The revenue of the city for the last fiscal year was £4,623,000.Cotton has been cultivated since time out of memory. One of the presents received by Jacob—Joseph's father—from the royal hand of Pharaoh was a cotton rope.MRS. LANOTRY is at Monte Carlo. She was seen the other day attired in deep red, with a black moire hat lined with ruby, and escorted by the young Earl of Rosslyn.A NEW free public library, to contain 80,000 volumes, is building in Manchester. This will give the city a total of 420,000 volumes, housed in five libraries, for free public use.PADEREWSKI says he has made all the money he needs and hereafter will devote his time to composition. He hasn't, however, enough money to induce him to get his hair trimmed.IN A railway station in Iowa is the following placard over the clock: "This is a clock; it is running; it is Chicago time; it is right; it is set every day at 10 o'clock. Now, keep your mouth shut."THE EDIBLE dogs in China are known by their bluish-black tongues. They never bark, and are very taciturn, and 4,500,000 are slaughtered annually to titillate the palates of the Celestials.WHEN A Japanese audience wish to express disapproval of a play, they silently turn around and sit with their backs to the stage. If this be done by a considerable number the curtain promptly descends.THE METROPOLITAN and city police districts of London, Eng., according to Whitaker's Almanac for 1894, cover an area of 443,421 acres, with a population of 5,633,306. The total length patrolled by the police reaches 8,360 miles.CHARLES B. CAREY, of Boston, is the first to utilize aluminum for leggings. He has a pair made of the metal and to test them tramped through the swamps of Florida, infested with venomous snakes. They were fang-proof.THE SULTAN of Turkey is a high liver. His kitchen costs the empire $200,000 a year, and his dishes, the daintiest a chef can prepare, are sealed by Osman Pasha, the hero of Plevna, and unsealed again in the Sultan's presence.UNDER A new French law cyclists are compelled to have affixed to their machines a metal plate bearing their name and address, so that the identity of the rider may be established in case of an infringement of regulations.THE DUKE OF FIFE, though he started life with a fortune, has steadily added to it. Stock in a London concern which he purchased some years ago at $150 a share is now quoted at $45,000 a share. He whistles and money comes to him.MR. HENRY C. LUNN, a veteran musician, who was for nearly 30 years a teacher of the pianoforte at the London Royal Academy of Music, and was also for many years editor of the Musical Times, has just died at the age of 76 years.THE DEATH is announced of Mr. Edward Reynolds, editor of Reynolds's Newspaper, London. He had been connected with the journal since its establishment in 1850, and only ceased to discharge the editorial duties in August of last year.SOME OF THE members of the Eureka Club, a Jewish institution of Rochester, are desirous that Christians should be eligible for membership, in order that a breach may thus be made in the social wall by which Christians and Jews are kept apart.LONGEVITY is by no means a thing of the past in England. The average of the persons whose obituaries appeared in the London Times during the course of a whole week last month was between 80 and 86 years, and such a record is said not to be uncommon.MORE THAN A hundred persons have asked for the custody and future charge of Anarchist Vallant's little girl Sidonie. As many of the requests are from "aristocrats" the Anarchists have promised to provide for and educate her in the faith of her father. The girl's fate is yet undecided.GEN. MELLINET, the "father" of the French army, who died recently, was the last surviving Waterloo officer France had. Waterloo survivors are very scarce, and it was a surprise to the British War Office when an old soldier, 96 years old, turned up in London the other day with a Waterloo pension certificate.VENICE was buried in snow a month ago as a result of the same unprecedented storm which buried Rome. The lagoons froze over, and large masses of ice blocked the Grand Canal. The gondolas were snow-covered, the narrow pathways were impassable, and great suffering and misery prevailed among the poor.WHITE HORSES are to be barred for military services in Germany. The Emperor has ordered that no more be purchased for the army, and those now in use are to be sold. He thinks that in a war white horses would be especially conspicuous because of the use of smokeless powder and would afford an easy mark for the enemy.IF PARENTS are tall the children tend to be tall, but the offspring of parents of unequal height most frequently follow the shorter. Excessive tallness is very rarely perpetuated; even if both the parents are above the average, the height of the offspring is usually only a third of the excess reached by the parents.SAXON girls 1,000 years ago always wore a gold crown during the marriage ceremony, and a fee being paid the priest for its use by the brides of the parish. In the year 927 the Danes raided the south of England and stole 100 church crowns, and there was to marrying in the afflicted villages for nearly six months, until new crowns could be made.A LARGE watch manufacturer says that his cheap watches may be depended upon to keep as good time as his costly ones, but they will not last so long. The works in each are essentially the same, but the jeweled bearings of the expensive watches will long outwear the cheaper bearings of the others. The costly watch is the watch for a lifetime, or perhaps longer; the cheap watch may be expected to give out in ten, fifteen or twenty years.THE MOST widely separated points between which a telegram can be sent are

British Columbia and New Zealand. The telegram would cross North America, Newfoundland, the Atlantic, England, Germany, Russia (European and Asiatic), China, Japan, Java, and Australia. It would make nearly a circuit of the globe and would traverse over 20,000 miles in doing so.

