The offices of the company on King street were closed to the public, though the despatcher's room was lit up, and the chief officials were in their rooms talking over the situation and anxiously awaiting tidings.

At 1.30 this morning a World reporter encountered Henry Beatty, manager of the steamers, coming out of the King street offices. He said there was no definite tidings. He had just been in conversation with the captain of the Alberta, the sister ship, and he had assured him that there was and had been all week heavy fogs on lake Superior. The Alberta was delayed nearly two days.

Do you think, then, that she is fogbound? asked the reporter.

bound? asked the reporter.

Yes, said Mr. Beatty. But you can't always tell.

Where would you imagine her to be?
I think she would lie in near Cove island, hick is well down on the route.
How many passengers had she?
I can not tell. I've got the returns ixed. One had a hundred, and the other whans less than fifty.

mixed. One had a hundred, and the other perhaps less than fifty.

Mr. Beatty wore a very anxious look. He has devoted his energy and time for two years to the planning, construction and running of these boats. The Canadian Pacific railway gave him instructions to spend whatever money he liked; only to get the best possible steamers for the traffic. The boats were built on the Clyde and and cut in two to let them through the St. Lawrence canals. They were built with the fullest regard to safety and sumptiously furnished.

CYCLONE AT STREETSVILLE.

Tromendous Storm there Saturday-A Devastating Wind.
STREETSVILLE, June 21.—For some days past the farmers in this vicinity have been noon rain fell in abundance and with it came a cyclone, the like of which the older inhabitant stoutly maintains was never seen here before. In the village the rain fell in torrents, but though the wind was high no damage was done. The full was high no damage was done. The full force of the tempest was felt about two miles west of here. The wind first blew from the worth, but wheeled around to every point of the compass, devastating everything in its course. A public shed was torn down, killing a number of sheen was torn down, killing a number of sheep in it at the time. The road for about 200 yards was rendered impassible, being strewn with rails, not a fence being left after the storm had passed. Trees were broken off or uprooted. A man named Richardson had a narrow escape. He sought shelter in a bush and stood behind a large oak tree which the wind uproofed, the falling trunk passed so close to his body as to hurt his arm.

Dancing was introduced as a means of whiling away the time between heats, and it was pretty generally indulged in.

The committee who got out the crews and managed the rowing were Capt. O'Hara, W. Dillon, John Wilson and E. Roach. They worked things very satisfactorily. W. J. Littlejohn, ex-secretary, made himself generally useful. The course was three quarters of a mile westward, with turn, the starting and finishing point being opposite the club house. R. L. To the Editor of the World.

Sir: The language you quoted Tuesday last from Monday's Mail referring to the members of our local government is the language of a literary cutthroat and low, despicable villain—an utter disgrace to Canadian journalism. I know not how such literature takes with the better classes in Toronto, but I do know that were any provincial journalist, outside of Toronto, to use such language towards any local public man, he would, as he richly deserved, be horsewhipped on the public streets. Messrs. Mowat, Frascr. Pardee and Hardy are the duly elected choice of a majority of the people of Ontario, repeatedly reinstated, after long experience, at four separate elections, and to brand them, as the detestable literary sleuth-hound of the Mail does, is to wantonly outrage their supporters throughout the length and breadth of the country. I observe with commendation your temperate remonstrance against the language quoted, but temperate remonstrance, or anything else of the same kind is in this case quite out of the question and will prove of no avail. The only earthly way to reach the sensibility of a blatant and bloated tory dude is to reach it through his hide. I repeat, the editor of the Mail richly deserves and should certainly get an effectual horsewhipping. No man—short of a professional blackguard—ever deseended so low on the scale of literature as he has done, and he should be stopped and an example made of him. The object of his writing is of course plain. He hopes—is instructed to hope—that persistent hounding of the style headopts will drive respectable men out of public life, leaving all the fat of the land and the spoils of office in the hands of his party—but herein he will find himself mistaken. The game is altogether too transparent—too thin—and now becoming intolerable disgusting. To the Editor of the World.

We have repeatedly drawn attention to

The writer is a literary snob and a social toady. Physically he is the very cut of the Yellowplush, of the Jeames of Punch. As for the strange, lunatic turn that his writings take, there is only one rational explanation: he must be a confirmed victim to some drug like opium.

