The Earland.

WINTER IS COMING. In rich men's halls the fire is piled, And emine robes keep out the weather; In poor men's huts the fire is low, Though broken pans the keen winds blow, And old and young are cold together.

Miscellaneous.

Her Majesty's Arrival in the Clyde. The Royal Squadron left Loch Ryan this morning (Tuesday, August 17) at 6 o'clock, for Dumfries, where they reached about 2 o'clock in the afternoon. During the voyage, her Majesty was greeted by the inhabitants of the Towns and Villages all along the coast with every demonstration of loyalty.

top, reaching there at 5 o'clock, and returned to the Bay, where the fleet anchors for this night, between 7 and 8. At every point she was most enthusiastically cheered. THE FUSCHIA PLANT.

The fair cultivators of this graceful and hardy plant may not all be aware how it first became introduced into England, and thence into America. The following little story, therefore, we copy from an English Magazine, believing that it contains an interesting piece of information.— Mr. Shepherd, the respectable and well informed conservator of the Botanical Gardens in Liverpool, gives the following curious account of the introduction of that elegant little flowering shrub, the Fuschia, into the English greenhouses and parks.

THE QUEEN AT DUMFRIES.

Notwithstanding the grievous disappointment of the three hundred thousand of her Majesty's subjects, who had assembled in the Clyde, to greet her with a hearty welcome on her Highland route, and her first visit to the noblest of our Scottish streams—a disappointment occasioned by no want of punctuality, in which her Majesty is remarkable, but partly from the fact that the English Channel in the early part of her journey, and partly from the accident which occurred to the vehicles, yet large numbers of pedestrians and carriages, and a detachment of the Queen's Household, accompanied by the Duke of Devonshire, the Princess Royal, went on board the Fairy, which, accompanied by the Undine, reached the Leven Water at half-past one, when two boats were manned, and her Majesty and suite came on board the Fairy, which was accompanied by the Duke of Devonshire, the Princess Royal, and a detachment of the Queen's Household.

TALKING.

The female sex have often been reproached for their loquacity. The stores of wit and rally have been put in requisition upon the occasion, and the saying has become as current as any of Poor Richard's, that "Women's tongues of aspen leaves are made." Mr. Editor, you must not think that I say this reproachfully; for I sometimes find that I myself, although there has been in this world a great deal of talking, very little purpose, yet, no very important object has been attained without much talk. There are many things which have given the most mighty influence, yet there is no one thing by which they have done more than by talking. If they would effect an object, they would keep talking till they were weary. And if we would follow their example, we should be weary. You recollect what the poor wretch offered by this self same thing—how by her continual talking she wanted the judge to let her go, and how she managed to get out of the court, and how she managed to get out of the court, and how she managed to get out of the court.

DEAR CHARMERS.

A hundred pens have already been dipped into a hundred inkblots to celebrate the highly virtuous and chaste life of one who has left behind him a name which will be as long as the world endures. His nature was so rich and so thoroughly noble, as to carry everything before it, even where there was no strong sympathy with the positive and objects that principally occupied his mind. His nature was so rich and so thoroughly noble, as to carry everything before it, even where there was no strong sympathy with the positive and objects that principally occupied his mind.

THE CHILD IS FATHER OF THE MAN.—ART APPRECIATION.

There is a singular sense in which the child may be said to be father of the man. In many arts and attainments, the first and last stages of progress, the infancy and the consummation, have many features in common. In the mere child, his drawing is instinctive, his line broad, severely decided. In the perfect artist, this preliminary severe line is exchanged for a light and careless stroke, differing only from those of his childhood by the consummate effect wrought out by the apparently inoperative means. So it is in the science of letters. Our first and our last compositions, though on different grounds; the middle stage, further from the truth. Childhood often holds a position as a feeble fingers, which the grasp of manhood would destroy or lose, and which it is the pride of the utmost age to recover. Perhaps there is no instance more remarkable than in the opinion we form upon the subject of detail in art. Infants complete finish; we delight in the plumage of the familiar bird, in the truly drawn and coloured familiar flower. As we advance in our judgment, we scorn such detail; we look for impetuosity of execution and breadth of effect. But perfected in judgment, we return in the plumage of our early feelings, and thank Raphael for the shells upon his sacred beach, and for the delicate stamens of the flowers beside the inspired St. Catherine.—Modern Landscape Painters.

have acquired by a regular course of training. The reason why one man succeeds better than another in a particular situation, is, no doubt, in plain language, that he is better fitted for it; not that he is a better man of business, for in point of fact there may be a very great difference in the degree of their business qualifications, and even in the rectitude and integrity of their respective characters—but simply because his qualifications and disposition are more in unison with those for that particular place. A man with talents and qualifications eminently adapted to discharge the duties of a business will not succeed in one place though he may be a very good man in another, and would be necessarily brought into contact with another man of inferior talents will succeed to admiration, and the reason is just because his ideas and disposition are more in unison with those for that particular place. Still the general requisites of a man of business, the possession of business habits, however these individual cases may vary in quality and degree, are indispensable to qualify every man to enter upon, and succeed in, the pursuits of business.

BOOKS.

