- Relation—Afidavit.]—In this case the fact of a relator being a candidate, or a voter who had voted or tendered his vote, as required by s. 131 of 36 Vict. c. 48, was omitted in the relation, but was contained in one of the affidavits filed:—Held, that the fact being already before the court, the relation could be amended under the Administration of Justice Act. - In this case the affidavit for an order to examine under the Administration of Justice Act was made by the managing clerk of the attorney, and stated, "I am familiar with all the proceedings in this suit;"—Held, that, although a managing clerk's affladvit is sufficient under the statute, still it must state that he has some particular charge of the suit. Elmsley v. Cosyrave, 10 C. L. J. 105.

maxim, "expressio unius est exclusio alterius." Dain v. Gossage, 9 C. L. J. 193.

Equitable Issues—Trial.]—Under s. 16, A. Act, 1873, it is not incumbent on the Judge to try any equitable issues on the record himself, but he may direct them to be tried by the jury. Shannon v. Hastings Mutual Fire Ins. Co., 36 C. P. 380.

Interpleader — "Action."]—The words "action at law," in s. 24, include an interpleader proceeding. Canada Permanent Building and Savings Society v. Forest, 10 C. L. J. 78.

II. APPEARANCE.

1. Appearance by Statute.

[Appearance by plaintiff for defendant, which is the same thing as appearance by statute and common bail, was dispensed with by C. L. P. Act, R. S. O. 1877 c. 50, s. 63.]

See Kauntz v. Cameron. 2 O. S. 220; Gourlay v. McLean, 6 O. S. 79; Courlary v. Bigslone, R. & J. Dig. 2882; Forrexter v. Graham, 2 O. S. 369; Conboy v. Moffatt, 5 U. C. R. 450; Johnston v. Wisbrooke, I. C. L. C. 163; Scadding v. Welch, 2 C. Ch. 105; Følger v. McCallum, 1 P. R. 352; Doe d. McLean v. McDonald, 3 U. C. R. 126; Bridges v. Case, 4 U. C. R. 127.

2. Authority for Entering-Absence of.

Where a plaintiff, without serving the defendant, accepts the appearance of an unauthorized attorney, the court will set aside the proceedings, although it is not shewn that the attorney is insolvent. Massey v. Rapelje, 5 C. P. 134.

Assumpsit against A. and B., two brothers, as maker and indorser of a note. A verdict and judgment having been obtained, and B's goods seized, he applied for relief, stating in his affidavit that he had never indorsed the note, and knew nothing of the action until seizure of his goods. Upon the affidavits it was uncontradicted that he had received no notice before action brought, and had been served with no writ or other papers in the cause, an attorney having appeared for both defendants by A.'s instructions; but A. swore positively to B.'s indorsement, and that he had instructed him to have such appearance entered. Under these circumstances the service of the writ of summons, and all subsequent proceedings as against B., were set aside without costs. B. undertaking to bring no action for anything done under the fi. fa. Wright v. Hull, 2 P. R. 26.

Where an appearance was entered without authority, of which defendants were aware, but made no application until after trial:—Held, too late. Kerr v. Malpus, 2 P. R. 135.

In ejectment, the defendant, being tenant, was served with the writ, which he handed to H., his landlord, and H. took it to his attorney, who, instead of getting leave for H. to defend, entered an appearance in defendant's name without his authority. A verdict having been obtained against defendant, the Judge refused to interfere, but left him to his remedy against his landlord and the attorney. Moran v. Schermerhorn, 2 P. R. 261.

C., one of several defendants, appeared by attorney, but no notice was taken of it by plaintiff's attorney, because the attorney for the other defendants had appeared and pleaded for all. C's attorney, having ascertained the error, notified the plaintiff's attorney that he had a defence, but did nothing more, and plaintiff took a verdict. The affidavit of C. not shewing substantial merits, a new trial was refused. Smith v. Roblin, 13 C. P. 430.

Where a defendant has been served with process, and an attorney, without authority, appears for him, the court will not interfere if the attorney is solvent. If the attorney be insolvent, the court may relieve defendant on equitable terms, if he has a defence on the merits. Where, however, it appears that the suit-is brought by collusion between plaintiff and defendant to enable defendant to cheat his creditors, a Judge will not interfere summarily to remove the appearance, and thus assist the parties in the perpetration of a fraud. Wardey v. Poapst, 7 L. J. 294.

In an action against three partners, upon notes signed by and for goods sold to the firm, C, an attorney, appeared on the 24th March, for all the defendants, his only instructions being, as he swore, from one of them, to defendant, appeared by his attorney, S., who, on the 6th April, notified the plaintiff's attorney to serve the declaration and all other papers on him, or that the proceedings would be moved against. He heard nothing more, however, until after final judgment, which was entered on the 13th April, a verdict having been taken on the same day upon a consent signed by C. When the declaration was filed or served did not appear.—Held, that the proceedings against G., subsequent to the appearance entered by S. for him, must be set aside with costs, Clark v. Galbraith, 24 U. C. R. 25

Where a plaintiff had served only one of three defendants, who, without authority, directed an appearance to be entered for all three, and the plaintiff obtained a verdict:—Held, that the verdict must be set aside. Roisser v. Wextbrook, 24 C. P. 91.

3. Error or Irregularity in Entering.

Where defendant appeared by attorney, but the appearance paper was mislaid in the Crown office, and the plaintiff entered an appearance per statute, and served a declaration on defendant, and proceeded to final judgment, the proceedings were set aside for irregularity. Rypar v. Leonard, 3 O. S. 307.

Where the defendant appeared by attorney, but the plaintiff, having overlooked it, entered an appearance for him per statute, and served the declaration on himself personally:—Held, that after judgment by default, and notice of assessment served on him, he was too late to object to the irregularity. Ketchum v. Kierfer, 6 O. S. 56.

An appearance without a sufficient address is not a nullity. The address of a defendant appearing in person need not be stated in a separate memorandum if it sufficiently appears in the body of the appearance. Jones v. Greer, 3 L. J. 31.

Where an appearance was by mistake indorsed with the letters C. C. by defendant's attorney, and filed with the deputy clerk of the Crown, who was also the county court clerk, which indorsement misled the clerk, and caused him to file it among his county court papers, and the plaintiff finding no appearance signed judgment, the judgment was set aside on payment of costs. Dickie v. Elusslie, 3 L. J. 107.

Putting an appearance under the door of the office of the deputy clerk of the Crown during office hours, or handing it to him in the street, is not a due entry of the appearance. Such a practice is not to be encouraged under any circumstances. Grey v. Stacey, 10 L. J. 245.

An appearance entered by attorney for an infant defendant, no prochein amy having been appointed, is a nullity, not an irregularity. Fountain v. McSecen, 4 P. R. 240.

As to mistakes in the Crown office, see post V.

4. Judgment for Default.

Where the writ might have been specially indersed under s. 61, C. L. P. Act, 1856, but was not, the declaration should be filed with a notice to plead indorsed, and the judgment by default thereon should be by nil dicit. And the usual judgment by default for non-appearance to a specially indorsed writ signed under such circumstances, is irregular. Keys v. Murphy, 5 L. J. 228.

No venue need be stated in the margin of a judgment roll on default of appearance. Bank of Montreal v. Harrison, 4 P. R. 331.

The proceedings in replevin as regards appearance are regulated by the Replevin Act, not by the C. L. P. Act; and an interlocatory judgment signed as for want of a plea, without any appearance by or for defendant, is therefore a nullity. Hart v. Pacaud, 28 U. C. R. 390.

Where the defendant neglects to appear to a promissory note, the plaintiff is entitled to sign judgment without the production of the note; and in this case a mandamus was granted to the county court to sign such judgment. In re Oliver v. Fryer, 7 P. R. 323.

5. Notice to Appear.

See Forsyth v. Hartwell, 3 O. S. 439; Bank of Montreal v. Edmunds, 1 U. C. R. 411; Lanark and Drummond Plank Road Co. v. Bothvell, 2 L. J. 220.

6. Proceeding without Appearance.

Where a declaration was served on an attorney, who had not appeared, and no appearance was entered at all, but the attorney did not deny that he was acting for the defendant, and the plaintiff afterwards signed interlocutory judgment, the court set aside the proceedings without costs, but stated that they would, on application, make the attorney pay them. Dobe v. McFalance, 2 O. S. 285.

When there were two defendants, one of whom appeared by attorney and the other did not appear, but the declaration and other papers for both defendants were served on the attorney for the one, the court held the proceedings irregular. Huff v. McLean, 5 O. S. 69.

An interlocutory judgment signed without appearance was set aside after a year, the proceedings being void. Lane v. McDonell, 5 O. S. 335.

If there was no appearance entered for the defendant, proceedings were void, and not merely irregular. Nichol v. McKelvey, E. T. 2 Vict.

A defendant whose plea is a nullity cannot object, as a ground for setting aside an interfectory judgment, signed after such plea, that there is no appearance entered. Breuster v. Davy, H. T. 2 Vict.

A summons specially indorsed was served on two defendants on the 7th December, an appearance entered on the 14th for one only, and judgment signed against both on the 19th as if no appearance had been entered. A f. fat was given to the sheriff on the 13th January. The defendant who had appeared applied in March to set aside the judgment, &c., on althatigment was the signed until the 4th of that month. The deputy sheriff, however, in answer, swore that a few days after receiving the fi. fa. he informed this defendant, who replied that he would endeavour to arrange it:—Held, that the judgment under the facts shewn was not a nullity, and that defendant was too late in his application to set it aside. Under the old practice a judgment entered without appearance was a nullity, defendant not being in court, but, under the C. L. P. Act, he is deemed to be in court after the time for appearance has expired. Bank of Upper Canada v. Vanveokis, 2 P. R. 382.

Until after appearance a defendant has no attorney in the cause, and an affidavit by a person calling himself such is, therefore, insufficient to support an application to change the venue. Hood v. Gronkrile. 4 P. R. 279, Commented upon in Attorney-General v. Mc-Lachtin, 5 P. R. 63.

7. Time for Entering.

Defendant's attorney accepting service of summons has the same time within which to appear as if the service had been on defendant himself. Starratt v. Manning, 3 L. J. 10.

An appearance is in time if filed while plaintiff is entering judgment, so that it be not fully signed. Harris v. Andrews, 3 L. J. 31.

See Marmora Foundry Co. v. Miller, 2 C. L. Ch. 102.

III. CHAMBERS.

1. Clerk of the Crown and Pleas in Chambers.

(a) Appeals from Orders of.

The court will not, in general, review the judgment of one of its members sitting in chambers, upon the question whether an application was made in time, but it is different under our statute and rules of court, upon an appeal from the decision of the clerk of the Crown and pleas sitting in chambers, $Hall \ v.\ Grand\ Trunk\ R.\ W.\ Co.\ 7\ P.\ R.\ 335.$

Held, that the single court was not precluded from disposing of an application to rescind an order made by the clerk of the Crown and pleas, setting aside a sidebar rule for costs of the day, on the ground that no application for the purpose had been made to a Judge in chambers within four days after the making of the order under the rule of court of Hilary term, 1870, the exception contained in s. 31 of c. 39, R. S. O. 1877, merely providing an additional or more speedy mode of appeal, and not taking away the right to resort to the court for the purpose, Parkinson v. Thompson, 44 U. C. R. 29.

Semble, that a Judge has power to extend the time for appealing against the order of the clerk of the Crown in chambers on an application for an allowance under the Indigent Debtors Act (R. S. O. 1877 c. 69), made after four days from the making of the order. Wheatly v. Sharp, S P. R. 189.

Held, that there is no appeal to the court in term from an order of the clerk of the Crown and pleas, made on an application to change the venue in county court cases under R. S. O. 1877 c. 50, s. 155; but the only appeal in such cases is to a Judge in chambers, under s. 31 of the Act:—Held, however, that, if an appeal did lie to the full court, it might be made direct thereto, without first going before a Judge in chambers. Mahon v. Nicholls, 31 C. P. 22.

The clerk of the Queen's bench sitting in chambers has clearly jurisdiction to entertain an application to set aside proceedings against a magistrate brought before conviction quashed under C. S. U. C. c. 126. Donelly v. Tegart, 5 P. R. 225.

In an action for breach of warranty, and for false representation, on the sale of a steam vessel, as to her power and speed, the clerk of the Crown in chambers, acting under s. 18 of the Administration of Justice Act, 1873, directed the case to be tried by a Judge without a jury. On motion in term to set aside such order:—Held, that the clerk had power to make it, and that the court would not interfere with the exercise of his discretion. Bennett v. Tregent, 25 C. P. 443.

On an application to set aside executions and enter satisfaction a reference was made to a county court Judge to take an account, who found there was nothing due:—Held, that the clerk of the Crown and pleas, acting as Judge in chambers, had no power to hear an appeal from the report. Pufford v. Davis, 7 P. R. 361.

It is within the power of the clerk of the Crown in chambers to make an order for the payment of a weekly allowance to a debtor, under the Indigent Debtors Act (R. S. O. 1877 c. 639), where it can legally be made. Wheatly v. Sharp, S. P. R. 189.

2. Judge in Chambers.

(a) Discretion in Setting aside Judgment.

Semble, that where an interlocutory judgment has been signed and the plaintiff is preparing for his assessment of damages in an outer district, a Judge in chambers, upon an application, immediately before the assizes, will not interfere to let defendant in to plead, but will refer the parties to the Judge of assize, Bellows v, Condec, 4 U. C. R. 346.

A Judge, on an application to set aside a judgment signed for want of appearance, will not try the merits of a case on affidavit; but he may properly receive and consider explanatory affidavits, so as to be able to exercise a discretion on all the matters properly before him, and grant relief if he thinks the facts before him warrant it. Bank of Montreal v. Harrison, 4 P. R. 331.

(b) Jurisdiction of.

A Judge in chambers has a discretionary power as to the materials on which a sum-mors may be issued, and is not bound to be as particular in this respect as the court would be. Chamberlain v. Wood, 1 P. R. 195.

He has no power to order the weekly allow-ance for prisoners charged in execution on final process. Low v. Melvin, 1 C. L. Ch. 25.

He may make an order on a deputy clerk of the Crown to refund costs improperly received. McIntosh v. Pollock, 2 C. L. Ch. 209.

The court or Judge may determine whether a case be within the Extradition Treaty, and a Judge in chambers has power to review and decide on the sufficiency of the evidence returned by the committing magistrates, or, if necessary, to hear further testimony. Regina v. Tubbee, 1 P. R. 98.

The court possesses the jurisdiction, upon the application of a subsequent judgment creditor, to inquire into the bona fides of a prior judgment obtained on a specially in-dorsed writ against the same judgment debtor, and to direct the trial of a feigned issue in order to inform the conscience of the court as to fraud or bona fides. Klein v. Klein, 7 L. J. 296,

A common law Judge may refer for tax-ation to the proper officer of the court of chancery, a bill of solicitors for services ren-dered in that court. In re Wilson and Hector, 9 L. J. 132.

Quere, can a Judge in chambers rescind his order for a habeas corpus, or quash the writ itself on the ground that it issued improvidently. In re Ross, 3 P. R. 301.

In ejectment, the tenant in possession neglected to notify his landlord, the defendant, and the plaintiff issued an execution and took possession. The judgment having been set aside, and the landlord let in to defend on terms by order of a Judge in chambers:—Held, that he had power to make such order, Turley v. Williamson, 13 C. P. 581.

He has no jurisdiction, at common law or under the C. L. P. Act, to discharge a defen-dant from custody under a ca. sa., on the ground that he had no intention to quit Can-ada when the ca. sa. was issued. Bank of Montreal v. Campbell, 2 C. L. J. 18.

A Judge in chambers has power to order the plaintiff to bring in the record and enter judyment, or deliver it to the defendant, when defendant is entitled to costs because the vertilet is within the jurisdiction of the inferior court. Cross v. Waterhouse, 3 P. R.

An attachment against an absconding debtor issued by the order of a Judge in chambers, may be set aside by another Judge. Howland v. Rowe, 25 U. C. R. 467.

Held, that the absence of any express provisions in C. S. U. C. c. 25 for setting aside a writ of attachment against an absconding debtor, does not prevent the court from do-ing so in the exercise of its common law pow-er over its own process; and that such power can also be exercised by a Judge in chambers as the delegate of the court. Jackson v. Ran-dall, 24 C. P. 87.

A county court case had been tried at the assizes under the A. J. Act, 1874, s. 54. The plaintiff got a verdict, and the plaintiff's attorney obtained the record. Defendant's attorney obtained the record. Derendant's at-torney applied for an order to deliver it up to the court of Queen's bench, to enable him to move against the verdict. The Judge in cham-bers held that he had no jurisdiction to make bers held that he had no jurisdiction to make such order. The county court Judge made an order for the delivery of it to the clerk of that court, and stayed proceedings until next term. Burley v. Milne, 7 P. R. 100.

Jurisdiction of Judge in chambers to grant interpleader order. Waiver of objection there-to by accepting the order and defending the issue. Haldan v. Beatty, 43 U. C. R. 614.

In re Mackay v. Goodson, 27 U. C. R. 263.

He is not entitled to search the judgments entered during a particular period, without reference to any named parties. In re Canada Trade Association, 17 U. C. R. 542.

— Appearance — Mistake — Costs.]—
When an appearance properly intituled was filed in the office of the deputy clerk of the Crown, but was incorrectly entered in the appearance book by defendant's attorney, and plaintiff's attorney not taking the precaution of searching the files, was led to believe that no appearance had in fact been entered, the judgment was set aside, but without costs, as both parties had contributed to the mistake. Moore v. Simons, 1 C. L. J. 183.

Remarks as to the irregularity and impropriety of attorneys making entries which should be made by the proper officer. Ib..

—Where an appearance to a writ in the common pleas was filed in the office of the deputy clerk of the Crown, who was also clerk of the county court, but by mistake was put with the county court papers, and the stamp necessary for an appearance in a superior court was not affixed, the plaintiff signed judgment as in default for appearance:—Held, that the appearance was a nullity, and was absolutely void under the Stamp Act, and leave was refused to have the stamp affixed as of the day of filing, or to take the appearance off the county court files. Bank of Montreal v. Harrison, 4 P. R. 331.

— Holiday.]—The Crown offices should not be opened for business on Easter Monday, and a judgment entered on that day was set aside, for irregularity, with costs. Trust and Loan Co. v. Dickson, 2 C. L. J. 166.

Joint and Several Bond.] — Plaintiffs, having taken a joint and several bond from defendants for a debt of £5,000, declared sgainst them all as upon a joint bond only. One pleaded a special plea, and another demurred, and the plaintiffs' attorney, under the impression that the bond had been declared upon as joint and several, discontinued as against these defendants, and took a verdict against the others, who moved to arrest the judgment. The sum being large, on motion made in the following term, the court allowed the plaintiffs to discontinue against the last mentioned defendants, on payment of all costs, so that the claim might not be defeated. Commercial Bank v. Cameron, 17 U. C. R. 237.

Taxation of Costs.]—Unless the plaintiff, upon taking out a rule to discontinue, serve defendant at the same time with an appointment to tax costs, defendant may regard the rule as a nullity. Perrin v. Eaglesum, 4 U. C. R. 254.

The plaintiff having failed to proceed to trial upon a peremptory undertaking, the defendant moved to make absolute the original motion for judgment as in case of nonsult. The plaintiff then obtained an order to discontinue on payment of costs, but did not take out an appointment to tax. Defendant gave notice of taxation, but not attending the costs were not taxed. The plaintiff on this ground opposed the application for judgment, we: —Held, that the plaintiff should have taxed and paid the costs whether defendant arended or not; and that defendant was entitled to judgment as in case of nonsuit. Doe d. Megers v. Robertson, I. C. L. Ch. 150

On a motion for judgment as in case of a mossult in ejectment, the plaintiff consented that the rule should be absolute if a rule to discontinue were not taken out within a month. It was taken out, and a notice of taxation served, which was enlarged. The court, under the circumstances of this case, afterwards allowed the plaintiff to withdraw his rule to discontinue, and to proceed to trial, on payment of costs and on giving additional security for costs in the action. Doe d. Hay v. Haut. I. P. R. 128.

Defondant, having been arrested under process of a county court, was discharged for insufficiency of the affidavit, but expressly without costs. The plaintiff then took out a rule to discontinue the county court action on payment of costs, and arrested defendant under process of the Queen's bench for the same cause. Defendant was discharged because the first suit had not been effectually discontinuel, the plaintiff having taken no steps to lax or pay costs. Ellis v. James, 1 P. R. 153.

The tenants in dower having given notice of trial by proviso, the demandant served a rule to discontinue on payment of costs, with a consent on her part that if the costs were not paid within four days the tenant might say judgment of non pros. The costs not having been paid, the tenants entered the record for trial, nonsuited the demandant, at her own election, and entered the usual judgment for the costs antecedent to and attending the nonsuit:—Held, that the service of the rule to discontinue being no stay of proceedings unless the costs taxed under it were paid, the tenants were entitled to the costs of the nonsuit, and were not obliged to have taken a judgment of non pros, under the terms of that rule. The master, on revision, laving disallowed these costs, as unnecessarily incurred:—Held, that he had exceeded is discretion; the general rule being that the costs of suit. Muller v. City of Hamdion, 17 C. P. 514.

VII. ESTOPPEL IN MATTERS OF PRACTICE.

Affidavits — Intituling.] — In ejectment against A. and B., by consent of the plaintiff's afformer, an appearance was entered for S. as landlen). A. and B. not appearing. The notice of trail was intituded as against A. and B. and notice was served on the plaintiff's afformer warning him that this would be objected to. The nisi prius record contained by appearance, but annexed to it was an appearance by S. as landlord. The plaintiff was a server of the server of the plaintiff of the server of the serve tiff's own proceedings warranted S. in assuming that he was to appear alone, and that the affidavits were therefore rightly intituled. Jones v. Seaton, 26 U. C. R. 166.

Appeal — Verdict Subject to Opinion of Court.] — Where the verdict had been taken subject to the opinion of the court, and the respondents attended before a Judge to settle the case for appeal:—Held, that they were precluded from objecting that the case was not appealable. Two days before appearance R. had disposed of his interest in the lands to S., who, after notice of trial, applied on affidavit, setting out the conveyance and the subsequent attornment to him of defendant (now his lessee), to be admitted as landlord to defend the action, but the application, being opposed by the plaintiff, was refused. For the control of the control of condition that he should pay the master's charges, and was given to understand that he might either take it on these terms or sue the sheriff for it: — Held, that having availed himself of this order, he could not afterwards recover from the sheriff the fees paid to the master, on the ground that the money had been improperly paid into court. Crombie v.

Davidson, 19 U. C. R. 369.

Prohibition — Division Court — Taking Part in Trial.]—An applicant for a prohibition against a Judge of a division court for excess of jurisdiction, who has appeared at the trial, cross-examined witnesses, argued the case before the Judge, and taken no exception at the time to the jurisdiction, is precluded from objecting to the jurisdiction after judgment entered and execution issued in the court below. In re Burrotes, 18 C. P., 483.

Mortand v. Webster, 2 C. L. Ch. 52.

Under R. G. Prac. 29 and 30, and the C. L. P. Act. 1850, s. 165, the old practice of calling on the party by summons to admit documents, was done away with, and the notice to admit according to the form given in rule 29, substituted for it. Such a summons was therefore discharged with costs. D₄ Costa v. Gordon, 2 L. J. 211.

X. Proceeding at Law and in Equity.
[Administration of Justice Act, 1873.]

Claim under Will—Equitable Demand—Retroactivity of Statute.] — The declaration alleged that one S., by his will, appointed defendant his executor; and, after devising his farm, directed his remaining real estate to be sold and the proceeds thereof, and his money and notes, to be equally divided between his three sons, that defendant proved the will and became possessed of assets more than sufficient to pay plaintiff's claim under the will, and properly applicable to the payment thereof, and afterwards promised and agreed with the plaintiff that the plaintiff was entitled to receive from him $500, and stated that sum as the plaintiff's claim under the will; and thereupon, in consideration of the premises, the defendant promised the plaintif to pay, and the plaintiff agreed to secept, the said sum of $500 as and for his claim:—Held, that the plaintiff's claim was not a "purely money demand," to which his right was an equitable one only, under s. 2 of the Administration of Justice Act, 1873; and if it were the plaintiff agreed to secept, the said sum of Justice Act, 1873; and if it were than the section, 1874, would not apply to this action begun on the 11th December, 1873. Soules v. Soules, 35 U. C. R. 334.

Covenant for Title — Vendor and Purchaser — Mortgagor and Mortgagoe.] — The plaintiff swed defendants on their covenant for title in a conveyance of land to the plaintif, alleging as the breach that at the time of the execution of the deed, one II, was possessed of part of the land under a demise from defendants, on which part was a stone wall, whereby the plaintiff was unable to build on said wall, and his premises were injured. The defendants pleaded that the plaintiff had reconveyed the land to them by way of mortgage, with the usual covenants for title, which was still in force and unpaid. The plaintiff replied, on equitable grounds, that the mortgage provided for possession by him until default, and that no default had been made:—IIeld, on demurrer, that the action could not be maintained, nor transferred to the court of chancery, under s. 2 of the Administration of Justice Act of 1873, not being for a purely money demand. Kavanagh v. City of Kispton, 30 U. C. R. 415.

Promissory Note—Transfer of Shares—Offer to Transfer, —To a declaration against maker and indorser of a note defendant plended separately, that before the making of the note the plaintiff and her husband sold all their interest and stock in a certain railway company to defendant H., for $55,000, and, in consideration that the plaintiff and her husband should assign, convey, assure, and transfer the same to H., H. agreed to pay said $55,000 on certain days, and to give his notes therefor, indorsed by the other defendant, B.

and that until the whole of the said stock, &c., had been conveyed to H., neither H. nor the other defendant should be required to pay said notes or any part thereof; that this was one of the notes, and was made on the faith that the stock had been conveyed; and that afterwards the plaintiff and her husband refused to complete the conveyance of all their gued to complete the conveyance of all their stock, and only assigned part thereof, and retained thirty shares. The plaintiff replied that, at the time of making said agreement, and from thence hitherto, she and her husband seen and still are, ready and willing and herely offer to assign to H. said thirty shares on his request, of which he had notice, but-that H. never requested such transfer;— Semble, that under the Administration of Jus-tee Act, 1873, if all the other issues had been disposed of, the court might have allowed the plaintiff to convey the thirty shares, paying the costs of suit, and directed the defendants then to pay the note, and that the plaintiff's lashand should be made a party; but, there being other issues to be tried, judgment was given for defendants on demurrer, reserving judgment on the equitable rights of the par-ties. Boulton v. Hugel, 35 U. C. R. 402. and from thence hitherto, she and her husband

Trust for Creditors—Parties—Transfer Action. |—The declaration alleged, in subof action. —The decearation integed, in substance, that the plaintiff was assignee of a mortgage made by one G. W. M. for $2.015, on which default had been made, by which the whole principal became due; that G. W. M. was in business in partnership with H. W. M., and becoming embarrassed they assigned all their estate, real and personal, to defendants, in trust to sell the same and distribute the proceeds ratably among their creditors, including the plaintiff; that the defendants had sold the estate, and held the proceeds in trust for the plaintiff and other creditors, and held moneys applicable to the amount due to the plaintiff, and were aware and had notice of the plain-tiff's claim, but refused to pay the plaintiff any part of such proceeds; that defendants had realized all the estate, and had long been in a position to divide and pay the same among the creditors, and had in fact paid some of them; and that the greatest portion of the estate so assigned was the sole property of G. W. M.; -licid, not a proper case in which to proceed at law under the A. J. Act, 1873, 36 Vict. c. 8, s. 2 (0.), it being impossible in a court of law to administer the trust and do complete justice without having all the parties interested in the trust before the court; and the suit was therefore transferred, under s. 9, to the court of chancery. Leys v. Withrow, 38 U. C. R. 601.

For decisions in equity on this subject, see PRACTICE IN EQUITY, whether before or after Judicature Act.

The omission of the letters "L. S.," or of any mark to denote a seal to the copy of a writ, a not an irregularity. Cameron v. Wheeler, 6 U. C. R. 355.

Held, that the copy of the writ of summons, under 12 Vict. c. 63, not containing

On the August an appearance was entered for defendant at the suit of B.:—Held, that the service was a mere irregularity, and the appearance a nullity. Ross v. Fraser, 6 L. J. 282.

(b) Service,

Application to Set aside Service.]-In moving to set aside service of process be-cause served in the wrong district, the affidavit must state that the service was not on the confines, or that there was no dispute about boundaries. Crysler v. Thompson, M. T. 3 Vict.

Where a rule nisi was obtained to set aside service of process for defects in the notice to appear, and the defect intended to be relied on was, that the notice was to appear in the "King's bench," instead of the "Queen's bench." it was held that the rule must be disbench. It was held that the bench sufficiently charged, as the irregularity was not sufficiently pointed out in it. Matthie v. Lewis, T. T. 5 & 6 Vict. See, also, Teller v. Wilson, 1 U. C. R.

An affidavit made by a stranger, and verifyand another inade by a stranger, and verifying the copy of process objected to by the information and belief of deponent that the defendant was served with "the annexed copy of process in the cause, and no other," is insufficient. Baley v. Brown, 2 U. C. R. 99.

The fact that a writ of summons in ejectment in some respects varies from the præcipe on which it issued, is no ground for setting aside the writ, for the praceje is no step or proceeding in the cause. Grimshauce v. White, 3 P. R. 320; Cotton v. McCulley, 7 L. J. 272.

Where service of process was denied by defendant, but positively sworn to by the officer, an application to set aside the service was discharged, but not with costs. Coates v. Hornby, 1 C. L. Ch. 135.

Held, that, in the absence of any explana-tory rule on the subject, under the Act 12 Vict. c. 63, service of a writ of summons could not be deemed irregular, because served by a person other than the sheriff or h deputy. Leach v. Jarvis, 1 C. L. Ch. 264.

Where at the time of service of process inspection of the original was demanded and refused, the service was set aside with costs. Weller v. Wallace, M. T. 1 Vict.

The court will not set aside the service of The court will not set aside the service of process for irregularity, upon the ground that it was served upon defendant while he was attending the assizes as plaintiff in a civil suit pending and entered for trial. City of Kingston v. Brown, 4 U. C. R. 117. See Thompson v. Catder, 1 U. C. R. 403.

Service abroad.] - Where a defendant served abroad appears to the writ, the plaintiff need not prove his claim under C. L. P. Act. 1856, s. 35, but may sign final judgment for default as in other cases. Caird v. Fitzell, 2 P. R. 262.

Held, following Cherry v. Thompson, L. R. O. B. 573, that under s. 44 of C. L. P. Act, 7 Q. B. 573, that under s. 44 of C. L. P. Act, the plaintiff might serve the defendants residing in England with process, and sue them in our courts, aithough the breach occurred in England—the contract being made in this Province. McGiverin v. James, 33 U. C. R.

A writ for service within the jurisdiction was served on two of the defendants at a place out of the jurisdiction. The service was not set aside, as the plaintiff had not been in fault, the domicile of the defendants being within the jurisdiction; but leave was given to issue, nunc pro nunc, a concurrent writ for service out of the jurisdiction, amend-ment of the copies served to be made in ac-cordance therewith. Metcalf v. Davis, 6 P. R.

Service on Corporations.]-The court, although an affidavit was produced that there was no member of the board of works residing in Upper Canada on whom a copy of process could be served, refused to allow service to be made on an engineer employed by the board in Upper Canada, or by affixing a copy of the process in the Crown office. Sherveood v. Board of Works, I U. C. R. 517.

The first part of s. 17 of the C. L. P. Act applies only to corporations whose chief place applies only to corporations whose chief place of business is within Upper Canada; the remainder to foreign corporations. Where, therefore, a writ of summons against a foreign corporation was served in Upper Canada upon the president, but it was not shewn that he transacted any business of the company there, the service was held bad. Wilson v. Detroit and Mitwankee R. W. Co., 3 P. R. 37.

Waiver of Irregular Service.]—If a defendant lie by and allow plaintiff to take several steps, he thereby waives previous irregularities in the proceedings; he should have taken the earliest opportunity of excepting to them; and if he move a Judge in Chambers, he must state all the irregularities he relies on, and cannot afterwards in term resort to other irregularities which existed at the time of the application to the Judge, but were not then objected to. Arnold v. Fish, 5 O. S. 141.

A writ of summons was issued in the common pleas, and an appearance entered thereto in the same court. The plaintiff then filed his in the same court. The plaintiff then filed his declaration in the Queen's bench, and served it with a demand of plea about the 26th June. This demand was returned by letter by defendant's attorney on the 4th July, with an acceptance of service indorsed, and no no-tice was taken of the discrepancy. Interlocu-tory judgment was signed on the 29th June, and on the 5th September notice of assessment was served, no pleas having been sent in the meantime. The plaintiff's attorney was not asked to waive the judgment, and he therenot asked to ware the judgment, and he there-fore went on and assessed damages according to his notice:—Held, on motion in the next term, that defendant's attorney, by his con-duct, had waived the want of service of pro-cess, and of appearance. Williams v. Rapelje, 11 U. C. R. 420.

Where defendants' attorney received a writ of summons, and indorsed on the original service admitted:"—Held, that he was pre-cluded from taking advantage of technical irregularities, such as the want of an indorsement of the name and place of abode of the plaintiff's attorney, and the omission in the margin of the clerk by whom and the place where the writ was issued. Where the copy of a specially indorsed writ Where the copy of a specially indorsed writ served on defendant, was in the inside simply a printed form, with the blanks not filled up, but was properly indorsed, and defendant did not move against it until after judgment signed and fi, fa, issued:—Held, an irregular-ity only, not a nullity, and that the applica-tion was too late. Robson v. McGucan, 2 P.

Wrong Person Served.]—Where, in an action against a father, process was served upon his son of the same name, and appearance was entered and defence made by the son:—Held, that a verdict for the defendant was correct, and that, whether there was collusion or not, the plaintiff could not recover against the son so as to charge the father. Killens v. Street, M. T. 4 Vict.

Common bail and all subsequent proceedings to notice of assessment set aside—on affidavits shewing that the defendant's brother had been served with process, and that the wife of defendant had been served with the declaration and demand of plea. Wright v. Irwin, 1 C. L. Ch. 162.

A sheriff's officer served the defendant, who informed him that the writ was intended for another person, and the officer took it back. the defendant agreeing that if he was wrong he would consider the service good, if the writ were left at the house of a third person named. The officer did not serve the other party, nor leave the writ as directed, but having made affidavit of the service, the plaintiff proceeded with the cause. The service and subsequent proceedings were set aside. Erwin v. Powley. 2 U. C. R. 270. The writ of summons, directed to J. S., was by mistake served by the sheriff upon his son of the same name, who a few days after gave the sheriff had made a blunder; and defendant, at his son's request, took it to an attorney, who, upon defendant's instructions, entered an appearance, and atterwards put in pleas:—Heid, that defendant was sufficiently served, and that the plaintiffs could recover against him. Provincial Ins. Co. of Canada v. Shaw, 19 U. C. R. 360.

In an action on a mortgage, the writ was served upon the mortgagor's father, who, by his son, an attorney, entered an appearance and defended the suit; and a verdict was taken against the mortgagor. (c) Teste of Writ.

A bailable ca. re. issued in vacation must be tested the last day of the preceding term. Armstrong v. Scobell, 3 O. S. 303.

A bailable ca. re, must be tested in the name of the chief justice, or in his absence, in the name of the senior puisne Judge. Case v. Mcleigh, T. T. 3 & 4 Vict.

The absence of the chief justice from the Province, does not make it improper to teste a writ of capias in his name. Brett v. Smith, 1 P. R. 309.

A fi. fa. against lands was tested in the name of the then senior pulsne Judge of the court:—Held, that it would be presumed to be regular until the contrary appeared. Liney v. Rose, 17 C. P. 186.

Held, that a writ of ca. sa. tested in the name of a retired chief justice after his successor has been gazetted, but before acceptance of office, by taking the necessary oaths of office, was wrong; it should be tested in the name of his successor. Nelson v. Roy, 3 P. R. 226.

A ca. sa. tested in the name of a retired chief justice is an irregularity only, which may be amended upon payment of costs. Ib.

Defendant was served with a writ of summons, in every respect a copy of a writ from the Queen's bench, except that it was tested in the name of the chief justice of the common pleas. A judgment on default of appearance signed in the common pleas, in which court the writ had been issued, was set aside with costs. Grey v. Bolton. 4 P. R. 300,

(d) Other Cases.

Issue in Blank.]—The practice of issuing writs of summons in blank by officers of the court. disapproved of. Where a ground of objection to a writ of summons is, that it was sated in blank. the facts connected with its issue must be clearly laid before the court, for nothing will be intended in favour of such an objection. Grimshave v. White, 3 P. R. 320.

Words Struck out after Issue.]—Writs of fi. fa. were set aside, the words "executors of the last will and testament of J. M., deceased," having been unauthorizedly struck out after the issuing of the writs. Kirkpatrick v. Harper, 13 C. L. J. 325.

Also by inserting an indorsement of the plaintiff's claim, and of the attorney's name who issued it, on terms of re-service. Davis v. Carruthers, 2 L. J. 200.

A writ of summons may, after its issue and before service, be amended on praceipe by substituting a new plaintiff, without an order; and on such amendment there is no necessity for resealing, nor need it appear on the copy served that any amendment has been made. Worthington v. Boulton, 6 P. R. 68.

Leave granted to issue nunc pro tune a concurrent writ for service out of jurisdiction, to make good a service on a defendant whose domicil was within the jurisdiction, but who had been served out of it with a writ for service within. Metcalf v. Davis, 6 P. R. 275.

Gray v. O'Neil, 7 L. J. 183.

Where a plaintiff obtains an order to amend his writ of summons, the defendant is entitled to notice of the amendment having been made, and probably to a copy of the amended proceedings, before he can be required to appear; and the plaintiff is not bound to amend, but may abandon his order. Campbell v. Pettit, 2 C. L. J. 211.

(b) Disclosing Plaintiff's Address.

Absconding Defendant. — The writ of summons in ejectment was served upon the defendant's wife after he had left the country. An order to sign judgment against the husband was granted in default of appearance. Trust and Loan Co. v. Jones, S. P. R. 65.

Foreign Corporations.] — The defendants were a foreign insurance company doing business in Ontario and having a head office for this Province at Toronto. The writ of summons was served on the local agent of the defendants' company at Ottawa: — Held, that the service was good. Wilson v. Ætna Life Ins. Co., S P. R. 131.

Foreigner — Temporary Residence.] — Where a summons in the form prescribed by s. 2 of the C. P. L. Act, issued against a foreigner resident out of the jurisdiction and described as so resident, was served upon him during a temporary visit to Ontario, a final judgment in default of appearnce, signed upon a special indorsement on such writ, was held regular. Snow v. Cole, 7 P. R. 162.

Service abroad—Cause of Action.]—Defendants, merchants in New York, telegraphed to the plaintiff, an attorney practising in Toronto, in answer to a telegram from him offering his services, to represent them in certain insolvency proceedings pending in the latter place. Plaintiff did so, and upon rendering his bill for services, which he did by letter, addressed to defendants at New York, defendants, by letter from New York, addressed to plaintiff at Toronto, refused payment:—Held, that the plaintiff could not recover, as both contract and breach arose out of the jurisdiction. O'Donohoe v. Wiley, 43 E. C. R. 350.

ment:—Held, that the plantiff could not recover, as both contract and breach arose out of the jurisdiction. O'Donohoe v. Wiley, 43 U. C. R. 350. Held, following Spittal v. Jackson, L. R. 5 C. P. 542, that the words "cause of action" (R. S. O. 1877 c. 20, s. 49) do not mean the whole cause of action—i.e., breach and contract, but breach alone. Ib.

— Foreigner.]—A copy of a writ of summons, instead of a notice thereof, had been served upon a defendant, not a British subject, outside of Ontario:—Held, that this was an irregularity which could not be amended, and that the copy and service of the writ should be set aside. Henderson v. Hall, 8 P. R. 353.

(e) Signing and Sealing.

Semble, that a writ of summons under 12 Vict. c. 63 was irregular if not sealed. Smith v. Russell, 1 C. L. Ch. 193.

A writ of summons marked in the margin as issued by "W. H. Ponter, D. C.," was held sufficiently signed. Ib.

A mandamus, under C. L. P. Act, s. 4, may be signed and issued by the clerk of the process. Burdett v. Sawyer, 2 P. R. 398.

The absence of the signature of the clerk of the process upon a writ regularly sealed and issued by the deputy clerk of the Crown, is an irregularity which may be amended under the A. J. Act. Labadie v. Darling, 7 P. R. 355.

Where a writ of summons, issued after the appointment of a new clerk of the process, was signed by his predecessor, and the name of the court was left blank in the copy served, an amendment was allowed, without costs. Stevenson v, Williams, 7 P. R. 35e.

(f) Special Indorsement.

Claims which may be Indorsed.]—
In actions on guarantees the writ of summons may be specially indorsed. Jones v. Greer, 3 L. J. 91.

Accounts delivered, but not liquidated by admission of defendant, do not come within the meaning of the C. L. P. Act of 1856, s. 41, as to claims which may be specially indersed. When such accounts have been specially indorsed and final judgment signed by defendant, a Judge will set aside the judgment without costs. McKinstry v. Arnold, 4 L. J. 68.

In an action on a merchant's account, where the special indorsement claimed interest:— Held, that defendants' non-appearance was an admission of the charge of interest. Standing v. Torrance, 4 L. J. 235.

A claim for interest on a demand for specific goods and chattels sold, indersed on a writ of summons, is good, and cannot be disputed after judgment signed in default of appearance; but if the claim for interest is adorsed to gain an improper advantage judgment be signed for more than a plaintiff in the control of the c

Semble, the indorsement for interest on a specially indorsed writ, is in general a matter of claim only. If it be correct, judgment goes rightly for it, without any inquiry, where the plantiff claims, and the defendant does not dispute, it. McKenzie v. Harris, 10 L. J. 213.

A. and B., having become sureties for C., the receiver in a suit in chancery, who was to account yearly, were sued for C.'s default. The writ was specially indorsed, and judgment was signed for £490 19s, 10d: — Held, that the claim was not such that a judgment upon a specially indorsed writ could be signed. Bucil v. Whitney, 11 C. P. 240.

A writ of summons may be specially indersed as for a balance due on a bill of exchange, even though some of the items forming part of the amount are unliquidated, there being a balance due on the bill itself. Bank of Montreal v. Harrison, 4 P. R. 331. See the next case.

An indorsement for the balance of an account, and for protest charges on an unaccepted draft:—Held, right as to the interest, but not as to protest charges. Sinclair v. Chisholm, 5 P. R. 270.

Effect of Indorsement—Particulars.]—
The particulars of claim upon a writ of summons specially indorsed to which the defendant appears do not bind the plaintiff as particulars under a declaration on the common counts, and in such a case, he must comply with a demand for particulars made by the defendant. Huggins v. Guelph Barrel Co., 8 P. R. 170.

Sufficiency of Indorsement.]—A special indorsement on the writ of summons that the plaintiff claims a stated sum as the amount of an account rendered, is not sufficient particulars of demand. Wilker v. Buf-jolo. Brantford, and Goderich R. W. Co., 2 L. J. 230.

A subsequent judgment creditor of defendant cannot attack a prior judgment for insufficiency of the special indorsement on the writton which it was obtained. But he may do so on the ground that it was allowed to be entered by fraud and to defeat his claim; for a judgment obtained on a writ specially indorsed is for this purpose to be looked upon in the same light as if founded upon a confession. Witson v. Wilson, 2 P. R. 374.

An indorsement on a writ of summons as follows: "1861, December 31st. To balance of account due and owing by the within-named defendants at this date for work and labour done and performed by the plaintiff for the defendants, and at their request, and for moneys paid by the plaintiff for the defendants at their like request, $5,590.47," with the usual claim for interest from that date—was held a sufficient indorsement to entitle the plaintiff to sign judgment on default of appearance; and judgment was set aside only on payment of all costs, and giving security for the debt. Smart v. Niapara and Detroit literas k. W. Co., 12 C. P. 404.

20 The plaintiff claims $1,300 for debt, and $20 for costs, and if the amount thereof be paid to the plaintiffs or their attorney within claim to the plaintiffs or their attorney within claim the proceedings will be stayed. The following are the particulars of the plaintiffs' claim: 1985, June 190th. Balance of accounts due from defendant to plaintiff for goods sold and delivered and money advanced and lent, the items whereof exceeding in all five follos, $1, 120.21. The plaintiffs also claimed interest, &c.:—Held. suificient, on the authority of Hodsali V. Baxter, I. E. & E. S&J. and Fromatt V. Ashley, I. E. & B. 723. McDonald V. Bartion, 2 C. L., J. 190.

The special indorsement set out in this case was—"To amount of machines $500," with several specified credits for cash received:—Held, sufficient. Northern R. W. Co. v. Lister, 4 P. R. 120.

If the writ is specially indorsed for interest, the notice required by C. L. P. Act, s. 15, may claim such interest without shewing the date from which it is to be calculated. Worthington v. Boulton, 6 P. R. 68.

XIII. RULES.

1. Amendment of.

See Ball v. McKenzie, T. T. 7 Vict., R. & J. Dig. 94; Ball v. Mackenzie, 1 U. C. R. 412; Hibbert v. Johnston, 1 U. C. R. 403; Grant v. Taylor, 2 U. C. R. 407; Hunter v. Thurtell, 4 U. C. 2. Costs.

Rule to set aside a writ and the arrest for irregularity, and to discharge defendant out of custody, or to deliver up the bail bond to be cancelled, as the case might be, was made absolute with costs, although more was asked than could be granted, the defendant not being in custody and having given no bond. Armstrong v. Scobell, 3 O. S. 303.

Where each party failed on a material part of the rule, no costs were allowed. Sullivan v. King, 24 U. C. R. 161.

Where an application is not fully met, although sufficient be shewn for the discharge of the rule, costs will be refused. Harvey v. Kay, E. T. 2 Vict.

Where, on a motion as to a matter of practice, the affidavits are contradictory as to the facts, the rule will be made absolute or discharged without costs. Orr v. Stabbuck, T. T. 3 & 4 Vict.

If a rule be discharged on a preliminary objection, such as an error in the intituling of period, such as an error in the infitting of an affidavit, &c., costs will not be allowed; but otherwise if the objection be to the suffi-ciency of the materials on which the rule is moved. Hughes v. Hamilton, 2 U. C. R. 172. See Teller v. Wilson, 1 U. C. R. 417.

On the 1st March an order was made setting aside a judgment on payment of costs within a week. On the 8th the costs were tendered, and through error refused. On the same day the defendant, treating the judgment as set aside, filed and served his pleas, to-gether with a demand for replication. Plaintiffs afterwards demanded the costs, and on non-payment issued execution:—Held, (1) that the tender of costs was in sufficient time; (2) that the tender was a compliance with the order setting aside the judgment on terms; (3) that the effect of the order, followed by the tender, was to set aside the judgment and execution, so as to make the filing and service of the pleas regular; (4) that where the conduct of the defendant's attorney was vexa-tious, this was a ground for refusing costs of the application. Plaintiffs afterwards to avoid judgment of non pros., took issue on the pleas, and then executed a power of attorney authorizing a party to demand payment of the costs, payment of which was refused on the ground that the power of attorney was not countersigned by the president of the company:— Held. (1) that the duty to pay the costs continued, notwithstanding the refusal to receive them when tendered; (2) that the filing of the replication was not, under the circumstances, a waiver of plaintiffs' right to costs: (3) that the plaintiffs were entitled to a substantive order directing the payment of the costs, and the costs of the application. Quere, as to the plaintiffs' right, under the circumstances, to costs as between attorney and client, to be paid by the attorney for the defendant, as a punishment for his vexatious conduct. Gore District Mutual Fire Ins. Co. v. Webster, 10 L. J. 190.

Where, on a question of damages, plaintiff claimed a certain amount of damages, and in addition a certain other amount of costs as part of his damages, but the Judge ruled against him as to both, reserving leave as to the damages, but not as to the costs; and the court made absolute the rule to increase the verdict as to the damages, and, unless defendant consented to add the costs, ordered a new trial without costs, and defendant consented to the addition of the costs—it was held that the plaintiff was entitled to the costs of the rule. Stuart v. Mathicson, 10 L. J. 245.

The point in this case being new, the court discharged without costs a rule nisi obtained to quash a conviction. Regina v. Morris, 21 U. C. R. 392. See also Armstrong v. Stewart, 28 C. P. 45.

Where a rule nisi to quash a conviction after return of a certiforari was not intituled in a cause, it was discharged, but, being on a technical objection, without costs. Regina v. Mortson, 27 U. C. R. 132.

XIV. SECOND APPLICATION.

Adjudicated Cause.] — The court fully recognizes the English rule of H. T. 3 Jac. I., which orders that no cause once argued and determined, shall again be brought before the court. Boulton v. Randall, Tay, 127.

Application not Disposed of.]—Where a from practice court to a day after term in chambers, to afford an opportunity of correcting a defect in the service, and was not then disposed of, as the service could not be completed in time:—Held, that the defendant might apply again in the following term. Huff v. Cameron, 1 P. R. 255.

By Leave—Costs.]—Where the summons to show cause why a judgment should not be set aside, was discharged with costs, and leave granted to make a second application for the same purpose, the second summons was made absolute only on the terms of paying costs of the judgment and of both applications, Watts v. Little, Watts v. Loney, b L. J. 233.

Change in Forum.]—Semble, that where an application, cognizable in chambers, has been made to the court and discharged, but not on the merits, it may be afterwards renewed in chambers. Crooks v. Dickson, 15 C. P. 528.

Discovery of New Fact—Costs.]—A second application for the same cause will not in general be entertained in chambers, unless it be sworn that some new fact has, since the former application, been discovered, and which if known to the Judge who disposed of the former application would probably have changed his opinion. Where the second application was entertained upon the supposition that the new fact was of sufficient importance to after the aspect of the case, and, after argument, if did not appear to have any such effect, the application was refused with costs. Prent v. Jones, 10 L. J. 271.

Insufficiency of First Summons—Costs.]—Where defendants called upon plaintiff to show cause why defendants should not have leave to plead several pleas, and one of them was uncertain, as to it the leave was refused, and leave to amend it by severing it and making two good pleas was also refused, because the summons was merely to shew cause why the plea, as it was originally proposed to be pleaded, should not be pleaded. Defendants obtained a second summons, calling upon plaintiff to shew cause why the pleas should not be pleaded in the amended form, and that summons was made absolute; and as what was asked in the second application should have less made part of the first, the second summons was made absolute only on payment of costs. Wingall v. Enniskillen Oil Co., 10 Ld, 216, Irregularity of First Summons.]—A summon shaving been obtained for the trial of a cantested election, the relator, finding his traceclings irregular, notified defendant not to appear, and that if was his intention to proceed de nove:—Held, the objection urged against the election being a material one, that the relator was not precluded from a second amplication. Regina ex rel. Metcalf v. Smart, 10 U. C. R. S0.

Previous Application not Disposed of -Abandonment.]-Defendants obtained a rule nisi in practice court to set aside a judgment nisi in practice court to set aside a judgment in ejectment and hab, fac, poss, issued there-on, which was enlarged into chambers and then into the full court, the enlargements be-ing obtained to enable defendants to file affi-davits shewing the relief given them by the court of chamcery against said judgment, on a court of chancery against said judgment, of a contemplated application there. These affida-vits, it was agreed by plaintiff's counsel, might be used to support the rule already issued, though necessarily sworn subsequent to it; but, notwithstanding this, he afterwards inout, notwinstanding this, he afterwards in-sisted to defendants' counsel that the affidavits could not, either by the practice or under the agreement, be used by the defendants. De-fendants thereupon moved a new rule in similar terms to the other, in order that the affidavits referred to might come before the court, stating at the same time all the facts connected with the case, and the reasons for making the second application:—Held, on motion to set aside this rule as vexatious, that it did not in its facts come within the cases in which a second application was held to be wrong, as neither the court nor any Judge had disposed of the defendants' application up to the time of moving the second rule, and the facts of the case had all been mentioned on the motion for the same. Held, also, that the statement the same. Held, also, that the statement made by defendants' counsel, on moving the second rule, as to the course he was taking second rule, as to the course he was taking and his reasons for taking it, in effect amount-ed to an abandonment of the original rule. Semble, that the special application to set aside the rule was unnecessary, as the objection taken could have been urged on shewing cause to it. Quare, whether the affidavits in question could, under the agreement referred to, have been read in support of the original rule. Heyland v. Scott, 18 C. P. 52.

Previous Order — Abundonment — Grounds, 1—On an application to set aside a judgment of non pres;—Held, that even if the judgment were void, and the plaintiff not concluded by his laches, his once obtaining an order to set aside the judgment, which order he virtually abandoned, precluded him from again applying: and semble, that parties should not be harassed with repeated applications on the same grounds; and if on different grounds known at the time of the first application, such grounds cannot be urged in a subsequent application. Herr v. Douglas, 4 P. R. 102.

Rescission of Discharge of Previous Rule.]—A demurrer was set down by the plaintiff before the opening of the court on the first day of Michaelmas term for argument on the second paper day, and afterwards, about twelve o'clock on the same day, it was set down by the defendant for argument on the first paper day. During the same term, in practice court, a rule to strike out the demurrer entered by defendant was discharged, on the ground that the plaintiff's entry was improperly made before the court had met. The court however, heard the cause on the day for which it had been entered by the plaintiff, holding that he had a right to set it down before the opening of the court. A motion in practice court in Easter term following to rescind the discharge of the previous application there, was refused as being contrary to established practice, but without costs, as the Judge who made the first order wished it to be moved against, and, if possible, rescinded. Moody v. Dougall, 3 P. R. 145.

XV. SERVICE OF PAPERS.

(See also ante XI.)

1. Acceptance, Admission, or Agreement.

Acceptance.]—Notice of assessment was sent to the sherilf for service, and was returned by him to the plaintiff's attorney with the following indorsement: "Received a continuous file of the within, for defendant," and the plaintiff is the about of accepting service for defendant has for accepting service for defendant as soon as he should see him, and that the indorsement was intended not as an acceptance of service, but as shewing a willingness to hand the notice to the defendant. There was no denial that E. & G. were in the labit of accepting service for defendant, nor any assertion that G. told the bailiff what he intended by the receipt indorsed: — Held, a sufficient service. Rutledge v. Thompson, 1

A defendant accepted service of notice of action, adding, "and agree to accept the same as a sufficient notice of action to me under the statute:"—Held, that he could not rely on a defect therein. Donaldson v. Haley, 13 C. P. 87.

Admission.] — A defendant, after admitting service of an attorney's bill, cannot question the genuineness of the signature of the attorney on the copy he received. Berry v. Andruss. 30, S. 645.

tion the genumeness of the signature of the attorney on the copy he received. Berry v. Andruss, 3 O. S. 645.

An admission of service indersed on the copy of the bill of costs sued for by the defendant's attorney for the purposes of trial, must be taken to admit an effectual service. Ib.

Agreement between Attorneys.] — Where it was agreed between the attorneys of the parties to a cause (the one resident in Whitby and the other in Collingwood), that papers should be served by mail:—Held, that the time of the service of notice of trial commenced to count from the time it was mailed by plaintiff's attorney, and not from the time of its receipt by defendant's attorney. Semble, where such a mode of service is agreed upon, the paper mailed, in the event of loss or miscarriage, is entirely at the risk of the attorney to whom sent. Robson v. Arbuthnot, 3 P. R. 313.

Plaintiff's and defendant's attorneys had an arrangement between themselves by which papers in the suit should be sent by mail. The notice of trial was posted the day before the last for giving notice, but reached defendant's attorney one day too late. It was shewn that the practice of both attorneys had been to admit service as of the day of receipt:—Held, that the notice of trial must be set aside. Robson v, Arbuthnot, 3 P. R. 313, distinguished. Methonough v. Alison, 9 P. R. 4.

2. Person Served.

Agent of Attorney.]—The service of a summons to compute on the agent of the defendant, an attorney, is sufficient. Spragge v. McMartin, T. T. 1 & 2 Vict.

Semble, that service upon the agent of an attorney, who is himself the defendant in the action, and not representing another, is good. Bank of Upper Canada v. Robinson, 7 U. C. R. 478.

Delivery of a copy of the rule nisi to discharge a clerk from his articles, the attorney having absconded, to the town agent of the attorney, and leaving copies at his last place of residence and at his office:—Held, sufficient service. Re McGregor, 15 C. P. 54.

A summons cannot be taken out by an agent for one attorney and served on himself as agent for another attorney. Ontario Bank v. Fisher, 4 P. R. 22.

Attorney—No Retainer.]—Defendant was arrested and gave bail, who to relieve themselves put in special bail. The attorney for the bail gave notice, and signed himself "defendant's attorney," and all the subsequent papers in the cause were served on him. Judgment was obtained, and defendant arrested on ca. sa., when it was shewn that defendant had never employed the attorney. The court set aside the whole proceedings.

McMartin v. McKinnon, 5 O. S. 72.

Service away from Home.]—It is not irregular, under C. L. P. Act, s. 61, to serve a declaration in Toronto on a country attorney; and ten days' notice to plead is not necessary under such circumstances. City Bank v. McKay, 6 P. R. 298.

Wife of Party — Personal Service Necessary—Party Abroad.]—Where an order for payment of costs is sought which may, under C. S. U. C. c. 24, s. 19, be followed by execution, the service of the summons must, in general, be personal. The court may, under special circumstances, dispense with personal service. Where defendant is abroad, or it is known where he lives, personal service will not be dispensed with; perhaps not even if it be made to appear that defendant is kepping out of the way to evade service. Service on the attorney on the record, and on defendant was keeping out of the way to avoid service, was held insufficient, though it was shewn that he had left Upper Ganada and gone to reside in the United States, Reyina v. Simpson, 3 P. R. 339.

Attorney-General.] — In an action defended by the Crown, notice of trial was served on the attorney-general, who had previously been raised to the bench:—Held, that such notice was a nullity. Doe d, McMillan v. Duane, 5 O. S. 676.

Clerk of Attorney.] — Papers are not regularly served by being delivered to the clerk of the attorney at a distance from the attorney's residence, when the clerk is casually at the place of service. Tiffany v. Bullen, 5 O. S. 137.

Defendant Personally—Appearance by Attorney.]—Where the defendant had appeared by attorney, and the plaintiff after declaration signed interlocutory judgment and served notice of assessment of damages on the defendant himself, and assessed damages upon that notice—the court held the assessment irregular, and that it was not necessary that any notice should be given to the plaintiff of the defendant's intention of moving to set aside the proceedings for such irregularity.

Bishop v. Lindsuy, 6 O. S. 264.
See, also, Ferrie v. Tannahill, Dra. 327.

Fartner of Attorney.]—Where an attorney, residing and practising in the county where the action was brought, after appearing there for defendant, formed a partnership with another attorney carrying on business there, and than changed his actual residence to another county, leaving his name in the proper books in Toronto as still of the former county, and occasionally afterwards attended and did business in the former county, service of notice of trial on his partner there was held to be good service, notwithstanding a private arrangement that the partner should only attend to new business. Baby v. Langlon, 1 C. L. J. 200.

Servant of Attorney.]—Notice of trial for 3rd April, and issue book, were handed to a servant of defendants attorney on the even-ing of 26th March. The next day they were given by her to her master:—Held, that their service only dated from the 27th and was therefore set aside as irregular. Quiere, as to the proper mode of taking the objection. Hogy v. Turner, Wright v. Perkie, 2 C. L. J. 2017.

 Place of Service—Where not Personal or on Attorney.

(See con, rule (1897) 329 et seg.)

Attorney's Private House.]—Held, that service of a notice of trial on a servant girl, at the private house of an attorney, is good, and that the service counts from the time the papers are left, and not from the time they come into possession of the attorney. Murray v. Great Western R. W. Co., 6 P. R. 211.

Attorney's Vacant Office.]—It is not a sufficient service of notice of trial to leave it at the attorney's office, no person being there. Brewer v. Bacon, 5 O. S. 343.

Leaving a notice of trial at an attorney's office is not a service, unless it is sworn to have been given to some person there. Connumers' Gas Co. v. Kissock, 5 U. C. R. 542.

Held, that the service of a notice of trial by putting the paper under the door of the attorney's office, the attorney swearing that he was absent from home at the time, and did not return till the day of the assizes, when he first lead of such service, was irregular; and that the verdict must be set aside, but without costs, as the attorney should not have absented himself on the eve of the assizes. Grand River Navigation Co. v. Wilkes, 8 U. C. R. 249.

A notice of trial was put under the door of the diffee of the defendants' attorney (the door being looked) about half past five on the last any of service. It did not come into hands of the defendants' attorney until the next moduling:—Held, that the service did not come until the latter period. McCallum v. Provincial Ins. Co., 6 P. R. 101.

A clerk, on the last day of notice of trial, while on his way to serve it, met the defendant's attorney's partner, who told him to go to the office and serve it there. When he arrived no one was in; he put it under the door, and it was not received until next day. The Christian name of defendant was wrong in the style of cause:—Held, that the manner of service was good, on the ground that the partner of the attorney refused to receive the papers, but that the style of cause being wrong, the notice must be set aside. Carnegie v. Rutherford, 6 P. R. 102.

Defendant's Place of Abode.]—The affidurt of service of a rule nist to compute, must shew (if a personal service be not effected), that the copy was served at the defendant's place of abode on some grown up person connected with his household. Mittleberger v. Whitchead, M. T. I Viet.

Defendant's Outside Premises.]—The serving a notice of assessment, by taking it to defendant's house and throwing it over his fence into his yard door, telling his son who was present that it was a notice of assessment for his father, is an insufficient service, where the son refused to have anything to do with it, and where the father, who was absent from home, knew nothing of it till after the assizes. McGuin v. Benjamin, 1 C. L. Ch. 142.

Defendant's Last Place of Residence.]
—An affidavit of service on a grown up person, naming her, at defendant's last place of residence, without shewing that she was in any way connected with defendant, or resident on the premises:—Held, insufficient. Carlisle v. Orde, 7 C. C. P. 456.

Defendant's House—Nailing on Door,]—It is not essential to the due service of the notice made necessary by s. 1 of 20 Vict. c. 23, that it should be made in the manner prescribed by that Act. Where, therefore, the sitting member removed himself and his family so as to avoid a personal service, and continued absent or concealed for the fourteen days allowed by the statute for personal service or service at his residence upon a grown up person of his family, service by nailing a copy of the notice on the door of his house, and by leaving a copy with his brother, who was also his agent, was held sufficient. In re Essex Election, 4 L. J. 70.

4. Posting in Crown Office.

District.]—A copy of a notice can only be affixed in the office of the deputy clerk of the Crown in the district in which the action is brought. Chase v. Gilmour, 6 U. C. R. 604.

Personal Service of Declaration—Subsequent Proceedings, Posted, 1—befondant in a county court suit appeared in person, but gave no address for the service of papers, as required by ss, 52 and 53 of the C. P. L. Act, and C. C. rule of court No. 131. The declaration was served on him personally and pleas filed. The person who served the pleas for him refused to receive the issue book, notice of trial, &c., and they were stuck up at the office of the clerk of the court. The plaintiff took a verdict on the 20th April, defendant not appearing, and defendant was informed of it on the 27th. No steps were taken by him to stay proceedings, and final judgment was entered on the 5th May. Defendant in Easter term following moved for a new trial:—Held, that the plaintiff's proceeding was warranted by the rule of court, notwithstanding the declaration had been personally served. Semble, that if it were irregular, the defendant, on being aware of the verdict, should have moved to stay the plaintiff's proceedings, and that at all events he should have done so if he wished to move upon the merits. O'Neill v. Everett, 3 P. R. 98, distinguished. Cornet v. Robertson, J. H. C. R. 256.

5. Time of Service.

Computation.1—Held, that the "two clear additional days to the time now allowed by law" for service on the agent of a country attorney, under 34 Vict. c. 12, s. 12, (O.), means the insertion of two days between the day of service and the day of the happening of the event to which the notice relates. A service of notice of trial on the Toronto agent of a country attorney on Saturday for Monday week would be sufficient. Nordheimer v. Shure, 6 P. R. 14.

Holiday.]—Service of a notice on Good Friday is good. Clarke v. Fuller, 2 U. C. R.

Short Service, |—Service of a summons on a Saturday after three o'clock p.m., returnable on Monday following, is not good service, being in effect service of a summons on the day on which it is returnable, which is unreasonable. Ball v. Crowdley, 3 L. J. 131.

Held, that service on the defendant's atterney at his house at 9.30 p.m. on Saturday of an order and appointment to examine the defendant at 2 p.m. on the following Tuesday, was irregular, the notice not being sufficient. Held, also, that rule of court 135 applies to the service of orders and appointments to examine, and that this service must be treated as if made on the following Monday. Sean v. Heevitt, 8 P. R. 70.

6. Other Cases,

Affidavit of Service.]—Affidavit of service of rule for attachment and allocatur for costs is good, though it state the service as made on the day of a certain month, instant, without stating the year. Regina v. Tomb, 4 U. C. R. 177.

Fact of Service—Conflicting Affidavits.]

—A rule nist to set aside interlocutory judgment, &c., was granted on defendant's affidavit, stating that he had been served with no papers since the writ of summons, nor had any come to his knowledge, or been left for him at his house or place of business. This was met by affidavits swearing positively to service of declaration and notice of assessment, but not shewing how the service was made:—Held, sufficient, and that the rule must be discharged with costs. Harper v. Branton, 1-P. R. 267.

Original Served.] — An order may be made on a verified copy of a Judge's summons, where the original is served by mistake. Tift v. Wallace, M. T. 2 Vict.

True Copy.]—In general there must be a true copy of a summons served; at least there must be nothing calculated to mislead in the copy served. Woolley v. Twedle, 3 L. J. 185. XVI. SETTING ASIDE PROCEEDINGS FOR IRREGULARITY.

1. Applications to Set aside.

Evidence on Applications.] — Where proceedings are objected to as defective in form, copies must be produced in support of the application. Smart v. Demerca, 3 O. 8, 440.

Where a defendant moved to set aside an alias writ for want of an original to warrant it, and in his affidavit did not shew that no original writ had issued, his rule was discharged with costs. Hughes v. Hamilton, 2 U. C. R. 178.

In an application of strict technical right to set aside proceedings for irregularity, the court will not conjecture circumstances in favour of the applicant, who should support his case by the best and fullest evidence, and not, as in this case, with defective materials. Leslie v. Folcy, 4 P. R. 246.

In such an application it will not be assumed by the court that the affidavit made by "the agent" of the person, is the professional Toronto agent of such person, and that such person is a practising attorney. Ib.

When an application is made to set aside or amend a writ or other proceeding, by reason of anything contained therein or omitted therefrom, such writ or other proceeding, or a copy of it, must be brought before the court; but if the application be to set it aside because obtained irregularly, then it is sufficient to shew the facts upon afflavit. Attorney-General v, McLachlin, 5 P. R. 63.

Intituling of Papers.] — Where in a cause the parties' names had been stated in different ways by the attorneys on both sides in the affidavits and proceedings, the court discharged a rule for setting aside the proceedings which was not intituled in the true style of the cause. Grant v. Taylor, 2 U. C. R. 407.

Where defendant moved to set aside a ca. sa, for a variance between the writ and the judgment, by the insertion of the initial letter of a Christian name of the defendant in the writ which was not in the judgment, and used affidavits in the title of which the initial letter was also inserted:—Held, that they could not be read, and as without them the writ did not appear to have issued in the cause, the rule was discharged. Williamson v. McDonell, T. T. 7 Vict.

Notice of Motion. |—The notice of motion to set aside a writ of trial under S Vict. c. 13, s. 54, must specify the day on which the party will apply. Bank of Montreal v. Denison, 3 U. C. R. 136.

Pointing out Irregularity—Necessity for.]—Where a notice is required to be given of any irregularity, and the notice does not describe what the irregularity is, if the proceedings be set aside, costs will not be allowed. Henderson v. Jones, H. T. 3 Vict.

Any irregularity complained of must be specifically pointed out in the rule, or so clearly referred to as contained in the affidavits filed as not to be mistaken, otherwise the rule will be discharged. Thompson v. Zwick, 1 U.

C. R. 338; Hamilton v. Howcutt, Hibbert v. Johnson, 1 U. C. R. 403; Gordon v. Carrick, 2 U. C. R. 379.

Where a defendant moved to set aside the service of a writ of ca. re., and it appeared that the process served was a testatum and not an original writ, the rule was discharged with costs. Tool v. Lonc, 2 U. C. R, 95.

Where a rule nisi is moved to set aside the service of process on grounds disclosed in affidavits filed, and the irregularity complained of is in the copy of process annexed to the affidavits, and does not appear in the affidavits alone, the rule should be discharged. Bates v. McMahon, 2 U. C. R. 178; Lyster v. Boulton, 5 U. C. R. 632.

Where the rule was moved for improperly allowing the amendment of the venire, and it appeared it was the jurata and not the venire that was amended, the rule was discharged. Jarvis v. Thompson, 2 U. C. R. 271.

A rule nisi to set aside a verdict because notice of trial was served too late was discharged, because it was not stated in the rule that any affidavits were filed. McKay v. McDiannid, J. P. R. 58.

The court discharged with costs a rule nisi to amend a Judge's order, because the pleadings, on which the rule purported to have been moved, were not in fact before the court, nor were they disclosed by the affidavits filed, and it was impossible rightly to decide the case without reference to them. Crooks v. Dickson, 15 C. P. 528.

It is not a sufficient compliance with the rule requiring irregularities intended to be moved against to be shewn in the summons, that it can be collected from the affidavits filed and referred to in the summons what the irregularities are. Smith v. Smith, 4 P. R. 354.

Where the irregularity pointed at in the summons was, that an alias writ against lands had issued without a suggestion or revival of judgment, or an order for the issue of the execution, or other pre-requisites of the C. L. P. Act, and the irregularity pointed at in the affidavit was the issue of an alias writ without the return of the original:—Held, that the summons did not sufficiently joint out the irregularity. B.

See Arnold v. Fish, 5 O. S. 140; Matthie v. Lowis, T. T. 5 & 6 Vict., R. & J. Dig. 2874.

Regularity.]—A party moving to set aside the proceedings of another for irregularity must be strictly regular in his own. Hunter v. Thurteli, 4 U. C. R. 170.

Status of Applicant — Contempt.]— Quere, as to the right of a defendant in contempt for non-appearance to a subpena isment in an information of intrusion, but not used in an information of intrusion, but not used in a non-appearance of the concept of the contempt of the contemp discretal v. McLachlin, 5 P. R. 63,

2. Waiver of Irregularities.

[Sec R. G. Prac. T. T. 1856, No. 106; con. rule (1897) 311.]

By Admission in Affidavit.]—The affidavits for an attachment against an absconding debtor must state that defendant is a resident of the Province, and possessed of property. Quere, whether the fact of a defendant stating in an affidavit used as an application to set aside the writ, that he was a resident and possessed of property, cured the defect. Hart v. Rutton, 23 C. P. 613.

By Appearance,]—A summons in the nature of a quo warranto not tested on the day it is issued, is irregular; but entering an appearance waives the irregularity. Regina ex rel. Linton v. Jackson, 2 C. L. Ch. 18.

A rule nisi to quash a by-law, obtained near the end of term, was made returnable eight days after service. Defendants appeared, and objected that the rule should have been to shew cause on a day certain:—Held, that this objection, if fatal, was waived by the appearance. Perry v. Town of Whitby, 13 U. C. R. 564.

Where in an application to set aside proceedings (as in the case of an action against a justice of the peace for acts done under a conviction which had not been quashed) the facts relied upon would be a pleadable bar to the action, laches will not be imputed to defendant because he does not apply before entering an appearance, though it might if he waited until after the expiration of the time for pleading had expired. Donelly v. Tegart, 5 P. R. 225.

A summons to set aside a declaration (the venue being laid in the proper county), on the ground that the writ issued in a local action in the wrong county, was discharged, the defendant having duly appeared to the writ. Warcup v. Great Western R. W. Co., 6 P. R. 250.

By Appearance at Trial. —A defendant, having appeared and examined witnesses on an assessment of damages carried down to a district court by writ of trial from the Queen's bench, under 8 Vict, c. 13, s. 54, waived any irregularity in the prior proceedings in the Queen's bench. Small v. Beasley, 3 U. C. R. 141.

Where the defendant is represented at the trial and has made his defence, the court will not set aside the proceedings on the ground that no notice of the execution of the writ of inquiry had been given to him. Farrish v. Shidds, 7 U. C. R. 525.

By Appearance on Motion.]—An attaching order had been served by leaving a copy at the store and residence of the garnishee. Service of a summons to pay over was accepted for him by a practising attorney, and this summons, with such acceptance indorsed, was afterwards served in the same way as the order. On the return of it another attorney appeared for the garnishee, and objected that the acceptance was given without authority, and that the service was insufficient:—Held, that personal service of the summons and order was not indispensable, but that the service in this case, if moved against would have been insufficient, as it was not shewn that personal service could not have been effected, or that the papers had come to the knowledge of the garnishee, Ward v. Vance, 3 P. R. 130.

Held, also, that in this case, no such application having been made, the acceptance should be held sufficient, and that any defect in the service of the attaching order was thus cured. Ib.

Held, that the appearance of the garnishee by another attorney duly authorized, was a waiver of any objection to the service of the summons to pay over. Ib.

By Arguing Demurrer. |—A plaintiff, apprehensive that he may have signed interlectionly judgment too soon, cannot cure his irregularity, by filing and serving a replication and notice of trial conditionally, to take effect in case the judgment should be set aside. Semble, however, that the defendant, by arguing the conditional replication on a demurrer, may waive its irregularity. McPherson v. Dickson, 5 U. C. R. 478.

By Bail.]—The defendant does not, by putting in special bail, waive objections not of a technical nature. McGuffin v. Cline, 4 P. R. 134.

Defendant putting in bail after application made to set aside an arrest for irregularity, waives the application. Racey v. Carman, 3 L. J. 204.

By Delay.]—Irregularity in signing interlocutory judgment held cured by defendant's laches. Brown v. Rose, 1 C. L. Ch. 182.

An application made after six years, to set aside proceedings as contrary to good faith, was refused. Gore Bank v. Gunn, 1 P. R. 323.

Where an appearance is entered in due time, and judgment for want of appearance is signed, and defendant is guilty of laches, and files an affidavit of merits, the judgment will not be set aside. Bank of Upper Canada v. Van Voorish, 4 L. J. 232.

The plaintiff's attorney having conducted his proceedings with little care, the defendant's rule to set his irregular proceedings aside, though moved too late, was discharged without costs. Harrington v. Fall, 15 C. P. 541.

Held, that an application on the part of an attorney, resident in the country, to set aside a notice of trial served on his Toronto agent as irregular, and made within eight days after such service, is not too late. Anderson v. Culver, 10 L. J. 159.

Held, that a defendant complaining of an insufficient service of notice of trial in a cause pending in a superior court, but sent to a county court for trial under 23 Viet, c. 42, s. 4, n.y. without walving the irregularity, apply within four days after the trial to the county Judge for a stay of proceedings till the fifth day of the following term of the superior court of law, 2. That he may, within the like period, make a similar application to a Judge of one of the superior courts of law sitting in chambers. Quare, if he delay for seven days after the verticet without making an application of any kind, has be not thereby waived the irregularity? Proceedings on the execution were stayed till the fifth day of the term to enable the defendant to take the opinion of the full court on the latter point. Fisher v. Green, 2 C. L. J. 14.

When in a notice to proceed one of the plaintiffs named was omitted:—Held, notwithstanding Doe d. Read v. Patterson, 1 P. R. 45, not a nullity but merely an irregularity, and that such irregularity had been waived by the defendant's laches, he having taken no objection until over a year afterwards. Kirkpatrick v. Harper, 13 C. L. J. 325.

A notice of trial in a suit against two defendants, with the name of only one defendant therein, is a nullity, and the rule to set aside the nonsuit for not confessing lease, entry, and ouster must be absolute. Doe d. Read v. Paterson, 1 P. R. 45.

Held, that a defendant has eight days to move to set aside a declaration for irregularity, Hall v. Grand Trunk R. W. Co., 7 P. R. 335.

Defendant precluded both by delay and acceptance of service of the writ from moving to set aside proceedings. Regina v. Stewart, 8 P. R. 297.

By Enlargement.]—Preliminary or formal objections to affidavits filed on an application for a writ of trial, which has been enlarged until the last day for obtaining such writ, should not in general be allowed to prevail after such enlargement. Taylor v. Mc-Neil, 3 L. J. 131.

By Moving for Leave to Defend.]—Where the judgment in ejectment is irregular, and the landlord when first applying to a Judge in chambers to be admitted to defend as landlord, takes no notice of the irregularity, it is waived. Doe d. Henderson v. Roc. 4 U. C. R. 366.

By Moving for Time to Plead.]—The plaintiff entered common bail for defendant, without having filed an affildavit of the service of process; declaration was served and plea demanded. Defendant moved for further time to plead and to change the venue:—Held, that the entry of common bail was an irregularity only, which the defendant had waived. Bridges V. Case, 4 U. C. R. 127.

By not Excepting to Previous Irregularities.]—If a defendant lie by and allow plaintiff to take several steps, he thereby waives previous irregularities in the proceedings. He should take the earliest opportunity of excepting to them; and if he move a Judge in chambers, he must state all the irregularities he relies on, and cannot afterwards in term resort to other irregularities which existed at the time of the application to the Judge, but were not then objected to. Arnold v. Fish. 5 O. S. 140.

Where the defendant appeared by attorney, but the plaintiff, having overlooked it, entered an appearance for him according to the statute, and served the declaration on the defendant personally:—Held, that, after judgment by default and notice of assessment served on the defendant, he was too late in applying to a Judge in chambers to set aside the proceedings. Ketchum v. Keefer, 6 O. S. 56.

Where defendant had been arrested and discharged from custody for non-payment of the weekly allowance without entering appearance, and the plaintiff entered an appearance for him, as if on serviceable process, and filed and served a declaration, and signed interlocutory judgment, the court considered the appearance entered by the plaintiff a nullity; but, as deentered by the plaintiff a nullity; but, as defendant did not move promptly against the next proceeding, the interlocutory judgment was set aside without costs, defendant having filed an affidavit of merits. Homer v. Brousseau, E. T. 4 Vict.

A defendant, after plea, obtained an order to stay proceedings until security was given for costs, and the plaintiff delivered him a bond for such security, and at the same time gave notice of trial, and defendant signed an agreement to admit documents at the trial, and of the same through the bond and save agreement to admit documents at the trial, but afterwards returned the bond, and gave notice that he would move to set aside plain-tiff's proceedings if he went to trial; the plaintiff, however, tried his cause:—Held, that defendant had waived any irregularity or insufficiency in the bond. Doe d. Leonard v. Myers, 2 U. C. R. 382.

Where an action against an absconding debror had been carried to judgment and execution against his lands, and he moved to set aside the execution for a variance between it and the judgment, and the plaintiff was allowed to amend:—Held, that he was afterwards too late to object to irregularities atterwards too late to object to irregularities in earlier proceedings, as he should have brought them forward on his first motion. Dougall v. Lewis, T. T. 5 & 6 Vict.

A motion to set aside proceedings under A motion to set aside proceedings under the writ of trial, when the irregularity is in the writ itself and not in the subsequent pro-ceedings, is bad. Bank of Montreal v. Deni-son, 3 U. C. R. 136.

Where the objection is to the service of the Where the objection is to the service of the writ of summons, an application to set aside the interlocutory judgment afterwards signed, is wrong; the first irregular proceeding must be moved against. But, as defendants had not appeared in consequence of the exception, the appeared in consequence of the exception, they were relieved on bringing into court the amount of the damages assessed, and paying costs. Cinquars v. Equitable Fire Ins. Co., 2 P. R. 207. See McDonnell v. Ketchum, 2 P. R. 326.

Where the service of the notice of trial is irregular, an application to set aside the verdict, not the notice of trial or the service, is correct. Grand River Navigation Co. v. Wilkes, S. U. C. R. 249.

On an application to set aside the service of a declaration, on the ground that no copy of a declaration, on the ground that no copy of the writ of summons had been served on defendant, the application must be to set as a constant of the declaration filed, for this is the first proceeding, and that being set aside the ser-vice fails with it. Quere, as to the delay in making the application. Patterson v. McCol-lum, 2 C. L. J. 70.

A party must object to irregular or defec-tive proceedings, by immediate application to have them amended at the expense of him whose proceedings they are; for if he allow a fresh step to be taken in the cause without doing so, he will have waited the irregulari-ties. Harrington v. Fall, 15 C. P. 541.

In the writ of summons and declaration the defendant was described as "Joseph Aloysius Donovan," and in the affidavits for a rule to attach for not answering questions on an examination and in the rule as "Joseph A. Donovan." But in the order for his examination, and the appointment made under it, he was also described as "Joseph A. Donovan," and it was admitted that he attended van, and it was admitted that he attended upon them and was examined, and stated that he was the defendant, the depositions being intituled in the same way:—Held, that the objection, which would otherwise have been fatal, had been waived. O'Donohoe v. Donovan, 41 U. C. R. 591.

See Covert v. Robertson, 31 U. C. R. 256.

By Notice of Trial.]—The plaintiff accepting a plea and giving notice of trial, cannot afterwards object that an appearance has not been entered for defendant. McLean v. McDonald, 3 U. C. R. 126.

By Offer to Arbitrate.]—The offer by defendant to refer the case to arbitration, cannot be considered as a waiver of an irregularity in the service of notice of trial. Grand River Navigation Co. v. Wilkes, S U. C. R. 249.

By Pleading.]—Where, pending a motion to set aside pleadings for irregularity, defend-ant pleaded, in consequence of which the plainant pleaded, in consequence of which the plant-tiff proceeded to trial, the court refused to set aside the verdict or orherwise to interfere, though no defence made, no actual merits being disclosed on affidavit. Simpson v. Matthison, Ward v. Ward, 3 O. S. 305.

By Previous Demand. —A notice to proceed to trial given by the defendant to the plaintiff under the statute, is a waiver of any objection to a notice of trial regularly given thereafter and pursuant thereto. Becket v. Durand, 6 L. J. 18.

3. Other Cases.

Costs-Submission to Motion.]-Where an irregular proceeding is moved against, and the irregular proceeding is moved against, and the irregular party then gives notice of the waiver of such proceeding, the party moving will have his rule made absolute, unless his costs were paid or tendered with the notice. Ketly v. Blecker, 2 U. C. R. 377.

Costs of Previous Application Unpaid.]—It is no ground for setting aside a new proceeding in a cause, that the costs of setting a previous irregular proceeding aside have not been paid as ordered. Regina v. Crooks, E. T. 3 Vict.

Nullity or Irregularity.]-Where there is a doubt as to whether a proceeding is irregular or a nullity, the defect is to be viewed as an irregularity merely. Herr v. Douglass, 4 P. R. 102.

To an action in covenant defendant pleaded never indebted:—Held, not a nullity, but merely an irregularity. Abell v. Glen, 6 P. R. 64.

Treating a pleading as a nullity does not prevent its afterwards being attacked as an irregularity. Ib.

Proceedings before Removal of Cause.]—Where proceedings in a court of inferior jurisdiction had been removed into the Queen's bench. a rule nisi to set aside the proceedings had in such court for irregularity was granted. English v. Everett, 1 U. C. R. 276.

Settlement of Action.]—Where, after process served, the parties settled, and the plaintiff agreed to pay his own costs, but, notwithstanding, the attorney went on, thinking that the defendant should pay the costs, the proceedings were set aside for irregularity. Parent v. McMahon, 4 O. S. 120.

Setting aside Nonsuit. 1-Two writs of replevin were sued out by the plaintiff against defendant, one in the Queen's bench, for lumber situate on the east side of the river Moira, the other in the common pleas, for lumber on the west side, and both records were entered for trial at the same assizes at Belleville. One cause was tried, the evidence given at the trial relating to the lumber on the east side of the river; but the verdict was recorded on the record in the common pleas. trial was moved for and obtained on that verdiet subsequently. An agreement was then en-tered into by which the subject matter in dispute in this action was settled. Plaintiff then gave another notice of trial, but found out his mistake and did not enter the record. De-fendant's attorney, however, made up a record and entered it, and when the cause was called on, defendant's counsel appearing, and no one being present for plaintiff, he was nonsuited. The court upon application set aside the nonsuit without costs, holding that the matters in dispute, having been settled by agreement, could not again be litigated without waiving or annulling that agreement. Canniff v. Bogert, 7 C. P. 81.

XVII. SPECIAL CASES.

Amendment—Further Evidence.]—When a case has, by consent of parties, been turned into a special case, and the Judge's minutes of the evidence taken at the trial agreed to be considered as part of the said special case, the court has no power to add anything thereto, except with the like consent, and has no power to order any further evidence to be taken. Smyth v. McDougdl, 1 S. C. R. 114.

Pleadings.]—The court should not be asked, upon a case stated without pleadings, to answer questions which could not be raised upon proper pleadings. Taylor v. Campbell, 33 U. C. R. 264.

Unnecessary Matter.]—Remarks upon the introduction of unnecessary matter in the special case. Bank of Montreal v. Munro, 23 U. C. R. 414.

What Constitutes a Special Case.]—
The plaintiff having commenced an action in the county court, at the trial a bill of exceptions was tendered, and it was then agreed that the pleadings and evidence should be stated as a special case for the Queen's bench, on which the court might order a verdict for plaintiff or defendants, or, at the election of the plaintiff, a nonsuit or new trial, the court to draw inferences as a jury. This was argued as a special case in the Queen's bench, and judgment given for the plaintiff, where upon the defendants brought error. copy of the judgment roll transmitted, immediately after the pleadings and venire the evidence was set out, and then a statement of the contention on either side, and a formal entry of judgment for the plaintiff. court of appeal refused to entertain the case, holding that if it was to be looked upon as an informal appeal from the county court to the Queen's bench, it was not a special case within ss. 150 or 157 of the C. L. P. Act, upon which error could be brought; that if it was to be treated as a cause in the Queen's bench, then the agreement of the parties to the special case and a Judge's order allowing it. should have appeared on the roll, the facts and not the evidence only should have been stated, and the agreement of the parties should have been absolute, not giving the plaintiff an option to take a nonsuit or new trial instead of being bound by the judgment. Holmes v. Grand Trunk R. W. Co., 29 U. C. R. 294.

XVIII. STAYING PROCEEDINGS.

Commencement of Stay.]—Proceedings are stayed from the time of making not serving the rule to stay proceedings. Patterson v. Attrill, 4 U. C. R. 395.

Costs of Application.]—Held, that the costs of a chambers application to stay proceedings until term in a superior court case tried at the county court under the Law Reform Act of 1868, are taxable under a rule for a new trial upon payment of costs, the county court Judge having refused to stay the proceedings. Merchants Bank v. Ross, 6 P. R. 215.

Ejectment—Repayment of Advance.]—Where A conveyed absolutely land to B., to secure morey lent by him to A., and B. gave and the convey lent by him to A. and B. gave and the loan on a certain of the loan on a certain of the loan of the Equitable Grounds.] — See Bates v. Mackey, 1 O. R. 34.

Insolvency of Plaintiff.]—Where the causes of action under two counts passed to the plaintiff's assignee in insolvency, but the third did not:—Held, that the action might be stayed on the third count till security for costs was given, leaving the action to proceed on the other counts. Smith v. Commercial Union Ins. Co., 33 U. C. R. 529.

Joint Action—Release by One Plaintiff— Remedy.]—After issue joined, one of two plaintiffs gave to the defendant a release under seal of all actions and demanâs. The defendant thereupon moved to stay all proceedings in the suit:—Held, that the defendant should plead the release, and that he was not emitted to a stay of proceedings, and the remaining plaintiff was allowed to strike out the name of the other plaintiff. McAlpine v. Carling, 8 P. R. 171.

Joint Liability—Release of One Defendaut—Remedy.]—The plaintiff sued H.. M., and S. as joint makers of a note; H. and M. did not appear, and judgment was signed by mistake against all, but afterwards set aside as against S., who pleaded:—Held, that if by inking judgment against two defendants not appearing, the plaintiffs, under C. L. P. Act, s. 06, had lost their remedy against S., that objection could not be taken at the trial, but the proper course was to move to stay proceedings. Kerr v. Hereford, 17 U. C. R. 158.

Leave to Amend.]—Held, that where in an order to join issue and denur, leave is granted to amend within a certain time, without any express stay of proceedings, such leave operates as a stay until the expiration of such time. Taylor v. Grand Trunk R. W. Co., 6 P. R. 170.

Return of Conviction before Action.]
—In an action brought against a justice of the peace for not returning a conviction:
—Quare, whether the court, if promptly applied to, would have stayed the proceedings, the action being brought after the defendant had returned the conviction. O'Reilly q, t, v, Man, 11 U. C. R. 411.

Rule Absolute—Payment of Costs.]—A rule was made in term, that, on payment of a certain sum and costs, further proceedings should be stayed on a verdict. The rule was served on the plaintiff's attorney during the second Friday in term, with an appointment to tax costs.—Held, that the rule did not stay proceedings till the money was paid or tendered, and that the plaintiff was not irregular in entering his judgment on the following day, being the last day of term. Forster v. Hodgson, 6 U. C. R. 16.

Rule Nisi.]—Where a rule nisi, with a straight proceedings, to set aside a verdict for irregularity, had been taken out and served, a notice of argument of demurrer, and the setting down the demurrer for argument, subsequently to the rule, was set aside with costs. Cup Hank v. Eccles, 5 U. C. R. 633.

Scope of Stay—Judge's Order—Attachment + Osts.]—A plaintiff, having taken out a rule for the payment of costs, &c., erron-consij intimled, gave defendant's attorney notice of a waiver of the rule, and proceedings inder this rule were stayed by a Judge's order notif the fourth day of next term. The plaintiff after that day issued the rule properly intuned, and, having obtained an order for an atachment, arranged with defendant's attention to allow certain costs to be set off such a tachment, arranged with defendant of the state of the costs for the non-payment of which the attachment was ordered, and that the atachment should only be proceeded with the talander. The defendant, on the 21st was of the cost of the attachment thereon issued, on the ground that the plaintiff's attorney had seed the rule properly intituded without authorised in the talander of the attachment thereon issued, on the ground that the plaintiff's attorney had seed the rule properly intituded without authorised by the Judge's order. Against the stay of the plaintiff's attorney served a search by the Judge's order. Against the plaintiff's attorney served a notice on defendant's attorney, abandoning the second rule and the attachment issued thereon:—Held, that the Judge's order only stayed proceedings upon the rule erroneously intituded, not in the cause; and that the arrangement made by defendant's attorney with the plaintiff's attorney as to setting off costs after the attachment had been ordered, precluded defendant from going back to object to proceedings antecedent to the granting of the attachment, and as, in addition to this, notice of abandonment of the attachment had been served before defendant's attorney took out this rule, that such rule should be discharged with costs. Murphy v. McGuire, 1 P. R. 33.

Summons.]—An interlocutory judgment signed in the country after the return of a Judge's summons in town, which operated as a stay of proceedings, but of which the attorney could not have been made aware, was set aside as irregular, but without costs, Carliale v, Niagara Harbour and Dock Co., M. T. 1 Vict.

A summons is no stay of proceedings, nulless so expressed, until returnable. Sovreen v. Rapelje, 1 C. L. Ch. 11.

A summons to dismiss an action for breach of an order to examine, generally implies a stay of proceedings; but where the Judge who granted the summons struck out the part relating to a stay, and the summons was afterwards enlarged without any nentrino of a stay, a notice of trial served while the summons was pending, was held to be regular. Merchants Bank v. Pierson, S. P. R. 120.

XIX. SUMMONSES AND ORDERS. (See also ante XIII.)

1. Enlarging.

Preliminary or formal objections to affidavits filed on an application for a writ of trial which has been enlarged until the last day for obtaining such writ, should not in general be allowed to prevail after such enlargement. Taylor v. McNetl, 3. L. J. 131.

Irregularities in technical applications, where there are no merits, cannot in general be remedied. An enlargement of a summons will not be granted for the purpose of remedying them. Woolley v. Tweedle, 3 L. J. 185.

In ejectment, defendant, on 15th September, obtained an order for the landlord to appear and defend, inadvertently containing a stay of proceedings. On the 29th September defendant wrote for delay, and promised that plaintiff should not be affected thereby; on the 6th October he wrote to say he would require to put in a double defence, and probably apply to put off the trial; on the 7th October he obtained a summons for that purpose, which was served in Toronto and enlarged till the 10th October, "without a stay of proceedings," and was on the 11th October, the commission day of the assizes, again enlarged till the 15th October, and subsequently abandoned:—Held, that it was the same under the circumstances as if never obtained, and that a verdict obtained by plaintiff during the pendency of the stay was regular. But leave, on terms, was given to defendant to defend on the merits. Field v. Livingstone, 1 C. L. J. 210.

A county court Judge, on the 4th September, granted a summons calling on a judgment debtor to shew cause why he should not be committed to the county gaol of Middlesex, for not satisfactorily answering as to his estate and effects, &c., on an examination before a commissioner appointed by the Judge. This summons having been enlarged until the 26th September, and no one attending on either side on that day, the Judge, on the following day, on the plaintiff's application, enlarged it, by indorsement, until the 11th October, of which the defendant had no notice, On the 11th September the Judge had made another order for the debtor to attend before him and be further examined on the 11th October, but defendant, having lost this order. october, but quendant, naving lost his order, and believing it to be only a summons for further examination, on which an order would be afterwards made, did not attend upon it. On the 11th October the Judge made an order upon the summons of the 4th September, for defendant's committal to the county gaol of Lambton, in which county he had resided since before the date of that summons. fendant, having been committed, applied for his discharge to the Judge of the county court, who refused, unless defendant would undertake to bring no action; and an order was signed for his discharge on these terms, which he de-clined to accept. The prisoner having been brought up by habeas corpus, it was objected: (1) that the summons, having lapsed on the 26th, could not be enlarged; (2) that the summons was to commit to the county gaol of Middlesex, and the order to that of Lambton; (3) that the order of the 11th September, for further examination, was a waiver of the previous summons to commit:—Held, that such enlargement, under all the circumstances, could not entitle defendant to his discharge; that the second objection could have been available only on the return of the summons; and that the order was no abandonment of the previous summons. The defendant was therefore remanded. Re Munn, 25 U. C. R. 24.

2. Intituling.

See King's College v. Gamble, 1 C. L. Ch. 54; Brown v. Rose, 1 C. L. Ch. 182; Chamberlain v. Wood, 1 P. R. 195.

3. Papers Filed-Reference to.

Where leave is given, on an application for a summons, to use the affidavits filed on a former application, which was unsuccessful, such affidavits must either be refiled or specifically referred to in the summons. Dougall v. Yager, 1 C. L. J. 133.

When a summons is drawn up on reading papers filed, papers which were filed on a former application, and refiled on the subsequent application, may be read, though not referred to as papers filed on the former application. Buckanan v. Bettes, '2 C. L. J. 71. See also Small v. Eccles, 3 P. R. 189; Re Allen, 31 U. C. R. 458.

A summous to shew cause not referring to the papers filed upon which it was founded, was allowed to be amended. Re Barton, 4 P. R. 237. 4. Rescission of Orders—Motions to Rescind and Appeals.

(a) Materials on Motion,

The affidavit on a motion to rescind a Judge's order stated that certain papers in the suit had not been served on the deponent, but did not further shew his connection with the cause either as party or attorney:—Semble, that the affidavit was bad. Wilkes v. McMillen, 10 U. C. R. 292.

One Judge may rescind the order of another Judge, even on the same materials that were before the first Judge, but whether he will do so or not will always be a question for himself, according to the nature of the facts. Demill v. Eusterbrook, 10 L. J. 246.

The court discharged with costs a rule nisi to amend a Judge's order because the pleadings upon which the rule purported to have been moved were not in fact before the court, nor were they disclosed by the affidavits filed, and it was impossible rightly to decide the case without reference to them. Crooks v. Dickson, 15 C. P. 528.

Where a Judge in chambers discharged a summons to set aside a final judgment:— Held, that an application to the court for the same purpose must be by way of appeal from the order, not as an original motion, and that all the papers filed on the application in chambers must be brought before the court. Quære, as to the right to file additional affidavits. Waddell v. Corbett, 26 U. C. R. 243.

Where a rule nisi in full court did not disclose the fact that it had been obtained on an affidavit previously used in chambers to obtain a summons for the same purpose, and the leave of the court to take such affidavit off the files was not shewn:—Held, irregular, and the rule was discharged with costs. Small v. Eccles, 3 P. R. 189.

A rule to rescind a Judge's order was drawn up "upon reading the affloatits and papers filed," not specifying that the papers used in chambers were refiled, or that they were brought up by leave of the court:—Held, that, though it is better to specify this, the objection could not prevail here, for the rule shewed plainly that it was by way of appeal from proceedings in chambers, the affidavits and papers filed there were expressly mentioned, and they were in fact refiled, as appeared by an affidavit filed in shewing cause. Held, also, that if the objection had prevailed the rule might have been at once amended. Held, also, that in stuck cases the leave of court to use the papers in chambers is unnecessary. Re Alfen, 31 U. C. R. 458.

See Heyland v. Scott, 18 C. P. 52.

(b) Order Issued Improvidently.

A Judge may open again an order granted by himself, or even rescind it before it has been carried into effect, upon his discovering that he has made it inadvertently, or has been surprised into making it by any perversion or concealment of facts, or from the misconception on his part of the law or facts. Shaw v. Nickerson, Gillespie v. Nickerson, 7 U. C. R. 541.

Quere, can a Judge in chambers rescind his order for a habeas corpus, or quash the writitself, on the ground that it issued improvidently. Re Ross, 3 P. R. 301.

The time for appearance to a writ of ejectment expired on the 2nd May. On that day the plaintiff searched the appearance book, but found none. The next day an appearance was entered with a notice of title, which notice was served on the plaintiff of the which was entered by the plaintiff of the control of the 2nd May, but suppared part of the facts, upon which an expanse of part of the facts, upon which an expanse of the was made:—Held, that this order must be set aside, as the appearance could not be treated as a nullity, and as the order was made expante, without all the facts having been made known or considered. Van Norman v. McLennan, 2 C. L. J. 207.

Where an ex parte order is complained of, an application should be made to the Judge, upon summons, to rescind his own order, before appeal; but the Judge, sitting in bane, may assent to his own order being moved against in the first instance. Such rule does not apply where the jurisdiction of the Judge making the order is questioned. Hesketh v. Ward, 17 C. P. 667.

(c) Time for Moving-Terms.

See Byard v. Read, Tay, 413; Re Glass and Macdonald, 13 C. P. 419; Ross v. Grange, 27 U. C. R. 300; Buffalo and Lake Huron R. W. Co, v. Hemmingtey, 22 U. C. R. 552; Bank of Montreal v. Harrison, 19 C. P. 276; Modly v. Dougall, 3 P. R. 445; Smith v. Commercial Union Ins. Co, 33 U. C. R. 529.

(d) Other Cases.

Appeal — Irregularity.] — The court will very rarely entertain an appeal against an order declining to give effect to a motion for irregularity. Gilmour v. Wilson, 4 U. C. R. 154.

Ca. Sa.]—On an application by way of appeal from a Judge's order for the issue of a writ of ca. sa., the court in term has power to review such order; but, semble, that an application made after the lapse of the succeeding term is too late. Kidd v. O'Connor, 45 U. C. R. 193.

Costs—Appeal as to.]—Where proceedings are set aside in chambers on defendant's application, on payment of costs, the court will not interfere merely as regards costs except in a very strong case; and defendant having taken out the order cannot be heard to set it aside. Martin v. McCharles, 25 U. C. 14, 279.

Costs of Motion.]—Costs of applying to rescind a Judge's order to allow county court costs were held not to be costs in the cause. Cameron v. Campbell, 1 P. R. 170.

Custody of Infants.]—Held, that an appeal would lie to the court from a Judge's color, under C. S. U. C. c. 74, with regard to the custody of children under twelve years of age. The cases in, and the principles upon which, an appeal is or is not allowed, research. In re Allen, 31 U. C. R. 458.

Forum. |--Where an order directing a reference to the master to determine the amount due from an attorney to his client, has been made in chambers, and the reference completed under it, an application for relief therefrom must be made to the court. In re Attorney, 8 P. R. 102.

Order pro Confesso.]—A defendant notified failed to attend, and a verdict pro confesso was taken out against him, the Judge declining to hear evidence in support of the plea. Quare, however, whether the evidence should not have been received, and whether the court has power under this statute to review the decision of the Judge at nisi prius. McGann v. Keyes, 12 U. C. R. 429.

Terms of Order—Rescinding Part.]—The court will sometimes grant relief against an order in chambers, by rescinding any part of it which may be unjust or irregular, but will not add to the terms of a conditional order already acted upon. The court refused to alter the terms of an order on which a trial had been put off on payment only of the costs of the application, so as to compel the defendant to pay the plaintiff's costs of preparing for trial while in ignorance of it, though of opinion that it would have been more fair to have exacted the payment of such costs on granting the order. McKenzie v. Stewart, 10 U. C. R. 634.

Unauthorized Order — Stay of Proceedings.]—Where the causes of action under two counts passed to the assignce in insolvency, but not under the third:—Held, that an order staying proceedings as to the third count should not have been made; that, being made without authority, it might be rescinded as to that count, notwithstanding the delay in moving against it until the term after that in which it was made; and that the action might be stayed on one count, leaving it to proceed on the others. Smith v. Commercial Union Ins. Co., 33 U. C. R. 522.

See, also, Bank of Montreal v. Cameron, 17 U. C. R. 46.

5. Stay of Proceedings.

See Sovreen v. Rapelje, 1 C. L. Ch. 11; Crooks v. Dickson, 14 C. P. 83; Merchants Bank v. Pierson, 8 P. R. 129.

6. Waiver or Abandonment.

Where an order is such that no one is prejudiced by delay in serving it, such delay is no ground for setting the order aside. Wilkes v. McMillan, 10 U. C. R. 292.

When an order to refer bills of costs in chancery to the proper officers of that court by a common law Judge in chambers is waived or abandoned by the party who obtains it, it is unnecessary to move to set it aside. Re Wilson and Hector, 9 L. J. 132.

Defendant signed judgment of non pros. against a plaintiff in ejectment, for not proceeding to trial in accordance with a twenty days' notice given by defendant. The plaintiff, on the 3rd April, 1866, obtained a summons to set aside such judgment, which on the 16th

June was made absolute, but the order was not taken out until the 22nd October following, nor served until the 27th :-Held, that the order was waived by such delay, and must be set aside, whether the judgment was void or only irregular. Herr v. Douglas, 26 U. C.

Where plaintiff in September, 1862, obtain-Where plaintiff in September, 1862, obtained an order allowing him to add a count to his declaration on payment of costs, in October served a copy of the order, in December obtained an appointment to tax the costs under the order, in February, 1863, had the costs taxed, in the autumn of the same year entered his record for trial without adding the count, and the trial not having taken place owing to pressure of business, afterwards, in February, 1864, tendered to the acents of deowing to pressure of dismess, afterwards, in February, 1864, tendered to the agents of de-fendants' attorney the costs taxed under the order, it was held that the plaintiff must be taken by his laches to have abandoned the order, and it was accordingly rescinded. Morley v. Bank of British North America, 10.1.1.1.2005 10 L. J. 128.

A party is not precluded from proceeding on a summons because one had been already taken out and served on the opposite party for the same purpose, but owing to a defect had been abandoned. McKay v. McDearmid, 2 C. L. Ch. 1.

A summons that has lapsed is in the same position as one that is abandoned by notice or otherwise. Hood v. Nichols, 4 P. R. 111.

party taking out an order to examine, and failing to appear on an appointment thereunder, loses the benefit of the order, and must obtain a new one. Ferguson v. Elliott, 7 P.

See Re Munn, 25 U. C. R. 24.

7. Other Cases.

Amendment - Specification.] - A summons to amend the declaration need not specify the amendment required. It is sufficient if the ground of amendments be men-tioned in the notice of the intended applica-tion. Brown v. Devlin, 1 C. L. Ch. 175.

Compliance with Order.]-If there be any objection to the mode of compliance with an order, application should be made to the Judge who made it. Ross v. Grange, 4 P. R. 180.

Costs.]-A summons moved with costs, if discharged, is discharged with costs. Becket v. Durand, 6 L. J. 15.

Death of Party — Date of Order.] — A summons to pay over having been opposed, the Judge took time to consider, and before the order was granted the garnishes died:— Held, the delay being that of the Judge, that the order was not void, but might be amended and dated as of the day of argument. Quære, whether in strictness all orders should not be thus dated. Ward v. Vance, 3 P. R. 210.

Examination - Pending Motion.] - To obtain an order to examine a person who has refused to make an affidavit when required to do so, under s. 188 of the C. L. P. Act, the affidavit on which the application is made, need only state that the person sought to be examined can give valuable information, and has refused to make an affidavit when required. Re Astorneys, 7 P. R. 2.

Making Rule of Court.] — Under the rule of practice No. 129, service of a Judge's order on the agent of the attorney, affidavit that the same has been disobeyed, is sufficient to entitle the party who obtained the order to make the same a rule of court, and on these materials he is entitled to a rule of court, absolute in the first instance, with costs. Martin v. Stinson, 7 L. J. 184.

Order not Reversed. |- So long as a Judge's order stands unreversed by the court, a Judge in chambers will assume that neither party is dissatisfied with it. Hall v. Brown, 3 P. R. 293.

Prohibition-Order Obtained by Appli-Prohibition—Order Obtained by Applicant.]—Where a Judge makes an order on the trial of a cause, which, though possibly erroneous in itself, is made at the request of one of the parties and is acted upon, a prohibition at the request of such party will be refused. Richardson v. Shaw, 6 P. R. 200.

Setting aside Judgment-Filing Order —Carriage of.]—The defendants obtained an order setting aside a final judgment, on the ground that it should have been interlocutory day, issued a duplicate of such order, and immediately filed it in the office of the deputy clerk at Sarnia, where the final judgment was signed, and entered interlocutory judgment.
The judgment roll had been forwarded to Toronto:—Held, that the mere filing of the order was not sufficient to set aside the judgment, as an entry thereof on the roll is also required. Held, also, that the defendants. required. Held, also, that the defendants, having obtained the order, were entitled to the carriage of it, and so long as they were the carriage of it, and so long as they were guilty of no laches, the plaintiff could not intervene and take charge of it. Attachment.] — An attachment for not obeying an order to appear and be examined as to debts, cannot be issued in vacation. treene v. Wood, 2 P. R. 165.

Charging in Execution.]—A vacation succeeding a term is not to be considered for the purpose of charging a defendant in execution as a part of the preceding term. Reid v. track 4 P. R. 141.

The same rule governs in this respect in county courts as superior courts. Ib.

Term Motion.] — A county court Judge arranged with the bar of his county "to transact all term business in vacation," and, acting under such arrangement, set aside a verdict and judgment after the term succeeding the assizes in which the verdict was rendered. An appeal from his decision was allowed with costs, such arrangement being contrary to the express words of the statute. Smith v. Rooney, 12 U. C. R. 661.

XXII. VERDICT AND POSTEA.

Amendment.]—A verdict taken for the penalty of a bail bond to the limits, was amended by the Judge's notes by reducing it to the sum indorsed on the ca. sa., with interest and sheriff's fees. Callagher v. Strobridge, Dra. 158.

Where there is a general verdict for plaintiff on several counts, one of which is bad, but it appears the plaintiff elected to proceed on a good count at the trial, the court will allow the verdict to be amended after motion in arrest of judgment, without costs. Gouldrich v. McDougdl, 2 O. S. 212.

So where the evidence was applicable to a good count only. Beasty v. Darling, 2 O. S. 214; Chadwick v. McPherson, 2 U. C. R. 379.

So if the evidence at the trial apply equally to the good and bad counts, the amendment may be made. Baldwin q. t. v. Henderson, 4 U. C. R. 361.

But where, in case for waste, the first two counts were for voluntary waste, and the fourth in trover, the third being for permissive waste by a tenant at will, an application to amend the postea by entering the verdict on the first, second, and fourth counts alone, was refused, evidence having been given on the third count. Drummond v. Carthew, T. T. 3 & 4 Vict.

Where the notes shew that the verdict has been erroneously entered for the plaintiff on both counts, instead of for defendant in one, this may be amended by the Judge's notes. City Bank v. Eccles, 5 U. C. R. 633.

Where a verdict has been erroneously entered on one count, the record may, at any time afterwards, by leave of the Judge who tried the cause, be altered, and the entry made on another count. Moore v. Boyd, 16 C. P. 513.

The court will amend a postea by the Judge's notes, and a judgment by the postea, after appeal allowed, and reasons of appeal assigned, the verdict being general for the plaintiff on points reserved, and the postea framed as if the general issue only had been pleaded, without noticing several other special pleas. Rocheau v. Bidwell, 2 O. S. 319.

Where a verdict has been given in a district court for a sum beyond its jurisdiction, the plaintiff may cure the defect by entering on the record a remittitur for the excess. Thomas v. Hilmer, 4 U. C. R. 527; Jordan v. Carr, 4 U. C. R. 53.

Where a verdict was taken by mistake for £100 too little, and a levy made under execution, the court refused to interfere, the defendant opposing the application. Bank of Upper Canada v. Corbett, 21 U. C. R. 65.

Where by mistake a verdict for a certain amount is entered on the record, and the foreman of the jury, before the jury separate or leave the box, points out the error, the Judge is right in correcting it. Moore v. Boyd, 15 C. P. 513.

XXIII. MISCELLANEOUS CASES.

Affidavits — Amendment.] — Amendment allowed by insertion of names in jurat of two persons sworn to same affidavit. Fisher v. Thayer, 5 O. S. 513.

In Christian names of plaintiffs in affidavits. Rose v. Cook, 1 U. C. R. 5; Grant v. Taylor, 2 U. C. R. 407; Beauchamp v. Cass, 1 P. R. 291.

The affidavit of service of notice of motion for a certiorari to remove a conviction, must identify the magistrates served as the convicting magistrates. But an affidavit defective in this respect was allowed to be amended, the time for moving for the certiorari not having expired. Such an objection was held not to be waived by the attorney having accepted service for the convicting justices, and undertaken to shew cause. Re Lake, 42 U. C. R. 206.

Demurrer—Point of Practice.] — Where to a declaration against a shareholder of a joint stock company for recovery against him, to the amount of his unpaid stock, upon an unsatisfied judgment against the company, he demurred on the ground that an action on the case and not a sci. fa, was the proper remedy: —Held, that the point was one of practice and not of pleading, and was not therefore open on demurrer. Page v. Austin, 26 C. P. 110.

English Rules.] — All English rules of practice were adopted up to the date of the rule of court of M. T. 4 Geo. IV. Doe d. Burger v. ——, Tay. 269.

Forms of Action.]—See Clark v. Anderson, E. T. 3 Vict., R. & J. Dig. 26; Moore v. Matcolm, Tay. 273; Kilborn v. Forester, Dra. 332; Eastrood v. Hellivedl, 4. O. S. 38; Kendrick v. Lee, 6. O. Objection by Court.]—The court will not raise an objection against the merits not taken by defendants' counsel. McGregor v. Daly, 5 C. P. 126.

Postponement of Trial.]—The plaintiff brought an action against two townships for not repairing a road, and while it was pending before the court of appeal, he issued a writ against the defendants for the same cause, to prevent the Statute of Limitations running against him, in case it should be held that the townships were not liable. A notice to proceed to trial having been served on the plaintiff, the time for trial was enlarged until after the decision of the court of appeal. Mo-Hardy v. County of Perth., 7 P. R. 101.

Reference—Sending Report back to Matter,]—In ejectment it was ordered in Hilary term, 1879, that a verdict should be entered for the plaintiff, but no execution to issue until the value of the improvements was ascertained and the amount thereof paid to the defendant, and that it be referred to a master in chancery, to ascertain such value. The master made his report on the 30th October, 1879, merely finding the value of the improvements, without making any allowance for the rents and profits. In Easter term, 1880, the plaintiff moved to refer back the report to the master to make such allowance:—Held, reversing the decision below, 31 C. P. 227, that the reference was to the master as an officer of the court, and that there was nothing in any of the sections of the C. L. P. Act, R. S. O. 1877 c. 50, relating to arbitrations, which interfered with the right of the court, under the circumstances, to review the act of their officer, and to send the matter back for his reconsideration. The matter was therefore referred back to the master to make such allowance. McCarthy v. Arbuckle, 31 C. P. 405.

Trial on Affidavits.]—The court will not try matters of fact on affidavits. Where, therefore, the plaintiff moved upon an affidavit of a material fact which was distinctly denied by the defendant, the court discharged the rule. Lemarand v. Whipple, 4 O. S. 12.

Venue.]—Held, that under 23 Vict. c. 42, s. 4. to warrant a Judge of the superior courts in referring a cause for trial to a Judge of a county court, the writ must not only be issued from, but venue laid in, the county to which the reference for trial is required. Boulton v. Ruttan, 7 L. J. 151

No venue need be stated in the margin of a judgment roll on default of appearance. Bank of Montreal v. Harrison, 4 P. R. 331.

PRACTICE IN EQUITY BEFORE THE JUDICATURE ACT.

I. ABATEMENT OF SUITS.

Assignment of Interest in Part.]—Where a plaintiff had assigned in part his interest in the subject matter of the suit, an objection that the suit had abated was over-ruled. McDonell v. Upper Canada Mining Co., 2 Ch. Ch. 400.

Death of One Plaintiff.]—A suit does not abate by the death of one of the plaintiffs, if others remain on the record having similar interests, and capable of maintaining the suit. Alchin v. Buffelo and Lake Huron R. W. Co., 2 Ch. Ch. 45.

Death of Plaintiff—Subsequent Proceedings,—The solicitor of the plaintiff, in ignorance of the plaintiff's death, had, after that event, taken certain proceedings in the cause. On a motion to confirm these proceedings:—Held, that no order could be made except by consent, Graham v. Davis, 2 Ch. Ch. 187.

became abated between the date of the report and the time fixed by it for payment by sub-sequent incumbrancers. An application for a final order of foreclosure was refused, and a new day was appointed allowing the incumbrancers an additional time for payment equal to the time the suir remained abated. Biggar v. Way, 8 P. R. 158.

Insolvency.]—Bankruptcy of a sole plaintiff causes an abatement of a suit. Cameron y, Eager, 9 C. L. J. 263.

Subsequent Proceedings.]—Where a suit becomes defective by the insolvency of the plaintiff, subsequent proceedings are not wholly void; but, on the fac* being brought before the court, such order will be made as may be just. McKenzie v. McDonnel, 15 Gr. 442?

III. BILLS.

- 1. Dismissal for Want of Prosecution.
 - (a) Abatement of Suit.

Death of one Defendant.] — A defendant is entitled to an order to dismiss the plaintiff's bill, notwithstanding the death of a co-defendant. Hall v. Green, 2 O. S. 42.

Where a suit is partially abated by the death of one of the defendants, the other defendants cannot move to dismiss the bill: the proper course is to move that the plaintiff do revive within a limited time. Bank of Upper Canada v. Nichol, 1 Ch. Ch. 294.

One of the surviving defendants may properly move to dismiss, though the suit has become abated by the death of another defendant. Kelley v. Macklem, 2 Ch. Ch. 132.

In a redemption suit, where one of the two decendants had died, a motion was made on the part of his executors and of another decendant of dismiss; the same solicitor appearing for both. Notwithstanding some delay on the part of the plaintiff, which was not fully accounted for, the order was made in the alternative, that he revive and go to hearing on terms, or be dismissed:—Held, in accordance with the last case, that a defendant is not obliged after replication filed, to set the cause down for hearing in order to have the bill dismissed, but that he may apply in chambers for an order to dismiss for want of prosecution. Semble, where a suit abates by the death of one of the defendant, the defendant may move to dismiss for want of prosecution without moving that the plaintiff revive; but, if deceased defendant and the surviving defendant be both represented by the same solicitor, the order will be to revive or bill dismissed. Semble, also, a motion to dismiss will be entertained even after replication filed. Rice v, George, 2 Ch. Ch. 74.

Hill against two executors and others. One of the executors ded. A motion by the surviving defendant, including coexecutivity of the execution of the execution

Where after demurrer the plaintiff obtained better to amend in fourteen days, and did not do so, but served an ex parte order of revivor, the demurring defendant having died after the fourteen days for amendment:—Held, that the bill was not by such failure to amend out of court without a further order, but it was open to defendant to move to dismiss. *Carr v. Moflat, 9 C. L. J., 52.

Insolvency of Defendant.]—A sole defendant, by whose insolvency the suit has abuted, may nevertheless move to dismiss the blank for want of prosecution. Riddelt v. Ritchie, 6 P. R. 205.

Insolvency of Plaintiff.]—A motion by a defendant to dismiss after an abatement caused by the bankruptcy of a sole plaintiff and before reviver, was refused; his proper corrections of the plaintiff in insolvency with notice to revive within a limited time. Comeron v. Eager, 6 P. R.

See ante I.

(b) Answer to Application to Dismiss.

Absence of Witness—Collateral Sale— No production.]—In a suit to set aside a consquare of the equity of redemption in certain labels as fraudulent as against creditors, one stince of the court having been lost, a defendait, the grantee of the equity of redemption, inneed to dismiss the bill for want of prosement of the production of the second of the commenced, the plaintiff's solicitors were notified to file a replication, and proceed to a learning, but did not do so. The excuses offered by the plaintiff were, that the defendant was a material witness, and was absent property to the hearing, and that the property Vot. III. p—173—24 had been sold under a power of sale contained in one of the mortgages, and little or no surplus remained after paying the mortgages. It appeared that no effort had been made to find the defendant in order to subpeam him as a witness at the hearing, and that the sale of the land did not take place until a month after the sittings at which the cause might have been heard:—Held, that the delay was not excused, and the bill should be dismissed. Held, also, that the failure of the defendant to comply with an order to produce did not, under the circumstances of the case, deprive him of the right to move to dismiss. Elliott v. Gardner, 8 P. R. 409.

Semble, that a plaintiff cannot, in answer to a motion to dismiss, ask to have the bill dismissed without costs, but must make a substantive motion for that purpose. Ib.

Costs of Demurrer Unpaid.]—Where, on a motion to dismiss, the only objection made was that the costs of a demurrer overruled had not been paid, the court dismissed the bill with costs, the costs of the demurrer to be set off, and execution to go for the balance in favour of the party entitled thereto. Bigelow v. Thompson, 1 Ch. Ch. 307.

Costs of Previous Motion Unpaid.]—
Antion to dismiss had been refused with costs:—Held, that another motion to dismiss could not be made until the costs of the prior one were paid, though it appeared that plaintiff's solicitor had not taken out bis certificate. Harvie v, Ferguson, 1 Ch. Ch. 218.

Error in Judgment.]—On a motion to dismiss it appeared that the case had not been brought to a hearing through an error in judgment of the plaintiff's solicitor:—Held, that it was proper to take into account such error in considering the application in connection with the other circumstances of the case. McFecters v. Dixon, 3 Ch. Ch. S4.

Examination of Defendant.]—Examination of defendant is not a step in the cause, and forms no answer to a motion to dismiss. Where there had been great delays, both before and since the examination, plaintiff was held accountable for both. Mulholland v. Brent, 2 Ch. Ch. 31.

Filing Replication Pending Motion—Statute of Limitations—Mistake of Solicitor.]—Held, that filing a replication pending a motion to dismiss is no answer to the motion, the practice here being different from that which prevails in England; nor the mere fact that the plaintiff's claim will be barred by the Statute of Limitations if the bill be dismissed. Held, also, that such delay is not sufficiently explained by shewing that it occurred through the mistake of the solicitor. Finnegan v. Keenan, 7 P. R. 385.

Inability to Serve Bill — Knowledge of Applicant, 1—Where it appeared that a defendant who was in a position to move to disconsist was the server of the ser an order to dismiss, and consider the peculiar circumstances of the case. Where, therefore, the defendants had been dilatory in obeying the order to produce, and refused to go down to hearing by consent, when plaintiff, being too late to go down otherwise, applied for a consent, an order to dismiss was refused; and under the same circumstances an order to open publication, and for leave to set down cause for the following examination and hearing term, was granted. Jeffs v. Orr., 2 Ch. Ch. 273.

Laches of Defendant. |—The court will exercise a discretion in granting or refusing

Where the proceedings in the suit have been conducted in a loose manner on both sides, without regard to the strict practice of the court:—Held, that delay on the part of the defendant, and acquiseence by him in delay on the part of plaintiff, rendered it inequitable to allow defendant suddenly to determine the dilatory method of conducting the suit and insist upon a strict compliance by the plaintiff with the practice of the court; and a motion to dismiss was therefore refused. Waters v. Burrill, 6 P. R. 269.

The bill was filed on the 9th June, 1877, the venue being laid at Ottawa. On the 20th August, 1878, the defendant filed his answer; and the plaintiff obtained an order to amend on the 18th September following, which was not served till after a notice of motion to dismiss the bill for want of prosecution on the 23rd September. The sitting at Ottawa was on the 18th September:—Held, that the defendant had by filing his answer condoned any delay on the plaintiff's part before that date, and that there had been no such delay subsequently thereto as to justify a dismissal of the bill or changing the venue, After an order of the referee changing the venue, and prior to appeal therefrom, defendant answered the amendments:—Semble, that the defendant thereby waived his right to dismiss for any previous default. Cotton v. Rodgers, 7 P. R. 423.

Non-production by Defendant.]—The plaintiff had served an order to produce upon defendant, who had thereupon filed an affidavit on production, a copy of which had been demanded by the plaintiff, but had not been served. Under these circumstances, a motion by the defendant to dismiss was refused with costs. Proudfoot v. Thompson, I Ch. Ch. 367.

The fact that a defendant has put in an insufficient affidavit on production, is no bar to his moving to dismiss the bill. Gillespic v. Gillespic, 2 Ch. Ch. 267.

Delay on the part of defendant in making production is no excuse for the non-prosecution of the suit by the plaintiff, where the plaintiff has delayed taking steps to compel production. Wilson v. Black, 6 P. R. 130.

Objection to Style of Cause.]—Where the plaintiff's bill of complaint was dismissed against one of the defendants only, and a motion to dismiss for want of prosecution was subsequently made by the other defendants, a technical objection that the style of the cause of the notice of motion was incorrect (the name of the defendant as against whom the bill was dismissed appearing therein) was overruled. Upper Canada Mining Co. v. Attorney-General, 4. C. I. J. 7.8.

Order to Amend.]—An order to amend having been obtained and served after service of a notice of motion to dismiss, was deemed a sufficient answer to such motion. Hill v, Hill, 2 Gr. 692.

Pendency of Another Suit.]—The pendency of another suit in which the plaintiff could obtain the relief he seeks in a bill, was considered no answer to a motion to dismiss. Guthrie v. Macdonald, 3 Ch. Ch. 99.

The pendency of another suit, which would give the relief desired, but in which no decree has been obtained, is not a sufficient answer to a motion to dismiss. Bain v. Mc-Comell, 6 P. It. 113.

Pending Appeal in Another Suit.]
—The prosecution of a suit was, upon the advice of counsel, delayed pending an appeal to the privy council in a suit previously instituted, upon the result of which appeal the second suit depended;—Held, on a motion to dismiss, that under the peculiar circumstances of the case the excuse of not proceeding with the suit was sufficient. Mode of procedure to obtain discovery of documents from a corporation, considered. Lindsay Petroleum Co. v. Pardec, 6 P. R. 140.

Pending Motion to Amend.]—A motion to amend is no answer to a motion to dismiss. McNab v. Gwynne, 1 Gr. 127.

A motion by plaintiff for leave to amend having been refused, the plaintiff had moved to discharge the order refusing leave to amend:—Held, that a motion to dismiss, pending the motion to discharge the order, was irregular. Cameron v. VanEvery, 1 Ch. Ch. 217.

Setting Cause down.]—After notice of motion to dismiss had been served, plaintiff set the cause down to be heard by way of motion for decree, and served notice on defendant:—Held, a sufficient answer to the application, but that defendant was entitled to his costs. Toucers v. Foot, 1 Ch. Ch. 32.

— Defendant's Duty.]—The fact that a replication has been filed, and that defendant himself is therefore in a position to set the cause down for examination and hearing, is no bar to a motion to dismiss. Spacen v. Nelles, 1 Ch. Ch. 270.

(c) Evidence on Motion to Dismiss.

Certificate.]—In moving to dismiss it is not sufficient for the certificate of the registrar to state only that no replication has been filed: it must also state that no further proceedings have been had, and it must be shewn when the office copy of the answer was served. Thompson v, Buchanan, 3 Gr. 652.

Notice of Answer.]—When a motion is made to dismiss the bill, the party moving must shew that notice of having put in an answer has been duly served. Kay v. Sanson, 1 Ch. Ch. 71.

Specifying Evidence.]—Held, that it is not necessary, in a notice of motion to dismiss, to specify the evidence to be read on the hearing of the motion. *Hodgson v. Bank of Up*per Canada, S. L. J. 228.

(d) Time-Reckoning of, against Plaintiff.

Delay by Defendant — Next Friend—Production. — On a motion to dismiss the bill of a married woman, the court refused to count against her time to be described to consequence the time of the described of the consequence of the court will not be described. The court will not hold a plaintiff bound in every case to prepare for hearing before the defendant has made production under the order to produce, where that order has been taken with promptitude. Where, therefore, the defendant having anticipated the interpretation of the defendant having anticipated the production was filed just in time to leave the plaintiff a single day before giving notice, supposing no amendments required, the court refused a motion to dismiss. Poole v. Poole, 2 Ch. Ch. 475.

New Defendants—Motion by.]—Where a motion to dismiss was made by certain defendants who had been made parties by amendment at a comparatively recent date, delay having occurred previously in the conduct of the cause they were not permitted to shew such delay as a ground of dismissal; and an order to dismiss made by the secretary, whose attention had not been called to the fact of the parties moving having become parties at a recent period, was reversed, but with costs against the plaintiffs, they having been guilty of the delay. Upper Canada Mining Co. v. Attorney-General, 2 Ch. Ch. 207.

Replication — Commencement of Sittings, —Semble, if the time when the plaintiff should join issue is not three weeks before the next hearing term at the place where the venue is laid, defendant cannot succeed on a motion to dismiss, founded on the plaintiff's contiting to set the cause down for hearing at that term. Wilson v. Black, 6 P. R. 130.

Where the time for filing replication expires less than three weeks before the commencement of the sitting at the place where the venue is laid, defendant cannot succeed on a motion to dismiss for not proceeding to a hearing at that sittings. Semble, it is not open to plaintiff to countermand a notice of hearing once given. Richardson v. Bilton, 6 P. R. 280.

Service of Bill.]—Where a bill had been filed and a lis pendens registered, but no office copy served within the twelve weeks allowed for service, the bill was ordered to be dismissed with costs.

Somerville v. Kerr, 2 Ch. Ch. 154.

If a bill is filed and no office copy served within the period limited for service (three months), the bill will on application be dismissed. It is no answer to a motion to dismisse under such circumstances, that the bill was filed previous to 1864, when the order limiting the time was passed. Moore v, Roseburgh, 2 Ch. Ch. 406.

(e) Other Cases,

Applicant in Default—Dual Capacity.]
—Whore one of the defendants had answered, and the time for replying had expired, a motion was made to dismiss the bill as against him, bur, it appearing that such defendant was president of an incorporated company, whose answer had not yet been filed, the motion was refused with costs. Rees v. Jacques, 1 Gr. 352.

a suit having been entered into before answer, defendant may set up the compromise in his answer, and pray, by way of cross-relief, that it be specifically performed; and if plaintiff does not diligently proceed with the suit, defendant is enabled to move to dismiss for want of prosecution. Small v. Union Permanent Building Society, 6 P. R. 206.

Irregular Replication — Amendment.]—A plaintiff, having filed an irregular replication, afterwards obtained by consent in a fer wards obtained by consent in the constant of t

Motion to Dismiss — Notice.]—Where defendant moved to dismiss and plaintiff asked for time, and failed to proceed within the time given:—Held. that the defendant could move ex parte for the order to dismiss. Burns v. Chisholm, 2 Ch. Ch. S8.

Notice of Hearing—Countermand.]—A. plaintiff, having set down his cause to be heard, subsecuently countermanded the notice of hearing which had been served on defendant. A motion to dismiss was, under the circumstances, refused without costs. Richardson v., Maxer. 1 Ch. Ch. 18. See Richardson v., Bilton, 6 P. R. 280, ante (d).

Petition—Non-service—Treating as Bill.]
—It is unnecessary and irregular to file a petition before it is heard. The prone proceeding, in order to bring it before the court, is to serve a copy with notice of a day for hearing indorsed. This practice is applicable to netitions under the Insurance Companies Act, 31 Vict. c. 48. But, as by this Act no special procedure is provided for making application under it to the court, where proceedings were initiated by a petition which had been filed but not served upon the respondents, nor brought to a hearing, after a larse of fourteen months, the petition was treated as a bill, and ordered to be taken off the files for want of prosecution. Re Western Insurance Co., 6 P.

Service of Notice of Motion—Solicitor—Parties.]—A bill was filed by churchwardens, and during the progress of the suit the churchwardens were changed at the vestry meeting; the new churchwardens were not made parties. The suit not being brought to a hearing within the time required by the practice, it was held that a motion to dismiss the bill served on the plaintiffs' solicitor was regular. Quere, whether it was necessary to make the new churchwardens parties. Me-Fecters v. Dixon, 3 Ch. Ch. 84.

Terms as to Hearing—Costs.]—Upon a motion to dismiss, where the only complaint is that the replication has not been filed within the time limited for so doing, and no sitting of the court has been lost, the plaintiff may be put on terms to go down to a hearing at the next sittings at the place where the venue is laid, but the defendant will not be awarded costs of the application, unless he has, by letter or otherwise, required the plaintiff's solicitor to proceed and file replication, and the latter has neglected to do so. McGillieray v. McConkey, 6 P. R. 114.

Terms — Payment into Court—Costs.]—
After an order dismissing a bill had been obtained upon notice, the plaintiff applied to discharge that order, alleging his intention of prosecuting the suit, and that he had not received any personal notice of the motion to dismiss. The application was granted on payment of costs, and paying into court certain instalments alleged to be due to defendant. Campbell v. Ferris, 1 Ch. Ch. 50.

Undertaking.]—A solicitor undertook to put, in an answer, which was not insisted upou, and plaintiff's solicitor undertook to go down to examination, but failed to do so. A motion made by the defendant to dismiss was refused, but, under the circumstances, without costs. Cotton v. Cameron, I. Ch. Ch. 122.

2. Dismissal on Plaintiff's own Application.

Dismissal not on Merits.]—A cause having been brought on to be heard, it was found that a pro confesso note against one of the defendants had been waived by amending the bill. The plaintiff thereupon moved to dismiss the bill as against such defendant, without the dismissal being equivalent to a dismissal on the merits; and the court, under the circumstances, granted the motion, and made a decree saving the rights of the defendant. Waddle v. McGinty, 15 Gr. 261.

Leave to File New Bill.]—The court will not, upon motion, dismiss a bill without prejudice to the plaintiff's filing another bill. Greynne, McNab, 2 Gr. 124.

Where a cause has been set down for hearing, the plaintiff is not entitled, as of course, to an order dismissing his bill, with leave to file another bill. Gardner v. Brennan, 4 Gr. 199

Praccipe. —After a cause has been heard and is standing for judgment the plaintiff cannot dismiss his bill on pracipe, but only on special motion. Smith v. Port Hope Harbour Co., 6 L. J. 180.

a notice of motion, but before the return thereof the plaintiff takes out on pracipe and serves an order to dismiss his bill, the defendant cannot bring on his motion, but he is entitled to tax his costs thereof, under the order to dismiss, as costs in the cause. Purdy v, Ferris, 1 Ch. Ch. 303.

3. Dismissal where Lis Pendens Registered.

Where a fictitious suit is brought for the purpose of registering a lis pendens, an application to remove the bill will be refused unless there is 2 direct admission of the nature of the suit by the plaintif; but where the affidavits clearly shew this, an order will be made directing an early hearing. Jameson v, Lating, 7 P. R. 404.

See Somerville v. Kerr, 2 Ch. Ch. 154, ante 1 (d); Finnegan v. Keenan, 7 P. R. 385, ante 1 (b).

4. Dismissal—Other Cases,

Conflicting Evidence.]—Where the evidence of a marriage is conflicting, the court will give the option of obtaining more satisfactory evidence, or direct an issue, or dismiss the bill. Baker v. Wilson, 4 L. J. 260

Consent—After Decree.]—A bill cannot be dismissed even by consent after a decree has been made in the cause. Ontario Bank v. Campbell., 2 Ch. Ch. 458; Groves v. Ryges, 1 Ch. Ch. 272.

Default of Production—Previous Order—Exe Parte Motion.]—Where an order directed that a better affidavit on production should be filed by the plaintiff within six weeks, and in default that the bill be dismissed:—Held, that upon default being made an ex parte motion to dismiss was regular, notwithstanding that on the motion the fact was not disclosed that the hearing had, by consent, been postponed because the sitting for which the cause was set down was to be held before the expiration of six weeks. Dunn v. McLean, 6 P. N. 156.

Dismissal against one Defendant—Style of Cause.]—After a bill has been dismissed against one defendant, the style of cause as it originally was should be continued. It is not necessary to omit the name of the defendant against whom the bill has been dismissed, and the retention of the name is not irregular. Quere, would it be irregular if the name was omitted? Upper Canada Mining Co. v. Attorney-General, 2 Ch. Ch. 185.

Dismissal on Merits—Leave to Amend—Costs, I—top a bill filed by an infant claiming a conveyance from the defendant, on the accordance of the conveyance from the defendant, on the accordance of the conveyance of

— Leave to Amend—New Record.]—
In a suit by an administrator with the will annexed, upon a mortgage, defendant produced a reiease for the mortgage money given by the testator, whereupon the plaintiff asked to proceed against defendant as a creditor of the estate; but, as this amendment would create an entirely different record, the court refused such permission, and dismissed the bill with costs. Barrett v. Crosthwaite, 9

—— Leave to File New Bill.]—It appearing on the evidence, though not mentioned in the pleadings, that the purchaser of land at a sheriff's sale for taxes was a mortgagee of the property:—Held, in dismissing a bill field to set aside the purchase on the ground of undue practices at the sale, that it was numerosary to reserve liber's to file a bill impeaching the sale on the ground that the purchaser was disqualified as mortgage to effect the purchase for his own benefit. Schofield v. Dickenson, 10 Gr. 226.

a party's own letter was such as to create a misapprehension of facts, and a suit was instituted in consequence, the court, though it refused relief, dismissed the bill without costs. Anderson v. Cameron, 6 Gr. 285.

Purchase by Defendant of Plaintiff's Claim—Costs.]—On an application to dismiss the bill as against defendant L, on the ground that he had purchased the judgment on which the bill was filed, it was urged that L, was still indebted to the plaintiff's solicitor for costs, and also the costs of this application. Bill dismissed, it being held that the costs were provided for in the assignment of the plaintiff's claim. McNab v. Morrison, 2 Ch. Ch. 133.

Subject Matter Gone—Costs.]—An order will not be granted to stay proceedings or dismiss the bill in a suit merely because the subject matter of it has gone; the plaintiff has a right to proceed to a hearing to shew himself entitled to costs. Wallace v. Ford, 1 Ch. Ch. 282.

Trifling Amount Involved—Costs.]—The rule and policy of the court is to discourage trifling and vexatious suits. Where therefore a bill was filed in respect of a sum not exceeding $10, including interest, the court at the hearing, without reference to the merits, disnissed the bill; but without costs, as the defendant ought, under the circumstances, either to have demurred or moved to take the bill off the files. Westbrooke v. Broacht, 17 Gr. 339.

Undertaking—Breach—Solicitor's Slip,1—Where a defendant moved to dismiss the plantiff's bill, the plaintiff having failed to comply with an undertaking, such failure having arisen through a slip of the plaintiff's solidior, the application to dismiss was refused, Berlin v, Berlin, 3 Ch. Ch. 491.

5. Restoring.

Delay. —A motion to restore a bill for want of prosecution refused, where great delay had taken place on the part of the plaintiff. Davy v. Davy, 2 Ch. Ch. 26.

Losing Cause of Suit.]—A bill dismissed for want of prosecution will not be restored unless it can be shewn that the plaintiff's cause of suit will be lost by the dismissal. Dung v. McLean, 6 P. R. 156.

Merits—Discretion.]—When a plaintiff swears to a good case on the merits, the court will, in its discretion, give him an opportunity to have his case heard on the merits, even after an order to dismiss has been properly granted. Rees v. Attorney-General, 2 Ch. Ch. 300.

A bill properly dismissed for want of prosecution will only be restored under strong and special circumstances. Where an injunction bill, filed to restrain proceedings at law, had been confessed in obtaining the injunction, and afterwards, on the dismissal of the bill, money paid under the pressure of the judgment, which it was now alleged was in excess of any due, a motion to restore the bill and take accounts between the parties was refused. Hodgson v. Paxton, 2 Ch. Ch. 398.

See Bank of Montreal v. Wilson, 2 Ch. Ch. 117; Campbell v. Ferris, 1 Ch. Ch. 50, ante 1 (e).

See next sub-head.

6. Undertaking to Speed Cause.

Filing Replication—Time.]—Under the 12th order of this court, the plaintiff is bound to file a replication within one week from the date of entering into the undertaking to speed, whether a commission to examine witnesses shall be required by him or not. MoNab v. Gwynne, 1 Gr. 151.

An undertaking to speed is an undertaking to set the cause down on bill and answer, or to file a replication within three weeks. The fact that there is ample time to go to a hearing at the next sitting of the court, is no excuse for not filing the replication within the time mentioned. Burnham v. Burnham, I Ch. Ch. 394.

Unexplained Delay.]—On a motion to dismiss after great delay, it is now the practice, with a view to enforce diligence in the prosecution of suits, to refuse an undertaking to speed where no explanation of the delay is given, and also to refuse to allow the motion to be intercepted by the filing of replication, anything to the contrary in the practice in England notwithstanding. Rutten v. Burnham, 1 Ch. Ch. 191.

First Motion to Dismiss.]—Held, in opposition to Ruttan v. Burnham, 1 Ch. Ch. 191, that, on a first motion to dismiss for want of prosecution, it is the settled practice of the court to accept an undertaking to speed, without regard to the delay which has taken place. Thompson v. Hind, 1 Ch. Ch. 247.

It is the settled practice of the court (until altered by general order) to accept an undertaking to speed, upon a first motion to dismiss, and in cases where it would have been accepted prior to the establishment of hearing circuit. Mallock v. Plunkett, 1 Ch. Ch. 298.

Relief against Undertaking.]—The plaintiff undertook, upon a motion to dismiss his bill, to bring the cause down to the then next sittings at Guelph. From some correspondence it appeared that if the plaintiff had set the cause down for the then next Guelph sitting, a postponement would have been asked for and granted, on the ground of the attendance at the house of commons of a member who was a defendant. The plaintiff offered to bring the cause down to the then next sitting at Toronto, to which a conditional consent was given; but the cause was not set down:—Held, that the plaintiff was relieved from his undertaking to bring the cause down at Guelph, and that he was under no obligation to bring the cause down at Toronto; and, as no intentional delay was shewn on the part of the plaintiff, the bill was restored. Petric v. Guelph Lamber Co., 9 1r. R. 52.

IV. Consolidation of Suits.

After Decrees.]—The court cannot order the decrees in two original suits to be consolidated. Brown v. Kingsmill, 1 O. S. 229.

Effect of Order Consolidating—Stay of One Suit.]—By a decree made in DeBlaquiere v. Armstrong, it was decred that that suit be consolidated with the matter of the strong v. Deedes. One of the parties of the deficient in each suit.—Held, that the subsequent proceedings must be carried on in DeBlaquiere v. Armstrong, the suit in which the decree was made, and that the solicitor in that suit was the proper solicitor to be served with notice of further proceedings and not the solicitor in the suit of Armstrong v. Deedes, the consolidation being held to operate as a stay of proceedings in that suit. DeBlaquiere v. Armstrong, Armstrong v. Deedes, if P. R. 122.

Suits for Same Relief—Different Plaintiffs—Objection to Status.]—A bill having been filed by one of Neatus.]—A bill having been filed by one of recent is que trust of a settlement, to enforce the trusts, defendant denied that the plaintiff had any interest under the settlement. Thereupon, by the advice of counsel, all was filed for the same purpose by another of the cestuis que trust, against whom the objection did not apply, and, he being an infant, he plaintiff in the first suit was named as his next friend. Both suits proceeded to a hearing, when the court consolidated them, asking one decree as prayed, and giving the plaintiff in the second suit his costs. Rosebargh v. Fitzperuid, 13 Gr. 386.

V. Costs.

Abortive Hearing — Common Error.]—Where a cause was carried to a hearing in a defective state through an error common to all parties, diverse interests of infants being represented by one guardian and one counsel, no costs of that hearing were given to either party on the final disposition of the cause, Muaro v, Samrt, 23 Gr, 310.

Charging Frand.]—The plaintiffs claimed to be partners of the defendant, and the defendant, in resisting a bill filed for the purpose of enforcing such claim, charged the plaintiffs with fraud, but no evidence was adduced either in support or rebuttal thereof, in consequence of the court expressing the view that the plaintiffs were not entitled to succeed; and, as it did not appear that the costs had been increased thereby, the court, on dismissing the bill, ordered defendant to be paid his costs. Samson v. Haggart, 25 Gr.

Common Mistake—Tribunal.]—A decree had been made on consent, referring the question whether or not the defendant had performed certain work for the plaintiff at a specified rate, to a master, who reported that the defendant had not. On appeal, the court, considering that this was a question that should have been disposed of by the court, set aside the report and directed a trial to be had upon that issue, reserving the costs of the proceedings before the master and of the appeal:—Held, on further directions, that these costs having been incurred in a proceeding consented to under a common mistake of parties as to the proper tribunal to decide the question, each party should pay his own costs, batby v. Bell, 29 Gr. 336.

Disclaimer—Master's Office.] — Where a person who is made a party to a suit in the master's office appears and disclaims, he is not entitled to any costs, as by remaining inactive the same end will be attained as by his disclaiming. Halt v. Park, 6 Gr. 553.

bill to set aside a deed as fraudulent against creditors, and the grantee by his answer disclaimed, and alleged that the deed was executed without his knowledge or consent, and that when he became aware of it he had repudiated it:—Held, that the grantee, having been properly made a defendant, was not entitled to his costs. Shuttleworth v. Roberts, 11 Gr. 237.

Divided Success.]—The court, being of opinion that all the grounds of defence other than that of want of jurisdiction had signally failed, on dismissing the bill refused the defendant his costs. Dunnet v. Forneri, 25 Gr. 199.

Where an insurance company set up several defences, some of which they failed to substantiate, the court on dismissing the bill did so without costs. Hawke v. Niagara District Mutaul Fire Ins. Co., 23 Gr, 139.

Event.]—The rule of the court is that costs should follow the event, unless very special circumstances are shewn. Downey v. Roaf. 6 P. R. SO.

Evidence.] — What evidence may on a question of costs be used on further directions. See Downey v. Roaf, 6 P. R. S9.

Motion—Submission to—Tender of Costs.]
—Where a defendant had obeyed an order to produce, after receiving a notice of motion to commit, and tendered a sufficient sum for the costs of the notice, which the plaintiff's solicitor refused; the defendant was given his costs of motion, less the sum tendered. Franklin v. Bradley, 2 Ch. Ch. 444.

Next Friend—Liability.]—A person alleged that he was induced by the plaintiff's solicitor to allow his name to be used as "next friend," on the assurance that he would not be rendered liable to costs. The solicitor denied that. It was considered that such a fact could not be established by exparte affidavits, Burgess y, Munna, 2 Ch. Ch. 43.

Objection to Suit—Answer—Hearing on Question of Costs—Offer to Settle.]—Where new trustees of a corporation are made parties to a suit for specific performance, with a surviving trustee, who alone in lines on the covenants contact to obtain costs against the plantific must take the objection by their brought to a hearing; and where the object for which a bill was filed has been obtained during the progress of the cause; is should not be brought to a hearing on the mere question of costs, without an offer to settle that question otherwise. O'Sullivan v. Cluxton, 26 Gr. 612.

Pauper—Costs of Indulgence.]—The rule is, that where a plaintiff sues in formal numeris be will not be ordered to pay costs of any indulgence granted him during the progress of the cause. Where, therefore, such a plaintiff brought to a hearing a suit which was defective for want of parties, the court ordered it to stand over to add them, and directed that the question of costs of this indulgence should stand over and be disposed of on the hearing of the cause. Parr v. Montgomery, 22 Gr. 176.

Quantum of Costs—Unnecessary Trial.]
—At the hearing a decree was pronounced in favour of the plaintiff with costs generally, but on moving to vary the minutes, statements and admissions in the answer were pointed out, to which the attention of the court had not been drawn at the hearing, which would have enabled the plaintiff to have obtained the same decree on bill and answer. The court varied the decree by directing that only such costs should be taxed as would have been incurred by a hearing on bill and answer. Johnson v. Howard School Trustees, 20 Gr. 234.

Setting aside Tax Sale—Cross-claims for Improvements.]—In a suit by the owner of land impeaching a tax sale deed as a cloud on title, defendant disputed the right of the plaintiff, which was decided in his favour. The court ordered defendant to pay the costs of the sait, notwithstanding that the amount to which defendant was found entitled as compensation for improvements was estimated at double the value of the land, which the court ordered the plaintiff to pay in the event of his preferring to take back the land rather than allow the defendant to retain it, paying its value; although, had the defendant submitted on the question of title, and claimed only compensation under the statute, the costs would have been apportioned. Aston v. Innis, 26 Gr. 42.

Settlement of Suit—Summary Application—Consent,1—The claim for which a suit had been brought having been compromised, the question by whom the costs of the suit should be borne was determined by the referee in chambers, on a summary application by consent of parties. Upon appeal, the court refrised to interfere with the discretion exercised by the referee. Garforth v. Cairns, 9 C. L. J. 212.

Mortouge.]—The rule of the court, that when the subject matter of a suit is settled by defendant before decree, the question of costs cannot be disposed of on a summary application by plaintiff, unless the defendant consents, applies to mortgage suits. A defendant is such a case may insist on the suit going to hearing, as there may be grounds on which he may be relieved from costs. Where under such circumstances the referee refused an application by plaintiff for the payment by defendant of the costs of the suit, an appeal from such order was dismissed with costs. McLean v. Cross, 3 Ch. Ch. 432.

Stakeholders.]—When a building society by their answer stated a sum of money to be in their hands as stakeholders, which was smaller than at the hearing they were willing to admit, the court refused them their costs of suit. Graham v. Toms, 25 Gr. 184.

VI. DECREE.

(See also post VII., XVI.)

1. Carriage of.

Change—Delay.] — Where any unreasonated belay occurs on the part of the plaintiff in carrying on a creditors' suit, the court will order the carriage of the decree to be given to another of the creditors, upon his indemnifying the plaintiff against future costs, Patterson v, Scott, 4 Gr. 145.

Where a plaintiff had been guilty of delay in bringing a decree into the master's office; and, after taking out warrants to consider, procured two powerments, and did not attend the third appointment, the master, on a subsequent day armsterred the carriage of the decree defendant, and granted him a warrant to hear and determine:—Held, not irregular. Stephenson v. Nicolls, 14 Gr. 144.

It is irregular to deliver a decree to any party not entitled to the carriage thereof without an order to that effect; but where the plaintiff, who was prima facie so entitled, was guilty of great delay in proceeding under a decree pronounced, and a defendant beneficially interested applied for and obtained the decree from the registrar, which he carried into the master's office, a motion to give the carriage thereof to the plaintiff was refused with costs. Steers v. Capley, 1 Ch. Ch. 165.

Where a decree referring a matter to the master is not, within fourteen days after such decree is pronounced, brought into the master's office by the party having the carriage thereof, any other party may apply under the general order of 1853, No. 42, s. 1, without first having the decree drawn up and entered. Emes v. Emes, 1 Ch. Ch. 385.

Application in chambers by defendant for carriage of decree, the plaintiff, who was entitled to it, not having gone on within the fourteen days, &c. S. C., 2 Ch. Ch. 54.

No order is necessary under No. 211, consolidated orders, to authorize defendant to take the carriage of a decree out of the plaintiff's hands, Smith v. Henderson, 2 Ch. Ch. 304.

5. Review.

Affidavits in Answer.]—Where a petition of review is filed on the ground of new matter, the respondent may file affidavits without leave as in the case of other petitions. Robson v. Wride, 14 Gr. 606, 15 Gr. 565.

Discovery of New Evidence — Know-ledge—Bilinence, |—In applications to open up proceedings by way of review, on the ground of newly discovered evidence, it is necessary for the party applying to establish: (1) that the evidence is such that, if it had been brought forward at the proper time, it might probably have changed the result; (2) that the time he might have so used it neither he nor his agents had knowledge of it; (3) that it could not with reasonable diligence have been discovered in time to have been so used; and (4) that the applicant has used reasonable diligence after the discovery of the new evidence. Bumble v. Cobourg and Peterborough R. W. Co., 20 Gr., 121.

Where a railway company in the construction of their road look possession of and built their road across a consellation of their road across a compet payment therefor, and under the company of $1,800 was found to be the value of such plot, which sum, together with interest and costs, was paid by the company in order to prevent the land being the consequence of the costs, was paid by the company in order to prevent the land being the consequence of the costs, was paid by the consequence of the control of the con

Petition—Leave to File.]—It is not necessary to file a petition for leave to present a petition in the nature of a bill preview; non-petition under the general order ing the double purpose of the bill of review, and of the motion for leave to file it under the former practice. Duggan v. McKay, 1 Ch. Ch. 380.

Re-opening Whole Case — Mortgage—Debay—Affidavits.]—Mortgagees, under their power of sale, sold to M. for 87,800, and gave him possession. M. paid a deposit of $600, and are his promissory note for $600 more, which he duly paid. He also executed a mortgage for $4,000, which was duly registered, but did not pay the residue of the purchase money, $2,000. The mortgages executed a deed, but retained it in their possession. Their solicitor also did some acts as if the sale was complete; but the court, being satisfied that the parties regarded the transaction as still in fieri:—Held, that the mortgagees were not responsible to a subsequent incumbrancer for the $2,000, or chargeable with more than they had received. The bill of a subsequent incumbrancer stated a completed transaction. The mortgages through oversight allowed the bill to be taken pro confesso, and a decree was made accordingly. The plaintiff, desiring more extensive relief, filed a petition in the nature of a bill of review. The mortgagees, in their answer to this, set up the facts which shewed the transaction to be not completed. The court considered the whole case to be re-opened by this petition, and decided that the sale to their vendee did not affect the rights of the mortgagees, and that they were chargeable only with the amount actually received from the purchaser. Bank of Upper Canada v. Mallace, 16 Gr. 280.

To support an application after the time limited for leave to file a petition of review, the longer the delay has been and the less satisfactorily it is explained, the stronger the case should be on the merits: and where, after five months' delay, an application was made to impeach the will on which the decree was founded, and the application was supported by adfidavits of belief only, in addition to statements which though unconvended would not be sufficient to avoid the will, the court refused the application with costs. B.

6. Service.

Absence from Jurisdiction—Order.]—
It is unnecessary to obtain an order to serve an office copy of the decree out of the jurisdiction, as No. 7 of the orders of 10th January, 1863, applies to the service of all proceedings in the cause. Wood v. Brock, 1 Ch. Ch. 23.

Dispensing with.] — Personal service of a copy of decree under G. O. 114, may be dispensed with. Alguire v. Mattice, 7 P. R. 403.

—— Absence from Jurisdiction.]—Where in an administration suit the interest of one of the next of kin appeared to be very trifling indeed, and he resided out of the jurisdiction, on an application for service on him by maling, the secretary made an order dispensing with service on him altogether. Re Have, Carpenter v, Kelly, 2 Ch, Ch, 417.

— Class of Parties.]—Where the parties who would become interested under a decree as next of kin of a testator are very numerous, and difficult to serve, the court will, in its discretion, dispense with service on them, or some of them, and direct one of a family or class to be served. Anderson v. Kilborn, 2 Ch. Ch. 402.

Incumbrancers.] — In proceeding under the orders of February, 1858, to make incumbrancers parties to the cause, the plaintiff must serve the incumbrancers with office copies of the decree, duly stamped. Elliott v. Hellivell, 1 Ch. 6.

7. Varying or Correcting.

Absence of Party—Petition,]—Where a decree is settled and issued in the absence of one of the parties, without providing for relief to which he is entitled, and which would have been given him if brought to the attention of the court, the proper mode of having the error corrected is to move upon petition; it is not necessary to rehear for that purpose. Simmers v. Erb. 21 Gr. 289.

Leave to Rehear—Petition—Delay,1—A bill was filed by a creditor against his delay, to obtain the benefit of a vendor's lien, and the decree declared the lands (four parcels) subject to the lien for unpaid purchase money, and directed an account to be taken of what was due to the vendor and also to the plaintiff and other incumbrancers. It appeared that to one of the four parcels the vendor had not any title; and that the purchase had been of all at a gross sum of £2,000. After the accounts had been taken, one of the purchaser hield a petition praying for a reference back with a view of obtaining an abatement of the purchase money on account of such defect; but, as this would have been in effect a varying of the decree, which could only be obtained upon a rehearing, the relief was refused; and quere, whether, after the delay that had occurred and the proceedings that had been taken, it would have been prouer to grant leave to rehear. O'Donohoe v. Hembroff, 20 Gr. 350.

Making Decree Conform to Decision Pronounced.]— The decree declared that an assignment of a bond was by way of state of the conformation of the conformation of the certain credits; and referred it to the matter to take the accounts. In proceeding with the accounts the defendant was hampered by this declaration in the decree, as the master foll bound by it, whereupon the defendant moved upon petition to amend the decree so as to make it conform to the judgment:—Held, that the indement was directed solely to the fact that the bond was assigned as a security only, and that the view taken as to the credits was a ground for so holding, and was not a substantive part of the judgment, and therefore that the declaration as to the credits was manthorized, and should be struck out of the decree mon payment of costs of the application and of all additional costs incurred or to be incurred in the master's office, caused by the decree not having been properly drawn in the first instance. Livingston v. Wood, 29 (r. 157.

Omission — Casts.] — At the hearing the deductant was found answerable to the plaintiff for a breach of duty in respect of shares of steek bought by the plaintiff through his asence, and subsequently the court, on motion, added to the decree a direction that defendant should indemnify the plaintiff against future calls on such stock, but refused costs of the application to either party; to the plaintiff because the relief would have been granted at the hearing if then asked; and to the defendant because he resisted that to which the plaintiff was clearly entitled. Machar v. Vandouate, 26 Gr. 319.

Entry—Petition.]—Where a necessary direction is omitted in a decree, the court will amend it, although the decree has been passed and entered. In such a case the , proper proceeding is by pecition. Moffat v. Hyde, 6 L. J. 94.

Supplemental Order — Costs — Forum.]—Where the decree by oversight contained no direction as to giving up possession, a supplemental order directing it was made, but on payment of costs. A motion for such an order was considered more properly a motion for court than chambers, Mason v. Seney, 2 Ch. Ch. 30.

Practipe Decree—Petition.] — Where a party is dissatisfied with the manner in which the registrar takes the account between the parties and desires to have the decree drawn up by the officer on practipe varied, it is not necessary to rehear the cause: the proper mode is to present a petition to the court for that purpose. Nelles v. Vandyke, 17 Gr. 14.

Striking out Improper Declaration.]—At the hearing a decree was pronounced declaring a deed void to the extent of the interest reserved in favour of the grantor and his wife, and the children of a daughter of the grantor, but in drawing up the decree the deed was declared void as to the children of an intended marriage of the son of the grantor. Under this decree a sale of the trust estate was had at the instance of the plaintiff, a creditor who had flied the bill impeaching the deed as fraudulent. The court, under these circumstances, refused to carry out the sale, and ordered the decree to be corrected, and a new sale had, in which the interests of the children of the marriage should be protected. Thompson v. Dodd, 26 Gr. 381.

Time—Added Party.]—The court has jurisdiction in a proper case to entertain an application by a party served with an office copy of the decree, under the general orders of June, 1853 (No. 6, rule 6), after the expiration of the fourteen days thereby limited. Stewart v. Hunter, 2 Ch. Ch. 265

Acting on — Failure to Disclose Material Facts, 1—A final decree of foreclosure had been obtained in a suit where the true position of parties was not disclosed or material facts had been misrepresented, and a bill was subsequently filed to enforce a claim against the party beneficially interested as plaintiff in that suit. The court refused to make a decree other than would have been proper had the true position of the parties to that suit been stated. Wisson v. Hodgson, 14 Gr. 543.

Consent Decree — Acting on—Neglect to Draw up.]—The plaintiff claimed dower; a decree was made less extensive than she claimed; the master made his report in pursuance of the decree; the solicitor on the same day signed a consent to a decree on further directions being made in certain terms stated in the consent; these terms were in accordance with the decree and report; they provided also that, in lieu of dower, plaintiff should be paid a certain annual sum named; the decree was not drawn up, but the agreement which it embodied was acted on for eight years:—
Held, that the plaintiff was bound by it, and that she could obtain no relief on the ground that the original decree should have been more favourable to her. Sills v. Lang, 17 Gr.

Death of Party.]-It is regular after the death of a defendant to draw up a decree which was previously pronounced. Galbraith v. Armstrong, 1 Ch. Ch. 33.

Declaratory Decree — Consequent Re-lief. |—The court will not make a declaratory decree simply, without directing any relief to the plaintiff. Therefore, where the plaintiff was liable to pay to one W. $2,000 one year after the death of plaintiff's mother, who was alive, and the plaintiff had paid a large portion of such legacy to W., who had made an assignment thereof, the court refused to make any decree declaring the rights of the par-ties, or restraining an assignment of the legacy; the right to recover the legacy being a mere chose in action, any person accepting an assignment thereof took it subject to all an assignment thereof took it subject to all equities, and took it for no more than the amount that was actually due in respect of it. Cogswell v. Sugden, 24 Gr. 474.

Erroneous Decree. |-The court will not assist in carrying on or perpetuating error, by enforcing an erroneous decree, Mitchell v. Strathy, 28 Gr. 80.

Offer Made at Hearing-Embodiment in Decree, |-- Where at the hearing of a suit to enforce a purchase made by a testator, against the trustees under his will, it was made to appear that there were not funds of the estate wherewith to pay the amount of the purchase money due, and the widow of the testator offered to purchase, in her own name, at a price which was considered beneficial for the estate, a direction to that effect was inserted in the decree, in order to avoid the necessity of a petition being presented to the court for that purpose, after the usual decree should have been made. Delisle v. McCaw, 22 Gr.

Summary Decree.] — A plaintiff is not entitled, as of course, to a decree before the time for answering the bill has expired. Some special ground must be shewn to induce the court to grant it. Davidson v. McKillop, 4 Gr. 146.

Time for Proceeding on.] — The four-teen days given to proceed on a decree count from the pronouncing, not the entering. Emes v. Emes, 2 Ch. Ch. 21.

Undisclosed Principal -- Personal Decree.]—Where a purchase was made by a person in his own name, but in reality for the benefit of another, a personal decree against both, for the payment of the purchase money, was held to be correct. Sanderson v. Bur-dett, 18 Gr. 417.

Vacating Decree as against one Defendant—Effect of.] — A decree which had been made against several defendants, one of them. A., being administrator ad litem of the estate of a defendant who had died before answer, was vacated as to the defendant B., and leave was given to him to file a supplemental answer and have a new hearing of the cause. Subsequently C., who had, since the decree and before the appeal, been appointed administra-tor in place of A., who died after decree, applied for leave to file an answer setting up defences which his predecessor had omitted. It was shewn that he had been appointed pro-forma to represent the estate; that no proceedings in appeal had been served upon him: ceedings in appeal had been served upon him; and that no further relief was sought against the estate:—Held, that the vacating of the de-cree as against B., did not, under the circum-stances, open up the decree as against the de-ceased defendant's estate, and that the referee had, therefore, no power to allow C. to file a supplemental answer. Peterkin v. McFarlane, 6 A. R. 254.

VIII. DISPUTING NOTE.

Ex Parte Order to Produce.]—A disputing note is not equivalent to an answer so as to entitle a defendant to obtain ex parte an order to produce. Richardson v. Beaupre, 2 Ch. Ch. 54.

Mistake in Entering—Leave to Answer—Statute of Limitations.]—An application was made to vacate a praceipe decree taken into the master's office, and to allow, instead of a disputing note, an answer to be filed setting up the Statute of Limitations. The application was held to be properly made in chambers, and was granted, it being shewn that the note was filed through the mistake of a solicitor in supposing that the defence of the statute was available under it. Under a note disputing the amount of the plaintiff's claim, filed in a mortgage suit, questions as to the correctness of the account alone can be entered into. The Statute of Limitations cannot be set up as a defence in this way, but must be pleaded. Cattanach v. Urquhart, of P. R. 28.

Statute of Limitations—Arrears of Interest — Taking Accounts.] — Held, reversing the decision in 24 Gr. 457, that it is unnecessary to plead the Statute of Limitations in mortgage suits to prevent the recovery of more than six years' arrears of interest in taking the accounts before the master, as the filing of a disputing note is sufficient, Wright v. Morgan, 1 A. R. 613.

IX. FILING PAPERS.

Affidavit Verifying.]—On a motion for a summary reference, the affidavit verifying the bill must be filed before notice of the motion is served, and referred to by the notice. Crauford v. Wilkinson, 2 Gr. 496.

Bill.]-Where a bill had been filed not complying with the orders, the dates not being expressed in figures, although the bill was printed, and not being in pica type, nor of the usual size, as required by the orders, the service of a copy of it was set aside; the fact of the deputy registrar receiving and filing it not being deemed a bar to the motion. Cossey v. Ducklow, 2 Ch. Ch. 227.

Officer — Ministerial Act — Motion — Appeal.]—When a deputy registrar or other officer, whose duty it is to file papers, receives and files a paper duly presented to him for that purpose, he does a ministerial act, and leaves the regularity of the proceeding on the part of the person presenting the paper to be objected to by any who may have an interest in objecting. Waterous v. Farran, 6 P. R. 31.

An application to the referee impeaching the propriety of the filing is not an appeal or in the nature of an appeal from the deputy registrar, or other officer, so as to deprive the referee of jurisdiction under 34 Vict. c. 10, s. 2 (O.) 1b.

- Irregular Filing.]-A paper mailed or delivered to a deputy registrar or other officer, elsewhere than at his office, to be filed, cannot be treated as a filing; but if he after-wards file the paper in his office, previous irregularities in its delivery to him are, geneally speaking, cured. Hayes v. Shier, 6 P. R.

2. New Hearing.

Absence of Defendant at Hearing-Solicitor's Slip—Merits—Petition—Forum.]
—Where defendant's solicitors, through the neglect of their clerk, were not aware until after the hearing that the cause had been set down or notice of hearing served, and the qued tion raised by the answer was as to defend-ant's liability on a judgment recovered against him by his solicitor, the court allowed a new hearing after the decree was drawn up and entered, on payment of costs. The application for such a purpose should be by petition to the court, and not by motion in chambers, Donovan v. Denison, 2 Ch. Ch. 284.

Surprise-Evidence.]-A defendant knew precisely the question to be tried at the hearing, but took no steps to adduce any evidence ing, but took no steps to adduce any evidence on his behalf, and a witness whom he would have called was called by the plaintiff, and gave evidence which the defendant swore was different from what he had anticipated he would give:—Held, that this was not such a case of surprise as entitled the defendant to have the cause reopened, in order that there might be a new hearing, and a motion made for that purpose was refused with costs, al-though the defendant swore that the evidence given by the witness had taken by the though the defendant swore that the evidence given by the witness had taken him by sur-prise, and that the same was incorrect, and would be contradicted by the wife and son of the defendant. Sherritt v. Beattie, 27 Gr. 492.

3. Notice of Hearing.

Countermand.]—Quære, has a plaintiff a right to countermand a notice of hearing, and if he does so, cannot a defendant proceed with the hearing notwithstanding. Richardson v. Moser, 1 Ch. Ch. 18.

Irregularity-Costs.]-Where a notice of hearing is irregular in form, and the opposite party does not take the objection until the cause is called on, he is not entitled to costs, Stevenson v. Hodder, 15 Gr. 542.

Style of Cause. |- It is sufficient in a notice of hearing to name in full the first plaintiff and first defendant: the words "and another," or "and others," after the name, are sufficient. Stevenson v. Hodder, 15 Gr. 542.

Time—Past Day—Terms—Leave to Renew Motion.]—Where a notice of hearing had been given, and by a mistake in naming the month it was for a day past, the court allowed it to stand, putting the parties on terms as to costs, and changing the venue for the convenience of going to hearing. Scott v. Burnham, 3 Ch. 399.

Where such notice had been moved against before the referee, and the affidavits failed to negative the receipt of any other notice, and the motion consequently was refused, but leave was given to renew it :- Held, that the giving time to renew the motion was an unwise exercise of discretion, and that it was open to the Judge on appeal to ignore or reverse it.

4. Postponement or Adjournment.

Absence of Witnesses-Costs. |-Where a cause is withdrawn on account of the absence of a necessary witness for the plaintiff, and he shews that he has made diligent efforts to secure the attendance of such witness, who is residing within the jurisdiction, but fails to secure it, the costs of putting off the exto secure it, the costs of putting off the examination will, as a general rule, be costs in the cause. In all other cases the costs will be disposed of according to circumstances and in the discretion of the Judge. Pattison v. McNab, 12 Gr. 483.

A motion was granted for postponing the hearing and examination of a cause, on the grounds of the absence of a material witness, after notice of hearing had been given, although the cause had been at issue for some months previous. The costs of such a motion are costs in the cause. Graham v. Machell, 2 Ch. Ch. 376.

It is the practice to make the costs of postponing the hearing of a cause, where sufficient grounds are shewn for such postponement, costs in the cause. The engagements of a witness, who was a senator of the Dominion and a member of the executive council, at his duties at Otuwa, where the senate was in session, were deemed sufficient excuse for not procuring his attendance, and good grounds for putting off the hearing. Rees v. Attorney-General, 2 Ch. Ch. 38-0.

Addition of Parties—Further Evidcue. [—Where after the evidence at the hearing was closed on both sides, the court ordered the cause to stand over to add a party, further evidence between the original parties was held to be inadmissible at the adjourned hearing. Attorney-General v. Toronto Street R. H. & O., 15 Gr. 187.

Delay in Executing Commission.]— Where a commission to take evidence abroad could not be executed in time, by reason of the liness of the commissioner, the plaintiff was allowed further time to set the cause down for examination and hearing. McIntyre y, tanada Co., 2 Ch. Ch. 464.

Further Evidence.]—Where the plaintifies sime on behalf of himself and the other mest of kin of an intestate, alleges in his bill, but does not prove, that the next of kin are too numerous to be made parties by name, that some are resident out of the jurisdiction and others unknown, the court will either allow the cause to stand over to supply this proof, or will direct an inquiry by the master as to the next of kin. Musselman v. Snider, 3 Gr. 158.

Where a cause was brought on to be heard, at the suit of the Attorney-General, for the repeal of a grant of land alleged to have been issued in mistake, and the evidence adduced did not sufficiently establish the mistake, the court directed the cause to stand over to adduce further evidence. Attorney-General v. Garbutt, 5 Gr. 181.

A defendant having by his answer set up several matters of defence, which, through oversight, he had omitted to give evidence of, the court, at the hearing, directed the cause to stand over, with liberty to both parties to give evidence upon those points. Northey v. Moore, 5 Gr. 609.

A held a bond for the conveyance of hotelens, and assigned it absolutely to B., let for the purpose of security only. B. sold the property to C., and C. sold to others. I have been a security merely. A having become hanking a security merely. The hand a security of the control of the c

XII. IRREGULARITY.

Estoppel — Counter-irregularity.] — The fact that a party objecting to an irregularity has himself committed a similar irregularity, which in a measure led to that objected to, does not estop him from taking the objection. Denison v. Denison, 4 C. L. J. 45.

Motion against—Status of Applicants—Parties, —Two defendants moved to set aside a notice of hearing, and to strike the cause out of the list, on the ground that the answer of some co-defendants has been filed without authority from them, and therefore the litigation might be re-opened by them:—Held, that the parties whose nanes were improperly used were the only persons who could move to set aside proceedings who could move to set aside the proceedings. The application was adjourned by the referee before the Judge at the hearing, who ordered the cause to be struck out with costs. Quantz v. Smelzer, 6 P. R.

Strictissimi juris.]—Where a party seeks to set aside a proceeding on technical grounds, his own case will be judged strictissimi juris; and if he move on insufficient materials, he does so at his own risk, and the court will not aid him. The court will not encourage the taking advantage of an error which is obviously a mere slip, and does not mislead, and is not calculated to mislead. Scott v. Burnham, 3 Ch. Ch. 399.

Time.]—A party complaining of an irregularity must come promptly and move against it either within a reasonable time, or the time limited in the order or notice complained of. Thus where a party was directed to pay a certain sum of money within eight days, but did not move against an irregularity in the order for several weeks afterwards:—Held, that he came too late to complain. Milter, v. Milter, v. L. J. 182.

Notice of Motion—Grounds.]—A notice of motion to set aside proceedings on grounds of irregularity, should state the grounds of the alleged irregularity. Poole v. Poole, 2 Ch. Ch. 379.

A notice of motion to set aside any proceeding for irregularity must state the grounds relied on. Donelly v. Jones, 4 Ch. Ch. 48.

Pleading—Taking off Files.]—Held, that where a party files a pleading without serving notice thereof on the opposite party, such pleading may be taken off the files for irregularity with costs. McDougall v. Bell, 9 L. J. 133, not followed. Levis v. Jones, 9 L. J. 150,

It is irregular to move in chambers to take a bill off the files because the prayer is unintelligible. Although the registrar or deputy registrar may have filed a bill not printed in compliance with the orders of court, a motion to take such bill off the files for such non-compliance is regular. Cossey v. Ducklov., 4 C. L. J. 17.

Relieving against.]—The court has jurisdiction to relax its general as well as its special orders, and will in its discretion do so to further the ends of justice so as to relieve a suitor against difficulties occasioned by a solicitor. Declin v. Declin, 3 Ch. Ch. 491.

Waiver—Asking for Time.]—When defendant's solicitor, on asking the solicitor of the plaintiff, a married woman, for further time to answer, handed him the affidavit on which he intended to move, which stated that it would be necessary to apply to have a next friend appointed to the plaintiff before answering, but omitted to call the attention of the plaintiff so solicitor to this statement, who without reading the affidavit indorsed a consent for ten days' further time to answer:—Held, that he had waived his right to object to the bill as being filed by the plaintiff without a next friend. Mallory v. Mallory, 7 P. R. 446.

— Demand.]—Where, after an irregularity of service, the party having the right to insist on it, serves a demand which it would put the other party to expense to fulfil, he waives the irregularity. Carpenter v. City of Hamilton. 2 Ch. Ch. 282.

Tetp in Cause—Notice, 1—Though a party may search the papers filed in a suit, yet unless it is shewn that he has actually seen the pleading complained of as irregular, he may move after the next step in the cause to have it taken off the files, Lewis v. Jones, 9 L. J. 133.

The rule in the court of chancery is similar to that in common law, that a party to a cause who takes a fresh step in the cause after notice of an irregular proceeding on the part of his opponent, thereby waives the irregularity. Manning v. Biretcy, 2 C. L. J. 332.

See Brigham v. Smith, 2 Ch. Ch. 257.

XIII, JUDGE OR REFEREE IN CHAMBERS.

1. Judge.

Adjournment before a Judge. | — When a party moving desires to have his application heard before a Judge, it does not entitle him to have it heard at a future day, but it may be heard at once. Lachlan v. Reynolds, Monk v. Waddell, 2 Ch. Ch. 454.

The court will not encourage the hearing of a motion before a Judge, where the object of doing so is obviously to gain time after it has been refused by the secretary. Ib.

Under order 562 the referee will order such matters only as can regularly be brought on before him in chambers to be heard before a Judge, if he think proper. Lapp v. Lapp, 3 Ch. Ch. 234.

Adjournment into Court.]—A Judge in chambers has a discretion to refuse to adjourn any matter to be heard in court. Walsh v. DeBlaquiere, 12 Gr. 107.

Commission de Lunatico.]—A Judge in chambers granted an application for a commission de lunatico inquirendo; the orders of June, 1853, giving to him authority to act in such a matter. Re Stuart, 4 Gr. 44.

Court Motion — Consent.]—A motion which is strictly and properly a court motion, will not be taken in chambers by the consent of parties. A motion so made in chambers was refused, but without costs. Thompson v. Freeman, 4 Ch. Ch. 1.

Habeas Corpus.]—A Judge sitting in chambers pursuant to the orders of 1853, is authorized to grant a writ of habeas corpus. Re Paton, 4 Gr. 147.

Restriction to Chambers.]—The court held, that whatever applications can, under the new orders, he made in chambers, must he so made. Moffatt v. Ruddle, 4 Gr. 44.

See Dudley v. Berezy, 2 Ch. Ch. 460.

2. Referee or Secretary—Appeal from Decision of.

A party cannot use affidavits not used before the secretary, or make a new case on an appeal; nor will the court entertain a motion to reinstate a bill based on grounds which might have been shewn in resisting a motion to dismiss. A solicitor should not treat with a party to a cause in the absence of the solicitor of such party. Bank of Montreat v. Wilson, 2 Ch. Ch. 11.7.

On an appeal from the referee the case will be confined strictly to that made on the original motion, and only such pleadings or other documents as were then read can be used. The court will inform itself of what these were, and take notice of its own records and proceedings when necessary. When a question arose as to what pleadings had been read on a motion, the court sent for the referee's notes, and was guided by them. Perrin v. Perrin 3, Ch. Ch. 432.

3. Referee—Jurisdiction of.

Appointment of Administrator ad Litem. —A motion under R. S. O. 1877 c. 49, s. 9, to appoint an administrator ad litem of the estate of a deceased person, may be made before the referee, as that section merely extends a jurisdiction already possessed by him under G. O. 56. Collver v. Swayzie, S. P. R.

Directing Reference to Master.]—One II. Inided a bill for redemption, which was dismissed with costs. H. remained in possession, and some time afterwards, in a suit to wind up a partnership, on a motion for an order requiring II. to attorn to the receiver, it was referred to the master to ascertain whether he held as tenant or was in possession as mortgager and still entitled to redeem, and a day appointed for that purpose. On motion before the referee to set aside this order, the referee made an order referring the matter again to the master. On appeal this order was set aside, for the reason that it was not within the jurisdiction of the referee to order a reference to a master to ascertain such a matter, and the original order was also restricted for the same reason. Brown v. Dollard, v. C. L. J. 313, 6 P. R. 113.

Leave to Appeal from Report.] — A motion for leave to appeal from a report after the time has expired, need not be made before a Judge. Russel v. Brucken, 3 Ch. Ch. 488.

Payment into Court.] — The referee in chambers has no jurisdiction to make an order for payment into court by an executor or administrator of amounts admitted by him to be in his hands. Re Curry, Wright v. Curry, Curry v. Curry, 8 P. R. 340.

Reference to Master.] — See Queen v. Smith, 7 P. R. 429, post XIV. 1 (c).

Striking out Interrogatories.] — The referee has no jurisdiction to strike out interrogatories for impertinence. Williams v. Corby, S. P. R. S5.

XIV. MASTERS AND REFERENCES.

1. Appeals from Reports.

(a) Costs of.

The report settled the priorities of incumbrancers as they appeared, without determining whether the prior one had not lost his right in consequence of his conduct, leaving it to the party aggrieved to have the report set right on appeal. The court gave the appellants their costs of appeal. Huntingdon v. Van Brockin, S Gr. 421e.

Where, on an appeal, some objections are allowed with costs and some disallowed with closts, the appellants are entitled to all the costs of the appeal that are exclusively applicable to the objections allowed, and to a share of those costs common to all the objections, according to, not the mere number of the objections as stated in the notice, but to the really distinct grounds of appeal. The same rule applies to the respondent's costs. Bank of Montreal v. Ryan, 13 Gr. 204.

Where an appeal from the report of the master in a foreclosure suit failed on the main point and succeeded only in respect of a small sum, the court gave the respondents the costs of appeal. Brownlee v. Cunningham, 13 Gr. 586.

Where it was considered that the finding was a fit subject for discussion, the court dismissed an appeal without costs. Secord v. Terryberry, 14 Gr. 172.

Where an appeal was dismissed on a ground raised for the first time on the appeal, and not taken in the master's office, the court refused costs. Heward v. Wolfenden, 14 Gr. 188.

The plaintiff appealed from the report of the master, stating eleven objections thereto. On the argument he abandoned one, two were found in his favour, and the remaining eight were decided against him, but they embraced only four distinct questions. Under the circumstances, the court, instead of giving one set of costs to the plaintiff and another to the defendant, directed the costs of the appeal generally to be taxed to the defendants, deducting therefrom one-fourth in respect of the partial success of the plaintiff. Ferguson v. Frontenac, 21 Gr. 188.

Where executors have appealed, infants in the same interest need not appear, and will not be allowed costs if they do. In such a case where they had appeared and contested, the guardian was allowed only an attending fee without brief. McLaren v. Coombs, 2 Ch. Cb, 124.

On petition, an order was made referring it back to the master to tax the costs of each executor of an appeal dismissed with costs, where the master had refused to tax any but the costs of one executor, they having severed in their defence. Stinson v. Martin, 2 Ch. Ch. 86.

(b) Dismissal or Allowance of.

On Questions of Fact.]—Where the evidence before a master is conflicting, his judgment on it is, in general, accepted by the court as correct, and not to be reversed on appeal. Day v. Brown, 18 Gr. 681.

Although the rule is, that the court will not readily interfere with the finding of the master upon a question of fact, and that where there is a balance of evidence causing the determination of questions of fact to be determined altogether on the credit to be given to particular witnesses, it is almost impossible for the court to overrule the decision of the master, still, if the court finds a balance of direct testimony, and the circumstances of the case point strongly against the conclusion at which the master has arrived, there is no reason why the court should not review the evidence and reverse the master's finding. Chard v. Meyers, 19 Gr. 358.

Although the rule is, that if the decision of a question of fact depends altogether on the credit to be given to direct testimony of conflicting witnesses, the court will adopt the finding of the master; still, where the evidence of the mortgagor and mortgagee differed as to an arrangement that a mortgage, which had been satisfied, should be allowed to continue as collateral to notes held by the mortgagee, and the mortgage ded had been allowed to remain in the hands of the mortgage and the mortgage and also retained possession of the title deeds, the court considered these circumstances as strongly confirming the direct evidence of the mortgage, and reversed the decision of the master, who had found against the fact of such an agreement having been made between the parties. Morrison v. Robinson, 19 Gr. 480.

The parties to a cause are entitled, as well on questions of fact as on questions of law, to demand the decision of an appellate court, and that court cannot excuse itself from the task its own inferences and conclusions, though it sown inferences and conclusions, though it will always bear in mind that it has neither seen nor heard the witnesses, and will make due allowance in this respect. Armstrong v. Guac. 25 Gr. 1.

Where the evidence against the plaintiff could at most only raise a case of suspicion, the court overruled the master's finding, the effect of which was to shew the plaintiff guilty of forgery or other criminal offence. Ib.

Although the rule of the court, as stated in Daily v. Brown, 18 Gr., 681, is not to overrule the master upon a question of credibility of evidence, still, where upon a careful examination of the evidence adduced in support of the master's finding, and that in contradiction of it, it was clear that the master had erred in the proper weight to be attributed to the evidence, and it did not appear that he had proceeded on the manner or demenour of the witnesses, the court reversed the finding of the master, although upon a question of fact. Ib.

Circumstances under which the finding of the master upon questions of fact will be reversed. St. John v. Rykert, 4 A. R. 213.

Upon the evidence, the finding of the Judge than 83,000 was advanced by the plaintiff to the defendant upon a mortgage for that amount, instead of 8500 as contended by the defendant, was affirmed, but the master's finding, which the Judge had adopted, that a note for $510 had not been paid, was reversed. Ib.

On a question of rent, there was a conflict of ethere as to the amount thereof. On appeal from the master's finding: — Held, that the witnesses having been examined before the master, he was a better judge than the court as to the weight to be given to the testimony of the respective witnesses; and the question as to the proper sum to be allowed for rent, was one with which the master was quite as competent to deal as the court could be. Little v, Brunker, 28 Gr. 191.

The defendant was the assignee of a policy of assurance on his brother's life, in trust to himself certain moneys and expend the residue in the support and maintenance of the assured's family, and having made further advances on the advice of his brother, who was a practising barrister, he took a second assignment of the policy absolute in form. On the death of the assured, the defendant, asserting a right to obtain payment of the policy, to the head office of the company in the United States, in order to hasten the payment, pending a dispute with the plaintiffs—the family the assured—as to his rights. In taking the accounts between the parties, the master found that the defendant acted bona fide in so doing, and allowed his expenses, although the company, at the instance of the plaintiffs, refused to pay him, and sent the proceeds of the policy to their solicitors in Toronto, to be paid over to the party entitled :-Held, that, as the over to the party entitled:—Held, that, as the defendant was under either assignment entitled to possession of the fund—either as trustee or individually—and as the master, under all the circumstances, thought fit to allow such expenses, and it did not appear clear to the court that such allowance was wrong, the item should be allowed. Held, also, that the master had properly allowed to the defendant in his accounts, from 45% the defendant in his accounts a fee of $10 paid by him to counsel for advice as to his action in respect of the two assignments. Hayes v. Hayes, 29 Gr. 90.

On an appeal from the master on a question of the weight of evidence, the court, though not satisfied as to what was the actual truth of the case, could not say that the master was wrong, and therefore dismissed the appeal with costs; liberty being given to the appellant, however, to examine the witnesses again at the next sittings before the Judge who heard the appeal so as to enable him to dispose of the matter with greater satisfaction to himself, in which case costs would be reserved. McArthur v. Prittic, 29 Gr. 509.

(c) Entertaining of Appeal.

