— Transfer of Chattel.]—One Chamberlain, being in insolvent circumstances, and indebted to K. in $120, was pressed by him for payment, when he agreed to sell K. a horse for $110, in part payment; and about 15th August, 1885, delivered the horse in pursuance of such agreement. K. kept possession of and worked the horse for one day, and then he lent him to Chamberlain, who continued to use him in his business until the early part of Co K., who thenceforward retained possession of him. On 31st October Chamberlain executed an assignment to the plaintiff in pursuance of 48 Vict. c. 26 (O.), respecting assignments for the benefit of creditors, which came into force on the 1st September, 1885. In an action against K. to recover the horse, on the ground of fraudulent preference:—Held, that he sale having been made before the Act came into force, the provisions thereof did not apply, Ings v. Bank of Prince Edward 1sland, 11 S. C. R. 265, followed. Coats v. Kelly, 15 A. R. St.

Transfer of Moneys.]—Held, following Broddy v. Stuart, 7 C. L. T. Occ. N. 6, that 48 Vict. c. 26 (O.), is intra vires the provincial legislature. Where the plaintiff sought to invalidate certain payments of money made by an insolvent debtor within thirty days prior to his making an assignment under the said Act, but before it came into force:—Held, that the claim could not be sustained either upon the ground that the statute was retrospective, or upon the ground that what the plaintiff sought to obtain was defined and given by s. 3, s.-s. 3, of the statute. Clarkson v. Ontario Bank, 13 O. R. 666, Transfer of Securities. 1-The defendant, who was employed as financial manager of a firm, advanced to them a large sum of money, to be repaid on his giving six months' notice demanding payment, in default of which the firm covenanted to assign certain which the firm covenanced to assign certain securities. This notice was given on 15th January, 1885, but, although repeated demands for payment were made by defendant, nothing was done until 19th December, 1885, when a transfer to him of certain securities was made by the firm, who within two months made an assignment under 48 Vict, c. 26 (O.) which came into force on 1st September, 1885. In an action by the assignee under that statute to recover back the amount realized from the securities: Held, that, whether or not the firm were in insolvent circumstances at the time of the transfer of the securities, the statute was not retrospective so as to apply to a transfer made as this was in pursuance of a pre-existing binding agreement for valuable consideration, and valid under the then state of the law. Whether the effect of the statute is to alter the law in this respect, quere. Clarkson v. Sterling, 15 A. R. 234.

Criminal Law-Change by Criminal Code —Embezslement before Code—Imperial Statutes.]—The Imperial Act 20 & 21 Vict. c. 54, s. 12, provides that "nothing in this Act contained, nor any proceeding, conviction, or judgment to be had or taken thereon against any person under this Act, shall prevent, lessen, or impeach any remedy at law or in equity, which any party aggrieved by any offence against this Act might have had if this Act had not been passed; . . . and nothing in this Act contained shall affect or prejudice any agreement entered into, or security given by, any trustee, having for its object the restoration or repayment of any trust property misappropriated:" — Held, that the class of trustees referred to were those guilty of misappropriation of property held upon express trusts. Semble, that the section only covered agreements or securities given by the defaulting trustee himself. Quære, is the Act in force in British Columbia? If in force, it would not apply to a prosecution for an offence under R. S. C. 104 (the Larcey Act), s. 58. An action was brought on a covenant given for the purpose of stilling a prosecution for the embezzlement of partnership property under R. S. C. c. 164, s. 58, which was not re-enacted by the Criminal Code, 1892:—Held, that the alleged criminal act, having been committed before the code act, naving been committed before the code came into force, was not affected by its pro-visions, and the covenant could not be en-forced. Further, the partnership property not having been held on an express trust, the civil medy was not preserved by the Imperial Act. Major v. McCraney, 29 S. C. R. 182.

Crown—Negligence—Act Giving Right of Action.]—Held, that, even assuming that 50 & 51 Vict. c. 16 gives an action against the Crown for an injury to the person received on a public work resulting from negligence of which its officer or servant is guilty (upon which point the court expressed no opinion), such Act is not retroactive in its effect, and

The court has no jurisdiction under the provisions of 50 & 51 Viet, c. 16 to give relief in respect of any claim which, prior to the passing of that Act, was not cognizable in the court, and which, at the time of the passing of that Act, was barred by any statute of limitations. The Queen v. Martin, 20 S. C. R. 240, followed. Penny v. The Queen, 4 Ex. C. R. 428.

Dower.]—The Dower Act of Ontario, 32 Vict. c, 7, s, 3, is retrospective in its effects. Re Tate, 5 C. L. J. 260.

Limitation of Actions—Injury to Lands clampensation.]—Unless there is a clear declaration in the Act itself to that effect, or unless the surrounding circumstances render that construction inevitable, an Act should not be so construed as to interfere with. oral Promise.]—The plaintiff sued, in 1849, on a debt which accrued more than six years before. A new trial was granted in 1850, but the second trial was delayed until 1852:—Held, that 13 & 14 Vict. e. 61, which came into operation in January, 1852, precluded him from recovering on an oral promise. The court, under the circumstances, allowed the defendant to claim the benefit of that statute, though he had not insisted upon it at the trial, but had objected to the sufficiency of the evidence on other grounds. Marriage—Irregularity — Confirmation— Decd—Feme Sole.]—H. P., patentee of the land in question, was married to one G. by a Methodist minister, who had at that time no right to solemnize matrimony. She conveyed to M., but, being told that her marriage was illegal, executed the deed by the name of Pringle, as if she were sole, her husband Green being the witness. After the passing of 11 Geo. IV. c. 36, her heir brought ejectment, contending that that statute confirmed the marriage, so as to avoid her conveyance executed as a feme sole:—Held, that the Act had not such a retrospective effect as to destroy the deed. Pringle v. Allan, 18 U. C. R. 575.

Married Women's Property.]—Held, that the Married Woman's Property Act, 1884, 47 Vict. c. 19 (O.), is not retrospective. Scott v. Wye, 11 P. R. 93.

Municipal By-law—Costs of Quasking.]—14 & 15 Vict. c. 109, s. 35, providing that when a by-law has been quashed the municipality shall pay the costs, has not a retrospective operation, and the court therefore discharged a rule calling upon the defendants to pay the costs of an application on which a by-law had been quashed before the passing of that Act. Brown v. County of York, 9 U. C. R. 453.

— Ultra Vires—Subsequent Statute.]

—Held, that a by-law of the county of Perti, passed before 22 Vict, c. 7, authorizing county councils to raise moneys to assist persons to sow their land, &c., was not ratified thereby, Said statute is not retroactive, except in the case of the by-law of the county of Bruce, thereby specially provided for. Campbell v. Township of Elma, 13 C. P. 296.

Saving Pending Proceedings.)—A motion to quash a municipal by-law was dismissed on the ground that it had been expressly validated by 54 Vict. c. 82. s. 14 (0.) While an appeal from the judgment was pending, 55 Vict. c. 90 (0.) was passed, s. 6 of which enacted that "nothing contained herein or in the Act passed in the 54th year of Her Majesty's reign, and chaptered 82, shall affect any action or proceeding now pending;"—Held, that the latter Act was declaratory or retrospective; its effect was to prevent the respondents from asserting that the by-law had been validated by the earlier Act, and therefore, the by-law being defective, the judgment must be reversed, though it was right when it was selivered, Quilter v. Mapleson, 47 L. T. N. S. 561, referred to. In re Gillespie and City of Tornoto, 19 A. R. 713.

White v. Clark, Parsill v. Clark, 11 U. C. R.

See, also, White v. Clark, 10 U. C. R. 490.

—— Notice of Appeal.]—Semble, that s. 26 of R. S. O. 1877 c. 38, requiring notice of appeal within one month from the judgment complained of, would not apply where the judgment had been pronounced before the coming into operation of the Act. Rose v. Hickey, 7 P. R. 390.

Courts Act, 1896, s. 73 of the Judicature Act, 1895, was amended so as to enable a divisional court and the court of appeal, and any Judge thereof, to grant leave to appeal in cases where no absolute right to appeal exists, and where, under the law as it stood before the amendment, no such leave could have been obtained:—Held, that, being a matter of pro-cedure, it applied to pending actions. Watton v. Watton, L. R. 1 P. & M. 227, followed. Spence v. Grand Trunk R. W. Co., 17 P. R. 172.

Campbell v. Fox. 17 C. P. 542. See 8, C., 26 U. C. R. 631.

Under C. S. U. C. c. 89, registration is notice of all instruments registered before, as well as since, registration was made notice. Vance v. Cummings, 13 Gr. 25.

Section 66 of the Registry Act, 1865, which enacts that "no equitable lien, charge, or in-terest affecting land shall be deemed valid in any court in this Province after this Act shall come into operation, as against a registered instrument executed by the same party, his heirs or assigns, and tacking shall not be allowed in any case to prevail against the provisions of this Act,"—is not retrospective. McDonald v. McDonald, 14 Gr. 133.

In ejectment it appeared that the patent issued in 1839, and the batentee conveyed to M. in the same year. The conveyances were never registered, M. conveyed to the plaintiff in 1869. Defendant claimed through his wife by a deed executed and registered in October, 1857, but which was held to be voluntary:— Held, that, if the defendant had been a pur-chaser for valuable consideration, he would have been entitled to succeed by reason of such priority, under 29 Vict. c. 24, which first made it necessary to register all instruments after the issue of the patent, although no deed had been already registered. Quære, whether s. 62 applies to cases where the patent has issued before its passing. McCarthy v. Arbuckle, 29 C. P. 529.

Sheriff's Poundage.] - Where a sheriff. before 7 Wm. IV. c. 3, s. 32, levied on a defendant's goods, he was entitled to poundage, although there was no sale afterwards, that Act not having a retrospective effect. Commercial Bank v. VanNorman, T. T., 3 & 4 Viet.

Sheriff's Sale of Lands-Heirs of Mortgagor, I-27 Vict c. 13, after reciting that doubts had arisen as to the meaning of ss. 257, 258 and 259, of the C. L. P. Act, enacted that "whenever the word 'mortgagor' occurs in the said sections, it shall be read and construed as if the words his heirs, executors, administrators, or assigns, or persons having the equity of redemption,' were inserted immediately after such word 'mortgagor:'"-Held, that the enactment was a declaratory one; and where lands subject to a mortgage were sold by the sheriff under execution in a suit against the executors of the mortgagor, and conveyed by the sheriff to the purchaser in October, 1858, the sacrin to the purchaser in October, ISSS, the court held this sale validated by the statute, and that the heirs of the mortgagor could not impeach the same. Held, also, that 27 Vict, c. 15 dld not affect the question. Mc-Evoy v. Clune, 21 Gr. 515.

Ship-Master's Lien-Admiralty Acts.]-The master of a vessel registered at the port of Winnipeg, and trading upon Lake Winnipeg, had in 1888-1890 no lien upon the vessel for wages: and, even if such a lien were held to exist, there was in those years no court in Manitoba in which it could have been enforced; and it could not now be enforced unforced; and it could not now be enforced and der the Colonial Courts of Admiralty Act, 53 & 54 Vict. c. 27 (Imp.), or the Admiralty Act, 54 & 55 Vict. c. 29 (D.), because to give these statutes a retroactive effect in such a case would be an interference with the rights of the parties. Bergman v. The Aurora, 3 Ex. C. R. 228.

Summary Conviction - Certiorari-Notice of Appeal.]—Held, that, though not expressly so enacted, 49 Vict. c. 49 (D.) is retrospective in its operation, and applies to convictions whether made before or after the passing of the Act, and that under s. 7 the right to certiorari is taken away upon service of notice of appeal to the sessions, that being the first proceeding on an appeal from the conviction, Regina v. Quære, whether an appeal would lie from a judgment pronounced after the passing of the Act in an action al-ready pending. Hurtubise v. Desmarteau, 19 S. C. R. 562.

Appeal—New Right—Pending Action —Judgment after Passing of Amending Act.]
—In an action brought by the respondent against the appellant for $2,006, which was argued and taken en délibéré by the superior argued and taken en delibéré by the superior court in review on the 30th September, 1891, the day on which the Act 54 & 55 Vict. c. 25 was sanctioned, s. 3 of which gave a right to appeal to the supreme court of Canada, judgment was rendered a month later in favour of the respondent. On appeal to the supreme court of Canada:— Held, that the respondent's right could not be prejudiced by the delay of the court in ren-dering the judgment, which should be treated as having been given on the 30th September; Hurtubise v. and therefore no appeal lay. Hurtubise v. Desmarteau, 19 S. C. R. 562, followed. Couture v. Bouchard, 21 S. C. R. 281.

Appeal-New Right-Pending Actions Standing for Judgment.]—Held, that the right of appeal given by 54 & 55 Vict. c. 25 does not extend to cases standing for judgment in the superior court prior to the passing of the said Act. Couture v. Bouchard, 21 S. C. R. 281, followed. The statute is not applicable in cases already instituted or pending before the courts, no special words to that effect being used. Williams v. Irvine, 22 S. C. R. 108.

The statute 54 & 55 Vict. c. 25, s. 3, which provides that "whenever the right to appeal is dependent upon the amount in dispute, such amount shall be understood to be that demanded and not that recovered, if they are different," does not apply to cases in which the superior court has rendered judgment or to cases argued and standing for judgment or to cases argued and standing for judgment (en délibéré) before that court, when the Act came into force. Williams v. Irvine, 22 S. C. R. 108, followed. Cowen v. Evans, Mitchell v. Trenholme, Mills v. Limoges, 22 S. C. R. 331. See, also, Supreme Court of Canada, II.

Surveys.]—12 Vict. c. 35, s. 37 (C. S. U. C. c. 93, s. 28), which prescribes the rule for drawing the side lines in double-fronted concessions, applies to townships theretofore sur-Marrs v. Davidson, 26 U. C. R. 641.

Suspending Operation of Penal Act-Vested Right of Action.]—A bill of exchange drawn by the plaintiffs upon the Burford Canning Company (Limited) was addressed to "The Burford Canning Co." and accepted
by the drawees by the signature "The Burford Canning Co.. Ltd." This was a few days after the royal assent had been given to the Ontario Act 60 Vict. c. 28, s. 22 of which provided that in the case of contracts by limprovided that in the case of contracts by limited liability companies the word "limited" should be written or printed in full, a previous statute, 52 Vict. c. 25, s. 2, having made the directors liable for the amounts due upon such contracts where the word "limited" did not appear after the name of the company where it first occurred in the contract. The writ of sumoccurred in the contract. The writ of summons in this action (against the directors) was issued on the very day on which the royal assent was given to the Act 61 Vict. c, 19, s, 4 of which suspended the operation of the Act of the previous session:—Held, that the use of the abbreviation "Ltd." was not a compliance with 52 Vict. c, 26, s, 2. Held, also, that no stay was created by 51 Vict. c. 19, s. 4, of any action but one brought unc. 19, s. 4, of any action but one brought un-der 60 Vict. c. 28, s. 22 (1), and the corre-sponding section of the revision of 1897, so that, upon this view of the effect of 52 Vict. c. 26, s. 2, the plaintiffs were entitled to re-cover. If, however, the use of the contraction "Ltd." was a compliance with the last-mentioned section, the plaintiffs were still en-titled to recover, because the contract was titled to recover, because the contract was made some days after the passing of 60 Vict. c. 28, s. 22, which required the unabbreviated word "limited" to be used; and the plaintiffs, upon the execution of the contract by the Bur-ford Canning Company (Limited), became became ford Canning Company (Limited), became and remained entitled to look to the directors personally, and had a vested right of action, with which the "stay" clause, s. 4 of 61 Vict. c. 19, could not interfere, there being nothing in it which required the court to hold it to be retrospective. Howell Lithographic Co. v. Brethour, 30 O. R. 204.

Tariff Act—Time of Taking Effect—Importation of Goods.]—By 57 & 58 Viet. c. 33, s. 4, duties are to be levied upon certain specified goods "when such goods are imported into Canada":—Held, that the importation as defined by s. 150 of the Customs Act, R. S. C. c. 32, is not complete until the vessel containc. 32, is not complete until the vessel containing the goods arrives at the port at which they are to be landed. Section 4 of the Tariff Act, 1895 (58 & 59 Vict. c. 23), provided that "this Act shall be held to have come into force on the 3rd of May in the present year, 1895." It was not assented to until year, 1895." It was not assented to until July:—Held, that the goods imported into Canada on the 4th May, 1895, were subject to duty under said Act. The Queen v. Canada Sugar Refining Co., 27 S. C. R. 395.

Toll-gate — Act Prohibiting — Provision for Non-retroactivity—Repeat of.]—A turn-pike road company had been in existence for a number of years and had erected toll-gates and collected tolls therefor, when an Act was passed by the Quebec legislature, 52 Vict. c. 43, forbidding any such company to place a toll or other gate within the limits of a town or village without the consent of the corpora-Section 2 of said Act provided that this Act shall have no retroactive effect, which section was repealed in the next session by 54 Vict. c. 36. After 52 Vict. c. 43 was passed, the company shifted one of its tollgates to a point beyond the limits of the village, which limits were subsequently extended so as to bring said gate within them. The corporation took proceedings against the company, contending that the repeal of s. 2 of 52 Vict. c. 43 made that Act retroactive Vict. c. 43 made that Act retroactive, and that the shifting of the toll-gate without the consent of the corporation was a violation of consent of the corporation was a violation of said Act:—Held, that, as a statute is never retroactive unless made so in express terms, s. 2 had no effect, and its repeal could not make it retroactive: that the shifting of the toll-gate was not a violation of the Act, which only applied to the erection of new gates; and that the extension of the limits of the village could not affect the pre-existing rights of the company. Village of St. Joachim de la Point Claire v. Point Claire Turnpike Road Co., Claire v. Point 24 S. C. R. 486.

Usury.]—Held, that 29 & 30 Vict. c. 10, s. 5, had not a retrospective operation, so as to enable a bank to recover upon usurious notes given before it was passed. Commercial Bank of Canada v. Harris, 26 U. C. R. 594.

The defence of usury having been pleaded and established in this case against the plaintiffs before 29 & 30 Vict, c. 10, s. 5, was not in any way affected by that Act. The distinction between vested rights and mere modes of procedure pointed out. Bank of Montreal v. Scott, 17 C. P. 358.

A security void at the time of its creation on the ground of usury is not rendered valid by 16 Vict. c. 80, passed at a subsequent date. Where, therefore, a mortgage had been made upon a usurious agreement:—Held, that a judgment creditor of the mortgager was entitled to file a bill to redeem, upon paying the amount actually advanced before the expiration of the time appointed for payment. Ishervecod v. Dixon. 5 Gr. 314.

Writ of Error—Costs,]—33 Vict. c. 7, s. 12 (O.) provides that "the law and practice as to writs of error, and the proceedings thereon, shall hereafter be the same as the law and practice now in force in England," and there error cannot be brought for any error in a judgment with respect to costs;—Held, that the statute was not retrospective, so as to affect a writ of error in respect of costs issued before its passing; for such a writ is a new action, and there is nothing in the statute shewing that it was intended to take away a vested right. Pope v. Reilly, 29 U. C. R. 495.

XIV. PUBLIC ACTS.

Judicial Notice.]—The courts are bound to take judicial notice of every Public Act of Vol. III. D—212—63

IV. c. 22, vesting the property of a particular bank in the hands of commissioners, with power reactive termine claims made upon the bank by credtions, though stated in the preamble to be made "on behalf of a great portion of the inhabitants of the Province," was not considered a public statute, Markland v. Bartlet, Tay. 146.

XV. RECITALS.

Amending Act—Parties Interested—Conclusiveness.]—Semble, that when a statute amending an original statute recites that it has been granted upon the prayer of the parties interested in the original statute, it must be taken upon the recital as conclusive that each individual interested in the original statute was concurring in the passing of the amending statute. City of Toronto and Lake Huron R. W. Co. v. Crookshank, 4 U. C. R. 309.

Canada Company — Charter.] — Held, that the recitals in the Imperial statute 6 Geo. IV. c. 75 are sufficient proof of the charter of the Canada Company. Woodhill v. Sullican, 14 C. P. 265.

XVI. RE-ENACTMENT OR CONSOLIDATION.

Change in Language—Variation of Liability—Application of,]—Under 14 & 15 Vict. c. 51, s. 13, railway companies were required to erect and maintain fences on each side of the railway with openings, or gates, or bars therein, "and" farm crossings, &c., for the use of the adjoining proprietors; but on the consolidation of this Act in C. S. C. c. 66, s. 13, the clause was changed by requiring the company to erect and maintain fences, &c., "at" farm crossings:—Held, that the substitution of the word "at" in the Consolidated Act for the word "at" in the Gonselidation of the word "at" in the former Act, varied the liability of railway companies, and imposed no duty upon defendants (who were incorporated by 31 Vict, c. 41) to make farm crossings. minion Adoption of Construction—Dominion Act.)—The rule that when a statute has received a construction either from long practice or by judicial interpretation, and is afterwards re-emacted in the same terms, the legislature is deemed to have had that construction in view in the re-enactment, cannot apply to an Act of the Dominion, where different constructions are shewn to have obtained in some of the Provinces. XVII. REPEAL AND DISALLOWANCE.

1. Application and Effect of Repealing Statutes.

Assessment Act—Tax Sale—Time for Impeaching.]—By the Assessment Act of 1896, owners had four years to impeach a tax deed. By an Act passed in 1869, all actions for that purpose were stayed until after the following session; and by another Act of the same session all previous Assessment Acts were repealed, amended, and consolidated, with a reservation of rights had or acquired under the repealed Acts. By one of the clauses of the amended Act the limit appointed for bringing actions was two years:—Held, that an owner who had less than two years of his four remaining when the Acts of 1869 were passed, had like others two years thereafter to bring his suit. Connor v. McPherson, 18 Gr. 1975.

—Semble, that the evidence in this case shewed that the reidence in this case shewed that the redemption money had been paid, and within the three years required by 13 & 14 Viet. c. 67, namely, by 6th March, 1855, and that, although this was after the repeal of that Act, yet, under 29 Viet. c. 26, the payment was made good. McDougall v. McMillan, 25 C. P. 75.

— Warrant.] — On the 1st January, 1867, certain Acts relating to assessment were repealed, "saving any rights, proceedings, or things legally had, acquired, or done under them:"—Quarre, whether the right to issue a warrant under those Acts still existed. Charlescorth v, Ward, 31 U. C. R. 94.

Canada Temperance Act—Effect of Revised Statutes,]—The effect of the revision of the statutes of Canada, brought into force by royal proclamation, 1st March, 1887, though in form repealing the Act consolidated, is really to preserve them in unbroken continuity; and the adoption of the Canada Temperance Act by municipalities prior to that revision, has not been changed or interfered with by it. The alterations made in the phrase-ology of the Act by the revision are not vital, and do not materially change its character or effect. Frontenac Liense Commissioners v. County of Frontenac, 14 O. R. 741. See also Regina v. Durnion, ib. 672.

Common Law Procedure Act—Arrest—Continuance of Section Authorizing.]—8 Vict. c. 48, except s, 44, was continued in force by 18 Vict. c. 85, till the 1st July, 1856, and no longer. The C. L. P. Act, which came into force on the 21st August, 1856, enacted that from the time when it should take effect, s, 44 of 8 Vict. c. 48, should be repealed:—Held, that this s, 44 could not be considered as continued by the C. L. P. Act, though, no doubt, it was so intended, and therefore no arrest could take place under it after the 1st July. Barrow v, Caprcol, 2 P. R. 95.

Distribution of Estates—Married Woman—Rights of Husband.] — The legislature of New Brunswick, by 26 Geo. III. c. 11. ss. 14 and 17. re-emerted the Imperial Act 22 & 23 Car. II. c. 10 (Statute of Distributions), as explained by s. 25 of 29 Car. II. c. 3 (Statute of Pistributions), as explained by s. 25 of 29 Car. II. c. 3 (Statute of Fraults), which provided that nothing tend to estates of femes covertes dying intestate, but that their husbands should enjoy their personal estates as theretofore. When the statutes of New Brunswick were revised in 1854, the Act 26 Geo. III. c. 11 was re-enacted, but s. 17, corresponding to s. 25 of the Statute of Frauds, was omitted. In the administration of the estate of a fene coverte, her next of kin claimed the personalty on the ground that the husband's rights were swept away by this omission:—Held, that the personal property passed to the husband and not to the next of kin of the wife. Lamb v. Cleccland, 19 S. C. R. 78.

Indian — Action for Debt.]—A debt contracted by an Indian while C. S. C. c. 9 was in force, cannot be sued for under 32 & 33 Vict. c. 6, by which that Act is repealed. Quere, whether a judgment can be obtained against an Indian even under the latter Act. McKinnon, v. VanEvery, 5 P. R. 284.

Indian Lands—Act for Sale of—Timber Act—Order in Conneil.]—The Act respecting Indian lands, 23 Vict. c. 151 (C.), authorized the governor in council to declare applicable thereto the Act respecting limber on public lands. An order in council was issued accordingly. Eight years afterwards another Act was passed, 31 Vict. c. 42 (D.), which contained a clause authorizing the governor in council to declare the Timber Act applicable to Indian lands, and to repeal any such order in council and substitute others, and another clause authorizing the governor in council to make regulations and impose penalties for the sale and protection of timber on Indian lands:—Held, that the Timber Act continued in force until revoked or altered by a new order in council. Attorney-General v. Foelds, 18 Gr. 433.

They proved against the firm on the 3rd July, 1869, but afterwards withdrew it, and proved on the 11th January. 1870, under s. 60 of the Act of 1889 specifying and putting a value on the separate liability of C:—Held, that the Act of 1899 could not apply, for the case was jending before it, and the question in dispute as to the right to prove was not a matter of procedure only, exempted from the exceptions in the repealing clause. In re Chaffey, Merchants Bank of Canada v. Davidson, 30 U. C. R. 64.

Pending Prosecution under-Saving Clause.]-The prisoners were indicted under s. 147 of the Insolvent Act, 1869, for having, within three months preceding the execution of an assignment in insolvency, pawned, pledged, and disposed of, otherwise than in the way of trade, certain goods which had remained unpaid for during the said three months. The indictment was found on the 23rd October, but the information had been laid and the prisoners arrested before 1st September, when the Insolvent Act of 1875 came into force. By s. 149 of the Act of 1875, the Act of 1869 was repealed, but there was a saving clause as regards proceedings commenced and pending thereunder, and as regards all contracts, acts. matters, and things made and done before such repeal, to which the said Act of 1869 would have applied:—Held, that the prosecution as well as the offence came within this saving clause, the laying of the information being the commencement of the prosecution, while the disposal was a contract, &c., done before such repeal. Regina v. Kerr, 26 C. P. 214.

v. Kirkpatrick, 8 P. R. 248.

Landlord and Tenant—Distress.]—The Act 57 Vict. c. 43, which repeals 8, 28, s. s. 1, of R. S. O. 1887 c. 143, and substitutes a new section therefor, applies to leases made on or after 1st October, 1887, to which the repealed section, by s. 42 of R. S. O. c. 143, applied. Carroll V, Beard, 27 O. R. 349.

Married Women's Property Act—Repeal of—Repealing Act.]—Quere, as to the effect upon ss. 2, 3, and 4 of C. S. U. C. c. S5, an Act respecting the conveyance of real estate by married women, of the repeal, by 36 Vict. c. 18, of 34 Vict. c. 24, which repealed them. Ogden v. McArthur, 36 U. C. R. 246.

Mechanics' Lien—Preservation of Lien—Samp Clause. —The plaintiffs registered a lien under the Mechanics' Lien Act of 1873, on the 14th August, 1874, for the price of manual production of the same payable in installments, the last of which was payable in the payable in the 1875. A bill to enforce the lien was filed on the 7th July, 1875, being within the 90 days "from the expiry of the herical of credit" prescribed by s. 4 of the Mechanics' Lien Act of 1874, which came into force on the 21st December, 1875, enacted that "every lien shall absolutely cease to exist at the expiration of 30 days after the work shall have been completed, or the machinery furnished, unless in the meantime proceedings shall have been taken to realize the claim under this Act." and s. 20 repealed all Acts inconsistent therewith:—Held, reversing the decision in 24 Gr. 209, that, even if the Act of 1874 repealed the Act of 1873, the plaintiffs' lien was saved by s.-s. 34 of s. 7 of the Interpretation Act, which provides that the "repeal of an Act at any time shall not affect any act done, or any right or right of action existing, accruing, accrued, or established . . before the time when such repeal shall take effect." Walker v. Walton, 1 A. R. 579.

Merchants Shipping Act — Distressed Seanan—Recovery of Expenses.] — Section 213 of the Merchants Shipping Act, 1854, make the expenses of a seaman left in a foreign port and being relieved from distress under the hoard of trade, in Her Majestys powers the board of trade, in Her Majestys powers the board of trade, in Her Majestys the master of the ship or "owner same from the master of the ship or "owner same from the master of the ship or "owner same from the master of the ship or "owner same from the same from the master of the ship or "owner same from the same from the master of the ship or "owner same from the master of the ship or "owner same from the master of the ship or "owner ship on the repealed Act, in proceedings under the Merchants Shipping Act of 1854 proof of owner-ship of a ship may be made according to the mode provided in the Merchants Shipping Act, 1894, by which the former Act is repealed. The Queen v. Sailing Ship "Troop" Co., 29 S. C. R. 632.

Mining License—Renewal—Privilege.]—
The appellants, having obtained a license, under R. S. N. S., 5th series, c. 7, s. 195, to work a certain coal mining area for two years, afterwards applied, under the same section, for a renewal thereof: but in the meantime the section had been repealed by an amending Act of 1889:—Held, that at the date of the application to renew, the power to grant it was gone; for, even if the amending Act were so construed as not to interfere with vested rights, the appellants possessed a privilege, and not an accrued right, in reference to the renewal sought. Main v. Stark, 15 App. Cas. 384, referred to. Reynolds v. Attorney-General for Nova Seotia, [1896] A. C. 240.

Municipal Act - Amendment-Application to Revised Statutes — Local Improve-ments.]—Section 464, s.-s. 2, of 36 Vict. c. 48 (O.), enacts that the council of every city, town, and incorporated village, shall have power to pass by-laws for assessing upon the real property to be immediately benefited by real property to be immediately benefited by the making, &c., of any common sewer, &c., "on the petition of at least two-thirds in num-ber and one-half in value of the owners of such real property, a special rate," &c. The sub-section is amended, so far as the same relates to the city of Toronto, by 40 Vict. c. 39, s. 2, by inserting after the words "owners of such real property" the words "or where the same is in the opinion of the said council necessary for sanitary or drainage purposes, 40 Vict. c. 6, respecting the revised statutes, passed in the same session, repealed 36 Vict. c. 48; and R. S. O. 1877 c. 174, s. 551, s.-s. 2, corresponds with the repealed s. 464, s.-s. 2:
—Held, that under 40 Vict. c. 6, s. 10, R. S. O. 1877 was substituted for the repealed Acts, and the amending Act applied to R. S. O. 1877 c. 174. (2) The amendment in 40 Vict. c. 39 was a reference in a former Act remaining in force to an enactment repealed, and so a reference to the enactment in the revised statutes, corresponding to s. 464, s.-s. 2, within s, 11 of 40 Vict. c. 6. (3) That the city of Toronto, therefore, could pass a by-law in 1879 to construct a sewer, when necessary in their opinion for sanitary or drainage purposes, without any petition therefor. In re Brock and City of Toronto, 45 U. C. R. 53.

By-law — Necessity for Confirmation, 1—20 Vict. c. 69 requires a by-law authorizing the conveyance of a road allowance, before it can have any effect, to be confirmed by the county council within a year from its passing. Before such confirmation 22 Vict. c. 99 repealed that Act, saving all things done thereunder, and by it no confirmation of such a by-law was made requisite:—Semble, that the confirmation was not dispensed with. Winter v. Keoien, 22 U. C. R. 341.

— Rending Arbitration—Exception.]—
Section 14 of the Municipal Amendment Act, 1894, 57 Vict. c. 50 (O.), must be read with s. 8, s. s.s. 43 and 48, of the Interpretation Act. R. S. O. 1887 c. 1, and so read, rights of action accrued at the passing of the former Act are not affected thereby. On the 29th April. 1883, a township corporation obtained an award against a county corporation under s. 533a of the Consolidated Municipal Act, 1892, for part of the cost and maintenance of certain bridges expended by them, and, while an append against the award was before the court of append, 57 Vict. c. 50 (O.), repealing s. 533a, was passed:—Held, that there was no "arbitration pending" by reason of the append at the time of the passing of the repealing Act. The plaintiffs were held entitled, notwithstanding the repeal of s. 553a, to recover the proportionate amount paid or agreed to be paid by them, from the commencement of 1893 to the date of the passing of the repealing Act. Judgment in 26 O. R. 689 varied. Township of Morris v. County of Huron, 27 O. R. 341.

Penalty — Pending Action for.]—Before the passing of 16 Vict. c. 80, a qui tam action was commenced under 51 Geo. 111. c. 9, s. 6, for taking an illegal rate of interest:—Held, that the suit could not be continued, for by the first mentioned Act the court had lost the power of giving judgment for the penalty; but, semble, that contracts prohibited by the former law must still be held void. Jones q. t. v. Ketchum, 11 U. C. R. 52.

Pleading — Statutory Pleas—Repeal of Statute.]—23 Vict. c. 24, s. 1, under which the defences pleaded in this case were permitted, and had been pleaded, being such defences as could have been pleaded to the original order, was repealed by 39 Vict. c. 7 (O.):—Held, that such repeal, under the Interpretation Act, 31 Vict. c. 1, s. 7, s.-s. 34 (O.), would not affect the pleas. Barned's Banking Co. v. Reynolds, 40 U. C. R. 455.

Statutory Pleas—Repeal of Statute —Forcing Judgment,—To an action on a foreign judgment commenced previous to the repeal by 39 Vict. c. 7 (O.), of 23 Vict. c. 24,
s. 1 (which allowed the defendant to set up to the action on the judgment any defence which was or might have been set up to the original suit), the defendant, after the passing of the repealing Act, pleaded several pleas setting up such defences:—Held, that they could be pleaded, as the right to plead was an "existing right" within the meaning of s. 6,
"existing right" within the meaning of s. 6,

s.-s. 4, of the Interpretation Act, 31 Vict. c. 1 (O.) Fowler v. Vail, 4 A. R. 267.

Substituted Sections, 1—36 Viet. c. 13 repeals ss. 11 and 12 of 31 Viet. c. 9 (D.), and substitutes others therefor:—Quere, whether these sections should be pleaded as part of the first Act generally, or stating specially that they are so by virtue of the last Act. Semble, the latter, Edmund q. t. v. Hooy, 35 U. C. R. 495.

Recognizance — Forfeiture — Continuance of Proceedings. 1—Under 7 Viet. c. 31, the recognizance was not forfeited by the non-payment of the condemnation money on the recovery of judgment, unless the alternative condition was not compiled with. The legislature having made no provision in the Act repealing 7 Viet. c. 31, for continuing the proceedings commenced under it, no proceeding can now be taken against bail under such recognizance. Hardy v. Hall, 2 U. C. R. 276.

— Notice—Default.]—Since the repeal of that Act:—Held, that the recognizances taken under it are not binding, except where the debtor has been notified, and has made default while the Act was still in force. Macdonald v, Wecks, 3 U. C. R, 441.

Sale of Lands—Order of Court—Completion of Nate—Saving Clause.]—Where there was a material error in a confirmation deed of lands sold with the sanction of the court under C. S. U. C. c. 69, an application made after the repeal of that Act for an order authorizing the execution of a new deed was refused. 36 Vict. c. 36, s. 18, after repealing C. S. U. C. c. 69, and other Acts, contained the following words: "Saving any rights, proceedings, or things legally had, acquired, or done under the said Acts, or any of them:"—Held, that these words preserved to rights, proceedings, and things completely had, acquired, or done, the efficacy which they had under the Act repealed, but did not continue the operation of the repealed Act for the purpose of perfecting rights, proceedings, or things not completely had, acquired, or done, Re United Presbytcrian Congregation of London, 6 P. R. 129.

Ship — Collision — Rights — Common Error, 1—In a case of collision, it appeared that both vessels were carrying the lights prescribed by 14 & 15 Vict. c. 126, although that Act had been repealed three years before by 22 Vict. c. 19, which required other lights in different places:—Held, that, as the error was common, and neither therefore could have been misled by it, the case must be treated as if both were carrying the proper lights. Irving v. Hagerman, 22 U. C. R. 545.

Stamp Act.]—See Caughill v. Clarke, 9 P. R. 471.

Tax Sale—Power to Complete.]—13 & 14 Vict. c. 67 allows three years for redemption before the sheriff can convey under a sale for taxes. It was repealed by 16 Vict. c. 182, which came into force on the 1st January, 1854, except in so far as it might affect "any rates or taxes of the present year," 1853, or any rates or taxes which have accrued and are actually due, or any remedy for the enforcement or recovery of such rates or taxes not otherwise provided for by this Act." ance until the Act had been repealed:—Held, that, as the exemption in the repealing clause gave no power to complete inchoate proceedings, the sheriff could not convey, although such a result was clearly not intended. Mcbonald v. McDonnell, 24 U. C. R. 424.

Certain land was sold for taxes in 1830, under 6 Geo, IV. c. 7, but owing to the loss of the certificate no deed was made by the sheriff until 1862. 13 & 14 Vict. c. 60, which was passed on the 10th August, 1850, and came into force on the 1st January, 1851, repealed 6 Geo. IV., except so far as it might affect any taxes which had accrude and were due, or any remedy for the enforcement or recovery of the same:—Held, that this exception did not continue the power of the sheriff to convey, and therefore that mothing passed by his deed. Bryant v, Bill, 23 U. C. R. 90. Followed in Cotter v. Sutherland, Stevens v. Jaques, 18 C. P. 357.

On the 18th December, 1852, the sheriff, acting under 13 & 14 Vict. c. 67, sold a lot of land for taxes, but did not execute a conveyance therefor until the 9th January, 1856, after the passing of 16 Vict. c. 182, which repealed the first-named Act:—Held, that the deed was invalid, as at the time it was executed the sheriff had not power to make a conveyance. McDougalt v. McMillan, 25 C. P. 75.

2. Disallowance,

Conviction — Execution of Warrant.]—
Where an Act passed by the provincial legislature was subsequently disallowed, but while in force the plaintiff had been convicted under it by defendants, and a warrant was properly issued by defendants for his arrest and imprisonment, which, however, was not executed until after the disallowance of the Act was published in the Gazette:—Held, that, as the conviction and warrant were legal, the defendants could not be considered as trespassers, Clapp V. Laurason, 6 O. S. 319.

3. Indirect or Implied Repeal.

Bail Bonds—Earlier Section of Act—Implied Report,]—Section 29 of C. S. U. C. c. 24, respecting bail bonds (taken from 22 Vict. c. 535), does not repeal s. 25 (taken from 19 Vict. c. 57), and the two are not so inconsistent as to be incapable of standing together, in some respects at least. The 25th governs where the bond was taken before the 4th May, 1850, the 20th after; and where the two are at variance the latter must prevail. Kingan v. Halt, 25 U. C. R. 503.

Common Law Procedure Act—Capias.]

Exchequer Court-Jurisdiction - Repeat by Implication.]—A seaman, the engineer of a tug, took proceedings in the exchequer court, admiralty side, on a claim for $136 wages, and arrested the ship. On the trial it was contended that the court had no jurisdiction to try a claim for less than $200, the owner being insolvent, the ship not being under arrest, and the case not referred to the court by a Judge, magistrate, or justice, pursuant to R. S. C. c. 75, s. 34, the Inland Waters Seamen's Act:—Held, that the Admiralty Act, 1891, conferred upon the exchequer court all the jurisdiction possessed by the high court, admiralty division, in England, as it stood on the 25th July, 1890, the date of the passing of the Colonial Courts of Admiralty Act, 1890, and that the admiralty court in Canada could now try any claim for seamen's wages, includ-ing claims below $200; and that s. 34 of R. S. C. c. 75 was repealed by implication (not hav-ing been expressly preserved) to the extent, at any rate, that it curtailed the jurisdiction of the admiralty court to entertain claims for seamen's wages below $200 in amount. Held, as to the costs of any such action, that they were in the discretion of the Judge trying the cause under rule 132 of the admiralty rules of the exchequer court of Canada. This was the practice and rule in England on the 25th Duly, 1890, and since. Tenant v. Ellis, 6 Q. B. D. 46. Rockett v. Clippingdale, [1891] 2 Q. B. 293, and The Saltburn [1892] P. 333, referred to. Limitation of Actions—Lord Campbell's Act—Municipal Act.]—An action under C. S. C. c. 78, by the representatives of a deceased person killed by the neglect of defendants to repair a highway, must, under C. S. U. C. c. 54, s. 337, be brought within three months, notwithstanding the limitation of twelve months allowed by the first-mentioned statute. Turner v. Town of Brantford, 13 C. P. 109.

—Actor Campbell's Act—Special Acts.]
—Action by an administratrix against defendants for digging and opening a drain in the city of Ottawa, and leaving it at night uncovered, whereby the deceased was injured and died:—Held, that the administratrix was limited to six months from the cause of action accruing within which to sue, that being the period limited by defendants' charter, 35 Vict. c. 80, s. 35 (O.), for, although, under C. S. C. c. 78, s. 4, this administratrix is allowed iwelve months after the death of the deceased to bring her action, this does not apply where there is a special provision, as here, for a more limited period. Cairna v. Ottavea Water Commissioners, 25 C. P. 551.

Municipal Act—Board of Health.]—Section 67 of the Act by which municipal corporations were established in Nova Scotia, 42 Vict. c. 1, giving them "the appointment of health officers... and a board of health," with the powers and authorities formerly vested in courts of sessions, does not repeal c. 29 of R. S. N. S., 4th ser., providing for the appointment of boards of health by the lieutenant-governor in council. County of Cape Breton v. McKay, 18 S. C. R. 639.

"Effete" Section—Interest on Debentures.]—Section 217 of 29 & 30 Vict. c. 51 has not been repealed, though marked effete in the schedule prefixed to and not re-enacted in 36 Vict. c. 48 (O.) Scottish American Investment Co. v. Village of Elora, 6 A. R. 628. —— Personation at Elections—Repugnant Sections,]—Where a clause in a statute prohibits a particular act and imposes a penalty for doing it, and a subsequent clause in the same statute imposes a different penalty for the same offence, which cannot be reconciled either as cumulative or alternative purishment, the former clause is repealed by the latter. This principle being applied to ss. 167 and 240 of the Consolidated Municipal Act, 1882, a person convicted of personation under the former clause was discharged as illegally convicted on a return to a habeas corpus. Robinson v. Emerson, 4 H. & C. 352, and Michell v. Brown, 1 E. & E. at p. 275, followed. Regina v. Rose, 27 O. R. 195.

Quashing By-law—Procedure.]—
The authority to proceed by rule or order nisi in quashing a by-law conferred by R. S. O. 1887 c. 184, s. 332, is inconsistent with con. rule 526, and must therefore be taken to be repealed, for by 51 Vict. c. 2, s. 4 (O.), it is declared that all enactments in the revised statutes inconsistent with the rules are repealed. It is, therefore, not proper to proceed by rule nisi. Re Peck and Amelias-burg, 12 P. R. 664, followed. Hewison v. Pembroke, 6 O. R. 170, distinguished. Re Colemut and Township of Colchester North, 13 P. R. 253.

Special Act—Exclusion of General—Municipal Corporation — Appeal, 1—Section 439 of the Town Corporations Act (40 Viet. c. 29 (Q.)) not having been excluded from the charter of the city of Ste. Cunegonde (53 Viet. c. 70), is to be read as forming a part of it, and prohibits an appeal to the court of Queen's bench from a judgment of the superior court on a petition to quash a by-law presented under s. 310 of said charter. Where the court of Queen's bench has quashed such an appeal for want of jurisdiction, no appeal lies to the supreme court of Canada from its decision. City of Ste. Cunégonde v. Gougeon, 25 S. C. R. 78.

Exclusion of General—Municipal Corporation—Railway.]—The special rights and privileges conferred on the St. Catharines, Thorold, and Suspension Bridge Road Company, who had constructed their road over what had previously been a highway, under 12 Vict. c. 84, s. 22, do not take away the general powers possessed by the municipalities through which it passed, as to the removal of obstructions. Regina v. Davis, 24 C. P. 575.

Exclusion of General—Survey.]—23 Vict. c. 101 declares the mode in which the side lines of the first concession of Cumberland shall be run, and provides a method by which those injured by the change from the original plan of survey may obtain compensation:—Held, that the general statute, 20 Vict. c. 78, was thereby excluded, and that the defendant was confined to this method. Smith v. Sparroce, 21 U. C. R. 323.

A general later statute (and a fortiori a statute passed at the same time) does not abrogate an earlier special Act by mere implication. The law does not allow an interpretation that would have the effect of revoking or altering a special enactment by the construction of general words, where the terms of the special enactment may have their proper operation without such interpretation. XVIII. TIME OF TAKING EFFECT.

Portion of Day — Chattel Mortgage,] — Acts of parliament take effect in law from the earliest moment of the day on which they are passed, and the Act 54 Vict. c, 20. amending the Assignments Act. R. S. O. 1887 c. 124, to which the Royal assent was given at three o'clock in the afternoon, was therefore held to apply to a chattel mortgage executed and registered before twelve o'clock on the same day. Cole v, Portcous, 19 A. R. 111.

Insolvent Act-Attachment-Execution.]-Judicial proceedings and statutes take effect in law from the earliest period of the day upon which they are respectively origin-ated and come into force. M. recovered a judgment and issued a fi. fa. goods against R. The writ was given to the sheriff at halfpast ten and a levy made about 11 a.m. the same day, but after the levy, C. sued out against R, an attachment in insolvency, which the sheriff received at 11.30 a.m. On the same day, also, the Insolvent Act of 1865 came into force (the Royal assent being given thereto on the same day, but not till the afternoon), by which in effect this execution, un-less theretofore issued and delivered to the sheriff, was postponed to the attachment :-Held, that the fi. fa. could not be considered as having been so issued and delivered, and therefore, by virtue of the Act, the attachment prevailed over the execution. Semble, that the issuing of the attachment was a judicial act, and by it the property of the insolvent vested in the assignee by relation before it was seized under and before any lien attached by virtue of the execution. Converse v. Michie, 16 C. P. 167.

Judgment.]—See Hurtubise v. Desmarteau, 19 S. C. R. 562.

— Order of Court.]—The fraction of a day is never taken into consideration in determining the operation of a statute. If an order is obtained under a statute which is repealed by another statute on the same day the order is made, the repealing statute will be held to operate from the first part of that day, and overrule the order. Fire Insurance.]—The plaintiff's property was destroyed by fire the day the Ontario Insurance Act. 1887, came in force:—Held, that R. S. O. 1877 c. 161, in force at the time the insurance was effected, applied to the policy. McIntyre v. East Williams Mutual Fire Ins. Co., 18 O. R. 79.

XIX. TITLES, HEADINGS, AND DIVISIONS.

[Headings of different portions of a statute may be looked to to determine the sense of a section ranged under them. Hammersmith and City R. W. Co. V. Brand, L. R. 4 H. L. 171. The consolidated statutes may be treated as one great Act, and the several chapters as being enactments which are to be construed collectively and with reference to one another, just as if they had been sections of one statute, instead of being separate Acts. Per Lord Westbury in Boston v. Lelièvre, L. R. 3 P. C. 162.]

Reference to, as Aids to Construction of Statutes.]—32 & 33 Vict. c. 23, s. 8 (D.). applies to all cases of perjury, not merely to 'Perjuries in Insurance Cases," which is the heading under which ss. 4 to 12 are placed in the Act. Regina v. Currie, 31 U. C. R. 582.

The divisions of a statute, under which the clauses are arranged and classified, may be looked to as affording a key to the construc-tion. Lawrie v. Rathbun, 38 U. C. R. 255.

In construing an obscure clause in an Act of Parliament, the court may look at the title for assistance. Greene v. Provincial Ins. Co., 4 A. R. 521.

The headings of a statute may be referred to, to assist the construction of ambiguous provisions. Donly v. Holmwood, 4 A. R. 555.

Held, following Eastern Counties, &c., R. W. Co. v. Marriage, 9 H. L. C. 32, Lang v. Kerr, 3 App. Cas, 529, and Van Norman v. Grant, 27 Gr. 498, that both ss. 10 and 11 of R. S. O. 1877 c. 49, are to be governed by the heading immediately preceding s. 10; so that, where the interest sought to be reached by the creditor has not been concealed by a fraudulent conveyance, the Judge has no authority to give summary relief under s. 11.

Remarks as to embracing in one Act several subjects which are not expressed in the title; and as to the effect of the title and preamble of a statute as guides to the construction. Regina v. Washington, 46 U. C. R. 221.

In construing an Act of parliament the title may be referred to in order to ascertain the intention of the legislature. The Act of the Nova Scotia legislature 50 Vict c. 23, vesting the title to highways and the lands over which the same pass in the Crown for a public highway, does not apply to the city of Hali-fax, O'Connor v. Nova Scotia Telephone Co., 22 S. C. R. 276. XX. MISCELLANEOUS CASES.

Re.—Notice to Appear.]—Where, by the operation of provincial enactments, a plainthe operation of provincial enactments, a paintiff was unable to give a proper date to the notice at the foot of a ca, re, a general notice to appear on the first day of the term was held sufficient. Brown v. Smith, Tay, 187.

Clerk of the Peace-Jury Act-Fees.] —A municipal council, in 1850, assigned to a clerk of the peace a fixed salary for that year, "in lieu of all fees:"—Held, the Jury Act, 13 M nei of an ices: —Heid, the Jury Act, 13 & 14 Vict. c. 55, having been subsequently passed, that he could still claim the fees al-lowed by the statutes for preparing the jury books for the following year. Pringle v. Mc-Donald, 10 U. C. R. 254.

Crown—Administration of Justice Act.]— The Crown, though not named in the Administration of Justice Act, is entitled to avail itself of the benefit of its provisions to the same extent as a subject can do so. Attorney-General v. Walker, 25 Gr. 233.

Dual Version of Act—Difference in Lan-uage—Municipal Corporation — Removal of guage—Municipal Corporation—Remove of Officers. 1—The charter of the city of Mon-treal, 1889, 52 Vict. c. 79, s. 79, gives power to the city council to appoint and remove such officers as it may deem necessary to carry into execution the powers vested in it by the charter, the French version of the Act stating that such powers may be exercised "-a sa discrétion," while the English version has the words "at its pleasure:"—Held, that, notwithstanding the apparent difference between the two versions of the statute, it must be interpreted as one and the same enactment, and the city council was thereby given full and unlimited power, in cases where the en-gagement has been made indefinitely as to duration, to remove officers summarily and without previous notice, upon payment only of the amount of salary accrued to such officer up to the date of such dismissal. v. City of Montreal, 27 S. C. R. 539.

Estates Tail-Abolition of-" Valid Remainder." —The revised statutes of Nova Scotia, 1851, 1st ser., c. 112, provided as follows: "All estates tail are abolished, and every estate which would hitherto have been adjudged a fee tail shall hereafter be adjudged a fee simple: and, if no valid remainder be limited thereon, shall be a fee simple absolute, and may be conveyed or devised by the tenant and may be conveyed or devised by the tenant in tail, or otherwise shall descend to his fielrs as a fee simple." In the revision of 1858 (R. S. N. S., 2nd ser., c. 112), the terms are identical. In 1864 (R. S. N. S., 3rd ser., c. 111) the provision was changed to the following: "All estates tail on which no valid remainder is limited are abolished, and every such estate shall hereafter be adjudged to be a fee simple absolute, and may be conveyed or devised by absolute, and may be conveyed or devised by the tenant in tail, or otherwise shall descend to his heirs as a fee simple." This latter statute was repealed in 1855 (28 Vict. c. 2), when it was provided as follows: "All estates tail are abolished, and every estate which hitherto would have been adjudged a fee tail shall hereafter be adjudged a fee simple and shall hereafter be adjudged a fee simple, and may be conveyed or devised or descend as such." Z., who died in 1859, by his will,

made in 1857, devised lands in Nova Scotia to his son, and, in default of lawful heirs, over to other relatives, in the course of descent from the first donee. On the death of Z., the son took possession of the property as devisee under the will, and held it until 1891, when he sold the lands in question in this suit to the appellant:—Held, that, notwithstanding the reference to "valid remain-der" in the statute of 1851, all estates tail were thereby abolished, and further, that subsequent to that statute there could be no valid remainder expectant on an estate tail, as there could not be a valid estate tail to support such remainder. Held, further, that in the devise over to persons in the course of descent from over to persons in the course of descent from the first devisee, in default of lawful issue, the words "lawful heirs," in the limitation over, are to be read as if they were "heirs of his body;" and that the estate of the first devisee was thus restricted to an estate tail, and was consequently, by the operation of the statute of 1851, converted into an estate in fee simple and could lawfully be conveyed by the first devisee. Ernst v. Zwicker, 27 S. C. R. 594.

Forfeiture—Statutory Relief—Exception—Unus.]—A statute was bassed reversing the attainder of A. S., and taking away the forfeiture wrought thereby, so far as it might affect portions of his estate not already declared forfeited and sold under authority of law, and vesting such estate in those who could claim it if he had not been attainted; provided always, that nothing in the Act should affect any property sold or conveyed by the commissioners of forfeited estates, &c. In the preamble, it was recited that a part of the estate had been taken upon inquisition, and seized by the Crown:—Held, that the plaintiffs, claiming as devisees of A. S., must shew, as part of their case in the first instance, that the lands claimed were not part of those forfeited and sold. Doc Stevens v. Clement, 9 U. C. R. 650.

— Waiver,]—Semble, that when an Act has become forfeited by non-fulfilment of some of its conditions, the legislature may waive the forfeiture, and by special enactment continue the existence of the Act. City of Toronto and Lake Huron R. W. Co. v. Crookshank, 4 U. C. R. 309.

See Marmora Foundry Co. v. Murney, 1 C.

Gas Company—Shutting off Supply—Default as to one House.]—By the true construction of s. 20 of 12 Vict. c. 183 (C.), borrowed from the Imperial Gasworks Clauses Act, 1847, the Montreal Gas Company are authorized to cease supplying a person with gas at any of his houses on his neglect to pay their bill for any one of them. There is nothing in the section to limit the authority of the company to the particular building in respect of which there has been default, and such a limitation cannot be applied. Judgment in 28 S. C. R. 382 reversed. Montreal Gas Co. v. Cadieux, [1899] A. C. 589.

Indian Lands — Proceedings of Commissioners—Exceptions in Statute.]—In regard to lands in the occupation of the Indians, it is unnecessary in the proceedings of the commissioners, under 2 Vict. c. 15 and 12 Vict. c. 9, by express evidence to negative the exceptions specified in the latter of these statutes. The Queen v. Strong, 1 Gr. 302.

Insurance — Action — Time — Enabling Statute.]—The words of s. 148 (2) of the Ontario Insurance Act, 60 Vict, c. 26, "Notwithstanding any stipulation or agreement to the contrary, any action or proceeding against the insurer for the recovery of any claim under or by virtue of a contract of insurance of the person may be commenced at any time within the term of one year," have reference to a stipulation or agreement giving less time than one year for bringing the action. It is an enabling, not a disabling, enactment, Styles v. Supreme Council of Royal Arcanum, 29 O. R. 38.

Insurance Company—Dominion Incorporation—Application of Provincial Act.)—The Beaver Mutual Fire Assurance Association and the Toronto Mutual Fire Insurance Co. were severally incorporated under the general Mutual Act, C. S. U. C. c. 62, but by the Dominion Act, 32 & 33 Vict, c, 70, they were united under the defendants' name, and were declared to be a body corporate:—Held, that the Dominion Act, 32 & 33 Vict, c, 70 must be deemed to be defendants' Act of incorporation, and that, therefore, the Outario Act 36 Vict, c, 44, which was made applicable to companies incorporated under the Consolidated Act, or some special Act of the former Province of Canada or of Ontario, and appeared to authorize an assessment for prospective losses, did not apply to them. Orr v. Beewer and Toronto Mutual Fire Ins. Co., 26 C. P. 144.

Municipal By-law — Validating Act — Motion to Quash—Costs.]—A rule nisi having been obtained to quash a by-law, the legislature by a statute declared the by-law valid, and the rule was afterwards argued on the various objections taken, in order to decide who should pay the costs of the application:—Semble, that in such cases the rule should not be argued; and it would be well to direct in the statute that the petitioners to confirm the by-law should pay all proper costs incurred in any application to quash it. In re Holden and Town of Belleville, 39 U. C. R. SS.

Validating Act-Preamble-Pending Action—Costs.]—In January, 1891, the defendants passed a by-law to raise $75,000 for street railway purposes, with a recital that it was necessary to raise that sum for the purpose of building a street railway connecting the municipality of Neebing with the municipality of Port Arthur. The by-law had been submitted to the electors, and had been car-ried by their votes, but no by-law had been passed under s. 504 of the Municipal Act actually authorizing the construction of the railway, nor had the approval of the lieutenant-governor in council been obtained; and the provisions of s. 505 of the Municipal Act had not been observed. This action was brought to restrain the municipality from constructing the street railway under this by-law, and on the 4th May, 1891, while the action was pending, an Act, 54 Vict. c. 78 (O.), was passed, the preamble of which recited, interalia, that the corporation were desirous of constructing and operating an electric street railway at a cost estimated not to exceed $75,000; that they had, on the 5th January, 1891, passed a by-law authorizing the construction passed a by-nw authorizing the construction and operation of such a railway, and had petitioned that it might be confirmed and legalized. The Act then declared that the by-law referred to in the preamble, of which Held, also, that the plaintiffs were entitled to the costs of the action down were entitled to the costs of the action down to the time of the passing of the Act, and, in addition, to the costs of a motion in Chambers for the disposal of the action, and that the defendants were entitled to the subsequent costs and to the costs of the appeal. Observations on the course taken by the legislature in passing Acts to validate proceedings which are under attack in a pending action, leaving the costs of the action to be disposed leaving the costs of the action to be disposed of by the court as if the Act had not passed. Held, by the supreme court of Canada, re-versing the decision of the court of appeal, that the Act did not dispense with the require-ments of ss. 504 and 505 of the Municipal Act requiring a by-law providing for the construction of the railway to be passed, but only confirmed the one that was passed as a money by-law. Held, also, that an erroneous recital in the preamble to the Act that the town council had passed a construction by-law had no effect on the question to be decided. Dwyer v. Town of Port Arthur, 19 A. R. 555, 22 S. C. R. 241.

Railway Act — Canal Bridge—Statutory Sanction.] — By the various Acts referring thereto, the erection of defendants' drawbridge over the Desjardins canal was sanctioned and recognized; and it must be assumed to have been lawfully erected, though the formalities required by ss. 136, 137, and 138 of the Railway Act may not have been compiled with. Doe d. Baldutin v. Stone, 5 U. C. R. 388.

Wharf—Statutory Ratification.] — Held. that, although the statute 10 Geo. IV. c. 11 did not expressly authorize the Cobourg Har-

STOLEN PROPERTY.

Letter of Credit—Forged Indorsement— Bank — Liability.] — The Bank of British North America in England received money there to be transmitted to B. in Upper Canada, and sen a letter of credit to B. to receive the money at a branch of the bank in Toronto. The letter was taken out of the post office in Canada (B. having in the meantime died), and B.'s name forged on the letter of credit, and the money received by some person unknown:—Held, that B.'s executrix was entitled to recover the money from the bank in Toronto as money had and received to B.'s use. Gissing v. Hopper, 6 O. S. 505.

Money Stolen from Agent—Liability—Neglect, 1—Plaintiff sued for money advanced by him to defendants to purchase wheat for him, alleging that they had not purchased or accounted. Defendants pleaded, in substance, that the money, while kept unmixed with their own as the plaintiff's money, was stolen from them by persons unknown, without any neglect on their part. At the trial a verdict was taken for plaintiff, subject to the opinion of the court whether the defendants were liable, with power to draw inferences of fact. The court declined to assume the functions of a jury in determining, upon evidence wholy circumstantial, whether the money had been stolen, and directed a new trial with costs to abide the event. Remarks as to such defence, and the facts required to sustain it. Bickle v. Matheceson, 26 U. C. R. 137. See also Gore Bank v. Hodge, 2 C. P. 339.

Purchase at Auction — Retaking by Owner — Retevesting — Trespass.] — Where a horse was stolen from the plaintiff and bought by defendant at public auction, but not in market overt, and the plaintiff afterwards seeing the horse took possession of it, and defendant immediately retook it: — Held, that the plaintiff had a right to retake it, no property having passed to defendant by the sale; and that, although it was in his possession only for a moment, yet the property revested in him, and he could maintain trespass against the defendant for the retaking. W. Co. v. City of Montreal, 23 S. C. R. 259.

II. CONTRACTS WITH MUNICIPAL CORPORA-TIONS.

Kingston, Portsmouth, and Catara-qui Electric Railway Company—Running - Injunction-Cars—Specific Performance — Injunction— Mandamus,]—The court will not order specific performance of an agreement by an electric railway company to run its cars on certain streets at certain hours and with certain officers, as the court cannot oversee the carrying out of the judgment if granted. Nor will the court grant an injunction restraining the company from carrying out such an agreement to the extent to which they are willing to carry it out unless and until they carry it out in toto, as this would also involve the same minute supervision. Nor will the court direct in an action the issue of a writ of mandamus, where the duty to be fulfilled arises out of an agreement of this kind the performance of which in specie is not deemed enforceable by the court. Semble, a prerogative writ of mandamus cannot be granted in an action but only on motion (see Toronto Public School Board v. City of Toronto, 19 P. R. 329), but even if it can be granted in an action it will not be granted to enforce private rights arising under an agreement. Judgment in 28 O. R. 399 affirmed. City of Kingston v. Kingston, Portsmouth, and Cataraqui Electric R. W. Co., 25 A. R. 462.

London Street Railway Company— Repair of Streets—Accident—Liability over— Limitation of Actions.]—By 36 Vict. c. 99 (O.), the London Street Railway Company were incorporated, by s. 13 of which the cor-poration of the city of London were authorized to enter into an agreement for the construction of the railway on such of the streets as might be agreed on, and for the paving, repairing, &c., of the same. By s. 14 the city were also empowered to pass by-laws to carry such agreement into effect, and concarry such agreement into enect, and con-taining all necessary provisions, &c., for the conduct of all parties concerned, including the company, and for enforcing obedience thereto. A by-law was passed by the city providing for the repair of certain portions of the street by the street railway company, who were to be liable for all damages occasioned to any person by reason of the construction, repair, person by reason of the constraction, repar-or operation of the railway, or any part there-of, or by reason of the default in repairing the said portions of the streets, and that the city should be indemnified by the company for all liability in respect of such damage. all liability in respect of such damage. An accident having happened to plaintiff by reason of said portions of said streets being out of receivers. out of repair, an action was brought by plaintiff against the city of London therefor. After action brought, and more than six months after the occurrence of the accident, on the application of the city of London, the street railway company were made parties defendant:—Held, that, notwithstanding the said dant:—rieid, that, holysthistanding the said legislation, by-law, and agreement, the city were liable under s. 531 of the Municipal Act, R. S. O. 1887 c. 184, to the plaintiff for the damage he had sustained; but that they had a remedy over against the street railway company. Held, also, following Anderson v. Canadian Pacific R. W. Co., 17 O. R. 747, that the six months' limitation clause in the Railway Act did not apply, the right of the city against the street railway company being one of contract. Carty v. City of London, 18 O. R. 122.

Quebee Street Railway Company—Assumption of Ownership by Municipality—Natice.1—The Quebee Street Railway Company were authorized under a by-law passed by the city of Quebee and an agreement executed in pursuance thereof, to construct and operate in certain streets of the city a street railway for a period of forty years, and it was also provided that at the expiration of twenty years from the 9th February, 1805, the corporation might, after a notice of six months to the company, to be given within twelve months immediately preceding the expiration of the said twenty years, assume the ownership of said railway upon payment, &c., of its value, to be determined by arbitration, together with ten per cent, additional:—Held, that the company were entitled to a full six months' notice prior to the 9th February, 1885, to be given within the twelve months preceding the 9th February, 1884, to the company that the corporation would take possession of the railway in six months thereafter, was bad. Quebec Street R. W. Co. v. City of Quebec, 15 S. C. R. 104.

Toronto Street Railway Company— Cars — By-law Regulating Operation of — Ultra Vires.]—In 1861 an agreement was entered into between the plaintiffs and certain persons for the construction and operation of street railways in the city of Toronto, in which they agreed to construct the lines of road specified from time to time, and that they would at all times employ careful, sober, and civil agents, conductors, and drivers, to take charge of the cars upon the said railways, and that they and their agents, conductors, drivers, and servants would at all times the said railway, and cause the same to be worked under such regulations as the common council of the city of Toronto might deem necessary and requisite for the protection of the persons and property of the public, and the persons and property of the business and conferred upon those persons were assigned to the defendants, who continued to work several railways, and after some years introduced for use thereon smaller cars, drawn by one instead of two horses as had been done previously, and with only one man in charge instead of two as on the larger cars. In 1882 the council of the city passed a by-law (No. 1264) prohibiting the operation of any cars within the city limits without two men in charge, one as driver, the other as conductor. The defendants refused to conform to this bylaw, and this action was brought to compel them to do so, the agreement of 1861 being relied on as warranting that relief :- Held, that the by-law in question was not within that the by-law in question was not within the terms of the agreement, and that it was therefore ultra vires. (2) That the by-law was also invalid, as it was an invasion of the domestic concerns of the company. City of Toronto v. Toronto Street R. W. Co., 15 A.

Franchise-Property-Road-bed.]-Held, by the court of appeal, that under the statutes and agreements affecting the Toronto Street Railway Company, the possibility of exercising the franchise beyond the period of exercising the franchise beyond the period of thirty years therein mentioned, if the city should not take over the railway, is not "property" the value of which could be taken into consideration by the arbitrators in arriving at the amount payable by the city on assuming the ownership of the railway. Nor were the company entitled to any allowance for permanent pavements constructed by the city under an agreement by which the company, in lieu of constructing and maintaining such pavements, as provided by former agreements, paid the city an annual allowance for the use thereof. The company's rights in respect of the extensions of the railway made from time to time came to an end way made from time to time came to an entity at the expiration of the thirty years mentioned in the original agreement. Judgment in 22 O. R. 374 affirmed. Held, by the judicial committee of the privy council, affirming the judgment of the court of appeal, that the Acts could not be construed as granting a perpetual privilege to use the streets for the purposes of the railway, but that the privilege thereby granted was limited to thirty years by the agreement and by-law. That limit of time applied, not merely to the original railway, but to the various extensions thereof authorreed in pursuance of the same privilege. In re City of Toronto and Toronto Street R. W. Co., 20 A. R. 125, [1893] A. C. 511.

Permanent Pavements-Arbitration —Local Improvements — Assessment.] — The company were incorporated in 1861, and their franchise was to last thirty years, at the expiration of which period the city corporation could assume the ownership of the railway and property on payment of the value thereof, to be determined by arbitration. The company were to keep the roadway between the rails and for eighteen inches outside each rail paved and macadamized and in good repair. using the same material as that on the remainder of the street, but, if a permanent pave-ment should be adopted by the corporation. the company were not bound to construct a like pavement between the rails, &c., but were only to pay the cost price of the same, not to exceed a specified sum per yard. The corporation laid upon certain streets traversed by the railway permanent pavements of cedar blocks, and issued debentures for the whole cost. A by-law was then passed, charging the company with their portion of such cost in the manner and for the period that adjacent owners were assessed under the Municipal Act for local improvements. The company paid the several rates assessed up to 1886, but refused to pay for subsequent years, on the ground that the cedar block pavement had proved to be by no means permanent, but defective and wholly insufficient for streets upon which the railway was operated. An action having been brought by the city for these rates, it was held that the company were only liable to pay for permanent roadways, and a reference was ordered to determine, among other things, whether or not the pavements laid by the city were permanent. This reference was not pro-ceeded with, but an agreement was entered into by which all matters in dispute to the end of 1888 were settled, and thereafter the company were to pay a specific sum annually per mile in lieu of all claims on account of debentures maturing after that date, and "in lieu of the company's liability for construction, renewal, maintenance, and repair in respect of all the portions of streets occupied by the company's track so long as the franchise of the company to use the said streets now extends." The agreement provided that it was not to affect the rights of either party in respect to the arbitration to be had, if the city took over the railway, nor any matters not specifically dealt with therein, and it was not to have any operation "beyond the period over which the aforesaid franchise now exs." This agreement was ratified by of the legislature passed in 18 1890 which also provided for the holding of the arbitration, which having been entered upon. the city claimed to be paid the rates imposed upon the company for construction of per-manent payements for which debentures had manent pavements for which dependires had been issued payable after the termination of the franchise. The arbitrators refused to allow this claim:—Held, that it could not be allowed; that the agreement discharged the company from all liability in respect to construction, renewal, maintenance, and repair of the streets; and that the clause providing that the agreement should not affect the rights of the parties in respect to the arbitration, &c., must be considered to have been inserted ex majori cautelâ, and could not do away with the express contract to relieve the company from liability. Held, further, that by an Act passed in 1877, and a by-law made in pursuance thereof, the company were only assessable as for local improvements which, by the Municipal Act, constitute a lien upon the property assessed, but not a personal liability upon the owners or occupiers after they have ceased to be such; therefore after the termination of the franchise the company would not be liable for these rates. City of Toronto v. Toronto Street R. W. Co., 23 S. C. R. 198.

Winnipeg Street Railway Company — Highicays—Monopoly,]—Where a municipal council granted to a railway company authority to construct, maintain, and operate railways in its streets, with the exclusive right to such portion of any street as should be occupied by the railway, but with the plain intent that the company should have no concern whatever with any portions of any street not in actual occupation by their rails: —Held, that a subsequent clause in the deed of grant, giving to the company the refusal, on terms, of other streets in the city for railway purposes, was insufficient to constitute, contrary to the plain meaning of the previous stipulations, a right of monopoly in any of the streets of the city. Quære, whether, if a monopoly had been conceeded, it was ultra vires of the municipal council. Winnipeg Street R. W. Co., V. Winnipeg Electric Street R. W. Co., C. 1884] A. C. 615.

The Toronto Street Railway Company will pay to the holder thereof, on the 1st July, 1862, at the Bank of Upper Canthe last July, 1802, at the Bains of Upper Can-ada. Toronto, forty dollars, interest due that day on bond No. 3. Alex. Easton, President." In an action by the plaintiff, as holder of several of said debentures, to enforce payment of such interest, on motion for nonsuit, or to arrest judgment: - Held, that there was nothing on the face of the debentures to shew that in the issue thereof the company exceeded their powers, and that such an objection should have been raised by the pleadings. (2) That no evidence having been given to the contrary, it was to be presumed that the plaintiff was the person to whom the debentures in question were given, or for whom they were intended by the company, and therefore the judgment could not be ar-rested. (3) The debentures were not void because they were not made payable to any particular named individual or company. (4) That the plaintiff, before he could recover, must be proved to have been the original bearer and payee of the debentures sued upon, which were not assignable. (5) That debentures or coupons could not be considered promissory notes, as the company had no power to make notes. Geddes v. Toronto Street R. W. Co., 14 C. P. 513.

Suit to Enforce Payment — Parties — Original Payee, !—A bill being filed by the holder of debentures, issued by the defendants and payable to bearer, to enforce payment of the debentures, the company by answer objected that the person to whom the debentures were issued, was a necessary party to the suit, but did not name the person:—Held, that the company must be presumed to know who this person was, that there was no presumption that the plaintiff knew him; and that the person not being named in the answer, the objection could not be insisted on at the hearing. Wood v. Toronto Street R. W. Co., 14 Gr. 409.

IV. INJURY TO PERSONS OR PROPERTY.

Action—Examination of Officers of Company.]—In an action for damages for bodily injuries sustained by a pedestrian by reason of the negligent management and operation of a car of the defendants, an incorporated company:—Held, that the conductor and motorman of the car were officers of the company examinable for discovery; but, as the plaintiff had already examined the general manager, she must elect which of the above officers she would examine, under rule 439 (2). Danson v. London Street R. W. Co., 18 P. R. 223.

lege.1—In an action for damages for personal injuries received by the plaintiff in a tramway car accident, as to which the conductor of the car had made a report to the defendants:—Held, that the portion of the report containing the names of the eye-witnesses of the accident was privileged from production. Armstrong v. Toronto R. W. Co., 15 P. R. 208.

Licensee—Improper Construction of Car.]
—The deceased, a boy selling newspapers, got on a street car at the rear end, and passed through the car to the front platform, where the driver was standing. He stepped to one side behind the driver, and fell off or dis-appeared from the car, there being no step on that side, and was killed by the car run-ning over him. He had said just before that he was going on some distance further in the car, and the conductor at the time stated that he had reported the want of a step to the owners of the railway, but it had not been attended to. There was plenty of room in the car, but it was proved that passengers were always allowed to stand on the platform. was not shewn that the deceased had either paid or been asked for his fare, but it appeared that newsboys were allowed to enter the cars to sell newspapers without being charged: Held, that the deceased was lawfully on the car, and being so was entitled to fully on the car, and below the carried safely, whether he was a passenger for reward or not. Held, also, that there was evidence for the jury of negligence on the part of defendants in the absence of the step. and no such contributory negligence on the part of the deceased as should, as a matter of law, prevent the plaintiff's recovery. A non-suit was therefore set aside. Upon appeal this decision was reversed, on the ground that unless the deceased was upon the cars as a passenger, on a contract of carriage express or implied, and not as a mere licensee or volunteer, he had no right of action against the defendants for the absence of the step, which was no breach of duty to him, but must take the car as he found it; and that upon the evidence he must be taken to have been a licensee only. Blackmore v. Toronto Street R. W. Co., 38 U. C. R. 172.

Wrongful Act of Servant—Scope of the wrongful act of a servant, though intended to promote the master is interest, if it is an act outside the scope of the servant's employment and authority, and is one which the master himself could not legally do. The defendants were held not liable where the motorman of one of their electric cars, who had no control over or authority to interfere with passengers or persons on the cars, pushed off the car, as the jury found, a newsboy who was getting on to sell a paper to a passenger. Coll v. Toronto R. W. Co., 25 A. R. 55.

Passenger—Attempting to Board Car—Contributory Negligence.]—The plaintiff, in broad daylight, having halled a westward bound tramway car, on the north track, crossed over from the south side of the street to get into it; the eastward bound car at the time was coming along on the south track at a fast trot, but was some 300 feet away to the west. The plaintiff was somewhat intoxicated. As he took hold of the westward bound car to board it, he fell, and the eastward bound car passed over his foot, which was on the rail. The jury found that there was no negligence on the part of the defendants, and that the plaintiff was guilty of contributory negligence, on which the trial Judge entered judgment for the defendants:—Held, that the attendant or surrounding circumstances were, in the absence of any exhanatory evidence by the defendants, sufficient to raise the presumption that there was negligence on the part of those in charge of the eastward behand car, the consequence of which was the happening of the accident, and that there must be a new trial. Forwood v. City of Toronto, 22 O. R. 351.

Contract to Carry—Want of Care and Skill.]—In an action against the proprietors of a railway car drawn by horses, for an accident to the plaintiff by the carelessness of the driver, an averment that the contract was to carry safely, does not mean safely at all events, and it is sufficient to prove that the accident arose from the driver's want of care and skill. Thompson v. Macklem, 2 U. C. R. 300.

— Contributory Negligence.]— The plaintiff, standing on the front platform of one of defendants cars, which was crowded, was thrown off by a joit and injured, but it did not appear whether, at the time of the accident, he was holding on to the iron rail on the plaintiff not proving affirmatively that he was so holding on was not a ground for nonsuit. Cornish v. Toronto Street R. W. Co., 23 C. P. 355.

 Expulsion from Car—Damages—Remoteness-Evidence as to Operation of Railway.]-A passenger on a street railway having the right to be transferred from a car on one street line to that of another street line on the railway was refused such right by the conductor of the car to which he had the right to be transferred, and was forced to leave it:—Held, that he was entitled to re-cover damages occasioned by an illness caused by exposure to the cold in leaving the car, such damages not being too remote. fendants, an incorporated company, were the successors of certain persons who had purchased the road, and, although no conveyance of the road to the defendants was proved, it was shewn that the persons working the railway at the time of the occurrence were in the defendants' employment, and that the car in question was in charge of their employees:— Held, sufficient evidence that the defendants were operating the road so as to render them liable to the plaintiff. Grinsted v. Toronto R. W. Co., 24 O. R. 683.

Affirmed by the court of appeal, 21 A. R.

Affirmed by the court of appeal, 21 A. R. 578, and by the supreme court of Canada, 24 S. C. R. 570.

- Expulsion from Car—Misconduct.]

-A passenger on a street railway having refused when requested by the conductor of the car to remove his feet from the cushion of the opposite seat, and used strong language to the conductor, was ejected from the car:
-Held, that the conductor had a right to eject him. Davis v. Ottawa Electric R. W. Co., 28 O. R. 654.

Place of Danger-Invitation-Improper construction of Bridge-Vegligence—Danages.]—On an electric car on defendants' railway, there was a step or footboard running along the side of the car about a foot from the ground, leading to doors on each side of and at the centre and rear parts of the car, with a brass rail or rod about chest high running parallel with the footboard for persons standing thereon to hold on by, and electric buttons on the side of the car to communicate with the conductor. The plaintiff, seeing that the car was filling up rapidly, all the inside seats being occupied, and the rear platform crowded, jumped on the footboard.

the car then having started. A short distance from where the plaintiff got on was a bridge, which the car had to cross, the approach thereto being on a curve, by reason of which the plaintiff was swayed out from the car, and as it entered on the bridge he was struck by one of the side-posts of the bridge and thrown off and injured, the space between the post and the side of the car being only fourteen inches:

—Held, that an invitation to the plaintiff to stand on the footboard must be implied, and while there he was entitled to be carried safely, which the improper construction of the bridge prevented defendants doing, and which, therefore, constitute evidence of negligence. A verdict for the plaintiff was sustained, except as to the damages, $3.300, which were held to be excessive, and a new trial was directed unless the plaintiff consented to their being reduced to $2,000. The elements in assessing damages in cases of this kind considered. Fraser v. London Street R. W. Co., 29 O. R. 411, 26 A. R. 883.

Servant—Defect in Plant,1—Action by a motorman in the employment of a street rail-way company, under the Workmen's Compensation for Injuries Act, to receiver damages for injuries sustained by the plaintiff while coupling together a motor car and a trailer:—Held, by the court of appeal, that having car buffers of different lengths, so that in coupling the buffers overlap and afford no protection to the person effecting the coupling, is a "defect in the arrangement of the plant" within the meaning of the Workmen's Compensation for Injuries Act, 55 Vict. c. 30, s. 3 (O.) Held, by the supreme court of Canada, that negligence on the part of the company in not having proper appliances to prevent injury was clearly proved, and a new trial properly refused. Bond v. Toronto R. W. Co., 22 A. R. 78, 24 S. C. R. 715.

Negligence of Fellow Servant—Workmen's Compensation Act.1—The motorman of a car running on an electric system is a "person who has charge or control" thereof within the meaning of s.s. 5 of s. 3 of the Workmen's Compensation for Injuries Act, R. S. O. 1897 c. 190, and his employers are liable in damages to a fellow servant for injuries sustained while in discharge of his duty, owing to the motorman's negligence in passing too close to a waggon which is moving out of the way of the car. Snell v. Toronto R. W. Co., 27 A. R. 151.

Traveller — Contributory Negligence — Findings of Jury—New Trial.]—On the trial of an action against a street railway company for damages in consequence of injuries received through the negligence of the company's servants, the jury answered four questions in a way that would justify a verdict for the plaintif. To the fifth question," could Rowan by the exercise of reasonable care and diligence have avoided the accident?" the answer was,

"we believe that it could have been possible."
—Held, that this answer did not amount to a finding of negligence on the part of the plaintiff as a proximate cause of the accident which would disentitle him to a verdict. Held, further, that, as the other findings established negligence in the defendants which caused the accident, which amounted to a denial of contributory negligence: as there was no evidence of negligence on the plaintiff's part in the record; and as the court had before it all the — Infirm Person.]—It is the duty of a motorman in charge of an electric car on a street railway to take special care to have the car sufficiently under control to enable him to avoid collision with aged and infirm persons on foot whose infirmities are plainly evident and who may be crossing the line of railway at a street crossing. Haipht v. Hamilton Street R. W. Co., 20 O. R. 279.

— Negligence of Motorman—Frightening Horses. — The plaintiff, who was driving a carriage with a pair of horses, stopped near a railway crossing to allow a train to pass. An adversary of the state of the state of the railway crossing to allow a train to pass. In the plaintiff shortes were frightened by the train and became restive, and after the train passed the plaintiff waved his hand to the motorman of the electric car as a signal, as he contended, not to start the car. The horses were apparently under control and the motorman started the car, when the horses became frightened again and ran away:—Held, that the plaintiff's signal was ambiguous, and, as there was apparently no danger, the motorman could not be said to have been guilty of negligence, and therefore that the defendants were not liable. Judgment in 31 O. R. 309 reversed. Myers v. Brantford Street R. W. Co., 27 A. R. 513.

- Obstruction of Street-Question of Fact—Jury.]—An action was brought against the city of Toronto to recover damages for injuries sustained by the plaintiff, who was driving through the city, by reason of snow having been piled on the side of the street, and the street railway company was brought in as a third party. The evidence was that the snow from the sidewalks was placed on the roadway immediately adjoining by servants of the city, and snow from the railway tracks was placed by servants of the railway comupon the roadway immediately adjoining the track, without any permission from the city, thus raising the roadway next to the track, where the accident occurred, to a height of about twenty inches above the rails. jury found that the disrepair of the street was the act of the railway company, which was therefore made liable over to the city for the damages assessed. The company contended on appeal that the verdict was perverse and contrary to evidence:-Held, that under the evidence given of the manner in which the snow from the track had been placed on the roadway immediately adjoining, the jury might reasonably be of opinion that if it had not been so placed there the accident would not have happened, and that this was the sole cause of the accident. Toronto R. W. Co. v. City of Toronto, 24 S. C. R. 589.

Right of Way—Specd.]—The right of way which street railway cars have over the portion of the street on which the rails are laid, is not an exclusive right or a right requiring vehicles or pedestrians at all hazards to get out of the way at their peril; and, notwithstanding the absence of any regulations as to speed, the cars must be run at such a rate as may be reasonable under the circumstances of each particular case. The plaintiff was sitting on a waggon which was being driven on that part of the street occupied by the rails, and while going down a steep incline, a motor car and trailer coming along behind, by reason of the motorman not having proper control of the car, and of the excessive speed thereof, the waggon was run into and the plaintiff injured:—Held, that the defendants were liable therefor. Excing v. Toronto R. W. Co., 24 O. R. 694.

Held, by the court of appeal, that the Toronto Railway Company have not, under their charter and their agreement with the city of Toronto, an exclusive right of way upon their tracks, or the right to run their cars at any rate of speed they please. Whilst their cars rate of speed they please. Whilst their cars must not be wilfully impeded, they are bound to recognize the rights and necessities of public travel and so to regulate the speed that the cars may be quickly stopped, should occasion require it. Where, therefore, there was some evidence that an accident was the result of a car running at excessive speed, the judgment of the common pleas division, upholding a verdict against the company was affirmed. Held, by the supreme court of Canada, affirming the judgment of the court of appeal, that persons crossing the street railway tracks are entitled to assume that the cars running over them will be driven moderately and prudently. and if an accident happens through a car goand if an accident nappens through the street ing at an excessive rate of speed, the street railway company are responsible. The driver of a cart struck by a car in crossing a track is not guilty of contributory negligence be-cause he did not look to see if a car was approaching, if, in fact, it was far enough away to enable him to cross if it had been proceeding moderately and prudently. He can be in no worse position than if he had looked and seen that there was time to cross. Gosnell v. Toronto R. W. Co., 21 A. R. 553, 24 S. C. R.

- Speed—Contributory Negligence-Findings of Jury. |—A cab driver was en-deavouring to drive his cab across the track of delivering to drive in cap across the track of an electric railway when it was struck by a car and damaged. In an action against the tramway company for damages it appeared that the accident occurred on part of a down grade several hundred feet long, and that the motorman after seeing the cab tried to stop the car with the brakes, and that proving ineffectual reversed the power, being then about a car length from the cab. The jury found that the car was running at too high a rate of speed, and that there was also negligence in the failure to reverse the current in time to avert the accident; that the driver was negligent in not looking out more sharply for the car, and that, notwithstanding such negligence on the part of the driver, the accident could have been averted by the exercise of reasonable care:-Held, affirming the judgment in 32 N S. Rep. 117, that the last finding neutralized the effect of that of contributory negligence; that, as the car was on a down grade, and going at an excessive rate of speed, it was incumbent upon the servants of the company to exercise a very high degree of skill and care in order to control it if danger was threatened to any one on the highway; and that from the evidence given it was impossible to say that everything was done that reasonably should have been done to prevent damage from the excessive speed at which the car was being run. Speed-Contributory Negligence-Proximate Cause. 1-Where the evidence of negligence and of contributory negligence are so interwoven that contributory negligence is brought out and established on the evidence of the plaintiff's witnesses, if there is no conof the primitin's witnesses, it there is no conflict on the facts in proof, the Judge may withdraw the question from the jury and direct a nonsuit. Wakelin v. London and South-Western R. W. Co., 12 App. Cas. at p. 52, referred to. In an action against a street railway company for negligence, it appeared that an electric car of the defendants was being run at a very rapid speed and that the gong was not sounded as the car approached a certain street, at the junction of which the plaintiff, who was driving a horse along the same street and in the same direction in which the car was going, turned in front of the car to cross the rails, when a wheel of his vehicle was struck by the car, and he was injured. It also appeared by the evidence of his own witnesses that he did not, before turning, look or listen to ascertain the posi-tion of the car, although he knew it was coming :-Held, that this was negligence on his part, and was the proximate cause of the disaster, for the defendants could not, by the exercise of reasonable or any degree of diligence or care, after this negligence of chi-plaintiff, have avoided the misfortune. Non-suit affirmed. Danger v. London Street R. W. Co., 30 O. R. 493.

Workman on Road—Contributory Negligence, —A workman in the employment of a street railway company was injured by a car striking him while working on the track, and brought this action for damages. The company defended on the ground that he could have escaped if he had been reasonably careful in looking out for passing cars. The trial Judge dismissed the action, hoding that the plaintiff was the cause of his judgment was affirmed by a divisional court, but reversed by the court of appeal, which ordered a new trial. The supreme court of appeal, and, on counsel for the company stating that a new trial was not desired, ordered judgment to be entered for the plaintiff for $500 damages, the amount assessed by the jury at the trial, Hamilton Street R. W. Co, v. Moran, 24 S. C. R. 717.

— Right of Way—Speed—Warning.]
—A car of the defendants' electric street railway was moving very quickly along a down grade on a street in a city, where the plaintiff, who was in the employment of the city corporation, was engaged in his duty of sweeping the roadbed. The motorman did not sound the gong on the car, as was customary, and ran into the plaintiff, injuring him:—Held, that, although the defendants had the right of way, the omission to sound the gong or give any warning of the approach of the car was actionable negligence. Green v. Toronto R. W.
Co., 26 O, R. 319.

VI. STATUTORY REQUIREMENTS.

Height of Rails—Change in Street Level.]—Held, that defendants, having laid their rails as required by their charter, were not bound to alter or adapt them from time to time to changes in the level of the street; and therefore that they were not liable for an accident arising from the street having become worn down by traffic, so as to leave the rail, which remained as originally laid, several inches above the level. Eddy v. Ottava City Passenger R. W. Co., 31 U. C. R. 569.

Enforcement of Contract—Suit by Municipal Corporation—Information—Partics—Nuisance—Abatement.]—An Act having been passed authorizing the construction of a street railway, confirming a covenant entered into for the purpose with the municipal corporation, and providing that the rails should be laid flush with the streets, &c.:—Held, (1) that the rails must not only be flush when laid, but must be kept flush. (2) That to enforce the contract against the company a suit by the municipal corporation, the other party to the contract, was necessary. (3) That an information by the attorney-general to enforce the statutory restrictions was proper; and that, unless the parties concerned chose, by proper alterations and repairs, to comply with the requirements of the statute the attorney-general was entitled to a decree for the removal of the rails as of a to decree for the removal of the rails as of a necessary party to the information. Attorney-General v. Toronto Street R. W. Co., 14 Gr.

Where, on an information by the attorney-general, the rails of a street railway were found by the court not to conform to the requirements of the statute authorizing the railway, the court granted a decree for the removal of the illegal rails; but gave time to the company, by proper alterations and repairs, to comply with the statute. S. C., 15 Gr. 187.

— Indictment.]—Defendants' Act of incorporation required that "the rails of their railway shall be laid flush with the streets and highways, and the railway track shall conform to the grades of the same, so as to offer the least possible impediment to the ordinary traffic of the said streets and highways:"—Held, that an omission to lay the rails flush with the street would be indictable, without shewing that any unnecessary impediment was offered to the traffic. A horse crossing the track stepped on a grooved rail, and the caulk of his shoe caught in the groove, whereby he was injured. In an action by the owner against the company it appeared that the rail, at the place where the accident occurred, was above the level of the roadway:—Held, that, as the rail was above the road level, contrary to the requirements of the charter, it was a street obstruction unauthorized by statute, and, therefore, a unisance, and the company was liable for the injury to the horse caused thereby. VII. MISCELLANEOUS CASES, Bonus — By-law — Petition — Voting.]—Although under 54 Vict. c. 42, s. 36 (0.), it is necessary, when aid is sought to be granted to a street railway by a portion of a municipality, that a majority in number representing one-half in value of the persons shewn by the last assessment roll to be the owners of real property in such portion should petition for the passing of the by-law, it is sufficient if the by-law is carried at the poll by a majority of those voting upon it. Adamson v. Township of Etobicoke, 22 O. R. 341.

Contract with Steamboat Owner—Ultra Virea,—The defendants, a street rail-way company, entered into an agreement on the 29th December, 1874, before their road was in operation, with the Grand Trunk Railway Company, to carry freight for that company between the town of Sarnia and Point Edward; and in April, 1875, their road being still unfinished, they, in order to fulfil their contract, agreed with the plaintiff, a steamboat owner, for the transportation of merchandize by water between these points until their railway should be opened. The plaintiff performed the service, and the defendants received payment from the Grand Trunk Railway Company therefor. It was objected that defendants had no power to make the contract with the plaintiff, and that he therefore could not recover: — Held, that, to the extent to which the defendants had benefited by the plaintiff's services they were liable to him, and should not be allowed to raise the objection of ultra vires. Clarke v. Sarnia Street R. W. Co., 42 U. C. R. 39.

Customs Duties—Exemptions—Rails.]—The exemption from duty in 50 & 51 Viet. c. 39, item 173, of "steel rails weighing not less than twenty-five pounds per linearly and, for use on railway tracks," does not apply to rails to be used for street railways which are subject to duty as "rails for railways and tramways of any form" under item 88. Toronto R. W. Co. v. The Queen, 25 S. C. R. 24.

Junction of Electric Railway with Canadian Pacific Railway — Laying Switch on Highway—Power to Authorise— Consent of Municipality—Order of Railway Committee of Pricy Council—Expropriation of Right of Way, 1—The defendants were a Vol. VIII, b=213—64

company incorporated under statutes of the Province of Ontario, operating an electric railway upon Yonge street, between the town of Newmarket and the city of Toronto, with its southern terminus in the northern part of the city, a few yards north of the Canadian Pacific Railway lines. By order of the 23rd None Railway lines. By order of the consent of counsel on behalf of the corporation of the city of Toronto, approved of the defendants connecting their tracks with the tracks of the Canadian Pacific Railway by means of switch, as shewn on a plan annexed to the order, and on the conditions imposed by the order :- Held, that the defendants had not the right, without the authority or consent of the city corporation, to occupy or expropriate or otherwise to force their way over a part of Yonge street within the limits of the city so as to enter the lands of the Canadian Pacific Railway Company and make the proposed junction. The order of the railway committee was to be regarded as dealing only with the mode of junction or union, and not as professing to expropriate a right of way over the highway. And the consent of counsel for the city corporation, when before the railway committee, was to be viewed in the same way. Section 173 of the Railway Act of Canada. does not give the railway committee power to expropriate land or to deal with the right of property. The protection of the crossing or junction is the object of the committee, which has to approve of the place and mode thereof, and which is not concerned, so far as this section applies, with how the railways arrive at the point of union. Held, also, that the de-fendants had not, by virtue of any statute or agreement, viewing their road as a mere street railway, the right to expropriate the right of way; and, even if their road was a railway within the meaning of the Railway Act, s. 183 was not applicable, for the proposition here was not to carry the tracks "along an existing highway." and they could not avail themselves of s. 187, for the provisions of law applicable to the taking of land by the company had not been awarded. "The selection of the company had not been awarded with "The selection." pany had not been complied with. The plaintiffs were therefore entitled, without derogation of the order of the railway committee, to an injunction restraining the defendants from effecting the proposed junction by the method shewn on the plan. By an agreement made between the plaintiffs and defendants, the defendants agreed that, upon receiving at any time twenty-four hours' notice from the plaintiffs' engineer, they would cease running their cars by electricity on the portion of Yonge street within the city limits:-Held, that, nothing having occurred to operate as a waiver by the plaintiffs of this term of the agree-ment, and the notice having been duly given, the plaintiffs were entitled to an injunction restraining the defendants from propelling their cars by electricity within the limits of the city, City of Toronto v. Metropolitan R. W. Co., 31 O. R. 367.

Obstruction of Railway — Liability of Wrongdoers.]—The defendant J., owner of a frame tenement in Toronto, agreed with his co-defendant D. for the removal thereof to another part of the city, such removal to be made at D.'s own risk and without damage to that or any other property. Both defendants contemplated and intended that the house was to be drawn and moved along Sherbourne street for some distance. Under a by-law of the city, all persons were prohibited under a penalty from moving any building into, along, or across any street without the written permission of the board of works. In this case no such permission was obtained, and in the course of hauling the building along the line of the track of the plaintiffs one of the silis was upset, thus preventing its further removal for two days, during which time the plaintiffs sustained loss by the non-receipt of fares and damage to their property:—Held, that J., as well as D., was liable for the loss so occasioned. Semble, that, as the plaintiffs had, by their charter, the superior right of user and occupation of the street, a duty was cast upon J. to see that proper precautions were taken to prevent injury arising from obstructing the railway by means of the building of which he was procuring the removal, and which could not from its size be removed along the street without obstructing the traffic. Toronto Street R. W. Co. v. Dollery, 12 A. R. 679.

Repair of Streets.]—See Carty v. City of London, 18 O. R. 122, ante II.

— Neglect of — Nuisance — Information.]—In 1873 an injunction was granted restraining the Toronto Street Railway Company, on the ground of nuisance, from using their railway, unless by a day named the defendants should put the same in a good and sufficient state of repair, to the satisfaction of an engineer named, who, on the day appointed, reported the railway in such a state of repair as the decree in the cause required. Two years afterwards the said railway, as also other lines laid in the meantime by the said company, had, as was alleged, been allowed to get into such a state of disrepair as to become again a nuisance to the public, whereupon a petition was filed by the relators, alleging these facts, and claiming the benefit of the decree:—Held, that, as the decree had already been compiled with, a new information must be filed to obtain the relief now asked. SUBROGATION.

Conventional Subrogation—Payment of Debts—Registration—Firon].—No formal or express declaration of subrogation is required under Art. 1155, s. 2, C. C., when the debtor borrowing the sum of money declares in his deed of loan that it is for the purpose of paying his debts, and in the acquittance he declares that the payment has been made with the moneys furnished by the new creditor for that purpose. Where subrogation is given by the terms of a deed, the erroneous noting of the deed by the registrar as a discharge, and the granting by him of erroneous certificates, cannot prejudice the party subrogated. Ovens v. Bedell. 19 S. C. R. 137.

Execution Creditor-Setting aside First Mortgage-Priority over Second Mortgage-Costs.]-As a general rule the doctrine of subrogation does not apply in favour of a party who has not paid money or given some-thing in satisfaction or extinguishment of a thing in satisfaction or extinguishment of a security, claim, or demand, or partly so, or who has not paid something by way of getting in a security, or the like. The plaintiff, an execution creditor against lands, brought an execution creater against lands, brought an action to set aside as fraudulent two mortgages of real estate made by his execution debtor, and succeeded as to the first, the action being dismissed as to the second mortgage.
The lands were sold, but did not realize enough to pay the plaintiff and the second mortgage. The plaintiff then claimed to be entitled by his diligence to priority for his execution over the second mortgage, to the extent of the mortgage so set aside as fraudulent :-Held, that he was not entitled to any such priority as to his execution, but that his costs as between solicitor and client over and above his costs as between party and party, and such of the latter costs as might not be realized from the defendants (other than the second mortgagee) were a first charge on the fund as in the nature of salvage. Coursolles v. Fookes, 16 O. R. 691.

Fire Insurance—Rights of Mortgagee— Insurance Company — Subrogation Agreement.]—See McKay v. Norwich Union Ins. Co., 27 O. R. 251.

Payment of Mortgage — Discharge.]— Held, that the defendants were not entitled to be subrogated to the rights of a mortgagee in wnose mortgage the plaintiffs' ancestress had joined as a granting party, but which had been paid off and discharged. Marsh v. Webb, 21 O. R. 281.

Discharge — Mistake — Intervening Execution.]—The plantiff advanced money to the owner of real estate to pay off existing mortgages thereon, and took and registered a mortgage on the property for the amount, paid off the prior mortgages, and registered discharges of them, the defendant having all the time an execution against the lands of the mortgagor in the hands of the sheriff of the county in which the lands were situate, of Intervening ed money to off existing registered a mount, paid istered disving all the ands of the eriff of the situate, of which the plaintiff was ignorant, his solicitors having neglected to search:—Held, that the plaintiff was entitled to be subrogated to the rights of the original mortgages, and to priority over the defeudant's execution, to the amount paid to discharge the prior mortgages, upon the ground of mistake, he having done what he did under the belief that he was not disentitled to relief because by using ordinary care he might have discovered the mistake, the defeudant not having been prejudiced thereby. Brown v. McLean, 18 O. R. 553.

Discharge — Mistake—Intervening Lien—Registry Laws.] — The plaintiff registered a lien against certain lands. On the day before such registration the defendant, an intending purchaser, had searched the registry and found only two incumbrances registered against the property. Shortly afterwards the defendant completed his purchase, and, having paid off the two incumbrances, registered discharges thereof with his deed of purchase, but, as he did not make a further search, he did not discover the plaintiff's lien:—Held, that the defendant was entitled to stand in the place of the incumbrancers whom he had paid off, and to priority over the plaintiff's lien. The Registry Act does not preclude inquiry as to whether there was knowledge in fact; and the court was not compelled as a conclusion of law to say that the defendant had notice of what he was doing, and so could not plead mistake. Brown v. McLean, 18 O. R. 533, specially considered. Abell v. Morrison, 19 O. R. 669.

Discharge—Mistake—Second Mortgage—Estoppel by Conduct.]—The plaintiff paid off a first mortgage on certain lands, and procured its discharge, taking a new mortgage to himself for the amount of the advance in ignorance of the fact of the existence of a second mortgage. Shortly afterwards, on ascertaining this fact, he notified the defendant, the holder, that he would pay it off, and the defendant, relying thereon, took no steps to enforce his security. Subsequently, on the property becoming depreciated and the mortgagor insolvent, the plaintiff brought an action to have it declared that he was entitled to stand in the position of first mortgagee:—Held, that the plaintiff by his acts and conduct had precluded himself from asserting such right. Brown v. McLean, 18 O. R. 535, and Abell v. Morrison, 19 O. R. 630, distinguished. McLecol v. Wadland, 25 O. R. 118.

Partnership — Judicial Abandonment—Dissolution — Composition — Confusion of Rights.] — A partner in a commercial firm which made a judicial abandonment was indebted to the firm at the time of the abandonment in a large amount overdrawn upon his personal account. Subsequently he made and carried out a composition with the creditors of the firm, and with the approval of the court the curator transferred to him, by an assignment in authentic form, "all the assets and estate generally of the said late firm. as they existed at the time the said curator was appointed." At the same time the credities that the same time the credities clarage both him and his partners from the company of the control of the court of the court Held, also, that the assignment of the estate by the curator and the discharge by the creditors, taken together, had the effect of releasing all the partners from the firm debts, but vested all the rights which had been transferred by the abandonment, in the transfere personally, and could not revive the individual rights of the partners as between themselves; and that, in consequence, any debt owing by the transferee to the partnership, as the time of the abandonment, became extinguished by confusion. I. CONTRACTS.

Date of Payment.]—Where the day on which money is due under an agreement falls on Sunday:—Semble, that the payment must be made on Saturday. Whittier v. McLennan, 13 U. C. R. 638.

Date of Performance.] — In an action for specific performance, even when time is of the essence of the agreement, if the party in default has done what in him lay to perform the contract, the court may, in the exercise of its discretion, grant the relief claimed. And to be tendered by remember, the conveyance was to be tendered by respectively being the defendant and the transaction of when no tender was made, and the conduct of the defendant on the following day was such as for exclude a tender on that day, in an action for specific performance the plaintiff was held entitled to judgment. Cudney v. Givez, 20 O. R. 500.

Hlegality—Pleading.]—In an action upon a contract for the purchase of a horse, the statement of defence alleged that on Sunday the 19th April the defendant drove out to the plaintiff's place for the purpose of exchanging a horse, and that on that occasion it was agreed, &c. (stating the defendant's version of the bargain):—Held, that this statement was not sufficient to raise the defence of illegality under the Lord's Day Act, but, as it was treated at the trial as tendering the proper issue, and as the jury found that a contract was made on a Sunday, the judgment for the plaintiff was set aside and a new trial granted, without costs, with leave to both parties to amend. Crosson v. Bigley, 12 A. R. 94.

Unmeritorious Defence—Solicitor—Negligence.]—Semble, that an attorney would not be liable for culpable negligence in not urging for his client the defence that the agreement upon which he was sued was made on a Sunday, as it is no part of his professional duty to take all dishonest advantages. Vail v, Duggan, 7 U. C. R. 508.

Ordinary Calling.]—To avoid a contract made on Sanday, under 29 Car. II. e. 7, it must be shewn that it was in the ordinary calling of the person making it. Bethune v. Hamilton, 6 O. S. 105.

Promissory Note.]—A note made on Sunday in payment of goods sold on that day is void as between the original parties, but not as against an indersee for value, and without notice. Houliston v, Parsons, 9 U. C. R. 681; Crombie v, Overholtzer, 11 U. C. R. 55.

Sale — Mortgage.]—All sales of real and personal property made on Sunday are void. Semble, that mortgages would not be void. Lai v. Stall, 6 U. C. R. 506.

Security.]—The giving or taking in security on Sunday is not void as a buying or selling. Wilt v. Lai, 7 U. C. R. 535.

II. LORD'S DAY ACT.

Conviction—Barber—Shaving.]—The defendant, a barber, was convicted before a justice of the peace for exercising the worldly labour and work of his ordinary calling by shaving customers for hire at his shop on Sunday, contrary to the Lord's Day Act, C. S. U. C. c. 104. Upon certiorari motion was made to quash the conviction on the ground that shaving was an act of necessity within the exception of the Act;—Held, that a barber is a workman within the Act. (2) That shaving by a barber in the ordinary course of his business is a violation of the statute, and not a work of necessity or charity. Philips v. Innes, 4 Cl. & F. 234, approved. Quere, whether a barber in a hotel or boarding-house might not, by arrangement with the keeper, be deemed a servant, to do the work of shaving guests or the family on Sunday. Regina v. Taylor, 19 C. L. J. 362.

cine.]—Druggist—Sale of Goods—Medicine.]—Defendant, a druggist in the city of Toronto, sold five cents' worth of peppermint lozenges at his shop on a Sunday. The purchaser did not ask for them as medicine, he had no doctor's certificate, and he was asked no questions. It was shewn that peppermint lozenges were generally kept and sold by druggists as medicine. Defendant having been convicted on this evidence under the "Act to prevent the prefamilion of the Lord's Day," C. S. U. C. c. 104, and fined $20 and costs, the conviction was removed by certiorari;—Held, that the finding of the magistrate as to whether the lozenges were or were not medicine was subject to review by the court. (2) That there was no evidence to sustain the conviction, for the article, sold as it was by a druggist, must be considered primâ facie a medicine, though it was not expressly asked for or sold as such, and the case was within the exception in the Act, "selling drugs and medicines." The conviction, therefore, was quashed. Regina v. Hovearth, 33 U. C. R. 537.

ordinary Calling—Work of Necessity,1—Defendant was convicted under 8 Vict. c. 45, for that he did, on Sunday, work at his ordinary calling, inasmuch as he and his men did make and haul in hay on the said day:— Held, that the conviction must be quashed, as not shewing any offence within the statute, for defendant was not alleged to be of, nor to have worked at, any particular calling. Semble, that it was also bad for not negativing the exception in the statute, by stating that the work done was not one of necessity. Hespeter v. 8haur, 16 U. C. R. 104.

Owner of Steamboat — Carrying Travellers.]—Defendant was held liable for plying with his steamboat on Sunday, between the city of Toronto and the peninsula, persons carried between those places not being "travellers" within the exception in the Act. Regina v. Tinning, 11 U. C. R. 636.

The defendants, owner and captain respectively of a steamboat, advertised that they would carry excursions on Sundays. A number of passengers left Buffulo, in the State of New York, on a Sunday morning, and proceeded by rail to Niagara, whence they were carried by the defendants steamboat to Toronto and back the same day. The defendants having been convicted of an offence under R. S. O. 1877 c. 189:—Held, that the passengers were "travellers" within the meaning of the exception in s. 1 of the Act; that there is no distinction in such a case between travellers for pleasure and for business; and that the convictions were therefore bad, Regina v. Daggett, Regina v. Fortier, 1 O. R. 537.

A cab driver is not within any of the classes of persons enumerated in s. I of the Lord's Day Act, R. S. O. 1887 c. 203, and cannot be lawfully convicted thereunder for driving a cab on Sunday. was convicted of following his ordinary calling of foreman of the G. T. R. Co. elevator in superintending the unloading of grain from a vessel into the elevator on Sunday:—Held, that R. S. — Victualling House Keeper—Supplying Food—Ice Cream.]—Supplying ice cream to the complainants, under the circumstances set out in the report, on a Sunday was the supplying a refreshment in the nature of a light meal in the ordinary course of the defendant's business as a victualling house keeper, and was not an offence against the Lord's Day Act, R. S. O. 1897 c. 246. A person carrying on the business of a victualling house keeper cannot make any distinction as to whom he supplies, or what he supplies, provided it is food or victuals; and ice cream is food, Regina v. Albertie, 20 C. L. T. Occ. N. 123.

Injunction — Street Railway—Breach of Charter-Croune.]—The defendants were incorporated by letters patent under the Street Railway Act, R. S. O. 1887 c. 171, which authorized them to construct and operate (on all days except Sunday) a street railway:—Held, that an action would not lie by the Crown to restrain the defendants from operating the road on Sunday, the restriction against their doing so being at most an implied one, and no substantial injury to the public, or any interference with proprietary rights, being shewn. Judgment in 19 O. R. 624 nffirmed. Attoracy-Greenel v. Niagara Patls, Wesley Park, and Clifton Tramway Co., 18 A. R. 453.

—Street Railway — Company—"Conveying Travellers."]—A company incorporated for the purpose of operating street cars does not come within the Lord's Day Act, R. S. O. 1887 c. 203, s. 1. Taking persons in street cars from point to point in a city is not "conveying travellers" within the meaning of the Act. Regina v. Tinning, 11 U. C. R. 636, and Regina v. Daggett, 1 O. R. 557, considered. Judgment in 27 O. R. 49 affirmed. Attorney-General v. Hamilton Street R. W. Co., 24 A. R. 170.

Amusements—Imperial Act.]—The Imperial Act 21 Geo. III. c. 49, prohibiting amusements and entertainments on the Lord's day, is in force in Ontario, and an application to quash a conviction the reunder for keeping a disorderly house known as the "Royal Opera House," opened and used for public entertainment and a musement on the Lord's day, was therefore refused. Regina v. Barnes, 45 U. C. R. 276.

Municipal By-law—Park Preaching,]—It is provided by R. S. O. 1887 c. 184, s. 504, s.-s. 10, that the council of every city and town may pass by-laws for the management of the farm, park, garden, &c.:—Held, that the municipal council of a city had power under this enactment to pass a by-law providing that no person shall on the Sabbath day, in any public park, square, garden, &c.; in the city, publicly preach, lecture, or declaim. Held, also, that the by-law volated no constitutional right, and was not unreasonable. Bailey williamson, L. R. S. Q. B. 118, followed, Held, also, that the by-law was not bad for uncertainty as to the day of the week indicated, by reason of the use of the term "Sabbath day." Re Cribbin and City of Toronto, 21 O. Amendment of Pleadings.]—The supreme court will not interfere on appeal with an order made by a provincial court granting leave to amend the pleadings, such orders being a matter of procedure within the discretion of the court below. Williams v. Leonard, 26 S. C. R. 406.

Costs.]—The making or refusing to make an order for the taxation of a bill of costs, upon the application of a third party, is a matter of discretion, and no appeal lies to this court. McGugan v. McGugan, 21 S. C. R. 267.

Though an appeal will not lie in respect of costs only, yet where there has been a mistake upon some matter of law, or of principle, which the party appealing has an actual interest in having reviewed, and which governs or affects the costs, the party projudiced is entitled to have the benefit of correction by appeal. Archabal v. DeLisle, Paker v. DeLisle, Mowat v. DeLisle, 25 S. C. R. I.

It is only when some fundamental principle of justice has been ignored or some other gross error appears that the supreme court will interfere with the discretion of provincial courts in awarding or withholding costs. Smith v. St. John City R. W. Co., Consolidated Electric Co. v. Altantic Trust Co., Consolidated Electric Co. v. Pratt, 28 S. C. R. 663.

In order to avoid expense the supreme court of Canada will, when possible, quash an appeal involving a question of costs only, though there may be jurisdiction to entertain it. Schlomann v. Dowker, 30 S. C. R. 323.

New Trial.]—Under s. 22 of the Supreme and Exchequer Courts Act no appeal lies from the judgment of a court granting a new trial, on the ground that the verilict was against the weight of evidence, that being a matter of discretion. Book v. Merchants Marine Ins. Co., 1 S. C. R. 110.

Setting aside Judgment by Default.]—After judgment has been entered by default in an action in the high court of justice, it is in the discretion of the master in chambers to grant or refuse an application by the defendant to have the proceedings reopened to allow him to defend, and an appeal to the supreme court from the decision of the court of last resort on such an application is prohibited by s. 27 of the Supreme and Exchequer Courts Act. Quere, is the judgment on such application a "final judgment" within the meaning of s. 24 (a) of the Act? O'Donohoe v. Bourne, 27 S. C. R. 654.

Stay of Proceedings.]—An order perpetually restraining the plaintiffs from proceeding is one made in the exercise of judicial discretion, as to which s. 27 of the Supreme Court Act does not allow an appeal. Maritime Bank of the Dominion of Canada v. Stevart, 20 S. C. R. 105.

Summary Judgment.]—An order allowing judgment to be entered by the plaintifs on a specially indorsed writ is one made in the exercise of judicial discretion, as to which s. 27 of the Supreme Court Act does not allow an appeal. Rural Municipality of Morris v, London and Canadian L. and A. Co., 19 S. C. R. 434.

2. Matters of Practice and Procedure.

Costs. |—It is doubtful if a decision affirming the master's ruling on taxation of a solicitor's bill of costs, which relates wholly to the practice and procedure of the high court of justice for Ontario, and of an officer of that court in construing its rules and executing an order of reference made to him, is a proper subject of appeal to the supreme court. by-law passed by the corporation of the village of Huntingdon, the by-law in question was repealed. On appeal to the supreme court of Canada:—Held, that the only matter in dispute between the parties being a mere question of costs, the court would not entertain the appeal: Supreme and Exchequer Courts Act, s. 24. Moir v, Village of Huntingdon, 19 S. C. R. 363.

Held, that, assuming this court had jurisdiction to entertain an appeal with respect to an order for taxation of a bill of costs applied for by a third party, it should not interfere with the decision of the provincial courts, which were the most competent tribunals to deal with such matters. McGugan v. McGugan, 21 S. C. R. 267.

— Only Matter in Dispute.]—See Mc-Kay v. Township of Hinchinbrooke, 24 S. C. R. 55.

Discharge of Bail—Delay.]—An appeal from an order of the full court refusing to set aside an order for the discharge of bail on account of delay in entering up judgment, will not be entertained, as the matter is one of practice in the discretion of the court below. Scammelt v. James, 16 S. C. R. 593.

Irregularity—Case Improperly on Paper in Court below—Affidavits in Reply.]—See Jones v. Tuck, 11 S. C. R. 197.

— Execution.]—A judgment of the court of Queen's bench for Lower Canada (appeal side) held that a venditioni exponsa issued by the superior court of Montreal, to which court the record in a contextation of an opposition had been removed from the superior court of the district of therville, under art. 188, C. C. P., was regular. On an appeal to the supreme court of Canada:—Held, that on a question of practice such as this the court would not interfere. Mayor of Montreal v. Brown, 2 App. Cas. 108, followed. Arpin v. Merchants Bank of Canada, 24 S. C. R. 142.

procedure in the case that McD. and C. had been irregularly condenned jointly to pay the amount of the judgment. Yet, as McD. had pleaded to the merits of the action, and had taken up fait et cause for C. with his knowledge, and both courts below had held them jointly liable, the supreme court of Canada would not interfere in such a matter of practice and procedure. Macdonald v. Ferdais, 22 S. C. R. 299.

Special Circumstances.]—Decisions of provincial courts resting upon mere questions of procedure will not be interfered with on appeal to the supreme court of Canada except under special circumstances. Ferrier v. Trépannier, 24 S. C. R. 86.

Substantial Rights—Order for Resole.)—The supreme court of Canada will take into consideration questions of practice when they consideration questions of practice when they pealed from may cause grave injustice. Part of lands seized by the sheriff had been withdrawn before sale, but on proceedings for folle encliere it was ordered that the property described in the process verbal of seizure should be resold, no reference being made to the part withdrawn. On appeal, the court of Queen's bench reversed the order, on the ground that it directed a resale of property which had not been sold, and further, because an apparently regular sheriff's deed of the lands actually sold had been duly registered, and had not been annulled by the order for resale, or prior to the proceedings for folle enchère:—Held, that the court of Queen's bench should not have set aside the order, but should have reformed it by rectifying the error. Lambe v. Armstrong, 27 S. C. R. 309.

— Revocation of Judgment.]—Where a grave injustice has been inflicted upon a party to a suit, the supreme court of Canada will interfere for the purpose of granting appropriate relief, although the question involved upon the appeal may be one of local practice only. Lambe v. Armstrong, 27 S. C. R. 339, followed. Eastern Townships Bank v. Sucan, 29 S. C. R. 193.

See Kandick v. Morrison, 2 S. C. R. 12.

3. Questions of Fact.

Award—Value of Land.]—See The Queen v. Paradis, The Queen v. Beaulieu, 16 S. C. R. 716; Lemoine v. City of Montreal, 23 S. C. R. 390; The Queen v. Hubert, 14 S. C. R. 737.

Concurrent Findings of Two Courts.]

The finding of two courts on a question of fact will not be interfered with by the supreme court. Schwersenski v. Vineberg. 19 S. C. R. 243.

The supreme court of Canada, on appeal from a decision affirming the report of a referee in a suit to remove executors and trustees, which report disallowed items in accounts previously passed by the probate court, will not reconsider the item so dealt with, two courts having previously exercised a judicial discretion as to the amounts, and no question of principle being involved. Grant v. Maclaren, 23 S. C. R. 310.

Held, that, though the case might properly have been left to the jury, as the judgment of nonsuit was affirmed by two courts, it should not be interfered with. Headford v. McClary Mfg. Co., 24 S. C. R. 201.

If a sufficiently clear case is made out, the court will allow an appeal on mere questions of fact against the concurrent findings of two courts. Arpin v. The Queen, 14 S. C. R. 736, Schwersenski v. Vineberg, 19 S. C. R. 243, and Lemoine v. City of Montreal, 23 S. C. R. 390, distinguished. North British and Mercantile Ins. Co. v. Tourville, 25 S. C. R. 177.

In an action where the defendants counterclaimed for damages caused by the defective construction of a boiler for their steamer, which had collapsed:—Held, that conclusive effect should not be given to the evidence of witnesses called as experts as to the cause of the collapse, who were not present at the time of the accident, whose evidence was not founded upon knowledge, but was mere matter of opinion, who gave no reasons and stated no facts to shew upon what their opinion was based; and where the result would be to condemn as defective in design and faulty in construction all boilers built after the same pattern, which the evidence shewed were in zeneral use. The judgment, therefore, allowing the counterclaim was set aside, though avainst the concurrent findings of two courts below. William Hamilton Mfg. Co., v. Victoria Lumbering and Mfg. Co., 28 S. C. R. 96.

The supreme court of Canada will take questions of fact into consideration on appeal, and if it clearly appears that there has been an error in the admission or appreciation of evidence by the court below, their decisions may be reversed or varied. North British and Mercantile Ins. Co. v. Tourville, 25 S. C. R. 177, followed. Lefeauteum v. Beaudoin, 28 S. C. R. 89.

In an action by an employee to recover damages for injuries sustained, there was some evidence of neglect on the part of the employers which, in the opinion of both courts below, might have been the cause of the accident through which the injuries were sustained, and both courts found that the accident was due to the fault of the defendants either in neglecting to cover a dangerous part of a revolving shaft temporarily with boards or to disconnect the shaft or stop the whole machinery, while the plaintiff was required to work over or near the shaft:—Held, that, although the evidence on which the courts below based their findings of fact might appear weak, and there might be room for the inference that the primary cause of the injuries was the plaintiff's own imprudence, the supreme court of Canada would not, on appeal, reverse such concurrent findings of fact. George Matthews Co. v. Bouchard, 28 S. C. R. 580.

Although there may be concurrent findings on questions of fact in both courts below, the supreme court of Canada will, upon appeal, interfere with their decision where it clearly appears that a gross injustice has been occasioned to the appellant, and there is evidence sufficient to justify findings to the contrary. City of Montreal v. Cadieux, 29 S. C. R. 616.

Where there does not clearly appear to have been error in the findings of the courts below, they will not be disturbed on appeal. Paradis v. Municipality of Limoilou, 30 S. C. R. 405, Damages.]—The supreme court will not interfere with the amount of damages assessed by a judgment appealed from if there is evidence to support it. Montreal Gas Co. v. St. Laurent, City of St. Henri v. St. Laurent, 26 S. C. R. 176.

Election Petition—Error.]—Held, that the supreme court on appeal will not reverse on mere matters of fact the judgment of the Judge who tries an election petition, unless the matter of the evidence is of such a nature as to convey an irresistible conviction that the judgment is not only wrong, but is erroneous, Montealm Election, Magnan v. Duans. 9 S. C. R. 93.

Poneous. Montealm Election, Magnan V. Dugas, 9 S. C. R. 93. See, also, Berthier Election, Genereux v. Cuthbert, 9 S. C. R. 102.

Evidence Taken on Commission—Revenued of Judgment.]—Where the witnesses have not been heard in the presence of the Judge, but their depositions were taken before a commissioner, a court of appeal may deal with the evidence more fully than if the trial Judge had heard it, or there had been a finding of fact by a jury, and may reverse the finding of the trial court if such evidence warrants it. Malzard v. Hart, 27 S. C. R. 510.

Finding of Court—Error.]—Where a judgment appealed from is founded wholly upon questions of fact, the supreme court of Canada will not reverse it unless convinced beyond all reasonable doubt, that such judgment is clearly erroneous. Arpin v. The Queen, 14 S. C. R. 736.

In an action against a railway company for damages for loss of property by fire alleged to have been occasioned by sparks from an engine or hot-box of a passing train, in which the court appealed from held that there was no sufficient proof that the fire occurred through the fault or negligence of the company, and it was not shown that such finding was clearly wrong or erroneous, the supreme court would not interfere with the finding, Science v. Central Vermont R. W. Co., 26 S. C. R. 64.

Jury—Court — Judge's Charge.]—Under rule 476 of the Judicature Act of Nova Scotia the court can take a case which has been passed upon by a jury into its own hands and dispose of it, if all the proper materials on which to decide are before it, but in this case the materials essential to the final disposition of the case were not before the court, and there must be a new trial. The supreme court, as an appellate court of the Dominion, should not approve of such strong observations being made by a Judge as were made in this case, in effect charging upon the defendants fraud not set out in the pleadings and not legitimately in Issue in the cause. Hardman v, Patham. 18 S. C. R. 714.

Questions not Disposed of-Disregard of Findings-Motion for Judgment,1-This case coming before the court below on motion for judgment under the order which governs the practice in such cases, and which is identical with English order 40, rule 10, of the orders of 1875, the court could give judgment finally determining all questions in dispute, although the jury might not have found on them all; but that rule does not enable a court to dispose of a case contrary to the finding of a jury. In case the court considers particular findings to be against evidence, all that can be done is to award a new trial, either generally or in part under the powers conferred by the rule similar to the English order 39, rule 40. The supreme court of Canada, giving the judgment that the court below ought to have given, was in this case in a position to give judgment upon the evidence at large, there being no findings by the jury interposing any obstacle to their so doing, and therefore a judgment should be entered against both defendants for $80,000 and costs. Secell v. British Columbia Towing and Transportation Co., S S. C. R. 527.

