Power of Sale—Prior Conveyance.]—Held, that the prior registration of a mortgage with a power of sale enabled the mortgage, in the proper exercise of such power, to sell free from the claim of a purchaser under a prior unregistered conveyance. Daniels v. Davidson, 9 Gr. 173.

Registration before Delivery—Beneficiaries—Assignee for Value, I—Where a personal production of the person who was not aware of the facts, it was held entitled to priority over another mortgage previously executed, but not registered till after the other security had been registered, although registered before the other lad been delivered to the mortgage. Mortgage held good in the hands of an assignee for value without notice, though the persons for whose benefit it was given were not named in it or shewn by any writing. Muir v. Dunaut, 11 Gr. S5.

Subsequent Mortgagee — Insufficient librarial. —A subsequent mortgagee who had not actual notice:—Held, not bound by the registration of a prior mortgage, the memorial of which insufficiently described the premises. Iteid v. Whitehead, 10 Gr. 446.

See McMillan v. Munro, 25 A. R. 288.

(c) Plans.

Dedication of Lanes. |—The registration of a plan of a subdivision of a town lot, and sales made in accordance with it, do not constitute a dedication of the lanes thereon to the public. In re Morton and City of St. Phomas, 6 A. R. 323.

Dedication of Public Square—Municipal Corporation—Closing up.]—A municipal corporation—Closing up.]—A municipal corporation laying out a square or park, on land acquired by them untrammelled by any trust as to its disposal, may deal with it is any manner authorized by s. 509 of the Municipal Act. R. S. O. 1877, c. 174, at least where no private rights have been acquired in consequence of their action; but they cannot so deal with lands dedicated by the owner for a special purpose, which case is provided for by s. 467. Whether the dedication arises only from the act of the owner, or by express grant, the municipality must accept it, if at all, for the purpose indicated. The sware of land dedicated to the public a square sware of land dedicated to the public a square by filing a plan upon which were the words, "Square to remain always free from any erection or obstruction:"—Held, that the municipality had no power to close up part thereof, and to dispose of it to trustees of a church, In re Peck and Town of Galt, 46 U. C. R. 211.

Effect of Registration—Absence of Certificate—Description.]—Though a plan not certified as required by the Registry Act, R. S. O. 1877 c. 111, s. 82, s.-s. 2, has, even when deposited in the registry office, no effect under the registry law, yet in a deed reference may be made to it, as it may to any other document in the registry office or elsewhere, for the description or designation of a lot. Fragueon v. Winsor, 10 O. R. 13. See S. C., 11 O. R. 83

Obligation to Register—Reference to, in Decd. |—M. was owner of the east half of a certain tot of land. In 1872 he employed one S. to draw a plan of a portion of the lot, and S. drew a plan upon which some lots were lettered and others numbered. The land in question was marked on the plan as "The Parsonage," but was neither numbered nor lettered. The plan so marked was never registered. In 1874 M. mortgaged to B., one of the defendants, the said half lot, "reserving thereout lots numbered from 1 to 181, both inclusive, as shewn on a plan made by S., and dated 1872;" and during negotiations for the loan M. left a lithographed copy of the plan in B.'s possession. B. registered the mortgage, but took no steps to register the plan. Subsequently M. altered his plan by running a street through lots 196 and 115, and transferred the number 196 to the parsonage lot. The date of the plan remained as 1872, and M. then registered it in its altered state. In 1876 M. applied to the plaintiff for a loan of $600 upon lot 106, or the parsonage lot. An abstract was obtained by the plaintiff from the registerar, from which the prior mortgage from M. to B. was omitted, the registrar considering that, inasmuch as lots 1 to 181 inclusive were excepted from B.'s mortgage, the property in cuention was not affected by it. A mortgage was then made by M. to the plaintiff. In ejectment by plaintiff against B.—Held, that defendant's title must prevail; that no obligation was cast upon B. under the registry laws or otherwise to register the plan, which was only referred to in describing the reservations from the mortgage. (2) That If from any cause the exception or reservation from the property mentioned in B.'s mortgage proved abortive or ineffectual, B. was entitled to the excepted prorion also. Muttlebury v. King, 4t U. C. R. 355.

Person Registering — Assignce — Amendment.]—Held, reversing the judgment in 9 O. R. 274, that the status of C., as a person, or the assignce of a person, who registered a plan, was a question of law and fact combined for the county Judge to determine upon C.'s application to him, under R. S. O. 1877 c. 111, s. 84, to amend the plan, and that his decision was not examinable in prohibition. Semble, a person not the owner of the property may register a plan, and although this would be at the time a futile proceeding, yet if he afterwards became the owner of the property and adopted the plan, he would be entitled under the Act to have it amended. In re Chisholm and Town of Oakville, 12 A. R. 225.

See Nevitt v. McMurray, 14 A. R. 126.

(d) Sheriffs' Deeds.

Application of Act.]—The Registry Act. 9 Vict. c. 34, applied to sheriffs' deeds to purchasers at sheriffs' sales. Doc d. Brennan v. O'Neill. 4 U. C. R. S. See Waters v. Shade, 2 Gr. 457.

Conveyance after Sale—Priority of Execution. 1—A.'s land was sold under execution in 1843, but the sheriff did not execute a deed to the purchaser until 1853. In 1852 A. conveyed to one C., who conveyed to the plaintiff. The last two deeds were registered, but that from the sheriff was not:—Held, that the prior registry of the plaintiff's title could not defeat the sheriff's deed, for the lands were bound by the execution and sale, and therefore out of A.'s power to convey. Burnham v. Daly, 11 U. C. R. 211. See Smith v. Brown, 14 U. C. R. 12.

Married Woman—sale of Husband's Interest.]—A mortgage by husband and wife of the wife's lands was registered without any examination of the wife, as required by the statute. The sheriff afterwards sold and conveyed the husband's interest in the lands under a fi. fa.; and the dead to the purchaser was registered after the re-execution of the nortgage, and the due acknowledgment by the wife, which mortgage, however, was not reregistered after such re-execution and acknowledgment:—Held, that the interest of the husband in the land passed to the purchaser under the sheriff's deed, to the exclusion of the mortgage, Moffatt v, Grover, 4 C. P. 402.

Territories Real Property Act—Prioritics.]—The provisions of s. 94 of the Territories Real Property Act R. S. C. c. 51, as amended by 51 Vict. c. 20 (D.), do not displace the rule of law that an execution creditor can only sed the real estate of his debtor subject to the charges, liens, and equities to which the same was subject in the hands of the execution debtor, and do not give the execution creditor any superiority of title over prior unregistered transferees, but merely protect the lands from intermediate sales and dispositions of the execution debtor. If the sheriff sells, the purchaser, by priority of registration of the sheriff's deed, would under the Act takes priority over previous unregistered transfers. Jellett v. Wikkie, Jellett v. Scottish Onavio and Manitoba Land Co. Jellett v. Powell, Jellett v. Erratt, 26 S. C. R. 282.

See Rathbun v. Culbertson, 22 Gr. 465.

(e) Tax Deeds.

Certificate of Title — Priority over Editor Certificate — R. S. B. C. c. 111.] — Section 13 of the British Columbia Land Registry Act. R. S. B. C. c. 111, provides that a person claiming ownership in fee of land may apply for registration thereof, and the registrar, on being satisfied, after examination of the title deeds, that a prima facie case is established, shall register the title in the "Register of Absolute Fees." Section 19, which authorizes the registrar to issue a certificate of title to the person so registering, contains this provision: "Every certificate of title shall be received as prima facie evidence in all courts of justice in the Province, of the particulars therein set forth." And by s. 23 "the registered owner of an absolute fee shall be deemed to be the prima facie owner of the land described or referred to in the register for such an estate of freehold as he may possess:"—Held, affirming the judgment in 7 B. C. Rep. 12, sub nom. Kirk v. Kirkland, that a certificate of title issued on registration of a deel from the assessor of taxes to a purchaser at a tax sale, does not of itself oust the prior registered owner of the land described in the register, but the holder must prove that all the statutory provisions to authorize a sale for taxes have been complied with. Johnson v. Kirk, 30 S. C. R. 344.

Delay in Registering—Protecting Statutes.]—The sheriff, on the 9th October. 1860, sold to the plaintiff the land in question for taxes, and gave a certificate of the sale, but for some reason not explained the plaintiff did not obtain his deed until the 17th September. 1866, and he registered it on the same day, within one year from the passing of 29 Viet. c. 24. There was no proof of any neglect or misconduct on his part in not procuring the deed sooner:—Held, that the delay in registering did not, under 20 Viet. c. 24, s. 57, avoid the deed as against the purchaser of the land who had first registered; that the deed, not having been questioned within the time limited by the protecting statutes, was within their operation; and that the plaintiff, bringing ejectment in 1870, was entitled to recover. Carroll v. Burgees, 40 U. C. R. 381.

Subsequent Purchaser-Mortgage. One H., being indebted to a bank, mortgaged his lands thereto as security for his indebtedness, and the bank subsequently foreclosed his interest, but continued to allow H. to negotiate sales of the lands, and consulted him respecting sales effected by the bank. Some of the lands were specifically pledged to indemnify a certain indorser, and the notes upon which his name appeared had all been retired. One of the lots so mortgaged was afterwards sold for taxes, but the purchaser omitted to register his deed for more than eighteen months after the sale, as prescribed by 31 Vict. c. 20, s. 2 (O.) Meanwhile H., the mortgagor, sold and conveyed the land to a bona fide purchaser, without notice, which sale was subsequently ratified and confirmed by the bank, and the conveyance duly registered, before the purchaser at the tax sale registered his deed:-Held, that the purchaser at the tax sale had thus lost his priority; and a bill filed by him impeaching the sale by the mortgagor was dismissed with costs. Smith v. McLandress, 26 Gr. 17.

Successive Sales — Purchasers — Priorities.]—The provision of 31 Vict. c. 40, s. 58 (O.), as to the registering of a deed given upon a sale for taxes, applies as well between several purchasers at successive sales for taxes, as between a purchaser thereat and the vendee of the owner. Aston v. Innis. 26 Gr.

(f) Wills.

Deed by Devisee—Prior Deed by Testator—Omsison to Register.]—M., having conveyed certain land to the plaintiff, willed one-half of it to his nephew, and the remaining half to others, and the nephew conveyed the whole to a purchaser for value without notice of the plaintiff's deed, both will and deed to this purchaser being recistered before the plaintiff's deed; — Held, that the registration of the will and of the deed prevailed over plaintiff's unregistered deed as to the moiety conveyed by the nephew; but as to the other moiety devised, plaintiff was entitled to hold this part under the deed from M. as against the devisees under the will. McDonald v. McDonald, 44 U. C. R. 201

Deed by Heir-at-law — Proof of Consideration—Prior Registration.] — Where the plaintiff claimed under a will, and defendant under a deed from the heir-at-law, registered before the will:—Held. (1) that to give the deed priority it must be proved to have been for valuable, though not necessarily for a money, consideration: but that the plaintiff, by calling for the deed under a notice to produce, and putting it in on another branch of the case, furnished primā facie evidence of the consideration mentioned in it. The deed was by the heir-at-law and his brother, describing themselves as devisees under the will (by which the plaintiff took a life interest in the land, and it then went to the grantors, who were to make certain payments to the other children.) It was a quit claim by deed poll of their interest only, and the consideration was expressed to be £43 Tos. in money, and the grantee becoming responsible to the family of the testator for the payment of any money or the performance of any services required of the grantors by the will:—Held. that nevertheless, by the prior registry of this deed, the plaintiff's claim under the will was cut out. Bondy v. Fox. 29 U. C. R. 64.

Inevitable Difficulty — Infancy.]—Infancy is not an inevitable difficulty within s. 15 of the Registry Act, 35 Geo. III. c. 5, so as to preclude the necessity of an infant deviser registering the will within six months of the death of the devisor, to avoid a conveyance by the heir-at-law. McLeod v. Truax, 5 O. S. 455.

Infancy—Execution.] — M. devised lands to his two sons, John and James, and died in 1854. The will was registered in 1854 to the will was registered in 1856 John, the eldest son and helf-active of M. conveyed the south half of the land to the defendant, who registered his deed the same year. In 1856 the other half was sold to defendant, under an execution against the executors, obtained on their confession:—Held, that defendant was entitled to the whole; for as to the south half, the deed by the heir-at-law must prevail, the infancy of James being no excuse for not registering the will; and as to the north half, that the court could not go behind the judgment. Mandeville v. Nicholl, 1814. C. 18, 2009.

Mortgage by Heirs-at-law — Omission to Register Will.] — In 1831 Å, devised his farm to his widow in fee, and left her in possession. The will was never registered; and shortly after the testator's death his eldest son and heir went into possession with his mother, and so continued until his mother's death in 1854; the son managing the farm, and being reputed owner during this period. After his mother's death he was in sole possession, and in 1862 he mortgaged to a person who had no notice of the will or of the widow's title:—Held, that the widow's heirs could not claim the property, against the mortgagee. Stephen v. Simpson, 15 Gr. 594, 12 Gr. 493.

See Rykert v. Miller, 14 Gr. 25; Re Davis, 27 Gr. 199.

(g) Other Instruments.

Assignment of Lease.]—See Baldwin v. Wanzer, 22 O. R. 612..

Conveyance to Married Woman—Examination after — Re-registration, Necessity for.]—A mortgage at the date of its execution, the same having been registered, was ineffectual to pass the wife's estate, by reason of her not having been examined apart from her husband; and subsequently such mortgage was re-executed by the husband and wife, and the fact of the wife having been duly examined indorsed thereon, so that the deed was made effectual to pass her estate, but no re-registration took place:—Held, in equity, that the registration of such mortgage was sufficient under the statute, but that the examination of the wife upon the re-execution of the mortgage could not relate back to the first execution thereof, so as thereby to gain for it priority of an instrument which had been subsequently executed by the husband and wife, and duly registered. Beattie v. Mutton, 14 Gr. 686.

Conveyance to Railway Company.]—The registry law is binding on railway companies. Where it appeared that, after an owner of land had contracted with the Grand Trunk Railway Company for the conveyance of parts of the land for a rondway and station ground, he mortgaged the same land to a creditor without notice; and the mortgage was registered before the conveyances to the railway company:—Held, that the mortgage was entitled to priority, and that the company were entitled, under their special Act, to retain the land on paying to the mortgage its value at the time the company became entitled to it. Harty v. Appleby, 19 Gr. 205. See also Region v. Smith, 43 U. C. R. 339.

Conveyance to Religious Institution.]

—Under the Provincial statute 9 Geo. IV. c. 2, s. 3, a deed conveying land to trustees for the use of a religious society is invalid for warm of registration. Doe d. Bowman v. Cameron. 4 U. C. R. 155.

A deed, to come within the statute 24 Vict. c. 43. relating to conveyances to religious institutions, must have been registered within a year after the passing of it. In re Baptist Church Property of Stratford, 2 Ch. Ch. 388.

Crown Bond — Non-registration—Mortgage—Priorities.]—One M. gave a recognizance to the Crown with two sureties, D. and McK. The recognizance was estreated, but had not been registered under the Crown Debts Act. N., the cognizor, about the same time gave to D., one of his sureties, a mortgage on his lands as security. M. absconded and died abroad; and then D. under a power of sale sought to enforce the mortgage against the lands. Upon an information filed by the attorney-general:—Held, (1) that the recognizance to the Crown bound M.'s lands from its acknowledgment; and that the Crown could enforce its lien. (2) That D., being one of the sureties in the recognizance, had actual notice of the lien of the Crown; and that he must be postponed to the Crown, notwithstanding the registration of his mortgage and the non-registration of the recognizance. Attorney-General v. Daniell, 7 L. J. 122.

Discharge of Mortgage.]—See Dilke v. Douglas, 5 A. R. 63; Trust and Loan Co. v. Gallagher, 8 P. R. 97.

Judgment — Mortgage — Priorities — Rectification.]—By R. S. N. S., 5th ser., c. 84, s. 21, a registered judgment binds the lands of a judgment debtor, whether acquired before or after such registration, as effectually as a mortgage: and deeds or mortgages of such lands, duly executed but not registered, are void against the judgment creditor who first registers his judgment. A mortgage of land was made, by mistake and inadvertence, for one-sixth of the mortgagor's interest instead of the whole. The mortgage was foreclosed and the land sold. Before the foreclosure, a judgment was registered against the mortgagor, and two years afterwards an execution was issued, and an attempt made to levy on the five-sixths of the land not included in the mortgage. In an action for rectification of the mortgage and for an injunction to restrain the judgment creditor from levying:-Held. that as to the said five-sixths of the land the plaintiff had only an unregistered agreement paintin and only an unregistered agreement for a mortgage, which, by the statute, was void as against the registered judgment of the creditor. Grindley v. Blakie, 19 N. S. Rep. 27, approved and followed. Miller v. Duggan, 21 S. C. R. 33.

Memorandum of Equitable Mortgage, I—Where a mortgage was created by the deposit of mortgages, and the borrower signed a memorandum stating the sum lent and times for repayment, and agreeing to execute a writing to enable the lender to transfer or control the mortgages so deposited:—Held, that this memorandum did not require registration, not being, in the language of C. S. U. C. e. So, s. 17, "a deed, conveyance, or assurance affecting lands," Harrison v. Armour, 11 Gr., 303.

Proceedings in Expropriating Lands for Railway Purposes — Quebec Lave.]—

W. Co. v. Gibsone, 29 S. C. R. 340.

Substitution — Prescription — Quebec Law.]—See Meloche v. Simpson, 29 S. C. R. 375.

Trust Deed for Creditors.]—The Registry Act, 35 Geo. III. c. 5. did not apply to deeds given to trustees for the benefit of creditors. Necson v. Eastwood, 4 U. C. R. 271.

An assignee in insolvency cannot acquire priority over a prior vendee of the insolvent by prior registration of the instrument appointing such assignee. Collver v. Shaw, 19 Gr. 599.

Voluntary Conveyance.]—As against a purchaser for value, a voluntary deed, though registered, is void; and, as this objection will avail the purchaser in any proceeding adopted by or against him, the court will not interfere to remove the registration of the void deed as a cloud on the title. Buchanan v. Campbell, 14 Gr. 163.

See McCarthy v. Arbuckle, 29 C. P. 529; Ross v. Harvey, 3 Gr. 649.

4. Proof of Consideration of Prior Registered Deeds.

Absence of Consideration — Jury—Finding.1—Held, that the prior registration of the deed under which the plaintiff claimed in this case, could have no effect, the jury having found it to be without consideration. Leech v. Leech, 24 U. C. R. 321.

Mortgage—Security for Purchase Money—Conveyance—Receipt.)—A vendor took from the purchaser a mortgage for part of the consideration money, but did not register it until several months after the deed to the purchaser had been registered; in the meantime the mortgagor created a second incumbrance in favour of bona fide mortgages, which was registered long prior to the first mortgage, without notice of the vendor's incumbrance:—Held, that the want of a receipt for the consideration money in the deed to the purchaser was not sufficient to postpone the second incumbrance. Baldwin v. Dwignan, 6 Gr. 555.

Nominal Consideration.] — Where A. holding land under a registered title sold to B., whose deed was not registered, and B. sold to C., and after such sale sold again to D., who registered his deed, the deed to C. not having been registered:—Held, that C. could not, by obtaining and registering a release for a nominal consideration from the heir of A., obtain priority over D., for C. could not be considered, as to the release, a subsequent purchaser for a valuable consideration. Doe d. Major v. Reynolds, 2 U. C. R. 311.

A conveyance by an heir-at-law for a nominal consideration, registered prior to a will:—Held, not to cut out the will. Wilkinson v. Conklin, 10 C. P. 211.

Value—Creditor's Security.]—A mortgage to creditors, to secure their debts, is a sufficient valuable consideration to give a registered conveyance precedence over a conveyance previously executed, but registered subsequently. Fraser v. Sutherland, 2 Gr. 442.

— Onus.] — The non-registry of the sheriff's deed in this case was held immaterial, it not having been shewn that the prior registered deed from B. to D. was for a valuable consideration. Doe d. Russell v. Hodgkiss. 5 U. C. R. 348.

Onus—Infant,]—A. in 1842 conveyed to B.'s son, then a minor. This deed was never registered. B, swore that he bought the land from A., but being in difficulty had the deed made to his son, and that he had always continued in possession, but upon this point the evidence was contradictory. A's heir in 1849 made a deed of release to B., and B. conveyed to the lessors of the plaintiff. Both these deed sever registered:—Held, that there being no evidence that the deed from A's heir to B. was for valuable consideration, B. could not displace his son by reason of the prior registry of that deed; and, for the same reason, the lessors of the plaintiff could not claim to be preferred. Doe d. Frince v. Girty, D U. C. R. 41.

— Onus — Statement in Deed.] — A person who claims under a subsequent conveyance, by reason of prior registry, must, before he can recover in ejectment, give some proof that he is a purchaser or mortgagee for valuable consideration. The production of the subsequent deed, stating on the face of it a valuable consideration, affording no evidence of consideration as against a stranger, will not do. Doe d. Cronk v. Smith, 7 U. C. R. 376.

See McKenney v. Arner, 8 C. P. 46.

Registration of a subsequent deed will not give priority over another unregistered deed from the same grantor, prior in point of time, unless a valuable consideration for the former is proved. Mere production or registration of the instrument by the person claiming under it is not sufficient proof for this purpose. Barber v. McKay, 19 O. R. 46.

Voluntary Mortgage—Assignment of.]—O, requiring money, mortgaged land to B., in 1854, for £50, to enable B. to obtain it for him, which mortgage was registered in the same year. B. having done nothing, O., in 1856, got him to assign the mortgage to S., who paid B. £25, but neglected to register the assignment until 1864. In the meantime O. conveyed, for value, to M., to whom B. for a mominal consideration, conveyed his interest:—Held, that the mortgage to B., being voluntary, was void under 27 Eliz. c. 4, as against the conveyance for value to M., and that the fact of its being first registered could only give it validity in this respect, (2) That the assignment by B. to S. was fraudient and void under the registry law as against M., a subsequent purchaser for value who had first registered. Miller v. McGill, 24 U. C. R. 597.

5. Tacking and Consolidation.

Mortgage — Judgment,] — A mortgagor's description of the mortgage without also paying a judgment held by the owner of the mortgage against the mortgagor. This is not such tacking as the Registry Act forbids. McLaren v. Fraser, 17 (r. 533.

Several Mortgages.]—The rule of equity which allows the holder of several mortgages created by the same mortgagen on separate properties to consolidate the debts, and insist on being redeemed in respect of all before releasing any one of his securities, is not itacking; and is not such a claim as the Registry Act declares shall not be allowed to presal against the provisions thereof.

Dominion S. and I. Society v. Kittridge, 23 Gr. 631, — Assignment of Equity.] — Where two mortgages on different properties by the same mortgager came into C.'s hand before the Registry Act of 1865, and the mortgager, after the passing of that Act, assigned the equity of redemption to M. by a registered instrument:—Held, on M.'s suing for redemption, that the registered conveyance to M. prevailed under s. 66 of the Act, over C.'s equitable right to consolidate the two mortgages. Miller v. Brown, 3 O. R. 210.

Foreclosure — Hidden Equities.] —
The rule that a mortgagee shall not be redeemed in respect of the mortgage without being redeemed also as to another mortgage created by the same mortgager, applies as well in a suit to foreclose as to redeem. In such a case the property embraced in one mortgage realized more than sufficient to discharge it. The plaintiff, an execution creditor of the mortgagor, obtained a security on the lands comprised in such mortgage, which was registered after it, but without notice thereof. On a sale of the lands embraced in another mortgage a loss was sustained by the mortgagee; ——Held, that the defendant, the mortgagee, had not the right, as against the plaintiff, to consolidate his mortgages, and make good the loss on the one out of the surplus on the other sale, the policy of the Registry Act being to give no effect to hidden equities, Johnston v. Reid, 29 Gr. 293.

See McDonald v. McDonald, 14 Gr. 133.

6. Unregistered Titles.

Application of Acts.] — The Registry Acts 35 Geo. III. s. 5 and 9 Vict. c. 34 did not apply where no deed had been previously registered. Doc d. Hennesy v. Myers, 2 O. S. 424. See Doc d. Adkins v. Atkinson, 4 O. S. 140; Doc d. Shibley v. Waldron, 2 C. P. 180; Campbell v. Fox, 26 U. C. R. 631.

Effect of Priority of Registration—Remedial Acts.]—L. conveyed to D. in 1832, and D. to C. in 1833. Plaintif was C's heir. These deeds were registered in 1833, but not in accordance with the Acts. D.'s heir, in 1857, conveyed to K., who had notice of the previous deeds, and through whom defendant claimed. K. registered his deed in 1857 and in 1866 the plaintiff had his two deeds "examined and re-entered" under 9 Vict. c. 12, 10 & 11 Vict. c. 38, passed to remedy the errors in previous registrations: — Held, that the plaintiff sitle clearly must prevail, for under the then Registry Acts. as the title first became a registered one in 1857, K. gained nothing by his prior registration, and, if he had, his interest so acquired would not be protected by the remedial Acts. Campbell v. Fox. 26 U. C. R. 631.

Lost Records — Re-registration—Prioritics—Consideration.]—A., the grantee of the Crown, conveyed to B., and B. conveyed to C.
The conveyance from B. to C. was registered in the Nigara district before the war of 1812; the record of registration was burnt during the war; C.'s deed was not re-registered according to 56 Geo. III. c. 16; C. after the war conveyed to D., who did not register his deed; C. again conveyed to E., without consideration, who registered; E. conveyed, for a valuable consideration, to F., who also registered:—Held, that C.'s not having registered list title in compliance with 56 Geo. III. c. 16, had not the effect of securing the title to D., by making C.'s title an unregistered title at the time of his conveyance to E. Held, also, that F. having given a valuable consideration for his deed from D. would not defeat the peration of the Registry Act, 35 Geo. III. c. 5, in favour of F.'s registered title as against D.'s prior unregistered one, Doe d. Matlock v. Disher, 4 U. C. R. 14.

Necessity for Evidence of Registered Title, I—Under 35 Geo. 111. c. 5, in order to postpone a prior deed on account of non-registration, evidence must be given at the trial to shew that the title was a registered one before the prior deed was given. Necson v, Eastwood, 4 U. C. R. 271.

Plaintiff sold to E. and took back a mortgage, which he neglected to register, and in the meantime E. sold to defendant, who recorded his deed first. In ejectment on the mortgage, defendant objected to the want of registry, but closed his ease without having put in and proved the plaintiff's deed to E., to shew that the title was a registered one when defendant got his deed. The Judge at the trial would not allow the defence to be re-opened; and, as it appeared that defendant was aware of the mortgage when he purchased from E., and was therefore setting up a dishonest defence, the court refused to interfere. Blakely v. Garrett, 16 U. C. R. 261.

Necessity for Priority of Registration—Tar Dead, —In ejectment the plaintiff chained under a fax same made. ISSO, The sheriff's deed was given to the plain, 1840, but not registered until the 18th July, 1840, but not registered until the 18th July, 1841. Defendant claimed under the heir-atlaw of the patentee, by deed dated the 18th May, and registered on the 5th July, 1855, being the first deed registered upon the land: —Held, that the title being an unregistered one when the sheriff's deed was given, that deed did not then require registration to preserve its priority; that having been registered before 29 Vite, c. 24, s. 57, and 31 Vite, t. 20, s. 59 (O.), it was unnecessary to re-register under those Acts; and that the plaintiff's title must therefore prevail. Jones v. Coveden, 34 U. C. R. 345.

will.)—13 & 14 Vict. c. (3) applies only to instruments executed after 1st January, 1851. Therefore, where a testator in 1851, by his will, created a charge upon lands, and the parent for the land issued to his devisees in 1852, who sold and conveyed the property absolutely, and registered the conveyance:—Held, that the land was subject to the charge created by the testator, although his will had not been registered. Campbell v. Campbell, Cam

Unregistered Mortgage—Redemption— Subsequent Incumbrancers.]—A mortgage whose mortgage was made before the registry laws required registration to insure priority, filed a bill to forcelose. The mortgage had not been registered:—Held, that subsequent mortgages were bound to redeem him, his application being to fix a time for them to redeem; and that purchase for valuable consideration without notice could not be pleaded against him. Vansickler v. Pettit, 5 L. J. 41, 164.

Will—Heir-at-law — Conveyance,]—The conveyance by the heir-at-law being executed in 1833, and the title then unregistered:— Held, clearly not requisite to register the will. Scott v. McLeod, 14 U. C. R. 574.

See Dumble v. Johnson, 17 C. P. 9, post 8; Major v. Reynolds, H. T. 6 Vict., post 8.

7. Unpatented Lands.

Application of Acts—Purchase for Value without Notice.]—The Registry Acts do not apply to instruments executed previously to the grant from the Crown. Where, therefore, the locate of land executed a bond to convey, and after the issuing of the patent sold and conveyed the property to a third person, who again sold and executed a conveyance to a purchaser for value, but before dither had paid his purchase money, the holder of the bond, having registered the same, filed and served a bill for specific performance:—Held, that neither vendee was in a position to plead a purchase for value without notice, and that the plaintiff was entitled to specific performance with costs. Casey v. Jordan, 5 Gr. 467.

Incumbrance.]—The only instruments executed before patent which can be registered are such as create a mortrage, lien, or incumbrance on the land. Holland v. Moore, 12 Gr. 298.

Notice of Assignment.]—Express notice of an unregistered assignment of unpatented land has the same effect as like notice of an unregistered conveyance after patent. Goff v. Lister, 13 Gr. 406, 14 Gr. 451.

See Vance v. Cummings, 13 Gr. 25.

8. Other Cases.

Bar of Entail—Unregistered Deed—Inpeaching—Registered Title—Purchaser for Value.]—A testator seised in fee having devised to one of three sons, "to be by him entailed to any of his issue he may think proper," with the further provision that if any of the three should die without issue, the property should "be divided equally between their successors, subject to entailment," died before the 6th March, 1834. In November, 1831, two of the sons, D, and R, by deed conveyed their estates in the land to the third son, C. This deed was not registered. C. had a child who pre-deceased him. By several deeds executed respectively in February and March, 1895. D, and his assignee in insolvency conveyed to planitiff. Both these conveyances were duly registered:—Held, that, although the deed of November, 1851, might not, for want of registration, under C. S. C. c, S.S., S. Jl. have barred the entail as against their issue, it did pass the individual rights of the grantors during their lives; and that, as D, under whom alone plaintiff claimed, was still alive and could not impeach this deed, no more could the plaintiff, who took no higher interest than D, had it then in his power to transfer. Held, also, that if the title had been a registered one before 1851, of which there was no evidence, and if plaintiff had rel'ed on the non-registration of this deed under the general Registry Act, he would, upon proof that he was a purchaser for valuable consideration (as to which, however, the evidence was otherwise), have been entitled to succeed as to that portion of the land which D, himself could have claimed, just as if the deed of 1851 had never been executed. Dumble v, Johnson, 17 C. P. 9.

Completion of Title.]—A vendor does not complete his title until his deed is registered, i. e., registration is essential to the title. Laird v. Paton, 7 O. R. 137.

Defect in Registered Title — Powersion. I—After 30 years' possession of land by a person to whom the owner, who was granuee of the Crown, had conveyed the property in exchange for other lands, the vendor discovered a defect in the title by reason of the non-registry of the conveyance in the property was in possession of a portion of the property for several years under the vendoe's heir. To a bill filed to set aside this conveyance, the vendor and the second vendee set up the non-heirship of the plaintiff; purchase for value without notice; and that the original vendee was a minor at the time of the exchange, and had repudiated the transaction on becoming of age; and further, that he had no tifle to the land conveyed in exchange. The court considered that the long possession, and the absence of proof of the facts alleged by the defendants, were sufficient to entitle the plaintiff to a decree with costs. Harkin v. Ratbillon, 6 Gr. 405, 7 Gr. 243.

Pledge of Immovable—Right of Retention as against Execution Creditors.]—See Great Eastern R. W. Co. v. Lambe, 21 S. C. R. 431.

Priorities—Title,]—The registration of a deed from a person having no title, or a fraudulent title, will not give priority over a deed from a person having a good title. The d. Spufford v. Breakenridge, 1 C. P. 492.

Purchase of Pretended Title.]—In registering titles a conveyance by deed registered after a prior conveyance by deed not registered, is not a purchase of a pretended title within 32 Hen. VIII. Major q. t. v. Reynolds, H. T. 6 Vict.

Recital in Unregistered Agreement.]—The planning proved a deed to himself from D_a dated 3rd July, 1851, registered on the 7th of the same month. Defendant put in an instrument under seal, dated 3rd June, 1847, between one M. and D_a, reciting that differences had arisen between them, and that M. had brought ejectment to recover possession of this lot, "belonging to the said M.," and, in consideration of M. withdrawing the record, D. agreed that the lot should be valued by certain persons, and covenanted to pay to M. or secure by mortgage on the land whatever the value might be. No valuation was made—Held, this agreement being unregistered, that the recital in it could not affect the plantiff's title. Rutledge v. McLean, 12 U. C. R. 205.

Time—Relation back.]—The registry of a deed of bargain and sale relates back to the time the conveyance was made. Doe d. Spafford v. Brown, 3 O. S. 92.

II. EVIDENCE OF REGISTRATION.

Certificate of Registrar. |—Semble, that the certificate of the registrar of the discharge of the mortgage indorsed on the mortgage deed, is sufficient evidence of a reconveyance under the statute, without shewing the execution of the discharge itself. Doe d. Urookshank v. Humberstone, 6 O. S. 103.

The certificate of registration indorsed on a deed is conclusive of the registration, and cannot be impeached by evidence that it has been irregularly done. Doe d. Russell v. Gillett, M. T. 3 Vict. But see the next case.

The certificate of registration indorsed on a deed under 35 Geo. III. c. 5, s. 5, is primā facie evidence only of the fact of registration, and not incontrovertible. Doe d. McLean v. Manahan, I U. C. R. 491.

Production of Registrar's Book.]—
The production of the registrar's book in which a memorial is recorded, is good evidence of the title being a registered title; and semble, that the registrar producing an examined copy from his book without either his book or memorial, would be good evidence. Doe d. Prince v. Girty, D U. C. R. 41.

III, INSTRUMENTS WHICH MAY BE REGISTERED.

1. Instruments Capable of Registration.

By-law — Plans — "Instrument" — Notice. — A municipal by-law, passed in 1888, providing for the opening of a road was received at the proper registry office, and the fee for registration was paid, but the by-law was never entered or registered, because it did not conform and refer to the plans filled with the registrar of the lands through which the road was opened, as required by R. S. O. 1887 c. 114, s. 84, s.-s. 2:—Held, that the by-law was an "instrument within the meaning of that section, and as defined by s. 2, but was not an "instrument within the meaning of of R. S. O. 1897 c. 126, and the registrar was right in refusing to register it; and, never having been registered, it never became "effectual in law" for any purpose; and a subsequent by-law providing for the cost of opening the road was, therefore, invalid. The requirement of the Municipal and Registry Acts (R. S. O. 1897 c. 223, s. 633, and c. 136, s. 86), that such a by-law shall be registered before it "becomes effectual in law," is not merely for the purpose of notice under the registry laws. Re Henderson and City of Toronto, 29 O. R. 669.

Certificate of Lis Pendens — Subdivision of Lot. |—The registrar was required to record a certificate of ils pendens affecting lot 16, 9th con. of Erin, and lots 14 and 15, 10th con. of the same township, which he refused to do, as the west halves of lots 14 and 15 had been laid out into village lots according to a plan filed in his office. On application for a mandamus:—Held, that so far as regarded the west halves he was right, for by 29 Vict. c. 24, s. 73, the certificate should shew the village lots affected. The point being new, and there being no difficulty in recording the certificate against lot 16, the rule for a mandamus was discharged without costs. In re Thompson and Registrar of County of Wellington, 25 U. C. R. 237.

Charge—Letter.]—A letter in the following form, "I agree to charge the east half of lot number nineteen... with the payment of the two mortgages... amounting to $750 ... and I agree on demand to execute proper mortgages of said land to carry out this agreement or to pay off the said mortgage and the said mortgage and the said mortgage and the said mortgage of the mortgage in favour of the mortgages named, upon the lands described, and may be registered against them. Hoofstetter v, Rooker, 22 A. R. 175. Affirmed by the supreme court of Canada, 26 S. C. R. 41.

Mutual Fire Insurance Company—
Notice.]—By s. 67 of C. S. U. C. c. 52, all the right or estate of any party effecting an insurance with a mutual insurance company, in the property insured, at the time of effecting the same, is subjected to all claims against the insured under such insurance; and a purchaser, taking a conveyance from the assured, will take subject to the charge of the company, although without notice; and so although such charge does not appear on the registry affecting the property, the registry laws not providing for the registration of such charge. Montgomery v. Gore District Mutual Ins. Co., 10 Gr. 501.

Conveyance Affecting Lands.] — 13 & 14 Vict. c. 63 is not confined to regular legal conveyances, but embraces every species of conveyances by which lands are in any way affected in law or in equity. McMaster v. Phipps. 5 Gr. 253.

Deed without Description.] — Quare, whether a deed of land not specifying any particular lot by description is capable of registration. Russell v. Russell, 28 Gr. 419.

Sheriff's Act and Warrant—Bunk-ruptcy,1—In September, 1860, by the "act and warrant" (under Imperial Act 19 & 20 the "act to the state of the state

Sheriff's Deed.—Subdivision of Lot.]—Although portions of township lots have been laid off into village lots, this forms no objection to an undivided interest in the township lots, as originally described, being sold under execution; and the purchaser at sheriff's sale is entitled to hold the interest acquired under such sale, notwithstanding that the sheriff's deeds, so far as they concern the village lots, do not comply with the provisions of the Registry Acts of 1846 (9 Vict. c. 34) and 1868 (31 Vict. c. 20 (0.)), the latter of which prohibits the registration of deeds of any portions of lots so laid out, unless they conform to the plan of the property registered under such Act. Rathbun v. Culbertson, 22 Gr. 465.

See Harrison v. Armour, 11 Gr. 303; Ontario Industrial Loan and Investment Co. v. Lindsey, 3 O. R. 66.

Covenant for Renewal — Priorities——lorstrages.]—A lease for four years, with evenant for renewing for four years more: —Held, not to require registration, actual possession having gone along with the lease; and such a lease, though not registered, was held valid as respects the covenanted renewal as between the lessee and subsequent mortgagees of the lessor. Latch v. Bright, 16 Gr. 653.

Unnecessary Registration — Effect of j—A. leased to B. and C. for fourreen years, giving a covenant to renew at the end of that time for a similar term, unless he should choose to pay for the improvements. This lease was registered. The lessees then assigned part of the premises, and the assigned bart of the premises, and the assigned bart of the premises to be premises to the plaintiffs; this mortgage due whole premises to the plaintiffs; this mortgage was registered:—Held, that the covenant for renewal did not extend the term so as to bring the lease within 9 Vict. c. 33; that the unnecessary registration of it did not make it requisite to register the assignment; and therefore that the mortgage to the plaintiffs could not affect the premises assigned. Doe d. Kingston Building Society v. Rainsford, 10 U. C. R. 2336.

Prior Possession — Priorities — Mortgage, — In ejectment the plaintiff claimed through a mortgage from B., dated 31st May, and registered 3rd June, 1864. Defendant had held a lease from B. for five years from 18th April, 1861, and while it was current, before the execution of the mortgage, he obtained another lease for four years from 18th April, 1865. Neither lease was registered, but defendant, who had continued in possession, claimed to hold it under the latter, soin, claimed to hold it under the latter, soin, the lease of the latter of the lease was registered, but defendant, who had continued in possession, claimed to hold it under the latter, so where the actual possession goeth along with the lease. "An under C. S. U. C. c. 89, s. 45:—Held, however, that the excention in the clause extends only to unregistered leases, under which the tenants had actual possession at the execution of the conveyance, which being registered, would prevail but for such exception; and that, as the defendant was then in possession under the first lease only, the second, being unregistered, had lost its priority. Davidson v. McKay, 26 U. C. R. 306.

IV. MANNER OF REGISTERING.

Discharge of Mortgage—Number.]—A discharge of mortgage referred to the mortgage as 5,764. whereas it was registered as 5,764 C. W.:—Held, that it was, nevertheless, a valid discharge properly registered. The Registry Act, though requiring every instrument to be numbered, says nothing about adding letters, which appear to be only arbitrary marks adopted by the official for convenience of reference. Re Clarke and Chamberlain, 18 O. R. 270.

-A ortas ess, The ruddary nee Mortgage — Certificate of Registry.]—A registrar indorsed on a mortgage sent to him for registration: "No. 44,322, purporting to be a duplicate hereof, was recorded" at, &c., on, &c.:—Held, clearly not a compliance with 29 Vict. c. 24, s. 53, under which the registrar must examine the instruments and certify without qualification the facts which he is required to state. In re Bradshaw and Registrar of County of Simcoe, 26 U. C. R. 464.

Proviso — Memorial.]—It was not necessary, under 35 Geo. III. c. 5, in the memorial of a mortgage to notice the proviso for redemption. Hamilton v. Lyons, 5 O. 8. 573.

V. Proof for and Defects in Registration,

Addition of Witness—Omission.]— Ideal under 9 Vict. c. 34, that registry in accordance with the Act was imperative; and a deed registered upon a memorial in which the addition of the witness to the deed was omitted, was therefore held fraudulent and void as against a subsequent morigagee. Robson v. Waddell 24 U. C. R. 574. [See 36 Vict. c. 17 (O.)]

Affidavit of Excention.]—The registrar in suig recorded a certificate of discharge, upon an affidavit which did not state the place of execution, as required by the statute:

—Held, that though he should properly have refused to register it, yet being registered it was effectual as a reconveyance of the legal estate to the mortgagor. Robson V. Waddell, 24 U. C. R. 574, distinguished, on the ground that there the defect was patent on the face of the registry book where the memorial was capied. Magrath v. Todd, 26 U. C. R. 87.

Under 9 Vict, c. 34, s. 7, the execution of deeds within the county, as well as without, might be proved by affidavits sworn before a commissioner. In re Registrar of County of York, 3 U. C. R. 188.

Held, sufficient for the witness's affidavit, proving execution of the deed and memorial, to state that "he had seen the due execution of the deed." Reid v. Whitchead, 10 Gr. 446. One of the witnesses swore to the affidavit proving the execution of the memorial before the other witness:—Held, no objection. Ib.

Informality.]—The solicitor of the mortgagee wrote a memorandum of charge on one of his letter forms, under the printed work: Dear Sir." his own name being at the bottom on the left side, and he made an affidavit, as subscribing witness, to have it registered. The memorandum was signed by the owner. It was contended that the solicitor was not a subscribing witness, but only the person to whom the letter was addressed:—Held, affirming the judgment in 22 A. R. 175, that the solicitor signed the agreement as a witness, and the registration was, therefore, regular, but if not, as the document was upon the registry, the subsequent purchaser had actual notice by which he was bound, notwithstanding the informality in the proof of execution, which did not make the tegistration a nullity. Rooker v. Hoofstetter, 25 S. C. R. 41.

Curing Defects—Omissions—Statute.]—
The absence of the residence and occupation of the subscribing witness to a certificate of discharge of mortgage, on the face of the certificate, though stated in the affidavit:—Held, clearly no objection, being cured by 36 Viet. c. 17, s. 8 (O.) Stoddart v. Stoddart, 39 U. C. R. 203.

Re-cntry — Statutes — Retroactivity.]—Plaintiffs claimed certain land in the county of Hastings through A., whose ancestor in 1833 took by conveyance from B., who took by conveyance from the patentee. These two conveyances were defectively registered. Defendant claimed through the purchaser from the heir-at-law of B., whose deed was registered, as also that from the patentee to B. in 1857:—Held, that plaintiff's title, if considered unregistered, must prevail, but if defectively registered, such defect was removed by subsequent re-entry of the deeds under 9 Vict. e. 12 and 10 & 11 Vict. c. 38, relating to this county; that this was retroactive; and the plaintiffs had therefore a good registered title. Campbell v. Fox. 17 C. P. 542. See S. C., 26 U. C. R. 631.

Statute—Notice.]—Execution of a document creating a further charge was proved by affidavit, and attached to it, but without any proof of execution, were the agreement by the attorney to pay the charge and a transfer by the chargee to the plaintiff of the charge, and all the documents were accepted by the registrar and registered:—Held, affirming the judgment in 27 O. R. 511, that the defect in registration was cured by s. 80 of the Registry Act, R. S. O. 1887 c. 114, and that the attorney, who subsequently became the purchaser of the lands in question, was affected with notice of the plaintiff's rights. Armstrong v. Lye, 24 A. R. 543.

Declaration of Execution.]—The court refused a mandamus to register a deed on a declaration of its execution made in England under 5 & 6 Wm. IV. c. 62, substituting declarations for oaths. In re Lyons, 6 O. S. 627.

Description of Land—Insufficiency—Memorial, I—A subsequent mortgagee, who had not actual notice:—Held, not bound by the registration of a prior mortgage, the nemorial of which insufficiently described the premises. A memorial described the land in the same words as the deed, which, however, did not sufficiently identify the premises, and concluded with a reference to a mortgage not imported into the memorial:—Held, insufficient. Reid v. Whitchead, 10 Gr. 446.

Held, reversing the above judgment, that when the memorial follows the description in the deed, the deed itself being operative, the registration is effectual. S. C., 2 E. & A. 580.

Description of Parties.)—The grantors in the memorial were described as "of the city of London," and one witness described as "of London:"—Held, sufficient. Reid v. Whitehead, 10 Gr. 446.

Error in Date—Memorial.]—A mortgage and memorial were executed on the 26th February, 1855, but by a clerical error the date in the mortgage was written as 1851. The memorial stated the date of the mortgage as 1855.—Held, registration good. Harty v. Appleby, 19 Gr. 205.

Mandamus to Witness.]—A mandamus will lie to compel a witness to prove the execution of a deed and memorial for registry. Regina v. O'Meara, 15 U. C. R. 201.

Omission in Abstract Book—Effect of,—The plaintiff claimed lot 25 under a deed from the heirs-at-law of S., the patentee, executed in 1875. Defendants claimed under a deed from S., dated and registered in 1867, but the registrar had omitted to enter defendants' deed in the abstract index, and, in consequence, when the plaintiff inquired at the registry office before taking his deed, he was told that the patentee had made no conveyance—Held, under 29 Vict, c. 24, that the registrar's omission did not invalidate the registraries on derivative defendants' deed of its priority. Lawrie v. Rathbun, 38 U. C. R. 255.

Omission of Name — Effect of] — The omission in the memorial of the Christian name of the mortgage's wife, who executed to bar dower, vitlated the registration. Boucher v. Smith, 9 Gr. 347.

Sheriff's Certificate—Informalities.]—
The sheriff's certificate on which the deed was registered, though dated 10th July, 1840, had written on it, in the handwriting of R., who was sheriff in 1840, but had gone out of office before 1861, "Duplicate 1861," and in it the sheriff was described as sheriff of the United counties of N. and D., which were not united until 1850;—Held, that these informalities were insufficient to avoid the registration. Jones v. Concden, 34 U. C. R. 345.

Signature after Registration.] — Registration of a mortgage held not to be invalidated by the mortgagee signing it, and the witness to it subscribing his name to it, after it had been registered. Muir v. Dunnett, 11 Gr. Sb.

See Beattie v. Mutton, 14 Gr. 686.

VI. REGISTRARS AND DEPUTIES.

1. Duties, Omissions, and Liabilities of,

Abstract of—Form of.]—Upon application to a registrar for an abstract of registries on a lot of land, he gave a list of deeds affecting the lot, adding, "I hereby certify that the above conveyances appear of record;"—Held, that such abstract was not a compliance with C. S. U. C. c. 89, s. 67, it not being certified to show all the registrations which were on record in the office upon the lot; and a mandamus was granted for a proper certificate. In re Registrar of County of Carleton, 12 C. P. 225.

Abstract — Omission of Indorsement — Notice—Damages, I—A registrar gave to an intending purchaser an abstract of title, which by mistake omitted an outstanding mortgage; —Held, that the purchaser, who had notice of the omitted mortgage, could not chim against the registrar in respect of payments made after such notice; and the registrar, who on finding his mistake had bought the outstanding mortgage, was held entitled to foreclose the same. Brega v. Dickey, 16 Gr. 494. See Lawrie v. Rathbun, 38 U. C. R. 255.

— Omission of Indorsement—Notice of Action—Limitation—Damages—Costs.] — A registrar, being applied to by the plaintiff for a certificate of the registries on a lot, gave one in which he omitted to mention a mortrage for $500, prior to that which the plaintiff purchased, supposing it, from the certificate, the ha first incumerate. The first mortgage obtained a feet recommender of the plaintiff purchased the land at less than what would satisfy the two mortgages, that what would satisfy the two mortgages. In an action against the had pair for his mortgage. In an action against the tend he would receive all that he had pair for his mortgage. In an action against the vegistrar for this omission, the jury gave $500 damages. Held, that the registrar was not entitled to ortice of action, and that the six months' limitation clauses did not apply, for, though an officer within the meaning of C. S. T. C. c. 126, this was not an act committed but a negligent omission. Held, also, that the damages were moderate, the plaintiff, having been made a party to a suit in chancery on the first mortgage, endeavoured to obtain priority, but failed in his defence, and was compelled to pay costs. Whether these costs could be recovered from the registrar was a point raised, but not decided, as it was uncertain whether they were included in the verdict. Harrison v. Brega. 20 U. C. R. 324.

Abstract Index-Omission of Instrument -Damages, 1-A will relating to certain land, though registered, was not entered on the abstract index, whereby the plaintiff alleged that he was damnified in purchasing a mortgage on the land, the mortgagor having no title. The mortgage was first purchased by S., a solicitor, for himself, and the assignment of it made to the plaintiff, for whom he was accustomed to act, and to whom he afterwards sold. S. was not retained by plaintiff to search the title for him; it was not searched when he sold to the plaintiff; and the Judge before whom the case was tried held that he relied on the supposed title acquired by the mortgagor by possession: Held, that the plaintiff could not claim that he was damnified by defendant's omission; and that he could found no action on the search made by S. Green v. Ponton, 8 O. R. 471.

Deputy—Profits of Conveyancing—Fees.]
—A deputy registrar did business for many years as a conveyancer, for his own beneit, with the knowledge of the registrar, and without objection by him:—Held, that the registrar could not afterwards claim the profits. The deputy was said to have searched a title for certain persons, and not to have given to the registrar ord for the search, or made any charge for it to these persons. The registrar not appearing to have been aware of this practice, the deputy was held chargeable with the ordinary search fee, as the registrar's share of the transaction. It was said that the deputy had not charged other persons with all the fees which the law allowed; but the court considered him not liable to the registrar for these fees, where the omission to make the charge was not in view of any personal advantage to the deputy himself. The Statute of Limitations was bed to be no bar to the claims of the principal in respect of these and other transactions between them. Smith. Redford, 19 Gr. 274.

Search by Stranger — Inspection of Books, 1—A registrar is not obliged to place his books and indices in the hands of any person desiring to make a search, but may do so in his discretion, and on his own responsibility. In this case one W. desired to ascertain the judgments recorded against Y., and the registrar gave him the number of certain judgments, which he said were all that related to Y., and offered to shew him the corresponding certificates, but he refused to allow him to inspect the index or the registry book of judgments:—Held, that he was justified in such refusal. In re Webster and Registrar of Brant, 18 U. C. R. ST.

The registrar is the person by whom all searches are to be made. A person inquiring into the state of a title has no right to make searches and inspect the registry books, but he may require the registrar to make the searches and produce the instruments and books of the office relating thereto for his inspection. Semble, that under s. 20 the registrar is bound to exhibit the abstract index when required to do so. Ross v. McLay, 26 C. P. 190.

Treble Damages—Conviction.] — An action caunot be brought against a registrar for treble damages, under 35 Geo. III. c. 5, s. 10, until he has been convicted under that section of some offence for which he shall forfeit his office. Hamilton v. Lyons, 5 O. 8, 503, Wrongful Registration — Action for Istanceal — Parties,]—S., believing that his father (still living, but of unsound mind) was entitled to certain lands to which the plaintiffs claimed title, took the advice of his solicitor, C., who, being advised by coursel instructed by S., prepared and registered an instrument, whereby he, S., stated that he claimed the lands, and would, upon the demise of his father, commence proceedings for their recovery. The plaintiffs were thus obstructed in the sale of their lands, and brought an action against S., C., and the registrar, to remove the instrument from the register, as being a cloud on the title, and for damages. At the trial the action was dismissed as against the registrar, but judgment granted with a reference to assess damages, against 8, and C. (4 O. R. 473):—Held, that the Registry Act did not authorize the registration of such an instrument; and that an action would lie for its removal. The act of registration was a wrongful one, and all parties concerned in it were responsible to the plaintiffs, and the registrar was therefore a proper party. Ontario Industrial Loan and Insectment Co. v. Lindsey, 3 O. R. 68.

2. Fees.

The fees to be taken by registrars were regulated by R. S. O. 1877 c. 111, ss. 92, 105; R. S. O. 1897 c. 136, ss. 118, 131. For the decisions as to such fees under 9 Viet. c. 34 and C. S. U. C. c. S9, see Keele v. Ridout, 5 U. C. R. 240; Smith v. Ridout, 5 U. C. R.

(a) For Particular Services.

Abstract—Copy of Index.]—Where an abstract of title to a lot is applied for, and the registrar furnishes only a copy of the abstract index, making no search or reference to the registrations:—Held, that he can charge only as for such copy, namely, 25 cents for the first 100 words and 15 cents for each subsequent 100. Ross v, McLay, 26 C. P. 190.

The registrar charged $2.05 for an abstract of five folios—i, e., $1.20 for searches, the remainder being for copying at the usual rate:—Held, that the registrar was entitled to those fees, though be only copied it from the index. A registrar when preparing an abstract is not bound to rely on the correctness of the abstract index, but may properly test its correctness by making all searches necessary for the preparation of the abstract; he may rely, however, on the index if he thinks proper, and charge the same fees as for searches. But if he gives a certified copy of the abstract index only, he can charge no more than the rate per folio. MacNamara v. McLay, 8.A. R. 319.

having been demanded of all instruments registered upon two township lots comprised in a certain mortgage:—Held, that the registrar was entitled to charge $2 on each general search of the township lots and twenty-five cents for the first hundred words and fifteen cents for each additional hundred words of the abstract, as provided in R. S. O. 1887 c. 114, s. 95, s.-ss. 2 and 4; but the fact that the lots had, subsequently to the mortgage, been subdivided by the mortgagors, without the assent of the mortgage, into a number of lots upon registered plaus, did not, under s.-s. 2, justify him in charging also as for a separate search on each of the lots as shewn on the said plans, Morse v, Lamb, 23 O. R. 167. Reversed by a divisional court, 23 O. R. 608.

Registration of Deeds—Special Tariff— Extra Covenants.]—By 10 Vict. c. 109, the registrar was entitled to receive only 2s. 6d, from defendants for registering deeds made to them in the form given by the Act. In 1865 the registry law was changed, and deeds were required to be registered in full, instead of by memorial, as before. In 1873 and 1874 defendants brought for registration deeds made to them, which contained covenants for title not in the statutory form:—Held, that for such deeds the registrar was entitled to charge his full fees, and was not restricted to the 2s. 6d. Ward v. Midland R. W. Co., 35 U. C. R. 120.

Search of Abstract Index.] — Semble, that under s. 20 of 31 Vict. c. 20 (O.), the registrar is bound to exhibit the abstract index when required to do so, and the fee for so doing, including reference to four of the registered instruments therein referred to, is 25 cents. Where such abstract index, containing thirty-one entries, was shewn to an applicant, who looked at the same, and on request was shewn four of the registrations in it:—Held, that the registrar could only charge 25 cents, and not as for a search on each of such thirty-one entries. Ross v. Mc-Lay, 26 C. P. 190.

- Recovery of Fee Paid.]-In an action brought against a county registrar to recover back alleged overcharges, it was shewn that the plaintiff had called upon the registrar to search the books and indexes in his office. and inform him of the persons named as grantees in the last executed deed of a certain lot; and also what incumbrances there were registered against it. There were twenty-eight entries on the abstract index, and the registrar charged for these services $1.45, being at the rate of twenty-five cents for the first four entries, and five cents for each of the other entries. Quere, whether the registrar was bound to do, or could recover for doing, what the plaintiff required of him. Held, that, he had done it, the charge which the as he had done it, the charge which the plaintiff had paid, and which was reasonable on the principle of the tariff, could not be re-covered back. The registrar was required to produce the abstract index of a lot, which contained 180 entries, and he insisted on being paid $2 as for a general search, the plaintiff offering to pay twenty-five cents:-Held, that the registrar had charged $1.75 too much. Macnamara v. McLay, S A. R. 319.

Search of General Index—Instrument.]

—The plaintiff asked to examine an original conveyance in the registry office, informing the officer of the names of the parties thereto and the lands affected thereby, but did not tell him the number of the conveyance. The registrar examined the index, for which he charged twenty-five cents, and ten cents for producing the document:—Held, to be proper charges. Macanamar v. McLay, S. A. R. 319.

Search of Plan—Abstract Index.]—The plaintiff told the registrar that one A. owned a lot in the township of B., but was ignorant as to the number of the lot, and asked the registrar to tell him what incumbrances there were against it, which the registrar did, and charged for those services twenty-five cents for ascertaining the number of the lot, and twenty-five cents for searching for the incumbrances:—Held, that both were proper charges. Macnamara v. McLay, 8. A. R. 319.

— Charge by Lots.]—The plans filed in the registry office of the city of Toronto were exhibited to two assessors of the city assessment department, who used them in order to check, for assessment purposes, the dimensions of the various lots shewn on them;—Held, that the registrar was not entitled to charge as for a search on each lot shewn on such plans. Quere, whether, unless a plan is an original registered instrument under 31 Vict. e. 20, s. 70, s.-s. 11, any fee is chargeable. In this case the charge of ten cents for exhibiting each plan was not objected to. Lindsey v. City of Toronto, 25 C. P. 335.

Search of Registered Instrument.]—On an application at a registry office to search as to the registration of a deed, the applicant gave the names of the party to the deed and the lot described therein, and was shewn the original registered instrument:—Held, that there was a sufficient description given to enable the registrar to find the required deed without giving the number of the registration, and that under 31 Vict. c. 20, s. 70, s.s. 11, the fee for exhibiting such original instru

See Smith v. Redford, 19 Gr. 274.

(b) Proportion Payable to Municipality.

Construction of R. S. O. 1877 c. 111, s. 98.]—Held, that, on the proper construction of s. 98 of R. S. O. 1877 c. 111, each registrar is bound to account to the county as therein mentioned only after he has first received the sum of $2,500, and not before, and this whether there be successive holders of the position in any one year or not. The Act, being in derogation of the rights of registrars as they previously existed under the common law, must be construed strictly. Re Ingersoll, Gray v. Ingersoll, 19 O. R. 194.

Dismissal during Year, —Where a registrar of deeds was dismissed before the expiration of the year, having received in fees an amount in excess of that specified in the statute (R, S, O, 1877 c, 111, s, 104):—Held, affirming the judgment in 3 O, R, 23, that he was bound to return and pay over to the treasurer of the nunicipality a proportionate amount of such excess, although not in office at the time prescribed by the statute for making his return; but, semble, that the treasurer could not maintain an action for such fees before the 15th January, the day named in the Act for the registrar sending in his return. Held, also, that the defendant was not entitled to notice of action. County of Bruce v. McLay, 11 A, R, 437.

Liability of Sureties for.]—Action upon a bond of the defendants as sureties for a registrar of deeds, dated 8th January. 1886; to recover the portion of fees received by him which he should have paid to the plaintiffs under the Registry Act, R. S. O. 1887 c. 114. s. 197. The bond was in the form prescribed by schedule A. of the Act, and was conditioned for the performance of the duties of the registrar's office and against neglect or wilful misconduct in office to the damage of any person or persons. The form was prescribed before the introduction of the provisions now contained in s. 107 of the Registry Act, which by s. 13 makes provision for the giving of special security for the payment of moneys under s. 107:—Held, that, the bond being in the form prescribed by the Act in force prior to the introduction of the provisions giving the municipalities a share in the fees, the sureties were not liable for the non-payment over of the municipality's share of the fees. Decision in 19 O. R. 349 affirmed. County of Middlesex v. Smallman, 20 O. R. 487.

Powers of Provincial Legislature.]—
The plaintiffs sued the defendant for the proportion of fees received by the defendant as registrar, to which they were entitled under R. S. O. 1877 c. 111, ss. 98-103. The defendant demurred to the declaration on the ground that these sections were ultra vires the provincial legislature, as they imposed an indirect tax, and not a tax for raising a revenue for provincial purposes:—Held, that having received the money in question under the above Act, the defendant could not deny that he received it for the purposes therein provided. Held, also, that if a tax at all, it was clearly a direct tax, and intra vires. County of Hastings v. Ponton, 5 A. R. 543.

3. Notice of Action.

Fees-Neglect to Furnish Statement-Excossive Fees.]—Held, that a registrar was not entitled to notice of an action against him for entitled to notice of an action against him for neglecting and refusing to furnish a statement in detail of fees charged by him, as required by 38 Vict. c. 15, s. 7 (O.), and for a man-damus; such neglect and refusal being an act of omission. Ross v. McLay, 40 U. C. R. 83, A registrar is entitled to notice of an action to recover back fees charged by him in excess of those allowed by 31 Vict. c. 20 (O.) S. C., ib. 87.

See Ontario Industrial L. and I. Co. v. Lindsey, 3 O. R. 66; County of Bruce v. Mc-Lay, 11 A. R. 477; Harrison v. Brega, 20 U. C. R. 324.

4. Tenure of Office.

[By R. S. O. 1877 c. 111, s. 7 (R. S. O. 1897 c. 136, s. 11), every registrar heretofore appointed or hereafter to be appointed, holds office during pleasure only. 1

Quo Warranto-Action for Fees.]-A quo warranto information was refused to try the right to the office of registrar, and the applicant left to his action for the fees against the alleged intruder. In re Hammond and McLay, 24 U. C. R. 56.

Removal-Misconduct-Appointment during Pleasure.]-Plaintiff in 1859 was appointed registrar, under 9 Vict. c. 34, which authorized the governor in general terms to appoint, saying nothing as to tenure, but providing for removal in certain events, to be proved in a specified manner. His commission expressed the appointment to be during pleasure, and in 1864 he was removed and depeasure, and in 1804 he was removed and de-fendant appointed, the admitted cause of such removal being plaintiff's alleged misconduct as returning officer at an election. The court of Queen's bench held that the plaintiff could be Queen's bench held that the plaintin could be removed only for the reasons and in the manner pointed out by the statute; that the words "during pleasure" in his commission could not deprive him of his statutory rights; and that 29 Vict. c. 24, by which every registrar then in office was continued therein, would not confirm defendant's appointment, if il-legal. Held, reversing the judgment, that the office being one to which at common law the appointment might be during pleasure, and the statute not providing expressly for the boure, the plaintiff's appointment during pleasure and his removal were valid. (2) That if the office was one of freehold, then the grant of it during pleasure was void, and the plain-tiff was never appointed. Hammond v. Mc-Lay, 28 U. C. R. 463, 26 U. C. R. 434.

VII. REGISTRY OFFICES AND BOOKS.

1. Books of Office.

Alteration of Registration Divisions.]-When a separate registry office is established in a city or town, the books which have been kept for it must be delivered to the registrar, although memorials relating to land without the city have been improperly entered in such books. In re Registrar of London and Registrar of Middlesex, 17 U. C. R. 382.

Where the plaintiff, the registrar of the county of F., after the city of K. was separated therefrom for registration purposes, fured therefrom for registration purposes, fur-nished to the registrar for the city a statement of titles to land before separate books were kept for the city:—Held, that the plaintiff was not bound to furnish the matter he had supplied, and that defendants were not obliged to pay for it, this being a casus omissus from C. S. U. C. c. 89. Durand v. City of Kingston, 14 C. P. 439.

Under the Registry and Municipal Acts, 29 Vict. c. 24, and 29 & 30 Vict. c. 51;—Held, that the counties of York and Peel were jointly liable to the registrar of Peel for services ren-dered by him, under ss. 26 and 33 of the Regdered by him, under ss. 20 and 35 of the Reg-istry Act, before the separation of these coun-ties. Held, that s. 70 of the Registry Act, authorizing the inspector to certify the amount, made the general ayerment in the amount, made the general averment in the declaration of services rendered sufficient. Campbell v. Counties of York and Pecl. 28 U. C. R. 385.

Held, that a demand of payment on the treasurer of the counties and refusal by him were sufficiently shewn by the evidence in this case; and that the inspector's certificate un-70, though given after the separation, was sufficient, it not being a condition precedent to the right of action on such refusal. Held also, no objection that the memorials copied by the plaintiff had been received by his predecessor, not by himself. S. C., 27 U. C. R. 138.

Delivery up to Claimant of Office— Mandamus.]—The affidavits stated that M., who claimed the office of registrar, obtained a mandamus nisi directed to H., to deliver up to him the books and papers; that he went to the office with two constables in H.'s ab-sence, and demanded them of his wife, reading what purported to be a peremptory mandamus as his authority, but refusing to allow her or her solicitor to examine it; and that they then took away the books, &c. Upon these affidavits the court granted a rule nisi for an attachment against M., but refused it against the constables, there being nothing to shew that they were aware of the fraud. A rule for an order on M, to return the books, &c., thus obtained, was refused, as H. might bring trespass, claiming a mandamus in the action; and when full redress can be had by an ordinary suit, applications for summary of replevin had previously been refused. In re McLay, 24 U. C. R. 54.

Payment for Books-Liability of County Council.]—A., the registrar of Kent, applied to G., the registrar of Huron, to order books for his office; G. ordered two books from the plaintiff in A.'s name, and these were charged plaintiff in A.'s name, and these were charged to A.; three others were afterwards furnished, which the plaintiff charged in his books to the county of Kent, for Mr. A.:—Held, that the plaintiff, under 16 Vict. c. 157, s. 3, had no right of action against the county council. Read v. County of Kent, 13 U. C. R. 572. 2. Office Buildings.

Obligation of Municipality to Provide. 1—The county of Northumberland having been on the 1st December, 1859, divided for registry purposes, and the county council having for eighteen months neglected to provide offices, valls, &c., for the safe keeping of the books, &c.,—Held, that s, 3 of C, S, 1, C, c, 80 is declaratory of s, 19 of 9 Gio. IV, c, 34, and governed cases before the passing thereof; and that defendants were under said Act obliged to furnish offices, vaults, &c., Regina v. Counties of Northumberland and Burham, 10 C, P, 356.

C. S. U. C. c. 89 makes it the duty of the county council to erect fire proof offices and vaults for the registry office of the county. The defendants having neglected so to do:—Held, that the plaintiff, the registrar of the county, having furnished the requisite vaults and offices, could not sue the county council for the rent of the same; but that his remedy was to compel the council by the aid of the court to furnish such offices, &c. Ward v. Counties of Northumbertand and Durham, 12 C. P. 54.

Removal of. — The nower with respect to the removal of registry offices, given to the district councils by 9 Vict. c. 34, was by 12 Vict, cc. 78, 81, vested in county councils, Fraser v. Counties of Stormont, Dundas, and Glengarry, 10 U. C. R. 286.

VIII. MISCELLANEOUS CASES.

Decree — Registration of — Reversal — Lien.]—A decree made on further directions was registered against the lands of the defendants. Subsequently the original decree was reversed on rehearing. The order then made did not specifically reverse the decree on further directions. Upon an application to discharge the lien created by the registration:—Held, that the order reversing the original decree destroyed the lien, but that the court could not make an order directly affecting it. Graham v. Chalmers, 2 C. L. J. 239.

Enrolment — Dispensing with — Retroactivity of Statute.]—4 Wm. IV, c. 1, s. 47, which dispenses with enrolment or registration of a deed of bargain and sale for the mere purpose of passing the land, applies to such deeds executed before as well as since the passing of that statute. Doe d. Loueks v. Fisher, 2 V. C. R. 470; Rogers v. Barnum, 5 O. S. 252. See, also, Doe d. Adkins v. Atkinson, 4 O. S. 140.

9 Gco, H. c. 36.]—Held, following the series of authorities from Doe d. Anderson v. Todd, 2 U. C. R. 82, down to Davidson v. Boomer, 15 Gr. 218, that 9 Geo, H. c. 36, is in force in this Province, but that enrolment in chancery is not necessary to validate a deed in other respects executed in compliance with that Act. Hambly v. Fuller, 22 C. P. 141.

Evidence of Title—Registration by Vendor.1—In case of a registered title, a purchaser is in this country entitled to require the registration by his vendor of all the instruments through which his title is derived. Brady v. Walls, 17 Gr. 699. See, also, Laird v. Paton, 7 O. R. 137.

Registrar's Certificate. |—A certificate purporting to shew the registered conveyances of land from the county registrar's office, under the hand of the deputy registrar; —Held, not admissible evidence of the title under 13 & 14 Vict. c. 19, s. 4. Gamble v. McKay, 7 C. P. 319.

- Unregistered Deed.]—Held, that the title in this case, being a registered one, had not been deduced, inasmuch as one of the deeds in its chain was not upon registry. Ketchen v. Murray, 16 C. P. 69.

Judgment—Registration against Vendee —Rescission.]—Where judgments are registered against the vendee of lands prior to the conveyances being executed in pursuance of the contract, the vendor is not entitled to a rescission of the contract in default of payment, but may obtain a decree of foreclosure or sale. Galt v. Bush. S Gr. 3300.

of Unregistered Duplicate Mortgage — Payment—Protection — Dis-charge.]—Action by the plaintiff, adminis-trator of M., against defendant, on his covenant in a registered mortgage to pay M. the amount due thereon. Plea, on equitable grounds, in substance, that the plaintiff told defendant before the instalment sued for fell due that he could not find the mortgage, and defendant then informed him that he would be prepared to pay when it fell due; that when he received notice of this action he notified the plaintiff's attorneys that he was prepared to pay on production of the duplicate copy of the mortgage, which was held by M., or on proof of the loss; and that he was and is so prepared; but the plaintiff refused to shew said copy or furnish any proof of the loss. plea also averred that the testator had made a will, and appointed certain persons executors, who had possession of the will; and defendant submitted that he was entitled to such duplicate or proof of loss, and alleged that he was prepared to pay or deposit the money as the court should direct, to be paid over to plaintiff on such production or proof: -Held, plea bad, for it must be assumed that the mortgage was recorded at length; no assignment either directly or by deposit was averred; and under the Registry Act defendant would be fully protected on payment of the mortgage and recording the discharge; and the alleged will was not said to be valid or existing. Macauley v. Boyle, 25 C. P. 239.

Mortgage by Purchaser—Fees for Registration.]—A purchaser who to secure a balance of purchase money has given a mortgage to the court, must pay the fees for registration of his mortgage. Sweetnam v. Sweetnam, 6 P. R. S3.

Production of Registered Deed—Alteration im—Proof of Execution.]—The production of the registered duplicate original of an instrument with the registrar's certificate indorsed thereon is, by virtue of s. 63 of the Registry Act, R. S. O. 1807 c. 136, prinå facie evidence of the due execution thereof.

I. OF LAND.

Deed of Release—Interest to Operate on.]—A. in 1846; conveyed to B.'s son, then a minor. B. soo that he bought the land from a beautiful to be soon that he had always continued to his son; and that he had always continued in possession, but we had always continued to his son; and that point the evidence was contradictory. A.'s point the evidence was contradictory. A.'s no conveyed to be seen of the plaintiff;—Held, that the deed from A.'s heir to B., being a mere release, and (if B.'s son were in possession) there being no estate on which it could take effect, it was inoperative. Doe d. Prince v. Girty, 9 U. C. R. 41.

The title acquired by a purchaser at a sheriff's sale of the husband's interest in his wife's lands, is sufficient for a release from the husband and wife to operate upon. Beattie v. Mutton, 14 Gr. 686.

Dower-Release of.]-See Dower.

Invalidity—4 beence of Consideration—Registry Laws., —Where A., holding land under a registered title, sold to B., whose deed was not registered, and B. sold the land to C. and after sale sold it again to D., who registered his deed, the deed to C. not having been registered:—Held, that C. could not, by obtaining and registering a release for a nominal consideration from the heir of A. obtain priority over D., as C. could not be considered, as to the release, a subsequent purchaser for a valuable consideration. Dec d. Major v. Repuolds, 2 U. C. R. 311.

Joint Tenant.]—A release by one joint tenant to another conveys a fee without words of inheritance. Ruttan v. Ruttan, M. T. 4 Vict.

Lease for Life—Operation as Release.]—
A, died, leaving the plaintiff, his widow, and defendant, his heirart-law. The plaintiff being in possession of part of the property, defendant executed the following instrument under seal:—"Know ye, all men, that 1, John G, Hall, do blind myself, my helrs, executors, and assigns, in the sum of £300 to let my mother, Leah Hall, retain quiet and peaceable possession of the lot of land now in her possession for the lot of land now in her possession, the same being fifty acres more or less, for the term of her natural life:"—Held, a lease for life. Semble, that the writing might also be supported as a release. Hall, v. Hall, 15 U. C. R. 637.

Quit Claim Deed—Assignee of Bond.]—
The plaintiff, having a bond for a deed from one W., assigned the same to C. by way of security only:—Held, that a quit claim deed by which C. conveyed to K., did not place K. in any better position than his assignor. Graham y. Chalmers, 7 Gr. 597.

— Interest to Operate on.] — A. received possession from B.; A. died in 1846, and before his death A. and B. had been in continued possession for more than twenty years. A. died without issue and intestate, leaving his wife upon the land. C., his heirat-law, brought ejectment against A.'s wife, who defended, relying on a quit claim deed from B., who, upon giving up possession to A., had exchanged lands, and never having given A. his deed, as was alleged, now conveyed to his wife:—Held, that A.'s wife, upon the death of her husband, being merely a tenant at sufferance, and having no interest upon which a simple release could operate, the release conveyed nothing, and the plaintiff was entitled to recover. Doe d. Connor v. Connor, 6 U. C. R. 298.

Where the grantor does not grant all his interest in the land to the grantee, but merely gives up his right, this is a mere release, and it must have a previous estate or interest in possession on which it can operate. Doe d. Phelan v. Kinnally, 7 U. C. R. 480.

A. died in possession intestate in July, 1851, leaving his widow, and the plaintiff, his eldest son. The plaintiff, on the 15th October, 1851, by deed poll, in consideration of £50, "remised, released, and forever quit-claimed" the land, in fee simple, to his mother, who was still living on the place. Defendants claimed under her:—Held, that the deed could take effect as a release only; that the widow, being a tenant at sufferance, had no estate upon which it could operate; and that it therefore passed nothing. Held, also, that 14 & 15 Vict. c. 7, s. 2, enacting that all corporeal tenements and hereditaments shall be deemed to lie in grant as well as in livery, could not help; for it was not intended to after the construction of the language of deeds, but to enable words which would only have passed incorporeal to pass corporeal hereditaments. Acre v. Liringston, 26 U. C. R. 282.

S, being owner in fee, by deed expressed to be made in pursuance of the Act to facilitate the conveyance of real property, in consideration of £75, did quit claim to one G, his heirs and assigns forever, all his right and title to the land in question. It was added that G. might take possession, that S. would execute such further assurances as might be requisite, that he had done no act to incumber, and he released and quitted claim to G, all his claim upon said lands:—Held, sufficient to pass the title in fee. Nicholson v. Dillabough, 21 U. C. R. 591.

Interest to Operate on a Conveyance of Feed-Interest to Operate on I.— Defendant, being in possession of land, by deed, include the information of land, by deed, included claim to the plaintiff, his beirs and assigns for ever, the said land, to hold to the plaintiff, his heirs and assigns, to and for his and their sole and only use forever:—Held, that the deed could not operate as a release, there being no estate or possession in the plaintiff to support it, nor as a conveyance, for want of apt words; and therefore that nothing passed by it. The last case distinguished. Cameron v. Gunn, 25 C. C. R. 77.

—— Purchaser for Value.] — Where a person claims under a quit claim deed, he is in general not protected as a purchaser for value without notice. Goff v. Lister, 14 Gr. 451.

Sheriff's Deed—Interest to Operate on.]

—A deed given by a sheriff after a sale of lands under a fi. fa., whereby he conveys all the estate and interest of the debtor, is not to be considered as a mere deed of release in the strict sense of the term, so as to be inoperative for want of a previous estate in the grantee. Doe d. Disactt v. McLeod, 3 U. C. R. 297.

II. OF PERSONAL CLAIMS AND CAUSES OF ACTION.

1. By Whom Release May be Given.

Agent—Authority—Estoppet.]—To an action by L. against A. the defence was release by deed. On the trial it was proved that A. had executed an assignment for the benefit of creditors and received authority by telegram to sign the same for L. The deed was dated 8th October, 1881, and afterwards, with knowledge of it, L. continued to send goods to A., and on 5th November, 1881, be wrote to A. as follows: "I have done as you desired by telegraphing you to sign deed for me, and I feel confident that you will see that I am protected and not lose one cent by you. After you get matters adjusted I would like you to send me a cheque for $800". . . In April, 1885, A. wrote a letter to L., in which he said: "In one year more I will try again for myself and hope to pay you in full." In November, 1886, the account sued upon was stated:—Held, that, the execution of the deed on his behalf being without sufficient authority, L. was not bound by the release contained therein, and, never having subsequently assented to the deed, or recognized or acted under it, he was not estopped from denying that he had executed it. Lawrence v. Anderson, 17 S. C. R. 349.

Bargainor — Rights of Person for whose Benefit Bargain Made. — In consideration of a convey gree to him far extrain farm, the person is the provide by the provide ber with a house on the during her life provide her with a house on the farm, and with necessaries, and support his brothers and sisters thereon until they reached staten years of age, so long as they remained at home on the said farm, and assisted him so far as they were able in the management of it:—Held, that the mother had no right or power to release the petitioner from the obligations undertaken by him with reference to his brothers and sisters under the above agreement, and if the children did their part they could hold their brother to his promise, though the agreement was not in terms made with them as parties. Re MeMillan, 17 O. R. 344.

Joint Tenant — Fire Insurance—Claim for Rebate.]—J. M. and F. M., his wife, were jointly insured in the defendant company, whose deposit was being administered under R. S. O. 1877 c. 160, so. 21, 22. On 4th February J. M., without the assent of F. M., signed and sent to the receiver a claim for rebate as empowered under that Act. No acknowledgment of the receiver, who, on 27th Februarys so that the receiver, who, on 27th Februarys for most property was bruth and a magreement for reinsurance, and that if they objected thereto, and desired to claim for rebate, they were to do so before 15th March. On 24th February the property was burnt, and J. M. forthwith claimed for the whole loss:—Held, that neither J. M. nor F. M. was bound by the former's claim for rebate; that it was not a release, but an invalid attempt by one to exercise a joint statutory power; or else an attempt to make a new contract, which was not authorized by one of the parties, and was not accepted by the receiver before the loss occurred. Granting that a release by one joint tenant would extinguish the right of both, it does not follow that entering into a new agreement by one will prejudice the right of the other. Clarke v. Union Fire Ins. Co., McPhee's Claim, 6 O. R. 635.

Joint Tort-feasor.]—Quere, in the present state of the law, is a release to or satisfaction from one of several joint tort-feasors, a bar to an action against the others. Grand Trunk R. W. Co. v. McMillan, 16 S. C. R. 543.

Lessor in Ejectment.]—A lessor of the plaintiff in ejectment will not be allowed to release the action. Doe d. Boyer v. Claus, 3 O. S. 46.

Nominal Plaintiff.] — A release by the nominal plaintiff, made after the action is commenced by his assignee, cannot be pleaded as a defence to such action. Barclay v. Adair, 3 L. J. 88.

One of Two Plaintiffs.] — After issue joined one of two plaintiffs gave to the defendant a release under seal of all actions and demands. The defendant thereupon moved to stay all proceedings in the suit:—Held, that the defendant should plead the release, and that he was entitled to a stay of proceedings, and the remaining plaintiff was allowed to strike out the anme of the other plaintiff. McAlpine v. Carling, S. P. R. 171.

See Canadian Bank of Commerce v. Jenkins, 16 O. R. 215.

2. Construction and Operation.

Bond for Transfer of Vessel - Action Plea of Discharge.] - Declaration on a bond, reciting an agreement to sell a vessel to plaintiffs for a sum payable by instalments, for which notes were to be given, and con-ditioned to convey the vessel within a specified time, and for quiet enjoyment. Breaches, refusal to convey, and eviction of the plain-Breaches, refusal to convey, and eviction of the plantiffs by one G., alleging as special damage payment of costs in a replevin suit brought by G. Second plea, to the first breach, that, at the execution of the bond, the bont, as the the execution of the bond, the boat, as the plaintiffs knew, was mortgaged to one C. to secure the same sums as the notes, and pay-able at the same times; and thereupon, in consideration that the obligors would deliver consideration that the obligors would deriver the notes to C., to apply the proceeds on the mortgage when paid, and that the plaintiffs would forbear to require the conveyance, C. agreed with the plaintiffs, with the consent of the obligors, to hold said mortgage only as a security for and until payment of said notes, and on such payment to release said boat to the plaintiffs; that the obligors then, at the plaintiffs' request, and in pursuance of said agreement transferred the notes to C. and the plaintiffs thereupon discharged the obligors from procuring the conveyance. Third plea, to the second breach, that after said agreement and transfer of the notes, C. transferred ment and transfer of the notes, C. transferred all bis interest in the notes and mortgage to said G; that one of the notes being unpaid, G. brought the action of replevin, and thus obtained possession, claiming under C.:— Held, on denurrer, both pleas bad, for such a discharge as alleged did not necessarily arise from what was shewn, and the actual dis-charge asserted was not alleged to be by deed, Corby v. Paterson, 15 U. C. R. 575.

Covenant to Manufacture — Action on — Pica of Release.]—Declaration on a covenant to manufacture a certain number of patented waggon seats per day, and to pay plaintiffs a certain royalty on each. The fourth plea, on equitable grounds, alleged that, in consideration that defendant would release the plaintiffs from performance of said covenants on their part, and from all causes action in respect thereof, the plaintiffs agreed to release defendant from performance of said covenants on his part; and that defendant accordingly did release the plaintiffs from the performance of said covenants on their part: — Held, bad, for not averring a release of the plaintiffs from all causes of action; and because such a verbal concord under these circumstances could be no defence in equity, unless the plaintiffs accepted the release or by their conduct and acquiescence led defendant to believe the first agreement at an end. Mc-Giverin v. Turnbull, 32 U. C. R. 407.

Joint Judgment Debtors — Agreement not to Sue One—Settlement of Suit—Fraudulent Conegapane.]—A stipulation not to sue one of two judgment debtors is no discharge of the other, though there should be no express reservation of rights as against such order of the superson of rights as against such order of the superson of the superson of one of two defendants in execution under a ca. sa., on a joint judgment, operates as a discharge of both. Fisher v. Patton, 5 O. S. 741.

Joint Trespassers — Discharge of Onc— Pleading—Award.]—Where the plaintiff by his own act, as by a reference and an award, has knowingly discharged one of two joint trespassers, he cannot bring an action against the other. A verdict or an award specifying the amount of damages against one of two joint trespassers, is in itself a bar, whether paid or not, and has the same effect as a satisfaction by him would have had in precluding any action against his co-trespasser. It is therefore unnecessary in the plea to an action of trespass, setting out the award of the damages, to aver that the sum awarded has been paid. It would be different, however, in pleading an award to an action of debt, in which two are jointly bound: there, unless payment of the award be averred, it is no bar. Adams v. Ham, 5 U. C. R. 292.

Partners—Release of One.]—A release by creditors to one of two partners of all actions and causes of action, suits, debts, &c., which they now have, or ever had, or are entitled to in respect of any act, matter, or thing from the beginning of the world, is a release of individual as well as partnership liabilities. Hall v. Irons, 4 C. P. 251.

Several Obligors—Release of One.]— A rease by plaintiff to one of several obligors in a replevin bond to the sheriff, after an assignment to the plaintiff, releases all: and, having released the sureries, the plaintiff cannot stee the sheriff for taking insufficient sure-ties. Kirkendali v. Thomas, 7 U. C. R. 30.

See Clarke v. Union Fire Ins. Co., Mc-Phee's Claim, 6 O. R. 635, ante 1. 3. Mistake or Fraud.

Cestui que Trust to Trustee—Concealment of Facts.]—See Hope v. Beard, 8 Gr. 380.

Contract-Release of Claim on-Mistake or Surprise — Pleading.] — Action for work and labour. Plea, release. Replication, on and labour. Plea, release. Replication, on equitable grounds, that plaintiff had contracted to make certain railway bridges for defendant, according to certain plans and specifi-cations, by which the girders for one bridge were to be 60 feet in length; that defendant afterwards directed him to make these girders 80 feet, agreeing to pay him a fair price therefor, which the plaintiff did; that after the completion of all work under the contract, de-fendant procured a release under seal from the plaintiff in the following words; setting out the release, by which, in consideration of dant from all claims and demands whatsoever arising out of his agreement with defendant for constructing bridges, and in full of all extras thereon—which is the release pleaded; that connected with such release, and intend-ed as the basis and part thereof, was the following account of the claims arising out of said agreement; giving the account, which covered between £30,000 and £40,000, shewing large sums paid to the plaintiff, allowar made for extras, and a balance due of £1,118. The plaintiff then alleged that in this account the value of the 80 feet girders was not included, nor was the release intended to apply to or cover the same; that he had never seen such account until he was required by defendant to execute the release, nor had be ever made any claim for such girders; and he was induced to execute such release, without examining the account or any opportunity for doing so, by his confidence in defendant, who refused to pay him the balance appearing due until he had executed such release, which the plaintiff alleges was obtained from him by surprise, and was not intended to include or apply to the cost of such girders, for which alone this suit is brought:-Held, on de-murrer, that the replication shewed no sufficient grounds to avoid the release. Coulson v. McPherson, 23 U. C. R. 129.

Debt—Surety.]—A creditor by mistake executed an absolute release to his debtor, but the agreement was, that the creditor's right against a surety should be reserved!—Held, that the surety was not discharged, and that the creditor was entitled to a decree in equity to that effect. Bank of Montreal v. McFaul, 17 Gr. 234.

Judgment—Scizure after Release—Mistake—Costs.] — Declaration, that defendant recovered judgment against the plaintiff, and issued a fi. fa., and afterwards, by deed, duly released the plaintiff therefrom, but maliciously caused the sheriff to seize plaintiff's goods under the writ, and would not direct him to stay. Plea, on equitable grounds, that before the release the fi. fa. was issued; that in ignorance of the issuing of said writ, and believing that all the costs on said judgment did not exceed £6 5s., defendant consented to refer all matters between himself and the plaintiff; that the arbitrators awarded that the plaintiff; should pay defendant £202, and the said costs, which they believed amounted to only £6 5s., and they directed that sum to be paid, in ignorance of the fact that said costs, with the sheriff's fees, amounted to £15; that it was the intention that all said costs should be paid by plaintiff, but neither the arbitrators nor defendant knew of the mistake until too late to move against the award; that in similar ignorance mutual releases were directed by the arbitrators, and defendant executed the tendence of the control of the control

Promissory Note-Release of Claim on Promissory Note—Release of train on —Pleading.]— Declaration on a note made by defendants P., W., and D., jointly and severally, payable to plaintiff. Equitable pleas: (1) by defendant D., that he made the note as surely for defendant P., of which the plaintiff was aware when he took it, and that plantiff was aware when he took it, and that after it became due the plaintiff, without his knowledge, by deed released P, therefrom; (2) by defendant W., that he and defendant D, made the note for the accommodation of P., as his surety, to secure a debt due to the plaintiff solely from P.; that it was delivered to and accepted by the plaintiff from the de fendants upon an express agreement that W. and D. should be liable only as sureries; and that the plaintiff, without W.'s consent, by deed released P. Equitable replications; (1) that the pleas each refer to the same deed; that at the time of making it P. was indebted to the plaintiff in $250 on an account stated, as well as for the amount of the note; that it was intended and agreed only to release the $250, and not the note; that for the purpose of so confining the deed the plaintiff added after his signa-ture thereto, "$250, not any sureties on this;" and that the note was not included, or intended by defendant P. or by the plaintiff to be included, in the debts released by the deed; (2) that the release was drawn and executed by mistake, the intention of the parties thereby mistake, the intention of the parties there-to being to execute a consent only to a dis-charge of P, under the Insolvent Act of 1864, and it should have been drawn so as to operate in that way only, and not as a dis-charge of any sureties:—Held, that at law the first replication would be bad, for the words added formed no part of the release, and it therefore set up oral matter to qualify the deed; but that on equitable grounds it was sufficient. Held, also, that the second replication was bad. Fowler v. Perrin, 25 U. C. R. 227.

