no game drags. It livens up the throng.

The argument is all one way. The average fan you'll find to-day goes out to see 'em bat an' run the bases, try to steal. He's like to call it a misdeal unless he gets just what the pitcher gets a bunch of fame who coys a one-to-nothin' game, it shows his boss he's fit. Perhaps I'm kind o' out o' date but when I wander through the gate I wanna see 'em hit.

Plans of houses off Leslie and Gear Streets were referred to Engineer.

Councillor Coaker asked for water and sewerage for Michael Rolls, Field Street. The Mayor said there were no funds available and that the loan that the Government were asked for did not materialize.

Councillor Mullaly asked why the law in relation to the ages of horse drivers was not carried out. Matter was referred to the solicitor.

Councillor Ryan moved that the amounts to arbitrators be paid, as awarded by the taxing master.

Councillor Mullaly objected to the full payment and that it was the duty of the Council to fix the whole amount and not the Supreme Court tax master. He said that the Secretary's services re arbitrations were not extras and made an amendment that the amount approved of by the Tax Master for the Secretary Treasurer be stricken out.

The matter was then dropped at the request of the Mayor until the Solicitor's opinion is obtained.

The meeting closed after the passing of bills, etc.

Another Letter From Pres. McGrath.

Editor Evening Telegram.

Dear Sir:—A very important meeting of the Longshoremen's Protective Union was advertised for last night to consider developments in connection with the new wage schedule. The s.s. Digby having arrived in port the work of discharging cargo was immediately commenced by the Union laborers. It was necessary for the men employed to attend the meeting because of its importance. Imagine the surprise of all when the men were told by a representative of the owners that if they did not work after six o'clock they would not be employed any more. Is this a rational, reasonable line of conduct for same employers of labor to adopt at this juncture? The meeting was as important to the employers as to the men, and to be told under such circumstances that if they did not come back after supper they would get no more employment, savors of the days when the workmen were scourged with the lash, if he dared to lift his head. Where are we and whither tending? Be it said, however, to the credit of the men that they heeded not the threat but attended the meeting. Another instance of the honesty and consistency of employers is that a greater rate of wages than the men are looking for, was offered to others to take their places. What becomes of the argument that the trade cannot stand any increase; this is the answer to it out of their own mouths, as the 'Mail' in last evening's editorial, very properly states: "We never knew the merchants as a body to do anything sensible."

In my letter of yesterday, a typographical error was made. "This work cost twenty-five cents more," it should be five cents more, that is, it costs five cents more to unload a ton of coal to-day than it did when wages were but $1.50 a day.

With your permission, Mr. Editor, I shall on Monday, deal with another phase of this coal business, and prove that it costs no more with some firms to discharge a cargo of coal than it did five years ago.

Yours truly,
JAMES McGRATH,
President L.S.P.U.

Portia Back.

The s.s. Portia, Capt. Connors, arrived back from Western ports at 6.30 this morning. The round trip was made in six days and 20 hours, one of the quickest on record. She brought a full freight and the following passengers: Rev. Fr. Maher; Dr. Fraser, Dr. Smith, R. Matthews, A. Foote, G. Harris, M. Eklund, J. Doran, G. Dixon, E. Hollett, Miss Forsey and 21 second class. People who came on the ship say that a number of vessels at several places on the S.W. coast were ready to sail for the Grand Banks, but are still detained owing to scarcity of bait. For a few days there was a sign of herring in Fortune Bay and a few bankers baited and left the home port. The winter fishery on the Western banks is over and the voyage has been much below an average one, due to the prevalence of ice on the grounds every day, which prevented boats from getting out.

Honor for Mower County Clergyman.

Rev. James B. Thompson, of Rose Creek, has received notice from Hon. O. P. Austin, Secretary, that at a meeting of the Board of Managers held on the 13th of March, on the nomination of a member from one of the Eastern States, he was elected to membership in the National Geographic Society of Washington, D.C. This action was taken because Mr. Thompson was formerly a pioneer missionary in Inland China.—Howe Co., Minn. Transcript, April 8th.