Verdict Affirmed.]—A jury having pronounced on the question of fact, and their verdict having been affirmed by the supreme court of New Brunswick, the supreme court declined to interfere with the finding. Cassels v. Burns, 14 S. C. R. 256,

On appeal from the decision of the full court assessing damages to the plaintiff:—Held, that, as by the nractice of the supreme court of New Brunswick all matters of fact must be decided by the jury, and can only be entertained by the court by consent of parties, the full court, in considering the case parsuant to the agreement at the trial, acted as a quasi-arbitrator, and its decision was not open to review on appeal as it would have been if the judgment appeal as it would have been if the judgment had been given in the regular course of judi-cial procedure in the court. Held, further, that if the merits of the case could be enter-tained on appeal, the judgment appealed from should be affirmed. Canadian Pacific R. W., Co. v. Fleming, 22 S. C. R. 33.

Nantical Question - Balance of Testimony.]—Where a disputed fact, involving nautical questions, is raised by an appeal from the judgment of the maritime court of from the judgment of the maritime court of Ontario, as in the case of a collision, the supreme court will not reverse the decree of the Judge of the court below, merely upon a balance of testimony. The Picton, McCuaig v. Keith, 4 S. C. R. 648.

Reversal of Judgment below-Restoration of Original Finding.]—On an appeal to the supreme court from a judgment of the exchequer court increasing the amount awarded by the official arbitrators to the claimant for expropriation of land for the Intercolonial Railway:—Held, reversing the judgment of the exchequer court and restoring the award of the official arbitrators, that to warrant an interference with an award of value necessarily largely speculative, an appellate court must be satisfied beyond all reasonable doubt that some wrong principle has been acted on or something overlooked which ought to have been considered by the official arbitrators, and upon the evidence in this case this court refused to interfere with the amount of compensation awarded by the official arbitrators. The Queen v. Paradis, The Queen v. Beaulieu, 16 S. C. R. 716.

Where a judgment upon questions of fact rendered in a court of first instance has been reversed upon a first appeal, a second court of appeal should not interfere to restore the original judgment, unless it clearly appears that the reversal was erroneous. Demers v. Montreal Steam Laundry Co., 27 S. C. R.

Judgment of court below, holding that the evidence was not sufficient to rebut the presumption that upon a sale of goods to a merchant the price stated in the invoice was that agreed upon, reversed, upon the ground that the appeal depended on mere matters of fact, as to which an appellate court should not interfere. Kearney v. Letellier, 27 S. C. R. 1.

On a reference being made to the official arbitrators of certain claims made by one H. against the government for damages arising out of the enlargement of the Lachine canal, to land situated on said canal, the arbitrators awarded H. $9,216 in full and final settlement of all claims. On an appeal taken to the exchequer court by H. this amount was increased to $15,900, including $5,000 for damages caused to the land from 1877 to 1884, by leakage from the canal since its enlargement, and the Judge reserved the right to H. to claim for future damages from that date. On appeal to the supreme court of Canada:-Held, reversing the judgment of the exchequer court and confirming the award of the arbitrators, that it must be taken that the arbi-trators dealt with every item of H.'s claim submitted to them and included in their award all past, present, and future damages, and that the evidence did not justify an increase of the amount awarded. The Queen v. Hubert, 14 S. C. R. 737.

4. Other Cases.

Court Equally Divided-Effect of, as a Decision.]—When the supreme court of Canada in a case in appeal is equally divided, so that the decision appealed against stands unreversed, the result of the case in the supreme reversed, the result of the case in the supreme court affects the actual parties to the litiga-tion only, and the court, when a similar case is brought before it, is not bound by the re-sult of the previous case. Stanstead Election Case, 20 S. C. R. 12.

Election Petition - Preliminary Objections.]—An extremely strong case should be shewn to induce the court to allow an appeal from the judgment of the court below on pre-liminary objections. Shelburne Election (Dom.), Robertson v. Laurie, 14 S. C. R.

Evidence Improper Admission.]-If in a case tried without a jury, evidence has been improperly admitted, a court of appeal may reject it and maintain the verdict, if the remaining evidence warrants it. Merritt v. Hepenstal, 25 S. C. R. 150.

Ground not Taken in Court below-Necessity for Amendment.]—The respondent sued the appellants to recover damages alleged to have been sustained by reason of the obstruction of the river Miramichi by appellants' boom. The pleas were "not guilty" and "leave and license." On the trial counsel and leave and neess.

In the transfer of the appellants proposed to add a plea, that the wrong complained of was occasioned by an extraordinary freshet. The counsel for the respondent objected on the ground that such plea might have been demurred to. The Judge refused the application, because he in-tended to admit the evidence under the plea of "not guilty." On appeal, the counsel for the appellants contended that the obstruction complained of was justified under 17 Vict. c. 10 (N. B.), incorporating the appellants: Held, that the appellants, not having put in a plea of justification under the statute, or applied to the supreme court of New Brunswick in banco for leave to amend their pleas, could not rely on that ground before this court to reverse the decision of the court below. South-West Boom Co. v. McMillan, 3 S. C. R. 700.

- Right of Action. |- Absolute want of legal right of action may be invoked by a defendant at any stage of a suit. Judgment in 3 Q. P. R. 1 overruled on the motifs, but affirmed in its result. McFarren v. Montreal Park and Island R. W. Co., 30 S. C. R. 410.

Validity of Instrument.]—Where the issues have been joined in a suit and judgment rendered upon pleadings admitting and relying upon a written instrument, an objection to the validity of the instrument taken for the first time on an appeal to the supreme court of Canada comes too late and cannot be entertained. The Queen v. Poirier, 30 S. C. R. 36.

Reference—Report on Matters Extra.]— The decision in 9 N. S. Rep. 341, confirming the report of a master on a reference, reversed on the ground that the master had exceeded his authority and reported on matters not referred to him. Doull v. Mcllreith, 14 S. C. R. 739.

Technical Grounds—Surprise.]—An appellate court will not give effect to mere technical grounds of appeal, against the merits and where there has been no surprise or disadvantage to the appellant. Gorman v. Diron, 26 S. C. R. 87.

Winding-up Order—Votice.]—It is a substantial objection to a winding-up order appointing a liquidator to the estate of an insolvent company under 45 Vict. e. 23 (D. 1), that such order has been made without notice to the creditors contributories, shareholders, or members of the company, as required by s. 24 of the said Act, and an order so made was set aside and the petition therefor referred back to the Judge to be dealt with anew. Shoolbred v. Union Fire Ins. Co., 14 S. C. R. 624.

II. APPEAL—JURISDICTION AND RIGHT.

1. Acquiescence in Judgment,

Abandonment in Intermediate Court.]—In an action in which the constitutionality of 36 vict. e. 81 (Q.) was raised by the defendant, the attorney-general for the Frontine of Quebe intervened, and the judgment of Quebe intervened, and the judgment on the court of Queen's bench, but afterwards abandoned his appeal from the judgment on the intervention, the defendant plagment on the intervention. On a further appeal to the supreme court of Queen's bench in the principal action, the defendant asserted the right to have the judgment of the court of Queen's bench in the principal action, the defendant asserted he right to have the judgment of the superior court on the intervention reviewed:—Held, that the appeal to the court of Queen's bench from the judgment of the superior court on the intervention having been abandoned, the judgment on the intervention of the attorney-general could not be the subject of an appeal to this court. Ball v. McCaffren, 20 8. C. R. 319.

Agreement of Solicitor.]—By a judgment of the court of Oquen's bench, the defendant society was ordered to deliver up a certain number of its shares upon payment of a certain sum. Before the time for appealing expired, the attorney ad litem for the defendant delivered the shares to the plaintiff's attorney and stated that he would not appeal if the society were paid the amount directed to be paid. An appeal was subsequently taken before the plaintiff's attorney complied with the terms of the offer. On a motion to quash the appeal on the ground of acquiescence in the judgment:—Held, that the appeal would lie. Société Canadianne-Francaise de Construction de Montreal v. Daveluy, 20 S. C. R. 449.

2. Amount in Controversy.

(a) Exchequer Court Cases.

Affidavits Establishing Amount—Costs.]—On a motion to quash an appeal, where the respondents filed affidavits stating that the amount in controversy was less than the amount fixed by the statute as necessary and affidavits were also filed by the appellants shewing that the amount in controversy was sufficient to give jurisdiction under the statute, the motion to quash was dismissed, but the appellants were ordered to pay the costs, as the jurisdiction of the court to hear the appellant affidavits in answer to the motion. Dreschel v. Auer Incandescent Light Mfg. Co., 28 S. C. R. 208.

(b) Ontario Cases.

Ontario Enactment — Ultra Vires.]—Section 43 of the Ontario Judicature Act. 1881, which provides that in cases where the amount in controversy is under 81,000 no appeal shall lie from the decision of the court of appeal to the supreme court of Canada, except by leave of a Judge of the former court, is ultra vires the legislature of Ontario and not binding on this court. Remarks on an order granting such leave on appellant undertaking to nsk no costs of appeal. Clarkson v. Ryam, 17 S. C. R. 251.

Original Demand—Amount Involved in Appeal.]—Where the jurisdiction of the superme court of Canada to entertain an appeal is doubtful, the court may assume jurisdiction with the court may assume jurisdiction with the court may assume furisdiction with the property of the court of the property of the court of the property of the court of appeal for Ontario unless the amount in controversy in the appeal exceeds $1,000, and by s.-s. (f), in case of difference it is the amount demanded, and not that recovered, which determines the amount in controversy:—Held, that to reconcile these two sub-sections, s.-s. (f) should probably be read as if it meant the amount demanded upon the appeal. To read it as meaning the amount demanded in the action, which is the construction the court has put upon R. S. C. c. 135, s. 29, relating to appeals from the Province of Quobec, would seem to be contrary to the intention of parliament. Laberge v. Equitable Life Assurance Society, 24 S. C. R. 59, distinguished, Bain v. Anderson, 28 S. C. R. 481.

Setting aside Second Mortgage— Surplus over First Mortgage—Title to Land.]—While an action to set aside a second mortgage for $2,200 was pending, the mortgaged lands were sold under a prior mortgage, and the first mortgagee, after satisfying his own claims, paid the whole surplus of the er. Judgment was afterwards rendered declaring the second mortgage void, and ordering the defendant to pay to the plaintiff, as assignee for the beneit of creditors, the amount of $270 so received by him thereunder, and this judgment was affirmed on appeal. Upon an application to allow an appeal bond on further appeal to the supreme court of Canada, objections were taken for want of jurisdiction under the clauses of the Act 60 & 61 Vict. c. 24, but they were overruled by a Judge of the court of appeal for Ontario, who held that an interest in real estate was in question, and the appeal was accordingly proceeded with, and the appeal case and factums printed and delivered. On motion to quash for want of perinting:—Held, that the peak was called for a question of title to real estate or any interest therein, but was merely a controversy in relation to an amount less than the sum or value of $1,000, and that the Act 60 & 61 Vict. c. 34 prohibited an appeal to the supreme court of Canada. Jermyn v. Tew. 28 S. C. R. 497.

Statute of Canada—Application to Pending Cases.]—The Act 60 & 61 Vict. c. 34 (D.), which restricts the right of appeal to the supreme court in cases from Ontario as therein specified, does not apply to a case in which the action was pending when the Act came into force, although the judgment directly appealed from may not have been pronounced until afterwards. Hyde v. Lindsay, 29 S. C. R. 99.

(c) Quebec Cases.

Account—Compensation,] — The plaintiff, who had acted as agent for the late J. B. S., brought an action for 81.471.07 for a balance of account, as negotiorum gestor of J. B. S., achieves the defendants, executors of J. B. S. The defendants, in addition to a general denial, pleaded compensation for $3.416 and interest. The plaintiff replied that this sum was paid by a dation en paiement of certain immovables. The defendants answered that the transaction was not a giving in payment but a giving of a security. The court of Queen's bench, reversing the judgment of the superior court, held that the defendants had been paid by the dation en paiement of the immovables, and that the defendants owed a balance of $1.154 to the plaintiff:—Held, that the pecuniary interest of the defendants affected by the judgment appealed from, was more than $2,000 over and above the plaintiff's claim, and therefore the case was appealable under R. S. C. c. 135, s. 29. Hunt v. Taplin, 24 S. C. R. 35, s. 29. Hunt v. Taplin, 24 S. C. R. 35.

Allowance — Annuity.] — An action for $200, being one instalment of an annuity payable under a will, was dismissed, and the plaintiff appealed:—Held, that the amount in controversy was only $200, although the judgment might affect future payments. Rodier v. Lapierre, 21 S. C. R. 63.

— Maintenance of Bastard.]—In an action en declaration de paternité the plaintiff claimed an allowance of $15 per month until the child (then a minor aged four years and nine months) should attain the age of ten years, and for an allowance of $20 per month thereafter "until such time as the child should be able to support and provide for himself." The court below, following the decision in Lizotte v. Descheneau, 6 Leg. News 197, held that, under ordinary circumstances, such an allowance would cease at the age of fourteen years:—Held, that the demande must be understood to be for allowances only up to the time the child should attain the age of fourteen years and no further, so that, apart from the contingent character of the claim, the demande was for less than the sum or value of $2.000, and consequently the case was not appealable under the provisions of s. 29 of the Supreme and Exchequer Courts Act, even if an amount or value of more than $2.000 might become involved under certain contingencies as a consequence of the judgment of the court below. Rodier v. Lapierre, 21 S. C. R. 63, followed. Macdonald v. Galivan, 28 S. C. R. 258.

Award—Interest—Costs,]—In an action to set aside an award of $1,974.25$, Strong and Taschereau, JJ., doubted the jurisdiction of the supreme court of Canada to hear an appeal from a decision of the court of Queen's bench, Lower Canada, because, to make up the appealable amount, either interest accrued after date of award or the costs taxed on the arbitration proceedings would have to be added, Quebec, Montmorency, and Charlecoix R. W. Co. v. Mathieu, 19 S. C. R. 429.

Bank Shares — Actual Value.] — Where the matter in controversy is bank shares, their actual value at the time of the institution of the action and not their par value will determine the right of appeal under s. 29 of the Supreme and Exchequer Courts Act, and the actual value of such shares may be shewn by affidavit. Muir v. Carter, Holmes v. Carter, 16 S. C. R. 473.

Damages — Court of First Instance.] — Where the plaintiff in an action for $10,000 damages obtains a judgment in the superior court for Lower Canada for $2,000, and the defendant appeals to the court of Queen's bench, where the judgment is reduced below said amount of $2,000, the case is appealable by the plaintiff to the supreme court, the value of the matter in controversy as regards him being the amount of the judgment of the superior court. The amount of damages awarded in his discretion by the Judge who tries the case in the court of first instance, should not be interfered with by a court of appeal, unless clearly unreasonable and unsupported by the evidence, or there he some error in law or fact, or partiality on the part of the Judge. Levi v. Reed, 6 S. C. R. 482, and Gingras v. Desilets, Cassel's Dig., 2nd ed., 212, followed. Cossette v. Dun, 18 S. C. R. 222.

— Demand — Amending Act.] — The statute 54 & 55 Vict. c. 25, s. 3, which provides that "whenever the right to appeal is dependent upon the amount in dispute, such amount shall be understood to be that demanded, and not that recovered, if they are different," does not apply to cases in which the superior court has rendered judgment, or to cases argued and standing for judgment (en délibéré) before that court, when the Act came into force (30th September, 1891).

Williams v, Irvine, 22 S. C. R. 108, followed. In actions for damages claiming more than 82,090, the court of Queen's bench for Lower Canada, on appeal in one case, gave the plain-tiff judgment for 8800, reversing the judgment of the superior court, which had dismissed the actions, and in the other cases, on appeal by the defendants, affirmed the judgments of the superior court giving damages for an amount less than $2,000 :—Held, following Monette v. Lefebvre, 16 S. C. R. 387, that no appeal would lie to the superne court, in these cases, by the defendants, from the judgment of the court of Queen's bench, under s. 29 of c. 153, R. S. C. Cowen v. Evans, Mitchell v. Trenholme, Mills v. Limoges, 22 S. C. R. 331.

Disavowal of Attorney -Amount of Judgment against Petitioner.]-In an action brought in 1866 for the sum of 8800 and interest at twelve and a half per cent. against two brothers, S. J. D. and W. McD. D., being the amount of a promissory note signed by them, one copy of the summons was served at the domicile of 8, J. D. at Three Rivers, the other defendant, W. McD. D., then residing in the State of New York. On the return of the writ, the respondent filed an appearance as attorney for both defendants, and proceedings were suspended until 1874, when judgment was taken, and in December, 1880, upon the issue of an alias writ of execution, the appellant, having failed in an opposition to judgment, filed a petition in disayowal of the respondent. The disavowed attorney pleaded inter alia that he had been authorized to appear by a letter signed by S. J. D., and also prescription, ratification, and insufficiency of the allegations of the petition of disayowal The petition in disavowal was dismissed. On appeal to the supreme court of Canada, the respondent moved to quash the appeal, on the ground that the matter in controversy did not amount to the sum of $2,000:—Held, that, as the judgment obtained against the appellant in March, 1874, on the appearance filed by the respondent, exceeded the amount of $2,000, the judgment on the petition for disavowal was appealable. Dawson v. Dumont, 20 S. C.

Fraudulent Conveyance — Amount of Attacking Creditor's Claim.]—E. F. F. sold to G. for 88.000 land mortgaged for 87,000, with a right of reméré for one year. A month later E. F. F. assigned, and J. F. et al., creditors of E. F. F. in $1.880, brought an action against G. to have the deed of sale of the land, which was valued at over $11,000. set aside as made in fraud of creditors. Upon appeal by J. F. et al. to the supreme court of Canada from the judgment of the court of Queen's bench for Lower Cauada affirming a judgment dismissing the action:—Held, that, as the appellants' own claim was under $2,000, and they did not represent the creditors of E. F. F., the amount in controversy was insufficient to make the case appealable. Flatt v. Ferland, 21 S. C. R. 32

Incidental Demand.]—In an action for separation de corps the plaintiff asked for delivery up of her property varied at $18,000; —Held, that this demand, being only incidental to the main cause of action, could not give the court jurisdiction. Talbot v. Guilmartin, 30 S. C. R. 482.

Interest — Adding to Demand.] — See Dufresne v. Guévremont, 26 S. C. R. 216.

Interest Barred by Prescription.]—Held, that, although the amount claimed in this case by the declaration was made to exceed $2,000 by including interest which had been barred by prescription, the appeal would lie. Apotte v. Boucher, 9 S. C. R. 460.

Judgment not Establishing Amount and Exchequer Courts Act, upon an appeal

Original Demand — Amount of—Judgment.]—By 38 Vict. c. 11, s. 17, no appeal shall be allowed from any judgment rendered in the Province of Quebec in any case wherein the sum or value in dispute does not amount to $2,000:—Held, that in determining the amount or value in dispute in cases of appeal by a defendant, the proper course is to look at the amount for which the declaration concludes, and not at the amount of the judgment. Joyce v. Hart, 1 S. C. R. 321.

L., appellant, sued R., the respondent, before the superior court at Arthabaska, in an action of damages (tiad at $10,000 for shander. The judgment of the superior court awarded to the appellant a sum of $1,000 for special and vindictive damages. R. appealed to the court of Queen's bench, and L., the present appellant, did not ask, by way of cross-appeal, for an increase of damages, but contended that the judgment for $1,000 should be confirmed. The court of Queen's bench partly concurred in the judgment of the superior court, but differed as to the amount, because L. had not proved special damages, and the amount awarded was reduced to $500, and costs of appeal were given against the present appellant. L. thereupon appealed to the supreme court:—Held, that L., the plaintiff, although respondent in the court below, and not seeking in that court by way of cross-appeal an increase of damages beyond the $1,000, was entitled to appeal, for, in determining the amount of the matter in controversy between the parties, the proper course was to look to the amount of which the declaration concluded, and not at the amount of the judgment. Where the plaintiff has acquiesced in the judgment of the court of first instance by not appealing from the same, the measure of value for determining his right of appeal under s. 29 of the Supreme and Exchequer Courts Act, is the amount awarded by the said judgment of the court of first instance, and not the amount claimed by his declaration. Amount of—Judgment—Amending
Act.]—By virtue of s.s. 4 of s. 3 of c. 25 of 54
& 55 Vict., in determining the amount in dispute in cases in appeal to the supreme court of Canada, the proper course is to look at the amount demanded by the statement of claim, even though the actual amount in controversy in the court appealed from was less than $2,000. Thus, where the plaintiff obtained a judgment in the court of original jurisdiction for less than $2,000, and did not take a crossappeal upon the defendants appealing to the intermediate court of appeal, where such judgment was reversed, he was entitled to appeal to this court. Levi v, Reed, 6 S. C. R. 482, approved and followed. Laberge v. Equitable Life Assurance Society, 24 S. C. R. 59.

— Court of Review.]—Under 54 & 55 Vict. c. 25, s. 3, s. s. 3, there is no appeal to the subreme court of Canada from a decise to the subreme court of Canada from a decise appealable as of right to the prive council. Art. 2311, R. S. Q. which provides that "whenever the right to appeal is dependent upon the amount in dispute, such amount shall be understood to be that demanded and not that recovered, if they are different," applies to appeals to the privy council. Interest cannot be added to the sum demanded to raise it to the amount necessary to give a right of appeal. Stanton v. Home Ins. Co., 2 Leg. News 314, approved. Dufresne v. Guerremont, 26 S. C. R. 216.

In appeals to the supreme court of Canada from the court of review (which, by 54 & 55 Vict. c, 25, s, 3, s, s, 3, must be appealable to the judicial committee of the privy council), the amount by which the right of appeal is to be determined is that demanded, and not that recovered, if they are different. — Defence as to Part—Effect of, —
A life insurance company deposited with the prothonotary of the superior court, under the Judicial Deposit Act of Quebec, the sum of $3,000, being the amount of a life policy issued by the company to one E. L., which by its terms had become payable to those entitled to the same, but to one-half of which sum rival claims were but in. The appellants, as collateral heirs of deceased, by a petition claimed the whole of the $3,000, and the respondent (mise-en-cause petitioner), the widow of the decased, by a counter-petition claimed, as commune en biens, one-half; and, in her answer to the appellants' petition, prayed that in so far as it claimed any greater sum than one-half, it should be dismissed. After issue joined the superior court awarded one-half to the appellants, and the other half to the respondent. From this judgment the appellants appealed.

to the court of Queen's bench, and that court confirmed the judgment of the superior court. On appeal to the supreme court of Canada:—Held, that the sum or value of the matter in controversy between the parties being only $1,500, the case was not appealable: R. S. C. c. 135, s. 29. Labelle v. Barbeau, 16 S. C. R. 390.

Act.]—See Couture v. Bouchard, 21 S. C. R. 281,

- Question Raised by Plea—Incidental Issue,]— Issues raised merely by pleas cannot have the effect of increasing the amount in controversy so as to give the supreme court of Canada jurisdiction to hear an appeal. Standard Lite Assurance Co. v. Trudem, 30 S. C. R. 308.

Pecuniary Interest of Appellant.]—Le, having proved a claim of 820 against an insolvent estate, contested a claim for which respondents had been collocated against the same estate, amounting to 82,044.66. The contestation having been decided in favour of respondents. I. appealed to the supreme court:—Held, that, to determine whether or not there was a sufficient amount in controversy to give jurisdiction to the supreme court, the pecuniary interest of the appellant only could be taken into consideration, and his interest being under $2,000 the appeal would not lie, although the consequence of the appellant's contestation might result in bringing lack to the insolvent estate a sum of over $2,000. Lachance v. Société de Prêts et de Placements de Québec, 28 S. C. R. 200.

Pecuniary Interest-Value of Partner's Share.]-An action was instituted by the respondent against the appellant for the partition and licitation of a cheese factory in order that the proceeds might be divided according to the rights of the parties, who had carried on business as partners. The judgment appealed from ordered the licitation of the factory and appurtenances. On a motion to quash the appeal, on the ground that the matter in controversy was under $2,000, the appellant in answer to the respondent's affidavit filed another affidavit shewing that the total value of the property was $3,000, but, it being admitted that the respondent (plaintiff) claimed but one-half interest in the property:—Held, that the matter in controversy, and claimed by the respondent, not amounting to the sum or value of $2,000, the appeal should be quashed with costs. Hood v. Sangster, 16 S. C. R. 723.

Proceeding for Withdrawal of Goods from Seizure—Value of Goods.]—An opposition 8n in de distraire, for the withdrawal of goods from seizure, is a "judicial proceeding," within the meaning of s. 29 of the Supreme and Exchequer Courts Act, and on an appeal to the supreme court of Canada from a judgment dismissing such opposition, the amount in controversy is the value of the goods sought to be withdrawn from seizure and not the amount demanded by the plaintiff's action, or for which the execution issued. Turcotte v. Dansereau, 26 S. C. R. 578, and McCorkill v. Knight, 3 S. C. R. 233, Cassels' Dig., 2nd ed., 694, followed. Champoux v. Lapierre, Cassels' Dig., 2nd ed., 426, and Gendron v. McDougall, ib. 429, discussed and distinguished. King v. Dupuis, 28 S. C. R. 388.

Proceeding to Vacate Judgment — Amount of Judgment, — An opposition filed under the provisions of arts, 484 and 487 of the code of civil procedure of Lower Canada for the purpose of vacating a judgment entered by default, is a "judicial proceeding," within the meaning of s. 29 of the Supreme and Exchequer Courts Act, and where the appeal depends upon the amount in controversy, there is an appeal to the supreme court of Canada if the amount of principal and interest due at the time of the filing of the opposition under the judgment sought to be annualed, is of the sum or value of $2.000. Turcotte v. Danser-cent, 26 S. C. R. 578.

Several Claims—Divided Success.]—C. brought an action against E., claiming; (1) that a certain building contract should be rescinded; (2) 81,000 damages; (3) 8545 for value of bricks in possession of E., but belonging to C. The judgment of the superior court dismissed C.'s claim for 81,000, but granted the other conclusions. On appeal to the court of Queen's bench by E., the action was dismissed in 1893. C. then appealed to the supreme court:—Held, that the building for which the contract had been entered into having been completed, there remained but the question of costs and the claim for $545 in dispute between the parties, and that amount was not sufficient to give jurisdiction to the supreme court under R. S. C. e. 135, s. 29. Coreen v. Exana, 22 S. C. R. 328.

(d) Trifling Amount.

Although the court cannot refuse to hear an appeal in a case in which only $22 is involved, yet the bringing of appeals for such trifling amounts is objectionable and should not be encouraged. McDonald v. Gilbert, 16 S. C. R. 700.

(e) Winding-up Act.

Several Contributories—Aggregate Liability.]—In an appeal by the liquidator from the decision in 21 A. R. 646, reversing that in 24 O. R. 216, dismissing an appeal by several alleged contributories from the report placing them upon the list in winding-up proceedings, it was held that an appeal will lie to the supreme court of Canada in proceedings under the Winding-up Act only where the amount involved is $2,000 or over. In this case six persons were placed on the list, one for $1,000, and the others for $1000 each, and all were released from liability by the decision of the court of appeal from which the sapeal was brought:—Held, that the fact that the aggregate amount for which the respondents were sought to be made liable exceeded $2,000 did not give the court jurisdiction; but that the position was the same as if proceedings had been taken separately against each. Stephens v. Gerth, In re Ontario Espress and Transportation Co., 24 S. C. R. 716.

3. Courts below.

(a) Matters Originating in Superior Court.

County Court—Drainage.] — The appeal to the court of appeal was from the report of the drainage referee upon a reference to him of an action, which had been begun in a county court and been removed into the high court:—Held, that the action originated in the high court. Re Township of Raieigh and Township of Harwich, Cassels' Practice of the Supreme Court of Canada, 2nd ed., p. 22, distinguished. Young v. Tucker, 18 P. R. 449.

There is no appeal to the supreme court of Canada in a case in which the action was commenced in the county court and transferred by order to the high court of justice, in which all subsequent proceedings were carried on. Young v. Tucker, 18 P. R. 449, overruled. Leave to appeal cannot be granted under 60 & 61 Vict. c. 34, s. 1 (e), in a case not appealable under the general provisions of R. S. C. c. 135. Tucker v. Young, 30 S. C. R. 180 C. S. C. R. 180 C. R. 18

Court of Revision — North-West Terri-tories,]—By an ordinance of the North-West Territories an appeal lies from the decision of the court of revision for adjudicating upon assessments for school rates, to the district court of the school district; on such appeal being brought, the clerk of the court issue a summons, making the ratepayer plaintiff and the school trustees defendants, which summons is returnable at the next sitting of the court, when the appeal is heard. The district is now merged in the supreme court of the Territories:—Held, that an appeal will not lie from the judgment of the subreme court affirming a decision of the court of revision in such case, as the proceedings do not originate in a superior court: R. S. C c. 135, s. 24. An appeal in such case will lie since the passing of 51 Vict. c. 37, s. 5, which allows an appeal from the decision of the supreme court of the Territories, although the matter may not have originated in a superior court. Angus Trustees, 16 S. C. R. 716. Angus v. Calgary School

Judge in Chambers - Petition-Appeal Railway Act. | The College of Ste. Therese having petitioned for an order for payment to them of a sum of $4,000 deposited by the appellants as security for land taken for rail-way purposes, a Judge of the superior court in chambers, after formal answer and hearing of the parties, granted the order under the Railway Act, R. S. C. c. 109, s. 8, s.-s. The railway company appealed against this order to the court of Queen's bench for Lower Canada, and that court affirmed the decision of the Judge of the superior court:— Held, that the order in question having been made by a Judge sitting in chambers, and, further, acting under the statute as persona designata, the proceedings had not originated in a superior court, within the meaning of s. 28 of the Supreme and Exchequer Courts Act, and the case was therefore not appealable. Canadian Pacific R. W. Co. v. Little Seminary of Ste. Thérèse, 16 S. C. R. 606.

—Quere, as to the jurisdiction of the court to hear an appeal from the decision of a local Judge in admiralty. Churchill v. McKay, The Quebce, 20 S. C. R. 472.

Probate Court, Nova Scotia.]—Held, on a motion to quash, that an appeal will not lie to the supreme court of Canada in cases in which the court of original jurisdiction is not a superior court, and that the court of wills and probate for the county of Lunenburg. Nova Scotia, is not a superior court within the meaning of s. 17 of the Supreme and Exchequer Courts Act. Beamish v. Kaulbach, 3 S. C. R. 704.

(b) Provincial Court of Last Resort.

Ontario—Board of County Court Judges

Assessment Appeal.]—By 52 Vict. c. 37, s. 2. amending the Supreme and Exchequer Courts Act, an appeal lies in certain cases to the supreme court of Canada from courts "of last resort created under provincial legislation to adjudicate concerning the assessment of property for provincial or municipal purposes, in cases where the person or persons presiding over such court is or are appointed by pro-vincial or municipal authority." By the Ontario Act 55 Vict. c. 48, as amended by 58 Vict. c. 47, an appeal lies from rulings of municipal courts of revision in matters of assessment to the county court Judge of the county court district where the property has been assessed. On an appeal from a decision of the county court Judges under the Ontario statutes: — Held, that if the county court Judges constituted a "court of last resort" within the meaning of 52 Vict. c. 37. s. 2. the persons presiding over such court were the persons presiding over such court were not appointed by provincial or municipal authority, and the appeal was not authorized by the said Act. Quere, is the decision of the county court Judges a "final judgment" within the meaning of 52 Vict. c. 37, s. 27, City of Toronto v. Toronto R. W. Co., 27 8, C. R. 640.

— Divisional Court of High Court.]
—See Farquharson v. Imperial Oil Co., 30
S. C. R. 188, post III.

Prince Edward Island—Supreme Court of Judicature.]—The court of last resort in Prince Edward Island from the judgment of which an appeal lies direct to the supreme court of Canada, is the supreme court of judicature in that Province. Kelly v. Sullicon, 1 S. C. R. 1.

Quebec—Superior Court in Review.]—An appeal does not lie from the court of review to the supreme court of Canada. Macdonald v. Abbott, 3 S. C. R. 278.

Superior Court in Review—Mandanus,—The appeal in cases of mandanus under s. 23 of the Supreme and Exchequer Courts Act is restricted, by the application of s. 11, to the decisions of the "highest court of final resort" in the Province; and an appeal will not lie from any court of the Province of Quebec but the Queen's beach, Danjou v. Marquis, 3 S. C. R. 251.

Superior Court in Review—Extension of Jurisdiction.]—By s. 3 of the Supreme and Exchequer Courts Amending Act of 1891, an appeal may lie to the supreme court of Canada from the superior court in review, Province of Quebec, in cases which, by the law of that Province, are appealable direct to the judicial committee of the prity council. A judgment was delivered by the superior court in review at Montreal in favour of D., the respondent, on the same day on which by H. et al.:—Held, that the apellants occur having shewn that the judgment was delivered subsequent to the passing of the amending Act, the court had no jurisdiction. Quere, whether an appeal will lie from a judgment pronounced after the passing of the amending Act in an action pending before the change of the law. Hurtubise v. Desmartcau, 19 S. C. R. 562.

In an action brought by the respondents against the appellant for $2,006, which was argued and taken en deilbéré by the superior court sitting in review on the 30th September, 1891, the day on which the Act 54 & 55 Vict. c. 25, s. 3 (D.), giving a right to appeal from the superior court in review to the supreme court of Canada, was sanctioned, the judgment was rendered a month later in favour of the respondents. On appeal to the supreme court of Canada:—Held, that the respondents' right could not be prejudiced by the delay of the court in rendering judgment, which should be treated as having been given on the 30th September, when the case was taken en dé-libéré, and therefore the case was not appealable. Hurtubise v. Desmarteau, 19 S. C. R. 502, followed. Couture v. Bouchard, 21 S. C. R. 281.

By s. 3 of 54 & 55 Vict. c. 25 (D.), an appeal is given to the supreme court of Canada from the judgment of the superior court in review, "where and so long as no appeal lies from the judgment of that court when it confirms the judgment rendered in the court appealed from, which by the law of the Province of Quebec is appealable to the judicial committee of the privy council." The judgment in this case was delivered by the superior court on the 17th November, 1891, and was affirmed unanimously by the superior court on the 17th November, 1891, and was affirmed unanimously by the law of the Province of Quebec appealable to the judicial committee. The statute 54 & 55 Vict. c. 25 was passed on the 30th September, 1891, but the blaintiff's action had been instituted on the 22nd November, 1890, and was standing for judgment before the superior court in the month of June, 1814, prior to the passing of 54 & 55 Vict. c. 25. On an appeal from the judgment of the superior court in review to the supreme court of Canada, the respondent moved to quash the appeal for want of jurisdiction:—Held, that the right of appeal given by 54 & 55 Vict. c. 25 does not extend to cases standing for judgment in the superior court prior to the passing of the said Act. Couture v. Bouchard, 21 S. C. R. 281. followed. Williams v. Irvine, 22 S. C. R. 108.

54 & 55 Viet, c. 25 (D.) does not authorize an appeal to the supreme court of Canada from a decision of the court of review in a case where the judement of the superior court is reversed and there is an anneal to the court of Queen's hench. Danjou v. Marquis, 3 S. C. R. 251, and Macdonald v. Abbott, 3 S. C. R. 278, followed. Barrington v. City of Montreal, 25 S. C. R. 202.

Where the superior court, sitting in review, has varied a judgment, on appeal from the superior court, by increasing the amount of damages, the judgment rendered in the court of first instance is not thereby confirmed so as to give an appeal direct from the judgment of the court of review to the supreme court of Canada under the provisions of s.-s. 3 of s. 3, c. 25 of 54 & 55 Vict. (D.), amending the Supreme and Exchequer Courts Act. Simpson v. Palliser, 29 S. C. R. 6.

Certain ratepayers of the city of Montreal having objections to one of the commissioners named in proceedings taken for the expropriation of land required for the improvement of a public street, in which they were interested, presented a nettion to the superior court demanding his recusation. The petition was dismissed; on an appeal to the court of review, the judgment dismissing the petition was affirmed; and a further appeal was then taken to the supreme court of Canada. On motion to quash the appeal for want of jurisdiction:—Held, that no appeal de plano would lie from the judgment of the court of review to Her Majesty's privy council, and consequently there was no appeal therefrom to the supreme court of Canada under the provisions of 54 & 55 Vict. e. 25, s. 3, amending the Supreme and Exchequer Courts Act. Ethier v. Euring, 20 S. C. R. 446.

See Citu of Ste. Cunégonde de Montreal v. Gougeon, 25 S. C. R. 78; Dufresne v. Guévremont, 26 S. C. R. 216; Citizens Light and Power Co. v. Parent, 27 S. C. R. 316.

4. Criminal Proceedings.

Certiorari—Merchants Shipping Act.]—
An appeal lies to the supreme court of Canada from the judgment of a provincial court making absolute a rule nisi for a certiorari to bring up proceedings before a police magistrate under the Merchants Shipping Act with a view to having the judgment thereon quashed. The Queen v. Sailing Ship "Troop" Co., 29 S. C. R. 662.

Contempt of Court.]—Contempt of court is a criminal proceeding, and unless it comes within s. 68 of the Supreme Court Act, an appeal does not lie to this court from a judgment in proceedings therefor. O'Shea v. O'Shea, 15 P. D. 59, followed. In re O'Brien, 16 S. C. R. 197, referred to. Ellis v. The Queen, 22 S. C. R. 7.

Crown Case Reserved — Unanimous Judgment. — In Michaelmas Term, 1877, certain questions of law reserved, which arose on the trial of the appellants, were argued before the court of Queen's bench for Ontario, composed of the Chief Justice and one puisue Judge, and on the 4th February, 1878, the said court, composed of the same Judges, delivered judgment, affirming the conviction of the appellants for manslaughter. The court of Queen's bench for Ontario, when full, is composed of a Chief Justice and two puisme Judges. The appellants thereupon appealed to the supreme court under 38 Vist. c. 11, s. sp:—Held, that the affirmance of the conviction, although by only two Judges, was unanimous, and therefore no appeal lay. Amer v. The Queen, 2 S. C. R. 592.

Motion for Reserved Case.]—Where the court appealed from has affirmed the refusal to reserve a case moved for at a criminal trial on two grounds, and is unanimous as to one of such grounds, but not as to the other, the supreme court on appeal can only take into consideration the ground of motion in which there was dissent. MeIntosh v. The Queen, 23 S. C. R. 180.

New Tial—"Opinion."]—An appeal to the supreme court of Canada does not lie in cases where a new trial has been granted by the court of appeal under the provisions of the criminal code, 1892, ss. 742 to 750, inclusive. The word "opinion," as used in s.-s. 2 of s. 742 of the criminal code, 1892, must be construed as meaning a "decision" or "judgment" of the court of appeal in criminal cases. Viau v. The Queen, 29 S. C. R. 90.

Summary Convictions—Habeas Corpus—Certiorari, 1—The only appellate power conferred on the supreme court in criminal cases of the Supreme and Exchaquer Courts Act, and its Supreme Court Intention of the legislature, while limiting peals in criminal cases of the highest importance, to impose on the court the duty of revisal in matters of fact of all the summary convictions before police or other magistrates throughout the Dominion. Section 34 of the Supreme Court Amendment Act, 1876, does not in any case authorize the issue of a writ of certiorari to accommany a writ of habeas corpus granted by a Judge of the supreme court in chambers; and, as the proceedings before the court on habeas corpus arising out of a criminal charge are only by way of appeal from the decision of the Judge in chambers, the said section does not authorize the court to issue a writ of certiorari in such proceedings; to do so would be to assume appellate jurisdiction over the inferior court. Preliminary Objections.]—See Charlevoix Election, Brossard v. Langevin, 2 S. C. R. 319.

The supreme court refused to entertain an appeal from the decision of a Judge in chambers granting a motion to have preliminary objections to an election petition struck out for not being filed in time. Such decision was not one on preliminary objections within s. 50 of the Controverted Elections Act, and, if it were, no judgment on the motion could put an end to the petition. West Assimiboia Election Case, 27 S. C. R. 215.

Raling as to Mode of Trial.]—The ruling of the court below on an objection in proceedings on an election petition, viz., that the trial Judges could not proceed with the petition in this case, because the two petitions filed had not been bracketed by the prothonotary, as directed by s. 30 of c. 9, R. S. C., is not an appealable judgment or decision: R. S. C. c. 9, s. 50. Vaudreuil Election Case, 22 S. C. R. 1.

See North Ontario Election (Dom.), Wheeler v. Gibbs, 3 S. C. R. 374, post VI.

7. Final Judgments.

Admission of Attorney.]—A judgment of the supreme court of Nova Scotia refusing to admit the appellant as an attorney is not a final judgment within the meaning of the Supreme Court Act. In re Cahan, 21 S. C. R. 100.

Contempt of Court—Attachment for—Rule Absolute—Practice.]—By a rule nist of the surreme court of New Brunswick, E. was called upon to shew cause why an attachment should not issue against him, or he be committed for contempt of court, in publishing certain articles in a newspaper. On the return of the rule it was made absolute, and a writ of attachment was issued commanding the sheriff to have the body of E. before the court on a day named. By the practice in such cases in the said court it appeared that the attachment was issued merely in order to bring the party into court, where he might be ordered to answer interrogatories and by his answers purge, if he could, his contempt. If he were unable to do this, the court would pronounce sentence. E. appealed from the judgment making he rule absolute. On motion to quash the appeal:—Held, that the judgment appealed from was not a final judgment from which an appeal would lie under s. 24 (a) of the Supreme and Exchequer Courts Act, R. S. C. c. 135. Ellis v. Baird, 16 S. C. R. 147.

— Order Finding—Judicial Proceeding— Fine—Costs.]—The decision of a provincial court in a case of constructive contempt is not a matter of discretion in which an appeal is prohibited by s. 27 of the Supreme and Exchequer Courts Act. The supreme court has jurisdiction to entertain such an appeal from the judgment of the court of appeal of the Vor. III, D—214—65 Province, not only under s. 24, s.s. (a), of the Supreme and Exchequer Courts Act as a final judgment in an action or suit, but also under s.s.s. (1) of s. 26 of the same Act, as a final judgment "in a matter or other judicial proceeding." within the meaning of said s. 26. The adjudication that the appellant, a solicitor and officer of the court, moved against in that quality, has been guilty of a contempt, is by itself an appendable judgment, although no sentence for the contempt, has been pronounced by the court. When the party in contempt has been ordered to pay the costs of the application to commit, the court in effect inflicts a fine for the concempt. In re O'Brien, Regina ex rel. Felitz v. Howland, 16 S. C. R. 197.

Sentence.]—In proceedings for contempt of court by attachment, until sentence is pronounced there is no "final judgment" from which an appeal can be brought. Ellis v. The Queen, 22 S. C. R. 7.

Costs—Taxation—Order for.]—The court has no jurisdiction to entertain an appeal from a decision of the court of appeal upon appeal from an order for taxation of a solicitor's bill of costs, at the instance of a third party, such decision not being a final judgment within the meaning of the Supreme Court Act. McGugan v. McGugan, 21 S. C. R. 267.

by a firm of solicitors to recover costs from clients, a reference was directed to a taxing officer, and, upon appeal from his report to the high court, a set-off claimed by one of the defendants of a sum paid by him to one of the plaintiffs for special services, was disallowed. This decision was affirmed by the court of appeal:—Semble, that the decision of the court of appeal was not a final judgment from which an appeal would lie to the supreme court of Canada. McDougalt v. Cameron, Bickford v. Cameron, 21 S. C. R. 379.

Demurrer—Order Setting aside as Frivolous.]—An order setting aside a demurrer as frivolous and irregular under the Nova Scotia Practice Act (R. S. N. S., 4th ser., c. 94), is an order on a matter of practice, and not a final judgment appealable under s. 11 of the Surreme and Exchequer Courts Act. Kandick v, Morrison, 2 S. C. R. 12.

Demurrer to Part of Action—Judicial Proceeding.]—In an action instituted in the superior court of the Province of Quebec by the appellant against M. A. C. and nine other defendants, severally demurred to the appellant's action. except as regarded two lots of land, in which they acknowled the appellant had an undivided share. The superior court sustained the demurrer, and, on appeal, the court of Queen's bench for Lower Canada affirmed the judgment. The appellant hereupon appealed to the supreme court, and respondents moved to quash the appeal, on the ground that the supreme court had no jurisdiction—Held, that, as the judgment of the court of Queen's bench (the highest court of last resort having jurisdiction in the Province) finally determined and put an end to the appeal, which was a judicial proceeding within the meaning of s. 9 of the Supreme Court Amendment Act of 1879, such judgment was one from which an appeal would lie to the supreme Act of 1879, such judgment was one from which an appeal would lie to the supreme court of Canada; and, though an appeal cannot be taken from a court of first instance directly to the supreme court until there is a final judgment, yet, whenever a provincial court of appeal has jurisdiction, this court can entertain an appeal from its judgment finally disposing of the appeal, the case being in other respects a proper subject of appeal. Checulier v. Cwillier, 4 S. C. R. 695.

Held, that, although the judgment appealed from in this case was a judgment on a demurrer to part of the action only, it was a final judgment in a judicial proceeding, within the meaning of s. 3 of the Supreme Court Amendment Act of 1879. Chevalier v. Cuvilier, 4 S. C. R. 605, followed. Shields v. Peak, 8 S. C. R, 579.

Demurrer to Plea—Allowance of—Judgment for befault of Plea.]—An action was brought by respondent as indorsee of a promisory note made by appellants in favour of one J. A., and by him indorsed to respondent. The appellants pleaded that the amount of the note had been attached in their hands by one of A.'s judgment creditors and paid under the garnishee clauses of the Common Law Procedure Act of P. E. 1, transcripts of sections 60 to 67, inclusive, of the English C. L. P. Act, 1854. To this plear respondent demurred on the ground that the debt was not one which could properly be attached, and on the 5th February, 1883, the supreme court gave judgment in favour of the respondent on the demurrer. No rule for judgment on the demurrer was taken out by the respondent. On the 19th March following, an order was butained to ascertain amount of debt and damages for which final judgment was to be entrypondent on the 2nd May following. The appellants then appealed to the supreme court of Canada. On motion to quash for want of the contract of the proposed on the final judgment rendered on the demurrer on the 5th February, 1883, and within thirty days from that date: — Held, that the judgment entered on the 2nd May, 1883, was the "final judgment" in the case, and from it an appeal would lie to the supreme court. Roblee v. Rankin, 11 S. C. R. 137.

Demurrer to Replication — Allowance of—Effect on Action.—The judgment of a provincial court allowing a demurrer to the plaintiff's replication to one of several pleas by the defendants, which does not operate to put an end to the whole or any part of the action or defence, is not a final judgment from which an appeal will lie to the supreme court of Canada. Shaw v. Canadian Pacific R. W. Co., 16 S. C. R. 703.

Discharge from Arrest—Petition for— Judicial Proceeding.]—A writ of capins having been issued against McK. under the provisions of art. 798. C. C. P., he petitioned to be discharged under art. 819. C. C. P., and issue having been joined on the pleadings under art. 820. C. C. P., the petition was dismissed by the superior court. From that judgment McK. appealed to the court of Queen's bench for Lower Canada, and that court maintained the judgment of the superior court. Thereupon McK. appealed to the supreme court of Canada. On motion to quash for want of jurisdiction :—Held, that the judgment was a final judgment in a judicial proceeding within the meaning of s. 28, c. 135, R. S. C., and therefore appealable. Stanton v. Canada Atlantic R. W. Co., Cassels' Dig, 249, reviewed. MacKinnon v. Keroack, 15 S. C. R. 111.

Dismissal of Petition for Recusation of Commissioner.]—The judgment of the court of review affirming a judgment of the superior court dismissing a petition for the recusation of a commissioner for the expropriation of land, is not a final judgment within the meaning of s. 29 of the Supreme and Exchequer Courts Act. Ethicr v. Ewing, 29 S. C. R. 449.

Dismissal of Plea of Prescription.]— A judgment affirming dismissal of a plea of prescription when other pleas remain on the record is not a final judgment from which an appeal lies to the supreme court of Canada. Hamel v. Hamel. 26 S. C. R. 17, approved and followed. Griffith v. Harveood, 30 S. C. R. 315.

Judgment Establishing Cross-demand—Reference as to Damages.]—St. L. claimed of S. $2.126.75, balance due on a building contract. S. denied the claim, and, by incidental demand, claimed $6,368 for damages resulting from defective work. ages resulting from defective work. The su-perior court, on 27th March, 1877, gave judg-ment in favour of St. L. for the whole amount of his claim, and dismissing S.'s incidental demand. This judgment was reversed by the court of review, on the 29th December, 1877. St. L. appealed to the court of Queen's bench, and on the 24th November, 1880, that court held that St. L. was entitled to the balance claimed by him, from which should be deducted the cost of rebuilding the defectively constructed work, and, in order to ascertain such cost, the case was remitted to the superior court. Experts were a pointed to ascertain the damages, and, on their report, the superior court, on the 18th June, 1881, held that it was bound by the judgment of the court of Queen's bench, and, deducting the amount awarded by the experts from the balance claimed by St. L., gave judgment for the difference. The judgment was affirmed by the court of Queen's bench, on the 19th January, 1882 :- Held, on appeal, that the judgment of the court of Queen's bench of the 24th Nov-ember, 1880, was a final judgment on the merits, and that the superior court, when the case was remitted to it, rightly held that it was bound by that judgment, and that St. L. was entitled to the balance thereby found due to him. Shaw v. St. Louis, S S. C. R. 385.

New Trial.]—Where a new trial has been ordered upon the ground that the answer given by the jury to one of the questions is insufficient to enable the court to dispose of the interest of the parties on the findings of the jury as a whole, no appeal will lie from such order, which is not a final judgment, and cannot be held to come within the exceptions provided for by the Supreme and Exchequer Courts Act in relation to appeals in cases of new trials. See Supreme and Exchequer Courts Act, s. 24 (g., 30, and 61, Barrington, V. Scottish Union and National Insurance Co., 18 S. C. R. 615.

On appeal to the court of Queen's bench, the judgment of the superior court was reversed, and the court set aside the assignment of facts to the jury and all subsequent proceedings, and, suo motu, ordered a venire de novo, on the ground that the assignment of facts was defective and insufficient, and the answers of the jury were insufficient and contradictory:—Held, that the order of the court of Queen's bench was not a final judgment, and did not come within the exceptions allowing an appeal in cases of new trials; and therefore the appeal would not lie. In an action brought to recover damages for the loss of certain glass delivered to the defendants for carriage, the Judge left to the jury the question of negligence only, reserving any other questions to be decided subsequently by himself. On the question submitted the jury disagreed. The defendants then moved a divisional court for judgment, but pending such motion the plaintiffs applied for and obtained an order of the court allowing them to amend the statement of claim by charging other grounds of negligence. fendants submitted to such order and pleaded to such amendments, and new and material issues were thereby raised for determination. The action as so amended was entered for The action as so amended was entered for trial, but had not been tried when the divi-sional court pronounced judgment on the mo-tion, dismissing the plaintiffs' action. On appeal to the court of appeal from the judgment of the divisional court, it was reversed and a new trial ordered. On appeal to the supreme court :- Held, that the judgment of the court of appeal ordering a new trial in this case was not a final judgment, nor did it come within any of the provisions of the Supreme Court Act authorizing an appeal from judgments not final. Canadian Pacific R. W. Co. v. Cobban Mfg. Co., 22 S. C. R. 132.

Order Quashing Writ of Appeal.]—
A judgment of the court of Queen's bench for Lower Canada quashing a writ of appeal, on the ground that such writ had been issued contrary to the provisions of art. 1116, C. C. P., is not "a final judgment," within the meaning of s. 28 of the Supreme and Exchequer Courts Act. Shaw v. St. Louis, 8 S. C. R. 385, distinguished. Ontario and Quebec R. W. Co. v. Marcheterre, 17 S. C. R. 141

Judgment on. 1—No appeal lies to the supreme court from the judgment of the court of Queen's bench on a petition for leave to intervene in a cause, the proceedings being interlocutory only. Hamel v. Hamel, 26 S. C. R. 17.

Petition to Quash Seizure.]—A judgment of the court of Queen's bench for Lower Canada reversing a judgment of the superior court (which quashed on petition a seizure before judgment) and ordering that the hearing of the petition contesting the seizure should be proceeded with in the superior court at the same time as the hearing of the main action, is not a final judgment appealable to the supreme court: R. S. C. c. 135, ss. 24-28. Molson v. Barnard, 18 S. C. R. 622.

Setting aside Judgment — Petition — Dismissal.]— Judgment was recovered in a suit brought to realize mechanics' liens, and C., the owner of the land on which the mechanics' work was done, applied by petition in the high court to have such judgment set aside as a cloud upon his title. On this petition an order was made allowing C. to come in and defend the action for lien, on terms, which not being compiled with, the petition was dismissed, and the judgment dismissing it was affirmed by a divisional court and the court of appeal:—Held, that the judgment was not a final judgment within the meaning of s. 24 (a) of the Supreme and Exchequer Courts Act, or, if it was, it was a matter in the judicial discretion of the court, from which by s. 27 no appeal lies to this court. Virtue v. Hayes, In re Clarke, 16 S. C. R. 721.

Setting aside Judgment by Default,]
—Quare, whether the order on appeal from an order in chambers granting or refusing an application by the defendant to set aside a judgment by default and let him in to defend, is a "final judgment" within the meaning of s. 24 (a) of the Act. O'Donohoe v. Bourne, 27 S. C. R. 654.

Stay of Proceedings.]—The defendants to an action in the high court of justice for Ontario were made bankrupt in England, and the plaintiffs filed a claim with the assignee in bankrupty. The high court of justice in England made an order restraining the plaintiffs from proceeding with their action, and a like order was made by a high court Judge in Ontario, perpetually restraining the plaintiffs from proceeding, but reserving liberty to apply. This latter order was affirmed by a divisional court and the court of appeal, and the plaintiffs sought an appeal to the supreme court of Canada:—Held, that the judgment from which the appeal was sought was not a final judgment within the meaning of the Supreme Court Act. Maritime Bank of the Dominion of Canada v. Stewart, 20 S. C. R.

Summary Judgment.]—An appeal does not lie from a decision of the court of Queen's bench (Man.) affirming the order of a Judge, made on the return of a summons to shew cause, allowing judgment to be entered by the plaintiffs on a specially indorsed writ, which is not a "final judgment" within the meaning of the Supreme Court Act. Rural Municipality of Morris v. London and Canadian L. and A. Co., 19 S. C. R. 434.

Trial by Jury—Order for.]—An order of the court of Queen's bench for Lower Canada affirming an order of the superior court by which an application of a party to have the issues tried by a jury is refused, is an interlocutory order, and no appeal lies therefrom to the supreme court of Canada under R. S. C. c. 135, and amending Acts. Demers v. Bank of Montreal, 27 S. C. R. 197.

Vendor and Purchaser — Petition — Reference—Ruling as to Evidence.]—Where a master, on a reference under the Vendor and Purchaser Act to settle the title under a written agreement for a lease, ruled that evidence might be given to shew what covenants the lease should contain, an appeal does not lie to the supreme court from the judgment affirming such ruling, it not being a final judgment, and the case not coming within the provisions of s. 24 (e) of the Supreme and Exchequer Courts Act relating to proceedings in equity. Canadian Pacific R. W. Co. v. City of Toronto, 30 S. C. R. 337.

Writ of Summons — Setting aside.] — Application was made to a Judge to set aside a writ of summons served out of the jurisdiction of the court, on the grounds that the cause of action arose in England and the defendant was not subject to the process of the court, and, if the court had jurisdiction, that the writ was not in proper form. The Judge refused the application, and his decision was affirmed by the full court:—Held, that the decision of the full court was not a final judgment in an action, suit, matter, or other judicial proceeding, within the meaning of the Supreme Court Act, and no appeal would lie from such decision to the supreme court of Canada. Martin v. Moore, 18 S. C. R. 634.

See Seath v. Hagar, 18 S. C. R. 715; Langevin v. Commissaries d'Ecole pour la Municipalité de St. Marc, 18 S. C. R. 599; City of Toronto v. Toronto R. W. Co., 27 S. C. R. 440.

8. Future Rights.

Annuity.]—B. R. claimed, under the will of C. S. K. and an Act of the legislature of the Province of Quebec, 54 Vict. c. 96, from A. L., testamentary executrix of the estate, the sum of $200, being for an instalment of the monthly allowance which A. L. was authorized to pay to each of the testator's daughters out of the revenues of his estate. The action was dismissed by the court of Queen's bench for Lower Canada; and on an appeal to the supreme court:—Held, that the amount in controversy being only $200, and there being no "future rights" of B. R, which might be bound within the meaning of those words in s. 29 (b) of the Supreme and Exchequer Courts Act, the case was not appealable. "Annual rents" in s.-s. (b) means "ground rents" (rentes foncières) and not an annuity or any other like charges or obligations, Rodier v. Lapierre, 21 S. C. R. 69

Marriage Contract.)—By R. S. C. c. 135, s. 29 (b.), amended by 56 Vict. c. 29 (D.), an appeal will lie to the supreme court of Canada from the judgments of the courts of highest resort in the Province of Quebec, in cases where the amount in controversy is less than $2.000, if the matter relates to any title to lands or tenements, annual rents, and other matters or things where the rights in future might be bound: — Held, that the words "other matters or things" mean rights of property analogous to title to lands, &c., which are specifically mentioned, and not personal rights; that "title" means a vested right or title already acquired, though the enjoyment may be postponed; and that the right of a married woman to an annuity provided by her marriage contract in case she should become a widow, is not a right in an action by her hashand against her for séparation de corps, in which, if judgment went against her, the right to the annuity would be forfeited. O'Dell v. Gregory, 24 S. C. R. 661.

— Personal Alimentary Allowance.]—
Actions or proceedings respecting disputes as to mere personal alimentary pensions or allowances do not constitute controversies wherein rights in future may be bound within the meaning of s. 29 (b) of the Supreme and Exchequer Courts Act, as amended, which allows appeals to the supreme court of Canada from judgments rendered in the Province of Quebec in cases where the controversy relates to "annual rents or other matters or things where rights in future might be bound." Macfarlane v. Leclaire, 15 Moo. P. C. 181, distinguished. Sauvageau v. Gautier, L. K. 5. P. C. 494, followed. Banque du Peuple v. Trottier, 28 s. C. R. 422.

Calls.]—A joint stock company sued the defendant B. for $1,000, being a call of ten per cent. on 100 shares of $100 each, alleged to have been subscribed by B. in the capital stock of the company, and prayed that the defendant be condemned to pay the said sum of $1,000 with costs. The defendant denied any liability, and prayed for the dismissal of the action. During the pendency of the suit, the company's business was ordered to be wound up under the Winding-up Act, 45 Vict, c. 23 (D.), and the liquidator was authorized to continue the suit. The superior court condemned the defendant to pay the amount claimed, but on appeal to the supreme court of Canada:—Held, that the appeal would not lie, the amount in controversy being under $2,000, and there being no future rights as specified in s.s. (b) of s. 29, c. 135, R. S. C. which might be bound by the judgment. Gilbert v. Gilman, 16 S. C. R. 189, followed. Dominion Salvage and Wrecking Co. v. Broun. 20 S. C. R. 203.

Charge on Land—Assessment for Drain.]
—On an appeal from a judgment of the court of Queen's bench for Lower Canada, in an action brought to recover $301.90, the amount of a special assessment for a drain along the property of the defendants, the respondent moved to quash for want of jurisdiction, on the ground that the matter in controversy was under $2.000, and did not come within any of the exceptions in s. 29 of the Supreme and Exchequer Courts Act:—Held, that the case

— Local Improvements.]—By a procès verbal by the municipal council of Ste. Anne du Bout de L'Isle, a portion of the road fronting the land of one R. was ordered to be improved by raising and widening it. Upon R.'s refusal to do the work, the council had it performed, paid $200 for it, and subsequently sued R. for the $200. The court of Queen's bench affirmed a judgment in favour of the municipal council for that amount. On appeal to the supreme court: — Held, that, although the amount in controversy did not amount to $2.000, yet, as it related to a charge on the appellant's land whereby his rights in future might be bound, the case was appealable: R. S. C. c. 135, s. 29. Reburn v. Paroisse de Ste, Anne du Bout de L'Isle, 15 S. C. R. 92.

— Obligation to Repair Highway, 1—
In an action brought by the respondent corporation for the recovery of the sum of $202.14 paid out by it for macadam work on a piece of road fronting the appellants' lands, the work of macadamizing the road and keeping it in repair being imposed by a by-law of the municipal council of the respondents, the appellants pleaded the nullity of the by-law. On appeal to the supreme court of Canada from the judgment of the court of Queen's bench for Lower Canada dismissing the appellants's pleas:—Held, that the appellants's obligation to keep the road in repair under the by-law not being "future rights" within the meaning of s. 29 (b), the case was not appealable. County of Vercheres v. Village of Varennes, 19 S. C. R. 305, followed, and Reburn v. Paroisee de Ste. Anne du Bout de L'Isle, 15 S. C. R. 92, distinguished. Dubots v. Corporation of Ste. Rose, 21 S. C. R. 65.

Expropriation of Land-Assessments-Local Improvements.]-A by-law was passed for the widening of a portion of a street up to a certain homologated line, and for the necessary expropriations therefor. Assessments for the expropriations for certain years having been made whereby proprietors of a part of the street were relieved from contributing any proportion to the cost, thereby increasing the burden of assessment on the properties actually assessed, the owners of these properties brought an action to set aside the assessments. The court of Queen's bench af-firmed a judgment dismissing the action. On an application for leave to appeal:— Held, that, as the effect of the judgment sought to be appealed from would be to increase the burden of assessment not only for the expropriations then made, but also for expropriations which would have to be made in the future, the judgment was one from which an appeal would lie, the matter in conwhich an appeal would lie, the matter in controversy coming within the meaning of the words "and other matters or things where the words in s.-s. (b) of s. 29, Supreme and Exchequer Courts Act, as amended by 56 Vict. c. 29, s. 1. Stevenson v. City of Montreal, 27 S. C. R. 187.

Fee of Office — School-mistress.] — A school-mistress by her action claimed $1,243 as fees due to her in virtue of s. 68, c. 15, C.

S. L. C., which was collected by the school commissioners of the city of Three Rivers while she was employed by them. At the time of the action the plainiff had ceased to be in their employ. The court of Queen's bench for Lower Canada, affirming the judgment of the superior court, dismissed the action. On a motion to the supreme court of Canada to allow a bond in appeal, the same having been refused by a Judge of the court below, the registrar of the supreme court, and a Judge in chambers, on the ground that the case was not appealable:—Held, that the matter in controversy did not relate to any office or fee of office within the meaning of s. 29 (b) of the Supreme and Exchequer Courts Act, R. S. C. c. 135. (2) Even assuming it did, no rights in future would be bound, and the amount in dispute being less than $2,000, the case was not appealable. (3) The words "where the rights in future might be bound" in s.-s. (b) of s. 29 govern all the preceding words "any fee of office, &c." Charnon v. Normand, 16 S. C. R. 180, Bank of Toronto v. Curé. &c., de Ste. Vierge, 12 S. C. R. 25, referred to. Larivière v. Three Rivers School Commissioners, 23 S. C. R. 723.

Guardian of Infants.]—The supreme court of Canada has no jurisdiction to entertain an appeal from a judgment pronounced in a controversy in respect to the cancellation of the appointment of a tutrix to minor children. Nod v. Chevrelia, 30 S. C. R. 327.

Money Payment-Future Instalments-Agreement—Condition.]—In an action for $1,333.36, a balance of one of several money payments of $2,000 each, one whereof the defendants agreed to pay to the plaintiff every year so long as certain security given by the plaintiff for the defendants remained in the hands of the government, the defendants contended that the security had been released by the action of the government, and they were therefore not liable to pay the amount sued for, or any further instalments. The court of Queen's bench held that the security had not been released, and gave judgment for the amount claimed. The defendants applied to one of the Judges of that court and obtained leave to appeal, on the ground that if the judgment was well founded then future rights would be bound, and they had become liable for two other instalments of $2,000 each for which actions were pending:-Held, that the appeal would not lie, because, even if the future rights of the defendants were bound by the judgment, such future rights had no relation to any of the matters or things enumerated in s. s. (b) of s. 29 of the Supreme and Exchequer Courts Act. The words "where the rights in future might be bound" in this sub-section are governed and qualified by the preceding words, and to make a case appealable when the amount in controversy is less than $2,000, not only must future rights be bound by the judgment, but the future rights so bound must relate to some one of the matters or things specified in the sub-section in question, viz.: to a fee of office, duty, rent, revenue, or sum of money payable to Her Majesty, or to some title to lands or tenements, or to annual rents out of lands or tenements, or to some like matters and things. Gilbert v. Gilman, 16 S. C. R. 189.

Rodier v. Lapierre, 21 S. C. R. 69, and O'Dell v. Maclaren, 27 S. C. R. 319.

Maintenance of Bastard.]—In an action en declaration de paternité the plaintiff claimed an allowance for the support of the child until he should be able to support himself:—Held, that the nature of the action exception as to "future rights" mentioned in

s. 29 of the Supreme and Exchequer Courts
Act. O'Dell v. Gregory, 24 S. C. R. 661,

Opposition to Writ of Possession— Right of Way.]—An opposition to a writ of possession issued in execution of a judgment allowing a right of way over the opposant's land does not raise a question of title to land nor bind future rights, and in such a case the supreme court of Canada has no jurisdiction to entertain an appeal. O'Dell v. Gregory, 24 S. C. R. 661, followed. Chamberland v. Fortier, 23 S. C. R. 371, and McGoev v. Leamy, 27 S. C. R. 193, distinguished. Penalties for Bribery—Recovery of— Statutory Effect—Disqualification for Crown Office.]—To give the supreme court jurisdiction to hear an appeal in a case from the Province of Quebec by virtue of s, 29 (b) of the Supreme and Exchequer Courts Act (R. S. C. c. 135), the matter relating to a fee of office where the rights in future might be bound, must be the matter really in controversy in the suit in which the appeal is sought, and and not something merely collateral thereto. This clause will not give jurisdiction in a case in which the action was brought to recover penalties for bribery under the Quebec Election Act (R. S. Q. art. 429), even assuming that the effect of the judgment may be to disqualify the appellant from holding office under the Crown for seven years. Chagnon v. Normand, 16 S. C. R. 661.

Separation of Husband and Wife.]—
In an action by a wife for séparation de corps for ill treatment the declaration concluded by demanding that the husband be condemned to deliver up to the wife her property valued at $18,000. The judgment in the action decreed separation and ordered an account as to property:—Held, that no appeal would lie to the supreme court from the decree for separation.

Tablot v. Guilmartin, 30 S. C. R. 482.

Sheriff's Sale — Vacating.]—An appeal will lie to the supreme court under s, 29 (b) of the Supreme Court Act from the judgment in an action to vacate the sheriff's sale of an immovable. Dufresne v, Dixon, 16 S. C. R. 596, followed. Lefeuntun v, Véronneau, 22 S. C. R. 203.

Title to Land, —In an action brought before the superior court with soizure in recaption under arts, 857 and 887, C. C. P. and art, 1624, C. C. the defendant pleaded that he had held the property (valued at over 82,000) since the expiration of his lease, under some oral agreement of sale. The judgment appealed from, reversing the judgment of the court of review, held that the action ought to have been instituted in the circuit court. On appeal to the supreme court:—Held, that, as the case was originally instituted in the superior court, and upon the face of the proceedings the right to the possession and property of an immovable was involved, an appeal lay: Supreme and Exchequer Courts Act, s. 29 (b) and ss. 28 and 24. Easement.]—By a judgment of the court of Queen's bench for Lower Canada the defendants in the action were condemned to build and complete certain works and drains within a certain delay, in a lane separating the defendant's and plaintiff's properties on the west side of Peel street, Montreal, to prevent water from entering the plaintiff's house, which was on the slope below. The question of damages was reserved. On appeal to the supreme court of Canada:—Held, that the case was not appealable, there being no controversy as to $2,000 or over, and no title to lands or future rights in question, within the meaning of s. 29 (b) of the Supreme Court Act. The words "title to lands" in this subsection are only applicable to a case where a title to the property or a right to the title may be in question. The fact that a question of the right of servitude arises would not give jurisdiction. Wheeler v. Black, 14 S. C. R. 242, referred to. Gilbert v. Gilman, 16 S. C. R. 180, approved. Wineberg v. and thereby named a provincial surveyor as their referee to run the line. The line thus run being disputed, M. brought an action to have this line declared the crue boundary, and to revendicate a disputed strip of land lying upon his side of the line so run by the sur-cover: — Held, that under R. S. C. c. 135, s. 29 (b), as amended by 56 Vict. c. 29, s. 1, s. 29 (b), as amended by 56 Vict. c. 29, s. 1, an appeal would lie to the supreme court of Canada, first, on the ground that the question involved was one relating to a title to lands, and secondly, on the ground that it involved matters or things where rights in future might be bound. Toll-Bridge-Statutory Privilege-Interference with.]-By 38 Vict. c. 97 the plaintiffs were authorized to build and maintain a toll bridge on the river L'Assomption at a place called "Portage," and it the said bridge should by accident or otherwise be destroyed, become unsafe, or impassable, the said plaintiffs were bound to rebuild the said bridge within fifteen months next following the giving way of said bridge, under penalty of forfeiture of the advantages to them by this Act granted; and during any time that the said bridge should be unsafe or impassable, they were bound to maintain a ferry across the said river, for which they might recover the tolls. The bridge was accidentally carried away by ice, but rebuilt and opened for traffic within fifteen months. During the reconstruction, although plaintiffs maintained a ferry across the river, the defendant built a temporary bridge within the limits of the plaintiffs' franchise and allowed it to be used by persons crossing the river. The plaintiffs claimed $1,000 damages, and prayed that defendant be condemned to demolish the temporary bridge: -Held, (1) that, as the rights in future might be bound, the case was appealable under R. S. C. c. 135, s. 29 (b). (2) That the exclusive statutory privilege extended to the ferry, and while maintained by the plaintiffs the defend-ant had no right to build the temporary bridge, but, as the bridge had since been demolished, the court would merely award nominal damages and costs. Galarneau v. Guilbault, 16 S. C. R. 579.

Valuation Roll - Validity-Contestation -Homologation.]-Held, that a judgment in an action by a ratepayer contesting the validity of an homologated valuation roll is not a judgment appealable to the supreme court of Canada under s. 24 (g), and does not relate Canada under 1.24 (g), and does not reach to future rights within the meaning of s. 29 (b), of the Supreme and Exchequer Courts Act. Held, also, that as the valuation roll sought to be set aside in this case had been duly homologated and not appealed against within the delay provided in art. 1061, M. C the only matter in dispute between the parties the only matter in dispute between the parties was a mere question of costs, and therefore the court would not entertain the appeal. Moir v. 9. Municipal By-laws.

Action for Taxes-Plea of Invalidity of By-law.]—See City of Sherbrooke v. McMan-amy, 18 S. C. R. 594.

Action to Set aside. |- The municipality of the county of Verchères passed a by-law or procès-verbai defining who were to be liable for the rebuilding and maintenance of a certain bridge. The municipality of Varennes by their action prayed to have the by-law or proces-verbal in question set aside on the ground of certain irregularities. The action was maintained and the by-law set aside. appeal to the supreme court of Canada:appear to the supreme court of Canada;—
Held, that the case was not appealable and did not come within s. 29 or s. 24 (g) of the Supreme and Exchequer Courts Act, no future rights within the meaning of the former sec-tion being in question, and the appeal not being from a rule or order of a court quashing or refusing to quash a by-law of a municipal corporation. County of Verchères v. Villago of Varennes, 19 S. C. R. 365.

In virtue of a by-law passed at a meeting of the corporation of the city of Quebec, in the absence of the mayor, but presided over by a councillor elected to the chair, an annual tax of $800 was imposed on the Bell Telephone Company of Canada, and a tax of $1,000 on the Quebec Gas Company. In actions insti-tuted by these companies for the purpose of an-nulling the by-law, the court of Queen's bench for Lower Canada reversed the judgment of the superior court and dismissed the actions, holding the tax valid. On appeal to the su-preme court of Canada:—Held, that the cases were not appealable, the appellants not having taken out of been refused, after argument, a rule or order quashing the by-law in question within the terms of s. 24 (g) of the Supreme and Exchequer Courts Act providing for appeals in cases of municipal by-laws. County of Verchères v. Village of Varennes. 19 S. C. R. 365, and City of Sherbrooke v. McManamy, 18 S. C. R. 594, followed. Bell Telephone Co. v. City of Quebec, Quebec Gas Co. v. City of Quebec, 20 S. C. R. 230.

- Title to Land.]-In an action to quash a by-law passed for the expropriation of land, the controversy relates to a title to lands, and an appeal lies to the supreme court of Canada, although the amount in controversy is less than $2,000. The judgment on the merits dismissed the appeal for the reasons stated in the judgment of the court below, (See Q. R. 6 Q. B. 345.) Murray v. Town of Westmount, 27 S. C. R. 579.

Petition to Quash.]-Proceedings were commenced in the superior court by petition to quash a by-law passed by the corporation of the city of Sherbrooke under s. 4389, R. S. P. Q., which gives the right to petition the superior court to annul a municipal by-law, The judgment appealed from, reversing the judgment of the superior court, held that the by-law was intra vires. On motion to quash an appeal to the supreme court of Canada :-Held, that the proceedings, being in the interest of the public, are equivalent to the motion or rule to quash of the English practice, and therefore the court had jurisdiction to entertain the appeal, under s.-s. (g) of s. 24, c. 135, R. S. C. City of Sherbrooke v. McManamy, 18 S. C. R. 594, and County of Verchères v. Village of Varennes, 19 S. C. R. 305, distinguished. Webster v. City of Sherbrooke, 24 S. C. R. 52.

Appeal to Queen's Bench — Order Quashing Appeal from.]—Section 439 of the Town Corporations Act, 40 Vict, c. 29 (Q.), not having been excluded from the charter of the city of Ste. Cunegonde (53 Vict. c. 70), is to be read as forming a part of it, and prohibits an appeal to the court of Queen's bench from a judgment of the superior court on a petition to quash a by-law presented under s, 310 of said charter. Where the court of Queen's bench has quashed such an appeal for want of jurisdiction, no appeal lies to the supreme court of Canada from its decision. City of Ste. Cunegonde de Montrial v. Gongcon, 25 S. C. R. 78.

10. New Trials.

Discretion.]—Under 38 Vict, c. 11 (D.), the supreme court has power to make any order or to give any judgment which the court below might or ought to have given, and amongst other things to order a new trial on the ground either of misdirection or the verdict being against the weight of evidence; and that power is not taken away by s. 22 in this case, in which the court below did not exercise any discretion as to the question of a new trial, and where the appeal from their judgment did not relate to that subject. Connecticut Matual Life Ins. Co. of Hartford v. Moore, 6 App. Cas. 644, 6 S. C. R. 634.

The court will not hear an appeal where the court below in the exercise of its discretion has ordered a new trial on the ground that the verdict is against the weight of evidence. Eureka Woodlen Mills Co. v. Moss, 11 S. C. R. 91.

The defendant in an action, against whom a verdict, had passed at the trial, moved for a new trial before a divisional court on the grounds of misdirection, surprise, and the discovery of further evidence, and the motion was granted on the ground of misdirection (15 O. R. 544). The plaintiff appealed, and the court of appeal held that there was no misdirection, but that the order of the divisional court directing the case to be submitted to another jury should not be interfered with, the circumstances of the case being peculiar: —Held, that, as the judgment of the court of appeal did not proceed upon the ground that the trial Judge had not ruled according to law, no appeal would lie to the supreme court of Canada from its decision. In the factum of the respondents no objection was made to the jurisdiction of the supreme court, but it was urged that the appeal should not interfere with the discretion in favour of a new trial exercised by the two lower courts, the circumstances, it was contended, being stronger than those in Eureka Woollen Mills Co. v. Moss, 11 S. C. R. 21. O'Sullivan v. Lake, 16 S. C. R. 636.

Trial without Jury.]—Section 24 (d) of the Supreme Court Act (R. S. C. c. 135), allowing an appeal "from the judgment on a motion for a new trial upon the ground that the Judge has not ruled according to law," is applicable to jury cases only. Halijax Street R. W. Co. v. Jogec, 17 S. C. R. 709.

11. Quebec Cases.

Church Rate—Assessment on Land,]—A church rate, payable in two instalments of $165 each, was assessed on a certain property in the parish of the Nativity. The Bank of Toronto subsequently became propriety of this land, and in an hynothesis of this land, and in an hynothesis of the payment of the first instalment of said church rate, the superior court at Montreal held the Bank of Toronto liable; the court of Queen's bench confirmed the judgment—Held, on appeal to the superior court of Canada, that the case did not come within any of the classes of cases mentioned in s. 8 of 42 Vict. c. 39 (Supreme Court Amendment Act, 1879), providing for appeals from the Province of Quebec, and was not appealable. Bank of Toronto v. Curè, de., de la Paroisse de la Nativité de la Sainte Vicrge, 12 s. C. R. 25.

Prohibition.]—The provisions of s. 2 of 54 & 55 Vict. c. 25, giving the supreme court of Canada jurisdiction to hear appeals in matters of prohibition, apply to such appeals from the Province of Quebec as well as from all other parts of Canada. Shannon v. Montreal Park and Island R. W. Co., 28 S. C. R. 374.

Quo Warranto.]—An appeal from a decision of the court of Queen's bench for Lower Canada (M. L. R. 2 Q. B. 482) was quashed on motion for want of jurisdiction, the proceedings being by quo warranto, as to which there is no appeal by the statute. Walsh v. Hefforman, 14 S. C. R. 738.

Cushing v. Dupuy, 5 App. Cas. 409, followed. Seath v. Hagar, 18 S. C. R. 715.

Validity of Quebec Statute-Municipal By-law—Taxes.]—The plaintiffs sued the defendants to recover the sum of $150, being the amount of two business taxes, one of $100 as compounders and the other of $50 as wholesale dealers, under the authority of a municipal The defendants pleaded that the byby-law. law was illegal and ultra vires of the municipal council, and also that the statute 47 Vict. c. 84 (Q.) was ultra vires of the legislature of the Province of Quebec. The superior court held that both the statute and by law were intra vires, and condemned the defendants to pay the amount claimed. On an appeal to the court of Queen's bench by the defendants, that court confirmed the judgment of the superior court as regards the validity of the statute, but set aside the tax of $100 as not being authorized. The plainof $100 as not being authorized. The plaintiffs thereupon appealed to the supreme court, complaining of that part of the judgment which declared the business tax of $100 invalid. There was no cross-appeal. On motion to quash for want of jurisdiction:—Held, that the appeal would not lie, s. 24 (g) of the Supreme and Exchequer Courts Act not being ampliable, and the case not coming being applicable, and the case not coming within s. 29 of the Act, the amount being under $2,000, no future rights within the meander $2,000, no flutter lights within the limiting of s. 29 being in controversy, nor any question as to the constitutionality of the Act of the legislature being raised. III. APPEAL-LEAVE.

Per Saltum.]-The Chief Justice of the supreme court, under s. 6 of the Supreme Court Amendment Act of 1879, allowed an appeal direct to the supreme court of Canada, it being known that there were then only two Judges on the bench in Manitoba, the plaintiff (Chief Justice) and another judge, whose decree the appeal was brought. Schultz v. Wood, 6 S. C. R. 585.

A suit brought by respondents against D. as rector of St. James' Cathedral, Toronto, to have certain lands declared to be held by him not only for himself but also for the benefit of the other rectors in the city of Toronto, was decided at the trial in favour of the rewas decladed at the trial in through the assembled, a decision which, on appeal to a divisional court, was upheld. Up to the time of the judgment rendered by the latter court the proceedings had been carried on in the name of D. by arrangement between him and the churchwardens of St. James' Cathedral, who contended that they had an interest sepa-rate from that of D. in the disposition of the lands and the revenues therefrom, and who had indemnified D. against costs. But, upon the churchwardens proposing to appeal to the court of appeal, D. refused to allow his name to be further used in the proceedings. court of appeal, upon an application being made by the churchwardens for leave to ap-peal, refused to grant such appeal, holding that the churchwardens had no interest in the lands or revenues. The churchwardens there-upon applied to a Judge in chambers for leave to appeal per saltum to the supreme court of Canada, under s. 6 of the Supreme Court Act, 1879, from the judgment of the divisional court. The Judge held that the churchwardens had an interest at least which justified them in appealing. He would not, however, as a Judge in chambers, overrule the decision of the art of appeal, but granted leave to renew application before the full On the motion coming before the full court, it was held that the appeal should be allowed, upon a proper indemnity being given by the churchwardens to D. against all posis the contenuardens to D. against an pos-sible costs, the court expressing no opinion on the merits of the case itself. DuMoulin v. Langtry, 13 S. C. R. 258. Leave to appeal to privy council refused: 57 L. T. N. S. 317.

An appeal came before the supreme court, by consent, from a decision of the Judge in equity of New Brunswick, without an intermediate appeal to the supreme court of the Province, and, after argument, was dismissed, (9 S. C. R. 617.) The judgment of the supreme court was subsequently reversed by the privy council, and the case sent back to the Judge in equity to make a decree. plaintiffs, being dissatisfied with the decree pronounced by the Judge in equity, applied, under R. S. C. c. 135, s. 26, for leave to appeal direct therefrom:—Held, that under the circumstances of the case such leave should be granted. Lewin v. Howe, 14 S. C. R. 722

It is not sufficient ground for allowing an appeal direct from the decision of the trial Judge on further consideration or of a divisional court, that the court of appeal of the Province of Ontario had already, in a similar case before it, given a decision on the abstract question of law involved in the case in which the appeal was sought, though it might be sufficient if such decision had been given on the same state of facts and the same evidence. Kyle v. Canada Co., Hislop v. Township of McGillivray, 15 S. C. R. 188.

Action to replevy from the defendant books which were in his possession as clerk of the plaintiffs, a municipal corporation, he having been dismissed from the office. He refused to give up the books, on the ground that his dismissal was illegal. Judgment was given for the plaintiffs at the trial, and affirmed by a divisional court, and an application by the defendant for special leave to appeal was re-fused by the court of appeal. The defendant then applied for leave to appeal per saltum to the supreme court of Canada. The motion was made to the registrar, who dismissed it; the defendant then appealed without success to a Judge in chambers; and finally to the full court :- Held, that he had failed to shew sufficient cause to justify the court in granting leave. Bartram v. Village of London West, 24 S. C. R. 705.

Divisional Courts in Ontario.]—
Held, per Strong, C.J., and Gwynne, J.,
(Taschereau and Sedgewick, JJ., contra.) that under s. 26, s.-s. 3, of the Supreme and Exchequer Courts Act, leave to appeal direct from a judgment of a divisional court of the high court of justice for Ontario may be granted in cases where there is no right of appeal to the court of appeal. Farguharson v. Imperial Oil Co., 30 S. C. R. 188.

Public Importance — Insurance — Construction of Conditions.]-An action in which less than the sum or value of $1,000 is in controversy, and wherein the decision involves questions as to the construction of the conditions indorsed upon a benevolent society's certificate of insurance and as to the application of the statute securing the benefit of life insurance to wives and children to such certification. cates, is not a matter of such public importance as would justify an order by the court granting special leave to appeal under the provisions of s. 1 (e) of 60 & 61 Vict. c. 34. Fisher v. Fisher, 28 S. C. R. 494.

Special Leave-Case not otherwise Appealable.]-Leave to appeal cannot be granted under 60 & 61 Vict. c. 34, s. 1 (e), in a case not appealable under the general provisions of R. S. C. c. 135. Tucker v. Young, 30 S. C. R. 185.

Case on Appeal—Opinions of Judges below.]—Where a court had pronounced judgment in a cause before it, and after proceedings in appeal had been instituted certain of the Judges filed documents with the protho-notary purporting to be additions to their re-spective opinions in the case, such documents were improperly allowed to form part of the case on appeal and could not be considered by the appellate court. Mayhew v. Stone, 26 S. C. R. 58.

Decuments not Proved at Trial.]—A document which has not been proved nor produced at the trial, cannot be relied on or made part of the case in appeal. Lionais v. Molsons Bank, 10 S. C. R. 526.

Factum — Impertinence.]—The plaintiff's factum, containing reflections on the Judge in equity and the full court of New Brunswick, was ordered to be taken off the files of the court as scandalous and impertinent. Vernon v. Officer, 11 S. C. R. 136.

2. Costs.

Divided Court.]-The Judges of the supreme court being equally divided in opinion, and the decision of the court below affirmed. the successful party was refused the costs of the appeal. But by 38 Vict. c. 11, s. 38, the supreme court being authorized, in its discretion, to order the payment of the costs of the appeal, the decision in this case will not necessarily prevent the majority of the court from ordering the payment of the costs of the appeal in other cases where there is an equal division of opinion among the Judges. Liverpool and London and Globe Ins. Co. v. Wyld, 1 S. C. R. 604.

Judgment-Effect on Costs in Court below.]—On appeal to the court of appeal the judgments of the court of chancery in favour of the plaintiffs respectively, were affirmed with costs of appeal; and the defendants appealed to the supreme court. In the first case that court gave leave to the defendants (appellants) to amend their answer, saying nothing as to costs, and, upon such amendment being made, declared that the award upon which the bill had been filed should be null and void, but said nothing about costs. In the second case the supreme court ordered a new trial to be had between the parties, without costs to either party. The plaintiffs, having ob-tained orders of the court of chancery making the certificates of the court of appeal of the judgments in appeal orders of the court of appeal of the chancery, issued executions thereon for the costs awarded in appeal:—Held, that the plaintiffs were not entitled to the costs of the appeal to the court of appeal, and the exe-cutions were set aside. Norvall v. Canada Southern R. W. Co., Cunningham v. Canada Southern R. W. Co., 9 P. R. 339.

Next Friend—Indemnity.]—An order was made indemnifying the next friend of the infant plaintiffs out of their money for the costs of an appeal to the supreme court of Canada, where the appeal was advised by more than where the appeal was advised by more than one counsel, and one of the Judges of the court of appeal had dissented from the rest. Cottingham v. Cottingham, 11 P. R. 13.

Of Cross-appeal.] — See Pilon v. Brunet, 5 S. C. R. 318, post 3.

Quashing Appeal.]—As the appeal was quashed for want of jurisdiction the costs im-posed were only costs of a motion to quash. O'Sullivan v. Luke, 16 S. C. R. 636: Jermyn v. Tev., 28 S. C. R. 497; Griffith v. Harwood, 30 S. C. R. 315.

See Lewin v. Howe, 14 S. C. R. 722, post 7.

3. Cross-appeals.

Necessity for—Increasing Amount of Avard.]—Under the Ontario Judicature Act, R. S. O. 1887 c. 44, ss. 47 and 48, the court of appeal has power to increase damages awarded to a respondent without a cross-appeal, and the supreme court has the like power under its rule No. 61. Though the court will not usually increase such damages without a cross-appeal, yet where the original proa cross-appeal, yet where the original proceedings were by arbitration under a statute providing that the court, on appeal from the award, shall pronounce such judgment as the arbitrators should have given, the statute is sufficient notice to an appellant of what the court may do, and a cross-appeal is not necessary. Town of Toronto Junction v. Christie, 25 S. C. R. 551.

Rules—Compliance with.]—A cross-appeal will be disregarded by the court when rules 62 and 63 of the supreme court rules have not been complied with. Bulmer v. The Queen, 23 S. C. R. 488.

Separate Appeals-Costs.]-An appellant in the court of Queen's bench, Quebec, who had partly succeeded, appealed to the su preme court on the ground that the judgment was yet excessive. At the same time the respondent appealed on the ground that the judgment of the superior court ought to have been affirmed. This second appeal was treated by the court as a cross-appeal under the supreme court rules, and the respondent on the second appeal, having succeeded in getting the judgment reversed on the second point and confirmed on the first point, was allowed costs of a cross-appeal. Pilon v. Brunet, 5 S. C. R. 318.

See Laberge v. Equitable Life Assurance Society, 24 S. C. R. 59.

4. Dismissal of Appeal.

Application to Reinstate.]—Motion to reinstate an appeal which had been dismissed because no counsel appeared for the appellant when the case was called. The only ground stated for asking the indulgence of the court was that counsel had been present not long before the case was called, and had felt satisfied that it would not be reached that day, but that the cases before it had been unexpectedly disposed of. The court refused to reinstate the appeal and refused the motion with costs. Foran v. Handley, 24 S. C. R. 706.

5. Motion to Quash Appeal.

Doubtful Jurisdiction.]—If the jurisdiction of the court is doubtful, the appeal must be quashed. Cully v. Ferdais, 30 S. C. R. 330.

Necessity for Motion—Costs.]—An objection to the jurisdiction of the court should be taken at the earliest possible moment. If left until the case comes on for hearing and the appeal is quashed, the respondent may be allowed costs of a motion only. Griffith v. Harveood, 30 S. C. R. 315; O'Sullivan v. Lake, 16 S. C. R. 636.

Extradition—Coram non Judice.]—
By s. 31 of the Supreme and Exchequer Courts Act (R. S. C. c. 135, s. 31), "no appeal shall be allowed in any case of proceedings for or upon a writ of habeas corpus arising out of any claim for extradition made under any treaty," On application to the court to fix a day for hearing a motion to quash such an appeal:—Held, that the matter was coram non judice and there was no necessity for a motion to quash. In re Lazier, 29 s. C. R. 360.

See Schlomann v. Dowker, 30 S. C. R. 323, ante I. 1.

6. Parties to Appeal.

Legal Representatives.]—It is too late to raise an objection for the first time on the argument before the supreme court that the legal representatives of the assured were not made parties to the cause. Venner v. Sun Life Ins. Co., 17 S. C. R. 394.

Petition in Disavowal.]—Where a petition in disavowal has been served on all parties to the suit, and is only contested by the attorney whose authority is denied, the latter cannot on an appeal complain that all parties interested in the result are not parties to the appeal. Dawson v. Dumont, 20 S. C. R. 709, See Scammell v. James, 16 S. C. R. 593, post V.

7. Judgment.

Motion to Vary—Case on Appeal.]—After judgment application was made to vary or reverse the judgment, on affidavits shewing that the question which the judgment decided should have been submitted to the jury, was submitted and answered:—Held, that the application was too late, as the court had to determine the appeal case transmitted, and the respondent had allowed the appeal to be argued and judgment rendered without taking any steps to have the case amended. Providence Washington Ins. Co. v. Gerow, 14 S. C. R. 731.

Reversal by Privy Council—Enforcement—Costs.]—Where the judgment of the supreme court of Canada has been reversed by the privy council, the proper manner of enforcing the judgment of the privy council is to obtain an order making it a rule of the supreme court of Canada. Where such judgment of the privy council was made a rule of court, the court ordered the repayment by one of the parties of costs received pursuant to the judgment so reversed. Levin v. Hovce, 14 S. C. R. 722.

Revocation—Fraud.] — Where judgment on a case in appeal has been rendered by the supreme court of Canada and certified to the proper officer of the court of original jurisdiction, the supreme court has no jurisdiction to entertain a petition (requéte civile) for revocation of its judgment on the ground that the opposite party succeeded by the fraudulent conceniment of evidence. Durocher v. Durocher, 27 S. C. R. 634.

Service.]—It is not necessary to serve a certificate of a judgment of the supreme court when the decree is not materially altered. Grasett v. Carter. 6 O. R. 584.

S. Other Cases.

Abatement of Action by Death of Plaintiff.]—See White v. Parker, 16 S. C. R. 699.

Election Appeal—Consent to Reversal of Judgment.]—The trial of two controverted Dominion election petitions was commenced more than six months after the filing of the petitions, no order having been made enlarging the time for the commencement of the trial. Upon the consent of the respondents, subject to their objection that the court had no jurisdiction, judgments were given voiding the elections for corrupt practices by agents. Upon the respondents' appeal to the supreme court of Canada, the petitioners filed a consent to the reversal of the judgments appealed from without costs, admitting that the objection was well taken. Upon the filing of an affidavit as to the facts stated in the consent, the appeal was allowed and the petitions dismissed without costs. Bagot Election Case, Clus C. R. 28.

— Discontinuance.]—Upon the trial of a controverted Dominion election petition the respondent was unseated by the judgment of the superior court, by reason of corrupt practices by agents, and appealed to the supreme court of Canada. When the case was called, no one appearing for the appellant, counsel for the petitioner stated that he had been served with a notice of discontinuance. The court ordered that the appeal be struck off the list. L'assomption Election Case, 21 S. C. R. 29.

Staying Proceedings—Prior Appeal to Pricy Council.]—Where the appellant had inscribed an appeal for hearing in the supreme court of Canada, after he had received notice of an appeal taken in the same matter by the respondent to the privy council, upon motion on behalf of the respondent the proceedings in the supreme court appeal were stayed with costs against the appellant pending the decision of the privy council upon the respondent's appeal. Eddy v. Eddy, Coutle's Dig. 23, 70-lowed. Bank of Montreal v. Demers, 29 S. C. R. 435.

V. APPEAL-SECURITY.

Amount of Security.]—The court of appeal has no discretion to increase the amount of security on appeal to the supreme court of Canada, fixed by R. S. C. c. 135, s. 46, at $500, because of the number of respondents. Archer v. Severn, 12 P. R. 472.

Bond—Action on — Taxation—Ascertainment.]—See Hager v. Jackson, 16 P. R. 485.

— Condition.]—The condition in a bond filed upon an appeal to the supreme court of Canada was to "pay such costs and damages as shall be awarded in cose the judgment shall be affirmed."—Held, that this was not in substance the same as the statutory condition to "pay such costs and damages as may be awarded against the appellant by the supreme court:" and the italicised words added a condition not required by the Supreme Court Act, and by which the respondents ought not to be hampered. Davidson v. Frascr, 17 P. R. 246.

Condition—Affidavit of Execution—Affidavit of Justification.]—The condition of a bond filed by the defendants as security for the costs of an appeal to the supreme court of Canada, was, that if the defendants "shall effectually prosecute their said appeal and pay such costs and damages as may be awarded against them by the supreme court of Canada, then their obligation shall be void; otherwise to remain in full force and effect:"—Held, that the bond was not irregular. (2) The affidavit of execution of such a bond need not be intituled in the cause. (3) A surety in such a bond, when justifying in the sum sworn to "over and above what will pay all supplied the sum of which I am now bail." Molsons Bank v. Cooper, IT P. R. 153.

jointly and severally held and "jointly" bound, instead of "firmly" bound, and "we bind ourselves and each of us by himself, "instead of "binds himself:"—Held, that it must be disallowed for uncertainty as to whether it could be properly construed as a joint and several bond. Jamicson v. London and Canadian L. and A. Co., 18 P. R. 413.

A bond filed as security for costs of an appeal to the supreme court of Canada was disallowed on the ground of substantial error in the form—"by" instead of "binds" in the operative part. Jamieson v. London and Canadian L. and A. Co., IS P. R. 413, followed, Young v. Tucker, IS P. R. 449.

Form — Objection — Waiver.]—If objection is made to the form of a bond for security for costs on appeal to the supreme court, it should be by application in chambers to dismiss, and if not so made the objection will be held to be waived. Whitman v. Union Bank of Halifax, 16 S. C. R. 410.

— Parties—Condition.]—In an appeal to the supreme court of Canada, although it is not necessary that the appellant should be a party to the appeal bond, if he is made a party and does not execute the bond, the respondent is entitled to have it disallowed. In an appeal bond, where the object was not only to secure payment of the costs which might be awarded by the supreme court of Canada under s. 46 of R. S. C. c. 135, but also under s. 47 (e) to procure a stay of execution of the judgment appealed from as to the costs thereby awarded against the appellant, the condition was "shall effectually prosecute the said appeal and pay such costs and damages as may be awarded against the appellant by the supreme court of Canada, and shall pay the amount by the said mentional judgment directed to be paid, either as a debt or for damages or costs," &c.:—Held, that this did not cover the costs awarded against the appellant by the judgment appealed from. Robinson v. Harris, 14 P. R. 373.

Surety—Officer of Court.]—It is not a valid objection to a surety to a bond for security for costs to the supreme court of Canada that he is an officer of the court appealed from. Wilkins v. Maclean, 7 C. L. T. Occ. N. 5.

— Time for Filing.]—There having been no delay in applying for leave to appeal, and the delay being caused by the act of the court:—Held, that the time for filing the bond must count from the granting of leave to appeal. McCraw v. White, 9 P. R. 288.

To whom Given—Parties—Bail.]—

S. brought an action against J., and issued a writ of capias. Bail was given and special bail entered in due course, but the bail-piece was not filed, nor judgment entered against J., for some months after. On application to a Judge in chambers, an order was made for the discharge of the bail on account of delay in entering up judgment, and the full court refused to set aside such an order. An appead was brought to the supreme court of Canada, initiated in the suit against J., from the judgment of the full court, and the bond for security for costs was given to J.:—Held, that, as the bail, the only parties really interested in the bappeal, were not before the court, and were poped.

not entitled to the benefit of the bond, the appeal must be quashed for want of proper security. Scammell v. James, 16 S. C. R. 593.

Deposit of Money — Certificate of Prothonotary—Approval of Judge; 1—The following certificate was filed with the printed case, as complying with rule for the supreme court rules; "We, the undersigned, joint prothonotary for the superior court of Lower Canada, now the Province of Quebec, do hereby certify that the said defendant has deposited in our office, on the twentieth day of November last, the sum of five hundred dollars, as security in appeal in this case, hefore the supreme court, according to section thirty-first of the Supreme Court Act, passed in the thirty-eighth year of Her Majesty, chapter second. Montreal, 17th January, 1878, Hubert, Honey, & Gendron, P. S. C."—Held, on motion to quash appeal, that the deposit of the sum of $500 in the hands of the prothonotary of the court below, made by appellant, without a certificate that it was made to the satisfaction of the court appealed from, or any of its Judges, was nugatory and ineffectual as security for the costs of appeal. Macdonald v. Abbott, 3 S. C. R. 278.

Necessity for Security—Ex Parte Appeal.—An appeal was sought from the refusal of the supreme court of Nova Scotia to admit the appellant as an attorney of the court. There being no person interested in opposing the application or the appeal, no security for costs was given:—Held, that the court had no jurisdiction to hear the appeal. Except in cases specially provided for, no appeal can be heard by this court unless security for costs has been given as provided for by s. 46 of the Supreme and Exchequer Courts Act. R. S. C. e. 135. In re Caban, 21 S. C. R. 100.

Stay of Proceedings—Money in Court— Payment out—Solicitor's Undertaking.]—See Kelly v. Imperial Loan Co., 10 P. R. 499.

The plaintiff appealed to the court of appeal from a judgment of the high court dismissing their action with costs, and gave the security for the costs of appeal required by s. 71 of the Judicature Act, by paying $400 into court, and also gave the security required by rule 804 (4), in order to stay the execution of the judgment below for taxed costs, by paying $322.14 into court. Their appeal was dismissed with costs. Desiring to appeal to the supreme court of Canada, they paid $500 more into court, and this was allowed by a Judge of the court of appeal as security for the costs of the further appeal:— Held, that execution was stayed upon the judgments of the high court and court of appeal appeal until the decision of the supreme court. Construction of s. 46, 47 (e), and 48 of the Supreme and Exchequer Courts Act, R. S. C. c. 135. Semble, that payment out of the moneys in court to the defendant of his costs of the high court and court of appeal, upon the undertaking of his solicitors to repay in the event of the further appeal succeeding, could not properly be ordered. Kelly v. Imperial Loan Co., 10 P. R. 499, commented on. Agricultural Insurance Co., of Watertown, N. Y. v. Sargent, 16 P. R. 397.

The plaintiffs recovered judgment in the high court against the defendants for damages and costs. The defendants appealed to the court of appeal, paying $200 into court as security to the plaintiffs for the costs of such appeal, which was dismissed with costs. The defendants launched a further appeal to the supreme court of Canada, and gave the security required by s. 46 of the Supreme and Exchequer Courts Act, but no other security:— Held, that proceedings to enforce the plaintiffs judgment in the high court were not stayed, either by force of s. 48 or otherwise. But the court was not bound to pay out immediately to the plaintiffs the sum of $200 paid in by the defendants, the judgment of the court of appeal being stayed pending the appeal to the supreme court, which might determine that the plaintiffs were not entitled to the costs of the court of appeal; and the money ought not to be paid to the plaintiffs, from whom it could never be recovered, and whose solicitors declined to take it upon the usual undertaking, but should remain in court pending the appeal. Rombough v. Balch, 19 P. R. 123.

VI. APPEAL-TIME FOR.

Commencement of Time — Entry or Pronouncing of Judgment.]—Where any substantial matter remains to be determined on the settlement of the minutes before the registrar, the time for appealing to the supreme court of Canada will run from the entry of the judgment: otherwise it will run from the date on which the judgment is pronounced. In the Province of Quebec the time runs in every case from the pronouncing of the judgment. O'Sullivan v, Harty, 13 S. C. R. 431.

The thirty days' time allowed for appealing to the supreme court of Canada under s, 25 of the Supreme and Exchequer Courts Act commences to run on the issuing of the certificate of the court of appeal. Walmsley v. Griffith, 11 P. R. 147.

Where the court of appeal for Ontario reversed a judgment in favour of the plaintiff, and dismissed the action:—Held, that in such case no substantial question could remain to be settled before the entry of the judgment, and the time for appealing to the supreme court of Canada would therefore run from the pronouncing of the judgment. O'Sullivan v. Harty, 13 8. C. R. 431, distinguished. Walmsley v. Griffith, 13 8. C. R. 434.

Where, after the minutes of a case decided by the supreme court of British Columbia were settled, the plaintiffs moved before the full court to have the minutes varied, and they were varied by striking out certain declarations respecting the rights of the plaintiff C, and the defendant M. respectively, and also with respect to the costs payable by the plaintiff E,:—Held, that, there being substantial questions to be decided before the judgment could be entered, the time for appealing to the supreme court of Canada would run from the date of the entry of the judgment. Rule 269 of the rules of the maritime court of contario requires notice of appeal from a decision of that court to the supreme court of Canada to be given within fifteen days from the pronouncing of such decision. A judgment of the maritime court was handed by the surrogate to the registrar, but not in open court, on 31st August, and was not drawn up and entered by the registrar for some time after:—Held, that notice of appeal within fifteen days from the entry of such judgment was sufficient under the said rule. Quare, is such rule intra vires of the maritime court? Robertson v. Wigle, 15 S. C. R. 214.

On the trial of an action the plaintiffs obtained a verdicet, which a divisional court set aside. The court of appeal allowed the appeal and restored the judgment at the trial, reducing the amount of damages by a certain specified sum:—Held, that nothing substantial remained to be settled by the minutes on entering the formal judgment of the court of appeal, and the time for appealing therefrom to the supreme court ran from the pronouncing and not from the entry of such judgment. O'Sullivan v. Harty, 13 S. C. R. 431, Walmsley v. Griffith, 13 S. C. R. 434, Martley v. Carson, 13 S. C. R. 439, followed. News Printing Co. v. Macrae, 20 S. C. R. 635.

On the trial of an action to set aside a chartel mortgage, the plaintiff obtained a declaration that the mortgage was void, and an order setting it aside without costs. This decision was reversed on appeal and the action dismissed with costs both in the court of appeal and the court below, by a judgment pronounced on the 7th November, 1895. The minutes had not been settled until some days afterwards, and at the time of the settlement the draft minutes were altered by the registrar of the court of appeal by refusing costs to one of the respondents and also by changing a direction therein as to the payment over of funds on deposit abiding the decision of the suit. On an application made more than sixty days from the pronouncing of the judgment, for the approval of security under s. 46 of the Supreme and Exchequer Courts Act:—Held, that nothing substantial remained to be settled by the minutes so as to take the case out of the general rule that the time for appealing runs from the pronouncing of the judgment, and that the application was too late. Martin v. Sampson, 28 S. C. R. 707.

Expiry of Time—Filing of Appeal Case—Habeas Corpus—Auridation.)—For the nurpose of an appeal to the supreme court of Canada filing and the case in appeal with the registrar. Where notice of intention to appeal was given immediately after the judgment of the court of appeal in a habeas corpus proceeding, but the case in appeal was not filed until more than three months after such judgment:—Held, that the appeal was not brought within sixty days, and there was no jurisdiction to hear it. In re Smart Infants, 16 S. C. R, 396.

Notice of Appeal—Special Case.]—
The judgment upon a "special case" intended by s. 41 of the Supreme and Exchequer Courts Act. R. S. C. c. 135, is a judgment on the kind of case well known by that name, and has no reference to the case which, by con. rule 413, is prepared for the purpose of the appeal to the court of appeal for Ontario.

An objection to a bond on appeal from the court of appeal to the supreme court, in an action tried upon pleadings and oral evidence, and which came before the court of appeal in the usual way, that notice of appeal was not given within twenty days pursuant to s. 41, upon the ground that every appeal from the court of appeal is "upon a special case," was therefore overruled. Draper v. Radenhurst, 14 P. R. 376.

Sunday—Special Circumstances.]—Where the thirty days allowed for appealing from the court of appeal by 28 Vict. c. 11, s. 25, expired on a Sunday, without an order allowing the appeal:—Held, that this did not give the party wishing to appeal, the following day to procure his order, nor was it a "special circumstance" under s. 26, Goyeau v. Great Western R. W. Co., 15 C. I. J. 107.

Extension of Time.]—The judgment of the court of appeal was delivered on the 5th March, 1889. On the 16th March the solicitors for the defendants wrote to their clients suggesting an appeal, but they received no instructions until the 2nd April, and took no step till the 3rd April. No explanation was offered of the delay or neglect except the production of a telegram to the solicitors from an officer of the defendants giving instructions to appeal, and suggesting that the matter had been overlooked by another officer. The Judges in the divisional court and court of appeal were unanimous in deciding against the defendants:—Held, that, under these circumstances, the time for giving the required notice should not be extended. Rouclands v. Canada Southern R. W. Co., 13 P. R. 93.

Dismissal of Appeal—Order in Chambers—Appeal from.]—A party seeking to appeal obtained an extension of time for filing his case, but failed to take advantage of the indulgence so granted, whereupon, on the application of the respondent, the appeal was dismissed by a Judge in chambers. On motion to rescind the order dismissing the appeal:—Held, that, under the circumstances of the case, the court would not interfere by rescinding the Judge's order and restoring the appeal. City of Winnipeg v. Wright, 13 S. C. R. 441.

Exchequer Court.]—On the trial in the exchequer court in 1887 of an action against the Crown for breach of a contract to purchase paper from the suppliant, no defence was offered, and the case was sent to referees to ascertain the damages. In 1891 the report of the referees was brought before the court, and judgment was given against the Crown for the amount thereby found due. The Crown appealed to the supreme court, having obtained from the exchequer court an extension of the time for appeal limited by statute, and sought to impugn on such appeal the judgment pronounced in 1891:—Held, that the appeal must be restricted to the final judgment pronounced in 1891: that an appeal from the judgment given in 1887 could only be brought within thirty days thereafter, unless the time was extended as provided by the statute, and the extension of time granted by the exchequer court on its face only referred to an appeal from the judgment pronounced in 1891. The Queen v. Clark, 21 8. C. R. 656.

Exchequer Court — Amendment — Jurisdiction.] — An order of reference had been settled in such a way as to omit to reserve certain questions which the court expressly withheld for adjudication at a later stage of the case. Both parties had been represented on the settlement and had an opportunity of speaking to the minutes. The order was acquiesced in by the parties for a period of some eighteen months; the reference was executed; and the referee's report filed. After final judgment in the action, the Crown appealed to the supreme court. Subsequent to the lodging of such appeal, an application was made to the exchequer court to amend the order of reference so as to include the reservations mentioned, or, in the alternative, to have the t.ane for appealing from such order extended. Under the circumstances, the court extended the time for appealing, but refused to amend the order of reference as settled. Woodburn v. The Queen, 6 Ex. C. R. 69.

Held, that the Judge of the exchequer court had authority to allow the appeal and it was properly before the supreme court. The Queen v. Woodburn, 29 S. C. R. 112.

Exchequer Court—Grounds of Refusal—Solicitor's Affidavit.]—Judgment against the suppliants was delivered on the 17th January, and the time allowed for leave to appeal by 8.51 of the Exchequer Court Act expired on the 17th February. On the 22nd April following, the suppliants applied for an extension of the time to appeal, on the ground that before judgment the suppliants's solicitor had been given instructions to appeal in the event of the judgment in the exchequer court going against them. There was no affidavit establishing this fact by the solicitor for the suppliants, but there was an affidavit made by an agent of the suppliants stating that he personally did not know of the judgment being delivered until the 27th March—Held, that the knowledge of the solicitor must be taken to be the knowledge of the company: that noffice to him was notice to the company: and that as between the suppliants and the respondent the matter should be disposed of upon the basis of what he knew and did, and not upon the knowledge or want of knowledge of the suppliants manager or agent as to the state of the cause. Alluance Assurance Co. v. The Queen, 6 Ex. C. R. 120.

 court or Judge may settle the case and approve the security. Vaughan v. Richardson, 17 S. C. R. 703.

Necessity for Notice of Appeal—New Trial.—The defendants appealed to the court of appeal from an order of a divisional court discharging an order nist to enter judgment for the defendants or for a new trial, on the ground, among others, that the trial Judge should have withdrawn the case from the jury, or should have directed them otherwise than he did. The court of appeal dismissed the defendant's appeal, and the defendants sought to appeal from such dismissal to the supreme court of Canada:—Held, that the judgment of the court of appeal came within s. 24 (d) of the Supreme and Exchequer Courts Act. R. S. C. c. 135, as "a judgment upon a motion for a new trial upon the ground that the Judge has not ruled according to law;" and that the proposed appeal was governed by the necessity for the notice of appeal within twenty days prescribed by s. 41 of the Act. Roxelands v. Canada Southern R. W. Co., 13 P. R. 93.

dent, on the ground that the appellant had not, within three days after the registrar of the court had set down the matter of the petition for hearing, given notice in writing to the tion for nearing, given notice in writing to the respondent, or his attorney or agent, of such setting down, nor applied to and obtained from the Judge who tried the petition further time for giving such notice, as required by s. 48 of the Supreme and Exchequer Courts Act: -Held, that this provision in the statute was imperative; that the giving of such notice was a condition precedent to the exercise of any jurisdiction by the supreme court to hear the appeal; that the appellant having failed to comply with the statute, the court could not grant relief under rules 56 or 69; and that, grant rener under ruies 30 or 03; and unit, therefore, the appeal could not be then heard, but must be struck off the list of appeals, with costs of the motion. Subsequent to this judg-ment, the appellant applied to the Judge who tried the petition, to extend the time for giving the notice, whereupon the said Judge granted the application and made an order, "extendthe application and made an order, "extend-ing the time for giving the prescribed notice till the 10th day of December then next." The case was again set down for hearing at the February session following, being the nearest convenient time, and notice of such setting down was duly given within the time mention-ed in the order. The respondent thereupon moved to dismiss the appeal, on the ground that the appellant unduly delayed to prosecute his appeal, or failed to bring the same on for hearing at the next session, and that the Judge who tried the petition had no power to extend the time for giving such notice after the three days from the first setting down of the case for hearing by the registrar of this court:—Held, that the power of the Judge who tried the petition to make an order extending the time for giving such notice is a general and exclusive power to be exercised according to sound discretion, and the Judge having made such an order in this case, the appeal came properly before the court for hearing. VII. HABEAS CORPUS-JURISDICTION.

Concurrent or Appellate Jurisdiction.]—As regards habeas corpus in criminal matters, the supreme court has only concurrent jurisdiction with the Judges of the superior courts of the various Provinces, and not an appellate jurisdiction, and there is no necessity for an appeal from the judgment of any Judge or court, or any appellate court, because the prisoner can come direct to any Judge of the supreme court individually, and upon that Judge refusing the writ or remanding the prisoner, he could take his appeal to the full court. In re Boucher, Cassels' Dig. 325,

Power to Review Magistrate's Finding.]—Held, that the conviction having been regular, and made by a court in the unquestionable exercise of its authority and acting within its jurisdiction, the only objection being that the magistrate erred on the facts, and that the evidence did not justify the conclusion at which he arrived as to the guilt of the prisoner, the supreme court could not go behind the conviction and inquire into the merits of the case by the issue of a writ of labeas corpus, and thus constitute itself a court of appeal from the magistrate's claim. In re Trepanier, 12 S. C. R. 111.

Statutory Crime—Murder.]—The right to issue a writ of habeas corpus being limited by s. 51 of the Supreme and Exchequer Courts Act to "an inquiry into the cause of commitment in any criminal case under any Act of the parliament of Canada," such writ cannot be issued in a case of murder, which is a be issued in a case of murder, which is a little at common law. Quare, whether s. 51 is ultra vires. In re Sproule, 12 S. C. R. 140.

Warrant of Commitment—Inquiry.]—Held, that the jurisdiction of a Judge of the supreme court of Canada in matters of habeas corpus in criminal cases is limited to an inquiry into the cause of imprisoment as disclosed by the warrant of commitment. Exparte Mucdonald, 27 S. C. R. 683.

I. APPEALS FROM.

Costs of Appeal—Scale.]—Costs of an appeal from the surrogate court to the court of appeal should be taxed on the scale of the court appealed from, as provided by rule 28 of the court of appeal, and not on the scale of the county court appeals. Regan v. Waters, 10 P. R. 364.

Right of Appeal—Order—Fixing Compensation.]—By virtue of R. S. O. 1897 c, 50, s. 36, an appeal lies to a divisional court from an order of a surrogate court Judge allowing compensation to an executor under the Trustee Act, R. S. O. 1897 c. 129, s. 43. In re Alexander, 31 O. R. 167.

Time—Security — Affidavit.] — The plaintiffs, desiring to appeal to the court of appeal from an order of the Judge of a surrogate court, made on the 4th October, 1895, served notice of appeal on the fifteenth day thereafter, and on the same day deposited with the registrar of the surrogate court as security an unmarked cheque on a bank for $100, payable to the order of the registrar, who simply retained it in the office and never cashed it. No other security was given, and no affidavit of the amount of the property to be affected by the order was filed: — Held, that what was done was not such a compliance with the requirements of rule 57 of the surrogate rules of 1892 that the appeal was thereby lodged and brought within filteen days, as required by s. 33 of the Surrogate Courts Act, R. S. O. 1887 c. 50; and the appeal was quashed with costs. Re Wilson, Trusts Corporation of Onterior v. Irrine, 17 P. R. 407.

II. FEES AND COSTS.

Application for Assignment of Bond—t-Action on Bond.]—The costs of an application, under s. 82 of the Surrogate Courts Act. C. S. U. C. c. 16, for an assignment of a probate bond in order to an action thereon at common law, cannot be taxed as costs in the action, but should be recovered as damages consequent on default. Closson v. Post, 6 L. J. 141.

Fees of Registrar and Judge—Grant of Administration.]—With regard to the fees to be charged on grant of letters of administration by the registrar and surrogate Judge, under C. S. U. C. c. 16, and the tariff: —Held, (1) that the registrar is not entitled to charge for the application, for he does not prepare it; his duty begins with receiving and filing it. (2) For all affidavits which should properly be made in his office he is entitled to charge, though he does not prepare them, and to administer the oath and charge for it; but he can make no charge for swearing the deponent unless he actually does so. Semble, that he cannot charge for the affidavit of the that he cannot charge for the affidavit of the place of abode of the intestate, and of intes-tacy, under s. 32, for these affidavits may accompany the application. (3) He may charge for the bond, though the attorney may have prepared it. (4) The attendance of the Judge to sign his fiat for the grant is not a special attendance, under schedule B, of the statute. The Judge therefore is not autitable. statute. The Judge, therefore, is not entitled to the fee of $1 for such attendance, nor is the registrar entitled to a fee of ten cents on it, as for drawing a special order, nor to fifty cents for attending and entering it as an order on a special attendance. In re Dallas and Registrar of Surrogate Court of Perth, 29 U. C. R. 482.

Fees of Solicitors and Counsel—Contentions and Non-contentions Matters.)—Under the orders promulgated, in August, 1858, by the Judges appointed to frame rules under the Surrogate Courts Act, which are still in force, the fees payable to attorneys and counsel in contentious, as well as non-contentious, matters, are the same, as nearly as the case will allow, as those payable in suits and proceedings in the county courts. Re O., a Solicitor, 24 Gr. 529.

Fees of Solicitors—Contentious Business—"Practice."] — The Surrogate Courts Act, C. S. U. C. c. 16, s. 17, enacts that, unless otherwise provided, the practice of the surrogate court shall, so far as the circumstances of the case will admit, be according to the practice in Her Majesty's court of probate in England:—Held, that the word "practice" did not include costs, so as to introduce the tariff of the English court. Held, also, that in the absence of a tariff of fees for contentious business in the surrogate court, the costs of the solicitor must be taxed according to the tariff of the county court and according to the tariff of the court of chancery for any work done in that court. Re Oster, 7 P. R. SO.

Security for Costs—Former Proceeding—Estate.)—Certain proceedings in the surrogate court by the present plaintiff were determined in favour of the defendant, and judgment was given for him with costs to be paid out of the estate. The plaintiff then filed her bill, raising substantially the same questions as those tried in the surrogate court:—Held, that the plaintiff could not be ordered to give security for the costs of the present suit, under 29 & 30 Vict. c. 42, s. 1, for the costs of the former proceedings were not payable by her, but out of the estate. Curtis v. McNabb, 7 P. R. 246.

After her death the paternal grandfather of the infants applied to the Judge of the surrogate court to be appointed their guardian, and the Judge, in opposition to objections made by the sister, appointed the grandfather:—Held, that the court of chancery has jurisdiction to appoint guardians to infants notwithstanding the Surrogate Act (22 Vict. c. 933), but it will not do so on an appeal from the appointment made by that court. Re Stannard, I Ch. Ch. 15, approved of. Re McQueen, McQueen v. McMillan, 23 (fr. 191.

Succession Duty — Property in Another Province—Testator's Domicite.]—The Judge of a surrogate court has jurisdiction to determine whether a narricular estate of which produce or administration is songit, is liable produce or administration is songit, is liable of such duty; his decision being the amount of such duty; his decision being the property of the property of the duty; his decision being the property of the property in the province, and the value of his property in Ontario is under $190,000, although his whole estate, including property in the Province of his domicile, exceeds $100,000, and his whole estate in this Province is by his will devised and bequeathed to his wife and children, the property in this Province is not liable to pay succession duty. Re Renfrew, 29 O. R. 565.

V. REMOVAL OF CASES INTO SUPERIOR COURT.

Appeal from Order Made before Removal.]—Immediately upon the making of an order removing a cause or matter from a surrogate court into the high court, under s. 34 of the Surrogate Courts Act. R. S. O. 1897 c. 59, such cause or matter becomes an action in the high court, and cases to be a cause or matter in the surrogate court; and therefore an appeal under s. 36 of the Act from an order made in the surrogate court before the removal, cannot be entertained, if launched after the removal. The practice to be followed is the practice prescribed in high court proceedings. Justin v. Goodison, 18 P. R. 174.

Costs—Scale of.]—In cases which by the Surrogate Court Act are proper to be removed to the court of chancery, the court will not restrict the parties to surrogate court costs. In re Lee and Waterhouse, 5 L. J. 256.

Where a suit in the surrogate court is by order removed into chancery, and that court directs any of the parties to receive their costs, the costs to which they are entitled are those allowed by the court of chancery tariff—not the costs of the probate court in England, or of the county courts here—no tariff of costs for contentious cases in the surrogate courts here having yet been established. Re Harris, Harris v, Harris v, Harris v, 14 Gr. 459.

In the case of an action transferred from a surrogate court to the high court of justice, the costs of the proceedings in the surrogate court previous to the transfer should be taxed on the scale provided by the rules of 1858, be, as nearly as possible on the county court scale. Re Harris, Harris v. Harris, 24 Gr. 459, and Re O., a Solicitor, 24 Gr. 520, explained and followed. Peel v. Peel, 11 P. R. 195.

An order transferring a cause or proceeding from a surrogate court into the high court contained a clause providing that in the event of the defendant, the applicant for the order, failing to establish his defence, his costs, if any were allowed him, should be on the surrogate court scale. By a consent judgment, which recited the pleadings and proceedings, and adjudged that the will which was disputed by the defendant was the last will of the testatrix, and should be admitted to probate, it was also adjudged that the costs of all parties should be naid out of the estate:—Held, upon appeal from taxation, that the defendant was bound by the order of transfer, and his costs should be taxed on the scale of the surrogate court. Re Forster, Battisby v. Witherspoon, 18 P. R. 65.

Grounds for-Application for Administration—Discretion.]—Upon an application by certain of the next of kin of an intestate, under s. 31 of the Surrogate Courts Act, R. S. O. 1887 c. 50, to remove from a surrogate court into the high court a cause in which a contention arose as to the grant of adminis-tration, it appeared that the widow and a trust company had petitioned for joint administration of the estate, which was a large one; that the next of kin opposed the petition; that neither widow nor next of kin could, unaided, supply the necessary security; and that there were no creditors:—Held, that the jurisdiction to award grant, being of a discretionary kind, could be better exercised by the surro-gate Judge, and the cause should not be removed. The personal disqualification of a surrogate Judge to pass upon an application, by reason of his interest as a shareholder in a company applicant, is not a ground for removal to the high court; for he can call in the aid of a neighbouring county Judge. Where the assets are separable, administration may be granted quoad, i.e., to the widow as to one part, and to the next of kin as to another part, or there may be a joint grant to the widow and next of kin. Re McLeod, 16 P. R. 261.