ONE OF THE surgeons sent abroad by the United States to inspect intending emigrants at European ports says that the knowledge of such inspection by the United States made the steamship companies extremely careful as to the sort of steerage passengers they accepted. He inspected 15,000 passengers and detained but two, while on this side not a single one of those who passed his inspection was excluded from the country.W. MARTIN CONWAY, who is lecturing at the Royal Institution in London, on his recent explorations in the Himalayas, has traversed more ground in those perilous regions than any other explorer. Although his journeyings there have covered over 3,000 miles, he says that the portion of country which he explored, compared with the mountainous region that has not yet been touched, is as the size of a postage stamp to a large quarto page.ONE OF THE most striking phenomena of the Adirondack region is the carrying power of the human voice in still weather upon the lakes great and small. Persons ashore easily hear the ordinary conversation of others who are so far out upon the lake as to be undistinguishable, and as a great many Adirondack visitors habitually violate the law touching the slaughter of deer, all such offenders are extremely careful not even to whisper a word that might betray their guilt when rowing upon the lakes.MR. HENRIKER HEATON has been gathering some very interesting marriage statistics concerning the customs in vogue in different countries, from which one reads with amusement, and perhaps a certain degree of amazement, that throughout Japan a man may get a divorce if his wife talks too much. Ordinary people may suppose that this harsh law will have the effect of curbing loquacity, but it has not. Japanese ladies are the most talkative of their sex, and divorces are common among them. In Tibet a woman is entitled to three husbands. In Melbourne a man may secure a divorce if his wife gets drunk three times, or if she habitually neglects her household duties.WESTERN ONTARIO.*BRANT.

The will has been entered at Brantford for probate of Edmund Brown, miller, of Paris. He leaves an estate of $19,599.50. He leaves $2,000 each to his daughters, Mrs. Chas. Lloyd, of Paris, and Mrs. Austin Clement, of Los Angeles, and $3,000 in trust to his son, George Henry Brown. The balance of the estate goes to the widow.

Sunday all day a large force of men and teams was employed repairing the head-gates of the Grand River Navigation Company, injured by the recent floods. The work will go on without cessation until completion. It will cost about $1,000.

Paris Council has declared in favor of taxing church lands. Hardy, Wilkes & Hardy, for years city solicitors of Brantford, have been dismissed without cause, save that they are R-formers. Another firm has been given the work.

HOW A BRIGHT LITTLE GIRL'S LIFE WAS SAVED.A Terrible Sufferer From St. Vitus Dance—Could Not Feed Herself and Had to be Closely Watched.

Recently, says the Shelbourne Economist, Mr. and Mrs. John Lindsay, who live in Mono township, told a reporter of the terrible suffering of one of their children and their restoration to sound health. It appeared that the child, contracted la grippe, and although she recovered from the usual symptoms of la grippe, she was never the same in health and strength. Her nervous system had become deranged, and as time passed the terrible symptoms of St. Vitus dance were noticed by the parents. Doctors did all they could for her, but instead of getting better she became worse. She could not feed herself, nor could she take hold of a cup when handed to her. She would frequently fall down when attempting to walk across the floor, and had to be closely watched for fear she might at some time fall on the stove. She completely lost control of her limbs. She could not turn herself in bed, and her parents had to turn her. She was perfectly helpless, and had almost lost the power of speech. When she did speak it was with difficulty she was understood, as her tongue was drawn to one side and she had lost control of it. The condition of the poor child was pitiable in the extreme. The father determined to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. They commenced the treatment and by the time three boxes were used she had improved to a marvelous extent. In April last, the child having fully recovered, no more pills were given her. Several months have passed since then and there has been no relapse and no sign of a return of the terrible malady. The parents state emphatically that Dr. Williams' Pink Pills saved the life of their little girl.

For all nervous disorders Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are the only thorough and reliable cure. They act directly upon the blood and nerves, restoring them to a sound condition, thus driving out disease. Sold by all dealers or sent post paid on receipt of 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50, by addressing the Dr. Williams Medicine Company, Brockville, Ont., or Schenectady, N. Y.

Never bear more than one kind of three kinds—all they have had, all they

—(EDWARD EVERETT HALE.)

London, Wednesday Feb. 21.

THE LONDON ADVERTISER, with its morning and evening editions, covers the ground. With one exception, it is the ONLY EARLY MORNING DAILY IN ONTARIO, outside of Toronto.

—Only those communications to which the writers are willing to have their names appended in print will be published in these columns. Neither the writing nor the publication of anonymous letters can be justified.

—Whatever opinions one may hold of evolution, it must be admitted that there is a great deal of the animal in some men.

—The welcome news comes that Gladstone's eyes are no worse than they have been. The House of Lords needs watching.

—Canadian imports for last January show a considerable decrease as compared with January, 1893. According to protection doctrine this is a sign of prosperity.

—The United States Senate has commenced to debate the Wilson Bill, and agents of the monopolists are lobbying in scores to have the taxes increased. They do it at Ottawa all the year round.

—To shirk a vote on the license reduction bylaw was not a very courageous expedient of the anti-temperance section of the London City Council. It is fortunate that the men who voted against the reduction had already been put on record by the vote of two weeks ago.

—Toronto now has an army of unemployed numbering 6,000, according to a statement made at the meeting of the local branch of the National Council of Women, in which Lady Aberdeen participated. Her Excellency suggested that sympathy could best be demonstrated by providing work for the needy.

—Dr. Cyrus Edson, of the New York Board of Health, says the grip is likely soon to disappear for a generation or so. No one will regret though it goes never to return. It is too bad that diphtheria could not be banished with it. That disease, as well as typhoid fever, will hover around, however, so long as unsanitary conditions prevail.