Rev. J. B. Thompson, B.D., is a Newfoundlander, and a son of the late Dr. Henry Thompson, Harbor Grace. At an early age he resolved to enter the Ministry, and took a course in theology at Oberlin College, Ohio. After a few years' he graduated with honors, and offering his services to the American Board of Missions for the work in China, was accepted, and in 1855 sailed for that distant land. For fifteen years he continued his labors, opening new stations, and visiting many towns and villages in Inland China, the inhabitants of which had not previously seen a Christian missionary. He was married at Tientsin to Miss D'Esta Hermit, a missionary, who was also a graduate of Oberlin University. In 1900, the year of the Boxer uprising, she died, and at her request Mr. Thompson, with his two remaining children, returned to America where he has since been pastor of a large Congregational Church at Rose Creek, Minnesota. Mr. Thompson is a brother of Mrs. A. A. Parsons, of this city, and of J. P. Thompson, Esq., J.P. Briggs.

Refuse Night Work.

A special meeting of the Longshoremen's Union was held last night, and was attended by about 600 members. It was decided that no night work of any description be performed by the Union, as matters stand at present; the hours to be from 6 a.m. to 6 p.m. A new tariff is being arranged for overtime, and will be drawn up in a few days; and under these and no other conditions will night work be continued. There was no talk of a strike.

Try Again.

You have, it may be, used ointments, pastes, lotions for Eczema till you begin to get tired of trying things. Well, but you should remember that science is advancing all the time, and that what was not possible yesterday can be accomplished to-day. If you neglect to try Zylex—the newest and best thing that science has yet offered for the relief and cure of Eczema and other annoying and disfiguring skin diseases—you are missing a great opportunity. It may be that it will cure you. It has cured some very bad cases. Price 50c a box. Zylex Soap, 25c a cake. apr 23, 1914

 SCHILLER died 1805, aged 46. The famous German dramatist and poet. He is one of the most sympathetic figures in literature. He is great in his moral earnestness, in his idealism, in his youthful freshness, in his enthusiasm for the cause of art and humanity.

KING GEORGE V. proclaimed 1910.

Days Past—129 To Come—225
 4th Sunday after Easter.
 INDIAN MUTINY, began 1857. There had been a long-standing tradition that the English rule in India should only last one hundred years from the date of Plassey, 1757. The great result of the outbreak, was the transferring of the power of the East India Company to the hands of the Crown.

SIR HENRY STANLEY died 1904, aged 62. Taken from a workhouse and sent as cabin boy to America, he "made good" there as special correspondent for papers. He was sent to find Livingstone in 1871. His "Autobiography" published since his death, is a remarkable work. The dignity of man into your hands is given.
 Oh, keep it well; with you it sinks or lifts itself to heaven.

 A Physical Wreck Cured by the Gailin Treatment.
 A man who had been drinking steadily for 24 years came to the Gailin Institute for treatment. He was a physical wreck and was so extremely nervous that his hands were always shaking. The habit was broken, his nervousness disappeared, his health improved and he was even able to shave himself. He left the Institute a new man, with confidence in himself, and no more desire for alcoholic drinks. The Gailin Institute has effected the cure of many men when their friends thought them incurable. No case is too difficult for this treatment, even the most confirmed drunkards. It is easy to take, has no disagreeable features, leaves no bad after effects. It never fails to cure and the cure is permanent. Every privacy is maintained with private room and nurses in attendance. This is the original three day cure and absolutely reliable. This Institute is under license from the Government of the Province of Quebec. Cure is guaranteed to be satisfactory in every particular, or we refund the fee paid and the treatment costs nothing. # GIN PILLS

Have Restored Thousands of Men and Women to Health and Happiness

THESE little Red Pills—the tried and trusted Remedy for the Kidneys have brought health and happiness to thousands of homes. There is hardly a spot in Canada—certainly not a town of any size—where GIN PILLS have not some devoted friend to say words of praise for what they have done. From the Atlantic to the Pacific—in the great cities like Montreal and Toronto—in the fishing hamlets of Nova Scotia and in the settlers' cottages in the Great Northwest—GIN PILLS are curing sufferers and saving lives endangered by weak kidneys.

GIN PILLS are a Marvel of Scientific Medicine

GIN PILLS are scientifically prepared to relieve and cure the tortures of Kidney and Bladder Trouble, and those diseases—like Rheumatism and Lumbago—which are due to Inactive, Congested or Inflamed Kidneys. Every ingredient in GIN PILLS has a medicinal value, which adds its curative quality in giving speedy relief to the sufferer.