Repudiation of Release — Retaining Consideration—Trial.]—Action for work and materials. The cause having been entered for trial, defendant paid plaintiff $2,500, and received a release expressed in the most general terms, and the record was withdrawn. The plaintiff again gave notice of trial, alleging that the $2,500 was only part of the consideration for the settlement, and that the defendant was also to procure for him an appointment in the civil service with a salary of at least $2,000 a year. He refused, however, to repay the $2,500, though defendant offered, if he would do so, to give up the release. The master in chambers having set aside the notice of trial and stayed all proceedings, a Judge, on appeal, rescinded this order on the 11th April, 1882, and permitted defendant to plead the release on that day; report to following days; and directed the issue to be tried at the next assizes, which began on the 17th. The defendant took out the order and pleaded the release, and the plaintiff entered the case at these assizes, but was allowed to withdraw it, and defendant, in Easter term following, appealed from the order of the Judge:—Held, that the order must be rescinded, for the plaintiff could not repudiate the release while retaining the money which he had received under it, and, as the additional consideration alleged was illegal, the plaintif being particeps criminis, could not set it up to avoid the release. Heuson v. Mocdondth, 32 C. P. 407.

Validity—Fraud—Trial.]—A settlement of a pending action, agreed to by an illierate plaintiff without communication with her solicitor and without fair disclosure of facts, cannot stand, and its validity may be tried in the pending action if pleaded in bar. Johnson v. Grand Trunk R. W. Co., 25 O. R. 64, 21 A. R. 409.

4. Pleading.

Plea of Release—Replication of Fraud— —Evidence.]—In covenant, to a plea of release, the plaintiff replied that it was procured by fraud and covin, on which issue was joined. At the rial it appeared that the plaintiff had assigned his interest in the subject matter to a third person, for whose benefit this action was brought, and that the plaintiff and defendant had combined to defraud him by the ridense;—Held, that under the pleadings such evidence was inadmissible, and that the party interested should have applied to set the release aside, Rowand v. Tyler, 3 O. S. 563.

ecutor of S. on defendant's covenant to pay S. 1240. Fifth plea, that before breach of the covenant declared on, S. accepted from defendant is 1210 in goods in full satisfaction of said sum of £240, and of the cause of action declared on, and by deed released defendant therefrom. On denurrer to this plea, except as to the allegation of release:—Held, that the rest might be rejected as surplusage, and that it shewed a good defence, Robison v. Planigan, 22 U. C. R. 447.

Taking off Files.]—Even after verdict the court will order a plea of release to be taken off the files if shewn to be clearly fraudulent. Rowand v. Tyler, 3 O. S. 630.

Sec. Adams v. Ham, 5. U. C. R. 292, ante. 2; Johnson v. Grand Trunk R. W. Co., 25 O. R. 64, 21 A. R. 408, ante. 3; Duross v. Duross, 19. U. C. R. 77, ante. 3; Coulson v. McPherron, 23 U. C. R. 222, ante. 3; McAlpine v. Carling, 8. P. R. 171, ante. 1; Corby v. Paterson, 15 U. C. R. 575, ante. 2; McGicerin v. Turnbull, 32 U. C. R. 407, ante. 2. 5. Taking Criminal Proceedings — Effect on Civil Proceedings.

Assault.]—The purser of a steamboat had been summoned by the plaintiff before a magistrate for an assault, and a fine was imposed, which he paid. This under 32 & 33 Vict. c. 20, s. 45 (D.) (Criminal Code, s. 866), though a release to the purser, did not constitute any bar to a civil action against the company, Emerson v. Niegara Navigation Co., 2 O. R.

See Flick v. Brisbin, 26 O. R. 423; Nevills v. Ballard, 28 O. R. 588.

Obstructing Sheriff.] — The sheriff of Oxford, in executing a writ of replevin, was obstructed by the defendants, who rescued the goods. On complaint of the sheriff's officer, they were summarily tried before a police magistrate and fined, under 32 & 33 Viet. c. 32, by which it is declared that any person discharged or convicted in such a case shall be released from all further or other criminal proceedings for the same cause. A motion afterwards made by the plaintiff to attach the same persons for contempt, was discharged, but without costs. Haywood v. Hay. 46 U. C. R. 562.

RENT.

Devise of Rent—25 Geo. 11. c. 6, s. 1.]—A devise of rent to an attesting witness is void under 25 Geo. 11. c. 6, s. 1. Rent issuing out of land is a tenement, it partakes of the nature of land, and is within the 5th section of the Statute of Frauds, and hence is also within 25 Geo. 11. c. 6, s. 1. Hopkins y. Hopkins, 3 O. R. 223.

Rent Charge and Rent Seck.]—In detect for arrears of an annuity or rent charge, by the purchaser thereof under a fi. fa. against the grantee's land, the declaration was held insufficient;—(1) Because there was no averment that the sheriff seized before the return of the writ of fi. fa. against lands. (2) Because, it not appearing that the said rent was anything more than a rent seck, it would not be liable to seizure under a fi. fa. lands. Dougall v. Turnbull, 8 U. C. R. 62.

Debt does not lie by the grantee of a rent charge to issue out of lands, where there is no express covenant by the grantor to pay. Quere, if the grantee could bring debt, whether his assignee might do so. S. C., 10 U. C. R. 121.

Under a fi, fa. against lands and tenements against the plaintiff in this suit, in favour of A., the sheriff sold to A. a rent charge, which the defendant in this suit had granted by deed to the plaintiff for her life. The deed contained a personal covenant of the defendant to the plaintiff to pay the rent charge:—Held, that A. was not entitled to sue on the covenant in the name of the plaintiff. Quere, whether the sale to A. would not have the effect of discharging defendant from his covenant. Smith v. Turnbull, 1 P. R. 38.

Bailiff — Illegal Scizure — Liability of Laudlord, — Defendant gave a warrant to a bailiff to distrain for rent on premises occupied by the plaintiff as his tenant, but the bailiff scized plaintiff so property off the premises. This was done without defendant's knowledge, and there was no evidence of his having adopted the act:—Held, that defendant was not liable, and that the plaintiff could not maintain replevin against him. Ferrier v. Cole, 15 U. C. R. 561.

Change in Person Assessed — Assignment for Creditors — Possession of Goods — Estoppel. — The plaintiff, being in possession of a stock of goods, was assessed therefor in his own name, against which he appealed to the court of revision, and to the county court Judge, when an indenture of assignment of the goods to one M. upon trusts for creditors was produced, and the plaintiff's name was erased and that of M. substituted therefor. The plaintiff alleged, however, that his name was not struck out on his application, for that his ground of appeal was that the goods were not equal to the debts due upon them, and so were exempt. Defendants having distrained upon the goods, the plaintiff replevied, and defendants avowed as for taxes due to them by the plaintiff, whose name did not appear on the collector's roll. It was contended that the plaintiff having denied his title, and his name being erased from the roll, he was debarred from replevying the goods distrained: — Held, that under the assignment he had a right of possession in the goods, which, being coupled with actual possession, entitled him to maintain replevin under our statute; that he was not estopped; and that the plaintiff not being shewn to be indebted to defendants for taxes, the avowry failed. Sargant V. City of Toronto, 12 C. P. 185.

Goods Improperly Seized — Replevin Act.]—Replevin is maintainable as the law was before the Replevin Act, and in a far more comprehensive manner since that Act, for goods taken as a distress which were not properly seizable; and that though goods properly seized be replevied with the others. Miller v, Willer, 17 C. P. 226.

Partly Illegal Distress—Separation.]—A collector, having authority to collect the rates for three specific years' taxes, distrained for them with other sums not properly collectable:—Held, that the three legal distresses were separable from the illegal ones, and until they were paid replevin would not lie. Corbett v. Johnston, Il C. P. 317.

Right to Demise — Stranger Questioning.]—A stranger, whose goods have been distrained for rent on the premises of a tenant, cannot, in replevin, any more than the tenant, question the landlord's right to demise. Smith V. Aubrey, 7 U. C. R. 90.

School Rates—Illegality—Acceptance of Security,—Helpelvin for horses. Plea, justifying the taking under a warrant for echool taxes, and alleging that the horses were delivered by the collector to defendant, an innekeper, to take care of until the sale. Replication, setting out facts to shew the rate illegal, and averring that the plaintiff, after seizure of the goods, at the request of the collector and trustees, gaze his note for a sum named (not saying that it was the amount due by him), payable to bearer, which was accepted in satisfaction of the taxes; that the collector released the property seized; that the note was still outstanding and the plaintiff liable upon it; and that the seizure in the plea mentioned was made afterwards:—Held, on denurer, replication bad; for (1) the collector, acting under a warrant legal on the face of it, would not be liable in trespass or trove, and therefore not in this action, nor the identifiant for taking the horses from him the feat of the terret the improper acceptance of it by the tryet the straining. Spry v. McKenzie, 18 U. C. R. 161.

Under the Public Schools Act of 1874. 37 Vict. c. 28 (O.), no power is given to form a Vol. III, p-193-44 union school section out of sections in different townships. Where, therefore, such section was formed and a rate levied therein, for which the plaintiff's goods were seized:—Held, that such rate was lilegal, and the plaintiff entitled to succeed in replevin. Halpin v. Calder, 26 C. P. 501.

See, also, Askew v. Manning, 38 U. C. R. 345.

Notice of Action.]—Replevin may be brought upon a distress for school rates, and notice of action is not necessary. Appelgarth v. Graham, 7 C. P. 171.

2. Goods in the Custody of the Law.

Assignce in Insolvency.] — Where the goods of A., having been seized by the sheriff under a fi. fa. against B., had been handed over by the sheriff to an assignce, to whom B. had made a voluntary assignment in insolvency:—Held, that A. might maintain replevin against the assignce. Burke v. Mc-Whitter, 35 U. C. R. 1.

Held, that an official assignee, appointed under the Insolvency Act of 1875, is an officer within C. S. U. C. c. 20, s. 2, and that goods in his possession as such assignee cannot be replevied. Barclay v. Sutton, 7 P. R. 14.

Division Court Attachment.] — Goods seized under an attachment from a division court may be repleved by a third party claiming them as his own. Arnold v. Higgins, 11 U. C. R. 191.

Stay of Proceedings.]—Certain goods being under an attachment from a division court were placed by the baillif in custody of the clerk, from whom they were replevied by the plaintiff. A summons then issued from the division court, calling before the Judge there, the attaching creditors, and the plaintiff as claimant of the goods:—Held, that, under 16 Vict. c. 177, the proceedings in the replevin suit must be stayed. Held, also, that if the plaintiff had been allowed to proceed he must have failed, for neither treepass nor trover would lie against the clerk, and therefore replevin could not be maintained. Quare, as to the remedy which the defendant, the clerk of the division court, or the attaching creditors, would have in case the plaintiff in replevin should be held by the Judge to have no claim. Caron v. Graham, 18 U. C. R. 315.

Guardian in Insolvency.]—Goods are repleviable out of the hands of a guardian in insolvency, notwithstanding C. S. U. C. c. 29, s. 2. The question as to how far goods seized under an execution or attachment are protected from the remedy by replevin discussed. Jameson v. Kerr, Galley v. Kerr, 6 P. R. 3.

Police Magistrate — Stay of Proceedings.]—A gold watch having been taken on a search warrant from a person who absconded, the plaintiff claimed title to it, and brought replevin therefor against a city police magistrate, who applied to stay proceedings under 16 Vict. c. 180, s. 6:—Held, that replevin did not come within the Act; and the application was dismissed. Manson v. Gurnett. 2 P. R. 289

Sciure of Vessel by Revenue Authority.]—A vessel seized for breach of the revenue laws having been replevied from the collector, the writ of replevin was set aside. Scott v. McRae, 3 P. R. 16.

See also Campbell v. Lepan, 21 C. P. 363.

3. On Sale of Goods.

Conditional Delivery—Promissory Note—Jury,1—Defendant purchased some horses and a waggon from the plaintiff, at auction, the terms being that he should give his own notes at three, six, and nine months, indorsed by one W., and on his promise to give these he was allowed to take the goods. W. refused to indorse, and the plaintiff, having waited for some time without getting the notes, replevied. It was 'feft to the jury to say whether the delivery was absolute, with intent to pass the property, or conditional on defendant giving the notes, and they found for the plaintiff:—Held, a proper direction, and that the verdict was warranted. Smith v. Hobson, 16 U. C. R. 308.

Re-taking—Injunction.]—Several persons united in purchasing a printing press and material for the establishment of a newspaper to advocate certain views, and agreed with a printer that he should establish the newspaper, and should have a legal transfer of the property on paying to the several persons the sums they had respectively contributed. This agreement was acted on, and the printer paid some of the contributors accordingly. One of them, who asserted that he had not been paid, took possession of the press and material by writ of replevin:—Held, that the printer was entitled to relief in equity, and an injunction was granted to stay proceedings in the replevin suit on security being given. Devkurst v. McCoppin, 17 Gr. 572.

Payment — Set-off — Disaffirmance.] — The plaintiff, with the intention of parting with the possession and property in certain flour, made an absolute sale of same, on apparently short terms of credit, to defendant, who withheld from plaintiff his intention to pay for the flour by setting off a claim he had acquired against the plaintiff.—Held, that this did not constitute a fraud on the defendant's part so as to entitle the plaintiff to disaffirm the contract and replecy the flour. Baker v. Fisher, 19 O. R. 650. O. R. 650.

Promissory Notes—Acceptance of—Disaffirmance—Innocent Purchaser—Sheriff.]—M. by false representations induced T. to sell him a horse, buggy, and harness, and to take for them two nromissory notes. T., having discovered the fraud, demanded back his goods, at the same time throwing the notes on the table. On the assurance of M., however, that on the following Tuesday he would bring the property or satisfaction, T. again took the notes and went away. M. did not appear as he had promised, and T. sued out a writ of replevin against M., but before it had been executed M. sold the property to plaintiff, an innocent purchaser, who, having been deprived of it under the replevin, brought trover against the sheriff:—Held, that the plaintiff was entitled to recover; that the contract had not been disaffirmed when the writ of replevin issued; and that the mere issue of it was no notice to M. of disaffirmance, and could not affect the plaintiff. Held, also, following Great Western R. W. Co. v. McEwan, 28 U. C. R. 528, 30 U. C. R. 539, that the defendant, as sheriff, having taken the property out of the plaintiff's possession, could not justify under the writ of replevin. Stocser v. Springer, 7 A. R. 497.

Agreement that Property Should not Pass until Notes Paid—Sale by Vendee to Defendants—Replecia not Maintainable without Demand and Refusul.]—See Tuffts v. Mottashed, 29 C. P. 539.

Condition as to Payment—Sale to Third Person,1—Plaintiff sold to one F. certain goods, taking notes in payment, a written agreement being entered into that unless the notes were promptly paid the property should not vest. F. sold the plaintiff sclaim. The notes not being paid:—Held, that the plaintiff was entitled to replevy the goods. Weeks v. Lalor, S. C. P. 239.

Refusal of Vendor to Deliver—Property Passing — Contradictory Evidence—Jury,]—Where goods are sold so that the property passes, and the vendor refuses to deliver, replevin will lie. Defendant sold the plaintiff an ox at 35s, per ext., and received 20s, as earnest. Some days afterwards the ox was weighed at 15 ext., and the plaintiff offered 846 as the balance of purchase money, contending that by the original agreement one-third was to be taken off for offal. Defendant denied this and refused to deliver the ox, and the plaintiff thereupon brought replevin. The evidence as to the bargain was contradictory:—Held, that the jury should have been told, that if the agreement was as stated by the plaintiff he was entitled to succeed; but that if that was not clear, and defendant refused under the bona fide belief that there was to be no deduction, then they should find in his favour. O'Rourke V. Lee, 18 U. C. R. 669.

Sale under Execution — Replevia by Claimant against Purchaser,]—The Division Courts Act, s. 175, does not authorize a bailif, when a claim is made by a third person to goods and chattels seized under execution, to sell the goods and issue an interpleader for the proceeds, and thus compel the claimant to try his right merely to such proceeds, and deprive him of his goods. The claimant having proved his right to the goods—a quantity of timber—was therefore held entitled to recover in replevin against the purchaser under the execution. Reid v. McDonald, 26 C. P. 147.

4. Sale of Timber.

Possession of Land—Mixing Logs.]—L. et al., claiming certain lands in the township of Horton under a paper title, built a barn and camp in 1875, commenced and continued logging all that winter and in subsequent years. the inhabitants of the township in 1847, held for the purpose of making provision for the poor, by which certain commissioners were authorized to sell vacant lands, entered upon and cut on the lands in question some 500 trees, which he put on the ice outside and inside L. et al. 's boom, mixing them with some 900 logs already in said boom, and cut by L. et al. in such a way that they could not be distinguished. McD. then claimed the whole as his own, and resisted L. et al.'s attempt to remove them. In an action of replevin brought by L. et al. for 1,400 logs cut on said lands:—Held, that L. et al.'s possession of the lands in question was sufficient to entitle them to recover in the present action against McD., who was a wrongdoer, all the logs cut on the lands in question. McDondld v. Lane, 7 S. C. R. 462.

5. Other Cases.

Administrator — Goods Taken before Grant, —The title of an administrator relates back to the death, so as to enable him to replevy goods taken before the grant of administration. Dead v. Potter, 26 U. C. R. 578.

Agreement to Saw Lumber—Refusal to Deliver,1—A, and B, entered into an agreement to saw lumber for the plaintiff for one lar at $1.87½ per thousand feet, to be delivered on the platform outside the mill, and a person to be chosen to measure it, plaintiff to furnish the logs, and A, and B,, when not otherwise paid for cutting, to have, every month, one-third of the quantity cut piled for their security. Under this agreement the plaintiff seized and replevied a quantity of sawn lumber at the mills, A, and B, refusing to deliver it to him:—Held, that, although in the general accounts plaintiff was indebted to the defendant, still replevin would lie for the amount due the plaintiff under the agreement. Bush v. Pimlott, 9 C, P, 54.

Application of Municipal Act.]—The Municipal Act, 22 Vict. e. 99, 8, 201, which prevents actions being brought for anything done under a by-law until it has been quashed, applies only to suits for the recovery of damages, not to replevin. Wilson v. County of Middleser, 18 U. C. R. 348.

Books of Office—Proof of Title.]—Any person out of whose possession books, &c., have been taken, whether by force or fraud, or without right, may replevy under our statutes; but when the right to the custody and possession depends on the holding of an office, it should appear that the applicant does hold the office, and therefore is entitled to the books, &c. Hammond v. McLay, 10 L. J.

Booms—Proprietary Rights—Revendication—Estoppel by Conduct.]—O'S., claiming to be the legal depositary, and T. McG., claiming to be the usufructuary, of certain booms, chains, and anchors in the Nicolet river, under 36 Vict. c. 81 (Q.), which G. B., being in possession of the same for several years under certain deeds and agreements from T. McG., had stored in a shed for the winter, brought an action en revendication to repley the same and for $5,000 damages:—Held, that O'S, and T, McG, were not entitled to the possession as alleged, and that they were precluded by their conduct and acquiescence from disturbing G, B's possession. O'Shauphnessy v. Ball, 21 S, C, R, 415. See Ball v. McCaffrey, 20 S, C, R, 319.

Detention — Taking.]—Replevin will lie in this country, though there has been no wrongful taking, but a detention only is complained of, and this though the writ and declaration charge both, for every detention is a new taking. Deal v. Potter, 26 U. C. R. 578.

Equitable Title—Trust—Agent.]—Under the system of procedure in Ontario an equitable title to chattels will support an action of replevin. Carter v. Long, 26 S. C. R. 430.

Farm Bailiff—Purchaser of Stock from.] —A. agreed to manage B.'s farm, in consideration whereof B. agreed to give him, among other things, one-third of the increase of young stock raised. B. left the country and died, and A. sold all the stock upon the farm:
—Held, that he had no right to do so, and that B.'s administratrix might replevy from the vendees. Dufill v. Erwin, 18 U. C. R. 431.

Goods in Possession of Third Person—Notice—Demand.]—In trespass for taking goods the defendant justified, as sheriff, under a writ of replevin at the suit of one H, against P, alleging that he entered plaintiff's freight house, where the goods were, the outer door being open, and replevied the goods to H., the same then being in the plaintiff's possession as ballees and agents only of P, who unjustly detained them from H.:—Held, no defence; for the plea did not bring defendant within ss. 9 and 10 of the Replevin Azainst one person goods cannot be taken out of the peaceable possession of another without notice or demand. Great Western R. W. Co. v. McEwon, 28 U. C. R. 528.

Goods Subject to Lien—Tender.]—C., being indebted to defendant, assigned to him with plaintiff's consent his lien on a burgy owned by plaintiff, on which he. C., had a claim for repairs amounting to $25.25. The plaintiff subsequently demanded the burgy, but without any tender or offer to pay the lien. Upon replevin:—Held, that defendant was entitled to succeed, there being no evidence of a tender or satisfaction of the lien. Lake v. Biggar, 11 C. P. 170.

Hire of Chattel—Conditions—Agent—Right to Sue.]—Defendant in writing acknowledged the receipt from the plaintiff, described as assistant manager of the Howe Machine Company, of a sewing machine, on hire for nine months at $5 a month in advance. He agreed to pay $45, the value of the machine, in the event of its being injured or not returned; and in default of payment of the monthly rental. or the due fulfilment of the lease, or if the machine should be deemed by the lessor to be in jeopardy, the plaintiff or the company might resume possession of it; and defendant walved all right of action for trespass, damages, or replevin, by reason of any action taken by the plaintiff or the company in resuming such possession.

Coquillard v. Hunter, 36 U. C. R. 316.

Poundkeeper — Replevin against.]—See Ibbottson v. Henry, 8 O. R. 625.

Seizure of Property Already Replevied—Second Wrif.]— Defendant replevied certain account books under a writ in Crawford v. Brown, and handed them to plaintiff, but before a removal could be effected, and while the parties were yet together, a writ of replevin in McLaren v. Crawford was placed in the hands of the sheriff, who thereupon again seized the books:—Held, that the taking of property under one writ of replevin does not prevent the operation of a second writ upon the same property under 14 & 15 Vict. c. 64 and 18 Vict. c. 118. Crawford v. Thomas, 7 C. P. 63.

Taking under Warrant—Removal to Another County—Trespass—County Courts.]
—In an action of replevin brought in the county court of Haldimand for a mare taken by the defendants from the plaintiff's close in that county, removed to the county of Brant, and there detained until replevied:—Held, that the taking could not be justified under a warrant issued for the arrest of the plaintiff on a charge of stealing the mare; and, although the original taking was justified under a search warrant issued in Haldimand to search the plaintiff's premises in Haldimand for the mare, and to bring it before a justice of that county, yet the subsequent removal to the county of Brant and detention there were not, and constituted the defendant a trespasser ab initio, and therefore the county court of Haldimand had jurisdiction to replevy the goods in Brant. Hoover v. Craig, 12 A. R. 72.

Timber-Licensees in Possession - Identity of-Logs-Trespassers.]-The plaintiffs were in possession of certain timber limits under a license from the Crown, which expired in April, 1872, but it was the practice of the Crown lands department to recognize the right of licensees to a renewal, and a renewal was granted to the plaintiffs for 1572-73, and the ground rent paid in advance, the plaintiffs remaining in possession. In consequence, however, of some difficulty about the boundaries, the license did not issue until the 5th April, 1873, but it was stated to cover the period from the 20th June previous. During this period certain persons, under whom defendant claimed, entered upon the land and cut a quantity of sawlogs; and on the plaintiffs going to where they were lying in a creek or river on their limits for the purpose of marking them, they were forcibly prevented by defendant, who opened an artificial dam and caused the logs to be floated down the river, where they got mixed with some of defendant's logs. The plaintiffs then went to where the logs were, and selected the logs in question, being of the same size and description as their own logs, and marked them: —Held, that the plaintiffs might maintain replevin: that there was sufficient evidence of identity; and that, at all events, as Tortious Taking — Statute.] — Quere, could replevin be sustained in any court before the Replevin Act, upon a mere tortious taking or detention not in the nature of a distress? Foster v. Miller, 5 U. C. R. 509.

Trespass.]—Held, that, under the circumstances of this case, the plaintiff could have maintained trespass, and consequently that he could bring replevin. Cook v. Fowler, 12 U. C. R. 508.

Trover—Conversion.] — Held, that there was not sufficient evidence to constitute a conversion of the goods by the defendant in this case so as to support an action of trover, and therefore that replevin would not lie. Smalley v. Gallagher, 26 C. P. 531.

—Replevin for 900,000 feet of sawn lumber:
Pleas: non cepit; (2) goods not plaintiffs;
(3) goods defendant's. The jury found in favour of the plaintiff for 350,000 feet of lumber, and for defendant as to the remaining 550,000:—Held, that the plaintiff was entitled to the general costs of the cause, from which defendant might deduct the proportion of costs occasioned by that part with respect to which he had succeeded. Canniff v.
Bogart, 6 L. J. 59.

Scale of—Certificate.] — A certificate is necessary to obtain full costs in replevin as in other actions, though the affidavit and bond state the goods to be worth a sum above the jurisdiction of the inferior courts. Ashton v. McMillan, 3 P. R. 10.

Held, approving the last case, that in replevin full costs are not taxable without a certificate. At the trial in a county court, a verdict was entered for defendant, with leave reserved to move to enter it for the plaintiff, and no certificate was applied for. On appeal a verdict was directed for the plaintiff for 15s, and the clerk of the county court taxed only division court costs. The Judge refused a revision, and the court would not interfere. In re Coleman v. Kerr, 28 U. C. R. 297.

— Value of Goods, 1—The mere fact of the plaintiff in his declaration in replevin stating the value of the goods distrained at a higher sum than £15. does not entitle his to Queen's bench costs. He must prove at the trial that the goods are really of greater value. Wheeler v. Sime, 3 U. C. R. 265. 12

2. Damages.

Mitigation of Damages.]—The defendants were the widow of the intestate and her second husband. It was shewn that she had taken possession of and appropriated to her town use the intestate's property:—Semble, if it had been shewn that the widow had paid funeral expenses or debts of the intestate, this night have been allowed in mitigation of damages. Deal v. Potter, 26 U. C. R. 678.

Value of Goods.]—The plaintiff may recover as damages the value of any of the property in defendant's hands at the time of issuing the writ, to which the plaintiff proves his right, though not actually replevied. Rotation v. Laucson, 17 U. C. R. 494; Frontenac Division No. 2, Sons of Temperance v. Rudston, 4 L. J. 211; Deal v. Potter, 26 U. C. R. 578; Leuis v. Teale, 32 U. C. R. 100.

clies, generally, as to damages in actions of replevin is, that where the goods are promptly returned only sufficient will be given to cover the expense of preparing the replevin bond, but where the party distraining acts in a manner unnecessarily harsh or oppressive, substantial damages may be recovered. And where the sheriff was unable to replevy some of the articles mentioned in the writ, by reason of their having been lost or eloigned by the defendant, the plaintiff was held entitled to recover their value as damages; the count being in the detinet as well as in the detinit, Graham v. O'Callaghan, Russell v. O'Callaghan, R. R. 477.

3. Evidence.

(a) Under Plea of Non Tenuit.

Alienation of Estate by Landlord.]— Under non tenuit evidence is rightly received to shew that defendant had parted with his estate to another, and was no longer plaintiff's landlord. Lewis v. Brooks, 8 U. C. R. 578

Eviction.]—In replevin, under the plea of non tenuit to an avowry for rent in arrear, the plaintiff may shew an eviction. Cormack v. Bergin, 5 O. S. 561.

Payment before Distress — Mortgage.] —To an avowry setting out a mortgage and denise to the mortgager, the entity thereunder, non-entry of mortgager and non-exercise of power of sale, the permitting mortgager to continue as tenant, and that while so occupying, there was a large arrear of interest, &c., plaintiffs simply pleaded non tenuit, and under it sought to give in evidence the fact of payment of the mortgage before districtions of the payment of the mortgage before districtions of the mortgage of the mortga

Tenancy at Time of Distress.] — The plea put in issue not merely the demise pleaded, but whether the plaintiff was tenant to the avowant at the time of the distress. Elsworth v. Brice, 18 U. C. R. 441.

Variance.]-An avowry for two and a quarter years' rent, and proof of a tenancy for only one year, although the tenant continued in possession for three years, having however paid no rent nor made any acknow-ledgment during the last two years:—Held, a fatal variance on the plea of non tenuit. Thomson v. Forsyth, E. T. 3 Vict.

(b) Other Cases.

Joint Taking—Acts and Declarations.]—Defendants were the widow of the intestate and her second husband. It was skewn that she had taken possession of and appropriated to her own use the intestate's property, and its stand declarations of both defendants established that they field it together after her allowed to the standing of the condition of a joint taking. Deal v. Potter, 26 U. C. R.

Onus—Right to Begin.] — Replevin for a horse. Plea, that the horse was the horse of the defendant, and not of the plaintiff, as alleged, and issue thereon:—Held, that the plaintiff was entitled to begin. Neville v. Fox, 28 U. C. R. 231.

Place of Taking—Possession—Timber.]—Defendants took timber made by the plaintiff on land of which he was in possession, and the plaintiff replevied. The declaration alleged the timber to have been taken from lot 12, and defendants pleaded non ceperunt, and that the timber was theirs. At the trial, defendants having given evidence that the timber was not cut on lot 12, but on 13, claimed her was not cut on lot 12, but on 13, claimed a verdict without shewing any title to 13, or that they were authorized to seize the timber there; but the Judge ruled that the plaintiff, having proved possession of the timber, was entitled to recover:—Semble, that the ruling was right, for though in England the place of taking must be stated in replevin, and is material, it is different under our Replevin Act when the action is not founded on a wrongful distress. A new trial was refused, the ruling not having been objected to, or attention called to the distinction between replevin and trespass under the plea. Fitzpatrick v. Casselman, 20 U. C. R. 5.

Necessity for — Non-appearance — Notice.]—See Zavitz v. Hoover, M. T. 1 Vict., R. & J. Dig. 3308.

Place of Taking.]—See Perrin v. Conley, 14 U. C. R. 53; Fitzpatrick v. Casselman, 29 U. C. R. 5.

Venue.]—The venue in any action in replevin in a county court except for goods distrained may be changed to any other county under R. S. O. 1877 c. 50, s. 155. O'Donnell v. Duchenoult, 14 O. R. 1.

See Vance v. Wray, 3 L. J. 69.

(b) Defences-Avouries and Cognizances.

Distress for Rent — Identity of Premises.]—In an action of replevin the first count charged the defendant with taking certain goods on premises known as the "Cree-more Woollen Mills:" and the second count with taking certain goods on the premises known as the "Northern and North-Western Station at the said village of Creemore," The defendant pleaded denying the taking and the derenain preaded deriving the taking and the property, and then for a third plea set up, that one W. was tenant to the defendant of certain premises in the said village known as "Block B," and certain other premises known as the "Langtry Block;" that rent was in arrear, and because of such arrears of rent the defendant "well avowed the taking of the said goods on the said premises and justly, &c., as a distress for said rent which still remains due and unpaid:"— Held, on de-murrer, plea had; for if the "said premises" upon which the alleged taking was made were the premises set out in the plea, then the taking was on other premises than those named in the declaration, and there was no confession, and the plea of non cepit covered this defence; but if the premises named in the declaration were referred to, then defendant confessed the taking and justified for rent due for other premises, which amounted to a taking off the demised premises, so that enough was not shewn. Robins v. Coffee, 9 O.

Distress under Conviction — Warrant—Constable — Costs.] — On demurrer to an avowry justifying under a conviction for selling spirituous liquors without a license, and a distress warrant issued thereon:—Held, as to the form of the warrant, that it was unnecessary to allege that it was under seal or that it was directed to any one, it being averred to have been duly issued and delivered for execution to defendant M., the constable. Held, also, that the avowry set out in the report sufficiently shewed that defendant M. was a constable, and that it was delivered to him for execution. Held, further, that the mention in the warrant of the SI for costs of conveying defendants to gaol, could not vitiate, for it authorized a distress only for the nenalty and costs of convection. Reid v. McWhinnie, 27 U. C. R. 289.

Distress under Mortgage.]—Held, that the avowries set out in this case, justifying under a distress clause contained in a mortgage, were bad, as not alleging that the mortgage contained a provision that the mortgager should be permitted to continue in possession of the mortgaged premises, nor that he did occupy, in pursuance of such permission, at the time of the distress, or at any time. Royal Canadian Bank v. Kelly, 19 C. P. 196. Justification.]—As to the distinction between an avowry, which must shew a good title in omnibus, and a justification: see Taylor v. Jermyn, 25 U. C. R. 86.

School Rates, —In making a cognizance under a warrant of school trustees to collect school rates, it is sufficient to state that the plaintiff was duly assessed, and that the collector (the cognizor) was duly appointed; it is not necessary to state that the rate was decided upon at a meeting as required by the statute, or how the appointment was made. Gillites v. Wood, 13 U. C. R. 357.

— Budaw.]—Held, that a party arowing for distress for a school rate, the by-law for sanctioning such levy requiring to be passed upon the request or with the consent of certain persons, must shew such request or consent. Held, also, that upon such avowry the avowant must set forth the conditions precedent required by law to be compiled with before the passing of a by-law to levy a rate for school purposes. Haacke v. Marr, S C. P. 441.

Non Tenuit.]—See O'Brien v. Welsh, 28 U. C. R. 394.

Part of Goods.]—The action of replevin is divisible, and therefore a plaintiff may plead to the avowry a plea which only goes to part of the goods. Miller v. Miller, 17 C. P. 226.

Set-off.]—Set-off may be pleaded to an action for rent due under a demise, though not to an avowry for rent in replevin. McAnnany v. Tickell, 23 U. C. R. 122.

(d) Other Pleas and Replications.

Detinue—Denial—Lien.] — See Stephens v. Cousins, 16 U. C. R. 329.

Equitable Replication.]—See Reilly v. Clark, 2 L. J. 232.

Justification — Search Warrant — Judgment—Quashing,]—A search warrant issued under the Canada Temperance Act is good if it follows the prescribed form; and if it has been issued by competent authority and is valid on its face, it will afford justification to the officer executing it, in either criminal or civil proceedings, notwithstanding that it may be bad in fact and may have been quashed or set aside. A judgment on certiorari quashing the warrant would not estop the defendant from justifying under it in proceedings to repley the goods seized where he was not a party to the proceeding to set the warrant aside, and such judgment was a judgment limber partes only. Sleeth v. Hurtbert, 25 S. C.

Non Cepit—Notice of Action.]—See Folger v. Minton, 10 U. C. R. 423.

Seizure under Process.]—See Calcutt v. Ruttan, 13 U. C. R. 146; Clark v. Ruttan, 6 C. P. 97.

Not Possessed — Divisible Plea.] — See Henderson v. Sills, S C. P. 68,

See also Miller v. Miller, 17 C. P. 226; Robins v. Coffee, 9 O. R. 332.

5. Verdict and Judgment,

Bar to Future Action.]—Quere, whether a judgment in replevin could be a bar to an action for use and occupation. Crooks v. Bowcs, 22 U. C. R. 219.

Demurrer.]—In replevin, where the district court found for the plaintiff on demurrer to the first cognizance, and for defendant on demurrer to the irest cognizance, and for defendant on demurrer to his replication to one of several pleas in bar of the second cognizance, and a general judgment was given in defendant's favour, awarding damages and a return of the goods:—Held, on appeal, that such judgment was erroneous. Rea v. Gilliland, 5 O. S. 649.

Divided Verdiet. — The declaration in replevin under 14 & 15 Viet, c, 64 was for "taking and unjustly detaining" certain goods. Defendants pleaded "non ceperunt" and a special plea of lien. The evidence shewed that defendants came lawfully by the goods, but had no right to detain them. A rule for nonsuit was discharged, as the plaintiffs had succeeded on the second plea, and thereby established their right to the goods: and, semble, that although defendants had obtained a verdiet on "non cepti." yet the plaintiffs were entitled to judgment generally, such issue being either immaterial, or determined in plaintiffs' favour by proof of detention. Waters v. Ruddell, 11 U. C. R. 181.

In replevin the verdict is divisible, so that the plaintiff may recover for whatever part of the goods he proves himself entitled to, and defendant for the rest. Sills v. Hunt, 16 U. C. R. 521: Hendgraft v. Kernahan, 17 U. C. R. 341: Henderson v. Sills, S. C. P. 68. See Canniff v. Rogert, 6 L. J. 39.

Interlocutory Judgment — Default.]—
The proceedings in replevin as regards appearance were regulated by the Replevin Act, C. S. U. C. c. 29, not by the C. L. P. Act; and an interlocutory judgment signed as for want of a plen, without any appearance by or for defendant, was therefore a nullity. But see R. S. O. 1877 c. 53, s. 38. Hart v. Pacaud, 28 U. C. R. 309.

Nonsuit.]—A defendant in replevin could not move for judgment as in case of a non-suit. Brown v. Simmons. 1 U. C. R. 336.

And 14 & 15 Vict. c. 64, s. 72, does not allow it. Arnold v. Higgins, 1 P. R. 139.

6. Writ of Replevin.

Affidavit for — By schom Made.]—The deponent, not being the plaintiff himself, did not describe himself as servant or agent of the plaintiff, but used the words, "now acting for the said" (the plaintiff):—Held, that this alone would have been insufficient; but the affidavit went on to state particularly the position and quantity of the timber replevied, and other facts from which the agency might be inferred; and an application to set aside the writ was therefore refused. Arnold v. Hamilton, 1P. R. 263.

Description of Property.]—The affidavit must be sufficient to enable the sheriff by it to identify the property. Where it stated only that the plaintiff was owner of 98 trees, which, he was informed and believed, were cut on certain lots specified, and it appeared that these trees were alleged to be then in use as binders for a large raft of timber on its way to Quebee:—Held, insufficient, and the writ was set aside, Jones v. Cook, 2 P. R. 396.

Description of Goods.] — The plaintiff issued a writ of replevin directing the sheriff to replevy "two hundred and thirty sheep and lambs." unjustly detained by the defendant. On the previous day defendant had sold the property to one Gill, in whose possession it was when the seizure was made:—Held, that the above description was not sufficient, and that the articles could not be seized under the writ while they were in the possession of a person not named therein. Plaintiff was allowed to amend the description and substitute or add Gill as a defendant. Hoorigan v. Driscoll, 8 P. R. 184.

Form of.]—A writ of replevin with a justice's clause was irregular. An original writ, alias and pluries, modified in form so as to conform to the local jurisdictions, should be adopted. Cornell v. Quick, Dra. 427.

Place of Issue. —Where the goods to be replevied have not been distrained, the writ may be sued out in any county, and it may be issued from one outer county to replevy goods in another outer county. Buffalo and Lake Huron R. W. Co. v. Gordon, 3 L. J. 28.

Return to Writ.]—Return by sheriff to a writ of replevin, that the property had not been since the delivery of the writ to him in the possession of defendant, or of any person for him. Attachment as for an insufficient return with costs. Remarks as to the propriety of such return, and the sheriff's duty under the circumstances. Carveth v. Greenwood, 3 P. R. 175.

Service of.]—Personal service of the summons was unnecessary. Zavitz v. Hoover, M. T. 1 Vict., R. & J. Dig. 3308

Setting aside—Grounds.]—An objection that there was in fact no taking or detention, is no ground by setting aside the writ. Gilchrist v. Conger, 11 U. C. R. 197.

To whom Directed.]—Where the sheriff is defendant, a writ of replevin, under 14 & 15 Vict. c. 64, may be directed to the coroners, though the statute does not provide for such a case. Gilchrist v. Conger, 11 U. C. R. 197.

Irregularity—Waiver.] — In a replexin action the writ was directed to a sherifi, who was the sole liquidator of the piantiffs, and as such instituted the action:—Held, that this was at most an irregularity, and it was too late for the defendant to raise the objection after appearance. R. S. O. 1877 c. 53, s. 9, applies to the case of an application on the merits, and not for irregularity only. Quare, whether, even if the objection had been taken in time, it should have prevailed, having regard to the kind of duty the sheriff has to perform in executing a writ of replevin, and to the position of the liquidator as a mere officer under the Act. Alpha Oli Co. v. Donnelly, 12 P. R. 515.

7. Other Cases.

Appeal—Stay of Proceedings.] — Defendants having succeeded in replevin, brought against them for a schooner, the plaintiff served notice of appeal, and applied to stay proceedings for a month to perfect his security, so that defendants might not in the meantime obtain a return of the vessel. The court, however, refused to interfere. Scott v. Carveth, 20 U. C. R. 435.

Award — Promissory Note — Inconsistency — Inconsistency — Iteled, that an award, in replevin for a promissory note, that declared the defendant to have detained the note illegally, and at the same time awarded that it should be delivered up upon payment of a certain sum (which amount was due thereon) was not void for inconsistency, as it effected substantial justice between the parties. Lund v. Smith, 10 C. P. 443.

Certiorari to Inferior Court.]—Where in replevin in a county court the plaintiff shewed clearly that he had reason to believe that the title to the land would be brought in question by defendant, a certiorari was granted. Heaton v. Corneall, 4 P. R. 148.

23 Vict. c. 44 prohibits a certiorari unless the debt or damages claimed exceed $100. Quære, therefore, whether replevin is within the Act. Meyers v. Baker, 26 U. C. R. 16.

Interference by Injunction.]— This court will not interfere by injunction to restrain the plaintiff suing out a writ of replevin from taking possession of and receiving the profits derivable from the goods replevied, unless it can be shewn that complete security could not be obtained at law. By 23 Viet, e. 45, the courts of common law can impose such terms upon the plaintiff as will fully indemnity defendant in the suit from all damages he may sustain by reason of the action. Bletcher v. Burns, 9 Gr. 425.

New Trial—Costs.]—Where the court has set aside a verdict for defendant in replevin, upon the ground that he had no legal right of distress, and the jury have found a second time for defendant, the court will always grant a second new trial to the plaintiff, without costs. Sanderson v., Kingston Marine R. W. Co., 4 U. C. R. 340.

Notice of Action.]—Notice of action is not necessary in replevin. Folger v. Minton, 10 U. C. R. 423; Kennedy v. Hall, 7 C. P. 218; Applegarth v. Graham, 7 C. P. 171; Lewis v. Teale, 32 U. C. R. 108.

Notice of Trial.] — In an action of replevin ten days' notice of trial must be given, instead of eight days, as under the old practice. Wallace v. Covan, 9 P. R. 144.

Sheriff—Refusal to Execute Writ.]—The sheriff, being in possession under an attachment against an insolvent debtor, refused to execute a writ of replevin at the suit of the plaintiff, two instalments of whose mortgage on the goods were overdue:—Held, that the sheriff was liable for not executing the writ. Boys v. Smith, 9 C. P. 27. Affirmed on appeal, 6 L. J. 182.

Third Party—Examination of, by Plaintiff.]—See Bradley v. Clarke, 9 P. R. 410.

See Culham v. Love, Love v. Culham, 30 U. C. R. 410.

III. REPLEVIN BOND.

1. Action on.

(a) Cause of Action—Delay in Prosecuting Replevin Action.

Denial of Delay—Plea—Explanation of Delay—Evidence, I—olet on a replevin bond against J. C., principal, and his sureties, 4th plea, that J. C. commenced his suit without any delay, and prosecuted the same (not adding without delay), 5th plea, that J. C. commenced a suit without delay, and "from thence hitherto has prosecuted the said suit hence hitherto has prosecuted the said suit without delay; "—Held, 4th plea bad; 5th plea good, Cascell v, Catton, 9 U. C. R. 282.

Defendants pleaded that an action was commenced and prosecuted without delay, accord

Defendants pleaded that an action was commenced and prosecuted without delay, according to the true intent and meaning of the condition; and to this the plaintiffs replied that after the commencement of the action an unreasonably long time was allowed to elapse without taking any further step therein, adding a special traverse of the due diligence alleged:—Held, that under these pleadings defendant should have been allowed to give evidence of circumstances, shewing a reason for a delay of more than a year after the writ of replevin was sued out. S. C., ib. 462.

Excuse for Delay,]—Somble, that the inability of the plaintiff's attorney in replecin to communicate with his client, not knowing where he was, affords no excuse for allowing two assizes to clayse; for it is the plaintiff's delay, not that of his attorney, which is a breach of the bond. Bletcher v. Burn, 24 U.

Defendant replevied a schooner in September, 1862. Issue in fact was joined in the replevin suit in March, 1863, and issues in law also raised were disposed of in September, 1863, but nothing more was done. In February, 1864, an action was brought on the replevin bond by the plaintiff, as assignee of the sheriff, to which defendant pleaded only that he had prosecuted the replevin suit without delay. As an excuse for not going to trial at the assizes, which began on the 12th October, 1863, defendant proved that he salied in the schooner, as master, from Port Colborne, as master, from Port Colborne, as master, from Port Colborne, as master, from Port Colborne, about the 1st October, for Chicago, which he was prevented from reaching until the 25th, the usual time required for the voyage being about ten days; and that his attorneys, not knowing where he was, and getting no answer letters, countermanded the notice of trial:—Held, no excuse, for it could not be presumed that defendant's presence was necessary for the trial, nor that his attorneys were not properly instructed before he left, or were in ignorance of his going; and if they were, quere, whether it would have made any difference, for issue had been joined since March, and there had been ample time, therefore, to give all necessary information. The reason offered for not proceeding at the winter assizes in January, 1864, was, that on the 7th November, 1863, defendant filed a bill in chancery against the plaintiff and others, relating to the title to this vessel, and praying, among other things, to restrain proceedings on the plevin bond :- Held, also, no excuse. S. C., — Postponement of Trial.]—The trial of an action of replevin in a county court was, by a Judge's order, on the application of the plaintiff therein, postponed to the next sittings thereof, and subsequently the action was by Judge's order transferred to another county court. In an action on the replevin bond it was held, on demurrer, that the delay being that of the plaintiff in replevin without the consent or countyance and against the opposition of the defendant therein, the sureties to the bond were not discharged. O'Donnell v. Duchenault, 14 O. R. 1.

Stay for Want of Jurisdiction.]—A. brought replevin in the county court and obtained a verdict, which was set aside because title to land came in question. Nothing was said in the rule about a new trial, but he served another notice of trial, and the cause was made a remanet. The surety, being sued in a superior court on the replevin bond for not prosecuting the suit with effect and without delay, moved for a mandamus to compel the county court to proceed with the action, or a certiorari to remove it, and in the meantime to stay proceedings in the superior court; but the court refused to interfere. Meyers v. Baker, Hargreaces v. Meyers, 26 U. C. R. 16.

See Culham v. Love, Love v. Culham, 30 U. C. R. 410.

(b) Cause of Action-Indemnity.

Rule 1074.]—Con. rule (1897) 1074, dealing with the question of indemnity of the defendant in replevin proceedings, is the state 48 Vict. c. 13, s. 8 (O.), imported into the rules, and does not give an independent curse of action, merely adding another condition to the replevin bond required to be taken by the sheriff. Harper v. Toronto Type Foundry Co., 31 O. R. 422.

(c) Cause of Action—Not Prosecuting with Effect.

Action Undetermined — Judgment not Entered—Damages.]—To an action on a replevin bond given by a sheriff and two sureties to the coroners, conditioned to prosecute a replevin suit with effect and without delay, defendants pleaded that the suit was still undetermined. It was proved by the record that a verdict had been obtained against the principal obligor with points reserved, which also appeared by production of a special case to have been decided against him:—Held, sufficient, without shewing the entry of a judgment thereon, to entitle the plaintiff to a verdict for nominal damages. The verdict having, however, been entered for the penalty of the bond, £1,500, the court ordered it to be reduced to 1s.; otherwise a new trial. Johnson v. Parke, 12 C. P. 179.

Appeal Pending.] — Action by the assignee of the sheriff on a replevin bond, alleging a judgment in favour of defendants in the replevin suit, and non-return of the goods. Plea, that the plaintiffs in the suit applied for a new trial, which was refused, and thereupon an appeal was permitted, pursuant to 20 Vict. c. 5, and the security duly allowed, and that said appeal had been prosecuted with all reasonable speed, and was still pending:—Held, a good defence, and that the averment of the appeal having been allowed sufficiently implied that the necessary notice had been given. Becker v. Ball, 18 U. C. R. 192.

Judgment for Defendant on Some Pleas, —In replevin defendant pleaded: (1) that he did not detain the goods; (2) not guilty; (3) that the goods were not the plaintiff's. Judgment was given for defendant upon the first and second issues, and for plaintiff on the third:—Held, in an action on the replevin bond, that defendant had not prosecuted his suit with effect, and that the plaintiff (defendant in replevin) was entitled to recover his costs of defence. Mulvaney v. Hopkins, 18 U. C. R. 174.

Setting aside Writ and Proceedings.]—An order of a Judge setting aside a writ of replevin "and all proceedings thereon, subsequent to the issue thereof," admitting that it extends to the replevin bond, does not of itself absolutely annul the bond, so that to an action on it such order can be pleaded as a defence. The obligor in such case may obtain relief upon application to stay proceedings on the bond, or otherwise, on shewing that he is entitled to it, but the mere setting aside the writ of replevin by the defendant in that suit can be no reason why the bond should not be sued upon, for not prosecuting the suit with effect. Meloche v. Reaume, 34 U. Cl. R. 606.

Stay for Want of Jurisdiction.]-To a breach of the bond in not prosecuting the suit, which was in a county court, with effect defendants pleaded that the suit was brought to trial without delay, and a verdict given for defendants, with leave reserved to move for a nonsuit or verdict for plaintiff; that in the next term a rule nisi was obtained accordingly, on the argument of which defendants therein objected to the Judge proceeding further because title to land had come in question, whereupon the Judge determined that the jurisdiction of his court was ousted and declined giving judgment, and none had ever been given; and that the plaintiff in the cause then applied in chambers at Toronto for a certio-rari, which was refused:—Held, that the plea shewed no defence; for that the suit had been brought to an unsuccessful termination, and the facts of the defendants in it having caused such result by objecting to the jurisdiction could not prevent their recovery on the bond. Welsh v. O'Brien, 28 U. C. R. 405.

See Culham v. Love, Love v. Culham, 30 U. C. R. 410.

(b) Cause of Action-Non-return of Goods.

Plea—Answering only one Breach.]—Declaration, alleging that B., the planiniff in replevin, did not prosecute his suit with effect, and did not make a return of the goods. Plea, and did not make a return according to the condition, but that the plaintiff refused to accept the same:—Held, a bad plea, as answering only one breach. Golding v. Bellnap, 26 U. C. R. 163.

Return as to Part.]—Where the plaintiff in replevin succeeds only for nur of the goods replevied, and a return is adjudged as to the rest, he is liable upon the replevin bond for not prescenting the suit with effect as to the goods for which he failed, and for not returning them. Patterson v. Fuller, 31 U. C. R.

Set-off.1—To an action on a replevin bond by the assignee of the sheriff, a set-off forms a good defence, the penalty being considered as the debt. To such an action defendants pleaded, on equitable grounds, that the cordwood for which the replevin was brought and the bond given, was claimed by M. (defendant in the replevin) and it was agreed between him and the plaintiff that M. should hall the wood from where it was cut to the river, and if M. could not prove that he was entitled to the wood, the plaintiff should pay him for hauling and bankage, which amounted to $165:—Held, that this sum might be set off against the breach for non-return of the wood. McKelvey v. McLean, 34 U. C. R. 635.

(e) Damages,

Condition of Bond—Statute.]—Quere, as to the effect of 23 Vict. c. 45, s. 5, adding a new condition to the replevin bond. Semble, that it gives no right to damages not before recoverable; and it does not bring such bond within the statute of Wm. III. Bletcher v. Burn, 24 U. C. R. 259.

Costs of Defence—Additional Damage— Evidence—Jury.]—Action by the assignee of a repleyin bond for not prosecuting the suit with effect, the writ of replevin having been set aside; and for not paying the damages sustained by plaintiff by the issue of said writ, the costs incurred in setting aside the writ, and for damages for detention of vessel re-pleyied. Plea, non damnificatus. At the trial it appeared that the plaintiff had also caused the vessel to be seized on certain fi. fas. placed in the sheriff's hands prior to her being replevied, which executions were withdrawn as soon as the writ of replevin was set aside. The plaintiff wished to shew that his object in seizing under the fi. fas. was to prevent defendant taking possession of her under a writ of re plevin, but this evidence was rejected and the plaintiff was nonsuited:—Held, that the plaintiff's property having been seized under the writ of replevin, he had to take steps to defend the same, and was entitled to at least his costs of defence; what the other damages were, and whether they arose from the issuing of the writ of replevin, would be for the jury, if such damages could be recovered, the bond not containing the condition provided for in 23 Vict. c. 45, s. 5. Semble, that the evidence was rightly rejected. The statement by an attorney that he directed the seizure of goods under a fi. fa. because they were repreved:—Held, no evidence to enhance the damages in this suit. Burn v. Blecher, 14 C. P. 415.

Solicitor and Client.]—Where the avowant successfully defends a replevin suit, and subsequently institutes proceedings on the replevin bond, he is not entitled to recover as part of his damages the excess of solicitor and client costs of his defence, over and above his taxed party and party costs in that action. Semble, that the effect of R. S. O. 1877 c. 50, s. 352, is to make the Imperial Act 5 & 6 Vict. c. 97, s. 2, as to costs in cases of replevin on a distress for rent in arrear, applicable to our practice. Williams v. Croxc, 10 A. R. 301.

Penalty—Actual Damages.]—A plaintiff suing on the bond is entitled to a verdict for the penalty, but the court will not allow him to recover more than the actual damages, if assessed. Heley v. Cousins, 34 U. C. R. 63.

Reduction of Actual Loss-Set-off-Stay of Proceedings.]—The defendant's timber limits adjoined those of B. & C., but from uncertainty of description in their respective licenses, the division line was not defined. The defendant replevied 216 pieces of timber cut within a line run under instructions of the Crown timber agent, as the boundary of the defendant's limits, but, on account of the infirmity in his license, he failed in the ac-tion as to 175 pieces, for a return of which B. & C. were entitled to judgment. The lat-ter procured an assignment of the replevin ter procured an assignment of the repeats bond to themselves, and assigned it to the plaintiffs, who brought this action thereon. The court was of opinion that the timber in question was cut upon lands intended by the Crown to be within the limits of the defen-dant's license, though B. & C. had some grounds for asserting title thereto :- Held, that, there having been a breach of the condi-tion of the bond, B. & C. became entitled to recover such damages as they had sustained by replevin proceedings; that the bond, after it was assigned by the sheriff to B. & C., was a debt and chose in action assignable pursuant to the statute; and that the plaintiff, having the beneficial interest therein by as-signment, was entitled to recover; but, it being a case for the equitable interference of the court, it was directed that upon payment by the defendant of the cost incurred by B. & C. in cutting and transporting the timber up to the time it was replevied, less a set-off found for the defendant in this action (the amount to be ascertained by a reference if the defendant should so elect), further proceedings should be stayed. Bates v. Mackey, 1 O. R.

Rent Distrained for — Undertaking— Nominal Damages.]—In an action for breach of a replevin bond for not prosecuting the replevin suit without delay, the plaintiff at the trial was awarded as damages the amount of the rent distrained for. On motion in term, on defendants undertaking to bring the replevin suit down to trial at the next assizes, the damages were reduced to a nominal sum. Churchill v. Denkem, 29 C. P. 474. issu-

Value of Goods-Removal-Place of Replevin. |-In an action on the bond, against principal and sureties, the breach assigned was the non-return of a portion of the timher repleyied, for which defendants in repleyin, the now plaintiffs, obtained judgment. It appeared that the timber when replevied was on the banks of a river some distance above the point where it was intended to be shipped, and by the direction of F., the plaintiff in replevin, it was put in the possession of one L. who was F.'s general agent for looking after his lands in that part of the country, L. authorized defendant in replevin to take it down to the shipping point, where it was again taken possession of for F. by a person appointed by L. to receive it there, and shipped for F. L. had been forbidden by F. to permit this removal to the shipping point, but the defendant in replevin was not aware of it, and such removal was to the benefit of whoever might be the owner: Held, that the receipt of the timber at the shipping point by F. was a ratification on his part of the removal. Semble, that the plaintiff, though entitled therefore to recover against F. the value of the timber at the shipping point, could, as against the sureties, recover only its value where replevied. son v. Fuller, 32 U. C. R. 240.

Declaration-Form of.]-A declaration by the assignee of a replevin bond, in the form nsed in England, with an averment of a plaint made to the sheriff:—Held, bad. Hutt v. Keith, 1 U. C. R. 478.

Setting up Bond-Coroner-Judicial Notice. |- In an action on a replevin bond given by a sheriff, defendants moved in arrest of judgment, on the ground that the bond was made to and assigned by one coroner of the county:—Held, that the bond being properly set out in the declaration, and no issue as to its making or assignment being raised on the record, the court were not bound to take judicial notice that there were more coroners than one in the county, and the declaration was therefore sustained. Johnson v. Parke. 12 C. P. 179.

Plea-No Rent in Arrear. |-- In debt on the bond the declaration set out that the plain-tiff had distrained goods of H. S. N. and J. on had distrained goods of H. S. N. and J. V. N., which were claimed by the now plain-tiff, who replevied. Defendant pleaded "no rent in arrear." which was held clearly bad, as being a defence which should have been pleaded to the avowry in the original action, if at all. Meyers v. Maybee, 10 U. C. R. 200.

Payment into Court-Issue-Jury.1 -The declaration claimed damages breaches of the condition of a replevin bond, assigning as breaches the non-payment of the costs of the replevin suit, or of the writ for the return, or of the sheriff's fees, and that the goods replevied were appraised at more than the rent for which they were seized, but were depreciated before the return of the writ and sold for less. Defendant pleaded payment of money into court under an order of a Judge, and upon the authority of 23 Vict. c. 45:—Held, good. The court was also of opinion that the issue should be tried by a jury, considering the additional clause added by the late statute to the condition of the bond. Thompson v. Kaye, 13 C. P. 251.

(g) Staying Proceedings.

Chattel Mortgage — Payment.] — C. mortgaged to plaintiff the goods in his slop to secure £125. The plaintiff having taken possession of all C.'s stock in the shop, the greater portion of which was not there at the execution of the mortgage. C. replevied. This action on the replevin bond had been taken down to the county court, and the trial postponed. The court, on applica-tion, ordered proceedings to be stayed on payment of the amount secured by the mort-gage, with interest and costs. Hedley v. Closter, 13 U. C. R. 333.

Replevin Action Pending-Pleading.] —L. brought replevin for his goods, which C. had distrained for rent. While the action was pending, and before declaration, C. assignment of the replevin bond, and sued L. and his sureties thereon. Application was then made to stay proceedings in each case— in the suit on the bond, on the ground that until the determination of the action of replevin the rights of the parties on the bond could not be satisfactorily settled; and in the replevin suit because it had not been prosecuted according to the bond, of which defendants had obtained an assignment. The de-fendant in replevin moved also for leave to plead, with other pleas, that the plaintiff had not prosecuted his suit with effect and without delay, and that defendant had sued upon the replevin bond before the plaintiff had de-clared in replevin. The court refused to interfere in either case; for, as to the action on the bond, whether the replevin had been prosecuted without delay was a question of fact, which could be tried; and as to the replevin, the plaintiff was at liberty to go on and prosecute it with effect. The proposed plea was not allowed, as it could be no answer to the Culham v. Love, Love v. Culham, 30 action. U. C. R. 410.

Verdict for Penalty-Payment of Value and Costs.]—Goods seized under an execution in the hands of the debtor were replevied, under 14 & 15 Vict. c. 64, by S., claiming under an assignment from such debtor. S. failed in the replevin; and in this suit, brought by the sheriff on the replevin bond, defendant suffered judgment by default, and a verdict was rendered for the penalty. The jury havwas rendered for the penalty. The jury hav-ing found at the trial the value of the goods, the court ordered proceedings to be stayed on payment of such value into court with the costs. Quare, as to the proper method of ascertaining the value. Ruttan v. Short, 12 U. C. R. 485.

2. Assignment of.

Action by Assignee.]-The assignee of a sheriff's replevin bond under 14 & 15 Vict. 64, may sue thereon in his own name. Bacon v. Langton, 9 C. P. 410.

Joint and Several Bond - Action Parties.]—Action by the assignee of the sheriff on a replevin bond:—Semble, that, though not a case of distress for rent, the bond could be assigned; and that it was no objection, the bond being joint and several, that one of the three obligors was not made defendant. Becker v. Ball. 18 U. C. R. 192.

Sureties—Action by Assignce.]—A replevin bond entered into by the principal and three sureties is sufficiently in accordance with 4 Wm. IV. c. 7; and the assignee of such bond may sue in his own name. Meyers v. Maybee, 10 U. C. R. 200.

Witness.]-An assignment by the sheriff of a replevin bond is valid in Ontario, attested by only one witness. Semble, that a subscribing witness is necessary to its validity. Heley v. Cousins, 34 U. C. R. 63.

3. Forfeiture of.

The court will not determine summarily whether a replevin bond has been forfeited or not. Hoover v. Zavitz, T. T. 1 & 2 Vict.

4. Sheriff.

Action against, for not Assigning.]-Action against, for not Assigning. | Declaration, that the defendant, as sheriff, took from H. and two sureties a bond in $1.800 conditioned for said H. prosecuting with effect and without delay an action of replevin brought by him against the plaintiff; that H. did not so prosecute the suit, nor did he make a return of the goods; and that defendant refused to assign the bond to the plaintiff, whereby the plaintiff was hindered from suing on the bond, and deprived of the means of recovering the value of the goods and the costs, &c. Plea, as to so much as alleges that the plaintiff is deprived of the means of recovering the value of the goods, that the goods were replevied by defendant by the Great Western R. W. Co., and that the plaintiff afterwards recovered from said company the full value of such goods in an action against them as common carriers, for non-delivery of said goods:—Held, on demurrer, plea bad, for it did not shew that the plainoff was not delayed in recovering the value of the goods by defendant's refusal to assign, and it was pleaded to damages only. Paccuad v. McEwan, 30 U. C. R. 550.

Action against the sheriff for not assigning

Action against the sherin for not assistance a replevin bond. It appeared that one H. originally owned the goods replevied, which were wrongfully taken from him and sent to Windsor. There they were replevied by H. Windsor. There they were replevied by H. from the Great Western Railway Company, who held them for one P., the defendant in the replevin suit. P. assigned the goods to F. H., who sued the railway company, in the State of Michigan, and recovered their value, which the company paid. The company then sued the sheriff for taking the goods, but failed, the verdict being that the goods when replevied belonged to H., not to P. H. did plevied belonged to H., not to P. H. did not go on with the replevin suit, and P., for the benefit of the company, claimed an as-signment of the bond, which the sheriff refused to give:—Held, that only nominal damages could be recovered, for P., not being the owner of the goods, could not recover their value, S. C., 31 U. C. R. 328.

Duty to Take Bond.] - In replevin a county court Judge made an order when the writ was granted, directing the sheriff to seize writ was granted, drecting the snerm to series the goods and hold them subject to requisition by the plaintiff to replevy to him. The sheriff seized the goods, but did not take a bond as directed by R. S. O. 1877 c. 53, s. 11:—
Held, that this order did not do away with the necessity of taking a bond, and the seizure was set aside, with costs to be paid by the sheriff. Lawless v. Radford, 9 P. R. 33.

Held, that it is the sheriff's duty in replevin to take a bond with two sureties, and to use due care and to exercise a reasonable discretion in inquiring into the sufficiency of the sureties, and that when he had failed to do this, and the owner of the goods replevied, and the bailiff (defendants to the replevin suit, which had resulted in their favour) brought an action against him for damages consequent an action against him for damages consequent thereon, they were entitled to recover all such damages as naturally flowed to them from his wrongful act, viz., the rent in arrear, the costs of distress, and of the replevin suit, and of an action against the principal and sureties on the replevin bond and incidental thereto, provided the same did not exceed the penalty named in the bond; and the defendant could not excuse himself by shewing that the plaintiff in replevin and one of the sureties was worth the amount of the penalty of the bond at the time it was taken. Norman v. Hope, 13 O. R, 556, 14 O. R. 287.

5. Sureties-Discharge of.

Reference to Arbitration-Assent of Surety.]—Where, after proceedings have been commenced on the bond, the parties to the replevin go to arbitration without the assent of the surety, all further proceedings against the surety will be stayed. Aliter, where the reference is with his assent. Hutt v. Gilleland, Hutt v. Keith, 1 U. C. R. 540.

Assent of Surety-Conduct.]-An action of replevin, with all matters in difference between the parties, was referred to arbitration, and decided in favour of defendant, who then sued the sureties on the re-plevin bond. On motion to stay proceedings, on the ground that they were discharged by the reference, defendants swore that they had not consented to the reference, and the plaintiffs in answer shewed that they were aware of it and did not object, but attended at the arbitration, and that one of the defendants had asked the plaintiff's attorney for time:-Held, that, as consent, on these affidavits, could not be assumed, defendants were discharged; and the rule was made absolute. Burke v. Glover, 21 U. C. R. 294.

Release of One-Effect of-Sheriff.]-A release by plaintiff to one of several obligors in a replevin bond to the sheriff, after an assignment to the plaintiff, releases all: and having released the sureties, the plaintiff cannot sue the sheriff for taking insufficient sure-ties. Kirkendall v. Thomas. 7 U. C. R. 30.

Trial—Postponement—Assent of Surety.]
—Where the trial of the replevin had been postponed at the instance of defendant. but without the direct assent or concurrence of the sureties:—Held, that the bail was discharged. I. COURTS—JURISDICTION OF.

Before the A. J. Act — Common Law Courts. |—In debts due to the Crown, which would be cognizable in the court of exchequer in England, this court may give relief, when it appears that "in law, reason, or good conscience, the debtor ought not to be charged." Regina v. Bonter, 6 O. S. 551.

Held, that the equitable jurisdiction in matters of revenue in this Province, at the suit of a subject, resides in the superior courts of common law if at all, and not in the court of chancery. Norvich v. Attorney-General, 9 Gr. 563; Miller v. Attorney-General, 9 Gr. 558.

[By R. S. O. 1897 c. 51, s. 29, the high court of justice has the like equitable jurisdiction in matters of revenue as the court of exchequer in England possessed on the 18th March, 1865.]

Court of Chancery.] — Held, affirming the decree in 25 Gr. 233, without determining whether the A. J. Act extends to Crown cases generally, that under s. 32, and under s. 155 of 31 Vict. c. 8 (b.), the attorney-general is entitled to sue in the court of chancery for the recovery of excise duties, even if it be a purely legal debt. Held, also, that ss. 43 and 44 of 31 Vict. c. 8 (b.) do not restrict the right of the Crown to sue in respect of frauds committed upon the revenue to the period of one year, or prevent a recovery in a court of law, unless a special investigation has been held in pursuance of the Act. Attorney-General v. Walker, 3 A. R. 195.

Exchequer Court of Canada—Penalty—Admiralty.]—The jurisdiction conferred upon the vice-admiralty courts in Canada by s. 113 of the Illiand Revenue Act, R. S. C. c. 34, in respect of actions for penalties prescribed by such Act, is not disturbed by the Colonial Courts of Admiralty Act, 1890

(Imp.) The latter Act (s. 2, s.-s. 3) vests the jurisdiction of the vice-admiralty courts in any colonial court of admiralty, and by the Admiralty Act, 1891, the parliament of Canada made the exchequer court the court of admiralty for the Dominion, and by s. 9 thereof confers upon the local Judges in admiralty all the powers of the Judge of the exchequer court with respect to the admiralty jurisdiction thereof. The Queen v. The Annie Allen, 5 Ex. C. R. 144.

Penalty — Customs—Discretion.]—
The penalty enforceable under the provisions of s. 192 of the Customs Act in the exchequer court is a pecuniary one only, and the other remedies open to the Crown thereunder cannot be enforced in the exchequer court. 2. The court has no discretion as to the amount of the penalty recoverable under such enactment. The Queen v. Fitzgibbon, The Queen v. Thouret. 6 Ex. C. R. 383.

Reference—Minister of Customs—Evidence.]—Where a claim has been referred to the exchequer court under s. 182 of the Customs Act, the proceeding thereon, as regulated by the provisions of s. 183 of the Act, is not in the nature of an appeal from the decision of the minister; and the court has power to hear, consider, and determine the matter upon the evidence adduced before it, whether the same has been before the minister or not. Tyrrell v. The Queen, 6 Ex. C. R. 169.

See Julien v. The Queen, 5 Ex. C. R. 238, post II. 5.

II. CUSTOMS DUTIES.

1. Generally.

Power to Impose.]—The colonial legislature has power to impose duties of customs, to punish infringement, to enforce payment, and to resort to forfeiture if necessary. Regina ex rel. Attorney-General v. Brunskill, 8 U. C. R. 546.

2. Exemptions from Duty.

Jate Cloth.]—In construing a clause of a Tariff Act which governs the imposition of duty upon an article which has acquired a special and technical signification in a certain trade, reference must be had to the language, understanding, and usage of such trade. By item 673 of R. S. C. c. 33, jute cloth "as taken from the loom, neither pressed, mangled, calendered, nor in any way finished, and not less than forty inches wide, when imported by manufacturers of jute bags for use in their own factories," was made free of duty. By item 261 of such Act, it was provided that manufactures of jute cloth, not elsewhere specified, should be subject to a duty of 20 per cent, ad valorem. The claimants, who were manufacturers of jute bags, had for a number of years imported into Canada jute cloth cropped after it was taken from the loom. Item 673 was susceptible of several interpretations, one of which was that the jute cloth so cropped should be entered free of duty, and in this construction the importers and the officers of customs had concurred during such period of importation: — Held, that, inasmuch as the cloth in question had been, in good faith, entered as free of duty and manufactured into Quere, whether the words used in s. 183 of the Customs Act (as amended by 51 Vict. c. 14, s. 34) "the court. . shall decide according to the right of the matter," were intended by the legislature in any way or case to free the court from following the strict letter of the law, and to give it a discretion to depart therefrom if the enforcement, in a particular case, of the letter of the law, would, in the opinion of the court, work in justice? Dominion Bag Co. v. The Queen, 4 Ex. C. R. 311.

"Shaped "Lumber.] — Under item (departmental No.) 726 in schedule "C," of the Tariff Act, 1886, oak lumber sawn, but not "shaped, planed, or otherwise manufactured." may be imported into Canada free of duty. The plaintiff imported a quantity of white oak lumber from the United States, which had been sawn to certain dimensions so as to admit of it being used in the manufacture of railway ears and trucks without waste of material, but yet before being used for such purpose had to be recut and fitted:—Held, that the lumber, being merely sawn to such dimensions as would enable it to be worked up without waste, was not. "Shaped" within the meaning of the Tariff Act, and was not dutiable. Magann v. The Queen, 2 Ex. C. R. 64.

Steel Rails for Railways—Temporary Purpose.] — Steel rails weighing twenty-five pounds per lineal yard, to be temporarily used for construction purposes on a railway, and not intended to form any part of the permanent track, cannot be imported free of duty under item 173 of the Tariff Act of 1887 (50 & 51 Vict. c. 39). (2) In virtue of cl. 13 of the Customs Act (R. S. C. c. 32) the court beld that such rails should pay duty at the same rate as tramway rails (under 50 & 51 Vict. c. 39, item SS), to which of all the enumerated articles in the tariff they bore the strongest similitude or resemblance. Sinclair v. The Onecn. 4 Ex. C. R. 275.

Steel Rails for Street Railways.]—Although there may be in various Canadian Acts, and for other purposes, substantial distinctions between railways or railway tracks and street railways and tramways, yet, for the purpose of separating free and dutiable articles, such distinction is not maintained in 50 & 51 Vict. c. 39 (D.) and its three predecessors. According to the true construction of that Act (see s. 1, item 88, and s. 2, item 173), the question whether imported steel rails are taxed or free depends solely upon their weight, not upon the character of the railway track for which they are intended. Judgments in 4 Ex. C. R. 224 and 25 S. C. R. 24 reversed. Too. onto R. W. Co. v. The Queen, [1896] A. C. 551.

3. Fraud, Undervaluation, and Smuggling.

(a) Fraudulent Entries.

Acting on Declaration — Subsequent Sciure. — Where goods subject to an ad valorem duty have been entered at a port in this Province upon the importer's own declaration of value, which the collector had accepted and acted upon, the same goods cannot afterwards be seized by the collector of another port as having been undervalued upon their entry with the first collector. Regina v. Jagger, 3 U. C. R. 255.

Goods which have passed the custom house upon importation, and been taken into the interior, are still liable to seizure if it should appear that they have been fraudulently undervalued, but not for defects of form, such as the want of a permit, Wile v. Cayley, 14 U. C. R. 285.

False Declaration — Pleading.] — The second count charged that the goods were not truly described in the entry for duty, in this, that the value for the duty stated in the entry was not the actual cash value in the markets in the country where the importer purchased them, without adding that such untrue description and undervalue was made with intent to evade the payment of duty: —Held, count bad, for that the mode of calculating the value for duty as required by 12 Viet. c. 1, s. 6, not being complied with, was in itself no ground, without the further allegation of design to evade the payment, of forfeiture under 10 & 11 Viet. c. 31, s. 18. Regina ex rel. Attorney-General v. Brunskill, 8 U. C. R. 546.

Information for the condemnation of goods seized. The second count set forth that the goods were entered with the proper officer of customs—that in such entry they were valued at £ s. d., and that they were in and by such entry undervalued (not pointing out whether in reference to the domestic or foreign market value), with intent to avoid payment of duty, &c.:—Held, sufficient after verdict. Regina v, Brunskill, 8 U. C. R. 546, followed. Regina v, Hibbard, 3 C. P. 451.

False Invoices.]—Defendants residing in the United States, having contracted, by letter, with McP. & Co., of Toronto, to sell them brooms, laid down in Toronto, duty free, shipped the brooms to Toronto, and sent an invoice to their agent in Toronto valuing them at or near manufacturers' prices, and much under the price at which they were sold to McP. & Co. The brooms being entered for duties at the customs house, Toronto, at such undervalue:—Held, that such goods were liable to be seized, as being entered below the actual cash value in the markets of the country from which they were exported, and that such value was not to be taken to be the manufacturers' wholesale prices, but the sale prices in the markets whence the goods were exported. Attorney-General v. Thompson, 4 C. P. 548.

Machinery—Constituent Parts—Completed Article.]—G., manufacturer of an "automatic sprinkler," a brass device composed of several parts, was desirous of importing the same into Canada with the intention of putting the parts together there and putting the completed articles on the market. He interviewed the appraiser of hardware at Montreal, explained to him the device and its use, and was told that it should pay duty as a manufacture of brass. He imported a number of sprinklers and paid the duty on the several parts. There was little or no labour performed on the sprinklers in Canada. The customs officials caused the sprinklers to be seized, and an information to be laid against him for smuggling, evasion of payment of duties, undervaluation, and knowingly keeping and selling goods illegally imported, under ss. 153 and 150 constant of the commentation of sprinkleders completed articles by G., and, the Act not imposing a duty on parts of an article, the information should be dismissed. Held, also, that the subsequent passage of an Act 48 & 49 Vict, c. 61, s. 12, re-enacted by 49 Vict, c. 80, s. 11, imposing a duty on such parts, was a legislative declaration that it did not previously exist. Grinnell v. The Queen, 16 S. C. R. 119.

Manufactured Cloths-False Invoices-Forfeiture.]—Claimants were charged with a breach of the Customs Act by reason of fraudulent undervaluation of certain manufactured cloths imported into Canada. The goods were imported in given lengths cut to order. and not by the roll or piece as they were manufactured. The invoices on which the goods were entered for duty, shewed the prices at which, in the country of production, the manufacturer sells the uncut goods to the wholesale dealer or jobber, instead of shewing the fair market value of such goods cut to order in given lengths when sold for home consumption in the principal markets of the country from which they were imported. The values shewn on the invoices were further reduced by certain alleged trade discounts for which there was no apparent justification or excuse :- Held, that the circumstances amounted to fraudulent undervaluation; and that the decision of the controller of customs declaring the goods forfeited must be confirmed. [Leave to appeal to supreme court of Canada re-fused.] Schulze v. The Queen, 6 Ex. C. R.

Medicines-Constituent Parts-Value.]-Some time before the Dominion of Canada was constituted, the J. C. A. Co., manufac-turers of proprietary medicines in the United States, established a branch of their business in St. John's, P.Q., and commenced to import from the United States certain articles required in the preparation of their medicines. These articles were in the form of liquid compounds, and were valued for duty under the provisions of the Act 29 & 30 Vict, (C.) c. 6, s. 11, then in force, at the aggregate of the fair market value of the several ingredients entering into the compounds so imported, with the addition of all the costs and charges of transportation. These ingredients, after arrival in Canada, were mixed, bottled, and sold under various names. The import entries were made under the rates of duty fixed by the customs authorities in virtue of the provisions of the said Act, they being fully aware of the purposes to which the articles import-ed were to be applied. The company continued to import such goods in this way for upwards of twenty years, except some alterathose they were called upon to make in the valuation for duty of certain liquids in 1883, when, on the 22nd May, 1885, the Dominion customs authorities seized large quantities of their manufactured medicines, and caused an information to be laid against the company for smuggling, evasion of the payment of duties, undervaluation, and for knowingly keeping and selling goods illegally imported, contrary to the provisions of the Customs Act, 1883:—Held, that there was no importa-tion of goods as compounded medicines ready for sale, and that the duty having been paid upon the fair market value, in the place of exportation, of the ingredients of which the liquid in bulk were composed, there was no foundation for the seizure. (2) Where the constituent parts or ingredients of a specific article are imported, their value for duty within the meaning of ss. 68 and 69 of the Customs Act, 1883, is not the fair market value of the completed article in the place of exportation, but is simply the fair market value there of the several ingredients. The form in which the material is imported constitutes the dis-criminating test of the duty. (3) Notwithstanding the interpretation clause in the Customs Act, 1883, which provides that Customs laws shall receive such liberal construction as will best insure the protection of the revenue, &c., in cases of doubtful interpretation the construction should be in favour of the the construction should be in layour of the importer. (4) Where an importer openly im-ports goods and pays all the duties imposed on them at the fair market value thereof in the place of expertation at the time the same were exported, he has not imported such goods with intent to defraud the revenue, simply because he had the mind to do some thing with them which, had it been done in the country from which they were exported, the country from which they were exported, would have enhanced their value, and, consequently, made them liable to pay a higher rate of duty, but which, in fact, was never done before the goods came into his possession after passing the customs. The Queen v. Ayer Co., 1 Ex. C. R. 232.

Oils-Undervaluation-Seizure-Notice -Waiver-Deposit-Penalty-Prescription.] -The suppliants, who were manufacturers of oils in the United States, sold some of their oils in retail lots to purchasers in Canada. The price of such oils to the consumer at Rochester was taken as a basis upon which the price per gallon to the Canadian purchaser was made up, but the goods were entered for duty at a lower value—two sets of invoices being used, one for the purchaser in Canada, and the other for the company's broker at the port of entry:—Held, that the oils were under-(2) The suppliants, having estab valued. (2) The suppliants, naving established a warehouse in Montreal as the distributing point of their Canadian business, exported oils from the United States to Montreal in wholesale lots. The invoices shewed treal in wholesale lots. The invoices shewed prices which were not below the fair market value of such oils when sold at wholsesale for value of such offs when sold at wholesale for home consumption in the principal markets of the United States:—Held, that there was no undervaluation. (3) When goods are pro-cured by purchase in the ordinary course of business, and not under any exceptional circumstances, an invoice correctly disclosing the transaction affords the best evidence of the value of such goods for duty. In such a case the cost to him who buys the goods abroad is, as a general rule, assumed to indicate the market value thereof. It is presumed that he buys at the ordinary market value. (4) It is not the value at the manufactory or place of production, but the value at the prinplace of production, but the value at the principal markets of the country, i.e., the price there paid by consumers or middlemen to dealers, that should govern. Such value for duty must be ascertained by reference to the fair market value of such or like goods, when sold in like quantity and condition for home consumption in the principal markets of the country, whence they are exported. Penalty—Information—Scienter.]—In an information for a penalty under the Customs Acts. for knowingly harbouring smuggled goods, the scienter is a proper question for the jury; and such information should specify the particular illegal act, as that the goods were imported without the payment of duty, &c. and should expressly shew that the offence charged was contrary to the statute. If a quantity of smuggled goods be purchased at one time, but seizures of them are made at different times, only one penalty for harbouring them can be recovered. The Queen v. Launond, The Queen v. Easton, 2 U. C. R. 196.

Survepor of Customs—Witness—Information—Harbouring Perty's One Goods.]
—Finder the Imperial Act S & 9 Vict. C. 33, 83, the surveyor of customs, normally entire the curveyor of customs, read the party either "seizing or informing," is not entitled to a share of the penalty, and is therefore a competent witness upon an information for a penalty for harbouring smuggled goods. Attorney-General v. Warner, 5 C. C. R. 485.

Quere, would an information lie under the 63th clause of that Act, where the party informed against was shewn not to have transported or harboured goods of another, but his own goods, smuggled by himself on his own account? S. C., 7 U. C. R. 399.

(c) Sale or Carriage of Goods Smuggled or Fraudulently Undervalued.

Carrier—Negligence—Defence—False Invoices, —It is no ground of defence to a common carrier by water for not carrying goods safely from a foreign country, or on a ciaim for general average, that the owner of the goods had prepared false invoices to defraud the revenue laws of this Province, Grousette v. Ferrie, M. T. 6 Vict.

Defendant Particeps Criminis—False Invoice |—Where merchants residing in the United States sold goods to defendant, and combined with him in furnishing false invoices to evade the revenue laws of this Province in respect of the amount of duties to be paid on the importation of such goods:—Held, that the plaintiffs could not recover their value from defendant in this country. Mullen V. Kerr, 6 O. S. 171.

of tea which had been smuggled for him by the plaintiff, and the jury were directed to find for the defendant if they believed that such was the consideration given, and they found a verdict for the plaintiff for the amount of only one of the noies—the court refused to grant defendant a rule nisi for a new trial. Becbee v. Armstrong, H. T. 6 Vict.

Where in assumpsit on bills of exchange, and for goods sold, the defence was that the bills had been given for the price of goods bought from the plaintiffs in a foreign country, and which they had assisted defendant in smuggling into this country, and some evidence was given to that effect, but the jury found for the plaintiffs,—the court refused to grant a new trial. Wallbridge v. Foliett, 2 U. C. R. 280.

Knowledge of Plaintiff.]—Where, in an action for goods sold, the defence to which was that the goods were smuggled, it was doubtful (the verdict being general for plaintiff), whether the jury understood that the plaintiff knew that the goods were contraband—the court granted a new trial. Seucell v. Richmond, Tay. 423.

Presumption.]—Quere, whether a foreigner forwarding prohibited goods to a place in the United States so situated as to furnish a strong presumption that they would be smuggled, can maintain an action for the price of such goods. Sawyer v. Manahan, Tay, 315.

Set-off.—False Invoices—Defendant Particeps Criminis.,—Plaintiffs had been in the habit of selling oil to defendants, the terms being payment on delivery free on board at St. John's, New Brunswick, and double invoices had been frequently sent to them, one giving the real selling price and the other less. It was not clear whether this was done at defendants' request or not, but they had written to the plaintiffs on one occasion, in giving an order, to "send invoices as before." In an action for the price of certain oil defendants endeavoured to set off the value of eight barrels which they had previously orappeared that when the plaintiffs' agent wrote toping this for the plaintiffs' agent wrote to have been defended in the second of the plaintiffs' friends, R. and S., at Portland, with instructions to include it in the bond and entry with the other lots sent to Mesers. J. T. & Co., at Montreal, forwarding agents, to pay the duties and forward to them. Plaintiffs accordingly wrote to R. and S. to do so, and this with the other lots consigned to R. and S. were entered upon an invoice of the whole furnished by the plaintiffs under the selling price, and seized by the collector at Montreal. The jury were directed that, if the eight barrels were undervalued by the plaintiffs without defendants' privity or consent, in order to defraud the customs, the defendants might set off the price which they had paid for them, but that if defendants were concerned in the fraud they could not:—Held, that the direction was right, and the evidence warranted a verdict for plaintiffs. New But Bernsteic Oil Works Co. v. Parsons, 20 U. C. R. 531.

Hlegal Importation—Stress of Weather.]—Under a plea of not imported in manner and form, &c., to an information for the condemnation of goods as illegally imported, evidence may be given that they were landed through stress of weather. Attorney-General v. Spafford, Dra. 333.

Unlading before Due Entry — Invoices, I—Information for the condemnation of certain goods. The first count charged the unlading of goods before due entry, contrary to the statute, &c., whereby they became forfeited:—Held, that it was not necessary to aver that the unlading was to avoid the duties, nor that there was no sufferance; that the meaning of the statute is, that no goods shall be unladen without entry, nor after entry, except at some place where an officer is appointed. Held, also, that the entry of goods on invoices not the invoices of sale to the importer in the country where he purchased (which are not such as the law requires him to produce) and an entry without the oath the law requires, is not a due entry necessary to give the right to unlade. Regina cx rel. Attorney-femeral v. Brunskill, 8 U. C. R. 546.

4. Officers-Actions against.

Acting Officer—Votice of Action—Trespass—Forfeiture—Time.]—A person who, acting as a revenue office, or conceiving that he has authority so to act, seizes goods, is entitled to notice, without the necessity of proving his commission or appointment. Wadsworth v, Murphy, 1 U. C. R. 190.

Defalcations of Deputy Collector—Libility of Collector—Ond.]—A., having been appointed collector—Ond.]—A., having been appointed collector of customs, gave a bond to Her Majesty, conditioned for the discharge of his duties as collector, and to account for and pay over moneys which should come into his hands; and having received written instructions that all entries were to be made by him, all permits were to be granted and signed only by him, and payment of all duties to be made by him, except under certain circumstances:—Held, that, having permitted the deputy collector rightfully to assume and perform duties intrusted to him alone, he was responsible under his bond for defalcations of said deputy. The Queen v. Stanton, 2 C. P. 18.

Refusal of Permit to Laud Goods—Forfeiture.]—If dutable goods be brought by inland navigation to a port of entry and there entered, and the goods are afterwards landed without a permit, they are liable to seizure, but the vessel in which they were brought is not. And if the duties on dutiable goods be offered to a collector, and he refuses to grant a permit, either on the ground that the sum tendered is insufficient in amount, or for any other reason which may not be tenable, if the goods be afterwards landed without a permit they are liable to forfeiture, and the only remedy for the owner is by action against the collector for the injury which he may suffer by the refusal of the permit. McKenzie v.
Kirby, 6 O. S. 416.

Sciure of Goods—Certificate—Protection.]—Where a claim for goods seized was brought before the commissioners of customs, under 4 Geo. IV. c. 11, and they restored the property to the claimant, without any trial or verdict passing upon the matter but save a certificate to the officer who had seized that there was a probable cause of seizure, such certificate however not being entered of record in any way:—Held, in trespass against the officer for the seizure, that the certificate afforded him no protection, either under the Previncial statute 4 Geo, IV. c. 11, s. 27, or the Imperial statute 3 & 4 Wm. IV. c. 59, s. 72. Leuis v. Kirby, 1 U. C. R. 486.

Trespass — Case.]—Trespass — Case.]—Trespass cannot be maintained against a custom house officer for seizing goods as forfeited, upon grounds which, if they existed, would justify such seizure, if the was misled by false information, or acted maliciously, case is the proper remedy; but no action will lie while the legality of the seizure is still undetermined. Wile v. Cayley, 14 U. C. R. 285.

Seinne of Vessel — Notice of Claim—Condennation—Folue.]—On the 7th June defendant, a collector, swized the plaintiff's vessel for a breach of the revenue the plaintiff's plaintiff petitioned the government, and to the 7th July received an answer from defend-ant, informing him that they had refused to interfere. On the 8th the plaintiff served a notice of claim:—Held, that the notice of claim required by s. 48 of 10 & 11 Vict. c. 31, to be given within one calendar month from the day of seizure, could not be waived by any representation of defendant to the plaintiff; (2) that no notice having been given within the time allowed, the vessel was thereby condenned; and that by the act of seizure the plaintiff was deprived of his right of property, and therefore unable to maintain trespass; (3) that in this case it was not necessary that the value of the vessel should be determined by the jury. Dame v. Carberry, 10 U. C. R. 374.

Port Regulations.]—A collector of customs at a port of entry has no power to direct that all vessels and boats coming from a foreign country by inland navigation, shall come to report at a particular place within the port; and, although it is necessary that all goods, whether dutiable or not, shall remain on board until a permit is granted to land them, yet the horses and carriages of travellers may be landed without any permit, after the arrival of the vessel in which they have been conveyed has been reported to the collector; and if the collector should seize the

5. Seizure of Vessels.

Cargo - Harbour - Report - Forfeiture Procedure.]—Where nothing has been done by the master to shew an intent to defraud the customs, a vessel entering a port for shelter, before reaching a place of safety there, has not "arrived" at such port within the meaning of 40 Vict. c. 10, s. 12, within the meaning of 40 Vict, c. 10, s. 12, so as to justify seizure of her cargo for not reporting to the customs authorities. (2) Where false statements are made by the master regarding the character of the cargo and port of destination of his vessel, which would subject him to a penalty under s. s. 2 of s. 12, 40 Vict, c. 10, they cannot be relied on to support an information claiming forfeiture of the cargo for his not having made a report in writing of his arrival as required by s.-s. 1 of s. 12 of the said Act. (3) That s. 10 of 44 Vict. c. 11, amending ss. 119 and 120 of 40 Vict. c. 10, merely provides a pro-cedure to be followed when the customs department undertakes to deal with questions of penalties and forfeitures, and does not divest the Crown of its right to sue for the same in the manner provided by ss. 100 and 101 of 40 Vict. c. 10, even where departmental proceedings have been commenced under the said provisions of 44 Vict. c. 11, s. 10, (4) That, even if ss. 100 and 101 of the said Act, 40 Vict. c. 10, had been repealed by the later statute, the Crown could proceed by inform ation in rem at common law, and this right could not be taken away except by express words or necessary implication. The Queen v. MacDonell, 1 Ex. C. R. 99.