—A new kind of fuel made from solidified petroleum and other materials is now being extensively manufactured in France. It is stated that its heat-producing properties are very great, and that experiments to use it in engine furnaces have been of a most satisfactory nature. The general belief is that some such use will yet be found for the oil productions of Lambton county.

—The latest idea in the plebiscite line is the "plebiscite programme," which is now all the rage in Great Britain. An audience at any one concert is invited to indicate, on blanks attached to the programmes, the works they would like to hear at the next concert. Decision is by the majority vote. The idea was original with the late Dr. von Bulow, and is said to be successful.

DARED NOT VOTE.

Can it be that even the Conservative M. P.s. have deserted Lord Salisbury in his attempt to coerce the House of Commons? The fact that last night only six of them could be prevailed upon to vote against Mr. Gladstone's motion emphatically refusing to accede to the Lords' amendments of the Employers' Liability Bill demonstrates how quickly the Commons Conservatives have permitted their courage to ooze from their finger tips.

The Liberals have but to remain firm, and the lymphatic Salisbury et al. will join the skedaddle.

We are about to witness either a great victory for Liberal principles, or a campaign against the privileged intermediaries such as the present generation has not witnessed, and which must result in the discomfiture of the non-representative body.

A MESSAGE OF PEACE FROM QUEBEC.

One of the most notable and reassuring of recent public deliverances was the address of Hon. H. G. Joly, ex-Premier of Quebec, delivered in Toronto on Monday evening. Mr. Joly is a statesman of unimpeachable record, who has been respected by both political friend and foe during the 30 years that he has been a prominent figure in his native Province. He is a Protestant French-Canadian, too, and is thus enabled to speak as an influential member of the minority in the sister Province, about whose treatment the comparatively small number of mischief makers in Ontario have recently had so much to say. Though Mr. Joly is a Liberal and a devoted supporter of Hon. Wilfrid Laurier, he made it plain to his audience in Toronto that he did not visit this Province to promote party warfare, but with the higher purpose of dispelling such prejudices against the people of Quebec as may exist in Ontario; in his own words, "to show that they are not the bigoted, narrow-minded people that they are represented to be." Mr. Joly declined to be regarded as a representative of the Protestant minority, and said he came to Ontario simply as a witness, to relate his own personal experiences during the last 25 years. Mr. Joly undertook to state the position of the Protestant minority in these terms:

"I will take it as a question of political influence and offices, as a question of religious liberty, and the education of their children, as a question of the security with which they are allowed to enjoy their property in Quebec."

As to the question of offices in the Province, Mr. Joly said:

"He would open with a statement which might seem contradictory to his position, that the English Protestant minority is not unfairly treated; he did not think that the English Protestant minority gets its full share of offices. Many people, from a glance over the list of civil servants, have come to the conclusion that a comparison of the French and English names on the list gives ground for such an impression. But on carefully scrutinizing the list of English-Canadian names it becomes apparent that the Irish Roman Catholics take a portion of the offices which seem to fall to the share of the Protestant minority, so that it finally appears that the English Protestant minority does not get its full share of offices. But is a proof of the hostility of the majority to the minority? Is it not merely the result of the tendency which is found everywhere of the majority to be too greedy for office and to give the minority too small a share? He had looked carefully over the list of the civil servants at Ottawa, and in the ranks of the 4,500 men in the service he found that the French-Canadians were far from having their share. He was far from wishing to say that two wrongs make one right, yet was it wholly unfair for the French-Canadians to recoup themselves in Quebec?"

Mr. Joly continued that the English Protestant minority is given a due share of political influence in Quebec, and he adduced as evidence the fact that during the 26 years since Confederation the finance ministers of the Province have, almost without interruption, been members of the English-speaking minority. As to whether or not the religious rights of the Quebec minority were threatened—

"The speaker held in his hand a letter from a friend, a generous man, who would be glad to see him succeed in his mission of restoring confidence and trust between the two races, and who in that letter said that that task would be rendered immeasurably more difficult by the brutal attack of La Minerve upon Mr. Papineau on account of his change of religion. He was willing to discuss that as well as every other question; and he would warn the people of Ontario that they must not judge of the temper and disposition of the majority by the article published by La Minerve. It would be as unfair to condemn all Quebec and say that it indorses those words as to the P. P. A. (Applause.) Even La Minerve did not dare to keep its ground, and published a species of recantation, in which it avowed its respect for Protestantism. The Montreal Witness had published letters, which showed that not one single Liberal paper in Quebec indorses those charges made by La Minerve. (Applause.)"

Mr. Joly quoted from leading French-Canadian Liberal papers to show that the intolerant expressions of the Montreal French-Canadian Conservative organ with regard to Mr. Papineau were not generally entertained by the people of Quebec. He quoted from the Quebec Chronicle to show the bad effect which the operation of the P. P. A. in Ontario would have on the minority in Quebec, which would be held responsible for the crusade against Catholics in Ontario. Mr. Joly added:

"There are people who reflect and see how absurd and ridiculous it is to think that there is any need for the P. P. A. in Ontario, when the Protestants are four-fifths of the population. (Applause.) But not all understand the purposes or the temporary character of the organization, nor realize that when it has fulfilled the purpose for which it was called into existence in Ontario it will disappear like a noxious exhalation; and they think that it is taking root in Quebec."