Three Typical Cases all Cured by Gin Pills

Joliette, P.Q.
 "During August last, I went to Montreal to consult a specialist as I had been suffering terribly with Stone in the Bladder.
 He decided to operate but said the stone was too large to remove and too hard to crush. I returned home and was recommended by a friend to try GIN PILLS.
 They relieved the pain. I took two boxes and went back to the specialist. He said the stone was smaller but he could not remove it although he tried for two hours and a half. I returned home and continued to take GIN PILLS, and to my great surprise and joy, I passed the stone.
 GIN PILLS are the best medicine in the world and because they did me so much good, I will recommend them all the rest of my life."
 J. ALBERT LESSARD.

Larder Lake, Ont., March 26th.
 "I had been suffering for some time with my Kidneys and Urine. I was constantly passing water, which was very scanty, sometimes as many as thirty times a day. Each time the pain was something awful, and no rest at night.
 I heard of your GIN PILLS and decided to give them a trial at once. I sent my chum 60 miles to get them and I am pleased to inform you that in less than six hours, I felt relief.
 In two days the pain had left me entirely. I took about half a box and to-day I feel as well as ever and my kidneys are acting quite natural again."
 S. D. CASTLEMAN.

"Over a year ago I was taken terribly sick with unbearable pains in the Kidneys, so called in a Doctor, and he said at once that I had a Stone in the Kidney, and all he could do was to give me ease by injecting morphine. He said there was no cure but an operation. About two months ago I got a box of GIN PILLS and took one and two at a time, and then another box. A week ago the Stone passed from the Kidney to the bladder. Two days ago it passed away altogether. I have taken no other medicine but GIN PILLS, and it is through them that I am free from that stone."
 This gentleman's name is withheld by request; his letter can be seen in our office.

OUR SATURDAY EVENING HOME PAGE.

Are We Living Out the Sermon on the Mount in These Days?

In the following outspoken and powerful article, Father O'Brien hits straight from the shoulder, and maybe if all pulpits took more direct aim than is usual, we should not now be asking ourselves: Are we even attempting to live out the Sermon on the Mount?

REV. P. J. O'BRIEN, Tor's Cove.

It is clear to even a superficial observer and thinker that a question so comprehensive cannot be answered by a simple "yes" or "no." The words "Be ye perfect as your heavenly Father is perfect" leave little room for prevarication and at the same time conform to the mandates of the sermon. And as "religion pure and undefiled" consists in "keeping one's self unspotted from the world," we have reason to fear that few come up to the standard of perfection; few have kept themselves unspotted from the world; few therefore have lived out the Sermon on the Mount. Let each one answer for himself, but immediately he is confronted with that statement of the apostle: "No man knows whether he is worthy of love or hatred." Shall anyone presume to decide in the case of his neighbour? Who knows the secrets of men's hearts? "Deus innotator cor"—the omniscient alone is judge. Therefore no man dare presume to answer the above question with any pretensions to absolute certainty. To answer with any fulness would require more space than may be at your disposal, or may call for a large volume of commentary on the one hand, and a very comprehensive search into the lives of men to-day and careful comparison with Gospel precepts.

No one will deny that every age of the Christian era has brought forth men and women whose lives even under the most trying circumstances have been lived along the lines drawn up by the Divine Exemplar. The Gospel precepts and counsils have been lived up to even until now and will be faithfully observed by many even until the end of time. That are saints in Heaven as well as in the calendar is pretty generally admitted, but there are a few who suspect there are many whose names are no longer in the Book of Life, and many others who have a doubtful title thereto. To the former and to all who follow to the end in the footsteps of the Preacher He said: "I shall be your reward exceeding great," while to those whose lives are a contradiction to their faith it is said: "They are enemies of the Cross of Christ," and their names shall be taken out of the Book of Life.

The foregoing would seem to answer your question; yet I may say it answers nothing more than to say: Some live up to the rules of life presented in the Sermon; some partly, and more not at all.

Without attempting to be either laudatory or exhaustive I will take up some of the principal points touched upon by our Divine Lord in the order in which they appear in the text, and see how the ways of men to-day fit in with the doctrine expounded on the Mount.