Allowance of Commission and Disbursements.]—Where a master in his discretion fixes the commission to be allowed to parties under G. O. 643, and settles the disbursements in the suit, there is an appeal to a Judge in chambers from his finding. The disbursements should be submitted to the master in ordinary for revision, like other bills of costs. Campbell v. Campbell, 8 P. R. 159.

Cesser of Interest.]-Parties who have no further interest in the matter to which the report relates cannot appeal from it. Thompson v. Luke, 10 Gr. 281.

Findings of no Importance.]-Parties cannot appeal against mistaken findings which are not of practical importance to them, though they may affect other parties inter se. McCargar v. McKinnon, 17 Gr. 525.

Incumbrancer - Priorities.]-Where an incumbrancer, who objected to the order of from the finding of the master, the court considered this the more convenient course, although he might have moved to discharge the master's order. McDonald v. Rodger, 9 Gr.

Question Arising on Further Directions. |- The master by his report found that the executors had paid to some of the children of the testator, all of whom were equally en-titled under the will, different amounts, and to one of them nothing, the estate proving into one of them nothing, the estate proving in-sufficient:—Held, not a ground for appealing from the master's report; but that the ques-tion whether the executors were estopped from denying the sufficiency of the estate to make payment to all the children equally, or make payment to all the children equally, or whether those paid were bound to refund, was one proper to be discussed on further direc-tions. McMillan v. McMillan, 21 Gr. 369.

Regularity of Proceedings in Mas-ter's Office.]—The master overruled certain objections raised before him as to the regu-larity in point of form of certain proceedings in his office. On appeal the court considered that it would have been proper to allow the costs. Sculthorpe v. Burn, 12 Gr. 427.

Report on Reference back.]-Where a party appealed against the master's report, and some of the grounds were allowed and the report referred back to be reviewed:—Held. that an appeal against the further report thereon would not lie for matters disposed of by the first report, and not objected to on the first appeal, Ross v. Perrault, 13 Gr. 206.

Report under Void Order of Reference. The referee has no jurisdiction to make an order under s. 35 of the A. J. Act, 1873, referring it to the master to determine whether a conveyance made by a judgment P. R. 429,

(f) Other Cases.

Account Retaken on Appeal.] - Upon an anneal the court, instead of referring the case back to the master, or directing a re-argu-ment, considering the great delay and expense to which the parties had been already sub-jected, undertook the settlement of the account, and made an order varying the finding of the master to suit the true state of the accounts between the parties, so far as the evidence would enable them to do so. Saunders v. Christie, 7 Gr. 149.

Certificate of Taxation-Motion.]-The proper mode of appealing from the master's certificate of taxation is by motion and not by petition. In re Ponton, 15 Gr. 355.

Correction of Report by Order.] Where the correction to be made in the master's finding is simple, the alteration can be made by the order drawn up on the appeal, without a reference back. Teeter v. St. John, 10 Gr. S5.

Disqualification of Master-Ground of Appeal—Waiver.]—See Cotter v. Cotter, 21 Gr. 159. Exceptions to Report.] — Under the order abolishing exceptions to the master's report, the appellant stands as under the old practice he would have done before the master on bringing in objections, and with that single restriction the whole case is open to him on the appeal. Davidson v, Thirkell, 3 Gr. 330.

Judgment on Appeal—Future Application of, 1—Where the judgment on an appeal from the report enunciates a principle which is applicable to other parties and other points, the master should so apply it in the further prosecution of the reference. Denison v. Denison, 17 Gr. 360.

Motion while Appeal Pending.]—The master's report is prima facie evidence of what it contains, unless appealed from. No motion founded on such report can be entertained while the appeal is unheard. Nichols v. McDonald, 6 Gr. 594.

Next Friend of Married Woman.]— On an appeal against the report of the master by a married woman and her husband, defendants in the suit, it is not necessary that the married woman should have a next friend; such case differing from an application by a married woman alone. Hancock v. McIlroy, 18 Gr. 209.

Notice of Appeal.]—It is not necessary to state in the notice of motion, the points on which the party desires to appeal; provided they appear in the papers filed in support thereof. Romanes v. Herns, 2 Ch. Ch. 363.

Omission from Report — Reference back.] — After the advertisement of sale, it was discovered that the report had omitted to include two items of interest:—Held, that there was no necessity for appointing a new day for payment; and it was referred to the master to take a fresh account of plaintiff's claim, and to amend his report; and leave was given to fix a new upset price and to postpone the sale if necessary. Bessey v. Graham, 9 L. J. S2.

Order on Appeal.]—In an order made on appeal from a master's report, the grounds of appeal should be recited. Downey v. Roaf, 6 P. R. S9.

Parties to Appeal. |—By the report executors were found indebted to the estate, one of whom gave notice of appeal to the plaintiff, but not to the other executor: —Held, irregular. The fact that the interest of the party not served was the same as that of the party appealing, made no difference in respect to his right of being present. Larkin v. Armstrong, 1 Ch. Ch. 31.

2. Jurisdiction of Masters.

The master is bound equally with the court to allow a witness to be cross-examined on

Moon, 6 L. J. 143.

Special Report—Allowance not Directed by Decree.]—The master has no authority to make an allowance not directed by the decree, however reasonable it may appear to him to be. Evidence Admissible.]—See Court v. Holland, Ex parte Holland and Walsh, S P. R. 219.

Executor — Statute of Limitations — Vouching Accounts.]—The executor of an estate, which was small, permitted the widow of the testator to receive the moneys of the estate and expend them in the support of herself and children, and on the eldest son coming of age in 1852 the executor pointed out to him the clause in the will directing a distribution of the personal estate, but the only estate the executor then had was some household furniture. In 1867, the widow having set up a claim for dover, rejecting an annuity provided for the control of the c Insufficient Accounts—Order Nisi—Worant.]—Where, on an application against parties who had been ordered to bring in accounts in a master's office, for an order nisi on the ground that the accounts were insufficient, it appeared that the insufficiency consisted in the items of the accounts being undated, the order nisi was refused. In such a case, before applying for an order nisi, a warrant should be obtained from the master calling on the parties to bring in better accounts. Merkeley v. Casselman, 1 Ch. Ch. 292.

Interest.]—Where a principal was found indehted to his agent, on the taking of accounts, the court in its discretion allowed interest on the amount from the time of filing the declaration, which contained a count for interest, in an action at law brought by the agent, and to restrain which the bill was filed. Ridley v. Sexton, 19 Gr. 146.

Mortgage Suits.]-See Mortgage.

Order in Appeal—Effect of.]—Where a decree directing accounts to be taken in the master's office is afterwards varied on appeal, the master in his subsequent proceedings under such decree is bound to observe the principles enunciated by the order in appeal, although such order does not in terms refer to the party against whom the decree had directed such accounts to be taken. Gübert v. Jurvis, 20 Gr. 478.

Partnership Matters.] — See Partner-

Report—Evidence—Reference back—Further Directions.]—Where both parties had assumed that the evidence before the master, on taking the accounts under the decree, would be before the court on further directions, and had in consequence allowed mutual claims of interest and commission to be submitted by the master to the court, without his setting forth sufficient to enable the court to dispose of them; and the report was, besides, so expressed as to render defendants chargeable with sums for which it did not appear to have been intended to make them liable, the court on further directions referred the case back to the master to review his report. Gould v. Burritt, 11 Gr. 234.

Stated Account.1—A stated account set up in the answer may be insisted on in the maste office, although no evidence was given of its the hearing; being a matter of account which the peteral orders the master has a right of the peteral orders the master has a right of the peteral orders the master has a right of the peter of the

Trustee—Compensation—Keeping Books.]
—The rule of decision in equity which requires that the expenses incurred by a trustee in the execution of his office shall be satisfied before the cestui que trust or his assignee can compel a conveyance of the trust estate, applies to the commission or allowance to a trustee for his care, pains, and trouble under 37 Vict. c. 9 (O.) Life Association of Scotland v, Walker, 24 Gr. 293.

Where, on a reference to a master to take an account of a trustee's dealings with an estate, that officer omitted to ascertain the amount of the trustee's charges, costs, &c., a reference back to ascertain it was directed at the hearing on further directions; and the fact of the master having reported that the trustee had omitted to keep any regular set of books shewing a debtor and creditor account of his dealings with the estate, but not staring that for that reason he had been unable to ascertain the amount, was not considered a sufficient reason for his having omitted to find the amount of such claim. Ib.

(b) Costs.

Disclaimer.]—Where a person who is made a party to a suit in the master's office appears and disclaims, he is not entitled to any costs, as by remaining inactive the same end will be attained. Hatt v. Park, 6 Gr., 553.

Estate—Parties—Further Directions.]—
Where the costs of certain proceedings were allowed by the master against the estate of a deceased person not a party to the suit at any time, without shewing why they were so allowed, the court at the hearing on further directions, notwithstanding that the report had not been appealed from, refused to carry out that portion of the master's finding, and directed the question to be spoken to and additional information furnished to the court. Taylor v, Craven, 10 Gr. 488.

Of the Day-When Granted.]-See Ro McDonnell, 4 Ch. Ch. 69.

Offer.]—Where a defendant would have been entitled to costs up to the hearing, but for an offer which plaintiff made by letter after the answer was filed:—Held, that the circumstances did not entitle the plaintif to have the costs reserved until the taking of the account. Covert v. Bank of Upper Canada, 3 Gr. 246.

Settlement of Conveyance—Infants.]—
Where, in consequence of some of the defendants being infants, a conveyance which might testator's estate. Rodgers v. Rodgers, 2 Ch.

Ch. 241.

Taxation—Two Suits for Same Object.]—Where there were two suits by a solicitor for the same object, the master refused, in one of the two suits, without a special order, to tax as between party and party more than part of the costs, and it appearing that as between solicitor and elient no part of that bill could have been recovered, the court refused to interfere with the taxation. Spence v. Clemow, 15 Gr. 584.

(c) Other Cases.

Advertisement for Creditors—Dispensing with. |—The fact that an intestate whose estate is being partitioned, has been dead for forty-five years does not warrant a master in dispensing with the usual advertisement for creditors. Biggar v. Br. 488.

Allowance not Directed by Decree.]—
The master has no authority to make an allowance not directed by the decree, however reasonable it may appear to him to be. His proper course is to report the circumstances specially, and the party claiming to be entitled can apply to the court on further directions. Feidler v. O'Hara, 2 Ch. Ch. 25c.

Compelling Party to Proceed. —An application to compel a party having the enringe of an order made on an appeal from the master's report to proceed with the inquiry in the master's collice, should be made to the master who is seised of the case, and not to a Judge in chambers. Miller v. McNaughten, 1 Ch. Ch. 2008.

Dower—Mortgage—Special Circumstances—Report—Retiting, —When a bill was filed by a first mortgagee for a sale of the mortgaged premises, there being also a second mortgage, the mortgages wife having barred her dower in the first mortgage, but not in the second mortgage, and the master, on a warrant being taken out after the sale for the purpose of taking accounts, in his report thereon found the widow entitled to dower as against the second mortgagee:—Held, that under G. O. 220 the master had power to entertain the question of dower, and in his final report, report thereon as a "special circumstance," and that the second mortgagee was not entitled to notice that this point would be considered in settling the report. Rove v. Wert, 13 C. L. J. 320.

Evidence.]-On an appeal from the master's report :- Held, that where one defendant obtains an order and examines one of his co-defendants, and the other party to the suit cross-examines such co-defendant, he is thereby made a good witness in the cause. 2 That where evidence affecting the amount represented as due under the second mortgage, is taken in the absence of the personal repre sentative of the mortgagee, it cannot be read against the equitable holder of such mortgage. although such equitable holder was a party to the suit when the evidence was taken, and cross-examined the co-defendant whose evidence affected the mortgage. Grimshaw v. Parks, 6 L. J. 142.

Ex Parte Proceedings.]—Although proceedings in the master's office may, under the general order, be taken ex parte against a defendant who has allowed a bill to be taken pro confesso against him, that mode of proceeding is irregular where an administration order has been obtained upon notice without bill filed. In re Pattison, Jackson v. Matthews, 12 Gr. 47.

Leave to Prove Claim—Costs.]—A creditor who, through a missake, had not come into the master's office to prove his claim, was allowed to do so upon payment of costs of and subsequent to the report, including costs of application—the master's report not having the enconfirmed. Cotton v. VanSittart, 9 C. L. J. 212.

Motion for.]—Where an incumbrancer has neglected to appear in the master's office to prove his claim within the propertime, and applies to the court for leave to come in, the application is more properly made on notice of motion than by petition. Anon., I Ch. Ch. 292.

Notice to Parties—Warrant.]—In proceeding upon a decree pro confesso, the master should exercise a discretion in requiring notice to be given to defendants of such proceedings, or dispensing with notice. As a general rule the defendant should have notice, although it may be that it is not requisite to serve him with all warrants issued by the master. Robinson v. Whitemb, 20 Gr. 415.

Parties-Relief - Discovery - Witness.] -In proceeding upon a reference under a de cree, the master cannot under general orders 244, 245, order a person to be made a party to the suit against whom any relief is sought; and where in proceeding under a decree for the administration of a testator's estate, the master directed one D., who had been in partnership with the testator up to the time of his death, to be made a party, and requiring him with the executors to bring in under oath an account of the partnership dealings, against which D. appealed :- Held, that the object of making D, a party was for the purpose either of relief or discovery, and in either view the plaintiff could not obtain it in this mode of proceeding, as D., so far as discovery was concerned, could only be regarded as a witness. Hopper v. Harrison, 28 Gr. 22.

Proceeding de Die in Diem.]—It is the bounden duty of masters to observe to the letter the general orders of the court requiring references to be proceeded with in their offices de die in diem. Falls v. Powell, 20 Gr. 454.

Solicitor—Contempt.]—Improper conduct by solicitors in master's office:—Held, a contempt of court. Nicholls v. McDonald, 4 L. J. 259

Staying Proceedings pending Appeal. |-See Butler v. Standard Fire Ins. Co., 8 P. R. 41.

Transmission of Papers—Precipe, |-| It is not necessary to obtain an order for the transmission to a local master by the master in Toronto of papers brought into his office, as the master will do so upon the praceps of the party requiring the papers to be transmitted. Alchin, v. Bufflad, 1 Ch. Ch. 24.

Vacation.]—It is irregular to proceed with references, unless by consent, during the long vacation. Anderson v. Thorpe, 12 Gr. 542.

proceedings will be set aside, and the benefit of them refused to the parties so irregularly proceeding. Denison v. Denison, 3 Ch. Ch.

Where a warrant was underwritten, "to settle advertisement for sale of the balance of the unconverted assets of the estate," and without further warrant the accountant directed that an offer for certain bonds of the estate be accepted, and the purchaser, a party interested under the will, made a profit on such purchase—the master, upon the question being submitted to him, declared such profits of the sale to belong to the general estate. Ib.

4. Reference.

(a) In What Cases Ordered,

Damages — Injunction — Undertaking — Discretion.]—Where a plaintiff, on obtaining an injunction, enters into the usual undertaking to abide by such order as the court may make as to damages, it is in the discretion of the court to grant or refuse a reference as such damages where the injunction is afterwards not continued, or is dissolved. Where, therefore, a person in the employment of the court of a machine for which a patent had been granted, surreptitionsly obtained such a knowledge thereof as enabled him to construct a similar machine for the defendant, the court, although unable to continue the injunction in consequence of the invalidity of the patent, residued the defendant a reference as to damages, he having availed himself of the knowledge the whying availed himself of the knowledge which in gavailed himself of the knowledge which in gavailed himself of the some properly obtained. Meast v. Coppin, 21 Gr. 253.

For Information of Court.]—When plaintiffs and defendants mutually leave particulars in the dark which it is necessary the court should be informed of, a reference on these points will be made to the master. Bethane v. Caulcutt, 1 Gr. Sl.

Preliminary Reference—Ascertainment of liter.—Where a bill was filed to obtain the opinion of the court as to the validity of certain bequests in a will, and the heirship of one of the defendants, who claimed to be lear and next of kin, was not admitted by other defendants, who claimed the bequests, a preliminary reference was directed to the master to inquire who was heir and next of kin; and further directions and costs were reserved. Ebusley v. Madden, 11 Gr. 232.

Summary Reference—Injunction.]—Under the 77th order of May, 1850, the court would decree a reference without prejudice to an injunction previously obtained. Prentiss v. Braman, 1 Gr. 434.

Practice.]—The practice directed to be pursued by the 48th order of May, 1850, does not apply when the cause has been summarily referred under the 77th order. Wellbanks v. Feran, 3 Gr. 643.

aminst a trustee.]—Where a bill was filed a trustee and executor for an account, and the bill also sought to have the trustee removed for misconduct, the court refused an order for a summary reference to the master. Christie v. Sanders, 2 Gr. 395.

Trial of Issues of Fact—Election.]— Where a receiver of partnership property had been appointed, and certain chattels had been seized under a sequestration against the defendant for contempt of the injunction, and the chattels so seized were alleged to be the property of the defendant and his co-partner, but it appeared that third presons claimed an interest therein—the plaintiff having moved to sell this property, a reference was directed on such motion (on which the claimants had appeared), to inquire as to their interests, and any further order on the motion was reserved, the parties to the motion electing to have a reference instead of issues to try the questions in dispute. Prentiss v. Brennan, Ro Brennan, 2 Gr. 274.

Trial of Issue Raised by Pleadings—Tolls.]—Where a question is directly raised by the pleadings, and is distinctly presented to the court for its decision, and evidence has been given upon it in order to obtain the judgment of the court, it will not be referred to the master for his decision; and in this case it was not proper to refer to the master the inquiry as to the reasonableness of the tolls charged. International Bridge Co., v. Canada Southern R. W. Co., v. International Bridge Co., 7 A. R. 226, See S. C., S. App. Cas. 723.

(b) Place of Reference and Person of Referee.

Adding Master as Party.]—Where it becomes necessary in the course of a suit to add as a defendant the master to whom the cause stands referred, a change of reference will be made on the exparte application of the plaintiff. Weldon v. Templeton, 1 Ch. Ch. 369.

Damages—Issue of Fi, Fa, at Law—Reference to Officer in Chancery, 1—Proceedings under a fi, fa, at law having been set aside, and an action brought against the master in whose name the fi, fa, had been sued out, an injunction was issued restraining proceedings;—Held, that the application for an injunction in the original cause in the court of chancery was regular; and that the officer of that court was the proper person to whom should be referred the question as to the amount of damage sustained by reason of the proceedings which had been set aside. Fisher v. Glass, 9 Gr. 46.

Disqualification — Previous Opinion — Mistrust.]—A master of the court, while in practice at the bar, had given an opinion upon the construction of a will, with a view to a settlement, at the request of the plaintiff in this suit, and both on behalf of the plaintiff in this suit, and both on behalf of the plaintiff himself and on behalf of all the other persons interested under the will. A settlement not having been arrived at, this suit was instituted for partition, and in the suit the construction of the will was declared by the court, which construction was more favourable to the defendant J. B. than that contained in the opinion of the master. The decree ordered a reference to the master to make partition among the parties in proportions specified. A motion was thereupon made by J. B. for the removal of the reference from before the master, on account of his having given an opinion in the case as above stated. The application was opposed by all the other parties interested, except one, but was granted, on the ground that the administration of justice should be above suspicion, and should not be exposed even to groundless mistrust. Bigelow v. Bigelow, 6 P. R. 124.

— Waiver—Appeal.]—Where a reference was made to a local master who had, prior to his appointment, because of one of the higants, neither party objecting to his taking the reference, and the master certifying that he acted in the reference at the pressing instance of both parties, the court held that the other party, against whom the master reported, could not raise that objection on an appeal from the report, having taken the chance of the master finding in his favour. Cotter v. Cotter, 21 Gr. 159.

Place of Reference.]—The plaintiff has primā facie a right to have the reference directed to the master resident in the county wherein the bill is filed. Macara v. Gwynne, 3 Gr. 310.

The plaintiff has, in the absence of any expression of the court, a right to take the reference to the place where the bill was filed. Watson v. Henderson, 2 Ch. Ch. 53, 70. See McNab v. McInnis, 4 Ch. Ch. 53, infra.

— Change of J.—Upon an application by a defendant to change a reference, upon the analogy of applications at common law to change venue, the balance of convenience in favour of the change must be great and obvious, must be made to appear upon the affidavits, and upon a consideration of the plaintiff's as well as the defendant's witnesses and costs. Jackson v. Harriman, 9 C. I. J. 29.

In an administration suit, after delay on plaintiff's part, the conduct of the reference was given to a solicitor representing certain creditors of the estate. The plaintiff's solicitor, with the consent of defendant's solicitor, but without notice to the solicitor of the creditors, or informing the court that such solicitor had the conduct of the reference, applied in chambers, and obtained an order to change the reference from Goderich to Stratford. Such order was on application set aside with costs. McConnell v. McConnell, 3 Ch. Ch. 122.

A plaintiff is entitled primâ facie to have the reference to the master who resides in the county in which the bill is filed; but this primâ facie right may be rebutted by shewing sufficient grounds for the court directing the reference to the master at some other place. McVab v McInnis, 4 Ch. Ch. 53. Where an application of this kind is rested on the ground of express the difference in

Where an application of this kind is rested on the ground of expense, the difference in expense must in general be considerable; and where the application is rested on the ground of convenience, a slight or doubtful balance of convenience is not sufficient to deprive the plaintiff of his primă facie right; a reasonably clear case of preponderating convenience must be established by defendant. It.

plaintiff of his primâ facie right; a reasonably clear case of preponderating convenience must be established by defendant. Ib.

A man in extensive business, or a trustee, is not entitled, when a defendant, to have the reference to such place as suits him best, if there is no other strong ground for the change from the place selected by plaintiff. Ib.

Practising Solicitor—Partnership.]—Local masters and deputy registrars of the court are not at liberty to practise in partnership with solicitors practising in the court of chancery, although they may not actually share in the emolument of suits. McLean v. Cross, 3 Ch. Ch. 432.

5. Report.

(a) Amendment.

When the correction to be made in the master's finding is simple, a reference back to him for that purpose need not be directed; the necessary alteration can be made by the order drawn up on the appeal. Tecter v. St. John, 10 Gr. S5.

The court will, at almost any stage of a cause, make a special order for the correction of slips in a master's report. Morley v. Matthews, 12 Gr. 453.

In taking an account of mortgage money and interest, the master computed interest up to the 19th March, but by some error in his report the money was appointed to be paid on the 19th January. Upon plaintiff's application ex parte, this was corrected. White v. Courtney, 1 Ch. Ch. 11.

After advertisement for sale it was discovered that the report had omitted to include two items of interest:—Held, there was no necessity for appointing a new day for payment, and it was referred to the master to take a fresh account of plaintiff's claim, and to amend his report, and leave was given to fix a new upset price and to postpone the sale if necessary. Bessey v, Graham, 9 L. J. S2.

A clerical error in a master's report will be amended. Watson v. Moore, 1 Ch. Ch. 266,

A motion to correct such error should be on notice, unless on consent, Simpson v. Ottawa, 2 Ch. Ch. 12.

See Crooks v. Street, 1 Ch. Ch. 78, post (d).

(b) Confirmation and Filing.

Where the plaintiff had proceeded under the 75th order, and had obtained a decree proconfesso and the master's report—all the proceedings taken in the master's office having been ex parte and without any notice served on the defendant—the court refused to confirm the master's report absolutely in the lirst instance, notwithstanding that it had been the constant practice of the court to do so even since the making of the order referred to. Buckanan v. Tiffann, 1 Gr. 98.

See, to the same effect, Walsh v. Bourke, ib. 105, which decision was afterwards approved on appeal in Hawkins v. Jarvis, 1 Gr. 257, 1 E. & A. 246.

Such reports as are from their nature final, do not require to be filed fourteen days before proceedings may be taken on them. In re Yaggie, 7 L. J. 293.

The report must be filed before the day appointed for payment. Mills v. Dixon, 2 Ch. 53.

A report requiring confirmation does not become absolute until thirty days from the making and fourteen days from the filing thereof have clapsed. Re Eaton, Byers v. Woodburn, S. P. R. 289.

Where a decree ordered payment forthwith after the making of a report, an execution issued before the report had been filed, was set aside with costs. Semble, the report did not aside with costs. Semble, the report did not require confirmation, under the wording of the decree. Jellett v. Anderson, S P. R. 387.

(c) Form of.

Default—Absence of Finding.]—Under a decree for account, it is the duty of the master to ind whether a defendant is, or is not, chargeable as for wilful default, if the question arises, without any direction in the decree to that effect. Where, therefore, a master reported only that rents and profits had come to porceasing that rems and promising come to the hands of the defendant, and after stating a number of facts submitted to the court whether he should or should not be charged, the matter was referred back to him to complete his report. It is not competent to a master to abstain from deciding any question properly coming before him for his decision.

Walmsley v. Bull, 2 Ch. Ch. 344.

Incumbrancer — Priority — Finding.]— Where the master is directed to inquire as to incumbrances, and there is a dispute between two or more persons as to who are entitled to one of the incumbrances, it may, according to circumstances, be his duty to decide the question himself, or to report the incumbrance, question himself, or to report the maintaining its priority as respects other incumbrances, and the dispute between the claimants, so that the court may give proper directions for determining the question. McDonald v. Wright, 12

Legacies - Interest - Payments on Ac. count.]—Where it appears by the will of a testator that the legacies are payable with interest, and the order in which they are payable, it is not necessary for the master to state those facts in his report; but he should state whether any payments have been made on them. Clouster v. McLean, 10 Gr. 576.

Moneys Received-Default-Costs.]-In order to enable the court better to deal with the question of costs, on further directions, the masters should in their reports distinguish between sums received and sums which, but for wilful neglect and default, might have been received, by the parties chargeable therewith. Moodie v. Leslie, 12 Gr. 537.

Reasons - Results - Evidence - Verbosity. - Where a decree directs a master to state where a decree directs a master to state his reasons, they should be stated briefly. Mctargar v. McKinnon, 15 Gr. 361.

A report, like a decree in equity, or the entry of a judgment at law, should state results only, and should not set forth the evidence, arguments, or reasons on which the conclusions are arrived at. Ib.

Masters are bound to see that their reports are not of unnecessary length. S. C., 17 Gr.

It is inconvenient and objectionable for a master to set forth the evidence in his report, instead of adjudicating thereon. Sovereign v. Sorereign, 15 Gr. 559.

Title—Objections.]—Where a reference is made as to title, and objections are brought in thereto, the master should not report either for or against the title; his proper course is to mark each objection "allowed" or "disallowed," as the case may be. Cockenour v. Bullock, 12 Gr. 73.

(d) Other Cases.

Certificate after Report.] - After the closing of his report, a master should not certify as to any matters before him in the certify as to any matters before an in the course of the inquiry upon which he has reported, unless called upon to do so by the court. After report, any certificate, unless called for by the court, is irregular and improper. Rosebatch v. Parry, 27 Gr. 193.

-Revision of Costs.] - A Dating Reportocal master in making his report is not at liberty to date it until the costs taxed by himself have been finally revised and settled by the master in ordinary under the general orders. Waddell v. McColl, 14 Gr. 211.

Evidence of Contents.] - The master's report is prima facie evidence of what it contains, unless appealed from. No motion founded on such report can be entertained while the appeal is unheard. Nichols v. McDonald, 6 Gr. 594.

Reference of Report back — Further Evidence.]—Where a reference back to review the report is directed, the master is, as of course, at liberty to receive further evidence. Morley v. Matthews, 12 Gr. 453. Where the court on a reference back does not mean that the master shall take further evidence, the order contains a direction to that effect, unless the reference back is expressed to be for a purpose on which further evidence could not be material. Ib.

Scope of Report.] - Held, that, as the matter in question upon a petition to amend the decree had been referred to the master by the decree and been reterred to the master beformance, it should have been disposed of in his office under G. O. 226. Stammers v. O'Donohoe, 29 Gr. 64.

Special Report - Powers of Master Costs. — The master, at the request of the defendant, reported specially in his favour as to many matters not particularly referred to him, but which formed the subject of charges of fraud made in the bill of complaint:—Held, that the master had power to report specially any matters he deemed proper for the infor-mation of the court, and that it was his duty to so report any matter bearing on the ques-tion of costs. Hayes, v. Hayes, 29 Gr. 90.

Subsequent Report-Correction of Former Report.]—Where the master, in taking an account under decree on further directions, finds he has made a mistake in taking the accounts under the original decree, he is not at liberty to correct such mistake by his subsequent report; and where this had been done: quent report; and where this had been done; —Held, that the master exceeded his jurisdiction, and that the objection being apparent on the face of the report, the objecting party was not driven to appeal. Crooks v. Street, 1 Ch.

Vacation—Nullity—Notice.]—A master's report made during long vacation in contravention of G. O. 425, is, as against a defendant having no notice of the proceedings on which the report is founded, entirely null and void. Fuller v. McLean, 8 P. R. 549.

Void Order of Reference — Report under.] — See Queen v. Smith, 7 P. R. 429; Brown v. Dollard, 6 P. R. 113.

Warrant — Certificate of Default.] — A master's certificate of default should follow as nearly as possible the accustomed form, and where it does not it will be assumed that the master means to report specially. Sutherland v. Rogers, 2 Ch. Ch. 191.

XV. MOTIONS.

1. Affidavits for Use on.

In Answer—Enlargement.]—An affidavit, in answer to affidavits filed in reply, filed after an enlargement of the motion, was held regularly filed, and allowed to be read, the court offering to give the other party time to reply to it, if he required to do so. Dewar v. Orr, Dewar v. Sparling, 3 Ch. Ch. 224.

New Affidavits on Appeal.! — A party cannot use affidavits not used before the secretary, or make a new case, on appeal from the secretary's order. Bank of Montreal v. Wilson, 2 Ch. Ch. 117.

Office Copies of — Demand—Costs.]—If office copies of a flidavits are demanded, the parties filing the affidavits must furnish then; and the costs of any delay occasioned by his not doing so falls on the party in default. Burrotes v. Hainey, 2 Ch. Ch. 186.

Scandal—Application to Take off Files.]
—Held, that an application for leave to take off the files of the court, or refer to the master, an affidavit for scandal as to the plaintiff, may be made by motion, without the special leave of the court. Semble, also, that such an application might be also made against the clerk of the defendant's solicitor who swore to the affidavit. Saddier v. Smith, 7 P. R. 409.

Swearing—Partner of Affiant.]—A., B., and C. were partners, doing business as solicitors in chancery, A. B., and D. were partners, doing business as attorneys at common law. An affidavit tendered by C. on an application in chancery, was rejected, it having been sworn before D. Dunn v. McLean, 6 P. R. 95.

See post 2 (c).

2. Notice of Motion.

(a) Costs.

Where after a notice of motion, under the 3d order of May, 1850, is served, and before the motion day, the answer is filed, the plaintiff is entitled to his costs of the motion. Anon., 1 Gr. 423.

Costs of motion may be given, though not asked for by the notice. Sanders v. Christie, 1 Gr. 137.

A party upon whom a notice of motion has been served is not precluded from appearing on the return day and claiming his costs of an abandoned motion, notwithstanding notice of countermand served, unless the party serving the notice or countermand offers, at the time of service, to pay any costs the other may have incurred in preparing to answer the motion. Ross v. Robertson, 2 C. L. J. 331.

When a party unnecessarily served with a notice of motion appears thereon, he will be allowed his costs. Robertson v. Grant, 3 Ch. Ch. 331.

Leave to Prove Claim.]—Where an incumbrancer has neglected to appear in the master's office to prove his claim within the proper time therefor, and applies to the court for leave to come in, the application is more properly made by notice of motion than by petition. Anom., 1 Ch. Ch. 292.

Leave to Read Deposition.]—A motion to read the deposition taken in another cause between other parties must be made on notice. A motion for such an order made ex parte was refused. Dunlop v. Corporation of York, 2 Ch. Ch. 417.

(c) Reference to Affidavits.

Affidavits cannot be used on a motion, where no intention to read affidavits thereon is mentioned in the notice of motion. Farish v. Martyn, 1 Gr. 300,

In giving notice of motion and that the party moving will read certain affidavits, if the same are filed at any time before the date of the notice, the notice must state the day of the filing thereof, otherwise the affidavits cannot be used on the motion. Fraser v. Fraser, 13 Gr. 183.

Where an affidavit refers to a document, and notice of reading such affidavit is given, the document (in this case the indorsement on the office copy of a bill) may be read without special reference to it in the notice. Johnson v. Ashbridge, 2 Ch. Ch. 251.

A notice of motion referring to an affidavit should state the day on which it was filed. McMartin v. Dartnell, 2 Ch. Ch. 322.

(d) Return Day.

Where a notice of motion had been given for Good Friday, the court refused to entertain the motion at the next sitting. Fitzgerald v. Phillips, 3 Gr. 535.

A notice of motion given for a day which is not a regular court day, unless leave of the court be obtained for that purpose, is a void proceeding, and the party served need not attend thereon. Stevenson v. Huffman, 4 Gr. 318.

Where an injunction is granted to a particular day, which is not a motion day, and the writ is served, together with a notice of motion for that day to extend the injunction, the notice is not irregular, though it omit to mention that such notice is given by leave of the court. Johnson v. Cass, 11 Gr. 117.

(e) Service of.

Irregularity — Waiver—Appearance for Costs. —A party appearing to ask costs on a notice irregularly served does not thereby waive the irregularity. Fisken v. Smith, 3 Ch. Ch. 74.

Publication.]—Leave may be obtained to serve by publication a notice of motion to confirm a decree or substitute a new decree. Mo-Taggart v. Merrill, 7 P. R. 405.

Residence of Party.]—The service on a grown up person must be at defendant's residence, and such person served must be a resident there. Elliott v. Beard, 2 Ch. Ch. 80.

Short Notice — Service abroad.] — The court will, in a proper case, grant leave to serve short notice of motion out of the jurisdiction. In re Babcock, Moore v. Gould, 1 Ch. Ch. 233.

Solicitor's Agent.]—D., a country solicitor, employed MeN. and H, as his booked chancery agents in Toronto; H, being the one who conducted the chancery business of the firm. MeN. and H, dissolved partnership:—Held, that a notice served upon a clerk in the office of MeN., after the dissolution, was not a good service upon D. Hind v. Little, 1 Ch. Ch. 355.

Time—Computation.]—There must be two clear days between the service of a notice and the day for hearing the motion, and in the computation thereof Sunday is not to be reckoned. Sprague v. Henderson, 1 Ch. Ch. 213, overalled. In re Crooks, 1 Ch. Ch. 304.

Where notice of motion had been given of an application to commit for not bringing in accounts in the master's office, and four days intervened between the service and the motion, one of which was Good Friday, during which the master's office had been closed, the secretary refused the application without costs. Wilson v. Gould, 2 Ch. Ch. 236.

— Hour of Day—Admission.]—Where a notice of motion was served after four o'clock, and service was admitted as of that day, no objection having been taken until the motion was made in chambers:—Held, that the admission of service precluded the party served from raising the objection. Held, also, that when the motion is for a better affidavit on production, two days notice is sufficient. Alexander v. Watson, 13 C. L. J. 224.

(f) Other Cases.

Amendment.]—An amendment was allowed in a notice of motion for a summary administration order, where an unimportant mistake had been made in the name of the deceased, which had misled no one, and the right person had been served; and an enlargement on account of such amendment was refused. Re Fraser, Fraser v. Fraser, 2 Ch. Ch. 457.

For Alternative Order,] — When in a notice of motion an order is applied for in the alternative, in the following words, "for such other order as shall seen just," the court will not make an order specifically distinct from that asked for. Graham v. Chalmers, 2 C. I. J. 293.

Indorsement.]—A notice of motion need not be indorsed with the name and address of the party taking the proceeding. Campbell v. Tucker, 7 P. R. 135.

Misdescription in.] — The next friend was termed a plaintiff in the notice of motion:—Held, that the misdescription was not such as to mislead, and that therefore the motion ought not to fail upon that ground. Van-Winkle v. Chaplin, 3 C. L. J. 44.

Recital—Leave—Judge,]—It is no objection to a motion made by leave of a Judge that the name of the Judge granting leave is not given in the notice of motion. Lindsay Petroleum Co. v. Hurd, 2 Ch. Ch. 387.

See, also, Harris v. Myers, 16 Gr. 117.

3. Other Cases.

Costs of Former Motion Unpaid.]— Non-payment of the untaxed costs of an unsuccessful application in a former suit is no bar to a motion for a like purpose in another suit between the same parties. Eric and Niagara R. W. Co. v. Galt. 15 Gr. 507.

Where an application has been refused with costs, and a motion is made for leave to make a new application of the same nature on further evidence, the new evidence must be produced, and the costs of the former application paid. Anon., 1 Ch. Ch. 196.

Enlargement to Sustain Motion.] — Where a party moving is not in a position to sustain his motion, the court will not grant an enlargement so as to enable him to place himself in a position to sustain it; the motion must lapse. Ruttan v. Smith, 1 Ch., Ch. 286.

Wrong Forum—Costs.]—Where a party moves in court for what should properly be moved for in chambers, the court will not allow the party so moving any costs of the application, even if the motion be granted. Murney v. Courtney, 10 Gr. 52.

XVI. ORDERS.

(See also ante VI., VII.)

1. Appeal from.

Chambers — Intituling.]—An order by a Judge on an appeal from an order of the secretary is a chambers order, and if costs or further directions are reserved, they should be disposed of before a Judge in chambers, and the order made thereon intituled "In chambers." Dudley v. Berczy, 2 Ch. Ch. 460.

Discretion.]—Where a Judge in chambers grants or refuses an application in a matter purely within his discretion, the court will not entertain an appeal from his judgment. Scoble v. Henson, 9 L. J. 131; Chard v. Meyers, 3 Ch. Ch. 120.

Issue of—Necessity for.]—Before an appeal will lie from the secretary's decision, the order thereon must be drawn up and entered. Gibb v. Murphy, 2 Ch. Ch. 132.

Material on.]—A party cannot use affidavits not used before the secretary, or make a new case on an appeal. Nor will the court entertain a motion to reinstate a bill based on grounds which might have been shewn in resisting a motion to dismiss Bank of Montreal v. Wilson, 2 Ch. Ch. 117.

Setting down — Wrong Day,] — An appeal from an order made in chambers was set down to be heard for a day falling within the time appointed for examination and hearing term:—Held, irregular, and the case was struck out of the naper with costs, Armstrong v. Cauley, 13 Gr. 558.

Stay of Proceedings.]—A defendant appealed from an order directing his committal for breach of an injunction, and moved this court to stay proceedings under the order, pending the appeal, which was refused. Gamble v, Howland, 3 Gr. 281.

An application to stay proceedings pending an appeal from an order overruling a demurrer, is in the discretion of the court. McMurray v. Grand Trunk R. W. Co., 3 Ch. Ch. 125. Where allowing plaintiff to proceed would

Where allowing plaintiff to proceed would so prejudice the defendant as virtually to defeat the appeal, proceedings will be stayed; but where defendant fails to shew that he would be prejudiced, a stay will be refused. Ih

In a case where the stay moved for was refused, the court ordered that any answer put in should be without prejudice to the appeal from the order overruling the demurrer. Ib.

A motion to stay proceedings pending an appeal may be made before filing a petition of appeal. But the applicant for a stay must be in a position to appeal. When, therefore, the appeal was from an interlocutory order, and it had become too late to give notice and get in his appeal within six months, the application was refused. Brigham v. Smith, 3 Ch. Ch. 313.

Time for. |—A motion by way of appeal from an order made in chambers, must be actually made within the fourteen days limited by the consolidated orders, and it is not sufficient to give the notice within the fourteen days. Aliter, in the case of an appeal from the master's report. Jackson v. Gardner, 15 Gr. 425; 8. C., 2 Ch. Ch. 385.

The fourteen days count from the entering of the order, not from its date. Harvey v. Boomer, 3 Ch. Ch. 11.

2. Consent Orders.

Evidence as to Execution of Consent.]—Where, on an application for an order, a consent of a party to the cause is produced as a ground for making the order, it must be shewn that the effect of signing such consent was explained to the party, and was understood by him. Trueman v. Pect School Trustees, 1 Ch. Ch. 256.

Where an order is moved for on the consent of parties in person, the consent must, as a general rule, be executed in the presence of a solicitor; and an affidavit from such solicitor must be produced verifying the execution and shewing that he read over and explained the consent to the parties before they signed it, and that they understood, or that the deponent believes they understood, its meaning and effect. Thornton v. Hooke, 1 Ch. Ch.

Relief against Consent — Terms — Forum,—In a partition suit, a gentleman who was not a solicitor, nor a clerk of any solicitor in the cause, was employed by defondant's solicitor to attend to the case for defendant, and gave a consent in good faith, but inconsiderately, and without the knowledge or authority of, or communication with, the defendant or his solicitor, to a mode of partition suggested by the opposite party:—Held, that the consent might be relieved against on terms, it not appearing that the plaintiff would thereby be prejudiced, Held, also, that an application for relief against the consent, and to set aside the report, was properly made in chambers, and not in court. Rolfe v. Coote, I Ch. Ch. 308.

Relief against Consent by Solicitor.]—Ordinarily the client is bound by any consent or arrangement which his solicitor in good faith enters into with a view to the client's benefit, although without instructions or consultation. But in an extraordinary case a client might be relieved. Bailey v. Bailey, 2 Ch. Ch. 58.

See Thompson v. Freeman, 4 Ch. Ch. 1.

3. Ex Parte Orders.

Application for—Objection.]—On an exparte application for an order the court will not listen to any objections from the other side. Henry v. Mcheoten, 1 Ch. Ch. 264.

Direction to Execute Deed.]—An application for an order to compel a party to execute a deed directed to be executed, should be on notice, and will not be granted ex parte. Westmacot v. Cockerline, 2 Ch. Ch. 442.

Entry.]—An ex parte order will not be set aside because it is not entered. McEwan v. Orde, 2 Ch. Ch. 278.

General Rule.]—The court does not favour the granting of ex parte orders, except where the practice clearly authorizes them. Stewart v. Richardson, 2 Ch. Ch. 443.

Court will not grant an order on an exparte application, unless the practice distinctly authorizes it. An application for payment out of redemption money in court was refused. Totten v. McIntyre, 2 Ch. Ch. 462.

Limiting Time for Act.]-Where an order to do a certain act does not limit the time therefor, an order for that purpose will be granted ex parte. Form of such order. Mchay v. Reed, 1 Ch. Ch. 196.

Office Copy of Answer.]—An application to compel defendant's solicitor to deliver an office copy of the answer was refused, because made ex parte. Stewart v. Richardson, 2 Ch. Ch. 443.

See Dunlop v. Corporation of York, 2 Ch. Ch. 417.

4. Other Cases,

Alternative Order.] — See Graham v. Chalmers, 2 C. L. J. 269, ante 2 (f).

Irregular Order.]—If an order is complimed of as irregular, it is not competent to the opposite party to move to amend or alter if. His course is to move to set it aside, and this must be done within the time limited by the orders regulating the practice. Brigham v, Smith, 2 Ch. Ch. 257.

Mistake—Costs—Supplementary Order.]—Held, where costs of interlocutory motions were reserved "until the hearing or other final dissociation of the cause." and on a denurrer being allowed, the order drawn up directed plaintiff to pay the costs thereof, "together with the further costs of this cause," forthwith after taxation thereof."—that, whether or not such interlocutory costs would fall within the definition of further costs in the cause, the omission to provide for them in the order allowing the demurrer was "a mere mistake;" and that under the general order 18t the parties had a right to apply without liberty for that purpose being reserved. Viney v. Chaplin, 3 DeG, & J. 281, considered and acted on. 8t. Michael's College v. Morrick, 26 Gr. 216.

Praccipe Orders — Place for.]—Where the bill is filed in an outer office, the order for production and other orders of course are properly obtainable at such office and not from the registrar. Dougall v. Wilburn, 1 Ch. Ch.

Re-opening Order.]—As a general rule, where a person having received notice of a motion does not attend upon it, the order made thereon should not be interfered with. But where a party who had so neglected to attend, came in twenty-four hours after to repen the matter, it was considered that he was entitled to be heard to shew that the order made was one which it was not proper to make. Price v, Bailey, 6 P. R. 250.

Service—Enforcing Obedience.] — Where the order limits a time to do an act, the order must be served before the time limited has expired, otherwise the party required to do the net will not be committed for disobedience. Wagner v. Mason, 6 P. R. 187.

XVII. PAUPER.

See MUNICIPAL CORPORATIONS, I. 2.)

Poverty as Excuse for Delay.]—The plaintiff, a squatter on Crown lands, made an assignment thereof to the defendant to enable him to obtain the patent for the plaintiff. There was no writing shewing the trust, and defendant, having procured the patent to be issued in his own name, induced the plaintiff to release his interest in the estate for less than half its value. There was great inequality between the parties in respect of their business capacity and otherwise; and defendant failed to shew that he had given the plaintiff all the information he was entitled to, or that the plaintiff was entitled to redeem, on payment of the amount of defendant's advances, although seven years had elapsed before the plaintiff field his bill impeaching the transaction—the excuse assigned for the delay being his poverty; it appearing that the parties could be restored to their original positions without loss to defendants. Brady v. Keenan, 14 Gr. 214.

Poverty is no excuse for delay in making an application to the court, as in such a case the party can apply in forma pauperis. Harris v, Myers, 1 Ch. Ch. 229.

A party's poverty is not of itself a sufficient excuse for delay, although the court will not exclude it from consideration, but it will receive such a plea with caution. Duff v. Barrett, 3 Ch. Ch. 318.

Suing in Forma Pauperis — Costs.]—
Where a party sues or defends in forma pauperis, the masters and deputy registrars, being officers of the court, are not entitled to receive any fees from the pauper. Chambers
v. Chambers, 1 Ch. Ch. 238.

A plaintiff suing in formâ pauperis is not liable to have his suit stayed until he has paid the costs at law, or of a former suit in chancery, touching the same subject matter, unless it can be shewn that the proceedings are vexatious. Where, therefore, a plaintiff had been ordered to give security for prior costs at law, and by another order the time for giving security had been limited and in default the bill ordered to be dismissed, and the plaintiff was afterwards admitted to sue in formâ pauperis, the two orders for giving security were set aside. Casey v. McColl, 3 Ch. Ch. 24.

Where costs are given to a plaintiff suing in forma pauperis, they are, in general, and unless otherwise ordered, dives costs. Ib.

The rule is, that where a plaintiff sues in forma pauperis he will not be ordered to pay costs of any indulgence granted him during the progress of the cause. Where, therefore, such a plaintiff brought to a hearing a suit which was defective for want of parties, the court ordered it to stand over to add them, and directed that the question of costs of this indulgence should stand over and be disposed of on the hearing of the cause. Parr v. Montgomery, 22 Gr. 176.

Two defendants allowed a bill to be taken pro confesso against them because they had not the means to employ a solicitor to defend the suit, and a pro confesso decree was obtained. An application to vacate the decree and for leave to answer was granted upon payment of costs, a primā facie good defence on the merits being shewn. Redford v. Todd, 6 P. R. 154.

Costs of evidence to disprove the merits of the defence set up must not be incurred without consideration, and will not be allowed as of course. Ib.

XVIII. PERSONAL REPRESENTATIVE — AP-POINTMENT OF.

Death of Party—Interest.]—The court will not appoint an administrator ad litem of the estate of a deceased party where such party had a substantial interest in the suit. Bank of Montreal v. Wallace, 1 Ch. Ch. 261.

Where the interest, if any, of a deceased party is very small, the court will not require a personal representative to be appointed. Montgomery v. Douglas, 14 Gr. 268.

An application under order 56 for the appointment of a person to represent the estate of a deceased party was refused where it was considered that the deceased could not be said to be "interested in the matters in question in the suit," or that the personal representative, if appointed, would be merely a formal party. Leonard v. Clydesdale, 6 P. R. 142.

Dispensing with—Formal Parties.]— By order No. 30 of 1833, the court may proceed without any personal representative of a deceased person where none has been appointed; or may appoint some person to represent the estate for the purpose of the suit. This does not apply to cases where parties have a beneficial or substantial interest, but only to cases of mere formal parties. Sherveoo' & Freedand, 6 Gr. 305.

Petition.]—A personal representative can only be appointed on petition. In re Lee and Waterhouse, 5 L. J. 256.

See Collver v. Swayzie, 8 P. R. 42, ante XIII. 3.

XIX. PETITIONS.

Construction of Will.]—On a petition to obtain the opinion of the court on the construction of a will under 29 Vict. c. 28, s. 31:—Held, that the court could not give any opinion on such a point upon petition, and the court declined to make any order saying whether a bill would be proper. In re Casar's Will, 13 Gr. 210.

Fiat of Judge.] — The signature of a Judge to a fiat on a petition is not an affirmation by him that the case is a proper one for petition, Arnold v. Hurd. 1 Ch. Ch. 246.

Order Nisi — Stranger to Suit.] — The court will not grant an order nisi against a person not a party to the suit. Where an order against such a person is required, the proper practice to obtain it is by notice of motion or petition. Harris v. Meyers, 1 Ch. Ch. 262.

Petitioners—Description of.]—A petition should set out the addition and description of the petitioners in the same manner and with the same certainty as a bill of complaint. Hunter v. Mountjoy, 2 Ch. Ch. 90. Misjoinder—Amendment.]—Where there is a misjoinder of petitioners in a petition for stay of proceedings, the court has jurisdiction at the hearing of the petition to allow the same to be amended by striking out a name. Gilbert v. Jarvis. 16 Gr. 294.

Service — Filing—Notice—Want of Proservicion.]—It is unnecessary and irregular to file a petition before it is heard. The proper proceeding, in order to bring it before the court, is to serve a copy with a notice of a day for hearing indorsed. Re Western Ins. Co., 6 P. R. 86.

This practice is applicable to petitions under the Insurance Companies Act, 31 Vict. c. 48. But, as by this Act no special procedure is provided for making application under it to the court, where proceedings were initiated by a petition which had been filed but not served upon the respondents, nor brought to a hearing, after a lapse of fourteen months, the petition was treated as a bill, and ordered to be taken off the files for want of prosecution. Ib.

Setting out Facts.]—Where the facts on which a petition is founded are of such a nature that they cannot be sworn to, they should be set out fully so as to make the respondents aware of what they are called on to answer. It will not suffice to use the ordinary form. Crooks v. Crooks, 1 Gr. 57.

XX. RIGHT TO PROCEED AT LAW AND IN EQUITY.

1. Election.

XXI. SEQUESTRATION.

1. Effect of Writ.

As to Choses in Action.]-A creditor has a right, under a writ of sequestration, to compel payment by a third party of a debt which he owes to defendant, against whose estate the writ issued. McDowcell v. McDowcell, 1 Ch. Ch. 140, 10 L. J. 48.

"Intil either the sequestrator or the party claiming under the writ takes steps to obtain payment of the money, the chose in action is not bound by reason of the writ being in the sheriff's hands. Ib.

Writs of execution bind moneys or choses in action, or rather securities for money, only from the time of actual seizure by the sheriff, or of some act symbolical therewith or tanta-mount thereto. Ib.

A chose in action can be reached by sequestration, but the right or interest of a surety in regard to the money for the payment of which he is surety, cannot be reached by that process. Where, therefore, a mortgagee filed his bill against the assignee of the equity of redemption, to enforce by this means payment of the deficiency arising on a sale of the mort-gaged premises, it was held that the right of the mortgagor to call upon his assignee to discharge the mortgage debt, could not be reached. Irving v. Boyd, 15 Gr. 157.

The claim of a debtor to compensation for misrepresentations of parties in obtaining a patent of land is not liable to be seized, attached, or sequestered, before the amount is determined by decree or otherwise. Roberts v. City of Toronto, 16 Gr. 236.

As to Lands.]—The effect of a sequestra-tion in regard to lands considered. Meyers v. Meyers, 19 Gr. 185. In case of a debtor dying leaving insufficient assets to pay all his debts, execution creditors whose writs are in the sheriff's hands do not lose their priority; nor does a creditor who has a sequestration in the hands of the sequestrators lose the advantage of it. Ib.

While the law respecting the registration of judgments was in force, two judgment creditors registered their judgments; the second in point of time proceeded with a suit to en-force his lien; the other did not, although he had also filed a bill in time, but he proved his claim in the master's office in the suit instituted by the other creditor, who the shit instituted by the other creditor, who in that proceeding had sued out a sequestration, under which proceedings had been taken to obtain payment of his claim:—Held, affirming the judgment in 20 Gr. 185, that the creditor who had first registered had not, by refraining from proceeding with his suit, lost the priority obtained by him by virtue of his prior registration; that to enforce such claim it was not, under the circumstances, necessary for him to revive his own suit, which had abated meantime by reason of the death of some of the parties; and that the plaintiff in the suit in which he had proved his claim having sued out a writ of sequestration, under asing such out a writ of sequestration, under which the sheriff had acted, had not the effect of changing the rights of the parties under their registered judgments. S. C., 21 Gr. 214. A writ of sequestration, whether upon assus or lind process, is not in any sense an expectation against lands, but is simply a means of the controlling obedience to the order of the Lands cannot be sold under a writ of sequestration. Nelson v. Nelson, 6 P. R. 194.

As to Leases and Rent.]—The tenant of a party against whom a writ of sequestration has issued, will be ordered to pay to the commissioner rent shewn to be due, and also to attorn and pay the accruing rents. Jackson v. Jackson, 1 Ch. Ch. 115.

Rent to accrue due is not a chose in action, and a tenant in respect to it may attorn; but where the tenant, having been actorn; but where the tenant, having been notified by the sequestrator, promised to pay him the rent in future, and afterwards on being indemnified paid it to a party claiming it as assignee, he was ordered to pay it over again to the sequestrator. Harris v. Meyers, 2 Ch. Ch. 121.

Sequestrators can lease for any period during which the rents would be less in the aggregate than the amount for which sequestration issued. S. C., 3 Ch. Ch. 89.

When a sequestration had issued to compel payment under a decree, and there appeared to have been considerable delay in enforcing the payment of rents, during which period the defendant had died, and one of the heirs had received sundry sums for rent, a motion that such rents be paid over again to the sequestrators by the tenants was refused, and the tenants ordered to attorn as to future rents only. S. C., ib. 107.

B, was a registered judgment creditor of M., after whose death T. obtained a decree for a debt due by M. T. issued a sequestration for this debt, under which lands were seized, and let under the authority of the court to tenants: — Held, that B.'s charge having priority over T.'s, B. was entitled to set aside the leases on paying the tenants for their labour in putting in fall crops and preparing the land for fall and spring crops; and to have the land sold free from the leases. Meyers v. Meyers, 19 Gr. 541.

2. Issue of Writ.

Corporation-Order Nisi.] - In proceeding against a corporation to enforce obedience to a decree or order, it is not necessary to sue out a writ of distringas; the proper proceeding is by orders nisi and absolute for a sequestration. Attorney-General v. Brantford, 1 Ch.

Insufficiency of Lands-Interest in, not Insufficiency of Lands—Interest in, not English—Hefore resorting to a writ of sequestration under G. O. 291 for non-payment of money, a writ of it, far goods should be issued; then, if that fails, an order attaching debts; and a writ of sequestration should only issue (1) where the lands are insufficient to satisfy the debt, and it therefore becomes inportant to realize the profits during the year portant to reame the points during the year that must elapse before the lands can be sold under a fi. fa.; or (2) where the interest of the debtor is of such a nature that it cannot be taken under a fi. fa. This rule does not in-terfere with the power of the court to order a teriere with the power of the court to order a sequestration instead of a fi. fa., if occasion should require. An order for payment of money into court is an order for payment of money within the meaning of G. O. 291. Such an order does not require to be indorsed with the notice, schedule N. to the consolidated orders. Accessor, N. Acison, 6 P. R. 194.

Service of Order—Affidavit.]—A writ of sequestration cannot properly be issued on præcipe. The order for the payment of the money must be served, and an affidavit of such service and of the non-payment filed. A writissued on præcipe was set aside, but without costs. Fisken v. Wride, 2 Ch. Ch. 212.

Affidurit — Absence of — Waiter.]—
Although, as was held in the last case, a copy of the decree or order directing the payment of the money should be shewn to have been served, and a demand of payment of the money made, before a writ of sequestration can properly issue—yet where, as frequently has been done, a writ was issued without an affidavit filed shewing such service and demand, and the defendant had been aware of it for upwards of a year, and had appeared on a motion to compel a tenant to attorn—Held, that he had waived any objection. Harris v. Myers, 2
Ch. Ch. 248.

Affidavit-General Order, 1—To entitle a party to the writ for non-payment of money it is not necessary, since G. O. 291, to shew that the order for payment and a demand thereunder have been personally served on the party ordered to pay. The last two cases commented upon. Long v. Long, 6 P. R. 137.

Sheriff's Return—Affidavit.]—Upon the sheriff's return of non est to a warrant for the committal of a party, and an affidavit to the effect required by the 188th of Vice-Chancellor Jamieson's orders, a sequestration will issue at once. Prentiss v. Brennan, 1 Gr. 497.

3. Reviving.

Decree—Mesne Process.]—Where a sequestration to compel the performance of a decree had been issued against a person who subsequently died:—Held, that the writ could be revived against his heirs. Semble, that sequestration issued on mesne process can not be revived. Turley v. Meyers, 3 Ch. Ch. 102.

Irregular Order of Revivor.] — A sequestration had been taken out in a cause in which an order to revive had issued against the parties who would have represented the testate of a supposed intestate, had he been such; but a will had been subsequently found, and the revivor, it was contended, was irregular. A motion to set aside the sequestration on this ground, and on the grounds that the defendant had proved under the decree in the suit said to be thus irregularly revived, and that there were prior creditors to him, was refused with costs. Semble, the proper course, under such circumstances, would be to move against the order of revivor. Meyers v. Meyers, 4 Ch. Ch. 41, 8 C. L. J. Se

See Meyers v. Meyers, 21 Gr. 214.

4. Third Persons-Claims of.

Inquiry as to—Reference—Examination of Claimant.]—Where, after the appointment of a receiver or the issuing of a sequestration, a question arises on an interlocutory application with persons not parties to the suit as to the right of property claimed by the receiver or sequestrators, the court may either dispose of the matter at once upon the affidavits filed, or, if the matter is not ripe for discussion, direct such proceedings to be had as appear on the whole best fitted for the determination of the question of right. Prentiss v. Brennan, Re Peterson, 2 Gr. 582.

The court may order a reference to the master to inquire whether a claimant has any and what right to property sequestrated. But where an order was drawn up in that form without reference to the court, the court, on application of the claimant, directed the order to be modified by adding a direction that the claimant should be examined before the master. 1b.

Where a receiver of partnership property alwhere a receiver of partnership property had been appointed, and certain chattels had been seized under a sequestration against defendant for contempt of the injunction, and the chattels so seized were alleged to be the property of defendant and his co-partner, but it appeared that third persons claimed an interest therein, the plaintiff having moved to sell this property, a reference was directed on such motion (on which the claimants had appeared) to inquire as to their interests; and any further order on the motion was reserved, the parties to the motion electing to have a reference instead of issues to try the questions in dispute.
Prenties v. Brennan, Re Brennan, 2 Gr. 274.

Transfer of Security — Bona Fides — Leave to Füle Bill—Notice of Motion—Substituted Service.]—In a suit in which a receiver of partnership effects had been appointed and a sequestration issued against defendant for contempt, the court retained a motion against third persons for delivery or payment to the receiver or sequestrators of a promissory note, the property of the partnership, transferred subsequently to the issuing of the injunction and sequestration, but before the note became due by the defendant, in a foreign country, the affidavits as to the bona fides of such transfer being contradictory, the court giving leave to file a bill against such third persons, Prentiss v. Brennan, Re Bunker, 2 Gr. 329.

Where, after the issuing of an injunction and sequestration in a partnership suit, against the defendant, a transfer was made of a promissory note, part of the assets of the partnership, and the plaintiff filed affidavits impugning the bona fides of the transfer, the court gave leave to the plaintiff to serve a notice of motion to compel the delivery or payment of the note to the receiver or sequestrators in the cause, upon the party to whom the note had been transferred out of the jurisdiction; and such party having appeared upon and opposed the motion, substitutional service of the subpena to answer was ordered to be made on his solicitor or agent in a suit afterwards brought against him, by leave of the court for the same purpose. Ib.

5. Other Cases.

Appeal—Stay pending.]—By an order of the court of error and appeal the Hamilton and Milton Road Company were ordered to remove a bridge constructed by them, which impeded the navigation of the Desjardins Canal, against which the road company appealed to the Queen in council:—Held, that under the statute the circumstance of the road company having perfected the security required by the orders of the privy council, was a sufficient answer to a motion for sequestration for non-compliance with the order requiring the removal of the bridge; and the road company having applied to the court for a stay of proceedings under the order pending their appeal to the privy council, both motions were refused, but under the circumstances without costs to either party. Dundas v. Hamilton and Milton Road Co., 19 Gr. 455.

Contempt — Motion against Writ.] — Quiere, whether a party whose committal has been ordered for breach of an injunction, and against whom a writ of sequestration has been granted for the same contempt, can move against the writ before clearing his contempt. Prentise v. Brennan, 1 Gr. 497, 428.

Order for Sale—Notice.] — Notice must be given of an application for an order to sell property seized by sequestrators. Forbes v. Comolly, 1 Ch. Ch. 6.

XXII. SERVICE OF PAPERS.

1. Bill.

(a) Absconding Defendants.

Service by Publication.] — A party having absconded from this Province, as alleged, to avoid service of proceedings in charactery, and it being shewn upon affidavits that within a few months he had been resident at several different places, and that it was impossible to say with any degree of certainty in which of them he could be served with process—the court directed an advertisement to be inserted in a newspaper published at the place of residence of the party in this province, and that a copy of the several papers containing the advertisement should be sent to his address at each of the places named. Stimson, 6 Gr. 379.

On an application to advertise a defendant, it was sworn that the defendant had absconded to Michigan, but it was not stated that any endeavour had been made to ascertain his residence:—Held, that an affidavit should be produced shewing that defendant could not be found in Michigan. Lipsey v. Cruise, 1 Ch. Ch. 2.

An order for substitutional service on an absconding defendant, or to advertise him, where the affidavit stated that the deponent had made inquiries and exertions to serve defendant, but had been unable to do so, was refused, as the affidavit ought to shew what exertions had been made, that the Judge may determine whether the defendant is absconding, or whether it is proper to dispense with personal service. Murney v. Knapp, 1 Ch. Ch. 26.

On moving for an order to serve an absonaling defendant by publication, it must be shewn where defendant last resided, and whether he has any relations within the jurisdiction, and, if so, that inquiries have been made of them as to his whereabouts. Irving V. Streit, I Ch. Ch. 185.

Where an application is made to advertise an absconding defendant, the affidavits must shew whether he has any relations in the contry; if he has any, one or more of them should generally speaking, be examined as to their knowledge of his residence before the order is applied for. McMurrich v. Hogan, Perkins v. Plebs, 1 Ch. Ch. 307.

Substituted Service.]—Where a bill had been filed for foreclosure, and the defendant, the official assignee of the mortgagor, absconded before the bill was served, an order was granted allowing substitutional service on one of the two inspectors of the insolvent's estate. London and Canadian Loan and Agency Co. v. Thompson, S. P. R. 91.

Where the defendant in a suit had absconded to the United States before the filing of the bill, and two months after the filing of the bill, and two months after the filing of the bill an assignee in insolvency was appointed by the redition of the defendant, and the assignee was sevel with the bill, but not within the time limited by the general orders, an order was made allowing the service as abood, though made fourteen months after the bill was filled—Held, that the defendant having absconded was a sufficient reason for not proceeding with greater diligence. Goderich v. Brooke, 8 P. R. 486.

(b) Absent Defendants and Defendants out of the Jurisdiction.

Actual Service abroad.]—When an application is made to serve a defendant out of the jurisdiction, and correspondence is relied upon to shew the party's residence, the affidavit must shew at what time the last communication was received from the defendant. Farry v. Davis, 1 Ch. Ch. 7.

An application for an order to serve a defendant out of the jurisdiction, at Iowa, was refused; the affidavit on the motion merely stating that letters had been received from defendant dated at that place, but not shewing that he was resident there. Kingston v. Monger, 1 Ch. Ch. 18.

It is not sufficient proof of the identity of a party served out of the jurisdiction, that the deponent to the affidavit of service swears that he served "the above-named defendant." The affidavit should shew the means of knowledge. Armour v. Robertson, 1 Ch. Ch. 252.

A written admission of service, and that the party making it was the defendant in the bill, made by a defendant served in Montreal, was received as sufficient proof of service, on an affidavit being filed of a party within the jurisdiction proving the handwriting. Erle v. Hunt, 2 Ch. Ch. 335.

See Exchange Bank v. Springer, 29 Gr. 270.

Dispensing with Service.]—The residence out of the jurisdiction of a party having a substantial interest is not now a sufficient reason for proceeding in his absence, where it would have been so, when persons out of the jurisdiction could not in England be served with process; it must also be shewn now to be impossible to effect service upon such absent party. Le Targe v. De Tuyll, 1 Gr. 227.

The mere fact of a defendant residing in England is not sufficient reason for dispensing with personal service of an office copy of the bill. Everest v. Brooks, 2 Ch. Ch. 445.

Service by Mail.] — The plaintiff's solicitors had written to a defendant out of the jurisdiction, and received letters in reply. They had also mailed him an office copy of the bill, and received a letter that he had received the The chancellor granted an order allowing the service, but directed a copy of it to be mailed to defendant. Woodside v. Toronto Street R. W. Co., 2 Ch. Ch. 24. See, also, Cameron v. Baker, 2 Ch. Ch. 281.

Service by Publication.]-On an application to take the bill pro confesso against a defendant served by advertisement four months detendant served by advertisement four months after the time for answering expired:—Held, that it should be shewn that the defendant had not returned within the jurisdiction, and that the plaintiff was still ignorant of his whereabouts, and unable to serve him. Mc-Curty v. Wessels, 1 Ch. Ch. 5.

Section 8 of the 9th general order of June, 1853, does not apply to any cases other than those for foreclosure or specific performance of an agreement. Bank of Montreal v. Hatch, 1 Ch. Ch. 57.

In a suit which is not for foreclosure or specific performance, the court cannot order service of the bill by publication on defendants who have been out of the jurisdiction for more than two years before the filing of the bill. Berkis v. Nichols, 1 Ch. Ch. 232.

The court will permit service of a bill by publication (under s. 8 of order 9) upon a defendant in a foreclosure suit, who has left the jurisdiction, though the defendant sought to be advertised is merely an incumbrancer by virtue of a subsequent mortgage. Robson v. Recsor, I Ch. Ch. 280.

Where an absent defendant is an infant, the court has like powers as to granting an order for service by publication as in case of an adult; but semble, the notice published should not state that in default of answer the bill will be taken pro confesso. will also, in exercise of the discretion given to it by 28 Vict. c. 17, s. 12, call upon such defendant by the same order to shew cause why a solicitor of the court should not be appointed his guardian ad litem. Duffy v. O'Connor, 1 Ch. Ch. 393.

Where a sole defendant had been absent from the jurisdiction and not heard of for fourteen years, a motion for service of the bill upon him by publication was refused, not-withstanding 28 Vict. c. 17, s. 12. Shaw v. Acker, 1 Ch. Ch. 395,

So where absent seven years. See Kelly v. Macklem, ib. 396 note.

The court will not order service by publication on parties out of the jurisdiction, who cannot be found, on the affidavit of the plaintiff alone. - v. Corcoran, 3 Ch. Ch. 398.

The defendant in a foreclosure suit having been served by publication, a decree was pro-nounced under which the master took the accounts, &c. After three years had elapsed an order was made under G. O. 116 confirming the proceedings had thereunder, and making absolute the decree. Clariss v. Ellis, 6 P. R. 115, not followed. Roblin v. Greely, 7 P. R.

Where a defendant is served by publication under G. O. 100, in order that a pracipe de-cree may be obtained, the notice should contain the special indorsement in schedule G. to order 436, otherwise the cause must be set down to be heard pro confesso. Pherrill v. Forbes, 8 P. R. 408.

Substituted Service.] - Where some or all of the parties to be served are out of the jurisdiction, substituted service of the bill may be effected on partners or agents, where there is clear proof of agency with reference to the subject matter of the suit. Allan v. Pyper, 5 L. J. 118.

On its being shewn that the defendant could not without delay and difficulty be served personally out of the jurisdiction, that he had a branch business in Toronto in charge of an agent, and that the subject matter of the suit had reference to such agency, service of bill on such agent, and that a copy be mailed to the defendant at New York (nine weeks being given to answer), was ordered. Cupples v. Yorston, 2 Ch. Ch. 31.

Where a mortgagee made a party to a suit in respect to his mortgage was out of the jurisdiction, service upon his solicitor, who had always held the mortgage, was allowed. Young v. Wilson, 2 Ch. Ch. 56.

Where several trustees of a religious society were defendants, as owning the equity of re-demption, and one of them had left the country, substitutional service for him, on one of the other trustees, was allowed. Somerville v. Joyce, 1 Ch. Ch. 358.

28 Vict. c. 17 gives the court larger powers as to proceeding against absent defendants whose residence is unknown, and the court will grant orders for substitutional service in cases where it would not under the practice before the Act dispensing with advertising where it would be useless. Cooper v. Lane, 1 Ch. Ch. 363.

Substitutional service will not be allowed under 28 Vict. c. 17, unless it is shewn that it would be very expensive or very difficult to effect a service. Pearson v. Campbell, 2 Ch. 25.

The administrator of a deceased mortgagee having filed a bill against his heirs-at-law, one of whom lived abroad, in some unknown place, it was ordered that service of the bill on a sister of the absent defendant, and posting to him a copy of the order, addressed to the place where he had been last heard from, be deemed good service. Cameron v. Baker, 2 Ch. Ch. 281

Where a mortgagee filed a bill for fore closure against a mortgagor who resided out of the jurisdiction, and whose residence was unknown, whilst the security was scanty, service was ordered on the mortgagor's wife. McDonald v. McMillan, 2 Ch. Ch. 282.

Substitutional service of the bill upon an absent defendant allowed where the affidavits stated that "none of the parties in this country were aware of the residence of the defendant; that the plaintiff's solicitor had made diligent inquiry and could not find out where the defendant resided; and that deponent was informed that the defendant led a wandering life; that she had been in Rochester about a month before, but that she then intended shortly to make a move." Gordon v. Hanna, 6 P. R. 266.

See Monro v. Keiley, 1 Ch. Ch. 23, post

See ante VII. 1 (a).

(c) Affidavit of Service.

Amended Bill—Presumption.]—Where a bill had been amended, and the affidavit was of the service of "the bill," the court presumed the bill served was the bill as it stood at the time of service. Bolster v. Cochrane, 2 Ch. Ch. 327.

Costs.]—Where separate affidavits of service of bill are made by one person, the costs of one only should be allowed. Boulton v. Mc-Naughton, 1 Ch. Ch. 216.

Describing Copy Served.]—The affidavit of service of an office copy of the bill should shew that the copy so served was stamped with the stamp of the registrar's or deputy registrar's office in which the bill is filed. Cameron v. Upper Canada Mining Co., 4 C. L. J. 77.

Irregularity — Effect of.] — Held, that a plaintiff who filed an irregular affidavit of service on noting a defendant pro confesso, was responsible for the consequences; and the note pro confesso was set aside. Pringle v. Mc-Donald, 7 P. R. 45.

Place of Service.]—In applying for an order pro confesso after six months from the service of the bill, the affidavit of service of the notice of motion should shew that the notice was served within the jurisdiction. Mc-Clary v. Durand, 1 Ch. Ch. 233.

Swearing to abroad.]—It is unnecessary to issue a commission to authorize the taking of the affidavit of service in a foreign country. Supder v. O'Lone, 4 Gr. 148.

See Armour v. Robertson, 1 Ch. Ch. 252,

(d) Companies and Corporations.

Corporation Aggregate.]—The order permitting the service of a bill upon the agent of a corporation aggregate does not authorize service upon agents of corporations within Upper Canada. Campbell v. Taylor, 1 Ch.

Defunct Company.]—Where a company is virtually defunct before bill filed, the proper course to effect service is to apply to the court for an order therefor, otherwise an order pro confesso cannot be obtained. Furness v. Metropolitan Water Co., 1 Ch. Ch.

Foreign Company.]—A foreign company having an office in Montreal and another in Toronto, an office copy of the bill, with an indorsement to answer in four weeks, was served on the agent in Toronto:—Held, sufficient sortice. Irvein v. Lancashire Ins. Co., 2 Ch. Ch. 201.

3. Other Papers.

Irregularity of Service — Waiver.]— Where, after an irregularity of service, the party having the right to insist on it serves a demand which it would put the other party to expense to fulfil, it waives the irregularity.
Carpenter v. City of Hamilton, 2 Ch. Ch. 282.

Person Served—Solicitor's Agent.]—Service on the agent of the solicitor who had acted in the cause for defendant, was held good service, although the solicitor had been changed, but no order for changing the solicitor had been taken out. Brown v. Burgar, 2 Ch. Ch. 446.

When a pleading is filed in a deputy registrar's office in a county in which the solicitor for the opposite party does not reside, service of notice of filing must be effected according to order 43. Service on the Toronto agent is irregular. Hayes v. Shier, 6 P. R. 41.

A Toronto agent for one country principal cannot serve himself as agent for another country principal. Horseman v. Coulson, 6 P. R. 263, Service by Parties.]—The court will permit service of pleadings to be effected by parties to the suit, and will allow the same fees upon taxation as if served by third persons. McClure v. Jones, 6 Gr., 383.

Time of Service.] — Service of a paper effected after four o'clock, by punting it under the door of a solicitor's office, is not a good service for that day, unless it be shewn that the paper came to the hands of the solicitor or his clerk on that day, during the hours at which the one or the other might be served personally. When Sunday is an intermediate day, it is reckoned in the computation of the time for service of papers. Sprague v. Henderson, 1 Ch. Ch. 213. But see In re Crooks, 1 Ch. Ch. 394.

Where a solicitor promptly repudiated his acceptance of a paper served after hours, which he admitted without knowing its nature, the service was held bad. McTavish v. Sympzon, 7 P. R. 145.

Notice of examination and hearing was served at a few minutes past four, on the last day for giving notice, on solicitors of one defendant, who admitted service, but on the same day, discovering that the notice had been served too late, they wrote to the plaintiff's solicitors repudiating their admission, and saying that they would move to set aside the notice. On a motion it was not shewn that there was no other service or notice than as above mentioned, and the application was thereupon refused. Scott v, Burnham, 3 Ch. Ch. 402, followed. Semble, that the acceptance of service would not be binding, having been so soon repudiated. Wright v. Way, 8 P. R. 324.

XXIII. STAYING PROCEEDINGS.

Appeal—Staying Reference.]—Where a decree had been made declaring the plaintiff to be entitled to insurance moneys, and directing a reference to ascertain the amount, and payment forthwith after the making of the report, an order staying proceedings in the master's office was refused pending an appeal from the decree. Butter v. Standard Fire Ins. Co., S P. R. 41.

Terms—Security for Costs.]—Security for costs in appeal, as well as that of the court below, will be required to be given before proceedings in the court below will be stayed pending an appeal. Heward v. Heward, 2 Ch. Ch. 245.

Application for Mandamus, |—Where a stay of proceedings was asked to enable defendants to apply at law for a mandamus to compel the head of a corporation to affix the corporate seal, but it was not shewn that the majority of shareholders approved of the answer, the application was refused with costs. Gildersleeve v. Wolfe Island R. W. and Cend Co., 3 Ch. Ch. 358.

Contempt.]—It would seem that a plaintiff prosecuting his decree is entitled to do so, notwithstanding that he may have been placed in contempt for disobelience to an order of the court for payment of money. In such a case defendant must obtain an order staying proceedings until the contempt is purged. Hurd v, Robertson, 1 Ch. Ch. 3.

Insolvency of Plaintiff.]—Where a suit was commenced in the name of a person who had previously assigned his interest to a creditor by way of security, and the plaintiff became insolvent before decree, but the cause proceeded to a hearing without any change of parties, and a decree for the plaintiff was pronounced, the court, at the instance of defendants, stayed proceedings until all proper parties should be brought before the court. McNenniev. McDonniel, 15 Gr. 442.

Next Friend—Appointment of,]—A married woman must sue by her next friend, where it does not appear on the face of a bill filed by her that the property in question is her separate property. Held, also, that a motion to stay proceedings until a next friend is appointed was properly made in chambers, and that defendant need not demur to the bill. Prupn v. Soby, 7 P. R. 44.

Pending Action at Law.]—Where a bill was a filed by an execution creditor to impeach a conveyance by the debtor, and it did not appear that the action at law had been commenced after the passing of the A. J. Act, a demurrer on the ground that the plaintiff ought to have obtained relief in the suit at law, was overruled. Sawyer v. Linton, 23 Gr. 43.

Pending Foreign Action.] — Where there is a suit pending out of Ontario between the same parties and for the same cause of action, and it can be more conveniently tried in such other place, proceedings will be stayed here until the determination or discontinuance of the suit there. It is immaterial which suit was commenced first. Howell v. Jewett, 7 P. R. 63.

Rehearing - Conditional Payment-Repayment.]-Pending the rehearing, a sum of money, which before suit had been tendered by defendants to the plaintiff on account of salary, was ordered to be paid by defendants to the plaintiff as a condition of staying proceedings under the decree already pronounced. On rehearing this decree was affirmed, whereupon the derendant appealed to the court of error and appeal, when the decree was reversed, the bill ordered to be dismissed, and the cause remitted to the court below to carry out that order :- Held, that the plaintiff was bound to repay the money so paid to him by the defendants, the duty of the court below being, in carrying out the order made on appeal, to place the defendants in the same position, as far as possible, as if the bill had been dismissed at the hearing. Weir v. Mathieson, 12 Gr. 299.

— Staying Reference.]—A notice to rehear by the party who has the carriage of the decree does not, in the absence of special circumstances, entitle him to stop the prosecution of the decree in the master's office. Stephenson v. Nicolls, 14 Gr. 144.

While the plaintiff was proceeding to take the accounts directed by the decree in the master's office, defendant presented a petition of rehearing, which was ordered, and the cause set down in the usual manner. A motion to stay proceedings in the master's office, until after the cause had been reheard, was refused. Campbell v. Campbell, I Ch. Ch. 30, will not, as a matter of course, tax proceedings pending a rehearing. It is in the discretion of the court to stup proceedings, and the court will impose terms according to the creumstances of each case, granting a stay more readily than formerly, if it be shewn that there is a danger of loss unless proceedings be stayed. Walker v. Niles, 3 Ch. Ch.

Where in an interpleader suit a large sum of money was ordered to be paid over to a claimant resident in the United States, and the plaintiff who purposed to rehear, and had made his deposit, asked to have proceedings staved; the claimant was directed to give security to abide by any order the court might make upon the rehearing, and to repay the money it so directed, before the money was ordered to be paid to him. Ib.

Subject Matter Gone—Costs.]—An order will not be granted to stay proceedings or dismiss the bill in a suit, merely because the subject matter of it has gone; the plainfil has a right to proceed to a hearing to shew himself entitled to costs. Wallace v. Ford, 1 Ch. Ch. 282.

Estoppel by Plea in Action at Law.]

—See Carpenter v. Commercial Bank of Canada, 2 E. & A. 111.

Foreign Action—Company—Liquidation—Conflict between Courts, I — The holder of bonds of a joint stock company (limited), after instituting proceedings in the court of chancery in England, for the sale of the partiership property, which was situated in Candand and after the appointment of a receiver in England of the estate in England and Canda, filed a bill here for the like purpose, and the court appointed the agent of the receiver, receiver here: after which it appeared that the company went into liquidation, the liquidator being the same person who had been appointed receiver in England. The plaintif, after an amendment of his bill stating these proceedings, moved for a decree in the terms of the prayer of his bill; but the terms of the prayer of his bill; but the terms of the prayer of his bill; but the terms of the prayer of his bill; but the terms of the prayer of his bill; but the terms of the prayer of his bill; but he court refused to make any decree until it was shewn what the position of matters was in England, and the steps about to be taken there, so as to avoid any conflict between the two courts, and to mould the order here to give two courts, and to mould the order here to give the appropriate relief without interfering with the steps which were being taken in England for the same object. Office Copy of Pleadings.]—See Totten v. Macintyre, 2 Ch. Ch. So.

Status of Plaintiff—Determination of.]
—Where in the course of a cause a question is raised whether the plaintiff is entitled to institute proceedings, the court will in a proper case decide that question without compelling the parties to proceed to a hearing. Light v. Woodstock and Eric R. W. and Harbour Co., 7 Gr., 172.

Sharcholder of Bank.]—The plaintiff, in order to qualify himself to sue as a shareholder of a bank, purchased one share of the stock thereof, which he swore he paid for with his own money and bought of his own motion, for the purpose of testing he legality of a transaction into which the bank was about to enter:—Held, that this gave him a locus standi in court, although the circumstances were suspicious, the rule being that where in such a case the plaintiff is shewn to have a substantial interest, the court will not refuse relief, although there may be room to suppose he may have other objects in view which would not be approved of. Jones v. Imperial Bank of Canada, 23 Gr. Jones v.

Stop Order.]—The court has power to issue a stop order at the instance of a party entitled to funds in court. Lee v. Bell, 2 Ch. Ch. 114, commented upon. Wilson v. Mc-Uarthy, 7 P. R. 132.

Transmission of Papers.]—The usual practice, in applications to allow depositions and evidence taken in the court of chancery to be used in other courts, is, to send an officer of the court there with the papers. Thompson v. Ward, 5 L. J. 41.

Vacation—Liberty.]—The court will entertain applications affecting the liberty of the subject during the long vacation. Harris v. Meyers, 1 Ch. Ch. 229.

Vendor's Lien—Payment into Bank—Final Order of Suth June, 1861, directing money ordered to be paid, to be paid into some bank, does not apply to a suit by a vendor to enforce his lien for purchase money. In a suit of this nature, in applying for the final order of sale, it is not necessary that the affidavit of the plaintiff as to non-payment should negative the fact of possession, or the receipt of rents and profits. PRACTICE SINCE THE JUDICATURE

I. GENERALLY-EFFECT OF JUDICATURE ACT.

Conflict Between Law and Equity.]—Where in matters of practice there was a conflict between common law and equity as to matters not provided for by the Judicature Act, the practice which is most convenient is to be followed. Section 19, s.-s. 10, relates to matters of substantive law, not of mere practice. Friendly v. Carter, 9 P. R. 41, Decentralization.] — The policy of the Ontario Judicature Act is to decentralize business, and send local matters to local masters. Aitken v. Wilson, 9 P. R. 75.

Rehearing — Pending Business.] — Although the decree was pronounced before the Judicature Act, and might have been reheard under the former practice, yet the cause not having been set down to be reheard before the coming into force of the Act, it could not, under the provisions of the Act respecting pending business, be reheard. Trade v, Phanis Ins. Co., 20 Gr., 426.

Term's Notice Abolished.] — Where neither party has taken any proceedings in a suit for a year, a term's notice to proceed, which was required under the common law practice, is not necessary under the Judicature Act. Beaver v. Boardman, 9 P. R. 239.

11. APPEARANCE,

Default of—Noting Pleadings Closed.]— See Morse v. Lamb, 15 P. R. 9.

Ejectment.]—See Goring v. Cameron, 10 P. R. 496.

Foreclosure — Limited Defence — Statement of Ulaim.]—In an action for foreclosure the defendant entered an appearance under rule US, O. J. Act, limiting his defence to one item in the particulars indorsed on the writ of summons. The appearance did not state that the defendant did not require the delivery of a statement of claim:—Heid, that after such appearance a statement of claim was unnecessary, and a judgment signed upon it, for default of a statement of defence, was set aside with costs. Peel v. White, Il P. R. 177.

Gratis Appearance—Lis Pendens.]—The plaintiff issued a writ of summons, and registered a certificate of lis pendens upon the hand of the defendant, who, not having been promptly served with the writ, and being anxious to get rid of the suit, entered an appearance gratis:—Held, that there is nothing in the Judicature Act or rules which interfere with the well recognized practice that a defendant has a right to appear voluntarily, and to anticipate the service of actually issued process. Especially should his privilege to appear gratis be preserved in a case where his property is directly and prejudicially affected by the commencement of the action and the registration of its pendency. McTaggart v. Toothe, 10 P. R. 261.

 gratis, notice of such appearance is necessary, Vigcon v. Northcote, 12 C. L. T. Occ. N. 101, Special Appearance.]—Where there is a grave question as to jurisdiction of the cours of this Province in an action on a contract entered into in a foreign country, a special appearance under protest or conditionally may be permitted under con-rule 286, and the defence of want of jurisdiction may be subsequently raised by the pleadings. Hostand v. Insurance Co. of North America, 16 P. R. 514.

Action upon a foreign judgment. Both plaintiff and defendant resided out of the jurisdiction: neither of them was a British subject; and the cause of action upon which the judgment was recovered arose out of Ostario. The plaintiff's right, of the Judgment was recovered arose out of Ostario. The plaintiff's right, of the Judgment Act. 1895. The defendant caused a special appearance, and raised, by pleading, the question of jurisdiction. Upon an appeal from an order affirming an order refusing summary judgment under rule 739-1-Held, that, although the defendant failed to shew that he had a good defence to the action on the merits, and disclosed no facts that would have entitled him to defend in an ordinary action, yet the discretion exercised below should not be interfered with, having regard to the special nature of the jurisdiction conferred by sec. 124, and the provision requiring, even where no appearance is entered, the plaintiff's claim to be proved before be obtains judgment. Campau v. Randall, 17 P. R. 243.

Time for Appearance—Judgment.]— See Bank of British North America v. Hughes, 16 P. R. 61.

Judgment - Default-Tender-Notice.]—Until the law stamps have been attached to or impressed upon the paper upon which a judgment is drawn up, there is no complete, effective, or valid judgment; and an appearance tendered after all the work of signing judgment for default has been completed, except the attaching of the stamps, should be received and entered. Where an appearance, though tendered before, is not entered by the officer until after, judgment, it cannot become an effective appearance until after the judgment has been set aside; and therefore the defendant cannot be said to be in default for not giving notice of appearance on the day on which it is entered, pursuant to rule 281. Where the plaintiffs insist upon the regularity of a judgment as a judgment in default of appearance, they are not in a position to take the alternative and inconsistent course of moving for judgment under rule 39, treating the appearance as regular. Where an appearance is entered after the last day for appearance but before judgment, the defendant has the whole of the day on which it is entered to give notice of the appearance under rule 281. III. CONSOLIDATION OF ACTIONS.

Application of Common Defendant.]—Where the issues in several actions are not the same, there cannot be a consolidation of them. Where several actions were brought against a municipal corporation by different paintiffs for damages for injuries to their respective lands occasioned by the alleged negligent construction by the defendants of several drains without providing a proper outer for the waters brought down by such drains:—Held, that, it being necessary for each plaintiff to prove that the negligent conduct of the defendants resulted in an injury to his own particular land, the issues in the several actions were nor the same; and this quite apart from the fact that, in any case, there would have to be several assessments of damages. Quere, whether a common defendant can obtain a consolidation order against the will of the several plaintiffs. Williams v. Tournship of Raleigh, 14 P. R. 50.

Two separate actions, in which the defences were the same, including contributory negligence, were brought by a husband and wife against the same defendant for damages for injuries received by each of the plaintiffs owing to the alleged negligence of the defendant in permitting a pair of horses to run away, and run into a vehicle in which both plaintiffs were seated, causing them to be thrown out and trampled on:—Held, upon an application by the defendant, that both claims should have been joined in one action; and an order was made consolidating them. Smurthwaite v. Hannay, 10 Times L. R. 649, Westbrook v. Australian, &c., Navigation Co., 23 L. J. N. S. (C. P.) 42, Williams v. Township of Rabeigh, 14 P. R. 50, distinguished. Noyes v. 1 onny, 16 P. R. 254.

Claims Improperly Separated.]—The plaintiffs in their first action claimed from the defendants a sum of $200,000 as the balance due upon a construction contract, and in this action, begun some time after the first, they claimed from the same defendants a sum of $2000 the amount of an account for goods sold and delivered. The cause of action herein areas before the commencement of the previous action. The first action had been practically consolidated with the action of the defendants against the plaintiffs in the chancery division—Held, that the two claims should have been made in the one action, and that it was a proper exercise of discretion to leave the claim in this action to be tried with the claim to which it should originally have been joined. Comerc v. Canadian Pacific R. W. Co. (No. 2), 11 P. R. 222.

Conduct of Consolidated Action.]—In determining which party is to have the conduct of a consolidation of two cross-actions the main indicia to be regarded are: Which action was first begun? Upon whom does the chief burden of proof lie? Which action is the more comprehensive in its scope? And where G. first sued B. for cancellation and delivery up of four promissory notes made by G. and S. jointly to B., and also for cancellation of an agreement in relation to which the notes were given, and B. afterwards sued G. and S. upon three of the four notes in question, and substantially the same issues were raised in both actions, the making of the notes being admitted by G. and S. in the pleadings, the actions were consolidated and G. was allowed to proceed with his action, S. being added as a party to it. Girein v. Burke, Burke v. Girvin, 13 P. R. 216.

Cross-actions—Counterclaim — Stay.]—
The defendant applied to have this action consolidated with an action brought by the defendant in the chancery division against these plaintiffs, on the ground that the plaintiffs counterclaim in the chancery division action disclosed the same cause of action as shewn in the statement of claim in this action. The action in the chancery division was commenced on the 17th May, 1882, and this action was remember of rule 355, 0. J. Act, there is an inherent right in the court to prevent an undue use of its process; and this action was stayed until that in the chancery division was determined, no special reason to the contrary being slewn by the plaintiffs. Taylor v. Bradford, 9 P. B. 350.

Joint Application of Different Defendants.]—Twelve actions brought by a municipality against the different sureties of the municipal treasurer, to recover amounts alleged to have been received by the treasurer and not accounted for, were consolidated and proceedings in them were stayed pending the determination of an action against the treasurer himself to recover the same amounts. County of Essex v. Wright, 13 P. R. 474.

Four actions were brought by the same plaintiffs against different defendants for damages for trespass in refusing to pay toll and forcing past the toll gates. The pleadings were identical, and the main issue was common to all the actions, but it was admitted that if the plaintiffs had a substantial cause of action, there must be a separate assessment of damages in each case. Upon a motion by the defendants to consolidate the actions:—Held, that one of the actions should be tried as a test for all, and that proceedings in the other actions should be trayed till the test action should have been determined, after which the assessments should proceed according to the result on the main question; or, if the defendants would each submit to pay the largest amount of damages that might be awarded in the test action, that all proceedings should be stayed in all actions, except that in which the plaintiffs expected to recover the largest amount, and such action should be alone litigated. Vaughan Road Co. V. Fisher, 14 P. R. 340.

— Identity of Issues.]—The plaintiffs brought four actions, each against a different person, alleging that the defendant in each case entered into a separate agreement with the plaintiffs to purchase and pay for certain grape vines and to allow the plaintiffs certain future benefits to be derived from the possession and cultivation of the vines, and claiming payment, an account, and damages. The statements of defence were practically the same in all the actions, the defendants setting up among their defences that by the fraud of the plaintiffs certain promises and warranties on their part were omitted from the written agreement, and that the defendants were induced to enter into the agreement by fraud and misrepresentation on the part of the plaintiffs, and claiming rectification and damages. The sales to the several defendants were entirely separate and distinct transactions made at different times and under dif-ferent circumstances, but the form of agreement made use of with each defendant was the same. An order was made in chambers under con. rule 652, on the application of the defendants in all the actions, staying proceedings in all but one, which was to be treated as a test action, the defendants agreeing to be bound by the result of it, but the plaintiffs being allowed to proceed to trial in the other actions after the trial of the test action, if they deemed proper:—Held, that actions will only be stayed where the questions in dispute are substantially the same; and in this instance they were not the same, because the questions raised by the defendants upon their defences of fraud and misrepresentation would necessarily be different in each case, the negotiations for each agreement being distinct; and the order was set aside. Niggara Grape Co. v. Nellis, 13 P. R. 179.

An order to consolidate, strictly so called, is a matter of discretion, and is made as a favour cond for the benefit of the defendants, the object being the single trial may decide that which is in a single trial may decide that which is in costs and expense. Yo such order ought to be made unless the questions in each case are substantially the same, and the evidence would be substantially the same, and the evidence would be substantially the same if they were all tried. Leave to appeal from the decision in 13 P. R. 179 was refused. 8, C., th. 2588.

Joint Application of Different Plaintiffs. —In two actions where the plaintiffs were different, the defendants different, and the relief sought entirely different, though part of the evidence in the one action might be available in the other, an application by the plaintiffs conjointly for an order consolidating the two actions, was refused. Semble, the defendants would be entitled to an order to have the actions tried together in case the plaintiffs were bringing them on at different courts. Ruan v. Cameron. Attorney-General for Canada v. Ontario and Western Lumber Co., 16 P. R. 235.

References—Jurisdiction of Master.]—
The master in ordinary has no jurisdiction to consolidate actions in which judgments have been entered, and in which references are pending in his office. Bosteell v. Grant, 11 P. R. 376.

Summary Proceedings — Forum.]—An application to consolidate two motions for administration and partition pending before a local master should be made to him, and not to a Judge in chambers. Lambier v. Lambier, 9 P. R. 422.

IV. DISCONTINUANCE,

Effect on Pending Appeal.]—A motion by a defendant to vacate the registration of a lis pendens upon his lands was dismissed in chambers, and the defendant appealed to a Judge. The plaintiff then served a notice of discontinuance, and upon the return of the notice of appeal objected that there was mo jurisdiction to hear the appeal:—Held, that the plaintiff by giving a notice of discontinuance could not take away a right which the defendant had acquired. Conybeare v. Lewis, 13 Ch. D. 469, distinguished. Robertson v. Lawird, 8 C. L. T. Occ. N. 124.

Issue—:4.etion — Costs.]—An interpleader proceeding is not an action; and rule 341 (c), which enables the court to "order the action to be discontinued," upon terms as to costs, does not apply to interpleader issues. Hamlyn v. Hetteley, 6 Q. B. D. 63, and Re Dyson, 65 L. T. N. S. 488, followed. Semble, that the execution creditor can abandon the seizure or the prosecution of the issue, but only on the terms of answering all costs. Hogaboom v. Gillies, 16 P. R. 402.

Notice—Taxation of Costs.]—Where the plaintiff serves a notice of discontinuance under rule 641, the defendant is entitled to a reasonable time within which to apply for an appointment to tax his costs, and until after the lapse of that time an appointment will not be granted to the plaintiff, even where he is entitled upon the final taxation to tax interlocutory costs which may exceed the defendant's general costs. Under rule 641 it is not necessary for the plaintiff to ascertain the amount of defendant's costs and pay them, to make the notice of discontinuance effectual. Barry v. Hartley, 15 P. R. 370.

Withdrawal of Part of Claim.]-The plaintiffs claimed in this action $3,249,36, "amount of defalcation of J.," and $90.55 for certain expenses connected therewith, in all $3,339,91. The defendants paid into court 83,273, claiming by their notice of payment in, that it was sufficient to satisfy the plaintiffs There was no specific application of the money paid in to any part of the claim. The plaintiffs did not deliver a statement of and, upon notice of a motion under rule 203 to dismiss the action being served by the defendants, the plaintiffs gave notice under rule 170 of withdrawal of the balance of their claim :- Held, that the plaintiffs had no power under rule 170 to withdraw; the portion of rule 170 relating to the withdrawal of part of the alleged cause of complaint, is applicable only where the part sought to be withdrawn can be severed from the rest of the claim; and an order dismissing the action was proper. Bank of London v. Guarantee Co. of North America, 12 P. R. 499.

The Exchange Bank of Canada, in an action instituted by them against G, filed in open court, a withdrawal of a part G, filed in open court, a withdrawal of a part of their demand, reserving their right to institute a subsequent action for the amount so withdrawn. The court acted on this retraxit, and gave judgment for the balance. This judgment was not appealed from. In a subsequent action for the amount so reserved:—Held, that the provisions of art, 451, C. C. P., are applicable to a withdrawal made outside, and without the interference of, the court, and cannot affect the validity of a withdrawal made in open court and with its permission. (2) That it was too late in the second action to question the validity of the retraxit upon which the court had in the first action acted and rendered a judgment which was final and conclusive. Exchange Bank of Canada v. Gilman, 17 S. C. R. 108.

V. DISMISSING ACTIONS.

1. Absence of Authority.

Costs - Dispute - Enlargement - Judgment-Creditors.]-An action was brought on behalf of the plaintiffs and all other creditors V. to obtain from the defendant, the assignee of V. for the benefit of creditors, an account of all moneys received by him from the estate of V., and for payment of what might estate of V., and for payment of what might be found due. Judgment was pronounced in favour of the plaintiffs, directing a reference to take the accounts and reserving further directions and costs. The judgment was not issued, and after it was pronounced the defend-ant and the plaintiffs' solicitor both died. The executrix of the defendant obtained from a local Judge a summons to compel the plain-tiffs to revive the action, or to dismiss it with costs. On the return of the summons counsel for the plaintiffs stated that they would conant to an order dismissing the action without costs, but, if that were not agreed to, that they desired an enlargement to shew that the plaintiffs had never authorized the bringing of the action and that they had no knowledge of it until the service upon them of the summons now in question. The local Judge, howmons now in question. The local Judge, now-ever, made an order dismissing the action with costs:—Held, on appeal, that the local Judge would have been justified in dismissing the would have been justified in dismissing the action without costs if it had been shewn to bim that it was brought without the authority of the plaintiffs, and that he should have granted an enlargement for that purpose, and if he had after the enlargement been satisfied of the truth of the plaintiffs' statements, he should have discharged the summons; for a party should not be required against his will to continue in his name an action which he never authorized to be begun. Mackay v.

never authorized to be begun. Mackay v. Macfarlane, 12 P. R. 149. The old chancery rule that an action can be dismissed, on the application of a plaintiff who has not authorized his name to be used, only on payment of costs, is not now in force, but the plaintiff is now entitled to an order to stay the proceedings without payment of costs. Reynolds v. Howell, L. R. S. Q. B. 398, and Murse v. Durnford, 13 Ch. D. 764, followed.

Held, also, that an action of this kind should not have been dismissed after judgment pronounced, for the creditors other than the plaintiffs should not have been deprived of the benefit of the judgment, Ib.

See Sarnia Agricultural Implement Manufacturing Co. v. Hutchinson, 17 O. R. 676.

2. Default.

(a) In Delivery of Statement of Claim.

Excuse for Delay—Terms.]—An action by solicitors to recover the amount of a bill of costs was begun and the defendant appeared in February, 1883. No further step was taken till February, 1892, when the plaintiffs delivered a statement of claim. The plaintiffs' reason for the delay was that the defendant had no means to pay during the period of delay. Upon motion by the defendant to dismiss and cross-motion by the plaintiffs to validate the delivery of the statement of claim:—Held, that the action should be allowed to proceed. Terms imposed upon the plaintiffs. Finkle v. Lutz, 14 P. R. 446.

— Undertaking to Speed.]—The filing of a statement of claim and an undertaking to speed is not a sufficient answer to a motion to dismiss. The delay must be sufficiently explained. In this case, being an action for a large sum against sureties, the plaintiffs not having in the opinion of the court sufficiently explained or offered excuse for a delay of nearly two years, or shewn a probability of proceeding speedily, the action was dismissed with costs. Napanec, Tanworth, and Quebec R. W. Co. v. McDonell, 10 P. R. 525.

Shortening Time for Delivery.]—Under rule 485 the court or Judge may, in a proper case, order a plaintiff to deliver his statement of claim within a limited time shorter than that allowed by rule 369; but an order dismissing the action for failure to deliver the statement within the time so limited is not, having regard to rule 644, to be made until after default. And an order directing that the action should be dismissed for want of prosecution if the statement of claim was not delivered within eight days, was amended so as to make it direct only that the plaintiff should deliver the statement within eight days. Armstrong v. Toronto and Richmond Hill R. W. Co., 15 P. R. 449.

(b) In Furnishing Security for Costs.

Excuse for Delay — Appeal.]—The fact that the plaintiff has lodged an appeal against an order for security for costs is "sufficient cause," within the meaning of rule 1246, to exempt him from having his action dismissed for failure to comply with the order, pending the appeal. And if a motion to dismiss is made, the better practice is to enlarge it before the appellate tribunal, to be dealt with after the main question has been determined. Bennett v. Empire Printing and Publishing Co., 15 P. R. 430.

Order Limiting Time.]—A dismissal of the action, in the event of security not being given within a limited time, is authorized by con, rules (1888) 1243 and 1246, rules (1897) 1198 and 1202. Lea v. Lang, 18 P. R. 1.

Necessity for Further Motion.]—On the 5th November, 1885, an order was made requiring the plaintiff to give security for costs within four weeks, and in default that the action should be dismissed with costs, unless the court or Judge on special application for that purpose should otherwise order. Within the four weeks the plaintiff obtained a summons, with a stay of proceedings, for "further time to perfect security for costs," and on the 10th December, 1885, an order was made extending the time till the 23rd December, 1885, but not providing that the dismissal of the action should be the result of non-compliance with its terms. Security was not furnished within the time so extended, and it was contended that after that the action was dead, and there was no jurisdiction to make an order in it:—Held, that the action never became dismissed under either of these orders, and that a notion to dismiss was regular and necessary. Whistler v. Hancock, 3 Q. B. D. S3, King v. Davenport, 4 Q. B. D. 402, distinguished. Bank of Minnesota v. Page, 14 A. R. 347.

Waiver of Dismissal. |—Where an order for security for costs directs that unless security be given within a limited time the action shall be dismissed, and security is not given within the time limited, the action is to be regarded as dismissed, unless the defendant treats it as still alive. Carter v. Stubbs. 6 Q. B. D. 116, followed. Rule 1251 does not give a plaintiff any further time for or relieve him from the obligation of putting in his security for costs; it only enables him to remove the stay effected by the order, for the sole purpose of making a motion for judgment under rule 739; and if he does not succeed in that motion, he must obey the order by putting in the full security. But where the defendant, after the time for giving security under the order had expired, opposed a motion for judgment under rule 739, and appealed to a Judge in chambers and afterwards to a divisional court from the order made upon such motion, without taking the objection that the action was at an end:—Held, that he had waived the objection; and a bond filed after the time limited was allowed. Upon appeal, decision varied by extending, pursuant to rule 485, the time for giving security. Hollender v. Floulkes, 16 P. R. 225, 315.

(c) In Proceeding to Trial.

Answer to Motion — Undertaking—Discretion.]—An undertaking to speed the action is not in all cases a sufficient answer to a motion to dismise under rule 25%, O. J. Act. By G. O. Chy. 27%, a Judge had discretion under all the circumstances of the cause to dismiss or not, and the parties not being interfered with remains as before the O. J. Act, by ss. 12 and 52 of that Act. Under the circumstances of this case an order to dismiss was rescinded, Bucke v. Murray, 9 P. R. 495.

Excuse for Delay—One Defendant not Served with Process.]—A motion by two of the defendants to dismiss the action as against them for the plaintiff's default in not proceeding to trial was refused, where it appeared that one of the defendants, a necessary party, had for apparently sufficient reasons not been served with a writ of summons, while the action had proceeded against the other defendants, and as against them was ripe for trial:
—Semble, that it is the duty of an applicant to apply to the plaintiff's solicitor for information as to the state of the cause in regard to the other defendants before making such a motion. Foley v. Lee, 12 P. R., 371.

Skip—Undertaking, 1—If the plaintiff without good exense neglect to proceed with the action, the court will not, as of course, on his mere undertaking to speed the action and paying the costs, refuse to dismiss; but where defendant's solicitor had refused to accept notice of trial a few hours late, an order refusing to dismiss and permitting the plaintiff to proceed, was affirmed. Carter v. Barker, 11 P. R. 1.

Failure to Enter after Notice.]— Where the plaintiff foils to enter the action for trial at a sittings for which he has given notice of trial, the action cannot be dismissed for want of prosecution under con. rule 647; the defendant's remedy is to enter the action himself under con. rule 663. Crick v. Hewlett. 27 Ch. D. 355, distinguished. McDougald v. Thomson, 13 P. R. 256.

Where the plaintiff was in default for not giving notice of trial for the autumn assizes, but the defendant did not move to dismiss the action, and the plaintiff gave notice of trial for the winter assizes, but neither party entered the action for trial:—Held, that the action could not be dismissed for want of prosecution under con. rule 6447. McDougald v. Thomson, 13 P. R. 256; followed. Simpson v. Murray, 13 P. R. 418.

Frivolous Action.]—The plaintiff sued for damages for false testimony, alleging that he had failed in a prior action by reason of such testimony given therein by the present defendant:—Held, that the action would not lie, and the plaintiff being in default by reason of not having given notice of trial the action was dismissed. Clarke v. Creighton, 13 P. R. 113.

Order of Dismissal—Bar to Subsequent Action.]—An order made at chambers under rule 255. O. J. Act, dismissing the action for want of prosecution where issue had been joined, but the case had not been set down for trial nor notice of trial given:—Held, not a dismissal on the merits, and not a bar to a subsequent action for the same cause. Roberts v. Lucus, 11 P. R. 3.

Second Trial—"Next Sittings."]—Issue was joined on the 16th December, 1880, and on the 22nd the cause was tried, and a non-suit entered, which by consent was set aside, and the case again entered for trial at the sittings held in March, 1881, but remained over until the following sitting, when it was struck out by consent. After the Judicature Act came into force, a motion to dismiss for want of prosecution was made, and the plaintiffs' solicitors, though alleging that they did not intend to proceed, would not consent to the dismissal of the action:—Held, that an order dismissing the action was right; that the words in rule 255 "for the next sittings of the court," were not confined to the first sitting after issue joined; and that the fact that the plaintiff had already taken the cause down to trial did not prevent the defendant from moving to dismiss for not going to trial again. Chapman v. Smith, 32 C. P. 555.

Setting down and Proceeding.]—Rule 437 provides that "in actions in the county of York, to be tried without a jury, if the plaintiff does not set down the action for trial within six weeks after the pleadings are closed and proceed to trial as provided in rule 342, the action may be dimissed for want of prosecution:"—Held, that unless there is default both in setting down and proceeding to trial, an action cannot be dismissed. Toronto Type Foundry Co. v. Tuckett, 17 P. R. 538.

Action to Recover Statutory Penalties—Special Provision as to Delay.]—See Miles v. Roe, 10 P. R. 218.

VI. DIVISIONAL COURTS.

1. Appeals from Judgments of.

Case Heard by Consent. —Where the Judge presiding at the trial of an action directs it to stand over to have parties added, and both parties apply to a divisional court to set aside this direction, and, by consent and without prejudice to the right of appeal, ask the divisional court to hear the case on the merits, either party may, without leave, appeal to the court of appeal for Ontario from the judgment of the divisional court. Payne v, Caughell, 24 A. R. 556.

2. Appeals to.

(See County Courts, Division Courts, Surrogate Courts.)

Ahandonment—Reinstaltment—Grounds for.]—The defendants, after setting down an appeal for hearing by a divisional court, served motice abandoning it, and the case was struck out of the list. They afterwards moved to have it restored to the list:—Held, that if the motion could be treated as one for leave to appeal notwithstanding the lapse of time, it would be incumbent upon the applicants to shew that prima facie the judgment below was wrong; and there being no error apparent on the face of the judgment, and no specific error having been pointed out, such an application must be refused. But, semble, the motion could not be so treated. The judgment below found that the defendants were trespassers, and directed a reference as to damages. When the appeal was abandoned the defendants thought the claim of the plaintiffs would be much smaller than it subsequently appeared to be; and on learning the size of the claim, the defendants wished to renew their appeal;—Held, no ground for interfering. Union Bank of Canada v. Rideau Lumber Co., 19 P. R. 106.

Extension of Time—Forum.]—A motion to extend the time for moving before a divisional court against the judgment of the trial Judge should not be made to a Judge in chambers, but to the divisional court itself. Imperial Loan Co. v. Baby, 13 P. R. 59.

Judgment on Further Directions.]—
The master, further directions and costs being reserved. After report made the case was heard on further directions by Judge;—
Heid, that the case could not be reheard before a divisional court, as the proceedings taken could not be regarded as the trial of an action within the meaning of rules 317 and 519, O. J. Act. Wansley v. Smallwood, 10 P.

Order on Appeal from Master's Certificate.)—An appeal does not lie to a divisional court from the decision of a Judge in court upon an appeal from a master's report. The certificate of a master is a report, and is subject to the same rules as to appeal as an ordinary report. Re Molphy, Beckes v. Tiernaa, 17 P. R. 247.

Railway Act—Order of Judge—Persona Designata.]—A Judge making an order under s. 165 of the Dominion Railway Act, 51 Vict. c. 29, for payment out of court of compensation moneys, acts, not for the court, but as persona designata by the statute; and no appeal to a divisional court lies from his order. Canadian Pacific R. W. Co. v. Little Seminary of Ste Thérèse, 16 S. C. R. 606, followed. Re Toronto, Hamilton, and Buffalo R. W. Co. and Hendric, 17 P. R. 199.

Security on.]—Rule 825, providing that no security for costs shall be required on a motion or appeal to a divisional court, does not preclude a defendant from obtaining an order for security for costs where the plaintiff has taken up his residence abroad after a judgment dismissing his action without costs, from which his appeal to a divisional court is pending. Arnold v, Van Tuyl, 30 O. R. 663, distinguished. Tanner v. Weiland, 19 P. R. 149.

Setting down—Striking out.]—When a case is improperly set down to be reheard, a substantive motion should be made to strike it out. Wansley v. Smallwood, 10 P. R. 233.

- Time.]—An appeal made at the first sittings of the court:—Held, not too late under rule 414, though more than eight days had elapsed and the time had not been extended. Hewson v. Macdonald, 32 C. P. 407.

An objection that a notice of motion given for a sittings of the divisional court, and served in time to be set down during that sittings, could not be set down in the following sittings, was overruled. Brassert v. McEwen, 10 O. R. 179.

Short Notice—Stay of Proceedings.]—A divisional court has jurisdiction to allow an appeal from the judgment of a trial Judge to be set down upon short notice of motion, and to stay proceedings pending the appeal. Todd v. Rusnell, 17 P. R. 127.

Winding-up Act—Ruling of Master.]—
By virtue of 52 Vict. c. 32, s. 20 (D.), a divisional court has jurisdiction to entertain an appeal from the ruling and decision of the master in ordinary, on a reference to him under that section. In re Central Bank of Canada, 30 O. R. 320.

See Ball v. Cathcart, 16 O. R. 525, post VIII. 6.

3. Special Case.

Reservation of—Motion for Judgment.]
—Under the O. J. Act, s. 25, s.-s. 2, a Judge sitting elsewhere than in a divisional court is to decide all questions properly coming before him, and is not to reserve any case, or any point in a case, for the consideration of a divisional court. Till v. Till. 15 O. R. 133.
On the trial of an action, the pleadings

On the trial of an action, the pleadings were admitted to state the facts, and what was called "a special case on the pleadings," was reserved for the opinion of the Judges of the common pleas division. On the case coming before a divisional court of that division, it was held that the special case as such could not be entertained; but the application was directed to be turned into a motion for judgement under rule 323, or on the pleadings and admissions under rules 315 and 321. Ib.

VII. DIVISIONS OF HIGH COURT.

1. Intituling of Proceedings.

Interpleader Order — Several Executions.]—Where an interpleader order is intituled in two actions, in different divisions of the high court, there being two executions in the sheriff's hands, an appeal from the order may be entertained in either division, although one of the execution creditors has been barred by the order, from which there is no appeal on that ground, Hogaboom v. Grundy, 16 P. R. 47.

Wrong Division—Amendment.]—The action was in the Queen's bench division; but the plaintiff, in applying with respect to the costs of writs of fi, fn, and a set-off of costs, intituled his proceedings in the chancery division and "in the matter of certain orders made in the action:"—Held, that this was formally wrong; but an amendment was allowed on payment of costs. Clarke v. Creighton, 14 P. R. 34.

See Re Olmstead v. Errington, 11 P. R. 366, post X.

2. Registrars of Divisions.

Affidavit—Power to Receive.]—The registrar of a division of the high court has power to receive evidence by affidavit to shew that an order of court has not been obeyed, and to enforce the order by striking out paragraphs of the defence. Hamilton Road Co. v. Flatt, 10 P. R. 581.

Signing Order. |—Where an action in the Queen's bench division or common pleas division of the high court of justice is, under rule 590, set down for trial at a sitting for trial of actions in the chancery division, any order made in such action by the Judge presiding at such sitting should be signed by the officer who acts as registrar at such sitting, and not by the registrar of the division to which the action belongs. Waghorn v. Havekins, 12 P. R. 145.

3. Transferring Causes from one Division to Another.

Jury—Expediting Triat.]—Where a plaintiff brings an action in the chancery division which is proper to be brought there, he will not be allowed to transfer either on the ground that he wishes it tried by a jury, or that a transfer would expedite the trial. Vermilyea v. Guthrie, 9 P. R. 267.

Notice of Transfer — Judgment.]—The action was transferred from the chancery division to the common pleas division of the high court by an order of the Judges, but the plaintiff, not having notice of the transfer, signed judgment in the chancery division. An order was made retransferring the case to the chancery division, and allowing the judgment entered to stand and be in force from its entry, without costs. Patterson v. Murphy, 9 P. R. 306.

Reason for Transfer.]—Since rule 545, O. J. Act, an action is not to be transferred from one division of the hight court of justice to another, except on very strong grounds. Masse v. Masse, 10 P. R. 574. But see next

Held, that rule 545, O. J. Act, was not intended to and does not interfere with the power of transferring actions from one division of the high court to another. Pausson v. Merchants Bank of Canada, 11 P. R. 72; Herring v. Brooks, ib. 15.

VIII. JUDGES AND MASTERS.

1. Judge at the Trial.

Power to Vary Judgment — Costs.]—
The judgment of the trial Judge, not drawn up or entered, but indorsed upon the record, was in favour of the plaintiffs against all the control of the costs, but was afterpredicted and the costs of the control of the costs in accordance with what they considered should have been the judgment, had it been against them alone, and in favour of the other defendants, they being administrators, and an administration order having been made before the trial. The judgment, as pronounced, expressed precisely what the trial Judge intended; there was no clerical error, inadvertence, or oversight:—Held, that the Judge had no power to vary his judgment. Port Elgin Public School Board v. Eby, 17 P. R. 58.

See Till v. Till, 15 O. R. 133, ante VI. 3; Sarnia, &c., Co. v. Perdue, 11 P. R. 224, post 2 (b).

2. Judge in Chambers.

(a) Appeals from Orders of.

Extension of Time for.]—The decision appealed from was given on the 14th, and the notice of appeal on the 26th November, the first day of Michaelmas sittings being the 17th November:—Semble, that the motion was by way of appeal, and not a substantive metion to rescind, and if so, and rule 414 was to govern, the appeal was too late; but that the court would extend the time, as the merits were with the appellant. McLaren v. Marks, 10 P. R. 451.

Habeas Corpus.]—Powers of Judge in chambers with reference to writs of habeas corpus. See Regina v. Arscott, 9 O. R. 541; In re Sproule, 12 S. C. R. 140.

Order for Jury Trial.]—In an action bounding to set aside a conveyance:—Held, that while under the Act respecting the Court of Chancery (R. S. O. 1877 c. 40, s. 79) the court might direct an action to be tried by a jury upon notice and for good cause, yet this could only be done by the court, and not by a Judge or the master in chambers. Thurlow v. Beck, 9 P. R. 268.

Order for Set-off.]—Quere, when a judgment, as in this case, has been framed without directing a set-off, whether a Judge in chambers has power to direct it to the prejudice of the solicitor, so as to vary the decree of the court. Brown v. Nelson, 11 P. R. 121.

Order of Reference.] — A Judge has jurisdiction under s. 48, O. J. Act, to make a compulsory order referring not only questions of account, but also all the issues of fact in any action to an official referee. Ward v. Pilley, 5 Q. B. D. 427 followed. Shields v. MacDonald, 14 A. R. 118.

Order made at Trial—Venue.]—An official referee, sitting for the master in chambers, refused an application by the defendant to change the place of trial from Sarnia to Stratford, but gave leave to bring on an appeal from his order, or a substantive motion to change the place of trial before the Judge at the Sarnia assizes, who entertained the motion, which was made according to the leave given, and made the order changing the venue to Stratford. The order was drawn up as made by a Judge at the assizes, and was signed by the local registrar at Sarnia:
—Hield, that, having regard to rule 254, 0. J. Act, and to the leave given and the character of the motion, the order of the Judge was to be regarded as that of a Judge and not of the high court, and could therefore be reviewed by a divisional court. Sarnia

Agricultural Implement Manufacturing Co. v. Perdue, 11 P. R. 224. There is nothing to prevent a Judge sitting at the assizes hearing a chambers motion, if he is disposed for the purpose to treat the court room as his chambers. Such an application as this, however, should not be made at the trial on account of the inconvenience and detriment to the public interest arising from the delay of other business appropriate to the assizes, and on account of the injustice to the assizes, and on account of the injustice to the result in the court of the cause who have prepared for that itself the cause who have prepared for containing the control of the court of convenience or the question of the balance of convenience or the question of the balance of convenience or the question of the balance that the court of the Rescission of Order for Ca. Sa.]—A Judge in chambers has no power to rescind his own order for a writ of ca. sa. or to discharge the defendant from custody after the order has been acted upon. McNabb v. Oppenheimer, 11 P. R. 214.

Rescission of Order for Costs.]—A motion made to the master in chambers on the 27th October, 1886, to rescind his own exparte order of the 12th October, 1886, allowing the executrix of the plaintiff to issue execution for the costs of a motion for prohibition, was referred to a Judge in chambers. The motion was made after execution had been issued and placed in the sheriff's hands:—Held, that neither the master nor the Judge in chambers had the power to rescind the order; and the motion was too late to be treated as an appeal. McNabb v. Oppenheimer, 11 P. R. 214, followed. Stanior v. Evans, W. N. 1885, p. 210, considered. Re Doyle v. Henderson, 12 P. R. 38.

Speedy Judgment.]—A Judge sitting in chambers has no jurisdiction to order judgment to be signed under rule 324 (a), but a motion for judgment thereunder must be made to the court. Morrison v. Taylor, 46 U. C. R. 492.

Setting aside Default Judgment,]—
The Judge who presides at the trial and pronounces judgment by default for the defendant in the absence of the plaintiff, has power under rule 270, O. J. Act, when afterwards sitting as the court at Toronto, to set aside such judgment. Ross v. Carscallen, 11 P. R. 104.

Setting aside Order for Ca. Sa.]—A Judge in court has power to set aside an order of a local Judge made without jurisdiction directing the issue of a ca. sa. Waterhouse v. McVeigh, 12 P. R. 676.

See ante 2.

4. Local Judges and Masters.

(a) Appeals from Orders of.

New Material on Appeal.]—Leave was given to the defendants to read new affidavits upon their appeal from an order of a local master obtained ex parte by the plaintif. Taylor v. Sisters of Charity of Ottawa, 11 P. R. 496.

Order Refusing to Rescind—Time.]—An exparte order for the production of a document was made by the local master at Belleville on the 17th August, 1885, and an order was made by the same officer on the 9th September, 1885, refusing to rescind his former order. The defendants appealed from the latter order:—Held, that the appeal was, in effect, an appeal from the original order, as the result, if the appeal were successful, would be to rescind that order, and the appeal was the result dismissed as too late, under rule 427, O. J. Act. Jamieson v. Prince Albert Colomisation Co., 11 P. R. 115.

Time for Hearing—Dies non—Motion to Strike out.]—An appeal from an order made by a local master on Saturday the 17th April, was set down to be heard on Monday the 26th April, which was Easter Monday, a dies non. The appeal was put on the paper for the following Monday:—Held, that this course was proper and convenient, and also that the proper mode of objecting to the appeal was by a motion to strike it off the list as improperly set down, McCaue v. Ponton, 11 P. R. 328.

Vacation—Extension.]—Christmas vacation is not to be excluded in reckoning the eight days within which an appeal from the master or local Judge or master in chambers is to be brought on under rule 427, O. J. A. As such appeals are not heard in vacation, the time for appealing will be extended as a matter of course upon an exparte application. Snowden v. Huntington, 12 P. R. 1

See Ryan v. Canada Southern R. W. Co., 10 P. R. 535; Locomotive Engine Co. v. Copeland, 10 P. R. 572; Waterhouse v. Mc-Veigh, 12 P. R. 676.

(b) Jurisdiction of.

Allowance of Taxed Costs in Partition Matter,]—Held, that a local master has no jurisdiction to make an order under con. rule 1187 allowing the parties to an action or proceeding for administration and partition taxed costs instead of the commission provided for by the rule, "unless otherwise ordered by the court or a Judge." This was an action in which a judgment for partition and administration was pronounced by a Judge in court;—Held, that more especially in this case a local master had no power to interfere, for by ordering taxed costs instead of commission he was varying the judgment. Hendricks v, Hendricks, 13 P. R. 79.

Ca. Sa.—Discharge from Custody.]—A local Judge of the high court has no power to order the discharge of a defendant held in custody under a ca. sa. issued out of the high court of justice. Cochrane Manufacturing Co. v. Lamon, 11 P. R. 351.

-Issue of,]—The Judge of a county court has no power either as such Judge or as a local Judge of the high court to order the issue of a ca. sa. in an action in the high court. Cochrane Manufacturing Co. v. Lamon, 11 P. R. 331, followed. A Judge of the high court sitting in "single court," has power to set aside such an order. Waterhouse v. MeVeigh, 12 P. R. 676.

Order for Examination de Bene Esse, 1—Held, following the former chancery practice, that a local Judge may make an exparte order for the examination of a witness de bene esse, on the ground that he is dangesously ill, and not likely to recover. Baker v. Jackson, 10 P. R. 624.

Order of Reference,]—Local masters and county court Judges acting under rule 422, O. J. Act, have no jurisdiction, under ss. 47 and 48, O. J. Act, to order references in opposed cases. White v. Beemer, 10 P. R. 531.

Local masters have no greater powers in matters coming before them in chambers under the jurisdiction given them by the Ontario Judicature Act and 48 Vict. c. 13, s. 21 (O.), than those conferred upon the master in chambers, and from these powers the power of referring causes under the Common Law Procedure Act is excepted. A local master has, therefore, no power to make an order to proceed against an absconding debtor, upon default, after service of the writ of attachment, where such order contains a clause directing a reference under s. 197 of the Common Law Procedure Act, Bank of Hamilton v. Baine, 12 P. R. 418.

mon Law Proceeding Act. Bank of Hamilion V. Baine, 12 P. R. 418.

It is intended by ss. 8 and 9 of the Abstonding Debtors Act that only one order shall be made under which the plaintiff may proceed to judgment, and, therefore, where an order of reference is necessary, the order to proceed must be made by a Judge, who has jurisdiction to refer causes, Ib.

writ of summons. Ib.
See Union Loan and Savings Co. v. Boomcr, 10 P. R. 630.

Partition or Sale—Lands in Several Counties.]—Where lands are situate in different counties, a local master has no jurisdiction to make an order for the partition or sale thereof, and such an order and the proceedings thereunder, even as to lands within the county in which he is master, are wholly void, Queen v. Smith. 7 P. R. 429, followed. Wichol v. Allenby, 17 O. R. 275.

Proceedings for the Winding-up of Companies. - See COMPANY.

Rescission of Order — Appeal.] — The plaintiff's solicitors lived at Sandwich, and the defendant's solicitors at Toronto. The local Judge at Sandwich in November, 1884, made an ex parte order for leave to the plaintiff to amend the writ of summons before service, and subsequently set aside his own orders on the defendant's application, on notice to the plaintiff and after argument by counsel on behalf of both parties. The plaintiff appealed from the second order to a Judge in chambers at Toronto:—Held, that the local Judge had no power to make the rescinding order under rule 422. O. J. Act. Subsequently the defendants made a substantive motion before the same Judge in chambers at Toronto, to set aside the original order of the local Judge—Held, that, save as excepted, a local Judge of the high court having the same power in chambers as a Judge of the high court in chambers as a Judge of the high court in chambers. A Judge of the high court having the same power in the Judicature Act rules, he is a Judge of the high court having the same power to review the decision of a local Judge, save by way of appeal in the manner provided by the Judicature Act rules; and that this motion could not be treated as an appeal, as it was too late under rule 427, O. J. Act. Ryan v. Canada Southern R. W. Co., 10 P. R. 523. But see Jamieson v. Prince Albert Colonization Co., 11 P. R. 115, supra.

— Dicisions of High Court, 1—No objection to his jurisdiction was taken before the master:—Held, that the application having been entertained, an appeal to a Judge in chambers of the chancery division, instead of to a Judge of the common pleas or Queen's bench division, was proper under R. S. O. 1877 c. 39, s. 31, and rule 427, O. J. Act; the effect of the O. J. Act being to abolish all distinctions between superior courts of law and equity. Brigham v. McKenzie, 10 P. R. 406.

Held, following the principle of the decision in Re Wilson v. McGuire, 2 O. R. 118, that the provincial legislature had power to invest the master with authority to try controverted municipal election cases, Regina cx rel. McGuire v. Birkett, 21 O. R. 162.

Reference to District Judge — Unorganized Territory Act, I.—In an action brought for damages to the plaintiff's house situated in a provisional judicial district, an order was made by the master in chambers, assuming to act under the Unorganized Territory Act, R. S. O. 1887 c. 91, directing that issues of fact be referred to the district Judge, reversing further directions and questions of law arising at the trial for the disposal of a Judge in court. Notice of trial was given for the district court, and the case was heard by the district Judge, and the case was heard by the district Judge for the plaintiff. The plaintiff moved for judgment on such findings before a Judge in court, the defendant at the same time appealing from the judgment or report, whereupon the Judge disposed of both motions, directing judgment to be entered for the plaintiff for the amount found by the district Judge. On appeal to a divisional court: — Held, that, apart from the question of jurisdiction of the master to make the order, as the parties had treated it as valid, and the subsequent order of the Judge in court remained unreversed and not appealed from, the court would not interfere: that if the question of the jurisdiction of the master were involved, the appeal should have been to the court of appeal. The Judge in chambers, or the referee sitting for him, should continue to exercise the jurisdiction formerly vested in the referee in chancery hambers in such matters, subject only to the confirmation of so much of the order as directed the distribution and payment out of court of the moneys to be realized, and made the confirming order. Re Decitit, 9 P. IK. 110. See con. rule 30, Setting aside Judgment.]—After judgment has been entered against an absconding debtor pursuant to the finding of a county court Judge on a reference under R. S. O. 1877 c. 68, s. 9, the master in chambers has no jurisdiction to set aside the judgment at the instance of another creditor who wishes to be let in to defend. Wills v. Carroll, 10 P. R. 142.

The plaintiff not appearing at the trial, which took place at the Picton Assizes, judgment was directed to be entered for the defendant, with costs. Application was subsequently made to the Judge at the same assizes to set aside the judgment and reinstate the case on the list. This was refused, the plaintiff not being then ready to go on. Application was then made by the plaintiff to the master in chambers under rule 270, O. J. Act, to set aside the judgment entered at the trial. This motion was enlarged before a Judge in chambers, who:—Held, that rule 270, O. J. Act, does not give jurisdiction to the master or a Judge an enambers in such cases. Hullard v. Arthur, 10 P. IX. MASTERS AND REFERENCES.

1. Directing Reference.

(a) In What Cases.

Account—Liability—Discretion — Person of Referee—Consent.] — The plaintiff's claim was upon an oral agreement entitling him to one-half of certain commission received by the defendant; and his case depended upon being able to prove the agreement, and to shew that he performed the services which were to form the consideration for it; if the plaintiff succeeded in establishing the agreement and the performance, the taking of an account would necessarily follow. The defendant filed a counterclaim, as to which there was no question that it would be proper to direct a reference either to arbitration or to an official Two days after the action was commenced, the defendant's solicitor wrote suggesting that all accounts between the parties should be settled by arbitration. The plaintiff subsequently made a motion to refer to an official referee under s. 48, O. J. Act, and the defendant moved to refer to a named arbitrator, or to some other arbitrator to be named by the court. The affidavit filed in support of the defendant's motion stated the belief of the deponent that the whole matter could be settled by a reference to an arbitrator to be appointed by the court, who would have authority to decide as to the validity of the alleged agreement. The court, being of opinion that the real contest was as to the person to whom the reference should be made, refused to interfere with the discretion exercised in referring the action to the referee, though made without the consent of the defendant. Shields v. MacDonald, 14 A. R. 118.

Municipal Treasurer — Sureties — Costs.]—In an action against a municipal treasurer a reference was directed to ascertain what was due from him, and an order was made permitting the sureties to appear upon the reference and contest the claims of the municipality. This order was varied by making provision for awarding costs as between the municipality and the sureties. Country of Essex v. 1948, 13 F. R. 474.

Damages—Breach of Contract—Hiring.]—Heference directed to determine the amount of damages sustained by the plaintiff under an agreement to serve defendant as manager of a tannery for six years, the agreement recting that plaintiff was to manage the works and the defendant was to furnish the capital, for failure of the defendant to perform his part of the agreement, and for the dismissal of the plaintiff. Blake v. Kirkpatrick, 6 A. R. 212.

Breach of Contract—Sale of Goods.]

The plaintiff sued for alleged breach of a contract to sell and deliver a quantity of hay to be inspected. The plaintiff gave evidence of shortage and defective quality, and asked for a reference as to damages; but the Judge who tried the case refused the reference, and gave judgment for the defendant:—Held, that the matters in question were proper for trial by a Judge, and that the plaintiff was not entitled to give prima facie evidence of a breach of contract and then have a reference as to damages. Cook v. Patterson, 10 A. R. 645.

Discretion—Appeal.]—The right of the trial Judge to refer the question of damages, as a question arising in the action, under z. 101 of the Judicature Act, is indisputable, at all events as a matter of discretion and subject to review; and it is for the party depending to the reference to shew that the discretion has been wrongly exercised. And where, in an action for damages for injury to the plaintiff's land on the bank of a navigable river and to his business as a bontman, by the acts of the three several defendants, who owned saw-mills higher up on the stream, in throwing refuse into it, it appeared that the plaintiff's title to relief and the liability of the defendants had been established in a former action, and the trial Judge heard the case only so far as to satisfy himself that the plaintiff had established a prima facie case on the question of damages, and directed a reference to assess and apportion them among the defendants, reserving further directions and costs:—Heid, that there was no miscarriage, and the discretion of the trial Judge should not be overruled. Ratte v. Booth, 16 P. R. 185.

Injunction — Undertaking — Discretion—Appeal, — The jurisdiction to award an inquiry as to or to assess damages without a reference, where an injunction has been granted and an undertaking as to damages given, is a discretionary one, to be exercised judicially and not capriciously. Where, in an action to set aside a sale of goods as fraudulent, a claim for damages by reason of an injunction was set up in the defence, and the trial Judge was, on the evidence, of opinion that no damage was proved occasioned by the injunction as distinct from the detriment arising from the litigation, and no additional evidence having been given, a divisional court, under the circumstances of this case, where the defendant was given his coots, although his conduct had been such as properly to evoke legal inquiry, refused to award a reference as to damages. Gault v. Murray, 21 O. R. 458.

Failure of Consideration — Delivery of Goods—Inquiry.]—The defendant, having delivered ties to a railway company, in excess of his contract, as he alleged, arranged that such ties should be returned as received by the company on a contract with the plaintiff. In anticipation of such returns, and of payment therefor, the plaintiff paid the defendant $1.000, and brought this action to recover the same, alleging that he never was able to procure returns or payment from the railway company, and that the consideration for the $1.000 had therefore failed. It was shewn in evidence that the plaintiff had, in a claim against the railway company for 19,883 ties, included 3,200 delivered by the defendant, and that, the railway company disputing such claim, a settlement had been effected, the plaintiff accepting $1.000 in full of his claim, and giving the company a formal release of all demands:—Held, that, to the extent to which demands is recompany a formal release of all demands:—Held, that, to the extent to which the company a formal release of all demands:—Held, that, to the extent to which except the company and the condition of the circumst, the latter could not, in view of the circumst had been effected by the defendant on the circumst of the inquiry directed as to the humber of ties delivered by defendant; and an appeal from the judgment directing such inquiry was accordingly dismissed. The objection that the Judge at the trial should have himself decided the issue as to failure of consideration, instead of directing an inquiry before the master, is not one that the court will entertain. Feather-stone v. Van Allen, 12 A. R. 138.

Liability—Damages—Special Referee.]— Except by consent, the court has no power to order a reference under s. 101 of the Ontario Judicature Act, R. S. O. 1887 c. 44, to any Judge of a county court. Where the question of the defendant's liability in an action is expressly raised on the pleadings, such question should be determined before a reference of all the questions of fact in controversy, including the amount of damages, is ordered.
v. Township of Raleigh, 14 P. R. 429. Feiester

Mortgage-Sale by Mortgagee - Scope of Pleadings-Judgment.]-A judgment directed that the master should take the usual accounts redemption or foreclosure of mortgaged premises, and should also take the accounts in respect to certain other matters set out in the pleadings. Under this the defendant contended that the master should take into account a certain sale by the plaintiff, as mortgage, to a person who, it appeared, had not paid his purchase money. There was no specific mention of this sale in the pleadings or judgment:—Held, that the proposed inquiry was not within the scope of the pleadings or the judgment or of con, rules 55 and 57; and the questions which it would raise were questions which ought to have been valued by shead of the planting of the planting that the proposed inquiry was not within the scope of the pleadings or the judgment or of con, rules 55 and 57; and the questions which it would raise were questions which ought to have been valued by the respect to certain other matters set out in the tions which ought to have been raised by pleadings and determined by the court, and not pleadings and occurrance by the court, and not delegated to the master. (b) Jurisdiction to Refer.

Judge - Compulsory Order - Issues of Fact.]—A Judge has jurisdiction under s. 48, O. J. A., to make a compulsory order referring not only questions of account, but also all the issues of fact in any action to an official referee. Ward v. Pilly, 5 Q. B. D. 427, followed. Shields v. Master in Chambers.] - The master in chambers, and local masters and county Judges, acting under rule 422, O. J. Act, have no jurisdiction under ss. 47 and 48, O. J. Act, to order references in opposed cases. White v. Beemer, 10 P. R. 531.

An appeal from the master's order directing a reference was treated as a substantive motion, and a reference was directed, under rule 323, O. J. Act. Union Loan and Savings Co. v. Boomer, 10 P. R. 630.

See Fewster v. Township of Raleigh, 14 P. R. 429, ante (a).

2. Jurisdiction of Master or Referee on Reference.

Administration - Insurance Money -Payment into Court.]-As to power of master in ordinary to order payment of insurance money into court in a case where the administration of the testator's estate had been referred to him. See Merchants Bank v. Monteith, Ex parte Standard Life Assurance Co., 10 P. R. 588.

- Validity of Will.]—The jurisdiction of the master's office is not co-extensive with that of the court in inquiring into and adjudicating upon the validity of documents; and there is no authority to support any implied or assumed delegation of the functions of the court to the master. Nor is there any practice in the master's office which allows parties to obtain a reference to the master so as to evade the ordinary judicial functions of the court, the ordinary junctial functions of the court, and then invoke those judicial functions in a tribunal of delegated and subordinate jurisdiction. In re Munsic, 10 P. R. 98.

The plaintiffs, when taking accounts before the master under the ordinary chambers order for the administration of personal estate. for the administration of personal estate, sought to have it declared that a bequest to R., who was one of the witnesses to the will, was valid:—Held, that the master had no jurisdiction, under such order and on oral pleadings, to adjudicate upon the validity of the will. 2. That, even if there was such jurisdiction, it could not be exercised in the absence of a personal representative of R.'s estate. Ib.

See Brooks v. Georgian Bay Saw-Log Salvage Co., 16 P. R. 511, post 4 (b).

Mortgage—Reference for Redemption or Sale—Validity of Mortgage—Execution Creditors—Added Parties.]—The plaintiff, as mortgagee of the defendants by an instrument dated 30th January, 1883, purporting to be duly executed by the defendants, commenced an action for the sale of the mortgaged property. The writ issued duly indorsed under rule 17, O. J. Act, and default being made, judgment was obtained under rule 78, O. J. Act, referring it to a meater to make and Mortgage-Reference for Redemption of Act, referring it to a master to make and take the inquiries and accounts as pre-scribed by G. O. Ch. 441. The master gave The master gave certain execution creditors, who had been made parties in his office and proved their claims, priority over the plaintiff on the ground that the instrument in question was invalid, the terms of s. 85 of the Canada Joint Stock Companies Act of 1877, which requires the sanction of a two-thirds vote of the shareholders, having been complied with :-Held, that under the decree the master had no power to adjudicate upon the validity of the instrument in question as a mortgage, and the execution creditors, not having moved against the judgment by virtue of which they were made parties, were also bound by the decree. Mc-Dougall v. Lindsay Paper Mill Co., 10 P. R.

Partition — Validity of Lease—Fraud— Issue.]—Held, that on a chambers reference for partition or sale of lands, made by the master in chambers, the master in ordinary has no jurisdiction to try the question of the validity of a lease under seal from the inte-tate, set up as a ten years' lease by one of the heirs-at-law, who claimed that the lands should be sold subject to his lease, some of the other heirs-at-law disputing the validity of the lease, and alleging that it was either a five years' lease, or that there had been a fraudulent alteration of the sealed instrument, there being an alteration in a material part apparent on the face. The reference was adjourned till after the trial of the question raised, and an issue was directed by a Judge in chambers under rule 25%, O. J. Act, to be tried at the next sitting for the trial of actions in the chancery division; the lessee to be plaintiff in the issue. Re Rogers, Rogers v. Rogers, 11 P. R. 90.

3. Place of Reference and Person of Referee.

Administration — Proper Place.] — The testator lived and died in the county of S.; the defendant executor lived there; and one of the two parcels of land which made up the real estate of the testator was in that county. The other and smaller parcel of land was in the county of Y., and the plaintiff's solicitors practised there:—Held, that the reference for administration should be to the master at the county town of S. Re Armstrong, Armstrong, 18 P. R. 55.

Arbitrator Appointed by Court—Consent.]—See Shields v. MacDonald, 14 A. R. 118, ante 1 (a).

Local Registrar.]—See Kennedy v. Haddow, 19 O. R. 240, post 5.

4. Proceedings on Reference.

(a) Taking Accounts,

Amendment.]—Where an amendment in a matter of account, as stated in the pleadings, Vol. III. D—176—27 would be allowed before decree, a similar amendment should also be allowed, if asked for, in respect of the accounts filed after decree, in the master's office. Court v. Holland, 4 O. R. 688.

Garriage of Proceedings—Executor.]—An accounting party should not have the carriage of the proceedings in the master's office, especially where there is a competition between an executor and benedicaries as to who should be first in obtaining an administration order. Such an order, obtained ex parte on the application of an executor, was varied by giving the conduct of the reference to two of the legatees, where the Judge had not been referred to the course of practice, and so had exercised no discretion to prevent the interference of the court. The order should not have been made without notice to the legatees, who were named as parties defendant in the proceedings taken by the executor. Re Curry, Curry, t. T. P. R. 63.

Interest.] — The circumstances under which interest on a claim ought to be allowed or refused in the master's office, considered and acted on. Re Ross, 29 Gr. 385.

— Executor—Rests—Report—Further Directions—Appeal.]—The master has authority to take the account with rests, under the ordinary reference, as against an executor, but where he declines to charge the executor in this way, if it is intended to appeal, he should be required to report the facts to enable the court to determine on the propriety of his decision. Quare, whether it is not the more proper course to bring the matter up on further directions with all the materials for consideration spread out on the report, rather than to appeal in such a case. Amendment of Pleadings.]—The master has no jurisdiction to make amendments to the pleadings after judgment; nor could he give leave to file a statement in his office raising a defence which ought to appear in the pleadings. Hughes v. Rees, 10 P. R. 301.

Delay—Warrant, |—The object of rule 51 is to protect the court and its officers from undue delay in the prosecution of references. Where there has been undue delay in the prosecution of a reference, the party having the conduct of it should not be refused a warrant to proceed, if he applies therefor before any action has been taken by the master under rule 51, and there is nothing but delay to interieve with the granting of it. Re Cannon, Outer v. Cannon, 14 P. R. 502.

Dividing Evidence-Liability-Damages - Contract-By-law - Amendment.1 - On a reference of the matters in question in an action, unless the line between the questions of law and fact is clear and distinct, it is in-advisable to divide up the reference by first directing the evidence to the legal liability, leaving the quantum of damages and all other matters to be afterwards disposed of. An objection as to the want of proof of a by-law contract for the erection of authorizing a municipal buildings, raised for the first time at the close of the proceedings before a master on a reference in an action to recover a balance alleged to be due, was overruled, where the existence of the contract was alleged in the statements of claim and defence, and the contract was identified by the mayor on the application for the reference by the defendants and made part of the defendants' material, and treated as the contract throughout the whole reference, and on which large sums of money had been paid under by-laws passed therefor. Leave to amend so as to set up such objection refused. Ryan v. Village of Carleton Place, 31 O. R. 639.

Evidence—Depositions on Former Proceeding in Same Cause.]—In a mortrage action there was a reference to a master for sale, &c. After sale and satisfaction of the plaintiff's claim out of the proceeds, a balance remained in court, which R. G. applied to the master to have paid out to her. Upon such application R. G. was examined before the master, who refused the application. An order was afterwards made by a Judge referring to the master to ascertain who was entitled to the fund, and to settle priorities. Upon such reference the master ruled that the depositions of R. G. taken upon the former application could be read;—Held, that the depositions could be read; subject to the right of A., an opposing claimant of the fund, to cross-examine R. G. upon them; R. G. to attend for such cross-examination upon payment of conduct money by A. Maclennan v. Gray, 12 P. R. 431.

Reasons for Report.] — Held, that the master was the final judge of the credibility of the witnesses, and his report should not be sent back because some irrelevant evidence may have been given of a character not likely to have affected his judgment, especially as no appeal was taken from his ruling on the evidence. On a reference to a master, the latter, provided he sufficiently follows the directions of the decree, is not obliged to give his reasons for, or enter into a detailled explanation of, his report to the court. Booth v. Ratté, 21 S. C. R. 637.

— Subpana—Local Manager of Bank—Production of Bank Books.]—Upon a motion by the plantiff to commit the local manager of a chartered bank, who was subpensed to attend before a master upon a reference, and there to produce the books of the bank and give evidence, for his contempt in not complying with the subpense:—Held, that a substitution of the bank of the bank and give evidence of the sissued to compel the attendance of the sissued to complet the attendance of the bank the subpense:—It is the substitution of the bank the books that were in use, and attend during banking hours for the purpose of an examination in a matter in which he had no interest except as a withness; and it would therefore be proper for the master to take the evidence at the banking offices after banking hours. Hannum v. McRae, 17 P. R. 557, 18 P. R. 185.

Foreign Commission — Jurisdiction of Referee, [— A referee upon a reference under 8, 102 of the Judicature Act, R. S. O. 1887 c. 44, has jurisdiction to order the examination of foreign witnesses under a commission. Rule 34-37, 25, 28, 39, 73, 552, considered. Semble, the provisions of rule 590 are embraced by inference in rule 35 so as to enable the referee, by express terms, to grant certificates for the issue of foreign commissions. But the mere form, whether by certificate or order, is immaterial, having regard to rules 441, 442. Hayward v. Mutual Reserve Association, [1891] 2 Q. B. 236, and Macalpine v. Calder, [1893] 1 Q. B. 545, followed. Brooks v. teorgian Bay Save-Log Salvage Co., 16 P. R. 511.

Raising Issue Not in Pleadings.]—In his pleadings, in an action for an account the plaintiff set up that on 23rd April, 1878, he transferred to the defendant 160 shares of a certain bank, as a security for a loan, and that pending the loan the defendants had sold the said stock and realized more than the indebtedness, whereof he claimed an account, and the parties went to trial on admissions that the bank stock was in the defendants hands at the said date. In the master's office the plaintiff sought to raise an issue as to whether the defendants actually did hold the bank stock on that date, or whether, having held it previously as security for another loan, they had not parted with it before the said date, and falsely represented to the plaintiff that they still held it, and whether they were not liable to be charged with its market value as of that date:—Held, affirming the decision of the master in ordinary, that the plaintiff could not be allowed thus to set up a different state of facts and cause of action from that spread upon the record. Carnegie v. Federal Bank of Canada, 8 O. R. 75.

Service of Warrant—Dispensing with.]
—Upon an application in chambers for an order dispensing with service of a warrant and all subsequent proceedings in the master's office upon certain absent defendants, other defendants in the same interest being represented:—Held, by Meredith, J., that rule 407 did not apply to the case, and, as the matter was one in the master's discretion, the order should not be made. Leave being given to renew the application:—Held, by Boyd, C., that, in accordance with rule 3, the practice should be regulated by analogy to rule 467, and the order should be made. Smith v. Houston, 15 P. R. 18.

Settlement pending Reference-Finding—Report—Opening up—Costs.]—Pending a reference to take accounts, a settlement was made between the parties, in the absence of their solicitors, but there was a dispute as to the terms. The master, on the suggestion of the plaintiff, gave the parties the alternative, the phinting gave the parties in alternative, either to proceed so as to determine whether the settlement did in fact end the matters in litigation, or to go on with the accounts as if there had been no settlement. The defendants, however, refused to take any further part in the proceedings in the master's office. The master found the fact of a settlement, and also that the defendants had agreed to pay the plaintiff's costs as part of the settlement, which the defendants disputed:—Held, on appeal from the master's report, that it was competent for him to deal with the question whether there was or was not a settlement, and report according to the result. The course taken by him was according to the proper practice and within the scope of his jurisdiction. The decisions as to staying proceedings, upon summary application, in case ceedings, upon summary application, in case of a compromise, are not necessarily applicable to a compromise arrived at pending a reference; see rule 667. The defendants, however, should not be prejudiced by their having withheld before the master any evidence to support the settlement in the terms which they asserted; and therefore the report should be opened up on payment of costs. Corry V. Lemonic, 18 P. R. 482.

Solicitor's Lien — Disallowance.]—A referee before whom administration proceedings are taken has no authority to make an order depriving a solicitor of his lien for costs on a fund in court on the ground that adverse parties have a prior claim on such fund for costs which the said solicitor's client has been personally ordered to pay, the administration order not having so directed the referee, and there being no general order permitting such an interference with the solicitor's prima facie right to the fund. Bell v. Wright, 24 S. C. R. (556.

Title—Leave to File Supplementary Objections.]—By an agreement for the sale of certain land, the vendor was to give a good marketable title, of which the purchaser was to satisfy himself at his own expense, and was not to call for any abstract of title, deeds, or evidences of title other than those in the green of the same of th

(a) Appeal from.

Forum — Chambers — Court — Costs.] — Where, after the argument in chambers of an appeal from the master's report, counsel for one of the parties asked that the appeal might be treated as though argued in court, and any order made thereon issue as a court order; or, at all events, that costs should be allowed as of a court motion:—Held, that, although the appeal would, on account of its nature, have been adjourned into court, if such adjournment had been asked before the argument of it, the present application was too late, and the court had no power to grant it. Re Fleming, 11 P. R. 272.

— Divisions of Court.]—Having regard to the provisions of 44 Vict. c. 5, s. 25 (O. J. Act), the setting down of an appeal from a report in an action in the chancery division, to be heard at a sitting of chambers in another division, is a nullity. Re Christie, Christie v. Christie, 22 P. R. 15.

Interlocutory Ruling, 1—General O.
Ch. 642 provided for an appeal to a Judge in chambers against any decree, order, report, ruling, or other determination of any master; but this order has been abrogated, and the provisions for appeals from masters and referees are now contained in con. rules 848-850, in which there is no provision for an appeal from a ruling or certificate, but from a report only. A party to any reference has a right to come to the court, at any stage, with any well founded complaint against the conduct of the referee, either personal misconduct or error in receiving or rejecting evidence, or otherwise; and con. rule 39 shews the intention to permit interlocutory rulings to be considered; but a Judge in chambers has no longer any jurisdiction, and the appeal must be to a Judge in court. Comee v. Canadian Pacific R. W. Co., 16 O. R. 639, 641, 642, 657, referred to. Markle v. Ross, 13 P. R. 135.

Quære, whether upon a reference to a local master, qua master, an appeal from an interlocutory order would lie under con. rule 846.

— Single Judge.]—Held, that a single Judge sitting as the court has power to review the findings of an official referee upon a reference under s. 48, O. J. Act. Hill v. Northern Pacific Junction R. W. Co., 11 P. R. 103.

Local Registrar—Master.]—Where, in a consent judgment in the usual form in lien cases, a veference was made to a local registrar of the court:—Held, that an appeal lay from his report, it appearing from the whole judgment that the reference was to him as master. Kennedy v. Haddove, 19 O. R. 240.

Necessity for Appeal—Amount.]—There should be no alteration in the amount found due by the master when such amount has not been appealed against. Judgment in 11 O. R. 611 upheld in part. Gordon v. Gordon, 12 O. R. 593.

Question of Fact.]—In an action for wages, there was a dispute as to the nature of the agreement for hiring; there was evidence at the trial which would have supported a finding for either party. The question was wholly one of fact, and of the credibility of witnesses. The jury found in favour of the plaintiff; but the Judge set the verdict aside, and sent the case to a referee, who found substantially as the jury had done. Upon motion the Judge made an order sending the case back to the referee with instructions to find against the plaintiff on one branch of the case.—Held, that the case was one specially proper for the decision of a jury, and that neither the verdict nor the finding of the referee should have been interfered with. Logg v. Ellwood, 14 A. R. 496.

Question of Law and Fact—Reasons for Findings.]—The report of a referee is equivalent to the verdict of a jury. It should state the referee's conclusions; and he need not give the reasons for his findings. Fauccett v. Winters, 12 P. R. 232.

The referee, who was a barrister, found that there was a want of reasonable and probable cause for the defendant proceeding criminally against the plaintiff. It was objected that this was a finding of law, and not of fact—Held, that this was equivalent to a verdict for the plaintiff rendered by a jury under instructions by a Judge of what would be evidence of want of reasonable and probable cause; and on the evidence the findings could not be interfered with. Ib.

Special Findings—Notice of Appeal.]—Held, that objections to special findings in a report must be raised by notice of motion. Luncy v. Essery, 10 P. R. 285.

Time—Date of Ruling—Evidence—Objection—Estoppel.]—An appeal from the ruling of a master in the course of a reference should be brought on within a month from the date of the ruling, irrespective of the date of the certificate of such ruling. Held, in this case, that the appellant was estopped from appealing from the master's ruling that depositions taken on a former application would be read as evidence, by reason of the appellant not having objected at a particular stage of the proceedings. Maclennan v. Gray, 12 P. R. 431.

— Dower—Term—Vacation.]—The report in an action for dower was filed on 29th May, during the Easter sitting of the court. A motion was made against it within the first four days of the Michaelmas sitting: —Held, that the motion was too late, for it should have been made to a vacation Judge under rules 482 and 483. Giles v. Morrow, 4 O. R. 649.

Extension of—Ex Parte Order.] — An order extending the time for appealing from a report of an official referee under O. J. Act, s. 47, should not be made ex parte. Hamilton v. Tweed, 9 P. R. 448.

Cross-appeal.]—According to the true meaning of rule (1897) 769, each party is precluded from appealing against the report or certificate of a master unless he serves his notice of appeal within the fourteen days mentioned in the rule; and notice of appeal given in proper time by one party does not prevent the report from becoming absolute as regards another party. Stewart v. Ferguson, 19 P. R. 21.

Extension — Judgment on Further Directions, 1—Held, that after the report of a referee has become absolute and a judgment on further directions founded thereon has been pronounced, drawn up, and entered, a Judge in chambers has no jurisdiction to entertain an application for leave to appeal; nor could any appeal be entertained unless the judgment on further directions were set aside; and that could not be done even by a Judge in court, but only by the proper appellate tribunal. Re Dingman and Halt, 13 P. R. 232.

Extension of—Vacation.] — An appeal was not made within the time required by rule 461, 0. J. Act, as it was supposed that Christmas vacation did not count. On the facts stated in the judgment leave to appeal was given on payment of costs. Seivewright v. Leys, 9 P. R. 200.

Setting down — Extension.]—The solicitors for the defendants (except L.) had given due notice of appeal, but through inadvertence set down the appeal on behalf of the defendant company only. Under the circumstances stated in the judgment, the other defendants were allowed to set down their appeal. Levis v. Talbot St. Gravel Road Co., 10 P. R. 15.

See Sievewright v. Leys, 1 O. R. 375; Snowden v. Huntington, 12 P. R. 1; Re Gabourie, Casey v. Gabourie, 12 P. R. 252.

See the next sub-head.

(b) Confirmation and Filing.

Execution before Confirmation.] — A decree directed a reference to a local master to ascertain such sums as would be sufficient to satisfy the damages complained of, awarded costs, and directed payment to be made forthwith after the making of the report:—Held, that the report did not require confirmation, and therefore that executions issued under it by the plaintiff were valid; but pending an appeal from the report the executions were stayed in the sheriff's hands. Lewis v. Talbot Street Gravel Road Co., 10 P. R. 15.

Where a reference is directed to the master to ascertain and state the amount of alimony which the defendant should pay, execution may be issued for the amount found by his report before confirmation thereof. Lewis v. Talbot Street Gravel Road Co., 10 P. R. 15, approved and followed. Bocck v. Bocck, 16 P. R. 313.

Interim Certificate,]—A certificate given by a master that certain accounts filed under his order are not sufficient in substance and form, comes within G. 0. 642, and cannot be enforced by attachment until confirmed by the lapse of a month. Foster v. Morden, 9 P. R. 70.

Necessity for—Reference under s. 101 of Judicature Act — Motion for Judgment.]—

In an action by V, against a municipality for damages from injury to property by the hecligent construction of a drain, a reference was ordered to an official referee "for inquiry and report pursuant to s. 101 of the Judicature Act and rule 552 of the high court of instice." The referee reported that the drain was improperly constructed, and that V, was entitled to 8600 damages. The municipality appealed to the high court from the report, and the court held that the appeal was too late, no notice having been given within the time required by con. rule $48, and refused to extend the time for appealing. A mouton for judgment on the report was also made by V, to the court, on which it was considered on behalf of the municipality that the whole case should be gone into upon the evidence, which the court refused to do:—Held, that the appeal not having been brought within one month from the date of the renort, as required by con. rule S48. It was too late; that the report had to be filed by the party appealing before the appeal could be brought, but the time could not be enlarged by his delay in filing it; and that the refusal to extend the time was an exercise of judicial discretion with which the court would not interfer. Held, also, that the report having been confirmed by lapse of time and not appealed against, the court on the motion for judgment was not at liberty to go into the whole case upon the evidence, but was bound to adopt the referred indings called for. Freeborn v. Vandusen, 15 F. R. 264, approved of and followed. Township of Colchester South v. Valad, 24 S. C. R. 622.

Notice of Filing—Service.]—The provision of con. rule 769 that notice of filing a master's report is to be served upon the opposing party is a prerequisite to the report becoming absolute. Where the report is upon a claim to rank on the assets of an insurance corporation in compulsory liquidation under the Ontario Insurance Act. R. S. O. 1897 c. 203, notice of filing the report given in the Ontario Gazette and other newspapers, pursuant to s. 193 of that Act, is not tantamount to personal service. Re Supreme Lagion Select Knights of Canada, Cunningham's Case, 29 O. R. 708.

Order Confirming—Consent—Forum.]— Unless by consent a report cannot be confirmed until after the lapse of the time limited by con. rule S48. It is an undesirable practice for an officer to make an order confirming his own report. Patterson v. Gilbert, 12 P. R. 652.

(c) Other Cases.

Drawing—Settling—Notice.]—A judicial officer charged with a reference should himself draw his report, and not delegate it to the solicitor for the successful party. Any exparte communication with a litigant as to the decision to be given should be avoided, and both parties should have equal facilities of knowing the result, and of being present at the drawing or settling of the report. Knarr v. Bricker, 16 P. R. 363.

Issue of—Payment of Fees.]—Upon a reference under s. 102 of the Judicature Act, the referee apportioned the amount of his fees between the plaintiffs and defendants according to the time occupied by each upon the reference. The plaintiffs paid their share, but the defendants did not:—Held, that the referee should issue his report to the plaintiffs without further payment by them, and look to the defendants for their share of his fees. Brooks v. Georgian Bay Sauc-Log Salvage Co., Rumley v. Georgian Bay Sauc-Log Salvage Co., T. 7. R. 3. 4.

Reference under s. 47, O. J. A., 1881

—Accessity for Specific Findings.]—At the trial of this action a compulsory order of reference was made, referring "all questions arising upon the pleadings of this action between the parties, including all questions of account (if any)," to an official referee "for inquiry and report:"—Held, that this was a reference under s. 47 of the Judicature Act, and not one under s. 48, and the referee having made a general finding by his report, the case was referred back to him to give specific findings. Luney v. Essery, 10 P. R. 285.

X. MOTIONS AND ORDERS.

1. Correction of Orders.

Accidental Slip or Omission-Carelessness—Delay—Terms.] — One of several defendants in ejectment by a mortgagee disclaimed title and denied possession, and the plaintiff's action was dismissed at the trial A divisional court reversed the decision at the trial, and ordered judgment to be entered for the plaintiff with all costs, the disclaiming defendant not appearing on the argument, al-though duly notified and served with the minutes of the order, upon which judgment was entered and execution issued:—Held, upon a motion to amend or vary the order as to costs, made after some months' delay, that the court, being satisfied that his defence was made out being satisfied that his detence was made out at the trial, in the exercise of its inherent powers over its records or the powers con-ferred by rule 780, could now correct an error arising from an accidental slip or omission in its order, and make the order as to the applicant's costs which would have been made originally. Held, also, that he was entitled to relief under rule 536, as amended by rule 1454, as a party who, through mistake, had 1404, as a party who, through mistake, had not been represented upon the argument of the appeal. Held, also, that the carelessness and delay of the applicant did not disentitle him to relief, though they afforded ground for imposing upon him the terms set out in the judgment. Cousins v. Cronk, 17 P. It. 348

Mistake—Time.] — A Judge may always correct anything in an order which has been inserted by mistake or inadvertence; and an order will be corrected even after the lapse of a year. McMaster V, Radford, 16 P. R. 20.

Varying Minutes.] — On a motion to vary minutes, nothing can be done at variance with the order as granted, but additions or variations may be made so as to carry out the intention of the court in pronouncing it.

*Hendrie v. Beatty, 29 Gr. 423.

2. Ex Parte Orders.

Examination of Plaintiff Abroad.]— See Thomas v. Storey, 11 P. R. 417.

Execution.]—Orders should not be made ex parte allowing issue of execution against goods of a testator or intestate in the hands of an executor or administrator. In re Trusts Corporation of Ontario and Bochmer, 26 O. R. 191.

Power to Rescind.]—A Judge or the master in chambers has power to reconsider a matter which has been brought before him ex parte, on the application of an opposing party; and he can also open up a matter in respect of which an order has been made after notice and upon default to shew cause, if he is satisfied that opposition was intended and that any injustice has arisen. Semble, that if necessary the words "ex parte order" in rule 536 may be read so as to cover cases going by default, where through some slip cause has not been shewn. Flett v. Way, 14 P. R. 123.

Taxation of Costs.]—All ex parte orders are periculo petentis. Præcipe order for taxation of costs set aside. Re McCarthy, Pepler, and McCarthy, 15 P. R. 261.

3. Notice of Motion.

Countermand — Withdrawal of Admissions—Leave—Motion for Judgment.]—After all parties had agreed upon a statement of facts, and the plaintiff had served notice of motion for judgment thereon, he delivered a statement of claim and served on the defendants a notice withdrawing the statement of facts and countermanding the notice of motion. One of the defendants then moved for judgment on the statement of facts, which had not been filed:—Held, that it was not necessary for the plaintiff to make an independent motion to be relieved from his admissions contained in the statement of facts, which had not been acted upon or brought before the court: after the filing of the statement of claim and the notice of withdrawal, it was not competent for the defendant to get judgment on the statement of facts; and if the sanction of the court were needed for the course taken by the plaintiff, it might be given upon the defendant's motion. Easi v. O'Connor, 19 P. R. 301.

Defective Notice — Appearing on — Costs. |—Where the defendant's solicitor was served with a short notice of motion which was admitted to be defective:—Held, that defendant was not entitled to the costs of counsel attending on the motion merely to shew that the notice was irregular. Waller v. Claris, 11 P. R. 130.

J. Act. Re Olmstead v. Errington, 11 P. R. 366.

Necessity for.]—No order of any moment should be made ex parte, except in a case of emergency. Thomas v. Storey, 11 P. R. 417.

Return of - Wrong Day - Leave.] Upon the proper construction of con. rule 800 a notice of motion to a divisional court must be made returnable on the first day of the sitting. But where, although the notice of motion had been made returnable on the fifth day of the sitting, it appeared that there had been a bona fide intention to move ten days before the sitting, when the notes of evidence were ordered, leave was given to set the motion down, costs being given against the party moving. Sierichs v. Woodcock, 13 P. R. 260.

Service out of Jurisdiction.]—See Re Confederation Life Association and Cordingly, 19 P. R. 16, 89: Harris v. Bank of British North America, ib. 51.

Specifying Grounds- Amendment.]-A notice of motion to a divisional court against the verdict and judgment at the trial, on the ground of non-direction, should shew how and in what matter there was non-direction. court may allow an amendment of the notice in a proper case; but it declined to assist the defendant by doing so where the non-direction was not material in view of other facts and findings, and the rule of law invoked by the defendant would have operated against a meritorious claim of the plaintiff. Pfeiffer v. Midland R. W. Co., 18 Q. B. D. 243, followed. Furlong v. Reid, 12 P. R. 201.

Specifying Irregularities.]-Irregularities relied on, need not be stated in a notice of motion if they are set out in affidavits, filed on the motion, and referred to in the notice. Blain v. Blain, 9 P. R. 269.

Time of Service — Setting down.] — An objection that a notice of motion given for objection that a notice of motion given for a sitting of a divisional court, and served in time to be set down during that sitting, could not be set down in the following sitting, was overvuled. Brassert v. McEucen, 10 O.

4. Other Cases.

Consent Order-Initialling.]-Held, that after an order has been pronounced, the initialling of it, as drawn up, by the solicitor for the party opposed to the party having the carthe party opposed to the party having the car-riage of it, does not make it a consent order, but merely assents to it as being the under-standing of the party of what was ordered by the Judge. McMaster v. Radford, 16 P. R.

Counsel — Number of.] — Upon an inter-locutory application the court will not hear more than one counsel for any party. Lang-don v. Robertson, 12 P. R. 139.

Delay in Issuing Order - Service -Setting aside Judgment.] — An order to set aside proceedings must be served forthwith; assic proceedings must be served forthwith; otherwise the opposite party may treat it as abandoned. Where final judgment was cut down to interlocutory judgment by order of a master, granted on the 9th July, but not issued or served till the 19th November:—Held, that the delay was fatal, and the master was wrong in allowing the stale order to be used against the judgment as originally signed. Bank v. Dillabaugh, 13 P. R. 312.

Enforcement of Order-Action.]-Prohibition granted to restrain the enforcement of a judgment in a division court in an action brought upon an order of a Judge in an action in the high court ordering the de-fendant in the division court action to pay rendam in the division could action to pay certain costs arising out of his default as a witness. Notwithstanding the broad provisions of rule 934, an order of the court or of a Judge is not for all purnoses and to all intents a judgment; and no debt exists by virtue of a judgment, and no dept exists by fitted as such an order as was sued on here. Rule 866 means that an order may be enforced in the action or matter in which it is, as a judg-ment may be enforced, and does not extend to the sustaining of an independent action upon the order. Re Kerr v. Smith, 24 O. R. 473.

Enlargement - Affidavits -Where a party obtains an enlargement of a motion for the purpose of procuring further affidavits, but does not comply with the terms on which the enlargement was granted, he is not entitled to read the affidavits. Campbell v. Martin, 11 P. R. 509.

The court ordered the defendant to pay to the magistrates their costs of appearing to shew cause against the motion. Regina v. Armstrong, 13 P. R. 306.

Signing Orders.]-Con. rule 544 provides that all orders made by a Judge of the high court in chambers shall be signed by the clerk in chambers:—Held, that an order for the arrest of the defendant signed by the Judge who made it, and not by the clerk, was not properly issued. St. Croix v. McLachlin, 13 P. R. 438.

Winding-up Act—Order of Court of Another Province—Production of Copy—Entry.]

-Execution may be issued under s. 85 of the Winding-up Act, R. S. XI. ORIGINATING NOTICES.

He had only two sisters, Catharine Kelly, to whom he bequeathed a like sum, by her proper name, and Maria Cummings.—Held, that the gift took effect in favour of Maria Cummings. Held, also, that a declaration to that effect could properly be made upon an originating notice under rule 938. In re Sherlock, 18 P. R. 6, followed. Re Whitty, 30 O. R. 300.

See Re Sherlock, 18 P. R. 6; S. C., 28 O. R. 638.

XII. SECOND APPLICATIONS.

Affidavits.] — Upon a motion to commit the defendant the court refused to allow the plaintiffs to read affidavits filed upon a previous application, the date of their filing not faving been stated in the notice of motion; and also refused to allow the plaintiffs to read an affidavif lifed after the service of the notice. Mackensie v. Carter, 12 P. R. 544.

Indulgence—Merits—Supplying Defects.]—It is only by the indulgence of the court that a second application is permitted or entertained where the first application has been refused. And where the defendants' applications for orders nisi to quash convictions were refused on the ground of non-compliance with the statute and rule requiring a recognizance and affidavit of justification to be filed, and the court upon such applications was not favourably impressed by what was urged as to the merits of the applications:—Held, that the indulgence of the court ought not to be extended in favour of fresh applications made by the defects. Regina v. Richardson, Regina v. Addison, 13 P. R. 303.

Leave to Appeal — Winding-up Act.]—Where an application for leave to appeal to the court of appeal from a decision in a matter under the Winding-up Act, R. S. C. c. 129, has been made under s. 74, and refused by a Judge, a fresh application will not be entertained by another Judge. The cases in which successive applications to successive Judges have been favoured are not pertinent to a case where the right to appeal, upon leave, is sought under a special statute. Re Sarnia Oil Co., 15 P. R. 347.

Summary Judgment — Material—Supplying Defects.]—Where the planiff's motion for judgment under con, rule 739 was dismissed because he had not observed the practice under con, rule 1251 of partly complying with an order upon him for security for costs by paying $50 into court, and he subsequently paid the money in and renewed the application upon the same material:—Held, that the dismissal of his first application was no bar to the second one. Semble, it would have been otherwise had the planitiff failed in his first application by reason of defects in his material, and made a second one upon new material supplying the defects, Payne v. Neuberry (No. 2), 13 P. R. 392.

Writ of Attachment.] — See Bank of Hamilton v. Baine (2), 12 P. R. 439.

XIII. SERVICE OF PAPERS.

Affidavits.]—Where a motion to commit is made, it is not necessary to serve with the notice of motion copies of the affidavits on which it is based. Decision in 17 P. R. 567 affirmed. Hannum v. McRac, 18 P. R. 185.

Dispensing with Service.]—See Smith v. Houston, 15 P. R. 18; Jones v. Miller, 24 O. R. 268.

Posting up Copies.]—Where service of a statement of claim and notice of motion for judgment was effected, under rule 1330, by posting up a copy of each in the office in which the proceedings were conducted:—Held, that the posting up of one copy only for two defendants was not to be deemed service on either; and a judgment founded thereon was set aside as irregular. Haacke v. Ward, 17 P. R. 529.

The defendants in this case not having appeared, the plaintiffs filed and posted up copies of a statement of claim, without filing the writ of summons and affidavit of service:—Held, that the posting of the statement could not, having regard to rule 574, be treated as a service upon the defendants. But, even if it could be so treated, a motion for judgment thereon and an assessment of damages would be necessary. Appleby v. Turner, 19 P. R.

Solicitor's Agent.]—Service of papers on a Toronto agent for an outside solicitor is not good, unless accompanied with a statement of the name of the solicitor for whom the agent is served. Prettie v. Lindner, 11 P. R. 313.

Service of papers on a solicitor as agent for another solicitor is not good service unless the solicitor served is the booked agent of the other, even though he has acted as agent in the same suit. Robinson v. Robinson, 13 P. R. 51.

Solicitor's Clerk.] — The service of a paper upon the clerk of the solicitor in the cause, elsewhere than at the office of the solicitor, is of no avail; it can only be effective, if at all, from the moment when it reaches the solicitor himself. Hermann v. Mandarin Gold Mining Co. of Ontario, 18 P. R. 34.

Substitutional Service.] — Where a judgment debtor had absconded, and his place of abode could not be ascertained, substitutional service upon him of a summons to set aside fraudulent conveyances made by him, was allowed. Dobson v. Marshall, 9 P. R. 1.

An order will not be made for substitutional service upon an officer of a litigant corporation of a subpean and appointment for his examination for discovery. Mills v. Mercer Co., 15 P. R. 281.

A witness is not liable to attachment for disobedience to a subpena served substitutionally pursuant to an order authorizing such service. Mills v. Mercer Co., 15 P. R. 281, applied and followed. Barber v. Adams, 16 P. R. 156.

See post XXI.

XIV. SETTLEMENT OF ACTIONS.

Creditors — Compromise — Estoppel,]—Where certain creditors and the administrator were parties to an order in chambers compromising an action respecting certain assets of the estate:—Held, that they were bound by such compromise, and could not impeach in this administration proceeding the validity of securities which had been in question in the action compromised. Merchants Bank v. Monteith, 10 P. R. 467.

Cross-actions - Costs.] - The plaintiff and defendants, having actions respectively pending against one another, agreed to settle the same upon certain terms, the written memorandum whereof stated that the plaintiff consideration of defendants' payment of $1,150 and all costs of the two suits, discharged the defendants from the suit pending against them and all claims whatever, and concluded that it was distinctly understood that defendants should pay all costs incurred by the plaintiff for witness fees and disbursements in connection with the two suits. fendants alleged that when the memorandum was drawn up there was inserted after the words all costs of the two suits the words "except the lawyer's expenses of the said party of the first part" (the plaintiff); that these words had been struck out by the plaintiff or on his behalf after execution; and that under the agreement defendants could only be called upon to pay the witness fees and dis-bursements: — Held, that the erasure took place prior to execution, but that the memorandum did not contain the true agreement of the parties, for that such agreement was that the plaintiff was to be paid all the costs of the two suits except the counsel fees. The plaintiff was therefore held entitled to such costs, which the master was directed to tax, and for which the plaintiff was to have a verdict. Mason v. Burrows, 29 C. P. 138.

Default.]—Settlement of suit for a sum payable by instalments, but to be void if not punctually paid — Default in fourth instalment—Right to bring the suit—Rellef. See Boland v. McCarroll, 38 U. C. R. 487.

Married Woman.] — A married woman can compromise an action brought in her own name against her husband. Vardon v. Vardon, 6 O. R. 719.

Notice by Solicitor to Parties—Costs—Coliusion.]—Where a compromise of the action has been effected between the parties in the solicitors, in order to entitle the plantiff's solicitor to enforce his lien for costs upon the fruits of the literation, by means of an order upon the defendant, collusion must be shewn, or the act compalined of must have been done after notice from the solicitor complaining. And where the parties made such a compromise, and the plaintiff's solicitor gave notice to the defendant's solicitor after the agreement but before payment of the money agreed upon:—Held, that this was sufficient notice. Santidge v. Ireland, 14 P. R. 29.

It is competent for a client to settle his action behind the back of his solicitor, notwithstanding that the solicitor has given notice to the client and to the opposite party not to settle except with the solicitor's consent. The equitable interference of the court cannot be invoked on behalf of a solicitor in an action settled in such a manner, unless there are fruits arising from such settlement upon which the solicitor's lien can attact; for there is no lien on the action. Upon such a settlement, unless where collusion between the parties to defraud the plaintiff's solicitor of his costs is clearly shewn, a defendant will not be ordered to pay the costs of the plaintiff's solicitor. Bellamy v. Connolly, 15 P. R. ST.

After judgment had been recovered by the plaintiff against the defendants for $550 damages and for costs, and while an appeal was pending, the plaintiff and defendants, without pending, the piantiff and detendants, without the knowledge of the plaintiff's solicitors, made an agreement for settlement of the ac-tion upon the plaintiff being taken into the defendants' employment and paid $150 in full of damages and costs. The plaintiff's solici-tors asserted a lien for their costs, which were unpaid, and gave notice thereof to the defendants before any money was actually paid over to the plaintiff:—Held, that the compromise made was not a collusive one, and the solici-tors were therefore not entitled to an order upon the defendants for the payment of their sts; but, such costs amounting to more than $150, that they were entitled to have that sum. for which the action was compromised, which was to be treated as the fruits of the paid over to them in respect of their lien. Held, also, that a question arising be-tween the plaintiff and his solicitors, as to whether they were entitled to taxed costs as between solicitor and client, or to a percentage upon the amount recovered, could not be determined upon the motion to enforce payment by the defendants of the plaintiff's solicitors' costs, but had to be determined in another proceeding before the determination of such mo-tion. Walker v. Gurney-Tilden Co., 18 P. R.

Settlement by Counsel or Solicitor—Repulation, —Where counsel, acting upon the instructions of the plaintiff's solicitor, effected a compromise of the action not authorized by the plaintiff and contrary to the express instructions given by her to the solicitor, the compromise was set aside and the plaintiff allowed to proceed to trial, but as the plaintiff and defendant were innocent parties, without costs to either against the other. Stokes v. Latham, 4 Times L. R. 305, followed. Benner v. Edmonds. 19 P. R. 9.

See SOLICITOR, IV. 1—TRIAL, XVI. 8.

Terms—Dispute as to — Reference.] — See Corry v. Lemoine, 18 P. R. 482, ante IX. 4 (b).

Validity — Summary Trial.]—The court has jurisdiction to stay proceedings in any action which has been compromised, where no terms of the compromise go beyond what is in controversy in the action. And where, in an action of slander, the plaintiff excused his non-prosecution by alleging that an agreement had been entered into between himself and the defendant by which the action was to be dropped and $10 costs to be paid by the defendant, an order was made directing a summary trial, or the trial by an issue upon oral evidence, of the question of the validity of the settlement; if the result should be a valid settlement, proceedings to be stayed perpetually and costs paid by defendant; if settlement invalid, action to be dismissed with costs to defendant. Recs v. Carruthers, 17 P. R. 51.

Trial-Issue.]-An assignee for the benefit of creditors under a statutory assignment, having brought an action for damages for breach of a contract made by his assignor with the defendants, made a compromise settlement with the defendants, before the de-livery of pleadings, while he was in gaol, and without reference to the inspectors or credi-A new assignee appointed in his stead applied for an order directing the trial of an issue to determine whether the settlement was valid:-Held, that it was not necessary to bring another action to vacate the settlement, and it was more convenient to revive the action in the name of the new assignee as plain-tiff and let him continue it, leaving the defendants to move summarily to stay it, or to iendants to move summarily to stay it, or to plead the settlement in bar, than to direct the trial of an issue. Rees v. Carruthers, 17 P. R. 51, distinguished. Johnson v. Grand Trunk R. W. Co, 25 O. R. 64, and Haist v. Grand Trunk R. W. Co, 22 A. R. 504, fol-lowed. See post XVI.

XV. SPECIAL CASES.

Alteration — Consent.]—Held, that, except by consent, affidavits cannot be received to alter or modify a special case stated by consent; the only relief open to a party complaining that a case has been misstated, is to apply to amend or vacate it; and quere, whether it could be amended after judgment. Cousineau v. City of London Fire Ins. Co., 15 O. R. 329.

Reservation of — Divisional Court — Motion for Judgment 1.—By the O. J. Act, 1881, 228, s. a. Judge, sitting elsewhere than in a divisional court of the trial of an action the pleadings were admitted to state the facts, and what was called "a special case on the pleadings were admitted to state the facts, and what was called "a special case on the pleadings" was reserved for the opinion of the Judges of the common pleas division. A divisional court of that division refused to entertain the case, but turned it into a motion for judgment under rule 323, O. J. Act, 1881, or rules 315 and 321. Täll v. Tüll, 50. R. 133.

Succession Duty Act—Forum—Declaration of Right.] — When the provincial treasurer and the parties interested do not agree as to the succession duty payable, the question must be settled by the tribunal appointed by the Act, namely, the surrogate registrar, with the right of appeal given by the Act. The high court has no jurisdiction to decide the question in a stated case. The court of appeal refused, therefore, to entertain an appeal from the judgments in 27 O. R. 380 and 28 O. R. 571. Questions of law which cannot properly arise in or as incidental to an action, or other proceeding in court, cannot be made the subject of a special case under rule 372 in order to obtain the opinion of the court thereon. Where a special forcum is created by statute for determining rights of parties, a declaration of right will not be made by the court under

s. 57, s.-s. 5, of the Judicature Act, in an action which the court has no jurisdiction to entertain. Attorney-General v. Cameron, 26 A. R. 103.

See Payne v. Caughell, 24 A. R. 556; East v. O'Connor, 19 P. R. 301.

XVI. STAYING PROCEEDINGS.

1. Till Costs of Former Proceedings Paid.

Identity of Former Proceeding with Action.]-In 1879 the Grand Junction Railway Company obtained from the court of Queen's bench a rule for a mandamus to enforce the delivery of bonds by the defendants to the amount of $75,000, pursuant to a by-law of the defendants to aid in the construction of the plaintiffs' road. On appeal to the court of appeal this rule was discharged, and on appeal to the supreme court of Canada, the court of appeal's judgment was affirmed, with costs against the plaintiffs. Since then the road had been completed, but the costs of the above proceedings had not been paid. This action was brought in the names of the Grand action was brought in the names of the virand Junction Railway Company and the Midland Railway Company to recover the aforesaid sum of $75,000 in money. Upon motion to stay all proceedings in this action till the costs of the former proceedings should have been paid:—Held, notwithstanding that new circumstances had arisen, and that the proceeding was not the same as the first proceeding, nor grounded upon exactly the same facts, and notwithstanding that the Midland Railway Company were now joined as plaintiffs, the attempt to proceed in this action without first paying the costs of the former action was vexatious, and the order asked for must be made; following Cobbett v. Warner, L. R. 2 Q. B. 108. Grand Junction R. W. Co. v. County of Peterborough, 10 P. R. 107. ing was not the same as the first proceeding, Interlocutory Costs in Same Action.]—In equity, if interlocutory costs payable by the plaintiff remained unpaid, the court might, but was not bound to, stay proceedings, and would not if it were not equitable to do so. At common law, while non-payment of such costs was not a ground for staying proceedings, yet if it appeared equitable to stay proceedings until they were paid, the court in the exercise of its inherent jurisdiction might direct a stay. The common law practice is the more convenient one, and should now be followed. Stevart v. Sullivan, 11 P. R. 529.

Where the plaintiff served in succession four paties of tinal for the same accioes of tinal for the same accioes.

Where the plaintiff served in succession four notices of trial for the same assizes, all of which were set aside as irregular, with costs against him, and he was in default for non-payment of such costs, the action was stayed until they should be paid. Ib.

Where the plaintiff is acting in good faith, his action should not be stayed for non-payment of interlocutory costs; and an action of trespass is in that respect in no way different from any other. Stewart v. Sullivan, 11 P. R. 529, followed. Wright v. Wright, 12 P. B.

New Rules.—Change in Practice.]—The practice by which, when the defendant's costs of a former action for the same or substantially the same cause were unpaid, the dendant was entitled to have the later action stayed until they should be paid, is superseded by the effect of rule 3, the defendant's only remedy being to apply under rule 1243 for security for costs in the second action. Campbell v. Elgie, 16 P. R. 440.

2. Other Cases.

Abuse of Process of Court.] — H. & Bro., being the owners of certain lumber in the hands of the defendants as warehousemen, sold it to L., who gave his promissory note for the purchase money, and pledged the lumber to the plaintiff's testator for an advance of money, and the defendants agreed to hold it to the order of the testator. L. having become insolvent, H. & Bro, notified the defendants not to deliver the lumber to L. or to the testator, and the testator demanded the de-livery of the lumber to him. The defendants The defendants then interpleaded, and an order was made, upon the consent of the testator, directing a sale of the lumber and payment of the proceeds into court, and the trial of an issue between the testator and H. & Bro. to determine which of them was entitled to the lumber or the proceeds thereof. That issue was determined in favour of H. & Bro. The plaintiff then brought this action for conversion of the lumber, the alleged conversion being the nondelivery by the defendants to the testator of the lumber which they agreed to hold to the order of the testator:—Held, by a divisional court, that this action was vexatious and an abuse of the process of the court; and an order was made staying it with costs. Held, reversing the order of the divisional court, that this was not a case in which the exceptional power of the court to refuse to allow tional power of the court to reruse to allow its process to be abused by a frivolous action, could be properly exercised. Ross v. Ed-wards, 14 P. R. 523, 15 P. R. 150. See Ross v. Edwards, 11 R. 574.

Appeal Bond—Action on—Further Litigation.]—An action against the sureties upon a bond given by the defendants in the action of McLaren v. Canada Central R. W. Co., upon the anpeal of the defendants to the court of appeal in that case. The defendants in that case appealed from the court of appeal to Her Majesty in council, and in that appeal security had been given and allowed, including security for the whole amount recovered, and execution had been stayed in consequence:—Held, that proceedings must also be stayed in this action. McLaren v. Stephens, 10 P. R. SS.

Counterclaim—Delay.]—Where counterclaim filed in a mortgage action for the purpose of delay. O'Dell v. Bennett, 13 P. R. 10.

Cross-actions — Consolidation.]—On the 4th February, 1885, an insurance company commenced an action in the chancery division to set aside a policy of insurance. On the 12th May, 1885, M. and others brought wiston to set an action to recover the amount of the policy, and on the 23rd May moved to stay proceedings in the former action:—Held. following the rule leid down in Thomson v. South Eastern R. W. Co., 9 Q. B. D. 320, that there is no bard affast rule in cases of cross-actions, that the one commenced last should be stayed. The court should take the circumstances into consideration, and exercise its discretion as to what is the fairest mode of settling the dispute, and give the conduct of the litigation to the party upon whom the substantial burden of proof rests. On appeal, the Judge in chambers declined to make any order. Subsequently, on the 27th June, 1885, the defendants in the first action moved for a stay of proceedings in it, and the master made an order accordingly. On appeal, on 22nd October, the Judge in chambers declined to interfere at present, as the second action had been tried and a verdict given for the plaintiffs, but reserved leave to renew the motion if the verdict should be set aside, and varied the order of the master by consolidating the two actions. Miller v. Confederation Life Association, Confederation Life Association v. Miller, 11 P. R. 241.