Controller's Decision — Reference to Court — Petition of Right — Jurisdiction — Damagez.] — The controller of customs had made his decision in respect of the seizure and detention of the vessel under the previsions of the Customs Act, confirming such seizure. The owner of the vessel, within the thirty days mentioned in the 181st and 182nd sections of the Act, gave notice in writing to the controller that his decision would not be accepted. No reference of the matter was made by the controller to the court, as provided in s. 181, but the claimant presented a jettlom of right, and a flat was granted. The Crown objected that the court had no jurisdiction, to entertain the petition, and that the only procedure open to the claimant was upon a reference by the controller to the court:—Held, that the court had jurisdiction, (2) Damages cannot be recovered against the Crown for the wrongful act of a customs officer in seizing a vessel for a supposed infraction of the customs law; but the claimant is entitled to the restitution of the vessel. Julien v. The Queen. 5 Ex. C. R. 238.

Replevin.]—A vessel seized for breach of the revenue laws having been replevied from the collector, the writ of replevin was set aside. Scotts v. McRae, 3 P. R. 16.

See McKenzie v. Kirby, 6 O. S. 416, ante 4; Dame v. Carberry, 10 U. C. R. 374, ante 4.

6. Value of Goods and Amount of Duty.

High Wines—Proof—Measurements.]— High wines imported into this Province were liable to a duty under 18 Vict. cc. 5, 81, on each gallon according to the strength of proof by Sykes's hydrometer, and not according to the gallon by measurement. Lane v. Jones, 5 C. P. 467.

Time for Assessing Duty—Importation, when Complete.]—By the time construction of the Customs Tariff Act, 1895, which in effect directs that duty be paid upon raw sugar "when such goods are imported into Canada or taken out of warehouse for consumption therein," the date at which duty both attaches thereto and becomes payable is when the goods are landed and delivered to the importer or to his order, or when they are taken out of warehouse, if instead of being delivered they have been placed in bond. Section 150 of the Customs Act, 1886, which directs that the precise time of the importation of goods shall be deemed to be the time when "they came within the limits of the port at which they ought to be reported," refers on its true construction to the port at which they goods are to be landed—that is, where the effective report is to be made. Such construction is required in order to place a consistent, rational, and probable meaning on the context and other clauses of the Act. Canada Sugar Refining Co. v. The Queen, [1858] A. C. 735. See S. C., 5 Ex. C. R. 317, 27 S. C. R. 395.

Watch Cases—Value—Misrepresentation—Costs.]—The rule for determining the value for duty of goods imported into Canada, prescribed by ss. 58 and 59 of the Customs Act, R. 8. C. c. 32, is not one that can be universally applied. When the goods imported have no market value, in the usual and ordinary commercial acceptation of the term in the country of their production or manufacture, or where they have no such value for home consumption, their value for duty may be determined by reference to the fair market value for home consumption of like goods sold under like conditions. Vacuum Oil Co. v. The Queen, 2 Ex. C. R. 234, referred to. (2) The goods in question were part of a job lot of discontinued watch cases, and at the time of their sale for export were not being bought and sold in the markets of the United States. They could be purchased for sale or use there, but only at published prices, which were greater than any one would pay for them. The claimants bought the goods for export at their fair value, being about half such published prices. They let their agent in Canada know the prices paid, but withheld from him the fact that the purchase was made on the condition that the goods were to be exported. The agent, without intending to deceive the cusp aid were those at which the goods could be had in the United States when purchased for home consumption. The representation was untrue. On the question of the alleged undervaluation the Court found for the claimants, but, because of such misrepresentation, without costs. Smith v. The Queen, 2 Ex. C. R. 417.

7. Other Cases.

Bond for Goods Seized—Form of.]—Declaration on a bond from O. M. and others to E. W., collector of customs, &c., for and on behalf of her Majesty, conditioned—after reciting the seizure of certain goods belonging to said O. M. and that said O. M. was desirous of bonding said goods until the decision of the government should be made thereon,—that if the seizure should not within thirty days be declared illegal by the governor in council, then the obligors should pay to the said E. W., collector as aforesaid, or &c., the sum of, &c.:—Held, that the bond was good on the face of it, being taken for and on behalf of the Queen, and no prescribed form of bond having been given by the statute. Webster V. Macklem, 4 C. P. 266.

Carriage of Goods-Delay-Imposition of Duties-Damages-Evidence.]-The declaration charged defendants, in the first count, on a contract to carry certain wool from Cobourg to Boston within a reasonable time, subject to certain conditions indersed on a receipt given by defendants—amongst others, that defendants should not be responsible for damages occasioned by delays from storms, accidents, or unavoidable causes-and alleging as a breach the neglect to carry. In the second count the contract was stated to be to carry within a reasonable time, and that the wool should be imported into the States before the 17th March, when the reciprocity treaty would expire. Breach, that defendants did not so carry, by which the plaintiffs were disabled from importing the wool into the States, unless upon payment of duties. The wool was sent as far as Prescott, where it was to cross the St. Lawrence, but not having been sent over to Ogdensburg by the 17th. the plaintiffs gave no further instructions, the planning gave no further instructions, and it remained at Prescott:—Held, that though, if a special contract to deliver within the United States by the 17th had been proved, the duty, if paid by the plaintiffs, proved, the duty, it paid by the platitins, might have been recovered as damages, yet it was their duty to enter the goods and pay it, and they could not hold defendants responsible for delay occasioned by their default. The witness called to prove the imposition of a duty in the United States after the 17th March, derived his knowledge only from printed circulars:—Held, insufficient. Fraser v. Grand Trunk R. W. Co., 26 U. C. R. 488.

Condemnation of Goods Seized—Claim—Time.]—Where a collector had seized goods in May. 1847, and filed his information upon it in 1848:—Held, that such goods might be taken as condemned, if no claim should be made within a month after notice of the information published as directed by s. 58 of 10 & 11 Vict. c. 31. Davidson v. Brethom, 8 U. C. R. 219.

Customs Export Bonds—Penalties—Enforcement—Law of Quebec.)—The provisions of s. 8 of 8 & 9 Wm. III. c. 11. affecting actions upon bonds, do not apply to proceedings by the Crown for the enforcement of a penalty for breach of a customs export bond.

Two customs export bonds were entered into by warehousemen at the port of Montreal, P.Q. Upon breach of the conditions of the bonds the Crown took action to recover the amount of the penalties fixed by such bonds: —Held, that the case must be determined by the law of the Province of Quebec, and that under that law carts, 1036 and 1135, C. C. L. C.) judgment should be entered for the full amount of each bond. The Queen v. Finleyson, 6 Ex. C. R. 202.

Drawback-Materials for Ships-Refusal of Minister - Remedy - Order in Council.] By the Customs Act, 1877 (40 Vict. c. 10), s. 125, cl. 11, it was enacted, inter alia, that the governor in council might make regulations for granting a drawback of the whole or part of the duty paid on materials used in Canadian manufactures. 1881, by an amendment made by the Act 44 Vict. c. 11, s. 11, the governor in council was further empowered to make regulations for granting a certain specific sum in lieu of for granting a certain specific sum in fiel of any such drawback. (See also the Customs Act, 1883, s. 230, cl. 12, and R. S. C. c. 32, s. 245 (m)). By an order of the governor-general in council, dated the 15th May, 1880, it was provided as follows: "A drawback might be granted and paid by the minister of customs on materials used in the construction of ships or vessels built and registered in Can-ada, and built and exported from Canada under governor's pass, for sale and registry in any other country since the 1st day of January, 1880, at the rate of 70 cents per registered ton on iron kneed ships or vessels classed for 9 years, at the rate of 65 cents per registered ton on iron kneed ships or vessels classed for 7 years, and at the rate of 55 cents per registered ton on all ships or vessels not iron kneed." By an order in council of the 15th November, 1883, an addition was made to the rates stated "of ten cents per net registered ton on said vessels when built and registered subsequent to July, 1893:" Held, that a petition of right would not lie upon a refusal by the controller of customs upon a retusal by the controller of customs to grant a drawback in any particular case. Semble, that the provision in an order in council that the drawback "may be granted" should not be construed as an imperative direction; it not being a case in which the authority given by the use of the word "may" is combol with a lowed during the control of the word "may" is combol with a lowed during the second of the word "may". is coupled with a legal duty to exercise such authority. Matton v. The Queen, 5 Ex. C.

Goods in Customs Warehouse—Assignment for Creditors.]—As to certain goods belonging to the assignor, but lying in the customs warehouse subject to duties, no change of possession having taken place, and no compliance being shewn with the formalities required by the Customs Act, 10 & 11 Vict. c. 31:—Held, that such goods did not pass by the assignment. The statute requiring registration does not apply to such goods, as they are not capable of delivery, and they would therefore have passed if the directions of the Customs Act had been followed. Harris v. Commercial Bank of Canada, 16 U. C. R. 437.

Liability of Goods to Duty—Teas—Transit through United States.]—The plaintiffs made two shipments of tea from Japan to New York for transportation in bond to Canada. In one case the bills of lading were marked "in transit to Canada;" in the other

e plaina Japan bond to ng were he other the tens appeared upon the consular invoice, made at the place of shipment, to be consigned to the plaintiff's brokers in New York for translipment to Canada. On the narrival of both lots at New York, and pending a sale thereof in Canada, they were allowed to be sent to a bonded warehouse as unclaimed goods for some five or six months and were inally entered at the New York customs house for transportation to Canada, and forwarded to Montreal. There was nothing to shew that the plaintiffs at any time proposed to make any other disposition of the teas, and there was nothing in what they did that contravened the laws and regulations of the United States or of Canada with respect to the transportation of the goods in bond:—Ifed, alimning the judgment in 2 Ex. C. R. 120, that as it clearly appeared that the rea was never entered for sale or consumption in the United States; that it was shipped from there within the time limited by law for goods during transit to remain in a warehouse; and that no act had been done changing its character in transit; it was therefore "tea imported into Canada from a country other than the United States but passing in bond through the Linited States," and under s. 10 of the Act relating to duties on customs, it. S. C. e. 33, not liable to duty as goods exported from the United States to Canada. But see 32 Vict. c. 14 (D.) Carter, Macy, etc., v. The Queen, 18 S. C. R. 706.

Lien of Crown for Unpaid Duty—Assignment for Creditors.]—On the 3rd February, 1887, B., a coal merchant, made an asary, 1887, B., a coal merchant, made an assignment to the plaintiff for the benefit of his creditors under 48 Vict, c. 26 (O.), and there passed thereunder to the plaintiff a quantity of coal in B.'s yards. By permission of the customs department, B., on giving security therefor to the Crown, had sold, before the assignment, certain other coal, imported by him, without first paying the duty upon by him, without first paying the duty upon it:—Held, that there was nothing in the Customs Act, R. S. C. c. 32, nor in law, giving the Crown the right of lien upon the coal assigned to the plaintiff, for duty payable by B. in respect of the other coal sold by him. (2) That the issue of a writ of extent by the Crown against B. on the 19th February, 1887, for the recovery of the duty so payable in respect of such other coal would have availed the Crown nothing so far as the property assigned to the plaintiff was concerned, for it could not have been seized under such excould not have been seized under such ex-tent, having previously become vested in the plaintiff. (3) That the claim of the Crown for the duty payable by B. in respect of such other coal was not payable by the plaintiff out of the proceeds of the property assigned to him in preference to the claims of other creditors: the principle that when the right of the Crown and the subject come into competition, that of the Crown is to be preferred in any case, has now no existence in Ontario, because the effect of R. S. O. 1887 c. 94 is to do away with any distinction between debts due from the subject to the Crown and debts due from subject to subject, and to place them all upon the same footing. Such principle, although it has been applied to winding-up proceedings instituted under statutes in which the Crown is not bound, and where the property was not divested out of the Crown debtor, is not applicable to estates in bankruptcy or assigned in trust for creditors. Clarkson v. Attorney-General for Canada, 15 O. R. 632, Penalty—Rescue of Goods Sciced.]—In a qui tam action for penalties under the Imperial statute 6 Geo. IV. c. 114, for rescuing goods seized, which gives one-third of the penalty to the King, one-third to the licutenant-governor, and one-third to the informer, the court refused to arrest judgment because the plaintiff claimed the penalty for himself and the King only, not naming the licutenant-governor. An action of debt will lie on that statute to recover the penalty. Jones q. t. v. Chace, Dra. 322.

Sale of Dutiable Goods—Liability for Duty—Usage of Trade.]—Plaintiffs bought from defendant certain coal, shiped to defendant at Toronto from a foreign port, and then lying on board a vessel in the Welland Canal. A sale note was given, stating only the quantity and price, and the time by which it was to be taken out of the vessel:—Held, that defendant was not obliged to pay the import duties. Held, also, that evidence was rightly admitted to shew the usage of the trade on sales made under such circumstances. Brown v. Browne, 9 U. C. R. 312.

Tariff Act—Retrospective Operation.]—Section 4 of the Tariff Act, 1895 (58 & 59 Vict, c. 23), provided that "this Act shall be held to have come into force on the 3rd of May in the present year, 1895." It was not assented to until July:—Held, that the goods imported into Canada on 4th May, 1895, were subject to duty under said Act. The Queen v. Canada Sugar Refining Co., 27 S. C. R. 395. See S. C., 5 Ex. C. R. 177, [1898] A. C. 735.

III. INLAND REVENUE.

Brewer's License.]—A brewer licensed as such by the government of Canada, under 31 Vict. c. 8 (D.), requires no license under the Tavern and Shop License Act of Ontario, 32 Vict. c. 32, s. 1, as amended by 33 Vict. c. 28, for selling ale manufactured at his brewery. Regina v. Scott, 34 U. C. R. 20.

Duty on Spirits—Extent of — Non-payment—Evidence.]—On an information, under 27 & 28 Vict. c. 3, against defendant as a distiller, for the non-payment of duty on spirits manufactured by him. Theld, that defendant was liable to pay duty upon all spirits manufactured by him, not merely on such as had been measured and ascertained in the manner pointed out by the statute; for the obtaining the duty on all spirits manufactured is the main object of the Act, and the provisions for ascertaining the quantity, &c., are only auxiliary thereto. (2) It was proved by one A. that he sold, as agent for defendant at Montreal, between the days mentioned in the information, 159,008 gallons more than appeared on the credit side of defendant's stock books, and on which duties had been paid; and a number of invoices of these sales, which were produced, represented the spirits to be 50 over proof. Moreover, A. said that large quantities of spirits had been consigned to him direct, and it was to be gathered from the evidence that deliveries had been made to the purchasers direct from the conveyance by which they had been sent by defendant:—Held, that from this evidence, unanswered in any way, the jury were warranted in finding against defendant for the duty on that quantity. Held, also, that s.-s. 2 of s. 14 of 29 Vict. c. 3, throwing the proof of payment of duty on defendant, was pro perly treated as applicable, though after the period for which duties though passed claimed; for it related only to matter of evid-ence and procedure. Held, also, that a judg-ment in defendant's favour, on a previous information against him for penalties for not making true entries of the spirits taken from the close receiver and brought into his distillery, and of the number of gallons disposed of by him, between the days mentioned in this information, was properly rejected as evidence for him in this cause: for there was nothing to connect the spirits on which duties were claimed here with those taken from the receiver, and making true entries of the spirits disposed of by him would not prove payment of the duties. Attorney-General v. Halli-day, 26 U. C. R. 397.

Returns of Distillers-Inquiry-Fraud -Action.]-The Inland Revenue Act, 31 Vict. c. 8, s. 44, cl. 6, provides for inquiries being instituted for any period not more than one year before the inquiry is commenced, for the purpose of testing the truth of the returns made by distillers to the government :- Held. that this did not prevent proceedings at the instance of the attorney-general being in-stituted afterwards, on the discovery of frauds having been perpetrated in making such re-turns. Attorney-General v. Walker, 25 Gr. Walker, 25 Gr. 233. See S. C., 3 A. R. 195.

Seizure of Spirits-Native Manufacture -Permit-Reasonable and Probable Cause.] -Plaintiffs manufactured in Montreal some Old Tom gin, &c., which they sold and shipped to Guelph, to J. & H., no permit accompany-The casks were branded as if manufactured in London, England; but the invoice received by the consignees from the plaintiffs and handed to the officers, shewed that the goods came from the plaintiffs, and described the plaintiffs as distillers, &c. The defendants, as officers of inland revenue, seized and detained the goods for want of a permit, but subsequently, upon its being shewn at Ottawa that the goods were manufactured from spirits which had paid duty, they, by instructions, offered to release the goods on payment of the costs of seizure :- Held, that Old Tom gin was spirits, within the Inland Revenue Act, 31 Vict. c. 8 (D.): for the admixture of flavouring essences, &c., did not deprive it of its character, and, whether imported or manufactured in Montreal, a permit was required.
(2) That, under the circumstances set out, defendants had reasonable and probable cause for believing the goods were being unlawfully removed, and for seizing them. (3) That the seizure being so justified, and no permit obtained, the refusal to deliver up except on payment of the costs, could not make defen-dants liable. Winning v. Gow, 32 U. C. R.

Slide and Boom Dues-Statutes-Regulations.] - Inasmuch as the provisions and enactments relating to tolls in 31 Vict. c. 12 are in substance and effect the same as those contained in c. 28 of the Consolidated Sta-tutes of Canada, under which the regulations relating to timber passing through the slides were made, in virtue of the provisions of s. 71 of 31 Vict. c. 12, such regulations are in effect to be construed as having been made under the later statute. Merchants Bank of Canada v. The Queen, 1 Ex. C. R. 1. Reversed by the Supreme Court, Cassels' Dig. 636.

Statutory Offence - Conviction - Appeal.]-Held, that an appeal would lie to the quarter sessions from a summary conviction, under the Inland Revenue Act, 31 Vict. c. 8, under the Inland Revenue Act, 31 vict. c. 8, 8, 130, for possessing distilling apparatus without having made a return thereof, for that such conviction was for a crime, and therefore not within C. S. U. C. c. 114. In re Lucas and McGlashan, 29 U. C. R. S1. See Regina v. Boardman, 30 U. C. R. 553.

Conviction - Justice's Return -Penalty.]—Section 165 of the Inland Revenue Act, 31 Vict. c. 8 (D.), prescribes that "the pecuniary penalty or forfeiture incurred for any offence against the provisions of this Act. may be sued for and recovered before any two or more justices of the peace, and any such penalty may, if not forthwith paid, be levied by distress, . . or the said justices may in their discretion commit the offender to the common gaol until the penalty . . be paid." The plaintiff, who was tried under the above Act for distilling spirits without a license, before the defendant and three other ustices of the peace, and was ordered to pay $200, sued defendant for not making a return thereof under R. S. O. 1877 c. 76:—Held, that the defendant was liable, as the adjudication in question was a conviction within the meaning of R. S. O. 1877 c. 76, and not a mere order for the payment of money. May q. t. v. Middleton, 3 A. R. 207.

IV. SUCCESSION DUTY.

Executors-Legacies-Residue.] - A testator devised and bequeathed all his real and personal estate to his executors and trustees for the purpose of paying a number of pecuniary legacies, some to personal legatees, and others to charitable associations, and provided that the residue of his estate should be divided pro rath among the legatees :- Held, that it was the duty of the executors to deduct the it was the duty of the executors to deduct the succession duty payable in respect of the pecuniary legacies, before paying the amounts over to the legatees, and they had no right to pay such succession duty out of the residue left after paying the legacies in full. Kennedy. Protestant Orphans' Home, 25 O. R.

Liability for — Property in Another Province — Testator's Domicile — Surrogate Courts.]-The Judge of a surrogate court has jurisdiction to determine whether a particular estate of which probate or administration is sought, is liable or not to pay succession duty, sought, is hable or not to pay succession duty, and the amount of such duty; his decision being subject to appeal. Where a decensed person had his domicile, prior to and at the time of his death, in another Province, and the value of his property in Ontario is under $100,000, although his whole estate, including property in the Province of his domicile, exceeds $100,000, and his whole estate in this Province is by his will devised and bequeathed to his wife and children, the property in this Province is not liable to pay succession duty. Present and Future Interests - Annuity.] — Where a restator divides up his estate so as to create present and future estates or interests, the duty under the Succession Duty Act, 1892, 55 Vict. c. 6 (O.), is to be assessed on the whole estate at the time of his death, including both the present and future estates or interests, but duty is only payable at the death or within eighteen months thereafter on the present estates or interests; the payment of duty on the future estates being deferred until they become estates in posses sion or enjoyment, and the duty then payable is not the duty fixed at the time of the death, but that assessed upon the value of such estates or interests at the time the right of possession or enjoyment accrues. In compossession or enjoyment accrues. In computing the duty on an annuity payable on a testator's death, and of which there is present actual enjoyment, the duty thereon must be assessed on its then cash value; on a deferred assessed on its their cash value, on a deterred annuity, duty is payable when the right to enjoy it commences. Duty is also payable on the capital producing an annuity, when it becomes distributable as legacies or as part of the final distribution of the estate. Attorney-General v. Cameron, 27 O. R. 380.

Capital - Final Distribution.] Held, in addition to the findings reported in this case in 27 O. R. 380, that, under the Suc-cession Duty Act, 55 Vict. c. 6 (O.), the duty payable on the capital was deferred until the final distribution thereof, which was the time when the moneys under the directions of the will reached the hands of the persons who should become entitled thereto, and that the duty then payable would be on the amount then actually distributed, whether increased by accumulations, or by the rise in value of lands or securities, or decreased by loss. Attorney-General v. Cameron, 28 O. R. 571.

Tribunal for Deciding Disputes. |-When the provincial treasurer and the parties interested do not agree as to the suc-cession duty payable, the question must be settled by the tribunal appointed by the Act. settled by the tribunal appointed by the Act, namely, the surrogate registrar, with the right of appeal given by the Act. The high court has no jurisdiction to decide the question upon a case stated. The court of appeal refused, therefore, te entertain an appeal from the judgments in 27 O. R. 380 and 28 O. R. 511. Attorney-General v. Cameron, 26 A. R. 103. (See Re Renfrew, 29 O. R. 565, ante.)

R. S. O. 1807 c. 24, debts are to be deducted. The O. 1897. c. 24, debts are to be deducted. The duty to be paid by the person who takes is on the value of the estate which he takes, at the time of taking. Sums bonh fide paid by executors for the purpose of settling claims against them as such, must be considered debts for the purpose of administration and of ascertaining the amount of succession duty. Where executors, erroneously and in ignor ance of the existence of claims, overvalued the estate and paid succession duty for which the estate would not have been liable had the amount of such claims been deducted therefrom, they were held entitled to recover back from the Crown the amount of the duty wrongly paid. Ross v. The Queen, 32 O. R.

REWARD.

Condition Precedent - Conviction of Crime.]—A reward of $100 was offered by de-fendants to any person giving such information as would lead to the conviction of the murderer or murderers of certain persons therein named :-Held, that the actual tion of the party accused was a condition precedent to the recovery of the reward, and that the accused having committed suicide while in gaol awaiting his trial, it could not be recovered. Fortier v. Wilson, 11 C. P. 495.

County Corporations—By which Payable.] — The prisoner hired a horse in the county of York to go to Aurora and Stouff-ville in that county. It was not shewn whether he had been at those places, but he afterwards sold the horse in the county of Waterloo, where he was arrested for stealing it, and convicted:—Held, that the award for his apprehension, under 36 Vict. c. 48, s. 396 (O.), was payable by the county of Waterloo; and a mandamus was ordered to the Judge of that county to sign an order upon the treasurer in favour of the applicant, who had apprehended the prisoner. Semble, that the evidence did not establish a theft in the county of York. In re Robinson, 7 P. R. 239.

Powers of Township Corporation.]—
Township municipalities have no power to expend any portion of their funds in rewards for the apprehension of felons. Where, therefore, a township corporation offered and promised to pay a reward of $500 for the arrest and conviction of the persons guilty of a murder, it was held that such promise was not binding upon them. RULES OF COURT.

English Rules.]—All rules of English practice to date, M. T. 4 Geo. IV., are adopted in this Province. Doe ex dem. Burger v. —, Tay. 363.

Heading of Rules—Effect of.]—Con. rule 5 provides that "the division of these rules into chapters, titles, and headings is for convenience only and is not to affect their construction:"—Held, that con. rule 1008, not-withstanding the heading "Summary Inquiries into Fraudulent Conveyances," is not limited to cases of equitable interests arising under fraudulent conveyances, but applies to a case where a judgment creditor is seeking to make available the interest of his debtor under an agreement for the purchase of land. A reference was directed to ascertain what interest the debtor had in the land in question. Wood v. Hurl, 28 Gr. 146, not followed owing to the change of law by con. rule 5. Peters v. Stoness, 13 P. Proceedings in Opposition to Rule— Subsequent Amendment.]— Proceedings cannot be sustained which are in direct opposition to the terms of a rule of court, though the terms of such rule be not in accordance with the order of the court, through a mistake of the clerk; and such proceedings cannot be supported by a subsequent amendment, the effect of which is not retrospective. Doe d. Burnham v. Simmonds, 7 U. C. R. 588.

Future Delivery — Bought and Sold Notes, —Bought and sold notes for goods to be delivered may be treated as an actual sale, though the one party has not at the time a specific lot of the article in his possession, and actually set apart for the particular vendee. Bunksilt v. Chumacor, 5 U. C. R.

Receipt for Goods—Construction.]—
The plaintiff, a farmer, on leaving wheat with defendants, who were millers, took the following receipt signed by them:—"Received from W. I. in store 296 bush., 5 lbs., No. 2 Treadwell wheat, fire accepted; price to be set on or before 1st August next." It was proved that the word "accepted was intended for "excepted;"—that the wheat was placed in a separate bin, and kept apart from defendants' wheat; and that nothing further occurred between the parties until the 28th August, when it, with the mill, was destroyed by fire:—Held, that the agreement did not by itself import a sale; that there was nothing in the evidence to shew that a sale was intended; and that the plaintiff, therefore, could not recover. Isaacv. Andrews, 28 C. P. 40.

Right of Repurchase—Time for Payment.]—Plaintiff and defendant made the following agreement: "I, S. (the defendant), give $20 to M. (the plaintiff) for the colt which I have in possession, but I promise to give back the colt to M. if he will pay the same sum, with 12 per cent, interest, on or before the 1st May, 1860. If not paid, the colt will be the property of S.; then he can do with it as he likes, or keep it for himself." The plaintiff paid defendant $15, but failed to pay the balance, and in September, 1867, defendant sold the colt; whereupon the plaintiff brought trover:—Held, that the transaction was in effect a sale with right of repurchase, not a mortgage; and that the plaintiff was gone. The defendant, therefore, was held not liable in trover; and the plaintiff was allowed to recover the $15 paid by him, as money had and received. Moore v. Sibbald, 29 U. C. R. 487.

Timber—Agreement to Manufacture into Lumber—Possession.]—K. B. made an agreement with T. for the purchase of the output of his sawmill during the season of 1896, a memorandum being executed between them to the effect that T, sold and K. B, purchased all the lumber that he should saw at his mill during the season, delivered at Hadlow wharf, att Levis: that the purchasers should have the right to refuse all lumber rejected by their culler; that the lumber delivered, culled, and piled on the wharf should be paid for at prices stated; that the seller should pay the pur-chasers $1.50 per hundred deals. Quebec standard, to meet the cost of unloading cars, classification, and piling on the wharf; that the seller should manufacture the lumber according to specifications furnished by the purchasers; that the purchasers should purchasers; that the purchasers should make payments in cash once a month for the lumber delivered, less two and a half per cent.; that the purchasers should advance money upon the sale of the lumber on condition that the seller should, at the option of the purchasers, furnish collateral security on his property, including the mill and machinery belonging to him, and obtain a promissory note from his wife for the amount of each cullage, the advance being made on the culler's certificates, shewing receipts of logs not exceeding $25 per hundred logs of fourteen inches standard; that all logs paid for by the purchasers should be stamped with their name; and that all advances should bear interest at the rate of 7 per cent. Before the river drive commenced, the logs were culled and received on behalf of the purchasers, and stamped with their usual mark, and they paid for them a total sum averaging $32.33 per hundred. Some of the logs also bore the seller's mark, and a small quantity, which were buried in snow and ice, were not stamped, but were received on behalf of the purchasers along with the others. The logs were then allowed to re-main in the actual possession of the seller. During the season a writ of execution issued against the seller under which all movable property in his possession was seized, including a quantity of the logs in question, lying along the river drive and at the mill, and also a quantity of lumber into which part of the logs in question had been manufactured, at the seller's mill:—Held, that the contract so made between the parties constituted a sale of the logs, and, as a necessary consequence, of the deals and boards into which part of them had been manufactured. King v. Dupuis, 28 s. C. R. 388.

Transfer of Bill of Lading—Pleigec—Warranty—Failure of Consideration.]—The plaintiffs sued a bank to recover the price paid the bank for certain goods which, owing to a customs seizure and forfeiture, the plaintiffs never received. The bank were never in actual possession of the goods, but a bill of lading was indorsed to them as a security for advances, and this bill of lading was indorsed and delivered by the bank directly to the plaintiffs. The jury found that it was the bank who sold the goods to the plaintiffs; that they professed to sell with a good title: that they professed to sell with a good title: that they professed to sell with a good title: that they plaintiffs could not by any diligence have obtained the goods—Held, that upon these findings and the evidence, and having regard to the provisions of the Bank Act, R. S. C. c. 120, the transaction must be regarded as a sale by the bank as pledgees with the concurrence of the pledgor, and not as a mere transfer of the interest of the bank under the bill of lading; and that the plaintiffs were entitled to recover the price as upon an implied warranty of title and a failure of consideration. II. CONTRACT OF SALE.

1. Conditional Sale.

(a) Conditions as to Payment and Property not Passing.

Default—Demand of Possession—Conversion by Landlord.]—The plaintiffs sold to U. & Co. certain wheels, &c., to be used in their manufactory, under a written agreement, whereby it was stipulated that the right and property to the goods should not pass to them until the whole price thereof was paid, the right of possession merely passing; such right to be forfeited and the plaintiffs to be at liberty to resume possession in case of &fault in the payments being made, or in case of seizure for rent, &c., or upon any attempt by U. & Co. to sell or dispose thereof without the consent of the plaintiffs, it being expressly declared that the sale was conditional only, and punctual payment of the instalments being essential to its existence. U. & Co. placed the machinery in the flume belonging to their factory, which was held by them under a lease from H. & Co., and subsequently the sheriff having seized other chattels belonging to U. & Co., the plaintiffs demanded the wheels of H. & Co., Pofault having been made by U. & Co., the plaintiffs demanded the wheels of H. & Co., which demand H. & Co. refused to comply with, assigning as a reason that they had not possession thereof, and in

- Replevin.]-By an agreement signed by defendant he acknowledged the receipt from plaintiffs on hire at $6 per month of a piano, valued at $300, which he was to pay the plaintiffs if it were destroyed or not returned to them on demand in good order, &c. It was agreed that defendant might purchase it for this sum by two payments of $150 each on the lst of July and November respectively, but until payment of the whole purchase money it was to remain plaintiffs' property on hire by defendant, and on default in the purchase money, or of the monthly rental, plaintiffs might resume possession, although there might have been a part payment of the purchase money or a note or notes given therefor, the agreement for sale being conditional and punctual payment being essential to it; but, if so assumed by plaintiffs and returned in good order, any sum received on account of purchase money beyond the amount due for rent and expenses incurred was to be repaid. Defendant gave two notes for $150 each, payable at the dates mentioned in the agreement, and shortly after the maturity of the first note paid $50 on account of it; and subsequently, on being pressed by the plaintiffs, he gave them a mortgage on some lands, which the plaintiffs received as collateral security for the amount then due, reserving their rights under the agreement. The piano rerights under the agreement. mained with the defendant over two years, nothing being paid on the mortgage or any further sum on account of the notes or for rent. Defendant swore that he had bought the piano before he signed the agreement :-Held, that under the agreement the property in the piano remained in the plaintiffs until the payment of the amount fixed as the purchase money; that there was nothing in the evidence to shew any contrary intention; and that default having been made, the plaintiffs might replevy. Mason v. Johnson, 27 C. P.

- Resuming Possession - Force.]-Where machinery was sold upon the terms expressed in a hire receipt that "the title of and right to the possession of the above mentioned property, wherever it may be, shall remain vested in the said vendor and subject to his order until paid for in full:"—Held, that the vendor or his assigns had the legal right (the purchase money being in arrear and un-paid) to enter upon the premises where the property was, in order to resume actual possession of the machinery, giving notice and using all care in so doing, but that it would be illegal for him to take possession by force, and an injunction might properly issue to restrain acts of force on behalf of the vendor, but only on the terms that the assignee of the vendee he likewise enjoined from using force in resisting the vendor. Before taking possession of the machinery the vendor was orsession of the machinery the vendor was or-dered to give such security as is usual in re-plevin. Traders Bank of Canada v. Brown Manufacturing Co., 18 O. R. 430.

Into Freehold.] — See Lainé v. Béland, 26 S. C. R. 419. Seizure — Resale—Action for Deficiency.]—After default in payment by the purchaser of a machine under an agreement whereby the property was not to pass until payment in full, with a provision that on default the whole price should fall due, and that the vendors should be at liberty to resume possession, nothing being said as to resale, the vendors seized the machine and resold it, and, after crediting the proceeds, brought this action to recover the balance of the original price:—Held, that by the resale the original agreement had been put an end to, and that the plaintiffs had no right of action. Sauyer v. Pringle, 20 O. R. 111, 18 A. R. 218.

- Seizure - Resale - Judgment -Claim for Deficiency.]-The defendants purchased machinery from a company under a conditional contract of sale, in writing, providing that the property should remain in the company until payment of the price in full, with the right to resume possession and resell on non-payment, but without any provision that in such latter event the purchase money was to be applied pro tanto, and the defendants remain liable for any balance. On default, after certain payments had been made, the company obtained judgment on notes which had been given for the purchase money, and subsequently seized and sold the machinery, and, applying the proceeds, sought and were allowed to prove a claim in the master's office for the balance due on the judgment :-Held, that the whole matter was examinable in the master's office, although judgment had been recovered, and, as consideration for the judgment had disappeared by the intentional act of the company in taking possession and selling, the claim should have been disallowed. Sawyer v. Pringle, 18 A. R. 218, followed. Arnold v. Playter, Waterous Engine Works Co.'s Claim, 22 O. R. 608.

Effect of Condition-Price-Damages. -On the 7th September, 1875, the plaintiff orally agreed with the defendant to sell to him a cab, horses, &c., for $1,900-$500 in cash, and the balance in four notes at three, six, nine, and twelve months; the defendant also to give a chattel mortgage on the property as security for the payment of the notes, erty as security for the payment of the notes, and the plaintiff undertaking not to put another cab on the route, &c. For the $500 the defendant gave his note, which stated that it was given in part payment of the property, and was to be paid before the 11th instant. The goods were not delivered to the defendant, but remained with the plaintiff, who continued to use them as before. Defendant stated that there never was any concluded bargain be-tween them, but that the agreement was entered into and the note given merely condi-tionally on the defendant being able afterwards to carry it out; but in a written notice served by defendant on plaintiff, repudiating the contract, this ground was not stated, but only that the contract had been obtained by fraud. &c. The plaintiff also stated that the intention of the parties was that the property intention of the parties was that the property was to pass to defendant, but to remain in plaintiff's possession until the terms of the agreement were fulfilled:—Held, that the effect of the evidence was, that the property was not to pass until the agreement was fulfilled; that the plaintiff therefore could not deter the total the property. claim the full purchase money, nor could be recover on the note, for, being part of the ex-ecutory contract, as between the parties, it fell with the contract. Held, however, that there was a concluded bargain between the parties, and that the plaintiff was therefore entitled to the damages, $250, which had been assessed for its breach. Gleason v. Knapp, 26 C. P. 553.

Loss of Goods by Fire — Liability.]—
The plaintiffs sold and delivered certain machinery to the defendant, receiving part of the price in cash and part in notes, and by the contract of sale it was provided that no property in the machinery should pass to the defendant until it was paid for. The machinery was destroyed by fire before the notes were paid. In an action on one of the notes:—Held, that the defendant had the possession and use of the machinery and an interest in it; that there was not a total failure of consideration for the note or a partial failure which was ascertained; and that the plaintiffs were entitled to recover. Goddic and McCulloch Co. v. Harper, 31 O. R. 284.

Manufactured Article — Vendor's Lica — Conditional Sales Act.]—The lien of an unpaid vendor of a manufactured article is not invalidated if, without his direction or connivance, the purchase paints out or obliterates the name and address of the vendor, which were, pursuant to the Conditional Sales Act, 51 Vict. c. 19 (O.), properly marked on the article at the time of the conditional sale. Semble, that an instrument in the form of a promissory note with conditions thereunder written is an instrument evidencing a conditional sale within the first and sixth sections of that Act. Wettlaufer v. Scott, 20 A. R. 652.

Transfer of Rights under Hire Receipts.]—The purchaser of a piano under a hire receipt (by which the property was to pass to him only on completion of certain payments on account), before he had paid the required sum agreed with his wife that she should purchase his interest and pay the balance due the vendors. There was no bill of sale registered nor such change of possession as is required by the Bills of Sale and Chattel Mortiage Act, R. S. O. 1897 c. 148:—Held, that the transaction was invalid as against execution creditors under s. 37 of that Act, and was not within s. 41, s.-s. 4, which is intended to except only conditional sales of chattels within R. S. O. c. 149, which this was not. Held, however, that the wife was entitled to be subrogated to the rights of the vendors of the piano to the extent of the payments made by her. Eby v. McTavish, 32 O. R. 187.

Validity of Condition.]—A suspensive condition in an agreement for the sale of movables, whereby, until the whole of the price shall have been paid, the property in the thing sold is reserved to the vendor, is a valid condition. Banque D'Hochelaga v. Waterous Engine Works Co., 27 S. C. R. 409.

Vendor's Lien—"Interest" in Goods— Distress,]—An agreement upon the sale of certain machinery and other goods contained a provision that until the balance of the purchase money should be fully paid, the vendor should have a vendor's lien on the goods for such balance, and that no actual delivery of such property should be made, nor should possession be parted with, until such balance and interest should be fully paid. After the sale the vendee took possession of the goods, and subsequently, on the 1st April, 1890, with the assent of the vendor, who surrendered a former lease, the defendants leased to the vendee the premises upon which the goods were situated. Afterwards, and while the balance of the purchase money was still unpaid, the defendants distrained for rent upon the goods in question;—Held, that the stipulation in the agreement for a vendor's lien was inappropriate and inconsistent and must be read out as mere surplusage; and, so reading the agreement, the transaction was one of conditional sale, and, under 57 Vet. c. 43 (O.), only the interest of the tenant in the goods could be distrained on. Varrall v. Beard, 27 O. R. 349.

See Mason v. Bickle, 2 A. R. 291; Nordheimer v. Robinson, 2 A. R. 305; Thomas v. Inglis, 7 O. R. 588; Frye v. Milligan, 10 O. R. 509; Discher v. Canada Permanent L. and S. Co., 18 O. R. 273.

See post 5 (a).

(b) Conditions as to Shipping.

Arrival of Goods.]—A contract for the sale of goods "to arrive" does not constitute a conditional contract rendering the vendor hable only on the condition of the arrival of the goods, except perhaps where the goods are either in transit in a named vessel or about to be shipped at a named port in some particular manner. In the case of a sale of iron to be made in Scotland:—Held, upon the evidence, that the sale was absolute, and not subject to any condition as to the arrival of the goods. Fleury v. Copeland, 46 U. C. R. 26.

Name of Consignee—Materiality.]—The plaintiff purchased a quantity of lambs from the defendant, to be consigned to plaintiff's firm at Buffalo, which condition plaintiff street he inserted in the contract "to help our business. — and to help build the firm up," the firm being a new one. Defendant disregarded theirs can be defended to accept delivery. In an action for the deposit paid at the time of the contract and for damages:—Held, that the term of the bargain as to the matter of consignment was a university part of it; material to the plaintiff, as the defendant knew well; and, following Bowes v. Shand, 2 App. Cas. 455, that the plaintiff must succeed. Norrington v. Wright, 115 U. S. R. 188, specially referred to. Melcan v. Brown, 15 O. R. 313, 16 A. R. 106.

2. Description of Goods.

Construction of Contract—Tender.]—
The plaintiff sued defendant for two cultivators with wheels, upon the following contract, signed by defendant: "Good to B. Harpell (plaintiff) for two cultivators, and Robt.
Leakey's note for $2:27 to him or bearer when called for. Value received:"—Held, that defendant had satisfied the obligation of his contract by tendering to plaintiff two cultivators without wheels, and that under the contract the plaintiff was not entitled to recover any other description of cultivators than that tendered. Harpell v. Collard, 6 L. J. 212.

standing of who were potters at Peterborough, sent an order to defendants at Toronto, for $9 worth "of stone spar such as potters use." Defendants answered acknowledging the receipt of the money, " which we have placed to your credit for stone." The order was entered in the order book as for stone, but defendants' manager crossed it out, and wrote ground flint, thinking that must be what was meant, though he said be might as well have sent Cornish stone. he might as well have sent Cornisi stone. The evidence shewed that spar or feld-spar was a substance used in the United States for the same purposes for which stone or Cornwall stone is used in England. The flint Cornwall stone is used in England. The flint was sent in a barrel, which the defendants said was marked flint, and the railway receipt to them was for "one barrel flint." The station master at Peterborough entered it from the way bill as one barrel fluid. The plain-tiffs aleged that the barrel was not marked "fluit," that the railway notice. as fluid; that they received and used it assuming it to be stone as ordered, there being nothing in the appearance to distinguish it, and they having before got stone from the defendants. Being thus used instead of stone, it de-stroyed the plaintiffs' ware, and for this the plaintiffs sued. The jury were directed that defendants were liable if the order sent by the plaintiffs should have been understood by de fendants as an order for Cornwall stone, and If the plaintiffs were justified in believing that the article sent was, and did not know that it was not, such stone; but that, if defendants were justified in sending ground flint on the order received, they would not be liable; and they found for the plaintiffs $150:—Held, that the direction was right; and that it was not a case in which the parties' minds were not ad idem, so that no agreement had been made. Baker v. Lyman, 38 U. C. R. 498.

See Northey Manufacturing Co. v. Saunders, 31 O. R. 475.

3. "Free on Board"-Term of Contract.

Damage to Goods while Awaiting Shipment — Liability—Interference.]—On the ith June 1852, plaintiff bought from defendants, through their agent, 1,100 barrels of four, and received a sale note as follows:—Toronto, June 4th, 1852. Messrs. C. W. W.: I have this day sold for your account 1,100 barrels of flour at the Humber, guaranteed to inspect as No. 1 superfine in Montreal, Boston, or New York, deliverable free as beard in good order and condition at 16s. The state of the state of much rain, and when the flour reached Beston it was found to be injured. The jury found that the plaintiff was entitled to 462 damages, of which £50 wans entitled to the decided of the flow of the f — Time for Payment.]—Case for not accepting flour. The witnesses on the trial were agreed in the opinion that the words "free on board" included the shipment and all port and harbour charges, such as canal dues, wharfage, &c.:—Held, that the defendant had a right before paying to see the flour free on board. George v. Glass, 14 U. C. R. 514.

Held, reversing the judgment in 29 U. C. R. 1600 bushels of oats, "at 40 cents per 34 lbs., free on board at Kingston," the purchaser was not bound to pay or tender the price before requiring the seller to put the oats on board. Clark v. Rose, 29 U. C. R. 302.

Providing Means of Transportation —Duty of Buyer—Usage.]—Plaintiff, through his agent at Seaforth, early in September offered defendant 94c, a bushel for his wheat f, o, b, at Clinton, where defendant lived, a station on the same line of railway as Seaforth. This was not then accepted, and on the 9th September defendant offered to take that price, but the plaintiff did not then want the wheat. On the 11th September plaintiff telegraphed defendant: "Will take your wheat at 94 cents, f, o, b. Answer." On the same day defendant answered. "Will accept your offer 94. Send directions about shipping:"— Held, that under such a contract it was the duty of the buyer to provide the cars: that the defendant in this case not having done so within a reasonable time could not recover for the non-delivery of the wheat; and that there was no evidence of a usage or custom to the contrary, even if such usage could be received to vary the contract. Semble, that the explanation of the alleged usage was that the sellers, in providing cars at Clinton under such contracts, were acting as agents for the buyers. Marshall v. Jameiscon, 42 C. C. R. 115.

Warehouse Charges while Awaiting Shipment—Liability.]—One E., in February, sold to defendant certain flour to be deliered in May following, f. o. b. (meaning free on board the vessels which were to take it from Hamilton.) The flour was delivered in May, but defendant had no vessels then ready, and E. stored it with plaintiff, subject to defendant's orders, paying all charges on it up to the end of May:—Held, that defendant was liable to the plaintiff for subsequent warehouse charges up to the time of shipment. Howland v, Brown, 13 U. C. R. 199.

See Butters v. Stanley, 21 C. P. 402,

4. Price and Payment.

(As to manner of payment, see PAYMENT.)

Absence of Agreement as to Price— Time of Payment.]—When there is no actual agreement as to price or time for payment, the law will supply the deficiency by importing into the bargain a promise by the buyer to pay a reasonable price, and by implying, in the absence of evidence to the contrary, that payment should be made on delivery. Christie v. Burnett, 10 O. R. 609.

Acknowledgment of Value Received.]—Held, upon an agreement by H. to pay to T. or bearer, pine saw-logs, &c., "for value received." &c., that the logs must be considered as paid for, and that H. could not recover from T. the value of the logs in an action of debt upon the common counts for goods soid and delivered. Hifferman v. Thompson, 6 U. C. R. 207.

Ascertainment of Price - Reference Evidence to Explain Writing.]—The plaintiff bought the office and plant of a newspaper, gave a chief mortgage thereon to W., and placed P. in charge. The defendants made advances to P. for the purpose of carrying on the business. W. sold the property by auc-tion for the amount of the mortgage debt to the defendants, who, supposing that P. was the owner, wished to secure themselves for the advances made to him. The defendants then agreed to sell the property to the plaintiff; but a dispute arose as to the price, and this action was brought to obtain specific per-formance of the agreement. There was formance of the agreement. There was written evidence of the agreement in a document signed by the defendant Moore, part of which was as follows: "Price of this office to be what it has cost Mr. Horton (the other defendant) and myself." Specific performdefendant) and myself." Specific performance was decreed by consent, and it was referred to a master to take the accounts, and to report what was the true agreement be-tween the parties:—Held, that the defendants had the right to shew before the master what they meant by the reference to the cost of the office as fixing the price; and that, upon the evidence, the true agreement between the parties was, that the price was to be the amount paid to W. plus the advances to P. Hughes v. Moore, 11 A. R. 569.

— Valuators — Bias — Acceptance.]

— By the terms of a written agreement for the sale of goods by the plaintiff to the defendant, the price was to be ascertained by three indifferent valuators, one as the property of the property of the greenent, the sum of $200 was to be recoverable as liquidated damages. The valuators appointed by the plaintiff one by the plaintiff when the valuators appointed by the parties were not indifferent, one being defendant's son, the other the plaintiff's brother-in-law, but they were accepted by the parties as unobjectionable, and a valuation was made. The vendor sued the purchaser to recover the $200, for breach of the agreement in not appointing an indifferent valuator: — Held, that having accepted the valuators of appointed as unobjectionable, he could not recover. Black v. Mottashed, 28 C. P. 259.

 broker at Toronto, to the defendants, who were merchants at the latter place. Before shipping the goods, the plaintiffs ascertained the net weight of the tea, after deducting the weight of the chests, by a mode in general use in the trade, and sent an invoice charging defendants with the number of pounds so as-certained. Some days after the receipt of the goods, the defendants wrote to the plaintiffs refusing to remit their notes for the amount charged, on the ground that the taring was in-correct, and added, "if you wish, we will have more of them tared, or you can send down yourselves, when I will settle." One of the plaintiffs thereupon came down to Toronto, and the goods were re-tared at defendants' warehouse, in the presence of the broker and the defendants' agent, when it was ascertained that the defendants were chargeable with 95 pounds more than the plaintiffs had claimed, The defendants then sent their notes for the amount charged in the original invoice, and refused to pay for the additional 95 pounds; -Held, that the defendants had bound themselves by their letter and conduct to abide by the result of the re-taring at Toronto, and were liable for the additional weight so ascertained. Brown v. Shaw, 1 A. R. 293.

Cash Payment — Amount of — Construc-on of Writings.]—The declaration charged at defendants sold and plaintiff bought that derendants sold and plaintin bought 14,000 bushels of barley at a certain price, to be delivered to plaintiff, when called for, on board a certain vessel, to be paid for on getting a receipt; that plaintiff then paid defendants $200 on account, and called for delivery,—assigning, as a breach, the non-delivery. The evidence of the contract consisted of a writing purporting to be a receipt, dated of a writing purporting 29th September, 1868, signed by defendants, for $200, which was therein stated to have been paid "as part margin" on a cargo of barley sold by defendants to plaintiff, to be delivered when called for, and to be paid for on getting the receipt of the captain of the vessel; and also another writing signed by both parties at the same time, but before the receipt was signed, and of the same date, and being a memorandum of the sale of the barley being a memorandum of the sale of the barley in question, from which it appeared that the barley was to be delivered on the following Thursday, that the "margin" to be paid was $1,000, and that the residue ($800) was to be paid by plaintiff on the same day that the $200 was paid:—Held, that the two writings must be read as incorporated the one with the other, and that the true contract was to be deduced from reading both together; that the jury should have been so directed; and that the plaintiff, having failed to pay the $800, balance of margin, on the day named, could not recover under the above count. Held, also, that there was no substantial variance, for that, reading the two together, the words, "to be delivered when called for," as contained in the second writing, might well mean within the time that had just been fixed by the first. Quære, as to the right of the plaintiff to recover back the $200 paid. Phippen v. Hyland, 19 C. P. 416.

Credit—Terms—Breach—Set-off.]—By an auctioneer's conditions of sale purchasers exceeding £30 were to have "six months' credit, giving approved indorsed notes:"—Held, that a purchaser of over £30 was a purchaser unconditionally on credit, and could not be treated as a purchaser for cash upon his refusal to furnish the note; and, as he could not conse

Wakefield v. Gorrie, 5 U. C. R. 159. See Magrath v. Tinning, 6 O. S. 484.

Delivery — Notification.] — Where by an agreement the plaintiff is to deliver not personally to the defendants, but on certain parts of a road, a certain quantity of timber to build certain bridges, he must notify defendants of the delivery before he can sue for the price. Watson v. Gorren, 6 U. C. R. 542.

Invoice—Presumption.]—If a merchant receives an invoice and retains it for a considerable time without making any objection, there is a presumption against him that the price stated in the invoice was that agreed upon. Judgment of the court below, that the evidence was sufficient to rebut the presumption, reversed. Kearney v. Letellier, 27 S. C. R. 1.

Manner of Payment—Appropriation of Dividends—Set of,! — The Albert Mining Company (respondents) brought this action to recover for coal sold and delivered to appleants during the years 1896, 1897, and 1898. S. and M. and one McCi. were partners carrying on business under the name of the Albertine Oil Company, the defendant S. furnishing the capital. The contract for the coal was made by S., who was a large stockholder in the plaintiff company and entitled to yearly dividends on his stock. The agreement, as proved by plaintiffs, was that S. purchased the coal for the Albertine Oil Company, the members of which he named; that the president of the plaintiff company told S. they would look to him for payment, as the other pattners were poor; that the terms of sale were call on delivery on board the vessels; and that S. agreed that the dividends payable to him on his stock should be applied in payment for the coal; that in consequence of this arrangement the plaintiffs credited the Albertine Oil Company with the amount of S.'s dividends as they were declared from time to dividends as they were occurred from time to time down to August, 1866, leaving a balance of $912 due to S. It also appeared that the coal delivered was charged in the plaintiffs' books to the Albertine Oil Company, and that the bills of lading on the shipments of the coal were also made out in their name, and that some time afterwards a notice, signed by S. some time afterwards a notice, signed by S. and M., was given to the plaintiffs, complaining of the inferior quality of the coal, and claiming damages in consequence. In the latter part of the year 1808 S, repudiated the agreement to appropriate his dividends to the payment of coal, and refused to sign the receipts therefor in the plaintiffs' books. He had signed the receipt for the dividends of 1806. The weson retire was the broader. 1866. The present action was then brought (in 1873) against S. and M., the surviving partners of the Albertine Oil Company, McG. having died, to recover the value of the coal. S. shortly afterwards brought an action against the plaintiffs for the dividends; this latter claim was referred to arbitration, and an award was made in favour of S. for up-wards of $15,000, which the plaintiffs paid in July, 1874. The receipt given for the payin July, 1874. The receipt given for the payment stated that it was in full satisfaction of the judgment in the suit of S. against the Albert Mining Company, and it appeared (though evidence of this was objected to in the present action) that it included the dividends for the years 1867 and 1868;—Held, that, there being clear evidence of the appro-priation of S.'s dividends in pursuance of the agreement made with him, and therefore of the plaintiffs having been paid for the coal in the manner and on the terms agreed on, the plaintiffs were properly nonsuited. Spurr v. Albert Mining Co., 9 S. C. R. 35.

Place of Payment—Bank — Attendance to Receive.]—The declaration—after stating an agreement for the sale and purchase of from 1,000 to 1,500 bushels of peas, to be delivered by defendant at, &c., on or before the 15th November next ensuing the agreement, and that plaintiff should pay for said peas on the 12th November at the bank of Upper Canada in Kingston,—averred that plaintiff on the 12th November went to the bank during banking hours, and was then ready and willing to pay defendant the price of 1,500 bushels, but that neither defendant nor any person on his behalf was there at any time during the day to receive said moneys:—Held, sufficient on demurrer, for that plaintiff was not bound to pay the money into the bank or to attend after banking hours. Platt v. McFaul, 4 C. P. 203.

Right to Recover Price—Condition Precedent—Separate Corenant. I—An agreement for the sale of a machine provided that the inventor should nersonally invested that the sale of a machine provided that the was delivered, but, the inventor refine to go the vendors sent another competent of go the vendors sent another competent was to set set it up:—Held, that the vendors were nevertheless entitled to recover the price, on the principle that the stipulation alleged did not go to the whole root and consideration of the contract, and, therefore, was not to be considered as a condition precedent, but as a distinct covenant, the breach of which could be satisfied by damages. Cough v. Fisher, 31 O. R. 42%

Sale to Agent—Appropriation of Price to Vendor—Revocation.]—In December, 1875, H. purchased a quantity of scrap iron for defendants from the plaintiff, the assignee of the J. H. Manufacturing Co.; and on the 10th plaintiff telegraphed defendants to ask if they would be responsible for H., their agent, to which they replied that they dealt direct with but would hold the money for plaintiff if H. so requested them. The iron was then shipped to defendants, in H.'s name, though directed by plaintiff to be shipped in his, and was received by defendants. On the December H. drew on defendants, to plaintiff's order, for the amount of the iron, which defendants refused to accept; but afterwards they telegraphed to the plaintiff that when the draft was presented the iron had not been received, but that they had since received it; that H. was with them; and to telegraph amount of draft, and they would keep it out of money due, and to send back the draft. The draft was sent back, and on 27th December presented to defendants, who again cember presented to defendants, who again refused to accept it, on the ground that the iron was not up to sample. An order of the same date from H. to the defendants, to pay the plaintiff, was proved, and a counter-mand thereof on the 30th. The defendants subsequently settled with H., and refused to pay the plaintiff. It appeared that previous to the commencement of this suit, a creditors assignce had been appointed to the estate of the J. H. Manufacturing Co.:-Held, that fendants the price of the iron, for that there had been an appropriation of such amount for the plaintiff by the act of all parties, which could not be revoked. Wilcox v. Pillow, 28 C. P. 100.

Time of Payment — Part Delivery, | — Plaintiff and defendant entered into the following contract: "To G, M, B. (plaintiff) — Please deliver to me at Port Arthur five head good steers on first 'City' up, and six steers and heifers on second trip' City' up, and four cows on same trip, also 100 good lambs in lots of fifteen or twenty, of 83 each lamb, to dress not less than ten pounds per quarter, price of cattle $3.50, weighed at Port Arthur.'' Nothing was said as to time of payment. The cattle were all delivered, but the plaintiff refused to complete the contract until the defendant declined to do:—Held, that the price was not payable till the completion of the whole contract, and that the refusal of the defendant to pay for the part delivered did not justify the plaintiff in refusing to deliver the remainder. Withers v. Reynolds, 2 B. & Ad. 882, considered and distinguished. Boyd v. Sullivan, 15 O. R. 492.

Property Passing or not Passing.
 (a) Construction of Contract,

Delivery to Agent to be Manufactured—Presumption. I—M. & Co., of Guelph, bought a car load of wheat on commission for C. They paid for it themselves, and shipped it by defendants' railway, taking the railway receipt in their own name as consignees. The car was addressed to the care of C. at Waterdown, M. & Co. being aware that it was intended to be ground there for C, and the receipt was indorsed by them to the order of the Canadian Bank of Commerce. Through this bank they drew upon C. at fifteen days' sight for the price, with their commission and bank charges, and discounted the draft with the receipt attached as collateral security. At Waterdown the wheat was delivered by defendants, upon C.'s order, to his brother, who had a mill there. It was mixed by him with other wheat and ground, and fifty-five barrels of flour, the equivalent for it, were delivered by him to the defendants for C. C. became insolvent before the draft matured, and M. & Co. took it up and got the railway receipt re-indorsed to them. C.'s assignee having sued the defendants in trover and detinue for the flour, they, in privity with M. & Co., denied the plaintiff's right to it, and set up the title of M. & Co.:—Held, that, as between M. & Co. and C., the insolvent, the property in the wheat did not pass to C, until paid for, it being the reasonable presumption from all the circumstances that this was the intention of the parties; that the conversion of the wheat into flour made no difference, for, looking at the usual course of business in such matters, this flour, though not made from the identical wheat, should be regarded as the produce of It. Mason v. Great Western R. W. Co., 3I U. C. R. 73.

Effect of Property not Passing—Agest—Fraudulent Pleage—Resplevin,1—F., a music teacher at Beardstown, Ill., wrote to K. & Co., at Chicage, that he had a customer named J. to whom he could sell a plant, and estimate the best of the plant of the plant ing them to ship one in their own name, to be subject to their order, but F. to pay freight charges in the plant of the plantific steep. Simply to act as their agent. K. & Co., not having the style of plantific, sie. F., simply to act as their agent. K. & Co., not having the style of planto required, handed F.'s letter to plaintiffs, plano manufacturers in Chicago, who, after communicating with F., shipped a piano to Beardstown, consigned to their own order, but to be delivered to F. on payment of the freight charges. The plano was received by F. at Beardstown, and its receipt acknowledged in a letter to plaintiffs. It was shipped by F. to Virginia City, Ill., and from there to F. at Toronto, under the assumed name of R., and was there pledged by F. under such assumed name, with defendant D., a pawnbroker, to cover an amount lent by D. to pay the charges, as well as a further advance, F. representing that he intended opening an agency for the sale of planos. The plano was taken by D. to his own premises, where it remained until replevied:—Held, that there was no sale to F. of the plano, as it never was intended that the property should ass to him. Bush. V. Fry, 15 O. R. 122.

Innocent Purchaser—Estoppel.]—
The plaintiffs, makers of safes at Toronto, sold a safe to one H., of London, on a written order stipulating that he was to give his notes at four and six months for the price; that his name was to be painted on the front of the safe; and that no title to the safe was to pass to H. until full payment of the price agreed upon. The plaintiffs accordingly had H.'s name painted on the safe, and delivered it to him in August, 1876. In November of the same year defendants purchased the safe from H. after having first searched the office of the county court clerk for incumbrances against it, and believing it to belong to H.; whereupon the plaintiffs were not estopped from proving their ownership of the safe. Tuffts v. Mottashed, 29 C. P.

W., a commission merchant residing at Toledo, W. a commission merchant residing at Torego, Ohio, purchased and shipped a cargo of corn on the order of C. et al., distillers at Belle-ville, and drew on them at ten days from date for the price, freight, and insurance. This draft was transferred to a bank in Toledo, and the amount of it received by W. from bank, and the corn, having been insured by W. for his own benefit, was shipped by him under a bill of lading, which, together with the policy of insurance, was assigned by him to the same bank. The bank forwith the policy of insurance, was assigned by him to the same bank. The bank for-warded the draft, policy, and bill of lading to their agents at Belleville, with instructions that the corn was not to be delivered until the draft was paid. The draft was accepted by C. et al., but the cargo arriving at Belleville in a damaged and heated condition, between the dates of the acceptance and the maturity of the draft, C. et al. refused to receive it and Vol. III. p-195-46 afterwards to pay the draft at maturity. Thereupon the bank and W. sold the cargo for behalf of whom it might concern, credited C, et al. with the proceeds on account of the draft, and W, filed a bill to recover balance and interest:—Held, reversing the judgment in 5 A. R. 626, that the contract was not one of agency, and that the property in the corn remained by the act of W. in himself and his assignees, until after the arrival of the corn at Belleville and payment of the draft; and the damage to the corn having occurred while the property in it continued to be in W. and his assignees, C. et al. should not bear the loss. Corby v. Williams, 7 S. C. R. 470.

- Seizure under Execution.]-By an agreement between H., of the one part, and W. and wife, of the other, the latter were to provide and furnish a store, and H. to supply stock and replenish same when necessary; W. was to devote his whole time to the business; W. and wife were to make monthly returns of sales and cash balances, quarterly returns and stock, &c., on hand, and to remit weekly proceeds of sales with certain deductions. H. had a right at any time to examine the books and have an account of the stock, &c.; the net profits were to be shared between the parties; the agreement could be determined at any time by H. or by W. and wife on a month's notice:—Held, that the goods supplied by H. under this agreement as the stock of the business were not sold to W. and wife, but remained the property of H. until sold in the ordinary course; such goods, therefore, were not liable to seizure under execution against H. at the suit of a creditor. Ames-Holden Co. v. Hatfield, 29 S. C. R. 95.

Machinery—Default in Payment for— Annexation to Freehold—Rights of Vendors, I —An engine, boiler, and other machinery, were shipped by plaintiffs to the defendant E. under a written order to ship same to his address as per sum agreed on, viz., $875; $225 to be allowed for E.'s portable engine and boiler, and $635 to be paid on shipment; but, if not settled for in cash and notes within twenty days, then the whole amount to become due; the order not to be countermanded, and until payment the machinery to be at E.'s risk, which he was to insure, and on demand was to assign the policy to the plaintiffs, and the title thereof was not to pass out of plaintiffs, E. agreeing not to sell or remove same without the plaintiffs' consent in writing. On default in payment the plain-tiffs could enter and take and remove the machinery, and E. agreed to deliver same to plaintiffs in like good order and condition as received, save ordinary wear and tear, and to pay expenses of removal. Any notes or other security given by E. for his indebtedness to be collateral thereto. The machinery was put up in a mill on premises leased with right of purchase, by defendant D. to E.'s wife for one or five years from 11th March, 1883. E.'s wife died on the 23rd October, 1883, and by her will appointed E. sole executor, giving him power to sell or dispose of any property to which testatrix was or might be entitled. E. by deed of 27th April, 1885, demised and released to D. all the right, title, and interest in the premises as well of himself as also as executor, together with the mill built thereon, with the boiler and engine, &c., and on the same day D. leased the said premises, mill and machinery, to E. for one year. Loan Society, The defendant E. never paid any cash, but gave his promissory note at three months, which was renewed from time to time, but ultimately, E. having failed to pay, the plaintiffs demanded the machinery, when D. notified plaintiffs not to remove it, as also did the society:—Held, that the effect of the transaction was, that the property was in the plaintiffs, and that they were entitled thereto, and that there was an illegal detention by the defendants D. and E. amounting to a con-version; and that the F. Loan Co., by having notified plaintiffs not to remove the machinery, were proper parties to the suit to give plaintiffs full relief: and that unless defendants allowed plaintiffs to remove the machinery on demand, the plaintiffs were entitled to recover $650 with interest, being the price of the gine and boiler the sum of 860 for repairs should be paid by plaintiffs to D. to be re-paid to plaintiffs by E. Manufactured Goods — Agreement — Necessity for Filing—Faceution.]—M. agreed to manufacture and furnish to the joint account of himself and the plaintiff a quantity of staves to be loaded in cars at a railway station by a day named. By the terms of the agreement the staves were to be considered at all times, whether marked or not, the property of the plaintiff as security for advances: —Held, that under the agreement the staves became the property of the plaintiff as soon as made, and never were the property of M.; and that the agreement did not require filing under the Chattel Mortgage Act; and that the plaintiff therefore was entitled as against an execution creditor of M. Kelsey v. Rogers, 52 C. P. 624.

Oral Agreement — Execution.]—
On an interpleader to try the title to two locomotives, it appeared from the finding of the jury that in September, 1858, when they were half finished, the plaintiffs orally agreed with G., the manufacturer, to buy them from him for $16,000, payable as he might require it, for which they were to be finished by him; and on the 3rd January, 1850, by deed reciting this arrangement, G. conveyed them to the plaintiffs. Defendant claimed under an execution issued after the agreement, and when that was made there was an execution in the sheriff's hands, at the suit of a third party, which was subsequently paid:—Held, that by the oral agreement the property passed; (2) that the execution in the sheriff's hands clearly could not affect the plaintiffs' claim as against the defendant. Burton v. Bell-house, 20 U. C. R. 80.

action to try the right to certain bricks, it appeared that they had been made by one D, for the plaintiffs, who were to find the wood to burn the kilns, and deduct it from the price, and had supplied wood to the extent of several hundred pounds. The bricks had not been delivered, and defendant claimed them under an assignment from D,:—Held, that it was properly left to the jury to say, whether by the agreement between the plaintiffs and D, the bricks were to become the plaintiffs in property as soon as they were made; and that, under the evidence given, they were justified in finding that they were. Burnett v. McBean, 15 U. C. R. 496.

Vesting before Delivery, —One P. in January, 1860, agreed to build for a railway company 100 cars of a specified pattern, to be delivered in four months and a half from that time on their track at Torouto, free of charge; the company to pay $825 for each car, payments to be made monthly on the estimate made by a person appointed by the company on materials furnished and work done; "payments to be made to the satisfaction of the Bank of Upper Canada, who are to act as receivers." All but 16 cars were delivered, and these 16 the inspector of the company had approved of, and they were sent to the Suspension Bridge to wait for the springs, which the company were to furnish:—Held, that by the agreement the cars vested in the company before delivery. Bank of Upper Canada v. Killaly, 21 U. C. R. 9.

Simulated Sale—Absence of Delivery— Quebec Law.]—See Cushing v. Dupuy, 5 App. Cas. 409.

Taking without Payment—Effect of— Replevin.]—The plaintiff, being administra-trix of the estate of her husband, had a public sale of his effects, on the 11th November, at which defendant, her son-in-law, bought among other things two mares, it being understood before the sale that he should purchase goods equal in value to the share of the estate which his wife would be entitled to. He took away the mares next day, without having made any settlement, and without express assent on the plaintiff's part. His purchases amounted to $154, and his wife's share of the estate was found to be only $100. The plaintiff, through her agent, wrote to defendant demanding payment of the balance, $54, and, not having received it, replevied one of the mares, which the sale was sold for $51.50. Judge found for the plaintiff, on the ground that defendant had no right to take away the mare until paid for. On motion for a new trial:—Held, there being evidence to sus-On motion for a tain this view, that the verdict should not be disturbed. Semble, however, the plaintiff hav-ing demanded payment of the balance, thus recognizing the sale, that it would have been more satisfactory to have found a sale and delivery, and to have held defendant indebted for the balance. Inspection — Rescission.] — The plaintiffs, merchants in New York, sold to E. B. & Co., merchants in Toronto, through the intervention of a broker, one 0, 50 bags of coffee, on the 4th January, 1876, at sixty days' credit. The coffee was selected by O., after full opportunity of inspection and exafter full opportunity of inspection and examination, and was sent by rail to Toronto, at the risk of E. B. & Co., who paid the freight thereon, and on arrival of the goods entered and bonded them in their name. entered and bonded them in their name. Up-on examination, E. B. & Co. ascertained that, with the exception of fifteen bags, the coffee was badly stained with some chemical substance, and, on the 17th January, informed O. that it was unmerchantable, and asked him to see the sellers and let them know what to do, as they could not use it. O. replied that the plaintiffs repudiated all liability, but he suggested an experiment to get rid of the damage, and requested them to telegraph him if they could use the goods at ½ cent per pound allowance, offering to endeavour to induce the plaintiffs to make that reduction. E. B. & Co. replied that there could be no doubt that the damage was an old one, but that they would call in a coffee roaster to inspect it, and if anything could be done they inspect it, and it anything could be done they would communicate without delay. On the 7th February, and before O.'s suggestion was acted upon, E. B. & Co. made an assignment in insolvency to the defendant, having in the meantime soid 23 bags of the coffee, 15 before and 8 after the objection had been before and 8 after the objection had been made to it: Held, reversing the judgment in 41 f. C. R. 138, that the selection of the goods by O, acting either for E. B. of for both parties, passed the property to E. R. & Co. and that they could not reject traffer a full and fair opportunity of inspection by their agent. Held, also, that, even if E. R. & Co. had been at liberty to rescind the action of the control of the contro the contract on ascertaining that some of the goods were unmerchantable, they had prethe goods were unmerchantable, they had pre-cluded themselves from so doing by the mode in which they had dealt with them. Held, also, that, even if the correspondence with O. had taken place with the plaintiffs, there was no evidence of a mutual rescission of the contract. Wilds v. Smith, 2 A. R. 8.

Part Payment — Oral Agreement for Balance of Price.]—Defendants, having a stock of lumber at Milton, agreed orally to sell it to M., to be delivered at Bronte station on the Great Western Railway, for $12 per 1,000 feet, and to be paid or as shipped from the station by him, which he was to do as fast as defendants hauled it there. M. paid on the making of the agreement $1,000 on account of the purchase maney, At first M. shipped it away as fast as it was delivered at the station, and afterwards not so rapidly, but, with defendants' knowledge and without objection, he culled, knowledge and without objection, he culled, knowledge and without objection, he station master, who on his directions from time to time shipped large quantities of it. About six weeks before M. hecame insolvent, one of the defendants requested payment from him for the lumber then lying at the station, when M. pur him off and said, "You are all right advances of the station in the station in the lumber there at Boate station;"—Held, that there had been Boate station;"—Held, that there had been believer to and an acceptance and receipt by M. of the lumber, so that defendants had lost their lien, which could not be re-established by M.'s statement to defendant. M.'s assignee was held entitled, therefore, as against the defendants. Mason v. Hatton, 41 U. C. R. 610.

Change of Property—Goods in Transit.]—Held, that the taking possession by the Buuffalo and Lake Huron R. W. Co., under 19 Vict. c. 21, of the property previously owned by the Buffalo, Brantford, and Goderich R. W. Co., operated to transfer the same to the former, so as to prevent its being seized under a fi. fa., even although the goods were in the process of transportation from England to their line of road. Buffalo and Lake Huron R. W. Co., Corbett, S. C. P. 536.

Conditional Acceptance — Municipal Corporation—Executory Contract—Seal.]—
The corporation of a town appointed a committee, consisting of the reeve and two others, to purchase 1,500 feet of hose for the use of the waterworks. They called for tenders, and the two plaintiffs, of whom the reeve was one, submitted a sample of hose, on which the other two members of the committee gave the plaintiffs the order. The hose was tested when it arrived, and was the same as the sample, but it was useless for the purpose required:—Held, that the corporation, on the evidence, had not accepted the hose absolutely, but conditionally only, to keep it if they found it to answer; that they were not liable for it as being bound by the conduct of the committee, for want of an agreement under the corporate seal; and that such contract, being executory, might also be avoided because one of the plaintiffs was a member of the committee. Brown v. Town of Lindsay, 35 U. C. R.

Conditional Delivery.]—Defendant purchased horses and a waggon from the plaintiff, at auction, the terms being that he should give his own notes at three, six, and nine months, indorsed by one W. and on his promise to give these he was allowed to take the goods. W. refused to indorse and the plaintiff, having waited for some time without getting the notes, replevied. It was left to the jury to say whether the delivery was absolute with intent to pass the property, or conditional on defendant's giving the notes, and they found for the plaintiff—Held, a proper direction, and that the verdict was warranted. Smith v. Hobson, 16 U. C. R. 368.

Countermand of Order — Absence of Acceptance.]—Defendant, a cooper, used to make barrels for the plaintiffs (distillers) and receive money as required. In the course of their dealings plaintiffs instructed defendant not to sell his barrels to any body else, as they would require them all. Defendant kept all for plaintiffs, who afterwards refused to take them, and defendant having overdrawn his account, the plaintiffs brought this action for the amount:—Held, that defendant could not set off the value of the barrels kept at plaintiffs' request, as belonging to them, they never having accepted the same. Gooderham v. Dash, 9 C. P. 413.

Goods Damaged—Dispute as to Freight—Delivery by Carriers.]— Three cases of goods, exceeding $40 in value, were orally ordered by L. at M. from plaintiff at T., through plaintiff's traveller, and were shipped, consigned to L., and carried by railway and then by defendants' steamer to M. Two of the cases were received by L. one of which was in a damaged condition. The third case remained on the cases of the property of the case o

Goods Stored — Insufficient Delivery.]—
Plaintiffs contracted for the manufacture of a quantity of glassware, which, though invoiced to and paid for by plaintiffs, was stored with a warehouseman as the goods of the manufacturers, who obtained warehouse receipts for them. These receipts were transferred by the manufacturers to defendants, as collateral security for advances made to then:
—Held, in an interpleader to try the right to the goods, that there had not been a sufficient delivery of the goods to pass the property in them to plaintiffs, and that defendants were therefore entitled to succeed. Govans v. Consolidated Bank of Canada, 43 U. C. R. 318.

Order for Payment—Execution.]—
On an interpleader, it appeared that A, owned the wheat in question, which was stored with S. On the 8th October he sold it to the plaintiff, and on the 10th gave him an order on S, for it, which S, accepted, and on the 11th the plaintiff paid A, the purchase money. On the 10th the sheriff went to seize the wheat under an execution against A., at the suit of N, which had been in his hands since August, but S, told him that A, had no wheat there. On the 11th, however, the sheriff returned and seized, and on the 14th the execution at the suit of defendants was placed in his hands:—Held, that the plaintiff was clearly entitled under his purchase as against the defendants execution. Tucker v. Ross, 19 U. C. R. 295.

Possession Taken - Impugning Title of Vendor — Ratification — Ascertainment of Price.]—On the 27th April, 1872, at a meeting of the creditors of one A. R., deceased, at which the administrator of his estate was present, the plaintiffs entered into a written agreement to purchase on behalf of one M, the estate of A. R., consisting of a stock of goods and other effects. This was signed by a number of the creditors, but not by the administrator, but the administrator at the trial swe that he considered it a sale to the plaintiffs. On the 6th May the plaintiffs sold to defend ant this stock of goods, as shewn by the stock book, for $7,695.24, of which defendant paid in cash $2,782, and received a receipt therefor, on the back of which a memorandum was indorsed, that the balance was to be paid in notes at three, six, and nine months; and defendant was to go on the following morning to Ingersoll, where the goods were, and take po-On the day of this sale the plaintiffs applied to and obtained from the administrator an order for the delivery of the key of the store in which the goods were, on the person who held it, as well as an authority on M.'s behalf to sell the goods. On the following morning defendant, with one W., who was sent by the plaintiffs to assist, went to Inersoll, when the defendant took possession While the goods were being packed with a view to their removal, they were destroyed by fire. M., who resided in Ingersoll, was well aware of the object with which dewen aware of the object with which de-fendant came there, and at the trial swore that the plaintiffs were authorized to make the sale, and that he had been informed by tele-graph of it, and did not dissent:—Held, that the evidence clearly shewed that there was a sale by the plaintiffs to defendant so as to pass the property, for, even if the plaintiffs had not at the time power to sell, yet the subsequent ratification by the administrator and M. related back. M. related back so as to make it valid. It was contended by defendant that the goods were to be checked with the stock book to were to be checked with the stock was a ascertain the sum for which the notes were to be given. The jury found that this was no part of the bargain; but semble, that if it had been, the property might still have passed, the checking being required only to ascertain the balance of the purchase money to be paid. The declaration set out the contract and the ane decuaration set out the contract and the terms of payment—namely, part cash and part by notes, at stated dates; and alleged that, though defendant had paid the sum payable in cash, he had not paid the balance by his notes or otherwise:—Held, sufficient, it not being necessary to declare specially for the non-delivery of the notes. Lockhart v. Panuell, 22 C. P. 507.

Unascertained Goods — Agreement.]—
By an agreement, dated 17th December, 1870, plaintiff agreed to procure and have sawed for defendant at the Waverly mill, 18,000 feet of lumber at $10 per thousand, to be dearly in May as possible; determined the agreement of the control of the lumber. The lumber was not all cut until the 5th June, and defendant was not aware of its being so cut until after it had been destroyed by fire, which occurred on the 12th June, but evidence was given by plaintiff, which defendant denied, that on the 20th May defendant promised to go up in two weeks and accept the lumber; and it appeared that of the lumber so cut 9,000 feet was placed in a pile by itself for defendant, but the residue was not separated from other lumber which the plaintiff was getting sawed at the same time: —Held, that under the contract no property passed, there having been no delivery or acceptance; and that defendant could not be held liable on the ground of delay in accepting. Pew v. Lauerence, 27 C. P. 402.

Ascertainment of Weight—Future Delivery—Intention.]—On the 13th September. 1866. S. agreed to deliver on account of K. at a railway station, when wanted, 600 boxes of factory cheese, at a certain rate per pound, and to keep the same insured until wanted.

t—Future De-3th September, count of K. at d. 600 boxes of the per pound, until wanted. The weight had not then been ascertained; in fact all had not been manufactured. Subsequently two warehouse receipts, dated respectively 21st September and 9th October, were given to K., one for 330, the other for 230 boxes, signed by S. and specifying the weight of the cheese. On the 22nd October K. mortaged to plaintiffs 400 boxes of cheese purchased by him from S., on or about the 13th September, and then in the curing houses of S. to scure moneys advanced to him by plaintiffs upon the security of part of the cheese. This mortgage was not filed. S. became insolvent on the 19th October following, and K. became aware of it on the following day. The plaintiffs replevied 341 boxes of chesse:—Quare, whether the property in the cheese passed to K. on the 13th September; but if it did not, because the weight had not been then ascertained, that objection was removed on the 21st September, as the receipts specified the weight. Held, however, that the fact that the cheese was not to be delivered until a future time, when K. wanted it, and that S. was to keep it insured in the meaning, did not prevent the property passing; for it is the intention of the parties which is to govern. Bask of Montreal v. McWhirter, 17 C. P. 506.

Right to Possession—Failure to Provide Means of Transport—Trover.]—Plaintiff, through his agent, bought from A. & Co. a certain quantity of wheat, at a price named f. a. b., which was to be loaded by a day named, or as soon as bages and cars could be farnished by the plaintiff for it. Plaintiff paid part on account and furnished bags to the vendor, who filled them, but no cars were sent by plaintiff to take the wheat away. Whilst the wheat way lying ready, and after the day named, defendants, holders of a warehouse receipt, demanded of the vendors the wheat covered by it, when plaintiff's wheat, some of which, amounting to 250 bushels, had been weighed, was delivered to and received by them. There was no demand and refusal of plaintiff wheat, nor did plaintiff notify defendants that the wheat was his;—Held, that the plaintiff was not entitled to possession of the wheat, and could not, therefore, maintain troor against defendants for it. Butters v. Stualey, 21 C. P. 402.

Payment of Price.]-The defendant agreed to get out wood for the mortgagors of the plaintiffs, whose mortgage covered certain wood then piled, as also future acquired wood brought on the premises, and to place it upon the premises at a specified price, and the mortgagors agreed to pay part of the price as the wood was got out, and the balance in cash apon and according to a measurement to be made by them. Subsequent to the date of the mortgage, wood was got out, placed on the premises, and measured in the presence of all parties, and the quantity agreed upon, and marked with the plaintiffs' mark: -Held, that the property in the wood became at once vested in the mortgagors, and through them in the plaintiffs; but such vesting did not transfer the right of possession without payment of the price; and therefore the plaintiffs could not maintain trespass or trover for wood taken away by the defendant after appropriation and before payment of the full price; but were entitled, upon amendment of the pleadings, to a declaration of their right to the property, and to possession upon payment of the amount due, and to an account of the wood not received by them. Rogers v. Devitt, 25 O. R.

Sale by Weight—Completion of Contract—Vendor's Risk—Depository—Acceptance.]
—Held, that where goods and merchandize are sold by weight, the contract of sale is not perfect, and the property in the goods remains in the vendor and they are at his risk, until they are weighted, or until the buyer is in default to have them weighed; and this is so even when the buyer has made an examination of the goods and rejected such as were not to his satisfaction. Held, also, that where goods are sold by weight and the property remains in the possession of the vendor, the vendor becomes in law a depositary, and if the goods while in his possession are damaged through his fault and negligence, he cannot bring action for their value. Ross v. Hannan, 19 S. C. R. 227.

Setting apart—Marking-Part Deiicerp.]—Under an execution delivered to him on the 16th November, the sheriff seized goods on the 17th. The plaintiff, another creditor, was then at the debtor's shop receiving delivery of some crockery which the debtor was selling him in order to satisfy his claim. These goods were proved to have been set apart for the plaintiff, and to have been marked with his mark, and one of the articles had been delivered to him in the name of the whole. Part had been removed, and the rest was detained and secured by the sheriff. Plaintiff having repleviel—Held, that under a plea of not possessed, defendant was entitled to a verdict. Calcutt V. Ruttan, 18 U. C. R. 140.

Term of Agreement—Performance of—Part Payment. —By an agreement alleged to be a memorandum of sale of a newspaper, job office, and subscription list by one C. to the plaintiff, for $2.000, $500 was to be paid on giving possession. C. to be releved of a mortgage to one Cooper for $500 on the plant: and to receive a horse, &c., at such price as H. was willing to give for it last fail. For the balance, to be paid within one year of the $500 of the $ Transfer of Specific Quantity — Setting apart of Lesser Quantity.]—B. transferred to one S. 100 tons of coal. as security for an indorsement. He had then a certain lot of coal lying on a wharf, supposed to contain that quantity, though in reality only 78 tons, and subject to a claim for wharfage equal to the value of ten tons, but the jury found that the transfer was not confined to this lot, but was of 100 tons, B. having more in his yard. No other coul, however, was set apart, and it had not been ascertained how much would be required to make up the difference, when B. assigned all his effects, including the coal in the yard, to the plaintiff for the benefit of creditors. Defendant afterwards removed from the yard 42 tons, being 22 to make up the deficiency in quantity, 10 for wharfage, and 10 because the quality of that in the yard was inferior to that on the wharf, but he afterwards abandoned his claim to the last 10 tons:—Held, that the plaintiff was entitled to recover, for the sale to 8, did not pass the property in any of the coals in the yard. McDougall v. Elliott, 20 U. C. R. 299.

Treasury Notes—Setting apart—Lien—Trever.]—Held, that the facts of this case shewed that no American currency was set apart for plaintiff under the agreement set out, so as to pass to him the property in certain known treasury notes or "greenbacks," and give defendant a lien on them for the amount he was to receive; and that therefore trover and detinue would not lie for the "greenbacks;" and that the plaintiff could not recover back the deposit of $400 in "greenbacks," under the count for trover, as that had never been demanded, and there was no evidence of actual conversion of it. Walsh v. Brouen, 18 C. P. 60.

Warehoused Goods—Indorsement of Recording II—T. sold to plaintiff 2,000 out of 3,000 bushels of wheat owned by him and lying in two bins in the warehouse of S., whose receipts he held for the same, and which he indorsed to the plaintiff, who paid him 2 the time. T. and S. left the who paid him 2 the time. T. and S. left the country, when defendants seized and converted the whole quantity to their own use. The plaintiff shed them in trover and definue. The evidence of T., so far from shewing that he repudiated the sale, fully upheld it, and proved that he had told S. to appropriate all the wheat in one of the bins to plaintiff; and S. stated that he would not, after the notice of the sale to plaintiff, have delivered any of the wheat in the two bins to any one by plaintiff, without retaining enough to satisfy plaintiff's 2,000 bushels: — Held, sufficient evidence of an appropriation of the wheat by T. in fulfilment of his sale to plaintiff. Coffey v. Quebec Bank, 20 C. P. 110.

Indorsement of Receipt—Specific Appropriation.]—On the 29th June, 1872. C., of the firm of J. F. & Co., who had stored a quantity of coal with defendants, for which defendants were to give warehouse receipts on certain terms, applied to the plaintiff for his acceptance for the firm's accommodation of two bils of exchange, one for $1,500, and the other for $900, offering to give him defendants warehouse receipt for 400 tons of coal as security therefor. The plaintiff agreed to accept on these terms, of which C. notified the defendants, obtained their receipt dated 27th June, 1872, and indorsed it over to the plaintiff, who then accepted the bills on the faith of this receipt. At the maturity of the bills the plaintiff retired them, by a renewal of and paying at maturity the $1,500 one, and by giving H., one of the defendants, into whose hands the one for $900 had come, his note therefor, which were not paid. On the 28th November a writ of attachment issued against J. F. & Co. On the 30th they made an assignment in insolvency, and on the same day the official assignee took possession of the coal. On the 14th December the plaintiff went to defendants and asked for the coal, but defendants stated that they could not give it to him, as the assignee had taken possession of it; and he subsequently called at different times, but received in effect the same reply. The coal, which was proved to have been worth between $5 and $6 per ton, was afterwards sold by the assignee at an average of $3.80 per ton. The plaintiff, on the 28th February, 1876, brought trover against defendants for their refusal to deliver:—Held, that there was no necessity for any specific appropriation of coal to answer the receipt; and that at all events defendant could not set up this objection. Cockburn v. Sylvester, 27 C. P. 34.

— Receipt—Necessity for Separation.]
—A warehouseman sold 3,500 bushels of wheat, part of a larger quantity which he had in store, and gave the purchaser a warehouseman's receipt under the statute, acknowledging that he had received from him that quantity of wheat, to be delivered pursuant to his order to be indorsed on the receipt. The 3,500 bushels were never separated from the other wheat of the seller: — Held, that the purchaser had an insurable interest. Box v. Provincial Ins. Co., 18 Gr. 280; S. C., 15 Gr. 331, 552.

— Receipt—Non-nament of Price.1—The defendants had over 4,000,000 feet of lumber in a yard in Rockland. Ont., and sold on the price of the yard in Rockland. Ont. and sold on six months' cred angent in the office of the yard as fellows: "Montreal, 22th January, 1887, Messrs, W. C. Edwards & Co., Rockland, Ont. Gentlemen.—You will please ratify Mr. Lenny's order for one million feet 3 mill culls 13 feet and 493,590 feet 3 mill culls 14-16 feet sold to Mr. William Little, fo.b. of bares, with option to draw them from the piles, if he wants some during winter. Yours truly, N. Hurteau et Frère." A few days after the sale the agent gave an order on the owners of the yard for delivery of the lumber to L., which order was accepted by the owners. L. had given a six months' note for the price of the lumber, and just before it matured he asked the defendants to renew, which they refused, and on L. saying that he could not pay, the defendants replied that he must keep his lumber, whereupon he was informed by L. of his agreement with the plaintiff made about a month after the purchase from the defendants, by which he pledged to the plaintiff. On the trial of an interpleader issue to determine the title to this lumber it was shewn by the evidence that the quantity sold to L. had never been separated from the defendants had always kept it insured, considering it theirs until paid for:—Held, that the property in the lumber never passed out of the defendants. Assent of Purchaser—Necessity [cr.]—A, being indebted to B, and C,, and being insolvent, was about to leave the country, but desired to secure to B, the debt he owed him, and instructed his clerk to that effect, who after A's departure made an assignment of his goods to B,, without B,'s knowledge or consent, and before B.'s consent was received the goods were seized by a sheriff on an attachment issued at the suit of C;—Held, that the sale to B, was not complete until his assent was received, and that the sheriff, having seized the goods before such assent, could not be treated as a trespasser. Barrett v, Rapelje, 4 O, S, 175.