St. Matthew begins the fifth chapter of his gospel with the Beatitudes. 1.—"Blessed are the poor in spirit for theirs is the Kingdom of Heaven." This was a very attractive promise, and one calculated to arrest the attention of his hearers. They had ascribed from different parts, and no doubt had pockets well lined, and like many of their day as well as of these days they were bent on having a good time. Poverty in any sense had little charm for most of them, and certainly poverty of spirit was quite a new idea. Coming from one whom they regarded as speaking from authority, it was likely to set them thinking, and being a title to Blessings in any form, the thought was not to be dismissed too hastily. They were well aware that the world esteemed the men who had the cash, and they knew as much as when he said: "Unde habes quere nemo, unde oportet habere" (Where you get the money nobody stops to ask, but make sure you have it). He did not say "Blessed are the rich," because these later what he thought of riches were present, likely, rich that turned up afterwards, and those were those who were proud and arrogant in spirit, who despised poverty and the advantages wealth brought to its possessors. How many poor to-day may not the rich, are reconwho say daily: "Forgive us our trespasses, as we forgive those who trespass against us," while at the same time nourishing feelings of vindictiveness, and are awaiting an opportunity to get "square" with the other fellow. The reader is referred to the "Merchant of Venice" for some good sayings about mercy. "We do pray for mercy; and that same prayer doth teach us all to render the deeds of mercy." I wonder do we?

8.—"Blessed are the clean of heart: for they shall see God. Licentiousness was run riot at the time our Divine Lord put such a premium on clean living. The Sixth Commandment had been practically expunged from the Decalogue, and the clean of heart were rare birds, though there were some. There are thousands in the world to-day whose lives are as pure as the lily. There are millions again who have no assurance that if they continue to defile the temples of the Holy Ghost, they shall ever see God. Moral corruption has stalked through the world and myriads are its victims. Many pass out of life daily and are rapt into the company of those "who follow the Lamb wheresoever he goeth," and many too, we may reasonably fear, will never be fit for admission into such society. Those who have fallen, but through the grace persevere in the Path of Rectitude, will some day see God face to face. But the unfaithful wife, the lecherous husband, the licentious young man, the lascivious young woman, the slave trafficker, the keepers of houses of infamy, are not likely to see God, if they do not pay more attention to this particular beatitude, and change their ways promptly.

9.—"Blessed are the peacemakers: for they shall be called the children of God." What a pity we haven't a few more of them in the world just now. They certainly would be kept busy! Men are flying at one another's throats from the ends of the earth. We have arsonettes and suffragettes, rebel camps within the realm, and men ready to wade in the blood of their fellows. The inventive genius of the world is mainly spent devising more destructive war-machines, to back up the promptings of ambition and avarice; rebellious minorities, nurtured on inveterate hatred, might be induced to throw in their lot with those who seek only justice and liberty. Blind demagogues leading the blind to inevitable slaughter might be taught to halt in their mad career, and those in whose hearts rankle vengeance might be persuaded from their fell purpose. But the peacemakers are wanting, and so there is death in the air and destruction in its trail. These mighty armadas might be dismantled, their guns and armory turned into ploughs and reaping hooks, swords into pruning knives, and the reign of terror made to cease upon earth. Let us have peacemakers.

10.—"Blessed are they that suffer persecution for Justice sake; for theirs is the Kingdom of Heaven."

There are, I am sure, some to be found walking in the footsteps of Him who was "led like a sheep to the slaughter," but Justice might reign on earth; but they are not, I think, in the majority, who are therefore liable to exclusion from the Kingdom of Heaven.

11.—"Blessed are ye when they shall revile and persecute you, and speak all that is evil against you untruly for my sake."

The blessings that come on account of insults and calumny patiently endured, fall somewhat scattered. To the one that will turn the other cheek, there are a hundred, who, with more or less vehemence, will turn the left fist or the right foot, or mildly tell his neighbour he is "another"! Most people like to "see it out" with the offender, and prefer to pay him back in his own coin rather than put "coals of fire on his head." We have the example of Him, who when He was reviled, did not revile; but how many of us imitate it?

I will pass over these passages that seem to apply more directly to the Disciples.

Texts 21 to 24 refer to the forgiveness of injuries.