Default of Plaintiff—Examination.]— Upon failure of the plaintiff to attend for examination the action should not be stayed until he does attend; it is sufficient to impose a stay for a definite time. Comstock v. Harris, 12 P. R. 17.

Execution.] - See EXECUTION.

Interpleader Issue.]—An interpleader proceeding is not an action; and rule 641 (c), which enables the court to "order the action to be discontinued," upon terms as to costs, does not apply to interpleader issues. Hamlyn v. Betteley, 6 Q. B. D. 63, and Re Dyson, 65 L. T. N. S. 488, followed. Semble, that the execution creditor can abandon the seizure or the prosecution of the issue, but only on the terms of answering all costs. Hogaboom v. Gillies, 16 P. R. 402.

Judgment—Motion to Set aside.]—When a motion to a divisional court to set aside the judgment pronounced at the trial, but not yet entered, has been set down for hearing, there is a stay of proceedings upon such judgment ipso facto, unless it should be otherwise ordered. Western Bank of Canada v. Courtemanche, 16 P. R. 513.

Satisfaction—Motion.]—A motion by the defendants, after judgment in an action, to stay proceedings therein, after satisfaction of the plaintiff's claims, should be made in chambers, not in court. Where such into chambers, and costs were ordered against the applicants. Lee v. Mimico Real Estate Co., 15 P. R. 288.

an interim injunction was obtained by the plaintiffs restraining the defendants from doing certain acts until the trial or other final disposition of the action or until further order, and by the judgment pronounced after the trial the action was dismissed, but the entry of the judgment was stayed until the fifth day of the next sittings of a divisional court:—Held, that the effect of the stay was to leave the whole matter in statu quo until the defendants should become entitled to enter judgment, and by so doing to put an end to the injunction in accordance with its terms. Carroll v. Provincial Natural Gas and Fucl Co. of Ontario, 16 P. R. 518.

Order to Postpone Trial.]—See Allen v. Mathers, 9 P. R. 477.

Prior Action Pending-Parties.]-In this action the plaintiffs sought to recover from the defendants a large sum of money, being the portion assessed upon the defendants of the cost of certain works constructed and paid for by the plaintiffs. In a previous action against the same defendants, the plaintiffs therein, who were landowners in the defendants' township and assessed for a portion of the sum now sued for, sought a declaration that the defendants' by-laws purporting to impose this assessment upon the plaintiffs therein, and all the proceedings upon which they were founded, were void, and an injunction to restrain any proceedings for the collection of the amount for which the plaintiffs therein were assessed. In that action judgment had been given in the defendants' favour, but the plaintiffs had an appeal to the supreme court of Canada pending when the present action should not be stayed until after the determination of the appeal in the other. Township of Tübury West v. Township of Romney, 19 P. R. 242.

Proceeding Pending for Same Cause plaintiffs having agreed lease to the defendants a certain property for successive terms of fifty years, during all time then to come, at a fixed rental, an order was made, by consent, under the Vendors and Purchasers Act, directing the plaintiffs to deliver to the petitioners an abstract of title of the property, "and that it be referred to J. S. C., referee; and that all matters as to time of delivery of the abstract, the sufficiency thereof, and all subsequent questions arisin out of or connected with the title to the said site, and the carrying out of the said agreesite, and the carrying of the said alternative site, be from time to time determined by the said referee, including the costs of the said re-ference, subject to appeal." While the re-ference was pending this action was brought to recover the rent of the property from the time at which it was agreed the first term should begin :- Held, that the order directed a reference of all questions and matters arising out of the agreements and the carrying of them into effect; that the settlement and payment of the rent was one of the matters virtually, if not expressly, embraced in the reference; that it was a matter in respect of which an order might be made under s. 4 of the Vendors and Purchasers Act, R. S. O. 1897. c. 134; that the plaintiffs could not, without the leave of the court, single out one of the matters so pending and bring and sustain a separate action in regard to it; and therefore this action should be perpetually stayed. City of Toronto v. Canadian Pacific R. W. Co., 18 P. R. 374, 451.

Security for Costs.]—Held, that a precipe order for security for costs is a stay of proceedings while it exists, and a motion for judgment made simultaneously with the motion to set aside the praceipe order for security for costs was refused. Doer v. Rand, 10 P. R. 165.

Settlement of Action.]—The order of the master in chambers (9 P. R. 229) staying proceedings on the ground that this action had been settled by the plaintiff's solicitor was reversed because the evidence shewed that the settlement was a provisional one, and that the plaintiff himself had not adopted it. McDonald v. Field, 12 P. R. 213. The court has jurisdiction to stay proceedings in any action which has been compromised, where no terms of the compromise go beyond what is in controversy in the action. And where, in an action of slander, the plaintiff excused his non-prosecution by alleging that an agreement had been entered into between himself and the defendant by which the action was to be dropped and $10 costs to be paid by the defendant, which agreement was denied by the defendant, an order was made directing a summary trial, or the trial by an issue upon ornle vidence, of the question of the validity of the settlement; if the result should be a valid settlement; proceedings to be stayed perpetually and costs paid by defendant; if settlement invalid, action to be dismissed with costs to defendant. Rece v. Carruthers, 17 P. R. 51.

Stranger — Application of — Judicature Act, 1895, s. 52 (9).] — The jurisdiction to stay proceedings given by s. 52 (9) of the Judicature Act, 1895, at the instance of any person, whether a party to the action or not, is only to be exercised where the action is an improper one, or where under the former practice the court of chancery might have enjoined its prosecution, and only where the stranger is one who seeks to intervene and can properly be added as a party. Faucket v. Griffin, 17 P. R. 478.

Transfer of Right Pendente Lite— Non-substitution of Transferce as Plaintiff.] —See Murray v. Wurtele, 19 P. R. 288.

Trial—Appeal from Order Directing New Trial.]—See Trial.

Interlocutory Appeal.)—The trial of the action was stayed pending an appeal to the supreme court of Canada from the judgment of the court of appeal upon a question arising in the action as to the method of trial of the issues in this and a cross-action. Comme v. Canadian Pacific R. W. Co., 11 P. R. 356.

XVII. STYLE OF CAUSE.

Crown—Action against.]—The action was instituted against the Government of the Province of Quebec, but when the case came up for hearing on an appeal to the supreme court of Canada, the court ordered that the name of Her Majesty be substituted. Grant v. The Queen, 20 S. C. R. 297.

Intituling of Papers—County Court— High Court.]—Where a motion is made to a Judge of the high court or the master in chambers under rule 1260 to change the venue in a county court action, the papers should not be intituled in the high court of justice, but in the county court. Ferguson v. Golding, 15 P. R. 43.

Partnership Name — Amendment.]—A person carrying on business alone, in a name denoting a partnership, cannot bring an action in that name. Where, however, such name consisted of his surname, prefaced by the initials of his Christian names, and followed by the words "and Co.:"—Held, that lower by the words and Co.:—Held, that these words in the style of cause in an action were nere surplusage, or, if not, they should be struck out; and, as the mistake was trilling, and no one was misled or affected by it, an amendment at the trial should have been granted as of course. Mason v. Mogridge, 8 T. L. R. 805, distinguished. Lang v. Thompson, 16 P. R. 516.

XVIII. SUBPCENA.

Setting aside. |- In an action against an incorporated company to recover a money demand, the defence was that the indebtedness, if any, was not that of the company, but of the president in his private capacity. Upon an application for a better affidavit on production of documents from the company, it had been determined that the company no documents to be produced :-Held, that a subpena served upon the president calling upon him to produce documents or books which had been determined not to be in possession of the company, should not be set aside, for the affidavits shewed that the accounts of the defendant company were kept in the books of the president; and the prac-tice of setting aside a subpœna, as laid down in Steele v. Savory, [1891] W. N. 195, was one to be followed only in exceptional cases, while in ordinary cases it would be better that the question of production of documents should be raised before the examiner. Alex-ander v. Irondale, Bancroft, and Ottawa R. ander v. Irondale, B W. Co., 18 P. R. 20.

XIX. VACATION.

Appeal.]-The term "vacation" in G.O. Chy. 642, means Christmas as well as long vacation, and hence the former is not to be countcation, and nence the former is not to be count-ed in the time within which an appeal from a master's report may be had under that order. Notice of appeal from a report dated 29th November, 1883, given on the 31st December, 1883, for the 7th January, 1884, is valid. Blake v. Building and Loan Association, 10 P. B. 153 Blake v. P. R. 153

Christmas vacation is not to be excluded in Christmas vacation is not to be excluded in reckoning the eight days from which an appeal from the decision of the master or local Judge or master in chambers is to be brought on under rule 427, O. J. A. As such appeals are not heard in vacation, the time for appealing will be extended as a matter of course upon an ex parte application. Snowden v. Huntington, 12 P. R. L.

Upon the true construction of rule 484, the period of long vacation is not to be reckened in the time allowed by s. 71 of the Judicature Act for filing and serving notice of appeal to the court of appeal. Hespeler v. Campbell, 14 P. R. 18. See Sieveright v. Leys, 9 P. R. 200.

Examination for Discovery.]-Where a special examiner issues an appointment for a special examiner issues an appointment for the examination for discovery during vaca-tion of a party to an action, such party, if duly subpoenaed, is bound to attend for examination. A special examiner, although an officer of the supreme court of judicature for Ontario, in the sense of being subject to its control and direction, has no office in connection with the court that comes under any rule requiring it to be kept open or closed during any particular period of the year. Decisions in 15 P. R. 23 reversed. Hogaboom v. Cox, 15 P. R. 127.

Pleading—Notice of Trial.]—Pleadings may be delivered and notice of trial given in Christmas vacation. Thompson v. Howson, 16 P. R. 378.

Reference - Official Referee.] - Every legal proceeding which may properly be taken out of vacation may with equal propriety be taken during vacation, unless something to the contrary can be found in some statute or rule of court. An official referee may proceed with a reference during vacation. Marples v. Rosebrugh, 17 P. R. 104.

Report.]-A master's report made during long vacation in contravention of G. O. 425. is, as against a defendant having no notice of the proceedings on which the report is founded, entirely null and void, Fuller v. McLean, 8 P. R. 549.

Settling Judgment.]-A direction to the registrar to settle in long vacation the minutes of a judgment pronounced on 30th June, was refused. Miller v. Spencer, 13 P. R. 478.

Taxation of Bills of Costs.]—See Cousineau v. City of London Fire Ins. Co., 13 P. R. 36.

Jurisdiction of Court—Submission to by Answer.]—Held, that the objection to the jurisdiction would have prevailed if properly Jurismenton would have prevailed it properly taken, as the parties to the submission had agreed upon their forum; but the defendant, having submitted to the jurisdiction by his answer, and himself asked the intervention of the court, could not now be heard to object. Moore v. Buckner, 28 Gr. 606.

Notice of Trial — Laches in Moving against.]—See Whitney v. Stark, 13 P. R. 129.

Order — Acceptance of Costs under.]— Leave was given to the plaintiff to amend by setting up the Statute of Limitations upon payment of costs, which were paid to and ac-cepted by the defendant. Upwards of a year afterwards the defendants objected that such order had been improperly made:—Held, that it was then too late to object that the order had been made in error. Court v. Walsh, 9 A. R. 294 A. R. 294.

Enlargement of Time for Acting under.]—By an order of a Judge in chambers (12 P. R. 275), a motion by the defendant to set aside a judgment for irregularity was re-fused, but the defendant was let in to defend upon paying into court or securing $700 within a month. The defendant moved for and obtained an order extending the time for paying the money in, and then appealed from the part of the order refusing to set aside the judgment for irregularity:—Held, that the de-fendant had waived his right of appeal from the order by obtaining an enlargement of the time for complying with it. Pierce v. Palmer, 12 P. R. 308.

Pleading.] - See Hughes v. Rees, 10 P. R. 201

Service of Process - Appearance.]-The defendants appeared to the writ of sumand set up in their statement of defence that the high court of justice had no jurisdic-tion; that the cause of action arose in Win-nipeg, the defendants' head office was at Montreal, and the service of process was on their agent for local purposes at London :- Held, that there was nothing in these facts to shew that there was nothing in these facts to shew want of jurisdiction; and that the appear-ance had precluded all question as to the sufficiency of the service. Dart v. Citizens: Ins. Co., 11 P. R. 513. Sec, also, Sears v. Meyers, 15 P. R. 381, 456, and Heath v. Meyers, 15 P. R. 381, post VXI 5.

In re Guy v. Grand Trunk R. W. Co., 10 P. R.

XXI. WRIT OF SUMMONS.

1. Amendment.

Character of Parties.]-Where parties are before the court qua executors, and the same parties should also be summoned qua same parties should also be summined up trustees, an amendment to that effect is sufficient, and a new writ of summons is not necessary. Ferrier v. Trépannier, 24 S. C. R. 86.

See McNab v. Macdonnell, 15 P. R. 14.

Re-service of Writ.] — See Guess v. Perry, 12 P. R. 460, post 2.

Shortening Time for Appearance Judgment.]—A writ of summons issued for service out of the jurisdiction required an service out of the jurisdiction required an appearance thereto to be entered within eight weeks after service, inclusive of the day of service. The plaintiffs obtained an order shortening the time for appearance to ten days, not specifying whether inclusive or exclusive of the day of service, and amended the writ under order by merely substituting 'ten days' for 'eight weeks.' The writ as amended was served, and the order with it, on the 27th January. On the 6th February on the 27th January. On the 6th February following, judgment was signed for default of appearance:—Held, that the judgment was irregular; for the writ was not amended in accordance with the order, and the latter must govern; and according to its terms, having regard to rule 474, the ten days were to be reckoned exclusively of the day of service, and the defendants had the whole of the 6th February to appear. Bank of British North America v. Hughes, 16 P. R. 61.

Time — Judgment — Description of Mortgaged Lands.] — Under the liberal powers of amendment now given by rules 444 and 780, the writ of summons and all subsequent proceedings may be amended after judgment. And where the plaintiff by mistake omitted from the description of lands in the writ of summons in a mortgage action, a parcel in-cluded in the mortgage, an order was made, after judgment and final order of foreclosure, vacating the final order, directing an amend-ment of the writ and all proceedings, and allowing a new day for redemption by a subsequent incumbrancer who did not consent to the order; and in default the usual order to foreclose. Clarke v. Cooper, 15 P. R. 54.

See Hewgill v. Chadwick, 18 P. R. 359.

2. Indorsement.

Amendment of-Re-service of Writ.]-The writ of summons was specially indorsed with a money demand, besides which the inwith a money demand, besides which the in-dorsement claimed damages for waste, &c.
The plaintiff obtained an ex parte order amending the indorsement by striking out the claim for damages:—Held, that judgment by default could not be entered after the amend-ment without re-serving the writ on the de-fendant. Guess v. Perry, 12 P. R. 460.

Character of Parties — Irregularity — aiver—Amendment.] — The writ of sum-Waiver—Amendment.] — The writ of summons was indersed only with a claim for damages for negligence and breach of trust on ages for negligence and breach of trust of the part of the defendants in the investment of moneys upon mortgage. There was no in-dorsement of the character of parties. The defendants appeared, and the plaintiff there-upon delivered a statement of claim in which it was set forth that the plaintiff was the ad-ministrator of one who was in her lifetime ministrator of one who was in her lifetime entitled to the moneys invested by the defendants. It was shewn that one of the defendants was fully aware of all the facts of the case, and of the capacity in which the plaintiff sued. Upon a motion by the defendants to strike out the statement of claim as embarrassing in that it did not follow the writ :- Held, that the defendants by entering an appearance, instead of moving against the writ, had waived the irregularity of the plaintiff in not stating the character of the parties, as required by rule 224. Held, also, that as the statement of claim shewed the character in which the plaintiff was suing, it was not necessary to amend the writ. McNab v. Macdonnell, 15 P.

Lis Pendens.]—When a plaintiff seeks to register a lis pendens, he should be more pre-cise in respect to the indorsement on his writ than in ordinary cases, and should define generally the grounds of his claiming an in-terest in the lands. Sheppard v. Kennedy, 10

Residence of Plaintiff.] - A writ of summons not indorsed with a statement of the plaintiff's residence as set out in Form 1, 0. J. Act, is irregular. Sherwood v. Goldman, 11 P. R. 433.

Several Defendants—No Claim against Onc.] — The writ of summons was issued against three defendants, O., A., and R. The indorsement claimed to have set aside a deed from A. to O., and a deed from O. to A. No claim whatever was made against R., and he was not mentioned in the indorsement:—Held, that the indorsement was sufficient, and a motion by R. to set aside the service upon him was refused. Gilmore v. Township of Orford, 11 P. R. 457.

Ship-owners—Account—Dispute.]—Semble, that in an action by the managing owner of a ship against his co-owner, the indorsement on the writ need not shew that there was any dispute as to the amount involved. Hall v. The Ship "Searcard," 3 Ex. C. R. 208.

Special Indorsement.]—See JUDGMENT,

See Pleading—Pleading since the Judicature Act, IX. 2.

3. Issue of.

Provisional Judicial Districts.]—The indorsement on a writ of summons, issued in the district of Thunder Bay after the passing of 57 Vict. c. 32 (O.), shewed that the claim was for cancellation of a lease of a mining location in the district of Rainy river, for possession of the location, and for an injunction restraining the defendant from entering thereon:—Held, that the action was not one of ejectment within the meaning of rule 653, and therefore the venue was not local, and it was not necessary that the writ should be issued by the local Registrar at Rat Portage under s. 3 of the Act. Kendell v. Ernst, 16 P. R. 167.

A document purporting to be a writ of summons stated on its face that it was "issued from the office of the deputy clerk of the district court of the provisional district of Thunder Bay and Rainy River at Rat Portage, in and for said district," and was tested in the name of F. F., "Judge of our said court, at Port Arthur," the 14th April, 1898. It is provided by 8. 90 of R. S. O. 1897 c. 109 that when a provisional judicial district is composed, as here, of two territorial districts, the Lieutenant-Governor in council may by proclamation declare that the junior district shall be detached and erected into a separate provisional district. By proclamation dealer the 21st February, 1898, it was declared that on and after the 4th April then next the district of Hany River should be detached from Thunder Bay and erected into a separate district. The writ was, in fact, issued by the person who was, before the 4th April, the deputy clerk of the district court at Rat Portage, but at the time of the issue no Judge or officers lad been appointed for the district court of the new district. The defendants entered a conditional appearance, pleadings were delivered inituded in the district court of Rainy River, the defendants in theirs objecting to the jurisdiction; and the case came on for trial before the Judge of the district court at Thunder Hay, at Rat Portage, who, the defendants to be made to get rid of the objections, and, after a trial with a jury, gave judgment for the plaintiff—Held, on appeal, that the writ was a nullity and incapable of amendment so as to make it good: that the defect was such as could not be waived by the defendants; it was a complete defect; and the proceedings should be stayed in toto, and the plaintiff ordered to pay the defendants' costs from the beginning. Heregilt V. Chaduick, 18 P. R. 359

4. Renewal of.

Order — Discretion — Statute of Limitations.]—The renewal of a writ of summons after its expiration is matter of judicial discretion, and when a county court Judge had so renewed such a writ as to defeat the operation of the Statute of Limitations, and the defendant made no attempt to appeal from his order, but appeared to the writ without objection, a divisional court, on appeal from the judgment in the action, refused to entertain an objection to the validity of the writ. Butler v. McMicken, 32 O. R. 422.

—Local Judge — Jurisdiction—Expiry of Time. |—A local Judge has jurisdiction, by the combined effect of con. rules 238 and 485, to make an order for the renewal of a writ of summons, even at a time when such writ has actually expired. Re Jones, Eyre v. Cox. 46
L. J. N. S. Ch. 316, followed. Where a local Judge in 1887 and again in 1880 made orders renewing a writ of summons issued in 1886, and such orders were not appealed against:—
Heid, that the writ must be treated as having been properly renewed by such orders. St.
Louis v. G'Callaghan, 13 P. R. 322.

Necessity tor—Discretion—Service.]

—A writ of summons cannot be renewed without a Judge's order, and to satisfy the terms of rule 238 leave to serve the writ after the lapse of a year should also be obtained. But where an order for renewal was obtained and the writ was renewed pursuant hereto and was served without any order for leave to the services dealt with under rule 442, and the services dealt with under rule 442 and the services of th

Rescission of Ex parte Order—" Good Reason"—Statute of Limitations.]— Where an order has been made, on the ex parte application of the plaintiff, under rule 238 (a), extending the time for service of the writ of summons, it is open to the defendant to move against it within the time or extended time prescribed by rule 536, and to shew, if he can, that there was no good reason for making it, even though the result of setting it aside may be that the action will be defeated altogether by the operation of the Statute of Limitations. The master in chambers, where he has made such an order, has jurisdiction under rule 536 to reconsider and rescind it. The reason offered by the plaintiffs for an extension of the time for service of the writ was that until they should ascertain, by the result of the reference in another pending proceeding, that there had been a fund in the hands of one of the defendants, in respect of which it would be worth while to prosecute this action, it would be advisable to delay the service of the writ, as, in the event of there being no fund, this action would be useless. There had been delay in prosecuting the reference in the other proceeding, the plaintiffs having the conduct of it. The master in chambers, upon the application of the defendants, set aside his own exparte order extending the time for service of the writ, and his decision was affirmed by a Judge in chambers and a divisional court:—Held, that the three tribunals could not be said to have been wrong in holding that no good reason was shewn for extending the time. Hoveland v. Dominion Bank, 15 P. R. 56. Affirmed by the supreme court of Canada, 22 S. C. R. 1300.

— Time—Merits—Statute of Limitations.]—An action upon a promisory note payable on the 4th November, 1885, was begun on the 31st October, 1891. The writ of summons not having been served, an order was made on the 28th October, 1892, on the exparte application of the plaintiff, under rule 238 (a), that service should be good if made within twelve months. The writ together with this order and an order of revivor—the original plaintiff having died in the meantime—was served on one of the defendants on the 2nd August, 1893. On the 12th September, 1893, the defendant who had been served moved before the local Judge who made the order of 28th October, 1892, to set it aside, which he refused to do:—Held, that the time for moving under rule 536 had expired and had not been extended; and certain correspondence relied on as shewing an agreement to extend the time, had not that effect. The validity of the ex parte order did not depend solely upon whether the affidavit upon which it was made was sufficient to support it; the motion to set it aside was a substantive motion supported by affidavits; and the plaintiff was at liberty to answer the motion by shewing new matter in support of the original order. And upon the material before the local Judge his refusal to set aside his order was right upon the merits. Cairns v. Airth, 16 P. R. 190.

of Limitations.1—Where orders were made from time to time renewing a writ of summons, and it appeared that the plaintiff all the time knew, but did not disclose, where the defendant could be served, and the Statute of Limitations had, but for the renewals, barred the plaintiff's claim, the orders were reschied, upon an application by the defendant under rule 358, after the orders had come to his knowledge. Doyle v. Kaufman, 3 Q. B. D. 7, 340, and Hewett v. Barr, [1881] 1 Q. B. 98, followed. Mair v. Cumeron, 18 P. R. 484.

Service of Renewed Writ.]—A writ of summons, dated the 17th April, 1879, was, after several onewals, finally renewed on the 6th April, 1881, and served on the 27th December, 1881:—Heal, that no declaration having been derivered, the case was governed by rule 493, O. J. Act, and that by rule 31, the writ continued in force for one year from the date of the last renewal, and service on the 27th December, 1881, was good. Mackdean v. Becket, 9 P. R. 289.

Time for Renewal.]—The time allowed for renewal of a writ of summons is, upon the proper construction of rule 132, to be reckoned inclusive of the date of issue or of a former renewal. Black v. Green, 15 C. B. 262, 3 C. L. R. 38, and Anon, 11 W. R. 293, 32 L. J. N. S. Ex. 88, 7 L. T. N. S. 718, followed. Where the original writ of summons was issued on the 5th November, 1898, and was renewed on the 4th November, 1899, the renewal ran out on the 3rd November, 1900, and service thereafter was of no effect. Laint v. King, 19 P. R. 307.

5. Service of.

(a) Jurisdiction over Foreign Corporation Served in Ontario.

Business within Ontario - Servant -Agent—Rule 159.]—Held, that a writ of summons may be served in Ontario upon a foreign corporation in a case where service out of Ontario is not authorized by the rules; but in such a case it must appear that the corporation are carrying on business in Ontario in such manner as to render them subject to be deemed resident within Ontario; and the words of rule 159, "a person who transacts or carries on any of the business of, or any business for, any corporation," mean, at the least, some person who is an agent of the corporation, who transacts or carries on here, or controls or manages for them here, some part of the business which the corporation profess to do and for which they were incorporated. And in this case the defendants were not, at the time of service of the writ, carrying on any of their business in this Province in such a manner as to warrant a finding that they were then resident here; nor was the person served with the writ such a person as is described in while the writ such a person as is described in the part of the rule quoted. Decision of the court below, 18 P. R. 3, reversed, and order of a Judge in chambers, ib., restored. Mur-phy v. Phænix Bridge Co., 18 P. R. 495.

Lujury to Land in another Province —Local Action,] — The plaintiff complained that the defendants, by negligent use or management of their line of railway, allowed fire to spread from their right of way to the plaintiff's premises, whereby his house and furniture were burnt. These premises were alleged to be in the Province of Manitoba, where the plaintiff himself resided, and in which the defendants were legally domiciled, and actually carried on business. The defendants denied the plaintiff's title to the land upon which the house and furniture were situate:—Held, that the action, as regards the house, was in trespass on the case for injury to land through negligence, and this form of action was, like trespass to land, local, and not transitory, in its nature. The action, therefore, so far as the house was concerned, could not be entertained by the Ontario court;
but altier as to the furniture, on abandonment of the claim for destruction of the house.

Negligence in another Province— Railway. — A writ of summons in an action to recover damages against a railway company for negligence alleged to have occurred in British Columbia, was issued out of the high court of justice for Ontario, and was served on the defendants' claims agent in Toronto, Ontario. The head office of the railway, incorporated by Dominion legislation, was in the Province of Quebec, but the company carried on business in Ontario, through which its railway ran, and where large numbers of its officers and servants resided:—Held, that the action was properly brought in Ontario, and the service of the writ therein was valid. Tytter v. Canadian Pacific R. W. Co., 29 O. R. 654, 26 A. R. 467.

Special Appearance.]—Where there is a grave question as to jurisdiction of the courts of this Province in an action on a contract entered into in a foreign country, a special appearance under protest or conditionally may be permitted under con. rule 280, and the defence of want of jurisdiction may be subsequently raised by the pleadings. Houcland v. Insurance Co. of North America, 16 P. R. 514.

(b) Service out of the Jurisdiction.

Althony—Domicil.]—In an action for alimony the writ of summons was served upon the defendant out of the jurisdiction, and upon a notion to set aside the service it appeared that the plaintiff and defendant were narred in Statistical and the service it appeared that the plaintiff and defendant were marked in Statistical in the service in the Statistical and that pear he had been appointed to a remanent position in the North-West Ferritorian and had then sold his dwelling-house in One and gone to reside in the North-West, where his daughter and her husband and children the service of th right to alimony is not based on contract, but on the special statutory provisions found is s. 29 of the Judicature Act, R. S. O. 1887 c. 44. Alimony, when granted, is not to be classed either as "debt" or "damages," terms which define the scope of s. 28 of the Law Courts Act, 1895, providing for the allowance of service out of the jurisdiction of a writ of summons where the plaintiff has a good defendant has assets in Ontario: it is that allowance of action upon a contract, and the defendant has assets in Ontario: it is that allowance to which a married woman is entitled upon separation from her husband. Magurn, 30 of the Sprvice of writ of summons out of the jurisdiction in an action for alimony disallowed. Wheeler, 17

Vol. III. D-177-28

Assets in Ontario.]—Debts owing to the defendant from persons living in Ontario are assets in Ontario which may be rendered liable to the judgment within the meaning of rule 45 (e), O. J. Act. Purves v. Slater, 11 P. R. 507.

Breach of Contract. — The defendants in British Columbia by letter offered to sell the plaintiff in Ontario a car load of lumber, according to a sample previously furnished, at a certain price, free on board cars at Toronto. The plaintiff accepted the offer by letter, and it was agreed between the parties that the lumber street at Yancouver and delivered at Toronto, upon which being done the price was to be paid by means of a draft. When the lumber arrived at Toronto the plaintiff inspected it and refused to accept it of the draft, on the ground that it was not up to the draft, on the ground that it was not up the draft of the was not up the draft of the was possible to make impection of the bulk at Toronto be priced on the price of the draft is not one which coording to its terms, ought to be performed within Ontario; and therefore accepting to its terms, ought to be performed within Ontario; and therefore service out of the jurisdiction of the write to summons ought to be allowed under rule 271 (c). Fisher v. Cassady, 14 P. R. 577.

The defendants, resident in the Province of Quebec, there wrote and posted to the plaintiff in Ontario a letter putting an end to a contract of hiring entered into in Quebec between the parties:—Held, in an action for wrongful dismissal, that the breach of the contract occurred in Quebec, the receipt of the letter by the plaintiff not being the breach, but only evidence of it; and service of the writ of summons on the defendants in Quebec could not be allowed under rule 271 (e). Cherry v. Thompson, L. R. 7 Q. B. 573, followed. Offord v. Bresse, 16 P. R. 332.

The plaintiff, in London, Ontario, wrote to the defendant in Quebec, offering to take a quantity of empty oil barrels. The defendant, by letter posted in Quebec, accepted the offer, saying he would ship them, but some time afterwards wrote again, refusing to do so:—Held, that this contract was made in Quebec, and, in the absence of an express agreement to the contrary, was to be performed there by delivery of the goods to carriers to be carried to London; and the cause of action was, therefore, not one in respect of which service of the writ of summons out of the jurisdiction could properly be allowed under rule 271 (e). Empire Oil Co. v. Vallerand, 17 P. R. 27.

— Undertaking—Affidarit.]—In an action for damages for breach of contract by the defendants, a corporation in England, in not delivering certain machiners at the railway station nearest to Ottawa, the writ and statement of claim were served on the defendants' agent in Montreal, and under rule 48, O. J.
Act, the plaintiff's applied for an order allowing the service under rule 45. The affidarit of the plaintiff's solicitor stated that the action was brought to recover damages for breach of contract on the part of the defendants in not delivering machinery at the railway station nearest to Ottawa under the terms of the contract. But the affidarit did not state that the deponent knew the fact, either of his own knowledge or on information and belief, nor that the defendants ever entered into a contract with the plaintiff, and undertook to deliver the machinery at the railundertook to deliver the machinery at the ran-way station nearest to Ottawa. The bill of lading containing the contract in question pro-vided, inter alia, "that the machinery in question is to be delivered at the port of Mon-treal unto the G. T. R. Co., by them to be forwarded upon the conditions above and hereinafter expressed, thence per railway to the station nearest to Ottawa, and at the aforesaid station delivered to order . . . freight to be paid by the consignees." "That the goods are to be delivered from the ship's deck, when the shipowner's responsibility shall Through goods sent forward by mail are deliverable at the railway station nearest to the place named hereinafter." "That any loss, damage, or detention of goods on this through bill of lading for which the carrier is liable must be claimed against the party only in whose possession the goods were when the loss, damage, or detention occurred:"—Held, (1) that the affidavit did not afford the proof required under rule 48; (2) that the bill of lading shewed no contract on the part of the defendants to deliver at Ottawa, or the nearest station to Ottawa, nor any contract, the breach of which was made in Ontario, because if there was such a contract in the bill, force and effect could not be given to the stipulations in it that the shipowner's responsibility should cease when the goods were delivered from the ship's deck, &c., and hence, though leave would be given to file fur-ther affidavits, such leave was therefore unnecessary. And, again, if there was a con-tract, and its terms expressly exempted the defendants from any and all liability for damage for any loss, &c., arising beyond their line, no damage for a breach in this Province would result to the plaintiff, and though technically within rule 45 (c), discretion should (if any exist) be exercised in refusing to allow the In cases of this kind an order allow service. ing service should not be made on an under-taking of the plaintiff's solicitor to prove a cause of action, &c., within the jurisdiction, as it shifts the onus of proof to the plaintiff and requires him to conduct possibly a long and expensive litigation to procure a decision on a point properly raised at the commence-ment of the action. Perkins v. Mississippi and Dominion Steamship Co., 10 P. R. 198.

Where a contract of hiring is made within the Province of Ontario, and the work thereunder is to be done there, the commission therefor will be payable there. Hoerfer v. Hanover, &c., Works, 10 Times L. R. 22, and Robey v. Snaefell Mining Co., 20 Q. B. D. 152, referred to. If the contract is ended by letter sent from another Province, quare whether this indicates that the breach complained of was out of the Province. And where, upon a motion to set aside service of a wirt of summons on defendants resident out of the jurisdiction in an action for breach of such contract of the province, the defendants within the defendants service was by letter or by the net of an agent of the defendants within the Province, the plaintiff was allowed to proceed to trial upon his undertaking to prove at the trial a cause of action within rule 271 (e). Belt v. Villeneuve, 16 P. R.

Undertaking—Amendment.] — The plaintiff, desiring to bring an action against an incorporated company having its head of-fice outside of this Province, for breach of a contract, obtained, ex parte, from a local Judge, an order for leave to issue a writ of summons for service out of the jurisdiction. The particular breach upon which the plaintiff relied was not set out either in the affidavit upon which the order was granted, nor in the writ when issued, nor in the statement of claim which accompanied it when served on the company abroad, and, looking at the terms of the contract, which was made an exhibit to the affidavit, there were two possible breaches upon which the plaintiff might have relied, viz., the agreement of the defendants to pay a sum of money at a place in this Province, or their agreement to allot certain shares, which might have been performed outside the Province for all that was provided to the contrary:—Held, that, if the former were the breach relied on, the action was properly brought in this Province; if the latter, it was An order having been made by a Judge in chambers setting aside the order of the local Judge and the writ and service, the plaintiff appealed to a divisional court, which permitted him to file a further affidavit making out a prima facie case of a breach in this Province entitling him to sue here, and make a substantive order allowing the service, upon proper terms as to amendment and costs, and an undertaking by the plaintiff to shew at the trial a breach of the contract within Ontario, or be nonsuit. Franchot v. General Securities Corporation, 18 P. R. 291.

Effect of—Order to Proceed.]—Where a defendant has been served out of the jurisdiction, and the service is allowed, but the defendant does not appear, no order to proceed is necessary. Rule 45 (e) is not to be extended to all the cases under the rule. Martin v. Lufferty, 9 P. R. 390.

Foreign Judgment — Equitable Execution.]—The plaintiff, a foreigner, sued the defendant, also a foreigner, upon a foreign judgment, and, alleging that the defendant was the owner of lands in Ontario, also claimed relief by way of equitable execution against such lands and an interim injunction restraining the defendant from dealing therewith:—Held, by the master in chambers, not a case in which service of the writ of summons out of the jurisdiction could be allowed under any of the provisions of rule 271. Scars v. Meyers, Heath v. Meyers, 15 P. R. 381.

Fraudulent Conveyance — Promissory Note.]—Action by an alleged creditor of one of the defendants to set aside a conveyance of land in Outario by that defendant to another, as fraudulent. The plantiff claimed to be a creditor in respect of a promissory note made and payable, and the makers of which resided out of the jurisdiction, but he did not seek judgment upon the promissory note:—Held, a case in which, under rule 271 (b), service of the writ of summons effected out of the purisdiction and lowable. The cut and under the tendence of the writ of summons effected out of the purisdiction and lowable. The cut and under the time of the write of the write of the purisdiction of the write of the purisdiction who was also that the case came within sub-rule (g); for, although the defendant alleged to be within the jurisdiction is requisite to bring the case within the jurisdiction is requisite to bring the case within the sub-rule) that she should be served first, but only that the service without should not be allowed until the service within the bour feeted, and an adjournment for the purpose might be granted. Livingstone v. Sibbald, 15 P. R. 315.

Infant.]—Service of process on infant out of jurisdiction. Rew v. Anthony, 9 P. R. 545.

Mechanics' Liens—Statement of Claim—Time for Delivering Defence.]—An order permitting service out of the jurisdiction of the writ of summons should also authorize service of the statement of claim at the same time and fix a time for delivery of the statement of defence. Young v. Brassey, I Ch. D. 277, followed. Where the order makes no provision as to the statement of claim or defence, the defendant should have eight days from the last day of appearance within which to deliver his statement of defence, and the pleadings cannot be noted closed before the expiry of such eight days. Mercer y. Crown Pount Mining Co., 19 P. R. 335.

Residence in Ontario—Evidence.]—Action by a foreign company upon a contract made in a foreign country against two defendants, one of whom resided in Manitoba, and was there served with process. Upon a motion by this defendant to set aside the service, it was contended by the plaintiffs that the other defendant was ordinarily resident or domiciled in Ontario, within the meaning of control e T1 (c.), and therefore that the court had jurisdiction. It appeared that at the time of the motion the latter defendant was an employee of the government of the Province of Quebec; that prior to 1883, his domicil was in Quebec, whence he removed to Manitoba, where he resided until 1886; that he went to Australia; that in 1887 or 1888 he returned to Canada, and resided part of the time in Toronto, and part of the time in Winnipez, until September, 1889, when he returned to Quebec; that he remained while in Toronto for only three months at a time; that his wife had recently gone to Europe and did not intend to return to Toronto; that his family were still in Toronto, but his intention was to keep them there only until he got something to do; that Toronto was never looked upon as a permanent home for the family; and that it was the intention of the family to go to him as soon as he should send for them: —Held, that he was neither "domiciled nor ordinarily resident within Ontario;" and the scribe was set aside. Wanzer Lamp Co. v. Woods, 31 P. R. 511.

Tort — Conspiracy — Undertaking.]—Where the alleged cause of action was a joint constraint by the defendants, two of whom resided within the jurisiliction, and a third, who was a foreigner, was implicated, service on the foreigner out of the jurisiliction of a notice in lieu of the writ of summons:—Heal, properly allowed under rule 271 (g.). Massey v. Heynes, 21 (g. B., D. at pp. 334, 335, and Indigo Co. v. Ogitley, 11891] 2 Ch. 31, specially referred to, Such an order should not be made unless the Judge is reasonably satisfied as to the bona fides of the plaintiff in bining the foreign defendant; and as an evidence of such bona fides the plaintiff in bining the foreign defendant; and satisfies of the plaintiff of the plaintiff

Malicious Prosecution — Arrest.]—
Criminal proceedings begun in the Province of Quebec, under which the plaintiff was arrested in the Province of Ontario and taken to Montreal, where he was discharged, constitute, in effect, one entire tort; and service of a writ out of this Province in an action therein for malicious prosecution, founded thereon, will not be allowed under rule 1309, amending rule 271 (e). Oligny v. Beauchemin, 16 P. R. 508.

Preference.]—An action by an assignee under R. S. O. 1887 c. 124 against persons residing in the Province of Quebec to set aside a transfer of goods effected in this Province, as a fraudulent preference, which goods have afterwards been removed to Quebec, is founded on a "tort committed within the jurisdiction," within the meaning of rule 271 (e), as amended by rule 1309. Clarkson v. Dupré, 16 P. R. 521.

Waiver of Objections to Allowance—
Appearance.] — A defendant, by entering an appearance in an action, submits himself to the jurisdiction of the court, and waives his right to move against an order permitting service of the writ of summons to be made upon him out of the jurisdiction. Upon a motion by the defendant for leave to appeal:—Held, by the court of appeal, that the defendant, by appearing, had submitted to the jurisdiction, and the justice of the case consisted in allowing him to remain in the position in which he had placed himself; and there was no reason for giving leave to appeal. Sears v. Meyers, 15 P. R. 381, 456.

See Dart v. Citizens' Ins. Co., 11 P. R. 513.

Intention—Proceedings.]—Where a defendant does not really intend to waive his objection to the jurisdiction, he does not, by obtaining an order for security for costs and opposing a motion for speedy judgment, estop himself from moving against an order permitting service of the writ of summons to be made upon him out of the jurisdiction. Heath v. Meyers, 15 P. R. 381.

See Robertson v. Mero, 9 P. R. 510, post (c); Sparks v. Purdy, 15 P. R. 1; Milne v. Moore, 24 O. R. 456; Re Confederation Life Association and Cordingly, 19 P. R. 16, 89; Harris v. Bank of British North America, ib. 51.

(c) Substituted Service.

Defendants Abroad.]—The plaintiff had some years previously in an action of ejectment against these defendants served them personally, and they had defended by the same solicitor. It was shewn that one defendant, the father of the other two, who resided in a foreign country, corresponded with them. An application under rule 4, O. J. Act, for an order permitting substitutional service on the father for the other two defendants, was refused, it not being shewn that prompt personal service could not be effected. Robertson v. Mero, 9 P. R. 510.

Foreign Corporation.]—Service of process must be, if possible, personal, or, in the case of a corporation, upon the duly constituted agent; the substitutional method is to be followed only when prompt personal service appears by affidavit to be unavailable. Rule 146 regulates substituted service of process. Rule 167 covers miscellaneous proceedings in the progress of litigation, but it is not to be used so as to nullify the special rule applicable to writs of summons. And where the plaintiff shewed that he knew where the head office of the defendants, a foreign corporation, was, and that they had no office or definite place of business within Ontario, and there was nothing to shew that they could not be easily served at the head office, an order for substituted service was vacated. Young v. Dominion Construction Co., 19 P. R. 139.

Judgment of Quebec Court.]—Service requisite to make judgment recovered in Quebec conclusive under R. S. O. 1877 c. 50, s. 145. Court v. Scott, 32 C. P. 148.

Leaving by Bailiff for Defendant.]—
No entry of default for non-appearance can be made, nor exparte judgment rendered, against a defendant who has not been duly served with the writ of summons, although the papers in the action may actually have reached him through a person with whom they were left by the bailiff. Turcotte v. Danscreau, 27 S. C. R. 583.

Partnership.] — Blakeslee, Brown, & O. carried on business in partnership under the name of Blakeslee & Co. Blakeslee absconded, and the business continued. O. assigned his interest to Brown, and after such assignment, but hefore it had been made public, the plaintiff served his wirt of summons against the firm on O.—Held, that the service was good. Bank of Hamilton v. Blakeslee, 9 P. R. 130.

Wrong Person Served — Costs.}—A person of the same name as the defendant served by mistake with the writ was:—Held, entitled to his costs of opposing a motion for judgment under rule 324, O. J. Act. Lucas v. Fraser, 9 P. R. 319.

6. Other Cases.

Ante-dating Writs—Terms—Statute of Limitations.]—Upon the defendants' application, in a case of misjoinder of plaintiffs, under rule 324, the usual order is that all proceedings be stayed till election is made as to the plaintiff who shall proceed, and that the names of the others be struck out. But there is no power to direct that the rejected plaintiffs shall be allowed to issue writs of summons for their respective causes of action against the defendants une pro tune as of the date when the writ in the original action was issued, there being no power to alter the date of the process. Clarke v. Smith, 2 II. & N. 753. Nazer v. Vadie, I B. & S. 728, and Dovle v. Kaufman, 3 Q. B. D. 7, 349, followed. Nor can a term be imposed that in the new actions the defendants be restrained from setting up the Statute of Limitations. Smurthwaite v.

Hannay, [1894] A. C. 494, 506, specially referred to. Huthnance v. Township of Raleigh, 17 P. R. 458.

Copies.]—A writ of summons is a "pleading or other document" within the meaning of rule 395, and more than four copies cannot be taxed. Sparks v. Purdy, 15 P. R. 1.

Joinder of Causes of Action—Leave.] —Where leave is necessary under rule 341 to join other causes of action with an action for the recovery of land, it must be obtained before the writ of summons is issued, unless under very exceptional circumstances. McLean v. McLean, 17 P. R. 440.

XXII. MISCELLANEOUS CASES.

Abatement of Action — Misrepresentation—Beath of one Defendant,]—The plaintiffs, formerly owners of a line of steamers, brought this action against the defendant, who were formerly owners of another representation of the control of the control co

Negligence—Death of Plaintiff.]—
P. brought an action against a conductor for injuries received in attempting to board a train, alleged to be caused by the negligence of the conductor in not bringing the train to a standstill. After the trial and before any order for a new trial P. died, and a suggestion of his death was entered on the record:—Held, that under Lord Campbell's Act, or the equivalent statute in New Brunswick (C. S. N. B. c. 86), an entirely new cause of action arose on the death of P., and the original action was entirely gone and could not be revived. White v. Parker, 16 S. C. R. 639.

— Seduction — Death of Plaintiff.]— will not hear more than one counsel for any Account Jury.] - Plaintiff, in support of a claim for $547.35, in an action against an administratrix, put in an account rendered by administratrix, put in an account rendered by an agent of intestate, shewing a balance of $200.16, after crediting $317.19. There was also evidence from which the jury might have found the same agent to have been the agent of the defendant:—Heid, that the question of agency should have been submitted to the jury, and if they found that the account in question had been delivered by the agent of defendant, it must be considered that plaintiff proved every part of his particulars, debits, credits, and balance. Waddell v. Gildersleeve, 16 C. P. 565. 16 C. P. 565.

Commission.]—If an agent employed on commission to purchase real estate receive or agree to receive from the vendor any remuneration or commission contingent on the sale of the property, he acts in contravention of his duty to his principal, and forfeits his right to commission from the latter. Kersteman v. King, 15 C. L. J. 140.

Tortious Act of Common Agent.]-Plaintiffs sued on a contract with defendants to perform certain works, to be paid for monthly in debentures made by defendants, on the estimate of their engineer, payments to be made by orders on the debentures, or proceeds thereof to be deposited in the hands of B. F. & Co., London, England. The third breach of the declaration was that though plaintiffs completed their work, and defendants delivered to the plaintiffs orders to the amount of the certificates of the engineer, &c., upon B. F. & Co., in whose hands defendants alleged the debentures had been deposited; yet defendants did not deliver, &c., but B. F. & Co., being their agents, wrongfully refused for an unreasonable time to deliver the debentures or proceeds, &c. Defendants pleaded that B. F. & Co. were the agents of the plaintiffs as well & Co. were the agents of the plaintiffs as well as of the defendants, and not of defendants alone:—Held, a good defence, for neither party could be liable to the other for the tortious acts of their common agents, Wuson v. United Counties of Huron and Bruce, 10 C. P. 498,

Sale of Lands—Company.] — It is not necessary that the seal of a building society should be affixed to an authority to its agent to sell: the entry in the books of the society sufficient. Mechanics' Building Society, 5 Gr. 326.

Subscription for Shares.] - Defendant had taken had taken shares in a road company, for which he subscribed his name, and the secrewhich he subscribed his name, and the secretary called to solicit a further subscription. Defendant told him he would take another £100, and the secretary afterwards, in the defendant's absence, put down his name for these shares:—Held, not sufficient to charge defendant. Ingersoll and Thamesford Gravel Road Co. v. McCarthy, 16 U. C. R. 162.

The authority to take shares should be in writing; but, semble, that authority by parol would be binding. Ib.

3. Delegation of Authority.

Clerks.]—The general rule is that clerks of an agent are not agents of the principal. Hope v. Dixon, 22 Gr. 439.

Receipt of Moneys - Award.] money by an award is to be paid to the plain-tiff or to the plaintiff's attorney, the attorney cannot substitute another attorney under him to receive the money. Masecar v. Chambers, 4 U. C. R. 171.

— Bank.]—The local agents of a bank cannot grant powers of attorney to third parties to receive money ordered to be paid to the bank by a decree of the court. Bank of British North America v. Rattenbury, 1 Ch. Ch. 65.

Survey—Line.]—Held, that a line run by a subordinate, and adopted by the principal surveyor, is the work of the latter, and must be treated as such. Ovens v. Davidson, 10 C.

4. Proof of Agency.

Affidavit in Another Cause.]—The action being for goods sold, the question was the authority of one McA. to bind defendants, as their agent:—Held, that an affidavit made by McA. describing the nature of his agency, and like by defendants on motion for a new trial in another suit brought by this plaintiff against them, was clearly admissible against defendants. Thayer v. Street, 23 U. C. R.

Agreement—Statute of Frauds.]—Where it was shewn by evidence that the defendant had agreed to attend and buy in a property, offered for sale by auction, as the agent of the plaintiff and for his benefit—Held, notwithstanding that the Statute of Frauds had been set up as a defence, and there was not any writing evidencing the agreement, that the plaintiff was entitled to a decree to carry out the agreement. Ross v. Scott, 22 Gr. 29, 21 Gr. 391.

Property of the plaintiff's husband having been offered for sale under mortgage, she agreed orally with the mortgage's solicitors to purchase it, but, not having the means to make the cash payment required, she saw one of the defendants, who agreed to lend her for a year the necessary money, and to take a very the necessary money, and to take a state of the state of Bank — Sale of Grain by Consignee.] — Plaintiff shipped grain from P., consigned to his agent at O., directing the consignee to hold it subject to defendants' order. The local agent of defendants at P. concurred therein, but no advance was made on account of the grain, nor any bill of lading indorsed to defendants, nor other transfer of title made. The consignee obtained advances at O. on the grain, and it was sold to repay them:—Held, that the defendants were not liable for such a sale to plaintiff, for there was no evidence to shew the consignee their agent, and they had acquired no control over the goods. Wilson v. Bank of Montreal, 20 C. P. 411.

Company—Acceptance of Bill.]—Where a bill is drawn by a person signing as agent of a company, the acceptance admits the signature and authority of the agent, and precludes any technical objections as to the composition or description of the company, or their ability to draw the bill. Bank of Montreal v. De-Latre, 5 U. C. R. 302.

— Acceptance of Services — Payment.]
—Held, under 34 Vict. c. 48, the Act incorporating the Ontario and Quebee R, W. Co, and the Railway Act of 1868, that the defendants were empowered to appoint an agent to negotiate for and obtain municipal aid, and that for that purpose a resolution of the board of directors, or any entry or minute in their record of proceedings, would have been sufficient, without the formality of a by-law or the seal of the company. The plaintiff sued defendants for services performed by him as their agent in obtaining bonuses from the different municipalities through which the defendants' railroad was to pass, and the only evidence of his appointment was a letter written by one of the director was directed to make arrangements with the plaintiff to work up the bonuses, and requesting him to proceed forthwith. It was shewn also that the president had recognized and adopted his services and partially paid therefor:—Held, that this was not sufficient proof of the plaintiff's engagement, or of the acceptance of his services by the company; but a new trial was granted without costs, to enable him to supply proper evidence if possible. Wood v. Ontario and Quebec R. W. Co., 24 C. P. 334.

Contradictory Evidence — Directing Issue—Account,1—A bill was filled charging defendant with having purchased certain lands as plaintiff's agent and with his money, and praying to have defendant declared trustee of the land for the plaintiff. The evidence on the point of agency or no agency being contradictory, issues were directed to be tried as the agency, and as to the payment of the amount of purchase money having been made out of moneys belonging to plaintiff, or having been charged against him account by defendant. Macculey v. Proctor, 2 Gr. 390.

An assignment of certain property was made to defendant as agent for plaintiff; and defendant refusing to account therefor, the plaintiff field a bill for an account. The court, upon the facts set out in the case, without directing an issue, decreed an account with costs, although defendant denied his agency, and swore that a receipt produced by the plaintiff was a forgery; and the evidence upon the point was conflicting. Rosenberger v. Thomas, 4 Gr. 473.

General Authority—Knowledge of Limitation.]—In an action for not accepting goods, alleged to have been purchased by one P., as defendant's agent:—Held, that there was evidence for the jury that P. had a general authority to act for the defendant, defendant having spoken of him in his letter as our Mr. P., and there being evidence of his purchasing for defendant on other occasions; and that plaintiff could not be affected by telegrams, of which he was ignorant, which passed between P. and defendant, limiting P.'s authority as to price. Murphy v. Thompson, 28 C. P. 233.

Partnership — Admissions — Bills and Notes, I—In an action against a member of a joint stock company, his admissions that he was a partner are sufficient to prove his liability, without producing the partnership deed; and when a company is formed for purposes which do not render the drawing and accepting of bills and notes necessary, it will be sufficient to establish the liability of a partner on bills or notes drawn or accepted in the name of the company by their secretary, that while he was a partner the secretary was in the habit of so drawing and accepting bills, which were afterwards paid with his concurrence and admission of liability. Lee v. Macdonald, 6 O. S. 130.

Payment of Wages.]—Defendants agreed to advance money to the plaintiffs to enable them to recover a steamer, which was to run in process a steamer, which was to run in the steamer of the steamer which was to run in the steamer of t

Power of Attorney—Scope of Agency.]
—Upon the insolvency of J. B., who carried on business under the name of B. & Co., his wife purchased the estate from his assignee. the business was continued under the same name, and was entirely managed and controlled by J. B. and his wife, who authorized him by power of attorney to manage the same, and to make promissory notes in and about her said business. Being pressed for payment of notes which he had given for a debt due before his insolvency, he gave his creditor notes signed "per pro. B. & Co. J. B." Subsequently he was sued on these notes, when he swore they were his wife's notes, and made with her authority, whereupon the holder sued the wife. In the action against her she swore that she had separate estate and that she had purchased her husband's estate with it; but, on the advice of her counsel, she declined to give any information concerning it. She swore that J. B. had no authority to give the notes in question, but it appeared that he frequently discussed his own affairs with her, and she would not swear that he did not tell her that he had given these notes:—Held, that, notwithstanding the power of attorney, the real scope of J. B.'s agency could be ascertained from any admissible evidence, and that Judge that J. B. had authority to sign the notes. Cooper v. Blacklock, 5 A. R. 535. Presumption—Similar Acts.)—The fact that a man employed another to do a specified act for him at a particular time—e.g., to accept service of papers—raises no presumption whatever that the person so employed has authority to do a similar act at a different time. Smith v. Roe, I. C. L. J. 154.

Prima Facie Case — Displacement — Costa, 1—A bill was filed against defendant claiming the difference between £75 paid and £760 received by him for a share in a joint stock company, on the ground that in the matter of the purchase he had acted as agent of the plaintiff. The defendant by his answer positively denied all agency in the matter, and asserted that he had inadvertently made use of the words, "secured a share," which tended to support the claim instead of "sold a share," and the evidence in the cause was to the same effect. The court dismissed the bill, but, as the letter of defendant had tended to create a misapprehension of the facts, without costs, Anderson v. Cameron, G. Gr. 285.

Principal or Agent.]—Upon a sale of hides:—Held, upon the evidence, that the defendants were acting as principals, not as agents of the paintiffs, the purchasers, and therefore could not charge commission. Macklem v. Thorne, 30 U. U. R. 464.

One C. entered into agreements with several persons to carry freights for them at certain named prices to be paid to the defendant, not mentioning any particular vessels in which the same were to be carried, and then agreed with the defendant as part owner and master of vessels in which the plaintiffs had an interest, at rates considerably below the sums agreed upon. The defendant and C. both swore that the arrangement had not been made by C. as agent of the defendant, but for his own benefit:—Held, that the fact of the defendant having rendered an account in his own name and also sued for a portion of the freight, though aided by the other circumstances mentioned in the judgment, was not sufficient to countervail the positive denials of the defendants and C., that the contracts had not been made in behalf of and as agent for the defendant sard C., that the contracts had not been made in behalf of and as agent for the defendant sard C., that the contracts had not been made in behalf of and as agent for the defendant, freight being, prima facie, payable to the master of a vessel, and the cargo need not be delivered by him until the freight is paid, although in any other transaction such conduct would have been strong evidence that the defendant was the principal contractor. Merchants Bank v. Graham, 27 Gr. 524.

Question for Jury.]—The question of agency is a question of fact for the jury, there being some evidence to go to them, of which the Judge must decide. De Blaquiere v. Becker, S. C. P. 167.

Extent of Agency.]—In an action on a replevin bond against principal and surties, the breach assigned was the non-return of a portion of the timber replevied, for which the offendants in replevin, the now plaintiffs, it in the control of the control of the control of a river some distance above the point where it was intended to be shipped, and by directions of F., the plaintiff in replevin, it was put in the possession of one L., who was F.'s general agent for looking after his land in that part of the country. L. authorized the defendant in replevin to take it down to the shipping point, where it was again taken possession of for F., by a person appointed by L, to receive it there, and shipped for F. L. had been forbidden by F. to permit this removal to the shipping point, but the defendant in replevin was not aware of it, and such removal was to the benefit of whoever might be the owner:—Held, that the receipt of the timber at the shipping point by F. was a ratification on his part of the removal, though such removal was in violation of his orders. Patterson v. Fuller, 32 17. C. R. 240.

If the control of the control of the control of the control of the property and its situation, and being appointed agent to receive possession, had reasonable authority to arrange that it should be taken to the shipping point for the benefit of all concerned; and that they were fully warranted in inding that he had. 1b.

Reputation—Collection of Money—Knowledge,—In an action for demurrage, the shipping bill of certain staves, forming the contract on which the plaintiff relied, was signed one to prove his agency was that of a witness who swore that he (A.) had been the generally reputed agent of defendant in the stave business at the port of shipment for several years, and onee collected money from the witness for defendant, but neither this nor any other net of agency was shewn to have come to defendant's knowledge:—Held, not sufficient to go to the jury, and that the plaintiff was properly nonsuited. Myles v. Thompson, 23 U. C. R. 553.

Sale of Goods.]—In an action for the nondelivery of certain groceries sold:—Held, upon the evidence that K., by whom the sale was made, was shewn to be the defendants' agent authorized to sell on their behalf. Ockley v. Masson, 6 A. K. 108.

Sale of Land — Receipt of Mortgage Money, 1—A. had authority to collect rent and to contract for the sale of property and to receive the down payments:—Held, that such authority did not entitle him to receive payments on a mortgage given for unpaid purchase money. Greenwood v. Commercial Bank of Landa. 14 Gr. 40.

Where such an agent had at one time, withour authority, received some payments on such mortgage, which the principal did not publicly and appear to have had notice of these paypages to the payment to the agent on his mortgage, fourteen months after the agent had eased to receive any mortgage money, such payment was held to be not a good payment.

School Corporation — Notoriety — Appositiment.]—If a person acts notoriously as the officer of a corporation, and is recognized by it as such officer, a regular appointment will be presumed, and his acts will bind the corporation, although no written proof is or can be adduced of his appointment. School Trustees of Township of Hamilton v. Neil, 28 Gr. 408.

Set-off—Inference of Admission—Reception of Evidence.]—In an action by the plaintiff for wages earned as a lumberman, the dispute being whether the person hiring him was the defendant's agent, the defendant pleaded a set-off, and at the trial attempted to prove under it that the plaintiff had received goods from the store at the shanty:—Held, that no inference could be drawn from this as an admission by the defendant of his liability for the plaintiffs wages. 2. That statements made by two persons under the circumstances set out in the case were properly received. 3. That it was allowable to prove by persons working with the plaintiff that they had been paid by defendant on application to him, and that in suits brought by them against him he had paid money into court; and that the judgments in such suits were also admissible, though unnecessary. 4. That a memorandum in defendant's writing, unsigned, and attached to a bill of sale relating to the timber, was also admissible. Stevent v. 70. C. R. 27.

- Owners - Supplies - Steward Knowledge. |—Action for provisions furnished by plaintiffs to steamboats belonging to and run by defendants. It appeared that the steward of each boat was bound by contract with defendants to furnish these supplies, but there was contradictory evidence as to the plaintiffs knowledge of this arrangement, and as to the circumstances under which the goods were or-dered and furnished. The jury having found for the plaintiffs:—Held, that upon the evidence a new trial was properly granted. That no absolute rule can be laid down as to the liability of ship owners in such matters, but each case must depend on its own facts; and that here the jury should be asked, upon all the evidence and considering the nature of the business, to whom was the credit given, were the persons ordering the supplies the defendants' agents for that purpose within given the ordinary rules as to principal and agent, and was the natural inference of defendants' liability sufficiently rebutted by the plaintiffs' knowledge of the true arrangement? Jacques, 27 U. C. R. 88.

Subpoena—Agent of Absent Defendant.]
—Where a plaintiff desires to effect service of a subpena by serving the agent of an absent defendant he must shew that the person to be served is the agent of the defendant in relation to the subject matter of the suit, to such an extent as to satisfy the court that the acceptance of a subpoena by such agent will fall within the authority conferred upon him by his principal. Where, therefore, a motion for such an order was made grounded on an affidavit which stated that the agent at present conducted the defendant's business of land agent, and had "acted for the defendant in reference to the mortgage which was the subject matter of the suit," the application was refused. Pussmor v. Nicolla, I Gr. 130.

Tenants in Common—Expenditure of—Mortgagee.]—The plaintiff and several others, including one W., were tenants in common of certain oil lands, on which an oil well was sunk. In 1875 W. conveyed his interest to the defendant by vary of mortgage for a loan, the plaintiffs, who, as they alleged, had at the recuest of the several co-owners acted as their agents, the amount of W.'s share of the proceeds of the sale of oil. The plaintiffs, having incurred heavy liabilities in sinking new wells, and claiming that in so doing they had acted as the defendant's agents, brought an action against the defendant or recover her proportion thereof:—Held, that the evidence failed to establish any such agency. Held, also, that the defendant did not by reason of the mortgage to her, and of the receipt of the proceeds of the oil, assume any liability which

W, was under in respect to his co-owners; but, even if she did, her position would be that of a partner, and she would be entitled, before an action would lie against her, to have the partnership accounts taken, and the balance ascertained or admitted to be due. Held, also, that the plaintiff's claim was not a purely money demand, so as to be recoverable as such at law under the A. J. Act. Hope v. Ferris, 30 C. P. 520.

See Williams v. Corby, 5 A. R. 626, 7 S. C. R. 470; Kitchen v. Dolan, 9 O. R. 432.

5. Ratification of Agency.

Distress.]—A distress made by an agent for the benefit of his principal in his own name instead of his principal's, and subsequently ratified by the principal:—Held, legal. Grant v. McLillan, 10 C. P. 536.

Forwarding Goods—Deviation—Knowledge.]—It is no defence for a forwarder deviating from his instructions, that after the deviation he told the plaintiff's agent he had done so and no objection was made by the agent. Allter, if he told the agent of his intention before the deviation, and could shew that the agent had any discretion in the matter. Fourter v. Hooker, 4 U. C. R. 18.

Lease — Finding of Jury.] — Plaintiff's agent, without authority under seal, by deed leased to defendant for seven years certain land belonging to plaintiff. The evidence shewed that the lease when signed was delivered to plaintiff, and that he several times requested the agent to go and see whether defendant had performed his covenants under it; that the lease had never objected to the lease, but the been described by the lease of the lease had been decreased by the lease of the lease had been decreased by the lease of the lease had been decreased by the lease of the lease of the lease had been decreased by the lease of the lease had been decreased by the lease of the lea Heir-at-Law — Account.]—One E. was left in charge of the estate of N., who promised to leave the same by will to E. N. afterwards left this country and died abroad intestate, and E., acting on the presumption that N. had died without heirs, made a building lease in his own name of a portion of the estate, and the lessee entered into possession and erected valuable buildings thereon. Afterwards the heir of N. established his right to the estate, and refused to recognize the lease; whereupon a bill was filed seeking to bind the heir with this lease, or that he should pay the value of the improvements, on the ground of a ratification of the lease. The court refused to grant either branch of relief asked; and a suit by the heir in the court of chancery against the lessor for an account of the rents, &c., received by him from the estate of the intestate, was held not such a proceeding as could properly be considered a ratification of E.'s acts. Mofatt V. Nichold, 9 Gr. 446.

Mortgage — Bank — Repudiation—Subsequent Ratification.]—H. and I., being indebted to a bank, arranged with the plaintiff T., the bank's agent at H., where the debt arose, that in order to secure the same a mortgage should be given to him and the other plaintiff, the bank's general manager in Can-ada. T. had no express power to bind the bank to take this security, and his co-plaintiff was at the time absent from the country, and ignorant of the transaction. A mortgage was accordingly drawn up, dated 22nd June, 1867, and purporting to be made between H., I., and S., of the first part, and the plaintiffs, as trustees for the bank, of the second part, reciting that the parties of the first part were indebted to the bank in certain bills of exchange, and witnessing that H., in consideration, &c., as signed to the plaintiffs the household furniture in his residence, with a proviso that the mortgage was to be void on payment by the parties of the first part of the bills of exchange. On the court of directors in England being apprised of the transaction both by T. and his co-plaintiff, in a report made to them by the latter in condemnation of it, they at once repudiated it, and on 22ud August following wrote T. distinctly to that effect; and when their letter reached him, on the 5th September, the goods were still in H.'s possession, and nothing had been done under the mortgage beyond recording it. On the 7th Roptember T. resigned his position in the bank, and on 16th September defendant's execution against the goods of H. and I. was placed in the sheriff's hand. In the following October the bank instructed T.s successor to realize the security :- Held, that the bank by their repudiation of the mortgage had let in defendant's execution, and that their subse-quent ratification of T.'s acts and adoption of the security could not defeat the writ. Taylor v. Ainslie, 19 C. P. 78.

Equitable Mortgage—Notice—Lapse of Time.]—In detinue for a mortrage, it appeared that the plaintiff and his father were executors and trustees under the will of one C., the plaintiff being also residuary legatee; and that in April. 1844, the plaintiff, who was then residing in England, having written to his brother to send him some money, the brother, who had access to or possession of the mortrage as agent of the father, since deceased, procured a loan for the plaintiff from the defendant of £25 stg., on his depositing the mortrage with defendant as collateral security, not only for this amount, but for a further sum of $279, previously obtained by the brother, and then due, shewing defendant C.'s will, and promising to notify plaintiff of the deposit and obtain his consent thereto. The plaintiff was so notified but did not repudiate the transaction, either prior to his return to Canada, in 1807, or until the autumn of 1875, when he served the plaintiff with a demand, and in May, 1876, commenced this action:—Held, that the plaintiff could not recover, for under the circumstances he must be assumed to have authorized the deposit, which he, as executor and residuary legatee, had power to make. McLean v. Hime, 27 C. P. 185.

Payment — False Representations.]— Where payment is obtained from a debtor by one who falsely represents that he is agent of the creditor, upon whom a fraud is thereby committed, if the creditor ratifies and confirms the payment, he adopts the agency of the person receiving the money and makes the payment equivalent to one to an authorized agent. The payment may be ratified and the agency adopted, even though the person receiving the money has, by his false representations, committed an indictable offence. Scott v. Bank of New Brunswick, 23 S. C. R. 277.

Purchase of Land—Company — Directors.]—A company was formed in England with limited liability to carry on business at Oshawa in this Province. The majority of the directors were resident in England. The managing director at Oshawa, without authority, contracted for the purchase of real estate for the use of the commany at Oshawa, and signed the contract as "managing director." For convenience the conveyance was made to the director personally, and he exceuted a mortgage for the unpaid purchase money, and went into possession and used the property for the purposes of the company. The purchase was immediately communicated by him to the English directors, and they disapproved thereof, but did no act repudiating the purchase; on the contrary, they directed the buildings to be insured:—Held, that this conduct was an adoption of the contract by the directors: that they had power to adopt it, and had the power of binding the company; and that the company were liable to the ventor for the purchase money. Conant v. Miall, 17 Gr. 574.

II. DUTY OF AGENT.

Bank—Acceptance of Bill—Custom.]—The plaintiffs, a bank at Milwaukee, sent to defendants, a bank at Toronto, for collection. A bill drawn by A. at Milwaukee on B. at Toronto, payable forty-five days after date, to provide the state of the Defence of Action—Insurance Company—thattets—Recovery of Moneys.]—It is the daty of an agent to defend an action improperly instituted against his principal. Where, therefore, an instrance company, having ceased to carry on business in this country, paid off a clerk, who was immediately employed by a firm of which the agent of the characteristic of the company for his shiery, was a member; notwithstanding shiery, the clerk sued the company for his shiery, the clerk sued the company for his shiery, and the agent allowed judgment to go by default, and paid to the plaintiff in the action, amount of the judgment:—Held, that then amount of the judgment:—Held, that the amount so pake on taking an account of his receipts amount so pake on taking an account of his receipts amount so the which be could be entitled to credit, was to entitled to credit, was to which be could be company over and above what he received in his new employment. Jap v. Macdonelt, 17 his new employment. Jap v. Macdonelt, 18 (r. 43%).

Gr. 436.

Where, on an insurance company quitting business, a quantity of office furniture was in the possession of the agent which was not forthcoming:—Held, that it was the duty of the agent to have made proper entries shewing what had become thereof; and in the absence of such proof that his estate was properly chargeable with its value. Ib.

A paid agent whose duty it is to receive from other agents moneys due to the principal, is bound to take steps for the recovery thereof, unless he shews that, had be taken proceedings to enforce payment, or that there was reasonable ground for believing that, if proceedings had been taken, they would have proved ineflectual. Ib.

III. LIABILITY OF AGENT TO PRINCIPAL.

1. Benefit Acquired by Agent.

Frandulent Misappropriation of Money—Interest.]—Where it appeared that an agent had received large sums for his principal, and had used them for many years in his own business, instead of remitting them, as he might and should have done, to his principal, he was charged with six per cent, interest and annual rests. Landman v. Crooks, 4 Gr. 353.

Purchaser of Land for Value.]—The plaintiff, being owner of land, after having mortgaged it, emigrated to Australia, and subsequently remitted money to his agents here to pay off the incumbrance; but they applied the money to their own use. Subsequently the assignee of the mortgage proceeded to foreclose, in which suit an answer was put in on behalf of the plaintiff, but without his knowledge or consent, admitting the allegations of the bill, and that the full amount of principal and interest was due; whereupon a final order of foreclosure was, in due course, obtained; and the plaintiff in that suit conveyed to defendant A. for $1,002, the value of the property; and on the same day defendants M. and S., as attorneys for the plaintiff, conveyed the premises to A., who was ignorant of any fraud in the matter. The plaintiff, having returned to this country, and ascertained the frauds which had been practised upon him, filed a bill against his agents and the purchaser, A.:—Held, that the plaintiff, so far as the purchaser was concerned, was bound by his answer, and was not entitled to relief as against him; that the fact of the purchaser having heard before his purchase that the plaintiff had remitted money to pay the mortgage was not sufficient to charge him with notice that the foreclosure was wrongful; but, in view of the fraudulent conduct of the attorneys, the court made a decree against them for the amount realized on the sale of the land, and directed them to pay the costs of the suit, including the costs of the purchaser. MeLean v. Grant, 20 Gr. 78.

Mixing Goods — Following,]—When an agent purchases goods for his principal with money supplied by the latter, there is a trust impressed upon the goods in the principal's favour, and this trust is enforceable against the agent's assignee for the benefit of creditors, even though the agent has, while purchasing for the principal, also purchased goods of the same kind for himself and has not set aside specific portions of the goods to answer the principal's claim. Harris v. Truman, 9 Q. B. D. 264, applied. Long v. Carter, 23 A. R. 121. See the next case.

If an agent is intrusted by his principal with money to buy goods, the money will be considered trust funds in his hands, and the principal has the same interest in the goods when bought as he had in the funds producing it. If the goods so bought are mixed with those of the agent, the principal has an equitable title to a quantity to be taken from the mass equivalent to the portion of the money advanced which has been used in the purchase as well as to the unexpended balance. Affirming the previous case. Carter v. Long, 26 S. C. R. 430.

Purchasing in Agent's Name — Parol Contract.]—The plaintiff agreed with J. to purchase a mining lease for their joint benefit, the consideration for which was to be the testing of the ore at the crushing-mill of the plaintiff, and at his expense. In pursuance of this arrangement, J. did arrange for the lease, but took the agreement therefor in his own name. The ore was, as agreed upon, tested at the crushing-mill of the plaintiff, and at his expense, but J. attempted to exclude the plaintiff from any participation in the lease, asserting that he had obtained the same for his own benefit solely:—Held, that the true agreement could be shewn by parol; and that the plaintiff was entitled to the benefit of the agreement. Williams V. Jenkins, 18 Gr. 536.

Purchasing Property of Principal.]—
One H., a clerk in the office of the bursar of King's College (where all business connected with the sale of lands of Upper Canada College was transacted), procured a contract to be executed by the University for the sale of certain of such lands to J. Defendants alleged that H. had neted as J.'s agent in the matter, but the court was satisfied that J.'s name had been used by H. for his own benefit, and that the contract was in breach of H.'s duty as such clerk as aforesaid, and therefore ordered the contract to be rescinded with costs. Upper Canada College v. Jackson, 3 Gr. 171.

In 1843 the plaintiff, W. J. T., before leaving Canada, conveyed certain lands, in which he had an interest as assignee of a contract to purchase, to his brother, G. T., one of the defendants. In April, 1851, G. T., in anticipation of a suit which was afterwards brought by one C. against W. J. T., in relation to the lands in question, without the knowledge of his brother re-assigned the property to him, and having paid the behauce of the purchase quest to W. J. T., as such assignee. In October following, a power of attorney was sent to and executed by W. J. T., who was then in California, in favour of G. T., to enable him (G. T.) to "sell the land in question, and to sell or lease any other lands he owned in Canada." In 1856 G. T. conveyed the property to W., the respondent, who had acted as solicitor for W. J. T., and had full means of knowing G. T.'s position and powers, for an alleged consideration of $1000, and W. immediately re-conveyed to G. T, one-half of the land for an alleged consideration of $200, In 1873 W. J. T. returned to Canada, and in January, 1874, filed a bill impeaching the transactions between his brother and W., seeking to have them declared trustees for him:

—Held, reversing the judgment of the courts below, 23 Gr. 496, I. A. R. 245, sub nom. Taylor, that W. J. T., was the owner of the lands in question; that he was not debarred by laches or acquiescence from succeeding in the present suit; and that the transaction between G. T. and W. should be set aside. Taylor v. Waltbridge, 2. S. C., 616.

The rule of equity which prevents an agent acquiring a beneit for himself in any dealings with the estate of the agency, acted upon where an agent had been employed to sell or exchange certain lands of the principal, which, however, the agent had been unable to effect, and the property was shortly afterwards offered for sale by auction under a power of sale in a mortgage, when the agent bid, and became the purchaser. The court, in a suit impeaching the purchase, declared the agent a trustee for the principal; but, as the plaintiff made several unfounded charges of fraud and other misconduct, the relief asked was given without costs. Thompson v. Holman, 2S Gr, 35.

The defendant had for some years acted for the plaintiff in looking after his lands, and paying the taxes; but in 1874 they had some difficulty, and from that time the plaintiff caused to correspond rive the taxes that consider the property. He without any instructions from the plaintiff, on one occasion wrote to the defendant requesting him to ascertain the amount of the taxes, and to draw on him the amount of the taxes, and to draw on him the amount of the taxes, and to draw on him therefor, with which request the defendant compiled, but nothing further occurred to change the relative position of the parties before the sale:—Held, per Burton, J.A., that under these circumstances the confidential relations which had previously existed must be held to have ceased, and that the defendant was not precluded from purchasing the plaintiff's land at a sale for taxes. Per Proudfoot, J., that what took place could not have the effect of determining the fiduciary relationship between them, and the defendant could not purchase the plaintiff's land to his prejudice. Fleming v. McNable, S. A. R. 636.

Sale to agent of land bought by him in contemplation of a sale at an advanced price to persons whom he misrepresented to the principals as having withdrawn from the position of purchasers. Walmsley v. Griffith, 10 A. R. 327.

Purchase of mortgaged premises sold under power of sale by agent of mortgagee. Ingalia v. McLaurin, 11 O. R. 380.

The attorney under an irrevocable power from the owner for the sale or other disposition of certain lands, and entitled in the event of sale to a share of the proceeds after payment of charges, agreed to pay out of the owner's share of the proceeds, when received, the amount of a further charge made by the owner, and subsequently purchased the lands himself:—Held, that he was not personally liable to pay the amount of the charge. Judgment in 27 O. It. 511 reversed. Armstrong v. Lye, 24 A. A. 543.

See Culverwell v. Campton, 31 C. P. 342 See, also, Trusts and Trustees.

Secret Profits in Service — Costs—Just Tertil.]—Profits acquired by the servant or agent in the course of or in connection with his service or agency fall to the master or principal. The manager of a cold storage company, and the request of the company, undertook to advise a ment company as to some changes in their plant, and used his position as adviser to influence the purchase by the ment company of a new plant from the defendants, who promised him a commission on any order they might receive through his assistance. This was not disclosed to his employers or the ment company:—Held.

that the transaction was one in connection with his service as manager of the cold storage company, and he could not recover a commission from the defendants. The defendants having at first conceded the plaintiff's right to recover, and then paid the money to the cold storage company, taking a bond of indemnity, the action was dismissed without costs. Jones v. Linde British Refrigeration Cos., 32 O. R. 191.

Selling Land to Principal at Profit.]

—A person agreed with the owners of oil lands for the purchase of certain lots at stipulated prieses, and was to have a certain time to accept. The purpose was to form a company to buy at an advance. To facilitate this, the real prices were to be concealed; one of the vendors was to write a letter purporting to offer the whole at an advanced price, which he named; the interest of the other, whose judgment in such matters persons would be likely to rely on, was not to appear, and he was to write a letter recommending the transaction. The project was successful; the property was bought, conveyed, and paid for. The shareholders before completing the transaction had notice that something was wrong, but they carried out the purchase notwith-standing, and did not object to the transaction until after oil lands had greatly fallen in the market:—Held, reversing in this respect the order of the court below, 16 Gr. 147, that it was too late to rescind the purchase; but that the company was entitled to a decree for payment of the agent's profit, first against the agent himself, and in default of his paying, then against the other parties. Lindsay Petroleum Oil Co. v. Hard, 17 Gr. 115. On appeal to the Privy Council it was held that the contract must be wholly rescinded, the price repaid, and the land reconveyed. S. C. l. 16, 5 P. C. 221.

A resident abroad sent funds to an agent here to invest in lands; the agent bought land for 4600, took the conveyance in his own name, asserted to his principal that he had paid 21,000 for it, made a conveyance to his principal, and charged him that sum in account. Some years afterwards the principal discovered the truth and filed a bill for relief. The court decreed him entitled to the land for 1999, and directed a reference to the master to take an account of the dealings between the principal and agent. Arthurton v. Dalley, 2 Gr. 1.

W. was the owner (subject to a mortgage) of property which M. wished to buy. R., becoming aware of this, entered into friendly negotiations with both, and bargained with Y. to take 85,500, and with M. to give 85,000. Ye to take 85,500, and with M. to give 85,000 the property of the concealed this difference from the property of the state of the 85,000 (less the mortgage debt.) and on the deed being delivered to M. she (M.) paid to R. attorney 85,600. The facts afterwards coming to the knowledge of W., she filed a bill acainst R., claiming the balance of the 85,000; and it appearing that in the negotiations R. had given W. to understand that he was acting in her interest, and had no personal interest of his own, the plaintiff was held entitled to a decree against R. for such balance, with interest and costs. Wright v. Hankin, 18 Gr. e25.

There may be agency, and its duties and liabilities, without express words of appointment or acceptance; and where a party, in negotiating between two persons, the one desiring to sell, the other to buy, certain land, gave the former to ûnderstand that he was acting in her interest:—Held, that she was entitled to the full price which he obtained for the land, though it exceeded the amount which he had obtained her consent to accept. This case was affirmed in appeal, 1b.

When a person sells property of his ownand acts as the agent of his vendee in procuring other property of the same kind, different considerations apply as to the amount different considerations apply as to the amount principal in the two transactions. The plaintiff having expressed to defendant, who was the local agent of an insurance company, a desire to purchase lifty shares of the stock, defendant said he conved thirty shares which he would sell him, and the plaintiff requested the defendant to ascertain what the stock could be purchased for. The defendant wrote to the head olice for information, and the manager answered stating that the stock had always sold at a premium. This the defendant communicated to the plaintiff; but did not disclose the further information, communicated by the manager that the company had during the then past year lots $82,000 over and above receipts. The plaintiff, believing the price to be as stated, directed defendant to procure him twenty shares, and took from him a transfer of his own thirty shares at par. In reality the stock was valueless:—Held, that the defendant, having withheld information which might and probably would have affected the plaintiff's determination as to entering into the speculation at all, was guilty of such a concealment as rendered him liable to make good the loss sustained on the twenty shares: but, as to his own thirty shares, he was only bound to communicate truthfully the information he land been directed to procure, namely, the price

2. Negligence of Agent.

Delivery of Goods without Payment.]
—Action against defendant as broker and commission agent, for negligence in delivering goods to the purchaser without the price being paid, and for not using due care that the purchaser was solvent. Evidence — Verdict for plaintiff—New trial granted on payment of costs. Deady v. Goodenough, 5 C. P. 163.

Disobedience of Instructions — Damages—Set-off, |—Action by agent against principal: — Held, that the defendant, upon the special facts stated in the report, had no right to a set-off against the plaintiff upon the common counts, neither could he support a plea of payment, or necord and satisfaction; but that, if he had any remedy at all against the plaintiff (and the court thought none existed), he should have brought a special action for negligence in not obeying his instructions.
Sword v. Carruthers, 7 U. C. R. 313.

Duty to Insure.]-The plaintiff intrusted defendants, as commission agents, with a quantity of flour either to sell for him at Toronto, or to send it to be sold at Quebec or other places, as circumstances might require. other places, as circumstances might require, the directed that the flour should be insured, and defendants effected an insurance with the British America Assurance Company. The flour was shipped by defendants at Port Credit, consigned to t. & Co., Quebec, Owing to the negligence and want of skill of the captain, and of a pilot who was taken in at Kingston, the vessel was stranded in the St. Lawrence, and the cargo lost. The policy contained an express stipulation that the com-pany would not be liable for any loss occasioned by the want of ordinary care or skill in the navigation of the vessel, and the plaintiff therefore failed to recover on it; but it appeared that this was the ordinary form of policy, and that the defendants could not have procured any other :-Held, that the plaintiff could maintain no action against the defendants for taking such a form of policy; and that, in the absence of any ground for sus-picion, it was not their duty to inquire into the skill and experience of the captain and crew of the vessel. And semble, that, if an insurance might have been effected on favourable terms, the defendants would have been justified in insuring as they did, having received no special instructions, and the company being one with which such in-surances were usually effected by the trade. Silverthorne v. Gillespic, 9 U. C. R. 414.

Defendants, at Hamilton, having undertaken the disposal of certain teas belonging to plaintiffs, who lived at Montreal, and not return the teas to Montreal. Defendants shipped the teas to Montreal. Defendants shipped the teas on a steamboat to Montreal, without effecting any insurance thereon. The steamboat was lost on her voyage, but defendants did not advise the plaintiffs of such shipment till after the goods had been lost:—Held, that the defendants were not liable to damages for not having given the plaintiffs earlier advice, so as to enable them to have insured the teas. Mailland v. Tylee, 7 C. P. 335.

In an action by a principal against his agent for neglect in insuring his property (a stock of goods) in such a manner that, a foss occurring, the insurance company, on being sued for the insurance, obtained a verdict on the ground that the goods had been insured at an overvalue, the declaration alleged the value to be 85,000, of which defendant had notice, to which the defendant, amongst other pleas, pleaded that plaintiff had not, at the time of making application to insure, nor at any time thereafter, goods in his store to the value of $3,000, and the jury found for defendant on these pleas:—Held, reversing the judgment in 13 C. P. 115, that the traverse of value in the declaration was an immaterial traverse, and that the plaintiff was entitled to judgment non obstante veredicto. McGuffin v. Ryall, 2 E. & A. 415.

The plaintiff sued defendant, as the agent of an insurance company, alleging that the plain-tiff had employed defendant to effect an insurance on his property, according to the rules of the company, but that defendant had so carelessly and negligently effected such insurance, that a loss by fire having occurred the plaintiff was prevented, by reason of such conduct of defendant in effecting the insurance, from recovering the amount thereof, and was put to trouble and expense in bringing an action therefor. Defendant pleaded an assignment of the policy by plaintiff to one G. before the fire. On demurrer to this plea, and excep-tions taken to the declaration:—Held, that the plea was clearly bad, for plaintiff, notwithstanding the assignment, was the proper person to sue. 2. That the declaration (set out above), being for a misfeasance, did not require an allegation of a consideration or reward to support the action; but the defendant, having undertaken to do and having done an act gratuitously, was liable for his misfeasance in the performance of his undertaking 3. That the defendant, after pleading over, could not object to the want of an allegation of the amount or duration of the insurance.

4. That defendant was entitled to judgment for the insufficiency of the count, because negligence generally, which was charged, is different from negligence to insure according to the rules of the company, which was what defendant was employed to do. Johnston v. tiraham, 14 C. P. 9.

Investment of Money.] - The plaintiff intrusted $500 to defendant, who signed a receipt stating that it was to be lent, with $300 of his own, to one H., "being secured on the said H.'s storehouses," and in defendant's name, and bearing interest at nine per cent., payable to defendant, who would, on receipt of the interest, pay to the plaintiff her interest, $45 per year, and at the expiration of two years defendant to pay over to plaintiff both principal and interest; but defendant not to be responsible for the money except as paid by H. to him. Defendant, who acted gratui-tously, and, as he stated, under the advice of a solicitor, finding that H. had not yet obtained the patent, advanced the $800 to H. on the security of a bond, not registered, conditioned that II. should give him a mortgage on the property within a month after receiving the patent, or pay the money in two years; but H., after the patent issued, gave a prior mortgage to another person, and became insolvent. The declaration alleged that defendant promised to invest the money on the security of a mortgage on the storehouses, and defend-ant admitted that he was gratuitous ballee only, and not shewn to have been guilty of negligence:—Held, that it was a case of contract founded upon good consideration, the intrusting him with the money, and that having broken it he was liable. Upon appeal this judgment was affirmed. The defendant, it appeared, without the plaintiff's authority, took a second mortgage upon the property, nearly two years after the bond, extending the time of payment for three years for the principal and accrued interest :- Held, that this was clearly such a breach of his agreement, and such a dealing with the plaintiff's money, as to make him liable. Held, also, that the plaintiff should recover interest at nine per cent for two years only, and at six per cent thereafter. Semble, that defendant, not being an attorney, would not have been liable, if, having undertaken gratuitously to invest the plaintiff's money in a mortgage, he had instructed a competent attorney to attend to the matter, and relied upon his advice. Holmes v. Thompson, 38 U. C. R. 292.

Held, that it is a breach of duty in a person intrusted with money to invest in real mortgage, unless with the sanction of the lender, which such person must prove, and which the evidence in this case failed to establish. The value of the property herein was about $1,000; the first mortgage being for $325, and the second for $400, taken to the plaintiff.
The borrower was a respectable mechanic in receipt of good wages, occupying the property himself, which was situated in the place where all the parties resided and carried on business. The Judge at the trial found that the defendant was not guilty of negligence so far as the value was concerned, and the court refused to interfere. Remarks as to the proper form of declaration in such a case, where the defendant was not paid by the lender but by the borrower. Upon the conflicting evidence, set out in the case, the Judge at the trial found that the plaintiff had not been informed of the first mortgage, under which the property was sold, leaving only about $60 applicable to the second mortgage. The court refused to set aside this finding, and sustained the verdict for the plaintiff. Carter v. Hatch. 31 C. P. 293.

An agent employed to purchase lands is not authorized to purchase lands which are subject to mortrage. Where, however, the principal was made aware of the incumbrance and still agreed to accept two lots out of ten lots alleged by the agent to have been bought for himself and his principal, this was deemed a waiver of the objection to the act of the agent and to the right of the principal to demand a return of the money placed in his agent's hands. But the principal having ascertained that the two lots offered to him fell short in quantity, of which fact the agent was aware when offering them:—Held, under these circumstances, that the principal's right of action revived, and that he was entitled to enforce payment from the agent of the principal money and interest. Butterworth v. Shannon, 11 A. R. 80.

Financial brokers who invest money for a client are his agents in the transaction if they profess to be acting for him and in his interest, though their remuneration may come from the borrower. An agent who invests moneys for his principal without taking proper precautions as to the sufficiency of the security is guilty of negligence, and if the value of the security proves less than the amount invested he is liable to his principal for the loss occasioned thereby. The measure of damages in such a case is not the amount lent with interest, but the difference between that amount and the actual value of the land. Loveenburg v. Wolfey, 25 S. C. R. S. 51.

Presentment of Promissory Note— Failure to Notify Indorser.]—Upon a contract with an express company to carry and present promissory notes for payment, where the company delivered them to a notary, who failed to notify the indorser of non-payment:
—Held, that the company were not liable.

McQuarrie v. Fargo, 21 C. P. 478.

Valuator.]-See NEGLIGENCE.

Withholding Information — Costs.]—An agent had not answered for some months urgent letters received from his principal in England. The principal, heing alarmed, employed solicitors here to see the interests; but the agent, although repeated by the degree, although repeated with the received by them during three weeks, gave pined to by them during three weeks, gave pined to by them during three weeks, gave pined to his formation, nor even an interview, and they consequently filed a bill for an account and injunction.—Held, that defendant, by reason of his neglect, must pay the costs up to the hearing, though the court was satisfied that his neglect did not proceed from dishonesty or any intention of withholding information from his principal. Douglass v. Woodside, 11 Gr. 375.

3. Other Cases.

Account—Costs.]—A principal filed a bill for an account against his agent, who alleged by his answer that the principal was indebted to him. A balance being found against the agent of $282$, the court ordered him to pay the costs of the suit. Smith v. Henderson, 17 Gr. 6.

— Hotel Manager.]—The plaintiff was the manager of the defendants' hotel, and each evening went over the receipts and disbursements and entered a summary thereof in the cash book, taking over the money which constituted the balance on hand, which he subsequently deposited with the defendants' bankers. During the day the money was kept in a safe in the office, to which others had access. When any money was taken out, a slip was put in shewing the amount so taken and the purpose. The plaintiff, while admitting the accuracy of the balance up to a specified date, contended that he was not responsible thereafter, by reason of his not being then able, through overwork, to actually count the money taken over by him:—Held, that, under the circumstances, and in the absence of a positive statement shewing the inaccuracy of the balance which the cash book shewed to be on hand, the plaintiff was bound to account therefor. (Layton v. Patterson, 32 O. R. 435).

— Stated Accounts.] — Accounts were delivered in 1862 and 1865 by a trustee and agent to his principal, and the confidential relationship existed for upwards of two years after the latter account had been rendered:— Held, that these accounts were not binding on the principal as stated accounts. Smith v. Redford, 19 Gr. 274.

Advances—Breach of Contract—Damages —Consideration—Loss of Goods.] — Declaration, that in consideration that the plaintif, at defendants' request, had consigned and shipped certain wheat to Messrs, C. & B. at Uswego, defendants promised to advance him a certain sum thereon, and to sell it for him within thirty days, and pay over the proceeds, less the advance and charges, &c.; that the defendants did make the advance, but did not sell the wheat:—Held, bad, on demurrer to the pleas, as not shewing a sufficient consideration. Held, also, that if the promise had been binding, it would be a good defence that the wheat was lost before it came into defendants' possession. See the pleas set out in the case, and the opinion of the court upon them, though their validity is not expressly decided. Mariatt v. Gooderham, 14 U. C. R. 221.

Mortgage. — Quere, as to the measure of damages recoverable on a breach of contract by defendants, commission merchauts, to advance momey to plaintiff, a miller, for the purpose of carrying on his business upon the security of flour consigned by him to defendants for sale. Hyde v. Gooderham, 6 C. P. 21.

Held, under the facts proved in this case, that the mortgage by plaintiff to defendants of

Held, under the facts proved in this case, that the mortgage by plantif to defendants of his mill, to secure advances on his flour to be made by defendants as commission merchants, was not to be treated as superseding the parol agreement for such advances, or as shewing a different agreement from that evinced by the

Held, also, that the defendants were entitled, subject to plaintiff's choice of market, to reimburse themselves for advances already made by the sale of all such flour as they had obtained delivery orders for from plaintiff. Ib.

Collection of Rents—Power of Attorney—Kspudiation.]—A power of attorney was prepared and executed by two of four tenants in common, appointing an agent to receive the rents and profits of the estate, and was transmitted to the agent, who had undertaken to procure its execution by the other owners. The power never was executed by them, and the agent, more than a year afterwards, declimed to act in the matter, alleging that such execution was necessary to enable him to receive the rents. The court, however, held him liable for the rents and profits received, or which but for his wilful default might have been received by him, from the time of the power being sent to him until his repudiation of the character of agent. Bradburae v. Skanly, 7 (3r. 569).

Indemnity — Indersement.]—Held, that, standing in the position of a surely in respect of certain promissory notes indersed by the agent under a power of attorney, the principal was entitled to a decree for indemnity in respect of his liability as indorser thereof, against his agent and the subsequent inderser, without waiting to take an account of all the transactions between the parties. Dick v. Gordon, 6 Gr. 234.

Money—Direction of Principal as to Disposal.]—Where in assumsist for money had and received defendant pleaded that he had received the money as agent of the plaintiff, and had paid it over by his directions to a person to whom the plaintiff was indebted; and the plaintiff replied that he countermanded the direction before payment; to which defendant rejoined that before countermand or any notice thereof he had given notice to the plaintiff's creditor that he held the money for his use:—Held, that the rejoinder was a good answer. Coates v. Lloud, 3 U. C. R. 51.

Mixing with that of Others—Robbery.]—Defendant being the agent of plaintiffs, and having received large sums of money, as such agent, on account of plaintiffs, and having deposited the same, mixed with his own and other persons' moneys, in a safe in his office, which was broken into and the money stolen, a verdict having been rendered for defendant at nisi prius:—Held, that there should be a new trial, with costs to abide the event, on the ground that it did not appear with sufficient certainty on the evidence that there was a sufficient amount in the safe at the time of the robbery to satisfy plaintiffs' claim; and also, on the ground that the plaintiffs were entitled to nominal damages, at all events, on the counts for money lent, money paid, &c., to which there was no answer on the record, force Bank v. Hodge, 2 C. P. 359.

Non-return of Goods — Action for Process. — "Received of — six hoxes of axes, to be sold for him on commission, and when sold, I agree to account to him for those sold at the rate of, &c., and to return the remainder unsold, on demand:"—Held, that an action for goods sold and delivered would not lie for any of the axes not returned. Dodds v., Durand, 5 U. C. R. 623.

Sale of Goods.]—Held, upon the evidence that the defendant, who had acted as agent for the plaintiff in selling trees, could not be held liable on the common counts for the trees sold, but must be sued specially for not accounting. Leslie v. Morrison, 16 U. C. R. 318.

Failure of Brokers.]—H., a miller, employed G. & Co., commission merchants, to dispose of his manufactured flour, upon the sale of which he paid them a commission. He also exercised a control over the marker in which the flour was to be sold, and in Boston and certain other markets allowed G. & Co. the charge for agency for effecting sales there, in addition to their usual commission:—Held, that, although G. & Co. were not factors with a del crederer commission, they and not II. were liable for a loss occasioned by the failure of brokers whom they employed, and who had received the proceeds of sales of II.'s flour at loston. Gooderham v. Hyde, 6 C. P. 341.

Sec Markle v. Thomas, 13 U. C. R. 321; Ross v. Scott, 22 Gr. 29, 21 Gr. 391.

IV. LIABILITY OF AGENT TO THIRD PERSONS.

1. On Contracts.

Attorney for Sale of Land—Advasce—Subsequent Purchase. J.-The attorney under an irrevocable power from the owner for the sale or other disposition of certain lands, and entitled in the event of sale to a share of the proceeds after payment of charges, agreed to pay out of the owner's share of the proceeds, when received, the amount of a further charge made by the owner, and subsequently purchased the lands himself:—Held, that he was not personally liable to pay the amount of the charge. Judgment in 27 O, R. 511 reversed. Armstrong y, Lue, 24 A. R. 543.

Broker — Acting for Undisclosed Principal. — The defendant, a broker doing business on the Toronto Stock Exchange, bought from C., another broker, certain bank shares that had been sold and transferred to C. by the plaintiff. At the time of the sale C. was not aware that the defendant was acting for an undisclosed principal, and the name of & principal was not disclosed within the time limited for "settlement" of transactions by the custom of the exchange. The transferee's name was left bank in the transfer book in the bank, but it was noted in the margin that shares were subject to the order of the defendant, who, three days after settlement was due according to the custom of the ex-change, made a further marginal memorandum the shares were subject to the order of The affairs of the bank were placed in liquidation within a month after these trans-actions, and the plaintiff's name being put upon the list of contributories, he was obliged to pay double liability upon the shares ferred, under the provisions of the Bank Act, for which he afterwards recovered judgment against C., and then, taking an assignment of C.'s right of indemnity against the defendant, instituted the present action:—Held, that, as the defendant had not disclosed the name of any principal within the time limited for settlement by the custom of the exchange, and the shares had been placed at his order and disposition by the seller, he became legal owner thereof, without the necessity of any formal acceptance upon the transfer books, and that he was obliged to indemnify the seller against all consequences in respect of the ownership of the shares, and the double liability imposed under the provisions of the Bank Act. Judg-ment in 24 A. R. 502 reversed, and that in 28 O. R. 285 restored. Boultbee v. Gzowski, 29 S. C. R. 54.

Disclosure of Principal — Time.] — A. orally contracted with B., the agent of an undisclosed principal, for the sale to B. of certain goods, &c., worth $100 and more, but before any delivery or part payment, the name of the principal was disclosed by B.:—Held, that the contract was not binding before a part delivery or payment took place, and, as neither took place before the disclosure by B. flaght v. Howard, II C. P. 437. Hugght v. Howard, II C. P. 437.

Knowledge of Agency.]—To an action on an agreement for the sale of lands by defendants, who were partners as solicitors, the defendants bleaded on equitable grounds that the plaintiff contracted with them only as as outs for the owner of the land, and not as principals:—Semble, that the evidence set out in the report shewed that the plaintiff knew that they were acting only as agents, but the Jury having found against them, and the verdet being for S10 only, the court refused to interfere. Campbell v. Dennistoun, 23 C. P. 333.

Personal Undertaking of Agent.]—

to A. W. & Co. 100 barrels of pork at a certain price, and by a writing signed by the defendant, "agent of A. W. & Co.," defendant agreed to pay for pork by bill in favour of the plaintil!—Held, that, although defendant was personally liable on his undertaking, yet the action should be for not furnishing the bill, and not for goods sold. Counter v. Roebuck, E. T. 3 Ylet.

Statutory Commissioners.] — Commissioners appointed under an Act of Parliament employing persons to make a macadamized road are not personally responsible. New v. Burn, T. T. 3 & 4 Vict.

Unqualified Personal Contract.] — In an action for not delivering certain cheese sold by defendant to plaintiff:—Held, that, Vol. III, p-178—29 even though the defendant acted merely as agent of certain cheese factories, he contracted in his own name without qualification, and was therefore personally liable. Ballantyne v. Watson, 30 C. P. 529.

2. Other Cases.

Award against Principal.] — Defendants, as factors of one W, sold when to the plaintiff, who subsequently obtained an award in his favour in an arbitration on a separate transaction between himself and W, to which defendants were not parties, although they actively intervened as W.'s agents. In an action by plaintiff to recover the balance of account:—Held, that he was not entitled to include in his debit against defendants the amount of the sum awarded to him as against W. Brunskill v, Rigney, 6 C. P. 509.

Nuisance.] — Held, that a party cannot justify as agent for another for maintaining a public nuisance. Regina v. Brewster, 8 C. P. 208.

An agent merely to let or receive rents is not liable for a nuisance upon the premises let by him. Quere, as to the liability of a general agent clothed with power to let. repair, and in all respects to act for the owner. Regina v. Osler, 32 U. C. R. 324.

V. LIABILITY OF PRINCIPAL TO THIRD PER-SONS.

1. Contracts of Agents.

Credit — To whom Given—Jury.]—The defendants, merchants in Toronto, arranged with L. & H. in London, England, for a consideration specified, that all goods bought by defendants in England should be charged to L. & H. be various sellers, with whom L. & H. were to settle. The plaintiffs' agent, K., sold goods to defendants on credit, and the plaintiffs' draft on L. & H. having been protested, they sued defendants. The evidence was contradictory as to K.'s knowledge of defendants rarangement with L. & H., and as to whom credit was given upon the sale. The jury were directed that the plaintiffs were bound by K.'s arrangement for payment, if any, made with defendants; and were asked to say whether the goods were sold on the credit of L. & H., looking only to them for payment, or to defendants, and their own credit, in the ordinary way, and they found for defendants: — Held, that the direction was right: but, upon the evidence, a new trial was granted on payment of costs. Creighton v. Janes, 40 U. C. R. 37.

Deposit of Promissory Note lateral Security—Memorandum in Writing— Parol Variation.]—Defendants, two directors of the Canada Powder Company, placed in the hands of C., their secretary, their promissory note for $8,000, made in November, 1858, pay-able to the plaintiffs on demand, which C. deposited with the plaintiffs, having a receipt written under it and signed by their agent, which expressed that the note was to be held by the plaintiffs as collateral security for any unretired paper they might at any time hold of the company. In an action on this note the plaintiffs' agent swore that he took it upon the understanding expressed in the receipt, which was in C.'s handwriting, and he believed was signed at the same time; and that he made the arrangement wholly with (never having any communication with defendants regarding it. Defendants had pleaded as an equitable defence, and desired to prove, that the note was given in consequence of a doubt as to the power of the powder company to become parties to a note, and as security only against the want of such power, and until it should be conferred upon them by the legislature, which was done in May, without loss in the meantime to the plaintiffs: -Held, that such evidence was rightly reject ed, for that defendants having intrusted (with their note were bound by his agreement, on which the plaintiffs had advanced their money, and which could not be varied by parol testimony. Commercial Bank of Can-ada v. Merritt, 21 U. C. R. 358.

Hiring of Servant — Member of Committee.]—A member of a committee is not reponsible for the salary of a person employed by the committee (under a joint stock banking charter), before he became a stockholder in the bank and such member. Mingaye v. Burton, 10 C. P. 60.

Oral Contract — Written Recognition.]
—An agent's subsequent written recognition of an oral contract, where such recognition was made in the performance of his duty in the carrying out of the contract:—Held, binding on the principal for the purpose of taking the case out of the Statute of Frauds. Ward v. Hages, 19 Gr. 239.

Purchase of Land in Agent's Name— Purchase Money—Evidence, |—Where a purchase of land was made by a person in his own name, but in reality for the benefit of another, a personal decree against both for the parment of the purchase money was held to be correct. Parol evidence of the agency was held admissible, and the purchaser who entered into the contract in his own name, and who was a defendant, was held a good witness on behalf of the plaintiff against his co-purchaser, the other defendant. Sanderson v. Burdett, 18 Gr. 417, 16 Gr. 119.

Representation by Agent — Advantage—Knowledge of Agent.! — Where an agent does an act outside of the apparent scope of his authority, and makes a representation the person with whom he acts to advance the private ends of himself or some one else other than his principal, such representation cannot be called that of the principal. In such a case it is immaterial whether or not the person to whom the representation was made believed the agent had authority to make it. The local manager of a bank, having received a draft to be accepted, induced the drawer to accept by representing that certain goods of his own were held by the bank as security for the drafts. In an action on the draft against the acceptor:—Held, that the bank was not bound by such representation; that by taking the benefit of the acceptance it could not be said to adopt what the manager said in procuring it, which would burden it with responsibility instead of conferring a benefit; and that the knowledge of the manager with which the bank would be affected should be confined to knowledge of what was material to the transaction and the duty of the manager to make known to the bank. Richards v. Bank of Nora Scotia, 26 S. C. R. 381.

Sale of Goods—Undisclosed Principal.]—Where undisclosed principals, carrying on a wholesale business, employ an agent to carry on a retail business in his own name but for their benefit, to sell their goods at invoice prices, they are not liable for the price of goods of the same kind purchased by the agent for himself from other persons, without the knowledge or authority of his employers. Watteau v. Fenwick, [1883] 1 Q. B. 346, considered. Becherer v. Asher, 23 A. R. 202.

Sale of Lands - Mistake - Absence of Consent. |-- Where the owner of lands was induced to authorize the acceptance of an offer made by a proposed purchaser of certain lots of land, through an incorrect representation made to her and under the mistaken impression that the offer was for the purchase of certain swamp lots only, whilst it actually included sixteen adjoining lots in addition thereto, a contract for the sale of the whole property made in consequence by her agent held not binding upon her and was set aside by the court on the ground of error, as the parties were not ad idem as to the subject matter of the contract, and there was no actual consent by the owner to the agreement so made for the sale of her lands. Murray v. Jenkins, 28 S. C. R. 565.

Sale of Timber - Collateral Agreement to Deposit. 1-Defendant's agent, having without authority contracted in writing to sel to the plaintiffs all the pine timber on lands of defendant, both the standing timber and that cut after a date named, as to the latter which his authority was undisputed, re ceived from plaintiffs $75 on account of the agreement, with the private and oral understanding that in case defendant's claim to logs cut before the date referred to could not sustained, as turned out to be the case, the 875 should be returned. It appeared that as soon as defendant was informed of the sale by her agent of the standing timber to plaintiffs, she at once repudiated it, and in fact that plaintiffs had been aware, when they entered into the agreement, that the agent had no authority to sell it. In an action against defendant to recover back the $75 paid to her agent, which the latter retained in his hands: -Held, that the contract was an entire one, and that the plaintiffs could not recover against defendant, but that their remedy, if any, was against the agent. Strickland v. Vansittart, 18 C. P. 463.

Ship — Supplies — Mortgagees—Owners.]

—Where one brought an action against the registered owners of a certain vessel for the value of goods supplied before they became such owners, not on the order of the defendants, but on the order of one G. C., between whom and the defendants no relation of agency was proved:—Held, that the plaintiff could not recover. Held, also, that it was open to the defendants to shew that their real interest was that of mortgagees, though ostenvessel got the benefit of the supplies and necessaries did not make the registered owner liable. Nelson v. Wigle, 8 O. R. 82. See Mail Printing Co. v. Devlin, 17 O. R.

Transfer of Overdue Promissory Note.]—Where the agent of the holder dis-poses of a promissory note overdue, without authority, though for good consideration, the person taking from him obtains no title as against the principal. West v. MacInnes, 23 U. C. R. 354.

2. Fraud and Misconduct of Agents.

Bailiff - Loss of Account Books - Liability of Sheriff.]—Action against a sheriff for not levying, although the debtor had sufficiency of levying, although the debtor had sufficiency of goods. At the trial a verdict was found for the plaintiff for much less than he claimed. On motion for a new trial, which was granted: —Held, that defendant's statement to an in-surance agent, that the goods, when seized, were worth $6,000, and his declarations to the different creditors that their claims were small as compared with the value of the debtor's goods, were evidence of value against the defendant; that his placing a stranger as his agent in possession of the goods, with authority to sell them in the shop as heretofore, who gave no satisfactory evidence on such sales, and who lost or mislaid or neglected to preserve the books of account which would have explained all these transactions, made him responsible for the consequences of his agent's misconduct; and that defendant was entitled to no advantage or consideration, because the books could not be or were not produced. Hobbs v. Hall, 14 C. P. 479.

Deputy Collector of Customs-Defalcutions. |-A., having been appointed collector customs, gave a bond to Her Majesty, con ditioned that he should in all things well and truly discharge his duty as collector, and ac count for and pay over all moneys which should come into his hands, &c. He received written instructions that all entries were to be made by him, all permits were to be grant ed and signed only by him, and payment of all daties to be made to him, except under certain circumstances:—Held, that, having permitted the deputy collector rightfully to assume and perform duties intrusted to him alone, he was responsible under his bond for defalcations of the said deputy. The Queen v. Stanton, 2 C. P. 18.

Factor of Estate - Misappropriation of Money - Dual Agency.]-M. was administra-ter of the estate of S., and was managing the real estate for the heirs: he was also one of the executors and trustees of E. There was a sum of $808.55 due for taxes on some property of the S. estate, and M. paid the same with money of the E. estate, directing the agent of that estate to charge the amount to the S. estate: M. did not enter the amount in his accounts with the S. estate as a loan, and, on the contrary, in the accounts which he rendered he took credit for the amount as a payment by himself; the heirs knew nothing of the loan until some time afterwards; they had not authorized M. to borrow money; and he was at the time indebted to them as agent in a sum the time indebted to them as agent in a sum exceeding the amount of the taxes: M. after-wards died insolvent, and indebted to both extates:—Held, reversing the decision below, 16 Gr. 193, that the E. estate could not hold the heirs of the S. estate liable for the $898.55, and was not entitled to a lien therefor on the property in respect of which the taxes were payable. Ewart v. Steven, 18 Gr. 35.

Knowledge of Principal. 1-The fraudulent act of an agent does not bind the princi-pal, unless it is done for the benefit of the principal, or unless he knows of or assents to it, or takes advantage of it. Gibbons v. Wil-son, 17 O. R. 290. See this case in appeal 17 A. R. 1, and Burns v. Wilson, 28 S. C. R. 207.

Loan Company's Agent - Borrower's Cheque. — The plaintif, who applied to the defendants, through one W., their agent, for a loan, requested them by his application to send the money "by cheque, addressed to W." In accordance with their custom to make their cheques payable to their agent and the borrower, to insure the receipt of the morey by the latter, they sent W, a cheque, payable to the order of himself and the plaintiff. W, obtained the plaintiff's indorsement to the cheque, drew the money, and absconded. The plaintiff swore that he did not know the paper he signed was a cheque, and there was no evidence to shew that he had dealt with W. in any other character than as the defendants' agent, through whose hands he expected to receive the money : Held, that it was W.'s duty to indorse the cheque to the plaintiff or to see that he received the money, and that the defendants, who had put it in his power to commit the fraud, must bear the loss. Finn v. Dominion Savings and Investment Society, 6 A. R. 20, Notary — Executor—Misappropriation of Money.]—When a testamentary executrix em-ploys an agent as attorney, she is bound to supervise his management of the matters in trusted to him and to take all due precautions, and cannot escape liability for the misappro-priation of funds by such agent, although he was a notary public of excellent standing prior to the misappropriation. Low v. Gem-ley, 18 S. C. R. 685.

Purchase of Land—Misrepresentations of Agent.]—L., as daughter of a U. E. Loyal-lst, had been granted a lot of land, but in 1825 left Canada for the United States, where she had resided ever since. Various persons took possession of the land and improved it so that it was worth £2,000. C. sent his agent to L. in Michigan, to treat for the purchase of her interest. This agent made numerous of her interest. This agent made numerous false representations as to the position and value of the land, and as to the intentions of his principal, and thereby induced L. to convey her interest in the land to C, for an inconsiderable sum:—Held, that the representations made by the agent were material, and to be considered in weighing the bona fides of the contract, which was ordered to be cancelled. Latham v. Crosby, 10 Gr. 308.

Railway Freight Agent—Fraudulent Receipt.]—C., freight agent of respondents at Chatham, and a partner in the firm of B. & Co., caused printed receipts or shipping notes in the form commonly used by the railway company to be signed by his name as the company's agent, in favour of B. & Co. for flour which had never in fact been delivered to the railway company. The receipts acknowledged that the company had received from B. & Co. the flour addressed to the appellants, and were attached to drafts drawn by B. & Co., and accepted by appellants, C. received the proceeds of the drafts and absonded. In an action to recover the amount of the drafts:—Held, that the act of C. in issuing a false and fraudulent receipt for goods never delivered to the company, was not an act done within the scope of his authority as the company's agent, and the latter were therefore not liable. Erb v. Great Western R. W. Co. of Canada, S. S. C. R. 179, 3 A. R. 445, 42 U. C. R. 90; Oliver v. Great Western R. W. Co., 28 C. P. 445.

Sale of Timber — Purchase Money — Failure to Pay, 1—The plaintiff, assignee of an insolvent estate, claimed from the defendant, a creditor of the estate, an account as to his dealings with timber limits assigned to him as security, and payment of any balance. Part of the timber had been placed in the hands of K. & Co. for sale:—Held, that the defendant was not liable for a loss occasioned by K. & Co.'s failure to pay over part of the price of the timber sold by them. Bell v. Fraser, 12 A, R. 1.

Settlement of Accounts—Misrepresentations of Agent.]—In consideration that the plaintiff would act as agent for the defendant the plaintiff would act as agent for the defendant to the defendant, and assume one-third of the losses to the extent of $3,500, all losses above that amount to be borne by the defendant, he agreed to pay plaintiff one-half the net profits of each year's transactions. The plaintiff impugned the bona fides of a settlement which he had been induced to make with the defendant, acting through an agent, and the court, being satisfied that the settlement had been secured by the fraudulent misrepresentations of such agent:—Held, the plaintiff entitled to an account of the transactions and an inspection of the books of the defendant, notwithstanding the provisions of the statute 36 Vict. c. 25, s. 1 (R. S. O. 1877 c. 133, s. 31, Rogers v. Illiama, 27 Gr. 133.

Treasurer of Municipality — Bank Overdraft—Dual Agency I—One S. was treasurer of the Gore Bank, having his office for both purposes in the same building. The council had no account with the bank, and did not direct S. where to keep his funds as treasurer, and he had always received enough to meet all disbursements for the county. He did, however, open an account with the bank, without the knowledge of the council, and having misapplied the moneys of the council, overdrew that account, without the knowledge or authority of the bank, nearly 18,090, for the purpose of paying debts due by the county for interest on debentures and other claims, which he ought to have paid out of the moneys received by him as treasurer. The coupons on some of these debentures were stamped by S., as paid by the Gore Bank. S. having absconded, the bank sued the council for the amount thus overdrawn, as money paid to their use:—Held, that no portion of it could be recovered. Gore Bank v. County of Middlesex, 16 U. C. R. 505.

Discount-Scope of Authority.]-On the 22nd August, 1879, the defendants' account at the Bank of Montreal was overdrawn $1,157.64. A resolution of the council was thereupon passed authorizing the mayor to borrow from some banking institution a sum not exceeding $2,000, to meet the current liabilities until the taxes were available, and authorizing him and the town clerk to sign the necessary documents therefor, and to affix the corporation seal. On 2nd September a promissory note, in accordance with this re-solution, was made, and was discounted at the Bank of Montreal, and the proceeds placed to the defendants' credit. On 5th September a similar note was made and discounted at a sminir note was made and discounted at the plaintiffs' bank, where the defendants had kept an account, but which was virtually closed, though there was a small balance still remaining to their credit. The last note was remaining to their credit. The last note was in fact fraudulently procured to be made and discounted by one T., who was the defendant's clerk and treasurer, and who was in default, to cover up his defalcations, but of this the to cover up his defalcations, but of this the plaintiffs knew nothing. T., as such treasurer, then chequed out of plaintiffs' bank $1,656 of this amount, which he deposited to the defendants' credit at the Bank of Montreal, and then paid it out on corporation cheques for authorized corporation purposes: -Held, in an action for money had and received, that the plaintiffs were entitled to recover the $1,656, for that T., though acting fraudulently, had acted in a matter within the scope of his authority, and the defendants had received the benefit of the fraud. Molsons Bank v. Town of Brockville, 31 C. P. 174.

Assault and Imprisonment-Officer of Ship — Scope of Authority.]—The plaintiff, who had purchased a special excursion ticket from Toronto to Niagara and return on the same day by a steamer of the defendants, which ticket had been taken up by the purser on that day, claimed the right to return by it on the following day under an alleged agreement with the purser, which the latter denied. On the purser demanding plaintiff's fare, and the latter refusing to pay it, the porter, by the purser's direction, laid hold of a valise which the plaintiff was carrying and attempted to take it and hold it for the fare, whereupon a scuffle ensued, and the plaintiff was injured: -Held, that the purser was not acting within the scope of his duty in thus forcibly attempting to take possession of the valise, and the defendants were not liable for his act. It appeared that the purser had been summoned lay the plaintiff before a magistrate for the assault, and a fine imposed, which be paid, ber Wilson, C.J.—This under 32 & 33 Vict. c. 20, a 45 (1b.), though a release to the purser, did not constitute any bar to the present action against the company. Held, also, that the alleged imprisonment of the plaintiff by the purser in his office for non-payment of his fare, not being an act which the defendants themselves could legally have done, the defendants were not liable for it. Emerson v. Wiggara Navigation (2c. 2. O. R. 528.

Doctrine of Agency.]—In torts the principle of agency does not apply; each wrong-doer is a principal. Ontario Industrial Loan and Investment Co. v. Lindsey, 4 O. R. 473.

Exclusion of Lessee — Agent of Company.—The agent of an insurance company at Leouvito negotiated for a lense to the plaintiffs, who were barristers, &c., of one last of the company's offices for three years at 8600 a year, and executed the lease on the part of the company, containing the usual covenant or quiet enjoyment, and received the rent. The caretaker of the whole building, who liked at a distance, locked the outer street door at 6 p.m., thus excluding the plaintiffs after that hour, and the agent refused to let them have a key unless they got the caretaker to the present —Held, that the company were responsible for this act of their agent, which was clearly a denial of the plaintiff's rights under the lense. VI. POWER AND AUTHORITY OF AGENT.

1. Agents of Corporations and Companies.

Agent of Bank — Discounting.] — K., agent of a bank and also a member of a business firm, procured accommodation drafts from a customer of the bank, which he discounted as such agent, and, without indorsing them, used the proceeds, in violation of his instructions, in the business of his firm. The firm having become insolvent, the question arose whether these drafts constituted a debt due from the estate to the bank, or whether the bank could repudiate the act of its agent and claim the whole amount from the solvent acceptors:—Held, that the drafts were debts due and owing from the insolvents to the bank. Semble, that the agent being bound to account to the bank for the funds placed at his disposal, he became a debtor to the bank, on his authority being revoked, for the amount of these drafts as money for which he had failed to account. Merchants Bank of Halifax v. Whidden, 19 S. Q. R. 53.

Agent of Insurance Company—Waiver of Conditions.]—A person not an officer of an insurance company, appointed to investigate the loss and report thereon to the company, is not an agent having authority to waive compliance with conditions precedent to liability, and if he has such authority he can not, after the fifteen days for delivery of proofs have expired, extend the time without express authority from his principal. Allas Assurance Co. v. Bronell, 29 S. C. R. 537.

Neither the local agent for soliciting risks nor an adjuster sent for the purpose of investigating the loss under a policy of fire unsurance, has authority to waive compliance with conditions precedent to the insurer's liability or to extend the time thereby limited for their fulfilment, and as the policy in question specially required it, there could be no waiver unless by indorsement in writing upon the policy signed as therein specified. Atlas Assurance Co. v. Brownell, 29 S. C. R. 537, followed. Commercial Union Assurance Co. v. Brown, 29 S. C. R. 601.

Foreman of Railway Company—Contract.]—Where the only evidence of the contract to carry was that the foreman of the freight department at one of the defendants stations agreed to have certain trees forwarded to a station not on the defendants' line, but on one connecting therewith:—Held, that this was evidence to be submitted to a jury of a contract to that effect, binding the defendants, and that a nonsuit was wrong. McGill v, Grand Trunk R. W. Co., 19 A. R. 245.

Manager of Insurance Company—Retainer of Solicitor—Special Work.]—The general manager of a company had authority to do acts which occasionally required legal advice:—Held, that he had implied authority to retain a solicitor whenever in his judgment it was prudent to do so, but that such authority ceased on the suspension of the company. Clarke v, Union Fire Ins. Co., Caston's Case, 10 P. R. 339.

A solicitor for a company is entitled to charge such company for special work and journeys undertaken at the request of individual directors and the general manager.

Managing Director of Railway Company—Bybus, 1—Held, that proof merely that C. was defendants' managing director was not sufficient evidence under 16 Vict. e. 25%, ss. 10, 20, of C.'s authority to enter into a certain contract with plaintiff; but it should have been shewn that his act was in accordance with the bowers conferred on him. Held, also, that the plaintiff was not (upon the facts) an agent of defendants within s. 17, so as to require his appointment by by-law, Taylor v, Cobourg, Peterborough, and Marmora R. W. and Mining Co., 24 C. P. 200.

Secretary of Trading Company—Scope of Buties—Contract.]—The plaintiffs were a company incorporated under C. S. C. G. G., and 24 Vict. c. 19, for the manufacture and sale of cheese, &c. On the 10th August, 1878, a written agreement was entered into between one C., the plaintiffs' secretary and salesman, and one M., on behalf, as was stated, of the plaintiffs and defendants respectively, which was signed by C. and M., for the sale of the whole of the plaintiffs' July cheese, as also of their August, September, and C. ber chieff, that the contract of the company of the com

Implied Authority — Purchase of Goods. — It was proved that one D, was clerk or agent for defendant in keeping a store at L, and that defendant had once sanctioned his purchasing certain goods: —Held, that this gave no implied authority to D. to sign defendant's name to negotiable paper, and that the jury were warranted in finding that defendant had given D. no authority to purchase goods of the plaintiff. Heathfield v. Van Allen, 7 C. P. 346.

Partnership—Mutual Authority.]—In an action against B. and S., a firm of solicitors, on promissory notes indorsed by B. in the name of the firm. It was proved that on other occasions S. had indorsed in the same manner, and, as witness believed, with B.'s knowledge, but it did not appear what the consideration was for the indorsements sued on, or that S. knew of them:—Held, sufficient evidence to go to the jury of a mutual authority; and a verdict having been found for the plaintiff, the court refused to interfere. Workman v. McKinstry, 21 U. C. R. 623.

Power of Attorney—Construction.]—A general power of attorney to an agent to sign bills and notes, and to superintend, manage, and direct all the affairs of the principal, gives him a power to indorse notes. Auldjo v. Me-Irougall, 3 O. S. 199.

Revocation—Acting under.]—Defendant, on the 8th August, 1863, gave a bond to the plaintiffs conditioned to pay, to the extent of $2,000, debts then due or to be incurred to them by the firm of M. & G., carrying on business at Galt, whom the plaintiffs had been supplying with goods. In July or August, 1863, G. went to Buffalo, telling M. that he was going to leave the firm; and before going, in June, he gave to defendant, his uncle, a power of attorney, which recited his intention to reside some time in Buffalo, and that his interest in the firm would continue notwithstanding, and authorized defendant to carry on the business, with power to close it up, and to sign bills, notes, &c., in G.'s name, or that of the firm. After he left, the sign by defendant's direction, was changed to M. & Co., but defendant rold M, to give notes in the name of M. & G. to the plaintiffs for goods supplied after the date of the power of In June a notice of intended, and in September a notice of actual, dissolution was published in a local paper, of which the plaintiffs were not proved to have notice. In April, 1864. M., with defendant's knowledge, signed notes in the name of M. & G., payable at different dates, for the balance according to an account then rendered, and a separate note for goods bought in March previous; and in September, 1864, defendant, in writing to the plaintiffs, expressed his hope that would soon be an advantage to them to continue their account with M. & G. without his guarantee. G. returned to Galt in Sep-1863, and was employed in the bank of which defendant was agent; but he said he had not authorized his name to be used to the note given in April, 1864. In an action against defendant on this bond, the court being left to draw inferences of fact:-Held, that G.'s return from Buffalo, without in that G.'s return from Buffalo, without in any way interfering with defendant, was not a revocation of the power; that notwithstand-ing the dissolution, which must be held to have taken place in September, 1845, he might permit his name to be used as it was in clos-ing up the business; that the power sufficiently authorized defendant so to use it; that the inference from the facts was, that in what he did he was acting under such power; and that defendant therefore was liable for the purchases made in March, 1864. Bryce v. Davidson, 25 U. C. R. 371.

Scope of Authority.]—The plaintiffs defendant, an executor of E., as indorser of three notes payable to "the executors of the late E.," two being indorsed

"B., agent of the executors of the late E.," and the third "the executors late E., per pro. B. B. held a power of attorney from the executors, by which they as executrix and executors authorized him (among other things) for them, as such, to make and morse all such totes as might be requisite in the manuscement of the extre. Where, by a document indorsed "procuration générale et spéciale," a wife being sole owner constituted her husband "son procureur générale et spéciale" to administer her affairs, specifying such acts as drawing bills of exchange and making promissory notes:—Held, that a wife's liability extended to all promissory notes made by the husband, and was not limited by art. 181 of the civil code to such notes as were required for purposes of the administration. Banque d'Hochelaga v. Jodoin, [1855] A. C. 612.

Where an agent accepts or indorses "per pro.," the taker of a bill or note so accepted or indorsed is bound to inquire as to the extent of the agent's authority; where an agent has such authority, his abuse of it does not affect a bonâ fide holder for value. Bryant v. Banque du Peuple, Bryant v. Quebec Bank, [1818] A. C. 170.

Want of Authority—Co-executor.]—Action against J. S. M. and J., his wife, M. N., and W. N., as makers of four notes signed "The executors of the estate of the late W. N., per pro. J. S. M." M. N. was called as a witness by plaintiffs, and proved that J. S. M. had managed the affairs of the estate since testator's death, and she had left it to him to do what he thought best in winding it up; but she said she never gave him power to make her personally liable; and that she knew nothing of these notes:—Held, that, though J. S. M. might have sufficient authority as regarded the estate, he clearly had none to bind the defendants personally, as they were such. Gore Bank v. Meredith, 26 U. C. R. 257.

Estoppel by Conduct.]—In an action against the indorser, it appeared that his hame had been written by the maker, his neplew, and there was no evidence of express authority; but it was proved that defendant had before and afterwards indorsed for his nephew on purchases by him from these plaintiffs, and that when payment of this note was demanded from him he had asked for time, and had not denied his indorsement until some months afterwards, when the maker had absconded. His excuse was that he kept no memorandum of his indorsements and supposed it was right:—Held, that defendant had precluded himself by his conduct from disputing his liability; and the jury having found in his favour, a new trial was granted without costs. Pratt v. Drake, 17 U. C. R. 27.

In May, 1873, H. B. & Co. being indebted to plaintiffs' bank in $60,000, B. executed a mortgage as security therefor, reciting that it was for money lent on notes made by B. and indorsed by the firm, by defendant, and by Mrs. In October, the indebtedness having creased to $90,000, the bank required as further security a mortgage from defendant for $25,000, and one from Mrs. P. for a like amount. The mortgages were similar in form, and recited that the firm's indebtedness, being moneys advanced on promissory notes made and indorsed as before stated, exceeded $25,000, and that such mortgage was given as collateral security for that sum, part of said indebtedness, whether represented by the notes then under discount, or by renewals or by substitutions therefor, and similarly made and in-There was a covenant for the pay dorsed. ment of the indebtedness represented by notes when due, or by any renewals or substi-tuted notes. B. had been signing defendant's and Mrs. P.'s names as indorsers to the notes, with their consent as he alleged, but which defendant denied; and to prevent the bank noticing any difference between the signatures to the notes and to the mortgage, B., with defendant's assent, signed defendant's and Mrs. P.'s names to the mortgages, which they subsequently acknowledged before a witness to be their signatures. Defendant alleged that he then believed the indebtedness to be only $60,000, being told so by B., but about three weeks afterwards he discovered it to be $90,000, and he then said nothing to the bank about it. After the mortgage was executed the notes were renewed from time to time down to the insolvency of the firm in 1877, by B. writing defendant's and Mrs. names as indorsers, as he stated, their consent, but which defendant with their consent, but which defendant denied. The bank brought actions respec-tively against defendant personally, and as executor of Mrs. P., who had since died, on the covenants in the respective mortgages and also on the indorsements. The jury found that de-fendant did not authorize B. to indorse for him, and that defendant, when he gave the mortgage, supposed the debt to be only $60,-000. The court granted a new trial, holding that the jury should be directed that the bank, under the circumstances, were warranted in accepting paper "similarly indorsed," i. e., in the same writing as the signature to the mortthe same writing as the signature to the mort-gage; and that defendant should not be per-mitted to repudiate his indorsements on the renewal notes, not having disclosed to the nank B.'s want of authority. As regards Mrs. P.'s estate, a new trial was refused, defendant as executor not being deemed to have assented to the use of his name. Merchants Bank v. Bostwick, 28 C. P. 450.

3. Collecting and Receiving Money.

Implied Authority.]-Where an agent is empowered not merely to sell, but "to sell and convey," authority to receive payment of the purchase money is implied. Farquharson v. Williamson, 1 Gr. 93.

Mode of Payment—Bankers—Collection—Set-off, |—Bankers are subject to the principles of law governing ordinary agents, and, therefore, bankers to whom as agents a bill of exchange is forwarded for collection, can receive payment in money only, and cannot bind the principals by setting off the amount of the bill of exchange against a balance due by them to the acceptor. Donogh v. Gillespie, 21 A. R. 292.

Insurance Agent—Cheque: Defendant, through one B., the plaintiffs' agent, effected a life policy with the plaintiffs. B., who had authority to receive the premium, brought the policy with the receipt for the first premium, issued from the plaintiffs' head office, to defendant, who was in charge of a branch of the bank at which B. kept his account. Defendant drew a cheque on another branch of the bank, and B. requested him to place the amount to the credit of his bank account, which was done in the usual way, and the cheque charged to defendant; but B.'s account was at the time overdrawn, and he afterwards became insolvent:—Held, that the payment thus made to B. was a payment to the plaintiffs. Etna Life Ins. Co. v. Green, 38 U. C. R. 439.

 Money, J.—An agent instructed to receive payment for his principal, cannot as a general rule accept anything but money. Fraser v. Gore District Mutual Fire Ins. Co., 2 O. R. 416.

Power of Attorney-Construction-Release. |- The plaintiffs by a power of attorney authorized one J. H. to take such proceedings as he should think proper to secure, or for the recovery of, a judgment against the de-fendants, and to accept any security for the whole or any part of the same, and upon such terms as should seem meet, and to give time for payment, and to execute and do all agreements, deeds, matters and things that might be expedient or necessary in the premises. Under this power J. H. executed for the plaintiffs a deed of assignment made by the defend ants, dated 20th July, 1858, which contained a release from all other creditors who should execute the same. This action was brought to recover the amount of this judgment, to which the defendants pleaded the release so executed:—Held, that by the power no authority was given to compromise or accept a part in satisfaction of the whole, the general words therein applying only to what immediately precede them, that is, the accepting of security, and the giving of time; and, therefore, that defendants were not released. Hamilton v. Holcomb, 13 C. P. 9.

tor.]—A person intending to take out letters of administration, executed a power of attorney to a creditor of the intestate, authorizing him to receive all moneys due the intestate. The power was given upon an agreement that the attorney should pay himself out of any money he should receive. The appointer afterwards revoked the power, and then took out letters of administration:—Held, reversing the decree below, 17 Gr. 621, that the power was not valid against the administrator, and that payments made to the attorney by a debtor after administration granted, and with notice of the revocation, were unauthorized payments, and did not discharge the debtor. Sinclair v. Dewar, 19 Gr. 59.

— Salvage Moneys.]—A crew of sailors, claiming salvage from the owners of a vessel picked up at sea, gave a power of attorney to P., authorizing him to bring suit or otherwise settle and adjust any claim which they might have for salvage services, &c.:—Held, affirming the decision in 3 Ex. C. R. 33, that P. was not authorized to receive payment of the sun awarded for salvage, or to apportion the respective shares of the sallors therein. Charchill v. McKay, In re The "Quebec," 20 S. C. R. 472.

Receipt — Power to Give.] — An agent appointed to receive money for another, must, in the ordinary course of business, be his agent also to give a receipt for it. Bedson v. Smith. 10 Gr. 292.

4. Execution of Deeds.

Notarial Contract—Statute of Frauds.)—The antenuptial contract in question was not signed by the parties, but by the notaries in their own names, they having full authority from the parties to do so:—Held, that this was a sufficient signature within the Statute of Frauds to bind the parties. Taillifer v. Taillifer, 210, R. 337; 10, R. 337.

Power of Attorney—Assignment of Chattels—Filing.]—An assignment of chattels, in addition to the conveyance of the property, contained a power of attorney to the assignee to take and hold it, but was void under the statute as an assignment, for want of filing: —Held, that the assignee's right could clearly not be sustained under the power of attorney. Wilson V. Korr, I.S. U. C. K. 470.

— Executing Deed.]—A, received from B, a power of attorney to sell lands. Under the power A, delivered to C, a deed professing to be made as follows:—Between A, by and under power of attorney, bearing date, Nes. by and from one B, &c., yeoman, of the first part, and C, of the other part." Throughest part, and C, of the other part. "Throughest part, the said party of the first part, the state part, the said party of the first part, and C, of the first part, be deed at the first part, the said party of the first part, and the said party of the first part, and the said party of the first part, the deed would have been independing party, the deed would have been independing party.

—Mode of Executing Deed—Fraud.]—Held, that the execution of a deed by a person in the name of and representing himself to be another, may be forgery, if done with intent to defraud, even though he has a power of attorney from such person, but fraudulently conceals the fact of his being only such attorney, and assumes to be the principal. In re Regina V, Gould, 20 C. P. 154.

Revocation—Release of Dower.]—
The demandant on the 6th March, 1863, executed a power of attorney to one M. to demand her dower in all lands of her late busband, to compound for her claim, and to accept such sum in lieu thereof, either by annual payments or in one sum, as he should think fit, and to execute releases of such dower. On the 2nd May he released, in her name, to defendants her dower in the lands in question, for a consideration expressed of $540, but M. swore that he agreed to take $500, and that this was not paid until July. The power was revoked on the 23rd May, and the jury found that the release had been previously executed:—Held, that the power to release was not conditional upon receiving a cash payment or an agreement for an annuity; that the difference between the summentioned in the release and that received by M. could not avoid the release, and that the tennats therefore were entitled to succeed. Williams v. Commissioners of Cobourg Town Trust, 23 U. C. R. 330

Scal—Conveyance of Land.]—A power of attorney and contract of sale acknowledged before a notary in Lower Canada can instrument not under seal), will not authorize a conveyance of lands in this Province. Doe d. Sheldon v. Armstrong, Tay. 352.

Nufficiency — Covenant.] — The covenant sued on (for the payment by the mortgagor of a mortgage to defendant, assigned by defendant to plaintiff) had been executed by one C., as attorney for defendant, during his absence from the country, under a power which authorized him only to collect debts and to execute all such deeds and perform all such acts as might be considered necessary and proper concerning the business of defendant; but it was proved that the defendant, before leaving, agreed to give this covenant, and told the attorney of it, in consequence of which the latter executed the deed, and received the money:—Held, that under these circumstances the authority was sufficient, and defendant could not refuse to be bound by the covenant. Darling v. McLean, 20 1. C. R. 372.

Want of Authority—Estoppel by Condext.]—To an action by L. against A., the defence was release by deed. On the trial it was proved that A. had executed an assignment for benefit of creditors, and received authority by telegram to sign the same for L. The deed was dated 8th October, 1881, and afterwards, with knowledge of it, L. continued to send goods to A., and on 5th November, 1881, he wrote to A. as follows: "I have done as you desired by telegraphing you to sign deed for me, and I feet contident that you will see that I am protected, and not lose one cent by you. After you get matters adjusted I would like you to send me a cheque for $800." * * In April, 1885, A. wrote a letter to L., in which he said: "In one year more I will try again for myself, and I hope to pay you in full." In November, 1886, the account sued upon was stated:—Held, that the execution of the deed on his behalf being without sufficient authority. L. was not bound by the release contained therein, and never having subsequently assented to the deed, or recognized or acted under it, he was not stopped from denying that he had executed it. Laurence v. Anderson, 17 S. C. R. 349.

5. Sale and Purchase of Goods.

Exchange of Goods — Misappropriation by Agent—Notice—Ratification.]—The plaintiffs delivered to one R, some cultivators for the purpose of selling, as their agent, for cash or good notes. Three of these he exchanged with the defendant, who was aware of the fact of agency, for a buggy, which he sold and retained the proceeds. It was shewn that on a previous occasion R, had traded a cultivator with one M for a horse, which ne sond and gave the plaintiffs a forged note purporting to be that of the purchaser; and on the same day he traded another cultivator with one D, for a watch and S7, but for this also it was said he returned a note to the plaintiffs. It was not shewn that defendant knew of either transaction, and the plaintiffs had prosecuted R, for the forgery. In an action of replevin the jury gave a verdict in favour of the defendant, but the county Judge in term set it aside, and directed judgment to be entered for the plaintiffs, which on appeal was affirmed with costs. Stewart v. Rounds, 7 A. R. 515.

Extent of Authority—Terms — Correspondence, 1—Defendant, living in London, and having 5,000 bushels of barley in his elevator there, employed A. & K., brokers in Toronto, to sell the same, giving them a sample. On Sth June A. & K, wrote defendant: "We have put under offer, subject to your approval, your lot of barley, say 4,000 to 5,000 bushels, cash 50c, net to you in your elevator; answer to be given to-morrow, if accepted," (which was taken to mean the answer of the person having the offer.) On the 9th defendant wrote a letter giving his approval, which was received on the 10th, and on the 11th A. & K. made a contract for the sale of the barley to plaintiff, no counter-instructions having been received by them from defendant. Plaintiff had seen the letters of the 8th and 9th before the contract was signed:—Held, that A. & K.'s authority was to sell on the terms mentioned on the 10th, and that defendant was not liable on the contract of the 11th. Quere, whether A. & K. had authority to sell for 50 cents per bushel, free on cars. Farrett v. Huat, 21. C. P. 117.

Goods of Independent Principals—Sale in One Lot—Ratification.]—An agent of two independent and unconnected principals, has no authority to bind his principals, or either of them, by the sale of the goods of both in one lot, when the articles included in such sale are different in kind, and are in the ground price not susceptible of a rather ground price not susceptible under the price who will be a such that the price who will be a contract unless the parties whom it is sought to bind have, either expressly or impliedly by conduct, with a full knowledge of all the terms of the agreement come to by the agent, assented to the same terms and agreed to be bound by the contract undertaken on their behalf. Cameron v. Tate, 15 S. C. R. 623.

Jury—Findings of,]—Questions were raised as to the power of one I. to sell the goods in question, and whether he was an agent within C. S. C. c. 59, &c.: but the finding of the jury, which the court refused to disturb, made it unnecessary to decide them. McDermott v. Ireson, 38 U. C. R. 1.

Proof of Authority.]—The evidence set out in this case sufficiently proved the agent's authority to act for defendant in selling goods to plaintiff. Green v. Lewis, 26 U. C. R. 618.

Inspector of Railway Construction -Adoption of Acts.] - The plaintiff, acting under a written contract for the delivery of 12 toise of stone for the piers of a bridge 12 toise of stone for the piers of a river which defendants were building over a river on their line of railway, delivered the amount, and was paid by defendants therefor, as we as for an additional toise and a half, and some the impression of the company of th sand subsequently ordered by the inspector. The inspector then ordered the plaintiff to deliver some more stone and sand, stating that he did not know what quantity of stone was required, but telling plaintiff to go on drawing until told to stop, and the plaintiff then de livered some 2614 toise of stone and a quantity of sand, defendants having furnished the men and teams to assist the plaintiff in doing so. On observing about the 8th May that defendants had stopped work on the bridge, the plaintiff ceased delivering. About the 12th May be was paid for what had been delivered up to that time, an account being made up by some one acting for defendants, and the hire of teams and men furnished by them being deducted in it from the price allowed, which was $2 a toise more than that in the written contract. On the work being renewed, and on being ordered by the inspector to continue delivering, he delivered 26 further toise time derivering, in and. The defendants, how-ever, refused to pay for the latter delivery, contending that they were not liable:—Held, that there was sufficient evidence of authority on the part of the inspector to bind the defendants, and of their having adopted his acts. O'Brien v. Credit Valley R. W. Co., 25 C. P.

- Letter-Repudiation-Ratification. Defendant, on 2nd July, addressed a letter to his agent in these words: "You better see what you can secure 1,000 barrels more of the best oil at, or, if there be a tank that you come across with from 2,000 to 5,000 genuine I would buy it, and pay, say, $1,000, $2, 000, or $3,000 down, or, if need be, the whole, I don't think oil can be much higher, but I don't look for it to be cheaper; therefore would not think it bad policy to secure enough to keep me running through the winter. Please post me what you can:"—Held, that no authority was conferred by this letter to complete a purchase of 3,000 barrels. A complete a purchase of 3,000 barrers. A of the fall in price upon a contract to sell goods signed by an agent, must give clear proof of agency to bind defendant. Defendant's agent having, on 2nd or 3rd July, telegraphed him that he had bought 3,000 barrels from plaintiffs, defendant, on the same day, replied that he did not want 3,000 barrels, and also wrote that he was almost afraid he could not "tackle" the oil just then: that he (agent) no doubt thought he was buying cheaply or he would have advised with him before closing, but that, as some time had elapsed since he had communicated with him on the subject, it would have only been proper on the subject, it would have only neen proper to have done so before closing the transaction, and that, meantime, he preferred not having it; requesting him at the same time to write him all about the market products, and he would in return write him his matured opinion. It further appeared that defendant was wholly ignorant of the terms of the contract, with the exception of the price and quantity, but as soon as made aware of them he told the agent to go back and see plaintiffs and try to get out of the contract, which, according to the agent's own evidence, he, defendant, had al-ready repudiated; and defendant explained his interview thus, that he told the agent he would not take the oil, and that he had better see if he could not hisself get out of it, and that he would go and see plaintiffs. On 28th July defendant wrote plaintiffs, repudiating the contract and the agent's authority in making it:—Held, no ratification of the contract. Prince v. Leuis, 21 C. P. 63, 31 U. C. R. 244.

Sale of Land—Purchase of Goods—Scope Authority—Declarations of Agent.]—One of Authority—Dectarations of Agent, 1—One McA., professing to act as agent for defendants S. & F., on the 13th January, 1859, bought the plaintiff's farm, mill, tannery, and loose property, for $5,400, of which $1,600 was for the loose property. An inventory of the articles was made out and signed by the plaintiff, headed "McA. bought of T." (the plaintiff), and with a memorandum at the foot stating that the plaintiff had sold all his foot stating that the plaintiff had sold all his right in them to McA. McA. gave to the plaintiff defendants bond, dated 4th January, 1859, conditioned to convey to the plaintiff 300 acres of land in Iowa, and his own bond to convey to the plaintiff and his brother 68 to convey to the plaintiff and his brother 68 acres there, to be taken from lands located by defendants and one P. On the same day (13th January) the plaintiff conveyed to defendant S. alone 90 acres, and the plaintiff's brother conveyed to him 100 acres, which he said he held for the plaintiff. The plaintiff also conveyed to McA. 14½ acres, the tannery property, which in May, 1860, McA. conveyed to the for a consideration expressed of 25. A witness present at the bargain said that some of the loose property was covered by defendants' bond, the smaller bond by McA. not covering it all, and 62 acres of the 68 was to go to the plaintiff for the part not covered. The witness said that at first the plaintiff re-fused McA's bond, but the latter said he and defendant were in partnership, and added, as the witness believed, that he had part of these lands himself; and then the plaintiff took it. The loose property was left on the farm bought by S. for some eighteen months, and a letter was produced, of the 27th June, 1860, from S. to one McC., stating that he did not know what property if any J. McA. had bought of his father, which was on the Thayer (plaintiff's) farm; that the property on this farm, formerly in possession of D. McA., belonged to defendant, and J. McA. was merely his agent to take care of it:—Held, that upon the evidence there was nothing to shew that the chattel property sold nominally to McA. was in fact sold to defendants, or that McA. was in fact soid to detendants, or that McA. was authorized to buy it in their name, or to do more than sell for them the 300 acres in lown. Semble, that McA.'s declarations besond the scope of his apparent authority could not bind defendants. Thayer v. Street, 22 U. C. R. 352

Sheriff's Sale — Signature of Memorandum—Acknowledgment.]—A sale of goods by a sheriff or his bailfit under execution is withins. I7 of the Statute of Frauds, and either of them may sign for the purchaser the memorandum in writing in the same manner as an auctioneer or his clerk. The entry of defendant agent as the purchaser is sufficient, if the defendant afterwards acknowledge the agent's authority, as was done in this case. Flintoft v. Elmore, 18 C. P. 274.

Special Contract—Debt of Agent—Setoff.]—Where the plaintiff employed his brother, W., as agent to conduct his business at T., which he himself left to carry on business at N., and defendant purchased from W. certrain goods, alleging that he had so purchased them out of the ordinary course of dealing with W. as agent of the plaintift, under a special contract, by which W. had agreed to sell to him and allow him to credit half the price on an antecedent debt due by W. to him: —Held, that C. S. C. c. 59 did not apply to a case of this kind. Held, also, that the jury should have been directed to find whether the plaintiff had permitted W. so to carry on the business as to allow him to make this special sale to defendant. McGuire v. Shaw, 15 C. P. 310.

Taking Goods for Debt of Principal.]—In interpleader the plaintiff claimed the goods, two horses, as purchaser from one L, who he contended was agent for C. the owner, within C. S. C. c. 59. I. represented that the horses, with other goods, were sent to him by C, to sell, but that. C. owing him money, he took them for himself on account of the debt:—Held, that I, was not such a general agent as is intended by the statute, and that if he were, his thus taking the goods for himself would not be a sale made valid by it. Hays v. O'Connor, 21 U. C. R. 251.

Warranty — Salesman.] — The plaintiff suel the defendant, a plano-maker, for breach of a warranty given by his salesman on the sale of a plano that the instrument was then sound and in good order:—Held, that the salesman had authority to give the warranty. McMullen v. Williams, 5 A. R. 518.

See Moshier v. Keenan, 31 O. R. 658, post X. 2.

6. Sale and Purchase of Land.

Engineer of Railway Company—Enclosure, 1—Held, that the Great Western Railway Company could not be compelled to purchase land which had been enclosed by one of their engineers without the knowledge of the directors, but which they had never expressed any intention to acquire permanently. Quare, whether, if the company had gone to arbitration upon the value with the intention of taking the land, they could have been compelled to complete the purchase. In re Baby and Great Western R. W. Co., 13 U. C. R. 291.

Instructions to Agent — Cash Sale — Taking Bills—Payment, 1—A. authorized his agent to sell his estate for £500 cash, and the agent, instead of receiving cash, accepted bills from the vendee, drawn on his (the vendee's) agent in Europe, which bills the agent applied to his own use, by transmitting them to his correspondent, to whom he was largely indebted, and who placed the proceeds when honoured to his credit:—Held, that A. was not bound by such acts of his agent; that this was not a payment to A.; and that until he received the amount of the purchase money in cash he was not bound to execute a deed of the premises. Brozen v. Smart, 1 E. & A. 148.

Price—Collusion.]—The grantee of the Crown executed a power of attorney in favour of an agent, authorizing him to sell or mortrage all her lands in Upper Canada, and subsequently went to England, where she continued to reside until her death. During her residence there she urged the agent to dispose of the property, and in the course of the correspondence stated that she would be willing to accept £1,000 for it. The agent, in 1844, having directed the property to be sold by auction, his sister became the purchaser for £628, having authorized the person who attended to bid at the sale on her behalf to go as high as £800 for the property. Upon a bill filled by the son and heir of the owner, in 1858, the court set aside the sale by auction, as having been made at a price not warranted by the agent's authority. Kerr v. Lefferty, 7 Gr. 412.

Manager of Bank—Acceptance of Doten Payment—Oral Authority.]—The defoulant wrote to the manager, who was orally authorized to sell certain lands belonging to a bank: "I hereby agree to purchase from the Dominion Bank, all," &c., and paul on account of the purchase money $100. This memorandum was not submitted to the managing board of the bank, nor was it signed by any one acting on their behalf, and the solicitor for the bank refused to allow it to be put into such a shape as to bind the bank:—Held, that the memorandum amounted to an offer to purchase only, and that before a formal acceptance thereof by the bank authorities, the defendant was at liberty to withdraw the same. And quare, whether in such a case authority for the purpose of selling the lands of the bank could be conferred by parol. Dominion Bank v. Knowlton, 25 Gr. 125.

Power of Attorney—Discharge of Mortgage. —The discharge of a mortgage was executed under a power which, after authorizing the attorney to sell the principal's lands and give receipts for the consideration money, gave power, upon payment of all or any debts, to give proper and sufficient acquittances and discharges for the same:—Held, sufficient authority to sign the statutory certificate. Lee v. Morrote, 25 U. C. R. 604.

attorney by mortgagees authorized their agent to enter and take possession of the mortgaged lands and sell the same at public or private sale, and for the best price that could be got for them, and to execute all necessary receipts, &c., which receipts "should effectually exone at every purchaser or other person taking the same from any liability of seeing to the application of the money therein mentioned to be received and from being responsible for the loss, misapplication, or non-application thereof." The agent took possession and sold the land, receiving part of the purchase money in eash and the balance, in a binnelf, which he caused to be discounted, and appropriated the proceeds. The purchaser paid the note to the holders at maturity:—Held, that the power of attorney did not authorize a sale upon credit, and the sale by the agent was therefore, invalid, and the purchaser was not relieved by the above clause from seeing that the authority of the agent was rightly exercised. The sale being invalid, the subsequent payment of the note by the purchaser could not make it good. Rodburn v. Steinney, 16 S. C. R. 297.

— Scope of—Exchange.] — Held, reversing the decision below, 19 O. R. 739, that a power of attorney to the husband of a married woman, defendant, authorizing him to sell her lands, did not authorize him to exchange such lands for others, or to bind her to assume payment of a mortgage on the land given in exchange, and that on the evidence she was not bound thereby. McMichael v. Wilkic, 18 A. R. 462.

 Scope of—Leasehold Property.]— D., being about to leave this country for a time, executed a general power of attorney authorizing the agent, G., amongst other things, for the principal, and in his name, and to his use, "to buy any freehold lands, or any ships, vessels, or steamboats, or any shares ships, vessers, or strainhoats, or any shares therein, as the said G. may think expedient, and for my benefit." Buring D.'s absence the agent purchased a leasehold property known as the "St. Nicholas Saloon," together with furniture, provisions, and business therein, for the payment of which he gave his own notes, indorsed by him in the name of the principal, under a clause in the power of attorney authorizing him to make and indorse notes, &c., in the course of business, alleging that he had made the purchase for the joint benefit of himself, his principal, and a third person, who also indorsed these promissory notes:—Held, that this was a purchase which the agent was not entitled to make. Dick v. Gordon, 6 Gr. 394.

Scope of-Purchase Money,]-Acting under a power of attorney from the defendant, empowering him to attend to and transact all the defendant's business in connection with her properties, both real and personal, and generally to do anything he might think necessary, &c., in the premises as fully and effectually as if she were personally present, the attorney entered into a contract the sale of the defendant's farm to the plaintiff, and a deed was executed by the defendant and delivered over to the attorney for the pur-pose of carrying out the sale. The terms of purchase were that the plaintiff was to pay off certain incumbrances, make a cash payment, and execute a mortgage to secure the balance of the purchase money, which he did, making the cash payment and mortgage to the attorney as trustee for the defendant, which the attorney was willing to hand over to the latter on her delivering up possession, which she refused to do:—Held, that the power was a sufficient authority to the attorney to receive the purchase money and bind the defendant in the arrangement made; and that the plaintiff was entitled to possession of the land. Clellan v. McCaughan, 23 O. R. 679.

Scope of Authority — Contract — Letter,]—C. R. S., being the owner of certain leasehold property, wrote to E. E. K., a land agent, a letter in these words: "Please call on J. J. R. He keeps a small shopes call on J. J. R. He keeps a small shopes call on J. J. R. He keeps a small shopes call on J. J. R. He keeps a small shopes call on J. J. R. He keeps a small shopes call on J. J. R. He keeps a small shopes call on J. J. R. He keeps a small shopes call on J. J. R. He keeps a small shopes call on J. J. R. He keeps a small shope call the same and the same and the call pay over the money to you. Please write me by return mail." On the following day E. E. R. wrote J. J. R. as follows: "Mr. S. of Meaford wishes me to say that if you desire to purchase some property he owns on P. street, that if you give him $235 cash he will send the deeds to me and deliver them to you. Your reply early will very much oblige." About a month afterwards an acceptance was indoresed on the latter letter in these words: "I hereby accept the above on the understanding that I pay no expenses;" and it was signed by J. J. R. Upon an action being brought for specific performance by J. J. R. against C. R. S.:—Held, that the letter from C. R. S. did not contain authority to E. K. to enter into a contract for the sale of the property. Ryan v. Sing, 7 O. R. 266.

Sheriff—Sale under Execution—Instructions.]—The plaintiff, before the sale of lands under his execution, gave the sheriff a memorandum authorizing him to bid on his account to the amount of the debt and costs in the suit. The sheriff, instead of bidding graduilly, bid at once the full amount, and bought in the land—Held, that the plaintiff had clearly no ground of action against him for so doing; and quære, whether the writing could be construed as more than an authority, and whether, if defendant had disregarded it altogether, any action could have been maintained. Markle v. Thomas, 13 U. C. R. 321.

7. Other Cases.

Intervention of Principal — Termination of Agent's Authority.]—Where the principals negotiate, and either perfect a contract or put an end to proposals for one before the delegated power to their agents has been fully exercised, the acts of the principals are the binding acts, and the subsequent acts of the agents are of no avail as against their principals. In this case, upon the letters and evidence, it was held that the defendant had not withdrawn his prior proposals and abandoned the negotiations before a final arrangement had been come to by the respective solicitors. Vardon, v. Vardon, 6.0. R. 719.

Notice of Abandonment.] — Authority of agent to give notice of abandonment to underwriters. Merchants Marine Ins. Co. v. Barss, 15 S. C. R. 185.

Pledge — Lien—Notice, !—A partner intrusted with possession of goods of his firm for the purpose of sale may, either as partner in the business or as a factor for the firm, pledge them for advances made to him personally, and the lien of the pledgee will remain as vaid as if the security had been given by the absolute owner of the goods, notwith-standing notice that the contract was with an agent only. Dingwall v. McBean, 30 S. C. R. 441.

Power of Attorney — Borrowing, — An agent who is authorized by his power to make contracts of sale and purchase, charter vessels, and employ servants, and as incidental thereto to do certain specifica acts, including indorsement of bills and other acts for the purposes therein aforesaid, but not including the borrowing of money, cannot borrow on behalf of his principal or bind him by contract of loan, such acts not being necessary for the declared purposes of the power, Bryant v. Bunque du Peuple, Bryant v. Quebec Bank, [1893] A. C. 170.

— Ejectment.]—One G., a rector, in 1861 leased land to the plaintiff for twenty-one years, at an annual rent, with a provisor for re-entry on non-payment. The plaintiff entered and paid rent until the summer of 1865, when he went away from the county, leaving nearly a year's rent overdue, and giving the key to a person in the adjoining house. In July, 1866, the premises being then vacant, G. went to England, leaving a power of attorney with his son authorizing him to collect and distrain for his rents, and to commence and prosecute all actions and other proceedings which might be expedient to be done or prosecuted about the premises as if he were present. Quare, whether the son was authorized, under the power of attorney, to bring ejectment and enter for the forfeiture. O'llare v. McCormick, 30 U. C. R. 367.

Evidence of.]—A registered memorial of a deed, executed under a power of attorney, is not sufficient evidence of the power under 39 Vict. c. 29, s. 1, s.-s. 3 (O.) Canada Permanent L. and S. Co. v. Ross, 7 P. R. 79.

Landlord and Tenant—Waiver,]—A remant absconded leaving rent in arrear, whereapon the landlord distrained, but, before selling, the tenant sent to the landlord a power of attorney authorizing him to dispose of the property; and by letter he directed the landlord at pay himself his claim for rent, as also his claim for expenses and trouble; and after payment thereof and of the plaintiff to remit the balance to the tenant. The landlord the abstraction of the property under the power—Held, that the landlord by so proceeding had not waived his right to payment of the rent due, and that the plaintiff was entitled to be paid only out of the balance remaining after payment of such rent, as also of any rent due by any former tenant for which a distress could have been made, together with the landlord's expenses and charges for trouble in executing the trusts of the power. Tyrrelt v. Rose, 17 Gr. 334.

Stockbrokers — Authority to — Implied Terms—Stock Exchange.] — See Forget v. Baxter, [1900] A. C. 467.

Variation of Bill of Lading.]—Power of Toronto agent to change destination of goods or vary the terms of a bill of lading placed in the hands of an agent of a forwarding company at Waterford, Ont., for carriage to Liverpool. Monteith v. Merchants Dispatch Transportation Co., 9 A. R. 282.

VII. REVOCATION OF AUTHORITY TO AGENT.

[As to revocation by death, see R. S. O. 1897 c. 116, ss. 1, 2.]

Death of Principal.]—By the death of the principal the authority of an agent is determined. Where, therefore, an agent obtained on credit, from persons with whom his principal had been in negotiation previously, a supply of furniture for the house of the principal, in which he had intended carrying on business, but before any binding agreement was concluded, or the furniture delivered, the principal had died abroad, the court refused to decree a specific performance of the contract to purchase, and ordered the administrators, who had taken possession of the goods, to deliver them to the vendors, and pay the costs of the suit instituted for the purpose of obtaining possession of the furniture, or security for the price of it, Jacques v. Worthington, 7 Gr. 192.

— Knowledge of—Power of Attorney.]
— T., K., & Co., carrying on business as gasfitters and plumbers, contracted orally with b, an hotel-keeper, to supply a new hotel he was crecting with various articles in the way of their trade, which were to be paid for as the work progressed. D. afterwards left this Province on account of ill-health, having previously executed a power of attorney to one S., authorizing him to carry on his business during his absence. T. K., & Co., maring discovered that D.'s estate was greatly involved, refused to proceed with their contract, unless secured for their work and materials, whereupon S., with a view of inducing T., K., & Co. to complete their contract, in pursuance of a previous arrangement, executed, as such attorney, a chattel mortgage of the goods furnished by them, securing T. K., & Co. payment of their demand. At the time of the execution of this instrument D, was lead, but this fact was not known to the parties until some time after the completion of the work:

—Held, that T., K., & Co. were not, under this mortgage, entitled to remove any of the littings put in the hotel; their only remedy being for the price of their work and material under their contract with D. Jacques v. Worthington, 7 Gr. 192, distinguished and approved. McQuesten v. Thompson, 2 E. & A. 167.

Notification—Act Done before.]—Semble, that an act done by an agent within the scope of his authority, and before any notification of its revocation, is good, although it may be entirely revoked at the time. Kerr v. Lefferty, 7 Gr. 412.

What Constitutes Revocation—Letter—Authority of Agent.]—The owner of land, in January, 1894, wote to an agent requesting him to find a purchaser for it at $690 cash, or $890 on a certain specified credit. Nothing was done on this letter, and in December, 1805, the property in the meantime having risen greatly in value, the owner, having received an other for the timber on the land, wrote to the same agent informing him thereof, and asking his opinion as to what "he (the owner) should take for the lot altogether." In February, 1806, the agent, without further communication with the owner, contracted in writing to sell the property for $600, "to be paid on the execution of a good and full warranty deed, clear of all incumbrances." On a bill filed for specific performance by the purchaser against the owner, the court, considering that the letter of December, 1805, was a revocation of any authority contained in the letter of January, 1804, to sell the premises, refused to enforce the contract; and quare, whether the letter of January, 1814, conferred upon the agent power to sell. But if that letter did empower the agent to sell, he had not any authority for agreeing to give a deed such as that stipulated for. Anderson v. McHean, 12 Gr. 463.

VIII, RIGHTS OF AGENT AGAINST PRINCIPAL.

1. Advances by Brokers or Commission Merchants.

Agreement — Construction—Commission—Pleading.]—The declaration stated that defendants covenanted with plaintifs that the plaintiffs should make them advances either in money or wool: that the defendants would buy wool with moneys advanced: that the plaintiffs should have a lien on all the wool, and might insure it and charge the premium as advances: that the wool as manufactured should be consigned to the plaintiffs for sale; that the plaintiffs for sale; that the plaintiffs should be entitled to 1½ per cent. commission on advances, and 5 per cent, on sales; and that the plaintiffs should credit proceeds of sales to defendants after deducting the advances and commission. Averment, that the plaintiffs made advances, paid insurances, and made sales, and credited defendants with the proceeds, less the advances and commission, whereby plaintiffs becauge entitled, in addition to the balances due to them for advances and interest, to large sums for commission under the agreement; and that upon the closing of the agreement; and that upon the closing of the agreement, and hat appear the plaintiffs a large sum, as a balance due thereunder, which defendants had not paid:—Held, on denurrer, that upon the sale of all the goods delivered by defendants of the plaintiffs an action might lie on the evenant for any balance due to the paid-ths, for advances and commission of the agreement. 2. That the expression "upon the closing of the agreement," was not equivalent to an averment that plaintiffs had no goods of the defendants still on hand to be sold; and that the declaration was therefore insufficient. Young v. Crossland, 18 C. P. 312.

Illegal Contracts.]—Liability of principals to brokers for moneys advanced for the purpose of buying and selling grain on margin. Rice v. Gunn, 4 O. R. 579.

Interest — Agreement — Custom — Evidence.]—A merchant agreed in writing to advance money for the purpose of getting out timber, to be forwarded to him at Q. for sale; for which advances he was to be paid certain commissions. The timber was duly forwarded to him in the autumn; but, prices being low, he, with the assent of the other party, held the timber over till the following spring, and claimed interest on his advances from the 1st December until the sale of the timber, the case not being provided for by the agreement. It appeared that it had been customary in the trade to charge interest in such cases, where there was not any writing; but there was no evidence of such custom being known to the plaintiff:—Held, that interest could not be charged. De Hertet v. Supple, 13 Gr. 648, 14 Gr. 421.

Purchase on Joint Account—Commission—Objection—Delay.]—Where parties entered into an agreement that they should purchase goods on joint account, and at the joint risk, and that one of the parties should furnish the funds in the first instance:—Held, that interest could not be charged on the funds so furnished. In such a case a firm in C. was to advance the funds, and the goods were to be consigned for sale to their firm in Le, which went by a different name:—Held, that they could not charge commission on their sales. Three months before the filing of a bill respecting the partnership, accounts had been furnished in which interest and commission were charged, and none of the partners had before suit suggested their objections to those charges. Held, that they were not precluded by this delay from objecting thereto in the suit. Jardine v. Hope, 19 Gr. 76.

Loss of Goods—Refund of Advance—Evidence.]—Defendant obtained an advance from plaintiffs on wheat which he had shipped from Oakville to Oswego, consigned to them, to the care of C. & B. The plaintiffs were to sell the wheat for defendant, and pay him the proceeds, deducting the advance and charges, &c. The wheat having been lost on the passage:—Held, that the defendant was bound to refund the sum advanced, as the wheat still continued his property. Gooderham v. Marlatt, 14 U. C. R. 228.

Deferdant, at the trial, desired to prove that when the advance was made the plaintiffs were spoken to about insuring the wheat, and replied that they were their own insurers, and took the risk of wheat shipped on their account:—Held, that such evidence was rightly rejected; and that if admitted it would not have affected defendant's liability. B.

Request for Refund — Custom—Ecidence, I—Defendant, at B, consigned for sale to the plaintiff, a commission merchant at M., a lot of butter for sale, and drew upon him at five days a bill for $2,000, which the plaintiff accepted and paid at maturity. At time his instructions were not to sell for less than 18-be, per lb, which he could not get. The market continued to fall, and after a lengthy correspondence the butter was sent to plaintiff sa great at H., who wrote that no sale could be effected there. Plaintiff then sued defendant upon the common counts for the money paid by him:—Held, that he was entitled to recover, and that there was nothing in the facts, more fully set out in the case, to vary the common law obligation to refund the advance on request, or to compel the plaintiff to wait until a sale should be effected. Covie' v, Apps. 22 C. P. 589.

At the trial defendant tendered evidence to the common that there was not the common that the evidence to wait until a sale should be effected. Covie' v, Apps. 22 C. P. 589.

At the trial defendant tendered evidence to shew the meaning of cash advances made by commission merchants on account of goods consigned to them for sale, and the usual practice as to commission merchants reimbursing themselves for such advances:—Held, that such evidence was properly rejected. Ib.

Sale for Less than Advance—Conduct of Agent—Pleuding.]—Defendant, living at C., consigned to the plaintiff at M. certain to-bacco for sale, and, without authority, drew upon him at the same time for $250, which the plaintiff accepted and paid. The price which defendant asked could not be obtained in M., and the plaintiff therefore slipped the proceeds, after dedict it was sold. The next were only £14 sterling, and he said defendant upon the common counts for the difference, 8278, the expenses of shipping being also deducted. Defendant pleaded never indebted, payment, and set-off. When the draft fell due defendant had written to the plaintiff, offering to raise funds to retire it by drawing upon him gain. The account sales received by the plaintiff from £, had been sent the defendant, who said, on receiving them, that he did not think he ought to bear the whole loss, but offered $150. The jury gave a verdict for $200:—Held, there being no evidence of any special contract, that the plaintiff was entitled to recover his advances without waiting for the sale of the tobacco; and that if he had done wrong in his dealings with it, such defence should have been pleaded. The verdict was therefore upheld. Stevart v. Lone, 24 U. C. R. 434.

Evidence—Charges,]—Plaintiffs being commission merchants in N. Y., received from defendants a quantity of wheat, with instructions to ship it to L. for sale there, not limiting them as to price, nor directing the employment of any particular agent; and they made advances upon it, which, as they alleged, exceeded the net proceeds of the sales, one cargo having realized more than the advances, the other two cargoes much less, an action for the excess thus advanced, the plaintiffs proved that they had mailed to defendant the account sales received by them from their L. agents, with an account between plaintiffs and defendants founded upon them, and that these account sales were afterwards seen in his possession; and eviwere dence was given that the wheat was in a bad condition when shipped, as defendant knew; that the prices realized were what might have been expected, and the charges such as were It appeared, also, that part of the wheat belonged to one J., and that on receiving the first account sales shewing a profit, the defendant had settled with him. This cargo, however, had not been consigned to the same agents as the other two. The jury having found for the plaintiffs:—Held, that the evidence was not sufficient to shew the price for which the wheat was sold, nor the amount of charges connected with the sales and a new trial was therefore granted, with costs to abide the event. Craig v. Corcoran, 23 U. C. R. 441.

2. Remuneration and Indemnity.

(a) Agents for Purchase of Goods.

Character of Party — Principal or Agent, 1—Held, upon the evidence, that the defendants were acting as principals, and not as agents for the purchasers, and therefore commission. Macklem v. Thorac, 30 U. C. R. 464.

Negotiations — Subsequent Contract by Principal,—Plaintiff, being employed to purchase and ship lumber for defendant on commission, attempted to purchase a large quantity from P., but was unable to agree as to terms, and the negotiation was broken off. Afterwards P. and defendant purchased. The court set aside a verdict for plaintiff for his commission, with costs to abide the event, on the ground that the evidence did not sustain it. Boydell v. Snarr, 6 C. P. 94.

Services outside Contract—Interext.]—R., who was engaged in the lumber business, employed S. as his agent, and by letter agreed to pay him $10 per 1,000 cubic feet on all timber which S. manufactured for him, which rate (the letter said) "includes purchasing, superintending the making, and attending to the shipping of the same." R. paying all travelling expenses. S. bought a quantity of timber for R., which was not manufactured under the superintendence of S.:—Held, that he was entitled to a reasonable compensation for this service. There having been considerable delay in enforcing payment, caused by R. having obtained an injunction restraining S. from proceeding at law:—Held, that S. was entitled to interest on the amount of his claim. Ridley v. Sexton, 18 Gr, 580.

Allitmed on appeal as to the allowance of interest, 19 Gr, 146.

(b) Agents for Purchase of Lands.

Contract—Statute of Frauds—Acting for Vendor.]—Defendant agreed with the plaintiff, an attorney, to give him $1,000 for his trouble and commission, if he procured for him a certain hotel property for $15,000. The plaintiff took an agreement from the vendor to sell to himself, and afterwards, with the vendor's assent, substituted one O., who acted for the plaintiff, for himself as vendee. The defendant and the vendor, through the instrumentality of the plaintiff, then came to gether, and the price was reduced to $14,500. Deeds were made by O. and by the vendor to the defendant, who took possession, the plaintiff being imployed by the vendor to prepare some of the papers, but he had not, as he swore, been employed by him to make the sale:

—Held, that the plaintiff was entitled to recover; that the contract was not one within the Statute of Frauds; and that his acting for the vendor after the contract of sale had been made, notwithstanding the agreement for purchase in the first instance to himself, was not open to any legal objection. White v. Curry, 39 U. C. R. 559.

Indemnity against Purchase Money—Untract in Name of Agent.]—S., a school trustee, by desire of the board, bought land at an auction, for the board, for a school-site, and signed the contract with his own name only. The board afterwards, by several resolutions, during three years, recognized the purchase as their own, and paid three instalments of the purchase money. In an estimate under the corporate seal, the board applied to the town council for money to pay "for school premises for a central school, contracted for and agreed to be paid, $1,570; for building a central school house on said purchased premises, $7.870." It was shewn that there was no other property or contract to which this language could refer than that mentioned. The town cour-il did not comply with the requisition, and ultimately trustees were elect-ed, a majority of whom determined to repudiate the purchase:—Held, in a suit by $8$, against the board for indemnification in respect of the remainder of the purchase money, that he was entitled to relief. Smith v. Belleville School Trustees, 16 Gr. 130.

(c) Agents for Sale of Goods.

Contract—Construction—Future Sales.]
—The defendants, wishing to introduce an ore called blue ore in Pennsylvania, corresponded with the plaintiff at Pittsburg. Through the plaintiff intervention an agreement was made between O. & Co. and defendants for the sale of 15,000 tons, to be delivered before the 1st August, 1872, with an option to O. & Co. to order any number of tons from 10,000 to 30,000, during the five years from the 1st February, 1873, and a formal contract was subsequently executed. On the above sale being effected, C., defendants managing director, wrote plaintiff that a commission of fifteen cents per ton would be paid him on that sale, and that he would make him the following offer for the future:

I will give you a commission of ten cents for the pear five cents of any furnace, that is, for the first set of th a commission of five cents per tons on this 30,000 tons, and brought this action therefor:—Held, that he could not recover, as the agreement to give five cents per ton on all sales during the five years, referred to future sales, and not to any amount ordered by O. & Co. under their contract. Taylor v. Co-bourg, Peterborough, and Marmora R. W. and Mining Co., 24 C. P. 200.

Construction - Moneus Received after Termination-Estoppel,1-The defend ants, type founders in Edinburgh, employed plaintiff's father as their agent in Canada, to be paid by a commission "on the receipts, i. e., in cash, bills, and value of old metal received." He also had a small guaranteed salary. It was understood that as soon as the father got too old to manage the business, the plaintiff was to succeed him; and in 1880 this was effected. In 1882 the plaintiff was dismissed. He wrote complaining thereof, but said the sting was taken out of it by reason of a yearly allowance to the father of $1.250, for which allowance to the father of $1,230, for which he was grateful. In January, 1884, the defendants, annoyed at a loss occasioned by plaintiff's brother, threatened that the father's allowance would be stopped; and the father wrote plaintiff that he could make any claim he wished. The plaintiff then made a claim on defendants for commission on sales made before, but the amount whereof was received after plaintiff had left defendants' employ-On defendants notifying the plaintiff ment that if the claim were pressed the father's allowance would be discontinued, nothing further was done by plaintiff until after his father's death, when the claim was pressed and this action commenced. It appeared that had the claim been pressed the allowance would have been stopped; and that defendants paid the al-lowance under the belief that the claim would not be pressed:—Held, that the plaintiff was not entitled to recover. Palmer v. Miller, 13 O. R. 567.

— Period—Implication.]—In a written contract of agency the principal agreed to pay to the agent a fixed commission on all sales of goods manufactured by the former effected by or through the latter. The contract was made terminable at the end of a year or a month's notice by either party; but it contained no express agreement by the principal to employ for any period or to manufacture any goods:
—Held, that these terms could not be imported into the contract by implication. Morris v. Dinnick, 25 O. R. 201.

Scope of Employment — Specific Goods.]—The appellant company dealt in electrical supplies at Halfax and had at times sold goods on commission for the respondents, a company manufacturing electric machinery in Montreal. In 1897 the appellants telegraphed the respondents as follows:—"Windsor Electric Station completely burned. Fully insured. Send us quotations for new plant. Will look after your interest." The reply was:—"Can furnish Windsor 180 Killovatt Stanley two phase, complete exciter and switchboard, $4,900, including commission for you. Transformers, large size, 75 cents per light." * The manager of the appellant company went to Windsor but could not effect a sale of this machinery. Shortly afterwards a travelling agent of the defendant company came to Halifax and saw the manager, and they worked together for a time trying to make a sale, but the agent finally sold a smaller plant to the Windsor company for $1,800. The appellants sued for a commission on this sale:—Held, that they were not employed to effect the sale actually made; that the respondents offered the commission only on the sale of the specific plant mentioned in the answer to the request for quotations; and that there was no evidence of actual procurse of dealing between the two companies which would entitle the appellants to such commission. Starr, Son, & Uo, v, Royal Electric Co., 30 S. C. R. 384.

See Gooderham v. Hyde, 6 C. P. 341; Young v. Crossland, 18 C. P. 312; Jardine v. Hope, 19 Gr. 76; Corby v. Williams, 7 S. C. R. 470; Jones v. Linde British Refrigeration Co., 32 O. R. 191, and 111, 1.

(d) Agents for Sale of Lands.

Amount of Commission - Refusal of Purchasers to Complete—Deposit—Non-direc-tion. | The appellants, real estate brokers at Winnipeg, received oral instructions from the respondents to sell certain lands of theirs at a certain price and on certain terms of payment. The appellants sold the land at the price named, receiving from the purchasers the sum of $5,000 as a deposit on account of the purchase money, and giving therefor a receipt. Prior to the expiration of the delay within which the balance of the purchase money was to be paid, the purchasers refused to complete their purchase, for want of title in the respondents to a certain portion of the land, and contended that from the absence of writing signed by them they could not be com-pelled to do so. The appellants then brought an action for commission upon the entire purchase money. The respondents set up the defence that the appellants promised to sell the lands and to complete such sale by preparing the necessary agreement in writing to make a binding contract with the purchasers. case came on for trial before a jury, who followed the charge, and found a verdict in favour of the appellants for the full amount of their claim, thereby giving them two and ahalf per cent, upon the entire purchase money of both parcels of land. The jury were not asked by the Judge to pronounce upon the nature of the terms upon which appellants were employed, upon the question whether the sale went off through the neglect of the appellants to take a writing binding the purchasers, or whether it went off by reason of the venor whether it went on by reason to dors not being able to complete the title, or because they were unwilling to do so. The full court directed that the verdict should be reduced to $125, being commission at the rate of two and a-half per cent, on the $5,000 actually paid, or, in the alternative, that there should be a new trial:—Held, affirming that judgment, that there had been a mistrial, and therefore the order for a new trial should be affirmed; appellants to have the alternative of reducing the verdict to $125. MacKenzie v. Champion, 12 S. C. R. 649.

Commission Paid by Purchaser—Rights of Vendor—Waiser.—The plaintiff, a land agent, was employed by defendants to sell certain land at a stipulated price, and in the course of his employment, and after negotiating with an intending purchaser, an exchange was effected by certain of his lands being taken in part satisfaction of the defendants price, and the plaintiff demanded commission from the purchaser for effecting such exchange, to which the purchaser, without acchange to which the purchaser, without acknowledging the plaintiff's rout to make it, to the constant of the plaintiff of the plaintiff. The plaintiff said that such sum was paid not as commission, but as a gratuity:—Held, that such a sum, whether received as a commission strictly so called, or as a gratuity, was a profit directly made in the course of and in connection with the plaintiff's employment, and would, therefore, belong to his employers, the defendants were fully aware of the plaintiff having received such sum, and made no objection to his retaining it, but with full knowledge thereof negotiated with him for a settlement of his remuneration, they could not afterwards, in an action by the plaintiff for such renumeration, set off such sum. Culverwell v. Campton, 31 C. P. 342.

Contract — Purchase not in Accordance with—Acceptance, i—Defendant agreed with the plaintiff that if the plaintiff would find him a purchaser for his farm at $6,000, and get not less than $1,000 down, he would pay him $200. The plaintiff found a purchaser at $6,000, who paid only $500 down, but the defendant accepted and sold to him, and it was proved that after the sale defendant promised the plaintiff to pay him the $200. The Judge having found for the plaintiff for $200 upon the common counts:—Held, on appeal, that defendant having accepted and dealt with the purchaser found by the plaintiff, though not such a purchaser so the agreement called for, the plaintiff was entitled to recover the value of his services on the common counts; and that, as the defendant had promised to pay the $200, the verdict was right. Wycott v. Campbell, 31 U. C. R. 584.

Refusal of Offer—Quantum Meruit.) — The defendant, at the instance of the plaintiff, placed his farm in the plaintiff's hands for sale, subject to the payment of a certain commission in case the farm should be disposed of through him, and if the defendant himself sold without the aid of the plaintiff, the commission should be only one-half. The defendant hat if the land remained unsold at the end of two years the agreement should cease:—Held. that, if paral evidence as to the limitation of time was not admissible, the law would infer its continuance for a reasonable time only, and that, in deciding what was a reasonable time, the time spoken of by the narties, which was two years, might be considered. Held, also, that the defendant having refused to self to a proposed purchaser found by the plaintiff, the plaintiff was not entitled to recover his full commission as on a sale, but the value of his services as on a quantum meruit or daments of the defendant's wrongful refusal. Addinson v. Yeager, 10 A. R. 477.

Negotiation — Incomplete Agreement—Sale to Others — Quantum Mcruit.] — The plaintiff had been employed by the defendants to procure offers for the purchase or exchange of three blocks of land owned by them, and he accordingly procured from one R. an offer at an estimated price of $97,000, which he submitted to the defendants, and which they, on the 10th September, 1884, accepted on condition that R. would agree to a variation of the terms of his offer. R. being then absent from the country, the plaintiff, without any instructions, agreed on behalf of R. to the proposed variation. R. returned shortly afterwards, and on the 18th September signed a formal ratification of the paintiff's act, but it was not shewn that this was ever communicated to the defendants. Meanwhile the defendants, being pressed for money by a mortgage of one of the properties, had arranged a sale of that property to one S., at a price $85,000 less than it was valued at in the offer of R., part of the consideration given by S. being some of the same lands offered by R. in exchange, of which it appeared that S. and not R. had the control; and by a subsequent arrangement the defendants' other two properties were sold to R. The defendants and S. were brought together during the negotiations arising out of R.'s offer—Held, reversing the judgment in 11 O. R. 265, that, as between R. and the defendants, the matter had never passed beyond the stage of negotiation; R.'s offer was not one that he could carry out, and therefore the plaintiff was not entitled to commission upon the offer of R., or alleged contract of sale made with him; neither was he entitled to anything either on the footing of his agreement or quantum meruit by way of commission on the sales that were actually made. Culverwell v. Birney, 14 A. R. 266.

Right to Commission—Change in Terms of Sate].—The defendant, knowing that the plaintiff was a land agent, arranged with him to procure a purchaser for his house and lot at a named price. Through the plaintiff's intervention a proposed purchaser was procured and a purchase discussed. Subsequently, and as a result of the discussion, a lease was entered into of the premises for three years, with a collateral agreement giving the purchaser the option of purchasing within a year, which he exercised:—Held, that the plaintiff was entitled to his commission from the defendant. Morson v. Burnside, 31 O. R. 438.

— Endeavour to Effect Sale—Expenses—Collateral Contract.]—D. gave instructions in writing to H. respecting the sale of a coal mine on terms mentioned, agreeing to pay a commission of 5 per cent, on the selling price, such commission to include all expenses. H. failed to effect a sale:—Held, that in an action by H. to recover expenses incurred in an endeavour to make a sale, and reasonable remuneration, parol evidence was admissible to shew that the written instructions did not constitute the whole of the terms of the contract, but there had been a collateral oral agreement in respect to the expenses, and that the question as to whether or not there was an oral contract in addition to what appeared in the written instructions was a question that ought to have been submitted to the jury. Dunsmuir v. Lovenberg, 30 S. C. R. 334.

3. Other Cases.

Bill for Account.]—Ordinarily a bill for an account will not lie by an agent against a principal. James v. Snarr, 15 Gr. 229.

Set-off.]—An agent, if sued by his principal for money received, cannot deduct in the first instance from such moñey a claim for money lent, or for any independent transaction between himself and his principal—treating the balance as the only sum held for the use of the plaintiff; but he must plead his demand by way of set-off against his gross receipts. Hamilton v. Street, S U. C. R. 124.

Stated Account. — Accounts were dilivered in 1852 and 1865, by a trustee and agent to his principal, and the confidential relationship existed for upwards of two years after the latter account had been rendered:— Held, that these accounts were not binding on the principal as stated accounts. Smith v. Redford, 19 Gr. 274.

IX. RIGHTS OF AGENT AGAINST THERD PERSONS.

Right to Sue in his Own Name.]—A person receiving money from an agent on a promise to return it to him cannot, in an action by the agent to recover it back, set up as a defence that the money really belonged to a third party. Lister v. Burnham, 1 U. C. R. 419.

Held, that the plaintiff, who held notes indorsed to him in blank as his father's agent, could as such agent sue upon them in his own name. Ross v. Tyson, 19 C. P. 294.

Defendant in writing acknowledged the receipt from the plaintiff, described as assistant carnager of the Howe Machine Company, of sewing machine on hire for three months at $5 a month in advance. He agreed to pay $45, the value of the machine, in the event of its being injured or not returned; and in default of payment of the monthly rental, or the due fulfilment of the lease, or if the machine should be deemed by the lessors to be in jeopardy, the plaintiff or the company might resume possession of it; and the defendant waived all right of action for trespass, damages, or replevin by reason of any action taken by the plaintiff or the company in resuming such possession. The plaintiff said he had possession of the machine before it was delivered to defendant; that he was responsible to the company, a foreign corporation; and had no property in it except as their agent:—Held, that the plaintiff under the agreement might maintain replevin in his own name for the machine, on non-fulfilment of the conditions. Coquillard v. Hunter, 36 U. C. R. 316.

Defendant, being indebted to plaintiff, by an indenture reciting his indebtedness, and that he had agreed with the plaintiff for the repayment of said sum due within six months from date, with interest, conveyed to plaintiff, ertain lands, habendum in fee. Proviso, that plaintiff, if the debt was duly paid, would reconvey; but there was no covenant for payment by defendant. Indeed, of plaintiff, that in the proper money of one J. L., and that the plaintiff's name was only introduced therein as agent for said J. L.; and in consideration of the trust, and of 5s., he absolutely assigned all interest in the lands in the said indenture, as well as the indenture, to the said J. L.;—Held, that it was not open to defendant to deny that he was at the date of the said indenture, the distribution of the lands of the said indenture.