VI. MISCELLANEOUS CASES.

Ancillary Probate.]—A will executed by a person when domiciled in the Province of Quebec, before two notaries there, in accordance with the law of that Province, not acted unon or proved in any way before any court there, is not within the Act respecting Ancillary Probates and Letters of Administration, 51 Vict. c. 9 (0.) In re Madlaren, 22 A. R.

Interference with Business of Court—Administrator ad Litem.]—It is not intended by con. rule 311 that the business of the surrogate court should in a large measure be transferred to the high court; the intention is, to provide for necessities arising in the progress of an action where representation of an estate is required in the action, and there has not been carelessness or negligence on the part of the party who may require the appointment to be made. Under the circumstances of this case an application for the appointment of an administrator ad litem was refused. Re Chambliss and Canada Life Assurance Co., 12 P. R. 649, distinguished. Meir v. Wilson, 13 P. R. 33.

Revocation of Letters of Administration.]—The high court of justice for Ontario has no jurisdiction to revoke the grant by a surrogate court of letters of administration. McPherson v, Irvinc, 26 O. R. 438.

Subpoena to Registrar to Produce WII.]—An ex parte order under rule 31. T. 1856, will be granted in first instance, for a subpoena to issue to a registrar of the surrogate court, for the production of an original will, upon affidavit that said will is necessary to establish the case of the party applying, and that no notice has been given of his intention to use the probate or letters of administration cum test, annex, of same, and shewing good reason for not having given or giving such notice. Sladden v. Smith, 2 L. J. 233.

Trustees' Compensation.] — The old rule as to compensation of trustees has only been abrogated by the Surrogate Act so far as relates to trusts under wills. Wilson v. Proudfoot, 15 Gr. 103.

Where a suit for the administration of an estate is pending in the court of chancery, it is improper for the surrogate Judge to interfere by ordering the allowance of a commission to trustees or executors. Cameron v. Bethune, 15 Gr. 486.

 - I. Negligence in the Transmission of Messages.

Damages—Expenses—Loss of Profits.]—The plantiff, a shin owner, having been induced by defendants' error in the transmission of a message to suppose he could obtain a cargo of $0.000 instead of 3.000 bushels of wheat from Chatham to Oswego, abandoned a contract for a cargo from Detroit, and sent his vessel to Chatham, whence it sailed with 3.000 bushels only:—Held, that the damages which naturally resulted from the defendants' breach of duty were the expenses of sending the vessel to Chatham and back, and that the plaintiff was not entitled to the profit he might have made from carrying the $0.000 bushels. Lane v. Montreal Telegraph Co., 27 C. P. 23.

Incomplete Contract — Evidence—Original Messages,]—On the 1st September the polaritifi, living at Kingston, received a telegram from C., at Oswego: "Will give you eighty cents for rev," and on the next day he took to defendants' office the following reply: "Do accept you offer: ship to-morrow fifteen or twenty hundred." He paid defendants sixty cents, namely, thirty cents for sending the message to Ogdensburg, and thirty cents thence to Oswego. The price fell on the 5th or 6th, and it appeared that the plaintiff might before that time have communicated with C. by letter. In an action for negligence in not transmitting the message:—Held, that no damage could be recovered, for, even if it had been received by C., there would have been no complete contract binding him to take the rye. Quære, whether any and what damages could otherwise have been recovered from defendants. When a contract is attempted to be made out through the telegraph, if that can be done at all, the messages signed by the parties must be produced. not the transcript taken from the wire. King-horne v. Montreal Telegraph Co., 18 U. C. R.

But see R. S. O. 1897 c. 73, s. 51.

Liability beyond the Line-Damages.] Defendants owned a telegraph extending to Buffalo only, but in their printed handbills they advertised their line as "connecting with all the principal cities and towns in Canada and the United States," and they received the and the United States, and they received the charge for transmission to places beyond their line. The plaintiff had some flour in the hands of N., his agent at New York, and about 3 p.m. on the 23rd November delivered to de-fendants at Hamilton the following message, remains at finantion the following message: addressed to N., paying the charge to New York: "Am disposed to realize—sell 1,500 barrels," In an action for negligence in transmitting and delivering this message at New York:—Held, that the only negligence shewn was in delivering the message at New York, and, if defendants were liable for that, they would not be answerable for loss caused by a fall in the market, but, under the evidence set out in the case, for nominal damages only. Defendants could not be held liable for delay beyond their own line, but were bound only to transmit the message to Buffalo, and hand it to the American company there, paying the charge to New York. Stevenson v. Montreal Telegraph Co., 16 U. C. R. 530.

Evidence of Non-receipt of Message -Conditions. |-The plaintiff sent a telegram by defendants from Hamilton, addressed to one H., at New York, upon one of the blank forms furnished by defendants, which he had been accustomed to use. The terms, printed on the form, on which the company received the message, were-after stating that, to guard against mistakes, the sender of a message should order it to be repeated, that is, telegraphed back to the originating office, for which an additional charge would be madethat the company would not be liable for mistakes or delays in the delivery of unrepeated messages, beyond the amount received for sending them; "and the company is hereby made the agent of the sender, without liability, to forward any message over the lines of any other company when necessary to reach its destination." The plaintiff sued defendants, alleging that the message was never received, and that by defendants' neglect to deliver it he had lost the sale of certain wheat to which it related. The defendants' line terminated at Buffalo, where such messages were transferred to the Atlantic and Pacific Telegraph Co. H. having died, his clerk was called, who stated that he knew his business transactions; that this message had not been received by H.; and that he inquired of the Atlantic and Pacific Telegraph Co., and was told that they had not received it either :- Held, that the evidence was insufficient to shew the nonevidence was insumment to snew the non-transmission of the message, and that some one from the office of the Atlantic and Paci-lic Co., or of the defendants, should have been called. (2) That if this had been shewn defendants would not be liable, for the terms on which they received the message protected them; and that such terms were not unreasonable, and the plaintiff must be taken to have been aware of them. (3) Semble, that the liability of telegraph companies cannot be treated as analogous to or co-extensive with that of a common carrier. Baxter v. Dominion Telegraph Co., 37 U. C. R. 470.

Privity between Company and Sendee -Principal and Agent.] - Where on at Hamilton, delivered to defendants a Where one F sage to be transmitted to the plaintiff at Wakefield, Mass., paying for the transmission. and defendants failed to deliver the same to the plaintiff:—Held, following Playford v. United Kingdom Electric Telegraph Co., L. R. 4 Q. B. 706, that defendants' liability arose 4 Q. B. 706, that derendants mainty arose only from contract; that, as the message was sent by F. on his own account, and not on behalf of the plaintiff, there was no privity between the plaintiff and defendants, and the plaintiff could not maintain an action against defendants for their negligence. F Montreal Telegraph Co., 23 C. P. 150. Feaver v.

Moneys were deposited in the bank by various persons, who were given receipts therefor in the name of a person in the United States. which receipts were taken to the telegraph office, where information as to horse races being run in the United States was furnished to the holders of the receipts, who telegraphed instructions to the person there for whom the receipts were given, to place and who placed bets equivalent to the amounts deposited, on horses running in the races, and, on their winning, the amounts won were paid to the holders of the receipts at the third office by telegraphic instructions from the person making the bets in the United States :- Held, on the evidence and admissions to the above effect, that the defendant, who kept the telegraph office, was properly convicted of keeping a common betting house under ss. 197 and 198 of the criminal code. Regina v. Osborne, 27 O. R. 185.

Forgery.]—The prisoner, at Woodstock, with intent to defrand, wrote out a telegraph message purporting to be sent by one C, at Hamilton, to McK. at Woodstock, authorizing McK, to furnish the prisoner with funds, which was delivered to McK, and upon the faith of it McK, indorsed a draft for $85 drawn by the prisoner on C, on which the prisoner obtained the money:—Held, that the prisoner was guilty of forgery. Regina v. Stewart, 25 C, P, 440.

TELEPHONE.

Assessment and Taxes—Poles, Wires, Conduits, and Cables.]—In assessing for purposes of taxation the poles, wires, conduits, and cables of a telephone company, the cost of construction, or the value as part of a going concern, is not the test; they must be valued, in the assessment division in which they happen to be, just as materials which, if sold or taken in payment of a just debt from a solvent debtor, would have to be removed and taken away by the purchaser or creditor. In re Bell Telephone Co. and City of Hamilton, 25 A. R. 351.

Damage by Wires.]—House being moved coming in contact with telephone wire across the street, which caused some bricks to fall on a passer-by and injure him. Liability. Houeard v. City of St. Thomas, 19 O. R. 719.

Interference by Wires of Electric Light Company with Wires of Telephone Company.]—See Bell Telephone Co. v. Belleville Electric Light Co., 12 O. R. 571.

Interference with Public Travel— Poles on Street.]—A telephone company having permission by its Act of incorporation to erect poles on the streets of towns and incorporated villages, so as not to interfere with the public right of travel, is not relieved from liability for damages when it plants the poles on the highway in such a way as to become an element of danger to the public, although, as required by the Act of incorporation, the poles are planted under the supervision of the municipality. Bonn v. Bell Telephone Co., 30 O. R. 636.

Monopoly.]—A by-law passed by the city council ratified an agreement between the city and a telephone company, providing that no other person, firm, or company should, for five years, have any license or permission to use any of the public streets, &c., of the city for the purpose of carrying on any telephone business:—Held, that this by-law was in contravention of s. 286 of the Municipal Act, 55 Vict. c. 42 (O.), and was ultra vires of the council. Re Robinson and City of St. Thomas, 23 O. R. 489.

Navigation—Interference with Submarine Cable—Notice,]—By the regulation passed by the Quebec Harbour Commissioners in 1895, and subsequently approved by the governor in council and duly published, the commissioners prohibited vessels from casting anchor within a certain defined space of the waters of the harbour. Some time after this regulation had been made and published, the commissioners entered into a contract with the plaintiffs whereby the latter were empowered to lay their telephone cable along the bed of that part of the harbour where vessels had been prohibited from casting anchor. No marks or signs had been placed in the harbour to indicate where the cable was laid. The defendant vessel, in ignorance of the fact that the cable was there, entered upon the prohibited space, and cast anchor. Her anchor caught in the cable, and in the effort to disengage it the cable was broken:—Held, that she was liable in damages therefor. Bell Telephone v. The Rapid, 5 Ex. C. R. 413.

Service—Contract.]—The Bell Telephone Company carried on the business of executing orders by telephone for messenger boys, cabs, &c., which it sold to the Electric Despatch Company, agreeing among other things not to transmit or give, in any manner, directly or indirectly, any orders for messengers, cabs, Ac., to any person or persons, company or cor-poration, except to the Electric Despatch Company. The Great North-Western Tele-graph Company afterwards established a mesgraph Company afterwards established a mes-senger service for the purposes of which the wires of the telephone company were used. In an action for breach of the agreement with the Electric Despatch Company and for an injunction to restrain the telephone company from allowing their wires to be used for giving orders for messengers, &c.:—Held, that the telephone company, being ignorant of the nature of communications sent over their wires by subscribers, did not "transmit" such orders within the meaning of the agreement; that the use of the wires by subscribers could not be restricted; and that the telephone company were under no obligation, even if it were possible to do so, to take measures to ascertain the nature of all communications with a view to preventing such orders being given. tric Despatch Co. of Toronto v. TENANT FOR LIFE.

Investment — Loss — Apportionment — Remainderman.]—Where a loss occurs under a mortgage of trust funds, the income of which is payable to a life tenant, the loss should be apportioned between the tenant for life and the remainderman by adding the amount actually realized from the security to the amount of interest theretofore received by the tenant for life and dividing the whole sum between the latter and the remainderman in the proportion in which they would have been entitled to share if the security had been paid in full, the tenant for life giving credit for the amounts already received. In re Fos-ter, Lloyd v. Carr. 45 Ch. D. 629, followed. In re Plumb, 27 O. R. 601.

Permissive Waste—Growth of Weeds.]
—An action for permissive waste will not lie against a tenant for life. In re Cartwright, 41 Ch. D, 532, followed. The spread of noxious weeds from natural causes, or by the action of cattle depasturing or eating hay or straw coming from the fields where the weeds were, and the failure to stop the growth thereof, is no evidence of waste, but only of illhusbandry; and the fact that there is a stat-ute, R. S. O. 1887 c. 202, for the prevention of the spread of noxious weeds, does not make any difference. Patterson v. Central Canada L. and S. Co., 29 O. R. 134.

Renewal of Lease—Carrying on Business on Premises—Profits—Account.]—A widow was entitled under her husband's will to the use and enjoyment of all his property dur-ing her life. It was conceded that she was entitled to the enjoyment in specie of the personal estate. The testator owned a brick-field on leasehold land, which was a going concern at the time of his death. This and the plant in connection therewith the tenant for life took possession of, and went on with the working of it. She put other assets of the estate into this business and extended it, and when she died it was still a going At her expiration of the term of her husband's lease, she obtained a new one, cover ing a larger area of land:—Held, that the widow, having elected to carry on the business on these premises, did so for the ultimate benefit of the estate. She was entitled to all the income, earnings, and profits derivable therefrom each year, in so far as she applied therefrom each year, in so far as she applied them to the maintenance of the family, or in the acquisition of other property, or in the paying off of mortgages; but whatever profits went into the business to increase it, and whatever plant, stock, and belongings of the business remained on the premises or else-where at her death, became the property of the husband's estate. An account ngainst her executor was directed, and the scope of the inquiry defined. Wakefield v. Wakefield, 32 O. R. 36 O. R. 36.

Rent-Apportionment - Remainderman.] -A tenant for life, who had leased the premises of which she was life tenant, died a few days after a half year's rent, which was payable in advance, became due. On the day payable in advance, became que. On the gay of her death part of the rent was remitted to her and was received by her executor, to whom the balance was paid on the representation that he was entitled to it :- Held, that the rent was received by the executor for the use of those entitled to it, and was there-fore apportionable between the executor and the remainderman, who had confirmed the possession of the tenant, and that the executor was entitled to an order for repayment by persons, third parties, claiming under the will to whom he had paid it. Dennis v. Hoover, 27 O. R.

TENANTS IN COMMON.

Account-Action at Law - Bailiff-Coparceners.]—An action for an account will not lie at common law between tenants in common or joint tenants, unless there has been an appointment of one by the other as bailiff. But under 5 Anne c. 16, it will lie against one tenant in common, or joint tenant, as bailiff, whenever he has entered and taken more than his just share of the profits, whether by appointment of his co-tenant or not. Semble, co-parceners cannot sue each other in an action of account. Gregory v. Connolly, 7 U. C. R. 500.

- Improvements-Allowances-Interest-Master's Office.1-A tenant in common who holds possession of, manages, and receives the rent of, the common property, which is subject to an incumbrance, is entitled when called on for an account by his co-tenant, to be allowed for advances properly and reasonably made by him, for repairs and improvements, and for principal and interest on the incumbrance, with interest from the time the advances are made. The mode of taking the account and computing interest discussed. Where accounts are brought into the master's office by the accounting party, with the vouchers and the usual affidavit of verification, and no notice of objection is given, the acand no notice of objection is given, the accounts are taken to be sufficiently proved. Judgment in 17 P. R. 379 affirmed. In re Curry, Curry v. Curry, 25 A. R. 267.

- Profits of Land.]-Where one of several tenants in common of a plaster bed, was in sole possession of the property, and had in sole possession of the property, and had sold portions of the plaster, an account of his receipts therefrom was ordered in favour of his co-tenants. Curtis v. Coleman, 22 Gr.

Contribution—Costs of Action against Stranger.]—Where costs were incurred by a tenant in common suing on behalf of himself and his co-tenants in restraining the committing of waste on the joint property by a stranger :- Held, that on its being shewn that the suit was necessary and proper, and that it resulted in benefit to the co-owners, they should share the expense in proportion to the advantage they had derived from the suit. Gage v. Mulholland, 16 Gr. 145.

Conversion of Chattel by Co-tenants -Right of Action.]-An action for conver-sion of his interest in a chattel lies by one tenant in common against his co-tenants in common if the chattel owned in common is destroyed by them, or so dealt with by them as, in effect, to put an end to his rights. In this case the removal of a brick making machine to a foreign country was held sufficient to support the right of action, the plain-tiff's power of enforcing his rights in the courts of this Province being thus interfered with. McIntosh v. Port Huron Petrified Brick Co., 27 A. R. 262.

Crops -- Conversion -- Trover.] -- H., by agreement with defendant, planted sixteen and a half acres of defendant's land with Indian a half acres of defendant's and with hondrecorn and other crops, the agreement being that H. was to do all the work, and defendant to receive for his share as much Indian corn as should represent the portion of the land sown with sugar corn and potatoes, and onethird of the Indian corn, and that H. was to have the remainder. Subsequently, H., being indebted to the plaintiff on a note, sold his interest in the growing crop to the plaintiff, the price being allowed on the note. At a later period H. executed a bill of sale of the crop to the defendant, who afterwards claimed the entire crop as his own, and harvested it: -Held, that H. and defendant were tenants in common of the crop of Indian corn: that one tenant in common cannot maintain trespass or trover against his co-tenant for merely reaping and harvesting the crop; but he may, if his co-tenant has consumed the crop, or dealt with it so that he cannot retake it or pursue his remedies against the persons who have possession of it; and that, under the circumstances of the case, the court might assume after the verdict, in the absence of any question raised on the point, that such events had happened as entitled the plaintiff to maintain his action against the defendant for conversion. Brady v. Arnold, 19 C. P. 42, See, also, Culver v. Macklem, 11 U. C. R.

Entry by one Tenant in Common— Effect of, as to Limitations Act.]—See Hartley v. Maycock, 28 O. R. 508.

Injunction-Crops - Infants - Possession-Trustee-Account.]-Although the general rule is, that the mere fact of one tenant in common holding possession of the entire estate will not render him liable to a co-tenant. who might himself enter and enjoy the pos session with the other, and the court will not in such a case interfere with the dealing of such co-tenant in regard to the property; still, where the co-tenant in possession was the mother of the other co-tenants, all of whom were infants at the time of her second marriage, the court, at the instance of one of the children who had attained majority, restrained the husband and wife from selling restrained the hispand and whe from sening or disposing of the crops of the current year or the proceeds thereof, unless they under-took to bring into court one-third of such proceeds; but refused to interfere with the possession of the mother and her husband in respect of previous years; although as to such years the mother might have been accountable to her infant children as trustee for them. Bates v. Martin, 12 Gr. 490.

aris, being part owners of a schooner and in sole possession, excluded therefrom the plaintiff, who was the other part owner, and the plaintiff did not allege that there had been any dispute as to the employment of the vessel, an injunction to restrain defendants' proceedings was refused. Baker v. Cascy, 17 Gr. 195.

 from digging earth for bricks on the joint property. Dougall v. Foster, 4 Gr. 319.

A tenant in common, upon satisfying the court that the cutting of the timber by his co-tenant operates to the destruction of the litheritance, is entitled to an injunction. Prondpoot v. Bush, 7 Gr. 518.

— Waste—Partition.]—Although the general principle is, that one joint tenant will not be restrained from committing waste at the instance of his co-tenant, the rule is different where a bill has been already filed for a partition of the estate. Lassert v. Salyerds, 17 Gr. 109.

— Waste—Trustee.]—Semble, no injunction will be granted between tenants in common, except in cases of actual destruction. But where a tenant in common of one moiety was trustee of the other under a will, and was felling timber for his own benefit in breach of his trust, he was enjoined from doing so. Christie v. Saunders, 2 Gr. 670.

Party Wall.]—M., owner of two warehouses, Nos. 5 and 7 (the dividing wall being necessary for the support of both), executed a deed with power of sale of No. 5, yay of marriage settlement on his daught. Not with the set of confirmation to the purchaser of No. 5 from the trustees of the marriage settlement by a description which, it was contended by the purchaser, conveyed absolutely the freehold estate in the party wall and the land covered by it. An action being brought by the executors of M. to have it declared that the wall in question was a party wall:—Held, that upon the execution of the deed by way of marriage settlement of No. 5, the wall common to the two warehouses, Nos. 5 and 7, became a party wall of which the owners of the warehouses were tenants in common. Lewis v. Allison, 30 S. C. R. 173.

Title by Possession—Acquisition of, by Tenants in Common.]—See Brock v. Benness, 29 O. R. 468.

Vendor's Lien—Performance of Agrement.)—In the absence of agreement or circumstances operating to the contrary, a vendor's lien arises whenever land is conveyed in consideration of acts to be done by the grantee: the right is not limited to cases of conveyance for a money consideration. Where, therefore, upon the partition of a niece of land held by tenants in common, one grantee, as part of the consideration for his grant, covenanted to obtain for the other tenants in common a release of the contingent interest of two persons in the land conveyed to them, it was held that a lien attached upon the portion conveyed to him for the due performance of this covenant. TENDER.

 - Generally—Mode and Sufficiency of Tender, 6845.
 - 2. Dispensing with Tender, 6847.
 - 3. Effect of Tender, 6848.
 - 4. Pleading, 6848.
- II. OF OTHER THINGS, 6850.

I. OF MONEY.

1. Generally-Mode and Sufficiency of Tender.

Conditional Tender.]—A tender to the holder of a mortgage (who claimed a larger sum) with a condition that the mortgage should be given up, was held bad, as a conditional tender. Peers v. Allen, 19 Gr. 98.

Demand of Receipt—Refusal on other Grounds—Tender post Diem.]—A person tendering money is entitled to require a receipt. Where on tendering mortgage money a receipt was required, and the plaintiff did not object on that ground, but gave a different reason for refusing to receive the money:—Held, that the tender was good. The tender was made on the 14th April, the day when the money fell due, and on the following day it was again tendered, and refused because a receipt was insisted upon:—Held, not to support the plea of tender on the 14th, for it was after the day; but that, to avoid the effect of the previous tender, the plaintiff should have demanded the exact sum before offered. Lockridge v. Lacey, 30 U. C. R. 494.

Lien—Evidence — Waiver.] — Defendant having an admitted lien upon a buggy for repairs, it was held, on the evidence set out in the case, that there was no sufficient evidence of a tender of the sum, or a waiver of it. Lake v. Biggar, 11 C. P. 170.

Non-production of Money.] — Tender held sufficient, though money not actually produced. Long v. Long, 17 Gr. 251.

— Readiness to Produce — Dispensing with.]—In order to constitute a legal tender, the money must either be produced and shewn to the creditor, or its production expressly or impliedly dispensed with. Where, therefore, to prove a tender of a quarter's rent, for which the defendant had distrained, the evidence shewed that the tenant, after refusing to pay some charges and costs which the landlord claimed in addition to the rent, said to the landlord. "Here is the rent,"—which he had, and told the landlord he had, in his right hand in a desk—but did not produce it or shew it to the landlord, who said nothing and left the premises:—Held, that there was no evidence of a tender, or of a dispensation with a tender. Matheson v, Kelly, 24 C. P. 598.

— Readiness to Produce — Refusal to Accept.]—G. and B. went on behalf of defendant to make a tender to plaintiff. Defendant had counted out the money to G., who gave it to B. G. told the plaintiff he had come to pay him that sum on behalf of defendant, naming it, but not holding the money exposed in his hand. The plaintiff twice refused it, as he said his demand was larger. B. had counted the money before he went there, and heard the tender and refusal, having the money ready to produce:—Held, that the tender was clearly sufficient. Reynolds v. Allan, 10 U. C. R. 350.

— Refusal to Receive — Costs.] — A sheriff sent his clerk to plaintiff's attorney before action brought, saying that certain moneys collected on an execution in favour of plaintiff were ready to be paid. The clerk had not the money with him, nor did he offer to go for it: but the attorney said he would not receive it unless the costs of a rule on the sheriff to return the writ were also paid:—Held, that these facts would not sustain a plea of tender. Thomson v. Hamilton, 5 O. S. 111.

Offer by Letter before Suit — Tender after Suit—Costs, —Held, following Powney v. Blomberg, S Jur. 748, that a letter by defendant's solicitor to the plaintiff's solicitor before suit, offering to pay the plaintiff's demand, was not a tender. A tender of the amount of a claim, after suit brought upon it, must include costs incurred up to the date of the tender, Garforth v. Cairns, 9 C. L. J. 212.

Production of Money—Refusal to Name Amount.]—A. sends a waggon to B. to make the wood work. B., having finished, sends the waggon in A.'s name to a blacksmith for the iron work, and gets it back. A. calls for the waggon. B. allows him to remove the box from his shop into the highway, but, on his returning to the shop to take out the remaining part. B. refuses to let it go till he is paid his bill. A. holds in his hands a quantity of notes, and offers to pay B. his demand if he will tell him what it is. B. will not name any sum, and insists unon detaining the waggon:—Held, that it was for the jury to determine whether B. had not had full opportunity of seeing that A. was tendering him a sum sufficient to meet his demand, and if they were satisfied that he had, then that the tender was good, though B. had refused to name the amount of his bill. Milburn v. Milburn, 4 U. C. R. 179.

dence—Juvy.]—In proof of an alleged tender to the bailiff, the plaintiff said that he asked the bailiff for a bill of demands, with all costs, and he would pay him: that he, plaintiff, had then $87 in his hand, which was sufficient to pay the rent and costs, and said, "Here is your money:" but that the bailiff refused to receive it. This was denied by the bailiff; but the question was left to the jury, who found that there was a tender. The goods distrained were afterwards sold by the bailiff; but the question was left to the finding of the jury could not be interfered with, and there must be held to have been a tender to the bailiff; and that the landlord was responsible for the bailiff sact. Matheson v. Kelly, 24 C. P. 508, distinguished. Howell v. Listovet Rink and Park Vo., 13 O. R. 476.

Railway Fare—Refusal to Pay — Subsequent Production of Money.]—The plaintiff got upon the train without a ticket, and when asked for his fare declined paying then, as he said he had not made up his mind how far he should go. The conductor said he must decide, and afterwards, on his declining again on the same ground, stopped the train and put him out, at a place about a mile and a quarter from the last station, and within half a mile of a house. The vlaintiff at last tendered a $20 gold vice, telling the conductor to take his fare $(81.35) out of it:—Held, that the plaintiff had refused to pay his fare within the meaning of 14 & 15 Vict. c, 51, s, 21, s, s, 8, 6, and that the conductor was justified in what he did. Falton v. Grand Trunk R. W. Co., 17 U. C. R. 428.

Tender Accompanied by Protest.]—A tender of mortrage money with a statement that the party tendering did not consider the amount tendered due, and that the other would be compelled to repay the excess:—Held, not invalidated by this statement. Pecers v. Allen, 19 Gr. 98.

2. Dispensing with Tender.

Excessive Demand - Excuse for Nontender—Lien.]—To an action of replevin for staves and shingles, defendant pleaded that the plaintiff had delivered to him certain timber to be made by him into flour barrels and shingles in the way of his trade; that he made part of the same into the staves and shingles sued for; and that, the plaintiff not having paid him, he detained them, claiming a lien for the price of his work. The plaintiff replied that these staves were part of a large quantity manufactured by defendant for the plaintiff; that the defendant had delivered part to the plaintiff, and had wrongfully disposed others, and, when the plaintiff demanded the staves in question, refused to give them up until paid for the price of manufacturing all he had made, wherefore the plaintiff alleged that the lien was forfeited:—Held, on demurrer, replication bad, for, though the lien claimed was too large, the plaintiff was not thereby excused from a tender of the amount due upon the staves sued for. Kendal v. Fitzgerald, 21 U. C. R. 585.

Held, that the mere fact of a warehouseman who has a lien on goods for a certain sum for storage, claiming also to hold them for an untenable claim as due either to himself or a third person, does not dispense with a tender of the sum due, and amount to a conversion, unless the evidence fairly warrants the conclusion that such tender would be useless, as it would be refused; and that in this case the evidence set out was insufficient for that purpose. Llado v, Morgan, 23 C. P. 517.

Express or Implied Dispensation— Lien.]—Where the holder of goods detains them for different claims, as to one of which he has a lien and the other not, the owner must tender the proper amount, unless the holder either expressly or by fair implication dispenses with it. Kendal v. Fitzgerald, 21 C. C. R. 585; Buffalo and Lake Huron R. W. Co, v. Gordon, 16 U. C. R. 283; McBride v. Bailey, 6 C. P. 523.

Neglect to Furnish Statement.]—Defendant having neglected to furnish a statement of his claim in respect of the advances made by him in pursuance of the agreement between the parties, in consequence whereof the plaintiff was unable to tender the proper amount due, the plaintiff was held exonerated from making any tender. McSucceny v. Kay. 15 Gr. 432.

See Harper v, Paterson, 14 C. P. 538, post II.; Thomson v, Hamilton, 5 O. S. 111, ante I: Lake v, Biggar, 11 C. P. 170, ante 1; Matheson v, Kelly, 24 C. P. 598, ante 1; Western Assurance Co. v, McLean, 29 U. C. R. 57, post 4.

3. Effect of Tender.

Costs.]—When defendant had obeyed an order and tendered a sufficient sum for the costs thereof, which the plaintiff's solicitor declined to accept, the defendant was given his costs of motion less the sum tendered. Franklin v. Bradley, 2 Ch. Ch. 444.

Mortgage — Interest—Costs.]—Where a tender of debt and interest had been made to a mortgage, pending actions on the mortgage, and the mortgage's solicitor sent to the mortgager's solicitor his bills of costs incurred in the suits, and the latter considered them too large, but offered to pay any amount which the master should tax, it was held that the mortgage was entitled, as a matter of strict right, to go on with his actions notwithstanding such offer. Nixon v. Hunter, 17 Gr. 96.

Interest.]—In equity a tender by a mortgager stops interest, unless the mortgagee shews that the money was afterwards used by the mortgager, and a profit made of it, Knapp v, Boucer, 17 Gr. (69).

Taxes — Payment.] — The defendant, as treasurer, returned the plaintiff's land as part of a tract on which taxes were unpaid. The plaintiff tendered the amount of taxes on his own portion, which defendant refused to accept, and the land was sold:—Held, that an action would not lie against the treasurer for not accepting the redemption money, the tender to and refusal by the latter being equivalent to payment; and that, therefore, the plaintiff had not lost his land. Cunningham v. Markland, 5 O. S. 645.

4. Pleading.

Declaration for Unlawful Distress-Averment of Tender—Necessity for.] — The first count alleged that one H. held premises as tenant to defendants at a certain rent; that the plaintiff's goods being there, defendants wrongfully seized the same, as well as all the tenant's goods, as a distress for alleged arrears of rent, to wit, $401, then claimed by defendants, and afterwards sold the same for such arrears and costs, whereas only $38 was really due, for which one-fifth of the goods would have sufficed, and the tenant's goods alone would have been more than sufficient :- Held, under the authority of French v. Phillips, 1 H. & N. 654, that the count disclosed no cause of action, for, as a count for distraining for more than was due, it averred no tender of the proper sum, and though the plaintiff could make no tender, he could avail himself of one made by the tenant. Huskinson v. Lawrence, 25 U. C. R. 58.

Plea of Tender — Foreign Promissory Noses—"Currency"—Equivalent.]—To the first and second counts of a declaration on two notes, dated respectively 11th September and 29th November, 1890, for the respective sums of $500.24 and $388.85, payable six months after date, defendant pleaded that the notes were signed and entered into in the State of Illinois, to be paid when due in United States currency, and alleged a tender by defendant before action of $606.12 of lawful money of Canada, which was at the time last aforesaid equal to plaintiffs' claim, and a refusal by plaintiff to accept same.—Held, on demurrer, plea bad: firstly, for alleging the amount tendered to have been equal to plaintiffs' claim into the day of tender, before action brought, instead of at the time of the maturity of the notes sued upon, with subsequent interest, &c.; and, secondly, for alleging that the amount tendered was equal to plaintiffs' claim, instead of "equal in value to a certain sum of the currency of the United States," &c. though, semble, this might be only ground of special demurrer. White v. Baker, 15 C. P. 292.

— Offer to Pay—Dispensing with Payweat.]—Declaration against a surety on a bond, conditioned that one L., the plaintiffs' agent, should, whenever requested, pay over to them all moneys received on their accounts, alleging various sums received and not paid.
Plea, that L. paid over all sums received except $50.50, as to which, and the causes of action in respect thereof. L. was ready and willing and offered to pay and account for the same in accordance with the bond and condition, and the plaintiffs, motwithstanding, refused to accept from him the said sum, and by their own acts prevented him from paying over the same in accordance with said bond and condition:—Held, a good plea. Western Assurance Co. v. McLean, 29 U. C. R. 51.

Trespass.]—Where in trespass for taking staves the plaintiff recovered £20, where the law on some of the facts which were improperly elicited at the trial was doubtful but it appeared that the plaintiff was entitled to recover something in that form of action, and the residue in another form, a new trial was refused, although a tender could have been pleaded to the amount of the whole claim if the action had been brought in another form. Ballard v. Ransom, 2 O. S. 70.

Plea of Tender and Refusal — Readiness, — A plea of tender and refusal, and that defendant was always ready to pay at a particular place:—Held, sufficient. Thompson v. Hamilton, 5 O. S. 443.

Plea of Tender and Payment into Court.]—See Hudon Cotton Co. v. Canada Shipping Co., 13 S. C. R. 401; Davis v. National Assurance Co. of Ireland, 16 P. R. 116.

Plea of Tender without Payment into Court—Judicature Act.)—This action was to recover money as compensation for land expropriated, and for other relief. Defendants pleaded a defence in denial, and also a tender of $400 and interest, but did not pay the amount into court: Held, that the defence of tender without payment into court was a good defence under the O. J. Act, and a motion to strike out the defence, or to compel payment into court, or for judgment for the amount, with leave to proceed for a further amount, was refused. Demorest v. Midland R. W. Co., 10 P. R. 640.

Replication of Tender—Trover—Lien.]

Trover for bills of exchange. Plea, a lien

II. OF OTHER THINGS.

Of Bank Notes. | See Conn v. Merchants Bank of Canada, 30 C. P. 380.

Of Cognovit.]—A., having taken a likeness for B., agreed to take in payment therefor $20 in cash and a cognovit for $70, payable at a future date. After receipt of $20 and tender of the cognovit:—Held, that the agreement was a waiver of A.'s right to lien, but did not amount to an accord and satisfaction. Dempsey v. Carson, 11 C. P. 462.

Of Goods — Damages — Offer pendente Lite.]—Action for the value of 50 kegs of butter delivered by plaintiff to defendants role at ender of the butter to plaintiff to defendants role at the carry from G. to T. Defendants relied upon a tender of the butter to plaintiff as several parallel and the plaintiff of the product of the plaintiff of the product of the plaintiff of the plaintiff of the plaintiff of M., and for which M. had recovered against the plaintiff sown risk:—Held, wholly illusory, and not to partake of any of the incidents of a legal tender; and that the plaintiff was entitled to recover the full value of the property. Brill v. Grand Trunk R. W. Co., 20 C. P. 440.

Of Promissory Note.]—Where a plaintiff contracts to receive for work done at its completion a certain sum of money, and then agrees to accept from defendant the note of B. for the sum, he may sue for the money, if the note be not tendered at the time specified; a subsequent tender of the note and refusal will be no defence. Fisher v. Ferris, 6 U. C.

Of Renewal Note and Interest.]-Action on a promissory note, to which defendants pleaded in substance that the plaintiff, who at the time held a note for the same amount, agreed, on certain conditions, to renew it from time to time for three years; that it was repeatedly renewed as agreed; and that, when the note sued on became due, a renewal note and the interest were tendered and refused, though the three years had not expired. At the trial it was shewn that previous renewals had been made by leaving the renewal note at the agency of the Bank of Montreal in Cobourg, paying the interest, and taking up the old note; and when the note now sued upon became due, a renewal note and the interest were tendered to M., the agent of the bank, who refused to accept the same, alleging he had no refused to accept the same, alleging he had no instructions. All the renewals, except one which was made with the plaintiff personally, were made at the bank:—Held, that the tender of the renewal note and interest to M., the agent of the Bank of Montreal, where the note was payable, was a sufficient tender, as all the other renewals were made there; that defendant was not bound to tender another renewal and the interest at the expiration of three months from the last tender, as plaintiff had, by his refusal to accept the former tender, repudiated the agreement, and defendant was not informed that he would accept such renewal. Delivery—Acceptance.]—Where the plaintife outracted under seal to deliver timber of certain specified dimensions, and it fell short of the size, but was accepted and used:—Held, that he might recover on the common counts. White v. Manning, 13 U. C. R. 640.

— Non-acceptance.]—Where in an action for goods sold and delivered the plaintiff shewed a contract between defendant and himself for the sale and purchase of 21 sticks of timber at £2 10s, per thousand feet, and it was proved that the timber had been delivered at the place appointed by defendant, when the agents of the plaintiff and defendant inspected the whole and measured eight of the sticks, the value of which was paid into court, and defendant repudiated the rest, as not being of merchantable quality:—Held, that there was no acceptance of the residue, by which the plaintiff could recover as for goods sold, nor any binding agreement within the statute. Grover v. Cameron. 6 O. S. 106.

— Time for Payment.]—A. was cutting timber on B.'s land; B. refused to allow him unless C., who was to get the timber when cut, should become answerable to B. for it; C. agreed to become so, and A. was permitted by B. to take away the timber. It was further agreed between B. and C., that upon the timber being passed at Bytown free from duties to the government—that its, passed as private timber—B. should be paid by C. the price the government would have paid for it had it been Crown timber:—Held, that upon this oral agreement B. could sue C. for goods sold and delivered, when the time arrived for passing the timber through Bytown. Settlement to be finally made inside of thirty days in cash, less two per cent, for the dimension timber which is at John's Island:"—Held, that the last clause did not give the purchasers thirty days after delivery for payment; that it provided for delivery by vendor and payment by purchasers within thirty days from the date of the contract; and that, if purchasers accepted the timber after the expiration of thirty days from such date, an event not provided for in the contract, an action for the price could be brought immediately after the acceptance. Victoria Harbour Lumber Co. v. Irwin, 24 8. C. R. 607.

Rate of Payment — Measurement.] — Where the plaintiff by writing agreed to furnish timber, to be paid for at a certain rate per foot, lineal measure:—Held, that he was entitled to recover such price per lineal foot according to the length of each stick, not according to the length of a bridge constructed of the timber, and for which it was obtained. Brown v. Zimmerman, 15 U. C. R. 563.

See Clarke v. White, 28 C. P. 293, 308 n., 3 S. C. R. 309, post 3; Lapp v. Firstbrook, 24 C. P. 239; Georgian Bay Lumber Co. v. Thompson, 35 U. C. R. 64.

2. Breach of Contract.

Failure to Make Road—Damages for—Overpayment of Price.]—The plaintiff agreed to cut, draw, and deliver for defendants at a specified place 4,000 standard logs at 50 cents each: also, to make all branch roads, defendants are suggested by the plaintiff which is to be cut on the lots mentioned in the schedule. A hereon indorsed." This schedule enumerated five lots, containing 1,800 acres: —Held, that the defendants were not bound to point out to the plaintiff the trees to be cut on the lots in question, but that it was sufficient that there were trees on these lots, as the jury found, enough to make 4,000 logs. The jury, in answer to questions, found that the plaintiff had cut and delivered only 600 logs, and had received $400, so that he was overpaid $100; but they found also that defendants did not make the main road in reasonable time to enable the plaintiff to get the logs out, by which the plaintiff and sustained $10 damages:—Held, that the plaintiff was entitled to a verdict for $10, notwithstanding that he had been overpaid. Stubbs v. Johnston, 38 U. C. R. 486.

Non-acceptance—Condition Precedent—Inspection—Custom—Waiver,] — Defendant agreed in writing to buy from the plaintiff certain quantities of different kinds of lumber specified, "culls all out, and all good merchantable lumber by G. F. or J. Sills's inspection." Plaintiff sued upon this agreement, alleging that all things were done, &c., necessary to entitle him to have the lumber accepted, yet that defendant, having accepted part, refused to accept the residue. It appeared that part of the lumber had been shipped by defendant's order to one P. at Buffalo, and there was evidence of a new agreement as to the inspection, but no inspection had been made. It was also proved, without objection, that according to the usage in such cases it is the purchaser's duty to procure the inspector. At the trial, the case being taken in defendant's absence, it was held that defendant was bound to procure inspection, and that the declaration should have been for not doing so; and, as an amendment was not accepted on the terms imposed, a verdiet was entered for defendant:—Held, that under the contract the inspection by G. F. or J. Sills was a condition precedent to defendant's obligation to accept the lumber; but that defendant might waive this condition or agree to a different inspector. The court, however, refused to amend and enter a verdiet for the plaintiff; but granted a new trial on payment of costs, to enable the plaintiff to amend, and to have the question as to such alleged waiver and substitution properly tried. Aitcheson v. Cook, 37 t. C. R. 490.

Non-delivery—Condition Precedent—In-spection—Custom—Pleading.] — The declara-tion was for breach of defendant's covenant to get out, make, manufacture, and deliver to the plaintiffs upon the canal at the Dundas basin, certain timber and masts, setting out the equality, description, and price, with an averment of the performance of all conditions precedent. Third plea, setting out in full the agreement, containing the covenant sued upon, agreement, containing the covenant succuping, agreement, containing the covenant succuping manuely, that defendant would get out, make, manufacture, and deliver to plaintiffs on or before 1st April, 1874, upon the bank of the canal at Dundas, at a convenient place for canal at Dundas, at a convenient place for putting the same in the canal, certain descrip-tions of timber and masts, specified to be first-class in every particular, and subject to the inspection of a Quebec culler, payments to be made by plaintiffs from time to time as the work progressed, and the balance when the whole of the timber and masts were delivered at the canal; that the timber and masts so soon as made and manufactured should be marked with plaintiffs' trade mark, and become their property so soon as each stick was inspected. measured, and culled by the said culler. The plea then averred that by the usage and custom of the timber trade, in respect of which the said deed was made, and in which plaintiffs and defendant were engaged, and by the terms of the deed, it became the plaintiffs' duty to cause the said timber and masts to be duty to cause the said timber and masses the said timber and masses the place where they were being cut, and before delivery by defendant at the canal basin at Dundas; and that the plaintiffs, the page of the plant of the plan though duly notified by the defendant to have the same so inspected, neglected to do so, whereby defendant, though ready and willing, was prevented from performing his covenant: -Held, bad, there being nothing to shew what the custom was from which defendant's duty arose, and no allegation that the timber and masts were ever manufactured and ready for inspection. Semble, that, even if this had inspection. Semile, that, even it has not been averred, such a custom or usage would have been inadmissible, its effect being inconsistent with the defendant's express covenant to deliver at the basin subject to inspection; and, even if such usage could prevail, defendant could have appointed a culler, so that the plaintiffs' neglect to do so could not be said to have prevented defendant's performance. Hayes v. Nesbitt, 25 C. P. 101.

Pleading.] — Declaration, that the plaintiff agreed to buy and defendant to sell 20,000 cubic feet of good merchantable board timber of the quality and manufacture therein mentioned, to be delivered, as in the agreement set out, not later than 10th May next ensuing, the plaintiff to pay at the rate of 12c. per cubic foot for timber so delivered, at the times and in the manner in the agreement set out; that the plaintiff, in pursuance thereof, paid $300 on account; and all conditions were fulfilled, &c., yet defendant did not deliver the said timber or any part thereof. Plea, on equitable grounds, setting out the agreement in full, shewing what the quality and manufacture were to be like, and when and where the delivery was to take place; also the mode of payment, namely, the $300 down, acknowledging the receipt thereof, and two-thirds as the timber should be delivered, when each 10,000 feet was hauled to the named points. The plea then averred a delivery at the proper places therefor, and of the proper quality and description, before the named day, of the first 10,000 feet, and a notification to plaintiff of the same, and of its being ready for delivery to him on payment of such two-thirds, and that in default of such payment the said timber would be resold. The plea further averred that during all that time defendant was ready and willing and offered to deliver to plaintiff the first 10,000 feet, and also the remaining 10,000 feet, but that the plaintiff, though he received due notice, refused, within a reasonable time thereafter, to accept and receive the said timber, and to pay the said two-thirds of the price or any part thereof, whereupon defendant after a reasonable time resold the timber :- Held, that the plea was a good answer as regards the first 10,000 feet, payment of the two-thirds price being a condition precedent to delivery; but no answer as regards the second 10,000 feet, and therefore bad as being pleaded to the whole; for it could not be read as alleging an offer then to deliver the second quantity, because that would have entitled defendant to the whole price, whereas non-payment of the two-thirds only was complained of, and the notice of resale only applied to the first 10,000 feet; nor could it be read as an offer and refusal to take the second 10,000 feet at all, or to go on with the contract, so as to discharge the defendant. Held, also, that a replication alleging a notification by defendant to plaintiff of his inability to deliver the 20,000 feet, and promising to re-turn the $300 with expenses, but that defendant failed either to perform the contract or return the money, was bad. Held, also, that the declaration was defective for uncertainty; but that the defect was cured by the plea. Reid v. Robertson, 25 C. P. 568.

Construction of Contract—Right of Action—Readiness to Accept—Time.] — The defendant signed a writing in the following terms: "I, the undersigned, agree to deliver S. S. Mutton & Co., forty M. feet black ash, with mill culis out f. o. b. vessel on Cornwall canal, at $10 per M. feet, also ten M. feet soft elm at $10 per M. feet, also ten M. feet soft elm at $10 per M. feet f. o. b. vessel on Cornwall canal, to be delivered in the month of June, 1881, the lumber now on stick and part seasoned;" and the plaintiffs signed a corresponding memorandum, agreeing to accept such lumber at the time specified;—Held, that the words "with mill culls out" applied to the ash only, not to the elm. Held, also, that the plaintiffs, not having had a vessel ready to receive the lumber in June, could not recover. Semble, that time was of the essence of the contract, and the defendant was not bound to deliver the lumber in September. Mutton v, Deg, 7 A. R. 455.

— Dumugex—Loss of Profits.] — The plaintiff contracted to deliver timber to the defendant at St. Ignace, to be transported by him to Quebec for sale there. There was no market nearer to the place of delivery than Quebec. The plaintiff made default, and in an action for the price the defendant counterclaimed for damages for non-delivery of the timber:—Held, that the measure of damages was the value of the timber at Quebec, less the cost of transportation thereto from the point of delivery. Hendrie v. Neelon, 3 O. R. 603, 12 A. R. 41.

See McNeill v. Haines, 17 O. R. 479.

3. Construction of Particular Contracts.

Lease with Right to Cut — Effect of Surronder, — The owner of land with a saw mill thereon leased the mill with a right to cut timber during the lease; the lessee assigned the lease, and the assignee afterwards surrendered it to the proprietor of the freehold:— Held, that the right to cut timber was only commensurate with the lease itself, and the lease having been surrendered, the right of cutting timber was at an end, except for the use of the mill. Stegman v. Fraser, 6 Gr. 628.

Quality of Timber-Payment of Price.] -C., after having examined a lot, entered into an agreement with W., the owner, whereby the latter sold all the pine timber standing on the lot to C., "such as will make good merchantable waney-edged timber, suitable for his chantable waney-edged timber, sultane for as purpose, at the rate of $13 per hundred cubic feet," and C. paid to W. $1,000, "the balance to be paid for before the timber is removed from the lot." C. cut 8651.17 worth of first-class timber, sultable for the Quebec market, which was all of that class to be found on the lot, and sued W. to recover back the balance of the $1.000, namely, $348.83:—Held, affirming the judgment in 28 C. P. 308 n., which reversed that in 28 C. P. 293, that the true construction of the contract was, that W. sold and granted to C. permission to enter upon his lot, and cut all the "good merchantable timber there growing, suitable for his purpose," and not merely "first-class timber;" that there was more than sufficient "good merchantable timber" still remaining on the lot to recover the balance of the $1,000; and that there was no evidence to shew that the contract had been rescinded. The payment of the $1,000 was an absolute payment, the plaintiff believing and representing to defendant that there was sufficient timber to recover that amount, if not more, on the faith of which representation defendant entered into the contract, which he otherwise would not have done, and if the plaintiff made an error, he, and not the defendant, must suffer the consequences. Clarke v. White, 3 S. C. R. 309.

Right to Fell Trees.]—The owner of real estate sold all the hemlock bark thereon:—Held, that the purchaser had a right to fell the trees. Hatch v. Fick, 5 Gr. 651.

Size of Trees.]—C. conveyed to H. certain land by a deed which contained the following reservation and covenant: "And the said party of the first part reserves to himself all the standing timber upon the said lands, excepting that which measures eight Appropriation — Marking — Custom Evidence.]-By an agreement under seal between plaintiff and B., B., in consideration of seven cents per foot, agreed to deliver to the plaintiff at Goderich harbour 14,000 cubic feet of good elm timber, to be of specified dimensions, and nothing but good sound rock elm; the plaintiff to draw it from the bush, and leave it on the bank of the river Maitland, and to pay at certain periods named. In trover for such timber, which defendant claimed under a purchase from B.:—Held, that the agreement did not prevent the plaintiff from shewing that the timber to be deliv-ered belonged to him, and not to B. The fact that the timber was marked with B.'s mark was relied upon by the defendant to shew that it was not the plaintiff's:—Held, that the plaintiff might shew, in answer, that it was not uncommon for persons in charge of but not owning timber thus to mark it. Little v. Foley, 24 U. C. R. 177.

— Marking—Delivery of Part.]—Upon an agreement between A. and B. "that certain timber should be marked for B. as made, and should be delivered as fast as made to his agent, and should be to all intents and purposes his property, to be held in security for his advances:"—Held, the timber having been his advances: "—Held, the timber having been all made for B., and marked for him, part of it delivered, and all brought out of the woods and taken possession of by B. and sold to C., who had actual possession for many weeks with the knowledge and apparent consent of A .- that such timber could not afterwards be seized by the sheriff as the property of A., merely because B. had not sent out an agent to receive the whole of it in the woods, Dunning v. Gordon, 4 U. C. R. 399.

Marking - Measurement-Non-delivery-Lien for Advances.]-M. agreed to manufacture for and supply to defendants certain timber, which he was to mark with detain timper, which he was so mais with de-fendants name and deliver at one or two places on Sturgeon lake, to boom it se-curely, and complete the delivery by a day named. Defendants were to pay two-thirds of the contract price as the work proceeded, and the rest on completion of the contract. No rough, coarse, or cull timber was to be accepted, and the timber was to be measured by defendants when delivered, or from time to time, M. to have it measured by a culler if not satisfied with defendants' measurement, and the expenses thereof to be borne equally. The timber was made by M. from his own trees, and marked by him with defendants name as made, and hauled to the lake and boomed there; but it had not been measured or accepted by defendants nor delivered to them, nor dealt with by them as their own. They had made advances from time to time, but there was a disputed balance claimed by M. Under these circumstances, M. put the men he had employed in manufacturing the timber in possession of it, as security for their wages. Defendants took it out of the possession of the plaintiff, one of the men, and the plaintiff brought trespass :--Held, that the property in the timber had not passed to the defendants, and that the plaintiff therefore could recover. But, semble, that in equity defendants would have a prior claim upon it to the extent of their advances. Robertson v. Strickland, 28 U. C. R. 221.

_____ Marking—Non-delivery — Injunc-tion.]—The plaintiff contracted with two of the defendants for the manufacture by them of the derendants for the manufacture by them of 5,000 saw logs, to be delivered at the mouth of the river Trent, to be paid partly by instalments during the work, and the residue on delivery at the place designated; and at the same time, or immediately after, it was orally arranged that the logs, as manufactured, should be marked with plaintiff's initials, and delivered to him as a security for his advances, without prejudice to the agreement for their being conveyed to the river. stipulated advances were made, and the logs as manufactured were so marked, but not otherwise delivered to plaintiff:—Held, that the manufacturers could not afterwards dispose of these logs to the prejudice of the plaintiff; and they having attempted to do so, to a third person, for value, but with notice of plaintiff's claim, an injunction was granted to prevent their removal by such person. Fuller v. Richmond, 2 Gr. 24.

Non-delivery-Inspection-Terms of Contract.]—By agreement under seal, dated 29th December, 1871, defendant agreed to deliver to plaintiffs, within four and a half months from date, 5,000 railway ties on the Midland railway track, at Lakefield, or be-tween there and Peterborough, said ties to be stacked conveniently for loading and inspection; and a particular description of ties was specified as the only kind that would be received. The price of each was to be eighteen cents; twenty-five per cent. to be paid when 1,000 or over were delivered and estimated at Young's Point, on the Otonabee river: twenty-five per cent, more when the ties were delivered on the railway, and the balance within four weeks of the full completion of the contract, but not before the expiration of the time limited in the contract. The evidence shewed that defendant got out 5,280 ties in all; that the plaintiffs paid $240 to defendant, and $123.96 Crown dues; and that fendant, and $123.96 Crown dues; and that they received and took away 2.519 ties. A misunderstanding arose as to where the re-mainder of the ties, which had been brought to Lakefield, were to be culled and inspected, the plaintiffs wishing it at Port Hope, the de-fendant at Lakefield, and defendant refused to allow the ties to be shipped from Lakefield till paid for. The plaintiffs said they accepted them at Lakefield, subject to the culling, in which defendant was to take a part, and one W. swore that he counted and selected them at Young's Point, and reported on them to the plaintiffs before they advanced any to the planting before they advanced any money, but defendant appeared not to have been aware of this. Plaintiffs having replevied a quantity of the ties:—Held, that they could not recover; and the contract itself did not vest the ties in the plaintiffs, for they were not then in existence; that it con-templated an inspection, which had not taken place; and there was no other appropriation or delivery of these ties with an intention that Delivery—Change of Possession.]—One H. agreed to furnish B. with from 8,000 to 10,000 saw logs, to be paid for on delivery, and received a small sum on account. Afterwards H. agreed to get out logs for the plaintiffs, the money for them to be paid to one D., to whom H. was indebted. A large num-ber were got out during the winter by H., and while on the ice he marked 1,040 with the plaintiffs' mark. When the ice broke up, all were floated down together and became mixed. The plaintiffs accepted and paid or-ders on them by H, in D.'s favour for £200 on account, and afterwards a delivery was made by H, to them of 1,040 logs, by delivering some in the name of that number out of the whole, which were still together. who had made large advances to H. on his agreement, then got execution on a judgment, which H. allowed to go by default, and under it seized all the logs:—Held, that the plain-tiffs were entitled to recover in replevin for the 1,040 logs so sold and delivered to them and that neither the Chattel Mortgage Act nor 22 Vict. c. 96, s. 19, would have ap-plied to such sale, even if the jury had not found, as they did, that there was an actual and continued change of possession, so far as there could be under the circumstances, and that H. was not insolvent. Thompson, 19 U. C. R. 307. Middlebrook v.

To make valid against creditors of the vendor a sale of timber to be cut down by him, there must be an actual delivery to the purchaser after the timber is cut down, followed by an actual and continued change of possession, as in the case of other chattels. McMilan v. McSherry, 15 Gr. 133.

Measurement — Ascertainment of Price.]—The respondent entered into a contract in writing for the sale to the appellant of "a raft of timber now at Carouge, containing white and red pine, the quantity about 71,000 feet, to be delivered at Indian Cove Booms. Price for the whole, 7%d. per foot; payment, one-third cash, one-third sixty and ninety days after date." Shortly before the contract was signed, the raft had been measured by a public officer called the supervisor of cullers, appointed under S & 9 Vict. c. 39, and the number of pieces of timber and the contents of each piece, were set down in a speci-fication thereof, which made a total of 71.445 feet; and this specification was delivered by the respondent before the execution of the contract to the appellant, and sent by him to the place where the raft was to be delivered. The raft was towed to the Indian Cove Booms, the appointed place for delivery, where it arrived in the afternoon, and notice of its arrival was given to the servants of the appellant, who assisted in fastening the raft outside the booms. This was done at the instance of the appellant's servant, as from the state of the tide the raft could not be placed inside the During the night a storm arose by which the raft was carried away, broken to pieces and dispersed, and a great portion of it lost. The appellant employed his servants in collecting as much of the wood as was saved, and that was put into the appellant's booms:—Held, that, as the respondent had ascertained the price of the raft by the measurement previously made, the specification of which was in the appellant's possession, and as the contract did not shew that any future measurement of the raft was necessary, no act then remained to be done by the respondent or by the appellant; and that the raft upon delivery at the Indian Cove Booms had wholly passed to the appellant, and the loss incurred must be borne by him. Judgment of the court of error and appeal, not reported, and judgment in 5 C. P. 318, affirmed. Gilmour v. Supple, 11 Moo. P. C. 551.

Receiver — Replevin.]—Plaintiffs with L. for the sale and delivery to the plaintiffs of a quantity of timber. Subsequently L. obtained a decree in chancery against V., which, after declaring them to have been partners in getting out the timber, directing an account, and restraining V. from removing or intermeddling with the timber, referred the suit to the master to appoint a receiver. Before this decree was acted upon by L., V. delivered the timber, as the jury found, to the plaintiffs, by whom, as they also found, it was accepted without objection on L.'s part, who in fact was present at the time. Some months after this a receiver was appointed under the decree in chancery, and at L.'s instance he took possession of the timber in question:—Held, that the receiver's act was wrongful, as the property in the timber had passed to plaintiffs before his appointment, and that they could therefore maintain zeplevin against him and L. for it. Campbell v. Lepan, 21 C. F. 365.

Non-payment — Non-delivery,] — The plaintiff agreed with one McG, for the purchase of a quantity of timber upon certain terms, but failed to pay the price agreed upon. McG, afterwards refused the money, and sold and delivered the timber to one C. Upon replevin brought:—Held, that no delivery having been made to plaintiff, he could not recover. Henry v. Cook, S. C. F. 29.

Payment on Account—Non-completion.]
—One C, sold timber to plaintiff, and received $20 on account, but it was to be culled and measured to complete the purchase, and the plaintiff did not do this, nor pay the balance; and C, therefore sold to defendant: — Held, that the property never passed to the plaintiff so as to prevent C. from selling again. Paton v. Curric, 19 U. C. R. 38s.

Terms of Contract—Acceptance of Bill.]

—The respondents, owners of timber lands in New Brunswick, granted C. & S. a license to cut lumber on twenty-five square miles. For securing the stumpage payable to respondents under the license (the terms of which are set out in the report), C. & S. gave to the respondents a draft unon J. & Co., which was accepted by J. & Co., and approved of by the respondents, but which was not paid at maturity. After giving the draft C. & S. sold the lumber to J. & Co., who knew the lumber was cut on the plaintiff's land under the said agreement. J. & Co., failed, and appellant, their assignee, took possession of the lumber and sold it:—Held, by three Judges (agreeing in the judgment of the court below), the remaining three Judges contra, that, upon the case as submitted, and by mere force of the terms of the agreement, the absolute property in the lumber in question did not pass to C. & S. immediately upon the receipt by the company of the accepted draft of C. & S. on J. & Co., and that the appellant was liable for the

5. Sale of Standing Timber.

Chattels—Right of Removal.]—Under an agreement, dated 2nd October, 1880, the defendant sold to B. all the pine timber growing on certain lands, to be removed during the years 1880 and 1881. The timber was all cut into logs before the end of 1881, but a portion was not then removed:—Held that this was a sale of goods and chattels, and not an interest in land; and the timber so cut having become the plaintiff's property, he had the right to remove it after the expiration of the time mentioned; though, semble, the defendant might have a right of action for not removing it within the time. The defendant having refused to permit such removal, the plaintiff brought replevin, and was held entitled to succeed. McGregor v. McNeil, 32 C. P. 538.

Condition—Right of Removal.]—By deed, dated 4th April. 1884, made between J. and S. & L., J. agreed to sell and S. & L. to purchase all the merchantable pine, suitable for the purpose, standing, lying, and being on certain described property, for a sum which was then named and paid, "provided, however, that the said timber and logs shall be cut and removed off said lot on or before the 4th April. 1884." The defendant B. Celaming through S. & L.) after the expiration of the time agreed upon, removed logs which and the time agreed upon, removed logs which and for this J. brought this action and recovered a verdict of 5125. B. moved against the verdict, on the ground that under the deed, and the assignment to him, he was the absolute owner of the timber, subject merely to such claim as the vendor might have against the vendees for breach of the covenant to remove the pine within the time name!—Held, that the agreement could not be construed as an absolute grant of the pine subject to a covenant by them to cut and remove the trees within ten years; but that it was a grant of the pine subject to the condition that the time pand logs should be cut and remove define property on or before the 4th day of April, 1884. Held, also, that this condition applied as well to trees severed before as to those severed after the expiration of the term. Johnston V. Shortreed, 12 O. R. 633.

— Right of Removal—Evidence—Bills of Sale Act.]—S, sold all the elm and soft maple trees on a certain lot to T.; and at the time of sale gave T, the following receipt: "Received from J. L. for T., the sum of $500, on account of elm and soft maple on." &c., the said lot, describing it. Parol evidence was admitted to shew, and the jury found, that "one of the conditions of the sale was that the timber was to be removed by T. within two years:"—Held, that the receipt was not the contract between the parties, but a mere acknowledgment of so much money; and therefore the parol evidence was properly admitted. Held, also, that the effect of the condition was, that T. was only to have the right Vol. III, D=216—67 to cut and remove the timber within the two years from the date of the agreement. Johnston v. Shortreed, 12 O. R. 633, followed. Semble, that a sale of growing timber does not come within the operation of the Bills of Sale and Chattel Mortgage Act. Steinhoff v. Mc-Rae, 13 O. R. 546.

Interest in Land—Right of Removal—Conversion.]—Where one sold and assigned to another all the pine timber he might choose to cut for twenty years with the right to make roads to get to and remove the same, and a covenant that the grantee might, without let or hindrance from anyone, cut and remove the testing the remover of the property. Where, having first granted such timber and rights to the plantiff's assignor, the defendant five years afterwards sold the timber and rights to the plantiff's assignor, the defendant five years afterwards sold the timber and nonther person, who forthwith proceeded to cut the same;—Held, that the defendant was responsible to the plaintiff in damages; and semble, that he would have been so, even if the timber sold were chatted property, for that the act of the defendant in selling to another person would in that case amount to a conversion of the property. Mc-Nell v. Heimes, 17 O. R. 479.

—— Right of Removal—Paral License.]—As a general rule, a contract for the sale of standing timber which is not to be severed standing timber which is not to be severed to the sale of an interest in land. Upon the sale of an interest in land, the sale of the Right of Removal—Vendor's Lieu—Injunction.]—By agreement in writing, dated 15th October. 1873. A. agreed to sell, and R. and C. agreed to purchase, all the merchantable white and red pine timber, suitable for their purposes, standing, lying, or being on certain premises owned by A., for the price or sum of $600, payable, $400 on date of agreement, and the balance in one year, with a provision that the timber should be cut and removed off the lands, on or before the 15th October, 1881. It was further provided that B. and C. their agents, representatives, or assigns, should have the right to enter upon the premises at all times during the period for which the agreement was to continue in force, from the control of the land before the expiration of the year, they would pay the whole of the purchase money immediately after removing the said timber:—Held, that this was an agreement for the sale of an interest in land; that primâ facie the vendor was entitled to a lien for unpaid purchase money; and that the circumstance that the timber was purchased by B. and C. for the purpose of being cut down and used at their mill as soon as possible, did not deprive the vendor of the right to the lien. Held, also, that the last provise in the agreement, as to immediate payment of the purchase money in arrival of the time for payment of the Seolo, did not operate to destroy the vendor's right to the lien. B. and C. did not pay the Seolo, and, after the expiration of one year from the date of the form of the seolo and, after the expiration of one year from the date of the agreement, assigned it to the defendants, who had no actual notice that the Seolo remained unpaid, but the agreement was registered against the lands:—Held, that the vendor was entitled to an injunction to prevent cutting and removing by the defendants until the Seolo was paid. Marshall v. Green, I. C. P. D. 35, commented upon and distinguished. Summers v. Cook, 28 Gr. 179.

Right of Removal-Way - "Necessary,"]—The plaintiff was the owner of a farm of about a mile in breadth and fivesixths of a mile in length. About two-thirds of the farm was heavily wooded, and the rest of it was cleared and cultivated. The defendant became the purchaser of the trees and timber upon the land, under an agreement which provided among other things that the purchaser should at all times within three years have full liberty to enter upon the lands and to remove the trees and timber in such manner as he might think proper, not interfering with the enjoyment of the plaintiff save in so far as it might be necessary. To take timber from the centre of the wooded belt through the woodland to the roads instead of passing over the cleared land would have cost more than the timber was worth:— Held, that the word "necessary" was to be reasonably construed, and that this timber might be taken across the cleared land. Stephens v. tiordon, 19 A. R. 176. Affirmed. 22 S. C. R. 61.

See McMillan v. Sherry, 15 Gr. 133, ante 4.

6. Statute of Frauds-Parol Agreements.

Bond — Liccuse — Purol Revocation.]—
When in debt on bond conditioned that "the defendant, his heirs and assigns, should permit and suffer the plaintiff to cut down take, and carry away all the fivewood from certain lands, without hindrance or molestation," defendant pleaded that he always permitted, &c., and the plaintiff replied that, after the making of the bond, defendant conveyed the land in fee to a stranger, who would not permit the plaintiff to cut the wood, &c., and the defendant demurred to the replication—the court gave judgment for the demurrer, the replication having shewn no breach, the bond being in effect a license under seal, binding on defendant and his vendee, and not revocable by parol, and the plaintiff having shewn no obstruction. Foreke v. Fotherpill, 4 O. S. 185.

Entry on Land — Acquiescence.]—On a sale of timber, the land on which the same was situate was not mentioned in the memorandum evidencing the agreement, but the purchaser entered upon the land intended, and, with the knowledge and acquiescence of the owner, continued to cut thereon for over a year:—Held, that this was sufficient, within the Statute of Frauds, to prevent the vendor afterwards disputing the right of the purchaser to cut the timber within the time limited for his so doing. Lawrence v. Errington, 21 Gr. 261.

Extension of Time for Removal—Revocation.]—The owner of land by a memorandum in writing sold the timber thereon, and when the time orally agreed upon for its removal had nearly expired, the vendor told his vendee that he might have another year within which to complete the cutting and removal of the timber:—Held, that the vendor was not at liberty afterwards to revoke such extension of time. Lawrence v. Errington. 21 Gr. 261.

Interest in Land—Clearing—Timber in Payment.]—An agreement to enter upon and clear land, and take the wood after it is cut down in payment of the labour, is not for an interest in lands within the Statute of Frauds. Hamilton y, McDondl, 5 O. S. 720.

Felled Trees — Evidence.1 — The plaintiff agreed orally to sell timber to depanton agreed orany to sell timber to de-fendant, to be got out by him upon certain timber limits held by plaintiff from the Crown, for 20s, per thousand feet, payable on its ar-rival at Quebec. These limits had formerly belonged to plaintiff's husband, of whom she was administratrix, and it was agreed, defendant being a party to the arrangement, that half of the money should be applied towards payment of debts due by the intestate. A written agreement was then signed by plaintiff, intended to relate to the payment of her share only, by which she agreed to sell to defendant the right to cut the timber at 10s. per thouand feet:—Held, that evidence of the oral agreement was admissible, as the writing did not contain, and was not intended to contain, the whole agreement between the parties; and that the plaintiff therefore might recover the 20s. per thousand feet. Held, also, that the Statute of Frauds did not apply, the trees having been cut down and reduced to chattlels. Chamberlain v. Smith, 21 U. C. R. 103.

- Made Timber-Consideration-Conversion.] - Defendant, by deed dated 26th September, 1870, agreed to sell to the plaintiff all the merchantable timber, &c., on defendant's land which the plaintiff could make by the 1st May, 1871; any timber or logs left standing or cut after that date to be the property of defendant. The plaintiff made a large quantity of timber, and drew away some of it. On the 27th March, 1871, defendant orally gave him leave to let the balance of timber made by him remain on the lot till fall, if the plaintiff would not strip the lot too much; and the plaintiff cut only for a day or two after that. Subsequently, and after the 1st May, the plaintiff was forbidden to take such made timber off, by one K., who said he had bought it, and by defendant, who, as one witness said, claimed it as his own; and the plaintiff thereupon brought trover:—Held, that the made timber, which vested in the plaintiff as made, might properly be the subject of a parol contract with defendant, in-dependently of the deed, and that the de-sistance of the plaintiff from stripping the lot before the 1st May was a sufficient consideration for the parol agreement. Held, also, that there was evidence from which a jury might infer conversion. Hedley v. Scissons, 33 U. C. R. 215.

nt con-Held, vhich a v. ScisPledge of License—Advances—Sale by Pledgee.]—The plaintiff, being entitled, according to the usage of the Crown, to a license for certain timber limits, on 3rd December, 1893, took out a license in the name of J. N. & Co. and delivered the same to them upon an oral agreement for obtaining advances on the security thereof; J. N. & Co. procuped these advances from a bank, and deposited the license by way of security. In December, 1894, the plaintiff took out a new license in the name of J. N. & Co., and they assigned the same to the bank as a further security. The plaintiff having made default, the bank sold the limits with the knowledge of and without any objection by the plaintiff:—Held, that, though there was no writing shewing the agreement between the plaintiff and any of the other parties, the sale was, under the facts proved, binding on him; and a bill impeaching it was dismissed with costs, McDonald v, McKay, 18 Gr. 98. See S. C., 15 Gr. 391.

Sale of Land—Reservation of Timber—Plevaling.)—Declaration, q. c. f., for cutting and removing trees, with a count in trover and the common counts. Pleas, leave and license, and a special equitable plea, setting up that defendant, being owner of the land, contracted by parol to sell it to the plaintiff, and that at the time of such contract, and of the conveyance of the land, by defendant, it was expressly agreed that defendant should have certain trees thereon, and be at liberty to cut and remove them, but that such reservation should not be, and it accordingly was not, inserted in the conveyance; and that the defendant entered and cut the trees, &c., which are the trespasses, &c. The defendant, as a witness at the trial, having proved the sale of the land, it was proposed to shew by him the agreement as set up in the equitable plea:—Held, that such evidence was improperly rejected, for that it was admissible both under the equitable plea and the plea of leave and license. Semble, that the equitable plea shewed a good defence, and that, at all events, the plaintiff having taken issue upon it, the defendant was entitled to have the issue tried. Walter v. Dexter, 34 U. C. R. 429.

Status of Defendant Asserting Agreement.]—The position of a defendant resisting a claim, is more favourably considered than that of a plaintiff endcavouring to enforce an agreement, the terms of which may not have been defined so as to clearly satisfy the requirements of the Statute of Frauds. Laurence v. Errington, 21 Gr. 261.

7. Vendor's Lien.

Notice.)—W. S. agreed to transfer his timber limits to W. A. S. in case the latter should, within two years, pay off a mortgage to R. and other liabilities, and in case W. S. was obliged to pay any of such liabilities he was at liberty to sell such portion of said limits as would recoup him. At the same time W. S. wrote to R., authorizing him to transfer to W. A. S. said lands which he held as security, on payment of his claim. R. assigned his claim and the limits to B., who, by agreement with W. A. S. and the executors of W. S., continued to carry on the lumber business formerly owned by W. S. Certain of the liabilities of W. S. not having been paid, his estate claimed a vendor's lien on such limits, and relied on the letter to R., and on notice to an attorney who prepared the agreement with B. to establish notice of such lien in B.:—Held, affirming the judgment in 5 O. R. I, that, even if such lien existed, B. could not be affected with notice of it. Scott v. Benedict, 14 S. C. R. 735.

Crown Timber.]-See CROWN, VII.

Delivery—Alteration of Made Timber.]—Defendants were taken by the plaintiff to a quantity of timber already made upon the ground, and contracted to draw it out and deliver it to the plaintiff on the bank of a river;—Held, that the timber cut in two by defendants to suit their convenience, without plaintiff's permission, and drawn out of the river in that altered state, was not delivered within the contract. Reynolds v. Shuter, 3 U. C. R. 377.

Warranty.]—On a sale of "timber limits" held under licenses in pursanare of C. S. C. c. 23, a clause of simple warranty (garantie de tous troubles généralement quelconques) does not operate to protect the purchaser against eviction by a person claiming to be entitled under a prior license to a portion of the limits sold. Ducondu v. Dupug, 9 App. Cas. 150. Reversing S. C., 6 S. C. R. 425.

II. Conversion into Lumber.

Administrator — Advice of Court.]—An administrator was desirous of converting saw logs into lumber for the benefit of the estate he represented. An application under 29 Vict. c. 28, s. 31, was entertained, and an opinion of a Judge given in favour of the course suggested. Re Calduchl, 2 Ch. Ch. 150.

Executrix.]—See Stewart v. Fletcher, 18 Gr. 21.

Mortgagee of Term — Reversioner.]—
The mortgagee of a term for years being in possession, will, at the suit of the mortgager, be restrained from felling timber, although he may have obtained the consent of the reversioner. Quare, whether the doctrine applicable in England between termor and reversioner, in respect to felling timber, can prevail as to an estate here, the beneficial enjoyment of which is ordinarily obtained only through the destruction of the growing timber; and whether the dectrines of the common law, as to growing timber, can be applied in all their extent to forest land here. Chisholm v. Sheldon, 1 Gr. 318. See Drake v. Wigle, 22 C. P. 341, 24 C. P. 405, post WASTE.

Mortgagor.] — Although a mortgagor in possession will not be restrained from cutting timber for fuel, feneing, and repairs upon the premises, he will be restrained from felling trees for other purposes, if it does not clearly appear that the property will still remain of sufficient cash value to satisfy the mortgage debt. Russ v. Mills, 7 Gr. 145.

Where a mortgagor in possession was felling timber, the court, at the instance of a judgment creditor of the mortgagor, with an execution against lands in the hands of the sheriff, restrained future cutting by the mortgagor, it being shewn that the property was a scanty security for the claims of the mortgagoes and the amount due the execution creditor. Wason v. Carpenter, 13 Gr. 329.

Occupant — Authority from Orener — Vendee.]—In a suit by the original owner of lands and his vendee (to whom no conveyance had been made), the court restrained an occupant of the land and a person to whom he had contracted to sell the timber, from cutting down the timber, such occupant having gone into possession under the owner; though it did not appear that such timber was of any particular value to plaintiffs, and though the affidavits were contradictory as to the occupant's authority from the owner to sell it. Laurence v, Judge, 2 Gr., 301.

Purchaser, 1 — A purchaser, having entered into possession under his contract and failed to meet his payments, was restrained from committing waste, or removing timber already cut down. Farrier v. Kerr, 2 Gr. 668.

The owner of land agreed to sell the growing timber, and it was stipulated that the price should be paid by the purchaser's note, indorsed by a responsible person, renewable for half at maturity, the delivering of such note within ten days to be the completion of the consideration for said agreement:—Held, that this was only a mode of payment, and not substituted for it; and that upon failure of payment the vendor was entitled to restrain the felling of timber or the removal of any already cut. Michell v. McGoffey, 6 Gr. 361. See, also, Walsh v. Broun, 4 L. J. 68.

Where the owner of land sells the timber after a writ against his lands is placed in the sheriff's hands, and the purchaser cuts down and removes the timber before an injunction is obtained, he is accountable to the execution creditor for such timber. Brown v. Sage, 11 Gr. 239.

Held, under the circumstances of this case, that the vendor of standing timber was entitled to an injunction to prevent the cutting and removing of timber by the vendee until payment of the agreed price. Summers v. Cook. 28 Gr. 179.

Tenant for Life — Husbandry.] — See Drake v. Wigle, 22 C. P. 341, 24 C. P. 405, post Waste.

Held, following Drake v. Wigle, 24 C. P. 405, that a tenant for life in this country may cut down timber in the proper course of good husbandry, in order to bring the proper proportion of the land under cultivation, and perhaps destroy such timber, but that he cannot cut down timber even for the same purpose, and sell it. Saunders v. Breakic, 5 O. R. 603.

Tenant in Common.]—A tenant in common occupying the common property is not chargeable with the value of timber cut by him on such property during his occupancy. Munsie v. Lindsay, 10 P. R. 173.

Highway—Telephone.]—The plaintiff was the owner of land in the city of Toronto fronting on a street which was an original road allowance. The defendants the Bell Telephone Company, with the assent, but without any express resolution or by-law, of the city or any notice or compensation to the plaintiff, cut off branches overhanging the street from trees growing within the plaintiff's ground, and also branches of trees growing in the street in front of the plaintiff's ground, alleging that the branches interfered with the use of the wires of a telephone system for police purposes, which they had contracted with the city to maintain. Section 3 of the Tree Plantor to maintain. Section 3 of the Aree Flanting Act, R. S. O. 1887 c. 201, had not been brought into force in Toronto:—Held, that s. 479 (20) of the Municipal Act, R. S. O. 1887 c. 184, applies only when s. 3 of the Tree Planting Act, R. S. O. 1887 c. 201, is in force, and that the plaintiff had no interest in or title to the trees growing in the street suffi-cient to enable him to complain of the cient to enable him to complain of the cutting. Held, also, that, as the overhanging branches of the trees growing within the plaintiff's grounds were not a nuisance, and in no way interfered with the use of the highway, the defendants had no right to cut them. Hod-gins v. City of Toronto, 19 A. R. 537.

That the ownership of lands adjoining a highway extends ad medium filum vie is a presumption of law only, which may be rebutted, but the presumption will arise though the lands are described in a conveyance as bounded by or on the highway. In construing an Act of parliament, the title may be referred to in order to ascertain the intention of the legis-lature. The Act of the Nova Scotia legislature 50 Vict. c. 23, vesting the title to highways and the lands over which the same pass ways and the lands over which the same pass in the Crown for a public highway, does not apply to the city of Halifax. The charter of the Nova Scotia Telephone Company author-izing the construction and working of lines of telephone along the sides of, and across and under, any public highway or street of the city of Halifax, provided that in working such lines the company should not cut down nor mutilate any trees :- Held, that the owner of private property in the city could maintain an action for damages against the company for injuring ornamental shade trees in the street in front of his property while constructing or working the telephone line, there being no-thing in the evidence to rebut the presumption of ownership ad medium or to shew that the street had been laid out under a statute of the Province or dedicated to the public before the passing of any expropriation Act. O'Connor v. Nova Scotia Telephone Co., 22 S. C. R. 276.

V. MISCELLANEOUS CASES.

Advances on Timber—Interest—Detention—Custom.1—A merchant agreed, in writing, to advance money for the purpose of getting out timber to be forwarded to him at Quebec for sale: for which advances he was to be paid certain commissions. The timber was duly forwarded to him in the autumn; but, prices being low, he, with the assent of the other party, held the timber over till the following spring, and claimed interest on his advances from the 1st December until the sale of the timber, the case not being provided for by the agreement. It appeared that it had been customary in the trade to charge interest in such cases, where there was not any writing; but there was no evidence of such custom being known to the plaintiff:—Held, that in terest could not be charged. De Hertel v. Supple, 14 Gr. 421, 13 Gr. 648.

Carrier—Liability for Timber—Insurance—Lien for Freight.]—A lumberman, agreeing to carry lumber for hire at the request of the owner thereof, does not thereby become a common carrier or render himself bound to carry safe at all risks, the acts of God or the Queen's enemies excepted; and quere, whether he would be so liable even if it were shewn that he was in the habit of forwarding timber for any one who might choose to employ him to do so. Under such circumstances the person carrying the lumber is not bound, in the absence of any agreement on the point, to make good money paid by the owner for the purpose of insuring the property. In such a case the carrier will be entitled to a lien on the lumber carried by him for his freight and charges, which will be defeated, however, by procuring it to be taken in execution at his own suit. A lumberman had a lien on lumber for his freight, and C, wrote saying, "I wish you would advise your agents in Quebec to deliver to A. J. Coumbe the sawn stuff on your rafus. I am to pay the river freight, and will thank you to take Coumbe's draft on me here at 30 days for river freight, which I will pay?"—Held, that the effect of this letter was not such as to render C, liable to pay the freight until the lumberman al obtained Coumbe's draft for the amount thereof. Re Coumbe, 24 Gr. 519.

Collision of Boom with Ship—Negligence—Liability.)—See Brace v. Union Forwarding Co., 32 U. C. R. 43.

Collision of Booms—Vegligence—Damages.]—The plaintiff had a large quantity of logs boomed in a river, and while there a drive of about 5,000 logs, belonging to one C., came past without injuring the boom, which was strong and well constructed. Defendants had a large number of logs boomed above the plaintiffs, some of which were let down at night, and in the morning were found in a jam against the plaintiffs boom. This jam was broken up, and more of defendants logs were let down, soon after which the plaintiffs boom was found broken, the plaintiffs not being present, and their logs gone. They went down the stream with defendants logs, and some were afterwards found, but about 125,000 feet were lost, and there was evidence tending to shew that they had been taken by defendants men to a point about twaten by defendants men to a point about twaten by antis conduct was evidence, also, that defendants for rive when and as they did :—Held, that there was evidence for the jury that defendants had broken the plaintiffs boom by the undurpressure of their logs; and that defendants were liable without proof that they had certified to recover the plaintiffs could have purchased other logs at the time and place where the wrong was dose, the made place where the wrong was dose, of the logs of the logs lost by defendants instead and place where the wrong was dose, of the plaintiffs to get on the plaintiffs could have purchased other logs at the time and place where the wrong was dose, of the defendants of the plaintiffs to get and they would have made out of the logs lost by defendants instead out of the Death of Licensee—Suit—Partics—Personal Representatives, —A bill was filed in respect to certain timber limits by two of the devisees and legatees of the original licensee thereof:—Held, that the suit ought to be by the personal representatives, and a demurrer to the bill, on the ground that it was not so constituted, was allowed. Bennet v. O'Meara, 15 Gr. 396.

Inter-provincial Rights — Disputed Territory.]—See Regina v. Dunn, 11 S. C. R. 385.

Removal of Timber — Agent—Ratification—Repletin—Bond—Dumages, —In an action on a replevin bond against principal and sureties, the breach assigned was the non-return of a portion of the timber replevied, for which the defendants in replevin, the now plaintiffs, obtained judgment. It appeared that the timber, when replevied, was on the banks of a river some distance above a point where it was intended to be shipped, and by directions of F., the plaintiff in replevin, it was put in the possession of one L. who was F.'s general agent for looking after his land in that part of the country. La authorized the defendant in replevin to take it down to the shipping point, where it was again taken possession of for F., by a person appointed by L. to receive it there, and shipped for F. L. had been forbidden by F. to permit this removal to the shipping point, but the defendant in replevin was not aware of it, and such removal was to the benefit of wheever might be the owner:—Held, that the receipt of the timber at the shipping point by F. was a ratification on his part of the removal, though such removal was in violation of his orders. Held, also, that it was proper "left to the jury to say whether L., from the nature of the property and its situation, and being appointed agent to receive possession, had reasonable authority to arrange that it should be taken to the shipping point for the benefit of all concerned; and that they were fully warranted in finding that he had. Semble, that the plaintiff, though entitled to recover against F. the value of the timber at the shipping point, could, as against the sureties, recover only its value when replevied. Patterson v, Fuller, 32 U. C. R. 240.

Sale of Trees—Agent—Account.]—Held, that upon the evidence the defendant, who had acted as agent for the plaintiff in selling trees, could not be held liable on the common counts for the trees sold, but must be sued specially for not accounting. Leslie v. Morrison, 16 U. C. R. 318.

Saw Logs Driving Act—Arbitration and Award.]—When a person floating logs down a stream fails to break jams of such logs, as directed by s. 3 of the Saw Logs Driving Act, another person whose logs are obstructed by the jam has no right of action for damages, but is limited to the remedy given by the Act, namely, the breaking of the jam at the expense of the person whose logs have formed it. When an arbitrator awards one sum in respect of matters some of which are within and some without his jurisdiction, the navard must be set aside. Cockburn v. Imperial Lumber Co., 25 A. R. 19. Reversed, 30 S. C. R. 80.

Trover — Rights of Patentee — Crown—Stranger—Possession.]—The patent of A. C. in 1803 contained the clause, then usual, saving and reserving to the Crown all white pine trees:—Held, that, notwithstanding this reservation, the plaintiff, claiming under the patentee, could maintain trover against defendant for the white pine; for the soil in which they grew was his, and he was entitled to their shade as against a stranger. Held, also, that the evidence of possession, set out in the report, being such as an owner could be expected to have of wild land, would alone have been sufficient to entitle the plaintiff to maintain the action. Casselman v. Hersey, 32 U. C. R. 333.

Trover or Trespass — Foreign Land—Title.]—Trespass or trover will lie in Ontario for timber cut in the Province of Quebec (the declaration not charging any trespass to the realty), although it may be necessary in such action to try the title to the land on which it was cut. McLaren, Ryun, 36 U. C. R. 307.

Will — Direction as to Timber—Enforcement—Account.]—A testator devised his farm to minor children, and directed that his executors should rent the same; that no timber should be cut except for the use of the preshould be cut except for the use of the premises; and that the executors should have full power to carry the will into effect;—Held, that it was the duty of the executors to prevent the executrix from cutting the timber for other purposes. Under the ordinary administration decree in respect of a testator's real and personal estate, the master may take an account of timber cut with which the defendants are chargeable. Stewart v. Fletcher, 18 Gr. 21.

Action against Division Court Bailill—In computing the time within which an action must be brought against a bailiff for something done in pursuance of the Division Courts Act, R. S. O. 1877 c. 47, s. 231, the day on which the fact was committed must be excluded. Hanns v, Johnston, 30, R, 100.

Execution — Judgment by Default—Appearance.]—The eight days from the last day for appearance mentioned in s. 60, C. L. P. Act, 1856, at the expiration of which execution may issue on a judgment signed on a specially indorsed writ, is exclusive of such last day. Kerr v. Bouche, 3 L. J. 110.

—Renewal—Division Courts.]—By s. 141 of the Division Courts Act. C. S. U. C. c. 19, it is senacted that every execution "shell be returnable within thirty days from the date thereof." — Held, that in computing such thirty days the day of issue is excluded, so that a writ issued on the 24th April was in force on the 24th May, and capable of being renewed on that day under 32 Vict. c. 23, s. 24 (O.), which, even if introducing the rule of the C. L. P. Act. s. 342, in computing the time for renewal of writs, so as to make both days inclusive, does not affect their original duration. Clark v. Garrett, 28 C. P. 75.

Judgment by Default—Service of Declaration.]—In computing the eight days allowed to plead by the C. L. P. Act, 1856, the first and last days are reckoned inclusive, unless the last days be a dies non. The day of service of a declaration is reckoned as one of the eight days for pleading. Therefore, when a declaration was served on Saturday the 10th October, and judgment for want of a plea signed on Monday the 19th—Held, regular. Ridout v. Orr. 2 P. R. 321. See Moore v. Grand Trunk R. W. Co., 2 P. R. 227; Cameron v. Cameron, 2 P. R. 259.

— Service of Writ.)—Where a summons was served on the 12th, and judgment signed on the 22nd, for want of appearance:—Held, not too soon. Ross v. Johnson, 2 P. R. 230, 4 L. J. 21.

The writ of summons under the Ejectment Act requires the defendant to appear "within sixten days after the service hereof," A summons was served on the 12th, and judgment signed on the 28th:—Held, too soon. Scott v. Dickson, 1 P. R. 366. Followed in Montgomery v. Brown, 2 C. L. J. 72.

Notice of Trial—Solicitor's Agent.] — The "two clear additional days to the time now allowed by law" for service on the agent of a country attorney, under 34 Vict. c. 12, s. 12, means the insertion of two days between the day of service and the day of the happening of the event to which the notice relates. A service of notice of trial on the Toronto agent of a country attorpey on Saturday for Monday week, would be sufficient. Northeimer v. Shauc, 6 P. R. 14.

Notice to Land Owner — Railway — Warrant of Possession.]—In the computation of the ten days' previous notice necessary to be given under 51 Vict. c. 29, s. 164 (D.), to obtain a warrant for the possession of land by a railway company, the day of the service of the notice and the day of the return must both be excluded. Re Ontario Tanners' Supplies Co. and Ontario and Quebec R. W. Co., 12 P. R. 563.

Notice to Witness.1—A notice to attend as witness, under C. S. U. C. c. 32, s. 15, served on the 25th October for the 1st November, is too late, not being "at least eight days," Young v. O'Reilly, 24 U. C. R. 172.

Noting Pleadings Closed.]—The last of the eight days within which the defendants should have delivered their statement of defence, as required by con rule 371, was a Saturday, and on that day at twenty-live minutes past two in the afternoon, no statements of defence having then been filed, or served on the plaintiffs solicitor, the officer entered a note that the pleadings were closed:

—Held, that the officer had no power to closed would be three of clock; and the force he had as a considered was irregular, and should be set aside. Contrales 7, 393, 398, 480, considered. Lloyd v. Ward, 13 F. R. 238.

Partition—Notice.]—A writ of partition cannot be ordered unless notice has been given forty clear days before the term; therefore, where the service was made on the 21st July, and the term began on the 30th August, it was held insufficient. In re Loney, 10 U. C. R. 305.

Setting Cause down for Hearing.]—In computing the time for setting down a cause the day on which it is set down, and the first day of hearing, are both excluded. Fourteen clear days should intervene. Beard v. Grey, 3 Ch. Ch. 104.

See post II., III., IV.

3. Fraction of a Day.

Judicial Proceedings — Statutes.] — Judicial proceedings and Acts of the legislature take effect in law from the earliest period of the day on which they are respectively originated and come into force. Converse v. Michie, 16 C. P. 167.

Priorities — Bond — Married Woman — Gift of Separate Property, — Subsequently to the coming into force of the Married Woman's Property Act. R. S. O. 1887 c. 132, a married woman, on the day of entering into a money bond, deposited in her own name in a savings bank a sum of money, which the evidence shewed had been given to her by her husband, but of which, as against him, she had the absolute disposal by his consent and wish:— Held, that this was sufficient on which to found a proprietary judgment against her, though it was not shewn that the bond was not executed at an earlier hour than that at which the money was deposited. Succetland v. Neville, 21 O. R. 412.

Execution — Commission in Bank-ruptcy.]—A fi, fa. placed in the sheriff's hands before a commission of bankruptcy against the debtor was sealed, but on the same day on which it was completed and delivered to the which it was completed and delivered to the sheriff, has priority over the commission. Beckman v. Jarvis, 3 U. C. R. 280. In determining the priority of writs, the court will look to the fraction of a day. Ib.

Statutes-Repeal-Order of Court.]-The fraction of a day is never taken into considerfraction of a day is never taken into consus-ation in determining the operation of a sta-tute. Mitchell v. Pobson. 3 L. J. 185. If an order is obtained under a statute which is repealed by another statute on the same day the order is made, the repealing sta-tute will be held to operate from the first part of that day, and overrule the order. Ib.

Chattel Mortgage - Filing of.] chatter mortgage — rung of.] — A chattel mortgage was duly executed on the 12th July, and filed on the 18th, the 17th having been a Sunday:—Held, that such registration was too late, R. S. O. 1877 c. 119 requiring the same to be effected within five days from the execution of the instrument: that Sunday counted as one of such five days; and that rule 457, O. J. Act, did not apply. McLean v. Pinkerton, 7 A. R.

Demand of Annulment of Corporation Expenditure.]—It was enacted by s. 12 of 42 & 43 Vict. c. 53 (Q.) that any municipal elector might demand the annulment of the corporate appropriation for expenditure within three months from the date thereof, on the ground of illegality, but that thereafter the right was prescribed and the appropriation valid :- Held, that on the expiration of the three months (the last day being non-juridical) the elector's statutory right was juridical) the elector's statutory right was at an end, and could not be extended by any procedure clause (see s. 3 of the Civil Pro-cedure Code) which presupposed an existing right of action and regulated its exercise. Dechène v. City of Montreal, [1894] A. C.

Demurrage-Custom.]-In computing demurrage Sunday is to be reckoned as one of the days to be allowed for. "Days" mean the same as running days, or consecutive days, unless there be some particular custom. parties wish to exclude any days from the computation they must be expressed. Gibb v. Michael's Bay Lumber Co., 7 O. R. 746.

Election Petition—Presentation of .] — The Interpretation Act of Ontario, 31 Vict. c. 1, s. 6, s.-s. 13, enacts that in construing it or any other Act of Ontario certain days speci-fied, including Good Friday and Easter Monday, shall be included in the word "holiday;" and the Controverted Elections Act of 1871, 34 Vict. c. 3, s. 52 (O.), enacts that in reckoning time for the purposes of that Act. any day set apart by any Act of Ontario for a public holiday shall be excluded:—Held, that the effect of the Interpretation Act alone, independently of any other statute, was alone, independently of any other statute, was to make the days mentioned in it holidays; and if this were not so, that when the other statute used the word "holiday," such days would by virtue of the Interpretation Act be included in it. Held, therefore, that in recommendation and the state of the re-turn allowed for presentation of a petition, Good Friday and Easter Monday must be ex-cluded. The decision in chambers in this natter, 5 P. R. 394, affirmed as regards the computation of time. In re West Toronto Election, Armstrong v. Crooks, 31 U. C. R.

Examination of Parties — Service of Appointment.]—Rule 455, O. J. Act, applies to the chancery division of the high court of justice. The service of a copy of an appointment to examine on the plaintiff's solicitor on a Sunday for a Monday is insufficient. Lovelace v. Harrington, 10 P. R. 157.

Judgment by Default — Service of rit.1 — Summons in electment served on 15th February (not being leap year). Judg-v. Cawley, 4 P. R. 87.

Money Due under Contract. | - Where the day on which money is due under an agreement falls on Sunday: - Semble, that the payment must be made on Saturday. Whit-tier v. McLennan, 13 U. C. R. 638.

Notice of Appeal - Insolvency.] order in insolvency was made on the 24th December, 1872. The fifth day thereafter fell on a Sunday:—Held, that service of notice of appeal on the Monday following was in time. Hood v. Dodds, 19 Gr. 639.

Notice of Motion.]-There must be two clear days between the service of a notice and the day for hearing the motion, and in the computation thereof Sunday is not to be reckoned. In re Crooks, 1 Ch. Ch. 304; overruling Sprague v. Henderson, ib. 213.

Where notice of motion had been given of an application to commit for not bringing in accounts in the master's office, and four days intervened between the service and the mo-tion, one of which was Good Friday, during which the master's office had been closed, the secretary refused the application without costs. Wilson v. Gould, 2 Ch. Ch. 236,

Notice of Trial.]-Sundays and holidays are excluded in computing the five days' notice necessary in a short notice of trial. Short notice of trial served on Wednesday for Monday:—Held, bad. O'Donnell v. O'Donnell, 10

Notice to Revising Officer.]-The ne tice to the revising officer in this case was left with his clerk at his office during the absence from town of the revising officer on Monday the 28th June, and on his return, on the afternoon of that day, he was told what had been done, and that, if he did not consider that sufficient, the notice would be procured again and cient, the notice would be procured again and served on him personally, but he said what was done was sufficient:—Held, that the last day for service for the sittings for the final revision to be held 12th July was Sunday the 27th June, but that, under s. 2, s. s. 2, of 48 & 49 Vict. c. 40 (D.), the time was extended, and S. had all the next day, and that the notice was well given on Monday. Application for Order pro Confesso.]—The six months after the service of the bill within which an order pro confesso may be obtained ex parte, are six calendar months. Boulton v. McNaughton, 1 Ch. Ch. 216.

Calls on Stock.]—Semble, that where an Act says "that no instalment of calls for stock shall be called for," except after the lapse of one calendar month from the time when the last instalment was called for, calls made for 1st May, June, July, and August, would be illegally made. Gas Co. v. Russell, 6 U. C. R. 567.

Where calls on stock were to be made "at periods of not less than three months' interval," and one call was made payable on the 10th August and another on the 10th November:—Held, that an interval of three months had not elapsed between the two calls, and that the second call was therefore bad, Stadacona Fire and Life Ins. Co. v. Mackenzie, 29 C. P. 10.

Cold Fire and Lipe Ins. Co. v. Egleson, 29 Gr. C. P. 10. See National Ins. Co. v. Filzsimmons, 32 C. P. 602; Union Fire Ins. Co. v. Filzsimmons, 32 Union Fire Ins. Co. v. Shoolbred, 4 O. R. 359.

Delivery of Attorney's Bill.] — The month required by 2 Geo. II. c. 23 for the delivery of an attorney's bill before the issuing of process, is a lunar and not a calendar month, and the day of the service of the bill is included. Berry v. Andruss, 3 O. S. 645.

Notice of Action.]—The notice required under 4 & 5 Vict. c. 26, s. 40, "one calendar month, at least," before action, means a clear month's notice, exclusive of the first and last days. Dempsey v. Dougherty, 7 U. C. R. 313,

Notice of action served on the 28th March, and writ sued out on 29th April:—Held, sufficient, as being at least one calendar month's notice. McIntosh v. Vansteenburgh, S U. C. R. 248.

Notice of Claim for Injury to Lands.]

—Held, that a notice of claim for injury sustained by the erection of a bridge over a river, given on the 10th September, 1857, under 20 Vict. c. 146, which received the royal assent on the 10th June, 1857, and requires three months' notice of such claim to be given, was sufficient. In re St. Andrew's Church Trustees and Great Western R. W. Co., 12 C. P. 399. See, also, Regina ex rel. St. Andrew's Church Trustees v. Great Western R. W. Co., 14 C. P. 462.

Notice to Continue Tenancy.]— The plaintiff executed a lease to one J. A. B. for three years from the 9th March, 1850, "provided the lessee shall, within three months previous to the 9th day of March next, which will be in the year 1861, give a notice in writing—" otherwise the premises should be given up on the 9th March, 1861," Notice was given by the lesse between the 9th December, 1860, and the 9th March, 1861, of his intention to continue the lease for the full three years. Defendants contended that by the lease the notice should have been given previous to the commencement of the three months:—Held, that by the terms of the proviso the notice was to be given (as it had been within three months prior to the 9th March, 1861, Shipman v. Grant, 12 C. P. 395.

Payment of Money—Contract,1—By the terms of an agreement dated the 20th September, money was to be paid within one month, and on the 21st October the money was tendered by the person who had to pay:—Held, sufficient, the day of the execution of the instrument being excluded, Barnes v. Boomer, 10 Gr. 532.

Redemption after Tax Sale.] — The time of redemption of land sold for taxes, under 6 Geo, IV. c. 7, being within twelve calendar months from the time of the sale, excludes the day on which the sale takes place; and the expression "from the time" may be held as either inclusive or exclusive of the day, according to the context in the statute and the bearing and object of its provisions. Boulton v. Ruttan, 2 O. S. 362.

The statute 6 Geo, I.V. c. 7 gives the whole of the day in the subsequent year unon which the sales takes place to redeem. Where a sale took place upon the 7th October, 1840, and the money was not naid to redeem till the 8th October, 1841:—Held, too late. Proudfoot v. Bush, 12 C. P. 52.

Report of Drainage Referee—Appeal—Vacation.]—The rules applicable to appeals from the high court to the court of appeal are to be applied, as far as possible, to appeals from reports of the drainage referee under the Drainage Act, 57 Vict. c. 56 (O.), and the Christmas vacation is to be excluded in the computation of the month within which, by s. 106 of that Act, such an appeal is to be made. Re Township of Raleigh and Township of Harvich, 18 P. R. 73.

Summons to Void Municipal Election.]—A summons issued within a month after the formal acceptance of office by a candidate for mayor of a city by taking the statutory declarations of qualification and office is in time, notwithstanding that it issued more than six weeks after the election, and more than a month after a speech accepting office made by the respondent at a meeting of electors, and certain other acts of a similar character, less formal than the statutory declaration. Regina ex rel. Felitz v. Howland,
11 P. R. 264.

Trial of Election Petition.]—38 Vict. c. 10, s. 2 (D. 1), enacts that "the trial of every election petition shall be commenced within six months from the time when such petition has been presented, and shall be proceeded with de die in dien, until the trial is over, unless, on application supported by afficability, it be shewn that the requirements of justice render it necessary that a postponement of the case should take place:"—Held, that the trial need not be commenced within six months in order to authorize a postponement, but that the commencement may be postponed beyond that time. Glengarry Election Case, 12 C. L. J. 117, not followed. In re Addington Election, Waggoner v. Shibley, 39 U. C. R. 131. See, also, Kingston Election Case, Stewart v. Macdonald, 39 U. C. R. 139. See Pauliment, 11 (d).

Vacating Office of Town Councillor—Absence from Meetings,—The plaintiffs and others, councillors of the town of Petrolia, attended a meeting of the council on the 5th April. They were absent at the next meeting called for and held on the 31st May and thenceforward, without authorization, till the 7th July, when, at a meeting of the council, a resolution declaring their seats vacant and ordering a new election was put, and an amendment to refer the matter to the town solicitor was lost: whereupon the dissentients left the room, in consequence of which there was no quorum, when the original motion was put and carried:—Held, that the three months should be counted from the 31st May, being the first meeting that the plaintiff and the others had not attended; and that the resolution was therefore void, as well as on the ground that there was no quorum present when it was passed. Mearns v. Town of Petrolia, 28 Gr. 98.

Writ of Summons in Ejectment—Serrice. 1—A writ of summons in ejectment is by C. S. U. C. c. 27, s. 3, to be in force for three months:—Held, that the day of the teste was to be reckoned, and that a writ issued on the 30th June is effect after midnight of the 29th September. In such case the copy and service of a writ will be set aside as irregular, but not the original writ. Fitch v. Walker, 7, P. R. S.

III. WEEKS.

Adjournment of Hearing—Justice of the Peace.]—Section 46 of the Canada Temperance Act provides that the hearing may be adjourned to a certain time and place, but no such adjournment shall be more than a week:—Held, that the week must be computed as seven days exclusive of the day of adjournment. Regina v. Collins, Regina v. Goulais, 14 O. R. 613.

Filing Pleading—Notice of Trial.]—A replication was filed on the 8th October, and the sittings of the court were held on the 30th:—Held, that the replication was filed three weeks before the commencement of the sittings. Wilson v. Black, 6 P. R. 130.

Notice of Additional Insurance.]—A policy avoided under s. 37 of 36 Vict. c. 44

(O.) for want of the assent of the company to an additional insurance in the manner prescribed, is revived under s. 38, and the company are deemed to have assented to the additional insurance, if after notice of such insurance the two weeks allowed by that section for the company to signify their dissent are allowed to elapse without such dissent:—Held, that in computing the two weeks the day of the receipt of the notice is excluded, so that where a notice was given on the 5th July, and the fire occurred on the 19th, the time had not expired. McCrea v. Waterloo County Mutual Fire Ins. Co., 26 C. P. 431.

Publication of Notice—Voting on By-law—Temperance Act, 1864,]—Under the Temperance Act of 1864, 27 & 28 Vict. c. 18. a requisition for the by-law must be published by the clerk for four consecutive weeks in some newspaper published weekly or oftener within the municipality, with a notice that on some day within the week next after such four weeks, a poll would be taken. The notice in this case, first published on Thursday the 12th January, appointed Tuesday the 7th February for the poll:—Held, too soon, and the by-law was quashed. It was contended that the four weeks must be computed from the first day of the week in which the first publication takes place, not from the day of such publication is made and Township of Pickering, 24 U. C. It. 439.

IV. YEARS.

[See R. S. O. 1877 c. 1, s. 8, s.-s. 15; R. S. O. 1897 c. 1, s. 8, s.-s. 15.]

Chattel Mortgage—Reneval.]—Where a mortgage was re-filled forty-seven days before a year from the first filing, it was held insufficient, the statute 12 Vict. c, 74 requiring that such re-filing shall take place "within thirty days next preceding" the expiration of one year. Beaty v. Fouler, 10 U. C. R. 382.

On the 18th July, 1851, one M. gave the plaintiff a mortgage on certain goods, which was duly registered on the following day. On the 16th July, 1852, he executed another mortgage, but to secure a smaller sum, the goods assigned being, with a few exceptions, the same as the first; this was registered on the 19th. On the same day, and before the registry, a fi. fa. against M. was placed in the sheriff's hands. There was not in the case of either assignment any actual delivery of goods:—Held, that the fi. fa. was entitled to prevail; that the first mortgage was waived by taking the second, and was therefore out of the question, though in any case it would have ceased to be in force after the 18th July, and the second filing would have been too late. McMartin v. McDougall, 10 U. C. R. 399.

Where the first filing of a chattel mortgage was on the 15th May, 1852, a re-filing on the 14th May, 1853, was clearly in time. Armstrong v. Ausman, 11 U. C. R. 498.

Execution—Renewal.]—The day of the teste of a fl. fa. lands, which by the C. L. P. Act. C. S. U. C. c. 22, s. 249, is to remain in force for one year from the teste, is inclusive, so that a writ issued on the 16th May, 1861, expires on the 15th May, 1862, and a renewal on the 16th May, 1862, is too late. Held, that a writ which had issued on 27th July, 1861, and had been renewed on the 22nd July, 1862, was entitled to prevail over a writ issued on the 16th May, 1862, Bank of Montreal v. Taylor, 15 C. P. 107.

Liquor License Act — By-law.] — The words "in any year" in s. 20 of the Liquor License Act mean "calendar year," and not "license year," and a by-law under that section. limiting the number of licenses for the ensuing or any future year, must be passed in the months of January or February in any year. Re Goulden and City of Ottawa, 28 O. R. 387.

Option to Purchase.]—The lessee had the right of purchase, on his desiring to do so within the period of two years after the date of the commencement of the term, the 1st April, 1852. On the 1st April, 1854, the desire of purchasing was declared:—Held, in time. Sutherland v. Buchauan, 9 Gr. 135.

Sale of Timber—Condition as to Remoral.]—One of the conditions of the sale was that the timber was to be removed by T. within two years:—Held, that the effect of the condition was that T. was only to have the right to cut and remove the timber within two years from the date of the agreement. Johnston v. Shortreed. 12 O. R. 633, followed. Steinhoff v. McRac, 13 O. R. 546.

School By-law.]—Sub-section 3 of g. St of the Public Schools Act, 54 Vict. c. 55 (O.), provides that by-law passed under the said section for altering, &c., school sections, shall not be passed later than 1st May in the year, and shall not take effect before the 25th December next thereafter:—Held, that the word "year" as used therein means the calendar year commencing 1st January and ending 31st December, and that a by-law altering certain school sections passed on the 25th September was invalid. In re Asphodel School Trustees and Humphries, 24 O. R. 682.

V. MISCELLANEOUS CASES.

Arrest—Statement of Claim—Extension of Time.]—There is power, after the expiration of the time appointed by rule 1044 for the delivery of the statement of claim, where a defendant is detained in custody under an order for arrest, to extend the time. The case is within rule 353, and the wording of rule 100 of the rules of Trinity term, 1856, has been altered from "shall have been given" to "is given" in rule 1044. Where the statement of claim was delivered two days after the month had expired, and the defendant moved for his discharge, an order was made validating it for all purposes, upon terms as to speedy trial and payment of costs. Winch v. Traviss, 18 P. R. 102.

Bill of Exchange—Authority—"Sight."]
—On the maturity of a bill of exchange the drawers thereof, thinking the acceptor would be unable to meet it, telegraphed him that if unable to meet it to draw on them for the amount:—Held, that no time being mentioned in the telegram an authority to draw at sight would be implied. Bank of Montreal v. Thomas, 16 O. R. 503.

"Forthwith" — Reasonable Time.] — Held, that the word "forthwith," contained in s. 4 of the Creditors Relief Act, R. S. O. 1887 c. 65, with reference to the entry by the sheriff of money levied under execution, must receive a strict construction, and means without any delay." Even if equivalent to "within a reasonable time," a delay of fifteen days after the sale was held to be not reasonable. Maxwell v. Searfe, 18 O. R. 529.

Term—Motion to Set aside Award.]—An award must be moved against within the term following its publication, or within the period which such term formerly occupied. And when the term has been abolished, where an award was published on the 13th August, 1888, notice of appeal dated 7th September, 1888, but not served till 10th September, 1888:—Held, too late, and the appeal was dismissed. Kean v. Edwards, 12 P. R. 625.

Timber—Regulations — Statutes,]—Inasmuch as the provisions and enactments relating to tolls in 31 Vict. c. 12 are, in substance and effect, the same as those contained in C. S. C. c. 28, under which the regulations relating to timber passing through the sildes were made, in virtue of the provisions of s. 71 of 31 Vict. c. 12, such regulations are in effect to be construed as having been made under the later statute. Merchants Bank of Canada v. The Queen, 1 Ex. C. R. 1.

Timber Slide Companies Act-Company — Forfeiture of Charter — Estoppel— Compliance with Statute—Res Judicata.1— In an action against a river improvement company for repayment of tolls alleged to have been unlawfully collected, it was alleged that been unlawfully collected, it was alreged into the dams, slides, &c., for which tolls were claimed, were not placed on the properties mentioned in the letters patent of the com-pany: that the company did not comply with the statutory requirement that the works should be completed within two years from the date of incorporation whereby the corporate powers were forfeited; that false returns were made to the commissioner of Crown lands upon which the schedule of tolls was fixed: that the company by its works and improvements obstructed navigable waters contrary to the provisions of the Timber Slide Companies Act, and could not exact toll in respect of such works. By a consent judgment in a former action between the same parties it had been agreed that a valuator should be ap-pointed by the commissioner of Crown lands, whose report was to be accepted in place of that provided for by the Timber Slide Companies Act, and to be acted upon by the com-missioner in fixing the schedule of tolls: missioner in Jaing the schedule of impeachment Held, that the above grounds of impeachment were covered by the consent judgment and were res judicata. Held, further, that the plaintiffs having treated the company as a corporation, using the works and paying the tolls fixed by the commissioner, and having in the present action sued the company as a corporation, were precluded from impugning its legal existence by claiming that its corporate legal existence by claiming that its corporate powers were forfeited. By R. S. O. 1887 c. 160, s. 54, it was provided that, if a com-pany such as this did not complete its works within two years from the date of incorpor-ation, it should forfeit all its corporate and other powers "unless further time is granted by the county or counties, district or districts, in or adjoining which the work is situate, or by the commissioner of public works:"—Sem-ble, that the non-completion of the work within two years would not, ipso facto, forfeit the charter, but only afford grounds for proceedings by the attorney-general to have a forfeiture declared. Another ground of objection to the imposition of tolls was, that the commissioner, in acting on the report of the valuator appointed under the consent judgment, erroneously based the schedule of tolls upon the report as to expenditure instead of as to actual value, and the statement of claim asked that the schedule be set aside and a scale of tolls fixed :-Held, that under the statute the schedule could only be allowed or varied by the commissioner, and the court could not interfere, especially as no application for relief had been made to the commissioner. Hardy Lumber Co. v. Pickerel River Improvement Co., 29 S. C. R. 211.

Toll Bridge-Franchise of-Free Bridge —Interference by—Injunction.]—By 44 & 45 Vict. (Q.) c. 90, s. 3, granting to the respondent a statutory privilege to construct a toll bridge across the Chaudière river in the parish of St. George, it was enacted that "so soon as the bridge shall be open to the use of the public as aforesaid, during thirty years no person shall erect, or cause to be erected. any bridge or bridges or works, or use or cause to be used any means of passage for the conveyance of any persons, vehicles, or cattle, for lucre or gain, across the said river, within the distance of one league above and one league below the bridge, which shall be measured along the banks of the river and following its windings; and any person or persons who shall build or cause to be built a toll bridge or toll bridges, or who shall use or cause to be used, for lucre or gain, any other means of passage across the said river for the conveyance of persons, vehicles, or cattle, within such limits, shall pay to the said David Roy three times the amount of the tolls imposed by the present Act, for the persons, cattle, or vehicles which shall thus pass over such bridge or bridges; and if any person or persons shall at any time, for lucre or gain, convey across the river any person or persons, cattle or vehicles, within the above mentioned limits, such offender shall incur a penalty not exceeding ten dollars for each person, animal, or vehicle which shall have thus passed the said river; provided always, that nothing contained in the present Act shall be of a nature to prevent any persons, cattle, vehicles, or loads from crossing such river within the said limits by a ford or in a canoe or other vessel, with-out charge." After the bridge had been used for several years, the appellant municipality passed a by-law to erect a free bridge across the Chaudière river in close proximity to the toll bridge in existence; the respondent thereupon by petition for injunction prayed that the appellant municipality be restrained from proceeding to the erection of a bridge :-Held, that the erection of the free bridge would be an infringement of the respondent's franchise of a toll bridge, and the injunc-tion should be granted. Corporation of Aubert-Gallion v. Roy. 21 S. C. R. 456.

Yukon Territory—Franchise over Dominion Lands.]—The executive government of the Yukon territory may lawfully authorize the construction of a toll tramway or waggon road over Dominion lands in the territory, and private persons using such road cannot refuse to pay the tolls exacted under such authority. Death of Plaintiff — Revivor.] — P. brought an action against a conductor of the Intercolonial Railway for injuries received in attempting to board a train, and alleged to be caused by the negligence of the conductor in not bringing the train to a standstill. On the trial P. was nonsuited, and on motion to the full court the nonsuit was set aside and a new rial ordered. Between the verdict and the judgment ordering a new trial, P. died, and a suggestion of his death was entered on the suggestion of his death was entered on the record. On appeal to the supreme court of Canada from the order of the full court:— Held, that under Lord Campbell's Act, or the equivalent statute in New Brunswick (C. S. N. B. c. 86), an entirely new cause of action arose on the death of P. and the original action was entirely gone, and could not be revived. There being no cause before the court, the appeal was quashed without costs. White v. Parker, 16 S. C. R. 699.

- Fraudulent Conveyance by Wife.]-To a bill against a married woman to set aside a mortgage made to her, on the ground that the same was fraudulent as against creditors, the husband was made a party defendant:

Semble, that such a dealing on the part of a married woman was a "tort," for which she could be proceeded against as if unmarried. McFarlane v. Murphy, 21 Gr. 80.

Joint Tort-feasors-Release to One.]-Quære, is a release to or satisfaction from one of several joint tort-feasors a bar to an action against the others? Grand Trunk R. W. Co. v. McMillan, 16 S. C. R. 543.

Judgment for Tort-Bar to Action on Covenant. — The plaintiff sued C., a division court bailiff, and his sureties, on their covenant; alleging a judgment recovered by himself against C., for selling his goods under execution, contrary to the orders of the plaintiff in the suit:—Held, declaration bad; for the plaintiff, having recovered judgment against C. for the tort, could not afterwards su upon the covenant for the same cause. Sloan v. Creasor, 22 U. C. R. 127.

Non-performance of Joint Duty.]-Semble, that when the tort alleged is the nonperformance of a joint duty (e.g., to repair a bridge). if the joint duty be not proved, the plaintiff must fail in toto, and cannot recover against one of the defendants on whom alone the duty is imposed. Woods v. County of Wentworth, 6 C. P. 101.

Preference—Creditor.]—A plaintiff suing for a tort is not a creditor within the mean-ing of the Ontario statutes as to preferences. Ashley v. Brown, 17 A. R. 500; Gurofski v. Harris, 27 O. R. 201.

- III. REGISTRATION, 6893.
- IV. MISCELLANEOUS CASES, 6895.

I. GENERALLY.

Alien-Rights of.]-The right at common law of an alien friend in respect to trade marks, stands on the same ground as that of a subject. Davis v. Kennedy, 13 Gr. 523.

Foreign User.]-User of a trade mark in a foreign country is no justification for an infringement in the country where the action is brought. Smith v. Fair, 14 O. R. 729.

Infringement-Profits-Account.]- The account of profits in an action for infringement should not be confined to the period subsequent to registration, at any rate when the infringement has not been innocent. Smith v. Fair, 14 O. R. 729.

Protection — Misleading Representation.]
—The principle on which the court protects trade marks is, that it will not permit a person to sell his own goods as the goods of another; a person, therefore, will not be allowed to use names, marks, letters, or other indicia, by which he may pass off his own goods to purchasers as the manufacture of another person. Met'all v. Theal, 28 Gr. 48.

Prior User.]—In an action to restrain the infringement of a trade mark registered under the Trade Mark and Design Act of 1889.—Held, following McCall v. Theal, 28 Gr. 48, that prior user can be given in evidence to invalidate the trade mark. Partio v.Todd, 12 O. R. 171, 14 A. R. 444, 17 S. C. R. 196.

Quality—Designation of—Name.]— Property cannot be acquired in marks, &c., known to a particular trade as designating quality merely, and not, in themselves, indicating that the goods to which they are affixed are the manufacture of a particular person. Nor can property be nequired in an ordinary English word expressive of quality merely, though it might be in a foreign word or word of a dead language. Partlo v, Todd, 17 S. C. R. 1964.

Right of User—Universality—Exclusiveness.]—The essential elements of a legal trade mark are: (1) the universality of right to its use, i.e., the right to use it the world over as a representation of, or substitute for, the owner's signature: (2) exclusiveness of the right to use it. Bush Mfg. Co. v. Hanson, 2 Ex. C. R. 557.

Transferee—Prior User.]—First use is the prime essential of a trade mark, and a transferee must, at his peril, be sure of his title. Groff v. Snow Drift Baking Powder Co., 2 Ex. C. R. 568.

II. INFRINGEMENT-PARTICULAR CASES.

Combination of Common Designations—Device.—Words which are separately public juris, such as "Red" and "Seal." when combined and applied to a specific manufacture may cease to be so, and may well be protected as trade marks. Single or more letters may also form a trade mark, and more especially when combined, woven, or introduced into a monogram. A common seal of wax to be used on a cigar box is a good trade mark within the terms of 42 Vict. c. 22 (D.), the Trade Mark and Design Act, 1879. Smith v. Fair, 14 O. R. 729.

Geographical Designation.] — The use of a geographical name in a secondary sense as part of the title identifying a mercantile journal, and not as merely descriptive of the place where the journal is published, will be protected. The use of the name "The Canada Bookseller and Stationer" was restrained as conflicting with the name "The Canadian Bookseller and Library Journal." Judgment in 27 O. R. 325 reversed. Rose v. McLean Publishing Co., 24 A. R. 240.

—— User — Registration.] — The plaintiffs, proprietors for about twenty years a commercial school, sought to reof a commercial school, sought of the strain the defendant, also a proprietor of a similar institution, lately established, in the same place, from using the name ded, in the same place, from using the name of the same place, it which, although the same place is the same place. generally used by the public in describing the plaintiffs' establishment, was not its registered name, and had never been adopted or appropriated by the plaintiffs themselves, who had carried on their business under different names, one of which was registered. After the defendant's advent some confusion arose in the post office as to letters addressed "Belle-ville Business College," but it did not appear that any students were lost to the plain-tiffs by reason of the defendant's conduct:— Held, that, as there had been no actual user by the plaintiffs of the name claimed, user by the public was not sufficient to attach the designation to the business so as to make it equivalent to the plaintiffs' personal user thereof. Held, also, that the name in contro-versy being merely descriptive of the nature of the business and the locality of its opera-tions, in the absence of evidence of user of the name by the plaintiffs, or that the name of the locality was so inseparably connected with their establishment that a secondary meaning was attributable to it, there was no ground for protecting the name. Thompson v. Montgomery, 41 Ch. D. 35, distinguished. No costs were given to the defendant, as he had sought by the use of the name to advantage himself in an unmeritorious way. Robinson v. Bogle, 18 O. R. 387.

Identical Shop Sign.]—The plaintiff carried on business in the city of L. having for his sign a figure of a gilt lion, and designating his place of business "The Golden Lion," Defendant for some years had conducted his business, and, having commenced on his own account in the same line of business, placed in front of his shop a figure somewhat similar to that used by plaintiff. The court restrained defendant from using as a sign this or any similar figure. Walker v. Alley, 13 Gr. 366.

Identity of Name.] — Plaintiffs sold liquid medicine in bottles, labelled "Perry Davis's Vegetable Painkiller." Defendant subsequently sold a similar kind of medicine in bottles, labelled "The Great Home Remedy, Kennedy's Painkiller." Plaintiffs claimed the word "Painkiller alone as their trade mark. It was proved that plaintiffs' medicine was known and sold in the market by the name of "Painkiller," before defendant's was introduced, and that the trade would not be decived by defendant's labels, although the general public might be. An injunction was granted restraining the use by defendant of the word "Painkiller" as a trade mark, with account of profits and costs. Davis v. Kennedy, 13 Gr. 523.

The words "Microbe Killer," regularly registered, constitute a valid trade mark. Injunction restraining its use granted. Davis v. Kennedy, 13 Gr. 523, followed. Radam v. Shaw, 28 O. R. 612.

Addition of other Words.]—The plaintiff had duly registered, as his trade mark in the manufacture of soap, the word "Imperial," with a star following it. Defendant put on his boxes the words "Imperial Bibasic Soap," An injunction was granted restraining him from using the word "Imperial." Crawford v. Shuttock, 13 Gr. 149.

-The mark "Imndant ibasic trainrial." —— Common Designation.]—Held, that trade mark distinguished the flour made by the plaintiff from that made by any other person, and, as such, was a proper subject of a rade mark within the language of s. 8 of the Act. Held, on the evidence, that "Gold Leaf" was a common brand for patent flour in use before the registration of the plaintiff's trade mark, and that the plaintiff is trade mark, and that the plaintiff is trade mark, and that the plaintiff had not the right to endeavour to attribute to that which he might manufacture a name which had been for years before a well-known and current name by which that article was defined, and that there must be judgment for defendant with costs, Partlo v. Todd, 12 O. R. 171, 14 A. R. 444, 17 S. C. R. 196.

Prior User — Registration.]—In the year 1855 the respondents, by their corporate title, registered a trade mark, consisting of a label with the name "Snow Flake Baking Powder "printed thereon, in the department of agriculture. Some four years after such registration by the respondents, the chaimant applied to register the word-symbol "Snow Flake" as a trade mark for the same claimant applied to register the word-symbol "Snow Flake" as a trade mark for the same class of merchandize—stating that he knew of the respondents' registration, and alleging that it was invalid by reason of prior use by him and his predecessors in title. The evidence sustained the claimant's allegation:—Held, that the word-symbol in question had become the specific trade mark of the claimant by virtue of first use, and that the registration by the respondents must be cancelled. Grouf v. Snow Drift Baking Powder Co., 2 Ex. C. R. 508.