There are good men, though they do not live quite up to the requirements of the Law laid down in these texts. They will give freely to Church and calls of charity, lead fairly clean lives, pay their just debts, sing hymns with a pious air, and do other good things, but they will not put out of their hearts the memory of the wrongs done them; they forget that unless they forgive every man from their hearts their heavenly Father will not forgive them. These sort of Christians are not living out the Sermon on the Mount. "As you measure, so will it be measured unto you." The world is over-run, I think, with a class of fools that expect better terms for themselves than they are prepared to give to others.

Thy will be done on earth as it is in Heaven.

—From the Lord's Prayer.

The words in texts 27, 28 were not flattery to His hearers, nor have they lost their force though apparently treated with contempt to-day. The morality of a large portion of the world is gone to rot; and either another deluge, another downpour of fire and brimstone, or an extra strong infusion of practical and remedial Christianity, properly administered, will be required to save her. I may be permitted to quote texts 31 and 32. "And it hath been said of old: whosoever shall put away his wife, let him give her a bill of divorce. But I say to you: whosoever shall put away his wife, excepting the cause of fornication, maketh her to commit adultery; and he that shall marry her that is put away, committeth adultery."

What do you think of that, ladies and gentlemen, lords and commons, lawyers and judges, young men and maidens? Do you not think that the privileges allowed in Abraham's time have been called off, and that barnyard morality should not be the order of the day in so many parts of the Kingdom of Christ? If a man should find out a little too late that his newly espoused had a set of false teeth, or the lady that her better half indulged too freely in nicotine, they cannot any longer find refuge in a bill of divorce. If nuptial duties become wearisome, they cannot conscientiously enter new matrimonial alliances on the mere decision of a judge who may himself worship at the shrine of Venus, for One higher, has said: "What God has joined, let no man put asunder."

The divorce courts of today are set up in direct antagonism to the law of Christian marriage, and the law that sanctions a dissolution of the marriage bonds is a blot on the statute book of any country. It proves that the moral teaching behind it is a parody on Christianity, a legalized encouragement to licentiousness worthy the ages of paganism. The divorce court is therefore a hellish institution, set up in defiance of God; it is the greatest enemy a nation could admit within its borders; its tendency is to annihilate the species, give unbridled license to debased passions, shut the gates of heaven and fill hell with the refuse of the race. If the moral press would print it in broad headlines; if Parliaments had regard for the dignity and sanctity of its office, it would print it upon its walls, courts would have it engraved on plates of brass, and the pulpits of our Churches would flash it forth to the eyes of worshippers in letters of flame, men and women may be led to seek remedy for their real or imaginary grievances, not by divorce, but by stricter conformity to the lessons of morality and justice declared in the text.

The sixth and seventh chapters containing this Sermon contain many matters not necessary to dwell on within the scope of this article. I may select a few just to show by a few more instances how the lives of many to-day are not conformed to the lives laid down in this sublime discourse. A good many in their charities like to parade their generosity in the matter of alms-giving. I do not refer to the great calamity such as has fallen on this country of late, but I am inclined to believe that much of our charity would never find expression in deeds if there was not some notoriety forthcoming. The reward of public commendation is often preferred to that of Him who "seeth in secret." We are told that "no man can serve two masters. You cannot serve God and Mammon." I am half suspicious that the majority of men to-day, especially those in commercial life, burn more incense on the Altar of Mammon than on the Altars of the Lord. "All covetousness is but worship of idols." Six days money-hunting and one day of doubtful devotion gives the holocaust to Mammon and the ashes to the Lord. To many such the Sermon on the Mount is as a sealed book. Men are advised to "first seek the Kingdom of God and His Justice," but they first seek the almighty dollar and next, maybe, the Kingdom of God.

The last chapter deals with many things it were well to bear in mind, but I question whether they take up much of the time of the man in the street or in the office. As my purpose is merely to show that the lives of men of this age, as well as of the past, are not modelled after this pattern, there is much that could be said that I must pass over.

Their name is legion who can see lots of things wrong with the people next door and across the street, and who can readily perceive when some barbed arrows are shot from the pulpit, how nicely they struck the fellow in the other pew, and are ready to congratulate themselves that they are not "as the rest of men." They would need a crowbar to get the mote out of their neighbour's eye, while they could not find a beam in their own eye with a microscope.

"All whatsoever you would have men do unto you, do you also to them."