X. RIGHTS OF PRINCIPAL AGAINST THIRD PERSONS.

1. To Sue upon Contracts of Agents.

In Name of Agent—President of Company.]—An agreement was made between the defendant and the plaintiff described as "President of the Port Burwell Harbour Company on behalf of the said President, Directors, and Company of Port Burwell Harbour," and under the seals of defendant and plaintiff:—He'-l', that the plaintiff was entitled to sue in his own name. Saxion v. Ridley, 13 U. C. R. 522.

In Name of Disclosed Principal—Forcipar.]—One of the plaintiffs, W., of New York, and his agent, C., of Ingersoll, saw defeedant at his cheese factory in Stratford, and talked of the price of cheese. W., in leaving, said any correspondence would be through C., from whom defendant would probably hear on plaintiffs behalf, when the cheese was readyfor sale. Subsequently, plaintiffs authorized C. to buy cheese from defendant, and a contract was made by telegrams between C. and defendant:—Held, that the plaintiffs, though foreign principals, might sue upon the contract, there being evidence to shew that C. was authorized by them to enter into it on their behalf, and that defendant dealt with him as plaintiffs' agent. Webb v. Sharman, 34 U. C. R. 410.

— Telegram.]—Held, that a contract may be made, through the medium of an agent, with a telegraph company for the transmission of a message; and where the principal sustains loss through the medigence of a company, he may maintain an action against them therefor. The person to whom a telegram was sent by his agent was held entitled to sue the telegraph company for negligence in the transmission of it. Feaver v. Montreal Telegraph Co., 24 C. P. 258.

In Name of Undisclosed Principal.]—Semble, that a principal, for whose benefit a contract has been made by his agent, may sue thereon in his own name, though defendant may have known nothing of his interest in the subject matter. Mair v. Holton, 4 U. C. R. 505.

Insurance Policy.] — A marine policy was in this form: The Ætna Ins. Co., of, &c., on account of Co., loss, if any, payable to McC. (the plaintiff) in gold, do make insurance, &c.:—Held, that the contract on this policy was entered into with C.; and that McC. was not insured, and could not sue on the policy. Semble, that the insertion in the policy of the words "for or in the name of all persons interested," &c., or "for whom it may concern," would have enabled McC, on shewing interest, to recover; also, that the words "as broker" or "as agent," following after Cts name, would have let in parol evidence to shew the interest and right of an undisclosed principal, who could have sued on the policy McCollum v. Ætna Ins. Co., 20 C. P. 280.

Action by the Canada Shipping Company to recover $3,038.43, the price vot $10 tons, 5 cwt. of steam coal sold by their agents Thompson, Murray, & Co., through T. S. Noad, broker, as per following note "Monireal, 13th August, 1879, Messrs. Thompson, Murray, & Co.: I have this day sold for your account to arrive to the Hudon Cotton Mill Co. the $10 tons 5 cwt., best South Wales black vein steam coal per bill of lading per 'Lake Ontario' at $3.75 per not 22.20 pounds, duty paid ex ship, ship to have prompt despatch. Terms net cash on delivery or thirty days, adding interest buyer's option.

Brokerage nayable by you; buyer to have privilege of taking bill of lading or reweighing at soler's experie." The defendants pleaded: Seler's experie. The defendants pleaded: the contract was with Thompson, Marray, & Co. personally, and the plaintiffs had no action; and (2) that the cargo contained only 755 tons, 580 lbs., the price of which was $2,868.72, which they offered Thompson, Murray, & Co., together with the price of ten tons more to avoid litigation, in all $2,890.72, which they offered Thompson, Murray, & Co., together with the without their acknowledging their liability to plaintiffs, and prayed that the action be dismissed as to any further or greater sum:—Held, per Ritchie, C.J., and Taschereau and Gwynne, JJ., that it was unnecessary to decide the question whether the action could be brought by the undisclosed principal, for by their plea of tender and payment into court the defendants had acknowledged their liability to plaintiffs, although such tender and deposit had been made "without acknowledging their liability." Per Strong, J., that the action by the respondents (undisclosed principal, for action by the respondents (undisclosed principal), or the plaintiffs of the plaintiffs of the respondents (undisclosed principal), or the plaintiffs of the plaintiff

Sale of Land.] — W. signed and sealed a deed of conveyance of certain land to C. who supposed him to be the owner of the land, as he professed himself to be, whereas he was really only acting as agent for M., the owner. M. now brought this action against C. for specific performance of, as he alleged, a contract on C.'s part to purchase the land. There was no note or memorandum of the alleged contract, other than the deed, which was signed and sealed by C., and was in the ordinary short form, and acknowledged the receipt and payment of the purchase money, though the evidence shewed that only ten per cent, of it had been actually paid. It did not appear that the deed, though incomplete as a convexance, was evidence of a contract of sale, sufficient to satisfy the Statute of Frauds. Held, also, that, though W. professed at the time of the contract to be the owner of the land, yet, as in reality he was acting as agent for M., M. could avail himself of the contract, and was entitled to judgment. McCarthy v. Cooper, S. O. R. 316, 12 A. R. 284.

Set-off against Agent.]—In an action for use and occupation, and for money had and received, it appeared that the plaintiff was an action of the plaintiff was a set of the plaintiff and the plaintiff was a set of the plaintiff and the property until default. F., one of the firm, or ally lessed the premises in question, which were included in the assignment to defendant, and said be believed he mentioned to him at the time the plaintiff's lame as owner, and referred defendant to him with regard to a proposition to purchase. Afterwards the firm and defendant had dealings together, and defendant claimed that after crediting the rent they were still indebted to him. The plaintiff, being examined, swore that he had no knowledge of defendant's occupation, or of the premises, but that F. was authorized to rent the place, and to use his name in the suit.—Held, that it was properly left taken they found the premises from the plaintiff through F, as the premises from the plaintiff through F, as gong, or from the firm; and that the evidence sugard, or from the firm; and that the evidence sugard, or from the firm; and that the evidence sugard, or from the firm; and that the evidence sugard, or from the firm; and that the Certain road stock, which stood in the name of M., but belonged to the firm, was assigned with other property to the plaintiff. The defendant, before the assignment, had received the dividends under authority from M., and continued to receive them afterwards. No evidence was given to shew that either defendant or the road company had notice of the assignment:—Held, that the plaintiff's right to recover was rightly left to the jury, as with regard to the rent, and a verdict for defendant was unheld. Carriers' Liability — Countermand of Agent's Directiv.1.] — Where A., the general agent for shipping B.; sfour, shipping twenty-five barrels of it as usual to A. & Co. in Kingston, and before the sailing of the ship. D., another agent, under special instructions from B., shipped the same flour to B. & Co. in Kingston, to be forwarded to Montreal:—Held, that, as the owner of the flour could at any time change its destination before the ship sailed, the owners of the ship were liable to B., through their master's last bill of lading, given to the special agent D., the flour having been forwarded by the master in mistake to A. & Co. in Kingston, and left there, instead of being forwarded, as last directed, through B. & Co. to Montreal. Graham v. Browne, 5 U. C. R. 234.

Conversion of Securities — Fraudulent Pledge by Ageni—Estoppel.] — The Quebec Turnpike Trusts bonds issued under special Acts and Ordinances (R. S. Q. 1888, sup., p. 506) are payable to bearer and transferable by delivery. Certain of these bonds belonging to the estate of the late D. D. Young, had been used as exhibits and marked as such in a case of Xoung v. Rattray, and having been case of Xoung v. Rattray, and having been paper in Quebec in the working of the property of Detinue—Goods Sold without Authority—Tender—Demand.] — The plaintiff's servant, one O., being in charge of his horses, sold one without plaintiff's authority to defendant's wife, who had the management of defendant's business, receiving $20 in cash and defendant's business, receiving $20 in cash and defendant's note for $55, payable to O. Afterwards, meeting O., the plaintiff got from him the note and $11 in cash. The plaintiff demanded the horse from defendant's wife, and offered her the note and the $17, which, however, she did not take. He then brought detinue:—Held, that the plaintiff was entitled to recover; for that he was not bound to tender to defendant the note and the money he had received, nor could defendant retain the horse until he obtained them, at all events without giving notice that he would do so, after first demanding them. Morton v. None, 30 U. C. R. 158.

O. 1897 c. 150, "An Act respecting contracts in relation to goods in-trusted to agents," is one who is intrusted with the possession as agent in a mercantile transaction for the sale, or for an object con-nected with the sale, of the property. And where an agent had obtained possession of certain lumber from the master of a vessel without authority from the owner:—Held, that he had been intrusted with the possession, and that the owner was entitled to recover the value of the lumber from a bona fide pur-chaser from, who had paid, the agent. Moshier v. Keenan, 31 O. R. 658.

Signing. 1—semble, that more than the tation Act, 31 Vict. c. 1, 8, 7, 8, 8, 9 (O.), the defendants, though a corporation, would be "persons signing" a bill of lading if signed by their authorized agent. Royal Canadian Bank v. Grand Trunk R. W. Co., 23 C. P.

Proof of Agency — Estoppel—Res Judicata,]—The plaintiffs and their father had been it possession of the lands about twenty or thirty years, the title, however, being all the while in another person. The plaintiffs employed one of the defendants, F., to obtain a conveyance, which he took in his own name for the avowed purpose of defeating the claim of one P., from whom a lease had been taken by the plaintiffs, and in a suit by P. against the plaintiffs to establish his right to the land, one of them swore that the deed to the defendant (the agent) was bond fide and for his own benefit; and subsequently to the dismissal fendant (the agent) was bond fide and for his own benefit; and subsequently to the dismissal of the bill in that suit, the plaintiffs took a lease of the premises from F;—Held, that the plaintiffs were not precluded from establishing the agency of F, and afterwards shewing themselves entitled to the land as owners, and that the dismissal of the bill in P,'s suit was not resignificant of the properties of that the dishibssal of the old in F. sant was not resignalized for the question involved in this; but the court, while granting to the plaintiffs the relief to which they proved them-selves entitled, refused them any costs, Wash-burn v. Ferris, 14 Gr. 516. See S. C., in appeal, 16 Gr. 76.

I. CONTRACT OF SURETYSHIP.

1. Generally.

Alteration in Contract.]—Where an alteration is made in the contract of suretyship, then, unless it is without inquiry self-evident that the alteration is unsubstantial, or one which cannot be prejudicial to the surety, the court will not go into an inquiry or permit the question to be submitted to the jury, but will hold that the surety must be the sole judge as to whether he will remain liable, not-withstanding the alteration. Citizens Ins. Co. v. Cluston, 13 O. R. 382.

Creditor as Surety—Raising Money for.]

—The fact that a person joins in a note as a surety to enable the principals to raise money to apply towards the discharge of certain obligations to him, does not prevent his being a surety. Shepley v. Hurd. 3 A. R. 549.

Execution of Bond—Denial—Evidence.]—In an action by the Crown against C. on a bond of suretyship for the faithful discharge by a government official of his duties as such, the control of suretyship for the faithful discharge by a government official of his duties as such, the control of the significant of the surety of the surety of the such that he made no efficient of the surety of the execution of the bond, as such as a surety of the execution of the bond, as such as the surety of the Execution of Contract on Condition of Others Jointag.]— The plaintiffs sued defendants H. & D. as having jointly executed a bond to secure payment of rent by H. T. was also named in it as obligor, but had not executed. It appeared that at the execution of the bond T. was not present, and defendant D. told the plaintiffs that he could not conveniently attend, but would sign it at any time. T. afterwards refused to execute, and no objection had been made by D. although aware of the refusal:—Held, that the non-execution by T. was no defence under a plea of non est factum by H., as shewing a variation of the refusal that the number of the refusal that the could be seen that the security of the secution by T. T. was not relieved from liability by T. nor having executed the bend. Road Co. v. Holmes, 16 U. C. R. 268.

Declaration on a covenant by defendant as survey for payment of rent by B. Plea, on equitable grounds, that defendant executed on the understanding and representation that Y., K., and E. should also execute, and that he should be responsible with them but not solely; and that B. and K. represented to him that immediately after his (defendant's) execution the other three would execute: that they did not execute; and that before breach and with due diligence defendant notified plaintiffs of the premises, and that he claimed to be released by such non-execution:—Held, on de-leased by such non-execution:—Held, on de-murrer, plea bad, for it did not connect the plaintiffs with the representations on which defendant executed, and they might have leased to B. on the understanding only that defendant should be surety. The evidence supplied this defect, and was held admissible under the plea of non est factum, which was also on the record. County of Huron v. Armstrong, 27 U. O. R. 533.

Action against V. and G. on their covenant for payment of rent by lessees. Plea, by V., that the agreement was drawn up to be executed by C. as his co-surety, and was delivered as an escrow, till its execution by C. that C. refused to execute; and that the plaintiff then erased C.'s name and inserted that of G. Replication, that after execution by both V. and G., V. ratified the agreement and accepted G. as co-surety: — Held, that on the evidence, which was contradictory, a ratification might be inferred. Henderson v. Vermilyea, 27 U. C. R. 544.

A bond, intended to be joint and several, was drawn up, to be executed by G., who was plaintiffs' treasurer, and by L. and A. as his sureties. A executed the bond on the 16th December, 1886, on the supposition and understanding that it should not 5e binding on him until executed by the others. On 27th December, to enable him to stand for the office of a councillor, A. requested the council to release him from the bond, which was agreed to, and on the 17th January, 1887, a formal resolution was passed accepting H. as surety in his place, and stating that a new bond had been executed by G., L., and H. On the same day the first bond, which had not been executed by G. or L., was then executed by them, In an action against A. on the first bond—Held, that he was not liable thereon. Township of Oxford v. Gair, 15 O. R. 302.

Joint Liability with Principal. —II., having been duly appointed collector by the trustees of a school section, signed the following contract at the foot of the instrument appointing him: "I agree, &c., to collect, &c., according to the said Act, and bind myself, by my surcties, in the sum of £250." Immediately under, S. and F., his sureties, signed the following: "We hereby agree to become security for the due fulfilment of the above contract."—Held, that the sureties were not jointly liable with their principal, but that the agreements were distinct. York School Trustees v. Hunter, 10 C. P. 359.

Misrepresentation—State of Accounts.]
—Effect of innocent misrepresentation as to state of accounts between principal and obligee before obligation entered into by surety. See Village of Gananoque v. Stunden, 1 O. R. I.

Mortgagee — Assignment—Covenant.]— On the transfer of a mortgage the mortgages covenanted that if default were made in payment of the mortgage money, he would pay the same:—Held, that this did not constitute him a surety within the meaning of s. 4 of the 32nd of the orders of 1853. Clarke v. Besi, 8 Gr. 7.

Mortgagor—Covenant—Sale of Equity— Liability of Assignce.]—Where a mortgagor who has covenanted for payment of the mortgage debt sells his equity of redemption subject to such mortgage, he becomes surety for the purchaser for the payment of such debt, and if the same is allowed to run into default he will be entitled to call upon his assignee to pay such debt. Campbell v. Robinson, 27 Gr. 634.

Notice—Condition Precede 4:.]—McC, and W., defendants, entered into a bond conditioned that one McK, should pay plaintiffs certain rent in equal monthly payments, with a provise "that the said municipality (plaintiffs) shall, on default being made by the said McK, in the payment of the said amount monthly, give notice thereof to the said obligors." Upon action brought, it appeared the payments were to be made on the last day of each month, beginning with the last of January, 1861. The first payment was made the 1st February, the next the 8th March, the third the 19th April, the fourth the 14th June, and some irregular amounts between that day and the 15th November were paid. The first notice given was on the 15th August, 1861, the second on the 28th September, and the last on the 28th December, 1861:—Held, that the provise for notice was to be considered as a condition precedent to the defendants' liability, and that notice not having been given within a reasonable time, they were relieved. Corporation of Chatham v. McCrea, 12 C. P. 352.

Promissory Note — Maker,]—Where a promissory note commencing "I promise to pay," and signed by two makers, was afterwards discounted by the plaintiff for the holder thereof, the money being paid to him on his agreeing to become responsible for the payment of the note, he signing his name under those of the makers:—Held, that the liability of the person so signing was that of surety, and that the validity of the note was not affected by the manner in which it was signed. Kinnard v. Teuseley, 27 O. R. 398.

See Fisken v. Mechan, 40 U. C. R. 146; Exchange Bank v. Springer, Exchange Bank v. Barnes, 29 Gr. 270; Lightbound v. Warnock, 4 O. R. 187; Birkett v. McChuire, 7 A. R. 53; Wickens v. McLiteckin, 15 O. R. 408,

2. Guarantees.

(a) Generally.

What Amounts to a Guarantee. — Acontracts with a company to make a highway, and B. becomes A.'s surety to them. A. then employs C, to cut out certain timber for him, and while C, is thus engaged A. fails in his contract with the company. B., the surety, tells C, to go on and he will see him paid. Upon completing his work C. sues A, and B. jointly:—Held, that there was no joint contract by A, and B, with C, but that A was primarily liable on his contract, and B, as a guarantor. Nicholas X, King, 5 U, C, R, 324.

"Sir,—Mr. J. informs me that you have a doubt respecting the validity of a mortgage from him to you for your claim for the sails and rigging. I am willing to become responsible to you that a good and valid mortgage shall be made to you in the course of this fall, provided you consent to the vessel being fitted for sea, or in default of your not receiving it, I will be responsible for the payment of your debt in twelve months: "—Held, (1) an actual guarantee, and not a mere proposal requiring acceptance to render it binding; (2) that offering a mortgage subject to two prior mortgages (which were given moreover after the guarantee), was not such a valid mortgage as the guarantee imported. Jenkins v. Ruttan, 8 U. C. R. 625.

W. made a note payable to plaintiff, but not negotiable, which defendants indorsed. It was proved to have been given for money lent to W. by the plaintiffs in defendants' presence, for which they agreed to become security; it was proved also that one of them had paid interest on it, and that both had promised to pay the note, when spoken to:—Held, that defendants could not be held liable as upon a note, nor as on an account stated. Quere, whether the plaintiffs could have recovered as upon a guarantee. Skilbeck v. Porter, 14 U. C. R. 430.

"I guarantee the payment of the within," indorsed on a note, over the signature of the payee, treated as an indorsement of the note, and not as a guarantee or collateral engagement for its payment. Walker v. O'Reilly, 7 L. J. 300.

Defendant indorsed notes for the accommodation of the maker, who was in business as a druggist, without knowing how they were to be applied, and the maker transferred them to the plaintiffs for goods purchased from them. Defendant not being liable upon them as notes, the sums payable being uncertain:—Held, that there was clearly no right of action against him as upon a guarantee. Fahnestock v. Palmer, 20 U. C. R. 307.

One H., requiring some proof spirits for his trade, received from defendant a letter to the plaintiff, distiller, to whom defendant was well known, but H. a stranger. There had been no previous application by H. to the plaintiff for a credit, nor had the latter declined dealing with him without a guarantee. The letter was as follows: "The bearer is Mr. H., a friend of mine, who wishes to purchase some proof spirits, which he hears that you work the proof of the proof o

The plaintiff had worked for W. in getting out certain timber, but had not been paid in full. Defendant afterwards employed the plaintiff to get the same timber to market, promising in addition to his ordinary wages to pay him the arrears due by W.:—Held, not an undertaking to answer for the debt of another, but a new and original promise made upon a distinct consideration of benefit to defendant. Tumblay v. Meyers, 16 U. C. R. 143.

H. signed a writing in the following words:

"Toronto, 16th December, 1858. Mr. Dixon
—Please let the bearer, B., have what goods he may require, and charge yours, M. Hutchinson:"—Held, not a guarantee for goods furnished to B. on the authority of it, but a direction to furnish the goods on defendant's credit as principal. Grasett v. Hutchinson, 10 C. P. 265.

S. by letter informed R. and K. that his son was a partner in a firm, and that he had advanced to him £3,000 as his share of the capital thereof. The firm having failed made an assignment, in which S. was preferred to the amount of £5,565, represented as made up of loans and advances to the firm. The actual capital advanced to the son appeared to be only £1,000;—Held, notwithstanding, that S. was bound to make good his representation to R. and K. so far as they alone were concerned; but that other creditors could not participate, the representation being only to a particular creditor; unless it should appear that a portion of the preferred claim of S. was continued to the son, in which event that portion would be applied on their claims, it not appearing that the goods furnished by them had been sold upon the faith of the representation to R. and K.; but semble, if that had been shown to have been the case, they would have had that right. Rainey v. Dickson, S Gr. 450.

The guarantee did not come within the description of a guarantee for the act of a third party. for the guarantors were selling under R. S. O. 1877 c, 121, by virtue of being holders of a warehouse receipt for the lumber. Dobelt v. Ontario Bank, 3 O. R. 299. See S. C., 9 A. R. 484.

The plaintiff agreed with M. to repair a boiler in the latter's sawmill. During the progress of the work he received the following letter from the defendant: "As Mr. Morden's sawmill at Bismarck is about to come into my hands right away, and as I am to assume the expense of repairs to the boiler, be zood enough to push forward the work to be done by you on the boiler as fast as possible; everything at present is at a standstill working on you. Please push on work and the subject of the property entered. Whiteleav v. Taylor, 45 U. C. R. 446.

See Sutherland v. Patterson, 4 O. R. 565.

(b) Consideration.

[By 26 Vict. c. 45, s. 1, (R. S. O. 1897 c. 146, s. 8,) the consideration for the promise need not appear in writing.]

Absence of.]—"I hereby guarantee to pay W. H., &c., $10 per month until the sum of $300 due by Messrs. B. & H., &c., shall be paid, &c. Signed, M. M." (the defendant): —Ifeld, void, for not expressing or implying any consideration. Palsgrave v. Murphy, 14 C. P. 153.

Delay — Misrepresentations — Evidence.] —On a ship under charter being loaded it was found that a sum of £173 was due the charterer for the difference between the actual freight and that in the charterparty, and, as agreed, a bill for the amount was drawn by the master on the agents of the ship, and, also, a bill of £753 for disbursements. These also, a bill of 1753 for disoursements. These bills not being paid at maturity, notice of dishonour was given to V., the managing owner, who sent his son to the solicitor who held the bills for collection to request that the matter should stand over until the ship arrived at St. John, where V. lived. This was acceded to, and V. signed an agreement in the form of a letter addressed to the solicitors, in which, after asking them to delay proceed-ings on the draft for £753, he guaranteed, on the vessel's arrival or in case of her loss, payment of the said draft and charges and also payment of the draft for £173 and charges, On the vessel's arrival, however, he refused to pay the smaller draft, and to an action on his said guarantee he pleaded payment and on his said guarantee he pleaded payment and that he was induced to sign the same by fraud. By order of a Judge the pleas of pay-ment were struck out. On the trial, the son of V., who had interviewed the solicitors, swore that they told him that both bills were for disbursements, but it did not clearly appear that he repeated this to his father. V. himself contradicted his son and stated that pear that he repeated this to his lather. V. himself contradicted his son and stated that he knew that the smaller bill was for difference in freight, and there was other evidence to the same effect. His counsel sought to get rid of the effect of V.'s evidence by shewing that from age and infirmity he was incapable of remembering the circumstances, but a verdict was given against him:—Held, that the defence of misrepresentation set up was not available to V. under the plea of fraud, and, therefore, was not pleaded; that if available without plea it was not proved; that nothing could be gained by ordering another trial, as, V. having died, his evidence would have to be read to the jury, who, in view of his statement that he knew the bill was not for disbursements, could not do otherwise than find a verdict against him. Held, further, that the delay asked for by V. was sufficient consideration to make him liable on his guarantee, even assuming that he would on his guarantee, even assuming that he would not have been originally liable as owner of the ship. Vaughan v. Richardson, 21 S. C. R. 359.

Forbearance to Detain Goods.]—C. had contracted with defendants to carry their lumber from Collingwood to Chicago, and had chartered the plaintiffs vessel for that purpost. C., being indebted to the plaintiff, gave him two orders on defendants amounting to 211 108. 6d. Defendants did not accept the orders formally when presented, but retained them and gave the plaintiff as written authority to draw on them at ten days on the return of the vessel to Collingwood. The plaintiff are accordingly, but defendants then told him that C. had been overpaid by them, and they refused to accept. It was shewn that the plaintiff had threatened to detain the lumber on its arrival at Chicago if his claim was not paid, and was told by defendants that it would be satisfied out of the moneys coming to C. on the return of the vessel: "Held, that the plaintiff was entitled to recover from defendants. For that the evidence sufficiently shewed a discharge of C. by the plaintiff, or a giving time to him until ten days after the return of the schooner, either of which would form a good consideration for defendants' promise. Quere, whether plaintiff's forbearing to detain defendants' lumber as he had threatened would have been a sufficient consideration, it being unknown to the parties whether the law at Chicago would allow him such right, though our law clearly would not. Moberley v. Baines, 15 U. C. R. 25.

Future Rent—Letting of Premises.]—A. leased from B. certain premises, covenanting to pay certain rents. On the back of the lease was the following memorandum signed by C.: "I do guarantee that the within rents shall be paid by me, as they become due, according to the lease, in case or in event that the within named A. does not pay them." This was signed before the delivery of the lease, and as a part of the same transaction:—Held, that the lease and the indorsement might be looked at together to find the consideration, and that the letting of the premises was a sufficient one. Merrick v. L'Esperance, 10 C. P. 259.

— Oral Promise.] — The plaintiff declared on an oral promise to pay two quarters' rent due on certain premises which had been leased by the plaintiff to one G., the consideration being that the plaintiff would forbear to distrain. It appeared that when the promise was made only one quarter's rent was due:—Held, that the promise, being void as to the second quarter's rent, by the statute, was void altogether. Halt v. Denholm, 11 U. C. R. 354.

Giving Time — Pleading.] — Defendant gas plaintiff the following. — I hereby become responsible to you for the payment of 1220, on the 1st day of April next, in case C. fails in paying you that sum. — In declaring on this the plaintiff alloged the consideration of the garantee, and that, in consideration of the garantee, and that, in consideration of his giving time till the 1st April, defendant pleaded non assumusit:—Held, that the plaintiff must be nonsuited, for the consideration stated was not supported by the instrument produced, and the plea put in issue the consideration as well as the promise. Evans v. Robinson, 16 U. C. R. 139.

Promissory Note.]—The defendant, after a note payable to the plainiff had become due and while it remained unpaid, indersed upon it the following words: "I guarantee the payment of the within note to Messrs, T. D. & Co. (the plaintiffs), on demand." The evidence shewed that the consideration for this guarantee was the giving of time to one C., for whose debt to the plaintiff the note was given as collateral security:—Held, that the evidence that the giving of time to C. was the consideration for the guarantee did not contradict the latter, though it was expressed to be "on demand." for these words referred to a demand upon the guarantee of the consideration for the plaintiff of the consideration for the guarantee of the consideration for the guarantee of the consideration of the guarantee of the consideration of the consideration. Davies y, Funston, 45 U. C. R. 309.

Implication of Past Consideration.]—"Sir, Mr. J. informs me that you have a doubt respecting the validity of a mortgage from him to you for your claim for the sails and rigging; I am willing to become responsible to you that a good and valid mortgage shall be made to you in the course of this fall, provided you consent to the vessel being fitted for sen, or in default of your not receiving it, I will be responsible for the payment of your debt in twelve months:"—Held, that this did not import a past consideration. Jenkins v. Ruttan, 8 U. C. R. 625.

a I do hereby promise to guarantee the payment of any sum to S. that the arbitrators chosen by himsel and & & Co., and a fifth state of the property of the pr

A guarantee indorsed on a note, "We guarantee the payment of the within note," does not shew a sufficient consideration. Lock v. Roid, G O. S. 295.

Joint Contract.]—Where, in consideration of the sale of a vessel to A. B. Joined with him in an agreement to deliver lumber:
—Held, a joint contract, although B. was only surety, and that the consideration, therefore, need not appear in the agreement. Thompson v, Cummungs, M. T. 4 Vict.

Sufficiency of Statement of-Executed Consideration. |- The declaration stated that by agreement between the plaintiff and J. and two of the defendants, the plaintiff was entitled, on delivering to them certain goods, to a conveyance in fee, free from incumbrances, of two lots mentioned, then subject to a mort gage to one S.; and, in consideration that the plaintiff would accept a conveyance and deliver up the goods, defendants in writing prom ised to pay the plaintiffs $500 in six weeks, if in the meantime the lots should not be leased from the mortgage. Averment, that the conveyance was so accepted and the goods delivered; that the mortgage had not been discharged; and that the defendant's had not paid the $500. The first agreement under seal, dated 1st June, 1865, set out the sale of the goods by the plaintiff to the defendants J. and H., for which they agreed to pay $1,400, $200 on receiving possession, $500 by a conveyance in fee of the lots, to be taker as cash for that sum, and the remaining $700 by instalments as stated in the agreement. The second, dated 10th June, was as follows: "Six weeks after date, we, or either of us, promise to pay to Thomas Gibbs Greenham $500, value received, if in the meantime park lots 7 and 8 in the Garvan survey be not released from the subsisting mortgage thereon to A. S. deceased." Signed by all the defendants :- Held, assuming the promise sued upon to be within the Statute of Frauds, either as a contract by the third defendant to in-demnify against the default of the others, or as respecting an interest in lands-that the two agreements (the connection between which was established by their contents), construed with the surrounding circumstances to be gathered therefrom, together with the averments in the declaration, sufficiently shewed promise. the consideration for defendants' promise. Semble, however, that there need have been no writing to bind the third defendant, for 5693

the consideration was executed by the plaintiff delivering the goods without getting a conveyance free from incumbrances. Held, also, that under the first agreement the defendants were not entitled to possession of the goods until payment of the $200 and execution of the conveyance. Greenham v. Watt, 25 U. C. R. 363.

— Paral Evidence to Supplement.]—
Upon an action brought on a guarantee for the payment of two notes given in payment for land, the following guarantee was given in evidence: "I hereby guarantee to T. P., or bearer, the collection of two notes hereunto attached; said notes are dated as follows (setting them out); I hereby agree to pay all costs that may occur in the collection, and the said T. P., or bearer, agrees, if the said notes cannot be collected from A. H. B., the maker of said notes, by the said J. B. paying the notes and costs, to transfer the judgment to him, or, if the said J. B. considers best, may replace the said notes by other notes, subject to approval:"—Held, not to contain a sufficient consideration on its face, and, parol evidence not being admissible to prove the consideration, that it was void. Perrin v. Bungham, 12 C. P. 306.

Undertaking — Performance of .]—There were three executions in the sheriff's hands against one W., in two of which the plaintiffs were attorneys for the execution reditors, and the defendant was attorney for one H., who had the other execution. A sale had been advertised for the Schi Januar has reliable to the advertised for the Schi Januar has reliable to the execution. A sale had been advertised for the Schi Januar has reliable to the execution of the plaintiff's to pay off the principal, interest, and costs with sheriff's fees, in suits naming the two suits in which plaintiff's were attorneys), in consideration of their agreeing to post-pone the sale advertised of defendant's goods for one week." C. and the defendant then went to the sheriff's office, and instructed the person in charge to post-pone the sale, and the bailiff left with the defendant to go out to the place and post-pone it, for which the defendant was to pay the expenses. When the bailiff got there the sale had been going on an hour, but it was stopped, and the goods sold were got back except to the amount of $45, which was paid to defendant. The plaintiff's thereupon sued the defendant on his guarantee:—Held, that they were entitled to recover the amount unpaid in their two suits; for they had performed their agreement, and defendant had got what he had bargained for; and the plaintiff's were the proper parties to sue. Guthrie v. O'Connert State of the sale and the plaintiff's were the proper parties to sue.

(c) Construction.

Generally, |—A guarantee should be construed as all other contracts, not strictly as against either side, but by collecting the real intention of the parties from the instrument and the surrounding circumstances, taking the words in their ordinary sense, unless by the known usage of trade they have acquired a peculiar meaning. Kastner v. Winstanley, 20 C. P. 101.

Condition of Liability.]—A lumberman had a lien on lumber for freight, and C. wrote saying, "I wish you would advise your agents in Quebec to deliver to Coumbe the sawn stuff on your rafts. I am to pay the river freight, and will thank you to take Coumbe's draft on me at thirty days for river freight, which I will pay;"—Held, that this letter would not render C. liable to pay the freight until the lumberman had obtained Coumbe's draft for the amount thereof. Re Coumbe, 2d Gr. 519.

Declaration on the following guarantee:—
"Please credit A. £100, and I agree to hold myself responsible for the payment of the same"—averring that the plaintiff did credit
A.:—Held, that the plaintiff must prove such averment; and that calling a clerk, who stated that such credit had been given, because he saw it entered in the plaintiff's books, which were not produced, and which entry had not been made by him, was not sufficient. Semble, that such guarantee might refer to an existing account, or to future credit, and that on the evidence it was properly found to apply to the former. Parker v, Dutcher, 2 O. S. 106.

The chief object of an agreement between A. and B. was the profitable manufacture and sale of wares under a patent of invention issued to A.; and, in consideration of advances by B. to an amount not exceeding $6,000. C. by a letter of guarantee "agreed to become a surety to B. for the repayment of the $6,000 within twelve months from the date of the agreement if it should transpire that, for the reasons incorporated in said agreement, it should not be carried out." In an action brought by B. against C. for $6,000 it was proved at the trial that the manufacturing scheme broke down through defects of the invention:—Held, that C. was liable for the amount guaranteed by his letter. Angus v. Union Gas and Oil Stove Co., 24 S. C. R. 104.

T. wrote a letter agreeing to guarantee payment for goods consigned on del credere commission to R. on condition that he should be allowed, should occasion arise, to take over the goods consigned. Shortly afterwards the creditor, without giving any notice to T., closed the agency, withdrew some of the goods, and permitted others to be seized in execution and removed beyond the reach of T. The creditor did not give T. any authority to take possession of the goods as stipulated in the letter of guarantee. In an action by the creditor, to recover the amount of the guarantee:—Held, that the condition of the guarantee is—Held, that the condition of the guarantee rand that he could not hold the guarantor responsible. Brown v. Torrance, 30 S. C. R. 311.

See Hathaway v. Chaplin, 21 S. C. R. 23.

Continuing Security.]—Where defendant agreed to lend the plaintiff £2,000, to be advanced as it might be required, and received from plaintiff a conveyance of land to secure the advances, and gave back a bond reciting the agreement, and binding himself to reconvey the lands on repayment of the sum advanced, on a certain day, and defendant before that day made further advances to £10,000, and received timber, &c, on account to £7,000:—Held, that the bond was a continuing security, and that defendant was not obliged to reconvey on payment of the £2,000 first advanced. Wells v. Ritchie, 6 O. S. 13.

The plaintiff sued defendant on the following guarantee: "I hereby hold myself accountable to you for any goods Mr. F. M.

may purchase of you to the amount of £250 cy.:"—Held, a continuing guarantee. Ross v. Burton, 4 U. C. R. 357.

"Messrs, A, & D. Shaw: Gentlemen,—I have just received a line from F, informing me that he wishes to purchase goods from you. Being acquainted with his circumstances, and knowing him to be a man of prudence and integrity, I do not hesitate to be responsible to you for £150 or £200 worth of goods should he require that amount:"—Held, not a continuing guarantee. Shaw v. Vandusen, 5 U. C. R. 353.

Defendant and another addressed to plaintiff this note: "In consideration of your supplying to M. supplies of, &c. out of your store for his business, we agree to become responsible for the payment of $200 for such goods, and guarantee the payment of that amount, whether the same be due on note or book account, to you for said hardware, iron, &c.;"—Held, a continuing guarantee. Fennell v. McGuire, 21 C. P. 134.

S. by letter informed R. and K. that his son was a partner in a firm, and that he had advanced him £3,000 as his share of the capital thereof. The firm, having failed, made an assignment in which S. was preferred to the amount of £3,505, represented as made up of loans and advances to the firm. The actual capital advanced to the son appeared to be only £1,000:—Held, novivihistanding, that S. was bound to R. and K. by his representation, and that such statement of S. operated as a continuing guarantee to them. Rainey v. Dickson, S. Gr. 450.

On 11th June, 1877, defendant wrote to the plaintiff that J. S., the person he wished to assist, "informs me now that I could help him by pledging myself to you that you might give him a letter of credit in Montreal, and I now say, if you will assist him in that way to $7,000 or $8,000, that I will become responsible to you for the like amount in any manner you may wish, &c." J. S. then applied to the plaintiff, who gave a continuing guarantee in his favour to some Montreal merchants, dated 28th August, for goods to the extent of $5,000, for three years. At the same time the following note signed by the defendant in blank was filled up by J. S.; "Three years after date I promise to pay to the order of J. S. $5,000, &c." "Value received." To which was added: "This note is given as collateral security for a guarantee of $5,000 given to J. S. by A. S.," the plaintiff. No notice was ever given to defendant of the plaintiff squarantee, or of the form in which the note was filled in. In an action on the defendant's letter as a continuing guarantee, and on the note:—Held, per Wilson, C. J., that the letter was a guarantee be not continuing one, and there could be no recovery under it, as the evidence shewed that the amount of $5,000 secured thereby had been paid. Per Galt, J., agreeing with the judgment at the trial, that it was not a guarantee; it was not a continuing one. Sutherland v. Patterson, 4 O. R. 505

The plaintiff's testator gave a guarantee in the following form: "In consideration of the goods sold by you on credit to M., and of any further goods which you may sell to M. upon credit during the next twelve months from date, I hereby undertake to guarantee you against all loss in respect of such goods so sold or to be sold; provided I shall not be called on in any event to pay a greater amount than $2,500." M, made an assignment for the benefit of his creditors, being then indebted to the guaranteed creditors in the sum of $5,556.23. They filled their claim therefor with the assignee, and afterwards received from the plaintiff the full amount covered by the testator's guarantee. The plaintiff contended that he was entitled to rank upon the estate for so much of the debt as had been thus paid by him:—Held, that the guarantee was one of the whole eebt incurred, or to be incurred, with a limitation of the liability to $2,500, and, therefore, that the plaintiff was not subrogated to the rights of the secured creditors or entitled to receive the dividends in respect of that part of the debt which he had paid off under the guarantee. Extent of Linbility.]—"Messrs. A. & D. Shaw: Gentlemen,—I have just received a line from F. informing me that he wishes to purchase goods from you. Being acquainted with his circumstances, and knowing him to be a man of prudence and integrity, I do not hesitate to be responsible to you for £150 or £200 worth of goods, should be require that amount:"—Held, not applicable to the purchase of goods by F. and a partner, but by F. alone. Shaw v. Vandusen, 5 U. C. R. 353.

"Whereas H. H. & Co. of Albany, have authorized S. and J. of Houghton, Cunda (S. 1900); and whereas the said S. and J. promise and agree to ship to the said H. H. & Co. a sufficient quantity of lumber, in the months of May, June, July, and August next, to pay the same. Now, therefore, in consideration of $1 to me in hand paid, I hereby guarantee to Messrs. H. H. & Co. that the lumber shall go forward agreeably to contract, and in default of the same I will be responsible to them to the amount of the advances, the same not exceeding $5,000:"—Held, that defendant was not entitled to credit as against his guarantee for the gross value of the lumber shall be statement of the consideration, as to the statement of the consideration, was sufficiently supported by the proof. Highy v. Cummings, 10 U. C. R. 222.

In April, 1850, R. became security to the plaintiffs for S, to the extent of £100, and S, thereupon received goods from them to the amount of £151. In April S, desired to make a further purchase. R. wrote to the plaintiffs becoming security to the extent of £75, and in his letter he said, "I understand from S, that he has paid you £75 on account of the £100," The plaintiffs sent no answer, but supplied the goods required. The £75 had been paid by S, and in his letter enclosing it he said, "I send you £75 on account of goods bought by me, being one-half of the whole:"—Held, that R, was entitled to have the whole of this payment credited against the £151 secured by his first guarantee, and that the plaintiffs could not appropriate it to any part of the debt of S. for which R. was not liable. Lyman v. Miller, 12 U. C. R. 215.

A. agrees to become surety to B. for all such advances as B. may make to C. during a limited period. B. makes no individual advances to C. at all, but during the period B. with D., a stranger to A. make advances to C.:—Held, that B. cannot recover from A. such advances. Stevenson v. McLean, 11 C. P. 208.

One S. had contracted to build a house for defendant, and had employed the plaintiff, under an agreement, to do a portion of the work. The plaintiff complained that S. did not pay him as he had undertaken to do, and was unwilling to proceed, and, after some negotiation, the following paper was signed: "Stratford 21st of May, 1858.—$198.—Good to P. A. Loftus (the plaintiff) or bearer, for $198, payable so soon as Loftus completes and finishes his contract at U. C. Lee's dwelling house in Stratford. Alex, Seringour." This was indorsed by defendant Lee, and at the foot was written as follows:—"£56. A further sum of fifty-six pounds will be due to Loftus, being balance of contract, three months after said contract is completed and accepted by the architect. This sum I secure to Loftus for account of Scrimgour. U. C. Lee. A. Scrimgour." The work had been completed and certified; it was proved that before the writing was signed defendant had told the plaintiff that if he would wait he would be answerable for the whole amount due him, and defendant had paid the plaintiff $115, for which a receipt was indorsed on the paper. The first count of the declaration alleged that, in consideration that the plaintiff, at defendant's request, would proceed with the work, defendant promised to pay him the £56 the other counts were for work and materials, and on account stated:—Held, that the plaintiff was entitled to recover the £56, but not the balance of the $198. Loftus v. Lee, 18 U. C. R. 195.

One T. contracted with two firms in Quebec, N. & Co. and M. & Co., for advances, to be covered by shipments of timber within a specified period, agreeing to furnish defendant's guarantee for performance of his part of the contract. Defendant in a letter to M., a partner in one of the firms, guaranteed that T. would furnish timber in the year 1850, equal in value to the advances made by him, M., to said T.:—Held. (1) that in an action by M. alone he could only recover the amount of his own advances to T. (2) That M. must, as far as defendant was concerned, give credit for all lumber received by him from T. Stevenson v. McLean, 10 C. P. 414.

Defendants on the 20th April, 1867, guaranteed in writing the payment to the plaintiff, a nursery gardener, of his account against H. for nursery products to be delivered to H. that spring, said payment to be made to the plaintiff by H. or the defendants within twenty days after receipt of the trees by H. On the 4th February preceding, an agreement under seal had been executed between the plaintiff and H., that the plaintiff should deliver trees at railway stations, at the prices mentioned, in such quantities as H. might sell, for which H. agreed to pay one-half ten days after delivery of the trees, and to give his note indorsed for the balance, payable in six or eight months from delivery, or the notes of the purchasers. In an action on the guarantee it appeared that the balance due by H. in all, for deliveries after the guarantee, was $440.22. of which $60 was due on the cash part of the transaction, and only this part had been entered by the plaintiff in his day book; for the rest he held purchasers' notes:

—Held, that the guarantee clearly could apply only to the $60. Leslie v. Long, 27 U. C. R. 482.

Defendant's son, living at St. Catharines, applied to the plaintiffs, merchants in Hamilton, to supply him with goods, and on the 12th Aprilt the plaintiffs, merchants and on the 12th Aprilt the plaintiffs, merchants they would get the indorsation in the state of the could get the indorsation of the father. On the 13th the son wrote to them to send the goods; and that he would get his father's indorsation if required. On the 17th the plaintiffs wrote proposing, in view of future business, and to save the trouble of getting an indorsement with each transaction, that the father should give a continuous guarantee. This son on the 19th wrote that he would get this, and urged them to send the goods at once, which they did on the same day, with a form of guarantee for the father to sign. On the 21st the son wrote to his father, who lived at Woodstock, '11 am buying some goods' from the plaintiffs, and enclosing the guarantee for his signature. The father, not liking this form, wrote another, as follows:—'Woodstock, 20th April, 1875. Gentlemen,—In consideration of your supplying my son with what goods he may from time to time require of you this season, on your usual terms of credit, I do hereby guarantee the payment of the same.'' The defendant, as the court inferred from the evidence, was not aware when he signed this that his son had already obtained any goods from the plaintiffs. After the guarantee applied only to the goods purchased after it, not to those previously furnished. Wood v. Chambers, 40 U. C. R. 1.

One M., requiring machinery for a cheese factory, gave the plaintills, who manufactured such machinery, an order for it in March, to be shipped to him on the 1st May, at the price of $1,100. The plaintilfs required security before filling the order, and the defendant wrote to them on the 25th March, 1875: "I recommended M. to you, and if he should fail in his promise to you for anything in your way. I consider myself jointly liable for the amount of $200, payable in six months, to your firm." The balance was secured by the guarantees of other persons. The machinery was shipped to M., the last shipment being made on the 5th May, and M., gave his note payable in six months from that day,—six months' credit being the plaintiffs' usual course of dealing. Defendant contended that the guarantee limited the period during which defendant should be liable to six months from its date, and that, a further time having been given, he was discharged; and ag the trial the Judge ruled that it was a continuing guarantee for any goods to the extent of $200, but that defendant was not liable until the expiration of six months after M.'s default, so that this action brought on the 9th December was premature:—Held, taking the guarantee in connection with the surrounding circumstances, that it must be referred to the specific order which M. had given, and of which defendant must be supposed to have been aware; and that defendant's liability arose immediately on M.'s default at the expiration of the six months' credit. Boyle v. Bradley, 26 C. P. 373.

The defendant, in order to enable one G. to carry out a contemplated settlement with the plaintiffs (creditors of G.), signed a memorandum guaranteeing the payment by G. of first two of three promissory notes of $751 each, "to the extent of $751." When the first note to mature fell due G. was unable to meet it, and the defendant, without the knowledge it, and the defendant, without the knowledge of the plaintiffs or their agents, enabled 6, to raise a part of the amount required to retire that note, which amount G, so applied; and this sum the defendant subsequently was compelled to pay:—Held, affirming the judgment of the court below, 46 U. C. R. 365, no answer to a claim afterwards made upon the defendant to pay the second note on G.'s failing to do so, the advance which had been so made by the defendant to G, forming no part of the sum the defendant was liable for under his guarantee. Crathern v. Bell, 8 A.

A., a wholesale merchant, had been supplying goods to C. & Co., when, becoming doub ful as to their credit, he insisted on their account being reduced to $5,000 and security account being reduced to solved and security for further credit. W., who had indorsed to secure a part of the existing debt, thereupon gave A. a guarantee in the form of a letter, as follows:—"I understand that you are pre-pared to furnish C. & Co. with stock to the extent of $5,000 as a current account, but want a guarantee for any amount beyond that sum. In order not to impede their operations I have consented to become responsible to you for any loss you may sustain in any amount upon your current account in excess of the said sum of five thousand, but the total amount not to exceed eight thousand dollars including your own credit of five thousand, unless sanctioned by a further guarantee." . A. then continued to supply C. & Co. with goods, and in an action by him on this guarantee:—Held, that there by him on this guarantee:—Held, that there could be no liability on this guarantee unless the indebtedness of C. & Co. to A. should exceed the sum of $5,000, and at the time of action brought such indebtedness, having been reduced by payments from C. & Co. and dividends from their insolvent estate to less than such sum, A. had no cause of action. Alexander v. Watson, 23 S. C. R. 670.

A guarantee in the following words, "I hereby become responsible to II. M, for payment for goods sold to F. E. for feed store situate . . up to 8400," was given at a time when the debt due by F. E. to H. M. was $280.85:—Held, that the guarantee covered the amount then due and an additional indebtedness up to 8400. Chalmers v. Victors, IS L. T. N. S. 481, followed. Moyle v. Edmunds, 24 O. R. 479.

The defendant gave to the plaintiff a guarantee that, in consideration of his indorsement for one F, of certain promissory notes for a large sum given by him for the purchase of a bankrupt stock, the defendant would guarnotes at maturity, provided he was not called upon to pay in all more than $2,000:—Held, that the effect of the guarantee was that it continued in force, to the full extent of $2,000, until the last of the notes was paid, and that the defendant could not before such event relieve himself from liability by transmitting to the plaintiff $2,000 which he had received from F., being the proceeds of a portion of the stock. Struthers v. Henry, 32 O. R. 365.

(d) Operation of Statute of Frauds.

Consideration.]—A guarantee indorsed on a note at the time of its execution in the following words, "We guarantee the payment of the within note," does not shew a sufficient consideration for the promise, the sancemi consideration for the promise, the case being within the Statute of Frauds. Lock v. Reid, 6 O. S. 295.
See Walker v. O'Reilly, 7 L. J. 300; Macklia v. Kerr, 27 C. P. 47, 28 C. P. 90.
See ante (b).

Naming Person to whom Given.]-An undertaking as surety must, to comply with the Statute of Frauds, name the person to whom it is given. Where a guarantee did not sufficiently comply with the Statute of Frauds, but the transaction related to an interest in lands for one year, and the principal had gone into possession under the contract and retained possession :- Held, that the contract was binding on both principal and surely, on the ground of part performance. In such a case some of the sureties, some weeks after possession was taken, refused to sign a formal lease. No proceedings were sign a formal lease. No proceedings were taken to enforce their undertaking until the year had expired, and the principal had given up possession, a defaulter in respect of his rent:—Held, that the delay was no bar to the suit. County of Huron v. Kerr, 15 Gr. 265.

The defendant, owing the plaintiff, deliver-ed to him a note for $100, made by one John McGee, payable to defendant or bearer, on the back of which defendant signed the follow-ing guarantee: "In consideration of the sum ing guarantee: "In consideration of the sum of one hundred dollars, I guarantee the payment of the within note:"—Held, that the guarantee was sufficient within s. 4 of the Statute of Frauds; for, although no promise was named in it, yet the reference in the guarantee to "the within note" made it a promise enuring to the benefit of the bearer, whoever he might be. Semble, that the guarantee created an absolute promise to pay in a summary and that defendant was not entitled. all events, and that defendant was not entitled to notice of dishonour; but there was no plea raising this question. Quære, whether defendant could be treated as a joint maker. Palmer v. Baker, 23 C. P. 302.

In an action for the price of goods supplied by the plaintiffs to C. A. E., it was proved by the plaintiffs to C. A. E., it was proved that the plaintiffs received in an envelope, addressed to their firm, the following letter, signed by the defendant. "Lake Superior, Ont., July 4th, 1883. Gentlemen.—I beg to inform you that I have assumed all liabilities of the S. P. Co. lately carried on by Mr. C. or the S. P. Co. lately carried on by Mr. A. E., and am responsible to the amount contracted by him up to July 24th, 1882. Kindly ship cases immediately." The envelope was lost, but its receipt and the address on it were proved:—Held, a sufficient agreement in writing to satisfy the statute, for the address on the envelope, referring to the "gentle-men" within, shewed that the plaintiffs were gentlethe persons guaranteed. Richard v. Stillwell, Writing—Absence of, 1—A. being indebted to B., and C. to A., a promise by C. that he will pay B. the debt due to him by A. in consideration that B. will discharge A., is not within the statute. Kissock v. Woodward, 1 U. C. R. 344.

Where the plaintiff had been employed by A. in getting out timber, which A. afterwards sold to the defendant, who agreed orally with the plaintiff and others who had been working with him, the timber being in their possession, that he would pay the wages of the plaintiff and the others, if they would assist in rafting the timber to Quebec, out of the proceeds of its sale there:—Held, that, on shewing the sale there, the plaintiff was entitled to recover for his wages as money had and received; and that the case was not within the Statute of Frauds. McDonell v. Cook, 1 U. C. R. 542.

Where defendant agreed that, if the plaintiff would give up his claim against A. B. for £46, he would pay him £55 out of the proceeds of a certain raft when it should arrive at Quebec:—Held, that the plaintiff could sue the defendant on such agreement upon the common counts, without an agreement in writing. McDonald v. Glass, S U. C. R. 245.

B. and another had executed a mortgage to the plaintiffs, by which the principal money became due on default in the interest, and the plaintiffs also held the mortgagors' note indorsed to them by the payee. The mortgagors assigned all their estate and effects, including the mortgaged property, to defendant, in trust for creditors, and he, in consideration that the principal money which had become due on the principal money which had become due on the ne could pay it, orally the interest when he could pay it, orally the new conserved of the delt of another, and that the plaintiffs therefore could not recover. Lee v. Mitchell, 23 U. C. R. 314.

Held, that there was no evidence of original liability on the part of defendant for the price of the goods in question; and that his promise to pay, not being in writing, was therefore void under the Statute of Frauds. Merner v. Klein, 17 C. P. 287.

A being indebted to the plaintiff in $1,100 for timber furnished to him, and used in a vessel which he had contracted to build for the defendant, the plaintiff refused to furnish any more, and the defendant then said to him, that if he, the plaintiff, would furnish what further timber was required to finish the vessel, he (defendant) would pay the plaintiff for it, on the plaintiff getting an order from A: and that if the plaintiff got an order from A: and that if the plaintiff got an order from A: and that if the plaintiff got an order from Fauls, not being in writing; and that it must be regarded as a mere naked undertaking to pay A's debt, not as made in consideration of the plaintiff furnishing A, with the timber. Rounds v. May, 35 U. C. R. 337.

A guarantee that a promissory note made by another will be paid at maturity is within s. 4 of the statute, and therefore invalid unless in writing. Wambold v. Foote, 2 A. R. 579.

One A. had contracted to build certain houses for defendant, and the plaintiff agreed with A. to do the brickwork, but, having some doubt as to A's ability to pay, the blaintiff hesitated to go on. The defendant told the plaintiff that he would see him paid, whereupon the plaintiff that he would see him paid, whereupon the plaintiff proceeded and finished the work:—Held, that defendant's promise was within the statute, and being oral only the plaintiff could not recover, for A.'s liability to the plaintiff could not recover, for A.'s liability and the plaintiff continued, and defendant's only liability arose from this promise, Bond v. Treachey, 37 U. C. R. 300.

A. contracted to build houses for defendant, and sublet the plastering to the plaintiff. The plaintiff commenced the work, but refused to go on without security, whereupon A. gave him a written order to the architects to give him certificates for the plastering as the work proceeded. After this the plaintiff got money from time to time from the architects without reference to A. A. failed, and the plaintiff stopped work for some weeks, when the defendant told him to go on, saying he, the plaintiff, knew all was right; and he thereupon went on and completed the work:

—Held, that there was no substitution of the plaintiff for A., but that A.'s liability continued; and that defendant's promise being collateral, and oral, was void, under the Statute of Frauds. Poucher v. Treahey, 37 U. C. R. 367.

Where a contractor for the building of a house made default in carrying on the work, and, in consequence, the owner, acting under a clause in the contract to that effect, dismissed him, and agreed orally with a sub-contractor, who had been employed by the conount of the contractor, that if the sub-contractor would go on and finish the work he, the owner, would pay him:—Held, that the agreement with the sub-contractor was a new and independent contract, and was not a contract to answer for the debt, default, or miscarriage of another within s. 4 of the Statute of Frands, and was therefore valid and binding on the owner, although not in writing. Bond v. Trenshey, 37 U. C. R. 369, distinguished. Petrie v. Hunter, Guest v. Hunter, 2 O. R. 233.

A collateral oral promise to pay the debt of another, who still remains liable, although founded on a good consideration, is not binding. Therefore, where defendant had bought the stock of one A., who was indebted to the plaintiff to continue with the defendant, the defendant promised to see that he was paid, and the plaintiff did accordingly work for the defendant.—Held, that the Statute of Frauds was a bar to the action. James v. Ballour, 7 A. R. 461.

A. M. was carrying on business as a brewer, when, owing to financial difficulties, he left, and S. M., his brother, a large creditor, took charge thereof. The plaintiff claimed that at this time there was a large sum due him for wages under a special agreement made with A. M.; and that S. M. agreed, if he would remain, to pay him the past wages then due him, and like wages for the future:—Held, that the agreement by S. M. to pay such past wages being merely a collateral promise, A. M. remaining liable, and not being in writing, could not be enforced. Held, also, that, on the evidence as to the amount of wages, each party swearing to a different agreement, and the other evidence being contradictory, the fair inference was that the parties' minds were never ad idem, and the recovery would only be on the quantum meruit. Hoener v. Merner, 7 O. R. 629.

A promise made by a third person to a creditor to pay or to see paid the debt due to him by his debtor, whether such promise is absolute or conditional, is a promise to answer for the debt of another, and is within a 4 of the Statute of Frauds. The plaintiff was the holder of a promissory note of an incorporated company of which the defendant was president, and was pressing for payment when the defendant orally promised to see him paid if he would forhear to sue and would renew:—Held, that this was not a promise of indemnity, but of guarantee, and therefore required by s. 4 of the Statute of Frauds to be in writing. Guild & Co. v. Courad, [1844] 2 Q. B. 885, distinguished, Beattie v. Dinnick, 27 O. R. 285.

— Sufficiency of.]—" Please credit A. f100, and I agree to hold myself responsible for the payment of the same!"—Quere, is this undertaking within the Statute of Frauds? Parker v. Dutcher, 2 O. S. 106.

A., deceased, was indebted to B., who had taken certain securities for the debt. C. on receiving these securities, gave B. the following agreement: This is to certify that I. C. do agree to settle all accounts against the estate of A., deceased, hereinafter mentioned; that is, an unsettled account between B. and A., and one note of hand held by D. against the said A., and one note held by E. against B.:—Held, not within the statute. Gerow v. Clark, 9 U. C. R. 219.

Plaintiff had worked for M. & D. at their mill, and they owing him for wages, the plaintiff's father proposed to let them have a siding machine to put up in the mill, and that the plaintiff should work it until he had sawed enough to pay the arrears due to him and his wages while so engaged, and the price of the machine, they finding the power and timber. Defendant, who was then about to purchase the mill from M. & D., agreed to this proposition, and he afterwards completed the purchase. The machine was put up and worked by the plaintiff, and defendant afterwards promised to pay him his wages while so employed:—Held, that by the arrangement defendant had assumed the arrears due to defendant had assumed the arrears due to defendant his letters, set out in the report of this case, sufficiently shewed a contract in writing. Clark v. Wadell, 16 U. C. R. 352.

F, being indebted to the plaintiffs, who were pressing him for payment, the defendant signed the following document and delivered it to the plaintifs in consideration of their giving time to F: "I will guarantee that the security offered by Mr. John Fleming for the balance of your account will be executed and forwarded within ten days." The security referred to was a mortgage upon real estate to be executed, and a paid-up life policy of $5,000, which F. had agreed orally to give the plaintiffs, neither of which existed at the time of F.'s agreement, or the defendant's guarantee. F. never gave the security, and the plaintiffs, by the defendant was not sufficient to satisfy s. 4 of the Statute of Frauds, whether regarded as an original promise or guarantee. Lightbound v. Warnock, 4 O. R. 187.

As a written memorandum of an oral guarantee is required only for the purpose of evidence, a letter or other writing subsequently given by the guarantor, sufficiently shewing the terms of his undertaking, will suffice. A letter shewing the terms, written by the guarantor partly on his own behalf and partly on behalf of a firm of debtors, and signed by him in the firm name and in his own name for them per proc., is sufficient to bind him. Thomson v, Eede, 22 A. R. 105.

The plaintiffs, being creditors of an incorporated company, accepted an offer made by the company's president, in a letter addressed to the plaintiffs to "personally guarantee payment" of the company's debt, upon an extension of time being given, and, in order to carry out the arrangement, promissory notes were consistent of the order of the plaintiffs, and independ by the order of the plaintiffs, and independ by the pending of the plaintiffs, and independ by the order of the plaintiffs, and independ by the pending of the plaintiffs, and independ by the order of the potential of the plaintiffs, and independ to the plaintiffs of the plaintiffs sought to rank upon his estate in the hands of the defendant as assignee:—Held, following Jenkins v. Coomber, [1898] 2 Q. B. 198, that, upon the Statute of Frauds, no action could be maintained on the notes against the president, as to whom the instrument was incomplete. And, although the correspondence and the notes taken together established an agreement of surety-ship, notwithstanding the Statute of Frauds, yet proof could not be made upon such a contract when the notes guaranteed had not matured at the date of the assignment. Grant v. West, 23 A. R. 533, and Purefoy v. Purefoy, 1 Vern. 28, followed. Clapperton v. Mutchmor, 30 O. R. 595.

(e) Person to Whom Given.

Enforcement.]—"Mr. Thomas Mason. Dear Sir.—In answer to your favour of this date, I beg to say I will pay whatever sum you may agree upon to pay for an omnibus, if you should find one to suit you, so soon as the same is delivered to you in Hamilton; and this may be considered as a guarantee to the party from whom you may purchase, I remain yours very truly, Samuel Mills:"— Held, that this, though addressed only to T. M., would attach at once as a guarantee in favour of any person who might furnish the omnibus; and that no further proof of acceptance or of consideration was required. Manning v. Mills, 12 U. C. R. 515.

Defendant addressed to I. V. & Co. the following surrantee: "Gentleme,—In coordination of your filling the orders for goods from your listing than house of I. & coordination of your filling the orders for goods from your listing than house of I. & coordination of the same to you." I. V. & Co. were the agents in New York for the Birmingham house referred to, whom the defendant knew, but they had no other connection with then. The goods having been furnished to J. C. & Co.:—Held, that the Birmingham firm could sue upon the guarantee, if intended for their benefit, which might be proved by parol evidence. VanWart v. Carpenter, 21 U. C. R. 320.

One T. contracted with two firms in Quebec, N. & Co. and M. & Co., for advances, to be covered by shipments of timber within a specified period, agreeing to furnish defendants guaranty for performance of his part of the contract. Defendant in a letter to M., a partner in one of the firms, guaranteed that T. would furnish timber in 1859, equal in value to the advances made by him, M., to said T.:—Held, that a joint action by M. and N. & Co. would not lie. Stevenson v. Melean, 10 C. P., 414.

A. agrees to become surety to B. for all such advances as B. may make to C. during a limited period. B. makes no individual advances to C. at all, but during the period, B., with D., a stranger to A., make advances to C.:—Held, that B. individually cannot recover from A. the amount of the advances so made. Stevenson v. McLeun, 11 C. P. 208.

D, having negotiated for the purchase of impatented lands, and the vendee of the Crown requiring security for the purchase money, D, obtained from his father a letter addressed to himself, as follows: "If you make the contemplated purchase from H. of wild lands, amounting to 16,000 acres, at $6 per acre, and deducting all amounts due or hereafter payable on the same. I will become your security for the payment of the principal on the Crown lands and interest, and the interest on the deeded lands." "P. 8.—I will see you have the £2,000 to pay in cash when all papers are signed:"—Held, that this letter was not a promise to provide for the payment of the £2,000 cash, which could be enforced by the vendor. Hellized! V, Dickson, 9 Gr. 414.

II. DISCHARGE AND RELEASE OF SURETY.

1. Alteration of Principal's Position.

(a) Bank and Company Officers.

Bank Agent—Cashier.] — A surety by bond, for the due performance of the office of a bank agent, is not responsible for losses occurring after the nature of the agency has been changed and the agent appointed a cashier. Bank of Upper Canada v. Covert, 5. O. S. 541.

Remuneration — Change in Mode of .]—To a declaration against a surety on a bond, conditioned for the performance of his duty by W. while in the plaintiffs' service as their agent at N., or in any other capacity whatsoever, the defendant pleaded that W. entered into the plaintiffs' employment as such agent at a certain commission or percentage on the business done, and defendant executed the bond under the agreement that he should be so paid, and that afterwards the plaintiffs, without defendant's knowledge or consent, changed the mode of renuneration to a fixed salary:—Held, no defence. Bank of Toronto v. Wilmot, 19 U. C. lt. 73.

Bank Cashier—Non-banking Business.] —The surreites of an abscending bank cashier are not relieved from liability by shewing that the bank employed their principal in transacting what was not properly banking business, in the course of which he appropriated the bank funds to his own use, the claim against sureties being for the moneys so appropriated by the principal, and not for losses occasioned by such illegal transactions. Springer v. Exchange Bank of Canada, Barnes v. Exchange Bank of Canada, 14 S. C. R. 716. See S. U., 7 O. R. 300, 13 A. R. 390.

Bank Olerk—Teller.]—Declaration on a deed executed, reciting that B. had been appointed by plaintiffs a clerk in their bank at K. or elsewhere, as might be determined upon, B. covenanting during his service as clerk or in any other capacity whatsoever, to be faithful in his conduct, render proper accounts, pay moneys, &c., and defendant covenanting that B. should perform all his covenanting had been been covered by B. as teller.) Plea, that before breach B. was, without defendant's consent, removed by plaintiffs from the situation of clerk to that of teller, which was a different office, and in which he was intrusted with more moneys than in his former position, and his responsibility entirely changed and increased:—Held, bad. Royal Canadian Bank v. Yates, 19 C. P. 439.

Insurance Company--Agent-Change in Insurance Company—Agent—Change in Extent of Duties.]—A bond made by defendants as sureties, and B. as principal, to the plaintiffs, to secure the faithful and diligent performance of B.'s duties, including the payment over of moneys, recited that B. had been appointed agent for the plaintiffs for the Province of Ontario, and as such was to discharge certain duties, and to receive certain duties, and to receive certain duties, and to receive certain duties. discharge certain duties, and to receive cer-tain moneys, as defined in the instrument ap-pointing him, and as to which the parties thereby declared they had due and sufficient communication. The condition of the bond was for the performance of such duties, and the payment over of such moneys. The bond also contained the following clause:—"The said sureties, in consideration of the premises, hereby agree to . . renounce to (sic) the said sureties, in consideration of the premises, hereby agree to . renounce to (sic) the benefits of division, discussion, and all other benefits of sureties, consenting to be bound as fully in all respects as the said principal party." The instrument of appointment provided that B, should be general agent for the Precious as additional sure and the said that the Province, should have control over all local agents, except some six, including those of Hamilton and Galt, and his compensation should be a commission of thirty-live per cent, on all business obtained by himself or the said agents under his control, he to pay the agents thereout, and on renewals thirty per cent.; and also to have a salary of $75 a mouth, which was to include travelling ex-penses. The plaintiffs afterwards added Hamlton and Galt to his agencies. Subsequently B.'s business was confined to Toronto, and he agreed to relinquish his commission on the outside agencies; and it was intimated to him that at the close of the year his salary would have to be re-arranged:—Held, that the taking away of the outside agencies was such a change in B.'s position as could not be said change in B.'s position as could not be said to be, without inquiry, evidently unsubstantial and not prejudicial to the sureties, and would of itself discharge them; but as to Galt and Hamilton it could not be said, on the evidence, to have that effect. Held, also, that the effect of the renunciation clause was to place the principal and sureties in the position place the principal and surelies in the position of joint contractors; that the agreement con-fining B.'s business to Toronto amounted to a new contract; and that the sureties would only be liable as principals for default up to the date thereof and not thereafter. Citizens' Ins. Co. v. Cluxton, 13 O. R. 382.

Agent-Remuneration - Change in Mode of.]—Action on a bond given by the defendants W. and A. for the performance of W.'s duties as plaintiffs' agent, and for the payment of all moneys received by him, alleging non-payment of certain moneys, &c. by defendant A., setting up in substance that when he executed the bond as such surety W. was agent under an agreement with plaintiffs, whereby his salary was fixed, and that after-wards, and before breach, the plaintiffs, without A.'s knowledge or consent, discharged W from his then engagement, and re-engaged or re-appointed him on different terms, &c., namely, that his remuneration was to be by commission allowed for services performed instead of by fixed salary. Replication, in sub-stance, that W.'s remuneration as such agent, whether by fixed salary or commission, formed no part of and was not contemplated in the contract of suretyship, nor was the change in any way prejudicial to the surety's interests. nor did it impose any greater liability upon nor did it impose any greater hability upon him, and the said change did not include any change of W.'s duties and obligations as such agent:—Held, replication bad, as being no answer to the plea, which alleged a discharge of W, from his engagement and a re-engage ment on different terms. Semble, that the change in the mode of remuneration by commission instead of by fixed salary would release the surety, if the nature of the remuneration was communicated to him when he entered into the contract, for it was an alteration which might be prejudicial to him. A rejoinder alleged that A, was induced to enter into the said bond for W, at a fixed salary, and, believing such representations to be true executed said bond, and the change in said plea set out was without his authority or consent. Semble, rejoinder good: that it was not necessary to allege that said representation was made by the plaintiffs, for under the re-joinder the plaintiffs would have to prove that the representation was so made as to be binding on plaintiffs. Canada Agricultural Ins. Co. v. Watt, 30 C. P. 350.

Road Company — Secretary and Treasurer—President, 1—A plea that the bond was given for the due performance of the duties of secretary and treasurer of the plaintiffs by A., and that before breach A. was appointed president and director of the plaintiffs:—Held, bad, for not shewing that the offices were incompatible, by anleging that the plaintiffs were incorporated under C. S. U. C. c. 49, if that Act would make them incompatible, or otherwise. And admitting them to be incompatible, or otherwise. And admitting them to be incompatible, or otherwise. And admitting them to be incompatible;—Quarre, would the acceptance of one vacate the other. A plea that A, had ceased to be secretary and treasurer when the bond to be secretary and treasurer when the bond president, but that deceased director and president, but that deceased director and president, but that deceased in the plea, which being done, the recital contained an admission under seal of his being duly appointed treasurer and secretary, and was therefore a contradiction thereof, Trent and Frankford Road Co. v. Marshall, 10 C. P. 329.

(b) Government Officers.

Collector of Customs—Change of Port.]
—Sci. fa. on a bond given by defendant as surety for one A., collector of customs. Defendant pleaded that A. was appointed a collector of customs in Upper Canada, at the port of B., and to no other office; and thereupon defendant executed a bond in reference thereto as follows: setting out the bond at length, which recited that A. had been ap-pointed to the office of a collector in Her Majesty's customs, and the condition was that so long as he should hold such office he should pay over all moneys received by virtue there-of. Defendant then alleged that the bond was executed in reference to said office of collector at B., and not in respect of any other office or employment; and A. afterwards resigned said office, and was without defendant's knowsaid office, and was without defendant's anow-ledge appointed collector for the ports of N, and R. successively; and that the breach of duty, if any, was in respect of those offices, and not of his office at B. aforesaid. The plaintiff replied that collectors of customs were and are appointed generally, and not to any particular place; that A. was so ap-pointed, and the bond given in respect of such appointment; that as such collector he was, without any resignation, transferred respec-tively from B. to N., and to R., at which last mentioned port the breach of duty sued for occurred—without this, that he was at the time of giving said bond appointed col-lector at B., and not to any other office, and afterwards resigned said office:-Held, on demurrer to the replication, plea bad, for setting up that the bond was given in respect to the office of collector at B. only, when, as set out in the plea, it was clearly not so, but as collector generally: replication good. At the trial, upon issue taken on the replication, trial, upon issue taken on the replication, A.'s commission was put in, dated the 28th May, 1850, appointing him "a collector of Her Majesty's customs in the Province of Canada," and a letter to him from the customs department, of the 14th May, informing him that he had been appointed collector of customs at the port of B., and requiring him to furnish securities. The bond was dated the 16th May. The removal of the 16th May. The removal of A. to the ports mentioned in the plea was proved, and that he was in default at R., whence he absconded:—Held, that defendant was liable for such default. The Queen v. Miller, 20 U. C. B. 485.

(c) Merchants' Clerks.

—Held, that they were discharged. Van-Milan v. Wyle, 7 C. P, 459.

Township Treasurer — Increase in Taxes, |—The imposition of additional taxes to those assessed at the time of taking the security, and the increase of the risk thereby, did not vituate a bond given for the general performance of duties and payment of all moneys by the treasurer for the township. Township of Beverley v. Barlow, 10 C. P. 178.

Re-appointment.]—The annual reappointment of a municipal treasurer:—Held, not to discharge his sureties. Township of Adjala v. McElroy, 9 O. R. 580.

Village Treasurer—Collector.]—Temporamy employment of municipality, as collector. Liability of surety for the performance of his office as treasurer, for moneys received by him in either capacity. Village of Weston v, Conron, 15 O. R. 595.

2. Course of Dealing.

Arrangement not Objected to—Judgment.!—Defendant was one of two sureties in a bond, on which the obligees sued. An arrangement was made between his principal, and the object of the obj given by the warden to the principal and one of the sureties, was binding at law. Counties of Essex, Kent, and Lambton v. Baby, 9 U. C. R. 34.

Condition of Guarantee-Impossibility of Performance—Actions of Creditor.]—The defendant R. contracted with the plaintiffs to deliver on their vessels at Montreal a large quantity of deals, and he delivered in 1877 all but 108 standard hundreds. These could not be shipped till the spring of 1878, and R. required in the meantime to receive payment for them. He had in his yard at Ottawa more than the required quantity of deals; and in place of then separating and delivering to the plaintiffs the 108 standards, he procured his son to give a storage receipt under 34 Vict. c. 5 (D.), acknowledging the receipt from the Ontario Bank of 108 standard hundreds of deals, specifying the qualities required by the contract. The bank thereupon gave a guarantee to the plaintiffs that those deals should antee to the plaintiffs that those deals should "be satisfactorily culled next spring previous to shipment, and that any question arising as to the same shall be settled in the manner usual in Quebec, viz.: Messrs, D. & Co., for purchasers, and Messrs, C. & R., for Mr. R., to agree upon a sworn culler to act in the interests of both parties." Thereupon the plaintiffs paid for the deals, and the bank received the money. In the spring of 1878 R. forwarded 108 standards to Montreal by two barges, being urged to expedition in so doing by the plaintiffs; and sixty standards were by the plaintiffs; and sixty standards were loaded on vessels of the plaintiffs, which sailed with them to England. The quality of sailed with them to England. The quality of the remaining forty-eight standards was ob-jected to, and they were landed at Montreal, and there culled and found deficient in quality, Messrs. C. & R., agents at Montreal for the defendant R., orally agreed with the plain-tiffs, after the sixty standards had been shipped, that the quality of the forty-eight standards should be taken to be the average of the whole 108:—Held, reversing the deci-sion in 3 O. R. 299, that the guarantee given by the bank only required that the plaintiffs should be satisfied with the culling at E.'s should be satisfied with the culling at R.'s yard in Ottawa, and that, no objection having been made there, the guarantee was satising been made there, the guarantee was satisfied. But held, also, that the bank was not bound by the agreement made at Montreal by C. & R., and, even if the culling were to have been at Montreal, the shipment of the sixty standards having rendered it impossible to settle the question in difference in the man-ner agreed upon, the bank would have been discharged. Dobell v. Ontario Bank, 9 A, R.

Contract—Sale of Subject of, under Exccution.]—Where a surety covenanted to pay advances made by the creditors of the principal to him on a certain day, or so soon as certain timber should be soid at Quebec; and before the time appointed arrived, and whilst the timber was being conveyed to Quebec, an agent of the creditors obtained from the principal debtor a confession of judgment, and sued out execution thereon, under which the timber was sold:—Held, that this discharged the surety. Dickson v. McPherson, 3 Gr. 185.

Discharge of Collateral Security.]—A. and B., partners in business, borrowed money from C., giving him as security their joint and several promissory note and a mortgage on partnership property. The partnership having been dissolved, A. assumed all the liabilities of the firm, and continued to carry on the business alone. After the dissolution of the mortage, but without receiving payment of his debt, and afterwards brought an action against B. on the promissory note:—Held, affirming the decision in 20 A. R. 695, that, by the terms of the dissolution of partnership, the relations between A. and B. were changed to those of principal and surety, and it having been found at the trial that C. had notice of such change, his release of the principal, A., discharged B., the surety, from liability for the debt. Allison v. McDonald, 23 S. C. R. 635.

Division Court Clerk—Special Arrangement suits—Statements of Account.]—After the defoundants had become sureties for a division court clerk, a special arrangement was made between the plaintiffs and the clerk, under which the latter was to receive no costs but disbursements only in all suits entered with him by the plaintiffs in which nothing was realized, and he on his part guaranteed that the court had jurisdiction. This was subsequently varied by giving to the clerk fifty cents in addition to the disbursements in such suits. Periodical statements were made from time to time according to the agreement, and a cheque given for the balance thus shewn. It was afterwards discovered that the statements were incorrect, and that moneys collected by the clerk had not been paid over: —Held, that the special arrangement made with the clerk discharged the sureties. Held, also, that the periodical statements were not conclusive as against the plaintiffs, Victoria Mutual Fire Ins. Co. v. Davidson, 3 O. R. 378.

Hire of Chattel—Subsequent Sale.]—Where defendant became surety to the plaintiff for the rent of a certain piano, hired to one H., and for its return on request; and the plaintiff afterwards sold the piano to H., taking in security a bill on England, with the understanding that if the bill should be dishonoured the sale was to be void:—Held, that the defendant was discharged. O'Neill v. Carter, 9 U. C. R. 470.

Interference with Rights of Surety.] —The Union Bank agreed to discount the paper of S., A., & Co., railway contractors, indersed by O'G., as surety, to enable them to carry on a railway contract for the Atlantic and North-West R. W. Co. O'G, indorsed the notes on an understanding or an agreement with the contractors and the bank that all moneys to be earned under the contract should be paid directly to the bank and not to the contractors, and an irrevocable assignment by the contractors of all moneys to the bank was in consequence executed. After several estimates had been thus paid to the bank, it was found that the work was not progressing favourably, and the railway company then, without the assent of O'G., but with the assent of the contractor and the bank, guaranteed certain debts due to creditors of the contrac tors, and out of moneys subsequently earned by the contractors made large payments for wages, supplies, and provisions necessary for carrying on the work. In October, 1888, the bank, also without the assent of O'G., applied for and got possession of a cheque for $15,000 which had been accepted by the bank and held by the company as security for the due per-formance of the contract, in consideration of signing a release to the railway company " for all payments heretofore made by the company for labour employed on said contract and for material and supplies which went into the work." The contract under certain circumstances gave the right to the company to employ men and additional workmen, &c., as they might think proper, but did not give the right to guarantee contractors' debts or pay for provisions and food, &c.:—Held, that there was such a variation of the rights of O'G, as surety as to discharge him. O'Gara v, Union Bank of Canada, 22 S. C. R. 404.

Insurance of Buildings—Increase of Risk. — befendant became surety by bond that his principal should keep insured certain buildings mortgaged by him to the plaintiff. Afterwards the position of the buildings was altered by the plaintiff's assignee, the outbuildings being brought nearer to the house, and the risk thereby increased:—Held, that defendant was discharged. Grieve v. Smith, 23 U. C. R. 23.

Judgment—Lien on Lands of Principal— Discharge of, —The holder of a note recovered against the makers and indorsers a judgment, which was duly registered so as to create a lien on the real estate of the makers; subsequently he accepted from the makers of the note a composition of fifty per cent., and discharged their lands from further liability, expressly retaining the right to go against their personal assets, and then proceeded to execution against the goods of the indorsers:—Held, a discharge of the indorsers from further liability. Arelias v. Green, 5 Gr. 635.

Novation — Mortgage — Variation.] mortgage of leasehold lands to secure $5,000, made by three trustees and executors under a will, recited their appointment, and that the moneys were required for the purpose of the estate, the mortgage being under the Short Forms Act, and containing the usual covenant for payment by mortgagors. In 1888, under the provision therefor in the will, a new executor and trustee was appointed, the retiring one of the original three being released and all his interest vested in his successor and those remaining. In 1892, while $3,000 still remained due, the security being greatly diminished in value, and worth no more than the amount then due on it, the plaintiffs, with a full knowledge of all the facts, entered into an agreement under seal with the then executors and trustees for an extension of the time for payment of the principal, which, though providing for a reduction of the rate of interest, also provided for its being compounded, and that the rate was to apply as well before as after maturity. The agreement contained a covenant by the then executors and trustees to pay the mortgage money, and also a proviso that the extension was consented to in as far as the company might do so without infringing on or in any way affecting the interests of other parties in the mortgaged premises, all rights and remedies against any security or securities the company might have against any third person or persons upon the original security being reserved :- Held, that the agreement to extend the mortgage was in effect a transaction for a new loan on different and more onerous terms, and that as between the executors and trustees, as last constituted, and the one who had retired, the relationship of principal and surety was created, and, by virtue of the agreement, notwithstanding the reservation of remedies, the surety was discharged. Canada Permanent L. and S. Co. v. Ball, 30 O. R. 557.

— Mortangee and Assignce of Equity of Redemption.1—Where a mortgager has assigned his equity of redemption, the assignee covenanting with him to pay the mortgage debt, though as between the mortgagor and the assignee the latter thus becomes primarily liable for the debt, this does not create any privity of contract between the assignee and the mortgage; and the mortgage; and the has become a mere surety for the debt, and, as such, has been released by certain dealings between the mortgage and assignee of the equity of redemption, unless such dealings constitute a new contract between them. Mathers v. Helbwell, 10 Gr. 172, distinguished. Aldous v. Hicks, 21 O. R. 35.

The relations which exist among mortgage, mortgage, and assignee of the land who has agreed to pay the mortgage, are not these which obtain among creditor, surety, and principal debtor. Aldous v. Hicks, 21 O. R. 95, approved. Nor should the doctrine of discharge applicable to the case of a mortgage, where no actual prejudice has arisen. So long as the covenant to pay endures, the mortgage is liable to pay when sued by the mortgage; it is equitable right is, upon payment, to get the land back, or to have unimpaired remedies against his assignee if he has sold the land; and if those rights can be exercised by him at the time he is sued, it is immaterial that at some previous time there was such dealing between his assignee and the mortgagee as would then have interfered with such rights. Mathers v. Helliwell, 10 Gr. 172, explained. Dictum of Macleman, J.A., in Trust and Loan Co. v. McKenzie, J.A. R. 402, 29 [173, 126, followed. Forsier v. 14eg, 32 O. 173, 174, 174, 175].

— Pleading—Abandonment, 1—Plaintiff declared on an instrument by which defendants agreed to pay him $2,000. "to be expended as may be agreed upon by "two of them, the other two being their sureties, and by the plaintiff, "in the way of produce." The two sureties pleaded that this agreement was abandoned, and that the plaintiff and the two principal defendants, without their knowledge or consent, entered into another agreement in writing, under which they dealt together, and not under that declared on. To this the plaintiff replied, admitting the agreement in pleaded, but asserting that it was not an abandonment of, but an arrangement contemplated by, the contract sued on, in that part of it above set out; that he had sued not for breaches of the alleged substituted agreement, but of that declared on; and except to the extent to which he thus confessed and avoided the plea, he took issue thereon:—
Held, on demurrer, that the replication was good (though unnecessarily long and containing a quasi new assignment not required), for it expressly denied the abandonment, which was the material part of the defence pleaded. Moore v. Andrew. 23 U. C. R. 367.

Vendor and Assignce of Purchaser.]

An agreement for sale and purchase of saveral lots, entered into between the plaining and the defendant, described the lots by their plan number, and, after providing for payment of the purchase money, part in cash and part at times fixed therein, with a right of prepayment, contained the words: "Company will discharge any of said lots on payment of the proportion of the purchase price applicable on each." The defendant sold and assigned his interest in the agreement to a third person, who made several payments to the plaintiffs, and sold several lots and parts of lots, which were conveyed to the purchasers by the plaintiffs, who did not first insist upon payment of all interest, and who also on one occasion gave time to the third person for payment of interest:—Held, that there was no novation, the relations which the defendant himself created between the plaintiffs and the third person sufficiently accounting for the dealings between them. 2. That the proportion of the purchase price applicable to each lot was to be ascertained by dividing the balance of purchase money, after deducting the cash payment, by the number of lots. 3.

That the plaintiffs were not entitled to convey lots without requiring payment of all interest in arrear at the time of each conveyance, and interest to the date of the conveyance upon the portion of principal being paid. 4. That, though the plaintiffs had no right to convey parts of lots, or to convey without requiring payment of interest, the defendant, even if merely a surety, was not wholly released by their doing this, and giving time for payment of interest, but was released as to interest in arrear when lots were conveyed and time was given, and was entitled to credit for the full proportion of purchase money of those lots of which parts had been conveyed. Land Se-curity Co. v. Wilson, 22 A. R. 151. See the next case.

Held, by the supreme court of Canada, affirming the above judgment, that the dealings between the vendors and the assignee did not effect a novation by the substitution of him as debtor in the place of the original vendee, debtor in the place of the original vendee, or release the vendee from liability under the original agreement. Held, also, that though the course of dealing did not change the relation of the parties to that of principal creditor, debtor, and surety, notice to the vendors of the assignment, and their knowledge that the vendee held the land as security for the performance of the assignee's obligations towards him, bound the vendors so to deal with the property as not to affect its value injuriously or impede him in having recourse to it as a security. In a suit by the vendors against the vendee to recover interest overdue, equitable considerations would seem to be satequitable considerations would seem to be sat-issified by treating the company as having got from the third party on every release of a part of a lot the full amount that they ought to have got from him on a release for an entire lot and as having received on each transfer all arrears of interest. In the ab-sence of any sure indication in the agreesence of any sure indication in the agree-ment, the ratio of apportionment of payments for the release of lots sold should be estab-lished by adopting the simple arithmetical rule of dividing the amount of the deferred instalments stated in the agreement by the total number of lots mentioned therein. Wilson v. number of lots mentioned therein. Land Security Co., 26 S. C. R. 149.

Performance of Contract—Change in— Benefit of Surety.]—Action on a bond for the performance by one C. of a covenant. Plea, on equitable grounds, that defendant made the bond as surety for C., and upon the terms set forth, and that by an arbitration between plaintiff and C. the terms of his suretyship were altered, in one particular especially, namely, that by the original covenant C. wis to have insured the subject matter upon which he was surety, in $4,000, and that by the arbitration the insurance may done away with:—Held, the the changing of the contract, even though for the surety's benefit, without his consent, would release him from limiting thereon. Fins v. Durkee, 12 C. P.

Promissory Notes — Renewals — Executors—Notice.]—The testator, who was surety in a covenant for the payment by the defendant S. to the plaintiff of a sum of money, died leaving a will, by which he appointed S. and the two other defendants executors. After his death, S., on his own behalf, made various payments on account of the debt, and, being unable to pay the balance when due, he got the plaintiff to take his promissory note therefor, S. having arranged with his bankers to discount this note upon its being indorsed by the plaintiff, and the plaintiff received the money thereon. When the note matured, part of the amount was paid by S., and the balance renewed from time to time by notes of S. indorsed by the plaintiff as before. The last renewal being unpaid, the plaintiff sought to recover the amount from the defendants as executors. In the dealings between the plaintiff and S. as to the promissory note, and the various renewals, no reference was made to the estate of the surety or to the covenant, and the co-executors of S. had no notice of such dealings :- Held, that the estate of the surety was released from liability by the dealings between the plaintiff and S. Austin v. Gibson, 4 A. R. 316.

Railway Contract-Mortgage of Railway -Alteration of Contract, 1-Declaration alleged that the defendants by agreement under seal had agreed to become sureties for the performance of a contract made by one B. with the plaintiffs, whereby B. covenanted to purchase and provide all the lands required for and to build and maintain the plaintiffs' railway from Belleville to Lindsay, and to deliver it over completed by a day named, &c., and to indemnify the plaintiff's against all claims, &c., for lands taken and damage done thereto, and from all acts, omissions, and defaults which would give rise to claims against the plaintiffs, alleging as distinct breaches de-fault by B. in the performance of each of the covenants so entered into by him, whereby, &c. Fifth plea, that plaintiffs mortgaged and otherwise incumbered the said road, and thereby released the sureties:-Held, bad, as it did not appear how the incumbrances prejudiced the principal in the performance of the contract. Sixth plea, that the plaintiffs altered the conditions of the contract by allotting to the principal a large quantity of stock in the company, and thereby released the defendants: -Held, bad, in not shewing how the allotment altered the contract. Ninth plea, that the plaintiffs sustained no loss or damage by B.'s default :- Held, bad, for that the defendants' contract was not merely one of indemnity, but also for the performance by B, of certain specified acts, and non-performance of both was alleged. Tenth plea, that after the breaches the plaintil's, by by-law, rescinded the contract:-Held, bad, as being no answer to the cause of action created by the breaches alleged. Grand Junction R. W. Co. v. Pope, 30 C. P. 633.

Sale of Mortgaged Premises—Notice.]
—Where mortgagees sold the mortgaged premises, without notice to a surety for part of the debt:—Held, that they were liable as between themselves and the surety for the full value of the property. Martin v. Hall, 25 Gr. 471.

Satisfaction of Principal Debt — Release of Debtor — Novation.] — Held, by the court of appeal, reversing the decision in 22 O. R. 225, that a creditor may by express reservation preserve his rights against a surety, notwithstanding the release of the principal debtor, the transaction in such a case amounting in effect to an agreement not to sue, but if the effect of the transaction between the creditor and the principal debtor is to satisfy and discharge and actually extinguish the debt, there is nothing in respect of which the creditor can reserve any rights against the surety: —Held, by the supreme court of Canada, alliming the above decision, that, as according to the evidence there was a complete novation of the debt secured by the promissory note sued on, and a release of the maker, the indorsers on the note were also released. Holliday v. Hogan, 20 A. R. 298; Holtiday v. Jackson, 22 S. C. R. 479.

Second Mortgage by Sureties — Fore-closure by First Mortgage—Notice to Sureties—Co-debtor Becoming Surety.]—Where sureties for a debt gave to the creditor a second mortgage on land as an additional security, and foreclosure proceedings were taken by the first mortgages:—Held, that the creditor, on being notified thereof, should either make himself a party to the suit and prove his claim, or notify the sureties to enable them to prove it, if they so desired:—Held, that the evidence shewed that the sureties had notice, at all events some three months before the day of redemption, which was sufficient. Held, also, that the fact of two co-debtors changing their position so as to make one of them as between themselves a surety, would not affect the creditor without his consent. Jones v, Dunbar, 32 C. P. 136.

Secret Bargain.]—A. guaranteed to B. (a creditor of C.) certain composition notes, which B. was to indorse for the other creditors of C. B. represented to one or more of the creditors, before the composition was agreed to, that he (B.) was to accept a like composition himself, but he had a secret bargain with C. that he should be paid in full:—Held, on grounds of public policy, that this secret bargain vitiated the whole transaction, and that A. was not liable to B. on his guarantee. Clarke v. Ritchey, 11 Gr. 499.

Transfer of Creditor's Business.—Payments to Transferce.]—A mortgage was given to secure the debt of a third party to the extent of $800 so long as the creditor should continue to sell goods to such third party; subsequently the creditor transferred his business to other persons, with whom the debtor continued to deal for some time. During such dealings the debtor paid in more than sufficient to cover the amount of the mortgage:—Held, that the mortgage was thereby discharged. Royal Canadian Bank v. Payne, 19 Gr. 180.

3. Determination of Contract by Death.

Death of one Surety.]—Held, following Bradbury v. Morgan, 1 H. & C. 249, that the death of one of the guarantors did not extinguish the guarantee, in the absence of any notice to plaintiff on behalf of his estate, and the survivor having acknowledged his liability, and promised to settle. Fennell v. McGuire, 21 C. P. 134.

Death of Sole Surety.]—Where the engagement of a surety is a contract and not a bare authority, it is not usually revoked by his death, and his estate remains liable to the same extent as he would have been if he had lived. Exchange Bank of Canada v. Springer, Exchange Bank of Canada v. Springer, Exchange Bank of Canada v. Barnez, 7, O. R. 309, 13 A. R. 390. See S. C., 14 S. C. R. 714

Dissolution of Creditors' Firm by Death of Partner-Notice.]—By an agreement under seal made in April, 1879, the defendant guaranteed to C. & Sons, or the members for the time being forming such firm, the price of any goods supplied by C. & Sons to one Q. to the amount of $5,000, and agreed that the guarantee should be a continuing one, C. died in September, 1881, after which the sons, who were named as executors in his will, carried on the same business under the like firm name until December, 1882, when the assets of the partnership were transferred to the plaintiffs, a joint stock company, Q. continued to obtain goods from the sons, and from the plaintiffs after the formation of the joint stock company, until the spring of 1883. Meanwhile, and on the 5th April, 1882, the defendant, being dissatisfied with the manner in which Q. was conducting his business, wrote to the firm forbidding them to supply any more goods to Q. under such guarantee:
—Held, by the court of appeal, affirming the judgment in 5 O. R. 189, that such notice put an end to defendant's liability for any goods subsequently supplied to Q.: but, by the supreme court, reversing the judgment of the court of appeal, that the death of C. dissolved the firm of C. & Sons, and put an end to the contract of suretyship. Cosgrave Breeing and Malting Co. v. Starrs, 11 A. R. 156; & C. salo nom. Starrs v. Cosgrave, 12 S. C.

4. Giving Time to Principal or Co-surety.

Agreement — Consideration.] — Declaration on defendant's bond for the performance by one H. of the covenants in a lease of land to H. from the plaintiff, alleging that H. thereby covenanted that he would by the 1st March, 1873, divide å certain field on the premises by a rali fence into four fields of equal dimensions; breach, non-performance by H. Equitable plen, that in the spring of 1872, H., Equitable plen, that in the spring of 1872, H., Leguistable plen, that in the spring of 1872, H., Leguistable plen, that in the spring of 1872, H., Leguistable plen, that in the spring of 1872, H., Leguistable plen, that in the spring of 1872, H., Leguistable plen, that in the spring of 1872, H., Leguistable plen, that in the spring of 1872, H., Leguistable plen, that in the spring of 1872, H., Leguistable plen, the leguistable plen, the spring of 1872, Leguistable plen, the spring of 1872, H., Leguistable plen, the leguistable plen, the spring of 1872, Leguistable plen, the spring of 1872, Leguistable plen, the leguistable plen, the spring of 1872, L and setting up a new contract, not founded on any consideration, to contradict the written one. Fair v. Penyelly, 34 U. C. R. 611.

— Consideration — Scal—Interest.]—
Declaration against defendant on a bond conditioned for the payment of money by one R.
Plea, that defendant was surety for R., as the plaintiff well knew; that the time for payment had elapsed; and that the plaintiff, without the knowledge or consent of defendant, agreed (not saying under seal) with R. to give him time for one year, in consideration of certain usurions interest paid by him:—
Held, clearly no defence. Corrigot v. Boulton, 17 U. C. R. 131.

——Interest.]—W. owed A. 8400. To secure this debt S., as surety, joined with W. in a note to the creditor (A.) for the amount, payable at a future date with interest. W., the principal, without notice to the surety (S.), agreed in writing to pay interest at fifteen per cent. as a condition of the note being accepted, and of the time mentioned in the agreement being given:—Held, that the surety was discharged. Shaver v. Allison, 11 Gr. 355; affirmed on rehearing.

Assent of Surety—Dual Capacity—Exceutor of Surety—Ptading)—To an action against three defendants as executrix and executors under the will of G., deceased, on a covenant by G. that S., one of the said executors and defendants, would pay $2.500, alleging a part payment, but that $618 was still due and unpaid, the defendants pleaded that G.'s covenant was as surety for S. only, as the plaintiff freh knew, and that the plaintiff for valuable consideration, and without the know-ledge or consent of the other two executors, gave S. time, beyond the stipulated time, whereby the defendants were discharged. To this the plaintiff replied that S., as one of such executors, had notice and knowledge of the agreement to give time, and as such executor assented thereto:—Semble, that the plea was bad, for that in the absence of any allegation of fraud or prejudice to the estate, the assent of one executor might be sufficient, notwith-standing his being both executor and principal debtor; and that the effect of S. filling both positions would be to reserve the plaintiff's right to sue, if called upon to do so by the sureties. But, held, that the replication was a good answer to the plea. Another plea, which omitted to allege that the testator's covenant was as surety for S., was held bad. Austin v. Gibson, 28 C. P. 554.

Bail—Replevin—Postponement of Trial.]
—Where the trial of an action of replevin had been postponed at the instance of defendant, but without the direct assent or concurrence of the bail.—Held, that the bail were discharged. The true question is, not whether the surety has actually been injured by the delay, but whether he might have been. Cannil v. Bogert, 6 C. P. 474.

Bond—Instalment—Extension of Time.]—A., the holder of a bond made by B., C., and D., the latter being sureties for B., when an instalment on the bond became due, without the knowledge of C. and D., took B.'s notes to himself, which he indorsed, and discounted at a bank, applying the proceeds upon the instalment and interest. Upon maturity of the notes, he retired them and brought this action on the bond. Upon an equitable plea:

Held, that the sureties were discharged, and a verdict having been found against them, a new trial was granted. Hooker v. Gamble, 12 C.

P. 512. Upon a new trial had, a verdict against the principal and for the sureties was upheld, the court being of opinion that on the pleadings and evidence the instalment had been paid. S. C., 13 C. P. 462.

obligee of a bond, given by a surety, gives the principal time after the maturity of the debt, the surety is released in equity. Hooker v. Gamble, 9 C. P. 434.

— Municipal Collector — Statutory Time.]—Held, that the time given to one of two bondsmen, who was collector of a municipality, did not invalidate it as to the other on equitable grounds, such time, provided it was not extended beyond the 1st March, being within the provisions of 18 Vict, c. 21, s. 3. Municipality of Whitby v, Fluit, 9 C. P. 448.

An extension of time for making the collection, without the surety's consent, does not discharge him, that being expressly allowed, and his liability retained, by 18 Vict. c. 21. Corporation of Whitby v. Harrison, 18 U. C. R. 606. See, also, Todd v. Perry, 20 U. C. R. 649.

Guarantee—Period of Credit-Extension.]
—The plaintiffs sued defendant on the following guarantee: "I hereby hold myself accountable to you for any goods Mr. F. M. may purchase of you to the amount of £250 ey." It was proved that the plaintiff had sold goods to F. M. on the 19th November, 1845, amounting to £311, and that after the original credit of six months on the £311 (understood between the parties at the time of sale, as the jury found) had expired, the plaintiff had extended the time by taking notes without defendant's privity:—Held, that the guarantee was a continuing one; and that the plaintiffs by extending the time of credit had discharged the defendant. Ross v. Burton, 4 U. C. R. 357.

Period of Credit—Extension—Subsequent Promise,]—Defendant agreed in writing to be answerable for such goods as the plaintiffs should furnish to one C., to the extent of £500. It appeared that by the usual course of dealing the goods were sold to C, at six months' credit, taking his notes; but the plaintiffs afterwards took three large notes amounting to nearly $$1,000, instead of several smaller ones overdue, and thus extended the original credit. This was done without defendant's knowledge or assent, but it was proved that afterwards, on being asked by one of the plaintiffs for security, he offered to convey a lot of land for £300, and said he would pay the rest as soon as he could. It was not shewn, however, that defendant was then aware of the credit having been extended, and the land was declined:—Held, that the offer having been made on a condition which was not accepted, and without knowledge of the facts, was not binding, and that defendant was discharged. Semble, the plaintiffs having taken issue on the plea alleging discharge by the extension of time, that the subsequent promise to pay was not admissible in evidence. Kerr v. Cameron, 19 U. C. R. 330.

— Mortgage — Collateral Security — Promissory Note.]—Action by H. against M. on a guarantee of a mortgage made by one 61, and assigned by M. to H. Plen, that the mortgage was given by G. as collateral security for two notes of £100 each, made by G. to one W., and indorsed by him, and that said notes were given to H. (plaintiff) with the mortgage, and that, one note having become due, H., without notice of presentment and dishonour, and without defendant's consent, gave G. time, for a valuable consideration:—Held, good, and that defendant as surety was discharged. Honce v. Mills, 10 C. P. 194.

Judgment—Nubsequent Extension—Condition, I—After judgment had been recovered against a debtor and his surery, the party holding the judgment agreed with the debtor to extend the time for payment:—Held, that, under the circumstances, the surery was not discharged. Duff v. Barrett, 15 Gr. 632.

On the reheating of this cause:—Held, that time given by a creditor to his principal after judgment recovered against the surety, did not discharge the surety; and that the debtor having stipulated to obtain the surety's consent for time, the agreement for time was thereby made conditional on such consent being given, and that the surety was not discharged. Duff v. Barrett, 17 Gr. 1871.

Setting aside.] — After a cognovit given by the principal and his sureties jointly, the court will not set aside a judgment entered against all because time has been given to the principal without the consent of the sureties. Moveat v. Switzer, M. T. 3 Vict.

Mortgage — Consideration—Pleading.]—Action on a bond against a surety for W. R. as agent for the plaintiffs, alleging the conversion by W. R. of money received for them. The plea, which set up an accounting between plaintiffs and W. R., and a mortgage given to secure the money found due, by which the debt was merged in the mortgage, and the time extended without defendant's consent:—Held, bad, as not shewing that the consideration for which the mortgage was taken would include everything that could be proved under the declaration. Commercial Bank v. Muirhead, 12 U. C. R. 39.

Covenant — Assignment—Consideration for Extension—Prejudice.] — Declaration, that defendant assigned to the plaintiff a mortrage executed to defendant by one W. and by the deed of assignment covenanted that W. should pay the principal and interest when due, and that upon default made by W. defendant would pay the same; that W. made default, but defendant did not pay. Plea, on equitable grounds, that defendant covenanted as surety only for W.; that the plaintiff when he took the deed knew him to be so, and accepted him as such; and that the plaintiff afterwards, without defendant's knowledge or consideration, agreed with W. to give and did give him time for payment of the principal and interest secured by the mortgage beyond the time when it fell due:—Held, a good plea; that the declaration clearly shewed defendant to be only a surety; that the consideration was sufficiently stated; that the agreement might be by parol; and that it was not necessary to shew that defendant was prejudiced by the giving time. At the trial it was shewn that when the mortgage fell due the plaintiff told W., the mortgagor, that he would wait, on his paying twelve per cent. No time was settled, but W. signed two notes for 224 each, for one year's signed two notes for 224 each, for one year's interest, which he paid, and afterwards two others, on which the plaintiff had sued and obtained judgment. Nothing was said about defendant's liability when this arrangement was made, and defendant was not aware of it until long after. The court being left to draw the same inference as a jury:—Held, that the equitable plea was proved, and defendant discharged. Darling v. McLean, 20 U. C. R. 372.

by the assignor with the assignee in an assignment of mortgage that the mortgage moneys shall be duly paid, makes the assignor a surety for the mortgagor as to such payment. Darling v. McLean, 20 U. C. R. 372, followed. Gordon v. Martin, Fitz-G. 302, and Guild v. Corrad. [1894] 2 Q. B. SS., distinguished. On the maturity and non-payment of a mortgage, the grantee of the equity of redemption, who had covenanted with the mortgagor to pay the mortgage moneys, executed a new mortgage to the holder, through several mesne assignments, of the original mortgage, the new mortgage extending the time for payment of the principal and reducing the rate of interest, the mortgagee refusing to discharge the original mortgage, and orally reserving his rights against the assignor to him of that mortgage, who had covenanted that the mortgage moneys should be paid:-Held, that parol evidence of the reservation of rights against the surety was admissible. Held, also, that owing to the reservation of rights against the owing to the extension of time given by the new mortgage did not interfere with the right of wortgage. Trusts Corporation of Ontario v. Hood, 27 O. R. 135.

A covenant by the assigner of a mortgage with the assignee that the mortgage money shall be duly paid, makes the assignor a surety; but he is not discharged merely by the assignee taking a new mortgage for the same debt on the same land from a purchaser thereof from the mortgager, with an extended time for payment, the assignee refusing at the same time to discharge the old mortgage; the new mortgage containing a redemise clause, but not being executed by the mortgage. Judgment in 27 O. R. 135 affirmed. Trusts Corporation of Onlario v. Hood, 23 A. R. 589.

Held, reversing the judgment in 19 O. R. 169, that, as there was no evidence whatever of the plaintiffs, there was no evidence whatever of the plaintiffs the covenant under which the alleged suretyship arose, and as he had no reason to think that the relation of principal and surety existed, his dealing with the debtor did not work a release, assuming that the relationship did exist. Semble, that the defendant, as a volunteer, could not set up the rights of a surety under the covenant of the mortzagor, the grantor of the equity of relemption, against the plaintiff, the creditor of the mortzagor. Northwood v. Keating, 18 Gr. 643, referred to. Blackley v. Kenney, 18 A. R. 183.

— Postponement of Registered Judgment.]—Where a creditor gives time to the principal by taking a mortgage from him and agreeing to postpone a registered judgment, without notice to the sureties, they will be discharged. Todd v. City Bank, 7 L. J. 123.

Purchaser of Equity — Agreement with Mortgagee—Interest.]—On the purchase of an estate subject to a mortgage the purchaser agreed to pay off the security, and subsequently agreed with the mortgagee for an extension of time for five years, agreeing in consideration thereof to pay an increased rate of interest, and covenanted that he would pay to the mortgagee the said interest quarterly, so long as the said forbearance should continue, and until the principal money was fully paid. On a bill filed to enforce payment of the incumbrance:—Held, that the purchaser was personally bound to pay only the interest on the debt; and that by the extension of time to the purchaser, who had become the party primarily bound to pay, the personal liability of the mortgagor therefor had been discharged. Mathers v. Helliucell, 10 Gr. 172.

Novation—Invector in Rate of Interest—Reservation of Rights.]—A new agreement between the debtor and creditor extending the time for payment of the debt and increasing the rate of interest, without the consent of the surety, is a material alteration of the original contract, and releases the surety. And a provision in such agreement reserving the rights of the creditor against the surety, though effectual as regards the extension of time, is idle as regards the stipulation for an increased rate of interest, and, notwithstanding such reservation, the surety is discharged. Bristol and West of England Land Co. v. Taylor, 24 O. R. 286.

An agreement between the mortgagee and the purchaser of the mortgaged premises for an extension of time for payment of the mortgage, in consideration of payment of interest at an increased rate, with a reservation of remedies against the mortgagor, does not operate as a release of the liability of the mortgagor upon his covenant. He is not a mere surety, and, if his right of redemption is not affected or the value of the mortgaged property impaired, he cannot complain. Bristol and West of England Land Co. v. Taylor, 24 O. R. 286, distinguished. Trust and Loan Co. v. McKenzie, 23 A. R. 167. See ante 2.

promissory notes and a mortgage made by defendants they pleaded, on equitable grounds, that they made the notes, &c., as security only for one J. McD., and upon the terms of an agreement set out, which provided that upon J. McD, making certain payments in a given time, and giving the notes and mortgage, the plaintiff would release J. McD, from his It also contained a stipulation indebtedness. that the securities now sued on were to be regarded as so much additional value to J. McD,'s assets, and defendants were not to be indemnified or reimbursed in respect of them under penalty of relieving the plaintiff from carrying out the agreement. The plea then alleged that the notes and mortgage were made and accepted on the faith of this agreement, and that subsequently, without the privity or consent of defendants, the plaintiff and J. McD, entered into a new arrangement, set out in the plea, by which the indebtedness of McD, was fixed at a new and larger sum which the plaintiff agreed to accept in full of all claims against him and his sureties; part of this sum was to be paid in money at a future day, additional securities were handed over and promised to the plaintiff, and other and prolonged times were fixed for the payment, and it was stipulated that on the securities being completed and said money paid according to this agreement, the plaintiff would hand over and release all other securities held The defendants alleged that the last agreement was taken in satisfaction of the first, and that the defendants were thereby released from liability by such extension of The plaintiff replied that the defendants had been indemnified, contrary to the terms of the first agreement:—Held, on demurrer, that the plea was good; that the stipulation against the indemnity of defendants could not deprive them of their rights as sureties; that there was not in the second agreement any reservation of the plaintiff's rights under the first; and that without such a reservation distinctly expressed defendants were discharged. Held, also, replication bad, for that the stipulation relied on applied only as between the principal debtor and the plaintiff, and the breach of it could give no right of action against defendants. Mulholland v. Broom-field, 32 U. C. R. 369.

Principal Becoming Surety-Assent of Creditor. |-Semble, that where after a right of action accrues to a creditor against two or more persons he is informed that one of them is or has become a surety only, and after that he gives time to the principal debtor, without the consent and knowledge of the surety, he thereby discharges the surety, even though he may not have assented or been a party to the change of relationship between them. Swire v. Redman, 1 Q. B. D. 536, commented upon. In this case, however:-Held, upon the evidence, that the plaintiffs not only knew of but assented to the change of relationship. T. being in business, failed and made a composition with his creditors, giving his notes in-dorsed by W., and further secured by an assignment of certain mortgages made by W. Afterwards W. got a transfer of all T's business and assumed all his liabilities. The plaintiffs were creditors of T., and received the notes for the composition. By a written docu-ment the plaintiffs authorized the discharge of one of the mortgages made by T. to W., and assigned to secure the notes, in consideration of W. giving another mortgage in lieu thereof: and they authorized also the discharge of an other of the mortgages, so far as regarded part of the property in it, in order that W. by mortgaging it again might raise money to meet When the the last payment on the notes. last note fell due, which W. by his arrange-ment with T. should have paid as the principal debtor, the plaintiffs by agreement with W. drew upon him for the amount at five months, The learned Judge found that the plaintiffs knew of and assented to the arrangement between T. and W.; and that W. then assumed T.'s debts, and thus became the principal debtor. In an action by the plaintiffs against T, as maker of the last of the composition notes given to them :-Held, that the plaintiffs had discharged the defendant by the time given. And, semble, that the plaintiffs would also, by consenting to the release of the mort gages, as above mentioned, have discharged T. to the extent to which he was thereby prejudiced. Bailey v. Griffith, 40 U. C. R. 418.

Promissory Note—Acceptance—Reservation of Rights.]—The holder of a note, to which one of the defendants was a surety, accepted a new note from the principals without his knowledge or consent, on the understanding that he would not proceed on the original note, which he retained, unless the fresh note was not paid at maturity:—Held, that the surety was discharged, and that there was no reservation of the remedy against him. Shepley v. Hurd, 3 A. R. 549.

Surety Becoming Principal — Taking Bond from Original Debtor—Co-sureties,1—W. G. being indebted to H. & H.; C. G., B., and plaintiff (C.) in 1847 entered into a bond to secure the debt, which bond becoming due was forfeited. Plaintiff gave his bond to H., who held the claim of H. & H., to secure the debt; he in 1852, after payment of the first instalment, took from W. G. his bond to Secure the same debt. Upon an action brought against B., one of the original co-sureties:—Held, on demurrer to the plea, that by the payment of the original debt the plaintiff had put himself in the position of principal debtor, and the taking the bond operated to the prejudice of his co-sureties, inasmuch as he could not, at any moment, be put in motion against the original debtor; and that therefore the co-sureties were released. Cameron v. Boulton, 9 C. P. 537.

Upon the trial of the last case:—Held, that the facts as proved did not substantiate the equitable plea, for the plaintiff had not satisfied the bond of 1847, so as to place himself in the position of H., and notwithstanding the taking the bond of 1852 from W. G., had not given time to the principal without the assent of the surety, and that he was therefore entitled to contribution from the defendant as co-surety, S. C., 12 C. P. 570.

Void Settlement — Voluntary Grantec.]
— Where a debior makes a voluntary settlement under circumstances that render it void as against creditors, the grantee is not entitled, as being in effect a surety for the debt, to hold the property exonerated from the debt, to consequence of time being given to the debtor, or of any like transaction that would free a surety from his liability in ordinary cases of suretyship. King v. Keating, 12 Gr.
29.

5. Laches, Neglect, or Misconduct of Obligee.

(a) Contracts as to Officers, Servants, and Agents.

Bank Cashier — Neglect to Examine Books, —In an artion against the sureties under a bond guaranteeing the honesty of one M. as cashier of the plaintiffs bank, charging manner of the partial of the part Clerk — Default—Retention.]—Where to an action on a bond against the sureties of a clerk for embezzlement. &c., the sureties pleaded that the plaintiff was damnified of his own wong in allowing the clerk to remain in his office after he had become aware of the fraud: —Held, that, though the fraud of the clerk was known to plaintiff long before he dismissed him, still, as this knowledge could only apply to the moneys taken after such knowledge had been acquired, the plaintiff should have had a verdict for something, and that the verdict for defendants should be set aside. MeDonald v. May, 5 U. C. R. 68.

sion.]—A guarantee policy insuring the honesty of W., an employee, was granted upon the express conditions: (1) that the answers contained in the application contained a true statement of the manner in which the business was conducted and accounts kept, and that they would be so kept; and (2) that the employers should, immediately upon its becoming known to them, give notice of the guarantors that the employers and for which a claim was liable to be made under the policy. There was a defalcation in W.'s accounts, and the evidence shewed that no proper supervision had been exercised over his books, and the guarantors were not notified until a week after the employers had full knowledge of the defalcation, and W. had left the country:—Held, that, as the employers had full knowledge of the defalcation, and the mediate of the country in the defalcation, and the model of the defalcation, they were not entitled to recover under the policy. Harbour Commissioners of Montreal v. Guarantee Co. of North America, 22 S. C II. 542.

Insurance Agent — Collections—Refusal to Receive, — Declaration against a surety on a bond, conditioned that one L., the plaintiffs agent, should, whenever requested, pay over alleging various sums expected in the reconstruction of the control of Municipal Collector—Veglect to Deliver Roll to.]—In an action on a bond given to T., the plaintiff, describing him as treasurer of the municipality of Fergus, for the performance by defendant P. of his duties as collector—It than the neglect of the clerk to deliver to P. the roll before the 1st October, as directed by 16 Vict. c. 182, s. 39, formed no defence for the suretice. Todd v. Perry, 20 U. C. R. 649.

Non-disclosure of Defaults.]—In an action by a municipal corporation against the sureties to the bonds of a defaulting collector of taxes, for the due performance of his duties for 1886 and 1887, it appeared that there had been great laxity on the plaintiffs' part, but that, shortly before the collector absconded, in 1888, a majority of the members of the corporation had confidence in his honesty; while the defendants had not sought information from the plaintiffs as to the way he had performed his duties in former years;—Held, that the non-disclosure by the plaintiffs to the defendants of a motion having been made in council in 1885 that if the roll for 1884 was not returned by the next meeting, an inquiry before the county court Judge would be asked for; or of a resolution in August, 1885, instructing the treasurer to take proceedings against the collector and his sureties for the balance due on the 1884 roll unless fully settled before 10th September next, which it was; or of another like resolution in 1886, in reference to the taxes of 1885, which were afterwards, in 1888, paid over in full by him, and of the non-return by him of the 1885 roll until 1888—were not such non-disclosures as amounted to constructive fraud on the plaintiffs' part sufficient to relieve the defendants from liability on their bonds. Township of Adjala v. McElrox, 9 O, R. 580, specially considered. Town of Meaford v. Lang, 20 O. R. 42, 541.

Municipal Treasurer — Demand — Appointment, 1 — A treasurer having been duly appointed for three counties (while united), upon the separation of one from the other two counties:—Held, that a new appointment was not necessary under C. S. U. C. c. 54. An action being brought by a corporation against the sureties of their treasurer, defendants contended that because money which had been collected by the treasurer and fraudulently charged as paid by him was not demanded by the parties (the government) entitled thereto, they were not responsible therefor:—Held, that the liability of the treasurer was between the municipality and himself, he having received the money as their officer, and his responsibility was not altered by the government not demanding the money. County of Essex v. Park, 11 C. P. 473.

Neglect of Auditors.]—A surety to a municipal corporation for the due performance of the treasurer's duties is not relieved from his responsibility by the negligence of the auditors in passing the treasurer's accounts. County of Frontenae v. Breden, 17 Gr. 645.

——Permission to Mix Moncys.]—Mere negligence by the obligee in looking after the principal, in calling him to account, or in requiring him to pay over money, is no defence against either antecedent or subsequent liability of the surety. A township council tacify permitted the treasurer of the township to mix the township money with his own:—Held, that this conduct was wrong, but did not discharge the treasurer's sureties. Township of East Zorra v. Douglas, 17 Gr. 462.

Retention after Knowledge of Default—Liability for Subsequent Defaleations—Annual Reappointment.]—See Township of Adjala v. McElroy, 9 O. R. 580.

Postmaster — Default—Notice.] — The court stayed proceedings on a sci. fa., on a bond to the Queen, against a surety for the due performance of the duties of a post office by a deputy postmaster, as it appeared that when default was made he was in good circumstances, and the deputy postmaster-general had taken security from him for the amount of his default, the surety having had no notice of the default until three years after it had occurred, when the deputy postmaster had become insolvent. The Queen v. Bonter, 6 O. S. 551.

_____ Default—Notice—Neglect to Sue—Statute.]—To a sci. fa. against P. on a bond to the Crown, dated 5th June, 1865, in $2,000, conditioned that one W, should duly perform his duties as postmaster at C., and pay over to the postmaster-general all moneys, defendant pleaded that W. converted the moneys to his own use with the knowledge of the postmaster-general, but without defendant's knowledge; and that the postmaster-general did not inform defendant of W.'s default, but continued him in the office for three years, during which he frequently made default, and did not compel him to pay over each three months in pursuance of the statute, and was guilty of gross negligence in the matter, by reason whereof C. was in good conscience discharged. By C. S. U. C. c. 31, postmasters were required to give bonds for the faithful discharge of their duties required by law or which might be re quired by any instruction or general rule for the government of the department; the post master-general might appoint the periods at which they should render accounts, and if any postmaster should neglect or refuse, at the end of every such period the postmaster-general should cause a suit to be commenced against him: and a postmaster neglecting or refusing to account and pay over for a month after the time prescribed, was subject to a specified penalty. The Dominion Act of 1867, 31 Vict. c. 10, repeated these enactments, and the Audit Act of that year, c. 5, like C. S. U. C. c. 16, required all officers employed about the revenue to render accounts, and pay over at least once in three months. It appeared that W., on the 30th June, 1866, made default for two quarters, exceeding $900, which was notified to the inspector and afterwards settled. In December, 1866, he again made default for two quarters more, of which the inspector became aware in January, and there was a run-ning balance against him until April, 1869, when it exceeded $2,500; after that he paid up current collections and reduced the old debt. and a new bond was taken in 1870. Up to that time he had been constantly pressed for payment by the department, but not sued. The sureties were not informed of his default, and on one occasion, when he owed over $2,000, the inspector told him he must inform the sureties, but was dissuaded by him from doing There was never, however, any arrangement to give time, but a constant pressure for immediate settlement; and the surety was not shewn to have made inquiries on the subject; -Held, that, apart from the statutory provi sions above mentioned, there was no ground upon which the sureties, under 33 Hen. VIII. 39, s. 79, could claim to be relieved, and that these provisions imposed no obligation on the postmaster-general towards the surety. Held, also, that the plea was bad in law, as shewing no defence, and because the surety would at all events be liable for at least one quarter's default, which would entitle the Crown to judgment. Phillips v. Foxall, L. R. 7 Q. B. 666, and Burgess v. Eve, L. R. 13 Eq. 450. throw a new light on transactions of the kind referred to, and the decision might have been different if these cases had been before the court at the time of the argument. The Queen v. Pringle, 32 U. C. R. 308.

School Treasurer—Terms of Guarantee—Fadure to Comply with—Audit |-A-ction on a guarantee policy for loss sustained by the plaintiffs through the default of one D., their secretary-treasurer. The guarantee proposal contained certain statements which were made to form part of the contract, one of which was that D.'s books would be balanced and closed at the end of each year, and that the cash and securities at plaintiffs' credit at each balancing time would be examined and verified by ing time would be examined and vertices the auditors as required by the statute:—

Held, under R. S. O. 1877 c. 204, s. 87, s.-s. 7, and c. 205, s. 3, Paris not being an incorporated town withdrawn from the county, that the audit should have been made by the county auditors, and not, as here, by the town auditors; and also that the evidence, set out in the report, shewed that there was no audit in fact, and that therefore the terms of the guarantee had not been complied with. Another statement contained in the guarantee proposal was, that all moneys would be drawn out of the bank where they were deposited, only by the board of education. The course pursued was for the chairman and D., the secretary, to sign orders addressed to D., as such secretary, directing him to pay bearer so much money, and specifying the service for which it was payable. D. then drew his own cheques for the amounts without their being countersigned by any of the board, and without attaching the order thereto; consequently there was nothing to prevent D. drawing, as he did, moneys for his own purposes :-Held, that the terms of the guarantee in this respect also had not been complied with, and that the plaintiffs could not recover. Paris Board of Education v. Citizens Insurance and Investment Co., 30 C. P. 132.

(b) Other Cases,

Bank Customer-Collateral Securities-Prejudicial Dealing with by Bank.]—K. & Co. were customers of the plaintiffs and gradually incurred a liability of about $26,000, to secure which the defendants gave a mortgage containing a recital that the plaintiffs had agreed to make further advances to K. & Co. on receiving security for the then present in-debtedness, and a redemption clause providing for payment of all bills, notes, and paper upon which K, & Co. were then liable, together with all substitutions and alterations thereof, and all indebtedness in respect thereof, the same being a continuing security. The bank did all indebtedness in respect thereof, the same being a continuing security. The bank did business with K. & Co. in two different ways, one by discounting K. & Co.'s customers' notes, in which case their rule was to notify the cus-tomers that they held their notes, and another by discounting K. & Co.'s own notes and tak-ing their customers' notes as collateral, in which case they always got the collateral notes to an amount exceeding the advance, but did not notify the customers. At the time the mortgage was given, all the notes held by the bank were believed to be genuine, and the dis-count of the customers' paper very largely ex-ceeded the discount of K. & Co.'s notes. K. & Co. suspended two years later. At the time & Co. suspended two years later. At the time of the suspension it was discovered that by renewals and substitutions nearly all the notes at the date of the mortgage had been replaced by K. & Co., in renewals and substitutions by forgeries, and that the amount of the discounts of K. & Co,'s notes secured by the collaterals very largely exceeded the discounts of the customers' notes. In an action by the bank to foreclose the mortgage, the mortgagors claimed that they, as sureties, were discharged by the bank's action :- Held, that the bank parted with genuine and received fabricated securities, and through its laches or default necessarily worked prejudice upon the rights of the sureties; that of two innocent parties of whom one must suffer on account of the fraud or crime of a third, the one most to blame by combling the wrong to be committed should bear the loss, and the defendants were exonerated from liability in so far as they were prejudiced by the conduct of the bank. Primā iacie the bank were liable to the extent of the face value of the securities surrendered, but they were at liberty to reduce such amount by evidence as they might be advised. Merchants Bank of Canada v. McKay, 12 O. R. 498, 15 S. C. R. 672.

— Notice to Surctice—Solicitor—Dual Capacity, 1—Defendants were maker and indozer respectively of a note for the accommodation they having knowledge of the facts. On the maturity of the note, plaintiffs handed it to D., who was their solicitor, for protest. D. did not protest or notify the defendants of its dishonour, but delivered it to them, adding that he had paid it. About three months after its maturity D, absconded in insolvent circumstances, and after that defendants were for the first time notified of the non-payment of the note. In an action against defendants on the note, they pleaded on equitable grounds the above facts, and that by the lackes of the plaintiffs they were prevented from obtaining indemnity from D, and that if compelled to pay the note they would be defrauded out of the amount:—Held, a good defence, and that defendants were discharged. Canadian Bank of Commerce v. Green, 45 U. C. R. S1.

Execution Debtor—Neglect to Seize.]—
The mere fact of a creditor abstaining from seizing under execution against the principal his interest as partner in the stock in trade, does not of itself furnish a ground for suspensing execution against the surety; and the surety cannot claim that the creditor shall forbear against him until the exact value of such interest is ascertained. Cunningham v. Buchanan, 10 Gr. 523.

Mortgagor—Neglect to sell.]—Declaration on a bond by A. and B. conditioned for the payment by A. of £100 and interest. Plea, on equitable grounds, by B., that, on the execution of the bond. A. mortgaged certain lands to the plaintiff to secure the same money; that B. gave the bond as surety only; and it was agreed that the said mortgaged premises should be first sold before B. should be called upon; that said lands had not been sold, and until such sale, he, B., was in equity discharged from all liability in this action on the bond:—Held, on demurrer, plea bad, as affording ground at the most for a temporary injunction only, until the sale of the mortgaged premises. Monsell v. Mitchell, 23 U. C. R. 116.

It cannot be asserted as a proposition of law that wherever a creditor takes a mort-case from a principal debtor with power of sale, accompanied by the personal obligation of a surety, it becomes an imperative duty imposed upon the mortgage creditor, upon the request of the surety, at any time to sell the mortgaged property upon any default committed, at the peril, if he does not do so, of lossing the benefit of the contract of suretyship in law; and held, that if defendant intended to rely upon an express agreement to this effect, the evidence set out in this case would not sustain such contention. Bank of Montreal v. Davy, 21 C. P. 179.

Purchaser of Land — Non-payment Caused by Conduct of Obligee.]—To an ac-tion on a bond whereby defendant became bound to pay to the plaintiffs $400, as soon as the patent for certain land should issue, and in case one W. G. should make default in the payment of the said sum, the defendant the payment of the said sum, the detendant pleaded, on equitable grounds, that the only consideration for the bond, though not stated in it, was that W. G. being the purchaser of the said land, and having paid part of the purchase money, the receipt, through some mistake, was made as if the payment had been made jointly by W. G. and one J. G., the then husband of the female plaintiff, whose name became inserted in the Crown lands office in connection with the lot, creating difficulty which for some time prevented W. G. obtaining the patent; that J. G. having subsequently died, and the female plaintiff subsequently died, and the female plaintiff, the having intermarried with the co-plaintiff, the plaintiffs agreed that if the defendant would execute the bond, neither they nor J. G.'s children would do anything to prevent, but would do all in their power to assist, the is-sue of the patent to W. G.; but that, never-theless, the plaintiffs and the children opposed the issuing of the patent to W. G., both be-fore the court of chancery and before the heir and devisee commission, whereby the de-fendant became discharged from his obligarenunt became discharged from its objection:—Held, a good defence in equity, for it shewed that the plaintiffs' conduct was the cause of the defendant's non-performance, and that there was a total failure of consideration; and, although the alleged considera-tion was not stated in the bond, it was in no way inconsistent with or repugnant to it, and if so stated would have been a good defence at law. Steen v. Swalwell, 25 C. P. 356.

—Purchaser of Tolls—Non-payment—Neglect of Obliget to Fulfal Contract, 1— Declaration against defendant as surety on a bond for the payment of the purchase money of certain tolls. Plea, that at the execution of the bond there was attached thereto a handhill shewing certain privileges to be received by the principal as set forth in the said plea, but which he did not receive by reason of omissions on the plaintiffs part:—Held, baf, as not a defence sufficient to relieve defendant from the condition of his bond. County of Middleces v. Peters, 9 C. P. 205.

6. Non-Disclosure or Misrepresentation of Material Facts.

Concealment—Intent.]—A person about to become surety for another should be informed of all circumstances which may affect his suretyship, and if they are intentionally concealed by the party for whose benefit the security is given, the surety may have the bond delivered up to be cancelled. Cashin v. Perth, 7 Gr. 340.

Information—Duty—Inquiry.]—A creditor is not bound to send the surety information as to the position of his principal. If the principal's statements or credit are doubted, the surety should inquire into them, and the very fact that a guarantee is called for by the creditor should put the surety on the alert. Cunningham v, Buchanan, 10 Gr. 523.

 ground of having become surety in ignorance of material facts, unless he can shew that information was fraudulently withheld from him, Township of East Zorra v. Douglas, 17 Gr. 462.

The court, being of opinion upon the evidence that most of the facts relied on as proving misconduct of the principal were known to the sureties, and that no information had been withheld from them fraudulently:
—Held, that the bond given by the sureties was valid. Peers v. Corporation of Oxford, 17 Gr. 472.

Municipal Treasurer - Audit-Represcatations.]—The treasurer of a county for a number of years embezzled county funds and by manipulation of his books deceived the county auditors, who from year to year reported in good faith that his accounts were correct, and the council in good faith adopted the reports. At a time when in fact there was default to a large amount, the defendant, who was a ratepayer resident in the county and a relative of the treasurer, became at his request one of his sureties, and at the time was told in good faith by a member of the council and some of the county officials that the treasurer's accounts were correct -Held, that the auditors' reports so adopted by the council were not implied representations by the council, the incorrectness of which discharged the defendant. Held, also, that the statements made by the member of the council and the county officials did not bind the council, and that, even if they did, having been made in good faith, they formed no defence. County of Simcoe v. Burton, 25 A. R. 478.

Reappointment of Agent Annually New Bond—Default in Previous Year.]—W. was appointed agent of a company in 1891 to sell its goods on commission, and gave a bond with sureties for the faithful discharge of his duties. His appointment was renewed year after year, a new bond with the same sureties being given to the company on each renewal. His agreement with the company only auth-His agreement with the company only authorized W. to sell for eash, but at the end of each season he was in arrear in his remittances, which he attributed to slow collections, and settled by giving an indorsed note, retiring the same before the bond for the next year was executed. After the season of 1834 he according discovered that W had of 1894 the company discovered that W. had collected moneys of which he had made no return, and brought an action to recover the same from the sureties:—Held, reversing the decision in 22 A. R. 681, that each year there was an employment of W., distinct from, and independent of, those of previous years; that the position of the sureties on reappointment was the same as if other persons had signed the bond of the preceding year; and that the company were under no obligation, on taking a new bond, to inform the sureties that W. had not punctually performed his undertakings in respect of previous employment, nor did the non-disclosure imply a representation to the sureties when they signed a new bond that they had been punctually performed. Niagara District Fruit Growers' Stock Co. v. Walker, 26 S. C. R. 629.

Secretary of Company — Default in Previous Employment.]—To an action on a guarantee policy for the due performance of B.'s duties as plaintiff's secretary, alleging default in paying over moneys, defendants pleaded that the plaintiffs, in order to induce defendants to enter into the contract, represented and warranted to defendants certain facts material to be known to them, as follows: that the said B, had never been in arrear or default in his accounts; yet the said B, had prior thereto been in arrear and default in his accounts while in the employment of the contract of the contr

Stipulation in Contract - Mistatements.]—By a contract in writing, made in 1890, the defendants agreed to guarantee the plaintiffs against pecuniary loss by reason of fraud or dishonesty on the part of an employee during one year from the date of the contract, or during any year thereafter in respect of which the defendants should consent cept the premium which was the consideration for the contract. The defendants accepted the premium in respect of each of the three following years, and gave receipts intituled "re newal receipts," in which the premiums were referred to as "renewal premiums:"—Held, that the contract was a contract of insurance made or renewed after the commencement of the Ontario Insurance Corporations Act, 1882, within the meaning of s. 33. Held, also, that, upon the true construction of s.-s. (2), the contract could not be avoided by reason of misstatements in the application therefor, because a stipulation on the face of the contract providing for the avoidance thereof for such misstatements was not, in stated terms, limited to cases in which such misstatements were material to the contract. Village of London West v. London Guarantee and Accident Co., 26 O. R. 520.

7. Other Grounds.

Agent's Bond—Execution before Appointment — Repudiation.]—The defendants executed a bond as sureties for one K., which recited his appointment as agent for the plaintiffs. The bond was sent, executed, to the head office of the plaintiffs, but no appointment was, in fact, made by them for a year and a half afterwards, when K. was notified of his appointment, but of this the defendants were not informed. About three months after the execution of the bond, the defendants are one of them, wrote to plaintiffs were not informed. About three months after the execution of the bond, the defendants or one of them, wrote to plaintiff were not play:—Held, that, whether the plaintiffs were notified by one or both defendants, the latter were discharged. No appointment having been made in fact when the bond was executed, the defendants could not be held liable for defaults occurring months afterwards, for their contract was in respect of a present, not a future, engagement. North British Mercantile Ins. Co., K. ean, 16 0, R. 117.

Change in Contract.]—The changing of a contract by an award, even though for the surety's benefit, without his consent, would release him from hability thereon. Titus v. Durkee, 12 C. P. 367.

Change in Principal's Circumstances—Error.]—The fact of the treasurer of a county having become reduced in his circumstances after the auditing and passing of his accounts and before the discovery of an error in them, is no bar to a suit against the surety. County of Frontenac v. Breden, 17 Gr. 645.

Company—Resolution—Effect of,1—Where an action at law had been brought by a building seciety ggainst W, as surety for the secretary of the society; and W, filed a bill to restrain the action, founding his equity on a resolution or minute alleged to have been passed or made by the board of directors in the following terms: "That Mr. W, had requested that his security for the secretary might be cancelled. It was suggested also, that Mr. R. W,'s name should be erased from the said bond by wish of the board, and both be relieved as securities. Mr. T. was requested to submit two other names as securities in place of the two gentlemen named:"—Held, that such a resolution afforded no ground for interfering with the action at law. Whittemore v, Ridout, 2 Gr. 525.

Discharge of Independent Co-surety

-- Contribution.]—The C. company and D. by separate independent contracts guaranteed to the plaintiffs the good conduct in office of B., their city chamberlain, who afterwards was guilty of misconduct within the guarantees. The guarantee of the C. company contained a proviso that as against every person then befor the said B. as aforesaid, the C. company should have and possess the right of ratable contribution, and all other the rights and remedies, both legal and equitable, of co-sureties, The scope of D.'s guarantee included and was more extensive than that of the guarantee of more extensive than that of the guntance of the C. company. The plaintiffs now sued the C. company on their guarantee, who, as a de-fence, set up that the plaintiffs had disfence, set up that the plaintiffs had dis-charged D. from liability under his policy, and that this also discharged them :-Held that, even if the plaintiffs had so discharged D., this operated only to release the C. Company to the extent to which they would have had a right of contribution from D., and that they would have been discharged to this extent as a matter of equity, independently of their contract. The C. company and D. could not be considered in any sense joint contrac-tors or joint sureties. Ward v. National Bank of New Zealand, 8 App. Cas. 755, followed. City of London v. Citizens Ins. Co., 13 O. R.

Discharge of one Surety.] — Where separate actions are brought against two sureties, the discharge of one does not operate as a discharge of the other.

Burnell v. Edison, M. T. 3 Viet,

Discharge of Principal—Action.]—A division court bailiff and his sureties having been joined in one action:—Held, that the recovery must be against all or none; and that the discharge of the principal for want of notice of action involved that of the sureties. Pearson v, Ruttan, 15 C. P. 79.

Mortgage — Additional Security.]—The plaintiff, who was an indorser on a note made by one McF, to a bank, shortly after the making thereof, made a mortgage to the bank, which was stated in terms to be an additional security for the payment of the note and any renewal or renewals thereof. Subsequently the bank discharged the principal debtor:—Held, that the position of the surety was not changed by the making of the mortgage. Cumming v. Bank of Montreal, 15 Gr. 686.

Mortgage by Co-surety.]—The plaintiff sued defendants, H., M., and S., as joint makers of a note, H. and M. did not appear, and judgment was signed by mistake against all, but afterwards set aside as against S., who pleaded a mortgage given for the same money by M., M. and S. being sureties for H.:—Held, that the giving such mortgage did not in itself discharge S., the other surety. Kerr v. Hereford, IT U. C. R. 152

Municipal Corporation — Destruction of Bond—Relief of Surety—Discovery of Default.]—One of the sureties for a county treasurer being desirous of being relieved, the treasurer offered another in his place; and the council thereupon passed a resolution approving of the new surety, and declaring that, on the completion of the necessary bonds, the withdrawing surety should be relieved. No further act took place by the council, but the treasurer and his new surety (omitting the second surety) joined in a bond conditioned for the due performance of the treasurer secuted a mortgage to the same effect. The clerk on receiving these gave up to the treasurer the old bond, which the treasurer destroyed. Eight years afterwards a false charge was discovered in the accounts of the treasurer, of a date prior to these transactions:—Held, that the sureties on the first bond were responsible for it. County of Frontenac v. Breden, 17 Gr. 645.

— Liability to Crown—Railway Bonus—Statutory Release.] — Where a township municipality advanced a large sum of money to a railway company under the provisions of the consolidated Municipal Loan Fund Act, and some of the stockholders of the company were afterwards released from their liability by an Act of the legislature passed nearly eighteen months after the works on the road were stopped for want of funds, and new companies were formed under that and subsequent Acts of the legislature, which released the new corporations from the construction of the original line of road, until a new line had been constructed, and it appeared that there was no immediate prospect of such a result:—Held, that the municipality were not released from their liability to the Crown. Armstrong v. Forster, 6 O. R. 129.

S. Reservation of Rights and Remedies.

Agreement—Abandonment before Breach—bond, conditioned for the performance by one D, of his agreement under seal to construct a railway for plaintiffs, to be completed by the l5th February, 1871, or within such further time as might be allowed. Second breach, failure to complete within the extension of time allowed. Equitable plea, that during the extension of time the plaintiffs, with D.'s consent, agreed in writing with one E. that E. should complete the contract between D. and the plaintiffs, with such changes as the plaintiffs and E. should agree upon: and thereupon D. abandoned the contract, before any breach thereof, and left the works, which E. took possession of. Replication, that by the agreement with E. it was expressly stipulated that all the plaintiffs' rights and remedies against D. and defendant as his surety, for the non-performance of D.'s contract, should be reserved:—Held, replication bad; for, the contract with D. being abandoned before breach, there could be no remedies upon it to reserve. Held, also, no objection, in equity, that the new agreement with E. was not under seal, Port Whitby and Port Perry R. W. Co. v. Dumble, 32 U. C. R. 30.

— Pleading.]—A replication that when the time complained of was given it was expressly understood and agreed that the plaintiffs should reserve all their rights against the acceptor:—Held, good. Bank of Upper Canada v., Jardine, 9 C. P. 332.

Composition Deed—Express Reservation. |- The acceptance by a creditor of part of his demand against his debtor, and agreeing not to sue him, with a reservation of the creditor's rights against a surety of such debtor, will not discharge the surety. Where, therefore, the holders of a bill received from the acceptor a composition of the debt, and executed a deed to that effect, but expressly reserved their rights against the drawer:—Held, that the drawer was not discharged. Wood v.
Brett, 9 Gr. 452.

Covenant not to Sue — Assignment for Creditors.]—A covenant not to sue entered into by a creditor with the principal debtor, without the surety's consent, but reserving all remedies by the creditor against others, does not discharge such surety. An assignment by the principal for the benefit of creditors generally, which contains a clause reserving all rights and remedies against third parties, but releasing the assignor from his liability, operates only as a covenant not to sue, and not as a release. Hall v. Thompson, 9 C. P. 257.

Discharge of Principal and Co-surety Intention to Reserve Rights — Parol Evidence. |-A county treasurer having become a defaulter, actions were commenced against him and his two sureties respectively. Afterwards the warden, with the consent of the council. settled with the treasurer, and took his confession of judgment for £1,000 and a confession from one of his sureties for a like amount, together equal to the defalcation then ascertained, and released the actions; the second surety taking no part in this arrangement. Afterwards a further defalcation was discovered, and the council proceeded against the surety and obtained judgment for £1,000. The court granted a perpetual injunction to restrain such action, although the warden and the attorney of the council swore that their rights as against the second surety were intended to have been reserved. Baby v. Counties of Kent, Essex, and Lambton, 5 Gr. 232.

Judgment — Release of Principal.]—The payee of a note indorsed for the accommodation of the maker, having obtained judgment against the maker and indorser, released the maker, reserving all his rights against the indorser;—Held, that he was entitled to do so, and might still enforce the judgment against the indorser, Bell v. Manning, 11 Gr. 142.

Mortgage - Merger of Note-Parol Evidence of Reservation.]-B., to the plaintiff's knowledge when he became the holder thereof indorsed a promissory note for $1.400, dated 7th November, 1876, payable four months after date, as surety for H., the maker. On 3rd February, 1877, before the maturity of the note, the plaintiff, without B.'s knowledge, accepted a chattel mortgage for the amount secured by the note and for some additional items, with a proviso for redemption on 3rd February, 1878, with interest at ten per cent., and with the usual covenants for payment. The mortgage did not on its face refer to the note, but it was proved that it was the understanding between the plaintiff and H. that it was to be received as collateral security only, and not to affect the plaintiff's remedy on the note :--Held, that B., the surety, was not discharged; that the mortgage did not operate as a merger of the note, not being by the same parties and for the same debt as the note; and that the reservation of the remedy on the note, notwithstanding the giving of time by the mortgage, might be shewn by parol evidence, without appearing on the face of the mortgage. Quære, whether the taking of a specialty security from one of two joint debtors, on a currity from one of two joint debtors, on a simple contract, will operate as a merger; and whether Loomis v. Ballard, 7 U. C. R. 366, can be followed since Sharpe v. Gibbs, 16 C. B. N. S. 527, and Boaler v. Mayor, 19 C. B. N. S. 76. Currie v. Hodgins, 42 U. C. R. 601.

Parol Evidence of Agreement.]—Where a creditor gives his debtor an extension of time for payment, a formal agreement is not required to reserve his rights against a surety, but such reservation may be made out from what took place when the extension was given. Wyke v. Rogers, 1 DeG. M. & G. 498, followed. Gorman v. Dixon, 26 S. C. R. 87.

Release of one Surety — Warranty,]—Where a creditor has released one of several sureties, with a reservation of his recourse against the others, and a stipulation against warranty as to claims they might have against the surety so released by reason of the exercise of such resources reserved, the creditor has not thereby rendered himself liable in an action of warranty by the other sureties, Macdonald v. Whitfield, Whitfield v. Merchants Bank of Canada, 27 S. C. R. 94.

Release of Principal — Independent Agreement Reserving Rights.)—The plaintift, who was indorser of a note made by one McF. to a bank, shortly after the making thereof, made a mortgage to the bank, which was stated in terms to be an additional security for the payment of the note and any renewal or renewals thereof. Subsequently the bank absolutely discharged the principal debtor:—Held, (1) that the position of the surety was not changed by the making of the mortgage; (2) that the surety was discharged, although it was shewn that, by agreement between the principal debtor and the bank, not incorporated in the release, the surety was to be still held liable. Cumming v. Bank of Montreal, 15 Gr. 686.

A creditor by mistake executed an absolute release to his debtor, but the agreement was that the creditor's right against a surety should be reserved:—Held, that the surety was not discharged, and that the creditor was entitled to a decree in equity to that effect. Bank of Montreal v, McPaul, 17 Gr. 234.

III. LIABILITY OF SURETY.

1. For Fidelity and Honesty of Persons.

Assignee in Insolvency — Change in Character—Continuance of Liabitity,1—Held, that where an official assignee in insolvency had given a bond as such, with sureties, pursuant to the Insolvent Act of 1875, and amending Acts, and the creditors had duly appointed the same individual to be creditors' assignee, under s, 29 of that Act, but had not required him to give security as such creditors' assignee, the sureties under the bond given by him as official assignee remained liable for his dealings with the estate, and were not discharged by reason of such appointment as creditors' assignee. Armstrong v. Forster, 6 O. R. 129.

Bank Agent—Covenant—Disobedience of Orders—Dunages—Loss,]—Plaintiffs sued on a covenant by defendant that one G. should perform an agreement, by which G. stipulated while in the plaintiffs employ to obey their lawful commands, and to make good any loss they might suffer by his neglect, &c.; allesting as a brorach that G. discounted certain worthless drafts drawn by one D. on one H., contrary to the lawful orders of the plaintiffs inspector. Defendant pleaded, on equitable grounds, in substance, that D. and H. were already indebted to the plaintiffs with their sametjon, and it was to lessen their liability that the drafts in question were discounted, to renew the then existing drafts, of which they paid part, so that no money was lent to them, and the plaintiffs lost nothing, but in fact gained, by the discounts in question:—Held, no defence, for the covenant was not one of indemnity, but that G. should keep his agreement; and nominal damages were recoverable for a breach, though unattended with any loss. Royat Canadian Bank v. Goodman, 29 U. C. R. 574.

Bank Cashier—Guarantee Policy—Notice to fuaranteer, 1— The policy sued on, guaranteeing to the extent of $20,000 the honesty and care of one W, while in the plaintiffs' employment as eashier, contained a condition that it should be void on the neglect of the plaintiffs to make known to the directors of the defendants in Canada any act or omission of W. discovered by them, giving a claim under it. In declaring on this policy, the plaintiffs alleged that while in their employment a sum exceeding $20,000 was intrusted to W., to be safely kept in the safe at their head office, of which $10,000 was lost owing to his headignee in regard to its custody; and they alleged as an excuse for not giving the notice, that the defendants had ceased to have or appoint directors in Canada. Defendants pleaded that before the alleged neglect of W., they had ceased to carry on business or have directors in Canada, and had appointed one R. defendants of them, for the purpose of paying policies already of the purpose of paying policies already of which of policies already of which of policies already of which of policies already to the directors of the company in any way; —Held, on denurrer, that the plea was bad, for the defendants had by their own act deprived themselves of the benefit of the condition, and rendered compliance with it impossible; and they could not insist upon notice to R. Held, also, that the averment of W.'s neglect in the declaration was not too general; and that the excuse for non-compliance with the condition was sufficiently stated. Royal Canadian Bank v. European Assurance Society, 29 U. C. R. 579.

Collecting Agent — Appointment — Limited Time — Knowledge — Notice.] — M. having been employed by the plaintiff as a sub-agent in the collection of money, &c., the defendants rave the plaintiff as hond to secure him against loss through M. The bond recited the appointment of M., and was conditioned that if M. should, from time to time, and at a plaintiff a bond to secure the appointment of M., and was conditioned that if M. should, from time to time, and at a plaintiff a bond to secure the appointment of M. should, from time to time, and at a plaintiff the conditions of the should have been dependent when the should have been dependent was only till the 31st December, 1884, but the defendants were not aware when they executed the bond, nor at any time afterwards till the trial of this action, that M.'s appointment was for a limited time. M., by subsequent arrangement, continued to act as agent after the year 1884, and the only defaications committed by him were in November and December, 1886:—Held, notwithstanding the want of knowledge on the part of the sureties, that the appointment recited in the bond must be taken to have referred to the appointment made before its date; and that the creditor and the principal could not, by an arrangement made after the liability of the sureties was created, be allowed to extend that liability beyond the period which originally formed its limit. The words found in the condition which have contracted with a view to a case quent extension. A letter was written by one of the sureties, that the application of the plaintiff that from that date he withdrew from his surety-ship.—Held, that this could not estop the surety from denying his liability; and, even if it was to be read as shewing that the surety assented to the continuation of the employment of M., it was immaterial. Kitson v. Julien, 4 E. & B. SA4 and Sandeerson v. Aston, L. R. SEx, 73, followed. Wickens v.

Crown Officer—Defalcations of Deputy.]

—A., having been appointed collector of customs, gave a bond to Her Majesty, conditioned to discharge his duty as collector, and account for and pay over all moneys which should come into his hands. He having received written instructions that certain duties were to be performed by him alone:—Held, that having permitted the deputy collector rightfully to assume and perform such duties, he was responsible for defalcations of the deputy.

The Queen v. Stanton, 2 C. P. 18.

Default of Deputy - Other Remedies.]-The defendant M. was appointed an inspector under the General Inspection Act, 1874, 37 Vict. c. 45 (D.) By s. 6 each inspector and deputy-inspector is required to give security by bond to the Crown for the due performance of the duties of his office, and such bond shall avail to the Crown and to all persons aggrieved by any breach of the conditions thereof. By s. 7 the inspectors are to appoint the deputy-inspectors, who are to be the deputies of the inspector for all the duties of his office, and their official acts shall be held to be his acts, and he is to be responsible therefor as if done by himself. A bond was given by the inspector, and the other defendants as sureties, for the faithful discharge of the duties of the said office, and for duly accounting for all moneys and property. A similar bond was given by the deputy-inspec The deputy-inspector made a faulty inspection, and the plaintiffs purchased, ing thereon, and were damnified :- Held, under the statute and the bond given thereunder, that the defendant M.'s sureties were liable for the default of the deputy; and that the fact of the plaintiff having a remedy also on the deputy-inspector's bond was no answer to the claim against M.'s sureties. Held, also, that plaintiffs were " persons within the meaning of the statute. whether the defendants were entitled to notice of action, but the question was not decided, as want of notice was not pleaded. Section provided that disputes between the inspector and the deputy-inspectors and owners, &c., of articles inspected through or relating in any respect to the same, were to be settled by the board of trade, or where there was no such board, by certain specified persons: - Held, that the claim in this action was not a dispute within this section. Guardian of Infants - Improper Payment to Solicitor of.]-The testator by his will left money to his children, which was to be paid to them on their coming of age, and to be deposited by the executors in a savings bank in the meantime. One of the executors appropriated and set apart certain moneys of his testator to answer the trusts of the will, which moneys were afterwards paid by him to the solicitor of the guardian of the infants, who made default in payment over of the same, and the amount never reached the hands of the guardian:—Held, that the moneys by the act of setting apart had be-come, in the hands of the executor, im-pressed with the trusts of the will, and he could not properly pay the same to the guardian, nor could the guardian properly receive the amount; and, although the fund never reached the hands of the guardian so as to render her surety liable to make good the amount, yet under the circumstances the guardian was personally responsible for the money so paid to her solicitor, and a decree to that effect was pronounced with costs; though as against the surety the bill was dismissed with costs. Galbraith v. Duncombe, 28 Gr. 27.

Insurance Agent—Moneys Received before Execution of Bond.)—Upon a bond conditioned that J. should pay the plaintiffs monthly, while he should not as their agent, all moneys which he then had received, or which he should receive for premiums, &c., and should repay to the applicants all moneys which he had then received or should receive for insurances not accepted by plaintiffs, and should in all things well and faithfully conduct himself as their agent:—Held, that the sureties were liable only for moneys received after the execution of the bond. Canada West Farmers' Mutual and Stock Ins. Co. v. Merritt, 20 U. C. R. 444.

Municipal Treasurer-Extent of Sure-Liability.] - Plaintiffs declared on a bond, conditioned that W., their treasurer, should pay over all moneys received since the 1st January, 1866, averring that on that day he had in his hands a large sum, and received further sums up to the 6th April. 1868, when he was dismissed; and that he accounted for all moneys received before that day, but not for a large sum received since, Plea, alleging payment of all moneys since that day; and issue thereon. The case being referred. the arbitrator found that W. admitted $3,031 to be due by him on the 1st January, 1866; that he had accounted for all moneys received since; and that of all moneys received up to his dismissal, including the $3,031, the balance was $1,806 :- Held, that, as the breach was only in respect of moneys received since the 1st January, 1866, the plaintiffs upon this finding could recover Township of Rawdon v. Ward, 27 nothing. U. C. R. 609.

Request—Payment.]—The condition was, that a treasurer, his executors or administrators, at the expiration of his office, upon request to him or them made, should give a just account of all moneys received, and should pay and deliver over all balances due:—Held, that the words "upon request to him or them made" applied both to the giving an account and to the paying over. County of Bruce v. Cromar, 22 U. C. R. 321.

Postmaster—Larceny of Cheques—Forgery—Loss.]—The condition of a bond given by the defendants, as sureties for a postmaster, to the postmaster-general, was that the postmaster of an ota ad shall not commit any theft, larceny, robbery, or embezzlement of, or lose or destroy, or commit any malfeasance, misfeasance, or neglect of duty, from which may arise any theit, larceny, robbery, or embezzlement, loss or destruction of, any money, goods, chattels, valuables, or effects, or of any letter or parcel containing the same which may come into his custody or possession, as such postmaster, &c. The postmaster obened several letters which came into his possession as such postmaster, and having taken therefrom certain cheques, forged the payees' names as indorsers thereof, and got them cashed by a bank upon guaranteeing the genuineness of such indorsements. The drawers refused to recognize these cheques, but issued duplicates to the payees and paid them, so that the bank lost the money. In an action by the postmaster-general on the bond, on behalf of the bank's to recover from defendants, as such sureties, the loss so incurred:—Held, referring to ss. 37 and 78 of the Post Office Act of 1875, that defendants were not liable, for that the forgery and the postmaster's guarantee, and not the larceny, were the proximate causes of the loss, and the contents of the letters did not belong to the bank. Remarks as to form of the condition. Postmaster-General v. McColl, 31 C. P. 361.

Registrar of Deeds—Liability of Suretics.] — See County of Middlesex v. Smallman, 19 O. R. 349, 20 O. R. 487.

School Treasurer — Annual Reappointment.] — A sceretary-treasurer of a public school board was appointed for a year on giving the necessary security, which he did by bond with sureties, without any limit as to time or any reference to the period of his appointment. He was reappointed each year for several years in the same way and on the same condition, but without fresh security being taken, and subsequently became a defaulter in respect of moneys received by him during his last year's appointment:— Held, that the sureties were not liable for his defalcation. Waterford School Trustees v, Clarkson, 23 A. R. 213.

A., the secretary-treasurer of the school board, and scretary-treasurer of the school board, and B., as his surerly, gave a bond of office, reciting that A. had been appointed such scretary-treasurer, and that "It was required that security should be given for the due and faithful performance of any and all the duties pertaining to such office," and conditioned to "correctly and safely keep any and all moneys and papers belonging to the said school board, and to faithfully and honestly deliver up, account for, and pay over any moneys which at any time thereafter might come into his hands and possession as such scretary-treasurer," and A. received and made default in respect of certain moneys. made default in respect of certain moneys improperly paid to him as such secretary-treasurer:—Held, that the condition must treasurer: Held, that the condition must be read with reference to the recital, and its scope might be thereby restricted, and reading the two together B. was not liable for the moneys so received by A., which were outside the duties pertaining to his office, and should have been retained by the municipal corporation. B. having been informed by the school board that A. was in default, but not in respect of what moneys the default was made, as to which he made no inquiries, and having at the request of the school board given a mortgage to secure the liability which he was informed he had, by reason of such default, incurred as surety under the above bond, and having subsequently ascertained that the default was partly in respect of moneys improperly paid to A.:—Held, that B. was entitled to redeem on payment of the balance only of the moneys for which he was hold bable. he was held liable as surety, the mortgage Vol. III. p-181-32 having been executed under a mistake. 2. Other Cases.

Indemnity—Payment—Condition Precedent.]—The defendants, husband and wife, executed in favour of the plaintiff, the lusband's retiring partner, a bond conditioned to be void if the husband should save, defend, and keep harmless and fully indemnify the plaintiff from all loss, costs, charges, and damages and expenses which he might at any time sustain, or suffer, or be put to for or by reason of non-payment by the husband of the liabilities of the firm as the same became due, it being the intention and the plaintiff was thereby "indemnified or intended so to be from all and every liability of every nature and kind seever of the said firm." Judgments were recovered by creditors of the firm against them, and the plaintiff mow sued the defendants to recover the amount to pay these judgments, although he had not himself paid them:—Held, that he was entitled to have the judgments and costs paid, and the amounts necessary were for that purpose ordered to be paid into court by the defendants. Boyd v. Robinson, 20 O. R. 404.

Under a bond conditioned to be void if the person on whose behalf it is given "shall indemnify and save harmless (the obligee) from payment of all liability of every nature and kind whatsoever," a right of action against the sureties arises in favour of the obligee as soon as judgment is recovered against him on a claim coming within the security. Payment of such claim by him is not a condition precedent. Boyd v. Robinson, 20 O. R. 494, approved. A bond without a penalty may be good as a covenant or agreement. Mereburn v. Macketcan, 19 A. R. 729.

Payment of Money—Condition—Breach—Demand—Executors and Administrators.]
—It is a condition precedent to the liability of the sureties in a bond conditioned for the delivery up by the principal on demand of all moneys received and not paid out by him, that a personal demand of payment should be made on him. And where the principal in a bond so conditioned dies before any demand for payment is personally made on him, a demand on his personal representatives is insufficient to charge the sureties. Port Elgin Public School Board v. Eby. 26 O. R. 73.

Interext.]—The bond contained a stipulation that in the event of any sum being found due by M. to the bank, interest should be payable thereon from the time an account of the balance due was delivered to the parties to the bond by the bank, and judgment was given in the court below in excess of the penalty:—Held, however, as the law would not allow a verdiet against the obligors for a greater sum than the penalty, that interest could not be computed on that amount until after judgment. Eschange Bank of Canada v. Springer, Eschanger Bank of Canada v. Springer, Eschanger Promissory Note — Indorsement — Trust.]—A promissory note, for value received, at three months, was made by one of the defendants to the order of the testator and of the plaintiffs. Some years afterwards the maker conveyed his farm to his son, the other defendant, on an oral understanding, unknown to the payee, that the son was to pay the father's debts, including the note. After the conveyance, the payee having pressed the father for security, the son, without any indorsement of the note by the payee, wrote his name on the back of it, all parties supposing that he had thereby rendered himself liable as indorser. Subsequently he made a payment on account to the payee. In an action against father and son:—Held, that no liability attached to the son, either as indorser or guarantor, or as trustee of the property conveyed to him. Robertson v. Lonsddle, 21 O. R. 090.

Qualified Indorsement.]-D. dorsed two promissory notes, pour aval, at dorsed two promissory notes, with the words the same time marking them with the words 'not negotiable and given as security. notes were intended as security to the firm of A. & R. for advances to a third person on the publication of certain guide-books which were to be left in the hands of the firm as further security, the proceeds of sales to be applied towards reimbursement of the advances. It was also agreed that payment of the notes was not to be required while the books remained in the possession of the firm. The notes were protested for non-payremained in the possession of the ment, and, A. having died, R., as surviving partner of the firm and vested with all rights the notes, sued the maker and indorser jointly and severally for the full amount. At the time of the action some of the books were still in the possession of R., and it ap-peared that he had not rendered the indorser any statement of the financial situation between the principal debtor and the firm:-Held, that the action was not based upon the real contract between the parties, and that the plaintiff was not, under the circumstances, entitled to recover in an action upon the notes. Robertson v. Davis, 27 S. C. R.

Rent — Cesser of Term — Reneval of Lease.]—Action on defendant's covenant as surety of a lessee, under a lease of a mill for nine years from 15th December, 1868, at a yearly rent, payable half-yearly in advance on the 15th June and December in each year, alleging non-payment of three half-yearly instalments of the rent reserved. Plea, on equitable grounds, that defendant covenanted as sarety only: that by the lease it was agreed that in case of the total destruction of the mill by accidental fire, &c., the lease should at once cease and be at an end: that the lessee paid all rent due up to the total destruction of the premises by including the half-year's rent due on the 15th June, 1869; and that the premises were so destroyed on the 30th October, 1869, wherethe term ceased, and was at an end To this the plaintiff replied, that after such fire, the lessee, with the knowledge and approval of defendant, continued to hold and occupy, and still holds and occupies, premises under and by virtue of the lease, and, with the like knowledge and approval of the defendant, would not and did not put an end to the said term, or surrender said premises :- Held, plea good, for defendant's covenant, being restricted to the term, ceased with it; and that the replication was bad, as shewing at most the creation of a new ten-ancy, to which the covenant would not ex-tend. Taylor v. Hortop, 22 C. P. 542. Return of Goods—Request—Excuse.]—
In an action against a surety who stipulates for the return of certain goods on request, such request is not excused by alleging that when the plaintiff required the goods the principal was out of the Province. O'Neull v. Carler, 9 U. C. R. 254.

Securities - Assignment of - Right of Judgment Creditor to Call for.]-A judgment creditor coming in to redeem a mortgage incumbrancer is entitled, upon payment of the amount due to the mortgagee, to an assignment not only of the mortgaged premises, but of all collateral securities, whether the same be subject to the lien of the creditor under the judgment or not. Therefore, where judgment had been recovered and duly registered against a party who had a contin-gent interest in real and personal property, subject to a mortgage by way of security for advances, and the debtor had insured his life, and assigned the policy to the same person as an indemnity against loss in respect of a bond executed by him as surety for the deb-tor:—Held, that the judgment creditors of the mortgagor, upon paying the amount due under the mortgage and indemnifying the mortgagee in respect of his liability as surety, were entitled to a transfer of the policy of insurance, and also of the mortgage upon the contingent interest, and to foreclose the mortgage. Gilmour v. Cameron, 6 Gr. 290.

giving a bond for a deed. M. assigned to plaintiff's his interest in this bond, as also certain chattels, in security, but retained possession of the instruments. Subsequently M assigned absolutely the bond to C, to whom (with notice of the prior security) W. conveyed the premises, taking back a mortgage for unpaid purchase money, upon which W. filed a bill for foreclosure against C., making the plaintiffs and their co-partners in the business defendants as incumbrancers by reason of a registered judgment, but they omitted to set up any interest in the premises by reason of the security given to them by M., in which suit the bill was taken pro confesso, and a final order for foreclosure was obtained against all the other defendants. On a bill against W, seeking to redeem or that he should pay off the claim of the plaintiffs under the security from M .: - Held, that M. was a necessary party to the suit; and also, that W. had a right to pay them off their claims against M., and to call for an assignment of the other securities held by them for such claim, the amount of which M. was bound to pay to the plaintiffs or W., in case of his paying. McQuesten v. Winter, 10 Gr. 404.

IV. PAYMENTS, APPROPRIATION OF,

Absence of Appropriation by Principal.]—A surety has no right to complain of the appropriation of payments by the creditor, when the principal makes no appropriation of them, but leaves it to the creditor. Cunningham v. Buchannan, 10 Gr. 523.

Collateral Securities — Payments on— Bank—Interest—Overcharges.]—The plaintiffs were sureties to a bank for a debt due by a company, for which the bank held other notes as collaterals. Under a special agreement made in a prior suit, the receiver in such suit deposited the proceeds of such collaterals in such bank subject to the order of the court. The plaintiffs claimed to apply the proceeds so deposited to reduce the debt of the company, but the bank refused to apply them without an order of court :- Held, that the bank was constituted a stake-holder of such moneys, and could not so apply them unless with the sanction of the court. debt to the bank carried nine per cent., and in taking the accounts the plaintiff's claimed a refund of the interest beyond the lawful rate of seven per cent., on the ground that the agreement to pay nine per cent. was ultra vires:—Held, (1) that, as there was nothing in the pleadings or judgment impeaching the agreement, the master had no jurisdiction to adjudicate upon such claims; (2) that overcharges beyond the lawful rate interest if paid cannot be recovered back or applied in reduction of the debt claimed to be due. Hutton v. Federal Bank, 9 P. R. 568, Continuing Security-Imputation-Re-[serence.]—J. H. S., a local agent for an insurance company, collected premiums on policies secured through his agency, remitting moneys thus received to a branch office from time to time. On the 1st January, 1890, he was behind in his remittances to the amount of $1,250, and afterwards became further in arrears until, on the 15th October, 1890, one W. S. joined him in a note for the $1,250, for immediate discount by the com-pany, and executed a mortgage on his lands as collateral to the note and renewals that might be given, in which it was declared that payment of the note or renewals or any part thereof was to be considered as a payment upon the mortgage. The company charged J. H. S. with the balance then in arrears, which in-cluded the sum secured by the note and mortgage, and continued the account as before in their ledger, charging J. H. S. with pre-miums, &c., and the notes which they retired from time to time as they became due, and crediting moneys received from J. H. S. in the ordinary course of their business, the note and its various renewals being also credited in this general account for cash. W. S. died on 5th December, 1891, and afterwards the company accepted notes signed by J. H. S. alone for the full amount of his indebtedness, which had increased in the meantime, making debit and credit entries as previously in the same account. On the 31st July, 1893, J. H. S. owed on this account a balance of 81,925, which included $1,098 accrued since 1st January, 1890, and after he had been credited with general payments there re-mained due at the time of trial $1,099. The note which W. S. signed on 5th October, 1890, was payable four months after date with interest at 7 per cent, and the mortgage was expressed to be payable in four equal instalments of $312,500 each, with interest on unpaid principal:—Held, that the giving of the accommodation notes without reference ing debit and credit entries as previously accommodation notes without reference to the amount secured had not the effect of releasing the surety as being an extension of time granted without his consent and to his prejudice; that the renewal of notes secured by the collateral mortgage was prima facie an admission that, at the respective dates of renewal, at least the amounts mentioned therein were still due upon the security of the mortgage; that, in the absence of evidence of such intention, it could not be assumed that the deferred payments in the mortgage were to be expedited so as to be eo instanti extinguished by entries of credit in the zeneral account, which included the debt secured by the mortgage; and that, there being some evidence that the moneys credited in the general account represented premiums of insurance which did not belong to the debtor, but were merely collected by him and remitted for policies issued through his agency, the rule in Clayton's case as to the appropriation of the earlier items of credit towards the extinguishment of the earlier items of debit in the general account would not apply, and there should have been a reference to take the account. Agricultural Ins. Co. v. Sargeant, 28. C. R. 29.

Defalcations of Agent—Application of Moneys of Estate—Interest.]—Soon after B.'s defalcations were discovered he died, and after his death his executrix handed over certain of his property to a trustee, who was also an officer of the plaintiffs, to realize and apply the money therefrom towards satisfying the plaintiffs' claim in respect of B.'s defalcations, but without indicating to what part of such defalcations it should be applied. trustee applied it towards satisfaction of the earlier of B.'s liabilities, in respect to which the defendants (sureties for B.) were not liable, since by a condition of their policy they were not liable except for losses occurring within a year before notice of claim made to them: -Held, that the case was similar to payment made by a debtor to a creditor without express appropriation, in which case the creditor could appropriate it, and the defendants had no right to complain the appropriation made in this case, Held, also, that the defendants should pay interest on the amount due from them, from three months after the proofs of loss were delivered. City of London v. Citizens' Ins. Co., 13 O. R. 713.

Dividend on Debt—Judgment—Declaration of Right.]—The plaintiff indorsed a note in the defendants favour as security for part of a larger debt due to them for work done on their debtor's property. The note was discounted by the defendants and was dishonoured, and the holders obtained a judgment against the plaintiff, which remained unpaid. Subsequently the defendants received in mechanics' lien proceedings a dividend of eighty-one cents on the dollar on their whole debt, including the portion secured by the note:—Held, that they were not bound to apply the dividend first in satisfaction of the secured portion of their debt, nor entitled to apply it first in satisfaction of the unsecured portion, but were bound to apply it pro rată on each part of the debt. Held, also, that the plaintiff was entitled to a declaration of right in this respect, although he had paid nothing on the judgment. Hood v. Coleman Planing Mill and Lumber Co., 27 A. R. 2035.

Items of Account—Concealed Item.]—
The rule that general payments are appropriated first to the earliest items on the other side of an account, does not entitle a surety to claim that concealed item, which, from its not being accounted to the control of the con debtor on behalf of the creditor. County of Frontenac v. Breden, 17 Gr. 645.

Mortgage by Principal — Exoneration of Surety, — Defendant gave his bond in £1,000 as security for plaintiffs' agent. The agent misapplied a larger sum than this, but gave a mortgage to plaintiffs of lands, which were sold under an order in chancery, and the proceeds applied towards payment of the sum due, leaving a balance larger than the amount of defendant's bond:—Held, that the plaintiffs were entitled to apply the proceeds of the sale of the mortgaged lands in reduction of the general balance, and not in exoneration of defendant's bond. Commercial Bank, V. Muirhead, 4 C. P. 433.

Municipal Treasurer—New Sureties— Subsequent Payments.]—A township treasurer had in his hands a large balance belonging to the township when he gave to the corporation mew sureties:—Held, that subsequent payments by the treasurer were applicable first to the discharge of that balance. Township of East Zorra v. Douglas, 17 Gr. 462.

Partners—Separate Securities for Partnership Debt.]—One nartner of a firm gave as security for half of the partnership indebtedness a mortgage on his senarate real estate; the other partner gave an indorsed note for the remaining portion of the debt. Subsequently payments were made to the credited on the note, claiming to hold the mortgage for the entire balance;—Held, that an assignee of the mortgagor was entitled to have one-half of all sums which had been paid out of the partnership assets on account of the debt credited on the mortgage security. Moore v. Riddell, 11 Gr. 63.

See Royal Canadian Bank v. Payne, 19 Gr. 180.

V. Proceedings and Actions against Surety.

1. Evidence.

Bond—Identity of.]—To an action on a bond the plea was the discharge of defendant as surety by time given to the principal:— Held, that defendant must prove the bond, to identify it with the arrangement mentioned in the pleas. Kerr v. Boulton, 25 U. C. R. 282.

Books of Principal.]—Held, that the books of the agent or clerk of a public company during his lifetime are not good evidence against his surety, sued on his bond for a deficiency in the agent's accounts. Ferrie v. Jones, 8 U. C. R. 192.

In an action against a clerk of the division court, for moneys received for bailiff's fees, entries made by such clerk in the course of his business in books kept under the provision of an Act for that purpose:—Held, evidence against the sureties. Middlefield v. Gould, 10 C. P. 9.

Sec, also, Murray v. Gibson, 28 Gr. 12, post VI. 1 (a).

Conflicting Evidence — Confession of Judgment.]—A confession was given to secure a second set of sureties of a county treasurer, but on an arbitration it was found that defalcations had occurred under a former bond, a surety in which was also in the second. The evidence was conflicting as to whether the protection was for one set or for all. On a motion to retain moneys in the sheriff's hands, which had been made on the confession, it was ordered that the whole amount be paid into court, and that the subsequent judgment creditors should wait. Leonard v. Black, 4 L. J. 200.

Judgment against Principal—Proof against Surety—Third Party.]—The plaintiff, having an unsatisfied—judgment against the administratrix of an estate, procured an assignment of the administration bond and brought an action thereon against the sureties, when a person who had indemnified the sureties was made a third party under an order whereby the question of the indemnity was to be tried after the trial of the action, as the Judge might direct, with liberty to appear by counsel and defend the action and to call and cross-examine witnesses, and it was also ordered that he should not thereafter be at liberty to dispute the defendants' liability, if any, to the plaintiff. At the trial the judgment was put in and one of the defendants called as a witness, who stated that the amount of the judgment was correct. was objected on behalf of the third party that the liability had not been properly proven as against him, and there should be a reference to ascertain and determine the defendants' liability, which was refused and judgment entered for the plaintiff :- Held, that the judgment so recovered was not sufficient to bind the third party; and a new trial was directed. Zimmerman v. Kemp, 30 O. R. 465.

Parel Evidence Agreement to give Security.]-The plaintiff sued on a guarantee, alleging, by way of inducement, that it was proposed to him by the defendant N., that if he would allow a certain assignment made to him of a leasehold property to be put on record, he, N., would give him security on other real property for the payment of certain moneys, to which the plaintiff agreed; and the plaintiff averred that, in consideration that he would allow the said assignment to be put on record, the defendants promised that the arrangement made with N. for the payment of the said balance should be duly carried out, otherwise defendants would pay the plaintiff £135, that being the sum to be secured. The breach was, that defendants would not carry out the said arrangement, nor secure to the plaintiff the £135. Defend-ant N. pleaded non assumpsit. The guarantee, when produced, shewed that defendants had not agreed absolutely to secure the plaintiff, as alleged, but to pay the £135 if N. did not do so :-Held, that oral evidence of an agreement to the effect declared upon was inadmissible, and that it would at all events have been useless, for an agreement, either by the other defendant, I., to become respon-sible for N.'s default, or by both to give security on real property, must be in writing. Irvine v. Nicholson, 20 U. C. R. 464.

Proof of Notice to Principal.] — Where the principal, by repeating the contents of a notice required, shews clearly that he must have received it, this is sufficient proof of notice to bind the surety. Before defendants became sureties for A., notice had been given to him to send the lumber required, specifying the quantity and quality thereof. After the guarantee, he was also distinctly notified to send in the lumber previously specified:—Held, sufficient to bind the sureties, without specifying the particular kind of lumber in the second notice. Morton v. Henjamin, & U. C. R. 594.

Proof of Payment—Money Misspent.]—n an action by A., a county treasurer, upon a bond to him for the due performance of his duty by C. his deputy, while A. continued in office, alleging moneys received and not accounted for:—Held, that the plaintiff need not prove that he had himself paid the money which his deputy had misspent. Baby v. Baby, S. U. C. R. 76.

Resolution of Company — Relieving Sweeties.]—Where an action at law had been brought by a building society against W., as surety for the secretary; and W. filed a bill to restrain the action, founding his equity on a resolution or minute of the board of directors as follows:—"That W. had requested that his security for the secretary might be cancelled. It was suggested, also, that R. W.'s name should be erased from the said bond by wish of the board, and both be relieved as securities. T. was requested to submit two other names as securities in place of the two gentlemen named:"—Held, that such a resolution afforded no ground for interference. Whittemore v. Ridout, 2 Gr. 525.

2. Pleadings.

(a) Before the Judicature Act.

Bill of Complaint—Allegation of Insolvency—Parties,]—In a suit against one of two sureties of an assignee in insolvency and the administrator ad litem of the assignee, the bill alleged that P. (the other surety) was "without means or other estate of any kind that the plaintiff can discover, and is in fact, as the plaintiff believes, insolvent," as a reason for not making P. a party defendant:—Held, that these allegations were not sufficiently distinct to dispense with the necessity of joining him as a defendant, Sureties were jointly and separately bound; but a general account being necessary, G. O. 62, allowing proceedings to be taken against one of two or more persons jointly and severably liable, was held not to apply to such a case; and the allegation as to the insolvency of one of them was not sufficient to dispense with him as a party. That order is only available where the suit is for a liquidated sum or for a single breach of trust. Quare, whether in such a case the administrator ad litem sufficiently represents the estate of the principal debtor. Garrow v. McDonald, 20 Gr. 122.

Non-compliance with Conditions, —The second count of a declaration, after referring to a deed set out in the first count, by which defendance overanted to reimburse to the plaintiffs any loss, not exceeding $600, which the plaintiffs any should sustain by any act of fraud or dishonesty on the part of one H. who had been appointed the plaintiffs' agent—such remulursement to be made within three months after proof should be given to the satisfaction of defendants' directors of such loss—alleged that H. received, and appropriate to his own use, certain moneys of the plaintiffs; that the plaintiffs gave proof of their loss to defendants, and defendants thereupon repudiated x ll liability, and alleged as a reason that the plaintiffs had forfeited all right under said deed by non-compliance with certain conditions not relating to such proof, and did not require any further proof of said loss, and thereby waived all further proof thereof by the plaintiffs. &c.:—Held, that compliance with the deed in giving proof of the loss was sufficiently averred to call upon defendants to plead. Manufactures and Merchants' Mutual Fire Ins. Co. v. Canada Guarantee Co., 43 U. C. R. 247.

Guarantee—Agreement.]—One D. having recovered a judgment against M. & Co., certain notes payable to the firm were deposited with B., and underneath a list of them was the following guarantee: "We hereby, in consideration of 150 by us received from D. this day, guarantee the payment of the above notes by the respective makers at the respective maturities thereof." This was signed by M. & Co., and underneath was an agreement that, on payment of the judgment within ten days, the notes should be returned to M. In an action against M. & Co., on this guarantee, averring non-payment of one of the notes:—Held, that it was sufficient to declare on the guarantee only, without mentioning the agreement at the foot of it. Day v. McLeod. 18 U. C. R. 256.

Guarantec—Agreement—Variance—Demurrer,]—K. having agreed with the plaintiffs for the purchase of some lumber, defendants consented to guarantee his punctual payment for the same; but inadvertently K.'s agreement was recited in the agreement signed by the surcties as bearing date the 22nd December, 1851, instead of the 8th January, 1852. The plaintiffs, in declaring against the surcties, stated the first agreement as bearing date the 8th January, 1852. Defendants set out both agreements on oye are the surcties, stated the first agreement as possible to the surcties of the surcties of Guarantee—Variance.]—Where the plaintiff charged defendant as upon a guarantee to pay a certain judgment, which he set out in specific terms, and afterwards proved at the trial a guarantee extending to all claims:—Held, nonsuit right. Semble, however, that if the plaintiff had set out the guarantee as it was, and averred the claim under the judgment, he would have sustained his action. Sutherland v. McCaskill, 5 U. C. R. 316.

The plaintiff charged defendant on a guarantee for certain rent; to wit, £2 per month.

The evidence shewed an agreement to pay only £1:—Held, a fatal variance, notwithstanding that the amount was laid under a videlicet. O'Neil v. Carter, 9 U. C. R. 470.

The plaintiffs declared as upon a guarantee to pay for goods furnished to D. between the 26th October, 1848, and 1st April, 1852. The evidence shewed one guarantee to the 1st April, 1850, and attached to it an agreement that the same should continue until the 1st April, 1852:—Held, no variance. Ross v. Cameron, 4 C. P. 196.

Plea — Guarantee — Satisfaction—Immaterial Issue.]—Where A., in consideration of B.'s advancing money to C., guaranteed that B.'s acceptance of C.'s drafts should be covered by consignments of flour, together with the constitution of the constitution of the constitution of the constitution of the drafts, which amounted in all to 41,500, the plaintiffs did receive from B., to cover the same, sundry large quantities of flour, amounting in the whole to 990 barrels, and did sell the same for a large sum, namely, £1,657 5s. 9d., and much more than sufficient to cover the said drafts so accepted, &c., and the said commission:—Held, plea bad, in not averring directly that the plaintiff B.'s advances were covered, together with commission; and also, in tendering an immaterial issue, in pleading that flour was received much more than sufficient to cover, &c. Le Mesurier v. Sherwood, 7 U. C. R. 530.

Pleas - Guarantee-Promissory Notes-Request-Payment.]-Declaration on a guarantee, by which, in consideration of the plaintiffs accepting three notes of G. for $751 each. in satisfaction of their claim against G. & Co., defendant did, "to the extent of $751, guarantee the payment of the first two of the said notes according to their tenor and effect." Pleas, (1) that the effect." Pleas, (1) that the notes were payable to plaintiffs' order, and the plaintiffs indorsed the first note to certain persons who held it at maturity, and to whom, in the event of G, not paying it, the plaintiffs were liable as indorsers; that G. notified defendant of his inability to pay it in full, and defendant paid thereon $276, of which plaintiffs had notice, and afterwards G. failed to pay the second note, whereupon defendant paid the plaintiffs $476, being the balance of the sum of $751 guaranteed by defendant. (2) That the first two notes, to the amount of $1,276, were paid to plaintiffs as they became due, whereby de-fendant's guarantee was satisfied:—Held, on demurrer, pleas bad, for, as to the first, defendant was not liable to the plaintiffs' indorsees, and no express or implied request by the plaintiffs to pay was shewn; and as to the second, the guarantee was not satisfied by the payment by G. of $751. Crathern v. Bell, 45 U. C. R. 473.

Replication — Annual Appointment of Principal. — Debt on bond given by C. and R., conditioned for the due performance by one D. of the office of secretary and treasurer of the Brantford Building Society. Plea, that the office is an annual one; that D. was appointed and defendants became sureties for one year, and no longer; and that during such term D. faithfully performed the duties. Replication, that defendants did not become sureties for the period in the plea mentioned, or for any other specified time:—Held, replication good. Wilkes v. Clement, 9 U. C. R. 339.

Bond—Assignment of Breaches of Duty.]—Sci. fa. on a hond to the Queen for performance of duty by a pork inspector. The insignment of breaches in the replication shewed an agreement to refer pork to the inspector for his inspection, and then alleged that he wrongfully branded nork of inferior quality with the words "prime mess pork," &c., contrary to the statute and to his duty. Demurrer, for not alleging that the acts complained of were breaches of his duty or were done by him knowingly, wilfully, or designedly, or that he did not in respect of such matters use the best of his skill, judgment, and ability:—Held, that the breaches were sufficiently assigned. The Queen v. Movat, 3 C. P. 228.

Limiting Claim-Continuing Guarantee.]—The plaintiffs sued defendant on the following guarantee:—"I hereby hold myself accountable to you for any goods Mr. Francis Murphy may purchase of you, to the amount of £250 currency." It was proved that the plaintiffs had sold goods to M. on the 19th November, 1845, amounting to £311, and that after the original credit of six months on the £311 (understood between the parties at the time of sale, as the jury found), had expired, the plaintiffs had extended the time by taking notes without defendant's privity. It was also proved that on the 2nd April, 1846, other goods were sold to M. to the amount of £83, for which M, at the time gave his bill at three months. Defendant pleaded a defence which covered only the first sale of £311, to which the plaintiffs, by their replication simply denying the truth of his defence, admitted his claim to be limited:—Held, that, though the sum of £83 might have been recovered under the continuing guarantee, yet without a new assignment the plaintiff could not recover in this action. Ross v. Burton, 4 U. C. R. 357.

See Parker v. Dutcher, 2 O. S. 106; Evans v. Robinson, 16 U. C. R. 169; Kerr v. Cameron, 19 U. C. R. 366; Royal Canadian Bank v. European Assurance Society, 29 U. C. R. 579.

(b) Since the Judicature Act.

Counterclaim—Action on Bond—Right of Surety to Indemnity.]—An action against the defendant on his bond as surety for H. and McT. for the amount due the plaintiffs by H. and McT. on their banking account with the plaintiffs. Counterclaim by the defendant against the plaintiffs and H. and McT., alleging that the defendant is liable only as such surety, and that the plaintiff ought to resort to H. and McT. to enforce payment from them, and that H. and McT. should be ordered to pay the amount, and indemnify the defendant. As the counterclaim was not rested upon any particular agreement, but was set up as arising from the position of the parties as creditors, principal debtor, and surety, it was held bad, and ordered to be struck out. Federal Bank v. Harrison, 10 P. R. 271.

Statement of Claim — Particulars — Judgment.]—Semble, where in an action on a guarantee, the writ is not specially indorsed, but full particulars are set out in the statement of claim, final judgment may be signed upon default of defence. Molsons Bank v. Dillabaugh, 13 P. R. 312.

Statement of Defence—Bond—Seals.]

—See Marshall v. Municipality of Shelburne, 14 S. C. R. 737.

- Fraud, 1—See Walerloo Mutual Insurance Co. v. Robinson, 4 O. R. 295; Merchants Bank of Canada v. Moffatt, 5 O. R. 122, 11 S. C. R. 46; Toronto Brewing and Malting Co. v. Hevey, 13 O. R. 64.

— Release.]—One of the defendants herein set up as a defence that he was surely for part of the claim and principal debtor as to the residue, and as to the latter admitted his liability, but pleaded that he could only be called upon to pay it on the execution of a proper release by the plaintiff of all liability against him in respect of the said claim:— Held, clearly no defence. Jones v. Dunbar, 32 C. P. 136.

3. Other Cases,

Assignee in Insolvency—Multiplicity of Proceedings against Surcties—Injunction.]—This court will not interfere by injunction to restrain proceedings instituted against the sureties of a defaulting assignee in insolvency, notwithstanding several actions may have been brought against them, and the aggregate amount sought to be recovered greatly exceeds the amounts for which they had become surety. The proper mode of proceeding in such circumctances is as pointed out in Sinclair v. Boby, 2 P. R. 117. Craig v. Milne, 25 Gr. 259.

See Canada Guarantee Co. v. Milne, ib. 261.

Attachment of Debts. —The garnishees had given the judgment debtors a bond conditioned that one A., in their employment, should pay over all moneys received: —Held, that the liabilities incurred under this bond could not be attached, Grisworld v. Buffalo, Brantford, and Goderich R. W. Co., 2 P. R. 178.

Guarantor—Action against as Principal.]