—— Similarity of Appearance—Wrap-per.]—The plaintiff, a resident of New York, was engaged in the manufacture and sale of paper patterns, and under what he considered a permission from, or arrangement with, the a permission from, or arrangement with, the proprietors of an illustrated paper called "Harper's Bazaar," styled such patterns "Bazaar Patterns," which words he registered in the United States and in Canada as his trade mark, and for the purpose of extending his business in this Province appointed the defendant his agent for their sale, who for some years acted in that capacity, and sub-sequently commenced a like business in his own name, calling his patterns by the same name, stating that they were manufactured by "A. M. Theal," while those of the plaintiff were stated to be those of "James McCall & Co.;" the defendant, however, using envelopes of the same colour and size, lettered and numbered in precisely the same way, the only per-ceptible difference being in the name of the alleged agent, which, to casual observers, would readily pass unnoticed. Thereupon the plaintiff filed a bill to restrain the defendant from using the name "Bazaar Patterns," or from otherwise inducing the public to believe that the patterns sold by him were those manufactured by the plaintiff. The court, under the circumstances, thought there was not any exclusive right on the part of the plaintiff to the use of that term; but restrained the defendant from using wrappers similar to those of the plaintiff, or in any other way acting in such a manner as to lead to way acting in such a manner as to lead to the belief that the defendant was selling the goods of the plaintiff. The plaintiff, how-ever, having failed in the main branch of the relief sought—the use of the word "Bazaar" —this relief was granted without costs. Mc-Cull v. Theat, 28 Gr. 48. Personal Name — Representation—Evidence,]—The appellant company, being the transferce of the assets and goodwill of the dissolved Sabiston Lithographic and Publishing Company, sued to restrain the respondent from carrying on business under the name of that company, or any other name so framed as to lead to the belief that his business was in succession to that of the dissolved company:—Held, that the respondent had no right so to represent, but that there was no evidence that he had done so, and that the appellants were not entitled to an injunction against the mere use of the name. Montreal Lithographing Co. v. Sabiston, [1899] A. C. 630.

Right to Use for Limited Period—Right after Espiry.]—The proprietor of a firm name, not being merely his own name, who has sold the business with which it was connected, and with it the right to use the firm name for a limited period, cannot, after the expiry of the time, prevent the user of such name when he himself does not carry on or intend to carry on business under it. Love v. Latimer, 32 O. R. 231.

Similar Business.]—Hiram Piper and Noah Piper carried on business under the name of Hiram Piper & Brother. They afterwards dissolved partnership, and each carried on a like business in his own name. Subsequently Hiram assigned his business to the plaintiff, with authority to carry it on in Hiram's name, and then two sons of Noah Piper carried on a similar business next door, under the firm name H. Piper & Co. An injunction to restrain the use of that name was refused. Akins v. Piper, 15 Gr. 581.

Similarity of Appearance—Difference in Article.]—A person professed to sell the secret of a preparation called "Jones's Patent Flour," and became bound not to disclose the secret to any other person in Canada, nor make use of it himself, except at the instance and for the benefit of his vendee. Notwithstanding, he afterwards commenced selling a similar article, done up in bags, bearing a general resemblance to those of his vendee, although differing in some minute particulars, and led persons purchasing it to believe that it was the same article. The court granted an injunction to restrain him from selling the same preparation, or any other preparation, done up in such a manner as to lead the public to suppose that it was the same article, and from representing it to be such, although it was sworn by the vendor that the preparations were not the same. Whitney v. Hickling, 5 Gr. 605.

similarity of Device — Imitation,]—B. et al. manufactured and sold cakes of soap, having stamped thereon a registered trade mark, described as follows: A horse's head above which were the words "The Imperial;" the words "Tade Mark," one on each side thereof; and underneath it the words "Laundry Bar," "J. Barsalou & Co., Montreal," was stamped on the reverse side. D. et al. manufactured cakes of soap similar in shape and general appearance to those of B. et al., having stamped thereon an imperfect unicorn's head, being a horse's head, with a stroke on the forehead to represent a horn. The words "Very Best' were stamped one on each side of the head, and the words "A. Bonin, 115 St. Dominique St., and "Laundry" over and under the head.

was contradictory, but it was shewn that B, et al.'s soap was known, asked for, and purchased by a great number of illiterate persons as the "horse's head soap;"—Held, that there was such an imitation of B, et al.'s trade mark as to mislead the public, and that they were therefore entitled to damages, and to an injunction to restrain D, et al. from using the device adopted by them. Barsalou v. Darling, 9 S, C, R, 677.

Label—Imitation.]—The plaintiffs filed a bill to restrain the use of a label, or of any other label resembling it. Defendant admitted that the label he had used was an infringement of paintiffs' trade mark, but said that he had discontinued its use before suit, on hearing that the plaintiffs complained of the label, and that after suit he informed the plaintiffs' solicitors of this discontinuance, disclaimed all right of using the label, and was ready to account for the profits he had made, and to pay costs of suit. The solicitors declined to discontinue the suit, and defendant having put in his answer, the plaintiffs' brought the cause on for hearing upon bill and answer. Defendant not disputing that his label was an imitation of the plaintiffs', or that he was aware of the plaintiffs' property in their label, an injunction was granted, and defendant ordered to pay the costs of suit. Raducay v. Coleman, 13 Gr., 50.

- Label-Prior User-Rectification of Register.]—In the certificate of registration of Register.]—In the certificate of registration the plaintiffs' trade mark was described as consisting of "the representation of an anchor, with the letters' J. D. K. & Z.," or the words 'John DeKuyper & Son, Rotterdam,' &c., as per the annexed drawings and application.' In the application the trade mark was stated In the application the trade mark was stated to consist of a device or representation of an anchor inclined from right to left in combination with the letters "J. D. K. & Z." or the words "John DeKuyper, &c., Rotterdam," which, it was stated, might be branded or stamped upon barrels, kegs, cases, boxes, capsules, casks, labels, and other packages containing geneva sold by the plaintiffs. It was also stated in the application that on bottles was to be affixed a printed label, a copy or was to be affixed a printed label, a copy or fac-simile of which was attached to the application, but there was no express claim of the label itself as a trade mark. This label was white and in the shape of a heart with an ornamental border of the same shape, and on ornamental border of the same shape, and on the label was printed the device or representation of the anchor with the letters "J. D. K. & Z." and the words "John DeKuyper & Son, Rotterdam," and also the words "Genuine Hollands Geneva," which it was admitted were common to the trade. The defendants' trade mark was, in the certificate of registra-tion, described as consisting of an eagle hav-ing at the feet "V. D. W. & Co.," above the eagle being written the words "Finest Hollands Geneva;" on each side were the two faces of a medal, underneath on a scroll the name of the firm "Van Dulken, Weiland, & Co." and the word "Schiedam:" and lastly, at the bottom, the two faces of a third medal the whole on a label in the shape of a heart (le tout sur une étiquette en forme de cœur), The colour of the label was white:—Held, affirming the judgment in 4 Ex. C. R. 71, that the label did not form an essential feature of the plaintiffs' trade mark as registered, but that, in view of the plaintiffs' prior use of the white heart-shaped label in Canada, the defendants had no exclusive right to the use of the said label, and that the entry of registration of their trade mark should be so rectified as to make it clear that the heart-shaped label formed no part of such trade mark. De Kuuper v. Van Dulken, Van Dulken v. De-Kuuper, 24 S. C. R. 114.

Similarity of Name—Common Designation.]—The plaintiff, having registered as a trade mark the words "Imperial Cough Drops," sued the defendant for infringement thereof by selling confectionery under the name "Imperial Cough Candy ':—Held, that, inasmuch as the evidence shewed that the word "Imperial" as a designation or mark for cough drops or candy was really public property, and a common brand or designation for candy long before the plaintiff's registration, the plaintiff had not the right to attribute to that which he might manufacture a name which had been for years before a well-known and current name by which that article was defined; and the action must be dismissed. Partlo v. Todd, 12 O. R. 171, followed. Watson v. Westlack, 12 O. R. 449.

— Misleading Representation.]—G. carried on business in partnership with B., a part of the business being the sale of a series of copy books designed by B., to which was given the name "Beatty's Head-line Copy Book." The partnership was dissolved by B. retiring and receiving $10,000 for his interest in the business. After the dissolution B. made an agreement with the Canada Publishing Company to prepare a copy book for them, which copy book was prepared and styled "Beatty's New and Improved Head-line Copy Book," which the company for an injunction and an account, claiming that the sale of the last mentioned copy book was an infringement of his trade mark. He claimed an exclusive right to the use of the name "Beatty" in connection with his copy book, and alleged that he had paid a larger sum on the dissolution than he would have paid unless he was to have the exclusive sale of these copy books:
—Held, affirming the judgments in 6 O. R. 68 and 11 A. R. 402, that defendants had no right to sell "Beatty's New and Improved Headline Copy Book in any form, or with any cover calculated to deceive purchasers into the belief that they were buying the books of the plaintiff. v. Gage, ewspaper and Meras "The Commercial Traveller," and registered under the Trade Mark and besign. Act of 1879 as "The Company sold the paper and goodwill to the plaintiff, and on the negotiations for the sale the plaintiff, and on the negotiations for the sale the plaintiff and the negotiations for the sale the plaintiff saw the defendant, who was then employed by the company as manager and editor, and who shewed him the assets of the paper, the printing contracts, &c., and recommended the purchase as a good investment. After the sale, the defendant, who had retained the mailing list of the subscribers to the paper, published a new paper called "The Traveler," and used the list to send copies of were contained therein. It was shewn in evidence that while defendant was in the employ of the company he often used the word "Traveller" as designating the paper, then known as "The Commercial Traveller," In an action to restrain the defendant from infringing the plaintiffs trade mark:—Held, that the title of the paper published by the defendant was an infringement of the trademark of the plaintiff, and that the subsequent publication by the defendant of a newspaper under the name of "The Traveller" was calculated to mislead persons, and induce them to believe the plaintiff's paper was the paper referred to. Carey v. Goss., 110. R. 619.

Common Designation.]—The plaintiffs sold sheets of paper saturated with flypoison, under the name of "Wilson's Fly Poison Pad." These words were registered by them as a trade mark and were printed on each sheet. The defendants also manufactured and sold fly paper poison in the form of pads, but printed upon them the words, "Lyman Bros. & Co. Lightning Fly Paper Poison," and upon the packages containing them the additional words, "6 pads in a package" or "3 pads in a package" or "4 paper poison had become known to the trade as "pads," but failed to shew that it was so identified with the plaintiffs" goods as to deceive the public into the belief that in purchasing pads they were getting the plaintiffs" goods:—Held, that the word "pads" had become so far publici juris, that the defendants, as manufacturers and vendors of fly poison, were entitled to describe as "pads" sheets of paper prepared by them, the general appearance of the sheets being different, and the defendants' name appearing prominently on them. Wilson v. Lipman, 25 A. R. 303.

III. REGISTRATION.

Assignment—Cancellation of Prior Registration.]—Where the respondents had obtained the right to use a certain trade mark in the Dominion of Canada only, and had registered the same, and claimants subsequently applied to register it as assignees under an unlimited assignment thereof, made before the date of the instrument under which the respondents claimed title, the prior registration was cancelled. Bush Mlg. Co. v. Hanson, 2 Ex. C. R. 557.

Necessity for Registration.]—Although s. 4 of the Trade Mark and Design Act of 1879, 42 Vict. c. 22 (D.), requires registration of the trade mark before the proprietor can bring an action, and s. 14 provides for registration of an assignment, the latter section does not enact that registration shall Vol. III, p—217—68 be necessary to give effect to such assignment. Carey v. Goss, 11 O. R. 619.

Effect of Registration—Colour of Device—Right to Assign.—The Dominion Trade Mark and Design Act, 1879, defines "trade mark" in more general and comprehensive terms than the English Act of 1885, 46 Virc. 5. 5. etc., and some care must be used in considering English decisions. Under the English Act a trade mark may be registered in any colour, and the registration confers on the registered owner the exclusive right to use the same in that or any other colour; and semble, our own Act has as extensive an application. There is no provision in our Trade Mark and Design Act, 1879, similar to 8, 70 of 46 & 47 Vict. c. 57 (Imp.), which provides that a trade mark when registered shall be assigned and transmitted only in connection with the goodwill of the business concerned in the particular goods for which it has been registered. Smith v. Pair, 14 O. R. 729.

Want of Title.)—The fact of proprietorship or ownership is a condition precedent of the right to register a trade mark or to obtain any advantage under the Trade Mark and Design Act of 1879, and registration thereunder does not create or confer such status on an unqualified person, and his right thereto may be disallowed. Partie v. Todd, 14 A. R. 444, 12 O. R. 171.

Jurisdiction of Exchequer Court— Rectification of Register—Infringement.]— The court has jurisdiction to rectify the register of trade marks in respect of entries made therein without sufficient cause, either before or subsequent to the 10th day of July, 1891, the date on which the Act 54 & 55 Vict. c. 35 (D.) came into force, Quere, whether the court has jurisdiction to give relief for the infringement of a trade mark where the cause of action arose out of acts done prior to the passage of 54 & 55 Vict. c. 26 (D.) DeKuyper V. Van Dulken, 3 Ex. C. R. S8.

— Rights of Property.]—The questions which the court has jurisdiction to determine under the Act 53 Vict. c. 14 (D.) are such as relate to rights of property in trade marks, and not questions as to whether or not a trade mark ought not to be registered, or continued on the registry, because it is calculated to deceive the public, or for such other reasons as are mentioned in R. S. C. c. 63, s. 12, The Queen v. Van Dulken, 2 Ex. C. R. 304.

Necessity for Action before Registration—Subsequent Action—Fraudulent Imitation.]—The fact that a plaintiff has brought an action for infringement before registering his trade mark, which action has therefore proved abortive, does not prevent him from bringing another action after registering. Semble, the inability to sue for the infringement of a trade mark before registration only applies where the infringement has been done innocently, and not to the case of fraudulent imitation or forgety of trade marks. Smith v. Fair, 14 O. R. 729.

Prior User.]—By "prior user" the Trade Mark and Design Act, 1879, 42 Vict. c. 22, s. 6 (D.), means user before adoption by the registrant, not before registration. Smith v. Fair, 14 O. R. 729.

Resemblance between Marks—Refusal to Register both—Grounds of.]—The object of s. 11 of the Act respecting Trade Marks and Industrial Designs, R. S. C. c. 63. as enacted in 54 & 55 Vict. c. 25 (D.), is to prevent the registration of a trade mark bearing such a resemblance to one already registered as to mislead the public, and to render it possible that goods bearing the trade mark proposed to be registered may be sold as the goods of the owner of the registered trade mark, The resemblance between the two trade marks, justifying a refusal by the minister of agriculture to register the second trade mark, or the court in declining to make an order for its registration, need not be so close as would be necessary to entitle the owner of the registered trade mark to obtain an injunction against the applicant in an action for infringement. It is the duty of the minister to refuse to register a trade mark when it is not clear that deception may not result from such registration. Eno v. Dunn, 15 App. Cas. 252, and In re Trade Mark of John Dewhurst & Son, Ltd.. (1896) 2 Ch. 137, referred to. In re Melchers and Deknyper & Son, 6 Ex. C. R. 83.

what May be Registered—Rectification.—It is only a mark or symbol in which property can be acquired, and which will designate the article on which it is placed as the manufacture of the person claiming an exclusive right to its use, that can properly be registered as a trade mark under the Trade Mark and Design Act. 1879, 42 Vict. c. 22 (D.) Where the statute prescribes no means for rectification of a trade mark improperly registered, the courts may afford relief by way of defence to an action for infringement. Partlo v. Todd, 17 S. C. R. 196.

See Robinson v. Bogle, 18 O. R. 387, ante II: Groff v. Snow Drift Baking Pouder Co., 2 Ex. C. R. 568, ante II.: DeKupper v. Vo., Dulken, Van Dulken v. DeKupper, 4 Ex. C. R. 71, 24 S. C. R. 114, ante II.

IV. MISCELLANEOUS CASES.

Security for Costs—Action to Expunge from Register.]—On an application by the plaintiffs to expunge the defendants' trade mark from the register, the defendants, resident out of the jurisdiction, applied for and obtained an order for security for costs against the plaintiffs, also resident out of the jurisdiction; plaintiffs thereupon applied for a similar order upon the ground that the matter was within the discretion of the court: —Held, that security should not be ordered against the defendants, Wright v, Royal Baking Powder Co., 6 Ex. C. R. 143.

TRADE UNIONS.

Combination in Restraint of Trade—Strikes—Social Pressure.]—Workmen who, in carrying out the regulations of a trade in company with non-union workmen, without threats, violence, intimidation, or other illegal means, take such measures as result in preventing a non-union workman from obtaining employment at his trade in establishments where union workmen are engaged, do not thereby incur liability to an action for damages. Judgment in Q. R. 6 Q. B. 65 affirmed. Perrault v. Gauthier, 28 S. C. R. 241.

Expulsion of Member — Articles of Association—By-law in Restraint of Trade—Regality — Militia Act.] — The planniff, a musician and a member of the active militia of Canada and of the band of a militia regiment, became a member of the defendant assoa body incorporated Friendly Societies and Insurance Corporations Act, whose object was "to unite the instru-mental portion of the musical profession for the better protection of its interests in general and the establishment of a minimum rate of prices to be charged by members of the said association for their professional services, and the enforcement of good faith and fair dealing between its members, and to assist members in sickness and death." After the plaintiff had become a member, the defendants adopted and added as part of one of their articles of association the following: "No member of this association shall play on any engagement this association shall play on any engagement with any person who is playing an instrument, unless such person can shew the card of this association in good standing. This by-law shall not apply to oratorio or symphony concerts, bands doing military duty, or amateurs. . ." After the passing of this by-law, the plaintiff and the other members of the regimental band to which he belonged played at a concert, in uniform, under the direction of the bandmaster, and with the perdirection of the bandmaster, and with the permission of the commandant and officers of the regiment. For so playing (some of the band not being members of the association) a fine was imposed on the plaintiff by the executive committee of the defendants, and, in consequence of its not being paid within the time prescribed, he was expelled from membership: prescribed, he was experied from membership.

Held, that, at the time the plaintiff joined the association, it was a legal society, its objects being of a friendly and provident nature; but the amendment was unreasonable and in restraint of trade, and for that reason, and in restraint of trade, and for that reason, and also because contrary to the Queen's army regulations and the Militia Act of Canada, was illegal, and the plaintiff's expulsion was invalid, and he was entitled to an injunction and damages. Rigby v. Connol, 14 Ch. D. 482, Mineral Water Bottle, &c., Society v. Booth, 36 Ch. D. 465, Swaine v. Wilson, 24 Q. B. D. 252, and Chamberlain's Whatr, Limited v. Smith, [1900] 2 Ch. 605, considered. Fine—Deprivation of Benefits—Action—Bar—Defumation.]—An action by a member of a trade union, baving a monetary interest in its funds, against certain of his fellow-members for unlawfully imposing a fine upon him, and expelling him in default of payment, and depriving him of benefits, is within the prohibition of s. 4 of the Act respecting Trades Unions, R. S. C. c. 131, providing that the court is not to entertain any legal proceeding instituted with the object of directly enforcing or recovering damages for a breach of any agreement for the application of the funds of a trade union to the carbon of the funds of a trade union to the benefits to members. Righy v. Connol, 14 Ch. D. 428, followed. The alleged offence for which the fine was inflicted was the causing an extra apprentice to be brought into the yard in which the plaintiff and defendants were employed. The defendants, after being told by their employer that the plaintiff had nothing to do with bringing the apprentice in, wrote and caused to be published in their trade journal a statement that the strike ordered by the union when the apprentice was brought in would not have occurred but for the treachery of the plaintiff, who richly deserved the fine imposed:—Held, that the publication was not rivileged. On appeal to a divisional court it was held that the evidence did not support the finding that the defendants knew that the words complained of were untrue, nor was there evidence of malice, and that in the absence thereof the communication was privileged; and the appeal was allowed. I. To Goods.

1. Damages.

Detention—Chattel Mortgage—Value.]—
Chattel mortgage—Sale to plaintiff by mortgager of horse mortgaged, with oral consent of mortgagee—Seizure by mortgagee and detention for four days before returning it—Held, damages recoverable for the detention only, not the value of the horse. Loueks v. McSlon, 29 C. P. 54.

Expenses of Criminal Proceedings.]—Plaintis used defendant for money of which he had robbed him, and for the money he had spent in a criminal proceeding for the erime, and for damages for the trespass. The second count of the declaration was for trespass. The third count set out the robbery, the conviction, and that plaintiff had been put to expense in bringing defendant to justice, whereby the latter became liable to the former for the sums so expended:—Held, that, though the third count might be good in trespass, it was not so in assumpsit, and that either the second or third count must be struck out. Semble, that the plaintiff could not recover his expenses and outlay in this action. Petit v. Mills, 6 P. R. 297.

Joint Trespass—Excess as to One Defendant.]—In joint trespass, each defendant is liable for the damage occasioned to the plaintiff by the joint act, and the court will not interfere because, as regards one, the vertice may be excessive. Grantham v. Severs, 25 U. C. R. 468.

Loss of Profits.]-The plaintiffs had a large quantity of logs boomed in a river, and while there a drive of about 5,000 logs, belonging to one C., came past without injuring the boom, which was strong and well construct-ed. Defendants had a large number of logs boomed above the plaintiffs, some of which were let down at night, and in the morning were found in a jam against the plaintiffs' boom. This jam was broken up, and more of the defendants' logs were let down, soon after which the plaintiffs' boom was found broken, the plaintiffs not being present, and their logs They went down the stream with defendants' logs, and some were afterwards found, but about 125,000 feet were lost, and there was evidence tending to shew that they had been taken by defendants men to a soint about twenty miles away. There was evidence also that defendants' conduct was unrensonable in making their drive when and as they did:—Held, in trespass and trover for the logs, that there was evidence for the jury that defendants had broken the plaintiff's boom by the undue pressure of their logs; and that defendants were liable without proof that they had actually used or cut up the plaintiffs logs; and a verdict for the plaintiffs was up-held. Held, also, there being no evidence that the plaintiffs could have purchased other logs at the time when and place where the wrong was done, that they were entitled to recover the loss of profits, which the jury found they would have made out of the logs lost by defendants' misconduct. Auger v. Cook, 39 U. C. R. 537.

Value — Excess over.] — In trespass for taking timber, the court refused to disturb the verdict on the ground that the damages were beyond the value of the logs taken. Flint v. Bird, 11 U. C. R. 444.

Excess over — Injury to Goods.]—
In the removal of the plaintiff's goods by the sheriff, the plaintiff's goods by the sheriff, the plaintiff's goods by the sheriff, the plaintiff's loom was taken down and injured, but the possession was restored to him with his other goods:—Held, that he was not entitled to damages for the loss of time and work consequent on his not having repaired the loom: and that the true measure of damages could not have exceeded the value of the article damaged at the time of the trespass, and compensation for any temporary inconvenience occasioned by its sudden removal. Benson V. Connor, 6 C. P. 356.

Excess over — Interest — Special Damage, ——In an ordinary action of trespass for taking goods, the measure of damages is the value of the goods when taken (which the jury may estimate liberally) and interest. It is only in a very peculiar case that such value can be exceeded; and the excess claimed must be stated as special damage. Maxwell v. Crann, 13 U. C. R. 253.

— Mode of Determining.]—Defendants, division court bailiffs, were sued for selling under executions a horse which the plaintiff claimed as exempt under 23 Vict, c. 25. The horse was sold for $12.00; and the purchaser swore that he considered it worth $90:—Held, that the value of the horse was to be determined upon the whole evidence, and not only by the price it brought at the sale. McMartin V, Hurblurt, 2 A. R. 146.

is had a Verdict below - Plaintiff's Interest in Goods.]—Defendant, being guardian in in-solvency to the estate of one W., seized goods iver, and s, belongin plaintiffs possession exceeding $800 in value, which the plaintiff claimed under a purchase from W., made about two months before W. absconded. The circumstances aturing the onstructr of logs of which tending the alleged purchase were very susmorning plaintiffs The plaintiff had been working for W. as a labourer, having no capital, and he more of oon after had given his notes for the purchase money, with an agreement to deposit all receipts from sales to the credit of such notes weekly, and that W. might retake the goods on default. d broken, their logs with deterwards It was sworn, too, that when the seizure was It was sworn, too, that when the seizure was made he said they should at least allow him wages. The jury were told to find for defen-dant, if they considered the transaction to be lost, and that they o a noint was evifraudulent, but they found for the plaintiff, was ungiving only $65 :- Held, that, admitting dem and as fendant to be a mere wrongdoer, the jury, rover for the jury with a view to damages, might take into consideration the true nature of the plaintiff's interest; and a new trial was refused. Contributory Negligence-Pleading.] In trespass for driving against plaintiff's horse, that the accident happened from plaintiff's negligence, or without any fault of defendant, could not be shewn under the general issue, but must have been pleaded specially. Macdonald v. Monk, 3 O. S. 20.

Jus Tertii—Pleading.]—Pleas: (1) Not guilty. (2) Goods not plaintiff's. Defendant desired to give evidence that the goods belonged to a third party, and that a fourth party had a right as landlord to follow and seize them, and that defendant, deriving his authority from such fourth party, was justified in lawing seized them:—Held, that the evidence was rightly rejected, and that the defence should be specially pleaded. Tyson v. Little, 8 U. C. R. 434. them, and that defendant, deriving his author

Leave and License-Standing by - Husband and Wife—Pleading.] — The plaintiff went to British Columbia nine years before this action, leaving his wife here, to whom he wrote, and occasionally sent money. She wrote, and occasionary sent money. San procured defendant to indorse a note made by her for the price of furniture to carry on a boarding house (which she subsequently car-ried on with the plaintiff's knowledge), and executed to defendant a chattel mortgage under seal in her own name on said furniture. The rent of the house being in arrear, and part of the mortgage money overdue, the landlord distrained, and defendant enforced his mortgage; and the plaintiff's wife not dissenting, but rather assenting, the goods were sold off, and the balance, after the payment of rent and mortgage, was handed over to her. The plaintiff thereupon sued defendant in trespass and trover :- Semble, that the wife standing by and permitting the sale of the property under the mortgage was some evidence under the plea of leave and license, penny v. Pennock, 33 U. C. R. 229, Production of Warrant - Bailiff -Execution Creditor.]—The fi. fa. and warrant to the bailiff must be proved, or its non-production accounted for, in order to charge the plaintiff in the execution with trespass committed by the bailiff. Cameron v. Lount, 4 U. C. R. 275.

See Auger v. Cook, 39 U. C. R. 537.

See post 4 (b).

3. Judgment in Trespass-Effect of.

Right to Proceeds of Sale of Goods-Attachment — Division Court Clerk.] — The plaintiff and others took out attachments against an absconding debtor, and the goods seized being claimed, the plaintiff indemnified the bailiff, who sold, and paid over the money to defendant, the clerk of the division court. The claimants sued the plaintiff and the pur-chasers in trespass, and recovered from them the value of the goods, after which defendant distributed the money among the attaching creditors, of whom he himself was one, pro-rata. The plaintiff thereupon sued defendant and his sureties as for money received to his use :- Held, that he could not recover, for the money was not received by defendant in his official capacity as the plaintiff's, and the recovery against the plaintiff, to which defend-ant was a stranger, could not make it his as against defendant, so as to support this action upon the statutory covenant. Quære, whether the plaintiff, having procured the money to be paid to the defendant as that of the attaching creditors, could afterwards claim it as his own. Preston v. Wilmot, 23 U. C. R.

Title to Goods-Relation back.]-Trespass for taking plaintiff's cattle. Plea, not possessed. It was proved that the cattle had belonged to the defendant, from whom the plaintiff had leased them with a farm, but the plaintiff had detained them after the term had expired, for which defendant had sued him and recovered damages to the value of the cattle after this action was brought :-Held, that the plaintiff could not treat this verdict as giving him a title to the cattle, by relation back, at the time this action was commenced. Abrams v. Moon, 1 U. C. R. 552.

Use and Occupation - Bar.]-Quere, whether a judgment in replevin could be a bar to an action for use and occupation. Crooks v. Bowes, 22 U. C. R. 219.

5. Right of Property and Possession—Status to Maintain Trespass.

Bailee—Rights against Wrongdoer.]—The mare which had been injured by defendant's bull. for which the plaintiff sued, was in plaintiff's field at the time of the accident, and had been put there by his father, who said he had given it to the plaintiff:—Semble, that the right of property was immaterial, as the plaintiff, even if only a bailee, could recover its value in trespass or case against a wrong-doer. Mason v. Morgan, 24 U. C. R. 328.

Change by Work Done.]—Where stones were tortiously removed and severed from the land, and cut and shaped into mill stones:—Held, that the person who had so taken and worked them could not maintain trespass against the owner of such land, who had got them into his possession by directing the carriers of them to deliver them on his premises, as the property had not been changed by the work done to the stones. Baker v. Flint, 3 O. S. Sö.

Crops—Purchaser.]—A person purchasing a crop of wheat at sheriff's sale may bring trespass against a person converting or injuring it, though he may never have received possession of the field. Haydon v. Crawford, 3 O. S. 583.

Purchaser of Land — Person in Possession.]—A. living abroad, sends to an agent here to purchase land for B., who was living in the Province, and to take the conveyance to himself (A.) This was done, and B. was put in possession of the land, and theneeforth used and cultivated it for his own benefit. At the time of purchase a crop of wheat was in the ground :—Held, that B., and not A., should sue in treepass for cutting and carrying away the wheat. Quere, did the property in the wheat pass to A. or B. Campbell v. Cushman, 4 U. C. R. 9.

Goods in Custody of Law—Rights of Peace Officer.] — When the plaintiff, a constable, had seized a horse under a distress warrant, and the horse escaped to a railway and was killed, owing to the defendants' neglect to fence:—Held, that the plaintiff had sufficient property in the horse to entitle him to sue. Simpson v. Great Western R. W. Co., 17 U. C. R. 57.

Lease of Goods — Reversioner.] — A. having a reversionary interest in goods leased to B. The sheriff seized them under an execution against B., but did not sell or remove them. A, sued the sheriff for an alleged injury to his reversionary interest:—Held, that if any trespass was committed by the seizure, B. should sue, and not A. Henderson v. Moodie, 3 U. C. R. 348.

Mortgaged Goods — Rights of Mortgagec.]—B. assigned to the plaintiff certain household goods by a bill of sale, which contained a proviso for redemption on a day certain, with a covenant that in case of default in payment, or of B. attempting to dispose of the goods, the plaintiff might take possession and sell or retain them for his own use, but which contained no clause authorizing B. to remain in possession until default:—Held, that the plaintiff had sufficient right to possession of the goods to maintain trespass against the sheriff under a fi. fa. against B., the jury having found the mortgage to be bonâ fide. Porter v. Flittoff, 6 C. P. 335.

Stolen Property — Taking from Purchaser—Revesting.] — When a horse was stolen from the plaintiff and bought by the defendant at public auction, but not in market overt, and the plaintiff afterwards seeing the horse took possession of it, and defendant immediately retook it:—Held, that the plaintiff had a right to retake it, no property having passed to defendant by the sale; and that, although it was in his possession only for a moment, the property revested in him. and he could maintain trespass against defendant for the retaking. Bowman v. Yielding, M. T. 3 Vict.

Timber—Clearing Agreement.]—The person clearing land under an agreement to enter upon and clear land, and take the wood after it is cut down in payment of the labour, may maintain trespass against the owner of the land for taking away the wood after it is cut down, although be has no possession in the land to enable him to maintain trespass q. c. f. Hamilton v. McDonell, 5 O. S. 720, Vessel — Scizure under Revenue Laws — Effect of.]—On the 7th June defendant, a collector, seized the plaintiff's vessel for a breach of the revenue laws. The plaintiff petitioned the government, and on the 7th July received an answer from defendant informing him that the government had refused to interfere. On the 8th the plaintiff served a notice of claim — Held, that the notice of claim required by s. 40 of 10 & 11 Vict. c. 31 to be given within one calendar month from the day of seizure, could not be waived by any representation of defendant to the plaintiff. (2) That no notice having been given within the time allowed, the vessel was thereby condemned; and that by the act of seizure the plaintiff was deprived of his right of property, and therefore unable to maintain trespass. Dame v. Carberry, 10 U. C. R. 374.

6. Seizure under Execution.

(a) Liability of Attorney.

Interference—Direction.]—Where an attorney directed the sheriff not to give up the goods of A. seized under an attachment as the goods of B.:—Held, that he became a trespasser by such direction. Radenhurst v. McLean, 40, 8, 281.

TRESPASS.

Issue of Execution after Satisfaction
—Joint Trespass.]—Where, after a defendant had paid and satisfied a judgment recovered against him, the plaintiff's attorney, acting under the plaintiff's instructions, issued a fi, fa. under which defendant's goods were taken in execution:—Held, that the plaintiff and the attorney were jointly liable as trespassers; and that the mere fact of the attorney acting under his client's instructions, without setting up even if it would be a defence) want of notice or knowledge of the judgment being satisfied, afforded him no protection. Mooney v, Maughan, 25 C. P. 244.

Non-interference — Absence of Direction.—Defendant, a division court balliff, refused on demand to give up the goods to the plaintiffs until he should consult the attorney, who told him to use his own judgment:—Held, that this did not make the attorney a wrong-doer and answerable for the balliff's conduct. Steucart v. Coucan, 40 U. C. R. 346.

Where either the execution plaintiff or his attorney direct the seizure of particular goods, they are liable, but not where the writ is given to the officer to be acted upon in the usual course and with no special direction. Phillips v. Findloy, 27 U. C. R. 32. See also McClevertie v. Massie, 21 C. P. 516, post (b).

(b) Liability of Execution Creditors and Others.

Absence of Actual Scizure — Equivalent.] — A defendant against whose goods a sheriff had an execution (afterwards set aside for irregularity), drove to the sheriff's office and gave his deputy a list of his property as seized, but without any actual seizure:—Held, not sufficient to support trespass against the then plaintiff. Hervey v. Alccander, H. T. 2 Vect.

Continuance of Wrongful Scizure—Directions.1—On the 6th February the attorneys for the execution defendant, who was such as the scize a particular horse mentioned, and they contended that, as-on receipt of this letter the bailiff should have given the horse up, they were not liable for its further detention. The evidence shewed that the horse seized was not the one mentioned in the letter:—Semble, that if it had been, defendants would still have been liable for the continuance of the wrongful seizure which they had authorized. Henry v. Mitchell, 37 U. C. R. 217.

Directions of Solicitor — Liability of Creditor for—Evidence of Trespass, !—In trespass for seizing goods it appeared that the defendants, who had a chim against one B., instructed their attorney to collect it, and that the attorney, having issued execution, handed it to the sheriff, informing him that B, lived at l'aris, where he kept a fruit store. The deputy sheriff said it would be a good time "to make a haul" (being near Christmas), to which the attorney answered that it would; and the seizure was then made. The plaintiff having chaimed the goods, the attorney told the sheriff to hold possession, as they wished to make inquiries, and the sheriff did so until an interpleader order issued:—Held, that the defendants were bound by the acts and directions of their attorney, and that there was sufficient evidence to go to the jury to connect them with the seizure. Slaight v. West, 25 U. C. R. 301.

Defendant issued an attachment in insolvency against one M., and obtained for H., his bookkeeper, a warrant as sheriff's bailiff, with which he despatched him to where M. carried on business, instructing him to see about the goods in his possession, and, as H. thought, telling his solicitors the goods were to be seized. H. accordingly went and seized the goods, which were at the time being sold at auction for plaintiff, who asserted that he had bought them from M. On his return H. informed defendant, who approved of what he had done, It also appeared that defendant's attorney had given the writ to the sheriff, with instructions to seize the goods:—Held, following the last case, that there was evidence to go to the jury of defendant's liability for the seizure. McClevertie v. Massie, 21 C. P. 546.

— Liability of Creditor for — Evidence of Trespass.]—The defendants, who lived in Hamilton, had a claim against W. at Ingersoll, and, thinking he was carrying on business on his own account, issue a writ therefor, through their solicitors C. & B., which was served by C., who went to Ingersoll under special instructions from defendants to do so, and to take such steps as he and B. might think best to recover the claim. A judgment was afterwards obtained, and an execution against W.'s goods issued. sheriff sent his officer to execute the writ, who was informed by W. that he had no goods, which the officer believed to be true, and so informed the sheriff, who accordingly notified C. & B. C. & B. refused to accept this, and wrote the sheriff in effect that he had improperly refrained from seizing the goods, acting on ex parte statements, and that he must take such action as would enable him to test the truth of the statements he had acted on. The sheriff then seized the goods and applied for an interpleader order. The goods were proved to be the plaintiff's. In an action to recover damages occasioned by the seizure: Held, that the sheriff must be assumed to have seized, under the circumstances, under instructions from the defendants' solicitors, and, as the solicitors were acting under spe-cial instructions from the defendants to take such proceedings as they might think best, the defendants were liable to the plaintiff. Smith v. Keal, 9 Q. B. D. 340, distinguished. Wilkinson v. Harvey, 15 O. R. 346.

Fi. Fa. Good on its Face—Acting under —Irregularity—Waiver.]—Defendant obtained a conditional garnishee order against the plaintiff, which gave an opportunity to contest the claim, on payment of certain costs within a time fixed, after the lapse of which a fi. fa. issued, plaintiff not having availed himself of the condition. Both parties were present when the order was made, and there had previously been a good attaching order. No motion was made to set aside the fi. fa., which appeared good on its face, but plaintiff brought trespass against defendant for the seizure, as having been issued on a conditional and void order :-Quære, whether the order was void; but if so, semble, that the fi. fa. was at most irregular, and might have been set aside on motion. Held, therefore, that, set aside on motion. Held, therefore, that as nothing appeared either on the face of the record or on the evidence making the writ a void process, defendant was protected by it, and trespass would not lie against him. Acrns v. Phelan, 19 C. P. 288.

Fi. Fa. Issued without Authority-Valid Judgment.] — Trespass will not lie against a person who without authority procures the issue of an execution on a judgment admitted to be valid and satisfied, and the sei-zure of the plaintiff's goods thereunder. To a declaration against L. and M., in trespass for taking plaintiff's goods, defendants pleaded that one C. recovered a judgment in the county court against the plaintiff, on which he, by defendant L. as his attorney, sued out a fi. fa., which was returned nulla bona, and that afterwards, the judgment remaining in force and unsatisfied, defendant L. instructed defendant M. to, and defendant M. did, issue an alias fi. fa., on which the plaintiff's goods were seized, which are the alleged trespasses, The plaintiff replied that defendant L., when he so instructed defendant M., was Judge of the county court, and had ceased to be C.'s attorney, and had no authority from C. to issue the alias fi. fa. Defendants rejoined that the alias fi. fa. at the time of the seizure was in full force, and not then or at any time annulled or set aside:—Held, that the re-joinder was good. McQuade v. Lizars, 39 U. C. R. 215.

Fi. Fa. Subsequently Set aside-Sale -Damages.]-A. gave to B. a cognovit, judgment to be entered immediately, but execution to issue only in certain events. On the 8th November B. put a fi, fa. into the sheriff's hands, and on the 18th A.'s goods were seized at his store, but he was allowed to retain them on giving security to the sheriff. the seizure A. obtained a summons to set aside the fi. fa. for breach of faith, which was enlarged at B.'s request. On the 13th January, while the application was pending, B.'s attorney telegraphed to his agent at London not to let the sheriff close A.'s store. The sheriff then requested instructions from the agent what to do, but received none; afterwards this agent told him of reports that A. was selling the property, &c., and suggested a sale, and the sheriff accordingly sold a portion of the goods on the 16th and 17th January. On the 17th the sheriff received orders not to proceed, and immediately stopped the sale; he had no notice of the summons, which was made absolute on the 22nd January :- Held, under the facts, that the h. fa. having been set aside, as obtained by B. on a judgment entered contrary to good faith, B. was liable to A. in trespass for all damages sustained from the sale as well as the seizure. Jacobs v. Robb, 10 U. C.

Indemnity to Sheriff—Evidence of Treapass.]—A person who indemnifies the sheriff for seizing goods does not by that act become liable as a trespasser. McLeod v. Fortune, 19 U. C. R. 98.

Interpleader Order—Protection to Sheriff—Justification as in Aid. — In trespass against the plaintiff in a writ of fi. fa. for taking, &c., the pool of this plaintiff, defendant justifies in aid of this plaintiff, defendant justifies in aid of the sheriff's officer under the writ, and at the shewel an interpleader order; which then showed an interpleader order the goods when seized, was barred from any changed when seized, was barred from any changed when seized, was barred from any changed or the goods against the sheriff or his officer, or any person acting under or in aid of them:
—Held, that the order could not protect the execution creditor. Park v. Taylor, 1 C. 12.

Protection to Sheriff—Liability of Creditor for Acts of Sheriff—Damages,1—The goods of one L., having been seized under defendants' execution, were claimed by plaintiffs, and upon the sheriff's application a feigned issue was ordered, which protected the sheriff, but expressly excepted any claim of the execution plaintiffs or the claimants against each other. This issue having been decided in plaintiffs' favour, they sued the defendants (the execution creditors) for the acts of the sheriff in entering and excluding them for two months from possession of the foundry where the goods were, and for stopping the work and preventing them from selling some of the articles which were being manufactured. The jury gave 850 for the first cause of action, and 8300 for the second:—Held, that the action would lie, and that the damages were not excessive. May v. Horeland, 19 U. C. R. 66. See, also, Cotton v. Stokes, 10 U. C. R. 262.

Justification by Stranger under Execution Creditor—Friedner of Joint Trespass.]—Trespass for entering plaintiff's close and taking goods. Plea, justifying under a division court execution at the suit of H., and alleging a decision by the Judge in the execution creditor's favour, in an interpleader issue, the goods having been claimed by plaintiff. Defendant having declared that he owned the debt, and that the execution was issued at his instance, and having appeared for the execution creditor on the interpleader summons:—Held, sufficient evidence to go to the jury of his being a joint trespasser. Oliphant v. Leslie, 24 E. C. R. 398.

Ratification of Wrongful Seizure.]— Where a sheriff, acting under a valid writ as a servant of the court, seizes the wrong person's goods, a subsequent ratification by a person who, until such ratification, was a stranger to the taking, cannot after the character of the original taking, and make such party a trespasser by relation. Tilt v. Jarvis. 7 C. P. 145.

Several Executions—Evidence of Interference—Indemnity.]—In an action against the sheriff and six others for seizing goods, the evidence as to four of the defendants was that they were creditors of the execution debtor, and joined in the indemnity bond to the sheriff, and that they told the bailiff to sell, and afterwards attended and bid at the sale:
—Held, sufficient to charge them. Gray v. Forture, 18 U. C. R. 253.

Evidence of Interference—Joint Liability.]—Held, upon the facts, that there was evidence to shew that there was one seizure and one sale under the direction and for the benefit of the two defendants, holding separate executions: and that they were therefor jointy liable. Lough v. Coleman, 29 U. C. R. 367.

7. Other Acts of Trespass.

Animal—Injury to Another,]—Trespass is maintainable against the owner of a bull which had broken into the plaintiff's close, and there killed his mare, defendant not being present or aware of the act. Mason v. Morgan, 24 U. C. R. 328: Blacklock v. Millikan, 3 C. P. 34.

Conditional Sale—Default—Resumption of Possession—Acts of Servant—Joint Trespass.]-Under a hire receipt of an organ sold by defendant R. to plaintiff's son, and signed by the latter, the defendant R. was authorized, on default of payment, to resume possession of the organ, and he and his agent were given full right and liberty to enter any house or premises where the organ might be, with authority to remove the same, without resorting to any legal process. Default having been made in payment of certain instalments due under the hire receipt, defendant R, sent his bookkeeper (the other defendant) and two assistants, with instructions to get the organ. The bookkeeper, taking the hire receipt as his authority, went to plaintiff's house, where the organ was, opened the house door and entered the hall, but, on his attempting to open the door of the room in which the organ was, the plaintiff's wife (the plaintiff and the son being absent) resisted his entrance, when son being absent) resisted his entrance, when a scuffle ensued and the plaintiff's wife was injured:—Held, that R, was responsible for the acts of his servant, the bookkeeper, for they were done by him in the discharge of what he believed to be his duty, and were within the general scope of his authority. Held, also, that the judgment against both R. and the bookkeeper was maintainable, for it was recovered against them as joint wrongdoers. Murphy v. City of Ottawa, 13 O. R. 334, distinguished. Ferguson v. Roblin, 17 O. R. 167.

Distress for Rent—Sheep—Acts of Bailiff.]—It is illegal to distrain sheep for rent
when there are other goods upon the premises sufficient to satisfy the claim; and trespass was therefore held to lie against a landlord for the act of his bailiff in so distraining, it appearing that he had spoken of his making the sale, and had received the proceeds thereof, and no evidence being offered of his non-complicity therein. Hope v. White, 22 C. P. 5.

Distress for School Rates — Collector —Notice of Action.]—A collector of school rates who commits a trespass while acting under a warrant issued by a competent authority, is entitled to notice of action, and the action should be brought within six months. Spry v. Mumby, 11 C. P. 285.

Joint Trespass—Husband and Wife.]— Defendants were the widow of an intestate and her second husband. It was shewn that she had taken possession of and appropriated to her own use the intestate's property, and acts and declarations of both defendants established that they held it together after her second marriage:—Held, sufficient evidence of

Lawful Removal of Dam—Subsequent Conversion of Materials.]—Pleas justifying the removal of a mill dam in order to float down logs. Plaintiffs replied that after the removal, &c., by defendants, they converted and disposed of the materials of the dam to their own use:—Held, that such wrongful conversion was an abuse of the authority in law under which the defendants acted, such as to render them trespassers ab initio. Little v. Incc. 3 C. P. 528.

Taking Timber—Joint Trespass—Judgment—Evidence.]—In a joint action of trespass one party may be acquitted and the other convicted. Judgment in such an action for taking timber by default had been signed against one of two defendants jointly charged, but the evidence established the tort against the other alone; whereupon the plaintiff entered a noile prosequi as to the former, and took his verdict against the latter only:—Held, that this was the more prudent course, and, therefore, no ground for a new trial, which, however, was granted on other grounds. Campbell v, Kemp, 16 C. P. 244.

Vessel—Seizure—Detention—Repairs.] —
The plaintiff took his vessel to defendant's ship yard at Oakville, to be repaired there by defendant, in accordance with a previous arrangement. The ways were occupied when she arrived, and the plaintiff went away, having said he did not wish her hauled up in his absence. Defendant nevertheless took her out, and it was proved that a day or two after that he said he would keep her on the ways against the plaintiff's will; but the repairs were proceeded with under the plaintiff's supervision, and were paid for by him:—Held, that there was no evidence to sustain a count in trespass for seizing and detaining the vessel. Hood v. Cronkite, 29 U.C. R. 98.

Wrongful Refusal to Give up Goods

Joint Trespass.] — In trespass and trover against five defendants for taking and converting a steam boiler, it appeared that one defendant, P., had nothing to do with the original taking, but that the boiler had been placed in his yard by the others, or by some of them, not acting in concert with him, and that he had afterwards refused to give it up to the plaintiff. At the trial, the plaintiff's counsel declined to elect, but went to the jury against all the defendants, claiming exemplary damages, and a general verdict was rendered. The court ordered a new trial without costs, and refused to allow the verdict to stand against
P, alone. Menton v. Lee, 30 U. C. R. 281.

Wrongful Removal of Books—Mandamus—Fraud.]—The affidavits stated that M., who claimed the office of registrar, obtained a mandamus nisi directed to H. to deliver up to him the books and papers; that he went to the office with two constables, in II.'s absence, and demanded them of his wife, reading what purported to be a peremptory mandamus as his authority, but refusing to allow her or her solicitor to examine it; and that he and the constables then took away the books, &c. Upon these affidavits the court granted a rule nisi for attachment against H., but refused it against the constables, there being nothing to shew that they were aware of the fraud. A rule for an order to M. to restore the books, &c., thus obtained, was refused, as II. might bring trespass, claiming a mandamus in the action. A writ of replevin had previously been refused. In re McLay, 24 U. C. R. 54.

Contractor for Public Works—Noncompliance with Statute.1—The compulsory powers given to the government of Canada to expropriate lands required for any public work can only be exercised after compliance with the statute requiring the land to be set out by metes and bounds, and a plan or description filed; if these provisions are not complied with, and there is no order in council authorizing land to be taken when an order in council is necessary, a contractor with the Crown who enters upon the land to construct such public work thereon, is liable to the owner in trespass for such entry. Kearney v. Oakes, 18 S. C. R. 148.

Customer of Mill—Interest in Work.]—The plaintiff had workmen attending a steam mill. Defendant, being interested in getting saw logs cut up, entered and removed plaintiff's fireman and placed another man in his stead, and added several of his own workmen to those employed by the plaintiff. Owing to some mismanagement, the boiler burst:—Held, that there was evidence for the jury that defendant was a trespasser; and that whether he was responsible as such for the injury done to the boiler depended on the nature and extent of his influence, and how far he was implicated in the acts which caused the explosion. Elight, v. Winters, 5.C. P. 491.

Grantee of Easement—Defeat of Grant by Non-registration—Continuance of Burden on Land—Successive Trespasses.]—See Ross v. Hunter, 7 S. C. R. 289.

Innkeeper — Apartment of Guest.] — An innkeeper has the sole right to select the apartment for a guest, and, if he find it expedient, to change it and assign him another. He cannot be treated as a trespasser for entering to make the change. Doyle v. Walker, 26 U. C. R. 502.

Intending Purchaser—Sheriff's Sale.]—A sheriff having seized goods cannot lawfully sell them on defendant's premises without his permission, and any person going on the premises to purchase may be treated as a trespasser. McMaster v. McPherson, 6 O. S. 16.

Mortgagee of Chattels — Liability for Deposit of, on Land—Continuing Treepass,] —A mortgagee who has not taken actual possession, is not liable in trespass for any injury occasioned by the goods mortgaged. M. & Co., having wrongfully placed a quantity of stone on the plaintiff's land, afterwards mortgaged it with other property to defendant. Default had been made in payment, but defendant had not taken possession of or interfered in any way with the stone; when asked to remove it, however, he had refused, and forbidden the plaintiff to do so himself:—Held, that as mortgagee he was not liable to the plaintiff in trespass for allowing the stone to remain. Campbell v. Reid, 14 U. C. R. 305.

Municipal Corporation.] — Right to bring action for damages for trespass committed by municipality. VanEgmond v. Town of Seaforth, 6 O. R. 599.

Owner of Animal.]—Trespass q. c. f. will lie by the owner of a close against the owner of a pig which may break and enter and do damage. Blacklock v. Millikan, 3 C. P. 34. See, also, Mason v. Morgan, 23 U. C. R. 328.

Pathmaster—Opening up Streets—Authority,]—Defendant, a pathmaster, without any instructions from the municipal council, and in defiance of the plaintiff's warning, threw down the plaintiff's fences and ploughed up his land, in order to open up streets which were laid down on a plan of part of the plaintiff's land, made by a former owner, and found in the registry office; but it was not marked registered or filed, no sale was shewn to have been made according to it, and the streets had never been opened or used:—Held, that defendant was not acting within his jurisdiction, and was liable in trespass. Crooks v. Williams, 30 U. C. R. 530.

Person Authorized by Statute—Abuse of Authority.]—Where a statute gave power to certain persons to enter on lands near a bridge to quarry stone to repair the bridge, doing no unnecessary damage therein:—Held, that any abuse of power by excess was punishable in trespass. Myers v. Howard, 4 O. S. 113.

Trespass for destroying plaintiff's mill dam. Pleas justifying the removal of the dam in order to float down logs under 12 Vict, c. 87. The plaintiff replied that after the removal, &c., by defendants, they converted and disposed of the materials of the dam to their own uses:—Held, that such wrongful conversion was an abuse of the authority in law under which defendants acted, such as to render them trespassers ab initio. Little v. Ince, 3 C. P. 528.

Principal and Agent—Joint Trespass.]
—See Ferguson v. Roblin, 17 O. R. 167.

Railway Company—tssignees of—Right to Cut Timber.]—Held, that the Crown timber licenses claimed by the plaintiff as licensee of the Ontario government were subject to the right of the Canada Central Railway Company, acquired before Confederation, to construct the road across the Crown lands over which that the companpass of the of bui Intyre

Infant — Next Friend.]—The mother in possession of land belonging to the heir, a minor, may sue in trespass q. c. f., as the next friend of the minor. Johnson v. McGillis, 7 U. C. R. 399.

Owner of Equity of Redemption—Mortaguee out of Possession.]—Under the Nova Scotia Judicature Act the owner of the equity of redemption can maintain an action for trespass to mortgaged property and injury to the freehold, though after the trespass and before action brought he has parted with his equity. Mortgagees out of possession cannot, after their interest has ceased to exist, maintain an action for such trespass and injury committed while they held the title. Brookfield v. Brookgeed, v. S. C. R. 398.

Trustee.]—See Brooke v. McLean, 5 O. R. 200; Adamson v. Adamson, 7 A. R. 592, post 9 (c).

2. Damages.

Accrual after Action—Crops.]—In trespass to land, where the action was brought on the 7th May:—Held, that the plaintif might recover to the extent of the ultimate injury resulting to the crop from the act complained of, as ascertained at the time of harvest. Throop v. Fouler, 15 U. C. R. 365.

Distress for Rent—No Right to Distrain—Value of Goods.]—The defendant leased certain land to the plaintiff for a term during which the latter was to make improvements, and at the expiration of the term the value of such improvements, as well as the amount of the rent, was to be fixed by arbitration. The defendant having distrained for rent:—Held, that there being no fixed rent agreed upon there was no right of distress, and the defendant was therefore merely a trespasser and liable in damages to the actual value of the goods, but not to double their value, as it was not a case within 2 W. & M. sess, 1, c. 5, s. 5, which refers to the wilful abuse of the power of distress. Semble, that, although there may be no rent in arrear until the same is fixed by arbitration, there cannot be said to be none due. Mitchell v. McDuffy, 31 C. P. 266, 6430.

Excessive Damages.]—Where the damage consisted in cutting down some ten or twelve ornamental shade trees growing in the highway opposite the plaintiff's land, for which he was awarded $150:—Held, not excessive. Pouglas v. Fox, 31 C. P. 140.

Interest of Tenant — Estimate of Injury.]—In an action of trespass to land, where the plaintiff is a tenant only, the duration of his term must be shewn, the measure of damages being the diminished value of his interest. The trespass complained of was removing a fence in May, 1866. The plaintiff's landlady swore that she leased the place to the plaintiff in November, 1865, and added, "plaintiff was my tenant when the rails were taken away, paying so much a year, taxes, and statute labour." There was no further evidence as to the nature of the lease or duration of the term:—Held, that the damages should not, as a matter of law, have been nominal only, but estimated on the injury the loss of the fence would cause to the plaintiff during the five or six months for which he then had a right to possession. Fisher v. Grace, 27 U. C. R. 158.

Nominal Damages — New Trial.] — In trespass to land the jury found for the plaintiff with only is, damages. The verdict was moved against for misdirection and smallness of damages: — Held, without deciding upon the correctness of the charge, that, if it had been unexceptionable and the verdict the same, the court would not have interfered; and, under s. 34 of the A. J. Act, 1874, they refused a new trial. Smith v. Murphy, 35 U. C. R. 509.

3. Evidence.

Executor—Excess.]—The assent of an executor to a legacy may be by implication as well as by express words; and where the testator devised his house to his wife for life, and also left her some personal property, and the executors in her absence entered the house to make an inventory of the property, and afterwards turned out her daughter and shut the house up:—Held, on trespass brought by the wife, that this was sufficient proof under the issue of excess. Honsberger v. Honsberger, 5 O. S. 479.

Judgment in Ejectment—Variance.]— In trespass for mesne profits brought by husband and wife, alleging a joint recovery, the recovery in ejectment was proved to have been on the denies of the wife alone:—Held, a fatal variance. Ashton v. Keesar, 5 O. S. 325.

In trespass for mesne profits, the variances set out in the case, between the judgment in ejectment pleaded and the one produced, were held fatal. Garrion v. Woodruff, S U. C. R. 398 Occupation.]—Upon the plea of the close not being the close of the plaintiff, the plaintiff must prove an actual and immediate occupation of the locus in quo. McNeil v. Train, 5 U. C. R. 91.

Place — Township.] — In trespass q. c. f. and for destroying goods, the township in which the trespass is alleged to have been committed must be proved as laid. Mattice v. Farr, Tay. 218.

Variance.]—Where in trespass q. c. f. it appeared that the only injury complained of and proved was the destruction in part of a mill over the waters of a river, and not on the land in the declaration, a nonsuit was entered. Cannifle v. Cannifle, 1 U. C. R. 551.

Several Trespasses—Joint Trespass.]—
If in trespass against several defendants the plaintiff prove a joint trespass against all on one count, and then attempt but fail to prove a trespass against all on another count, he is still entitled to recover for the trespass first proved. Watson v. Riorden, 5 O. S. 322.

Time—Continuando.]—In trespass, where the entry is laid on a day certain with a continuando, the plaintiff, under "not guilty," is prevented from proving a trespass at an earlier period with a continuando, though he may waive the time laid, and recover for a single act of trespass at a more remote period. Fairman v, Fairman, 1 C. P. 435.

plaintiff's recovery that the only trespass proved was committed before the time laid in the declaration; and if there be any evidence of the identity of the premises, the court will not grant a new trial for want of sufficient evidence, when the damages are small and the justice of the case with the plaintiff. Molloy v. Stansfeld, 2 U. C. R. 390.

Title and Possession.] — Where the plaintiffs at first relied upon a paper title, which turned out to be defective, they were afterwards allowed to give additional evidence of possession, and go to the jury upon that. Boulton v, Shand, 10 U. C. R. 351.

Proof of a paper title is prima facie sufficient to maintain trespass q. c. f. where the possession is vacant. Ball v. Young, S. C. P. 231.

In trespass to land, under a plea that the land is not the plaintiff's, defendant is at liberty to shew title in himself or in another under whom he acted. Gray v. Harding, 21 U. C. R. 241.

Trespass q. c. f. Pleas, 3rd and 4th, that one E. W. was the owner of the locus in quo, and justifying by his authority and command. Upon the trial, the Judge having refused to admit evidence that E. W. had been in possession of the premises over twenty years, and that the defendant had obtained title through him, a new trial was ordered without costs, McMitlan v, McMitlan, 12 C. P. 158.

4. Injunction to Restrain.

See Grand Trunk R. W. Co. v. Credit Valley R. W. Co., 27 Gr. 232; Fencion Falls v. Victoria R. W. Co., 29 Gr. 4.

5. Judgment in Trespass-Effect of.

Estoppel.]—A judgment in favour of the plaintiff in an action for trespass to lands, upon plens (amongst others) of land not plaintiff's and liberum tenementum, is not a complete estoppel, preventing the defendant in another suit from questioning the plaintiff's title to any part of the lands. The judgment is only an estoppel with regard to the title of that portion of the land upon which it had been shewn that the defendant had trespassed. Hunder v. Brince, 27 Gr. 204.

6. Leave and License,

Ditches and Watercourses Act-Invalid Award.]—To an action for trespass on plaintiff's land, defendant pleaded justifying under an award by fence viewers, alleging that the plaintiff paid half the expense of the award as thereby directed, and that defendant, in pursuance of it, having first duly notified the plaintiff, entered on the plaintiff's land and opened the ditch there as directed by the award, doing no unnecessary damage:—Held, plea bad, as setting up a right which the award, being invalid, could not give; but that the facts might be found to support a plea of leave and license. Dawson v. Murray, 29 U. C. R. 464.

Fraud in Obtaining License—Pleadingense, which the plaintiff denied:—Held, that the plaintiff could not go into evidence that the license had been fraudulently obtained, but that the fraud should have been specially pleaded. Siev v. Grahum, 2 U. C. R. 387.

Leave of Plaintiff's Daughter.]—The plaintiff declared in trespass, in the first count, complaining of breaking and entering his close and debauching his daughter, and in the second count for debauching his daughter only; and defendant pleaded to each count, as to all but the force and arms, &c., the leave and license of the daughter. The pleas were held bad, on demurrer. Ross v, Merritt, 2 U. C. R, 421.

Mortgage — Growing Crops — Right of Entry—Conditional License—Default—Pleading. |-Trespass to the south parts of lots 14 and 15, and taking and converting wheat and straw of the plaintiff. Plea, leave and license generally. In support of this plea, defendants proved a deed made by plaintiff, 20th February, 1846, whereby, in consideration of £28 received from defendant T., he bargained and sold to him, among other things specified, twenty acres of wheat then growing on the south part of lot 14, and in the plaintiff's possession. The plaintiff bargained and sold all the twenty acres of wheat, with the right of ingress and egress into and from lot 14, to harvest and remove the said twenty acres of wheat. Then followed a proviso, that if plaintiff should pay to T. £28 with interest, on a day named, the deed should be void. Plaintiff covenanted to pay the money, and it was stipulated that until default plaintiff might retain in his possession and use the and premises mortgaged, unless he should before the day of payment be sued by any other person, in which case T, might take and enjoy the said goods as his own :- Held. that defendants must fail under their general plea of leave and license, the deed giving no right of entry on lot 15. Semble, that if the license to enter on lot 14 gave a right to enter on lot 15 as being necessary to the privilege granted with respect to lot 14, the defendants should have in a special plea set forth the necessity. Held, that defendants must fail. also, because the license was not to enter and take the plaintiff's wheat, but to enter for the purpose of taking the defendants' wheat. Semble, also, plea bad, as the license proved was conditional and not absolute. should have been a special plea shewing default in payment by plaintiff on day named. Semble, that the only right the deed gave the defendants, was to cut and carry away the wheat of the plaintiff; the defendants had no right to enter on the plaintiff's land and take the wheat away by force after it had been cut and stacked by plaintiff. Lunn v. Turner, 4 U. C. R. 282.

Part License.]—Where defendant pleads leave and license, he must prove a license coextensive with the trespass, and the plaintiff need not new assign if the license was for part only. Thompson v. Van Buskirk, 14 U. C. R. 388.

Reservation of Right of Entry-Parol Contract.]-Declaration q. c. f. for cutting and removing trees, with a count in trover and the common counts. Pleas, leave and license and a special equitable plea, setting up that the defendant, being owner of the land, contracted by parol to sell it to the plaintiff, and that at the time of such contract and of the conveyance of the land to defendant, it was expressly agreed that defendant should have certain trees thereon, and be at liberty to cut and remove them, but that such reservation should not be, and it accordingly was not, inserted in the conveyance; and that the defendant entered and cut the trees, &c., which are the trespasses, &c. Defendant, as a witness at trial, having proved the sale of the land, it was proposed to shew by him the agreement as set up in the equitable plea:-Held, that such evidence was improperly rejected, for that it was admissible both under the equitable plea and the plea of leave and license.

Walter v. Dexter, 34 U. C. R. 426.

See McGinness v. Kennedy, 29 U. C. R. 93.

Several Trespasses—Revocation in Interval between. |—The declaration charged the trespasses, breaking down fences, &c., as committed on divers days and times. Defendant pleaded leave and license. It appeared that part of the fence was removed under a license, and the remainder after it had been revoked, the interval from the first to the last removal being two or three years:—Held, that the plaintiff was entitled to succeed, though it would have been otherwise if the declaration had only charged the trespasses as committed on the same day, for defendant could then have applied the license to the only trespass charged. Marrs v. Davidson, 26 U. C. R. 641.

Sheriff — Sale of Goods—Revocation.]—Where the sheriff had seized goods under a fi. fn. and allowed them to remain on defendant's premises on the understanding that they should be sold there on a future day if the morey were not paid before, the license thus given to enter on the premises and sell the goods necordingly cannot be revoked by defendant. McGillis v. McMartin, 1 U. C. R.

Survey — Agreement—Boundary in Dispute.]—In trespass q. c. f. it appeared that, about 12 years before, one W., defendant's teutant, having moved the fence between plaintiff and defendant, an agreement in writing was entered into between W. and the plaintiff, that they would employ B., a surveyor, to establish the original line between lots one and two, and would be bound by it; and defendant, by a memorandum signed by him at the foot of this agreement, agreed to abide by it. The land in dispute was then in W.'s possession, and it was alleged that B. had not completed his survey:—Held, no evidence to support defendant's plea of leave and license, Crossvatie v. Gage, 32 U. C. R. 196.

See Munn v. Galbraith, 13 C. P. 75.

7. Other Justifications.

Agreement - Entry to Take Crop-Statute of Frauds. 1 - Declaration for breaking and entering the plaintiff's close and cutting able grounds, that the plaintiff held the land under an indenture of lease from defendant, on the negotiation for and execution of which it was orally agreed between them, and the true agreement was, that defendant should have the right to enter and harvest the crop then in the ground sowed by him; that when the lease was executed a reservation of such right in it was suggested, but omitted on the plaintiff's assurance that it was unnecessary, as the agreement between them was well understood, and defendant would be allowed to take the crop; and that the entry, &c., in pursuance of such agreement, is the trespass complained of:—Held, that the plea was good, for the independent oral agreement, made in consideration of defendant signing the lease, was good as an agreement, though defendant by s. 4 of the Statute of Frauds might be preby 8, 4 of the Statute of Frauds might be pre-vented from suing on it: and, as equity in such a case would decree specific performance, there was ground for a perpetual injunction against this action. Quære, whether the plea was not also a justification at law, as under was not also a justification at law, as under an agreement which was valid to protect the defendant, though he could not have enforced it by action. McGinness v. Kennedy, 29 U. it by action. C. R. 93.

See also Walter v. Dexter, 34 U. C. R. 426.

Demise from Tenant in Common.]—
In an action of trespass alleging the laud to be the plaintiff's, and that defendant ejected the plaintiff and took all the issues and profits, defendant justified under a demise from one M., who, he alleged, was seised in fee as a tenant in common of the land. The plaintiff excepted to the plea: —Held, that the plea was good, as setting up title in a third party, for the plaintiff brought his action as owner of the whole, and not against defendant as co-tenant. Herr v. Weston, 32 U. C. R. 402.

Entry for Removal of Building-Estoppel—Fixture.]—Declaration, for entering plaintiff's land and dwelling house thereon, and removing the house therefrom and converting it to defendant's use. Plea, to so much of the count as refers to the dwelling house, that before plaintiff became possessed and owner of the lot, defendants placed the said dwelling house thereon, so that it might thereafter be removed by them, not affixing it to the land; and defendants afterwards, and while the land was unenclosed and used as a common, and the house open and unoccupied, in the daytime, peacefully entered the lot and removed the dwelling house, the same being their property, and placed it on their own land, which are part of the trespasses complained of. Replication, that defendants should not be allowed to plead said plea, because they were entitled to an interest in said land and built the house on the land and occupied it, and afterwards, and before the trespasses, &c., by deed conveyed the land, with the appurtenances, to A., who conveyed to plaintiff:—Held, plea bad, as shewing no justification for the trespass admitted; repli-cation good, by way of estoppel. Cameron v. Hunter, 34 U. C. R. 121.

Execution against Tenant—Sale of Interest to Landlord.] — Trespass for breaking and entering plaintiff's house. Pleas: (2) that the house was not plaintiff's: (3) as to the breaking and entering. liberum tenementum; as to the expulsion, that the house was defendant's, and plaintiff and his family being there unlawfully, he expelled them, using no unnecessary force. Replication, that defendant had demised the premises to plaintiff for a term, under which plaintiff entered; and being so in possession defendant expelled him. Rejoinder, that the plaintiff's interest in the premises was sold under a fi. fa. against his goods, and purchased by defendant; and thereupon the sheriff by deed assigned the plaintiff's interest to defendant, and delivered possession of the premises to him; and because the plaintiff was unlawfully there at the said time when, &c., and refused to leave, the defendant ejected him, using no unnecessary force:—Held, a good rejoinder. Stroud v. Kane, 13 U. C. R. 459.

Execution against Tenant in Common—Pleading.]— Where, in trespass quare clausum fregit et de bonis asportatis, by one of two tenants in common, it was proved that the defendant entered upon the land under a writ of execution against the goods of the other tenant:—Held, that such entry could not be given in evidence under the general issue, but should be specially pleaded. Newkirk, V. Papue, 6 O. S. 458.

Justices' Warrant — Foreible Entry.]—
In trespass q, e, f, defendant pleaded that the plaintiff complained of a foreible entry and detainer under the statutes, and the justices summoned a jury and heard the complaint and made a warrant for restoring the plaintiff to his possession, and that this was the trespass complained of:—Held, bad. Boulton v. Fitsgerald, 1 U. C. R. 343.

Obstruction to Navigation - Unavoidable Injury to Bridge—Several Trespasses— Pleading—Verdict.]—The first count of the declaration alleged that defendant had wrongfully and injuriously cut away, removed, and destroyed a bridge belonging to plaintiffs. The second count alleged a highway between two townships, intercepted by a river, over which plaintiffs, in performance of their duty, had, at large cost, built and maintained a bridge, which defendant, contriving to injure plain-tiffs, had wrongfully cut down, destroyed, removed, and carried away, thereby obstructing said highway; whereby plaintiffs had become liable to rebuild and had rebuilt the same, at large cost to themselves. Defendant pleaded to both counts, "not guilty," and a denial that the bridge was plaintiffs' property; and, for a third plea, to both counts, a justification, al-leging that the said river was and had always been a navigable stream at the place, &c., for conveyance of logs and timber, and defendant, with others, had been accustomed to use it for such purpose; and during certain freshets defendant was, with others, so engaged, and was obliged to pass that part of the river crossed by the bridge, which obstructed the navigation. and prevented the passage of defendant's timand prevented the passage of defendant's tim-ber; and whilst the bridge so obstructed the navigation, and though the defendant used due care and skill, said timber ran against the same, and unavoidably cut, broke, and de-stroyed the same, which were the injuries and tree-passas complained of. On these plaintiffs to the complex of the complex of the complex of the one his alse and the control of the control of the one his alse and the control of the control of the control of the theory of the control of the co on his plea of justification, the jury having found a verdict for plaintiffs for $20, for the mere removal by defendant's servants of a pier and stone belonging to the bridge, on a day subsequent to the destruction of the bridge the timber, which had been justified :by the timber, which had been justified:— Held, that defendant, having pleaded the gen-eral issue to the first and second counts, and a denial of plaintiffs' property in the bridge, was not entitled to a nonsuit, as the issues on these pleas had been properly found for the plaintiffs. Held, also, that it was not neces-sary to new-assign the injury to the pier; for, there being two counts in the declaration, and the injury in question not being part of one continuing trespass, but a distinct act done at another time after the destruction of the another time after the destruction of the bridge, evidence thereof might be given under, and the verdict therefor sustained on, the second count of the declaration. The evidence shewed that defendant's servants cut away a state of the country of portion of the bridge on the first day that the timber collided with it, while the only cutting justified by the plea was that caused by the timber. Quære, whether the plea justified the whole trespass charged in the first count, for if not, semble, that the verdict might be sustained on that count; but quære, whether the first cutting away was so distinct an act of trespass as to have enabled plaintiffs to recover on that count, in the face of the finding of the jury as to the facts mentioned in the special plea. Township of Thurlov v. Bogart, 15 C. P. 601. See, also, S. C., ib. 9.

Prevention of Breach of Peace.]—To trespense for breaking and entering the plaintiff's house, defendant pleaded that the plaintiff was violently assaulting his (plaintiff's) wife and child, and that he entered to prevent the plaintiff committing the said breach of the peace:—Held, plea bad in substance. Rockwell v. Murray, 6 U. C. R. 412.

Right of Way—Removal of Fence—Cattle Straying — Pleading,] — Declaration, for breaking and entering the plaintiff's close, part of the east half of a lot in the township of Blanchard. Plea, that defendant lensed the land to plaintiff, by a deed in which it was covenanted that defendant should have a road along the west side of the premises, extending from the highway at the south to defendant's land at the north; that at the time of the denise there was a fence on the east side of this road, which fence the plaintiff covenanted to keep in repair, but that he did covenanted to keep in repair, but that he did not be covenanted to keep in repair, but that he did not be covenanted to keep in repair, but that he did not be covenanted to keep in repair, but which are the alleged trespasses. On this the plaintiff took issue:—Held, that the removal of the fence by plaintiff, as stated in the report, would primâ facie excuse a trespass extra viam, which the plea admitted, and that, if defendant's consent to such removal would prevent him from setting it up as a wrongful act, the consent should have been replied. Held, also, that, as it was necessary to take down the north fence to use the right of way, this act justified the single act of trespass charged, and the plaintiff should have new-assigned, if he relied upon excess in the quantity taken down, or in leaving the space open too long. The plaintiff, therefore, on the pleadings and evidence, was held not entitled to recover. Pickard v. Wixon, 24 U. C. R. 416. See, also, S. C., 25 U. C. R. 307.

- Direction of Commissioner of Public Works-Drainage.] - Declaration for trespass to plaintiff's land, and throwing down the fences, hauling earth, and stopping up the the fences, naming earth, and stopping of the watercourses thereon. Plea, that before the commission of the alleged grievances the commission of the alleged grievances the commission of the co missioner of public works for Ontario, under and in pursuance of 32 Vict. c. 28 (O.), had taken possession of said land, fences, and watercourses, the same being in his judgment necessary for the construction of a certain drain, being a public work within said Act; and thereupon said commissioner directed defendant to construct a drain to and past this land; and defendant in the construction of said drain entered upon said land so taken possession of, and in the necessary prosecution of said work threw down said fences, and de-posited the earth from said ditch on the plain-tiff's land, and filled up the watercourses thereon, the same being necessary for the construction of said drain, which are the alleged trespasses:—Held, a good plea: for it must be taken to mean that the commissioner had lawfully taken possession in accordance with the Act, having complied with all requisite preliminaries. Bury v. Britton, 32 U. C. R.

— Ridous Canal Act.]—If a defendant rest his defence on his acting under the Rideau Canal Act, he should be prepared to prove that the act he justifies was regularly done under the statute, and not rely merely on his being employed in the construction of the canal. Philips v, Redpath, Dra. 68.

Surrender of Term—Denial of Title.]— Defendant in trespass failing to prove the surrender of a term of years from the plaintiff to himself upon an issue arising out of a plea of liberum tenementum, may nevertheless consistently hold a general verdict upon another issue denying the close to be the plaintiff's. McNeil v. Train, 5 U. C. R. 91.

Receres v. Reyers, I U. C. R. 402.

New Assignment—Verdict,]—Where in trespass q. c. f., defendant justified under a writ of possession, and the plaintiff new-assigned a trespass to other closes, to which the defendant pleaded not guilty, and at the trial only one trespass was proved:—Held, that the justification was sufficient; and the plaintiff having obtained a verdict, a new trial was granted. If the servant had been improperly dismissed, he should have sued in assumpsit for a breach of contract, not in trespass for taking possession of his apartments. Williams V. Herrick, 5 U. C. R. 613.

McConaghy, 13 U. C. R. 444.

Re-affirmance of Declaration.]—To a declaration setting out the close by metes and bounds, defendant pleaded that the part of the close on which the trespuss was committed was his close, and the plaintiff replied that the close mentioned in the declaration was his close, and not defendant's, as stated in the plea. Hodykinson v. Donaldson, 2 U. C. R. 539.

Pleas, by defendants C. and M. justifying under a writ of hab, fac, issued at the suit of defendant G. and delivered to C. as sheriff, who made a warrant to M. as his bailiff, under which M. entered and expelled the plaintiff. Single Trespass — Amplification — Denial, — The effect of a new assignment where but one trespass has been complained of. Plaintiff must not in his replication amplify the cause of action declared on, nor can he depy the justification wholly, and at the same time reply excess. Spalding v. Rogers, 1 U. C R. 135.

Highway—Excess.] — Plaintiff declares q. e. f., &e., and in a second count for assault and battery. Defendant pleads to the first count, a public highway across the close, and that the plaintiff having wrongfully shut up the same, he removed the obstruction. To the second count, public highway across plaintiff's close; and that defendant passing over the same was prevented by plaintiff, and molliter manus imposuit. Plaintiff replies to these pleas, traversing the highway as alleged, and then assigns for trespasses at other times, and for unnecessary damage. Defendant pleads not guilty to the new assignment:—Held, that defendant, having established a right of way, as alleged, and only one trespasseling proved, which was committed in the said highway, and without excess, is entitled to a verdict. Smith v. Ingoldsby, 9 U. C. R. 207.

trespass to state time and place; it is sufficient to allege that the trespasses complained of were committed at other and different times and on other and different occasions, than as in the plea mentioned. McGillis v. Martin, 6 O. S. 495.

See Marsh v. Meyers, E. T. 4 Vict., R. & J. Dig. 3782; Pickard v. Wiron, 24 U. C. R. 416; Township of Thurlow v. Bogart, 15 C. P. 601; Thompson v. VanBuskirk, 14 U. C. R. 388.

 Title and Possession—Status to maintain Trespass.

(a) Erroncous or Disputed Boundary.

Constructive Possession—Part Actually Occupied.)—Where there is no actual title or claim of title, the occupant is not constructively in possession of more land than his occupation covers, and to this occupation when suing in trespass he will be strictly limited. Lake v. Briley, 5 U. C. R. 136.

Trespass q. c. f., describing the locus in quo by metes and bounds and as part of "what has heretofore been known as lot 15, 1st concession, Delaware." Defendant proved no title. The plaintiff claimed by possession, and it appeared that more than twenty years ago, relying on a survey, he had fenced in a part of defendant's lot 14 in the broken front concession. This fence, if continued, would have included the part in question, but it had never been extended to any part of lot 14 in the lst concession:—Held, that the plaintiff had no such possession of the locus in quo as would entitle him to recover. Weld v. Scott, 12 U. C. R. 537.

New Survey — Consent to New Line — Evidence.]—Plaintiff's and defendant's lands were separated by an old fence, which, though decayed and fallen, had remained from its erection, upwards of twenty years. The lines were properly run out by a surveyor, when it was ascertained that plaintiff's fence should be put some distance upon the land in defendant's possession, which defendant had agreed to, if he could obtain a corresponding quantity of land on the other side of the lot, which the owner on the trial swore he had consented to give to defendant. Plaintiff erected a portion of a fence along the new line, which defendant pulled down, and assaulted plaintiff and beat him:—Held, that there was evidence sufficient, if believed, to warrant a finding that plaintiff had entered with defendant's consent, and therefore plaintiff was lawfully on the locus in quo. Curtiss v. Tournsend, 6 C. P. 255.

General Entry—Sufficiency.]—The lines having been run by a provincial land surveyor between plaintiff's and defendant's lot, it was found that defendant had encroached on a small portion of plaintiff's land, which he refused to give up:—Held, that the general entry of plaintiff on his lot, before the defendant had encroached thereon, was sufficient to entitle him to maintain this action, without proof of entry on the part in possession of defendant. O'Heorn v. Donnelly, 13 C. P. 513.

Possession thereafter—Sufficiency.]
—Plaintif a defendant owned adjoining lots with a fence between them, supposed to be on the true division line. A correct line was Vol. III. D=288—69

however run, and defendant found to be encroaching some acres on the plaintiff. The plaintiff took possession of the disputed piece, under a protest from the defendant, and cultivated it. When the crop was fit to cut, defendant entered and took it away:—Held, that the plaintiff had such a possession as would enable him to maintain trespass. Gallagher v. Brown, 3 U. C. R. 350.

Title by Possession—Revocation of License.]—The plaintiff and defendant, adjoining proprietors, on lots 18 and 17 respectively, and those through whom they claimed, had occupied up to 1867 according to the fence, which had been the boundary between them for thirty years. In that year a survey was made, by which the line was placed farther to the east. F., through whom the plaintiff in lot 18, and one O., through whom the defendant claimed, owned the land opposite to them in lot 17. In 1808 F, moved his fence on to the new line. He said that O., in 1807, told the plaintiff he might occupy the strip between the old and the new line, and in 1808-9 the plaintiff cut grass on this strip. O. afterwards sold to one J., who occupied up to the old line, and sold to defendant. The plaintiff, in 1872, moved the fence to the new line, and defendant immediately replaced it, for which the plaintiff brought trespass:—Held, that he could not recover, for the defendant had acquired a title by possession, and O.'s permission to the plaintiff was at most a mere license, which was revoked by his sale to J., and never gave the plaintiff possession so as to entitle him to maintain trespass. Cole v. Brunt, 35 U. C. R, 103.

(b) Trespass to Timber and Trees.

Devisees—Necessity for Entry.]—A testator by his will directed his executors to pay all his debt. &c., out of his estate. Then followed specific devises of his estate to his wife, children, and nephews, and a direction to his executors to sell the chattels, excepting the household furniture bequeathed to his wife, and out of the proceeds to pay the debts and to invest the balance for the benefit of the wife and children. By a codicil he directed his executors, if necessary, to sell in the first place lot A, specifically devised as aforesaid, to pay off any debts or incumbrances against his estate; and in the event of such sale being inestate; and in the event of such sale being in-sufficient to pay said debts, &c., then in the next place to sell and dispose of lot B, also so specifically devised. The executors, before dis-posing of lots A and B, sold to defendant the growing timber on lot C, a lot specifically de-vised to the plaintiffs, the defendant purchas-ing in good faith and on his solicitar produces. ing in good faith and on his solicitor's advice that the executors had the right to sell to pay debts; and defendant entered and cut down and carried away the timber. Subsequently the defendant purchased the land from the mortgagees thereof, the land having been mort-gaged by testator. The plaintiffs, at the tes-tator's decease, were under age, and did not become of age until after the trespass complained of, when they brought trespass against defendant, claiming as damages the value of the timber so cut. There was no entry or possession taken by plaintiffs before action commenced:—Held, that by reason of there being no such entry or possession the action was not maintainable. To entitle the plaintiff to recover either at law or in equity, an entry upon the land by the plaintiffs must have been made at a time when they had a right to make such entry to carry the legal possession with it. Baker v. Mills. 11 O. R. 253.

Landlord—Lease of Land without Reservation.]—The plaintiff charged defendant with cutting down and carrying away trees. It appeared that the plaintiff had leased the land to C., making no reservation or mention of the trees:—Held, that on this declaration the plaintiff could not recover. Roys v. Cramer, 12 U. C. R. 165.

—— Tenant Cutting Trees.]—A landlord may maintain trespass against his tenant for the value of trees cut down and carried away by him, and which were not demised to him, though growing on the land which the tenant held. Cheatnut v, Day, 6 O. S. 637.

Municipal Corporation—Trees on Highwighout laving passed any by-law on the subject, could maintain trespass for cutting and carrying away trees growing upon government allowances for roads; for the power to pass by-laws for preserving or selling such trees gave them also a right to recover from a wrongdoer their value, which right might be exercised without any by-law. Township of Butleigh v. Hales, 27 U. C. R. 72.

Owner of Land—Adjacent Land—Consulsion of Property,—The plannitiff had cut timber on lot 24, which was his, and on lot 25, believing that he owned both lots; and all had been drawn away together by him to a lake about three miles distant. Defendants' agent took away a quantity, which had been cut on both lots, being forbidden by the planitiff, who swore that he could have distinguished the timber cut on each lot by the marks, and told defendants' agent so, but that the agent said he would take it, no matter where it came from:—Held, in the court of Queen's bench, that defendants were liable in trespass for the timber cut on lot 24. The authorities as to confusion of property reviewed. On appeal this decision was reversed, and the defendants held not liable, on the ground that the blaintiff was a wrongdoer in taking the timber from lot 25, though under the belief that it was his own; that, upon the evidence, there was a control on the property of this own proportion; and that, if the plaintiff could distinguish his own from the defendants of it was his duty to point it out, or offer to point it out to defendants his his his his his hot for omitting. Lawriev, Rathburn, 38 U. C. fr. 255.

Necessary Arerment.]—When plaintiff declared in trespass, for that defendant on, &c., with force and arms, felled, &c., the trees, viz., 15 onk trees of the plaintiff; then growing and being in and upon certain lands in the county of Middlesex (not saying his own land), the court refused to arrest the judgment, on the ground that the plaintiff could not see for certing down growing trees as for an injury to chattels, but that the action should have been for trespass to real property, laying the destruction of the trees as aggravation. McMillan v, Miller, 7 U, C, R.

Patentee—Trees Cut before Patent.]—In an action for cutting timber on the plaintiff's land, the plaintiff, to prove title, produced the patent to himself, giving no proof of any prior right by license of occupation or lease from the crown.—Held, that his title must be presumed to have begun only at the date of the patent, and that he could not recover damages for trees cut before that day. Nicholson v. Page, 27 U. C. R. 313.

Purchaser of Land — Agreement — Entry,1—The plaintiff contracted with one L. for the purchase of a lot of land, and paid part of the purchase momey. The agreement between them contained these words: "It is understood that the said C. has now possession, full control, and enjoyment of the said premises from this time forward; and that, if any person be now occupying the said premises, the said C. is to have full control thereof in all respects the same as if occupied by original bargain with him; also, that said C. assumes the said L.'s situation in respect thereto in full." When this arrangement was made, one J. was living on the place by L.'s permission. The plaintiff went upon the land, and found several persons employed by defendant in cutting timber there; he informed them and J. of his purchase, and forbade further respass. J. was also desired by him to go off the place, but refused. Defendant rested his defence upon J.'s right to sell him the timber, which was not sustained upon the evidence:—Held, that the plaintiff might maintain trespass against defendant or J. for anything done illegally after his edtry, if not or all done after he had purchased. Church v. Foulds, 9 U. C. R. 336.

With respect to two other defendants, P. S. and F., the verdict was set aside, for not only was there no evidence against them, but the record was defective in that an interlocutory judgment had been signed against them for nonappearance, without their having been declared against. Johnston v. Christie, 31 C. P. 358.

— Entry—Property in Trees.]—Trespass q. c, f. and destroying fences, trees, and buildings. Pleas, "not guilty," and that the fences and buildings were not plaintiff's. The question being whether the plaintiff could maintain this possessory action before actual entry:—Held, that as to the fences and buildings the plaintiff could not succeed, but as to the land itself and the destruction of the trees he could, the defendants not having denied his property therein. Jovett v. Haacke, 14 C. P. 447.

Revocation of License—Notice.]— Defendant, in writing, agreed with plaintiff to take a certain saw mill according to the terms of a certain lease to the plaintiff, and with a provision that he was to take the pine off the land known as the S. lot first, as the said plaintiff was bound to take off the same. The plaintiff was bound to take off the same. The of the S. land:—Held, that the plaintiff was entitled to revoke any license implied by such agreement, and to maintain trespass against defendant for removing from the lot formerly owned by S., pine saw logs, after notice forbidding such removal. Campbell v. Howland, 7 C. P. 365.

Purchaser of Timber — Clearing.]—A person clearing land under an agreement to receive the wood in payment of his labour may maintain trespass against the owner of the land for taking away the wood after it is cut down, although he has no possession in the land to enable him to maintain trespass quare clausum fregit. Hamilton v. McDonell, 5 O. 8. 720.

Limited Rights.]—Where a plaintiff has a right to cut down a limited number of trees upon land, and not the exclusive right to cut all the trees, he has not that possession of the land which will entitle him to bring trespass q. c. f. Monahan v. Foley, 4 U. C. R. 129.

Privilege—Agreement,]—The plaintiff had purchased from the Canada Company all the merchantable timber on a certain lot, and held a letter from them authorizing him to enter upon the land and mark whatever trees he might choose, and afterwards to cut and carry them away:—Held, that he could not sustain trespass qu. cl. fr. Quere, whether he could support an action on the case against a trespasser for interfering with his privilege, or would be compelled to look to the company, treating their letter as an agreement. Perry v. Buck, 12 U. C. R. 451.

See Mann v. English, 38 U. C. R. 240.

(c) Other Cases.

Agreement to Work on Shares - Effect of .]—Where the plaintiff and defendant heing each possessed of a farm agreed to work them together and divide the profits arising from them at the end of the senson, and before the harvest defendant was dispossessed of his farm by ejectment, and the plaintiff thereupon gave him notice that he would not divide his crops with him, notwithstanding which the defendant entered the plaintiff's farm and took away his share of the crop:—Held, that the plaintiff could not maintain trespass against him. Wemp v. Mormon, 2 U. C. R. 146.

Crown Grant — Entry.] — The King's grant enables the grantee to maintain trespass without actual entry. Clench v, Hendricks. Tay. 403. See, also, Weaver v, Burgess, 22 C. P. 104.

Crown Lands—Entry on—Crops — Prior Wrongdore.]—Where A., the owner of land, encroached upon an adjoining lot of the Crown, and took three successive crops off it without any permission; and another person who had taken possession of the same land, also without license, about ten years before, and paid taxes and made clearings on it, warned off A. after he had taken the third crop, and then cropped the land himself:—Held, that A. had no property or possession to maintain trespass against him for that crop. Killichan v. Robertson, 6 O. S. 408.

— Possession—Privity — Stranger.]—
Quaere, whether the defendant, a mere stranger, could set up the title in the Crown as against the plaintiffs' possession for forty years, with the privity of the Crown. Semble, that at all events the plaintiffs could have maintained trespass against him. Juson v. Reynolds, 34 U. C. R. 174.

Deed — Condition — Legal Estate.]—By deed between plaintiff and defendant H., H. agreed to allow the plaintiff the use of his grist and saw mills for five years, on condition that each party should pay half the repairs upon the mills for the term named; the saw mill and books to be under the control of H., and the grist mill chiefly under the control of plaintiff. The agreement then stated that H. allowed plaintiff the use of a dwelling house and barn near the mills, &c., and each party was to pay half the taxes "on the property for five years,"—Held, that under the instrument he plaintiff took a legal estate in the whole property for five years, subject to the rights to be exercised over it by H., as well as to the other conditions of the agreement; and that plaintiff could therefore maintain trespass against two others of the defendants who entered under H. and expelled plaintiff from the dwelling house. Kellington v. Herring, 17 C. P. 639.

Ejectment—Judgment in—Effect of—Demise.)—One F. rented the locus in quo from plaintiff previous to May, 1851, when he went out and defendant obtained possession. The plaintiff recovered in ejectment, in which the denise was laid on the 14th June, 1851, and entered his judgment in March, 1852. He then brought trespass qu. cl. fr., allegting the trespass to have been committed on the 5th July, 1851. The trespass proved was in May, 1851, while F. was in possession:—Held, that the action was maintainable, for the recovery in ejectment entitled the plaintiff to treat defendant as a trespasser from the day of the demise. Foster v. Foster, 10 U. C. R. 607.

— Trespasses pending Action.]—Trespass q. c. f. will not lie against a defendant for acts committed under the authority of the person in possession of and claiming the land during the time an action of ejectment by the plaintiff against such person was pending. Street v, Crooks, 6 C. P. 124.

Entry—Acts Amounting to.]—Actual occupation of land is not essential to give a right to maintain trespass by one who has the legal title. It is sufficient that he enter upon the land so as to put himself in legal possession of it:—Held, that putting up boards on the land stating that the land was for sale, was a sufficient entry upon the owner's part to vest the legal possession in him and to enable him to maintain an action of trespass. Donovan v. Herbert, 4 O. R. (35.)

Evidence of Actual or Constructive Possession. —Where the only evidence of possession was the entry by plaintiff upon, and his presence at the survey of, the land, the trespass to which had been previously committed, and was the cause of action, claiming it as his own, but shewing no title, the defendant also assisting in the survey and not objecting to plaintiff's right of possession, though asserting his own right to have committed the trespass complained of:—Held, that there was no evidence of either actual or constructive possession in plaintiff to entitle him to maintain trespass. Greaves v. Hilliard, 15 C. P. 326.

Exclusive Possession—Necessity for—Assessment and Taxes—Fencing,]—The plaintiff's husband, living close to the land in question, had for many years cut firewood and made sugar on it, and it had been assessed to him since 1843, but others had made similar use of it, though not to the same extent; it had never been enclosed, and the neighbours cattle as well as his were accustomed to run over it. The plaintiff, a few days before this action, put up a fence on it, and some of the defendants thereupon put up another inside of it, and afterwards they all put up a fence along the limit between this and the next lot, thus shutting out the plaintiff and fencing in the part which she had enclosed:—Held, that the plaintiff (shewing no other title) had not such exclusive possession as would entitle her to maintain trespass. Bailey v. McNeily, 20 U. C. R. 451.

Infant—Next Friend.] — The mother in possession of land belonging to the heir, a minor, may sue in trespass as next friend of the minor. Johnson v. McGillis, 7 U. C. R. 309.

Landlord—Possession of Tenant—Proof of,)—In trespass qu. el. fr., where the possession was disputed, defendant proved that the plaintiff's brother was in possession of the close to work it for plaintiff on shares:— Held, that the agreement did not conclusively establish the relation of landlord and tenant, and shew the brother entitled to the exclusive possession, so as to prevent the plaintiff from maintaining trespass. Dacksteder v. Baird, 5 U. C. R. 591. Trespass during Tenancy.]—Where defendant, as agent of a third party, during the occupancy of a tenant of the plaintiff, put up a fence on the plaintiff 's land, which continued there after the plaintiff resumed possession at the expiration of the tenancy:—Held, that the plaintiff could not bring trespass against defendant for the act done by him during the continuance of the lease. Boulton v. Jarvis, H. T. 6 Vict.

Licensee—Crops—Interest in Land.]—The plaintiff's father owning certain land mortgaged it to A., who filed a bill for fore-closure or sale. The mortgagor soon after the filing of the bill conveyed his equity of redemption to the plaintiff for a consideration expressed of $500, but he continued on the land with the plaintiff. The land was sold under a decree of the court to the plaintiff, who failed to pay, and afterwards the land was conveyed to F., the highest bidder, who, the plaintiff. The plaintiff afterwards released his interest to S., who conveyed to defendant F. Some negotiations took place between the plaintiff and F. in May, and the plaintiff put in and harvested crops, which defendant D. seized, acting under a writ of possession issued from the court of chancery in the fore-closure suit, and assisted by F. and others:—Held, that upon the evidence there was no demise at will or otherwise to the plaintiff, but a mere license, determined by failure of the negotiations, and under which the plaintiff acquired no interest in the land or crops which would entitle him to maintain trespass, though he might be entitled to be paid for his work upon the land while the license continued. Robinson v. Fec. 42 U. C. R. 448.

Mortgagee—Proviso for Possession—Default—Pleadino,] — Trespass to plaintiff's house. Pleas, (2) that the house was not the plaintiff's; (3) liberum tenementum of the defendant A., and entry of the other defendant by his command. The land had belonged to one C., who mortgaged in fee to one S. to secure a sum payable by instalments, with a proviso for possession by the mortgagor until default after three months' notice. C. conveyed to M. and M. to defendant J. A. No default had been made on the mortgage. The plaintiff had entered under an agent of S.—Held, that the defendants were entitled to succeed on the second plea; and semble, upon the third also. Dundas v. Arthur, 14 C. C. R. 521.

Municipal Corporation — Injury to Bridge. |—The corporation of a county can maintain an action for damages to, or destruction of, a bridge lying within its limits. County of Wellington v. Wilson, 16 C. P. 124.

Navigable Stream—Possession—Croten.]
—The river St. Lawrence above tide water is a navigable river, the bed of which is vested in the Crown. Held, also, that, although the possession of a pier built out in the river might entitle the plaintiffs to maintain trespass against a mere wrongdoer for an actual entry upon it, yet it would not draw to it possession of the bed of the river between the pier and the shore. Disson v. Snetsinger, 23 C. P. 235.

At the time of purchase a crop of wheat was in the ground:—Held, that B., and not A., should sue in trespass for cutting and carrying away the wheat. Quære, did the property in the wheat belong to A. or B.? Campbell v, Cushman, 4 U. C. R. 9.

Possession Annale—Art. 946, C. C. P., Quebec.]—See Gauthier v. Masson, 27 S. C. R. 575.

Purchaser at Tax Sale — Necessity for Actual Possession — Ejectment—Estoppel.]—
In trespass to land the plaintiff proved a good paper title through a sale for taxes, but he had never been in actual possession, and it was shewn that after the plaintiff obtained his deed defendant had cut timber on the land the building which the plaintiff which had cut there and forbade him; and it appeared that the plaintiff had brought ejectment against him, but had not proceeded with it after defendant appeared. The defendant claimed under a deed from the heirs of the patentee, and it was sworn that, before defendant purchased, the plaintiff also wished to buy from them, saying that he thought his own title not good:—Held, that the plaintiff was sufficiently in possession to maintain trespass, and that he was not estopped by having brought ejectment, as being an admission of defendant's possession. Heck v. Knapp, 20 U. C. R. 390.

Resumption of Possession—Consent— Occupation Jury.]—Where A. has once given peaceable possession of land to B. A., by re-entry without B.'s consent, cannot acquire possession to sustain trespass against B. To support an action of trespass, upon the plea of the close not being the close of the plaintif, the plaintiff must prove an actual and immediate occupation of the locus in quo, and the question of possession is in fact for the jury. McNeil v, Train, 5 U. C. R. 91.

School Trustees — School House.]—Under 7 Vict. c. 29 s. 44, the trustees of the school (and not the school master) should sue for a trespass to the school house, unless, at least, it can be shewn that the trustees have given the school master a particular interest in the building beyond the mere liberty of occupying it during the day for the purpose of teaching. Monaghem v. Ferguson, 3 U. C. R. 484.

Successive Trespassers, I—Quare, as to the effect against the true owner of a succession of trespassers taking possession of deserted land at intervals, some of them before 4 Wm, IV. c. 1, and not claiming under each other. Doe d. Baldwin v. Stone, 5 U. C. R. 388.

Tenant—Encroachment on Adjoining Land—Renefit of Landlord—Wrongdort,]—A lessee of a lot had for more than twenty years exercised acts of ownership over part of a lot adjoining, and claimed to have acquired title against his landlord, by possession, to the said part, and brough this action of trespass against the owner of the rest of the said adjoining lot: — Held, that his action must be dismissed, for, although a tenant taking in land adjacent to his own by encroaches ment must, as between himself and his landlord, be deemed prima facie to take it as part of the demised land, yet that presumption will not prevail for the landlord's benefit against third persons. The result of the cases appears to be that where a person is in possession with the assent of the Crown, paying rent, or where a person is a purchaser, although the patent has not issued, such person can maintain trespass against a wrongdoer, but this was not the present plaintiff's position. Harper y, Charlesworth, 4 B. & C. 574, specially considered. Bruyea y, Rose, 19 O. R. 433.

Trustee—Cestui que Trust.]—The owner of an equitable estate cannot, notwithstanding the Judicature Act, proceed against a trespasser in his own name. He is still bound to sue in the name of his trustee. Adamson v. Adamson, 7 A. R. 592.

Vendor in Possession.] — Trespass for pulling down a house. It appeared that the municipal corporation had purchased the house from plaintiff, and paid for it, but plaintiff remained in possession:—Held, that he was entitled to recover, notwithstanding the sale. Glass v. Dobson, 14 U. C. R. 419.

See Beatty v. McMasters, T. T. 2 & 3 Viet., R. & J. Dig. 3776; McConaphy v. Denmark, 4 S. C. R. 609; Western Bank of Canada v. Greey, 12 O. R. 68.

III. To Person.

1. Assault and Battery.

(a) Action-When it will Lie.

By Married Woman.]—In an action for assault brought by a married woman, the coverture, if not pleaded, forms no ground of objection to the verdict. Soules v. Doan, 39 U. C. R. 337.

Intention or Motive.]—Plaintiff and defendant were working together boring an oil well. Plaintiff was at the bottom, and defendant's brother had been at the top directing the ram used to drive down the pipe. He asked defendant to attend to it while he went away for a short time, and defendant, not knowing that plaintiff was below, let down the ram and injured the plaintiff's hand:—Held, that trespass would lie, defendant's intention being immaterial. Anderson v. Stiver, 26 U. C. R. 526.

(b) Defences — Justification and Mitigation of Damages,

Arrest for Criminal Offence.]—Trespass for assault on the plaintiff's son, Justification under the Criminal Act, 4 Vict. c. 26, ss. 20 and 28, the son having committed a malicious trespass on defendant's land. Averments necessary. See Madden v. Farley, 6 U. C. R. 210.

Challenge to Fight.]—Assault and battery. Plea, leave and license. Defendant contended that because the plaintiff had previously challenged him to fight, the plea was sustained, and the plaintiff should have replied an excess or unfair advantage if he relied thereon:—Held, admitting the general principle, that it did not apply, for a challenge to fight at once could not primā facie authorize the attack by defendant after some time with a club. 8l. John v. Parr, 7 C. P. 142.

Criminal Charge Pending.]—See Taylor v. McCullough, S O. R. 309.

Disturbance of Public Worship.]—
Action for assault and battery against fourteen defendants. Special plea of justification, on the ground that plaintiff was committing a disturbance in church. I Wm. & M. c. 18, relating to disturbances in church, &c., is in force in this Province, and not superseded by C. S. U. C. 92. Reid v, Inalis, IZ C. P. 191.

Expulsion from Defendant's Premises. — Though the motive and intention with which a defendant insisted on the plaintiff leaving his house cannot be inquired into on the traverse de injurid, yet the truth of the assertion that he assaulted him in order to make him depart, may be called in question. Datis v. Leanon, S U. C. R. 539.

Trespass for shooting at and wounding plaintiff with a pistol. Plea, justifying in defence of defendant's dwelling house, and to prevent plaintiff and others entering and assaulting him:—Held, bad, on demurrer, as shewing no defence, for before firing defendant should have warned the plaintiff to desist and depart, which was not averred. Semble, also, bad in point of form, for not shewing expressly whether defendant intended to admit the shooting or not. Spires v. Barrick, 14 U. C. R. 420.

Held, that if more force and violence be used than necessary to expel a person from a nouse, after he has refused to leave, the excess must be replied. Glass v. O'Grady, 17 C. P. 233; Davis v. Lennon, S U. C. R. 599.

But if a plaintiff relies on the fact that he was assaulted and beaten not for the purpose of expelling him from the house on his refusal to leave, as pleaded, then he may take issue on the plea. Though the plea be disproved as to the motive for the assault, the plaintiff cannot, nevertheless, under a mere joinder of issue on defendant's plea, recover, if the defendant did no more than he had a right to do to effect the removal; for the motive and intent of the assault are not in issue, so long as he had the justification in fact for what he did. Quere, whether a plaintiff can new-assign that the acts complained of were committed by defendant for other causes and purposes than those set forth and justified by the plea. Semble, that the replication of excess may be added by way of amendment at the trial, and if so by the court even after judgment in the cause. Glass v. O'Grady, 17 C. P. 233. Sec Madden v. Farley, 6 U. C. R. 210.

Incapacity of Mind.]—A tort-feasor cannot plead incapacity of mind in answer to an action for an assault. Taggard v. Innes, 12 C. P. 77.

Interfering to Preserve the Peace.]— Trespass against two for assault and battery, and wounding plaintiff and biting off his fingers. Pleas, by one defendant, as to the assaulting, battery, and ill-treating. "molliter manus imposuit" to preserve the peace, plaintiff and the other defendant being fighting. Pleas, by the other defendant, son assault demesne. First plea, held bad, molliter manus imposuit being no justification of the beating charged. Second plea good, for if there were any excess the plaintiff should have newassigned. Shore v. Short. 2 O. S. 65.

A number of persons, including the plaintiff and defendant, had formed a ring for the purpose of witnessing an expected light between two persons, one of whom was plaintiff's nephew. The plaintiff, when going forward towards the combatants, was assaulted by defendant, who got into a fight with him and bit his hand severely. Defendant's counsel proposed to ask the plaintiff, on cross-examination, as to a number of fights in which he was said to have been concerned; but the Judge refused to allow this, the counsel being unable to state that it was intended for the purpose of testing the plaintiff's credibility. The evidence as to defendant's purpose in interfering with the plaintiff was contradictory, and the jury were told that if defendant's object was only to prevent the plaintiff from interfering with the fight, and not to prevent a breach of the peace, he was a wrongdoer:—Held, that the evidence was rightly rejected, and the direction right: and a verdict for the plaintiff was upheld. The erroneous exercise of discretion in refusing to allow questions irrelevant to the issue to be put on cross-examination, would be no ground for a new trial. Hickey v. Fitzgerald, 41 U. C. R. 303.

Moderate Correction.]—Where in trespass for wounding and kicking and for tearing the plaintiff's clothes, defendant justified as for a moderate correction of the plaintiff as his servant, the plea was held bad, as no answer to the wounding and tearing the clothes. Mitchell v. Defries, 2 U. C. R. 430.

Pleas not Justifying whole Cause of Action.]—Quere, whether, when a defendant is charged with arresting, bruising, beating, and ill-treating the plaintiff, the justification of the mere arrest will be sufficient. Jones v. Ross, 3 U. C. R. 328.

Semble, that to a declaration in trespass, for assaulting, seizing, and laying hold of the plaintiff, and pulling and dragging him about, a plea justifying the arrest by virtue or legal process, is no answer to the pulling and dragging about. Beamer v. Darling, 4 U. C. it, 211.

The plaintiff declared for an assault and battery, and beating, bruising, and wounding: and defendant justified the assault and battery by a plea of "molliter manus imposuit:"—Held, sufficient. MeLcod v. Bell, 3 U. C. R. 61.
See Madden v. Farlen, 6 U. C. R. 210.

Previous Conviction for Same Cause.]—A plea of conviction under the Petty Trespass Act to an action for assault and battery, is not supported by proof of a conviction for an assault alone. Delong v. McDonell, E. T. 2 Vict.

To an action for assault and battery, defendant pleaded that he had been convicted of the trespass complained of before a justice of the peace, and so released from this action. The plaintiff replied " null tiel record" of the conviction:—Held, replication good. Thompson v. Leslie, 9 U. C. R. 300.

defenof the of the The he conmpson

In an action for assault and battery defendants pleaded that, under C. S. C. c. S. s. 7, they were convicted of the same assault by two justices, and on appeal to the sessions were acquitted, and the justices then presiding, upon request, gave each of them a certificate of such acquittal, in accordance with s. 42. Upon exception to the pleas:-Held, that the certificate must be obtained from the convicting justice on the first hearing of the case, and that this certificate, therefore, was no bar. (2) That the plea should allege that the party aggrieved prayed the magistrate to proceed summarily under the Act. Westbrook v. Calaghan, 12 C. P. 616. See CRIMINAL LAW, 1X. 3.

Provocation - Stander - Mitigation of Damages,]-In trespass for an assault and battery, the defendant offered to preve, in mitigation of damages, that the plaintiff had very slanderous expressions concerning defendant's wife, during defendant's absence from home, which were repeated to defendant on his return, whereupon he, on the spur of the moment, went to plaintiff and assaulted him. This evidence was refused, and the jury gave a verdict with £140 damages. The court set aside the verdict, to give an opportunity to elicit the whole circumstances of the transaction. Short v. Lewis, 3 O. S. 385.

 Libel—Mitigation of Damages.]— Held, in an action for assault, that libellous and abusive articles reflecting on defendants, published on the day of, and preceding, the assault, in a newspaper of which the plaintiff was the proprietor, were admissible in evidence in mitigation of damages. But where the verdict was for $50 only, and, though such evidence was rejected, the jury were fully in-formed by defendants' counsel that the assault was committed in consequence of these articles, and the court saw no reason to believe that defendants had been prejudiced by the ruling, a new trial was refused, but, under the circumstances, without costs in term to either party. Percy v. Glasco, 22 C. P. 521.

(c) Other Cases.

Declaration-Amendment at Trial.]-In an action for assault and battery plaintiff was allowed at the trial to amend his declaration, by adding that he thereby "became and was and is permanently injured:"—Held, that the amendment was proper. Glass v. O'Grady, 17 C. P. 233.

Incorporated Society — Liability for Acts of Members.]—The plaintiff, during his initiation as a member of the defendant lodge, in the presence of the principal officers and a number of members, constituting a full and perfect meeting, was injured through the rough usage of some of the members. It appeared that this and other proceedings were taken with the knowledge of all those who were present, and that somewhat similar pro-ceedings had happened on the occasion of other initiations, and that they were allowed and not checked:—Held, that they must be taken to have been done with the consent of the corporate body, and that the defendants were liable in damages for the injuries sustained. Kinver v. Phanix Lodge, I. O. O. F., 7 O. R. 377. .

New Trial.] — See Hickey v. Fitzgerald, 41 U. C. R. 303, ante (b).

- Perverse Verdict.]-Where A., having been tried for feloniously shooting at B. and acquitted, was afterwards sued in trespass for the same act, and the jury found for defendant, though the trespass was proyed. the court refused a new trial. Day v. Hager-man, 5 U. C. R. 451

 Public Officer — Action against.] — See Campbell v. Prince, 5 A. R. 330.

Several Defendants-Damages.]-In an action for assault, in which the verdict was against two defendants, it was held that the second defendant was liable for damages equally with the first, though the principal injury was caused by the latter. Dunham v. Powell, 5 O. S. 675.

2. Assault and False Imprisonment.

(a) Arrest on Civil Process-When Action

Judgment for Costs-Attorney.]-Both defendant and his attorney, who obtained an order for imprisonment against the plaintiff for not attending to be examined on a judgment recovered for costs of defence only, and who justified under it, were held liable. Hawkins v. Paterson, 23 U. C. R. 197.

Lunatic-Warrant for Arrest-False Representations.]-Defendant, within one month after the plaintiff's escape from a lunatic asylum where he had been confined as a lunatic, with full knowledge of the plaintiff having recovered his sanity and really believing him to be sane, falsely represented to the medical superintendent of the asylum that the plaintiff was still insane, and had threatened to take one M.'s life, which was thereby in danger, and that the plaintiff's brothers had requested the defendant to procure his recapture; and the defendant thereupon obtained from the medical superintendent a warrant for his arrest, which he handed to a constable, and the plaintiff was arrested and reconveyed to the asylum, but after a medical examination the next day was discharged :-Held, that the plaintiff could recover in case for the malicious arrest, but that trespass would not lie, for the warrant having been bona fide issued by the medical superintendent, and being valid on the face of it, and authorized by 36 Vict. c. 31, s. 22 (O.), the defendant was protected by it. Dobbyn v. Decow, 25 C.

Married Woman-Knowledge of Coverture.]-A married woman living on terms of separation from her husband, who was in Europe, was arrested for debt. It was not shewn that the creditor had any knowledge of her having a husband living:—Held, that, although the wife might be entitled to her discharge on application, such arrest would not support an action of trespass. Rennet v. Woods, 11 U. C. R. 29.

Order for Arrest-Nullity-Notice-Attorney.] — Held, affirming the decision in Bullen v. Moodie, 12 C. P. 126, that in proceeding to arrest and imprison a party for for the trespass, up to the time of the backing of the warrant. Held, also, that the plaintiff being illegally in custody under a criminal charge, his subsequent detention on a similar charge under a proper warrant was lawful. Distinction between subsequent civil and criminal proceedings in such cases pointed out. Southwick v. Hare, 24 O. R. 528.

Excess—Handeuffing.]—The plaintiff, a workman in the Central Prison, in the employment of a contractor therein, was de-employment of a contractor therein, was de-employment of a contractor therein, was de-

- Excess-Handcuffing.]—The plaintiff, a workman in the Central Prison, in the employment of a contractor therein, was detected conveying tobacco to a convict. The warden directed a constable to arrest him, which he did, and, though under no apprehension of an escape, handcuffed him, and led him through the public streets to the police station:—Held, that, although the offence was an indictable one, and the arrest legal, the headed thing was not justifiable, and the contable was liable in trespass therefor, but not have the support of the wardening was not party to it. Hamilton v. Massie, 18 O. R. 585.

Gaoler — Warrant — Juvisdiction of Justices, I—Where justices have a general jurisdiction over the subject matter upon which they have issued a warrant of commitment to the gaoler, though their proceedings be erron-cous, the gaoler is not liable. Secus, if the proceedings be wholly void. Quaere, where a magistrate has, under the Summary Punishment Act, committed a party unconditionally, when it should have been conditionally upon his not paying a fine, can his warrant be a justification to the gaoler? Semble, that under 24 Geo. II. c. 44, s. 6, a copy of the warrant, if delivered by the gaoler without shewing the original, and no objection made, will be sufficient. Semble, also, that if the original be demanded, its production will be good, though shewn after six days. Fergusson v. Adams, 5 U. C. R. 194.

Informant—Interference.] — It appeared that the defendant laid an information against the plaintiff for a felony, and asked for a warrant, but took no further steps, and had no conversation with the constable, who, upon a warrant handed him by the magistrate, arrested the plaintiff —Held, that the mere laying an information or originating a suit or proceeding before a competent judicial authority, does not render the complainant liable in trespass for what is done, even if the proceedings should be erroneous or without jurisdiction. And, inasmuch as the defendant had had no conversation with and had not handed the constable the warrant, which was apparently granted by the magistrate in the exercise of his own judgment, the defendant was not responsible. Smith v. Ecans, 13 C. P.

The evidence in this case shewed that defendant, having obtained the issue of the warrant for defendant's arrest on a criminal charge, interfered personally in the arrest, telling the constable to have the plaintiff taken away, or right away:—Held, sufficient to support a verdict on the second count, in trespass. Stephens v. Stephens, 24 C. P. 424.

Interference—Misnomer of Plaintiff in Warrant.]—The plaintiff, C., who lived at Montreal, was arrested at Kingston, upon a warrant reciting that B. had been charged, &c., for that he, the said C., did, &c., and commanding the arrest of the said B. The the insufficiency of his answers on an examination as to his estate and effects, conducted before any other functionary than the Judge who orders the arrest, it is necessary that a summons to shew cause should in the first instance be issued. Held, also, affirming the same judgment, that the fact of the Judge who made the order to commit having authority to make such order, and that the same appeared to be regular on the face of it, was not a sufficient justification for the autorney of the party suing out such order, in an action brought against the altorney and his clients for assault and false imprisonment. Ponton v. Bullen, 2 E. & A. 379.

Warrant Founded on Void Assessment — Municipal Corporation—Act of Servant.] — 41 Vict. c. 9 (N. B.), intituled "An Act to widen and extend certain public streets in the city of St. John," authorized commissioners appointed by the governor in council to assess owners of the land who would be benefited by the widening of the streets, and in their report on the extension of Canterbury street the commissioners so appointed assessed the benefit to a certain lot at $419.46, and put in their report the name of 5*13-49, and put in their report the name of the appellant (McS.) as the owner. The amount so assessed was to be paid to the corporation of the city, and, if not, it was the duty of the receiver of taxes appointed by the city corporation, to issue execution and levy the same. McS., although assessed, was not the owner of the lot. S., the receiver of taxes, in default, issued an execution, and for want of goods McS. was arrested and imprisoned until he paid the amount at the chamberlain's office in the city of St. John. The action was for arrest and false imprison-The action was for arrest and raise impreson-ment, and for money had and received. The jury found a verdict for McS. on the first count against both defendants:—Held, that S., who issued the warrant founded upon a void assessment and caused the arrest made, was guilty of a trespass, and being at the time a servant of the corporation, under their control and specially appointed by them to collect and levy the amount so assessed, the maxim respondent superior applied, and therefore the verdict in favour of McS. for $635.39, against both respondents on the first count, should stand. McSorley v. Mayor, &c., of St. John, 6 S. C. R. 531.

Writ not Set aside.]—Quere, whether trespass is maintainable when the arrest only is set aside, and the writ left untouched. James v. Ellis, 11 U. C. R. 449.

(b) Arrest on Criminal Charge—When Action Lies.

Constable—Arrest before Indorsement of Warrant—Subsequent Detention.] — A warrant for the arrest of the plaintiff, who had made default in paying a fine on conviction for an infraction of the liquor license law, was sent from an outlying county to a city. Before it was indorsed by a magistrate in the city, the plaintiff was arrested there by two of the defendants, the chief constable and a detective, and confined. Some hours after the arrest the warrant was properly indorsed and the detention of the plaintiff was continued until payment of the fine:—Held, that the only damages recoverable by the plaintiff were information was against B., the name of having been struck out. In an action for false imprisonment and malicious prosecution, it was proved that the plaintiff was known as C., but carried on business as B. & Co. At the trial it was objected that mali-cious prosecution would not lie, there hav-ing been no criminal offence charged. This was conceded, and, both sides agreeing that it must be trespass or nothing, it was left to the jury to say whether all or any of the defendants were guilty. The jury having found for the plaintiff:—Semble, that the defendants, having at the trial abandoned all defence under the proceedings before the magis-trate, could not afterwards, in term, be permitted to urge that trespass would not lie, on the ground that there was an information and warrant, and defendants were not responsible for the magistrate's act in ordering the arrest: but held, that the information and warrant could afford no justification, for they were against B., not the plaintiff; and, though the plaintiff had entered his name as B. in the hotel where he was staying, there was nothing to shew that he had ever represented that to to snew that he had ever represented that to be his name, and he was known to the hotel-keeper and bar-keeper as C. Held, also, that there was evidence, sufficient to go to the jury, to connect all the defendants with the arrest on a charge of false pretences. Campbell v. McDonell, 27 U. C. R. 343.

- Interference - Warrant-Defective Information.]—The defendant laid an information charging that the plaintiff "came formation charging that the plantation of the my house and sold me a promissory note for the amount of ninety dollars, purporting to be made against J. M. in favour of T. A., and I find out the said note to be a forgery," Upon this a warrant was issued reciting the offence in the same words, and the plaintiff was under it apprehended and brought before the justice of the peace who issued it, and by him committed for trial by a warrant recit ing the offence in like terms. The plaintiff was tried for forging and uttering the note, and was acquitted:—Held, that the information sufficiently imported that the plaintiff had uttered the forged note, knowing it to be forged, to give the magistrate jurisdiction, and therefore the warrant was not void, and an action of trespass was not maintainable against the defendant, even upon evidence of his interference in the arrest. Semble, that if the offence were not sufficiently laid in the information to give the magistrate jurisdiction, and the warrant were void, an action for malicious prosecution would nevertheless lie. Anderson v. Wilson, 25 O. R. 91.

— Justice of the Peace—Interference—Refusal of Bail.)—Where the defendant, a justice, had laid an information before another magistrate, by whom the plaintif was arrested on a warrant which turned out to have been illegal or void, and imprisoned under it, the defendant and the other magistrate having refused to admit him to bail:—Iffeld, in tenspass by the plaintiff against defendant, charging him with the arrest and imprisonment, that, in the absence of any other evidence, the mere refusal by defendant to admit the plaintiff to bail was no evidence that the defendant authorized the illegal arrest and imprisonment of the plaintiff; and a non-suit was ordered. McKinley v. Munsie, 15 C. P. 230.

Justice of the Peace—Defective Information—Waiver — Conviction — Warrant — Variance.]—The plaintiff, on an information against him under 37 Viet. c. 32 (0.), for selling liquor without a license, was brought before defendants, magistrates. It was proved that this was his second offence, though the information did not charge it as such. The plaintiff disputed the evidence as to the first conviction, but did not object to the information, and the magistrates convicted and adjudged him to be imprisoned for ten days, which they had power to do only for a second offence:—Held, that the plaintiff had waived the objection to the information, and that defendants were not liable in trespass. Held, also, that a variance between the conviction and the warrant for plaintiff's arrest, the former saying nothing as to hard labour and the latter providing for it, could not deprive the defendants of protection under C. S. U. C. e. 120. Stoness v. Lake, 40 U. C. R. 320.

— Quashing Conviction—Necessity for Amendment.] — Where an appeal was brought from a conviction imposing imprisonment with hard labour, which the magistrate had no power to award, and the sessions amended the record by striking out "hard labour:"—Held, that their assuming so to amend the conviction was not a quashing of the conviction, and therefore trespass would not lie against the justices. McLellan v. Mc-Kinnon, 1 O. R. 219.

—Discharge from Custody—Reasonable and Probable Cause.]—Held, that the discharge of the plaintiff from custody on habeas corpus was not a quashing of his conviction on a charge of uniawfully removing cordwood from an Indian reserve; and that the conviction remaining in force, and the defendant having had jurisdiction, the action, which was trespass for assault and imprisonment maliciously and without reasonable and probable cause, could not be maintained, but the action should have been on the case; but that, even if the form of action was right, there was no evidence of want of reasonable and probable cause. Hunter v. Gilkston, 7 O. R. 755.

Constable — Arrest of Witness — Searching Person.]—The plaintiff, a barrister, having been subporned to give evidence for the prosecution in a criminal case before a police magistrate, attended at the time named; but, on the case being adjourned, did not then attend, and the case was further adjourned; the prosecutor forthwith laid an information on oath before the magistrate, that the witness was a material one, and that it was probable he would not attend to give evidence: upon which the magistrate issued a warrant under s. 62, R. S. C. c. 174, addressed to the chief constable or other police officers. &c., and to the keeper of the common gaol of the county and city, directing them to bring the witness before him on the date of the adjournment, some five days distant. The witness was forthwith arrested by two police officers, and brought to the office of one of the police inspectors, and on his refusing to answer the questions usually put to criminals, except those as to his name and address, the inspector ordered him to be searched, which was done, and his personal property and private memorandum book were taken from him, the latter being opened and read by the inspector. He was then taken to the cells, where he remained some twenty minutes, when he was brought before the magistrate, and on his giving his personal undertaking to appear on the day named, he was liberated. In an action against the police magistrate and police inspector:—Held, by a divisional court, reversing the judgment of the Judge at the trial, that the magistrate, having jurisdiction by virtue of s. 62 of R. S. C. c. 174 to issue the warrant, incurred no liability, even though he might have erred as to the sufficiency of he hight have erred as to the sufficiency of the evidence brought before him, and on which he acted. As to the liability of the inspector the court was evenly divided, and the judgment of the trial Judge in favour of the plaintiff was affirmed. Quære, whether s. 62 authorizes the issue of the warrant or its enforcement an unreasonable length of time before the day named for the attendance of the wit-Held, by the court of appeal, that where a police magistrate, acting within his jurisdiction under R. S. C. c 174, s. 62, issues his warrant for the arrest of a witness who has not appeared in obedience to a subpœna, he is not, in the absence of malice, liable in damages, even though he may have erred as to the sufficiency of the evidence to justify the arrest. Judgment of the court below on this point affirmed. In an action for false imprisonment judgment cannot be entered upon answers to questions submitted to the jury, and a finding, in answer to a question, of a certain amount of damages, is not equiva-lent to the general verdict, which must be given by them. The right of police to search or handcuff a person arrested on a warrant to compel attendance as a witness, and the duty of a constable on making the arrest, considered. Judgment of the court below on this point reversed. Gordon v. Denison, 24 O. R. 576, 22 A. P. 315.