If this principle were accepted by the world, and put in practice by men in their various relations with one another, this old transitory habitation would cease to be a "vale of tears." You would have true socialism in the brotherhood of man and the fatherhood of God.

The Sermon on the Mount, preached first by the Son of God, proclaimed by the Apostles, whose voice through their legitimate successors has carried it to the ends of the earth "Go ye, therefore, teach all nations, teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you, and behold I am with you all days, even to the end of the world." Has that old voice got too hoarse to be any longer heard? Or have the ears of men in their greedy rush for the world's gifts, wealth, luxury, power, been deafened against the commands, warnings, and appeals that to-day re-echo from the Pyrenees to the Rockies, from the Rockies to the Himalayas?

I have used some paper and ink just to show that the lives of most people to-day are apparently in direct antithesis to the lessons taught from the mountains of Judea to the representatives of the nations assembled there. I do not hope by this brief, superficial survey of men's conduct to arouse them from their lethargy, set them inquiring whether there is anything in their lives that needs to be rectified, that they may find before too late, "that he, therefore, who shall break one of the least commandments, and shall so teach men, shall be called the least in the Kingdom of Heaven." And that "unless their justice abound more than that of the Scribes and Pharisees, they shall not enter into the Kingdom of Heaven." "Woe to the world on account of its scandals!"

I say, therefore, to those who have not considered those grand truths, or who, having once known them, have in practice discarded them: "The desires of the wicked shall perish." "If thy right eye (of lust or avarice) scandalized you, pluck it out," for it is better to follow blindly in the footsteps of the unerring Master than going self-willed with eyes open to hell. "Or if thy right hand (having an itching palm) overreach your brother in business," to grasp at another's goods, "cut it off."

I shall finish with the recommendation given by the Divine Preacher at the close of His Sermon in text 24. "Everyone then that heareth these words and doeth them, I shall liken to the wiseman that built his house upon a rock; while everyone that heareth these my words, and doeth them not, shall be like the fool that built his house upon sand." He who builds for time is the fool, but wise is he who builds for eternity. "First seek the Kingdom of God and His Justice, and all things shall be added unto you."

Air Space and Ventilation.

Every healthy person should have at least 800 cubic feet of air space, and every sick person at least 1,000 cubic feet. With this space provision should be made for efficient ventilation also, for if the air is to be kept sweet, 3,000 cubic feet per hour per head must be supplied. A room 10 feet by 10 feet by 10 feet high gives a breathing space of 1,000 cubic feet, without allowing for furniture.

English Renderings of Lyrics by Rabindranath Tagore.

The work of this Hindu poet has been receiving much attention of recent months since the awarding to him of the Nobel Prize for literature. He represents one of the finest types and also one of the finest families in India to-day. From the foundations of the Brabma Soma the family has been among its illustrious members, but Rabindra Nath is its greatest son. He remains a loyal Hindu and Brahmin, though living much of his time in England, and in his poems reflects the mysticism, the rhapsody and the life and environment of India, even when these are rendered in excellent English. "The Gardener," by Rabindranath Tagore (the Macmillan Co. of Canada, Toronto, $1.25), is a collection of love lyrics fascinatingly different from anything western. But the romance of India itself differs radically from that of the western world. It begins with marriage, if it be true love, instead of culminating in it. There is no legitimate intercourse between the unwedded youth and maiden. Yet that there may be "fair speechless messages" even in that land may be gathered in such lines as the following: "When the two sisters go to fetch water, they come to this spot and they smile. They must be aware of somebody who stands behind the trees whenever they go to fetch water. The two sisters whisper to each other when they pass this spot. They must have guessed the secret of that somebody who stands behind the trees whenever they go to fetch water.

When the day waned and it darkened, I found that the flower had faded, but the pain remained. More flowers will come to you with perfume and pride, O world! But my time for flower-gathering is over, and through the dark night I have not my rose, only the pain remains." The genuine love-poet breathes in this tribute to the fascination of woman—

"O woman, you are not merely the handiwork of God, but also of men; these are ever endowing you with beauty from their hearts." "Poets are weaving for you a web with threads of gold imagery; painters are giving you form ever new immortality. "The sea gives its pearls, the mines their gold, the summer gardens their flowers to deck you, to cover you, to make you more precious.