—The defendant purchased goods from the plaintiffs with instructions to charge and send them to one Fox, which they did, and after receiving a portion of the purchase money brought this action against the defendant, claiming that he was liable as purchaser of the goods. Several letters were put in evidence written by the plaintiffs to Fox, in one of which was the following passage: "It is now so long since your account was due, that there is no other source left except to follow up Mr. McL., who is guarantor," and in another. "We shall place the matter in the hands of L., Amherstburg, with instructions to proceed immediately against you and Mr. McL. of the amount." The plaintiffs also proved the defendant had ordered goods in the same manner from merchants in Montreal, and in some instances paid, and in others given his own notes for them. The jury having found for the plaintiffs, and that the credit was originally given to the defendant, the court refused to disturb the verdict. Ogilvie w. McLcol, 11 C. P. 348.

An action for goods bargained and sold cannot be maintained against a person who has become responsible for the payment of goods delivered to a third party. McKenzie v. McBean. 4 O. S. 134.

Mortgage to Surety — Assignment of—Attack on.]—A mortgage was executed to secure an accommodation indorser, and subsequently assigned by him to creditors of himself and the principal debtor. In a suit brought to sell the mortgaged estate, subsequent incumbrancers sought to impeach this transfer, on the ground that the surety as well as the principal was insolvent; but, as no such defence was raised by the answer, the court made the decree for a sale, as asked, leaving the question to be disposed of in a suit to be brought for that purpose. Commercial Bank v. Poore, 6 Gr. 514.

Multiplicity of Suits — Decrec.] — A mortgagee proceeded on the same day to foreclose the property of the mortgager and his sureties by several bills upon their respective mortgages, and to sue at law in different actions the same parties on notes held by the plaintiffs, to which the mortgages were collateral:—Held, that only one suit in equity was necessary, as all parties might have been brought before the court therein, all remedies given which might have been obtained at law, and all rights more conveniently adjusted between the parties in one than in several suits; and the court would not be deterred from granting relief by the circumstance of a decree being complicated. Merchants Bank v. Sparkes, 28 Gr. 108.

Parties—Action on Postmaster's Bond— Croven.]—The defendant entered into a joint and several bond to the Queen with D. and S., for the faithful discharge by S. of the duties of deputy postmaster at O. The Post Office Act, C. S. C. c. 31, s. 64, s.-s. 2, enacts that all suits for debts due to the post office, whether by bond in the name of the postmastergeneral or otherwise, shall be instituted in the name of the postmaster-general:—Held, that though the statute may authorize the postmaster-general in such cases to sue in his official name, the words "or otherwise," contained therein, do not deprive the Crown of the right to sci. fa, on a bond taken expressly in the name of the Queen, The Queen v. Mc-Pherson, 15 C. P. 11.

One M., and the defendants as his sureties, executed a bond conditioned for the good behaviour of M., a clerk of the plaintifs at Montreal. The bond was executed at Hamilton by the defendants, who were resident there. M. made default at Montreal and abscended. Proceedings were taken against the sureties, without joining M:—Held, that the plaintiffs could not proceed against the sureties alone, if they required the joinder of the principal in order that they might have their remedy over against him. Though the brach occurred in Montreal, and there was no cause of action till default, yet there was a potential equity in the defendants, coeval with the execution of the bond, which became a right of suit on the default of M: and there was also an implied contract on the part of M. upon execution of the bond, to repay to his sureties any money that they might have to pay by reason of his default. Exchange Bank of Canada v. Barnez, 29 Gr. 270.

Realization of Security by Creditor—Action against Surety for Balance—Attack on Prior Sale.]—A party secondarily liable, and entitled on payment of the debt to an assignment of the security held by the creditor, had agreed that that estate should be sold first, and his own estate be liable only for the balance, and such estate was sold in a suit brought by the creditor, to which both the parties primarily and secondarily liable were parties, and which estate was purchased by the creditor in the name of an agent. The party so liable, having forborne to apply to discharge the sale in that suit, and two years having clapsed, during which time the creditor sold the property, cannot, as a defence to a suit to enforce payment of the balance, insist that the sale in the former suit was invalid. Kains v. McLutosh, 10 Gr. 119.

Right of Action — Crouss—Postmuster's Rouds—kes Lore Contraction, —I an action by the Crown, on the information of the attorney-general for Canada, upon a bond executed in the Province of Quebec in the form provided by the Act respecting the Security to be given by the Officers of Canada (31 Vict. c. 37, 35 Vict. c. 19), and the Post Office Act (38 Vict. c. 7):—Held, that the right of action under the bond was governed by the law of the Province of Quebec. Held, further, that such a bond was not an obligation with a penal clause within the application of arts, 1131 and 1135 of the Civil Code of Lower Canada. Held, also, that the rule of law that the Crown is not liable for the laches or negligence of its officers obtains in the Province of Quebec except when altered by statute. Judgment in 6 Ex. C. R. 236 affirmed. Black v. The Queen, 29 S. C. R. 633.

Sequestration—Mortgagee and Assignce of Equity.—A chose in nction can be reached by process of sequestration, but the right or interest of a surety in regard to the money for the payment of which he is surety, is not properly of such a mature as can be reached by that process. Where, therefore, a mortgagee filed his bill against the assignee of the equity of redemption to enforce by this means payment of the deliciency arising on a sale of the mortgaged premises:—Held, that the right of the mortgage debt was not of such a nature as could be reached. Irving v. Boyd, 15 Gr. 151.

VI. RIGHTS OF SURETY.

1. Against Co-sureties.

(a) Contribution.

Bond—Fidelity of Officer—Separate Surctics—Change in Office—Evidence.] — A loan and savings society appointed G. their treasurer, and the plaintiffs and defendant by two separate bonds became sureties for the due discharge of the duties of such officer. By several Acts of the legislature the society was incorporated, and its powers materially increased, and G. became its manager, the duties of which office it was shewn were similar to those of treasurer, the name of "manager" being given simply as one of honour, and not involving any additional duties, G. made default in his office, and a suit was instituted by the society against all the sureties, which was compromised by the plaintiffs paying about one-half of the sum claimed by the society:— Held, that the defendant was bound to contribute his share of the money so paid, and that the change in the name of the offerer afforded no defence to the claim of the plaintiffs. Held, also, that in such a case the entries of G. in the books of the society were not evidence against the sureties during the lifetime of G. Murray v, Gibbon, 28 Gr. 12

Counter-security — Right to Enforce—Depreciation.] — Where the principal debtor gives to his sureties counter-security by mortgage of real estate, any of the sureties is entitled, after the principal debtor's default, to enforce the security without the consent or concurrence of the others, and it is not an answer to a claim for contribution by one surety who has paid the whole debt, that the security has depreciated in value and that the paying surety has refused to take any steps to enforce it. Judgment in 28 O. R. 35 affirmed. Moorhouse v, Kidd, 25 A. R. 221.

Discharge of Co-surety—Payment.]—Where one of several sureties has been released by the creditor giving time to the principal debtor, with the consent of the other sureties, the consent of the other sureties, the contribution from the debt, recover contribution from the debt recover and the debt recover and the debt recover and the debt recover contribution from the bedder an extension of time by a renewal during the absence and without the consent or approval of the fourth surety, the holder retaining the original note. After payment of the renewal by the three who had obtained the extension, they brought an action against the fourth for contribution:—Held, that they could not recover. Worthington v. Peck. 24 O. R. 535.

Joint Action against Principal and Co-surety,! — A surety cannot sue a co-surety jointly with the principal, for the amount of a debt of the principal which the surety has been obliged to pay. Burnham v. Choat, 5 O. S. 736.

Partnership — Judgment—Award.]—G. recovered a judgment against M. and C. upon a note made by them. It was said that one J. was also liable with them for the debt, though not a party to it; and that he was in effect a partner with G. in the transaction. M. made large payments on the judgment, but C. paid nothing. Upon reference between J. and M. the arbitrator was to determine which of them was liable, or to what extent, in respect of the judgment or the note, and to make any orders which he should think proper, to settle their liabilities in respect thereof. The arbitrator awarded that J., as between him and M., was liable to pay the balance due upon the judgment, and J. should pay it in a month:—Semble, that upon performing the award, and paying more than his share, J. might sue C. for contribution as for money paid on account of the judgment. In re Me-Lean v. Jones, 2 C. L. J. 206.

Promissory Notes—Indorsers.]—A. and B., a trading partnership, entered into a joint speculation with C. and D. for the purchase and sale of lands; afterwards E. was admitted into the concern, each to be entitled to one-fourth of the profits, and liable in the same proportion to any losses incurred. For the purposes of the co-partnership, the parties were in the habit of discounting notes which were made by E., and indorsed by A. and B.

and C. and D. in their individual names. After nearly three years C. wrote to A. and B. and E. proposing to retire on receiving a certain amount in lands at a valuation, he agree-ing for a certain period to continue to indorse renewals of the notes then outstanding, as accommodation indorser, which proposal was communicated to D., but nothing further was done with regard to it. Shortly afterwards D. made a similar proposition to A. and B. and E. on their "assuming all my share of the liabilities incurred by or for the said company, excepting only my liability for 12 or 15 months as accommodation indorser after K. months as accommodation inderser after the control of the paper in the Bank of Upper Canada," which proposal was accepted by A. and B. and E. Subsequently both C. and D. by B. and E. Subsequently both C. and D. by a joint memorandum formally relinquished their interests in the company, but it did not appear that D.'s stipulation as to indorsing appear that D.'s supulation as to indorsing the notes was ever communicated to C. The notes so indorsed by C. and D. had been all consolidated into one note of £3,200, and upon a renewal of this note an action was subsequently brought against all the parties thereto, and a sale of D.'s land was effected under the execution in that action, which realized only a portion of the amount. Thereupon D. filed a bill against C. seeking to make him, as prior indorser, pay the amount still remaining due in respect of the judgment, to reimburse D. what his lands had sold for, and also to make up the loss sustained by him in consequence of the sale of his lands at, as was alleged, a great undervalue. Under the circumstances of the case the court below treated C. and D. as co-sureties for the continuing partners, and as such liable only to make up the amount of the claim in equal proportions and it appearing that C. had already paid more than his moiety of the demand, ordered D. to repay the excess to him, together with the costs of the suit; and on appeal this was affirmed and the appeal dismissed with costs. Harper v. Knowlson, 2 E. & A. 253.

(b) Other Cases.

Benefit of Security—Indomnity.]—The holder of several promisory notes applied to the plaintiff to indorse the same for his accommodation, which he did on the promise of the holder to execute a mortgage on certain lunds to one L., to whom he was indebted in $1.290 on account of the purchase money of the security of the parameters, as also of the notes. The consideration expressed in the mortgage was $1.200 only, but the provise for redemption embraced the notes as well as the $1.200. L. also indorsed the notes, and on maturity retired them, and the plaintiff, having paid L. the amount of the notes, obtained from him an assignment of the mortgage:—Held, (1) that the transactions rendered L. and the plaintiff meffect cosmeties, and that the plaintiff was entitled to the benefit of the security held by L. by way of indemnity; and (2) that the plaintiff was a purchaser who took his conveyance after searching the registry office and upon the assurance that the mortgage was made to secure $1.200 only, Menziev V. Kennedy, 23 Gr. 330.

Judgment — Payment—Right to Proceed in Name of Creditor.]—A. and B. entered as co-sureties into separate bonds to the Grown for C.: C. became a defaulter. The Crown proceeded by sci fa. on each bond, and obtained a separate judgment against limself. B. moved to be allowed, on paying the judgment against himself. B. moved to be allowed, on paying the judgment against himself in full, to stand in the place of the Crown, and to have the benefit of the Crown process against his co-surety for a moiety of the judgment:—Held, that the court could not thus relieve B.; that they might have allowed him to proceed in the name of the Crown to enforce the judgment which had been obtained on a sci. fa. against A., but this they could not now do, as it appeared the Crown had already enforced that judgment. The Queen v. Land, 3 U. C. R. 271.

Moneys Applicable to Debt. |—Where one of two sureties has moneys in his hands to be applied towards payment of the creditor, he may be compelled by his co-surety to pay such moneys to the creditor or to the co-surety himself if the creditor has already been paid by him. Macdonald v. Whitheld, Whitheld v. Merchants Bank of Canada, 27 S. C. B. 94.

Securities—Rights to Assignment of]—
The plaintiff sold twenty-four shares in a vessel to B. & Co., who, not being able to pay cash, procured O. to make a note in the plaintiff's favour, which was indorsed by him and B. In order to secure himself, O. took a bill of sale to himself of the shares. The plaintiff discounted the note at the bank, and after several renewals was obliged to pay it. In an interpleader issue between the plaintiff and the execution creditor of O., to try the right to the shares:—Held, that the effect of this agreement was to make B. the principal debtor to the bank for the amount of the note, and the plaintiff and O. his co-sureties therefor; and upon payment thereof, that the plaintiff was equally entitled to the twenty-four shares held by O. his co-surety, as security against his liability on the note. Quere, whether interpleader is a proper remedy in such a case, and whether the shares could be sized and sold by the sheriff. Trence v. Burkett, I. O. R. SO.

2. Against Creditor.

(a) As to Contracts.

Assignment to Surety—Right to Paymont.]—The plaintiffs were sureties to defendant for the performance by C, of an agreement whereby C, covenanted for himself, his executors, administrators, and assigns, to build certain cottages for £1,800, which defendant covenanted to pay to C, his executors, administrators, and assigns, in the following manner; £800 during the progress of the work, and the remaining £1,000 on the completion of the agreement, by the conveyance to C, of certain specified premises. C, failed to perform his contract, and assigned it to the plaintiffs, having received £800 on account. It was not shewn that defendant was any party to the assignment. The plaintiffs and defendant then entered into an agreement (to which C, was no party) reciting C's previous contract; the plaintiffs liability as sureties for him; his non-performance and assignment to the plaintiffs that the defendant at the plaintiffs.

request had agreed to give further time for the completion of the contract; and that in consideration of the premises the plaintiffs covenanted to finish the work according to the first agreement; and the parties mutually bound themselves in £1,000 for the performance of this last agreement:—Held, that there was no covenant, either expressed or implied, on the part of defendant to convey to the plaintiffs, or to pay them the £1,000. Hall v. Gilmour, 9 U. C. R. 492.

A contracted with defendants to perform certain work, and B. entered into a bond as his surety. It appeared that B. was in fact the principal, and did the work, and that A. had tendered and taken the contract for him, and had executed a writing assigning to him all his interest in the proceeds:—Held, that B. could have no right of action gazinst defendants. Ferris v. Township of Kingston, 12 U. C. R. 435.

(b) As to Securities.

Assignment by Creditor to Creditor of Surety. —A debtor gave a mortgage to his creditor as collateral security for a debt is creditor as collateral security for a debt is creditor and collateral security for a debt is collateral security for a debt in the same security. The creditor afterwards of the same security is collateral for execution in the sheriff's hands against His goods. A creditor of H. subsequently placed an execution in the same sheriff's hands; and, there not being goods enough to pay both executions, he paid off the first execution, and took an assignment of the mortgage;—Held, that he was entitled to hold the mortgage to the extent of such payment, as against he plaintiff, to whom H., after both executions were delivered to the sheriff, had assigned his interest in the mortgage to secure another debt. Carrett v. Johnstone, 13 Gr. 36.

Assignment by Surety to Creditor— Discharge of Liability.] — A surety holding collateral securities is not bound to wait until he has paid the debt before he assigns such securities, but may do so at any time to the creditor, in discharge of his liability. Paton v. Wilkes, 8 Gr. 252.

Assignment by Surety to Principal-Right of Execution Creditor to Attack.]—H. obtained from his debtor an assignment of his books of account, notes, bills, and other evidences of debt, by way of se-curity against notes for the accommodation of the debtor; and also a conveyance of real estate from the father of the debtor for the same purpose. Having been com pelled to pay a large sum on such notes, H recovered judgment against the debtor, and sued out execution thereon, which was the first placed in the hands of the sheriff against the debtor, and the effects of the debtor were afterwards sold under this and other executions subsequently placed in the hands of the sheriff, upon which sale sufficient was realized to pay the execution of H., and leave a bal-ance in the hands of the sheriff; and H.'s claim was accordingly paid, and the books of account and other securities held by him were delivered up to the debtor, after notice from J., a later judgment creditor, not to part with them; and the father's land was reconveyed The execution creditor who gave the notice claimed, in consequence, priority over intermediate execution creditors, and also a right to compel H. to make good the amount of his claim in consequence of his having parted with the securities:—Held, (1) that a subsequent execution creditor had not any equity to compel the first creditor to recover payment of his claim out of the property held by him in security, so as to leave the goods of the debtor to satisfy the subsequent executions; nor had he any right to call upon H. to assign the lands conveyed to him by the debtor's father; nor was H. personally liable to the subsequent execution creditors. (2) That the securities in the hands of H. being, at that time, not seizable under common law process, no right vested in J. to have them transferred to him by H., nor was H. bound to make good to J. any loss sustained by him by reason of his refusal to deliver the securities to J., but that such securities, being in the nature of equitable assets, should be distributed amongst all the creditors pair passu. Topping v, Joseph 1, E. & A. 292. See S. C., sub nom. Joseph v. Heaton, 5

Realization of — Right to Insist on — Sale—Account.]—A decree for sale of pro-perty was directed at the suit of a surety of the mortgagor. In proceeding to take the accounts it appeared that the mortgagee had paid off several prior incumbrances, and the master in taking the account allowed him credit for the sums so paid, although no direction to that effect was given by the decree. The surety, insisting that as between him and mortgagee he was entitled to receive credit for the gross amounts produced at the sale, without any references to the sums so paid to the prior incumbrancers, appealed from the master's finding in that respect. The court dismissed the appeal with costs. Upon an agreement entered into by the lender mortgage, borrower, and surety, that a judg-ment against the surety should "stand as additional or collateral security for the ment of such mortgages, to pay and make up any deficiency that might arise or exist, should it at any time become necessary to sell the said farms," &c.:—Held, that the surety was entitled to have an account taken, the property sold, and credit given on his judgment for the amount realized, before he could be called upon to pay anything; and that he was not bound first to pay off the creditor and take an assignment of the mortgages for the purpose of proceeding against his principal, the mortgagor. Teeter v. St. John, 10 Gr.

Release without Consent of Surety—Judgment.]—The plaintiffs, who held a number of promissory notes of a customer, indorsed by various persons, and also a mortgage from the customer on certain lands to secure his general indebtedness, sued the defendant as indorser of one of the notes. Before action brought, they had released certain of the mortgaged lands without the consent of the defendant:—Held, that the plaintiffs were entitled to judgment against the defendant for the amount of the note, but without prejudice to the right of the latter to make him account for their dealings with the mortgaged property when that security had answered its purpose, or the debt had been paid by the sureties, or when in any other event the application of the moneys from the security could be properly ascertained. Decision in 25 O. R. 503 modified. Molsons Bank v. Hetlig, 26 O. R. 276.

See Gilmour v. Cameron, 6 Gr. 290; McQuesten v, Winter, 10 Gr. 464; Menzies v. Kennedy, 23 Gr. 309; Harper v. Culbert, 5 O. R. 152; Victoria Mutual Ins. Co. v. Freel, 10 P. R. 45; Monsell v. Mitchell, 23 U. C. R. 116; Trerice v. Burkett, 1 O. R. 80.

(c) As to Set-off.

Executor—Debt to Testator — Personal Claim as Surety.]—A testator, who owed debts to an amount exceeding his personal estate, devised his land to one of his sons, whom he also appointed an executor. The devisee paid debts to an amount exceeding the personal estate, and left but one debt unpaid; the devisee became surety for the creditor to whom the debt was due, for an amount exceeding the debt so due by the testator; and the devisee subsequently gave a mortgage on the land devised to secure the amount he was surety for:—Held, that the debt due by the testator was to be applied towards the discharge of the sum for which the devisee had become surety. Goldsmith, 17 Gr. 213.

Judgments.1—A surety cannot claim to have a judgment obtained by his principal against the plaintiff, set off against a judgment obtained by the plaintiff against him as surety. Gray v. Smith, 6 O. S. 62.

(d) Other Cases.

Charge on Land—Priority—Mortgage.]
—The treasurer of a county, on substituting a new surety for one who wished to withdraw, gave a mortgage on property which he had previously mortgage to the outer of their indemnification; the mortgage to the sureties had not been registered, but had been left with the clerk of the council for safe keeping. On receiving the new bond and mortgage, the clerk gave up to the treasurer the unregistered mortgage as well as the old bond, and the treasurer destroyed both:—Held, that the old sureties were entitled to a first charge on the property for their indemnification in respect of a defalcation discovered of a debt before these transactions. County of Frontenex, Breden, 17 Gr. 645.

Parties—Reference—Costs.]—In an action against a municipal treasurer a reference was directed to ascertain what was due from him, and an order was made permitting the sureties to appear upon the reference and contest the claims of the municipality. 3. Against Principal.

Collateral Security — Realization of— Credit to Principal.]—P. made in favour of N. an accommodation note, which N. deposited with R. as collateral security for a mortgage debt. N. and B. afterwards went into partnership, and a new mortgage on partnership property was given to R. for N.'s debt, the note being still left with R. The partnership being dissolved. B. agreed to pay all debts of the firm, including the mortgage, and on settling the accounts between himself and the mortgagees E. was given credit for the amount of the note which P. had paid to the mortgagees. P. sought to recover from B. the amount so paid:—Held, reversing the judgment in 15 A. R. 244, which reversed the judgment in 16 O. R. 699, that N. having authority to deal with the note as he pleased, and having given it as a collateral security for the joint debt of himself and R., on such security having been realized by the mortgagees, and the amount credited on the joint debt, P., the surety, could recover it from either of the debtors. Semble, assuming P. not to have been liable to pay the note to the mortgagees, and that it was a voluntary payment, it having adopted the payment on the settlement of the accounts between the mortgagees, and the arcounts between the mortgage, that he was liable to repay it. Purdom v. Nichols, 15 S. C. R. 610.

Costs—Refund of.]—Quære, whether the principal is bound to refund to his surety costs of proceedings against the surety to enforce payment of the debt of the principal. Whitehouse v. Glass, 7 Gr. 45.

Indemnity against Indorsement.]—D, being about to leave this country for a time, executed a general power of attorney authorizing the agent G., amongst other things, for the principal, and in did name, and to his use, to buy any embasts, or any shares therein, as the said G. may think expedient, and for my benefit." During D's abence the agent purchased a leasehold property known as the "St. Nicholas Saloon," together with the furniture, provisions, and business therein, for the payment of which he gave bis own notes, indorsed by him in the name of the principal, under a clause in the power of attorney authorizing him to make and indorse notes, &c., in the course of business, alleging that he had made the purchase for the joint benefit of himself, his principal, and a third person, who also indorsed these promiscory notes:—Held, a purchase which the agent was not entitled to make. Held, also, that standing in the position of a surety in respect of the promiscory notes; he principal was entitled to a decree for indemnity in respect of the promiscory notes; the principal was entitled to a decree for indemnity in respect of the promiscory notes; the principal was entitled to a decree for indemnity in respect of the promiscory notes; the principal was entitled to a decree for indemnity in respect of the promiscory notes; the principal was entitled to a decree for indemnity in respect of the promiscory notes; the principal was entitled to a decree for indemnity in respect of the promiscory notes; the principal was entitled to a decree for indemnity in respect of the promiscory notes; the principal was entitled to a decree for indemnity in respect of the promiscory notes; the principal was entitled to a decree for indemnity in respect of the promiscory notes; the principal was entitled to a decree for indemnity in respect of the promiscory notes; the principal was entitled to a decree for indemnity in respect of the promiscory notes; the principal was entitled to a decree for indemnity in respect of the promiscory no

Judgment — Payment — Assignment — Costs.]—Where one brought action against a maker of a note and an indorser thereon, and recovered judgment, with costs, which the indorser paid and took an assignment of the judgment:—Held, that the latter was entitled under R. S. O. 1877 c. 116, s. 3, to recover from the principal debtor the whole of the judgment, including the costs. Harper v. Culbert, 5 O. R. 152.

Judgment for a debt was obtained by the plaintiffs against the defendants, who stood towards one another in the relation of principal and surety. The surety paid the plaintiffs the amount of their debt and costs, took an assignment of the judgment, and then proceeded to enforce it against his principa; :—Held, that the costs as well as the debt were recoverable by the surety, as against his principal. Victoria Mutual Ins. Co. v. Freel, 10 P. R. 45.

Payment—Proceeding in Name of Creditor.]—An action having been brought and a judgment recovered against two deferendants on a contract by them to carry lumber, the verdiet and costs were paid by one, who thereupon, without applying to the plaintiff or tendering him any indemnity, is sued an execution in the plaintiff's name against the other defendant for one-half of the debt and costs:—Held, clearly not warranted by 26 Vict. c. 45, and the execution was set aside. Potts v. Leask, 36 U. C. R. 476.

A judgment recovered against the two defendants, who were partners, was paid by the defendant G, who thereupon issued execution against his co-defendant, S, on the judgment, for half the amount. It appeared that the partnership accounts were unsettled, and that an award had been made in favour of S, the validity of which was disputed by G: —Held, that under 20 Vict. c. 45, s. 4, the execution was improperly issued; and it was set aside. Scripture v. Gordon, 7, P. R. 164.

Mortrage by Surety—Release of Principal.]—H. had leased to defendant certain premises, the plaintiff becoming his surety for the rent. Defendant being in arrear, the three met, and it was acreed that the lease should be given up: that the plaintiff should secure H. by mortgage for the amount due; and that H. should release defendant. The mortgage was executed, and H. gave a receipt to the plaintiff for the sum secured. Before the mortgage fell due or had been satisfied, the plaintiff for the sum secured. Before the mortgage was received in satisfaction of defendant's debt, with his assent:—Held, that the action would lie. Meticary K. Rope, 17 U. C. R. 529.

Principal — Surety's Heirs — Acquiescence.]
—A wife at her husband's request executed a mortgage of her separate lands to a creditor of her husband to secure his debt. After the wife's death, leaving several children (of whom the plaintiffs were two), the creditor commenced a suit for the sale of the wife's lands, to which the husband and all the wife's children except the plaintiffs were the parties, the plaintiffs having made an assignment under the Insolvent Act, and by arrangement the husband became the purchaser in his own name, upon advantageous terms of credit, which enabled them to pay off the purchase money out of sales of portions of the lands. Upon a bill filed by the plain-tiffs alleging that the husband was bound to pay off the debt himself, and therefore could not purchase for himself, the defendants insisted that the husband had become the nominal purchaser, but in reality for the benefit of the children, other than the plaintiffs, and in trust for them only :-Held, that the plaintiffs were entitled to the benefit of the husband's arrangement with the creditor, equally with the other children, and that under the circumstances the purchase could not be for the benefit of the latter only. The sale by the creditor to the husband was made in June. 1867. This bill was filed in September, 1875. In the meantime sales had been made of portions of the lands, as was alleged, with the plaintiffs' knowledge, and the defendants insisted that the plaintiffs' acquiescence had debarred them from questioning the transaction. The court, being of opinion upon the evidence that the plaintiffs believed that the sales were being made by or with the authority of the creditor for the purpose of paying off the mortgage, and not by their father as owner, and that the defendants could be readily reinstated in the position they occupied before the arrangement with the creditor:—Held, that, in the absence of clear proof of knowledge by creditor, and that it was asserted to be for the benefit of the other children only, the defence of acquiescence could not be maintained.

Dougall v. Dougall, 26 Gr. 401.

Municipal Corporation—Surety for— Promissory Note.]—Where a corporation, having a debt to pay, which it was to their advantage to discharge immediately, raised money upon an accommodation note of an individual, and applied the money to the payment of the debt, promising to protect the note or to repay, relief was given in chancery against the corporation upon a breach of the promise. And semble, that, if the corporation could be compelled to pay the debt, the person so giving his note would be entitled to stand in the place of the creditor. Burnham v. Peterborough, S Gr. 336.

Obligation to Pay off Mortgage — Costs.;—Where a purchaser of a mortgaged estate takes it subject to the vendor's mortgage, and sells to another without paying off said mortgage, he will be compelled to fulfil his undertaking to do so. Thus A. being the owner in lee of a certain lot of land, mortgaged it to B., and then sold to C., leaving the mortgage to be paid by one y. C. then sold to D. without paying the mortgage, and default having been made B. sued A. at law on his covenant, whereupon A. filed a bill against C. and D. to make them pay off the mortgage;—Held, that A., as surety for C., had a right to call upon him to pay the mortgage in B.; and also his costs of the action at law. Held, also, that D. was a proper party where the vendor sought to enforce his lien on the land. Joice v. Duffy, 5 L. J. 141.

Payment of Debt—Subrogation—Exception,1—The holder of certain accommodation drafts, after having obtained execution against the payee, was paid the amount of them by the accommodation acceptor, and thereupon expressed his intention of directing the sheriff to credit that sum on the execution in his hands, the amount of which he had made by sale under execution of the goods of the payee, for whose accommodation the bills had been negotiated. The acceptor, hearing of this, gave the sheriff notice of his claim, and filed a bill to compel the payment of the amount which he had advanced:—Held, that as surety the acceptor had a right to receive the amount of his claim out of the proceeds of the execution, to the exclusion of the subsequent execution creditors. Ripney v. Vanzandt, 5 Gr. 494.

surety to B. for a debt, for which A., the principal debtor, gave a mortgage to B. as a further security. The creditor recovered judgment against the surety and sold his lands under execution. While the fi. fa. was in the sheriff's hands and before the sale, S. mortgaged the lands to creditors of his own:—Held, that as the surety would, on paying the debt to B., have been entitled to the benefit of the mortgage which the principal debtor had given to B., so where the lands of S. were sold to pay the debt, and the mortgagees of S. were thereby deprived of them, these mortgages were entitled to the benefit of the original mortgage as against any subsequent assignment of the mortgage by the mortgager, and any subsequent mortgage by the mortgagor, Quay v. Sculthorpe, 16 Gr. 449.

Surety—Charge on Wife's Estate—Cove-nant of Husband—Exoneration—Account.]— A married woman, who, under the terms of her father's will, was entitled to receive her share of his estate on coming of age, agreed, on attaining her majority, with the other beneficiaries, to postpone the division. An agreement was afterwards executed between the husband, wife, and the trustee of the estate, whereby, after reciting the above facts, the trustee agreed to advance her certain moneys, which she agreed to repay within a specified period, the advance being made a charge upon her share of the estate. The agreement also provided that the amount of the advance should be deducted from her share in case of non-payment, or of a division of the estate prior to the date fixed for repayment. The husband was a party to the agreement for the purpose only of joining in the covenant, and it was expressly agreed therein that none of the provisions of the indenture should "in any wise effect or prejudice the ordinary legal rights" of the trustee to enforce payment:— Held, that, notwithstanding the latter clause Held, that, notwithstanding the inter cause, the husband was liable as a surety only, and that he was entitled to be exonerated by his wife and to the benefit of her property in the trustee's hands, and to an account in regard thereto from the date of the covenant sued on. Lee v. Ellis, 27 O. R. 608.

VII. MISCELLANEOUS CASES,

Administration Order—Claim Arising out of Surclyship.]—When a claim against an estate of a deceased person is one arising out of a contract of surclyship, the court will not, ambest by consent of all parties, make an administration decree except on a bill filed. Re Colton, Fisher v. Colton, 8 P. R. 542.

The principal and surety being here the plaintiff and defendant respectively, Re Colton, Fisher v, Colton, & P. R. 542, which decides that in a case of principal and surety a summary application to administer under G. C. Ch. 638 is improper, was held not to apply. Re Allon, Pocock v, Allan, 9 P. R. 277.

Bond—Fulfilment of Covenants—Penalty.]
—Where a party binds himself in an agreement to pay the plaintiff £25 if A. B. does not fulfil all the covenants and conditions of the agreement, the £25 must be looked on as a penalty, and not as liquidated damages giving the plaintiff an action as for an absolute debt. McLean v. Tindey, T. U. C. R. 40.

Bond of Indemnity—Right of Action.]
—See Boyd v. Robinson, 20 O. R. 404, and Mewburn v. Mackelean, 19 A. R. 729.

Covenant to Indemnify—Right of Assignee for Benefit of Creditors.]—See Ball v. Tennant, 21 A. R. 602.

Damages—Action Quia Timet.]—Upon a covenant by an incoming partner to indemnify and save harmless a retiring partner against the liabilities, contracts, and agreements of the firm, no cause of action accrues to the covenantee merely because an action to recover uniquidated damages for an alleged breach of agreement has been brought against the firm. Mewburn v. Mackelenn, 19 A. R. 729, and Leith v. Freeland, 24 U. C. R. 132, distinguished. Such a covenant is not assignable by the covenantee to a plaintiff suing the firm so as to enable him to join the covenantor as a defendant in the action to recover against him the damages for which the firm may be ultimately held responsible. Sutherland v. Webster, 21 A. R. 228.

Indorsement — Commission.]—See Mc-Donald v. Manning, 19 S. C. R. 112.

Obligation to Indemnify—Assignment of,1—The obligation of a purchaser of mortaged lands to indemnify his grantor against the personal covenant for payment, may be assigned even before the institution of an action for the recovery of the mortgage dely, and, if assigned to a person entitled to recover the debt, it gives the assigne a direct right of action against the person liable to pay the same. Alliming Campbell v. Morrison, 24 A. R. 224. Maloncy v. Campbell, 28 S. C. R. 228.

Warranty — Action — Incidental Demana.]—It is only as regards the principal action that the action in warranty is an incidental demand. Between the warrantee and the warrantor it is a principal action, and nay be brought after judgment in the principal action, and the defendant in warranty has no interest to object to the manner in which he is called in, where no question of jurisdiction arises and he suffers no prejudice thereby. But, if a warrantee lect to take proceedings against his warrantors before he has himself been condemned, he does so at his own risk, and, if an unfounded action has been brought against the warrante, and the warrantee does not get the costs of the action in warranty included in the judgment of dismissal of the action against the principal plantiff, he must bear the consequences. I. APPEAL TO.

1. Leave to Appeal,

Criminal Cases.]-The rule of the judicial committee is not to grant leave to appeal in criminal cases, except when some clear departure from the requirements of justice is alleged to have taken place. Riel v. The Queen, 10 App. Cas. 675.

Issue of Facts - Petition for Leave.]-Petition for special leave to appeal in a case involving only an issue of fact refused. The petition must state fully but succinctly the grounds upon which it is based; the record not being before their lordships until for-warded by the proper authorities. Canada Central R. W. Co. v. Murray, S App. Cas.

Public Interest. |-- Where the determination of a case will not be decisive of any general principle of law, the judicial com-mittee will not give leave to appeal from a unanimous judgment of the court below, on the ground that the questions involved are either of great importance to the parties or to appeal from the judgment in 13 S. C. R. 258 refused. DuMoulin v. Langtry, 57 L. T. N. S. 317.

Amount Involved.] - Their lordships will not advise Her Majesty to admit an appeal from the supreme court of the Dominion save where the case is of gravity, involving matter of public interest, or some important question of law, or affecting property of considerable amount, or where the case is otherwise of some public importance, or of a very substantial character. for special leave to appeal refused, the case depending on a disputed matter of fact—whether there had been a gift or sale of certain goods of the value of £1,000. Prince v. Gagnon, S App. Cas. 103.

judgment of the court of appeal in matters of insolvency should be final, is within the competence of the Dominion Parliament and does not infringe the exclusive powers given to the provincial legislatures by s. 92 of the Imperial statute; nor does it infringe the Queen's prerogative, for it only limits the right of appeal as given by the code. The section, according to the true construction of the word "final" therein, excludes appeals to Her Majesty, but contains no words which purport to derogate from the prerogative of the Queen to allow such appeals as an act of grace. It, therefore, does not interfere with the prerogative of the Crown; and quære, what powers may be possessed by the Parliament of Canada so to do. Cuvillier v. Aylwin, 2 Knapp's P. C. C. 72, reviewed. Cushing v. Dupuy, 5 App. Cas. 409.

Terms - Costs.] - Special leave may be given on the terms that the appellants should be liable to pay the respondent's costs in any event. Montreal Gas Co. v. Cadicux, [1898] event. Me A. C. 718.

See Valin v. Langlois, 5 App. Cas. 115.

2. Raising New Issues on Appeal.

Where a writ and declaration alleged that the defendant had been guilty of wilful de-ceit, and had fraudulently effected a trans-ference of fire insurance in his books after a fire had occurred, from a company of which he was agent, to the appellants, of whom he was also agent, with a specific fraudulent purpose, and such charges of fraud and deceit failed:—Held, that the appellants could not be allowed in final appeal to contend for the first time that the pleadings and evidence disclosed such negligence or breach of duty by the respondent, as their agent, as is in law suffi-cient to infer his liability for the amount paid by them under the insurance so transferred. Fraud was of the essence of the declaration, and the evidence of the respondent directed to that issue cannot be accepted as representing all that he would have brought forward to rebut a charge of negligence, nor had the points connected with that issue been sub-mitted to the court below. Connecticut Fire Ins. Co. v. Kavanagh, [1892] A. C. 473.

The judicial committee declined to hear argument as to certain issues not raised on the pleadings and evidence and not adjudicated upon in the court below. Grey v. Manitoba and North-Western R. W. Co. of Canada, [1897] A. C. 254.

3. Right of Appeal.

Petition of Right.]-An appeal lies to Her Majesty in council from a decision of the court of Queen's bench, Quebec, on a petition of right. The Queen v. Demers, [1900] A. C. 103.

4. Security on Appeal.

Form of Bond.]-On a motion to dis-Statutory Exclusion—Act of Grace.]— allow a bond filed by the defendants (appel-40 Vict. c. 41, s. 28 (D.), providing that the lants) pending an appeal to the privy council, which was in the form given in O. J. Act, s. 8s, with some further recitals, it was objected that the condition of the obligation ought to read "do and shall effectually prosecute such appeal, and pay," &c., instead of "or pay," as given in the form; and also that the condition should be to pay "what had been found due by the court appealed from," instead of "such costs and damages as shall be awarded;"—Held, that "or" was the correct word to use, and that "effectually prosecute" meant "successfully prosecute," but the bond was disallowed on the second objection, it being held that the proper condition must be drawn based upon the language in R. S. O. 1817 c. 38, s. 27, s.-s. 4. International Bridge Co. v. Uanada Southern R. W. Co., 9 P. R. 250.

Stay of Execution—Action.]—An action against the sureties upon a bond given by the defendants in the action of McLaren v. Canada Central R. W. Co. upon the appeal of the defendants to the court of appeal in that cause. The defendants in that action appealed from the judgment of the court of appeal to Her Majesty in council, and in that appeal security had been given and allowed, including security for the whole amount recovered, and execution had been stayed in consequence:—Held, that proceedings must also be stayed in this action. McLaren v. Stephens, 10 P. R. 88.

— Costs.]—Where the plaintiffs were appealing to the privy council from a judgment of the court of appeal dismissing with costs an appeal from the judgment of the Queen's bench division in favour of the defendants with costs, and had given security in $2.000, as required by s. 2 of R. S. O. 1887.

c. ii.—Held, that the order of a Judge of the court of appeal, under s. 5, allowing the security, should not have stayed the proceedings in the action, and so much of the order as related to the stay should be rescinded. Held, also, that the plaintiffs not having given a security to stay execution for the costs in the court of appeal, the stay being removed, the stay being removed, the stay should be rescinded as related to the stay should be rescinded to the stay being removed, the stay of the costs in the form of the stay being removed, the stay of the stay is a stayed, they should give security therefore a stayed, they should give security berefored to money therein, awaiting the mast provided by rule 804, which is made applicable by s. 4 of the Act. Held, also, that if an order for payment out of the high the stay being the securities within the meaning of s. 3, it was stayed by the allowance of the securities, and give allowance of the security, and required no order; if it of the securities, and give and it was for the high the securities of the deciral way proceedings in the court below; and it was for the high the recurring whether such an order as execution," and if not, where the more of the security of the such as order as execution, and it was for the high our the deciral out. McMaster v. Radford, 16 P. R. 20.

II. JUDGMENT OF-ENFORCING.

Rule of Supreme Court — Costs.] — Where the judgment of the supreme court of Canada has been reversed by the privy council, the proper manner of enforcing the judgment of the privy council is to obtain an order making it a rule of the supreme court of Canada. Where such judgment of the privy council was made a rule of court, the court ordered the repayment by one of the parties of costs received pursuant to the judgment so reversed. Lexin v. Hoxee, 14 S. C. B. 729.

III. RIGHT TO ORDER NEW TRIAL.

Jury—Evidence.] — Although the privy combined have the right, if they think fit, to order a new trial on any ground, that power will not be exercised merely where the verdict is not altogether satisfactory, but only where the evidence so strongly preponderates against it as to lead to the conclusion that the jury have either wilfully disregarded the evidence, or failed to understand or appreciate it. Connecticut Mutual Life Ins. Co. of Hartford v. Moore, 6 App. Cas. 644.

PROBATE COURT (NEW BRUNSWICK).

Jurisdiction—Trustees' Accounts.] — A court of probate has no jurisdiction over accounts of trustees under a will, and the passing of accounts containing items relating to the duties of both executors and trustees is not, so far as the latter are concerned, binding the major court, and a court of equility, in a large contract of the court of

I. GENERALLY-GROUNDS FOR.

Error in Law. |-It is no ground for a prohibition that the Judge decided against law and good conscience, if he had jurisdic-tion in the case. Siddall v. Gibson, 17 U. C.

Construction of Statute.] — Pro-hibition will not lie to a division court merely because the Judge has erred in his construction of a statute where he does not, by this error in construction, give himself jurisdiction he does not in law possess. Judgment in 19 O. R. 487 reversed. In re Long Point Co. v. Anderson, 18 A. R. 401.

The facts not being in dispute, prohibition to a division court was granted on the ground that the Judge had given an erroneous inter-pretation to 51 Vict. c. 23, s. 2 (O.), in hold-ing that a magistrate's order thereunder was equivalent to the final judgment of a court, and in entertaining an action thereon for arrears of payments. Re Sims v, Kelly, 20 O. R. 291.

Receiving Order. |- The mother of the judgment debtor by her will empowered executors, if in their discretion they should see fit, to pay the income of her estate, in part or in whole, to and for his benefit and advantage, at such time and in such manner and sums as they should see fit, leaving it to their option and discretion whether they should pay him any sum. An order was made in a division court action, after judgment, appointing the judgment creditor receiver to receive the amount of his judgment from the executors, whenever they should exercise their discretion to pay the judgment debtor the amount of the judgment, or any part thereof. Prohibition was granted against the enforcement of this order:—Held, following The Queen v. Judge of County Court of Lincoln-shire, 20 Q. B. D. 167, that if the order was intended to interfere with the action of the executors, it should not have been made; and if it did not so interfere, it was nugatory. Re McInnes v. McGaw, 30 O. R.

Error in Matter of Practice.]—Semble, the writ will not lie in regard to matters of practice in an inferior Court. In re Clarke, 2 C. L. J. 266.

Where the Judge has jurisdiction over the where the study has jurisdiction over the subject matter of the suit, prohibition will not go for irregularities in mere matters of practice. In re McLean, McLeod, and McLeod, 5 P. R. 467.

The affidavit on which to obtain an attaching order may be made by the attorney of the judgment creditor, or by a partner of the attorney. Semble, that proceedings on such order could not be prohibited on the ground that it was founded on a defective affidavit, that being a mere matter of practice. In re Sato v. Hubbard, S. P. R. 445. See Fee v. McIlhargey, 9 P. R. 329; Mc-Kay v. Palmer, 12 P. R. 219.

Evidence — Examination of Judgment Debtor.] — The refusal of evidence is not ground for prohibition. That the Judge has refused to allow the defendant, under examination upon judgment summons, to make explanations as to his dealing with money lent by and repaid to him after judgment, is not a ground for prohibition against proceeding upon an order for committal for making away with property. Re Reid v. Graham, 25 O. R. 573. See S. C., 26 O. R. 1.

Excess of Jurisdiction.]-An order of prohibition is an extreme measure, to be granted summarily only in a very plain case of excess of jurisdiction on the part of a sub-ordinate tribunal. Re Cummings and County of Carleton, 25 O. R. 607. See S. C., 26 O. 14. 1.

A writ of prohibition will not lie to prevent the execution of the sentence of an inferior tribunal where there has not been absence or excess of jurisdiction in the exercise of its powers, Honan v. Bar of Montreal, 30 S. C. R. 1.

Improper Amendment.] — Plaintiff having stated his claim, at the trial defendant objected to the jurisdiction, and judgment having been given against him, he afterwards obtained a new trial. In grauting it, the Judge allowed the plaintiff to amend his claim, and as amended the claim was clearly within the jurisdiction:— Held, that the amendment being improper would form no ground for prohibition. In re Higginbotham v. Moore, 21 U. C. R. 326.

Jury-Calling on Appeal - Evidence on Appeal.] - After an appeal to the sessions from a conviction by a magistrate for selling liquor after 7 o'clock on Saturday evening, under 32 Vict. c. 32, s. 23 (O.), is confirmed, a prohibition to the sessions will not be granted. Under the above section it is irregular for the Judge who tries the case to call a jury, or to receive depositions of witnesses as evidence, but this is not ground for a prohibition. In re Brown and Wallace, 6 P. R. 1, Matter within Jurisdiction of Inferior Court.]-After the recovery of judgment in a division court against the primary debtor and garnishee, but before the payment of the amount recovered, the debtor made an assignment for the benefit of creditors under R. S. 0. 1897 c. 147, whereupon an application was made by the garnishee to the division court Judge for an order under s. 200 of R. S. O. 1897 c. 60, discharging the debt from the at-tachment, which was refused;—Held, that, the matter being one within the jurisdiction of the Judge, prohibition would not lie. In re Dyer v. Evans, 30 O. R. 637.

Question of Fact. |-Where the Judge found that money was handed over voluntarily by the defendant to a constable upon his arrest, and determined that it could be garnished: — Held, that the question whether the garnishee was indebted to the defendant was a question of fact within the jurisdiction of the inferior court, and that prohibition would not lie. Re Field v. Rice, Re Ford v. Rice, 20 O. R. 309.

Question of Mixed Fact and Law. Held, reversing the judgment in 9 O. R. 274, that the status of C., as a person, or the assignee of a person, who registered a plan, was a question of law and fact combined for the county court Judge to determine upon C.'s application to him, under R. S. O. 1877 c. 111, s. 84, to amend the plan, and that his decision was not examinable in prohibition. In re Chisholm and Town of Oakville, 12 A, R,

See In re Murphy and Cornish, S.P. R. 420.

Territorial Jurisdiction of Division Court—Transfer.]—Under R. S. O. 1887 c. 51, s. 87, as amended by 52 Vict. c. 12, s. 5 (O.), either party in a division court action may, after notice disputing the jurisdiction has been duly given, apply to have the action transferred to another court. If no applica-tion be made, and if in fact there be jurisdic-tion, prohibition will not lie merely because the Judge has assumed that, as no application for a transfer had been made, he had jurisdiction i. e., has not tried the question of juris-But if, in fact, there be no jurisdiction, the objection still holds good, and prohibition will be granted. II. APPLICATION FOR PROHIBITION.

Affidavits - Intituling.]-Affidavits to be Amdavits — Intituling.]—Affidavits to be beed on an application for prohibition should be intituled in the court to which application is to be made, but not in any cause. In re-Miron v. McCabe. 4 P. R. 171; Siddall v. Gibson, 17 U. C. R. 98.

Vol. III. b—182—33

The affidavits for a rule nisi for a prohibition, were intituled, "In the matter of a certion, were initialled, "In the matter of a certain cause in the first division court of the counties of L. and A., in which E. A. M. is plaintiff, and B. D. is defendant:"—Held, that the initialing was unobjectionable. In re Burrowes, 18 C. P. 493.

Costs.] — Prohibition ordered without costs, as the objection to the jurisdiction had not been taken in the court below. In re Murphy and Cornish, 8 P. R. 420.

By R. S. O. 1877 c. 52, s. 2, a successful party on an application for a writ of prohi-bition is entitled to and should be awarded costs, unless the court in the proper exercise of a wise discretion can see good cause for depriving such party of them; and such party should not be deprived of costs unless there appear impropriety of conduct which induced appear impropriety of conduct which induced the litigation, or impropriety in the conduct thereof. Under the circumstances of this case, reported 12 P, R, 450, the defendant was allowed costs of a successful motion for prohibition to a division court. Re MeLeod v. Emigh, 12 P, R, 503,

- Materials before Inferior Court. |--Prohibition was refused where the applicant did not shew that all the materials on which the order which was alleged to have been made without jurisdiction was made, were before the court, so as to enable it to see clearly fore the court, so as to enable it to see clearly whether the county court Judge acted with-out jurisdiction, in which case only a pro-hibition should be granted. In re Grass v, Allan, 26 U. C. R. 123.

- Report of Judge.]—On an application for prohibition to a county court, the Judge's notes at the trial should be accompanied by his report of the case. Fleming v. Livingstone, 6 P. R. 63.

Forum.]-A Judge in chambers has no power to order a prohibition restraining a Judge of a division court from proceeding with a plaint before him. In re Kemp v. Owen, 10 L. J. 269.

Staying Proceedings, | — Where on an application for a prohibition to the vice-chancellor sitting in bankruptcy as the court of review, the party about to be restrained applied for directions that the party moving should declare in prohibition, which was accordingly ordered, and afterwards the same party applied to stay further proceedings without costs, which was opposed by the plaintiff in prohibition, on the ground that be plaintiff in prohibition, on the ground that he partial in fermionion, on the ground that he was proceeding to recover substantial dam-ages—the court refused to stay the proceed-ings. Regiona v. Vice-Chancelor of Upper Canada, 2 U. C. R. 92. See Mittleberger v. Merritt, 2 U. C. R. 413.

There is no authority in this country for a Judge to stay proceedings in the court below pending prohibition. In re Miron v. McCabe, 4 P. R. 171.

Time for Application. |-If the right to prohibition exists, it is optional with the de-fendant to apply at the outset of the division court proceedings, or he may wait till the latest stage of appeal, so long as there is anything to prohibit. In re Brazill v. Johns, 24 O. R. 209.

See In re Brown and Wallace, 6 P. R. 1, ante I.

III. Damages.

In a proceeding in prohibition the plaintiff can only recover nominal damages. For subcan only recover nominal damages. For sub-stantial damages, he must proceed by action after the entry of judgment quod stet pro-hibitio. Mittleberger v. Merritt, 2 U. C. R. 413.

County Court — Ascertainment of Amount.]—The plaintiff claimed $94.88, annexing to his summons particulars of claim, nesting to his summons particulars of claim, shewing an account for goods for $384.23, reduced by credits to the sum sued for; but nothing had been done by the parties to liquidate the amount or ascertain the balance, except a small amount admitted to have been paid, and a credit of $33 given for some returned barrels, but which still left an un-settled balance of upwards of $300:—Held, not within the jurisdiction, and a prohibition was ordered. In re Judge of County Court of United Counties of Northumberland and Durham, 19 C. P. 299.

Inquiry to Ascertain Jurisdiction.] -The Judge of a county court has the right, at the trial of a case, where the jurisdiction of the court is denied, to inquire into the facts so as to ascertain whether or not there be jurisdiction: e.g., to inquire whether there has been a settlement of accounts between the parties. Until such inquiry has been made, prohibition cannot be granted. In re Dixon and Snarr, 6 P. R. 336,

Striking out Part of Claim-Giving Jurisdiction.]-A county court Judge at the trial, upon the application of plaintiff's counsel, ordered a count of the declaration and pleadings relating thereto to be struck out, because they ousted his jurisdiction:
Held, that he had power to do so; and that if a prohibition had been applied for before trial, it would only have been granted as to that count. Fitzsimmons v. McIntyre, 5 P.

Where a county court Judge made an order committing a person for unsatisfactory answers upon his examination as an insolvent debtor under R. S. O. 1897 c. 147, s. 34:— Held, that there was no jurisdiction to make such an order, and the remedy was by motion for prohibition against the order. Rochon, 31 O. R. 122.

- Municipal Elections—Quo Warranto.]—By s. 219 of the Municipal Act, R. S. O. 1897 c. 223, jurisdiction is given respectively to a Judge of the high court, the senior or officiating Judge of the county court, and the master in chambers, to try the validity of a municipal election, and the master in chambers, to try the validity of a municipal election, and by s. 227, when there are more motions than one, all the motions shall be made returnable before the Judge who is to try the first of them. Two motions by different relators to try the validity of the same election were made re-turnable, the first of them before the mas-ter in chambers and the other before the county court Judge, who, notwithstanding ob-jections, proceeded with the motion before him and decided that the proceedings before the master in chambers were collusive, when the county court Judge was prohibited from further proceeding by an order made by a Judge of the high court sitting in chambers:—Held. that the county court Judge having equal and concurrent jurisdiction in respect of the matter with the other named officials, a Judge of the high court sitting in chambers could not under the circumstances prohibit him from proceeding with the trial. Semble, that the county court Judge, who, without knowledge of the prior proceedings, had granted a fiat for like proceedings, had jurisdiction on the return thereof to inquire whether such prior proceedings were collusive, and if so to disregard them. In re Regina ex rel. Hall v. Gowanlock, 29 O. R. 435.

- Municipal Investigation - Persona Designata.]—The council of the city of Toronto, under the provisions of R. S. O. 1887 c. 184, s. 477, passed a resolution directing a county court Judge to inquire into dealings between the city and persons who were or had been contractors for civic works, and ascer-tain if the city had been defrauded out of public moneys in connection with such contracts: to inquire into the whole system of tendering, awarding, carrying out, fulfilling, and inspecting contracts with the city; and to ascertain in what respect, if any, the system of the business of the city in that respect was defective. G., who had been a contractor with the city and whose name was mentioned in the resolution, attended before the Judge and contended that the inquiry as to his contracts should proceed only on specific charges of malfeasance or misconduct, and the Judge refusing to order such charges to be formulated, he applied for a writ of prohibition:—Held, affirming the judgment in 16 A. R. 452, which reversed that in 16 O. R. 275, that the county court Judge was not acting judicially in holding this inquiry; that he was in no sense a court and had no power to pronounce judgment imposing any legal duty or obligation on any person; and he was not, therefore, subject to control by writ of prohibition from a superior court. Godson v. City of Tovonto, 18 S. C. R. 35.

— Removal of Assignee for Creditors—Personal Designata.]—A Judge of a county court, acting under the authority of 48 Vict. c. 25 s. 6 (O.), removed an assignee for creditors and substituted another assignee. The first assignee, as alleged, refused to deliber over the keys of the place of business of the insolvent to the second assignee, and the Judge made an order for the issue of a writ of attachment against the first assignee for contempt.—Held, that the Judge, in acting under the statute, was not exercising the power of the country court, but an independent statutory jurisdiction as persona designata, and had therefore no power to direct the issue of a writ of attachment; and prohibition was ordered. Re Pacquette, 11 P. R. 463.

Division Court—Coverture.]—Held, that under the facts stated in this case, no ground was shewn for a prohibition to the division court: that the suit was clearly within the jurisdiction; and that the defence of coverture should have been set up in the court below. Read v. Wedge, 20 U. C. R. 456.

Territorial Jurisdiction—Giving Jurisdiction.]—Where the holder of a promissory note, payable to "A. B., or bearer," included it over to a third party:—Held, that under C. S. U. C. c. 19, s. 71, an action might be brought against the maker and indorser in the division court for the division in which the indorser resided; and that on a motion for a writ of prohibition, the question whether or not the indorsement was made for the purpose of giving jurisdiction could not be inquired into. O. 1877 c. 74, s. 4, the practice of appealing in such a case is assimilated to that under 33 Vict. c. 47 (D.), which confines the right of appeal to the defendant. Judgment—Excessive Amount.] — Where a division court has jurisdiction at the time of the institution of an action, but, by the addition of interest accruing during its pendency, judgment is given for an amount beyond the jurisdiction of the court, prohibition will be granted until the Judge amends the judgment by striking out the excess; or a part prohibition will be issued to prevent the enforcement of judgment for the excess. Re Elliott v, Biette, 21 O. R. 595.

Severable Claim — Interest.] — The amount claimed in a division court plaint was $109.73, of which $14.73 was for interest. The claim for interest being severable, the prohibition was limited to the excess over $100. Trimble v. Miller, 22 O. R, 500, followed. Re Lott v. tameron, 29 O. R, 70.

PUBLIC HEALTH.

Board of Realth—Corporation—Linbility for Services of Physician—Jandamus.]

—Section 49 of the Public Health Act, R.
S. O. 1887 c. 205, provides that "the treasurer of the municipality shall forthwith upon demand pay out of any moneys of the municipality in his hands the amount of any order given by the members of the local board, or any two of them, for services performed under their direction by virtue of this Act." A physician recovered judgment in a division court against a township local board of health, sued as a corporation, for services performed in a smallpox epidemic. It appeared that the physician had been appointed medical health officer of the municipality by the council, but that before suing the board he had brought an action against the municipal corporation for his services, in which he failed. Upon motion by the physician for a mandamus under s. 49 to compet the members of the board to sign an order upon the treasurer of the municipality for the amount of the judgment recovered: — Held, that, although it might be difficult to conclude that a board of health is constituted a corporation by the Act, yet the judgment of the division court practically decided that this board might be sued as such, and, not being in any way impeached, it could not be treated as a nullity. As there appeared to be no other remedy, the applicant was entitled to the mandamus, Re Derby and Local Board of Health of South Plantagenet, 19 O. R. 51.

Delegation to, of Power to Cancel License.]—A municipal corporation cannot delegate to a board of health power to cancel a license which it may have under 62 Vict. (2) c. 26, s. 37 (2) (0.) Re Foster and City of Hamilton, 31 O. R. 292.

Physician-Dismissal-Remedy.]-Section 67 of the Act by which municipal cor-Section 67 of the Act by which municipal cor-porations were established in Nova Scotia, 42 Vict. c. 1, giving them "the appointment of health with the powers and authorities formerly vested in courts of sessions, does not repeal c, 29 of R. S. N. S., 4th ser., pro-viding for the appointment of boards of batch by the Lieutemant Greeners. viding for the appointment of boards of health by the Lieutenant-Governor in council. A board of health, appointed by the exphysician, to attend upon small-pox patients in the district "for the season" at a fixed rate of remuneration per day. Complaint having been made of the manner in which M.'s duties were performed, he was notified that another medical man had been employed as a consulting physician, but, refusing to consult with the new appointee, he was dismissed from his employment. He brought an action against the municipality, setting forth in his statement of claim the facts of his engagement and dismissal, and claiming payment for his services up to the date at which ment for his services up to the date at which the last small-pox patient was cured, and special damages for loss of reputation by the dismissal. The Act R. S. N. S., 4th ser., c. 29, s. 12, allows the board of health to incur reasonable expenses, which are defined by 37 Vict. c. 6, s. 1 (N. S.), to be services performed and bestowed and medicine supplied by the physicians in carrying out its provisions, and makes such expenses a district, city, or county charge, to be assessed by the justices, and levied as ordinary county rates:

Held, per Fournier, Gwynne, and Tascherau, JJ., affirming the judgment of the court below, that the contract with M. was to pay him 86.50 per day so long as small-pox should prevail in the district during the season; that his dismissal was wrongful; and the fulfilment of the contract could be enforced against the municipality by action. Per Ritchie, C. J., and Strong, J.—There was sufficient ground for the dismissal of M. Assuming, however, his dismissal to have been unjustifiable, M.'s only remedy would have been by mandamus to compel the municipality to make an assessment to cover the expense incurred. But the ment to cover the expense incurred. But the claim being really one for damages for wrong-ful dismissal, it did not come within the "reasonable expenses" which may be incurred by a board of health and made a charge on the county, and the municipality was, therefore, not liable. Per Patterson, J.—The proper remedy for the recovery of the expenses mentioned in s. 12 is by action, and not by mandamus to compel an assessment; but a claim for damages for wrongful disbut a claim for damages for wrongful dismissal does not come within the section, and is not made a county charge. County of Cape Breton v. McKay, 18 S. C. R. 639.

-Spread of Infectious Disease-Liability. |-The directions of s. 84 of the Public Health Act, R. S. O. 1887 c. 205, are imperative. Where, instead of acting as directed in that section, by isolating and taking care of a person suffering from an infectious disease, the members of a local board of health send him into an adjoining municipality, they are personally liable to repay to that municipality moneys reasonably expended in carring for him and preventing the spread of the disease. Township of Logan v. Hurlburt, 23 A. R. 628.

Medical Health Officer.] — Λ medical health officer is not an "employee" within the meaning of R. S. O. 1877 c. 47, 187. Re Mache v. Hutchinson, 12 P. R. 167.

Summary Conviction—By-law.]—Held, that the unloading of manure from a car on a certain part of railway premises into waggons, to be carried away, came within the terms of a by-law amending the by-law appended to the Public Health Act, R. S. O. 1887 c. 205, and prohibiting the unloading of manure on said part of said premises; that the use of the word "manure" in the amending by-law was not of itself objectionable; and that it was not essential to shew that the manure might endanger the public health. A conviction for unloading a car of manure on the premises, as contrary to the by-law, was therefore affirmed. Regina v. Redmond, Regina v. Redmond, Regina v. Redmond, Regina v. Rayn, Regina v. Burk, 24 O. R. 331.

By-law—Appeal to Sessions.]—
Where there is a conviction for an offence under the by-law set out in the schedule to the Public Health Act, R. S. O. 1887 c. 205, as distinguished from any of the provisions in the Act itself, an appeal will lie from such convictions to the sessions, notwithstanding s. 112, which has no application. Regina v. Coursey, 26 O. R. 685. Reversed on other grounds, 27 O. R. 181.

Agent of Owner.] — By the sixth clause of a city by-law passed under the Public Health Act. R. S. O. 1887 c. 205, it was provided that before proceeding to construct, reconstruct, or alter any portion of the drainage, ventilation, or water system of a dwelling-house, &c., "the owner or his agent constructing the same" should file in the engineer's office an application for a permit therefore, which should be accompanied with a specification or abstract thereof, &c.; and by the eleventh clause, that, after the approval of such plan or specification, no alteration or deviation therefrom would be allowed, except on the application of the "owner or of the agent of the owner" is defined as meaning the person for the time being receiving the rents of the lands on his own account, or as an agent or trustee of any such person who would so receive the same if such lands and premises were let:—Held, that the agent intended by the Act and coming within the terms of the by-law, meant a person acting for the owner to reconstruct the plumbing in his dwelling-house. Certainty—Place—Adjudication of Forfeiture.]—Upon a motion on the return of a habeas corpus to discharge the prisoner, who was convicted of keeping a house of ill-fame:—Held, that the conviction was bad on its face for uncertainty in not naming a place where the offence was committed. Held, also, that it was defective because it did not contain an adjudication of forfeiture of the fine imposed. Regina v. Cyr., 12 P. R. 24.

Time — Place — Evidence.] — See Regina v. Williams, 37 U. C. R. 540, ante (JUSTICE OF THE PEACE.)

— Variance—Commitment.]—The prisoner was convicted by the police magistrate for the city of Toronto, for that she "did on." &c., "at the said city of Toronto, keep a common disorderly bawdy house on Queen atreet, in the said city of Toronto, keep atreet, in the said city." and committed to zaol at hard labour for six months. A habeas corpus and certicars issued: in return to which the commitment, conviction, information, and depositions were brought up. On application for her discharge:—Held, no objection that the convention was the keeper of." &c., and the conviction "that she did keep." both differing from the statute, which designates the offence as "keeping any disorderly house, &c.; for all these expressions convey the same idea. Nor that the conviction was not sustained by the information, the latter being that defendant was the keeper of a disorderly house, and the former for keeping a common disorderly hawdy house; for the commitment would not be void because of a variance between the original information and the conviction made after hearing evidence. Nor that the original information and the conviction made after hearing evidence. Nor that the original information and the conviction made after hearing evidence. Nor that the original information and the conviction made after hearing evidence. Nor that the offence of keeping a common disorderly bawdy house was not sufficiently certain, for the legal meaning of the last two words is clear, and if keeping a disorderly house he no offence, the nddition of that votal the only surplusage. Regina v. Manro, 24 U. C. R. 44.

Fine—Costs—Amount of.1—The Act 32 & 33 Viet. c. 32, s. 17 (D.), provides that the magistrate may condemn the accused to pay a fine not exceeding, with the costs in the case, $190:—Held, that the meaning of this is, that the amount of the costs in the case shall be deducted from $100, and that the balance or difference shall be the utmost limit of the fine; and that the conviction in this case, being to pay the sum of $100 without costs, was therefore bad. Regina v. Cyr. 12 P. R. 24.

Payment to Magistrate, 1—The conviction and warrant of commitment ordered the defendant to be imprisoned for six months, and to pay within the said period to said magistrate the sum of $100 without costs, to be applied according to law, and in default of payment before the termination of said period, further imprisonment for six months:

—Held, bad, for uncertainty in requiring the fine to be paid to the magistrate personally, instead of to the gaoler. Regina v. Newton, 11 P. R. 98.

Husband and Wife—Joint Conviction.]
—There may be joint conviction against husband and wife for keeping a house of ill-fame: the keeping has nothing to do with the ownership of the house, but with the management of it. Regina v. Williams, 10 Mod. 63, and Rex v. Dixon. ib. 325, followed. Regina v. Warren, 16 O. R. 590.

Imprisonment.]—A conviction, under C. S. C. c. 105, for keeping a house of ill-fame, or being an immate of such a house, adjudicating that the accused should pay a fine of $50 forthwith, and be imprisoned for three months unless the fine be sooner paid, is not warranted by s. 16. In re Slater, 9 L. J. 21.

A conviction for keeping a house of illfame under 32 & 33 Vict. cc. 28 and 32 (O.) is bad where a fine and costs are imposed and in default imprisonment. Regina v. Bell, 13 C. L. J. 200.

Distress.)—A conviction under 32 & 33 Vict. c. 28 (D.), for keeping a house of ill-fame, ordered payment of a fine and costs, to be collected by distress, and in default of distress ordered imprisonment:—Held, good. Regina v, Walker, 7 O. R. 186.

Distress—Certiorari,]— A conviction for keeping a disorderly house and house of ill-fame: — Held, had for awarding, after the adjudication of a penalty by fine and imprisonment, further imprisonment in default of sufficient distress or of non-payment of the fine. Held, also, that this was not a mere formal defect within s. 30 of 32 & 33 Vict. c. 32 (D.) Held, also, that the effect of s. 28 was not to take away the writ of certiorari. Regina v. Richardson, 11 P. R. 35.

Order—Absence of Adjudication.] — The defendant was convicted under proceedings taken under 32 & 33 Viet, c. 32 (D.), not 32 & 33 Viet, c. 28 (D.), for keeping a house of silf-fame. The conviction merely "ordered" but did not "adjudge" any imprisonment or any forfeiture of the fine imposed:—Held had, as substituting the personal order of the magistrate for a condemnation or adjudication. Regina v. Neuton, 11 P. R. 98.

Satisfactory Account of Accused.]—
The conviction and warrants charged that plaintiff "idi unlawfully keep a certain bawdy house and house of ill-fame for the resort of prostitutes, and is a vagrant within the meaning of the statute," &c., not alleging that she did not give a satisfactory account of herself:

—Held, sufficient. Regina v. Arscott, 9 O. R.
541, dissented from. Arscott v. Lilley, 11 O.
12, 152.

Sufficiency of Evidence — Reference to Statute.)—On an application to quash a conviction of the defendant by the police magistration of the defendant by the police magistration of ill-fame, there being evidence upon which the magistrate could convict, the court refused to interfere. In the conviction the offence was stated to be against the statute in such case made and provided:— Held, that if not constituted an offence under 32 & 33 Vict. c. 32 (D.), the reference to the statute might be treated as surplusage, and the conviction sustained under the common law; but that the reference to the statute might be respects different from the common law; Regina v. Flint, 4 O. R. 214.

See Regina v. Arscott, 9 O. R. 541.

2. Convictions of Inmates and Frequenters.

Frequenter—Offence—Costs.]—Held, that a conviction under 32 & 33 Vict. c. 32, s. 2, s. e. 6 (D.), for being an unlawful (instead of an habitual) frequenter of a house of ill-fame, and which adjudged the payment of costs, which is unauthorized by the statute, must be quashed. That section makes the being such habitual frequenter, a substantial offence, punishable as in s. 17, and does not merely create a procedure for trial and punishment. Regina v. Clark, 2 O. R. 523.

Inmate—Satisfactory Account.]—Upon a charge against an inmate of a house of ill-fame under s.s. (j.) of s. S of R. S. C. c. 157, it is not necessary to shew that the accused was called upon to account for her presence in the house before arrest; the concluding words of the sub-section, "not giving a satisfactory account of themselves," are to be read as applying only to frequenters, and not to keepers or immates. Regina v. Levecque, 30 U. C. R. 509, distinguished. Regina v. Remon, 16 O. R. 5500.

II. PROSTITUTES AND VAGRANTS.

Conviction — Jurisdiction of Justice.]—
The prisoner had been convicted by one justice of the peace of being a vagrant under 32 & 33 Vict. c. 28 (D.), which requires the conviction to be "before any stipendiary or police magistrate, mayor, or warden, or any two justices of the peace:"—Held, that the conviction was bad, as it did not appear that the justice was a police magistrate. Quere, whether the conviction would have been good if it had appeared in the warrant that he was acting for the police magistrate under 36 Vict. c. 48, s. 308 (O.), or whether two justices would not have been required. Regina v. Clancey, 7 P. R. 35.

ment.]—By s.-s. 2 of s. 8 of R. S. C. c. 157, any loose, idle, or disorderly person, or varrant, shall upon summary conviction before two justices of the peace be deemed guilty of a misdemeanour, and liable to a fine not exceeding $50, or to imprisonment not exceeding six months, or to both. By 8, 62 of R. S. C. c. 178, the justices are authorized to issue a distress warrant for enforcing payment of a fine; and, if issued, to detain the defendant in custody, under s. 62, until its return; and, if the return is "not sufficient distress," then to imprison for three months. Two justices of the peace for the city of Toronto, in the absence of the police magistrate for the said city, convicted the defendant for an offence under said Act, and imposed a fine of $50, and, in default of payment for thwith, directed imprisonment for six months unless the fine were sooner paid:—then, the said city of the said city of the said city of the said city and the said city of the Disorderly Conduct — Disturbance — Drunkenness.]—The Act R. S. C. c. 157, S. S. (f.), provides that "all persons who cause a disturbance in any street or highway by screaming, swearing, or singing, or by being drunk, or by impeding or incommoding peaceable passengers . are loose, dile, or disorderly persons within the meaning of this section." The defendant was convicted and committed for that he "unlawfully did cause a disturbance in a public street . by being drunk, and then was a vagrant, loose, idle, and disorderly person within the meaning of the Act respecting vagrants." The evidence disclosed that the defendant was drunk, and that he was guilty of impeding and incommoding peaceable passengers, but it negatived his causing a disturbance in the street by being drunk:—Held, that no offence of the nature described in the conviction and commitment was committed by the defendant, and an order was made for his discharge. Regina v. Dully, 12 P. R. 411.

Means of Maintenance—Character.]—
The defendant registered his name and address at the American Hotel, Toronto, and on the same day was arrested at a railway station, having been pointed out to the police by some of the railway officials as a suspicious character. On his person were found two cheques, one for $700 the other for $900, which were sworn to be such as are used by "conidence men." a mileage ticket nearly used up in favour of another person, and $8 in cash. He offered no explanation of the cheques or the ticket, and gave no information about himself: — Held, that the Vagrant Act did not warrant his arrest, much less his conviction. Before a person can be convicted of being a vagrant of the first class named in the Act ("all idle persons who, not having visible means of maintaining themselves, live without employment") he must have acquired in some degree a character which brings him within it as an idle person, who having no visible means of maintaining himself, i. e., not "paying his way," or being apparently able to do so, yet lives without employment. Regina v. Bassett, 10 P. R. 386.

Crime—Evidence of Reputation.]—
The defendant was summarily convicted under 32 & 33 Vict. c. 28, s. 1 (D.), as "a person who, having no peaceable profession or calling to maintain himself by, but who does, for the most part, support himself by crime, and then was a vagrant," &c. The evidence shewed that the defendant did not support himself by any peaceable profession or calling, and that he consorted with thieves and reputed thieves; but the witnesses did not positively say that he supported himself by crime; —Held, that it was not to be inferred that the defendant supported himself by crime; that to sustain the conviction there should have been statements that witnesses believed he got his living by thieving, or by aiding and acting with thieves, or by such other acts and means as shewed he was pursuing crime. Regina v. Organ, 11 P. R. 497.

Satisfactory Account of Accused — Evidence—Pitace of Offence.] — A conviction under 32 & 33 Vict. c. 28 (D.), for that V. L. was, in the night time of the 24th February, 1870, a common prostitute, wandering in the public streets of the city of Ottawa, and not giving a satisfactory account of herself, contrary to this statute:—Held, bad, for not shewing sufficiently that she was asked, before or at the time of being taken, to give an account of herself, and did not do so satisfactorily. Semble, proceedings having been taken under 29 & 30 Vict. c. 45 (D.), that the evidence might be looked at; and if so, it was plainly insufficient, in not shewing that the place in which she was found was within the statute, or that she was a common prostitute. Regina v. Levecque, 30 U. C. R. 509.

Vagrant Act, 32 & 33 Vict, c. 28 (D.), declares certain persons or classes of persons to be vagrants, amongst others, "all common prostitutes or night walkers wandering in the fields, public streets, highways, lanes, or places of public meeting, or gathering of people, not giving a satisfactory account of themselves, all keepers of bawdy houses and houses of ill-fame, or houses for the resort of prostitutes, and persons in the habit of prostitutes, and persons in the habit of frequenting such houses, not giving a satisfactory account of themselves;" and that they "shall upon conviction be guilty of a misdementour, and punishable," &c.; — Held, that the Act does not, on its true construction, declare that being a prostitute, &c., makes such person liable to punishment as such; but only those who, when found at the places mentioned, under circumstances suggesting impropriety of purpose, on request or demand are unable to give a satisfactory account of themselves. Regina y. Aracott, 9 O. R. 541. But see Arscott y. Lälley, 11 O. R. 153, and cl. 1.

III. SEDUCTION.

Abduction and Seduction of Young Girl—Distinct Offences.]—The prisoner was convicted under R. S. C. c. 162, s. 44, the Act relating to "offences against the person," for unhawfully taking an unmarried girl under the age of sixteen years out of the possession and against the will of her father. On the same day the prisoner was again tried and convicted under R. S. C. c. 157, s. 3, the Act relating to "offences against public morals," for the seduction of the said girl, being previously of chaste character, and between the ages of twelve and sixtern years of age:—Held, that the offences were several and distinct, and that a conviction on the first indictment did not preclude a conviction on the second one. Regina v. Smith, 19 O. R. 714.

See also SEDUCTION.

IV. SWEARING.

Public Place, I — A city by-law enacted that no person should make use of any profane swearing, obscene, blasphemous, or grossly insulting language, or be guilly of any other immorality or indecency, in any street or rubile place:—Held, that the object of the by-law was to prevent an injury to public morals, and applied to a street, or a public place eiusdem generis with a street, and not to a private office in the custom house. I. APPLICATION AND PETITION.

Affidavit — Schedule,1—The schedule of particulars referred to in the petitioner's affidavir should be identified by the commissioner in like manner as any other exhibit.. Re Dickson, 3 Ch. Ch. 352.

Who should Make.1—Although it is not imperative that the affidavit in proof of title should be made by the petitioner, some valid reason should be given why it is not so made when such is the case. Re Rundel, 4 Ch. Ch. 71.

Amendment of Petition — Plan.]—
Where, pending the investigation of the title, the petitioner laid out the land in village lots and registered a plan:—Held, that the petition must be amended in accordance with the plan. Re Morse, S P. R. 475.

Certificate of Counsel. —The certificate of counsel in support of a petition should follow the language of s. S. and state to the effect that he has investigated the title, &c. A certificate of counsel that he had corresponded with the agent of the petitioner on the subject of the various matters set forth in the petition, and believed them to be true:—Held, insufficient. Re Dickson, 3 Ch. Ch. 352.

Cross-petition — Evidence.]—A contestant under the Quieting Titles Act must file a petition in his own name before a certificate can issue in his favour, but he may use on such petition the evidence adduced on the petition in which he was contestant. Re Dunham, 8 P. R. 472.

Service of Petition — Infants.]—In a proceeding by petition under the Quieting Titles Act service on the official guardian is good service upon infants who are required to be notified of the proceedings. Re Murray, 13 P. R. 367.

Status of Petitioner — Consent.]—Section 1 of the Act does not apply to the case of a vendee who has contracted to purchase, but who has not completed his contract. Where such a vendee filed a petition without first obtaining the consent of the vendor, the court, in the exercise of its discretion under s. 2, refused to entertain the petition. Re Brown, 3 Ch. Ch. 158.

Where a petitioner under the Quieting Titles \mathbf{Act} has only an estate in fee in remainder, the consent of the tenant for life must be obtained before the petition can be filed. Re Petten, 8 P. R. 470.

— Married Woman—Next Friend.]—
A married woman applying under this Act must proceed by next friend, notwithstanding the provision of s. 41 of 29 Vict. c. 2. Re
Howland, 4 Ch. Ch. 74.

But it was held otherwise in Re McKim, 6 P. R. 190.

Substitution of Petitioners.]—Persons to whom land has been conveved after the registration of the certificate of the filing of the petition, and pending the investigation of the title, must be substituted as petitioners. Re Cummings, S P. R. 473.

See Re West-half Con. 6, Mono, 6 P. R. 150, post V. 4.

II. CERTIFICATE.

Erroneous Issue — Motion — Notice.]— Where an erroneous certificate had been issued but not registered, and no deed or incumbrance since made affecting the land, a motion on petition that a proper certificate issue was granted ex parte. Bradley v. McDonell, 2 Ch. Ch. 274.

Ex Parte Issue—False Affidavit—Costs.]
—A certificate granted ex parte on a false affidavit was set aside with costs, notwithstanding the contention that the notice as to the service of which the false allegation was made would not have been directed had the full facts been before the court; the court declining to enter into any question of merits. Re Ashford, 3 Ch. Ch. 77.

Form of.] — Mowat, V.-C., expressed his intention to direct the referee in future to draw up orders in similar terms to reports of masters; and that he "find and certify" instead of "adjudging and determining." Re Referee, 2 Ch. Ch. 22.

See Re Gordon, 4 C. L. J. 96.

III. CLAIMS OF CONTESTANTS.

Adverse Claim—Adjudication on—Time—Consent.]—Where a person holding a sher-iff's deed put in an adverse claim, it was held that the referee could by consent report thereon before he was ready to decide on the petitioner's tile, but should not do so without consent; that the petitioner must make out his title: and that until he has done so he cannot, generally, demand an adjudication on an adverse claim. In re Cameron, 14 Gr. 612.

Costs of Former Proceedings Unpaid.]—In prosecuting a claim to land before the referee of titles, a contestant, served with notice, will not be prevented from asserting his rights until payment of costs of proceedings instituted by him against the claimant, in respect of the property in question, ordered to be paid by the contestant. Shepherd v. Haybull, 13 Gr., 681.

Possession — Proof of Title—Onus.]—A contestant who is in possession should be permitted to point out defects in the claimant's prima facie title, before being called upon to prove his own title. Armour v. Smith, 16 Gr. 380.

Tax Sale — Invalidity—Lien.]—Where a contestant sets up a tax sale, which is found invalid, he is entitled to a lien for the taxes paid by his purchase money, with the proper percentage to which the owner would have been liable if no sale had taken place. In re Caneron. 14 Gr. 612.

Statute of Limitations.]—The filing of a petition is not such a proceeding as will save the rights of a party contestant, otherwise barred by the Statute of Limitations. Laing v. Accy, 14 Gr. 33.

IV. Costs.

Establishing Title by Possession.]—Where a party having acquired title to land by adverse possession, institutes proceedings under the Act to quiet his title, he must establish his right at his own expense; costs do not follow as a matter of course in proceedings under this Act; and, semble, that although such adverse title is established, the applicant may be made to pay the costs of an unsuccessful contestant. Low v. Morrison, 14 Gr. 192.

Referee's Power.]—The referee had dismissed the petition for a certificate of title, with costs. On motion to set aside such order as irregular, the court held that the referee had power over costs, and refused to set aside the order. Re Referee, 2 Ch. Ch. 22.

See Shepherd v. Hayball, 13 Gr. 681, ante III.; Re Ashford, 3 Ch. Ch. 77, ante II.

V. EVIDENCE.

1. Abstract.

Date of.]—The certificate to be produced from the county registrar as to the state of the registered title, must shew what memorials were registered up to the time of registering a certificate of the filing of the petition. Exparte Hill, 2 Ch. Ch. 348.

Registrars' abstracts must be continued to the date of the certificate of title. Re Cummings, 8 P. R. 473.

Dispensing with. — Where in a petition under the Quieting Titles Act it was shewn that the registrations on the whole lot of which the land in question formed a part, numbered over 569, and that it would take six months and cost $100 to prepare an abstract:—Held, that the abstract might be dispensed with, if the affidavit of a provincial land surveyor were filed, proving that he had examined all the registrations on the lot, and that only certain specified numbers affected the land in question. Re Morse (2), 8 P. R. 477.

2. Execution and Taxes.

Executions against Prior Owner.]— Where the petitioner's title was acquired within two years before the filing of the petition, the sheriff's certificate was required as to executions against the prior owner, as any such executions, if duly renewed, might bind the land. Ex parte Lyons, 2 Ch. Ch. 357.

Payment of Taxes.]—The court has no jurisdiction to grant a certificate, unless all taxes except those for the current year have been paid. Ex parte Chamberlain, 2 Ch. Ch. 359.

Sheriff's Certificate.]—A certificate from the sheriff of no executions against the petitioner must be produced. Re Rundel, 4 Ch. Ch. 71.

—Where a sheriff certificate—Contents.1 on a particular day any executions against the lands of the petitioner: — Held, insufficient, and that he should have certified that he had not had any for the thirty days previous, and that the lands in question had not been sold under execution for the preceding six months. Where the county treasurer certified that "there is no tax charged in his office against lot," &c:—Held, insufficient, and that it should be shewn that the return of lands in arrear for taxes for the preceding year had or had not been made by the township treasurer; also, that the county treasurer's certificate should shew that the land had not been sold for taxes for eighteen months preceding its date. Re Harding, 3 Ch. Ch. 252.

3. Lost Deeds.

Discharge of Mortgage — Scarch for Mortgagee—Notice to—Dispensing with.]—A mortgage more than twenty years old uppeared upon the registrar's abstract. A discharge of most discharge of the mortgage ever having the produced in the side of the mortgage ever having the produced it was stated on affidded that nothing was shown of the mortgages, and that no demand had ever been had been paid; and that no acknowledge the side of the mortgage delt, though nothing had been paid; and that no acknowledge of the produced of search for the mortgage contains a side of the produced of search for the mortgage of their propresentatives; that a single expanded of search for the mortgages who called the place, would not bar claims of mortgages who could not be served with notice; but if they could not be found, notice might be dispensed with after a great length of time, and satisfaction presumed. Re Caverhill, S. C. L. J. 70.

Power of Attorney—Suspicious Circumstances—Possession—Notice.].—To complete the chain of the paper title to the land in respect to which a certificate of title was prayed, production of proof of a power of atorney from the patentee to one d. who of a corney from the patentee to one d. who of a corney from the patentee to one d. who of the corney from the patentee to one d. who of the corney from the patentee to one d. who of the corney from the patentee to one d. who of the corney from the patentee of it was an affidavit of one d. it, and did not state his means of the corne suspicious circumstances with search of the corner of the power. The only evidence as to passession was a statement in the petitioner's affidavit that one H., to whom the petitioner agreed to sell the land in 1866, was still in possession, and that possession had always accompanied the title. No notice appeared to have been given to the person directed to receive them. The evidence as to possession and the existence of the power of attorney was held insufficient, and a certificate of title was refused until further evidence should be given to clear up the suspicious circumstances in the deed said to be executed in pursuance of the power of attorney, and affording positive proof of the existence of the power, or elso shewing the exercise of acts of ownership, which would justify the presumption that a conveyance of the legal estate had been made by the patentee. Notice was directed to be given to the preson in possession, and an affidavit as to adverse claims ordered to Searches for Particulars — Entry in Rook.]—In seeking to prove the existence and contents of a lost deed, the affidavit of the petitioner alone as to searches is not sufficient; the particulars as to searches, by whom made, where, and why there made, should be given, and such a case generally as would before a court be sufficient to let in secondary evidence. A memorandum made in a book by a person through whom the petitioner claimed, was held to be evidence in favour of petitioner. It is bett, 3 Ch. Ch. 230.

Secondary Evidence — Memorial—Possession.]—In examining a title under the Act for Quieting Titles, a memorial executed by the grantee is good secondary evidence where the possession has been in accordance with the title so claimed. The weight of authority appears to be also that such evidence is admissible in ordinary suits. A conveyance executed by a married woman and her husband in the year 1825, was lost:—Held, that the registration of the memorial was no evidence of the wife having been examined or a certificate of the examination having been indorsed on the deed. Long possession, in connection with other circumstances, may entitle a court or jury to presume the due examination and certificate, without express evidence of such examination and certificate. Re Higgins, 4 Ch. Ch. 128.

See Ex parte Chamberlain, 2 Ch. Ch. 352; Re Gordon, 4 C. L. J. 96.

4. Possession.

Accompanying Title.] — Proof is indispensable either that possession has always accompanied the title under which petitioner claims, or that some sufficient reason exists for not adducing such proof. Ex parte Wright, 2 Ch. Ch. 355.

Where the petitioner seeks to establish title by possession, the possession must be uninterrupted possession, as owner of the land, and should be in accordance with the title set up. Re Bell, 3 Ch. Ch. 239.

Knowledge of Possession—Patente of Croven.]—A petitioner claiming by length of possession against the patentee of the Crown, failed to shew that the patentee or his heir had any knowledge of such possession. It was held that he must shew possession for forty years, or such knowledge. Re Linet, 3 Ch. Ch. 230.

Notice to Holder of Paper Title—Search for.]—A petitioner claiming title by length of possession must prove possession for the requisite length of time, by clear and positive evidence, which should be of more than one independent witness. In such a case, a notice prepared by the referee should be served upon the person having the paper title, if he can be found; but if not, evidence should be put in, both of search for him and his representative; and if such search prove fruitless, possession should be shewn to have been long enough against him, even though he had no notice of such possession. Re Caverhill, S C. L. J. 50.

Petitioner—Estate in Possession.]—The court will not grant a certificate to quiet the title of a party who claims to be the legal owner in fee simple, but who is not in possession and is kept out by a person who disputes his title. He must first recover possession of the premises. Re Muhdolland, 18 Gr. 528.

Proceeding under the Quieting Titles Act, will not be made a substitute for an action of ejectment, and the petitioner must therefore have substantially an estate in possession. Re Bell. 3 Ch. Ch. 239.

Section 21 of 36 Vict. c. 8 (O.) does not make any alteration in the rule that a petitioner under the Act for Quieting Titles must have substantially an estate in possession, or a certificate will be refused. Re West-half Con. 6, Mono, 6 P. R. 150.

Wild Land — Portion — Certificate.]—
Quired by adverse possession against the legal paper title, his certificate must shew of what portion of the lot the claimant has been in possession, for by the occupation of one or more acres of a wild lot of land a party will not acquire title to the whole lot. Love v. Morrison, 14 Gr. 182.

See Re Higgins, 4 Ch. Ch. 128; Re Street, 4 Ch. Ch. 99; Re Gordon, 4 C. L. J. 96.

5 Other Cases.

Bill Impeaching Petitioner's Conveyance.]—Where a petitioner makes out his title satisfactorily he is entitled to a certificate, unless the title can be successfully impeached at law or in equity; and if a bill filed by the contestants impeaching the transaction by which the claimant's title arose, could be successfully resisted by the claimant on any ground, it will form no obstacle to a certificate. Laing v. Matthews, 14 Gr. 36.

Defective Materials — Possession—Missions Boeds — Certificate Subject to Bouerr—Notice to Parties Interested—Mutual Insurance Companies' Policies.]—See Re Gordon, 4 C. L. J. 96.

Description of Land—Onus.]—In proceeding to quiet a title under the Act, the pertitioner adduced evidence to proce a cossession of the Act, the pertitioner adduced evidence to proce a cossession of the Contest of the

Will—Decd — Rectifying.]—Where a petitioner under the Quieting Titles Act claimed title as devisee of certain land, but the description of the land in the will was different to that of the land which he claimed:
—Held, that he might establish a title by shewing a misdescription in the will. But where a misdescription occurred in a deed:—Held, that the petitioner had merely established an equity to have the deed reformed, and that under the Act the court could not declare the title as though the deed had in fact been reformed. Re Callaghan, S. P. R. 474.

Documents—Forgery—Trial by Jury.]—
Where the question involved on an application for a certificate of title was the legal title to the property, and the proper determination of the question depended on the credibility of witnesses against or in favour of certain old documents which were impeached as forgeries, the court directed an action of ejectment to be brought, in order that the question might be tried by a jury of the county where the principal witnesses resided.

Brouse v. Stapner, 16 Gr. 1.

—— Forgery—Determination by Court.]
—The court, upon the conflicting evidence in this case, upon a petition under the Act, decided that a power of attorney and bond relied upon were forgeries, S. U., ib. 553.

The genuineness of the documents on which the petitioner claimed title having been impeached, and the evidence being doubtful, the court refused a certificate, without pronouncing absolutely upon the question. Graham v. Mencilly, 16 Gr. 661.

Independent Evidence.] — Every material fact which is capable of being proved by independent evidence, ought to be proved; thus, an affidavit by petitioner himself of search for missing deeds is insufficient. Exparte Chamberlain. 2 Ch. Ch. 352.

Infants—Proof of Service.]—Where there was no evidence to shew that infants had been served with a decree of foreclosure, reserving to them a day to shew cause on attaining their majority, but it was shewn that they had been served with notice of proceedings under the Quieting Titles Act, proof of service of the decree was dispensed with. Re Gilchrist, 8 P. R. 472.

Married Woman—Conveyance to—Bona Fides—Affidavits, 1—Where property is claimed by or on behalf of a wife under a conveyance to her during coverture, an explanation of the transaction should be given on oath to shew that it was bona fide, and good as against the husband's creditors; the affidavits for this purpose should be by the petitioners, and should be satisfactorily corroborated by disinterested persons of known credibility. Exparte Lyon, 2 Ch. Ch. 357.

Mutual Policies — Affidavit.]—The liability of parties insured in mutual insurance companies is a charge on the property insured; and an affidavit is necessary stating that there is no such policy in existence, or only the policies named. Ex parte Hill. 2 Ch. Ch. 348.

Purchaser for Value.] — If it appear that, had a bill been filed to enforce the opposing claim, the applicant would have had a good defence as a bona fide purchaser for value without notice, he will be entitled to a certificate. Cochrane v. Johnson, 12 Gr. 177.

Supplying Deficiency in Proof.]—It is proper to give a further opportunity to a constant to supply any deficiency in the proof of his title, as well as to the petitioner. In re Cameron, 14 Gr., 612.

Tenants in Common—Conveyance to Co-tenant — Explanations.] — A petitioner found entitled as one of two tenants in common, sought to obtain a certificate as sole owner, producing a conveyance from his covery that the granter had been informed that the control that the granter had been informed that the covery that the granter as tenants in common; and had also been informed as to the value of the land. Re Doughertu, 4 Cl. Ch. Sh.

Vesting Order—Presumption of Regularity.]—Where a petitioner under the Quieting Titles Act claimed title through a vesting order made upon a sale under a decree in an administration suit:—Held, following Gunn v. Doble, 15 Gr. 665, that, in the absence of proof to the contrary, the order should be assumed to be regular, and that it was unnecessary to give evidence shewing title. Rc Morse, 8 P. R. 475.

Voluntary Grantee — Explanations.]—Where the former owner, a person of the same name as the petitioner, had conveyed the land to the petitioner a few days before the filing of the petition; and the title appeared simple, the court called for explanations, as it was necessary to take care that the Act was not being made use of for any improper purpose, such as defeating the creditors of the owner by getting the title of a voluntary gamtee quieted before the creditors are aware of the artempt to defraud. Exparte Wright, 2 Ch. 6355.

VI. NOTICES.

Posting.]—It is necessary to shew that the notices posted at the court house and neartest post office were continued for the period directed by the referee. Ex parte Hill, 2 Ch. Ch. 348.

Where the advertisement in a quieting titles proceeding was posted at another court house than that required by 6, 0, Ch. 594;—Held, that the irrgeularity might be waived under R. S. O. 1887 c. 113, ss. 45, 46. Re Harris, 12 P. R. 430.

Proof of Service of Notice.]—The effect of a certificate under the Act is so stringent that great particularity must be exercised by the court in seeing that all parties entitled to notice have been duly and regularly served, and that strict proof of such service be given. The entry in a docket of a deceased solicitor of the fact of service of a notice of anotication, was considered insufficient evidence of notice having been given to all the tenants entitled to notice. Exparte Palmer, 2 Ch. Ch. 351.

To whom Given—Creditors.1—Where the title had passed through the hands of a trustee to pay creditors, an advertisement was directed to be published calling on such creditors to shew cause why a certificate should not issue, Re Rundet, 4 Ch. Ch. 71.

-- Heirs.]—When a year after the testator's death a petition for a certificate was filed on the part of his devisees, notice was required to be given to the heirs or some of them. Exparte Hill, 2 Ch. Ch. 348.

Owners—Inquiry.]—Where a title by possession is relied on by a petitioner, notice of his application must, under the direction of the referee, be given to the persons who but for such possession would be the owners, unless it has been shewn that due inquiry has been made for such persons without success. Ex parte Chamberlain, 2 Ch, Ch, 252.

Where the netitioner claimed the north-east part of a lot under a will devising the north-west part, and it was alleged that the word "morth-west" was a clerical error in the will, all the parties interested in the opposite view were required to be served with a notice of the application, signed by the referee or inspector—minesa a case should be made for dispensing with service on some of them. Exparte Lugons, 2 Ch. Ch. 357.

See Re Caverhill, S.C. L. J. 50; Re Street, 4 Ch. Ch. 99; Re Gordon, 4 C. L. J. 96; Re Howland, 4 Ch. Ch. 6.

VII. OUTSTANDING CLAIMS.

Infant—Undivided Interest—Certificate.]
—Where the title of a petitioner under the Act was established except as to an undivided one-fifth interest in the bare legal estate, which appeared to be outstanding in an infant:—
Held, that such interest must be got in by the petitioner, or be declared in the certificate of title to be outstanding. Re Raynerd, 8 P. R.
476.

— Order Barring—Effect of, 1—Quaere, whether an order made by the referee of titles barring the claims of an infant heir at law would have the effect of divesting the estate of the infant. Re Shaver, 6 O. R. 312.

See Re Pelten, 8 P. R. 470.

VIII. REVIEW, REINVESTIGATION, AND APPEAL.

Discovery of New Evidence. —There is no rule that a petition of review, on the ground of the discovery of new evidence, will not lie when the new evidence is of conversations and admissions. In a case of considerable suspicion as to the petitioner's title, the court stayed the certificate on the ground of the discovery of new evidence, though witnesses had been twice examined viva voce, and nearly a year had elapsed since the second examination; the applicants satisfactorily accounting for their not having adduced the new evidence at an earlier date. Brouse v. Stayner, 16 Gr. 1.

Forum.]—An appeal from a decision of the referee may be to a single Judge. Armour v. Smith, 16 Gr. 380.

Reference to Surveyor—Description—Finding.]—On appeal from a report of the referce of titles, the Judge directed that it be referred to a surveyor to inquire and report whether the description in a certain conveyance did, or did not, include the land in dispute. The referee having found that it did, the surveyor's report confirmed the referee's finding. The Judge thereupon adopted the surveyor's report, and dismissed the appeal with costs. The court, or a Judge thereof, is empowered by s. 21 of the Quieting Titles Act, to refer a disputed question to an assessor or expert, and will act on the finding of said assessor or expert, unless the party contestant clearly establishes it to be erroneous. Re Houcland, 4 Ch. Ch. 58.

Reinvestigation of Title—Security for Costs—Stay—Extension of Time.]—Contest-ants against whom the referee had found, appealed, and the appeal was dismissed with costs. They afterwards applied to have a reinvestigation of the title. On an application by the original petitioner, proceedings were stayed until the costs of the appeal were paid, and security given for costs of the present proceedings, and until a next friend was appointed for the married woman contestant. And this decision was upheld in appeal. The court will, in the interests of justice, exercise a liberal discretion in extending the time for appealing, or reinvestigating a title, where any error is alleged to exist, and under the circumstances, it appearing that the contestants had been somewhat misled as to a separate piece of land to which they supposed no claim to be asserted, the court granted an application for a reinvestigation of the title after the time for appealing had expired, on payment of costs. Re Howland, 4 Ch. Ch.

Security for Costs of Appeal—Ex Parte Order.]—An application for leave to pay into court $400 as security for costs of an appeal from a certificate of title under the Quieting Titles Act, having been granted by the referee ex parte, and it not having been brought to his notice that the appeal was as to two separate parcels of land, one claimed by a husband and wife, and the other by the husband alone: —Held, that the order was bad, as these facts should have been made known to the referee, and the order under such circumstances made upon notice. Re Howland, 4 Ch. Ch. 6.

QUO WARRANTO.

Harbour Company Directors, !—Where an election of directors in a joint stock company was clearly illegal, the voters having been allowed only one vote, without regard to their number of shares, whereas each share should have given a vote—but the parties chosen had continued ever since in discharge of the duties, and this application was not made until more than eight months after the election, the court refused to interfere by mandamus for a new election. Quere, whether, if the application had been made in sufficient time, mandamus or quo warranto would have been the proper remedy. In re Moore and Port Bruce Harbour Co., 14 U. C. R. 365.

Information—Form of—Amendment.]—
Where an information in the nature of a quo warranto is asked for on behalf of an individual, it must be exhibited, if allowed, in the name of the master of the Crown office; but where the rule in such a case was to shew cause why the attorney-general should not be allowed to file the information:—Held, that the mistake wis not fatal. Regima ex rel. Hart v. Lindsuy, 18 U. C. R. 51.

Municipality—Assessor,]—The council by resolution appointed one B. assessor, who was sworn into office and made an assessment. The appointment was made by a vote of three against two. The election of one of the three against two. The election of one of the three was afterwards set aside, and by a subsequent vote the resolution was rescinded, and by a by-law passed appointing another assessor. Both made assessments, and much confusion arose. Under these circumstances the court granted a quo warranto to determine the validity of the last appointment. In re Mc-Pherson and Becman, 17 U. C. R. 99.

— Clerk—Illiteracy.]—The court refused a quo warranto with the view of placing a person in the office of a township clerk, who in making his application shewed that he could not write. Regina v. Ryan, 6 U. C. R. 296.

Revue—Evidence.]—An application for an injunction in the nature of a quo warranto against a reeve for usurping the office, on the ground that a fi. fa. against him had been returned nulla bona, was founded only on an affidavit that one D. had recovered a judgment against him, on which a fi. fa. issued, and was placed in the sheriff's hands, and returned by him nulla bona:—Held, in-sufficient, for it should have been shewn how and to whom the return had been made, and the writ and return should have been produced or proved. The rule nisi was therefore discharged with costs. In re Wood, 26 U. C. R. 513.

Railway Company Director.]—Held, that the office of director in the Galt and Guelph Railway Company was not an office for which a quo warranto would lie. Regina v. Hespeler, 11 U. C. R. 222.

Registrar of Deeds.]—A quo warranto information was refused to try the right to the office of registrar, and the applicant left to his action for the fees against the alleged intruder. In re Hammond and McLay, 24 U. C. R. 56.

School Trustees.]—Proper mode of testing the existence of a corporation composed of school trustees. Askew v. Manning, 38 U. C. R. 345.

Held, that quo warranto proceedings were the only means by which the seats of the defendants as members of a public school board could be declared vacant by the court. Chaptin v. Woodstock School Board, 16 O. R. 73

— Civil Proceeding — Forum.] — A motion for an information in the nature of a quo warranto is the proper proceeding to take to inquire into the authority of a person to exercise the office of a high school trustee. Askew v. Manning, 38 U. C. R. 345, 361, followed. Such a proceeding is a civil, not a criminal, one; and is properly taken before a single Judge in court, by way of motion, upon notice. Regina ex rel. Moore v. Nagle. 24 O. R. 507.

Supreme Court of Canada—Appeal to.]
—An appeal from a decision of the court of Queen's bench for Lower Canada, appeal side, was quashed on motion, for want of jurisdiction, the proceedings being by quo warranto, as to which there is no appeal by the statute. Walsh v. Hefferman, 14 S. C. R. 738.

- I. AID TO RAILWAYS.
 - 1. By Government.

Construction of Railway—Contract— Time.]—Held, that the defendants, who had contracted merely for the grading and fencing of a portion of their road before the date specified in s. 3 of 34 Vict. c. 2, were not disentitled to aid under that section, as having contracted for the construction of such portion of their road. McRae v. Toronto and Nipissing R. W. Co., 22 C. P. 1.

Land Grant—Provinces. |—An Act of the Legislature of Canada having provided that a railway company should be entitled to 4,000,000 acres of the waste lands of the Crown on completion of their road, and a proportionate quantity of such lands on completion in the manner specified of twenty miles of the line:—Held, that a petition of right presented to the lieutenant-governor of Ontario, addressed to Her Majesty the Queen, was the proper proceeding for the purpose of enforcing the claim of the railway company under the Act, against that Province. The Legislature of Canada, by an Act, set apart a certain quantity of land along the line of a projected railway running through Quebec and Ontario, to be granted to the company on completion of the railway; and a proportionate part of such lands on the completion of twenty miles of the railway; and a proportionate part of such lands on the completion of twenty miles of the railway; and a proportionate part of such lands on the completion to twenty miles of the railway; and a proportionate part of such lands on the completion to twenty miles of the railway. The company, having completed a portion of the line of railway in Ontario to an extent of more than twenty miles, applied for a grant of the proportion to which, under the Act, they claimed to be entitled, which was refused. The company thereupon presented a petition of right against the Province of Ontario land not along the line of the road sufficient lands to make the desired grant:—Held, that this formed no ground for the Province of Ontario insisting that the Province of Ontario insisting that the Province of Quebec should have been made a party to the proceeding. Canada Central R. W. Co. v. The Queen, 20 Gr. 273.

2. By Municipalities.

(a) By-laws.

Assent of Inhabitants—Majority—Rate Imposed.]—A by-law to take stock in the Bytown and Prescott Railway Company was quashed: 1. Because it appeared not to have been concurred in by a majority of the assessed inhabitants, as required by 13 & 14 Vict. c. 132; 2. because no sufficient rate was imposed for the payment of the debt and interest, as required by 12 Vict. c. 81. The township corporation did not support their by-law, and the court refused to hear counsel on behalf of the railway company, as the rule was not directed to them. In re Billings and Township of Gluocaster, 10 U. C. R. 273.

Mandamus to Pass—Demand.]—Before the court will grant a mandamus to a municipal corporation to pass or submit to the electors a by-law granting a railway bonus, a distinct demand upon and refusal by the corporation to pass or submit the by-law must be shewn. In this case, upon the facts:—Held, to be sufficiently made out. Re Peck and County of Peterborough, 34 U. C. R. 129.

Interest of Municipality.] - The North Simcoe Railway Company is incorporated by 37 Vict. c. 54, (O.), s. 23 of which enacts that any municipal corporation "which may be interested in securing the construction of the said railway, or through any part of which, or near which, the railway or works of the said company shall pass or be situate, may aid the company by giving money by way of bonus: provided that no such aid shall be given except after the passing of a by-law for the purpose and the adoption thereof by the ratepayers. By s. 24 the proper petition, as prescribed in that section, shall first be presented to the council, expressing the desire to aid the railway, and stating in what way and for what amount, "and the council shall, within six weeks after the receipt of such petition by the clerk of the municipality, in-troduce a by-law to the effect petitioned for and submit the same for the approval of the qualified voters." The company were empowered to construct a railway from Barrie or some other point on the line of the Northern Railway, passing through certain named town-ships, to Penetanguishene, and to extend it from some point in the township of Vespra to connect with the Northern, or with the To-ronto, Grey, and Bruce Railway. A by-law ronto, Grey, and Bruce Railway. A by-law to aid the company by a bonus of $100,000, reciting that the city of Toronto was interested in securing a railway connection with the townships through which the line would pass, was introduced, on a proper petition, and read twice in the council; but on motion to go into committee on the by-law it was resolved, by a vote of fourteen to seven, that it would be unwise, in view of the large increase of the city debt, to incur further liability to aid a railway totally disconnected with the city and more than sixty miles from it; and that the council, in the interest of the citizens, felt it to be their duty to refuse to submit it to the ratepayers:—Held, that the council should not be compelled to submit the by-law; and a rule nisi for a mandamus was discharged with costs. Semble, that it was for the council to decide whether the corpora-tion were "interested in securing the con-struction of the railway:" but that if it was a question for the court, the materials before them would not warrant a decision in the affirmative. Quere, whether the provisional directors of the company had any status to warrant their application for such writ. Semble, that at all events the by-law submitted should contain proper conditions as to the expenditure of the money, &c., as contemplated by the statute. In re North Simcoo R. W. Co. and City of Toronto, 36 U. C. R. 101.

Petition for—Portion of County.] — By the statute incorporating the company, it was enacted that if fifty persons, at least, of the qualified ratepayers within the portion of the county affected by the railway should petition for the passage of a by-law granting aid to the undertaking, the council should pass such by-law, subject to the vote of the qualified ratepayers of such portion of the county:—Held, not necessary to make the by-law valid that the petition should be signed by a proportion of the fifty persons from each locality in the portion of the county affected. A petition to a municipal council prayed for the passage of a by-law granting aid to a railway company, to be charged on a specified section of the county. In the section so specified were situated two villages, both of which were incorporated, but they were not named in the petition or in the by-law:—Held, no objection to the by-law. West Gwillimbury v. Simcoe, 20 Gr. 211.

Powers of County Council.] — Held, that s. 2 of the Act under which the by-law in question was passed by the county of Bruce to aid the Wellington, Grey, and Bruce R. W. Co., 31 Vict. c. 13 (O.), was wide enough to include county municipalities, and that the by-law was therefore not ultra vires. In re Gibson and County of Bruce, 20 C. P., 398.

Powers of Town Council — Guarantee —Injunction.]—Under 44 & 45 Vict. c, 40, s. 2 (Q.), passed on a petition of the Quebec Central R, W. Co., after notice given by them, asking for an amendment to their charter, the town of Levis passed a by-law guaranteeing to pay to the Quebec Central R. W. Co. the whole cost of expropriation for the right of way for the extension of the railway to the deep water of the St. Lawrence river, over and above $30,000. Appellants, being ratepayers of the town of Levis, applied for and obtained an injunction to stay further proceedings on this by-law, on the ground of its illegality. The proviso in s. 2 of the Act under which the corporation of the town of Levis contended that the by-law was authorized, is as follows "Provided that within thirty days from the sanction of the present Act, the corporation of the town of Levis furnishes the said company with its said guarantee and obligation to pany with its said guarantee and obligation to pay all excess over $30,000 of the cost of ex-propriation for the right of way." By the Act of incorporation of the town of Levis, no power or authority is given to the corpora-tion to give such guarantee. The statute 4 & 45 Vict. c. 40 (Q.) was passed on the 30th June, 1881; and the by-law forming the guarantee was passed on the 27th July follow-ing:—Hold that the status in conscious did ing:—Held, that the statute in question did not authorize the corporation of Levis to impose burdens upon the municipality which were not authorized by their Act of incorporation or other special legislative authority, and therefore the by-law was invalid, and the injunction must be sustained. Quebec Warehouse Co. v. Levis, 11 S. C. R. 666.

Powers of Township Council — Railway not in Existence.]— The Act incorporating the municipality of Shuniah, gave it all the powers of townships under the general municipal law, and in other sections authorized the council to make assessment for necessary expenses, and for the establishment of a lock-up house, and the salary of a constable:—Held, that this language did not prohibit the council from passing a by-law granting a bonus to a railway company, as the right of doing so when exercised rendered the payments under it necessary expenses. The fact that the railway intended to be benefited was not named, and was really not in existence when the vote on the question was to be taken, constituted no objection to the passing of a by-law for the purpose. Vickers v. Shuniah, 22 Gr. 410.

Submission to Ratepayers—Bribery— Mandamus,—Held, that where a by-law granting a bonus to a railway company has been carried by the electors, a municipal council may refuse finally to pass it because its adoption has been procured by bribery, and may set up such bribery in answer to an application for a mandamus. Quere, whether it must be shewn, as it was here, that enough voters have been bribed to destroy the majority. Semble, that a mandamus should not be granted at the instance of any railway company or person to be benefited by such by-law, where a single act of bribery or corruption has been brought home to the applicant. In re Landon and Arthur Janetton R. W. Co. and Township of Arthur, 45 U. C. R. 47.

Casting Vote.]—In 1880, before the passing of 46 Vict. c. 18 (O.), a municipal council, with the view of granting a bonus to a railway company, caused to be submitted to the vote of the ratepayers a by-law to raise money for that purpose. At the voting thereon the votes for and against it were equal, and the clerk of the municipality, who also noted as returning officer, orally gave a casting vote in favour of the by-law:—Held, reversing the fundament in 11 O. R. 332, that s. 152 of the Municipal Act, R. S. O. 1877 c. 174, is not applicable to the case of voting on a by-law, and therefore the casting vote of the clerk was a nullity, and the by-law did not receive the assent of the electors of the municipality within the meaning of R. S. O. 1877 c. 174 s. 317; as such a defect could not be cured by promulgation of the by-law. Held, also, following Canada Atlantic v. Ottawa, 12 A. R. 234, and S. C., 12 S. C. R. 37; that the by-law was bad for non-compliance with s. 330 of the Municipal Act, R. S. O. 1877 c. 174, the section corresponding with s. 24s of 33 Vict. c. 48. Canada Atlantic R. W. Co. v. Township of Cambridge, 14 A. R. 234, 230 Vict. c. 48. Canada Atlantic R. W. Co. v. Township of Cambridge, 14 A. R. 236.

Injunction.]—Where the corporation of a town were about submitting to the vote of the ratepayers a by-law authorizing the harbour commissioners of that town to issue debentures to the amount of $75,000 to aid in completing a railway, but which debentures the corporation had not legally the power of directing to be issued, the court restrained the corporation from proceeding to take such vote. Helm v. Town of Port Hope, 22 Gr. 273.

Where a municipality has legally a right to pass a by-law granting a sum of money, it would seem premature to apply to restrain the by-law being submitted to the ratepayers, as they might refuse to approve of the by-law. Helm v. Town of Port Hope, 22 Gr. 273. distinguished. Vickers v. Skanniah, 22 Gr. 410.

Majority.] — Held, that a "majority" of the electors referred to in the Railway Act of 1850 (22 Vict. c. 16, ss. 75, 761), and the Municipal Act of 1866, s. 196, s.-s. 6, required to assent to a by-law, is not an absolute majority of all the existing qualified electors, but a majority of those coming forward to vote. Jenkins v. County of Elgin, 21 (c. P. 325; Erwin v. Township of Township, ib. 350.

Ser. also. Re McAvoy and Municipality of Sarnia, 12 U. C. R. 99.

— Necessity for.] — A by-law of a county council, in aid of a railway, to the extent of $20,000, which had not been submitted to the ratepayers under the Municipal Act of 1865, was on that ground quashed lie Clement and County of Wentworth, 22 C. F. 200.

Notice—Bribery.]—In giving notice submitting a by-law granting aid to a railway company for the approval of the ratepayers the officers (whose duty it was to give such notice) had not posted up the clauses of the Municipal Act in reference to bribery, in the manner required by the Act:

—Held, no ground for quashing the by-law.

West Gwillimbury v. Simcoc, 20 Gr. 211.

Premature Vote-Consideration by Council.] — A by-law was submitted to the council of a city, under 36 Vict. c. 48 (O.), for the purpose of granting a bonus to a railway then in course of construction, and after consideration by the council it was ordered to be submitted to the ratepayers for their vote. By the notice published in accordance with the provisions of the statute such by law was to be taken into consideration by the council after one month from its first publication on the 24th September, 1873. The vote of the ratepayers was in favour of the by-law, and on 20th October a motion was made in the council that it be read a second and third council that it be read a second and third time, which was carried, and the by-law pass-ed. The mayor, however, refused to sign it, on the ground that its consideration was premature; and on 5th November the same motion was made and the by-law was re-jected. Nothing more was done in the mat-ter until April, 1874, when a motion was again made before the council that such by-law be read a second and third time, which motion was, on this occasion, carried. At this meeting a copy only of the by-law was before meeting a copy only of the by-law was before meeting a copy only of the by-law was before the council, the original having been mislaid, and it was not found until after the com-mencement of this suit. When it was found it was discovered that the copy voted on by the ratepayers contained, by mistake of the printers, a date for the by-law to come into operation different from that of the original. In 1883 an action was brought against the corporation of the city for the delivery of In 1883 an action was brought against the corporation of the city for the delivery of the debentures provided for by the by-law, in which suit the question of the validity of the whole proceeding was raised:—Held, that the vote of 20th November, 1873, was premature, and not in conformity with the provisions of s. 231 of the Municipal Act; that the mayor properly refused to sign it, and that without such signature the by-law was invalid under s. 226. 2. That the council had nower to consider the by-law on the 5th was invalid under 8, 226. 2. That the council had power to consider the by-law on the 5th November, 1873, and the matter was then disposed of, 3. That the proceedings of 7th April, 1874, were void for two reasons. One, that the table of the council was a second of the council to the council the council to the council that the council the April, 1814, were void for two reasons. One, that the by-law was not considered by the council to which it was first submitted as provided by s. 236, which is to be construed as meaning the council elected for the year, and not the same corporation; and the other, that the by-law passed in 1874 was not the that the by-law passed in 1814 was not the same as that submitted, there being a differ-ence in the dates. Semble, that the func-tions of a municipality in considering a by-law after it has been voted on by the rateby-law after it has been voted on by the rate payers are not ministerial only, but the by-law can be confirmed or rejected irrespective of the favourable vote. Canada Atlantic R. W. Co. v. City of Ottawa, 12 S. C. R. 365, 14 A. R. 236, 8 O. R. 201.

—14 & 15 Vict. c. 51, s. 18, directs that a copy of the by-law (to take stock in a rail-way company) shall be inserted at least four times in each newspaper primed within the limits of the municipality: but the court refused to quash a by-law under which a large sum had been borrowed, because it had been published three times only in one of two papers. A full copy of the by-law was not published, but, at the time of passing, a clause was added appointing the day on which it should come into operation, and directing that the debt should be payable made in the dept should be payable in another clause tie debentures were made available in twenty years from their dates. Held, that, whether 14 & 15 vite. 5, 1, 18, 5, 3, or 16 vite. 2, 2, 3, 2, 4, were to govern, this was an integral of the payable for which they were the payable of secretarining the consent of the electors should be prescribed by a notice attached to the production of the payable when published, though the Act says that it shall be determined by the by-law.

Publication—Scal.]—Held, that the notice of a by-law for the granting of aid by a municipality to a railway company, should be published in accordance with the provisions of the Municipal Acts. Held, also, that the objection to a by-law that it was not scaled when submitted to the electors, was untenable. Jankins v. County of Elyin, 21 C. P. 325.

Validating Statute—Effect of—Manda-mus.]—By 18 Vict. c. 33, the Grand Junction R. W. Co., whose railway was to run from the town of Peterborough to Toronto, was, with certain other companies, incorporated with the Grand Trunk R. W. Co. Not having been built within the stipulated time, the charter the former company expired, and in May, 1870. the Grand Trunk R. W. Co. having refused to construct it, an Act was passed by the Dominion Parliament, 33 Vict. c. 53, dis-sociating the work from the Grand Trunk R. W. Co., and reviving the charter of the Grand Junction R. W. Co. It directed that all the corporate powers originally vested in that company should be vested in certain persons, who should exercise the same as fully as the persons named in the original charter could have done, and extended the time for construction. On the 23rd November of the same year, the ratepayers of the defendant municipality voted in favour of granting the company a bonus of $75,000, but the by-law was never read a third time. At the time the municipality had no power to grant a bonus to a railway company, but subsequently in 1871, by 34 Vict. c. 48 (O.), the by-law was declared as valid as if it had been read a third time. It was declared to be binding on the corporation, and they were directed to act upon it, and issue debentures, as if it had been proposed after the Act. On the same day the municipal law was amended so as to only the municipal law was amended so as to empower all municipalities to grant aid for similar purposes. 37 Vict. c. 43 (O.) was then passed, amending and consolidating the Acts relating to the plaintiffs' railway, but it did not expressly give retrospective validity to anything that had been done, or mention the by-law, and by 39 Vict. c. 71 (O.), the the by-law, and by 39 Vict. c. 71 (O.), the time for completion was further extended, and it was directed that none of the by-laws should lapse by reason of non-completion within the time previously fixed;—Held, reversing the judgment in 45 T. C. R. 392, that the Grand Junction Railway being a local work of the Province of Ontario, the Act 33 Vict, c. 53 (D.) was ultra vires the Dominion Parliament, and that the company were therefore not in existence when the defendants granted the bonus, or when the Act 34 Vict, c. 48 (O.), validating the by-law, was passed; and as 37 Vict, c. 43 (O.), which was the first Act by a legislature having power to incorporate them, did not legalize the by-law in favour of the plaintiffs, they were not entitled to a mandamus to compel the delivery of the debentures, Re Grand Junction R. W. Co, and County of Pelerebarough, 6 A. R. 339. See S. C., 8 S. C. R. 76.

Validity of By-law—Statutes—Defects of Form—Registration.]—The Act incorporating the radiway company contained provisions respecting bounds granuled to it by municipalities not found in the Municipal Act.—Held, that such special Act was not restrictive of the Municipal Act, and it was only necessary that the provisions of the latter should be followed to pass a valid by-law granting such a bonus. Held, that all defects of form in the by-law were cured by 44 Vict. c. 24, s. 28 (O.), providing for registry of by-laws and requiring an application to quasit to be made within three mouths after such registry. Bickford v. Town of Chatham, 16 S. C. R. 235.

(b) Terms and Conditions of Aid.

Certificate of Engineer-Compliance-Debentures.]—Held, that under 34 Vict. c. 48 (O.) the Grand Junction R. W. Co. was recognized as an incorporated company; otherwise that it was actually incorporated by 37 Vict. c. 43 (O.); the effect of the two Acts being to give to the company so incorporated the benefit of a by-law of the respondent corporation, which, under certain conditions, provided a bonus for the railway. Held, further, that under the Act of 1871 the said by-law was legal, valid, and binding on the corporation, but that the railway company had not, on the evidence, complied with the condi-tions precedent. The stipulated certificate of the chief engineer had not been produced, and aithough, under paragraph 8 of the by-law, debentures might be delivered to trustees without a certificate, that applied to a time when the debentures or their proceeds were to be held in suspense, not to a time when the trusts were spent and the payment, if made at all, should be made direct to the company, Judgment in 13 A. R. 420 affirmed. Grand Junction R. W. Co. y. County of Peterborough, 13 App. Cas. 136.

Commencement of Work—Breach—Extension of Time—Handamus—Action.]— Upon an application for a mandamus to a township corporation to make and deliver to trustees certain debentures for $25,000 authorized by two by-laws of the corporation granting aid to a railway company, it was argued that the company had lost all claim to $18,000, if not to the whole of the bonus, by non-commencement of their road. On the other hand, the company contended that by certain agreements with the corporation, and by several statutes extending the time for commencement, their right to the debentures was preserved:—Held, that such right, depending upon matters of contract, should not be deternated upon such an application, but by suit in the ordinary way; and the application was dismissed with costs, Re London, Huron, and Bruce R. W. Co., and Township of East Watconsh, 36 U. C. R. 33.

Breach—Forfeiture—Debentures—Portices.]—The county of Simcee had under a by-law, passed under 35 Vict. c. 66, s. 15, issued debentures for 8200,000 to aid in the construction of the Hamilton and North Western R. W. Co. (see West Gwillimbury V. Simcoe. 20 Gr. 211,) but, by reason of the neglect of the company to commence the railway within the time limited, their charter had become forfeited, and the by-law under which the debentures had been issued had therefore become void, whereupon one of the townships which had joined in the petition for the passing of the by-law, filed a bill against the railway company, the county, and trustees of the debentures, seeking to restrain the trustees from solling or parting with the debentures and to have the same handed back to the county:—Held, on demurrer by the county, (1) that the township had not any interest to maintain such a suit; and (2) that the coporation of the county was the proper party to institute proceedings. Township of West Gwillimbury V. Hamilton and North Western R. W. Co., 23 Gr. 383.

municipal corporation having passed a bylaw giving a certain sum in debentures by way of bonus to a railway company, the company executed a bond to the township reciting that the township had agreed to give the bonus on condition (amongst other things) that sixty continuous miles of the road should be bulk within two years; that the debentures should not be disposed of by the company until the contracts had been let and the work commenced; and that if the road were not commenced and built as mentioned, the debentures should be returned to the municipality; and the condition of the bond was, that in case of failure the company would, on demand, pay over to the township the sum of $50,000, or return the debentures. The contracts having been let and the work commenced as stipulated:—Held, in view of the whole instrument, that the company should not be restrained from disposing of the debentures before the completion of the work. Township of Brock v. Toronto and Nipissing R. W. Co., 17 Gr. 425.

Compliance — Sufficiency.] — A county by-law was passed on the 12th December, 1873, to aid a railway company by a bonus of 880,000, and to issue debentures therefor, under the clauses of the Municipal Act of 1873 then in force. The by-law required that the debentures should have agreed that the depending should have agreed that the amount thereof should be wholly expended upon the construction of the line within the county; that seventy-five per cent, of the amount should be advanced as the work progressed on the engineer's certificate, and the balance on completion of the road; and that the portions of the railway within the county should be commenced within one and faished within three years from the passing of the by-law. On application for a mandamus to the county to deliver these debentures to the trustees, it appeared that on the 24th November, 1874, the company, by agreement with the county, after reciting the by-law, covenanted to commence that part of the road within the county in one and complete it in three years from the passing of the by-law; and that they would only ask for the proceeds of the debentures, as to seventy-five per cent. thereof "to pay for work done and expenses incurred during the progress of said within the county, and as to twenty-five per cent, thereof to pay for work done and expenses incurred on finally completing said rail-way within the county; and that the whole proceeds of the debentures should be expended in the construction of the said railway within the county, and not otherwise or else-where." This agreement was handed to the This agreement was handed to the warden on the 7th December, 1874, (within five days of the time limited by the by-law for commencing the work), but was not executed by the county, and on the same day the debentures were demanded. The company had in that month made some purchases of rights of way. On the 4th December they entered into a contract with one C. for the construc-tion of fourteen miles of the road within the county, to be begun within five days and com-pleted by 1st September, 1875, but it contain-ed a clause enabling the company to suspend the work at any time without being liable for the work at any time without being liable for damages. C. began work on the 10th Decem-ber, and continued till the 15th February, 1875, for which he received about 8800. He was told that he must begin by the 12th December in order to enable the company to get the debentures. The company had not filed their plans and survey as directed by the Railway Act, C. S. C. c. 66, without which they had no authority to begin their work, and were bound to no particular route:— Held, in the Queen's bench, that the company were not entitled to the mandamus, for they had not legally located their line, and were bound to no route; they had no pewer to begin the work as they had done; and from all the facts, more fully stated in the case, it appeared that they had not done so in good faith. Semble, that there was not a sufficient variance between the agreement required by the by-law and that executed by the company to have alone furnished an answer to the apto have alone furnished an answer to the ap-plication, though they were not clearly iden-tical. Quere, whether, before ordering the de-bentures to be handed over, the court could have required more stock to be called in. Semble, not; but it was suggested that the by-law should provide for this; and that to carry such by-laws a certain proportion of the whole number of votes of the locality should be required. The court of appeal being equally divided, this judgment was affirmed without costs. In re Stratford and Huron R. W. Co. and County of Perth, 38 U. C. R.

Completion of Work—Breach—Cause.]—Under 31 Vict. c. 4, a township municipality passed a by-law granting a bonus to a railway company, upon the express condition that the debontures securing such sum snould be deposited with the treasurer of the Province as custodian for the company, but the same were not to be delivered to the company, unless and until the railway should within two years be fully completed and in running order, and regular trains had passed over the road, and the company had performed existence of the state of the company that the company made default. In a suit by the municipality seeking to restrain the treasurer from delivering up the debentures to the company:—Held, that time was to of the essence of the transaction, and that the company having, no matter from what cause, failed to complete the work in the manner stipulated for, the plaintifs were entitled to receive back the debentures. Township of Lather v. Wood. 19 Gr. 34s.

railway company were bound by their original charter to commence within three years, and to finish the road within eight years, which they failed to do within the specified time:—Held, affirming the decisions in 8 O. R. 183, 201, that the plaintiffs were not in a position to enforce the delivery of the dehentures after the lapse of nine years from the passing of the by-law, when a total change of circumstances had taken place, and when the period fixed by the plaintiffs' charter for the completion of the railway had expired. Canada Mantie R. W. Co. v. City of Ottowa, 12 A. R. 234.

Compliance—Onus—Debentures.]—A municipal corporation, under the authority of a by-law, issued and handed to the treasurer of the Province of Quebec $850,000 of their debentures as a subsidy to a railway company, the same to be paid over to the company in the manner and subject to the same conditions in which the government provincial subsidy was payable under 44 & 45 Vict. c. 2, s. 19, viz., "when the road was completed and in good running order to the satisfaction of the lieutenant-governor in council." The debentures were signed by S. M., who was elected warden and took and held possession of the office after W. J. P. had orally resigned the position. In an action brought by the railway company to recover from the treasurer of the Province the S50,000 debentures after the government bonus had been paid, in which action the municipal corporation was mise en cause as a co-defendant, the Provincial treasurer plended by demurrer only, which was overruled, and the county of Pontiac pleaded general denial and that the debentures were illegally signed.—Held, that the debentures had admitted by his pleadings that the road had been completed to the satisfaction of the lieutenant-governor in council, the onus was on the municipal corporation, mise en cause, to prove that the government bad not acted in conformity with the statute. County of Pontiac v, Voss, 17 S. C. R. 400.

Impossibility of Compliance—Mandamus.]—A railway charter provided that on receiving certain petitions the corporation of the county, &c., should submit to the electors a by-law to aid the company by a bonus, and should deliver to trustees the debentures for any such bonus when granted. The company, as an inducement to the passing of such a by-law, gave a bond conditioned to build their road within a certain time, and to repay the bonus to the county in the event of their ceasing within twenty-one years to be an independent company. Under the facts, the court refused a mandamus to compel the corporation to hand over the debentures to the trustees appointed to receive them, there being ground for apprehension, owing to the delay, that the bond could not be performed; but the rule was discharged without costs, and without prejudice to a further application. In re Hamilton and North-Western R. W. Co. and County of Halton, 39 U. C. R. 93.

Completion of Part of Railway—Compliance—Mandamus—Parties, j—A township corporation passed a by-law, that the reeve should make out debentures not exceeding $5,000, which should be sealed with the corporate seal, and signed by him and the treasurer; and that, provided the grading of defendants' railway should be completed to a certain point by a day mentioned, the reeve should subscribe for shares in defendants' company to the extent of $5,000, on behalf of the corporation, and deliver the debentures to the company in payment therefor. By 35 Vict. c. 98 (O.), the by-law was confirmed. On application for a mandamus to the reeve to make such subscription and delivery:—Held, unnecessary to shew an agreement by the municipality to take the stock, or a written subscription, or to make the treasurer or the corporation parties to the application: and on the affidavits the mandamus was granted with costs. In re Canada Central R. W. Co. and Brown, 35 U. C. R. 390.

Independence of Railway—Breach—Liquidated Dumages.]—In 1874 the county of Halton gave to the Hamilton and North-Hamilton gave to the Hamilton and North-Hamilton for the used in the construction of the railway, upon the condition that the company should remain "independent" for twenty-one years. In 1888 the Hamilton and North-Western Railway Company became (as was on the facts held) in effect merged in the Grand Trunk Railway Company, and ceased to be an independent line:—Held, that there had been a breach of the condition entiting the plaintiffs to recover the whole amount of the bonus as liquidated damages. County of Halton, Grand Trunk R. W. Co., 19 A. R. 252. Affirmed by the Supreme Court, 21 S. C. R. 716.

Maintenance of Railway—Future Performance—Debentures.]—Held, that a debenture being a negotiable instrument, a railway company that has compiled with all the conditions precedent stated in the by-law to the issuing and delivery of debentures granted by a municipality, is entitled to said debentures, free from any declaration on their face of conditions mentioned in the by-law to be performed in future, such as the future keeping up of the road, &c.; art. 962, municipal code. Parish of St. Césaire v. McFarlane, 14 S. C. R. 738.

Maintenance of Shops—Change of Circumstances.—A railway company, having obtained a bonus from the plaintiffs upon condition that its machine shops should be "located and maintained" within the city limits, did so erect and maintain them for some years, until authorized by legislation it amalgamated with and lost its identity in another company, all the engagements and agreements of the amalgamating companies being preserved. The amalgamated company was afterwards leased in perpetuity to a much larger railway company, who removed the shops outside the city limits:—Held, that, although all engagements and agreements made by the original company were preserved, the amalgamation and leasing in perpetuity by the larger company of the smaller under the authority of parliament imposed new relations upon the amalgamation of parliament imposed new relations upon the amalgamated road which worked a change in the policy as to the site and size of the machine shops, and that the engagement had been satisfied by the maintenance of the said shops by the original company during its independent existence. City of Toronto v. Ontario and Quebec R. W. Co., 22 O. R. 344.

Maintenance of Stations—Ercction—Accommodation.]—One of the conditions in the agreement to be performed by the railway company was "to construct at or near the corner of Colborne and William streets (in Chatham) a freight and passenger station with all necessary accommodation, connected by switches, sidings, or otherwise with said road" upon the council of the town passing a by-law granting a necessary right of way:—Held, that such condition was not complied with, by the erection of a station building not used, nor intended to be used, and for which proper officers, such as station master, ticket nigent, &c., were not appointed. The words "all necessary accommodation" in the condition required that grounds and yards sufficient for freight and passenger traffic in case the station were used should be provided. Bickford v. Town of Chatham, 16 S. C. R.

Establishment — Res Judicata Evidence.]-By agreement bearing date the Buth May, 1873, the defendants, in considera-tion of a borus of $300,000 granted to them by a section of the county of Simcoe, of which the township of Nottawasaga forms a which the township of Nottawasuga forms a part, covenanted with the plaintiffs to (among other things) "erect, build, and complete good and sufficient and suitable station build-ines for passengers and freight" at five cer-tain places within the township; to "establish at each of the places hereinbefore mentioned regular way stations;" and to "well and sufficiently keep and maintain the said five stations above mentioned with all suitable, necessary, and proper buildings, as the business done or capable of being done at the said stations respectively may require, for seven years tions respectively may require, for seven years after the trains shall have commenced to run on the said road and (to) undertake to do the passenger and freight business of the county at said stations." By a further agreement bearing date the 25th May, 1878, the defendants, in consideration of a bonus of $20, 000, granted to them by the plaintiffs, covenanted with the plaintiffs to "erect, build, and complete good and sufficient and suitable and complete good and sumerent and strength on the line of the said railway at the several places following in the said township." five places being specified, and to "establish at each of such places regular way stations." This agreement provided that the route of the line of the railway through the township as defined in the former agreement might be deviated from to such an extent as to admit of And from to such an extent as to admit of the stations being placed at the points mentioned in the second agreement, and provided further that it should not be incumbent on the defendants to erect stations at the places mentioned in the former agreement, "but that the places herein defined for stations shall be made to be in substitution for the places were the stationary of the places where the places herein defined for stations shall be made to be allowed to be substitution for the places were taken to be in substitution for the places men-tioned in such former agreement." The deforce in such former agreement. The de-fendants erected stations at the points speci-fied, three of these stations being respectively called A., G., and N. Trains commenced to me on the line in the year 1879. In 1880 the plantiffs, being dissatisfied with the mode in which the stations at G. and N. were being maintained, brought an action against the defendants for specific performance of the agreements. In this action a consent decree pronounced and an injunction granted restraining the defendants from ceasing to maintain the stations except in a certain manner in the decree specified. The decree contained no the decree specified. The decree contained no limitation or other provision as to the time during which the stations were to be maintained, though this question had been raised at the hearing of the action. In 1886, after the expiration of the seven years, the defendant made changes in their mode of maintaining the station at A. and kept it open for about four hours a day only. The plaintiffs were the station at A, and kept it open for about four hours a day only. The plaintiffs were dissatisfied, and this action was thereupon brought by them to compel specific perform-ance of the agreements:—Held, that the word "establish," does not in itself mean 'maintain and use forever;" that the seven years limita-tion applied to the substituted stations, and that the defendants were not bound to mainthat the defendants were not bound to maintain them after the expiration of that time. Bickford v. Town of Chatham, 14 A. R. 32, 16 S. C. R. 255, Jessup v. Grand Trunk R. W. Co., 7 A. R. 123, and Genuyeau v. Great Western R. W. Co., 3 A. R. 412, considered, Wallace v. Great Western R. W. Co., 3 A. R. 4, distinguished. Held, also, that the decree is the forward action did not constitute the first of the forward action did not constitute the forward action did not constitute the in the former action did not constitute the question of the seven years' limitation res judicata, there being no adjudication on that question; and in any event an adjudication on that question being unnecessary at the date of the former action. Concha v. Concha, 11 App. Cas. 541, considered and followed. the trial evidence was admitted on behalf of the plaintiffs of representations made by directors of the defendant company, at meetings held to consider the question of granting the second bonus, to the effect that by the second agreement the defendants would be bound to maintain the stations for all time:—Held, that this evidence was clearly inadmissible. Town-ship of Nottawasaga v. Hamilton and North Western R. W. Co., 16 A. R. 52.

Erection — Injunction — Specific Performance.]—In consideration of a bonus granted by the plaintiffs, a railway company covenanted "to erect and maintain a permanent freight and passenger station" at G. Shortly afterwards the road was leased, with notice of this agreement, to defendants, who discontinued G. as a regular station, having no officer of the company to sell tickets or make arrangements for despatching or receiving freight, but merely stopping there when there were any passengers to be let down or taken up:—Held, affirming the decree in 25 Gr. 85, that the mere erection of the station was not a fulfilment of the covenant, and that the municipality was entitled to have it specifically performed. The decree, which enjoined the defendants from allowing any of their ordinary freight, accommodation, express, or mail trains, other than special trains, to pass without stopping for the purpose of taking up or letting down passengers, was varied by limiting it to such trains as are usually stopped at ordinary stations. Township of Wallace v. Gircat Western R. W. Co., 3 A. F. 44.

— Use of Line by Others—Validity.]
—The conditions agreed upon in this case were, that the defendants should grant and continue to the Great Western R. W. Co., the Grand Trunk R. W. Co., and the Canada Southern R. W. Co., equal privileges as to working and using defendants railway; that defendants should have a siding and flag station at or near to two named villages on their line; and should cause or procure the Grand Trunk R. W. Co, to erect a station at or near a named point of intersection:—Held, that these conditions were all legal and valid; and that defendants, having received the debentures for the bonus, could not object that such agreement was ultra vires. County of Madimand v, Hamilton and North Western R. W. Co., 27 C. P. 228.

Obtaining Other Aid-Breach-Preference Bonds—Waiver.]—A proposed by-law for granting a bonus of $44,000 was assented to by the ratepayers of the township of Eldon; and, to induce the council afterwards to ratify the by-law, the company entered into a bond, that if certain other townships should deliver to the company certain debentures expected from them, the company would give to Eldon $6,000 of preferential bonds of the company; the company having a limited statutory authority to issue preferential bonds "for raising money to prosecute the undertaking." One of the townships failed to give the debentures expected from it, and the company, instead of giving its preferential bonds to Eldon, gave to the municipality an ordinary bond for the $6,000 :- Held, that the company had no authority to give its preferential bonds in order to carry out its bargain with the municipal council; that the default of one of the other townships to give the debentures expected from it, disentitled Eldon to demand preferential bonds from the company, even if the company had had authority to grant them; and that the giving of the bond which the company did give, was no waiver of the objection, as an answer to the municipality's demand of preferential bonds. Township of Eldon v. T ronto and Nipissing R. W. Co., 24 Gr. 396.

Obtaining Whole Sum — Breach—Statutory Kichi, — A railway and barbour company gave a bond to the town council of W., rectifier that the council had agreed to lend them 425,000 to assist in constructing their railway, and conditioned that the company should not expend the loan, nor begin to construct their road, until the whole sum necessary to complete it from W. to Port D., should be obtained:—Held, that there was nothing in 19 Vict. c, 74 to relieve defendants from liability for a previous breach of this condition. Town of Woodstock v. Woodstock und Lake Eric R. W. Co., 16 U. C. R. 146.

Running Trains—Breach—Damages.]— Where a railway company, in breach of a contract entered into by them, in consideration of a large amount of debentures given them by the plaintiffs, to run trains from the eastern part of the city of St. T. to the western part, ceased to run such trains; -Held, on a reference as to damages, that though the actual depreciation of property in the western part of the city resulting therefrom was a matter pertaining to the property owners, and not to the city, yet the lessened taxation resulting from such depreciation was not too remote a fact for consideration on the reference, and such a loss in taxation which could be traced to or reasonably connected with the company's default formed a yearly standard which might be capitalized so as to fairly represent the money compensation to which the plaintiffs were entitled. Stated broadly the inquiry was how much less benefit had been received by the municipality by reason of the railway service at one station being discontinued :- Constat, that the personal loss or inconvenience suffered by travellers or citizens from the abandonment of the station, or the actual despreciation in value of the land individually owned in that neighbourhood, could not be reckoned as constituents per so of the damages suffered by the corporation. Held, also, that if the railway company admitted that they would never again run trains to the western end of the city, the damages should be assessed once for all, which might be done either by fixing one sum, or by directing a yearly payment. City of 8t. Thomas v. Credit Valley R. W. Co., 15 O. R. U.33.

Specific Performance of Conditions-Damages—Debentures.]—By an agreement be-tween the E. & H. Railway Company and the town of C. the latter agreed to pass a by-law granting a bonus to the company in aid of the construction of a railway, subject to the performance of certain specified conditions. by-law subsequently approved by the ratepay-ers, and passed by the council of the town, did not contain all the conditions of the agreement. In an action against the town to compel the delivery of debentures for the amount of the bonus the defendants pleaded non-per-formance of the conditions of the agreement as justifying the withholding of the debentures, and, by way of counterclaim, prayed specific performance of such conditions by the plain-tiffs:—Held, that the title to the debentures did not depend upon prior performance of conditions in the agreement not included in the by-law, but upon performance of those in the by-law alone, and the latter baving been complied with the debentures should issue. (2) That specific performance was not an appropriate remedy in such a case, and the defendants could only claim damages for non-performance. (3) Semble, also, that the claim of defendants for damages could be disposed of in this action under the counterclaim, and there should be a reference to assess the same Bickford v. Town of Chatham, 10 O. R. 257, 14 A. R. 32, 16 S. C. R. 235.

Statutory Power to Make Conditions. —By 32 Vict. c. 36, s. 7 (O.) mulcipalities were authorized to aid the Hamilton and Eric Italiway Company, subsequently incorporated with defendants, by way of bounds of the composition of the company of the composition of the county were authorized, on the petition of certain townships and villages of the county were authorized, on the petition of certain townships and villages of the county to grant such aid, and issue the dehentures of the county payable by special rates and assessments in such townships, &c.:—Held, that the powers given by the first Act to agree as to the conditions on which such aid should be granted, would apply to aid granted under the subsequent Act. In an action brought by the company against the corporation solely for damages for their neglect and refusal to issue said debentures;—Held, that the corporation, apart from its liability for the amount of the debentures and interest thereon, was liable under arts, 1,005, 1,073, 1,840, and 1,841, C. — Railway Contractors — Lien — Award.]—By 16 Vict. cc. 22 and 124, and 18 Vict. c. 13, certain municipalities were authorized to issue debentures under by-laws to aid in the construction of a railway. The contractors for building the road agreed with the company to take part of their remuneration in these debentures, and the work having been commenced certain debentures were issued to the company. The contractors afterwards failed to carry on the works, and disputes having arisen between them and the company, all matters in difference were left to arbitration, and an award made in favour of the contractors for £27,054, payable by instalments. One instalment being in arrear, the contractors field a bill to have the debentures delivered over to them in the proportion stipulated for according to the contract:—Held, that, altitude to a specific lien on these debentures under their original agreement, the reference and award in their favour for a money payment precluded them from that relief; and a denurrer for want of equity was allowed. Sykes v. Brockville and Ottavea R. W. Co., 9 Gr. 9.

Trust. — The numicipality of B., being interested in the completion of a railway, by a bylaw agreed to lend the company, in municipal loan fund debentures, £100,000, for securing the repayment of which the company in municipal to the municipality a mortgage on all their property, which, by a statute, was declared to evaluate and binding as well was and their property of the company already owned by them as that which they might afterwards acquire; and which, by a subsequent agreement unde for the settlement of certain suits pending between the parties, it was agreed should be advanced to the company in certain proportions as the work progressed. In couplinate with a requisition of the company for funds, "for work done, and material furnished, and right of way, &c., for the use of the railway," the municipal council directed their amount of the debentures, which, upon their being landed over, were immediately seized by the she iff, under an execution at the suit of the banilers. Upon a bill filed for the delivery up of the debentures:—Held, that, so far as the obsentures were required for the payment of the right of way, rolling stock ready to be delivered, and other materials not yet become the property of the company, they were impressed with a trust to be applied by the company to the payment of these observed, 7 Gr. 297.

II. AMALGAMATION OF RAILWAYS.

Decree-Enforcement against Amalgamated Company. |-Part of the consideration for the right of way over plaintiff's land was that the right of way over plaintiff's land was that the company, the Beleville and North Hast-ings Railway Company, should construct a cattle-pass under the railway, for the use of the plaintiff. The company refused to con-struct the pass, whereupon the plaintiff, on the 30th April, 1880, filed a bill in chancery against them to enforce the agreement, to which the company on the 13th September, 1880, filed an answer, and on the 13th November a decree was obtained by consent to construct it on certain terms specified therein, In March, 1879, the Acts 42 Vict, cc. 53 and 57 (O.) were passed, authorizing the Belle-ville and North Hastings Railway Company and the defendants to enter into an agreement for amalgamation subject to the ratification and approval of a majority of the shareholders of said companies, at public meetings called for that purpose. On the 29th June, 1880, an agreement was entered into for the amalgamation of the two companies under defendants' name, which was on the same day ratified and approved of by the respective shareholders. The plaintiff had no notice or knowledge of the deed of amalgamation, or of its contents. On the 4th March, 1881, the Act 44 Vict. c. 68 (O.) was passed, by s. 1 of which the said 68 (O.) was passed, by s. 1 of which the said deed of annalgamation was declared legal and valid, and it was enacted that the two companies should be amalgamated and united, under the defendants name, in the terms of the said deed. The decree not having been carried out, the plaintiff brought this action against the defendants to enforce it:—Held, that there was no complete amalgamation of the two companies un-til the passing of 44 Vict. c. 64 (O.), so that the Belleville and North Hastings Railway Company had not ceased to exist when the de cree was made, which was therefore legal and valid; and that the plaintiff was entitled to maintain this action to enforce it against the defendants. Fargey v. Grand Junction R. W. Co., 4 O. R. 232

Provisional Directors—Hond of—Honus— —Conditions—Liability to Perform.]—By the bond of a railway company, executed by its provisional directors, in consideration of a bonus in aid of the railway, the company agreed to erect and maintain workshops in a certain town during the operation of the railway. The company, after certain changes of name, amalgamated with other companies and formed a larger one under another name, which latter company, although it had agreed to do so, ceased to so maintain the workshops. This last mentioned company subsequently amalgamated with and became part of the defendant's system, and by the amalgamation the defendants became responsible for all liabilities of the other companies:—Held, that the bond of the provisional directors was a corporate act binding on the company's successors, and, by consequence on the defendants, who had acquired the road; that the road, though it formed part of a larger railway connection represented by the defendants, was still in operation, and, as the contract was to maintain the workshops during the operation of the railway, it remained a binding engagement; and a reference to ascertain the damages, if any, for breach of the covenant, was directed. Illegal Issue — Condition Precedent — Validating Statute.]—See City of Quebec v. Quebec Central R. W. Co., 10 S. C. R. 563.

Issue in Blank—Subsequent Insertion of Papee's Name—Negotiation.]—The C. P. and M. Railway Company being authorized by 38 Vict. c. 47 (O.) to issue preferential debentures, the holders of which, it was enacted, night, on default in payment, obtain a fore-closure or sale of the railway by suit in charactery, the directors passed a by-law enacting that such debentures should be issued under the seal of the company, and should "be negotiated from time to time as the proceeds thereof shall be required for the purposes of the company by the managing director."

were accordingly issued in blank, and handed to the managing director. blank, and handed to the managing mrector, who, subsequently, the railway company being indebted to the plaintiffs, delivered certain of them to the latter, as security for such debt. The debentures were in the fol-lowing form: debenture No. lowing form : The C. P. and M. Railway Company owes the Bank of Toronto, or order, the sum of $1,000 , with interest at payable in ten years . . with interest at eight per cent, per annum, payable half-yearly, on presentation of the proper coupons hereto attached. The name "Bank of Toronto" was not filled in until about the time of delivery to the plaintiffs, who now brought this action for an account of what was due under the debentures and payment, or, in default, a sale by the court of the property of the com-pany:—Held, that the debentures were valid, and judgment must go as asked. The strict rules of the common law relating to deeds are not applicable to such debentures, but rather the rules of the law merchant relating to negotiable securities. But if this were not so, the fact that the name Bank of Toronto was not alled in until delivery to the plaintiffs did not make the debentures void; it would come within that class of cases where deeds have been held good notwithstanding an alteration or subsequent addition, because, at the time of execution, there was something which could not be ascertained, and was therefore to be filled up afterwards. Here, however, there was no execution, which imports delivery, prior to the time when the name was filled in. Held, also, that, although the debentures were under seal, this did not detract from their character, which was rather that of promis-sory notes than of mortgages; and though the Act made them a charge on all the property of the company, with a right to foreclosure and sale, this was something superinduced upon the security by virtue of the statute. Held, further, that the company having issued the debentures in blank and handed them to the managing director, who was also secretary and treasurer, to be dealt with by him at his discretion, he was empowered to complete them by the insertion of the obligee's name, and the company would be estopped from relying on such defences as the above. Held, lastly, that masmuch as it appeared that these debentures were delivered with a view to facilitate the company's operations in getting out and disposing of ore, the main branch of its business, this was a "negotiation" of them "for the purposes of carrying on the company's business," and so within the meaning of the aforesaid Act and by-law. Bank of Toronto v. Cobourg. Peterborough, and Marmora R. W. Co., 7 O. R. 1.

2. Payment of Interest.

Coupon — Presentment—Pleading,]—Declaration on a bond, whereby defendants covenanted to pay R., or the holder, at. &c. £200, on, &c., and interest thereon semi-annually, on the delivery at the Gore Bank of the warrants therefor to the bond annexed, and that the plantiffs became the holders, and have always been ready and willing to deliver said warrants at, &c., but £12 for interest is now due:
—Held, bad, in not averring an actual delivery of or an offer to deliver the warrants at the bank. Osborne v. Preston and Berlin R. W. Co., 9 C. P. 241.

The plaintiffs sued for interest on two bonds made by defendants on the 27th January, 1855, for the payment to the plaintiffs or order of the principal money named, on the 1st November, 1855, at the agency of the Bank of Upper Canada in Hamilton, together with in-terest thereon. Both counts alleged that, alterest thereon. Both counts alleged that, although defendants paid the principal on the 29th January, 1861, with interest up to the 18t November, 1855, yet they had not paid any interest after that day. In the second count it was averred that the bond was in defendants' possession and cancelled by them, and the plaintiffs therefore could not present it on the day appointed for payment; and that on that day defendants had no money at the agency, and gave no instruction to the manager there to pay. Defendants pleaded, to the first count, that they were always ready to pay the principal and interest according to the bond, and did pay the same when presented, but that the bond was not presented at the said agency on the day appointed for payment, nor at any other time; and that defendants never owed nor covenanted to pay the plaintiffs interest after that day, when they ready to pay both principal and interest. And to the second count, that they had money at the said agency to pay the bond, but the plaintiffs had no one there, nor was any one there on that day or at any time after to receive the same; and that they vever owed, &c., (as in the last plea):—Held, both pleas good; and that the omission to aver presentment in the first count was cured by the plea. At the trial it appeared that the bond declared on in the first count had never been in the plaintiffs' the first count had never been in the plaintiffs' cutsfody, having been retained at their request by defendants' solicitor, and it was proved that when the bonds fell due, and up to July, 1857, defendants had funds at the agency out of which they would have been paid if presented:—Held, that the pleas were proved; that defendants were not liable to pay interest. after the bonds matured; and that the Judge properly directed a verdict in their favour, McDonald v. Great Western R. W. Co., 21 U. C. R. 223.

—— Presentment — Pleading — Assignment—Equities—Forfeiture.]—A declaration alleged that defendants, by their bond or debenture, &c., did bind themselves, &c., to pay the bearer of the said debenture on, &c., $1,000, and interest thereon half-yearly at seven per cent. per annum on the 1st March and September, at a named place, on presentation of the proper "coupons" therefor, and then annexed to the said bond, &c.; that the defendants delivered the bond to C. & Co., who thereby became the lawful holders of the said bond and coupons; that after the making of the said bond the coupon for $35, being the instalment of interest due 1st September, 1873, was duly presented at the said place, and was not paid, but was dishonoured, and payment refused: and that the said coupons and all claims in respect thereof have been assigned to the plaintiff, who now sues for the recovery of the amount thereof: — Held, declaration bad, for that it did not appear what a "coupon" was, or that its assignment alone gave any right of action, the covenant to pay interest being contained in the bond. McKenzie v. Montreal and City of Ottawa Junction R. W. Co., 27 C. P. 224.

By s. 13 of 34 Vict. c. 47 (D.), the defendants' Act of incorporation, they were empowered to issue bonds or debentures in such form and amount, and payable at such times and places as the directors might from time to time appoint, &c.; and by 35 Vict. c. 12, s. 2 (O.), the bonds or debentures of corporations made payable to bearer, or any person named therein as bearer, may be transmitted by delivery, and such transfer shall vest the property thereof in the holder, to enable him to maintain an action in his own name. De-fendants issued bonds or debentures, with coupons attached for the payment of the interest half-yearly, payable to bearer, and delivered them to C. & Co., the contractors for the build-ing of the road. The coupons for the first instalment of interest not having been paid, the plaintiff brought an action thereon, alleging an assignment to him, and that he was the lawful holder thereof:—Held, that the plaintiff held the coupons freed from any equities arising between the defendants and C. & Co. under an agreement creating a charge upon such instruments, and a plea setting up the forfeiture of such debentures under such agreement, was held bad. S. C., 29 C. P. 333,

Interest in Arrear — Remedy — Attachment of Debts—Receiver,]—So long as a rail-way company is a going concern, bondholders whose bonds are a general charge on the undertaking have no right, even although interest on these bonds is in arrear, to seize, or take, or sell, or foreclose any part of the property of the company. Their remedy is the appointment of a receiver. The bondholders of the defendants in this case were held not entitled to the moneys claimed by them, which were the earnings of the road deposited in a tank, and which had been attached by judgment creditors of the road. Decision in 18 O. R. 581 reversed. Phelps v. 8t, Catharines and Niagara Central R. W. Co., 19 O, R. 501.

3. Right of Bondholders to Register and Vote.

Creditors—Delivery of Debentures to—Madamus.)—A trustee held certain debentures of a railway company on trust to secure certain creditors of the company for according to the company for according to the creditors of the company for according to the company making default in payment of the advances. The company made default, and the debentures were delivered over to the creditors:—Held, that the creditors were entitled under 34 Vict. c. 43, s. 33 (O.), to be registered as holders of the debentures, to enable them to qualify and vote for directors; and that a mandamus should issue to compel the company so to register them. In re Thomson and Victoria R. W. Co., S. P. R. 423.

Default of Interest—Proof of.]—To an application for a mandamus to compel a rail-way company to register bonds, it was objected that it did not appear that the company had made default in payment of the interest, the coupons not being shewn to have been presented at the place named for payment:—Held, that the fact of the company never have was a sufficient answer to their objection. Re Thomson and Victoria R. W. Co., 9 P. R. 119.

Demand—Officer of Company.]—A demand upon a railway company to register the bonds was held sufficiently made upon the assistant secretary, who, it was shewn, performed all the duties of the secretary's office. Re Thomson and Victoria R. W. Co., 9 P. R. 119.

Transfere—Production of Transfers—Mandamus. 1—O., being the holder of fourteen bonds of the railway company, issued on 1st May, 1876, payable on 1st January, 1881, with interest meanwhile half-yearly at six per cent, per annum, requested the secretary of the company to register the bonds under 38 Vict. e, 56 (O.) This the secretary refused to do unless the intermediate transfers were produced and registered at the same time:—Held, that the secretary was bound to register the bonds without the production or registration of the transfers, and a summons for a mandamus was made absolute with costs. In re Osder and Toronto, Grey, and Bruce R. W. Co., 8 P. R. 506.

The Canadian Bank of Commerce received from M. R. & Co., bankers in London, bonds of the T., G., and B. Railway Company, to the amount of £195.80, represented by M. R. & Co. as belonging to different persons named, and tendered them for registration at the railway office, in order that these persons might vote thereon. The secretary of the railway company registered such of the bonds as stood in the names of the original holders, but refused to register the others unless written transfers from the original holders were produced:

—Held, that the company should register the bonds without the production of the transfers; that the proof of title in the alleged owners was sufficient; that the issue of script in London as representing the bonds formed no objection; and a mandamus to register the bonds was granted. In re Johnson and Toronto, Grey, and Bruce R. W. Co., S P. R. 555.

If the holders of railway bonds desire to acquire the right of voting thereon under the Act, all the transfers must be evidenced in such a way as to enable the company to register them in the same manner as they register shares. No special provision by by-law for the registration of such bonds is requisite. It is enough that the bondhoiders on the application for a mandamus should make out a primâ facie title, and the mere fact that they were directors of the company was held no objection, it not being defined that they had done what was necessary under 37 Vict. c. 63, s. 25 (O.), to entitle them to be come holders. Re Thomson and Victoria R. W. Co., 9 P. R. 119.

Votes—Number of.]—By the Act of incorporation of a railway company, every slareholder was entitled to one vote for every slareheld by him. It was provided by the same Act, that if the interest on the bonds issued by the company should be in arrear all holders of bonds should have the same right of voting and qualification for directors as were attached to shareholders:—Held, that the bondholders were not entitled to more than one vote on each bond. Bunting v. Laidlaw, S. P. R. Sid.

at—Agreement.]—Under a statute which enacted that, in the event at any time of the interest upon the bonds of a railway company remaining unpaid and owing, then, at the next general meeting of the company all holders of bonds should have and possess the same rights and privileges, and qualifications for directors, and for voting, as are attached to shareholders, provided that the bonds, and any transfers thereof, should have been first registered in the same manner as was provided for the registration of shares:—Held, that the words "at the next general meeting" were merely indicative of the earliest period at which the bondholders might vote, and that the statute did not require a new registration in order to entitle the bondholders to vote at any subsequent meeting, so long as the interest remained unpaid. Held, also, that the bondholders' right to vote was not limited to the right of voting for directors, but that they had the right to vote on all subjects properly coming before a general annual meeting upon which shareholders might vote. And where a subsequent statute extended the bondholders' right of voting to "special meetings:"—Held, also, that the bondholders had the like right to vote on all subjects coming before "special meetings." Where a statute authorized the railway company to enter into agreement with any other company, for leasing or working its line, provided that assent thereto should be given by at least two-thirds of the share-holders present, or represented by proxy, at any meeting specially called for the purpose: —Held, that the word "shareholder" must be interpreted to include all who were entitled to vote as shareholders, which included bondholders. Held, also, that the registered bondholders were entitled to vote at a special meeting called for the purpose of obtaining the assent of the shareholders to such an arrangement, on the question of its adoption. In receiver and Toronto, Grey, and Bruce R. W. Co., S. P. R. 506, and In re Johnson and Toronto, Grey, and Bruce R. W. Co., b. 535, followed. Held, also, that the votes of registered bondholders having been rejected, the arrangement, though confirmed by two-thirds of the actual shareholders present, or represented, was nevertheless not properly confirmed within the meaning of the statute, and an action ing called for the purpose of obtaining the asin the meaning of the statute, and an action to compel specific performance of the agreement was dismissed. 4. Trustees for Bondholders.

Possession of Railway—Liability—Printeged Claim—Unpaid Vendor.]—In virtue of the provision of a trust conveyance, grantine a first lien, privilege, and mortgage upon the railway property, franchise, and all additions thereto of the South Eastern Islaiway Company, and executed under the authority of 43 & 44 Vict. c. 43 (Q.), and 44 & 45 Vict. c. 43 (Q.), the trustees of the bandholders took possession of the railway. In the control of the property of the prop to the cars and rolling stock in this case), and the immovable to which the movables are attached is in possession of a third party or is hypothecated; art. 2017, C. C. 3. But, even considered as movables, such cars and rolling stock became affected and charged by virtue of the statute and mortgage made thereunder, as security to the bondholders, with right of priority over all other creditors, including the privileged unpaid vendors. Waltbridge v., Farucell, Ontario Car and Foundry Co. v. Farucell, 18. S. C. R. 1.

Security—Second Mortgagec—Purchase— Banks.]—W. having agreed to advance money to a railway company for completion of its road, an agreement was executed by which, after a recital that W. had so agreed and that a bank had undertaken to discount W.'s notes indorsed by E. to enable W, to procure the indorsed by E. to enable W. to proceed a money to be advanced, the railway company appointed said bank its attorney irrevocable, in case the company should fail to repay the advances as agreed, to receive the bonds of the company (on which W. held security) from a trust company with which they were deposited, and sell the same to the best advantage, applying the proceeds as set out in the agreement. The railway company did not repay W, as agreed, and the bank ob-tained the bonds from the trust company, and having threatened to sell the same, the pany, by its manager, wrote to E. and W. a letter requesting that the sale be not car-ried out, but that the bank should substitute and W. as the attorneys irrevocable of the company for such sale, under a provision in the aforesaid agreement, and if that were done, the company agreed that E. and W. should have the sole and absolute right to sell the bonds for the price and in the manner they should deem best in the interest of all concerned, and apply the proceeds in a speci-fied manner, and also agreed to do certain other things to further secure the repayment of the moneys advanced. E. and W. agreed to this, and extended the time for payment of their claim, and made further advances, and, as the last mentioned agreement auth-orized, they re-hypothecated the bonds to the bank on a contraction of the contraction. bank on certain terms. At the expiration of the extended time the railway company again made default in payment, and notice was given them by the bank that the bonds would be sold unless the debt was paid on a certain day named; the company then brought an action to have such sale restrained:—Held, that the bank and E. and W. were respectively first and second incumbrancers of the bonds, being and second incumorancers of the bonds, being to all intents and purposes mortzagees, and not trustees of the company, in respect there-of, and there was no rule of equity forbidding the bank to sell or E. and W. to purchase un-der that sale. Held, further, that if E. and W. should purchase at such sale, they would become absolute holders of the bonds and not liable to be redeemed by the company. Held, also, that the dealing by the bank with the bonds was authorized by the Banking Act. Nova Scotia Central R. W. Co. v. Halifax Banking Co., 21 S. C. R. 536.

V. CARRIAGE OF GOODS.

1. Damages for Loss or Non-Delivery.

Excessive Damages.] — Defendants undertook to carry for plaintiffs a quantity of oats to T., which they did, delivering them at an elevator there belonging to S., who received them to hold for plaintiffs. Of the quantity thus delivered plaintiffs received part before the elevator was destroyed by fire, as it some of the property of the property of the property of the property of grain better than a before the state of the elevator at the time of its destruction, most of which settled down in a conical mass on the wharf on which the building stood, the remainder falling into the water. Plaintiffs desired to remove what remained of their grain, alleging that they could select it from the general mass, from their knowledge of the portion of the building in which it had been stored; but defendants, who were the balies of the greater part, assumed charge of the whole for the general benefit, which it accordingly was, when the plaintiffs' share of the proceeds was found to amount to only about $2S:—Held, that plaintiffs could maintain trover against defendants in respect of their grain so disposed of by defendants, inasmuch as the latter prevented plaintiffs from removing it if they could find it. Held, also, that this was a case in which no greater than the actual damages sustained should have been assessed; and, the jury having awarded excessive damages, the court ordered a new trial, unless plaintiffs would reduce their verdict to a sum named. Moffatt v. Grand Trunk R. W. Co., 15 C. P. 392.

Evidence of Loss.]—Under an averment in the declaration of a loss of market of corn by delay in carriage:—Held, that evidence of the loss caused by the corn sprouting and thus deteriorating in quality was improperly received. Kyle v. Buffaio and Lake Huron R. W. Co., 16 C. P. 70.

Measure of—Loss of Profits.]—In an action by plaintiffs against defendants for damages occasioned by the non-delivery of a certain article of machinery contracted to be delivered by them for plaintiffs, it appeared that no notice had been given at the time of the contract to the defendants of the meessity for a prount delivery of the machinery nor of the nes it was to be put to:—Held, that the plaintiffs could only recover the value of the missing article, and were not entitled to the loss of profits arising from this non-do-let growth of the building in which the michinery was the used. Rutheren Woollen almost clusters of c. v. Great Western R. W. Un., 18 C. P. 316.

— Mitigation.]—Where issues in fact were left to a jury, reserving the question of nominal or substantial damages for the opinion of the court:—Held, that the only question for the court was, whether the plaintiff should be limited to nominal damages, or recover the actual value of his goods; and that the question of mitigating the damages upon the facts proved could not be considered. Robson v. Bulfulo and Lake Huron R. W. Co., 10 C. P. 279.

Value of Goods—Interest.]—In an action for conversion of oats sold by the rail-way company at the place to which they were consigned:—Held, that the plaintiff was entitled to recover as damages the value of the oats at that place at the time of conversion; but, as there was some difficulty in ascertaining this, substantial justice would be done by allowing the plaintiff the price paid at the place of shipping with six per cent, interest added. Worden v. Canadian Pacific $R.\ W.\ Co.,\ 13\ O.\ R.\ 652.$

— Value of Goods—Tender.]—Plaintiff had sold certain goods to M., which were at the time lying at defendants? railway station, and defendants were fully aware of the sale, but, notwithstanding, they contracted with plaintiff to carry and deliver them for him as required, and gave him a shipping bill accordingly. In an action by plaintiff against defendants for the non-delivery—Held, that defendants could not set up M.'s title to the goods as against the plaintiff. It further appeared that beyond the fact of M. having notified defendants of his claim, and making a demand for the goods, he did nothing to indicate his intention of looking to them for damages, but in fact sued plaintiff and recovered the whole amount of his claim from him:—Held, that the case could not be brought within the principle of a bailee setting up the jus tertii against the bailor, as there was here no bona fide defending in right and title of such third person. Held, also, that plaintiff was entitled to recover the whole value of the property converted, and not merely the difference between the price at the time of refusal to deliver and tender of it back again. The tender in question was made in writing by defendants' solitor, two days before the commission day of the assizes, offering for plaintiff's acceptance the fifty kegs of butter the goods in question) sold by him to M., and for which M. had recovered against him, stating same to be at T. at plaintiff's own risk:—Held, wholy illusory, and not to partake of any of the incidents of a legal tender. Brill v. Grand Trank R. W. Co., 20 C. P. 440.

2. Deficiency in Goods Delivered.

Proof of — Evidence.] — Defendants received 2,000 bundles of hoop iron to be carried to London and delivered at their station there to the plaintiffs. On its arrival, the plaintiff having no agent in London and living in Montreal, defendants sent to them their advice notes of the arrival, and unloaded the iron in their yard, where it remained for nearly three weeks and was injured by rust and exposure:—Held, that the defendants as common carriers were not liable. Eighteen bundles were missing, and defendants' officers, not having checked the number taken out of the cars, could only say that if the 2,000 bundles arrived there it was all placed in the yard, and must have been stolen from there:—Held, that the defendants were liable for the eighteen bundles. Hall v. Grand Trunk R. W. Co., 34 U. C. R. 517.

— Onus—Conduct of Parties,]—The plaintiff shipped a number of bundles of iron by defendants' railway from Montreal to London, subject to a condition that on its arrival, and on being detached from the train, the delivery was to be complete and the liability of defendants to terminate. On the arrival of the iron defendants forthwith sent the plaintiff advice notes of its arrival, on which were indorsed the above condition, and from which it would appear that all the iron had arrived; and requested him to send for it without delay, and notified him that it thenceforth remained at his risk. The plaintiff, who was the ticket clerk at the London station during all the time that the iron was there, saw the iron and could have counted the bundles and have seen that they were correct. Instead, however, of doing so and taking it away, he allowed it to remain in a place where, by an arrangement which had existed for some years between him and defendants, it was accustomed to be placed free of charge and for his sole convenience, and where he was enabled, from time to time, to send for and take such portions as he required:—Held, that under these circumstances defendants were not bound to shew that all the iron shipped had in fact arrived; that therefore no liability would attach upon them for an alleged deficiency; and, at all events, that this point could not be raised in term, as it was not taken at the trial. Taylor v. Grand Trunk R. W. Co., 24 C. P. SSZ.

3. Liability as Carriers or Warehousemen.

(a) Goods in Company's Warehouse at Destination.

Dutiable Goods—Notice—Destruction by Fire.]—Plaintiff delivered to defendants, as common carriers, foreign goods in bond at Bufalo, to be carried to Brantford, valued at 190 38. A receipt was given (26th April, 1854), for (amongst other things) a box at Bufalo for way station. The contract alleged was to carry the goods from Buffalo to Brantford, and there to deposit and keep them for the plaintiff, for reward, &c. Frequently, before defendants 'freight station was burnt at Brantford on the Sth or 9th May, 1854), and afterwards, the plaintiff applied for the goods, when the answer was "not arrived." On 9th May the answer was, "burnt up." It was admitted that the goods arrived on the 5th or 6th May, and were stored in a bonded warehouse in defendants' control, and were burnt on the 8th or 9th, and that no notice of arrival was sent to the 'consignee:—Held, that, under the contract as stated in the declaration and proved, defendants' liability as common carriers had ceased, and that of warehousemen commenced, and they were not liable under the contract as alleged, and not bound to give notice. Boxie v, Bujlato, Brantford, and Goderich R. W. Co., 7 C. P. 191.

Declaration, that the plaintiff delivered goods to defendants as common carriers, valued at £150, to be safely conveyed from Suspension Bridge to Toronto, within a reasonable time, for hire. Breach, that defendants did not, within such reasonable time, take care of and convey the said goods to Toronto, and never delivered the same. The plaintiff, on the 24th July, 1856, received a notice that "the undermentioned goods consigned to you have arrived here this day; we will thank you to send for them as soon as possible, as they remain here at your risk and expense." The goods were spring goods, which had arrived from the bridge on the 5th April and 11th March, and were placed by defendants in a bonded warehouse, being subject to duties. Being unseasonable at the time of receipt of the notice, plaintiff refused to take them:—Held, that the goods being bonded goods, subject to duty, and defendants having conveyed them within a reasonable time to the warehouse, where they were bound by law to deliver them, they were not bound to give notice of their arrival there, and their duty as common carriers had ceased. The last case confirmed. O'Aveilt v. Great Western R. W. Co., 7 C. P. 208.

Special Conditions—Delay in Delivery.]
—On 3rd April, 1871, defendants received at Montreal a case of hats to be carried to To-ronto, consigned to the plaintiffs. The goods arrived in due course at Toronto, and were placed in defendants' warehouse, but were not delivered to the plaintiffs until the 15th June following, whereby the sale of the goods was lost, and their value very considerably deteriorated. It appeared, however, that the goods were carried under this special condition: "The company will not be responsible for any goods left until called for or to order, warehoused for the convenience of the parties to whom they belong, or by or to whom they are consigned; and that the delivery of the goods will be considered complete, and the responsibilities of the company will be considered to terminate, when placed in the company's shed or warehouse." But it also appeared that it was the custom of defendants to deliver to the consignees goods brought by them and warehoused, and to charge for the cartage in the freight:—Held, that the condition would only relive defendants from liability as common carriers, but not as warehousemen; and that, being bound in the latter capacity to deliver the goods, they were liable for the loss sustained by the detention. It appeared also that the address in the shipping bill was not very distinctly written, and it was contended that this was expressly left to the jury, who found for the palantifis, and the court would not interfere. McCrosson v. Grand Trunk R. W. Co., 23 C. P. 107.

Destruction by Fire.]—Under a condition in a railway shipping bill the delivery of goods was to be considered complete and the responsibility of the company to terminate when the goods were placed in the company's warehouse at their destination.

The goods were carried to the station at the place of delivery and were placed in the company's shed there used for the purpose of storing goods, where they were subsequently destroyed by fire. The station was some five miles distant from the village where the plaintiff's place of business was:—Held, that the station was the destination of the goods and not the village; that the shed was a warehouse within the meaning of the condition; and that after the goods were placed there the company's liability was at an end. Richardson v, Canadian Pacific R. W. Co., 19 O. R. 339.

Grain-Non-delivery, 1-The plaintiff, who lived at Meaford, sold a quantity of barley by sample to one D., a brewer in Toronto, and shipped same by the defendbrewer ants' railway, consigned to D. at Brock street, signing a consignment note and receiving a shipping receipt from the company, which stipulated that such receipt should not be transferable, but that as to grain consigned to defendants' elevator at Toronto defendants would grant a negotiable receipt. The barley was duly carried to Toronto and warehoused by defendants in their elevator there, under, as they contended, the right conferred therefor by certain conditions of the contract; and they then tendered grain of the same grade as plaintiff's, which D. refused to accept:—Held, that the consignment note and shipping re-ceipt, which constituted the contract between the parties, shewed that a distinction was made between grain consigned to the defendants' elevator and other grain; the conditions as to warehousing being only applicable to the former, and that the plaintiff was therefore entitled to recover the amount of the damages sustained by the non-delivery of the specific grain shipped. Leader v. Northern R. W. Co., 3 O. R. 92.

Loss of Goods. I-On the back of the request note and shipping receipt given and received by the plaintiff on the shipment of goods from Montreal to Toronto and the freight advice note received by him on the arrival of the goods at Toronto, and specially referred to on the face thereof respectively, were a number of conditions under the head-General notices and conditions of carriage," one of which was that the company should not be liable for any goods left until called for or to order, or warehoused for the convenience of the parties to whom they belonged, &c., and that the warehousing of all goods would be at the owner's risk and ex-pense. On the arrival of the goods at Toronto they were placed in the defendants' warehouse there, and the plaintiff, on receipt of the freight advice note, called at the warehouse, and obtained permission to leave them there, nothing being said about storage. goods were subsequently lost, and the plain-tiff brought an action against the defendants to recover their value:-Held, that he could not recover, for, although the defendants must be deemed to have held the goods as warehousemen and not as carriers, the terms and conditions of the request note and shipping receipt, which constituted the contract be-tween the parties, applied and bound the plaintiff, irrespective of whether he had read phalitin, irrespective of wholes in the conditions or knew their contents, and therefore the defendants were protected by the condition above set forth. Mayer v. Grand Trunk R. W. Co., 31 C. P. 248.

(b) Goods in Company's Warehouse in Transit.

Special Conditions - Detention Goods.] — A condition was, that goods addressed to places beyond the defendants' dressed dressed to places beyond the defendants' line, and respecting which no direction to the contrary should have been received, dwold be forwarded by the defendants and opportunity might offer, by public carriers or otherwise, or might be suffered to remain in the defendants' warehouse, at the main in the defendants' warehouse, at the risk of the owner; but that the delivery by the defendants should be considered complete, and their responsibility cease, when the other carriers should have received notice that the defendants was the defendant of the considered to the other carriers should have received notice. that the defendants were prepared to deliver the goods to them; and that the defendants would not be responsible for any loss or de-tention after arrival at their station nearest the place of consignment. The third count alleged that the goods were delivered to the defendants to be carried from Montreal to Peterborough, subject to this condition (setting it out), amongst others, and averred that defendants did not forward the goods to Peterborough within a reasonable time, but on the contrary detained them at Port Hope in their warehouse :- Held, that defend ants were charged as carriers, and were so acting, not as warehousemen. Mason Grand Trunk R. W. Co., 37 U. C. R. 163.

—— Destruction by Fire.]—Four car-loads of flour were delivered to defendants to be carried from Newmarket, Ont., to Chatham, N. B., under a special contract whereby defendants were not to be liable for any delay occasioned by want of opportunity to delay occasioned by want of opportunity of forward goods beyond places where defend-ants had stations, but they could forward them to their destination by public carriers or otherwise, as opportunity might offer; that pending communication with the consignees the goods remained on the defendants' premises at the owner's risk; and that defendants were not to be liable after notification to the carriers that they were ready to deliver the goods for further conveyance; and that defendants were not to be liable for loss by It appeared that the defendants' line did not extend beyond Toronto, and that the goods were to be forwarded by the Grand Trunk Railway: that on their arrival at Toronto, they were placed in defendants' freight sheds, and notice, addressed to the consignee, sent to the consignor at Newmarket, and also to the Grand Trunk Railway Company, that the defendants were prepared to deliver the goods for further conveyance; and that, after such notice, while the goods were in defendfreight sheds, they were destroyed by fire without any negligence on defendants' part:—Held, that defendants were not liable as carriers, because they had expressly limited their liability; nor as warehousemen, because no negligence was shewn; the only negligence suggested being that defendants did not procure or supply cars for the transhipment before the fire, but that this was not sustainable; and, even if this could constitute negli-gence, quere, whether the recovery could be for more than nominal damages, i.e., whether the loss by fire was the damage naturally resulting from such negligence. Brodie v. Northern R. W. Co., 6 O. R. 180.

(c) Goods in Company's Warehouse at Place of Shipment.

Destruction by Fire.]—When a shipper stores goods from time to time in a railway warehouse, loading a car when a carload is ready, the responsibility of the railway combined to be a specifically set apart face and the companion of the carriers but of warehousement, and in case of their accidental destruction by fire, the shipper has no remedy against the company. Judgment in 23 O. R. 454 reversed. Milley v. Grand Trunk R. W. Co., 21 A.

4. Special Contracts Limiting or Relieving from Liability.

(See also cases under 3.)

(a) Conditions—Validity of, to Protect Company.

Binding Contract—Reading over—Conversion of Cattle—Payment into Court.]—Plaintiff sent some cattle from Beachville by defendants' railway, signing a paper which declared that he undertook all risk of loss, injury, or damage, in conveyance and otherwise, whether arising from the negligence, default, or misconduct, criminal or otherwise, on the part of defendants and their servants. He was told by the station master that he would have to sign these conditions, which he did without taking time to read them. an action for negligence in the carriage of the cattle by which five of them were killed, defendants pleaded these conditions, which the jury found that the plaintiff had signed: that he was bound by them, though he might not have read or understood the paper. Simons v. Great Western R. W. Co., 2 C. B. N. S. 620, distinguished, as being founded on the fraud practised on the plaintiff to induce him to sign. There was also a count in trover for conversion of the five cattle, as to which defendants paid into court 852, being the price for which they were sold by defendants' station master after they had been killed:-Held, that such payment admitted only a cause of action, not the partistation master after they bad cular cause sued for; and the evidence proved no conversion by defendants, the sale not being the ordinary duty of a station master. O'Rorke v. Great Western R. W. Co., 23 U. C. R. 427.

ieg.]— Transportation of Cattle — Pleading.]— To a declaration ngainst defendants, setting out a special contract entered into with plaintiff to carry certain cattle, whereby plaintiff undertook "all risk of loss, injury, damage, and other contingencies in loading, unloading, transportation, conveyance, and otherwise, no matter how caused," and alleging the consequent duty on defendants' part to furnish suitable and safe carriages, and the breach of such duty, whereby some of the cattle were killed and others injured, defendants pleaded this special contract, and that while said cattle were being so conveyed a door of one of the cars became open, and Vol. III, D—184—35 some of the cattle fell out and were injured:

—Held, on demurrer, a good plea, and (following the last case) that defendants were not liable. Hood v. Grand Trunk R. W. Co., 20 C. P. 361.

Transportation of Glass — Gross Negligence.] — Defendants received certain plate glass to be carried for the plaintiff, who signed a paper, partly written and partly printed, requesting them to receive it upon the conditions indorsed, which provided that they would not be responsible for damage done to any china, glass, &c., delivered to them for carriage; and defendants gave a receipt with the same conditions upon it:— Held, that such delivery and acceptance formed a special contract, which was valid at common law, and exempted defendants from injury to the goods, even though caused by gross negligence. Hundlon v. Grand Trank R. Co., 25 U. C. R. 600. Followed in Spettigue v. Great Western R. W. Co., 15 C. P. 315, and Batte v. Great Western R. W. Co., 24 U. C. R. 544.

— Transportation of Hogs — Reasonable Condition.]—The plaintiff delivered to the defendants, at Stony Point, eighty-six hogs, and on the following day he put on board the same car, at Thamesville, on the way, twenty more hogs, to be carried to Guelph. He got at Stony Point a drover's pass to pass him in charge of his stock. The agent there said that he allowed the plaintiff to label the car "Thamesville," on condition that the plaintiff would see the label changed, and that if it had been labelled "Guelph" it would not have stopped at Thamesville with the hogs, and thence went on by express. By some error the car went round by Hamilton: a delay of several days occurred, by which the hogs were injured, and several died; and when the car reached Guelph nine were missing altogether. The jury found that they were lost after leaving Thamesville, but how they could not say. Upon the shipping bill, as well as upon the plaintiff's pass, was indorsed a condition that upon a free pass being given, defendants would not be responsible for any negligence, default, or misconduct, gross, culpable, or otherwise, on the part of defendants or their servants, or of any other person, causing or tending to cause the death, injury, or detention of the goods: —Held, that the condition protected the defendants, for it sufficiently appeared that the loss must have happened from some cause within it; and quere, whether it was not a reasonable to condition, the pass being given to enable the plaintiff to accompany and take care of the stock. Held, also, that the plaintiff was to blame for not having the proper label put on at Thamesville, and for not remaining himself or sending some one with the hogs. The declaration alleged as a breach of defendants' contract the non-delivery within a reasonable time:—Held, thu under this the plaintiff might have recovered for the hogs lost and not delivered at all. Farr v. Great Western R. W. Co., 25 U. C. R. 534.

Construction of Conditions—Risk— Loss.]—Defendants received at Petrolia two car loads of coal oil to be carried to London. The shipping notes stated, "The G. W. Railway will please receive the undermentioned property, to be sent subject to their tariff, and under the conditions stated above and on the other side," one of which conditions was that defendants would not be liable for the loss or damage to goods of a combustible nature. One of the cars never arrived, and defendants could give no account of it; the other reached London, and was damaged there, as was supposed, and all the oil in it lost:—Held, that defendants were liable, for the condition related only to risk of carriage. Fitzgerald v. Great Western R. W. Co., 39 U. C. R. 525.

Oral Contract — Risk — Wrongful Act.] — The respondents sued the appellant company for breach of contract to carry petroleum in covered cars from L. to H.. alleging that they negligently carried the same upon open platform cars, whereby the barrels in which the oil was were exposed to the sun and weather and were destroyed. the trial, an oral contract between plaintiffs and defendants' agent at L. was proved, that the defendants would carry the oil in covered cars with despatch. The oil was forwarded in open cars, and delayed in different places. and in consequence a large quantity was lost. On the shipment of the oil, a receipt note was given which said nothing about covered cars, and which stated that the goods were subject to conditions indorsed thereon, one of "that the defendants would not which was. be liable for leakage or delays, and that the oil was carried at the owner's risk:" that the loss did not result from any risks by the contract imposed on the owners. it arose from the wrongful act of the defen dants in placing the oil on open cars, which act was inconsistent with the contract they had entered into, and in contravention as well of the undertaking as of their duty as carriers. Evidence was admissible to prove an oral contract to carry in covered cars, which contract the agent at L. was authorized to enter into, and which must be incorporated with the writing so as to make the whole con tract one for carriage in covered cars, and non-compliance with the provision as to carriage in covered cars, prevented the appelriage in covered cars, prevented the apper-lants setting up the condition that "oil was carried at the owner's risk" as exempting them from liability, Judgments in 27 C. P. 528, 28 C. P. 586, and 4. A. R. 601, affirmed, Grand Truck R. W. Co. v. Fitzgeredd, 5. S. C. R. 204

See Bicknell v. Grand Trunk R. W. Co., 26 A. R. 431, post XIII.

(b) Liability beyond Defendants' Line.

Delivery to Connecting Company Nearest Station—Aolice.]—Declaration upon a contract by defendants to carry goods from St. Mary's to Hamilton within a reasonable time, alleging non-performance. Plea, that the goods were carried upon certain special conditions, providing, in substance, that goods addressed to points beyond defendants' railway would be forwarded by public carriers, and defendants' responsibility should cease on notice to such carriers that the goods were ready for them; and that defendants should not be responsible for any damage or detention after said notice, or beyond their limits, nor for "claims arising from delay or detention of any train, whether in starting, or at any station, or in the course of the journey."
And the defendants alleged that they had no station at Hamilton, and that they conveyed the goods to their nearest station thereto, and handed them over to the Great Western R. W. Co., which conveyed them to Hamilton. Replication, that the plaintiff sues not only for the neglect and delay in the plea alleged, but for unreasonable delay by defendants at St. Mary's, and for neglect to carry thence to their station nearest to Hamilton. Rejoinder, repeating the conditions set out in the plea, and alleging that defendants only agreed to carry on those conditions:—Held, on demurrer, that the rejoinder was bad, for not stating any facts to bring defendants within the conditions: and that the plea was bad for not averring that defendants conveyed the goods to their nearest station to Hamilton, and gave notice to the Great Western R. W. Co. within a reasonable time. Declin v. Grand Trunk R. W. Co., 30 U. C. R. 537.