Justice of the Peace and Informant Joint Tort-Arrest in Another County. A general verdict on a declaration containing one count in trespass for false imprisonment, one count in trespass for laise imprisonment, and another in case for malicious prosecution, is not bad in law. But in this case the court, being of opinion that there was only one joint cause of action against the defendantsis, the arrest-restricted the verdict to that count :- Held, that a joint tort was sufficiently established against the defendants by evidence that one procured the warrant to be issued against the plaintiff on a charge of forgery, and the other issued it; that both knew that no charge had been made against plaintiff; and that the warrant was given by the one to the other for the arrest of plaintiff, who was accordingly arrested upon it, and that illegally. Held, also, that the effect of this evidence was not destroyed by the fact that the arrest was made in another county, and under the authority of another magistrate's indorsation upon the warrant; for that indorsation was not strictly the authority to arrest, but merely to execute the original warrant; and that the arrest was wrongful not from the indorsation, but from the antecedent illegal proceedings of the defendants; and that the defendant who issued the warrant was as much responsible as if the arrest had been made in his own county. Semble, (1) that if it had appeared that de-fendant who issued the warrant was liable in case only, and malice of some special kind, personal to himself, in which his co-defend-ant was not and could not be a partaker, had been proved, a joint action would not lie against both. (2) That one defendant might have been convicted in trespass and the other in case. Friel v. Ferguson, 15 C. P. 584.

See Malicious Procedure, I.

(c) Damages and Costs.

Justice of the Peace—Nominal Damages.]—Held, that, in any event, defendants, two magistrates, in this action for assault and false imprisonment, could not have been liable for plaintiff's suffering caused by the harsh regulations of the prison during his confinement; and that, having been proved to have been guilty of the offence for which he was convicted, he could have recovered only three cents and no costs under C. S. U. C. c. 126, s. 17. Stoness v. Lake, 40 U. C. R. 320.

(d) Evidence,

Admissibility—Facts Prior to Arrest—Judgment Discharging Plaintiff.]—In trespass for false imprisonment, where the defendant justified under a ca. sa., and the plaintiff replied that it had been set aside before action brought, the Judge at nisi prius allowed the plaintiff to go into evidence of facts and circumstances previous to the arrest, with a view of shewing the oppressive conduct of the defendant in issuing the ca. sa.:—Held, upon a rule for a new trial, that such evidence was admissible as affecting the damages, though not the right of action. Held, also, that the counsel for the plaintiff had a right to read at the trial. from the original judgment of the court in discharging the plaintiff from arrest and setting aside the ca. sa., the grounds upon which the ca. sa. had been set aside. Robertson v. Meyers, 7 U. C. R. 423.

sheriff, when sued in trespass for having arrested defendant under a warrant issued by the justices of the neace sitting in quarter sessions, may give this justification in evidence under the general issue. Fraser v. Dickson, 5 U. C. R. 231.

Sufficiency to Establish Interference —Refusal to Admit Evidence—Discretion.]—
In an action for arresting the plaintiff, who had been imprisoned on a charge of stealing trees, the magistrate who ordered the arrest was not called, nor the constable, nor was the warrant produced; and it was not shewn positively who was the prosecutor. It was shewn only that defendant claimed the land on which the timber was cut by the plaintiff; that he was at the investigation before the magistrate, and wanted the plaintiff to settle; and that afterwards, as the plaintiff was about being taken to gaol, the proposition to settle was renewed, and when the plaintiff refused, defendant told the bailiff, who had the plain-tiff in the waggon, to drive to gaol:—Held, not sufficient to charge defendant with the arrest, or with its continuance. Held, also, upon the facts, that the refusal to receive evidence of the constable and another, when tendered, was a matter in the discretion of the Judge; and that the nonsuit, which was upheld, was not shewn to have been against the plaintiff's consent. Conway v. Shibly, 39 U. C. R. 519.

Sufficiency to Shew Arrest—Principal and Agent, I—Plaintiff brought a suit in chancery against defendant, and T. S. and S. W., which was referred, and an award made against plaintiff for £120 to be paid S. W., and £154 to defendant. This award was made a rule of court by an ex parte order, and an attachment was issued by S. W. for both smus of money, defendant having previously assigned all his interest in the award to S. W., and given him a general power of attorney to collect the amount. The only evidence of the arrest and imprisonment was given by the sheriff, who swore that "the attachment was received in his office on the 31st January, 1859, and the plaintiff was arrested on that attachment on the 16th February, 1859, and committed to gaol." If urther appeared that the attachment was indorsed by the solicitor of S. W. as his solicitor only:—Held, that, although there was no sufficient proof of an actual arrest, a jury might be warranted in deciding that the plaintiff was constructively tat least i arrested, by submitting to the process, and actually confined to gaol thereunder. (2) That the power of attorney given by defendant to S. W. being a general power to collect the money due on the award, and to do all acts relating thereto, he, S. W., must be presumed to have been acting for the defendant, who was therefore responsible for the arrest. Wiston v. Brecker, 11 C. P. 268.

(e) Pleading.

Declaration.]—In an action of trespass for an arrest under a ca. re. against the plaintiff arresting, there is no necessity to set out in the declaration the affidavit to arrest. Beaucer v. Davling, 4 U. C. R. 211.

A declaration charging defendant with having caused the plaintiff to be assaulted and imprisoned, is good. Robertson v. Cooley, 7 U. C. R. 21; Fergusson v. Adams, 5 U. C. R. 194.

Plea of Justification on Charge of Crime.]—Plea of justification held bad, for want of direct and positive averment that a felony had been committed. McKenzie v. Gibson, S U. C. R. 100. Sec, also, McKellar v. McFarland, 1 C. P.

Plea of Justification on Suspicion of Crime—Reasonable and Probable Cause.]—Declaration in trespass, for assaulting the plaintiff and giving him into custody. Plea, that the plaintiff was defendant's clerk, and as such was in the habit of receiving money for the defendant: that a large sum of defendant's money which had come into plaintiff's hands was feloniously stolen by some person; that the plaintiff, though requested by defendant, would not account for the same; whereupon defendant, having good and probable cause of suspicion, and suspecting the plaintiff to have been guilty of the felony, gave him in charge to a constable to take him before a magistrate:—Held, no defence, for that no reasonable or probable cause was shewn either as regarded the action of defendant or of the constable. Patterson v. Scott, 8 U. C. R. 642.

Plea of Justification under Civil Process.]—A plea justifying under process which has been set aside for irregularity, on the terms of no action being brought, cannot be sustained. Defendant should apply to stay proceedings. Ferris v. Dyer, 4 O. 8, 182.

In a plea justifying an arrest under mesne process of a district court, the cause of action should be averred to be within the jurisdiction, and the writ shewn to be returned. Bijecraft v. Clarke, 4 O. S. 132.

A plea justifying under a ca. re. should aver that an affidavit for a sum certain was made and filed to warrant the process. Ferris v. Dyer, 5 O. S. 5.

Plea of Justification under Search Warrant, |—The plaintiff declares against defendants for an assault, beating, bruising, and ill-treating, and for false imprisonment. A., one defendant, justifies, alleging that upon suspicion that defendant had stolen his goods, he had his information before a justice of the he had his information before a justice of the warrant directory that the constable of Thorold in that district, authorizing him to search plaintiff's house at the township of Louth, in the said district, authorizing him to search plaintiff's house at the township of Louth, in the said district, for the said goods; that B., another defendant, being the constable of Thorold in the said district, at the request of A., searched the house, found the goods, and arrested the plaintiff at Louth, and at the request of A. carried her before a magistrate. Denurrer to pleas:—Held, plea bad, in assuming to answer the whole inquiry complained of, and yet not denying nor confessing and avoiding the arrest. Jones v. Ross, 3 U. C. R. 328.

Replication to Plea of Justification.]—Where defendant justified under a bailable writ, and the plaintiff replied that the arrest was set aside, without stating upon what grounds and without averring that the arrest so set aside was the same arrest under which defendant justified:—Held, replication bad. Monforton v. Monforton 4 U. C. R. 338. See Robertson v. Meyers, 7 U. C. R. 423.

Defendant justified under a capias. Plaintiff replied that the writ was set aside, and the plaintiff discharged for the insufficiency of the affidavit to hold to bail. Defendant rejoined, denying that the writ was so set aside, or that it was void; and on this issue was joined. It appeared that the Judge's order was, that defendant should be discharged from custody and the affidavit: —Held, that on the issue raised the plaintiff must fail, for the arrest might be set aside and the writ still remain in force. James v. Ellis, 11 U. C. R. 449.

Defendants justified under a ca. sa., and the plaintiffs replied that the judgment on which the writ issued was for less than £10, exclusive of costs, "wherefore the said writ of ca. sa. was and is void:"—Held, unnecessary to aver that the writ was set aside, for it was shewn to have been illegal and void. Ley v. Louden, 10 U. C. R. 380.

Defendants justified under an attachment for contempt against plaintiff, to which plaintiff replied that the rule on which said attachment issued was irregular, and that the court afterwards by rule, ordered that it and the rule on which it issued, and the arrest of plaintiff thereon, should be set aside, as having been obtained ex parte:—Held, replication good, for that the attachment being set aside for irregularity was displaced ab initio, and afforded no protection to defendants. Reid afforded no protection to defendants, v. Jones, 4 C. P. 424.

Plea of justification under a writ of ca. sa. Replication, that the said writ was ordered to be set aside: (1) because it did not issu within a year and a day after judgment; and (2) because the fi. fa. was not returned within a year and a day from its issuing:— Held, on special demurrer, that though good grounds to set aside the writ, they did not leave the defendants liable. McCarthy v. Perry, 9 U. C. R. 215.

(f) Other Cases.

Arrest by Person Assaulted.]-Where a man is himself assaulted by a person dis-turbing the peace in the public street, he may arrest the offender and take him to a peace officer to answer for the breach of the peace, It need not be averred or proved that the person was taken to the nearest justice. For-rester v. Clarke, 3 U. C. R. 151.

Gaoler-Receiving Prisoner without Warrant.]-The gaoler of a common gaol is bound to receive and detain, until released, a prisoner delivered into his custody by a constable on a charge of felony, without warrant, and may justify in an action for false imprisonment, without shewing what the particular felony was with which the plaintiff was charged. McKellar v. McFarland, 1 C. P. 457.

Identity of Causes of Action—Mali-cious Prosecution—Case.]—To an action of trespass for assault and false imprisonment. defendant pleaded a prior action pending for the same cause. It being admitted that the the same cause. It being admitted that the former action was on the case:—Held, that it was not for the same cause, and that it was not for the same cause, and that the plea, therefore, was not proved. Hunt v. Mc-Arthur, 25 U. C. R. 90.

The plaintiff, in a previous action, sued in trespass for assault and false imprisonment, but was nonsuited, on the ground that her remedy, if any, was by action for malicious prosecution. She accordingly sued in the latter form of action. Defendant then moved to stay all proceedings until the costs in the first action should be paid, on the ground that this suit was brought for the same cause of action:—Held, that trespass for assault and false imprisonment and case for malicious prosecution are clearly not the same cause of action. Semble, that the jurisdiction to stay proceedings in cases of this kind should be sparingly used. Doolan v. Martin, 6 P. R. 319.

(1) Addressing the Jury.

[See C. L. P. Act—R. S. O. 1877 c. 50, s. 261; con, rule (1987) 548.]

Counsel for Stranger.]-A Judge at nisi prius has the power of allowing the counsel for another creditor to cross-examine the plaintiff's witnesses, and to address the jury against the plaintiff's case. Lacis v. Baker, 13 C. P. 506.

Illness of Junior Counsel—Continuance of Address by Senior.]—One of the prisoner's counsel at the trial, whilst he was addressing counsel at the trial, whilst he was addressing the jury at the close of the case, was suddenly seized with a fit, and incapacitated from pro-ceeding any further. No adjournment, how-ever, was applied for, but the other, who was the senior counsel, continued the address to the jury on the prisoner's behalf, without raising any objection that he was placed at a disadvantage by reason of his colleague's dis-ability; it still her averages. disadvantage by transaction of the country abelity; it did not, moreover, appear that the prisoner had been prejudiced by the absence of the counsel alluded to:—Held, no ground for a new trial. Regina v. Fick, 16 C. P.

Inflammatory Address.]—Where com-plaint is made that counsel at the trial has improperly inflamed the minds of the jurors by remarks addressed to them, objection must by longed at the time the remarks are made, and the intervention of the trial Judge claimed; and where this has not been done, the court will not interfere upon appeal. with costs to abide the event, as no wilful intention to mislead the jury was imputed to the statement. Watson v. Gas Light Co., 5 U. C. R. 244.

Order of Addresses.]—Under s. 157, C. L. P. Act, 1856, plaintiff's counsel has no right to address a jury a second time after the address of defendants' counsel unless the latter call witnesses. Gibson v. Toronto Roads Co., 3 L. J. 11.

- Third Party.] - In an action brought against a city corporation for damages for injuries resulting from a defective sidewalk, O. was added as a party defendant, under R. S. O. 1887 c. 184, s. 531, s.-s. 4, at the instance of the corporation, who asked a remedy over against him. O. delivered a defence denying the cause of action, and alleging that if there was any, it was through the neglect of the corporation. At the trial the Judge ruled that counsel for O, should address the jury before the counsel for the corporation, thus giving the latter the reply as against O.:—Held, that this ruling was correct. Stilliway v. City of Toronto, 20 O. R.

Reading Former Judgment.] - In an action for false imprisonment under a ca. sa.:

—Held, that the counsel for the plaintiff had a right to read at the trial, from the original judgment of the court in setting aside the ca. sa., the grounds upon which it had been set aside, Robertson v. Meyers, 7 U. C. R. 423

Reading Report of Case.] - Counsel may read a reported case to the jury, in order to shew the law, and for that purpose may refer to the facts; but he cannot go into facts to shew how a former jury treated the same or analogous facts, and thus argue as to what the verdict should be. Dougherty v. Williams, 32 U. C. R. 215.

Reference to Amount of Verdict and to Costs.]-Defendant's counsel told the jury that a verdict in favour of the plaintiff for any sum would carry costs:—Quære, as to the right to make such statement; but, semble, that the objections to a verdict for the plaintiff founded upon it, would apply equally to a verdict for defendant. Carrick v. Johnston, 26 U. C. R. 69.

Reference to Previous Verdicts.]-On the third trial of a case in which the verdict had been twice set aside as against the weight of evidence, the jury were urged by counsel to take the same course that former juries had done, and in effect to disregard the Judge's charge. A similar verdict having been again rendered, the Chief Justice concurred in a new trial on account of this appeal made to the jury, although he would otherwise have felt disposed to let the verdict stand. Case v. Benway, 18 U. C. R. 476.

It is no ground for setting aside a verdict that the counsel merely referred to the verdict on a former trial, expressing a hope that the jury would give the same verdict as had been given before, but desisting when the allusion was objected to, unless the Judge who tried the cause is satisfied that the matter was pressed unfairly and with the view of exercising an improper influence on the jury. Moore v. Boyd, 15 C. P. 513.

Refusing to Take Nonsuit - Limiting Address.] - Held, that on plaintiff's counsel declining to take a nonsuit, the Judge was right in directing the jury to find for de-fendants, as also in refusing him the right to address the jury on the whole case. Storey v. Veach, 22 C. P. 164.

Statement of Facts.] — Where in ejectment the plaintiff's counsel in opening his case stated it as a question of legitimacy, and that defendant claimed under a will, and the defence was conducted without the production of the will, as if the statement of the counsel had rendered that unnecessary:—Held, that it ought to have been produced. Doe d. Breakey v. Breakey, 2 U. C. R. 349.

A plaintiff is not bound by the inadvertent A plainth is not bound by the inadvertent statement or admission of his counsel in opening his case, when promptly retracted, Januette v. Great Western R. W. Co., 4 C. P. 488.

2. Evidence.

Supplying Defects-Discretion.] - Exept in case of fraud, the court will seldom interfere with the discretion of a Judge at nisi prius, in holding a plaintiff to the case which he has proved, after defects in his evidence have been pointed out. Armour v. Phillips, 4 U. C. R. 152.

Witnesses — Contradicting — Reopening Case.]-The court will not review the discretion of the Judge at the trial in receiving evidence to contradict a party's own witnesses as being adverse, nor in receiving evidence on the part of the defence after the close of the plaintiff's case, even though for the purpose of corroborating the defence. Herbert v. Mercantile Fire Insurance Co., 43 U. C. R. 384.

Cross-examination-Several Counsel.]-As to right of different counsel representing defendants with common defence to cross-examine a witness separately. Walker v. McMillan, 6 S. C. R. 241.

- Ordered out of Court.1-Notice had been given on a previous day of the assizes, that parties to the record wishing to give evidence must not remain in court during the examination of the other witnesses; and the Judge rejected the evidence of a defendant for disobedience of such notice:-Held, that he disobsenence of such notice:—Held, that he had authority to do so. Winter v. Mizer, 10 U. C. R. 110. But it was held otherwise in Strachan v. Jones, 3 C. P. 253, and in Macjarlane v. Martin, 3 C. P. 64. See, also, Mahoney v. Macdonell, 9 O. R. 137; Black v. [See con. rule (1897) 547.]

- Recall-Discretion.] - At the trial the Judge having declined to allow a witness twice called in the progress of the suit to be recalled, or to wait for the possible arrival of another witness, the court refused to review the exercise of his discretion in so doing. Foreign Judgment.]—In an action on a foreign judgment, if the judgment is not impeached or denied, it is prima facie evidence against the defendant. In an action on a judgment obtained by plaintiff against defendant in the United States, defendant pleaded: (1) that the judgment had been recovered for money alleged to have been paid by plaintiff for the use of the defendant, and that he was never indebted as alleged; (2) payment before judgment: — Held, that the onus probandi was upon defendant, who ought to have begun, and that, he having refused to do so, a verdict was properly entered for the plaintiff. Manning v. Thompson, 17 C. P. 606.

Insurance—ddmission.]—In an action on a fire policy, the only plea was a further insurance effected by the plaintiff, without notice to defendants or indorsement on their policy, on which issue was taken; and at the trial defendants admitted that if they should fail to prove their defence the plaintiff would be entitled to a verdiet for the full amount insured:—Held, that they were entitled to begin. Jacobs v. Equitable Insurance Co., 19 U. C. R. 250.

Defendants admitted policy, proofs of death, probate, &c., and accepted burden of proof at the trial, and claimed the right to begin:—
Held, the plaintiffs had the right to begin, notwithstanding such admissions. Miller v, Confederation Life Assurance Co., 11 O. R. 120.

New Trial for Erroneous Ruling as to.]—A new trial will not be granted for a misdirection as to the right to begin, unless it appears that injustice may have been occasioned by it. McDonald v. McHugh, 12 U. C. R. 503.

Replevin.]—Replevin for a horse. Plea. that the horse was the horse of defendant and not of the plaintiff as alleged, and issue thereon:—Held, that the plaintiff was entitled to begin. Neville v. Fox. 28 U. C. R. 231.

See, also, EVIDENCE.

4. Right to Reply.

Address to Jury—New Matter.]—Where the defendant read to the jury letters of his own addressed to the plaintiff's attorney, and commented upon them, the court refused on that ground to allow the plaintiff's counsel to reply. Alderson v. Stewart, 7 U. C. R. 297.

Evidence—Fraud — Discretion.] — The Judge at the trial nonsuited, because he thought the agreement had not been properly proved, but allowed the case to go to the jury on the issue of fraud, the onus of which was on the defendants, and for assessment of damages. The defendants' counsel cross-examined one of plaintiff's witnesses on the question of fraud, and the plaintiff reexamined him upon the cross-examination;—Ifeld, that by reason of such re-examination the plaintiff was not deprived of his right of calling witnesses in reply to the defendants' evidence of fraud; at all events, this was a matter for the Judge at the trial, and also the plaintiff having had to open the case, the fact of the case going to the jury only on the issue of fraud and for the assessment of damages, did not deprive the plaintiff of the right to reply. McDonald v. Murray, 5 O. R. 550.

5. Other Cases.

Agreement—Verdict—Motion against.}—In trespass for mesne profits, before the verdict was taken, the plaintiff's attorney and the defendant signed a paper, by which it was agreed that the costs in the suit should be left to be taxed by V., and the value of the mesne profits should be decided by him, 'in case a verdict shall be given for the plaintiff.''—Held, that the words 'in case a verdict shall be given for the plaintiff.'' left it open to defendant to contend against a verdict at the trial upon any grounds in law, or upon the merits. Pattereor v. Prince, 7 U. C. R. 528.

Calling Witness after Verdict.]—
At the property of their verdict, but before any other business, the Judge examined a witness to prove only that the cause was commenced before the late District Court Act, and therefore proper to be tried in the Queen's bench, and thereupon granted a certificate:—Held, properly granted. Handcock v. Bethune, 2 U. C. R. 386.

Case Hurriedly Tried — New Trial.]—
Action for extra labour on an agreement to plaster defendant's house. The court, although not seeing that the verdict was against the evidence or weight of evidence, granted a new trial on the ground that the case was taken late at night, the defendant further shewing by affidavits that he had not time to go into his defence as fully as he would it time had permitted. Gallina v. Colton, 6 C. P. 247.

Compromise at Trial by Counsel — Dissent of Client—Right to Repudiate before Verdict.]—See Brown v. Blackwell, 26 C. P. 43.

Counsel — Conflict.] — Junior counsel are not at liberty to take positions in argument which conflict with the positions taken by their leaders. International Bridge Co. v. Canada Southern R. W. Co., 7 A. R. 226. But see 19 C. L. J. 358.

Objection to Charge. —The rule is the same in criminal as in civil cases, at any rate where the prisoner is defended by counsel, that any objection to the charge of the presiding Judge, either for nondirection or for misdirection, must be taken at the trial, and if not then taken it cannot be afterwards raised, especially where the evidence fully sustains the verdict. Regina v. Fick, 16 C. P. 379.

Objection to Ruling.] — Observations on the duty of counsel when dissatisfied with the ruling of the Judge at nisi prius. Parsons v. Queen Ins. Co., 43 U. C. R. 271.

. Nonsuit—Defendant's Risk—Reversal in Appeal — Judgment for Plaintiff.] — At the trial counsel for the defendants objected that there was no sufficient case made out upon one branch of the plaintiff's claim, the rectification of an agreement. The plaintiff's counsel thereupon declined to argue the point until the evidence was closed, and the defendants then called one witness upon another point; as to the rectification, the Judge ruled that the plaintiff had made out no case, and as to the other points he decided in defendants' favour, and dismissed the bill with costs. Thereupon the plaintiff appealed, and the decree was reversed and the relief prayed for given to the plaintiff. On settling the certificate of judg-ment the solicitor for the defendants objected to that part of it which directed the taking of the accounts between the parties, and that credit should be given for $40,000, the value of the plant, &c., seeking to have the action remitted to the court below, in order to conclude the trial and take such evidence as the defendant might adduce in support of this defence, and moved the court to vary the certificate accordingly:—Held, that the defendants were bound by the course which they had elected to adopt, and the application was refused with costs. Macdonald v. Worthington, 7 A. R. 531.

Plaintiff not Ready.] — Where defendants' counsel was ready at the assizes, and the plaintiff's counsel not being prepared, the cause was struck out :—Held, that defendants were not entitled to costs for not proceeding to trial pursuant to notice, but their proper course was to have insisted upon a nonsuit. Crotts v. McMaster, 3 P. R. 121.

Witness — Cross-examination — Secretal Defendants.] — The defendants appeared by the same attorney, pleaded jointly by the same attorney, and their defence was, in substance, precisely the same, but they were represented at the trial by separate counsel. On examination of plaintiff's witness both counsel claimed the right to cross-examine the witness:—Held, that the Judge was right in allowing only one counsel to cross-examine the witness. Walker v. McMillan, 6 S. C. R. 241.

IV. ISSUE BOOK.

The C. L. P. Act. 1856; s. 154, having dispensed with the sealing and passing of the nisi prius record, the English practice, as to making up and delivering paper books and issue books, was introduced here by rule 33 of T. T. 1856. By C. S. U. C. c. 22, s. 203, it was provided that the record need not be sealed, but should be passed and signed as therein declared; and in consequence, by rule of court of H. T. 39 Vict., 1876, issue books were abolished. This rule will be found in 38 U. C. R. 524 and 26 C. P. 250. The following cases, relating to issue books while they were in use, are therefore only referred to:—Commercial Bank v. Lee, 6 L. J. 21; Skelsey v. Manning, S. L. J. 166; Recves v. Eppes, 16 C. P. 137; Boulton v. Jones, 10 L. J. 46; Campbell v. Pettit, 26 U. C. R. 507; Welsh v. O'Brien, 29 U. C. R. 474; Walken v. Donovan, 5 P. R. 118; Commercial Bank v. Harris, ib. 214; MeDermott v. Elliott, 9 C. L. J. 259; Harris v. Peck, 12 C. L. J. 279.

V. JURY.

1. Answers to Questions and Findings.

Advisability of Putting Questions.]

—The new system of calling upon juries to reply to specific questions considered, discussed, and questioned. Canada Central R. W. Co. v. McLaren, S. A. R. 564.

Application of Evidence — Judge's Charpe.] — An objection was taken to the charge, as being adverse: — Held, that the charge could not be complained of here, for to give effect to the objection would be to compel the Judge to submit the case to the jury, leaving them to apply the evidence without any assistance from him, which was not the practice in this Province. Scougall v. Stapleton, 12 O. R. 206.

In an action against McK, and M. for goods sold and delivered, the plaintiff swore that he had sold the goods to the defendants and on their credit, and his evidence was corroborated by the defendant McK. The defence shewed that the goods were charged in plaintiff's books to C. McK, & Co. (the defendant McK, being a member of both firms), and credited the same way in C. McK, & Co, were taken in payment, and it was alleged that the sale of the goods was to C. McK, & Co, were taken in payment, and it was alleged that the sale of the goods was to C. McK, & Co, Trinial Judge called the attention of the jury to the state of the entries in the books of the plaintiff and of C. McK, & Co, and to the taking of the notes, and to all the evidence relied on by the defence, and he left it entirely to the jury to say to whom credit was given for the goods:

—Held, affirming the judgment in 27 N. B. Rep. 42, that the case was properly left to the jury; and a new trial was refused. Miller v. Stephenson, 16 S. C. R. 722.

Assent of Counsel to extestion—Objection—Estoppel.]—It was objected that a false representation alleged by defendant had not been found to be false to the knowledge of the plaintiff company: — Held, that a question with regard to such representation, put to the jury, having been assented to by counsel on both sides as one the finding on which would be decisive, it was too late to take this objection; and the effect of the finding must be taken to be that the plaintiffs knew the representation to be false. Star Kidney Pad Co. v. Greencood, 5 O. R. 28.

Contradictory Findings—New Trial—Damages. —Where a jury found (1) that the death of the plaintiff's wife had been accelerated, but not to any appreciable extent, by taking a dose of tartar emetic negligently supplied by the defendants; (2) that the plaintiff had suffered no damage thereby, but that his minor child had incurred damages to the extent of $1,000:—Held, that the action must be dismissed, because the damages attributable to the defendants were, on these findings (which could not properly be disturbed), in-appreciable and irrecoverable. The court below was in error in directing a new trial

Duty to Answer Questions — General Verdict.]—R. S. O. 1877 c. 50, s. 264, makes it imperative upon the jury to answer questions submitted to them, and prohibits them from giving a general verdict instead. But the Judge, after having put questions, may, nevertheless, in his discretion receive a general verdict. Furlong v. Carroll, 7 A. R. 145.

Duty to Submit Questions.] — The Judge is not bound under the O. J. Act to submit questions in writing to the jury. Lett v. St. Laurence and Ottawa R. W. Co., Hinton v. St. Laurence and Ottawa R. W. Co., 1 O. R. 545.

Equitable Issues—Reversal of Finding.]—There is nothing to prevent a Judge directing the jury to find on equitable issues. In this case, the jury having found for the defendants, the court, on the evidence, directed judgment to be entered for the plaintiff. Rac v. McDonald, 13 O. R. 352.

False Imprisonment—General Verdict.]
—In an action for false imprisonment, judgment cannot be entered upon answers to questions submitted to the jury, and a finding, in answer to a question, of a certain amount of damages, is not equivalent to the general verdict which must be given by them. Gordon v. Denison, 22 A. R. 315.

General Verdict—Findings Inconsistent with III—The court refused to quash a conviction under the Liquor License Act, affirmed on appeal on the ground among others that the general verdict of guilty was inconsistent with the answers of the jury to specific questions. Regina v, Grainger, 46 U. C. R. 382.

Findings Inconsistent with—Recommendation,]—In an action for wrongful dismissal the jury found; (1) that there was a final bargain between the parties; (2) that the plaintiff was to get $900 a year; and in answer to the question, "It being a condition of the bargain that the plaintiff sterm of service should end if he was not fit to do the duties of a captain, was the plaintiff sterm of service should end of a captain; "(3) "It has not been satisfactorily shewn by the evidence;" and (4) the plaintiff was dismissed; and added as a rider the following: "Your jury, believing that the plaintiff dut of treecive proper aid in the discharge of his duty, would recommend a verdict for plaintiff of $100." The Judge entered a verdict for the defendant, and the plaintiff moved to set it aside. A divisional court being equally divided, the motion to set aside the verdict was dismissed; but the court of appeal directed the judgment entered for $100 with county court costs to be entered for $100 with county court costs to be entered for the plaintiff, unless the defendant elected to have a time named to take a new trial. St. Denis v. Beater, 13 O. R. 44, 15 A. R. 387.

suit.]—I Findings Inconsistent with — Nonsuit.]—In an action on a policy for $1,800, upon goods which the insured at the time of insuring e-timated at a cash value of $4,500, the jury were asked, among other questions, "Did T. (the insured) reasonably and actually believe that such stock in trade was then of the fair value of $4,500." They answered: "Vot. III. D—219—70 "We cannot believe that he could think such a thing;" but said, when they handed in their answers, that they wished the verdict to be entered for $1,200, which they found to be the loss sustained:—Held, that on this finding defendants were entitled to succeed; and a non-suit was ordered. Newton v. Gore District Mutual Fire Ins. Co., 33 U. C. R. 92.

TRIAL.

Right to—Waiver—Malicious Prosecution,] — By ss. 203, 204, of the C. L. P, Act, R. S. O. 1887 c. 50, except in certain actions, including malicious prosecution, the Judge may require the jury to answer questions; and "in such case the jury shall answer such questions, and shall not give any verdict;" and by s. 252, the parties in person, or by their attorney or counsel, may waive trial by jury. In an action for malicious prosecution, the trial Judge, without objection, left certain questions to the jury, which they answered, but added that their verdict was for the plaintiff. The Judge disregarded the general verdict and entered judgment, on the answers to the questions, for the defendant:— Held, that the parties must be assumed to have waived their right to a general verdict, and assended to judgment on the specific findings of fact; for, if they could waive trial by jury altogether, there was no reason why they could not agree to the course adopted in this case. The jury, therefore, in finding a general verdict, were doing what it was agreed they should not do, and what it was agreed they should not do, and what it have trials and the court dispensed with their doing. Gover v. Lusse, 16 O. R. SS.

Inconclusive Findings — Effect of.] — The Judge at the trial, under 37 Vict, c. 7, s. 32 (O.), submitted certain questions to the jury, but they left one unanswered, which he deemed so material that he was not able to enter a verdict, and discharged the jury:— Held, that the court could not enter a non-suit, under 34 Vict. c. 12, s. 10 (O.), and that s. 33 of 37 Vict. c. 7 would not apply, for there was no verdict to move against. The point being new, the rule was discharged without costs. Armstrong v. Stewart, 28 C. P. 43.

In an action for slander the jury returned a finding of no damage, but said they could not agree as to whether their verdier should be for the plaintiff or defendant; upon which the trial Judge directed judgment to be entered for the defendant dismissing the action:—Held, that the finding of no damage did not dispose of the action, but that there should have been a finding on the charge of guilt; and a new trial was directed. Wills v. Carman, 14 A. R. 656, considered. Bush v. Mc-Cormack, 20 O. R. 497.

At the trial of an action for malicious prosecution, the jury, in answer to questions, made two findings in favour of the plaintif, but found that he was entitled to no damages. The trial Judge expressed the opinion that no verdict could be entered for either party, and refused motions for judgment made by both. The plaintiff, treating the trial as void, gave a new notice of trial for a later sittings. A motion by the defendant to set aside this notice was refused by a local Judge and by a Judge of the high court on appeal. The plaintiff then entered the action for trial, but the presiding Judge refused to try it, holding that it was not properly before him. Upon appeal by the defendant from the order in chambers refusing to set aside the notice of trial, and upon motion by the plaintiff by way of appeal from the ruling of the Judge at the second trial, or for leave to move against the finding of no damages at the first trial, notwithstand ing that two sittings of the divisional court had passed since that finding:—Held, by the had passed since that finding:—Held, by the Queen's bench division, that, although no judg-ment could be entered for either party, the findings of fact remained, and neither party could ignore them and proceed to trial again as if they did not exist; the trial Judge could do nothing but order or refuse judgment upon them; it was for the divisional court to deal with the action and the findings, either by sending it down for a new trial or by ordering judgment for either party under rule 755; and, under all the circumstances of this case, the proper course was to give leave to move for a new trial notwithstanding the lapse of time, a new trai notwithstanding the lapse of time, and upon that motion to set aside the whole of the findings and order a new trial. R. S. O. 1887 c. 44, s. 84, and rules 789 and 792, considered. Wills v. Carman, 14 A. R. 656, specially referred to. Stevens v. Grout, 16 P. R. 210. See the next case.

This action was tried with Stevens v. Grout, ante, and came before the common pleas divi-sion upon the same state of facts as that upon which that action came before the Queen's bench division:—Held, that the judgment of the trial Judge at the first trial was a judgment of the high court, and, as neither party moved against it, it was a binding adjudica-tion that no verdict could be entered on the findings of the jury, and the Judge at the second trial should have proceeded to try the action: and a motion to the divisional court was not necessary. McDermott v. Grout, 16 P. R. 215.

At the trial of an action for negligence causing the death of a servant of the defendants, the jury, in answer to questions, found that the defendants were guilty of negligence that the defendants were guilty of negligence which caused the accident, and assessed the plaintiff' damages, but disagreed as to and did not answer a question put to them as to whe-ther the deceased, with knowledge of the danger, voluntarily incurred the risks of the employment:—Held, that judgment could not, under these circumstances, be entered either for the plaintiffs or the defendants. Held, also, that as soon as a decision was given, to which both parties yielded, that no judgment could be given for either of them on the find-ings, there was an end of the trial, and either party was at liberty to give a new notice of trial and again to enter the action for trial, as upon a disagreement of the jury, without moving to set aside the findings and for a new trial. McDermott v. Grout, 16 P. R. 215, approved. Stevens v. Grout, ib. 210, overruled. Faulknor v. Clifford, 17 P. R. 363.

See Manitoba Free Press Co. v. Martin, 21 S. C. R. 518.

Inconsistent Findings.] — Held, that the trial Judge was within his right and duty in sending the jury back to reconsider their findings after pointing out their inconsistency. Peuchen v. Imperial Bank, 20 O. R. 325.

Indefinite Answer-Sufficiency.] -- In an action against a railway company for injuries caused by a collision at a crossing, the jury in answer to the question, "If the plaintiffs had known that the train was coming, would they have stopped their horse further from the railway than they did," said "Yes:"—Held, that though this was not very definite, yet, taken with the evidence on which the jury acted, it was sufficient. Rosenberger v. Grand Trunk R. W. Co., 32 C. P. 349.

Neglect to Answer Questions-General Verdict—Indictment.]—On an indictment for nuisance in obstructing a highway, judgment had been arrested, and a second trial had, in order to take the opinion of the jury on a particular question which the court thought material. The jury upon the second trial found a general verdict of acquittal without answering such question, which was submitted to them by the Judge. The indictment had to them by the Judge. The indictment had not been removed by certiforari:—Held, therefore that the court could not interfere by staying the entry of judgment until a new indictment could be preferred. Semble, that the jury had a right to find generally as they did. Regina v. Spence, 12 U. C. R. 519.

Question for Jury - Ascertainment of Sum.]—It was not improper to leave to the jury the question whether the amount in this case was ascertained by the act of the parties.

Watson v. Severn, 6 A. R. 559.

Question Put after Verdict.]-Where a question was not put to the jury until after they had rendered their verdict and answered other questions submitted to them, and after the Judge had been moved for judgment upon those answers, but it was done while all the parties and their counsel were present and before the jury had left the court room:—
Held, that the question had been properly put.

McLaren v. Canada Central R. W. Co., 32 C. P. 324.

Uncertain Finding.] - The jury were Uncertain Finding.] — The Jury were asked: "Did the defendant's house interfere injuriously with the light of the plaintiff's house?" They answered, "Yes, but not injuriously: "—Held, that in effect a question of Juriously:—Heig, that in enect a question of law had been submitted to the jury, and that the finding was too uncertain to support a judgment for the defendant. Carter v. Gra-sett, 14 A. R. 685.

See Webber v. McLeod, 16 O. R. 609; Providence Washington Ins. Co. v. Gerow, 14 S. C. R. 731.

2. Challenging Jurors.

For Cause - Waiver-Subsequent Objection-New Trial-Venue-Bias.] - At the trial of an action the defendant's counsel chal-lenged a juryman for cause. On the trial trial of an action the defendant's counsel lenged a juryman for cause. On the trial Judge stating that he did not think any cause was shewn, and that the counsel had better was snewn, and that the counsel had better challenge peremptorily, the counsel did not claim the right to try the sufficiency of any cause against the impartiality of the juryman. but accepted the opinion of the Judge, and the juryman remained on the jury:—Held, that on a motion for a new trial an objection to the juryman could not be entertained. The action was tried at B., and a new trial was moved for at a place other than B., because the jury there were biassed against defendant:—Held. that this formed no ground for a new trial. Wood v. McPherson, 17 O. R. 163.

being separately represented at the trial, claimed to be entitled under the Jurors Act, R. S. O. 1887 c. 52, s. 110, to four peremptory challenges each, which, though objected to by the plaintiff, was coinceded by the Judge, and the defendants to challenged six jurors between them, and the trial proceeded, resulting in a verifict for the defendants:—Held, upon motion by the plaintiff was entitled to a new trial. Under the above section the defendants were only entitled to four peremptory challenges between them, and, inasmuch as the plaintiff took the objection at the time, he had not waived his right to complain by proceeding with the trial. Empey v. Carscallen, 24 O. R. 658.

3. Special Jury.

Application for—Time.]—Where a defendant applies for a special jury, he must do so in time to permit of the jurors being summoned, otherwise the common jury will not be held to be superseded. Clandinan v. Dickson, 8 U. C. R. 281.

Costs — Certificate for.]—An application for a certificate for a special jury, must be made immediately after the trial. Binkley v. Dejardine, Tay. 1771.

The trial Judge certified for the defendant's costs of a special jury summoned at his instance. Farquhar v. Robertson, 13 P. R. 156.

Striking—Votice of—Time.]—There must be four clear days' notice of striking a special jury: therefore a notice given after 11 a. m. on Saturday, for 11 a. m. on Tuesday, is not sufficient. Belt v. Flintoft, 3 U. C. R. 122.

[R. S. O. 1897 c. 61, s. 117, requires four full days.]

— Second Trial.]—If a special jury be struck previous to an assize, and the cause is irregularly tried at that assize by a common jury, and the verdict afterwards set aside, it is irregular to try the cause a second time by a common jury, no new special jury being struck. McMartin v. Powell, T. T. 3 & 4 Vict.

Time for—Number of Jurors.]—A special jury cannot be struck after the commission day of the assizes; but it is no objection to such a jury that the sheriff has not summoned sixteen jurors, if a sufficient number attend to try the cause. Quere, should not a venire and distringas issue in such a case. Morvey v. Maynard, 4 O. S. 323.

See Salter v. McLeod, 10 L. J. 76.

4. Withdrawing Case from Jury.

Division Court—Facts not Disputed.]—
In a division court suit a jury was demanded and called, but the presiding Judge withdrew from their consideration everything except the amount of damages to be awarded, saying that there were no facts in the case disputed, the plaintiff's evidence being uncontradicted. The jury assessed the damages and judgment was entered for the plaintiff:—Held, that where the plaintiff furnishes evidence which the Judge thinks sufficient to support his case, the case cannot be withdrawn from the jury; the mere fact that the defendant dees not call evidence to controvert the plaintiff's evidence does not conclude the matter, for the jury night refuse to credit the plaintiff, and properly find a verdict for the defendant. The Judge in this case exceeded his jurisdiction by assuming the functions of the jury; and the right to have the case submitted to the jury being an absolute statutory right, the violation of it was ground for prohibition. Re Lewis v. Old, 17 O. R. 610.

— Question of Law—Res Judicata.]—
When an issue arises on the plea of res judicata, the identity of the facts in the former case with those in the existing case is a matter for the jury when the trial is by a jury in a division court. In a case in a division court where the defence of res judicata had been raised, and in which a jury notice had been given, the Judge determined the case himself, and refused to allow it to be tried by a jury:—Held, that he had no jurisdiction to do so, and that a mandatory order must go to compel him to try the case in accordance with the practice of the court. In re Covaen v. Affe. 24 O. R. 358.

Malicious Prosecution — Part of Charge,]—In an action for malicious prosecution of a charge of their of several articles, the trial Judge held that there was no nable and probable cause for charging the early of some of the articles, and withdrew the case as to them from the jury, but held otherwise as to the other articles, and directed the jury that the fact that there was reasonable and probable cause to charge the theft of some of the articles only bore upon the question of damages; and the jury found a verdict for the plaintif — Held, that there was no misdirection. Johnstone v. Sutton, 1 T. R. 547, considered and distinguished. Reed v. Taylor, 4 Taunt, 616, followed. Wilson v. Tennant, 25 O. R. 339 Negligence—Consent—Reference to Court—Appent.)—On the trial of an action against a rather company for injuries alleged to have been caused by negligence of the servants of the company in registence of the servants of the company in negligence of the servants of the company in the process of the company in the process of the company in the process of the company in the approach of a train at a crossing wheely the plaintiff was struck by the engine and hurt, the case was withdrawn from the jury by consent of counsel for both parties and referred to the full court with power to draw inferences of fact, and on the law and facts either to assess damages to the plaintiff or enter a judgment of monsuit. On appeal from the decision of the full court assessing damages to the plaintiff:—Held, that as by the practice in the supreme court of New Brunswick all matters of fact must be decided by the jury, and can only be entertained by the court by consent of parties, the full court in considering the case pursuant to the agreement at the trial acted as a quasi-arbitrator, and its decision was not open to review on appeal, as it would have been if the judgment had been given in the regular course of judicial procedure in the court. Canadian Pacific R. W. Co., V. Floming, 22 S. C. R. 33.

See Nonsuit.

5. Other Cases.

Case Triable only by Jury—Trade-libel—Action on the Case.]—An action for words written and published relating to articles of the plaintiffs' manufacture and the rights of the plaintiffs under certain letters patent by virtue of which they claimed a monopoly of the manufacture and sale of the articles, is not an action of defamation properly so called, but an action on the case for maliciously acting in such a way as to inflict maliciously acting in such a way as to innet loss upon the plaintiffs, and does not come within s, 109 of the Judicature Act, 1895, so as to be triable only by a jury, unless by consent. Dickerson v, Raddeliffe, 17 P. R.

Dispensing with Jury after Evidence Taken. |-The Judge at the trial of an action has the power to dispense with the jury after all the evidence has been taken, but the power should be sparingly exercised. Marks v. Town of Windsor, 17 O. R. 719. See Adair v. Wade, 9 O. R. 15; Denmark v. McConaghey, 29 C. P. 563.

Disregarding Findings of Jury-Appellate Court. — The power conferred on the court by rule 615 to give judgment on the evidence before it, may be exercised though the result be to disregard the finding of a jury, but it must be used with great caution. Clayton v. Patterson, 32 O. R. 435.

- Trial Judge.]-Where, in the course of the trial of an action before a Judge and jury, a motion for a nonsuit is made at the close of the plaintiff's case, and again at the close of the whole evidence, and the Judge adopts the course of taking a verdict, and of fully hearing and considering the motion, if necessary, after the verdict, the Judge may, in a proper case, nonsuit the plaintiff, notwithranding a verdict of the jury in his favour.

Perkins v. Dangerfield, 51 L. T. N. S. 535, and Connecticut Mutual Life Ins. Co. of Hartand connecticut Mutual Late 108, Co, of Hart-ford v. Moore, 6 App. Cas, 644, distinguished. Floer v. Michigan Central R. W. Co., 27 A. R. 122, 127, specially referred to, Macdonald v. Mail Printing Co., 32 O. R. 163.

Exposure of Body to Jury-Evidence.] -The plaintiff in an action for bodily in-juries may exhibit them to the jury for the purpose of having the nature and extent of the damage explained by a medical witness. Review of American authorities on this The exhibition of injuries which subject. have been sustained by another person, for the purpose of contradicting evidence given on behalf of the plaintiff in such an action, is not permissible unless competent evidence is forthcoming to explain their nature; but, even with such evidence, quere, Sornberger Canadian Pacific R. W. Co., 24 A. R. 263. Sornberger v.

New Trial-Misconduct of Juror. -In an action to recover damages for alleged malpractice the plaintiff is not entitled to shew to the jury the part of the body in quesshew to the jury the part of the body in ques-tion for the purpose of enabling them to judge as to its condition. Semberger v. Can-adian Pacific R. W. Co., 24 A. R. 263, ap-proved and distinguished. Attempting to dis-suade a witness from giving evidence is such suade a witness from gring evaluate is such misconduct on the part of a juror as would justify the granting of a new trial. Laughlin v. Harvey, 24 A. R. 438.

Failure to Agree-Dismissal of Action. -When in an action tried with a jury the presiding Judge holds that there is evidence presiding Judge holds that there is evidence to submit to the jury and refuses a monsuit, he cannot, upon the jury disagreeing, him-self decide under rule 780 in the defendant's favour, upon his own view of the evidence, Judgment in 30 O. R. 635 affirmed. Floer v. Michigan Central R. W. Co., 27 A. R. 122.

Trial by Judge alone.]-In an action of seduction no appearance was entered; the plaintiff then filed a statement of claim, to which no defence was made, and interlo-cutory judgment was signed, and notice of as-The defendant sessment of damages given. The defendant did not appear at the trial, and a jury was called, who disagreed as to the amount of damages, and were discharged. The Judge then tried the case himself without a jury, upon a fresh taking of evidence, and assessed the damages, and gave judgment for the plain-tiffs. Semble, that under the O. J. Act and this. Semble, that under the O. J. Act and former practice, the Judge in such an action had no power to dispense with the jury. Quere, whether in any event, a jury having been called and disagreed, they could be dispensed with, and a retrial had without a new notice; but it was unnecessary to decide the point, as it was not satisfactorily established that the writ of summons had been served on the defendant; and he was therefore allowed to have a trial on the merits. Adair v. Wade, 9 O. R. 15. See Nonsuit.

Fining Jurors—Remission.]—By a lib-cal construction of the Estreat Act, 7 Wm. IV. c. 10, the court will in certain cases relieve jurors from fines imposed on them at nisi prius, after the fine has been levied by the sheriff. In re Cole, 6 O. S. 425.

Incompetency of Jurors-New Trial.] A new trial was ordered, upon payment of costs, where it was shewn that one of the jurors was not selected to be of the panel, that another was so deaf that he was not able to hear some of the most important evidence, and that a third was in such friendly relations with the defendants, an incorporated tions with the detendants, an incorporated company, as should have induced him to decline to sit on the trial. Cameron v. Ottawa Electric R. W. Co., 32 O. R. 24.

Influencing - Newspaper Article-Objection-Waiver. |-- During the trial of an action for libel the defendants published in their newspaper a sensational article with reference thereto. The plaintiffs' solicitor was aware that the article had come to the hands of one or more of the jury, but did not bring the matter to the notice of the court, or take any action with respect to it, and proceeded with the trial to its close, when the jury brought in a verdict for the defendants. Upon a motion for a new trial upon the ground of improper conduct towards and undue influence upon the jury:—Held, that the objection was too late. Tiflany v. MeNee, Metealf v. Mc Nee, 24 O. R. 551. See New TRIAL.

Lunacy—Mandate to Sheriff — Exhaustion.]—On an application in lunacy, the court ordered the sheriff to empanel a jury for the then next sittings of the court. The matter was not proceeded with until the sittings succeeding the next; and the matter then coming on :-Held, that the panel was not properly

Overholding Tenants — Discharge of Jury—Luthority for New Jury, |—Held, that the fact of a jury being unable to agree, and so discharged, in an overholding tenancy case, does not determine the authority of the commissioner to summon a second jury. In re Buhvack, 9 I. J. 185.

The fact of the jury having been discharged by consent of parties, does not prevent the writ being still proceeded upon. Ib.

Setting aside Verdiet—Determination of Action by Court,—Held, that this being a case which before the O. J. Act would have been in the sole jurisdiction of the burn of chancery, to grant the relief asked, the divisional court could not without the intervention of a second jury; and, the evidence failing to establish the planitiffs right to the relief asked for, the decree was set aside; but as to the damages, as they had not been moved against, they were not interfered with. VI. JURY NOTICE.

1. Filing and Serving-Practice.

Irregular Notice—Trial Pursuant to— Verdict—Waiver of Objection.)—An order directed the trial of an issue in an interpleader matter. The plaintiff served the issue, but did not serve with it a jury notice as required by R. S. O. 1877 c. 54, s. 4. He subsequently served a jury notice with the notice of trial. The defendant did not appear at the trial, and a verdict was rendered for the plaintiff, who afterwards obtained (on notice) in chambers an order for costs:—Held, affirming this order, that the verdict obtained on the trial by a jury was not a nullity, but only irregular, and not being moved against promptly should stand. Lecson v, Lemon, 9 P. R. 103.

Last Pleading—Joinder on Replication.]

—A defendant can, under the Law Reform Act. 1808, s. 18, give a notice for a jury with a pleading which joins issue on a replication, taking issue on the defendant's plea. Quebec
Bank v. Gray, 5 P. R. 31.

Refiling.]—Where joinder of issue had been filed before the Act came into force, the plaintiff was allowed to withdraw it, and file another with a notice requiring a jury. Synge v. Aldwell, 5 P. R. 94.

—Refiling—Leave—Notice of Motion.]
—The plaintiff omitted to file a jury notice with his last pleading, and applied ex parte for leave to withdraw the last pleading and refile it with a jury notice. The leave was granted:—Held, on appeal, that when the plaintiff came to the court to be relieved from his slip, he should have been called upon to shew that the case was one which should be tried by a jury, and that unless he had been able to do so the defendants should not have had their statutory right to have the case tried by a Judge without a jury taken away. Held, also, that notice of the motion should have been given to the defendant, in accordance with the spirit of rule 406, O. J. Act. The appeal was treated as a substantive motion for leave to file the jury notice, and the order was affirmed without costs. Powell v. City of London Assurance Co., Powell v. Quebce Ins. Co., 10 P. R. 520.

— Similiter,]—With his joinder of issue, the plaintiff served notice of trial for the chancery sittings. Defendant afterwards served a similiter and jury notice:—Held, that the similiter and jury notice were good, and that the notice of trial must be set aside, McLaren v, McLauje, S. P. R. 54.

Second Similiter.]—The plaintiff joined issue upon defendant's pleas, and at the same time filed a similiter, without a jury notice, for the defendant. Afterwards the defendant filed a second similiter, and with it a jury notice:—Held, that the defendant should have filed a jury notice with his pleas; that the first similiter was good; and that the second was unnecessary, and must, together with the jury notice, be struck out as bad. Hyde v. Casmen, 8 P. R. 137.

Omission to File—Order Curing.]—
Where a jury notice is served in due time, but by inadvertence is filed too late to comply with R. S. O. 1887 c. 44, s. 78 (2), there is power to make an order allowing it to stand as a good notice; and such an order should be made if the case is one proper to be tried by a jury. Macrae v. News Printing Co., 16 P. R. 364.

Time for—"Before the Sittings"—Post-ponement from Non-jury Sittings.]—R. S. O. 1887 c. 44, s. 78, s.-8, provides that a party to an action desiring to have it tried by a jury shall. "at least eight days before the sittings at which the action is to be tried," file and serve a notice therefor. R. S. O. 1887 c. 52, s. 148, provides that no record containing issues to be tried by a jury shall be entered for trial unless the fee of $\frac{3}{2}$ required by that section be first paid. The trial having been postponed from a non-jury sittings, the plaintift, before the following assizes, filed and served a jury notice:—Held, that conrule (1888) 671 was not intended to overrule s. 148, but was only aimed at protecting litigants from being required to pay a new fee for entering their actions for trial a second time, and not to relieve them from the payment of any other usual fees. The plaintiff had the right to give the jury notice paying the jury fee, and annexing the jury notice to the record at the time of setting down.

Bunbury v. Manufacturers' Ins. Co., 13 P. R. 52.

Computation of Days.]—The plaintiffs having on the 31st October, 1890, served notice of trial for a non-jury sittings to be held on the 17th November, 1890, the defendant on the 10th November, 1890, served a jury notice—Held, that this notice was bad; for it was not served at least eight days before the sittings at which the action was to be tried, as required by R. S. O. 1887 c. 44, s. 78 (2), McBride V. Carroll, 14 P. R. 70.

—— Delivery of Defence.] — Quere, whether a defendant can properly give a jury notice before delivery of his statement of defence. Lander v. Didmon, 16 P. R. 74.

2. Striking out.

(a) As a Matter of Discretion,

By Judge or Officer in Chambers before Trial.]—In general a jury notice will be struck out on the application of the defendants when the claim is for unliquidated damages against a corporation. Nelles v. Grand Trunk R. W. Co., 13 C. L. J. 190. See Morris v. City of Ottauca, 13 C. L. J. 200.

Where the cause of action was one of a purely common law character, and none of the defences or replies presented issues of a merely equitable character, the order of a local master striking out the defendant's jury notice was reversed. If it were shewn that there was likely to be a great complexity of facts:
—Semble, that such an element alone would not be a reason for dispensing with a jury in a common law action. Bank of British North America v. Eddy, 9 P. R. 468.

The action was for the amount of a bill for medical attendance; no equitable issue was raised, and it clearly appeared that the only matter in dispute was the amount of the bill:—Held, a proper case for a Judge in chambers, under R. S. O. 1877 c. 50, s. 255, to strike out the jury notice. Pickup v. Kincaid, 11 P. R. 445.

A Judge in chambers or the master in chambers has jurisdiction under s. 80 of the Judicature Act. R. S. O. 1887 c. 44, to strike out a jury notice where it has been regularly served; but the jurisdiction should not be exercised, because the exercise of it will hamper the discretion of the trial Judge. Bristol and West of England Loan Co. v. Taylor, 15 P. R. 310.

Since the passing of the rules of 4th January, 1894, providing for the holding of separate jury and non-jury sittings for the trial of actions, it is desirable to have the question whether an action is to be tried with or without a jury settled at as early a stage as possible. A Judge in chambers has full discretion under s. 80 of the Judicature Act, R. 8. O. 1887 c. 44, to order that an action shall be tried without a jury, and that discretion is not lightly to be interfered with. And where a Judge in chambers reversed an order of a local Judge, and struck out a jury notice in an action for an injunction to abate a nuisance and for damages, his order was affirmed on appeal. Held, in chambers, that the action was one within the exclusive jurisdiction of the court of chancery before the Administration of Justice Act, 1873, and could be more conveniently tried without a jury. Lauder v. Didnon, 16 P. R. 74.

The Crown coming into the high court of justice is in the same position as the subject; and a Judge, on the application of the Crown, can make an order striking out a jury notice given by the defendants. Rule 364 applied. If before the trial the court or Judge has ordered that the action may be tried without a jury, the Judge pressign at the trial has no power to direct it to be tried by a jury. The Queen v. Grant, 17 P. R. 165.

A jury notice should not be struck out by a Judge in chambers, upon a motion made before the trial, simply upon the ground that the action can be more conveniently tried without a jury; that is a matter which should be left for the consideration of the Judge presiding when the action comes on for trial. Hawke v. O'N-vill, 18 P. R. 164.

left for the consideration of the Judge presiding when the action comes on for trial. Hawke v. O'Neill, 18 P. R. 184. See Bank of Toronto v. Keystone Fire Ins. See Bank of Toronto v. Keystone Fire Ins. Co., 18 P. R. 113; Fox v. Fox, 17 P. R. 61; Conmee v. Canadian Pacific R. W. Co. Canadian Pacific R. W. Co. v. Connec, 12 A. R. 744; Toogood v. Hindmarsh, 17 P. R. 446.

By Trial Judge—Appeal.]—The trial Judge has by s. 255 of the Common Law Procedure Act a discretion to try any case with or without a jury as he may think best, and his discretion will not be interfered with by a divisional court. Brown v. Wood, 12 P. R. 198.

Transfer to Non-jury List. 1-An appeal by the defendants from an order of a Judge presiding at the Toronto jury sittings, striking out the jury notice served by the defendants, and transferring the action for trial to the Toronto non-jury sittings, was allowed, and the case was ordered to be reinstated on the list of actions for trial with a jury, and the jury notice restored; but this was not to interfere with the right of the Judge presiding at the trial to direct that the action should be tried without a jury. The Judge should be tried without a jury. The Judge was not the Judge presiding at the trial of the action within the meaning of s. 110 of the Judicature Act, for he declared as soon as it was called that he would not try it, and then ceased to have any power over it. could the order be supported as one made in chambers under s. 44 of the Judicature Act, for the order did not profess to have been made in chambers, nor did the Judge in making it profess to make it as a Judge sitting in chambers, nor was any foundation Bitting in chambers, nor was any foundation laid for it as for an order in chambers, but it was made by the Judge sua sponte. The duty of a Judge presiding at the trial of a cause in which a jury notice has been given, when he directs that it be tried without a jury, is to proceed at once with the trial of it. Bank of Toronto v. Keystone Fire Ins. Co., 18 P. It. 113.

of Cases.]—In an action for the recovery of land, in which the writ issued from the chancery division, the jury notice served by the defendants was struck out, and a motion to transfer the action to another division was refused. Bank of British North America v. Eddy, 9 P. R. 448, does not since rule 545, O. J. Act, afford any general rule of practice, Masse v. Masse, 10 P. R. 574. Reversed, 11 P. R. 81.

In an action brought in the chancery division, on behalf of the plaintiff and other creditors, to set aside an alleged fraudulent transfer of notes, &c., made to the defendants by the debtor, and for an injunction to restrain the defendants from negotiating them, the defendants served a jury notice:—Held, that rule 545, O. J. Act, was not intended to, and does not, interfere with the power of transferring actions from one division of the high court to another, nor with the right to give a jury notice in a proper case, nor with the existing modes of trial of particular actions. Passon v. Merchants Bank of Canada, 11 P. K. 72.

In an action for the price of goods sold and delivered, which was begun in the chancery division, the defendant's jury notice, which had been struck out, was restored, and the action was transferred to the Queen's bench division. Masse, v. Masse, 10 P. R. 574, not followed, owing to the judgment of the court of appeal in Pawson v. Merchants Bank, 11 P. R. 72. Herring v. Brooks, 11 P. R. 15.

Conmee and McLennan became contractors for the construction of a section of the Can-adian Pacific Railway. The agreement therefor stipulated that ninety per cent. of the work should be paid for during the progress thereof upon "the progress estimates" of the proper officer of the company, the remaining ten per cent, to be paid on the completion of the contract, at which time the company alleged that they had discovered that by means of fraud the contractors had procured from their engineer progress estimates for sums greatly in excess of the work done, and they claimed for overpayments about $600,000. The contractors on the 5th October, 1885, sued out process in the Queen's bench division to recover $200,000, the balance claimed by them as still due; and on the 31st of the same month the company sued out process in the chancery division against the contractors to enforce payment of the amount claimed to have been overpaid them. Issue was joined in the actions respectively on the 17th and 14th of November following. In the action in the chancery division the contractors gave notice for trial by a jury, which, on application by the company, was struck out. An order was also made refusing a motion by the contractors to stay proceedings in the chancery division action until the determination of the questions in the other action. Thereupon the contractors appealed, and their appeal was dismissed. The company moved for and obtained an order to stay all proceedings in the Queen's bench division action with liberty to the contractors to raise in the chancery di-vision action by defence, set-off, counterclaim, or otherwise, all questions intended to be raised by them in the Queen's bench division action, which order was affirmed:—Held, reversing these orders (11 P. R. 149), that the court of appeal had jurisdiction to entertain the appeals, and that a trial with a jury was the prima facie right of the contractors, whose action was the earlier one, and that the orders complained of were not such as rested in the mere discretion of the Judge. Connec v. Canadian Pacific R. W. Co., Canadian Pacific R. W. Co. v. Connec, 12 A. R. 744. See Bank of British North America v. Eddy, 9 P. R. 468, ante (a).

Equitable Issues.]—In ejectment where equitable issues are raised under R. S. O. 1877 c. 50, s. 257, the issues must be tried without a jury. Bryan v. Mitchell, S P. R. 302.

Where equitable issues are raised, a jury is not of right but of grace under s. 257 of the C. L. P. Act. And where, in an action, brought under an order of the court made in a former action, to try the plaintiff's right as against the now defendants to the possession of certain land recovered in that action, equitable issues were raised, and the case had been once tried before a jury, who had disagreed:—Held, that an order striking out the jury notice was properly made. Leave to appeal refused. Admson v. Admsson, 12 P. R. 469. See Shannon v. Hastings Mutual Fire Ins. Co., 26 C. P. 380.

Where equitable issues are raised in a common law action, a jury notice is irregular under the Ontario Judicature Act, R. S. O. 1887 c. 44, s. 77, and rules 677 and 678, and will be struck out. Baldwin v. McGuire, 15 P. R. 305.

Equitable and Legal Issues.]-A local Judge has jurisdiction, in an action brought in his own county, where the solicitors for all parties reside in such county, by virtue of s. 185 (5) of the Judicature Act, 1895, to make an order under s. 114 striking out a jury notice as a matter of discretion; and he may do so sitting in chambers. And where the issues raised in an action of ejectment were mainly equitable, and it appeared to be a case in which the Judge at the trial would dispense with the jury:—Held, that the local Judge should have exercised his discretion and struck out the jury notice. Semble, that where there are both legal and equitable issues on the record, in the absence of an order under s. 114, a party has the right to have the legal issues tried by a jury. Baldwin v. Mc-Guire, 15 P. R. 305, commented on. Foz v. Fox, 17 P. R. 161.

Where both legal and equitable issues are raised by the pleadings, a jury notice cannot be regarded as irregular. Baldwin v, McGuire, 15 P. R. 305, distinguished. Where it is apparent that an action should be tried without a jury, a Judge in chambers will strike out the jury notice as a matter of discretion. Tooqood v, Huidmarsh, 17 P. R. 446.

——Separate Trial.]—I. brought this action against 8, in the chancery division claiming (1) foreclosure of certain mortrages, (2) upon an open account, (3) damages for breach of a contract; and 8, suel 1, in the Queen's bench division for damages arising out of the same contract, with which also 1,'s other claims were connected. On a motion to strike out a jury notice, 8, offered to let 1, lave judgment upon the mortgages and the open account, with a reference as to the amounts, subject to a defence which he raised as to a contract by I. to purchase the property covered by the mortgages. An order was made directing (1) the trial of an issue, at a sittings of the chancery division, as to the defence raised by 8.; (2) that the claim for damages in this action should be tried by a jury at the same time and place as the cross-action; and (3) that I. should have judgment upon the mortgages and open account with a reference, which was to be stayed pending the trial of the issue directed. Irwin v. Sperry, II P. R. 229.

The action was brought (1) for the recovery of instalments of money due under a script contract; and (2) for a declaration of the plaintiff's right to specific performance of the part of the contract as to settlement duties, the time for performance not having yet arrived;—Held, a proper case in which to exercise the power under rule 256, O. J. A. of severing the action so as to have that part of it which was preliminary tried first, the defendants having a primâ facie right to a jury as to the main matter in controversy, the (1) claim; while the (2) claim could be better tried without the intervention of a jury. The defendants' jury notice, which had been struck out, was restored, and the whole action was left to the Judge at the trial to try partly with a jury, and partly without a jury, and partly without a jury, as the might think advisable. Temperance Colonization Society v. Ecuns, 12 P. R. 48, 380.

The plaintiffs sued, as executors of McB., to recover from the defendant, a solicitor, money placed in his hands for investment, and notes and money received by him as solicitor, and agent for McB., and prayed that the defendant might be ordered to assign certain securities in his hands. The defendant set up by way of defence a certain agreement, under which he alleged that the plaintiffs were estopped from making their claim. The plaintiffs then amended their statement of claim, setting up fraud in procuring this agreement, and asked that it might be declared void, and be delivered up to high be declared void, and be delivered up to be cancelled:—Held, the case came within ss. 257 and 258 of the C. L. P. Act, and that the legal issues should be tried by a jury, and the equitable issues by a Judge without a jury, unless the Judge at the trial, in the exercise of his discretion, chose to try the whole case without a jury; but that the defendant was not entitled as a matter of right to have the jury notice struck out. Temperance Coloniza-tion Society v. Evans, 12 P. R. 48, followed. McMahon v. Lavery, 12 P. R. 62.

An action for part of the price of a machine and to enforce a lien on hand for such price, with a defence of breach of warranty in the defective condition of the machine, is not distinguishable from an ordinary mortgage action. Such an action would have been in the exclusive jurisdiction of the court of chancery before the Judicature Act, and a Jury notice is therefore improper under s. 45, O. J. A. A separate trial by jury upon the issue raised as to the character of the machine should not be ordered in a case of this kind, where there is but one cause of action. Temperance Colonization Society v. Evans. 12 P. R. 48, and McMahon v. Lavery, 12 P. R. 62, distinguished. Farran v. Hunter, 12 P. R. 324.

J. Act, the court of chancery had exclusive jurisdiction, a jury notice is irregular and will be struck out. Govanlock v. Mans, 9 P. R. 270.

The action was brought in the chancery division to obtain specific performance of a covenant to repair, or for damages:—Held, that it was really a common law action, for specific performance of such a covenant could not be decreed, and the defendant was therefore entitled to the benefit of his jury notice. Bingham v, Warner, 10 P. R. 621.

The exclusive jurisdiction of the court of chancery in s, 45 of the O. J. Act., means its jurisdiction as exercised generally in dispensing equity, and not its exclusive as distinguished from its auxiliary jurisdiction. Paucson v. Merchants Bank of Canada, 11 P. R.

Held, that an action brought by the plaintiff on behalf of himself and other creditors to set aside an alleged fraudulent transfer of notes, &c., made by the defendant, was such an action as would, before the O. J. Act, have been in the exclusive jurisdiction of the court of chancery, and therefore it fell within s. 45, and should be tried without a jury. The practice laid down in Bank of British North America v. Eddy, 9 P. R. 468, is still the proper practice. Ib.

Action by two ratepayers, on behalf of themselves and all other ratepayers of A., against all the members of the municipal council of A., charging that the defendants, acting fraudulently and in collusion with the treasurer of A., continued him in office after it had come to their knowledge that he was a defaulter, and allowed him to receive further moneys, causing loss to the municipality:—Held, that the law attaches the liability of trustees to municipal councillors, and that it was sufficient to charge them as such without using the word "trustees: "that the action was one in the former exclusive jurisdiction of the court of chancery, and a jury notice was therefore improper. Morrow v. Connor, 11 P. R. 423.

Where the plaintiffs claimed specific performance of a contract to supply them with milk for a cheese factory upon certain terms, and in the alternative damages, and the defendant asked for rectification of the contract, a jury notice was struck out. Where a party seeks equitable relief to which he is not entitled, the opposite party should, except in a very clear case, denur, and not attack the pleading indirectly by asking for a jury. Bingham v. Warner, 10 P. R. 621, commented on. Frascr v. Johnston, 12 P. R. 113.

This action was brought to rescind a contract for the sale of a vessel by the plaintiffs to the defendant, on the ground that the defendant had failed to perform his part of the contract, and for damages for breach of the contract and for injuries to the vessel, which had been delivered to the defendant, and to restrain the defendant from dealing with it, and for delivery up thereof:—Held, that this was an action over the subject matter of which, before the Administration of Justice Act, 1873, the court of chancery had exclusive jurisdiction, and a jury notice was therefore improper, under s. 47 of the Judicature Act, R. 8, 0, 1887 c. 44. BingAn action for an injunction and to establish a will and for the construction of the will and an account, is one that was peculiarly within the exclusive jurisdiction of the court of chancery prior to the Administration of Justice Act, 1873, and should, therefore, be tried without a jury, unless otherwise ordered, by virtue of s. 77 of the Judicature Act, R. S. O. 1887 c. 44; and a jury notice given in such an action will be struck out. Re Lewis, Jackson v. Scott, 11 P. R. 197, followed. Medial v. Melbonell, 14 P. R. 483.

The plaintiffs' claim was to enforce a charge against the defendant's lands and for a personal order or judgment for immediate payment of the sum for which they asserted the charge:—Held, not such an action as would have been, before the Administration of Justice Act of 1875, within the exclusive jurisdiction of the court of chancery, within s. 105 of the Judicature Act, R. S. O. 1887 c. 5.1. being, the notice local and equitable is 1511 applied, and the action and given control for trial at a jury sittings. Sawger v. Robectson 19 P. B. 172

Non-repair of Highway, |—In an action against a rhilway company and a city corporation to recover damages for injuries sustained by the plaintiffs by being upset upon a street in the city owing to the heaping up of snow upon the side of the roadway, the plaintiffs in their statement of claim alleged that the corporation had permitted this to be done, and had thereby allowed the street to be out of repair and dangerous for travel:—Held, that the action must be treated as one for non-repair of a street within the meaning of s. 5 of the Law Courts Act. 1896; and a jury notice was therefore irregular and should be struck out. It made no difference that the motion to strike out the jury notice was made by the railway company and not by the city corporation, as the latter appeared and supported the motion. Barber v. Toronto R. W. Co., 17 P. R. 293.

Bridge,]—Section 194 of the Judicature Act. R. S. O. 1897 c. 51, providing that certain actions for damages against municipal corporations for non-repair shall be tried by a Judge without a jury, applies to such an action in respect to part of a highway formed by a bridge; and a jury notice was struck out as irregular. Vennard v. Township of Bruce, 19 C. L. T. Occ. N. 87.

3. Other Cases.

Special Order Directing Trial by Jury.,—Held, that an action to set aside a conveyance could, previous to the O. J. Act, have been brought in the court of chancery only, and the defendant had therefore no right, as of course, to have the action tried by a jury. While under the old Chancery Act (R. S. O. 1877 c. 40, s. 99) the court might direct an action to be tried by a jury upon notice and for good cause, yet this could only be done by the court, and not by a Judge or master in chambers. Thurlow v. Beck, 9 P. R. 268.

The court of chancery had, before the O. J. Act, exclusive jurisdiction in actions to establish wills, and its power to direct a trial by jury (R. S. O. 1877 c. 40, s. 99) is continued in the high court under s. 45, O. J. Act. But the heir-at-law in such an action has not now in this Province an absolute right to a jury, and the court refused to direct one on the issues raised herein. Re Lewis, Jackson v. Scott, 11 P. R. 107.

TRIAL.

Waiver of Jury Notice—Consent—Indoorsement on Record.]—The Law Reform Act of 1848, s. 18, s.-s. 3, enects that it shall be competent for the parties at a trial to consent that the notice for a jury shall be waived, and the case tried by the Judge, "and to indorse a memorandum of such consent on the record; and thereupon" the Judge shall try, &c. The plaintiff had given notice for a jury, but at the trial the counsel on both sides waived it, and requested the Judge to try the case, which he did, and found for the plaintiff; but no memorandum was indorsed. On objection by the plaintiff to the Judge's authority to try:—Held, that the record might be amended by the Judge's notes, which stated the waiver and consent, and the indorsement of the memorandum made nunc pro tune. Wycott v. Campbell, 31 U. C. R. 584.

VII. NOTICE OF TRIAL OR ASSESSMENT,

1. By Whom Given.

(a) Proviso and Notice by Defendant.

[See C. L. P. Act, R. S. O. 1877 c. 50, s. 246; con, rule (1897) 530.]

Countermand. I—Where the plaintiff's attorney, at defendant's request, countermanded notice of trial, and defendant's attorney did not object, or afterwards move for judgment:—Held, that the case could not be taken down to trial by proviso at the following assizes. Doe d. Davidson, v. Glecson, 9 U. C. R. 607.

Default of Plaintiff—Abolition of Notice by Proviso,]— Defendant having given notice of trial by proviso, claiming that the plaintiff had made default in not proceeding to trial within due time after a new trial ordered—the question whether there had been, under the circumstances, a default such as to enable the defendant to give this notice, considered, but not decided. Summerville v. Joy. 5 P. R. 144.

Quare, whether notice of trial by proviso has been abolished in this country. Ib.

Previous Notice.]—Defendant's attorney gave twenty days' notice of trial to the plaintiff, as under the C. L. P. Act of 1856, s. 151, and afterwards gave notice of trial by proviso for the same assizes, where the plaintiff not appearing was nonsuited:—Held, regular, for the first notice was not one intended by s. 151, and if it had been, defendants could still give the notice by proviso. Carscallen v. Moodie, 2 P. R. 254.

Remanet. —After a cause had been made a remanet, defendant cannot rule the plaintiff to enter the issue, but his proper course is to take the cause down to trial by proviso. Boulton v. Jarvis, 1 U. C. R. 399.

Second Trial.] — The provision as to twenty days' notice by the defendant to the plaintiff to bring on a case for trial does not apply when the case has once been tried. Cameron v. Millog, S. C. L. J. 67.

(b) Since the Judicature Act.

"Any Party."]—The words "either party." in rule 255. O. J. Act, mean "any party." and when an action is as to all the parties to it ripe for trial, one of several defendants may bring the case on under that rule by giving notice of trial to the plaintiff and his co-defendants. McLean v. Thompson, 9 P. R. 536.

Since the O. J. Act any one of the parties, plaintiffs or defendants, may give notice of trial. Tinning v. Grand Trunk R. W. Co., 11 P. R. 438,

Conflicting Notices—Earlier Sittings.]—
In an action in the chancery division in which no jury notice had been given, the defendant gave notice of trial for the assizes beginning on the 10th September, 1889, and the plaintiff for the chancery sittings beginning on the 4th November, 1889:—Held, that under con, rule (1888) 654, either party has the right to give notice of trial for the next sittings, whether an assize or a chancery sittings; and the plaintiff cannot take away that right from the defendant by giving notice of trial for a later sittings. The plaintiff's motion to set aside the defendant's notice of trial was therefore refused. Palmateer v. Webb, 7 C. L. T. Occ. N. 244, distinguished. Shave v. Crawford, 13 P. R. 219.

2. Countermand or Abandonment.

Abandonment — Costs.]—Where one of several defendants gives motice of trial, and afterwards, becoming aware that the action is not at issue against the other defendants, abandons his motice, he cannot tax the costs of it against the opposite party. Strachan v. Rutten, 15 P. R. 1090.

Countermand.] — Where notice of trial has been given, it cannot be countermanded by either party. Friendly v. Carter, 9 P. R. 41.

See Doe d. Davidson v. Gleeson, 9 U. C. R. 607.

3. Dismissal of Action for not Giving.

See Practice—Practice since the Judicature Act, V. 2 (c).

4. For What Sittings.

Chancery Sittings. —A notice of trial in an action brought in the Queen's bench or common pleas division, given for a special sittings for the trial of actions in the chancery division, is irregular, and will be set aside. Grant v. Middleton, 10 P. R. 585, Jury Sittings — Non-jury Sittings.]— Where an action is to be tried without a jury, and two spring or autumn sittings have been appointed at the place of trial, one for the trial of actions with, and the other without, a jury, the plaintiff, although by s. 88 of the Judicature Act, 1825, he can have his action tried at the jury sittings, is not in default under rule 647 by reason of his not giving notice of trial therefor, where the non-jury sittings, for which he intends to give notice of trial, is to be held at a later date. Leyburn v. Knoke, Leyburn v. Herbort, 17 P. R. 410.

Next Sitting of the Court.]—The plaintiff gave notice of trial for the Toronto assizes, which was earlier than the chancery sittings, and the defendants gave notice of trial for the chancery sittings. The actions could properly have been tried at either. In consequence of the state of the assize docket it seemed probable that the actions would really be sooner tried if set down for the chancery sittings:—Held, that the assizes was, and the chancery sittings was not, "the next sitting of the court," and the defendants were, therefore, not within their right, under rule 654, in giving notice of trial for the latter. Hogaboom v. Lunt, Hogaboom v. McDonald, 14 P. R. 480.

Under rule 654 the defendant has a right to give notice of trial for the next sitting of the court, and, if such notice is regular, the plaintiff cannot interfere with such right by giving notice for a more distant sitting. It is the duty of a defendant, setting a case down for trial, to give notice of trial to all the other parties: and if some of them are defendants who have not appeared, and it is necessary to give them notice of motion for judgment, such notice should be for the same time and place as the notice of trial. McGill v. McDonell, 14 P. R. 483.

Semble, that a notice intituled in the Queen's bench, "for the next sittings of this court, to be held at, &c., on, &c.," was irregular. De Blaquiere v. Cottle, 4 P. R. 167.

See Shaw v. Crawford, 13 P. R. 219, ante 1 (b).

5. Form of Notice.

Intituling—Ejectment—Nominal Detendant,—In ejectment against A. and B., by consent of plaintiff's attorney, an appearance was entered for S. as landlord, A. and B. not appearing. The notice of trial was intituded as against A. and B., and notice was served on plaintiff's attorney warning him that this would be objected to:—Held, that the notice was wrongly intituled. Jones v. Scaton, 26 U. C. R. 166.

Omission in Style of Cause.]—
Where a defendant is not misled by a notice of trial, any trifling irregularity therein, as in this case the omission of the words." In the matter of partition between," before the plaintiff's and defendant's names, in the style of cause, will not entitle defendant to set aside the verdict: and irregularities of this kind should be objected to promptly, otherwise the court will not interfere. Symonds v. Symonds, 20 C. P. 271.

Omission of a Defendant—Nullity.]

—A notice in a suit against two defendants, with the name of only one defendant therein, a nullity. Doc Read v. Peterson, 1 P. R.

Nullity.] fendants, therein, 1 P. R. Notice of Assessment.]—A notice of assessment will not be considered as a notice of trial. Fortune v. McCoy, Tay. 435.

Where there is an issue in fact and an issue in law, on which contingent damages are to be assessed, a notice of trial was held sufficient to enable the plaintiff to try the issue and assess damages, Davis v, Davis, 4 O. S. 322.

Notice of trial given instead of notice of assessment, is irregular. Billings v. Reid, 5 O. S. 73.

Where the notice is to try the issues and assess the damages, and there are in fact no issues, the notice as to the assessment is not therefore irregular. Gamble v. Rees, 7 U. C. R. 406.

After issue joined, and notice of trial served, the plaintiff applied to a Judge to strike out a piea. This was granted, but the Judge refused to order that the notice of trial, &c., should stand as good for the then altered state of the record. The plaintiff, notwithstanding, proceeded with his case, and altered his record to suit the state of the proceedings. The notice served was notice of trial, while the striking out of the piea required notice of assessment. The plaintiff having assessed damages:
—Held, irregular. Dickson v. Grimshauce, 14 C. P. 273.

An issue book, where there were issues in fact and in law, and the latter had been decided in the plaintiff's favour, contained no notice of the judgment, and the usual venire only, and the notice of trial served with it was only to try the issues, not to assess damages:—Held, that the informality in the notice was immaterial, as defendant could not have been misled by it. Wetsh v. O'Brien, 29 U. C. R. 474.

6. Irregularity.

(a) Issue not Joined or Pleadings not Closed.

Amendment—Vacation.]—A party to an action has the right, notwithstanding the insertion in rule 484, by rule 1331, of the words "or of the Christmas vacation," to deliver a pleading during such vacation; and a notice of trial given therein is regular. Where a pleading is amended under an order giving leave to amend, rule 427 does not apply; and, under rule 392, when the amendments allowed by the order have been made or the time thereby limited for making them has elapsed, the pleadings are in the same position as to their being closed as they were in when the order was made. Thompson v. Housson, 16 P. R. 378.

Before Issue Joined — Issue Book.]— Held, following Ginger v. Pycroft, 5 D. & L. 554, that a notice of trial given before issue joined, except under Reg. Gen. 36, is irregular, and, following McBean v. Duffy, 4 P. R. 338, that the issue book must be delivered before or with the notice of trial. Ross v. McLay, 6 P. R. 14.

Counterclaim — Joinder of Issue.]—The plaintiff delivered a simple joinder of issue upon the statement of defence and counterclaim:
—Held, that this closed the pleadings, and that notice of trial served with it was regular. Hare v. Caucthrope, 11 P. R. 353.

delivered by the defendant to a counterchim, in answer thereto, whether by the original polanitif or by added defendants, which denies the allegations in the counterchim, puts the plaintiff to by added defendants, which denies the allegations in the counterchim, puts the plaintiff to the proof thereof, and submits that the counterchaim should be dismissed, is not a joinder of issue, but a statement of defence to the counterchain; the plaintiff by counterchain has by the rules three weeks to reply thereto; and the pleadings, at least quood the counterchaim, are not closed until after the lapse of three weeks, or until the plaintiff by counterchaim has joined issue. Notice of trial set aside where given by the original plaintiffs after the lapse of four days from the delivery of such a pleading, no subsequent pleading of such a pleading, no subsequent pleading of such a pleading, no subsequent pleading of such a pleading, whether "plaintiff" in rule 381 does not include a plaintiff by counterchaim. Trenia v. Tarner, 16 P. R. 349.

Ejectment — Issue after Appearance,]— A writ in ejectment was served on the 15th August, 1881, and an appearance entered after the 22nd of the same month:—Held, that the plaintiff need not file a statement of claim, under the new practice, and that a notice of trial served immediately after the entry of the appearance was regular, the cause being then at issue. Laidlauv, Ashbaugh, 9 P. R. 6.

Joinder of Issue—Delivery on same Day as Defence.]—Where an overdue statement of defence was filed on the last day for giving notice of trial for the assizes, and a joinder of issue and jury notice were filed by the plaintiff on the same day, but after the filing of the defence:—Held, that the service of notice of trial with the joinder and jury notice, on the same day, before the filing of the defence, was not an irregularity. Broderick v, Broatch, 12 P. R. 561.

On the last day for delivering the statement of defence, which was also the last day for giving notice of trial for a sittings of the court at which the plaintiff wished to go down, the plaintiff, without waiting for the statement of defence, delivered a joinder of issue and served notice of trial before two o'clock in the afternoon. Before three o'clock the same day the defendants delivered beir defence. The defendants were in no default:—Hield, that the notice of trial, being delivered before the close of the pleadings, was irregular under rule 654, and should be set aside. Broderick v. Broatch, 12 P. R. 561, distinguished. McHroy v. Mc-Rroy, 14 P. R. 264.

On the last day for delivering the statement of defence, which was also the last day for serving notice of trial, the defendants filed their defence, a few minutes before four o'clock, and served it at the office of the plaintiff's solicitor about the same time. The plaintiff immediately filed a joinder of issue, and then served it and also notice of trial, before four o'clock, on the clerk of the defendants' solicitor, in Osgoode Hall. On the same day, but before the defence was filed, the plaintiff also served the joinder and notice of trial at the office of the defendants' solicitor:—Held, that the notice of trial was irregular, for it could not be properly served until after the close of the pleadings; and the service upon the clerk at Osgoode Hall was of no avail; it could only be effective, if at all, from the moment when it reached the solicitor himself, McIlroy v. McIlroy, 14 P. R. 264, followed in preference to Broderick v. Broatch, 12 P. R. 561. Held, also, that the issuing by the defendants of an order to produce at the same time that they filed their defence did not waive the irregularity of the notice of trial. Hermann v. Mandarin Gold Mining Co. of Ontario, 18 P. R. 34.

 Lapse of Time.]—A cause is at issue where a joinder of issue has been delivered, or where three weeks have elapsed after statement of defence has been delivered. A notice of trial served before either of these events had happened:—Held, irregular and set aside, Schneider v. Proctor, 9 P. R. 11.

Notice Limiting Defence — Delivery after Notice of Trial.]—Where, immediately after appearance, the plaintiff served the issue book, together with the notice of trial, and subsequently, within four days after appearance, defendant gave notice limiting his defence, which notice did not appear upon the issue book or record :-Held, that the notice of trial was irregular, as the notice limiting the defence was regular, and should appear on the issue book, and be served with notice of trial. Grimshaw v. White, 12 C. P. 521.

Pending Appeal.]-Held, that a notice of trial, given pending a rehearing on the decision of a single Judge upon demurrer, is irregular, and will be set aside. McMaster v. King, 14 C. L. J. 70.

A notice of trial, given pending an appeal to a higher court, will be set aside for irregu-larity. Goldie v. Date's Patent Steel Co., 7 P. R. 1.

Reopening - Order Permitting Third Parties to Dejend.]—Where a third party no-tice had been served by the defendant before the close of the pleadings between the plaintiffs and defendant, but the action had been set down by the plaintiffs to be tried at Toronto without a jury and notice of trial given before the plaintiffs were aware that such third party notice had been served, and before notice of motion had been given by the defendant for an order giving directions as to the trial:—Held, that the order made upon such motion, which permitted the third parties to come in and defend, and directed that the issue between the defendant and the third parties should be tried at the same time as the action, reopened the pleadings, and they were not closed (the third parties having delivered a defence) until the expiration of the time for replying to that defence. The duty of the plaintiffs then was to draw up a new record of the pleadings, including in it the defence of the third parties, enter the case again for trial, and give notice of trial to the defendant and third parties, under rule 542. Confederation Life Association v. Labatt, 18 P.

Replication Due.]-On the 22nd August, 1881, a replication had not been filed, but the suit was in such condition that it could then have been filed :-Held, that under the O. J. Act, rule 494, notice of trial might be given without filing a replication. Sawyer v. Short, 9 P. R. 85.

Replication in Denial. |- The reply in this action contained two paragraphs, the first denying certain allegations in the fourth paragraph of the defence, and the second joining issue upon the rest of the defence. Notice of trial was served with the reply. A motion to set aside the notice of trial was dismissed, because the affidavit filed in support of it did occase for another than a support of it that not state that no joinder was filed when the notice of trial was given. Semble, the Joinder of issue referred to in rule 179, O. J. Act, is not a simple denial of a previous pleading. Weller v. Proctor, 10 P. R. 323.

Replication not in Denial. |- Plaintiff can only serve notice of trial with his replication where that replication is in denial of defendant's pleading. Where notice of trial was served with a replication confessing and avoiding the plea of defendants, it was set aside with costs. Skelsey v. Manning, 8 L. J. 166.

Reply and Demurrer.] - A reply delivered by the plaintiff joining issue upon the that the facts set forth in the defence were no answer to the claim:—Held, a joinder of issue "simply, without adding any further or other pleading thereto." within the meaning other pleading thereto," within the meaning of rules (1897) 262; and therefore that when it was delivered the pleadings were closed, and a notice of trial thereupon served was regular, Gibson v. Nelson, 19 P. R. 265.

Reply-Vacation.]-A pleading in reply. which was more than a simple rejoinder of issue, was served by the plaintiffs on the 30th June, 1896. No further or other pleading having been delivered, and no extension of naving been delivered, and no extension of time for further pleading having been granted, the plaintiffs, on the 4th September, 1896, between three and four in the afternoon, served a notice of trial for the 14th September, 1896;—Held, irregular, Piper v. Benjamin, 17 P. R. 267.

Statement of Claim-Issue upon.]-A defendant by simply taking issue upon the statement of claim closes the pleadings, and may then serve notice of trial. Hare v. Caw-thrope, 11 P. R. 353, followed. Malcolm v. Racc, 16 P. R. 330.

Statement of Defence-Order Staying Proceedings—Chambers Motion—Reference to Trial Judge—Order — Judgment—Appeal.]— On the 21st March, 1896, the defendant appeared, delivered a defence, and served an order for security for costs, which imposed a stay of proceedings. On the 2nd October, 1896, the plaintiff complied with the order by filing a bond, and on the 3rd October gave notice of trial:—Held, that the notice of trial was irregular, the pleadings not being closed when it was given. A motion made in cham-bers by the defendant to set aside the notice of trial was referred to the Judge at the trial, who dismissed it. The defendant thereupon withdrew, and the action was tried in his abence and judgment given for the plaintiff :-Held, that the Judge, when disposing of the motion, was sitting and acting as a Judge of assize, and that this and the trial of the cause might properly be deemed one proceeding; and one appeal, comprehending all, was sufficient. Campau v. Randall, 17 P. R. 325.

order by ber gave e of trial ig closed (b) Motion to Set aside Notice of Trial.

Application of One Defendant — Notice to the Other—Costs.]—Where there were two defendants and notice of trial was given by the plaintiff to both, and set aside upon the application of one without notice to or knowledge of the other, who attended with its wirresses at the time and place named in the notice:—Held, that the defendant who moved against the notice of trial was not bound to give the other defendant notice of the motion: that it was the duty of the plaintiff, if he desired to protect himself, to notify that defendant that the notice had been set aside; and, therefore, the plaintiff should pay the costs of the day. Knight v. Town of Ridgetorn, 34 P. R. Sl.

Forum—County Court Case—Assices.]—Where a county court case was ordered to be tried at the sittings of assige and nisi prius, a notice of trial given under the order, but not in accordance with the terms of the order, must be moved against in the county court. Clark v. Clifford, 14 C. L. J. 169, 7 P. R. 329.

Grounds for—Venue—Mistake in Copy.1—The fact of a different county being inserted as the venue in the copy of the declaration served, is no ground for setting aside notice of trial for the county inserted as the venue in the declaration filed. Brown v. Blackwell, 6 P. R. 15c.

Time for Moving—Before Trial.]—Where notice of trial is irregular defendant is not bound to wait for a verdict and then move against it; his more proper course is to move to set aside the notice before trial. Skelsey v. Manning, 8 L. J. 196.

See McDermott v. Elliott, 6 P. R. 107.

(c) Motion to Set aside Proceedings Founded on Irregular Notice,

Notice of Intention to Move.]—Notice of intention to move, on the ground of irrequirantly in proceedings prior to the execution of a writ of inquiry, is required in England to be given two days before the execution of the writ of inquiry. A similar notice should be given in this Province not later than the first day of the assiess at which the damages are to be assessed. Dougall v. Maclean, Lya. 318.

Where the defendant had appeared by attorney, and the plaintiff after declaration signed interlectuory judgment, and served notice of assessment on defendant himself, and assessed damages:—Held, assessment irregular, and that it was not necessary that any notice should be given to the plaintiff of defendant's intention to move for such irregularity. Bishop v. Lindsay, 6 O. S. 264.

Merits—Affidavit.]—Where a notice of trial is not shewn to have been served, the verdict may be set aside without an affidavit of merits, or any notice of intention to move. Consumers' Gas Co. v. Kissock, 5 U. C. R. 542.

Short Notice-Verdict-Costs.]-A plaintiff having proceeded to trial without giving notice of trial in the proper time, presuming upon his having allowed the defendant to plead and demur without an order, the verdict was set aside with costs. Lyman v. Snarr, 9 C. P. 64.

Special Circumstances — Verdict — Costs,]—Under special circumstances stated, verdict for the plaintiff set aside for irregularity in not giving due notice of trial, but without costs. Goula v. Carr, 5 U. C. R. 506.

Time for Moving. |—When notice had been served too late, but the cause was entered, and referred by the Judge at nisi prius no verdict being taken:—Held, that a motion to set aside the proceedings must be anade within the first four days of the next term. Allen v. Boice, 3 P. R. 200.

See Grand River Navigation Co. v. Wilkes, 8 U. C. R. 249, post 9.

(d) Signature of Attorney.

Death.—New Attorney — Notice.]—Where the attorney for plaintiff died after service of replication and before service of notice of trial, and a new attorney, signing himself plaintiff's attorney, gave notice of trial, without a notice of the appointment of a new attorney having been previously given, the notice of trial was set aside with costs. Sted v. Manniny 8 I. J. 197.

Partner of Attorney.]—Semble, that a notice of trial is not irregular because A., one of two partners, astronneys, signs it as the plaintiffs attorney, although B., the other partner, appeared as the attorney on the record, there having been no order to change the attorney. Gamble v. Rees, 7 U.C. R.

A notice of trial signed by one of two partners of a firm of attorneys, though not by the partner who was the attorney for the plaintiff on the record, is not a nullity, but merely an irregularity which can be taken advantage of, if it is calculated to mislead. Macaulay v. Phillips, 6 P. R. 73.

(e) Time and Place of Sittings—Error as to. (See ante 4.)

Description of Place — Waiver,]—Notite of trial in and "for the county of York," and not "united counties of York and Peel," is a mere irregularity, which may be waived. Commercial Bank of Canada v. Lee, 6 L. J. 21.

Wrong Date.]—Notice was given for the 21st September instead of October. The Judge, though thinking the notice irregular, declined to set it aside, preferring to let the parties proceed at their own risk. De Haquiere v. Cottle, 4 P. R. 167.

The insertion of the 2nd September instead of the 2nd October, as the day of trial, in a notice of trial:—Held, not a sufficient ground for setting the same aside, as it could not mislead defendant's attorney. Bank of Montreal v. Cameron, 7 P. R. 188.

R. 529;

The plaintiffs on the 31st October, 1890, served notice of trial in these words: "Take notice of trial of this action at Osgoode Hall, at the chancery sittings, for the 17th day of October, 1890." A sittings of the high court for trials, to be held by a Judge of the chancery division, at Osgoode Hall, had been fixed for the 17th November, 1890:—Held, that the notice was sufficient; for it gave such notice as imparted knowledge. McBride v. Carroll, 14 P. R. 70.

—Amendment.]—Notice of trial was given by mistake for the 11th January, instead of 10th January. Defendant did not appear to have been misled:—Held, that the plaintiff might amend under the Administration of Justice Act, 1873. Mechan v. Walsh, 6 P. R. 294.

Wrong Place—Immedment.]—An irregular notice of trial may be amended nunc protune, where it is shewn that the party served was not misled. Such amendment was made where the notice, not served till after the Belleville assizes, was for trial at Belleville, in and for the county of Prince Edward, on, &c., mentioning the day fixed for the assizes at Picton, in that county, where the venue was laid. Walker v. Terry, 7 P. R. 340.

See Gordon v. Cleghorn, 7 U. C. R. 171, post (f).

(f) Waiver.

Acceptance of Service — Attorney's Clerk—Repudiation.]—A managing clerk in an office has power to bind his principal by accepting a notice of trial as of an earlier date than it was actually delivered, unless the principal promptly repudiate the acceptance, and give notice thereof to the opposite party. Orr v, Stabback, T. T. 3. & 4 Vic.

Appearance at Trial — Confession of Leave.]—A Judge's order was obtained to amend the proceedings after the consent rule and plea had been field by adding three new demisses), and no proceedings had been taken under the order until the commission day of the assizes—some months after the granting of the order—when the nisi prius record was passed with additional demises. The record was entered, and after the jury had been sworn, and the plaintiffs had given evidence, defendants objected to the amendment, and refused to confess lease, entry and ouster, except to the original demises, and a verdict was entered for the plaintiffs on the original demises and a verdict was entered for the plaintiffs on the original demises only:—Held, that after defendants appearing and confessing the lease, &c., it was too late to object to the regularity of the notice of trial. Doe d, Duff v, Dougall, 2 C. P. 163).

Application to Stay Proceedings.]—
Held, that a defendant complaining of an insufficient service of notice of trial in a cause pending in the superior court, but sent to a county court for trial under 23 Vict. c. 42, s. 4, may, without waiving the irregularity, apply within four days after the trial to the county Judge for a stay of proceedings till the fifth day of the following term of the superior courts of law. (2) That he may, with in the like period, make a similar application to a Judge of one of the superior courts of law sitting in chambers. Quare, if he delay for seven days after the verdict without making an application of any kind, has he not thereby waived the irregularity? Fisher v. Green, 2 C. L. J. 14.

Delay in Moving.] — Plaintiff in ejectment, though an infant, sued in person. Defendant became aware of the infancy at the first trial, but took no objection until after the second trial, when a verdict was given against him for non-appearance. He then moved to set aside the proceeding on this ground, and for want of proper notice of trial. The notice, it appeared, had been indorsed on the issue book, but defendant's attorney swore he did not perceive it until too late to prepare for trial:—Held, that defendant was precluded by his delay, and the court refused to interfere. Ham v. Egan, 3 P. R. 16.

An application by an attorney resident in the country to set aside a notice of trial served on his Toronto agent as irregular, and made within eight days after such service:—Held, not too late. Anderson v. Culver, 10 L. J. 159, 3 P. R. 306.

The plaintiff on the 23rd May, when the pleadings were not closed, gave notice of trial for a sittings beginning on 10th June. The pleadings were closed on the 27th May, and notice of trial might then and up to the 31st May have been regularly given in good time for the 10th June. The defendant waited until the 5th June and then moved to set aside the notice of trial given on the 23rd May, as irregular:—Held, that the defendant had waived the irregularity by his laches. Whitney v. Stark, 13 P. R. 120.

Neglect to Move.]—Where there were several plaintiffs and defendants, and one of the plaintiffs and one of the defendants died, and their deaths were suggested on the record, but notice was given in the names of all the parties, as if they had been living, and defendants' attorney did not return the notice, nor express any intention of moving to set aside the proceedings for irregularity, the court refused to set aside the verdict. Bell v. Graham, 2 U. C. R. 37.

A notice naming Friday the 19th May, instead of Friday the 18th, is irregular; but, if defendant intend to rely upon it as such, he must give notice to that effect to the plaintiff before the trial, otherwise the irregularity will be cured. Gordon v. Clephorn, 7 U. C. R. 171.

Notice to Preceed to Trial.]—A notice to proceed to trial, given by defendant under the statute, waives any objections to a notice of trial regularly given thereafter and pursuant thereto. Becket v. Durand, 6 L. J. 15.

Offer to Arbitrate.]—An offer by the defendant to refer the cause to arbitration, is not a waiver of an irregularity in the service of notice of trial. Grand River Navigation Co. v. Wilkes, S. U. C. R. 249.

See Hermann v. Mandarin Gold Mining Co. of Ontario, 18 P. R. 34, ante (a); Vrooman v. Shuert, 2 P. R. 122, post 7 (a). b 3 P L tl si lining Vroo7. Length of Notice.

(a) Generally.

Agreement between Solicitors — Late Service.]—Plaintiff's and defendant's attorneys had an agreement between themselves by which papers in the suit should be sent by mail. The notice of trial was posted the day before the last for giving notice, but reached defendant's attorney one day too late. It was shewn that the practice of both attorneys had been to admit service as of the day of receipt:—Held, that the notice of trial must be set aside. Robson v. Arbuthnot, 3 P. R. 313, distinguished. McDonough v. Alison, 9 P. R. 4.

Computation of Time—First and Last Days.]—A declaration having been served on the 27th April, interlocutory jedgment was signed on the 5th May, and notice of assessment given on the same day for the 12th. On the 12th, after the record had been entered, defendant gave notice of his intention to move against the verdict, if taken, for want of sufficient notice of assessment; but the plaintiff went on and assessed his damages:—Held, that under ss. 12 and 146 of the C. L. P. Act, the interlocutory judgment was signed too soon, and notice of assessment given too late; and that defendant had not precluded himself by laches from moving against these proceedings. Vrooman v. Shuert, 2 P. R. 122.

In computing the eight days for notice of trial or assessment, under s, 201, C. S. U. C. c. 22, the commission day of the assizes is to be included, and a notice on Monday for Monday is therefore good. Cuthbert v. Street, 6 L. J. 20, overruled. Morell v. Wilmott, 20 C. P. 378.

It had been previously held otherwise under the C. L. P. Act, 1856, s. 146. Vrooman v. Shucet, 2 P. R. 122; Buffalo and Lake Huron R. W. Co. v. Brooksbanks, ib. 125; Calleghan v. Baines, ib. 144; Clark v. Waddell, ib. 145; Phillips v. Merritt, ib. 233; Cameron v. Camcron, ib. 239.

Days.]—Held, that the "two clear additional days to the time now allowed by law" for service on the agent of a country attorney, means the addition of two days between the day of service and the day of the happening of the event to which the notice relates. A service of notice of trial on the Toronto agent of a country attorney on Saturday for Monday week would be sufficient. Nordheimer v. Shaw, 6 P. R. 14.

Lunacy Trial.]—Semble, an alleged lunation is should receive the same notice of a trial before the court as of an inquisition under the former practice. Re McNulty, 13 Gr. 463.

Notice before Writ of Trial.]—Notice of trial of a Queen's bench cause in a county court cannot be given by anticipation before the writ of trial has been obtained, and such notice is a nullity. Riach v. Hall. Patterson v. Hall, 11 U. C. R. 356; Young v. Laird, 2 P. R. 16.

Question between Co-defendants — Order for Trial.]—Rule 328 is applicable where a defendant claims indemnity or relief over against a co-defendant. And where such a claim was made against a co-defendant who had not appeared or defended the plaintiff's claim:—Held, that an order was properly made for the train of the question between the co-defendants at the same time and place as the plaintiff's claim, notwithstanding that the time for pleading to the claim for relief over had not expired, and that if was at the date of the order too late to give the usual ten days' notice of trial. Walker v. Dickson, 14 P. R. 343.

Replevin.]—In an action of replevin tendays' notice of trial must be given, instead of eight days, as under the old practice. Wallace v. Cowan, 9 P. R. 144.

Rules Governing Time — Interpretation.]—The words "according to the present practice of the court of chancery," in rule 208, O. J. Act, are only intended to determine that the entry of the suit for trial is to be made with the proper officer of the chancery division, leaving the time of entry to be determined by the preceding rules 259 and 264, O. J. Act. Ten days notice of trial is therefore sufficient in all cases coming within its terms. Barker v. Furze, 9 P. R. S3.

See Davies v. Hubbard, 10 P. R. 148.

(b) Short Notice.

Agreement to Accept.]—Where a defendant obtains time to plead on "the usual terms." he is bound to take short notice of trial. Senior v. McEucn, 2 U. C. R. 95.

Notice of trial having been served on defendants too late, and there being contradictory statements as to the agreement to take short notice, the court set aside a verdict, and granted a new trial. Armstrong v. Beacon Life Insurance Co., 4 C. P. 547. See, also, Smith v. Ask, 5 U. C. R. 497.

The plaintiffs obtained a judgment on a specially indorsed writ, which was set aside by Judge's order. Defendant's attorney asked the plaintiff's attorney for a day or two to plead under the order—adding, "I will take any notice of trial." The assizes began on the 12th October. The plaintiffs served their declaration too late to compel pleas before the 13th, when they were served, but they entered their record and waited until the 7th November, near the end of the assizes, when they gave notice of trial for the 12th:—Held, that the letter did not oblige defendants to accept such a notice, and the verdict was set aside. Provident Permanent Building and Investment Society v. McPherson, 3 P. R. 96.

— Subsequent Notice of Assessment.]

—A person obtaining time to plead on condition of taking short notice of trial, is not compelled to take short notice of assessment. Wright v. McPherson, 3 U. C. R. 145.

But where an attorney had obtained extensions of the time to plead, agreeing to take short notice of trial, or any notice, or to go down to trial without notice, and short notice of assessment was served, the court would not set aside the verdict. Williams v. Lee, Williams v. Vansittart, 2 C. P. 157.

Computation of Time—First and Last Days.]—In computing the time for short notice of trial the first day was exclusive, and the last inclusive. Love v. Armour, T. T. 3 & 4 Vice

But it has been held since that the first and last days are inclusive. Williams v. Lee, Williams v. Vansittart, 2 C. P. 157.

Sunday.]—Sundays and holidays are excluded in computing the five days' notice necessary in short notice of trial. Short notice of trial served on Wednesday for Monday:—Held, had, O'Donnell v, O'Donnell, 10 P. R. 264.

Delay by Demurrer.]—Where defendants filed a sham demurrer, which was argued before a Judge at chambers, as a dilatory plea:—Held, that defendants were still entitled to short notice of trial, although there was not sufficient time to give it before the next assizes, owing to the delay occasioned by the demurrer. Truscott v. Goldie, 5 O. S. 138.

Necessity for—State of Cause—Concenience.]—The words "short notice of trial if necessary" have reference to the state of the cause, and not to the convenience of the parties, so as to authorize any unnecessary delay, even though that convenience may be as to their ability to procure evidence and prepare for trial. McMurray v. Grand Trunk K. W. Co. 5 P. R. 272.

Power to Order—Terms of Indulgence.]
—Held, that a county Judge has only power under the C. L. P. Act. ss. 109, 120, 34 Vict. c.
12, s. 4, to impose terms such as short notice of trial when the party applies for an indulgence, and has not power to make any substantile or unconditional order as to terms.
Tecumseth Salt Co. v. Platt, 6 P. R. 251.

A defendant is entitled to the full ten days' notice of trial prescribed by con. rule (1888) 661, unless he has consented to take short notice of trial, or unless short notice can be directed as a term for granting an indulgence sought by a defendant; and there is no power to compel a defendant to take short notice. Hamilton Provident and Loan Society v. Mc-Kim. 13 P. R. 125.

The ten days prescribed by con, rule (1888) 661 for giving notice of trial cannot be short-ened except by consent or when short notice of trial is imposed as a term in granting an indulgence. Whitney v. Stark, 13 P. R. 129.

S. Necessity for Notice of Trial.

Cause Referred for Trial.]—An order referring a cause in the Queen's bench for trial to the next county court sittings, does not dispense with the necessity of notice of trial for that sittings. Carruthers v. Rykert, 7 L. J. 184.

Demurrer after Entry for Trial.]— Defendants were let in to plead on terms of pleading at once, and taking one day's notice of trial. Pleas were accordingly filed and served; and replications thereto, each concluding to the country, were filed and served, and similiters added by plaintiff, and two days' notice of trial given. The record was entered on the assize day, low on the docket, having been passed the day before; and on the following day defendants filed and served a demurrer to plaintiff's replication to one of defendants' pleas, which was entered on the record before the trial. Defendants moved to set aside the verdict for plaintiff, on the ground that they were entitled to notice of assessment:—Held, that they were not. Spencer v. Ontaric Marine and Fire Ins. Co., 4 C. P. 454.

Interpleader Issue.]—Notice of trial is essential in interpleader and feigned issues, as in ordinary cases. Wilson v. Dewar, 4 P. R.

Pleading & Novo — New Notice.] — Where, after issue joined and notice of trial given, defendant has leave to plead de novo, the plaintiff cannot proceed to trial without a new notice. McMillan v. Fergusson, M. T. 2 Vict.

Remanet.]—A notice of trial is necessary however the cause may go down for trial, whether as a remanet, or put off from one assize to another by Judge's order, or taken down to trial by rule of court or Judge's order. Macaulay v. Phillips, 6 P. R. 77.

When a cause is postponed by the order of the Judge at the assizes, upon the defendant's application, it is a remanet, and no notice of trial for the next assizes is necessary, under the rules of 1875 (37 U. C. R. 528) and the O. J. Act. Donovan v. Boultbec, 10 P. R. 52.

9. Service.

Absence of Attorney — Leaving at Office.]—Held, that the service of a notice of trial by putting the paper under the door of the attorney's office, the attorney swearing that he was absent from home at the time, and did not return till the day of the assizes, when he first heard of such service, was irregular; and that the verdict must be set aside, but without costs, as the attorney should not have absented himself on the eve of the assize. An application to set aside the verdict—not the notice of trial or the service—is correct. Grand River Navigation Co. v. Wilkes, S. U. C. R. 249.

Service of notice of trial effected by leaving a copy of the same in the office of the defendant's solicitor before six o'clock, but after the solicitor and his clerks had left for the day, takes effect only from the time when the notice came to the knowledge of the solicitor. The practice laid down in Consumers' Gas Co. v. Kissock, 5 U. C. R. 542, and McCallum v. Provincial Ins. Co., 6 P. R. 101, held not to have been altered by the O. J. Act as to service upon a defendant's solicitor. Davice v. Hubbard, 10 P. R. 148.

Address—Absence of,]—A notice not addressed to the defendants' attorneys, but served upon their town agent, with information for whom it was intended:—Held, sufficient. Senior v. McEucen, 2 U. C. R. 95.

10. Other Cases.

Death of Party-Revivor.]-The original defendant dying pendente lite, the plaintiffs issued an order of revivor on the 22nd April, and served it on the defendants by order on the same day, and along with it a notice of trial for 5th May, at Cornwall. The defendants moved to set aside the notice of trial as irregular:—Held, that the order of revivor was in force from its service, and as it would was in locae from its service, and as it would be confirmed by the lapse of twelve days upon the 4th May, the notice of trial for the 5th May was regular. New York Piano Co. v. Stevenson, 10 P. R. 270, Interlocutory Judgment - Necessity for.]-In an action commenced by a writ not specially indorsed, where the defendant does not plead to the declaration, the plaintiff must sign interlocutory judgment against the defendant before he is in a position to serve notice of trial and assessment of damages. Fenwick v. Donohue, 8 P. R. 116.

New Trial-Payment of Costs-Condition Precedent.]-Where a new trial is granted to a plaintiff on payment of costs, the payment is a condition precedent to the right to give notice of trial. In this case, where the costs were not paid, the court set aside the verdict, but under the circumstances without costs. Stock v. Shewan, 18 C. P. 185.

Service on Solicitor-Delay in Advising Client.]-In an action to recover a balance alleged to be due for erecting a mill, it appeared that on the 15th September defend-ant's attorney, who resided at Sydenham, received notice of trial for the 27th of the same month, and on the 17th wrote to inform the defendant, who resided fifty miles distant, the mail going only once a week, and who did not receive the letter till after the trial. Contradictory affidavits were made on both sides, and it appeared to the court on the defendant's affidavits, that it was not probable the verdict would be materially reduced:—Held, that, as a new trial could only be granted on payment of costs, the defendant would not be benefited thereby, and rule refused. Harn-den v. Anchor, 6 C. P. 517.

Summons to Dismiss-Stay of Proceedings.]-A summons to dismiss an action for breach of an order to examine, generally implies a stay of proceedings; but where the Judge who granted the summons struck out the part relating to a stay, and the summons was afterwards enlarged without any mention of a stay, a notice of trial served while the summons was pending:—Held, to be regular. Merchants Bank v. Pierson, 8 P. R. 129.

VIII. POSTPONEMENT OF TRIAL OR HEARING.

Application-Forum.]-An interpleader issue arising out of an action in the high court of justice was directed to be tried in a county court pursuant to 44 Vict. c. 7, s. (O.):—Held, that a motion to postpone the trial of the issue should have been made in the county court. London and Canadian Loan and Agency Co. v. Morphy, 11 P. R. 86.

- Time for-Forum.] - Applications to postpone trials in outer counties should not Vol. III. p-220-71 be entertained in chambers at Toronto, when the assizes are just coming on, McKenzie v. Stewart, 10 U. C. R. 634.

TRIAL.

Costs.]-On putting off the trial of an information for penalties, at defendant's information for penalties, at defendant's instance, the court will make the payment of costs a condition, in like manner as in civil cases. Rex v. Ives, Dra. 440.

A short time before the assizes at Kingston, defendant obtained from a Judge in chambers at Toronto a summons to put off the trial. The plaintiff's agent (the plaintiff being an attorney) was obliged to obtain delay, to communicate with his principal, who in the meantime incurred costs in preparing for trial. The order was afterwards granted on terms of paying only the costs of the application, and the defendant acted upon it getting the trial postponed. Defendant had given no notice to the plaintiff of his inten-tion to move. The court refused to alter the terms of the order, so as to compel the de-fendant to pay the plaintiff's costs of preparing for trial while in ignorance of it, though they were of opinion that it would have been more fair to have exacted the payment of such costs on granting the order. Mc-Kenzie v. Stewart, 10 U. C. R. 634.

Where a cause is withdrawn on account of the absence of a necessary witness for the plaintiff, and he shews that he has made diligent efforts to secure the attendance of such witness, who is residing within the jurisdiction, but fails to secure it, the costs of putting off the examination will, as a general rule, be costs in the cause. In all other cases the costs will be disposed of according to circumstances and in the discretion of the Judge. Pattison v. McNab. 12 Gr. 483.

Although, as a general rule, where a party has made diligent efforts to obtain the attendance of a witness within the jurisdiction, and has been unable to do so, the costs of postponing the hearing will be costs in the cause, still where the plaintiff ascertained on Sunday that a witness, who was his mother, was confined to her bed and unable to attend at the sittings which began on the Tuesday following, but failed to give notice of this fact to the defendant, a motion made by the plaintiff to postpone the hearing was granted only on his paying the costs. McMillan v. McDonald, 22 Gr. 362,

The costs of moving to postpone a trial on account of the absence of a material witness, will be costs in the cause, where the party moving has made diligent efforts, &c., to secure the attendance. Brown v. Porter, Know v. Porter, 11 P. R. 250.

Costs of the Day.]—See Hopkins v. Smith, 9 P. R. 285; Hogg v. Crabbe, 12 P. R. 14; Outwater v. Mullett, 13 P. R. 509.

Grounds for.]-Where the ground of an application to put off a trial is the absence of a witness, it is not sufficient to shew that the a witness, it is not sufficient to snew that the witness is material, and may and probably will give important evidence, or to swear that his evidence will be material and necessary, without shewing that it will assist the case of the person making the application. Kerr v. Grand Trunk R. W. Co., 4 P. R. 303.

The time for plaintiff to bring the issue joined on to trial will be extended under s. 151, C. L. P. Act, 1850, upon an affidavit that plaintiff cannot procure the attendance of a witness, without whose testimony he cannot safely proceed to trial. O'Kecfe v. O'Brien, 2 L. J. 231.

It is no answer to an application to try a cause in a county court on the ground that no difficult questions of law will arise, to put in affidavits which are properly grounds for postponing the trial. Mitchell v. Roberts, 6 P. R. 106.

Held, that the inability properly to calculate the damage to the plaintiff from a personal injury, owing to a sufficient time not having elapsed from the receipt of the injury, is a sufficient ground for postponing the trial. Speers v. Great Western R. W. Co., G P. R. 170.

The trial of an election petition should not be postponed without the appellant shewing very cogent and almost unanswerable grounds. In this case the reason given was that the lieutenant-governor of Ontario was a necessary and material witness, and that he could not properly leave Toronto during the sittings of the house of assembly:—Held, not a sufficient reason. McDonald v. McNabb, 12 C. L. J. 117.

Held, that when the original holder of a policy of insurance had been indicted for arson it would not be in the interests of justice to postpone a suit by the assignee of the policy until after the criminal trial. Whitelaw v, National Insurance Co., Whitelaw v, Phamia Insurance Co., 13 C. L. J. 199.

The plaintiff brought an action against two townships for not repairing a road, and while it was pending before the court of appeal, he issued a writ against the defendants for the same cause, to prevent the Statute of Limitations running against him in case it should be held that the townships were not liable. A notice to proceed to trial having been served on the plaintiff, the time for trial was enlarged until after the decision of the court of appeal. McHardy v. County of Perth, 7 P. R. 101.

Necessity for Re-entry—Fees.]—The object of con. rule (1888) 670 is to enable a defendant to insist upon the trial of a case entered by the plaintiff being proceeded with, unless the court should give the plaintiff leave to withdraw it; and where, before a case entered for the assizes on the non-jury list was reached, the solicitors, without the assent of the court, agreed that the trial should be put off until the following assizes, and the clerk of the assize struck the case off the list:—Held, that what had taken place was rot a withdrawal within the meaning of the rule, and that the action remained for trial, and under con, rule (1883) 671 might be set down for trial on notice, for any subsequent court, without payment of any further fee. Burdway v. Manafacturers' Insurance Co., 13 P. R. 53. See con, rules (1897) 543, 544.

Where the trial of a cause was postponed the next assizes, defendants to pay the costs:—Held, that no second fee was payable to the deputy clerk of the Crown upon entry of the action for trial at the latter assizes, and that when so paid by plaintiff, such fee was not taxable against defendants, Morton v. Grand Trunk R. W. Co., 10 P. R. 62.

W. (plaintiff) entered into negotiations with S. (defendant) to purchase a house which S. was then erecting. W. alleged that the agreement was, that he should take the land (two and a-half lots) at $400 a lot of fifty feet frontage, and the materials furnished and work done at its value. In August, 1874, a deed and mortgage were executed, the consideration being stated in both at $5.525. The mortgage was afterwards as-signed to the M. and N. W. L. Company. W. allered in his bill, that S., in violation of good faith, and taking advantage of W.'s ig-norance of such matters, and the confidence he placed in S., inserted in the mortgage a larger sum than the balance due as a fair and reasonable market value of the lands, and of what he had done to the wholes, and of what he had done to the dwelling house and other premises, and he prayed an account. S. repudiated the allegation of fraud, and alleged that W. had every opportunity to satisfy himself, and did satisfy himself, as to the value of what he was getting; that he had told W, that he valued the land at $2,000, and that in no way had he sought to take advantage of W. S. was unable to be present at the hearing, and applied for a postpon ment, on the grounds set forth in an affi-davit, that he was a material witness on his own behalf, and that it was not safe for him, in his state of health, to travel from Ottawa to Winnipeg. The trial Judge refused the postponement, on the ground that the court was only asked now to decree that the account should be opened and properly taken, and the amount ascertained, which would be done by the master if the court should so decide, and that S. would then have an oppor-tunity of being present, and that he was not necessarily wanted at the hearing: and, as the result of the evidence, made a decree in accordance with the contentions of and directed an account to be taken :-Held, that, under the circumstances, the case ought not to have been proceeded with in the absence of S., and without allowing him the opportunity of giving his evidence. Schultz v. Wood, 6 S. C. R. 585.

—— Terms—Costs.]—Where the defendants, expecting that certain witnesses, whose evidence was material to the defence, would be called by the Crown, did not subpoma such witnesses, and they were not in court, an adjournment of the hearing was allowed after the Crown had rested, so that such witnesses might be subpomed by the defendants, upon terms that the Crown have costs of the day, and that the same be paid before the case be proceeded with on adjournment. The Queen v. Black, 6 Ex. C. R. 236.

Order for—Abandonment—Costs.]—The plantiff gave notice of trial for 2nd October. On 23rd September the defendant obtained an order to postpone the trial on payment of costs:—Held, a conditional order, not staying the plaintiff's proceedings, and one which the defendant was at liberty to abandon without being liable to pay other than the costs of the application. Allen v. Mathers, 9 P. R. 477.

Terms of Postponement.]—In ordering the postponement of a trial the master in chambers has a discretion under con, rule 681 to impose terms. And where, upon the de-fendants' application to postpone the trial, the fendants application to posterior the master so ordered upon their giving security for part of the amount sued for:—Held, that the term was properly imposed. Bank of Hamilton v. Stark, 13 P. R. 213.

IX. RECORD.

[See C. L. P. Act. R. S. O. 1877 c, 50, ss. 247-251; con. rules (1897) 538 (d), 539, 540.]

1. Altering.

Effect of-Verdict.]-Where the clerk of assize refused to receive the record, because it had been altered after it had been passed at the Crown office, by the plaintiff adding a similter to the defendant's plea and entering in the margin the venire facias, the court made a rule absolute for judgment as in case of a nonsuit. Doe d. Wilcox v. Jacobs. 5 U.

Where a nisi prius record some days after it had been entered was withdrawn from the clerk of assize by the plaintiff's attorney, and altered without leave, by adding the venire, jurata, &c., the court set aside the verdict. Russel v. Graham, 7 U. C. R. 159.

The court will not set aside a verdict because an evident clerical defect has been supplied on the record that it has been entered. Culbert v. Conger, 7 U. C. R. 389.

In the nisi prius record the declaration appeared to have been against J. H. and A. H., his wife, but the words "his wife" were his wife, but the words his whe were struck out with a pen, of which no explanation was given:—Held, no objection after verdict. Hunter v. Hunter, 25 U. C. R. 145.

2. Entering and Passing.

[By the C. L. P. Act, R. S. O. 1877 c. 50, s. 248, the record shall be entered at any time during the five days next before the commission day of the assizes, and on said commission day before noon; but the Judge may permit a record in any suit to be entered after the time above limited, if, upon facts disclosed on affi-davit or on the consent of both parties, he sees fit to do so. See con. rule (1897) 538.]

After the Commission Day—Old Practice.]—See Hall v. Griswold, 5 O. S. 136; Henderson v. Hunt, 6 U. C. R. 503.

Costs of Entry-Settlement.]-Where in a country cause a record was entered for trial before the commission day of the assizes, and afterwards settled before the commission day, the master, upon consulting the Chief Justice of the common pleas, refused to allow the costs of entering the record or counsel fee. Hingston v. Whelan, S L. J. 72.

