

to the last ditch to keep out the line of testimony and that the prosecution will work as hard for its admission.

The other crimes alleged by the state to have been committed, were the killing of Arthur Collins at Toronto; the murder of Leta George in Denver; the assassination of Gleason; the blowing up of the Independence depot, and the Indioator mine at Cripple Creek; the death of Walcott; attempts to assassinate Governor Peabody and Judge Gabbert; and the reign of terror in the Cour d'Alenes.

Mr. Hawley, continued: "Orchard and Adams committed all these crimes and we will show you that they committed them at the request of this defendant. We will show you others besides these which we will prove that they committed at the request of the members of the 'inner circle' and that they were paid for these crimes by these parties."

Upon a demand by the defense, the court ordered that the state furnish a list of these additional offenses which will be ready tomorrow.

Hawley said: "The 'inner circle,' composed as it was of this defendant and his co-defendants, to a great extent brought around them a few choice spirits and among them murder became a trade and assassination a means of living. We will show that a scale of wages was even devised, fixing the amounts to be paid for different crimes by this 'inner circle' to parties who committed these crimes."

The allegation was made in this opening statement that the bomb found in the Cour d'Alenes or had been originally made for the "murder of ex-governor Steunenberg." Orchard brought it from Colorado, used on Steunenberg. He took it to him to Wardner, to commit it with a Simpson and the latter declared it was too big. It weighed 50 pounds. Orchard thereupon threw it away and it is now in possession of the state.

This was in September, 1904, when Orchard and Simpkins repaired to Spokane, where they manufactured another bomb weighing ten pounds. They brought this with them and placed it under a sidewalk along which Steunenberg passed. For some reason not explained the bomb failed to explode.

"Simpkins went to Silver City and left Orchard to carry out the deed alone. Orchard made one or two other attempts to kill the governor, one being with a shot gun, before he succeeded. The statement was made that the year before, 1904, Haywood had sent Adams failed for the same reason that money promised him did not arrive. The state would show that Haywood supplied the money to Orchard for carrying out the murder of Steunenberg."

He added that they do also show that Haywood and his co-defendants supplied the money for the particular stress on the fact that Fred Miller left Spokane to act as Orchard's attorney without having been summoned by the prisoner, and while Orchard was known as the "Red" man. Mr. Hawley gave one particularly interesting bit of information. He said that the state would produce in evidence a letter, unsigned, but written by Orchard, to Orchard in relation to the murder of Steunenberg.

The state examined several witnesses this afternoon to prove the death of Governor Steunenberg, and to show the movements of Orchard at Caldwell before the murder. It was purely formal, most of the witnesses not being cross-examined.

Eight witnesses were examined before adjournment.

C. F. Wayne, who passed outward through the gate 20 minutes before Steunenberg was blown up, told of the explosion and the shocking condition of the victim when he, responding to Mrs. Steunenberg's call, ran to him.

John C. Rice, N. C. Ellis and A. Balchard, residents of Caldwell, testified before and after the crime.

Julian Steunenberg, son of the dead governor, told of meeting Orchard, then known as Richard, at the railway station at Caldwell three days before the crime and telling him in answer to his inquiry that his father would be home on the following Friday. He said that he was on his way home with his uncle and was two blocks behind his father when the explosion occurred.

The defense objected to practically all the evidence except that relating to the death of Steunenberg, on the ground that it was immaterial and in no way connected with the defendant.

Judge Wood, however, permitted all the testimony to stand on the understanding of the prosecution to later show the connection.

It is expected that Orchard will be put on the stand tomorrow afternoon and that he will be on the stand for a week or ten days.

HARRY ORCHARD'S CONFESSION OF MURDERS

Says He Lighted Fuse That Blew Up Bunker Hill Mine, Was Party to Blowing Up of Vindicator Mine and of Independence Station, That He Killed Lyte Gregory and Plotted With Haywood and Pettibone Murder of Governor Peabody--Was Encouraged to Commit Outrages by Moyer, Haywood and Pettibone and Paid by Them.

IN WHICH HE IMPLICATES W. F. M. OFFICIALS

Boise, Idaho, June 5.—Alfred Horsley, alias Harry Orchard, the actual assassin of former governor Steunenberg, went on the stand today as a witness against William D. Haywood and testified to a long chain of brutal, revolting crimes committed by himself, he said, at the instigation of aid for the pay of leaders of the Western Federation of Miners. An undertaking by counsel for the state that there would be later proof in connection with this, to make his testimony legitimate, opened the way like a floodgate to the whole diabolical story, and throughout the entire day Orchard went on telling of one crime to the recital of another, each succeeding one seeming more diabolically horrible than the one preceding it.