- Subsequent Delay.] — Defendants were charged with negligence and delay in the carriage of certain furs belonging to the plaintiff, from Toronto to New York, in pursuance of their contract. Defendants' railway extended only to the Suspension bridge, and it appeared that the goods were delivered to them, addressed to R., at New York, and a receipt given, which specified that they were received to be forwarded to such address, subject to their tariff, rules, and regulations. In these conditions it was stated that when goods were intended, after being conveyed by their railway, to be forwarded by some other means to their destination, the company would not be responsible after they were so deli-vered. The goods were sent on by defendants York Central R. R. Co., which placed them in the bonded warehouse of the American customs, until certain documents were procured, without which they could not be sent The plaintiff was asked by defendants for such papers, but they were not furnished for some time, and the furs were spoiled by the delay :- Held, that defendants were not liable, for there was no contract by them to convey the goods to New York as alleged, but their undertaking was only to carry them over their own line, and deliver them to the company who were to take them on. Rogers v. Great Western R. W. Co., 16 U. C. R. 389.

Subsequent Delivery to Wrong Person.)—In 1874 the plaintiff, at Toronto, agreed with defendants to forward all his goods for the senson of 1874, via the defendants' railway and Lake Superior line of steamers to Duluth, and thence to Fort Garry, the defendants to forward the goods from Toronto to Duluth at 75 cents per 160 lbs., and the rate from Duluth to Fort Garry to be $2,20 per 160 lbs., subject to changes of rariff of the Northern Pacific Railway, and Kitson's line of Red River steamers. The goods in question were shipped by plaintiat under a shipping note addressed to Audition of the Company of the Company of the Company is the place of the Company is stations, they will be forwarded by public carriers or otherwise, as opportunity may offer, &c.; but that the delivery by the company will be complete, and their responsibility cease, when such carriers have received notice that the company is prepared to deliver to them the goods for further conveyance; and they will not be responsible for any damage or detention, &c.

after such notice, or beyond their limits. The goods were carried by defendants to Collingwood, and thence by the Lake Superior steamers to Duluth, where they were delivered to the N. P. R. Co., and carried by them and K.'s steamers to Fort Garry, and there delivered to G. G. Allen, but without the payment of the price. The plaintiff then made a claim against defendants for such delivery without payment, and so opened his case at the trial, but on it appearing that payment was to be made to the express company, and on the plaintiff stating that his claim was for the delivery without his order or indorsement of the shipping note, his claim was rested on this ground:—Held, that plaintiff could not recover, for that the defendants' courtract was only to carry to Duluth, and on the delivery there to the N. P. R. Co., their liability was at an end. Semble, that, even if defendants' contract exactled to Fort Garry, there would be no liability, for the evidence shewed that it was never intended that the goods should not be given up except on a formal order by the plaintiff or indorsement of the shipping this. Rennie v. Northern R. W. Co., 27 C. P.

Subsequent Loss-Notice-Estoppet.]—The plaintiff signed a paper requesting the defendants to forward certain goods rethe defendants to forward certain goods re-ceived from him at Toronto, to Indianapolis, in Indiana, "subject to their tariff and un-der the conditions stated on the other side." On the other side, headed "General notices and conditions of carriage," the company "gave public notice," that in certain events specified they would not be responsible. The which would be pursued by them with respect to goods addressed to consignees resident beyoud the places at which defendants had sta-tions, proceeded, "and the company hereby further give notice, that they will not be responsible for any loss, damage, or detention," to goods beyond their limits. It was found by the jury that all the goods had been delivered by defendants to a railway connecting at Detroit with their line and running to Indiamapolis:—Held, that the latter part of the sentence could not be regarded as a notice as distinguished from a condition; and that, whether a notice or a condition, it formed part of a special contract on which defendants received the goods, and by which they were exempted from liability. The plaintiff was at Indianapolis when the goods (except the missing box sued for) arrived there, and remained until some time in the month following. Held, that he was resident there within the condition, and that having named himself as the consignee at that place, he was estopped from denying such residence. La Pointe v. Great Trunk R. W. Co., 26 U. C. R. 479.

Transit—Termination.]—One of the conditions in a contract by the G. T. R. Co. in carry goods from Toronto to Portage la Prairie, Man., a place beyond the terminus of their line, provided that the company "should not be responsible for any loss, misdelivery, damage, or detention that might happen to goods sent by them, if such loss, misdelivery, damage, or detention occurred after said goods arrived at the stations or places on their line learnest to the points or places which they were consigned to, or beyond their said limits:"—I lied, that this condition would not relieve the company from liability for loss or damage occurring during the transit, even if such loss occurred beyond the limits of the company's own line. Semble, that the loss having occurred after the transit was over, and the goods delivered at Portage la Prairie, and the liability of the company as carriers having ceased, this condition reduced the contract to one of mere bailment as soon as the goods were delivered, and also exempted the company from liability as warehousemen, and the goods were from that time in custody of the company on whose line Portage la Prairie was situate, as bullees for the shipper, Judgments in 12 O. R. 103 and 15 A. R. 14 reversed. Grand Trunk R. W. Co, v. McMillan, 16 S. C. R. 543.

Delivery to Wharfinger—Agent—Notice.]—One condition required the plaintifis to give notice in writing of their claim to the defendants' station freight agent within twenty-four hours after the delivery of the goods. It appeared that Halifax, the place to which the goods were sent, was beyond the limits of defendants' railway, but that all freight carried over their railway for delivery there, was transmitted to one B., a wharlinger, who received the same as he did the goods of other persons, making for his own benefit a special charge thereon:—Held, that B. was not a station freight agent within the meaning of the condition. Fitzgerald v. Grand Trunk R. W. Co., 28 C. P. 58T.

Failure to Deliver to Connecting Company—Notice.]—Defendants on the 5th October, 1874, received goods at Montreal for the plaintiffs, addressed to the plaintiffs at Peterborough, "by the Grand Trunk Railway Company to Port Hope, thence by the Midland railway." One of the conditions on which the defendants received the goods was, that no claim for damages to, loss of, or detention of goods, should be allowed "unless notice in writing, and the particulars of the claim for said loss, damage, or detention, are given to the station freight agent at the place of delivery within thirtysix hours after the goods in respect of which the said claim is made, are delivered." The goods got to Port Hope on the 8th October, but by some mistake one case was not given by the defendants to the Midland Railway Comthe detendants to the Alleand Manual Planting pany till the 9th November, and the plaintiffs were advised of its arrival at Peterborough on the 11th. On the 12th the plaintiffs wrote to the defendants' agent at Montreal, and to the defendants' agent at Montreal, and to the station agent of the Midland railway at Peterborough, that they had been advised of its arrival, but that they refused to accept it, because the delay had been most unreasonable, they had suffered loss through the detention, and had been compelled to re-order goods, and and had been competed to re-order goods, and they required defendants to compensate them for the loss sustained, and the value of the package:—Held, that these letters were not a compliance with the condition. Held, also, that the "place of delivery," mentioned in the condition above stated, was Peterborough, the place of delivery to the plaintiffs, not Port where the goods were to be delivered to Hope, the Midland railway; and that such notice should be given to the station freight agent should be given to the station regint agent at Peterborough, who would be the person agreed upon to receive it. Held, also, that such notice was required, though the place of delivery was off the defendants' line. Held, delivery was off the defendants line. Hera, also, that the defendants were under no obligation to give notice of the delivery of the goods by them to the Midland railway. Mason v. Grand Trunk R. W. Co., 37 U. C. R. 163.

Damages — Customs — Evidence.] The declaration charged defendants, in the first count, on a contract to carry certain wool from Cobourg to Boston within a reasonable time, subject to certain conditions indorsed on a receipt given by defendants— amongst others, that defendants should not be responsible for damages occasioned by delays from storms, accidents, or unavoidable causes; and alleging as a breach the neglect to carry. In the second count the contract was stated In the second count the contract was stated to be to carry within a reasonable time, and so that the wool should be imported into the United States before the 17th March, when the reciprocity treaty would expire. that defendants did not so carry, by which the plaintiffs were disabled from importing the wool into the States unless upon payment of duties. As to the first count, it appeared by the defendants' receipt, put in by the plaintiffs, that there was an additional condition, that as to goods addressed to con-signees resident beyond the places where defendants had stations (as these goods were), defendants' responsibility should cease upon their giving notice to the carriers onward, that they were prepared to deliver the goods to them for further transport :- Held, a substantial qualification of the contract declared on, which therefore was not proved as alleged. As to the second count, the same receipt applied, which named no day for carriage into the United States, but there was oral evidence of an agreement to forward by the 17th March:—Held, that, though this term might thus be added to the written contract, it would not dispense with the condition above men-tioned, which shewed a substantial variance from the contract declared on. The plaintiffs. therefore, were held not entitled to recover on either count. The witnesses called to prove the imposition of a duty in the United States after the 17th March, derived their knowledge only from printed circulars:—Held, insuffi-cient. The wool was sent as far as Prescott, where it was to cross the St. Lawrence, but not having been sent over to Ogdensburg by the 17th, the plaintiffs gave no further instruc-tions, and it remained at Prescott :- Held, that though, if a special contract to deliver within the United States by the 17th had been proved, t'ie duty, if paid by the plaintiffs, might have een recovered as damages, yet it was their duty to enter the goods and pay it, and they could not hold defendants responsible for de-lay occasioned by their default. (c) Liability for Goods Received from Other Contract for "Through Rate"—Destruction by Fire. —Plaintiffs bought twenty-four bales of cotton in Cinemnait, through their agent B., who delivered it there to the C. H. and D. R. Co. The bill of lading contained a heading "contract for through rate."

Under the general heading of the C. H. and D. R. Co., it was stated that the cotton was forwarded by B., and that the shipping marks were: 'G. & M.—for Gordon, Markay, & Co., Thoroid, Ont., win Derroit & G. W. R.,' and in the margin were added the words, 'Hrongh at 40c, per 190 lbs, &c., to D. via —.' The cotton was delivered without instructions to defendants, at D., by the teamster of a line connecting with the C. H. and D. R. Co., and was burned while in transit on defendants' line to T.:—Held, that the bill of lading shewed a contract with the C. H. and D. R. Co. for a through rate to T., and therefore that defendants were not liable to the plaintiffs. Gordon v. Great Western R. W. Co., 34 U. C. R. 324.

The plaintiffs bought twenty-four bales of The plainting bought twenty-four bases of cotton in Cincinnati, through their agent B., who delivered it there to the C. H. and D. R. Co. The bill of lading contained a leading, "Contract for through rate." Under the general heading of the C. H. and D. R. Co it was stated that the cotton was forwarded it was stated that the cotton was forwarded by B., and that the shipping marks were "G. & M.—for Gordon, Mackay, & Co., Thorold, Ont., via Detroit & G. W. R.: "and in the margin were added the words: "Through at forty cents per 100 lbs., @ — p. barrel. To Detroit, via —..." The conditions in-dorsed excepted that railway, and the boats and railways with which it connected, from loss by fire. The evidence, however, shewed loss by hre. The evidence, however, shewen that the freight payable under the bill of lading was not in fact a through freight to Thorold, but only extended to Detroit, there being a special contract between the plaintiffs and the defendants as to the freight from Detroit to Thorold, under which the goods were carried, and which contained no exemption It appeared also from certain letters written by the defendants after the loss that they did not consider themselves exempt under the original contract. The goods hav-ing been destroyed by fire while in transit on the defendants' line to Thoroid:—Held, that the defendants were liable to the plaintiffs, for the contract with the C. H. & D. R. Co. did not extend to them, but protected only the companies carrying as far as Detroit. Gardon v. Great Western R. W. Co., 25 C. P. 488. that they did not consider themselves exempt P. 488.

Refusal of Connecting Company to Receive Goods—Destruction by Fire— Privity of Contract—Applicability of Condi-tions.]—Plaintiff's correspondents in Chicago delivered there to the Michigan Southern Railway Company certain merchandize, to be transported to Toronto for plaintiff, that company at the time of delivery giving a receiptnote to the effect that they had received from plaintiff's correspondents the merchandize in question, consigned to plaintiff at Toronto, to be transported over their line of road to their terminus, and delivered to the company whose line might be considered a part of the route, to be carried to the place of destination; the Michigan company not to be liable as common carriers for the goods whilst at any of their stations awaiting delivery to the company which was to forward them; and that no company or carrier forming part of the line over which the freight was to be carried, should be responsible for demurrage or detention at its terminus, or beyond or on any part of the line, arising from any accumulation or over pressure of business; and that "the company" should not be liable for the destruction or damage of the freight from any cause whilst in the depot of the company, or for any loss or damage from "providential" causes, or from fire, whilst in transit or at the stations, There was an arrangement between the Michigan company and defendants that the latter should carry their freight from the terminus of their line to certain points in Canada, and this freight arrived in Detroit, the terminus of the Michigan company, who telegraphed defendants' agent the day before its destruction fendants agent the day before its destruction by fire, that it was in store, and requested them to forward it. Defendants had such an accumulation of freight on hand that they could not transport it all over their line, and could not therefore receive plannings goods, which were destroyed by fire at the Michigan way to be a superior that the could not transport it all over the first planning and the superior that the could not transport it all over the property that the michigan property that the michigan property that the michigan is the superior that the michigan is the michigan that company's station in Detroit, the day after the defendants were advised of their arrival. In an action against defendants for the value of an action against detendants for the value of the goods, charging a refusal on their part to receive them:—Held, that the plaintiff could not recover, for that under the receipt-note given by the Michigan company, they became the carriers; but that they only undertook to carry over their own line, and were plaintiff's against to deliver over his merchandize, to deagents to deliver over his merchandize to de-fendants to be carried to Toronto; but that the arrangement between them and defendants created no privity between defendants and created no privity between detendants and plaintiff, so as to enable him to sue defendants for not carrying it out; and that, even if defendants were bound to receive the merchandize at Detroit, for carriage to Toronto, the evidence shewed that they were not liable for the control of the co not receiving, owing to the over crowded state not receiving, owing to the over crowded state of their premises, and the pressure of freight upon them. Held, also, that plaintiff could not, in any case, recover more than nominal damages, as the value of the goods would not be the damages naturally flowing from a breach of contract to carry in disregard of defendants' common law obligation to do so; for that the loss by fire arose from the omisfor that the loss by me arose from the observed in the loss of the size of the loss of the that event. Held, also, that the condition that "the company" should not be liable for that the company snotin not be some than the company providential causes, or from fire from any cause whatever, &c., applied to the Michigan company alone, and not to defendants also. Crawford v. Great Western R. W. Co., 18 C. P. 510.

Warehouse Destruction by Fire.]-The statement of claim alleged that the plaintiff had purchased goods from persons in Toronto T. R. Company, and the rest to the C. P. R. and other companies, by the said several companies to be, and the same were transferred to the defendants for carriage to Merlin. That on receipt by the defendants of the goods it lin and deliver them to the plaintiff. There was also an allegation of a contract by the defendants for storage of the goods and delivery to the plaintiff when requested, and a lack of proper care whereby the goods were lost. goods were destroyed by fire while stored in a building owned by the defendants at Merlin: Held, that as to the goods delivered to the G. T. R. Company to be transferred to the de-fendants, as alleged, if the cause of action stated was one arising ex delicto, it must fail, as the evidence shewed that the goods were received from the G. T. R. Company for carriage under the terms of a special contract contained in the bill of lading and shipping note given by that company to the consignors; and if it was a cause of action founded on contract, it must also fail, as the contract under which the goods were received by the G. T. R. Company provided, among other things, that the company would not be liable for the loss of goods by fire; that goods stored should be at sole risk of the owners; and that the provisions should apply to and for the benefit of every carrier. Held, further, that as to the goods delivered to the companies other than the G. T. R. to be transferred to the defendants, the latter were liable under the contract for storage; that the goods were in their pos-session as warehousemen, and the bills of lading contained no clause, as did those of the G. T. R. Company, giving subsequent carriers the benefit of their provisions; and that the two courts below having held that the loss was caused by the negligence of servants of the defendants. such finding should not be interfered with. Held, also, that as to goods carried on a bill of lading issued by the defendants, there was an express provision therein that owners should incur all risk of loss of goods in charge of the defendants as warehousemen; and that such condition was a reasonable one, as the defendants only undertook to warehouse goods of necessity and for convenience of shippers, Lake Eric and Detroit River R. W. Co. v. Sales, 26 S. C. R. 663.

(d) Notice to Company of Damage or Loss.

Delivery—Owner.]—To an action for the non-delivery of goods delivered to defendants to be carried from Hamilton to Toronto, the defendants set up that they duly carried and delivered the said goods to the plainting at Toronto, but that the desemble of the special contract entered into between the parties, give the defendants within thirty-six hours thereafter notice of any damage or loss:—Held, that the defence failed, as the evidence shewed that the goods were never carried or delivered as aleged. A further defence set up was, that the plaintiff could not maintain the action, which was in case, because he was not the owner of the goods at the time of the shipment at Hamilton, having sold them to one H:—Held, that the evidence shewed that the plaintiff was the owner, for, although there appeared to have been a sale, the property was not to pass until the delivery of the goods at Toronto. Stede v. Grand Trunk R. W. Co., 31 C. P. 260.

(31 Viet, c. 68 and 34 Viet, c. 43 (D.))

the Railway Act, 1868, 31 Vict. c. 68 (D.), as amended by 34 Vict. c. 43, s. 5 (D.), is not, by virtue of s. 7 of the latter Act, made applicable to the Great Western Railway Company; and therefore that they were not deprived of the protection afforded by one of their special conditions—which stated that fruit was to be carried only at the risk of the owners, and that they would not be liable for higher scassioned by frost—although the jury found that the fruit in question, which was being carried by them, became frozen owing to their negligence. Scott v. Great Western R. W. Co., 23 C. P. 182.

(D.), gives an action against certain railway companies for neglect to carry goods, &c., but the Act does not apply to the Great Western Railway Company, the defendants. By s. 5 of 34 Vict. c. 43 (D.), this sub-section "is hereby amended by adding thereto the following words: 'From which action the company shall not be relieved by any notice, condition, or declaration, if the damage arises from any or declaration. It the amage are realised or of its servants; " and by s. 7. "The provisions of this Act" are made applicable to every railway company:—Held, that the sub-section of the earlier Act, as thus amended, did not ap-ply to defendants; but that the effect of the later Act was merely to add the newly en-acted words to the sub-section, and "The pro-visions of this Act," therefore, did not include the annendment. To a declaration for breach of contract to carry goods within a time agreed on, or within a reasonable time, from G. to B., defendants pleaded setting special condition of the contract, that defendants "should not be liable under any circumstances for loss of market or other claims arising from delay or detention of any train, whether at starting for any of the stations, or in the course of the journey, nor for damages occasioned by delays from storms," &c. Re-plication, that the damages sued for arose from negligence and omission of the ants and their servants within the Railway Act of 1868, s. 20, s.-s. 4 (D.), as amended by 34 Vict, c. 43, s. 5 (D.), in this, that the car in which the goods were placed was negligently allowed to remain at a station unattached to any train, and was negligently attached to a train on a different branch of defendants' railway from that between G. and B., and was carried thereon to W., at a distance from B., and allowed to remain there a long time: Held, replication bad, for it was not a traverse of the plea, but the allegation of negligence was dependent upon the previous reference to and reliance on the statute. Quære, whether the replication of negligence alone would have been an answer to the plea, independent of the Allen v. Great Western R. W. Co., statute. 33 U. C. R. 483.

Extent of Statute.]—Sub-section 4 of s. 20 of the Railway Act of 1898, 31 Viet. c. 68 (D.). does not extend to all cases in which negligence is charged against the railway company, but to cases only of neglect coming within the provisions of s.-ss. 2 and 3. They are not prevented therefore from stipulating for a limited liability in other cases. Scarlett v. Great Western R. W. Co., 41 U. C. R. 211.

Application to Grand Trunk Railway Company—Cattle—Person in Charge

-Pass.]—A dealer in horses hired a car from the appellants for the purpose of transporting his stock over their road, and signed a shipping note by which he agreed to be bound by the following, among other, conditions: (1) The owner of animals undertakes all risks of loss, injury, damage, and other contingencies, in loading, &c. (3) When free passes are given to persons in charge of animals, it is only on the express condition that the railway company are not responsible for any negligence, default, or misconduct of any kind, on the part of the company or their servants, or of any other person or persons whomsoever, causing or tending to cause the death, injury, or detention of any person or persons travelling upon any such free passes-the person using any such pass takes all risks of every kind, no matter how caused. The horses were carried over the Grand Trunk Railway in charge of a person employed by the owner, such person having a free pass for the trip; through the negligence of the company's serthrough the negligence of the company 8 vants a collision occurred by which the horses were injured:—Held, affirming the judgments in 2 O. R. 197 and 10 A. R. 162, that under the General Railway Act, 1868, 31 Viet. c. 68. s. 20, s.-s. 4, as amended by 34 Vict. c. 43, epacted by Consolidated Railway Act, 1879, 42 Vict. c. 9, s. 25, s.-ss. 2, 3, 4, which pro-hibited railway companies from protecting themselves against liability for negligence by notice, condition, or declaration, and which applies to the Grand Trunk Railway Company, the company could not avail themselves of the above stipulation that they should not be responsible for the negligence of themselves or their servants. Gra Fogel, 11 S. C. R. 612. Grand Trunk R. W. Co. v.

(R. S. C. c. 109.)

Application to Contract for Carriage beyond Defendants' Line. | -Where railway company undertakes to carry goods to a point beyond the terminus of its own line, its contract is for carriage of the goods over the whole transit, and the other companies over whose line they must pass are merely agents of the contracting company for such carriage, and in no privity of contract with the shipper. Bristol and Exeter R. W. Co. v. Conins, 7 H. L. Cas. 194, followed. Such a contract, being one which a railway company might refuse to enter into, s. 104 of the Railway Act. R. S. C. c. 109, does not prevent it from restricting its liability for negligence as carriers or otherwise in respect to the goods to be carried after they had left its own line. The decision in Grand Trunk R. W. Co. v. Vogel, 11 S. C. R. 612, does not govern such a contract. Grand Trunk R. W. Co. v. Me-Millan, 16 S. C. R. 543, See S. C., 12 O. R. 103, 15 A. R. 14.

(51 Viet. e. 29 (D.))

Application to Contract Limiting Liability to Specific Sum. |—Rv s. 246 (3) of the Railway Act, 1888, 51 Vict. c. 29 (D.), "every person aggrieved by any neglect or refusal in the premises shall have an action therefor against the company, from which action the company shall not be relieved by any notice, condition, or declaration, if the damage arises from any negligence or omission of the company or of its servants: "—Held, that this provision does not disable a railway company from entering into a special contract for the carriage of goods and limiting its liability as to the amount of damages to be recovered for loss or injury to such goods arising from negligence. Grand Trunk R. W. Co. v. Vogel, 11 S. C. R. Gl2, and Bate v. Canadian Pacific R. W. Co. 15 A. R. 388, distinguished. The Grand Trunk Railway Company received from R. a horse to be earried over its line, and the agent of the company and R. signed a contract for such carriage, which contained twiston: "The such and any horse," &c. :—Held, in the contained the such and any horse, "&c. :—Held, 14 R. 75, that the words," shall no case be responsible," were sufficiently general to cover all cases of loss however caused, and the horse larging been killed by negligence of servants of the company, R. could not recover more than $190, though the value of the horse largely exceeded that amount, Robertson v. Grand Trunk R. W. Co., 24 S. C. R. 611.

Application to Contract not to Hold Company Liable — Reduced Rate. |—The plaintiffs' agent shipped a quantity of plate glass by the defendants' railway, signing an agreement that, in consideration of the defendants receiving the goods at a reduced rate of twenty-three cents per 100 pounds, they should not be responsible for any damage arising in the course of the transit, including negligence. The defendants had two rates. including negligence. namely, the twenty-three cents, a third-class rate, and a double first-class rate of sixty cents, which they contended were in accordance with the Canadian Joint Freight Classification, adopted by them and approved by the governor in council under s. 226 of 51 Viet. c. 29 (D.), the Railway Act, the said classifica-tion stating that the third-class rate applied where the goods were "shipped at owner's risk—shipper signing special plate glass re-lease form." The plaintiffs' agent was aware of the two rates, and signed the agreement assenting to the lower rate, under the belief that the defendants could not, under s. 246, take advantage of the provision absolving them from liability where the damage was occa-sioned by negligence. No by-laws approving stoned by negligence. No by-laws approving of the company's tariff under which these rates were charged had been approved of by the governor in council, although a by-law fixing a first-class rate of sixty-six cents and a third-class rate of fifty cents had inter alia been so approved:—Held, that the railway company were liable for damages to the goods resulting from negligence, notwithstanding the agree-ment not to hold the company liable in con-sideration of the reduced rate, Grand Trunk sideration of the reduced rate. Grand Trunk R. W. Co. v. Vogel, 11 S. C. R. 612, followed, Cobban v. Canadian Pacific R. W. Co., 26 O. R. 732, 23 A. R. 115.

— Destruction on Part of Line in Forcing Country.]—The Railway Act of Canada is not applicable to a railway situate in a foreign country, though operated by a company incorporated by or under the authority of the parliament of Canada. Therefore, where goods shipped from Scotland to be delivered at Portland, Maine, U.S., to the Grand Trunk Railway Company, and by that company to be forwarded thence to the plaintiffs at Ioronto, were destroyed by fire on the line of that company in New Hampshire, U.S., by neeligence from which they were protected from liability by the terms of the contract for carriage:—Held, that the provisions of s. 246 of 51 Vict. e. 29 (D.). disabling the railway company from relieving itself from liability for its own negligence or that of its servants.

were not applicable to the defendants' contract; and an action to recover damages for the loss of the goods failed. Macdonald v. Grand Trank R. W. Co., 31 O. R. 663.

5. Other Cases.

Bill of Lading—Agent.]—Semble, that under the Interpretation Act, 31 Vict. c. 1, s. 7, s.s. 9 (O.), the defendants, though a corporation, would be "persons signing" the bill of lading, if signed by their authorized agent, Royal Canadian Bank v. Grand Trunk R. W. Co., 23 C. P. 225.

Contract—Authority of Agent—Delivery to Wrong Person. I—E., in British Columbia, being about to purchase goods from G., in Ontario, signed, on request of the freight agent of the Northern Pacific Railway Company in British Columbia, a letter to G. asking him to ship goods via Grand Trunk Railway and Chicago and North-Western, care of Northern Pacific Railway and St. Paul. This letter was forwarded to the freight agent of the Northern Pacific Railway Company at Toronto, who sent it to G., and wrote to him; "I enclose you card of advice, and if you will kindly lift in the contract of the contract of the Northern Pacific Railway Company at Toronto, who sent it to G., and wrote to him; "I enclose you card of advise, and if you will kindly lift in the contract of the contract of the pacific Railway Company and Large in this letter, deliverable to his own order in British Columbia; —Held, affirming the decisions in 21 A. R. 322 and 22 O. R. 645, that on arrival of the goods at St. Paul, the Northern Pacific Railway Company were bound to accept delivery of them for carriage to British Columbia, and to expedite such carriage; that they were in the care of said company from St. Paul to British Columbia; that fergight agent at Toronto had authority so to bind the company were liable to G. for the value of the goods which were delivered to E. at British Columbia, without an order from G., and not paid for. Northern Pacific R. W. Co. v. Grant, 24 S. C. R. 546.

— Evidence — Connecting Line.] — Where the only evidence of the contract to carry was that the foreman of the freight department at one of the defendants' stations agreed to have certain trees forwarded to a station not on the defendants' line, but on one connecting therewith:—Held, that this was evidence to be submitted to a jury of a contract to that effect binding the defendants, and that a nonsuit was wrong. The measure of damages against carriers for non-elivery of trees considered. McGill v. Grand Trunk R. W. Co., 19 A. R. 245.

Delay in Delivery—Bill of Lading—Indorsement of—Status of Indorsec.]—The declaration alleged that the plaintiff by his agents delivered to the defendants 8,000 bushels of corn, to be carried from Chicago to Stratford, &c., and to be delivered to the Bank of Montreal or their assigns; that the bank assigned the corn to the plaintiff; yet that defendants neglected for an unreasonable time to carry and deliver it, whereby the plaintiff lost a market, and was afterwards obliged to sell for a less price than he would otherwise have done. It appeared that the corn was shipped by M. & Co., "as agents and for warders," on account of whom it might con-"as agents and forcern, to be delivered to the Bank of Montreal or their assigns, and the bill of lading was indorsed by the agent of the bank to the plaintiff, with whom defendants treated as the owner, and delivered it to him after some delay caused by a charge made and afterwards remitted by them. It was objected that the consignor or consignee only could sue upon this contract, not the plaintiff; that the bank could not assign to him; and if they could, the There was no right of action would not pass. There was no evidence to shew what interest the bank had in the corn :—Held, there being no plea denying plaintiff's property in the corn, that he was admitted to have been the owner when it was shipped; that the bill of lading did not transfer the property to the bank, in whom no other right was shewn; that their indorsement was therefore unnecessary; and that he Semble, was entitled to maintain the action. however, that if he had first acquired his title by such indorsement, he might have sued defendants for any negligence occurring after they had recognized him as owner. A bill of lading is not conclusive proof of the change of property, like a bill of sale; it is a question of evidence whether such an operation should be attributed to it. Kyle v. Buffalo and Lake Huron R. W. Co., 16 C. P. 76.

Delivery to Third Person—Volice—Stoppage — Customs.]—Goods which came from Morreal in bond was deposited in the formal content of the Grand Trunk station at Toronto. The consigness because insolvent, and the consignors gave notice of stoppage in transitu to the railway company, after which the agent of the company gave an order for delivery, on payment of charges, to another person, who made the entry and received them from the customs:—Held, that such notice was sufficient, though in such cases it is advisable to give notice also to the customs officer; and that an action would lie against the company for such delivery. Ascher v. Grand Trunk R. W. Co., 36 U. C. R. 600.

Injury to Goods by Fire-Conversion--Damages.]-The first count of the declaration stated that defendants agreed to carry 3,244 lbs. of Canadian wool from T. to by rail, and thence to B, by steamboat or and deliver there to plaintiff, certain perils and casualties excepted; breach, non-Second count, the same, but alleging they were to carry and deliver within a reasonable time: breach, they did not so carry. Third count, that the defendants agreed properly to stow and safely carry and deliver the wool, certain casualties, &c., excepted; breach, goods damaged by the defennegligence. Fourth count, trover. The defendants pleaded (among other pleas) to the first, second, and fourth counts, that the goods were delivered to and received by them upon the conditions that they should not be liable for damages arising from delays from storms, accidents, unavoidable causes, or from damage from the weather, fire, &c.; and that the goods in course of carriage were damaged and destroyed by an accidental fire, which prevented the delivery. The evidence was, that on 6th September, 1864, plaintiff delivered to defendants thirteen sacks of wool, weighing 3,244 lbs., addressed to the consignees in B., to be sent subject to defendants' tariff and to the conditions contained in the plaintiff's written request to defendants to receive same, defendants giving a receipt with similar conditions thereon. This wool was put into a car with wool from Michigan, consigned to one R, together with certain dutiable goods, and all arrived at Island Pond on 18th September following, where they were detained by the customs authorities. The car subsequently took fire, and the sacks containing the wool were burnt. Some of the wool was also burnt and some singed. In endeavouring to save it. the wool became mixed and was carried in this state to P., where new sacks were obtained and the wool conveyed in them to B., and the thirteen sacks delivered to the consignees on the 22nd October, but containing only 2,498 lbs, instead of 3,244, which the bill of lading shewed. On the delivery of four additional sacks, the weight being still short by twenty-nine pounds, an examination of the wool was made, when it was found to consist of 873 lbs. of Canada fleece, 1,160 lbs. scorched Canada, and 1,168 lbs. American fleece damaged by fire. This was sold on plaintiff's account, but did not realize as much, it was proved, as it would have brought had it arrived about a month earlier. It further appeared that 962 lbs. Canada fleece had been delivered to R. The Judge charged the jury that defendants were not liable for the damage by fire, or for the delay at Island Pond: that the plaintiff was entitled to such damages as arose from defendants' neglect in delivering mixed instead of Canadian fleece, and for the short weight. The jury gave plaintiff $300 damages:—Held, that the first and second counts, not embodying the exceptions contained in the contract, were not proved; and that the third count was not sustained by the evidence. Held, also, that plaintiff could not recover for the short weight, the evidence shewing a loss by fire of a considerable por-tion of the wool, and of the sacks, which would cause a diminution in the weight. Held, also, that plaintiff was not estopped by the also, that plaintin was not estopped by the taking of the American wool from shewing a conversion by defendants of the Canadian wool; but that had defendants pleaded that he took the latter in lieu of the former, or of so much thereof as was deficient, there was evidence to go to the jury to warrant a verdict for defendants to a certain extent, if not for all that really ought to have been delivered. Held, also—granting a new trial, costs to abide the event—that the proper direction to abide the event—that the proper direction to the jury would be, that defendants were not liable for the loss by fire; that they were liable for the wool belonging to plaintiff, which they carried to B., and did not delive; but that if plaintiff, with the knowledge of all the circumstances the evidence disclosed, took the one kind for the other and sold it, when he might have had his own, and the damaged Canadian wool was delivered to the consignee of the American wool with plainting sconsent, in consideration of his getting the American in lieu of it, then plaintiff could not claim substantial damages either for breach of contract or for the wrongful conversion. Liability of Crown as Common Carrier. - See Crown.

Loss of Goods — Connecting Line— Privity.]—Goods were sent by another railway company and were carried by it to its crossing point with defendants' line, where the goods were delivered over to defendants to be carried to the plaintif :—Held, that an action for the loss of the goods was not maintainable by the plaintiff against defendants, as there was no privity of contract between them. Richardson v. Canadian Pacific R. W. Co., 19 O. R. 309.

Misdelivery — Production of Shipping Bills.]—The plaintiffs, knowing that the defendants sonatimes delivered goods without production of the shipping bills where not consigned "to order," consigned ertain goods to the "I. C. Company," not yet incorporated, and the defendants delivered them to an individual carrying on business in that name and at the ostensible office of the company, without production of the bill:—Held, that the defendants were not liable for misdelivery. There is no law in this Province requiring carriers to take up shipping bills before the delivery of goods. Codey v. Canadian Pueche R. W. Co., 32 O. R. 288.

Negligence — Proof of.)—Case for negligence for putting upon one of defendants carriages a mare, which it was alleged had been delivered to and received by them from the plaintiff, to be safely loaded and unloaded and conveyed to A. Flea, denying the delivery to and receipt by defendants, and issue thereon. A witness for the plaintiff swore that he took the mare to the station, where a man assisted him to put her into a car, in doing which the accident happened, and the mare was then taken on the train to A:—Held, that the proof was insufficient to sustain the issue. Griffin v. Great Western R. W. Co., 15 U. C. R. 507.

Rates—Reasonableness.]—Held, affirming the judgment in 9 O. R. 251, that in the absence of collusion the court would not inquire into the reasonableness of the rates charged by a railway company to an express company, Vickers Express Co. v, Canadian Pacife R. W. Co., 3 A. R. 210.

Sale of Perishable Goods—Notice—beaud.]—The plaintiff on the 2nd March, 1882 delivered to the G. W. R. Co, at L., Ont., 810 bushels of oats, to be carried by said milway and connecting railways to B., Main, and there delivered to the plaintiff. The oats were shipped in car No. 6293, and while in transit were transferred to car No. 3566 of the St. P., M. & M. R. W. Co. Before the arrival of the oats, the plaintiff arranged with the defendants' agent at Winnipeg to have car 6293 stopped at Winnipeg but were carried on to Brandon. The plaintiff, before leaving Brandon and making the Winnipeg arrangement, had instructed his agent at Brandon to receive the oats. The oats writed at Brandon on the 5th May. The plaintiff, agent at Brandon for the same, but was informed that they had not arrived. The defendants alleged fast notice of arrival was sent by post card to the plaintiff's agent at Brandon freacher.

but there was no evidence to shew that this reached the plaintiff, and the goods being of a damageable or perishable nature were, on 22nd July, sold by defendants. In an action for non-delivery and conversion:—Held, that the plaintiff was entitled to recover: that the defendants were not protected by 42 Vict. c. 9, 11 (I) the goods must emain in the defendants possession for at least a year, unless the tolls have been demanded from the persons liable, and payment refused or neglected for six weeks after demand; and though s.-s. 3 says nothing of a demand, the whole section must be read together, which shews a demand was required; that the post card was not a sufficient demand, unless it was shewn to have reached the person addressed to; that there was no breach in not stopping at Winniper, as the contract to stop only applied to car 6203. Worden v. Canadian Pacific R. W. Co., 13 O. R. 652.

Stoppage by Customs Officer—Pleading.]—Defendants undertook to carry from Buffalo and deliver to plaintiffs in Goderich certain goods, which were stopped and bonded by the custom house officer in Stratford, of which the plaintiffs received no notice:—Held, that defendants were bound to carry out their contract, or shew some stoppage by a duly authorized officer; and their plea being defective in this respect, the postea was awarded to the plaintiffs. Robson v. Buffalo and Lake Huron R. W. Co., 9 C. P. 183.

Checked Luggage—Giving up Check—Connecting Lines—Continuous Journey.]—
The plaintiff purchased a ticket from defendants at Detroit for a first-class passage from Detroit to Washington, paying the fare for the whole distance. It had five coupons attached, perforated so that they coupons attached, perforated so that they could be detached and given up, each one being for the distance to be traversed over a different rail-way or omnibus route on the way. The plaintiff's trunk was checked to Buffalo, and, when near the place, a person took his check for it, station can be a superior of the plaintiff's trunk was the plaintiff was to proceed, and gave him an omnibus check across the city of Buffalo in return. The conductor of defendants' train, being asked by the plaintiff, told him it was right to give his check to this person. The omnibus line was paid by the Erie Railway Company. The trunk having been lost owing to the neglect of the omnibus lapent:—Held, that defendants were liable, for the contract was with them, to carry the plaintiff and his luggage the entire distance. It was objected that the plaintiff had forfeited his right to be carried by having stopped over on the journey, instead of making a continuous one; but, held, that defendants, not having insisted on the forfeiture, if they had a right to do so, and having chosen to carry him and his luggage, were bound to do so with reasonable care. Smith v. Grand Trunk R. W. Co., 35 U. C. R. 547.

Termination of Responsibility for.]

"The plaintiff was a passenger from Paris to Seaforth, with two trunks, checked. At Seaforth the trunks were put on the platform, and he assisted defendants' servant to carry them into the baggage room, and went in an omnibus to a hotel about 3 p.m. About 8 p.m. he sent for the trunks, but one of them had disappeared, and the evidence went to shew that it had been stolen:—Held, that defendants were not responsible: that their duty as common carriers ended when the trunk had been placed on the platform, and the plaintif had had a reasonable time to remove it, as he clearly had here. Penton v. Grand Trunk R. W. Co., 28 U. C. R. 367.

It is the duty of a railway company to have luggage ready for delivery on the platform at the usual place of delivery, until the owner in the exercise of due diligence can call and receive it; and it is the owner's duty to call for and receive it within a reasonable time. Therefore, where a person on arriving at his destination deliberately refrained from applying for his luggage, being told by his cabman that he could not conveniently take it, and on sending for it on the following day, one of three trunks could not be found -Held, in an action to recover the value of the trunk and the wearing apparel it was said to contain, that the liability of the railway company as common carriers had ceased; and a nonsuit was ordered to be entered. The only claim, if any, which the plaintiff, under the circumstances, had against the company, was as warehousemen or bailees. Vincherg v. Grand Trunk R. W. Co., 13 A. R. 93.

Contents—Fraudulent Claim—Evidence.]—Plaintiff sued for the loss of his trunk, which he alleged contained several valuable papers, and among them the lease of a farm from his father to himself. Defendants resisted his claim as fraudulent, denying that they had ever received the trunk, and gave strong evidence to support their defence. They then offered to prove (as tending further to shew the dishonesty of the claim) that this farm had been the subject of a suit in chancery, in which it was decreed that the plaintiff's father held the land only as agent for another, and should convey to bim; and that the plaintiff was aware of the fact, having been examined as a witness in the case:—Held, that such evidence was rightly received; and that it was sufficient to support the decree, without the other proceedings in the suit. Thomas v. Great Western R. W. Co., 14 U. C. R. 389.

— Merchandize.]—A railway company are not liable for merchandize carried by a passenger as luggage, for which no extra charge is paid. Shaw v. Grand Trunk R. W. Co., 7 C. P. 493.

— Miscellaneous Articles.]—The plaintiff a carpenter, had with him, as a passenger by defendants railway, a box containing a concertina, a rifle, a revolver, two gold chains, a locket, two gold rings, a silver pencil case, a sewing machine, and a quantity of tools of his trade, such as chisels, planes, &c. The box having been lost at the Toronto station while in defendants' care;— Held, that the articles in italies were ordinary personal luggage, for which defendants were responsible, but that the others were not. Held, also, that the fact of the other articles being in the box could not prevent the plaintiff from recovering for such as were personal luggage. Bruty v. Grand Trunk R. W. Co., 32 U. C. R. 66.

tiff, an emigrant for Toronto, brought with him from England a box, as personal luggage, which contained only rare plants and vosse intended for sale. He delivered it to defendants' buggage master at Quebee, saying that he would pay for it, but not stating its contents, on which the latter asked for his ticket, and or seeing that it was a third-class government emigrant ticket, he said there was nothing to pay, and that it might go with the plaintif on the train. The plaintif said the box was marked somewhere, "Plants—perishable," but he could not say that defendants' officers saw the mark, and it was sworn that if they had been notlined that the contents were freight or merchandize the box would not have been taken:—Held, that defendants were not liable for its loss. Lee v. Grand Trunk R. W. Co., 36 U. C. R. 350.

Special Contract - Evidence - Limitation of Amount-Time. |- In an action by the tion of Amount—Time: 1—In an action by the plaintiff, a passenger by defendants' railway, for the loss of her luggage, in which the defence was that the defendants' liability was limited by a condition on the ticket to $100, certain letters were admitted in evidence, one written by the defendants' baggage agent to the passenger agent asking whether plaintiff's attention had been called to the condition on the ticket, and why it had not been signed by her, and the other the reply thereto, stat-ing that the company's rules did not require unlimited first-class tickets to be signed, and that this ticket had been sold at full tariff rate :- Held, that the letters were properly admitted; but they were of no consequence, as the ticket on its face shewed that it was not purchased subject to the condition. Kirkstall Brewing Co. v. Furness R. W. Co., L. R. 9 Q. B. 468, followed. Held, also, that the six months' limitation clause, R. S. C. c. 109, s. 57, does not apply to an action of this character arising out of contract, but to actions for damages occasioned by the company in the execution of the powers given or asin the execution of the powers given or assumed by them to be given for enabling them to maintain their railway. The cases on this subject reviewed. Anderson v. Canadian Pacific R. W. Co., 17 O. R. 747.

An appeal was taken to the court of appeal on two grounds: (1) that the accident was exacted by the act of God or via major.

An appeal was taken to the court of appeal on two grounds: (1) that the accident was caused by the act of God or vis major: (2) that the defendants were protected by the limitation clause, R. S. C. c. 109, s. 27, the accident having taken place more than six months before action. As to the first point the court agreed with the court below, and thought that the finding of the jury was fully justified by the evidence. Upon the second point the appellants also failed, owing to a division of opinion in the court. S. C., 17 A. R. 480.

The ticket was not transferable, and had printed on it a smaler of conditions, one of which limited the liability of the company for baggage to wearing apparel not exceeding $100 in value, and another required the signature of the passenger for the purpose of identification and to prevent a transfer. The agent obtained the plaintiff's signature to the ticket, explaining that it was for the purpose of identification, but did not read nor explain to her any of the conditions, and, having sore eyes at the time, she was unable to read them herself. On the trip to Winnipeg an accident happened to the train, and the plaintiff's luggage, valued at over $1.000, caught fire and was destroyed. In an action for damages for such loss the jury found for the plaintiff for the amount of the alleged value of the luggage:—Held, reversing the judgments in 15 A. K. 388 and 14 O. R. 225, that there was sufficient evidence that the loss of the luggage was caused by the defendants' negligence, and the special conditions printed on the ticket not having been brought to the notice of the plaintiff, she was not bound by them, and could recover her loss from the company. Bate v. Canadian Pacific R. W. Co., 18 S. C. R. 637.

Unchecked Luggage. — Plaintiff, travelling on a first-class passenger ticket on defendants' railway from Chatham to Toronto, took a travelling bag with him into the car, not having ofered it to be checked, nor having been asked to do so, or to give it in charge to any of defendants' servants. At the London station, where the train stopped for refreshments, he left it on his seat in the car to retain the place, and on his return from the refreshment room it was gone:—Held, that defendants were liable for the loss. Remarks on effect of custom of checking luggage. Gamble v. Great Western R. W. Co., 24 U. C. R. 407.

The plaintiff, an intending passenger by defendants' railway, a quarter of an hour before the train started entered a passenger car standing at the station at the original starting point, left his valise on a vacant seat, and went out; and on his return shortly afterwards, his valise was gone. It was not shewn that at the time he left the valise any one was in charge of the train, or that there was not other passenger in the car:—Semble, that there was no sufficient delivery of the valise to defendants to render them liable. Neer v. Grand Trunk R. W. Co., 24 C. P.

Package Containing Money—Absence of Negligence. —The plaintiff was a bassenger on one of defendants' cars, occupying a sleeping berth. Before going to sleep he had undressed himself and had put his pocket-book, containing his money, in his trousers nocket, rolling up his trousers and putting his braces around them, and then placed them under his pillow next the wall. When he was called before arriving at his place of destination, he discovered that his pocket-book and money were gone. No regligence in the defendants was shewn:—Held, that no liability attached to the defendants. Stearn v, Pullman Car Co., 8 O. R. 171

Continuous Journey—"Stap over." |—
Plaintiff purchased from defendants a ticket from Buffalo to Detroit, marked "good only for twenty days from date." He took defendants' afternoon accommodation train at the Suspension bridge, which ran only as far as London, but he left it and defendants refused to let him go on thence by the night exmitermediate station, and defendants refused to let him go on thence by the night express:—Held, that they were instified in so doing; that their curract bound them to convey the plaintiff in one continuous journey from the Suspension bridge to Detroit, giving him the option of taking any passenger train from the point of commencement, and if that train did not go the whole distance, to be conveyed the residue in some other train, the whole journey to be completed within twenty days; but that it did not give a right to stop at any or every intermediate station.
Quare, whether if he had gone on to London by the accommodation train, he would have been bound to take the next through train thence. Craig vs. Great Western R. W. Co.,
24 U. C. R. 504.

Declaration, that defendants contracted to carry the plaintiff as a passenger from G. to T., but wrongfully expelled him from the cars. Defendants pleed him from the first of the cars. Defendants pleed him from the first of the cars. Defendants pleed to the first of the cars. Defendants pleed to plaintiff state G. a ticket thence to T. "good for this day only;" that he thereupen took the train at G. a ticket thence to T. by a continuous journey, but left it without defendants' consent at C., and on the 10th December entered another of their trains going to T. by which they refused to carry him—which was the grievance complained of. Replication, that before the Sth December, defendants had publicly advertised, by their time table, that a passenger train would leave G. at 3.05 p.m. and arrive in T. at midnight: that he purchased his ticket before the arrival of the train at G. on that day, on its way to T., on the faith of such representation, but the train did not leave G. until 6 p.m., and defendants well knew that it would not, and it did not, arrive at T. until the morning of the 9th; that on its arrival at C. the plaintiff, finding the train could not waived. Left it, and defendants waived the plaintiff on the 10th claimed the text of the plaintiff on the 10th claimed the plaintiff from G. to T. in one continuous journey, to commence on the date of issuing it, 2. That the replication was bad, for, even if the time table could be construed as incorporating a condition as to time into the contract, yet, as the contract was in part executed for the plaintiff's benefit by his conveyance to C., the breach could only entitle to the contract, yet, as the contract was in part executed for the plaintiff's benefit by his conveyance to C., the breach could only entitle him to compensation in damages. 3. That the time table was not part of the contract, but a representation only; and in that view the plaintiff should have averred that he bought his ticket on the faith of such representation before the time specified for the train to leave G., not merely before the arrival of the train there, for, if after the time specified, he knew as well as defendants that the time table had been departed from. Quere, whether the plaintiff by leaving the train at C., and thus making it impossible for defendants to perform the substantial part of their contract, by conveying him in one continuous journey to T., had not forfeited all right under it. Briggs v. Grand Trunk R. W. Co., 24 U. C. R. 510.

The suppliant, who was a manufacturers' agent and traveller, purchased an excursion ticket for passage over the Intercolonial Railticket for passage over the Intercoionial Kail-way between certain points and return with-in a specified time. On the going half, printed in capitals, were the words, "good on date of issue only," and immediately thereunder, in full-faced type, "no stop over allowed." He knew there was printing on the ticket, but put it into his pocket without reading it. He began the journey on the same day he purchased the ticket, but stopped off for the night at a station about half-way from his destina-tion on the going journey. The next morn-ing he attempted to continue his journey to such destination by a regular passenger train. Being asked for his ticket he presented the one on which he had travelled the evening before, and was told by the conductor that it was good for a continuous passage only. On his refusal to pay the prescribed fare for the rest of the going journey, the conductor put him off the train at a proper place, using no unnecessary force:—Held, that issuing to the suppliant a ticket with the conditions upon which it was issued plainly and distinctly printed upon the face of it, was in itself rea-sonably sufficient notice of such conditions; and if, under the circumstances, he saw fit to put the ticket into his pocket without reading it, he had nothing to complain of except his own carelessness or indifference. Held, affirming the foregoing, that by the sale of a rail-way ticket the contract of the railway company is to convey the purchaser in one continuous journey to his destination; him no right to stop at any intermediate stahim no right to stop at any intermediate sta-tion. Craig v. Great Western R. W. Co., 24 U. C. R. 509, Briggs v. Grand Trunk R. W. Co., 24 U. C. R. 51, and Cunningham v. Grand Trunk R. W. Co., 9 L. C. Jur. 57, 11 L. C. Transfer by Onnibus—Damages—Costs.,—The plaintiff was a passager by the defendants' railway under a contract by which the defendants were to carry him by continuous journey from Harrisburg to Stratford, via Galt and Berlin. There was a break in the line of the defendants at Galt, the distance between the stations being three-fourths of a mile; an omnibus was provided, as advertised by the defendants, but the plaintiff was asked to pay a fare of ten cents for transfer in it, and refusing to do so, was not permitted to be transported free. He failed to make his connection, and brought this action for damages:—Held, that he was entitled to be conveyed from station to station free of expense; but it would have been reasonable for him to have paid the ten cents-and made his connexion, and the damages should be restricted to that sum. Costs on the scale of the county court, in which the action was bought, were allowed, as it was to test a right. Clarry v. Grand Trunk R. W. Co., 29 O. R. 18.

(b) Removal from Trains,

(See also (a)).

Breach of Condition "Viā Direct Line"—Damages. I.—A condition in a railway ticket as to travelling "viā direct line" was rejected as meaningless, each of three possible routes being circuftous, though one was shorter in point of mileage than the others. The amount of damages allowed by the jury to the plaintiff, because of his removal from the train while taking one of the longer routes, was reduced by the court of appeal as unwarrantably large. Semble, that in this country it is not the law that a passenger rightfully travelling upon his ticket is bound to pay fare wrongfully demanded, or to leave the train on the conductor's o'der, at the peril of not being able to recover damages for an assault committed in expelling him by force. The American cases on the subject considered and not followed. Judgment in 20 O. R. 603 varied, Dancey v. Grand Trunk R. W. Co., 19 A. R. 664.

Cause of Action — Where Arising,] — Where a person having a return ticket for a passage from one place to another on a railway line is put off the train at an intermediate point, the cause of action arises at this latter place, and not where the ticket is issued. Ralph v. Great Western R. W. Co., 14 C. L. J. 172.

Damages.] — Verdict for £50 against a rain, though the inconvenience occasioned to him was trilling, and the conductor acted bona file, under an impression that the plaintiff had not paid his fare, and without harshness or violence. New trial granted for excessive damages. Hunteman v. Great Western R. W. Co., 20 U. C. R. 24.

Where the conductor forcibly and without excuse removes from a train a passenger who has paid his fare, the company are liable for the assault. But where, in the course of such removal, and while leaving the car, plaintiff slipped and was injured:—Held, that defondants were not liable for the injuries sustained by him, as his removal was not the proximate but remote cause of the accident. Williamson v. Grand Trunk R. W. Co., 17 C. P. 615.

travelling between St. M. and L., mislaid, and being called upon to produce could not find, his ticket. The conductor after waiting some time stopped the train and turned him some time stopped the train and turned him off, he offering to pay, but the conductor re-fusing to take his fare. Upon an action hrought against the railway company and $300 damages awarded:—Held that defend-ants were responsible for this act of the officer. Although the damages were considerofficer. Although the damages were considered excessive, it being the second verdict for the plaintiff, the court would not interfere. Curtis v. Grand Trunk R. W. Co., 12 C. P.

- Refusal to Pay Fare.] - Case, for compelling plaintiff to leave defendants' train on her journey from St. Catharines to Paris. Plea, that defendants had established certain fares on their road, which were all made payable to the conductor; that the conductor of the train, in discharge of his duty, demanded of plaintiff the usual fare, which she refused to pay, and therefore he obliged her to leave to pay, and therefore he configurate to leave the train at a way station. Replication, that hefore the plaintiff entered the cars she paid to defendants her fare at the St. C. station, and received a ticket, which ticket she casually lost before the conductor called upon casually lost before the conductor called upon her for payment, of all which the conductor had notice: without this, that she refused to pay the said fare in the plea mentioned, or did not pay the same as alleged—concluding to the country:—Held, on denurrer, plea good; replication bad. Duke v. Great Western R. W. Co., 14 U. C. R. 309.

The facts at the trial appeared to be that the plaintiff lost the ticket before reaching Grimsby, an intermediate station between St. Catharines and Paris, and when the conductor demanded her fare informed him of these facts, of which he had no other knowthese facts, or which he had no other know-ledge. He insisted nevertheless upon her pay-ing again to him, and on her refusal obliged her to leave the cars at G. In so doing he was obeying the regulations of the company, which were authorized by their charter:— Held, that he was justified, and the company not liable. S. C., ib. 377.

By s. 248 of the General Railway Act, 51 Vict. c. 29 (D.), any passenger on a railway train who refuses to pay his fare may be put train who retuses to pay his fare may be put off the train.—Held, reversing the decisions in 20 A. R. 476 and 22 O. R. 667, that the contract between the person buying a rail-way ticket and the company on whose line it is intended to be used, implies that such ticket shall be produced and delivered up to the conductor of the train on which ways were reconductor of the train on which such person travels, and if he is put off a train for refus-ing or being unable so to produce and deliver it up, the company is not liable to an action for such ejectment. Grand Trunk R. W. Co. v. Beaver, 22 S. C. R. 498.

Presentation of Old Ticket-Jury.]-In an action for putting plaintiff off a train, defendants pleaded that they had not received the plaintiff to be carried for reward, as alleged. It appeared that the ticket offered by him to the conductor must have been sold about sixteen months before, and that the con-ductor refused to take it on that account. It was proved also that on a previous occasion the same plaintiff had presented an old ticket, and on its being rejected had paid his fare:— Held, that the circumstances being calculated to excite suspicion, the mere production of the ticket was not sufficient to entitle the plaintiff to succeed, but that it should have been left of the legally authorized fare demanded by defendants for plaintiff's passage from Oshawa to Toronto and back again; that plaintiff entered the train at T. to be transported back to O., of which defendants had notice, yet defendants, contrary to the statute, would not transport plaintiff to O., but ejected him from their cars. 2nd count, that the plaintiff, being a passenger on defendants' cars from T. to O., was by defendants' servants forcibly and wrongfully put out of same before it reached O., though no one entitled had demanded any fare or ticket from plaintiff, and though no servant of defendants on add trains. though no servant of defendants on said train wearing on his hat or cap any badge to indicate his office presented himself, to whom plaintiff could pay such fare or produce such ricket. 3rd. That plaintiff was by force and violence put out of the cars by the conductor and servants of defendants, neither of whom then were on his hat or cap any badge in-dicating his office. The second plea to the first dicating his office. The second plea to the first count was, in substance, that the plaintiff bought from defendants a return ticket marked "good for day of date and following day only," paying therefor a reduced rate; and six days after the date of said ticket, on which he had gone from O. to T., plaintiff prewhich he had gone from O. to T., plaintiff pre-sented it to the conductor going from T. to O., and upon said conductor refusing to accept the same, plaintiff refused to pay the lawful fare or any fare to defendants; whereupon said conductor put plaintiff out of the cars, &c. Second plea to 2nd count, that the plaintiff well knew the conductor in charge of the train, who carried and wore a badge train, who carried and wore a badge in-dicating his office, and that the plaintiff re-fused to pay him, whereupon said conductor stopped, &c., and put plaintiff off, &c.:—Held, 2nd and 3rd counts good; that the second count sufficiently charged an act against defendants, which their servants in course of their employment might lawfully perform; that the allegation that plaintiff was a pasthat the allegation that plaintiff was a passenger shewed primā facie that he was lawfully there; that plaintiff was not obliged to shew that he had a ticket or was ready and willing, or offered to pay his fare, or that no fare was demanded, the action not being for a refusal to carry him, but for turning the control of the waste to carry him, but for turning to the control of the waste to carry him, but for turning to the control of the waste to carry him, but for turning the control of the waste to carry him, but for turning the control of the waste to carry him, but for turning the control of the carry him, but for turning the carry him, but for turning the carry him to be carry him, but for turning the carry him to be carry him, but for turning the carry him to be car being for a refusal to carry him, but for turning him off the train, to justify which defendants should shew a demand of the fare; and that plaintiff, complaining of a mere trespass, was not obliged to allege that a person wearing a badge and authorized by defendants, ing a bedge and authorized by defendants, and known to plaintiff as being authorized, was present to receive the fare. Held, also, 2nd plea to 1st count good: that defendants were not obliged to deny, and could not properly deny, that the plaintiff legally paid his fare, having admitted his purchase of a return ticket to and from T.: that defendants had shewn a good contract not inconsistent with their statutory duty, and not necessary to have been embodied in a by-law in order to make it legal; that it was unnecessary to to make it legal; that it was unnecessary to deay that defendants had charged more than 2d. per mile, as it did not appear that they had done so; that defendants could lawfully impose a condition of returning within a specified time, because it was a special and reasonable bargain, and optional with the plaintiff to enter into or not; and that, therefore, the ticket issued by defendants to plaintiff, constituted a valid contract between them, and was binding upon plaintiff. Held, also, second plea to 2nd count had, for not alleging that the conductor wore the badge "upon his hat or cap," or on some conspicuous part of his person or dress, or so as to be seen by passengers; and that a similar plea to 3rd count was not objectionable on this ground, for that count not shewing any justifiable cause for plaintiff being in the train, defendants could no doubt put him out, and their officer was not, therefore, obliged to assume the badge for that purpose. But held, that neither plea shewed a sufficient justification for the act complained of, without the allegation that plaintiff was requested to leave the cars before he was forcibly ejected therefrom. Farewell v. Grand Trunk R. W. Co., 15 C. P. 427.

Refusal to Pay Fare—Tender,]— The plaintiff got upon the train without a ticket, and when asked for his fare declined paying then, as he said he had not made up his mind how far he should go. The conductor said he must decide, and afterwards, on his declining again on the same ground, stopped the train and put him out, at a place about a mile and a quarter from the last station, and within half a mile of a house. The plaintiff at last tendered a $20 gold piece, telling the conductor to take his fare ($1.35) out of it:—Held, that the plaintiff had refused to pay his fare within the meaning of 14 & 15 Vict. c. 51, s. 21, s.-s. 6, and that the conductor was justified in what he did. Fulton v. Grand Trank R. W. Co., 17 U. C. R. 428.

(c) Special Arrangements for Carriage of Persons.

Express Messenger.]—Deceased was an express messenger, and as such was being carried on the defendants' train at the time of his death, without a ticket or payment of fare, under a contract between the defendants and the express company:—Held, that the deceased being lawfully on the train, the defendants were liable for negligence in causing his death. Held, also, that the deceased was the servant of the express company, and was not in any sense engaged in any common employment with the servants of the railway company. Jennings v. Grand Trank R. W. Co., 15 A. R. 477. Affirmed in the Judicial Committee, 13 App. Cas. 800.

Passes—dgreement between Companies—Demand,—The plantiffs by deed, dated the lst October, 1853, leased to defendants the railway floor of their suspension bridge, with the right to give other companies the privilege of crossing it with trains. The plaintiffs agreed to allow the directors and employees of the defendants, and such other companies as they should arrange with, free tickets over the bridge; and defendants agree to allow from their own and procure from the companies with whom they should so arrange free tickets for the directors and officers of the plaintiffs to pass over their respective railways. Defendants in 1855 made an agreement with the New York Central R. Co. "to render more convenient their interchange of freight and passengers at the bridge," by which the N. Y. C. R. Co. were to convey across the bridge on their cars the freight brought by them for the G. W. R. Co, &c. Up to 1800 defendants gave the directors and officers of the plaintiffs agweet the directors and officers of the plaintiffs gave the directors and officers of the plaintiffs.

annual passes over their railway, and up to 1858 procured for them passes from the N. Y. C. R. Co.; but they then refused to give more than special passes over their own road, to be used only on the business of the plaintiffs, used only on the business of the phinting, and limited to one trip; and as to passes over the N. Y. road, they contended that they had never been demanded, or if they had that they were not bound to procure them:—Held, 1. that defendants were bound by the covenant, 1. that detendants were bound by the covenant, and the passes could not be confined to the plaintiffs' business. 2. That the N. Y. C. R. Co. was within the agreement, so as to en-Co. was within the agreement, so as to entitle the plaintiffs to demand passes on that railway from defendants. 3. That a demand of the passes by the plaintiffs was necessary, for, though the plaintiffs might not know with what other companies defendants had made arrangements, yet they would be aware, while defendants might not be, for what persons such passes were demanded. 4. That taking the previous usage in giving tickets into consideration, the letters given in the report, con-stituted a sufficient demand. 5. That constituted a sufficient demand. 5. That considering such usage, which shewed the intention of the parties at the time, and the inconvenience of a different construction, it might be held that the passes should be annual, not for each trip. VII. CONSTRUCTION OF RAILWAYS.

1. Agreements for.

Contract Price—Payment into Court.]—
Where a bill was filed to compel a railway company to carry out a contract entered into by their agent for constructing the road, and the evidence taken in the cause shewed that at the prices agreed upon, which the company insisted were most exorbitant, a balance of £12.500 was due the contractor, the court, at the hearing, ordered that amount into court without waiting for the master's report. Whitehead v. Buffalo and Lake Huron R. W. Co., 7 Gr. 351.

Independent Agreements — Construction and Working—Picading.] — Declaration, that the plaintiffs agreed to complete the ballasting of a certain portion of defendants' railway, and to construct stone culverts and bridge abutments at certain points, and to do the grading necessary, &c., all to be completed before the 1st January, 1859, provided the company should furnish cash to meet the monthly estimates of the engineer; and that the plaintiffs commenced and were ready to complete the work, but defendants wrongfully prevented and discharged them. Plea, that by the same agreement it was provided, that whereas the plaintiffs had leased said railway from defendants by lease bearing even date with the agreement, in which it was provided that £30,000 should be expended by defendants on the completion of the road before the rents should be payable, and whereas defendants were unable to raise the £30,000, it was therefore agreed that the plaintiffs should work the road free of any charge for the use of it, and should expend the surplus earnings on the completion thereof, the amount so expended to be taken as part of the £30,000; that the lease so made was for the express purpose of enabling the plaintiffs to work the road, and raising thereby enough to enable defendants to pay them for the work contracted to be done by them; and that the plaintiffs, although they had the free use of the road, refused to work, as they lawfully might:—Held, on demutrer, plea bad, the agreements being independent. Tate v. Port Hope, Lindsay, and Beaverton R. W. Co., 17 U. C. R. 354.

Non-Performance — Compensation Award,] — A dispute arose between the Northern R. W. Co. and the corporation of the rown of Barrie, as to the construction of a branch line into the town, and it was agreed by both parties that a bill relating thereto, which was before parliament then in session, should be withdrawn, and all differences connected with the claim of the town against the company be referred to one H. The arbitrator awarded that there was in 1853 a valid agreement by the company with the town to construct this line, provided that suitable land should be procured by the town; that such land was so procured, but that the line had not been constructed; that the claim of the town to have such agreement performed still subsisted, "and if not performed, their right to compensation in lieu thereof ought to be awarded." He then awarded as company tion for the non-performance of the said agreement, and in full satisfaction of the said claim, that the company should pay to the corporation at a day and place named £5,000, and that they should, when requested by the fown, execute to them a conveyance in fee of all the lands mentioned in a certain indenture made by one B, to the company; and should further, when so requested, execute a general release of all claims in respect of the land and right of way conveyed to them by the several parties over whose lands the said branch line was to pass. On motion to set aside this award for defects only apparent on the face:—Held, that it was not defective for uncertainty as to whether the agreement had been carried out, and whether the company had an option to pay the £5,000 or con-struct the branch line, but sufficiently shewed that it had not been performed, and that no such option was intended; that the directions as to the conveyance and general release were authorized, and the latter not objectionable for omitting to state to whom it was to be made; and that as to the amount awarded, if, as contended, the corporation could claim no damages beyond what they had expended in no more was given. In re Town of Barrie and Northern R. W. Co., 22 U. C. R. 25.

Specific Performance—Superintendence of Court—Parties—Insolvent Contractors—Assignee, 1—A railway company entered into a contract for the construction of their road, which was to be completed and in perfect running order by the 1st January, 1875; and to be paid for partly in cash and numicipal bonds, partly in bonds or debentures of the company, and partly in guaranteed shares or stock of the company; and the contractors entered upon the construction of the work, but owing to financial difficulties they were contact of the company and the contractors of the work of of their creditors, and J. was appointed the official assignee. After the time appointed for the completion of the work, the assignee and the conflictors filed a bill in their joint names are the contractors filed a bill in their joint names are the contract railway company, asking that the contract of their conformed by the company, offering on their contract for company from entering into any contract for company with any other person, and from making, signing, or issuing any stock or bonds of the company, until the stock or bonds to which the planning were entitled were issued to the assignee. A demurrer for want of equity and for misjoinder of plaintiffs was allowed; the rule of the court being that it will not decree the specific performance of works which the court is unable to superintend; and that an insolvent or bankrupt cannot be joined as a co-plaintiff with his assignee. Johnson v. Montreal and City of Ottawa Junction R. W. Co., 22 Gr. 290.

Staying Action — Engineer as Arbitrator,]—A clause in a contact for railway construction provided that, in case any dispute arose as to the meant arose as to the engineer of the railway company, whose decision should be final. A disputation of the contractor brought action for it:—Held, on motion to stay the proceedings, that, although the engineer had publicly and privately expressed himself to the effect that no such usage existed, yet, as he swore that he would nevertheless give the plaintiffs' contention fair consideration should the matter come before him as arbitrator, the action must be stayed. Jackson v. Barry R. W. Co., [1872] 1 Ch. 238, specially referred to. Sherwood v. Balch, 30 O. R. 1.

2. Bridges.

[See 62 & 63 Viet. c, 37 (D.)]

(a) Over Navigable Waters.

Access to Bridge — Public Highway—Interlocatory Injunction.] — The office of an interlocutory injunction is simply to retain matters in statu quo. Where, therefore, it had been declared that the railway track of the Ningara Falls Suspension bridge was a public highway, and that an agreement that the same should be used by one railway exclusively was ultra vires the charter of the bridge company, and the E. and N. F. R. Co. moved to restrain the G. W. R. Co., with whom such illegal agreement had been made, from preventing the E. and N. F. R. Co. from crossing the lands of the G. W. R. Co. in order to obtain access to the bridge; and it was shewn that the latter company were not actively interfering to prevent the approach being obtained, but were simply passive, the court, on interlocutory motion, refused the injunction, although of opinion that, at the hearing, the relief should be granted. Erie and Niogara R. W. Co. v. Great Western R. W. Co., 21 Gr. 171.

Obstruction to Navigation — Riparian Owner—Reversioner—Remedy—Pleading.] — Declaration, that defendants, in constructing their railway, built a bridge across the river Rouge, so as to impede the navigation; that the plaintiff owned land on the river above the bridge, and by reason thereof was entitled to the free use of the river thence to the lake; that vessels had been accustomed to pass up and down to his land, but could no longer do so; and that the trade of the river had been destroyed, and his land in consequence diminished in value. Plea, not guilty, by statute: —Held, that the declaration did not state any injury peculiar to the plaintiff, which could entitle him to maintain an action, but that the proper renedy was by indictment. 2. That, as the land had been all the time in possession of a tenant, the plaintiff as reversioner could not recover upon the case stated in the declaration. 3. That both these objections were open to defendants under the plea of "not guilty by statute." The Rouge found to be a navigable river. Small v. Grand Trunk R. W. Co., 15 U. C. R. 283.

- Riparian Owner-Statutory Powers — Parties—Attorney-General.]—The Grand Trunk R. W. Co. in 1855 erected a fixed bridge over a navigable river, near the outlet. The plaintiff then owned land on the river, on which he had erected a factory, and contemplated building a dock and mills. It was material to him to enjoy the navigation unimpeded, in order to have the most beneficial use of the premises. At the time the bridge was built s. 20 of 16 Vict. c. 37 was in force; was built 8, 20 of 16 vict, c, 37 was in force, but before the bill in this cause was filed 20 Vict. c, 12, s, 7, was passed. This section was not specially set up in answer, but was relied upon in argument, as permitting a fixed bridge in cases authorized by the executive. The plaintiff relied on the former Act as providing for a draw-bridge, which would not impede navigation, and prayed that the company might be required to remove the present fixed bridge, and to erect a draw-bridge, not impeding the navigation or plaintiff's business also, that an account might be taken of all loss sustained by the plaintiff by reason of the present bridge:—Held, that if the river was not navigable, the bridge had been propwas not navigable, the bridge had been properly erected; if navigable, the company were wrong in erecting it, but that this was cured by the latter statute, and that plaintiff was testified to the relief school. not entitled to the relief asked. Semble, that in such a case the bill should be by the Attorhey-General, the statute referred to having been passed for the general benefit of the public. Cull v. Grand Trunk R. W. Co., 10 Gr. 491.

— Temporary Impediment—Pleading.]
—Held, that in this case the declaration and ninth plea (set out), taken together, sufficiently shewed that the stream in question was a navigable stream, and capable of being used by boats for the purposes of commerce. The declaration charged defendants with obstructing the navigation of the stream by building a bridge across it. The ninth plea, after setting out the incorporation of defendants and the powers thereby given to them to cross streams, provided that the free and uninterrupted navigation thereof should not be interfered with by the said railway, alleged that they had erected the bridge under such powers for the purposes of their railway, and thereby unavoidably a little impeded the navigation for a short time—Held, plea bad, as shewing no defence. Sure v. Great Western R. W. Co., 13 U. C. R. 376.

Statutory Powers — Compensation.] — Held, that after 18 Vict. c. 176, the plaintiff could not maintain an action against defendants for unlawfully and wrongfully erecting a bridge across the Twenty Mile creek, and impeding the navigation, for the statute expressly authorizes such erection, and gives only a right to compensation for damage sustained. Wiemer v. Great Western R. W. Co., 17 U. C. R. 510.

Compensation—Notice of Claim.]—Held, that a notice of claim for injury sustained by the erection of a bridge over a river, given on the 10th September, 1857, under 20 Vict, c. 146, which received the royal assent on the 10th June, 1857, and required three months' notice of such claim to be given, was sufficient, and a rule was granted commanding the appointment of an arbitrator thereunder. See, also, Regina ex rel. Trustees of St. Andrew's Church v. Great Western R. W. Co., 14 C. P. 462.

Swing Bridge — Injury to Vessel,] — A railway company had control of a swing bridge over a canal, which the plaintiffs ship was navigating at the same time that a train was about to pass the bridge. Notice was given of the plaintiffs vessel being about to pass, by blowing a horn and halling, and notice was given by the railway company's servants, by signal, that the bridge could not then be swung, and injury was received by plaintiff's vessel from the bridge remaining closed:—Held, that the company were not liable for the injury. Turner v. Great Western R. W. Co., 6 C. P. 536.

See Hamilton and Brock Road Co. v. Great Western R. W. Co., 17 U. C. R. 557; Brocen v. Grand Trunk R. W. Co., 24 U. C. R. 359; Desjardins Canal Co. v. Great Western R. W. Co., 27 U. C. R. 363; Attorney-General v. International Bridge Co., 22 Gr. 298; Town of Peterborough v. Grand Trunk R. W. Co., 32 O. R. 154.

(b) Over or Connecting Highways.

Canal Bridge—Duty to Repair—Road Company,]—Held, that the G. W. R. Co. were bound by s. 5 of 16 Vict. c. 54, to maintain in repair the bridge over the Desjardins canal, which it allows them to erect. That bridge forms part of the road leading into the plaintiffs' road—Held, that the loss of custom and tolls occasioned to the plaintiffs was not sufficient to enable them to maintain an action against defendants for allowing such bridge to fall out of repair. Hamilton and Brock Road Co. v. Great Western R. W. Co., 17 U. C. R. 567.

Overhead Bridge—Delay in Erecting—Cutting in Highway—Obstruction,—Defendants' line crossed the highway between plaintiff's farm and the town of London, and a deep cutting was necessarily made there. Plaintiff sued defendants, charging that, after a reasonable time for restoning the road had elapsed, they wrongfully and injuriously continued the cutting, and thus rendered the highway impassable, and prevented plaintiff from driving along it to town, &c. The evidence shewed that it was impossible to construct a bridge across the cut until it was empleted; that the defendants had carried on Word v, Great Western R, W, Co., 13 U. C. R. 315.

Duty to Regair.]—Where a rail-way company carried the highway across and over their road by a bridge:—Held, under C. S. C. c. 66, s. 9, s.-s. 5, s. 12, s.-s. 4, that the company were bound to keep in repair such bridge and the fence on each side of it. Van Allen v. Grand Trunk R. W. Co., 29 U. C. R. 439.

— Neglect to Make—Road Company.]
—A road company, incorporated under the general Acts, were held entitled to sue the Hamilton and Toronto Railway Company for neglecting to make a proper bridge over their railway where it crossed the plaintiffs' road, Streetsville Plank Road Co. v. Hamilton and Toronto R. W. Co., 13 U. C. R. 600.

Neglect to Raise—Servant of Company—Intersecting Railteay.]—The plaintiff, as administratrix, sued the defendants, under 41 Vict. c. 22, s. 7 (O.), for the death of her illegitinate son, a brakesman on the defendants' railway, who was killed by being carried against a bridge, not of the height required by that Act, while on one of their trains passing underneath it. The bridge belonged to another railway company, which had the right to cross the defendants' line in that way, and, although the time allowed by the statute for raising the bridge had expired, they had not done so. The jury found that the defendants had been guilty of negligence in not raising, or procuring to be raised, the bridges—Held, that the plaintiff was not entitled to recover, because s. 7 of the Act applies only to bridges within the control of the company whose servant had been injured. Gibson v. Malanda R. W. Co., 2 O. R. 658.

Neglect to Raise-Servant of Company—Dominion Railway—Provincial Sta-tute.]—Action to recover damages for injuries sustained by the plaintiff by reason of an overhead bridge being less than seven feet above the top of the defendants' car. At the time of the accident the defendants were operating the Midland Railway under an agree-ment made 22nd September, 1883, whereby it was agreed that the defendants should take over all the lines of the Midland Railway Company, buildings, rolling stock, stores, and materials of all kinds, and should during the continuance of the agreement well and efficiently work the said lines and keep and maintain them with all the works of the Midland Railway in as good repair as they were when so taken over. The agreement was to be in force for 28 years. The Midland Railway Company, though incorporated under 44 Vict. c. 67 (O.), was brought under the control of the parliament of Canada and made a Do-minion railway by 46 Vict. c. 24 (D.), passed in 1883, before the agreement was made. By Vol. III, b—185—36 the Act of 1881, 44 Vict. c. 24, s. 3 (D.), amending the Consolidated Railway Act of 1879, every bridge or other erection or structure under which any railway passes, &c., existing at the time of the passing of the Act, of which the lower beams were not of sufficient height from the surface of the rails to admit of an open and clear headway of at least seven feet, shall be reconstructed or altered within twelve months from the passing of the Act, so as to admit of such open and clear headway of at least seven feet, at the cost of the company, municipality, or other owner thereof, as the case may be, &c. By 44 Vict. c. 22 (O.), passed when the Midland Railway was under the legislative authority of the Province of Ontario, that company were required to reconstruct bridges owned by the company within twelve months from the passing of the Act in terms identical with the Dominion Act, except that the former Act makes every railway liable to its servants for any neglect, &c.:—Held, that the defendants were not liable for the injury sustained by the plaintiff. Melanuchia v. Grand Trunk & W. Co., 12 O. It. 418.

Defendants were sued for erecting a bridge over a highway running through plaintiff's land, and crossed by their railway under such bridge, and for the injury to plaintiff's land in obstructing access to the highway, &c. There was, however, sufficient room left for access to one end of the bridge. The jury found that no damage had been sustained:—Semble, however, that there was no right of action, for the defendants' charter bound them to do what was complained of, for the safety and convenience of the public, and made no provision for compensation which could apply here. McDonell v. Ontario, Simcoc, and Huron R. W. Union Co., 11 U. C. R. 271.

Width—Statute.]—A railway company by their charter were bound to restore any highway intersected by their track "to its former state, or in a sufficient manner not to impair its usefulness." They constructed their road across a street in the city of Hamilton, which was sixty-six feet wide, and connected the street again by a bridge across the track forty feet two inches in width:—Held, that the jury might with propriety find this to be a sufficient compliance with the Act, and that defendants were not necessarily guilty of a nuisance because the bridge was not of equal width with the street. Regina v. Great Western R. W. Co., 12 U. C. It. 250.

3. Drains and Watercourses.

Abstracting Water of Stream—Dantages—Injunction.]—The fact that a riparian proprietor has recovered nominal damages at law establishing his legal right, does not necessarily entitle him to an injunction to restrain the injury complained of. The exercise of this jurisdiction is discretionary, depending very much on the reality and irreparable nature of the injury complained of, and, when no mala fidee seits, on the balance of inconvenience. Where, therefore, a railway company had constructed tanks, which were filled from a stream running through the plain-tiff's land, for the use of their locomotives, in doing which they did not abstract more than 1-80th or 1-100th part of the water in the stream, the court refused to restrain the company from using the water of the stream, and dismissed a bill filled for that purpose, with costs; notwithstanding that the plaintiff had, for the same act, recovered a vedict at law, with 1s, damages. Graham v. Northera R. H. Co., 10 Gr. 259.

Agreement to Construct Culvert-Specific Performance-Costs.]-The owner of land agreed to convey to a railway company a portion thereof, the consideration of which was paid, on which to erect an embankment, on condition that they would make a culvert through such embankment. The building of the railway passed from such company into the hands of another, who built the embankment, but without making a culvert therein, they having had no knowledge of the stipulation in respect thereof, and the owner having om'tted to give them any notice in regard to it during the progress of the works. Upon a bill filed by him for the specific performance of the covenant to construct such culvert:—
Held, that it would be a hardship upon the company to decree specific performance, there having been no wilful default on their part, and the cost of now constructing the culvert would be very great, and that the parties ought now to be placed in the same position as if such agreement had not been entered into, in order that the company might proceed under the provisions of the Railway Act; the court retaining the bill until such proceedings were taken, giving to each party liberty to apply, but, under the circumstances, refusing either party any costs of the litigation. Hill v. Buffato and Lake Huron R. W. Co., 10 Gr. 506.

Ditches and Watercourses Act.]— Railway companies:—Held, not subject to the Ditches and Watercourses Act, R. S. O. 1877 c. 190. Miller v. Grand Trunk R. W. Co., 45 U. C. R. 222.

An award under the Ditches and Watercourses Act directed that a drain should be built by the initiating owner a certain distance along a highway of the defendants, then by the defendants along the highway to a point opposite the land of a railway company, then by another land owner, and then by the railway company along the highway, or across the highway through their own land, as far as might be necessary to give a proper outlet. The drain was built by contract under the Act as far as the point opposite the railway company's land, but the railway company, whose railway had been declared to be a work for the general advantage of Canada, refused to recognize the award or do the work directed. The defendants then built a culvert across the highway and brought the water to the railway company's land, and the rail-way company thereupon built an embankment way company thereafion built an embankment to keep it back, the result being that it over-flowed from the highway ditches and caused damage to the plaintiff:—Held, that there was no jurisdiction under the Ditches and Watercourses Act as far as the railway company were concerned; that the award was therefore no protection to the defendants; that the damage resulted from the construction of the culvert; and that the defendants were liable therefor. McCrimmon v. Township of Yarmouth, 27 A. R. 636.

Diversion of Watercourse—Damages— Compensation.]—See Tolton v. Canadian Pacific R. W. Co., 22 O. R. 204; Arthur v. Grand Trunk R. W. Co., 25 O. R. 37, 22 A. R. S9, post WATER AND WATERCOURSES.

Highway—Erection of Bridge—Liability to Repair.]—A railway company, desiring to cross a highway at a point where it was carried by a bridge over a small stream, in pursuance of its statutory powers, diverted the stream to a point some distance away, and built a new bridge over it where it there intersected the highway: — Held, that, whatever remedy the municipality might have if it had sustained damage by reason of the exercise by the railway company of its rights, the latter was under no liability, in the absence of special agreement, to keep the bridge substituted by it in repair. Town of Peterborough v. Grand Trank R. W. Co., 32 O. R. 154.

Negligent Construction of Ditch.]-Declaration, that defendants so negligently constructed their railway and made their ditches, that they caused the surface water on each side of the railway crossing the plaintiff's farm to flow out of the ditches and injure the crops; that to remedy this the plaintiff allowed them to cut a ditch from their ditches across his land to the lake; and that they began to make such ditch, but made it only a short distance, and of insufficient size, so that short distance, and of insumment size, so that it brought down the water upon the plain-tiff's land and left it there. An agreement was proved, purporting to be between the plaintiff and defendants, but executed by plaintiff only, that the company should dig the ditch as alleged; and a memorandum was added under the plaintiff's signature, that they would continue and deepen his ditch, if necessary, to carry off the water. It was proved, also, that they did begin the ditch, but made it only part of the way to the lake, so that the only effect was to lead the waters from the railway on to plaintiff's land:—Held, that the plaintiff was entitled to recover, for, although the defendants were not bound to make the dieth at all, yet, as they had commenced it by plaintiff's permission, they were liable for their carelessness in constructing it. Utter v. Great Western R. W. Co., 17 U. C.

Negligent Construction of Drain—Injury to Road—Municipality.]—The plain-tiffs, a township municipality, declared that they were proprietors of a certain public road between two concessions of said township, and complained that the defendants, in constructing their railway, so negligently and unskilfully made certain drains as to greatly injure said road and compel them to expend large sums in repairing same:—Held, declaration good, as shewing a special injury to the plaintiffs sufficient to sustain the action; for, though, as a municipality, they were not preprietors of the road, yet it might have been purchased by them from some joint stock company, or otherwise. Municipality of Sarnie v. Great Western R. W. Co., 17 U. C. R. 65.

Obstruction of Ditch—Absence of Negligence.]—The plaintiff sued the Grand Trunk R. W. Co., alleging that their road passing through his land obstructed the flow of water which used to escape along a ravine, and thereby flooded several acres of his farm, and made his residence unhealthy and unfit to live in. There was no natural stream through the ravine; and no negligence was complained of in the construction of the railway. It appeared that the plaintiff had purchased from one B., who, in 1854, had conveyed to defendants the track, and given a receipt in full for the purchase money, and for all damages occasioned by the railway passing over his land:—Held, that the action would not lie. Wallace v. Grand Trunk R. W. Co., 16 U. C. R. 551.

Obstruction of Drains.] — Declaration, that the plaintiff was seised of certain lands adjoining defendants' railway, which lands ought of right to be drained by ditches through defendants lands; that defendants were using these lands for drained by ditches that they negligently, wrng filly, and injuriously placed earth & Drainey, and injuriously placed earth & Drainey, and across the said drained which the same, whereby haintiff's land became wet and useless, &c. Teld, that a sufficient cause of action was shewn. Mton v. Hamilton and Toronto R. W. Co., 13 U. C. R. 595.

Obstruction of Watercourse — Continuing Damage.] — The defendants, in constructing their line of road, crossed plaintiff's land at a point where a watercourse draining it passed, by which the watercourse was obstructed, and plaintiff's land afterwar was obstructed, and plaintiff's land afterwar was obstructed, and defendants constructed their assumed to the summer of the plaintiff or upon an arbitration under 4 Wm. IV. c. 29, 8, 3, and that the plaintiff from the construction was obstructed their arbitration under 4 Wm. IV. c. 29, 8, 3, and that the damage resulted from the construction as originally made, no subsequent claim for that damage as a continuing damage could be maintained. Knapp v, Great Western R. W. Co., 9, C. P. 187.

- Insufficient Culvert-Compensation - Damuges - Time Limit.] - Declaration, that the plaintiff was possessed of land through which a watercourse was accustomed to flow, and that defendants so negligently and unskilfully constructed an embankment for their railway across said stream, by not providing sufficient openings for the water, that his land was overflowed. It was proved that the plaintiff went into possession in 1853, about the time the railway was commenced, and that the patent issued to him in 1859. The railway passed through his land upon an embankment, and defendants put in a culvert some distance from the channel by which the land had form-erly been drained, but it did not answer the purpose, and after this suit they made another at the old channel. Several acres were thus overflowed, the damage varying both as to time and extent, but never wholly ceasing. No evidence was given as to the terms on which defendants obtained their right of way from the plaintiff. The jury found for the plaintiff, who claimed damages for six years, giv-ing 8300:—Held, that the action would lie, there being no presumption from defendants' entry and construction of the railway with the plantiff's acquiescence that the plaintiff had obtained compensation for the negligence complained of; but that by C. S. C. c. 66, s. 83, the plaintiff could not claim damages for more than our country of the country than six months next before the action. McGillivray v. Great Western R. W. Co., 22 U. C. R. 69.

Further Water.]—The plaintiffs sued defendants for not constructing and maintaining a sufficient culvert under their railway where it crossed the plaintiff's land, so as to prevent as little as possible the flow of a natural watercourse there; and, in another count, for neglect, when requested, to fence off their railway from the plaintiff's land adjoining. A count in trespass was added. The jury found $390 damages on the first. There being no evidence of any natural stream:—Held, that the plaintiff could not recover on the first count, for the interference with the flow of surface water formed no ground of action, and there was no charge of negligence in constructing the railway. The last case commented upon and distinguished. Nichol v. Canada Southern R. W. Co., 40 U. C. R. 583.

- Surface Water.]-The plaintiff alleged that he was possessed of land through and away from which a stream was accustomed to flow and the surface water to escape, and that defendants negligently constructed an embankment on their railway across said land, by not providing sufficient openings for escape. The jury found that "there was a stream of water, and it was obstructed by the railway." There was a creek on the plaintiff's land, which clearly had not been interfered with; and the only obstruction shewn was of such a stream as a general flow of surface water would present on a gradual slope of land:—Held, that the word stream in their finding must be taken to mean such water; and that, as the plaintiff shewed no right to the land on both sides of the embankment, nor any easement over the land on the other side, he had no right of action. The right of drainage of surface water does not exist jure nature, and the principles applicable to streams of running water do not extend to the flow of surface water. Crewson v. Grand Trunk R. W. Co., 27 U. C. R. 68.

Overflow — Negligence — Compensation.]
—Defendants, by deed from plaintiff, obtained certain land, habendum to defendants to their sole and only use for ever, "to be used for the purposes of the Grand Trunk Railway Company of Canada, the said sum being in full compensation for the land and the company so using it as aforesaid." On this land defendants built their railway so unskiffully, as in July, 1858, after a very heavy rain, to cause the water to overflow the plaintiff's land, doing injury to his crops:—Held, that the compensation paid for the deed could not be considered as paid or received as a compensation for such unskifful construction of the railway, and that defendants were liable. Vanhorn v. Grand Trunk R. W. Co., 9 C. P. 204.

Overflow of Culvert — Time Limit.]—
The first count alleged that plaintiff's farm was drained by drains on each side of and across the cultivated portion, which kept and would have continued to keep it free from water but for the negligent and improper conduct of defendants; yet defendants constructed their railway across other lands to the east and west of plaintiff's land, and then negligently made and kept open a drain at each side of the railway, without any proper outlet for the water therefrom, whereby the water from lands west of plaintiff's land flowed into these drains on either side of the railway, and along them to a culvert made by defendants, which being too narrow the water there overflowed and ran upon the plaintiff's land, where it overflowed the drains and injured the crops, &c. It was proved that the plaintiff's land was drained as described, and that, although the railway had been constructed more than two years, he had not been injured by water until the last summer, when the season was exceedingly wet; but it appeared that there would have been no overflow if defendants' culverts had been sufficiently large:—Held, that the action was maintainable, and brought in time, being within six months from the overflow. Carron v. Great Western R. W. Co., 14 U. C. R. 192.

Penning back Stream — Damages — Award.]—An action against a railway company for penning back water, and thus preventing the use of the plaintiff's mills, was referred, with power to the arbitrators to determine the damages already sustained, and to direct how the channel should be formed by defendants, or fix a sum to be paid in lieu thereof at defendants' option, and a time within which to choose. They awarded £375 for such damages, and directed that, within three months from the 1st July, 1858, defendants should construct a channel of specified size, or in lieu thereof should pay the plaintiff 8500 on or before the 1st August, 1858:—Held, (1) that it could not be assumed from the fact that the annual rental of the plaintiff's mills was only £250, that the damages had been given for more than six months before the commencement of the suit; and, semble, that this could form no objection, for that arbitrators, when not restrained by the submission, are not bound as Judges are in a court of law. (2) That the award in other respects was sufficiently certain and final. Glen v. Grand Trunk R. W. Co., 2 P. R. 337.

Pleading Justification.] - Case for penning back the water of a stream by placing a hatch or gate eross the same. the defendants ere incorporated by statute to construct silway, and empowered to in-tersect or sany stream on the route of said railway, and to construct it across or up-on the same; that the said stream was on their route, and it was necessary that the said railway should be constructed across the same; whereupon defendants, in accordance with the said Acts, placed the said hatch or gate in and across the said stream, and continued the same there, the said portion of the road not being completed at the commencement of this suit so as to enable defendants to restore the said stream to its natural state :- Held, on demurrer, plea bad, as not confessing and avoiding or traversing the injury complained of, and for not shewing a sufficient justification.

Stopping up Ditch — Absence of Negligence.]—Defendants purchased part of plaintiff's land for their road, which ran through it; the price was fixed by agreement, and the land conveyed without any reservation. The plaintiff had previously drained his land by means of a ditch which he had made, running through the land conveyed. In constructing their railway defendants stopped up this ditch, and plaintiff's land was thus overflowed. For this the plaintiff sued, charging defendants with negligence in so constructing their road:

—Held, that the action could not be maintained, the injury being attributable to the mere construction of the railway, which should have been taken into consideration at the sale, or at the reference provided for in the Act, if the parties had disagreed. L'Experance v. Great Western R. W. Co., 14 U. C. R. 173.

4. Farm Crossings.

Agreement for — Breach of—Justification—Levsel, — To an action on a special agreement for not maintaining proper crossings for the plaintiff, whose lands had been separated by the railway, and for not keeping up the cattle guards and fences connected with such crossings, defendants pleaded that the arreament was executed by them for the benefit of the plaintiff, his executors, administrators, and assigns, for the time being the occupants of said land, and that during the whole continuance of the grievances complained of, one J. T. and others were possessed to their own use, and to the exclusion of the plaintiff, of said land on each side of the railway, for divers terms of years, under leases executed by the plaintiff before the commencement of said grievances:—Held, no defence, Hugo v. Great Western R. W. Co., 16 U. C. R. 509.

—— Parol Agreement.]—The right to a bridge or farm crossing over a railway will not pass by a parol agreement. Mills v. Hopkins, 6 C. P. 138.

Delay in Furnishing—Special Damage.]—In an action for breach of covenant by delaying the completion of a railway crossing, which afforded the best road to the plaintiffs saw mill:—Held, that evidence of special damage was not admissible, none being alleged in the declaration, and the plaintiff not having notified the defendants at the time of the fact of his suffering the loss of profit which constituted the alleged damage. Shacer v. Great Western R. W. Co., 6 C. P. 321.

Duty to Construct—Amendment of Statute.]—Inder 14 & 15 Vict. c. 51, 8. 18, railway companies were required to erect and maintain fences on each side of the railway with openings, or gates, or bars therein, "and" farm crossings, &c., for the use of the adjoining proprietors; but on the consolidation of this Act in C. S. C. c. 63, s. 13, the clause was changed by requiring the company to erect and maintain fences, &c., "at" farm crossings:—Held, that the substitution of the word "and" in the consolidated Act for the word "and" in the former Act, varied the liability of railway companies, and imposed no duty upon defendants, who were incorporated by 31 Vict. c. 41, to make farm crossings. Broton v. Toronto and Nipissing R. W. Co., 26 C. P. 206.

Held, that the company were bound to provide such farm crossings as might be necessary for the beneficial enjoyment by C, of his farm, the nature, location, and number of said crossings to be determined on a reference to the master of the court below. The substitution of the word "at" in s. 13 of C, S, C, c, of for the word "and" in s. 13 of c, 51 of 14 & 15 Vict., is the mere correction of an error, and was made to render more apparent the meaning of the latter section, the construction of Amendment of Statute — Jurisdic-tion of Provincial Legislatures.]—An owner whose lands adjoin a railway subject to the Railway Act of Canada, upon one side only, is not entitled to have a crossing over such railway under the provisions of that Act, and the special statutes in respect of the Grand Trunk Railway of Canada do not impose any Prints Railway of Canada do not impose any greater liability in respect to crossings than the Railway Act of Canada. Midland R. W. Co. v. Gribble, [1895] 2 Ch. 827, and Canada Southern R. W. Co. v. Clouse, 13 S. C. R. E39, referred to. The Provincial legislatures in Canada have no jurisdiction to make regulations in respect to crossings or the structural condition of the roadbed of railways subject to the provisions of the Railway Act of Canada. Guay v. The Queen, ib. 30.

Other Access.] — Plaintiff owned land along the river Thames where there was a bend or elbow in the stream. He conveyed to defendants the strip required for their track, which ran close to the bank at this bend so as to leave no passage from his land above to that below, but he had access to each part separately by the highway:-Held, that defendants were not bound to provide any such passage. Carroll v. Great Western R. W. Co., 14 U. C. R. 614.

Pleading.]—Where a railway severs a farm, it is prima facie the duty of the company to construct a farm crossing, and the fact of their having commenced it at a particular place and desisted at the request of the owner, who forbade them to cut into his land, does not prevent the owner from recovering damages as for a continuing breach. Reist v. Grand Trunk R. W. Co., 6 C. P. 421.

The G. T. Railway passed through plaintiff's farm, and where it intersected a lane running from front to rear of the farm, a cutting was necessary. The plaintiff insisted on having a farm crossing made in continuation of this lane, and by means of a raised bridge. Defendants and by means of a raised bridge. Defendants offered to make it there, but not by a raised bridge; and they were proceeding to cut through the plaintiff's land on either side, to make an approach to the railway, so as to cross upon a level, when the plaintiff interfered, and prevented them from going on. They then desisted, and did nothing more. The plaintiff such them for not making a con-The plaintiff sued them for not making a connt crossing, and recovered £12 10s.:-Held, upon the authority of the previous decision, that the verdict must stand, for defendants should have gone on and completed the crossing, at least on their own land. Semble, that in such an action, being for a nonfeasance, defendants could not plead the general issue by statute, and give special matter in evidence. S. C., 15 U. C. R. 355.

- Place for—Sufficiency of—Delay.]-The embankment of a railway intersected a private road used by plaintiff between different portions of his farm, and the company had made a crossing so as to give him access to that part of his farm cut off, but he required the crossing in continuation of the old road directly across the track, which would have involved great expense and difficulties:—Held, (1) that he had not the right to prescribe the place where the farm crossing should be made.
(2) That it was defendants' duty without delay to make the necessary crossing at the most fitting place. (3) That the owner of the land might sue either for not affording him a crossing at all, or an insufficient one, or for unreasonable delay in making it. B Trunk R. W. Co., 6 C. P. 484. Burke v. Right of Way-Prescription. |-When a line of railway severs a farm, and no crossing is provided by the company, a right of way across the line may be acquired by the owner of the farm by prescription. 5. Fences, Gates, and Cattle Guards.

(See, also, post XII.)

Breaking down Fences—Delay in Replacing—Remedy.]—The declaration charged that defendants were making their railway through plaintiff's close, and fencing off said close from their line, and that they ought to lave kept up the plaintiff's fences, &c.; yet they threw down the plaintiff's fences between the plai tween the said close and the railway, and permitted them to remain prostrate for an permitted them to remain prostrate for an unreasonable time, &c., so that cattle got in and destroyed the plaintiff's crops. It appeared that the injury must have been occasioned by the first breaking down the fences for the purpose of entry (which was authorized by 10 & 11 Vict. c. 117, s. 11), and before a reasonable time had expired for fencing in the line (as defendants were bound to do under s. 15) :-Held, therefore, that no action would ile, but plaintiff must proceed by arbitration under s. 3. Rutledge v. Woodstock and Lake Erie R. and H. Co., Burgess v. Woodstock and Lake Erie R. and H. Co., 12 U. C. R. Duty during Construction.] — Under 4 Wm. IV. c. 29, s. 9, the Great Western Railway Company are bound to put up sufficient fences along their line of road while the work is in progress. Brudley v. Great Western R. W. Co., 11 U. C. R. 220.

Duty Regarding Bridge — Neglect to Fewer—Lessees—Status as Plaintiffs.] — The Grand Trunk Railway and the Weston Plank Road crossed the plaintiff's land, not far apart, on parallel lines. The railway company, it was alleged, found it necessary to change the course of a stream over which the road company had built a bridge, to which the latter consented, on the railway company agreeing to make and maintain a bridge for them over the new channel:—Held, that such agreement could not impose upon defendants any obligation to fence at this latter bridge, or make them liable to the plaintiffs for omitting to do so. The plaintiffs also sued defendants for neglecting to fence in their own railway:—Held, that, though only lessees of the land, they were "proprietors" within the reasonable construction of the Railway Act, and might recover for damage done to them. Brown v. Grand Trunk R. W. Co., 24 U. C. R. 550.

Duty Regarding Crossings.]—Semble, that the effect of 4 Wm. IV. c. 29, 8, 9, is to oblige the company to erect fences and to place gates where their road crosses highways, and to have such gates properly watched and attended; and that this clause extends to all parts of the road, as well west as east of London. Renand v. Great Western R. W. Co., 12 U. C. R. 408; Moison v. Great Western R. W. Co., 14 U. C. R. 102.

Per McLean, J.—It does not so extend. L'Esperance v. Great Western R. W. Co., 14 U. C. R. 173.

The company, under 4 Wm. IV. c. 29, are bound to fence along the line where it crosses highways, and are liable for accidents on default. Per Richards, J.—The statute would be sufficiently complied with by the erection of fences and gates on the line of the highways across the railway. Parnell v. Great Western R. W. Co., 4 C. P. 317; McDouelt v. Great Western R. W. Co., 6 C. P. 180.

Encroachment on Highway—Injury to Person.]—The plaintiff on a dark night, intending to go to the railway station, walked along the highway until he came to the railway crossing, and then turned to the left intending to go along the track to the station, when he fell into the cattle guard, which was within the limits of the highway, and was injured:—Held, that he could not recover, for, assuming that the encroachment on the highway by the cattle guard was illegal, it was in no way the cause of the accident, which resulted from the plaintiff leaving the highway to walk along the track, and would have happened without such encroachment. Thompson v. Grand Trunk R. W. Co., 37 U. C. R. 40.

Material of Fence — Nuisance,]—Held, that, in the face of 46 Vict. c. 18, s. 490, s. ss. 15 and 16 (O.), which seemed to sanction them, and empowered municipalities to provide against injury resulting from them, barbedwire fences constructed by the defendants upon an ordinary country road along the line of their railway, could not be treated as a nuisance, no by-law of the locality in which the accident complained of in this case happened, having been passed respecting fences of the kind; and that derendants were not, therefore, liable for the loss of the plaintiff's colt, which, while following its dam as the latter was being led by the plaintiff's servant, ran against the fence and received injuries resulting in its death. Hillyard v. Grand Trunk R. W. Co., 8 O. R. 583.

Neglect to Fence — Pleading — Ownership.]—Where, in the inducement of the declaration, for neglect to fence, it was alleged that defendants were proprietors of the railway, not saying at the time of the negligence complained of:—Held, that under a plea of "not guilty," defendants might shew that at such time it was not their property. Van Natter v. Buffalo and Lake Huron R. W. Co., 27 U. C. R. 581.

Request—Time Limit.]—Sub-sections 1 and 2 of 14 & 15 Vict. c. 51, s. 13, are distinct provisions, passed with different objects. The first is to compel the company to fence in their track, so that cattle may not get upon it and be injured by the trains; non-compliance renders them liable for any such injury, but this clause does not apply until the raliway is in use. The second is to provide for the separation, not only of the track, but of all lands taken by the company from the lands of adjacent proprietors, so that the latter may not be subject to trespasses by cattle escaping from the company is lands; this clause may apply before the rallway is in operation, but not until six months after the company have taken the land, and been requested to fence it. Where, therefore, a declaration charged that defendants built their railway over the plaintiff land, but neglected to fence as directed by s.-$.1, whereby cattle broke in and destroyed his crops, but it was not averred that the plaintiff had requested them to fence, nor that the six months had elapsed:—Held, that no cause of action was shewn, for the injury as one within s.-s. 2, and these averments were essertial. Libioti v. Bufolo and Lake Huron R. W. Co., 16 U. C. R. 289.

The declaration in this case was the same as in the above case, but charged, as additional damage resulting from the same breach of duty, that by reason thereof a steer and heifer of the plaintiff got upon the railway, and were killed by an engine of the defendants running thereon:—Held, bad. Ferguson v. Buffalo and Lake Huron R. W. Co., 16 U. C. R. 296.

As to the neglect to fence, defendants pleaded "not guilty by statute" C, S, C. c. 65, specifying s, S3, among others, but at the trial they raised no question under that clause as ingsof Cost to the plaintiff's damages being confined to on.] six months, and it was not shewn clearly how much of the damage accrued beyond that time. o. and R. 559. applied, and the court refused to interfere on this ground. Quere, whether the clause would apply, this being an act of omission. Quere, also, as to the liability of defendants for acts of their contractors, but this point was not determined, as they were bound by C. S. U. C. c. 63, s. 19, to fence on request, and a request was proved. Nichol v. Canada Southern R. W. Co., 40 U. C. R. 583.

6. Highways-Running along or across.

Culvert-Substitution for Ditch-Source of Danger. — The railway crossed a lighway, and in the line of the ditch formerly running at the side of the highway, and several feet within the limits of the highway, the railway company constructed an open culvert of square timber about five feet deep and seven feet wide. The plaintiff, walking along the road and crossing the railway, fell into this culvert and was injured:—Held, that the company were liable; for their duty was to restore the highway to its former state, or in a sufficient manner not to impair its usefulness; and in substituting this open culvert, which they could readily have covered, for the former coma readily have covered, for the former ditch, they had unnecessarily made it more dangerous:—Quere, whether the corporation were bound to repair this part of the highway. Held, that if so, that would not relieve the defendants. Fairbanks v, Great Western R. W. Co., 35 U. C. R. 523.

Diversion of Highway—Injury—Evidence.]—Semble, that under 14 & 15 Vict. c. 51, a permanent diversion of a highway may be made upon the construction of a railway, where it is necessary or expedient. Where the evidence as to the injury done to a highway by the manner in which a railway was constructed was conflicting, the court refused an injunction, leaving the parties to their legal remedy. Municipality of Fredericksburg v. Grand Trunk R. W. Co., 6 Gr. 555.

Double Track-Injury to Adjoining Land -Assignces of Company.] - Defendants, assignees of a railway company, laid down a double track where there had been a single double track where there had been a single one along the street at the side of the plain-tiff's premises:—Held, following Ward v. Great Western R. W. Co., 13 U. C. R. 315, that if the construction of this double track affected all as it did plaintiff, be had no right of action, but the remedy, if any, must be by indictment. Defendants had also maintained a cutting in the street in front of plaintiff's house, which prevented the street being used as it formerly had been:—Held, that if the plaintiff had been more injuriously affected thereby than others, and was entitled to compensation for the damage done, redress must be sought from the company and not from de-feadants individually as exercising its rights and franchise. Hamilton v. Covert, 16 C. P.

Intersection of Highway-Projecting Track.]—The rails of defendants' track where it crossed a highway projected from eight to nine inches above the level; and while the plaintiff with a pair of horses and waggon was crossing over, an engine standing close by whistled to give notice of the train starting, This caused the horses to start forward, striking the waggon against the projecting rails and breaking the whipple-tree, in consequence of which the horses ran away and ore of them was injured:—Held, that defendants would not be liable if the whippletree was broken by the sudden starting of the horses without reference to the state of the track, for it was not proved that the blowing of the whistle was an unnecessary and unlawful act; but that if the accident happened through the defective state of the track they would be liable, and the case should have been left to the jury, without any evidence on the plaintiff's part to show what the state of the high-way was before defendants' railway intersect-ed it. Thompson v. Great Western R. W. Co., 24 C. P. 429.

Intersection of Street—Bridge—Embankments—Authority.]—Plaintiff, being possessed of a lot of land on the west side of Mary street, in the city of Hamilton, required by the defendants for their railway, sold and conveyed to them the north half of the lot, with the appurtenances, retaining the south half, upon which was erected a dwelling house, approached from Mary street, and which was drained by Mary street. Defendants, in constructing their line of road, intersected Mary street opposite the north half of Mary street opposite the north mar of the lot so purchased, at a certain depth below the surface of such street; and, in order to restore the communication thus intersected, erected a bridge across their line of road, with erected a bridge across their line of road, with embankments in the street and opposite plain-tiff's close. Upon action brought by plaintiff';— —Held, that the defendants were authorized by 4 Wm, IV, c. 29, s, 9, to do the acts com-plained of, and that s, 11 did not apply. Comors v, Great Western R. W. Co., 6 C. P.

— By-law—Construction of Branch—Manner of—Effect.]—By 16 Vict. c. 163, municipalities may pass by-laws sanctioning the construction of branch railways of limited length "under such restrictions as the councils may see fit." Acting under this statute, the corporation of Kingston passed a by-law authorizing the Grand Trunk Railway Company to construct a branch line running on and across certain streets of the city to the waters of the harbour; the articles of agreewaters of the harbour; the articles of agreement and specifications were drawn up and agreed upon between the parties, under which the company proceeded to construct their branch line. When the works were well advanced and nearly completed the corporation discovered that the probable effect of the works being carried out in the manner proposworks being carried out in the manner proposed, would be to produce a large body of stagnant water, which would in all likelihood injuriously affect the health of the city, whereupon they required the company to fill in this space, or to desist from the works, with which the company refused to comply, and the corporation thereupon filed a bill to complet the company to perform the works according to such views of the corporation. At the hearing the court refused the relief prayed, and dismissed the bill with costs. City of Kingston v. Grand Trunk R. W. Co., 8 Gr. 535.

Obstruction of Highway-Right of Action—Special Damage.]—The second count alleged that the plaintiff owned lands adjoining an original allowance for road which defendants' railway crossed, and that after-wards the municipal council opened the said allowance, but defendants obstructed it by fences across the same, without making any crossing, &c. It was alleged as special damage, and proved, that this was the only communication between the plaintiff and the town line, and the plaintiff was precluded from egress from his residence and a portion of his farm to the said town line, and was thereby prevented from carrying to market the products of that portion of his said farm, and also certain cordwood and valuable bark, which was subsequently destroyed by fire and rendered useless:—Held, that this was sufficient special damage to enable plaintiff to recover, and that defendants clearly had no right to obstruct the highway after it had been opened; but the jury having disagreed a new trial was granted to enable the facts to be found. Brown v. Toronto and Nipissing R. W. Co., 26 C. P. 206.

Occupying Street — Assent—By-law—Notice,1—The 6. T. R. Co, were indicted for nuisance, in obstructing a street in Guelph, by occupying it with their road. It appeared that the municipality had by by-law allowed them to occupy the street, and ordered that for that purpose a portion of it should be closed altogether as a highway:—Held, that such by-law was not within 12 Vict. c. 81, s. 192, and therefore that the notice there directed to be given was not required. Held, also, that the consent of the nunicipality might have been given, under 14 & 15 Vict. c. 51, s. 12, by resolution as well as by by-law. Semble, that the indictment should have been for carrying the railway along the street without leave of the municipality. Regina v. Grand Trunk R. W. Co., 15 U. C. R. 121.

The town council of Guelph passed a bylaw, enacting that from the passing thereof the G. T. R. Co, might carry their railway through the streets of the town, pursuant to the plan annexed; that a part of Kent street as shewn in said plan should be theneeforth stopped up as a highway, and might be appropriated by the company; that another street named should be diverted as so shewn; and that the by-law should be in force only on certain conditions mentioned in it:—Held, that such by-law was valid under 14 & 15 Vict. c. 51, s. 12, without the fornalities required by 12 Vict. c. S1, s. 192; and that the leave given by it might equally have been given by resolution. Held, also, that if notice had been necessary, the want of it shoun have been objected to without delay, not after the work had been completed. In re Day and Town of Guelph, 15 U. C. K. 126.

Assent -Proposed Highway-Mandamus-Survey.)—By 22 Vict. c. 116, s. 15, it is enacted, in substance, that all highways occupied by the defendants' railway with the written assent of the municipality within which they are situated, shall be declared vested in the defendants to the extent of the user permitted or enforced by the municipality; and all proposed or contemplated streets occupied by the company, or which they have been permitted to occupy by the license of the owner in fee, and which shall not lead to any place beyond the said railway, shall be deemed closed, and the occupation by the said railway shall be lawful:—Held, that defendants, being indicted for obstructthat derendants, being inducted for obstruct-ing certain streets in the town of Sarnia, were clearly entitled to an acquittal under this clause, for first, as to the first part of the clause, a written assent given after-wards by the municipality would suffice, and might be inferred from their letters, in which they asked only for pecuniary compensation; and secondly, these were proposed or contemplated streets occupied by the company, and not leading to any place beyond the railway, in which case no assent was required. Held, also, that C. S. U. C. c. 54, s. 333, had no application, for it could not be said that these streets, under the facts of the case, had not been opened by reason of any other road being used in lieu thereof; that under 16 Vict. c. 99, s. 4, and 16 Vict. c. 101, defendants had c. 39, s. 4, and 19 Vict. c. 191, derendants may clearly a right to take possession of this land for their railway, with any easement thereto, Quære, whether 4 Wm. IV. c. 29, s. 9, which requires this railway company on intersecting any highway to restore it to its former or in a sufficient manner not to impair its usefulness, could have been applied to this case; the streets in question never having been opened or used, being covered by the works of defendants, so that they could not be restored without dispossessing them, and leading to no place beyond. Semble, that at all events a mandamus would not, under the cirevents a mandamus would not, under the cir-cumstances, have been granted at the instance of the municipality. Under C. S. U. U. C. 54, s. 313, these streets, being laid out on the original plan made by the Crown surveyor, would be public highways, though not staked out upon the ground, and never opened or used. Semble, that under 12 Vict. c. 35, s. 41. the Indians, or the government acting for them, had power to alter and amend the survery by striking out these streets where they ran through the land sold to defendants. Regina v. Great Western R. W. Co., 21 U. C. R. 555.

Planting Posts—Statutory Signboard—Nuisance — Time.]—Where the plaintiff's horse, which she was driving along latintiff's horse, which she was driving along the highway, became frightened, and the vehicle to which it was attached was in consequence brought into collusion with one of the posts supporting the Signboard required bross supporting the Signboard required bross the highway, and damage resulted to the plaintiff:—Held, that defendants would not be liable merely for putting the posts in the highway, as the law allows them so to do, provided they place them in a reasonably proper manner, with a due regard to all the surrounding circumstances, although the posts necessarily obstruct the use of the road over the spots where they are placed. Held, also, that the posts would not necessarily be an indictable nuisance. Held, also, that it would have been no objection to the plaintiffs right to recover, that the posts had been erected more than six months before the cause of action arose. Soule v. Grand Trunk R. W. Co., 21 C. P. 308.

Powers of Municipality.]—Held, that under R. S. O. 1877 c. 165, s. 21, the corporation of the city of Hamilton had clearly power to allow the defendants to run their railway along Ferguson avenue. How. v. Hamilton and North-Western R. W. Co., 3 A. R. 336. 5885

Track Laid without Authority-Ac quiescence.]—Held, per Armour, J., that the jury were rightly directed, under the facts stated in the report of this case, that the defendants had laid down the track on which the accident happened, in the city of Ottawa, without authority, it being a third track or switch for use in connection with their station, for the purpose of shunting, &c., and if illegally laid down no acquiescence, except by be-law, would make it rightful as against the plaintiff. Per Hagarty, C.J.—Having been there for many years with the knowledge and acquiescence of the corporation, its existence could not alone make defendants liable, but it was properly left as a circumstance to be conwas properly left as a circumstance to be considered by the jury. Left v. St. Lawrence and Ottawa R. W. Co., Hinton v. St. Lawrence and Ottawa R. W. Co., 1 O. R. 545.

Track Laid without Formal Authority-Recognition-By-law - Acquiescence.] Where a railway company constructed their railway along a highway in a municipality, the council whereof were not formally applied to for leave, but subsequently passed a reso lation notifying the railway company to fill up the ditch existing on both sides of the railway, and to put down proper crossings:— Held, that the corporation had thereby admitthe did the collaboration had the collaboration of the highway, and could not afterwards object. The leave of the municipal or local authorities required by 31 Vict. cipal or local authorities required by of Vetice, 0.8 (D.), before a railway is carried along an existing highway, may be granted at any time, whether before, during, or after the construction of the railway, and need not necessarily be given by by-law. Semble, that R. S. O. 1877 c. 174, s. 277, enacting that the powers of township councils shall be exercised by hy-law, must be construed as referring only to the exercise of powers of the council under the Municipal Act, and not to powers which may be exercised under a special Act passed for other purposes or by another legislature. Held, that the corporation having stood by while the railway was constructed, and subsequently for upwards of five years, while it was in operation, and having also by the resolution aforesaid, procured further ex-penditure by the company, were bound by acquiescence, and could not now maintain an action for the removal of the railway from the street. A corporation may be bound by acquiescence as an individual may. Quære, acquiescence as an individual may. 7. Other Cases.

Commencement of Work.]—The plaintiffs were empowered by their Act of incorporation to construct a railway in sections between the river S. S. M. on the west, and G. on the east, and such railway was by s. 2 of their Act to be commenced within three years, their Act to be commenced within three years, and to be completed within six years from 4th March, 1881. In the years 1881 and 1882 they surveyed, located, and filed plans from the river S. S. M. easterly to S. R., about onethe viver S. S. M. easterly to S. R., about one-third of the entire length of their road, and did some work thereon of the character of "construction" such as grading, blasting, and chopping. Little more was done by them from 1882 to 1886 owing to financial rea-sons, but with no intention of abandoning the road. The defendants, who had constructed a line of railway as far west as A., proceeded, in December, 1886, to continue the construc-tion of their line westerly from A. to the river S. S. M., and in doing so used this line which plantiffs had located — Held on the which plaintiffs had located:—Held, on the evidence, that the work done by the plaintiffs was a bonâ fide commencement of their railway within the three years required by their Act. Held, also, that, as the plaintiffs were authorized to construct their railway in secauthorized to construct their fallway in sections, they were not bound before commencing work to file plans of their whole line. Ontario and Sault Ste, Marie R. W. Co. v. Canadian Pacific R. W. Co., 14 O. R. 432. See Corporation of Parkdale v. West, 12

App. Cas. 602.

Conveyance of Land Acquired for Railway—Trespass.)—The defendants, having acquired land 90 feet wide for the construction of their line, conveyed to the plaintiff a portion going 22 feet into the embankment, which at that point was high. The plaintiff built a root house on his portion, which fell in, and defendants filled up the hole, and repaired the embankment there, for which the plaintiff brought trespass. The jury found that what defendants did was necessary for the safety of their railway:—Held, that, nevertheless, they were liable; for having conveyed the land, as they had a right to do, they could not afterwards, without notice or compensation, interfere with their vendee. Quaere, whether they could again Conveyance of Land Acquired for course or compensation, interfere with their vendee. Quare, whether they could again acquire the land under the statute. McDonald v. It appeared that his land formed part of lot No. 88; that one B., in 1835, conveyed three acres of this lot to P., reserving a right of way from the highway to the water. These of way from the highway to the water. three acres afterwards became the property of K., who conveyed to defendants. In 1851 of K., who conveyed to defendants. In 1851 B. conveyed to the plaintiff a part of lot No. 88, with a right of way therefrom to the river such as B. himself then had. The plaintiff had had a way across K.'s land until K. sold had an away across R. S and until R. soid to defendants, and was deprived of it by the construction of the railway about two years before this action. The railway separated the highway from the water along the whole extent of these three acres :- Held, that the action could not lie, for defendants were authorized to build their road where they did, and the doing so could not be treated as wrongful: that if any recompense is given by the Acts to the owner of such an easement, it is by arbitration, unless 4 Wm. IV. c. 29, s. 9, applies, and then the action should be for not restoring the way in the manner there directed. Semble, however, that that clause applies only to public roads. Semble, also, that if the action had been maintainalso, that it the action had been highest able, it was brought too late, the cause of action being complete on the construc-tion of the railway. The clauses of defendtion of the railway. The clauses of defend-ants' charter relating to easements, apply only to easements belonging to the land taken. not to easements in that land appertaining to other lands. Carron v. Great Western R. W. Co., 14 U. C. R. 192.

- Entry for Gravel-Compensation-Agreement—Tenant for Life—Reversioner.]
—The first count of the declaration in each of two actions brought by different plaintiffs against a railway company, charged that de-fendants wrongfully entered upon the plaintiff's land, and carried away gravel, then lying lower than two and a half feet above the level of the lake, thereby injuring the soil, &c. second count alleged that the plaintiff was seised for life of the land, and one R. owned the reversion; and that by an agreement be-tween them and the B. B. and G. R. Co., they granted to said company the two first ridges of gravel next the lake; and the company thereby agreed to leave the ground two and a half feet in depth above the level of the lake, and the surface even and level; that afterwards, under 19 Vict. c. 21, the said company delivered over their railway to defendants, and defendants completed the same remaints, and derendants completed the same under the agreement set forth in the statute; that defendants chose to enforce the said agreement with plaintiff, and removed the gravel, but dug pits below the stipulated depth, thereby injuring the land. R. brought a separate action as reversioner for the same injury. Defendants, in each case, pleaded "not guilty" by statute. The agreement "not guilty" by statute. The agreement, when produced, appeared to be with both plaintiffs jointly:—Held, that the plaintiff could not recover on the first count, for defendants, by 19 Vict. c. 21, were entitled to take the gravel, either on making compensation, as pointed out by s. 28, or under their agreement; nor under the second count, for defendants were not bound by the agreement: and, besides, it being entered into with the plaintiffs jointly, they could not maintain separate actions. Pew v. Buffalo and Lake Huron R. W. Co., 17 U. C. R. 282.

Injury to Adjoining Land.]—A railway company is responsible for injury done in the construction of their railway to adjoining property, unless with due and proper skill it could not be avoided. And a conveyance of the land on which the railway is built, by the party complaining of the injury:—Held, not to relieve them from liability. Minor v. Buffalo and Lake Huron R. W. Co., 9 C. P. 280.

VIII. DIRECTORS.

By-law—Salary of Solicitor—Powers of Directors.]—Where the directors of a railway company passed a by-law emerting that the salary of the plaintiff, as solicitor of the company, should be fixed at $1,000 per annum, which by-law was afterwards, at a meeting of the shareholders, repealed:—Held, that the by-law was within the competence of the directors, under C. S. C. c. 66, 8, 47, and the shareholders could not undo the arrangement in respect of past services of the solicitor received by them. Without express power it is the right of the directors of a railway company to appoint necessary officers and agents of the company, and to provide for the manner of their payment. Falkiner v. Grand Junction R. W. Co., 4 O. R. 350.

Managing Director—Salary.]—By a special Act incorporating a railway company, it was emercied that the board of directors might "employ one or more of their number as paid director or directors," and by a resolution under the seal of the compainting to board of directors appointed the compainting of the seal of the seal of the seal of the compainting of the seal of the sea Provisional Directors — Control—Authorization — Sule — Lien — Cotat.]—The plaintiff was employed by one or the provisional directors of the defendant railway company to do certain work on behalf of the company in advertising and promoting its undertaking. The evidence established that this director was intrusted by the company with the performance of the various duties necessary for the purpose of promoting and furthering the undertaking, and that he did this, from time to time, without any specific instructions from his co-directors at formal meetings of the board, everything being done in the most informal manner; but that they were fully cognizant of what he did, and of his manner of doing it, and vested in him, either tacitly or by direct authorization, the right and authority to transact the business of the company:—Held, that the plaintiff was entitled to recover from the company for the value of his work. IX. Equitable Remedies against Companies.

1. Receiver.

Appointment of—Execution Creditor.]—Held, that a judgment creditor of a railway company, with execution against their lards in the hands of the sheriff, is entitled to the appointment of a receiver of the earnings of the road, the profits thereof to be applied in payment of his demand. Peto v. Welland R. W. Co., 9 Gr. 455. Affirmed on rehearing, 19th February, 1864.

Mortgagec—Judgment Creditor.]—
A mortgagee or judgment creditor of a railway company is not entitled to enforce payment of his demand by sale or foreclosure of the railway; he is only entitled to have a manager or receiver of the undertaking appointed; and quaere, whether the rule is otherwise in the case of a vendor seeking to enforce his lien for unpaid purchase money, Guit v. Eric and Niagara R. W. Co., 14 Gr. 490.

Duty of Gross Receipts.]—Where the re-to receive "the rents, issues, and profits of the railway:"—Held, that it was his duty to receive the gross receipts for the traffic and to pay the running expenses thereout, and not to receive only the surplus after paying the expenses. The order for the receiver's appointment should direct the payment to him of the tolls and profits arising from the railway. Simpson v. Ottawa and Prescott R. W. Co., 1 Ch. Ch. 126.

Sale—Bona Fides—Costs.]—A receiver had been appointed to collect the gross amount of the tolls, rents, issues, and profits, of the O. and P. R. Co. Afterwards the rolling stock of the company had been seized by a sheriff under a fi. fa. at the suit of another company, not a party to the suit. The sheriff, however, declined to sell the same unless authorized by the receiver, who, believing under the advice of counsel that he had no control over the rolling stock, assented to the sale by the sheriff, and the same was accordingly sold:—Held, on motion to remove the receiver for misconinate in the same was accordingly sold:—Held, on motion to remove the receiver for misconinate in the same was accordingly sold:—Held, on motion to remove the receiver for misconinate in not informing the misconinate threatened sale, and in assenting to the sale without its sanction: but, as it appeared that he acted bonh fide and to the best of his judgment for the benefit of all parties, the court declined to remove him, but ordered him to pay the costs of the application. Simpson v, Ottava and Prescott R. W. Co., 1 Ch. Ch. 337.

Payments by—For Right of Way—To Solicitor for Costs—Working Expenses—Priorities.]—The receiver appointed to receive the proceeds of a railway company and apply the same in carrying on the business of the company, paid $55.97 to the owner of land over which the line ran for the right of way over his lands, he having threatened to obstruct the passage of the company's trains unless paid. On passing his accounts the master refused to allow the payment in favour of the receiver, which ruling was affirmed on appeal, as such payment did not properly come under the head of "working expenses and outgoings" for the road, which, alone, the receiver was authorized to pay. The court, however, gave the receiver liberty to take out an order now for the allowance of this disbursement, on payment of the costs of the appeal, but refused to make such an order in respect of fees paid to the solicitor of the company for the examination of titles, as there was not any evidence to shew that the payment was such as would have been sanctioned by the court is applied to in the first instance for permission to pay the same Gooderham v. Toronto and Nipissing R. W. Co., 28 Gr. 212.

A receiver of the defendants' railway had been appointed to take the revenues, issues, and profits, to pass his accounts periodically, and to pay into court the balance due from him after providing for the working expenses and outgoings of the railway. The master was directed to take an account of all persons entitled to liens, charges, or incumbrances, and to settle their priorities, and the money to be paid into court was to be paid to such persons according to their priorities to be ascertained:—Held, that the master, in taking the receiver's accounts, should have allowed debts paid for working expenses, which were not regularly payable until after his appointment, but not those already in default at that time, which were properly payable out of the moneys to be paid into court according to their priority. S. C., S A, R. 685.

Purchase of Rolling Stock.]—Although the duty of the receiver of the gross proceeds and revenues of a railway, is to pay thereout all expenses necessary for the maintenance, management, and working of the undertaking, he would not be warranted in expending the same in any extraordinary outlay; and where an application was made by the receiver to authorize the purchase of a large amount of rolling stock, the outlay in respect of which would require to be met by anticipating income, the court refused to sanction the expenditure. Lee v. Victoria R. W. Co., 29 Gr. 110.

2. Other Cases.

Mortgage Acceleration — Interest —
Rouds — Default — Collateral Securities — Sale.]—Where bonds were given by a railway company for the payment of a certain sum of money and interest in twenty years, and also mortgages of lands, redeemable in ten years, as security for the payment of the principal money of the bonds:—Held, that a breach of covenant to pay interest on the bonds did not accelerate the right of the mortgagees to proceed upon the mortgages; but they were entitled to a decree for sale of other bonds given as collateral security. Great Western
R. W. Co., V. Galt and Guelph R. W. Co.,
S Gr. 283.

Mortgagees — Receiver—Sale—Jurisdiction of Provincial Court.]—In a suit by the appellants, being mortgagees of a division of 189 miles of the respondents' railway and of its revenues, subject to working expenses, for a sale of the division and for a receiver and other relief;—Held. (1) that this division of 180 miles is by the law of Canada applicable to the railway, a section capable of sale in its entirety, but that the Provincial court had no power to order a sale, part of the section being within and part without its jurisdiction. (2) That so long as the railway was worked as a whole, the revenues of the division were subject, along with other revenues, to the working expenses of the whole line, and that the receiver was entitled to the net earnings only of the division so ascertained. The committee declined to hear argument as to the validity of the mortgagees' right of entry, the pleadings and evidence not raising those issues, and the courts below not having adjudicated thereon. Grey v. Manitoba and North Western R. W. Co. of Canada, (1807) A. C. 254.

Shareholder—Complaint against Director—Parties to Bill.]—A bill was filed by a shareholder complaining of the misconduct of the managing director, against the managing director and the company, on behalf of the plaintiff and all other shareholders not made defendants; to which defendants demurred on the ground, amongst others, that the bill should have been by the company, which demurrer was allowed, with liberty to amend; and thereupon the plaintiff amended by charging that the managing director and the other directors held proxies sufficient to control, and did control, the corporation, and had caused the company to adopt and confirm the lilegal acts of the managing director; and that, controlling as they did the meetings of the bondholders and shareholders, it would be idle and useless to have a general or special general meeting of the bondholders and shareholders, it would be idle and useless to have a general or special general meeting of the directors to bring him to an account. Defendants denurred for want of equity, which was allowed; but without costs, as the defendants had raised grounds of demurrer which was allowed; but without costs, as the defendants had raised grounds of demurrer to the original bill. The proper manner of framing a bill in such a case considered and stated. McMurray v. Northern R. W. Co., 23 Gr. 134.

Circumstantial Evidence.]—In an action against a railway company for negligently causing fire by sparks from their engine, the cause of the fire may be proved by circumstantial, evidence.

Construction and Management of Engine—Inflammable Material on Railwoy Strip.]—Where it appeared that the fire was caused by the engine, but that all usual and proper precautions had been used in the construction and management of it:—Held, that the defendants should in reason have succeeded; and a verdict for plaintiff was set aside on payment of costs. Semble, that in such cases it would add materially to defendants' case to shew that they had thoroughly cleared away all logs and brushwood, &c., from the whole space occupied by their line of railway in its ordinary width. ever clear the rule may be, that a party may kindle or permit the fire to burn on his own land, still his neighbour must not be injured thereby; and if it is likely by spreading to injure him, he is bound to put it out, or cert himself so to do; otherwise, he will be liable. In this case, whilst a locomotive of defendants was passing over their track, some coals of fire dropped upon the track and spread into the plaintiff's land. The evidence shewed that defendants' trackmen, though they exerted themselves in saving defendants' fence, made no exertion to extinguish they exerted themselves in saving defendants' for prevent it from extending to plaintiff's premises, which were in consequence considerably damaged:—Held, that defendants were liable. Held, also, on the authority of Vandant vice there is no negligence either in the construction or the management of the locamotive, the company are not liable for injury resulting from the mere emission of fire therefrom into the adjoining lands. Ball v. Grand Truck R. W. Co., 16 C. P. 252.

Servants' Negligence — Damages — Remoteness — Accident.] — In an action brought by P. against the appellants for negligence in causing the destruction of P.'s house and outbuildings by fire from one of their locomotives, it was proved that the freight shed of the defendants was first ignited by sparks from one of the defendants' engines passing the Chippewa station, and the fire property of the company of the company of the company of the company of the following answers given:—Q. As it was a special train and on Sunday, when employees were not on duty, there should have been nextra hand on duty, Q. statute 14 Geo. III. c. 78, s. 86, which is an extension of 6 Anne c. 31, ss. 6 and 7, is in force in the Province of Ontario as part of the law of England introduced by the Constitutional Act, 31 Geo. III. c. 31, but has no application to protect a party from legal liability as a consequence of nealigence. Cau-ada Southern R. W. Co, v. Phelps, 14 S. C. R. 132.

Sufficiency of Evidence.)—In an action against a railway company for damages for loss of property by fire alleged to have been occasioned by sparks from an engine or hot-box of a passing train, in which the court appealed from held that there was not sufficient proof that the fire occurred through the fault or negligence of the company, and it was not shewn that such finding was clearly wrong or erroneous, the supreme court would not interfere with the finding. Sensae v. Vermont Central R. W. Co., 26 S. C. R. 641.

Construction of Engine—Dangerous Condition.]—A train of the Canada Atlantic R. W. Co. passed the plaintiff's farm about 10:30 a.m., and another train passed about noon. Some time after the second train passed it was discovered that the timber and wood on the plaintiff's land was on fire, which fire rapidly spread after being discovered and destroyed a quantity of the standing wood account of the standing wood on the plaintiff's land was on fire, which fire rapidly spread after being discovered and destroyed a quantity of the standing wood account of the standing wood repair and provided with all necessary appliances for protection against fire. The jury found, on questions submitted, that the fire came from the engine standing that the fire came from the engine standing that the result of the company, and that such negligence consisted in running the engine when she was a bad fire thrower and dangerous:—Held, alfirming the judgment in 14 A. R. 309, that there being sufficient evidence to justify the jury in finding that the engine which passed first was out of order, and that, it being admitted that the second engine was in good repair, the fair inference, in the absence of any evidence that the fire came from the latter, was that it came from the engine out of order; and the verdict should not be disturbed. Canada Atlantic R. W. Co. v. Mozley, 15 S. C. R. 145.

Inflammable Material on Railway Strip — Dulu of Plaintiff, 1 — In answer to a question whether the plaintiff had been guilty of contributory negligence in piling his lumber near the track, or by allowing sawdust to remain on it, or by not having sufficient appliances to extinguish fire, and if so, whether the defendants by the use of ordinary care and diligence could have prevented the injury; the jury answered: "Not as to piling lumber or as to swdust, but somewhat and the summer of the summer upon defendants' land, with their assent, within a short distance of the track:—Held, that the plaintiff was not bound to provide appliances to guard against defendants' negligence. their engines, where all known and reasonable precautions are taken to prevent it, yet they must keep the track reasonably clear from combustible matter, &c., likely to be thus set on fire. In an action against defendants for negligently allowing combustible matter, brush, &c., to be on their track, whereby a fire was caused upon it from defendants' engines and spread to plaintiff's land, &c., the evidence shewed that the track was in such a state, but it did not clearly appear how the fire originated, or that the state of the track caused the injury to plaintiff's land. The jury having found for the plaintiff, and the Judge being dissatisfied with the verdict, a new trait was granted with costs to abide the event. It was objected that the plaintiff's land being also much covered with dry brush wood, &c., he was guilty of contributory negligence:—Held, however, that he was not bound, as a matter of law, to keep or manage his land in any particular mainer, because the railway ran close to or along it, or to keep his land more clean, or to remay the property in a reasonably careful way, Quere, as to the application of 14 Geo, III. e. 78 in defendants' favour, Jaffrey v, To-cronto, Grey, and Bruce R. W. Co., 23 C. P. 553.

After a second trial:—Held, that defendants were not protected by 6 Anne c, 31 and 14 Geo. III. c, 78. The authorities upon this question reviewed. Held, under the circumstances—the railway having been recently built through the forest, and the plaintiff's land being in a state of nature—that there was no sufficient evidence of negligence on the defendants' part; and a second verdict having been found for the plaintiff, a new trial was granted. 8. C., 24 C. P. 271.

— Contributory Negligence—Accident—Fence.—In an action against a railway company for negligently allowing their land adjoining the track to remain covered with brushwood, &c., whereby cinders from the locomotive fell thereon and caused a fire, which extended to the plaintiff's land, it was shewn that the railway fence, in which the fire originated, was a brush fence, the line having been recently built through a new country. The plaintiff had been employed by defendants to cut down the trees on his own land within 100 feet of the centre of the track, under C. S. C. c. 66, s. 4, and he had felled them lengthwise with the track and left them there. The jury having found for the plaintiff, the court refused to interfere;—Held, that under the circumstances the plaintiff was not guilty of contributory negligence in having left the trees felled by him on his own land. Held, also, that 14 Geo. III. c. 78 afforded no defence. Quere, whether the defendants, under the circumstances, could have been compelled to put up any other than a brush fence; but if the adjoining land owners are content with such a fence, they cannot complain of it as negligence on the part of the company. In this case, however, the question as to such a fence being "brushwood" within the meaning of the declaration, or as to its being negligence in defendants to have such a fence there, was not raised at the trial. Holmes v. Midland R. W. Co., 35 U. C. R. 253.

 that defendants were possessed of a strip of land, being the bank and side of a railway, separating their track from plaintiff's land; that they negligently and contrary to their duty allowed dry wood, leaves, &c., to necumilate there, on which red hot ashes, &c., fell from the engine, and there was in consequence the strip of land that in consequence the plaintiff's land, unless the leaves, &c. were removed, or care taken to prevent any fire so occasioned from extending; but that they so negligently kept such strip of land that in consequence the leaves, &c., took fire from their engine, and thereby, and by want of due precaution by them to prevent such fire from their engine, and thereby, and by want of due precaution by them to prevent such fire extending, the fire spread to the plaintiff's land and burned his trees, &c.:—Held, affirming the judgment in 30 U. C. R. 122, that the count disclosed a good cause of action. 2. That it was for an injury sustained "by reason of the railway" within C. S. C. c. 66, s. S3; and that the plaintiff, therefore, suing more than six months after such injury, was barred. Quaere, as to the effect of the Imperial Act 14 Geo. III. c. 78 in such a case. If callum v. Grand Trunk R. W. Co., 31 U. C. R. 522.

— Question for Jury.]—During a very dry summer — little rain baving fallen, and none for some time prior to the fire in question, fires also having been frequent in that section of the country—the defendants allowed growing for two or the green which had been growing for two or the green adjoining the plaintiff's farm, while they had the day previous to the fire, for the protection of their own property on the other side of the track, burned up the dry grass, &c. there. A spark from defendants' engine having set fire to the dry grass, &c., adjoining the plaintiff's land, the fire extended and destroyed his fences, growing crops, &c. In an action against detendants therefor, all these circumstances were laid before the jury, who found for the plaintiff:—Hield, that the case having been properly summitted to the jury, their verdict could not be interfered with. Flanningan v. Canadian Pacific R. W. Co., IT O. R. 6.

Question for Jury — Concurrent and the product of Courts belove.] — In an action against a railway company for damages in consequence of plaintiffs' property being destroyed by fire alleged to be caused by sparks from an engine of the company, the jury found, though there was no direct evidence of how the fire occurred, that the company negligently permitted an accumulation of grass or rubbish on their road opposite the plaintiffs' property which, in case of emission of sparks or cinders, would be dangerous; that the fire originated from or by reason of a spark or cinder from an engine; and that the fire was communicated by the spark or cinder falling on the company's premises and spreading to plaintiff's property: — Held, affirming the judgments in 28 O. R. 625 and 25 A. R. 422, and following Senésae v. Central Vermont R. W. Co., 26 S. C. R. 641, and Matthews Co. v. Bouchard, 28 S. C. R. 580, that the jury having found that the accumulation of rubbish along the railway property caused the damages, of which there was some evidence, and the finding having been affirmed by the trial court and court of appeal, it should not be disturbed by a second appellate court. Management of Engine — Fuel Used.]
—The plaintiff owned a barn situated about two hundred feet from the defendants' line, and such barn was destroyed by fire, caused,
as was alleged, by sparks from the defendants' engine. An action was brought to recover damages for the loss of the barn and its contents. On the trial it appeared that the fuel used by the defendants over this line was wood, and evidence was given to the effect that coal was less apt to throw out sparks. It also appeared that at the place where the fire occurred there was a heavy up-grade, necessitating a full head of steam, and therefore increasing the danger to surrounding property. The jury found that the defendants did not use reasonable care in running the engine, but in what the want of such care consisted, did not appear by their finding:— tion to use coal for fuel for their engines, and the use of wood was not in itself evidence of negligence; that the finding of the jury on the question of negligence was not satisfactory, and that therefore there should be a new trial.

New Brunswick R. W. Co. v. Robinson, 11 S.
C. R. 688.

Inference for Jury.]—In an action for negligence by reason of which it was alleged that fire had escaped from a locomotive of the defendants, and the plaintiff's property was destroyed, there was evidence that the engine had passed only a short time before fire was discovered in a manure heap, which communicated to the destroyed property; that a strong wind blew across the track towards the manure heap; that there was no other known source from which the fire was at all likely to have come; that the wind was not in a direction to have caused sparks from a steam sawmill close by, to reach the premises, and that cinders were found in the straw lying on the manure heap by those who went to extinguish the fire—Held, that from these facts there was evidence for the jury that the mischief was caused by the locologie. The evidence further shewed that the end of the smoke-stack, and it was alleged must be allowed the substances were found to the substances were found that the substances were found to the substance of the substance were found to the substance of the substance were found to the substance of the Property near Track.]—Running a train too heavily laden on an upgrade, when there was a strong wind, caused an unusual quantity of sparks to escape from the locomotive, whereby the respondents' barn, situated in close proximity to the railway track, was set on fire and destroyed:—Held, that there was sufficient evidence of negligence to make the railway company lable for the damage caused by the fire. North Shore R. W. Co. v. If Wille, 17 S. C. R. 511.

XII. INJURY TO ANIMALS.

(See ante VII. 5, post XIII.)

1. At Crossings.

Approach—Look-out.]—Defendants were sued for injury done to the plaintiff's cattle, which were killed by a train while they were crossing the railway at a farm crossing, where the line ran through the plaintiff's farm upon a level. Upon the evidence set out, the jury twice found for the plaintiff, acquitting him of all blame, and finding defendants guilty of negligence in not keeping a sufficient look-out on rounding the curve before coming to the crossing, and the court refused to interfere. The relative rights and duties of railway companies and landowners with regard to the use of farm crossings considered. Bender v. Canada Southern R. W. Co., 37 U. C. R. 25.

Signals.] — Under 14 & 15 Vict. c. 21, s. 21, the omission to ring the bell or sound the whistle of a locomotive on approaching a highway crossing, was held evidence of a breach of duty and negligence by the company. See 20 Vict. c. 12, s. 16, since passed. Shields v. Grand Trunk R. W. Co., 7 C. P. 111.

Where a train is approaching a crossing and the persons in charge neglect to give the proper signals, the company will not be relieved from liability because the person whose cattle were run over did not take the best means to avoid the accident, or because his horses were unmanageable. Tyson v. Grand Trunk R. W. Co., 20 U. O. R. 256.

Farm Crossing — Defect—"Farm Purposes" — Stranger.] — The defendants having, in compliance with the requirements of s. 191 of the Railway Act of Canada, 51 Vict, c. 29, made, and assumed the duty of keeping in repair, a crossing over their railway where it crossed a certain farm, nevertheless allowed it to get into an unsafe and defective condition whereby a horse of the plaintiff was at the time using to the farm in the premission of the owner of the farm to the highway, for which part of the farm to the highway, for which part of the seed of the farm to the highway, for which part of the seed of the farm to the highway, for which part of the seed of the farm to the highway, for which part of the seed of the farm to the highway, for which part of the farm to the highway, for which part of the farm to the highway, for which part of the farm to the highway, for which part of the farm to the highway, for which part of the farm to the highway, for which part of the farm to the highway in the part of the farm to the highway in the farm to the highway in the part of the farm to the highway in the part of the farm to the highway in the farm to the f

Straying on Highway — "At Large"— Jury.]—Cattle are "at large" within the meaning of s. 271 of 51 Vict. c. 29 (D.) when the herdsman in following one of the herd which has strayed gets so far from the main body that he is unable to reach them in time to prevent their following of the strain of the top revent their following of the strain of the property of the strain of the strain of the strain of the strain approaching. The question whether cattle are at large or not need not under all circumstances be submitted to the jury. It is for the Judge in that case as in others to say whether there is any evidence for the jury that the cattle were in charge within the meaning of the Act. Thompson y, Grand Trunk R. W. Co., 22 A. R. 453.

Straying on Land of Others — Escape thence to Railway, j.—Held, that a railway tennee to Railway, j.—Held, that a railway company are not bound to maintain and keep up fences along their track except a property of the results of the railway track through some bars put up for a farm crossing, and were killed:—Held, that the railway company were not responsible. Semble, that the owner of the land for whose convenience such bars are constructed, is bound to see that they are kept up, and that the company are not responsible for injury caused by his leaving them open. McLennan v. Grand Trunk R. W. Co., S. C. P. 411.

Trespassing on Railway—Duty of Company, 1— Where cattle have wrongfully got upon a railway through the negligence of the owner, the company must still use ordinary care to avoid a collision; and in this case, where horses had escaped upon the track through a gate at a farm crossing, which the owner had left open, but, although they were seen by the engine driver, the speed was not slackened, and no precaution taken except sounding the whistel, the company were held liable. Campbell v. Great Western R. W. Co., 15 U. C. R. 498.

Duty of Company.] -- By the negligence of the plaintiff's servants, his horses escaped upon the defendants' line of road at a farm-crossing, not far from an open over-head bridge on the track. Some of them were astray upon the track. While being driven head bridge on the track. Some of them were astray upon the track. While being driven back towards the crossing by the persons in charge, a train approached, which drew up for a time, the rear cars being on the crossing, and then the track being clear the engine driver sounded the whistle for brakes off, and proceeded. The horses, or some of them, had then come nearly abreast of the engine, but, alarmed by the whistle and motion of the train, they turned and ran on towards the Bridge. They got upon the bridge before they could be stopped, and some had their legs broken by getting them between the ties, and others jumped over the ties and were killed or injured. There was ample space on each side of the track by which the horses might have passed. There was no evidence that the engine driver had acted recklessly or wanton-ly in proceeding with the train:—Held, that the defendants were not liable; there was no evidence of negligence in the manner in which the train was started; the defendants were using their own property as of right and in a lawful way, and no duty was cast upon the engine driver to wait until the horses had been engine driver to wait until the horses had been entirely driven off their premises. 2. By Want of or Defects in Fences.

Damages—Watching Cattle.] — The damages under s. 2 of 53 Vict. c. 28 (D.) are limited to injuries caused to animals by the company's trains or engines; damages incurred in watching cattle by reason of the bad state of the fences, are not recoverable. Young v. Eric and Huron R. W. Co., 27 O. R. 530.

Duty to Fence—Adjoining Owner—Other Persons—Township By-law.]—Certain cattle of the plaintiff, whose lands did not adjoin the railway, were at large in a township, through which the unfenced railway of the defendants ran. The township was surveyed and organized for settlement, and a by-law of the municipality permitted cattle to run at large. The cattle were killed by the defendants' train—Held, that the by-law related only to roads, and not to unenclosed lands of private owners, and that the cattle were wrongfully on the track of the railway. Held, also, that 51 Vict. c. 29, s. 194 (D.), gives no right to others than adjoining owners, and those in privity with them, by which they can recover damages through neglect of the company to fence their line. Rathwell v. Canadian Pacific R. W. Co., 25 C. L. J. 468.

Waiver — Gates — Agreement — Statute of Frands, — Declaration for neglecting to fence, whereby plaintiff's horses and colts strayed on the track and were killed, &c. Plea, that the railway was constructed on the plaintiff's farm on a level, and gated that he allowed them to get open and out of repair, by means whereof, &c. On demurrer: — Held, that the acceptance and use of gates by the plaintiff was a waiver of the duty imposed upon defendants to fence their line, and that having once accepted the fence in that state it was not defendants' duty to use extraordinary means to prevent accident. Held, also, that an agreement to accept and see to gates on the plaintiff's farm, in place of fences, is not an agreement in relation to land within the Statute of Frauds, Viginie v. Great Western R. W. Co., 11 C. P. 509.

Waiver—Erection in Lieu of Fence.]—H., the owner of land crossed by defendants' railway, let to G., under an oral lease for three years, a certain piece of it. At the place where the accident happened there was no fence along the railway, but defendants had erected in lieu thereof, at the express wish of the owner, by whom it was der made to without a in an action egligence in ad crossing.

It appeared that G had received the plaintiff's horse to pasture, and on account of the water in the pond being low, the horse got out of the pasture field round the fence, and thence across the small strip between the pond and the railway on to the track, where it was injured:—Held, that the fence having been built as it was at the express wish of the owner, by whom it was considered sufficient, and who in fact objected to one along the line of the railway, the plaintiff claiming through him could not recover. Clayton v. Great Western R. W. Co., 23 C. P. 137.

Consent—Notice to Replace. |—M., the owner of land adjoining a railway, took down the fence separating it from the track, with the assent of the railway company, in order to supply them with wood cut upon the land. He then sold the land to one C., stipulating that he should retain one or two acres on which this wood was piled. C. afterwards leased the east half of the land to the plaintiff, containing part of the land retained by M., and C. allowed the plaintiffs cattle to run on the west half, there being no line fence between the two halves. The plaintiffs cattle to run on the metal was the state of the second of the secon

Duty to Repair.] — The obligation to maintain fences on each side of their track, involves the duty of a continuous watchful inspection, and the company must take notice of its state at all times:—Held, therefore, in an action by an adjoining proprietor, for injury to his horses getting upon the track through defect of fences, that it was a misdirection to tell the jury, that if the fence became out of repair, and before the plaintiff notfied the defendants, or before a reasonable time for defendants to repair it had elapsed, the horses got through, defendants would not be liable. Quarre, as to the liability if the fence, being sufficient, had been prestrated by an extraordinary tempest and repaired without unnecessary delay. Studer v. Buffato and Lake Huron R. W. Co., 25 (I. C. R. 160).

Escape from Railway of Other Company. |—The plaintiff sued the defendants for the loss of certain cattle which had escaped to their road by reason, as he alleged, of the neglect of the company to fence, and were killed by their train. It appeared that the plaintiff owned land on both sides of the defendants' railway, but the Toronto, Grey, and Brice Railway, which lay to the north of defendants' railway, and the land for which had also been taken from his farm, ran between his land and defendants' railway: — Held, that there was no evidence that the cattle had railed the railway from the south side; and Vol. 111. b—186—37

the fact that the Toronto, Grey, and Bruce R. W. Co, had neglected to fence did not give the plaintiff, in respect of the occupation of their land by his cattle, the status of that company for the time, as adjoining proprietors, against whom only the defendants were bound to fence, so as to make the defendants liable, Douglass v. Grand Trunk R. W. Co., 5 A. R. 585.

Highway—Animals not Laufully on.]— Sheep belonging to the plaintiff escaped from his premises on the highway, and thence, owing to defects in the fences of the defendants, into lands of theirs, whence they strayed on to the railway track, where they were killed by a passing train:—Held, that the defendants were not liable for the loss, the sheep not being lawfully on the highway. Daniels v. Grand Trunk R. W. Co., 11 A. R. 471.

— Duty to Fence—Negligence.]—The line of the G. W. R. Co. crosses a highway on a level, and one of their trains going at its usual result of their trains going at its usual result of their trains going at its usual result of their usual pace but without an attendant. Their usual pace but without an attendant such their usual gaes solely on the ground of their neglect in not slackening speed at the crossing. It appeared in evidence that the track was not fenced: — Held, that if the company were bound to fence in the road where the accident occurred, it was by their default that the cows got upon the track, and therefore they could not object that the cows were not legally on the highway. 2. That if the company were not bound to fence, still they were guilty of negligence as charged, and therefore as against them the cows were legally there. Renaud v. Great Western R. W. Co., 12 U. C. R. 408.

The declaration stated the cause of action to have accrued before the passing of 20 Vict. c. 12. and alleged a duty to fence and a breach of that duty, by means whereof certain colts of plaintiff, one of which was lawfully in a close near the railway, and the other was lawfully on the highway near the railway, by defendants' breach of duty got upon the railway, and by means thereof, and by and through the negligence of defendants in running their engines, and while the said colts were so upon the railway, a locomotive of defendants ran against them, &c.—Held, that all the allegations respecting the duty to fence, and the breach of that duty, by which plaintiff's fillies got on the railway, being struck out, the declaration in alleging negligence on the defendants' part in running and propelling their locomotives, still disclosed a good cause of action. Chisholm v. Great Western R. W. Co., 10 C. P. 324.

— Duty to Fence—Pleading.]—Declaration, that plaintiff's steers, being lawfully on the highway, got upon defendants' rail-way through defect of fences, and were injured. Plea, that the steers were unlawfully depasturing on land adjoining the rail-way, belonging to one R., who had not given license for the said steers to be there; and that the said steers strayed from the said lands upon the defendants' lands adjoining, and thence on the railway, and being so there were injured, without any default of defendants:—Held, bad, on demurrer; the averments that the steers were lawfully on the highway, and escaped thence on the track, not being denied. McDowell v. Great Western R. W. Co., 5 C. P. 130.

Lawfully in Adjoining Close—"Cattle"—
Horsess.] — The plaintiff's horse, having a right to pasture in a pasture field belonging to one M., escaped into a pea field adjoining, also owned by M., owing to a defect in the fence dividing the two fields, and from the pea field a gor onto the fine of the pea field a gor onto the fine of the pea field a gor on the pea field and from the pea field and the pea field and the peak of the first peak of Material Issues.] — Case, against a railway company for running over and killing plaintiff's mare. The first count alleged that the mare was in the close of one W. by his leave, and that defendants neglected to fence along their line, whereby the mare strayed upon the railway. Defendants pleaded, that W. was not possessed of the close; and that the mare was not there by his leave:—Held, that issues upon these pleas were material and necessary to be proved. Comors v. Great Western R. W. Co., 13 U. C. R. 401.

"Occupied Lands"—Squatter—Contributory Negligence.]—The plaintiff and one Nadeau occupied adjoining lots on the line of the defendants' railway—Nadeau as the locatee of the Crown, plaintiff as a squatter—and by agreement between them it was arranged that their horses should pasture together. One of the plaintiff's horses strayed from Nadeau's tot on to the unfenced track of the defendants, and was killed by a passing train. In an action for the value of the horse:—Held, that "occupied lands" under the Railway Act, 46 Vict. c. 24 (D.), denote lands adjoining a railway and actually or constructively occupied up to the line of the railway by reason of actual occupation of some part of the section or lot by the person who owns it or is entitled to possession of the whole, and that, although mere occupation such as that of a squatter is not provided for in the Act, N. was, under the circumstances, entitled to require the defendants to fence, notwithstanding that he had omitted to fulfil the conditions of his location by performance of the settlement duties required thereby—the Crown never having taken steps to cancel such location; that under the circumstances the question as to contributory negligence did not arise; and therefore plaintiff was entitled to recover. Davis v. Canadian Pacific R. W. Co., 12 A. R. 724.

Open Common — Escape from.] — The Canada Company owned land in the town of Goderich through which defendants' railway ran, and on which, being an open common, the cattle of persons living in the town had for thirty or forty years been accustomed to pasture, though without any express permission. The plaintiff's cow having escaped from this land on to the railway, owing to the want of fences, and been killed by a train:—Held, that he could not recover, for as against him the defendants were not bound to fence. McIntosh v. Grand Trunk R. W. Co., 30 U. C. R. 601.

Possession of Close—Escape of Cattle.]
—The plaintiff, owning land adjacent to the railway, permitted one D. a servant of the company living within their fences, to cultivate a small piece free of rent. D. made a gate in the railway fence to give him access to this land, and the plaintiff's horse passed through it to the track and were killed:—Held, that the plaintiff was sufficiently in possession of the close from which the horses escaped to entitle him to recover. Henderson v. Grand Trunk R. W. Co., 20 U. C. R. 602.

Request to Fence—Extent of Liability.]
—The preamble to 20 Vict. c. 143, which repeats s. 18 of 12 Vict, c. 190, and applies to this company the clauses of the Railway Act with respect to fences, has not the effect of extending their liability beyond that of other companies subject to the same provisions. Wilson v. Northern R. W. Co., 28 U. C. R. 274.

— Sufficiency—Dispensing with Duty.]
—The plaintiff, owning adjoining lands, orally requested defendants' resident engineer to erect a fence, and, as this was not done, he put up a slashed fence for himself, and some bars in it being left down, his cows got on the track and were killed:—Held, (1) that the request was sufficient. (2) That what the plaintiff had done could not dispense with the duty imposed upon the company, or affect his right to compensation. Wilson v. Ontario, Simcoc, and Huron R. W. Co., 12 U. C. R. 463.

Sufficiency—Unenclosed Lands.]—Declaration, that the plaintiff's horses were lawfully upon certain land belonging to one M., out of which defendants had taken a strip for their road; that the proprietor of said lands desired them to fence off the land neglected to do sha ymmeasure plaintiff's horses, then being upon said land, ecscaped therefrom on to the railway, and were killed by the train:—Held, declaration bad, as it was not averred that the horses were on the land with the consent of the owner. Upon the trial it appeared that M.'s land was altogether unenclosed, but that they were there by M.'s consent, the plaintiff having agreed to pay her a small sum for their pasturing:—Held, that the company were not liable. A notice to fence, given by letter written by M.'s son, who acted for her in such matters, to the superintendent of the company.—Held, sufficient. Auger v. Ontario, Simcoe, and Haron R. W. Co., 16 U. C. R. 92.

Straying on Adjoining Lands.]—Defendants by their charter, 12 Vict. c. 196. s. 18, were bound to fence off their railway from the adjoining lands, in case the owners of such lands should at any time so desire, or in case defendants should think proper to fence. Where the plaintiff's cow, trespassing on A's close, strayed upon defendants' railway adjoining. through a defect in the fence:—Held, that plaintiff could not recover: (1) because both at common law and by the Act the obligation to fence would apply only as against the owners of the adjoining close; and (2) because it was not clearly averred either that the owner of the land adjoining had requested defendants to enclose their road or that they had thought proper to do so. Dolrey v. Ontario, Simcoe, and Huron R. W. Co., 11 U. C. R. 600.

The declaration averred that it was defendants' duty to keep up sufficient fences along their line, and that by the neglect of such duty the plaintiff's mare, which was lawfully depasturing on the adjoining land, got upon the track and was killed. It was proved that the mare had escaped from another farm, and was trespassing on the lot from which she got upon the railway:—Held, that the plaintiff fence only as against the owner of the ad-joining lands. Gillis v. Great Western R. W. Co., 12 U. C. R. 427.

The plaintiff, by permission of one H., put his cattle into a pasture field of H. adjoining defendants' railway, and the evidence went to shew that they escaped thence into an adshew that they escaped thence into an adjoining field occupied by one J., and thence on to the track, where they were killed by a train passing. The plaintiff sued, allezing that the horses escaped from the field where they were pasturing by reason of defects in the railway fences:—Held, that he could not recover, for the horses were not in the field from which they escaped by the owner's permission. Wilson v. Northern R. W. Co., 28 U. C. R. 274.

53 Vict. c. 28, s. 2 (D.), amending the Dominion Railway Act of 1888, enacts "... and no animal allowed by law to run at large shall be held to be improperly run at large shall be held to be improperly on a place adjoining the railway merely for the reason that the owner or occupant of such place has not permitted it to be there." Horses belonging to the plaintiff, while run-ning at large, strayed from premises adjoin-ing the defendants' line of railway, where they had been without permission of the occupant, on to the railway track, which, contrary to the statute, was unfenced, and were run over by a locomotive and killed. No affirma-tive by-law had been passed by the local municipality permitting horses to run at large:— Hold, that the defendants were not liable, Duncan v. Canadian Pacific R. W. Co., 21 O.

Title to Adjoining Land-Different Owners of Same Lot.]—The plaintiffs occupied about an acre of lot 29 adjoining the railway of the defendant company. Their horses pasturing on another part of the lot, which the plaintiffs did not occupy and to which the plantifis did not occupy and to which they had no title, passed on to the track and were killed by a passing train:— Held, affirming the judgment in 7 O. R. 673, that the plaintiffs were not entitled to call upon the defendant company to fence across that part of the lot from which the horse scaped; and therefore, that the company were not liable to make good their loss to the plaintiffs. 3. By Want of or Defects in Gates and Cattle Guards.

At Culvert - Watercourse.]-A natural At Culvert a accreained, a military watercourse, which flowed through a culvert under a railway track, dried up in the sumer, and to prevent cattle from passing through it the railway company had placed gates in the culvert, which they neglected to keep up, and by reason of the absence thereof, of which the company was duly notified, the plaintiff's cattle, which were lawfully pasturing in a field on one side of the track, got through the culvert into a field on the other side of the track, and thence on to the railtrack, where they were injured :-Held, that the defendants were bound to keep the watercourse, as part of their railway, properly fenced, and were liable for the damages sustained by the plaintiff. James v. Grand Trunk R. W. Co., 31 O. R. 672.

At Farm Crossing—Gate—Repair,]—
The defendants' line of railway ran through the plaintif's farm, and the plaintiff's nare escaped from a field adjoining the railway through a gate opposite a farm-crossing which the defendants had constructed, and which was out of repair, and was killed on the railway:—Held, that the duty imposed by law upon the railway company to erect and mainapon the ranway company to erect and main-tain fences on each side of the railway with openings or gates or bars therein at farm crossings of the road, is not at all dependent upon whether or not a duty is imposed upon them by law to erect and maintain such crossings, but wholly independent of it. Murphy v. Grand Trunk R. W. Co., 1 O. R. 619.

Gate - Repair-Duty to Close. |-Plaintiff's horses, in consequence of insecure fastening of the gates at the farm crossing where the defendants' railway crossed their where the defendants' railway crossed their farm, got through the gates and on the rail-way track, and were killed by a passing train: —Held, that the plaintiff, by reason of the continued use of the faulty fastenings, could not be deemed to have adopted them as suffi-cient, and that it was the duty of the de-fendants to provide and maintain proper fas-tenings for the gate. Section 9 of 47 Vict, c. 11 (D), commented on as to the nature of the duty cast on the plaintiff to keep the gate closed; and quere, whether the words in that closed; and quære, whether the words in that Act, that the owners must keep the gates closed, extend further than in respect of their own use of them; or whether, if the gate became open by any accidental means, or by the act of a stranger, and remained open without any person being near to prevent animals passing through it, the owner or occupier would be liable to the full extent provided by the Act, although it had become open without his agency or neglect, and remained so without his knowledge. McMichael v. Grand Trunk R. W. Co., 12 O. R. 547.

It is the duty of the railway company to make and duly maintain gates at farm crossings with proper fastenings, and the knowledge of the owner of the farm that the fastenings are insufficient, and his failure to notify the company of that fact, will not prevent him from recovering damages from the company if his cattle stray from his farm, owing to the insufficiency of the fastenings, and are killed or injured. McMichael v. Grand Trunk R. W. Co., 12 O. R. 547, approved. Dunsford v. Michigan Central R. W. Co., 20 A. R. 517.

At Highway Crossing — "Place where they might Properly Re."]—In an action for damages for the loss of horses killed on the defendent the borses of horses killed on the defendent that the horses "escaped" from the plantiffs, farm, passed down a concession road to an allowance for road which was intersected by the railway "on the level," then along the allowance for road to the point of intersection, and thence along the railway to the place where they were struck by a passing train. The only negligence charged was that the defendants had not constructed and maintained cattle guards or fences. It was not alleged that the horses were in 'charge of any person:—Held, that the horses being, contrary to the provisions of s. 271 of the Railway Act of Canada, 51 vict. c. 28, within half a mile of the intersection and not in charge of any person, they did not get upon the railway from an adjoining place, where, under the circumstances, they might properly be, within the meaning of 53 Vict. c. 28, s. 2 (D.); and therefore the defendants were not liable. Airon v. Grand Trunk R. W. Co., 23 O. R. 124.

Unenclosed Highway.] — First count, that defendants' railway crossed on a level a certain highway; that it was their duty to have gates at such crossings on each duty to have gates at such crossings of each side of the railway, or cattle guards instead, provided that the board of railway commissioners should approve thereof, and also to use due care to prevent injury by the railway to persons and cattle lawfully upon said highway; that the commissioners did not approve of cattle guards; that nevertheless defendants, not regarding their duty, did not erect gates; and for want of such gates an ox of the plaintiff, lawfully upon said highway, while the train was nearing the crossing, by the negligence of defendants and their servants was run against and killed. The second count was founded entirely upon alleged negligence of defendants in the management of their train, defendants in the management of their train. Plea, not guilty. It appeared that plain-tiff's land did not join the railway, and that the highway was unenclosed on either side, so that the want of gates could not have occasioned the accident. The jury found that defendants had not been guilty of negligence, and gave a verdict in their favour on the second count, but against them on the first count:—Held, that the first count disclosed a sufficient cause of action after verdict. a sufficient cause of action after verdict, whether defendants were bound to erect gates or not; but that, as defendants were acquitted of negligence, the verdict was not warranted. Jack v. Ontario, Simcoe, and Huron R. W. Co., 14 U. C. R. 328.

Escape from Highway — Absence of Guards.] — Declaration charging defendants with neglect in maintaining cattle guards, by means whereof the plaintiff's ox, lawfully being on the highway, got upon the railway and was killed. It appeared that there were no cattle guards, and that the ox got on the track from the highway:—Held, that in the absence of cattle guards, defendants, under 14 & 15 Vict. c. 51, s. 13, were liable, without reference to whether the ox was lawfully on the highway or not. Huist v. Buffalo and Lake Huron R. W. Co., 16 U. C. R. 299.

Points of Intersection—"In Charge of."]—In an action for not erecting fences and cattleguards, whereby plaintiff's horse got on the track and was killed, there was evidence that the horse escaped from plaintiff's field into the street within half a mile of the railway, and thence upon the track:—Held, that if so the plaintiff was preclude from recovering by 20 Viet. c. 12, though the horse was not killed at the very point of intersection. Ferris v. Grand Trunk R. W. Co., 16 U. C. R. 474; Simpson v. Great Western R. W. Co., 17 U. C. R. 57.

The plaintiff, as constable, seized a horsunder a distress warrant, and put him in the stable of an inn. The horse escaped to the road, and, having got upon the railway owing to defects in the cattle guards, was killed at some distance from the noint of intersection:—Held, that under 20 Viet c. 12 the horse was unlawfully upon the highway, and the company were not responsible, notwithstanding the defect in the cattle guards. Held, also, that, although the horse was upon the road without the plaintiffs knowledge or permission, yet he was there unlawfully, for the statute obliged the plaintiff to prevent him from being there. Semble, also, that the plaintiff had sufficient property in the horse to entitle him to sue. Simpson v. Great Western R. Co., 17 U. C.

The plaintiff's son, a boy of fourteen, was driving four of plaintiff's horses along the highway about dusk, intending to put them in a field, the gate of which opened into the road a while to was opening the gate the lorses, being loose, passed on to the track, which was passing at its usual time:—Held, that the plaintiff was barred by 20 Vict. c. 12, for his horses were not 'in charge of' the boy, within that section; and that, independently of that statute, he was guilty of culpable negligence in sending his horses, as he did, in charge of a boy, without a bridle or any means of control, after dark, and at a time when it was known that the train might be expected. Held, also, that the neglect of the company to blow the whistle or ring the bell, in approaching the crossing, could not affect the right of action. Thompson v. Grand Trunk R. W. Co., 18 U. C. R. 92.

The plaintiff sent three of his horses to a watering place on the highway, with his servant, who merely drove them before him, not having any further means of control, by bridle, halter, or otherwise. They passed the watering place, and got on to the railway over the cattle guard, which was filled up with snow, and one of them was killed up with snow, and one of them was killed by the train some distance from the point of intersection. The jury found that the plaintiff was guilty of no negligence, and that, had the cattle guard been kept clear of snow, the horses could not have got upon the track:—Held, that the plaintiff nevertheless could not recover, for his horses were not "in charge of" any person when they got upon the railway. tooley v. Grand Trunk R. W. Co., 18 U. C.

The plaintiff's son, as it was getting dark, was taking three horses along a road which crossed defendants' railway, riding one, leading another, and driving the third. The last horse, being from sixty to one hundred feet in front, attempted to cross the track as a in front, attempted to cross the track as a train approached, and was killed: —Held, that the horse was not "in charge of " any person within C. S. C. c. 66, s. 147, and that the plaintiff could not recover. Markham v. Great Western R. W. Co., 25 U. C. R. 572.

Declaration, that defendants' railway crossed a highway on the level; that it was their duty to keep up sufficient gates at the point of intersection, so as to prevent horses from getting on their road, &c., yet that they so negligently managed their train, that the plaintif's horses passing along the highway were killed. Defendants pleaded that the horses were straying on the highway within half a mile of its intersection with the railway, and not in charge of any person, conway, and not in charge of any person, con-trary to the statute, and so strayed directly from the highway on to the railway at the point of intersection. The plaintiff replied, "not admitting" that the horses were stray-ing, &c., as alleged, "but taking issue upon" the said allegation,—that defendants so carelessly managed their train that thereby, and from no other cause, the horses were killed: —Held, on demurrer, that the plaintiff was not entitled to succeed, for that the statute barred all remedy under the circumstances stated in the plea, notwithstanding defendants' negligence. As to the form of the replication, it would be bad either as an attempt to avoid without confessing the plea, or as a new assignment of the same cause of action already stated in the declaration. McGee v. Great Western R. W. Co., 23 U. C. R. 293.

5. Other Cases,

Careless Management of Engine — Pleading. |—The second count averred defendants' possession of their railway, and of the engine thereon, and charged that they so careeighe thereon, and charged that they so care-lessly managed the same that the engine ran against plaintiff's mare and threw her upon the railway and killed her:—Held, bad, on demurrer: (1) because no value was stated for the mare: (2) because it implied that the mare was trespassing on the railway. Connors v. Great Western R. W. Co., 13 U. C. R. 401.

Cattle Wrongfully on Track-Negli-Cattle wrongruity on Track—Aegitgence — Limitation Clause. I — Two of the plaintiff's horses, having by some means got on the defendants' track, were killed by a lecomotive, for which the plaintiff brought has action:—Held, that the horses were wrongfully there as against defendants, and that the facts stated afforded you ordivision. that the facts stated afforded no sufficient proof of negligence. Held, also, that such action, under 12 Vict. c. 196, ss. 20, 47, must be brought within six months. Auger v. Ontario, Simcoe, and Huron R. W. Co., 9 C. P. 164.

XIII. INJURY TO PERSONS.

1. At Crossings.

(a) By Collision with Trains.

Duty of Person Crossing—Precautions—Neglect to Give Warning.] — Persons approaching and passing over level railway crossings are bound to exercise their ordinary powers of observation, and the omission to ring the bell or sound the whistle, as difrom the exercise of such care. In this case there was evidence that the morning when the there was evidence that the horning when the accident happened was rather wild and blustering, with snow blowing in the plaintiff's face. The plaintiff swore that he approached the crossing on a walk, and looked both ways along the track, but saw nothing until the engine was close upon him. He then whipped gine was close upon him. He then whipped up the horses, but the engine struck the sleigh, and killed one of the horses. Defendants' witnesses, on the other hand, said that plaintiff could not have failed to have seen the train approaching had he looked. It was clear that the bell was not rung as directed nor the whistle sounded. The jury were told that they must be satisfied that the plaintiff in crossing took all the precentions which we have the satisfied that the plaintiff in crossing took all the precautions which a prudent man would have taken, and that, if he did, taking into consideration the weather, the manner of approaching the crossing, &c., and notwith-standing this that the accident happened, and defendants' servant did not ring the bell at all, or did not ring it so that the plaintiff could hear it, or until the crossing was passed, the plaintiff was entitled to recover:—Held, a plantum was entured to recover;—Held, a proper direction, and a verdict for the plain-tiff was upheld. The views expressed in John-ston v. Northern R. W. Co., 34 U. C. R. 432, considered and affirmed. Miller v. Grand Trunk R. W. Co., 25 C. P. 389.

A traveller on approaching a railway crossing is bound to use such faculties of sight and hearing as he may be possessed of, and when he knows he is approaching a crossing and the line is in view, and there is nothing to prevent him from seeing and hearing a train if vent nim from seeing and hearing a train it he looks for it, he ought not to cross the track in front of it, without looking, merely because the warning required by law has not been given. Weir v. Canadian Pacific R. W. Co., 16 A. R. 100.

See Morrow v. Canadian Pacific R. W. Co., 21 A. R. 149.

- Precautions—Obstruction of View.] —It is the duty of a person driving across a railway track to use care and precaution to see whether a train is approaching, and the see whether a train is approaching, and the omission to do so is contributory negligence. In this case the plaintiff having approached and attempted to cross the track at a trot, and without looking out, though he could have seen along the line in either direction for some distance:—Held, that he could not for some distance:—neight that he could not recover for an injury sustained by collision with defendants train, and a nonsuit was ordered. It was urged that the evidence, set out in the report of this case, disclosed negligence on the part of defendants in allowing grigence on the part of derendants in allowing cars to be on a siding, obstructing the view while the train was passing; but semble, that it did not. Neglect to Fence-Proximate Cause-Contributory Negligence.]—Under the special circumstances of this case, the driver of the plaintiff's cab having been careless in ap-proaching the crossing:—Held, that the plaintiff was not entitled to recover; for, though the failure of the defendants to fence the cross ing was negligence and a disregard of their statutory duty, still it did not entitle the plaintiff to recover against them, however culpable he might himself have been; and, though such want of fencing did not cause the accident, that, to justify a recovery for such a cause, it must appear that the damage to plaintiff resulted from the omission to fence as the proximate, if not the direct, cause of the accident, which the evidence did not shew, but rather that it arose from his own gross negligence, or that of his driver, in not keeping a proper look-out for the train, which, with precaution, it clearly appeared, could by have been avoided. In an action by easily have been avoided. plaintiff against the same defendants, in his own individual right, for injury sustained from the same accident, the Judge at first directed the jury that, assuming defendants to have been guilty of neglect in not fencing. they must determine whether plaintiff so far contributed to the accident that but for such reginence or want of care it would not have happened:—Held, that this direction was right. But afterwards, at the request of plaintiff's counsel, who did not wish the question of contributory negligence to be left to the jury, the Judge, as he took the same view, did not charge them to find specially on the question of negligence generally, as applicable to the state of the road, when defendants' counsel objected; so that, in the confusion which arose, the question of community of default being understood to be withdrawn from the jury, they were led to believe that because defendants were in default, plaintiff must recover. On this ground, therefore, the court granted a new trial without costs. Winckler v. Great Western R. W. Co., 18 C. P. 250.

Neglect to Provide Attendant—Rate of Speed.)—Where a train was approaching a level crossing over a public thoroughfare in a town, and the conductor was aware that the watchman or flagman was not at his post at such crossing, it was held that the conductor was guilty of neglizence in running his train at so great a rate of speed as to put it out of his control to prevent a collision with a vehicle which had attempted to pass over the crossing before the train was in sight. Connell v. The Queen, 5 Ex. C. R. 74.

Neglect to Provide Gate and Attendant-Contributory Negligence.]-The plaintiff, being in a cab, approached a railway crossing, where a train could be seen at a distance of three-quarters of a mile. The driver however, who knew the crossing well, did not look out at all until within about twenty yards of the track, and then only straight in front of him. He did not see the train, which was a very long one, consisting of twenty passenger cars and two engines, until the horses feet were on the rails, and it was within seventy feet, and he then tried to cross in front of it, but the cab was struck and over-turned. The plaintiff, from within, had seen the train approaching, and called to the driver to stop, but a man sitting on the box with him urged him to go on, which he did :-Held. that the driver's negligence was so far the cause of the accident that the plaintiff could not recover, notwith standing the defendants' neglect of their statutory obligation to have a fence and gate at the crossing, with an attendant to watch it. A nonsuit was therefore ordered. Nicholls v. Great Western R. W. Co., 27 U. C. R. 382.

In this case also, upon substantially the same evidence as the last, it was held, that the plaintiff could not recover. The jury were directed, that if they were satisfied that the accident would not have happened if the defendants had erected proper fences, they should find for the plaintiff:—Held, a missilvaction, for that if the driver, by his negligence contributed to the accident, so that but for his want of reasonable care it would not have happened, the plaintiff could not succeed, Rustrick v. Great Western R. W. Co., 27 U. C. R. 396.

Warning of Approach—Effect of Giv. inc.—Held, that obedience to the ringing of the bell or sounding the whistle at or approaching crossings as directed by the statute, does not of itself free the company from responsibility for accidents or damages arising from any neglect or breach of duty. Han v. Grand Trank R. W. Co., 11 C. P. 86.

Evidence — Contributory Negligence.]—The plaintiff's waggon was being driven by his son along one of the streets of Thomas, another man sitting beside him, and in attempting to pass over a railway crossing, the locomotive of an approaching train struck the hind wheel of the waggon, by which it and the horses were injured. It appeared that in approaching the crossing neither of them was looking out for or thinking of the train; and it was not until they were on a side track or switch, within fifteen yards of the main track, that the man on looking around saw the train, when he sharply told his son to put on the whip, but, he said, the son appeared confused and did nothing. the son appeared confused and did nothing. He then attempted to get the whip and whip the horses across, but it was too late. The son acknowledged having heard what the man said, but said that, as he was looking the other way, he did not understand him. The weight of evidence went to shew that the whistle was sounded and bell rung, and that the train was not going more than six miles an hour. Both of them had been in the habit of crossing there many times daily, and it appeared that, had the son been looking out, the accident might have been avoided, as there was plenty of time either to have stopped or got across. The court being left to draw inferences as a jury:—Held, that there was such contributory negligence on the driver's part as prevented the plaintiff from recovering. Boggs v. Great Western R. W. Co., 23 C. P. 573.

—Evidence of —Sufficiency—Contributory Negligence, 1—Action against defendants for an injury sustained by plaintiff being run over by defendants' train at a highway crossing, caused, as alleged, by the omission to ring the bell or sound the whistle. The persons in charge of the train swore that the whistle was sounded in compliance with the statutory requirements. The plaintiff said he heard a whistle which he thought came from a round house near by, but which might have been from the approaching train, and, though the plaintiff's witnesses stated they did not hear the whistle, it was quite consistent with their evidence that the whistle was sounded. endants' to have herefore

The plaintiff, as he approached the track, looked to the north-west for shunting engines, which he knew were going backwards and forwhich he knew were going backwards and forwards all the time, and so did not look to be south-west, being the direction in which the train was approaching, and if he had been looking he would have seen the train and the accident would have been avoided. A person following immediately behind plaintiff, saw the train and stopped his waggon:—Held, that no negligence on defendants part was proved, for it could not be said on the evidence that the whistle was not sounded as required. Quarre, whether there was contributory negligence on the plaintiff's part in approaching train. Blake v. Canadian Pacific R. W. Co., 17 O. R. 177.

_____ Neglect to Give.] — In an action against a railway company for injuries alleged to have been caused by the negligence of the servants of the company in not giving proper servants of the company in not giving proper notice of the approach of a train at a cross-ing, whereby the plaintiff was struck by an engine and hurt, the case was withdrawn from the jury by consent and referred to the full court to assess damages or enter a nonsuit.

from the decision of the full court assessing damages to the plaintiff:—Held, that the deciananges to the panatin;—Rea, that the decision was not open to review on appeal, but if the merits could be considered the decision should be affirmed. Canadian Pacific R. W. Co, v. Fleming, 22 S. C. R. 33.

Neglect to Give—Contributory Negligence. |—M. B., while driving along the highway at the crossing of a railway operated by the defendants, was killed by a train of the defendants, which was then, as found by the jury, running at a high rate of speed without ringing a bell continuously or sounding a whistle at short intervals. For the defence it was shewn that the deceased was driving slowly across the track with his head down and that he did not attempt to look out for the train until shouted to by some persons who saw it approaching, when he whipped up his horses and endeavoured to drive across the track, and was killed. As against this there was evidence that there was a curve in the road which would prevent the train being seen, and also that the buildings at the station would interrupt the view. The jury at the trial answered all the questions submitted to them in a manner favourable to the plaintiff them in a manner tavourance to the painting and adversely to the company, and negatived any contributory negligence on the part of the deceased:—Held, by the court of appeal, alluming the judgment in S O. R. 601, that there was sufficient evidence of negligence to warrant the findings of the jury in fayour of the plaintiff. The supreme court of Canada was divided on the question of contributory negligence. Beckett v. Grand Trunk R. W. Co., 13 A. R. 174, 16 S. C. R. 713.

The deceased, who was well acquainted with The deceased, who was well acquared the locality, while driving along a road running in the same direction as and crossing the rations, was killed at the crossing by a locomotive, not a regular train. The jury found that the engine was going unusually fast; that the eigne was going unusuary rass; that the whistle was sounded at another crossing three-lifths of a mile off, but the sounding was not continued; and that deceased was not guilty of contributory negligence. The common pleas division, upon the evidence, more fully stated in the report, refused to disturb this verdict, and on appeal their judgment was this verdict, and on appeal their judgment was affirmed, on the ground that the plaintiff was bound to disprove contributory negligence: that she had failed to do so, for had deceased looked he must have seen the train coming; and that there should therefore have been a nonsuit. Davey v. London and South-Western R. W. Co., 11 Q. B. D. 215, 12 Q. B. D. 70, and Dublin, Wicklow, and Wexford R. W. Co., v. Slattery, 3. App. Cas. 1155, commented on. Peart v. Grand Trank R. W. Co., 14 Q. R. 1155. 10 A. R. 191.

Neglect to Give-Evidence of Negligence.]—In an action to recover damages for the death of the plaintiff's husband, who was killed at a railway crossing by a train of the defendants, the jury found that the engine bell was not rung on approaching the highway, nor kept ringing until the engine crossed it; that the deceased did not see the train approaching in time to avoid it; and that he had no warning of its approach; and assessed damages at $1,000;—Held, that the plaintiff damages at $1,000:—Held, that the plaintiff was entitled to judgment upon these findings, notwithstanding that the jury, to a question whether the deceased, if he saw the train ap-proaching, used proper care to avoid it, ans-wered "we don't know." Held, affirming this decision, that in an action to recover damages for against the for causing the death of a person, there is sufficient evidence of negligence to be submitted to the jury, when it was sworn that the deceased was seen approaching the railway track in a vehicle just before the passing of a train; that immediately after the train passed the deceased and the horses were found dead at the crossing; and that the statutory signals of the approach of the train were not given.

Johnson v. Grand Trunk R. W. Co., 25 O. R.
64, 21 A. R. 408.

Neglect to Give—Limitation Clause —Independent Contractor.]—Plaintiff sued
defendants for injury to himself and his waggon by collision with their train at a railway crossing, owing to neglect to sound the whistle or ring the bell on their approach, as required by the statute, and to improper construction of the railway, which was alleged to be more above the level of the highway than the Act allowed. The jury having found for the plaintiff:—Held, that the injury, if arising from either cause alleged, was sustained "by reason of the railway:" that it was not a case within the exception as to "continuation of damage;" and that the action, having been brought more than six months from the accident, was therefore too late. The defendants had contracted with one P. to ballast their road, and the train in question was laden with ballast, under the charge of men employed and paid by him, the defendants having no control, except that by his contract he was bound to keep these trains from interfering with the or ring the bell on their approach, as required except that by his contract he was bound to keep these trains from interfering with the passage of their trains along the road:— Quære, whether this would have relieved defendants from liability for an accident caused by such train running over a waggon at a crossing. Browne v. Brockville and Ottawa R. W. Co., 20 U. C. R. 202.

 Neglect to Give—Reasonable Care.1 -The plaintiff, early in the morning, it not being quite daybreak and snowing a little, being dute daybreak and a pair of hob was driving a yoke of oxen and a pair of hob sleighs along the highway towards a railway crossing, sitting on the front bob, low down behind the oxen. The track crossed the highway at an acute angle, and was some seven feet above the highway, which was graded up to it. At the crossing there were some bushes which obstructed the view, but before reaching them there was a view of the track for some sixty or seventy rods, but not while in the hollow at the bottom of the grade and sitting as the plaintiff was. The plaintiff, without looking for the train, drove on to the track, and as he did so he saw a train approaching a few rods off, when he jumped to the off side and hit the off ox, causing it to spring aside and clear the track, but before he could get clear himself he was struck by the train jured. It was urged that the plaintiff by so doing voluntarily exposed himself to danger: but there was evidence to the contrary. defendants' engine had an automatic bell. witness stated that these bells do not always ring when the train is in motion. The engine driver stated that the bell was in good order when the engine left the last station, but he could not say whether or not it was ringing when the accident happened, while a number of witnesses stated that the bell was not then of wheneses sated that the ben was not their ringing. The jury found that the bell was not ringing; that it was not in good order; and that the plaintiff exercised reasonable care:—Held, that there was evidence for the jury; that it could not be said that the findings were not justified; and the court therefore refused to interfere. Wilton v. Northern Wilton v. Northern R. W. Co., 5 O. R. 490.