TRIAL

Failure to Enter - Change of Venue -Terms.]-Where the record did not reach the assize town in time to be entered, the plaintiff, on shewing that due diligence had been used, and that if he did not get down to trial before the autumn assizes he would be in danger of losing his debt, was allowed to change the venue, so as to go to trial at the spring assizes, on payment of costs of the day, costs of the application, and any extra expense occasioned to defendant by the change. Lucas v. Taylor, 4 P. R. 99.

Effect of-Agreement.]-Where the plaintiff, having given notice of trial, did not enter his record with the cierk of assize in time, but defendant, notwithstanding, agreed to go to trial if he were ready, and after having detained the plaintiff's witnesses more than a week, at last determined not to go to trial, he was refused the costs of the day. Doe d. Crawford v. Coppledike, 4 O. S. 6.

False Record.] - Defendant having filed his pleas, the plaintiff, on going to pass his record and not finding them in the office, caused them to be entered on record from memory, and passed the record without the pleas being in the office, and tried the cause, no defence having been made. The court set aside the proceedings for irregularity. McKinnon v. Johnson, 3 O. S. 298.

4. Seal.

There was no necessity for the seal of the court to a record in an outer district. Scott v. McGregor, Tay, 88.

But it was otherwise in the home district. McLean v. Neeson, T. T. 5 & 6 Vict.

By the C. L. P. Act, R. S. O. 1877 c, 50, s, 247, in the superior courts the record of nisi prius need not be sealed. See con. rule (1897) 539.

5. Venire.

| By the C. L. P. Act, R. S. O. 1877 c. 50, s. 251, in the record in any cause or action, no other venire is necessary than "Therefore," &c.1

See as to the former practice, Beatty v. Mc-Masters, T. T. 2 & 3 Vict., R. & H. Dig. 378; Hamilton v. McFarland, M. T. 3 Vict. R. & H. Dig. 378; Culbert v. Conger, 7 U. C. R. 389; Haukins v. Patterson, 15 U. C. R. 158; Walkem v. Donovan, 5 P. R. 118.

6. Other Cases.

Conclusiveness.]—The court cannot look behind the record, unless where the application is to set aside the record itself. An objection, therefore, to the record as being improperly made up without proceedings to warrant it, cannot be entertained upon an application to set aside the assessment of damages. Gamble v. Recs, 7 U. C. R. 406.

Custody of Record—Delivery up — Motion in Term.1— A county court case had been tried at the assizes under the A. J. Act, 1874, s. 54. The plaintiff got a werdlet, and the plaintiff's attorney obtained the record. Defendants' attorney applied for an order to deliver it up to the court of Queen's bench, to enable him to move against the verdict. The Judge in chambers held that he had no jurisdiction to make such order. The county court Judge made an order for the delivery of it to the clerk of that court, and stayed proceedings until next term. Burley v. Milne, 7 P. R. 100.

Destruction by Fire.]—A new nisi prius record was allowed to be made up, the original having been destroyed by fire. White v. Hutchinson, Tay. 305.

Indorsement of Points Reserved— Judgment,]—When points are reserved at a trial and indorsed on the record, but the Judge makes no entry thereof on his notes, the record must govern, and judgment cannot be entered until the points are disposed of. Taylor v, Taylor, 5.0 N. 489.

Venue.]—It is not irregular to state the venue in the nisi prius record without having stated it in any previous proceeding. Regina v. Shipman, 6 L. J. 19.

X. Referring Causes from one Court to Another,

1. County Court to Superior Court.

[Under the Law Reform Act, 1868, 32 Vict. c, 6, s, 17, and 37 Vict. c, 7, s, 56; R, S, O, 1877 c, 49, s, 32 et seq.; R, S, O, 1897 c, 51, s, 93 et seq.]

Motion to Arrest Judgment—Forum.]
—Held, under the Law Reform Act, 1868, s.

17, s.-ss. 4 and 5, as amended by 33 Vict. c. 7 (O.), this being a county court case tried at the assizes, that the motion to arrest judgment was properly made in the superior court. Edmunds v, Hoey, 35 U. C. R. 495.

Notice of Trial — Motion against — Forum.]—Where a county court case has been directed to be tried at the assizes, an application to set aside the notice of trial must be made to the county court. Clark v. Clifford, 7 P. R. 329.

Partition — Issue.] — Issues in partition suits are within s. 17, s.-s 2. Symonds v. Symonds, 20 C. P. 271.

Separate Trial of Issues of Fact.]—In county court cases, where there are issues in law and in fact upon the same record, this Act does not authorize the issues in fact to be tried at the assizes; and where, after a trial under such circumstances, a case came before the court, on motion against the verdict, the court refused to pronounce judgment on the merits of the case, as coram non judice, out merely set aside the verdict without costs. Pattypiece v, Mayeille, 21 C. P. 316.

Title to Land—Jurisdiction.]—Where a county court cause is entered for trial at the assizes under this Act, the jurisdiction is the same only as if it had been tried in the county court. Where in such a case, therefore, the title to land came in question, and a verdict was entered for defendant: — Held, that the proceedings were coram non judice, and the verdict was set aside. Wetherall v. Garlow, 30 U. C. R. 1.

2. Superior Court to County Court.

(a) By Writ of Trial or Inquiry.

[By 8 Vict. c. 13, ss, 51.56, writs of trial and inquiry were authorized, under which actions depending in the superior court for any debt or demand not exceeding £25, or actions in which the amount was ascertained by the signature of defendants, or in which only damages were to be assessed, might be sent down for trial or assessment in the county court. These enactments were repealed by 20 Vict. c. 58, s. 19. See also, C. S. U. C. c. 22, s. 326, and the statutes there referred to, by which county court suits might be brought in the superior courts, marking the papers "inferior jurisdiction." This section was repealed by 23 Vict. c. 42, s. 4, and a Judge's order required to authorize such trial. See R. S. O. 1897 c. 51, s. 92 (3), and rules 562, 565.]

Where the declaration claimed £75 for work and labour, but the bill of particulars only £19, the cause was brought within the limits of the Act and might be referred. Martin v. Grynne, 5 U. C. R. 245.

A rule of court or Judge's order is not required for a writ of inquiry to a district court. A writ of inquiry to a district court after the cause had been made a remanet at nisi prius:

TRIAL.

An action on a guarantee is not within the meaning of 8 Vict. c. 13, s. 51. The statute only applies when the production of the document and proof of signature would be per se prima facie evidence of indebtedness. Mont-jord v. McNaught, 3 L. J. 15.

In an action on a guarantee a writ of trial may be obtained, if the defendant have no other objection than the mere fact of the action being on a guarantee. Macpherson v. Gruham, 3 L. J. 184.

Preliminary or formal objections to the allidavits, where the application has been enlarzed until the last day for obtaining such writ, should not in general be allowed to prevail after such enlargement. Taylor v. Mc-Neil, 3 L. J., 131.

On applications for writs of trial, the affidavit must either shew what the pleas in the cause are, or the applicant must produce a copy of the pleadings. Stock v. Crawford, 3 L. J. 130.

On applications for writs of trial, when the parties are pressed for time, the Judge will in general make the summons absolute on return, instead of enlarging it, reserving leave to defendant to move to rescind it. Prugen v. Kerby, 3 L. J. 134.

The writ was not granted where difficult questions were likely to arise on the trial, and where the nature of the pleas pleaded admitted of such being the case. Nor when there was a dispute as to the nature or legal effect of the instrument sued on. Show v. Davis, 3 L. J. 131: Lamley v. Rogers, ib. 134.

But defendants merely pleading a plea which might involve difficult questions would be no objection, unless he shewed that it was seriously intended to rely on such pleas. Taylor v. McNeil, 3 L. J. 131.

For other decisions as to granting or refusing writs of trial, see Bank of Montreal v. Burritt, 3 U. C. R. 375; Hunter v. Vernon, 7 U. C. R. 552; Moffatt v. McNab, 1 C. L. Ch. 98; King's College v. Gamble, ib, 54; Beatty v. tharrity, 3 L. J. 32; Wengol v. Huff, ib, 133; Muirhead v. McCracken, ib, 131; Riach v. Hull, 11 U. C. R. 356; Morland v. Webster, 2 C. L. Ch. 52.

(b) Judge's Order under 23 Vict. c. 42, s. 4; R. S. O. 1877 c. 49, s. 31; R. S. O. 1897 c. 51, s. 92.

Held, that, to warrant a Judge of the superior courts in referring a cause for trial to a Judge of the county court, the writ must not only be issued from but venue laid in the county to which the reference for trial is required. Where a defence is one not merely for time, it may be doubtful, particularly if the form of the defence is one of the defendant of the defendant. It is the wish of the defendant. Boulton V, Ruttan, 7 L. J. 151.

Hold, that the Judge of a county court has power to allow pleas to be added in cases sent down from the superior courts to be tried by him, as well as in actions commenced in his own court. King v. Glassford, 11 C. P. 490.

Where a record had been entered at an assize and made a remanet: — Held, that so long as the order for a remanet remained in force, the cause could not be sent to the county court for trial. Adams v. Grier, 3 P. R. 229.

(c) Under 32 Vict. c. 6, s. 17 (O.), the Law Reform Act, 1868; R. S. O. 1877 c. 49, s. 31 et seq.; R. S. O. 1897 c. 51, s. 92.

The entry required by s. 17, and schedule A., to "be made in the issue and subsequent proceedings" when it is desired to try a superior court case at a county court, was sufficient if made on the issue book in place of the venire facias. Walkem v. Donovan, 5 P. R. 118.

Under s. 18 Judges of the county courts can are cases brought down from superior courts without the intervention of a jury. Cushman v. Reid, 5 P. R. 121.

Under s. 17 no case can be taken down to a county court for trial unless the amount is ascertained by the signature of defendant—or "liquidated" in the same way. McPherson, V. McPherson, O. P. R. 240.

A note made in the United States and payable in American currency, is not an amount liquidated or ascertained by the signature of the defendant, so as to entitle the party suing upon it to avail himself of 32 Vict. c. 6, s. 17 (O.) Cushman v. Reid, 20 C. P. 147, 5 P. R. 121.

It is no answer to an application to try a cause in a county court, on the ground that no difficult questions of law will arise, to put in affidavits which are properly grounds for postponing the trial. Mitchell v. Roberts, 6 P. R. 106.

Held, in a case proper to be brought down to the county court by the Law Reform Act of 1808, and when the entry under Form A. is omitted from the issue book, but notice of trial is for the county court, that the omission is not properly a ground for setting aside the issue book and notice of trial, but that the plaintiff will be allowed to amend on payment of costs. McDermott v. Elliott, 6 P. R. 107.

XI. SEPARATE QUESTIONS IN SAME ACTION.

Account—Preliminary Trial of Right to.)—Where the plaintiff claimed a declaration of the right of himself and all other persons insured in the temperance section of the defendant company to the profits earned by that section, payment thereof, and an account and apportionment thereof:—Held, that, upon the nere statement of the plaintiff in pleading that he was the holder of a policy entitling him to share in certain profits of the company, and without any proof of the statement, the court, in its discretion, should not require the company to produce and lay open to him all their books of account and the papers relating to them; but it was a proper case in which to permit the defendants to apply under rule 655 for an order for a preliminary trial of the plaintiff's right to require an account, and to postpone discovery of the books until after such trial. Graham v. Temperance and General Life Assurance Co. of North America, 16 P. R. 536.

Different Causes of Action.]—Different causes of action included in the same declaration may be severed and tried separately. Fitzsimmons v. McIntyre, 5 P. R. 119.

Question of Law—Preliminary Trial.]—The writ of summons claimed damages against an incorporated company for wrongful dismissal and slander. The original statement of claim was confined to the former cause of action, but, after defence and before reply due, the plaintiff amended on praceipe by adding a claim for slander:—Held, that it was completent for the plaintiff to do so, under rule 300. Semble, that an incorporated company may be liable if slander is spoken by its servants or agents in direct obedience to its orders; and held, that, at all events, the pleading setting up slander should not be struck out summarily, but should be adjudicated on. Leave to the defendants to have the question of law first determined. The two causes of action were properly joined; but application might be made under rule 237 to direct the method of trial. Rodger v. Noxon Co., 19 P. R. 327.

Dismissal of Action — Evidence on One Branch only.]—An action brought to enforce the performance by the defendants of a certain by-law passed by the plaintiffs, and also Railway Act, came a duty imposed by the Railway Act, came a duty imposed by the Railway Act, came a considerable of the result of the result of the case separately; and, after hearing evidence upon it, held that the by-law was not legally binding upon the defendants, and dismissed the action without hearing evidence on the second branch: —Held, that con, rule 655 must be read in conjunction with s. 52, s.-s. 12, of the Judicature Act, R. S. O. 1887 c. 44; and this case was not one calling for an application of the rule by directing separate trials of the questions raised. A new trial was therefore ordered, Village of Fort Erie v. Fort Erie Ferry R. W. Co., 13 P. R. 144.

Indemnity—Question between Co-defendants.]—See Walker v. Dickson, 14 P. R. 343.

Issue in Fact — Demurrer.] — Remarks upon the inadvisability of trying an issue in fact first, where there is also a demurrer on the record. Ross v. Tyson, 19 C. P. 294.

Patent of Invention—Infringement—Deviated of Right.]—In an action to restrain the defendants from selling a certain drug in violation of the rights of the plaintiffs under a patent, and of the terms upon which the drug was sold to the defendants, and for damages for selling in violation of such rights and terms, and for damages for a trade-libel, the defendants admitted that they bought the drug, but not from the plaintiffs, and were selling it by their agents, and upon their examination for discovery stated fully their mode of procedure in buying and selling, but in their pleading they denied the plaintiffs' patent right:—Held, that, there being a bonâ fide contest as to that right, the defendants should not, before the trial, be compelled to afford discovery of the details and particulars of such buying and selling, so as to disclose their and their customers' private business transactions. Such discovery should be deferred until after the plaintiffs should have established their right, even if a subsequent separate trial of the question of infringement should be necessary. Dickerson v. Radcliffe, 17 P. R. 586.

Settlement—Validity.]— The validity of a settlement of a pending action may be tried in such action, if pleaded in bar. In this case the Judge tried the question as to the settlement without the assistance of the jury, although the other questions in the action were left to the jury, Johnson v. Grand Trunk R. W. Co., 25 O. R. 64, 21 A. R. 408.

In an action for damages for negligence, whereby the plaintiff was injured in alighting from a train, the defendants denied negligence and pleaded contributory negligence, and also a payment of $10 to the plaintiff before action and a receipt in writing signed by him therefor, "in lieu of all claims I might have against said company on account of any injury received...by reason of my stepping off a train...; such act being of my own account, and not in consequence of any negligence or otherwise on behalf of such railway company or any of its employees." The plaintiff replied that if he signed the receipt, he was induced to do so by fraud and undue influence:—Held, by the Queen's bench division, that the issue raised by the document was not a distinct issue, but rather a matter of evidence upon the issues of negligence and contributory negligence, and should have been submitted to the jury, and not separately tried by the Judge. Held, by the court of appeal, reversing this decision, that the issue might properly be tried by the Judge, and need not necessarily be left to the jury. Haist v. Grand Tunk R. W. Co., 26 O. R. 19, 22 A. R. 504.

The court has jurisdiction to stay proceedings in any action which has been compromised, where no terms of the compromise go beyond what is in controversy in the action. And where, in an action of slander, the plaintiff excused his non-prosecution by alleging that an agreement had been entered into between himself and the defendant by which the action was to be dropped and $10 costs to be paid by the defendant, which agreement was denied by the defendant, an order was made directing a summary trial, or the trial by an issue upon oral evidence, of the question of the validity of the settlement; if the result should be a valid settlement, proceedings to be stayed perpetually and costs paid by defendant; if settlement invalid, action to be dismissed with costs to defendant. Recs v. Carrathers, 17 P. R. 51.

An assignee for the benefit of creditors under a statutory assignment, having brought an action for damages for breach of a contract made by his assignor with the defendants, made a compromise settlement with the defendants, before the delivery of pleadings, while he was in gaol, and without reference to the inspectors or creditors. A new assignee appointed in his stead applied for an order directing the trial of an issue to determine whether the settlement was valid:—Held, that it was not necessary to bring another action to vacate the settlement, and it was more convenient to revive the action in the name of the new assignee as plaintiff and let him continue it, leaving the defendants to move summarily to stay it, or to plead the settlement in bar, than to direct the trial of an issue. XII. STAY OF TRIAL.

Appeal from Order Directing New Trial.]—The plaintiff was permitted to proceed with a new trial pending an appeal, where he shewed that he had already been inconvenienced by delay, that further delay would prejudice him financially, and that by it he might loss important oral evidence. McDonald v. Murray, 9 P. R. 464.

The court may in a proper case stay the trial of an action pending an appeal to the court of appeal from an order directing a new trial, but only under special circumstances. It is not a ground for a stay that in the event of an appeal being successful the costs of the new trial will be thrown away, and that one party will be in danger of losing such costs, the other not being a person of means; and it is not desirable that the trial should be delayed, to the possible prejudice of a party by the loss of testimony. Arnold v. Toronto R. W. Co., 16 P. R. 394.

A second trial of an action was stayed pending an appeal to the court of appeal from the order directing such trial, where the principal question upon the appeal was as to the proper method of trial, and the appealants had been diligent in prosecuting the appeal and there was no suggestion of any possible loss of testimony. Arnold v. Toronto R. W. Co., 16 P. R. 394, distinguished. Haist v. Grand Trunk R. W. Co., 16 P. R. 448.

XIII. TRIAL JUDGE.

Consulting Experts.] — An action for damages caused by collision between two vessels was rried without a jury, and after the evidence had been taken, the trial Judge, with the consent of both parties, consulted two master mariners, and adopted as his own their opinion, based on a consideration of conflicting testimony as to the responsibility for the collision:—Held, that this was a delegation of the judicial functions; and a new trial was ordered. The scope of con, rule (1888) 207, as to calling in the assistance of experts, considered. Wright v, Collier, 19 A. R. 208.

Observations to Jury.] — The supreme court of Canada, as an appellate court for the Dominion, should not approve of such strong observations being made by a Judge as were made in this case, in effect charging upon the defendants fraud not set out in the pleadings, and not legitimately in issue in the cause. Hardman v. Putnam, 18 S. C. R. 714.

Power to Refer.]—The right of the trial Judge to refer the question of damages as a question arising in the action, under s. 101 of the Judicature Aci, 1881, is judisputable, at all events as a matter of discretion and subject to review; and it is for the party objecting to the reference to shew that the discretion has been wrongly exercised. And where, in an action for damages for injury to the plaintiff's land, on the bank of a navigable river, and to his business as a boatman, by the acts of the three several defendants, who owned saw mills higher up on the stream, in throwing refuse into it, it appeared that the plaintiff's title to relief and the liability of the de-fendants had been established in a former action, and the trial Judge heard the case only so far as to satisfy himself that the plaintiff had established a prima facie case on the question of damages, and directed a reference to assess and apportion them among the defendants, reserving further directions and costs: —Held, that there was no miscarriage, and the discretion of the trial Judge should not be overruled. Ratté v. Booth, 16 P. R. 185.

Refusal to Try Action—State of Pleadings.]—By their statement of claim the plaintiffs alleged themselves to be creditors for wages of two of the defendants, and they sought relief against the third defendant only as having obtained certain assets from the other two, either fraudulently or upon a trust to pay the plaintiffs claims. In their reply they set up that they were creditors of the third defendant himself, upon the ground that he was really the person who hired them. There was no subsequent pleading:—Held, that the reply was a direct violation of con, rule (1888) 419; and that the trial Judge was within his right in refusing, in his discretion, to try the action until the issues were properly presented upon the pleadings, and in directing that the costs of the postponement should be borne by the plaintiffs. No opinion expressed as to whether a divisional court had power to review such a ruling. Hurd v. Bostwick, 16 P. R. 121.

See ante V., 4, 5; post XIV.

XIV. TRIAL WITHOUT A JURY.

(Sec, also, ante XIII.)

Appeal — Judge's Decision on Facts.] — Semble, that notwithstanding 32 Vict. c. 6, s. 18 (O.), a Judge's decision on facts is to be regarded differently from the finding of a jury. Smith v. Hamilton, 29 U. C. R. 394. See, also, Scott v. Dent, 38 U. C. R. 50.

New Question — Evidence.] — The legislature did not, by 33 Vict. c. 7, s. 6 (O.), intend the court, on motion against a verdict given by a Judge of the court in which the action is brought, to decide upon the evidence questions not discussed before or decided by the Judge at the trial. Lawrie v. Rathbun, 38 U. C. R. 255, an agreement by the parties to leave the case to the Judge, the decision to be looked upon as the verdict of a jury. Afterwards it was entered that "the said Judge has determined, and the court is of opinion and has ordered, that the defendant should pay to the plaintiff a sum named. Then followed an entry of judg-ment for that sum and costs:—Held, that the judgment was erroneous, for no verdict was directed or entered to support it. Quære, whether the Judge had power to direct a verdict. Jones v. Smith, 23 U. C. R. 485.

Dispensing with Jury during Progress of Trial — Waiver of Objection.] — Where the trial of a cause begins and is entered into with or without a jury, as the case may be, it must be finished in like manner, unless by consent of parties. In an action of trespass quare clausum fregit, the trial was commenced with a jury, but an objection of a technical character having been taken by defendants' counsel to the plaintiff's evidence of a title deed offered in rebuttal, the Judge of a tible deed offered in rebuttal, the Judge granted an adjournment to enable him to cure the defect, discharged the jury, and afterwards resumed and finished the case without a jury. The defendants' counsel objected to the discharge of the jury, but continued to act in the case without further objection, and the plaintiff obtained a verdict:—Held, that the course pursued was unauthorized; but semble, that the defendants' counsel by proceeding with the defence, and taking his chance of a verdict, had waived the objection. Denmark v. McConaghy, 29 C. P. 563.

See Marks v. Town of Windson, 17 O. R. 719; Adair v. Wade, 9 O. R. 15.

Equitable Issues.]-Under the Adminisration of Justice Act of 1873. s. 16, it is not incumbent on the Judge to try any equitable issues on the record himself, but he may direct them to be tried by a jury. Shannon v. Hastings Mutual Fire Insurance Co., 26 C.

See con, rule (1897) 551.

Issue from Court of Chancery.]-In the absence of an express direction by the court of chancery, the issue sent from that court to a court of law may be tried without a jury. Wilson v. Wilson, 3 A. R. 400.

Legal and Equitable Issues.]-Quære, whether when there are legal and equitable issues, the whole case is not properly triable without a jury; but the fact that such a case has been tried by a jury, is no ground for a new trial, where the verdict is unobjectionable upon the evidence. Quære, also, whether in such a case the Judge may not call a jury to try the legal issues. Wright v. Sun Mutual to try the legal issues. Wright v. & Insurance Co., 29 C. P. 221, 236.

Order for—Former Jury Trials.]—Order made to send a case for trial by a Judge alone, under 36 Viet. c. 8, s. 18 (O.), in an action against a railway company for negligence in killing horses by a train at a road crossing, the jury having once disagreed, and on the second trial found a verdict for the plaintiff, which was set aside as contrary to law and evidence. McGunnighal v. Grand Trunk R. W. Co., 6 P. R. 209.

—— Powers of Officer of Court.]—In an action for breach of warranty, and for false representation, on the sale of a steam vessel, as to her power and speed, the clerk of the Crown in chambers, acting under s. 18 of the A. J. Act of 1873, directed the case to be tried by a Judge without a jury. On motion in term to set aside such order:—Held, that the clerk had power to make it, and that the court would not interfere with the exercise of his discretion. Bennett v. Tregent. 25 C. P.

1. Generally.

Costs where Venue not Changed.]-Where the parties to a cause had produced and examined their witnesses at Toronto, all of whom resided at a distance therefrom, and in close proximity to one of the circuit towns. the court, while awarding the general costs of the cause to the defendant, refused him the costs of the attendance of his witnesses. Led-yard v. McLean, 10 Gr. 139.

Crown Cases.]—In proceedings at suit of the Crown the venue is never changed at the instance of the defendant unless the attorney general consents. Regina v. Shipman, Delay.]—The court grants a change of venue reluctantly where delay will be occasioned thereby. Fishen v. Smith, 2 Ch. Ch.

Discretion — Ordinary and Special Grounds.]—It is within the discretion of a Judge either to change the venue or not on the ordinary grounds, as he thinks will further the ends of justice. Special grounds may be shewn why venue should not be changed on the ordinary application. Crumny, Creen. 4. the ordinary application. Crump v. Crew, 4 L. J. 20.

Plaintiff Changing his own Venue.] -A plaintiff will not, in general, be allowed —A plaintif will not, in general, be allowed to change his own venue to a county in which he might have laid it in the first instance, nor in order to avoid the consequences of his own delay or laches. Burton v. Nowlan, 4 L. J. 20; Mercer v. Voght, 3 P. R. 94. See Richardson v. Daniels, 3 L. J. 205.

Transitory Actions — Motion by either Party.]—In all transitory actions the venue may be changed by either plaintiff or defendant, on his shewing to the court or Judge a reasonable ground therefor. Mercer v. Voght, 4 L. J. 47; Bleakley v. Easton, 9 L. J. 23.

2. By Amendment.

Mistake—Local Venue,]—In an action against a bailliff of a division court, the venue being local was by mistake laid in the wrong county, and the plaintiff discovering the mistake did not go to trial in pursuance of his notice. Cross-rules having been obtained, the plaintiff was allowed to amend by changing the venue, and the defendant's rule for judgment as in case of nonsuit was discharged, on a peremptory undertaking, and on parametr of costs. Ward v. Sexantifa, 1 P. R.

Plea.]—A venue may be changed by plaintiff if laid by mistake in the wrong county. The proper order is to amend the declaration by changing the venue. Such amendment may be made after plea. Richardson v. Duniets, 3 L. J. 205; Mercer v. Voght, 4 L. J. 47.

Formerly this could not be done. See Vaughan v. Hubbs. 1 C. L. Ch. 76.

See Bull v. North British Canadian Investment Co., 10 P. R. 622, unte Pleading, XII.

See, also, Brown v. County of York, S. P. R. 139; Segsworth v. McKinnon, 19 P. R. 178.

3. Changing back.

Special Circumstances.]—After the venue has been changed at the instance of defendant, the court will not, unless under very special circumstances, allow the plaintiff to amend his declaration so as to bring it back. Smith v. Cotton, 1 U. C. R. 397.

Undertaking.] — A venue once changed will seldom be changed back again, without a peremptory undertaking by the plaintiff. Carrall v. Tyson, 1 C. L. Ch. 48.

4. Grounds for.

(a) Cause of Action Arising Elsewhere,

The venue will not be changed when there is no great preponderance of convenience, merely on the ground that the cause of action arose in the county to which it is sought to change the venue. The place where the cause of action arose is merely a circumstance in the discussion, and of no importance as compared with the preponderance of convenience. Gilmour v. Sirickland, 6 P. R. 254.

When the place where the cause of action arose and the place of residence of the defendant and his witnesses concur, a change of venue will be ordered to such county, although the plaintiff's witnesses reside where the venue is laid. Harper v. Smith, 6 P. R. 9.

Where parties to the suit, their witnesses, and the attorney and counsel for the defendant, resided in the same county, being the county where the cause of action arose:—Held, that the venue should be changed to that county. In considering the question of convenience and expense the cost to the public of the administration of justice should be taken into account, so that as far as possible each county should bear the expense of trying cases in the county in which the cause of action arose. Phippen v. McLeod. 7 P. R. 377.

An action should be tried in the county where the cause of action arose. Greey v. Siddad, 12 P. R. 557.

Where the balance of convenience was in favour of the trial of an action at Pembroke rather than at Cornwall, where the plannings laid the venue, it was charged to Pembroke, laid the venue, it was charged to Pembroke balanced than they were, the fact that the cause of action arose in the county of Renfrew should decide the question in favour of Pembroke, the county town of Renfrew. Croil v. Russell, 14 P. R. 185.

Per Meredith, C.J.—It would be more satisfactory if the practice were that prima facie the action should be tried in the county where the cause of economic point of the county where the tried in the county where the cause of economic properties of the county where the county of the place selected by him; but the contrary practice is well settled. Standard Drain Pipe Co. v. Town of Fort William, 16 F. R. 364.

(b) Convenience and Saving Expense.

Difference in Expense.]—Venue will not be changed on account of a trifling additional expense in trying the cause where the venue is laid. Stewart v. Johnstone, 4 L. J. 21.

Where the venue was laid at London, and it papeared that defendant, six of his witnesses, and one of plaintiff's witnesses, resided at Clinton, in the county of Huron, and that plaintiff and three of her witnesses resided at London (her other witnesses being at a distance, and one of them resident out of the Province), and that in procuring the attendance of the witnesses residing at Clinton and London there would be only a difference of $15 or $16 in favour of hearing the cause at Goderich, in the county of Huron:—Held, that this difference in expense was not sufficient to deprive the plaintiff of the right of having the cause heard at London, where the venue was laid. Mooney v. Mooney, 6 P. R. 267.

Alimony—Inconvenience of Public Officers.] — The venue was changed from Whithy to Toronto in an action for alimony, upon the application of the defendant, where there was not sufficient difference in expense to warrant the change in an ordinary case, because of the rule in alimony cases which imposes on the defendant the burden of advancing and paying all the disbursements on both sides in any event. The circumstances that two of the defendant's witnesses, who resided in Toronto, were public officers, and that their absence would be a public inconvenience, was also considered in determining the preponderance of convenience. Fogg v. Fogg, 12 P. R. 249.

Majority of Witnesses — Parties.] — Where the number of parties to a suit is greater on one side than the other, the majority cannot have the venue changed to the county in which they reside (not being that in which the cause of action arose), because they are to be examined as witnesses on their own behalf. Rose v. Cook, 2 C. L. Ch. 204.

Scrutiny—Affidaritis—Disclosure of Eridence, 1—The plaintiff lived in Montreal and the defendant in Toronto; the plaintiff had twenty-six witnesses in Montreal, and the defendant twenty-sight in or near Toronto, On a motion to change the venue from Cortwall to Toronto, the master in chambers directed the parties to put in affidavits disclosing the names and the nature of the evidence of the witnesses, and upon these determined that the evidence of some of the Montreal witnesses would be irrelevant to the issues, while all the Toronto witnesses might be important, and changed the venue to Toronto. Upon appeal:—Held, that the conclusion of the master as to the evidence was correct, and his order for change of venue proper upon the affidavits before him; but semble, the direction to disclose the names and evidence of witnesses was improper: not having been appealed against, however, and having been complied with, it could not be disturbed. Arpin v. Guinance, 12 P. R. 364.

Personal Convenience of Parties and Witnesses. —The renue should be selected with a due regard to the convenience of the suitors and of the witnesses, but if not so selected it will be changed. The circumstance that the master at the town to which the venue was sought to be changed was at one time concerned as an arbitrator between the parties, was held no sufficient reason for not taking the suit before a Judge there. Mallory v. Mallory, 2 Ch. Ch. 404.

When it is shewn that the convenience of witnesses would be better served by a change of venue, such change will be made without costs. Chard v. Meyers, 2 Ch. Ch. 391.

The court will not change the venue where a sheriff is defendant, on the ground that he cannot attend at the trial. Brock v. McClean, Tay. 235.

It is no ground for changing, that a person required as a witness at one assize will be an associate at another, and that from the distance he cannot attend both, Smith v. Jackson, M. T. I Vict.

distance he cannot attend both. Smith v. Jackson, M. T. I Vict., See Standard Drain Pipe Co. v. Town of Port William, 16 P. R. 404; Berlin Piano Co. v. Truskeh, 15 P. R. 68.

— Delay—Undertaking.]—In a bill relating to property in Toronto, there not being sufficient time to get the cause down for hearing at the next ensuing Toronto sittings, the venue was laid at Whity. After answer defendants moved to change the venue to Toronto, and flied affidavits stating that some of their witnesses were out of the jurisdiction, and the evidence of such witnesses could not be procured in time; that others were resident in Toronto engaged on defendants' railway there, and their attendance at Whitby would interfere with the working of the railway at Toronto. The court granted the motion, on defendants' undertaking to abide by such order as the court might make as to any damages which the delay caused by the change would occasion. McMurray v. Grand Trunk R. W. Co., 3 Ch. Ch. 133.

Preponderance of Convenience.] — Where the cause of action arose and the defendant resided at Pembroke, and the writ in the action was issued at Pembroke, but the plaintiff advisedly proposed to have the action tried at Kingston, alleging that he could not obtain a fair trial from a jury at Pembroke, owing to the influence of the defendant in that county:

—Held, that the defendant should not succeed in having the place of trial changed from Kingston to Pembroke, as upon the affidavits filed he did not shew such a preponderance of convenience in favour of Pembroke, as to warrant depriving plaintiff of his right to choose the venue. Davis v. Murray, 9 P. R. 222.

Upon appeal by the defendant, in an action alleging fraud in the adjustment of partnership accounts and for an account, from an order of a Judge affirming an order of a master refusing to change the venue from Toronto to Sault Ste. Marie, the court was divided in opinion; one Judge holding that the venue should be changed, because the action could be more fitly and conveniently tried at Sault Ste. Marie; and the other, that the defendant had not shewn so great a preponderance of convenience in favour of the change as was necessary under the authorities, especially in view of the previous refusals by the master and Judge. Peer v. North-West Transportation Co., 14 P. R. 381, referred to. Madigan v. Ferland, 17 P. R. 124.

Appeal—New Material—Change of Circumstances.]—The plaintiff's right to select the place of trial is not lightly to be interfered with, where it has not been vexatiously exercised. And where the derendants in moving to change the venue to the county where the cause of action arose did not shew a considerable preponderance of convenience in favour of the change, their application was refused; and the refusal was affirmed on appeal to a divisional court. Held, also, that the appeal must be dealt with on the facts as they were exhibited below, although, since the order was made, the trial had been postponed from the spring to the autumn; the court ought not to look at new material, nor listen to suggestions of possible changes, unless, in a proper case, to allow a new substantive application to be made. Halliday v. Torenship of Stanley, 16 P. R. 493.

— Cause of Action,]—The question for decision on an application to change the place of trial is, where can the action most conveniently he tried? And where, in an action on a promisesory note for the contract price of work done by the plaintiff in refitting a mill in the county of Middlesex, to which the defence was that the contract had never been carried out, the plaintiff had eight witnesses in Toronto or east of Toronto, and the defendant eight in Middlesex or west of Middlesex, upon the defendant is application to change the place of trial from Toronto to London:—Held, that London was the most convenient place for trial, and the venue was changed accordingly. Greey v. Siddall, 12 P. R. 557.

In an action to establish a right of way over land in the county of Wentworth, the venue was changed from Brantford to Hamilton, it appearing that there was a slight preponderance of convenience in favour of Hamilton. Held, that the facts that the subject matter of the litigation was situate in the county of Wentworth, and that a view by the jury might be necessary, were facts to be considered in fixing the place of trial. Odell v. Mulholland, 14 P. R. 180.

TRIAL.

- Costs of Motion.] - If the plaintiff lays the venue in a confessedly improper place he is liable to be visited with the costs of a motion to change the with the costs of a motion to change the venue. The defendant and six of his witnesses lived in the county of Huron, and the nesses lived in the county of Huron, and the plaintiff, an infirm person, sixty-five years of a and three of her witnesses, lived in the county of Oxford. It was alleged by defendant, and not denied by plaintiff, that the plaintiff had witnesses in the county of Huron. The venue was laid in Brantford:—Held, that the balance of convenience was in favour of the venue being at Goderich, in the county of Huron. Martin v. Ross, 6 P. R. 264.

Cross-actions.] — Where cross-ac tions with different venues, are consolidated, the place of trial will be ordered as the balance of convenience requires. Gonec v. Leitch, 11 P. R. 255.

Difference in Expense.]—The plaintiff is dominus litis and entitled to lay the venue where he pleases, subject to the rules The court will not deprive the plaintiff of this right, unless there is a manifest preponderance of convenience in a trial at the place to which it is sought to be changed. If it be made to appear that there will be a great waste of costs in a trial where the venue is laid, and much saving of costs in trying it at a place to which it is sought to change the venue, the Judge may in his discretion make the order. In this case the Judge was not satisfied that there would be a waste was not satisfied that there would be a waste of costs by reason of a trial in the county where the venue was laid, and so on that ground he declined to change the venue. Moor v. Boyd, 3 P. R. 374.

A defendant, when applying to change the venue on the ground of the preponderance of convenience and expense, should suggest in his affidavits the number of witnesses the plaintiff is likely to call, and where they re-side. Diamond v. Gray, 5 P. R. 33.

The plaintiff lived and carried on business in Toronto, the defendants in Parkhill, near London. The action was brought upon a contract to purchase certain goods obtained by an agent of the plaintiff, who solicited the oran agent of the plantin, who solution as and der in Parkhill, where the contract was signed. The goods were to be delivered by the plaintiff to the Grand Trunk Railway Company in Toronto. The defence set up fraud in obtaining the contract. The plaintiff proposed to have the action tried at Toronto. defendants swore that they intended to call six witnesses; that the cause of action arose in Parkhill; and that the expense of a trial at Toronto would be greater by $30 than at London. The plaintiff swore that he intended to call six witnesses and give evidence him-self; that four of the six lived in Toronto. one east of Toronto and one in Parkhill; and that the extra expenses of a trial at London would be about $25:—Held, that the cause of action arose in Toronto, and that there was no such preponderance of convenience in favour of London as would justify a change in the place of trial, following Noad v. Noad, 6 P. R. 48, Davis v. Murray, 9 P. R. 222, and Robertson v. Daganeau, 3 C. L. T. 266, Walton v. Wideman, 10 P. R. 228.

In an action by a husband against his wife to enforce a charge on land, the cause of action arose at Hamilton, where also the parties and their respective solicitors and all the wit-nesses resided, but the plaintiff proposed to have the action tried at Toronto. The increase in expense of a trial at Toronto over one at Hamilton, was estimated by the defen-dant at between $50 and $75, and by the plaintiff at about $30 :- Held, that there was an exceeding preponderance of convenience in favour of Hamilton, and it was ordered that the place of trial should be changed, unless the plaintiff at once paid into court $40 to meet the defendant's additional expense. Servos v. Servos, 11 P. R. 135.

Under the circumstances the preponderance of convenience and extra expense were insufficient to warrant a change. Shroder v. Myers, 34 W. R. 261, followed. Ross v. Canadian Pacific R. W. Co., 12 P. R. 220.

Under the circumstances, the defendant would be put to an undue and disproportionate inconvenience and expense if the action were tried at the place proposed by the plaintiff; there was a very great preponderance of convenience in favour of a change. Shroder v. Myers, 34 W. R. 261, distinguished. Nicholson v. Linton, 12 P. R. 223.

The decided cases have not entirely for-bidden a change of the place of trial. And where the cause of action arose in the county of Brant, the plaintiff and defendants resided therein, the defendants swore to thirteen material and necessary witnesses all residing in the county of Brant and convenient to Brantford, the county town, and it was not disput-ed by the plaintiff that, if he had to call any witnesses at all, they would be persons resid-ing at or near Brantford; the place of trial was changed by order from Hamilton, which was named by the plaintiff, to Brantford;— Held, that, although the difference in expense was not considerable, the great preponderance of convenience to witnesses and parties was in favour of Brantford. Brethour v. Brooke, 15 P. R. 205.

The place of trial of an action will not be changed unless the defendant shews that some serious injury and injustice to his case will arise by trying it where the plaintiff proposes to have it tried. The question of injury is one of degree, in which the elements of expense and convenience are to be considered. And where the extra expense could not exceed $15, and the place proposed by the plaintiffs was not far from that proposed by the plaintiffs was not far from that proposed by the defendant, a motion to change the venue was refused. Dovie v. Partlo, 15 P. R. 313.

The injury on account of which the plaintiff sued was received by him in the defendants' building in the county of Huron, but the plaintiff afterwards went to live in the county of Wentworth, and named Hamilton as the place of trial:—Held, that the defen-dants' application to change the venue to Goderich could not be granted, the difference in expense not being more than $40, and the number of witnesses in Huron county not exceeding the number in Wentworth by more than four :- Held, by the court of appeal, refusing leave to appeal, that it was well settled practice that the plaintiff had the right to name the place of trial, and his choice would not be interfered with except on sub-

WAY the milprelamiject the stantial grounds. Campbell v. Doherty, 18 P. R. 243.

— Discretion—Appeal, I—The question of changing the venue is to a great extent a matter of discretion. Con. rule 653 has not made any substantial change in the practice; and an overwhelming preponderance of convenience in favour of a change is still necessary. Shroder v. Myers, 34 W. R. 261, Power v. Moore, 5 T. L. R. 586, and Briddent v. Duncan, 7 T. L. R. 514, referred to. But where the venue had been changed by an order of the master in chambers, affirmed by a Judge in chambers and a divisional court, the court of appeal, though not satisfied that there was an overwhelming preponderance of convenience in favour of a change, refused to interfere with the discretion exercised, by granting leave to appeal. Peer v. North-West Transportation Co., 14 P. R. 381.

Onus — Personal Inconvenience of Witnesses.]—The plaintiff has the right to select the place of trial of the action, and the onus is upon the defendant to shew that the preponderance of convenience is against the place so selected. The court will not, upon an application to change the venue, enter into an inquiry as to the personal inconvenience of witnesses. Standard Parin Pipe Co. v. Town of Fort William, 16 P. R. 404.

Upon a motion to change the venue it is necessary to shew an overwhelming preponderance of convenience in favour of the change. Peer v. North-West Transportation Co., 14 P. R. 381, followed. Where the defendant moved to change the place of trial from Berlin to Belleville, shewing that the saving of expense to him. if the case was tried at Belleville, which is a saving of expense to him. if the case was tried at Belleville would be about $40, and that there were two or three more witnesses at Belleville than at Berlin, and the cause of action arose at Belleville, the motion was refused. Held, that the question whether it would be personally more inconvenient for the plaintiffs' witnesses to go to Belleville than for the defendant's witnesses to go to Berlin, was not one that could be considered. Berlin Piano Co. v. Truaisch, 15 P. R. 68.

Public Officers.]—The locality of the cause of action is not much regarded in chancery as a ground for changing the venue. When the venue has once been laid, a very large preponderance of convenience must be shewn to change it, and, in investigating this, regard will be paid to the ability of witnesses to travel, and to the probability of a postponement of the hearing being the result of a change. Between private individuals it is impossible to say that one class of witnesses will be more injured than another class by absence from home. Between a private individual and a public officer this may be considered. Noad v. Noad, 6 P. R. 48.

—Refusal to Determine—Apportionment of Costs.]—Having regard to the difficulty of deciding upon contradictory affidavits whether it is proper in any case to order a change of the place of trial, and to the unsatisfactory nature of the practice and the conflicting decisions upon the question of change of venue, it is better to refuse applications for change of venue, and to leave the trial Judge to apportion the costs so as to do justice, if it appears to him that the expense has been increased by the plaintiff's choice of a place of trial. Roberts v. Jones and Willey v. Great Northern R. W. Co., [1801] 2 Q. B. 194, followed. McArthur v. Michigan Central R. W. Co., 15 P. R. 77.

Public Officers—Convenience of Public.]
—See Noad v. Noad, 6 P. R. 48; Fogg v. Fogg, 12 P. R. 249.

Residence of Party Abroad.]—In moving to change the venue the fact that one party lives out of the jurisdiction does not affect the equities between the parties. Ansell v. Smith, 6 P. R. 62.

Residence of Parties—Cause of Action—"Good Cause."]—By s. 21 of 58 Vict. c. 13 (O.), it is provided that every action in the high court shall be tried in the county in which the cause of action arises, in case all the parties reside in that county, provided that, "for good cause shewn," a Judge may order the action to be tried in another county:—Held, that this applied to an action pending before it was passed; and that where the cause of action arose and all the parties resided in one county, a very strong case, which had not been made out, would have to be made before a trial in another county could be ordered. Pollard v. Wright, 16 P. R. 505.

(c) Expediting Trial.

Accident Preventing Trial.]—The occurrence of an accident preventing the trial of a cause where the venue is laid, (e. g., personal inability of the Judge) is a ground for changing the venue, in order to save delay, especially when prospective difficulty of obtaining witnesses, and the peculiar position of some of the parties to the suit, render the obtaining of justice much more expensive and troublesome, if not even doubtful, if trial deferred. McDonell v. Provincial Ins. Co., 5 L. J. 186.

Danger of Losing Debt.]—In an action on a note, with the venue laid in Oxford, and non fecit pleaded, the plaintiff swore that unless he could try the case at the winter assizes in Toronto he would be very likely to lose his debt, and that from conversations with defendant he believed the plea was put in for time only. No affidavits were filed in answer:—Held, sufficient. Mercer v. Vogt. 3 P. R. 94. See, also, Bleakley v. Easton, 9 L. J. 23.

Where the record did not reach the assize town in time to be entered, the plaintiff, on shewing that due diligence had been used, and that if he did not get down to trial before the autumn assizes he would be in danger of losing his debt, was allowed to change the venue, so as to go to trial at the spring assizes, on payment of costs of the day, costs of the application, and any extra expense occasioned to defendant by the change. Lucus v. Taylor, 4 P. R. 90.

Illness of Witness—Costs.]—The place of trial of an action may be changed for the purpose of expediting the trial. And where the plaintiffs named Barrie as the place of trial, and the defendants had it changed to Toronto, and, through no fault of the parties, the action was not tried at the spring sittings there, nor at Barrie under an alternative order, it was, on the application of the plaintiffs, changed to Bracebridge, where a summer sittings had been appointed, a witness for the plaintiffs being so dangerously ill that he might die at any moment, and there being no summer sittings at Toronto or Barrie. Costs summer sittings at Toronto or Barrie. Costs were not given against the plaintiffs, as they were not in fault. Bleakley v. Easton, 9 L. J. 23. Mercer v. Vogt. 3 P. R. 94, and McDonell v. Provincial Ins. Co., 5 L. J. 186, specially referred to. Mercer Co. v. Massey-Harris Co., 16 P. R. 171.

TRIAL

Plaintiff Guilty of Delay. |- The court will not change the venue to enable a plaintiff to speed his cause, especially if he has himself been guilty of delay. James v. James, 3 Ch.

Previous Delay by Arbitration—Convenience. — The venue was changed from Ottawa to Toronto to avoid a serious delay in trial after an abortive arbitration, where Toronto was as convenient a place as Ottawa for the defendants, and the plaintiffs had some witnesses at Toronto, they themselves residing at Montreal. Cooper v. Central Ontario R. W. Co., 4 O. R. 280.

(d) Securing Fair Trial.

Class Prejudice-Jury-Trial Judge.]-The plaintiff was a settler in the district of Muskoka, and the defendant a timber licensee. The question of fact between them was whethe question of late between them was whether certain timber was the property of the plaintiff or of the defendant. The defendant applied to have the venue changed from Muskoka on the ground that the jury would be largely drawn from the settler class, and that he believed he would not have a fair trial:-Held, that this was not a ground for change of venue, and any possible injustice to the defendant would be prevented by the trial Judge, who would have a discretion as to the mode of trial. Unger v. Brennan, 14 P. R. 294.

County Court Judge—Action against.]
—Quære, whether the circumstance of defendant being a county Judge is not in itself sufficient to give a plaintiff the right to have the place of trial changed on grounds of public policy. Anon., 4 P. R. 310.

Criminal Cause - Fair Trial-Evidence as to.]—Upon a motion made by the Crown under s. 651 of the criminal code to change the venue from the town of Napanee to some other place, for the trial of three persons charged with the offence of breaking a bank in the town of Napanee and stealing money therefrom, upon the ground that the sympathy felt for two of the accused in the town and in the county of Lennox and Addington, of which it is the county town, was such that a fair trial could not be had:—Held, that the rule that all causes should be tried in the county where the crime is supposed to have been committed ought never to be infringed unless it plainly appears that a fair and impartial trial cannot be had in that county; and mere apprehension, belief, and opinion are not to be relied on as evidence. And, under the circumstances appearing upon affida-vits filed, the motion was refused. Regina v. Ponton, 18 P. R. 210.

Fair Trial—Riot at Former Trial—Affidavits of Jurors.]—Under s. 651 of the criminal code the venue for the trial of a person charged with an indictable offence may be changed to some place other than the county in which the offence is supposed to have been In which the offence is supposed to have been committed, if it appears to the satisfaction of the court or Judge that it is expedient to the ends of justice, by reason of anything which may interfere with a fair trial in that county; it is not a question as to the jury altogether.

And where at a trial of the defendant, at which the jury disagreed, a crowd of persons congregated round the court house while the jury were deliberating, and endeavoured to intimidate the jurors and influence them in favour of the defendant, and afterwards made riotous demonstrations towards the Judge who presided at the trial, the venue was changed before the second trial. Where affidavits were filed by the Crown to shew that the conduct of the crowd must have influenced the jurors, affidavits of jurors denying that they were in-timidated were received in answer. Regina v. Ponton (No. 2), 18 P. R. 429.

Evidence of Difficulty in Having Fair Trial.]—The suggestion that the defendant could not obtain a fair and impartial trial in the county was not made out in this case to the satisfaction of the Judge, and on that ground, as well as others mentioned in the case, he refused to change the venue. Moor v. Boyd, 3 P. R. 374.

Libel-Newspaper-Convenience.]-When, Libel—Newspaper—Convenience.]—When, in an action for libel in a newspaper, the plaintiff lays the venue in a county distant from that in which the paper is published and the parties reside, so that the trial may be free from local influences, it will not be changed to the county in which the cause of action arose, merely because it would be more convenient and less expensive to try the case in the latter county. The obtaining of a fair trial must overbear every consideration of mere convenience. Blackburn v. Cameron, 5 P. R. 34.

Municipal Corporation — Action by-Costs of Motion.] - Where the venue is changed at the defendant's instance in an ac tion brought by a municipal council in their own county, on the ground that all the inown county, on the ground that all the in-habitants are interested in the suit, and an impartial trial cannot be had, defendant will be ordered to pay costs of the application, and, in any event, the extra mileage of plain-tiffs' witnesses: and in the event of defendant succeedings, e shall not tax against plaintiff the extra mileage of his own witnesses. Muni-cipal Council of Ontario v. Cumberland, 3 L. J. 11.

Newspaper Comment-Delay in Applying.]-In an action against an insurance con pany, it appeared that the plaintiffs' claim had been much discussed, and the conduct of the defendants severely remarked upon, in newspapers in the county and in the vicinity of the county in which the venue was laid:— Held, that this would have been a sufficient reason (upon the facts as proved) for grant-ing a change of venue, if the application had been made more promptly; but, as the defend-ants had unnecessarily delayed for several weeks, and applied only a few days before the commission day of the asserces the relievistics. commission day of the assizes, the application was refused. McDonagh v. Provincial Ins. was refused. Mc. Co., 2 C. L. J. 104.

Political Prejudice—Previous Verdict—Member of Parliament.]—The fact that the question for trial in an interpleader issue is the alleged insolvency of a member of parliament at the time of an alleged assignment of road stock, coupled with the circumstance that one of the parties to the suit contesting the question of insolvency is a political opponent of his, is not a ground for a change of venue, although it be shewn that a verdict was rendered which the court afterwards set aside; but rather a ground for the summoning of a special jury. Salter v. McLeod, 10 L. J. 76.

- Private Injury-Convenience.]-An application to change the venue in an action for libel, to a county where the cause of action arose and the witnesses resided, whereby there would be a great saving of expense, was opposed on the ground that a fair trial could not be had in such county, owing to alleged prejudices against the plaintiff arising from political excitement occasioned by an election held there three years previously:-Held, that the venue must be changed, the action being for a private injury and not a matter of public interest, and the probabilities of the case being against the belief that a fair trial could not be obtained, as alleged; and the preponderance of convenience and expense being greatly in favour of the change. Roche v. Patrick, 5 P.

Previous Verdict — Bins.]—The action was tried at Brantford, and a new trial was moved for at a place other than Brantford, because the jury there were binssed against the defendant:—Held, that this formed no ground for a new trial. Wood v. McPherson, 17 O. R. 163.

Refusal of Judge to Try Action—Costs of Motion — Extra Expense.]— The refusal, upon good grounds, of the Judge appointed to hold the assizes for a particular county to try a cause wherein the venue is laid in that county, is a ground for changing the venue, especially where the difficulty of obtaining witnesses to attend at the place where the venue is laid, coupled with the fact that three trials were had in that county, each of which resulted in favour of defendants, and in each of which the verdict was set aside by the court, renders the obtaining of a just verdict much more difficult than elsewhere. But in such a case plaintiffs applying for a change of venue will be ordered not only to pay the extra costs to which such defendants may be put by the change of place of trial, but, in the event of success, ordered not to tax against defendants the increased cost of having a trial in the place to which a change of venue is desired. Ham v. Lasher, 10 L. J. 74.

Sheriff — Action against, 1—In an action wherein the sheriff is plaintiff or defendant, the opposite party, if he so desires, may have the action tried in the county adjoining that in which the sheriff resides. Brannen v. Jarvis, S.P. R. 322.

See Mallory v. Mallory, 2 Ch. Ch. 404; Davis v. Murray, 9 P. R. 222.

5. In County Court Cases,

Appeal — Judge in Chambers—Court on Banc.]—There is no appeal to the full court in term from an order of the clerk of the Crown and pleas, made on an application to change the venue in a conaty court case, under R. S. O. 1877 c. 50, s. 155, but the only appeal in such cases is to a Judge in chambers under s. 31 of the Act. Held, however, that if an appeal did lie to the full court, it might be made direct thereto without first going before a Judge in chambers, Mahon v, Nicholls, 31 C. P. 22.

Appeal—Judge in Chambers—Divisional Court.]—Held, that an appeal lay to a Judge in chambers from an order of the master in chambers under con, rule (1888) 1260, and that the venue in this case was properly changed to Napanee; and that, even if an appeal did not lie from the master in chambers to a Judge in chambers, the latter had the right as upon a substantive application to make the order which the master refused. As the appeal to the divisional court was dismissed upon the merits, no opinion was expressed as to whether such appeal lay. Milligan v. Sills, 13 P. R. 350.

Where an application is made to the master in chambers, under con. rule (1888) 1209, to change the place of trial in a county court action, no appeal lies from his order thereon to a Judge in chambers; and no appeal lies from the decision of a Judge in chambers to a divisional court. McAllister v. Colc, 16 P. R. 101.

Where in a county court action an application has been made to the master in chambers, under con. rule (1888) 1220, to change the place of trial, no appeal lies from his order; and a second application for the same purpose, not based upon any new state of facts arising since the first application was made, will not be entertained by a Judge in chambers. Mc-Allister v. Cole, 16 P. R. 105, followed. Milligan v. Silis, 13 P. R. 350, not followed, with the concurrence of the Judges who decided it, pursuant to s. 9 (2) of the Law Courts Act, 1895. Cameron v. Elliott, 17 P. R. 415.

Costs—Scale of—Appeal.)—The costs of an application to the master in chambers, under con, rule (1897) 1219, to change the place of trial in a county court action, should be taxed on the county court scale, but the costs of an appeal in the same matter from the master's order to a Judge in chambers and of a further appeal to a divisional court should be taxed on the high court scale. Re Hicks v. Mills, 18 P. R. 123.

Difference in Expense — Undertaking.]
—The plaintiff in a county court action haid his venue in Toronto. The master in chambers changed it. On appeal, a Judge discharged the master's order on the undertaking of the plaintiff to pay the extra expense (825 to 830) of a trial at Toronto. Brigham v. McKenzie, 10 P. R. 406.

Issue Sent from High Court—Transfer to another County Court—Jurisdiction.]—In an action pending in the high court, an interplender issue and all subsequent proceedings were transferred under 44 Vict. c. 7, s. 1 (O.) to the county court of Middlesex. By a subsequent order made on consent, the trial of such issue was withdrawn from Middlesex, and a special case was agreed on, and the venue changed from Middlesex to York, where the special case was argued;—Held, that in strictness the appeal should be quashed. The transfer to the Middlesex county court was final, and there was no jurisdiction under the statute or otherwise to transfer the issue or any part of it, or to change the venue, to any other county court. The proceedings in the county court of York could therefore only be regarded as a summary trial by consent, from the judgment on which no appeal lay. Counc v. Lee, 14 A. R. 503.

Jurisdiction of Master in Chambers. -Semble, that the master in chambers has not jurisdiction to change a venue under R. S. O. 1877 c. 50, s. 155, as the rule of court passed 1st February, 1879, under the authority Vict. c. 11, delegates to the master only the jurisdiction the Judges of the superior courts then possessed in certain matters, and it was not till the passing of 35 Vict. c. 10 (O.), that superior court Judges had jurisdiction in such matters in county court actions. Nor has the master in chambers power under rule A2O, O. J. Act, as that is limited to "actions and matters" in the high court, and a motion of this kind is neither a "matter" nor a "proceeding" (8, 91, O. J. Act) in the high court. Brigham v. McKenzie, 10 P. R. 496.

Motion-Intituling of Papers.]-Where a motion is made to a Judge of the high court or the master in chambers under rule 1260 to change the venue in a county court action, the papers should not be intituled in the high court of justice, but in the county court. Ferguson v. Golding, 15 P. R. 43.

Preponderance of Convenience-Cause of Action.]-In such cases the proper course is to follow. as laid down in the Act, the prac tice in force in the superior courts, the mere fact of the cause of action having arisen in the county to which it is sought to change the venue, is not, of itself, sufficient to outweigh any actual preponderance of convenience arising from other causes in favour of retaining the venue where the plaintiff had laid it. Mahon v. Nicholls, 31 C. P. 22.

Upon motion to change the venue from Toronto to Napanee in a county court action, brought to recover $100 damages for breach of a contract by the defendant to sell a horse to the plaintiff, it appeared that the defendant resided in the county of Lennox and Adding-ton and the plaintiff in Toronto, and that all the witnesses on both sides resided in Lennox and Addington except the plaintiff himself and one other in Toronto. The defendant swore that he required eleven witnesses at the trial. It was not clear where the cause of action arose, but the breach was probably where the defendant resided:—Held, that there was a very great preponderance of convenience in favour of having the action tried at Napanee and the venue was accordingly changed. Milligan v. Sills, 13 P. R. 350.

The action was for damages for breach of contract, and the breach was at Pembroke, which the plaintiff named as the place of trial. The defendant moved to change it to Toronto: Held, that the action would be more conveniently tried at Pembroke, and the plaintiff should be allowed to retain the venue there, although the defendant swore that he had a much larger number of witnesses at Toronto than the plaintiff had at Pembroke. McAl-lister v. Cole, 16 P. R. 105.

- Difference in Expense.1-A motion to change the place of trial in a county court action from London to Toronto was refused tion was on a promissory note made and payable at Toronto. The plaintiff resided in Montreal, and his solicitor in London. The sole defence was, that the defendant was dis-charged from liability under the Insolvent Act. The defendant resided in Toronto, and swore that he intended to call two witnesses, the clerk of the county court at Toronto, and the assignee of the defendant, who also lived there. The plaintiff filed no affidavit on the motion. Slater v. Purvis, 10 P. R. 604.

TRIAL.

Replevin. |-The venue in any action of replevin in a county court, except for goods distrained, may be changed to any other county under s. 155 of R. S. O. 1877 c. 50. O'Donnell v. Duchenault, 14 O. R. 1.

- Local Venue - Tax Collector.]-A tax collector, sued for damages in respect of acts done by him in the execution of his duty, is entitled to the benefit of R. S. O. 1887 c. 73, and under s. 15 of that Act, and s. 4 of R. S. O. 1887 c. 55, a county court action against him for replevin of goods seized by him and for damages for malicious seizure, must be brought in the county where the seizure and alleged trespass took place. The consolidated rules (1888) as to venue do not consolidated rules (1993) as override these statutory provisions. Legacy v. Pitcher, 10 O. R. 620, distinguished. Arscott v. Lilley, 14 A. R. 283, applied. Howard v. Herrington, 20 A. R. 175.

6. In Particular Actions.

Bond -- Award.] -- The court will not change the venue in an action upon a bond conditioned for the performance of an award, without special grounds. Lossing v. Horned, Tay, 83.

Case against Carriers.]-In an action on the case against carriers, the venue cannot be changed on the common affidavit. Ham v. McPherson, M. T. 5 Vict.

Ejectment.]-In an action of ejectment the place of trial may be changed by order of a Judge. If the power to change is not given by rule 254, O. J. Act, it is not taken away thereby, and it previously existed under R. S. O. 1877 c. 51, s. 23. Canadian Pacific R. W. Co, v. Manion, 11 P. R. 247.

The indorsement on a writ of summons, issued in the district of Thunder Bay after the passing of 57 Vict. c. 32 (O.), shewed that the claim was for cancellation of a lease of a mining location in the district of Rainy River, for possession of the location, and for an injunction restraining the defendant from entering thereon :-Held, that the action was not one of ejectment within the meaning of con. rule (1888) 653, and therefore the venue was not local, and it was not necessary that the writ should be issued by the local registrar at Rat Portage under s. 3 of the Act. Kendell v. Ernst, 16 P. R. 167.

Local Action-Adjoining County.]-In a local action it is not obligatory upon the court or Judge to order the trial to be had in the next adjoining county only, if, in view of all the circumstances of the case, a change to a county more remote is deemed more convenient or desirable. Ham v. Lasher, 10 L. J. 74.

Replevin.]-See Howard v. Herrington, 20 A. R. 175; O'Donnell v. Duchenault, 14 O.

Trespass to Land.] — In trespass to realty situated in the county of Peel, the venue was laid in the county of the city of Toronto. An application to change the venue to the former county was refused. Quære, is the common affidavit sufficient in such case? Perdue v. Township of Chinguacousy, 2 C. L. J.

See, also, Smythe v. Tower, 2 L. J. 183; arruthers v. Dickey, 2 L. J. 185; Paterson Carruthers v. Dickey, 2 v. Smith, 14 C. P. 525.

7. Motions to Change Venue and Appeals.

Affidavits.]—See Regina v. Ponton (No. 2), 18 P. R. 429; Attorney-General v. Mc-Lachlin, 5 P. R. 63.

Appeal from Order Made at Trial-Jurisdiction of Divisional Court—Res Judicata — Order ex Mero Motu.] — The action came on for trial at the Toronto assizes, the trial was postponed, and the trial Judge indersed on the record: "Upon my own motion, I order that the place of trial in this cause be changed to the town of Belleville, cause be changed to the town of Belleville, and that this cause be tried at the next assizes there by a jury." A Judge in chambers had previously refused to change the place of trial to Belleville:—Held, that the question of place of trial was res judicata. Held, also, notwithstanding s. 28, s-ss, 2 and 3, O. J. Act, 1881, that the divisional court had jurisdiction to been an angeal from the order of the tion to hear an appeal from the order of the trial Judge, having regard to the language of rule 254, O. J. Act, and of the order itself. Semble, rule 254 does not give a Judge a right to interfere with the procedure in the action except at the instance of a party. Bull v. North British Canadian Loan and Investment Co., 11 P. R. 83.

- Jurisdiction of Divisional Court-Convenience-Costs.]-The master in chambers refused an application by the defendant to change the place of trial from Sarnia to Stratford, but gave leave to bring on an appeal from his order, or a substantive motion to change the place of trial, before the Judge holding the Sarnia assizes, who entertained the motion, and made an order changing the venue to Stratford. The order was drawn up as made by a Judge at the assizes, and was signed by the local registrar at Sarnia:—Held, that, having regard to rule 254, O. J. Act, and to the leave given and the character of the motion, the order was to be regarded as that of a Judge and not of the high court, and could therefore be reviewed by a divisional court. There is nothing to prevent a Judge sitting at the assizes hearing a chambers motion, if he is disposed for the purpose to treat the court room as his chambers. Such an application as this, however, should not be made at the trial on account of the inconvenience and detriment to the public interest arising from the delay of other business appropriate to the assizes, and on account of the injustice to parties to the cause who have prepared for trial. It is too late when the assizes have begun to consider the question of the balance of convenience; and, therefore, while the court did not see fit under the circumstances to restore the venue to Sarnia, they varied the order of the trial Judge by making the costs of the day at Sarnia, and of the several motions to change the venue, costs to the plaintiffs in any event. Sarnia Agricultural Implement Mfg. Co. v. Perdue, 11 P. R. 224.

Costs.]—See Municipal Council of Ontario v. Cumberland, 3 L. J. 11; Ham v. Lasher, 10 L. J. 74; Martin v. Ross, 6 P. R. 264.

Evidence on Motion.]-A party making affidavit to change the venue, and stating that certain parties are material and necessary witnesses, is not bound on cross-examination to state what evidence he expects from them, or to state facts tending to test the materiality of the proposed evidence. Crombie v. Bell, 3 Ch. Ch. 195.

Evidence on Motion or Appeal.]—See Arpin v. Guinane, 12 P. R. 364: Halliday v. Township of Stanley, 16 P. R. 493.

In County Court Cases.] - See ante 5.

Leave to Appeal-Costs-Undertaking.] -Leave to appeal to the court of appeal was asked by the plaintiff because it was of importance to him in other litigation to have the question of venue decided, and was granted upon his undertaking to pay the costs of both parties of the appeal. Greey v. Siddall, 12 P.

R. 557.

See Peer v. North-West Transportation Co., 14 P. R. 381.

Necessity for Substantive Motion-Certiorari.]-A Judge has no power to change the venue by the order granting the writ of certiorari to remove a cause from the county court; it should be a substantive motion, when the plaintiff has shewn where he will lay his venue after the cause has been removed. Paterson v. Smith, 14 C. P. 525.

Time for Moving.]-The court will not change the venue on the application of the plaintiff after issue joined, unless a very special ground be laid for it. Crooks v. House, 3 O. S. 308.

An application on special grounds to change venue should not be made before plea pleaded.

Stewart v. Johnstone, 4 L. J. 21.

Semble, that an application for change of venue before appearance entered is irregular. Hood v. Cronkrite, 4 P. R. 279.

Until after appearance a defendant has no attorney in the cause, and an affidavit by a person calling himself such was, therefore, held, insufficient to support an application to change the venue. Attorney-General v. Mc-Lachlin, 5 P. R. 63. See McDonagh v. Provincial Ins. Co., 2 C. L. J. 104.

Undertaking - Evidence-Compliance.] The evidence given by the plaintiff in this case was held not a sufficient compliance with the usual undertaking on changing the venue. Miller v. Darrow, 10 U. C. R. 349. O T te

TRIAL.

Disregard of - Service.] - Though an order to change the venue has been granted and served, unless the venue be in fact changed by taking out the rule and making the alteration in the record, the plaintiff is at liberty to proceed to trial according to the original venue. Hornby v. Hornby, 3 U. C. R. 274; McNair v. Sheldon, Tay, 598.

On the 28th September an order was made to change the venue from Brant to Oxford. The rule was not taken out until the 9th October, and it was not served until the 13th The assizes for Brant were then in progress, and the case had been entered for trial there. The plaintiff continued it on the docket notwithstanding the order, but it was not tried, owing only to want of time. It was then entered again at Brant at the next assizes, and a verdict taken, defendant not appearing :--Held that the plaintiff should not have gone to trial at Brant after service of the order; and the verdict was set aside, but without costs, as the defendant had been guilty of laches in not making the service sooner. Cleghorn v. Carroll, 14 U. C. R. 480.

Effect of-Acting on-Divisions of Court Costs.]-An order was made by the master in chambers changing the place of trial from the assizes at Simcoe, for which notice had been given, to the chancery sittings at London. The Judge presiding at those sittings having refused to hear the case, as it belonged to a common law division:—Held, without determining whether the master's order was a proper one, that the plaintiff was justified in acting on it, and his costs occasioned by the abortive attempt at trial were allowed to him. Schwob v. McGloughlin, 9 P. R. 475.

XVI. VERDICT.

(See ante V.)

1. Mistake or Inconsistency-Alteration or Amendment.

Amendment of Verdict.]-Semble, that the Judge may amend a verdict with the assent of the jury at any time before they are discharged. Jordan v. Marr, 4 U. C. R. 53.

Held, that where by mistake a verdict for a certain amount is entered on the record, and the foreman of the jury, before the jury separate or leave the box, points out the error, the Judge is right in erasing the entry and making in lieu thereof another to which the jury have assented as being their verdict. Moore v. Boyd, 15 C. P. 513.

Conditional Verdict - Costs - Alteration.]—Where a jury found a verdict for the plaintiff and £5 damages, with a condition that each party should pay his own costs, and on the court having refused to receive this, they altered it to a verdict for defendant with the same condition, and subsequently, on that verdict being refused also, to an unconditional verdict for defendant, a new trial was granted without costs. McKay v. Lyons, 6 O. S. 507.

Dissent of Juryman—Evidence of Formal Assent.]—Application for leave to file a qui tam information against a Judge of a re-Vol. III, p-221-72 corder's court, upon the ground that he had falsified the records of the court, and mali-ciously condemned the applicant as guilty of a felony upon a verdict of his peers, when, as alleged, no verdict whatever was found by the jury. The facts to support the application were, that the jury came into court to render their verdict, and the foreman pronounced a verdict of guilty. The counsel for the accused then questioned (not through the court) some of the jury as to the grounds of their verdict, when one of them stated that he did not concur in the verdict. The attention of the court was not drawn to this dissent, nor did it appear that the court was aware of it. A verdict of guilty was recorded by the pre-siding Judge; and when formally read to the jury by the clerk no objection was made. The court refused to allow the information. Regina v. Ford, 3 C. P. 209.

Entry of Verdict-Irregularity.]-The verdict not having been indorsed on an office copy of the order of interpleader, but on the record only, the supposed irregularity was held to be immaterial. Gourlay v. Ingram, 2 Ch. Ch. 309.

Granting New Trial. |- See New TRIAL.

Inconsistency — Error — Misconduct.]— The jury were told that the testimony of the prisoner's accomplices was not sufficiently corroborated to warrant a conviction, whereupon they came into court stating that they thought the prisoner guilty, but that he ought not to be convicted upon the evidence. They were then told that they ought to acquit, but after a short interval they returned a verdict of guilty. Before recording their finding, the pre-siding Judge recommended them not to convict on the evidence, saying, however, that they could do so if they thought proper; and they nevertheless adhered to their verdict:—Held, no ground for a new trial, for there was neither error nor misconduct in fact or in law, in either of which cases only the statute intended that the court might interfere by granting a new trial. Regina v. Seddons, 16 C. P. 389.

Rider to Verdict-Effect of.]-In an ac-Rider to Verdict—Effect of.]—In an action against the defendant, as a surgeon, for negligence, the jury found for the plaintiff, but added to their verdict the following:—"We are of opinion that the defendant made a mistake in not calling in skilful assistance, but not wilfully or through inattention:"—Held, a mere expression of opinion, and that it did not nullify or affect the verdict. Sheridan v, Pidgeon, 10 O. R. 632. dan v. Pidgeon, 10 O. R. 632.

Verdict of Judge—Mistake—Treating as Judgment.]—The Judge, at the trial in a county court, entered a verdict for the plaintiff, instead of directing judgment to be en-tered, and afterwards refused a rule nisi to set aside such verdict. Rule 405 of the O. J. Act, 1881, in effect forbids the granting of any rule to shew cause where the application is against the judgment of a Judge who tries a cause without a jury. Quere, as to the application of this rule to county courts by rule 490. Held, that the entry of the ver-dict might be treated as a direction to enter judgment, and was a decision from which an appeal would lie under rule 510. An objection to an appeal from the refusal of a Judge to grant such rule might be raised by motion

2. Reservation of Leave to Move.

Administration of Justice Act, 1874—Effect of.]—37 Vict. c. 7, s. 33 (O.), (A. J. Act, 1874), does not empower a court to enter a nonsuit or verdict, except in cases where before the Act the court would have done so on leave reserved. Contra, where the trial is before a Judge withou a jury; 33 Vict. c. 7, s. 6 (O.) Hughes v. Canada Permanent L. and S. Society, 39 U. C. R. 221. See Armstrong v. Stewart, 28 C. P. 45.

Application to Court of Appeal.]—
Where leave was reserved at the trial to move to set aside the verdict and enter a verdict for the plaintiff:—Held, that the court of appeal could order such verdict to be entered. Herbert v. Park, 25 C. P. 57.

Application to Indictment Tried on Civil Side.]—Quere, whether after verdict for the Crown on an indictment tried on the civil side, the verdict can be entered for defendant on leave reserved. The proper course is to reserve a case under C. S. U. C. c. 112. Regina v. Fitzgerald, 39 U. C. R. Q. C.

Disagreement of Jury,1—When leave have a verdict entered to defeadant to move to have a verdict entered for him on legal objections taken, and the jury not being able to agree were discharged, he could not make the motion. McGuire v. Laing, 19 U. C. R. 508. But see R. S. O. 1877 c. 50, s. 290.

Necessity for Consent.]—A rule nisi was made absolute to enter a verdict for plaintiff, although defendant had not assented to any leave being reserved to move. On appeal the court directed the rule absolute to be discharged, leaving it to the court below to dispose of the application for a new trial, the other alternative of the rule nisi. Ball v. Sprung, 24 U. C. R. 422.

Necessity for Reservation—Amendment of Entry of Verdict.]—The Judge who tried the case without a jury really found a verdict for the defendant, as appeared from his notes, but a nonsuit was entered. The common pleas made a rule absolute to enter a verdict for the plaintift, although no leave was reserved, and no consent was given:—Held, that the court of appeal had power to correct the entry by the Judge's notes, or vary the rule. Mc-Educards v. Palmer, 2 A. R. 439.

3. Sealed Verdict.

Necessity for Assent in Open Court—Costs.]—The trial of an action for slander having been concluded, the court adjourned at 6 p.m., both parties agreeing to a sealed verdict. A sealed envelope was left with the sheriff's officer for the Judge, with a paper enclosed, signed by all the jury, directing that the defendant should "pay the sum of $1 damages and the costs of the suit:"—Héld, that on this being opened in court by the Judge next morning, the jury should have been called together, as the plaintiff's counsel required, to assent to the verdict, and have it recorded; and it having been simply indorsed on the record as written, a new trial was ordered without costs. Held, also, that the jury had no power to give costs by their verdict. Campbell v. Linton, 27 U. C. R. 563.

See Donaldson v. Haley, 13 C. P. 87; Morse v. Thompson, 19 C. P. 94.

4. Several Counts or Issues.

Abandonment of Part.] — Where a plaintiff abandoned the special counts, and recovered upon counts within the competence of a district court, the court of Queen's bench ordered the verdict to be entered on those counts only. Wentworth v. Hughes, Tay. 178.

If a plaintiff at a trial abandons all the counts in his declaration but one, on which he obtains a verdict, the defendant is not entitled to a verdict on the other counts. Gates v. Crooks, Dra. 180.

Where in an action on the Statute of Maintenance, a verdict was taken upon four counts of the declaration for the plaintif, and the defendant moved to arrest the judgment on the ground that some of the counts were bad, the court allowed the plaintiff to enter the verdict upon one count of the declaration, abandoning the rest. Beastey v. Cahill, 2 U. C. R. 320.

Election — Change in.] — Semble, that a party may apply his verdict to a different count from that on which he elected to take it at the trial, where the evidence given will support such count. Ponton v. Moodic, 7 U. C. R. 301.

Consent — Trespass.] — The fifth count was in trespass to plaintiff's goods. The sixth count was for illegal distress. To the fifth count defendant pleaded, "not guilty," that the goods were not plaintiff's, and that he seized and sold them to satisfy arrears of rent; and to the sixth count, the general issue by statute 11 Geo, II. c. 19, s. 2. At the trial the plaintiff's evidence shewed that the seizure and sale referred to was for a distress for rent. Defendant's counsel contended that, as only one seizure had been made, the plaintiff must elect on which count he would go to the jury. The Judge refused to compel plaintiff to elect, but said he would direct the jury that the evidence applied more to the sixth count than the fifth, after which the plaintiff's counsel, in addressing the jury, withdrew the sixth count from their consideration. The Judge charved the jury that the evidence given applied to the sixth count; and that they should find for defendant on the fifth count, charging them as if both counts were before them for their consideration. The jury found for plaintiff on defendant on the fifth count, charging them as if both counts were before them for their consideration. The jury found for plaintiff on defendant on the fifth—Held, that the plaintiff could not withdraw a particular count or issue from the consideration of the jury, without the consent of defendant, so as to prevent them giving a verdict on such count, and the jury in this case should have been directed to find for defendant on the sixth count. But, as substantial conce on the fifth count. But, as substantial charge.

Trespass-Case.] - In an action against a magistrate for wrongful arrest and against a magistrate for wrongful arrest and imprisonment, the first count being in tres-pass, the second in case:—Held, that, as only one wrong was complained of by plaintiff, he could not recover on the two separate counts, but must elect on which of them he would enter his verdict. Haacke v. Adamson, 14 C. P. 201.

Plaintiff having declared in one count for entering his close, and there destroying his mare, and in the other in case for keeping the bull which had done the injury, knowing his vice, &c.. and having recovered a general ver-dict:—Held, that he was not bound to elect upon which count to take his verdict. Haacke upon which count to take his verdict. Haacke v. Adamson, 14 C. P. 201, remarked upon. Mason v. Morgan, 24 U. C. R. 328.

The declaration contained three counts: the first, trespass for breaking and entering plaintiff's store and taking his goods; second, trestill's store and taking his goods; second, tres-pass to plaintil's cattle, goods, &c.; third, case for distraining on plaintill's premises, for rent due to defendant by plaintill's immediate landlord, goods of much greater value than the amount of rent, &c.;—Held, that the plaintil' was not bound to elect at the trial upon which count he would go to the jury, al-though the three counts were founded on conthough the three counts were founded on one and the same wrong. Lynch v. Bickle, 17 C. P. 549.

Entry on Wrong Count-Alteration of Record.]—Where a verdict has been erron-eously entered on one count, the record may at cousty entered on one count, the record may at any time afterwards, by leave of the Judge who tried the cause, be altered and the entry thereof made on another count. Moore v. Boyd, 15 C. P. 513.

Immaterial Issues.]—Where there are several issues raised, and the plaintiff has a verdict upon the whole record, it forms no good objection to his recovery that some of the issues should have been found for defendant, if there be sufficient without them to support the verdict, and they be not material. Rowand v. Tyler, 4 O. S. 257.

Joint Cause of Action—Trespass—Case —Restriction of Verdict.]—A general verdict on a declaration containing one count in trespass and another in case, is not bad in law. But in this case, the court, being of opinion But in this case, the court, being or opinion that there was only one joint cause of action against the defendants—that is, the arrest —restricted the verdict to that count. Semble, (1) that if it had appeared that defendant who issued the warrant was liable in case only, and malice of some special kind personal to himself, in which his co-defendant was not and could not be a partaker, had been proved, a joint action would not lie against both. (2) That one defendant might have been convicted in trespass and the other in case. Friel v. Ferguson, 15 C. P. 584.

Justification-General Issue.]-A defendant successarily entitled to a verdict on the general issue. Scott v. Vance, 9 U. C. R. Liquidated Damages — Actual Damages.]—The plaintiff being entitled to recover on a count claiming liquidated damages:— Held, that there must be a verdict for the defendant on the other count, on which the jury had assessed the actual damage sustained. McPhee v. Wilson, 25 U. C. R. 169.

TRIAL.

Money Counts — Never Indebted—Payment—Distributive Pleas.]—In an action on the common counts, the pleas of nunquam indebitatus and payment are distributive, and a verdict may be entered on these issues for so much of the amount sued for as the plaintiff fails to recover. Such a verdict may not be proper in every case. In this case the substantial question at the trial was the plainsubstantial question at the trial was the piantifis' right to a sum of $410, which the jury found for defendants, but the plaintiffs had a verdict for a sum of $20, which defendants never had disputed, and had, as they asserted, unintentionally omitted to pay. Under these circumstances a verdict was entered in defendants' favour for the residue. Hope v. Stewart, 35 U. C. R. 89.

Restriction to Good Counts.]-Semble, where one of several counts is defective, and a general verdict is rendered, an application to restrict the verdict to the good counts, when it depends on the application of the evidence to the different counts, should be made to the Judge who tried the cause, Manning v. Rossin, 3 C. P. 89.

Set-off-Nonsuit.]-Semble, that a defendant, though the plaintiff be nonsuited or have a verdict against him on the other issues, may have his set-off found and a verdict entered for it, for he has an independent right to judgment for his claim, which the plaintiff cannot defeat by nonsuit. Parsons v. Crabb. 31 U. C.

Several Damages.]-Held, that, upon the evidence given in this case, a jury might assess several damages on each of the three counts; the first two being for assault and imprisonment on different days; and the third for malicious prosecution. Appleton v. Lep-per, 20 C. P. 138.

- Entry of General Verdict.]-Where there were several counts, for different causes of action, on which the jury gave separate damages, but the verdict was entered generally for the whole amount assessed, the court confirmed the finding as to the counts on which named the hidding as to the counts on which the plaintiff was entitled to recover, and dir-ected a new trial as to the others. Ainslie v. Ray, 21 C. P. 152.

Trespass -- Pleas -- Consistency.]-A defendant in trespass failing upon an issue arising out of a plea of liberum tenementum, may nevertheless consistently hold a verdict upon another issue denying the close to be the plaintiff's. McNeil v. Train, 5 U. C. R. 91.

See Decrow v. Tait, 25 U. C. R. 188, post 7.

5. Several Defendants.

Joint Contract-Nonsuit as to one Decontract—Aonsut as to one De-fendant,—The plaintiffs charged the defend-ants upon a joint contract. One defendant allowed judgment by default; the plaintiffs at the trial got a verdict against him, and elected to be nonsuited as to the others:-Held, that the plaintiffs, suing the defendants on a joint contract, could not have a verdict against one and be nonsuited as to the others, and that the verdict must be set aside. Commercial Bank v. Hughes, 3 U. C. R. 361.

Held, that a nonsuit as to some of the defendants in a joint action of assumpsit is a nonsuit as to all, and a verdict returned for some of the defendants is null and void. S. C., 4 U. C. R. 167.

Joint Duty—Non-performance.]—Semble, that when a tort alleged is the non-performance of a joint duty, and the joint duty be not proved, the plaintiff must fall in toto. Woods v. County of Wentworth, 6 C. P. 101.

Negligence—Carriers of Passengers.]—In an action against four, the declaration stated that defendants were proprietors of a stage coach for carrying passengers; that they received the plaintiff as a passenger for reward; and by reason thereof it became and was their duty to use due care in conveying him; yet they, not regarding their duty, did not use due care. &c., but by reason of the carelessness and improper conduct of the defendants, by their ant, he was thrown off and injured, &c .: -Held, that upon this declaration a verdict might be given against three of the defendants, and for the other. Gunn v. Dickson, 10 U. C.

Trespass—Scparate Damages.] — Held, affirming the judgment in 25 U. C. R. 20, that it was no ground for a new trial in an action of trespass against two defendants, that the jury had found separate damages, $800 against one defendant, and $400 against the other. Quere, as to the proper mode of entering judgment on such verdict. Clissold v. Machell, 20 U. C. R. 422.

See Friel v. Ferguson, 15 C. P. 584, ante 4.

6. Subject to Opinion of Court.

Entry of Judgment-Motion to Set aside —Laches.] — Where a verdict was rendered for the plaintiff in ejectment, subject to points reserved, and without any argument of the points, the plaintiff entered judgment and took possession of the land in dispute, the court refused to interfere and set the judgment aside after a lapse of more than two years. Doe Myers v. Tolman, 1 U. C. R. 520.

Necessity for Consent.]-A verdict cannot be taken subject to the opinion of the court without the consent of both parties. In court without the consent of both parties. In this case the plaintiff sued on a replevin bond, given for a vessel, and the defendant pleaded that he had prosecuted the action without de-lay. The Judge directed the jury that on the evidence there was delay, and to find for the plaintiff, and he asked them to find separately the value of the vessel and its earnings. A verdict in accordance with this direction was then taken, subject to the opinion of the court as to the true measure of damages. Defend-ant's counsel, not having assented to this course, moved against the verdict, and declined to argue the case when set down on the paper by the plaintiff:—Held, that the verdict must be set aside, and that no judgment could be given on the special case. Bieteher v. Burn, 24 U. C. R. 124. Sec. Woodruff v. Canada Guarantee Co., 8

P. R. 532.

Power of Court.] — See Creighton v. Chittick, 7 S. C. R. 348.

Question of Fact-New Trial.]-At the trial, a verdict was taken for the plaintiff, subject to the opinion of the court whether the subject to the opinion of the court whether the defendants were liable, with power to draw inferences of fact. The court declined to assume the functions of a jury, in deter-mining, upon evidence wholly circumstantial, whether money had been stolen, and directed a new trial with costs to abide the event, Bickle v. Mathewson, 26 U. C. R. 137.

7. Trial de Novo.

General Verdict - Defective Counts.]-To a declaration containing six counts, each charging defendant with having accused the plaintiff of misappropriation of moneys inplaintiff of misappropriation of moneys in-trusted to him as trustee, defendant pleaded not guilty, only; and the jury gave a general verdict for $400. On motion for a new trial, the substantial ground being that the verdict was general, while some of the counts were defective: — Held, that, if so, the proper course would not be a new trial but a trial de nove, which might be ordered on motion for a new trial; but held, that each count disclosed a sufficient cause of action, for each set forth a charge made by the defendant that the plaintiff had made by the defendant that the plaintiff had committed a misdemenaour, within C. S. U. C. e. 92, s. 51. Decow v. Tait, 25 U. C. R. 188.

See Owens v. Purcell, 11 U. C. R. 390; Wills v. Carman, 14 A. R. 656.

S. Other Cases.

Agreement of Parties-Verdict of Judge -Judgment.]—On error from a county court, it appeared by the record that after issue joined a ven. fac. was awarded, and then Joined a ven, Inc. was awarded, and then the postea stated an agreement by the parties to leave the case to the Judge, the decision to be looked upon as the verdict of a jury. After-wards it was entered that "the said Judge has determined, and the court is of the opinion and has ordered," that the defendant should and has ordered," that the defendant should pay to the plaintiff a sum named. Then followed an entry of judgment for that sum and costs:—Held, that the judgment was erroneous, for no verdict was directed or entered to support it. Quere, whether the Judge could direct a verdict. Jones v. Smith, 23 U. C. B. ASS. C. R. 485.

the verdict was rendered, the defendant's counsel, on being informed by his client that he would not agree to pay these costs, repudiated the agreement, so far as such costs were con-cerned:—Held, that the defendant was entitled before the verdict was recovered to so repudiate, and having done so as to the chancery costs, the plaintiff, having taken his verdict with express notice of such repudiation, could not afterwards compel defendant to carry out that part of the agreement. Brown v. Blackwell, 26 C. P. 43. See Solicitor, IV. 1.

Dispersal—Waiver.]—Where a jury were allowed to disperse without arriving at a verdict, but, or reassembling in the jury box next morning, were treated by Judge and counsel as the same jury, and being interrogated declared themselves agreed upon one of several issues in the action, but not upon the others, and the Judge recorded their verdict on the one issue, and discharged them:— Held, that all irregularities in regard to the dispersal over night had been waived, and the issue upon which the jury had agreed must upon any further prosecution of the litigation be regarded as having been fully disposed of by the verdict. Coleman v. City of Toronto, 23 O. R. 345.

Interest on Verdict.] - In an action against the sureties of an absconding assignee in insolvency, on the assignee's bond to the Oueen under the statute, a verdict was entered at the trial for $800, subject to a legal question, which was afterwards decided in favour of the plaintiff. It was agreed by the parties that, in case of such a decision, the amount for which the verdict should be en-tered was $700:—Held, that the verdict was not for a debt or sum certain within R. S. O. 1877 c. 50, s. 269, and that it should not carry interest from its entry. Woodruff v. Canada interest from its entry. W. Guarantee Co., 8 P. R. 532.

Irregularity in Verdict—Setting aside—Costs.]—In this case the verdict, though irregularly obtained, was set aside without costs, as defendant's attorney had not raised the objection upon which the verdict was set aside until after it had been obtained, and his conduct was wanting in candour in not drawing attention to such objections to the drawing attention to such objections to the procedure as he intended to insist upon until the day before the trial, although he might have done so some two months before. Verdict on Opening - Appeal-Demurrer.]—There was a demurrer to the replicafendant on the plaintiff's opening, from which the plaintiff appealed. Remarks as to the inconvenience of an appeal under such circumstances. Sheriff v. McCoy, 27 U. C. R. 597.

Verdict Subject to Reference-Setting vertiest Subject to Reference—Setting aside.]—Where a formal verdict was entered at the trial, subject to a reference, upon which no award was made:—Held, that, reading s, 28 of the Judicature Act, 1881, with ss, 281 and 282 of R. S. O. 1877 c. 30, a single Judge in court had power to set aside the verdict. Hood v. Harbour Commissioners of Toronto, 33 U. C. R. 148, specially referred to. Cooper v. Central Ontario R. W. Co., 4 O. R. 280. See Moulson v. Eyre, 5 U. C. R. 470; Kelly v. Henderson, 3 P. R. 198.

XVII. MISCELLANEOUS CASES,

Commission to Hold Assizes-Powers of Lieuteant-Governor, — Semble, that the lieutenant-governor of Ontario, as well as the governor-general, has the power to issue commissions to hold courts of assize. Regina v. Amer, 42 U. C. R. 391.

Good Friday - Dies non Juridicus.] -Good Friday — Dics non Juridicus.] — The evidence at the trial of this action not being concluded before the close of the day preceding Good Friday, the Judge, counsel consenting and the jury desiring it, adjourned the court to the following day, when be deli-vered his charge and received the verdict, on which he entered judgment:—Held, that it was competent for him to do so. The only day on which no judicial act can be done in this Province is the Lord's day, or Sunday. Other statutory holidays are not dies non juridici in this sense. Foster v. Toronto R. W. Co., 31 O. R. 1.

Jurisdiction — Objection — Waiver.] Semble, that where objection has been taken to the jurisdiction of the court, and the party objecting thereto has afterwards proceeded to a trial upon the merits, he should be held to have waived proof of those preliminary condinave waved proof of those preliminary condi-tions which give the court jurisdiction, if it shall appear subsequently, upon his moving against the verdict, that those conditions had in truth been complied with. Regina v. Essery, 7 P. R. 290.

Motion to Reopen Trial-Affidavit.] An application was made after the hearing and argument of the cause, but before judg-ment, for the defendants to be allowed to file as part of the record certain affidavits to sup-port their case by additional evidence in respect of a matter upon which evidence had been given by both sides. It was open to been given by both sides. It was open to the defendants to have moved for leave for such purpose before the hearing was closed, but no leave was asked. It also appeared that the affidavits had been based upon some experiments which had not been made on behalf of the defendants until after the hearing:— Held, that the application must be refused. Humphrey v. The Queen and DeKuyper v. Van Dulken, Audette's Ex. C. Pr. 276, dis-tinguished. General Engineering Co. of Ontario v. Dominion Cotton Mills Co., 6 Ex. C. R. 306.

Motion to Set aside Proceedings-Motion to Set aside Proceedings— Verdict pending—Plevaling—Merits.]—Where, pending a motion to set aside proceedings for irregularity, the defendant pleaded, in conse-quence of which the plaintiff proceeded to trial, the court refused to set aside the ver-dict, or otherwise to interfere, though no defence made, no actual merits being disclosed on affidavit. Right to Trial of Issue.]—Where issue had been taken on an equitable plea, which it was contended shewed no defence:—Held, that, at all events, the plaintiff having taken issue upon it, the defendant was entitled to have the issue tried, Walter v. Dexter, 34 U. C. R. 426.

 - (a) Landlord and Tenant.

Removal of Shop Fittings.]—The tenant of a mortgagor holding under a lease for years, during his term attorned to the mortgages, and after the term had expired continued to hold the premises from the mortgagees as yearly tenant. When his tenancy caused he claimed from them certain shelves and boxes with which he had fitted up a shop on the premises during his lease from the mortgagor, and which were not fixtures, and for which, upon the mortgagees' refusal to part with their possession, he brought trover:—Heid, that the action was maintainable. Denholm v. Commercial Bank, 1 U. C. R. 359.

Rent—Distress off Premises.]—Part of the plaintiff's goods having been distrained for rent off the premises:—Held, that he might recover their value either in trespass or trover, Huskinson v. Laurence, 26 U. C. R. 570.

(b) Tenants in Common, Joint Tenants, and Co-oveners.

Crops—Harvesting—Parting with Possession.] — H., by agreement with defendant, planted sixteen and a half acres of defendant's land with Indian corn and other crops, the agreement being that H. was to do all the work, and defendant to receive for his share as much Indian corn as should represent the portion of the land sown with sugar corn and potatoes, and one-third of the Indian corn, and that H. was to have the remainder. Subsequently. H., being indebted to the plaintiff on a note, sold his interest in the growing crop to the plaintiff, the price being allowed on the note. At a later period H. executed a bill of sale of the crop to the defendant, who afterwards claimed the entire crop as his own, and harvested it:—Held, that H. and defendant were tenants in common of the crop of Indian corn; that one tenant in common cannot maintain trespass or trover against his co-tenant for merely reaping and harvesting the crop; but he may, if his co-tenant has consumed the crop, or dealt with it so that he cannot retake it or pursue his remedies against the persons who have possession of it; and that, under the circumstances of the case, the court might assume, after verdiet for the plaintiff, in the absence of any question raised on the point, that such events had happened as entitled the plaintiff to maintain his action against the defendant for conversion. Brady V. Arnold, 19 C. P. 42. See, also, Culver v. Macklem, 11 U. C. R. 513.

Removal of Chattel to Foreign Country.]—An action for conversion of his interest in a chattel lies by one tenant in common against his co-tenants in common is destroyed by them, or so dealt with by them as, in effect, to put an end to his rights. In this case the removal of a brick-making machine to a foreign country was held sufficient to support the right of action, the plaintiff's power of enforcing his rights in the courts of this Province being thus interfered with. McIntoh V. Port Huron Petrified Brick Co., 27 A. R. 262.

Sale—Deprivation of Co-owner,]—One tenant in common of chattels may maintain trover against the other for a sale of the property, where such sale is plainly intended not for the objects of the joint owners, such as to pay partnership debts, &c., but to deprive the other owner of all interest in the property or proceeds. The defendant, after the death of A. with whom he had worked and stocked a farm in partnership, sold the stock and crops on the farm, and threatened to go off with the money, unless the plaintiff (A.'s administratrix) would settle with him on his own terms. After action brought he applied part of the proceeds towards payment of the debts, but until then he had never pretended that the sale was made with that object. The court being left to draw inferences of fact:—Held, that such sale was a conversion, and that the plaintiff might maintain trover. Rathwell v. Rathwell & U. C. R. 179.

A sale by one joint owner of property does not amount, as against his co-owner, to a conversion unless the property is destroyed by such sale or the co-owner is deprived of all beneficial interest. Rourke v. Union Insurance Co., 23 S. C. R. 344.

— Market Overt.]—One of two joint tenants of a chattel is not liable in trover at the suit of his co-tenant for a sale of his chattel not in market overt. McNabb v, Howland, 11 C. P. 434.

Sheriff—Execution against Co-tenant.]—A tenant in common of goods, which have been sold under an execution against his co-tenant, cannot maintain trover against the sheriff to recover the value of his share. Ecclestone v. Jarvis, 1 U. C. R. 370.

See Keith v. McMurray. 27 C. P. 428; Doupe v. Stewart, 28 U. C. R. 192, post (c).

(c) Other Persons.

Attaching Creditor—Seizure — Claim—Notice — Demand.] — Defendant, having a claim against one R, sued out an attachment from a division court, under which he directed the bailiff to seize certain goods in the house where R, was living with the plaintiff, and he was present when such seizure was made. The goods were placed by the bailiff in the custody of the clerk of the division court, in whose possession they continued until the bringing of this action:—Held, that, as the goods were seized in the possession of the defendant in the attachment, an action of detinue could not be maintained against this defendant, even admitting the goods to have been all the time under his absolute control, without shewing that the plaintiff had made him acquainted with her claim, and demanded to have them given up. Clark v. Orr. 11 U. C. R. 436.

Carriers—Wrongiul Delicery—Damages.]
—The plaintiffs, nurserymen in Toronto, sent by the Grand Trunk R, W. Co., 14 packages of trees, addressed to their own order, to Cobden. a station on defendants' line of railway, receiving the usual shipping note issued by the Grand Trunk Co. The goods were delivered by that company to defendants in the ordinary course, and carried to Cobden. They were intended for one S, there, who had agreed to purchase them from the plaintiffs, but the plaintiffs required payment from him before delivery. Several telegrams passed between S, the station master, and the plaintiffs; and the station master, and the plaintiffs; and the station master, the plaintiffs of the packages to the station master. He had to the partial of the packages of the packages and the station of the packages of the packages and the plaintiffs of the packages of the packages thus wrongfully delivorer for the packages thus wrongfully delivorer for the packages thus wrongfully delivered carry was with the Grand Trunk Co. only. It was insisted by the plaintiffs that S. was to pay them $1,000, including a former claim, before obtaining these trees, and that they had lost the same by defendants 'wrongfull delivery; — Held, that, upon the evidence, there was no ground for giving more than the value of the trees wrongfully delivered, and interest — the ordinary measure of damages. Leelie v. Canada Central R. W. Co., 44 U. C.

Collector of Taxes—Seizure under Illegal Warrant—Person in Charge.] — Replevin for horses. Pleas, justifying the taking under a warrant for school taxes, and alleging that they were delivered by the collector to defendant, an innkeeper, to take care of until the sale. Replication, setting out facts to shew the rate illegal, and averring that the plaintiff, after seizure of the goods, at the request of the collector and trustees, gave his note for a sum named (not saying that it was the amount due by him), payable to bearer, which was accepted in satisfaction of the taxes:—Held, replication bad; for the collector, acting under a warrant illegal on the face of it, would not be liable in trespass or trover, and therefore not in this action, nor the defendant for taking the horses from him to keep. Spry v. McKenzie, 18 U. C. R. 161.

Executor of Married Woman—Will—Consent of Husband]—In trover against defendant for the conversion of certain personal property bequeathed by testatrix, a married woman, to the plaintift, in trust for her children, and appointing the plaintiff executor, the defendant claimed the property by gift inter vivos from testatrix, and on such gift being disproved, he, amongst other objections,urged that the will was invalid on the ground of the absence of the husband's consent. The testatrix, who was living apart from her husband, died in possession of the property; there was no plea on the record denying the plaintiff's status as vaceutor; the husband had never interposed, nor did defendant defend under the husband's right:—Held, under these circumstances, that it was not open to the defendant to raise the objection. Municipal Corporation — Liability for Acts of Collector of Tares. — Section 126 of the Assessment Act, 32 Viet. c. 6 (O.), directs that when the county treasurer is satisfied that there is distress upon any lands of non-tendent in accounty treasurer is satisfied to the county of the county seal, being the corporate seal; "and the seal bore the same form, emblem, legend, &c., as the county seal. The collector sold the plain-tiff's goods under it, but it was not shewn to have been authorized by the county council, nor had they received the proceeds of the sale: —Held, that they were not liable in trespass or trover. Snider v. County of Frontenac, 30 U. C. R. 275.

Next Friend — Estoppel,] — In trover, where plaintiff sued by his mother as his next friend, the court held that the latter by allowing herself to be made guardian for bringing the suit, did not waive any right that she might have had to the goods sued for, and that the consent of the mother to become prochein ami was no legal estoppel on her. Barker v. Tabor, 50 9, 8, 570.

Partner — Work and Labour—Book.]— The plaintiff, having compiled a book, caused it to be printed by a firm consisting of himself and defendant, on paper furnished by them; and defendant having refused to give up to him the copies thus printed, he brought trover:—Semble, that he could not recover, for the property belonged to the firm, and defendant had as much right to retain as the plaintiff to take it. Doupe v. Stewart, 28 U. C. R. 192.

Public Officer—Seizure of Lumber—Tender.]—Trover lies against a lock-keeper on the Rideau canal for refusing to deliver up lumber seized and detained by him under the provisions of the Rideau Canal Act t S Geo. IV. c. 1), for obstructing the navigation, on a tender of the charges occasioned by such seizure and the removal of the obstruction. Gould v. Jones, 3 O. S. 53.

Purchaser — Contract — Husband and Wite—Purites.]—Where, in trover for goods, with a count for refusing to convey them, it appeared that the contract was made between the plaintiff and defendant, for the sale by the latter to the former, but the land on which the works and machinery were was conveyed to the plaintiff's wife, whose property was conveyed to the defendant as part consideration:—Held, that the plaintiff, and not his wife, was the proper person to sue. Filschie v., Hogg, 35 U. C. R. 94.

Purchaser at Sheriff's Sale—Attorney for Execution Creditor—Joint Action.]—A joint action of trover is maintainable against the purchaser of goods at sheriff's sale, and the attorney for the plaintiff, who indemnifies the sheriff for the sale, by a person whose goods have been illegally taken as the goods of the execution debtor. Kirby v. Cahill, 6 O. S. 510.

2. For What Articles.

(a) Decds.

Bond—Scal—Damages.] — Trover may be maintained against the obligor in a bond for securing the fidelity of a clerk, the obligor having torn off his seal. (and this although the bond might be considered as still subsisting and sufficient to sustain an action of debt,) and damage may be recovered against the obligor to the amount of the penalty. Bank of Upper Canada v, Widmer, 2 O. S. 222.

Debentures—Condition — Non-fulfilment—Escrove.]—Detinue for an indenture of bargain and sale. Pleas: (1) Non detinet. (2) That the deed was not the plaintiff's. The jury found that the indenture was delivered by one A. to the defendant, to be delivered to the plaintiff after A's death, on condition that he (the plaintiff) should keep A. until his death, and should pay his debts; and that the plaintiff had not maintained A., but after his death was ready to pay his debts:—Held, that the plaintiff could not recover; for the writing, being delivered to the defendant merely as an eserow, was not in fact a deed as described in the declaration, and the plaintiff had forfeited his right by a breach of one of the conditions. Reynolds v. Waddell, 12 U. C. R. 9.

Detention by Agent of Grantor.]— Detinue for a conveyance of land bought by the plaintiff from one G.:—Held, that, upon the facts and evidence set out in this case, defendant was not shewn to have been acting otherwise throughout than as the agent of G.; that the deed was in defendant's hands simply as G.'s agent, and the detention was not defendant's act; that if this question had been left to the jury they ought to have found for defendant; and a new trial was ordered. Parker v. Stevens, 12 C. P. Sl.

Fee Simple—Damages.]—Trover may be brought for a deed passing a fee simple; but damages can only be given to the extent of the value of the land mentioned in the deed at the time of or subsequent to its conversion. Burr v. Munro. 6 O. S. 57.

that he had refused to give them up on payment of the money advanced, claiming a further sum due by the plaintiff for board. A verdict having been found for the full value of the articles, it was shewn upon affidavits that before the trial the defendant had obtained execution against the plaintiff for this sum in a division court, under which the bailiff, by the plaintiff's directions, had seized this watch and chain in the defendant's possession; and that, to prevent their being sold, the plaintiff bad procured some one to advance the money on being allowed to retain them as security:—Held, that this action should not have been proceeded with, and a new trial was ordered, without costs, unless the plaintiff would reduce his verdict to nominal damages; and that he should in either case pay the costs of this application. Johnson v. Lamb. 13 U. Lamb, 14 U. Lamb, 15 U. Lam Possession—Parting with.]—Detinue is maintainable though defendant had not the goods when action brought; it is sufficient if he once had, and improperly parted with them. Mathers v. Lynch, 28 U. C. R., 354.

Sale of Goods—Servant—Want of Authoritw—Detention.]—The plaintiff's servant, one O., being in charge of his horses, sold one, without the plaintiff's authority, to the defendant's wife, who had the management of defendant's business, receiving $20 in cash, and defendant's note for $55, payable to O. Afterwards, meeting O., the plaintiff got from him the note, and $17 in cash. The plaintiff demanded the horse from defendant's wife, and offered her the note and the $17, which, however, she did not take. He then brought detinue:—Held, that the plaintiff was entitled to recover; for that he was not bound to tender to defendant the note and the money he had received, nor could defendant retain the horse until he obtained them, at all events without giving notice that he would do so, after first demanding them. Morton v. Stone, 30 U. C. R. 158.

II. Conversion.

1. Claim of Lien.

Carriers — Freight—Storage—Tender.]—A cargo of coal was consigned to B., and the master of the vessel refused to deliver it unless the freight was prepaid, which B. in his turn refused, but offered to pay it ton by ton as delivered. By direction of the owner's agent the coal was taken out of the vessel and stored, whereupon B. tendered the amount of the freight and demanded it, but the agent still refused to deliver unless the cost of storage was paid. In trover against the master: —Held, that the refusal of the agent after tender of the full freight was a conversion of the cargo for which trover would lie. Held, also, that an action ex delicto for breach of duty in not delivering the coal according to the bill of lading would not lie. Winchester v. Busby, 16 S. C. R. 336.

Innkeeper — Special Agreement.]—The plaintiffs, owning a line of stages, entered into a special agreement with defendant, an innkeeper, for the stabling and feed of their horses. Some dispute arose as to the defendant's charges, and ascertaining that the plaintiffs intended to remove their horses to another inn he refused to let them go:— Held, that defendant had no right of lien, as the plaintiffs were not guests, but employed defendant in the character of a livery stable keeper, and under a special agreement which gave him no continuing right of possession. Held, also, that a conversion was sufficiently proved. Discon v. Dalby, 11 U. C. R. 79.

Warehouseman — Tender,]—Held, that the mere fact of a warehouseman, who has a lien on goods for a certain sum for storage, claiming also to hold them for an untenable him. For money alleged to be due either to make the control of the control of Bona Fide Doubt-Temporary Refusal-Round Fide Doubt—Temporary Request— Reasonableness. — Plaintiffs had a large quan-tity of wheat in the warehouse of one T., for which they held his receipt, and defendants also held T.'s receipt for wheat in the same place, on which they had made advances; but there was not enough wheat to satisfy both. T., having left the country, gave R., defendants' agent, a letter to C., who was in charge of the warehouse, directing him to give R possession of the warehouse and all grain in it belonging to him, T. On receiving this letter C. gave R. the key, went with him to the warehouse and pointed out T.'s wheat, and received back the key, agreeing to hold and received oack the key, agreeing to hold possession. On the same day R. again got the key to go into the place with one M., and again returned it to C., who said he considered he still had possession of the store, and that he would not have given up the wheat to the plaintiffs if R. had so directed him. Plaintiffs demanded their wheat from R. who, as they alleged, answered, "I won't do so at present," but almost immediately afterwards as they alleged, answered, "I won't do so at present," but almost immediately afterwards defendants' attorney served a written dis-claimer on the plaintiffs, informing them that defendants disclaimed all possession of the storehouse and wheat therein. On the same day the plaintiffs brought trover:-Held, assuming the facts most favourably for the plaintiffs, that it should have been left to the jury to say whether R, entertained a bona fide doubt as to plaintiffs' right to the wheat, and whether a reasonable time had elapsed for clearing it up; and quære, whether the facts could legally suffice to establish a conversion. Gilpin v. Royal Canadian Bank, 27 U. C. R.

per sum agreed on, viz., $875; $225 to be allowed for E.'s portable engine and boiler, and $635 to be paid on shipment; but, if not settled for in cash or notes within twenty days, then the whole amount to become due order not to be countermanded, and until payment the machinery to be at E.'s risk, which he was to insure, and on demand was to assign the policy to the plaintiffs, and the title thereof was not to pass out of plaintiffs, E. agreeing not to sell or remove the same with-out the plaintiffs' consent in writing. On default in payment the plaintiffs could enter and take and remove the machinery, and E. agreed to deliver same to plaintiffs in like good order and condition as received, save ordinary wear and tear, and to pay expenses of removal. Any notes or other security given by E. for his indebtedness to be collateral thereto. The machinery was put up in a mill on premises leased, with right to purchase, by defendant D. to E.'s wife for one or five years from 11th March, 1883, E.'s wife died on the 23rd October, 1883, and by her will appointed E. sole executor, giving him power to sell or dispose of any property to which testatrix was or might be entitled. E. by deed of 27th April, 1885, demised and re-leased to D. all the right, title, and interest in the premises as well of himself as also as executor, together with the mill built thereon, with the boiler and engine, &c., and on the same day D. leased the said premises, mill, and machinery, to E. for one year. After the execution of this lease D. mortgaged the land, mill, and machinery to the defendants the F. loan society. The defendant E. never paid any cash, but gave his promissory note at three months, which was renewed from time to time, but ultimately. E. having failed to pay same, the plaintiffs demanded the machinery, when D, notified plaintiffs not to remove same, as also did the society:—Held, that the effect of the transaction was, that the property was in the plaintiffs, and that they were entitled thereto; and that there was an illegal de-tention by the defendants D. and E. amount-ing to a conversion; and that the F. loan society, by having notified plaintiffs not to remove the machinery, were proper parties to the suit to give plaintiffs full relief; and that, unless defendants allowed plaintiffs to remove the machinery on demand, the plaintiffs were entitled to recover $650 with interest, being the price of the machinery; and that, upon removal of the engine and boiler, the sum of $800 for repairs should be paid by plaintiffs to D. to be repaid to plaintiffs by E. Polson v. Degeer, 12 O. R. 275.

Effect of Demand—Agreement,]—Defendant signed a memorandum, certifying that he had agreed to deliver to plaintiff certain furniture in his possession purchased by plaintiff of one L, part of which he was to finish as soon as possible:—Held, that on proof of demand and refusal the plaintiff was entitled to recover in trover. White v. Batty, 23 U. C. R. 487.

—Promissory Notes.]—Held, under the facts of this case, that trover and detinue would lie for the four notes in question, the evidence shewing that they were demanded from defendant and his solicitors, who refused to give them up, though they had been paid. Walsh v, Brown, 18 C. P. 60.

Evidence of Detention.]—The plaintiff was executor of H. D., widow of T. D., whose executor the defendant was. The plaintiff claimed a piano in the house lately occupied by the widow, of which the defendant had the key. At an interview between the plaintiff and defendant the latter claimed the piano, but said he was willing to leave the question of the ownership to a person to be named. The plaintiff left him, promising to write, and afterwards did write, saying he had decided to bring the matter before the proper court. Subsequently the plaintiff's solicitor wrote the defendant offering to release all demands, upon the defendant giving up all claim to the piano, to which the defendant's solicitor answered that he could not comply with the demand. The defendant commenced an action in which the title to the piano would come in question. The plaintiff's solicitor having again written to ask whether possession of the piano would be given, the defendant's solicitor wrote that it was perfectly safe where it was, and that the action commenced would decide the question. He also wrote that the plaintiff would not have to put the law in motion :- Held, in an action of replevin, assuming the piano to be the plaintiff's, that there was no evidence of trespass or conversion to support the affirmative of the issue, that the defendant did not take or detain the piano. Schaffer v. Dumble, 5 O. R. 716.

Necessity for Demand-Denial after Action.]-One of the defendants was the purchaser of a piano, which she had partly paid for, under a conditional sale by which until fully paid for it was to remain the property of the vendor, but, before paying the balance due on it, she allowed the other defendant, who had acted as the vendor's agent in the sale to her, secretly to remove and take pos-session of it, he paying her the cash payment she had made. After this transaction between the defendants the plaintiff purchased from the vendor the notes given for the purchase money of the instrument, and took an assignment under seal of the property in it. In an action against the defendants for the recovery of the piano, in which no demand was proved upon the defendant in possession of the in-strument, it was objected by him that neither detinue nor trover would lie:-Held, that the plaintiff was entitled to recover damages against him for the conversion of the piano; for it was not necessary to impute the conversion to any particular period of time, and the defendant's denial after action of the plaintiff's right to the piano could be treated under tur's right to the piano could be treated under the circumstances as evidence of a conversion before action by the said defendant of the plaintiff's interest in it; and as against tech-nical objections raised by a wrongdoer the benefit of all possible presumptions should be allowed. Held, also, that it was not necessary that the yendor should be added as that the vendor should be added as a party in order to entitle the plaintiff to succeed. Blackley v. Dooley, 18 O. R. 381.

— Owner Using Contractor's Building Material and Plant.]—See Ashfield v. Edgell, 21 O. R. 195.

— Public Sale — Notice.] — Semble, where a person purchases the goods of another at public sale, a notice by the owner at such sale dispenses with the necessity of a demand and refusal to maintain trover. Haren v. Lyon, Tay, 370.

re a contermanding it—accepted part of the proceeds of the sale of the goods, he thereby adopted the sale, and could not hold the execution creditor liable for a conversion. Appleby v. Withal, S. C. P. 397.

Receipt of Proceeds.]-Defendant P., having a chattel mortgage, which did not version, if it be oral, the answer must be positive; and where an oral demand was made on defendant while driving at a distance from his house, where the property demanded was, and no answer was returned:—Held, no evidence of a conversion. McLean v. Graham, 5 O. S. 741.

Where the solicitor of the plaintiff went to the Bank of Upper Canada and demanded from the president certain boats, and the president told him he had no answer to give, and referred him to the solicitor of the bank, and referred min to the solicitor of the bank, who told him that he was not authorized to give any answer:—Held, sufficient evidence of a demand and refusal to support trover. McDonell v. Bank of Upper Canada, 7 U. C. R.

The plaintiff had quitted possession of defendant's farm, of which he had been the tenant, though his term had not expired, and there had been no legal surrender of it, but he had given notice of his intention to go, and defendant, it appeared, was willing to get and detendant, it appeared, was willing to get rid of him. Having removed a portion of his goods, he subsequently returned for some more of them, which were locked up in a barn on the place, or which he had the key, and, finding the outer gate of the farm locked, he went to defendant, who was close by, and requested him to open it, and allow him to enter and get his goods, but defendant refused either to open the gate or to allow plaintiff on the farm, and, although defendant did not in express terms refuse to give up possession of the goods, the jury found that such was his intention, and that the plaintiff so understood him:— Held, that this was not sufficient to constitute a conversion of the goods by the defendant so as to support an action of trover, and therefore replevin would not lie. Smalley v. Gallagher, 26 C. P. 531.

Unreasonable Demand-Effect of.]-A. lent a horse to B. for a special purpose, and, while B. was using him consistently with such lending, the horse was accidentally hurt, and consequently left at a public stable, of which consequently left at a pulme statice, of which B. gave A. immediate notice. A., having seen the horse, refused to take him, and went to B.'s residence (20 miles from where the horse was left), and demanded him back sound as received:—Held, that B.'s non-delivery of the horse after being thus demanded did not furnish evidence of a conversion, and that A. could not sustain trover. Wells v. Crew, 5 O. S.

See Keith v. McMurray, 27 C. P. 428; Moffatt v. Grand Trunk R. W. Co., 15 C. P. 302; Winchester v. Busby, 16 S. C. R. 336, ante 1; Guuhan v. St. Lauxence and Ottavea R. W. Co., 29 C. P. 102, 3 A. R. 392, post 5; Heffernan v. Berry, 32 U. C. R. 518, post 5.

3. Sale. Adoption of-Interpleader.]-Held, that where the claimant, under an interpleader or-der—after first directing a sale, and then coun-cover the piano in question, authorized A., as his bailiff, to sell the goods mortgaged, and A. was also authorized by the landlord of the mortgagor to distrain for arrears of rent. Unmortgagor to distrain for arrears of rent. Under the distress warrant A. seized and advertised the piano, but was directed by the landlord not to sell it. A. applied to P. as to the sale of the piano; P. referred him to his attorney; and A. afterwards sold it, and paid the proceeds to P., who had knowledge of all the facts, and who, A. said, had indemnified him :—Held, that P. was liable with A. 50 U. C. R. 51.

Authority-Price.]-Where defendant received two horses from the plaintiff to sell at a certain price, and without his assent or authority sold them for a less price:—Held. that he was liable in trover for the difference, the unauthorized sale being a conversion. Priestman v. Kendrick, 3 O. S. 66.

Bill of Sale-Interference-Receiver.]-Held, that the defendant could not be made liable for a conversion of the goods in question, by reason of his having joined in a bill of sale of them, and having accepted and assigned a mortgage for the balance of purchase money thereof: no other act of interference on his part with the goods being shewn, they never having been in his possession or control, and he never having had the power to deliver up or retain them so as to make a demand upon and refusal by him evidence of a conversion; he having acted in such sale of the goods as the agent and by the authority of another only. The plaintiff J. I. D. could not maintain an action for the conversion of the property in question; for, assuming that it was the property of those under whom he claimed, which was one of the matters in controversy, it did not become vested in him until after the alleged conversion; neither could J. D. maintain the action, he never hav-ing had the actual possession of the property, ing nat the actual possession of the property, but a mere right as receiver appointed by the court to obtain the custody if it belonged to those whom he represented, which would not support the action, though it might form the ground of a special application to the court for amandamus or attachment or other ap-articles of the custom of the custom of the custom properties. Dickey v. McCau, 14 A. R.

Distress for Rent-Jus Tertii-Damages.]—In an action for wrongful distress for rent before it was due, there was no allegation in the statement of claim that the ac-tion was brought upon 2 W. & M., sess, 1, c. 5, s. 5, nor that the goods distrained were "sold," but merely an allegation that the de-"soid," but merely an anegation that the same fendant "sold and carried away the same and converted and disposed thereof to his own use;" nor was a claim made for double the value of the goods distrained and sold, within the terms of the statute :- Held, that the acthe terms of the statute:—Held, that the ac-tion was the ordinary action for conversion, and that the value, and not the double value, of the goods distrained was recoverable. Held, of the goods distrained was recoverance. Head, also, that a wrongdoor taking goods out of the possession of another, cannot set up the jus tertil, but the person out of whose possession the goods are taken, may shew it, and in such case the wrongdoor may take advantage of it; and the plaintiff, having shewn a chattel mortgage subsisting upon a portion of the goods distrained, could not be allowed to recover the value of such portion without protecting the defendant against another ac-tion at the suit of the mortgagee. Held, also, that the plaintiff was not entitled to recover from the defendant the amount received by him from the sale of the plaintiff's goods in addition to the value thereof; nor was the defendant obliged to deduct the amount so received by him from the rent which afterwards fell due. Hoare v. Lee, 5 C. B. 754, followed. Williams v. Thomas, 25 O. R. 536.

Interference in Sale—Mayistrate—Advice.]—Cattle supposed to have been stolen are taken by A., a constable, to B., an innakeper, to feed and take care of. After some time, B., wishing to be paid for their keep, applies to C., a magistrate, who had nothing to do with the original caption, for directions. C. tells him to sell the cattle and satisfy his claim, which B. does. D., the owner of the cattle, sues C., the magistrate, in trespass:—Held, that as against the magistrate, trover, and not trespass, should have been the form of action. Semble, that under the circumstances he would not be liable to the owner of the cattle in trespass. Marsh v. Boulton, 4 U. C. R. (354.

Promissory Notes-Purchase Money of Land—Vendor's Lien—Damages.]—C., on the 20th August, 1874, sold land to one G. for $8,500, and took a mortgage on the property for $6,000, and two joint notes of G. and M. for the balance. These notes were handed by C, to defendant to keep for him, defendant being aware that he was in pecuniary difficulty, and a writ of attachment in insolvency issued against him on the 1st September. The plaintiff, being appointed assignee, demanded the notes from defendant, who disposed of them for C.'s benefit, with knowledge of the plaintiff's claim, and the plaintiff brought trover. It appeared that the plaintiff had filed a bill to set aside the sale of the land by C. as fraudulent, and the suit was pending at the commencement of this action, and it was proved that the makers of the notes were worthless, unless they could be said to have a vendor's lien on the land for the amount unsecured: — Held, that defendant had been guilty of a conversion of the notes, and, shewing no right or authority therefor under the makers, he could not dispute the plaintiff's right to sue, notwithstanding that the plaintiff was disputing the sale out of which they arose; but that the insolvent, having taken a mortgage on the land for part of the purchase money, had waived his vendor's lien for the remainder. The defendant having brought into court one of the notes for $1,000, about the value of the lien if it had existed, it was ordered to be delivered to the plaintiff, and a verdict for $1,000 was reduced to nominal damages. Driffill v. McFall, 41 U. C. R. 313.

Resale by Vendor before Delivery— Tender — Deposit.] — The plaintiff, having negotiated with defendant for the purchase of a pair of horses and harness from defendant for $400, naid $154 in cash, and, after some correspondence as to the time and mode of paying the balance, defendant sold the property, whereupon the plaintiff sued, declaring in a special count for not delivering the horses sold to him, and on the common counts. A verdiet on the common counts for the sum paid was sustained, on the ground that upon the evidence set out in the report it was not clear that any agreement was ever arrived at as to the terms and time of payment. Quaree, as to the plaintiff's rights, if there had been a contract. Semble, that, on tender to him of the price after the conversion by resale, the defendant on non-delivery of the goods would be liable in trover, such non-delivery being a refusal which would vest the right of action by relation; but that, at all events, the plaintiff could in some form of action recover, though perhaps not the full amount paid by him. Heliernan v, Berry, 32 U. C. R. 518.

Responsibility for Act of Agent—Scope of Duly,!—To a count in trover for plaintiff's cattle killed by defendants' negligence while being carried on their railway, and afterwards sold by their station master, defendants paid into court $52, being the price for which they were sold by the station master after they had been killed:—Held, that such payment admitted only a cause of action, not the particular cause sued for; and that the evidence proved no conversion by defendants, the sale not being the ordinary duty of a station master. O'Royke v. Great Western R. W. Co., 23 U. C. R. 427.