Orchard confessed that as a member of the mob which wrecked the Bunker Hill and Sullivan mill, in the Coeur d'Alene, he lighted one of the fuses that carried fire to the giant powder explosion, confessed that he was a party to the blowing up of the Vindicator mine at Cripple Creek which killed McCormick and foreman Beck; confessed that because he had not been paid for his first attempt at violence in the Vindicator mine he was treacherous to his associates in warning the managers of the Florence and Cripple Creek railway that there was a plot to blow up their trains; confessed that he was a party to the charges of buckshot into the body of detective Lyte Gregory of Denver, killing him instantly; confessed that for days he dogged governor Peabody of Colorado about Denver for a chance to kill him; confessed that he and Steve Adams set and discharged the mine under the station at Independence, which instantly killed the man who was in charge of the mine and who was in the act of falling in an attempt to poison Fred Bradley of San Francisco, he blew him and his horse up with a bomb of gelatine powder.

He has more brutal crimes to tell of which will bring his bloody career down to Caldwell, where, with a bomb, he killed Steunenberg. This will come tomorrow, for he is to resume the stand in the afternoon. The story today was told before a rigid, anxious crowd, which stargingly watched every movement and word of the witness, a crowd that sickened and grew weary of the fearful details long before James H. Hawley, pleading illness at 3 o'clock this afternoon, obtained adjournment for the day.

Orchard obtained control of himself almost from the moment he took the stand, and if he suffered, he did not show it. His eyes were bloodshot and his face mottled when he came to the stand to confront the men whose life he jeopardized. He was plainly nervous. He quickly steadied himself, however, and was soon collected and talking in soft, easy tones. His eyes were steady and he spoke in a clear, steady voice, fixedly at each other without flinching. Orchard's entry into the court room, after a dramatic pause, was intensely dramatic.

Senator Borah, looking toward the bench, said in a quiet tone: "It will be a few moments before the next witness arrives."

The crowd knew Orchard was to come and watched the doors of the room. The prisoner-witness long confined in the penitentiary was to be produced. Haywood's mother, Mrs. Carruth, of Salt Lake City, and her daughter, sat beside the prisoner and his wife, having arrived yesterday. The prisoners' daughters were absent. Haywood had a note book and at intervals took notes of the proceedings. Horsley had spent the night and morning at the office of Mr. Hawley and was brought to the court house in a carriage with three armed guards. In the chambers of the sheriff he was turned over to deputy sheriff Beamer, who is to be his special guard at the trial.

"Call Harry Orchard," cried the state's leading counsel, when the sheriff had signalled that all was ready. There were few preliminary questions as to Horsley's birthplace and real name and his first days in Idaho, and then Mr. Hawley led him through his part in the destruction of the Bunker Hill and Sullivan mill. He was telling of the meeting of the Burke, Idaho, union of the Western Federation of Miners, when the defense objected on the ground that the even occurred years before Haywood was a member of the central body of the Federation and that he was in no way connected with it.

Senator Borah testified that the state had a right to submit facts about the Bunker Hill and Sullivan, to prove why the Federation became hostile to governor Steunenberg.

Judge Wood ruled that the general facts were admissible but he limited the minor details of this part of the case. He then turned to the blowing up of the property, in which he said W. F. M. was a party. He said that W. F. M. was a party to the blowing up of the property, in which he said W. F. M. was a party. He said that W. F. M. was a party to the blowing up of the property, in which he said W. F. M. was a party.

ence were overruled by the court, on the strength of the repeated promises by the defense that it would show the connection of the defendant with this event. The witness then told of the plot to blow up the Vindicator mine. He said that the mine "high grading" and there discovered a quantity of powder. He reported this to Dave and there, he said, began the journey to Denver, where he said the first attempt was a failure because the cage man discovered him and his accomplices, but later a compromise was successfully effected by which the discharge of a pistol set off a bomb and killed superintendent McCormick and fireman Beck. Five hundred dollars, he said, was the reward for the murder. Then came the journey to Denver, where the witness said he met Moyer, Haywood and Pettibone and entered their employ as an assassin. He swore that Haywood paid $200 and then a confession that told of the successful attempt at the Vindicator mine.