"The desire of men's hearts has shed its glory over your youth. "You are one-half woman and one-half dream."

The most passionate of all is the song that gives its title to the collection. The knight asks that he may lay aside his armor and become the queen's gardener. His reward is: "To be allowed to hold your little fists like tender lotus buds and slip flower chains over your wrists; to tinge the soles of your feet with the red juice of ashoka petals and kiss away the speck of dust that may chance to linger there."

In the latter part of the collection are some philosophical and religious poems and a few little pastorals giving glimpses of the life of children and animals. The early responsibility of the little girl and the love of animals which is part of the Hindu religion, as well as "a touch of nature which makes the whole world kin," appears in the little poem which closes. "She took up her brother in one arm and the lamb in the other, and dividing her caresses between them bound in one bond of affection the offspring of beast and man."

The Cooking of Meat.

Raw flesh has only one inconvenience: it sticks to the teeth; otherwise it is not at all unpleasant to taste. Seasoned with a little salt it is easily digested, and must be at least as nourishing as any other. Broadly it may be stated that most forms of cookery actually lessen the digestibility of animal foods, rendering them in some cases tough and leathery and indigestible. That meat is rendered less digestible in proportion to the degree of cooking is shown by the fact that 3½ ounces of beef disappear completely from the stomach, when raw, in 2 hours; when half boiled 2½ hours; when wholly boiled in 3 hours; when half roasted in 4 hours, and when wholly roasted in 4 hours. If the temperature reached in cooking be beyond 170 deg. F, the value of the food is lessened by the hardening and shrinking of the protid materials. The value of this fact, in its practical application to cooking, has long been recognized, though unfortunately, it is commonly disregarded in practice. Meat in boiling should be plunged, for a few minutes only, in boiling water, sufficient just to cover it, when the superficial protoids are coagulated, the joint is "sealed," and its salts and extractives retained. The cooking should then be continued at a much lower temperature until done. With the exception of frying, it may be said generally that slow cooking is good cooking. In roasting, the joint should be placed immediately close to the fire for a few minutes until it is "sealed" and then moved back, the drying of the continued roasting being prevented by persistent basting. In frying, the meat should be plunged suddenly into a deep pan of nearly boiling fat (pure olive oil). The intense heat produces instantaneous coagulation of the protoids on the surface. So soon as the "spluttering" has ceased—in two or three minutes—the cooking is completed. —R. Hutchison, M.D., M.R.C.P.

Thought.

(For The Evening Telegram.) "Like,—A prophet is not without honor save in his own country," so may "Let not your left hand know what your right hand doeth," be an inspiration to true greatness without place or distinction, and not to thoughts hidden in a napkin. Thought is everything and everything is thought. In life we do, we achieve, we aspire and are inspired; in death we advance. Life and death, alike pleasures of the truly great, the good, the God-like are alloys of thought, the Great Thought, the Supreme Thought, the "Uplift" to joys eternal that fadeeth not away, The Alpha, The Omega.

Directions for Anæmia.

1. Abundant rest, especially in well-ventilated rooms, in sunny rooms, in open air, and in the sun.
2. Moderate exercise, gradually increased, but always stopping short of tiring point. It should be taken preferably in several short walks rather than one long one. Patients suffering from anæmia, and invalids generally, often bear better the exercise taken after noon.
3. Regular daily skin friction, preceded by tepid or rapid cold sponging. Very few anæmic patients can take cold baths.
4. Be sure the teeth are in good condition.
5. Meals should be frequent, not at long intervals. Some nourishment—hot or cold milk, with or without a little brandy; or tea made with milk instead of water—should, always be given half an hour before rising.
6. An insufficient quantity of fluid is a most frequent cause of constipation anæmia. It is a common experience that no remedies help the anæmia so long as the constipation (often its cause) lasts. Anæmic patients should be instructed to take not less than two and a half to three pints of fluid daily. By this, and other means if necessary, any constipation must be relieved.

Ruskin on Travelling.

To any person who has all his senses about him, a quiet walk, over not more than 10 or 12 miles of road a day, is the most amusing of all travelling; and all travelling becomes dull in exact proportion to its rapidity. Going by railway I do not consider as travelling at all; it is merely "being sent" to a place, and very little different from becoming a parcel.—Ruskin.