Equitable Interest in Goods-Payment Claim against—Possession—Execution.]an hotel keeper, contracted with Messrs. N. for the purchase of a piano for $400, payable by instalments, they retaining the property until full payment of the purchase money, with possession to W. at an agreed rental. Subsequently W. borrowed $600 from rental. Subsequently W, borrowed $600 from plaintiff, giving her a chattel mortzage on certain property in the hotel, not including the piano. After W, had paid $250 on the piano, he sold out the hotel and chattels therein, subject to the mortzage to M, the piano, as not yet vested in W, not being included in the sale. A further instalment coming due, the plaintiff and W, agreed, with the privity of M, and Messrs, N, that the $250 already paid on the piano should be credited on the plaintiff mortgage, and that M, should now plaintiff's mortgage, and that M. should pay the balance due on the piano, which was also the balance due on the plano, which was also to be so credited, and that plaintiff was thus to acquire the piano, which, at Messrs, N.'s desire, was to remain in M.'s possession until the whole purchase money was paid. M. then paid $100 of the amount due, but, before the balance of $50 was paid, the piano was seized under an execution by defendant against W. Messrs, N. then claimed the piano, and an interpleader order was applied for, when the plaintiff paid Messrs. N. the amount due, and was substituted as claimant, and an inter-pleader was directed to try whether defendant was entitled to the proceeds of the piano, which had been sold under the execution:— Held, that the plaintiff was entitled to such proceeds, for she had an interest in the piano, equitable if not legal, preferable to defendant's claim, and M. was holding for her. Black v. Drouillard, 28 C. P. 107.

Evidence of Property Vesting.]—In trover for wheat and flour, the plaintiff claimed as purchaser from H. K. & Son, the owners of a grist mill, on the 14th and 15th October, 1851; the defendants, as assignees of H. K. & Son, for the benefit of creditors, by assignment dated the 31st October, At the trial evidence was given as to the quantity of wheat in the mill on the 18th October, and of the flour delivered from the mill before the assignment to the defendants, upon which defendants contended that, from the proved course of business in the mill, none of the identical wheat there at the time of the sale to the plaintiff could have been manufactured into the flour of which defendants had taken possession under the assignment. The jury having found for the plaintiff, the court, upon the evidence, granted a new trial upon payment of costs, holding that the evidence left it doubtful whether the property in any wheat ever vested in the plaintiff; and that the weight of evidence rendered it probable that no part of the wheat in the mill at the time of the contract with the plaintiff came into defendants possession. Rigney v. Mitchell, 2 C. P. 298.

Recognition of Ownership—Transfer of Bill of Lading.]—The declaration alleged that the plaintiff by his agents delivered to defendants 8,000 bushels of his corn, to be carried from Chicago to Stratford, &c., and to be delivered to the Bank of Montreal or their assigns; that the bank assigned the corn their assigns: that the bank assigned the coton to the plaintiff, yet that defendants neglected for an unreasonable time to carry and deliver it, whereby the plaintiff lost a market, and was afterwards obliged to sell for a less price than he would otherwise have done. peared that the corn was shipped by M. & Co., "as agents and forwarders," on account of whom it might concern, to be delivered to the Bank of Montreal or their assigns, and the bill of lading was indorsed by the agent of the bank to the plaintiff, with whom defendants treated as the owner, and delivered it to him after some delay caused by a charge made and afterwards remitted by them. was objected that the consignor or consignee was objected that the consignor or consignee only could sue upon this contract, not the plaintiff; that the bank could not assign to him; and if they could, the right of action would not pass. There was no evidence to shew what interest the bank had in the corn : -Held, there being no plea denying plaintiff's property in the corn, that he was admitted to have been the owner when it was shipped; that the bill of lading did not transfer the property to the bank, in whom no other right was shewn; that their indorsement was there-fore unnecessary; and that he was entitled to maintain the action. Semble, however, that if he had first acquired his title by such indorsement, he might have sued defendants for any negligence occurring after they had recognized him as owner. A bill of lading is not con-clusive proof of the change of property, like a bill of sale; it is a question of evidence whether such an operation should be given to it. Kyle v. Buffalo and Lake Huron R. W. Co., 16 C. P. 76.

Money Advanced-Warehouse Receipt-Lien on Proceeds.]—The plaintiff purchased barley from R., telling him to consign it to C. and draw on C. for the purchase money. C. was to keep the barley as plaintiff's agent until the sheriff directed him to sell, the plaintiff paying him such a sum as he might require by way of margin to protect himself against a fall in price. C., to reimburse his advance on R.'s draft, obtained a discount from the bank on his own note secured by the warehouse receipt for the barley, which he transferred to the bark. While C, held the barley the plaintiff paid to him $540 as mar-gin to hold it. The barley was shipped by plaintiff's instructions to Oswego, to the order of the bank, where it was sold; and the bank received the proceeds on the 2nd December, having previously had notice that the plaintiff owned the barley. About the 17th November left the country, and an attachment in insolvency having issued against him, an in-terpleader was directed to try whether the balance of such proceeds above the bank's advances belonged to his assignee or to the plaintiff :- Held, that the plaintiff was entitled to it, for the barley was his, and the money, the proceeds of its sale, never came into C.'s hands, or was mixed with his general assets. C. had advanced by paying R.'s draft more than the proceeds of the barley, and it was contended therefore that there was no surplus available for the plaintiff:—Held, that the plaintiff was entitled to deduct from such advance the sum paid by way of margin. After C. had absconded the plaintiff went to his office to ask about his barley, and there saw R., the manager of C.'s business, who went with him to the bank and had a conversation with the cashier:—Held, that their evidence of what passed was clearly admissible. Cotter v. Mason, 30 U. C. R. 181.

Stolen Property — Sale at Auction — Market Overt.] — Where a horse was stolen from plaintiff, and bought by defendant at public auction, but not in market overt, and the plaintiff afterwards seeing the horse took possession of it, and defendant immediately retook it:—Held, that the plaintiff had a right to retake it, no property having pessed to defendant by the sale; and that, although it was in his possession only for a moment, yet the property revested in him, and he could maintain trespass against defendant for the retaking. Boveman v. Yielding, M. T. 3 Viet.

See McNeil v. Keleher, 15 C. P. 470.

6. Purchase by Sample or Inspection.

(Sec. also, post 7.)

Guaranteed Inspection—Necessity for Sample before Acceptance. 1—Defendant agreed to buy from plaintiff 1,000 barrels of flour, deliverable at a good port on Lake Ontario in Max, 1856, and to be guaranteed inspection extra in Boston or New York at 89 per barrel, free on board. It appeared that on the 27th Max the plaintiff told the broker at Toronto through whom the contract was made, and who was interested in half of the flour, that he was ready to deliver it at Hamilton, and gave him an order on M. & Co., of Hamilton, to deliver the flour to him on receipt of the purchase money; which the broker said would not be satisfactory to defendant. Next day plaintiff offered defendant the receipt of the Great Western Railway Company for the flour, with a delivery order indorsed in defendant's favour, which defendant refused, saying that he must first see a sample. After due notice to defendant the thour was sold by auction at a price much lower than he had agreed to give, and plaintiff sued for the difference in an action for not accepting:—Held, that he was entitled to recover. George v. Glass, 14 U. C. R. 514.

Inspector—Acceptance of,]—A contract for the sale of lumber was made wholly by correspondence, and the letter which completed the bargain contained the following provision: "The inspection of this lumber to be made after the same is landed here" (at acceptance) by a completent inspector to be inspection to be final;"—Held, that it was not essential for the parties to agree upon an inspector before the inspection was begun; and a person chosen by the buyer having inspected the lumber, and before his work was completed the seller having agreed to accept him as inspector, the contract was satisfied, and the inspection final and binding on the parties. Thomson v. Matheson, 30 S. C. R. 357.

Opportunity for Inspection — Careat Emptor, —The plaintiff, a fruit dealer in Ortawa, went to Montreal for the purpose of buying fruit, where he met the defendant, who had a quantity of apples for sale. The defendant, in answer to a question by one H., his agent, said they would be found to be "a good lot," and H. opened several barrels for the purpose of plaintiff examining the contents, which he did in five or six instances, when the apples "appeared to be good." The plaintiff might, had he so desired, have examined all the barrels; but, having previously bought apples packed by the defendant which proved satisfactory, and placing reliance on the reputation of the defendant for being an honest packer, he refrained from any further examination, and purchased 138 barrels, which, on his subsequently attempting to sell, proved to be so inferior in quality that some persons refused to buy, and others returned what they had bought. Thereupon the plaintiff instituted proceedings to recover compensation for the defect in value:—Held, that, as the sale was not a sale by sample, and the plaintiff had not been deterred by any acts or conduct of the defendant from making a full examination or inspection of all the barrels, the defendant was not liable on any warranty, express or implied, and that the maxim "caveat emptor" applied. Borthweick v. Young, 12 A. R. 671.

Under a contract to supply goods of a specified description which the buyer has no opportunity of inspecting, the goods must not only, in fact, answer the specific description, but must be saleable or merchantable under that description. On a sale of goods when the buyer has no opportunity of inspection, the maxim caveat emptor does not apply. Moorrs v. Gooderham and Worts (Limited), 14 O. R. 451.

Place of Inspection—Agency—Ratification.]—Held, by the court of appeal, that in a sale by sample of goods to be "laid down" at a certain place, inspection, if desired, must be made there, and, if a proper opportunity of making inspection be afforded, and the buyer refuse to inspect, and demand that the goods be shipped to another place for inspecgoods be shipped to another place for inspec-tion, the seller is justified in treating this as a breach of contract. Held, by the supreme court of Canada, affirming this decision, that where goods are sold by sample, the place of delivery is, in the absence of a special agree-ment to the contrary, the place for inspection by the buyer, and refusal to inspect there, when opportunity therefor is afforded, is a breach of the contract to purchase. Evidence of mercantile usage will not be allowed to add to or affect the construction of a contract for sale of goods in New York by persons domiciled there. unless the latter are shewn to have been cog-nizant of it, and can be presumed to have made their contract with reference to it. If persons in Canada contract to purchase goods in New York, through brokers, first by tele-gram and letters, and completed by exchange of bought and sold notes signed by the brokers, the latter may be regarded as agents of the purchasers in Canada; but if not, if the purchasers make no objection to the form of contract, or to want of authority in the brokers, and after the goods arrive refuse to orokers, and after the goods arrive retuse to accept them on other grounds, they will be held to have ratified the contract. Oetrichs v. Trent Valley Woollen Mfg. Co., 20 A. R. 673, 23 S. C. R. 682.

Delivery—Refusal to Accept.]—The defendants agreed with one W., who stated in-correctly that he was acting as broker for correctly that he was acting as broker for the plaintiff, for the purchase by sample of a quantity of cotton waste at one and one-fourth cents per pound, to be delivered at St. Catharines. In reality W. was selling for his own benefit, as he arranged to purchase the waste at one cent a pound. Instead of inspecting the goods at St. Catharines, the defendants requested W. to consign them to actenions requested W. to consign them to their house in Cincinnati, U. S., which the plaintiff did by direction of W. The plain-tiff, at the request of W., made out a bill of lading in the name of the defendants and drew on them for the price at one and one-fourth on them for the price at one and one-tourth cents per pound, which draft was accepted by the defendants, the plaintiff paying W. his profit in cash. On the goods reaching Cincinnati, an inspection took place, when they were found greatly inferior to the sample. The defendants rejected the goods, but refused to return them to the plaintiff at St. Catharines, although he was willing to accept them there. In an action on the bill of exchange:—Held. that the defect in quality formed no ground that the detect in quality formed no ground of defence; that the plaintiff's contract was to deliver the goods at St. Catharines, where the inspection ought prima facie to have taken place; and that the only redress of the defendants was by cross-action. Towers v. Dominion Iron and Metal Co., 11 A. R. 315.

—Shipment—Description of Goods.]—
The plaintiff contracted with the defendant, a dealer in lumber, to sell him 200,000 feet of eighteen foot plank of red or white pine two inches thick, and from six to twelve inches wide; "quality the same as he had supplied the previous year," to be paid for by acceptance at three months from date of shipment. The lumber was to be shipped f.o.b., at the plaintiff's mills, to such places as the defendant should direct. A shipment was made of some car loads which the defendant accepted. Subsequent shipments were made, some car loads of which were received and others rejected at Hamilton, where the defendant carried on business:—Held, in an action for the price, that under the terms of the contract the inspection should have been made at the plaintiff's mills and (affirming the judgment in 9 O. R. 566), that the defendant could not reject the lumber at Hamilton unless it was shewn that the article delivered was not the article agreed to be delivered; and the evidence failed to shew that the description of the lumber mentioned in the contract was not substantially satisfied. Dyment v. Thomson, 12 A. R. 659.

Held, affirming the judgment in 12 A. R. 635, that, under the circumstances of the case, the defendant had no right to reject the her, his only remedy for the deficiency being to obtain a reduction of the price or damages for non-delivery according to the contract, S. C., sub nom, Thompson v. Dyment, 13 S. C. 18, 203.

Shipinent—Wairer.]—By telegrams and letters the defendant offered to sell the plaintiff twelve cars of barley, to be delivered free on the track in Toronto at sixty-six cents per bushel, of the quality of two cars previously shipped by the defendant to the plaintiff, subject to inspection by the plaintiff at his own expense at Lansdowne. The plaintiff telegraphed. "All right, will take the lot. Ship one car on receipt—quick." By letter of same date the plaintiff sid that this might save the necessity of his sending down to inspect, as if this car was all right he need not do so. The car was sent by the defendant, who, however, wrote at once, when advising of the shipment, that the only way he would sell would be to have the barley inspected at his grain house. Defendant drew on the plaintiff or the price of the car sent, which was paid. The plaintiff did not inspect, but, after receiving this car, he wrote and telegraphed to defendant to ship the balance, but defendant refused to do so:—Held, that the contract was subject to the condition stipulated for by the defendant, that the plaintiff should inspect before shipment; and that the shipment of one car, with the letter accompanying it, was not a waiver of the condition for inspection at Lansdown of the residue, which the defendant was therefore not bound to deliver. Goodall v. Smith, 46 U. C. R. 388.

Waiver.]—Held, in this case, that, even though inspection might be a term of the contract, this was chiefly for the plaintiff's protection, and he might waive it, as he had done, by a letter. Ballantyne v. Watson, 30 C. P. 529.

7. Quantity and Quality. (See, also, ante 6.)

Deficiency in Quantity—Bill of Lading—Weighing—Notice.]—In an action for the price of S19 tons of coal the defendants pleaded delivery of only 755 tons, and tendered the triber of the strength of the streng

Difference in Quality — Grade:]—The defendant company agreed to purchase from the plaintiff a quantity of iron called "Depere" iron, the plaintiff to deliver the same as the plaintiff subsequently, without any requirement of their wards. The plaintiff subsequently, without any requirement of the defendants shipped of them the plaintiff from manufactured for of another brand of iron manufactured to a different company, though using the same ore and fuel and making the same grade of iron as the Depere Company. The defendants refused to accept the iron offered:—Held, affirming the judgment in 31 C. P. 475, that the defendants were not bound to accept the iron so tendered, neither could the plaintiff recover the value thereof, the iron being a different article from that contracted for. Held strom v. Toronto Car Wheel Co., 8 A. R. 827.

Excessive Quantity—Description—"Car Load"—Option.]—The defendants agreed to buy from the plaintiff a car load of hogs at a rate per pound. live weight. The plaintiff shipped a "double-decked" car load, and the defendants refused to necept this, contending that a "single-decked" car load should have been shipped. There was conflicting evidence as to the meaning given in the trade to the term "car load of hogs," and it was shewn that hogs were shipped sometimes in the one way and sometimes in the other term "car lead of hogs," and it was shewn that hogs were shipped sometimes in the one way and sometimes in the other —Held, that the plaintiff had the option of loading the car in any way in which a car might be ordinarily or usually loaded, and that he having elected to ship a double-decked car load, the defendants were bound to accept. Hanley v. Canadian Packing Co., 21 A. R. 119.

Waiver, 1—The defendants, with the knowledge that a consignment of goods was in excess of the quantity ordered by them, made no objection on that ground, though negotiations took place for a reduction in price, on account of delay, &c., but took into stock fifteen out of twenty-five cases sent. The other ten cases remained in bond till they were sold to pay duties:—Held, that there was evidence on which a waiver of any objection as to the excess was properly found. Goodycar Rubber Co. v. Foster, 1 O. R. 242.

See Brown v. Shaw, 1 A. R. 293, ante II.

Inferiority in Quality—Acceptance— Quantum Meruit. —The defendant purchased from the plaintiff a car load of "No. 1 green to be delivered at the railway station. hoons On their arrival at the station they were removed by the defendant to his own place and some of the hoops used by him, but merely, as he said, for the purpose of testing them. He then wrote to the plaintiff that he was astonished at his sending dry and rotten hoops for first-class green hoops, and if he, defendant, had seen them before they were at his place he would not have touched them; that there were less in the car than the number stated by the plaintiff; that he enclosed a bill which was the amount he intended to pay, and not a cent more, because they were not worth that; and if the plaintiff would accept the amount offered to let the defendant know by return mail, and he would remit. In answer, the plaintiff, through his solicitor, threatened a suit, when the defendant replied that if plaintiff would not accept this he might go on and sue :-Held, that there was evidence to go to the jury of an acceptance of the hoops, and an agreement to pay on a quantum meruit. McClure v. Kreutziger, 6 O. R. 480.

Acceptance of Bills for Price—Counterchim—Loss.]—The defendant ordered a quantity of boots from plaintiff at Montreal, through G., plaintiff's agent, who shewed defendant samples, some being known in the trade as "solid leather," and others as "sholdy." The defendant said he bought what was represented as solid leather, while G. said he sold by sample, and that the boots were in accordance therewith. The order was given in September, and parts delivered respectively in October and November, and the balance somewhat later. The defendant said he complained, in October, and again some three weeks later, to G. of the quality of the boots, and said that he would ship them back, when G. told him to do so. The defendant said he shewed G. a pair of the boots which had turned out badly, and G. said as he was going to Montreal he would shew them to the plain-tiff. On G.'s return he told defendant that if there were any more like that to send them all back. In January the defendant went to Montreal and asked for an extension of time for payment, to see if the goods turned out all right, which the plaintiff refused to give, when defendant said if they did not turn out right he would return them. The boots were taken into stock and a large quantity sold; but a few pairs were returned. In February the defendant claimed to be entitled to return the boots as not answering the contract. There was no evidence to shew what defendant's loss was: and the whole evidence was conflicting. was urged that the defect was a latent one, and therefore not discoverable by ordinary in-spection and examination. The defendant accepted four bills of exchange in payment of the price, one of which he paid after maturity. In an action on the other three the defendant denied his liability thereon; and also counter-claimed for damages. The Judge at the trial found for the plaintiff on the bills, and dismissed the counterclaim, without prejudice to the defendant bringing a fresh action for damages :- Held, that the finding as to the bills was correct, as there was unquestionably a good consideration therefor: and defendant's remedy, if any, must be on his counterclaim; but, in the absence of any evidence of loss, there could be no judgment thereon; and also, if the Judge at the trial had decided on the conflicting evidence, the court might not be able to interfere. The right, however, concedable to interfere. The right, however, conceded, of bringing a fresh action, placed the defendant in as favourable a position as he could expect. Leggatt v. Clarry, 13 O. R. 105.

— Culling, 1—Plaintiff agreed in writing to sell to defendant, at a rate named, 60,000 merchantable oil barrel staves, subject to the culling of one S. Plaintiff sued on this contract, alleging the delivery of the staves, duly culled by S. Defendant pleaded denying the delivery and acceptance of staves which had been culled by S., to any greater extent than 52,479, to which amount payment was pleaded; but at the trial he relied, as to the residue of the staves, solely upon the fact that these latter were not merchantable staves, although they had been approved by S.;—Held, that the culling of S, must be taken as conclusive between the parties under the contract, and that it was not competent for defendant, upon the issue joined, to raise any questions as to the quality of the staves after approval by S. DeCeu v. Clark, 19 C. P. 155.

— Flour—Inspection.] — Held, that, under the circumstances of this case, the plaintiff was entitled to recover, because certain flour sold to him as "Victoria Extra." had not passed inspection as "extra superfine." Bunnet v. Whitlave, 14 U. C. R. 241.

Where flour is guaranteed to inspect of a particular grade, such as "No. 1 superfine," it must inspect sweet of that grade. Bain v. Gooderham, 15 U. C. R. 33.

Particular "Brand"—Estoppel.]—Acceptance and User.]—The plaintiffs agreed to deliver to the defendants a quantity of Staffordshire Crown Bar Iron of the T. K. brand. A part of the iron was delivered to the defendants, of which a considerable quantity was unbranded; the defendants, however, did not treat the absence of the brand as creating a difficulty in the way of their accepting the iron, but proceeded to test it, and, finding it unsatisfactory, declined to receive any more, or to pay for the whole or part. This action was then brought for the contract price of the whole. The jury found that the iron was merchantable, but not equal in quality to the standard T. K. Crown brand:—Held, that the duty of the plaintiffs under the contract would have been performed if they had supplied to the defendants merchantable iron bearing on its face the genuine brand contracted for; but, in the absence of that authentication, and having regard to the conduct of the defendnaving regard to the conduct of the defend-ants, the contract must be taken to be one for the sale of iron manufactured by the T. K. Co., of the quality usually indicated by the Crown brand, and so the defendants would have the right to test it, and, according to the findings of the jury, would have been justified in rejecting it all; and the fact that the portion which was branded was below the standard did not setten the definition. standard, did not estop the defendants from shewing that the portion which was unbranded snewing that the portion winer was unormored was also below the standard. But held, that the defendants, having used in the manufacture of their machines, after the doubtful quanty of the iron had been brought to their notice, and without the consent of the plaintiffs, a considerable quantity of what had been delivered to them as part of an entire con-tract, had precluded themselves from objecting to the remainder of that which came into their possession. Held, also, that the property in the part of the iron which was not delivered to the defendants, must be taken to remain in the plaintiffs; for defendants had never exercised their right to test it, and had re-fused to receive it, and until tested the plain-tiffs could not compel the defendants to accept it. The action was treated as one for the price of iron which the defendants accepted. and for damages arising from their refusal to accept the remainder, and, in accordance with the findings of the jury, which, in the opinion of this court, were sustained by the evidence, judgment was entered for the plaintiffs for the actual value of the part of the iron delivered only (the damages having been negatived by the jury), and for the defendants upon their counterclaim for damages sustained from the breach of contract, other than by reason of the interior quality of the iron; and the plaintiffs were allowed the costs of the action, and the defendants the costs of the action, and the defendants the costs of the counterfaim. Bertram v. Mersey Manufacturing Co., 15 O. R. 516.

Particular Chattel — Representation.] — The respondent bought at auction, through an agent, a billiard table described in the auctioneer's advertisement as "a full size 6 pocket English billiard table made by Thurston," &c., and wrote to the appellants, makers of billiard tables in Toronto, describing his table and asking terms of exchanging it for a new one of another style. On receiving the information asked, the respondent wrote that he could not accept the terms offered. The appellants wrote to the respondent asking him to make an offer for an exchange, and to give a description of the table. To this the respondent answered; "I may just say I never saw our table yet, but am informed it is a very nice one, made by "Thurston," and very little the worse of wear. The gentleman who purchased the table for us writes thus: "I got the 3 billiard balls and marker, and 19 cues, which is all that is needed for billiards. I am told the table is a great bargain, cost £200 in England, and is not much the worse for wear. The table is 6 x 12, and Merca herosom manifecturing flour, marks it as of a particular quality, that amounts to a warranty of its being of such quality. Held, that in this case the evidence of representations made by the seller at the time of sale were sufficient to warrant the jury in finding an express warranty. Chisholm v. Proudfoot, 15 U. C. R. 203.

— Warranty—Delivery—Acceptance.]
—In a contract for the purchase of deals from A. by S. et al., merchants in London, it was stipulated, inter alia, as follows: "Quality —Sellers guarantee quality to be equal to the usual Etchemin Stock and to be marked with the Beaver Brand:" and the mode of delivery was f. o. b. vessels at Quebec, and payment by drafts payable in London 120 days' sight from date of shipment. The deals were shipped at Quebec on board vessels owned by P. & Bros., at the request of P. & P. intending purchasers of the deals. When the deals arrived in London they were inspected by S. et al., and found to be of inferior quality, and S. et al., after protesting, sold them at reduced rates. In an action in damages for breach of contract:

S. Other Cases.

Deduction from Price—Conflicting Evidence—Jury.] — Defendant sold the plaintiff an ox at 25s. per cwt, and received 20s. as earnest. Some days after, the ox was weighed at 15 cwt, and the plaintiff offered $46 as the balance of purchase money, contending that by the original agreement one-third was to be taken off for offal. Defendant denied this and refused to deliver the ox, and the plaintiff thereupon brought replevin. The evidence as to the bargain was contradictory:—Held, that the jury should have been told, that if the agreement was as stated by the plaintiff he was entitled to succeed; but that if that was not clear, and defendant refused under the bona fide belief that there was to be no deduction, then they should find in his favour. O'Rourke v. Lee, 18 U. C. R. 609.

Liability for Customs Duty-Payment by Purchaser—Recovery.]—The defendant, assignee in insolvency of L. & Co., advertised the whole estate for sale, consisting of a wholesale stock of groceries, &c., and a distillery and plant, which were specified in the advertisement in parcels, with the supposed value of each, the total being said to be about $51,000. He had an inventory prepared which $51,000. He had an inventory prepared which professed to give the cost price, and the advertisement invited tenders "at so much in the dollar on inventory price," to be paid in the donar on inventory price, to be paid in three equal quarterly instalments, or five per cent, to be allowed off for cash. Most of the goods were then in bond. W. & Co., on the 12th January, 1875, tendered for the whole stock, "as per inventory, the sum of 7614 cents on the dollar, payable in cash after having checked over the stock and found it correct." On the next day, at a meeting of On the next day, at a meeting of creditors, the assignee was instructed to accept this offer, and he wrote to W. & Co.. accepting it, repeating the offer almost in their words. Afterwards, acting under the orders of certain creditors, the assignee re-fused to deliver the goods to W. & Co., unless they would pay the duty as well as the 76½ cents on the $51,000; and to obtain the goods, W. & Co. had to pay $43,000, being about $1,500 more than they would owe according to their offer, without the duty :- Held, that looking at the advertisement, tender, and acceptance, W. & Co. were not bound to pay the duty; and that the payment by them was not a voluntary one, so as to prevent them from recovering back the excess as money had and received. W. & Co., to obtain possession of part of the distillery plant which was affixed to the distillery, had to expend money in order to remove it:—Held, recoverable as money paid. Wilson v. Mason, 38 U. C. R.

Usage of Trade. |—Plaintiffs bought from defendant certain coal, shipped to defendant at Toronto from a foreign port, and then lying on board the vessel in the Welland Canal. A sale note was given, stating only the quantity and price, and the time by which it was to be taken out of the vessel:—Held, that defendant was not obliged to pay the import duties. Held, also, that evidence was rightly admitted to shew the usage of the trade on sales made under such circumstances. Brown v. Browne, 9 U. C. R. 312.

Place of Delivery—Change of—Extra Freight.]—The defendants agreed to sell to the plaintiff a quantity of tow, to be delivered the plaintiff a quantity of tow, to be delivered that is, a point state of a "Boston point." that is, a point state of a "Boston point." that is, a point state of the plaintiff of the plaintiff, but subsequently be desired to have the tow sent to Franklin, N.H., which was not a Boston point on that railway system, and he agreed to pay the arbitrary or extra freight, which he supposed was five cents per 100 nounds. The defendants accordingly consigned the goods to "Franklin, N.H., and in the ordinary course of transport they were taken to Boston, and thence to Franklin, N.H., while, wh.H., where they were received by the plaintiff, subject to railway charges greativexceeding the five cents per 190 pounds. It happened that Franklin was a Boston point upon the lines of railway with which the Graud Trunk Railway connected at St. Albans, and the defendants had on one occasion shipped two car loads from stations of the Grand Trunk Railway by that route, but, in consequence of delays at the St. Albans custom house, the plaintiff wrote directing the defendants to ship by the Suspension Bridge: —Held, that by their contract the defendants were not bound to ship to Franklin, N.H., which was not a Boston point within the contract; and that under the circumstances the plaintiff, and not the defendants, was bound to pay the extra freight. Symmers v. Livingstone, 10 A. R. 355.

Possession—Payment of Price—Execution Conveyance. |—The declaration stated that by agreement between the plaintiff and J. and H., two of the defendants, the plaintiff was entitled, on delivering to them certain goods, to a conveyance in fee, free from incum-brances, of two lots mentioned, which were then subject to a mortgage to one A. S.; and, in consideration that the plaintiff would accept a conveyance and deliver up the goods, defendants by an agreement in writing promised to pay the plaintiff $500 in six weeks, if in the meantime the lots should not be released from the mortgage. Averment. that the conveyance was so accepted and the that the conveyance was so accepted and the goods delivered; that the mortgage had not been discharged; and that defendants had not paid the $500. The two agreements were put in. The first, under seal, dated 1st June, 1865, set out the sale of the goods by the plaintiff to the defendants J. and H., for which they agreed to pay $1,400-$200 on receiving possession, $500 by a conveyance in few of the vesselots. fee of the two lots, to be taken as cash for that sum, and the remaining $700 by instalments, as stated in the agreement : - Held, that under this agreement defendants were not entitled to possession of the goods until payment of the $200 and execution of the conveyance. Greenham v. Watt, 25 U. C. R.

Return of Article.] — See Hamilton v. Northey Mfg. Co., 31 O. R. 468.

Right of Selection - Parol Evidence -Usage.] — The plaintiffs in the beginning of January, 1880, had purchased through C. and re-G, of Montreal, a quantity of rails, and requiring 2,000 tons more, negotiations were entered into between H., the plaintiff's agent, C, and G, and the defendant, which resulted in a note being signed on the 14th January addressed to the defendant advising him they had sold to the plaintiffs on the defendant's account 2,000 tons of rails (56 lbs, to the yard) at £8 18s. 9d. stg. per ton, payment to be made in London against documents, and credit to be there opened with approved bankers in favour of defendant's agent. The defendant, who was then in Montreal, signed a sale note in similar terms to the above. sale was immediately communicated to the plaintiffs, who signed a confirmatory note, adding the words that the make should be either Ebbwvale or Moss Bay, and wrote across the face that the rails were to be 56 lbs, "ordinary section and specification." This confirmatory note was not communicated to the defendant until after action brought. The credit was opened by the plaintiffs in accord-ance with the contract. The plaintiffs and defendant were dealers in and not manufac-turers of rails. The defendant, at the time the contract was entered into, had purchased rails from a firm in England, who were also dealers and not manufacturers, and who had arranged with the manufacturers at Ebbwvale for the manufacture of rails of a section known as "Hamilton and North-Western," and which came within the term "ordinary section," by which a number of different kinds of sections were embraced; and these were the rails which the defendant intended delivering to the plaintiffs. The plaintiffs required a section called "Sandberg," which also came within the term, ordinary section," and when they discovered the defendant's rails were Hamilton and North-Western, they endeavoured to get defendant to change the section, which the defendant was unable to do. The plaintiffs allowed the rails to be shipped to them and paid for under the credit, and it was not till afterwards that they notified the defendant of their refusal to accept, contending that un-der the contract they had the right to name the section:—Held, that, even if the confirma-tory note were embraced in the contract, it did not give the plaintiffs the right of selec-tion; that parol evidence was not admissible tion: that paroi evidence was not admissione to add such a term to the contract; and that the evidence failed to establish any usage giving such right, especially as the parties were dealers and not manufacturers, and in view of the plaintiff's conduct in the matter; and that the contract was therefore performed by the section delivered. Page v. Proctor, 5 O. R. 238.

Time, Essence of Contract.]—In an action for non-delivery of choses soil by defendant to plaintiff, it was urged that time was of the essence of the contract, and that the plaintiff should have proved a readiness to accept by the time stipulated, which defendant contended was 20th September:—Held, that the evidence shewed that time was not intended to be so considered; that the contract was only for delivery within the usual time; and that if delivery by the 20th was a condition precedent, it was waived by a letter of the 18th. Bullantyne v. Watson, 30 C. P. 529.

In contracts for the sale and delivery of flour at a future day, and in like cases, time is strictly of the essence of the contract. Coleman v. McDermott, 1 E. & A. 445.

III. PROCEEDINGS ON CONTRACTS.

1. Actions for Goods Sold and Delivered and for Goods Bargained and Sold.

(a) When the Action will Lie.

Agreement to Pay by Bill of Exchange, — Where, in assumpsit for goods sold, the plaintiff produced two writings, by one of which he agreed to deliver to A. W. & Co. 100 barrels of pork at a certain price, and by the other signed by the defendant, "seemt of A. W. & Co.," the defendant agreed to pay for pork by bill in favour of the plaintiff:—Held, that, although defendant was personally liable on his undertaking, yet that the plaintiff should have brought his action against him for not furnishing the bill, and not for goods sold. Counter v. Roebuck, E. T. 3 Vict.

Agreement to Return or Pay.]—"
Good to for the above goods, either to be returned or paid for," attached to a list of the goods:—Held, that after demand the goods might be sued for as goods sold and delivered. Harvie v. Clarkson. 6 U. C. R. 27.

Assignee Suing—Defence—Jus Tertii.]

The an action for goods sold and delivered by plaintiff, the assignee of the J. H. Co., it appeared that before suit a creditors' assignee had been appointed to the estate of the company:—Held, that defendants could not object to plaintiff sittle on the ground of the estate being in the creditors' assignee, for such assignee had not questioned plaintiff's title, and defendants were not defending under him.
Wiccov. Pillow. 28 C. P. 100.

Delivery for Manufacture — Damages for not Manufacturing—Redelivery.]—Semble, that if in an action upon the case for not manufacturing 400 bushels of wheat into flour, the plaintiff recover damages equal to the value of the wheat delivered to the defendant, the latter cannot bring an action for goods sold for part of the wheat which had, in point of fact, been re-delivered to the plaintiff, and that such re-delivery should have been given in evidence in mitigation of damages; and that an action upon the common counts could not at any rate be sustained in such a case. Andrus v. Burnell, Tay. 882.

Executory Contract.]—Defendants, B. and A., being in partnership, agreed under seal to buy a quantity of tobacco from D. M., one of the two plaintiffs. B. signed the name of defendants firm opposite to one seal. By another sealed instrument of the same date the plaintiffs agreed to deliver the tobacco to defendants, and this was also signed opposite to one seal by B., in the name of defendants firm, and opposite the other by D. M., per B. P. Plaintiffs declared as upon a parol agreement for not accepting the tobacco. Common counts were added:—Held, that the contract under the evidence could not be treated as executed, and plaintiffs therefore could not recover upon the common counts. Moor v. Boyd, 23 U. C. R. 459.

Expiry of Credit. |—Where plaintiff sold goods to defendant, who was to give his note at three months for the price, but afterwards took away the goods without giving it:—Held, that an action for goods sold would not lie until the time of the credit had expired. Magrath v. Timining, 6 O. S. 484.

Defendant purchased goods at auction, on the following terms: "Under £2 10s, cash down; over that amount but under £125, eleven months' credit on approved indorsed notes with interest;"—Held, approving Wakefield v, Gorrie, 5 U. C. R. 159, that an action would not lie upon the common counts until the time of credit had expired. Silliman v, McLean, 13 U. C. R. 544.

An action for goods bargained and sold, to be paid for by instalments, cannot be maintained until the full period of credit has expired. Moore v. Kuntz, 44 U. C. R. 309.

Foreign Corporation—Right to Suc.]— Action by a foreign corporation, incorporated in the United States, against residents of this Province, on the common counts. Plea, that defendants are subjects of this Province, and the plaintiffs are a foreign corporation, and cannot sue in this Province. On demurrer:——Held, that, although the plaintiffs might not be able to sue for goods bargained and sold on a contract made wholly in Upper Canada, they could for goods sold and delivered; and, as in this case the plea must be taken to apply distributively to each cause of action stated in the count, that the account stated in Canada must be taken to have been of and concerning dealings which took place in a foreign country, where the right of the corporation to be a party to such proceedings could not be denied. Union India Rubber Co. v. Hibbard, & C. P. 77.

Payment for Land in Goods.]—Where the plaintiff land agreed orally with defendant to purchase land from him, and having been let into possession had made payments on account in money and cattle, and defendant afterwards sold the land to another, promising to repay what he had received from the plaintiff:—Held, that on his refusing to do so, the plaintiff could recover the amount from him in an action for goods sold and delivered. Hill v. Stanton, 2 U. C. R. 149.

Plaintiff orally agreed to purchase certain land of defendant, giving goods in part payment on account of the purchase money:—Held, that the absence of any written agreement would not entitle the plaintiff to sue for the price of his goods as if payable in money. Hoskins v. Mitcheson, 14 U. C. R. 551.

Price Agreed on.]—To sue for goods bargained and sold, the plaintiff must prove a certain price agreed upon; if he cannot, there should be a special count for not accepting. Elvidge v, Richardson, 3 U. C. R. 149.

Promissory Note — Acceptance of — Fraud.]—To an action on the common counts for goods sold, defendant pleaded that at the time of sale the plaintiff agreed to and did receive in payment therefor two promissory notes made by one M. The plaintiff replied that he was induced to receive these notes by fraud (setting out defendant's fraudulent representation respecting them.) The facts as stated in the pleadings being admitted by the plaintiff's counsel:—Held, that the plaintiff could not recover, for, there being an express contract, defendant's fraud could not create an implied one, though it would entitle the plaintiff to sue in trover for the goods, or maintain a special action for the deceit. Sheriff v. McCoy, 27 U. C. R. 597.

Defendant gave a note made by one K., to the plaintiffs, in exchange for a buggy. The note was not paid at maturity, whereupon the plaintiffs sued defendant on the common counts for the price, alleging that he had induced them to take the note by fraudulent representations:—Held, that the plaintiffs could not recover, for, there being an express contract to take the note for the buggy, no agreement to pay in money count be implied by reason of the alleged fraud. Auger v. Thompson, 3 A. R. 19.

Purchase of Goods on Credit—Statutory Inability to Buy on Credit.]—The plaintiff sued the officers and directors of a co-operative association, incorporated under R. S. O. 1887 c. 160, for the price of goods soid on credit, the association being by their Act of incorporation forbidden to buy in that way: —Held, that the plaintiff could not recover, as no action could be maintained upon an implied representation or warranty of authority in law to do an act; and, moreover, the plaintiff must be taken to have known of the statutory inability. Held, also, that, although the proceeds of a resale of the goods by the association were applied to relieve the defendants from a personal liability for other goods purchased by the association, they could not be said to have derived a personal benefit from the plaintiffs goods; and, therefore, the latter could not recover on this ground. Strutters v. Mackensie, 28 O. R. 381.

Shares in Boat—Price of.]—Where one has subscribed for shares in a steamer which another person intends to build, if the subscriber refuse to accept and pay for the shares, an action can be maintained only on the special agreement, not for the price of the shares in the boat not yet built, as if they were a vendible commodity. Cameron v. Thornhill, 1 U. C. R. 132.

Tender of Goods—Necessity [or.]—Where defendant in this country ordered certain articles of clothing from the plaintiff in England, and on arrival here they were received by the plaintiff's agent, who did not not never them with defendant, and the state of the stat

Evidence-Admissibility - Worthlessness of Goods. |-- C. wishing to procure a water wheel which, with the existing water power, would be sufficient to drive the machinery in would be summer to drive the machinery in his mill. A. undertook to put in a "four-foot Sampson turbine wheel," which he warranted would be sufficient for the purpose. The wheel was afterwards put in, but proved not to, by if of the purpose. wheel was atterwards put in, but proved not to be fit for the purpose for which it was wanted. The time for payment of the agreed price of the article having elapsed, C. sued A. for breach of the warranty, and recovered $438 damages. A. subsequently sued C. for the price, and C. offered to give evidence in mitigation of damages that the wheel was worthless and of no value to him. Objection was taken that it was not competent to C to give any evidence in reduction of damages by reason of the breach of warranty, or the ground of the wheel not answering the purpose for which it was intended, and the Judge declared the evidence inadmissible:-Held, reversing the judgment of the court of appeal, 26 C. P. 338, that, as the time for payment of the agreed price of the article had elapsed when the first action was brought. and only special damages for breach of warranty had been recovered, the evidence ten-dered by C. in this case of the worthlessness or inferiority of the article was admissible. Church v. Abell, 1 S. C. R. 442.

Warranty—Breach of;]—In an action between vendor and purchaser for the price of a machine sold under a conditional sale, the defendant may shew that the machine was not as warranted and so reduce the claim by the difference between the value of the machine as warranted and its actual value. Tominson v. Morris, 12 O, R. 311, specially referred to. Cull v. Roberts, 28 O. R. 591.

2. Actions for Non-acceptance.

(a) Damages Recoverable.

Deed of Vessel—Whole Value.]—In an action against the vendee upon a contract to accept a deed of a vessel, and to give a mortgage upon it for the purchase money, the declaration, which shewed a delivery of the vessel by the plaintiff to the defendant under the contract, alleged as a breach the refusal of the defendant to accept such deed; and averded that by means thereof the vessel and its price had been lost to the plaintiff. The jury gave the plaintiff a verdict for the whole value of the vessel, and the court refused to disturb the verdict. Phillips v. Merritt, 2 C. P. 513.

Loss of Profit—Difference in Price.]—Declaration, that plaintiff agreed with defendant to deliver to him on or before the 1st August, at, &c., 500 cords of wood at 14s. per cord, to be paid for monthly, according to the quantity delivered. It then averred delivery of 125 cords before the 1st August; and that, although more than one month had elapsed after the agreement, and although plaintiff was ready and willing to deliver the residue, yet defendant would not pay for the quantity delivered, nor accept the remainder:—Held, that the measure of damages was the value of the quantity of wood delivered at the contract price, and also the difference of profit on the residue of the wood between the current selling price and the contract price. Moore v. Logan, 5 C. P. 294.

Defendant agreed to purchase from plaintiff 2,000 barrels of flour, to be delivered at a good port on Lake Ontario, in all June next, by giving the buyer one week's notice at To-ronto, at 37s. 6d. per barrel, payable on delivery. Plaintiff sued for non-acceptance, averring that he was ready and willing and offered to deliver the flour at Oswego, but defendant refused to accept, and he was obliged to resell at a loss. Defendant pleaded that the plaintiff gave one week's notice of delivery to him at Oswego on the 1st June; that he was ready and willing to accept and pay there on that day, and for a reasonable time thereafter, but that the plaintiff had not the thereafter, but that the plainuff had not the flour then, nor within a reasonable time thereafter. It appeared that the plaintiff had given notice of delivery on the 1st June, but afterwards, on the 31st May, finding that the 1st would fall upon a Sunday, he notified defendant not to attend then, but on the 11th instead; and that he had attended both on the 2nd and 11th and was ready. both on the 2nd and 11th, and was ready to deliver, but defendant was not there to accept :- Held, that the plaintiff was entitled to recover, and that the measure of damages was the difference between the contract price and what he was afterwards obliged to sell for at Oswego, not what was the price at To-ronto. Brunskill v. Mair, 15 U. C. R. 213.

Defendant agreed to buy flour from plaintiff, deliverable at a good port on Lake Ontario, in May, 1856, and to be guaranteed inspection extra in Boston or New York, at $9 per barrel, free on board. It appeared that on the 27th May the plaintiff told the broker at Toronto through whom the contract was made, and who was interested in half of the flour, that he was ready to deliver it at Hamilton, and gave him an order on M. & Co., of Hamilton, to deliver the flour to him on receipt of the purchase money, which the broker said would not be satisfactory to defendant. Next day plaintiff offered defendant the receipt of the Great Western Railway Company for the flour, with a delivery order indorsed in defendant's favour, which defendant refused, saying that he must first see a sample. After due notice to defendant the flour was sold by auction at a price much lower than he had agreed to give, and plaintiff sued for the difference in an action for not accepting:—Held, that he was entitled to recover. George v. Glass, 14 U. C. R. 514.

On the 7th May, 1874, the appellant sold to the respondent 500 tons of hay. The writing, which was signed by the appellant alone, was in the following terms: "Sold to G. A. 500 tons of timothy hay of best quality, at the 500 tons of timothy hay of best quality, at the price of $21 per ton f. o. b. propellers in canal. Montreal, at such times and in such quantities as the said G. A. C. shall order. The said hay to be perfectly sound and dry when delivered on board, and weight tested if required. The same to be paid for on deserver. livery of each lot by order or draft on self, at the Bank of Montreal, the same to be consigned to order of Dominion Bank, Toronto." In execution of this contract, the appellant delivered 147 tons and 33 pounds of hay, after which the respondent refused to re-ceive any more. The appellant, having sevceive any more. The appellant, having several times notified the respondent, both or-ally and in writing, by formal protest on the 28th July, 1874, requested him to take de-livery of the remaining 354 tons of hay. On the 11th November following the appellant brought an action of damages for breach of contract, by which he claimed $3,417.77, to wit, $2,471 difference between the actual value of the hay at the date of the protest and the contract price, and $943.77 for extra expenses which the appellant incurred owing to the refusal of the respondent to fulfil his contract: -Held, that such a contract was to be executed within a reasonable time, and that, from the evidence of the usage of trade, the delivery, under the circumstances, was to be made before the new crop of hay, and that hade before the new crop of any, and that the respondent, being in default to receive the hay when required, was bound to pay the damages which the appellant had sustained, to wit, the difference at the place of delivery between the value when the acceptance was refused and the contract price, and other necessary expenses, the amount of which, being a matter of evidence, was properly within the province of the court below to deter-mine. Chapman v. Larin, 4 S. C. R. 349.

Price of Goods—Property not Passing— Possession—Tender—Waiver.1—On the 30th May, 1899, the plaintiff and defendant agreed in writing for the sale by the former to the latter of certain goods for $175, payable $30 on receipt of bill of lading for or tender of the goods, and the balance to be paid in instalments, for which promissory notes were to be given; the property to remain in the plaintiff until payment of the notes, but the goods to be shipped as soon as possible, freight and charges to be paid by the defendant. On the 6th June the plaintiff sent the defendant an invoice of the goods, and on the 14th of that month the defendant wrote to the plaintiff refusing to proceed with the contract upon the ground that the invoice price was not that agreed upon. On the 15th June the plaintiff advised the defendant that the goods had been shipped and drafts and notes forwarded. Some correspondence ensued, but the defendant adhered to his refusal to take the goods. The goods arrived at the town where the de-fendant lived on the 10th July, and the defendant on the 20th July again wrote to the plaintiff that he had supposed that the plaintiff had concluded not to ship the goods, and again refused to take them, giving as a ground that the senson for use of them had passed, and saying that they were now at the station and saying that bey were now at the station at the plaintiff's risk:—Held, that the de-fendant having refused to perform his con-tract on the 15th June, at which date he did not contend that there had been default on the plaintiff's part, and his refusal remaining unretracted down to the time of the arrival of the goods in July, his right to require ten-der at the date fixed for the performance was waived. Held, also, that the plaintiff was entitled to recover the full price of the goods as damages for breach of the contract, upon the ground that the right to the possession of the goods having been transferred by to the defendant, the plaintiff had done all that he was required by the contract to do to entitle himself to payment of the in the goods was to remain in the plaintiff during the term of credit, notwithstanding the delivery of possession to the defendant, and the fact that the plaintiff had given up possession to the defendant, as far as he could, took the case out of the general rule which prevents a vendor from recovering the price where he has not parted with the property in the goods. Tufts v. Poness, 32 O. R. 51

Retention of Deposit as Compensation for Non-acceptance-Action for. On the 9th July, 1885, the plaintiff, a cattle dealer, bought from defendant forty-two head of cattle for $2,772, and paid $200 on account, the defendant to retain the animals on his pasture until in a condition fit for the English market, for which they were, to the knowledge of the defendant, purchased by the plaintiff. The defendant, insisting that he was bound to retain the cattle until the 20th August only, on the 18th September wrote to the plaintiff requiring him to "settle for the cattle and take them away before the 27th instant, or I will sell the cattle again to get my money out of them." The plaintiff. not having acted upon this notice, the defendant on the 5th October sold forty of the cattle at a loss, and refused to refund the deposit. In an action brought by the plaintiff, the evidence, as to the exact terms of the contract, was contradictory, but the jury found in favour of the plaintiff's version, and gave a verdict for the full amount of deposit, which the court below refused to disturb. The court of appeal, being of opinion that the plaintiff could waive the breach of contract, and simply sue for recovery of the money paid, affirmed the judgment. Murray v. Hutchinson, 14 A. R. 489

(b) Other Cases.

Acceptance by Conduct after Notice for Price. |-Plaintiff on the 7th March, 1864, agreed to sell to the defendant all the lumber which the new saw logs at plaintiff's mill would produce, to be cut in the manner specified, and delivered during the year at the railway station, at a named price per thousand feet, defendant to accept the same, and pay as delivered. About the 21st June defendant inspected and measured 21,072 feet at the mill. On the 29th he went with the plaintiff to the station, and the plaintiff told him there was then 75,000 feet there. On the 21st July this was accidentally burned, By the 17th August an additional quantity had been delivered, making in all 119,000 feet, which defendant was notified by the 20th. The plaintiff having sued defendant on special counts for not accepting, and for goods sold and delivered, the jury were told that an acceptance might be proved either expressly or by permitting a reasonable time to elapse without objection after notice of delivery; and they found for the value of the whole quantity on the last count :-Held, that the verdict was right; that the plaintiff could sue on the common count, though all the lumber contracted for had not been manufactured, for defendant was bound to pay "as deliv-" i. e., after he had received proper notice ered. of delivery and had not objected; that the seller had done all that was requisite, either on his own behalf or the buyer's, by sawing, on as own benalf or the buyer's, by sawing, measuring, delivering, and giving notice, and was therefore entitled to recover. Cox v. Jones, 24 U. C. R. 81.

3. Actions for Non-delivery.

(a) Damages.

Indirect Damages. |—Action on a contract to make and deliver two pair of burmill stones. Breach, their insufficiency and bad quality. The jury, in addition to the cost of new stones, allowed certain sums expended in attempting to repair the broken stones, for dressing them, and for injury caused by their breaking to the machinery of the mill: damages being specially claimed in the declaration on these accounts:—Held, that the verdict was sustainable as to the last two items, but not as to the first. Colton v. Good, 11 U. C. R., 153.

Excessive Damages.]—Under a general allegation in the declaration, that the plaintiff had incurred expense in replacing, altering, and repairing certain lock castings, which the defendant did not make or finish in the manner contracted for:—Held, that plaintiff could properly claim certain traveling expenses to which he had been put in connection therewith. The contract price for the castings in question, to be paid to the defendant, was $52; whilst the jury gave the the plaintiff $337.50, damages, which were proved to be the expenses to which he had been put by reason of defendants' failure to carry out the contract:—Held, not excessive. Lalor v. Burrows, 18 C. P. 321.

Measure of Damages.]—Plaintiff having contracted with S. & Co. to furnish railway ties, of which defendants had notice, defendants agreed to furnish plaintiff with a certain quantity of ties at 11d. per tie. In an action for breach of such sub-contract :- Held, that for breach of such sub-contract:—Held, that the measure of damages was the difference in value upon each tie between what plaintiff was to pay defendants and to receive from S. & Co. Watrous v. Bates, 5 C. P. 367.

Action on a contract to deliver cordwood, required for the purpose of burning brick. The plaintiff proposed to prove that, during the delay occasioned by defendant's neglect to deliver, the price of bricks fell considerably, and he claimed to recover for this loss: and he claimed to recover for this loss:— Held, that such evidence was rightly rejected; and that the measure of damages was only the difference between the price specified in the contract and that actually paid for the wood procured by the plaintiff elsewhere, to-cether with compensation for his trouble. Fechan v. Hallinan, 13 U. C. R. 440.

(b) Pleading.

Counterclaim to Action for Price. |-Held, that to an action by an assignee of an account for the price of lumber and stayes delivered by the assignor to the defendant under two certain contracts therefor, the defend-ant under R. S. O. 1877 c. 116, ss. 7, 10, and the Judicature Act. 1881, ss. 12, 16, and rule 127, can set up as a defence a claim rule 127, can set up as a defence a claim for damage for the non-delivery by the as-signor to the defendant of certain other tim-ber and staves specified in the contracts, and for the inferior quality of those deliv-ered. In this case the trial Judge having re-fused to entertain the former defence, a new trial was ordered. Exchange Bank v. Stinson, 129 C. D. 153. 32 C. P. 158.

Declaration - Willing to Accept - Request.]-Upon an agreement to deliver wheat for the plaintiff at A.'s mill, the plaintiff averred in his declaration "that he was always willing to accept the wheat at the place aforesaid, and to have paid defendant for the same at the rate in that behalf aforesaid, whereof the defendant had notice:"—Held, on motion to arrest judgment, declaration good. Held, also, that plaintiff need not prove, under this agreement, a request on his part to defendant to deliver, or that he was at the mill to accept delivery. Wright v. Weed, 6 U. C. R. 140.

Defence—Denial — Notice—Offer.]—Declaration, that the plaintiff had contracted with one R. to deliver to him 200 firkins of butter, of which defendant had notice; and that defendant promised to use due diligence in endeavouring to procure the same; but that, although defendant procured seven fir-kins for the plaintiff, yet he did not use due diligence in procuring the rest, but made de-fault, whereby the plaintiff was unable to keep the contract, with B. and lett great week the contract with R., and lost great profit which he would otherwise have made. De-fendant pleaded: (1) that the plaintiff did not contract with R., nor had defendant no-Vol. III. p. 196—47

tice thereof, as alleged. (2) That he offered to deliver to plaintiff the said seven firkins procured for him as alleged, but the plainso procured for him as alleged, but the paint-tiff refused to accept the same:—Held, on demurrer, that neither plea offered any de-fence. Robertson v. Hoyes, 15 U. C. R. 293

Extension of Time. |- Declaration, that the defendant agreed to sell and deliver to the plaintiff within one week certain wheat, and the plaintiff advanced $600 on account, yet defendant failed to deliver. Plea, that be fore breach it was agreed that the plaintiff should waive the delivery within one week. and the plaintiff did then waive the same, and extended the time for delivery :- Held, bad, for no subsequent delivery was alleged. nor was it alleged that the extended time had not elapsed. Molson v. Bradburn, 25 U. C.

- Readiness to Deliver--Request. |-Debt on bond, conditioned that defendant should "pay to the plaintiff £43 15s, in build-ing stone, at 15s, per cord, to be delivered for that sum in the town of Hamilton, at such times and in such places as should be required by the plaintiff: twenty cords to be delivered by the 20th of September then next, and the remainder in one year." Defendant pleaded that from the making of the bond until the expiration of one year, he had always been ready and willing to deliver the said stone at ch times and places as should be required the plaintiff, &c.; yet that the plaintiff did not, within one year from the date of the bond, require him to deliver the said stone or any part thereof:—Held, on demurrer, a good defence. Stinson v. Branigan, 10 U. C. R. 210.

Readiness to Deliver-Time.]-In assumpsit for non-delivery of a quantity of hams, which were to be delivered at the opening of the navigation in the spring, defendant pleaded that he was ready and willing to de-liver the hams at such opening, but the plaintiff refused to accept or pay for them; on which issue was joined. There was no proof of any offer or readiness to accept them at the opening of navigation, although some evidence was given of readiness at a subsequent period:—Held, that the jury properly found for defendant. Hancock v. Gibson, 3 U. C. R. 41.

(c) Other Cases.

Agreement-Notice - Request - Plea -Readiness to Deliver—Demand. | —Defendant agreed as follows:—" Within three years, and when desired by him, I promise to pay M. C. N.," (the plaintiff) "or bearer, £50 currency, in such stone and marble work as he may want, at cash price, delivered at Port Dover, value received, with interest:"—Held, that the plaintiff must prove notice to defendant of the kind of stone or marble work required. and when it was to be delivered, and that until such request there could be no default. Quære, whether a plea, that after the making of the agreement, and within three years from the date thereof, the defendant was, and still is, ready and willing to perform the agree-ment, would raise a material issue. Semble, that the defendant, on a proper demand, would have been bound to carry out the agreement, even after the three years. Nickerson v. Gardner, 12 U. C. R. 219.

Tuchy v. Armstrong, 15 C. P. 273.

Demand—Set-off.] — Though a demand may be necessary where A. is suing B. for not delivering goods, &c.; yet where B. is suing A. and A. is setting off his breach against B.'s claim, it does not follow that the same demand must then be proved. Russell v. Rove, 7 U. C. R. 484.

Destruction of Goods before Acceptance—New Trial—Costs.]—A. agreed to sell and deliver "F. O. B." 4,000 barrels of flour by a day named. Of this quantity 3,000 had been delivered, but the remaining 1,000 were not in the possession of the party contractto be delivered, until after the day appointed. Some days afterwards the vendor sent to the broker who had negotiated the sale the order of another person for the required quantity, which, after taking some days to correspond with their vendees, the days to correspond with their vendees, the purchasers agreed to accept, and paid the price agreed upon to the broker, who remitted the money to the vendor, and a vessel was without delay despatched by the purchasers to receive the flour on board. Before reaching the port where the flour was to be shipped, a fire had taken place in the warehouse and destroyed the flour stored therein. In the ab-sence of any evidence shewing a setting apart of the 1,000 barrels, or any acceptance by the purchasers thereof, the court, in an action for non-delivery, while expressing a clear opinion that, under such circumstances, the loss must fall upon the vendors, dismissed an appeal from the decision of the court below granting a new trial on the application of the vendors, such new trial having been ordered upon the view taken of the evidence. They reserved for future consideration the costs of the appeal, thus leaving the new trial to proceed on the terms on which it was ordered. Coleman v. McDermott, 1 E. & A. 445; S. C., 5 C. P.

Recovery of Cash Deposit—Non-completion of Contract.] — The plaintiff, having negotiated with defendant for the purchase of a pair of horses and harness from defendant for $400, paid $154 in cash, and, after some paying the balance, defendant sold the property, whereupon the plaintiff sued, declaring on a special count for not delivering the horses sold to him, and on the common counts. A verdict on the common counts for the sum paid was sustained, on the ground that, upon the evidence, it was not clear that any agreement was ever arrived at as to the terms and time of payment. Quare, as to the plaintiff's rights, if there had been a contract. Semble, that, on tender to him of the price after the conversion by resale, the defendant on non-delivery of the goods would be liable in trover, such non-delivery being a refusal which would vest the right of action by relation; but that, at all events, the plaintiff could in some form of action recover, though perhaps not the full amount paid by him. Heffernan v. Berry, 32 U. C. R. 518.

4. Parties Liable.

Partners.]—Quare, where there are partners employed in making engines, &c., and the plaintiff makes an express contract with one for an engine, can he, notwithstanding such contract, sue them all? Loomis v. Bullard, 7 U. C. R. 396.

Person Obtaining Goods — Vacating Judgment—Fraud.] — A manufacturing com-pany transferred to a syndicate, which had lent it money, its works, plant, and material, and in effect its whole business, which the syndicate proceeded to carry on, on the company's premises, for its own benefit, and at its own risk. The managing director of the company, who had become the manager of the syndicate, after the above transfer, but pursuant to a correspondence commenced a few days before it, ordered, as in his former capacity, certain goods from the plaintiff, who, subsequent to the transfer, supplied the goods ordered, which were used by the syndicate, and he afterwards took a note of the company for their price, on which, when dishonoured, he sued and obtained judgment against the company, being, however, all the time, ignorant of the circumstances above mentioned. About a week prior to the judgment a winding-up order was obtained against the company, hearing of which, the plaintiff at once commenced this action against the syndicate for the price of the goods, and afterwards, before trial, he obtained ex parte an order vacating the judgment against the company:-Held, that the plaintiff was entitled to recover from the syndicate the price of the goods. Keating v. Graham, 26 O. R. 361.

Person to whom Credit Given-Undisclosed Principal.] — A., doing business under the name of J. A. & Sons, assigned all his property and effects to H. for benefit of crediproperty and effects to H. for benefit of credi-tors. H., by power of attorney, authorized A. to collect all moneys due his estate, &c., and to carry on the business if expedient. A. continued the business as before, and in the course of it purchased goods from F., to whom, on some occasions, he gave notes signed "J. A. & Sons, H. trustee, per A." All the goods so purchased from F. were charged in the books to J. A. & Sons, and the dealings be-tween them after the assignment continued for tween them after the assignment continued for five years. Finally, A. being unable to pay what was due to F., the latter brought an action against H. on notes signed as above, and for the price of goods so sold to A .:— Held, that the evidence at the trial of the action clearly shewed that the credit for the goods sold was given to A. and not to H.; that A. did not carry on the business after the assignment at the instance or as the agent of H., nor for the benefit of his estate; that A. was not authorized to sign H's name to notes as he did; and that H. was not liable either as the person to whom credit was given or as an undisclosed principal. Held, further, if H. was guilty of a breach of trust in allow ing A. full control over the estate, that would not make him liable to F. in this action. Hechler v. Forsyth, 22 S. C. R. 489.

Third Person—Privity.]—An action for goods bargained and solid will lie against a person who has become responsible for the payment of goods delivered to a third party. McKenzie v. McBean, 4 O. S. 137.

H. signed a writing in the following words: — "Toronto, 16th December, 1858. Mr. Dixon—Please let the bearer, B., have what goods he may require, and charge yours, M. Hutchirson." Held, not a guarantee for goods furnished to R, on the authority of it, but a direction to furnish the goods on defendant's credit as principal, Grasett v. Hutchinson, 10 C. P. 265.

Defendant purchased goods from the plaintiffs, with instructions to charge and send them to one F., which they did, and, after receiving from him a portion of the purchase money, brought this action against defendant, alleging that he was liable as purchaser. Several letters were put in by defendant, written by the plaintiff to F., in one of which was the following passage: "It is now so long since your account was due, that there is no other recourse left except to follow up Mr. M. (defendant), who is guarantor." And in another: "We shall place the matter in the hands of G., with instructions to proceed immediately against you and Mr. M. for the amount." The plaintiffs also proved that defendant had ordered goods in the same manner from merchants in Montreal, and in some instances paid, and in others given his own notes, for them, and that when asked to pay this demand, he said it would be all right. The jury having found for the plaintiffs, the court refused to disturb the verdict. Semble, that the evidence as to defendant ordering goods from others was properly received. Ogitivie v. McLeod, 11 C. P. 348.

— Privity—New Trial.]—In an action for 74,000 bricks sold and delivered, the plaintiff's evidence went to shew that he sent the bricks to the town hall in Yorkville, which was in defendants' possession, and that they were used there in the erection of a stable for defendants, which one E. with others was superintending. Plaintiff received $100 on account from E., and afterwards $100 more from defendants' office, but under what circumstances or from whom did not appear. A written agreement was produced, by which the plaintiff agreed to sell and deliver to E., at the town hall yard, 90,000 bricks, to be paid for by the defendants' note, indorsed by E., with defendants bonds as collateral security. A verdict having been found for the plaintiff, defendants objecting that E. only was liable:—Held, that it should have been left to the jury to say whether the bricks sued for were delivered under the agreement with E. or independent of it, and it not being clear that the case had been so left, a new trial was ordered. Security. Toronto Street R. W. Co., 23 U. C. R. 480.

Want of Privity.]—Plaintiff brought ejectment against D, and hearing that D, was about to remove a barn upon the lot in dispute to other land which he had leased from defendant, he went to defendant and told him that it was his. D. afterwards took the barn there, though defendant forbade him; and the plaintiff then sued defendant for it as for goods sold and delivered:—Held, that, even assuming the barn to be a chattel, he could not recover, for there was no contract or

— Joint Liability—Agency.]—Taking the facts most favourably for plaintiff, it appeared that McA., being authorized by defendants, purchased the goods in question for them, together with certain lands, from plaintiff, agreeing to give land in payment, and that the goods, about sixteen months after, were in possession of one of the defendants, veryed by the plaintiff of which had been conveyed by the plaintiff could not goods sold, for if McA. was authorized, the contract was to pay in land; and if not, the fact of the goods being found with one defendant could not prove a joint liability. The bill of the goods sold, Semble, however, that this would not have been a conclusive objection, if the sale were shown to have been really made to defendants. Thayer v. Street, 23 U. C. R. 189.

Vessel Orners—Supplies.]—Where one brought an action against the registered owners of a certain vessel for the value of goods supplied before they became such owners, not on the order of the defendants, but on the order of one G. C., between whom and the defendants no relation of agency was proved:—Held, that the plaintiff could not recover. Held, also, that it was open to the defendants to shew that their real interest was that of mortgagees, though ostensibly registered owners. The fact that the vessel got the benefit of the supplies and necessaries did not make the registered owner liable. Nelson v. Wigle, 8 O, R. 82.

Undisclosed Principal.)—Where undisclosed principals, carrying on a wholesale business, employ an agent to carry on a retail business, employ an agent to carry on a retail business in his own name but for their benefit, to sell their goods at invoice prices, they are not liable for the price of goods of the same kind purchased by the agent for himself from other persons without the knowledge or authority of his employers. Watteau v. Fenwick, [1893] I Q. B. 346, considered. Becherer v. Asher, 23 A. R. 202.

Vendee—Loss of Goods.] — Where goods, the subject of an executory contract of sale, have passed into the possession of the vendee, without payment therefor being made, and have while in such possession been lost or destroyed, through no fault of the vendor, the vendee is liable for the price, nowithstanding that the property in the goods had not, by the terms of the contract, passed to the vendee, and notwithstanding that no negligence on his part is shewn. Hesselbacher v. Ballantyne, 28 O. R. 182. Affirmed, the court holding, on the evidence, that the plaintiff had accepted and taken possession of the goods in question. S. C., 25 A. R. 36. See Goddie and McCutlock Co. v. Harper, 31 O. R. 284.

IV. RESCINDING CONTRACT.

After Shipment — Execution against Buyer—Scizure in Transit.]—A. & Co. purchased goods in England from B., which were shipped to them per Grand Trunk Railway, to be delivered at L. While the goods were being transported, A. & Co., becoming insolvent, determined not to receive them, and so advised B., who immediately assented, and sent out a power of attorney to two persons to act for him. In the meantime, and while the goods were in charge of the railway company, defendants in these suits placed executions against the goods of A. & Co. in the hands of the sheriff, and seized the goods at Cornwall, some 300 or 400 miles from the place of delivery:—Held, that the declining to receive the goods by A. & Co. in the course of delivery, communicated to B., and B.'s assent to and acting upon it as soon as advised, vested the goods in B., who was, as against the executions, entitled. The right of stoppage in transitu did not arise. Don v. Law, Don v. Ogivic, 12 C. P. 400.

Conduct Shewing Mutual Abandon-ment. |--In March, 1872, the plaintiff, a mer-chant at Orillia, gave to D., the travelling agent of defendants, who were merchants at Montreal, an order for certain goods, amongst which were 500 kegs of nails, at $3.80 per ton. which D. accepted, the goods to be delivered monthly during the season, or sooner if required by the plaintiff, at six months' credit. In May following, after all the goods except the nails had been delivered, the plaintiff was burned out, in consequence of which he be-came insolvent, and so notified his creditors, giving them a statement of his assets and liabilities, and offering them a composition of 60 cts, in the $, which they accepted; and a deed of composition and discharge was executed, the composition being paid by instalments at certain stated periods, the plaintiff to give his creditors his promissory notes for the said instalments, and to assign to a trustee certain policies of insurance and other securities for the due payment of the instalments, but on the payment of the instalments at the times specified the creditors were to release the plaintiff from all their claims. Neither at the meeting of defendants' creditors, nor at the time the deed was executed, was any mention made of the plaintiff's intention to require the performance of the contract as to the nails, nor did he include it as one of his assets, either in his statement delivered to his creditors, or in the schedule attached to the deed. There was contradictory evidence as to a rescission of the contract in fact, but the jury found there had been none. The plaintiff having subsequently sued defendants for nonhaving subsequently sued defendants for non-delivery of the nails:—Held, that the evidence shewed a rescission in law of the contract, the conduct of the plaintiff having been such as to justify the defendants in the belief that he intended to abandon it upon his insolvency, and there being evidence that the defendants, in such belief, likewise abandoned it. Bingham v. Mulholland, 25 C. P. 210.

Notice of Disaffirmance — Replevin —Innocent Purchaser.] — M. by false representations induced T. to sell bim a horse, buggy, and harness, and to take for them two promissory notes. T. having discovered the fraud, went and demanded back his goods, at the same time throwing the notes on the table. On the assurance of M., however, that on the following Tuesday he would bring the property or satisfaction. T. again took the notes and went away. M. did not appear as he had promised, and T. sued out a writ of replevin against M., but, before it had been executed. M. sold the property to the plaintiff, an innocent purchaser, who, having been deprived of it under the replevin, brought trover against the sheriff:—Held, that the plaintiff was entitled to recover; that the contract had not been disaffirmed when the writ of replevin issued; and that the mere issue of it was no notice to M. of disaffirmance, and could not affect the plaintiff. Stoeser v. Springer, 7 A. R. 497.

Refusal to Accept - Acquiescence-Revesting.]—II., doing business at Halifax, N. S., was accustomed to sell hides to J. L. of Their usual course of business was for H. to ship a lot of goods consigned to J. L., and send a note for the price according to L. and send a note for the price according to his own estimate of weight, &c., which was subject to a future rebate if there was found to be any deficiency. On 14th July, 1884, a shipment was made by H. in the usual course and a note was given by J. L., which H. caused to be discounted. The goods came from Pictou Landing, and remained there until 5th August, when J. L. sent his lighterman for some other goods, and he, finding the goods shipped by H. for some other goods, and remains in the shipped by H., brought them up in his lighter. The next day J. L. was informed of their arrival, and he caused them to be stored in the warehouse of D. L., where he had other goods, with instructions to keep them for the persons who had sent them. The same day he sent a telegram to H. as follows: "In trouble. Have stored hides. Appoint some one to take care of them." H. immediately came to Pictou, and, having learned what was done, ex-pressed himself satisfied. He asked if he would take them away, but was assured by J. L. that they were all right, and left them in the warehouse. On 6th August a levy was made, under an execution of the Pictou Bank against J. L., on all his property that the sheriff could find, but the goods in question were not included in the levy. On 12th Au-gust J. L. gave to the bank a bill of sale of all his hides in the warehouse of D. L., and the bank indemnified D. L. and took possession under such bill of sale of the hides so shipped by H. and stored in said warehouse:—Held, that the contract of sale between J. L. and H, was rescinded by the action of J. L. in refusing to take possession of the goods when they arrived at his place of business and handing them over to D. L. with direction to hold them for the consignor, and in notifying the consignor, who acquiesced and adopted the act of J. L., whereby the property in and possession of the goods became revested in H.; and there was, consequently, no title to the goods in J. L. on the 12th August, when the bill of sale was made to the bank. Pictou Bank v. Harvey, 14 S. C. R. 617.

Repudiation—Release.] — The defendants contracted to purchase a quantity of old iron rails from the plaintiff company, to be paid for as each 100 tons were delivered. The plaintiff consigned 1,150 tons out of 1,300 tons stipulated for, and drew for the amount thereof at the agreed price, which draft the defendants refused to accept, under the erroneous belief that a portion of the iron charged for had not been received by them, and informed the blaintiff company of the ground of their refusal to accept the draft:—Held, affirming the judgment in 2 O. R. 1, that this refusal to accept was not, under the circumstances, such an act as to warrant the plaintiffs in treating it as a repudiation of the contract, or such as would release the plaintiffs from a further performance of it. What would amount to such a repudiation considered, Midland R. W. Co. v. Ontario Rolling Mills Co., 10 A. R. 637.

Retention of Goods after Rescission——\(\text{Accepted} = \text{Defendant bought from plaintiff a quantity of oil at four months' credit. Plaintiff delivered the oil, but defendant refused to accept a four months' draft for the price, alleging that it was not according to sample. Plaintiff assented, and requested defendant to return the oil, which defendant promised, but failed to do within a reasonable time. Before the four months had expired plaintiff sued for goods sold and delivered:—Held, that the original contract had been rescinded, and that the plaintiff might sue upon a new contract arising out of the retention of the oil by defendant. Thompson v. Smith, 21 C. P. 1.

Right to Disaffirm—Fraud—Set-off.]—
The plaintiff, with the intention of parting with the possession and property in certain flour, made an absolute sale of the same on apparently short terms of credit to the defendant, who withheld from plaintiff his intention to pay for the flour by setting off a claim he had acquired against the plaintiff:—Held, that this did not constitute a fraud on the defendant's part so as to entitle the plaintiff to disaffirm the contract and replevy the flour. Baker v. Fisher, 19 O. R. 650.

See Brassert v. McEwen, 10 O. R. 179; Mason v. Redpath, 39 U. C. R. 157; Davis v. McWhirter, 40 U. C. R. 598, post VI.

V. STATUTE OF FRAUDS.

1. Generally-What within Statute.

Crops.1—Quere, is the sale by a sheriff of a crop of wheat ready for the harvest the sale of a mere chattel, not requiring a writing under s. 4 of the statute? Haydon v. Crauford, 3 O. S. 583.

Foreign Contract—Valid where Made.]—A contract for the sale of goods to the plaintiffs at a certain price, payable in Toronto, was made by defendant at Chicago, through his agent there, the goods to be shipped by the Grand Trunk Railway from Toronto. No sold note was signed by the broker until after action brought for the non-delivery; but it was proved that s. 17 of the Statute of Frauds was not in force in Illinois:—Held, that the contract, being valid where it was made, could be enforced here, though not in writing. Green v. Levis, 26 U. C. R. 618.

Machinery Affixed to Freehold—Detachment by Buyer—Execution,] — Trespass against the sheriff for seizing under a fi. fa. The goods in question, an engine and boiler, had been in a saw mill, which was burnt had been in a saw mill, which was burnt to the ground. The ground the ground the ground the ground that the sheriff offered by the first the ground. The sheriff offered by the ground that the ground that the ground that the ground the only to a license to the vendee to enter on the land and detach the goods; and quære, whether on being so severed the fi. fa. would not attach upon them. Walton v. Jarvis, 13 U. C. R. 616. See S. C., 14 U. C. R. 640.

Manufacture of Ordered Goods—Sale of Chattel.] — One W., during her lifetime, orally ordered from the plaintiffs a tombstone, to be put up by them at the grave of her late husband. It was begun before and completed by them after her death, and they sued the administrator of her estate for the price: —Held, that the plaintiffs' claim was for the sale of a chattel, not one for work and labour; and there being no contract within the statute, the plaintiffs could not recover. Lee v. Griffin, 1 B. & S. 272. followed. Wolfenden v. Wilson, 33 U. C. R. 442.

Trade Fixtures and Term of Years—Sherift,—Where a sherift had sold an unexpired term and certain trade fixtures under an execution at common law, but before any deed was executed by him a settlement was effected by the debtor with the execution creditor, who thereupon desired the sheriff to refrain from completing the sale, and the sheriff accordingly refused to convey the property to the purchaser, who thereupon filed a bill against the sheriff for specific performance of the alleged contract, but it appeared that no memorandum had been made or signed by the sheriff :—Held, that the contract must be in writing under the statute. Witham v. Smith, 5 Gr. 203.

Warehoused Goods - Estoppel-Certifi--A. by artifice obtained an order from B., directed to his agent, to deliver wheat to A., which order A. presented, not to the agent, but to defendant, a wharfinger, in whose ware-house B. had wheat. Defendant thereupon gave him his certificate or bon for the wheat, deliverable on demand. Defendant shortly after learned how the order had been obtained, and, B. being disatisfied with him for having given such a certificate, defendant notified A. that he would not deliver the wheat to him ; whereupon A., it was alleged, transferred his right to the wheat to the plaintiffs, though there was no indorsement or transfer of de-fendant's certificate to plaintiffs. The wheat was subsequently demanded of defendant, who refused to deliver it, but it did not appear that the person who demanded it shewed any authority from the plaintiffs, or that defendant ever knew of the plaintiffs having any interest whatever in the wheat. Plaintiffs having brought trover:—Held, that the alleged sale to them was void under the statute; and that defendant was not estopped by his certificate from denying plaintiffs' title. Semble, that A, had no power to sell the wheat to plain-tiffs, he not having an undisputed control over it himself. Davis v. Browne, 9 U. C. R.

Warranty of Machine — Delivery for Test.]—By an agreement between the parties, the plaintiff agreed to purchase a certain hay press from defendant for $500, if it should be capable of pressing into bales ten tons of hay per day, which the defendant warranted it to be capable of doing; and on the faith of such warranty the plaintiff received it, and incurred heavy expenses in paying freight and making a trial of it, when it proved to be insufficient; and defendant then, instead of allowing plaintiff to return it, urged further trials and delay.

which lasted for some weeks, when the plaintiff returned it:—Held, that, even if there was no absolute sale, but the machine was only sent on trial, with the warranty, the plaintiff was entitled to maintain an action for the breach of the warranty, and to recover such damages as legitimately flowed from the breach, as to which $250, the amount found in this case, was held not to be excessive. Held, also, that the warranty need not be in writing, for the machine having been sent to the plaintiff, and received and tested for weeks, the Statute of Frauds could not apply, Northwood v. Rennic, 28 C. P. 202, 3 A. R. 37.

See O'Brien v. Credit Valley R. W. Co., 25 C. P. 275.

2. Acceptance and Receipt.

Effect of as to Agreement for Resale —Flative Contract.] — Defendant sold the plaintiffs some tea, and orally agreed that he would take back, at an advance of ten cents a pound, such part thereof as the plaintiffs should have in stock unsold at a certain date;
—Held, affirming the decision in 46 U. C. R.
1. that there was but one entire conditional contract—not one contract to sell the tea to the plaintiffs, and another to buy it back—and therefore the delivery of the tea by the defendant satisfied the Statute of Frands, and the plaintiffs were entitled to recover for the defendant's refusal to take back the unsold tea. Williams v. Burgess, 10 A. & E. 493, considered and followed. Lumsden v. Davies,
11 A. R. 585.

Effect of as to Other Objection.]—
There may be an acceptance of goods, so as to take the case out of the statute, and let in proof of the parol bargain, leaving the persons still able to object that the goods do not answer the contract. McMaster v, Gordon, 20 C. P. 16.

Equivalent of — Dealing with Goods—Customs—Invoices, 1—The plaintiff, who lived in New York, agreed at Orillia, in this Province, through his agent, to sell to defendants there certain goods, to be forwarded from New York by express. This agent had on the same day sold goods to W. T., another person in Orillia, and it was agreed between W. T., the agent, and the defendants, that the defendants' goods also should be directed to W. T. The goods for defendants and for W. T. were sent, as agreed upon, to W. T. in one case, and invoices were sent to W. T. and the defendants of their prespective purchases. W. T. was notified of the arrival of the goods in Toronto, and about the middle of July sent down the invoices to pass them through the customs, but they were passed and duties paid upon W. T.'s invoice only, and the customs department, believing that there was an attempt at fraud, seized the goods and sold them in September as forfeited. Neither defendants nor W. T. had made any special inquiries after receiving the invoices, and they never informed the plaintiff of the facts:—Held, that this was a denling with the goods by defendants on the plaintiff of the facts:—Held, that this was a denling with the goods by defendance sufficient within the statute; and that defendants therefore were liable in an acceptance sufficient within the statute; and that defendants therefore were liable in an action for goods sold. Tower v. Tudhope, 37 U. C. 200.

—— Direction to Seller,]—Where A, purchased of B, plate worth £70, and desired him to have his crest engraved on it, and afterwards to forward it to his residence, but paid nothing, and B., having obeyed his orders, saed him for the price:—Held, that A.'s directions as to the engraving of the crest and forwarding to his residence, constituted a sufficient acceptance and delivery. Walker v. Boulton, 3 O. S. 252.

— Offer to Resell.]—An offer by a purchaser at an auction to sell to another person the goods purchased by him, does not constitute an acceptance of them, to take the case out of the statute. Clarkson v. Noble, 2 U. C. R. 361.

Proof of — Acknowledgment, —The purchaser of a steam engine at a sheriff's sale, after the sale wrote to the deputy sheriff speaking of the engine as being on his lot, and having been bid in for him by T., the agent who had purchased at the sale, and saying that he had heard that the sheriff's fees had not been paid, and that the sheriff intended to sell again:—Held, not evidence of a deliver to satisfy the statute, which the other evidence tended strongly to disprove. Flintoft v. Elmore, 18 C. P. 274.

- Delivery of Part.]-The defendant, a manufacturer of woollen goods, in company with W., his manager, went to the warehouse of the plaintiffs for the purpose of purchasing wool, where he was shewn a quantity consistwool, where he was shewn a quantity consist-ing of about 200 sacks of white wool, which plaintiffs offered to sell at twenty-four cents a pound for the lot. The defendant, after ex-amining as much of the wool as he desired, ordered ten sacks thereof to be shipped to him immediately with a view of trying it, that is, to see if it would produce the quality of goods he dealt in. On the following morning the defendant saw the plaintiff L. personally, and informed him that he would take the lot; and the plaintiffs agreed to carry it for him on certain terms, and on that day the ten sacks were shipped to the defendant. At the same time an invoice was sent containing this memorandum, "Terms, interest at seven per cent, from 1st February," being the terms offered to defendant if he would take the lot. The ten sacks were subsequently received at the de-fendant's mill and were worked up there:— Held, that the agreement to take the lot made before the performance of the first bargain was a variation of or substitution for the first bargain, and that the delivery of the sacks was a delivery and such an actual receipt and acceptance of part of the goods purchased as satisfied the requirements of s. 17 of the Statute of Frauds, and that the plaintiffs were entitled to recover the price of the remaining 190 sacks, together with interest from the date mentioned. Leadlay v. McRoberts, 13 A. R. 378.

Delivery of Part — Necessity for Measuring.] — Plaintiff sold to defendant a quantity of wood, cut and lying on his premises, supposed to be about 100 cords, agreeing to remove it from his (the plaintiff's) land to the bank of a canal adjacent thereto, and there deliver it from time to time for defendant. Forty-one cords were so delivered, and taken away by defendant, and subsequently twenty-five cords more were delivered. After this the price of wood rose, whereupon plaintiff forbade defendant removing the twenty-five cords, which, however, defendant did. The plaintiff having brought replevin:—Held, that the jury having found the above facts, it was not necessary for defendant to measure the wood so delivered in order to acquire property therein; that the mere delivery of the twenty-five cords by plaintiff, in part performance of his contract, nassed the property therein to defendant, which could not be divested by any subsequent act of the plaintiff; and such delivery of the 41 and 25 cords in part performance of the contract, took it out of the statute. McNeil v. Kelcher, 15 C. P. 470.

Necessity for]—Quere, if the sale by a sheriff of a crop of wheat ready for harvest, be not the sale of an interest in lands still, to satisfy the statute, should there not be proof of the delivery of the wheat, or payment of the price? Heydon v. Crawford, 3 O. S. 583.

oral Firidence.]—Held, that in an action in the Province of Quebec upon an unwritten commercial contract for the sale of goods exceeding the sum of $50, oral evidence of acceptance or receipt of the whole or any part of the goods, is admissible, under art. 1235, C. C. Munn v, Berger, 10 S. C. R. 512.

Resule of Part—Condition.]—Defendants, wholesale merchants, in December orally ordered certain cloth goods from the plaintiff, a manufacturer, by sample, at a stipulated price per yard, to be delivered by the 1st April next. Three cases were received at different times, before the 10th March, and on that day they wrote to plaintiff that they would not keep them excent at a less price, because he had disregarded an alleged condition of the bargain, not to sell to retail merchants. The plaintiff in reply denied this condition, and refused to lower the price, and on the 12th defendants again wrote, that the goods were in their hands subject to the plaintiff's order. On the 26th, having received the last case, defendants wrote declining to take it in stock, "for other reasons as well as those already mentioned," and stating that the goods were stored at the plaintiff's risk. Defendants sold part of the first two cases, whether before or after the 26th March was not clear, and soon after, as they alleged, discovered defects in quality, and did not open the other case till the end of October, about ten days before the trial. The objections as to selling to retail dealers, and as to quality, having been left to the jury, they found for the plaintiff's—Held, that there was an acceptance and receipt of the goods by defendants, within the statute. Robinson v. Gordon, 23 U. C. R. 143.

— Sufficiency.]—Action for the price of a carriage which the plaintiff had agreed to make for defendant:—Held, that upon the evidence there was clearly no sufficient acceptance within the Statute of Frauds, and 13 & 14 Vict. c. 61. Wegg v. Drake, 16 U. C. R. 252.

— Sufficiency—Statute not Pleaded.]
—The plaintiff agreed to sell the defendant a plano for $400, to be paid by notes at one and two years with interest, with a rebate for cash. The plano was delivered at defendant's residence, but he, after using it for some time, objected to retain it, and refused to give the notes or pay the stipulated price. The plaintiff thereupon sued the defendant in a county court, claiming the $400 and interest. At the trial leave was given to strike out the words "with interest:"—Held, that the amount was ascertained by the act of the parties, and that defendant having neglected to pay either by notes or cash, the plaintiff was entitled to recover in an action for goods sold and delivered. The Statute of Frauds not having been pleaded nor any objection properly taken to the sufficiency of the delivery of goods either at the trial or in the order nist, the court, without deciding that the ce had been a sufficient delivery, held that the objection was not open to the defendant, and refused to permit an amendment, Greenieen v. Burns, 13 A. R. 481.

Shipment -- Samples -- Inspection-Property Passing. |-- The defendants agreed orally to buy from the plaintiff ten thousand bushels of No. 2 red wheat, at $1.12 per bushel, to be delivered f.o.b., a vessel to be provided by the defendants, who were to pay freight and insurance, and delivery was to be made to them on payment of a sight draft for the price. The captain of the vessel gave the plaintiff a bill of lading, describing him as the consignor, and in it, under the heading "consignees." was written "Order of Bank of Montreal, advise Melady & McNairn (defen-A draft for the price, drawn by the plaintiff upon the defendants, was attached to the bill of lading and discounted, but the defendants refused to accept this draft :- Held, that there was, upon these facts, no final appropriation of the wheat or delivery thereof to the defendants, and that the property therein would not pass to them until acceptance of the draft, or payment or tender of the price. Held, also, that neither the shipment in the vessel provided by the defendants, nor the taking by the defendants of samples of the cargo for inspection, constituted an acceptance within the statute. Scott v. Melady, 27 A. R. 193.

See Grover v. Cameron, 6 O. S. 196.

3. Note or Memorandum.

Acknowledgment of Bid in Book— Sheriff's Alet.]—Where the purchaser at a sheriff's sale merely signed a memorandum in a book, acknowledging the amount of his bid for goods sold by defendant, and no memorandum was signed by the sheriff, it was held insufficient to entitle the plaintiff to sue the sheriff for refusing to complete the sale. Mingage v. Corbett, 14 C. P. 557.

Bought and Sold Notes—Variance.]—In an action upon a contract for the sale and purchase of wheat by bought and sold notes, it appeared that the sold note made the wheat deliverable at Montreal afloat, "on arrival during the first half of August next," vessel to be named (meaning by the seller); while the bought note made it deliverable "during the first half of August next, at seller's option:"—Held, a material variance, which avoided the contract. The seller having named one vessel:—Semble, that he could not alter it and substitute another, though under certain circumstances this might be done, Butters v. Glass. 31 U. C. R. 379. See Brunskill v. Chumascro, 5 U. C. R. 475.

Formal Writing — Definiteness — Parol Evidence.]—The contract was expressed to sell

"Limits Nos, 1 and 2 for $15,000; also all the plant used in connection with the shanty now in operation on limit No. 1, included in the list made out last summer, and the material then not included which had been in use for the winter's operations of 1880 and 1881." at the price of $3,000;—Held, sufficiently definite to satisfy the Statute of Frands, since the plant referred to therein could easily be identified by parol evidence as being that specifically described in a certain writing, which accompanied the above contract, and which was signed in the firm's name and by the purchaser, as also could the terms of credit to be allowed as to the payment of the $15,500, and such parol evidence was admissible, though the contract imported prima facie a down payment of $15,500. Reid v. Smith, 2 O. R. 69.

Letter-Absence of Assent-Terms-Consideration. |-The plaintiff in England sold certain goods to M. & Co., at Toronto. After the arrival of the goods at Toronto, the plaintiff discovered that M. & Co. were insolvent, and he notified his agent to stop the goods; but it appeared that M. & Co. had paid the freight and duty and removed the goods into their warehouse. After negotiations between plaintiff's agent and M. & Co., the latter orally agreed to hold the goods subject to plaintiff's order, and on the following day wrote plaintiff's agent to the same effect, but no written assent was made thereto. Co, subsequently made an assignment for the benefit of their creditors to defendant, who took possession of the goods, and on demand refused to deliver them up to plaintiff, where-upon trover was brought:—Held, that the goods having become the property of M. & Co., and being of greater value than $40, in order to retransfer them to the plaintiff, it was necessary that there should be a memorandum in writing, shewing the terms of the transfer, or some other act sufficient to take the case out of the Statute of Frauds; but semble, if out of the Statute of Frauds; but semble, if any consideration had been stated between the plaintiff's agent and M. & Co., for the latter assuming the position of bailees of the goods, and holding them for the plaintiff's benefit, the transaction might have been supported as not coming within the statute. Brassert v. McEwen, 10 O. R. 179.