The position of the Protestants in Quebec was then dealt with by Mr. Joly as follows:

"The religion of the Protestant minority is not interfered with and never has been. The minority, in fact, does not scruple to find fault with the religion of the majority, and to pity that majority; would like to remedy the present state of things, and is quite willing to relieve the French-Canadians from many abuses, the weight of which they themselves do not feel. But what could they do if they deprived the French-Canadians of the religion in which they were brought up? He shuddered to think of the results of such an event. The Protestants showed great grief at the sight of the clergy supported by tithes, and the farmers paying 1-26th of their products to the priest. For his part, he thought that the fairest way of supporting a clergy, and was acquainted with Protestant clergymen who would be very glad to be so supported. (Laughter.) He thought it the fairest of all systems, that when the Almighty sends plentiful harvests the priest benefits by the Divine bounty, and when the crop is poor the priest also suffers. It was perfectly right to associate the clergy with the farmers' welfare. And it is one of the most beautiful features of a character of the simple French-Canadian farmer to see the honesty and faithfulness with which he discharges his duty to his church. (Applause.) But, though the Protestants pity the Roman Catholics for that, yet the Roman Catholics do not interfere with the manner in which they pay their clergy—or rather with the manner in which they do not pay them. (Laughter.) The Roman Catholics do not interfere with the church-building of the Protestants; and, while the Protestants attribute much of the poverty of the Roman Catholics to their habit of church-building, the poverty of the Protestant farmer was never attributed to his church-building. In point of fact, the Protestant church is usually the worst building in the district. There is a feeling which honors the habitant, and that is the pride in his church. There is very little ornament in his own house, but all his ambition is to decorate his church and to make it a monument worthy of his God. If those present could but see how he enjoys this they would say that the money thus spent was well laid out. And as to the assertion that the farmers are blest to build churches, it must be remembered that new churches are not built every year."

Mr. Joly further explained that his mother "was a Roman Catholic, and when he told them that she taught him his prayers and never sought to turn him to the left or to the right from the way in which his fathers walked they could understand his sympathy for those of his race who were not also of his religion." This statement was greeted with prolonged applause. On the school question, about which so much has been said in recent years, and regarding which selfish men are still endeavoring to profit by stirring up strife, the veteran statesman said:

"As to the educational rights of the minority, he desired to point out that Sir John Rose, in the debate of 1865 on Confederation had shown that the right of separate education was accorded to the Protestants of Quebec before the union, when they were in a minority, and entirely in the hands of the French-Canadian majority. The distribution of the State funds for education under that condition of affairs was entirely satisfactory. A like statement was to be found in the report of the commission of 1890 on the education of the minority in Quebec. During all those years there had been the same liberality, the same justice to the minority."

The English-speaking minority, Mr. Joly explained, had cause to grumble because of the Riel agitation, with which he disagreed with his political friends, but in all that time of excitement no one ever threatened not to employ those of the minority. As to the agitation over the Jesuits' Estates Act, Mr. Joly said it was not true that the name of the Pope had been substituted for that of the Queen in the bill. He explained:

"In the agitation that took place at the time it was said that the sacred rights of her Majesty had been ignored, and that the power of the Pope had been recognized instead. Now, in the whole body of the bill there was not one word of the Pope, or the Holy See, or anything of that kind. It might be asked, Why had the name of the Pope appeared in the preamble of the bill? He would appeal to any lawyer to know if he wanted to wind up any company, to make any arrangement, to settle any claim, whatever by legislation, would it not be indispensable that there should be stated the rights of both parties, and especially that it should be provided that the agreement should be approved or sanctioned by the authority to be stated? 'If I had been in the House when this bill was passed,' declared Mr. Joly, 'I, as a Protestant, would have insisted upon having the name of the Pope in it, and his approval of it, so that the claim should not have been made a second time. I should have said that it was indispensable that the Pope's name should be placed in the bill.'"

The attitude of the majority of the people of Quebec towards Protestants Mr. Joly exemplified by a reference to his own experience. He said:

"For 25 years he had represented a Roman Catholic constituency, and it was exclusively Roman Catholic, for the reason that there was only a little part of Lotbiniere that was Protestant, and that, unfortunately, since 1856, that had been disfranchised. It remained disfranchised for the whole time that he had represented the county until the last election, when the men who had been deprived of their votes voted for him, as he had expected they would. But he had really been elected by an exclusively Roman Catholic constituency, and he had had some contests of a desperate nature. His opponents had naturally availed themselves of the religious question against him. They had reminded the people that how they could trust him with their dearest interests. The only answer they got was, 'We prefer a good Protestant to a bad Roman Catholic.' (Applause.)"

Mr. Joly warmly repudiated the report that he had been driven out of public life by religious persecution, bigotry or anything of the kind. His Liberal friends in Quebec had never lost a vote because he was a Protestant. In conclusion, Mr. Joly said he believed that rationally and logically the minority had no right to complain, and there should be a cessation of misrepresentation and a union of heart and hand in both Provinces to promote the common welfare.

There can be no doubt, as Premier Mowat said at the close of the great gathering, that Mr. Joly's address in Toronto will bear good fruit. His words were sown in a locality where much of the misrepresentation of which he complained has been given its start, and much of the bigotry that has been cultivated assiduously by designing Ontario politicians has obtained its early nurture.