Sheriff -Attachment -Order of Court.]-H., on the 25th May, 1872, issued a writ of attachment against a foreign company doing business in Ontario, under which the sheriff seized certain chattels, and, on the 12th November, 1872, pursuant to an order directing him to sell, sold the chattels as being of a perishable nature. On the 11th December, 1874, H. filed a discontinuance. On the 30th May, 1876, the plaintiff began this action against the sheriff for the conversion of the chattels. the sherilf for the conversion of the chattels, alleging that the company had sold them to him, and conveyed them by a memorandum dated the 5th July, 1867, signed by an agent on behalf of the company, and sealed, but not with the company's seal. The defendant, the sheriff, pleaded that he did not convert; that the goods were not plaintiff's; not possessed; and also a special plea of justification setting forth the proceedings by H. and the attach-ment and order for sale. The plaintiff re-plied the discontinuance. The defendant reoined that the discontinuance was not filed till after the sale, and demurred because, being bound to obey the order of the court, he could not be affected by the discontinuance :-Held, that the plea of justification shewed a suffi-cient answer to the declaration; that the replication was bad; and that the defendant should have judgment on the demurrer. The sale, and not the seizure, was the conversion com-plained of, and the order of the court was a sufficient answer. McLean v. Bradley, 2 S. C. R. 535.

Execution—Goods of Stranger—Notice.]—A having on hire for a term certain goods belonging to B., defendant, as sheriff, having notice that the goods were the property of B., sold them under an execution against A:—Held, that B. could maintain rover against the sheriff, the sale by him and subsequent sale by the vendees being a complete conversion, although the goods were afterwards left in A/s possession. Morrison v. Carrall. 1 C. P. 226.

Warehoused Grain—Sale by Warehouseman,]—The plaintiff, a farmer, left 552 bushels of barley with defendant, getting a writing from defendant, acknowledging his having received it from the plaintiff in store. The plaintiff intended to sell it to defendant, but, as the market price was low, it was left with him. The defendant mixed it with other barley and sold it, dealing with it as his own,

The defendant's premises were destroyed by fire, and he having refused either to pay for the barley, or to return a similar quantity, the plaintiff sued bim in trover and on the common counts:—Held, that in any event the plaintiff must succeed, for that the defendant must be deemed either to have been guilty of a conversion in disposing of the plaintiff's barley as his own, or to have acquired the property in it. Benedict v. Ker, 29 C. P. 410.

4. Several Defendants-Joint Conversion.

Evidence — Sufficiency.]—Held, that, under the evidence set out in this case, there was ample evidence of a joint conversion. Mason v. Bickle, 2 A. R. 291.

Insolvent—Assignce—Conditional License to Creditor.]—See Francis v. Turner, 25 S. C. R. 110.

Original Wrongdoers — Person Put in Possession—Refusal to Give up.] — In trespass and trover against five defendants, for taking and converting a steam boiler, it appeared that one defendant, P., had nothing to do with the original taking, but that the boiler had been placed in his yard by the others, or by some of them, not acting in concert with him, and that he had afterwards refused to give it up to the plaintiff. At the trial, the plaintiff sounsel declined to elect, but went to the jury against all the defendants, claiming exemplary damages, and a general verdict was rendered. The court ordered a new trial without costs, and refused to allow the verdict to stand against P. alone. Menton v. Lee, 30 U. C. R. 281.

Thief—Purchaser from.]—One A. having stolen a horse sold it to B., and was afterwards tried and convicted of the felony. Upon trover brought against them for the horse:—Held, that the facts did not constitute a joint conversion, so as to maintain trover against the purchaser. Educards v. Kerr, 13 C. P. 24.

5. Other Cases.

Animal—Scisure in Execution—Sheriff—Bailiff, I—A bank placed an execution against M., the plaintiff's son, and one C., in the hands of B., a division court bailiff, under which B. seized a stallion as belonging to M., which plaintiff claimed as her property, and which, pending interpleader proceedings instituted by her, was placed with an innkeeper. Subsequently an execution by P. against the same parties was placed in the sheriff's hands. P.'s solicitor informed the sheriff of all the circumstances, and he, on the 3rd October, obtained from the innkeeper a written undertaking to keep the horse—stated to be under seizure by the sheriff—until further orders from the sheriff. On 14th October the sheriff on notice of plaintiff's claim interpleaded. On 31st October the division court interpleader was decided in the plaintiff's favour; whereupon the sheriff at once notified the innkeeper that he did not claim any further right to hold the horse. Before being so notified the plaintiff demanded the horse, but the innkeeper refused to deliver it up until his charges for keeping it were paid, but did not assert any right to hold for the sheriff. On 18th November part of the charges were paid, but it did not appear of the charges were paid, but it do not approximately whether by the bank or P; and the balance was subsequently paid by B. On the 3rd Nowmber an order was made barring P; s claim and directing the sheriff to forthwith deliver the horse to plaintiff. On 14th November this action was commenced against the bank, P., the sheriff, and the bailiff, for conversion, and disobedience of the order of the court directing redelivery, claiming the value of the horse, loss of earnings, &c. About 3rd December, after the commencement of the action, the horse was tendered to plaintiff, who refused to accept it unless damages and costs were paid. No notice of action was given:—Held, that No notice of action was given: Their, that there could be no recovery against any of the parties, for the reasons: (1) that the bailiff should have had notice of action: (2) that there was nothing to connect the bank or P. with the seizure; (3) that, though there was what constituted a seizure by the sheriff, so as to entitle him to interplead and make the inn-keeper liable if he had not kept the horse for him, the sheriff in no way interfered with the bailiff's possession or control over it, or in any way converted it to his own use, it being at the time in the custody of the law. Pardec v. Glass, 11 O. R. 275.

— User of.]—A., having been arrested at the suit of R., placed a mare in B.'s possession, on an agreement that if R. proved a demand against A., by his own oath or that of others, B. was to pay it and keep the mare till repaid. B. did pay £10, but it was not shewn that he did so in consequence of its being sworn to; and the mare remaining with him, he used her once in the plough:—Held, that such use of the mare was not a conversion, Forrester v. Spencer, 3 O. S. 47.

Debenture — Deposit of — Assent of Holder.]—Plaintiffs held certain municipal debentures for sale in London. C., an agent of the municipality, procured one for £100 from the plaintiffs, and gave it to the defendant in their presence, in order that defendant might shew it to G. & Co., a firm who defendant thought might purchase. This firm afterwards advanced £20,000 upon a deposit of £40,000 of the debentures, and agreed to sell £30,000 of them, but the sale was not made, and the plaintiffs subsequently sold those deposited with G. & Co., in order to pay off their advance. This debenture, however, which had been left by the defendant with G. & Co., when he first went to them, was overlooked, and remained in their possession. The plaintiffs having brought trover, it appeared that G. & Co. retained it, claiming commission which would have arisen to them from the sale, and a lien on it for moneys due to them by defendant, but the plaintiffs knew nothing of this, and had never applied to them for it:—Held, that defendant was not liable, for he was guilty of no conversion in placing the debentures in the hands of G. & Co. with the plaintiffs' assent, and had not interfered since, and that the plaintiffs' remedy was against G. & Co. Effect of Judicature Act.] — The old learning on the subject of "conversion" med not be imported into the system introduced by the Judicature Act, which provides for redress in case the plaintiff's goods are wrongfully detained, or in case he is wrongfully deptived of them. In all such cases the real question is, which we have been such as the property as have the property as a part of the property and the prop

Estoppel.]—Under the special facts of this case:—Held, that the plaintiff could sustain trover against defendants, and was not estoped by his assignment to the Bank of Upper Canada from treating these defendants, at least, as guilty of conversion of his property. Capiley v. McDonell, 8 U. C. R. 45:

Goods Carried for Hire-Shipment beyond Destination—Offer.]—The plaintiff, at Guelph, sold to B. & Co., at Ottawa, 65 barrels of pork, and shipped it by the Great Western Railway, the shipping receipt acknowledging the receipt of the same, addressed to the plaintiff's order at Prescott, and to notify B. & Co., Ottawa. The pork was carried by Great Western Railway and steamer Passport to Prescott, her manifest shewing a de livery there into the defendants' charge, and stating that the plaintiff was owner, and that B. & Co. were to be notified. B. & Co. were large dealers in Ottawa, and all goods for them or in which they appeared interested were, by arrangement with the defendants, sent on to Ottawa. This pork was accordingly sent on and inspected by B. & Co., who refused to accept it. The plaintiff, who was fully aware of all that had occurred, and that the pork was at Ottawa, swore that he demanded the pork from the defendants' agent at Prescott, but there was no evidence of a refusal; and it appeared that the plaintiff at the same time requested the agent to try and get B. & Co. to accept it. Before the action was brought. the defendants offered the plaintiff his pork at Prescott:—Held, affirming the judgment in 29 C. P. 102, that the asportation of the pork to Ottawa did not in itself constitute a conversion. Held, also, that there was no sufficient evidence of a demand and refusal; but semble. if there had been, trover could not be maintained after the subsequent offer to give up the pork. Gauhan v. St. Lawrence and Ot-tawa R. W. Co., 3 A. R. 392.

Goods Destroyed by Fire—Balke—Interference. —The plaintiffs, living in Southampton, having purchased goods at Montreal, directed them to be forwarded to Kingston, to the care of the schooner Regina. They were so sent in one of the mail steamers, but the captain of the Regina, being unable to wait at Kingston, directed defendants, who were forwarders there, to send them on by the same steamer to Hamilton, and thence by the railway to Sarnia, where he would take them up on his way to Southampton. Defendants, however, shipped them from Kingston by a propeller, which was burned, with the goods on board, in the river St. Clair. They had been insured to go by the Regina, but having been shipped on a different vessel, the policy was cancelled. It was held in the Queen's bench, that, on the contract for not sending as directed, defendants were liable only for nominal damages, the loss by fire being too remote, and that they were not liable in trover.

On appeal: — Held, reversing the judgment, that the defendants were liable on the contract for the value of the goods. Wallace v. Swift, 31 U. C. R. 523, 28 U. C. R. 563.

Grain—Conversion into Flour—Waiver of Tort.]—The insolvent, a miller, agreed to grind wheat for the claimants, and to quiver to them a barrel of flour of a specified quality for so many bushels of wheat, and he thus became liable to deliver to them 955 barrels of flour, as the equivalent for wheat received by him and made away with:—Held, that this was a bailment only of the wheat, which remained the claimants', to the insolvent: that such bailment was determined by the conversion of the wheat, so that the claimants might maintain trover for it either as wheat or as flour if ground; that they might waive the tort and sue for the value of the goods when they should have been delivered; and that the claim therefore was provable as being a debt within the Insolvent Act, not a claim for unliquidated damages. In re Williams and Hope, 31 U. C. R. 143.

Mortgaged Goods — Jus Tertii.] — The plaintiff mortgaged his goods to A., to whose estate the defendant was administratrix. The goods came into the possession of the defendant, but under what circumstances did not appear. The mortgage contained an agreement that on default the mortgage might take possession, and a statement that a delivery of possession was given at the time of executing the mortgage. There was no evidence that the mortgage money had been paid. The plaintiff afterwards executed three other mortgages of the same goods to other persons, each containing a similar agreement upon default, and a similar statement as to delivery of possession: —Held, that under these circumstances the plaintiff could not recover either in trover or detinue, and that the defendant might, as against him, set up the right of the other mortgageses. Ruttan v. Beamish, 10 C. P. 30.

Patent for Land—Receipt from Public Officer.] — In trover for a Crown grant:— Quere, if the defendant obtained the grant without any direction or authority from the grantee, but from the direction of some public officer to the secretary to deliver to A. such grants as he should require, would possession obtained under such order be tortious, and afford evidence of a conversion at that time? Hampson v. Boulton, 5 O. S. 23.

Promissory Notes—Receipt of by Maker—Notice of Assignment.—In trover for promissory notes against the maker, it appeared that the notes had been given by him on a purchase of land; that the payee afterwards agreed to deliver them up to him on a good consideration; that afterwards, and before their delivery, the payee assigned them by deed to the plaintiff, the notes themselves being in the possession of a third party; and that the defendant afterwards received them, having first had notice of the assignment—and no fraud having been shewn, the jury found for the defendant:—Held, that, as these facts would have constituted a good defence in an action by the payee on the notes, the verdict was right. Small v. Bennett, T. T. 3 & 4 Vict.

Relief over—Third Party—Vendor.]—In an action for the conversion of goods, the defendant may bring in the person who sold him lgment, ontract Swift, the goods as a third party, the words "any other relief over" in rule 200 being wide enough to include a claim made by the defendant against his vendor. Confederation Life Association v. Labatt (No. 2), 18 P. R. 280

Timber — Contract—Removal—Refusal of Leave.]—Defendant, by deed dated 26th September, 1870, agreed to sell to the plaintiff all the merchantable timber, &c., on the defendant's land, which the plaintiff could make by the 1st May, 1871; any timber or logs left, standing or cut, after that date, to be the property of defendant. The plaintiff made a large quantity of timber, and drew away some of it. On the 27th March, 1871, defendant orally gave him leave to let the balance of timber made by him remain on the lot till fall, if the plaintiff would not strip the lot too much; and the plaintiff would not strip the lot too much; and the plaintiff would not strip the lot too much; and the plaintiff would not strip the lot too much; and the plaintiff would not strip the lot too much; and the plaintiff was forbidden to take such made timber off, by one K., who said he had bought it, and by defendant, who, as one witness said, claimed it as his own; and the plaintiff fremeupon brought trover:—Held, that the made timber, which vested in the plaintiff as made, might properly be the subject of a parol contract with defendant, independently of the deed, and that the desistance of the plaintiff from stripping said lot before the 1st May, was a sufficient consideration for the parol agreement. Held, also, that there was evidence from which a jury might infer conversion. Heddey v. Sciessons, 33 U. C. R. 215.

— Payment for—Mistake.]—M. had a contract to supply wood to a railway company, for which he was to be paid when it had been inspected and accepted. While 152 cords were lying in the company's yard for inspection, he assigned all the wood that belonged to him, with other property, to the plaintiff for the benefit of his creditors. He at the same time made over his interest in the contract to defendant, who completed it, and the company afterwards, by mistake, paid defendant for these 152 cords, as well as for what he had himself supplied:—Held, that the plaintiff could not maintain trover, there having been no conversion by defendant. Scott v. Kedly, 17 U. C. R. 306.

Trees — Bailee — Interference—Preservation.]—The plaintiff sent to his agent, J., two boxes of trees and roots, made up in bundles addressed to various purchasers. They went by steamer to defendant, a forwarder at Powell's Landing, where they arrived on Saturday the 5th May, and were taken from the boxes by defendant, and some of them delivered to the persons to whom they were addressed, who called for them. On Wednesday a person was sent by J. to take and deliver them, and on Thursday J. himself called. Many of the trees were injured, and the evidence was contradictory as to the state in which they arrived, and as to whether this injury was caused by defendant's treatment of them, or whether it was necessary, as he alleged, to open the boxes and deliver them without delay. The plaintiff having brought trover:—Held, that, whether defendant had been guilty of negligence as a bailee or not, he had done nothing which would in law amount to a conversion. Lovekin v.
Podger, 26 U. C. R. 156.

See Spry v. McKenzie, 18 U. C. R. 161; Stoeser v. Springer, 7 A. R. 497; Ross v. Edwards, 11 R. 574. III. DAMAGES.

Measure of — Bond—Penalty.]—Trover may be maintained by the obligee against the obliger of a bond, who has wrongfully torn off his seal, and damages be recovered to the amount of the penalty. Bank of Upper Canada v. Widmer, 2 O. S. 222.

— Books—Materials—Literary Value.]
—Trover for pamblets. Plea, not guilty. On the production of one of the pamphlets sued for at the trial, the Judge in the county court directed that the plaintiff was not entitled to maintain the action because the pamphlet was a scoffing and indecent attack on Christianity, and ordered a nonsuit. On appeal:—Held, that the plaintiff held property in the materials composing the pamphlets, independently of what was printed on them, and he would have a right to be indemnified therefor. Semble, that there was a legal wrong, for which the plaintiff should have recovered something; that the Judge should have directed the jury as to the nature of works which the law protects and what it prohibits; that the Judge should have directed the pamphlets were not illegal, they should give damages for their value as a literary production; and if illegal, they should give damages to the value of the paper, &c., irrespective of the words upon it. Boucher v. Shevam, 14 C. P. 419.

— Carriers.] — Damages against railway company, on a contract to carry certain goods on their railway and connecting lines, for failure to deliver and for conversion. Worden v. Canadian Pacific R. W. Co., 13 O. R. 652.

— Deed—Detention.]—Semble, that in defining for a conveyance of land, where the plaintiff shews himself entitled to the deed, but defendant, intending to do right, has given it up to another, the damages should be left as a question for the jury under the circumstances, and should not as of course be the value of the land. Reynolds v. Waddell, 12 U. C. R. 9.

In detinue for a deed, quære, whether the plaintiff can recover damages for having been prevented by the want of it from obtaining horses to cultivate his farm. Wood v. Bewden, 23 U. C. R. 466.

— Becd—Value of Land,]—In trover for a deed passing a fee simple, the jury can only give the full value of the land at or after the conversion, as damages. Burr v. Munro, 6 O. S. 57.

Detention—Nominal Damages.]—
B. having possession of certain goods of S., S. demanded them of him on 23rd December, B. refused to allow the more bulky goods to be removed until after Christmas, on the ground that it would interfere with his own trade. On 24th December S. commenced this action for damages, on the ground of wrongful conversion and detention of the goods by B. On 26th December B. notified S. that he could remove the remainder of the goods. S. thereupon sent for them, but, finding that some of them had been seized under process of attachment out of a division court, removed the rest, and afterwards contested in the division court the ownership of those seized:—Held, that S. was entitled to damages for the detention of the goods on 23rd December, but the measure of the damages was nominal, and not the value of the goods detained. S, acted on the letter of 26th December, and there did not appear to have been any disposal of the goods in the sense of their destruction or removal adverse to the plaintiff's property, but the plaintiff was ultimately prevented from getting the goods, not because of the defendant's misconduct, but because the claim of attaching creditors intervened. Stimson v. Block, 11 O, R. 96.

Loss of Profits.]—Semble, that in trover for a vessel, the loss of profits may be recovered. Brown v. Beatty, 35 U. C. R. 328.

Loss of Profits—Timber.]—Trees cut by locatee under the Free Grant and Homesteads Act, in the actual process of cultivation, were sold to the plaintiff, a mill owner, and were seized by the defendants, the timber licensees, who also had a mill, and were taken by them thereto and cut up into lumber. It was proved that the plaintiff could not get other logs at that season of the year:—Held, that the plaintiff was entitled to the loss of profits sustained by him by being deprived of cutting the logs into lumber at his mill. Cockburn v. Muskoka Mill and Lumber Co., 13 O. R. 343.

Progeny of Animals.]—In April, 1846, certain mares, plaintiff's property, strayed to defendant's farm, who advertised them, and no owner appearing, he began to use them about a year afterwards. In July, 1846, the same mares, being supposed to be on plaintiff's pasture, were sold by the sheriff, under an execution against plaintiff, to one Scott, who never obtained possession of them, but hearing, in 1852, that they had foaled, and were in defendant's possession, made a written demand on defendant for them and their progeny in September of that year. A year afterwards S. made over his interest to the plaintiff as a gift, without consideration or any delivery taking place. In 1855 the plaintiff made a demand on defendant for the mares and their colts, which was refused. Pleas, not guilty, not possessed, and Statute of Limitations:—
Held. (1) that the conversion took place in 1847, and that the action was barred, and that the plaintiff took at the most from S. a mere right of action. (2) That the measure of damages in trover is the value of the property at the time of the conversion, and consequently that, even if the plaintiff had not been barred by the statute, he had no claim to be the owner of the animals subsequently bred from the mares. Held, also, that the gift from S. to the plaintiff in this case of certain mares, not being accompanied by delivery, did not vest the property of the mares in the plaintiff. Scott v. McAlpine, 6 C. P. 302.

Value at Time of Conversion—Timber,]—In rover the principle of law (though not an inflexible one) is, that the jury can give no more in damages than the value of the goods at the time of the conversion. Where, therefore, logs had been taken to defendant; will and sawed there, and defendant, acting under a supposed claim of right, refused to deliver them to the plaintiffs:—Held, that the plaintiffs were not entitled to the value of the logs in the state of sawed lumber, or to expense incurred in sending a steamer and barges for the lumber. Morton v. McDouell, 7 U. C. R. 338.

quent Sale.—I befendant G. and two others, having executions against W. and K., directed the seizure of certain goods. The plaintiff, to whom the goods considered demanded them of the balliff, who refunced demanded them of afterwards directed the balliff not to bell of afterwards directed the balliff not to bell of anything more on his execution, but it did not appear that he told the plaintiff of this, or ordered the goods to be returned to him. The plaintiff them brought trover against the balliff and G. and the balliff afterwards sold the goods under the other executions, paying over no portion of the proceeds to G.:—Held, that G. was liable for the full value of the goods, for the plaintiff's right of action accrued on the demand and refusal, and was not defeated by what took place afterwards. Macklem v. Durrant, 32 U. C. R. 98.

ber. — Value at Time of Demand—Timber.]—In an action for the conversion by the defendant of certain logs of the plaintiff which had been cut without permission on the plaintiff's land, and purchased by the defendant and hauled to his mill, and there cut into lumber, the measure of damages was held to be the value of the logs as they were in the defendant's yard at the time they were demanded by the plaintiff, without any deduction for cutting and hauling, it appearing that the defendant knew that he was buying logs taken from the plaintiff's land, or at least that he suspected that such was the fact, and wilfully abstained from inquiry. Semble, had the defendant knew an innocent purchaser, a different measure of damages might have been applied. Smith v. Bacchler, 18 O. R. 203.

Value to Plaintiff—Solicitor's Books and Papers—Special Damage.]—In trover, for the conversion of a solicitor's docket and papers, containing entries and evidences of certain bills of costs against different persons, the jury gave a verdict for $2,500. On motion to set this aside as excessive, the court made a rule that upon defendant delivering up to plaintiff the book and papers, if the plaintiff chose to accept them, the verdict should be reduced to 1s., and defendant pay all costs; but that, if plaintiff should prefer proceeding with the action, then he should proceed merely for such special damage as he might claim to have sustained, with liberty to amend his de-claration accordingly, and to proceed at the risk of all costs. In such an action the measure of damage is not the value of the book, as a mere book, but what it is worth to the plaintiff irrespective of such value. Doyle v. Eccles, 17 C. P. 644.

Nominal Damages.]—See Johnson v. Lamb, 13 U. C. R. 508.

Debts.]—In trover by an administrator, when it appeared that the defendant had appropriated goods of the intestate, but had paid debts of the intestate to the amount of the value of such goods, which, however, was not pleaded:—Held, after verdict for defendant, that the plaintiff was entitled to a verdict for nominal damages, as such payment was not admissible as a bar. Shipman v. Shipman, 5 C. P. 358.

Note Brought into Court.]—The defendant having brought into court one of the two promissory notes for which the plaintiff sued in trover for $1,000, about the value of

Special Damage—Loss of Employment.]
—In trover, the plaintiff offered evidence to prove that in consequence of being deprived of the tools for which this action was brought, he had been prevented from undertaking work as a master carpetter; and this was laid in the declaration as special damage:—Held, that such evidence was rightly rejected. Lott v. French. 10 U. C. R. 385.

See Moffatt v. Grand Trunk R. W. Co., 15 C. P. 392; Leslie v. Canada Central R. W. Co., 44 U. C. R. 21; Wallace v. Swift, 28 U. C. R. 563, 31 U. C. R. 523; Williams v. Thomas, 25 O. R. 536; Gilpin v. Royal Canadian Bank, 27 U. C. R. 310.

IV. EVIDENCE.

Admissibility—Acts after Conversion— Insurance.]—Evidence was rejected that the plaintiffs had insured the wheat sued for and had received the insurance money, the fire having taken place two days after the alleged conversion: — Semble, that such evidence should have been received, as shewing the plaintiffs' conduct and dealing with regard to the property after the alleged conversion, and thus being relevant to the issue. Gilpin v. Royal Canadian Bank, 27 U. C. R. 310.

Production of Lease—Right to Urops.]
—In trover for wheat reaped and claimed by defendants as of right belonging to them, as an away-going crop after the expiration of a lease for seven years, the plaintiff's witnesses proved a new lease in writing of the same premises to a third party, from the expiration of the defendants' lease, but the new tenant swore that he had no right to the crop:—Held, not necessary for plaintiff to produce the new lease. Burrowes v. Cairns, 2 U. C. R. 288.

Sheriff's Sale—Proof of Judgment—Excution.]—In trover for goods:—Held, that, as against a party under an execution against whom the goods have been sold, the production of the writ of execution is sufficient, but that, as between a third party and the vendee under the execution, the judgment in support of it should be shewn. Park v. Humphrey, 14 C. P. 209.

Sufficiency — Crown Patent — Entry in Book.]—Quære, whether the evidence of the secretary of the Province, that it appears by an entry in his own handwriting, in a book kept for such entries, that a patent was delivered to A., and that he therefore felt sure that it was delivered to A. is sufficient to charge A. in trover with the possession of such patent. 2. Pleas Equitable Plea—Lien—Estoppel.]—To an action of trover by plaintiff as assignee in insolvency of H.—the first count alleging a conversion previous to, and the second count a like conversion subsequent to, H.'s insolvency, to which the common counts were added—the defendant pleaded, on equitable grounds, that H. purported to sell and convey to F. & C. all his stock-in-trade, and executed legal transfers thereof, and represented that he had so sold the same, whereby certain of his creditors were induced to accept F. & of his creditors were induced to accept F. & C.'s notes, given, as he alleged, for the purchase money, and to extend the time for the payment of H.'s indebtedness to them, and whereby also other persons were induced to supply F. & C. with goods on credit; that F. & C. were placed in insolvency by compulsory liquidation, and that such creditors pulsory liquidation, and that such creditors and other persons were the creditors who filed claims against F, & C.'s estate: that defendant was appointed assignee, and as such took possession, of the goods in F. & C.'s store, consisting of those received from H., as well as goods subsequently supplied to F, & C, as aforesaid, as also of the books used by F, & C, and now claimed by plaintiff: that the goods and book debts as above would not more than pay F, & C,'s creditors; that, even if said goods and book debts were H,'s, be and bis assignee are estonped from setting. he and his assignee are estopped from setting he and his assignce are escopped from secting up any claim thereto as against defendant or to the prejudice of F. & C.'s creditors, who through defendant have a lien in equity upon said goods for the amounts respectively due them as aforesaid; and defendant prays due them as atoresaid; and defendant prays that an account may be taken, and defendant declared a trustee for the amount found to be due to the said creditors:—Held, plea bad, for as to the goods alleged to be F. & C.'s, they could not be H.'s, of whom plaintiff was assignee; and as to the other goods, the plea averred a sale impeachable by the assignee, and probably in itself an act of bankruptey; and the matters set up showed to sectorate it. and the matters set up shewed no estoppel in pais. The statute authorizing equitable depais. The sature authorize pleading matters which are merely evidence under a legal plea. Mackenzie v. Davidson, 27 C. P. 188.

Forgery—Detention by Bank.]—Detinue for a cheque. Plen, that defendants received the cheque from the plaintiff to present and collect it from the bank on which it was drawn; that they did present it, but payment was refused by the bank manager, who retained and kept the same, alleging that the names of the drawers thereto were forged:— Held, a good defence; for if the cheque was forged the detention was rightful, and if genuine, defendants lost control over it by no wrongful act, and the plaintiff's remedy was against the bank. Brown v. Livingstone, 21 U. U. R. 438.

Lawful Taking of Possession.]—Trover for 3.000 feet of oak timber and 200 bushels of wheat. Plea, that defendant was seised in fee of a certain close, and being so seised he cut the said wheat and timber thereon growing, and afterwards, &c., delivered the same to one A., to be kept, who delivered them to the plaintiff, wherefore defendant took them out of his possession, &c.:—Held, plea good. Millard v. Kirkpatrick, 4 U. C. R. 248.

Leave and License.]—The word "detained" in a declaration means an adverse detention, and it is unnecessary, therefore, to plead leave and license specially. Bain v. McDonald, 32 U. C. R. 199.

Lien.]—See Nicolls v. Duncan, 11 U. C. R. 332.

A lien may be specially pleaded in an action of detinue. Riorden v. Brown, 1 C. P. 199.

Replevin — Denial.].—Where the goods have been replevied under 14 & 15 Vict, c. 64, and the declaration is for detaining merely, the pleadings should be as in detinue, and a lien cannot be given in evidence under a plea denying the plaintiff's property. Stephens v. Cousins, 16 U. C. R. 329.

"Not Guilty"—Agreement.]—In trover for a deed an agreement that the planning should deliver the deed to defendant to be returned on certain conditions, need not be specially pleaded, but would be admissible either under "not nuilty," or "license," as it negatives the alleged wrongful conversion, Douling v. Miller, 9 U. C. R. 227.

Justification.]—See Hatch v. Holland, 28 U. C. R. 213.

It was formerly held otherwise. Brent v. Perry, 7 U. C. R. 24.

Purchase.]—A defence that the property was purchased from the plaintiff by defendant should be specially pleaded. *Gunn v. Gilles*pie, 2 U. C. R. 124.

Redelivery of Goods.]—A redelivery of the goods to plaintiff pending the suit, or after plea, must be pleaded. Johnson v. Lamb., 13 U. C. R. 508.

Statute of Frauds.]—In trover for a deed:—Held, that an agreement that the plaintiff should deliver the deed to the defendant, to be returned on certain conditions, was not affected by the Statute of Frauds, at least when pleaded by defendant. Dowling v. Miller, 9 U. C. R. 227.

See McLean v. Bradley, 2 S. C. R. 535.

3. Subsequent Pleadings.

De Injuria.]—A replication of de injuria to a plea of lien in trover is proper. Nicolls v. Duncan, 11 U. C. R. 332.

Revocation of License—Notice—Keys of House—Detention by Sheriff—Xew Assignment.]—Detinue for the keys of plaintiff's dwelling house. Plen, leave and license. Second replication, that before the detention the plaintiff revoked the alleged leave, of which the defendant had notice. Rejoinder, that within a reasonable time after the revocation and notice of it, defendant reddivered the keys to the plaintiff, who accepted them:—Held, replication and rejoinder both good. Third replication, that defendant, as sheriff, entered the house with the plaintiff's consent, to levy under a fi, fa, against the plaintiff's goods, having first obtained the keys for that purpose; and that, in excess of his duty as sheriff, end tocked him out of his house for several days, whereby the plaintiff suffered the injuries complained of in the declaration:—Held, good, as being in the nature of an informal new assignment. Bain v. McDonald, 32 U. C. R. 190.

Tender.]—Where in trover for bills of exchange the defendant pleaded a lien by agreement, and the plaintiff replied a tender, without averring that the sum tendered was sufficient, the replication was held bad on general demurrer. Conger v. Hutchinson, 6 O. S. 644.

See McLean v. Bradley, 2 S. C. R. 535.

VI. PROPERTY AND POSSESSION.

Books—Property in Materials—Literary Value.]—Trover for pamphlets. Plea, not guilty. At the trial the Judge directed that the plaintiff was not entitled to maintain the action, because the pamphlet was a scoffing and indecent attack on Christianity, and ordered a nonsuit:—Held, that defendant could not rely on the illegality of the publication under a plea of "not guilty," but should have pleaded it specially; that the plaintiff held property in the materials composing the pamphlets, independently of what was printed in them, and he would have a right to recover therefor. Boucher v. Shewan, 14 C. P. 419.

collateral Securities—Payment of Principal Beht—Necessity for Assignment, —Certain sale notes were deposited with defendants as collateral security for the payment of a note indorsed by the plaintiff, for the accommodation of one M., and discounted by defendants for M. The collaterals were of the same value as the principal note, and were to be paid into the bank, and applied on the note, so that when they were paid, the note also was to be paid, and the plaintiff's hability to cease. After the principal note became due, defendants denied that they held the sale notes as collaterals, and refused to give the plaintiff any information as to what had been paid on them, and the plaintiff then paid the note in full and demanded an assignment of the collaterals. The plaintiff's payment being made by a part payment in cash, and his note for the balance, which he paid at maturity:—Held, that the plaintiff could not maintain trover against defendants for the collaterals; for, although, under 26 Vict. c. 45, s. 2, he was entitled to the im-mediate possession of them, he had not, until assignment, any property in them vested in him. Semble, that the plaintiff's remedy would be by a special action on the case for not assigning the notes to him after demand duly made. Cornish v. Niagara District Bank, 24 C. P. 262.

Crops-Entry and Cutting-Property in.] The entry of a person on timber limits to cut hay, and his cutting and stacking it on the land, do not give him such property in the hay cut as to enable him to maintain trover for its removal against persons claiming by virtue of Crown licenses then in force. McDonald v. Bonfield, 20 C. P. 73.

Goods Carried-Interest of Carrier-Ad-Goods Carried—Interest of Carrier—Ad-mission—Lien.]—The plaintiffs were owners of the Lady Bagot, in which wheat was brought down Lake Erie to defendant, to be stored for Messrs, Y. & Co. When it was brought to defendant, the master demanded £22 10s, for freight and £190 for demurrage. asserting a lien on the wheat to that amount. The defendant declined to pay, but he received the wheat upon giving the following undertak-ing in writing: "I will retain 750 bushels of wheat, the property of Messrs, Y. & Co. of Montreal, and part of the cargo of the Lady Montreal, and part of the catego of the lang Bagot, until your claim for denurrage for detention of the schooner Lady Bagot at Sandusky is settled, also covering freight on the amount retained." The plaintiffs sub-sequently demanded the wheat from defendant, who declined to give it up, saying that he was indemnified by Messrs, Y. & Co., who refused to pay plaintiffs' claim. The plaintiffs then sued defendants in trover:—Held, that they could not recover, as the agreement admitted the property in the wheat to be in Y. & Co., and not in the plaintiffs. Held, also, that the plaintiffs had no lien for either freight or demurrage. Land v. Woodward, 5 U. C. R. 190.

Goods Distrained for Rent-Purchase by Landlord—Subsequent Scizure under Ex-ecution.]—The plaintiff caused the goods in question to be distrained for rent in arrear of a farm, and, after an unsuccessful attempt by the bailiff to sell them, they were sold with the tenants' consent to plaintiff, and one P. was put in charge. He, however, allowed the tenant to remain in possession as before. goods were subsequently seized and sold by the sheriff under executions against the tenants, when the plaintiff brought trover :-Held, that the plaintiff could not recover; that he could not as landlord claim as a purchaser at the bailiff's sale; nor could he claim as vendee of the tenants, it appearing that there was no registered bill of sale, nor any actual and continued change of possession. Burnham v. Waddell, 28 C. P. 263, 3 A. R. 288.

Goods of Deceased-Administrator of Widow.]-Certain goods of testator were left in the house, where plaintiff (his daughter) and her mother continued to live and use them for about a year, until the mother died, when defendant, a son, who had been living elsewhere, took possession of the house with these things, and refused to deliver them up to the plaintiff as the mother's executrix:— Held, that the plaintiff had no such possession of these goods, either in her own right or through her mother, as to enable her to treat defendant as a wrongdoer; that as her mother's executrix she had no title; and that she therefore could not recover for McCrary v. McCrary, 22 U. C. R. 520. for them.

Transfer before Death-Delivery Rights of Administrator.]-A. agreed with B. to work a mill on shares—A., who owned the mill, to have two-thirds, and B., who worked, one-third of the toll. After some years, about an hour before B.'s death he sent for A. and told him (having first requested those about him to leave the room) that there were about 300 bushels of toll wheat in the mill undivided, 100 of which under the agreement would be his (B.'s): that, as he (B.) owed him (A.) for money lent, he begged he would accept the other 100 bushels and also a promissory note, which he sent for and handed him. Witnesses who overheard part of the conversation swore to the 100 bushels and the note being given by B., not as a gift, but, as they heard B. say, in payment of a debt:—Held, in trover by B.'s administratrix to recover from A. the wheat and note, that upon these facts the question of delivery as upon a donatio mortis causa did not arise, the transaction being nothing more than an ordinary sale for a valuable consideration; that if it had, the wheat being in A.'s own mill, no further delivery could be required. Held, also, that the agreement being personal between A. and and the intestate having no term in the mill, his administratrix had no right of possession and could not support the action. Ralph v. Link, 5 U. C. R. 145.

Goods Purchased by Agent-Absence of Appropriation.]—M. received money from plaintiff and from others to buy grain on commission. He bought in his own name, and from time to time appropriated the warehouse receipts among his principals, without distinguishing in his books, or otherwise, from whom any particular grain had been bought:

—Held, that, under the circumstances, the plaintiff could not maintain trover against M.'s assignee in insolvency for grain not specifi-cally appropriated to him. Wilson v. Bockus, 20 C. P. 467.

Appropriation - Right to Possession.]—Plaintiff, through his agent, bought from A. & Co. a certain quantity of wheat, which was to be loaded on or before a day named, or as soon as bags and cars could be named, or as soon as bags and cars count he furnished by plaintiff for same. Plaintiff paid on account a portion of the price agreed upon and furnished bags to the vendor, who filled them, but no cars were sent by him to take the wheat away. Whilst the wheat was lying ready to be despatched, and after the day named for loading it, defendants, holders of a warehouse receipt, demanded of the vendors the wheat covered by it, when plaintiff's the wheat covered by it, when plaintiff's wheat, some of which, amounting to 250 bushels, had been weighed, was delivered to and received by them. There was no demand and refusal of plaintiff's wheat, nor did plaintiff notify the defendants that the wheat was his:—Held, that plaintiff was not entitled to possession of the wheat, and could not therefore maintain trover against defendants for it. Butters v. Stanley, 21 C. P. 402.

Goods Purchased by Husband-Use on Property of Wife—Contract—Consideration —Parties.]—See Filschie v. Hogg, 35 U. C. R. 94.

Goods Purchased by Insolvent-Post. poned Delivery—Assignee's Right of Posses-sion—Lien of Warehouseman.]—Action of trover charging the appellants with converting 250 barrels of mackerel, which were the property of W. M. R., the respondent's assignor.
One of the branches of appellants' business was supplying merchants who were connected with the fishing business in the country, and who in return sent them fish, which was sold and the proceeds placed by appellants to credit of their customers. One S., who so dealt with appellants, in October, 1877, sent them seventy-seven barrels of herring and 236 barrels of mackerel. On 3rd November, 1877, S. sold all the fish he had, including those mackerel, to one R. at $8 a barrel, when some were delivered, leaving 236 barrels in the appellants' store, and in payment received $4,000 and a promissory note for $4,000 at four months. This note was given to appellants by S. on account of his general indebtedness, On the 4th March, 1878, R. became insolvent, and the respondent, who was subsequently ap-pointed assignee, demanded the 236 barrels of mackerel, and brought an action to recover the same. After issue was joined the apthe same. After issue was joined to pellants proved against the estate of R. on the note and received a dividend on it. The Judge at the trial gave judgment for $1,888, less $46.10 for one month's insurance and six months' storage, and found that the appellants had knowledge that the fish sued for were included by the insolvent in the statement of his assets, and made no objection thereto known to the assignee or creditors at the meeting:—Held, that the appellants having failed to prove the right of property in themselves, upon which they relied at he trial, the respondent had, as against the abpellants, a right to the immediate possession of the fish. (2) That S, had not stored the fish with appellants by way of security for a debt due by him, and, as the appellants had knowledge that the fish sued for were in-cluded by the insolvent in the statement of his assets, to which statement they made no objection, but proved against the estate for the whole amount of insolvent's note, and received a dividend thereon, they could not now claim the fish or set up a claim for lien there-on, Troop v. Hart, 7 S. C. R. 512.

Goods -Seized under Attachment — Bailiff,]—A bailiff seized certain goods upon an attachment issued by a magistrate under 13 & 14 Vict. c. 53. s. 64, and removed them to the premises of N. He afterwards made a return of what he had done to C. the ordinary bailiff of the division court, and signed a paper relinouishing the possession of the goods, and transferring it to C. The goods having been taken from N:—Held, that C. had not had such possession as would entitle him to maintain trover. Cool v. Mulligan, 13 U. C. R. 613.

Goods Seized under Execution—Action against Sheriff.]—In an action of trover or conversion against appellant, high sheriff of the county of Cumberland, N.S., to recover damages for an alleged conversion by the appellant of certain personal property found in the possession of the execution debtor, but claimed by the respondent, the pleas were a denial of the conversion, no property in plaintiff, no possession or right of possession in plaintiff, and justification under a writ of execution against the execution debtor. The Judge at the trial told the jury that he "thought it was incumbent on the defendant to have gone further than merely producing and proving his execution, and that if a transfer had taken place to the plaintiff, and the articles taken and sold, defendant should have shewn the judgment on which the execution issued to enable him to justiff the taking and enable him to sustain his defence:"—Held, that the sheriff was entitled under his pleas to have it left to the jury to say whether the plaintiff had shewn title or right of possession to the goods in question, and therefore there was misdirection. McLean v. Hannon, 3 S. C. R. 706.

Goods Sold by Insolvent — Bill of Sale.]—In trover for goods against an assignee in insolvency:—Held, following In re Barrett, 5 A. R. 206, that the assignee may object to the absence of a bill of sale on an alleged sale by the insolvent, just as an execution creditor or subsequent purchaser for value may do. Snarr v. Smith, 45 U. C. R. 156.

Goods Sold—Conditional Salc—Right of Vendor—Innocent Purchaser—Estoppel.]—
The plaintiffs, makers of safes in Toronto, sold a safe to one H. of London, on a written order stipulating that he was to give his notes at four and six months for the price; that his name was to be painted on the front of the safe; and that no title to the safe was to pass to H. until full payment of the price agreed upon. The plaintiffs accordingly had H.'s name painted on the safe, and delivered it to him in August, 1876. In November of the same year defendant purchased the safe from H. after having first searched the office of the county court clerk for incumbrances against it, and believing it to belong to H.; whereupon the plaintiffs brough trover:—Held, that the plaintiffs were not estopped from proving their ownership of the safe, and right to recover. Walker v. Hyman, 1 A. R. 345.

Delivery to Carriers — Stoppage in Transitu.] — The plaintiffs, at Montreal, having sold goods on credit to H. & C. living in Meaford, on Lake Huron, shipped them by the Grand Trunk Railway to Toronto, and thence by defendants' railway to Collingwood. While they were at Collingwood defendants received notice of stoppage in transitu, but they delivered the goods to H. & Co., who were found by the jury to have been insolvent at the time of the notice: and the plaintiffs thereupon brought trover:—Held, that the action would not lie, for the goods by the sale and delivery to the carriers were at the purchasers' risk, and the stoppage in transitu did not give the plaintiffs the right of property and possession necessary to maintain trover. Childs v. Northern R. W. Co., 25 U. C. R.

— Right of Repurchase—Forfeiture.]
—The plaintiff and defendant made the following agreement: "I, S. (the defendant), give $20 to M. (the plaintiff) for the colt which I have in possession, but I promise to give back the colt to M. if he will pay the same sum with 12 per cent. interest, on or before the 1st May, 1896. If not paid, the colt will be the property of S., then he can do with it as he likes, or keep it for himself." The plaintiff paid defendant $15, but failed to pay the balance, and in September, 1867, defendant sold the colt: whereupon the plaintiff brought trover:—Held, that the transactiff brought trover:—Held, that the transactiff brought trover:—Held, that the transactions are set to be a supported by the colt is the sum of the colt is the sum of the colt is the sum of the colt is t

The defendant, therefore, was held not liable in trover; and the plaintiff was allowed to recover the $15 paid by him, as money had and received. Moore v. Sibbald, 29 U. C. R. 487.

Goods Stored-Injury by Fire-Sale by Bailce-Damages.]-Defendants undertook to carry for plaintiffs a quantity of oats to T., carry for panents a quantity of oats to 1., which they did, delivering them at an eleva-tor there belonging to S., who received them to hold for plaintiffs. Of the quantity thus delivered the plaintiffs received part before the delivered the plaintins received part before the elevator was destroyed by fire, as it subse-quently was. There was a very large amount of grain besides the plaintiffs' in the elevator at the time of its destruction, most of which settled down in a conical mass on the wharf on which the building stood, the remainder falling into the water. Plaintiffs desired to remove what remained of their grain, alleging that they could select it from the general mass, from their knowledge of the portion of the building in which it had been stored; but defendants, who were the bailees of the greater part, assumed charge of the whole for the benefit of all, and refused to allow plaintiffs benefit of all, and retused to allow plaintiffs to do so, stating that it would be sold for the general benefit, which it accordingly was, when the plaintiffs' share of the proceeds was found to amount to only about $28:—Held, that the plaintiffs could maintain trover against defendants in respect of their grain so disposed of by defendants, inasmuch as the latter had no control over it, and ought not to have prevented plaintiffs from removing it if they could find it. Held, also, that this was a case in which no greater than the actual damages sustained should have been assessed; and, the jury having awarded excessive damand, the jury maying awarded excessive damages, the court ordered a new trial, unless plaintiffs would reduce their verdict to a sum named. Moffatt v. Grand Trunk R. W. Co., 15 C. P. 392.

Goods Transferred under Duress.]-Where, in trover, it was apparent that the goods sued for were transferred by plaintiff to defendant when under duress, and the jury found a verdict for defendant against the justice of the case, the court granted a new trial. Stewart v. Byrne, 6 O. S. 146.

Policy of Insurance. | — See Buck v. Knowlton, 21 S. C. R. 371.

Produce of Land — Devise of Part.] -Produce of Land — Devise of Part,]—Where a devise was made to the plaintiff of half the fruit which might grow on a certain farm devised to another person, and the latter gathered the whole of the fruit and disposed of it for his own use:—Held, that an action of trover could be maintained. Taylor v. Nugent, 6 O. S. 549.

Ship - Doubtful Right - Non-user.] -Where, in trover for a schooner, the evidence as to plaintiff's right to the vessel was un-satisfactory, and defendant was not proved to have used or employed it, but merely to have allowed the person who left it with him to take it away, and the jury found for defendant—the court refused a new trial. Brown v. Allen, 3 U. C. R. 57.

Timber—Mortgagec of Freehold — Rights against Wrongdoer.]—The first count of the declaration alleged that one B. was the owner in fee simple of certain land described, and mortgaged it to the plaintiffs in fee, subject to a provise for redemption on payment of $1,350, and interest, by instalments, as specified; that it was provided in the mortgage that B, should not, without the plaintiffs' written consent, cut down or remove any of the standing timber until the first four instalments of principal, and interest up to a certain date, should have been paid; and that if default should be made in paying the interest the whole principal should become due. It then alleged a default in payment of principal and interest; and that defendants afterwards, with-out plaintiffs' leave, and against their will, entered on the land and cut down and removed timber and trees, thereby injuring the land, and making it an insufficient security to the plaintiffs for the mortgage debt. There was also a count in trover for the trees. It appeared that the mortgage was one under the Act respecting short forms, with the ordinary provise for possession by the mortgage unit default, and a covenant not to cut timber, as alleged. The jury, in answer to questions, found that R. had cut down the timber, the other defendant, E., assisting him, in order to sell it and leave the place depreciated; that the damage thus done was $150; and that defendants did not purchase the timber from R. (as had been asserted) believing that he was entitled to sell it; but they said, after their verdict had been recorded against both defendants on these answers, that they did not intend to find E. guilty:—Held, that the action was maintainable, and the verdict properly entered against both defendants, the jury having found them to be joint wrongdoers; that the mortgagee was not restricted to his action on the covenant, but might certainly maintain trover; and semble, that, though not in actual possession, he might, under the circumstances, maintain trespass also. Quære, whether the first count was in case for injury to plaintiffs' reversionary interest, or in trespass. Semble, that it was in trespass; but held, that it disclosed a good cause of action. Mann v. English, 38 U. C. R. 240.

Property of Crown—Possession of Purchaser — Jus Tertii.] — In trespass and Purchaser—Jus Tertu.]—In trespass and trover for saw logs it appeared that they were cut in 1868 by one F., and sold by him to the plaintiffs in 1869. The land on which they were cut had been sold in 1864 by the Crown to R., who made a payment then and took a receipt. In 1866 R. transferred his interest receipt. In 1993 A. danserted me to defendant, who marked the logs with his mark, before they left the land. In March, 1889, defendant obtained a patent for the land, and in April he seized the logs which were in plaintiffs' possession.—Held, that the plaintiffs were entitled to recover, for, though the logs when cut were the property of the Crown, the plaintiffs were in possession when defendant took them, and defendant being a wrong-doer could not set up the jus tertii. Mc-Dougall v. Smith, 30 U. C. R. 607. See Great Western R. W. Co. v. McEwan, 30 U. C. R. 559.

Treasury Notes — Agreement—Lien.] — Held, under the facts, that the written memoranda and the circumstances of the case shewed that no American currency was collected and set apart for plaintiff under the agreements, so as to pass to him the property in certain known treasury notes or "greenbacks," and give defendant a lien on them for the amount he was to receive, and that therefore trover and definue would not lie for the "greenbacks." And that the plaintiff could not receiver back the deposit of $400 in "greenbacks." under the count in trover, as that had never been demanded, and there was no evidence of actual conversion of it. Walsh v. Brown, 18 C. P. 60.

Sec, also, SALE OF GOODS, II.

VII. STATUTE OF LIMITATIONS.

Date of Conversion—User of Stray Animals, 1—11 April. 1848, certain mares, the property of plaintiff strayed to defendant's property of plaintiff strayed to defendant's owner; defendant devited them of the conversion of them, but hearing, in the year 1852, they had fouled and were in defendant's possession, made a written demand on defendant for them and their progeny in September of that year. A year afterwards S. made over his interest to the plaintiff as a gift, without consideration or any delivery. In 1855 the plaintiff made a demand on the defendant for the mares and their colts, which was refused. Pleas, not guilty, not possessed, and Statute of Limitations:—Held, that the conversion took place in 1847, and that the action was barred by the statute. Scott v. Healpine, 6 C. P. 302.

Previous Conversion — Acts Amounting to.]-About 1857 the plaintiff purchased from the owner of a certain steamer the copper sheeting, &c., thereon, it being understood that he was to get it when a suitable time arrived, as by drydocking or hauling out the vessel. yacht club soon after bought the hull, which yacht club soon atter bought the hull, which they used as a club ship, having the same un-derstanding with the plaintiff. Shortly after-wards the plaintiff, with the consent of the club, took off the sheeting to the waterline, when the club, thinking that the vessel was being injured, but without disputing the plain-tiff's ownership refused to allow him to take off any more, and the plaintiff desisted. In 1869 the club sold the vessel to one C., who gave a chattel mortgage for the unpaid purchase money, and on his making default, judgchase money, and off his making default, judg-ment was recovered against him, and, under a fi. fa. goods thereon, C.'s interest was sold to defendant, the plaintiff being at the sale and informing defendant of his claim. It was proved that the vessel had become a total wreck, and useless as a ship. Defendant having refused to give up the copper after de-mand made, the plaintiff, in 1875, brought trover therefor, when defendant insisted that the plaintiff's right was barred under the Stathe plantin's right was barred under the Statute of Limitations, for that there was a conversion by the club's refusal to allow the copper to be taken off, or at all events by the sale to C.; and that six years had elapsed in either case before action brought:—Held, that the plaintiff was entitled to the copper, and to maintain trover for it, and that neither of the acts relied on by defendant amounted to a conversion or could be so set up by him. Consent to Breach of Trust-Married Woman.]-Quære, whether a married woman consenting to a breach of trust can afterwards complain of it; and semble, that if she make a representation and encourage another to act upon it, she will be compelled to make it good. Hope v. Beard, 8 Gr. 380.

Purchase by Trustee — Communication of Material Facts.]—A trustee dealing with his cestui que trust is bound to communicate all facts at all material in the transaction. Therefore, where a trustee of lands for the payment of debts paid the debts, without exercising the power of sale for that purpose, and took a release from the cestui que trust to himself, without informing him that he had previously caused a large number of bricks to be manufactured upon the land, the profits of which might have paid a large part of the claim of the trustee against the estate, the release was held void. Hope v. Beard, 8 Gr.

Sale to Cestui Que Trust.]appeared that the sale, which had been effected with the consent of the cestuis que trust, was in reality a sale to one of themselves, the court dismissed a bill filed by the vendor seeking to enforce the contract for sale; but under the circumstances without costs. - 2. Interest Taken under Particular Deeds.
- Infant Vested Interest Maintenance.] -By a deed of trust certain lands were conveyed to trustees for the benefit of an infant, to whom the trustees were to convey in fee on her attaining twenty-one: —Held, that the infant took a vested interest; and the court directed an inquiry as to her past and future maintenance. Stewart v. Glasgow, 15 Gr.

Mortgage in Trust for Creditors -Construction-Instalments.]-A mortgagee executed a declaration that he held the security in trust to pay the first instalment payable thereon to two creditors named, and out of the balance secured by the said mortgage " remaining after the said first payment of $3,510, to pay over to each one of the parties hereinafter named . . . (naming eight creditors, whose claims amounted to the whole of the balance secured by the mortgage,) it being expressly understood and declared that each of the said instalments as they shall become due and paid . . . shall be assigned and due and paid . . . shall be assigned and distributed ratably amongst each of the said parties and in the just proportion that each of their debts bears to the aggregate of the sums and the amount of each instalment:"—Held, none of the eight named creditors was entitled to share in the first instalment, and that the amount of each of the other instalments as received was to be ratably divided amongst them. Wigle v. McLean, 24 Gr. 237, Power of Appointment-Exercise of-Undue Influence.]—Property stood limited in trust for such purposes or persons as the wife should appoint; and, in default of appointment, in trust for the wife and her heirs. The wife appointed part of the estate to her husband in fee, and the other part in trust for herself and children:—Held, that these appointments were authorized by the power, but it being suggested on affidavit that they were made under the exercise of undue influence on the part of the husband, further inquiry was directed. Fenton v. Cross, 7 Gr. 20.

Settlement of Estate-Taking Effect at Death — Right to Sue Trustee — Personal Representative—Ademption — Declarations of Settlor.]—J. M., by an informal instrument, purported to assign to W. M., his son-in-law, all his estate, real and personal, "with notes and accounts, on condition that he pay his heirs in the manner following," and the in-strument then proceeded to direct the payment to certain of the assignor's children and grand-children of the sum of $400 each. The instrument also contained an agreement on the part of the son-in-law in the following terms: The said W. M. hereby becomes bound to pay the above mentioned sums to the parties therein named at the time of the decease of the said J. M., or as soon after as can conveniently be done:"—Held, that the effect of these stipulations in the instrument was to entitle each of the beneficiaries to file a bill in his own name, after the death of J. M., to en-force payment of the $400 coming to him; and that an objection taken at the hearing, that a personal representative of J. M. was a necessary party to the suit, was not sustainable. Mulholland v. Merriam, 19 Gr. 288, Subsequently J. M. conveyed to one of his sons a house and premises, valued at $200:— Held, that the trustee could not set this up as part satisfaction of the $400 mentioned in the first deed; and that declarations of the father made subsequently to the assignment in trust and the conveyance, in the absence of the son, were inadmissible to shew that the conveyance was made and intended to be in part satisfaction of the sum so secured to the son. The decree reported 19 Gr. 288 affirmed on rehearing. S. C., 20 Gr. 152.

Voluntary Settlement — Enforcement—Revocation.]—The owner of land, "in consideration of natural love and affection and of one dollar," conveyed it to the defendants in fee, subject to a life estate in his own favour, and "subject to the payment thereout" by the defendants of certain sums to the plaintiffs, the deed being voluntary as to them. The deed contained a covenant by the defendants with the grantor to make the payments, and was executed by the grantor and the defendants. Seven months later the grantor conveyed the same land to the defendants in fee, for their own use absolutely, free from all incumbrances, but subject to his life estate:—Held, that an irrevocable trust was created by the first deed in favour of the plaintiffs, and was enforceable by them, and that this trust was not affected or released by the second deed. Gregory v. Williams, 3 Mer. 582, and Mutholland v. Merriam, 19 Gr. 288, applied. Eduision v. Conch. 26 A. R. 537.

3. Right to Conveyance or Possession of Trust Property.

Mortgage—Death of Mortgagee—Foreclosure—Injunt Heir—Concegonee to Executor.] — Where a mortgagee dies intestate, leaving an infant heir, after a deeree for foreclosure, but before the final order, and his executor revives the suit and obtains such order, and the mortgage debt equals or exceeds the value of the mortgaged premises; the infant heir is a person seised upon trust, within the meaning of the English statutes II Geo. IV. and I Wm. IV. c. 19, s. 6, and may be ordered, on petition, without suit, to convey the estate to the executor, or to a purchaser from the executor. Re Hodges, 1 Gr. 285.

Prerequisites of Conveyance—Proof of Right—Conts.]—When a trustee is required by his cestul que trust to convey to him the trust lands, the cestul que trust must solve all reasonable doubts suggested by the trustee as to the course desired, and must also pay all costs properly incurred in relation to the trust, otherwise a decree for the conveyance will be made only on payment of the costs of the suit to the trustee. Rousell v. Hayden, 2 Gr. 557.

Presumption of Right—Vesting Order.]—In a suit by a cestul que trust against his trustees, seeking, amongst other things, to obtain a conveyance of lands, it was alleged that three lots had been conveyed to trustees for the plaintiff and his sister, one of such lots having already been conveyed by the trustees to a purchaser at the request of the cestuls que trust. The conveyance to the trustees was not produced, and the memorial did not express any trust. The court, under the circumstances, presumed that a trust had been declared as to all the lots, and gave relief to the plaintiff as to the other two lots, which the court held might be vested in the plaintiff by the decree in the cause, under the statute. McDougul v. Bell. 10 Gr. 283.

Right to Rents and Profits — Consequent Right to Possession.]—The rule is, that when property is devised to a trustee in trust to pay the rents and profits to the cestui que trust, the cestui que trust is entitled to the possession. This rule applies though there are charges on the property; proper terms being in that case imposed by the court as the condition of giving possession. But the court will not give possession to the cestui que trust when it sees that doing so would be violence to the intention. Whiteside v. Miller, 14 Gr. 333.

See Life Association of Scotland v. Walker, 24 Gr. 293.

- Consequent Right to Possession-Interests of Others.]-The rule is that when property is devised to a trustee to pay the rents and profits to any person, the cestui que trust is entitled to the possession; but where other persons have also a claim, it rests in the discretion of the court whether the actual possession shall remain with the cestur que trust or the trustee. J. O. by his will provided as fol-lows: "4. Notwithstanding the directions hereinbefore contained, I desire that if my son W. O. returns to Toronto within five years from the date of my death, my said executors shall hold in trust for him from the time of his return to Toronto said lots Nos. subject to the existing life estate of my said wife in a portion thereof, during the term of his natural life, and shall pay over to him all rents, issues, and profits thereof, and after his death shall divide the same between his children in such manner as he shall in his last will and testament direct, and in default of such direction and appointment to divide said property equally between them, conveying to each child his or her share when, if a son, he attains the age of twenty-one years, or a daughter attains the age of twenty-one years or marries, and in the meantime to apply the proceeds of the same to the support and maintenance of said children." In an action by W. O. against the executors and trustees of the will, claiming the actual possession of the property of which he was entitled to the and profits:-Held, that he was not entitled to such possession, and his action was dismissed with costs. Whiteside v. Miller, 14 Gr. 393, commented on and followed. Orford v. Orford, 6 O. R. 6.

See Carradice v. Scott, 22 Gr. 426; Crawford v. Lundy, 23 Gr. 244; Hefferman v. Taylor, 15 O. R. 670; Adamson v. Adamson, 17 O. R. 407.

See post VII. 7.

4. Right to Follow Moneus or Securities.

Assignment in Insolvency — Trust Funds in Hands of Insolvent, I.—Where C., an insolvent, had assigned all his assets and stock-in-trade to S., as trustee for creditors, and the plaintiff claimed a specific lien on the same to the extent of certain trust moneys which had come into C.'s hands, as trustee and executor for the plaintiff, under the will of the plaintiff's father, but had been wrongfully converted by C, to his own use, and employed in his own business to pay his trading debts, but as to which there did not appear to be any identity or connection with the stock-in-trade assigned to S.:—Held, that the plaintiff as against S. was only entitled to a dividend with the other creditors, on the full amount, with interest down to the time of assignment. Culhane v. Stuart, 6 O. R. 97.

Bank Deposit — Transfer to Private Bank Account of Trustee.]—Where the assignee of an insolvent estate transferred the money to the credit of the estate's account in money to the credit of the estate's account in a bank to his own private account and then used it for his own private purposes, the bank deriving no benefit from the transfer, and it not appearing that the assignee was indebted to the bank:—Held, that the bank was not liable to repay the amount to the estate. Clench v. Consolidated Bank of Canada, 31 C. P. 169.

See Galbraith v. Duncombe, 28 Gr. 27; Bailey v. Jellett, 9 A. R. 187; Giraldi v. La Banque Jacques Cartier, 9 S. C. R. 507; In re Herr Piano Co., 17 A. R. 333; Cumming v. Landed Banking and Loon Co., 19 O. R. 423; 29 O. R. 382, 19 A. R. 447, 22 S. C. R. 246.

5. Other Rights and Liabilities.

Administration-Priorities-Creditors-Repayment—Lien. 1—Trustees made payments repulment—Leas, 1—frustees made payments to one class of creditors, over whom another class of creditors were entitled to priority, without first paying or retaining sufficient to pay the prior class; and a suit for the administration of the trust estate having been instituted, the creditors who had received such payments were ordered to repay what they had erroneously received, and the unpaid creditors were held entitled to a lien on the trust funds in court, in priority to the claims of the trustees, and all subsequent creditors, for debt and costs. Wood v. Brett, 14 Gr. 72.

Award—Submission by Cestui que Trust.]
—Plaintiff leased to M. for twenty-one years, renewable upon certain terms. The lease was assigned by M. to defendant as trustee for one At the expiration of the first term arbi-F. At the expiration of the first term arbitration bonds were entered into by F. and the plaintiff. Defendant appeared and acted for F. at the arbitration, and the arbitrators directed a renewal lease at an advanced rent, or that the lessor should pay a certain sum for improvements. The lessor elected to renew, and notified the lessee, who refused to accept at the new rent, and he then brought ejectment :- Held, that the defendant was not bound by the award, the submission being only by his cestui que trust. McDonell v. Boulton, 17 U. C. R. 14.

Execution against Trustees—Sale of Lands under—Notice to Purchaser.]—A judgment was recovered against trustees of land held under a conveyance absolute in form, of which no trust had been actually declared. Execution issued on the judgment, under which the sheriff sold the trust land, but the purchaser knew that the execution defendants were trustees only. Upon a bill filed by the cestui que trust against the trustees and the purchaser, the sale by the sheriff was declared void; the plaintiff decreed to be entitled to the land; and defendants were ordered to pay the costs. Blackburn v. Gummerson, 8 Gr. 331.

Money Improperly Lent by Trustee-Authority—Notice.] — M. was administrator of the estate of S., and was managing the real estate for the heirs; he was also one of the executors and trustees of E. There was a sum of $808.55 due for taxes on some propa sum of $500.55 due for taxes on some property of the S. estate, and M. paid the same with money of the E. estate, directing the agent of that estate to charge the amount to the S. estate. M. did not enter the amount in his accounts with the S. estate as a loan, and, on the contrary, in the accounts which he rendered he took credit for the amount as a payment by himself. The heirs knew nothing of the loan until some time afterwards; they had not authorized M. to borrow money; and he was at the time indebted to them as agent in a sun exceeding the amount of the taxes. M. afterwards died insolvent, and indebted to both estates:—Held, that the E. estate could not hold the heirs of the S. estate liable for the $808.55, and was not entitled to a lien therefor on the property in respect of which the taxes were payable. Ewart v. Steven, 18 Gr. 35; S. C., 16 Gr. 193.

Preference — Claim against Trustee's Estate.]—The fact that a claim against the estate of a deceased person arose in consequence or by means of a breach of duty as a trustee, affords no ground for giving such creasee, anords no ground for giving such claim a preference over other creditors of the estate; as, under the Property and Trusts Act, R. S. O. 1877 c. 107, s. 30, the claimant can only rank pari passa with other creditors. Brock v. Cameron, 25 Gr. 369.

Sale of Land — Assent — Application of Purchase Money.]—Land was settled on a trustee, in trust for the use of H. till marriage, and then upon other trusts for the husband and wife as tenants for life, and ultimately providing for the issue; the assent of the tenant for life was necessary for a sale; and there was power in the deed to appoint H. as a trustee, on the original trustee refusing to act. The trustee had an absolute discretion as to forfeiting and applying the estate among or for the benefit of the parties to the deed in case of anticipation or attempted anticipain case of anticipation or attempted anticipa-tion:—Held, that the consent of H. and his wife, as tenants for life satisfied the condi-tion as to assent in case of a sale; that H., as trustee, was entitled to receive the purchase money; and that the purchaser was not bound to see to its application. In re Treleven and Horner, 28 Gr. 624.

Trust Fund-Amount-Acquiescence.] . A cestui que trust will not be estopped from objecting to the amount of the trust fund on the ground of acquiescence, merely because he did not dispute its correctness while his interest was reversionary; especially where, as in this case, he was not in possession of all the material facts, and his interest was not vested. Object of Trust—Crown Grant—Discretion to Direct, 1—In $1810 the Crown granted certain lands to trustees for different purposes; amongst the lasts or grantenposes; amongst the lasts or grant proposes; amongst the lasts or grant proposes; amongst the lasts of grant proposes and block of six acres, being a reservation for a hospital for the town of York; upon the trust, amongst others, to observe such directions, and allow such appropriations of the said lands, as the governor and the executive council for the time being should make and order, pursuant to the purposes for which the said lands had been originally reserved; and also to convey to such persons and upon such trusts as the governor, &c., should by order in writing appoint;—Held, that the trust in this case was not complete, and that by the terms of the grant the executive government retained the power of diverting properties or reserved to other objects. Attorney-General v. Grasett, 6 Gr. 485, 8 Gr. 130.

Refusal of Trustees to Execute.]— Persons claiming as cestuis que trust under a deed of trust not completed by delivery, alleged in their bill filed to declare and for the enforcing of the trusts, that the deed creating the trust, if any, was not executed or assented to by the persons therein appointed trustees; that the contents of the deed were never communicated to them by the grantors; and that when the contents were afterwards communicated the trustees so appointed expressly renounced, and refused to execute the trusts therein contained. The plaintiffs were volunteers:—Held, on demurrer, that no interest passed by the deed, but that it was void. Smith v. Stuart, 12 Gr. 246.

(b) Trusts Partly Illegal.

Validity as to Legal Trusts.]—A debtor conveyed his real estate to trustees for the benefit of his creditors, to be disposed of by the trustees, first, by a lottery, and, failing that plan, then in trust to sell as they should deem best:—Held, that, although the deed was void as to the trust for a lottery, it was valid as to the other trusts. Goodeve v. Manners, 5 Gr. 114.

— Sale — Income — Corpus — Mortmain.]—A deed may be good in part, though void in part, Where, therefore, a conveyance was made of lands, and the grantees contemporaneously executed a declaration of trusts in respect thereof, as follows:—To lease the lands until sold, and to sell them; to pay the annual proceeds to the settlor for life, and after the death of the settlor to pay the same, or in the discretion of the trustees a portion thereof, to M. during his life; and the trustees sold a portion of the estate, and at the death of the settlor a bill was filed impeaching the settlement as void under the Statute of Mortmain, which it admittedly was as respected the trusts declared of the corpus of the estate:—Held, that the trusts declared in favour of the settlor and M. were sufficient to support the sale which had been effected; and the bill, as against the trustees, the purchaser from them, and M., was dismissed with costs. Conveyance of Land — Description of Grantor — Presumption.] — In proceeding to quiet a title the evidence established that in 1850 L. made a conveyance to one of his brothers of certain land, not that in question, in which he described himself as surviving executor and trustee of his late father, as he was in fact:—Held, that this was not sufficient to reader him liable as trustee for the contest-ants—his brothers and sisters, and those claiming under them—and that he could not, under the facts stated, in any view, be considered a trustee of the land for his brothers and sisters. Re Curry, 23 Gr. 27r.

- Estate — Temperance Society—Locality-New Societies-Injunction.]-A grantor, by deed, conveyed certain land to three tor, by deed, conveyed certain and to the trustees in trust for certain societies at a named place, and their successors, representatives of the aforesaid societies, or the representatives of the said societies (sic) of any contains and the whatever name it or temperance society by whatever name it or they might be known or designated. Together with all . the estate, right, title . . of the grantor, his heirs or assigns, habendum, unto the said trustees and their successors in trust for said societies, or such of them as may continue to exist. . . The three temperance societies mentioned in the deed had all ceased to exist for many years:-Held, that the trustees took only a life estate for their joint lives and the life of the survivor of them, leaving the reversion in fee in the grantor. Held, also, looking at the situation of the premises and the uses for which they were intended, and that the temperance societies originally named were all formed in a certain place, that, although the trust was intended to be confined to temperance societies having the same local habitation, the words in the habendum were large enough to include any temperance society founded at that place while any of the original grantees were living. Held, also, that the plaintiff having been appointed a trustee for such a society, although no such appointment could extend or prolong the life estate granted, was entitled to restrain the defendant, his co-trustee and the sole surviving trustee under the deed, from pulling down a building on the premises, which he had commenced to do. Armstrong v. Harrison, 29 O. R. 174.

Mortgage to Secure Purchase Money—Interval.]— L. purchased from S., who conveyed to him, and immediately took back a mortgage to secure the purchase money, in which L.'s wife did not join. L. afterwards conveyed his equity of redemption to H.. who subsequently conveyed to S., and S. then sold to another person. L. having died, his widow sued at law for dower. A bill was filed praying an injunction to stay the action:—Held, that L. had in him before his conveyance to H. the beneficial legal estate, being entitled to the value of the land beyond the mortgage debt, and any other incidental advantage; and that in the interval between the execution of the conveyance and mortgage, L. was a trustee for S., but not a bare trustee. Heney v. Love, 9 Gr. 295.

Short Forms Act. |-The operation of an ordinary deed of bargain and sale under the Short Forms Act—R. S. O. 1877 c. 102— —conveying lands to trustees, considered and acted on. Scaton v. Lunney, 27 Gr. 169.

Covenant—Education of Infant—Breach —Damages.]—The defendants' mother having conveyed her farm to them, they mortgaged it to her in consideration of the conveyance and of $2.500, and covenanted in the mortgage, inter alia, to educate their younger brother. The latter was not a party to the covenant, nor was there anything in the mortgage giving him a right to maintain an action upon it, but there was a stipulation that if the defendants failed to educate him, the mother or her executors might distrain upon them for such sums as might be required from time to time sums as might be required from time to time to secure the due performance of the agree-ment. After the death of the mother, this action was brought by her executors and the younger brother for damages for breach of the covenant :- Held, that there was no trust in favour of the younger brother, and that the action was not maintainable by him. however, that it was maintainable by the executors to the extent that they might recover such sum as would enable them to perform the covenant to educate their co-plaintiff. West v. Houghton, 4 C. P. D. 197, distinguished. Faulkner v. Faulkner, 23 O. R. 252.

Grant to Uses-Intent-Mortgage-Sub-Grant to Uses—Intent—Mortgage—Sub-sequent Use.,—In an indenture the granting words were, "grant, bargain, sell, alien, re-lease, enfeoff, convey, and confirm unto the parties of the second part, their heirs and assigns, all and singular. &c.: habendum in fee. to the use and upon the trust following, that is to say, to and for the use of, &c., infant children of, &c., their heirs and assigns for ever." It appeared in evidence that upon the execution of this deed by the grantor, which was executed in completion of a sale of his equity of redemption to the grantees, in settlement of an overdue mortgage held by them as representing the deceased mortgagee, the grantees discharged the mortgage and then mortgaged the estate back to the grantor to secure the purchase money of his equity. In ejectment, by the infant children against the lessee of the grantees :-Held, that the use was not executed in them (the children); but that, notwithstanding the use of the word "grant" in the deed, and C. S. U. C. c. 90, s. 2. the old rule, that deeds "shall operate according to the intention of the parties, if by law they may," must govern; and that in-tention, to be gathered from the mortgage transaction, which would otherwise be de-feated, clearly was, that the deed should operate as a bargain and sale, vesting the use in the bargainees, the subsequent use being a trust. Mitchell v. Smellie, 20 C. P. 389.

Mortgagees-Taking Severally.] - Mortgagees are not trustees under 4 Wm. IV. c. 1. s. 48, so as to take jointly, when the deed is silent as to the tenancy created. Doe d. Shu-ter v. Carter, H. T. 2 Vict.

Railway Company—Municipal Bonus— Trust for Payment of Claims.]—The munici-Trust for Payment of Claims, —The municipality of B., being interested in the completion of a railway, by a by-law of the municipal council agreed to lend to the company, in municipal loan fund debentures, the sum of £100,000; for securing the repayment of which the company executed to the municipal loan fund of the company executed to the municipal control of the company executed to the company executed pality a mortgage on all the property of the company. This mortgage by an Act of the legislature was declared to be valid and binding against all the property of the company, as well that already owned by them as that which they might afterwards acquire; and, by a subsequent agreement made for the settlement of certain suits pending between the parties, it was agreed that the money should be advanced to the company in certain propor-tions as the work progressed. In compliance with a requisition of the company for funds, "for work done, and material furnished, and right of way, &c., for the use of the railway, the municipal council directed their bankers to hand over to the company certain of the debentures, which, upon their being handed over, were immediately seized by the sheriff, under an execution at the suit of the bankers. Upon a bill filed for the delivery un of the debentures:-Held, that, so far as the debentures were required for the payment of the right of way, rolling stock ready to be delivered, and other materials not yet become the property of the company, they were impressed with a trust to be applied by the company to the payment of these demands. Brockville v. Sherwood, 7 Gr. 297.

Settlement-Executed Trusts - Tenants in Common-Trustee of Legal Estate for.]-By a settlement certain lands were conveyed to trustees, upon trust to hold the said land to trustees, upon trust to hold the said hald, situated . . being lot No. 2 . . to G. A.; and also lot No. 1, situate . . to A. A., sons of (the settlor) . . to the use of them, their heirs and assigns, as joint tenants, and not as tenants in common . lastly, upon trust, that the said trustees shall well and sufficiently convey and assure absolutely in fee to the said parties respec-tively, &c.:—Held, that this trust was an executed trust, in which the limitations were expressly declared, and that neither a difficulty in ascertaining the true construction and legal meaning of the words used, nor the final trust directing the trustees to make the conveyances of the legal estate, made any difference; and that the words must receive the same construction as if they were found in a common law conveyance. Held, also, that an estate in fee in lot 2 passed to G. A., and that the words "as joint tenants, and not as tenants in common," were used to prevent G. A. and A. A. from taking as tenants in common, as it was supposed they would have taken under 4 Wm, IV. c. 1, s. 48, and that they were needlessly used. Held, also, that as G. A. died intestate and unmarried, 1st January. 1852. the defendants, as the children of a deceased brother, took an equal share in the lands as co-tenants in common with the plainlands as co-tenants in common with the plain-tiff (A. A.); that they were as much entitled to the possession of the lands as the plaintiff; and that the plaintiff having obtained the legal estate from the trustees should hold the same as a trustee for all the tenants in common. Held, also, that there being no proof of ouster of the plaintiff, he could not recover from the defendants any mesne profits in this action. Adamson v. Adamson, 17 O. R. 407.

on its face, the Statute of Frauds, s. 7, will be satisfied by any subsequent acknowledgment in writing declaring the trust, and such acknowledgment given at any time will relate back to the creation of the trust. Harper v. Paterson, 14 C. P. 538.

Trust not in Writing.]—The plaintiff by his bill alleged that lands had been conveyed to defendant to hold in trust for the grantors, and that defendant had given no value or consideration therefor, the conveyance being made to prevent the grantor improvidently disposing of his estate; but did not allege any writing evidencing the trust. Defendant having suffered the bill to be taken pro confesso;—Held, that the facts, being undenied, were sufficient to enable the court to deciare the defendant a trustee, and that it was not indispensable to allege that the trust was evidenced by writing. McNabb v. Nicholl, 3 C. L. J. 21.

An attorney took a conveyance of property in trust for a client, but did not sign any writing acknowledging the trust. A parol agreement was subsequently entered into, that the attorney should accept the property in discharge of two notes which he held against the client:—Held, that this agreement was binding on the attorney, though not in writing, Fleming v, Duncon, 17 Gr. 76.

Trust not in Writing — Enforcement by Stranger, —In a suit to enforce a trust, s. 7 of the Statute of Frauds not being set up by the answer, it was held that the set up by the answer, it was held that the trust might be shewn by parol, and might be different from the trust stated in the answer. Land having been conveyed in consideration of the grantee agreeing to convey a certain portion to a third person, who was no party to the transaction, it was held that this person could maintain a suit in his own name for such portion, Shaw v, Shaw, 17 Gr. 282.

- Undisclosed Trust.1—The property of M. having been advertised for sale under power in a mortgage, his wife arranged with the mortgagee, to redeem it by making a cash payment and giving another mortgage for the balance. To enable her to pay the amount, B. agreed to lend it for a year, taking an absolute deed of the property as security and holding it in trust for that time. A contract A contract was drawn up by the mortgagee's solicitor for a purchase by B. of the property at the agreed price, which B. signed, and he told the solicitor that he would advise him by telephone whether the deed would be taken in his own name or his daughter's. The next day a telephone message came from B.'s house to the solicitor, instructing him to make the deed in the name of B.'s daughter, which was done, and the deed was executed by M. and his wife, and the arrangement with the mortgagee carried out. Subsequently B.'s daughter asserted that she had purchased the property absolutely and for her own benefit, and an action was brought by M.'s wife against her and B. to have the daughter declared a trustee of the property, subject to repayment trustee of the property, subject to repayment of the loan from B., and for specific perform-ance of the agreement. The plaintiff in the action charged collusion and conspiracy on the part of the defendants to deprive her of the part of the detendants to deprive her of the property, and, in addition to denying that charge, the defendants pleaded the Statute of Frauds:—Held, affirming the decision in 19 A. R. 602, that the evidence proved that his daughter was aware of the agreement made with B., and the deed having been executed in pursuance of such agreement, she must be held to have taken the property in trust, as B. would have been if the deed had been taken in his name, and the Statute of Frauds did not prevent parol evidence being given of the agreement with the plaintiff. Barton v. Mc-Millan, 20 S. C. R. 404.

Lease—Benefit of Partner—Consideration—tepformance. |—The plaintiff agreed with J. to purchase a mining lease for their joint benefit, the consideration for which was to be the testing of the ore at the crushing mill of the pa httiff, and at his expense. In pursuance of this agreement, J. did arrange for the lease, but took the agreement therefor in his own name. The ore was, as agreed upon, tested at the crushing mill of the plaintiff, and at his expense, but J. attempted to exclude the plaintiff from any participation in the lease, asserting that he had obtained the same for his own benefit solely:—Held, that the true agreement could be shewn by parol; and that the plaintiff was entitled to the benefit of it. Williams v. Jenkins, 18 Gr. 536.

Purchase of Land—Parent and Child— Absence of Writing—Possession.]—A pur-chase was negotiated by M., the husband and father of the plaintiffs respectively, of a vil-lage building lot, and he obtained from the vendor a bond securing the conveyance thereof to his father. M. thereupon went into possession, built upon and otherwise improved the property, and died in possession thereof. Amongst his papers there was found, after his death, a receipt from the vendor, as follows:
"Received from Mark McManus payment in full for a building lot of one hundred and four feet square, on which he has a store erected. The deed is to be given when demanded." But no evidence was forthcoming of this document ever having been shewn to the father, who, it was proved, was unable to read or write, in consequence of which he was in the habit of always having his business transacted by M. From the evidence of the vendor it was evident that the whole payment for the lot came from the father. After the death of M., his widow and infant daughter filed a bill seeking to declare the father, who had obtained a conveyance, a trustee of the property. The defendant denied the existence of any trust, and the only evidence against such denial was that given by the widow, who swore that the defen-dant had stated in answer to a question as to what would become of the property, that "it was all right and whatever was M.'s should be hers," meaning the infant plaintiff:—Held, that there was not sufficient shewn to take the case out of the Statute of Frauds, and the defence thereof was a bar to any relief being given. Quære, whether possession by a son, of property to which his father holds the legal title, is a circumstance of such force or sig-nificance as to deprive the father of the protection of the statute, and expose him to the danger of being made a trustee upon oral tes-On the argument of an appeal in a timony. suit seeking to have the defendant declared a trustee of lands, it appeared that the evidence, if implicitly relied on, tended to make de-fendant a mortgagee rather than a trustee. A motion was then made to amend the bill in order to make that case; the court, however, refused the application, it not being an ex ercise of sound discretion to permit the amendment at that stage of the suit. - Parent and Child-Joint Benefit-Absence of Writing-Pleading-Statute.] A party is entitled to set up the Statute of Frauds as a defence to a suit to enforce a parol agreement respecting an interest in land, although the statute has not been specially although the statute and son lived together on pleaded. A father and son lived together on the same farm, of which they obtained a lease in their joint names, the son having for several years, owing to the infirm state of his father's health, the entire management of the farm; and the moneys he received from the sale of the produce thereof, he was in the habit of handing over to his mother for safe-keeping, thus forming, as it were, a common fund. Subthus forming, as it were, a common transcor-sequently he effected a purchase of the farm in his own name, when he paid $1,000 on ac-count of the purchase money, derived partly from private funds and partly from the fund held by the mother, and gave a mortgage with the usual covenants for the residue of purchase money, on which he subsequently made a payment of $1,520; $1,000 of which he borrowed from his wife, the balance being made up partly of funds of his own—partly of funds obtained from the common purse. The father claimed that the purchase had been made for his benefit and the benefit of the son and his brother, and filed a bill to enforce such claim; the son answered denying having made the purchase in the manner alleged, and claiming to be the sole owner of the property, subject to the support of his father and mother out of the same:—Held, that, in the absence of any writing signed by the son, nothing was shewn to take the case out of the Statute of Frauds; and, even if the defence of the statute were not set up, sufficient was not shewn to entitle the father to a decree on the ground of contract, or on the ground of a resulting trust in his favour, by reason of his having paid a portion of the purchase money. Wide v. Wide, 20 Gr. 521.

Purchase of Land by Agent—Absence of Writing.]—Where it was shewn by evidence that the defendant had agreed to attend and buy in a property offered for sale by auction, as the agent of the plaintiff and for his benefit:—Held, notwithstanding that the Statute of Frauds had been set up as a defence, and there was not any writing evidencing the agreement, that the plaintiff was entitled to a decree to carry out the agreement. Ross v. Rostl. 22 Gr. 29, 21 Gr. 301.

See, also, Macaulay v. Proctor, 2 Gr. 390; Owen v. Kennedy, 20 Gr. 163.

(b) Sufficiency of Evidence to Establish Trust,

Conveyance of Land—Recitals—Proposed Settlement—Corroboration.]—In April, 1853, the plaintiff and her husband joined in a deed conveying two building lots to her father, who paid to or advanced for the husband the full value thereof, intending and promising at the time to settle the same on the plaintiff, who with her husband continued in possession or in receipt of the rents and profits until May, 1864, when the father sold one of the lots to other members of his family; the plaintiff and her husband remaining in the full enjoyment of the other lot until after the death of the father in September, 1872. Meanwhile, and on the 4th April, 1864, the plaintiff and her husband had joined in another deed to her father, which recited the deed of April, 1853; the promise and proposal of the father to settle the lands on the plaintiff; that it was then considered inexpedient so to settle the same; the desire of the father to make further advances to the husband, and the request by him and the plaintiff that the father would sell the lands; the plaintiff and her husband thereby releasing to him all claim to or interest in those lands. The plaintiff alleged that shortly after the execution of the deed of April, 1853, the father, in pursuance of his promise, did execute and deliver to her a deed of the lands, which she held for several years, and until she gave it up to a messenger, another son-in-law, sent by her father, the father having stated that it would be safer for the plaintiff that the deed should be in his hands. No steps were ever taken to enforce a rede livery of such deed or a further conveyance of the lands to the plaintiff until February, 1874, when the present suit was instituted, seeking to obtain a reconveyance of the lot remaining unsold on payment of what should be found due in respect of advances made for the husband, and an account of the proceeds of the lot disposed of. The only evidence of the existence of such reconveyance was that of the plaintiff and her husband, and of a person resident in the United States, which latter, from its unsatisfactory character, the court refused to adopt:—Held, that the recitals contained in the deed of April, 1864, were not sufficient to create the father a trustee; and therefore the right to redeem, or trust, if any existed, could only be established by parol: and the husband not being a competent witto corroborate his wife's testimony, which, under the Act, required corroboration after the death of the father, the evidence con-sequently failed to establish such right or trust. The court therefore reversed a decree enforcing the claim set up by the plaintiff, and dismissed the bill with costs. Brown v. Capron, 24 Gr. 91.

Deed—Undisclosed Trust—Finding of Fact —Appeal.]—Suit to enforce an alleged trust in a deed absolute on its face, or, in the alternative, to have the property reconveyed or sold according to the terms of the alleged agreement. Parol evidence was given at the trial to establish the trust, and its existence was found as a fact by the trial Judge, who made a decree ordering the property to be sold and the proceeds applied necording to the agreement set up by the plaintiff:—Held, that the fact of the existence of the trust having been found by the trial Judge, and his finding affirmed by the full court, it should not be disturbed on a further appeal. Boveker
v. Laumeister, 20 S. C. R. 175.

Deed to Two—Payment by one.]—A deed was taken in the name of two, as grantees. One of them, claiming to be sole purchaser, filed a bill to have his cograntee declared a trustee of one moiety of the property for him. The evidence adduced shewed that the deed was intentionally drawn as it was; receipts for instalments of the purchase money were taken in the name of the two, and the mortgage for securing the balance of purchase money due was executed by both—Held, that, if even the whole purchase money was advanced by the one, it was not sufficient to shew that the purchase was made solely for his benefit. Hutchinson, V. Hutchinson, 6 Gr. 117.

Mortgage—Interest in—Previous Sworn Admission.]—The plaintiff claimed as belonging to him a mortgage which was in defendant's name, and had been given for the purchase money of the mortgaged land; the plaintiff had been in the insolvent court at one time after the transaction, and had sworn that he had parted with his interest in the property to the defendant in satisfaction of a debt:—Held, that, though there was some (not satisfactory) evidence in favour of the plaintiff's present claim, it was not sufficient against this sworn statement of his own. Ross v. Ross. 16 Gr. 647.

Purchase of Land-Joint Benefit-Denial — Inconsistency.]—The father of the plaintiffs and the defendant were brothers, and the defendant obtained a deed in his own name of 100 acres of land, in which it was alleged his brother was jointly interested. It was shewn distinctly that the defendant had at one time made a deed to his brother of some land, although the defendant, after his bro-ther's death, denied having given any deed, but on the hearing he admitted giving a deed of an adjoining property, for which no patent had issued, although the defendant's name had been entered in the books of the Crown lands department as an applicant for purchase. It was shewn that a box containing the deeds in reference to the property had been stolen, and the contents had never been seen since. The court, under the circumstances, notwithstanding the denial of the defendant, whose evidence was not consistent: - Held, that the plaintiffs were entitled to an account of the purchase money received by the defendant upon the sale of the property, and ordered the defendant to pay the costs to the hearing. Curry v. Curry, 26 Gr. 1.

Option Procured by Plaintiff.]—The plaintiff had procured a lease of a farm for two years, with the privilege of purchase, and had taken it in the names of two of the defendants, but without their knowledge, the plaintiff being the witness. The bill alleged benefit who, it was she adopted for plaintiff series of the plaintiff series and plaintiff series and the plaintiff asserting that his intention was to pay the purchase money for the land out of moneys belonging to his wife, in the hands of trustees, in which, however, the plaintiff and no interest; but there was no writing to evidence the trust alleged by the plaintiff and no interest; but there was no writing to evidence the trust alleged by the plaintiff. One of the defendants, who was a trustee of the wife's money, subsequently bought the property and paid the price out of his own funds, and gave to trustees a lease of it for the use of the plaintiff, wife and children. Upon a bill filed to have it declared that the purchase had been made for the benefit of the plaintiff, and to have the lease to trustees cancelled, the court, under all the circumstances, refused the relief prayed, and dismissed the bill with costs, but with liberty to file a new bill if the plaintiff should be so advised. Parsons v. Kendall, 6 Gr. 408.

Payment in Part—Passexion.]—A lot of land was purchased by defendant in his own name, and he gave a mortgage for the purchase money. The bill alleged that D., through whom the plaintiffs claimed, was the real purchaser, and that defendant was his agent and trustee in the matter. Part of the purchase price had been paid with D.'s money, and he had possession of the property for many years, and until his death. The trust, which was denied, was proved by parol; and the court decreed the plaintiffs entitled to the property, subject to a charge for any sum paid by the defendants on account of the purchase money, or for taxes. Denny v. Lithgow, 16 Gr. 619.

— Payment of Purchase Money—Possession—Notice.]—In an action for the possession of lands under a mortgage by the defendant's brother W., and the foreclosure thereof, the defendant claimed under a trust of the lands by W. in his favour; and also a title by possession. Money Impressed with Trust—Failure of Object.) — Money was advanced by the plaintiff for the express purpose of being deposited in a bank in order to meet a cheque of L. and C., given by their agent J. H. C. This cheque never was paid or presented after such deposit, and the amount remained in the bank to the credit of L. and C., who were trustees, claiming no beneficial interest in the money. On a bill filed for that purpose the court declared that the estate of J. H. C., who had since died, had not any claim or interest in the fund, and ordered the amount, together with the interest allowed on the deposit, to be paid to the plaintiff. Gamble v. Lece, 25 Gr. 329.

Purchase of Plaintiff's Goods at Sale under Distress — Request—Agreement for Redemption.] — The plaintiff's goods being about to be sold under a distress for rent, it was agreed between the plaintiff and defendant that if defendant would go to the sale and purchase the goods, the plaintiff would at a future day repay him the price and interest, when defendant was to give him the goods. The defendant was to give him the growth as the defendant was to give him the growth as the defendant went to the sale and purchased the goods: but, although some months afterwards the plaintiff tendered the amount and interest, defendant did not deliver the goods:—Held, that there was no contract on which the defendant could be held liable for damages; and that the plaintiff's remedy, if any, was by an action for deceit, or by a proceeding in equity to have defendant declared a trustee for bim. Timmins v. Surples, 26 C. P. 49.

Undertaking to Convey to Third Person-Constructive Trustee-Statute of Limitations.] - The defendant, in consideration that his father would convey to him certain lands in the township of Caledon, undertook and agreed to convey to the plaintiff, a younger brother, 100 acres of land in the township of Artemesia. The father conveyed the land to the defendant, but, instead of his conveying to the brother as he had agreed, he sold the property more than twelve years before bill filed, the plaintiff being then at least twenty-one years of age :- Held, that, under these circumstances, the defendant was merely a construc-tive trustee, and that the plaintiff's right to call for a conveyance was barred by the Statute of Limitations; but the defendant, having denied the agreement to convey, which, how-ever, was clearly established by his own evidence, the court, on dismissing the bill, re-fused to give defendant his costs. Ferguson v. Ferguson, 28 Gr. 380.

3. By Will.

Direction to Sell and Divide Proceeds—Express Trust.]—Where lands are devised to trustees to sell and divide the property among residuary legatees, this is not a charge upon land within the meaning of 22 Vict. c. SS, s. 24, so as to be barred by the lapse of twenty years, but it is the case of an express trust within s. 32 of the same Act. Tiffany v. Thompson, 9 Gr. 244.

Directory or Precatory — Absolute Devise. [—]. K., by his will, devised all his estate —real and personal—to his wife "for her own use and disposal, trusting that she will make such disposition thereof as shall be just and proper among my children:"—Held, that this operated as an absolute devise to the widow, who had the power of conveying such a title to the lands as a purchaser under her vendee was bound to accept; and that no trust was created. Vellee v. Ellot, 25 Gr. 329.

— Charge on Residue.]—A testator, by his will, gave the residue of his real and personal property to his daughter, the lands to be held by her in fee tail; and in a subsequent part of the will added, "I wish and desire that my daughter shall make a competent provision for my niece, Mrs. B., at Hamilton." By a codicil, executed on the same day as the will, after making alterations in his will, he added, "And I do hereby devise to my niece, Mrs. B., of Hamilton, the lot containing one-fifth of an acre fronting on School street, in the town of Kingston:"—Held, that the words "I wish and desire" were not precatory merely but directory, and formed a charge upon the residuary estate. Baby v. Miller, 1 E. & A. 218.

— Distribution among Children.]—A testator devised thus: "All the residue of my property, real and personal, I devise to my wife, requesting her to will the same to our children, as she shall think best." The widow devised the whole of the property to one child out of a number:—Held, that the words used were directory, not precatory only; and that the widow was bound to divide her property among all the children, although she might, in her discretion, give personalty to one and realty to another. Finlay v. Fellowes, 14 Gr. 66.

Discretionary Trust—Death of Trustee —Reference for Distribution.] — A testator, having disposed of one-third of the residue of his estate, real and personal, devised and be-queathed the remainder to J. C., to hold to him, his heirs, executors, administrators, or assigns, for ever, in trust for the benefit of the testator's two sisters, and with all responsible expedition to convert the same into money, and apply the same, or the proceeds thereof, for the benefit of the said two sisters as he should consider just. And he directed that his other trustees should not inquire into or interfere with such distribution as J. C. might choose to make between the said two sisters, except when their concurrence should be necessary for conformity. J. C. predeceased the testa-tor:—Held, that the above was in substance an imperative declaration of a trust of the whole remainder for the equal benefit of the two sisters, with a discretionary power reposed in the trustee as to its mode of execution, and the court would undertake to discharge vicariously what could not otherwise be done, owing to J. C. predeceasing the testator, by referring it to the master to ascertain the proper mode of carrying out the directions of the will. Charteris, 25 Gr. 376, commented on. made referring it to the master to work out a scheme for the application and distribution of the fund. Charteris v. Charteris, 10 O. R.

Maintenance of Infants—Income—Setting apart share.]—Inder a devise of land to a father "during his life, for the support and maintenance of himself and his (three) children, with remainder to the heirs of his body or to such of his children as he may devise the same to," there is no trust in favour of the children so as to give them a beneficial interest apart from and independently of their father, but the children, being in needy circumstances, will be entitled, as against the father's execution creditor, who has been appointed receiver of his interest, to have a share of the income set apart for their maintenance and support, and in arriving at the share it is reasonable to divide the income into aliquot parts, thus giving one-fourth to the receiver. Allen v. Furness, 20 A. R. 34.

Power of Appointment—Coupled with Trust.]—A will gave land to testnor's heirat-law for life, with power to appoint the same to one or more of his sons; and declared that the devisee (his heir) was not to allen or mortgage the lot; and that it was not to be attachable by his creditors:—Quere, whether this power was a naked power, or created a trust in favour of the devisee's sons. Mc-Master v, Morrison, 14 Gr. 138.

A testator devised certain property to his son A., and to the heirs of his body lawfully to be begotten, with power to appoint any one or more of such heirs to take the same:—Held, that A, took an estate tail, and that there was no trust in favour of his children. Trust and Loan Co. v. Fraser, 18 Gr. 19.

4. Implied and Resulting Trusts.

Conveyance of Land to Rectify Error—Party Interested—Trustee for Others.]—A married woman owning land, she and her husband sold it, but the husband only conveyed by the deed, and the wife barred dower. The error was not discovered until after the property had passed into other hands. The original owner and her husband then executed, for a nominal consideration, a deed conveying the property absolutely to one of the parties interested, but under the belief that its only effect was to remove the defect in the first deed, and to confirm the title of all parties claiming thereunder. On a bill by one of these parties and the grantor (the husband being dead) it was declared that the grantee in the second deed was a trustee for all the parties interested. Grace v. MacDermott, 13 Gr. 247.

Deposit of Money—Notice of Trust.]— Money was recovered by the administratrix of a person killed by a railway accident, and the shares allotted to her children were deposited by her with her brother, who was fully cognizant of the facts:—Held, that he was liable to account to the children as their trustee. Secord v, Costello, 17 Gr. 328.

Payment of Part of Purchase Money—Husband and Wife. 1—A man, by arrangement with his wife and two daughters—by a former marriage—one of whom was a minor, purchased lands and built thereon, and paid for the property out of moneys produced by the joint labour of himself, his wife, and the daughters: the deed for the property was taken in the name of the wife, upon the understanding that she should hold the same for the benefit of herself and husband during their lives, and after their decease that it should go to the daughters. By his will the husband declared that he had no real estate, but desired the wife to direct her executors to sell the property so purchased, and divide the proceeds between his two daughters and a daughter of his wife by a former husband:—Held, that the purchase could not be treated as an advancement to the wife; that there was a resulting trust in favour of the testator; and that the trusts in favour of the daughters, if declared, having been so by parel only, were within the Statute of Frauds, and therefore void. Oxen v. Kennedy, 20 Gr. 163.

Lunatic—Devise—Ademption.]—A. received $1.200 belonging to his son-in-law R., and invested it with other money of A.'s own in the purchase of a farm, which cost $3,200. R., with his family, went into possession of the farm, and A., the father-in-law, by his will devised the farm to R.'s wife and son jointly for the life of the wife, with remainder to the son in fee, subject to the payment of $200 to a daughter of R., and of $600 to another person. It was assumed in the cause that R. was, at the time of the purchase and thenceforward, of unsound mind and unable to give a valid assent to the transaction; and the court held that on that assumption he was entitled to the $1,200 as against A.'s estate, and that the devise to his wife and son was no satisfaction of the claim; and also that he was probably entitled to a charge on the land for the debt. But the court directed inquiries whether R, was at the date of the transaction of mental capacity to assent to the purchase; and if so, whether he did assent thereto; also, inquiry as to the occupation of the land by R, and his family before the death of A, and the value of such occupation. Goodfellow v. Robertson, 18 Gr. 572.

Trust as to Part of Land—Evidence of Joint Purchase—Advances.]—A resulting trust arises only in favour of a party paying the whole or any aliquot part of the purchase money; and in such case the trust is of a part of the purchased estate proportioned to the sum paid. No such trust arises from the cirsum paid. No such trust arises from the cir-cumstances of a man making advances on be-half of another who has agreed to buy the estate. The defendant, whose daughter had married a brother of the plaintiff, and who was an executor named in the will of S., the father of the plaintiff, took a more than common interest in the settlement of his testator's estate. In consequence he suggested to the plaintiff the desirability of his purchasing the estate of one G. situated near the S. homestead; as by so doing the plaintiff could retain the G. farm, leaving the homestead to be equally divided between his two brothers; saying, in answer to plaintiff's objection of want of means, that he, defendant, would assist him with his payments. The purchase was accord-ingly effected, and plaintiff and defendant paid up the purchase money, but not in any agreed proportions, some of defendant's advances being made partly in cash and partly in kind, and the conveyance was made to the plaintiff, the defendant subscribing as the witness and retaining possession of the deed. On an attempted settlement of their respective rights, the defendant under the circumstances insisted that he and the plaintiff had purchased on joint account and that there was a resulting trust in his favour as to the moiety of the land, and that he was entitled to the then value thereof, and, on proceedings taken by the plaintiff, the trial Judge gave judgment for the defendant. On appeal:—Held, that on the evidence there was not a resulting trust; that all defendant could claim was a lien for the amount advanced by him. A reference was directed to take the account, and it was ordered that if the amount found due should not be paid in six months, the estate should be not be paid in six months, the estate should be sold, the amount due defendant paid to him, and the surplus, if any, paid to the plaintiff. Sanderson v. McKercher, 13 A. R. 561.

But held by the supreme court, reversing the judgment, that the evidence greatly preponderated in favour of the contention of defendant, that the purchase was a joint one by himself and the plaintiff. Held, also, that the plaintiff being liable for an ascertained portion of the purchase money, there was a resulting trust in his favour for his interest in the land, 8. C., sub nom. McKercher v. Sanderson, 15 S. C. R. 296.

Payment of Purchase Money—Cohabitation.]—A man and woman lived together as husband and wife, the man having a wife living at the time; and land purchased in the man's name was paid for by the woman out of money of her own:—Held, that there was a resulting trust in favour of the woman. lieved herself to have been lawfully married, but who, it was afterwards discovered, was at the time of the pretended marriage with her a married man, advanced money for the purpose of buying certain real estate, the bond for the conveyance whereof was taken, with her knowledge, in his name:—Held, that there was not any resulting trust in favour of the woman. Street v. Hallett, 21 Gr. 255.

Conveyance — Alteration — Divestitude against the plaintiff, he, for the purpose of protecting his lands from process, conveyed the same to his solicitor for a money consideration, and the solicitor afterwards made a conveyance of the same lands back to him, but the solicitor retained this conveyance in his own possession, and subsequently, by desire of the plaintiff, struck out his name as the grantee, and inserted as such the name of the sister of the plaintiff. The court, being of opinion that this had not the effect of divesting the title which had been reconveyed to the plaintiff, and that, even if it had had that effect, there would have been a resulting trust in favour of the plaintiff, decreed relief accordingly, but, under the circumstances, without costs, And semble, that if, in the circumstances stated, no consideration money had passed between the parties, there would have been a trust by operation of law in favour of the plaintiff. Wilson v, Ovens, 26 Gr. 27.

— Evidence Establishing Trust.]—At a sale of lands under execution, the nephew of the execution plaintiff, a person without means, bid off the property; and, on a subsequent day, produced to the sheriff the receipt of the plaintiff for the amount bid, and paid the sheriff his fees, who conveyed the lands to the nephew, who was allowed by his uncle to retain the title. The uncle subsequently agreed to sell the land to a purchaser, who made default in the bargain, and the nephew wrote to his uncle pointing out the proper proceedings to compel the purchaser to complete the contract. The uncle then died, having devised the property. The nephew set up a claim to be entitled absolutely. On a bill filed by the devisee, the court declared the nephew to be a trustee, and ordered him to convey to the plaintiff. MeDonald v. McMillan, 14 Gr. 99.

— Failure to Shew Parol Trust.]—
Where a party fails to establish a parol trust in favour of himself and another, which his own evidence supports, he cannot afterwards insist upon a resulting trust or trust by operation of law. A party claiming a resulting trust in his favour, arising out of a purchase of land, must shew that such purchase was made on his behalf, and that the money paid on account of it was his money. Wide v. Wide, 29 Gr. 521.

— Parent and Child—Advancement.]—
Where money is advanced by a father for the purchase of land, the conveyance of which is taken in the name of his son, the presumption is, that the transaction is by way of advancement to the son. In such a case, there is no resulting trust in favour of the father. Knox v. Trucer, 24 Gr. 477.

Sale of Land by Promoter to Company.] — There is a distinction between a trust for a company of property acquired by Vol. III. b—223—74 promoters and afterwards sold to the company, and the fiduciary relationship engendered by the promoters, between themselves and the company, which exists as soon as the latter is formed. A promoter who purchases property with the intention of selling it to a company to be formed does not necessarily hold such property in trust for the prospective company, but he stands in a fiduciary relation to the latter, and if he sells to them must not violate any of the duties devolving upon him in respect of such relationship. If he sells, for instance, through the medium of a board of directors who are not independent of him, the contract may be rescinded, provided the property remains in such a position that the parties may be restored to their original sta-tus. There may be cases in which the property itself may be regarded as being bound by a trust, either ab initio or in consequence of ex post facto events; if a promoter purchases property for the company from a vendor who is to be paid by the company when formed, and, by a secret arrangement with the vendor. a part of the price, when the agreement is carried out, comes into the hands of the promoter, that is a secret profit which he cannot retain; and if any part of such secret profit consists of paid-up shares of the company issued as part of the purchase price of the property, such shares may, in winding up proceed-ings, be treated, if held by the promoter, as unpaid shares for which the promoter may be made a contributory. Judgment in 21 A. R. 66 affirmed. In re Hess Mfg. Co., Edgar v. Sloan, 23 S. C. R. 644.

Sale of Wife's Property—Retention of Proceeds by Husband — Lapse of Time.]—Where a house and land, the separate property of a married woman, were sold, and the proceeds taken and retained by her husband, who had never accounted for them:—Held, in an action on a promissory note of the wife, twenty-six years after, that the husband remained a trustee for his wife of the proceeds, and the wife's claim constituted separate estate. Briggs v. Willson, 24 A. R. 521.

Sale under Execution — Purchase by Party Liable—Executor—Benefit of Derisec.] —The plaintiff and defendant were brothers, and their father, who died in the year 1846, appointed the plaintiff and two other sons of the testator his executors, and among other bequests devised the land in question to the defendant. The testator had indorsed a note for the accommodation of the plaintiff, and after the testator's death the holders of this note sued the plaintiff and the two brothers as executors and recovered judgment against them. The land in question was sold under that judgment at sheriff's sale and was bought in by the plaintiff. The will had been registered, but had not been proved. Subsequently the plaintiff mortgaged the land in question and sold it subject to the mortgage. The mortgages afterwards sold, and the plaintiff gain bought in the land:—Held, that it being the plaintiff's duty to pay the note, he had not acquired the title to the land for his own benefit at the sheriff's sale, but became a trustee for the devisee, the defendant, and that this trust revived when the plaintiff bought in the land for the second time. Held, further, that, assuming that the plaintiff was not a trustee for the defendant and had no paper title, there was not, upon the evidence, any possession of the land in question by the plaintiff sufficient to confer a title under the Statute of Limitation of the land in question by the plaintiff sufficient tions. Held, lastly, that the situation of the parties not having changed, the defendant was not bound by laches, McDonald v. McDonald, 17 A. R. 192, 21 S. C. R. 201.

III. NOTICE OF TRUST.

Bank Deposit - Solicitor-Misappropriation—Notice to Bank—Charge on Deposit— Priorities,]—The plaintiff placed in the hands of one J., a practising solicitor, a mortgage given to the plaintiff by one R., together with a discharge thereof duly executed, for the pur-pose of enabling J. to receive payment of the mortgage money, which R. was borrowing mortgage money, which R. was borrowing from a loan company, and which, it was ar-ranged between the plaintiff and J., in the presence of the local manager of a bank of which J. was the solicitor, should be deposited by the solicitor in such bank to the credit of the plaintiff, and a deposit receipt obtained therefor, J. did receive the money by a cheque of the loan company, amounting with interest to $6,455, which he deposited in the bank to his private account. About ten days afterwards he drew upon his account for $3-000, which he deposited in the same bank to the credit of the plaintiff, obtained a deposit receipt therefor in favour of the plaintiff, and receipt inereior in favour of the plaintiff, and transmitted the same to the plaintiff on the 26th August, 1881, telling the plaintiff in his letter that "the balance will be sent next week." He drew upon the fund for his own purposes, and died, without rendering any ac-count, on the 4th September following:—Held, that the bank was well. that the bank was not affected with notice of the moneys so deposited being trust moneys, so as to render the bank liable for J.'s misappropriation thereof. After the deposit of the plaintiff's money J. recovered a sum of $1,-182.95 for the defendant S. as her solicitor. which he also deposited in the same account on the 24th August, 1881. Up to the time of on the 24th August, 1881. Up to the time of J.'s death the amount at his credit always exceeded this sum:—Held, that the moneys so deposited by J. had been held by him in a fiduciary character, and might be followed by the plaintiff and S.; but, as between the plaintiff and S., that S. had a first charge upon the sum at the credit of J. for the full amount of her deposit, and that the belance was applicable to the discharge of the plaintiff's demand. Bank Directors - Misappropriation of Funds-Assets of Company - Following.1-

Three persons occupying a fiduciary position towards a bank, became partners in a firm, agreeing to pay for their interests a certain sum of money in liquidation of creditors claims. They did pay this sum but out of moneys of the bank wrongfully appropriated Subsequently the firm was formed into a joint stock company, and the assets of the partnership were assigned by the partners to the company. The company soon afterwards failed, and a winding-up order was made, the original assets, upon which the bank claimed a lien, to a considerable extent coming into the possession of the liquidator:—Held, that the original partners were not affected with constructive notice of the means by which the incoming partners obtained the moneys brought in, and that, no actual notice to them or to the company being shewn, the bank had no lien. The deficiency was subsequently discovered, and upon application to the government in the name of the trustees by G. W. F., whom they appointed their agent for that purpose, a grant of land, as compenfor that purpose, a grant of land, as compen-sation for the deficiency, was made to the trustees of E. F., describing them as such. Subsequently an instrument under seal, ex-pressed to be made between J. B. P., of the first part, and E. F., wife of G. W. B. P. and E. F., whereby they declared that the parties of the first and second parts were not in any way interested in the lands granted as compensation, and that the trustees held them as trustees for G. W. F., the patentee of the original lot. After this the trustees, by the direction of G. W. F., conveyed to E., under whom the defendants claimed. E. F. now brought this action to account the control of the control F. now brought this action to recover the land:—Held, that E. and those claiming under him must be held to have had notice of the title of the trustees, who were described in the patent as trustees of E. F.; that this land was subject to the trusts of the previous convey-ance to them; that E. F. was not estopped by the declaration executed by J. B. P. and herself, which did not divest her of her title; and that, therefore, she was entitled to recover. Held, also, that there should be a reference to the master to take an account of taxes paid and permanent improvements made upon the lands, further consideration being reserved. Foott v. Rice. 4 O. —Following Securities.]—After all the debts of an estate are paid, and after the lapse of years from the testator's death, there is a sufficient presumption that one of the several executors and trustees dealing with assets is so dealing qua trustee and not as executor, to shift the burden of proof. Ewart v. Gordon, 13 Gr. 40, discussed. W. and C. were executors and trustees of an estate, under a will.
W., without the concurrence of C., lent money of the estate on mortgage, and afterwards asoff the estate of mortgage, and afterwards asfravour of bimself, etc., when as we execute the estate and effects of " (the testator). In the assignment of the mortgages he was described in the same way. W. was afterwards removed from the trusteeship, and an action was brought by the new trustees against the assignines of the mortgages to recover the proceeds of the same:—Held, reversing the judgment in 19 A. R. 447, that in taking and assigning the mortgages W. acted as a trustee and not as an executor: that he was guilty of a breach of trust in taking and assigning them in his own name; that his being described on the face of the instruments as a trustee was constructive notice to the assignees of the trusts, which put them on inquiry; and that the assignees were not relieved as persons rightfully and innocently dealing with trustees, inasmuch as the breach of trust consisted in the dealing with the securities themselves and not in the use made of the proceeds. Judgments in 19 O. R. 426, and 20 O. R. 382, restored. Cumming v. Landed Banking and Loan Co., 22 S. C. R. 246.

Shares Held "in Trust"]—A holder of shares "in trust" is not a mandataire prêtenom and holds subject to a prior title on the part of some persons. Such holding not being forbidden by seed. Such holding not being forbidden by seed. Such holdcolony, a transferee from such holder is bount to inquire whether the transfer is authorized by the nature of the trust. Bank of Montreal v. Sweeny, 12 App. Cas. 617, 12 S. C. R. 661.

Where a father, acting generally in the interest of his minor child, but without having been appointed tutor, and being indebted to the state of his deceased wife, of whom the minor was sole heir, subscribed for certain shares in a commercial or joint stock company on behalf of the minor, and caused the shares to be entered in the books of the company as the entered in the books of the company as favour frust. This created a valid trust in favour frust. This created a valid trust in favour for the company acceptance by or on behalf one without any acceptance by or on behalf one without any acceptance by or on behalf one without any acceptance by a company with the requirements of arts, 297, 238, and 290 of the civil code; and a purchaser of the shares having full knowledge of the trust upon which the shares were held, although paying valuable consideration, was bound to account to the tutor subsequently appointed for the value of such shares. The fact of the shares being entered in the books of the company and in the transfer as held in trust. Was sufficient of itself to shew that the title of the seller was not absolute and to put the purchaser on inquiry as to the right to sell the shares. Sweeny v. Bank of Montreal, 12 S. C. R. (60, 12 App. Cas. 617, referred to and followed. Raphael v. McFarlane, 18 S. C. R. (80, 12 App. Cas. 617, referred to and followed. Raphael v. McFarlane, 18 S. C. R. (80, 12 App. Cas. 617, referred to and followed.

Transfer of Bank Shares—Trust—Protisions of Will—Bank Charter, I—Where the respondent bank (incorporated by 18 Vict. c.
202) registered an absolute transfer of its shares, which had been executed by trustees and executors under a will to one of the residuary legatees, regardless of a provision in the will directing the substitution of the legatee's lawful issue at his death, and the transferce disposed of the shares so as to defeat the rights of the issue:—Held. that such registration, unless with actual knowledge of a breach of rrust, was not wrongful, having regard to s.
36 of the Act, which enacts that the bank is not bound to see to the execution of any trusts, express, implied, or constructive, to which any of its shares may be subject. Notice that the shares were held by the trustees and executors in trust; possession by the bank of a copy of the will; the facts that transfers of others of its shares by the same trustees to other residuary legatees contained notice of substitution, that the president of the bank was also an executor of the will, and that the law agent of the bank was also law agent of the avecutors:—Held, to be insufficient to affect the bank with knowledge of the particular trusts sought to be enforced. Simpson v. Molsons Bank, [1885] A. C. 270.

Transfer of Shares—"In Trust"]—Where the respondent had transferred shares as security for a loan:—Held, that the appellants, as derivative transferees from the leader, were not affected by a trust in favour of the respondent, unless such trust was clearly disclosed on the face of their author's title, or was otherwise notified to them. The words "manager in trust," appended to the signature of a bank manager, import that he held and transferred the shares in trust for his employers, the bank; and are not calculated to suggest that he stood in a fiduciary relation to some third person, so as to affect a transferee for value with constructive notice of such relationship. Judgment in 20 S. C. R. 481 reversed, and judgment in 18 A. R. 305 restored. See, also, 19 O. R. 272. London and Canadian L. and A. Co. v. Duggman, 11883] A. C. 506.

IV. REVOCATION OF TRUST.

Conditions — Failure to Perform.] — By deed between B., grantor of the first part, certain named persons, trustees, of the second part, and P., grantee, of the third part, B. conveyed his property to the trustees, the trusts declared being that if P. survived B. and performed certain conditions intended for the support or advantage and security of B., which by the deed he covenanted to perform the trustees should convey the property to P., and it should be reconveyed to B. in case he survived. No trust was declared in the event of P. surviving and failing to perform the conditions or of failure in the lifetime of both parties. In an action by B. to have this deed set aside —Held, that the conditions to be performed by P. were conditions precedent to his right to a conveyance of the property; that by failure to perform them the trust in his favour lapsed; and B., the grantor, being the only person to be benefited by the trust, could revoke it at any time, and demand a reconveyance of the property. Poirier v. Brulé, 20 S. C. R. 97.

See Re Mackenzie Trusts, 28 O. R. 312; Edmison v. Couch, 26 A. R. 537.

V. SUITS AND PROCEEDINGS BY AND AGAINST TRUSTEES.

1. Account-Suits for.

Consent Decree—Trustee Declared Mortgagee.]—A bill was filed against a trustee for an account and reconveyance. At the hearing a decree was drawn up by consent, treating the defendant in all respects as a mortgage:
—Held, upon appeal from the master's report, that from the time of the decree the rights of the parties respectively must be determined by the rules ordinarily annihable to cases of mortgage. Kerby v. Kerby, 5 Gr. 587.

Delay in Suing — Poverty—Limitations Act—Dormant Equities Act.1—In 1832 a person who held a bond for the conveyance of land, on which he had erected a steam saw mill and other buildings, having become involved, assigned his property to certain creditors as trustees, to work the mill and sell the lumber, and apply the proceeds in payment of his debts, &c., and then went to the United States, where he remained for some years. One of the trustees took the sole management of the trust estate and went into possession. quently, under an execution against the goods of the owner, the sheriff sold the steam engine set up in the mill, which the managing trustee, who was agent only for one of the creditors, purchased for his principal, at a great undervalue, and removed the same from the mill, and afterwards procured a deed of the property in his own name from the proprietor. which he also transferred to his principal. In 1855 the assignor filed a bill for an account of the trust property, alleging that his poverty in the meantime had prevented him from enforcing his rights. It was held, in the court below, that he was entitled to the relief sought, notwithstanding the Statute of Limitations and the Dormant Equities Act. on appeal the decree was reversed, and the bill in the court below was dismissed with costs. Beckit v. Wragg, 6 Gr. 454, 7 Gr. 220.

Jurisdiction of Probate Court.]—A court of probate has no jurisdiction over accounts of trustees under a will, and the passing of accounts containing items relating to the duties of both executors and trustees is not, so far as the latter are concerned, binding on any other court, and a court of equity, in a suit to remove the executors and trustees, may investigate such accounts again and disallow charges of the trustees which were passed by the probate court. Grant v. MacLaren, 23 S. C. R. 310.

Payment out of Court—Expenses in Suit.]—In a suit against trustees under a voluntary assignment, a decree having been made by consent for taking the accounts, which reserved further directions and costs, an application by the trustees afterwards, and before the accountant was ready to report, for the payment out of court of money to pay certain expenses they had incurred in the suit, was refused with costs. City Bank v. Maulson, 1 Ch. Ch. 382.

Reddition de Comptes.]—An action en reddition de comptes does not lie against a trustee invested with the administration of a fund until such administration is complete and has terminated. Township of Ascot v. County of Compton, Village of Lennoxville v. County of Compton, 29 S. C. R. 228.

Reference—Scope of —Report—Special Circumstances]—A decree was made against a trustee for an account, with a direction to allow him any moneys expended, in the concept of the trust estate. In taking the accounts, the trustee desired the master to report, as a special circumstance, the fact that he had properly expended, in respect of taxes and otherwise, moneys exceeding the amount received:—Held, that the master to report, as a special circumstance, the fact that he had properly expended, in respect of taxes and otherwise, moneys exceeding the amount received:—Held, that the master had acted properly in refusing to enter into such items of account. Brunn v. Aumond, 19 Gr. 172.

Submitting to Account—Decree.]—Defendant, by answer, having submitted to account as trustee, the court decreed an account and partition, although without such submis-

Summary Reference—Charge of Misconduct.]—Where a bill was filed against a trustee and executor for an account, and the bill also sought to have the trustee removed for misconduct, the court refused an order for a summary reference to the master, under the 77th order of May, 1850. Christie v. Saunders, 2 Gr. 395.

2. Application by Trustees for Advice or Protection of Court.

Bill for Administration.] — Trustees and executors stand in a different position from creditors or cestuis que trust as to the right to have the estate administered in court, and cannot, without experiencing some difficulty in carrying out the trusts or administering the estate, file a bill for that purpose. Cole v. Glover, 16 Gr. 392.

Sec, also, McGill v. Courtice, 17 Gr. 271.

Bill for Execution of Trusts—Costs.]
—Where trustees filed a bill to have the trusts of the deed appointing them executed, without suggesting any difficulty in the way of their winding up the affairs of the estate, the court refused them their costs of the suit. Cummings v. McFarlane, 2 Gr. 151.

Bill to Confirm Title—Sale—Parties.]
—Executors sold and conveyed land under a supposed power in the will. This construction of the will being disputed, they filed a bill to confirm the purchaser's title, the defendants being the purchaser and one of the devisees:
—Heid, that the question could not be decided on a record so constituted. Grummet v. Grummet, 14 Gr. 648.

Petition for Advice — Construction of Will.]—The court cannot, on a petition under the 31st section of the Act to amend the law of property and trusts (29 Vict. c. 28), make a declaration as to the construction of a will. In re Williams, 1 Ch. Ch. 372.

Litigation.]—Where it is plain that a dispute can be settled only by litigation, it is not necessary for a trustee to ask the advice of the court before defending. In re Williams, 22 A. R. 196.

Sale of Land—Approval of Court.]—Trustees, having unsuccessfully offered for sale estate property, viz., a block consisting of hotel and stores and a dock together, and subsequently the hotel and stores together, received an offer for the hotel by itself:—Held, on an application to the court to approve and confirm the sale under R. S. O. 1897 c. 129, s. 39, and con. rule 388, s.-s. (f), that the court had jurisdiction to express its approval, and under the circumstances it was a case in which the jurisdiction ought to be exercised. Nelson v. Bell, 32 O. R. 118.

Trustee Relief Act — Payment into Court—Mortgage Surplus.]—Where trustees, having had a certain mortgage assigned to them to secure a debt due to the trust estate, realized the security, and, after satisfying the claim, still had a surplus remaining:—Held, that they were entitled to pay the surplus into court under the Imperial Trustee Relief Act, 10 & 11 Vict. c. 96, R. S. O. 1877 c. 40, s. 36. Re Kingsland, 15 C. L. J. S5.

Where a mortgagee proceeds to a sale of the mortgaged premises under the power contained in his security, and a surplus of the proceeds remains in his hands after payment of his own claim, and there are adverse claimants to such surplus, he cannot apply under the Trustee Relief Act to pay such surplus into court; his proper course is to file a bill of interpleader. Western Canada L, and S. Co. v. Court. 25 Gr. 151.

Moneys. — Payment into Court — Insurance Moneys. — On an application by a benevolent society for leave to pay into court insurance money claimed by different parties: — Held. that s.s. 5 of s. 53 of the Judicature Act extends the benefit of the Act for the relief of trustees to such cases, and that the society was entitled to pay the money in. Re Bajus, 24 O. R. 397. See Re Coutts, 15 P. R. 162.

3. Costs.

Administration Suit—Breach of Trust.]
—An executor or trustee will sometimes be entitled to his costs in a suit for administration, notwithstanding that he may have committed a breach of trust, if no loss is sustained by the estate by reason of such breach. Wiard v. (Auble, S Gr. 458.

Ejectment by Trustee.] — Where the widow of a settlor, who had a claim for dower, had obtained possession of the trust estate, the costs of an action of ejectment to recover possession were allowed out of the estate. Edinburgh Life Assurance Co. v. Allen, 23 Gr. 230.