Letters—Parol Evidence.]—Held, that the letters of the defendant, read together in the light of the parol evidence, constituted a sufficient note or memorandum in writing within s. 17 of the Statute of Frauds, and that parol evidence was also admissible to shew what the words "work" and "rig" used therein referred to. Christie v. Burnett, 10 O. R. 609.

—Sufficiency.]—K. entered the sale of certain groceries in a book which was not produced, but the plaintiff produced a list of the things ordered, and their prices; and K. afterwards sent the order in a letter signed by him to the defendants, who thereupon wrote the plaintiffs, "K. reports a sale that we cannot approve in full, but will accept for," enumerating certain articles. Upon the plaintiffs insisting on the completion of the order in full, the defendants cancelled it altogether:—Held, that the letters were a sufficient memorandum within s. 17 of the Statute of Frauds. Ockley v. Masson, 6 A. R. 108.

Lost Memorandum of Auction Sale— Tender,—In trover for a buggy bought by M. at auction, an application to set aside a nonsuit was refused, the note or memorandum taken at the time of the sale having been lost, and there being no proof of its contents, and the proof of tender of the price being insufficient, as the person to whom it was offered did not appear to be authorized to receive the same. Ryan v. Salt, 3 C. P. S3.

Receipt—Terms of—Absolute Sale.]—A contract to sell wheat and deliver it at the buyer's mill within a reasonable time, the seller to receive whatever may be the highest market price at the time when he shall demand payment, is valid, for it may be ascertained at any time by the method agreed upon. The plaintiff agreed orally with defendant as above stated, and on delivery received a receipt, signed by defendant's miller, as follows:
—"Received in store from J. McB. for Mr. do. do., 51 bushels fall wheat, at £ s. d.," &c.:—Held, that the receipt expressing the wheat to have been received "in store," did not preclude the plaintiff from proving an absolute sale on the terms above set forth. Mc-Bride v. Silverthorne, 11 U. C. R. 545.

Undefined Terms of Agreement—Enforcing.]—The position of a defendant resisting a claim, is more favourably considered than that of a plaintiff endeavouring to enforce an agreement, the terms of which may not have been defined so as to clearly satisfy the requirements of the statute. Lawrence v. Errington, 21 Gr. 261.

Written Offer—Person to uchom Addressed — Parol Evidence — Acceptance in Writing,]—Where an offer, signed by the defendant to exchange a stock of goods for land, did not in any way designate the person to whom it was supposed to be made or for whom it was intended, and such person could not be ascertained without extrinsic parol evidence adding to the memorandum: — Held, not to be an agreement in writing within specific performance. Held, also, that in acceptance of an offer beneath the defendant's signature, signed by the plaintiff's assignor, did not cure the defect. White v. Tomalin, 19 O. R. 513.

4. Part Payment.

Terms of Contract—Right to Resell.]—At an auction, defendant purchased goods on condition of furnishing indorsed notes for the amount, with the option of a discount of ten per cent, for cash, and on default the goods were to be resold at the risk of the purchaser. After the sale defendant paid $15$, on account, but performed no other part of the conditions, and the plaintiff resold the goods at a loss:—Held, that the part payment took the case out of the statute, and that it did not deprive the plaintiff of the right to resell and make defendant responsible for the loss. Furniss v. Sauerrs, 3 U. C. R. 73.

Third Person.]—Plaintiff agreed with defendant to sell him 500 cords at 3s, 9d. a cord. M. had agreed to cut this wood for plaintiff at 2s, 6d. a cord, and defendant was to pay M. the 2s, 6d. and the plaintiff 1s, 3d. as owner of the trees:—Held, that a payment on account by defendant to M. took the agreement sued upon out of the statute, being a payment on the contract as much as if made to the plaintiff. Brady v. Harrahy, 21 U. C. R. 340.

See Phippen v. Hyland, 19 C. P. 416.

VI. STOPPAGE IN TRANSITU.

Effect of — Lien.]—Stoppage in transitudes not rescind a contract on the sale of goods, but merely gives the vendor a lien on the goods for their price. Brassert v. Mc-Even, 10 O. R. 179.

Trover.]—The plaintiffs, at Montreal, having sold goods on credit to H. & Co., living at Meaford, on Lake Huron, shipped them by the Grand Trunk Railway to Toronto, and thence by defendants' railway to Collingwood. While they were at Collingwood defendants received notice of stoppage in transitu, but they delivered the goods to H. & Co., who were found by the jury to have been insolvent at the time of the notice; and the plaintiffs thereupon brought trover:—Held, that the action would not lie, for the goods by the sale and delivery to the carriers were at the purchasers' risk, and the stoppage in transitu did not give the plaintiffs the right of property and possession necessary to maintain trover. Childs v. Northern R. W. Co., 25 U. C. R. 165.

Notice of—Sufficiency—Agent of Railway Company.]—H., of Souris, P. E. I., carried on the business of lobster packing, sending his goods to M., of Halifax, N. S., who supplied him with tin plates, &c. They had dealt in this way for several years, when. In 1882, H. shipped 180 cases of beef, via Pictou and I. C. R., addressed to M. The bill of lading for this shipment was sent to M., and provided that the goods were to be delivered at Pictou to the freight agent of the I. C. R. or his assigns, the freight to be payable in Halifax. M., the consignee, being on the verge of insolvency, indorsed the bill of lading to McM. to secure accommodation acceptances. H. drew on M. for the value of the consignment like the draft was not I. Wet and I. deliver the goods. The goods had been forwarded from Pictou, and the agent there telegraphed to the agent at Halifax to hold them. McM. applied to the agent at Halifax for the goods, and tendered the freight, but delivery was refused. In a replevin suit against the Halifax agent:—Held, that the goods were sent to the agent at Halifax to refuse and that he had no other interest in them, or right or duty connected with them, than to forward them to their destination, and could not authorize the agent at Halifax to retain them. Held, also, that, whether or not a legal title to the good spassed to McM., the position of the agent in retaining the goods was simply that of a wrongdoer, and McM. had such an equitable interest in such goods, and right to the possession thereof, as would prevent the agent from withholding them. McDonald v. McPherson, 12 S. C. R. 416.

Sufficiency — Bill of Lading — Indorsement.] — W. B. P. purchased goods from the plaintiffs in England, which were shipped at Liverpool, in fifteen packages, in the name of M. & Co., the plaintiffs' shipping agents, as consignors, consigned to W. B. P. & Co., at Hamilton. These goods arrived in three different lots at Hamilton, between the 29th November and 4th December. On the 23rd November we will be the 23rd November where the 25rd November where w

— Sufficiency — Customs Officer.]—
Goods which came from Montreal in bond were deposited in the customs warehouse at the Grand Trunk Railway station at Toronto. The consignees became insolvent, and the consignors gave notice of stoppage in transitu to the railway company, after which the agent of the company gave an order for delivery on payment of charges to another person, who made the entry and received them from the customs:—Held, that the notice to the company was sufficient, though in such cases it is advisable to give notice also to the customs officer; and that an action would lie against the company for such delivery. Ascher v. Grand Trunk R. W. Co., 36 U. C. R. 609.

Right of Stoppage—End of Transitus—Delay of Agent.] — The defendants, unpaid vendors of goods, shipped them over the Graud Trunk Railway to the vendee at W. When the goods arrived, the railway company's agent at W. sent an advice notice to the vendee, who refused to take it. After this the vendee assigned to the plaintiff for the benefit of his creditors, and the plaintiff, as soon as the assignment was delivered to him, produced it to the railway company's agent and claimed the goods, offering to pay the freight, but producing no advice notice. The agent did not refuse to deliver the goods, but stated that, according to the rules of the company, when the person claiming the goods was an assignee for the benefit of creditors, his duty was to telegraph to the company's solicitor for instructions; he did so telegraph, but before he received an answer and on the same day the defendants notified him not to deliver the goods to the vendee or his assignee, assuming a right to stop them in transitu.—Held, that the action of the railway company's agent in delaying till he received instructions was not wrongful; that the transitus was not at an end when the defendants intervened; and the right of stoppage was well exercised. Anderson v. Fish, 16 O. R. 476, 17 A. R. 28.

- End of Transitus—Estoppel—Proof of Claim in Insolvency.]—The plaintiffs, merchants in Boston, sold and consigned goods to J. C. & Son, in Toronto. While the goods were held by the railway company in T., J. C. & Son assigned to the defendant as trustee for the benefit of creditors. The defendant, immediately after the assignment, passed and entered the goods, and paid the duty thereon, and the railway company removed the goods from the customs warehouse to their freight sheds, where they remained, and delivery was refused to the defendant for non-product on by him of a bill of lading, and the freight was not paid or tendered. The plaintiffs having stopped the goods:—Held, that the transitus was not at an end, for that the railway com-pany continued to hold the goods as carriers, and not as agents for the defendant. The plaintiffs had, before they stopped the goods in transitu, proved their claim for the goods on the estate of J. C. & Son:—Held, that this did not deprive them of their rights as lien holders, or affect their right to stop the goods in transitu. Morgan Envelope Co. v. Boustead, 7 O. R. 697.

End of Transitus-Fraud.]-P. carrying on business at Woodstock, on the 28th August ordered eight half chests of tea from the plaintiff, who lived at Bowmanville, at five months' credit, through H., the plaintiff's traveller, who called upon him to solicit orders. The order was given on the 28th August, 1876, and the tea arrived at Woodstock by rail, on the 4th September. The railway company addressed the usual notice of arrival to P. as consignee, which notice came on the 5th into the hands of defendant, an attachment in insolvency against P, having on that day been received by defendant as official Defendant on the same day deassignee. manded the goods from the freight agent of the company, tendering the freight, but the agent refused to deliver them. The plaintiff's agent telegraphed to him on the 6th to hold the tea; and, on the company's application, an interpleader was granted. Semble, that the transitus was at an end, on the authority of Bird v. Brown, 4 Ex. 797. P. had previ-ously purchased tea from the plaintiff, giv-ing his note at five months, which matured on the 4th September, though the usual credit was five months. H. said that he remarked to P.., when making the sale in question, that there were extra hands behind the counter, for which P. accounted by the alleged increase of his business; and he added that he was not in immediate need of these teas, but wanted to get them. H. said he thought P. was doing well and intended to pay, but he made no inquiries as to his standing, or as to probable payment of the note then maturing. shortly before the 5th September P. absconded, owing over $3,000, and leaving assets to pay only about five cents in the dollar. None of his employees was examined at the trial: his employees was examined at the trial:— Held, that the fair inference from all the cir-cumstances was that P. ordered the goods fraudulently, with a preconceived design of not paying for them; and that on this ground the plaintiff was entitled to recover. Davis v. McWhirter, 40 U. C. R. 598.

A. living in Kingston, bought six cases of goods in New York, and saw them packed and leave the vendor's shop on their arvival at Kingston they warehouse; on their arrival at Kingston they were received by the officers of the customs, and placed in the custom house store. A. entered and paid duty upon and took away two of the enses; he also paid the freight and charges upon all from New York:—Held, that the vendor had not lost the right of stoppage in transitu over the remaining four cases. Burr v. Wilson, 13 U. C. R. 478.

A having purchased goods from the defendant in New York, they were shipped in bond to him and landed at a wharf in B., whence they were carted by him and placed in a bonded warehouse on his own premises, to which there were two different locks and keys, one in the control of A., the other of the custom house. While the goods were thus placed A, became insolvent, and the plaintiff gave notice of ownership and stoppage in transitu to the custom house officer:—Held, that the goods were not, under the facts stated, in possession of A., and therefore the right of stoppage in transitu still remained in the plaintiff. Howell v. Alport, 12 C. P. 375.

The goods in question were purchased by M. in Hamilton, from the agent there of the plaintiffs, who lived in Montreal, at four months' credit. They were delivered by the plaintiffs in bond at the railway station in Montreal consigned to M., and arrived in Hamilton on the 16th February, 1874, where they were placed in the customs warehouse at the railway company's freight shed. M. was advised on the following day of their arrival there, but allowed them to remain, and no entry was made or duties paid before the 23rd May, when the plaintiffs gave notice of stoppage in transitu, M. having become insolvent. M. had accepted the plaintiffs' draft for the price, due on the 14th June, which they had discounted at the bank, but they took it up at maturity, and produced it at the trail—Held, that the transitus was not at an end: that the right to stop existed; and that the plaintiffs therefore were entitled to the goods as against M.'s assignee. Levis v. Mason, 36 U. C. R. 590.

The plaintiffs at Philadelphia sold to E. B. & Co. at Toronto 92 bags of coffee on credit, and consigned the same to them in bond. On arrival at Toronto they were entered and bonded in the consignees' names and placed in one of the customs bonded warehouses, subject to the payment of duties. Subsequently E. B. & Co. paid the duties and took out of bond 54 of the bags, but 38 bags still remained in bond, subject to duty, and while they so remained E. B. & Co. became insolvent; —Held, that the right of stoppage in transitu still existed in the plaintiff, though the goods were bonded in the names of the consignees, for until the duties were paid the goods could not be deemed either actually or constructively to have come into the possession of the consignees so as to put an end to the transitus. Graham v. Smith. 27 C. P. 1.

The plaintiffs, merchants in New York, sold to E. B. & Co. at Toronto, 250 barrels of currants on credit, and consigned the same to them in bond. A bill of lading thereof was duly received by E. B. & Co., who paid the freight thereon, and gave their acceptance for the price of the said goods, as well as for the cartage and American bonding charges. The goods, on arrival, were entered and bonded in the consignees' name, and placed in one of the customs bonded warehouses subject to the payment of the duties. E. B. & Co. sold and delivered 130 barrels, and the remaining 100 barrels were bonded under 31 Vict. c, 6 (D.), in a portion of E. B. & Co.'s warehouse partitioned off and used by the customs authorities. Before the acceptance matured, and while the goods remained in bond, E. B. & Co. became insolvent:—Held, reversing the judgment of the Queen's bench, which followed Graham v. Smith, 27 C. P. 1, that the transitus was at an end, and that the plaintiffs had lost the right to stop the goods. The previous decisions on the right of stoppage of such goods in bond, Burr v. Wilson, 13 U. C. R. 478, Howell v. Alport, 12 C. P. 375, Lewis v. Mason, 36 U. C. R. 590, Wilds v. Smith, 1 A. R. 179. Leviewed. Wiley v. Smith, 1 A. R. 179.

Held, affirming the judgment in 1 A. R. 179, that the transitus was at an end, and that the appellants had lost the right to stop the goods remaining in bond. Howell v. Alport, 12 C. P. 375, and Graham v. Smith, 27 C. P. 1, overruled. Wiley v. Smith, 2 S. C. R. 1.

See, also, Wilds v. Smith, 2 A. R. S, reversing judgment in 41 U. C. R. 136.

— Facts Giving Right.]—Semble, that on the facts the defendant had not put it in the plaintiff's power to exercise any right of stoppage in 'ransitu. Sword v. Carruthers, 7 U. C. R. 313.

Insolvency—Fraudulent Preference —Rescission.]—R. & Co., sugar refiners in Montreal, in September sold 145 barrels of sugar to L. at Hamilton, on sixty days' credit. On the 27th November L. wrote to R. that he was unable to meet his acceptances, and on the 28th R. telegraphed to L. to know if he had received the sugar, and was answered that part had been received on the day before. Twenty barrels were received at L.'s warehouse on the 27th, and forty on the 28th, from the railway company. On the 30th, Monday, R.'s agent called on L. and asked him to transfor the sugar to S. & Co., of Hamilton, and one load was sent to them, when L. forbade the sending more, but about an hour afterwards he ordered the rest to be delivered, and fifty-nine barrels were sent, one barrel having been sold to a customer of L. On the 30th an agreement, prepared by L.'s solicitor, was signed by R.'s agent, reciting that the fifty-nine barrels had been delivered to L., which R. wished to resell to others; and that it had been agreed, to avoid any question as to L.'s right to deliver to R. said fifty-nine barrels, the others having been stopped in transitu, that R. should indemnify L. and his assignee, if any appointed, against all consequences of such delivery, in case a return thereof should be adjudged; and the agreement was to indemnify L. accordingly, and make good to him or his assignee the value of said sugar so to be delivered, if a return should be adjudged by a competent court. L. made an assignment on the 5th December, 1874, and on the 3rd February, 1875, the plaintiff, the assignee, conveyed to Lamb & Co. all the estate. L., being examined, swore that he had no intention of receiving the sugar into stock; that it was sent to his warehouse by the railway company without his knowledge or instructions; that he had previously instructed his manager not to receive any goods; that when he became aware that it had been sent, he gave orders that it should not be taken into stock; and that the agreement signed was an afterthought, subsequent to his agreement with R.'s agent to take away the sugar, and after part of it had been removed. This was substantially corroborated by the agent. In an action by the assignee of L. against R., claiming to avoid the distinct of the substantial control of the substantial con giving up of the sugar as an unjust preference, and in trover:—Held, that the plaintiff could not recover; that whether there was, strictly speaking, a right of stoppage in transitu or nct, the evidence warranted a finding that before the assignment in insolvency the contract of sale had been rescinded by both parties, which it was competent for them to do, the goods not having been actually accepted; and the goods therefore never passed to the plain-Semble, that the count as upon a fraudulent preference could not have been sustained; and quære as to the plaintiff's right to recover, he having before action assigned the property to Lamb & Co. Mason v. Redpath, 39 U. C. R. 157.

— Insolvency—Retention.] — A., the purchaser of saw logs to be delivered at certain specified times, assigned the contract, and the vendor delivered one vera's supply of the logs to the assignee. Afterwards A., becoming insolvent, absconded, and the vendor refused to complete the contract, asserting a right to stop the goods in transitu, or to retain them in consequence of A.'s insolvency. The assignee thereupon commenced an action at law in A.'s name against the vendor, in which he recovered judgment; and a bill by the vendor to restrain proceedings at law was dismissed with costs. Wait v. Scott, 6 Gr. 154.

Seizure under Execution.] plaintiff sold to G. a quantity of leather, which was to be sent to the purchaser at P. by railway. The shipping bill contained, amongst others, the following conditions: "In all cases the delivery of goods will be considered complete and the responsibilities of the company shall terminate when the goods are placed in the company's shed or warehouse, when they shall have arrived at the when they shall have arrived at the place to be reached upon the railway of the company. The warehousing of them will be at the owner's risk." who was to be liable for any charges for storing them otherwise than in the warehouse of the company. "Storage will be charged on all freight remaining in the depots over forty-eight hours after its arrival." While the leather remained in the warehouse of the railway company at P., the purchaser requested the station agent to have it kept for him by the company until he could find time to remove it, and asked him not to charge storage, but the agent made no promise; and subsequently the sheriff paid the charges thereon, seized the leather under a writ of attachment sued out by the defendants, and removed the same from the stores of the railway company to the shop of G.:— Held, that this did not deprive the vendor of his right to stop the goods in transitu. Mc-Lean v. Breithaupt, 12 A. R. 383.

See Don v. Law, 12 C. P. 460.

VII. VENDOR'S TITLE.

Caveat Emptor.]—Plaintiff (a merchant) having delivered cloth, &c., to be made up into coats, to a tailor, who made up cloth, &c., for plaintiff and others, and also exhibited for sale and sold clothes on his own account, and he having sold the coats made of plaintiff's cloth to defendant:—Held, that plaintiff was entitled o recover them from defendant, and that the maxim of cavent emptor applied. Thompson v. Nelles, 4 C. P. 399.

Estoppel.]—A, agreed to sell to B. a lot of land, and to give him a deed upon payment of a certain price by instalments. B. went into possession of the lot, but made default in the payments. Whereupon B. being still in cossession after default and after the conveyance to C., cut timber on the lot, and sold the logs to D. who had no notice of C's title. C. brought ejectment against D. laying the demise at a period antecedent to the cutting of the timber, and recovered. He then gave notice to D. not to pay any more money to B. on account of the logs, but to pay the balance due to him, C. B. sued D. in assumpstif or the price of the logs, and D. set up, as a defence, the notice and the paramount title of C.:—Held defence good, the rule of caveat emptor and of estoppel not applying stretly in this case. McMahon V, Grover, 3 C. P. 65.

Want of Title — Damages.]—The purchaser of a chattel is entitled to recover from the vendor upon failure of title, the value of the chattel, and not merely the amount paid by him to the vendor. Confederation Life Association v. Labatt. 27 A. R. 321.

VIII. MISCELLANEOUS CASES.

Cash Deposit—Right to Recover back, on Sale Falling through.]—See Phippen v. Hyland, 19 C. P. 416.

Conspiracy to Defeat Contract. —An action on the case in the nature of a conspiracy does not lie against a person supplanting another in the purchase of goods which had first been contracted for by the latter party. Davis v. Minor, 2 U. C. R. 464.

Co-operative Association—Cash Transaction—Pleading,]—The plaintiffs supplied goods to a co-operative association, formed under 29 Vict. c. 22 on the order of their manager. The terms of purchase were said to be cash, but it appeared that, according to the course of dealing between the parties, before payment the invoices were laid before a board meeting, and if found correct the treasurer was ordered to pay. These goods were ordered in January, and not paid for, and in July the plaintiffs sued:—Held, not a cash transaction, within s. 14 of the Act, and that the defence should have been specially pleaded, and the plea was allowed to be added. Fitsgerald v. London Co-operative Association, 27 U. C. R. 605.

ance—Inability to Buy on Credit—Acceptance—Implied Representation of Authority,]
—The plaintiff sued the officers and directors of a co-operative association, incorporated under R. S. O. 1887 c. 166, for the price of goods sold to it on credit, which, by the statute incorporating it, the association was forbidden to buy in that way:—Held, that he could not recover, as no action could be maintained upon an implied representation or warranty of authority i: law to do an act; and, moreover, the plaintiff must be taken to have known of the statutory inability. Held, also, that, although the proceeds of a ressile of the goods by the association were applied to relieve the defendants from a personal liability for other goods purchased by the association, they could not be said to have derived a personal benefit from the plaintiff's goods, and, therefore, the latter could not recover on this ground. Held, lastly, that, although one of the defendants accepted, on behalf of the association, the plaintiff's drafts drawn on it for the goods, he was not liable upon an implied representation or warranty of authority in law of the association so to accept. Struthers
v. Mackensie, 28 O. R. 381.

Power to Take and Assign Mortgage of Lands. |—By its Act of incorporation, 26 Vict. c. 31, Huron College is authorized to take, hold, and convey lands sold, given, or granted to it, provided that such land so held shall be only such as may be required for the nurpeess of codlege buildings, &c., and provided, also, that it may acquire any other real estate, by gift, devise, or bequest, and hold the same for seven years, to revert to the person from whom it was acquired, if not disposed of within that time. The plaintiff in ejectment claimed as assignee of a mortgage executed to the college in 1864, and assigned by it to him in the same year; and it was objected that the college had no power either to take or assign such mortgage:—Held, that under the first part of the clause the college could take the lands; and, if prevented from holding by the first provise, the Crown only could take advantage of the disability, and the college could convey its defeasible title. Quaere, whether it could not also acquire this land under the second provise, the word "gift" being often confounded with "grant." If so, the assignment to the plaintiff being within seven years, he was entitled to recover. Becher v. Woods, 16 C. P. 29.

2. King's College.

Covenant—Statutory Assignment of—Upper Canada College.]—The plaintiffs, by the name of the Upper Canada College and Royal Grammar School, declared in covenant on an indenture made between the chancellor, president, and scholars of King's College, and the defendant:—Held, that the effect of 12 Vict. c. 32 and 13 & 14 Vict. c. 49, was to transfer the covenant from the University of King's College to the plaintiffs; and consequently gave them the right of property in the indenture declared on, and entitled them to recover thereon in the name used; and that proof that the covenant was made on behalf and for the benefit of the plaintiffs, would not be contradicting the deed or covenant. Principal of Upper Canada College and Royal Grammar School v. Boutlon, 2 C. P. 325.

Tuition Fees—Upper Canada College.]—
Is given in Upper Canada College before and after the passing of 7 Wm. IV. c. 16. It is no objection to the right of King's College to sue for tuition given after the passing of 7 Wm. IV. c. 16, in Upper Canada College, that professors in King's College had not, during the time sued for, been appointed. King's College v, Denison, 5 U. C. R. 203.

3. Queen's College.

Bequest—Mortmain.]—A bequest issuing out of realty to Queen's College for the founding of a bursary, is a charitable bequest within the Mortmain Acts, and therefore void. Ferguson v. Gibson, 22 Gr. 36.

Removal of Professor — Injunction — Restoration—Jurisdiction.] — By letters patent under the great seal, issued on the 16th October, 1842, certain persons were created a body corporate by the name of "Queen's College, at Kingston," with the style and privilege of a university, with power to appoint professors and other officers, and in case of complaint made to the trustees to institute inquiry, and in the event of any impropriety of conduct being duly proved, to admonish, reprove, suspend, or remove the person offenders.

ing:—Held, that the professorships were offices of freehold, held ad vitam ant culpan; that the trustees could not at their descretion, without such inquiry, remove the professors; and that the court would by injunction prevent the trustees from introperly interfering with the professors. Weir v. Mathieson, 11 Gr. 383.

But on appeal the decision was reversed, and it was held, that there was no jurisdiction in equity to interfere for the restoration of a professor removed, and that, under the charter, a sufficient number of trustees might remove in their discretion. 8, C., 3 E, & A, 123.

4. Victoria University.

Senate—Place of Meeting,] — Held, that under the Acts incorporating Victoria University, and the statutes thereof, the chancellor had no power to call a meeting of the senate elsewhere than at Cobourg, the seat of the University. Town of Cobourg v. Victoria University, 18 O. R. 165.

II. GRAMMAR SCHOOLS.

Board of Trustees — Union with Common School Trustees — Illegality of,]—The united board of grammar and common school trustees of the village of Trenton applied for a mandamus to the corporation of Trenton to levy a sum of money required by them for grammar school purposes, as mentioned in the estimate, supporting the application by an affidavit of their secretary, who stated that the trustees of the village of Trenton county grammar school had united with the board of school trustees of the village of Trenton, and the same became and had ever since been the united board of grammar and common school trustees of the village: — Held, that such united board of grammar and common of the two boards of trustees was not authorized by C. S. U. C. c. 63, s. 25, s. s. 7, and c. 64, s. 79, s. s. 9; and the application was therefore retiused. Ke Trenton School Trustees vand Village of Trenton, 26 U. C. R.

Union with Common School Trustees - Illegality-Treasurer of County-Lia-bility for School Moneys.]-There being in a village a joint board of grammer and common school trustees, on 7th July the chairman of the board of grammar school trustees received a circular from the education office, advising him of the payment of $202 for that school. This money had been paid into the Toronto office of the Bank of Upper Canada (prior to its suspension) as agent for defendant, the treasurer of the county, and the bank sent him an order on their Hamilton branch, which was not presented before the bank stopped payment in September. It was not asked for until 25th September, when the treasurer of the joint board called for it. On 26th de-fendant wrote to the treasurer of the joint board enclosing this draft, saying that it had been received by him for the grammar school, and had been lying in his office for their demand as usual since the 11th July. The plaintiffs having refused to accept the draft: -Held, that an action for this money would lie against defendant as treasurer, it having been paid to his agents at Toronto, and he having admitted its receipt for the special purpose. (2) That, as the board of grammar school trustees, notwithstanding the union, still existed as a separate corporation, the action should have been by them, not by the joint board. If the action had been rightly brought, defendant would have been liable for the loss on the draft, for the payment was made to his agents at Toronto in money, Calcdonia Grümmar and Common School Trustees v. Farrell, 27 U. C. R. 321.

County Council — Raising Money—Statute.1 — Held, that a county council is not bound under C. S. U. C. c. 23, to raise a sum of money upon the application of grammar school trustees for purposes connected with the grammar school; but that the statute is permissive, not obligatory. In re Weston Grammar School Trustees and Counties of York and Pect, 13 C. P. 423.

III. HIGH SCHOOLS,

1. Applications to Municipal Councils for Funds.

Applicants - Description of - Demand-Estimates - Maintenance.] - On an applica-Estimates—Maintenance.]—On an applica-tion for a mandamus to compel a municipal corporation to provide $286.74 for a board of school trustees, they were described in the pro-ceedings as "The trustees of the Port Rowan ceedings as "The trustees of the Fort Rowan high school;" and it appeared that on the 1st July, 1872, a demand was made on the town-ship corporation, headed, "School Section No. 12, Walsingham, Fort Rowan, July 1st, 1872," and stating that the amount required was "for expenses of conducting high school;" and was signed "Wm. Ross, secretary and treasurer of Port Rowan high school board." Subsequently to this, on the 19th August, 1872, the secretary of the board sent a letter to the clerk of the township corporation, headed. "Office of high school board, sec. No. 12, Port Rowan, 19th August, 1872," stating that in making up the estimates for the "current expenses of high school," an error had been made, and that the amount actually required was $286.74, which amount he was required to make immediate demand for from the council, &c. In reply the township clerk sent a letter addressed, "To — Ross, secretary, P. Rowan high school board," enclosing a copy of a resolution passed by the township council, stating that they declined to pay "the demand of the Port Rowan high school trustees," &c.:—Held, that the description of the trustees was sufficient; for that, although "The trustees of the Port Rowan county high school," would appear to be more correct, yet 34 Vict. c. 33 (O.) did not in express terms give any corporate designation, and the terms give any corporate designation, and the township corporation by their action had shewn that they fully understood the body with whom they were dealing. (2) That the demand was sufficient, being signed by the secretary and trensurer, the officer and organ of the board, and having been recognized by the resolution of the township council as the demand of the board. (3) That it was not necessary to give the estimates on which the sums required were based, there being a differsums required were based, there being a difference in this respect between the Grammar School and Common School Act. (4) That the purposes for which the money was stated to be required, viz., "for expenses of conducting high school," and "current expenses of high school," fell within the meaning of the words "maintenance and school accommodation," used in the statute. In re Port ings—Mandamus—Demand.]—A mandamus nisi was ordered, on the application of the injunt board of education of the exportance of the first provide St(5,00), as required by said board, for the mainten are an accommodation of the bids of the bids of the said board, for the mainten are and accommodation of the bids of the bids shool, to pay for a school site and building of a school house and premises connected therewith, as shewn by the estimates prepared and submitted by said board to the corporation:—Held, that the joint board of education were the proper applicants, and not the trustees of the high school board. The sections of the High School and Public School Acts, 37 Viet. cc. 27, 28 (O.), which confer on the joint board the powers of each board for the purpose for which such board was created, before the creation of the joint board. Semble, that the demand here was not in form sufficient; but, the council having resisted the application on other grounds, effect was not given to the objection. Re Perth Board of Education and Town of Perth, 39 U. C. R. 34.

Joint Board—Buildings—Statute.]
—On the 29th April. 1878, the board of education of the incorporated village of Morrisburgh, which was formed by the union of the high school board of high school district No. 4 of the united counties of Stormont, Dundas, and Glengarry, and the public school board of the incorporated village of Morrisburgh, in which village the high school was situated, resolved that the sum of 87,000 should be levied on high school district No. 4, to cover the expense of building, furnishing, &c., for purposes of the high school:—Held, that the joint board, and not the high school board, was the proper body to make the requisition for the money, under 37 Vict. c. 27, s. 63 (O.), adopting the construction put upon that section in Re Perth Board of Education and Town of Perth. 39 U. C. R. 34, which had been confirmed by implication by 42 Vict. c. 34 (O.) Re Morrisburg Board of Education and Township of Winchester, 8 A. R. 163.

Erection of School House — Contributing Township.]—Held, allfirming the judgment in 39 U. C. R. 302, that under 37 Viet. c. 27 (O.), the high school board for a district composed of two municipalities, a town and a township, can compel one of the municipalities, the township, to contribute towards the erection of a school house in the other municipality, and not merely towards its maintenance. In re Niegara High School Board and Township of Niegara, 1. A. R. 288.

Maintenance—Requisities of Application—By-law.]—Held, that the words "maintenance, accommodation, and other necessary expenses" in s.-s. 6 of s. 25, R. S. O. 1887 c. 226; include the purposes mentioned in s. 35 (1), and consequently that an application under s. 35 (1) must be made before the 1st day of August. Held, also, that an application under s. 35 (1) must be the corporate act of the school board, not merely the oral request (however unanimous) of the individuals composing it, and must specify the purposes for which the money is required. Held, also, that, to come within the provisions of s. 35, an application must be an independent application for purposes mentioned in that section, and that an application combining other purposes with these purposes, may be rejected by a simple majority vote, Held, also, that an application under s. 35 may be rejected by the council, although no formal by-law relating to the purposes of the application is before the council, and the meeting at which the rejection takes place has not been called for the special purpose of considering such a by-law. Decision in 15 O. R. 686 reversed. In real Cakecood High School Board and Township of Mariposa, 16 A. R. 87.

damus.] — By 60 Vict. c. 14, s. 73 (0.), it is enacted that "the municipal council shall pay for the maintenance of pupils."—Held, that the municipal corporation and not the individual members of the council are liable. Judgment below, ordering the defendants to pay to the plaintiffs a proportion of the cost of maintenance of the high school in respect of pupils residing in the town attending the high school, affirmed, but that part thereof directing a mandamus to the mayor and councillors of the town to pass a resolution authorizing the treasurer to pay the amount, struck out as unnecessary. Port Arthur High School Board v. Town of Fort William, 25 A. R. 522. See Dausson v. Town of Sault Ste. Marie, 18 O. R. 556, post 2.

Non-Existent School.]—A county council is not authorized under 37 Vict. c. 27, s. 47 (O.), to raise money by by-law for a high school not in existence, but in contemplation only. Sharp v. County of Peel, 40 U. C. R. 71.

 Appointment of High School Boards and Trustees.

Authority of Corporation — By-law — Erection of School House.] — On motion to continue an injunction to restrain the corporation of a town in a judicial district from paying over to the high school board of said town, and the said bourd from receiving, the sum of $15.000 raised by by-law of said town, for acquiring a site and erecting a high school thereon: — Held, that under the provisions of ss. 4 and 10 of R. S. O. 1887 c. 226, taken in connection with s. 1 of 50 vict. c. 64 (O.), incorporating the said town, the corporation where authorized to appoint a high board thereof of the said school and that the consent of the lieutenancies, and the pass of the form of the lieutenancies, and the said town, the corporation was sent and the said town, the corporation was not an additional high school. Held, also, that the appear of the board must be by by-law; but a by-law therefor passed after the motion was made, but before the hearing thereof, was sufficient. The court refused to entertain an objection that the board were about to build the school on land not acquired by then, for it could not be assumed that the money would be spent until the title to the land had been acquired; and also it was not necessary to shew that specific portions of the $15.000 had been appropriated to the purchase of the land and the erection of the building. Daveson v. Town of Sault Ste. Marie, 18 O. R. 556.

By-law — Resolution.] — Under its town of Port Arthur has the same rights and powers in regard to the organization and maintenance of high schools as other incorporated towns. A board of trustees of a high school may be appointed by resolution of the municipal council having jurisdiction; a by-law is not necessary. The opinion bearing on this point expressed in Township of Pembroke v. Canada Central R. W. Co., 3 O. R. 503, at p. 508, preferred to that in Dawson v. Town of Sault Ste. Marie, 18 O. R. 556, Port Arthur High School Board v. Town of Fort William, 25 A. R. 522.

Trustee—Appointment to Fill Vacancy.]
—In a high school board of a high school district constituted under s. 11 of 54 Vict. c. 57 (O.), a vacancy occurred by reason of the expiration of the term of office of one of the trustees appointed by a town, whereupon the town council passed a by-law appointing the plaintiff to fill the vacancy. At a subsequent meeting, in the absence of any of the causes provided for by the Act, namely, death, resignation, or removal from the district, &c., the council passed a by-law amending their previous by-law by substituting the name of the defendant for that of the plaintiff:—Held, that the plaintiff was duly appointed to fill the vacancy, and that he was entitled to the seat, and the subsequent appointment of defendant was illegal. Regima cx rcl. Moore v. Nagle, 26 O. R. 249.

Trustee—Proceeding to Remove — Quo Warranto.]—See Quo Warranto.

3. Districts.

County Council—Aid to Districts—Assessment.]—The three united counties of Stormont, Dundas, and Glengarry were formed into five high school districts:—Held, that under 36 Vict. c. 48, s. 383, s.-s. 6, and 37 Vict. c. 27, s. 45 (Ö.), the aid granted by the corporation to the high school to supplement the government grant must be by an equal rate upon the assessable property of the united counties, not upon each high school district for the sum apportioned to its schools. of.]—Under 44 Vict. c. 33 (O.), the county council has impliedly the power to change the limits of a high school district from time to time, and not merely once, or when an additional school is established. Re Tyrell and County of York, 35 U. C. R. 247.

By-law—Repeal.]—After the repeal of 37 Vict. c. 27, s. 38 (0.), by 40 Vict. c. 16, s. 18, s.-s. 2 (0.), a county conneil, having no power to determine the limits of high school districts, passed a by-law determining the same. By another law they repealed it and established new limits:—Held, that such last mentioned by-law was valid so far as it repealed the first by-law, which was invalid, but the rest of it must be quashed. Re Chamberlain and Counties of Stormont, Dundas, and Glengarry, 45 U. C. R. 26.

By-laws—Repeal—Demand — Mandamus—Costs.]—The county council of the united counties, acting under 37 Vict. c. 27, s. 38 (O.), which gave power to every county council from time to time to determine th limits of a high school district for each high school existing in the county and within its sensor existing in the county and within in numicipal jurisdiction, had, on 23rd June, 1876, by by-law No. 516, declared that dis-trict No. 4 should consist of the village of Morrisburgh and the townships of Williamsburgh and Winchester. Section 38 was re-pealed by 40 Vict. c. 16, s. 18 (O.), which, however, declared that all high school districts which existed at the time of its passing (viz., 2nd March, 1877), should continue until the county council should think fit to discontinue them. On 12th October, 1877, the county council passed by-law No. 551, which, after reciting, inter alia, that it was expedient to consolidate all Acts and by-laws of those counties which in any way related to high school districts, proceeded in direct terms to repeal several by-laws, including No. 516, and then went on to enact that the united counties should be divided into five districts for high school purposes. No. 4 and No. 5 being in the county of Dundas, and No. 4 embracing Williamsburgh, Winchester, and Morrisburgh:—Held, that, although the reconstruction of the districts was ultra vires and void, because the power to determine the districts had ceased at the passing of 40 Vict. c. 16 (O.), yet the repeal of by-law 516, being within the power to discontinue the districts which that statute preserved, was valid, and the township of Winchester was valid, and the township of Winchester Ind therefore ceased to be part of district No. 4 before the resolution of April, 1878, was passed. The board of education, acting under the resolution of April, 1878, had on 19th July, 1878, made a demand upon the township of Winchester for its proportion of the money required. Refore that damand was made as: required. Before that demand was made, another by-law, No. 590, had been passed on 22nd June, 1878, by the county council, repealing that portion of by-law No. 551 which related to high school districts for high school purposes in the county of Dundas, and enacting, inter alia, that district No. 4 should embrace the village of Morrisburgh only. This brace the village of Morrisburgh only. This by-law was passed after a majority of the revers and deputy reeves of the county of Dundas had, under the power given by 41 Viet. c. 15 (O.), requested the county council to abolish the districts Nos. 4 and 5, and to constitute the corporation of the village of Morrisburgh high school district No. 4:— Held, that this by-law was effectual to abolish. Held, that this by-law was effectual to abolish district No. 4, if that district had continued to exist after the passage of by-law No. 551. When the demand was made in July, 1878, by-law 590 was in force. It was moved against in the court of Queen's bench in November, 1878, and was quashed so far as it assumed to determine the limits of districts, but not so far as it repealed by-law No. 551: Re Chamberlain and Counties of Stormont. Dundas, and Glengarry, 45 U. C. R. 26. In 27th June, 1879, the county council passed another by-law, No, 617, simply abolishing the existing high school districts in the county of Dundas. At this time no part county of Dundas. At this time no part of the money demanded had been levied. This by-law was passed after the rule nisi for a mandamus in the matter had been granted, but before it was argued:—Held, reversing Vol. III. D—197—48

the judgment in 45 U. C. R. 460, that if the demand had been originally valid, it could not be enforced after the passage of by-law No. 617, and nothing would have remained in question but the costs of the application. Re Morrisbury Board of Education and Township of Winchester, S. A. R. 169.

Township and Village Councils—Bylaws—Repeal—Petition, 1—In 1879 the township of Grimsby passed a by-law attaching a certain portion of the township to the village of Grimsby for high school purposes. In 1881 the township to the village of Grimsby for high school purposes. In 1881 the township to the village of Grimsby. By 45 Vict. c. 33 (O.), the township was divided into two townships of North and South Grimsby. In 1882 the council of the township passed a by-law, on the petition of less than two-thirds of the ratepayers, repealing the two former by-laws;—Held, that the two township by-laws, with the corresponding village by-laws, formed an agreement, pursuant to R. S. O. 1877 c. 205, s. 30, as amended by 42 Vict. c. 34, s. 32 (O.), which could not be rescribed by one of the municipalities without the concurrence of the other; and therefore that the repealing by-law should be passed only upon the petition of two-thirds of the ratepayers. IV. PUBLIC SCHOOLS.

1. Officers of School Corporations.

Secretary-Treasurer -- Appointment -Secretary-Treasurer — Appointment— Presumption—Acts of — Action—Parties.]— One T., who acted in the capacity of secre-tary-treasurer of the plaintiffs, who had not been appointed in writing, and had not given security as required by the statute in that behalf, absconded with certain moneys which had been received by him, as such secretarytreasurer, from the defendants. The plaintiffs had recognized T. as their secretary-treasurer nad recognized 1. as their secretary-treasurer by intrusting him with the custody of their books and papers, by allowing him to receive moneys for them, by auditing his accounts, and receiving and approving of the auditor's reports:—Held, that R. S. O. 1877 c. 204, s. 99, which provides that, in the case of a surely when all optimized the control of rural school section corporation, the resolution, action, or proceeding of at least two of the trustees shall be necessary in order law-fully to bind such corporation, does not apply to acts of duty of the secretary-treasurer; and that payment by the municipality of school moneys to T. was binding on the trustees. Held, also, that if a person acts notoriously as the officer of a corporation, and is recognized by it as such officer, a regular appoint-ment will be presumed, and his acts will bind the corporation, although no written proof is, or can be, adduced of his appointment. a bill by a rural school section corporation to compel the municipality to make good money paid by the municipality to a person alleged not to be the duly appointed officer of the corporation, the treasurer of the municipality is not a proper party. a public school board was appointed for a year on giving the necessary security, which he did by bond with sureties, without any limit as to time or any reference to the period of his appointment. He was reappointed each year for several years in the same way and on the same condition, but without fresh security being taken, and subsequently became a defaulter in respect of moneys received by him during his last year's appointment:—Held, that the sureties were not liable for his defalcation. See Paris Board of Education v, Citizens Insurance and Investment Co., 30 C. P. 132; Torenship of Oakland v, Proper, I O. R. 330; Stephen School Trustees v, Mitchell, 29 U. C. R. 382; Keith v, Fencton Falls Union School Section, 3 O. R. 194.

2. Pupils.

Exclusion—Colour—Separate School.]—Residents of a section in which a separate school has been established for the class to which they belong—as in this case, for coloured people—are not entitled to send their children to the general common school of such section. In re Hill and Condex and Zone School Trustees, 11 U. C. R. 573.

Held, upon the facts, that either no separate school extending to the appellant had been established for coloured persons within the statute, or it had been discontinued, and that he was therefore entitled to a mandamus to the trustees to admit his daughter to the common school. The erection of a separate school suspends but does not annul the rights of those for whom it was established, as regards the common schools. When it is no longer kept up, these rights revive, In re 8theward and Sandwich East School Trustees, 23 U. C. R. 634.

In answer to an application for a mandamit the applicant's son, a coloured boy, to the public school in his ward, it was sworn that since 1846 a school had been set apart for the coloured inhabitants, and that the school to which admission was desired was overcrowded, and had no room for any additional children. There was, however, no separate school legally established for coloured people, the Act authorizing such schools being passed after the setting apart of the school above mentioned;—Held, that on the ground only of want of accommodation the writ must be refused; but, as admission had been refused on account of the boy's colour, the trustees were ordered to pay the costs of the application. In re Mutchison and 8t. Catharines School Trustees, 31 U. C. R. 274.

Residence of Parcut.]—Held, that in this case it was sufficiently shewn that the plaintiff was a resident of the school section from the school of which his son had been excluded, for which this action was brought. Washington v. Charlotteville School Trustees, 11 U. C. R. 569.

Expulsion or Suspension—Trustees— Teacher—Apology — Malice—Remedy—Notice.]—On the 3rd December, 1884, a school teacher dismissed the plaintiff, a boy thirteen years of age, for disobedience, speaking impudently when questioned about it, and refusing to be punished for misconduct. The matter was brought before the trustees, and on the 6th January they held a meeting and passed a resolution that the boy could return to school on his expressing regret for his misconduct. After the receipt of a solicitor's letter on behalf of the father, the trustees, on the 10th February, held another meeting and passed a resolution that the boy could return to school after one day's suspension. On the 11th February another meeting of the trustees was held and a resolution passed reinstating the resolution of the 6th January. The father was not notified nor was he present at the was not noted nor was ne present at the meetings of the 6th January and 11th Feb-ruary; but he was notified of, and was pre-sent at, the meeting of the 10th February. The boy returned to school, but, relying on the resolution of the 10th February, made no apology, and remained there for several days, but was not interfered with by the teacher, who, however, would give him no instruction. In an action in a division court against the teacher and trustees for an alleged wrongful dismissal:—Held, that the action must be dismissed against the trustees; that it was not their act, but that of the teacher, that caused the boy's removal; that the passing of the resolution as to apologising was not an expulsion; that the teacher in not instructing boy was not acting under the trustees' direction; and that they were not liable for not compelling her to give the instruction. Quære, whether in such a case as this malice must not be shewn, unless followed by some act amounting to assault or trespass; and whether a mandamus, and not an action, was not the proper remedy. The action of the trusthe proper remedy. The action of the trus-tees in proceeding in the absence and without notice to the parties interested, and also the unreasonable conduct of the father, and commented on. McInture v. Blanchard School Trustees, 11 O. R. 439.

Trustees—Teacher — Discretion—Mandamus — Delay, I — A puril at a public school having injured the top of a school desk by cutting it, he was ordered by the school-master to replace the top with his own hands, and was suspension was on the 20th February, 1888, and on the 7th May, 1889, notice of motion was served by the father of the pupil for a mandamus to compel the trustees to readmit the son. In the meantime appeals had been made by the father to three of the trustees, to the public school board, and to the annual school meeting, on all of which applications the action of the teacher was sustained. During this time the pupil attended another public school:—Held, that the discretion exercised by the master and trustees should not be interfered with, especially after the delay and change in the position of affairs. Re McCallum and Brant School Trustees, 17 O. R. 451.

Right of Admission—Insufficient Accommodation—Application.]—A mandamus to compet the admission of a child to a public school will not be granted where it is shewn that there is not accommodation for her, for this is a valid answer to such an application, especially where it appears, as here, that there is sufficient accommodation at another public school in the same town; nor where it is shewn that the application for admission was not made in the regular and proper way, under the public school regulations, as was the case here, inasmuch as, although the child in question was a registered pupil at the other public school in the same town during the preceding term, she had not attended there at the commencement of the present one, nor had application been made to the inspector to have her admitted to the school to which ment".]—The custodian—"Bourding-out Agreement".]—The custodian of a child under a "boarding-out agreement" to clothe, maintain, and educate him, is not his "guardian" within the meaning of s.-s. 3 of s. 40 of the Public Schools Act of 1891, 54 Vict, c. 55 (O.), and the trustees of the school section within which the custodian resides need not provide school accommodation for the child. Judgment in 28 O. R. 127 affirmed. Hall v. Stisted School Trustees, 24 A. R. 476.

3. School Houses and Sites.

(a) Acquisition of Site.

Conveyance — Mistake in Description—Title—Parities to Suit.]—A school site had been granted to certain persons in 1831, and as school house erected thereon, but by mistake the wrong site was conveyed. The grantor subsequently made a mortgage on his estate, but exempted the portion reserved for a school site. He died shortly afterwards, leaving his son and heir-at-law a minor. The defendant, during the minority of the heir, obtained a lease of the premises, excepting the site in question; but on the coming of age of the heir obtained a deed from the said heir, without any reservation of the school site. About the same time, or a little before, he also obtained an assignment of the mortgage so as to perfect his title. He then claimed the land on which the school house was creeted, on the ground that in consequence of the mistake no title was vested in the trustees, whereupon the trustees of the school section filed a bill against him:—Held, that had express notice of the trustees title; and that, even if the trustees were volunteers as to this piece of land, the defendant was also a volunteer, and being prior to him they had a right to the aid of equity to have his title to said piece of land encelled, or a conveyance thereof from said defendant. Held, also, that the township council was a necessary party to the suit. West Gueillimbury School Trustees, y. Farrell, 5 L. J. 230.

Conveyance to County—Subsequent Incorporation into City—Effect of Statute.]—On the 26th September, 1844, one LeB, conveyed certain land to the municipal council of the district of Dalhousie, on condition of their erecting within a year a school house thereon. The deed did not state that it was to be a model school house, but that was the only school they could then establish, and the council had on the 16th May previous, acting under 7 vict. c. 29, which authorized the establishment of model schools, passed a resolution and by-law recting the statute, and directing the establishment of a model school, which, within the time limited, was erected on this land. The land formed part of what was afterwards incorporated as the town of Bytown, and subsequently the city of Ottawa, while the district of Dalhousie became the county of Carleton. The evidence shewed that up to 1851 the school was used as a model school, and that the plaintiffs had always asserted their right thereto, and had ejected one S., who got into possession as a private and afterwards as a common school reacher; and up to 1868 the defendants had admitted the plaintiffs right to: 37 Vict. 37 Vict.

c 28 (O.) emp-wered the public school board of any city to take possession of all public school property, and to hold, as a corporation, all such property acquired or given at any time for public school purposes in the city by any title whatsoever. Defendants took possession, claiming the land as being vested in them under this Act, and the plaintiffs then brought ejectment:—Held, that plaintiffs were entitled to recover, for that under DeB's conveyance the property vested in them, and the subsequent School Act had not had the effect of divesting it. Held, also, 'that there was no objection to the county owning land so acquired, and subsequently included in the city. County of Carleton v. Ottawa Public School Board, 25 C. P. 137.

Expropriation — Interest of Lessee — Orchard.]—In proceeding to select a site for a public school house, no notice of the proceeding to arbitrate upon the question of compensation was given to a lesses in possession of the property selected, and in consequence he did not name an arbitrator, neither did he attend before or take any notice of the arbitration; and the arbitrations in fact did not take into consideration the value of his interest, neither did they find that such interests was not of any value. The court, at the instance of the lessee, declared that his interest had not been affected by the arbitration, and directed an inquiry as to damages sustained by him, and ordered the trustees to pay him his costs of suit. The principal objection to land being taken for a school site was, that it was an orchard, but the facts showed that the owner had only, after the selection was first spoken of, planted some trees, which, on the movement to take the land being stopped, were suffered to die out; and these were renewed again on a subsequent movement of the trustees to take possession: —Held, that this was not such an orchard as should prevent the trustees from appropriating the land for school purposes. Johnson V. Howard School Trustees, 26 Gr. 204.

Purchase — Application to Municipal Council for Funds,]—A municipal council has no discretion in accepting or rejecting the requisition of school trustees for funds for a school site, except by a two-thirds vote. An adverse vote by a smaller majority is a virtual acceptance, and the requisition must therefore be complied with. Re Napance Board of Education and Toen of Napance, 29 Gr. 395. See Re Morrisburg Board of Education and Township of Winchester, S.A. R. 163, ante 111, 3.

Concurrence of Freeholders.]—A board of school trustees cannot, under 14 & 15 Vict. c. 488, and 16 Vict. c. 185, without any reference to the freeholders, select and purchase the site for the school house, and impose a rate therefor. Orr v. Ranney, 12 U. C. R. 377.

Quere, whether, under C. S. U. C. c. 64, s. 27, s.-s. 10, and s. 34, the concurrence of the freeholders and householders required to enable the trustees to call upon the council to levy money for the purchase of a school site, &c., can be expressed at the annual school meeting, without notice that the question will then be brought up. In re Taber and Township of Scarborough, 20 U. C. R. 549.

— Concurrence of Freeholders—Meeting—Difference of Opinion—Arbitration and Award.]—Replevin. Two defendants avowed: the third pleaded the convening of a special meeting of the freeholders and householders of a certain school section to procure a school site, when it was agreed to procure a certain piece of ground and erect a school house thereon, which was done; that the plaintiff was a resident freeholder then and when his goods were seized, and was assessed $80 for building said school house, &c. The plaintiff pleaded that the meeting above set forth was null and void, because before the said meeting another meeting had been convened according to law, when a difference of opinion existed between a majority of the freeholders and householders as to choosing a school site, and arbitrators were appointed, who decided upon a certain site, which decision remains in force and the defendants in contravention thereof wrongfully purchased the site mentioned in their plea, and wrongfully distrained, &c. Upon demurrer:—Held, that the second meeting pleaded by defendants was a violation of the statute, and that the plaintiff was entitled to judgment. The arbitrators to whom a reference in this cause was made under the School Act executed an award, the description of the lot not being fully inserted, but a blank being left therefor, which was afterwards filled in and the word "lot" altered into "gore:"—Held, that the award was insufficient. Ryland v. King, 12 C. P. 198.

Replevin against two school trustees and one K., a bailiff, for a horse. Defendants pleaded, (1) that they did not take; and (2) an avowry, setting out in substance that on the 30th October, 1858, a special meeting of the freeholders and householders of the section had been duly called to procure a school site and erect a school house thereon, at which it was agreed to procure a certain site named; that this was procured and the school house built; that the plaintiff was duly assessed for a sum specified; that the trustees by their warrant commanded K. to collect it; and that, after demand and default made, he seized the horse. The plaintiff pleaded to the avowry, (1) de injurià; and (2), as to the justification by the trustees, that the meeting was void, because before it took place a special meeting of the freeholders was duly held to procure a school site, at which a majority of the trustees differed from a majority of those present with regard to the site in consequence of which the freeholders and householders, the trustees, and the local superintendent, each appointed an arbitrator to decide the question; that the arbitrators determined upon a site specified, different from that mentioned in the avowry, which award remained in force; and that the trustees, contrary to this decision, wrongfully purchased the site mentioned in the avowry. The defendants replied that there was no such award. With regard to the second and third issues, raised by the plea of de injuria to the avowry and replication denying the award, the evidence shewed that in 1857 the inhabitants were divided as to the choice of a school ants were divided as to the choice of a school site, and an award was made but not acted upon; that in 1858 the same differences existed, and one of the trustees also differed from his co-trustees; that in March the two trustees, defendants, obtained a conveyance of half an acre, part of lot 15, and in May a meeting was held at which arbitrators were named and an award made; but, the inhabitants being still dissatisfied, another meeting was held in July, when the arbitrators mentioned in the plea to the avowry were chosen.

In the meantime the building was commenced In the meantime the building was commenced upon the land conveyed. On the 4th Septem-ber an award was drawn up, which, as pro-duced at the trial, directed that the site should duced at the trial, directed that the site side side of the "a part of the gore lying between 16 and 17, now in the tenure of John Landon, situated on the south-west of the road, and in the westerly limit of the gald gore;" but it the westerly limit of the said gore; the westerly limit of the said gore;" but it appeared that the words in italies were not in the award when signed, but added by two of the arbitrators in May, 1859; and that the word "gore" stood originally "lot," and so remained until the other words were filled in. On the 30th October, 1858, a meeting was but it held, having been regularly called by the two trustees to settle the question finally, and a resolution passed adopting the land conveyed. In April, 1859, the two trustees, defendants, met, the third being absent from the country, and resolved upon the rate, which was inserted by the clerk in the roll, and the warrant was issued to K., who seized the plaintiff's horse. The plaintiff after that procured the award to be filled up by two of the arbitrators, who stated that it had been left blank because they did not know the pre-cise description of Landon's land:—Held, that upon the second issue defendants were entitled to succeed, for the evidence sustained the avowry; and that upon the third issue they were also entitled to the verdict, for there was were also entitled to the verdict, for there was in fact no award made, and even as it was altered after execution the description was too uncertain. Ryland v. King, 12 C. P. 198, commented upon. Held, that, under the circumstances proved, that reference did not make the subsequent meeting illegal. Held, make the subsequent meeting illegal. Held, also, upon demurrer, that the avowry was good, the omission of any averment essential to the validity of the rate being cured by the second plea to it, which relied wholly upon the award; that the second plea was bad, for not shewing that before the award the trustees and inhabitants had not duly selected the site built upon, as they might do notwith-standing the reference; and that the replica-tion to it denying the award was a good answer. Vance v. King, 21 U. C. R. 187.

Concurrence of Freeholders—Money By-law.]—It appeared from the affidavit of the secretary and treasurer of a school section, that at two regularly called meetings of the duly qualified electors of the school section, at which a chairman was appointed, proposals to purchase a site, build a school house, and borrow money therefor, were put by way of motion and carried, upon which a by-law was passed, authorizing the issue of debentures to raise money for the above purposes:—Held, that under 42 Vict. c. 34, 8.29, s.s. 3 (O.), this was a sufficient submission to and approval of the proposal by the duly qualified school electors of the section; and a rule to quash the by-law was discharged. In re Mc-Cormick and Township of Colchester South, 46 U. C. R. 65.

— Dissent of Trustees.]—A dissent by school trustees from a decision of the ratepayers as to a site for the school, should be intimated promptly, and if not announced till after the expiration of the current year, it is too late. Coupland v. Nottawasaga School Trustees, 15 Gr. 339.

Reservation—Plan—Improvements.]—A reservation for school purposes is of such a character as to be the subject of dedication. The owners of land in 1856 caused the same to be surveyed and laid off into village lots.

and on the plan thereof, which was duly regis-"reserve for tered, marked a portion as "reserve for school ground." An auction sale of lots took place during the same month with reference m place during the same month with reference to the lots not fronting on the reserve, when lots to the value of $20,000 were sold; and after the auction lots were sold privately, acild na tucording to the plan. The school trustees did not take possession of the school reserve. Subseir take possession of the school reserve. Subsequently conveyances were executed to S. of all it in the undisposed of portion of the town as surveyed. S. in January, 1863, caused a new plan to be prepared and registered, in which wo 80 the school reserve was laid out into village lots, some of which had meanwhile been bought by the defendant from an intermediate in. vas wo owner with notice of the original plan and the la reservation for school purposes :- Held, on a ed. bill filed in 1876, that the original plan was binding; that the conveyance to S. did not give him the ownership of the soil of the its. Ty. instreets or reserves for public purposes; and that the defendant was not entitled under 36 Vict. c. 22 (O.) to be paid for any im-provements he had made upon the lots formarinro of ing part of the school reserve. Corporation of Wyoming v. (b) Change of Site.

Concurrence of Ratepayers-Meeting —Arbitration.]—The trustees called a meeting in January, 1857, for the selection of a new site, which they considered desirable. This meeting decided against a change, and the trustees called a second meeting to reconsider the question, at which the same decision was come to. Arbitrators were then appointed, and their award was to the same effect. The trustees then called a third meeting to reconsider the question, and the change being thereat approved of, the trustees acted upon this decision by obtaining a new site issuing their warrant to raise money for building the school house there:—Held, that the proceedings were invalid, and that a seizure under the warrant could not be sustained, for that the award was final, at all events for that year, and the third meeting had no power to Semble, that the second meeting was irregular, as the arbitrators should have been appointed at the first. Williams v. Plympton School Trustees, 7 C. P. 559.

Meeting-Arbitration-Joint Board of Education—Grammar School.]—Where a board of school trustees passed a resolution professing to adopt a permanent site for the school, and the resolution was confirmed at a special meeting of the ratepayers duly called, these proceedings were held not to prevent a change of site in a subsequent year. Where school trustees selected a new site for the school house, and at a special meeting of the ratepayers, duly called, those present rejected the site so selected and chose another, but neither party named an arbitrator:—Held, that an arbitrator might be appointed by the ratepayers at a subsequent meeting. power of a county council to change the site of a grammar school is not lost by the union of the grammar school with a common school; though if the new site is not also adopted by the means provided by law for the case of a common school, the change may render necessary the separation of the schools. Where the joint board of a grammar and common school, after the site for the grammar school had been changed by the county council, wrongfully expended school money granted for a grammar school building; and a bill was filed against the trustees to restrain further expenditure, and to make them refund what had been expended, the defendants were ordered to pay the costs, but were allowed time to ascertain if all parties concerned would, under the special circumstances, adopt again the old site. It is contrary to the rule of the court, in dealing with persons who have not acted properly, to punish them more severely than justice to others renders necessary; and theretice to others renders necessary; and there-fore, where school trustees wrongfully ex-pended money in building on a site which had been changed by competent authority, relief was only granted to a ratepayer who com-plained of the act, subject to equitable terms and conditions. Malcolm v. Malcolm, 15 Gr. 12

Meeting - Difference of Opinion-Arbitration.]—Two of the trustees of a school section, wishing to change the school site, called a meeting of the freeholders and house-The two holders, who rejected the proposal. trustees thereupon chose an arbitrator, assuming to act under s. 30 of C. S. U. C. c. 64, but none was chosen by the freeholders and householders, and under the advice of the deputy superintendent the trustees called another meeting, at which a motion to appoint such arbitrator was rejected. The trustees' arbitrator and the local superintendent thereupon made an award changing the site. A special meeting was then called to consider how the money should be raised to carry out the change, at which the conduct of the trustees and the change were strongly disapproved of. The two trustees thereupon petitioned the township council, stating that the ratepayers were desirous of purchasing a new site, and asking for a loan of $400, which was granted:
—Semble, per Richards, C.J., that, under s.
30, the difference of opinion as to the change of site authorized a reference to arbitration; but that the refusal of the freeholders and householders to name an arbitrator, did not enable the other two arbitrators to proceed, the proper course being to compel the appointment by mandamus. Per A. Wilson, J., that the difference of opinion must be as to the position of the new site, after a change has been agreed to by the raterayers, not as to been agreed to by the rate ayers, not as to whether there shall be a change; and the arbitration therefore was unauthorized. Township of Toronto v. McBride. 29 U. C. R. 13.

- Meeting-Majority.]-A new rural school section being formed, it became necessary for the then trustees to provide a school site, &c. A public meeting of the ratepayers was called pursuant to 48 Vict. c. 49, s. 64 (O.), which nearly all the ratepayers attended, when the T. site was chosen by a majority vote of both the ratepayers and trustees as against the J. C. site. A complaint against this result was lodged with the school inspector under s. 32 of the statute, which led to his making attempts to have an amicable adjustment of the difficulty, the outcome of which was that two of the trustees gave notice of a subsequent meeting for the purpose of changing and selecting a school site, which meeting a unanimous vote was had in favour of a third site, called the C. site. an action by the other trustee and some ratepayers to have it declared that the last meeting was illegal, and to restrain building on the

Meeting—Resolution.] — Where it appeared that at a meeting of ratepayers, called, pursuant to s. 64 of R. S. O. 1887 c. 225, to provide for a change of the school site, a resolution for that purpose, and also an amendment thereto, were submitted, both of which, in addition to the main question as to change of site, embraced matters collateral thereto, the former of which was carried :-Held, that the resolution was invalid, and that certain deeds of conveyance, executed pursuant thereto, must be set aside. It is essential that the vital matter voted on should be so laid before the meeting that a fair vote there-on can be given, unequivocally indicating the mind of the majority on the particular point. Held, however, that, as the plaintiffs were present at the meeting, and it was their business to have then objected to the way in which the question was being submitted, and complained to the inspector under s. 32 of the said Act, they should not have their costs of action. McGugan v. Southwold School Trustees, 17 O. R. 428.

Necessity for By-law—Specific Performaux. |—Hold, affirming the decree in 26 Gr. 590, that the board of education formed by the union of high school and public school trustees, had power to change the site for a school, and purchase another without a bylaw or resolution of the county council, or the approval of the lieutenant-governor in council, and that the plaintiff was entitled to specific performance of an agreement by the board to nurchase land for such purpose. Moffatt v. Carleton Place Board of Education, 5 A. R. 197.

(c) Other Cases.

By-law—Creating Debt.]—The by-law in this case passed to raise money for a school house, was held bad, for omitting to comply with the requisites, under 14 & 15 Vict. c. 109, s. 4, of all by-laws creating a debt or contracting a loan. Re Hart and Toiniships of Vespra and Sunnidate, 16 U. C. R. 32.

Contract for Erection of School House—Scall,—The trustees of a school section, being a corporation under 13 & 14 Vict. c. 38:—Held, not liable to pay for a school house erected for and accepted by them, not having contracted under seal. Markall v. Kitley School Trustees, 4 C. P. 373.

authority to contract for the building of a school house, until the necessary funds have been provided, under 54 Vict. c. 55, s. 116 (O.), or for one involving the expenditure of any greater sum than has been so provided. The plaintiff, a freeholder, ratepayer, and elector of the town of Fort William, and a supporter of the public schools therein, suing on behalf of himself and all other ratepayers, was held entitled to an injunction to restrain the proceeding with the erection of a school house, in a case where the contract price exceeded the amount provided under s. 116, and to an order compelling the repayment to the school corporation of certain sums paid by individual members of the school board to the contractors for a portion of the work already performed, Smith v. Fort William School Board, 24 O. R. 366.

Sale of Site under Execution.]—Held, that land conveyed to school trustees for a school could not be sold under execution against them for money due for building the school house. Scott v. Burgess and Bathurst School Trustees, 19 U. C. R. 28.

See Attorney-General for Nova Scotia v. Axford, 13 S. C. R. 294.

4. School Rates.

(a) Collection of.

Action by Collector.]—A township collector may sue for the amount of an assessment for common schools, under 4 & 5 Vict. e. 18, in a division court. McGregor v, White, 1 U. C. R. 15.

Action by Trustees. |—The trustees proceeded to collect the rate by action instead of by warrant, as provided by 13 & 14 Vict. c. 48, s. 12, s.-se. 2, 7, 8:—Semble, that an appeal from a nonsuit in such action might have been dismissed on this ground, but the objection was waived. In re Moore School Trustees v. MeRee, 12 U. C. R. 525.

Action on Collector's Bond—Municipal Treasurer,—Held, that all moneys collected for the erection of school houses under any by-law of the district transurer, who alone was authorized to take security from collectors for the payment of moneys collected for public purposes; and that the plaintiff, as treasurer, was entitled to recover on the bond given by the collector and his sureties. Brown v. Styles, 2 C. P. 346.

Distress—Avoury in Replevin—By-law.]
—Held, that a party avowing for distress in the levying of a school rate, the by-law for sanctioning such levy requiring to be passed upon the request or with the consent of certain persons, must shew such request to have been made, or such concurrence or consent obtained. Held, also, that upon such avowry the avowant must set forth the conditions precedent required by law to be complied with before the passing of a by-law to levy a rate for school purposes. Haacke v. Marr, S.C. P.

See, also, Free v. McHugh, 24 C. P. 13.

 imposed by by-law in December, 1855, was extended by resolutions of the city council, under 18 Vict. c. 21, s. 3, until the 1st August, 1856, and again on the 22nd December, 1856, to the 1st March, 1857;—Held, that the collector, who was the same person for both years, might distrain between the 1st August and the 22nd December, 1856, although no resolution extending the time was then in force. Newberry v. Stephens, 16 U. C. R. 65. Followed in McBride v. Gardham, 8 C. P. 296.

— Previous Years' Taxes.]—Held, that a collector of school taxes might in 1861 collect by distress the taxes for 1859 and 1860, not having made his final return of such taxes as in arrear, and being still collector; and semble, that in this case the plaintiff, who complained of the seizure, having led to it by his own conduct, the proceeding should in the division court have been upheld at all events. In re McLean v, Farrell, 21 U. C. R. 441.

- Promissory Note-Satisfaction-Rescizure.]-Replevin for horses. Plea, justifying the taking under a warrant for school taxes, and alleging that the horses were delivered by the collector to defendant, an innkeeper, to take care of until the sale. Replication, setting out facts to shew the rate illegal, and averring that the plaintiff after seizure of the goods, at the request of the collector and trustees, gave his note for a sum named (not saying that it was the amount due by him), payable to bearer, which was accepted in satisfaction of the taxes; that the collector released the property seized, and said note is still outstanding, and the plaintiff liable upon it, and that the seizure in the plea men-tioned was made afterwards:—Held, on de-murrer, replication bad, for (1) the collector, acting under a warrant legal on the face of it, would not be liable in trespass or trover, and therefore not in this action, nor the defendant for taking the horses from him to keep; and (2), even if the note had been alleged to be for a sufficient amount to pay the rate, yet the improper acceptance of it by the trustees would not prevent them from afterwards distraining. Spry v. McKenzie, 18 U. wards distraining. Spry v. McKensie, 18 U. C. R. 161. See the comments on this case in Coleman v. Kerr, 27 U. C. R. 5, and in Harling v. Mayville, 21 C. P. 499.

Property of Non-Resident.]—School trustees, and collectors under their warrants, have no power, either under C. S. U. C. c. 64, or 23 Vict. c. 49, to levy on the property of a non-resident of the school section for rates assessed in respect of property within that section. In re Chapman v. Thrasher, 20 C. P. 259.

Permand.]—Replevin may be brought upon a distress for school rates, and notice of action is not necessary. Where several devisees and executors were rated to a school rate in respect of the property of their testator, as "John Applegarth and brothers." which entry appeared to have been made at the instance of some of the plaintiffs, but two of them only had slept on the premises occasionally, although such was not their usual place of residence, and they had received the usual notice of assessment in that form without appealing, and the same two had paid taxes on an assessment on the township roll in their individual names:—Held, (1) that the facts afforded sufficient evidence to shew that the plaintiffs were "inhabitants" for the purposes of the rate. (2) That the parties were sufficiently named on the roll to render the rate lawful. (3) That a demand made by the collector on the plaintiff "John A." named in the roll, was sufficient to bind all the plaintiffs. Applegarth v. Graham, 7 C. P. 171.

Warrant—Collector,]—Under 13 & vict. c. 48, school trustees can only give a warrant to collect school rates within the limits of the section for which they are appointed. Semble, that such warrant is sufficient if signed by two of the trustees, and that it need not be under their corporate scal. In making cognizance under such a warrant, it is sufficient to state that the plaintiff was duly assessed, and that the collector (the cognizor) was duly appointed; it is not necessary to state that the rate was decided upon at a meeting, as required by the statute, or how the appointment was made. Gillies v. Wood, 13 U. C. R. 357.

Excessive Amount Collected—Right to.]—In each of the years 1881 to 1886, inclusive, the defendants levied a rate to raise the sums required by the plaintiffs for school purposes. The rate was imposed in good faith as being the nearest which could be struck in order to insure the collection of the sum demanded with the necessary expenses, but in each year a small surplus was produced by it, which the council refused to pay over to the trustees, contending that they were sufficient to the trustees, contending that they were titled to retain and apply it towards of the trustees, contending that they were true sum which angle; as in the clease of an excess collected on account of a special municipal tax (i. as in the case of an excess collected on account of a special municipal act:—Held, that this section did not apply, and that the money having been collected for school purposes, the council was required by the statute to pay it over to the trustees in each year. It was not intended by the Consolidated Public Schools Act of 1885, 48 Vict. c. 46, R. S. O. 1887 c. 225, to after the law in this respect. Notturasaga School Trustees v. Township of Notturasaga, 15 A. R. 310.

Building School House.]—Under 13 & 14 Vict. c. 48, school trustees are authorized to levy a rate for the erection of a school house in their section. In re Kelly v. Hedges, 12 U. C. R. 531.

Quiescence—By-lau.].—The township council, by resolution, agreed to lend to the school trustees, out of the clergy reserve fund, a sufficient sum to build a school house, taking as security their debentures. This arrangement was made by the trustees without any reference to the ratepayers, but at the next annual school meeting, at which the applicant was present, the matter was discussed, and the contract and plans for the building examined. The council subsequently, on the requisition of the trustees, passed a by-law to raise a sum for school purposes, which was required to pay the interest of these debentures and redeem one of them. for on, moved to quash this by-law, objecting that the loan effected by the trustees without the consent of the ratepayers, was illegal; but it appeared that the school house had been finished and occupied, many of the ratepayers swore that they were satisfied with what had been done, and the affidavits were contradictor as to how far the applicant had acquiesced in the proceedings. The by-law not being illegal on the face of it, the court, under these circumstances, refused to interfere. In re Taber and Township of Scarborough, 20 U. C. R. 549.

Costs—Separate School Supporters.]—A read may be levied to reimburse school trustees for the cost of defending a groundless action brought against them. When such charge was incurred before the establishment of a separate Roman Catholic school:—Held, that the supporters of that school were not exempt from the rate. In re Tiernan and Township of Acpean, 15 U. C. R. 87. See, also, In re Johnson and Harwich School Trustees, 30 U. C. R. 244; Scott v. Burgess and Bathurst School Trustees, 21 C. P. 398.

Travelling Expenses.]—School trustees cannot impose a rate to reimburse themselves for costs incurred in defending unsuccessfully a suit brought against them for levying an unauthorized rate, or for travelling expenses incurred in order to consult with the superintendent. Stark v. Montague, 14 U. C. R. 473.

Salary of Teacher.]—No rate can legally be imposed for the salary of an unqualified teacher. Stark v. Montague, 14 U. C. R. 473.

(c) Imposition of-How Effected.

By-law—A pyropriation of General Funds—Ultra Vires.]—A township council passed two by-laws, one in 1855, enacting that for the purpose of remedying the unequal taxation for the support of common schools, there should annually be appropriated out of the general funds of the township so much as to the municipality should seem reasonable, within a specified sum; and that the treasurer should apportion such money, and payment should be made to each section as directed. The other by-law was passed in 1858, in accordance with a previous resolution of the same year, that £250 should be apportioned from the township funds that year, "in accordance with the by-law provided in such case," and it enacted that certain sums should be assessed and collected, among which was "vote in aid of education, $1,000:"—Held, that both by-laws were bad, the first, as substituting a different system for the support of common schools from that laid down by the School Acts, which the municipality had no power to do; and the second as carrying out that system. In re Dunlop and Township of Douro, 18 U. C. R. 227.

dents.]—Where the municipality of a township, intending to act under 13 & 14 Vict, c. 48, for common school purposes, declared a rate upon the resident inhabitants only of a school section:—Held, that, under that Act as well as the Upper Canada Assessment and Municipal Acts, the by-law was invalid, because the rate should be levied on the taxable property within the section, whether of residents or non-residents, Held, also, that in such case the court has no discretion, but must quash the by-law with costs. Quere, whether in the present case the rate and assessment to be levied were stated in the by-law with sufficient certainty. In re De La Haye v. Township of Gore of Toronto, 2 C. P. 317.

— Inequality—Debentures.]—By-laws were passed by a township council granting to the trustees of school sections authority to issue debentures for the errection of a school house, and creating a rate not payable within the year, but without settling an equal special rate in each year. &c., as required by $2.45 of the Municipal Act of 1873:—Held, invalid. The by-laws authorized the trustees of the school section, instead of the reeve of the township, to sign the debentures:—Held, a fatal objection, notwithstanding that in fact the debentures had been executed by the reeve. In re McIntyre and Township of Elderskie, 27 C. P. 58.

Repayment of Loan—Levy of Portion.]—A township corporation passed a bylaw, reciting that by s. 35 of C. S. U. C. c. 64, they might collect by special rate in school sections that had become indebted to them by loan, and that a certain section had borrowed of the municipality $400, due at different days; and enacting that there should be levied in the section by the collector of the municipality $232, to meet a certain portion of said loan. The by-law was quashed, for, among other objections, the statute referred to give no such authority, and, if it did, it required 68

The money was said to have been lent out of the clergy reserve funds of the township, and 27 Vict. c. 19 was referred to as authorizing it, but that statute was passed after the loan. In re Doherty and Township of Toronto, 25 U. C. R. 409.

Deficiency — Appropriation of General Funds. 1—The local municipality must make up and supply out of their general fund any deficiency in the school rate of any township, upon notice given them at the end of the current year by the collector of school rates; and such notice need not be under the seal of the trustees. Arthur School Trustees v. Townships of Arthur and Luther, 9 C. P. 532.

Existing Assessment Roll.] — School trustees may at any time impose and levy a rate for school purposes; they are not bound to wait until a copy of the revised assessment roll for the particular year has been transmitted to the clerk of the municipality, but may and can only use the existing revised assessment roll. In re Hogg v. Rogers, 15 C. P. 417.

Inequality — City Wards.]—An assessment for school purposes cannot be levied by an unequal rate in different wards in a city. In re Scott and City of Ottawa, 13 U. C. R. 346.

Taxable Property. —In replevin for plaintiff's goods, defendant made cognizance, justifying as bailiff of a collector of school rates under a warrant from him. Plaintiff pleaded that the rate was bad, as not being levied according to the valuation of the whole taxable property in the school section as expressed in the assessor's and collector's roll, pursuant to the statute, but that it was levied wrongfully upon only three-fourth parts of such taxable property:—Held, plea good, for primá facie the trustees could levy a rate only on the whole taxable property. Harling v. Mayville, 21 C. P. 499.

Land in Different Municipalities.]—
The provise in 16 Vict. c. 185, s. 16, as to assessing property in two or more sections, applies only to the case of an undivided property extending into more than one section of the same municipality, not where the land lies in different municipalities. In re Hallowell and Storm School Trustees, 14 U. C. R. 541.

Resolution of Trustees — Seal.] — A board of school trustees in a town passed a resolution stating the sum required for school purposes, of which their treasurer gave notice to the town clerk, orally or in writing, but not under the corporate seal. The corporation, however, made no objection, and acted upon it as an estimate:—Held, that, though it would have been insufficient on application to compel the town to levy the money, yet an individual ratepayer could not object to the rate on that ground. Coleman v. Kerr, 27 U. C. R. 5.

Resolution—School Mecting—Trusices— Property of Non-residents—Executor.]—A resolution of the freeholders and householders of a school section, passed at their annual meeting, that the trustees tax the property in such section to pay the teacher's salary, followed by a resolution of the trustees of such section, directing a rate to be levied on the ratable property in said section to raise the sum required, and the preparation of ratebills, &c., is sufficient to render a non-resident having real estate within such section liable for the sum rated by the trustees, according to the assessed value of his real property. And being so liable, defendant, as his executor, and representing his estate, was held liable as the testator would have been. Danutich School Trustees v. McBaeth, 4 C. P. 228.

Voluntary Subscription.] — The free-holders and householders of a school section cannot substitute a voluntary subscription among themselves for the expenses of the school, instead of the provisions made by law; and a resolution to have such subscription, and that the trustees neglected to collect it, is therefore no answer to an avowry for a rate levied by them in the usual way. McMillan v. Rankin, 19 U. C. R. 356.

— Parents of Pupils.] — A general school meeting having passed a resolution, "that the expenses of the school section be paid by voluntary subscription, and the balance to be raised from a tax to be levied upon the parents and guardians of those sending children to the school," the school trustees, after the failure of the voluntary subscription, levied a general rate, upon which this replevin arose—the plaintiff contending that he was not liable, as not being a parent or guardian of a child attending the school:—Held, that the trustees had no authority to tax the parents or guardians of those sending children, or to alter or annul the resolution, and that C, S, U, C, c, 64, s, 27, s, s, 10, authorized the levy as made. Craig v. Rankin, 100 C. P. 1886.

(d) Mandamus to Municipal Corporations to Levy.

Contract—Part Payment—Default of Officer.]—K. was employed in 1848 by the trustees of school section 4 in the township of Sandwich, acting under a by-law of the district council, to furnish materials for and to erect a school house in that section. Part of the money was paid to him on account against the balance because the part of the money was paid to him on account against the part of the part of

is not liable to contribute to the assessment for the support of schools in the municipality of the county of Hallfax. Held, also, that, if so liable, a writ of mandamus could not issue to enforce the payment of such contribution, as the amount would be uncertain and difficult to be ascertained. Held, also, that the ratepayers of 1886 could not be assessed for school rates leviable in previous years. Dartmouth v. The Queen, 14 S. C. R. 45. See S. C. 9 S. C. R. 509.

Demand - Insufficient Particulars - Absence of Date—Costs.] — The trustees of a township school section sent to one of the councillors a notice signed by them, addressed to the reeve and councillors of the township, as follows: "Gentlemen,-You will please levy the sum of $460 on the ratable property of school section No. 6, South Fredericks-burgh, for the school purposes of said school section." This notice had no date. It was handed to one of the councillors, and the affidavits were contradictory as to its having been formally presented to the council, but the trustees were informed that the council would not act upon it, as it had no date:—Held, that such an application should be made through the township clerk; that the demand for a lump sum, simply for the school purposes of the section, is insufficient, for the corporation have a right to know particularly the purposes for which the money is required. Semble, that the absence of a date would alone have been a fatal objection. A mandamus to com-pel the corporation to levy the amount was therefore refused, but, as the affidavits filed on shewing cause were unnecessarily long, the corporation were allowed only one-half their costs. In re South Fredericksburgh School Trustees and Township of South Fredericks-burgh, 37 U. C. R. 534.

refused, because the demand and refusal of a certain sum was not sufficiently shewn. Quarre, however, whether a mandamus would lie, the trustees having power themselves to raise the money. In re Collingwood School Trustees and Town of Collingwood, 17 U. C. R. 133.

— Resolution of Trustees.)—The communication by a board of trustees to the town council of a resolution of the board, that the chairman do authorize the secretary of the board to notify the town council to furnish the board with a sum of money immediately to purchase a site and creet a school house, a copy of which resolution was sent to the town council, is not such a compliance with 13 & 14 Vict. c. 48, as to render the council liable to be compelled to pay the amount by mandamus. Port Hope School Trustees v. Town of Port Hope, 4 C. P. 418.

Estimate — Part Payment—Estoppel.]—Where an estimate of the sum required for school purposes for a certain year was sent to the town council by the trustees, and the council recognized such estimate by paying a portion, and submitted to the court their reasons for refusing to pay the balance:—Held, that they were precluded from objecting that the estimate was not laid before them as by law required. Brackville School Trustees v. Town of Brockville, 9 U. O. R. 302 U. O. R. 302.

—— Resolution of Trustees — Insufficiency—By-law.]—The school trustees of a town applied for a mandamus to the corporation to pay over all moneys collected for the erection of school buildings under a by-law of the 21st August, and to collect the sum remaining; or to provide for the trustees $1,000, It appeared that the trustees had passed a resolution to apply to the corporation for $3,000 for the erection of school buildings, upon which a by-law was passed to raise that This by-law was repealed and another passed to raise the necessary sum, but it was defective:-Held, that, though the resolution of the trustees was not a sufficient estimate, the objection was cured by the corporation having passed a by-law in pursuance of it; but that, as that by-law was invalid, the court could not enforce any thing arising under it by mandamus. Held, also, that the estimate being insufficient a mandamus could not be granted to provide the sum mentioned in it. as asked by the second alternative of the application. Re Sandwich School Trustees and Town of Sandwich, 23 U. C. R. 639.

- Resolution of Trustees — Insufficiency-Demand.]-On application for a mandamus to compel a municipal corporation to provide $3,500 for a board of school trustees, it appeared that on the 15th March the trustees wrote to the corporation, informing them that they had passed a resolution on the 12th instant, directing their chairman and secretary "to wait on the council at its next meeting, and submit an estimate for $3,500, for the purpose of building a brick school house, the same to be procured by the 10th April," and requesting the council to provide said amount in accordance with the estimate. On the same day, after receiving the letter, the corporation notified the trustees that they were unable to comply with the demand; and on the 13th April an order upon the treasurer of the council by the chairman of the board of school trustees for $3,500 was presented, and payment refused :- Held, that the statute, which requires the trustees to prepare and lay before the council an estimate, had not been complied with; and that the demand for payment within three weeks, without shewing that the corporation had funds in hand available for the purpose, was not reasonable. The mandamus therefore was refused. In re Mount Forest School Trustees and Village of Mount For-est, 29 U. C. R. 422.

Year's Expenses.] — A mandamus was granted to compel a city council to levy the sum required for school purposes for the year, according to the estimate furnished to them by the school trustees. Toronto School Trustees v. City of Toronto, 20 U. C. R. 302.

Manner of Providing Money—Mandamus Nisi—Estimate.]—C. S. U. C. c. 64, s. 79, s-s. 11, which requires municipal corporations to provide the sums required by school trustees "in the manner desired" by them, authorizes the trustees to direct at what times the money shall be paid, but not how it is to be procured. The court, therefore, refused a mandamus to levy a rate, but granted it to provide the money as desired. Where it appeared on affidavit that steps had been taken to provide the sum required, a mandamus nisi was nevertheless granted. The court declined, on the motion for the writ, to consider objections to certain items in the trustees' estimate, as these could form no reason for withholding the whole. In re Toronto School Trustees and City of Toronto, 23 U. C. R. 203.

Other Remedy — Action,]—Upon an application by school trustees for a mandamus to a corporation, the affidavits being contradictory, and this court having decided in Arthur School Trustees v. Corporation of Arthur, 9 C. P. 532, that an action for a balance due in such a case would lie, the mandamus was refused. Electiv School Trustees v. Township of Elevir, 12 C. P. 548.

Purchase of Site—Application for Funds—Order on Treasurer.]—The trustees of a school section in an incorporated village applied to the village amulcipality to levy a sun required for a school site which they had contracted to purchase. The municipality refused. It did not appear that the trustees had appointed a secretary-treasurer, if empowered to do so by 19 Vict. c. 185, ss. 1, 6: —Held, that the trustees should first have given an order to the person from whom they had agreed to purchase, upon the treasurer of the municipality, and on this ground a mandamus was refused. Quere, however, whether a mandamus would have gone, independently of this objection. In re Galt School Trustees and Village of Galt, 13 U. R. 511.

(e) Mandamus to School Trustees to Levy.

Judgment against Trustees—Disobedience to Write—Attachment—Practice.]—A mandamus nisi having been issued to school trustees to levy the amount of a judgment obtained against them, no return was made, and a rule nisi for an attachment issued. In answer to this rule one trustee swore that he had always been and still was desirous to obey the writ, and had repeatedly asked the others to join him in levying the rate, but that they had refused. Another swore that owing to ill-health, with the consent of his co-trustees and the local superintendent, he had resigned his office before the writ was granted. The court, under these circumstances, discharged the rule nisi as against these two, on payment of costs of the application, and granted an attachment against the other trustee, who had taken no notice either of the amadamus or rule. Regina v. Tyendinaga School Trustees, 20 U. C. R. 528.

No attachment will lie for not making a return to a peremptory mandamus; it should be for not obeying the writ. The rule nisi called upon the trustees of school section 27 in the township of Tyendinaga to shew cause why an attachment should not issue against them. On an affidavit of service of this rule on A., B., and C., stating them to be trustees of that section, a rule absolute was granted, following it in form, and thereupon an attachment issued against A., B., and C.:—Held, bad, as not warranted by the rule. S. C., 3 P. R. 43.

Far, I naguiry into — Debt of Previous Year, I—In 1882 the trustees of a school section issued their warrant to J. to levy a rate. One S., who was upon the roll, claimed exemption as a supporter of a Roman Catholic separate school, and in 1803 recovered against J., in replevin for his goods which J. had seized. J., in 1866, sued the trustees of that year for indemnity, and recovered judgment, the action being defended. The trustees issued their warrant to levy a rate, including this judgment, and about $100 was levide and naid over to J., but many of the ratepayers refused to pay the proportion imposed for J.'s claim. J. then, in 1869, having had a fi. fa. on his judgment returned "no goods," applied for a mandamus to the trustees to levy the balance due to him, none of these trustees having been trustees in 1866. The application was refused, on the ground that the court might inquire into the grounds of the judgment; and that the applicant was bound but had failed to shew clearly that it was recovered in a justifiable litigation. Quere, however, whether apart from this the application could be granted, for the effect would be to levy a rate on a different body to pay the debt of a previous year. In re Johnson and Harwich School Trustees, 30 U. C. R. 264.

— Merits—Alterations in Section.]—
The plaintiff recovered a judgment in March. 1858, against the school trustees for building a school house for the section, and made several unsuccessful attempts to obtain payment of it from the trustees and their successors. The trustees always refused to levy a rate, or to pay the judgment. To an application for a mandamus to compet the trustees to levy a rate for payment of the judgment:—Held, no answer that since the judgment two alterations had been made in the limits of the section, and that many changes had taken place among the ratenayers originally liable: or that the merits of the claim upon which the judgment was founded were capable of being impeached. The last case distinguished. Scott v. Burgess and Bathurst School Trustees, 21 C. P. 398.

Teacher's Salary.]—The court refused a rule nisi for a mandamus to the trustees to levy a rate to pay the applicant the balance of his salary as teacher, for which he had recovered judgment in a division court against former trustees, it not appearing when, for how long, and by whom the said teacher was employed. O'Donahoe v. Thorah School Trustees, 5 C. P. 297.