We do not despair of the future of Quebec, or of the Dominion, but we would entertain grave doubts of our national future if we believed that the antipathies and misrepresentations of which Mr. Joly complained were entertained by a very large section of the people of Ontario. The trouble is that until Hon. Wilfrid Laurier became leader of the Liberals, and found it convenient to visit this Province, our people knew comparatively little about the people of the neighboring Province. We are beginning to know each other better now. We cannot be too well acquainted or have the spirit of conciliation and of toleration cultivated in us too strongly. When people recognize that it is not by clubbing a man that you can convert him to your views the occupation of the mischief-maker and the appeal to religious prejudice, both in Ontario and Quebec, will be gone. The unenacted principles of men like Laurier, Joly, Mills, Edgar, and Paterson of Brant, ought to contribute a great deal towards emancipating the country from intolerance of every description, thus enabling the people to get together and work for the upbuilding of their common country. When men go fighting about their religion the opportunity of the public plunderer occurs. No people are more easily robbed than those who are engaged in the barren occupation of quarreling over what is the best highway to heaven. Monopolies and class privileges of every sort have been grafted on the body politic with ease while religious bigots have quarreled over their respective beliefs and unbeliefs.

WHEAT—Quiet, steady.

Since our last issue, the market has seen only a few changes in the grain situation, and they were not very extensive, and occurred in wheat and oats.

Wheat opened for the week easy in price and small supplies. All the large markets showed lower values. This has the effect of making the market, generally, weaker, and sales were then on made at lower prices than ever witnessed here before. The range for red wheat was from 50 to 55 per 100 lbs. and others at 50 to 55 to 60.

Oats opened at 30c. On Saturday supplies were small and the market was very firm, made at 30c to 31c. Tuesday they were a little easier, a good many heads selling at 28c and 29c, and very few at 31c. Today 28c was the price for the best quality of oats, and others at 28c to 30c.

There were only a few loads of barley on hand, and the price paid in all cases 28c and over, 28c being paid in a few instances. The market was in the market of cases bright and fit for malting. Feeding quality sold at 28c.

Only one load of peas was offered this week and the price was 30c per 100 pounds. The quality was poor.

Corn sold at 2c for white and 1c for yellow; demand good, supply light.

None or but few were offered.

Beans were scarce and the demand light; sales ranged from 7c to 8c per bushel.

Seeds quiet. Clover sold at 3c and timothy at 5c.

The supply of butter was very uneven and the demand steady. The result was that prices were easily effected. Some days choice brands were sold at 2c to 2 1/2c, and others at 1 1/2c to 2c.

The other grades of good quality were effected much the same, and at the close 2c to 2 1/2c was the price for best makes of pound rolls in basket lots, 2c to 2 1/2c for casks.

Eggs continue to come in freely, and are sold mostly at 15c per dozen, some lots going at 16c and others at 14c by the basket and for strictly new laid only.

Chickens sold moderately well at 40c to 45c per pair, according to size and age.

Turkeys sold at 80c to 90c per lb.

Beef, mutton and veal were dull and unchanged in values; receipts were good.

Dressed hogs came in freely, the price was 10c and easily accepted.

The Man-That-Draws-the-Handcart.

By Edward Eggleston.

In the summer of 1861 George was chief guide to another party of English gentlemen. With his usual caution George had avoided the villages and haunts of the Yanktons, in whose neighborhood he was hunting, but he was overtaken by a danger which no foresight could have enabled him to avoid. A band of Teton Sioux from west of the Missouri had come over into the Yankton country, either to hunt, or in hope of scalping some wandering half-breed or Assiniboin hunters. They swang as from the ground, surrounding the English party, and knocking the head guide from his horse. By a curious instinct George always did the right thing in every difficulty. As soon as he recovered from the blow he brought him of the ten-gallon keg of brandy among the stores in the cart. Had the Indians drunk this, there would have been no scope for the white men from death or torture. Northrup knocked in the head of the keg with an axe, and the brandy ran out in the sight of the Indians, to whom on this wild prairie it was more precious than gold.

As the prisoners marched in single file toward the Indian camp, a Teton in the advance-guard was smitten with a happy thought. He could enslave the brandy, and glorify himself for all time, by taking a string-shot at the whole party. Northrup, who was in the lead of the file of prisoners, saw the Indian's gun aimed directly at him, but by a quick motion he dodged the bullet, which glanced from the cheek-bone of an Englishman behind him.

The Teton would, perhaps, have destroyed the white men without mercy, but happily at that moment there came up a larger band of Yanktons, and the captives were as glad to see these men as they had been afraid of meeting them before. The Yanktons claimed the prisoners as captured while trespassing on their ground, and making a rush, they "hunted" them out of the hands of the other tribe. It was at once settled that the Englishmen should be set free, but the handcart man, being the guide that had brought them to the buffalo country, must die. He was separated from the others, and put to a lodge by himself under a strong guard.

In the Yankton council there arose a debate. One single man advocated Northrup's release; all the rest were for killing him. That solitary friend was the son of the Yankton who had long held to the hope that the drawer of the handcart would marry his daughter—the same who had searched for him after his encounter with Old-Man. Between the Indian and George existed, perhaps, that mysterious Freemasonry known among the Sioux as "Coda." That relation gave the old Yankton's son a right to shield Northrup from the vengeance of the tribe. So that the minority of the one had the veto power over the wrath of the Indians—such is the despotism of custom among them. The young man's plea through the long night in which his tribe endeavored to beat down his steadfastness was substantially this:

"I know that The-Man-that-draws-the-Handcart has come upon our lands. Also, he has not treated our family as he should. He has not married my sister, as we expected he would have done. Yet there is friendship between him and my father. He has eaten in our lodges. By our custom I have a right to save my father's friend. I claim that right, and you must let him go." At last the party, rebuffed of provisions and outfit, were released, with an old rack of a pony, and with no food but a quarter of a horse. They made their way to the shipping-post called Georgetown, on the Red River. During the last two of the nine days journey they had nothing to eat. The frontiersmen who ferried them over at Georgetown said to me that "George stood it well enough, but the Englishmen looked awful hollow."