Next Horsley related how he went to southern Colorado as a guard to Moyer, and here the narrative resumed. He said he was a party to the blowing up of the Vindicator mine. He said that he was a party to the blowing up of the Vindicator mine. He said that he was a party to the blowing up of the Vindicator mine.

Word that Horsley was on the stand spread through the city and in the afternoon a large number of people gathered in front of the court house to see him. He was seen by a large number of people. He was seen by a large number of people.

Boise, Idaho, June 5.—Harry Orchard, or Albert E. Horsley, as he gives his real name, appeared in court today in the Haywood trial and was questioned two hours in the morning and one and a half hours in the afternoon. Before he was called the state called some witnesses who identified him as the man who is charged with the murder of Governor Steunenberg. He was plainly nervous. He quickly steadied himself, however, and was soon collected and talking in soft, easy tones.

After he had taken the oath Orchard was asked by Mr. Hawley where he resided.

It was several moments before Orchard could speak, and then he stated, almost in a whisper, that he was held at the penitentiary awaiting trial for the murder of Frank Steunenberg. He said that he was the only hesitant shown by Orchard during the day. He told his story quietly, with an air of confidence. In a carriage with three armed guards he was turned over to deputy sheriff Beamer, who is to be his special guard at the trial.

material and will overrule the objection. After the objection had been overruled, Orchard told of the blowing up of the Bunker Hill mine, on April 29, 1899.

On the morning of April 29, when I got through breakfast, I was told there was a special meeting of the union and everybody was expected to be present. I went to the meeting. Mr. Richardson's objection was again overruled.

"The meeting was called to order," continued Orchard, "by the secretary, who said it had been decided that they go to Wardner to blow up the mill at the Sullivan and Bunker Hill mines and to hang the superintendent."

Orchard said two men were killed. He said that he was a party to the blowing up of the Vindicator mine. He said that he was a party to the blowing up of the Vindicator mine.

the efforts to assassinate governor Peabody of Colorado.

Orchard told of Moyer's arrival at Denver and of his conference with Haywood and Pettibone at the Federation headquarters. He told them of Moyer's arrival. They wanted to know if they could not be some scheme worked up to assassinate governor Peabody. They said they could not get any justice in the courts and decided they would take the law in their own hands.

"Who did the talking?" "Both Haywood and Pettibone," answered Orchard.

The witness said: "They told me where Peabody lived and told me to see if I could get acquainted with his ways. I did that; I spent about a week watching his movements and habits. No one was helping me. I told Pettibone in his letters in Denver, on 12th street, about six books from the Federation headquarters, that I would need some help. I told them, 'Haywood and Pettibone, when I came home from his office and passed a stone fence near his residence. They told me Steve Adams would be the best man to assist me.'"

Orchard said that he was a party to the blowing up of the Vindicator mine. He said that he was a party to the blowing up of the Vindicator mine.

unconsciously to his fearful death. Through it all Orchard winced but once, and that was when the defense made him name his six sisters and his one brother and their residences in Ontario and New York.

The defense fought the testimony with a multiplicity of objections and succeeded in heading off an attempt to have Orchard testify to the murder of Arthur Collins at Teluride. It also temporarily shut out the contents of a telegram sent by Orchard after his arrest. Except for this the state managed to get in its story intact.

The state today began its corroboration of Orchard's bloody narrative by producing the lead casing of the bomb designed to kill Peabody.

Orchard identified it and swore that he brought it from Canyon City to deliver, and then on to Wallace, where he was a member of a named Cunningham. It was thrown into the river and the state promises to prove its recovery.

governor was still talking with a friend; bomb and hurried out to Steunenberg's house and planted the bomb by the gate. I then started back to the hotel and when about two blocks away I met Steunenberg on his way home. I ran as fast as I could toward the hotel, but did not reach it when the explosion occurred. I went to my room to get some acid and giant caps and things in a package. As I was doing so a giant cap in my pocket exploded and blew one side of my coat out. I was afraid everybody in the house heard the explosion. I waited awhile, but there was no indication that anyone heard what had occurred in my room. I went down stairs and remained at the hotel until I was arrested."

The following Monday he received a telegram from Spokane in reference to his defense.

A wrangle among the attorneys ensued over the admission of this telegram.

Upon the state's promise to produce the original telegram, now held in a safety deposit vault, Orchard was permitted to testify in regard to it.