The court refused a mandamus to compel school trustees to pay a sum awarded to a teacher for arrears of salary observing that there were other remedies open. Upon the facts, also, the legality of the award appeared doubtful. Re O'Leary and Blandford School Trustees, 19 U. C. R. 556.

The board of school trustees of a town may be compelled by mandamus to raise the money for teachers' salaries. Munson v. Town of Collingwood, 9 C. P. 497.

(f) Other Cases.

By-law—Appropriation of School Funds.]

—A township by-law enacted that the interest arising on the invested funds for schools in a township should be apportioned on and according to the numbers of days the schools had been open or taught in each half year. It was objected that the by-law was one made under 37 Vict. c. 28, s. 48, s.-s. 4 (O.), which did not authorize this method of apportionment. The court refused to quash the by-law, as the effect of so doing would be to place the apportionment as provided by earlier by-laws and resolution, and in effect produce no change; and, moreover, the municipality, under s. 153, could by another mode do what the by-law purported to do. Quære, whether the money in question, having been specially appropriated by by-laws under 20 Vict. c. 71, was within s. 48, s.-s. 4, above referred to. The question raised being doubtful, the rule was discharged without costs. In re Storms and Township of Ernestown, 39 U. C. R. 353.

See In re Gill and Jackson, 14 U. C. R. 119.

— Requisites, |—By-law issued to raise money for a school house, held bad, for non-compliance with the requisites under 14 & 15 Vict, c, 169, s, 4, of all by-laws creating a debt or contracting a lon. Hart v. Townships of Vespra and Sunnidale, 16 U. C. R. 32. See also Re Metatyre and Township of Etderslie, 27 C. P. 58.

Exemption from Payment of Rates— Separate School Supporters.]—See In re Roman Catholic Separate Schools, 18 O. R. 606.

Limitation of Annual Rate — Debentures for School House. —The annual amount required to pay for debentures issued under a by-law passed for the purchase of a school site and the erection of a school house thereon, comes within the term "school rates," and is excluded from the two cents to which, by s. 357 of the Consolidated Municipal Act, 1892, 55 Vict. e. 24 (O.), the annual rate permitted to be levied by municipalities is limited. Foster v. Village of Hintonburg, 28 O. R. 221.

Payment to Wrong School Section—Finality of Roll.]—Binitiffs compained that for the years 1883 and 1887 certain lots which formed part of their section had not been so assessed, but had been assessed as part of school section 23, and that plaintiffs were entitled to be paid their taxes either by the township or by section 23. In each of these years, so far as regards this matter, the rolls were finally passed by the court of revision and certified by the clerk &c.:—Held, that the plaintiffs could not now maintain such claim, for they were bound by s. 57 of R. S. O. 1877 c. 180, under which the rolls as finally passed by the court of revision. &c., were valid and binding on "all parties concerned," the plaintiffs coming within the designation, but apparently they were not entitled to the notice provided for by s. 41 of that Act. Burjord School Trustees v. Township of Burjord, 18 O. R. 546.

5. School Sections — Formation and Alteration of.

(a) Union School Sections.

Appeal against By-law Uniting.)—By 34 Vict. c. 33, s. 16, "the majority of the trustees, or any five ratepayers of a school section, shall have the right of appeal or complaint to their county council against any by-law or resolution which has been passed by their township council for the formation or alteration of their school section," &c. In 1858 two school sections in a township were united by by-law, pursuant to 13 & 14 Vict. c. 48, s. 18, and remained so, the old separate school houses having been sold and a new one school houses having been sold and a new one built, &c., until January, 1873, when a peti-tion was presented, under 34 Vict. c. 33, to the county council for the disallowance of said by-law, and the matter was referred to a committee, as directed by that statute, which disallowed the by-law of 1858. The township council thereupon passed a by-law, among other things, to raise $270 by a rate on one of the original sections for public school pur-poses in said section:—Held, that such petition and subsequent proceedings were not authorized by 34 Vict. c. 33, s. 16, and that the by-law, being based upon their validity, must be quashed. Semble, that the section could not be held to be so far retrospective as to authorize the appeal from and disallowance of the by-law uniting the sections, after it had been so many years passed and acted upon. Quere, whether the words in the section, "for the formation or alteration of their school the formation or alteration of their school section," include a by-law for the union of school sections. Held, that the right of appeal was given by the section only to persons who were trustees or ratepayers of the section, when or in the year after the statute came into force. Semble, also, that there could be no right of appeal here, for the petition admitted that the union complained of was desirable when formed in 1858, but alwas desirable when formed in 1838, but alleged that it had ceased to be so, owing to a change of circumstances. Re Proper and Township of Oakland, 34 U. C. R. 266.

Different Townships—Union of Sections in.]—Held, that under the Public Schools Act of 1874, 37 Viet. c. 28 (O.), no power is given for the formation of a union section out of sections in different townships. Where, therefore, such section was formed and a rate levied therein, for which the plaintiff's goods were seized:—Held, that such rate was illegal, and the plaintiff entitled to succeed in replevin. Helpin v. Calder, 26 C. P. 501.

— Union of Sections in—Alteration.]

—A municipality under 13 & 14 Viet. c. 48, s. 18, s.-s. 4, have no power to alter the boundaries of a union school section consisting of parts of different townships. In we Ley and Township of Clarke, 13 U. C. R. 433.

Union of Sections in—Atteration—Notice.] — The numicipality of Vespra and Sunnidale, before 16 Vict. e. 185, passed a by-law remodelling the school sections of those townships, which transferred to union school section No. 3, created by the by-law, a part of Vespra, which had formerly belonged to union school section No. 4 of Vespra, Flos, Oro, and Medonte:—Held, that this was beyond the power of the municipality, and that the by-law was bad. It appeared also that no notice had been given of the intended alteration, and on this ground as well the by-law was illegally constituted, a by-law passed to raise money for a school house erected there, was also bad. Re Hart and Townships of Vespra and Sunnidale, 16 U. C. R. 32.

Union of Sections in — Validating Statute, 1—In September, 1874, the reverse of East Nissouri and North Oxford, with the county superintendent, proceeded to form a union school section of sections 1 in North Oxford and 5 in East Nissouri. In January, 1875, and since, trustees were elected for such union section, as also for section No. 1, and during the same period the union section maintained a school house in East Nissouri.

dating wes of the the orm a North nuary, ed for No. 1, section ssouri, which had been selected as the union school, at which some of the North Oxford children attended. From April, 1875, to 31st December, 1876, the school in No. 1 had been closed, but since then it had been kept open. The government grant for the year 1875-6 was paid to the union section, under objection from section No. 1 and in 1875 the union section levied a rate for that year, but more was levied by section No. 1. In June, 1876, Hajin v. Calder, 26 C. P. 501, was decided, declaring the union section Hegally formed, and immediately thereafter section No. 1 bought additional land and erected a new school house, levied a rate for that year, and issued dehentures for school purposes, which were still outstanding. On 2nd March, 1877, 40 Vict. c. 16, s. 11, s.-s. 4 (O.), was passed:—Held, that section No. 1 was absorbed and caused to exist. In re Petition of Minister of Education, 28 C. P. 325.

On the 1st November, 1874, a union school section was formed by adding to section 6 in the township of Verulam, several lots in the township of Harvey. The village of B., which became incorporated on the 1st January, 1877, was all in Verulam, and before such alteration formed part of said section 6. In 1874, before the alteration, section 6 had raised by loan $5,000 to build a school house, and in 1876 the plaintiff was assessed for the union section so formed in respect of the lots thus added, part of his assessment being for said loan:—Held, that the union section existed in fact on the 2nd March, 1877, when 40 Vict, c, 16, s, 11, s.-s. 4, was passed; that its existence was not altered by the incorporation of the village; but under that statute, though illegally formed, it must be deemed to have been legally formed; and that the rate thereupon was legal. Boyd v. Bobeaygeon Public School Board, 43 U.C. R. 35.

- Union of Sections in-Validity of Formation-Right to Question in Action.]-Replevin. Plea justifying under a distress for school rate for a union school section No. 2, Raleigh and Tilbury East, alleged to have been duly formed by the reeves of said town-ships and the local superintendent, of which section defendants were trustees, and averring that the rate was imposed by defendants to raise the necessary sum to purchase a school site, and that the plaintiff was rated in respect thereof. Replications, (1) that the said section was not formed as alleged; (2) that was not formed as aleged; (2) that the alleged union school section was on or about 24th December, 1873, pretended to be formed by the reeves of the said townships and the superintendent by uniting s. 6 of Tilbury with parts of sections in Raleigh; that the school of sections in Raleigh; that the plaintiff resided and was a ratepayer within one of the sections affected by the proposed formation of said section; that no notice was given to him and others intended to be affected by such formation, or of any alteration in the sections in said townships; and that the inspector of the county has not transmitted to the clerks of said townships any copy of the resolution to form said section, nor have the revers of the said townships, with the inspector or otherwise, equalized the assessment within said section:—Held, on demurrer, replications bad, for that it was not open to the plaintiff in this suit to contest the validity of the formation of the school section on the grounds taken, his proper course being by information in the nature of quo warranto to determine the defendants' right to the office of trustee. The plaintiff replied also that the defendants were not on the 24th December, 1873, a corporation duly formed as alleged. Upon the trial it appeared that the union section for which the defendants assumed to be trustees had been formed by adding to a section in one township:—Held, that a union school section can be formed only of two sections, not of parts of sections; and that the objection therefore being not to the regular exercise, but to the existence, of the power to form such sections, and the facts being undisputed, the validity of the formation might be questioned in this action. Askew v. Manning, 38 U. C. R. 345.

Dissolution — Petition for—By-law—Motion to Quash — Laches.]—On application to Quash — Laches.]—On application to Quash a by-law dissolving a union school section:—Held, that the council were not bound to go behind the assessment roll to ascertain whether the petition for such dissolution was signed by a majority of the assessed freeholders and householders, as required by s. 140 of the Public Schools Act, R. S. O. 1877 c. 204. The petition was, that the section might be dissolved, "when," it was added, "a new section may be formed, and a few lots from sections 2. 7, and S, might be annexed to equalize the area with other sections: "—Held, that this addition, being a mere suggestion, formed no objection. The by-law provided that the dissolution should take effect "from and after," instead of on, "the 1st January, 1880:"—Held, no objection. The by-law was passed on the 7th April, and this motion was not made until December following:—Semble, that this delay, unexplained, would have been an answer to the application, which may be too late, although within the year fixed by the Act as the extreme limit. In re McAlpine and Township of Euphenima, 45 U. C. R. 199.

appointed by a county council under s. 44 of the Public Schools Act, 1896, 59 Viet. c. 70 (O.), awarded that a certain union school section, which comprised a rural section and an incorporated village, should be dissolved, and that all the lands included in the rural section "be attached to and form the same for school purposes," and that all the lands included in the village "shall remain attached to and form the urban section of the property of the provisions of ss. 52 and 54 of the Act, and the rural section as a non-union school section subject to the provisions of ss. 52 and 54 of the Act, and the rural section as a non-union school section subject to the provisions of ss. 52 and 54 of the Act, and the rural section as a non-union school section subject to the provisions of ss. 50 and 30 of the Act, and that the award was valid as an exercise of power under s.s. 5 or 6 of s. 43. Semble, the arbitrators would not have been justified in taking a portion of the territory outside the village and attaching it to the village. In ve Chesterville Public School Board, 29 O. R. 321.

District Council—Power of Alteration.]
—Under 7 Vict. c. 29, ss. 14, 24, the township council and not the district council had authority to sanction any alteration made in school districts. A proposed alteration being submitted by the superintendent of schools to the district council:—Held, not to legalize the alteration thereby proposed. McFee v. Dundar, 10 C. P. 94.

Existence De Facto - "Municipality Concerned "-Trustees.]-There was no proof of the formation of the union school section in question, but it was shewn that for many years a lot in one township had been marked in the assessment roll as in a school section of the adjacent township, to which the taxes received in respect of that lot were paid; that in various reports and returns made by the school inspector the owner of the lot was treated as a ratepayer in respect of the school section of the adjacent township: that his children went to the school established there; and that in the township school map, prepared by the township clerk under the provisions of s.-s. 4 of s. 1 of the Public Schools Act, R. S. O. 1897 c. 292, the lot was marked as in the school section of the adjacent township: -Held, that the evidence was sufficient to shew that the union school section existed in fact and that s. 42 of the Act applied to it. so that it must be deemed to have been legally formed. History and object of that legislation discussed. Proper corporate description of the trustees of a union school section pointed out. A municipality in which there is any territory forming part of the union school section in question is "concerned," within the meaning of s. 43 of the Act, in any proceed-"concerned," within the ings for the alteration of the section, and these proceedings must be based upon a petition of five ratepayers of this municipality, though not necessarily of ratepayers in the territory itself. Nichol School Trustees v. Maitland, itself. Nicho. 26 A. R. 506.

Meeting—Request.]—A school section in a township cannot be altered by the municipality without the request of the majority of freeholders and householders in each section affected, expressed at a meeting called by the trustees for that purpose; and the want of such meeting and request is a sufficient ground for quashing the by-law, In re Morrison and Township of Arthur, 13 U. C. R. 279. (Overruled by the next case.)

Notice - Necessity for - Ratepayers Interested-Recital in By-law.]-Held, that the request of the freeholders and householders mentioned in 13 & 14 Vict. c. 48, s. 18, s.-s. 4. applies only to the union of two or more sections into one; and that the municipality of a township may pass a by-law to bring back exclusively within their own jurisdiction any part which has been united with a school section in another township, and may alter and arrange the sections within their own township; provided only that all parties affected by such intended alteration shall appear to have been duly notified. By a resolution of the district council in 1849, a union school section was formed, consisting of part of what had formerly been section 10 in Saltfleet and part of section 3 in Barton. In 1854 a by-law was passed by the municipality of Saltfleet, which defined the limits of section 10 and brought it entirely within Saltfleet, excluding that part of Barton which had be-longed to it:—Held, that a ratepayer of Barton could not object that no notice had been given to those affected in Saltfleet: and semble, that no notice was required to those in Barton. It is not necessary to recite in in Barton. It is not necessary to recuse much by-law that the requisite notice, &c., have been given. In re Morrison and Township of Arthur, 13 U. C. R. 279, overruled. In re Ness and Township of Saltfleet, 13 U. C. R. 408.

Time Limit for Alteration of Boundaries. In 1897 a township council passed a by-law altering the boundaries of an existing school section, and this was affirmed by the county council on appeal. In 1898 the county council on appeal. In 1898 the county council on appeal from the refusal of the township council to do so, appointed arbitrators to consider the advisability of forming a union school section from parts of the section in question and of another section, and an award was made setting apart the new union school section, and thereby making material alterations in the boundaries of the existing section:—Held, that, although the by-law of 1898 was passed under ss. 43 and 44 of the Public Schools Act, R. S. O. 1897 c. 292, it came within the prohibition of s. 38, s.-s. 3, which required that the by-law of 1897 should remain in force for five years; and therefore the by-law of 1898 was quashed and the award set aside. Re Amaranth School Trustees and County of Dufferin, 30 O. R. 43.

— Aveard.1—An award of arbitrators under ss. 87 and 88 of the Public Schools Act, 1891, as to readjustment of union school sections, is conclusive for five years, though the award be that no change be made in the boundaries. In re East and West Wavanosh Union School Section, 26 O. R. 463.

Award — Petition,]—The petition for the formation, alteration, or dissolution of a union school section under 54 Vict. c. 55, s. 87, s.-s. 1 (O.), must be, in all cases, the joint petition of five ratepayers from each of the municipalities concerned, otherwise the award based upon it will be void ab initio, and s. 96, validating defective awards where there has been no notice to quash given within the time prescribed, has no application. When the award in such case is that no action be taken, the restriction in s.-s. 11 of s. 87 against new proceedings for a period of five years does not apply. Semble, no appeal lies from such an award as last referred to, In re East and West Wawanosh Union School Section, 23 O. R. 463, not followed. East and West Wawanosh Union School Section v. Lockbart 50 O. R. 693.

The "joint petition" of five ratepayers from each of the municipalities concerned, required under 54 Vict. c. 55, 87, 8.8.1 (O.), for the formation, alteration, or dissolution of a union school section, means that each set of five ratepayers shall join in a petition to the municipal council of the municipality, or which they are ratepayers, and not that own the contract of the municipality of which they are ratepayers, and not consider the contract of the municipality of which they are ratepayers and not considered must form a contract of the contract

alid-On ierto forming part of the township of Macaulay, was incorporated as a village. At the time of incorporation Bracebridge and a portion of the township, being the territory in dis-pute, formed school section No. 1, Macaulay. which on incorporation became the Bracebridge section, the school house being Bracebridge. In October, 1875, the township of Macaulay, on petition of two-thirds majority of the township sections, not counting the territory in dispute, passed a by-law, under s. 48 of 37 Vict. c. 28 (O.), abolishing the division of the township into sections, and forming a public school board for the township ship for the management of all the schools ship for the management of all the schools therein; and promptly after the passing thereof the school board erected a school house in the disputed territory, which had ever since been open and attended. The by-law thus passed was acted upon for nearly three years, and no motion made to quash it. In November, 1876, at a meeting of the county inspecand the reeves of Bracebridge and Macanlay, with a representative from each school aulay, with a representative from each school board, to alter the boundaries of the Brace-bridge section, a portion of the disputed territory was set off to Macaulay, and the other portion retained by Brace-bridge:—Held, that the by-law was not invalid on its face, nor beyond the jurisdiction of the council. Held, also, that after the passing of the by-law the disputed territory became discussed from the processing of the council. tory became detached from Bracebridge, and came under the control of the township school board, and continued thereunder notwithstand-ing the action of November, 1876; and that at all events under s. 6, s.-s. 7, of 40 Vict. c. 16, it became so detached on the 1st January, 1878. Held, also, that under 40 Vict. 16, s. 6, s.-s. 1, it was not necessary to consider the territory in dispute in ascertaining sider the territory in uspate in accretioning the two-thirds majority, and that it did not appear to be necessary even under s. 48 of 37 Vict. c. 28 (O.) In re-Macaulay and Bracebridge School Boards, 29 C. P. 122.

Appeal from Township By-law—" Divide — Appeal. — Under R. S. O. 1897 c, 292, s. 39, there is no longer any appeal to the county council from the refusal of a township council to "divide" a school section. In re Huantton School Section, 29 O. R. 390.

Appointment of Arbitrators.]—The provisions of s.-8, 3 of s. 39 of the Public Schools Act, R S. O. 1897 c. 292, whereby a county council may appoint arbitrators to hear an appeal against a by-law of a township council altering the boundaries of a school section, are permissive, not imperative. Re Woolwer and County of Kent, 31 O. R. 606.

By-law—Petition — Award — Appeal — Time—Waiver, |—In the absence of satisfactory evidence of waiver of the objection by all persons interested, a county council has no jurisdiction under s.-s. 3 of s. 82 of the Public Schools Act, 54 Vict. c. 55 (O.), to appoint arbitrators to hear an appeal from the action or refusal to act of a township council and to determine or alter the boundaries of school sections, unless a notice of appeal has been duly given within the time mentioned in s.-s. 1. Where a by-law of the county council appointing arbitrators was passed pursuant to a notice of appeal, in the form of a petition, filed with the county clerk after such time had expired, and there was no waiver:—Held, that the authority of the arbitrators to enter upon the inquiry being affected by the want of jurisdiction of the council to pass the by-law, their award could not be confirmed by s, 96 of the Public Schools Act; and the by-law was quashed. The application to quash was made by a ratepayer of the school section whose boundaries were in question, acting at the request of the trustees of the section, and the solicitors acting for him were also retained by the trustees, whose secretary-treasurer appeared before the committee of the county council, prior to the passing of the by-law, and before the arbitrators, and did not make objections to the jurisdiction of either body:—Held, that, in the absence of proof of the authority of the secretary-treasurer to represent the trustees, it could not be said that they had waived their right to object to the proceedings, nor that the rights of the applicant were entirely gone and merged in those of the trustees. Re Martin and County of Simcoc, 25 O. R. 411.

— Repeal—County Council—Appeal.]—It is ultra vires a township council which has regularly passed a by-law under the provisions of s. 38 of the Public Schools Act, creating a new rural school section from parts of existing school sections, to repeal or after such by-law until the expiration of five years as provided in the Act, athough the repealing by-law is passed before that creating the new section is to take effect. The only remedy is an appeal to the county council against the by-law, under s. 39 of the Act, Re Powers and Township of Chatham, 29 O. R. 571, 26 A. R. 483.

ties. — A Seal—Signature—Injunction—Parties. — A by-law of a township corporation for the purpose of dividing a school section is invalid unless under the corporate seal, and signed by the head and by the clerk of the corporation. The township corporation and the individual members of the proposed new school board are proper parties to an action to have an invalid by-law for such a purpose set aside. Holt v. Township of Medonte, 22 O. R. 302.

of s. 81 of the Public Schools Act, 54 Vict. c. 55 (O.), provides that by-laws passed under the said section for altering, &c., school sections, shall not be passed later than 1st May in the year, and shall not take effect before the 25th December next thereafter:—Held, that the word "year" as used therein means the calendar year commencing 1st January and ending 31st December, and that a by-law altering certain school sections passed on the 25th September was invalid. In re Asphodel School Trustees and Humphries, 24 O. R. 682.

Description of Boundaries—Indefinite-ness,]—A by-law recited that certain coloured inhabitants had petitioned for an alteration of school section No. 9, and for the establishing of two separate schools for coloured people in the township, and that it was expedient to grant their request, by defining the boundaries of said sections so as to include the coloured inhabitants of the township; and it set out the limits of each section to be established, the last boundary of No. 1 being "thence to include all and singular each and every lot or parcel of land occupied, or which shall or may be occupied, by any coloured person or persons in the front part of the said township of Chatham;" and the last boundary of No. 2, "thence to include all and singular, each and every lot or parcel of land occupied, or which shall or may be occupied, by any coloured person or persons in that part of the said township not included in the section No. 1, as described in the first section of this by-law!"—Held, that these boundaries were indefinite and fluctuating, and that the by-law was therefore bad. In re Simmons and Township of Chatham, 21 U. C. R. 75.

mustion being whether the plaintiff's lot 23 in the 8th concession of Thurlow was within 8chool section 16, a by-law defining the limits of sections in the township was proved, which declared the section to be composed, among other lots, of "50 acres of the east side of lot No. 15, all of 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, and 24 (not giving the concession), excepting such portion of last mentioned lots as included in sections 18 and 19. "Section 18, by the same by-law, was made to comprise parts of lots 16, 18, 20, 21, and 22, in the 8th concession; and section 19, the N, ½ of 24 in the same concession;—Held, that the whole by-law taken together sufficiently shewed the plaintiff's lot to be in section 16. Held, also, that the map prepared by the township clerk, under s. 49 of the School Act, C. S. U. C. c. 64, shewing the division of the township into sections, was admissible as evidence. In re Shorey v. Thrasher, 30 U. C. R. 504.

— Uncertainty.]—The by-law in this case was held bad, for not describing or defining with sufficient certainty the limits of the school sections intended to be established by it. Haacke v. Township of Markham, 17 U. C. R. 562.

Division of District—Quebec Law.]— See Tremblay v. Valentin, 12 S. C. R. 546; Hus v. School Commissioners for Parish of Ste. Victoire, 19 S. C. R. 477.

Evidence of Formation — Map,]—As evidence of the formation of school sections in a township by the municipal council thereofe, a rough sketch or map designated "school section man township of B." but without signature, seal, or date, having the appearance of being very old, and there being no other map to be found, was produced frou the proper custody. In 1888, before this action was commenced, but after the beginning of the agitation which gave rise thereto, the municipal council passed a by-law "to make alterations in school section map," and authorized the clerk to correct the map, &c.; and when any difficulty arose as to boundaries of section sections recourse was had, at least in some instances, to this map:—Held, that the map must be assumed to be drawn in pursuance of s. 11 of the Public Schools Act, and therefore afforded evidence of the original division of the township into school sections by the township council. Burlord School Trustees v. Township of Burlord, 18 O. R. 546.

Limits of School Sections.]—See In re Hayes and Toronto School Trustees, 3 C. P. 478.

Notice—Necessity for.]—Before any alteration can be made in the limits of a school section, notice must be given to the parties interested in the proposed alteration. Griftiths v. Tounship of Grantham, 6 C. P. 274.

Necessity for-Repealing By-law.] -On the 19th December, 1857, a township council passed a by-law creating a new school section, called No. 9, out of sections 13 and 8, and defining what should thereafter constitute section 13. Notice was given of the intention to pass this by-law, but it was not done at the request of the freeholders and householders expressed at a public meeting: on the contrary, the change made appeared to be opposed to the wishes of a majority of the inhabitants. On the 8th May, 1858, a by-law repealing it was passed, of which no notice had been given to the parties interested, thus restoring the sections to their former position; and on the 10th September, 1859, another bylaw was passed assessing the section 13 as it originally stood, for the expenses of building a school house, &c.:—Held, that the by-law of May, 1858, must be quashed, for the previous by-law was legal, and a by-law repealing it, which would in effect make an alteration of school sections, could not be passed without notice to those interested; and that the by-law levying a rate on section 13, as it stood before 1857, must necessarily be quashed also, for that would include part of what was section 9. Re Shaw and Township of Manvers, 19 U. C. R. 288.

- Proof of-Denial - Laches.]-Application to quash a by-law passed on the 14th August to divide a school section, on the ground that it was not under the seal of the corporation, and that it did not appear that all parties to be affected had been duly notified of the intended step or alteration. the affidavits on both sides, the court was satisfied that the seal had been duly affixed. The applicant swore that he had received no notice of the intention to divide the section or pass the by-law, and believed the corporation gave none, and this was confirmed by the local superintendent. On the other hand, it was sworn that the council in February received petitions, numerously signed, for the division, which they directed to stand over until their next meeting, on the 14th August, and instructed the clerk to give the necessary notices that such periods, would then be considered; and that such notices had been seen in an hotel, in the post-office, and in the school house. In reply the necessary notices that such petitions office, and in the school house. In reply the clerk denied receiving such instructions, and a person who had lived at the hotel, and the postmaster, swore that they had never seen the notices. The court refused to quash the by-law, for the affidavits only denied notice of intention to divide the section or pass the by-law, not of the application; the council had acted upon reasonable assurance that all persons had notice of such application, which no inhabitant of the section had denied knowledge of; and the objections being technical should have been taken promptly, without allowing a term to elapse. Re Taylor and Township of West Williams, 30 U. C. R. 337.

Trustees—By-law — Quashing — Time.]—Section 40 of the Common School Act, C. S. U. C. c. 64, enacts that a township council may alter the boundaries of a school section, in case it clearly appears that all parties to be affected by the proposed alteration have been duly notified of the intended step or application. In this case the only notice given was by the trustees of the section from which certain lots were taken by the alteration, to the trustees of the section to which such lots were added—that being the notice which it was alleged had been customary in the township in similar cases:—Held, insufficient; and the by-law making the alteration was quashed. The by-law was passed in February, 1870, but the clerk of the corporation did not notify the trustees of it until August:—Held, that a motion to quash in M. T. 1870 was in time. Re Patterson and Township of Hope, 30 U. C. R. 484.

Request—Notice.]—Under 13 & 14 Vict, c. 48, s. 18, s.-s. 4, the municipality may alter the boundaries of sections within their township, by taking from one and adding to another, without any previous request of the freeholders and householders, and notwithstanding their disapprobation of the change, provided that those affected by the alteration have notice of the intention to make it. In re Ley and Township of Clarke, 13 U. C. R. 433.

Resolution of Council—By-law Confirming—Motion to Quash—Laches.]—The corporation on the 7th December, 1807, passed a resolution, that a petition asking for a separation from school section 9, and to form a separate section consisting of certain lots, be granted, and a meeting be called to elect trustees. On the 3rd October, 1808, they passed a by-law ehacting that this resolution should "remain confirmed, whole, and entirely without abatement whatsoever, with the force and effect of a by-law of this corporation." The applicant in Michaelmas term, 1808, moved to quash the by-law and resolution. It appeared that both had been passed after the notice, and after opposition by the applicant and others before the council, and that a school had been opened, and school taxes collected and expended in the section as separated—Held, as to the resolution, that the delay in moving was a sufficient reason for refusing to interfere; and as to the by-law the meits being against the application, on the affidavits), that though informal it was not substantially defective, and was not open to objection as being retroactive. The rule was therefore discharged, but without costs. Re Leddingham and Township of Bentinck, 20 U. C. R. 206.

Time of Taking Effect.] — On a motion to quash a by-law passed on the 1st October, 1850, by defendants, doing away with school section No. 7 in the township of Darlington, and attaching a portion thereof to school section No. 6, and another part to No. 8:—Held, that it is unnecessary that a by-law should state on its face that the alteration shall not go into effect till the 25th December following the passing thereof: 13 & 14 Vict. c. 48, s. 18, s.-s. 4. Cotter v. Township of Darlington, 11 C. P. 265.

— Appeal — By-law,] — A township council in April, 1874, under 37 Viet. c. 28, s. 48 (O.), passed a by-law altering certain school sections in the township, and on its being petitioned against to the county council, they, in June, 1874, appointed a committee, under s. 61, to settle the matter. In November, 1874, the committee established the sections, and reported to the county council, which, under s. 57, would not take effect until the 25th December following; but, in consequence of the report embracing union sections over which the committee had no control, it was inoperative. In June, 1875, the township council passed another by-law, repealing their former by-law, Vol. III, D—198—49 and defining the limits of the sections. This also on petition was referred by the county council to a committee to settle and report on, which they did in December. Previously, however, to their report being so made, the township council, on the 11th September, 1875, passed the by-law in question, levying a rate for school purposes on the sections as they existed prior to December, 1874:—Held, that the by-law was valid, for that until the result of the appeal was reported to the county council the sections as established before December, 1874, continued to exist. In re MeIntyre and Township of Elderslie, 27 C. P. 58.

By-law — Repeal — Quashing.]
While an application to quash a by-law, No. 250, altering the boundaries of school sections 15 and 16, was pending, the corporation passed a by-law, No. 268, to remove doubts in regard to the former by-law and to confirm it, but so worded as to leave it doubtful whether it was not in effect an independent by-law, endining the limits of these sections. The first by-law was quashed, and an application was then made to quash this last by-law. It appeared, on shewing cause, that it have been supported by the court, under the circumstances are the court, under the circumstances are supported by the court of the Contract—Approval.1—A county superintendent signing, together with trustees, a contract with a teacher, will be considered to have signed only as approving of the appointment, and in pursuance of the statute, not as contracting with the teacher. Campbell v. Elliott, 3 U. C. R. 241.

Moneys Received by Township—Action for, 1—A township superintendent appointed under 7 vict, c. 29, since repealed by 9 vict, c. 20, s. 45, cannot sue the collector of the township for moneys received by him, not in the nature of penalties. Shirley v. Hope, 4 U. C. R. 240.

might agree with the teacher to give him the whole allowance appropriated for such school district for the year when that Act came into force, if the teacher served for three months. Darby v. Earl, 3 U. C. R. 6.

Board and Lodging.]—Semble, that the school trustees have no power to make an agreement for providing the teacher with board and lodging. Quin v. Seymour School Trustees, 7 U. C. R. 130.

Seal and Signature—Meeting,]—In an action by a school teacher to recover damages as for a wrongful dismissal, it was shewn that the agreement to employ the plaintiff was made in writing, under seal and signed by two of the three school trustees, but not at the same time or at any meeting of the trustees called for the purpose of transacting school business:—Held, that the agreement was void under s. 97 of the Public Schools Act, which provides that "no act or proceeding of a school corporation which is not adopted at a regular or special meeting of the trustees shall be valid or binding on any party affected thereby." Lamberc v. South Cayaga School Trustees, 7 A. R. 50s.

(b) Dismissal.

Right of Trustees.]—The right of public school trustees to dismiss for good cause a teacher engaged by them, necessarily exists from the relation of the parties. 49 Vict. c. 49, ss. 165, 168 (O.), provides a proceeding by which the status or qualification of the teacher may be determined; and the result of such proceeding may be in effect the same as dismissal; but such enactment does not deprive the employer of the inherent right to dismiss. Raymond v. Cardinal School Trustees, 14 A, 18, 562.

(c) Proceedings to Recover Salary.

Action against Municipality—Refusal to Levy Rate.]—Held, that a teacher could not maintain an action against the municipal corporation for refusing to levy a rate for his salary upon an estimate furnished to them for that purpose by the trustees. Smith v. Vilage of Collingwood, 19 U. C. R. 259.

Treasurer's Acceptance.]—Held, that an action would not lie against a municipal corporation by a school teacher, upon an order made upon and accepted by the treasurer in the plaintiff's favour for his salary, the treasurer having no power to bind the corporation by such acceptance. Smith v. Village of Collingwood, 19 U. C. R. 259.

The Municipal Act does not authorize the acceptance by the treasurer of orders for a school teacher's salary, although permitted to pay such orders on presentation, nor can the treasurer bind the corporation by his acceptance of orders. Junson v. Village of Collingwood, 9 C. P. 497.

Action against Trustees—Mandamus— Special Action.]—A school teacher sued the trustees in a division court for his salary, upon an agreement under defendants' corporate seal, by which they bound themselves to employ the powers legally vested in them to collect and pay him; and upon the common count for work and labour. It appeared that he was not a legally qualified teacher, but that he was not a legally qualified teacher, but that he had taught the school during the time claimed for:—Held, that he could not recent (1) because by C. S. U. C. c. 64, 8-27, 8-8-9, as amended by 34 Vict. c. 23, 8, 30, defendants were prohibited from giving an order in his favour on the local superintendent, and the latter, by s. 91, s.-8. 2 from giving him a cheque upon the treasurer; (2) because, if entitled to payment, his remedy would be by mandamus, or a special action, not by an action for the money, which was not in defendants' hands. See also as to this point, Quin v. Seymour School Trustees, 7 U. C. R. 130. Quære, as to the meaning of 34 Vict. c. 23, s. 27 (O.) Wright v. Stephen School Trustees, 32 U. C. R. 541.

Action on Special Agreement—Fuel—Request — Parties.] — Plaintiff, a teacher, send upon a special agreement stated to have been made by defendants as trustees, to furnish him with fuel when required, under 9 Vict. c. 20. Defendants demurred: (1) because no request with time and place had been alleged to furnish fuel; (2) because the defendants were charged as individuals:—Held, declaration bad on both grounds. Anderson v. Vansituart, 5 U. C. R. 335.

against the school trustees appointed by 9 Vict. c. 20, setting out a special agreement to retain the plaintiff in teacher for one year at a certain salary; and also with a count, founded also with a count, founded the plaintiff in the count founded the plaintiff in the plaintiff away: — Held, both counts but plaintiff away: — Held, both counts were plaintiff away in the plaintiff awa

Action—Reference—Averid — Appeal.] — Where an action in a division court by a teacher against the trustees was referred by order of the Judge, with consent of the parties:—Held, that the award could not be appealed from under 16 Vict. c. 185, s. 24. Remarks as to defendants' remedy by prohibition. In re Milne and Sylvester, 18 U. C. R. 538.

Arbitration—Action.] — No action could be sustained under 13 & 14 Vict. c. 48, s. 17, and 16 Vict. c. 185, s. 15, by a school teacher for his salary; arbitration was the only remedy. Tiernan v. Nepean School Trustees, 14 U. C. R. 15.

Agreement—Validity.]—There is no right to arbitrate under C. S. U. C. c. 64, unless the contract of service is entered into by the trustees in their corporate capacity, made under their corporate seal; and without this the person discharging the duties of teacher has no legal status as such. Birmingham v. Hungerford, 19 C. P. 411.

See post S.

Mandamus — Refusal to Pay Order — Action.)—Declaration by a teacher against defendant, as sub-treasurer of school moneys, setting out an order signed by the local superintendent of schools in favour of plaintiff upon defendant, as such sub-treasurer, directing him to pay plaintiff $27.80, and charge to account of county assessment for 1866, and alleging a refusal to pay such order, with a claim for a mandamus: — Held, declaration bad, as not shewing that the cheque or order was drawn on the order of the school trustees, and in setting out a cheque void on its face, because drawn upon a fund over which the local superintendent had no control, and in not shewing that defendant had money in his hands belonging to the school section, or that the county council had made provision to enable him to pay the amount. Welsh v. Leahey, 18 C. P. 48.

— Refusal to Sign Order—Action.]—
If the school trustees, appointed under 9 Vict.
c. 20, decline to sign the order upon the superintendent for the payment of the teacher's money, as provided for by the Act, they may be proceeded against by mandamus, or perhaps they may be sued in a special action for not making the order; but they cannot be sued in an action for the money as that is not in their hands. Quin v. Seymour School Trustees, 7 U. C. R. 130.

Master and Servant Act.]—The Master and Servant Act. 10 & 11 Vict. c. 23, does not apply to the case of school trustees and school teacher. In re Joice, 19 U. C. R. 197.

8. Trustees.

Contract—Hiring of Teacher—Seal.]—
In an action of assumpsit brought by a teacher against the school trustees appointed by the Act 9 Vict, c. 20, setting out a special agreement to retain the plaintiff in the employment of a teacher for one year from, &c., at a certain salary, &c.; and also in a special action on the case, founded upon a parol agreement, brought by the teacher under the same statute, for wrongfully, and without cause, turning the plaintiff away, and preventing him thereby from earning his salary:
—Held, that the declaration in both cases was bad, in not averring the agreement to have been made with the defendants by their corporate seal. Quin v, Seymour School Trustees, 7 U. C. R. 130.

Joint Board—Liability.]—A joint board of grammar and common school trustees are a corporate body, capable of contracting and being sued, though the separate corporate existence of each continues; and they were held liable, therefore, for the work done upon a contract made by them with the plaintiff for an addition to the school house. Caledonia School Trustees v, Farrell, 27 U. C. R. 321, commented upon. Oliver v, Ingersoll School Trustees, 29 U. C. R. 409.

Purchase of Land—Remedy of Purchaser.)—A school trustee, by desire of the board, attended an auction and bought for the board a piece of property for a school site, and is signed the contract with his own name only. The board afterwards, by several resolutions, during three years, unanimously recognized the purchase as their own, and paid three instalments of the purchase money. In an estimate under the corporate seal, the board applied to the town council for money to pay "for school premises for a central school, contracted for and agreed to be paid, $1,570; for building a central school house on said purchased premises $7.870." It was shewn that there was no other property or contract to which this language could refer than the property or contract mentioned. The town council did not comply with the requisition, and ultimately trustees were elected, a majority of

and not comply with the requisition, and ultimately trustees were elected, a majority of whom determined to repudiate the purchase: —Held, in a suit against the board, by the purchaser, for indennification in respect of the remainder of the purchase money, that the plaintiff was entitled to relief. Sonith v. Betleville Sohool Trustees, 16 Gr. 130.

— Sufficiency of — Parties.] — The agreement sued on was headed "Specification of a school house in school section No. 4, Tilbury East." Then followed in detail the size of the building, and the work and material to be employed, and it concluded, "The whole to be of good material, and to be finished in a good workmanilike manner, and to be finished in a good workmanilike manner, and to be finished on the 1st July, 1873. In consideration the parties of the first part agree to pay the party of the second part the sum of $769, one-half on the 15th May, and the other half when the said school house is completed." Then followed the signatures of the three school trustees, with their corporate seal, and the signature of the plaintiff. It bore no date, but was proved to have been executed by the parties about the 1st March, 1873. It referred to no plan, but the trustees furnished the plaintiff with a plan to work by, and they paid to him $400 on account. They refused to pay the balance, or to accept the building, alleging that it was not properly constructed; but the trial Judge found for the plaintiff for the balance of the $708:— Held, that it was sufficiently clear from the instrument itself, and the acts of the parties, that defendants were the parties covenanting with the plaintiff, and that the instrument was unheld. Cophlan v. Tilbury East School Trustees, 35 U. C. R. $752.

Costs of Defence.]—A rate may be levied to reimburse school trustees for the costs of defending a groundless action against them. In re Tiernan and Township of Nepean, 15 U. C. R. 87.

Equitable Relief — Ratepayer — Conditions.]—It is contrary to the rule of the court, in dealing with persons who have not that justice to others renders necessary; and therefore, where school trustees wrongfully that justice to others renders necessary; and therefore, where school trustees wrongfully that justice is noney in building on a site which had been amoney in building on a site which had been along by competent authority relief was granted to a ratepayer who complained of the act, but subject to equitable terms and conditions. Malcolm v. Malcolm, 15 Gr.

Execution—Sale under.]—Held, that land conveyed to school trustees for a school could not be sold under execution against them for the money due for building the school house. Scott v. Burgess and Bathurst School Trustees, 19 U. C. R. 28.

Injunction—Ratepayer—Constitution of Switt—Consent.]—A bill was filed by a rate-payer seeking to restrain school trustees from allowing the school house to be used for religious services, but the bill did not allege that it was filed on behalf of the plaintiff and all other ratepayers. Two of the three school trustees consented to the injunction being granted as asked. The court refused the application, on the grounds, first, that the suit was not properly constituted; and second, if it had been, it appearing that a majority of the trus-

Thurlow School Trustees, 12 Gr., 115.

Notice of Action—Limitation of Actions—Warrant.]—Held, that a school trustee sued for any act done in his corporate capacity is entitled to notice of action, and that the action must be brought within six months. And that a school trustee, acting in the discharge of his duty as such, is entitled to the protection of, and comes within, 16 Vict. c. 180, notwithstanding that he had signed a warrant individually instead of in his corporate capacity. Spry v. Mumby, 11 C. P. 283.

(b) Actions by.

Money Collected — Municipal Corporation.]—Held, that a demand or order from a majority of the school trustees of a school section is necessary to sustain an action against a municipal corporation for money collected under a by-law, passed under the authority of s. 34 of C. S. U. C. c. 64. Calcdon School Trustees v. Township of Caledon, 12 C. P. 301.

Money Received — Secretary-treasurer.]
—Held, that a board of school trustees could maintain an action for money had and received against their secretary-treasurer, to recover a balance of money in his hands not expended or accounted for. Stephen School Trustees v. Mitchell, 29 U. C. R. 382.

Recovery of Seal and Papers.]— A court of equity has jurisdiction to order persons wrongfully claiming to be school trustees, to deliver up the corporate seal and papers to the legal trustees. Belleville Roman Catholic Separate School Trustees V, Grainger, 25 Gr. 570.

School Rates — Parties — Amendment.]—
The plaintiff, who was the collector of the Roman Catholic separate school tax for the township of Kitley, having sued the defendant for the amount of the tax:—Held, that the action should have been brought in the name of the trustees as a corporation; and an amendment was allowed. Healy v. Carey, 13 C. L. J. 91.

Trespass to School House.] — Under 7 Vict. c. 29, s. 44, the trustees of the school (and not the school master) should sue for a trespass to the school house, unless, at least, it can be shewn that the trustees have given the school master a particular interest in the building beyond the mere liberty of occupying it during the day for the purpose of teaching. Monaghan v. Ferguson, 3 U. C. R. 484.

— Parties—Corporation.]—J. C. and J. A. C., while trustees of a school section in Nova Scotia, and their servant, N. C., entered upon the school plot, removed the school house from its foundation, and destroyed a portion of the wall. In trespass by the trustees against these three persons, they pleaded that the acts were legally done by them in their capacity of trustees. By s.-s. 4 of s. 30 of R. S. N. S., 4th ser., c. 23, the sites for school houses shall be defined by the trustees, subject to the sanction of the three nearest commissioners residing out of the section. This sanction was not obtained:—Held, that under the sub-section referred to the defendants were not authorized to remove the school house. (2) That the plaintiffs, as a corporate body identical with the corporation which existed at the time of the trespass, could maintain trespass for the injury to the corporate property. (3) That if the action were brought in the name of the corporation, without due authority, the defendants' remedy was to apply summarily to stay proceedings. Picton School Trustees v. Cameron, 2 S. C. R. 690.

See Nichol School Trustees v. Maitland, 26 A. R. 506.

(c) Disqualification of.

Contract with Board of Trustees Shareholder in Company — Intention to Declare Seat Vacant—Remedy.]—Held, on a special case, that the fact of the public school board of the city of Toronto enter-ing into an agreement with and purchasing their stationery and school supplies from a publishing company, and having obtained gas from a gas company, and insured their property in certain insurance companies, of which said companies the plaintiff was a shareholder, did not disqualify him from acting as a trustee of the school board, or render his seat vacant, under 44 Vict. c. 30, s. 10 (O.) Quære, whether the special case could properly be entertained, no fact being disclosed by which jurisdiction could be exercised under the Act relating to mandamus and in-junction, R. S. O. 1877 c. 52, s. 30, no wrong-ful act having been actually done by the school board, but merely an injury to the plaintiff's rights threatened, it being alleged that the board intended to declare the seat vacant v. Toronto Public School Board, 32 C. P. 78.

— Medical Practitioner.] — Where a school trustee, who was a medical practitioner, acted in his professional capacity under engagement by the board for examining the pupils attending the school as to the prevalence of an infectious disease, and made a charge of $815$ therefor, which the board ordered to be paid, but he afterwards declined to accept payment:—Held, that this disqualified him as trustee, and rendered his seat vacant, under 44 Vict. c. 20. s. 13 (O.) Regina ex rel. Stewart v. Standish, 6 O. R. 408.

Necessity for Declaration that Seats Vacant — Remedy — Injunction — Quo Warranto, — In an action brought by a ratepayer against a school board, three of the persons elected as trustees, and one G., the statement of claim alleged that the three defendant trustees had, by reason of their being interested in certain contracts with the board, ipso facto vacated their seats, by virtue of s. 247 of the Public Schools Act, R. S. O. 1887 c. 225; that they nevertheless continued to six and the principal of the school of the factor of certain resolutions which was dismissed and the defendant G. appointed in his place; and that but for the votes of the three defendant trustees the result would have been different. The prayer was that the seats of the three should be declared vacant, and the votes and resolution declared void, and for an injunction re-solun restraining the defendants the trustees from further acting as members of the board:—Held, ther acting as members of the board:—11240, upon demurrer, following Hardwick v. Brown, L. R. 8 C. P. 406, that the seat of a trustee does not under s. 247 actually become vacant until the other members of the board have declared it to have become vacant; and in this case, no action having been taken by the remaining members of the board, that the seats of the three defendant trustees were full; and being full, that the court would not interfere by injunction to restrain the occupants of them from acting as trustees, (2) That quo warranto proceedings were the only means by which the seats could be declared vacant by the court; that the duty of declaring them vacant, if the facts charged were established, devolved upon the remaining individual mem-bers of the board, who were not parties to the bers of the board, who were not parties to the action and were not made parties by the fact that the school corporation was a party de-fendant, Regina v, Mayor of Hereford, 2 Salk, 701, Rex v, Smith, 2 M. & S. 583, re-ferred to. (3) That the defendant G. was an unnecessary and improper party to the action. Injunction, since the Judicature Act, seems to be the appropriate, or at all events the alternative, remedy in cases of disputed claims of this nature, in which mandamus would have been formerly required. In Smith v. Peters-ville, 28 Gr. 599, Mearns v. Petrolia, 28 Gr. 98, Aslatt v. Corporation of Southampton, 16 Ch. D. 143, injunctions were granted at the suit of the holders of seats at council boards. to restrain other persons claiming the seats from preventing their exercising their rights as such actual holders, because before the Judicature Act mandamus was the remedy provided for enforcing the rights of the occupants of offices against persons preventing their en-joyment of them. But, on the other hand, where the actual holder of the office is where the actual noder of the voice is charged with holding it improperly, quo war-ranto proceedings on behalf of the Queen re-main the only means by which it can be declared vacant (see Regina ex rel. Stewart v. Standish, 6 O. R. 403); and so long as it is full, a general injunction against acting in it cannot be gramted. Chaplin v. Woodstock Public School Board, 16 O. R. 728.

Residence.]—The defendant, a life tenant of it from 1888 until 1894, when he rented it to his son and went to live with his wife and family on a farm owned by his wife, in the township of Albion, lived minity on a farm owned by his wife, in the township of Caledon, where he continued to live until 1818, when the son having given up possession of the Albion farm, he took possession of it, to enable him to work it, sleeping in the house, and occasionally visiting his wife attaining who remained in Caledon, and carring the house, and occasionally visiting his wife attaining who remained in Caledon and carring the left, that the defendant's place of residence was where his wife and family lived, and he was therefore not a resident within the township of Albion so us to qualify him for the office of a trustee of a school section within that township to which he had been elected; but, as the granting of the order for a quo warranto was in the discretion of the court, and the term of the defendant's office would expire before the issue could be tried, the motion was dismissed without costs. Sub-section S of s. 14 of R. S. O. 1897 c. 292, providing for an investigation as to the election by the inspector, would not of itself prevent the granting of such order. Regina ex rel. Horan v. Evans. 31 O. R. 448.

Alteration in Sections—New Election.]
—An alteration of the boundaries of a section under 13 & 14 Vict. c, 48, s. 18, s.-s. 4, does not make it necessary to call a school section meeting and appoint new trustees. In re-Moore School Trustees v, MeRac, 12 U. C. R. 525.

In 1853, on application of the resident inhabitants of Oneida, the municipality resolved to divide section No. 7. by taking away a part to constitute a new section, but no by-law was passed until 1855, when one was adopted confirming this resolution. A meeting was called for the 16th January, 1854, to elect three new trustees for section 7. In the meantime, on the 10th January, the ordinary annual meeting was held, and a dispute arose as to whether trustees should not then be elected for the ensuing year; some thought not, and left the meeting, while others remained and proceeded with the election. The local superintendent, being appealed to, declared the election illegal, considering that No. 7 had become a new section, and appointed a new election to take place at the meeting called for the 19th, when the defendants were appointed the three trustees for No. 7 as a new section. In January, 1855, the dispute was renewed; the defendants appointed a new trustee in the usual way, but another meeting was held, at which a new trustee was elected to succeed the retiring one of those first chosen in 1854, so that there were two effects of the control of the control

In replevin, defendant made cognizance as collector of school section No. 1. It appeared that prior to February, 1854, shool section No. 1 consisted of the town of Chatham and a part of the township of Harwich; there was also a school section in operation, known as section No. 2½. In February, 1854, the township council of Harwich passed a resolution dividing the township into sixteen school sections. No. 1 of these new sections was formed of that part of the township of Harwich which, together with the town of Chatham, had previously been No. 1, added to the whole of 2½ as it existed previously. In January, 1855, an election for section No. 1, as created by the resolution of February, 1854, was held, at which one trustee only was elected, and the two other trustees elected the previous year for the then section gave defendant the warrant under which he acted:—Held, that there should have been three trustees elected for section No. 1, at the election in January, and that a warrant signed by the other two was inoperative. McGregor v. Pratt, 6 C. P. 173.

Electors — Statute Labour,] — Persons rated only for statute labour, and not householders, are not "taxable inhabitants" within 13 & 14 Vict. c. 48, s. 22, and cannot therefore vote at the election of school trustees. Quære, whether ss. 5 and 7 of that Act apply to the electors of school trustees for towns, or only for townships. Semble, that s. 7 at least applies to both. Regina ex rel. McNamara v. Christie, 9 U. C. R. 682.

Validity of Election-Decision of Board -Acquiescence-New Election.]—Where certain persons were elected school trustees, and at a meeting of the board held subsequently to the election, were declared duly elected. but, proceedings having been meanwhile commenced to question the validity of the election, at a subsequent meeting of the board they acquiesced in the conclusion of the board to hold a new election, and became candidates again, and canvassed as such, until the twenty days allowed for disputing the first election had elapsed (the proceedings formerly com-menced for that purpose having been meanwhile dropped), and were not elected at the second election:—Held, that they could not afterwards maintain a suit to have it declared that they were the duly elected trustees. Fos-ter v. Stokes, 2 O. R. 590.

(e) Personal Liability.

On Contract. |- The plaintiff, a teacher, sued upon a special agreement, stated to have been made by defendants as trustees, to fur-nish him with fuel when required, under 9 Vict. c. 20. Defendants demurred, because the defendants, having made the agreement the detendants, naving made the agreement in their corporate capacity, were charged as individuals:—Held, declaration bad, Ander-son v. Vansitutart, 5 U. C. R. 335. See. also, Sheriff v. Patierson, 5 U. C. R.

Promissory Notes.]—Two school trustees petitioned the council stating that the ratepayers were desirous of purchasing a new site, and asking for a loan of $400, "for which the trustees will bind themselves to pay which the trustees will bind themselves to pay the interest annually and the principal when due." This was granted and secured by two instruments, as follows: "We, the under-signed, trustees of school section No. 11, do hereby promise to pay the treasurer of the corporation of Toronto township, on," &c. This was signed by the defendants in their own names followed by the word "trustees," and the corporate seal was affixed. The money was expended for the purpose mentioned. The township corporation having sued the two trustees individually, on these notes and on the common counts:—Held, that the defend-ants were not personally liable on the notes. Held, also, that the defendants were not liable on the common counts either, for the intention of all parties plainly was, that the trustees as a corporation should be bound, not the de-fendants personally, and, there being no fraud or concealment on their part, the fact that they as a corporation had no authority to borrow nor the plaintiffs to lend, would not, under the circumstances, make them personally liable. Township of Toronto v. McBride, 29 U. C. R. 13.

[By R. S. O. 1877 c. 204, s. 238, (R. S. O, 1897 c. 292, s. 104) any trustee or trustees of any public school wilfully neglecting or refusing to exercise all the corporate powers vested in them by this Act for the fulfilment of any contract or agreement made by them. shall be held to be personally responsible for the fulfilment of such contract or agreement.]

Refusing to Exercise Corporate Powers. |-Formerly any difference between Corporate trustees and a teacher in regard to his salary or any other matter, must have been submitted to arbitration, as provided by the statutes. See C. S. U. C. c. 64, ss. 84-87. And by 23 Vict. c. 49, s. 9, trustees wilfully neglecting or refusing to give effect to the award, were held personally responsible for the amount award-ed, which might be enforced against them by warrant of the arbitrators. But these provisions were repealed by 34 Vict. c. 33, s. 27 (O.), which directed all such differences to be decided in the division court. This enactment is contained in R. S. O. 1877 c. 294, s. 165. For decisions under the arbitration clauses as between the trustees and a teacher, see Kennedy v. Hall. 7 C. P. 218; Weaver v. Bull. 10 C. P. 369; Kennedy v. Burness, 15 U. C. R. 473; S. C., 7 C. P. 227; Hughes v. Pake, 25 U. C. R. 96; Birmingham v. Hungerford, 19 C. P. 411. c. 49, s. 9, trustees wilfully neglecting or re-

Where school trustees become personally responsible under 13 & 14 Vict. c. 48, s. 2, s.-s. 16, for refusing to exercise their corporate powers, before such liability can be enforced by the warrant of arbitrators under s. 15 of 16 Vict. c. 185, it is necessary to shew that there has been some adjudication of the fact of wiltul refusal, to justify such warrant. Ranney v. Macklem, 9 C. P. 192.

A plea setting up an award between the school trustees, of whom plaintiff was one, and the teacher, and a warrant by the arbitrators, under which plaintiff's goods were sold:—Held, bad on demurrer, for (1) the arbitrators had no power to award costs: (2) nor that the sum should be paid within thirty days; (3) nor to resume consideration of the matter after having once made their award; (4) nor to decide that the trustees were personally liable. Trustees can be held liable only where they wiffully neglect to do their duty, not where they decline in good faith to exercise their corporate powers on account of any doubt or legal difficulty which they suppose to exist, VanBuren v. Bull. 19 U. C. R. 633.

School trustees cannot be held liable under 23 Vict. c. 49, s. 9, for wilfully neglecting or refusing to comply with an award, with-out being first afforded an opportunity of explaining or justifying such non-compliance. Where, therefore, the defendant in replevin justified seizing the plaintiff's goods under a warrant of the arbitrators issued against the plaintiff and the other trustees for non-com-pliance with an award, but did not shew that the plaintiff was notified or called upon to shew cause before such warrant issued:— Held, that the plea was bad. Remarks as to the informality of the warrant. Graham v. Hungerford, 29 U. C. R. 239.

Validity of Award-Jurisdiction of Arbitrators. —Held, following Kennedy v. Burness, 15 U. C. R. 487, that arbitrators between school trustees and a teacher, under the Common School Act, acting within their jurisdiction, are entitled to protection under C. S. U. C. c. 126, as persons fulfilling a public duty; and therefore that trespass would not lie against them and their bailiff for seizing goods to enforce their award under s. 86. them; but the plaintiff's witness said an agreement was produced which he thought had the seal, and the plaintiff, as a trustee, had named an arbitrator and submitted the matters in dispute:—Held, that under these circumstances it might be assumed that the arbitrators had before them all that was necessary to give jurisdiction. Held, also, that the award set out in the case was sufficient; and that 23 Vict. c. 49, s. 9, which directs that no want of form shall invalidate such awards, should receive a liberal construction. Hughes v. Pake, 25 U. C. R. 95.

Warrant-Liability for Seizure.]-Where it appeared that a horse was seized by K. under a warrant signed by two trustees, comder a warrant signed by two trustees, commencing, "We, the undersigned trustees of school section," &c., and sealed with the corporate seal:—Held, that the trustees were liable personally, not in their corporate capacity only. Vance v. King, 21 U. C. R. 187. But see Ryland v. King, 12 C. P. 198.

Withholding Books and Money— Award—County Judge—Misdemeanour.]— Held, that an award made by arbitrators ap-pointed under s. 29 of C. S. U. C. c. 64, against one of the trustees (the secretary-treasurer), in his individual capacity as said trustee, for wrongfully withholding books, moneys, &c., is binding. (2) That the citing of a trustee to appear before the Judge of the of a trustee to appear before the Judge of the county court, under s. 130 et seq. of the School Act, is not necessarily a bar to proceeding by arbitration under s. 29. (3) That under s. 130 the Judge of the county court has no jurisdiction, except when a secretary-treasurer "has in his possession, books, moneys, &c., which came into his possession as secretary-treasurer, and which he session as secretary-treasurer, and which he wrongfully holds and refuses to deliver up, &c., and such secretary-treasurer must be guilty of misdemeanour, contemplated by s. 130, before the Judge can interfere. Ferris v. Chesterfield, 10 C. P. 272, 6 L. J. 163.

(f) Powers of.

Contract with Board.]-A school trustee cannot, even by the consent of his co-trustees, be a contractor for the building of a school house. Lamont v. Aldborough School Trustees, 5 L. J. 93.

Distribution of School Fund—Discretion—Injunction—Parties.]—By the patent or grant of a township made in 1761, four hundred acres of land were declared to be "for the school." By a subsequent grant from the Crown in 1790, the said four hundred acres were declared to be vested in the rector and wardens of a church in the township. "in special trust, to and for the use of one or more school or schools, as may be deemed necessary by the said trustees, for be deemed necessary by the said trustees, for the convenience and benefit of all the inhabi-tants of the said township, and in trust that all schools in said township furnished or supall sensois in said township turnished or sup-plied with masters qualified agreeably to the laws of this Province, and contracted with for a term not less than one whole year, shall be entitled to an equal share or proportion of the rents and profits arising from said of the total and profits arising from said the provided the masters or teachers thereof shall receive and instruct, free of expense, such poor children as may be sent them by the said trustees." The grantees took pos-session of the land, and they and their suc-cessors in office had remained in possession of it, and until the year 1873 the rents and profits were distributed among the schools of the township, and poor children sent by the trustees to, and educated in, said schools ac-cording to the terms of the trust. In 1873. however, the then trustees discontinued such distribution and allowed the funds realized to accumulate, the reason alleged being that the schools of the township had become so the schools of the township had become so numerous that the sum appropriated to each would be too small to be of use, and also, that under the free school system all the poor children of the township were educated free of expense, and the object for which such funds had previously been supplied no longer existed. The present defendants were invested with the trust in 1879, when the revenue had with the trust in 1879, when the revenue had accumulated until it amounted to over $1.200. Shortly after they became such trustees, it was determined to build a school house in a certain district in the township with the money. A meeting of the vestry of the church was held and a resolution passed authorizing such school house to be built on land leased from the church: the school was to be nonsectarian, but after school hours any of the children who wished could receive instruction in the doctrines of the church of England:— Held, that the trustees had no discretion as their, that the trustees had no discretion as to the application of the trust funds, but were bound to distribute them among all the schools of the township, which would be entitled to participate under the terms of the trust, howparticipate under the terms of the trust, now-ever wanting in utility such a disposition of said funds might be. Held, also, that the attorney-general for the Province was the proper person to bring this suit. Attorney-General for Nova Scotia v, Axford, 13 S. C.

Majority Acting.]-Two of the trustees of a section are not competent to act in all cases without consulting the third. Orr v. Ranney, 12 U. C. R. 377. (See R. S. O. 1877) c. 204, s. 99.)

Majority Signing Contract.]—A contract for building a school house made by two trustees under the corporate seal is suffitwo trustees under the corporate seal is sufficient; and a pleat hat it was signed by the two without the consent or approbation of the third:—Held, bad. In an action upon such a contract, under a plea of non est factum, the plaintiff was held entitled to succeed. Forbes v. Plympton School Trustees, S.C. P.

Number of Schools.]-The trustees of towns (though not of townships) under 13 & 14 Vict, c. 48, s. 24, have unlimited discretion as to the number of schools to be kept up. Brockville School Trustees v. Town of Brockville, 9 U. C. R. 302.

Common School Fund-Inter provincial Rights-Adjustment.] - The arbitrators appointed in 1879, under s. 142 of the B. Act, were authorized to "divide" and the accounts in dispute between the Dominion of Canada and the Provinces of Ontario and Quebec, respecting the former Province of Canada. In dealing with the common school fund established under 12 Vict. c. 200 (C.), they directed the principal of the fund to be retained by the Dominion, and the income therefrom to be paid to the Provinces:—Held, that, even if there was no ultimate "division and adjustment," such as the statute required, yet the ascertainment of the amount was a necessary preliminary to such "division and adjustment," and therefore intra vires of the arbitrators. Held, further, that there was a division of the beneficial interest in the fund and a fair adjustment of the rights of the Provinces in it, which was a proper exercise of the authority of the arbitrators under the statute. By 12 Vict. c. 200, s. 3 (C.), one million acres of the public lands of the Province of Canada were to be set apart to be sold and the proceeds applied to the creation of the "common school provided for in s. 1. The lands so set apart were all in the present Province of Ontario :- Held, that the trust in these lands created by the Act for the common schools of Canada did not cease to exist at Confederation, so that the unsold lands and proceeds of sales should revert to Ontario, but such trust continued in favour of the common schools of the new Provinces of Ontario and Quebec. In the agreement of reference to the arbitrators appointed under Acts passed in 1891 to adjust the said accounts, questions respecting the Upper Canada improvement fund were excluded, but the arbitrators had to determine and award upon the accounts as rendered by the Dominion to the two Provinces up to January, 1889 :- Held, that the arbitrators could pass upon the right of Ontario to deduct a proportion of the school lands the amount of which was one of the items in the accounts so rendered. Provinces of Ontario and Quebec v. Dominion of Can-ada, In re Common School Fund and Lands, 28 S. C. R. 609.

Dissolution of Township Boards— Time for.]—Upon a case submitted by the minister of education under s, 237 of the Public Schools Act :—Held, that the phin meaning of the Public Schools Act, R. S. O. SSF 325 of the Public Schools Act, R. S. O. SSF 425 of the Public Schools Act, R. S. O. the Public Schools Act, R. S. O. Selfond Schools of the Public Schools of the the submission of a be-law for the repeal of the by-law under which that board was established, may be required at any time upon the presentation of a properly signed petition therefor. The by-law establishing the township board may be attacked with a view to its repeal again and again, so long as the agitation against it subsists. Re Tuckersmith Public School Board, 16 O. R. 604.

School Acts—Incodements—Powers of School Sections.]—The whole tendency of recent amendments of the Education Acts has been to give the runal school sections greater powers of self-regulation and self-government, und the courts should not be astute to interfere unless there has been a plain violation of the statute, or a manifest usurpation of jurisdiction, or a reckless disregard of individual rights. An action by a trustee and several rate payers to have it declared that a certain meeting was illegal, and to restrain the board of a rural school section from building on a site unanimously adopted by the meeting, was dismissed, but without costs, as the point was new, and the statute was not plainly expressed. Wallace v. Lobo School Trustices, 11 O. R. 648.

School Moneys—Bond.]—Moneys appropriated for educational purposes are not protected by a township treasurer's bond. Township of Oakland v. Proper, 1 O. R. 330.

Powers of Provincial Legislature.]— Under the British North America Act, provincial legislatures may legislate in regard to separate schools, provided that the legislation is not such as prejudically affects the rights or privileges theretofore possessed by such schools. 3. Protestant Separate Schools.

By-law Establishing-Time of Taking Effect — Teacher — Rate — Return—School House, 1—Held, under C. S. U. C. c. 65, s. 3, and c. 64, s. 40, that the by-law of a township council authorizing the establishment of Protestant separate school, on the ground that the teacher of the public school is a Roman Catholic, does not come into effect or the school into existence until the 25th December following. Held, also, that the appoint-ment of a Protestant teacher to the public school before that day enabled the municischool before that day enabled the pality to repeal the by-law, but did not, of panty to repeal the by-law, but all hot, of itself, put an end to the separate school. No return was made by the local superintendent, under s. 13 of c. 65, of the supporters of the separate school for the preceding six months, separate school for the preceding six months, to the public school trustees, and they, act-ing under the assessment roll for the year, where all the ratepayers of the section were entered, including the separate school supporters, of whom the plaintiff was one, levied a rate on all in the section for teacher's salary and other ordinary expenses of the public school, and also the amount payable within the year of the cost of a new schoolhouse, the construction of which was under-taken, before the 25th December, and issued a warrant for its collection to defendant.

their collector. The plaintiff brought detinue for his property seized under this warrant. The facts being stated in a special case without pleadings:—Held, that the public school trustees were not bound to exclude the names of the separate school supporters from their rate, as they had not notice of any exemprate, as they had not notice of any exemp-tions, either by a return from the local super-intendent or the assessment roll. Held, also, that under c. 65, s. 8, the supporters of the separate school were liable for the public school rates for the new school house, as it was undertaken before the separate school was established; but that this portion of the levy being correct would not make valid the whole levy, which was for one sum or rate, including several items. Held, also, that the fact of the separate school having received a share of the legislative school grant could not affect the case. Held, also, though there were no formal pleadings, that the defendant was not protected, as having acted under a warrant apparently lawful, but that he must be conapparently lawful, but that he must be considered an actor, and must shew a title also to the property. Semble, that separate Protestant school trustees have no power to build school houses or impose rates therefor. Quære, as to the meaning of "school-rolls," in s. 14 of c. 65. Free v. McHugh, 24 C. P. 13.

School Rates—Inequality—Pleading.]—
In replevin for plaintiff's goods, defendant made cognizance, justifying as bailiff of a collector of school rates under a warrant from binn. Plaintiff pleaded: (1) that the rate was bad, as not being levied according to the valuation of the whole taxable property in the school section, as expressed in the assessor's and collector's roll, pursuant to the statute, but that it was levied wrongfully upon out these fourth nerts of such taxable worn. only three-fourth parts of such taxable property: (2) that, at the time said rate was imposed, there was a Protestant separate school, which had been long before established, and that plaintiff for a long time before the imposition of the rate had been and at the time of its imposition was sending his children to the said separate school. To the first plea defendant replied that the rate was first plea defendant replied that the rate was duly imposed, because at the time of its im-position, and long before then, there was a union separate school of the townships of, &c., for coloured people, the limits of which took in the whole of the section in which plaintiff resided, and the trustees of said section pro-perly omitted the names of the coloured people in said section from said rate-bill:-Held, that the first plea was good, for prima facie the trustees could levy a rate only on the whole taxable property; but that the second plea was bad; and that the replication to the first plea was bad. Harling v. Mayville, 21 C. P. 499.

School Section-Extension of Boundarics. | The boundary of a Protestant separate school section cannot be extended into or over an adjoining public school section, where the teacher in the latter is not a Roman Catholic. Banks v. Township of Anderdon, Catholic. Ba 20 O. R. 296.

4. Roman Catholic Separate Schools.

Elections - Appeal.] - The election of school trustees, as well for the common schools as the Roman Catholic separate schools, must be held by the same returning officers, and at the same time and place as municipal elec-tions. In election matters separate school boards have the same right of appeal to a county Judge as public school boards have. Belleville Roman Catholic Separate School Trustees v. Grainger, 25 Gr. 570.

Establishment-Power to Define Limits.] —Application for a mandamus to the board of school trustees of the city of Toronto, to authorize the establishment of a separate Roman Catholic school in section 9, in St. James's ward in said city:—Held, that the board, and not the applicants, should prescribe the limits of separate schools; and that the application should therefore be for one or more such schools, in general terms, leaving it to the board of trustees to define the same, In re Hayes and Toronto School Trustees, 3 C. P. 478.

Incorporation — Formalities—Validity.] —Six persons, Roman Catholics, some of whom were supporters of an existing Roman Catholic separate school, No. 6, and others, public school supporters in several adjoining public school sections, convened a meeting for the purpose of establishing a Roman Catholic separate school, which they thereupon assumseparate school, which they thereupon assum-ed to do; but only three of them were resi-dents of the same school section, and also heads of families:—Held, that the require-ments of 49 Vict. c. 46 (O.), ss. 22, 24, were not complied with, and consequently there was no valid incorporation of the trustees elected at such meeting. Held, she that a elected at such meeting. Held, also, that a question as to the valid incorporation of trusquestion as to the valid interporation of the tees of a Roman Catholic separate school does not come within the purview of 49 Vict. c, 46, s, 68 (O.), R. S. O. 1887 c, 225, s, 67, which presupposes incorporation. Arthur which presupposes incorporation. Arthur Roman Catholic Separate School Trustees v. Township of Arthur, 21 O. R. 60.

School Moneys-Grant-Assessment-Apportionment. | — Semble, that what a separate school, established under s. 19 of 13 & 14 Vict. c. 48, is entitled to share in, is the sum apportioned by the chief superintendent out of the government grant, and the sum, at least equal in amount, raised by local assessment for the payment of teachers. Belleville Ro-man Catholic School Trustees v, Belteville School Trustees, 10 U. C. R. 469.

- Mandamus.]-The court refused a mandamus, on the application of the Roman Catholic school trustees of Belleville, to compel the school trustees of the town to pay over to them a certain sum claimed as their share of the common school fund: (1) because it could not be said to be clear and without question what sum the applicants were entitled to, or in what fund they had a right to share under the Act. 2. Because the applicants, before coming to the court, should at least have been able to shew that they had submitted their complaint to the local or chief superintendent, and that he had refused to entertain it; and quære, whether the decision of the chief sup-erintendent upon such a complaint would not be final. (3) Because the application should not have been made on behalf of the trustees, but on that of the teacher of the separate school, as being the person entitled to the money. Belleville Roman Catholic School Trustees v. Belleville School Trustees, 10 U. C. R. 469.

Supporters—Duty of Assessor—Assessment Roll—Court of Revision,]—Held, that if the assessor is satisfied with the prima facie evidence of the statements made by or on behalf of any rategayer, that he is a Roon behalf of any ratepayer, that he is a Roman Catholic, pursuant to R. S. O. 1887 c. s. 120, s.-s. 2, and thereupon (asking and having no other information) places such person upon the assessment roll as a separate school supporter, this ratepayer, though he may not, by himself or his agent, give notice in writing pursuant to R. S. O. 1877 c. 227, s. 40, may be entitled to exemption from the s. 40, may be entitled to exemption from the payment of rates for public school purposes, he being in the case supposed assessed as a supporter of Roman Catholic separate schools. The court of revision has juris-diction, under R. S. O. 1887 c. 225, s. 120, s.-s. 3, on application of the person assessed, or of any municipal elector (or ratepayer, as under R. S. O. 1887 c. 227, s. 48, s.-s. 3), to hear and determine complaints, (a) in regard to the religion of the person placed on the roll as Protestant or Roman Catholic, and (b) as to whether such person is or is and (b) as to whether such person is of is not a supporter of public or separate schools within the meaning of the provisions of the law in that behalf, and (c), which appears to be involved in (b), where such person has been placed in the wrong column of the assessment roll for the purposes of the school tax. It is competent for the court of revision to determine whether the name of any person wrongfully omitted from the proper column of the assessment roll should be inverted therein, upon the complaint of the person himself, or of any elector or ratepayer. The assessor is not bound to accept the statements assessor is not bound to accept the statements of, or made on behalf of, any ratepayer under R. S. O. 1887 c. 225, s. 120, s.-s. 2, in case he is made aware, or ascertains before completing his roll, that such ratepayer is not a Roman Catholic, or has not given the notice required by s. 40 of R. S. O. 1887 c. 227, or is for any reason not entitled to exemption from public school rates. A ratepayer, not a Roman Catholic, being wrongfully assessed as a Roman Catholic and supporter of separate schools, who through in-advertence or other cause does not appeal therefrom, is not estopped (nor are other ratetherefrom, is not estopped (nor are other rate-payers) from asserting, with reference to the assessment of the following or future years, that he is not a Roman Catholic. A ratepayer, being a Roman Catholic, and appearing in the assessment roll as such and as pearing in the assessment roll as such and as a supporter of separate schools, who has not given the notice required by R. S. O. 1887 c. 227, s. 40, is not (nor are other ratepayers) estopped from demanding, in the following or future year, that he should not be classified as a supporter of separate schools with reference to the assessment of such year, although he has not given the notice of withdrawal mentioned in R. S. O. 1887 c. 227, s. 47. In re Roman Catholic Separate Schools, 18 O. R.

Exemption.]—A rate may be levied to reimburse school trustees for the costs of defending a groundless action against them. Where such charge was incurred before the establishment of a separate Roman Catholic school:—Held, that the supporters of that school were not exempt from the rate. In retireman and Township of Nepean, 15 U. C. R. 87.

Exemption — Clerk—Correction of Roll.]—A rate having been imposed to build a new school house in the town of Amherstburg, certain persons who were Protestants signed a notice to the clerk, he himself being one of them, that as subscribers to the Roman Catholic separate school they claimed to be exempted from all rates for common schools for 1861; and the clerk, thereupon, in making up the collector's roll, omitted this rate opposite to their names:—Held, that the clerk, who had been notified before making up the roll that it would be illegal to exempt these persons, had done wrong, and might be punished under C. S. U. C. c. 55, so. 171, 173; but that the court could not, in the following year, interfere by mandamus to compel him to correct the roll. In re Ridsdale and Brush, 22 U. C. R. 122.

Tax—Parties — Amendment.]—The plaintiff, who was collector of the Roman Catholic separate school tax for the township of Kitley, having suel defendant therefor, the latter admitted that he was a separate school supporter, but contended that he had leased his real estate to his son, who was a supporter of public schools, and who, as between defendant and himself, was to pay all taxes, and had paid the public school tax:—Held, (1) that defendant was liable. (2) That the action should have been brought in the name of the trustees as a corporation; and an amendment was allowed. Healy v. Carcy, 13 C. L. J. 91.

Relief of Surety-Notice of Default.]-The court stayed proceedings on a sci. fa. on a bond to the Queen against a surety for the due performance of the duties of the nost office by a deputy postmaster, where it appeared that when default was made by the deputy postmaster he was in good circumstances, and the deputy postmaster-general had taken security from him for the amount of his default, the surety having had no notice of the default until three years after it occurred, when the deputy postmaster had become in-solvent. In debts due to the Crown which solvent. In depts due to the Crown which would be cognizable in the exchequer in England, the court of Queen's bench may give relief when it appears that "in law, reason, or good conscience the debtor should not be charged." The Queen v. Bonter, 6. O. S. 551.

Remedy—Post Office Act—Joint and Several Obligors.]—The defendant entered into a joint and several bond to the Queen, with D. and S., for the faithful discharge of S. of the duties of deputy postmaster at O. On sci. fa. against defendant on the bond, he appear ed, and, upon its being set out on over, de murred to it, on the ground that a bond of this nature should, since the passing of the Post Office Act, C. S. C. c. 36, have been proceeded on by suit in the name of the postmaster-general, and not by sci. fa. or at the instance of the attorney-general:-Held, that, though the statute may authorize the postmaster-general in such cases to sue in his of-ficial name, the words "or otherwise," contained therein, do not deprive the Crown of the right to sci. fa. on a bond taken expressly in the name of the Queen. Held, that the Crown may have sci fa. against one or against all of the joint and several obligors of a bond, but that the proceeding must be against all or each one. The Queen v, McPherson, 15 C. P. 17.

II. JUDGMENTS AGAINST COMPANIES-SCI. FA. AGAINST SHAREHOLDERS.

Act of Incorporation—Action—Rem-edy.]—27 & 28 Vict. c. 23, s. 27, incorporating the defendants, enacts that every shareholder, until his stock has been paid up, shall be liable to the creditors of the company to the amount unpaid thereon; "but shall not be liable in an action therefor by any creditor" liable in an action therefor by any creditor" until an execution against the company has been returned unsatisfied, &c.:—Held, that scl. fa. would lie by a judgment creditor of the company against a shareholder, though the general practice here is to proceed by activity, of a sci. fa. is in fact an action. Greatkin v. Harrison, 36 U. C. R. 478.

Demurrer — Remedy—Practice.]—Where to a declaration against a shareholder of a joint stock company for the recovery against him, to the amount of his unpaid stock, of an unsatisfied judgment against the company, he demurred on the ground that an action on the case, and not a sci. fa., was the proper remedy:—Held, that the point was one of practice, and not of pleading, and was not, therefore, open on demurrer. Page v. Austin, 26 C. P. 110.

Fraud in Obtaining Judgment.]-The court refused to set aside a judgment obtained against a company for a valid claim, at the instance of a shareholder against whom a sci. fa. upon it had been issued, there being no proof of fraud or collusion between the plaintiff and the company in the obtaining such judgment. English v. Rent Guarantee Co., 7 P. R. 108.

Winding-up Act—Effect of.]—There is nothing in the Winding-up Act, R. S. C. c. 129, which makes it a bar, either expressly or by implication, to an action of scire facias, brought by a creditor of the company without the leave of the court against a contributory. Difference between the Imperial Companies Act, 1862, and the Winding-up Act of Canada pointed out. Shaver v. Cotton, 27 O. R.

III. REPEAL OF LETTERS PATENT.

Declaration-Particulars.]-The effect of C. S. C. c. 34, s. 20, s.-s. 2, enacting that the proceedings on a writ of sci. fa. to repeal a patent shall be "according to the law and patient snail be "according to the law and practice of the court of Queen's bench in Eng-land," is to introduce the Imperial Act 15 & 16 Vict. c. 83:—Held, therefore, that leave to deliver particulars of the breaches, which should have been delivered with the declaration, could only be granted as if the declara-tion were delivered de novo; and that, as the jury had been sworn, and this, therefore, could not be done, a verdict was properly directed for defendant. The court, however, upon affidavit, allowed the plaintiff to deliver par-ticulars, on terms. The Queen v. Hall, 27 U. C. R. 146.

Fiat—Attorney-General.]—A sci. fa. to set aside a patent was issued at the instance of aside a patent was issued at the instance of a private relator, without the flat of either the attorney-general for the Dominion or On-tario having been first obtained:—Held, (1) that a flat was necessary. (2) That the at-torney-general for Ontario was the proper authority to grant it. The Queen v. Pattee, 5

Right to-Mistake-Concealment-Quebec Law-Crown Dues-Tender.]-A sale of land subject to the right of redemption, (vente & réméré) transfers the title in the lands to the purchaser in the same manner as a simple contract of sale. Salvas v. Vassal, 27 S. C. R. 68, followed. The locatee of certain Crown lands sold his rights therein to B., reserving iands soid his rights therein to B., reserving the right to redeem the same within nine years, and subsequently sold the same rights to M., subject to the first deed. These deeds were both registered in their proper order in the registry office for the division and in the Crown lands office at Quebec. M., paid the balance of Crown dues remaining unpaid upon the land, and made an application for latters. the land, and made an application for letters patent of grant thereof, in which no mention was made of the former sale by the original locatee. In an action by scire facias for the annulment of the letters patent granted to M.:

à réméré in the application for the letters patent was a misrepresentation and concealment which entitled the Crown to have the grant declared void and the letters patent annulled as having been issued by mistake and in ignorance of a material fact, notwithstanding the registration of the first deed in the Crown land office. Fonseca v. Attorney-General for Canada, 17 S. C. R. 612, referred to, Held, further, that it is not necessary that such an action should be preceded or accompanied by tender or deposit of the dues paid to the Crown in order to obtain the issue of the letters patent. The Queen v. Montming, 29 S. C. R. 484.

Repeal of Ferry License—Grant of Rights Interfering with.] — See Brigham v. The Queen, 6 Ex. C. R. 414, 30 S. C. R. 620.

Trial—Right to Begin.]—Under the general order of the exchequer court of Canada, bearing date the 5th December, 1892, and the provisions of s. 41 of 15 & 16 Viet, c. 83 (Imp.), the defendant in an action of scire facias to repeal a patent for invention is entitled to begin and give evidence in support of his patent, and, if the plaintiff produces evidence to impeach the same, the defendant is entitled to reply. The Queen v. La Force, 4 Ex. C. R. 14.

IV. REVIVAL OF JUDGMENTS AND OF ACTIONS AFTER JUDGMENT.

1. Death of Parties after Judgment,

Defendant—Execution.]—The death of a defendant, after the placing of an execution in the sheriffs hands, does not make it necessary to revive the judgment against his executors and administrators, to make valid the seizure, under the writ, of goods which were owned by defendant at the time of his death. Turner v. Patterson, 13 C. P. 412.

Plaintiff—Appeal.]—The court will not allow the revival of a judgment by an administrator pending an appeal to the court of the governor in council or the King and privy council, although it be suggested and proved by affidavit that the administrator has been informed and believes the plaintiff in the court below, in whose favour the judgment was given, died after the judgment and before the allowance of appeal. Washburn v. Powell, 2 O. S. 463.

Motion to Set aside Execution-Irregularity. 1-After judgment pronounced by the court upon default of defence the plaintiff died, and the defendant, desiring to have the judgment set aside and be let in to defend, issued a præcipe order under rule 622 reviving the action in the name of the executor of the plaintiff's will. Upon motion to set this order aside :—Held, that rule 622 should be read as applicable to a case in which final judgment has been entered; and, as it was necessary that the defendant should be allowed to carry on the proceedings, the order should be sustained. Arnison v. Smith, 40 Ch. D. 557, distinguished. Curtis v. Sheffield, 20 Ch. D. 398, and Twycross v. Grant, 4 C. P. D. 40, follows lowed. After the death of the plaintiff, and before the order of revivor, the solicitor who had acted for her issued a writ of hab. fac. poss, upon the judgment without the leave required by rule 886:—Held, that the writ was irregular; and it was competent for the party affected by it to apply to set it aside without first reviving the action. Chambers v. Kitchen, 16 P. R. 219. Affirmed, 17 P. R. 3.

2. Executors-Sci. Fa. against.

Form of Sci. Fa .- Paument -- Judament .1 Sci. fa. on a judgment alleged to have been recovered against defendant, executrix, &c., (not as executrix) for £250. Plea, payment. Defendant proved payment to about £130. An account was produced by the plaintiff, shewing due at testator's death £76 7s. 4d. This was carried forward, and the account continued for some time against defendant, leaving a balance due altogether of £196 12s, 1d. Defendant contended that, as the payments proved exceeded the amount due by testator at his death, she was entitled to a verdict:— Held, that the statement in the sci. fa, did not amount to an allegation that defendant was sued in her representative character, the word executrix being mere description; and that the plaintiff was therefore entitled to a verdict on the issue, only half the amount of the judgment having been proved to be paid. Semble, that on such issue the plaintiff should have taken a verdict merely that the judgment was unsatisfied, not for any specific sum; and that a verdict so taken would not prevent defend-ant from obtaining relief if the execution on the judgment should be indorsed for more than the sum due. Caughill v. Teal, 12 U. C. R. 619.

Judgment of Assets Quando-Lands.] A sci. fa. upon a judgment of assets quando acciderint must not pray execution of assets generally, but only of such assets as have come to the executor's or administrator's hands since the recovery of the judgment. A sci. fa. on a judgment against defendant as executrix under the will of C., deceased, alleged that lands as well as goods and chattels had come to the defendant's hands as such executrix to be administered, and prayed execution thereon :- Held, that the lands of which the testator died seised did not become assets in the hands of the executrix to be administered; and, there being no evidence of any goods and chattels having so come to the defendant's hands as such executrix, a verdict was entered for the defendant. The court in-timated that the plaintiffs could obtain execu-tion against the lands in the ordinary way. Consolidated Bank of Canada v, Cameron, 29 C. P. 71.

3. Necessity and Possibility of Revivor—Life of Judgment,

Lapse of One Year—Execution.]—The court refused to set aside upon motion a ca. sa, issued upon a judgment proor that a year old without set, fa, the review it. The ca. was clearly irregular, yet not void, but voidable, and the proper remedy would seem to be a writ of error. McNally v. Stephens, Tay. 263.

It is irregular to issue a ca. sa. upon a judgment more than a year old, even though a fi. fa. has been issued within the year, but not returned, without a sci. fa. Sevedl v. Thompson, E. T. 3 Vict.; Wilson v. Jamieson, 6 O. S. 481

Upon the old law (before 29 Vict. c. 57, s. 10), it was sufficient to issue a writ of execution within a year from the entry of judgment, and it was unnecessary to return and file it within that time. Hall v. Boulton, 9 L. J. 213.

Lapse of Six Years — Execution.]—A writ of execution may be sued out at any time within six years from judgment without a revivor, and if during the six years it is sued out, returned, and filed, the same consequences follow as if, under the old practice, a writ had been sued out within a year and a day and returned and filed—that is, such writ will support a subsequent writ issued after that period without a sci. fa. or revivor. Jenkins v. Kerby, 2 C. L. J. 164.

Where the writ was issued within one year after entry of judgment, an alias writ issued more than six years thereafter, is regular without reviving the judgment. Johnson v. Mc-Kenna, 3 P. R. 229.

Lapse of Ten Years—Lien on Lond,]—A writ of revivor or suggestion entered upon the roll is a "proceeding," and a judgment is to the lapton of the roll is a "proceeding," and a judgment is to the roll of the rol Held, reversing the judgment in 28 C. P. 506, that s. 11 of 38 Vict. c. 16 (6.) does not apply to judgments, and an action may still be brought thereon within twenty years under C. S. U. C. c. 78, s. 7. Boice v. G Loune, 3 A. R. 167.

The plaintiff recovered judgment against the defendants on the 3rd November, 1848; and the last execution issued thereon was returned in September, 1885. More than twenty years afterwards the plaintiff moved for leave to issue execution against the surviving defendant, but no evidence was given of any part payment on account of the judgment or acknowledgment of liability thereon within that period:—Held, that, if the motion was necessary, it had been rightly refused. Quere, whether it was necessary to obtain leave to issue execution upon or to revive the judgment, execution having been in fact issued and returned within six years from its recovery. Allan v. McTavish, 2 A. R. 278, and Boice v. O'Loane, 3 A. R. 167, commented on. McMahon v. Spencer, 13 A. R. 430.

Judgment was recovered in 1856. On the 23rd October, 1869, an order was made by a Judge in chambers to revive by entering a suggestion on the roll under the C. L. P. Act, and the suggestion was entered on the 22nd January, 1870, but no execution issued after that date. On the 6th December, 1884, an order was made under rule 356, O. J. Act, for leave to the plaintiff to issue execution:—Held, that the entry of a suggestion under the C. L. P. Act was a judgment of the court and gave a new starting point for the Statute of Limitations to run from, and that the period of limitation in the case of judgments in personal actions is twenty years under R. S. O. 1877 c. 128, which relates to judgments.

4. Other Cases.

Assignee.]—Since the passing of 35 Vict. c. 12, s. 1 (O.) (R. S. O. 1877 c. 116) the assignee of a judgment is entitled to revet the same in his own name by entering a suggestion on the roll. Philips v. Fox. 8 P. R. 51.

Decree for Sale of Land — Registered Judgment.]—Where under a decree for sale founded on a registered judgment certain lands were sold, and several years afterwards other lands affected by the judgment having been discovered, were ordered to be sold:—Held, that it was not necessary under such circumstances to revive the suit. Dickey v. Heron, 2 Ch. Ch. 490.

Heir—Sci. Fa. against.]—A sci. fa. will not issue against an heir under 5 Geo. II., although an execution may have issued against the goods and chattels in the hands of the administrator and been returned nulla bona. Paterson v. McKay, Tay. 43.

— Judgment against—Sale—Title.]—
A judgment on sci. fa. against B., the heir of the deceased owner of the land, and a fi. fa.
thereon, awarding the sale of lands of which the deceased was seised on a specified day, previous to which he had died, will not sustain a purchase and a sheriff's deed under such judgment, and the fi. fa. gives no title. Varey v.
Muirhead, Dra. 48:6.