Like many other men who have gone to the frontier in their boyhood, George Northrup chafed with regret that he "had thrown his life away," as he put it. But he declared that the force of habit was so strong now that he could not change. He had no other way for him, I suggested to him that he devote his life to zoology. He was the keenest and most intelligent observer of the habits of animals that I have ever known. For a year or two, after Mr. Agassiz's suggestion, offered him an engagement to collect for the Cambridge Museum. But at the outbreak of the war he was seized with a patriotic enthusiasm, and he wrote to the great naturalist almost in the words, "While the war lasts I belong to my country; when the war is over I am at your service." He looked forward with much hope to the prospect of a life of scientific work, and I make no doubt that had he lived he would have ranked at least as high as Audubon. I have seen him go down upon his knees in the grass, and by careful examination tell whether it was a fox or a wolf that had lain in a "nest," by the position in which the feet had been placed. Where the ground was beaten under a wild plum-tree he examined the confused tracks critically tracing them with his fingers, and told me that an old doe elk and her fawn had stood in the place all the day before fighting flies. He was regarded as almost infallible in these matters.

Northrup became orderly sergeant of Company C in Brackett's Battalion of Minnesota cavalry, which for a time was part of the Fifth Iowa cavalry in the Army of the Cumberland.

Always respecting a manly enemy, Northrup had a chivalrous hatred of a skulking one. Jerry Stone, a noted Tennessee bushwhacker, had killed in cold blood an unarmed old man in the neighborhood of Fort Donelson. George vowed to kill him at the first chance. One day as he was in command of an advance-guard he received an order to fall back. But just as his men were mounting, Stone's bushwhackers fired upon them. George ordered a charge, and himself selected the leader, and gave chase. As Stone's horse was the fleetest, Northrup used his revolver first, saving the carbine for close encounter. Jerry Stone fired three times without hitting his pursuer; George shot five balls from his revolver, with one ball wounding Stone's horse, and shooting three through the man. He held after him that he ought to have killed him, but he could not slay any helpless enemy. It is said that Jerry languished a year in the hospital, and then recovered, and escaped by violating his parole.

George's value as a scout was soon discovered, and he was ordered to report for that service to Gen. Crook, and was, indeed, several times consulted by Major-General Thomas, and sent out under his directions from his headquarters. On one occasion he penetrated a hundred miles into the Confederate lines, combining forces with the loyalists of the mountains of North Carolina. These illiterate and independent mountaineers, like many other highlanders, led semi-independent lives, and are loath to acknowledge governmental restraint. During the days of the Confederacy they called themselves Union men, now they are "moonshiners." They did not "lift cattle," like the Scotch Highlander of the last century; they only make illicit whisky and shoot revenue officers. Among these men of the hills, who carried flintlock muskets, Northrup camped. Under their guidance he surrounded the house of a savage provost marshal, a Col. Walker of Texas, who had offered $10,000 in any kind of money for Northrup's party "dead or alive." They undertook to capture him, but Walker resisted and was killed. Then Northrup hurried back into the mountains, and escaped between two divisions of the Confederate army into the Union lines at Chattanooga. For his conduct in this dangerous expedition he received high commendation at headquarters.

It was soon after this, while he was on furlough that I, with others, endeavored to get a commission for him. The governor offered him a paltry second lieutenant's commission in a new regiment of infantry, but Northrup wrote, after a day or two of consideration: "I am a cavalryman by nature. My place is in the saddle. I cannot recruit. I would rather go back and fight it out with my company." Brackett's Battalion was ordered to the frontier in 1864 to aid in suppressing the Sioux, who had risen against the whites in 1862, and against whom an ineffectual expedition had been sent in 1863.

During the march across the plains (George acted as correspondent of the St. Paul Press newspaper, and, as I remember them, his letters were written in English of great purity and vigor, and the accounts of the march were enlivened by Indian legends and incidents of adventure suggested by the sufferings of the marchers. He had always a notion that he should lose his life in a charge, and when the battle of Tah-pah-o-kutah drew on he gave several little articles to another correspondent, saying, "Send these home, perhaps they will be my only obituary." Perhaps it was only his old dream of melancholy. But the Indians in front were his old foes, the Yanktons and Teton, to whom he was well known, and he had good reason to fear that they would seek to put out of the way one who understood their country so well.

Once in the battle, he dashed out far in front of his company, and began to say something to the Indians in their own language. Did he court death, and was he upbraiding them for their cruelties? Or did he hope to secure a parley and so to make peace? No one knows what he said; but the Sioux recognized him, and determined to slay the handcart man. The old Indians of the plains who had no guns shot at him with arrows. George had a sixteen-shooter, and Brigadier-General Miner Thomas told me that he saw three Indians fall under his rapid fire. I doubt not that every shot took effect. But at last, pierced by three arrows, Northrup fell dead. The Indians tried to secure the body, that they might mutilate it according to their custom, but Major Brackett ordered a corporal to recover it. "If it costs the life of every man in your squad."