Establishment of Trust — Heirs of Ovener.] — Where a person claimed, on the ground of a parol trust, to be entitled to a conveyance of land from the heirs of the legal owner, and they required him to establish the trust by a suit, which he did:—Held, that he was not entitled to the costs of the suit. English, L. English, 15 Gr. 330, Improper Claim by Trustee.]—Where a trustee set up an improper claim to the property, the subject of the trust, and a bill was filed to compel him to deliver up possession and account, the court charged him with the costs of suit up to the hearing, reserving the consideration of interest and subsequent costs. Fisher v. Wilson, 2 Gr. 260.

Injunction Restraining Sale of Trust Estate.]—In a suit by a cestui que trust against a trustee and another, to prevent the trustee from selling the land to his co-defendant, an injunction was obtained restraining the defendants from allenating or incumbering the property or committing waste. The plaintiff, without the knowledge of his solicitor, entered into an agreement with the co-defendant to compromise the suit. On an application by the plaintiff's solicitor for an order directing that his costs should be paid by the co-defendant:—Held, that the property had been recovered or preserved by the injunction, and that the co-defendant was liable for the solicitor's costs. Morgan v. Holland, 7 P. R. 74.

Position of Trustee in Litigation.]—A trustee or executor stands in the same position as any other litigant with respect to costs. Smith v. Williamson, 13 P. R. 126.

Reference — Accounting — Absence of Fraud.]—A trustee of lands for payment of debts paid the debts without selling for that purpose, and took a release from the cestui que trust to himself, which release was held void, and an account directed. Under the circumstances, neither fraud nor neglect to account having been established against the trustee, who had accounted as such in the master's office, and the property or produce thereof being fortheoming for the benefit of the estate, the court directed the trustee to receive his subsequent costs as in ordinary cases, as between solicitor and client. Hope v. Beard, 10 Gr. 212.

Refusal by Trustee of Use of Name.]

—A trustee, having refused to allow his name to be used as plaintiff, was refused his costs of defence, although no blame attached to him in other respects. Ellis v. Ellis, 7 Gr. 102

Severing in Defence.]—A trustee who severed in his defence, because his co-trustee had refused to act in conjunction with him in the management of the estate, was, under the circumstances, refused his costs. Gibson v. Annie, 11 Gr. 481.

Where trustees sever in their defence, only one set of costs will be allowed except on special grounds, and these where they exist ought to be set up in their answers. Mere distance of residence does not in all cases justify severing. Lavin v. O'Neill, 13 Gr. 179.

A surviving trustee and the representatives of a deceased trustee are not within the rule which prevents trustees severing in their defence at the risk of having but one set of costs between them. Reid v. Stephens, 3 Ch. Ch. 372.

Solicitor-Trustee — Profit Costs.]—On rehearing the order as reported 24 Gr. 503, disallowing to a solicitor-trustee costs other than costs out of pocket in suits to which he was a party, was reversed. Meighen v. Buell 25 Gr. 604.

See Re Mimico Sever Pipe and Briok Mfg. Co., Pearson's Case, 26 O. R. 289; Colonial Trusts Co. v. Cameron. 24 Gr. 548; Taylor v. Magrath, 10 O. R. 639; City Bank v. Maulson, 1 Ch. Ch. 382; Cunmings v. McFarlane, 2 Gr. 151; Randall v. Burrowes, 11 Gr. 344; Kenrick v. Dempsey, 5 Gr. 584; Balley v. Jellett, 9 A. R. 187; In re Helliwell'z Trusts, 21 Gr. 346; Spratt v. Wilson, 19 O. R. 28; Lucas v. Hamilton Real Estate Association, 26 Gr. 384; Nash v. McKay, 15 Gr. 247.

4. Limitation of Actions.

Mortgage Sale—Account.]—When a sale is effected under a mortgage made pursuant to the Manitoba Short Forms of Mortgages Act, which, like the Outario Short Forms of Mortgages Act, provides that the mortgages shall be possessed of and interested in m m may to arise from any sale, upon trust to pay costs and charges and the principal and interests of the debt, and upon further trust to pay costs and charges and the mortgagor, the mortgages becomes an express trustee of the proceeds of sale, and the mortgagor is entitled to bring an action against him for an account notwithstanding the expiration of six years from the time of sale. Section 32 of the Trustee Act, R. S. O. 1897 c. 129, does not apply in such a case, because, if there is a surplus, it is trust money still retained by the trustee. Biggs v. Frechold L. and S. Co., 26 A. R. 232.

Notice Disputing Claim — Time for Bringing Action,]—Before the commencement of an action against purchasers of land for indemnity against a mortgage, one of them died, and on the plaintiff notifying the administrator of his claim, he was served with a notice under s. 35 of R. S. O. 1897 c. 129, the Trustee Act, disputing it. An action was afterwards brought against such administrator, but, on it appearing that he was then dead, and that an administrator de bonis non had been appointed, an order was obtained amending the writ by substituting as defendant such last named administrator, upon whom the writ was served more than six months after the service of the notice:—Held, that the proceedings against the defendant must be deemed to have commenced only on the service of the writ on him, and this being more than six months from the service of the notice, the plaintiff's action was barred. Gooderham v. Moore, 31 O. R. 86.

Notice to Claimants — Trustee Limitation Act — Reversionary Interest — Relief of Trustees — Acting "Reasonably."] — A notice by executors that "all parties indebted to the estate of the late (testator) are required to settle their indebtedness "by a named date, and that "parties having claims against said estate are also required to file same by said date." is not a sufficient notice within s. 38 of R. S. O. 1897 c. 129 to protect the executors from liability for claims not brought to their knowledge until after the estate has been distributed by them. Their liability in this respect extends to claims against their testator for money lost owing to a breach of duty by him as trustee. Persons having a reversionary interest in a trust fund may bring an action to compel the trustee to make good money lost owing to his negligence, and the Trustee Limitation Act, R. S. O. 1897 c. 119, s. 32, does not run against them from the time of the loss, but only from the time their reversionary interest becomes an interest in possession, Judgment in 30 O. R. 110 affirmed. After judgment had been given in the court below against the executors in this case, the Act for the Relief of Trustees, 62 Vict. c. 15 (O.), was passed: —Held, that, assuming the Act to apply to such a case, it did not relieve the executors, for they could not be held to have acted reasonably when they failed to follow the plain statutory directions as to notice to creditors and claimants. 5. Pleading.

Enforcement of Trust — Writing.]—A bill to enforce a trust need not allege that there is any evidence in writing of the trust. Smith v. Ross, 15 Gr. 374.

Establishment of Trust—Necessary Allegations.)—Where a bill alleged with sufficient certainty to shew, if true, the relation of trustee and cestui que trust to exist between the plaintiff and defendants, the court, although portions of the bill did not come up to the requirements in this respect, overruled a demurrer for want of equity. The order allowing a demurrer for want of jurisdiction (21 Gr. 45), affirmed on rehearing. Grant v. Eddy, 21 Gr. 558.

Waste—General Charge—Injunction,1—A general charge in a bill that the defendant, an executor and trustee, is committing waste on the testator's property, without specifying any act of waste, is not sufficient to sustain an injunction or receiver. Sanders v. Christie, 1 Gr. 137.

6. Other Cases.

Action at Law—Equitable Defence—Account.)—One D. held a mortgage with a power to sell upon default, the mortgager still to be responsible for any balance. Upon default he sold and repurchased some of the goods, which he subsequently exchanged for land. Upon an action for the balance over the amount realized by the original sale, the defendant contended that the plaintiff must be considered a trustee for him in the repurchase, and having sold at an advance must account for the balance:—Held, that to obtain relief application must be made to equity. Annes v. Dorman. 10 C. P. 299.

Transfer to Equity.]—The declaration alleged, in substance, that the plaintiff was assignee of a mortgage made by one G. W. M. for $2.015, on which default had been made, by which the whole principal became due; that G. W. M. was in business in partnership with H. W. M., and becoming embarrassed they assigned all their estate, real and personal, to defendants, in trust to sell the same and distribute the proceeds ratably among their creditors, including the plaintiff; that the defendants had sold the estate, and held the proceeds in trust for the plaintiff and other creditors, including the plaintiff, and were aware and had notice of the plaintiff and other creditors, and held moneys applicable to the amount due to the plaintiff sclaim, but refused to pay the plaintiff and part of such proceeds; that defendants had realized all the estate, and had long been in a position to divide and pay the same among the creditors, and had in fact paid some of them; and that the greatest portion of the estate so assigned was the sole property of G. W. M.:—Held, not a proper case in which to proceed at law under the Administration of Justice Act, 1873, 36 Vicc. S. 8, 2 (O.), it being impossible of an cour, of act to administrate the trust and the suit was therefore transferred, under s. 9, to the court of chancery. Leys v. Witherov. S. U. C. R. 601.

Defence of Accord and Satisfaction — Equitable Replication—Fraud—Repudiation.]—Declaration on an agreement to pay $450 by a promissory note; breach, nonpayment. Sixth plea, set-off on two notes made by plaintiff and indorsed by defendant; seventh plea, in substance, that the same set-off was pleaded by the defendant in a former action by plaintiff against him for the same causes of action as in this suit, and the plaintiff not having replied thereto, and the defendant being in a position to sign judgment of non pros., it was agreed that the plaintiff should pay defendant $20 and costs in full settlement, and in case of non-payment that defendant should be at liberty to proceed for the recovery thereof in said suit; and that the plaintiff accepted said agreement in full satis-faction and discharge of plaintiff's claim. The plaintiff replied, equitably, that defendant was indebted to the plaintiff as executor for goods of the testator purchased on credit, and before the credit had expired or defendant had acquired the notes pleaded as a set-off, the plaintiff and his co-executors assigned the testator's estate for the benefit of creditors; and plaintiff sued in the former action and sues in this only as a trustee for the estate:—Held, replication no answer, for the accord and satisfaction were not said to have been in fraud, or to the disadvantage of the trust, or to have been repudiated by the trustees. Parsons v, Crabb, 34 U. C. R. 136.

Distribution of Estate — Preferential Colon—Parties.]—Where a bill was filed by one of two creditors, both of whom claimed to be paid in priority to the other creditors of the estate, against the representatives of the trustee and one of several creditors, who claimed that all should share pro rat:—Held, that all parties interested were sufficiently represented. Wigle v. Wigle, 24 Gr. 237.

Establishment of Trust—Estoppel,]—A. took a conveyance as trustee for B. B., in answer to a bill by a person who claimed the property against both, was induced by A. to swear that he, B., had not any interest in the property.—Held. in a subsequent suit by B. against A., that he, B., was not precluded from shewing the trust. Washburn v. Ferris, 16 Gr. 76.

Extension of Time for Payment.]—An extension of time for payment of money found due by trustees and executors, appears to be granted only in cases where a forfeiture would result from its non-payment. Laucson v. Crookshank, 2 Ch. Ch. 373.

Foreclosure or Sale — Mortgage in Trust.]—A person holding mortgages in trust for sale to indemnify him against loss on account of the mortgagor, is not entitled to foreclose in case of default, but only to a decree to sell. Paton v. Wilkes, 8 Gr. 252.

Foreign Lands — Execution of Trust.]— Where a trustee of lands situated in a foreign country is resident here, the court will decree an execution of the trust. Smith v. Henderson, 17 Gr. 6.

Injunction—Receiver—Fraud.] — The court will grant an order for an injunction to restrain a trustee from interfering with the trust estate where fraud is charged, and by the same order direct the appointment of a receiver. Vernon v. Kinzie, 2 O. S. 40.

Waste—Tenant in Common.]—No in junction will be granted between tenants in common, except in cases of actual destruction. But where a tenant in common of one moiety was trustee of the other under a will, and was felling timber for his own benefit in breach of his trust, he was enjoined from doing so, it being considered that his right of ownership on his own moiety was to be exercised in subordination to his dury as trustee each of the control of the c

Gr. 670. See Armstrong v. Harrison, 29 O. R. 174, ante II, 1.

Injunction to Restrain from Selling.]
—Held, that the court has jurisdiction to prevent trustees about to sell property under a nower or trust for sale, from selling in an imprudent and improper manner; and thus in this case, where it appeared that, although cestuis que trust representing five-sixths of the property desired a sale without reserve, the interests of the remainder would be prejudiced by so selling, an injunction was granted to restrain such trustees from selling without a reserve bid. Downey v. Dennis, 14 O. R. 219.

See, also, Morgan v. Holland, 7 P. R. 74, ante 3.

Judgment against Trustee—Following Securities—Bar, I—Held, that the recovery of judgment by the plaintiffs against a defaulting trustee for the amount of trust moneys advanced by him upon certain mortgages did not har the plaintiff's right of action against the defendants, to whom the trustee had, in breach of trust, assigned the mortgages, to compel a reassignment thereof, or an account of the moneys paid thereon. Cumming v. Landed Banking and Loan Co., 19 O. R. 426, 20 O. R. 382. See S. C., 19 A. R. 447, 22 S. C. R. 246.

Question between Co-defendants — Title to Land.] — The title to land conveyed upon trust being in dispute between the person creating the trust, being a defendant to the suit, and one of the other defendants, and the plaintiffs being entitled to have the land sold if it really belonged to the author of the trust, the question between him and his co-defendant must be decided in the suit. Gillespie v. Grover, 3 Gr. 558.

Specific Performance — Trustees for Purchase—Decree—Offer to Repurchase.]—
Where at the hearing of a suit to enforce a purchase made by a testator against the trustees under his will, it was made to appear that there were not funds of the estate wherewith to pay the amount of the purchase money due, and the widow of the testator offered to purchase, in her own name, the property at a price which was considered beneficial for the estate, a direction to that effect was inserted in the decree, in order to avoid the necessity of a petition being presented to the court for that purpose, after the usual decree should have been made. Delisle v. Mc-Can., 22 Gr. 254.

Unnecessary Suits.]—The court discountenances unnecessary or useless suits against trustees. Liddell v. Deacon, 20 Gr. 70.

See Porteous v. Reynar, 13 App. Cas. 120.

VI. TRUSTS IN COURTS OF COMMON LAW.

Joint Trust-Severance - Legal Estate.] —In 1824 the Crown granted to O. S., G. M., and J. M., in fee, certain land in Kingston, which had formerly been set apart for a rectory, and on which a church had been erected, in trust, among other things, that whenever the governor should erect a parsonage or rectory in Kingston, and duly present an incumbent thereto, the trustees should convey the land to such incumbent and his successors forever, upon the same trusts thereinbefore expressed. On the 21st January, 1836, letters patent issued erecting a rectory in Kingston. Before the 10th May, 1837, the trusts of the patent of 1824 had been fulfilled. and on that day by deed poll, after reciting the two patents above mentioned, and the induction of the said O. S. into the said rectory, the said G. M. and J. M., the two other grantees in the first patent mentioned, in fulfilment of the trust, conveyed the land to said O. S. as rector and incumbent, to hold to him and his successors, subject to and under the uses and trusts set forth in the letters patent to them:—Held, on the authority of Denne d. Bowyer v. Judge, 11 East 288, that Define d. Hower v. Judge, 11 East 288, total the conveyance of 1837 passed two-thirds to the plaintiff, and that he was entitled to re-cover for that; for semble, in a court of law the ground that the trust to convey, being joint, was incapable of severance, could not arise, the legal estate only being in question. Lyster v. Kirkpatrick, 26 U. C. R. 217.

Unexpressed Trust—Illegality—Validity of Conceyance.]—Held, that a conveyance of certain pews in a church belonging to the Church of England to the plaintiff, a member of that church, even if clothed with an unexpressed trust in favour of a corporation, incapacitated under the Church Temporalities Act from being pewholders, by reason of their not belonging to the church, was nevertheless in a court of law binding between the parties to it. Semble, that a court of equity would set it aside, but that a court of law could not recognize such trust, even if it were set out. Ridout v. Harris, 17 C. P. 88.

See Leys v. Withrow, 38 U. C. R. 601; Annes v. Dornan, 10 C. P. 299; Parsons v. Crabb, 34 U. C. R. 136, ante V. 6.

Death of Sole Trustee—Appointment of Two-Cestus que Trust.]—Where the cour appoints a new trustee, it will be satisfied with one. Where the trustee appointed by a will had died, and he who was named by the testator to succeed him was out of the jurisdiction, and shewn to be an unsuitable person, the court appointed in his place a cestui que trust under the will, whom the testator had named as a trustee thereof under certain contingencies which had not occurred; but directed another to be associated with him, although the will provided for one trustee only acting in the trust at one time. In re-Dillon's Trusts, 3 C. L. J. 126.

Death of Surviving Trustee.]-A testator, by a codicil, directed that the trustees named in his will, or the survivor of them, or the heirs, &c., of such survivor, should, during the minority of his children, have power to appoint some person whom they might think fit and competent to take charge of and carry on his business as it had been carried on duron his business as it had been straight as the person so appointed a salary. The surviving trustee died intestate, leaving his widow, who administered to his estate, but declined acting as a trustee under the will; and his eldest son being an infant, and therefore incapable of acting as such trustee, the persons interested under the will filed a bill for the appointment of a new trustee :-Held, that, under the circumstances, the parties were entitled to have a new trustee appointed. Lyon v. Radenhurst, 5 Gr. 544.

- Executors - Creator of Trust.]-There is nothing anomalous, nor is there any incompatibility, in the creator of a trust being a trustee thereof and seeing to the due execution of the trust. A trust was created in favour of two trustees and the survivor, and the executors and administrators of such survivor. The executors of the survivor, one of whom was the creator of the trust, proved his will. A petition, verified by affidavit, was afterwards presented by the executors, setting forth that at the time of proving the will they were not aware that they thereby became trustees of the trust estate, and one of them, the creator of the trust, swore that had he been aware that such would be the effect of proving the will, he would not have done so. The court thought this a sufficient reason for appointing new trustees, and, under the circumstances, the adult cestui que trust consenting, ordered the trustees to be paid their costs of the application out of the estate. In re Helliwell's Trusts, 21 Gr. 346.

Number of Trustees.]—It is contrary to the course of the court, without some very special reason, to sanction the appointment of one trustee in place of three. Kingsmill v. Miller, 15 Gr. 171.

Personal Trust not Transferable to New Trustees.] — A testator by a codicil directed that the trustees named in his will, or the survivor of them, or the heirs, &c., of such survivor, should during the minority of his children have power to appoint some person whom they might think fit and competent to take charge of and carry on his business as it had been carried on during his lifetime, and to pay the person so appointed a salary. The surviving trustee died intestate, leaving his widow, who administered to his estate, but declined acting as a trustee under the will, and his eldest son being an infant and therefore incapable of acting as such trustee, the persons interested under the will filed a bill for the appointment of a new trustee:—Held, that the powers given by the codicil were personal to the trustee named in the will, or the survivor, or the heirs, &c., of the survivor, and could not be exercised by any trustee appointed by the court. Lyon v. Radenhurst, 5 Gr. 544.

By a clause in a marriage settlement, it was stipulated that trustees should at their option, during the life of the intended husband, permit him or the intended wife to take and use the rents, issues, and profits of the trust estate to their own use; and a subsequent clause provided that new trustees should be appointed in certain contingencies. Upon a bill filed by the wife to appoint a new trustee by reason of the residence of one out of the jurisdiction:—Held, that this trust was one of personal confidence, and could not be executed by a trustee appointed by the court. And the husband not having been heard of for upwards of four years, the court appointed a new trustee, and directed him to pay one-half of the rents to the plaintiff, and the other half to be invested for the benefit of the husband. Tripp v. Martin, 9 Gr. 20.

Land was vested in trustees by a deed, which provided, "that all or any part thereof should or might be absolutely sold by the said trustees, or the survivor of them, his executors or administrators, with the consent in writing of the cestuis qui trust, or the survivor of them, and after the decease of the said par-ties of the first and second parts, then, in the discretion of the trustees, for any price which they, the trustees or trustee, should think reasonable; and the money to arise from the sale to be paid to the said trustees or the survivors, &c., without any obligation on purchaser to see to the application thereof, so as he shall take the receipt of the trustees or as he shall take the receipt of the trustees or the survivors of them, &c., or other only act-ing trustee or trustees for the time being, for the same money." One of the trustees died, and the other was released from the trust, and two others were appointed by the court in their stead:—Held, on objections taken to an attempted sale of the trust estate vested in the new trustees, with the consent of the cestuis que trust, that the power to sell was a personal trust and not transferable to the new trustees. Ridout v. Howland, 10 Gr.

Removal of Former Trustees - Reduction in Number — Cestui Que Trust.] — One trustee filed a bill against his co-trustees and this cestuis que trust, to be relieved from the trust, on the grounds set forth in the bill. The other trustees, by answer, asked for the The other trustees, by answer, asked to the same relief on the same grounds, which were applicable to all, and the cestuis que trust, most of whom were adults, submitted to the relief. The court granted a reference to the master for the approval of new trustees in place of all the existing trustees. In such a case the court, at the instance of the cestuis que trust, in granting the usual reference, added a direction that if the master, on taking the evidence, found sufficient reason for reducing the number of trustees, or for the appointment of one of the cestuis que trust, as one of the trustees or as sole trustee, he should report the facts and reasons to the court. Proudfoot v. Tiffany, 11 Gr. 461.

(b) Appointment of New Trustees by Persons Named in Instruments or under Statute.

Invalid Appointment under Instrument-Validity under Statute-Retroactivity —Sole Trustee.]—A testator devised certain properties to H. F. M., J. H. M., and D. M., as tenants in common, and charged the same with $100,000 to be paid by them to his son, and two daughters, married women, share and share alike, through his wife M. M., as trus-tee as therein mentioned; and directed that at the death of M. M. the said $100,000 should the death of M. M. the said $100,000 should be held by the said devisees and their survi-vors on the trusts of the will, "unless my said wife shall have previously appointed, by will wife shall have previously appointed, by will or of otherwise, any other person or persons to be a trustee in her place, which I hereby authorize and give her power to do." On 5th November, 1873, M. M., by deed, professed to mominate and appoint I. R. and J. U. to be trustees in her place under the will, and afterwards, by another deed of 6th October, 1877, again appointed I. R. and J. U. to be such trustees:—Held, that the will only authorized M. M. to appoint a trustee to be such after her death, and neither of the appointments of U. death, and neither of the appointments of L. R. and J. U. was authorized by the will. Held. however, that although R. S. O. 1877 c. 107, s. 30, could not be invoked to authorize either appointment, since it did not come into force till 31st December, 1877, yet under 40 Vict, c. 8, s. 30 (O.), assented to on 2nd March, 1877, the latter appointment was a good and valid one, for that Act applies to the case of a trustee appointed before the passing of it, who desires to be discharged from the trust, and consequently money paid to M. M. as such trustee, after the appoint-ment of 6th October, 1877, did not discharge the debt. Held, also, that the fact that L. R. and J. U. were the husbands of the female cestuis que trust, although it appeared from the will that the testator intended that the legacies should be free from the control of any present or future husband, did not make the appointment bad, although it might be that if the court were appointing trustees, the husbands of the cestuis que trust would not be appointed. 40 Vict, c. S. s. 30 (O.) is very broad in its language, and a trustee who has from the beginning been a sole trustee has, under it, the same position and power as tee. Semble, that 40 Vict, c, S, s, 30 (O.) is prospective and not retrospective in this sense, that it would not make valid the appointment of trustees made prior to its passing without authority. McLachlin v. Usborne, Magee v. Usborne, 7 O. R. 297. Personal Disqualification—Conflict of Interest and Duty.)—It having been suggested by the court that the appointment (as authorized by the settlement) of H. as trustee, was not one which the court would have made, the matter again came on for argument, when it was held that H. was placed in a position in which his interest as one of the parties to the deed upon forfeiture might conflict with his duty as trustee, and that the court would not have made and could not sanction his appointment. In re Treleven and Horner, 28 Gr. 624.

Power of Appointment—Successor in Trust—Title.] — A testator, amongst other things, devised certain lands to his daughter M., upon certain trusts as to the application of the rents and profits in favour of his daughters so long as they remained single, and on the marriage of any the whole benefit of the trust to such of them as remained single, and the survivor of them till her death; and the testator further declared, "that in case my said trustee or her successor, with the concurrence of my said daughters in said trust mentioned, and then surviving, may deem it prudent and expedient, they may sell and dispose of all said lands," and he further declared that none of his "married daughters, or any that may get married, shall, from time of said marriage, be participant, or have a control or claim on said trust estate or in a control of cann on said trust estate or in the disposal thereof. . . And I declare that in case of the death or marriage of my said daughter M., either before me or before the termination of the said trusts, then that my then unmarried daughters may and shall be, or those appointed under their hands and seals may and shall be, the trustees and ex-ecutrices or executors of this my will, and so on in like manner in case of the death of any such subsequently appointed trustees and executors, till the termination and completion of said trusts and final disposal of my said estate, it being my desire that no married daughter, on account of the influence that her husband might exercise over her, shall con-tinue to act as my trustee or executrix." M. married, and the plaintiff, who was the only surviving unmarried sister, had contracted with defendant for the sale of a portion of the devised estate. On a bill filed by the the devised estate. On a bill filed by the vendor to enforce such contract:—Held, that the plaintiff had under the will power, as successor of M. to make a good title, and that it was not necessary for M. to join in the conveyance. Pegley v. Atkinson, 20 Gr. 383.

Trust—Incorporation by Reference—Title.]—T. C. K., by a deed of 7th April, 1870, conveyed lands to two trustees to and for the sole and absolute use of his wife, C. E. K., for and during the term of her natural life, to and for her own separate use and benefit, or for the use of such person or persons, and for such estates and interests as she, notwithstanding her coverture, should by any deed or writing under her hand and seal, or by her last will, appoint. By a deed made two years afterwards, T. C. K. conveyed other lands to the same trustees, upon the same trusts as were set forth in the former deed. One of the trustees having died, and the other having removed from this Province, C. E. K., professing to be acting in pursuance of the power contained in the first mentioned deed, by a deed made in 1877 appointed the plaintiffs trustees of the lands, to hold upon the Art. 269. C. C., provides for the only case where a tutor ad hoc can be appointed to minors. Rattray v. Larue, 15 S. C. R. 102.

Effect of Release of Trustee—Covenant—Novation — Discharge.] — See Canada Permanent L. and S. Co. v. Ball, 30 O. R. 557.

Insolvency—Assignce—Sale of Interest.]
—The insolvency of a trustee, or his leaving in debt to reside abroad, is a sufficient ground to remove him from the trust. An insolvent's reversionary interest in an estate passes to his assignee, and entitles the assignee to maintain a suit in a proper case for the appointment of new trustees, and for an account of the estate; but the court refused to make an order for the sale of such reversionary interest. Gray v. Hatch, 18 Gr. 72.

Misconduct.]—A letter written by a trustee under a will to the cestuis que trust, threatening, in case proceedings were taken azainst him, to make disclosures as to malpractices by the testator, which might result in heavy penalties being exacted from the estate, is such an improper act as to call for his immediate removal from the trusteeship. Grant v. MacLaren, 23 S. C. R. 310.

General.—Action — Parties — Attorney-General.—In an action by an incorporated educational institute for the removal of one of the trustees, who also acted as secretary, for alleged improper dealing with the corporate funds, judgment was given, but without any finding of wilful misconduct, directing such trustee's removal, on the ground that so much doubt was cast upon his dealings with the trust funds that it would not be proper to allow him to remain a member of the board. Such an action is maintainable without making the attorney-general a party, Wilberforce Educational Institute v. Holden, 17 O. R. 439.

Removal of Co-trustees.] — When one of the trustees was dead and another was removed for misconduct, the remaining trustee was held entitled to be discharged from the trust. Mitchell v. Richey, 13 Gr. 445.

(e) Other Cases.

Decree Relieving Trustees—Provisions of, Varying Trust.] — By a marriage settlement certain property was conveyed to trustees for the benefit of the husband and wife during their lives—remainder to their issue (infants). After managing the estate for several years, the trustees filed a bill to be relieved, and a decree to that effect was made, which, however, contained other directions, and under these and subsequent orders the expenditure of a part of the corpus of the estate in improving the trust property, and furnishing the dwelling house of the parents.

and some other variations of the trusts, were authorized. One solicitor acted for all the cestuis que trust. On the cause coming on for further directions, the court refused to carry out the decree and orders which had been so obtained. Baldwin v. Crawpord. 1 Gr. 202.

Executor—Release.]—A release by an executor who is also a trustee does not amount to a relinauishing of the trust. Doe d. Berringer v. Hiscote, 6 O. S. 23; Doe d. Boyer v. Claus, 4 O. S. 148.

Powers of New Trustees — Mortgage — Assignment — Power of Sale.] — R. S. O. 1877 c. 197, s. 3, provides that every new trustee shall have the same powers, authorities, and discretions, and shall in all respects act as if he had originally been nominated a trustee by the deed, will, or other instrument creating the trust. Where a mortgage made in favour of two trustees of a marriage settlement, and which contained a power of sale exercisable by them, but not by an assignee of the mortgage, not being in conformity with the Short Forms Act, was, together with the lands therein, on the resignation of the trustees, assigned to a new trustee appointed in their place:—Held, that the new trustee stood in the place of the former trustees, and could exercise the power of sale, not as an assignee of the setate, but as if appointed a trustee by the deed creating the trust. Re Gilmour and White, 14 O. R. 634.

- 2. Compensation and Allowance,
 - (a) Care and Management,

Absence of Agreement.] — A trustee appointed by a deed is, without express agreement, entitled to compensation for his services as such trustee. Deedes v. Graham, 20 Gr. 258.

Absence of Provision in Deed.]—In the Province of Nova Scotia prior to the passing of 51 Vict. c. 11, s. 69, the rule of English law relating to commission to trustees was in force, and no such commission could be allowed unless provided by the trust. Porcer v. Meagher, 17 S. C. R. 287.

Amount Allowed — Appeal.] — What is proper compensation to be allowed to a trustee for his management of the trust estate, is a matter of opinion, and even if, in granting the allowance, the court below may have erred on the side of liberality, that alone is not sufficient ground for reversing the judgment. Where the master allowed $125, which the court increased to $250, the court of appeal refused to interfere. McDonald v. Davidson, 6 A. R. 329.

— Provisions of Deed.]—Where the compensation is fixed by the deed, the master cannot reduce the amount. Heron v. Moffatt, 7 P. R. 438.

—— Services—Appeal.]—The master has power to allow a lump sum to a trustee as his renuneration for the care and management of real estate, but to entitle him to such sum there ought to be evidence to enable the court reasonably to see that the services for which such sum is asked have been rendered, and to make a proper allowance therefor. Where a master fixed a sum, on evidence not sufficiently particular, the case, on appeal, was referred back to him, with leave to the trustee to give proper evidence. The trustee to pay the costs of the appeal and the additional costs in the master's office. Stinson v. Stinson, 8 P. R. 550.

— Sum in Lien of Commission—Appeal.]—Trustees under a marriage settlement exchanged an investment of the estate in Manitoba lands into the stock of a land company. Nothing by way of income had ever been realized from either land or stock, and it was stated that both were valueless. The responsibility of making the exchange was taken away by the consent of those interested:—Held, that a percentage upon the nominal value of the stock was not the way to arrive at the trustees' remuneration, but that they should be allowed a sum to cover their trouble in making the exchange; and the allowance made by a referee was reduced from $102.50 to $50. Re Prittic Trusts, 13 P. R. 19.

Falue of Work.]—Where compensation was given to trustees by the trust deed, not in a lump sum, and they had failed in some points of their duty, the master did not consider that he could deprive them of compensation, but held that he could determine on the value of the work done, and make a corresponding allowance. City Bank v, Maulson, 3 Ch. Ch. 334.

Commission — Collection of Rents — Agent,]—Certain rents were collected by the trustees through an agent, whom they paid by commission:—Held, that they were justified in employing an agent to make the actual collections for them, but were bound to look after the agent, and for their care, trouble, and responsibility were entitled to an allowance of two and a-half per cent, upon the rents collected. Re Prittie Trusts, 13 P. R. 19.

—Trustees on assuming the trust estate are not to be allowed a commission for merely taking the same over; but trustees, properly dealing with the estate, and handing it over on the determination of the trust, are entitled to one commission, for the receipt and proper application of the estate, payable out of the corpus. Trustees are not entitled to a commission for the investment or reinvestment of the funds of the estate. They are entitled to a commission on the receipt and payment of the income, and to a compensation for looking after the estate, payable out of the income, and to a compensation for looking after the estate, payable out of the crypus. Trustees may not unreasonably be allowed something for services not covered by the commission awarded. Re Berkeley's Trusts, S. P. R. 193.

Money not Received—Wilful Default.]—A commission should not in general be allowed to an executor or a trustee in respect of sums which he did not receive, but is charged with on the ground of wilful default. Bald v. Thompson, 17 Gr. 154.

Effect of—Surrogate Act.]—The old rule as to compensation of trustees has only been abrogated by the Surrogate Act as regards trusts under wills. Wilson v. Proudfoot, 15 Gr. 103.

Where on a reference to a master to take an account of a trustee's dealings with an estate, that officer omitted to ascertain the amount of the trustee's charges, costs, &c., a reference back to ascertain it was directed at the hearing on further directions; and the fact of the master having reported that the trustee had omitted to keep any regular set of books shewing a debtor and creditor account of his dealings with the estate, but not stating that for that reason he had been unable to ascertain the amount, was not considered a sufficient reason for his having omitted to find the amount of such claim. Life Association of Scotland v. Walker, 24 Gr. 293.

Provisions of Will.]—Where a testator provides by his will for the payment to executors for their services, any presumption that any undisposed of residue of personalty is intended for them beneficially is effectually rebutted; and the fact that by law they are entitled to be paid a compensation without any provision made therefor by the will, is immaterial. Lovcless v. Clarke, 2.4 Gr. 14.

— New Trustee—Amount Allowed.]— Semble, that the limitation of a will as to the amount to be paid for the services of the original trustees under it, does not apply to a trustee afterwards appointed by the court, at the instance of the cestul que trust. Williams v. Roy. 9 O. R. 534, distinguished. Precborn v. Vandusen, 15 P. R. 264.

Public Trust — Town Commissioners.]—
Trustees of a municipality are entitled, under the general provisions of the Act of 1874 (37 Vict. c. 9 (O.)), to a commission on moneys passing through their hands as compensation for their care and trouble in the management of the trust. The commissioners of the Cobourg town trust were, therefore, held so entitled. In re Commissioners of Cobourg Town Trust. 22 Gr. 377.

Herbour Commissioners — Amount Allowed—Private Interest of Commissioner.] —Held, following In re Commissioners of Cobourg Town Trust, 22 Gr. 377, that the commissioners of the Toronto harbour were entitled to compensation for their services; and this whether the harbour belonged to the Dominion or the provincial government, as, in the event of it being found to belong to the Dominion, it must be assumed that the Dominion government intended the commissioners to be subject to the law of the Province in which the trust was to be administered. sum to be allowed should be such as would be a reasonable compensation for the services rendered, and at the same time such a moderate amount as would not be an inducement to members of the city council, or of the board of trade, or others, to seek the office for the sake of the emolument. The duties of the office being shewn to be not at all onerous, an allowance of $50 a year was named as sufficient to obtain the services of the right class of men to discharge them. The rule that a trustee must not have a personal interest in conflict with his duty as such trustee, applies as well to public as to private trusts. Therefore, where one of the commissioners of a harbour had large landed interests adjacent to and upon one part of it, and was interested in having that portion of the harbour improved, the court, on directing an allowance to be made to the commissioners for their services, expressly excepted the commissioner so interested from participating therein, and this although he had not applied for any compensation, and had at the board of commissioners opposed any such allowance being made. Re Toronto Harbour Commissioners, 28 Gr. 193.

Retention out of Estate.]—A trustee is entitled to retain his commission from time to time out of moneys received, without waiting for the completion of his trust duties. Heron v. Mofatt. 7 P. R. 438.

Trustees under Will—Executors.]—The rule of the court is to allow compensation to trustees of real estate under a will, as well as to executors. Bald v. Thompson, 17 Gr. 154.

See Christie v. Saunders, 2 Gr. 395; Heron v. Moffatt, 22 Gr. 370; Hayes v. Hayes, 29 Gr. 90; Burn v. Gifford, 8 P. R. 44; Burn v. Burn, 8 O. R. 237; Taylor v. Magrath, 10 O. R. 669; Re Bolt and Iron Co., Livingstone's Case, 14 O. R. 211, 16 A. R. 337.

(b) Expenditure.

Capital—Maintenance and Education— Infant,]—Trustees may be allowed payments made for maintenance and education out of their capital. Under a general administration decree, the master may, without any special direction, take evidence as to such payments by executors, out of the infant's shares of capital, and report the facts. Stewart v, Fletcher, 16 Gr. 235.

Improvements — Infant Cestui que Trust.] — The principal that when a trustee expends his money upon the estate, and thereby increases its value, the property will not be wrested from him without repaying him the expenditure by which the estate has been substantially improved, acted upon in the case of an infant cestui que trust. Bevis v. Boulton, 7 Gr. 39.

Invalid Trust—Expenses of Executing.]
—It is incident to the office of a trustee that the trust property shall reimburse him for his expenses in administering the trust; and a clause so indemnifying a trustee is infused into every trust deed; and the statute R. S. O. 1877 c. 107. s. 3, does little more than what courts of equity had been accustomed to divide the state of the sta

Semble, that, though the trust deed in question was invalid, and notwithstanding Smith v. Dresser, L. R. 1 Eq. 651, 35 Beav, 378, yet, as against one who himself assisted in creating the trust, a trustee acting under it would have been entitled to expenses incurred in respect of it; but upon the facts stared in the report, it was held that the sums claimed were not shewn to have been incurred in respect of the trust deed, S. C., 9 O. R. 198.

See Executors and Administrators, VII. 3.

3. Costs and Expenses.

Costs of Action for Account.]—Where a creditor brought an action for an account against the assignee for the benefit of creditors of his debtor, after demanding copies of the assignee's accounts, but without expressing any desire or making any attempt to inspect the accounts, and without waiting a reasonable time for preparation of copies, the assignee was allowed his costs as between solicitor and client out of the balance of the estate in his hands, and in case of deficiency the plaintiff was ordered personally to pay it. The mere fact that a trustee in rendering an account to his cestui que trust, claims that he has in his hands a smaller sum than is found to be due by him when his accounts are taken in court, does not disentitle him to the costs of an action against him for an account. Sandford v. Porter, 16 A. R. 505.

Counsel Fee for Advice.]—Held, that the master had properly allowed to defendant, in his accounts, a fee of $10 paid by him to a counsel for advice as to his action in respect of two assignments of a policy of insurance. Hayes v. Hayes. 29 Gr. 90.

Expenses of Prosecuting Speculative Undertaking, I—Where certain persons, including G., advanced money to complete the building of a yacht at Cobourg, in order to sail for prizes at New York and Philadelphia, and scrip under seal was executed, declaring that G. was to hold the yacht in trust as security for the advances; and G. incurred certain running expenses in taking the yacht to the race:—Held, that G. was entitled to a first charge on the proceeds of the sale of the yacht, for these expenses, as they had been incurred in prosecuting the enterprise for which the trust was created. Burn v. Gifford. S. P. R. 44.

Fire Insurance Premiums.]—A trustee, unlike a mortgagee, is entitled to insure the trust property, and charge the premiums paid against it, without any express stipulation to that effect in the instrument creating the trust. Heron v. Moffatt, 22 Gr. 370.

Preparing Accounts—Costs of Action— Commission—Sum Paid to Agent.]—Held, by the master in ordinary, that the amounts paid by C. M. to a professional land agent in connection with the sale of the property, and a certain sum paid by C. M. to a professional accountant for making up an account, should be allowed to him in his accounts. But the accounts paid by C. M.'s executors to the professional paid by C. M.'s executors to the account brought in by the account brought in by the account brought in by the account of the costs in the action, should not be allowed to C. M.'s solicitors on account of their costs in the action, should not be allowed to C. M. in his accounts. Held, also, by the master in ordinary, that C. M. as trustee-solicitor, was not entitled to profit costs, but, nevertheless, he was entitled to a commission of five per cent, on the amounts coming to A. M. and T., less a certain sum paid as commission to a land agent for effecting the sale of the property, since double commissions cannot be allowed. Taylor v. Magrath, 10 O. R. 669.

Solicitor for Trustee—Proceedings— Liability—Advice.]—It is the duty of a solicitor to inform his client, when a trustee, as to the advisability of taking proceedings and incurring costs, when it may become a question whether the costs will have to be paid out of his private funds or out of the trust fund or estate. Butterfield v. Wells, 4 O. R. 182

— Taxation of Bill—Cestui que Trust.]
—Any one cestui que trust may, in the discretion of the court, obtain an order under the third party clauses of the Solicitors Act for the taxation of a bill of costs for business connected with the trust estate of a solicitor employed by the trustee. Sandford v. Porter, 16 A. R. 505.

Solicitor-Trustee — Profit Costs.]—The rule that a trustee acting as a solicitor of the trust is entitled to costs out of pocket merely, applies only when the costs are payable out of the trust funds, not when payable by an adverse party. Meighen v. Buell. 24 Gr. 503, distinguished. Colonial Trust Co. v. Cameron. 24 Gr. 548.

On rehearing the order as reported 24 Gr. 503, disallowing to a solicitor-trustee costs other than costs out of pocket in suits to which he was a party, reversed. Meighen v. Buell. 25 Gr. 604.

Abandonment of Item by Cestui Que Trust—Evidence of—Interest.]—The holder of two insurance policies, on which actions were pending, assigned the same to M. as security for advances and authorized him to proceed with the said actions and collect the monexy paid by the insurance companies therein. By a subsequent assignment J. became entitled to the balance of said insurance moneys after M.'s claim was paid. stui Que The holder ch actions M. as seim to procollect the nies therepecame ence moneys ons resultig paid in defect in the other policy the plaintiff in the action thereon was nonsuited. In 1886 M, wrote to J. informing him that a suit had been instituted for reformation of the latter policy and payment of the sum insured, and requesting him to give security for costs in said suit, pur-suant to a Judge's order therefor. J. replied that, as he had not been consulted in the matter, and considered the success of the suit problematical, he would not give security, and problematical, ne would not give a service forbade M. employing the trust funds in its prosecution. M. wrote again, saying: "As I understand it, as far as you are concerned, you are satisfied to abide by the judgment in the suit at law, and decline any responsibility and abandon any interest in the equity proceedings:" to which J. made no reply. The solicitor of M. provided the security, and proceeded with the suit, which was eventually compromised by the company paying some-what less than half the amount of the policy. Before the letters were written J. had brought suit against M. for an account of the funds received under the assignment, and in 1887, more than a year after they were written, a decree was made referring it to a referee to take an account of trust funds received by M.. or which might have been received with reasonable diligence, and of all claims and reasonable diligence, and of all callies and charges thereon prior to the assignment to J., and the acceptance thereof. On the taking of the account M. contended that all claim on the policy had been abandoned by the above on the policy had been homeometry to any evidence correspondence, and objected to any evidence relating thereto. The referee took the evi-dence, and charged M. with the amount re-ceived, but on exceptions by M. to his report the same was disallowed:—Held, that the sum paid by the company was properly allowed by the referee: that the alleged abandonment took place before the making of the decree which it would have affected and should have been so urged; that M. not having taken steps to have it dealt with by the decree could not raise it on the taking of the account; and that, if open to him, the abandonment was not established, as the proceedings against the company were carried on after it exactly as before, and the money paid by the company must be held to have been received by the solicitor as solicitor of M., and not of the original holder Held, further, that the referee, in charging M. with interest on money received from the date of receipt of each sum to a fixed date before the suit began, and allowing him the like interest on each disbursement from date of par-ment to same fixed date, had not proceeded upon a wrong principle. Jones v. McKean, 27 S. C. R. 249.

Appropriation of Receipts—Claim of Trustee—Interest — Principal.]—It appeared that in 1880, on T.'s solicitors demanding an account from C. M. of his dealings with a certain trust estate, C. M., employed S., a professional accountant, to make out from his books a detailed account, and S., in so doing, applied receipts from time to time in liquidation of the principal moneys due to C. M. under the trust deed, instead of applying them in the first instance in liquidation of the interest accruing due thereon, and the account so drawn up was delivered to the solicitors of T. An affidavit of C. M., moreover, was produced in the master's office, wherein he stated that this account was correct, and made out under his supervision, and he spoke to the same effect in an examination taken de bene esse in this action. After judgment in this action, which referred it to the master in ordinary to take account of C. M.'s dealings as trustee, and before the same was taken into the master's office, C. M. died, and on return of the master's warrant to bring in the account, C. M.'s executors brought in a new account, differing from that rendered as aforesaid to T.'s solicitors, in that they applied receipts in liquidation in the first instance of the interest accruing on C. M.'s chain, which method made a difference in the result of many thousand dollars. No account had been received to A. M.:—Held, that as against T. G. M. and his executors were bound by the account previously rendered to T.'s solicitors and by the method of appropriation of receipts to principal contained therein, but were not so bound as secutors were bound by the account brought in by C. M.'s executors could stand. In the account thus delivered in 1880, after the principal moneys were satisfied by application as aforesaid of receipts, interest was charged at ten per eent, on all subsequent receipts against C. M.:—Held, that this was an error in the account and the executors of C. M. were not bound by it, and to this extent the a ount might be rectlified. McGregory, Gaulin, 4. U. C. R. 378, considered and distinguished. Taylor v. Magrath, 10 O. R. 669.

Inspection by Cestui Que Trust—Furnishing Copies.]—It is the duty of a trustee, or other accounting party, at all times to have his accounts ready, to afford all facilities for their inspection and examination, and to give full information whenever required. As a general rule he is not obliged to prepare copies of his accounts for the parties interested, though if, for example, the cestui que trust or principal lives at a distance from where the trust affairs are being carried on, or in a foreign country, it would be the duty of a trustee to give all reasonable information and explanations by letter; and even, if requested, but at the expense of the cestui que trust, to prepare and transmit accounts and statements. Sandford v. Porter, 16 A. R. 565.

Rendering Accounts to Cestui Que Trust—Inspection—Costs.]—A trustee must use reasonable diligence to have the accounts of the trust ready, and to render them within a reasonable time after demand on behalf of the cestui que trust; and where a trustee wholly neglected this duty, though he offered his books for inspection by the parties interested, he was charged with the costs of the suit up to the hearing. Randall v. Burrocces, 11 Gr. 334.

(b) Acts of Agent or Co-trustee.

Co-executor—Sale and Assignment of Security—Effect of.)—A. and B., executors and trustees under a will with power of sale, sold and took a mortgage to secure purchase money, they being in the recital named as executors. B., without the knowledge or consent of A., assigned the mortgage and appropriated the consideration money to his own use:—Held, that no estate passed under the assignment, except so far as the trust estate might be found debtor to B.; and also that, as between the contending equities of the trust estate and the assignee, the maxim qui prior est in tempore potior est in jure, would apply in favour of the trust estate. Henderson v. Woods, 9 Gr. 539.

— Security in Yame of—Payments—Validity.]— Five executors and trustees took an assignment of a mortgage to two on assignment of a mortgage to two on the payment of the payment of the payment containing no further reference to the will. The agent for the five thereupon gave notice to the mortgagor that the assignment had been made to the executors, and it did not appear that the mortgagor had any other notice of the assignment:—Held, that he was justified in assuming that the assignment was made to the executors as such; and payments to one of them, made bonå fide, were held valid. Evart v. Dryden, 13 Gr. 50.

Confidential Clerk—Embezzlement.] — Where a trustee, a solicitor, allowed a confidential clerk and cashier of the firm of which he was a member, to receive occasionally in his (the trustee's) absence moneys nayable to the estate, and issue his (the trustee's) receipt for the same, and the cashier, after receiving a payment, embezzled the same:—Held, that the trustee was not liable to make good the loss to the estate. Re McM. Trust, 28 C. L. J. 502.

Co-trustees — Agreement for Lease — Specific Performance.] — Where two of four trustees entered into an agreement for the lease of certain trust property to the plaintiff, but without the knowledge or assent of the other two, to whom under the circumstances notice of the agreement could not be imputed, specific performance of the agreement was refused. McKelvey v. Rouvkc, 15 Gr, 380.

Fraud — Cheque — Forging Indorsement,—Lo., a trustee under a will, relying upon the report of his co-trustee, a solicitor, in investing moneys of the estate, that he had made a loan on satisfactory security, joined him is signing a cheque on the estate bank account payable to the order of the alleged borrower. The solicitor-trustee indorsed the cheque by forging the payee's name, obtained the money, and absconded: —Held, that L. was not chargeable with the loss. Re McLatchie, Preston v. Leslie, 30 O. R. 179.

Managing Trustee—Co-trustee abroad.]

—The circumstance that one trustee res' des in a foreign country justifies his delegating to his co-trustee the right to receive payment of mortgage moneys due to the trust, and this notwithstanding that the instrument creating the trust directs that none of the powers given thereby shall be exercised while there is only one trustee. In re Huntly, 7 C. L. T. Occ. N. 251.

Misappropriation by — Representations to Cortrustee.] — Trust funds which stood in the name of two trustees (A. and B.) and were naid out on the cheques of the two, got into the hands of one A., who was the acting trustee, and were misapplied by him without the knowledge of the other, B.
The primary cestul que trust was a married woman; the trust deed contained a clause in restraint of anticipation; and there was a trust over with a limited power of appointment. B. insisted that he was not liable, as he had become a trustee at the request of the lady and her husband, and it had been represented to him that his name only was wanted; that his co-trustee, A., was to do the business part of the trust; and that he, B., was to have no trouble about it:—Held, that these representations did not exempt B. from the duty of seeing that the trust money was properly applied. Mickleburgh v. Parker, 17 Gr. 503.

Moneys not Entered on Books.]—A trustee is bound to exercise a prudent supervision over the acts of an agent, or a co-trustee appointed or acting as agent or manager, for his co-trustee; and where he neglects this duty, he makes himself liable for losses occurring through the acts of such agent or manager. But a trustee in this position was not held liable for moneys received by the agent or co-trustee acting as manager, which were not entered on the books (to which the trustee charged had access) and which he could not have discovered by any vigilance he might have used. A trustee is liable for the acts of an agent in whose appointment he has concurred, and whose defaications would have been discovered by an ordinary inspection of the books kept by him. City Bank v. Maulson, 3 Ch. Ch. 334.

Trustee for Sale of Lands-Authority of Solicitor for—Solicitor's Clerk.]—Defendant was a trustee under the will of P. for the sale of the property in question. In 1834 a friendly suit was instituted in England (where the trustees and all the parties interested under the will resided) for the execution of the trusts of the will, and a decree was made for the appointment of a receiver, and the sale by him of the testator's lands and the sale by fill of the resultor's latus in Upper Canada. A receiver appointed in this suit having died, a considerable period elapsed before another was appointed. During this interval the Canadian solicitors for the estate continued to sell the lands, and manage the property as theretofore, under the authority of the trustee. While so acting, the plaintiff applied to them to purchase this land. The clerk who attended to the business of the estate had been authorized to buy a few lots for himself at the prices at which they were for sale to others; and, acting upon the strength of this general authority, he, without their knowledge, contracted in his own name and behalf, with the plaintiff, for the sale of the lot at £250, and gave the plaintiff his own bond for a deed, and received from him the purchase money. The plaintiff supposed the clerk was acting for the defendant, and was authorized to act for him. The clerk some time afterwards entered in the solicitors' book of sales, and subsequently in an account transmitted to the defendant, a sale of the lot to another person at £150, and charged the plaintiff with that amount as assignee of the pre-tended purchaser. A deed of conveyance to the plaintiff, reciting a sale to him at 150, was prepared by and under the directions of the clerk, and was transmitted by the solicitors with other deeds to the trustee for execution, and retained by the latter for some time, but was not executed:—Held, that there was not contract which the court could enforce against the trustee, but, as a suit was to some extent necessary to ascertain the truth satisfactorily, and the same was rendered unne-cessarily expensive by the unqualified denial of the defendant that the solicitors had any power to sell lands, the court, in dismissing the bill, refused the defendant his costs. The son accordingly received the rents for several years, and, without the knowledge of the trustee, misappropriated them:—Held, that the trustee was not liable. Mitchell v. Ritchey, 12 Gr. (c) Improper Alienation of Trust Property.

Alienation of Land Conveyed in Trust or Dedicated for Public Purposes. |—See MUNICIPAL CORPORATIONS, XI.—WAY, III. 4.

Assignment by Insolvent to Creditors—Composition—Distribution.—A trader, in insolvent circumstances, made an assignment of his property to several of his principal creditors, in trust, for the benefit of his creditors generally. Afterwards it was agreed that the creditors should accept 20 per cent, of their demand, and discharge the debtor, whereupon the plaintiffs and other creditors executed a deed to carry out this agreement. Before payment of the composition, however, the trustees reassigned the property to the debtor, on his undertaking to pay the several creditors the amount of their claims, which he did pay to the trustees but failed to pay to the plaintiffs:—Held, that the trustees were liable to make good to the plaintiffs the sum coming to them, if the property which had been assigned to them by the debtor was sufficient to realize the amount of the composition agreed on; and as to this, if desired by the trustees, an inquiry by the master was directed. National Bank of Albany v. Moore, 21 Gr. 269.

Mortrage — Quit Claim—Consideration.]—A cestul que trust of land created a mortgage by an assignment absolute in form, for a nominal consideration, but neglected to intimate to the trustee that the transfer was intended to operate as security only. In fact the land purported to be conveyed to the trustee had already been sold and conveyed to the purchaser. The trustee, without calling for the production of the assignment by his cestul que trust, executed a conveyance by way of quit claim to the original vendor, who conveyed other lots in their stead, absolutely, to the assignee of the cestul que trust:—Held, reversing the decree below, 6 Gr. 485, that the trustee was not, under the circumstances, answerable for any loss that had been sustained by the party beneficially interested. Ford v. Chandler, 8 Gr. S5.

- Release by Mortgagee-Representations.]—The owner of real estate mortgaged it, and afterwards sold and conveyed a portion by a deed containing absolute covenants for title, taking from the purchaser a bond for the payment of a proportionate amount of the Vot. III. D=224-75 mortgage debt:—Held, that the fact of the purchaser holding such absolute conveyance was not such a representation to the holders of the mortgage as warranted them in executing to the purchaser a release of his portion of the estate from the mortgage, and afterwards looking to the mortgagor for payment thereof. Bank of Montreal v. Hopkins, 2 E. & A. 458, 9 Gr. 495.

— Sale by Trustee—Notice to Purchaser—Parties.]—The trustee of a mortgage sold it to a third person without authority:—Held, that a bill impeaching the transfer was not demurrable for not charging that the purchaser had taken the transfer with notice of the trust. A bill having been filed on behalf of cestuis que trust impeaching the conduct of a trustee, a demurrer thereto because the cestuis que trust were not parties was overruled. Ryckman v. Canada Life Assurance Co., 17 Gr. 550.

(d) Interest.

Breach of Trust—Annual Rests.]—
Where an executor had committed a breach of trust in selling lands to pay debts, for which the personal estate come to his hands had proved more than sufficient, and had also applied trust funds to his own use, the court ordered the account to be taken against him with annual rests. Wiard v. Gable, 8 Gr. 458.

Improper Retention of Funds—Increased Rate—Annual Rests.]—The estate of a trustee who had retained money in his hands for six years after he should have paid it over, and had rendered an account claiming a balance in his favour, was held chargeable with interest at six per cent. with annual rests. Small v. Ecctes, 12 Gr. 37.

The principle on which trustees are liable to be charged with an increased rate of interest, or interest with annual rests, considered and acted on. Where a trustee had retained moneys instead of paying off debts, and had improperly mixed these moneys with his own at his bank, the court charged him with interest at 8 per cent, on all balances in his hands. Wightman v. Hellwell, 13 Gr. 330.

Retention of Funds—Employment of J.—Where the defendant, a trustee, land retained moneys, and did not shew that he had deposited them for safe keeping or kept them in his hands unemployed, he was held to be properly charged with interest. Beaton v. Boomer, 2 Ch. Ch. 89.

Mistake—Simple Interest.]— The principle upon which the court acts in charging executors with interest, is not that of punishment, but of compensating the cestui que trust, and depriving the trustee of the advantage he has wrongfully obtained. An executor will not necessarily be charged with compound interest in all cases except those in which there is a mere neglect to invest. Where an executor retained a portion of the trust money under the belief that it was his own, and had acted on that supposition for many years, without objection from those interested under the will, and it did not appear that he had used the money in trade:—Meld, that, under the circumstances, he was chargeable only with simple interest. Inglis v. Beaty, 2 A. R. 433.

See Jones v. McKean, 27 S. C. R. 249; Cudney v. Cudney, 21 Gr. 153; Smith v. Roc, 11 Gr. 311; Cameron v. Bethune, 15 Gr. 486.

(e) Other Cases.

Assignment of Mortgage in Trust-Discharge by Trustee—Liability for Moneys not Actually Received.]—A mortgage was created by D., in favour of two brothers, who executed an agreement appropriating the amount secured between them, and afterwards joined in an assignment of the security to M., in trust, as to the first instalment, to pay the same equally to the mortgagees, one of whom, same equally to the mortgagees, one of whom, J., subsequently conveyed his interest in the mortgage to H. (the plaintiff) for the benefit of creditors. The other mortgagee subsequently acquired the equity of redemption, went into possession of the premises, and succeeded in satisfying the amount of mortgage money other than the first instalment thereof. M. executed a discharge of the mortgage under the statute, declaring that D, had paid all moneys secured by the mortgage. In fact D. never paid any portion of the money, and the first instalment never was paid by any one, and J. was indebted to his co-mortgagee to a greater amount than his share of the first in-stalment would come to. M. died, and a bill was filed against his personal representatives by H., calling upon him to pay the share of the first instalment coming to J. :- Held, that the estate of M. was bound to make good the amount to which J. was proved to have been entitled, although no want of bona fides could be imputed to M. Howland v. McLaren, 22 Gr. 231.

Collection of Debts—Property of Estate, I—While the court will not exact from trustees more careful conduct than a prudent man would bestow in the management of his property, still it requires full explanation of all their dealings and the causes which may have led to outstanding debts not having been collected, or to the disappearance of property belonging to the estate. Chisholm v. Barnard, 10 Gr. 479.

Compromising Debt.]—Trustees accepted $250 in discharge of a debt of $300; —Held, that, in the absence of evidence to explain the reason of this, the master was right in charging them with the loss. Baldwin v. Thomas, 15 Gr. 119.

Lease by Tenant in Common—Account as Trustee—Rents and Profits.]—Where the plaintiff, being one of the heirs of an intestate, took upon herself to lease the lands in question, she was held liable to account for all the rents she had, and for all that but for her wilful neglect she might have, received, and in case it should appear that she had so dealt with the property as to make her properly liable both for rents and profits, the master was to report specially or separately. The costs of the account as to rents to fall upon the estate, or be borne by the plaintiff, according to whether what was done by her was or was not beneficial to the estate. Nash v. McKoy, 15 Gr. 247.

Lease by Trustees-Claim of Lessee-Submission to Arbitration.]-Trustees of real estate created a lease thereof, and orally agreed to make certain improvements on the property, without which agreement the lessee would not have accepted the lease, but the improvements never were made. During the currency of the term two of the trustees (who were also executors under the will) resigned, and others were appointed in their stead. Subsequently the lessee advanced a claim for damages by reason of the nonfulfilment of the covenant as to improvements, when an arrangement was made, between the trustees and the tenant, for a surrender to them of the remainder of the term, which was done, and a reference was agreed upon for determining the value of such surrender, the claim for damages by the lessee, and all other matters in difference, by arbitration :- Held, that by such submission the trustees became personally bound to pay the sum awarded against them, and that, having submitted to arbitra-tion without saving the question of assets, they tion without saying the question of assets, they were precluded from afterwards asserting that they had not assets. Held, also, affirming the order pronounced, 21 Gr. 166, that the stipulation as to improvements, upon which the lease was accepted, could be proved by parol. Under such circumstances the question would still remain open whether the trustees could, on passing their accounts, claim the sum so awarded against the estate which they represented. Taking Chattels at Appraised Value—Interest.]—The goods of the testator were, by arrangement between the executors, allowed to be taken by one of themselves at the price of $515, after the same had been valued by appraisers at $733.69. Trustee for Sale—Deterioration in Property.)—A trustee for sale having made several agreements for sales, which were rendered abortive by the refusal of the widow of the settlor to bar her dower:—Held, that the trustee was not liable for deterioration of the property, the decrease in value not having occurred through any default of his. Edinburgh Life Assurance Co. v. Allen, 23 Gr. 230.

- Neglect - Delay-Acquiescence.]-C. M., a solicitor, invested money of T. in a third mortgage of the E. property. After-wards, in 1862, the property was put up for auction under a decree for sale at the suit of the first mortgagor. A. M. held the mortgage on the property next after the first mortgage. on the property next after the first mortgage. Finding that, owing to the great depreciation of the value of the E. property, it would, if sold then, scarcely fetch enough to pay off the first mortgage, it was agreed between C. M. and A. M. that C. M. should, out of his own moneys, buy in the property by paying off the first mortgage, and then hold the same in trust to sell, and out of the proceeds to first repay himself the amount so advanced by him, with interest from the date of the sale, then to pay A. M. his claim on the property, with interest, and then to pay T. his claim, with interest, and then to pay T. his claim, with interest. C. M. accordingly advanced sufficient to buy in the property as agreed. In 1864 a formal deed of trust was drawn up and executed by the first mortgagee, and by C. M., A. M., and T., whereby the property was conveyed to C. M. on trust to sell "without delay," and apply the proceeds as aforesaid, and giving him power to lease in the said, and giving aim power to lease in the meanwhile, and making him answerable only for loss resulting from his own "wilful ne-glect and default." C. M. leased the property from time to time, but he did not sell it until 1883, when T's executrix brought an action charging him with default and breach of trust. charging him with default and breach of trust, and claiming an account and damages. The evidence shewed that the property had all through been of a very unsaleable kind, con-sisting of a farm, very stumpy and badly fenced, and an old mill, which had quite lost its value. It also appeared that C. M. had never advertised the property for sale, but at the same time that it was well known in the neighbourhood that it was for sale, and that it was not the sort of property that was likely to be bought by a stranger. There was, also, to be bought by a stranger. There was, also, no positive evidence that at any time C. M. could have effected a more advantageous sale than that he effected in 1883; and it appeared that up to 1880 neither A. M. nor T. had com-plained of the delay, but, if anything, acqui-seed in it:—Held, that C. M. was not proved to have been guilty of neglect and default as trustee, nor did the evidence afford any basis for assessing damages against him. Taylor v. Magrath, 10 O. R. 669.

tion—Breach.]—Where a power is coupled with a trust or duty, the court will enforce the proper exercise of the power, although it will not interfere with the discretion of the trustees as to the particular time or manner of their bonā fide exercise of it. Lands were devised to trustees upon trust, in their discretion to sell, as soon as they might deem it proper to do so, for the most money that could reasonably be obtained therefor; and by a later clause it was declared that the trustees were not to be answerable for the exercise or nonexercise of the powers therein contained, or as to the manner or exercise thereof, but were to have an absolute discretion as to the same:— Held, that the power of sale was coupled with a trust to sell for the most money, and that the trustees were answerable for a proper exercise of the power, the powers of the court being in no way affected by the clause exonerating the trustees, which related merely to the time and manner of exercising the trust. Clark v. Keefer, 29 O. R. 557.

5. Investments by Trustees.

Guardian ad Litem — Authority to Inrest.]—The guardian ad litem to an infant has no authority, after the object of the suit has been accomplished, to act for the infant in investing any funds for the infant. Dix V. Jarman, 1 Ch. Ch. 38.

Omission to Invest — Interest.] — An excutor or trustee who has been guilty of negligence merely in omitting to invest moneys, will be charged with interest at six per cent. Wiard v. Gable, 8 Gr. 458,

Purchase of Land — Building.]—Trustees, being empowered to invest the moneys of the trust in the purchase of real estate, may in their discretion do so in the erection of a new building, when an increased income can be obtained thereby. It is, however, for the trustees to determine for themselves whether the circumstances are such as to justify such expenditure, and that the amount is proper. Re Henderzon's Trusts, 23 Gr. 45.

Breach of Trust—Estoppel,]—A testator directed that until the period of distribution the rents and profits accruing from certain property devised to the children of his son should be given and applied by his executors towards the support and maintenance of the said children if his executors should think proper; and, if not, to be by his said executors invested or otherwise disposed of by them to the best advantage for the said children, at the discretion of the said executors:—Held, that, under this direction, the executors were justified in applying the money to the purchase of a piece of land adjoining other land which went to the children, in order to the preservation of a mill site or privilege situate on the lands so going to the children; and also in building a house upon the lands devised, intended for the resience of the son and his children; and the fact that on a resale of the land, the same, owing to the great depreciation in the value of real estate, sold for about one-fifth of the sum paid by the executors for it, did not constitute the purchase a breach of trust, or render the executors liable to make good the loss. The same testator gave power to his executors to sell The same and dispose of any of his land, and to invest the proceeds of such sale for the use and benethe proceeds or such sale for the use and bene-fit of the said children, provided the said exe-cutors should consider it to be to the advan-tage of the children aforesaid to do so:— Held, (1) that this fund also might properly be invested by the executors in buying the land and in the construction of the dwelling: and (2) that any question as to the part of the purchase money which they had received being used in such building had been put an end to in consequence of such children, after they had come of age, having, as found by the master, precluded themselves by their acts from charging the expenditure to have been a breach of trust. Smith v. Smith, 23 Gr. 114.

Excessive Price—Collusion—Credit for Actual Value.]—The duties and responsibilities of trustees and executors considered and acted on. Trustees, with a power of investing in real estate, purchased, at the investing in real estate, purchased, at the investing in real estate, purchased, at the investme of one of their number, a lot of land for £1,200, which was found to be worth not more than £900. The master by his report charged the trustees with the full sum of £1,200, refusing to give them credit for the £900, on the ground of collusion on the part of the trustees. The court, on appeal, considered that, under the circumstances, credit should be given for the value of the land, and referred the report back. Larkin v. Armstrong, 9 Gr. 330.

 Lunatic's Money — Charge—Devise Occupation. —A. received $1,200 belonging to his son-in-law, R., and invested it with other money of A.'s own in the purchase of a form which are $200. B. with his femily. other money of A. s own in the purchase of a farm, which cost $3,200. R., with his family, went into possession of the farm, and A., the father-in-law, by his will devised the farm to R.'s wife and son jointly for the life of the It's wife and son jointly for the life of the wife, with remainder to the son in fee, subject to the payment of $200 to a daughter of R, and of $600 to another person. It was as-sumed in the cause that R, was, at the time of the purchase, and thenceforward, of unsound mind, and unable to give a valid assent to the transaction; and the court held that on that assumption he was entitled to the $1,200 as against A.'s estate, and that the devise to his wife and son were no satisfaction of the claim; and also that he was probably entitled to a charge on the land for the debt. But the court directed inquiries whether R, was at the date of the transaction of mental capacity to assent to the purchase; and if so, whether he did assent thereto; also, inquiry as to the occupation of the land by R. and his family before the death of A., and the value of such oc-cupation. Goodfellow v. Robertson, 18 Gr.

—— Power under Settlement—Sale—Exchange.] — A., on his marriage, having conveyed a certain farm (which was then under contract of sale) to the trustee of his marriage settlement, new ideal of the trustee of his marriage settlement, new ideal on the trustee of his marriage settlement, new ideal was not curried out, was been the sale was carried out, and the land itself, if the sale was contracted out, and the land itself, if the sale was contracted out, was been the part of the land itself, if the sale was contracted out, was the land of the payments of principal being made from time to time by the said and from the payments of principal being made from time to time by the said interest of the same in such estate or trustees to be appointed as hereinafter mentioned, shall invest the same in such estate or securities, whether real or personal, and of what nature or kind soever, as to him or them shall seem best, and most advantageous to the interest of the trust hereby created, and on such investments being from time to time realized the same to reinvest in like manner." The settlement also provided that if the said J. J. V. forfeited any right he had to the said real estate it should vest in the trustee for the purposes and dises of the said trusts thereinbefore mentioned as regards the ourchase money, with full power to lease or sell the same, &c. The purchaser, J. J. V., having failed to carry out his purchase, and having reliquished any claim he had to the farm, the trustee subsequently exchanged the farm for a city lot. On an agreement for a sale of the city lot, the purchaser continued to carry out the purchase, and the purchase of the city of the purchaser and the continued to settlement to sell and convey. On an application by the trustee under the Vendor and Purchaser Act, R. S. O. 1877, e. 109:—Held, that there was a direction to invest in real estate, and, following Joint Stock Discount Co. v. Brown, L. R. 3 Eq. 139, that "investing in" means the "actual purchase;" and the purchaser's objections were overruled with costs. Re Barwick, 5 O. R. 710.

Rate of Interest—Duty of Trustees.]— Mortgages, reserving six per cent. interest, were taken by trustees before the abolition of the usury laws, and were not called in for several years after the change of the law, but, as it did not appear that they were aware of an opportunity of investment at a higher rate, the court refused to charge them with more than was reserved by the mortgage. Cameron v. Bethune, 15 Gr. 480.

Duty of Trustees—Loan to Themselves.]—Although the rule is, that executors or trustees will be charged with what they ought to have made, what they actually did make, or with what they must be presumed to have made, out of the moneys of the testator come to their hands, still, where such moneys had, before the repeal of the usury laws, of the state of the testator come to their hands, still, where such moneys had, before the repeal of the usury laws, or the state of the executors were not called upon, at the risk of being charged with the extra amount of interest, to call in those moneys and reinvest the same at the rates, as the evidence shewed, at which moneys could have been lent. It also appearing that part of the money of the estate had been lent by the executors to themselves, they were charged with the higher rate of interest thereon. Smith N. Roc, 11 Gr. 311.

Unauthorized Investment—Bank Stock
—Consent of Beneficiary, —A trustee or agent has no right to invest in bank stock without authority; but that rule does not apply where the cestuit que trust or principal is of full age, and competent in law to act for himself, and gives his sanction to such an investment. Harrison v. Harrison, 14 Gr. 586.

Deposit in Savings Bank—Discretion—Acquiescence of Guardian—Costs.]—Where moneys are left by will to be invested at the discretion of the executor or trustee, the discretion so given execution so execution as a five stream of the executor of the warrant an investment in personal securities or securities not sanctioned by the court. Held, that an executor and trustee who deposited funds so left in trust for infants, at three and a-half or four per cent, interest, in a savings bank, did not conform to his duty; and his failure to do so exposed him to pay the length rate of interest for the mere, the length rate of interest for the mere, and the length of the liftenine of the statutory guardian of the liftenine of the first him to being for their benefit, did not seen to him the fide, also, that the defendant was not mitted out of the fund, but that he should be releved from paying costs. Heasure of Liability.] — Where a trustee is authorized to invest in either of two specified modes, and by mistake invests in neither, the measure of his liability is the loss arising from his not having invested in the less beneficial of the two modes. Two years before the passing of the Act relaxing the usury laws (22 Vict. c. S5), a trustee, who was authorized to invest on mortgage or in government securities, invested in Upper Canada Bank stock, believing it within his authority. The stock ultimately turned out worthless; and the trustee submitted to account for the principal with compound interest at six per cent; — Held, that this was the extent of his liability, though eight per cent, might have been obtained on mortgages. Paterson v. Luiley, 18 Gr. 13.

— Municipal Debentures.]—Where a testator authorized his executor to invest the surplus of his estate in public securities:—Held, that municipal debentures were not thereby authorized. Ewart v. Gordon, 13 Gr. 40.

of Settler—Detective Execution of Power!—A settlement in which the trustee was authorized to invest the funds in "Dominion, provincial, and municipal bonds and debentures, or first mortgages upon real estate," contained a power of revocation by deed in favour of the settlor, with the consent of the trustee. The latter invested some of the trust moneys in the stock of a loan company, under instructions by letter from the settlor.—Held, that there was no breach of trust, and that what was done amounted to a defective execution of the power, which the court would aid. The principal on which In re Mackenzie Trusts, 23 Ch. D. 750, was decided, applied. Re Mackenzie Trusts, 28 O. R. 312.

Stock in Trading Company — Reserve of Profits—Income.]—A testator, by his will, devised all his property to trustees upon trust, after providing for certain annuities, to accumulate the income of the residue for ten years, and then to hold the estate for the benefit of his sons and daughters as therein mentioned, or in the case of a son or daughter who might be dead, to hold the share of such son or daughter according to the provisions of his or her will, and in default of any such will. for any children, him or her surviving, and if no such child, then over. He also empowered his trustees to make advances to his sons and daughters, or any children of his sons and daughters, or any children of his sons and daughters, as they might deem advisable, out of the income of the share of such son or daughter or child, and authorized them to in-vest the moneys of the estate in such securities as they should think proper, and to continue any business he might be engaged in at the time of his decease, for one year after his death. At the time of his decease the testator was a partner in a firm of distillers. A few months after his death, the surviving partner and the representatives of his estate turned the business into a joint stock company, the testator's share of the assets of the partnership, with the assent of all his children, being valued and put in as so much stock. According to the fundamental agreement entered into by the corporators, a large share of the profits of the company were annually accumulated as a reserve fund. After a period of seven years, the interest of the estate of the testator in the company was bought out by the surviving partner at a large advance, based-upon the amount of profits so accumulated in the reserve fund, with an allowance for the prospective amount of such profits in future years: Held, that the above employment of the funds of the estate was technically a breach of trust, and an improper investment under the terms of the will. "Investment" is not a proper term as to moneys in trade; and "securterm as to moneys in trade; and "security" means such security as binds lands or something to be answerable for it. Held, how-ever, that the reserve of profits derived from the user and increase of the capital, was properly regarded as income, out of which or out of that part of the purchase money which represented the same, advances might be made by the trustees, under the will. Distinction between this case, and one between tenants for life and remaindermen, pointed out. Worts v. Worts, 18 O. R. 332.

6. Lease, Mortgage, Pledge, or Sale of Trust Property.

Lease of Land — Acting Trustec—Covenant — Possession—Improvements—Trespass—Injunction.]—The trustees of M., deceased, who held the legal estate in land in trust for sale for the purpose of a reservoir, sold to one Z., in 1854, a portion of lot 10, Niagara Falls survey, for the purpose of a reservoir, the intention being to run a line of pipes over the residue of saws of the Niagara Falls. Survey, for the purpose of a reservoir, the intention being to run a line of pipes over the residue of saws of the Niagara Falls. The propose of forcing water to the reservoir, and thence it was to be distributed by pipes over the town of Niagara Falls. T. B., as well as E. B. M., the acting trustee, agreed to extend his lease for ever at a rental to be fixed every twenty-one years. The trustees subsequently sold the land in question to S. B., son of T. B., whose place, it was understood S. B. was to take, T. B. having the right of purchase under his lease, and having expended large sums in improving the property. S. B. subsequently mortgaged to a certain company, who soid under foreclosure proceedings to the plaintiff. The land through which such pipes were to run had been devised by one M. to E. B. M., his wife, and three others, as trustees. In 1854 E. B. M. alone leased it to T. B. for fourteen years. In 1854 T. B. leased a strip eight feet wide by 650 feet long to Z., for the purpose of laying his pipes therein, for ten years, at a nominal rent, and both T. B. and E. B. M., in that year, by separate instruments, covenanted with S. B. that she or T. B., if he should purchase the land under a provision in his lease for that purpose, would continue the lease to Z. for twenty-one years, perpetually renewable, at a rent to be fixed by arbitration. Z. constructed the reservoir, &c., and laid down the pipes in 1854, and the town had been supplied by them ever since 1864 E. B. M. gave a further lease to T. B. for seven years, and in 1868 she conveyed to S. B., the appointee of T. B., his father. S. B. mortgaged to a loan company, who sold under a decree for sale to the plaintiff, stating in the advertisement that it was subject to the right of the defendants, who represented Z., to lay their waterpipes, under the lease from T. B. to Z. After the expiration of that lease no further lease had been executed, but $12 a year was by agreement paid as rent to T. B. and to S. B. until the title became vested in the plaintiff, who refused to accept rent or to recognize defendants' rights, and brought trespass against them:—Held, (1) that the lease of 1854 by E. B. M. alone was not bindon her co-trustees unless they could be shewn to have agreed to it. (2) That the right of Z. to get a lease from T. B., under the covenant of 1854, continued as against T. B. under the second lease of 1864. (3) That the defendants having under the covenants of T. B. and E. B. M., taken possession and constructed the works, which were of a permanent and ex-pensive character, and for the public benefit, and having paid rent up to the time of the plaintiffs acquiring title, and all parties hav-ing had notice, and having made no objection. they were entitled to an injunction staying the action, and to a lease for twenty-one years, renewable at a rent to be fixed by arbitration or by the registrar of the court. Davis v. Lewis, 8 O. R. 1.

Mortgage—Covenant for Payment—Personal Liability of Trustee.]—Where a person holding land as a trustee, at the request of the beneficial owners, and without any consideration to him therefor, or intention to become personally liable for the benefit of such owners, executed a mortgage on the land, the mortgage, without his knowledge, containing a covenant to pay the mortgage debt:—Held, that the covenant was not enforceable against the mortgage for value without notice; and that his remedy was restricted to foreclosure proceedings against the lands. Patterson v. McLean, 2 to Q. R. 221.

Mortgage of Interest of Trustee—Further Charge—Benefit of Mortgagee:]—A trustee of lands authorized to sell, and, amongst other things, to retain and pay sums due and owing to himself by the settlor, and to pay the balance to the settlor, mortgaged his interest to the plaintiff, giving covenants for title and further assurance; and then, by arrangement with the settlor, the trustee was to be entitled to pay himself and his partners for goods and advances made after the mortgage; and afterwards becoming entitled to the whole partnership estate:—Held, that the further charge enured to the benefit of the mortgage. Edinburgh Life Assurance Co. v. Allen, 23 Gr. 230.

Pledge of Assets—Managing Trustec—Acquiescence of Others — Repayment of Advances.]—Where advances were made by way of loan to the managing executor, as such, and subsequently security was taken therefor from him on part of the assets of the estate, such advances being made and security taken in good faith on the part of the lender; and it appeared that some of the advances were duly entered in the books of the estate, and the name of the lender, who had no other transactions.

tions with the estate, appeared as a creditor in several annual balance sheets sent to the other executors by their agent, and no objection on their part was ever made; the court refused, at the instance of such executors, to order the securities to be delivered back to them, without payment of such advances. Event v. Gordon, 13 Gr. 40.

Power to Lease - Implication-Reasonable Provisions.]—The plaintiffs were trustees under a will, holding the legal estate in the property devised and bequeathed, in trust to maintain themselves and their children, with remainder over to the children upon the death of themselves; with power to absolutely convey the property and to exclude any child from participating in the remainder :- Held, that the plaintiffs had implied power to make all reasonable leases. The plaintiffs made an agreement for a building lease to the defendagreement for a building lease to the detend-ant of part of the trust estate for twenty-one years, with a provision for compensation to the defendant at the end of the term for his improvements, and the draft lease settled provided that the plaintiffs should at the end of the term pay for such improvements or renew the lease for a further term of twenty-one years :-Held, that the provisions of the agreement and lease were reasonable, and bound the trust estate, and that the plaintiffs were entitled to specific performance. Brooke v. Brown, 19 O. R. 124.

— Tenancy for Life.]—A testator gave all his estate, real and personal, to trustees upon trust to allow and give the use thereof to his wife during her life for her support and maintenance, and after her death to sell and divide the proceeds among his children equally:—Held. that the wife had the right to leave the farm and deal herself directly with the teans during her life. In this case with the tenant during her life. In this case during the continuance were the adult children exact by the will up and no action of the duties were cast by the will up that the substitution of the life estate, and such being the case, the court would give effect to the usual incidents of an estate for life by which the tenant can occupy it or let it, or otherwise dispose of it as seems best to that tenant. Held, therefore, that a lease theretofore made by the trustees without the sanction of the widow, though there was no evidence of mala fides on their part, must nevertheless be set naide, and possession of the property given to the widow or her nominee. Hefferman v, Taplor, 15 O. R. 670.

Power to Mortgage—Direction of Cestui que Trust—Application of Mortgage Money.]
—The owner of real estate conveyed the same to trustees for his daughter E. S., one of them being her husband, to dispose thereof "in such manner as the said E. S., her heirs and assigns, may at any time advise or direct, and to make such leases, and further, to make such conveyances in fee simple of the said lands, &c., as the said E. S., her heirs, &c., may at any time advise or direct." The trustees created a mortgage, in which E. S. joined: Held, that the conveyance to the trustees effected a settlement to the separate use of E. Expenses of Carrying on Testator's Business — Terms of Will—Notice to Mortgagee.]—A testator charged his real estate with payment of his debts, which he directed to be paid thereout as soon as possible, and then devised it to his executors and trustees on trust to sell as soon as they should think prudent, and invest the proceeds, and pay an annuity to his widow until sale, and, after the sale, invest a sum named from which to give her a specific annuity, and distribute the proceeds among his family; and proceeded: "Until sold as aforesaid I direct that my trustees keep my schooners employed for freight and hire as far as possible, and for such purpose to engage all necessary assistants, and keep the said vessels in repair; and may store grain and other goods and merchandise in my warehouse for hire or storage, and may take such action as they think advisable to work and develop my interest in the B. gold mine, but the outlay by them shall not at any time exceed $1,000." The trustees became indebted to a bank for certain expenses incurred in connection with the schooners and repairs to them, and in connection with the warehouse; and, to meet this indebtedness, executed a mortgage of the real estate to the plaintiffs. who now brought this action for foreclosure. The testator's debts had all been paid before the execution of the mortgage, but there was no evidence that the plaintiffs know more as to the purpose for which the money was required, than that it was to pay a debt due at the bank by the estate:—Held, that the plaintiffs were entitled to the usual mortgage judgment. for there was no sufficient evidence of notice for there was no sufficient evidence of notice to them that the money was not to be expended in conformity with the will. London and Canadian L. and A. Co. v. Wallace, S O. R.

Payment of Incumbrance - Benefit of Estate.]-The testatrix, by her will, devised and bequeathed all the rest and residue of her real and personal estate unto R. G., trust to sell my real estate and to call in and convert into money the remainder of my per-sonal estate, with power to demise or lease . . any portion thereof for any term or terms of years. . . And I declare that the said trus-tees shall out of the moneys arising from such tees shall out of the moneys arising from such sale, calling in, and conversion . pay off the incumbrance, if any, existing on the F. property, and shall divide the balance of the said moneys among my four children." The remaining property, not included in the resi-duary estate, was specifically devised by the will among the children of the testator in certain shares. R. G. mortgaged a certain portion of the residuary real estate to one T. and applied the proceeds of the loan in part in liquidation of the outstanding mortgage on the F. property, and in part otherwise for the benefit of the estate. The property com-prised in this mortgage was sold by the court in proceedings by T., but did not bring enough to pay off the whole mortgage debt:—Held. on administration of the estate by the court. that the trust of the residue was a mere trust for conversion out and out, and R. G. had no power to make the mortgage in question; nevertheless, to the extent to which the estate got the benefit of the loan, the executors of T. were entitled to rank against the estate for the balance of their mortgage debt, but only subsequent to certain mortgages placed by specific devisees since the death of the testarrix on portions of the estate devised to them, including the F. property, without knowledge, so far as appeared, of the source from which the money discharging the F. mortgage came. Held, also, that the mortgage to T. being invalid, it could only carry interest at six per cent., although it provided for interest at twelve per cent. London and Canadian L. and A. Co. v. Wallace, 8 O. R. 539, distinguished. Gordon v. Gordon, 11 O. R. 511, 12 O. R. 539, Payment of Incumbrances-Rents and Profits.]—A testator possessed of several freehold properties, each of which was subject to an incumbrance, devised to a trustee all and singular his real estate, and the rents, issues, &c., due or to become due and payable to him, upon trust to receive the same and therewith pay all his personal debts, funeral and testamentary expenses; and also thereafter from time to time to pay and discharge atter from time to time to pay and discharge therewith all debts, dues, and incumbrances upon his estate. And after providing for pay-ment of all his just debts and the incum-brances on his estate, he made specific devises of his lands:—Held, that the devise in each case was not of the equity of redemption merely, but that all of the lands were bound to contribute to the paying off of all the mortgages; not that each parcel should bear its own burthen; and that, in order to avert a sale of one of the parcels in a proceeding upon the mortgage, the trustees should raise by mortgage of all the lands a sum sufficient to pay off all the incumbrances thereon; the rents and profits of the whole to constitute a fund wherewith to pay the interest and ultimately liquidate the principal. The powers of a trustee, who is directed to raise or to pay money out of rents and profits, to sell the trust estate, considered and acted on. Sproatt v. Robertson, 26 Gr. 333.

v. Vroom, 24 S. C. R. 701, post IX.

Trust for Sale.]—A, conveyed his property to B, in trust, to convert the same into money:—Held, that the mortgage was not authorized by the trust for sale, and was only valid to the exent of B.'s beneficial interest, if any, in the premises. Edinburgh Life Assurance Co. v. Allen, 18 Gr. 425.

Trust for Sale—Acquiescence of Beneficiary.]—Lands were held in trust for the separate use of a married woman, and upon her death, in trust for her surviving children, and also to sell or lease any portion with the consent in writing of the cestuis que trust, and re-invest the proceeds of such sales. In pursuance of a request to that effect, the trustees created a mortgage to a person for the purpose of negotiating it, in order to evade the usury law:—Held, that the trust for sale did not authorize the execution of this mortgage, and that the same was void as against the children. But, it being alleged that the married woman had participated in the misappropriation of the trust fund, further inquiry was directed or that point with a view to making her life interest liable for the money advanced. Nordan v. Logie, 7 Gr. 88.

Power to Sell—Executors co Nomine— Joint Receipts.]—Devisees in trust for sale of real estate must jointly receive or unite in receipts for the purchase money, unless the will provides otherwise, and the case is not affected by the property being charged with debts, and the power of sale being to the executors eo nomine. Event v. Snyder, 13 Gr. 55. Implication—Executors — Administrativa with Will Annexed.]—B., by his will, bequeathed to his wife A. the land in question, "to be at her disposal, if agreeable to the executors," of whom she was not one, "so long as she remains a widow," adding, "I wish and desire the aforementioned farm to be sold for the discharge of my lawful debts, and the residue accruing therefrom to be laid out in the payment or part payment of another for the support of my family." He then directed that his two, eldest sons should have the property when they came of age, after his wife's death, if she should remain a widow, and if she should marry they were to come into possession when of age, and that these two sons were to pay to the other children a proportion equal to their part of the property, adding, "all the above to be done to the wishes of the aforementioned executors." None of the executors proved or acted, and in 1851 letters of administration with the will annexed were granted to the widow, who in the same year conveyed to defendant, describing herself in the deed as "sole devisee (with power of sale for purposes set forth) under the will of." &c. She married again about 1853. This sale she swore was made in order to pay the testator's debts, and the purchase money so applied;—Held, that the sale directed by the will being for the payment of debts, the power to sell was vested by implication in the executors; that she did not take it as administrativ; that on her marriage her own interest was at an end: and that the sons could, therefore, eject defendant without any notice to quit or demand of possession.

— Implication — Residue.] — Trustees were empowered by settlement "to lay out and invest the whole or any part or parts of the residue and remainder of the fortune of the said G, H., the settlor, so limited in trust as aforesaid, in the purchase or purchases of land in fee (free from incumbrances) or such other good security as they shall think fit, in England or elsewhere", and a power of sale was given to resell lands so purchased: —Held, to give a sufficient nower to the trustees to sell lands of the residue of the estate generally. In re Evans, 4 th, Ch, 102.

— Payment of Prior Incumbrance.]

—Held. that trustees of real estate, with a power of sale, had power to mortgage for the purpose of paying a part of a prior incumbrance thereon with a view to saying the property from foreclosure. Re Vansickle and Moore, 22 O. R. 560.

— Provise—Repugnaney.]—Executors sold and convexed premises to certain trustees in trust for the infant children of M. G. in fee, but with a proviso that the grantees might absolutely dispose of the premises with the consent in writing of a majority of such of the children as had attained twenty-one, and a further proviso that in case any of the grantees, or of the children on attaining twenty-one, should desire to part with their interest in the premises, the same should be first offered to the other members of the family. Three of the children had attained twenty-one years and were willing to consent to the sale:—Held, that the deed to the trustees, containing apt words, might be treated as a deed of bargain and sale, vesting the legal estate in them upon the trusts mentioned, and that the right to sell existed. Held, also, that the subsequent provision as to the children buying from one another on attaining twenty-one, was not inconsistent with or repugnant to the exercise of the power of sale at present, but would still be operative if no previous sale were made. Re Graham Contract, 17 O. R. 570.

Sale of Assets of Insolvent Estate— Insolvent—Status to Attack.]—The court, under the circumstances of the case, refused, upon the application of a debtor who had assigned all his property in trust for his creditors, to set aside a sale made by the trustees, on the ground of inadequacy of price, Linton v. Michie, 7 Gr. 182.

Sale of Land—Covenent for Payment—Action on—Quebec Lawe,]—Article 19, C. C. P., is applicable to mere agents or mandatories. It is not applicable to trustees in whom the subject of the trust has been vested in property and in possession for the benefit of third parties, and who have duties to perform in the protection or realization of the trust estate. Where trustees sold property over which they had possession and title:—Held, that they were entitled to sue the purchaser, to whom they had delivered possession, upon his covenant to pay the balance of the purchase money. Browne v. Pinsoneault, 3 S. C. R. 102, and Burland v. Moffatt, 11 S. C. R. 76, overruled. Portcous v. Reynar, 13 App. Cas. 120.

— Discretion.]—If under a will a trustee has a discretion to sell or not to sell real estate, the court will not interfere by its advice or direction, but will leave the trustee to the exercise of his discretion. In re Parker, 20 Gr. 380.

See, also, Coy v. Coy. 25 Gr. 267.

— Improvements by Cestui que Trust——Allowance [or.] — Trustees with power of sale, in good faith, but erroneously, conveyed part of the trust estate to one of the cestuis que trust, for the collateral advantage to the whole property to be derived from certain buildings and improvements to be made on the part conveyed, thus committing a technical breach of trust. Upon discovering this, the grantee joined with the trustees in a conveyance of the whole estate for value, upon an agreement entered into between the parties that he should be paid such sum in respect of his improvements as the court might consider him entitled to, and thereupon filed a bill for that purpose. The court, under the circumstances, directed the grantee to be allowed the sum by which the improvements had enhanced the value of the whole property, or the price of the buildings and other improvements made thereon, whichever should be the lesser, although the rule is that in such cases payments for improvements will not be allowed at the instance of the party making them. Pegley v. Woods, 14 Gr. 47.

Inadequacy of Price.]—It is the duty of a trustee for sale to use all diligence to obtain the best price; and where a trustee soid property at private sale, without previous advertisement, at a price lower than other persons were willing to give, and did not first communicate with these persons, though informed of offers of the higher price made by them to one of the cestuis que trust, the trustee was held responsible for the loss. Payment of Debts-Excessive Quantity of Land.]—Executors were authorized by the will to sell such portion of the real estate as they in their discretion should think necessary to pay off a mortgage and such debts as the personal estate would not discharge. They offered for sale at auction a lot described as salvy acres (more or less) section 78, Loch End Farm, Victoria District, giving the boundaries on three sides. The lot was un-surveyed, and was offered for sale by the acre, an upset price of $85 being fixed. By the conditions of sale a survey was to be made after the sale at the joint expense of vendors and purchasers. S. purchased the lot for $36 an purchasers. S. purchased the lot for $36 an acre and on being surveyed it was found to contain 117 acres. The executors refused to convey that quantity, alleging that only some $2.000 was required to pay the debts of the estate, and refused to execute a deed of the 117 acres, tendered by S. In a suit by S. for specific performance of the contract for sale of the whole lot:—Held, that S. was entitled to a conveyance of the 117 acres, and that the executors would not be guilty of a breach of trust in conveying that quantity. Sea v Metrust in conveying that quantity. Sea v. Mc-Lean, 14 S. C. R. 632.

— Will—Execution against Benefi-ciary — Application of Purchase Money.]— Trustees under the will of F. S., holding cer-tain lands by virtue thereof on trust to sell as soon as conveniently might be after her decease, and to distribute the proceeds among her children, one of whom was D. V. L., contracted to sell the said lands to one H. T. There were at the time writs of fieri facias in the sheriff's hands against the lands of D. V. the sheriff's hands against the lands of D. V. L., some of which had been placed therein before the date of the contract.—Held, nevertheless, that the writs did not form any incumbrance on the lands in the hands of the trustees so as to prevent them conveying the same to a purchaser indefectibly, and that any share of the purchase money which D. V. L. was entilled to, he would get as personal, not as real, estate. Held, also, that the purchaser was not bound to see to the anniles. chaser was not bound to see to the applica-tion of the purchase money. Re Lewis and Thorne, 14 O. R. 133.

Sale of Mortgage—Executor—Misappro-priation—Assignment.]—A. and B., executors and trustees under a will with power of sale, sell and take a mortgage to secure purchase money, they being in the recital named as executors. B., without this knowledge, assigns the mortgage and appropriates the consideration money to his own use:—Held, that no estate passed under the assignment except so far as the trust estate might be found debtor to B.; and also, that as between the contending equities of the trust estate and the assignee, the maxim qui prior est in tempore potior est in jure would apply in favour of the trust estate. Henderson v. Woods, 9 Gr.

Sale of Timber Limits — Pledge to Bank—Inadequacy of Price — Danages.] — The plaintiff, being indebted to the defendants as indorser in the sum of about $7,000, and being pressed for payment, which he was unable to make, transferred to the defendants certain timber limits which he stated had cost him $25,000, to hold as security for his debtedness, and for the purpose of enabling them to sell it and realize their debt. The regulations of the Crown lands department. however, forbade the recognition of any condihowever, forbade the recognition of any condi-tional transfer, and therefore the assignment was in terms absolute. The defendants, with-out adopting any means of ascertaining the probable value of the limits, offered them for sale by public auction, with the assent of the plaintiff, when, no sufficient offer having been made, they were withdrawn, and, without having made any further inquiry as to value, the defendants sold them by private sale, without consulting the plaintiff, for $6,000. The limits were subsequently sold by the purchaser for a very large sum. Previous to the attempted sale by auction the defendants had received several offers of sums more than sufficient to pay off their claim. In an action brought by the plaintiff against the defendants orought by the plaintiff against the detendant for selling at a grossly inadequate price, judg-ment was given in favour of the plaintiff, with $19,654.38 damages, which was affirmed on appeal. Prentice v. Consolidated Bank, 13 A. R. 69.

7. Purchase or Lease of Trust Property by Trustees.

(a) Generally.

Administrator-Benefit of.]-Under no circumstances can an administrator be allowed to purchase for his own benefit the lands of the intestate. Lamont v. Lamont. 7 Gr.

Beneficiary—Benefit of — Completion of Purchase — Exception to General Rule.]— The rule in equity is, that the trustee buying the trust estate will be compelled to com-plete the purchase if considered for the ad-vantage of those beneficially interested; but a trustee who had procured the estate to be bid in at auction, so as to prevent its being, as he considered, sacrificed, was held not bound to perfect the purchase, as it is the duty of a trustee to take steps to prevent the estate being sold at an undervalue; and this although he erred in his judgment as to the value of the property offered for sale, as also the means adopted to protect it. Heron v. Moffatt, 22 Gr. 370.
See, also, McKnight v. McKnight, 12 Gr.

The fact that a trustee, when offering some of the trust lands for sale by auction, at the same time offered some of his own property. and employed the same person to bid for it that he authorized to buy in the trust property, with a view of saving it from being sold at an undervalue, will not warrant the cestuis que trust in calling upon the trustee to perfect the purchase made by his agent of the trust estate. Heron v. Moffatt, 23 Gr. 196.

Executor not Clothed with Probate. -If an executor does not renounce, or make known his intention not to act, he is in general disqualified to engage in any transaction for his own benefit, to the prejudice of those in-terested in the estate, quite as much as if he had taken out probate. Robinson v. Coyne, 14 Gr. 561.

Purchase for Cestui que Trust-Nondisclosure. |-- It is a settled rule that a trusauscosure. — It is a settled rule that a true tee or agent, authorized to make a purchase for his cestui que trust or principal, cannot make the purchase for himself without dis-closing the fact. Such transactions are so dangerous that they are wholly forbidden, and are not merely declared void where damage has arisen from them or fraud was mixed up has arisen from them or traud was mixed up with them. Accordingly, where an agent, authorized to invest in bank stock, appro-priated to his principal some shares of his own, and rendered an account as if he had purchased so many shares for her; his principal, years afterwards, on the fact coming to her knowledge, was held entitled to repudiate the transaction, without any inquiry as to the fairness of the rate which had been charged for the shares. Harrison v. Harrison, 14 Gr.

Purchase from Cestui que Trust.]— Where a trustee deals with his cestui que where a trustee deals with the trust for the trust property, it rests with the trustee to shew that everything in connection with the transfer was fair and just. Blain v. Terryberry, 11 Gr. 286,

(b) Particular Cases.

Administrator-Conveyance of Land to — Purchaser from Intestate.] — Where A., having only a bond for a deed, and not having paid all the purchase money, made a convey-ance in fee to B. and died, and B. went into possession of the land and continued in possession for several years, when A.'s adminis-trator obtained a conveyance in fee to himself from the person who had given A. the bond: -Held, that the administrator by making use of the deed was guilty of a fraud, and that his title under it could not prevail against B. Doe d. Dobie v. Vanderlip, 5 O. S. 85.

— Crown Grant—Heir of Intestate.]
—An administrator purchased from government in his own name, and with his own funds, land in which the intestate as occupant had a pre-emptive right, at the same price as had a pre-emptive right, at the same price as it had been agreed to sell to the intestate; but being administrator, the government did not require him to pay the value of improvements made by the intestate:-Held, that he was a made by the intestate.—Real, that he trustee for the heir-at-law of the intestate, and could not purchase for his own benefit. Foster v. McKinnon, 5 Gr. 510.

The purchaser of land from the Crown died intestate, without having procured a patent or paid the purchase money. A younger or paid the purchase money. A younger brother, without the knowledge of the heir-at-law, administered to the intestate, and upon naw, administered to the intestate, and upon payment of the arrears obtained a patent to himself, on the ground that the greater por-tion of the improvements on the land had been made by him, and that he had main-tained his father and mother while residing on it. Upon a bill filed by the heir-at-law against the grantee of the Crown, and others claiming under him, it was shewn that the deceased alone had cultivated the land, and supported the parents; and that the grantee had never made the property his settled place of residence. The court declared the heir-at-law en-titled to the estate, notwithstanding the patent, and decreed him relief in accordance with such declaration. Lamont v. Lamont, 7 Gr. 258.

Agent of Administratrix - Purchaser of Mortgage.]—The widow of an intestate administered, and her brother, a lawyer, acted for her as a friend, not professionally, in the management of the estate. While so employed, the brother, with his own moneys, purchased a provider of the estate. chased a mortgage which had been created by the intestate:—Held, that he was entitled to hold the mortgage for his own benefit. Paul v. Johnson, 12 Gr. 474.

Assignee or Inspector of Insolvent Estate. |- A purchase by the assignee for the benefit of creditors of the assets of the estate, made by him at the request of the inspectors of the estate after futile efforts to sell at auction and by private tender, and after a circular letter had been sent by the inspectors to each creditor stating that the sale would be made unless objection were taken, was set aside, there being evidence that at the time of the purchase the assignee knew of and was negotiating with a possible purchaser, to whom he afterwards resold at a large profit, and had not disclosed this information to the inspectors. The inspectors of an insolvent estate have no power, unless specially authorized by the creditors, to bind the latter by anything they do in disposing of the estate. The disposal of it is in the hands of the credithe disposal of it is in the hands of the creditors, and, in default of directions by them, in the hands of the Judge of the county court. Morrison v. Watts, 19 A. R. 622.

An inspector of an insolvent estate is a person having duties of a fiduciary nature to perform in respect thereto and he cannot be periorm in respect thereto and he cannot be allowed to become a purchaser, on his own account, of any of the estate of the insolvent. - Purchase of Bank's Bank Director — Purchase of Bank's Property—Defective Title, 1—In 1856 certain lands were purchased from one W., and a mortgage given back for the greater portion of the purchase money, the purchaser intend-ing to lay the property out into building lots for sale: which was accordingly done, and roads laid out through it. Several years afterwards the purchaser of one of the lots objected to complete his purchase on the ground that W., at the time he acquired his title from his vendors, the Bank of Upper Canada, was a director and the vice-president of the instia director and as such one of those intrusted to sell the real estate of the bank—which objec-tion was sustained. W.'s vendee thereupon filed a bill to have the transaction set aside, his mortgage delivered up and discharged, and the money paid by him on account and expended for taxes and improvements, repaid to him with interest. Company Director — Mortgage to — Validity.]—Where a vote of the shareholders of an incorporated company had authorized the directors to raise money on the security of the company's lands, and one of the direc-tors afterwards, by arrangement with the other directors, advanced money for the use of the company and took a mortgage on their lands, it was held that a third party who subsequently became the purchaser of the mortmortgagee, on the ground that a mortgage to a director was invalid. McKnight v. McKnight, 12 Gr. 363.

· Purchase of Land of Testator-Life Estate—Fraud.]—A. died, leaving all she had to her sister, B., the plaintiff, an old, feeble, and ignorant woman, and appointed C. her executor. C. did not prove the will, but acted as executor; he also removed the plaintiff to his house, and intimated that he meant to take care of her during the rest of her life. The testatrix had a life estate in some cottages, and after her death the remainderman was induced by C. and others, for the purpose of benefiting the plaintiff, to sell them for less than half their value, and to convey for less than half their value, and to convey them to C.'s wife, it being supposed that C. would have to advance the money out of his own funds, but the fact being that he had money in his hands, as trustee for the plaintiff, sufficient to pay the price:—Held, that C. and his wife could not retain the benefit of the purchase, and that the plaintiff was entitled to a conveyance. Robinson v. Coyne, 14 (iz. 561 Gr. 561.

Every tender was for an amount less than the real value of the land. One of these tenders was accepted by the master, and the person in whose name it was made was declared the purchaser, and the sale to him confirmed. Subsequently he made a formal transfer to the defendant J. Upon the appliattransfer to the detendant 3. Upon the appli-cation of the plaintiff the sale was set aside. Held, also, that plaintiff was entitled to apply to set aside the sale without requiring others of the parties interested to join. Re Follis, Kilbourn v. Coulter, 6 P. R. 160.

—— Purchase of Land Devised — Sale under Execution—Debt of Executor.]—Judgment was recovered against executors in an action on a note made by one of them, and indorsed by the testator for his accommodation. Property devised to a son of the testator was sold under execution issued on said judgment, and purchased by the executor who had made the note and conveyed by him to another son of the testator. The property was again sold under execution against the last mentioned grantee, and again purchased by the said executor. The original devisee having taken forcible possession of the property, the executor brought an action to re-cover it:—Held, affirming the judgment in 17 A. R. 193, that the first sale being for his own debt, the executor on purchasing did not acquire title for his own benefit, but became a trustee for the devisee, and the trust continued when he purchased the second time. Donald v. McDonald, 21 S. C. R. 201.

Lease—Inadequacy—Trusteeship —Know-ledge of Trustee.]—L. and S. were appointed by the court trustees for the plaintiff, a married woman, upon a written consent purport-ing to be signed by them agreeing to act, Subsequently L. obtained from the plaintiff a lease of the trust estate to himself, at what was alleged to be an inadequate rental. Some years afterwards, and after the death of her husband, the plaintiff instituted proceedings to have the lease cancelled, alleging as grounds of relief, inadequacy of rent, want of proper advice by the plaintiff in the execution thereof. and the fiduciary relation towards herself which L. had assumed. Under the circumstances the court granted the relief asked. notwithstanding that L. swore that he was not aware that he had been appointed trustee; not aware that he had been appointed trustee; that he never signed the consent to act as such; and that his conduct throughout had been bona fide; it being shewn that he had been bona note; it being shewn that he had effected an insurance upon the buildings situate upon the premises, the application for which he had signed as trustee, and there being reason to believe that, if he had not signed the consent himself, he had authorized the husband of the plaintiff to affix his signature thereto; but gave L, the option of accepting a new lease of the property to be settled by the master; which decree was affirmed by the full court on rehearing. Seaton v. Lunney, 27 Gr. 169.

Mayor of City-Purchase of Debentures Trustee of Profits. |- The mayor of Toronto secretly contracted to purchase at a discount, from persons to whom the debentures were to be assigned by the railway company in whose favour they were to be issued, a large amount of the debentures of the city, which were expected to be issued under a future by-law of the city council; and was himself an active party afterwards in procuring and giving effect to the by-law, which was subsequently passed:—Held, that he was a trustee for the city of the profit he derived from the transaction. Mortgagee - Trustee - Judicial Sale -Leave to Bid-Profits.] - The plaintiff was mortgagee of certain lands, and by the will of the mortgagor was devisee thereof in trust to pay certain legacies charged thereon amongst others one to the defendant, an in-fant about ten years old. Having instituted proceedings against the defendant to enforce payment of the mortgage, the conduct of the sale was given to the guardian of the infant, and the plaintiff had liberty to bid at the sale under the decree, as mentioned in 27 Gr. 576: - Held, reversing the order then made, that the liberty to bid accorded the plaintiff, who occupied the two-fold character of mortgagee and trustee, was given him for the pur-pose of protecting his interests as mortgagee, but did not absolve him from the duty which, as trustee, he owed to the infant; and that the conduct of the plaintiff prior to and at and about the sale, as set out in the case, by means of which he had been enabled to make a profit at the expense of the infant cestui que trust, was such as would have ren-dered the sale invalid if the land had remained in his hands; but, as it had passed into those of an innocent purchaser, the plaintiff should be charged with the outside selling value of the estate at the time of the sale, or should pay to the defendant the amount due to him under the will, with interest thereon from the date of the sale, together with the costs of the court below subsequent to the petition, and also the costs of appeal. Ricker v. Ricker, 7 A. R. 282.

Partner of Intestate—Purchase of Interest, 1—Under the statute to amend the law of property and trusts, the court made an order approving of a proposed sale to a partner of an intestate's interest in the partner-ship assets. Exparte Sessions, 2 Ch. Ch. 360.

Trustee — Purchase of Life Estate — Sheriff's Sale].—A. holding property in trust for B., for life, and then for B.'s wife and children, purchased B.'s life estate at sheriff's sale:—Held, that he was trustee thereof for B. only, and not for the other cestui que trust, King v. Keating, 12 Gr. 29.

Trustee for Devisees—Purchase of Lite Estate — Benefit of Remainderman,] — By virtue of a will A. had a life interest in certain lands, with remainder to the plaintiff in fee. The land was afterwards sold at sheriff's sale under circumstances which made the sale void in equity, and the purchaser a trustee for the devisees. A. (the life tenant) for valuable consideration conveved his life interest to the purchaser:—Held, that the plaintiff could not claim the benefit of that transaction. Gilpin v. West, 18 Gr. 228.

Trustee for Sale—Purchase of Judgment—Profits—Assignce.]—The title of a trustee for sale being liable to be impeached by creditors of a former owney, the former owner being also entitled to the residue under the trust, the trustee bought at a discount a judgment recovered against such former owner. The trustee then owed the trust more than the amount paid for the judgment:—Held, that he could not retain the profit on the purchase, and that his cestuis que trust were entitled to it. After his purchase the trustee assigned the judgment:—Held, that his assignee took subject to the same equities as affected himself. Hexeson v. Smith, 17 Gr. 407.

Trustee for Sale of Lands—Collusive Nale.]—In 1851 the plaintiff, who had gone to reside in California, empowered his brother in Canada to sell certain lands. In 1853 the brother agreed to sell the property to W., and in 1856 executed a conveyance of the property to W., and in 1856 executed a conveyance of the property to W. for the alleged consideration of $1,500, and W. immediately reconveyed to the brother one-half of the estate for an alleged consideration of $200. In October, 1873, the plaintiff returned to Canada, and in January following filed a bill impeaching the transactions between his brother and W., and seeking to have them declared trustees of the estate for him. At the hearing the plaintiff and his brother compromised their difficulties by each taking one-half of the property conveyed to the brother. The court, in view of all the circumstances and of the time that had elapsed since the transaction was completed, refused to set aside the conveyance to W., and dismissed the plaintiff's bill with costs. Acceptance of Trust—Pleading—Status of Plaintiffs.]—The plaintiffs, A. and J., filed a bill for the purpose of having a deed made to the defendant by J. declared void, as having been obtained by fraud and misrepresentation. The bill alleged that J. had subsequently made a deed of the same property to A., for the purpose of remedying, as far as he could, the wrong he had done by conveying to the defendant—the bill alleging that such deed to A. was made to him "as trustee for the heirs of A. M.," who had died seised. The bill in no place alleged that A. was trustee, but in the following paragraph it was stated that "before the execution of such last mentioned deed the heirs of the said A. M., who are the rightful owners of the said land," &c.:—Held, that, notwithstanding the absence of any express allegation of A. being such 'trustee, sufficient was stated to shew that he had accepted the office of trustee, and as such was entitled to litigate the subject matters of the bill, and a demurrer for want of equity was overruled with costs. A demurrer ore tenus for misjoinder of plaintiffs, it appearing by the will that J. had no interest in the questions raised, was allowed, without costs. Roche v.

Breach of Trust—Voluntary Conveyonce—Party Wall—Tenants in Common.]— which, it was contended by the purchaser, coneyed absolutely the freehold estate in the party wall and the land covered by it. An action being brought by the executors of M., to have it declared that the wall in question was a party wall:—Held, that the trustees of the will and the marriage settlement were bound by the trust declared in the instruments under which they derived their powers; and, even if it could be shewn that the confirmation deed had the effect of conveying a greater quantity of land than the deed from the trustees of the marriage settlement, such a voluntary conveyance in favour of one beneficiary, which would operate prejudicially to the interests of the other beneficiaries, would be a breach of trust and consequently void. Levis

Infants' Funds—Deposit of—Creation of Trust—Award.]—Money was recovered by the administratix of a person killed by a railway accident, and the shares allotted to her children were deposited by her with her brother, who was fully cognizant where the money came from and to whom it belonged:—Held, that he was liable to account to the children as their trustee. The administratrix was afterwards sued by her brother for a debt, alleged to have been due by her husband, the intestate, and judgment was recovered by him in the action, and subsequently a reference was made to arbitration in respect of other moneys come to the hands of the administratrix for the benefit of her children, and by her deposited with her brother; and this judgment and the amount due thereon were, at the arbitration, mixed up with questions as to these trust moneys and the debts of the estate were to be considered and dealt with together, but the infants were not represented before the arbitrators:—Held, that the infants were not bound by the award made under such circumstances. Secord v. Costello, 17 Gr. 328.

——Payment out of Court—Investment by Trusts Company.]—On an application by a trustee company, and a party who was entitled for life to the income of a fund in court, which was the proceeds of the sale of certain settled estates, for the payment out of the fund for the purpose of investment by the company as trustees (they having been appointed trustees under the will which devised the settled estates), which application was opposed by the official guardian on behalf of the remainderman:—Held, that the practice and current of authority were against what was asked by the petitioners, and they were not entitled to it as a matter of right, and that the application must be dismissed. Misappropriation of Trust Funds—Stiffing Prosecution—Restoration of Funds—Express Trust.]—The Imperial Act 20 & 21 Vict. c. 54, s. 12, provides that "nothing in this Act contained, nor any proceeding, conviction, or judgment to be had or taken thereon against any person under this Act, shall prevent, lessen, or impeach any remedy at law or in equity, which any party aggrieved by any offence against this Act might have had if this Act had not been passed . . . ; and nothing in this Act contained shall affect or prejudice any agreement entered into or security given by any trustee, having for its object the restoration or repayment of any trust property misappropriated:"—Held, affirming the judgment in 5 B. C. Rep. 571, that the class of trustees referred to in said Act were those guilty of misappropriation of property held upon express trusts. Semble, that the section only covered agreements or securities given by the defaulting trustee himself, Quere, is the said Imperial Act in force in British Columbia? If in force it would not apply to a prosecution for an offence under R. S. Grant — Beneficial Interest—Statute of Uses. |—Certain owners of the equity of redemption in lands, by deed granted the same to "A., his heirs and assigns, unto and to the use of B., his heirs and assigns, unto and to the use of B., his heirs and assigns; This was dated 17th July, 1875, and registered 21st July, 1875;—Held, that, whether this deed operated under the Statute of Uses or not. B. took under it the beneficial interest in fee, and it had the same effect as if it were a conveyance to A. upon trust for the benefit of B. Imperial Bank of Canada v. Metcalle, 11 O. R. 467.

- Intention - Mortgage-Subsequent Usc.]-In an indenture the granting words "grant, bargain, sell, alien, release, enfeoff, convey, and confirm unto the parties of the second part, their heirs and assigns, all and singular, &c.: habendum unto the said parties of the second part, their heirs and asigns forever, to the use and upon the trust following, that is to say, to and for the use of, &c., infant children of, &c., their heirs and assigns forever." It appeared in evidence that upon the execution of this deed by the grantor, it having been executed in completion of a sale of his equity of redemption to the grantees, in settlement of an overdue mortgage held by them as representing the deceased mortgagee, the grantees discharged this mortgage, and then mortgaged the estate back to the grantor to secure the purchase money of his equity. In ejectment, brought by the infant children against the lessee of the grantees:—Held, that the use was not executed in them (the children), but that, notwithstanding the use of the word "grant" in the deed, and C. S. U. C. c. 90, s. 2, the old rule, that deeds shall operate according to the intention of the parties, if by law they may, must govern, and that the intention to be gathered from the mortgage transaction, which would otherwise be defeated, clearly was that the deed should operate as a bargain and sale, vesting the use in the bargainees, the subsequent use being a trust, Mitchell v. Smellie, 20 C. P. 389.

Husband and Wife—Grant to—Statute of Uses,1—A husband and wife were the parties of the third part in a conveyance, whereby the wife's father did "grant unto the said party of the third part, his heirs and assigns forever," &c., habendum "unto the said party of the third part, his heirs and assigns, to and for his and their sole and only use forever:"—Held, that, by the operation of the Statute of Uses, the husband took an estate in fee simple. Re Young, 9 P. R. 521.

Lunatic—Heir of—Statute of Uses.]—The Crown granted land by letters patent to J. S. "in trust for his son I. S., a lunatic, his heirs and assigns forever, habendum to him, the said J. S., his heirs and assigns forever:"—Held, that this patent coming, as any other mode of assurance, under the operation of the Statute of Uses, 27 Hen. VIII. c. 10, if it did not, from particular considerations applying to the lunatic only, vest the real estate in him, yet it nevertheless created a use which, on the death of the lunatic, was executed in his heir; and that therefore a deed made by the heir after his death would be valid as against a deed executed by the grantee of the Crown. Doe Snyder v. Musters, S. U. C. R. 55.

Operation of Bargain and Sale. |—The operation of an ordinary deed of bargain and sale under the Short Forms Act, R. S. O. 1877 c. 102, conveying lands to trustees, considered and acted on. Seafon v. Lunney, 27 Gr. 169.

Security—Covenant to Stand Seised— Consideration — Legal Estate — Statute of Uses.]—In ejectment, the plaintiff claimed under a sealed instrument executed in his favour by one M., and witnessing that, in consideration of prior indebtedness for professideration of prior indebtedness for profes-sional services, and to secure plaintiff for fu-ture services of the same kind, and of the sum of £25 already paid and advanced by plaintiff to him, &c., he, M., covenanted, granted, and agreed that he would stand seised and possessed of the land in question, to the use of plaintiff, his heirs and assigns, by the way of charge, security, and mortgage on the land for said moneys and costs, and when plaintiff's costs were taxed he was to be at liberty to hold the instrument as and by way of a charge. mortgage, and security upon the land for the amount so to be ascertained, or M. would, and he covenanted that he, or his heirs, would. on demand, execute a good and sufficient morton demand, execute a good and subscript flore gage in law, with bar of dower, if necessary, and usual covenants, &c.:—Held, that it could only operate under the Statute of Uses, as being granted on a money consideration, which appeared from the express recitals contained in it. Quære, whether the plaintiff took the legal estate, so as to enable him to maintain ejectment. Miller v. Stitt, 17 C. P. 559.

Will—Devise — Statute of Uses — Legal Estate,]—To an action for rent defendant pleaded, on equitable grounds, that W., by his will, devised all his lands to the plaintiffs in trust for the sole benefit of J. during her life, under which she claimed and received from them the rent:—Held, that by the devise, as thus stated, the legal estate was vested J. under the Statute of Uses. Where a loss occurs under a mortgage of trust funds, the income of which is payable to a life tenant, the loss should be apportioned between the tenant for life and the remainderman by adding the amount actually realized from the security to the amount of interest theretofore received by the tenant for life and dividing the whole sum between the latter and the remainderman in the proportion in which they would have been entitled to share if the security had been paid in full, the tenant for life giving credit for the amounts already received. Money Lent to Trustee—Liability of Trust Estate.]—Action against the trustee of an estate to recover money lent to a former trustee. The trust deed gave the trustee power to borrow money on morigage. The trustee represented to the plaintiff that the money lent was for the use of the estate, and gave him a promissory note signed "G. H. L., trustee of E. I. S.," and indorsed by G. H. L. The trial Judge held that the trustee was acting within his powers, or, if not, that he got the money on the promise that he would exercise the power, and that the trust estate was liable:—Held, reversing this judgment, that there was no evidence of such a promise, and, the estate not having had the benefit of the money, the trustee would not have been entitled to indemnity, and the plaintiffs right was only to be placed in the same position as the trustee. Connor v. Vroom, 24 S. C. R. 701.

—Remedy of Lender.]—A party making advances to trustees for the benefit of a trust estate, which advances are applied to the purposes of the trust, is entitled to stand pro tanto in the place of the trustees as against the trust estate. Mills v. Cottle, 17 Gr. 335.

Money Paid for First Claim—Legal Estate — Distribution — Title.]—J. R. died leaving his estate to his widow and children. The estate having become involved, an absolute deed of all the realty was executed in favour of one of the testator's children, by the widow and other children, the grantee undertaking to pay off the liabilities and reconvey the lands on repayment of the amounts advanced to her. A portion of the land was sold for taxes, and the purchaser, to perfect his title, obtained quit claim deeds from all the heirs of the testator. Similar deeds had previously been given for other portions of the estate, and the moneys paid for the same equally distributed among the children and grandchildren of the testator. Before the distribution of the money paid by the purchaser at the tax sale in the last case, as the consideration for the quit claim deeds, the trust deed, which had been mislaid, was discovered, and the grantee having died, her children claimed the whole of the money. The other heirs of the testator brought this action for their respective shares:—Held, that the purchaser at the tax sale paid the money to obtain a perfect title, and, as the defendants, the children of the trustee, were the only persons who could give such title, the legal estate being in them, the plaintiffs could not claim any part of the money was proved, any agreement made by the plaintiffs with the purchaser not binding the defendants. Draper v. Radenhwart, 21 S. C. R. 714.

Perpetuities—Rule against—Receipt of Rents—Account—Costs.]—The owner of real estate conveyed the same absolutely, receiving back a bond declaring the conveyance to be in trust to receive the rents, &c., and account therefor to the grantor; and in the bond was reserved a right to the obligor and his heirs to purchase the property. Upon a bill filed to set aside this agreement as infringing the rule against perpetuities, and for an account of the rents and profits received;—Held, that, even if the agreement were within the rule, it was good for the life of the grantee; and an account of rents was directed, reserving the question of costs until after report, the bill not alleging any application for an account. Kenrick V. Dempsey, 5 Gr. 584.

Preferred Claim of Trustee—Mistake in Decree—Assignment.]—Where a decree by mistake gave a trustee priority, in respect of a debt due to him by the estate, over other claims:—Held, on application to correct the error, that an assignment for value executed by the trustee after the decree, was no answer to the application, and that the assignee took subject to all equities to which the trustee himself was subject. Wood v. Brett, 14 Gr. 72.

Reconveyance of Trust Property— Right of Equitable Tenant in Fee Simple.] —See Farrell v. Cameron, 29 Gr. 313. Release—Rescission—Breach of Trust— Lackes—Account, 1—E. M. died intestate in 1871, and his brother and business partner, H. M., obtained from his widow and his father, as next of kin, a release of their respective interests in all real and personal property of the deceased. In getting this, he represented that the estate would be sacrificed represented that the estate would be sarringed if sold at auction and that the most could be made out of it by letting him have full control. He then took out letters of administration, but took no further proceedings in the probate court, and managed the property as his own until he died in 1888. During that time he wrote several letters to the widow, in most of which he stated that he was dealing with the property for her benefit, and would see that she lost nothing by giving him con-trol of it. After his death, the widow brought an action against his executors for an account of the partnership and of his dealings with of the partnersing and of its demands with the property since her husband's death; also to obtain payment of her share; and to set aside the release. The defendants relied on the release as valid, and also pleaded the plain-tiff's laches:—Held, that the release should be set aside; that it was given in ignorance of the state of the partnership business and E. M.'s affairs, and the plaintiff was dominated by the stronger will of H. M.; that the latter had divested himself of his legal title by ad-mitting in his letters a liability to the plaintiff, and must be treated as a trustee; that, as a trustee, lapse of time would not bar the as a trustee, apseof time would not far the plaintiff from proceeding against him for breach of trust; and that the delay in pressing the plaintiff's claim was due to H. M. himself, who postponed from time to time the giving of a statement of the business, when demanded by the plaintiff. Mack v. Mack. 23 S. C. R. 146.