His employers are the Mail proprietors, of whom their nominal head is charged with conspiracy and bribery, and finds it convenient to be out of the country at the present time. As to the unfortunate condition of the real and financial head we say nothing. No one wishes to see him he here and himself this monkey business

Next comes the conservative leaders. Sir John Macdonald and Mr. Meredith. What Sir John Macdonald's relation to the Mail or any party organ is we happen to know. He keeps clear of it or interferes as little as possible. Nevertheless both he and Mr. Meredith are compromised by the vulgarity of their organ.

After the leaders the conservative party must share in the responsibility. It is true many conservative voters and journals have repudiated it: but as long as the Mail poses as the organ of the party and is sustained by the party, the party must share the ignominy of its conduct. If the conservative party is to be judged by the literary tone of the columns of the Mail, by the mental condition of its owners and chief writer, and the moral twist in the mind of its nominal head, then all we can say is, heaven help the Branch Railways in the Northwest.

The Winnipeg Sun says that although there can be no building of branch railways in southern Manitoba this season, the prospect for seeing something done next year is good. Mr. VanHorne has told Mr. Pew, in pretty plain terms, that the Canadian Pacific railway company does not want to deal with him; and, as Mr. Pew and his associate promoters certainly cannot raise the money themselves, they may as well now "step down and out," and leave the job to be done by somebody who can. The truth is that Ontario experience in branch railways has been such as may well inspire caution in the Canadian Pa cific people or any other parties contemplating the construction of branch lines in the Northwest. We believe it to be the fact that the Great Western and the Grand Trunk lost money by all their respective branch lines in the Ontario peninsula. The Welling. ton, Grey and Bruce road, for instance. was built by the municipalities and was handed over to the Great Western on condition simply of running it, but never did more than pay expenses, if so much. We hope these are not to be taken as speci-Were the C. P. R. company to build and mens of our rural battalions. We know run branches wherever there is a local de- that the men of the country battalions mand in the Northwest it would soon find have the best physique, and make the best itself with any number of "white ele- volunteers, and it is owing to negligence phants" on hand, costly and troublesome on the part of the government, or on the to keep up.

The Montreal Herald has something to say about "British enemies of emigration to Canada," who are doing what they can to discourage emigrants from choosing the dominion as their future home. The Dublin Freeman's Journal, it appears, has been giving prominence to representations made by the trades and labor council of Toronto, which have of late been published in old country papers. It is true enough that, as the Herald says, there are now in Canada something like a million people of Irish birth or origin, who are materially better off here than they would have been in Ireland. Equally certain is it that this wide dominion, with scarcely five millions population, has ample room and verge enough for ten times as many, Mere geographical extent alone will not make a great country, there must be an industrious, intelligent and enterprising people as well, and in numbers sufficient to make a nation. We have the territory but we want the people to fill it up—that is clearly the situation in which Canada stands. Why then, it may be asked, should we not all work together as one man to bring in all the immigrants we can and fill up the country? The reply must be that there are two kinds of immigrants, and that of late Canada has been getting too many by far of the wrong kind. You say we should welcome immigrants coming in to fill up the country: we say that we do welcome them

We have repeatedly drawn attention to the style of writing in the Mail when addressed to political opponents. The reference to the delegates at the reform convention, the low-bred attacks on the Ontario ministers, and the base attempt of the Mail to show that it is not Bunting, Meek and Wilkinson but Mowat, Pardee, Hardy and Fraser who are on trial for bribery and conspiracy, are fresh in the minds of all.

It is well to find out in cases of such persistent violation of decency where the resistent violation of decency where take many millions of them ere there will be any need of our crying "hold, enough!" They appear to manage these things better in the States. A New York paper publishes an interview with a Texas railway man, who is enthusiastic over the rapid growth of the state in population, and who looks upon immigration as the main thing for making it a great one in the union. So rapidly, he says, is the state being settled that the next census will back in health more than the writer. Were 1880 fully 650,000 emigrants have gone Italians. To these must be added those coming from the older states, which are sufficiently numerous to make the increase since 1880 almost equal to that for the preceding ten years. Unfortunately the church at least as well as the man who criticizes him and certainly does not use so many harsh words. The Brother "Awde" to stick to his lactometer. For it is a long way from sampling adulterated milk to teaching theology, and you know "every man to his trade." immigration, efforts to that end being con-state has done next to nothing to promote fined to the half dozen railway companies owning lands which they wish to sell. For this purpose agencies are working vigorously in Great Britain, France, Germany and northern Europe, the movement from of immigrants for filling up a new country, and the railway companies appear to be doing the greater part of the business. Now, if government, railway, land company or other agencies will only send us such immigrants as those coming into Texas appear to be-people who will take up land and live on it-the country will surely welcome all such that come. But we cannot be expected to tax both public and private charity with the cost of maintaining immigrants of the Conway street class. From the influx of the latter kind of immigrants Toronto has already suffered severely, and the trades and labor council is certainly justified in doing what it can to check the evil. And we believe that trying as Toronto's, has still been sufficent to show that pauper immigration