They buried him, and trod the ground down with their horses' feet that the enemy might not discover his grave. Many of the soldiers of the battalion were accused of long afterward to carry his photograph with them, and the corporal who recovered the body showed me a soiled picture that he had carried in his breast pocket for a long time. I have seen hardened and weather-worn frontiersmen who could not speak of him without tears.

Thus lived, and thus died, at the too early age of 27, George W. Northrup. No braver, any purer, kinder, or more modest young man ever lived. While he was widely famous on the frontier, and since he died the Minnesota Historical Society has shown some interest in the facts of his life. But no county in that State has his name, no island in his country, no River of the North is his monument, no village or township commemorates him. Small politicians, Indian chiefs, old French explorers, have borne off the honors. The Northrup, the most romantic figure in the early history of Minnesota, has nothing but that nameless grave beyond the Missouri and swift forgetfulness for his need.

Prohibitory Duty Passed on the Right of a Schoolma'am to Wed.

TOPKKA, Kan., Feb. 20. The young lady who goes to Concordia, Kan., to teach school will find a very exacting rule, which was recently adopted by the board of education. It seems that several lady teachers have married in the midst of the term when it was impossible to fill their places. This the Concordia school board proposes to regulate, and it did so recently by the adoption of the following resolution:

Inasmuch as it seems to be the custom of lady teachers of the public schools of Concordia, Kan., to contract marriage without the knowledge or consent of said board, therefore be it:

Resolved by said board of education, that should any of the lady teachers of the Concordia schools hereafter commit matrimony during the term for which they have been elected, they shall forfeit a sum of money equal to one-half a month's salary, provided they take a home man, and a sum equal to one month's salary in case the groom is imported from some other county or State; in either case the lady shall cause a card of invitation to be sent to each of the members of the board of education.

This order of the board has stirred up a hornet's nest in Concordia, where three young lady teachers are engaged to be married to "foreigners," one a resident of Chicago, another holding a clerkship in the pension department at Washington, and the third a citizen of Jewell county, Kansas. The friends of the young ladies say the order will not hold in court, and that if the board attempts to enforce it an injunction will be asked for on the grounds that the board of education cannot legally impose such obligations upon a teacher.

the Lists.By accident, no doubt, the following well-known citizens have found their names left off the Dominion voters' list:Thos. Hobbs, sen., 296 King street.
Thos. Taylor, 287 Dundas street.
Geo. Loveless, sen., 185 St. James street.
Rev. W. J. Clark, 307 Wolfe street.
Lou Paladino, 464 Talbot street.
John McKinley, 2114 Dundas street.
U. A. Buchner, 257 Talbot street.These gentlemen discovered, by a personal inspection of the voters' lists, now on view daily, afternoon and evening, at the Young Liberal rooms, Oddfellows' block, that they were disfranchised, and they are enabled, under the new Ontario law, to have their names placed on the lists by application at the Liberal rooms without the necessity of going before the county judge.Is your name on or off the list?
No one can be certain unless he personally inspects it.

The only necessary qualifications are:

1. You are a British subject.
2. You are 21 years of age or upwards.
3. You reside in the city.

This afternoon and evening will be a most suitable time to examine the lists and make the necessary affidavit, which cost the voter nothing. Be sure now, and avoid disappointment on election

