"Maybe they haven't a plazes and shade-trees and hammocks as we have," sensibly suggested James. "Perhaps their rooms are hos and satify." "I am sure of is," agreed Mrs. Allen. James did not care to go round on the rasele-dasale with his mother more than once, and they decided togo to the large pavilion and view the fire works, which were to begin at nine o'clock. On their way they passed the great amusement hall, out of which floated on the evening air the rich, wild metodies of a negro chrus.

hall, out of which floated on the evening air the rich, wild meiodies of a negro chorae. "Jike the music pretty well," James commented, "but see what a crowd is listuning. Let's go in hereo," he said, prevestly, and they went into the bowi-ing alley-which chanced to be unoccu-pied. Mrs. Allen had the first turn and knocked down the king pin at the first roll, much to the admiration of her son. They had often played tenpins together at home. The alley adjoined a billiard room, which was densiy filled with oigar smoke. James heard some coarse words spoken. He glanced uneasily at his mother, who seemed not to hear them. After they had scored one game James uggested that they should go on so as "not to miss the fireworks, and scorn they were sitting in the pavillow waiting for the brilliant display. Others were there before them-showily dressed men with wome adorned in cheap silk and lace, eit and git, bables worry ing for the rest-tuning taleep denied them. "You dow't look like any body else here, somehow," said James, glancing at his mother and then over the audi-ence. "Are you sorry for that?" asked Mrs.

Portanpique and Upper Economy 20, 5 DOES reducing the price of goods imply that they were not originally worth the price charged ? No, because reducing an article with us means one of three things : Ist-The garment may not be selling as rapidly as desired, it does not follow it's not worth the money, the style or color may be a triffe undesirable. 2--Odds and ends ; it pays to rid ourselves of all the one or two garments of a kind left. 3--At the end of a season when reducing goods will induce people to buy even if the article is not actually needed. The last reason is the one we advance now for our RED FIGURE SALE. We want to rid ourselves of the balance of our Summer Stock. These goods have been reduced 30 per cent, and in some cases more, to clear out. These goods are all new this season, as we have no old shopworn goods in our store. I'l call and look at our Men's Suits, Pants and Overcoats; also our Boys Clothing of all kinds. Gent's Furnishings sold at prices equal to giving them away. All goods marked in plain figures and one price only.