Cheating the City. SIR: Have you noticed the manner in which the new sidewalks have been laid? I refer more particularly to that on King country: we say that we do welcome them most heartily. That is to say, remember, if they actually do come to fill up the country, in good truth, and according to the proper meaning of the expression. But bringing in pauper immigrants to be a burden on the people of Toronto is not filling up the country, we should say. It few days there is already an unpleasant of what its means; nobody ever does that! To turn an umbrella in a gust of wind presages profanity. To carry your umbrella in a case signifies that it is a shabby one. To carry an open umbrella just high enough to tear out men's eyes and knock off men's hats signifies "I am a woman." To press an umbrella on your friend, saying, "Oh, do take it; I had much rather you would than not!" signifies lying. To Since 1880 fully 650,000 emigrants have gone into the state, and during the last year the average of new settlers has been 6000 per month. The Protection of Life from Drowning. To the Editor of The World.

SIR: To those who can cultivate a few cool ideas this hot weather it will be clear, Montreal's experience, though not quite as that the labor and anxiety expended in the miserable duty of dragging for the bodies of drowned persons in our inland waters, would go far in other lines of effort to pre vent these constant sacrifices of valuable lives. The Language of Umbrellas There is a language of umbrellas as of as of flowers. For instance, place your imbrella in a rack, and it will indicate that it is about to change owners. To open it quickly in the street means that mebody's eye is going to be put out; to shut it, that a hat or two is to be knocked off. An umbrella carried over a woman, the man getting nothing but the drippings the man getting nothing but the drippings of the rain, signifies courtship. When the man has the umbrella and the woman the drippings, it indicates marriage. To punch your umbrella into a person and then open it means "I dislike you." To swing your umbrella over your head signifies "I am making a nuisance of myself." To trail your umbrella along the foot-path means that the man behind you is thursting for your blood. To carry it at right angles under your arm signifies that an return an umbrella means—never · mind what its means ; nobody ever does that!

SHOT IN THE HEART,

BY L. B. E. Formerly, when people asked me if I believed in ghosts, I answered "No!" emphatically. Now, when interrogated on the subject, I answer that I do not know what I do believe. You will infer from this that my belief in apparitions has been shaken. Your inference will not be a wrong one.

Let me tell you my story, and you can see what cause I have to doubt the correctness of my first belief on the subject. John Haynes and myself were friends together at college. We used to be called "the inseparables," with some justice, I admit, for we were always together and our studies were the same. We had taken a great liking to each other from the earliest moment of our acquaintance. We were nearly of the same age, and our tastes and habits were very similar. It is not to and habits were very similar. It is not to be wondered at, then, that we were staunch

What I knew John knew; and I shared times, when alone in our room, we used to get into conversation on such strange and mysterious subjects as mesmerism, clair-voyance and the like; and I knew from John's manner that these subtle, weird, unexplainable mysteries had a strange fascination and charm for him. He was not a believer in them, and yet there was something about them that haunted him strangely.

All of us have experienced this feeling,
I presume, when thinking about something whose mystery was past our com-It would keep intruding itself upon our thoughts, and yet baffle us completely if we tried to solve its secrets.

It was so with John. One evening we were sitting together alone. We had been talking on these things, and from them we had got to talking of ghosts.

positive terms.
"There are no ghosts!" I said. "No person ever saw one except in imagina-"Do you think so ?" John said, looking

"Yes. I honestly think that ghosts are apparations of the imagination. Strong-minded people never see them," I answered.
"I am not so sure of that," he replied.
"Truth to tell, Ned, I do believe there are ghosts, spirits or whatever you please. are ghosts, spirits, or whatever you please to call them." What are your reasons for this belief?"