Husband and Wife—Judgment against Maronan before Marriage—Procedury. |—The plaintiff proceeded by writ of revivor to obtain execution against husband and wife on a judgment recovered against the latter before marriage. The declaration set out the writ, in which the judgment was stated, and prayed execution against both defendants upon it; and defendants demurred, on the ground that no legal right of action was shewn against them, and that the proceeding by writ of revivor was not applicable:—Held, that under the C. L. P. Act, s. 143, the proceeding was proper, and that the right of action need not be shewn, but only a right primā facie to have execution on the judgment. Section 18 of C. S. U. C. c. 73 applies only to cases where judgment has not been obtained against the woman before marriage. Aglesworth v. Patterson, 21 U. C. R. 269.

Joint Judgment—Proceeding on.]—In an action against the executors of W. on a judgment obtained against F. as sheriff. and A. and W. as sureties for the sheriff:—Held, that the judgment obtained against two or more was joint; that a judgment recovered against two or more defendants does not render them joint contractors within C. S. U. C. c. 78, s. 6; and that the action could not be maintained against the sureties as survivors, the plaintiff's remedy being by review or suggestion under C. S. U. C. c. 22, s. 312. Galchrist v. Weller, 14 C. P. 404.

Writ of Revivor—Irregularity.]—Where a virt of revivor did not comply with the C. L. P. Act. 1886, s. 205, in stating by way of recital the reason why the writ had become necessary, the writ was set aside. Gallusia v. Butler, 3 L. J. 108.

V. REVIVAL OF PENDING ACTIONS.

1. Assignment or Change of Interest.

Assignment of Cause of Action.]—An order of revivor was obtained in this cause on the ground that the sole plaintiff had assigned all his interest, &c., to one Close. The plaintiff applied to the court by petition to set aside the order, disputing the assignment on the allegation of which the order was obtained, The order of revivor was discharged with costs. Fisken v. Incc. S P. R. 147.

Ejectment-Conveyance Pendente Liteof Time-Agreement of Solicitors.] In 1867 an action of ejectment was brought by L., and notice of trial given and the case entered for trial for 15th October following. entered for trial for 15th October following. The trial was postponed, and on 21st October L. conveyed the lands to I. On 8th January, 1871. L. died, and on 14th May, 1886, I. conveyed to the plaintiff. In February, 1892, an ex parte order under rule 620 was obtained by the plaintiff from the local registrar, reviving the action in the plaintiff's name. It appeared that in January, 1872, the then plaintiff's solicitors had notified the defendant's solicitors of the plaintiff's intention of revivsolicitors of the plaintiff's intention of reviing the action, and they gave notice of trial for the ensuing assizes, whereupon it was agreed between the solicitors that on the then plaintiff's solicitors refraining from reviving and proceeding to trial, the defendant's solicitors would abide by the result of another named suit, and if that result should be in favour of the plaintiff, an order of revivor might then issue and judgment be entered for might then issue and judgment be entered to the plaintiff;—Held, that the original action was governed by C. S. U. C. c. 27, s. 22, and terminated on the 21st October, 1867, when the plaintiff conveyed to I.; that after such a of time, the plaintiff's rights being barred by the Statute of Limitations, no order of revivor should have issued; and that the or revivor should have issued; and that the court would give no effect to the agreement made by the solicitor, for to do so would be an injustice to the client:—Held, by the court of appeal, affirming the judgment discharging the order of revivor, that the action was governed by C. S. U. C. c. 27, and that it came to an end as soon as the conveyance to the present plaintiff's predecessor in title was made, except perhaps as to costs, for which the original plaintiff might probably have pro-ceeded. Lemesurier v. Macaulay, 22 O. R. 316, 20 A. R. 421.

Conveyance Pendente Lite.]—Rules 383, 384, and 385, Ontario Judicature Act, ISSI, which relate to the transmission of interest pendente lite, and permit the continuance of an action by or against the person to or upon whom the estate or title has come or devolved, are applicable to an action of ejectment begun before the Act, when the conveyance of the land by the original plaintiff did not take place until after its passing. Irvine v. Macculay, 16 P. R. 181.

Promissory Note — Transfer Pendente Lite — Substituting Plaintiff — Stay of Procccdings.] — It may, in rare cases, such as Chambers v. Kitchen, 16 P. R. 219, be "necessary and desirable" under rule 396 to add or substitute a person as plaintiff, without the consent required by rule 206; (3), upon the application of the opposite party; but where it becomes necessary to substitute a person as plaintiff without his consent, to prevent injustice, he should not be exposed, without some further action on his part or adoption by him of the position into which he is forced, to any liability for damages or costs. Under the circumstances of this case, the fact that F. had become, pendente lite, the transferee of the promissory note sued on, did not entitle the defendants to an order substituting him as plaintiff and making him liable for the costs of the action. But the original plaintiff could not be allowed to prosecute the action further, because he had no longer any interest in it, and F. could not be allowed to do so because he had not caused himself to be substituted as a plaintiff, nor obtained leave to proceed in his own name upon the judgment proceedings in the action should, therefore, be stayed, but without costs. Murray v. Wurtete, 19 P. R. 288.

See Merchants Bank v. Monteith, 10 P. R. 467.

Death of Parties, (a) Of Defendant.

Carrier—Survival of Cause of Action.]—Plaintiff sued defendant, owner of a steamer carrying passengers for hire, charging that plaintiff was received by defendant as a passenger from T. to N., for safe carriage, for reward, but defendant did not safely carry plaintiff, who was in consequence seriously injured, &c. There was a second count charging it to have been defendant's duty to stop at the wharf at N., and to provide safe and proper gangways, but that defendant refused to stop to enable plaintiff to land, in safety, and neglected to provide a safe gangway or plaintiff, in landing at said wharf, was thrown down and injured, &c. After the commencement of the action defendant indeed, and plaintiff, in landing at said wharf, was thrown down and injured, &c. After the commencement of the action defendant died, and plaintiff entered a suggestion on the record:—Held, that the action died with defendant, and could not be revived against his executor. Cameron v. Milloy, 22 G. P. 331.

Continuation against Executor de son Tort.]—An action commenced against an intestate may, under the C. L. P. Act, s. 134, be revived and continued against his executors de son tort. This question cannot be raised under a plea of ne unques executor. Keena v. O'Hara, 16 C. P. 435.

Dower—Devisee—Procedure.]—A plaintiff in an action for dower recovered judgment, but before the execution of the writ of assignment of dower, and after its issue, the tenant of the freehold died, having devised the land in question to the present defendant:—Held, that the plaintiff must proceed against the devisee by scire facias, and not by suggestion or revivor. Davis v. Dennison, 8 P. R. 7.

Order of Revivor—Notice of Trial.]— The original defendant dying pendente lite, the h as 396 ntiff. irty: t, to osed.

plaintiffs issued an order of revivor on the 22nd April, and served it on the defendants by 22nd April, and served it on the defendants by order on the same day, and along with it a notice of trial for the 5th May, at Cornwall. The defendant moved to set aside the notice of trial as irregular:—Held, that the order of revivor was in force from its service, and as it would be confirmed by the lapse of twelve days upon the 4th May, the notice of trial for the 5th May was regular. New York Piano Co. v. Stevenson, 10 P. R. 270.

See Ross v. Pomeroy, 28 Gr. 435; Lince v. Faircloth, 11 C. L. T. Occ. N. 49.

(b) Of Garnishee.

Execution. | - There is no power in the court or a Judge to order or permit a sugges-tion to be entered of the death of a garnishee, so as to legalize execution against his execu-tors or administrators. Ward v. Vance, 3 P. R. 323.

(c) Of Plaintiff.

Between Award and Judgment.] — When a plaintiff, in whose favour an award is, dies after the award, but before judgment, the suit does not abate, but judgment may be entered under 17 Car. II. c. 8. No execution, however, can issue in the name of the plain-tiff's executor without reviving the judgment. Proctor v. Jarvis, 15 U. C. R. 187.

Between Verdict and Judgment—Assignment of Verdict — Assignce — Tort—Appeal.]-In an action for malicious prosecution poal. —In an action for malicious prosecution the jury found a general verdiet for the plain-tiff with damages. The defendant moved to set aside the verdict, &c., and his motion be-ing dismissed, gave security for the purpose of an appeal, after which the plaintiff assigned "the verdict or judgment" to his daughter, and died about three months later. No judg-ment had been entered, nor was there any order or direction of the Judge for the entry of judgment. By an exparte order, made on of judgment. By an ex parte order, made on the application of the next friend of the plain-tiff's daughter, after his death, the assignment to her was recited, and it was ordered that the action should stand revived in her name: -Held, that the action could not be revived or continued by or against the daughter, she not being the assigne of a judgment, and the cause of action not being one capable of being assigned the review of the cause of action to being one capable of being the cause of action to be not being one capable. cause of action not being one capable of being assigned to her so as to sue for it in her own name; and the defendant's appeal could not be heard in the absence of the legal personal representative of the plaintiff. Semble, the assignee of a judgment debt may obtain an order to enter a suggestion reviving the action for the purpose of issuing execution in his own name. Philips v. Fox, 8 P. R. 51, re-ferred to. Where a verdict only is taken at the trial, and the Judge does not pronounce judgment or direct findings of fact to be entered, a motion for judgment is necessary. Wellbanks v. Conger, 12 P. R. 354, referred to. Blair v. Asselstine, 15 P. R. 211.

Practice - Delay in Prosecution of Action.]-A statute passed in 1889 gave persons making certain claims a right to bring an ac-tion within a year. The plaintiffs brought such an action within the year, but did not proceed with it, and no proceeding was taken by either party, after the delivery of the defence in June, 1890, until, one of the plaintiffs tence in June, 1805, until one of the passacraph having died in January, 1895, the action was revived in February, 1896, by a pracipe order. In the meantime changes had taken place in the interests of the parties:—Held, that the order should not be interfered with. The old order should not be interfered with. The old practice had been superseded, and the defendants, not having moved to dismiss, were not entitled to complain of the action being revived. Ardagh v. County of York, 17 P. R. 184

- Suggestion-Motion.]-Leave to enter a suggestion of the death of plaintiff and proceed under s. 210 of the C. L. P. Act, 1856, will be granted upon an ex parte application, upon an affidavit shewing the nature and state of the action, and that the party applying is plaintiff's legal representative. Reischmuller v. Uberhorst, 3 L. J. 48.

Survival of Cause of Action - Covenant.]—S. P. brought an action for damages sustained and to be sustained by reason of sustained and to be sustained by reason of breaches of covenants for title in a con-veyance of certain lands to him, and before the trial died intestate, whereupon his administratrix took out an order of revivor, which order was now sought to be set aside on the ground that the right of action did not survive to her:—Held, that for dam-ages which accrued during the lifetime of S. P., his administratrix was entitled to sue: but that this was not so as to damages which might have accrued since his death, for which, semble, the heir, or devisee, might bring an action. In the case of such covefor which, semine, the heir, or devisee, might bring an action. In the case of such cove-nants running with the land, where only a formal breach takes place in the life of the ancestor, the remedy for damages accruing after his death passes to the heir or devisee; but where not only the breach took place, but damages accrued in the lifetime of the ancestor, the remedy for these damages passes to the personal representative. - Tort-Appeal.]-An action for injury to the person now survives to the execu-tor of the plaintiff, who can, in case of his death pendente lite, on entering a suggestion of the death and obtaining an order of revivor, continue the action. Mason v. Town vivor, continue the action. M of Peterborough, 20 A. R. 683.

(d) Of Plaintiff's Lessor.

Ejectment.]—In ejectment under the old form, where the lessor of the plaintiff died before the trial:—Held, that no sci. fa. was necessary, but that judgment might be entered, and a writ of possession obtained. Doe d. Hay v. Hunt, 12 U. C. R. 625.

VI. REVIVAL OF PENDING PROCEEDINGS IN EQUITY.

(See also ante V.)

Acquisition of Interest-Application to Amend.]—An application to amend after decree, under order 438, by adding a party interested in the equity of redemption, need not be on petition, but is properly made on mo-tion. Where such a motion was opposed on the ground of irregularity, as not being by petition, the costs of opposing it were refused. Harrison v. Grier, 2 Ch. Ch. 440.

Acquisition of Interest before Suit.]
—Persons who acquired an interest in the subject of the suit before the suit was commenced, cannot be made parties by an order of revivor. McKenzie v. McDonnel, 15 Gr. 442.

Assignment.]—An order of revivor is the appropriate proceeding in all cases of assignment pendente lite. Matthews v. Mears, 21 Gr. 99.

Where an order to revice is obtained to add a party who is an assignee of the defendant, it is not necessary to describe him in the order as assignee. Brigham v. Smith, 2 Ch. Ch. 257.

Death—Amendment.]—When any of the parties to a suit dies, and it is necessary to bring the representatives of such decased party before the court, an order to amend the bill for that purpose will be granted. Smith v. Mercelith, 2 Gr. 631.

Death of Defendant—Amendment—Notice of Motion.]—When a defendant died, and the plaintiff desired to amend by way of revivor, pursuant to s. 15 of the 9th general order, the court intimated that the proper mode of proceeding was to serve notice of motion to amend upon the person intended to be brought before the court by the amendment. Goodere v, Manners, 4 Gr. 101.

— Amendment — Infants—Guardian.]
—When it becomes necessary to revive by way of amendment against infant defendants, the proper course is to amend simply in the first instance by making the infants parties. After that has been done, if the infants fail to have a guardian appointed, the plaintiff may apply under order 13 to have a solicitor appointed guardian, and in either case the plaintiff will be in a position to move that the suit do stand revived. Kirkpatrick, Fouguette, 4 Gr. 540,

Before Service of Bill.]—If a sole defendant die before the bill is served upon him, there is no suit in court: the plaintiff, therefore, cannot revive, and if he take out an order to revive under such circumstances, it will be discharged with costs. Watson v. Ham, 1 Ch. Ch. 295.

Decree—Confirmation.] — A decree having been obtained after the decease of the original defendant, and before revivor, leave was obtained to serve an order of revivor by publication; and leave was afterwards obtained to serve by publication a notice of motion to confirm the decree or substitute a new decree. McTaggart v, Merrill, 7 P. R. 405.

Demurrer—Amendment—Notice.]—
A plaintiff submitted to a demurrer and obtained an order to amend, by which he was required to make the amendments within four-teen days. This he failed to do, but took out exparte and served an order of revivor, the demurring defendant having died after the expiration of the fourteen days:—Held, that by his failure to amend within the time limited, the plaintiff's right to amend was gone, unless by a special application he obtained an order enlarging the time. Held, also, that the plaintiff was not warranted without notice to the defendant in taking any further steps in the cause before making the amendments for which in the first place the bill was preserved, and be could not, therefore, issue an ex parte order of revivor. Carr v. Moffat, 9 C. L. J. 52.

Infants—Defence,]—Where infants have been made parties by revivor, they cannot set up a defence which their ancestor had not set up, except when such ancestor has been prevented by fraud or mistake from pleading such defence; and all the more particularly where the deceased defendant has been guilty of gross laches. Burke v. Pyne, 2 Ch. Ch. 193.

Joint Executor—Abatement.]—During the progress of an administration suit, and after the master had made his report charging the executors jointly with receipt of assets of the estate, one of them died, and the plaintiff by way of revivor made his personal representative a party. A motion to discharge the order of revivor on the ground that no abatement had taken place, was refused with costs. Clousten v. McLean, 14 Gr. 261.

Joint Executor—Motion to Compel.
Revivor.]—Bill against two executors and others. One of the executors ided. A motion by the surviving defendants, ided in the executivity of the deceased defendants, to compel plaintiff to revive, or in default dismissal, was refused:—Held, that the proper parties to move were the representatives of deceased defendant, and that the surviving defendants might move to dismiss for want of prosecution in the usual way. Watson v. Watson, 6 P. R. 229.

Widow—Motion to Discharge Order of Revivor.]—Where, after a defendant's lands were seized under a writ of sequestration, the defendant died intestate, it was held that his widow was not a proper party to the order to revive. A motion to discharge an order to revive cannot, without leave of the court, be made after fourteen days from the service of the order; and mere service of notice within the fourteen days is not a sufficient compliance with G. O. 339. The notice of motion in such a case need not set forth the previous proceedings. Harris v. Meyers, 16 Gr. 117.

Death of Plaintiff—Decree—Alimony.]—After a decree, which had the effect of creating an interest in the lands of the defendant in favour of the plaintiff as also of their infant children, had been pronounced in an alimony suit, the plaintiff died, whereupon the suit was revived in the name of the infants, and subsequently the defendant died:—Held, under these circumstances, that the executor of defendant had no right to object to the solicitor of the plaintiff reviving in his own name against the estate of defendant, making the infants defendants instead of plaintiffs, in order to recover his costs. Elecet v. Elecet, 26 Gr. 448.

— Decree — Infants — Guardian.] — Where the plaintiff in a redemption suit died before the decree pronounced had been drawn up, leaving infants his real representatives:— Held, that before an application to revive could be made, the decree must be drawn up, and a guardian ad litem appointed. Beamish v. Pomeroy, 1 Ch. Ch. 32.

Improper Order of Revivor-Delay in Moving against.]—The defendants, though aware that A. had no interest in the matters in question, made him a party plaintiff, by order of revivor obtained on præcipe. A. was then and for some time afterwards under the belief that he had been made a party properly; and even after he found out that he had been made a party improperly, he did not petition to have the order of revivor set aside as against him, till he found that he was pre-judiced by it. The court granted the appli-cation, on his paying the costs of the petition and any costs incurred by his having been made a party. Smith v. Gunn, 2 Ch. Ch. 230.

Insolvency of Defendant — Assignee -Service.]—Where a defendant becomes insolvent after the service of the bill upon him, but before the time for answering expires, and the suit is thereupon revived against the assignee, it is necessary to serve the assignee with the bill as well as with the order to revive, or an order pro confesso cannot be obtained. Smith v. Lines, 1 Ch. Ch. 398.

Motion to Discharge Order of Revivor.]—An application to set aside an order to revive for irregularity is properly intituled in the abated suit, but if it be made upon any other ground the style of the cause as revived should be used. An application to set aside an order of revivor should be made to the court and not in chambers. Nicholson v. Peile, 2 Beav, 497, not followed. Carr v. Moffat, 9 C. L. J. 52.

I. ACTION FOR.

1. Costs.

Demurrer - Small Verdict.]-A declaraplaintiff's daughter, and another for necessaries supplied for the child. Plea, not guilty to first count: demurrer to second. The usue in the count of the second the plaintiff or 5s. Judgment was afterwards given for plaintiff on the demurrer, whereupon the plaintiff emitted on the roll all damages, without excepting costs, under the second count, and signed judgment for the 5s, and full costs taxed. On a summons for revision:—Held, that the plaintiff was entitled to the costs of demurrer to the second count, although it would have been more correct to have excepted the costs in the remittiur. An action of seduction may, under some circumstances, be brought "to try a right," or the grievance complained of may be "wilful and malicious;" and therefore, on a verdict under 8s, without a certificate, the plaintiff was held not entitled, under the C. L. P. Act, s. 324, to any costs whatever; but, as the statute is confined to a verdict or assessment, he was entitled to full costs of demurrer. Townsond v. Sterling, 4 P. R. 125.

Successful Party Deprived of Costs—Good Cause,]—In an action for seduction it appeared that the wrong complained of was partly attributable to the culpable conduct of the girl's parents, and the jury gave a verdict for the defendant, but declared that they desired him not to get the costs, whereupon judgment was directed to be entered for him without costs:—Held, that good cause was shewn why costs should not be given to the defendant within rule 428, which declares that where an action is tried by a jury the costs shall follow the event, unless upon application made at the trial, for good cause shewn, the Judge or court shall otherwise order. Wamsley v. Mitchell, 5 O. R. 427.

3. Evidence.

Admissions of Defendant — Death of Plaintiff's Daughter.]—In an action of seduction the only evidence was that of the plaintiff, the father of the seduced girl, and the defendant, the girl having died shortly after the birth of the child. The plaintiff stated that the defendant had admitted that he had seduced the girl, and asked what the case could be settled for. The defendant denied that he was the father of the child, or that he had made any such admission; and said that he had heard L spoken of as the father of the child. He admitted having asked what the case could be settled for, but that he did so because he heard the plaintiff was asking $1.000, and he wished to know what it could be settled for; that he did not do so with a view to any one but merely out of curiosity. The jury found for the plaintiff with $750: —Held, that there was sufficient evidence to go to the jury in support of the plaintiff's case; and that the damages, under the circumstances, were not excessive. Palmby v. Mc-Cleary, 12 O. R. 192.

Affidavit.]—In an action by a father for the seduction of his daughter while she was living with a third person, it is not necessary to prove that an affidavit of the seduction was made and filed according to 7 Wm. IV. c. 8, s. 4. Gill v. Broven, 6 O. S. 142.

Disclosing Felony — Rape.] — Case for seduction will lie to recover damages arising from subsequent connexion, though the evidence strongly tend to shew that defendant had in the first instance committed a rape on the girl. Hayle v. Hayle, 3 O. S. 295.

An action for seduction will not lie, where the defendant has had connexion with the seduced against her will. Vincent v. Sprague, 3 U. C. R. 283.

Whenever, in an action for seduction, it turns out upon the trial that the act complained of was a felony, the Judge must first an acquittal. Held, however, thus in this case, the evidence being considered unsatisfactory, the Judge was justified in not directing a verdict for defendant, Brown v. Dalby, if Held, following the last case, that defendant cannot move against a verdict for plaintiff, as contrary to law and evidence, on the ground that the evidence shewed a rape. In such case, if the plaintiff refuses to be nonsuited, the Judge should discharge the jury until the criminal defence has been disposed of. Walsh v. Nattrass, 19 C. P. 453.

Held, following the last case, that where in an action of seduction, the evidence of the witness shews that a rape was committed upon her, it is the duty of the Judge, in the interest of public justice, to stop the case, and not leave it to the jury, with a direction to find for defendant if in their opinion it was rape; and this even where the Judge himself is not clear that a rape has been committed; but that defendant cannot set aside the verdict for misdirection in this respect, as this will only be done in the interests of public justice. Williams v. Robinson, 20 C. P. 255. See Cole v. Hubble, 26 O. R. 279, post II.

Discovery—Particulars — Examination.]
—The plaintiff in an action of seduction was examined for discovery by the defendant, but was able to give very little information:—Held, nevertheless, that the defendant was not entitled to examine the plaintiff's daughter. The defendant having made an affidavit denying the seduction and all knowledge of it, an order was made for particulars of specific acts, with regard to which the plaintiff proposed to give evidence. Turner v. Kyle, 2 C. L. T. 598, 18 C. L. J. 402, explained. Hollister v. Annable, 14 P. R. 11.

— Particulars.]—Where the defendant in an action of seduction denies the seduction on oath, the plaintif will be required to furnish particulars of the times and places at which it is charged that the alleged seduction took place. Hollister v. Annable. 14 P. R. 11, approved. Mason v. Vanicamp, 14 P. R. 206.

Incompetent Witness—Deficiency of Intellect.—In an action of seduction the plaintiff obtained a verdict, and judgment was directed to be entered in his favour. At the next sittings of a divisional court an order nist was obtained to set aside the verdict and judgment, and to enter judgment for the Means of Defendant.]—Held, following Hodsoll v. Taylor, L. R. 9 Q. B. 79, that in an action for seduction evidence as to defendant's means is inadmissible: and that, evidence of the kind having been received, defendant was not to be prejudiced in his application for a new trial because his counsel had, after having done his best to exclude the evidence, examined defendant on the same subject with a view to disproving the estimate placed on his means. Ferguson v. Vetich, 45 U. C. R. 100.

Paternity of Child.]—The plaintiff must prove the defendant to have been the father of the child; mere proof of seduction by him will not be sufficient. Kimball v. Smith, 5 U. C. R. 32.

Loss of Service.]—In an action for the seduction of plantiff's daupther, it appeared by her evidence that defendant had had intercourse with her in January, and up to June, 1860, but that she married one C. in October, 1860, but that she married was born on the 11th February, 1861. The plaintiff having obtained a verdict:—Held, that the child having been born in lawful wedlock, the mother's evidence was inadmissible to prove it illegitimate; and a new trial was granted. Ryan v. Miller, 21 U. C. R. 202.

I. C. R. 202. At a second trial the fact that defendant was the father of the child was attempted to be proved by his admissions, and the jury again found for the plaintiff:—Held, that the verdict was not supported by the admissions stated in the case; and semble, that no evidence could be received to rebut the presumption of legitimacy. Quere, whether, if a clear loss of service before the marriage had been shewn, the plaintiff could recover for it. S. C., 22 U. C. R. 87.

Where an unmarried woman is seduced and pregnancy follows, or sickness which weakens or renders her less able to work or serve, the father's cause of action is complete, and cannot be divested by the subsequent marriage of his daughter before the birth of a child. The facts of seduction, pregnancy, and illness entire the proved by the daughter, but she cause of her pregnancy if she asserted that the child she bore was born in wedlock. Where the daughter was married during her pregnancy consequent upon her seduction by the defendant, and her child was born in wedlock, and the action was brought at the instigation of the husband, he and his wife being the only witnesses, and no proof of sickness or inability to serve was given:—Held, here is the content of the serve was given:—Held, here is the content of t that a nonsuit was properly entered. Evans v. Watt, 2 O. R. 166.

— Seduction of Married Woman.]—In an action for the seduction of a married woman the non-access of her husband, and her seduction by the defendant, may be proved by her own evidence. Evans v. Watt. 2 O. R. 166, considered. Mulligan v. Thompson, 23 O. R. 54.

Pecuniary Loss.] — The statute 7 Wm. IV. c. S. C. S. U. C. c. 77, does not dispense with evidence of a pecuniary loss or damage, such as was required before the Act. Westactt v, Poucl. 2 E. & A. 525.

Previous Want of Chastity.]—Where the female seduced has denied on her examination that she had intercourse with others besides the defendant, the defendant can only shew in answer that to the knowledge of his witnesses that statement was not true; he cannot be permitted to ask them whether they themselves had connexion with her. Mc-Mahon v. Skinner, 2 U. C. R. 272.

In an action for seduction witnesses called for the defence testified to having had connexion with the girl. The jury were told that these witnesses had a right to refuse to answer such questions: — Held, a misdirection. Held, also, that evidence of the girl's general bad character for chastity was improperly rejected. The defendant, being called, wholly denied the charge, and the jury having found for the plaintiff, though the verdict was not large, a new trial was granted without costs, on the ground that the defendant might have been prejudiced by the misdirection and rejection of evidence. McCreary v. Grundy, 39 U. C. R. 316.

Proof of Service.]—When the seduction took place, the girl seduced was living with her mother at the house of the plaintif, her step-father, and he was working at a distance from home, having separated from his wife, by whom he had children, but sending Semble, that if the case had depended in the family Semble, that if the case had depended for of service, it might have been presumed from this evidence. McIntoh v. Tyhurst, 23 U. C. R. 505. See also post 5.

4. New Trial.

Affidavit—Intercourse—Denial.] — New trial refused, defendant's affidavit not denying intercourse. Remarks upon the action generally. Snure v. Gilchrist, 23 U. C. R. Sl.

Affidavits.]—New trial granted to defendant in an action of seduction, on affidavits. McIlroy v. Hall, 25 U. C. R. 303.

Conflicting Testimony — Damages — Costs.]—New trial refused in an action for seduction, where there was much conflicting testimony, and the verdict was for £100; though the Judge who tried the cause was unfavourable to such verdict; but the rule for a new trial was discharged without costs, as the plaintiff had improperly written letters to the court on the subject of the suit. Thorpe v. Grier, 1 U. C. R. £28.

Connivance — Neglect — Excessive Damages.]—Where evidence had been given of connivance on the part of the plaintiff, the mother, and great negligence on the part of the father, and the jury gave £200 damages, the court granted a new trial. Beadstead v. Wyllie, Tay. 60.

Excessive Damages.]—The court refused a new trial for excessive damages, the verdict being for £200. Ross v. Merritt, 3 U. C. R. 60 — Action by Master.] — None of the special grounds for compensation which may be considered in the case of a parent apply in the case of a master or employer, but he is not restricted to his actual pecuniary loss; the damages recoverable must depend very much on the position in his household of the person seduced, &c.; and in this case, the verdict being for $500, the court refused to interfere for excessive damages. Ford v. Gourlay, 42 U. C. R. 552.

— Contradictory Evidence.]—In this case the evidence was directly contradictory. The plaintiff, a married man, was an engine driver, and the girl his servant. There were circumstances which, if the defendant was guilty, would tend to inflame the minds of the jury, and there was no particular evidence of defendant's circumstances. The jury found a vertlict of $2,000. The court refused to set aside the verdict as excessive. Fitzhenry v. Murphy, 14 C. L. J. 22.

Perverse Findings.]—In an action for the seduction of plaintiff's daughter, the daughter proved her seduction under a promise of marriage, her removal from her father's house, and concealment for a long period from her father. Certain letters to defendant were put in, which she at first admitted to be hers, but upon some indelicate mitted to be ners, but upon some memerate portions being read she at once denied that she wrote them. These letters contained an admission of intercourse with defendant's brother, exonerated defendant from blame, and denied any promise of marriage. It appeared that some of the letters had been sent by the daughter under cover to defend-ant's brother in the States, and by him re-mailed to defendant, but the brother was not called, though in court during part of the trial. Defendant in his evidence denied any promise of marriage, but admitted the seduc-The persons were all respectable and bed to the farming class. The jury having longed to the farming class. The jury having given $1,600 damages, defendant moved for a new trial on the ground of excessive damages, and on the ground that the finding of the jury that there was a promise of marriage, and that the letters were not genuine, was against law and evidence. No affidavit was filed, or new evidence suggested, and defendant declined to pay $1,000 into Court to abide the event of a new trial. Under these circumstances the court refused to interfere. Hope v. Davidson, 33 U. C. R. 550.

Gross Neglect.] — Gross neglect on the part of the parents, is held to be a good ground for a new trial for seduction. Hogle v. Ham, Tay, 248.

Misdirection—Indirect Damages.] — In an action (both varents being dead) brought by the brother of the girl seduced, who was living with him at the time of the seduction, under an agreement to remunerate her for her services, the court refused to set aside a verdict for the plaintiff, on the ground of misdirection in telling the jury that plaintiff was legally entitled to damages for distress of mind, injury to the feelings and reputation, and disgrace brought upon him, as standing in loco parentis. Paterson v. Wilcox, 20 C. P. 285

Prior False Charge — Contradiction — Damages.]—New trial granted on payment of costs, where the person seduced in giving her evidence declared that another person whom she had formerly charged with being the father of the child, had been so charged falsely by her, and that defendant was the father, and her evidence had been contradicted and shaken in many particulars; the amount of the verdict being considerable. Cane v. Reid, 2 C. P. 342.

Supprise — Character Evidence.] — The court refused a new trial where the jury had found for defendant on evidence clearly impeaching the character of the seduced, although alfidavits were produced that the plain-tiff could rebut such evidence, and would have been prepared to do so at the former trial had he had notice. Monk v. Casselman, 4 O. S. 336.

(a) Masters.

Time for Bringing Action.]—The statute 7 Wm. IV. c. 8 restrains the master of an unmarried female from suing for her seduction until six months have elapsed from the birth of the child, and it be first seen whether her father or mother within that time (not having abandoned her before her seduction) intend bringing the action. Whitfield v. Todd, 1 U. C. R. 223.

— Abatement of Parent's Action.] — Where the mother of the girl seduced sued within six months from the birth of the child: —Held, that by the statute the master's right of action was taken away, notwithstanding that the suit brought by the mother had abated owing to her death after verdict in her favour had been set aside, and before a new trial granted had taken place. Cross v. Goodman, 20 U. C. R. 242.

But she cannot, under C. S. U. C. c. 77, maintain the action, if the daughter while seduced was living with the defendant. Remarks as to the effect of the statute in attaining its object. Hicks v. Ross, 25 U. C. R. 50.

Before Birth of Child.]—Under 7 Wm. IV. c. 8, seduction followed by pregnancy entitles the parent, even before the birth of the child, and to the exclusion of any other person, to maintain an action, although the daughter had from tender years been living in the family of a stranger, and continued to reside there up to the time of bringing the aection. L'Esperance v, Duckene, 7 U. C. R. 146.

An action for the seduction of the plaintiff's daughter, may be maintained before the birth of the child. Westacott v. Powell, 2 E. & A. 525.

Death of Father after Seduction.]—
The plaintiff, a widow, sued the defendant for the seduction of A., her daughter. The seduction took place in October, 1861, during the lifetime of the plaintiff's husband, father of A., the daughter. On the 15th June, 1862, a child was borne by the daughter:—Held, that the action was not maintainable without proof of actual service, and, as the plaintiff, neither at the time of the seduction, nor subsequently when by her daughter being pregnant the right of action became complete, was entitled to her services, she could not be said to have lost those services by the misconduct of defendant. A nonsuit was therefore entered. Smart v. Hag, 12 C. P. 528.

In an action, after the death of the father, by the mother for the seduction of her daughter in the lifetime of the father, who was an invalid supported by the mother and daughter, no evidence of the actual relationship of mistress and servant was given:—Held, that the action was not maintainable. Entirer v. Benneveis, 24 O. R. 407.

Presumption of Service — Absence of Daughter—Loss of Service.] — The plaintiff's unmarried daughter was seduced by the defendant while at service in his family. There was no pregnancy, and only very slight physical disturbance: — Held, that under the Seduction Act, R. S. O. 1887 c. 58, an action lies by the parent, although the daughter may not have been living with him at the time of the seduction or subsequent illness. (2) That while mere illicit intercourse affords no ground of action, proof of illness or physical disturbance sufficient to have caused loss of service to the parent, if the girl had been living with the parent, is all that is necessary. Kimball v. Smith, 5 U. C. R. 32, L'Esperance

v. Duchene, 7 U. C. R. 146, Westacott v. Powell, 2 E. & A. 525, and Cole v. Hubble, 26 O. R. 279, considered. Judgment in 28 O. R. 140 affirmed. Harrison v. Prentice, 24 A. R. 677.

Proof of Service.]—The proof of service was held insufficient to support the father's action. Anderson v. Rannie, 12 C. P. 536.

Residence of Father abroad—Action by Mother.]—Held, on demurrer to a statement of claim in an action of seduction, that the mother of the girl seduced, suing as her mistress, had a sufficient common law right to bring the action, in the absence from the Province of the girl's father. Held, also, that R. S. O. 1887 c. 58, "An Act respecting the Action of Seduction," is only an enabling Act, enlarging the right to maintain the action, under circumstances which would not be sufficient at common law. Gould v. Erskine, 29 O. R. 347.

— Master — "Not Guilty."] — The parent may sue for the seduction of his daughter, though he was resident abroad at the birth of the child, and a cause of action at common law has vested in a master, whom she served. Held, also, that the question may be raised under a plea of not guilty. Cromie v. Skene, 19 C. P. 328,

Step-father and Mother,]—Declaration by husband and wife, for seducing the daughter of the wife by a former marriage, alleging her to be the servant of the plaintiffs, whereby the plaintiffs lost her services:—Held, bad; for if the cause of action accrued before the intermarriage of plaintiffs the girl was not then the servant of the husband, and if after she was his servant alone, so that in either case she could not be the plaintiffs' servant, as alleged. Smith v. Crooker, 23 U. C. R. 84; Green v. Wright, 24 U. C. R. 245.

Quere, whether s. 1 of the Seduction Act, C. S. U. C. c. 77, applies, except where the female seduced "was at the time of her seduction serving or residing with another person." Semble, that s. 3, postponing the right of the master for six months to that of the father or mother, refers only to the new right of action given to the latter by s. 1; and if so, quere, whether the ground upon which the plaintiff's verdict in McIntosh v. Tyhurst, 23 U. C. R. 565, was set aside, can be maintained. Green v. Wright, 24 U. C. R. 240.

A widow having an unmarried daughter married the plaintiff, and took the daughter to her new home. While living there and performing acts of service the daughter was seduced:—Held, that the step-father might maintain an action as at common law, though six months had not expired from the birth of the child, for it could not be said that the daughter was at the time of her seduction not living with her mother, but with "another person," within s. 1, of the Seduction Act, and s. 3 therefore did not apply, Remarks as to the object and proper construction of the statute. McIntosh v. Tyhurst, 24 U. C. R. 443.

See McIntosh v, Tyhurst, 23 U. C. R. 565, which is in effect overruled by the above decision; and Green v. Wright, ante.

Declaration by H. W. and M. W., husband and wife, that defendant, after C. S. U. C. c. 77, and the death of E. R.'s father, who was the former husband of M. W., and during the intermarriage of the plaintiffs, and while E. R. resided with H. W., seduced said E. R., being the daughter and servant of M. W., whereby M. W. lost her services; and this action is brought by M. W. as her mother, under the statute, and H. W. is joined for conformity:—Held, following the last case, that the declaration was bad, for under the circumstances the statute did not apply, and the step-father should have sued as at common law. Waters v. Powers, 29 U. C. R. 336.

— Absence of Daughter.]—In an action for seduction brought by the mother and step-father of the daughter, it appeared that at the time of the seduction the daughter was not living at home with the plaintiffs, but was out at service:—Held, that the plaintiffs had the right to maintain the action. Quere, as to the mother's right to sue alone. Meyer v. Bell, 13 O. R. 35.

Widow—Father of.]—A "widow" is not an "unmarried female," within 7 Wm. IV. c. 8, and her father cannot sue for her seduction when she was not living in his service, but in that of her seducer. Kirk v. Long, 7 C. P. 363; Anderson v. Rannie, 12 C. P. 536.

See Hogan v. Aikman, 30 U. C. R. 14, post 6 (a).

(c) Persons in Loco Parentis.

Proof of Service.]—Where an action is brought by the brother of the girl, not by the parents, the statute does not apply, and proof of service must be given. McKay v. Burley, 18 U. C. R. 251.

Recovery of Damages—Mental Distress.]—See Paterson v. Wilcox, 20 C. P. 385.

Right of Action-Loss of Service-Damages.]—In an action by the plaintiff, the husband of the seduced girl's aunt, it appeared that the girl had been intrusted when ten years of age to the aunt by her mother, who died in 1867, her father being resident in the United States. The girl then lived with the aunt, and on the aunt's marriage with the plaintiff in 1871, she still continued to live with the aunt and her husband, rendering, but without any contract of hiring, the services usually rendered by a farmer's daughter or servant, until September, 1873, when she left and went to live with one W. at Guelph, but without being in any way bound to him, to learn the millinery business by what him, to fearn the millinery business by what was called the season, lasting from Septem-ber to January, and from April to July, and at the close of each season returning to the plaintiff and living with him and the aunt as before. In February, 1875, while residing with the plaintiff and her aunt, on her return, she was seduced by the defendant. In March she again left the plaintiff and returned as before to W.'s, but before the expiration of the season she left him and went into a mil-linery establishment in Toronto, on the same terms as at W.'s, returning in September to the plaintiff, and living as before with him to the plaintin, and living as before with him and her aunt; and while so living with them, a child was born:—Held, that there was suffi-cient evidence of the plaintiff being in loco parentis, and of loss of service to him, to entitle him to maintain the action, and to recover damages beyond the mere loss of service. A nonsuit was therefore set aside, and a verdict entered for $400, which the jury had assessed as the damages. Abernethy v. McPherson, 26 C. P. 516.

Mother Living—Loss of Service.]—
Declaration for the seduction of one C. T., alleging that at the time of the seduction she was the sister and servant of the plaintiff, whereby, &c. Plea, that at the time of the child's birth C. T.'s father was dead, and her mother was then and still is alive and a British subject, and at the commencement of the action was and still is a resident of the Province; and that C. T. is her legitimate daughter:—Held, declaration good, and plea bad; for the declaration shewed a common law right in the plaintiff to maintain the action, and the plea did not shew enough to divest it under the statute in favour of the mother. Tweedlie v. Bogic, 27 C. P. 561.

Loss of Service—Master.]—In an action for seduction of the grandniece of the plaintiff, it appeared that on her father's and mother's death, when she was about twelve years old, she went to live with the plaintiff, and from his house went out to service to various persons, and at the time of the seduction, and for three years previously, was in the service of one C., retaining her wages for her own use. She was seduced by the defendant in the month of April, being then about nineteen years old. In June following she went to Detroit for a couple of weeks, and thence to the plaintiff's, where she resided until she was sick, when she went to the hospital, where she was confined. While at the plaintiff set was required of her, the plaintiff treating her as if she were at home, as her guardian:—Held, that the plaintiff could not recover, for that the right of action for the alleged wrong was not vested in the plaintiff, but in the person who was master of the girl at the time of her seduction. McKersie v. McLean, 6 O. R. 428.

In an action for seduction it appeared that the plaintiff was the brother of the girl seduced; and that the girl, though in the service of another person, yet (by agreement with her mistress, entered into at the time of her engagement) was at liberty to perform, and did perform, certain services at home for the plaintiff, under contract with him for which she received compensation:—Held, that the plaintiff was entitled to maintain the action. Rist v. Faux, 4 B. & S. 409, specially referred to. Thompson v. Ross. 5 H. & N. 16, distinguished. Straughan v. Smith, 19 O. R. 558.

(d) Plaintiff's Death-Continuation of Ac-

After Verdict—New Trial.]—Where the plaintiff. a widow, recovered a verdict for $2,000, for the seduction of her daughter, and a new trial was granted on payment of costs, and plaintiff subsequently died before the costs were paid, an order was made to enter a suggestion of plaintiff's death, and to proceed with the action in the name of the personal representative. Chisholm v. Goodman, 6 L. J. 88.

Survival of Cause of Action.]—The right of action does not survive to the administrator of the original plaintiff, the mother of the deceased, and damages occasioned to

- Loss of Service. 1-The plaintiff sued for the seduction of her daughter, claiming for the seduction of her daughter, claiming the right to continue the action upon a writ issued by the father in his lifetime, and declared for loss of service as between mistress and servant. The seduction, it was proved, took place and a child was born while the daughter resided with her parents, and during her father's lifetime:—Held, that the right of action did not survive to the mother. (2) That it was necessary (the case not coming within the statute) to allege and prove the relation of master and servant, and the loss of service occasioned thereby. Healey v. Crummer, 11 C. P. 527.

6. Pleading.

(a) Declaration-Necessary Averments.

Loss of Service—Adopted Daughter— Residence of Parents.]—The plaintiff sued for the seduction of his adopted daughter, bringing his action within six months from the birth of the child, and averring loss of service, which he proved, and obtained a verdict. Defendant pleaded only not guilty:—Held, that it was unnecessary to allege in the declaration, or to prove, that neither the father nor the mother of the girl was resident in Upper Canada at the birth of the child, or if resident had brought no action within six months; for, as the plaintiff had at common law a right of action on the facts stated, any law a right of action on the facts stated, any defence under the statute depriving him of it must be pleaded. Held, also, that if such proof was essential to the action it should after verdict be presumed. In this case there was some evidence of the death of both parents, which might be supposed to have satisfied by a constant of the property of the party. Nickells v. Goulding, 21 U. C. R. 366.

- Death of Father.]-A declaration by a woman that defendant seduced her daughter and servant, whereby she lost her services:
—Held, good, either at common law or under the statute, without alleging the father's death. Kelly v. Bull, 23 U. C. R. 278.

A declaration for seduction not containing an averment of loss by the plaintiffs (the mother of the seduced and her second husband) of the services of the seduced, nor that the seduced was the servant of the plaintiffs, is bad. Such declaration by the mother for the seduction of her daughter, is bad for not alleging the death of the father. Lake v. Bemiss, 4 C. P. 430.

______ Death of Parents—Action by Mas-ter.]—The plaintiff sued for the seduction of E. L., his servant, who had been in his employment for several years, and while there was seduced by defendant, who had been received as a suitor for her. Her brother had been dead many years, and her father, of whom she knew nothing, had left the cour-try fiften years before, having married again. The action was brought within six months from the birth of the child, which was not born in the plaintiff's house. Defendant pleadborn in the plaintiff's house. Belendant pleaded only not guilty, and that E. L. was not the plaintiff's servant. The jury found for the plaintiff and $500 damages:—Held, that it was unnecessary to aver in the declaration the death of the parents, or shew such facts as enabled the plaintiff to sue as master within the six months, but that it was sufficient to shew a common law cause of action, leaving defendant to plead any such defence, which was not admissible under the pleas here. The last case dissented from. Ford v. Gourlay, 42 U. C. R. 552.

Statute.]--In an action by a father for the seduction of his daughter, who was not liv-ing with him at the time of the seduction, it is not necessary to aver in the declaration that the action is brought under the statute.

McLean v. Ainslie, 5 O. S. 456.

Time of Seduction.]-Declaration by husband and wife, that the defendant, after the death of the father of K., seduced said K., then being the daughter and servant of the wife, while the said K, was unmarried, and residing with the defendant, and not with her residing with the defendant, and not with her said mother, whereby the mother lost her ser-vices, &c.:—Held, that the declaration was good; that the action would lie; and that it was unnecessary to state that the seduction took place before the mother's second marriage, for if essential to the action the plaintiff under the declaration must Hogan v. Aikman, 30 U. C. R. 14. prove it.

(b) Pleas.

Accord and Satisfaction.]—Declaration in seduction, by the father. Plea, in effect, that after the seduction it was agreed between plaintiff and defendant that if defendant would agree to take, maintain, and support the child at his own costs, &c., from the date of such agreement, plaintiff would accept the same in full satisfaction and discharge; and that defendant, in pursuance thereof, did agree so to do, and plaintiff accepted said agreement in full satisfaction, &c. Replication, that before said agreement was made, the mother of the child made the usual statutory affidavit, and filed it within the required time, and be-fore the alleged accord, in the office of the clerk of the peace; and that defendant, before and at the time of the making of such alleged agreement and accord, was liable in law to maintain and support the child :-Held, law to maintain and support the child:—Held, on demurrer, plea good, as setting out an agreement on defendant's part, for which a sufficient consideration appeared in his un-dertaking a liability which he was not bound to assume, and that defendant was not obliged to shew that he had actually performed his agreement, as this was unnecessary to sup-Held. port the accord set up by the plea. also, that the replication was bad, and did not displace the plea. McHugh v. Grear, 18 C. P.

To an action for the seduction of plaintiff's daughter, the defendant pleaded, on equitable grounds, that the plaintiff and his daughter had entered into an agreement under seal with defendant for the settlement of the suit and other matters (setting it out), by which the amount to be paid by defendant was fixed at $120, which the defendant agreed to pay by instalments of $15 at the times specified; and it was stipulated that if the defendant should not make these payments punctually the agree-ment should be void. The plea then set out that defendant paid three instalments, but by accident omitted to pay the fourth, which he was ready and willing to pay; and he sub-mitted that the proviso to avoid the agreement on non-payment was, on the true construction of the agreement, a penalty only, against which he should be relieved, and if not that it differed from the intention of both parties, and should be reformed. torney who drew the agreement said that he put in this proviso of his own accord, without put in this provise of his own accord, without instructions to do so, but that it was read over to the parties, and executed in duplicate, each party taking one:—Held, that there was no ground for saying that the proviso was introduced by mistake; that it was not a penalty against which defendant should be relieved, being a reservation only of an existing legal right; and that it formed no defence therefore to this action. Boland v. McCarroll, 38 U. C. R. 487.

Leave and License.]—The plaintiff declared in trespass in the first count, complaining of breaking and entering his close and debauching of his daughter only, and the defendant pleaded to each count, as to all but the force and arms, &c., the leave and license of the daughter. The plea was held bad on demurrer. Ross v. Merritt, 2 U. C. R. 421.

Marriage of Seduced.] — Defendant pleaded, among other pleas, as to the alleged loss of service, and trouble in nursing, &c., that at the time of the delivery the daughter was not an unmarried female:—Held, on demurrer, no defence. Ryan v. Miller, 21 U. C. R. 202.

Not Guilty.]—The plea of not guilty does not deny the allegation that the seduced was the servant of the plaintiff. Alternan v. Smith, 4 C. P. 500.

Traversing Service.]—A plea traversing the service:—Held, bad, for traversing an inference of law; and that the court could not intend that the seduced was a married woman in order to support it. McLeod v. McLeod, 9 U. C. R. 331; Luke v. Bemiss, 1 P. R. 359.

See Ford v. Gourlay, 42 U. C. R. 552, ante (a); Daley v. Byrne, 15 P. R. 4 (Pleading —Pleading since the Judicature Act, XI. 4).

7. Other Cases.

Arrest under Ca. Re.]—See Wheatly v. Sharp, 8 P. R. 189.

Death of Defendant—Survival of Action, I—After an action of seduction was commenced, but before the trial, the defendant died, and the action was continued against his action was continued against his action was continued against the settle of the 1887 c. 110, altered the common law to the extent necessary to entitle the plaintiff to maintain the action against the representative of the person who committed the wrong—the damages in actions of seduction, so far as they exceed the value of the loss of service, the cost of nursing, and doctors' bills being given to the plaintiff for the loss of the comfort and society of his daughter and the loss of reputation which he sustains; the plaintiff's reputation and feelings are a part of his person. and an injury to them is an injury "in respect of his person." Lince v. Faircloth, 11 C. L. T. Occ. N. 49.

Examination of Defendant.]—An order to examine defendant granted in an action of seduction, when interlocatory judgment had been signed for want of a plea. Cerriby v. Wells, 14 C. L. J. 170.

Form of Action.]—Action on the case lies, as well as trespass, for seduction. Cavan v. Welsh, Dra. 246.

Infant Defendant—Guardian.]—In an action of seduction brought against an infant, the defendant was served personally, and entered an appearance in person.—Held, that the common law practice referred to in con, rule 261 means the practice by which a real guardian and not a fictitious one was appointed; and an order was made requiring the defendant to appear by guardian within six days, and in default that the plaintiff should be at liberty to appoint a guardian for him, the consent of such guardian being shewn, as also that he had no interest adverse to the defendant. Hynev. Brown, 13 P. R. 17.

It appeared that the defendant was not quite of age, and that no guardian had ever been appointed, but that the fact of infancy was well known to the defendant's parents and to the solicitor and counsel who appeared for him at the trial, and no objection on this ground was taken till this motion before the divisional court:—Held, that under con, rules 261, 313, the appointment of a guardian was not imperative; the court had a discretion; and in this case the judgment obtained against the defendant at the trial should not be interfered with. Furnival v. Brooke, 49 L. T. N. S. 134, followed. Straughan v. Smith, 19 O. R. 558.

Parties — Addition of Mother—Amendment.]—Plaintiff caused defendant to be arrested for the alleged seduction of his step-daughter, she at the time of her alleged seduction not being in his service. Afterwards he applied to amend his declaration by joining his wife, striking out the allegation that the girl seduced was the daughter of the plaintiff, and substituting the statement that she was the daughter of the wife. The application was refused. Lauson v. McDermitt, 9 L. J. 45.

Statute of Limitations.]—The Statute of Limitations begins to run from the time of the seduction, not from the birth of the child. McKay v. Burley, 18 U. C. R. 251.

II. MISCELLANEOUS CASES.

Affidavit before Magistrate—Alteration in.]—It was stated, in an affidavit in support of the rule for a new trial in an action of seduction, that the plaintiff had sworn before a magistrate that defendant never had criminal connexion with her. The magistrate, in an affidavit used on shewing cause, stated that the defendant's brother S. with the girl said to have been seduced, and her mother, came to him together, saying that the girl was going to clear his brother, that his mother was very much: that he, the magistrate, wishing to do something to let the old lady die easy, and at Carnal Connexion by Force—Previous Acquittal for Rape—Amendment.]—In an action for enticing away and having carnal knowledge of the plaintiff's daughter, the plaintiff was allowed at the close of the case planniii was allowed at the close of the case to amend by setting up, as an alternative cause of action, the enticing away of the daughter and having connexion with her by force and against her will, and consequent loss of service. No application was made by the deservice. No application was made by the defendants to put in further evidence, nor was any suggestion made that they were in any way prejudiced by the amendment:—Held, that the amendment was properly allowed. Held, also, that the fact of the defendants having been previously acquitted on an indictment for rape on the plaintiff's daughter was not a bar to the action. Cole v. Hubble, 26 to R. 279.

Indictment for.] -- See Regina v. Smith, 19 O. R. 714.

Insolvency.]-An insolvent debtor chargansolvency.j—An insolvent debtor charged in execution in case for seduction is entitled to relief under 5 Wm, IV. c. 3. Perkins v. O'Connolly, H. T. 6 Wm. IV.

Held, affirming the judgment in 9 P. R. 206, that under the Insolvent Act, 1864, s. 9, s.-s. 5, a discharge in insolveney would form no answer to proceedings upon a judgment against defendant for seduction. Beninger v. Thrasher, 1 O. R. 313.

Malicious Arrest—Reasonable and Probable Cause.]—Plaintiff sued defendant in the first count for malicious arrest, by a false first count for malicious arrest, by a raise affidavit that defendant had a cause of action against him for the seduction of his daughter; and in the second count for effecting the same object by falsely, &c., representing that he was about to quit Canada, with intent, &c. The paintiff established a prima facie case on both counts, in answer to which defendant proved that he was present when his daughter made an affidavit before a justice of the peace that she was pregnant by the plaintiff; that he had been informed of statements made by he had been informed of statements made by the plaintiff affording a very strong inference of improper intercourse; that he was told the plaintiff had said he had "signed away" his place; and that he defendant, had received a letter from plaintiffs cousin, condemning the plaintiff for not marrying defendant's daught ser, and relling defendant that it was had been to look after him, as he was going to sell his place, and wanted to sell it to the writer:— Held, that these facts sufficiently shewed reasonable and probable cause; that, as they were uncontradicted, there was no question for the jury; and that a nonsuit therefore was proper. Application of District Funds.]—Justices in sessions cannot apply the funds of a district towards building a gaol and court house without express authority by statute. Rex v. Justices of Neucostle, Dra. 204.

Assault — Attempt to Murder, 1—At the quarter sessions the prisoner was found guilty on an indictment charging that she, on, &c., in and upon one B., in the peace of God and of our lady the Queen then being, unlawfully did make an assault, and him, the said B., did heat and illtreat, with intent him, the said B., feloniously, wilfully, and of her malice aforethought, to kill and murder, and other wrongs to the said B., then did, to the great damage of the said B., against the form of the statute in such case made and provided, and against the peace, &c. A count was added for common assault. The evidence shewed an attempt to murder, but it was moved in arrest of judgment that the court had not jurisdiction, for that it was a capital offence under that section, nor an offence against any statute, but that the conviction might be sustained as for an assault at common law. Regina v. McEvoy, 20 U. C. R. 344.

risonment.]—Held, that the court of quarter sessions is a court of record, and has power, in the case of an assault, to pronounce a sentence of fine and costs of prosecution, and imprisonment in default of payment: and that a warrant of commitment under the seal of the court, or signature of the chairman, is not necessary. Quere, as to the propriety or impropriety of such court directing imprisonment to be continued until costs as well as fines are paid. Ovens v. Taylor, 19 C. P. 49.

Bench Warrant—Seal.]—A bench warrant issued at the quarter sessions, tested in open sessions, and signed by the clerk of the peace:—Held, not invalid for want of a seal. Fraser v. Dickson, 5 U. C. R. 231.

Constitution of Court—Judge—Conviction.]—It is no objection to a conviction at the quarter sessions that neither the Judge of the district court nor any barrister was present when a conviction was made. Regina v. Crabbe, 11 U. C. R. 447.

______ Judge of Neighbouring County — Provincial Statute.]—Held, that the county Judge of the county of Lanark had no power to preside at the sessions in the county of Renfrew, the Provincial statute authorizing him to do so being ultra vires. Gibson v. McDonald, 7 O. R. 401.

Costs—Power to Award.]—See Regina v. McIntosh, 28 O. R. 603.

Forgery.]—The quarter sessions has no jurisdiction to try the offence of forgery. Regina v. McDonald, 31 U. C. R. 337. See Regina v. Dunlop, 15 U. C. R. 118.

Kidnapping.]—See Cornwall v. Regina, 33 U. C. R. 106.

New Trial — Assault.] — Defendant was convicted of an assault at the quarter sessions and fined, but during the same sessions he obtained a new trial on his own affidavit, and was acquitted at the following sessions:—Held, that the quarter sessions had authority to grant such new trial, and that the court of Queen's bench could not interfere. Regina v. Fitzgerald, 20 U. C. R. 546. See Re Yearke and Bingleman, 28 U. C. R. 551, post 11. 11.

Nuisance — Abatement — Order—Certiorari—Costs. — The defendant was convicted at the general sessions on an indictment for a nuisance in obstructing the highway by the erection of a wall thereon, and directed to abate the nuisance, which not having been done the sessions made an order directing the sheriff to abate the same at the defendant's costs and charges, and to pay the county Crown attorney, forthwith after taxation, the costs of the application and order, and the sheriff's fees and costs and incidental expenses arising out of the execution of the order:—Held, that the sessions had no authority to make the order to the sheriff, the proper mode in such case being by a writ de nocumento amovendo; that the order, being a judicial act, was properly removed by certiorari, and must be quashed, but without costs. Remarks as to the jurisdiction of the sessions as to costs. Regina v. Grover, 23 O. R. 92.

Order—Sittings of Court.]—Semble, that the chairman of the quarter sessions cannot make any order of the court except during the sessions, either regular or adjourned. In re Coleman, 23 U. C. R. 615.

Pexjury.]—Held, that a recognizance to appear for trial on a charge of perjury at the sessions was wrong, as the court had no jurisdiction in perjury; but a certiorari to remove it was refused, as the time for the appearance of the party had gone by. Regina v. Currie, 31 U. O. R. 582.

II. APPEALS TO SESSIONS.

1. Generally-Right of Appeal.

Conviction under Inland Revenue Act.]—Held, that no appeal would lie to the quirter sessions from a summary conviction under the Inland Revenue Act, 31 Vict, c. S. s. 130, for possessing distilling apparatus without having made a return thereof; for that such conviction was for a crime, and therefore not within C. S. U. C. c. 114. toxicating liquors in quantities not less than a quart, was convicted before the police magistrate under 32 Vict. c. 32, for selling half a pint of whisky, contrary to the provisions of the Act, "without the license therefor by law required." His appeal to the general sessions required." His appeal to the general sessions of the peace was dismissed on the ground that, by s. 25, the conviction was final and without appeal:—Held, that s. 25 only applied to persons who sold without any license; that F, came under s. 26; and that by s. 36 he had a right of appeal. Regina v. Firmin, 33 U. C.

Conviction under Public Health Act.] Where there is a conviction for an offence under the by-law set out in the schedule to the Public Health Act, R. S. O. 1887 c. 205, as distinguished from any of the provisions in the Act itself, an appeal will lie from such conviction to the sessions, nowithstanding s. 112, which has no application. Regina v. Coursey, 26 O. R. 685. Reversed on different grounds, 27 O. R. 181.

Dismissal of Complaint.] - Where a charge of assault was preferred before two magistrates, under 4 & 5 Vict. c. 27, who dismissed the complaint, ordering the complain-ant to pay the costs, the court refused a mandamus to the sessions to hear an appeal, for the statute contemplates an appeal only in cases of conviction. In re Justices of Brock District, M. T. 6 Vict.

Held, that the prosecutor of a complaint cannot appeal from the order of a magistrate dismissing the complaint; as by R. S. O. 1877 c. 74, s. 4, the practice of appealing in such a case is assimilated to that under 33 Vict. c. 47 (D.), which confines the right of appeal to the defendant. A prohibition was therefore ordered, but without costs, as the objection to the surisdiction had not been taken in the court below. In re Murphy and Cornish, 8 P. R. 420.

- Offence under By-law.]-There is no appeal to the court of general sessions of the appear to the court of general sessions of the peace from an order of dismissal of a com-plaint for an offence against a city by-law massed under the authority of s. 551 of the Municipal Act, R. S. O. 1897 c. 225. The "order" referred to in s. 7 of R. S. O. 1897 c. 90, the Ontario Summary Convictions Act, means an order against the party against whom the information and complaint is laid, and does not include an order of dismissal. Regina v. Toronto Public School Board, 31 O. R. 457.

Order under Prevention of Cruelty to Children Act. |- There is no appeal to the general sessions from an order for the custody general sessions from an order for the custody and care of children under s. 13 and subse-quent sections of 56 Vict. c. 45 (O.), "An Act for the Prévention of Cruelty to and better Protection of Children," made by two justices of the peace sitting under s. 2 of 58 Vict. c. 52 (O.), amending the former Act. In re Gran-ger and Children's Aid Society of Kingston, 28 O. R. 555. O. R. 555.

Temporary Judicial District—Nearest County.] — Two justices, appointed in 1880 for the temporary judicial district of Nipissing, made a conviction in the said district of M. for an assault committed there :-Held, that no appeal would lie under 9 Vict. c. 41 (C. S. C. c. 101, s. 4), to the general sessions of the county of Renfrew, being the nearest to the place of conviction, for the justices were not appointed under the Act, but under R. S. O. 1877 c. 71, and the place of conviction was not within any part of Canada defined and declared by proclamation under that Act. Gibson v. McDondid, 7 O. R. 401.

See Regina v. Ramsay, 11 O. R. 210; Regina v. Robert Simpson Co., 28 O. R. 231.

2. Adjournment.

Power of.]-Under C. S. U. C. c. 114, an appeal from a conviction must be heard at the appeal from a conviction must be heard at the court of quarter sessions appealed to. There is no power of adjournment. In re McCumber and Doyle, 26 U. C. R. 516.

Statute-Directory-Indorsement on Conviction.]-An appeal from a conviction for malicious injury to property came on for hear-ing at the general sessions. No order of ad-No order of adjournment was indorsed on the conviction, the Journment was moorsed on the conviction, the clerk merely entering a minute of the order in his book. At the following sessions the appeal was heard and the conviction quashed:—Held, that the provision in s. 77 of R. S. C. c. 178, as to indorsing the order of adjournment on the conviction, was not impera-tive, but directory merely, and therefore the omission to make the indorsement did not affect the validity of the order to quash. Regina v. Read, 17 O. R. 185.

See In re Ruer and Plows, 46 U. C. R. 206.

3. Amendment.

By Magistrate—Return of Amended Conviction—Judgment.]—A conviction may be returned and proved at any time during the hearing of an appeal therefrom to the general sessions, or, in the discretion of the chairman, even during an adjournment for judgment. minute of conviction signed by the justice, but not sealed, was returned to the sessions, upon the entering of an appeal therefrom by the defendant. The jury found the defendant guilty of the offence of which he had been convicted, but on motion for judgment he objected that the conviction was not sealed. The chairman reserved judgment until a day named, and during the adjournment the jus-tices returned and filed a conviction under seal. The chairman then refused to receive it, or to give judgment, holding that there was no conviction upon which to found the appeal, which had been heard:—Held, that the prose-cutor was not entitled to a mandamus to compel him to deliver judgment; for the reception of the conviction in evidence at that period was in the chairman's discretion, which could not be reviewed. In re Ryer and Plows, 46 U. C. R. 206.

Notice of Appeal.]—The appellant was convicted before the police magistrate of a city for keeping a house of ill-fame, "contrary to a certain by-law of the corporation." She appealed to the sessions, in May following, where it was held that under 32 & 33 Vict. c. 32 (Da the decision of the magistrate was fast). (D.), the decision of the magistrate was final.

The appellant, on the 2nd June, applied for a mandamus to the sessions to hear the appeal, and the police magistrate on the same day filed with the clerk of the peace another conviction, stating the offence to be started in such case made and rowid or started in such case made and rowid or such a started in such case made and rowid or such a started in such case made and rowid or such a started in such case made and rowid or such a started in such as a such as a

By Sessions—Amendment of Sentence.]—Where an appeal was brought from a conviction imposing imprisonment with hard labour, which the magistrate had no power to award, and the sessions amended the record by striking out "hard labour."—Held, that their assuming so to amend the conviction was not a quashing of the conviction, and therefore trespass would not lie against the justices. Semble, that the general sessions of the peace have no power under 32 & 33 Vict. c. 31 (D.) to amend the sentence in a conviction as by striking out the part imposing hard labour, but can hear and determine an appeal on the adjudication of oguit only. McLellan v. McKinnon, 1 O. R. 219.

4. Costs.

Certificate of Non-payment.]— The court having granted a prohibition against proceeding further with an appeal from a conviction, refused a mandamus to the clerk of the peace to certify the non-payment of costs of the appeal, under C. S. C. c. 103, s. 67. In re Coleman, 23 U. C. R. 615.

Order for—Payce.]—Quære, whether an order of the sessions, simply ordering costs of an appeal to be paid, without directing to whom they are to be paid, &c., under s. 74 of 32 & 33 Vict. c. 31 (D.), is regular. In re Detaney v. MacNabb, 21 C. P. 563.

— Payec—Amendment.]—Under 32 & 33 Vict. c. 31, ss. 65, 74 (D.), the court of quarter sessions, at which an appeal is heard, must determine, on quashing a conviction, whether any and what costs are to be paid, and when. Where, therefore, the only order made was, "conviction quashed with costs:"—Held, that no subsequent session of the court could interfere by way of amendment of the order or otherwise, and a rule for a mandamus to the chairman and clerk of the sessions to issue the said order, with a provision for payment by the respondents to the appellant of the costs of the appeal forthwith after taxation, was discharged, but under the circumstances without costs. In re Rush and Villeage of Bobouggoon, 44 U. C. R. 199.

Respondent — Abandoned Appeal.]—Appeal against a summary conviction for breach of a by-law of the corporation of 8t. Thomas, for selling spirituous liquors without license. The appealant gave notice of appeal in due time, but entered into no recognizance to prosecute his appeal with effect; nor did he afterwards give notice, before the sittings of the sessions, of the abandoment of his appeal, under s. 4 of C. S. U. C. c. 114:—Held, respondent entitled to costs. In re Neil and Sells, 9 L. J. 217.

— Want of Proper Notice.]—Under 32 & 33 Vict. c. 31, s. 65, and 33 Vict. c. 27 (D.), the court of quarter sessions has no power to award costs on discharging an appeal for want of proper notice of appeal, for the words "shall hear and determine the matter of appeal" mean, decide it upon the merits. In re Madden, 31 U. C. R. 333.

— Want of Proper Notice — Certiorari.]—Where an anneal to the sessions is dismissed without being heard and determined on the merits, there is no power to impose costs. Re Madden, 31 U. C. R. 333, followed. When a notice of appeal is given for the wrong sessions, and the appeal is not heard on the merits, the right to certiorari is not taken away by s. 84, R. S. C. c. 178. Regina v. Becker, 20 C. R. 676.

Successful Appellant.] — The court of quarter sessions has no authority to order a person acquitted on appeal to pay any part of the costs of such appeal, or to convict him of an offence for disobeying such order. Regina v. Orr. 12 U. C. R. 57.

Taxation—Jurisdiction—Formal Order—
Trimula Code, 1—Where the chairman of the general sessions of the peace made a minute of dismissal of an appeal from the conviction of a police magistrate, with costs to be taxed by the clerk of the peace, but no formal order was drawn up in pursuance of such minute:—Held, that a certificate of the clerk as to the amount of such costs and a subsequent order of the court of general sessions directing a distress warrant to issue in respect of the same, were irregular and must be quashed. If such formal order had issued, the certificate might have been upheld, although the appellant was bound by recognizance conditioned to pay

Held, also, that in view of s. 889(e), (I), of the criminal code, 55 & 56 Vict, c. 29 (D.), the formal order might have been drawn up at any future sittings of the court of general sessions, and the costs included therein nunc pro tune, if necessary, the power to determine the amount of such costs not being, as it is in England, confined to the justices at the same general sessions at which the appeal is heard. Re Bothwell and Burnside, 31 O. R. 695.

5. Evidence.

Improper Admission—Reversal of Verdict,]—Where a person had been convicted before justices and fined, and on an appeal to the quarter sessions the justices there admitted more evidence than had been heard on the conviction, and the accused party was acquitted; but, on receiving the opinion of the attorney-general that the additional evidence should not have been admitted, the justices in sessions confirmed the conviction, and ordered it to be recorded, but took no notice of the acquittal—the court made absolute a rule for a mandamus, commanding them to enter an acquittal. Rex v. Justices of Bathurst, 4 O. 8, 340.

New Evidence on Appeal.]—On an appeal to the quarter sessions under 4 Wm. IV. c. 4, evidence differing from or additional to that produced before the convicting justices may be received and go to the jury. Heav v. Justices of Bathurst, 5 O. S. 74.

On the appeal the appellant tendered evidence and witnesses not heard on the trial before the magistrate which the chairman rejected, relying on 32 & 33 Vict. c. 31, s. 66 (D.), which, however, had been repealed by 42 Vict. c. 44, s. 10 (D.) The conviction was amended and affirmed, as and for a breach of a municipal by-law:—Held, that the appellant had the right under either the Dominion Act, or R. S. O. 1877 c. 74, s. 4, which governed the case, to have such witnesses examined, and having been deprived of this right, the order of sessions should be quashed. Regina v. Weshington, 46 U. C. R. 221.

He appealed to the quarter sessions, where the question was tried before a jury, and the conviction affirmed. The proceedings having been removed by certiorari to this court:—Held, that 13 & 14 Vict. c. 45 extended to this case, and authorized the trial by jury, though in 8 Vict. c. 45 there is a provision for appeal to the sessions, but not such trial. Hespeter v. 8have, 16 U. C. R. 104.

Conviction under Municipal By-law.]
—On an appeal to the sessions from a conviction by a magistrate for breach of a municipal by-law, it is in the discretion of the chairman to grant or refuse a request for a jury, under 36 Vict. c. 58, s. 2 (D.), which is declaratory of the meaning of s. 66 of 32 & 33 Vict. c. 31 (D.), and is not confined to cases under the Acts mentioned in the preamble and title, which relate only to the desertion of seamen. Regina v. Washington, 46 U. C. R. 221.

See Regina v. Bradshaw, 38 U. C. R. 564.

7. Notice.

Signature.]—It is not essential that the notice of appeal under 33 Vict. c. 27 (D.), from a summary conviction, should be signed by the party appealing. A notice, therefore, "that we, the undersigned D. N. and C. N." of, &c., following the form given by the Act in other respects, but not signed, was held sufficient. Regina v. Nichol, 40 U. C. R. 76.

Sufficiency of — Objections.]—Held, that a notice of appeal, stating "that the formal conviction drawn up and returned to the sessions is not sufficient to support the conviction," &c., is sufficiently particular to allow all objections to be raised which are apparent on the face of the conviction or order. Re Helps and Eno, 9 L. J. 302.

Time for Giving — Certiorari.]—A conviction having been made within twelve days of the next sessions, notice of appeal was given to such sessions, instead of to the second sessions after the conviction, contrary to 33 Vict. c. 27, s. 1 (D.), and the appeal was not heard:—Held, that such notice being inoperative, there had, in effect, been no appeal, and the right of certiforari was therefore not taken away by s. 2. Regina v. Caswell, 33 U. C. R. 303.

8. Recognizance.

Filing — Enrolment — Condition—Sufficiency.]—Upon an appeal from a conviction to the general sessions of the peace, the notice of appeal and the recognizance were produced by the clerk of the court from its files, exhibited to the court, and placed in its custody, and evidence was given of the service of the notice of appeal. The recognizance purported to be executed by the convicting justice, and appeared to have been in the custody of the clerk of the peace from its date:—Held, sufficient proof to found the jurisdiction of the court to try the appeal, in the absence of evidence shewing the recognizance to be false; and that enrolment of the recognizance was unnecessary. The recognizance was filed by the appellant, instead of being sent to the clerk of the peace by the justice who took it; and the condition therein was to appeal to the "ceneral quarter or general sessions," and not to the "court of general sessions of the peace:"—Held, a sufficient compliance with the statute. Regina v. Essery, 7 P. R. 290.

Form—Condition.]—The form of recognizance to try an appeal, given in the schedule to C. S. C. c. 103, is sufficient, though the condition differs in form from that provided by c. 99, s. 117. In re Wilson and Sessions of Huron and Bruce, 23 U. C. R. 301.

Variance from Statute — Time for Filing.]—The person appealing from a summary conviction by a magistrate must comply with all the conditions imposed upon him by the statute under which he appeals. Where in the recognizance the appellant, instead of being bound to appear and try the appeal, &c., as required by the Act, was bound to appear at the sessions to answer to any charge that might be made against him, the appeal was dismissed. An application to take the appellant's recognizance in court was refused, on the ground that, although the recognizance need not be entered into within four days, it must be entered into and filed before the sittings of the court of quarter sessions to which the appeal is made. Kent v. Olda, 7 L. J. 2 I.

Non-resident Sureties.]—Persons nonresident within the jurisdiction of the general sessions of the peace to which an appeal is given, are not competent sureties in a recognizance to prosecute an appeal from a summary conviction of a justice of the peace. Regina v. Lyon, 9 C. L. T. Qec. N. 6.

9. Time for Appealing.

"Appeal Brought" — Notice — Indian Act.]—Under 29 Vict. c. 18, s. 84 (D.), the Indian Act. 1876, an appeal must be brought before the appellate Judge within thirty days from the conviction. Giving notice of appeal to the next session, and entering into a recognizance within that time, is not sufficient. In re Hunter v, Griffiths, 7 P. R. 86.

The words "appeal brought" in s. 108 of the Indian Act, R. S. C. et 3. are satisfied by the giving of notice and of the security provided for by the Summary Convictions Act; and it is not necessary for an appellant to bring his appeal to a hearing within the time limited by s. 108. In re Hunter v. Griffiths, 7 P. R. 86, not followed. Semble, merely giving notice of appeal within the thirty days would have satisfied the words of the statute. Regina v. McGauley, 12 P. R. 259.

Extension of Time by Justices' Delay—Certiorai,1—S. on the 9th February, 1875, was convicted before justices of an offence against the Act for the sale of spirituous liquors, 37 Vict. c. 32 (O.). On the 27th he obtained a certiorari to the justices to return the conviction into the Queen's bench, which was not served until the 9th July. In the meantime, on the 3rd March, he procured a summons from the county Judge by way of appeal from the conviction under 38 Vict. c. 11 (O.), alleging as a ground for obtaining it so late, that the delay arose wholly from the default of the justices. He persisted in the appeal, notwithstanding the certiorari; but the Judge refused to adjudicate on the merits, holding that it had not been made to appear to him that the delay arose wholly from the default of the convicting justices, and, therefore, that he had no jurisdiction. On the 13th Septem-ber the justices returned to the certiorari that before its delivery to them they had, at the request of S., transmitted the conviction and papers to the county Judge upon the appeal under 38 Vict. c. 11 (O.) In November S., having procured the papers to be returned by the county court clerk at Barrie to the magistrates' clerk at Orillia, moved to quash the re-turn to the certiorari, and for another writ, or for an attachment for not having returned the conviction, in obedience to it, or for an the conviction, in obecience to it, or for an order to return the conviction forthwith, or to amend the return by including the conviction therein. In support of this motion it was urged that the magistrates wrongfully put it out of their power to return the writ by transmitting the papers to the clerk of the county court, when they must have known that the appeal was too The application was refused, for S., having procured the transmission of the papers for his own appeal, could not insist that it was wrong; it was apparent that he aban-doned the certiorari in order to carry on his appeal; and when he served the writ he knew that the justices had not the papers to return. Quere, as to the propriety of the county court clerk returning the papers to the justices' clerk. Semble, that the justices could not properly have refused to transmit the papers on the ground that the appeal was not made in time; but that the recognizance being furnished, they should transmit the papers at least within the month, leaving it to the county Judge to decide as to the cause of de-lay. Regina v. Slaven, 38 U. C. R. 557.

See Regina v. Caswell, 33 U. C. R. 303, ante 7.

(a) Of Appeal.

Payment of Fine — Mandamus.]—One M., having been on the 27th August, 1802, convicted "for allowing card-playing at his inn, and other disorderly conduct during this year," was fined $20 and costs, which he paid, but said he "would see further about it." On the 30th notice of appeal was given, and on the 11th September the appeal came on at the quarter sessions, when the court decided that the right to appeal was waived by plaintiff having paid. On application for a mandanus the rule nisi called upon the court of quarter sessions, instead of the instices, to shew cause: —Held. (1) that under the circumstances there was no waiver of the right to appeal. (2) That the rule nisi having been enlarged by the justices at their request, from the previous term, objections could not now be taken to its form. Semble, that on any doubtful ground a party should not be deprived of his right to appeal against a summary conviction. In re-Justices of United Counties of York and Peel Exp parts Mason, 13 C. P. 150.

(b) Of Objection to Appeal.

Application to Postpone.]—The appellant, having been convicted of an assault under C. S. C. c. 91, 's. 37, appealed to the quarter sessions. On the first day of the court, after he had proved his notice of appeal, at the respondent's request the case was postponed until next day; and the respondent then objected to the jurisdiction, as it was not shewn that the appellant had either remained in custody or entered into recognizance, as required by s. 117 of C. S. C. c. 99. The court held that this objection had been waived by the application to postpone, and they quashed the conviction. On motion for a prohibition to the quarter sessions from further proceeding in the matter:—Held, that this was an appeal under s. 117 above mentioned, not under C. S. U. C. 114, s. 1: that it was clearly incumbent upon the appellant to shew his right to appeal by proving compliance with that section; and that the necessity for such proof was not waived by the respondent's application for delay. The prohibition was therefore granted. In re Meyers and Wonnacott, 23 U. C. R. 611.

Recognizance not Proved—Proceeding on Meritzi—The compinant applied to quash an order of the general sessions made on appeal, quashing a conviction, on the ground that it was not shewn at the court that defendant had entered into the necessary recognizance. It was not denied that notice of appeal had been duly given or that the recognizance had been duly entered into and filed with the clerk of the peace; but the objection was that it had not been proved at the trial of the appeal:—Held, under the circumstances of the case, that the respondent's counsel, by his conduct, must be assumed to have waived any objection to the recognizance. Regina v. Crouch, 35 U. C. R. 433.

Semble, that where objection has been taken to the jurisdiction of the court, and the party objecting thereto has afterwards proceeded to a trial upon the merits, he should be held to have waived proof of those preliminary conditions which give the court jurisdiction, if it shall appear subsequently upon his moving against the verdict, that those conditions had in truth been complied with. Regina v. Essery, 7 P. R. 290.

11. Other Cases.

Duty of Justices—Return,]—Held, that a conviction of two or more justices of the peace being appealed from did not relieve them from the penalty attached to the duty of making immediate return under 4 & 5 Vict. c. 12, s. 1. Murphy q. t. v. Harvey, 9 C. P. 528.

New Trial.]—Where a conviction has been affirmed by a jury on appeal to the quarter sessions, that court cannot grant a new trial. Quare, whether when the verdict was against the express direction of the chairman, that court would be bound, or should be compelled by mandanus, to enforce the conviction so affirmed. Re Yearke and Bingleman, 28 U. C. R. 551.

Order—Revocation of,1—On the first day of the session, the appellant's counsel called on and proved his case. The respondent did not appear. It was not known that he had employed counsel, and the conviction was quashed. On the second day counsel applied to have the order of the court discharged and for a hearing:—Held, that the court had power to revoke the order to quash. McLean v. McLean, 9 L. J. 217.

Reinstatement of Appeal—Alteration of Judyment.]—Held, (1) that an appeal dismissed for want of prosecution may, at the instance of the appellant satisfactorily accounting for his non-appearance, be reinstated. (2) That the justices in session may, if they see fit, elter their judyment in a matter of appeal, at any time during the continuance of the sessions. In re Smith and Stokes, 10 L. J. 20.

Warrant of Commitment—Discharge of Defendant pending Appeal—Affirmation of Conviction.]—On the conviction of the prisoner herein she was committed to custody under a warrant issued by the convicting magistrate. She gave bail, and was discharged from custody under 33 Vict. c. 27, s. 1. On the appeal being heard, the prisoner was found guilty and the conviction affirmed, and the prisoner directed to be punished according to the conviction. No process was issued by the sessions for enforcing the judgment of the court, but a new warrant was issued by the convicting magistrate, under which the prisoner was retaken. Writs of habeas corpus and certiorari were issued, and on the return thereof a motion was made for the discharge of the prisoner. In the margin of the writ of habeas corpus, it was marked "per" 33 Car. II., which was signed by the Judge issuing it:—Held, that the prisoner was not in custody or confined under the judgment of the sessions, but under the warrant of the convicting magistrate; and semble, under the circumstances, the convicting magistrate was functus officio, and therefore could not issue the warrant in question, which should have been issued by the sessions; and possibly they could have directed punishment for the unexpired term; but that if no bail had been given, and the prisoner had remained in custody, no further order of commitment would have been necessary, or in o warrant of commitment had been issued prior to anneal, the magistrate could have issued one thereafter. Held, also, that under a certiorari the conviction might be quashed; and, as the judgment of the sessions confirmed the conviction, it would probably fall with it. Required, A. R. 283.

III. PROCEEDINGS IN REVIEW OF SESSIONS.

1. Appeal to Superior Court.

Right of.]—Quære, whether a party having appealed to the quarter sessions under 13 & 14 Viet. c. 54, from a conviction by a justice of the peace, has any right of appeal from the decision of that court. Victoria Plank Road Co. v. Simmons, 15 U. C. R. 303.

Municipal By-law—Certiorari.]—
The defendant was convicted before the mayor of breaking a town by-law, and appealed to the quarter sessions, where the conviction was upheld. A motion was then made in the common pleas court against the indictment, which was brought up by certiorari, and the conviction was again upheld. Quere, as to the right of appeal from the quarter sessions. Regina v. Watson, 7 C. P. 495.

Petty Trespass Act.]—Where a person convicted under the Petty Trespass Act, has appealed to the quarter sessions, where the conviction is confirmed, no appeal lies thence to the Queen's bench. Regina v. Impey, H. T. 4 Vict.; Regina v. Hussey, 2 P. R. 194.

See Regina v. Boultbee, 23 U. C. R. 457, post 2.

2. Case Reserved.

Effect of Stating Case—Remoral from Nessions.]—Defendant having been convicted at the quarter sessions in June, 1864, judgment was reserved, and a special case stated for the opinion of the court of common pleas. The questions thus reserved not having been heard or disposed of, the case, having been duly adjourned from time to time, was again brought up at the sessions in March, 1864, and a rule nisi granted for a new trial, which was afterwards discharged. The defendant appealed from that decision:—Held, that, as the case remained with the common pleas, the quarter sessions was not legally in possession of it, so as to grant the rule nisi; and that the Queen's bench therefore could not be called upon to review the decision. Regina v. Boult-bee, 23 U. C. R. 457.

Observance of Statutory Requirements.]—The court will not hear a case from the quarter sessions unless the statute and rules of court prescribing the preliminary steps have been strictly complied with. Regina v. Hatch, 15 C. P. 461.

Power to Reserve Case — Misdemeanour.] — The appellant, having been convicted before justices of having pretended to be a physician, contrary to 29 Vict. c. 34, appealed to the quarter sessions, and was found guilty.—Held. that the sessions had no power to reserve a case under C. S. U. C. c. 112, the appellant not being a person "convicted of treason, felony, or misdemeanour," Semble, that if 29 Vict. had in terms declared the act charged unlawful, it would have been an indictable misdemeanour, Pomeroy v. Wilson, 26 U. C. R. 45.

See Regina v. McEvoy, 20 U. C. R. 344, ante I.

3. Certiorari.

Relief upon—Award of Restitution.] — Defendant, having been convicted at the quarter sessions on an indictment for forcible entry, was fined, but that court refused to order a writ of restitution, and the case was removed into the Queen's bench by certiorari:—Held, that it was in the discretion of the court either to grant or refuse the writ; and under the circumstances it was refused. Regina v. Wightman, 29 U. C. R. 211.

Review on Merits.]—On the 8th November, 1875, an information was laid against B. before the police magistrate of 8t. Thomas, by one N., under 32 & 33 Vict. c, 22 (D.), for having unlawfully and maliciously broken and injured the fence around the land of N. The defence set up was, that the fence encroached on B.'s land, but there was evidence which, if believed, went to shew that B. did not commit the injury under a bona fide exercise or belief of a right; and the magistrate convicted and fined him. B. appealed to the general sessions of the peace, where neither side asked for a jury; the court urged them to have one, but the respondent, N., refused, and the court, having heard the evidence, decided that B. acted, though mistakenly, under a bona fide belief that he had a right to remove the fence, and without malice; and they ordered the conviction to be quashed with costs. N. then applied to quash this order, upon the ground, amongst others, that the case could not be tried without a jury; "Held, that 32 & 33 Vict. c. 31, s. 66 (D.), which authorizes the court to try without a jury, is within the powers of the Dominion parliament, and that the case having been properly before sessions, the court above could not review the decision upon the merits. Section 60 of 32 & 33 Vict. c. 22, does not dispense with proof of malice in such cases, but, read in connection with s. 29, merely means that the malice need not be conceived against the owner of the property injured. Regina v. Bradshave, 38 U. C. R. 564.

To whom Directed.]—It is improper to call on the court of general sessions to shew cause to a rule for a certiorari. Re Nash and McCracken, 33 U. C. R. 181.

When Taken Away,1—In the case of a conviction for an offence not being a crime, affirmed on appeal to the sessions, the writ of certiorari is not taken away by 38 Vict. c. 4 (O.) In re Bates, 40 U. C. R. 284.

The statute 32 & 33 Vict. c, 31, s, 71 (D.), preventing applications touching the decision of a Judge at quarter sessions, in appeal, not only refers to cases where an adjudication has taken place therein, but even where the appeal has gone off on a preliminary objection to the right of entering it. I. BY AND AGAINST WHOM.

1. Agents and Auctioneers.

Against Agent.]—Held, that the defend-ant, upon the facts stated in the report, had no right to a set-off against the plaintiff upon the common counts, neither could he support a plea of payment, or accord and satisfaction; but that, if he had any remedy at all against the plaintiff (and the court thought none existed), he should have brought a special action for negligence of the plaintiff as agent, in not fulfilling his instructions. Sword v. Car-ruthers, 7 U. C. R. 313.

Action by Principal.]—The plaintiffs sued for the price of goods sold and delivered. The defendant pleaded that the goods were sold to him by one A., whom the defendant believed to be the principal, and that ant believed to be the principal, and that before the defendant knew that the plaintiffs were the principals, the said A. became in-debted to the defendant in a sum of $400, which he, the defendant, was willing to set off against the plaintiffs' claim. The jury found a verdict for the defendant on this plea:—Held, that the defendant, having purchased the goods without notice of A.'s being chased the goods without notice of A.'s being an agent (A. having sold them in his own name), could set off the debt due to him from A. personally, in the same way as if A. had been the principal; and that the verdict should be sustained. Bovemanville Machine Co. v. Dempster, 2 S. C. R. 21.

Against Auctioneer.]—By an auction-eer's conditions of sale, purchasers to an amount exceeding £30 were to have "six months' credit, giving approved indorsed notes:"—Held, that a purchaser over £30 could not be treated as a purchaser for cash upon his refusal to furnish the indorsed note; and, as he could not consequently be sued on the common count for goods sold and delivered until after the expiration of the credit, that to a special action brought by the auctioneer to a special action brought by the auctioneer against the purchaser, before the credit had expired, for not giving the indorsed note when requested, a plea of set-off would be inadmissible. Wakefield v. Gorrie, 5 U. C. R. 159.

To an action by an auctioneer against a purchaser for goods sold, the purchaser pleaded that A. delivered the goods to the auctioneer to sell; that A. was the agent of B., to whom the goods belonged; and that he (the purchaser) had a set-off against B., without further alleging that the auctioneer sold these purchaser plead the set-off against B., without further alleging that the auctioneer sold these further alleging that the auctioneer sold these goods to him as the auctioneer of B. S. C., ib. 160.

By Agent.]—An agent, if sued by his principal for money received, cannot deduct in the first instance from such money the amount of a claim for money lent, or for any inde-pendent transaction between himself and his principal—treating the balance as the only sum held for the use of the plaintiff; but he must plead his demand by way of set-off against his gross receipts. 3. Companies and Shareholders.

Creditor of Vessel—Owner—Action for Debt—Unpaid Stock.]—The defendant and one H., in order to utilize an engine in which they were interested, arranged to have a steam vessel built, which was to be the propsteam, vessel out, which was to be the property of a company to be formed under the Ontario Joint Stock Act of 1874, with a capital of $30,000, in shares of $100 each. The vessel was built and registered in defendant's name, and several mortgages given by the purpose of the property of ant's name, and several mortgages given by him upon her. In March, 1876, the plaintiffs, at the solicitation of the defendant and H., and upon their agreement to use the plaintiffs' wharf at a wharfage of $300 for the season, agreed to take stock in the projected company, executed a deargonic plaintiff. company, executed a document prepared for intending stockholders, and gave two notes for $250 each, the first of which the plaintiffs paid, but not the latter. Some $900 stock was subscribed, and a meeting of intending stockholders held, at which resolutions were passed as to the formation of the company, and appointing trustees to receive a conveyance of the vessel in trust for the company until formed. The company was never formed, and it was admitted that the Ontario Act did not authorize its formation, nor was there ever a conveyance to the trustees. tiffs, not having been paid the $300, the wharfage for 1876, which was charged against the vessel, sued defendant as the legal owner:-Held, that they were entitled to recover; that their subscription for stock did not constitute them joint owners or co-partners in the ves-sel, nor could defendant set off the amount of see, nor count decembant see on the amount of the unpaid stock noie, for not only had the consideration therefor wholly failed, but it could only be a matter between the plaintiffs and the company, if formed. Sylvester v. McCuaig, 28 C. P. 443.