 Neglect to Give — Station Yard— Contributory Negligence.]—The servant of the plaintiff was in charge of an omnibus running to and from the station of the defendants' railway, and on the evening in question was attending at Georgetown station, at about ten feet from the track, but was unable to see along the railway in either direction by reason of houses intervening. By leaving the omnibus, however, and going to the track he could have seen an approaching train; but omitting to take this precaution, although aware that a freight train was then on the track near the crossing, he started off to cross it, and did not hear or see anything of the approaching train until within about four feet of him. when he was unable to avoid it, and the omnibus and harness were considerably damaged. It was not shewn that the driver of the train had given any warning of its approach by sounding the whistle or bell on its nearing the part of the track where it crossed the road the part of the fract where a crossed the road to the station. At the trial the plaintiff was nonsuited on the ground of the contributory negligence of the plaintiff's servant:—Held, that the question of contributory negligence had been improperly withdrawn from the jury, and that a new trial must be had in order to submit that question to them. Bennett v. submit that question to them. Benn Grand Trunk R. W. Co., 7 A. R. 470.

A mere track crossing, on a road or way on a railway company's own grounds for the convenience of passengers and others in going to and from the station on railway business, is not a public crossing, highway, or place, within C. S. C. c. 66, s. 104, so as to subject the company to the requirements of that section of ringing the bell or sounding the whistle when approaching such crossing: but, semble, apart from the statute, care must be taken in starting engines from the station. Bennett v. Grand Trunk R. W. Co., 3 O. R. 446. See the last case.

Neglect to Give—Station Yard.]—
The statutory obligation to ring the bell, or sound the whistle, applies only to a highway crossing, and not to an engine shunting on defendants' own premises. Casey v. Canadian Pacific R. W. Co., 15 O. R. 574.

"Train of Cars"—Unusual Danger—"Stop, Look, and Listen."]—A highway crossed the defendants' line at right angles; their passenger station lay adjacent to the highway on the east, and their shunting ground and yard adjacent to it on the west. The shunting yard was less than eighty rods in extent from the highway, and eight tracks crossed the highway with intervals of a few feet between them. The defendants in shunting a train of flat cars drew them from the east end to the west end of the yard, and after a pause backed them easterly. After backing for some distance the engine uncoupled from the train of cars, switched upon another track to the south, and the train and engine both continued to back down on different tracks to the highway, at a speed of about six miles an hour. At the time the plaintiff was proceeding along the highway from south to north, and was about to cross the tracks. The flat cars had reached highway and were passing over it. The plaintiff, while watching those in front of her, did not see or hear the engine coming down on the other track, and was struck by the tender and injured. There was no look-out man on the tender, and there was contradictory evidence as to the ringing of the bell at all, though at most it was not rung until the engine had run some distance towards the highway, and the whistle was not blown. The jury found that the accident was caused by the negligence of the defendants, and that the negligence consisted in not ringing the bell in time :-Held, that where the company are not able to comply with the terms of s. 256 of 51 Vict. c. 29 (D.) as to ringing a bell or sounding a whis-(D.) as to ringing a bell or soluting a wins-tle at least eighty rods from a crossing, be-cause the engine starts to cross within that distance, some other kind of precaution should be taken to warn the public of danger; and where, as in this case, the crossing is unusually dangerous, it is incumbent upon them to use even greater and other precautions than those required by the statute. Held, also, that an required by the statute. Heru, area, the engine with tender, moving reversely, is a "train of cars" within the meaning of s. 260, and some one should be stationed on the tender a warm nersons crossing the track. The rule and some one should be stationed on the tender to warn persons crossing the track. The rule "stop, look, and listen," as applied by the Pennsylvania State courts to persons about to cross a railway track, is not in force here, and is not one that should be adopted. The court of appeal was divided, and in the result the decision was affirmed. Hollinger v. Canadian Pacific R. W. Co., 21 O. R. 705, 20 A. R. 244.

Unusual Danger. |—B., in driving towards his home on a night in September, had to cross a railway track between nine and ten o'clock, on a level crossing near a station. Shortly before, a train had arrived from the west, which had to be turned for a trip back in the same direction, and also to pick up a passenger car on a siding. After some switching the train was made up, and just before coming to the level crossing the engine and tender were uncoupled from the cars to proceed to the round house. B. saw the engine pass, but apparently failed to perceive the cars, and started to cross, when he was struck by the latter and killed. There was no warning of the approach of the cars which struck him. The jury found that the railway company were guilty of negligence, and that a man should

(b) By Fright at Approach of Train.

Evidence of Negligence.]-Defendants were empowered by the corporation of the city were empowered by the corporation of the city of Hamilton to run their railway along Ferguson avenue in that city. The plaintiff, who was driving along Barton street, which crosses Ferguson avenue on a level, found a freight train across the street facing southward, and train across the street racing southward, and stopped his horse about 150 feet from it. Pre-sently a pilot engine came down to the head of the train to assist it up the grade to the south, but immediately upon its arrival it was found that firewood was required for its use, and the train at once moved to the north to allow the pilot engine to go to the woodshed, which was situated to the north of Barton The train had moved only to the other side of Barton street, about fifteen or twenty feet, when the plaintiff attempted to cross, but the horse shied at the pilot engine, which had remained stationary, and the plaintiff was thrown out and injured:—Held, that there was no evidence of negligence which should have been submitted to the jury, and a non-suit was ordered. Howe v. Hamilton and North-Western R. W. Co., 3 A. R. 336.

Silent Car-Proximate Cause-Contributory Negligence.]-The plaintiffs, husband and tors verligence. —The plaintills, husband and wife, such for damages for injuries sustained by the wife, charging the defendants with negligence in using their railway in shunting cars, &c., and in not notifying and protecting the public at crossings. The wife was being driven in a cutter by her son along a street which crossed three tracks of the defendants, and when the cutter was thirty feet many a and when the cutter was thirty feet away a silent car passed along one of the tracks. The son pulled the horse up suddenly, with the effect of throwing the mother out of the cutter and so producing the injury complained of. The jury found that the defendants were guilty of negligence, and that the son by his driving contributed to the accident: — Held. that, upon the evidence, the finding of contri-butory negligence could not be interfered with; and that the injury was too remote a consequence to be attributed to the negligence of the defendants. Atkinson v. Grand Trunk R. W. Co., 17 O. R. 220.

Warning of Approach-Necessity for-Siding. |-At a place which was not a station nor a highway crossing, the company had a siding for loading lumber delivered from a saw mill and piled upon a platform. The deceased was at the platform with a team for the purpose of taking away some lumber, when a train coming out of a cutting frightened the horses, which dragged the deceased to the main track, where he was killed by the train: Held, that there was no duty upon the com-pany to ring the bell or sound the whistle or to take special precautions in approaching or passing the siding. New Brunswick R. W. Co. v. Vanwart, 17 S. C. R. 35.

Neglect to Give.]—Held, affirming the judgments in 32 C. P. 349, 8 A. R. 482, that C. S. C. c. 66, s. 104, must be construed as enuring to the benefit of all persons who, using the highway which is crossed by a railway on the level, receive damage in their persons. son or their property from the neglect of the railway company's servants in charge of a railway companys servants train to ring a bell or sound a whistle, as they are directed to do by said statute, whether or such damage arises from actual collision, or as in this case by a horse being brought over near the crossing and taking fright at the appearance or noise of the train. The jury, in answer to the question, "If the plaintiffs had known that the train was coming, would they have stopped their horse further from the railway than they did?" said "Yes:"— Held, that, though this question was indefinite, the answers to the questions as a whole, viewed in connection with the Judge's charge and the evidence, warranted the verdict. Grand Trunk R. W. Co. v. Rosenberger, 9 S. C. R. 311.

Judgment in 19 O. R. 164, affirmed by the court of appeal, upon the ground that the defendants had omitted to comply with the statendants had omitted to comply with the sta-tutory requirements as to ringing the bell when approaching a railway crossing; Bur-ton, J.A., dissenting. Rosenberger v, Grand Trunk R, W. Co., S.A. R. 482, 9 S. C. R. 311, considered. Held, by the supreme court of Canada, affirming the judgment of the court of avocal burse sciling. of appeal, that a railway company has no authority to build its road so that part of its road-bed shall be some distance below the level of the highway, unless upon the express condi-tion that the highway shall be restored so as not to impair its usefulness, and the company so constructing its road and any other company operating it is liable for injuries resulting from the dangerous condition of the highway to persons lawfully using it. A company which has not complied with the statutory condition of ringing a bell when approaching a crossing is liable for injuries resulting from a horse taking fright at the approach of a train and throwing the occupants of the cartrain and throwing the occupants of the carriage over the dangerous part of the highway on to the track, though there was no contact between the engine and the carriage. Grand Trunk R. W. Co., v. Rosenberger, 9 S. C. R. 311, followed. Sibbald v. Grand Trunk R. W. Co., 18 A. R. 194, 20 S. C. R. 259.

Neglect to Give—Shunting,]—The statutory warning required to be given where a line of railway crosses a highway on the level is for the benefit, not only of persons, crossing the line of railway, but also of persons lawfully using the highway and approaching the line of railway, Where, therefore, owing to the failure of the defendants to give the statutory warning, or any equivalent warning, the plaintiff drove close to their line of railway and his horses were frightened by a passing engine and injury resulted, he was entitled to recover. Henderson v. Canada Atlantic R. W. Co., 25 A. R. 437. See the next case.

Section 256 of the Railway Act, 1888, providing that "the bell with which the engine is furnished shall be rung, or the whistle sounded at the distance of at least eighty rods from every place at which the railway crosses any highway, and be kept ringing or be sounded at short intervals until the engine has crossed such highway" applies to shunting and other temporary movements in connection with the running of trains as well as to the general traffle, Judgment in 25 A. R. 437 affirmed. Canada Allantic R. W. Co. v. Headerson, 29 S. C. R. 632.

(c) By Obstructions in the Highway.

Bridge—Approaches—Unlawful Incline.]
—A railway company, with the sanction of a township municipality, erected an overhead bridge across a highway, and afterwards, without the consent of the municipality, raised the same so as to cause the approaches there to to be at a greater incline than prescribed by the Railway Act, 1888, 51 Vet. c. 29 (D.) An accumulation of snow resulted from this, against which the plaintiff's cutter was upset, and she sustained injuries for which she brought this action:—Held, that the accumulation of snow amounted to a want of repair under s. 331 of the Municipal Act, 55 Vict. c. 42 (O.), for which the municipality was also liable for a misfeasance in raising the bridge and approaches so as to be at a greater incline than prescribed by s. 186 of the Railway Act, 1888, thus causing the obstruction by means of which the accident happened. Fairbanks v. Township of Yarmouth, 24 A. R. 273.

Culvert.)—The railway crossed a highway, and in the line of the dirch formerly running at the side of the highway, and several feet within the limits of the highway, the railway company constructed an open culvert of square timber about five feet deep and seven feet wide. The plaintiff, walking along the road and crossing the railway, fell into this culvert and was injured: — Held, that the company were liable. Quere, whether the corporation were bound to repair this part of the highway; but held, that if so, that would not relieve the defendants. Fairbanks v. Great Western R. W. Co., 35 U. C. R. 523.

Track.)—The plaintiff fell while attempting to cross a railway track which was lawfully, and without negligence or undue delay, being built across a street in a city:—Held, that neither the railway company nor the city was responsible in damages. Keachie v. Toronto. 22 A. R. 371, followed. Judgment in 28 O. R. 229 reversed. Atkin v. City of Hamilton, 24 A. R. 389.

2. At Stations.

Negligence—Indirect Way.]—A railway company are not bound to maintain any but the usual and direct road for access and egress to and from their station; and a passenger, taking an indirect road not appropriated to the purposes of a footway, cannot hold the company responsible for damage or accident thereby. Walker v. Great Western R. W. Co., S. C. P. 161.

Invitation—Way.]—The approach to a station of the Grand Trunk Railway from the highway was by a planked walk crossing several tracks, and a train stopping at the station sometimes overlapped this walk, making it necessary to pass around the rear car to reach the platform. J., intending to take a train at this station before daylight, went along the walk as his train was coming in, and seeing, apparently, that it would overlap, started to go around the rear, when he was struck by a shunting engine and killed. It was the duty of this shunting engine to assist in moving the train on a ferry, and it came down the adjoining track for that purpose before the train had stopped. Its headlight was burning brightly, and the bell was kept ringing. There was room between the training the station, and also to use the company in the company:—Held, that the company had neglected no duty which they owed to the deceased as one of the public. While the public were invited to use the plank walk to reach the station, and also to use the company's premises, when necessary, to pass around a train covering the walk, there was no implied representation that the traffic of the road should not proceed in the ordinary way, and the company were under no obligation to provide special safeguards for persons attempting to pass around a train in motion. The decision in 16 A. R. 37 affirmed. Jones v. Grand Trunk R. W. Co., 18 S. C. R. 639.

Postal Cax—Bare Licensec—Negligence.]
—The plaintiff in attempting to post a letter on a train which had just commenced to move out of a station, and to which was attached a postal car with an opening in the door for posting letters provided by direction of the post office department for the use of the public, while following the car tripped and fell and was injured, as was alleged, on a stake some inches out of the ground, which had been planted by the defendants for the furtherance of alterations being made in the station:—Heid, that the plaintiff was a bare licensee upon the premises of the defendants, who under the circumstances were not liable to him. 3. By Collision between Trains.

Cause of Action—Fright—Pleading.]—Declaration, that the plaintiff, being pregnant, at the request of defendants became a passenger in one of their carriages to be safely conveyed by them for reward; yet the defendants so negligently conducted themselves that a collision took place with another train, by means whereof the carriage in which the plaintiff was was broken, &c., and thereby the plaintiff was much alarmed, whereby she became sick and disordered, and thereby also, by reason of the alarm so occasioned to her, and of such sickness caused thereby, she had a premature labour, and bore a still-born child—Held, on demurrer, that a sufficient cause of action was disclosed. Fitzpatrick v. Great Western R. W. Co., 12 U. C. R. 645.

Contributory Negligence-Passenger-Place for. |—The plaintiff, travelling in defendants' train on a passenger ticket, went into the express company's compartment of a car, of which the two other compartments were for the post office and the baggage. While there, owing to the negligence of defendants' servants, the train, which was stationary, was run into it by another coming up behind it, and the plaintiff's arm was broken. The compartment in which he was was not intended for passengers, but they frequently went in there to smoke, and the conductor had twice passed through it while the plaintiff was there without making any objection. No person in the passenger car was seriously injured. It was proved that notice that passengers were not allowed to ride upon the baggage car was usually put up on the inside of each door of the passenger cars and on the door of the buggage car, but it was not distinctly shewn that it was there on that day. The jury found that the plaintiff was wrongfully in the car, but that he was not told where to go when he bought his ticket, nor did the conductor order him out; and so that he was not to blame:—Held, that, assuming the plaintiff was aware of the notices, and nevertheless went into the baggage car, the defendants were not thereby excused under all circumstances; and that the jury were warranted here in finding that the plaintiff did not so contribute as to prevent him from recovering, the collision having resulted entirely from defendants' gross negligence. Held, also, that s. 107 of the Railway Act. C. S. C. c. 66, did not apply. Watson v. Northern R. W. Co., 24 U. C. R. 98.

The plaintiff was going from I, to M, by train in charge of cattle. At T, the train on which he had come from I, was partly broken up, to be remade with some cars which were standing on another track. While there the plaintiff, unknown to the defendants, went into the caboose at the end of the cars which were to be added to the cars from I, and when the connection was about to be made, deliberately stood up, and was washing his hands, when the shock of the connection caused the injury for damages for which this action was brought:—Held, that there was no evidence of negligence on defendants' part; and the mere fact of the accident happening to the plaintiff was not in itself sufficient evidence of negligence. Held, also, that there was evidence of contributory negligence, in that the plaintiff knew that he was in a freight train, where there would not be so much care shewn, and yet stood up, instead of sitting down, as he might have done, while the connection was being made, especially as he entered the caboose before the train was made up, and had no reason to think that the defendants knew that he was there. Hutchinson v. Canadian Pacific R. W. Co., 17 O. R. 347. V. Canadian Pacific R. W. Co., 17 O. R. 347.

Negligence—Defect in Brakes—Contribu-tory Negligence, 1 — The Grand Trunk Rail-way crosses the Great Western Railway about a mile east of the city of Lon-don, on a level crossing. On 19th June, 1876, a Grand Trunk train, on which plaintiff was on board as a conductor, before crossing, was brought to a stand. The signal man, who was in charge of the crossing and in the employment of the Great Western Railway Compoyment or the Great Western Kanway Com-pany, dropped the semaphore, and thus auth-orized the Grand Trunk train to proceed, which it did. While crossing the track, a Great Western train, which had not been stop-ped, owing to the accidental bursting of a tube in air-brakes, ran into the Grand Trunk train and injured plaintiff. It was shewn that these air-brakes were the best known appliances for stopping trains, and that they had been tested during the day, but that they were not applied at a sufficient distance from the crossing to enable the train to be stopped by the hand-brakes, in case of the air-brakes giving way. C. S. C. c. 66, s. 142, enacts that "every railway company shall station an officer at every point on their line crossed on the level by any other railway, and no train shall proceed over such crossing until signal has been is clear." Section 143 enacts that "every locomotive or train of made to the conductor thereof, that the way is clear." Section 143 enacts that "every locomotive or train of ears on any railway shall, before crossing the track of any other railway on a level, be stopped for at least the space of three minutes:"—Held, that the Great Western Railway Company were guilty of negligence in not applying the air-brakes at a sufficient distance from the crossing to enable the train to be stopped by hand-brakes in case of the air-brakes giving way. That there was no evidence of contributory negligence on the part of the Grand Trunk Railway Company, as they had brought their train to a full stop, and only proceeded to cross the Great Western track when authorized to do so by the officer in charge of the semaphore, who was a servant of the Great Western Railway Company. Great Western R. W. Co. v. Brown, 3 S. C. R. 159. Affirming S. C., 2 A. R. 64, 40 U. C. R. 333.

Cause.] — Disregard of Rules — Praginate Cause.] — Defendants' railway crossed the track of another railway on the level, and both were bound by statute to stop at least a minute before crossing, but neither did so. Defendants' line was signalled as clear, and their train, in which the plaintiff was a passenger, went on without stopping. The other line was signalled as not clear, but the train on it ran on, disregarding this signal, and struck defendants' train at the crossing, whereby plaintiff was injured. If either train had pulled up about two seconds sooner the collision would have been avoided:—Held, that defendants were liable to the plaintiff, for that their neglect to stop for the required time was, so far as the plaintiff was concerned, a part of the cause of his injury and sufficiently proximate. Quaere, as to the liability as between the two companies. Graham v. Great Western R. W. Co., 41 U. C. R. 324.

4. Damages.

Excessive Damages. —Action on the case for negligence in carrying plaintiff, whereby he sustained serious bodily injury. Defendants withdrew their plea of not guilty, and the jury assessed damages at £6,178. Upon motion for a new trial for excessive damages, the court, on the ground that the jury had not exercised a sound discretion, made the rule absolute on payment of costs, and on payment of £500 into court, with leave to plaintiff to accept without prejudice. Batchelor v. Buffulo and Brantford R. W. Co., 5 C. P. 127, 470.

New trial granted, where the jury gave £5,000, to be distributed, £500 to the widow, and the rest in unequal sums among five infant children, the deceased having been a blacksmith, 55 years of age, the patentee of an invention for an improved plough, and of careful, industrious habits, &c. Morley v. Great Western R. W. Co., 16 U. C. R. 504.

In actions under 10 & 11 Vict. c. 6 (C. S. C. c. 78), the court will interfere if the damages are clearly excessive. But it was held, under the circumstances of this case, that £3,000 was not exorbitant for the widow and three children of deceased. Semble, that the mother in this case could have no claim. Secord v. Great Western R. W. Co., 15 U. C. R. 631.

The court, thinking that the damages awarded by the jury in an action for causing death were excessive, ordered that there should be a new trial unless the plaintiffs accepted a reduced amount. Curran v. Grand Trunk R. W. Co., 25 A. R. 407.

The court, being of opinion that damages of $3,000 allowed by the jury were excessive, ordered that there should be a new trial unless the plaintiff should consent to accept $4,500. Collier v. Michigan Central R. W. Co., 27 A. R. 630.

Right to Damages—Death of Child— Expectation of Benefit)—In an action by a parent to recover damages for the death of his child, there need not be evidence of pecuniary advantage derived from the deceased: it is sufficient if there is evidence to justify the conclusion that there is a reasonable expectation of pecuniary benefit to the parent in the future, capable of being estimated. Rombough v. Balch, Green v. New York and Ottavea R. W. Co., 27 A. R. 32.

5. Derailment of Train.

Cause—Breaking of Axle—Precautions.]—Plaintiff being a passenger in one of defendants' cars, the axle of the tender broke, and the tender and car in which plaintiff was were thrown off the track, whereby plaintiffs arm was broken. At the trial defendants called the engineer of the train, who proved that he examined the axle shortly before the accident, when it appeared all right. The jury having found for the plaintiff upon this evidence, and with a charge favourable to defendants, the court refused to set the verdict aside. Thatcher v. Great Western R. W. Co., 4 C. P. 543.

due to the severity of the climate and the suddenly great variation of the degrees of temperature, and not to any want of care or skill upon the part of the railway company in the selecting, testing, laying, and use of such rail, the company are not liable in damages to a passenger injured by the derailment of a train through the breaking of such rail. Canadian Pacific R. W. Co. v. Chalifoux, 22 S. C. R. 721.

Excessive Speed—Negligence—Government Italians, —It is not negligence per se for the eight driver or conductor of a train to exceed the rate of speed prescribed by the time-table of the railway. If the time-table init of safety at any given point would be negligence to exceed it; but, aliter, if it is fixed from considerations of convenience and not with reference to what is safe or prudent. Semble, that the obligation of the company is to carry their passengers with reasonable care for their safety; and the company are responsible only for accidents arising from negligence. Colpitts v. The Queen, 6 Ex. C. R. 254.

See Dubé v. The Queen, 3 Ex. C. R. 147.

6. Fire in Train.

Negligence - Contributory Negligence-Nonsuit.]—The plaintiff was a passenger in defendants' train when he heard a lamp drop in the water closet at the front end of the car, and going forward with others saw a light in the closet and some one trying to put out the fire. The fire broke out, and he tried to pull the bell-rope, but found it would not work, and he then ran into the next car in front, the smoking-car, to pull the rope. The conductor had run forward, and the plaintiff supposing, as he said, that something had been done to stop the train, and thinking of his valise, and that there was danger of the car being burned, went back into the burning car and got it, and tried to return, but the fire broke out fiercely across the passage and prevented him. He was then driven to the rear end of the car, where the other passengers were crowding, and was seriously burned before the train stopped. The other passengers who went with him into the smoking car remained there, and it was not burned. Defendants gave evidence to shew that the lamp was of the best construction and well secured, and the best construction and well secured, and that the oil was of the best kind, such as would not explode or take fire from the lamp falling. The jury having found for the plain-tiff:—Held, that there was some evidence from which the jury might infer that the lamp was not properly secured, and that the fire was occasioned by its fall in consequence; and that the omission to have a bell-rope, as remar the omission to nave a bell-rope, as re-naired by the statute, was negligence on de-fendants' part. But, upon the evidence, the damage to the plaintiff was caused, not by defendants' negligence, but by his own volun-tary act in returning to the car. A nonsuit was therefore ordered. Hap v. Great Western R. W. Co., 37 U. C. R. 456.

7. Getting on and off Train.

Government Railway.]—See Martin v. The Queen, 2 Ex. C. R. 328, 20 S. C. R. 240.

Moving Train—Invitation to Alight.]—
The plaintiffs, husband and wife, were on a train of defendants, going to Lefrey. The conductor, before reaching the station, announced that the next station was Lefrey. On approaching the station the train, according to the plaintiffs witnesses, was slowed, but did not stop. The husband got off while the train was moving slowly, and his wife, seeing that the speed was increasing, and that they were passing the station, sprang after him, though he had let go of her hand, and told her not to jump, and was injured. It was left to the jury to say whether she had acted imprudently in so doing, and they found a verdict for the plaintiffs:—Held, affirming the judgment in 4 O. R. 201, that there was evidence of an invitation to alight, and that it was for the jury to say whether she had acted in a reasonably prudent and careful manner in availing herself of it. Edgar v. Northern R. W. Co., 11 A. R. 452.

Invitation to Enter—Jury.]—The plaintiff, who was a passenger on the train of the defendants, alighted at a station, and the train having started before he had re-entered a station and the station for the station for the station for damages for negligence. There was evidence of an invitation by the conductor of the train to jump on while it was in motion, and the jury found (1) that there was such invitation. They also found (2) that the plaintiff used a reasonable degree of care in endeavouring to get on; and (3) that he was injured while trying to get on, in pursuance of the request of the conductor. It was argued by the defendants that the danger to the plaintiff was so patent and obvious that he had no right to act on the conductor's invitation, or to attempt to get on the train:—Held, that this was a matter which should have been submitted to the jury, and that it was not covered by the second finding; that the questions involved in the action could not be determined on the findings; and that there should be a new trial. Carry v. Canadian Pacific R. W. Co., 170, R. 65.

Negligence—Contributory Negligence.]—The plaintiff, an intending passenger by a way train on the defendants' railway, arrived at the station just as the train, which was some minutes late, was moving out of the station, whereupon he ran quickly to the train, and seizing the iron railing of one of the cars, and holding thereon, ran along the platform at the speed of the train with his face towards the car, and, after the train had moved a certain distance, in attempting to jump thereon, he struck a baggage truck which was close to the edge of the platform, and which had been used in taking baggage to the baggage are not only to be one of the platform, and which had been used in taking baggage to the baggage are not only to one of his legs which rendered an amputation necessary:—Held, that the leaving of the truck on the platform did not constitute negligence on the part of the defendants; but, even if it did, the plaintiff, in attempting to get on the train as he did, was guilty of such contributory negligence as would prevent his recovering. Haldan v. Great Western R. W. Co., 30 C. P. So.

L. was the holder of a ticket and a passenger on the company's train from Levis to Ste. Marie, Beauce. When the train arrived at Ste. Marie station, the car upon which L. had been travelling was some distance from the station platform, the train being longer than the platform, and L., fearing that the car would not be brought up to the station, the time for stopping having nearly elapsed, got out at the end of the car, and, the distance to the ground from the steps being about two feet and a half, in so doing fell and broke his leg, which had to be amputated. The action was for S5.000 damages, alleging negligence and want of proper accommodation. The defence was contributory negligence:—Held, that, in the exercise of ordinary care. L. could have safely gained the platform by passing through the car forward, and that the accident was wholly attributable to his own default in alighting as he did, and therefore he could not recover. Quebe Central R. W. Co. v. Lordi, 22 S. C. R. 333.

and Satisfaction.]—See Haist v, Grand Trunk R. W. Co., 26 O. R. 19, 22 A. R. 504.

Intoxication of Passenger.]—Deceased was a passenger in defendants' railway for W. station, and was, as the conductor said, "pretry drunk" when he got on the train. He went out of the car door at that station, and next morning was found about 100 yards beyond it, about four feet from the rail, with his less cut through at the knee joints, and his left foot crushed, of which injuries he died that afternoon. There was contradictory evidence as to whether the train stopped long enough at the station, for which there was only two passengers, to enable persors to alight; but the other passenger said he got off leisurely, and the person to whom deceased had been talking on the car said he thought deceased had left the train, and that he told the conductor so after the train started. The conductor and baggage master also got off there to see the station master, and returned to the car. There was no further proof of the manner in which deceased met with the accident:—Held, that there was no evidence of negligence on defendants' part to go to the jury, and a nonsuit was ordered. Giles v. Great Western R. W. Co., 36 U. C. R. 300.

8. Lord Campbell's Act.

Time Limit.]—The widow and child of a person killed in consequence of the defendants' negligence may, when letters of administration to his estate have not been issued, bring an action under R. S. O. 1807 c. 160, without waiting six months. Curran v. Grand Trank R. W. Co., 25 A. R. 407.

Widow's Right under — Renunciation by Deceased.]—Art, 1056, C. C., embodies the action previously given by a statute of the Province of Canada re-enacting Lord Cambell's Act, Robinson v. Canadian Pacific R. W. Co., [1892] A. C. 481, distinguished. An employee on the Intercolonial Railway became a member of the Intercolonial Railway Relief and Assurance Association, to the funds of which the government contributed annually 86,000. In consequence of such contribution a rule of the association provided that the members renounced all claims against the Crown arising from injury or death in the course of their employment. The employee having been killed in discharge of his duty by negligence of a fellow servant:—

Held, reversing the judgment in 6 Ex. C. R. 276, that the rule of the association was an answer to an action by his widow under art. 1656, C. C., to recover compensation for his death. The Queen v. Grenier, 30 S. C. R. 42.

9. On Railway Lines or Tracks.

Licensee — Contributory Negligence — Backing Train—Station.] — The defendants' station at A. was on what was known as the side track, between which and the main track there was a centre platform for passengers alighting from and getting on to trains on the main track. The plaintiff had come to the sta-tion to meet a friend, and was attempting to cross over the side track to reach the centre platform, when the engine and tender, which had been detached from the rest of the train and switched on to the side track, and were backing down to pick up a car some fifty yards distant, ran over and injured him. The plaintiff was looking in the opposite direction from that from which the engine and tender were coming, and therefore did not see them; and it appeared that had he been looking out he must have seen them before he attempted to cross, and so could have avoided the accident, cross, and so could have avoided the accident, as it was only a second or two from the time he started to cross until he was struck, and there was no obstruction to his view. In an action for damages the jury having disagreed:
—Held, that the plaintiff's evidence having shewn that the accident was caused by his own negligence and want of care, the defen-dants were not liable; and judgment was or-dered to be entered for them. Quere, whether an engine and tender constitute a train within s. 52 of R. S. C. c. 109, so as to require a man to be stationed on the rear thereof to warn persons of their approach; but, in any event, there was a man so stationed who did give warning. Casey v. Canadian Pacific R. W. Co., 15 O. R. 754,

Passenger Leaving Train—Invitation to Use Track.]—A passenger aboard a railway train, storm-bound at a place called Lucan Crossing, on the Grand Trunk railway, left the train and attempted to walk through the storm to his home a few miles distant. Whilst proceeding along the line of the railway, in the direction of an adjacent public highway, he was struck by an engine and killed. There was no depot or agent maintained by the company at Lucan Crossing, but a room in a small building there was used as a waiting sman bulling there was used as a watting room, passenger tickets were sold and fares charged to and from this point, and, for a number of years, travellers had been allowed to make use of the permanent way in order to reach the nearest highways, there being no other passage way provided. In an action by his administrators for damages:—Held, that, notwithstanding the long user of the permanent way in passing to and from the highways by passengers taking and leaving the company's trains, the deceased could not, under the circumstances, be said to have been there by the invitation or license of the company at the time he was killed, and that the action would not lie. Judgments in 27 O. R. 441 and 24 A. R. 672 reversed. Grand Trunk R. W. Co. v. Anderson, 28 S. C. R. 541.

10. Packing Railway Frogs.

Dominion Railway — Application of Procencial Statute.] — The plaintiff, a workman employed by the Grand Trunk R. W. Co., was injured while in discharge of his duties, by reason of his foot having been caught in one of the frogs of the rails, which was not packed in the manner prescribed by 44 Vict. c. 22 (O.):—Held, that the Grand Trunk Railway, being a Dominion railway, and within s. 92, cl. 10 (a), of the B. N. A. Act, was not affected by the statute, which professed only to apply to railway companies in respect of which the provincial legislature had authority to enact such provisions: and, therefore, that the defendants were not liable. Monkhouse v. Grand Trunk R. W. Co., S. A. R. 637.

Application of Provincial Statute—Connecting Railway — Notice of Defect,]—Action by plaintiff, as administrator of C., for damages, under 44 Vict. c. 22 (O.), by reason of the omission to pack a frog on the Mediand Railway, which the defendants were operating, whereby C.'s foot was caught in the frog and he was killed by a train:—Held, that defendants were not liable; that the Midland Railway was a railway connecting with or crossing the defendants railway, and under 46 Vict. c. 24 (D.) was exempt from the operation of the Ontario Act. Held, that the omission to state in the statement of claim, as required by s.-s. 2 of s. S of 44 Vict. c. 22 (O.), and to prove, that the defendants knew that the frog was not packed, or that the deceased did not know it, or that he had notified the defendants or any person superior to himself in the service of the defendants, or that such person was not aware thereof, would preclude any recovery. Clegg v. Grank Trank R. W. Co., 10 O. R. 708.

Duty of Company — Keeping Filled.] — The duty of a rallway company under s.s. 3 of s. 202, 51 Vict. c. 29 (D.), is not only to fill with packing the spaces behind and in front of every rallway frog, but continuously to keep the same filled. Misener v. Michigan Central R. W. Co., 24 O. R. 411.

Servant of Company—Person Injured—
Molece of Defect—Contributory Negligence.]
—Section 2022, s.s. 3, of 51 Vict. c. 29 (D.), provides that "the spaces behind and in front of every railway frego or crossing, and between the fixed rails of every switch, where such spaces are less than five inches in width, shall be filled with packing up to the under side of the lead of the rail," and s. 289 of the same Act provides that "every company, causing or permitting to be done any matter, act, or thing contrary to the provisions of this Act or the special Act. or omitting to do any matter, act, or thing required to be done on the part of any such company, is liable to any person injured thereby for the full amount of damages sustained by such act or omission," &c. The plaintiff, who had been for some months employed at the piace where the accident happened, as a switch foreman, while in the course of his duty in the act of uncoupling cars, had his foot caught in an unpacked frog, where it was crushed by the wheels of the cars:—Held, that, although he was a servant of the defendants, he was a "person injured" within the meaning of the statute, and entitled to maintain an action for useligence. The jury, having found that the frog was not packed, in reply to a question whether the plaintiff had "notice or knowledge or ought to have had notice or knowledge, that the frog was not packed," answered: "We believe he did not have notice, and should have had notice." And in answer to another question they negatived contributory negligence on the plaintiff spart:—Held, that, even assuming that the meaning of the answer was to impute notice of the danger to the plaintiff, it would not prevent his recovering so long as he himself was not negligent, there being no finding or evidence to sustain a finding that the plaintif, freely and voluntarily, with full knowledge of the nature and extent of the risk he ran, impliedly agreed to incur it. $Le Mag \vee Canadian Pacific R.W. Co., 18 O. R. 314, 17 A. R. 239.$

11. Running Reversely.

Contributory Negligence — Voluntary Act—Look-out Man—Dangerous Place.]—Defendants, under the authority of 12 Vict. c. 196, and 16 Vict. c. 51, had constructed a wharf at Collingwood, and laid three tracks thereon for the purposes of their business. The wharf was much frequented, and the only means of access to vessels lying ut it. The means of access to vessels lying at it. The tracks were so close together that it was difficult to distinguish between the tracks and the spaces between them. No portion of the spaces between them. No portion of the wharf was fenced off for foot passengers, nor was there any railing to prevent them from falling into the water, and they had either to walk upon the tracks or spaces between them. A woman carrying the dinner of her husband, who was working at a vessel, was walking down the wharf on the outside of the western track, and on meeting some men coming up, she, apparently to avoid them, stepped across on to the centre track, not observing a gravel train backing down along it. Just as the train was upon her, one of these men, ob-serving her danger, jumped on to the track and pushed her off, but for some reason hesitating for a moment was himself struck by the train and killed. It appeared that there was no look-out man on the last car, and the evidence was contradictory as to whether the defendants were going more than six miles an hour, and whether the whistle was sounded or the bell rung. In an action by the administratrix of the deceased the jury found that de-fendants were guilty of negligence, and that neither the woman nor the deceased was guilty of contributory negligence, and that she would have been killed had not deceased pushed her which was the only means of saving her: -Held, that the administratrix could not recover, for the deceased was guilty of contributory negligence, his own direct and wilful act, however praiseworthy, being the cause of the accident. Anderson v. Northern R. W. Co., 25 C. P. 301.

Look-out Man—Station Yard.)—Semble, that s. 145 of C. S. C. c. 68; requiring a person to be stationed on the last car in the train, applies to the station grounds of rail-way companies in cities, towns, and villages, as well as to the limits outside of such station grounds. Bennett v. Grand Trunk R. W. Co., 3 O. R. 446.

Position of.]—The defendants were required by law to station a man on the last car of every train moving reversely in any town, to warn persons standing on or crossing the track of the approach of the train:—Held, that the defendants did not comply with this direction by having a man at the front end of the last car, where he could not see persons crossing the tracks. In this case there was no brake at the rear end of the last car. The brakesman on the last car, seeing the track clear a few minutes before the accident, went to the front end, and the plaintiff then attempting to cross, was injured:—Held, evidence of negligence to go to the jury. Levoy v. Midland R. W. Co., 3 O. R. C23.

Warning of Approach — Crossing — Dangerous Place.] — Where the train was backing at the time the accident happened, the jury were rightly directed that defoundable bell, when the nearest part of the train was eighty rods from the crossing; and having regard to the fact that they had without authority increased the number of tracks there, it was also right to tell them that it was for them to say whether, considering the nature of the crossing, they should not have stationed a man there, or taken some other than the statutory precautions. Lett. v. 8t. Lauernec and Ottava R. W. Co., Hinton v. 8t. Lauernec and Ottava R. W. Co., Hinton v. 8t. Lauernece and Ottava R. W. Co., 10. R. 545.

12. Servants and Workmen.

(See, also, ante 10; post XVIII.)

(a) Carriage of Contractors' Workmen.

Negligence — Collision — Pleading.] — Declaration, that the plaintiff was a servant in the employment of one K., a contractor with defendants for keeping their road in repair: that in performing said repairs certain carriages and engines, under the management of defendants' servants, were used to transport materials and convey workmen employed by K.: that the plaintiff, being one of such workmen, became a passenger in one of these carriages to be carried from his place of work to his residence; that it was defendants' duty to use proper care in the management of said train, but by their negligence it came into collision with another train, whereby the plaintiff was injured: — Held, sufficient to shew defendants' liable. Torpn v. Grand Trank R. W. Co., 20 U. C. R. 446.

Contract—Agent Exceeding Authorfor).—Defendants agreed, with a contractor for the construction of their railway, to furnish a construction train to be used in carrying materials for ballasting and laying the track of a portion of their road then under construction: the defendants to provide the conductor, engine driver, and fireman; the contractor furnishing the brakesme. After work was over for the day, and the train was returning to Owen Sound, where the plaintiff, one of the contractor's workmen, lived, the plaintiff, with the permission of the conductor, but without authority of defendants, got on the train. Through the negligence of the person in charge of the train an accident hapended and the plaintiff was injured:—Held, that the defendants were not liable, for their contract was to carry materials only, not contract was to carry materials only, not acting as defendants' agent. Graham v.
Toronto, Grey, and Bruce R. W. Co., 23 C.
P. 541.

Right to be on Train-Pleading.]-Declaration, that I. S. (husband of the plaintift; was a servant and workman employed tiff) was a servant and workman employed by certain contractors with defendants in ballasting defendants' railway, and in per-forming such work certain cars and engines, under the guidance and management of defendants' servants, were used for the transport of materials and the conveyance of workmen em-ployed by the contractors, said workmen not ployed by the contractors, said workmen not being servants of the defendants, to and from their residence and their work, for reward to defendants; and that I. S. in his lifeting, being such workman, became a passenger on a car drawn on said railway by a locomotive under the defendants' management, to be carunder the derendants management, to be car-ried from his place of work home, and as such workman and passenger was then law-fully in and on said car, yet the defendants so negligently managed the train, &c., that I. S. negigently managed the train, &c., that I. S. was injured thereby, and by reason thereof died. Pleas, (1) "not guilty," by statute: 2. that the train was not used for conveyance of said workmen for reward to the defendants as alleged, and I. S. was not lawfully on said train. The words "for reward to defendants "having been struck out of the declarants" having been struck out of the declarants. tion at the trial, the defendants demurred to the declaration, and the plaintiff demurred to the second plea:—Held, declaration good, for it shewed that the train, under the management of the defendants, was for the purpose of carrying materials and the contractors' workmen, and alleged that I. S. was lawfully thereon, and a sufficient consideration, if any thereon, and a suncient consideration, it and were necessary to be averred, was shewn. At the trial the evidence shewed that defen-dants were only bound by their contract with the contractors to provide an engine and plat-form cars for carrying ballasting and materials for track-laying, to be under the charge of their own conductor, engine driver, and fireman, the contractors to find the brakesmen; and that it was not necessary for defendants to carry the workmen. There was no evidence that defendants consented to the use of the cars by the men, further than that the conductor and engine driver permitted it:—Held, that I. S. was not lawfully on the cars with the consent of the defendants, and a nonsuit was directed. Semble, that the deceased could not have been entitled. not have been considered a fellow servant with those employed by the defendants. Sheerman v. Toronto, Grey, and Bruce R. W. Co., 34 U. C. (b) Injury to Servants by Negligence of Fellow Servants.

At Common Law.]—Action for the death of one D., an engine driver in defendants' employment, alleging that they negligently employed one R., an incompetent person, as switchman, and that by his incompetency the collision occurred. It appeared that R. neglected to raise the semaphore at the east end of the Stratford station, so as to prevent D.'s train going west from entering the yard while a freight train was coming from the west, and this caused the accident. According to the testimony on both sides, R. was an intelligent man, employed at work which one witness said could be learned in a day, another in two or three weeks, and after being a week about the yard he had performed this

A verdiet having been found for the plaintiff:—Held, that there was no evidence to go to the jury that defendants negligently employed an incompetent person; that for R.'s neglect, he being D.'s fellow-servant, the plaintiff clearly could not recover; and a nousuit was ordered. Increrill v, Grand Trunk R. W. Co., 25 U. C. R. 517.

Plaintiff as administratrix sued defendants for the death of her husband, caused by a rail-way accident. It appeared that deceased, with three others and a foreman, were employed with a hand car in clearing snow from The forethe track near Limehouse station. man saw a freight train approaching at speed a quarter of a mile off, upon which he left the men, telling them "to clear," and walked towards it waving a flag. Two of the men stepped aside when it came up, but deceased and the other man ran in front of it along the track, until it drove the hand car against and killed them both:—Held, clearly a case of contributory negligence on the part of deceased; and a nonsuit was ordered. of the brakesmen on the train swore that the brakes were defective, and that the train could not therefore be stopped in obedience to the proper signal, which was up. It appeared, however, that the defects mentioned by him could have been removed by tightening a bolt or shortening a rod, which any one em-ployed by defendants could have done in a few minutes; and other witnesses swore that with the brakes as they were after the accident the train could have been stopped; that it came up at a speed shewing no intention to stop at all, and with the engine reversed ran a quarter of a mile past the station; and that at the next station, on the same grade, and with the same brakes, it was stopped without diffi-culty: — Held, that these facts conclusively shewed the negligence not to have been that of defendants, but of their servants engaged in a common employment with deceased, and for which therefore defendants were not re-Plant v. Grand Trunk R. W. Co., 27 U. C. R. 78.

Under Workmen's Compensation for Injuries Act. |-B., the plaintiff's son, was ployed as fireman on a locomotive engine which was in charge of a driver named R., B. being under his orders. B. was severely scald-ed by the bursting of the boiler, from which death resulted. The accident was apparently caused by the sudden influx of cold water into the boiler, which had been allowed to run too low. There was no evidence to shew to whom the negligence was attributable; but it was proved that, though the company held the driver responsible as regards the engine, it was the duty of the fireman, for which he also was responsible to the company, to attend to the supply of water, which was part of his education to fit him for the superior position of driver, and that from his position he had greater facilities for opening the valve than those possessed by the driver; and from a re-port put in by one of the defendants' officials, it appeared that B. had charge of the water at the time of the accident. In an action against defendants for damages under the Workmen' Compensation for Injuries Act, 49 Vict. c. 28, s. 3. s. s. 5 (O.) :—Held, that the defendants were not liable. Brunnel v. Canadian Pacific R. W. Co., 15 O. R. 375.

R. W. Co., was obliged in the ordinary dis-Vol. III. D-187-38 charge of his duty to cross a track in the station yard to get to a switch, and he walked along the ends of the ties which projected some sixteen inches beyond the rails. doing so an engine came behind him and knocked him down with his arm under the wheels, and it was cut off near the shoulder. On the trial of an action against the company in consequence of such injury the jury found that there was negligence in the management of the engine in not ringing the bell and in going faster than the law allowed. They also found that J. could not have avoided the accident by the exercise of reasonable care:— Held, that the Workmen's Compensation for Injuries Act of Ontario, 49 Vict. c. 28, applies the Canada Southern Railway, notwithstanding it has been brought under the operation of the Railway Act of the Dominion. Held, also, that there was no such negligence on J.'s part as would relieve the company from liability for the injury caused by proper conduct of their servants; and the judgment of the court below sustaining a verdict for the plaintiff was right. Canada Southern R. W. Co. v. Jackson, 17 S. C. R.

Action under the Workmen's Compensation for Injuries Act against a railway company by the deceased's administratrix for damages sustained through deceased's death while engaged, as alleged, in coupling the defendants' cars, caused, as alleged, by his being struck by the overlopping lumber on a lumber car, through the absence of stakes in the sockets thereof. There was no direct evidence to shew how the accident happened, it being merely a matter of conjecture :- Held, that the action was not maintainable. The plaintiff was paid a sum of $250 by a benefit insurance society in connection with the railway, though a distinct organization, of which the deceased was a member. The plaintiff gave a receipt stating that the railway company was relieved from all liability. The deceased's certificate did not profess to be an insurance against accidents, and the railway company were no party to the receipt :--Held, that the receipt formed no bar to the action against the defendants; nor was there any right to deduct the amount received from the benefit society from the sum the plaintiff was entitled to as damages. Hicks v. New-port, &c., R. W. Co., 4 B. & S. 403 note, dis-tinguished. Farmer v. Grand Trunk R. W. Co., 21 O. R. 299.

W. was an employee of the railway company whose duty it was to couple cars in their Toronto yard. In performing this duty on one occasion, under specific directions from the conductor of an engine attached to one of the cars being coupled, his hand was crushed owing to the engine backing down and bringing the cars together before the coupling was made. On the trial of an action for damages resulting from such injury the conductor denied having given directions for the coupling, and it was contended that W. improperly put his hand between the draw bars to lift out the coupling pin. It was also contended that the conductor had no authority to give directions as to the mode of doing the work. The jury found against both contentions, and W. obtained a verdict, which was twice affirmed, 23 O. R. 436, 20 A. R. 528:—Held, that, though the findings of the jury were not satisfactory upon the evidence, a second court of appeal could not interfere with them. Grand Trunk R. W. Co. v. Weegar, 23 S. C. R. 422.

Where a statutory direction imposed upon an employer has not been observed, it is no defence that the non-observance is due to the negligence of a fellow-servant of the person injured. Curran v. Grand Trunk R. W. Co., 25 A. R. 407.

(c) Injury to Servants by Negligence of Railway Company.

Carriage of Servant—Course of Employment,]—The statement of claim alleged that the plaintiff was employed by the defendants to work at track-laying; that while so employed the defendants directed and required him to assist in bringing railway supplies to the place where they were being used; that they also directed and required him to be carried, as part of his employment, on the defendants' trains; that accordingly he was received by the defendants "to be safely carried" on a train; and that, owing to the defendants' regigence, he was, while so travelling, thrown off the train and injured:—Held, that, if the plaintiff accepted a different employment from that originally contemplated, he became the defendants' workman, in that new employment. 2. That the statement that the plaintiff was received on the train "to be safely carried" did not imply that a special bargain was made "to safely carry," but only that the plaintiff was to be safely carried as one of their workmen in the course of his employment; and that there was no cause of action. May v. Ontario and Quebec R. W. Co., 10 O. R. 70.

Contributory Negligence.]—On the undisputed facts disclosed in the plaintiff's case, it appeared that there was a switch-stand erected in the defendants' yard close to the track, the decensed, who was a brakesman in the defendants' employment, being aware of its position and proximity to the track. On the day in question the deceased was engaged as a brakesman on a train passing through the yard. His position as brakesman should have been on top of the car, but, for some reason which did not appear, he was on the side of the car, holding on to the ladder by which brakesmen mount to the top of the car, and his attention being drawn towards that of the car, but for the car, and his attention being drawn towards that of the car, and the attention being drawn towards that of the car and killed:—Held, that there was no evidence of negligence on the part of the decendants; and that there was such want of care on the part of the deceaded as disentitled the plaintiff, his administrator, to recover; and the case was therefore properly withdrawn from the jury. Ryan v. Canada Southern R. W. Co., 10 O. 1.

The plaintiff was necessarily on the top of the car in the performance of his duty. There was no evidence to shew that he knew, at the time of the accident, that he was near the bridge, the night being dark; and it was a matter of doubt whether he even knew that the bridge was too low. The bell-rope was not connected before the train left the station, but this did not appear to have been through any neglect of his, and, for all that appeared, the train might not have been completed until just before starting, and until the engine was attached no connection could be made:—Held, that the plaintiff could not be deemed guilty of contributory negligence.

McLauchlin v. Grand Trunk R. W. Co., 12 O. R. 418.

Action by plaintiff to recover damages for the death of her husband by reason of, as was alleged, a defective brake on a car on defendants' railway, on which deceased was employed as a brakesman:—Held, that there could be no recovery, for the evidence failed to shew how the accident happened, the contention that it was the defective brake being mere conjecture; and, even had it been the cause, it would have been mo ground of liability, for under the defendants' rules it was the deceased's duty to examine and see that the brakes were in proper working order and report any defect to the conductor; and if he made the examination he apparently discovered no defect, as he made no report, a latent defect being no evidence of negligence; and if he omitted to make such examination, &c. then the accident would be attributable to his own negligence. Badgerow v. Grand Trunk R. W., Co., 19 O. R. 191.

Negligence—Grass on Siding.]—For a railway company to permit grass and weeds to grow on a side track is not such negligence as will make it liable to compensate an employee who is injured in consequence of such growth while on the side track in the course of his employment. Wood v. Canadian Pacific R. W. Co., 30 S. C. R. 110.

— Omission to Give Warning—Shunting.]—The plaintiff's son was given leave by a yardmaster of the defendants to learn in the ratiway yard the duties of car-checker, with the ratiway yard the duties of car-checker, with the would be taken into the employment of the defendants in that capacity, and he was free to devote as much or as little time to acquiring the necessary knowledge as he saw fit. While he was in the ratilway yard a few days after this permission had been given, he was killed by an engine of the defendants, which was running through the railway yard without the bell being runs, though the rules of the defendants required this to be done:—Held, that the deceased was a licensee and not a trespasser; that the defendants were bound to exercise reasonable care for his protection; and that the omission to give the warning was negligence which made them liable in damages for his death. Collier v. Michigan Central R. W. Co., 27 A. R. 630.

omission to have a lock at Smitch.]—The mission to have a lock at a railway switch not otherwise securely guarded, situate near a much travelled highway, is such neglicence as to make those having control of the railway liable in damages for the death of their servants resulting from the switch becoming misplaced. Rombough v. Balch, Green v. New York and Ottaica R. W. Co., 27 A. R. 32.

See Gibson v. Midland R. W. Co., 2 O. R. 658.

(d) Injury to Third Persons by Negligence of Servants.

Course of Employment.]—The plaintiff was in the employment of one C., a contractor with the defendants for building fences along their line. C., as a matter of convenience to him, was permitted by defendants to carry his tools on their trains, and was thus taking two crow-bars from Port Hope to a point on the line where his men were at work. As the train passed the spot C, dropped one bar out, and the baggage master pitched out the other, which struck and Injured the plantiff. C swore that it was his business to put the bars on and take them off the car, the baggage men having nothing to do with him nor any right to meddle with his tools, nor did he ask him to put the bar out:—Held, that defendants were not responsible for the langury, for the baggage man was not acting as their servant or in pursuance of his employment. Cunningham v. Grand Trunk R. W. Co., 31 U. C. R. 350.

Carelessness.]—Some men in defendants' employment had been using a hand car on the track for laying down rails; and on approaching the Colborne station on their return home, about 5 p.m., and finding the railway track occupied by a train, they stopped at a highway crossing, about 400 yards from the station, removed the car from the rails, and placed it on the highway, the car encroaching some six to ten inches on the gravelled part. The men then left it, and remained away about half an hour, the foreman going to the station; and two men seeing it came and sat upon it. At this time the plaintiff drove past in his carriage, and his horse shying at the car ran away, threw the plaintiff out, and severely injured him. The foreman took the hand car back to a station, about four miles off, the same evening:—Held, that there was evidence of negligence to go to the jury, in thus placing the car on the highway, for which defendants were responsible; and a verdict for the plaintiff was upheld.

- Contributory Negligence.] - While defendants' servants were employed in the attempt to replace on the track one of defendants' engines which had run off it, near a high-way crossing, but within defendants' grounds, the female plaintiff, with another woman, approached the crossing with a horse and wag-gon, and asked defendants' servants if they gon, and asked derendants' servants if they might cross, when one of them said yes, and then winked at the other and laughed. While she was crossing, she herself holding on to the horse by the head, and the other woman sitwas let off through the sides of the engin and the horse becoming frightened knocked down the female plaintiff and injured her:-Held, an actionable wrong, for which defend-ants were liable. Held, also, that there was clearly no evidence of contributory negligence, as every precaution was used in crossing. as every precaution was used in crossing. Semble, that even if the act was an unnecessary and wanton act on the part of defend-ants servants, the defendants would still be liable, for it was done in the course of their (the servants') service and employment, and for the purpose, though ignorantly, of promoting the object of it. 13. Shunting.

Negligence—Volenti non Fit Injuria.]— A lumber company had railway sidings laid in their yard for convenience in shipping lum ber over the line of railway with which the switches connected, and followed the practice of pointing out to the railway company the loaded cars to be removed, the railway company thereupon sending their locomotives and crew to the respective sidings in the lumber yard and bringing away the cars to be de-spatched from their depot as directed by the bills of lading:—Held, that, in the absence of any special agreement to such effect, the railway company's servants while so engaged were not the employees of the lumber company, and that the railway company remained liable for the conduct of the persons in charge of the locomotive used in the moving of the cars; and that where the lumber company's employees remained in a car lawfully pursuing their occupation there, the persons in charge of the locomotive owed them the duty of using reasonable skill and care in moving the car with them in it, so as to avoid all risk of injury to them. On the trial of an risk of injury to them. On the trial of an action for damages in consequence of an employee of the lumber company being killed in a loaded car which was being shunted, the jury had found that "the decensed voluntarily accepted the risk of shunting," and that the death of the deceased was caused by defeated the shadow of the deceased was caused by defeated the shadow of the shad fendants' negligence in the shunting, in giving the car too strong a push:—Held, that the verdict meant only that deceased had volun-rarily incurred the risks attending the shunting of the cars in a careful and skilful man-ner, and that the maxim "volenti non fit injuria" had no application. 14. Travelling with Passes.

Liability—Condition—Connecting Lines—Cattle Drover.]—A contract was made by a railway company for the carriage of cattle to a point on the line of a connecting railway company at a fixed rate for the whole journey. The contract provided that the shipper (or his drover) should accompany the cattle; and that the person in charge should be entitled to a "free pass." but only "on the express condition that the railway company are not responsible for any negligence, default, or misconduct of any kind on the part of the company or their servants:"—Held, that the condition was valid and could be taken advantage of by the connecting railway company, who therefore were not liable to the shipper for injuries suffered by him in a collision caused by their servants' negligence. Hall v. North-Eastern R. W. Co. L. R. 10 O. B. 437, applied. Bicknell v. Grand Trunk R. W. Co., 26 A. R. 431.

— Contract.]—Defendants gave a free ticket for 1857 over their railway in these words: "Pass J. S. free between any station and any station from the 18. January, 1857, to 31st December, 1857. This ticket is not transferable, and the person necepting it assumes the risk of accidents and damage: "—Held, that defendants were authorized to enter into a special centract, and were pot liable for damage or injury arising to the person holding such a ticket while travelling under it. Sutherland v. Great Western R. W. Co., 7 C. P. 409.

Director—Pleading.]—Action for the death of Z. caused by a railway accident, the declaration averring that Z. was being carried by defendants for reward. Fleat, that he was not received by them to be conveyed for reward as alleged, but as a passenger under a special contract contained in a free pass lick which he assumed the risk of accident. The plaintiff replied that the ticket was delivered to him in accordance with a credit agreement made between defendants the right of way for the plaintiff replied that the ticket was delivered completely accordance with a credit of the plaintiff replied that the ticket was delivered made between defining to the same accordance with a credit agreement made between defining to the same accordance with a credit agreement made between defining to the same accordance with a credit and completely accordance with a credit and company to pass over defendants and of the right being given to the directors of said company to pass over defendants were bound to carry Z. as and without any proviso as to the risk of accident; that Z. was a director in the company, and the agreement in force; that by virtue of it defendants were bound to carry Z. as such director, and were so carrying him at the time of said accident, and not under the contract in the plea mentioned:—Held, on demurrer, replication good, being in effect a denial that Z. was travelling upon such a ticket as set out in the plea; and that it was not a departure from the declaration. Woodruff v. Great Western R. W. Co., 18 U. C. R. 420.

Contract with Employer — Newsboy. — Declaration, under C. S. U. C. e. 78, by the administrator of A., alleging that A. was lawfully on the platform at a station on defendants railway, and defendants so negligently managed and drove an engine and carriages loaded with timber, along the line near said station, that a piece of timber, projecting from said carriages, struck and killed the said A. 15. Unskilful or Improper Construction of

Negligence — Embankment — Juvy.]—
In an action against a railway company for negligence in the construction of their line, it was proved that the embankment which had given way, and caused the death of the person on whose account the action of considerable as so construction which the drainage of 60 or 70 acres of land would remain and saturate the railway track upon occasions of heavy or continued rains. The jury—although several of the most eminent engineers of the Province gave their opinion that the embankment was properly and skilfully constructed, and the Judge cautioned them against valuing such evidence lightly—found for up plantiff,
The court refused a new trial on the ground of the verdict being against the weight of evidence. Braid v. Great Western R. W. Co., 10 C. P. 137.

Act, of God-Nondirection.]—Where an injury is alleged to have arisen from the improper construction of a railway, the fact of its having given way will amount to prima facie evidence of its insufficiency; and this evidence may become conclusive from the absence of any proof on the part of the company to rebut it. A railway company, in the forma-tion of their line, are bound to construct their works in such a manner as to be capable of resisting all violence of weather which, in the climate through which the railway runs, might be expected, though perhaps rarely, to In an action to recover compensation for injuries resulting to a passenger from an accident caused by the giving way of a portion of the railway, it was proved, on behalf of the company, that they had always em-ployed skilful engineers in the construction of their works, and that the giving way was caused by a storm of unusual violence. The Judge in directing the jury never explained to them the effect of such evidence upon the question of negligence:—Held, that the jury ought to have had their minds distinctly and pointedly directed to this question; but as, notwithstanding this nondirection, the verdict was in accordance with the evidence, the judgment below refusing a new trial was affirmed. Great Western R. W. Co. v. Fauccett, 9 L. J. 160, 1 Moo. P. C. N. S. 101, 9 Jur. N. S. 339.

Roadbed—Defects in.]—Liability of rall-way company for loss of luggage caused by defects in roadbed, constructed under contract for the government before the acquisition of the road by the defendants. Bate v. Canadias Pacific R. W. Co., 14 O. R. 625, 15 A. R. 388, 18 S. C. R. 697.

Faulty Construction — Company Operating Line.]—Where a railway crosses a public highway at a level crossing, and it is open to observation that the highway is in a dangerous state, liability will rest upon the operating company for resulting acident, even although a different company were responsible for the original faulty construction of the railway roadbed which led to the unsafe condition of the highway. XIV. Intersection of Railways.

Appointment of Arbitrators—Appeal—Companies—Plans, 1—The order of a Judge appointing arbitrators to settle the terms on which one railway shall cross another, under 14 & 15 Vict. c. 51, s. 9, s.-s. 15, cannot be reversed by the court. That clause is not confined in its application to companies subject to the Railway Act. The enactments as to diling plans in that Act have no application to a case of intersection. In re Buffulo and Lake Huron R. W. Co., and Great Western K. W. Co., 44 U. C. R. 397.

Disagreement — Owners — Plan — Compensation—Tender.]—On an application of the Buffalo and Lake Huron R. W. Co. for the appointment of arbitrators to arrange for their intersection with the Great Western R. W. Co., it appeared that in 1854 a negotiation was entered into between the Buffalo, Brant-ford, and Goderich R. W. Co. (former owners of the applicants' line) and the Great Western R. W. Co., upon the same question; but no agreement was then made, as the latter com-pany wished the crossing to be under their road, which the former would not accede to. Subsequently the Buffalo and Lake Huron R. W. Co. wrote to the Great Western R. W. Co. requesting a meeting to settle the matter, and requesting a meeting to settle the harter, and received an answer refusing any discussion until the adjustment of certain claims by the latter company against the Buffalo, Brantford, and Goderich K. W. Co.;—Held, that such refusal was unauthorized, and that a disagreement between the companies as to the point or ment between the companies as to the point or manner of crossing sufficiently appeared to warrant the appointment of arbitrators. Held, also, that it was not necessary, before claiming a crossing, that the name of the Great Western R. W. Co. should be inserted in the plan and book of reference filed by the applicants, as the owners of land to be taken for such crossing, or to tender compensation, for no land was required to be taken, but only an easement. S. C., 2 P. R. 88.

Award-Motion against-Appeal-Time.] -Arbitrators appointed under the Railway Act (R. S. O. 1877 c. 165) to determine the Compensation to be paid by the Credit Valley Railway Company to the Great Western Rail-Railway Company to the Great Western Kailway Company in respect of their power of crossing the latter railway under s.-s. 15 of s. 9 of the Act, made an award on the 31st December, 1877. On the 19th February, 1878, after Hilary term had expired, the Great Western Kailway Company obtained a rule hist to set aside the award, and also took steps to ameal against it, under s. 19 of 18. S. to appeal against it, under s. 19 of R. S. O. c. 165, within the month after the award, by filing a bond for costs, and giving notice of intention to appeal:—Held, that this was on a submission to arbitration within 9 & 10 km. 111. c. 15, or s. 201 of the C. L. P. Act. so as to enable the submission to lamade a rule of court; and that, even if it were, the motion for the rule nisi should have been made before the last day of Hilary term; and that the appeal therefrom was too late, as the giving security was not a commence ment of the appeal within the meaning of s.-s. 19 of s. 20. Semble, also, that the appeal given by that section is confined to arbitra-tions respecting lands and their valuation, and does not extend to an arbitration with regard to the intersection of railways. Re Credit Valley R. W. Co. and Great Western R. W. Co., 4 A. R. 532.

Provincial Crossing — Dominion Railway — Ipproval — Waiver.]—When it is necessary for a Provincial railway in Ontario to cross a Dominion railway, the company desiring to effect such crossing must procure the approval of the commissioner of public works for Ontario, as well as the approval of the railway committee of the privy council of the Dominion: and the railway companies cannot, by arrangement, waive this provision. Credit Talley R. W. Co. v. Great Western R. W. Co., 25 Gr. 507.

XV. LANDS AND THEIR VALUATION.

- 1. Compulsory Expropriation of Lands.
- (a) Generally—Rights and Powers of Companies,

Alienation of Lands Taken — Estoppel,]—Held, that the Grand Trunk R. W. Co., under 14 & 15 Vict. c. 51, has no power to convey or alienate lands; and certainly not lands acquired by them for the purposes of the railway, and which were necessary for its construction, maintenance, and accommodation. Quare, as to such power under C. S. C. c. 66, s. 9, s.-8, 2. As the deed from the company was not shewn to contain any covenant:—Held, in ejectment against them, that they were not estopped; and, quare, whether, in any case, they could be estopped in such an action. Pratt v. Grand Trunk R. W. Co., S O. R. 499.

Charter—Strict Construction.]—There is a distinction between the rights conferred upon municipal corporations and railway companies respectively to expropriate property, the former existing for the public good, the latter being commercial enterprises only. The charters of the latter are therefore more rigidly construed than are the powers of a municipal corporation. Harding v. Tournship of Cardiff, 29 Gr. 308.

Foreshore of Harbour — Statutory Right to Take—Conflict with Municipality—Jus Publicum—Crossing.]—By 44 Vict. c. 1, s. 18 (D.), the Canadian Pacific Railway Company "have the right to take, use, and hold the beach and land below high water mark, in any stream, lake, navigable water, gulf, or sea, in so far as the same shall be vested in the Crown, and shall not be required by the Crown, to such extent as shall be required by the company for its railway and other works, and as shall be exhibited by a map or plan thereof deposited in the office of the minister of railways." By 50 & 51 Vict. c. 56, s. 5 (D.), the location of the company's line of railway between Port Moody and the city of Westminster, including the foreshore of Burrard Inlet, at the foot of Gore avenue, Vancouver city, was ratified and confirmed. The Act of incorporation of the city of Vancouver city, was ratified and confirmed. The Act of incorporation of the city of Vancouver city, was ratified and confirmed. The Act of incorporation of off or avenue, with the avowed object of crossing the railway track at a level and obtaining access to the harbour at deep water. On application by the railway company for an injunction to restrain the city corporation from proceeding with their work of construction and crossing the railway:—Held, that, as the foreshore formed part of the land required by the rail-way company, as shewn on the plan deposited in the office of the minister of railways, the jus publicum to get access to and from the water at the foot of Gore avenue was subordinate to the rights given to the railway company by the statute 44 Vict. c. 1, s. 18a, on the foreshore, and therefore the injunction was properly granted. City of Vancouver v. Canadian Pacific R. W. Co., 23 S. C. R. 1.

Mining Lands—Injunction.]—See Jenkins v. Central Ontario R. W. Co., 4 O. R. 593.

"Owner"-Person in Possession-Title-"Owner"—Person in Possession—Ittle— Jus Tertii.]—By s. 103 of the Railway Act of Canada, 51 Vict. c. 29, the lands which may be taken without the consent of the owner shall not be more than 650 yards in length by 100 yards in breadth. The de-fendants desired to use for their railway a fendants desired to use for their railway a tract of land more than 650 yards long of which the plaintiff was in possession, and they alleged that a strip in the middle of the tract was ordnance land of the Crown, and therefore sought to expropriate two pieces, one on each side of the alleged ordnance reserve, which latter the plaintiff claimed as his own by length of possession:—Held, that the scheme of the Act is that the company shall deal with the person in possession as owner, and if the company propose to disturb that possession, it must be pursuant to the powers conferred by the Act; the matter of title is to be held in abeyance until a later stage in the expropriation proceedings. The company cannot, even in the case of defective title, ignore the person who actually occupies the land as owner, and proceed as if his interest had been duly invalidated by legal process on the part of the real owner. Though part of the land be held by a precarious tenure, yet where there is possession of the whole as one property, there should be but one set of proceedings and one arbitration, and the whole should be dealt with under the statute as the property of one and the same owner. Stewart v. Ottawa and New York R. W. Co., 30 O. R. 599.

Powers — Cesser of, on Completion of Railway.]—See Kingston and Pembroke R. W. Co. v. Murphy, 17 S. C. R. 582, post (c).

Purpose—Building Station—Consent of Owner.]—Held, that 46 Vict. c. 64 (D.), which empowered the company to hold and own land in any municipality through or in which the main line or any branch was carried for the erection and maintenance thereon of stations, sidings, &c., as might be necessary for the purposes of the company, did not empower them to expropriate against the will of the owner. Kingston and Pembroke R. W. Co. v. Murphy, 11 O. R. 302.

Improper Purpose — Acquisition of Fece Simple.]—Where the special Act of a railway company incorporated the clauses of the general Railway Act relating to powers, plans, and surveys, and lands and their valuation, and also authorized the company, from and out of the ores obtained along their line of railway, to manufacture iron and steel for their own use, and to acquire mining properties by purchase; and the company had chosen a site for a station upon the lands of the plaintiffs, covering a valuable mine of magnetic iron ore, and called upon the plaintiffs to arbitrate, and the plaintiffs were unwilling to part with the land:—Held, that the plaintiffs could not obtain an injunction restraining the leand of the plaintiffs of the plaintiff in question, even though it were conceded that the company knew of the mine, and that it was the property of the plaintiffs, for the legislature had left the expropriation clauses to their full effect, which, in this country, at least, enables the company to acquire the fee of the land. Altier, if it were proved that the company were acquiring the land nor for the purposes for which the powers were given, but for some collateral object, as, for example, with the object of afterwards selling it to a third party. Semble, that if it should afterwards appear that such a scheme was actually in contemplation, and had been carried out, means might be found to frustrate it. Jenkins v. Central Outario R. W. Co., 4 O. R. 503.

— Improper Purpose—Injunction.]— Where a railway company gave notice of their intention to expropriate certain lands adjoining their lines, but which were not required for building any of their works upon, and the evidence shewed grounds for supposing that the powers were to be exercised for other than those purposes which the railway laws of this country permit and allow:—
Held, that they should be enjoined from proceeding with the expropriation. Niban v. 8k.
Catharines and Niagara Central R. W. Co.,
16 O. R. 459.

Taking Gravel,]— The Northern Railway Company of Canada have no power to take land compulsorily under s. 7, s. s. 2, or s. 2, s. s. 10, of the Railway Act of 1886, incorporated in their special Act 38 Vict, c. 65 (D.), for the purpose only of obtaining therefrom gravel or other material for the repair or maintenance of their road, because these sections do not confer compulsory powers to take land. Nor have they such powers under s. 9, s.-s. 38 and 39, of the Railway Act of 1879, because that Act does not apply to their railway. Semble even if compulsory powers are conferred by s. 9, s.-s. 10, of the Act of 1808, that the powers are to take materials only, not the land itself, as was attempted in this case. Re Watson and Northern R. W. Co., 5 O. R. 550

Semble, that a purchase of land for a gravel pit, under 18 Vict. c. 176, s. 20, is to be governed by the same proceedings as purchases of other lands by the company. Mitchell v. Great Western R. W. Co., 35 U. C. R. 159, note a. See S. C., 38 U. C. R. 471.

Right to Take Part of Block—Church

Oxford, &c. R. W. Co., 2 D. M. & G. 94. It was contended by the plaintiffs that the defendants, having taken possession, could not withdraw, but must take the whole block:—Held, that the mere going into possession of part, although a high-handed act on the part of the defendants, did not necessarily commit them to the purchase of the whole, and that the defendants should have the option to take the whole or withdraw, and pay all damages and costs sustained by the plaintiffs. —— Defence — Previous Conveyance.]
——In 1854 the plaintiff, in consideration of £156 5s., conveyed certain land to the Woodstock and Lake Eric Railway Company for their track across his farm, which they, after doing some work on it, abandoned, and the plaintiff in 1855 retook possession, and continued to hold it for more than twenty years. In 1872 defendants were incorporated by 35 Vict. c. 53 (O.), which empowered them to acquire the lands and roadway of the Woodstock and Lake Eric Railway Company; and by 36 Vict. c. 58, s. 1 (O.), in amendment of that Act, it was enacted that after acquiring the said lands, &c., they were to be entitled to all the rights over the same theretofore possessed by the said company. In 1874, without having attempted to acquire the land under these statutes, they, with full knowledge of all the circumstances, dealt with the plaintiff as the owner, went to arbitration with him, and received possession on execution of the arbitration bond; and $374.40 was awarded to the plaintiff as compensation:—
Heid, that the plaintiff was entitled to recover in the award, the previous conveyance to the old company forming no defence. Parsons v. Part Dover and Lake Huron R. W. Co., 28 C. P. S.4.

— Tender of Conveyance.] — A land-owner to whom compensation has been awarded for land taken by a railway company, under the Railway Act, C. S. C. c. 66, cannot sue upon the award before tendering a conveyance of the land. A plea to such an action, that no such conveyance had been executed or tendered, was therefore held good. Caucthra v. Hamilton and North-Western R. W. Co., 41 U. C. R. 187.

Amount of — Ascertainment — Date of Taking,]—In fixing compensation to a land owner for lands expropriated for a railway, the rule is, to ascertain the value of the land of which it forms a part before the taking, and the value of such land after the taking, and deduct one from the other, the difference thus arrived at being the actual value to the owner of the part taken. Rule laid down in Re Ontario and Quebec R. W. Co. and Taylor, 6 O. R. at p. 348, followed. The "taking" is properly fixed as at the date of the company giving notice to the land owner of their intention of taking the land; and it is not correct to say that the value of the lands should be taken as of a date prior to knowledge of intention to construct, or in anticipation of the construction of the railway. James v. Ontario and Quebec R. W. Co., $2 O. R.

Held, by the court of appeal affirming the judgment in 12 O. R. 624, that in ascertaining the compensation to be made to a land owner for land expropriated for a railway under R. S. C. c. 109, s. S. the value of the part taken (as well as the increased value of the part not taken, which by s.-s. 21 is to be set off) must be ascertained with reference to the date of the deposit of the map or plan and book of reference, under s.-s. 14 (or in this case with reference to the date of the notice or determination to expropriate), and, therefore, such value should include an increase which map have been caused by, or is owing to, the contemplated construction of the railways. S. C., 15 A. R. I.

Ascertainment — Reference.]—The remedies pointed out by statute for settling the claims of land owners to compensation for lands taken becoming ineffectual, the court will direct a reference to the master for that purpose. Malloch v. Grand Trunk R. W. Co., 6 Gr. 348.

Ascertainment—Reference—Powers of Master.]—Instead of proceeding under the statute to ascertain the amount to be paid to the owner of lands taken for the purposes of a railway, the parties consented to a decree referring it to the master to ascertain and settle the amount payable by the company
"for compensation or damages for the lands
. . . taken or to be taken" by the comtaken or to be taken" by the company; the master to have all the powers of an arbitrator under C. S. C. c. 66, but to act as master, with a right to either party to appeal:—Held, that under this reference the master had no authority to award compensation to the owner for the severance of one portion of the property from the other, or on account of access to a spring being obstructed, nor for increased risk of fire to the premises of the owner, nor for lands injuriously affected in any way but not taken. Cummins v. Credit Valley R. W. Co., 21 Gr. 132.

——Benefit to Remaining Land—Deduction.]—Where arbitrators are appointed to award compensation for lands taken for the purposes of a railway and to assess the damages sustained by the proprietors by reason of the severance of the lands, they may properly take into consideration the increased value to the estate by reason of the construction of the railway, although benefited only in the same way as other farms in the neighbourhood through which the railway does not pass; as also the increase in value by reason of the probable location of a station at a town in the vicinity of the lands, which the company had bound themselves to place there in consideration of a bonus paid by such town, Re Credit Valley R. W. Co and Spragge, 24 Gr. 231.

-Cutting Trees-Damage to Remaining Land-Notice, |- The right of a railway company to cut down trees for six rods on each side of the railway under the Consolidated Railway Act, 1879, s. 7, s.-s. 14, is entirely distinct from their right to expropriate land for the road. If compensation can be claimed for it, it must be distinctly demanded by the notice :- Held, therefore, that an award was bad in allowing compensation to the owner of lands expropriated for the damage that might accrue to the owner by the possible exercise of such right. Quære, whether, under the Consolidated Railway Act, 1879, more than the value of the land actually taken can be allowed, as the Act does not contain a section equivalent to s. 7 of R. S. O. 1877 c. 165, and s. 5 of C. S. C. c. 66, giving compensation for damages to lands injuriously affected, Semble that where a parcel of land is severed by the railway the actual value is the difference between the value of the land of which it forms part before the expropriation, and the value to the owner of the remainder after the expropriation. Held, that the possible damage to bush land from greater exposure to winds and storms, and the greater liability to injury by fire by reason of the working of the railway, were contingencies too remote to be considered in estimating the amount of compensation where there were no buildings to be endangered. The notice by the railway company in-cluded compensation "for such damages as you may sustain by reason or in consequence of the powers above mentioned:"-Held, sufficient to allow the arbitrators to award damages resulting to the owner from the expro-priation. In re Ontario and Quebec R. W. Co. and Taylor, 6 O. R. 338

— Depreciation of Land—Farm Crossing,]—Where land expropriated for government railway purposes severed a farm, the owner, although not at the time entitled to a farm crossing apart from contract, was held entitled to full compensation covering the future as well as the past for the depreciation of his land by the want of such a crossing, Guay v. The Queen, 17 S. C. R. 3. See 52 Vict. c. 38, s. 3; Vizina v. The Queen, 17 S. C. R. 1.

— Depreciation of Renaining Land.]
—Arbitrators appointed to assess the damages sustained by land owners whose lands have been taken for railway purposes, have a right to take into consideration matters other than the value of the mere quantity of land taken.
Where, therefore, arbitrators allowed a sum "for depreciation to farm generally by the permanent occupation of the land as a railway," the award was held valid. Great Western R. W. Co. v, Warner, 19 Gr., 5006.

Excess.] — The court set aside awards made under 9 Viet. c. 81. as to compensation to be paid to persons whose land was required for the Great Western Railway; the sum awarded being so excessive as to shew clearly that the arbitrators had disceparded the direction of the statute, to consider the benefit conferred on the property as well as the damage done. Great Western R. W. Co. v. Buby, 12 U. C. R. 106.

Award held objectionable for the excessive compensation given. Great Western R. W. Co. v. Dodds, 12 U. C. R. 133. See also Great Western R. W. Co. v. Dougall, ib.

The award was set aside: 1. Because the arbitrators, in valuing the land, which bordered on water, allowed a large sum for the water frontage, to which the owner had no legal or equitable right, but merely a supposed claim upon the favourable consideration of the government to grant it to him. 2. Because the award did not transfer any such claim to the company, if the arbitrators could legally have allowed for it. Quere, whether the sum awarded was not so extravagant as in itself to vitiate the award. In re. Miller and Great Western R. W. Co., 13 U. C. R. 582.

An award cannot be impugned on the ground of the architators, in which he gives no data or basis for calculation to support his opinion against the majority. In re-Great Western R. W. Co, and Chaucin, 1 P. R. 288.

Upon a petition under 38 Vict. c. 15 (O.) for the review of awards made against a railway company for compensation for land taken, on the ground that the sums awarded were excessive, the evidence as to value being conflicting, the awards were upheld. Quare, as to the admissibility of affidavits on such an application. The intention of the statute was not to make the Judge appealed to a substitute for the arbitrators, or to permit him to reverse their finding as to amount, on the weight of evidence merely, where a similar verdict could not be set aside for excessive damages. Some misconduct, legal or otherwise, or the disregard of some legal principle, must be shewn. One of the arbitrators, an old resident and well acquainted with the locality, protested against the waste of time involved in taking the evidence of many witnesses having much less knowledge of the value of the land than himself, and in the end, having received the evidence, refused to give up his own judgment to that of such witnesses :- Held, that he could properly do so. Where the company desired to take land, as authorized by s. 129 of C. S. C. c. 66, for an extension across three lots of their original line, which was in operation :- Held, that the arbitrators were not required to take into consideration the additional value conferred on such land by the original construction of the railway. The intention of the Act is, that when the act proposed to be done, whether original construc-tion or proposed deviation, gives increased value to the land, the owners must allow for such increase. - Mandamus to Settle - Application for-Title. |-The owner of land taken by a railway, is entitled to compensation; and the company must proceed to settle the amount thereof, under R. S. O. 1877 c. 165, s. 20; if they do not, the proper course is to apply for a mandamus. On such application a formal title, in the absence of proof to the contrary, title, in the absence of proof to the contrary, need not be proved; it is sufficient if the applicant swear that he is the owner of the land taken. Demorest v. Midland R. W. Co., 10 taken, 1 P. R. 73.

- Taking for Gravel - Operation of Railway-Farm Crossing.] - Where land is taken by a railway company for the purpose of using the gravel thereon as ballast, the owner is only entitled to compensation for the land so taken as farm land where there is no market for the gravel. The compensation to be paid for any damages sustained by reason of anything done under and by authority of R. S. C. c. 39, s. 3, s.-s. (e), or any other Act respecting public works or government railways, includes damages resulting to the land from the operation as well as from the con-struction of the railway. The right to have a farm crossing over one of the government railways is not a statutory right, and in awarding damages full compensation for the future as well as for the past for the want of a farm crossing should be granted. Vézina v. The Queen, 17 S. C. R. 1. See Guay v. The Queen, ib. 30.

Election to Dispense with-Rights of Successor in Title.]—S., being the owner of lands through which the defendants desired build their road, agreed to give them the right of way, and the company, with his written permission, took possession without compensation and constructed their road, and had up to this time been in uninterrupted posses sion for more than ten years. The plaintiff, claiming under S., now demanded compensation and obtained a mandamus nisi to proceed to arbitration under the Railway Act, 1868 :-Held, that the plaintiff was not entitled: that S. having the right to accept any or no compensation, and having elected to take none, the company then became entitled to the lands, and the plaintiff could not succeed. Thompson v. Canada Central R. W. Co., 3 O. R. 136.

Enforcement of Judgment for-Lien -Sale-Injunction.] - Held, that where a railway company had failed to pay the balance of compensation awarded to land owners in accordance with a judgment obtained for the same, although they had entered into possession and were operating their railway over the lands, the land owners were entitled to an order declaring them to have a vendor's lien on the lands for the amount, with such provisions as were necessary to realize by means of a sale; but they were not entitled to an injunction to restrain the defendants from operating the railway on the lands, nor to an order for delivery up of possession. Allgood a Merrybent and Darlington R. W. Co., 33 (b. p. 571, distinguished. Lincoln Paper Mills Co. v. 81, Catharines and Niagara Central R. W. Co., 19 O. R. 106.

Interest - Confirmation of Title - Diligence. |-On a petition to the superior court praying that a railway company be ordered to pay into the hands of the prothonotary of the superior court a sum equivalent to six per cent, on the amount of an award previously deposited in court under s. 170 of the Railway Act, and praying further that the company should be enjoined and ordered to proceed to confirmation of title with a view to the distribution of the money, the company pleaded that the court had no power to grant such an order, and that the delay in proceeding to confirmation of title had been caused by the petitioner, who had unsuccessfully appealed to the higher courts for an increased amount:— Held, that by the terms of s. 172 of the Railway Act it is only by the judgment of confirmation that the question of additional interest can be adjudicated upon. Held, further, that, assuming the court had jurisdiction, until a final determination of the controversy as to the amount to be distributed, the railway company could not be said to be guilty of cound not be said to be guilty of negligence in not obtaining a judgment in contirmation of title: Railway Act, s. 172. Rate of.]—Money was paid into a bank under the Consolidated Railway Act, 1879 (D.), s. 9, s.-s. 28, and an order for immediate possession of lands expropriated by the company was made by a Judge under the subsection, and an award of compensation was made subsequently: — Held, that the land owner was entitled to interest on the amount owner was entitled to interest on the almount awarded him only at the rate allowed by the bank on the money paid in and not at the legal rate. Re Taylor and Ontario and Que-bec R. W. Co., 11 P. R. 371.

An order was obtained for immediate possession of land under the Consolidated Railway Act, 1879 (D.), and money was paid into bank under the same Act by the company :-Held, that the land owner was entitled to interest upon the amount subsequently awarded him from the date of the award, only at the rate allowed by the bank upon a deposit and not at the legal rate of six per cent. Right to-Payment into Court.]-, the owner of land required for the Canada Air Line Railway, having refused the sum tendered by the company, an arbitration was had. The arbitrators awarded him $800, and settled the costs of the award at $31. This sum he refused to receive without his costs and interest from the date of the award; whereupon the company paid it into court with six months interest, under 16 Vict. c. 99, s. 7, and a notice was published as that clause directs. then applied for a rule upon the company to shew cause why the money should not be paid to him, with interest and costs of the arbitration, and why they should not join in the conveyance, or give an undertaking to secure the construction and maintenance of a farm crossing, which the award provided for:
Hield, that the application must be refused, for that the company, having taken all proper proceedings under the section mentioned, had acquired the title, and had nothing more to do; and the applicant's proper course was to file his claim and apply as the section provides. In re Foster and Great Western R, W. Co., 32 U. C. R. 162. The money awarded for land taken for the Great Western Railway having been paid into court by the company, with six months' interest, and it being from no fault on their part that the claimant did not receive it within the six months, the court discharged with costs a rule calling upon them to pay further interest; and it was referred to the master to report as to the claims filed, and the right of the applicant to the money. S. C., ib. 503.

Offer — Subsequent Arbitration — Time for Making Award — Reference back.] — D. brought an action to compel a railway company to arbitrate to ascertain the value of certain land taken for the purposes of the railway company, and after the service of the writ the company served a notice to arbitrate, and after arbitration an award was made by two of the arbitrators, but was subsequently set aside by the court as invalid. D. then proceeded with his action, and the railway company pleaded that the arbitrators had fixed a time for the making of the award, but did not make any within the time limited, and did not enlarge the time, and that therefore the sum of $400 offered by the railway company before proceedings taken had become the amount of the compensation. The Judge found on the evidence that no time had been fixed by the arbitrators for making the award: -Held, that, as the parties by their pleadings had placed themselves upon an issue as to whether the arbitrators had fixed a time or not, and as that issue was found in favour of the plaintiff, the sum of $400 offered had not become the compensation to be paid; and a reference back was ordered. Demorest v. Grand Junction R. W. Co., 10 O. R. 515.

Offer to Mortgagee — Amount Chargeable — Redemption.] — A mortgagee of land, part of which was taken by a railway company, was offered £100 as compensation for the land so taken, which he refused; and the matter having been referred to arbitration, £30 only was awarded. On a bill filed to redeem: — Held, that, under the circumstances, he was chargeable with the sum awarded, and no more, Gunn v. McDonald, 11 Gr. 140.

Payment — Condition Precedent to Possession.] — See Corporation of Parkdale v. West, 12 App. Cas. 602, post (e).

S (31), by a Judge in chambers for payment out of money deposited by a railway company as security for land taken for railway purposes, is not appealable as a proceeding instituted in a superior court within the meaning of R. S. C. c. 135, s. S. Canadian Pacific R. W. Co. v. Little Scminary of Ste. Thérèse, 16 S. C. R. 606.

A Judge making an order under s. 165 of the Dominion Railway Act, 51 Vict. c. 29, for payment out of court of compensation moneys, acts, not for the court, but as persona designata by the statute; and no appeal to a divisional court lies from his order. Refund of Money—Diligence.]—A rall-way company fook possession of and built their road across a plot of land of the plaintiff, who instituted proceedings to compel payment therefor. Under the decree a sum of $1,800 was found to be the value of such plot, which sum, together with interest and costs, was paid by the company in order to prevent the land being purchased by a rival company; and three years afterwards they applied on petition to have a portion of such purchase money refunded, on the ground that another railway company, whose rights had been assigned to them, had previously paid a prior owner of the land for a portion thereof. The court refused the relief asked with costs, on the ground, amongst others, that the company, had they exercised due diligence in the matter, might have become aware of such prior purchase and payment. Dumble v. Cobourg and Peterborogh R. W. Co., 29 Gr. 121.

Right to Compensation—Doubt as to Ownership-Title-Reference.] - A railway company took possession of certain lots in a city, under the compulsory powers in their Act of incorporation, but omitted to take any steps to ascertain the amount of compensation to be paid therefor. After a delay of some years the owner of the property filed a bill to enforce payment of compensation, when the company objected to the title on the ground that prior to the company taking possession the plaintiff had disposed of the property by lottery, and the company therefore felt unsafe in settling with him, and were not aware who were the persons really entitled to compensa-It appeared in evidence that nothing had been done to validate the title of the purchasers at such lottery as directed by the sta-tute (27 & 28 Vict. c. 32.) The court therefore decreed a reference to inquire as to the title of the plaintiff, when, if it should appear that the plaintiff could make a good title, the master was to settle the amount of compensation (being the present value of the land), which was to be paid by the company to the plaintiff, together with his costs of suit. Scanlon v. London and Port Stanley R. W. Co., 23 Gr. 559.

Mortgagec.]—A mortgagor does not represent his mortgage for purposes of the Railway Act of Ontario, and is not included in the enumeration of the corporations or persons who under s. 13 of R. S. O. 1887 c. 170 are enabled to sell or convey lands to the company. He can only deal with his own equity of redemption, leaving the mortgage entitled to have his compensation for lands taken separately ascertained. In re Toronto Bett Line R. W. Co., 20 O. R. 413.

— Tenant for Years—Remedy—Estoppel.] — The Grand Trunk Railway passed inrough land of which C. was owner, and the plaintiff a tenant for years. In 1853 an arbitration was held to determine the sum to be paid to C., and the plaintiff, being appointed arbitrator on his behalf, concurred in an award, saying nothing then of his own claim, but in 1855, more than six months after the company had taken possession, he brought trespass:—Held, that the action, if maintainable, was brought too late; and that his remedy, if any, was by arbitration. (c) Filing Plans.

[See 62 & 63 Vict. c. 37 (D.)]

Necessity for-Deviation-Completion of Road.]-A company built their line to the terminal mentioned in the charter and then wished to extend it less than a mile in the same direction. The time limited for the completion of the road had not expired, but the company had terminated the representation on the board of directors, which by statute was to continue during construction, and had claimed and ob-tained from the city of K. exemption from taxation on the ground of completion of the road. To effect the desired extension it was sought to expropriate lands which were not sought to expropriate lands which were not marked or referred to on the map or plan filed under the statute:—Held, affirming the judgments in 11 O. R. 382, 582, that the statutory provision that land required for a rail-way shall be indicated on a map or plan filed way saan be indicated on a map or pinh ned in the department of railways, before it can be expropriated, applies as well to a deviation from the original line as to the line itself, and the company, having failed to shew any statutory authority therefor, could not take the said land against the owners' consent. Held, also, that the proposed extension was not a deviation within the meaning of 42 Vict. c. 9, s. 8, s.-s. 11 (D.): that the road authorized was completed as shewn by the acts of the company, and upon such completion the compulsory power to expropriate ceased. Kingston and Pembroke R. W. Co. v. Murphy, 17 S. C. R. 582.

Doviation—Notice—Warrant—Jurisdiction—Injunction.]—Under the Railway Act of Ontario, R. S. O. 1887 c. 170, a railway company, having filed an original plan shewing the location of its line, and desiring to acquire other lands compulsorily for the purpose of an alteration from the original location, however small the deviation may be, must file, under s.-s. 7 of s. 10, a plan of the proposed deviation. Semble, under the Dominion Railway Act this requirement must also be observed. The notice required by s.-s. 1 and the certificate of a surveyor under s.-s. 2 of s. 20 of the Railway Act of Ontario should state in cash the sum which would be a fair compensation for the lands to be taken and damages. And where a railway company, without having filed any plan of a proposed deviation, applied for and obtained from a county court Judge a warrant for possession on a notice in which, in addition to a sum in cash, certain crossings and station privileges were offered as compensation for the land and the damages, and which was accompanied by a surveyor's certificate that the sum offered was a fair compensation therefor: —Held, that the foundation of the Judge's authority to issue a warrant rested on a proper compliance by the railway company with the above sub-sections, and that he had acted herein without jurisdiction. The high court of justice has power to restrain railway companies from acting upon warrants so obtained, and it is not necessary to proceed by certiorari. Brooke v. Toronto Belt Line R. W. Co., 21 O. R. 401.

Order of Railway Committee.]-Held, that an order of the railway committee of the privy council, under s, 4 of 46 Vict. c. 24, does not of itself, and apart from the provisions of law thereby made applicable to the case of land required for the proper carrying out of the requirements of the railway committee, authorize or empower the railway company on whom the order is made to take any person's land or to interfere with any person's right:—Held, that such provi-sions of law include all the provisions con-tained in the Consolidated Railway Act, 1879, under the headings of "Plans and surveys" and "Lands and their valuation," which are applicable to the case; the taking of land and the interference with rights over land being placed on the same footing in that Act. When a railway company, acting under an order of the railway committee, did not deposit a plan or book of reference relating to the alterations required by such order :-Held, that they were not entitled to commence operations. further, that under the Act of 1879, the pay-ment of compensation by the railway company is a condition precedent to their right of pany is a condition precedent to their right of interfering with the possession of land or the rights of individuals, Jones v. (d) Government Lands.

Ordnance Lands—Acquisition Free from Lien.]—The Ontario, Simcee, and Huron Railway Company (afterwards changed to "The Northern Railway Company of Canada"), in the course of the construction of their roadway, acting in assumed and alleged pursuance of the powers conferred on them by their charter, entered upon and took possession of certain government lands held by the principal officers of Her Majesty's ordnance for ordnance purposes, and proceeded to construct their road thereon. Afterwards negotiations were opened between the company and the principal officers for acquiring such right of way, in the course of which numerous letters passed between the parties and between the several departments connected with the ordnance department, from which it appeared that the parties concerned had arrived at the conclusion that the company were acting within their statutory powers, and that all the department could require was compensation for the land taken. Subsequently all these lands were, by the Imperial government, ceded to the government of Canada, and in the year 1875 it was ascertained that the sum for which the government held a lien upon the road amounted to about £600,000; and by an Act of the legislature of that year that claim was compromised by the government for £100,000 sterling, which was paid. In the year 1856 or 1857 this company agreed with the Grand Trunk Railway Company for the use of a portion of this land for the purposes of the line of the latter company, who it was shewn had en-tered upon and continued in the use of this land until 1879, when the Credit Valley Railway Company, with a view of obtaining an entrance into the city of Toronto, entered upon this tract of land, and were proceeding to construct their line of road thereon, Upon a bill filed by the Grand Trunk Railway Company an interlocutory injunction was granted to restrain the further construction of the Credit Valley Railway, until the hearing, when the injunction was made perpetual, the court being of the opinion that the Northern Railway Company, under their dealings with the board of ordnance, and under the various statutory enactments appearing in the case, had acquired an absolute title to the land in question, free from any lien in respect thereof. Grand Trunk R. W. Co. v. Credit Valley R. W. Co., 27 Gr. 232.

Removal of Timber—Statutes.]—By s. 4 of 10 & 20 vict. c. 122, the clauses, amongst others, of the Kailway Clauses Consolidation Act, 14 & 15 vict. c. 51, relating to lands, were incorporated therewith, whereby the company were empowered to enter upon the Crown lands on the line of their railway, and to fell and remove the trees standing thereon, &c. By s. 8 of 16 vict. c. 169, the possession of such lands was not to be taken without the consent of the governor in council, but it was expressly provided that this was not to limit or affect the powers given by the special Act:—Held, that the last named proviso shewed that s. 8 was not to apply to this company. Booth y. McIntyre, 31 C. P. 183.

Shore of River — Award.] — An award included compensation for the beach lying in front of plaintiff's property, which belonged to the Crown, and, for that reason, was set aside. Bigaouette v. North Shore R. W. Co., 17 S. C. R. 363.

Right to-Urgency - Costs.]-Immediate possession of land, alleged to be necessary for the purposes of a railway, should not be granted to the railway company on summary process under the Railway Act unless two points are very clearly established: 1st, that the company have an indisputable right to acquire the land by compulsory proceedings; and 2nd, that there is some urgent and substantial need for immediate action; and, inasmuch as these points could not be said to have been clearly established by the affidavits and arguments in this case, the court declined to interfere summarily, and dismissed the application of the railway company for a warrant to enter forthwith upon the lands. Executors.]—See Mitchell v. Great Western R. W. Co., 38 U. C. R. 471.

Married Woman - Agreement with.]-Where a railway company contracted for the burchase of certain land with B., a married woman, in the absence of her husband:—
Held, that the company were under no obligation to see that B. had independent advice in the matter; and, inasmuch as the price seemed not to be grossly inadequate, and B. appeared to be fully compos mentis, and no unfair advantage had been taken the agreement could not be set aside. marriage took place in 1876, and the land was held by her to her separate use:—Held, that the concurrence of her husband in the contract was unnecessary, nor was it necessary for him to join in the conveyance, Bryson y. Ontario and Quebec R. W. Co., 8 O. R. 380.

- Agreement with Husband.]-On an application against a railway company to compel them to arbitrate as to certain land taken, it appeared that the land belonged to a married woman, and that the company had taken possession of it upon an arrangement with her husband, which would have been an answer to the application if he had been and answer of the application it he had been the owner. An arbitration was ordered. In re Benson and Port Hope, Lindsay, and Beaverton R. W. Co., 29 U. C. R. 529.

Tenant for Life-Rights of Remainderman-Compensation Money.]-Although tenant for life has authority-under the Railtenant for fire has authority—under the Railway Acts, C. S. C. c. 66, and 24 Vict. c. 27, to contract for the sale and to convey the fee simple of land required for the use of a railway, the company are not warranted in pay-ing him the full amount of compensation agreed on, notwithstanding that the statute omits to provide for the application of the amount, as is done in the Imperial Act 8 Vict. c. 18. And where a railway company did so pay the amount, they were compelled afterwards, at the suit of a person interested in the remainder, to make good the amount of his interest. Cameron v. Wigle, 24 Gr. 8.

- Rights of Remaindermen—Compensation Money—Estate in—Will—Parties.]-Under the Railway Act, C. S. C. c. 66, s. 1 1, as interpreted and explained by 24 Vict. c. 17, s. 1, a tenant for life had power to convey the fee to a railway company, but had no power to receive the purchase money; and, therefore, a railway company which took a conveyance in fee from a tenant for life and paid her the purchase money, remained re-sponsible for the payment. The meaning of sponsible for the payment. The meaning of sponsible for sponsible for the payment and the money value of the land is converted into a piece of real estate, which the railway company holds for the owner of the land in place of which it stands, and that the estates in the land existing at the time the land is taken become estates in the compensation instead; and, upon the tenant for life in this case conveying the fee, she became tenant for life in the compensation, and those entitled to the inheritance became entitled to the reversion in fee in the compensation as against the railway company; and the Statute of Limitations did not begin to run against them until the death of the tenant for life. The tenant for life conthe tenant for life. The tenant for life conveyed to the railway company in 1871. The person entitled to the reversion after the life estate died in 1871 intestate, and I. H. Y., his sole heiress-at-law, died in 1884, leaving a will, in which she devised to the plaintiff a specific parcel of land, including the part conveyed to the railway company:—Held, that this will did not were to the heiriff the right to specific did not pass to the plaintiff the right to receive the compensation money, and that as to it I. H. Y. died intestate, and it descended to her heirs-at-law, of whom the plaintiff was one; and the plaintiff was allowed to amend by adding the other heirs-at-law as parties. Young v. Midland R. W. Co., 16 O. R. 738.

Although, under C. S. C. c. 66, s. 11, as amended by 24 Vict, c. 17, s. 1, a railway company could obtain a good title in fee simple to expropriated lands by a conveyance from the tenant for life thereof, they were not justified in paying the compensation money to the tenant for life: and where such payment was made in 1871 the company was ordered to pay the amount over again to the persons entitled in remainder whose title accrued within six years of the time of bringing the action. Cameron v. Wigle, 24 Gr. 8, approved. Young v. Midland R. W. Co., 19 A. R. 265. Affirmed, 22 S. C. R. 190.

Rights of Remaindermen—Parties—Compensation Money — Payment — Reconery back.]—A railway company paid to tenants for life the full price of the land conveyed by them to the company for their line of railway, and on the cesser of the life estate the parties entitled in remainder filed a bill stating that the railway company assumed to purchase the lands for the right of way; that the company alleged that they had paid the full consideration for the land to the tenants for life; submitting that, even if the company did make such payment, they did so in their own wrong, and asking for payment of the plantiffs' share of the purchase money :—Held, that the statement that the company "alleged" that the purchase money was all paid to the vendors, was not such a positive statement of the fact of payment to the tenants for life as to make them proper parties to the bill; and a demurrer was allowed on this ground. Ousdon v. Grand Trunk R. W. Co., 28 Gr. 428.

An "action for money had and received will lie wherever a certain amount of money belonging to one person has improperly come to the hands of another." Therefore, where a the hands of another." Therefore, where a railway company paid to the executors of a tenant for life the sum payable for the fee simple of lands taken by the company for the purposes of their road, and subsequently the remainderman filed a bill against the company and the representatives of the tenant for life, seeking to obtain payment from the company of the proportion of purchase money payable to the remainderman:—Held, that the execu-tors were properly made parties with a view to the company obtaining relief over against them in the event of the company being compelled to make good the money in the first instance, and a demurrer by the executors was overruled with costs, on the ground that the company were entitled to a remedy over against them for the amount overpaid them, and on the additional ground that the bill alleged all facts necessary to entitle the plaintiffs to a direct decree against them, although the bill was not framed with a view to a direct remedy against the executors; for "the payment being made by the company to the execu-. of money to a proportion of which the plaintiffs were entitled, and the payment being made without the authority of the plaintiffs, it became money had and received by the executors to the use of the plain-tiffs." S. C., ib. 431.

Right to Sell — Order of Court— Costs.]—Where land was conveyed to C. D. for life with remainder to her children, and C. D. during the infancy of her children agreed to sell and convey the land to a railway commany for the purposes of their railway:— Held, that C. D., notwithstanding the provisions of s. 36 of the Railway Act of Canada, 51 Vict. c. 29, had no right in law to sell; to get such a right an order of a Judge under s. 137 was required; and where the proceeding was entirely for the benefit of the railway company, and no factious opposition was raised by any one, the company should pay the costs of the order as part of the price of the land. Re Dolsen, 13 P. R. 84.

Tenant in Common — Infant Co-tenants—Perent und Children.]—The mother of infant children, resident with her, being entitled to a third undivided interest in the land, they owning the residue, by deed agreed with a railway company, in consideration of an extension by them of their line of railway from R. to P., and for one dollar, to grant to them in fee the right of way "through my land in P., consisting of such portion of lots IS and 19 as may be required to carry the railway across said lots," and conveyed to them accordingly. At the time of the conveyance she had not been appointed guardian to her children:—Ureld, that under the Railway Act of ISOS (3] Vict. c. 68, s. 9, s.-ss. 3, 9 (D.)), her deel barred the children's interest in the land as well as her own, and that they were therefore not entitled to compensation from the company, Duulop v. Canada Central R. W. Co., 45 U. C. R. 74.

(b) Conditions of Grant.

Annuity — Privileges—Specific Performance,]—The owner of land granted to a railway company the privilege of crossing his property, in consideration of which the company agreed, amongst other things, to pay him $400 a year, to carry flour for him on certain favourable terms, and "to bottom out his present mill race from its present unfinished point;"—Held, a contract of which the court of chancery should not decree a specific performance or damages for breach of it; but leave the plaintiff to sue upon it at law. Dickson v. Covert, 17 Gr. 321.

Erection of Stations.]—The plaintiff on the representation of persons that they had given land to defendants for the purpose of having the terminus of their railway at Windsor, conveyed lot 83 to the defendants in 1847, expressing in the conveyance that the same had been selected by the company "for the purpose of establishing the western terminus of their road thereon. . . and the execution of which condition constituted the sole consideration for this grant." When the plaintiff made this deed he knew that one H. had conveyed the adjoining lot 84 to the defendants on substantially the same condition. In 1853 the defendants built a passenger station on lot 83 and 84, which were destroyed by fire, and a passenger station was afterwards built on lots 83 and 84, and a freight house partly on lots 83 and 84, and a freight station on lot 84, which the defendants continued to use untill shortly before this suit, when they built a passenger station about half a mile from the original one. The bill alleged that the western terminus had been removed to the city of Detroit, and sought to restrain such removal from the land in question. It appeared that instead of unleading the passenger and freight in Windsor.

the ears were carried across the Detroit river on ferry boats, where they were taken charge of by the companies over whose line they were to go, but that the terminus of the defendants was still at Windsor. It was also shewn that the husiness of the defendants could not be conducted on so small a space as lot S3, and that the buildings on lots S3 and S4 were used for freight:—Held, reversing the decision in 25 Gr. 62, that the terminus and depot were not confined to buildings alone, but extended to the whole premises necessary for conducting the business of a terminus, and that upon the true construction of the deed the plaintiff was only entitled to have does not said the husiness of a terminus, and that upon the serious properties of the serious support of the serious Primâ facie the term "railway station," in a contract, means the station house. Carroll v. Casemore, 20 Gr. 16.

An engineer of the defendants, whose duty it was to obtain transfers of land and determine the situation of station houses, procured from the plaintiffs, for nominal considerations, grants of land for a station house and ground, representing that the station would be put, as desired by the plaintiffs, at a certain point advantageous to both. The deed of the plaintiff S. contained this proviso:—"Provided that the said company, their successors and assigns, do erect and maintain on the said lands a station for the accommodation of passengers and freight, and name the same B." The station was erected on the land in the deed containing this proviso, but not at the point re-presented:—Held, that, though the plaintiffs had the expectation that the station would have been placed where they desired, yet there have been placed where they desired, yet there had been no deceit practised by the defendants' engineer for the purpose of obtaining the grants of the land; that the engineer had no power to bind the defendants to such a thing; and that the defendants had done all they were bound to do by observing the proviso in the deed, which called for the erection of the station house on the lands without specifying any particular point. Schlichauf v. Canada Southern R. W. Co., 28 Gr. 236.

The plaintiff agreed with the contractors for the building of a railway to convey to them in fee simple six acres, to be increased to ten in necessary, in consideration of their placing the station for the town of Prescott thereon. After the road had been surveyed and the station buildings erected on the property, the plaintiff executed a conveyance thereof to the contractors, which contained a covenant by them to continue and maintain the station on those lands thenecforth, but the deed was never executed by the grantees. The company continued to use such station for about ten years, when they removed it to a distance of one and a-half miles:—Held, reversing the judgment in 28 Gr. 583, that the act of the company in thus placing and using the station was a substantial compliance with the agreement, and that they were not bound to continue that station there for all time. Farm Crossings.]—In treating with the owner of lands for the right to cross the same by a railway, or in proceedings before arbitrators appointed between him and the company, with a view to ascertain the amount of compensation, the solicitor acting for the company at the arbitration is not qualified to enter into any special agreement binding the company to construct and maintain a crossing. Wood v, Hamilton and North-Western R. W. Co., 25 Gr. 135.

A deed conveying a right of way to the defendants in 1826 contained the following stipulation: "The company to make and maintain a farm crossing, with gates at the present farm lanes, the fence at crossing to be returned as much as possible." K., the company's engineer, treated for the conveyance, but had no power to agree for a second crossing, though it was said he had promised that, if he should find a second crossing necessary, he would, so far as in him lay, get it done, and the deed was executed upon this understanding:—Held, reversing the decision in 27 Gr. 95, that the defendants could not be compelled to make a second crossing for use in winter; and that, upon the construction of the words above set forth, they were bound to continue the crossing, not close it up or impair it or alter its character as a farm crossing, but were not obliged to keep it free from snow, Cameron v. Wellington, Grey, and Bruce R. W. Co., 28 Gr. 327.

In negotiating for the purchase of lands to be used by the Canada Southern Railway Company for the purposes of their railway, the meant of the company signed a written agreement of the company signed a written agreement of the company signed a written agreement of the district of the such owner should "have liberty to remove a such owner should when the such as th

The C. S. R. Co., having taken for the purposes of their railway the lands of C., made an oral agreement with C., through their agent T., for the purchase of such lands, for which they agreed to pay $662, and they also agreed to make five farm crossings across the railway on C.'s farm, three level crossings and two under-crossings; that one of such under-crossings should be of sufficient height and width to admit of the passage through it, from one part of the farm to the other, of loads of grain and hay, reaping and mowing machines; and that such crossings should be kept and maintained by the company for all time for the use of C., his heirs and assigns. C. wished the agreement to be reduced to writing, and particularly requested the agent to reduce to writing, and particularly requested the agent to reduce to the farm crossings, but he was assured the law would compel the company to build and maintain such crossings without an agreement in writing. C. having received advice to the same effect from a lawyer whom he consulted in the matter, the land was sold to the company without a written agreement, and the purchase money paid. The farm crossings agreed upon were furnished and maintained for a number of years until the company determined to fill up the portion of their road on which were the under-crossings used by C., who thereupon brought a suit against the company for damages for the highry sustained by such proceeding and for an injunction.—Held, reversing the judgment in 11 A. R. 287, which varied the judgment in 11 A. R. 287, which varied the judgment in 4 O. R. 28, that the evidence shewed that the plaintiff relied upon the law to secure for him the crossings to which be considered himself entitled, and not upon any contract with the company, and be could not, therefore, compel the company to provide an under-crossing through the solid embankment formed by the filling up of the road, the cost of which would be altogether disproportionate to his own estimate of its value and of the value of the farm. Canada Southern R. W. Co., v. Clouse, 13 S. C. R. 139.

Free Carriage of Grantor.]—The rector of Woodstock filed a bill against the Great Western Railway Company for the specific performance of an alleged contract for a free pass for himself and his successors, as the consideration for certain rectory land conveyed by the plaintiff to the company for railway purposes. The court of chancery decreed for the plaintiff. The court of appeal, not being satisfied with the evidence of the alleged contract, and also deeming the contract to be open to various objections, reversed the decree and ordered the bill to be dismissed with costs. Rights of Land Owner—Compensation—Validity of Settlement of Amount,1—In an action against defendants, a railway company, for compensation for land taken by them and interest thereon, it appeared that in 1874 defendants, without giving any notice or taking any proceedings for acquiring the land under the Railway Act. C. S. C., c. 66, entered upon it and proceeded with the construction of the railway. No settlement was made, though the railway. No settlement was made, though the plaintiff frequently demanded compensation, until 1878, when on his threatening to proceed against the company, the president, being authorized by the board, instructed the secretary to make a settlement, and he, after seeing the plaintiff, valued the land at $1,775, allowing 6 per cent, interest from the time the land ing o per cent. Interest from the time the land was taken, making in all $2.199, which the plaintiff agreed to accept. The valuation was shewn to the president, who expressed no dissent, and the written memorandum thereof was given to the plaintiff, and a copy placed among the records of the company. lution of the board was passed in regard to the valuation, and no formal contract drawn up, but the valuation was before the board when making the contract for the completion of the road. It was also proved that the plaintiff tendered a conveyance of the land to the company, and the only objection thereto was, that they were unable to pay the money: Held, under the circumstances, that the plaintiff was entitled to recover the amount of the compensation agreed upon, and the interest, Starling v. Grand Junction R. W. Co., 30 C. P. 247.

Rights of Railway Company — Lease of Part—Dispossession.]—In 1858 the defendants, requiring certain land for their stations and grounds, fenced it in, with the consent of the proprietor, M., but the amount to be paid for it was, for some reason, not agreed upon. Defendants, however, occupied it until 1886, when they leased a small portion of it to the plaintiff for the purpose of a warehouse, and in 1898 M., not having been paid for the land, put up a fence, which interfered with the plaintiff's enjoyment. The plaintiff thereupon sued defendants on the covenant in the lease for quiet enjoyment:—Held, that he could not recover, for M. could not have dispossessed the defendants, his right to the land having been by the statutes converted into a claim for compensation, and the eviction, therefore, if there was one, was not by title paramount. Mortgagee—Registry Laues.]—The registry law is binding on railway companies. Where it appeared that, after an owner of land had contracted with the Grand Trunk Railway Company for the conveyance of parts of the land for a roadway and station ground, he mortgaged the same land to a creditor without notice; and the mortgage was registered before the conveyances to the railway company :--Held, that the mortgagee was entitled to priority, and that the company were entitled under their special Act to retain the land on paying to the mortgagee its value at the time the company became entitled to it. Harty v. Appleby, 19 Gr. 205.

Other Railway Company — Registry Laws.]—Held, (1) that, under the special facts and documents set out in the report of this case, the Stratford and Huron Railway Company had power to acquire the land in question, and accept a deed thereof; (2) that the deed in question operated as a grant of the land, and not merely as a grant of a right of way over it. Quare, whether the Great West-ern Railway Company had any legal right to enter on the land for the purpose of building a switch, or for any other purpose, as against the Stratford and Lake Huron Railway Company, whose deed of the land was first registered. The Queen v. Smith, 43 U. C. R. 369.

Trespass—Power of Sale—Forfei-ture.]—The P. and C. L. R. W. Co., incor-ported in 1855, by 18 Vict. c. 194, had ac-quired the land in question as part of their roadbed. In 1865 their charter expired, the road not having been put in operation. In 1866 29 & 30 Vict. c. 98 was passed, by which the road was to be sold at auction, the Act of incorporation was revived, and the time for completing the railway extended for five years from the passing of the Act, and there was a further provision for sale under order of the court of chancery. Within the five years a conveyance was executed to the defendant company, who took possession, but did not use the land till a short time before the suit. In 1872 the C. P. and M. R. and M. Co. filed a map and book of reference of a proposed extension of their line over the land in question, and constructed part of their road thereon, but ceased in 1873. In 1880, under 43 Vict. c. 54 (O.), the C. P. and M. R. and M. Co. lensed to the plaintiff company the land in question, and this action was brought to recover possession thereof:—Held, that the construction of their road in part by the C. P. and M. R. and M. Co. in 1872 was an act of trespass; that the defendant company, under the reviving Act and conveyance in pursuance thereof, acquired a title to the land; that the power to sell by order of the court of chancery was permissive merely; that their right to the Vol., III, p-188-39 land was not forfeited by non-completion of the work on the land within the five years: and therefore that the plaintiff company should not succeed. The deed to the defendshould not succeed. The deed to the defend-ant company described them by their original name, when in fact their name had been changed:—Held, a sufficient descriptio per-sone to enable the company to take, though it might not be sufficient to sue in. Grand Junction R. W. Co. v. Middaud R. W. Co., 7 A. R. 681.

3. Lands Injuriously Affected,

(a) Action for Compensation.

Pleading - Amendment. 1 - An arbitra-Pleading — Amendment, 1 — An arbitra-tion having taken place, an award was made, on which the plaintiff sued, and a verdict rendered for defendants was set saide, after an appeal to the court of appeal. The de-fendants then applied to add a plea that the land was not injuriously affected, urging that when the mandamus was ordered there was no right of appeal in such a matter, and that they should be allowed to re-open the question by plea in order to obtain such right. by plea in order to obtain such right. The court, under the circumstances, refused the application. Quarre, if the plea had been alplowed, whether the decision on the mandamus could have been replied by way of estoppel. Ricket v. Metropolitan R. W. Co., L. R. 2 H. L. 175, and Beckett v. Midland R. W. Co., L. R. 3 C. P. 82, commented upon. Widder v. Buffallo and Lake Huron R. W. Co., 29 U. C. R. 154.

(b) Amount of Compensation.

Damages—Loss of Profits.]—Where under the Railway Act, 51 Viet, c. 29 (D.), the owner of a mill, who was also the owner of a lot adjoining it, which was used as the principal means of communication between the mill and a scale in the communication between principal means of communication between the mill and a public highway, and across which lot a railway company had erected a trestle bridge, also sought compensation for the loss of local custom to and from the mill, not arising from the construction of the railway, but from a subsequent user of it:—Held, that the damages were too remote and speculative to be allowed. St. Catharines R. W. Co. v. Norris, 17 O. R. 667.

Excess — Pleading — Fraud — Evidence Misdirection.]-An arbitration having taken place, the defendants to an action on the place, the detendants to an action on the award made in favour of the plaintiff, plead-ed, on equitable grounds, that the sum award-ed was excessively and fraudulently exorbi-tant, and the award was made by the fraud covin, and misrepresentation of the plaintiff and the arbitrators making it:—Held, on demurrer, a good defence. Widder V. Buffalo and Lake Huron R. W. Co., 24 U. C. R. 222. To support the plea of fraud, defendants called witnesses to prove that the sum awarded called witnesses to prove that the sam awares by arbitrators was grossly excessive. None of these witnesses, however, had been brought forward at the arbitration, although defendants could have called them then as well as at the trial; the award was clearly sustained by the only evidence before the arbitrators; no attempt was made to impeach the credit of any of the witnesses who gave it; no misconduct was proved on the part either of the plaintiff or of the arbitrators; and the arbitrators, being sworn, denied any improper motive:-

On appeal:—Held, that such evidence could not be wholly rejected. S. C., 27 U. C. R. 425.

The jury were directed that if the plaintiff urged to the arbitrators that he had an exclusive right to the water when he had not, it was evidence to sustain the plea of fraud:—Held, that no argument used by the plaintiff to enhance his claim or place his case in the best light, could be a fraud. S. C., 24 U. C. R. 520; affirmed in appeal, 27 U. C. R. 425.

The jury were also told that the plaintiff's right of access to the water remained as before, subject to defendants' right to use their railway:—Held, that this was a direction calculated to mislead, for the convenience of access was materially interfered with, and the jury might confound the right with the power of exercising it. S. C., 24 U. C. R. 520. At the trial defendants moved for a moustif,

At the trial defendants moved for a nonsuit, objecting that they had a right to build their crib-work in the river, and that it was improperly considered as part of the damage:—
Held, that this objection had been disposed of by the judgment awarding a mandanus. Defendants also contended that evidence was improperly received of the cost of constructing crib-work to make plaintiff's property available, he having no right to make it:—Held, clearly no ground for a nonsuit. Ib.

(c) Payment into Court.

Attachment - Mortgage-Priorities.]-The judgment debtors had leased from C lot of land on the river Humber, on which there was a stone quarry. Upon an arbitra-tion under 20 Vict. c. 146, the Great Western Railway Company were directed to pay the judgment debtors £255 as compensation for injury occasioned to them as such lessees by the erection of a permanent railway bridge the river. Before the arbitration, one of them, being the sole lessee, had mortgaged to a building society his interest in the land, and all privileges as to quarrying stone contained in the lease; and the railway company, being notified by the society not to pay to the judgment debtors the amount awarded, paid it into the common pleas. The judgment creditors, having obtained a judgment in the court of Queen's bench, attached the claim, and asked to be allowed to take the money out of court, or for an order on the company to pay it:—Held, that the money being in the common pleas, the Queen's bench could not interfere: but that, if they had power to dis-pose of it, the mortgagees would be entitled before the judgment creditors. Quære, whether the company were authorized under 16 Vict. c. 99, to pay such money into court. Quære, whether such debt could be attached. An application was afterwards made to the common pleas on behalf of the mortgagees, but that court refused to interfere, on the ground that the company had no right to pay the money into court. French v. Lewis, 16 U. C. R. 547. (d) Right to Compensation.

Bar-Time Limit.]-The mandamus nisi set out the provisions of 18 Vict. c. 180, and 20 Vict. c. 146, by which the prosecutors claimed the right to have an arbitration to settle the amount of their claim against the Great Western R. W. Co., by the erec-tion of a bermanent bridge over the river Humber. The company returned to the writ, that the prosecutors had not commenced proceedings to entitle them to a reference within six months after the passing of the first Act. The prosecutors demurred, contending that the provisions of the first Act had been altered and extended by the second Act, and that they had done all that the second Act required of them to establish their claim to an arbitration:—Held, that under 18 Vict. c. 180, the prosecutors would have been barred. not having commenced proceedings within six months after the passing of that Act: that 20 Vict. c. 146 having extended its provisions much beyond those of 18 Vict. c. 180, and ex-tended the rights thereunder beyond those explained in s. 1 to be within the meaning of the words "private rights," the rights defined in 20 Vict. c. 146 were not restricted by the provisions of 18 Vict. to those only who had commenced proceedings within six months of the passing of the latter Act; that the notice required to be given within three months after the passing of 20 Vict. was the only condition precedent to the prosecutors right to recover. Regina ex rel. Trustees of St. Andrew's Church v. Great Western R. W. Co., 14 C. P. 462.

Time Limit—Act of Contractor.]—The prescription of a right of action for injury to property runs from the time the wrongful act was committed, notwithstanding that the injury remains as a continuing cause of damage from year to year, when the damage results exclusively from that act and could have been foreseen and claimed for at the time. A company building a railway are not liable for injury to property caused by the wrongful act of their contractor in borrowing earth for embankments from a place, and in a manner, not authorized by the contract. Kerr v. Atlantic and North-West R. W. Co., 25 S. C. R. 197.

Easement—Destruction of,]—Where in building their road the defendants left a subway under a trestle bridge, and the evidence shewed that the plaintiff, the owner of the land crossed by the railway at this point, had enjoyed the open and continuous user of this subway as of right ever since 1862, but that the defendants were now proceeding to fill it up:—Held, that, though the plaintiff could not prevent the filling up of the subway, he was entitled to damages for his property in the easement. The plaintiff was entitled to assume that there was a reservation of the subway, he was entitled to damages for his property in the easement. The plaintiff was entitled to assume that there was a reservation of the subway, he was entitled to claim the easement under the Prescription Act from long and uninterrupted enjoyment as of right. 287, 13 S. C. Northern R. Injury to Timber Limits.]—The plaintiff, a timber licensee, sold his interest in the license and limits to one W., who entered and cut timber, but the transfer was not proved, and by the regulations of the Crown lands department all transfers were to be in writing and subject to approval, and were to be valid only from such approval:—Held, that the legal fitle to the limits and timber thereon was in the plaintiff, and that W.'s possession was the plaintiff, and that W.'s activities of the limits by construction of a railway. Booth v. McIntyre, 31 C. P. 183.

Interference with Access - Possession Interference with Access—Possession —The plaintiff was in possession of certain lands under an oral agreement of purchase at $450, payable in bricks deliverable as demanded, of which $100 worth had been demanded and delivered. The defendants, without making any compensation or taking any steps under the statute therefor, built their railway in front of the land so as to interfere with the plaintiff's right of access, whereupon this action was brought, and damages recovered by the plaintiff, he being treated as entitled to the whole estate in the land, and the injury being treated as permanent, reducing the value of the land:—Held, that the company were trespassers, and could not justify the acts complained of under the statute; that substantial damages, on proof of them, were recoverable for the disturbance of the possession; but in a first action only nominal damages for the injury to the reversion:—Held, therefore, that the damages here were not properly assessed, and a new trial was directed. Semble, that the damages for injury to the reversion belonged to the vendor; and leave was given to add him as a party plaintiff. Mason v. South Norfolk R. W. Co., 19 O. R. 132.

Interference with Access to River.] owned land upon the navigable river Maitland, extending to high water mark. The Buffalo and Lake Huron Railway Company constructed their road upon cribs in the river, three or four feet above the level of the water, not touching his land, but running along the whole front of it, and connected with the bank above and below, thus shutting him out from all access to the river except across the railway. Semble, that his land was not "in-juriously affected," so as to entitle him to juriously affected," so as to entitle him to compensation under the Railway Act, s. 5; but a mandamus nisi to appoint an arbitrator was granted, so as to bring up the question formally. Quære, whether the statute applies in any case where the land itself is not injured bodily, though the owner may sustain damage by its depreciation in value or othermininge by its depreciation in value or otherwise. Quere, also, whether the power given this company by their special Act of incorporation. 19 Vict. c. 21, s. 30, is controlled by ss. 130 and 138 of the Railway Act, notwithstanding the provisions in s. 139. In rew Widter and Buffalo and Lake Huron R. W. Co., 20 U. C. R. 638.

On the return to the mandamus:—Held, that W.'s land was "injuriously affected." Defendants under 19 Vict, c. 21, and as assigness of the Canada Company, claimed a right to erect any works for improving the navigation, and to be the owners of the bed of the stream:—Held, that the powers given for that purpose were distinct from those granted for the purposes of their railway; and that, admitting the ownership, it was still subject to the public right, which they had infringed so as to cause a particular injury to the prosecutor. Regina v. Buffalo and Lake Huron R. W. Co., 23 U. C. R. 208.

Riparian Rights.]-The appellants made a railway upon the foreshore of a tidal and navigable river by means of an embankment extending along the entire length of the respondents' frontage, cutting off all access to the water from the respondents' land except through one opening left in the said embankment and another opening just outside the respondents' boundary: — Held, affirming the judgment in 14 S. C. R. 677, that by the French law prevailing in Lower Canada, the respondents as riparian owners had the same rights of accès et sortie as they would have had if the river had not been navigable; that the above obstruction to such rights without parliamentary authority was an actionable wrong; and that the substituted openings above mentioned were no answer to a claim for indemnity. There is no distinction in principle between riparian rights on the banks of navigable or tidal and on those of non-navigable rivers. In the former case, how-ever, there must be no interference with the public right of navigation, and in order to give rise to riparian rights the land must be give rise to riparian rights the land must be in actual daily contact with the stream, later-ally or vertically. Lyon v. Fishmongers' Co., 1 App. Cas. 602, followed and held to be applicable to every country in which the same general law of riparian rights pre-vails, unless excluded by some positive rule or binding authority of the lex loci. Held, of binding authority of the lex loci. Held, that under the Quebec Railway Consolidation Act, 1880, s. 9, no authority is given to a railway company to exercise its powers in such a manner as to inflict substantial damages upon land not taken, without compensation. North Shore R. W. Co. v. Pion, 14 App. Cas. 612.

A riparian proprietor on a navigable river is entitled to damages against a railway company for any obstruction to his rights of accès et sortie, and such obstruction without parliamentary authority is an actionable wrong. North Shore R. Co. v. Pion, 14 App. Cas. 612, followed. Bigaouette v. North Shore R. W. Co., 17 S. C. R. 303.

Lowering Grade of Street — Leave of Municipality.]—The lands in question were lots 3. 4, and 6 on Clinton avenue, in the town of Niagara Falls. The defendants had taken for the purposes of their railway a small part of lot 3, and the plaintiff claimed damages for the injury caused to that lot and lots 4 and 6, by lowering the street in front of these lots so as to enable the railway to be carried over the highway, which was done in such a manner as to obstruct the plaintiff's access to his land:—Held, (1) that upon the evidence the sum paid to plaintiff for the part of lot 3 actually taken, included any damage to that lot, but not to lots 4 and 6, (2) That the claim as to lots 4 and 6 was in respect of lands injuriously affected by the exercise of the powers granted for the railway within the meaning of the Consolidated Railway Act, 1879, s. 9, s.-ss. 10 and 12 (D.). Quere, whether the compensation clauses of, part I, of the Consolidated Railway Act, 1879, apply to the defendants' railway; but, held, that either under that Act or C. S. C. c. 66, as applied to these defendants' railway; but, held, that either under that Act or C. S. C. c. 66, as applied to these defendants' pather special Act, compensation was recoverable. Held, also, that there was nothing to evoureate the defendants in the fact that they had obtained the leave of the municipality for doing as they had done. Bowen v. Canada Southern R. W. Co., 14 A. R. 1.

Negligent Work-Remedy.]-The plaintiff in his statement of claim claimed damages from the defendants for "unlawfully, negligently, and wrongfully" depressing certain streets in a town and thereby making it inconvenient and almost impossible for persons to approach the plaintiff's store for business; also for, in like manner, blocking them up and rendering them almost impassable in the neighbourhood of the plaintiff's store, and thereby "negligently, unlawfully, and wrongpreventing customers or others coming thereto, and almost entirely destroying the plaintiff's business. The statement further claimed that if the depressing and blocking up should be found to be lawful, a mandamus should be granted requiring the defendants to proceed to arbitrate to ascertain the compenproceed to arbitrate to ascertain the compen-sation payable to plaintiff; or that it be re-ferred to the proper officer to ascertain and state such compensation: — Held, on de-murrer, that the statement of claim was sufficient; for it alleged that the work was negligently done, and this gave a cause of action, even though the work itself might be lawful. Quere, whether a mandamus would be granted; for, if the plaintiff was entitled to compensation, the proper remedy would apparently be by reference to the proper officer, as asked by way of alternative relief; also, whether it was necessary to allege that defenwhether it was necessary to allege that defendants' railway touched or took a portion of plaintiff's land; and whether, also, under the Railway Acts, defendants were liable to make compensation except for lands taken. As to the latter points, as the judgment could not be reviewed until after the trial, they were enlarged before the Judge thereat, Quillinan v. Canada Southern R. W. Co., 6 O. R. 567.

Operation of Railway.] — A railway company were permitted by a city corporation to run their track along a street in the city, which was only thirty feet wide. The plaintiff, owning a brick cottage and frame house in the street, complained that the trains passing caused the houses to vibrate, and the plaster to fall off the walls, and alleged loss of tenants thereby; but the evidence as to any structural injury caused by the railway was contradictory, and the court found that it was not sufficiently made out:—Held, that the plaintiff was not entitled to compensation under the Railway Act. In re Declin and Hamilton and Lake Eric R. W. Co., 40 U. C. R. 169.

Held, that the railway company, though incorporated by 47 Vict. c. 75 (O₁), were, by 54 & 55 Vict. c. 86 (D₁), subject to the legislative authority of the parliament of Canada, and their power to do the work of altering the grade of a street, in the doing of which the damages claimed by a land owner arose, was under s. 90 of the Pominion Railway Act. 1888; and the rights of the parties in an arbitration to ascertain such damages were governed by the provisions of that Act. And where the arbitrator awarded that the land owner had suffered no damage:—Held, that, having regard to the provisions of s. 161, s. s. 2, no appeal lay from the award. Held, also, that the arbitrator had no power to allow the land owner structural damages "caused to his buildings, or damages for "personal inconvenience."

ence" by reason of his means of access being interfered with. Ford v. Metropolitan R. W. Co., 17 Q. B. D. 12, distinguished as to the former kind of damages, and followed as to the latter. Re Toronto, Hamilton, and Buffalo R. W. Co. and Kerner, 28 O. R. 14.

— Interest.]—A claimant entitled under the Railway Act of Canada, 51 Viet, c. 29, to compensation for injury to lands by reason of a railway, owing to alterations in the grades of streets and other structural alterations, is also, having regard to ss. 90, 92, and 144, entitled to an award of damages arising in respect of the operation of the railway, and to interest upon the amounts awarded, notwithstanding that no part of such lands has been taken for the railway. Hammersmith, &c., R. W. Co., v. Brand, L. R. 4 H. L. 171, distinguished. Re Birtly and Toronto, Hamilton, and Buffalo R. W. Co., 28 O. R. 468.

Under the Dominion Ranway Act, 51 Viet, c. 29, compensation recoverable in respect of lands injuriously affected must be based on injury or damage to the land itself, and not on personal inconvenience or discomfort to the owner or occupant. It was held, therefore, that no compensation could be allowed to the owner of land fronting on a street along which a railway company lawfully constructed its line of railway, there being no interference with access to the land except so far as that resulted from the passing of trains. Re Birely and Toronto. Hamilton, and Buffalo R. W. Co., 28 O. R. 498, considered. Powell v. Toronto, Hamilton, and Buffalo R. W. Co., 25 A. R. 209.

Order of Railway Committee of Privy Council—Leave of Municipality.]—The sections of the Dominion Railway Act, 1888, under the headings "Plans and Surveys," and "Lands and their Valuations," apply as well to lands "Injuriously Affected," as to lands taken for the purposes of the railway. It is no answer to a complaint by a land owner that the company is proceeding without having taken the necessary steps under these sections, that they have the authority of the railway committee of the privy council for the execution of the works. Corporation of Parkdaie v. West, 12 App. Cas. 962, followed. Held, also, that a by-law passed by the municipal council granting aid for the railway, and the validating Act, 58 Vict. C 68 (O.), did not affect this question. Headie v. Toronto, Hamilton, and Buffalo R. W. Co. 26 O. R. 607. See, also, S. C., 27 O. R. 46

Private Owner—Nuisance.]—The Grand Trunk Railway Company ran their line through and along a street in Guelph. to which the lands of the applicant were adjacent:—Held. that if the works complained of amounted to a public nuisance it would not be a case for private compensation; and that if authorized by law, the works did not injuriously affect the applicant within the meaning of 14 & 15 Vict. c. 51, s. ‡. Day v. Grand Trunk R. W. Co., 5 C. P. 420.

Nuisance—Injunction.]—A railway company being about to construct their line along a public street, a bill was filed by the owner of property in front of which it would pass, to restrain the construction of the road, on the ground, as alleged, that his property would be thereby greatly depreciated in value from divers causes, and rendered greatly less

4. Proceedings, Suits, and Actions by Land Owners.

Actions or proceedings on the award, or agreement for sale, or to compel compensation under the statutes. See the previous sub-heads.

Damages — Injunction — Removal of Obstruction, I-led, that, as the appellants had not taken the steps necessary under the Act of 1880, to vest in them the power to exercise the right or do the thing for which compensation would have been due under the Act, an action by the respondents for damages and the removal of an obstruction would lie; in which, if the obstruction were not ordered to be removed, damages as for a permanent injury to the land could be recovered. Corporation of Parkodie v. West, 12 App. Cas. 602, followed. Aorth Shore R. W. Co. v. Pion, 14 App. Cas. 612.

Discovery — Pleading — Amendment.]—
The bill alleged that tenants pur autre vie had sold and conveyed to a railway company and to their roadway. After the cesser of the life estate the parties entitled in remainer libed a bill against the vendors and the empany, seeking discovery as to what estate empany, seeking discovery as to what estate on interest the vendors and conveyed, stating that the company alleged they had paid the vendors the full price of the fee in the land, and that they (the vendors) were liable to account for the price so paid; and prayed for an account for the price so paid; and prayed for an account and payment to the plaintiffs of a proper slare or proportion thereof:—Held, on denurrer by the vendors, that no sufficient round of equity was alleged ngainst them; the plaintiffs, however, to be at liberty to amend their bill as they should be advised. Octavo v. Grand Trunk R. W. Co., 26 Gr. 33.

Dower. |—Under 16 Vict. c. 99, s. 7. on the purchase of lands by the Great Western Railway Company from the proprietors, the price acreed upon is made the compensation to be puid for such lands, and to stand in the stead thereof; and "any claim to or incumbrance on said land," &c., is converted into a claim on such compensation. When, therefore, the company agreed with the then owner in fee for the purchase of land, and obtained a conveyance:—Held, that on his death his widow could not maintain an action of dower against the company. Chewett v. Great Western R. W. Co., 26 C. P. 118.

Ejectment.]—The Great Western R. W. Co, are not authorized by 4 Wm. IV, c. 29 to enter upon and assume lands to be permanently appropriated to the uses of the railway without the permission first obtained of the owner, or by reference under the statute. Defendants requiring plaintiff's land for their railway, a sealed agreement for a reference was entered into to ascertain the price, and an award was accordingly made for £503 15s., to be paid by defendants to plaintiff within three months from the date of the award, on plaintiff's shewing a good title to and executing free from incumbrance a valid conveyance of the land. Defendants entered into hossession under the reference, and with plaintiff's permission, and built part of their works thereon with his knowledge; but he being unable to shew a good title within the three months, defendants did not pay the sum awarded, and the plaintiff, after the three months, refused to accept the sum awarded, and brought ejectment:—Held, that he could not treat the defendants as trespassers, and therefore ejectment would not lie. Rankin v. Great Western R. W. Co., 4 C. P. 463.

Defendants required land of the plaintiff, on the river Credit, for their railway, and an arbitration was agreed on to determine the value and any damages by interference with plaintiff's privileges in the river. He had purchased from the government about 1,000 acres, extending above and below where the railway was to pass, but had not obtained the patent, and he claimed to be entitled to certain water privileges, of which defendants did not know the nature or extent, but they assumed that he had and could convey them. The award, made on the 17th April, 1854, determined the value of the land, and compensation for all damages and interference with such privileges, at £3.675, to be paid on the plaintiff executing to them a valid conveyance of said land; and further, that the company might take immediate possession. On the 22nd the plaintiff drew on defendants solicitor for the sum, and he accepted the order, agreeing to pay when the plaintiff had fulfilled his part of the award; and on this acceptance the bank advanced the money to the plaintiff. In July following a patent is sued to the plaintiff for the whole tract, but it expressly reserved all navigable waters, and of the river. The defendants went on with their works without objection by plaintiff until March, 1855, when he gave them notice that unless the sum awarded was almost entirely for rights claimed by plaintiff in the river, which he did not possess. He thereupon brought ejectment. In May a statue was passed authorizing defendants to make a fixed bridge over any river across which their railway might be carried. After action, defendants paid into court the sum awarded, with therest, but the plaintiff still proceeded:—Held, that defendants were lawfully in possession after the award, and that upon the facts proved the plaintiff hadeno right to dispossess them. Cotton v. Hamilton and Toronto R. W. Co., 14 U. C. R. S7.

A railway company having mortgaged land to secure purchase money, laid down rails upon the mortgaged land and worked the railway:—Held, that the mortgages could eject, and that such mortgage was not ultra vires; but that, where land is taken under the compulsory clauses, the compensation must be obtained as prescribed by the statute. Galt v. Eric and Niagara R. W. Co., and Great Western R. W. Co., 19 C. P. 357.

The plaintiff, having a notice from defendants that they required part of his land, re-fused to allow them to enter, but afterwards withdrew his opposition, on condition that it should not in any way prejudice his rights against them, and defendants then entered and constructed their railway. Arbitrators were appointed to determine his compensation, but before award made defendants desisted from their notice, and the plaintiff therefore failed in an action by him upon the award. The company afterwards served another notice, and, as the plaintiff did not appoint an arbi-trator, the county court Judge appointed one D. as sole arbitrator, who inspected the land taken, and awarded £364 10s, to the plaintiff. This sum defendants paid into court, long before this suit, and they had continued in possession of the land. It appeared that two lines had been surveyed and staked off through plaintiff's lands before their first notice, and the line shewn by their plan and book of reference filed was the first, which was not adopted, though in the notices the land re-quired was stated to be that "staked off by quired was stated to be that "staked off by the said company according to the plan of the said railway." The deviation, however, of the two lines was slight, much less than a mile, and it was admitted that the land embraced in each award was that actually taken for the railway. The plaintiff having brought ejectment for this land:—Held, that he could not recover, for that, notwithstanding the deviation, he was confined, by what had been done, to his claim by arbitration for the land taken. Grimshauce v. Grand Trunk R. W. Co., 19 U. C. R. 493.

Defendants in 1851 staked out their railway across the land in question, and in 1853 deposited their plan in the office of the clerk of the peace, and haid the rails and built their station on the land, which was then vested in the Crown; but this was without the consent of Her Majesty, under C. S. C. c. 66, s. 11, s.-s 31, and they had taken no other proceedings to obtain a right to the possession. In 1854 the commissioners of public works, under 13 & 4 Vict. c. 15, conveyed the land to the plaintiffs by deed, in which the railway was referred to as a proposed line, and for fourteen years after this defendants continued thus to use the land, with the knowledge of and without any interference by the plaintiffs:—Held, that the plaintiffs could not maintain ejectment, but must seek for compensation under the Railway Act. County of Welland v. Buffalo and Lake Huvon R. W. Co., 30 U. C. R. 147, 31 U. C. R. 539.

While the plaintiff, the true owner of certain land, was absent in Australia, the defendants agreed to purchase the land for the purposes of their railway—without arbitration—from the plaintiff's brother, believing him to he, as he professed to be, the owner, and paid him the full value therefor, and was by him let into possession:—Held, that the plaintiff could not maintain ejectment, but must look to defendants for compensation under the statutes, McLean v. Great Western R. W. Co., 33 U. C. R. 198.

Defendants, requiring plaintiff's refusal to accept the compensation offered, obtained from the county court Judge a warrant under s. 11, 8-8. 21, of C. S. C. e. 66, for immediate possession, upon giving the necessary security to pay and deposit the compensation to be awarded within one month thereafter. Subsequently the arbitrators awarded to the plaintiff $7.200, together with the costs of the reference, &c. On the 15th April, 1876, defendants petitioned the court of Queen's bench, under 3S Vict. c. 15 (O.), to set aside or reduce the award as excessive, which the plaintiff copposed, and the petition was dismissed with costs. On the 17th March, 1877, defendants gave notice of appeal to the court of appeal, and filed the usual bond. The defendants did not pay the compensation awarded, nor the costs of the reference, &c., but they paid the arbitrators' costs, and the costs of the petition. On 30th August, 1877, the plaintiff brought ejectment, contending that defendants, by non-payment of the amount awarded, had lost their right to the possession:—Held, that ejectment would not lie, but that the plaintiff must proceed upon the award; and that had all the rights of an unpaid vendor. Norval v. Canada Southern R. W. Co., 28 C. P. 300.

The owner of lands over which the Grand Trunk Railway would pass offered to convey a portion thereof for a station house upon certain conditions, which offer was rejected. Afterwards an agreement was made with the solicitor of the contractors, which was reduced into writing and signed by the owner, agree-ing to convey a quantity of land not to exceed ten acres, upon condition that the station should be placed upon it. The owner afterwards refused to convey unless the contractors would secure to him three crossings over the railway track, and brought ejectment to turn the parties out of possession of the land so agreed to be conveyed. The court decreed specific performance of the agreement to convey and an injunction to stay the ejectment, notwithstanding that defendant swore that the condition upon which he agreed to convey was that the crossings should be secured to him. Jackson v. Jessop, 5 Gr. 524.

When lands are taken possession of by a railway company under the statutory powers, this court will not order possession to be restored in case of default in payment of the compensation awarded to the owners. The proper remedy is a sale of the land, and this will be granted under the prayer for general relief, though not asked for by the bill. Slater v. Canada Central R. W. Co., 25 Gr. 363.

Sec. also, Phillips v. Royal Niagara Hotel Co., 25 Gr. 358.

In an action by the attorney-general, upon the relation of the bursar of Toronto University, to recover possession of certain lands claimed to be vested in Her Majesty for the benefit of the university, the defendants pleaded that the said lands had been, with the assent of the university and bursar, taken possession of by them for the purposes of their railway under their statutory powers, and that they had since retained and then were in possession thereof, and they also pleaded the Statute of Limitations:—Held, on demurrer, that if was not necessary to set out specifically the statutes alluded to, in the various proceedings connected with the expropriation of the land, and the defence was not objectionable, upon demurrer, on the ground of want of certainty, by reason of its merely general allegation of compliance with the statutory requirements. Held, also, that the mere allegation that the defendants were in possession afforded a good defence in law in such an action, and put the plaintiff to the proof of his cause of action, under rule 144. Held, also, that experience in the railway company was necessary, which it was not, yet, after a user of the land by the call the experience of the land by the company for ten years, coupled with the legislative recognition of the statuts of the railway company and with the fact that the taking of it was with the assent of the university and colleges and bursar, the formal assent of the Crown must be held to have been dispensed with a sum of the control of the status of the railway child, also, that the Statute of Limitations was no bar to the action, although brought by the Crown in its capacity as trustee of the land in question. Injunction—Neglect to Fenec—Remedy.]—A railway company who take possession of land under the compulsory powers conferred by the statute, are bound to erect feness for the proper separation of the railway from the remainder of the land, within six months from the time of possession being taken, not from the time of notice being given requiring such fenes to be constructed, which need only be a reasonable notice to fence; and if they neglect to do so they may be enjoined from further using the line of railway. In such a case the owner is not required to erect the fences at his own expense and depend on his recovering damages from the company. Masson v. Grand Junction R. W. Co., 26 Gr. 286.

This decision was reversed. The court of appeal, while adopting the construction of $8.22, $8.3, $7$, contended for by the plaintift, in effect determined that a proper case had not been made out for granting an injunction peremptorily restraining the company from further constructing or working the line of raliway; that under the circumstances the possible injury and loss to the defendants, by the sudden and immediate stoppage of their work, largely outweighed any possible advantage to the plaintiff; and that the proper relief was by a mandamus, or mandatory injunction, requiring the company to construct the fences; and that, if there was jurisdiction to restrain the further use of the road, as to which any expression of opinion was avoided, it should not be exercised except in the case of a contunacious refusal. B. 289 n.

Mortgage for Unpaid Purchase Money,—The rights and franchises of a railway company do not prevail over a vendor's lien; and where land was sold to a railway company for the purposes of the road, and a mortgage taken to secure the unpaid purchase money:—Held, that the lien was not thereby lost. Galt v. Erie and Niagara R. W. Co., 15 Gr. 637. See S. C., 14 Gr. 499.

Trespass.]—Held, that under 4 Wm. IV. c. 29 the Great Western R. W. Co. might enter upon land for the purposes of their road, and could not be treated as trespassers there, though they must make compensation, Sommerville v. Great Western R. W. Co., 11 U. C. R. 304.

On 26th October, 1852, the Buffalo and Brantford R. W. Co. took a deed from plaintiff's father, by which he agreed "to allow and permit the said company forth; with to take, occupy, possess, and enjoy of and through" the land in question. It ap-peared that the plaintiff had no title, but had merely been allowed by his father to occupy; that he had admitted that it was with his father, and not with him, that the company must settle; and that he had worked under the defendant, a contractor with the com-pany, in making the fence along the line through this land. After the deed the plainthrough this land. After the deed the piantifif and his father forbade defendant to enter. Defendant entered in December, 1852, to make the railway, and the fences being insufficient, the plaintiff's wheat was injured by cattle. For this he sued in this action of trespass qu. cl. fr. The jury found action of trespass qu. cl. fr. The jury found for the plaintiff, on the ground, as they stated, that defendant had been forbidden to enter before any work was done. The company before any work was uone. The company were established under the general Act 12 Vict. c. S4, and the deed was taken while under that Act; but before entering they were placed under the Railway Clauses Consolida-tion Act, by 16 Vict. c. 45:—Held (treating the question as one between the company and the question as one between the company and the owner). (1) that the deed was more than a mere agreement as to the price; the effect of it being to give the company permission forth-with to take and occupy a right of way through the land, of the ordinary width of the road. (2) That the company having, by their agreement previously made, a right to enter forthwith, 14 & 15 Vict. c. 51, s. 11, s.-s. 2, would not apply. (3) That the company could enter forthwith, though they had not paid or tendered the money; that not being a condition precedent according to the deed, and there being nothing in 12 Vict. c. 84 to prevent it; and therefore that they could not be considered trespassers. Held, also, as to the plaintiff, that the verdict was wrong, taking the reasons given by the jury; for, looking upon the deed merely as a license, it was acted upon the moment the company entered into contracts for the work, on which they would be liable to others, and was there-fore not revocable. (2) That on legal grounds, independently of his own conduct, which in justice should estop him, the plain-tiff could not maintain trespass against any tut could not maintain trespass against any one claiming under the company; for he was not at any time more than a tenant at will, and the deed determined the will and left him tenant at sufferance only, with a right to enter and remove the crop. Nelson v. Cook, 12 U. C. R. 22.

The Great Western Railway Company are not entitled to enter upon lands with the intention of permanently appropriating them for their railway without the owner's permission, or a reference under the statute. Defendants having so entered upon plaintiff's land in defiance of him, though such intention was afterwards abandoned, were held liable in an action of trespass qu. cl. fr. Jannetto

v. Great Western R. W. Co., 4 C. P. 488. See Rankin v. Great Western R. W. Co., 4 C. P. 463.

An award under 14 & 15 Vict. c, 51 will not cover injuries done by the company in entering upon lands before filing their map and plan, when they had no legal right to enter. Jeaster v. Bell, 13 U. C. R. 176.

The Grand Trunk Railway Company gave a notice to the plaintiff under 14 & 15 vict. c. 51, s. 11, s.-s. 5, of their intention to take about eleven acres through which their line passed. They afterwards withdrew this, and informed the plaintiff orally that a new notice would be given, but omitted to give it. The quantity marked on the company's map, which was duly filed, was only 2.25 acres. Defendants, contractors under the company, laving entered upon this portion and constructed their railway:—Held, that the plaintiff was entitled to damages for the loss of occupation of such portion, and for the inconvenience to him in the use of his farm by its being thus intersected, up to this action. Wike's v. Growski, 13 U. C. R. 308.

The Grand Trunk Railway Company gave notice to the plaintiff of requiring his land, after which an award was made by their arbitrator and the one appointed by the county court Judge, the arbitrator named by plaintiff not executing it. The amount awarded was paid into the office of the clerk of the Crown. Defendants justified taking possession, &c., in trespass, under a warrant by the county court Judge directed to the sheriff (defendant) recting these facts and directing the sheriff to put the company in possession:—Held, that the sheriff was justified in acting under such warrant, and was not bound to ascertain if the award upon which it was granted was valid. Miller v. Gzoreski, 6 C. P. 71.

The persons constructing a railway took gravel for ballast from a road allowance, at or near where the railway crossed it. The pathmaster of the corporation of the tear that the pathmaster of the corporation of the tear that the railway company, their superintendent wrote to the township clerk admitting that they should have got permission before taking it, and asking what damages they expected, saying that the company would of course do what was right. Afterwards they made an offer by way of settlement, which was not accepted:—Held, that the company were liable for the trespass; that the plaintiffs could maintain an action therefor; and that the six months' limitation clause, C. S. C. c. 66, s. S3, did not apply, the wrong complained of being an illegal act not necessarily connected with the construction of the railway, more than the appropriation of any other property to their use, Township of Brock v. 5. Reference and Award.

(a) Arbitration and Reference-When Or-

pany to appoint an arbitrator to determine the compensation to be paid for land taken, it appeared that the company disputed the applicant's title, and claimed title in themselves, the application was refused, and the applicant left to his action to try the title. In ret Jones and Erie and Niagara R. W. Co., 25 C. P. 559.

Lands Injuriously Affected — Arbitra-tion or Action.]—Applications were made on behalf of A. and B. for a mandamus to the Galt and Guelph R. W. Co. to compel them to appoint an arbitrator on their part, to determine upon the compensation due for damages in reference to certain injuries specified in the notices, which had been previously served upon them. It appeared that the heads of claim made by A. were for consequential damages, chiefly from alleged omissions, and for neglect and improper conduct of the company in the construction of their work, or for alleged consequential injury to the property of He claimant, over which the railway passed:

—Held, that these were not proper subjects for arbitration under 4 Wm. IV. c. 29, but for action. B.'s claim was for injury by the construction of the railway upon land which he at the time occupied as lessee; and a mandamus was granted, as it was not clear that he could recover such damages by action. (b) Arbitrators—Appointment and Qualification of.

Death of Arbitrator—Replacing—Time—Statutes.—In relation to the expropriation of lands for railway purposes, and looking at sex, 151, 156, and 157 of the Railway Act, 51 Vict. c. 29 (1).;—Held, that the provisions of s. 157 apply to a case where the arbitrator appointed by the proprietor died before the award had been made and four days prior to the date fixed for making the same; that in such a case the proprietor was entitled to be allowed a reasonable time for the appointment of another arbitrator to fill the vacancy thus caused, and to have the arbitration proceedings continued, although the time so fixed had expired without any award having been made or the time for the making thereof having been prolonged. Shannon v. Montreal Park and Island R. W. Co., 28 S. C. R. 374.

Disqualification — Ratepayer of Shareholder Municipality—Appeal—Certorari,— A motion was made to a Judge under R. S. C. c. 109, s. He was not himself a shareholder, nor had he any personal interest in the matter, except as a resident of the city, in which he had no real estate, and was assessed on income only: — Held, that the arbitrator was not disqualified. Held, that no appeal lay to a divisional court from the decision of the Judge acting under the statute; and that a divisional court had no power to remove the proceedings by certiforari. Engineer of Railway Company.]—Remarks on the appointment by defendants of their own engineer as arbitrator, and upon the duty of an arbitrator. Widder v. Buffalo and Lake Huron R. W. Co., 24 U. C. R. 520.

Making Appointment Rule of Court.]—The railway company served a notice on H. under 42 Vict. c. 9 (D.), offering a sum of money as compensation for land to be expropriated by them, and naming an arbitrator. H. served a notice on the company, maning his arbitrator, and the two appointed a third:—Held, that the notices of appointment of arbitrators and the appointment of the third arbitrator might be made a rule of court under C. L. P. Act, s. 201. Re Credit Valley R. W. Co. and Great Western R. W. Co., 4 A. R. 532, distinguished. Re Herring and Napanee, Tamworth, and Quebec R. W. Co., 5 O. R. 349.

Notice Appointing—Requisites of—Certificate—Seal.]—It was objected that defendants' notice appointing their arbitrator was not accompanied by a surveyor's certificate, and it was denied that the plaintiff was entitled to any compensation:—Held, that, as no land was taken, and defendants denied the plaintiff's right to anything, the certificate was unnecessary. Held, also, that such notice need not be under the defendants' corporate seal. Widder v. Buffalo and Lake Huron R. W. Co., 24 U. C. R. 520.

"Opposite Party" — Mortgagor and Mortgagoe. — The words "opposite party" in s. 150 of the Dominion Railway Act, 51 Vict. c. 29, s. 150. must be read so as to include both mortgagor and mortgage, and both must concur in the appointment of an arbitrator to determine the compensation to be paid for mortgaged land required for the railway. Re Toronto, Hamilton, and Buffalo R. W. Co. and Burke, 27 O. R. 990.

Sole Arbitrator — Ex Parte Appointment. — The provisions of the Ruilway Act, R. S. 1877 c. 165, apply as well to cases where a 1877 c. 165, apply as well to cases where a stricted on the Judge, as where the owner names an arbitrator on his own behalf, to value lands taken for railway purposes. Therefore, where the owner had omitted to name an arbitrator, and a sole arbitrator was appointed by the Judge of the county court, without notice of the intended application for his appointment having been given to the owner, and the arbitrator proceeded to ascertain the amount of compensation to be paid by the company:—Heid, that the owner was not bound by the act of the arbitrator so appointed, and the company were restrained from proceeding with their works on land until a proper application was made upon the notice. McGibbon v. Morth Simoso R. W. Co., 26 Gr., 226.

Third Arbitrator — Ex Parte Appointment.] — Plaintiff and defendants each appointed an arbitrator to value lands of the plaintiff required for defendants' railway. The two arbitrators not being able to agree upon a third, the Judge of the county court upon their application appointed a third. No notice was given to the company of the intention to make such application, but it appeared that the arbitrator appointed by them was their general agent for obtaining the land required for the right of way: that on three other occasions the Judge, on his request as representing and than a supplemental application, and the particular that the paid the award. The arbitrator, however, swore that he had no authority to apply in this case, and that on the other occasions his proceedings were sauctioned by the solicitor for the company. The plaintiff having sued the company upon the award made:—Held, that the third arbitrator was properly appointed; and the award was sustained. Daly v. Bulgato and Lake Huron R. W. Co., 16 U. C. R. 238.

Necessity for — Waiver of Objections.] — See Wulder v. Buffalo and Lake Huron R. W. Co., 24 U. C. R. 520.

(c) Award—Appeal from and Proceedings to Set aside.

Appeal—Forum.]—Under s. 161 of the Dominion Railway Act, 51 Viet, c. 29 (D.), an appeal lies in this Province by either party from an award of compensation exceeding 8400 either to the court of appeal or to the high court of justice, but if an appeal is taken to the latter tribunal, no further appeal lies by either party to the court of appeal. Birely v. Toronto, Hamilton, and Buffalo R. W. Co., 25 A. R. 88.

— Forum—Time.]—An appeal under s. 161 of the Railway Act. 51 Vict. c. 29 (D.), from an award, need not be brought on for hearing within a month from notice of the award; an effective notice of appeal, given in good faith, within the month, is sufficient. Such an appeal should be brought on for hearing before a single Judge in court, not before a divisional court. Re Potter and Central Counties R. W. Co., 16 P. R. 16.

Forum — Transfer to Proper Court.]—The proper forum for the hearing of an appeal from an award under the Dominion Railway Act is a Judge in court, and not a divisional court: the provision of rule 117 respecting proceedings directed by any statute to be taken before the court, and in which the decision of the court is final, is not applicable to an appeal of this kind. In rePotter and Central Counties R. W. Co., 16 P. R. 16, approved. Where an appeal was brought in the wrong court, an order was brought in the wrong court, an order was made under rule 784 transferring it to the proper court, upon payment of costs. ReMontreal and Ottawa R. W. Co. and Ogilvie, 18 P. R. 120.

— Interference on.]—On an appeal to the supreme court from a judgment of the exchequer court increasing the amount awarded by the official arbitrators to the claimant for expropriation of land for the Intercolonial Railway:—Held, that, to warrant an interference with an award of value necessarily largely speculative, an appellate court must be satisfied beyond all reasonable doubt that some wrong principle has been acted upon or something overlooked which ought to have been considered by the official arbitrators; and upon the evidence in this case the court refused to interfere with the amount of compensation awarded by the official arbitrators. The Queen v. Paradis, The Queen v. Beaulieu, 16 S. C. R. 716.

In the matter of expropriation of land for the Intercolonial R. W. Co, the award of the arbitrators was increased by the Judge of the exchequer court from $4,155 to $10.824.25 after additional witnesses had been examined by the Judge. On appeal to the supreme court:—Held, that, as the judgment appealed from was supported by evidence, and there was no matter of principle upon which such judgment was fairly open to blame, nor any oversight of material consideration, the judgment should be affirmed. The Queen v. Charland, 16 S. C. R. 721.

Where an award of compensation made in an arbitration under the Canadian Railway Act, 1888, 51 Vict, c. 29, was appealed from under s. 161, s.-s. 2:—Held, that the court rightly exercised its jurisdiction by reviewing the award as if it had been the judgment of a subordinate court, that is, by deciding whether a reasonable estimate of the evidence had been made. It was not authorized by the section to disregard the award and deal with the evidence de novo as if it had been a court of first instance. Atlantic and North-West R. W. Co. v. Wood, [1895] A. C. 257.

— Interference on — Mode of — Rule Nisi.]—The most proper and convenient mode of appealing against an award under the Railway Act of Ontario, R. S. O. 1877. C. 105, ss. 19 and 20, is by rule nisi, upon reading the evidence taken by the arbitrators and transmitted by them under s.-s. 12. The court will not interfere with such award upon the merisunless it is clearly wrong; and where there was no imputation against the arbitrators, who had examined the property, and seen and heard the witnesses, whose evidence as to the value of the land was extremely contradictory, the court refused to interfere on the ground that the sum given was too small. In re Hamilton and North-Western R. W. Co. and Boys, 44 U. C. R. 626.

—Interference on—Principle.] — On an arbitration in a matter of the expropriation of land under the provisions of the Railway Act, the majority of the arbitrators appeared to have made their computation of the amount of the indemnity awarded to the owner of the land by taking an average of the different estimates made on behalf of both parties according to the evidence before them: —Held. that the award was properly set aside on the appeal to the superior court, as the arbitrators appeared to have proceeded upon a wrong principle in the estimation of the indemnity thereby awarded. Grand Trunk R. W. Co. v. Coupal, 28 S. C. R. 531.

Right of—Provincial Statute—Dominion Railway.]—Quære, whether the finding of the arbitrators could be reviewed under 38 Vict, c. 15 (O.), the land having been taken under an Act of the Dominion parliament. Norvall v. Canada Southern R. W. Co., 5 A. R. 13. An appeal on petition will not lie from the award of arbitrators appointed under the Dominion Railway Act, 1879, 42 Vict. c. 9 (1). The only mode of impeaching such an award is by an action to set it aside: or else by making the submission a rule of court, and then moving to set it aside. The appeal given by R. S. O. 1877 c. 165, s. 20, s.-s. 19, only applies to railways over which the provincial legislature has jurisdiction, and is not available in such a case as the present. Semble, that the court has no power to turn such a petition as the present into an action. Re Lea and Ontario and Quebec R. W. Co., S O. R. 222.

Application to Set aside—Interference on.]—Semble, that, as the submission in such matters is in a measure compulsory, the court might interfere to prevent injustice where they would besitate to do so in an ordinary case. Great Western R. W. Co. v. Baby, 12 U. C. R. 106.

- Time - Evidence - Appeal.]-An award against a railway company under the Railway Act, R. S. O. 1877 c. 165, for land taken, was made on the 15th January, and a copy of the award served on January, and a copy of the award served on the secretary on the 22nd. On the 18th February a rule nisi was obtained to set aside the award, the only material filed upon the motion being a copy of the award and an affidavit, merely stating what one of the arbitrators had informed the secretary of the company were the items consti-tuting the sum awarded, but the evidence given before the arbitrators was not brought before the court until the 7th March, when the claimant in shewing cause produced what he stated to be the evidence:—Held, that the application was not an appeal under R. S. O. 1877 c. 165, s. 20. s.-s. 19, there being no evidence brought before the Judge to enable him to decide any question of fact, but the ordinary application to set aside an award, and that as such it was too late, the time for so doing having expired on 15th February, the last day of the term following the award. Quære, whether service of a copy of the award was a sufficient notice thereof, under s.-s. 19: but held, that even if so the only evidence of what took place before the arbitrators not having been produced in court for more than a month after such notice, the time allowed for appealing had expired. In re Grand Junction R. W. Co. and Masson, 44 U. C. R. 203.

Suit to Set aside — Necessity for — Validity of Award.]—Held, that the Canada Southern Railway, although brought under the jurisdiction of the Dominion before proceedings had been taken for expropriation, was still subject to the Railway Act then in force in Ontario, C. S. C. c. 66. An award having been declared void by the supreme court was amended so as to meet the objection given effect to by that court, and was re-executed by the arbitrators after the time limited for making the award had expired. The company having filed a bill to set aside such award, as well as the original award, the defendant, by his answer, asserted the validity of both. The bill was dismissed on the ground that it was unnecessary: — Held, that this, in effect, affirmed their validity, and an appeal was allowed. Noveell v. Canada Southern R. W. Co. v. Noveelt, O. Action on Award—Tender of Convey-ce—Executors—Widow.]—The plaintiffs ance — Executors — It lates.]—The plantitude were executors and trustees under the will of L., by which he devised a lot, of which the land in question formed part, to his wife during her life or widowhood; in case of her second marriage, he directed his executors to sell it and invest the price, and to pay to his wife one-third of the interest during her life: and in the event of her death, as soon as it of the property, he directed them to sell the lot and divide the proceeds among his children lot and divide the proceeds among his children and grandchildren, as specified. Some of them were infants, and the widow was in occupation of the farm, unmarried. Under these circumstances the plaintiffs, under the statutes relating to the defendants, entered into an arbitration with defendants, who required part of the lot for a gravel pit, and were unable to agree upon the price; and the arbitrators, on 29th November, 1872, awarded that defendants should pay to the respective persons entitled to receive the same $9,000 for said land, which they assessed and declared to be the full value of the fee simple. The widow was no party to the arbitration. On 3rd December defendants notified the On 3rd December defendants notified and plaintiffs that they would not take the land, of which they had never taken possession, and of which they had never taken possession. The that they withdrew from the purchase. The widow, who continued in occupation, did not convey to the plaintiffs her interest until 7th January, 1874, and having tendered a con-veyance to the defendants in February, 1874, they brought this action on the award on 23rd March following:—Held, that the plaintiffs could not recover on the award. Michell v. Great Western R. W. Co., 38 U. C. R. 471. See S. C., 35 U. C. R. 148.

Tender of Conveyance-Title-Payment—Pleading.]—A land owner to whom compensation has been awarded for land taken by a railway company, under the Railway Act, C. S. C. c. 66, cannot sue upon the award before tendering a conveyance of the land. A plea to such an action, that no such conveyance had been executed or tendered, was therefore held good. Defendants also pleaded, on equitable grounds, that after award they tendered the sum awarded to S. (with whom the arbitration had been had). who then appeared to be the owner in fee simple of the land according to the registered title; that he refused to receive it; that defendants had since received notice that S. had not a good title, and that the plaintiffs (his executors) were not entitled to the sum awarded: and that defendants had always been ready to pay the said sum on receiving a ood and sufficient conveyance of the land : Held, a bad plea, there being no averment that had not in fact a good title, nor that the defendants had paid the money into court under the statute, nor that they now brought it into court. Cauthra v. Hamilton and North-Western R. W. Co., 41 U. C. R. 187.

Pleading.] - The eleventh plea to the third count (a common count for money awarded) was that the award mentioned and the money claimed there and in the first count the money craimed there and in the first count in special count on the award), were the same:—Held, no defence, Widder v. Buffalo and Lake Huron R. W. Co., 24 U. C. R. 222.

Action on Bond — Leasehold Lands — Annual Sum—Costs—Tender of Conveyance

-Payment into Court-Pleading.] - A bond —Payment into Court—Pleading.] — A bond given by defendants to plaintiff, after reciting the service of a notice on plaintiff by the Kingston and Pembroke Railway Company, requiring certain of his lands for railway purposes, and offering $2,000 as compensation, which plaintiff had refused, was conditioned for the payment, within one month after the making of an award under the Railway Act of 1808, of the sum to be found due him thereby. for damages sustained by him, and compensation due him, by reason of the railway company taking and retaining possession of his land, and for and retaining possession of his land, and for interest and costs lawfully payable to the The plaintiff's lands consisted of freehold and leasehold lands, the latter being held under leases from year to year, termin-able by three months' notice, but, if resumed apic by three months' notice, but, if resumed before the expiration of fifteen years from the commencement thereof, which would be on the 1st April, 1880, the lessee was to be paid for his improvements, but not otherwise. On the 29th April, 1874, the lands comprised in the plaintiff's leases were leased to the rail-way company, which to the existing heavy way company, subject to the existing leases, but with all the rights and powers of the lessors thereunder. The plaintiff was awarded $708.64, with $67.22 interest, for his jessors thereunder. The plantiff was awarded $708.64, with $61.22 interest. for his freehold land taken, and an annual sum of $349.70 for his leasehold land, from the date of the company's taking possession, 26th June, 1877, until the termination of said leases. In an action on the bond, alleging as a breach the non-payment of the amount awarded with interest and costs:— Held, that the bond would cover the amount awarded for the freehold land, but not the annual sum awarded for the leasehold. Held, also, that the amount awarded was less than the amount tendered; for, assuming that the company, as reversioners, would terminate the plaintiff's leases on the expiration of the fifteen years, the annual value up to that event, namely, for two years, nine months, and four days, amounted to $966.64, which with the $708.64 for the freehold land, only amounted to $1,675.18; and therefore the plaintiff could not recover the costs of the arbitration. Held, also, that before suing for compensation awarded for land taken, a conveyance thereof must be tendered or a readiness and will-ingness to execute one be averred. To the action the defendants pleaded an equitable ment into court, under the statute, of $683.89. ment into court, under the statute, of Suss.Ssy, being the amount found due for compensation. Quere, whether the plea must be treated as an ordinary plea of payment into court in the cause, or a payment merely for the person entitled to the money. If the former, it ad-mitted the plaintiff's cause of action pro-considered as accuracy to the paid the considered as struck out of the declaration, and, so treating it here, a nonsuit was directed. Anglin v. Nickle, 30 C. P. 72.

That in such an action the defendants could not examine one of the arbitrators to shew at what he estimated the value of the land, and whether general damages were awarded in addition to specific damages. 4. That it is not necessary before bringing such an action that a month should elapse after a written notice from one of the arbitrators to the defendants of the making of the award, as R. S. O. 1877 c. 163, s. 20, s.s. 19, applies merely to the right of appeal from the award. No suggestion having been made as to any defect in title, and plaintiff's counsel offering at once to deliver a conveyance of the land to the company, the court refused to allow a plea to be added denying tender of conveyance before action. Masson v. Robertson, 44 U. C. R. 323.

Suit for Specific Performance — Defence.]—Held, that the plaintiff was entitled to specific performance of an award giving him damages for his lands taken by the defendants; that the sum awarded was not so excessive as to shew any fraudulent or improper conduct on the part of the arbitrators; and quære, whether, if shewn, it would be a defence in such a proceeding, Norvall v. Canada Southern R. W. Co., 5 A. R. 13.

Summary Enforcement.]—The distinction between arbitrations under our Municipal and Railway Acts and the English Lands Clauses Consolidation Act pointed out, and remarks as to the right to enforce such awards summarily. In re Colquinous and Town of Berlin, 44 U. C. R. 631.

Order,] — The proper mode of enforcing an award of compensation made under the Railway Act is by an order from the Judge. Canadian Pacific R. W. Co. v. Little Scaniary of St. Thérèse, 16 S. C. R. 606.

(e) Award—Execution by only Two Arbitrators.

Refusal of Third to Act.]—The award in this case was bad, for under 14 & 15 Vict. c. 51, s. 11, s.-s. 15, an award cannot be made by two arbitrators, when the third refuses to act. Grimshave v. Grand Trunk R. W. Co., 15 V. C. R. 224.

Notice.]—In an action on an award, under the Railway Act, of compensation to the plaintiff for lands injuriously affected by the construction of defendants' railway, defendants pleaded that the award was made by two of the arbitrators after the other (the arbitrator appointed by them) had refused to act in and had withdrawn from the arbitration; to which the plaintiff replied that the arbitrator witherew at defendants' request, after all the evidence on either side had been heard, whereupon the other two proceeded to consider the case and award, having first duly notified him of their intention so to do:—Held, on demurrer to the replication, that s. 11. s.~. 15. of the Railway Act, C. S. C. c. 65, clearly did not apply to such a refusal and withdrawal, and that under s.~s. 11 the two arbitrators had power to proceed as they did. Widder v. Bulfalo and Lake Huron R. W. Co., 24 U. C. R. 222.

It was objected at the trial, that the award was made without the day's notice to defendants' arbitrator required by the Act:—Held, no objection, for it was made at the same meeting from which he withdrew. S. C., ib. 520.

Refusal of Third to Attend—Notice.]—Held, that where the company's arbitrator had not been notified pursuant to the statute of time and place appointed for signing awards between the company and land owners, such awards were invalid by the statute C. S. C. c. 66, s. 11, s.-s. 11, and that although he had not life the other arbitrators that he would not attend, and waived any notice. Norvell v. Canada Southern R. W. Co., Canada Southern R. W. Co., A. R. 310.

Third Dissenting.]—The reference was beceuted by two of the three only. It appeared that at a meeting of the arbitrators a rough sketch of the award was drawn up and read over to them, and was agreed to and signed by two of them, but dissented from by the third: and on the following day the formal award in the terms of the draft was drawn up and signed by the two, without reference to the dissenting arbitrator:—Held, under s. 9. s.-s. 17, of the Railway Act, 1898, that the award was invalid; and, semble, it would be so apart from that Act. Anglin v. Nickle, 30 C. P. 72.

On an arbitration with regard to land taken by a railway company, the argument closed on the 10th August, and the arbitrators adjourned until the 11th, when, after discussion, one of them said he was sorry he could not concur with the others in the sum they had agreed upon, and withdrew. The other two then signed the award in the presence of each other, and reacknowledged it in the presence of a witness on the 14th August:—Held, that the meeting having been adjourned to the 11th, the case was within the terms of 42 Vict. c. 9, 8, 9, s.-8, 17 (D.) Held, also, after reviewing the authorities, that the award was vaild at common law. Freeman v. Ontario and Ouchee R. W. Co, 6 O. R. 413.

Third not Appointed.]—The court has no jurisdiction to set aside an award made render the Railway Act of 1868 (31 Vict. c. 28 (D.)) Held, that, even were there jurisdiction, the court would not have interfered in this case, as the instrument in question was in no sense an award under the statute, the provisions of the statute not having been observed, there having been only two arbitrators appointed, who had not been sworn, and s.-s. 26 of s. 9 not having been compiled with. Damages for Depreciation.] — Arbitrators appointed to assess the damages sustained by land owners whose lands have been taken for railway purposes, have a right to take into consideration matters other than the value of the mere quantity of land taken. Damages for Slashing, |—The submission—after reciting that the company had located their line so as to run across a portion of the land of the other party, and that disputes and differences existed as to the value of the land required by the company for the party might sustain thereby—referred "all disputes and differences which exist between the said parties." The arbitrators in their award included damages for slashing done on either side of the line taken by the company:
—Held, that this was within their authority, Re Great Western R. W. Co. and Chaucin, 1 P. R. 2888.

Description of Land. —The submission recited in the award stated that the company "had set out and taken for the uses of the road a portion of M.'s land, being all his land lying immediately north of the land theretofore conveyed by him to the company;" and the award determined "that the value of the lands so set out and taken as aforesaid is, "ke:—Held, that the land to be taken was sufficiently described. In re Multer v. Gircat Western R. W. Co., 13 U. C. R. 582.

In the award the plaintiff's freehold land was described as "the freehold portion of his lands taken!"—Held, a sufficient description, as it could be identified by the notice served by the company, and also by the plans filed. Anglin v. Nickle, 30 C. P. 72.

E. B. et al., ioint owners of land situate in the city of Quebec, were awarded $11,000 under 43 & 44 Vict. c. 43, s. 9, for a portion of their land expropriated for the use of the North Shore Railway Company. On the 12th March, 1885, E. B. et al. instituted an action against the North Shore Railway Company, based on the award. The notice of expropriation and the award, both described the land expropriated as No. 1 on the plan of the railway company deposited according to law, but in another part of the notice it was described as forming part of a cadastral lot 2345, and in the award as forming part of lots 2344, 2345. On the 5th December judgment was rendered in favour of E. B. et al., for the amount of the award:—Held, that there was no uncertainty in the award, as the words of the award: and notice were sufficient of themselves to describe the property intended to be expropriated, and which was valued by the arbitrators. Beaudet v. North Shore R. W. Co., 15 S. C. R. 44.

In an award for land expropriated for railway purposes, where there is an adequate and sufficient description, with convenient certainty, of the land intended to be valued, such award cannot afterwards be set aside on the ground tantot ere is a variation between the description of the land in the notice of expoperation and in the award. an award between the Great Western Railway Company and a person through whose lands the road passed, awarded a sum of money for damages, and, on payment for the land taken by the company, directed a conveyance of the land, the award was not set aside although it did not set out by metes and bounds the land for which the conveyance was to be given. Distribution of Damages—Executors.]

—Where the parties interested were devisees under a will:—Held, unnecessary to state how much each was to receive; for the money might be paid to the executors for them to divide. Great Western R. W. Co. v. Baby, 12 U. C. R. 195.

Form of Award.]—See Great Western R. W. Co. v. Baby, 12 U. C. R. 106, Lessee's Interest — Lumber.] — Arbitrators awarded a certain sum for defendant's interest in the land as lessee, "and for the lumber taken by the said company now piled upon that portion of the wharf taken by the said company:"—Held, beyond the power of the arbitrators. Great Western R. W. Co. v. Hunt, 12 U. C. R. 124.

Maintenance of Water Supply.]—
The following proviso was inserted in the award:—"It being understood that the Great Western Railway Company shall construct and maintain a public water tank south of the railway, sufficient at all times to supply the inhabitants of the front of said lots 79 and 89 with water from the Detroit river, and shall keep open Ferry street at its present width:"—Held, that the company could not object to this. Great Western R. W. Co. v. Baby, 12 U. C. R. 106.

Reservation of Road.]—It was expressed in the award that the land should be subject to the reservation of the Bordage road expressed in the patent to F. B. of the said land, and to any public or private right, excepting the right of the parties submitting to the arbitration, in respect of Water street and River street having been laid out on a certain plan:—Held, no objection. Great Western R. W. Co. v. Baby, 12 U. C. R. 106.

Right to Cross Track.]—The award stated:—"We have taken it for granted, in making this award, that the said G. H. shall have the right to cross the railway track from one part of his property to another:"-Held, not sufficiently definite or certain. Great Western R. W. Co. v. Hunt, 12 U. G. R. 124.

An award was held bad, for want of certainty and definiteness in the provisions respecting the right to cross the track and the manner of doing so, Great Western R. W. Co. v. Dougall, 12 U. C. R. 131.

The award contained the following reservation:—"Reserving to Dodds the right to cross the railway line from one portion of the said land to the other:"—Held, that such an absolute reservation was unauthorized, and that if it were not, so indefinite a provision would have been void; but, semble, that being unauthorized and void, it would not necessarily invalidate the whole award. Great Western R. W. Co. v. Dodds, 12 U. C. R. 132.

Separation of Damages.]—Quære, whether the award need distinguish between the price of the land and the damages. Martini v. Gzousski, 13 U. C. R. 298.

See Mitchell v. Great Western R. W. Co., 38 U. C. R. 471.

(g) Award-Other Objections to.

Agreement Made pending Arbitration—Evidence.]—After the evidence had been closed, the construction committee of the railway company wrote a letter addressed to H., agreeing to certain things whereby the damage to his property would be lessened. This was delivered to the arbitrator for the company before the award was made, and by him to the umpire, but was not communicated to H, until after the award, which contained recitals of the benefits proposed by this letter, and assessed the compensation at the sum originally offered by the company. The award was not signed by H.'s arbitrator, who swore that the letter affected the award, and reduced the sum awarded, while the other two arbitrators swore it had no effect upon their finding :- Held, that the award was bad. Remarks as to the caution to be observed by arbitrators in such cases in considering or acting upon such agreements made pending the arbitration. Re Herring and Napanee, Tamworth, and Quebec R. W. Co., 5 O. R. 349

Finality — Want of,] — Arbitrators appointed to determine the value of certain land required for the Great Western Railway Company, and the damages the owner might sustain thereby, awarded that the company should pay £50 per acre for the land, £31 5s. for other damages to the said land, and £13 15s. for other damages. It was admitted that damages to other land were claimed at the arbitration:—Held, that the award was bad, not being final on the matters submitted. Great Western R. W. Co. v. Laderonte, 1 P. R. 243.

Married Woman.]—The fact of one of the parties interested in the land being a married woman, was held no objection to the award, for it was known to the company when they referred, and both she and her husband were willing to convey in accordance with the award. Great Western R. W. Co. v. Baby, 12 U. C. R. 106.

Third Arbitrator — Objection to — Wairer — Submission—Variance.)—It was objected that there was no sufficient evidence of disagreement between the two arbitrators to warrant the appointment of a third by the county Judge:—Held, that this objection had been waived by defendants attending before the three arbitrators. Held, also, that there was no variance between the award, set out in the case, and the submission. Widder v. Buffalo and Lake Huron R. W. Co., 24 U. C. R. 520

See Moore v. Central Ontario R. W. Co., 2 O. R. 647; In re Ontario and Quebec R. W. Co. and Taylor, 6 O. R. 338.

(h) Costs.

Appeal—Costs of—Discretion.]—Although C. S. C. c. 66 directs that when the sum awarded for lands taken for a railway is less than that tendered, the costs shall be borne by the owners, the same rule does not apply as to the costs of an appeal to the court, they being then in the discretion of the court, which, under the circumstances, dismissed an appeal without costs, Re Credit Valley R. W. Co, and Spragge, 24 Gr., 231.

Arbitrators' Fees — Payment by one Party—Recovery.]—Where it was determined that neither party was entitled to the costs of arbitration under the statute; but the company, in order to take up the award, paid the whole of the arbitrators' fees:—Held, that a summary order could not be made to recoup the company for one-half the fees out of the moneys payable to the land owner, and such order was refused without prejudice to an action for the same purpose. Re Philbrick and Ontario and Quebec R. W. Co., 11 P. R. 373.

Recovery—Order — Action.] — Under 16 Vict. c. 99 s. 5, if a greater sum be awarded for land taken by the Great Western Railway Company than that tendered by them, "the company shall pay all costs and charges attending such arbitration;" but no provision is made for their recovery. The court refused to make an order on the company for payment of such costs; and, semble, that the only remedy is by an action of debt on the statute. In re Foster and Great Western R. W. Co, 32 U. C. R. 503.

Right to-Divided Success.]-A railway company, having taken certain lands for the purposes of their railway made an offer to the owner in payment of the same, which offer was not accepted, and the matter was referred to arbitration under the Consolidated Railway Acts, 1879. On the day that the arbitrators met, the company executed an agreement for a crossing over the said land, in addition to the money payment, and it appeared that the arbitrators took the matter of the crossing into consideration in making their award. The amount of the award was less than the sum offered by the company, and both parties claimed to be entitled to the costs of the arbitration, the company because the the arbitration, the company occause the award was less than their offer, and the owner because the value of the crossing was included in the sum awarded, which would make it greater than the offer :-Held, affirming the judgment of the court of appeal, which affirmed that in 5 O. R. 674, that under the circumstances neither party was entitled to costs.

Separation from Rest of Award.]—It was held no objection to the award that the arbitrators awarded costs, for, if unauthorized, the award of costs was easily separable from the rest of the award. Widder v. Buffalo and Lake Huron R. W. Co., 24 U. C. R. 520.

— Forum—Delegation—Appeal.—By the Dominion Railway Act, R. S. C. c. 109, s. S. s.-s. 22, the costs of an arbitration as to the value of land expropriated for a railway may be taxed by the Judge. The Judge in this case, by an order not appealed against, referred the taxation to a taxing officer—Held, that the question whether the Judge had power to delegate the taxation could not be raised, and that an appeal lay from the taxing officer to the Judge. Quere, whether "the Judge" named in s.s. 22 could delegate the taxation of costs. S. C., 12 P. R. 327.

Quantum—Solicitor and Client—Preliminary Costs.]—In expropriation cases the costs should be taxed liberally in favour of the proprietor; but where the statutes mention "costs" only, and not "full costs," costs as between solicitor and client are not intended. Where a railway company in expropriating land under the Dominion Railway Act agreed to pay to the land owners "all costs incidental to the arbitration" had to fix the compensation to be paid:—Held, that the words did not extend to costs as between solicitor and client, nor to costs preliminary to the arbitration. Re Bronson and Canada Atlantic R. W. Co., 13 P. R. 440.

(i) Desistment, Abandonment, or Withdrawal.

After Award.]—Quare, whether after an award the company can relinquish the land valued, and claim exemption from compliance with the award. In re Miller and Great Western R. W. Co., 13 U. C. R. 582.

Notice—Title—Pleading.]—Section 4 of 4 Wm. IV. c. 29, defendants' Act of incorporation, provides that money awarded to be paid by them for lands taken shall be paid within three months from the award, and in case the company shall fail to pay the same within that period, their right to assume the property shall wholly cease; "and it shall be lawful for the proprietor to resume his occupation of such property, and to possess fully his rights and privileges in respect thereof, tree from any claim or interference from said company." The plaintiffs sued the defendants for money awarded to be paid to the plaintiffs or money awarded to be paid to the plain.

tiffs, as executors and trustees of one A., for land taken by defendants for the purposes of their railway. Defendants pleaded that they had never taken possession of or used the land, and that, forthwith after publica-tion of the award, they gave notice to the plaintiffs that they had abandoned all intenplainting that they had abandoned an inter-tion of doing so, and withdrew from the pur-chase:—Held, bad on demurrer, for that defendants, under the enactments above stated, and the subsequent statutes affecting them, could not after the award was made withdraw from the purchase. In a second plea, after stating the same facts, defendants added that the plaintiffs then resumed their occupation of the land, and had ever since such notice occupied the same free from any claim or interference by defendants :- Held, a good plea ; for that, if the notice was given before three months allowed for payment by s. 4 above re-ferred to, the plaintiffs might accept it and elect to treat the contract as ended; and if after, the plaintiffs had taken advantage, as they might do, of the right which was given by the statute for their benefit. The third plea was, that the plaintiffs had no title to the land either at the time of the arbitration and award or at the commencement of the suit :-Held, a good defence. Quære, whether a title Held, a good defence. Quiere, whether a true acquired after the award, but before suit, would enable them to recover. Mitchell v. Great Western R. W. Co., 35 U. C. R. 148.