"I have no reasons for my belief," he answered. "But that the spirits of the dead can visit the earth I believe as much as I believe in my existence. I may be wrong, but I think not."

"I'll tell you what," I said, laughing at his serious face; "if I die before you do, I'll appear to you, if such a thing is possible; and if you die first, why, you do the same thing to me. What do you say, Johr."

So some five years passed. I had married and settled down into a steady man. Sometimes, when I read John's letters, I thought of the college days, and wondered if he still believed in ghosts.

One evening I sat in the parlor with my wife. The fire burned redly in the grate, but there was no other light in the room. We were fond of sitting in the half-twilight made by the glowing coals, and had light made by the glowing coals, and had not lighted the lamp.

Suddenly I thought of John Haynes.

We had been talking of some recent events in the political world, and the subject had no more connection with John than night resembled day. But all at once I thought of him, and it seemed as if he was near me. You have often felt that some one was near you, and looked up to meet his glance.

Such a feeling came over me then.

"How strange!" I said to my wife.

Such a feeling came over me then.

"How strange!" I said to my wife.

"Here we were talking of politics, and like a flash I thought of John; I have often told you about him. It seemed that he was here. I do not recollect of ever having experienced such a sensation before."

Katie looked at me wonderingly.

"It is strange," she said. "Such a feeling came over me. It seemed as if there was some one else in the room."

I looked around. There was no one to be seen. The fire burned dimmer now, and "I feel the presence of some one," Katie said, nestling closer to me. "We don't seem to be alone, as before."

She had explained my feeling exactly. Had John Haynes been sitting opposite us I should not have felt the influence of his

There was a rattle of coals in the grate, and the sparks flew upward, redly, for a minute; then the momentary brightness died away, leaving the room darker than before.
"Ned!" We heard a voice call my name, distinctly and slow. I turned to Katie, ques-

She turned and pointed to a corner by the door. I looked that way, but saw

"It is John!" I cried. "He has come back from California! John, old boy, where are you? You can't play off any of your tricks on me. Come out and give us a shake of your hand."

them on its heart. And then we heard it say, clearly and distinctly:

"I have come to you from the dead. I have kept my promise."

Then the shadowy hands were lifted, and we saw that they were dabbled with blood. And about the region of the heart were flecks of crimson, as if the life-blood had spurted out in sudden jets. Then the form faded away, and in a moment was gone. Nothing but shadows remained.

I turned to Katle. Her face was very white. She clung to me, trembling and weak.
"It was a ghost!" she whispered, "It was not anything imaginary. Your friend must be dead!"

AN HOUR IN A BASEBALL FACTORY No Wonder the Spheres are Like Stones A Chat With a Manufacturer. From the New York Tribune.

"The baseball manufacturing busin has had a rapid but prosperous growth," said a manufacturer recently. "It is confined to a few men, and probably will not be encroached upon by speculators. There are in the Urited States to-day only eight factories of any importance, and yet these are entirely sufficient to supply all the baseballs that are wanted in this country. Recently there has been a sort of a "boom' in the ball market. This is caused by the adoption of clothing houses throughout the country of the custom of giving to juvenile purchasers baseballs as presents. Wanamaker of Philadelphia, ordered 25,000 for this purpose. The balls are of different grades and prices. The kind that are given away are, of course, cheap but quite durable. Perhaps you would like to see how baseballs are made. Follow me and I on the upper floor of the establishment sat several men with baskets of dampened chamois and buckskin clippings at their sides. Before each workman stood a stout piece of joist, in the end of which was in-serted a mould, hemispherical in shape, in which the balls are formed. Taking a handful of the cuttings from the basket, the workman pressed them together in his hands and then wound about the mass his serious face; "if I die before you do, I'll appear to you, if such a thing is possible; and if you die first, why, you do the same thing to me. What do you say, Johi!"

"I will agree to your proposition," he answered seriously. "I will come to you when I die, wherever you may be, should I chance to die first."

Our college life ended at length, after we had begun to think that it was going to last forever. And then John and I took different paths, and went out into the world. He went to Canada, having an uncle there, and I went to London to enter myself at the Temple and study for the bar.