Health Officer Hutchinson to an AD-VERTISER reporter yesterday afternoon. "I discovered that the child sent from the Dolly family on Rectory street to the hospital had died there, that the body had been moved to the former home of the child, where other three of the family had been ill with the same disease. What was worse, a public funeral had been advised, and the placard on the house had been torn down by Mrs. Dolly, who informed me that she thought it had been there long enough. I ordered the house to be cleared and the funeral to be conducted in private, as the law provides. There could be no better method of spreading the contagion than was adopted here. The law is very clear on the subject, and the penalties, on prosecution, are severe."
A "Sweet Social."In the King Street Presbyterian Church
last night what proved to be the most successful social in the history of the congregation was held. It was termed a "sweet social," and was carried into effect with the assistance of Mr. D. L. Hardey, the leader of the choir. It was, indeed, something new in that line, and as everyone entered they were presented with some of the choicest candy that could be supplied. The seating capacity of the church was not large enough to supply seating accommodation for the large throng that assembled, and it required the placing of chairs in the aisles to meet the wants of the audience. The pastor, Rev.
D. Robertson, occupied the chair, and as it was his first experience at a social of that kind, he invited all to come to the next one, and he would tell them how he enjoyed himself. The programme held the names of some of the leading soloists of the city, including Miss Mutch, the Misses Minnie and Edith Harrison, Miss Lilywhite and Miss Nichol. Miss Georgie Calver also gave several recitations in a manner which won for her generous applause. MissMutch was in exceptionally good voice, and sang "The Holy City" in a very effective manner. The Misses Harrison, in their duets, displayed sweet, rich voices that blended harmoniously. They received vigorous encores. Nothing more can be said of Miss Lilywhite than has been said in the past—that she possesses an excellent voice, and created a most favorable impression. The social will net over $80.SOLDIERS AT SUPPER.No. 3 Company, Seventh Fusiliers, Hold Their Second Annual Banquet
—An Immense Success.A brave lot of soldier boys sat around the board at the London House last night, and fought a winning fight with the excellent menu provided by Host Humphreys.
They were handsome, strong of lung, and being true soldiers, not one of them ran away from their post before the close and left the meeting without a quorum. The occasion was the second annual dinner of
No. 3 Company, 7th Fusiliers, and proceedings commenced at 8:30 sharp. Then there was a clatter of dishes and a rattle of knives and forks for about an hour, while the soldier laddies did justice to the meal like old campaigners.The guests were Lieut. Taylor, Color-Sergeant Brown, Corp. A. V. Becher, Sergt.-
Major McCrimmon, Color-Sergeant Allen, Corp. E. H. Price (No. 1 Company, R. C.
I.), Staff-Sergeant McCrimmon, Col. Sergt.
Jacobs (No. 3 Company), George Hayman, color-sergeant No. 4 company), H. D. Fleming (color-sergeant Thirty-eighth Battalion, Brantford), T. S. Thompson (sergeant No.
1 Company, Twenty-seventh Battalion, Petrolia), G. Woods (corporal No. 1 Company, Thirtieth Battalion, Hamilton), H.
M. Milligan (sergeant No. 1 Company),
Pte. W. C. Garside, Pte. John Heaman,
Sergt. B. J. Toit (No. 3 Company), Pte.
C. Potter, Sergt. R. Spicer (No. 3 Company), Pte. E. E. Waspe, Pte. J. H. Chat-ton, Pte. W. R. Kennedy, Pte. W. J. Barter, Pte. C. J. Crisp, Pte. H. P. Cop-pinger, W. C. Tackaberry, Sergt. Freeland, Corp. Anderson and Pte. A. E. Irvine.
The introduction of the toast list presented the fact that every one present was an after dinner speaker, an orator and a singer. Color-Sergeant H. Brown was in the chair and made an excellent toastmaster. Lieut. Taylor proposed the toast of "Loyalty," and also replied to the toast of "Our Commanding Officer and Staff." Sergt.-Major McCrimmon made an appropriate response to the toast of "The Army, Navy, and Canadian Militia."
"Sister Corps" was coupled with the names of Corp. Price, R. C. R. I., Col.
Sergt. Flemming (Brantford), Sergt.
Thompson (Petrolia), Corp. Woods (Hamilton).—The Seventh Battalion may well congratulate themselves on the position they have attained in No. 1 and 2 districts, said Sergt.-Major McCrimmon in response to the toast of "Our Non-Commissioned Officers." "They have obtained fourth position, and were within one-half a point of the Grenadiers of Toronto. If there has been a great deal of prosperity in the battalion during the last year it has been due
—with all due respect to the other officers —to the non-commissioned officers." Staff-Sergt. McCrimmon and Color-Sergt. Hayman also replied."Sister Companies" brought to their feet Color-Sergt. Freeland, Color-Sergt.
Allen, Color-Sergt. Hayman, Color-Sergt.
Jacobs and Sergt. Milligan.
Ex-Sergt. Crane and W. C. Tackaberry responded to the toast of "Our Guests."
"The Ladies," "The Press," and "Our Host" were each duly honored and the company broke up vowing to fight their battles over again in the same manner next year.The following sung during the evening:
Sergt. Todd, Color-Sergt. Jacobs, Sergt.
Thompson, Pte. Coppinger, Pte. Garside, Pte. Charlton, Sergt. Todd, Corp. Price,

Local Conventions Arranged For.Interest in dairy matters has not abated in any way since the recent successful convention at Ingersoll, and those who devote their time to promoting this very successful branch of agriculture are in constant demand at farmers' institutes and local dairy meetings.Secretary Wheaton, of the Western Ontario Dairymen's Association, addressed a series of meetings in Wentworth and Welland counties last week. Though the roads and weather were very unfavorable, the attendance was good and successful meetings were held at Woodburn, Castville and Winger.Dairying in the sections referred to has not made the advancement it has in districts like Oxford and Listowel, consequently this missionary work on the part of the association is having a good effect in stimulating the farmers in these places to give more attention to dairying as a business. The speakers will return a handsome profit for the labor and time expended upon it.To meet the increasing demand for information on all dairy topics and to afford an opportunity to dairymen to acquire the latest thought on the best practices in successful dairying, the Dairymen's Association of Western Ontario have arranged for local conventions at Dunnville,
Feb. 23; Shelburne, March 2; Watford, March 7, and Wingham, March 9. A good staff of speakers is provided, consisting of A. Pattullo, Woodstock, president of the association; Prof. Dean, O.A.C., Guelph; J.
A. Ruddick, of the Dominion dairy commissioner's staff, Ottawa; Robert Cleland, Lindsay; John Gear, London; J. S.
Pearce, London; T. B. Millar, Provincial
Dairy School, Guelph; J. W. Wheaton, London, and others.The local dairymen and townspeople in these localities are looking after the advertising in their respective districts, and large gatherings are expected at each place. The Dairymen's Association hopes by gatherings of this kind to carry out the object it has in view of promoting not only the cheese industry of Western Ontario, but the butter industry as well, and to keep this western district in the front rank as a producer of fine dairy products.DAIRY MEETING IN ELGIN.LAURENCE, Feb. 20.—J. S. Pearce, R. Robertson and J. W. Wheaton, of London, addressed a very successful dairy meeting at Laurence, Elgin county, yesterday. The cow, how to feed her; how to care for her and her product so as to make the most profit out of it; winter dairying and paying for milk by the percentage of butter fat were among the subjects discussed. The addresses were much appreciated by those present.Give Holloway's Corn Cure a trial. It