Arbitration Pending.]—Under 14 & 15 Vict. c. 51, s. 11, s.-s. 16, a notice for lands may be desisted from, and new notice given for the same lands, even after the arbitrators have met, and are engaged in the arbitration; and an award made by them after such notice is void. Grimshaue v. Grand Trunk R. W. Co., 15 U. C. R. 224. See, also, S. C., 19 U. C. R. 493.

Notice.)—In an arbitration under the Railway Act. C. S. C. c. 66, to determine the value of land taken, two of the arbitrators had agreed upon the sum to be awarded, and notice had been given by them to the other arbitrator on the 27th February, that they would meet on the 1st March to sign the award. On the 27th a notice of desistment, and that a new notice would be given, was served on them, and on the 1st March to notice was given, but the two arbitrators proceeded, notwithstanding, and made their award:—Held, that the notice of desistment was effectual, and the award void. Cauthra v. Hamilton and Lake Eric R. W. Co., 35 U. C. R. 581.

Grounds for.] — Where a railway company took possession of lands without consent of the owner, and held them for some time, and an arbitration was agreed on, by which it seemed probable that the price would be fixed at a sum very much larger than the company would be willing to pay:—Held, that the company could not, on this ground, revoke the submission. Great Western R. W. Co. v. Miller, 12 U. C. R. 63-1.

Lands Actually Taken.]—An abandonment of a notice to take lands for railway purposes must take place while the notice is still a notice, and before the intention has been carried out by taking the lands: R. S. C. c. 109, s. S. s.s. 25, Canadian Pacific R. W. Co. v. Little Seminary of Ste. Thérèse, 16 S. C. R. 606.

Lands Enclosed.]—Held, that the Great Western Railway Company could not be compelled to purchase land which had been enclosed by one of their engineers without the knowledge of the directors, but which they had never expressed any intention to acquire permanently. Quære, whether, if the company had gone to arbitration upon the value with the intention of taking the land, they could have been compelled to complete the purchase. Baby v. Great Western R. W. Co., 13 U. C. R. 201.

Lands Injuriously Affected — Notice.]—Held, that the power to desist extends to a case of lands injuriously affected as well as lands taken; but that with the notice of desistment a new notice should be given, and without it the old notice remains in force to uphoid an award duly made under it. Widder v. Buffulo and Lake Huron R. W. Co., 24 U. C. R. 222.

Second Notice.]—Quære, whether the arbitration under the second notice can also be desisted from, or whether the power extends only to the first appointment. Grimshawev, Grand Trunk R. W. Co., 15 U. C. R. 224.

— Award.]—Held, that a railway company having desisted once from their notice to take land, given under R. S. O. 1877 c. 165, s. 20, could not again desist, pending an arbitration proceeding, under a second notice. The company's arbitrator having withdrawn from such arbitration, in deference to a notice of desistment given by the company, after the amount to be awarded had been agreed upon by the other two:—Held, that the company could not object to the award on the ground that the company's arbitrator had not been asked to sign it. Moore v. Central Ontario R. W. Co., 2 O. R. 647. See R. S. O. 1887 c. 170, s. 20 (16).

Third Notice — Estoppel.]—A railway company at different times served H. with several notices under the Dominion Railway Act, stating that portions of land owned by him were required for the company's line. To each of the first two notices H. replied by a notice appointing an arbitrator, but stating such appointment to be expressly without prejudice to his right to insist that the company had no right to take any part of his land. The company served successive notices of desistment from all their three notices, and H. gave notice that he objected to the third notice of desistment, and claimed that the company had no right to desist from their third notice of expropriation :- Held, that the company had not exhausted their powers of de-sistment, but had the right to desist from their third notice. H. could not be allowed to complain of the abandonment by the company of proceedings to compel him to sell his land to them, when he had notified them at every opportunity that he intended to contest their right to compel him to do so; after they had acted upon his expressed intention, and abandoned the notice to which he objected, it was too late for him to endeavour to insist upon its validity, Grierson v. Cheshire Lines' Committee, L. R. 19 Eq. S3, referred to. Re Hooper and Eric and Huron R. W. Co., 12 P. R. 408.

(j) Notice to Refer.

Sufficiency of — Description—Objection.]
—The notice described the plaintiff's claim as being "in respect of the alleged damages claimed by you for the construction of their railway along the margin of the river Maitland, northerly of your land in the town of Goderich, as the same is now made and built."—Iteld, a sufficient description of the subject matter of the dispute, and the property alleged to be injuriously affected. Held, also, that objections urged by a party to his own notice should be examined most strictly. Widder v. Buffalo and Lake Huron R. W. Co., 24 U. C. R. 520.

Price of Land—Consequential Damages — Premature Entry — Action.] — The Grand Trunk Railway Company notified the plaintiff that they required a portion of his land (describing it), and their readiness to pay a certain sum "as compensation for the pay a certain sum "as compensation for the fee simple of the said piece of land hereinbe-fore described," and that in case of refusal they would proceed to obtain a title; and also notified him of their appointment of an arbitrator, "to act in pursuance of the provisions of the Railway Clauses Consolidation Act." The defendants, contractors under the company, entered, and commenced the work soon after. The plaintiff subsequently appointed an arbitrator, and an arbitration was held; but a few days before the award he brought trespass, and he refused to accept the sum awarded:—Held, that the notice was sufficient to entitle the company to an arbitration, both upon the price of the land and the consequential damage from taking it. Held, also, that neither the price nor such damage could be re-covered in this action, but only damages caused by the entry and commencement of the work, which were premature. Gzowski, 13 U. C. R. 298. Martini v.

6. Other Cases.

Creditor — Superfluous Lands—Inquiry.]—The rule that railway companies, when acting in good faith, are the best judges of what lands, &c., are required for the railway, does not apply in a proceeding by a creditor against the company; in such a case the court is the proper authority to determine that point. The court in such a case ordered a reference to the master to inquire whether the company held any lands which were superfluous or not necessary for the use of the company; but the company were declared entitled to retain for their use a gravel pit, obtained under the compusory powers in their Act, with necessary approaches thereto; and also to sufficient land for the erection of offices for the management of the business of the company. Eric and Niagara R. W. Co. v. Great Western R. W. Co., 19 Gr. 43.

Mechanics' Lien—Sale.]-This court will not direct the sale of lands required for the use of a railway company to enforce the payment of a mechanics' lien for work done on the property; in such a case the decree will only be for payment of the amount found due, with costs. Powers of Company.] — A railway or canal company cannot lease the concern or delegate its powers for a specified term without the sanction of the legislature. This principle was held applicable to a railway company who had no power of taking land compulsorily, but had other special powers and privileges under their Act of incorporation. Hinckley v. Gilderslevev, 19 Gr. 212.

The respective legislatures of the state of New York and of Canada incorporated certain persons for the purpose of constructing a suspension bridge across the Niagara river, for railway and other purposes, with power to take lands, charge toils, &c., and the two companies joined together in conveying to one railway company the exclusive use of the railway portion of their structure, with power to make arrangements with other railway companies:—Held, that such conveyance was ultra vires and void. Attorney-General v. Niagara Falls International Bridge Co., 20 Gr. 34.

XVII. LESSEES OF ASSIGNEES OF RAILWAYS, ACTIONS AGAINST.

Breach of Contract-Agents and Direc-Breach of Contract—Agents and Directors—Jury.]—Plaintiffs sued defendants for breach of an agreement to carry lumber for them from Peterborough to Port Hope at a stipulated price. The agreement, which was dated in November, 1865, recited that defendants were engaged in running the "Port Hope, Lindsay, and Beaverton Railway," and the Milltrook branch thereof, and by it defendants bound themselves to carry plaintiffs' lumber at a certain rate. Defendants pleaded that the agreement was made by them as agents and directors of the railway company, of which plaintiffs had notice, and that by 16 Yiel. further amending the Act incorporating the Peterborough and Port Hope Railway Company, was adopted a clause enacting, in substance, that no undue advantage, privilege, substance. that no though a translation or monopoly should be afforded to any person, which clause was contained in C. S. C. 66; and that by 18 vict. the name of the company was changed to the Port Hope, Lindsay, and Beaverton Railway Company; that after the making of said agreement the rates of carmaking of said agreement the rates of car-riage were increased beyond those mentioned therein, and that the company made no other charge against plaintiffs than against every one else. It appeared at the trial that at the date of the agreement one of the defendants was president and the other managing director of the main line of railway from Port Hope to Lindsay, and lessees of the branch line leading from Millbrook, a station on the main line to Peterborough; that, by reason of the company having been long insolvent, the main line had been solely within defendants' control as principal bondholders of the company: and that what they did personally was in substance, therefore, done on the company's he satisfance, therefore, done on the company's behalf. The jury were asked to find whether the acreement was made by defendants acting as agents for and directors of the company, of which plaintiffs had notice; and having found in the negative and assessed damages in favour of plaintiffs, the court refused a new trial.

McDonyall v. Covert, 18 C. P. 119.

Vol. III. p-189-40

Injury to Cattle—Evidence—Objection.]—Defendant, who was possessed of and worked a certain railway, was sued for killing a control of the plaintiff. At the trial no evidence was of the plaintiff. At the trial no evidence was taken to the plaintiff. The objection was taken to the absence of it. The objection was taken to the absence of it. The objection was taken to the absence of it. The objection of the second a nonsuit on the ground, among others, can there was no such evidence. On appeal:—Held, that defendant, not having taken the objection at the trial, was not entitled to take it afterwards. The judgment was therefore reversed, and a new trial ordered. Bennett v. Covert, 13 C. P. 555.

Sublessee — Fences.]—Held, that defendant, a sublessee of a railway company, was not liable under the Railway Act, C. S. C. c. 66, for neglect to maintain fences, by which plaintiff's cattle had been killed. Bennett v. Covert, 24 U. C. R. 38.

Injury to Lands—Sublesseex—Branch Line.)—To obtain the means of constructing a branch line from Peterborough to Millbrook, the Port Hope, Lindsay, and Peterborough Railway to T. and F., under the preamble to 27 Vict. c. 60, and the branch line was accordingly constructed by T. and F., and by defendants as their assignees:—Held, that the construction of the branch line under the authority of the company had been sanctioned by this Act, which had also confirmed to the lessees the right to maintain and use the road under the franchise of the company. Held, also, that the lessees, and defendants claiming under them, were not personally liable for anything done within the power given to the company under the Acts. Defendants had also maintained a cutting in the street in front of the plaintiff shouse, which prevented the street being used as before:—Held, that, if the plaintiff had been more injuriously affected thereby than others, and was entitled to compensation, redress must be sought from the company, and not from defendants individually, as exercising its rights and franchise. Hamilton V. Covert, 16 C. P. 205.

XVIII. LIABILITY FOR ACTS OF AGENTS, CON-TRACTORS, AND SERVANTS.

Carriage of Passengers—Contracts.]—
Railway companies are bound by contracts entered into by their general agents as to the conditions of carrying passengers, although such contracts should, within the means of knowledge of the agent, be beyond the regulations of the company in relation to such matters. Childs v. Great Western R. W. Co., 6 C. P. 284.

Construction of Railway — Changing Road Line.]—J. & Co. had contracted with the Grand Trunk Railway Company to obtain the land required by them, and to construct their road. The line was laid out so as to cross the Bath macadamized road several times, which being considered dangerous, the contractors agreed to make a new line for the road company, and in doing so they encroached upon the plaintiff's land:—Held, that the railway company were not liable. Purdy v. Grand Trunk R. W. Co., 15 U. C. R. 571.

Contract to Pay Costs - Secretary.]-A bank having executions against a railway company in the hands of the sheriff, the secretary of the company, in order to avert a seizure of a quantity of railway iron, signed a letter agreeing that the bank, out of moneys coming to their hands from certain garnishee proceedings taken by the bank against debtors of the company, might retain "a sufficient of the company, might retain amount fully to cover all your solicitor's costs, charges, and expenses, against you or against you and us, as between attorney and client or otherwise; as well as the costs, charges, and expenses of your bank, of what nature or kind soever, and after the payment of such, in the second place, to hold the surplus, if any, to apply on your executions against us." This letter was signed without any authority from the board of directors of the company, al-though two members of the board were aware of it, and one of them, the vice-president of the company, authorized it:—Held, not such an act as the officers of the company were au-thorized in the discharge of their duties to perform; and that, although the bank granted the time asked for, they could not enforce payment of the amounts stipulated for. Hamilton and Port Dover R. W. Co. v. Gore Bank, 20 Gr. 190.

Conversion of Cattle-Station Master.] -Trover for conversion of five cattle, killed during their carriage by defendants, as to which defendants paid into court $52, the price for which they were sold by defendants' station master after they had been killed: — Held, that such payment admitted only a cause of action, not the particular cause sued for; and that the evidence proved cause such for; and that the evidence proved no conversion by defendants, the sale not being the ordinary duty of a station master, O'Rorke v. Great Western R. W. Co., 23 U. C. R. 427.

Issuing Fraudulent Receipt - Freight Agent.]-C., a freight agent of respondents at Chatham, and a partner in the firm of B. & Co., caused printed receipts or shipping notes, in the form commonly used by the railway company, to be signed by his name as the company's agent, in favour of B. & Co., for flour which had never in fact been delivered flour which had never in fact been derivered to the railway company. The receipts ac-knowledged that the company had received from B. & Co. the flour addressed to the appellants, and were attached to drafts drawn by B. & Co. and accepted by appellants. C. received the proceeds of the drafts and absconded. In an action to recover the amount of the drafts:—Held, that the act of C, in issuing a false and fraudulent receipt for goods never delivered to the company was not an act done within the scope of his authority as the company's agent, and the latter were therefore not liable. XIX. LIMITATION OF ACTIONS AND DAMAGES.

1. Injury to Land.

Erecting Bridge, |-Declaration charged defendants with wrongfully and unlawfully erecting a bridge across a certain stream. Defendants pleaded (seeking to take advantage of 16 Vict. c. 99, s. 10), as to such of the causes of action as accrued more than six months before the suit, that the plaintiffs ought not to maintain their action, because such causes did not accrue within six months. The plaintiff replied that the injury sued for was a continuing damage. It was not alleged or shewn in any way, either in the declara-tion or plea, that the bridge was erected under defendants' charter, or for their railway: Held, therefore, that the plea was bad. Held, also, that if the defence had been properly pleaded, the replication would have been good. Wismer v. Great Western R. W. Co., 13 U. C. R. 383.

See, also, Regina ex rel, Trustees of St. Andrew's Church v. Great Western R. W. Co., 14 C. P. 462.

c. 99, s. 10, saves the right of action for the whole damage suffered, where the suit is brought within six months after the injury has ceased. Snure v. Great Western R. W. Co., 13 U. C. R. 376.

Fire. |- In an action against a railway company for so negligently managing a fire which had begun upon defendants track that it extended to the plaintiff's land adjoining: — Held, that the limitation clause did not apply, the injury charged being at common law, by one proprietor of land against another, independent of any user of the railway. Prendergast v. Grand Trunk R. W. Co., 25 U. C. R. 193.

Plaintiff sued defendants for having negligently allowed dry wood and leaves to accugently anowed dry wood and leaves to accumulate on their track, which became ignifed by their engine, and extended to plaintiff's land, destroying his trees, &c.:—Held, that this was an injury sustained by "reason of the railway," within C. S. C. c. 66, S. S.; and that the plaintiff, suing more than six months after the injury, was therefore barred.

Neglect to Fence.]-Held, that the fact of cattle from time to time getting upon the plaintiffs' land and destroying the crops, did not constitute a "continuation of damage." not constitute a "continuation of damage," so as to entitle the plaintiffs to recover for more than six months' injury; for the continuation of the omission is not what is meant, but the damage resulting from it, and several unconnected acts of damage, each complete in itself, is not a continuation within the Act. Brown v. Grand Trunk R. W. Co., 24 U. C. R. 350. See Nichol v. Canada Southern R. W. Co., 40 U. C. R. 583.

plaintiff's farm was drained by a stream east. Ac., yet defendants constructed their railway across plaintiff's land, and across said stream, at a point to the east of plaintiff's land in so careless, negligent, and unskilful a manner as to obstruct said stream, and prevent the water from flowing as it used and ought to do, and did not restore it to its former state, or if a same each manner not to impair its usefulness; and afterwards the stream, being increased by rains, and the plaintiff's land and injured his crops. Plea, as to so much of the causes of action, and all damages in respect thereof, as accrued more than six months before action, that defendants committed the grievances in the declaration mentioned in the construction of their railway, and that the said grievances in the introductory part of the plea mentioned did not accrue within six months next before this suit:— Held, on demurrer, a bad plea, the issue tendered being in fact whether those causes of action which accrued more then six months before the commencement of the suit did not accrue within six months before such commencement. Held, also, that the declaration was sufficient: that it sufficiently shewed the nature of the grievances, and that they were wrongful. Moison v. Great Western R. W. Co., 14 U. C. R. 102.

At the trial it appeared that the breadth of this stream at high water was about forty feet, and the railway was carried across it by a bridge having a culvert of only seven feet wide. The witnesses said it would require a culvert of twenty feet wide to allow a free passage when the stream was full. About two years after the completion of the railway, very heavy rains having fallen, the plaintiff's land was overflowed and his crops injured, for which he sued the company, and recovered a verdict;—Held, that such verdict was warranted, and the action brought in time, the cause of action having first accrued when the injury was sustained, and not by the construction of the railway. S. C., ib. 109.

Declaration, that the plaintiff was possessed of land which was and of right should continue to be drained by a certain drain passing along the easterly boundary of said land, yet defendants constructed their railway across plaintiff's land, and across said drain adjacent thereto, in so carcless, negligent, and improper a manner, and kept said railway so constructed, that said drain became interrupted and dammed up; by means whereof a laree quantity of water which had fallen on plaintiff's said land and other lands adjoining, which had been also kept clear of water by means of said drain, passed into said drain and along the same to the railway, where it was obstructed, and overflowed plaintiff's land, &c. Plea, as to so much of the causes of action as accrued more than six calendar months before this suit, that defendants committed the same in the construction of their railway, and that the said supposed causes of action did not accrue to the plaintiff within six calendar months before this suit.—
Held, on demurrer to the plea and exceptions to the declaration, plea had, declaration sufficient. Lesperance v. Great Western R. W. Co., 14 U. C. R. 187.

Plaintiff by written agreement allowed defendants to carry their road through his land, and in constructing it they made an embankment which rendered his access to the highway inconvenient, and prevented the water near and around his house from running off as before:—Held, an injury for which an action, if maintainable at all, would lie for any damage sustained within six months; but, semble, that the plaintiff was restricted to his remedy by arbitration, and could sustain no action. Cameron v. Ontario, Simcoe, and Huron R. W. Co., 14 U. C. R. 612.

Defendants, in the construction of their railway, crossed a stream which emptied itself on the plaintiff's land, and to allow a passage they built a culvert, and caused the water to flow as before on to the plaintiff's land, none of the said land, however, being taken for railway purposes. The culvert being filled up, defendants caused (about six years before this action) a drain to be dug, which, with continuations made by adjoining owners, diverted the water so as to overflow a portion of plaintiff's land—and instead of being a benefit became an injury. The plaintiff sued after six years, claiming damages for a crop injured at the time of the diversion, and as a continuing injury to the land since:—Held, that the damage was not continuing, and that the action should have been brought within six months. Patterson v. Great Western R. W. Co., S. C. P. S9.

The Great Western Railway Company in constructing their line of road crossed plaintiff's land at a point where a watercourse draining plaintiff's land passed, by which the watercourse was obstructed, and plaintiff's land passed by the polar course was obstructed. The polar cities brought after six months from the polar course was proposed by the polar control of t

The plaintiffs sued defendants for so negligated a watercourse by which his land had been drained, thereby causing the same to overflow and injure his crops: — Held, that an action would lie, and might be brought within six months from the injury. Vanhorn v. Grand Trunk R. W. Co., 18 U. C. R. 356; S. C., 9 C. P. 264.

Action for overflowing plaintiff's land by neglecting to make culverts and thus obstructing the water. Several acres were overflowed, the damage varying as to time and extent, but never wholly ceasing:—Held, that by C. S. C. 60, the plaintiff could not claim damages for more than six months next before the action. McGillieray v. Great Western R. W. Co., 25 U. C. R. 69.

See Carron v. Great Western R. W. Co., 14 U. C. R., 192. See, also, VII.

Taking Earth.]—Held, that s. 34 of R. S. O. 1877 c. 165, which fixes a limitation of six months for bringing actions for any damage or injury sustained by reason of any railway, does not apply to an action brought against a railway company for damages for wrongfully taking earth from the plaintiffs' land. Township of Brock v. Toronto and Nipissing R. W. Co., 37 U. C. R. 372, followed. Beard v. Credit Valley R. W. Co., 9 O. R. 616.

Taking Gravel. |—The six months' limitation clause, C. S. C. c. 66, s. 83, does not apply to an action for a trespass to land by taking gravel from a road allowance. Township of Brock v. Toronto and Nipissing R. W. Co., 37 U. C. It. 372.

Timber—Cutting and Removing—Six Rod Belt—Dominion Statute—Intra Vires.]—
The defendants, a railway company incorpor-The defendants, a railway company incorpor-ated by an Act of the parliament of Canada and subject to the provisions (among others) of s. 27 of the Railway Act of Canada, built their road through lands in the Province of Ontario, the fee of which was in the Crown, but over which the plaintiffs had for three successive years held timber licenses issued by the provincial government. These licenses, giving the right to cut timber and exclusive possession in the usual form, were dated re-spectively the 5th July, 1883, the 10th December, 1884, and the 22nd July, 1885, and each extended from its date to the 30th of the next extedued from its date to the state the April. The defendants entered upon the limits in question about the end of the year 1884, and the road was completed in July, 1886. In building the road the defendants cut down timber on the line and also both within and outside of the six rod belt mentioned in the statute. No timber was cut after December, 1885. The plaintiffs brought this action on 1885. The plaintins brought this action on the 9th September, 1886, to recover damages for the timber cut. It was admitted that, as to timber cut outside the six rod belts, they were entitled to recover, but it was con-tended that, as to timber cut on the line and within those belts, the action was barred. The defendants had filed their plan and book of reference, but they had not taken any of the statutory steps to acquire the interest of the plaintiffs:—Held, in the high court, that under R. S. C. c. 109, s. 6, s.-s. 12, the timber cut within the six rod limit became the propcut within the six rod limit became the property of the railway company, and that the loss of the trees was damage or injury sustained by the plaintiffs by "reason of the railway," under s. 27 of R. S. C. c. 109, and the action was therefore barred by that section by reason of its not having been brought within the six months. The court of appeal was evenly divided upon the question whether that section was intra vires the Dominion parliament, or ultra vires as being an unnecessary interference with property and civil rights within the Province. McArthur v. Northern Pacific Junction R. W. Co., 15 O. R. 733, 17 A. R. 86.

Trespass.]—An action of trespass against a railway company for damage done in the construction of the line must be commenced within six months from the commission of the trespass. Follis v. Port Hope, &c., R. W. Co., 9 C. P. 50.

2. Injury to Persons.

Passenger—Assault.]—In an action for assault and false imprisomment, it appeared that defendant, a conductor, had detained the plaintiff under 18 Vict. c. 176, s. 10, to take him before a magistrate upon the charge of having obstructed defendant in the execution of his duty.—Held, that he was entitled to the protection of s. 26, and that the action, brought more than six months after the act complained of, was too late. Lauzeau v. Leonard, 20 U. C. R. 481.

Negligence.]—16 Vict. c. 99, s. 10, limiting the time for bringing actions, applies only to actions for damages occasioned in the exercise of the powers given to the company to construct and maintain their road, not to claims for negligence in conveying passengers. Roberts v. Great Western R. W. Co., 13 U. C. R. 615.

In an action brought by the plaintiff for injuries received while being carried on a train, the defendants set up that the injuries complained of were sustained more than six months before action brought, and that the action was barred by s. 27 of the Consolidated Railway Act, to which the plaintiff demurred:—Held, that any damage done through negligence upon a railway in the earriage of passengers and the like, is damage done "by reason of the railway." Browne v. Brockville and Ottawa R. W. Co., 20 U. C. R. Cot, and W. Collin, and Callow V. Grand Trunk R. W. Co., 31 U. C. R. 527, and Kelly v. Ottawa Street R. W. Co., 3 A. R. 616, followed, Semble, that the concluding words of s. 27 of the Consolidated Railway Act, vizz, that "the defendants may prove that the same" (that is the damage) "was done in pursuance of the authority of this Act and the special Act," should be read as meaning "in the course and prosecution of their business as a railway company, constituted in pursuance of," &c. May v. Ontario and Quebec R. W. Co., 10 O. R. 70.

On 10th May, 1879, C. was seated in a car of the C. V. R. Co. standing on the railway of that company, when an engine of the defendants ran upon the railway of the C. V. R. Co. through gross negligence as alleged, and collided with the car in which C. was. He was injured in the collision, and died on 11th August, 1885, as alleged, from the injuries thus received. On 4th August, 1886, his executrix brought an action therefor:—Held, on demurrer, that the action was for injury sustained "by reason of the railway." and that the limitation of six months provided by s. 83 of C. S. C. c. 66 (s. 27 of 42 Vict. c. 9 (D. 1), applied and prevailed over the limitation of twelve months provided for by s. 5 of R. S. O. 1877 c. 128; and therefore the action was barred. Conger v. Grand Trunk R. W. Co., 13 O. R. 160.

Person Crossing Track.]—Action for injury to plaintiff by a train running against him at a crossing, owing to neglect to sound the whistle, and to improper construction of the railway, it being too much above the level of the highway:—Held, that the injury, if arising from either cause alleged, was sustained "by reason of the railway:" that it was not a case within the exception as to "continuation of damage:" and that the action, having been brought more than six months from the accident, was therefore too late. Browne v. Brockville and Ottawa R. W. Co., 20 U. C. R. 202.

Repair of Bridge—Lord Campbell's Act.]—The plaintiff's father was killed on the 10th February, 1891, by a fall from a bridge, part of a highway, which crossed the defendants' line, and had been negligently allowed by them to be out of repair. The action was Campbell's illed on the n a bridge, the defendily allowed action was begun on the 14th November, 1891, more than six months after the accident, no letters of administration having been taken out:—Held, that this was not "damage sustained by reason of the railway." and that the limitation clauses of the Railway Act did not apply. Held, also, that the provisions of R. N. O. 1887 c. 135, Lord Campbell's Act, are not affected by special legislation of this kind, so that in that view also the action was begun in time. Judgment in 21 O. R. 628 affirmed on other grounds. Zimmer v. Grand Trunk R. W. Co., 19 A. R. 693.

Person Lawfully on Highway—Street Raiticay.]—The plaintiff sued defendants for an injury sustained by him while engaged in his lawful occupation on the street, by defendants' car being so carelessly and rapidly driven that he was obliged to jump into a drain to save himself, and was hurt:—Held, that s. S3 of C. S. C. c. 66 applied to a suit of this nature, and that the action should have been brought within six months. Auger v. Ontario, Simoce, and Huron R. W. Co., 90 C. P. 164, and Browne v. Brockville and Ottawa R. W. Co., 20 U. C. R. 202, followed, Kelly v. Ottavea Street R. W. Co., 3 A. R. 616.

Servant—Death of—Widow's Right of Action.]—The husband of the plaintiff was injured while engaged in his duties as the defendants' employee, and the injury resulted in his death about fifteen months afterwards. No indemnity laving been claimed during the lifetime of the husband, the plaintiff, acting for herself as well as in the capacity of executivis for her minor child, brought an action for compensation within one year after his death:
—Held, by the supreme court of Canada, that at the time of the death of the plaintiff's hisband all right of action was prescribed under art. 2262, C. C. and that this prescription is one to which the tribunds are scription in the control of the contro

3. Lands Taken,

Compensation.]—The right of compensation for land taken by a railway company is not barred short of twenty years, and is not barred by the claimant's title to the hand being extinguished by reason of the railway company having been in possession for ten years. Ross v. Grand Trunk R. W. Co., 10 O. R. 447.

The right to compensation is not barred until the expiration of twenty years from the time the land is entered upon and taken for railway purposes. Ross v. Grand Trunk R. W. Co., 10 O. R. 447, followed. Essery v. Grand Trunk R. W. Co., 21 O. R. 224.

Where compensation money was paid by a railway company to a tenant for life in 1871, the company were ordered to pay the amount over again to the persons entitled in remainder whose title accrued within six years of the time of bringing the action. Title by Possession against Railway Company. —A title by possession may be acquired as against a railway company to lands originally obtained by them for railway purposes. Bobbett v. South Eastern R. W. Co., 9 Q. B. D. 424, approved. Erie and Niagara R. W. Co. v. Rousseau, 17 A. R. 483.

Title by Possession in Favour of Railway Company, —The plaintiff, being the owner of a tract of land near Presect, on the 20th October, 1849, agreed with the contractors engaged in the laying out of the railway of the defendants, and in acquiring lands and rights of way for the construction thereof, in consideration of their placing the station of the railway for Prescott upon his land, to convey to the contractors, their heirs, &c., six acres of such land for that purpose, and, if necessary, for the purpose of such station, to allow them to take an additional quantity, not exceeding in all ten acres. The station was erected in 1855 on these lands, and used by the company until 1864, when it was closed, and a station erected about one-and-a-half miles from the plaintiff's lands, and station buildings erected thereon, in consequence of which the plaintiff's remaining lands became depreciated in value:—Held, that the defendants having entered upon and retained possession of the lands, so agreed to be conveyed, for more than twenty years before the filing of the present bill (1876), afforded no defence under the Statute of Limitations, as up to a period much within the twenty years their possession could not be questioned, and no right of suit had accrued to the plaintiff until the use of the lands for the purposes of the station was discontinued in 1864. Bills of Exchange and Promissory Notes. |—Under 1 Vict. c. 30, and 7 Vict. c. 16, the Kingston Marine R. W. Co. may give and receive promissory notes in the course of transacting their legitimate business. Kingston Marine R. W. Co. v. Gunn, 3 U. C. R. 308.

The Buffalo, Brantford, and Goderich R. W. Co. have no power under their Act of incorporation, or under the general Railway Act, to make promissory notes. Topping v. Buffalo, Brantford, and Goderich R. W. Co., 6 C. P. 141.

The defeudants, desiring to raise money, drew a bill and requested the plaintiffs to indorse for their accommodation, which the plaintiffs did. and defendants having discounted and failed to meet it, the plaintiffs paid it to the bank:—Held, that, assuming that the defendants had no power to draw the bill, they were nevertheless liable to the plaintiffs as for money paid for them. Brockville and Ottava R. W. Co. v. Canada Central R. W. Co., 4t U. C. R. 431.

Chattel Mortgage—After acquired Property—Bill of Lading.]—The Brockville and Ottawa R. W. Co., by indenture dated the 7th March, 1854, hypothecated, mortgaged, and pledged unto the municipalities of Lanark and Renfrew, Elizabethtown, and Brock-ville, to secure loans obtained from them, the lands, roads, denots, wharves, stations, terminal and otherwise, tolls, revenues, and all other property of the said company now or during the existence of the said mortgage to be acquired. The statute 20 Vict. c. 144, s. 5, recited these loans and declared the said mortgages valid; that the said intended railway and all stations, buildings, carriages, engines, and other property belonging to said railway, were thereby mortgaged to said municipalities according to the terms of said mortgages; according to the terms of said mortgages; and that the Chattel Mortgage Act should not apply to them. A quantity of iron was pur-chased for the said railway, the vendors stipuchased for the said railway, the vendors supu-lating "these rails to be laid down upon the Brockville and Ottawa Railway Company of Canada," to which the vendees, by their agent, assented. The iron was shipped to the vendees, who indorsed the bills of lading to the municipality of Lanark and Renfrey, who paid the shipping charges and freight out of moneys which formed part of the ad-vances secured by the mortgage of the 7th March, 1854, and the municipality having the iron in their possession at Brockville ready to be placed on the railway, it was seized under an execution against the railway company: -Held, that, as the mortgages covered chattel as well as real property, the words "other property" in them were not restricted to real property, for the statute placed a legislative and different construction on the mortgage; and that under the indorsement of the bill of lading to the municipality, who obtained possession of the iron by such indorsement, together with the stipulation of the vendors, and the assent thereto of the vendoes, the plaintiffs acquired the possession and the property in the said iron, and it became a part of the property mortgaged. Counties of Lanark and Renfree v, Cameron, 9 C. P. 109.

Construction of Railway of Another Company.]—Defendants being unable to finish their railway, and plaintiffs desiring it as a feeder to their line, a correspondence was had and resolutions were passed by the plaintiffs, and communicated to defendants, authorizing an arrangement by which the plaintiffs should work the road for a certain period and share the profits with defendants. No formal agreement was made, and the terms were not definitely settled, but the plaintiffs went on and completed defendants line, and ran it for some time at a loss. They then sued defendants for the work done, and for the money expended above the receipts:—Held, that they could not recover; for, as to the first demand, the constructing defendants' road was a matter without the scope of their charter. Great Western R. W. Co. v. Preston and Berlin R. W. Co., 17 U. C. R. 477.

Contract—Bonus — Judgment — Setting aside, 1—Where, by contract ex facie legal and regular, the appellant company purported to incur liability to the respondent for railway construction in an amount which was in reality calculated to cover the amount of bonus and of price of issued shares payable by agreement between the respondent and all the shareholders of the company irrespective of either actual or estimated cost of construction:—Held, that the contract was ultra vires of the company. Held, further, that a consent judgment obtained on the company's railway and other property, the question of ultra vires not having been raised either in the pleadings or on the facts stated, was of no greater validity than the contract. The contract and judgment were set aside upon terms, Question of parties considered. Judgment in 26 S. C. R. 221, sub, nom. Charlebois v. Delap, varied. Great North-West Central R. W. Co. v. When Brooks required the iron necessary for the undertaking, he was unable to purchase it without the assistance of the company, and he thereupon authorized the officers of the company to negotiate for its purchase. In consequence, the solicitor for the company, as agent of Brooks, and with the approval, in writing, of the president of the company, entered into an agreement, dated 9th June, 1874, with the defendants for the purchase of the iron, which was to be paid for as delivered the fron, which was to be paid for as delivered on the wharf at Belleville by the promissory notes of Brooks, and a credit of six months was to be given from the time of the several deliveries of the iron. By that agreement, also, Brooks agreed to obtain from the railway company an irrevocable power of attor-ney enabling the Bank of Montreal, who advanced to the defendant Bickford the money necessary for the purpose of buying the iron, to receive the government and municipal bonuses, and to procure from the company a morigage for $200,000 on that portion of their road (44 miles) on which the iron was to be laid-the mortgage to be sufficient in law to create a lien on the 44 miles of railway, as security for the due payment of the notes of the said Brooks, but not to contain a covenant for payment by the company. On the 30th June, 1874, a mortgage was executed by the company under their corporate seal to one Buchanan, then manager of the Bank of Montreal, in Toronto, as a trustee. The Bank of Montreal having made advances to Bickford in the ordinary course of their business dealings to enable him to purchase the iron, was all consigned to their order by the bills of lading, and, when delivered on the wharf at Belleville, was held by the wharfingers subject to the order of the bank, the whole subject to the order of the balas, the whole quantity stipulated for by the contract being so delivered ready for laying on the track as required. The Bank of Montreal and the defendant Bickford caused to be delivered from time to time to Brooks, by the wharfingers at Belleville, all the iron he required to lay on the track, being about 2,000 tons, and about an equal quantity remained on the wharf un-Brooks having failed to meet his promissory notes for the price of the iron, Bick-ford recovered judgment at law against him to the amount of $164.852.96. The bank then sold the iron remaining on the wharf for the purpose of realizing their lien, when Bickford became the purpose of the sold the so supplies. Bickford was removing the iron when the company filed a bill in chancery asking for an injunction to restrain the removal of iron. A motion to continue the inwas refused on the 11th October, The defendants (Bickford, Cameron, and Buchanan) then answered the bill, and on the 18th January, 1876, by consent, a de-cree was made referring it to the master to take the mortgage account, to ascertain and state the amount due to Bickford and Cameron for iron laid or delivered to or for plaintiffs' use on the track, and also the amount due (if anything), in respect of iron delivered at Belleville, but since removed, and to report special circumstances, if requisite.

The master found due upon the mortgage $46,841.10, the price of iron actually laid on the track, and interest; and that nothing was due in respect of the iron delivered at Belleville but subsequently removed. On appeal the master's report was affirmed, and, on an appeal to the court of appeal, it was held that the mortgage was ultra vires, and the that the morgage was unra vires, and the master's report was affirmed. (See Grand Junction R. W. Co. v. Bickford, 23 Gr. 392.) Held (reversing the judgment of the court of chancery), that the provise in the mortgage was in its terms wide enough to sustain the was in its terms wide enough to sustain the contention of the mortgagee to claim the price of all the iron delivered on the wharf at Belleville, and that the memorandum indorsed by Brooks on the mortgage should not be construed as cutting down the terms of the proviso, but was intended as written evidence of Brooks's consent to the mortgage and to the loss of priority in respect to the mortgage bonds to be delivered to him under the contract. Held, also, (reversing the judgment of the court of appeal), that the statutory power to borrow money and secure loans cannot be considered as implying that the company's powers to mortgage are to be limited to that object; and, therefore, that the mortgage executed by the company on a portion of their road in favour of the trustee Buchanan, being given within the scope of the powers conferred upon the company to "alienate, sell, or dispose of "lands for the purpose of con-structing and working a railway, was not ultra vires. Quære, whether the rights of a corporation to take lands, operating the railway, taking the tolls, &c., are susceptible of alienation by mortgage in this country? Held, also, that under the pleadings and decree in the cause, the objection that the mort-gage was ultra vires was not open to the gage was utra vires was not open to the company in the master's office, or on appeal from the master's report. Bickford v. Grand Junction R. W. Co., 1 S. C. R. 696.

XXI. POWERS OF DOMINION AND PROVINCIAL LEGISLATURES.

Crown Lands — Timber — Provincial Rights.]—Held, that the timber licenses claimed by the plaintiff as licensee of the Ontario government were subject to the right of the Canada Central Railway Company, acquired before Confederation, to construct their road across the Crown lands over which the licenses in question extended, and that the defendants, assignees of the railway company, were, therefore, not liable in trespass for entering upon, and cutting the timber on, the limits, in prosecution of the work of building said railway. Foran v. McIntyre, 45 U. C. R. 288.

sent of Licutenant-Gorenor]—Held, that the Canada Central Railway Compan acquire under their charter granted by the 20 Vict. c. 112, and subsequent Acts relating thereto passed prior to Confederation, the right, which was preserved by s. 109 of the B. N. A. Act, to enter on the Crown lands in the Province of Ontario on the line of the railway included in a subsequent timber license granted to the plaintiff, and to cut the timber, within six rods of either side thereof, without any restriction as to obtaining the consent of the lieutenant-governor in council. Semble, that, in the case of railway companies within its exclusive jurisdiction, the Dominion parliament has the power to confer upon them the right of constructing their lines through the Crown lands of the several Provinces through which they may pass, without such consent of the lieutenant-governor in council. Booth v. McIntyre, 31 C. P. 183.

Debentures—Foreign Domicil of Holder Conversion into Stock by Provincial Stat-—Conversion into Stock by Provincial Stat-ute.1—The plaintiff, being the holder of a de-benture issued by the B. and O. R. W. Co. under 23 Vict. c. 109, sued thereon. By 27 Vict. c. 57, the railway company were authorized to issue preferential bonds, and to execute a mortgage to a trustee to secure payment thereof. The railway being at the time of Confederation a local work, 31 44 (O.) was passed, which recited that the trustee was in possession and about to foreclose the mortgage, and, amongst other things, directed that the debentures (therein called ordinary bonds) should be converted into stock at a certain rate on the dollar; and that the holders thereof should have no other claim on the company than for conversion of their debentures into stock. By 41 Vict, c, 36 (D.), the B. and O. R. W. Co. and the defendant company were amalgamated. The defendants set up that their liability on the debentures in question was extinguished by 31 Vict. c. 44 (O.), and that they were ready and willing to take the debentures in exchange for reduced stock thereunder. Third replication, that the Act was not binding because it was a private Act, and the plaintiff was not named therein, nor a petitioner therefor, nor were his rights specially taken away thereby. Fourth replication, that the Act was ultra vires, because the debenture was payable in London, England, and was there payane in London, England, and was there domiciliated, and the holder resided there at the time of the passing of the Act, beyond the jurisdiction of the Ontario legislature:— Held, third replication bad; for, though the Ontario Act was in the nature of a private Act, it sufficiently referred to the plaintiff by referring to the class of bondholders to which he belonged, and that he was therefore bound thereby. Held, also, fourth replica-tion bad, for the Provincial legislatures were not restricted by the term "property and civil rights in the Province" to legislation respecting bonds held therein; and that where debts or other obligations are authorized to be contracted under a Provincial Act, passed in re-lation to a matter within the power of the provincial legislature, such debts may be dealt with by subsequent Acts of the same legislature, notwithstanding that by a fiction of law they may be domiciled out of the Province. Jones v. Canada Central R. W. Co., 46 U. C. R. 250.

Highway across Railway — Railway Committee of Pricy Council—Railway Act of Canada, s. I;—Intra Vires.]—In an action to restrain the defendants from acting upon an order of the railway committee of the privy council, made under s. 14 of the Railway Act of Canada, giving them the option to open a new street, by means of a subway, across the property and under the tracks of a Dominion railway company, but without compensation, and requiring the company to pay a portion of the cost of construction, and meanwhile allowing a temporary crossing for foot passengers only, and making certain other provisions upon the subject: — Held.

that the provincial legislature alone had power to confer upon the defendants legal capacity to acquire and make the street in question. 2. It has conferred such capacity. 3. In virtue of its power over property and civil rights in the province, the provincial legislature has power to authorize a municipality to acquire and make such a street, and to provide how and upon what terms it may be acquired and made. 4. But that power is subject to the supervention of federal legislation respecting works and undertakings such as the railway in question. 5. The manner and terms of acquiring and making such street, and also the prevention of the making or acquiring of such a street, are proper subjects of such supervening legislation. 6. Such legislation may rightly confer upon any person or body the power to determine in what circumstances, and now and upon such a street may be acquired and made, or to such a street may be acquired and making of it altogether; and therefore s. 14 of the Railway Act is not ultra vires. 7. Such legislation. in virtue of its power over such railway corporations, as well as such works and undertakings, may confer power to impose such terms as have in this case been imposed upon the plaintiffs, and to deprive such corpora-tions of any right to compensation for lands so taken or injuriously affected; and has conferred such power on the railway committee, under s. 14, in such a case as this. 8. Such legislation has not conferred upon the committee power to give the temporary foot-way in question. 9. Nor any authority to delegate its powers. 10. The work it directs must be constructed under the supervision of an official appointed for that purpose by the committee, 11. The railway company may, if they choose, construct the works directed, under such supervision, instead of permitting the municipality to do so. Grand Trunk R. W. Co. v. City of Toronto, 32 O. R. 120.

Incorporation of Company.] — The Grand Junction Railway being wholly within the province of Ontario, the Dominion parliament has no power, under the B. N. A. Act, to incorporate the company without expressly declaring the work to be one for the general advantage of Canada or of two or more of the provinces. Re Grand Junction R. W. Co. v. County of Peterborough, 6. A. R. 339. See S. C., 45 U. C. R. 302, 8 S. C. R. 76.

Liability for Negligence — Contracts against.] — The legislation of the Dominion parliament forbidding the defendants contracting against liability for their own negligence, is not ultra vires. Vogel v. Grand Trunk R. W. Co., Morton v. Grand Trunk R. W. Co., 10 A. R. 162.

Limitation of Actions — Damages by Reason of Railway, 1—The court of appeal was evenly divided upon the question whether s. 27 of R. S. C. c. 109, was ultra vires as being an unnecessary interference with property and civil rights within the Province. McArthur v. Northern Pacific Junction R. H. Co., 17 A. R. S6. See S. C., 15 O. R. 733.

Packing Railway Frogs.]—The proviso of s. 362 of the Railway Act, 51 Vict. c. 29 (D.), does not apply to the fillings referred to in s.-s. 3, and confers no power upon the railway committee of the privy council to dispense with the filling in of the spaces behind and in front of railway frogs or crossings and the fixed rails and switches Railway Crossings — Maintenance of Gates — Apportionment of Cost — Railway Committee of Privy Council.] — The railway committee of the privy council, on the appli cation of the city of Toronto, ordered the Canadian Pacific Railway Company to put up gates and keep a watchman where the line of railway crossed a highway running from the city of Toronto into the township of York, the line of railway being at the place in question the boundary between the two muniquestion the boundary between the two muni-cipalities, and ordered the cost of mainten-ance to be paid in equal proportions by the railway company and the city. On a subse-quent application by the city, representing that the township was equally interested, and asking for contribution from the township, asking for contribution from the country, and an order was made by the railway committee that the country and township should contribute in certain proportions:—Held, in the high court, that the legislation of the parliament of Canada with reference to the guardment of Canada with reference to the guard-ing of the crossings of a railway, which, un-der s.-s. 10 of s. 92 of the British North America Act, is under the exclusive legislative authority of parliament, is within the scope of necessary legislation. Under ss. 11, 18, 21, 187, and 188 of the Railway Act of 1888, parliament conferred upon the railway committee the power to order that gates and watchmen should be provided and maintained at crossings of highways traversing different adjacent municipalities; to decide which municipalities are interested in the crossings; to fix the proportion of the cost to be bigs; to his the proportion of the cost to be borne by the different nunicipalities; to vary any order made by adding other municipalities as interested; and to re-adjust the proportion of the cost; and the decision of the committee cannot be reviewed by the court. Municipalities are subject to such legislation and the orders of the committee in the same way as private individuals. In the court of appeal there was a disagreement as to the validity of the legislation and of the order of the committee upon the township and county. But held, per curiam, that the decision of the railway committee upon a subject, and in respect of persons, within its jurisdiction, cannot be reviewed or interfered with by the court. In the result the append was allowed as to the county of York, and dismissed as to the township of York. In re Canadian Pacific R. W. Co. and County and Township of York, 27 O. R. 559, 25 A. Transfer of Railway—Agreement—Extinguishment of Rights. —Under the British North America Act. 1867, s. 108, read in connection with the third schedule thereto, all railways belonging to the province of Nova Scotia, including the railway in question, passed to and became vested on the 1st July, 1867, in the Dominion of Canada; but not for any larger interest therein than at that date belonged to the province. The railway in question being at the date of the statutory transfer subject to an obligation on the part of the provincial government, confirmed by 30 Vict. c. 36 (N.S.), to enter into a traffic arrangement with the respondent company; the Dominion government, in pursuance of that obligation, entered into a further agreement relating thereto, of the 22nd September, 1871; —Quere, whether it was ultra vires the Dominion parliament by an enactment to that effect to extinguish the rights of the respondent company under the said agreement, But held, that 37 Vict. c. 16 (D.) did not, upon its true construction, purport so to do. And, although it authorized a transfer of the railway to the appellants, it did not enect such transfer in deregation of the respondents' rights under the agreement of the 22nd September, 1871, or otherwise. Works of Railway—Ditch — Structure—Cleaning.]—By the true construction of the B. N. A. Act, s. Dl. s-s. 22, and s. 92, s-s. 10, the Dominion parliament has exclusive right repair, and alteration of the Canadian Pacific Railway: and the provincial legislature has no power to regulate the structure of a ditch forming part of its authorized works. But the provisions of the Quebec municipal code prescribing the cleaning of the ditch and the removal of an obstruction which had caused inundation on neighbouring land, are intra vires of the provincial legislature. Canadian Pacific R. W. Co. v. Parish of Notre Dame de Bonecours, [1899] A. C. 367.

— Roadbed—Crossings.]—The provincial legislatures have no jurisdiction to make regulations in respect to crossings or the structural condition of the roadbeds of railways subject to the provisions of the Railway Act of Canada. — Fences—Erection,]—The provision in the British Columbia Cattle Protection Act, 1891, as amended in 1895, to the effect that a Dominion railway company, unless they erect proper fences on their railway, shall be responsible for cattle injured or killed thereon, is ultra vires of the provincial legislature. XXII. SERVICE OF PROCESS ON RAILWAY COMPANIES.

Head Office out of Jurisdiction.]—A railway company cannot be said to "reside or carry on business" except where the head office is situated. Ralph v. Great Western R. W. Co., 14 C. L. J. 172; Ahrens v. McGilligat, 23 C. P. 171.

Held, following Ahrens v. McGilligat, 23 C. P. 171, that a railway company does not "live and carry on business," within the meaning of 32 Vict. c, 23, s, 7 (O.), at any other place than its head office at which its business is carried on. Held, also, that the fact of the company having, in addition to its local station, a factory for the making and repair of the rolling stock used on the road, and employing a number of workmen therein, did not bring such place within the section. The Imperial Act 9 & 10 Vict. c, 95, s, 60, commented on. Westover v. Turner, 26 C. P. 510.

Injury to Land in Another Province—Local or Transitory Action.]—The plantiff complained that the defendants, by negligent use or management of their line of railway, allowed fire to spread from their right of way to the plaintiff's premises, whereby his house and furniture were burnt. These premises were alleged to be in the province of Maniloba, where the plaintiff himself resided, and the defendants were legally domiciled, and the defendants were legally domiciled, and the defendants were legally domiciled, and the defendants were legally to the land upon which the house and future users situate:—Held, that the action, as regards the house, was in trespass on the case for injury to land through negligence, and this form of action was, like trespass to land, local, and not transitory, in its nature. The action, therefore, so far as the house was concerned, could not be entertained by the Ontario court; but alter as to the furniture, on abandonment of the claim for destruction of the house. Companhia de Mocambique v. British South Africa Co, [1882] 2 Q. B. 358, [1883] A. C. 602, followed. Campbell v. Medicero, V. Canadian Pacific R. W. Co., 20 Negligence in Another Province— Cause of Action.]—A writ of summons in an action to recover damages against the Canadian Pacific Railway Company for negligence of the servants of the company, alleged to have occurred in British Columbia, causing the death of a person, was issued out of the high court of justice for Ontario, by the persend representative of the deceased, appointed in Ontario, and was served on the defendants' claims agent in Toronto, Ontario. The head office of the railway company, incorporated by Dominion legislation, was in the Province of Quebec, but the company carried on business in Ontario, through which its railway ran, and where large numbers of its officers and servants resided:—Held, that the action was properly brought in Ontario, and the service of the writ therein was valid. 3. Buffalo and Lake Huron Railway Company.

Transfer of Property — Execution.]—Held, that the taking possession by the Buffalo and Lake Huron Railway Company, under 19 Vict, c. 21, of the property previously owned by the B. B. and G. R. Co., operated to transfer the same to the former, so as to prevent its being seized under a fi. fa., even although the goods were on the way from England to their line of road, Buffalo and Lake Huron R. W. Co. v. Corbett, S. C. P. 536.

On the 18th March, 1855, the Buffalo, Brantford, and Goderich Railway Company mortgaged the goods in question, a quantity of railway iron, cars, &c., to Her Majesty to secure 15.000; and on the 17th April, 1856, they executed a second mortgage of them to other persons. These mortgages were duly filed. On the 20th February, 1856, an execution was issued at the suit of Her Majesty for the same debt, under which the property was seized, and afterwards other executions came into the sheriff's hands. The sheriff put defendant, a division court bailff, in possession on the 29th April, 1856, to hold, first, on account of the sheriff, and next on account of several executions which defendant had in his hands from division courts. On the 11th February, 1856, the B. B. and G. R. Co. sold out to the B. and L. B. R. Co. the plaintiffs;; the sale was confirmed by 19 Vict. e. 21; and that company having arranged the executions, the sheriff afterwards delivered possession to their agent, of the property at Brantford, in the name of the whole. Defendant, however, claimed to hold, notwithstanding, under the division court executions. These executions were all subsequent to the sale made on the 11th February, 1856, and land expired before the sheriff gave up possession. The plaintiffs, having replevied, were held entitled to recover. Buffalo and Loke Huron R. W. Co. v. Brooksbanks, 16 U. C. R. 337.

Brantford, and Goderich Railway Company, and was shipped from Kingston to Port Col-borne, subject to ocean freight and the freight by schooner from Kingston. On arriving at Port Colborne, no one being ready to pay, the iron was left by the master in defendant's charge, to hold subject to the freight, and was piled on a piece of ground belonging to government, where other iron belonging to the company was also lying, but separate from this. Afterwards the Buffalo and Lake Huron this, Atterwards the Bunalo and Lake Fatirus Railway Company, the plaintiffs, bought out the old company under 19 Vict. c. 21, and ar-ranged certain writs of fi. fa. under which the sheriff had seized this and the other iron; and they thereupon demanded the iron in question from defendant, who refused to give it up, claiming the ocean freight, which had in fact been paid, and the freight from Kingston, as well as demurrage, and some other charges not recoverable. The plaintiffs, however, refused to pay anything, and replevied:—Held, having been delivered to the old railway company, when landed, as it was, at Port Colborne. (2) That 19 Vict. c. 21 did not take away the right of lien; nor could anything done by the sheriff have that effect. (3) That defendant having a clear right to detain for the freight from Kingston, of which no tender had been made, his right was not prejudiced by having demanded more than was due. Buffalo and Lake Huron R. W. Co. v. Gordon, 16 . C. R. 283.

Lien on Land Sold — Parties,]—
19 Vier, c. 21, incorporating the Buffalo and Lake Huron Railway Company, with power to purchase the railway therein mentioned, did not deprive unpaid owners of any lien they had for the price of land theretofore sold to the old company. The lold company was held to be a necessary party to a suit by a land owner to enforce a lien for purchase money in respect of land sold to the old company before the transfer of the railway to the new company; it not appearing but that the old company was interested in the question to be litigated, Paterson v. Buffalo and Lake Haron R. W. Co., 17 Gr. 521.

Working Agreement - Acceptance Fencing. |-The Grand Trunk and the Buffalo and Lake Huron Railway Companies entered an agreement by which the net receipts of the two undertakings were to be divided between them in specified proportions, the G. T. R. Co. to have the option, within six years, of purchasing the share capital of the other on certain terms, and the control and working of the E. and L. H. R. Co. undertaking to be placed in the hands of the G. T. R. Co., under a joint committee of two nominees from each board: the agreement to subsist for twenty-one years, during which the B. and L. II R Co. and its appurtenances were to be kept in repair by the G. T. R. Co. 29 & 30 Vict. c. 92 confirmed this agreement, and chacted that the G. T. R. Co., in working the other railway, should have all the powers conferred on the B. and L. H. R. Co., by statute or otherwise. It provided, also, that the Act should not come into operation until accepted by the shareholders of the two companies, and such acceptance certified in the manner directed, of which acceptance and certifying a notice in the Canada Gazette should be conclusive proof. By a private Act of the Dominion, afterwards passed, 31 Vict. c. 19, it was recited that this agreement had been duly accepted. In an action against the B. and L. H. R. Co. for an accident caused by defect of fences on their line in 1867, it was proved that the G. T. R. Co. were supposed to own, and were managing and running, that railway: —Held, that on these facts—either with or without 31 Vict. c. 19, which, however, was receivable, and entitled to some weight—there was evidence for the jury from which an acceptance of the agreement might be presumed. Held, also, that the G. T. R. Co., being in possession of and working the railway under the agreement, were bound to fence; and that the defendants were not liable. Van Natter v. Buffalo and Lake Huron R. W. Co., 27 U. C. R. 581, followed as to the obligation to fence. Holmes v. Grand Trunk R. W. Co., 27 U. C. R. 595, Effect of-Bonds.]-The Buffalo and Lake Huron Railway Company, being liable upon certain bonds secured by mortgage, entered into an agreement with the Grand Trunk Railway Company, confirmed by 29 & 30 Vict. c. 92, by which the latter company were to undertake the working of their rail-way, the net receipts of the two companies to be divided between them in specified proportions. One clause of this agreement provided that, as between the B. and L. H. R. Co. and the holders of these securities, the interest on such securities should be a first charge on the proportion of net receipts payable to that company, and, so long as such proportion was duly paid to the company, none of the holders should exercise any of their powers or rights against the property or effects of the company, except their proportion of net receipts, but those powers and rights should be suspended. By another clause the agreement was declared to be subject and without prejudice to the securities, rights, and interest of the bond creditors of the company:—Held, assuming that the right to sue on the bonds was included in the powers and rights mentioned, that the effect of the agreement was not to suspend such right so as to be pleadable in bar to an action, though it might give a right of action for the damages sustained by suing in breach of it, or afford ground in equity to restrain the plaintiffs from enforcing the judgment. Held, also, that the effect of 19 Vict. c. 21 was to make defendants liable upon the bonds given by the Buffalo, Brantford, and Goderich R. W. Co. as if originally given by defendants. Quere, as to the meaning of the proviso to s. 1 of 29 & 30 Vict. c. 92, confirming the agreement. Town of Brantford v. Buffalo and Lake Huron R. W. Co., 29 U. C. R. 607.

8. Cobourg and Peterborough Railway Company.

Bondholders - Amalgamation of Companies.]-A statute gave the bondholders of the Cobourg and Peterborough Railway Company an option to convert their bonds into stock, and enacted that this "converted bonded stock," and any new subscribed stock, should be preferential to the ordinary stock, and be entitled to dividends of eight per cent. per annum in priority to any dividend to the ordinary shareholders. By a subsequent Act the company were authorized to unite with another company, and it was declared that the two companies, and those who should be-come shareholders in the new company under the Acts relating to the C. and P. R. Co. and under the deed of union, should constitute the new company :-Held, that the union did not extinguish the right of the bondholders to elect. The Act authorizing the union of two incorporated companies declared that any deed the companies executed under the Act should be valid to "all intents and purposes in the same manner as if incorporated in the Act:"—Held, that this enabled the companies to bargain together in respect of the rights which each had, and to make such arrangements as their union rendered necessary; but gave them no legislative authority over the rights of other persons. A statute authorized two companies to unite into one company by either a complete or partial union; and of either joint or separate, or absolute, or limited liability to third persons. The companies agreed to an absolute union, and made no provision for limiting the liability of the new company in respect of past transactions of the old companies:—Held, that the new company thereby assumed all the liabilities of the old company to third persons. Cayley Cobourg, Peterborough, and Marmora R. W. and Mining Co., 14 Gr. 571.

Insolvent Company—Distribution of Assets.]—The railway company having become insolvent, an Act was passed estimating the claims of creditors for land taken by the company at $30,000, and the value of the whole railway property at $100,000, and directing that $30,000 should be applied on debts for land and the balance of the $100,000 divided pro rată among the other creditors. The $30,000 proved more than sufficient to pay the land debts in full, and the company claimed the balance:—Held, that the other creditors were entitled to it. In re Cobourg and Peterborough R. W. Co., 16 Gr. 571.

9. Eric and Huron Railway Company.

Debentures—Trustees.]—By the Municipal Act, R. S. O. 1877 c. 174, s. 559, s.-s. 4, authority is given to grant bonuses and issue debentures in aid of a railway company, payable at such times, &c., as the municipal council may think meet. By the defendants' special Act of incorporation, 36 Vict. c. 70 (O.), the debentures were to be issued and delivered within six months after the passing of the by-law to trustees, who were to receive and convert the same into money, and deposit the proceeds in a chartered bank and pay the same out on the certificate of the chief engineer of the railway company;—Held, that a compliance with the terms of the general Act was sufficient, for that the provisions of the special Act were not restrictive, but enabling and enlarging the powers under the general Act; and that under the circumstances the appointment of trustees would have been useless. Bridge over Canal—Pleading—Evidence—Veoligence.]—Held, that, by the various Acts referring thereto, the erection of the defendants' drawbridge over the Desjardins canal was sanctioned and recognized; and that it must be assumed to have been lawfully erected, though the formalities required by ss. 136, 137, and 138 of the Railway Act might not have been compiled with. Held, that the first count of the declaration, charging defendants with neglect and refusal to upon the bridge and permit vessels to enter or leave the canal, was defective, in not alleging that it was not at such times being actually used by defendants for the passage of their trains; and that the second count was good. Designatins Canal Co. v. Great Western R. W. Co., 27 U. C. R. 363.

The Desjardins Canal Company having been indicted for not keeping in repair the bridge over their canal where it crosses the highway, built for them by the Great Western Railway Held, also, that evidence of the state of the bridge a few days before the trial was admissible, not as a proof of that fact, but as confirming the witnesses who swore to its state at the time laid in the indictment, and as shewing such state by inference. XXIV. STOCK.

1. Actions by Creditors against Shareholders.

(a) Judgment, Execution, and Return— Proof of by Plaintiff.

Calls-Parties.]-The making of calls by the directors is not a condition precedent to the plaintiff's right to recover, and the remedy given by the statute may be pursued by a single creditor. Moore v. Kirkland, 5 C. a single creditor. 452. See Jenkins v. Wilcocks, 11 C. P.

Execution—Return Unsatisfied.]—In an action by a creditor, the plaintiff must shew an execution against the company returned unsatisfied, and that it was not in plaintiff's power by any reasonable exertion to have obtained satisfaction. , Moore v. Kirkland, 5 C. P. 452.

Judgment—Issue as to—Validity—Sher-iff's Return,]—Defendant pleaded, among other pleas, nul tiel record as to the judgment obtained against the company, and issue was joined thereon. It did not appear at the trial that this issue had been disposed of:—Held, that the plaintiff not being shewn to be a creditor of the company could not recover. Type v. Wilkes, 18 U. C. R. 46,

The record of the judgment regainst the Company shewed it to have been obtained on their confession in an action on a promissory note:—Held, that defendant could not object to the validity of such judgment on the ground that the company could not make a note, Held, also, that it was sufficient to prove a return of nulla bona by the sheriff to the fi. fa., though such return had not been filed. S. C., ib. 126.

Return—Different Counties.]—It is not necessary that a fi. fa. goods should be returned nulla bona from all the counties through which the railway runs, but the onus of proof of fraud, or of there being goods of the company to satisfy the judgment, lies on defendants, the plaintiff having obtained one such return. Jenkins v. Wilcocks, 11 C. P.

- Director - Sheriff.]-Held, that a fi. fa. against a railway company, which was directed to the sheriff before he became a director of the company, was properly directed to and was returnable by him, and his becoming a director before the return of the writ did not invalidate it. Smith v. Spencer, 12 C. P. 277.

Judgment - Impeaching.] - The sheriff, being president of a railway company. returned a fi. fa. against the company nulla bona. Upon an action brought against a stockholder founded upon that return :-Held, that the writ and return were not nullities on account of the sheriff (being president) executing and making them; and no application having been made to set either aside, the objection Held, also, that the defendant could not go behind the judgment except in a case of fraud or collusion, and could not therefore raise a question as to the judgment being properly recoverable against the company. Ray v. Blair, 12 C. P. 257.

Subsequent-ly to this, defendant made an assignment un-der the Insolvent Act of 1869. Before doing so, however, he had procured the execution by the required majority of his creditors of a deed of composition and discharge, apparently under s. 34 of the Act. The plaintiff, as a creditor of the same company, sued out a writ of ment to him of the balance due upon the said The defendant pleaded that he was not a shareholder in the said company, his conten-tion being that the property in said stock had passed to the assignee. It did not appear whether or not the assignee had accepted or rejected this stock, or had done any act be-The defendant had obtained his discharge in the usual way, the unpaid balance upon the stock, however, not having been scheduled as a liability of defendant, and no claim having been proved in respect of it:—Held, that the plaintiff was entitled to recover, and that the property in the said stock had not passed to the official assignee. Denison v. Smith, 43 U. U. C. R. 503.

Cessation of Company - Statutes. 1-Held, that the cessation of a company by non-performance of the conditions of its charter within three years did not extinguish its liawithin three years did not extinguish its liability or that of its stockholders to pay the debts contracted during its existence. Held, also, that s. 21 of 20 Viet, c. 145 does not exempt the shareholders of the company by that Act revived (Port Whitby and Lake Huron Railway Company) from personal liability for debts contracted under the previous statute. Ray v. Blair, 12 C. P. 257, Forfeiture of Stock.]-To an action by a judgment creditor of a railway company against a shareholder for the amount of his unpaid stock, the defendant set up that the full amount of stock required by the Act of incorporation had never been subscribed, or the first instalment paid thereon; that the original design of the company had been changed by statute after defendant subscribed: that the stock subscribed for by the defendant had long since become forfeited for non-payment of calls; that on the 14th May, 1853, the directors passed a resolution declaring that the shares mentioned in a schedule intended to be annexed (but which was not annexed) to the resolution, which had become forfeited by hon-payment of a call made on the previous 21st January, should be sold on the 20th June. unless previously redeemed; and that the company had not afterwards treated the defendpany had not atterwards treated the defend-ant as a shareholder, nor had he acted as sook. Smith v. Lynn. 3 E. & A. 201. See also Fraser v. Robertson, 13 C. P. 184, infra.

Impeaching Creditor's Judgment.]-Declaration, setting out the recovery of a judgment against a company, return of writ hulla bona, and that defendant holds twenty-Rive shares of stock in said company unpaid.
Pleas: (1) never indebted: (2) defendant not a shareholder. On the trial, plaintiff proved a judgment against the company for £3,000, and that a fi. fa. had been returned nulla bona. It was objected that the contract under which the plaintiff recovered his judgment was illegal, being usurious:—Held, that if defendant wished to impeach the judgment for fraud or collusion, he should have pleaded such defence. Semble, that the court will intend the judgment to be right and well founded until the contrary be shewn. Fraser v. Hickman, 12 C. P. 584. See also Ray v. Blair, 12 C. P. 257.

RAILWAY.

Payment. |—The plaintiff, a creditor of a railway company, having had his execution returned nulla bona, sued defendant, a shareholder, for the amount unpaid on his stock. Defendant pleaded that, before this suit, the company sued him for the same moneys; and that after service of the writ of summons in that case, and before declaration in either case, and after commencement of this suit, he paid the company in full :- Held, no defence, as it was not averred that such payment was made in ignorance of the plaintiff's claim. Tyre v. Wilkes, 13 U. C. R. 482.

In an action by judgment creditors of a railway company against a municipal corporation as shareholders, it appeared that the contractors for a portion of the road had received a lease from the railway company of that part for 999 years at a nominal rent, and, as an inducement to defendants and two other municipalities to take stock, they had mortgaged their lease to trustees to secure payment to such municipalities of six per cent. on the sums subscribed by them. This mortgage, to which the company were parties, provided for the payment by the municipalities of the amount of stock taken by each, to the contractors as the work progressed, upon the estitractors as the work progressed, upon the estimates of the company's engineer, and the full amount of defendants' subscription had been thus paid:—Held, that this was a payment of oferendants' stock as against the plaintiffs, who therefore could not recover. Woodruff v. Torn of Peterborough, 22 U. C. R. 274.

Sci. fa on a judgment against a railway company, alleging that defendants held thirty shares therein, on which $1.800 remained un-paid. Plea, for a defence which arose after this action, alleging payment of $1.800, the balance due on defendants' stock, to one G. H., a judgment creditor of the company, under a judgment recovered by him against defendants as shareholders. Replication, that G. H. was a creditor only in respect of a claim which he held as trustee for the defend-ant N. D., and recovered his judgment, and received the money paid to him, as such trustee, of which defendants had notice :- Held, a good replication, for the payment to N. D., a shareholder, was of no avail as against the plaintiff, an outside judgment creditor. Na-smith v. Dickey, 42 U. C. R. 350.

- Interest.]-N. D., one of the defendants, having a claim against a railway com-pany for $1,800, assigned it to one H. by an instrument absolute in form, but really in trust, to enable H. to sue first the railway company, and then the defendants, as sharecompany, and then the defendants, as snare-holders of unpaid stock of the company. H. accordingly recovered judgments against both the company and the defendants, but made no effort to realize on that against the latter. After the commencement of this action, however, which was by a judgment creditor of the railway company, against the defendants as shareholders of the company, for their unpaid stock, defendants' solicitors gave a cheque for the $1,800 to H., who, after retaining $127, the amount of a claim he had against N. D., handed over the balance to him, and the defendants then set up as a defence to the action this payment under the judgment recovered by H. against them :-Held, on the evidence, that the judgment so recovered against the defendants, and the alleged payments thereunder, constituted no defence to the claim of an ordinary judgment creditor, and that in fact the stock of the present defendants had not been paid up to the extent of $1,800, which was therefore liable to the plaintiff's claim. Held, also, that the plaintiff could recover the interest on the calls made by the company for that amount of the stock. Nasmith v. Dickey, 44 U. C. R. 414.

Set-off.] — To an action by a judgment creditor of a railway company against a shareholder, defendant pleaded, on equitable grounds, (2) a set-off for land sold by him to the company, and (3) a similar defence, setting out that he had agreed to sell the land to the company for a sum named, out of which his stock was to be deducted, and the balance poid to him in eash; and that the company had entered and taker possession of the land:—Held, both pleas had, for it was not averred that the land had been conveyed, and until then the company would not be liable to pay for it. Quere, whether set-off can be pleaded at all it osuch an action, or to a suit by the company for calls. Moore v. McKinnon, 21 U. C. R. 140.

The plaintiff claimed, by virtue of a judgment recovered against a railway company, a sum due by the defendant as a stockholder in the company upon unpuid stock held by defendant. Defendant pleaded on equitable grounds a set-off against the company upon the common counts, claiming that the amount so due paid the amount due by him upon the stock: — Held, bad (1) as not disclosing a good defence at law, the plaintiff being an entire stranger to the claim. (2) Because the plea did not offer to set off defendant's claim against the company in payment of the plaintiff's debt. (3) Because it did not aver that the amount so unpaid upon the stock was the only debt due by defendant to the company. Held, also, that defendant, upon the facts stated, would not be entitled in equity to an unconditional nijunction, and therefore the plea must be bad in law. Smart v. McBeth, 13 C. P. 27.

The Railway Act declared a shareholder liable to judgment creditors of the company for "an amount equal to the amount unpaid on the stock held by him:"—Held, that a shareholder, in an action against him by a judgment creditor of the company, could not set off in equity a debt due to him by the company before the judgment was recovered. Me-Beth v. Smart, 14 Gr. 298.

— Forfeiture of Stock 1—Plaintiff, as a creditor of the P. H. L. and B. R. Co., sued defendant, as a stockholder therein, the declaration containing the usual allegations. Defendant pleaded, on equitable grounds, that in a cause in chancery between himself, as plaintiff, and the company and others, defendants, he recovered against the company, by a decree of the court, £244 2s. 6d., and costs, which he claimed to be entitled to, and offered, to set-off against the plaintiff's claim. The plaintiff replied, equitably, that in that cause defendant filed his bill to compel the company to perform an agreement for the purchase by them from defendant, of land, for £220, and did not pray in the bill that his indebtedness to the company might be set off against so much of the purchase money, but prayed that he might be paid the whole purchase money; that a decree was made for a conveyance by defendant to the company upon payment of the money, but no direction was given should the company fail to pay; that the land was still defendant's property; and the plaintiff denied that the company were unable to pay. A resolution of the directors, on 14th May, 1855, that all forfeited stock of the company should be sold on a certain day, unless previously redeemed, pursuant to the statute, was put in evidence:—Held, (1) that defendant was a shareholder, and liable to be sued. (2) That he was not entitled to set off the purchase money of the land sold, but not conveyed, as claimed in his plea. (3) That he was not discharged from liability by reason of the alleged forfeiture. Fraser v. Robertson, 13 C. P. 184.

Transfer of Shares.]—See Hamilton v. Grant, 30 S. C. R. 566.

(c) Practice.

Amendment.]—Defendant having moved in arrest of judgment, on the ground that the declaration claimed the amount of the judgment against a railway company, instead of the amount of stock subscribed by defendant, the court allowed plaintiff to amend. Smith v. Spencer, 12 C. P. 277.

Venue.]—Declaration for the amount of ten shares of £10 each in a company, alleging a judgment recovered, and fi. fa. returned in one county nulla bona:—Held, that the judgment recovered in the court in Toronto was not the foundation of the action, and therefore the venue was not local. Jenkins v. Wilcocks, 11 C. P. 505.

2. Calls.

Action for—Right of, 1—The City of Teronto and Lake Huren Railway Company have, under the operation of 8 Viet. e. 83, amending the original Act, 6 Wm. Intervals between Calls.]—By the Railway Act. 14 & 15 Vict. c. 51, no call shall be made "at a less interval than two months from the previous calls:"—Held, that calls on the 1st September, November, January, &c. were bad. Notice of Calls — Amount—Intervals be-tween—Mala Fides—Pleading.]—Declaration by the Port Dover and Lake Huron Railway Company against defendant as a shareholder, alleging that defendant holds four shares, and has paid ten per cent, thereon, and is indebted to the company in $80, in respect of two several calls of $10 each on each of said shares. The fourth, fifth, and sixth pleas set up that notice of the calls was not duly given and published; that the call exceeded ten per cent. on the subscribed capital, contrary to plaintiffs' Acts of incorporation; and as to the second call, that it was made payable at a less second call, that it was made payable at a less internal than two months from the previous call:—Held, good, under 35 Vict, c, 53, ss, 13, 14, and C, S, C, c, 66, s, 48. The minth plea, on equitable grounds, set out, in substance, that the road and extension would cost $900, 600; that the assets which the company had or could acquire would not exceed half that sum; that there was no possibility of making the road therewith, as the directors and plaintiffs well knew, but that they were plaintiffs well knew, but that they were proceeding to construct part, and to expend all said assets, in bad faith, for improper purposes, and with the view of personal gain to the directors and others in collision with them, &c.: — Held, no defence to this action; that the charges were fence to this action; that the charges were too loose and indefinite; and that, if sustainable, they would form proper ground for a bill in equity only. Port Dover and Lake Huron R. W. Co. v. Grey, 36 U. C. R. 425.

Time for Expiry of —Injunction—Sharebolder. —A company authorized to construct a certain railway, or part of it, built and put in operation part in due time; and after the ien wars limited by the Railway Act, C. S. C. c. 69, made calls, with a view of constructing the remainder:—Held, illegal; and that, consequently, any shareholder was entitled to restrain proceedings, though he might be the only shareholder objecting thereto. Dumble v, Peterborough and Lake Chemung R. W. Co., 12 Gr. 74.

See Moore v. Kirkland, 5 C. P. 452; Jenkins v. Wilcock, 11 C. P. 505.

3. Charging Order.

Enforcement - Action - Evidence.] A charging order was made against stock in a railway company to which a person was en-titled, but such stock, it was shewn, had, by his direction, been issued to his son, so that in a sait against the father the sheriff could not dispose of it under execution. Thereupon a bill was filed against the father and son stating these facts, and charging that the son gave no consideration for the stock; that the same was issued to him to hold for the use of the father, and was so issued to defeat, hinder, and delay the plaintiffs and other creditors of the father. At the hearing no evidence was given in support of the plaintiffs' case other than the pleadings and proceedings in the suit against the father, and in which such charging order had been made; but the depositions of the son, who had been examined in that suit were not read:—Held, that, as the son had not been a party to that cause, he was not bound by the evidence therein. The court, therefore, refused to make any decree against him, and, as any decree against the father would not give the plaintiffs any greater bene-Vol. III, p-190-41 fit than they had by the charging order, dismissed the bill with costs. Allan v. Phelps, 23 Gr. 395.

Right to—Fraudulent Assignment.]—The Imperial statute 1 & 2 Vict. c. 110, if in force in this Province, authorizes the issuing of a charging order against stocks standing in the name of a debtor "in his own right or in the name of any person in trust for him," but does not apply where such stocks have been fraudulently assigned in order to avoid execution. Caffrey V. Phelpy, 23 Gr. 344.

4. Interest on Amount Paid.

By-law—Scal.]—Defendants were sued on a by-law, alleged to have been made by them, enacting that all persons who at the time of subscribing should pay up their stock in full, should be entitled to interest on the amount of their investment. Defendants' book of by-laws was produced, in which this by-law was written out, but not sealed, and in the margin was written "expunged," signed with the president's initials:—Held, that such proof, even without the entry in the margin, would have been insufficient to shew a by-law. And semble, that the claim could only have been supported by an engagement under the corporate seal. McDonell v. Ontario, Simcoc, and Huron R. W. Co., Il U. C. R. 271.

See Nasmith v. Dickey, 44 U. C. R. 414.

5. Repayment of Instalments Paid by Shareholders.

Estoppel. — An original shareholder in the Ontario, Simcee, and Huron Railway Company having, after 16 Viet. c. 51, paid the calls before then made on his shares, and voted at a meeting of shareholders, was held precluded from claiming the repayment of his instalments under s. 4 of the Act. Barrow v. Ontario, Simcoe, and Huron R. W. Co., 11 U. C. R. 124.

Shares Received for Price of Land.]

—The plaintiff sold certain land to S. & Co., contractors for the Ontario. Simcoe, and Huron Railway, for the purposes of that road. By their contract S. & Co. took a number of shares in the company, for which they did not receive scrip, but were to pay in work. The plaintiff received in stock the price of the land, and the certificate for the shares was given to her by the defendants. I6 Vict. c. 51 was subsequently passed, and the fourth clause provided that any original shareholders in the company (S. & Co. and some others excepted) might, within a given time, apply for and obtain repayment of any instalment paid by them in cash, and have their shares cancelled:
—Held, that the plaintiff was not within this proviso, and could not claim from the company the amount of her shares so obtained, McDonell v. Ontario. Simcoc, and Huron R. W. Co., 11 U. C. R. 271

6. Sale and Transfer.

Note for Purchase Money—Omission to Assign Part—Preparation of Transfer—Administration of Justice Act.]-To a declaration against maker and indorser of a note, de-fendants pleaded separately, that before the making of the note the plaintiff and her husband sold all their interest and stock in a certain railway company to defendant H., for $55,000, and, in consideration that the plaintiff and her husband should assign, convey, assure, and transfer the same to H., H. agreed to pay the said $55,000 on certain days, and to give his notes therefor indersed by the other defendant, B., and that until the whole of the said stock, &c., had been conveyed to H. neither H. nor the other defendant should be required to pay said notes or any part thereof; that this was one of the notes, and was made on the faith that the stock had been conveyed; and that afterwards the plaintiff and her husband refused to complete the conveyance of all their stock, and only assigned part thereof, and retained thirty shares. plaintiff replied that at the time of making said agreement, and from thence hitherto, she and her husband were, and still are, ready and willing, and hereby offer, to assign to H. the said thirty acres, on his request, of which he had notice, but that II. never requested such transfer:—Held, on demurrer to this replica-tion, (1) that if no conveyance had ever been executed it would have been the duty of II. to prepare the necessary transfer for execution; but (2) that the plaintiff having conveyed all that she professed to have in the company, it was her duty to prepare, at her own cost, the extra conveyance of the thirty shares rendered necessary by her own default in not transferring them before. Semble, that, under the Administration of Justice Act, 1873, if all the other issues had been disposed of, the court might have allowed the plaintiff to convey the thirty shares, paying the costs of suit, and directed the defendant then to pay the note, and that plaintiff's husband should be made a party: but, there being other issues to be tried, judgment was given for defendants on demurrer, reserving judgment on the equitable rights of the parties. Boulton v. Hugel, 35 U. C. R.

Registration—By-law.]—Held, that under 12 Vict. c. 196, s. 35, the clerk of the Northern Railway Company could not refuse to register a transfer of stock from one municipal corporation to another, on the ground that no by-law had been passed sanctioning such transfer. Tornships of Vespra and Sunnidate v. Beatty, 17 U. C. R. 549.

- Necessity for -- Statute.] -- Judgment creditors of an incorporated company, being unable to realize anything on their judgment, brought an action against H. as a shareholder, in which they failed from inability to prove that he was owner of any shares. They then brought an action against G., in which evidence was given, not produced in the former case, that the shares once held by G. had been transferred to H., but that the transfer was not registered in the company's books :- Held, nevertheless, that the shares were duly transferred to H., as it appeared that H. had acted for some time as president of, and executed documents for, the company, and the only way he could have held shares entitling him to do so was by transfer from G. Held, also, that, al-though there appeared to be a failure of justice from the result of the two actions, the inability of the plaintiffs to prove their case against II. in the first could not affect the rights of G. in the subsequent suit. The company in which G. held stock was incorporated in 1886 and empowered to build a certain line of railway. In 1890 an Act was passed intituled "An Act to consolidate and amend" the former Act, but authorizing additional works to be constructed, increasing the capital stock, appointing an entirely different set of directors, and giving the company larger powers. One clause repealed all Acts and parts of Acts inconsistent therewith. G. had transferred his shares before the latter Act came into force. The judgment against the company was recovered in 1885. Held, that G. was never a shareholder of the company against whom such judgment was obtained. Hamilton v. Grant. 30 S. C. R. 569.

7. Subscription.

(a) Conditional Subscription.

Acceptance of Municipal Debentures.]—To a declaration under 14 & 15 Vict. c. 51, s. 19, by judgment creditors of a company against a municipality as shareholders, defendants pleaded, in substance, that they subscribed for the stock under a by-law which provided that their debentures, payable in 1877, should be issued for the sum subscribed as the same should become payable, and that the company should take such debentures at par; and that the plaintiff knew this before he became a creditor:—Held, a good defence. Section 19 does not apply in the case of a subscription under s. 18, unless such subscription is made in the ordinary manner. Higgins v. Town of Whitby, 20 U. C. R. 296.

Complete Subscription of Capital.]—Action by a creditor against defendant as shareholder. Plea, on equitable grounds, that, by 16 Vict. c. 192, the company were incorporated for certain purposes, and it was enacted that the capital stock should be £500,000; that defendant subscribed on the understanding that the whole stock was to be subscribed; that the directors in the name of the company contracted with the plaintiffs and one C. P. for the performance of certain work before said capital stock was subscribed, or enough to afford a reasonable prospect that the company could complete the railway; that defendant never agreed that the railway or any portion thereof should be constructed, or any portion thereof should be constructed, or any contract entered into by the company or directors without the whole capital stock being subscribed; and so defendant never was a shareholder.—Held, that by 16 Vict. c. 102, and the Railway Act, it was not intended to make the subscription of the whole number of shares a condition precedent to the exercise of the powers conferred by the Act, and that defendant, by subscribing and paying his deposit, rendered himself liable to all the provisions thereof. Moore v. Murphy, 11 C. P. 444.

Authority of Partner—Ratification—Alteration—Insertion of Figures.1—To an action by creditors against shareholders, defendants pleaded, on equitable grounds, in substance, that when the company entered into certain contracts specified, for the construction of the road, the company had no means and no reasonable hope of obtaining the means to complete the whole line, enough stock not having been subscribed, of which the plaintiffs then had notice; that no portion of the road had been completed; that the

Another plea was, that defendants (three in number) at the time of the alleged subscription were in partnership as ironmongers; that by the terms of their partnership gers; that by the terms of their partnership no one of them could thus bind the others without their consent; that the subscription was signed by C., one of them, in the name of the firm, without the consent of G., another of the partners, but on the express condition that unless he should ratify it the same should not bind any of them, and that G. refused to ratify; and defendants denied that they had ever paid anything on account of the shares, as alleged in the declaration:—Held, both pleas bad; for, as to the first, the facts alleged pleas bad; for, as to the ars, would clearly not entitle defendants to a would clearly not entitle defendants to a perpetual injunction, if to any relief in equity: and as to the second, though one part-her could not bind the others in such a matter, it should have been averred that when the calls were made upon defendants as alleged, they refused to pay on the ground that they were not shareholders or liable. Semble, that the second plea was bad also, as being pleaded as a defence by all, when it was a defence for G. only, by reason of the facts pleaded. Moore v. Gurney, 21 U. C. R. 127.

In an action by a creditor of the company for calls, alleging defendants to have subscribed for forty shares, the defence was: (1) that the name of the firm, consisting of three members, was signed by one of the partners, on the oral condition that unless G., another partner, who was out of the country, should assent on his return, it was not to hand, and that G. retused to ratify it; and, C. that the figures "40," shewing the number of shares, had been inserted after the subscription by some stranger. The name of G. and the jury one stranger. The name of G. and the jury of the country, and the jury of the country of the country

Colourable Subscription.]—Declaration against defendant for calls on stock.
Plea, hat by the plaintiffs' charrer it was provided that so soon as $100,000 stock should be take, and ten per cent, thereon paid into a charcered bank, the provisional directors might call a general meeting, and the shareholders who had paid such ten per cent, should elect directors and organize the company, that one D., acting in collusion with the provisional directors, to enable them to make a colourable compliance with the Act, agreed to and did enter his name as a subscriber for $50,000 stock, and to pay $3,000 thereon, and it was agreed that he should not be called on for any further payment on said stock, and that any payment he might stock, and that the payment he might stock and that the payment he might stock and that the payment he payment he payment have been agreed to give him on such terms as would yield a large profit; that the said subscription was not bona fide, but in fraud of the Act; and before $100,000 stock had been taken, exclusive of such fraudulent subscription, the provisional directors called a meeting, at which D. was present and assumed to rate as a shareholder, and chose directors, who made the alleged calls; wherefore the said company had never been legally organized, and the said calls were not authorized:—Held, no defence, for D. could not dispute his being a shareholder, and the alleged agreement with him, being contrary to the statute, could not operate. Port Whithy and Port Perry R. W. Co. v. Jones, 31 U. C. R. 170.

- Construction of Branch.]-Declaration against defendant as a shareholder, alleging that defendant holds four shares, and has paid ten per cent. thereon, and is indebted to the company in $80, in respect of two several calls of $10 each on each of said shares. Seventh plea, in substance, that de-fendant subscribed for the shares on the express condition that $100,000 should be subscribed applicable wholly to the construction of the road from Port Dover to Woodstock before any calls should be made in respect of his shares; that he never waived this condition, and that said sum had not been so subscribed. The company were incorporated to build a road from Port Dover to Woodstock. with power to extend the same to Stratford:
—Held, plea good, for that it was competent for the company to receive subscriptions of stock to be applied to the main line and the extension separately, provided the condition was expressed in the subscription, and was not a secret qualification. Eighth plea, that by plaintiffs' charter, the capital stock was declared to be $250,000; that defendant never subscribed except on the terms expressed in the said charter, that the full amount of said stock should be subscribed for before the road should be commenced; that not one-third of such stock was subscribed for; that the ten per cent, actually subscribed was sufficient for the expenses in procuring the Act, and making the expenses in procuring the Act, and making the surveys and estimates for the works; and that defendant subscribed before the general meeting required by s. 8 of the Act, on the day of which meeting $100,000 was sub-scribed, &c.;—Held, no defence. Port Dover and Lake Huron R. W. Co. v. Grey, 36 U. C. R. 425.

Promise of Contract.]—The plaintiff, as a creditor of the company, sued defendant as a shareholder for the amount remaining due on his shares. Defendant pleaded that it was agreed between defendant and the company that if he would sign an agreement to take the shares the company would give him a contract for the construction of the railway then to be constructed, and that unless and until the contract should be so given defendant should not be bound by the agreement or become thereby a shareholder; and in pursuance of said agreement, and not otherwise, defendant signed the agreement. And defendant alleged that without any default on his part, the company refused to give him the contract, and gave it to another; and that, except as aforesaid, he never subscribed for or became the owner of the shares. In another plea defendant alleged that he did subscribe for the shares on the same agreement; and that until the contract should be given to him he was not to be bound by such subscription; that the contract should be given to him he was not to be bound by such subscription; that the contract was given to another another than the contract was given to another than the department of the shares, and that dependent or treated, or show any act, as a shareholder in respect of said shares; and that, other than as aforesaid, he never subscribed for or became the owner of said shares:—Held, the both pleas were good, as shewing that defendant never became a shareholder so as to be liable to creditors, there being here no such provision as in the English Companies Act of 1895, requiring such agreements to be registered in order to bind creditors. Bullicont v. Manning, 41 U. C. R. 317.

The plaintiff, a creditor of a railway company, sued defendant as a shareholder for the amount unpaid on his shares. It appeared that the defendant had signed the stock book of the company for forty shares, but he alleged that this was done upon the faith of an oral agreement oral agreement with one L., a provisional director and chief promoter of the company, that defendant and another should receive the contract for building the road. There was no proof that defendant had received any formal notice of the allotment of the shares, but he paid ten per cent, thereon, because, as he alleged, L. told him that he would not get the contract unless he paid it. He also attended a meeting of the shareholders, and seconded a resolution granting an allowance to the directors:—Held, that the payment of the ten per cent, made him a shareholder, and that he could not repudiate his liability on the ground that he had not been awarded the contract, for L. had no power to bind the company by annexing such an agreement to his subscription. Wilson v. Ginty, 3 A. R.

In an action against defendant, as the horder of forty shares of unpaid stock in a railway company, it appeared that the defendant signed the stock book, which was headed with an agreement by the subscribers to become shareholders of the stock for the amount set opposite their respective names, and upon allotment by the company "of my or our said respective shares," they covenanted to pay the company ten per cent, of the amount of said shares and all future calls. The company subsequently passed a resolution instructing their secretary to issue allotment certifi-cates to each shareholder for the shares held by him. The secretary accordingly prepared such certificate, the one for the defendant representing that the company "in accordance with your application for forty shares, &c., "have allotted to you shares amounting to $4,000." The certificates were handed to to $4,000." The certificates were handed to the company's brokers to deliver to the shareholders. The company published a notice in a daily paper that these certificates were lying at their brokers, who were authorized to re-ceive the ten per cent. The defendant went to the brokers and paid them ten per cent. upon the forty shares; and his name was thereupon entered upon the books of the com-pany as the owner of forty shares, with a credit of ten per cent. as paid thereon, and he attended the first meeting of shareholders for the election of directors and seconded a resolution, which was carried, for the pay-ment of the provisional directors for their services. The defendant set up also that he was not a shareholder, because he signed the stock list on the faith of a parol agreement made with one of the provisional directors of the company, that unless he obtained a contract from the company he was not to become a shareholder, but the evidence shewed, not that the parol agreement made the obtaining of the contract a condition precedent to his becoming a shareholder, but that defendant's intention and agreement become a shareholder forthwith on allotment, and the parol agreement was merely a col-lateral one, as to the effect of his status as a shareholder on his obtaining a contract at a future day:—Held, that the defendant was a shareholder, and liable to the plaintiffs under s. 80 of the Railway Act, C. S. C. c. 66; that the agreement formed no defence; and that being made with a provisional director, it would not bind the company. Neuman v. Ginty, Nasm 29 C. P. 34. Nasmith v. Ginty, Denison v. Declaration, setting out the recovering of a judgment against a railway company, return of a writ nulla bona; and that defendant holds 25 shares of stock in said company unpaid. Pleas: (1) Never indebted. (2) Never was or is a shareholder in said company. On the trial, among other things, plaintiff proved a judgment against the company for £3,000; that a fi. fa. had been issued and returned nulla bona; also, that defendant had signed the stock book of the company for 25 shares, and paid 2½ per cent. £6 5s. The jury having found for plaintiff, on motion for nonsuit, on several grounds, among them, that on the trial it appeared that the words "twenty-tive" had been written over the word "ten," opposite the defendant's name, and that the alteration should be accounted for:—Held, that the objection was rebutted by the facts proved at the trial, as the defendant had paid the sum, £6 5s., being the correct sum to be paid on the first call on twenty-five shares of £10 each, being 2½ per cent. Number of Shares—Misnomer.]—

A person having signed his name in a stock book, the number of shares subscribed for being filled in by another person, who swore that he did it with the sanction of the subscriber, and the jury upon the evidence having found the subscription sufficient, the court refused to interfere:—Held, that the naming of a railway, "railroad," at the heading of the page of a stock book, did not vittate the subscription. In respect of two several calls of $10 each on each of said shares. Second plea, that after the passing of the Act incorporating the company, 35 Vict. c. 53 (O.), and before 37 Vict. c. 57 (O.), amending it, defendant subscribed for said shares, but did not, within five days next thereafter, pay ten per cent. thereon, whereby the subscription became void. 35 Vict. c. 35, 8, 7, enacts that no subscription of stock shall be valid, unless ten per cent, shall have been paid thereon within the days after subscriptions of stock shall be valid on which ten per cent, shall have been actually and bona fide paid:—Held, plea bad, for the payment after the five days was sufficient. Third plea, that the Act of incorporation provides that $25,000 of stock shall be subscribed, and fifty per cent, be paid thereon, and the railway be bona fide commenced within two years, otherwise the charter shall be forfeited and be void; and that the requirement was not compled with:—Held, bad, on the authority of City of Toronto and Lake Huron R. Notice of Allotment. |-- In action against defendant as the holder of ten shares of unpaid stock, it appeared that defendant signed the stock book, which was headed with an agreement by the subscribers to become holders of the stock for the amounts set opposite their respective names, and, upon allotment by the company of my or our said respective shares, pay the company ten per cent, of the amount of said shares, and all future calls. These were handed to the company's broker to devere handed to liver to the shareholders and collect the ten ficate was ever delivered to the defendant, or that he was ever expressly notified of the allotment, but he was, with the rest of the shareholders, from time to time notified of the calls, to which he paid no attention, and had hever paid anything on the stock; and some years afterwards, on being requested by the secretary to pay up his stock, he stated that he did not consider that he ought to pay anything, but gave no reason why :- Held, that there was sufficient evidence of notice to de-fendant of the allotment; and that it was ultra vires of the directors to take defendant's subscription for stock without at the same time receiving payment of the ten per cent, thereon. The defendant was therefore held Denison v. Lesslie, 43 U. C. R. 22, 3 A. R. 5300

Signature.]—There being some doubt attempted to be thrown upon the signature of defendant to the stock book, the jury found against the plaintiff. The evidence of the witness to the signature being very clear, and not impeached, the court granted a new trial. Ray v. Blair, 12 C. P. 257.

Withdrawal—Notice.]—A stock book for a railway company having been opened and signed and a new one substituted therefor, with a provision that any subscriber to the old one might withdraw by giving notice to the president of the company:—Held, that a subscriber who omitted to avail himself of the provision by giving such notice, was not relieved from the original subscription. Approval by Governor-General—Absence of—Passenger—Fares. —The fact that a railway company have not had their tolls approved by the governor-general under 51 Vict. c. 20. s. 227 (D.), does not in itself entitle a passenger who has paid such tolls to recover three times the amount under s. 290, in the absence of evidence that the fares charged were unreasonable or excessive: nor is such passenger entitled to recover back the amount so paid by him as paid under a mistake of fact, where it was such as in equity and good conscience he ought to have paid. Lees v. Ottawa and New York R. W. Co., 31 O. R. 507.

Discrimination - Prejudice-By-laws.] In 1865 and 1866 defendants charged plaintestator and other lumber dealers at Lindsay, $1.60 per thousand feet to carry lumber over their line to Port Hope; in 1867, $1.90, which was authorized by defendance by-law passed in that year, and sanctioned by the governor in council; and in 1868, 1869, and 1870, $1.80. In 1865 and 1866 defendants carried lumber for certain lumber dealers at Port Perry, thirty miles beyond Lindsay, from Port Perry to Port Hope at $2 per thousand, Fort Ferry to Fort Hope at $2 per thousand, defendants paying the steamboat charges for carriage between Port Perry and Lindsay, and the harbour dues at Port Hope, which left $4.38 net to defendants for the carriage from Lindsay to Port Hope. In 1870 defendants entered into special contracts with several dealers to carry for different terms of years at $1.50 per thousand, from defendants' wharf in Lindsay to the wharf at Port Hope, all the lumber that the dealers might manufacture for the American market, or for delivery at the Port Hope wharf. The testator declined such a contract, which was open to all dealers, and paid $1.80 under protest. —Held, that defendants were justified in entering into the general arrangement with the Port Perry dealers from 1865 to 1869, and the contracts in 1870; and that there was no evidence to shew that the Port Perry dealers gained any undue advantage over plaintiffs' testator, within s. 25 of the Railway Act, C. S. C. c. 66. Held, also, that to support the action it should have been shewn clearly, and not left to inference, that plaintiff's testator was prejudiced in fact. Semble, that until the by-law was passed defendants had no right to levy any tolls, but were only entitled as common carriers to a reasonable compensation. Scott v. Midland R. W. Co., 33 U. C. Hlegal Contract — Discrimination—Injunction.]—The charter authorized the company to levy such tolls only as should be fixed by by-law of the company, to be sanctioned by the governor, and that the same tolls abould be charged at all times equally to all persons. The company, from the circumstances of a firm covenanting to furnish certain quantities of lumber to be transported over their line of railyay, contracted to carry the same at a lower rate than that fixed by their tariff for the public generally; but no by-law to this effect had been passed. The court, upon a bill filed, declared such contract illegal, and enjoined the company from continuing to carry at other rates than were charged for the like services to the public generally. Attorncy-General v. Outario, Simcoc, and Huron R. W. Co., 6 Gr. 446.

Assimilation of Rates-Division of Pro-Ats—Consent of Shareholders—Ratification— Public Policy—Pleading.]—The Great Western and Grand Trunk Railway Companies on the 27th February, 1860, with a view to avoid competition, entered into an agreement under their respective corporate seals, providing for the same rates on through traffic to be charged by each, for the division of the profits from such traffic in specified proportions, and for the rendering of mutual monthly accounts, &c. To a declaration by the G. W. R. Co. against the G. T. R. Co. on the common counts, defendants pleaded this agreement, alleging that it had not been consented to by two-thirds of the shareholders of either company, as required by the statute, and that the moneys sought to be recovered by the plaintiffs accrued to them only under such agreement:—Held, on demurrer, a good defence, for that the agree-ment was clearly within the Railway Act, C. S. C. c. 66, s. 131 (a consolidation of 22 Vict. c. 4, then in force), which makes such consent a condition precedent to its validity. Great Western R. W. Co. v. Grand Trunk R. W. Co., 24 U. C. R. 107.

To a count on such an agreement, defendants pleaded that the agreement was never submitted to the shareholders, nor did twothirds of the shareholders assent thereto, as required by the Railway Act. The plaintiffs replied, on equitable grounds, that defendants should not be allowed to make this objection, because, after the agreement had been made and its provisions entered upon, its existence and working were communicated in written reports by the directors of each company to their shareholders, and announced to them at a regular meeting of shareholders, who then had full notice thereof, and did not dis-sent therefrom, but ratified and approved of the same, and permitted it to be continued and acted on; and that defendants' stockholders, at a regular meeting, approved of the sums found as balances struck in favour of the plaintiffs on the monthly settlements provided for in such agreement, which sums were now sued for :-Held, such an agreement being only authorized by the statute, "subject to the consent of two-third of the stockholders, voting in person or by proxy," that the replication afforded no answer to the plea. The rule of law and equity in such a case is the ame. Held, also, that in declaring on such an agreement the general averment of the performance of all conditions precedent was sufficient, without alleging specially that the statutable consent had been obtained. The contract declared on, being for an assimilation of rates, and a division of the net profits on certain classes of traffic, between certain points, was objected to as illegal and contrary to public policy, but was upheld. Hare v. London and North-Western R. W. Co., 30 L. J. N. S. Ch. 817, followed. S. C., 25 U. C. R. 37.

Division of Profits—Powers.]—The Railway Act of 1808 enacts that "the directors of any railway company may at any time make agreements or arrangements with any other company, either in Canada or elsewhere, for the regulation and interchange of traffic passing to and from their railways, and for the working of the traffic over the said railways respectively, or for either of those objects separately and for the division and apportionment of tolls, rates, and charges in respect of such traffic, and generally in relation to the management and working of the railways or any of them, or any part thereof, and of any railways or railways in connection therewith, for any term not exceeding twenty-one years; and to provide either by proxy or otherwise for the appointment of a joint committee or committees for the better carrying into effect any such agreement or arrangement, with such powers and functions as may be necessary or expedient, subject to the consent of two-thirds of the stockholders voting in person or by proxy," the word "traffic" being interpreted by the Act as meaning "not only passengers and their baggage, goods, animals, and things conversed by railways, but also cars, trucks, and webicles of any description adapted for running over any railway:"—Held, that the powers of a railway company to make such arrangements were not qualified by a subsequent Act, which conferred similar powers with others, and "provided also that the Co. for injury to his land caused by fire emitted from a steam engine, which was being propelled along defendants which was being projected along the distribution of road. The evidence at the trial clearly shewed that since 1864 the G. T. R. Co, had worked the line; that defendants, as a comhad had nothing to do with the working: that all the alleged damage was caused by the G. T. R. Co.'s engines and servants; and that defendants, beyond their ownership the road, were unconnected with the injuries complained of :-Held, that defendants were not liable; and that under the plea of were not hable; and that under the prea of not guilty" the defence was admissible. Held, also, that s, 6 of 31 Vict. c, 19 not merely recited the fact of the agreement of 1864 being accepted, but that it legislated upon it as accepted and binding, in its enacting part; but semble, that, even if merely recital, it would be good prima facie, though not conclusive, evidence of the fact. Held, also, that because defendants were to receive a portion of the net profits, they were not, on that account, to be considered partners and liable as such. McCallum v. Buffalo and Lake Huron R. XXVII. WORK FOR GENERAL ADVANTAGE OF CANADA—EFFECT OF DECLARING.

Appeal from Award.]—Land was expropriated by the defendants in 1876, and proceedings to obtain compensation therefor were begun in 1884. On the 25th May, 1883, the defendants' railway became by statute a Dominion road, having previously been an Ontario road;—Held, that the procedure provided by the Dominion Consolidated Railway Act, 1870, applied to the proceedings, and therefore an appeal from the award under the provisions of the Ontario Railway Act could not be prosecuted. Darling v. Midiand R. W. Co., 11 P. R. 32.

Application for Warrant of Possession.]—In an application for an injunction to restrain the defendants, who were incorporated by statutes of the Ontario legislature, from applying to a county court. Judge for sequired by them, and being expropriated by them, and being expropriated by them under the provisions of the Ontario Railway Act, on the ground that the defendants' railway had been declared a work for the general advantage of Canada, and that no notice of expropriation had been served as required by the provisions of the Ontario Railway Act:—Held, under the circumstances of this case, and following Clegg v. Grand Trunk R. W. Co., 10 O. R. at p. 713, and Darling v. Midland R. W. Co., 11 P. R. 32, that the defendants were no longer within the operation of the Ontario statutes. Held, also, that a notice of requiring the lands, given under the Dominion Railway Act, was not sufficient notice under the Ontario Railway Act. Barbeau v. St. Catharines and Niagara Central R. W. Co., 15 O. R. 586.

A railway company, incorporated by an Act of the Ontario legislature, were thereby authorized to construct, equip, and operate a railway, between certain points. a work for the general advantage of Canada was to bring it under the exclusive legislative authority of he parliament of Canada, but that the Acts of the Ontario legislature, previously passed, were in no way affected; that the railway in question was not one "constructed or to be constructed under the authority of any Act passed by the parliament of Canada" (see R. S. C. c. 100, s. 3); and therefore ss. 4 to 39 of R. S. C. c. 109 did not apply to it; and a motion to a Judge of the high court under s. 8 for a warrant of possession of certain lands were refused. Re St. Catherines and Niagara Central R. W. Co. and Barbeau, 15 O. R. S. S.

Part I. of R. S. C. c. 109 does not apply to the applicants, a company incorporated under an Ontario Act, 52 Vict, c. 82, though under Dominion control, as being a railway for the general advantage of Canada, it being only applicable to railways constructed or to be constructed under the authority of a Dominion Act. Toronto Belt Line R. W. Co. v. Lauder, 19 O. R. 607.

Arbitration-Security-Notice of Desistment. | The defendants, who were originally incorporated under an Ontario Act, gave notice of their intention to expropriate certain lands, and also executed the usual bond, lands, and also executed the usual bond, which was duly allowed by a county court Judge, and possession taken by them. Subsequently, 51 Vict. c. 78 (D.) was passed, bringing the railway under the legislative authority of the Dominion, and incorporating the provisions of the Dominion Railway Act as to expropriation of lands, except where inconsistent with the Ontario Act, but ratifying all acts already done in that regard. Afterwards, the arbitrators who had been appointed in the matter of the above lands to fix the compensation therefor, gave notice of intention to proceed with the arbitration, immediately after which defendants gave notice of desistment, and then a new notice of intention to expropriate the same with other lands, and subsequently another notice specifying the original lands only:-Held that the notice of desistment served avoided the original bond, and the defendants must now give security by deposit of money in a bank, instead of a bond, that being the mode of giving security under the Dominion Railway Act, and unless they did so, the plaintiff was entitled to an injunction restraining the defendants from using the lands. By s. 5, s. s. 15, the expression "the company" in the Act means the company or persons authorized by the special Act to con-struct the railway:—Held, that part I. of this Act applied to all railways constructed un-der provincial statutes, and was not exclusive of those mentioned in part II.: that a company incorporated by an Act of the legislature as a mining company, with power "to construct and make such railroads and branch tracks as might be necessary for the transportation of coals from the mines to the place of shipment and all other business necessary and usually performed on railroads," and with other powers connected with the working of mines "and operation of railways," and empowered by another Act, 49 Vict c. 45 (N. S.), to hold and work the railway "for general traffic and the conveyance of passengers and freight for hire, as well as for all purposes and operations connected with said mines in accordance with and subject to the provisions of part II. of c. 53, R. S. N. S. 5th ser., intituled 'of railways,'" was a railway company within the meaning of the Act; and that the reference in 49 Vict. c. 145, s. 1, to part II., did not prevent said railway from coming under the operation of the first part of the Act. Held, also, that the court had juris-diction under art. 998 to prohibit the issue of a writ of information under art. 997; but that after issue the attorney-general is dominus litis, and can discontinue proceedings or control their conduct and settlement indeperdently of any private relator. Conveyance of Easement—Resolutions—Ultra Vires— Estoppel—Prescription.)—

pany, the predecessors in title of the plain-tiffs, who were incorporated for the purpose of constructing and operating a certain line of railway, conferred upon the company, in respect of the disposition of lands acquired by them, powers of "letting, conveying, and otherwise departing therewith, for the benefit and on account of the company, from time to time, as they should deem necessary." forty years before the commencement of this action the predecessors in title of the defendants laid pipes for conveying water along the railway track of the plaintiffs' predecessors, and used them for such purpose almost continuously up to the time of the action, such privilege having been given to them by resolution of the directors of the company, who, a few years subsequently, passed another resolu-tion, and in pursuance thereof executed a deed granting, releasing, and confirming such right and privilege, which at the time this action was brought had become vested in the defendants. The undertaking of the original railway company became vested in the plaintiffs, who, a few years before the commence-ment of this action, desiring to alter the position of their track, gave notice of expropriation to the immediate predecessors in title of the defendants, and placed the track over the water pipes. The plaintiffs now sought to the water pipes. The plaintiffs now sought to have the resolution and deed mentioned declared ultra vires, and also claimed an injunction restraining the user of the water pipes, and, if necessary, an order for their removal: -Held, that the resolution and deed were ultra vires as not within the powers specified by the charter, or such as could fairly be regarded as incidental thereto, or reasonably derived by implication therefrom. Held, also, that the plaintiffs were not estopped from asserting their own title and denying the de-fendants'. Held, lastly, that the defendants. not having used and enjoyed their easement for forty years, had not acquired a title there-to by prescription under R. S. O. 1887 c. 111, s. 35. Canada Southern R. W. Co. v. Town of Niagara Falls, 22 O. R. 41.

 - I. EFFECT OF AS PROOF OF PAYMENT.

Date of Payment.]—" $35. Fergus, 9th Nov., 1897. Received from R. M. the sum of thirty-tire dollars, being the amount due of him for the instalment ending 1st November, 1897, of a bond. R. L. '!—Held, no evidence of payment on 1st November, for the construction of the receipt (and the question was one of construction, not of presumption) was an acknowledgment of payment, made on the day it bore date, of a sum of money due on 1st November. Love v. Moricc, 19 C. P. 123.

Execution—Stay.]—Where, with a view of giving defendant time, the plaintiff had, upon the misinformation of the deputy sheriff, given a receipt for the debt, as the only proper mode of staying the execution, which receipt the sheriff had stated in the return of the writ of fi. fa., the court ordered an alias to issue. Hinnerley . Gould, Tay, 143.

Explanation of Purpose.] — A receipt in full is not conclusive evidence of payment, but is a mere admission, which is always susceptible of explanation in respect to the circumstances under which it was given, and the purposes which it was intended to answer. Montiforton v. Bondit. 1 U. C. R. 362; Cucullier v. Browne, 4 U. C. R. 105.

Indorsements on Mortgage — Mortgagor—Executor of Mortgagee. —A mortgagee appointed the mortgagor one of his executors, and the mortgagor became the acting executor. The mortgagor afterwards entered into an agreement with B., the owner of other property, for an exchange free from incumbrances, and that B. should pay $2,000 for the difference in value. The mortgagor had indorsed on the mortgage certain sums as paid by him thereon after the mortgagee's death, reducing thereby the amount appear-ing to be due on the mortgage to $1,600, no part of which, however, was payable. B. satisfied the $1,600, partly in money paid to the mortgagor, partly by a debt owing to B. by the mortgagor, and partly by moneys which had theretofore been lent by B. for the purposes of the mortgagee's estate, and the mortgagor thereupon indorsed on the mortgage a receipt for $1.600 in full of the mortgage money; the contemporaneous payment of money was made with the assent of the other executor. It afterwards appeared that the mortgagor was largely indebted to the mort-gage's estate at the date of all these transac-tions:—Held, that the contemporaneous payment was a valid payment pro tanto, the same having been made with the assent of the coexecutor; but that the estate (or the co-execuwas not bound by the receipts indorsed on the mortgage; and that B, was not entitled to credit, as against the estate, for the private debt due to him by the mortgagor, nor for his antecedent loan. Bacon v. Shier, 16 Gr. 485.

Settlement of Account — Resolution — Payment of Part.]—The court house in which the plaintift, the county attorney and clerk of the pence, previously had his office, was burned, and the county council informally offered him certain rooms in another building leased by them. The plaintift, considering them insufficient, as in fact they were, hired others at $11 per mouth; and having sent in his bill to the council for seventeen months, they passed a resolution to pay him $93.50 (being one-half), in full of his claim, which sum he afterwards received, and signed the receipt and indorsed a cheque therefor, which purported to be in accordance with the resolutions:—Held, that he was bound by such settlement, and could not recover more in respect of the seventeen months' rent; but that he might recover the full rent paid by him subsequent to the resolution. Lees v. County of Carleton, 33 U. C. R. 409.

II. RECEIPTS FOR RENT.

Effect of, as to Tenancy.]—Ejectment. Defendant in his notice of title, besides denying the plaintiffs' title, claimed title in himself as their tenant. The plaintiffs, under this notice of defence, alleged that defendant was thereby debarred from disputing their title as landlord, and proved a receipt for rent in full to the 31st March, 1861. This action was commenced on the 12th October, 1861. The defendant, in reply, proved that his tenancy commenced in May, and that one of the plaintiffs in April, 1861, while visiting the farm, expressed his satisfaction as to its state, and told him he wished him to remain on. The jury having found for the plaintiffs, and that defendant was their agent on the premises:—Held, that the direct evidence of the commencement of the tenancy in May was entitled to greater weight than a receipt dated the 30th March for rent up to date. Colby v. Well, 12 C. P. 95.

Defendant asserted that he was a yearly temant, while the plaintiff alleged that he was tenant only from one year's end to the other: —Held, that, on the facts stated in the case, the receipts for rent set out afforded no inference as to the nature of the tenancy. Houghton v. Thompson, 25 U. C. R. 55T.

III. MISCELLANEOUS CASES.

For Certificate of Deposit—Effect of—Sale of Land.]— The plaintiff in ejectment produced two receipts for certificates of deposits to the credit of the receiver-general, on a purchase of certain lands. In both the money was expressed to have been received from the baintiff. In the first a blank was left for the name of the vendee, the words "sold to" being inserted. In the second no mention was made of the purchaser:—Held, that the receipts prima facie imported a sale to the plaintiff. Young v. Scobie, 10 U. C. R. 372.

For Consideration in Deed—Effect of Absence of.)—A vendor took from the purchaser a mortgage for part of the consideration money, but did not register the conveyance until several months after the deed to the purchaser had been registered; in the meantime the mortgagor created a second incumbrance in favour of bond fide mortgages, which was registered long prior to the first mortgage, without notice of the vendor's incumbrance:—Held, that the want of a receipt for the consideration money upon the deed to the purchaser was not sufficient to postpone the second incumbrance. Baldicin v. Budgana, 6 Gr. 595.

For Goods—Effect of—Third Person.]— A receipt by A. for flour as in store for B., given and accented, is not conclusive upon the person accepting it from B. Mair v. Holton, 4 U. C. R. 505.

For Legacy—Sufficiency.] — Legatee having given a receipt not bound to execute a release. Kaiser v. Boynton, 7 O. R. 143.

For Price of Timber—Effect of, as Contract.]—A receipt quât receipt is not a contract, but a mere acknowledgment, and is open to explanation and contradiction by parol. L. for T., the sum of 8500, on account of elm and soft maple on;" &c., the said lot, describing it. Parol evidence was admitted to shew, and the jury found, that one of the conditions of the sale was that the timber was to be removed by T, within two years:—Held, that the receipt here was not the contract between the parties, but a mere acknowledgment of so much money; and therefore the parol evidence was properly admitted. Held, also, that the effect of the condition was, that T. was only to have the right to cut and remove the timber within the two years from the date of the agreement. Johnston v. Shortreed, 12 O. R. 633, followed. Steinhoff v. McKac, 13 O. R. 548.

I. APPOINTMENT OF.

1. Appointee.

Fitness and Acceptability. | - A receiver, though an officer of the court, stands in the position of trustee to all interested in the estate or fund. Therefore, in making the appointment the court will endeavour to select a person unexceptionable to all parties, not only fit and competent, but also acceptable. Simpson v. Prescott and Ottawa R. W. Co., 1 Ch. Ch. 99.

Although the appointment of a receiver should not be lightly disturbed, still where there was personal ill-feeling between the per-son appointed and some of those interested, and a person who had been proposed by other parties to the cause was, owing to his busi-ness habits, likely to be better qualified to discharge the duties of receiver, and was entirely unexceptionable, the court vacated the appointment made by the master, and ordered the other to be appointed. Brant v. Will-oughby, 17 Gr. 627.

2. In What Cases Appointed.

(a) Claims against Estates of Deceased Persons or Trust Estates.

Fraud of Trustee.] - The court will grant an injunction to restrain a trustee from interfering with the trust estate where fraud is charged, and by the same order appoint a receiver. Vernon v. Kinzie, 2 O. S. 40.

Improper Management by Executor.] —A bill was filed in 1846, by devisees against executors, charging them with improper con-duct in the management of the estate; and the answers were all filed within a year. No fur-ther proceeding was had thereon until 1851, when the plaintiffs moved on affidavit for the appointment of a receiver of the real and personal estate. The court refused the appli-cation as to the personal estate, as no new grounds were stated in the affidavit, but grant-ed it in respect of the real estate. ed it in respect of the real estate. Meacham v. Draper, 2 Gr. 316.

Insolvency of Executor. |-As a general rule, an assignment for the benefit of creditors will be taken as a declaration of insolvency and equivalent to bankruptcy in England. Where, therefore, some of the legatees of a testator filed a bill against his executor and two of the legatees, charging maladministration, and alleging that the executor, subsequently to the death of the testator, had made an assignment for the benefit of his creditors, and that he was insolvent, the court, upon motion for an injunction and receiver before answer, under the circumstances, granted an interim injunction and receiver, notwith-standing that the executor denied any maladministration of the estate, or that his in-solvency was the reason for his making the assignment of his estate. Harrold v. Wallis,

Insufficiency of Personal Estate -Rents and Profits.]-Upon a creditor's bill, a receiver of the rents and profits of the testa-tor's real estate will not be appointed where the plaintiff does not allege in his bill and clearly prove the insufficiency of the personal estate to pay the debts, and does not pray for the application of the realty, or the rents and profits thereof, to that object. Sanders v. Christie, 1 Gr. 137.

Misconduct of Executor - Summary Administration Order. 1 — When the misconduct is such as would entitle a plaintiff at the duct is such as would entitle a plaintiff at the outset to apply for an injunction or a receiver, an action should be brought. Sullivan v. Harty. 9 P. R. 500.

See McLean v. Bruce, 13 P. R. 504.

Waste by Executor. |- A general charge in a bill, that the defendant, an executrix and trustee, is committing waste on the testator's property, without specifying any act of waste, is not sufficient to sustain an injunction or a receiver. Sanders v. Christie, 1 Gr. 137.

See Callaghan v. Howell, 29 O. R. 329.

(b) Mortgage Cases.

Mortgagee in Possession-Removal of - In a redemption suit by the second mortgagee against the nrst, ft appeared that the equity of redemption had become vested in the first mortgagee, and that he had entered into possession, and had cut and removed timber to a greater value than the amount due on his mortgage:—Held, that the second mortgagee might ask for a receiver. Steinhoff v. Brown, 11 Gr. 114.

Mortgagor in Possession - Equitable Mortgage-Foreclosure-Defence.] mortgage—rorecosure—rolerence.] — Detendant, in a foreclosure suit, cannot defeat a motion for a receiver by a general affidavit that he has a good defence to the suit; he must specify the defence distinctly to enable the plaintiff to meet it, and the court to judge of it. An equipment protection of the defeat of the defea of it. An equitable mortgagee is after default of it. An equitable mortgage is after dealer the entitled to a receiver where the mortgagor is in possession, whether the security is scanty or not; and he need not make a prior mortgagee who has the legal estate a party to the suit. Aikins v. Blain, 13 Gr. 646.

Purchaser of Equity—Covenant to Indemnify.]—A judgment creditor of a mortgagor upon covenants in the mortgage cannot obtain a receivership order to enforce payment by a purchaser of the equity, who, on purchasing, has agreed to assume and pay the mortgage, though he sue and make the appli-cation on behalf of himself and all other creditors of the mortgagor. Palmer v. McKnight, 31 O. R. 306.

(c) Partnership Cases.

Death of Partner-Exclusion of Representatives—Differences.]—A surviving partner, by reason of his liability to pay the debts due by the partnership, is entitled to receive all moneys and collect all debts due to, and dispose of all the effects of, the firm for that purpose. The representatives of the deceased purpose. In elementary of the hocks of the partner have a right to inspect the books of the partnership, and to be informed of the proceedings of the survivor; and any exclusion of them in these respects will entitle them to an injunction and receiver. Bitton them to an injunction and receiver. Buton v. Blakely, 6 Gr. 575.

Although a surviving partner may not be chargeable with any fraud or misconduct, still when there is a difference of opinion between him and the representatives of his deceased partner as to the mode of winding up the estate, they are entitled to the assistance of this court for that purpose, through the medium of a receiver and sale. S. C., 7 Gr. 214

Dissolution—Claim to Assets.]—After the dissolution of a partnership, one of the partners claimed the greater portion of the partnership property as his own by reason of certain misconduct which he charged against the plaintiff, and made use of the partnership property in carrying on business on his own account:—Held, that such proceedings were wrong, and entitled the other partner to a receiver. Doupe v. Stevart, 13 Gr. 637.

— Failure to Agrec.]—Where partnership articles provide that on dissolution the partners shall appoint a person to collect the accounts and settle the partnership affairs, the court will, on failure of the partles to agree on some person, appoint a receiver. Mitchell v. Lister, 21 O. R. 22.

Exclusion of Co-partner.] — Where a managing partner was charged, on affidavit of his co-partner, with excluding the latter from access to the hooks and papers of the partnership, and with not delivering to him accounts, which the partnership articles stipulated for, an injunction and a receiver were granted against such managing partner, though his affidavit denied the principal charges, but not satisfactorily, Prentis v, Brennan, 1 Gr. 371.

Two partners dissolved. On a bill afterwards filed by one for exclusion, defendant justified the exclusion on the ground of a parol agreement, which the other denied, and it was not otherwise proved:—Held, that the plaintiff was entitled to a receiver for his security until the hearing. Steele v. Grossmith, 19 Gr. 141.

Inquiry as to Lands.]—Where there is a reference to the master to inquire what lands are partnership property, a motion to appoint a receiver is informal. Bates v. Tatham, 5 L. J. 40.

(d) Other Cases.

Chattel Mortgage - Possession - Payment.]—The plaintiff, carrying on the business of a druggist, mortgaged his stock-inness of a druggist, morigined his stock-in-trade to the defendant; the instrument by which it was effected stipulating that the defendant should take possession of the stock and premises, to hold for four months in order to secure repayment of money advanced, and power was given to the mortgagee to add new stock so as to keep up the business. Default was made in payment, and thereafter a large amount of stock was added, some of the money being expended by the defendant with the assent of the plaintiff; other money, being part of the profits of the business, was thus reinvested in new stock; some of the old stock remaining in specie. The matter was referred remaining in specie. The matter was referred to the master at Belleville, to take the ac-counts of the dealings between the parties. Before the master made his report, the plainrecover the master made his report, the plain-tiff applied on petition for the appointment of a receiver, on the ground that the mortgage had been paid in full:—Held. (1) that, as the new stock belonged to the mortgagee himself, and the plaintiff could therefore have no claim upon it, and as the master had not yet found which party was indebted to the other, his finding would not be anticipated by the appointment of a receiver. (2) That, although the defendant's right on default was to sell the original stock en bloc after notice, still the defendant was at liberty to add further capital and stock to the business, but not to the prejudice of the mortgagor so as to improve him out of his estate; and so long as the plaintiff chose to allow the business to go on under the defendant's control, he had the right so to conduct it, subject to being called to account. Foster v. Morden, 29 Gr. 25.

Company—Bondholder — Liquidation — Concurrent Proceedings abroad.]—The holder of bonds of a joint stock company (limited). after instituting proceedings in the court of chancery in England, for the sale of the part-nership property, which was situated in Can-ada, and after the appointment of a receiver in England of the estate in England and Canada, filed a bill in this Province for the like purpose, and the court appointed the agent of the receiver receiver here; after which it appeared that the company went into liquidation, the liquidator being the same person who had been appointed receiver in England. The plaintiff, after an amendment of his bill stating these proceedings, moved for a decree in the terms of the prayer of his bill; but the court refused to make any decree until it was shewn what the position of matters was in England, and the steps about to be taken there, so as to avoid any conflict between the two courts, and mould the order here to give the appropriate relief, without interfering with the steps which were being taken in England for the same object. Louth v. Western of Canada Oil Lands and Works Co., 22 Gr. 557.

Equitable Execution.] — See EXECU-

Loan by Municipality to Navigation Company—Interest—Tolls.] — The municipality of B., being authorized by statute to lend £40,000 to a navigation company in the debentures of the municipality, payable in twenty years, issued debentures to that extent, of which debentures to the amount of £16,500 were deposited by the navigation company in a bank. The municipality, with the consent of the navigation company, redeemed the debentures so deposited, and then instituted proceedings against the company to compel payment or foreclose the interest of the company under their Act of incorporation. The court refused this relief, but appointed a receiver of the tolls, &c., of the company, which he was to apply in maintaining the works and payment of salaries of the servants of the company, and then in payment of the arrears of interest paid, and payment of interest on outstanding debentures. Town of Brantford v. Grand River Navigation Co., S Gr. 246.

Partition — Summary Application. 1—A notice of motion for partition having been served, the plaintiff moved for an injunction restraining the defendant from collecting rents, and for a receiver. It appeared that the defendant was a stranger, whose right to be in possession was denied: —Held, that no relief could be had against him without bill filed. Young, Wright, S. P. R. 193.

Acmp v. Jones, 12 Gr. 260.

II. DISCHARGE AND REMOVAL OF.

Injunction—Notice.]—A defendant may move to dissolve an injunction without moving at the same time to discharge a receiver, previously appointed, of the funds to which the injunction related. The court will entertain a motion to discharge an order for a receiver, though such order was made upon notice. Sanders v. Christie, I Gr. 137.

See Brown v. Perry, 1 Ch. Ch. 253; Simpson v. Prescott and Ottawa R. W. Co., 1 Ch. Ch. 337; Brant v. Willoughby, 17 Gr. 627; Lee v. Credit Valley R. W. Co., 29 Gr. 480.

III. LIABILITIES OF.

Accounts—Rents—Security.]—On the 20th January, 1878, an order was made directing that D. be receiver in the suit, he first giving security to the satisfaction of the registrar. At the date of the order, and previously thereto, D. was the agent of the mortgagor, and as such collected the rents of the property in question. D. received oral notice of the order, and executed his own bond as security, which the registrar declined to accept, and D. continued to receive the rents and pay them to the mortgagor. On the 20th May D. executed a second bond, recting the order of the 20th January, and conditioned that he "do and shall account for every sum of money which he shall receive on account of rent," which was filed on the 22nd May, and on the 3rd June a copy of the order of the 20th January was served on him, and he was notified that his security had been accepted:—Held, that D. was accountable for the rents received since the 29th January, but was entitled to be allowed for any disbursements properly made by him. Western Canded, etc., Co. v. Ince, S. P. R. 262.

Attachment for Non-payment.]
Where an order is made upon a receiver for payment of money, the court on default will commit for a contempt of such order, without requiring any further order to be served. Melatoh v. Elliott. 2 Gr. 396.

Order—Recission—Punishment—of Receiver, 1—An attachment lies against a receiver as an officer of the court, for default in compliance with an order to pay into court money found to be in his hands as receiver. The powers of the court are not invoked nor its process issued for the purpose of recovering or enforcing pay-ment of a civil debt or claim inter partes, ment of a civil debt or claim inter partes, but for punishing its officer, who has dis-obeyed its order; and ss. 6 and 11 of R. S. O. 1887 c. 67 are inapplicable. An understanding between the receiver and the solicitor of one of the parties ought not to be accepted as an excuse for non-compliance with the order to pay in, more especially when the authority to waive the order is not admitted. authority to waive the order is not admitted but denied. Nor can the receiver be permitted to discharge himself by setting up claims upon the money which, had they been put forward in the first instance, would probably have prevented his appointment. Where, upon an application in such a case to rescind an order for an attachment, no objections are taken to the regularity of the proceedings, the court of appeal should not be astute to discover them or permit them to be raised for the first time on the argument of the appeal. In this case, a letter written by the receiver, before the order for his attachment was made, stating that he was ready to pay the money into court as soon as a specific order for that purpose was made, was regarded as an answer to his subsequent application for relief against it, as shewing that the grounds urged appeal were a mere afterthought. Semble, that a specific order to pay over the balance is the proper course in the first instance. Faukes v. Griffin, 18 P. R. 48.

Payment of Profits.]—Where a receiver had made an investment unauthorized by the court, by which a profit had been made, the amount realized was directed to be added to the principal. Baldwin v. Crawford, 2 Ch. Ch. 9.

IV. RIGHTS OF.

1. Costs.

Action Brought without Leave.]—A receiver is entitled, as against the defendants, to the costs of a suit in which he succeeds, though the action has been brought without the sanction of the court. Re Neill, Dickey v. Neill, 9 P. R. 176.

Petition—Notice of, to Receiver, 1—The receiver was served with notice of the presentation of the petition, and appeared theresentation of the petition, and appeared theresentation between the presentation of the petition of the attendances the arears of principal and interest due on their mortgages and the costs of the actions and the petition:—Held, that, if the petitioners wished to protect themselves from paying costs, they should have proceeded under con. rule 1193 and tendered the receiver $5 with the petition; and this not having been done, and the relief asked in the alternative prayers being such as justified the appearance of the receiver, the receiver was entitled to be paid his costs by the petitioners; and the petitioners were allowed to add the sum so paid and their own costs to the mortgage debt. Gardner v. Burgess, 13

2. Making Assessments on Premium Notes.

Powers of Directors — Statutes.] — Where application was made to the court to add the persons who had signed premium notes as parties in the master's office, and to direct the master to assess the amounts due upon the notes, and to order payment of the same to the receiver from time to time, it was assessments upon the notes pursuant to R. S. O. 1877 c. 161, s. 45 et seq:—Held, that, as the liability attached only upon such assessment by the directors, the court should not add to or alter the liability of the persons who had made the notes by referring it to the master or receiver to do that which the directors only could do; clause 75 of 36 Vict. c. 44, which gave power to a receiver to do this, having been omitted from the statute on revision. Hall v. Merchants and Manufacturers' Ins. Co., 28 Gr. 500.

3. Possession of Property.

(a) Order to Deliver.

Partnership—Misconduct of Partner—Property in Possession of Third Person.]—Where it was proved that a partner had purchased a house and a large part of the furniture thereof, with partnership funds, improperly withdrawn by him for that purpose; and such partner, being the defendant in the cause, had withdrawn all the partnership books and papers from the jurisdiction, in breach of an injunction, the court ordered the mother and sister of the defendant, whom he left in possession, to deliver up to the receiver, already appointed, the house and all the furniture, as partnership property. Prentiss v. Brennan, 1 Gr. 484.

Where, in consequence of the misconduct of a managing partner, a receiver had been appointed, a person in possession of property of the partnership (the legal estate in which property was in such partner) was ordered to deliver up possession or attorn to the receiver, though such person swore that the conveyance by which the legal estate became vested, though absolute in form, was executed by the deponent as a security only. Prentiss v. Brennan, 2 Gr. 18.

In a suit in which a receiver of partner-ship effects had been appointed and a sequestration issued against the defendant for contempt, the court retained a motion against third persons for delivery or payment to the receiver or sequestrators of a promissory note, the property of the partnership, transferred subsequently to the issuing of the injunction and sequestration, but before the note became due, by the defendant, in a foreign country, the affidavits as to the bona fides of such transfer being contradictory; the court giving leave to file a bill against such third persons. Where, after the issuing of an injunction and sequestration in a partnership suit against sequestration in a partnership suit against the defendant, a transfer was made of a promissory note, part of the assets of the partnership, the plaintiff having filed affidavits impugning the bona fides of the transfer, the court gave leave to the plaintiff to serve a notice of motion to comto the receiver or sequestrators in the cause, upon the person to whom the note had been transferred, out of the jurisdiction; and such person having appeared upon and opposed the motion, substitutional service of the subpæna to answer was ordered to be made on his solicitor's agent in a suit afterwards brought against him, by leave of the court, for the same purpose. Prentiss v. Brennan, Re Bunker, 2 Gr. 322.

(b) Other Cases.

Partnership—Sale of Assets—Claims of Third Persons.]—Where a receiver of partrership property had been appointed, and certain chattels had been seized under a sequestration against the defendant for contempt of the injunction, and the chattels so seized were alleged to be the property of the defendant and his co-partner, but it appeared that third persons claimed an interest therein, the plaintiff having moved to sell this property, a reference was directed on such motion (on which the claimants had appeared) to inquire as to their interests, and any further order on the motion was reserved, the parties to the motion electing to have a reference instead of issues to try the questions in dispute. Re Brennan, 2 Gr. 274.

Where, after the appointment of a receiver, or the issuing of a sequestration, a question arises on an interlocutory application with persons not parties to the suit, as to the right to property claiped by the receiver or sequestrators, the court may either dispose of the matter at once upon the affidavits filed, or, if the matter is not ripe for discussion, will direct such proceedings to be had as appear on the whole to be best fitted for the determination of the question of right. Prentiss v. Brennan, 2 Gr. 582.

Timber — Third Persons.]—Replevin. Defendants made cognizance, and aleged that under a decree of the court of chancery in a cause in which defendant L. was plaintiff and one V. was defendant, defendant A. was appointed receiver of the partnership property of the late firm of L. and V., who "were the parties to the said suit in chancery, and A. as receiver, and L. as his servant and by his command, took and distrained the timber in the declaration mentioned as and being a portion of the said partnership property, which," &c.:—Held, on demurrer, bad, as shewing no justification. Campbell V. Lepan, 19 C. P. 31.

Plaintiffs contracted with V., who was at the time in partnership with L., for the sale and delivery to them of a quantity of timber. Subsequently L. obtained a decree in chancery against V., which, after declaring them to have been partners in getting out the timber, directing an account, and restraining V. from removing or intermeddling with the timber, referred the suit to the master to appoint a receiver. Before this decree was acted upon by L., V. delivered the timber, as the jury found, to the plaintiffs, by whom, as they also found, it was accepted without objection on L.'s part, who in fact was present at the time. Some months after this a receiver was appointed under the decree in chancery, and at L.'s instance he took possession of the timber in question:—Held, that the receiver's act was wrongful, as the property in the timber had passed to the plaintiffs before his appointment, and that they could therefore maintain replevin against him Creditor of Partner—Assignee of Firm.]—The court has jurisdiction, and will exercise it, to prevent the creditor of one partner from obtaining an undue preference over the creditors of a firm by means of proceedings in chancery. Where a purchaser at a sheriff's sale of the interest of one partner filed his bill for an account and a receiver, and the receiver obtained possession of the stock-in-trade, leave was granted to a creditor of a firm to take proceedings in insolvency, and the receiver was directed to hand over the assets to the assignee in insolvency when he should be appointed. Felan v. McGill, 3 Ch. Ch. 68.

Sale for Taxes.]—Chattels in the possession of a receiver were seized and sold by a bailiff for municipal taxes. Neither the bailiff nor the purchaser was aware until after the property of the sale that the property of the sale to be affected as the sale to be sale

V. SUITS AND PROCEEDINGS AGAINST AND BY.

1. Against.

Hlegal Distress.]—The receiver in a cause distrained for rent. On the following day notice was given by a prior incumbrancer that he claimed the rent, and three days afterwards the bailiff was withdrawn. The tenant whose goods had been distrained thereupon began an action of trespass against the receiver. The court, under the circumstances, restrained the action. Simpson v. Hutchison, 7 Gr. 308.

Tenant of Receiver—Doncer.]—A widow entitled to dower commenced an action therefor against a tenant to whom, without express authority, the property had been lensed by a receiver in a suit in chancery:—Held, that she was not at liberty to proceed in such action without the leave of the court. Coleman v. Glanville, 18 Gr. 42.

2. By.

Administration—Receiver of Legatee's Interest. — A summary order was made for the administration of the estate of M., deceased, A company, who were execution creditors of a legatee, obtained an order appointing them receivers of his legacy, and applied for the carriage of the administration proceedings:—Held, that the company were not in the position of assignees of the legatee, but only of charges upon the fund or property to which was entitled, and were therefore not in a position to ask in invitum for a summary order for administration. Leave, however, was given to the company to assert their claim by an action, accumentation having been raised as to a forfeiture of the legatee's interest. Re Morphy, Morphy v. Nicen, 11 P. R. 321. Vet. 11, D.—191—42

The right of a judgment creditor of a legatee or devisee under a will to bring an action for the administration of the estate of the testator is doubtful. A receiver, appointed at the instance of a judgment creditor to receive the interest of the judgment debtor in the estate of his father for satisfaction of the judgment debt, was given leave to bring an action for administration, no opinion being expressed as to his status. Mones v. McCallum, 17 P. R. 102. See the next case.

Judgment Debtor—Use of Name.)—A receiver appointed by the court to aid a judgment creditor in recovering his claim, by receiving the judgment debtor's share in an estate which could not be reached by execution, after the refusal of the judgment debtor to allow the use of his name, was authorized, on giving security to him, to take proceedings in his name for the administration of the estate, and if necessary for the removal of the executor. Decision in 17 P. R. 356 reversed. Mones v. McCallum, 17 P. R. 395

Debt—Leave of Court.]—Where a receiver appointed to manage an estate finds it necessary to sue for debts due to it, an application for permission to do so must be made, supported by affladvits shewing the expediency of instituting such proceedings. Thomas v. Torrance, 1 Ch. Ch. 9.

Leave of Court—Calls.]—In these cases an objection was taken that there was no power to sue because the company's license under 42 Vict. c. 25 (O.) had been revoked, but it was shewn that one B. had been appointed receiver, and was specially required by order of the chancery division to prosecute all members in arrears for calls, and was prosecuting them as receiver:—Held, that the objection was not tenable. Union Fire Ins. Co. v. Fitzsimmons, Union Fire Ins. Co. v. Fitzsimmons, Union Fire Ins.

Leave of Court — Security for Costs.] — Where an incorporated company, after they had commenced an action at law, became bankrupt, and a receiver was appointed, by the court of chancery, in a suit in that court, and authorized to proceed in the action at law:—Held, that neither the company nor the receiver should be ordered to give security for costs. Provincial Ins. Co. v. Gooderham, 14 C. L. J. 121.

A receiver had no right to sue in his own name for a debt due to the person or corporation whose assets he has been appointed to receive; nor can that right be conferred on him by order. But where, by an ex parte order made in the action in which the plaintiff was appointed receiver, he was authorized to bring actions in his own name for the collection of debts due to a certain grange, and brought debts due to a certain grange, and brought amendment should be made adding the grange as co-plaintiffs without security being given for their costs, they being insolvent. If there were no person in whose name the action could be brought, there would perhaps be jurisdiction to direct it to be brought in the name of the receiver. McGuin v. Fretts, 13 O. R. 639.

S., and plaintiff was appointed the receiver in that suit to receive S. S.'s share of his father's estate to which he was entitled under the will of the latter. The share not being paid over, plaintiff brought action in his own name against the father's executors to recover the amount. The defendants demurred on the ground that the cause of action, if any, was vested in S. S., and that plaintiff had no right to bring the action:—Held, that the right of action was in S. S. and not the plaintiff; by his appointment the plaintiff became entitled to receive the amount, and the defendants the executors, having notice of his appointment, could not safely pay over the money to any other, and in case of their refusal to pay, the plaintiff suty was to apply for leave to bring an action in S. S.'s name. McGuin v. Fretts, 13 O. R. 699, followed. Stuart v. Grough, 14 O. R. 255. See S. C., 15 O. R. 66, 15 A. R.

Distress for Rent—Leave of Court.]—An order had been made giving a receiver liberty to distrain for arrears of rent. Upon the application of a tenant distrained upon for discharge of this order, it appeared that the tenancy had determined more than six months before the order to distrain was made, so that distress could not be made under 8 Anne c. 14, 8x. 6 and 7. The order to distrain was therefore discharged. No notice need be given to a tenant of an application for an order giving a receiver leave to distrain. Paston v. Drydem, 6 P. R. 127.

Ejectment of Overholding Tenant.]— Held, that if a receiver has been appointed by the court of chancery to whom the tenant has attorned, or if the interest of the original landlord has been sold to another, in either case the original landdord is not the proper person to take proceedings to turn the overholding tenant out of possession, but the receiver or vendee. In re Babcock and Brooks, 9 L. J.
185.

Setting aside Preference, —After a decree had been pronounced directing the appointment of a receiver, but before the appointment was completed, the defendant company had make a payment to a creditor, which the plaintiff a quidgment creditor, alleged to be a fraudulent preference, and moved for an experiment to a creditor, alleged that, as the payment complained of took place had not be a fraudulent preference, and moved for an experiment of the preceding of the payment complained of took place before the actual appointment of the receiver, it was more reasonable that those who were interested at the time the payment was made, parties to the suit, and who objected to what had been done, should in person apply for the appropriate relief. Fox v. Nipissing R. W. Co., Gooderham v. Nipissing R. W. Co., 29

See McLean v. Allen, 18 P. R. 255.

VI. SURETY OF.

Death of.]—Where a surety of a receiver dispending the suit, the receiver may obtain exparts an order referring it to the master to approve of a new one. Baldwin v. Crawford, 1 Ch. Ch. 264.

Recognizance — Discharge.]—A receiver being appointed for the benefit of all parties to a cause, he should, on moving to vacate his recognizance, give notice to all parties. Brown v. Perry, 1 Ch. Ch. 253.

- Xecessity for Surcties.]—The recognizance of the committee of a lunatic, or of a receiver, will not be deemed sufficient security under the statute. Re Ward, 2 Ch. Ch. 188.

VII. MISCELLANEOUS CASES.

Attachment of Moneys in Hands of Receiver.]—See Stuart v. Grough, 15 A. R.

Death of Receiver-Sale of Assets after Adoption by Court.]-A testator devised his real estate in trust for sale. Shortly after his death a friendly suit was instituted in the court of chancery in England, for the administration of the estate, to which suit the trustee was a defendant; in this suit an order was made for the appointment of a receiver to collect the assets in Canada, and sell the lands there. After the death of a receiver appointed under this order, the agents of the trustee in Canada, who had managed the estate for the deceased receiver, continued to collect the as-sets and make sales, with the knowledge and concurrence of the trustee and the parties in England:—Held, that such sales were not void, and would be enforced or not, according as to this court appeared, in view of the circumstances, to be proper; and a decree was made for the purchaser in respect of the sale in question. Stickney v. Tylee, 13 Gr. 193.

Mortgage—Interference with Receiver— Leave to Proceed.] — Where actions were brought by mortgages without the leave of the court for sale of mortgaged premises after the appointment of a receiver to receive the test appointment of a receiver to receive the was made, upon the petition premises, an order was made, upon the petition from the mortgages allowing the proceeding in the proceed with the actions notwithstanding the appointment of the receiver. Gardner v. Burgess, 13 P. R. 250.

Partnership—Interim Sale of Assets.]— Under special circumstances an order may be made, in an action for the dissolution and winding-up of an insolvent partnership, for the sale of the assets by the receiver before the trial. McLaren v. Whiting, 16 P. It. 532.

Winding-up Act—Payment out of Court—Hight to Compel Repayment,)—Where the laminators of an insolvent bank have passed their mind accounts and have paid into court the balance in their hands, and that balance is hy inadvertence paid out of court to a person not entitled to it, the receiver-general has such an interest in the fund that he may, even before three years from the time of payment in have expired, apply to the court for an order for repayment into court of the fund. Open Court — Filing.]—Where a recognature of bail had been taken in open court before the Judge of the district court:—Held, that under 8 Vict. c. 13, ss. 20, 23, and 50, filing in the office of the clerk was not necessary to perfect it. Cockrane v. Eyre, 6 U. C. R. 289.

II. ESTREAT.

Discharge—Notice.]—It is no ground for discharging the estreat of a recognizance to appear as a witness, that the magistrate who bound the witness over did not give him notice of the time he was to appear, according to 7 Wm. IV. c. 10, s. 8. Regina v. Thorpe, H. T. 6 Vict.

Return—Payment.]—Where the recognizance of a criminal witness is estreated for non-appearance, the court will not interfere after the return of the writ and payment of the estreat to the sheriff, even on grounds which would probably have satisfied a Judge pecialing at the criminal court. Regina v.—Clere, 4 Vict.

The court of Chancery.]—
The court of chancery.]—
The court of chancery has no jurisdiction to give relief to sureties on a recognizance in a criminal proceeding. A recognizance which was expressed to be the joint and several recognizance of the prisoner and his sureties was neknowledged by the sureties only, and the prisoner was discharged without his acknowledgment first having been obtained:—
Held, that the sureties were liable. Rastall v. Altorney-General, 18 Gr. 138; S. C., 17
Gr. 1.

Terms.]—Defendant, under a recognizance to appear at a certain assizes, attended until the last day, when he left, assuming, as no indictment had been found, that the charge against him, of a breach of the Foreign Enlistment Act, was not intended to be prosecuted. He was, however, called, and his recognizance estreated. The court, under the circumstances, relieved him and his sureties, under C. S. U. C. c. 117, s. 11, on payment of costs, and on his entering into a new recognizance to appear at the following assizes. Regina v. Metcod, 24 U. C. R. 458.

Condition — Sheriff,]—Semble, since 4 Wm. IV. c. 5, s. 1, a recognizance of bail, conditioned to render the defendant to a sheriff of a district in which the venue is not laid, is not void. Billings v. Barry, E. T. 2 Vict.

Grown—Lien on Land—Notice—Priority.]
—One M. gave a recognizance to the Crown, with two sureties, D. and McK., for the appearance of M. to answer certain criminal charges. The recognizance was estreated, but had not been registered under the Crown Debts Act. M., the cognizor, about the same time, gave to D., one of his sureties, a mortgage on his lands as security. M. absconded, and died abroad; and then D. under a power of sale, sought to enforce the mortgage against the lands. Upon an information filed by the attorney-general:—Held, (1) that the recognizance to the Grown bound M.'s lands from the acknowledgment, and that the Crown could enforce the lien. (2) That D., being one of the sureties in the recognizance, had actual notice of the lien of the Crown, notwithstanding the registration of the recognizance. Attorney-General v. Deniell, 7 L. J. 122.

IV. TO KEEP THE PEACE.

Sci. Fa.—Unil Proceeding — Declaration—Venue.]—A proceeding by sci. fa. on a recognizance to keep the peace, is a civil and not a criminal proceeding. Where the recognizance is removed into one of the superior courts at Toronto, the united counties of York and Peel are the proper counties in which to lay the venue. In such a proceeding the venue cannot be changed without the consent of the attorney-general. As the declaration would only be a transcript of the writ, no declaration need be either filed or served. Regina v. Shipman, 6 L. J. 19.

- Easement Notice Purchaser for Value.] R. (the appellant) brought an action against H. (the respondent) for having erected a brick wall over and upon the upper part of the south wall or cornice of R.'s store, pierced holes, &c. H. pleaded, inter alia, special leave and license, and that he had done so for a valuable consideration paid by him, and an equitable rejoinder alleging that R, and those through whom he claimed had notice of H,'s tile to this easement at the time they obtained their conveyances. In 1859 one C, who then owned R,'s property. granted by deed to H, the privilege of piercing the south wall, carry his stovepipe into the flues, and erecting a wall above the south wall of the building, to form at that height the north wall of H.'s building, which was higher than R. purchased the property in 1872 from R.'s. R. purchased the property in 1872 from the Bank of Nova Scotia, who got it from one F. to whom C. had conveyed it—all these conveyances being for valuable consideration. The deed from C. to H. was not recorded un-til 1871, and R.'s solleitor, in scarching the title, did not search under C.'s name after the registry of the deed by which the title passed out of C. in 1862, and did not therefore observe the deed creating the easement in favour of R. There was evidence, when attention was called to it, that H. had no separate wall, and the northern wall above separate wall, and the normern wan nove R,'s building could be seen:—Held, that the continuance of illegal burdens on R's property since the fee had been acquired by him, were, in law, fresh and distinct tres-passes against him, for which he was entitled to recover damages, unless he was bound by the license or grant of C. That the deed creating the easement was an instrument requiring registration under the provisions of the Nova Scotia Registry Act, R. S. N. S., 4th ser., c. 79, ss. 9 and 19, and was defeated by the prior registration of the subsequent purchaser's conveyance for valuable consideration, and therefore from the date of the registration of the conveyance from N. to F., the deed of grant to H. became void at law against F. and all those claiming title through That to defeat a registered deed there him. That to defeat a registered deed there must be actual notice or fraud, and there was no actual notice given to R. in this case, such as to disentitle him to insist in equity on his legal priority acquired under the statute, Ross v. Hunter, 7 S. C. R. 289.

Where the defendants in 1871, without authority, diverted a watercourse on certain land, and afterwards made compensation therefor to the then owner of the land, the plaintiff's predecessor in title:—Held, that the equitable easement thereby created in favour of the defendants was not valid against the registered deed of the plaintiff, a bonâ fide purchaser for value without actual notice; the defendants having shewn no prescriptive right to divert the watercourse, and the diversion being wrongful as against the plaintiff, Tolton v, Canadian Pacific R. W. Co., 22 O. R. 204.

R. S. O. 1877 c. '114. s. S3, providing that no lion, charge, or interest affecting land shall be valid as against a registered instrument executed by the same party, his heirs or assigns, is not restricted to interests derived under written instruments susceptible of registration, but applies to all interests. If the owner of land gives permission to the municipality to construct a drain through it, the municipality, after the work has been done, has an interest in the land to which the registry laws apply, whether the agreement conveys the property, creates an easement, or is a mere license which has become irrevocable, and if there has been no by-law authorizing the land to be taken, such interest is, under the section, invalid as against a registered deed executed by an assignee of the owner, a purchaser for value without notice, Ross v. Hunter, 7 S. C. R. 289, distinguished, Judgment in 21 A. R. 395 affirmed. City of Toronto v. Jarvis, 2 S. C. R. 237.

Equitable Mortgage — Memorandum— Necessity for Registration.]—Where a mortgage was created by the deposit of title deeds, and the borrower signed a memorandum stating the sum lent and times for repayment, and agreeing to execute a writing to enable the lender to transfer or control certain mortgages so deposited:—Held, that this memorandum did not require registration to secure its priority over a subsequently registered incumbrance, such memorandum not being, in the language of the Act, "a deed, conveyance, or assurance affecting lands." Harrison v. Armour, 11 Gr. 303.

Incumbrances—Priorities — Notice,1— Priority may be gained by means of prior registration as between equitable incumbrances, but this priority will be defeated by notice. Bethune v. Caulcutt, 1 Gr. 81.

13 & 14 Vict. c. 63 made no change in the rights of equitable incumbrancers. Mc-Master v. Phipps, 5 Gr. 253.

Right to Purchase—Assignment—Purchaser for Value.]—A lessee of the Canada Company, with a right to purchase, assigned his claim to the plaintiff, and afterwards, in fraud of the plaintiff, bottained a deed to himself from the company, and conveyed to defendant, a bona fide purchaser, without motice, who paid part of the purchase money, and registered the deed to himself. The plaintiff omitted to register the assignment to him:—Held, that defendant was entitled to hold the lands freed from any claim of the plaintiff. Fernas v. McDonald, 5 Gr. 310.

Statute—Action of,]—The 66th section of the Registry Act, 1865, which enacts that "no equitable lien, charge, or interest affecting land shall be deemed valid in any court in this Province after this Act shall come into operation, as against a registered instrument executed by the same party, his heirs or assigns; and tacking shall not be allowed in any case to prevail against the provisions of this Act."—is not retrospective. McDonald v. McDona

Effect of—Notice.]—The Registry Act of 1803 does not avoid a prior equity against a subsequent registered deed, where the latter was taken with notice. W, mortgaged his land to S., and afterwards sold and conveyed the equity of redemption to A.; but by mutual mistake the land was so described in the conveyance to A. as to comprise part only. A. sold and conveyed to S. by the same description. The plaintiff afterwards discovered the omission, procured W, to sell and convey the omitted portion to him, and filed a bill against S, for a conveyance thereof. It was proved that, before the sale to the plaintiff, W, had sold all he purchased to A.:—Held, sufficient proof of that actual notice which is requisite in this class of cases. Wigle v. Setterington, 19 Gr. 512.

R. S. O. 1877 c. 111. s. S1, declares that "no equitable lien, charge, or interest affecting land shall be deemed valid in any court in this Province after this Act shall come into operation as against a registered instrument executed by the same party, his heirs or assigns:"—Held, that this section does not apply to a case in which the party registering such instrument has notice of the equitable lien, charge, or interest, even though the same has been created by parol. Rose v. Peterkin, 13 S. C. R. 677. See S. C., subnom. Peterkin v. McFerlanc, 9 A. R. 429.

Effect of—Purchaser for Value without Notice—Mistake.]—Y, being the owner of certain land, mortgaged it with other lands to the M. P. B. Society, by mortgage dated 12th July, 1873, registered 14th July, Subsequently, being desirous of selling part and paying off the mortgage and getting a new loan, he, by an agreement in writing, arranged with the society to leave the mortgage standing, take a further loan of $700, and have certain of the lands (of which the lot in question was part) released which the for in question was party released by the society. A second mortgage for the 8700 advance was prepared and executed, dated 1st February, 1875, registered 11th February, 1875, which, by mistake, as was alleged, included all the lands in the first mortgage; and a release dated 9th February, 1875, was duly executed by the society releasing the lot in question from the operation of the mortgage of 12th July, 1873, and was afterwards registered 20th March, 1876. B., the plaintiff, being aware of the agreement, but unaware that the second mortgage included the lot in question, which should have been omitted, lent Y, certain moneys, and took a mortgage, dated 21st May, 1877, registered 6th June, 1877, to secure the payment thereof. The society assigned the second mortgage and all moneys secured thereby to the defendants by assignment dated 1st March, 1880, registered 17th January, 1881, and by deed dated 1st March, 1882, registered 2nd June, 1883, Y. conveyed his equity of redemption to B. In an action by B. to correct the mistake by compelling the defendants to convey the to the question to B.:—Held, that the combined operation of R, S, O. 1877 c. 111, S, S1, and R, S, O. 1877 c. 95, s, S, formed a complete defence, and that the defenda complete defence, and that the defend-ants, as assignees of the mortgage for value, having the legal estate, might defend as purchasers for value without notice, and claim also the protection of the Registry Act, as against the plaintiff, a subsequent purchaser or mortgagee from the original mortgagor. Semble, that, even as against the mortgagor, the defendants would also be entitled to prevail. Bridges v. Real Estato Loan and Debenture Co., S O. R. 493.

Effect of—Purchaser for Value without Notice—Statute of Limitations.]—In 1851 the defendant's father bought for defendant the land in question, and, in pursuance of his instructions, to prevent the defendant disposing of the land, the deed, which was registered, was made to defendant's son W, then about twelve years old. The defendant had his family thereupon took possession, and lived there up to the time of this action, the defendant being assessed and paying the taxes. The family residence, with the garden and orchard, which was fenced off from the rest of the land and comprised from two to four acres, was always deemed to be the defendant's special property, and he had always exclusive possession thereof, with the consent of the others. W. resided with his father for several years, and then went to the United States, but returned in 1869, when he conveyed by deed in fee simple, which was re gistered, to one H., his step brother, who had full knowledge of all the facts and circum-stances, and who had been working the land on shares with the defendant and another. Defendant complained to him of the sale, and denied W.'s right to sell, whereupon it was arranged that things were to go on as before, and defendant was to have his share. H., in 1870, and again in 1874, without the defendant's knowledge, mortgaged the land, by mortgages duly registered, to the plaintiffs, who had no notice or knowledge of any of the circumstances, or of the defendant's possession. In February, 1881, ejectment was brought by the plaintiffs:—Held, that the plaintiffs, being purchasers for value without notice, claiming under the registered paper title, were, under R. S. O. 1877 c. 111, s. 81. entitled to recover, except as to the house and plot, to which the defendant by his exclusive possession had acquired a title under the Statute of Limitations. Canada Permanent L. and S. Co. v. McKay, 32 C. P. 51.

Surety—Equitable Charge.]—W. and his son, W. W., mortgaged separate parcels of land owned in severalty to the defendant company for $4,000, with a proviso for releasing W. W.'s land on payment of $500, and the other parcels on payment of suns anaese. W. W. a cerean for nayment was M. W. and the worker of the payment of $500 and the other payment for his payment of $500 and the other payment of $500 to the company. W. then mortgaged his land to the plaintiff, by an instrument which declared it subject to the payment of $500 to the company. W. then mortgaged his land to the plaintiff, by an instrument which declared it subject to the company's mortgage, and the manner in which the $4,000 was distributed upon the lands. The various conveyances were registered. It was proved that W. W. was merely a surety for his father in the mortgage transaction with the company, but the plaintiff had no notice of this:—Held, that the plaintiff segistered title prevailed over the equity of W. W. to charge his father's lands with the $500 for which he (W. W.) had made his land liable, and the land of the son was charged in favour of the plaintiff with the $500 and interest. Gray v. Ball, 23 Gr. 330, approved and followed. Core v. Ontario Loan and Debenture Co., 9 O. R. 236.

Equitable Charge—Dover—Priorities.]—R. G. and J. G., being the owners, subject to the dower of their mother, R., and an annuity in her favour, of certain lands, mortgaged them to one C. to secure advances made by him or them. It, knew of the mort. Subsequently R. G. and J. G. mortgaged the lands to M. to secure advances made by him. R. released all her claims for the purpose of this mortgage, but received no benefit from the advances. This mortgage was taken by M. without any notice of the mortgage to C., and was registered before it, and gained priority over it. Under this mortgage the lands were sold, and after payment of the claim of the plaintiffs a surplus remained, which R. claimed in priority to C.—Held, reversing the decision in 16 O. R. 321, that she was not entitled to priority. The priority gained by M. by force of the Registry Act did not enure to her benefit, as she was not the purchaser or mortgagee, nor did that priority enure to her benefit as surety by virtue of the doctrine of subrogation, because that doctrine could not be invoked to defeat the honest claims and superior equities of third persons. Maclennan v. Gray, 16 A. R. 224.

Held, reversing the judgment in 16 A. R. 224, that the security for which the dower had been barred and the annuity released having been satisfied, the widow was entitled to the fund, as representing her interest in the land, in priority to C. Gray v. Coughlin, 18 S. C. R. 553.

Trust-Notice-Parol Evidence. 1 - In an action for the possession of lands under a mortgage by defendant's brother W., and the moregage by defendant s broker of the foreclosure thereof, the defendant claimed under a trust of the lands by W. in his favour; and also a title by possession. The trust was der a trust of the lands by W. In his favour; and also a title by possession. The trust was a parol one, namely, that W. should procure a release of the lands for defendant, who was then under age, from the Canada Company, the lease apparently containing a right of purchase; and should afterwards pay the purchase money and take the deed in his, W.'s, name, and hold it until defendant became well, when he was to transfer it to the defendant, he having been ill at the time. The defendant paid the money for the lease and the purchase money for the land:—Held, that the parol evidence was not sufficient to support the trust; but, in any event, as the trust was to be enforced against W. and his grantees, it could not prevail against plaintiff's mortgage, it having been registered without notice of the trust. Bank of Montreal v. Stewart, 14 O. R. 482.

2. Notice.

(a) Actual Notice of Unregistered Instrument.

Effect of.]-A. conveyed in fee to B. and died, and afterwards his heir conveyed the same land in fee to C., whose deed was regis-tered before the deed to B.:—Held, that C.'s deed, being first registered, secured him the title, although he had notice of the deed to B. Doe d. Pell v. Mitchener, Dra. 471.

The Registry Act of Ontario, 31 Vict. of 20, does not make notice effectual at law. but confines the relief in equity to cases of actual notice. Bondy v. Fox, 29 U. C. R. 64. But see the next case.

Held, that under the Registry Act of Ontario, 31 Vict. c. 20, the effect of actual notice is not confined to a court of equity, but is available in a court of law; and therefore a non-registered deed is not defeated by a subsequent registered one, where before such registration the person claiming under it had actual notice of the prior conveyance. The last case as to this point, distinguished. Remarks as to the obvious error in the statute, s. 67, by which the notice is referred to the time of registration of the subsequent deed; so that a purchaser for value without notice of the prior deed might be defeated by notice of it between the time of getting his deed and registering it. Millar v. Smith, 23 C. P.

Timber,]-Mere notice of a pre vious deed for the sale of growing timber will not defeat a subsequent conveyance of the land, if the latter be registered first. Ellis v. Grubb, 3 O. S. 611.

Semble, that standing timber is within the provisions of the registry laws; and that the purchaser of a right to cut the same is affected by notice of the conveyance from the original owner and a mortgage back from his vendee. McLean v. Burton. 24 Gr. 134.

- Unascertained Land.]-A registered purchaser, buying with actual notice of an unregistered deed of an unascertained part of the land, takes subject to whatever such deed conveyed; and, if he chooses to purchase without proper inquiries as to its contents, his erroneous supposition as to the land thereby conveyed, or his ignorance of the names of all the persons interested under the deed, does not vary the case. Severn v. McLellan, 19

- Unpatented Land.1 - Express notice of an unregistered assignment of unpatented land has the same effect as like notice of an unregistered conveyance after patent issued. Goff v. Lister, 13 Gr. 406. S. C., 14 Gr. 451.

Evidence of. |-To postpone a registered title on the ground of notice of a deed having been previously executed though not registered, the evidence of notice must be quite satisfactory and distinct. Hollywood v. Waters, 6 Gr. 329.

To postpone a deed which has acquired priority over an earlier conveyance by registration, actual notice, sufficient to make the conduct of the subsequent purchaser in taking and registering his conveyance fraudulent, is indispensable. New Brunswick R. W. Co. v. Kelly, 26 S. C. R. 341.

____ Misleading Communication to Pur-chaser.]—A testator by his will directed his executors to pay his widow an annuity for the support and maintenance of one of his sons until he became of age; and he also directed that if there were not sufficient funds therefor, it was to be a charge on separate parcels of land severally devised to three of his other sons. There were sufficient funds in the executors' hands for the payment of the annuity, but by an agreement, for valuable consideration, made between the widow and the devisees of the lands, it was agreed that the annuity should not be paid out of the moneys but should be a charge upon the lands, the intention being that the moneys should be mention being that the moneys should be kept in hand for the payment of a legacy pay-able to the first named son on his attaining his majority. This agreement was not registered. A sale was subsequently made by one of the sons of the parcel of land devised to him, the purchaser being informed as to an agreement having been entered into with reference to the annuity, but being at the same time told that it in no way affected the land, merely creating a personal obligation to pay the annuity, and he made no further inquiry with regard to it:—Held, that the purchaser could not be deemed to have purchased the land with actual notice of the contents of the agreement so as to be affected thereby. Coolidge v. Nelson, 31 O. R. 646.

Repudiation of Unregistered Deed. -Lease.]-S. S., the owner of certain land, agreed to convey the same to his son T. S., on his paying certain moneys for S. S., and forth-with granting a life-lease thereof to S. S. and his wife. The conveyance and lease were accordingly executed. The latter, conwere accordingly executed. The latter, containing, amongst others, covenants to be performed by the lessees, was executed by T. S. and S. S. but not by the wife. The lease was put on registry, but not the deed, which was proved to have been destroyed. Subsequently S. 3, and T. S. joined in a mortgage of the land to the plaintiff, which was registered. The plaintiff, on inquiries made by him on inding the lease on record, obtained actual notice of the deed to T. S., but did not deem it of any importance, believing the transaction to have failen through, in consequence, as he understood, of the wife's repudiation dur-ing her husband's lifetime of the lease, and the destruction of the deed. After the death of S. S. the wife asserted her right to the of S. S. the wife asserted her right to the life lease, and held possession of the land; and on the plaintiff bringing ejectment she defended in such right:—Held, that the plaintiff could not claim by reason of the non-registration of T. S.'s deed and the registration of the plaintiff's mortgage, because, as he had actual notice of such prior deed, the Registry Act would not apply; but, even if applicable, the plaintiff was bound by the prior registration of the life lease. Britton v. Knight, 29 C. P. 567.

Want of Notice-Declaration of Priority -Right to.]-Held, following Truesdale v. Cook, 18 Gr. 532, and Dynes v. Bales, 25 Gr. 593, that the grantee in a subsequent conveyance, registered before the registry of a previous conveyance from the same granter, of which the grantee had no actual notice, could maintain an action to have the subsequent conveyance declared entitled to priority over the previous conveyance, and that the court had power so to order upon such terms as seemed just. Weir v. Niagara Grape Co., 11 O. R. 700.

See Peterkin v. McFarlane, 4 A. R. 25.

(b) By Possession.

Adverse Claimant-Actual Notice.]-In the case of a registered title, actual notice of the title of an adverse claimant is required to affect the grantee holding under a registered instrument. The mere fact that such adverse claimant is in actual possession of the land is not sufficient notice; nor will it be actual notice if the grantee is aware of the fact that a person other than his grantor is in possession. Roe v. Braden, 24 Gr. 589.

Owner of Equitable Interest. | - In case of an unregistered interest of a date ante-cedent to the Registry Act of 1865, and not founded upon a deed or conveyance which was capable of registration, constructive notice is sufficient against a subsequent registered conveyance; and possession of the property by the person having such unregistered interest is sufficient constructive notice for this purpose. Moore v. Bank of British North America, 15 Gr. 308.

The plaintiff's brother bought certain lands for her, and put her in possession thereof, but afterwards obtained the patent therefor in his own name, and procured incumbrances to be created thereon, which were duly registered:

-Held, that the equitable interest of the plaintiff could not prevail against the title of the incumbrancers, possession not being such notice of title as will affect the right of a notice of title as will affect the right of a person claiming under a registered conveyance. Bell v. Walker, 20 Gr. 558 (post (c)), ap-proved of. Section 66 of the Registry Act of 1868, considered. Grey v. Ball, 23 Gr. 390.

In ejectment it appeared that M., owning the land in question, conveyed it in 1852 to W. J. M., who in the same year mortgaged to the Trust and Loan Co. They, in 1838, con-veyed to W., who in 1859 mortgaged it again to them, and in 1860 they conveyed to C., who desired its of the conveyed to C., who devised it to the plaintiffs. All these convey-ances were duly registered. Both W. J. M. and W. were acting as trustees or agents for For the defence it was shewn that M., M. For the defence it was shewn that M., in 1852, orally agreed to sell the land to one P. S., who paid the purchase money and took possession as a purchaser. In 1859 he received a bond from M. to convey to him in two months, but he never obtained a conveyance, and the bond was never registered, veyance, and the bond was never registered, nor could it be under the registry law when it was given. He died in 1859, and his wife and children, the defendants, had continued to hold possession ever since. C., when he purchased in 1860, had notice of such possession:—Held, following the previous case, the last decision in chancery, though opposed to earlier cases, that knowledge of the possession held by the plaintiffs, having an equitable interest, was not sufficient to affect the regis-tered title, and that the plaintiffs therefore were entitled to recover; but a new trial was were entitled to recover; but a new trial was granted, with costs to abide the event, to enable defendants to shew, if possible, that C. in fact bought subject to M.'s equity of redemption. Cooley v. Smith, 40 U. C. R. 543

The relationship arising out of an agreement for the sale of land on payment of the purchase money and the taking of possession purchase money and the taking of possession by the purchaser is that of trustee and cestui que trust, and, as the former has no effective right of entry, the Statute of Limitations does not apply in favour of the possession of the cestui que trust. The principle of the decision in Warren v. Murray, [1834] 2 Q. B. 648, applied. A mortgagee from the trustee under the above circumstances, who take and residthe above circumstances, who takes and registers his mortgage in ignorance that any one other than the mortgagor is in occupation of the land, and without notice, actual or constructive, of any equitable right of the cestui que trust, is entitled to set up the Registry Act, which is retrospective, and to plead it, if it is necessary to do so, Bell v. Walker, 20 Gr. 558, and Grey v. Ball, 23 Gr. 390, Col-lowed. Building and Loan Association v. Poops, 27 O. R. 470.

Prior Purchaser-Joint Possession with Vendor.]-Where a father and son lived together on certain land of the father, and continued to do so after a conveyance by the father to the son :- Held, that the son's possession after the conveyance, did not affect subsequent purchaser from the father. a subsequent purchaser from the lather. Possession is not such notice as, under the Registry Act, 31 Vict. c. 20 (O.), postpones a registered deed to the prior unregistered title of the party to such possession. Sherboneau v. Jeffs, 15 Gr. 574.

— Registered Title.]—The possession of an estate by the first, but unregistered, purchaser from a registered owner, is not of itself notice to a subsequent purchaser. Waters v. Shade, 2 Gr. 457.

Unregistered Title.] — The plaintiff purchased land from J., who had purchased from G., no conveyance having been made to J. by G., who afterwards conveyed to T. a son of the plaintiff, who mortgaged the property and represented it as his own; the plaintiff being all the while in possession. The title being all the while in possession. The title being all the while in possession, the plaintiff is title by reason of his possession, although there was no pretence of actual notice to them; and they having omitted to set up the registry laws as a defence, liberty was given them to apply for leave to do so, if so advised. The rule that possession is notice of the title of the party so in possession considered and acted on. Grey v. Coucher, 15 Gr. 419.

(c) By Registration. .

35 Geo. III. c. 5.]—Under 35 Geo. III. c. 5. registration was not notice in this country. Street v. Commercial Bank, 1 Gr. 169, 1 E. & A. 246.

[It was made notice by 13 & 14 Vict. c. 63, s. 8.]

13 & 14 Vict. c. 63—Innoccut Purchaser.]—Semble, under the facts stated in this case, that the fact of S. having been an innocent purchaser at a time when registration was not notice, would have afforded a good ground of defence if it had been taken by the answer. Kay v. Wilson, 24 Gr. 212.

C. S. U. C. c. 89—Application of—Mort-gane—Unpatented Lands, I—Under C. S. U. C. c. 89, registration is notice of all instruments registered before, as well as since, registration was made notice. Since that Act, registration of a mortgage of unpatented lands under S Vict. c. S. s. 9, is notice to subsequent purchasers, whether the patent has issued under or without a decision of the heir and devisee commissioners. Vance v. Cummings, 13 Gr. 25.

Duty to Search.] — The principle upon which the Registry Act proceeds is, that a person acquiring land ought to see whether there is anything registered against the land he is about to acquire, and that he is assumed to search the registry for that purpose; but this does not apply to one who is not acquiring, but parting with, an interest in land, and registration is not notice in such a case. Trust and Loan Co. v. Shaw, 16 Gr. 446.

Equitable Interest—Assignment—Joint Possession with Assignors—Mortgage,]—The plaintiff's father, being in possession of a farm under an unregistered agreement for the sale thereof to him, assigned the agreement and all his interest thereunder by way of security to one who gave a bond to reassign upon repayment of a small sum advanced. Neither the assignment nor the bond was registered. The money was repaid, but there was no reassignment. Subsequently, on the 3rd April, 1886, the father assigned all his interest in the land to the plaintiff for valuable consideration, the plaintiff having no notice or know-ledge of the previous assignment. This assignledge of the previous assignment. This assignment was duly registered. The plaintiff lived on the farm with his father and mother, whom he had covenanted to maintain during their lives, until July, 1888, when he went away, leaving his parents on the farm, with no definite agreement or understanding, but with the expectation, as he said, that they would remain on the place and make the last two payments under the original agreement, that when this was done the place would be In February, 1891, the father mortgaged the land to the person who had made the first advance, to secure a larger sum, and the mortgage deed was registered. A few days later the original vendor conveyed the land to later the original vendor conveyed the land to the father, the purchase money having been paid in full, and the conveyance was regis-tered. In February, 1892, the mortgagee died, In September, 1893, the plaintiff's father con-veyed the land absolutely to the administrator of the mortgagee's estate, and this conveyance was also registered:—Held, that the assign-ment to the plaintiff in 1896 gave him an equitable estate in fee and the right to possesson, and after its execution, the father and son both being on the place, the possession would be attributed to the son. 2. That the registration of that assignment constituted notice to the mortgagee, and the mortgage did not affect the plaintiff's title or right to possession. Cope v. Crichton, 30 O. R. 603.

Indian Lands—Mortgage before Patent.]

—A patent of Indian lands was obtained by the patentee by virtue of his title under certain assignments from the original locatee, duly registered in the Indian Department, and it appeared that certain prior assignees from the locatee had executed a mortgage on the lands to the plaintiff, of which the patentee had no actual notice, neither the assignment to the mortgages on the mortgage hading been registered in the department, though the brigging was registered in the sought to foreclose his mortgage—Held, that the patentee was entitled to priority over the mortgage to the extent of the mortgage to the extent of the mortgage to the extent of the more paid for obtaining the patent, and that the registration of the mortgage in the county registry office was not notice to him. Re Reed v. Wilson, 23 O. R. 552.

Infant—Conveyance by — Representation as to Age.]—A married woman, while yet under twenty-one years of age, but representing herself to be of full age, conveyed land to a bonā fide purchaser for value, and the conveyance was duly registered. After attaining majority, the married woman and her husband joined in a voluntary deed to another person as trustee for her, and he subsequently sold the land, and his vendee (on the same day) created a mortgage thereon:—Held, that the married woman, notwithstanding her non-age, was bound by her representations as 50 her being of age; and that the other parties, having acquired their interests with full knowledge of the existence of the deed by her to the purchaser, and after the registration thereof, took subject to all the rights of the purchaser. Bennetto v. Holden, 21 Gr. 222.

man for life-remainder to his son in fee. The deed contained an agreement or stipulation that neither party should be at liberty to dispose of or incumber the property in any way without the consent of the other. The father, with the knowledge, but without the consent, of his son, sold portions of the water frontage, and the purchaser, with the know-ledge of the son, improved thereon. After the death of the father the son sold and conveyed the lands, including the whole water frontage, to W., whereupon a bill was filed by the vento W., whereupon a bill was need by the verdee under the father against the son and W., claiming absolutely the part of the water frontage which had been conveyed by the father, on the ground of acquiescence by the son, and that W. had notice of the plaintiff's interest:—Held, that the registration of the deed under which the father and son claimed was actual notice of the son's title, and that the receivement of high by could not affect. his acquiescence or lying by could not affect his acquiescence or lying by could not affect his interest, but at most could only be con-strued into a consent by him to the sale by the father of his own interest; and semble, that under the circumstances, if even regis-tration were not actual notice, the acquies-cence would not bind his reversionary in-terest; and that, even if the plaintiff had acquired any equitable interest arising out of such acquiescence, he could not enforce it against W, without proving actual notice to him of such equitable interest. Bell v. Walker, 20 Gr. 558.

Mistake in Description — Notice of Claim, 1—The owner of two town lost, 25 and 26, sold a portion of 26 to one P., but by mistake the description in the deed was such as at law to pass the whole lot. He subsequently sold lot 25, and all of lot 26 not before sold to P., to the plaintiff, and the deed thereof was duly registered. Subsequently to such registration, defendant obtained a conveyance from P., the description of the land being the same as in the deed to P.:—Held, that the registration of the plaintiff's dead was notice to defendant of the plaintiff's claim to that part of lot 26 not sold to P., and that Mistake in Description - Notice of to that part of lot 26 not sold to P., and that the plaintiff was entitled to a reconveyance thereof. Haynes v. Gillen, 21 Gr. 15.

 Assignment of — Pleading Amendment, |—B., being the owner of lot A., mortgaged the same to C., who assigned the security to J., covenanting for the payment of the mortgage money, which assignment was duly registered. Afterwards B. agreed with W., the owner of lot B. to exchange proper-ties, B. undertaking to have his mortgage to C transferred from lot A, to lot B., to which C assented, not informing either of them of the assignment. C., who was a solicitor, was employed by both parties to prepare the several conveyances, including the mortgage from B, to himself on the newly acquired property. No mention was made or production demanded of the first mortgage, which remained undischarged. B. paid off and obtained from C. a discharge of the new mortdinied from C. a discharge of the new mort-age given by him on lot B.; and C. paid the interest to J. for several years, when he made default, and the plaintiffs, the representatives of J., then applied to B., when he, for the first time, was made aware of the assignment:— Held, that the payments so made by B. to Condition the effect of discharging the mort-gage on lot A., and that the plaintiffs were emitted to a foreclosure. Held, also, that was affected with notice of the assign-ment by the registration; and with constructive notice, by his omission to inquire for the mortgage. Held, also, that it was not necessary to set up the registration of the assignment in the bill in order to prove notice; and that, if necessary, an amendment should have been allowed under the A. J. Act, 1873, s. 50. Gilleland v. Wadsworth, 1 A. R. 82. S. C., 23 Gr. 547.

- Balance of Purchase Money-Estoppel.]—See McMillan v. Munro, 25 A. R. 288.

Further Advances - Subsequent Mortgage. |-After purchasing land under an agreement which provided that $2,000 of the purchase money was to be secured by mortgage subsequent to a building loan not exceeding $12,000, the purchaser executed a build-ing mortgage to a loan company for $11,500, which was at once registered, but only part of that sum was then advanced. The plaintiff, who had succeeded to the rights of the vendor under the above agreement, then registered her mortgage for $2,000, and claimed priority over subsequent advances made by the loan company under their mortgage, but with-out actual notice of the plaintiff's mortgage, or of the terms of the agreement for the sale of the land:—Held, that the plaintiff was not entitled to the priority claimed by her. Decision in 24 O. R. 426 reversed. The further advances were made upon a mortgage provid-ing for such advances, and to secure which the legal estate had been conveyed, and equity as well as law protected the first mortgage so advantageously placed, as against the subsequent mortgage, even though registered, where notice had not as a fact been communicated to the first mortgagee respecting the subsequent instrument, and the Registry Act subsequent instrument, and the Registry Act did not apply. Pierce v. Canada Permanent Loan and Savings Co., 25 O. R. 671. Affirm-ed by the court of appeal, 23 A. R. 516. See R. S. O. 1897 c. 136, s. 99.

Several Parcels — Rights of Purchasers.]—Several parcels of land were embraced in one mortgage. Subsequently the mortgagor further mortgaged some of them mortzagor further mortzaged some of them to the plaintiffs, with the usual mortzagor's covenants. He afterwards conveyed another parcel to S., who, when he took his conveyance, was not aware of the plaintiffs' mortgage, but it was registered against the parcels embraced in it, though not against the other parcels:—Held, that the registration of the prior mortzage against the parcel bought by S. was notice to him of the right of persons who purchased to they parcels before he purchased to throw the mortzage unon his parcel. chased, to throw the mortgage upon his parcel, and that S. was affected with notice of the plaintiff's mortgage, and the right it conferred. Clark v. Bogart, 27 Gr. 450.

Neglect to Search - Discharge of Mortgage—Subrogation.]—The plaintiff registered a lien against certain lands. On the day before such registration the defendant, an intending purchaser, had searched the registry office and found only two incumbrances regisoffice and found only with the tered against the property. Shortly afterwards the defendant completed his purchase, and, having paid off the two incumbrances, registered discharges thereof with his deed of purchase, but, as he did not make any further search, he did not discover the plaintiff's lien:—Held, that the defendant was entitled to stand in the place of the incumbrancers whom he had paid off, and to priority over the plaintiff's lien. The Registry Act does not preclude inquiry as to whether there was knowledge in fact; and the court was not compelled as a conclusion of law to say that the defendant had notice of what he was doing, and so could not plead mistake. Brown v. McLean, 18 O. R. 533, specially considered. Abell v. Morrison, 19 O. R. 639.

(d) Constructive Notice.

Bona Fides.]—Constructive notice is insufficient in any case to postpone a registered conveyance executed bona fide. Ferrass v. McDonald, 5 Gr. 310.

Circumstances for Inquiry. — Such circumstances as are sufficient notice to put a party upon inquiry, will not prevail over a registered title. Soden v. Stevens. 1 Gr. 346.

Insufficiency — befect in Subsequent Indorsement, i—B, and wife, after executing a mortgage in favour of D, conveyed the premises comprised therein to J., subject to the mortgage, which was referred to in the conveyance, as also in the memorial thereof registered. After the registration of this conveyance, J. and his wife executed a quit claim deed of the premises to the wife of B. A mortgage was subsequently made in favour of S., which was signed and senied by B. and his wife, but she was the only granting party named therein, and the same was registered before the mortgage to D.:—Held, that constructive notice of the mortgage to D, was the most that could have been imputed to S., which was insufficient to postpone a prior registration; but that his mortgage was wholly inoperative in consequence of B, not being named as a granting party therein. Foster v. Beall, 15 Gr. 244.

Instrument Capable of Registration.]—The court of chancery in this country having frequently held constructive notice of an unregistered interest to be insufficient, where such unregistered interest was founded on an instrument capable of registration, and the want of actual notice was not wilful or fraudulent, this rule will continue to be acted on until the different doctrine lately held in England and Ireland, is adopted in appeal, either in England or here. Moore v. Bank of British North America, 15 Gr. 308.

Sufficiency — Fraud.]—Where the registered owner of land had parted with his interest therein by an unregistered deed, a person who afterwards fraudulently took and registered a conveyance from such registered owner, prior to the Registry Act of 1835, knowing or believing that his granter had parted with his interest, was held not entitled to priority over the true owner, though he did not know, or had no correct information, who the true owner was. McLennan v. McDonald, 18 Gr. 502.

(e) Other Cases.

Execution Creditor.] — An execution creditor does not occupy as favourable a position under the Registry Act as a purchaser for value without notice; and he may be defeated by a deed made before, though registered after, the lodging of the execution in the hands of the sheriff. Russell v. Russell, 28 Gr. 419.

Purchaser for Value without Notice—Frand. | Where a subsequent deed was registered first, a prior one from the same person was held fraudulent and void, although its registration had been prevented by the fraud of the subsequent purchaser, he having in the meantime conveyed to a third party for a valuable consideration without notice. Doe d. Nellis v, Mallock, 2 O. S. 487.

Vendee under Sheriff's Sale.]—Held, that a purchaser for value with a registered title under a sheriff's sale of A.'s interest in land, was entitled to prevail against a non-registered conveyance made by A. prior to such sale. Bruyere v. Knox. 8 C. P. 520.

3. Particular Instruments.

(a) Conveyances of Growing Timber,

Application of Act. |—A conveyance or devise of growing timber is within the Registry Act. Ellis v. Grubb. 3 O. S. 611. Approved in Ferguson v. Hill, 11 U. C. R. 530.

The plaintiff and W. entered into an agreement, by which the plaintiff was to make advances upon certain conditions to W., to enable him to draw out, and to make and get to market, a quantity of timber. It was agreed that the timber then made, and all that might thereafter be made, should be delivered to the plaintiff as security, and in proof of such delivery should be marked as specified, and that it should be rafted to market under W.'s directions. The timber was seized under an execution by the defendant as sheriff; and the plaintiff, claiming under this deed, replevied:—Held, that the statute requiring registration could apply only to that part of the timber in existence, as timber, and owned by W. at the execution of the instrument, but that it clearly applied to that portion, and therefore for want of registration the deed must be held void altogether; but, at all events, it could have operated to pass only that part of the timber which was made and capable of delivery at the time of the execution, and such as, being made afterwards, was delivered to the plaintiff and marked for him. Short v. Ruttan, 12 U. C. R. 79.

Semble, that standing timber is within the provisions of the registry laws: and that the purchaser of the right to cut the same is affected with notice of the conveyance from the original owner and a mortgage back from his vendee. McLean v. Burton, 24 Gr. 134.

(b) Mortgages.

Consideration—Variance from Proviso for Redemption—Notice.]—The holder of reveral promissory notes applied to the plaintiff to indorse the same for his accommodation, which he did on the promise of the holder to execute a mortgage on certain lands to one L., to whom he was indebted in $1.200 on account of the purchase money of these of ainodathe inds .200 hese lands, securing the payment thereof, as also of the mores. The consideration expressed in the mortgage was $1.200 only, but the provise for redemption embraced the notes as well as the $1.200. L. also indorsed the notes and on maturity retired them, and the plaintiff, having paid L. the amount of the notes, obtained from him an assignment of the mortgage:—Held, (1) that the transactions rendered L. and the plaintiff was entitled to the benefit of the security held by L. by way of indemnity; and (2) that the plaintiff was entitled to enforce the mortgage against the parchaser who took his conveyance after searching the registry office, and upon the assurance that the mortgage was made to secure $1,200 only. Menzies v. Kennedy, 23 Gr. 300.