"He was the inventor of the two-piece cover now in general use throughout the country. If my brother had only patented his invention the members of our family would now be wearing diamonds instead of bits of white glass in our shirt fronts. Ball covers are made, almost without exception, of horse-hide, which costs three dollars a side. We used to obtain our supply from John Carl, a leather dealer in the Swamp, for nearly 35 years. We are obliged to go to Philadelphia now, there being no merchant here who keeps horse-hide leather. The capacity of our factory, when we get our new moulding machines in working order, will be about 15,000 balls daily, each machine being expected balls daily, each machine being expected to turn out 1200 balls a day."

Another Drowning in the Don. Another drowning took place yesterday. About 2.30 in the afternoon Ernest Swaine, 16 years of age, and a number of other lads went up to Sandy point on the Don to swim. When Swaine got a few feet from the bank he suddenly sank out of sight. The second time he rose to the surface he grabbed hold of a boy who was with him, and it was with the greatest difficulty that the latter freed himself. None of the boys could swim. They notified John Fox, who dived for the body and brought it to land. They tried rescusitation, but it was of no avail. Swaine's widowed mother resides in England, and he lived with his employer, F. J. Goddard, at 516 Yonge street. He came out two years ago, and had been with Mr. Goddard ever since. Mr. Goddard was very much pained at the gad event. Deceased left the house to go to Sunday school, He had several Sunday school lesson papers, and a catalogue of the Central presbyterian library in his pocket. This is the third accident that has occurred in the same place within two weeks. 16 years of age, and a number of other lads

Fire at Petleys'. Some of the goods in the east window of Petleys' store came in contact with the gas jets Saturday night and were ignited. The fire spread rapidly to other goods and made quite a blaze. Three or four of the clerks rushed to the spot and managed to extinguish the flames, but they were pain fully burned about the hands in doing so. The store was crowded with customers, many of whom became excited and made Masonic Service.

The masonic fraternity of the city gathered at the masonic hall, Toronto street, yesterday to proceed to church. The occasion was the celebration of the festival of St. John the Baptist, and more Dan 2d, Cooper & Donnelly's Irish terrier Jane 3d, John Scholes' Bedlington Blucher than 500 of the brethren must have been present. The procession was in charge of W. Bro. Knifton of Doric lodge, marshall for the day, and started at 3 o'clock by way of Adelaide, Church, Wilton avenue and Jarvis to the baptist church. The preacher was Brother Rev. Dr. Thomas, pastor of the church, and chaplain of Wilson lodge. He was assisted by Bro. Rev. S. J. Hunter. The text was taken as follows: I. Kings, chap. 7, verse 22: "And upon the top of the pillars was lily work," on which Dr. Thomas made a most eloquent sermon, which will, as usual, be printed for circulation among the craft. The musical portion of the service, under the direction of Bro. Doward, was very fine. Solos were excellently sung by Mrs. Hall and Sims Richards.

complaining of the disgraceful sight and smell at the foot of Yonge street where the main sewer empties into the bay. He suggests that two or three times a week a scow be taken there and filled with the solid matter which ought then to be dumped out in the lake or 'on the Island. He also draws attention to the number of dead fish called shad along the bay front. It seems, according to our correspondent, that these fish will not flourish in fresh water, hence the thousands of them on the bay. He also complains of the pile of sand which has for two months been lying, for no visible purpose, alongside the custom house on Yonge street. If the city's work was better managed these things, he says, would not occur. Semi-Centennial.

TORONTO, April 12th, 1886.

I hereby certify that I have examined samples of JOHN LABATT'S INDIA PALE ALE, submitted to me for analysis by James Good & Co., agents for this city, and find it to be perfectly sound, containing no ascetic acids, impurities or adulterations, and can strongly recommend it as perfectly pure, and a very superior melt liquor.

HENRY H. CROFT. Heaven Hall Hill, Montreal, Dec. 20, 1880.

I hereby certify that Lhave analysed several samples of INDIA PALE ALE and XXX STOUT from the browery of JOHN LABATT, London, Ont. I find them to be remarkably sound Ales, browed from pure mait and hop. I have examined both the March and October browings, and find them of uniform quality. They may be recommended to invalide or convalescents where malt beverages are required as a tonic. Signed JOHN BAKER EDWARDS, Phy., Professor of Chemistry and Public Analyst.