If you cannot get books, content yourself with the Book of Nature. It is ever open, and can be turned to look upon it at a moment's notice. Contemplate its pages, let your mind be attuned to worship. Let God be worshipped in everything, and you will find your days pass sweetly over your senses. The breezes begin to play, and earth sends forth a low murmur, as if to say, "I am glad to see you here, and glad to see you here." A picture of worship do we behold in the firmament, and the sun, the moon, and the stars, all seem to be looking upon you with much interest. The opening of a flower is an act of adoration, for it expands to meet the eye of Heaven. The swaying of the forests, green and lustrous, is a noble work of homage; they are "clapping their hands," and looking upon the old sea, dotted with the homes of wayfarers; there is a hymn there listened to by God. I would therefore have you join with an inward expression of gratitude in the universal tribute. There is no occasion to go out of your way for them. God's mercies are around you, over your heads and under your feet. His dew-drops and his showers are for you, and his sun and his moon, and his stars, all seem to be looking upon you with much interest. THE FUTURE.

Forward of twenty years as a looker-on, I have made the feet my study, and during that period many thousand pairs of feet have received my attention. I have observed with minute care the past from the antique as well as the modern instances, and I am obliged to admit that much of the pain I have witnessed, much of the distortion of the toes, the corns on the top of the feet, the bunions on the side, the callouses beneath, and the growing-in of the nails between, are attributable to the shoe-maker. The feet, with proper treatment, might be as free from disease and pain as the hands; their structure and adaptation to the wants and comfort of man, as we have seen is most perfect. Thirty-six bones and thirty-six joints have been given by the Creator to form one of these members, and yet man cramps, and confines his beautiful arrangements of one hundred and forty-four bones and joints, together with muscles, elastic cartilages, lubricating oily fluid, veins and arteries, into a pair of shoes or boots which, instead of protecting from injury, produces the most painful as well as permanent results. Many volumes have been written on the cause of corns, and it has been my lot to wade through much of them, without gaining much for my pains. I have therefore arrived at the conclusion, notwithstanding all that has been said to the contrary, that corns are in all cases the result of pressure.—Hall's Book of the Feet.

GOOD ANSWER TO BOYS.—Be brisk, energetic, and prompt.

The world is full of boys, and men too, who draw through life, and never decide on anything for themselves, but just draggle on and let the other, and let things take their own way. Such people are the dull sort of the earth. They hardly deserve to be called men, but they are called so, for they do not do anything for themselves, but just draggle on and let the other, and let things take their own way. Such people are the dull sort of the earth. They hardly deserve to be called men, but they are called so, for they do not do anything for themselves, but just draggle on and let the other, and let things take their own way. ACCOMPLISHMENTS.—Young ladies are, now-a-days, taught such a multiplicity of arts and accomplishments, that nothing which can add to the graces of mind and manner, seems omitted or forgotten. Only one requisite is wanting to complete the system. It is, that those intelligent and accomplished young ladies, should be sedulously instructed in the art of applying their knowledge, and exhibiting their graces advantageously. Not that they may procure a good establishment, which, as the term is now understood, means a fine house, furnished with every convenience, and a husband who has "money in his purse"; but that they may be fitted to discharge those important duties which can only make woman useful, respectable, truly beloved, and consequently happy. The aim of female education, therefore, ought to be, not to exalt those who enjoy its advantages above their sphere, but to make them more capable of performing the part which the laws of society, and, indeed, the nature of things, allot as the peculiar province of the female. "She looketh well to the ways of her household," is a commendation which every lady, who is mistress of a family, should be ambitious to deserve; and she should possess genius, and even talent, yet still let her remember, that to make a happy home for her husband and children, is far more praiseworthy than to make a "Ladies' Magazine."

THEY COURTNEY.—"Manner," says the eloquent Edmund Burke, "are of more importance than laws. Upon them, in a great measure, the laws depend. The laws touch us here and there, now and then, and every man is soother, corrupt or purify, exalt or debase, barbarise or refine, by a constant, steady, uniform, insensible operation, like that of the air we breathe; they govern us in our whole form and colour to our lives; according to their quality they aid or mar, they supply them, or they totally destroy them."

WHEN YOU SEE A FEMALE RISE EARLY, GET BREAKFAST, AND DO UP HER MOTHER'S WORK IN SEASON, AND THEN SIT DOWN TO SEW OR KILN, DEPEND UPON IT, SHE WILL MAKE A GOOD WIFE.

THE BEST DOWRY TO ADVANCE THE MARRIAGE OF A YOUNG LADY, IS WHEN SHE IS IN HER ROMANCE, MILDNESS; IN HER PRACTICE, WISDOM; IN HER BEHAVIOUR, MESTERY; IN HER LIFE, VIRTUE.

THE TILLER OF THE SOIL

By David L. Booth. A hardy sun-burnt man is he, A sturdy man you'll ever see...

No wretched bars secure his door, No ditch is dug around; His walls no cannon-battle o'er, No lead is on the ground...

And when the orb of day has crown'd With gold the Western sky, Before his dwelling he is found...

There is a period in the life of every young man, over which to pass safely requires most skillful navigation. To double this point is more dangerous...

A young man under the influence of this disease, is a perfect wretch. He knows nothing to learn from the experience of age...

He therefore obtains a razor and soap, and eteals away unadvised, to the great or layoff, and then undergoes this pleasurable and important operation...

He then commences the evening's entertainments by telling the ladies the latest fashion for frock coats, and the new style of putting on cravats...

Thus his vanity is fed, and when he takes leave of his dear souls, he imagines that he is in reality somebody, and that persons should treat him so insignificantly...