Judgment Creditor of Company—Action against Shareholder—Execution.]—Action against Shareholder—Execution.]—Action against defendant as a shareholder in a company incorporated under 27 & 28 Vict. c. 28, by the plaintiff, a creditor of the company, alleging a judgment recovered and fi. fa. returned nulla bona. Plea, on equitable grounds, a set-off due to defendant by the company, on the common counts, and on a judgment recovered by the defendant against the company, on which a fi. fa. had been returned nulla bona:—Held, that the plea formed no defence: for the plaintiff was not claiming in right of the company, but by virtue of a specific statutory remedy; and the decision in Macbeth v. Smart, 14 Gr. 298, was in principle applicable, notwithstanding the fact of defendant having a judgment and execution. Benner v. Curric, 36 U. C. R. 411.

Officer of Company—Action for Salary —Unpaid Stock—Excess of Set-off.]—The defendants were an incorporated company, the capital of which was $30,000, in 100 shares of $300 each, 90 of which had been subscribed for and paid up in full by duly made calls thereon. Subsequently the de-fendants employed the plaintiff to take charge fendants employed the plaintiff to take charge of their business, and he was appointed presi-dent, at a salary of $1.200. He subscribed for seven shares of the unallotted stock, debited himself with the amount thereof, $2.100, in the company's books, and after-wards paid for it. Afterwards, desiring to obtain control of the company, he arranged with four of the stockholders for the transfer to him of their stock; but one of them, M., to enable him to remain as a director, was to and did subscribe for the three remaining shares unallotted. Subsequently the plaintiff wished to withdraw from this arrangement, wished to windraw and the parties agreed to cancel it; but M. was to be relieved of the three shares, and M.'s name was accordingly erased, and the plaintiff's inserted, as subscriber for these shares, the substitution being made either by plaintiff himself or by the book-keeper by his direction. It was also arranged between the plaintiff and the other directors that this stock should be entered in the stock book as paid up in full, but the plaintiff was to be debited with the $900, to be paid out of his salary as president. Accordingly the plain-tiff, with his knowledge and assent, was so debited, and from time to time, as his salary became payable, it was set off against it, and a balance afterwards struck in the books on this basis. There was no by-law regulating calls or transfers of stock, and no calls were made on the plaintiff for either amounts subscribed by him, and no transfer from M. to plaintiff, except in the manner stated :- Held, that no transfer was necessary, as the plain-tiff's subscription must be held as an original one, nor were any calls required, for the plaintiff by his conduct had impliedly agreed plaintin by ins conduct had impliedly agreed that none need be made, and both he and the company were estopped from denying his ownership of the shares. The plaintiff hav-ing sued defendants for his salary:—Held, that defendants were entitled to set off the amount due on this stock. Held, also, that they were entitled to have judgment in their favour for the excess of the set-off over the plaintiff's claim, and that for such purpose no special prayer or conclusion in their plea of set-off was necessary. Smart v. Bowman-ville Machine and Implement Co., 25 C. P. 503.

Action for Salary—Unpaid Stock—Winding-up.]—To an action by the plaintiff for salary against a company incorporated under the Imperial Joint Stock Companies Acts, defendants pleaded a set-off. It appeared that the plaintiff and one H. held shares which had been issued as paid up, but that that fact not having been registered as required by the statute, they had been placed on the list of contributories under the Winding-up Acts in England, as liable for the debts of the company to the extent of their shares. The plaintiff also held similar shares in his own name:—Held, that under a special equitable plea the defendants might set off the alleged unpaid shares held by the plaintiff, but not those held by the plaintiff and H.; and that their proper remedy, therefore, was to apply to stay the action under the equity of the Imperial Acts, which application might be made to this court. Semble, that the action should be stayed, and all matters concerning the company left to be dealt with under the Winding-up Acts in England. Howell v. Dominion of Canada Oils Refinery Co., 37 U. C. R. 484.

4. Division Court Clerks.

Official Fees—Private Debt—Sureties.]—An action against the sureties of a division court clerk, for moneys received by him for the plaintift, having been referred, the arbitrator submitted a special case, stating that in 1858 the plaintiff sued the clerk for goods sold to him; that the clerk then produced a memorandum of settlement between them, signed by the plaintiff, relating to suits in the division court, which shewed a sum of £30 os. 8d. due to the clerk; that the Judge thereupon, against the clerk's wish, and without any particulars of set-off having been given, treated this as a set-off, and deducted it from the plaintiff's claim. The sureties, defendants in this suit referred, contended that the plaintiff's demand then sued for being a private account against the clerk, that sum was improperly set off, and they claimed to have it credited to them in this action against moneys since received for the plaintiff:—Held, that what had been done in the former suit could not be thus reviewed, and that, as the clerk could not take credit a second time for this sum as against the plaintiff, neither could his sureties. Franklin v. Gream, 20 U. C. R. S4.

See Moffatt v. Foley, 26 U. C. R. 509, post 5.

5. Executors.

Executor de Son Tort—Creditor.]—In an action by a creditor against an executrix de son tort, she cannot set off a debt due from the plaintiff to her testator. Cameron v, Cameron, 23 C. P. 289.

Parent and Child—Advancement — Administration.]—A father, before his daughter's marriage (in 1857), wrote a letter to her intended husband, saying he would give her £2,500 when she came of age, and one-fourth of his residuary estate at his death. In 1858, and before she came of age, the father advanced money to the husband, for which he took his mote; but which he charged in his ledger to the joint account of the husband and wife, and intended, if the same was not repaid, to set off the amount against his subject of the administration of the estate, that the executors had a right to set off the advance against the wife's share. Torrance v. Cheectt, 12 Gr. 407.

Promissory Note—Ranking on Insolvent Estate—Bank Deposit,—A testator, having a deposit to his credit in a bank at the time of his death, was indebted to the bank on a more under discount, which had not then natured. The deposit remained with the bank until after the maturity of the note, when the bank brought an action on it against the executors of his insolvent estate, who claimed that the bank should rank on the estate for the full amount of the note and give credit upon the dividend for the amount of the deposit not of the deposit;—Held, that the deposit not having been withdrawn or demanded before the maturity of the note, the bank was entitled to set off the debt on the note against the deposit, and to rank for the balance. Ontario Bank v. Routhier, 32 O. R. 67.

Representative Capacity—Debt of Estate—Surety.]—A testator who owed debts exceeding his personal estate, devised his land to one of his sons, whom he also appointed an executor. The devisee paid debts exceeding the personal estate, and left but one debt unpaid. For the creditor to whom that debt was due the devisee became surety for an amount exceeding the debt so due by the testator; and the devisee subsequently gave a mortgage on the land devised to secure the amount he was surety for:—Held, that the debt due by testator was to be applied towards the discharge of the sum for which the devisee had become surety. Gotdsmith v. Gotdsmith, 17 Gr. 213.

— Debt to Estate—Sureties.]—Declaration against the executrix of F., a division court clerk, on the covenant entered into by him and his sureties, for non-payment of money collected by him. Plea, on equitable grounds, set-off for money due to defendant as executrix, on a judgment recovered by her as such executrix against the plaintiff, for goods sold, money lent, &c., by testator to plaintiff:—Held, a good defence. Moffatt v. Foley, 20 U. C. R. 509.

Individual Debt.]—Action on the common counts against an executor on his testator's promise. Plea, a set-off for goods sold and money paid by defendant as executor to the plaintiff:—Held, bad, as attempting to set off an individual debt against a demand due from defendant in his capacity of executor. Money Made—Claim against Plaintiff—Attorney's Lien.]—A sherriff cannot retain money made on an execution, on the ground that he has himself a claim for the amount retained against the plaintiff, who has absconded, where the plaintiff attorney titled to receive it on account of dvances made to the plaintiff. Burnham v. Manners, 2 U. C. R. 94.

Sale under Execution—Claim for Purchase Money—Individual Debt.]—A sheriff, having at a sale under execution sold goods to the defendants, sued there can be a substantial to the defendants, sued there is to which the plaintiff replied, equitably, that the money due on the sale and purchase more for goods by the bank was due and payable to the plaintiff as sheriff, and that the claims mentioned in the plea were claims against the plaintiff individually:—Held, that the demand the sheriff had against the defendants as purchasers not being a mere personal demand, but he being in a measure the agent of the plaintiff in the suit in which the execution issued, the defendants were not entitled to set off his personal debt against the claim against them by the sheriff in his official or ministerial capacity. 7. Vendor and Purchaser.

Covenant by Purchaser to Pay off Mortgage—Action by Vendor to Enforce—Debt Due by Vendor.)—The declaration stated that one W. G. mortgaged to the plaintiff and two others, as trustees of S., his unexpired term in certain lands, to secure £400 and interest, which he thereby covenanted though the many stems of the plaintiff, to secure £226 fs. 6d.; that under a post of the plaintiff, to secure £226 fs. 6d.; that under a post of the plaintiff duly sold the mortgage the plaintiff duly sold the mortgage to said trustees, and the plaintiff that the plaintiff that the plaintiff that the plaintiff the secure £226 fs. 6d.; that under a post of the plaintiff that the plaintiff that the plaintiff the saignest of the plaintiff that the saignest of the covenants in the mortgage to said trustees. And the plaintiff alonged that defendant had not paid the price so to be paid by him for his purchase, and had not paid the last instalment of the mortgage to trustees. Defendant pleaded: (4) As to said price, a set-off for moneys due by plaintiff to defendant, (5) As to the plaintiff's claim in respect of the mortgage from W. G. to the trustees, a similar set-off:—Held, on demurrer, pleas bad, for they were pleaded to a cause of action not advanced, as the declaration was for the non-payment of money to the fifth plea, the claim under the covenant to pay the trustees was not one to which a set-off could be pleaded, the debts not being mutual. Martin, V.Clark, 20 U. C. R. 419.

II. EFFECT OF SET-OFF OR CLAIM OF SET-OFF.

Agreement after Action — Damages — Costs.]—Piaintiff agreed with defendant after action brought that if defendant would take a note which plaintiff had given to a third person, it should be allowed for and on account of this action. Defendant did so, and, by such payment and other items of set-off accruing before action brought, overbalanced plaintiff's demand:—Held, that plaintiff was still entitled to a verdict with damages which would carry full costs. Sherwood v. Campbell, 5 O. S. 2.

Failure to Prove—Subsequent Action.]
—Where two masons brought an action for work and labour against their employer, and recovered a verdict for £60, it was held that the employer could not afterwards bring an action against them for money he had paid them on account and which he had attempted to prove in the former action. Hunt v. Mc-Carthy, 6 O. S. 434.

Verdict in Former Action—Estoppel.]
—Where A. is sued by B., and is seeking to set off a demand for which he has already sued A., and has had a verdict:—Held, that he is estopped by such verdict from bringing the same demand a second time before the jury by way of set-off. Russell v. Rovee, 7 U. C. R. 484.

III. IN EQUITY.

Agreement—Evidence of,]—In the view of another between the same parties is extremely just; and where there is any technical difficulty in the way of its being done without an agreement, the court accepts slighter evidence of such an agreement than is usually required in order to establish disputed facts. Lundy v. McCulla, 11 Gr. 368.

Almony—Costa.]—In May, 1875, a deed of separation was executed between defendant and plaintiff, husband and wife, by which defendant was to pay the plaintiff $100 a year quarterly as maintenance. Afterwards in September, 1875, the plaintiff, objecting to the security offered, filed a bill for alimony, and defendant served a notice agreeing to allow her $100 a year quarterly for interim alimony. The plaintiff accepted the notice, and defendant paid his alimony until May, 1876, when a decree was made for specific performance of the agreement, but the plaintiff was ordered to pay defendant's costs:—Held, that the plaintiff must give credit for the sunspaid as interim alimony; and executions issued for the whole sum payable under the agreement were set aside; the costs payable by plaintiff were also ordered to be set off against the allowance, though such set-off was not asked for in the notice of motion. Maxwell, 7 P. R. 63.

Bank—Bill of Exchange—Dealing with Collateral Security—Set-off at Law,]—Where C. shipped flour to the order of a bank for account of L., and at the same time drew on L., discounted the bill at the bank, indorsed and delivered to the bank the carrier's receipt, and signed a memorandum stating that the receipt had been indorsed as collateral security for the payment of the draft, the bank to sell the flour, applying the proceeds to pay the draft, and to place the property in charge of any respectable broker or ware-houseman, without prejudice to the bank's claim upon any party to the draft:—Held, that the bank, though bound to retain the flour until the bill was accepted, might then, if they chose, deliver the flour to L., the fair construction of the agreement being that the retaining of possession until payment was optional with the bank. Quare, whether, if the bank were responsible for the flour under circumstances which prevented a set-off at law, that relief could be had in equity. Clark v. Bank of Montreal, 13 Gr. 211.

Costs—Separate Actions.] — Where there is a different cause of action in different courts between the same parties, the costs will not be ordered to be set off. Cuthbert v. Commercial Travellers Association, 7 P. R. 255.

Costs at Law and in Equity—Lien of Attorney.]—A bill had been filed for an injunction to stay an action of ejectment, which action the plaintiff successfully defended before any injunction could be obtained. He proceeded no further with his suit in equity, and the bill was dismissed with costs. It was contended that the costs at law should be set off as against these costs, but the referee considered that costs at law could not be set off against costs in equity, that being the rule in England. The order of the referee was affirmed as to the first point, and without expressing any opinion as to whether costs at law could be set off against costs in equity in a proper case, on this point also, on the ground that the lien of the attorney attached, and was paramount to any right to set off.

Insurance Moneys—Premium.]—An insurance company accepted a note for the premium, and the policy contained the following clause: "In case of loss, such loss is to be paid in thirty days after proof of loss; the amount of the note given for the premium, if unpaid, being first deducted." A partial loss having occurred:—Held, that the assured had a right in equity to set off the amount against the note. Berry v. Columbian Ins. Co., 12 Gr. 418.

Moneys in Administrator's Hands—Costs.)—On the dismissal of a bill, costs were taxed to defendants, and execution issued against the plaintiff, which was returned nulla bona. Two of the defendants, as administrators, held moneys, part of which would, on distribution, belong to the plaintiff, and which they now applied for leave to set off against the taxed costs. The motion was refused. Black v. Black, 11 Gr. 270.

Mortgage—Rents—Improvements.]—An assignment of an equity of redemption was made, which the court held to be void against the creditors of the mortgagor; but, it appearing that the sons of the assignee had paid off the mortgage for her benefit, the court gave relief only on the terms of the amount being paid to the assignee; and held, that the creditors were not entitled to set off the rents the assignee had received. Held, also, that in such a case the assignee was not entitled to be allowed for improvements made upon the mortgaged premises; but that, if the same were properly allowable, the rents and profits accrued should be set off against the value of such improvements. Buchanan v. McMullen, 25 Gr. 193.

Neglect to Set off at Law.]—A party who fails to take advantage of an opportunity to set off his debt at law, cannot in general come to equity for that purpose. Held, also, that the finding of a jury on a plea of payment cannot negative the existence of a crossdemand. Smith v. Murhead, 3 Gr. 610.

Reference.]—Where a plaintiff at law filed a bill to enforce his judgment, the court, under the circumstances, directed a reference to the master to take an account between the parties, defendant claiming to have had a set-off to a greater amount than the judgment, although the general rule is, that a party neglecting to set off his claim at law, cannot afterwards apply to the court of chancery to have the benefit of it. Cameron v. McDonald, 7 Gr. 402.

Partnership Claim—Separate Debt.]—
Tuprehased a quantity of bricks manufactured by the plaintiffs jointly, against one of whom (G.) he held a demand which he desired to set off against the price of the bricks; one of the plaintiffs being in fact assignee of a former partner of G.—Held, that, even if the effect of this was to constitute the plaintiffs tenants in common, it afforded no ground for setting off a separate against a joint debt. Graham v. Toms, 25 Gr. 184.

Partnership Debt—Costs.]—In a partnership suit the partnership was found indebted to defendant, and, on the other hand, defendant was liable to certain costs. Defendant having become insolvent: — Held, that the plaintiff was entitled, notwithstanding the insolvency, to set off the costs against the debt. Brigham v. Smith, 17 Gr. 512.

Promissory Note—Fealure of Consideration—Cross-Claim for Damages—Timber.]— Declaration by payees against makers of a note for $1.000, payable at the plaintiffs falsely and fraudulently represented to the dendants that they had the right to cut hardwood timbe under they gave defendants a list; that deemdants that they had they right to cut hardwood timbe under they gave defendants a list; that demants, wishing to purchase such properties that they had all the lots examined, and thereupon, relying upon and believing plaintiffs by as plaintiffs well knew, defendants agreed with the plaintiffs to purchase the right for $2.500, or which $1.800 was paid down, and this note given for the balance; that defendants relying, &c, cut and made timber on the lots; that the plaintiffs had no such right in respect of a large quantity of said lands, by reason whereof defendants' rights acquired under said agreement were worth less by more than $1.000 that the plaintiffs represented they were possessed of and pretended to sell; that defendants first became aware of the fraud after they had paid the money and given the note, and expended a large sum, and they are likely to lose the money expended by them in manufacturing a large quantity of the timber cut by them. And defendants prayed that it might be declared they were not liable to pay the note; and that the plaintiffs might be required to pay the note; and that the plaintiffs might be required to pay them a fair compensation for their loss by reason of such representations:—Held, on demurrer, plea bad; that it shewed only a partial failure of consideration, and not of any definite sum: that it was not a case of either legal or equitable set-off; and that the defendants could not prevent the plaintiffs' recovery until defendants' right to damages or compensation and the amount of it had been ascertained; and, semble, that it should have shewn a tender of or readiness to pay the value of, or an offer to give up to plaintiffs, the timber cut by them on the lots to which the plaintiffs had no right; and, perhaps, that since discovering the fraud they had cut no timber on such lots. Georgian Bay Lumber Co. v. Thompson, 35 U. C. R. 64.

Price of Land—Claim for Compensation.]—On a sale of lands the purchaser gave his note for the balance of purchase money, and received a conveyance containing the usual covenants. There was a mortgage on the property at the time for a sum less than the note, and the purchaser claimed to set off against the note damages he had sustained by being unable to resell the land in consequence of the mortgage: — Held, not allowable. Stevenson v. Hodder, 15 Gr. 570.

Purchase Money of Land-Lien for-Partnership Account - Mortgage.] - A purchase of lands had been made by plaintiffs and one C. jointly, each to pay one-half the purchase money. The plaintiffs paid more than their share, and had a lien on C.'s interest for the excess; they also had lumber dealings together, the accounts of which were unsettled, and the balance thereon was claimed by each to be in his favour. In accounts of these lumber dealings the plaintiffs had charged C. with his share of the purchase money. They afterwards filed a bill alleging that the land account and the lumber account were unconnected; and praying that they should be paid their advances for C. on the land, and that in default his mortgagees and assignee should be foreclosed:-Held, that, as against the lien of the plaintiffs on the land, these mortgagees were entitled to set off the amount, if any, due by the plaintiffs on the lumber dealings. Cook v. Mason, 24 Gr. 112.

Reciprocal Payments — Decree — Motion,]—Where a decree directs sums of money to be paid reciprocally by the parties, but is silent as to setting off one sum against another, that object cannot afterwards be attained upon motion to do so; the cause must be reheard. Robertson v. Meyers. 2 Gr. 431. See Brown v. Netson, 11 P. R. 121.

Specific Performance—Purchase Moncy—Costs,—In decrees for specific performance of a contract for purchase, a time for payment of the purchase money should be limited, or, in default, the bill dismissed. In such cases also the decree should direct a set-off between the unpaid money and the costs. McDonald v, Elder, 3 Gr. 244.

Unconnected Cross-demands.]—Where there are unconnected cross-demands, equity does not in general interfere to set off one against the other, in the absence of any special circumstance or agreement, express or implied. Smith v, Muirhead. 3 Gr., 610.

See Egleson v. Howe, 3 A. R. 566; Williams v. Reynolds, 25 Gr. 49.

IV. IN PARTICULAR ACTIONS.

County Court—Jurisdiction.] — A plaintiff cannot, by giving credit for a set-off, compel defendant to set it up, or give the county court jurisdiction. Furnival v. Saunders, 26 U. C. R. 119. See, however, S. C., 2 C. L. J. 245.

See Russell v. Conway, 5 U. C. R. 256; Fleming v. Livingstone, 6 P. R. 63.

Replevin — Avoiery for Rent.] — Set-off may be pleaded to an action for rent due under a demise, but not to an avovery for rent in replevin. McAnnany v. Tickett, 23 U. C. R. 122.

Replevin Bond.] — To an action on a replevin bond, by the assignee of the sheriff, a set-off forms a good legal defence, the penalty being considered as the debt. To such an action defendants pleaded, on equitable grounds, that the cordwood for which the replevin was brought and the bond given, was claimed by M. (defendant in the replevin), and it was agreed between him and the plaintiff that M. should haul the wood from where it was cut to the river, and if M. could not prove that he was entitled to the wood the plaintiff should pay him for hauling and bankage of the same, which amounted to $165: — Held, that this sum might be set off against the breach for non-return of the wood. Mcketcey v. McLean, 34 U.C. R. 635:

Special Action—Common Counts—Sufficiency of.]—A plaintiff cannot, by declaring specially, where he could recover on the money counts alone, deprive defendant of his right of set-off. Miller v. Munro, M. T. 3 Vict.

V. PLEADING AND EVIDENCE.

Admission of Liability, —In an action for wages earned as a lumberman, the dispute being whether the person hiring the plaintiff was defendant's agent, the defendant pleaded a set-off, and at the trial attempted to prove under it that the plaintiff had received goods from the store at the shanty:—Held, that no inference could be drawn from this as an admission by defendant of his liability for plaintiff's wages. Stewart v. Scott, 27 U. C. R. 27.

Amount of Set-off—Particulars..]—The declaration contained eleven counts, with damages alleged at £200. Defendant pleaded to the whole declaration that the intestate was indebted to defendant in £250 on a judgment obtained for £138 5s. 7d.:—Held, plea defective, in not shewing how the £250 was due on the judgment. Blackstone v. Chapman, 3 C, P. 221.

Excess over Claim — Judgment for Defendant.] — A defendant is entitled to have judgment in his favour for the excess of his set-off over the plaintiff's claim, and for such purpose no special prayer or conclusion in the plea of set-off is necessary. Snart v. Boumanville Machine and Implement Co., 25 C. P. 503.

Sec, also, Parsons v. Crabb, 31 U. C. R. 435, post, VI.; Sinclair v. Town of Galt, 17 U. C. R. 259, post VII.

Nolle Prosequi as to one Defendant.]
—Action on a note made by M. and indorsed by C. Pleas by M., general issue and set-off; and by C., general issue, set-off, and release.
The plaintiffs took issue on M.'s pleas, and entered a nolle prosequi as to C.:—Held. by

Robinson, C.J., and Macaulay, J., that, inasmuch as the plaintiffs confessed by their nolle prosequi that C, had a set-off sufficient to meet the note they could not recover the amount against the other defendant; and by Jones and Hagerman, J.J., that they were not precluded from doing so. Robertson v. Moore, 6 O. S. 646.

Offer to Deduct. — Plea of set-off to a less amount than plaintiff's claim:—Held, bad on special demurrer, for not offering to deduct the set-off instead of pleading it in bar. Jarvis v. Dickson, T. T. 3 & 4 Vict.

Particulars of Demand—Admission of Items—Statute of Limitations,)—Where there is no plea of set-off on the record, the defendant cannot have the advantage of any mere items of set-off, not being payments on account, which the plaintiff has admitted in his particulars of demand; and where part of the plaintiff's own demands, stated in his particulars, are barred by the Statute of Limitations, he has a right to place against these the items of set-off appearing in his particulars to be beyond the six years. Ford v. Spafford, S. U. C. R. 17.

Proof of Demand.]—Though it may be necessary to prove a demand where A. is suing B. as for a breach of contract in not delivering certain goods, &c.; yet where B. is suing A., and A. is setting off his breach against B.'s claim, it does not follow that the same demand must then be proved. Russell v. Roice, 7 U. C. R. 484.

VI. PRACTICE.

Affidavit—Merits.]—An affidavit disclosing a set-off merely is not an affidavit of merits. Anderton v. Johnston, S L. J. 46.

Attachment.]—Quære, as to the effect of an attaching order on the right to set-off. Mc-Naughton v. Webster, 6 L. J. 17.

Judgment on Set-off Nonsuit, — Semble, that a defendant, though the plaintiff be nonsuited or have a verdict against him on the other issues, may have his set-off found and a verdict entered for it, for he has an independent right to judgment for his claim, which the plaintiff cannot defent by a nonsuit. Parsons v. Crabb, 31 U. C. R. 435.

which the plaintiff cannot defeat by a nonsuit. Parsons v. Crabb, 31 U. C. R. 435. See Smart v. Bowmanville Machine and Implement Co., 25 C. P. 503, ante V.: Sinclair v. Town of Galt, 17 U. C. R. 259, post VII.

Notice of Set-off.] — A notice of set-off could not be given before the plea of the general issue was filed. Bickerstaff v. Merchant, H. T. 2 Vict.

VII. SUBJECT MATTER OF SET-OFF.

1. Claims Accruing after Action.

Effect of — Damages—Costs.] — Plaintiff agreed with defendant, after action brought, that if defendant would take a note which the plaintiff had given to a third person, it should be allowed for and on account of this action. Defendant did so, and by such payment and other items of set-off accruing before action brought, overbalanced the plaintiff's demand: —Held, that plaintiff was still entitled to a verdict with nominal damages, which would carry full costs. Sherwood v. Campbell, 5 O. 8, 2.

Promissory Note.] — A promissory note made by the plaintiff to defendant, falling due after the service of the plaintiff's writ, but before declaration filed, may be set off in the action. Thorne v. Haight, H. T. 6 Vict.

Pleading—Cheque — Bill of Exchange — Dishonour, [— To an action on a cheque by the bearer against the maker, defendant pleaded that the cheque was given to one B., who had always been the lawful holder thereof, and that the plaintiffs held the same as his agents; that it was given for bills of exchange drawn by B. on H. & Co., and since overdue and dishonoured, whereof B. had notice; that the cheque was held by plaintiffs as B.'s agents, and B. was liable to pay defendant, as drawer of said bills, the amount of said cheque: and defendant offered to set off the same:—Held, plea bad, for not alleging that the bills were dishonoured before the commencement of this suit. Wood v. Stevenson, 16 U. C. R. 527.

Procuring Assignment of Judgment —Notice.]—After plaintiff had commenced an action against the defendant to recover from him in respect of his unpaid stock in a joint stock company the sum of $442.29, being the amount of an unsatisfied judgment recovered by the plaintiff against the company, one B, recovered a judgment against the company, one B, recovered a judgment against the company, ore
$4.333.08, and assigned it to one G, who assigned part of the money recovered to the extent of $500, the amount of the defendant's unpaid stock, to the defendant. The object of the assignment to the defendant. The object of the assignment to the defendant was to give him priority over the plaintiff's claim:—Held, that the procuring of such assignment by defendant being for such purpose, and being a voluntary act on defendant's part, and with notice of plaintiff's claim, did not constitute a defence to it; but semble, if the set-off had accrued to the defendant in his own right, although after action brought, it would have been otherwise. Field v. Galloway, 5 O. R.

Claims by and against Assignees in Insolvency and in Winding-up Proceedings.

Bank—Winding-np—Cheque— Subsequent Liabitities—Discretion.]—On 15th November, 1887, the day before the suspension of the Central Bank, one D., having sufficient funds to his credit, drew a cheque unon it payable to C., who deposited the same in the Dominion Bank, and obtained an advance upon it, and the Dominion Bank claimed upon it in the winding-up proceedings having presented it for payment on 17th November, when, however, the Central Bank had suspended payment. On 23rd November, 1887, the Central Bank marked the cheque good, debiting D.'s account and crediting the Dominion Bank with the amount thereof. Afterwards, however, the liquidators claiming the right to set off certain subsequently accruing liabilities of D. against the cheque, the Dominion Bank withdrew their claim upon it, and the master in ordinary disallowed it. after the first dividend had been paid, C. beard of this, and filed a claim on the cheque, on 13th September, 1888. The master, however, held that the time for filing claims having elapsed, he had a discretion as to allowing the claim, and allowed it only subject to the said set-off;—Held, that there was no right to set off as claimed, and that the allowance of the claim was x debito justifies, and not discretionary. The fact of the Central Bank having accepted the cheque, and credited the amount to the Dominion Bank, and charged the amount to P., shewed conclusively that at that then the Central Bank was not a creditor of D: nor did the case come within the meaning of any of the clauses in the Winding-up Act relating to fraudulent preferences. Re Central Bank of Canada, Cayley's Case. 17 O. R. 122.

winding-up-Contributory-Retro-activity of Statute. |--1. I., the appellant, gave to one Q. his note for $6,000, which was indorsed to the Bank of P. E. I.; the Union Bank at the time held a cheque or draft, made by the Bank of P. E. I., for nearly the same amount, and this draft the appellant pur-chased for something more than $200 less than its face value; being sued on the note, than its face value; being such on the note, he set off the amount of such cheque or draft, and paid the difference. On the trial he ad-mitted he had purchased it for the purpose of using it as an off-set to the claim on his note, which he had made non-negotiable, and he also admitted that if he could succeed in his set-off and another party could succeed in a similar transaction, the Union Bank would get their claim against the Bank of P. E. I., which had become insolvent, paid in full. The Judge at the trial charged that if the draft was indorsed to the defendant to enable him to use it as a set-off he could not do so, because he was a contributory within the meaning of the 76th section of the Canada Winding-up Act, and that the Act, which came into force on the 12th May, 1882, was retrospective as regards the indorsements made be-fore it was passed, but within thirty days before the commencement of the proceedings to wind up the affairs of the bank. The jury, under direction, found a general verdict for the plaintiff for the amount of the note and interest: — Held, that the appellant having purchased the draft in question for value and in good faith prior to 26th May, 1882, the Winding-up Act, 45 Vict. c. 23 (D.), was not applicable, and therefore the appellant was entitled to the benefit of his set-off, and that the Winding-up Act was not retrospective as to this indorsement. Ings v. Bank of Prince Edward Island, 11 S. C. R. 265.

rity—Depoint Receipt.]—X, in making a deposit on a sweepint.]—X, in making a deposit on a weepint contract, gave a marked cheeping of the property of the prop ward Island, 11 S. C. R. 205, that Y. as maker of the note to the bank was a mere debtor and not a contributory, and that, although also a shareholder, and so libble as a contributory, he was not a contributory quoad the debt which arose out of an independent transaction, and for that reason s. 73 of R. S. C. c. 129 did not apply. Held, also, that the prohibition in the Act against acquiring debts for the purpose of set-off is limited to the case of contributories; as to debtors the law of set-off as administered by the courts is as applicable as if the company were a going concern; and, following Re Moseley, &c., Coke Co., Barrett's Case, 4 De G. J. & S. 756, that the right of set-off virtually arose not by reason of dealings subsequent to the winding-up order, but of dealings prior thereto, because the engagement was to give security to the satisfaction of the government, and in taking up the deposit receipt and supplying better security Y. was only fulfilling that which he was obliged to do by a prior bond fide engagement. In re Central Bank of Candad, Yorke's Case, 15 O. R. 625.

Officer of Company—Breach of Trust.]

—L. having improperly withdrawn from the moneys of the company a certain sum, on the assumption that he was entitled to it in payment of his services:—Held, that this was a breach of trust on L.'s part, and the amount thus withdrawn formed a debt based on a breach of trust, recoverable by the liquidator, under the special provisions of R. S. C. c. 129, as to which no set-off was permissible against any debt or dividend due from the company to L. Re Bolt and Iron Co., Livingstone's Case, 14 O. R. 211, 16 A. R. 397.

Preference—Appropriation of Payments
-Unsecured Debt—Redemption.1—A trader carrying on business in two establishments mortgaged both stocks in trade to B. as security for indorsements on a composition with his creditors and for advances in cash and goods to a fixed amount. The composition notes were made and indorsed by B., who made advances to an amount considerably over that stated in the mortgage. A few months afterwards the mortgagor was in default for the advances and a portion of overdue notes. and there were some notes not matured, and B. consented to the sale of one of the mortgaged stocks, taking the purchaser's notes in payment, applying the amount generally in payment of his overdue debt, part of which was unsecured. A few days afterwards B. seized the other stock of goods covered by his mortgage, and about the same time the sheriff seized them under execution, and shortly afterwards the mortgagor assigned for benefit of creditors. An interpleader issue between B. and the execution creditor resulted in favour of B., who received, out of the proceeds of the sale of the goods, under an order of the court. the balance remaining due on his mortgage: Horsfall v. Boisseau, 21 A. R. 663. The assignee of the mortgagor then brought an action against B. to recover the amount representing the unsecured part of his debt, which was paid by the purchase of the first stock, which payment was alleged to be a preference to B. over the other creditors:—Held, affirming the decision below, that there was no preference to B. within R. S. O. 1887 c. 124, s. 2; that his position was the same as if his whole debt secured and unsecured had been overdue, and there had been one sale of both stocks of goods, realizing an amount equal to such debt, in which case he could have appropriated a portion of the proceeds to payment of his secured debt, and would have had the benefit of the law of set-off as to the unsecured debt under s. 23 of the Act; and that the only remedy of the mortgagor or his assignee was the which would be the country of the mortgagor or his assignee was by redemption before the sale, which would have deprived B, of the benefit of such set-off. Stephens v. Boisseau, 26 S. C. R. 437.

Right Passing to Official Assignee.]

A mortgagor and mortgagee dealt together —A mortgagor and mortgagee dealt together for some years without having had any settle-ment of accounts, and the former became insolvent. At the date of the insolvency there existed a right of set-off in favour of the mortgagor for the balance due him on their general dealings:—Held, that such right of set-off passed to the official assignee of the mortgagor and that a transferee of the se-curity took it subject to the equity. Court v. Holland, 29 Gr. 19.

3. Cross-Actions and Counterclaims.

Costs of Prior Litigation - Covenant to Pay.]—Declaration on common counts, Equitable plea, that defendant, under a power of sale in a mortgage, of which he was the assignee, on the 1st October, 1859, sold to plaintiff the premises therein comprised for $400, $250 to be paid down at time of sale (which sum was paid, and is the money sought to be recovered in this action); and at the same time, by agreement under seal between the parties, the plaintiff covenanted to pay any costs that defendant might be put to, by reason of any chancery or other proceeding arising out of the sale; and sub-sequently the mortgagor filed his bill in chancery to set aside the sale, making both the plaintiff and defendant parties; that by decree the sale was set aside, and defendant ordered to pay his own costs, which he did pay, and the same amounted to more than the pay, and the same amounted to more than the plaintiff's cause of action, which he asks to have set off, and plaintiff to pay the difference. On demurre:—Held, bad as a plea of set-off, and on other grounds, as the matter set up was only the subject of a cross-action. Turley v. Evans, 13 C. P. 214.

Money Paid under Agreement-Improper Retention.]-In assumpsit for work and labour, &c., defendant at the trial attempted to prove by way of set-off money received from him by plaintiff, in pursuance of an agreement to which they were mutually of an agreement to which they were mutually bound, and which was to be paid by plaintiff into a bank, being tolls received by defendant as keeper of a gate rented by him, and for which the plaintiff had become security for which the plaintiff had become security for him:—Held, clearly not the subject of set-off, but that, if plaintiff had retained money improperly, defendant had his remedy on the agreement. Denison v. Donnelly, 2 U. C. R.

Pleading Set-off as Counterclaim— Effect of.]—The plaintiff in his statement of claim alleged certain transactions between him and the defendant, in the whole compre-hending over $1,000, and claimed a balance of $169.72 and interest from the 1st January, 1888. The defendant by his statement of defence denied that he was indebted to the plaintiff in any sum, and alleged that the plaintiff was indebted to him for goods supplied and on certain promissory notes in the sum of $1,325.75, for which he counterclaimed :- Held, that the matter of the counterclaim was really a set-off, and, even if it were not improper to call it a counterclaim, having regard to con. rule 373, this could naving regard to con, rule 373, this could not change its real character. Cutler v. Morse, 12 P. R. 594, referred to. Bennett v. White, 13 P. R. 149. See Cutler v. Morse, 12 P. R. 594; Sander-son v. Ashfield, 13 P. R. 230; Girardot v. Wel-ton, 19 P. R. 162, 201.

Rent-Damages for Distress.]-The defendant having distrained for rent in arrear, the plaintiff alleged that the defendant was indebted to him in damages for breach of the covenants in the lease to repair, and to lease to plaintiff an adjoining piece of land, and obtained ex parte an interim injunction restraining proceedings under the distress, which was dissolved on the ground of concealment of facts:—Held, that the damages claimed by the plaintiff were not a 'debt' within s. 3 of 50 Vict. c. 23 (O.), so as to constitute a set-off against the rent; and, although under the O. J. Act they might be the subject of counterclaim, they would not justify an in-junction as against a distress levied as here. Walton v. Henry, 18 O. R. 620.

Damages for Wrongful Entry . Solicitor's Lien.]-In an action by a tenant against his landlord for wrongful entry the tenant counterclaimed for rent, and a verdict was given for the same amount against the landlord for damages as was given against the tenant for rent. The trial Judge held that he had power to direct a set-off, although to the prejudice of the plaintiff's solicitor's lien for costs. Flett v. Way, 11 C. L. T. Occ. N.

4. Debts in Different Rights or between Different Parties.

Assignment of Debt-Damages against Assignment of Debt—Damages against Assigne.]—By an agreement for the dissolution of a firm, it was provided that all claims and demands, notes, bills, and book accounts belonging to the firm were to be collected by the plaintiffs, who were to be the owners thereof, and by virtue of this the plaintiffs sued defendant for a balance al-leged to be due for goods sold and delivered by the firm to defendant, who set up a claim for damages for non-delivery of goods by the for damages for non-denvery of goods by the firm which arose before the dissolution of the partnership:—Held, a valid assignment of a debt due by defendant to the plaintiffs; and that the defendants could set off the claim for damages arising by reason of a breach of the agreement under which the debt arose. The difference between the Imdebt arose. The difference between the Imperial and Ontario Choses in Action Act referred to. Seyfang v. Mann, 27 O. R. 631. Varied 25 A. R. 179.

Joint Claim-Individual Debt.]-To entitle a party to set off one debt against another, it must be shewn that the debts are due from and to the same parties respectively. Where, therefore a debt was due from A. to B., and costs were due from B. and his solicitor to A., the court refused an application by B. and his solicitor to set off the one amount against the other. Wilson v. Switzer, 1 Ch. Ch. 160.

Nominal Plaintiff—Issignment of Claim—Estopped. |— Defendant having pleaded a set-off to an action upon a covenant for the payment of money, the plaintiff replied on equitable grounds, in substance, that the deed declared on and the moneys sued for were, before this action, and before the alleged set-off had accrued, duly assigned for value by the plaintiff to D., and by D. to B.: that defendant had notice of and assented to both assignments: and that this action was brought for B.'s benefit, the plaintiff being a nominal plaintiff only; that, after the said assignments and notice thereof, B. sued defendant in the plaintiff sname on the same covenant for another breach, to which defendant pleaded non est factum, and a verdict and judgment were recovered against him, which he paid; and it was inequitable that he should now set up the defence pleaded:—Held, replication good. Dennison v. Knoz, 24 U. C. R. 119.

— Claim against Real Actor.]—A defendant cannot set up by way of compensation to a claim due to the plaintiff a judgment purchased subsequent to the date of the action, against one who is not a party thereto, and for whom the plaintiff is alleged to be a prête-non. Bury v. Murruy, 24 S. C. R. 77.

Partnership Claim—Individual Debt.]
—Evidence of a debt due by one of a firm (plaintiffs) in his individual capacity, will not support a plea of set-off to an action by the firm for a partnership claim. Pegg v. Plank, 3 C. P. 396.

T. purchased a quantity of bricks manufactured by the plaintiffs jointly, against one of whom (G.) he held a demand, which he desired to set off against the price of the bricks; one of the plaintiffs being in fact assignce of a former partner of G.—Held, that, even if the effect of this was to constitute the plaintiffs tenants in common, it afforded no ground for setting off a separate against a joint debt. Graham v. Toms, 25 Gr. 184.

Personal Covenant — Cross-claim as Trustec. — Held, that a married woman, though married before 4th May, 1859, was not bound by a covenant of her husband, entered into by him for himself, his heirs and assigns, as a lessor of certain lands, to pay at the expiration of the lease for a certain malthouse which the lessee was to have liberty to erect on the demised premises, though the reversion had been assigned to her husband and another as trustees for her, in such a way that she had the entire beneficial interest, and though the covenant ran with the land:— Held, also, affirming the decision in 2 O. R. 459, that a claim on behalf of the said trustees for rent in arrear, and for damages for non-repair, was not a matter of set-off against damages recovered against W. F. for breach of said covenant, though he was one of the trustees, they not being matters arising in the same right. Ambrose v. Frascr, 14 O. R. 551.

See Field v. Galloway, 5 O. R. 502, ante 1; Bowmanville Machine Co. v. Dempster, 2 S. C. R. 21. 5. Deduction from Contract Price.

Building Contract—Damages for Deley,]—Plaintiff, by deed, agreed to build a house for defendant for $1,150, by a day named, and that for each day that should elapse after that day until completion, defendant might deduct $5 from the contract price:—Held, that the sum of $5 per day was liquidated damages, not a penalty, and that it might be deducted from the contract price, without pleading it specially by way of set-off. Scott v. Dent, 38 U. C. R. 30.

See, also, Worthington v. Municipal Council of Haldimand, 10 U. C. R. 217; Brown v. Taggart, 10 U. C. R. 183; Truax v. Dixon, 17 O. R. 366.

6. Judgments.

Acknowledgment of Satisfaction— Stay, |—A, being in execution at the suit of B., recovered against B. a verdict for a smaller sum:—Held, that proceedings in A.'s action against B. should be stayed on B.'s acknowledging satisfaction on his judgment for the amount of A.'s verdict against him. Bethune v, Brown, 5 O. S. 352.

Assignment.] — Under the circumstances of this case the set-off of cross-judgments was refused, the plaintiff's judgment having been assigned. In re Smart v. Miller, 3 P. R. 385.

Bona Fides—Notice.]—A rule to set off a judgment recovered by defendant against the plaintiff against the judgment in this cause, was discharged with costs, because the plaintiff had assigned this judgment bona lide to a third party, and the defendant had notice thereof. Miller v. Thompson, 1 P. R. 245.

Notice—Surety—Equities—Injunction.]—T. and M. having cross-judgments at law applied to the court of chancery to set off the one against the other, which was refused on the ground that the judgment against T. had been assigned to a third person without notice; but, it appearing that M.'s liability to T. arose in consequence of T. being surety for M., the court granted an injunction against the assignee, to prevent his enforcing the judgment recovered by M.; as a person purchasing a chose in action does so subject to all the equities to which it is liable in the hands of the assignor. Thompson v. Miller, 4 Gr. 481.

Assignment of Verdict before Judgment.—The plaintiff had obtained a verdict against defendant for malicious prosecution. Defendant, in moving for a nonsuit or new trial on the evidence, asked also to set off a judgment which he had against the plaintiff against that to be entered on this verdict, consenting in that event to waive his motion against the verdict. The court granted this, notwithstanding an assignment of such verdict, which was alleged to have been made between the trial and term by the plaintiff to a third party in satisfaction of a debt. Orr v. Spooner, 19 U. C. R. 601.

Preview.]—The plaintiff had recovered a vericit for $000 against defendant for malicious prosecution, but judgment had not been signed thereon. At the same assizes the defendant recovered a verdict against the plaintiff for $380 on promissory notes, and signed judgment. The plaintiff almost immediately after its recovery assigned his verbe device to prevent a set-off:—Held, that the defendant was entitled to have the plaintiff serdict set of proper that the defendant was entitled to have the plaintiff serdict set off protanto by entering satisfaction upon his judgment to the extent of the verdict, and agying the costs of suit; and it made no difference that the judgment had not been entered by the plaintiff. Grant v. McAlpine, 46 U. C. R. 284.

Division Court.]—A judgment in a division court may be set off against the judgment of a superior court of record. Robinson v. Shields, 2 C. L. J. 45.

Preservation of Attorney's Lien.]— Under the circumstances stated in this case, the plaintif was allowed to set off a judgment obtained by defendant against him in a former action against this judgment, for which the present defendant was in custody, saving the attorney's lien on the first judgment. Reed v. Smith. 1 P. R. 321.

— Undertaking.]—Held, that a judgment purchased by defendant from a third party cannot be set off against the costs of the day, given to the plaintiff upon an application to postpone the trial, secured by the personal undertaking of the defendant's attorney to pay these costs, and upon which the plaintiff's attorney has a lien. Bennett v. Tregent, 6 P. R. 171.

Preservation of Special Lien.]—Held. that a special lien, given upon the proceeds of a judgment pending an appeal from such judgment, must prevail against an application to set off judgments. Ross v. McLay, 7 P. R. 97.

Principal and Surety. —A surety cannot claim to have a judgment obtained by his principal against the blaintiff, set off against a judgment obtained by the plaintiff against him as surety. Gray v. Smith, 6 O. S. 62.

Proof of Judgment in Insolvency.]—
Defendant, in September, 1848, recovered judgment against the plaintiff for a large debt, on which he afterwards took out a commission of bankruptcy, and proved for his claim. Plaintiff afterwards obtained a judgment against defendant for £50, on which he issued execution. Nothing had been done under the commission bevond the appointment of an assignee:—Held, that defendant could not set off his claim against the plaintiff's judgment. Merrill v. Beaty, 15 U. C. R. 440.

Purchase of Judgment—Return of Exception. —The court will not set off a judgment nurchased by defendant against a plantiff after the return of an execution against him. Elliott v, Crocker, 1 P. R. 13.

Several Defendants—Judgment against One.]—Two plaintiffs recovered judgment against the defendants, one of whom was afterwards arrested under a ca. sa., issued on an affidavit made by one of the plaintiffs.

This defendant then sued that plaintiff and his attorney, and obtained a verticit against them. An application by the attorney for himself and his co-defendant to set off this verdict against the judgment was refused; for the attorney, having no interest in the judgment, could not claim to have the verdict against himself paid out of it. Pentland v. Bell, 13 U. C. R. 455.

Payment by One.]—A judgment was recovered by the Bank of Upper Canada v. A. Chichester, C. Chichester, and Lacourse, also a judgment of A. Chichester v. Gordon, Lacourse, and Gallon. An application by Lacourse, who had paid the former judgment, to set it off against the latter, was granted. Chichester v. Gordon, 4 P. R. 92.

Net off as to One—Lien of Attorney,—One of several defendants in a judgment was allowed to set off against it the amount of a judgment which he had recovered against the plaintiff, saving to the attorney his lien for costs. Fortune v. Hickson, 1 U. C. R. 408.

Set off as to Onc—Principal and saide an award or refer back, it was alleged that $122$ had been twice charged against the plaintiff, being identical with a judgment also allowed against him, and the arbitrator certified that in his opinion the matter should be re-opened, as he was not sure this was not the case. It was objected also that the judgment was improperly allowed, having been recovered against the plaintiff and another, and therefore not admissible as a set-off. In answer the mistake was denied, and it was shewn that the identity of the two sums had been expressly in dispute before the arbitrator, and that the judgment had been recovered on a note made by the plaintiff, and indorsed for his accommodation by another, a defendant in a suit upon it. It was sworn also that the plaintiff was insolvent. The application was refused. Quære, whether under the circumstances the judgment was not properly allowed as a set-off. Latta v. Wallbridge, 3 P. R. 157.

Stay of Proceedings—Judgment not yet Recovered. — This action was tried on the 15th April, before a Judge, who gave his verdict for the plaintif on the 16th May, on which judgment was entered against defendant on the 10th June, 1879. On the 29th May all proceedings were stayed by order until the determination of an action, artsing out of the same transaction, which had been begun in a county court by defendant against plaintiff on the 1st January. This action was tried on the Sth July, when the defendant (plaintiff therein) obtained a verdict, and on the 27th August, judgment having been entered thereon, an order was made setting off the judgments:—Held, that the proceedings should not have been stayed, and the order was rescinded. Booth v. Walton, 44 U. C. R. 497.

— Judgment not yet Recovered — Attorneys—Negligence.]—Defendants, as attorneys, delayed to register a mortgage to B., their client, by which the security was defeated. They then obtained another mortgage from the same mortgagor to B., on different land, subject to two prior incumbrances, and B. authorized their proceeding to foreclose this mortgage, expressly without prejudice to his rights as against them. B. having died pending a suit against defendants for negligence, his administrators obtained a verdict in it and issued execution. Defendants then applied to stay proceedings until they could obtain judgment for the costs taxed in the foreclosure suit, in order to set it off. B.'s estate being insolvent. In answer it was urged that the second morttage and foreclosure (which turned out of no beneiit) as well as the insolvency, resulted from defendants negligence, and that the judgment against them was the only asset to which the plantifish had to look for the expenses of administration, &c., for which they were personally liable. The application was refused. Lynch v. Wilson, 3 P. R. 109. P. R. 109.

7. Liquidated or Unliquidated Claims.

Bond.]—A set-off of a sum certain is a good plea in debt on a submission bond, assigning as a breach the non-payment of a sum certain awarded. Lindford v. Musgrove, 6 O. S. 642.

Work and Labour—Ascertainment.]—A set-off for money due for cutting wood, upon a special agreement under seal, to give defendant so much per cord for cutting:—Held, a liquidated demand, and the subject of set-off. Geddes v. McCracken, 5 U. C. R. 573.

See Scott v. Dent, 38 U. C. R. 30, ante 5.

8. Payment or Set-off.

Credit — Contract — Account.]—A land owner had an old account for bread against the contractor for the erection of certain stores supplied, which account, with interest, he charged against the sums due to the contractor under the contract:—Held, upon the evidence, that the account and interest should be treated, not as a matter of set-off, but as a payment of so much of the contract price. Truax v. Dizon, 17 O. R. 366.

— Third Party—Account.]—The mand against one C., saying that C. had asked him to settle the claim with defendant, and requested him, therefore, to charge it to his, the plaintiff's, account. It was not proved that any account had been rendered by defendant in which he took credit to himself for this as a payment on any particular account:—Held, that this must be considered merely as an item of set-off, and not as a payment. Notman v. Crooks, 10 U. C. R.

Orders—Third Parties.]—Payments made by a defendant for plaintiff of orders in favour of third parties, may be proved under a setoff, and need not be pleaded as payments on account. McLellan v. McManus, 1 U. C. R

Overpayments—Recovery of Excess.]—
In an action on a building agreement, defendants pleaded a set-off equal to the plaintiff's claim, for money had and received, &c., and it appeared that they had in fact overpaid the plaintiffs for the work. The jury found a verdict in defendants' favour for the excess, contrary to the Judge's charge. The court refused to amend the plea, so as to claim the sum given. (1) because such an amendment could not properly be granted, at least without a new trial; and, (2) because the amount overpaid would not form the subject of a set-off. Sinclair v. Town of Galt, 17 U. C. R. 259.

See Hamilton v. Street, S U. C. R. 124.

9. Other Cases.

Against Crown.]—See The Queen v. Whitehead, 1 Ex. C. R. 134.

Costs Payable to Married Woman.]—Judgment for debt and costs having been recovered by the plaintiffs against the defendant, a married woman, to be levied out of her separate estate, there was an appeal by the plaintiffs with regard to the form of the judgment, which was dismissed with costs. An application to vary the order made upon the appeal by directing that the costs thereof should be set off pro tanto against the amount of the judgment was refused; but the court intimated that the taxing officer, upon taxing the costs of the appeal, would have power under rule 1164 to set them off pro tanto against the costs awarded by the judgment to be levied out of the defendant's separate property. Peton v. Harrison (No. 2), 118v2] 1 Q. B. 118, followed. Hammond v. Keachie, 17 P. R. 565.

Debt of Deceased—Deficiency of Assets—Administration, I—In an action of trespass for entering the warehouse of a deceased person (of whose estate the plaintiff was the administrator) after his death and taking and converting the goods therein, the defendant set off a debt due by deceased to him. An administration order had been made, of which the defendant had notice before defence. The set-off was held bad under R. S. O. 1877 c. 107, s. 30 (R. S. O. 1875 c. 129, s. 34), there being a deficiency of assets, and also because of the administration order. Monteith v. Walsh, 10 P. R. 162.

Distress for Rent—Notice—Double Value.]—The service by the tenant, after distress but before sale, of a notice of set-off, pursuant to R. S. O. 1887 c. 143, s. 29, of an amount in excess of the rent, to which the tenant is entitled, does not make the distress illegal, and the landlord is not liable for "double value" for selling, under 2 W. & M., sess. 1, c. 5, s. 5, which requires both selzure and sale to be unlawful. Brillinger v. Ambler, 28 O. R. 368, Improvements — Mortpage — Interest—Rents and Profits.]—A purchaser of land made lasting improvements thereon under the belief that he had acquired the fee and then made a mortgage in lavour of a person who took in good faith under the same mistake as to title. Subsequently it was decided that the purchaser had acquired only the title of a life tenant. The mortgagee was never in possession:—Held, that the mortgagee was an "assign" of the person making the improvements within the meaning of s. 30 of R. S. O. 1887 c. 100, and had a lien to the extent of his mortgage which he was entitled to actively Held, also, that interest should be allowed on the enhanced value from the date of the death of the tenant for life. McKibbon v. Williams, 24 A. R. 122.

Solicitor's Costs.] — A solicitor's costs will be allowed as a set-off and as a debt, though no bill has been delivered. Macpherson v. Tisdale, 11 P. R. 261.

Statute-barred Debts.]—Where part of plaintiff's own demands stated in his particulars are barred by the statute, he has a right to place against these the items of set-off appearing in his particulars to be beyond six years. Ford v. Spafford, 8 U. C. R. 17.

P. owed B. two debts, one secured by mortgage, and one unsecured; and P. had a counterclaim against B. P. executed a subsequent mortgage in favour of R., who filed a bill toredeem B.'s mortgage. Up to the time of filing the bill there had been no act appropriating the counterclaim to either the secured or unsecured debt, and both the counterclaim and the unsecured debt had become harred by the statute:—Held, that the plaintiff was not entitled to set off the counterclaim against the mortgage debt. Ross v. Perrault, 13 Gr. 2004.

SETTLED ESTATES ACT.

Exchange of Infant's Lands—Depreciation.] — The Settled Estates Act does not authorize the court to sanction an exchange of the lands of an infant cestui que trust; but when in such a case it can be shewn that a part of the property of the infant is exposed to depreciation if the proposed exchange be not effected, the court may order the same to be carried out under the provisions of C. S.
U. C. c. 12, s. 50. Re Bishoprick, 21 Gr. 580.

Married Woman—Examination.]—Upon a petition under the Settled Estates Act, an order was made dispensing with the examination required by the Act of a married woman interested who lived out of the jurisdiction, but not of one who lived within the jurisdiction. The Married Woman's Property Act, 1884 (O.), does not apply to cases under the Settled Estates Act, where the woman has acquired the property before the passing of the former Act. Re English, 11 P. R. 198.

Power to Grant Renewable Building Leases—"Usual Custom."] — In applying the English Settled Estates Act of 1856, 19 & 20 Vict. c. 120, to this Province, the words "usual custom" in s. 2 must be satisfied with something less than the immemorial custom of England. It is satisfied by proof of a well recognized method or usage of framing building leases in a given locality. Under that statute and 53 Vict. c. 14 (O.), the power to lease with extended right of renewal may be granted up to 999 years. Re Watson's Trusts, 21 O. R. 528.

Sale of Vacant Land-Life Tenant-Income-Taxes-Infant-Maintenance.] - The Settled Estates Act was intended to enable section Estates Act was intended to enable the court to authorize such powers to be exer-cised as were ordinarily inserted in a well drawn settlement, and ought accordingly to receive a liberal construction. Where the widow of the settlor was entitled to the whole income of the estate for her life, not charged with the support and maintenance of the children, who were the remaindermen, an order was made, upon the petition of the widow and adult children and with the approval of the official guardian, authorizing the sale, in the widow's lifetime, of vacant and unproductive land forming part of the estate, notwithstanding that the effect would be to relieve the widow of the annual charge upon such land for taxes, to add to her income the profit to be derived from the investment of the proceeds of the sale, and to deprive the re-maindermen of the benefit of any increase in the value of the land; the price offered being the best obtainable at the time or likely to be obtained in the near future; the court deeming the sale in the best interests of all parties; and the widow agreeing to charge her income from the settled estates with the obligation of maintaining the infant remainderman. SETTLEMENT.

Conveyance by Husband for Use of Wife and Children—Rights of Children.]

—A husband conveyed lands to trustees to receive the rents, and, after payment of a mortgage, to pay the balance into the hands of his wife during her life, for her use and that of her children, to be at her separate disposal:—Held, that the plaintiff, the sole surviving child, was entitled to half the yearly income. Turner v. Drew, 28 O. R. 448.

Life Policy—Voluntary Settlement.]—
A benefit certificate in a mutual insurance society was expressed to be payable to the insurer's mother, and by contract between him and the society it was agreed that it should not be payable nor could it be transferred to any one else than his mother, wife, children, dependents, father, sister, or brother; and that if he died without having made any further direction as to payment the money should be paid to the beneficiaries in the above order, if living. The insurer died intestate, unmarried, his father and mother predeceasing him, but two sisters survived, who were supported by him, and claimed the policy moneys in the character of "dependents" as well as "sisters." His estate was insolvent, and his administrator claimed the money as assets for the creditors:—Held, that the insurance amounted in effect to a voluntary settlement on the sisters of the insured, who, though not within the protection of R. S. O. 1887 c. 136, were beneficiaries named in the policy, and, as it was not shewn that the insured was not in a position to make a voluntary settlement at the time he effected the insurance, or at any time, they were entitled to the money. In re Roddick, 27 O. R. 537.

Marriage Settlement — "Children"—Vested Remainder, 1—By a marriage settlement certain land was conveyed to trustees in trest or set and was conveyed to trustees in trest or set and was as the husband and will be a set and was a set the husband and will be a set and was a child or children then surviving, to pay the interest to the wife during life, and in case the husband survived the wife, and there was a child or children then surviving, to pay the interest to the husband during life, and after the decease of both to divide the money equally among the children, and if there was only one child to pay the whole to such child, and in case of the death of the wife without issue to pay the money to the husband, and in case the husband and wife did not make any appointment, then in trust to support the contingent remainders thereinafter limited, and to pay the rents on the same trusts as the money. Two children were born; the husband died; one of the children attained twenty-one, married, and died before his mother, leaving his sister and a daughter surviving. On the death of the mother:—Held, that the deceased son took a vested interest, although he died before the period for conveying, and that his daughter was entitled to her father's share, Lazier v. Robertson, 30 O. R. 517, 27 A. R. 114.

Mortgage—Exoneration — Will — Direc-on to Sell—Discretion—Legacy.]—Certain land, subject with other lands to an overdue mortgage made by the settlor, was conveyed by him to trustees for his daughter by way of settlement to take effect on his death or her marriage. The conveyance to the trustees contained no covenants by the settlor and no reference to the mortgage, which remained unpaid at the time of the settlor's death:—Held, that the mortgage should be paid out of the settlor's general estate. A testator devised all his estate, real and personal, to trustees upon trust so soon after his death as might be ex-pedient to convert into cash so much of his estate as might not then consist of money or first-class mortgage securities, and to invest hist-class mortgage securities, and to invest the proceeds and apply the corpus and in-come in a specified manner. A later part of the will contained the following provision: In the sale of my real estate or any portion thereof I also give my said trustees full dis-cretionary power as to the mode, time, terms, and conditions of sale, the amount of purchase money to be paid down, the security to be taken for the balance, and the rate of interest to be charged thereon, with full power to withdraw said property from sale and to offer the same for resale from time to time as they may deem best:"—Held, that the latter clause merely gave a discretion as to the details and conditions of the sale, and did not qualify or override the specific direction to sell as soon after the testator's death as might be specifient. The testator gave certain shares in his estate to his two sons, the provision for payment being as follows: — "To each of your sons as they arrive at the age of twenty-three years or as soon thereafter as my said trustees shall deem it prudent or advisable so to do, they shall pay over one moiety of his share of the corpus of said estate and the accumulated income on said moiety, if any, and the remaining moiety upon his attaining the age of twenty-seven years, or so soon thereafter as they shall deem it advisable so to do." —Held, that this direction did not give the trustees an absolute discretion as to the time of payment, but that the general rule, that every person of full age to whom a legacy is given is entitled to payment the moment it becomes vested, applied. I. ACTIONS AND PROCEEDINGS BY SHERIFF.

(See Interpleader.)

1. Against Deputy-Sheriff or Bailiff for Escape.

Bond—Breach—Pleading.]—Where in an action on a bond by a sheriff against his deputy, the breach assigned was, that the order of a Judge was delivered to the deputy for the committal to close custody of a debtor characteristic to the limits, and that the deputy had arrested, but suffered him to escape: the breach was held bad, because it was not alleged either that the debtor was on the limits when the order was delivered to the deputy, or that he was arrested on the limits by the deputy under it. Commercial Bank v. Jarvis, E. T. 5 Vict.

Negligence—Special Contract — Damages —Costs,]—Under a plea of not guilty to an action for escape by the sheriff, a bailiff can only disprove the negligence. He cannot prove any special contract of service. An action on the case lies by the sheriff against a bailiff for negligence in allowing an escape, in consequence of which the sheriff had a verdict against him for nominal damages; and semble, that in such an action the sheriff may recover both the costs of the action against himself and his own costs, although no notice of that action had been given to the bailiff by the sheriff, the bailiff not being concluded by the former verdict, if he had no opportunity of defending in the sheriff's name. Ruttan v. Shoa, 5 U. C. R. 210.

2. For False Representation.

As to Goods Scized—Instructions of Execution Creditor, I—A sheriff cannot maintain an action on the case as for a fraudulent representation, when, having seized goods on an execution of a third party, he is afterwards instructed by defendant to seize the same goods on his execution, although, on an adverse claim being set up, the plaintiff in the first writ withdraws his execution, and the defendant refuses to withdraw his or to indemnify the sheriff, and the adverse claimant afterwards prosecutes the sheriff, and recovers for the illegal seizure and detention, Javvis v, Commercial Bank, 6 O. S. 337.

Instructions of Attorney-Damages.] - Declaration, that one A. having a judgment against B. and B., his attorney (defendant) delivered a fi. fa. to the plaintiff as sheriff, and falsely represented that certain goods in the possession of one Burns, were the goods of B. and B., and directed the plaintiff to levy them; that the plaintiff, believing said representation to be true, levied and sold the said goods, and that he, the plaintiff, after-wards suffered damage in an action brought by Burns, the owner of the goods:—Held, it being expressly stated that there was a false representation and that defendant directed the plaintiff to levy, that under the authority of Humphrey v, Pratt, 5 Bligh N. R. 154, the de-claration was good. Second plea, that defen-dant honestly believed the goods belonged to B. and B., and made such representation only to assist the plaintiff in the execution of the writ. Held, bad, as an answer merely to the false representation, but not to the direction to levy, which was the substance of the com-plaint. Held, also, that the action could not be sustained without shewing that the plaintiff had actually himself suffered damage; and that damage sustained by W., the plaintiff's bailiff, and E., his assistant, this action being brought for E.'s benefit, would not suffice. Moodie v. Dougall, 12 C. P. 555.

3. For Purchase Money on Sales.

Sale of Goods under Fi. Fa.—Conditions of Sale—Payment—Offer of Notes.]—Declaration by a sheriff, that under fi. fas. against one M. he offered for sale his stock of goods upon certain conditions, viz., the whole to be offered in one lot, the bidding to be so much in the pound on the cost as a secretained by the stock book, which should be examined by a disinterested party and all errors corrected, but no change to be made in the prices stated there—the purchaser to have a credit of 3, 6, 9, 12, and 15 months, on furnishing notes indorsed to the satisfaction of H. and V.: and if any purchaser should fail to comply with the terms the goods should be resold, and he should be liable for any deficiency in price and the expenses of such resale. Averment, that defendant purchased subject to such conditions, and did not comply with them, whereupon the goods were resold at a loss upon the first sale. Breach, non-payment of such deficiency, or the expenses of such resale. The defendant pleaded that he offered notes with good indorsers, which ought to have satisfied said H. and V. but that they unreasonably refused to approve of them; and that no notice of the second sale was given to him:—Held, both pleas had; but that the sheriff could not lawfully make such sale as set out in the declaration, and therefore the action was not maintainable. Smith v. Bacon, 14 U. C. R. 38.

the evidence set out in this case, being an action by a sheriff for the price of goods sold under execution, the question was, whether the sheriff had not appropriated the money in defendants' hands to an attachment, without reference to the decision of the court, and, the jury having found for the plaintiff, the verdet was sustained. Carrall v. Montreal Bank, 21 U. C. R. 18.

- Purchase by Execution Creditor-Guarantee—Condition.]—The sheriff held several executions against one P., on which no seizure was made until after he had absconded and several writs of attachment had issued. After the attachments an execution came in at defendant's suit, and the sheriff then seized P.'s goods under all the writs, and defendant at the sale purchased a large quantity of lumber. The sheriff would not allow him to take it away without paying; but defendant con-tended that under his execution he was himself entitled to the money. An application was then pending by one of the attaching credi-tors against defendant's judgment, which it was thought would determine the question of priority, and the sheriff agreed to let defendant take the lumber on receiving a guarantee from the Bank of British North America that they would be responsible for the payment when and if it should be decided that defendwhen and it it should be decided that derend-ant was not entitled. Afterwards, the sheriff returned defendants' writ nulla bona, for which the defendant recovered a verdict against him for more that the amount payable for the lumber :- Held, that the sheriff was entitled to recover from defendant the purchase money for the lumber, without waiting until the question of priority between his writ and the attachment had been decided, for that condition applied only to the liability of the bank under their guarantee. Carrall v. Pot-ter, 19 U. C. R. 346.

Set-off.] — The demand which the sheriff has against defendants as purchasers of goods sold under execution, not being a a mere personal demand, but he being in a measure the agent of the plaintiff, defendants are not entitled to set off his personal debt due to them against the claim against them by the sheriff in his official capacity. Kingsmill v. Bank of Upper Canada, 13 C. P. 600.

Tax Sale—Promise to Pay—Pleading.]—
The sheriff, as well as the treasurer, may maintain assumpsit for the price of land sold for taxes; but in such an action it should be expressly averred that defendant promised to pay for the land and accept a certificate within a reasonable time. Semble, that the sheriff rer, may land sold should be mised to ate withhe sheriff may recover in assumpsit for the price of goods or lands sold by him under execution in ordinary cases. As regards a purchaser of land sold for taxes, it is to be assumed in the first instance that the sale was authorized and regular, and if any thing was in fact done which could invalidate it or defeat the title, it is for him to shew it by plea. Held, that the defendant sufficiently appeared to be the highest bidder by an allegation that he bid and offered to take the smallest quantity of the respective lots for the taxes, interest, and expenses due thereon. Jarvis v. Cayley, 11 U. C. R. 282.

On Bonds and Undertakings for Return of Goods.

Bond—Condition—Breach, 1—A bond by a party whose goods are seized under a fi. far, to deliver them to the sheriff on request, means merely that they shall be forthcoming when demanded, and the sheriff cannot insist on the party removing them to any particular place within the district. And where, in such a case, the obligor has once delivered up the goods to the sheriff, the condition is performed; and his refusing to give them up on a subsequent occasion is no breach of the condition. Malloch v. Patterson, 1 U. C. R. 261.

- Condition — Breach — Plca—Distress for Rent.]—A plea that after the making of the bond, and before suit, and before defendants had been called upon to return the goods, the landlord of the execution debtor sized them on a distress for rent, and took them out of defendants control, wherefore they were unable to return them:—Held, no defence. Rapelje v. Finch, 14 U. G. R. 249.

The sheriff seized goods under execution, but forebore to remove them, on receiving a bond from defendants to deliver them up to him when requested. When his bailiff went afterwards to sell, he found that the household furniture, worth more than the execution, had been distrained by the debtor's landlord for rent, and on referring to defendants he was told that he might go and take it at his peril:
—Held, that the condition of the bond was broken, and the sheriff entitled to recover the amount of the execution, though there were other goods on which he might have levied. 8. C. ib. 408.

Damages—New Trial.] — Plaintiff, a sheriff, sued defendants on a hond to redeliver to him goods seized in execution, on a certain day, at a certain inn. The jury were told the plaintiff ought to have a verdict for fis, the sum remaining unpaid upon the execution, but they found for defendants. Notwithstanding the smallness of the verdict the court granted a new trial without costs. Moodie v. Bradshaw, 4 U. C. R. 199.

Several Obligors—Demand.]—In an action against one of two obligors on a joint and several bond, reciting that the plaintif, as sheriff, had seized goods under a fi. fa. at the suit of G. against C., the other obligor, and S., and conditioned to be void if the obligors should deliver the same to the sheriff, at such time and place as he should appoint:
—Held, not necessary to shew a demand on both obligors. Fortune v. Cockburn, 22 U. C. 14, 359.

Vol. III. D-201-52

Possession of Shoriff — Distress for Real. A sheriff seized goods under execution, but left them in the possession of the execution debtor upon receiving a receipt for the same, with an undertaking to deliver them to the sheriff when requested:—Held, that the sheriff han to such a possession of the goods as precluded the landlord from distraining. Metaligre v. Stata, 4 C. P. 248.

II. ARREST-DUTY AND LIABILITY AS TO.

Absconding Debtor—Return—Notice— Search.]—Where the sheriff goes to the known residence of a debtor and bonā fide searches for him to make an arrest, without success, because the debtor has absconded, he has done all that is required, and he is not liable for not arresting after the debtor's return unless it be shewn that he had notice of such return. Rigney v. Ruttan, 5 O. S. 707.

Attachment for Contempt—Bond.]—The sheriff may under s. 302 of C. L. P. Act, 1856, take a bond from a prisoner in close custody under an attachment for contempt in non-payment of money pursuant to an award; and a Judge of a county court may, if such bond be taken, allow it pursuant to ss. 25 and 26. C. L. P. Act, 1857. In re T. D. v. A. H., 4 L. J. 285.

Conditional Order to Commit—Justification—Pleading.)—The deputy sheriff joined with the attorney for the defendant in a plea justifying under a conditional order for committal made upon the examination of a judgment debtor:—Held, that the plea, being bad as to the attorney, was bad as to both. Chichester v. Gordon, 25 U. C. R. 527.

conditional Surrender — Escape—Second Surrender.] — Where a debtor on the limits on a writ of capins ad satisfaciendum from a district court, was brought by his bail for surrender to the sheriff, who refused to receive him except at the gaol, but gave a certificate, which was taken away by the limit of the that the gaoler might receive him; some time after (the debtor in the meantime having gone off the limits) gave him up to the sheriff, who kept him in close custody until he was discharged by an order of the Judge of the district court:—Held, that an action for false imprisonment would not lie against the sheriff for taking the debtor on the second surrender, the first having been conditional, and the condition not complied with, and the escape having been negligent and not voluntary. Thompson v. Levand, 3 O. S. 151.

Diligence — Bailable Ca. Sa.—Nominal Damages.]—Where a bailable ca. sa. is delivered to the sheriff, he is bound to proceed with due diligence in the arrest. If the jury, upon being charged not to find for the plaintiff unless satisfied that there has been neglect by the sheriff from which plaintiff has suffered some damage, return a nominal verdict for the plaintiff, the court will not set it aside on the ground that to sustain a verdict for even nominal damages clear proof of an injury received from defendant's neglect should have been given. O'Connor v. Hamilton, 4 U. C. R. 243.

Discharge of Debtor—Promissory Note—Bond.]—A person arrested for debt, while in custedy of the sheriff's officer, delivered to him his promissory note, with an accommodation indorser, at the same time executing a bond with a surety for his appearance in the action, whereupon he was discharged from custody.—Held, that the transaction was in violation of the provisions of 23 Hen, VI, c, 9, and that the transfer of the note to the bailfif was illegal and void. Richardson v. Hamilton, 7 Gr. 281.

Escape—Rule to Return—Waiter.]—The sheriff arrested defendant on an order to hold to bail, and returned the writ cepi corpus. Defendant afterwards escaped, but the plaintiff, notwithstanding, served the declaration on the sheriff, and, a plea having been put in, recovered a verdict:—Held, that he could not, after this, rule the sheriff to return the body, and attach him for default. Regina v. Sheriff of Perih, 2 P. R. 298.

Failure to Arrest—Absence—Negligence—Nurelies.]—Where to an action against a sheriff and his sureties, for not serving a capins, defendants pleaded that the person to be served was not to be found in the county, the mere fact that he was seen there by some third party during the currency of the writ does not necessarily rebut the plea. It should be shewn that the sheriff, without gross negligence, must have known of his being there; and it depends upon the evidence whether the sheriff alone is liable for such omission to serve, or his sureties also. Nelson v. Baby, 14 U. C. R. 235.

Action Proceeded with.]—Semble, that the plaintiff, though the defendant will not put in bail, may go on with his action against him, and pursue his remedy against the sheriff at the same time for not arresting defendant. Regina v. Sheriff of Hastings, 1 C. L. Ch. 230.

Attachment for Contempt—Delivery of Documents, | - Held, that an action lies against a sheriff for not arresting an attorney against whom an attachment has issued for not handing over, pursuant to order, all deeds, books, papers, &c., in his custody belonging to plaintiff; and that a plea which stated that on delivery of the attachment to defendant, the attorney delivered to him all deeds, &c., in his custody or power, to be by defendant delivered to plaintiff, in pursuance of the order for contempt of which the attachment issued, and that long before the return day defendant tendered them to plaintiff's attorney, who refused to accept them, and that defendant was at all times ready to deliver them to plaintiff, was bad; for that-besides being hardly an answer to one of the counts of the declaration, which was for falsely returning that the attorney could not be found—a statement that the attorney delivered to defendant all deeds, &c., in his custody, might be true as to those then in his hands, and yet not all within the scope of the order and attachment; but that the plaintiff was entitled to have the body in court, and to get discovery of all deeds, &c. Burnham v, Hall, 44 U. C. R. 297.

— Certificate of Filing Recognizance of Bail, not Given—10 & 11 Vict. c. 15, s. 5—16 Vict. c. 175, ss. 7, 8—Action against Sheriff— Relief, how Obtained.] — See Wheeler v. Munro, 2 L. J. 66.

having issued to the sheriff to arrest one T., a warrant was made to one G., a sheriff's offi cer, to execute it. G., being unwell, gave it to another bailiff, whose name was not in the to another pathir, whose name was not in the warrant, and who told T, that he had a warrant to arrest him. T. promised to go to the sheriff's office and give bail, which he did. Subsequently T's attorney discovered that the name of the second bailiff was not in the warrant of the second bai rant, and applied to the Judge of the county court to set aside the arrest, which he did. Plaintiff's attorney then suggested to the officer that he should have a proper warrant made out and arrest T, while the process was still current. The warrant was made out and T. arrested. Thereupon T.'s attorney applied to the Judge of the county court to set aside this arrest as vexatious and a second arrest made without leave, and T. was discharged, and left the Province. The plaintiff having brought covenant against the sheriff and his sureties: -Held, that when the first arrest was set aside as a nullity the sheriff might still arrest while the process was current. Semble, that the first arrest was unnecessarily set aside, Held, also, that the sheriff and his sureties were not concluded by the decision in another suit in the county court with regard to the fact of the arrest being made, no estoppel being pleaded, nor could such decision act as an estoppel, being in a cause which was res inter alios acta. Held, also, that the evidence shewed that what was complained of as wilful misconduct on the part of the sheriff was done at the plaintiff's own suggestion. Mc-Intosh v. Jarvis, 8 U. C. R. 535. See S. C., ib. 530.

Trespass for Arrest-Order of Sessions Fine and Costs—Tender—Pleading.1—Trespass will not lie against a sheriff for executing the mandate of the court of quarter sessions, by committing and detaining until the fine and the costs are paid, even though the latter may be unascertained at the time they are directed to be paid, and though that fact may, on certiorari and habeas corpus, entitle a prisoner to his discharge. The second count set out that the plaintiff, at the quarter sessions, was convicted of two common assaults and sentenced to pay a fine of $1 and the costs, and to remain in gaol till paid; and costs, and to remain in gaot in paid; and that defendant, being sheriff, without suffi-cient warrant, unlawfully arrested plain-tiff and kept him in gaol six hours, and plaintiff, being desirous of procuring his discharge, tendered to defendant $20 for said fine and costs respectively, which plaintiff be-lieved to be sufficient, and then demanded his discharge, but defendant would not accept the same or release the plaintiff, or inform plainsame or release the plaintin, or inform plantiff, although requested, what sum defendant required to entitle plaintiff to his discharge, whereby plaintiff was prevented paying the proper amount although willing, and to pro-cure his discharge, and after said tender, &c., defendant unlawfully detained plaintiff, &c. -Held, on demurrer, a count in trespass and false imprisonment, and as such bad, for the sheriff detained the plaintiff in obedience to the sentence of the court. Quære, whether, if the count had directly charged it as a duty in-cumbent on the sheriff to give the information as joint trespassers, he must take care that his record of the pleadings does not shew him to be proceeding against the sheriff for one act of trespass and against the plaintiff in the writ for another act of trespass. Where the record shewed this, the court set aside a verdict obtained by the plaintiff against both defendants on the issues raised. Eccles v. Mondie, 4 U. C. R. 250.

Warrant—Directed to Gaoler.]—Semble, that a sheriff is not liable in trespass on insufficient commitments by magistrates directed to the gaoler, unless he has become a party to the imprisonment. Fergusson v. Adams, 5 U. C. R. 194.

Justification—Pleading.]—The sheriff sued for arrest under a warrant issued by the justices sitting at quarter sessions may give this justification in evidence under the general issue by 21 Jac. I. c. 12. Fraser v. Dickson, 5 U. C. R. 231.

III. ASSIGNMENTS FOR BENEFIT OF CREDI-TORS TO SHERIFF,

Death — Successor — Disclaimer — Action by Judgment Creditors, — An assignment for the benefit of creditors made to a sheriff under R. S. O. 1887 a. 124, is made to him as a public functionary, and on his death the care and administration of the estate assigned devolves upon the control of the control of the competent to the consecution of the competent to such assigned. Where an assignment under the statute had been made to a sheriff, who died shortly after, and proceedings were subsequently taken in their own names by judgment creditors of the assignor to set aside a transfer of property as fraudulent: — Held, that the plaintiffs, suing alone, had no locus standi to maintain the action. Brown, Grove, 18 O. R. 311.

Sale of Land — Statute of Frauds.]—A sheriff, selling lands as assignee for creditors, under R. S. O. 1887 c. 124, cannot, as when selling under an execution, sign a memorandum which will bind a purchaser under the Statute of Frauds, for he is not, as in the latter case, agent for both vendor and purchaser. McIntyre, Faudert, 26 O. R. 427.

IV. CHANGE OF SHERIFF.

1. Sale of Goods.

Resignation — Interval before Appointment—False Return by Deputy.]—A fi. fa. was delivered to a sheriff on the 21st November. 1847. returnable in H. T., 1848. On the fith December, 1847, the sheriff tendered to the government his resignation. On the 14th he was notified of its acceptance, but his successor had not been appointed till after the result of the writ, which was made in the interval. The deputy, who remained in the office to wind up the old business, made his return to the writ. In an action against the sheriff for a false return: — Held, that the sheriff must be considered in office at the return of the writ, and liable upon the return made. Ross v. McMartin, 7 U. C. R. 179.

Sale under Previous Writ—Nullity—Relurn—Priorities.]—Action against the sheriff for false return to a fi. fa., the questions being whether the writs before the plaintiff's were in defendant's hands to be executed, and whether one of them was not fraudulent. The plaintiff's writ was delivered to defendant on the 19th May. 1804. The previous sheriff had been superseded on the 19th. March, and defendant appointed on the 11th. There had been two previous writs, at the suits of B. and J. respectively, in the hands of the late sheriff, and received by defendant before the plaintiff's writ. The bailiff, who held a warrant from the late sheriff to execute B.'s writ, sold some of the goods to B. at a valuation, on the 8th April. for about the amount of his execution, without any auction, or any notice, or bill of sale; and B., being advised that this sale was ineffectual, purchased the same and other goods at the sale made by defendant on the 17th June, under his own and J.'s writ, which absorbed all the proceeds. The deputy of the late sheriff swore that this bailiff's warrant had been countermanded on the 12th March, and it did not appear that the execution of the writ had been commenced before defendant's appointment:—Held, that the plaintiff could not recover, for the sale by the bailiff of the late sheriff to B. was, under the circumstances, a nullity, and the writs of B. and J. were in defendant's hands to be executed before that of the lapintiff. Snarr v. Waddell, 24 U. C. R. 185.

Ven. Ex. — Sale under—Attachment—Priorities.] — On the 16th December, 1858, defendants issued a fi. fa. to K., the then sheriff of Lincoln, to which he returned goods on hand for want of buyers, having taken a bond from the execution debtor to produce them, and on the 26th April, 1860, a ven. ex. was delivered to him. On the 28th April, 1862, a new sheriff was appointed, who took possession of all the writs found in K.'s hands, but K. made no transfer to him by indenture of the writs or bond, nor did he deliver over to him the goods. In December, 1865, the new sheriff sold under the ven. ex., having previously received an attachment at the plantiff's suit:—Held, that the sale could not be upheld, and that the attachment therefore must prevail. Riley v. Niagara District Bank, 26 U. C. R. 21.

2. Sale of Land.

Death — Execution of Deed—Deputy.]— A deed, executed by a deputy sheriff, of lands sold under an execution after the death of the sheriff to whom the writ was directed, and after the appointment of a new sheriff, is void. Doe d. Campbell v. Hamilton, 6 O. S. SS.

Inception of Execution before Change. |—Semble, that to support a sale by an ex-sheriff out of office, it must appear that while in office he acted upon the writ to an extent amounting in law and fact to an incipient step in the execution of it, and duly follows.

Quare, under what circumstances the old sheriff or his late deputy may proceed to sell lands advertised under a fi. fa. before the new sheriff came into office. Campbell v. Clench, 1 U. C. R. 267.

Tax Salc.]—In ejectment defendant claimed through a sale for taxes under 6 Geo. IV. c. 7. The warrant relied on issued in 1837 to the then sheriff, M., who ceased to hold office in 1838; return stated the sale to have been made in 1840; and M. executed the deed in 1841;—Held, clearly insufficient; for the sale and deed being made by a person out of office were primā facie unauthorized, and defendant proved no proceedings taken by M. which could be regarded as an inception of execution. If there had been such proof, quere, whether the law as to inception of execution or process applies equally to tax sale and to sales of land on judgments. Mc-Millan v. McDonald, 26 U. C. R. 454.

Sale after Change — Acquiescence.]— Held, that the conduct of the execution debtor shewed an acquiescence on his part in the exsheriff's right to proceed with the sale of the lands as he did under the writ. Doe d. Tiffany v. Miller, 5 U. C. R. 426.

Sale before Change—Deed.]—Held, that the deed of lands sold under execution, having been executed by the sheriff out of office, but in completion of the sale made by him whilst in office, was valid under s. 269 of C. S. U. C. c. 22. Miller v. Stitt, 17 C. P. 559.

Semble, that a deed by the successor of the sheriff who made the sale for taxes, is good under 27 & 28 Vict c. 28, s. 43. Bell v. Mc-Ican, 18 C. P. 416.

Registry—Certificate.]—The sheriff, under the facts stated in this case, who had sold the land for taxes and made the deed, was a competent person to give a certificate for registry, though out of office: and the registrar having acted upon it, though he might perhaps have refused to do so owing to his informality, the registration was good. Jones v. Cowden, 34 U. C. R. 345.

See, also, Burgess v. Bank of Montreal, 3 A. R. 66.

3. Other Cases.

Death—Deputy—Debtors on Limits—Assignment.]—On the death of a sheriff, his deputy is charged with the execution of his office until a new sheriff is appointed, and he must assign over by indenture as well the debtors on the limits as those in custody; and a new sheriff is not liable for the escape of a debtor on the limits at the time of his appointment, without such assignment. Mc-Pherson v. Hamilton, 5 O. S. 490.

Debtor on Limits—Departure—Action—Pleading.] — The plaintiff declared, as assignee of G., the sheriff of Middlesex, on a bond to the limits given to H., the late sheriff, alleging that after the making of the bond H. died, and that defendant on several occasions departed from the limits: but it was not stated whether the departure was before or after the death of H., or the appointment of G., or whether the bond had been allowed:—Held, declaration bad, as for all that appeared the departure might have been at such a time as to reader the late sheriff liable, and if so his successor could not assign the bond. Osborne v. Cornish, 20 U. C. R. 47.

Representative.]—Held, that upon the death of a sheriff who had recovered judgment in an action on notes seized under a fi. fa., his personal representative, and not his successor in office, is entitled to execution. Dickenson v. Harvey, 6 P. R. 170.

Fees Earned by Deputy while Office Vacant—Right to.]—See McKellar v. Henderson, 27 Gr. 181.

V. CREDITORS' RELIEF ACT.

Assignment for Benefit of Creditors

-Executions—Priorities.] — An assignment by an insolvent for the general benefit of his creditors does not oust a prior attachment creditors does not oust a prior attachment by a creditor of the insolvent of a debt due to him. Wood v. Joselin, 18 A. R. 59, fol-lowed. Section 37, s.-s., 3, of the Creditors' Relief Act, R. S. O. 1887 c. 65, must be con-strued to refer only to a case where the facts would entitle a sheriff, if there had been no attaching order issued by a cre-ditor, to obtain one at his own instance, under s.-s. (1) of s. 37; and, to entitle him to such order, there must be in his hands several executions and claims, and host hands several executions and claims, and not sufficient lands or goods to pay all and his own fees, and a debt owing to the execution debtor by a person resident in the bailiwick. And where a debtor, who was entitled to certain insurance moneys, assigned them to his wife, who subsequently assigned them to her husband's assignee for the benefit of creditors, and such moneys were also attached by a creditor of the husband between the dates of the assignment to his wife and his assignment for creditors; and some months after these transactions, when the moneys were in court awaiting the result of litigation between the assignee and the attaching creditor, two executions against the debtor came into the hands cuttons against the dentor came into the nanus of the sheriff of the county in which the in-surance company in whose hands the moneys were when attached had its head office:— Held, that the moneys had ceased to be the property of the debtor, and, even if there had been no attaching order, the sheriff could not occi no attaching order, the sheriff could not have obtained the moneys for the purpose of satisfying the executions. Semble, also, that the provisions of s.-s. (3) of s. 37 should be read as confined to creditors having executions and claims in the sheriff's hands at the time of the attaching of the debt. Re Thompson, 17 D. P. Idon 17 P. R. 109.

VI. DEPUTY SHERIFF.

1. Liability of Sheriff for.

Action against—Money Paid to Sheriff.)

—No action lies against the deputy sheriff for money received by him and paid over to the sheriff; the action must be brought against the sheriff himself. Bird v. Hopkins, H. T. 5 Vict.

Authority—Reputation.]—To charge a sheriff with the acts of his deputy done colore officil, it is enough to prove the authority of such deputy by general reputation. Holt v. Jarvis, Dra. 190.

Warranty.]—Semble, that the deputy sheriff cannot, in any sale of property in execution, bind the sheriff, by giving, of his own accord, a warranty that the goods belonged to the debtor in the fi. fa. The deputy sheriff would be liable himself on such a warranty. Mink v. Jarvis, S U. C. R. 397.

On appeal from the above decision it was

On appeal from the above decision it was held by four members of the court of error and appeal that the sheriff was not liable, and by the same number that he was. S. C., 13 U. C. R. S4.

2. Other Cases.

Execution against Coroner—Amendment.]—An execution against goods of a deputy sheriff may be directed to the sheriff of the county in which the deputy resides, and ought not to be directed to a coroner of that county. In such a case, the plaintiff was allowed to withdraw his writ of execution and amend by directing it to the sheriff, and not the coroner. Gordon v. Bonter, 6 L. J. 112.

Fees—Bargain as to.]—A bond to secure a sheriff a fixed salary, or otherwise, by his deputy, is void. Foott v. Bullock, 4 U. C. R. 480.

— Share — Agreement.] — Held, that upon the agreement in this case, the plaintiff (the deputy sheriff) was entitled only to his share of the fees actually received by the sheriff, or in his office, except with regard to such fees as might not have been collected owing to some act or omission of the sheriff. Fraser v. Fraser, 11 U. C. R. 109.

Share — Agreement — Account — Discovery, 1—The bill in this case alleged that under a yearly engagement the plaintiff agreed to discharge the duties of deputy sheriff for the defendant, for which he was to be compensated by a proportion of the fees payable on certain services performed by the sheriff; that shortly before the expiration of the second year the defendant discharged the plaintiff, and, as alleged, refused to account to the plaintiff for his portion of the fees—whereupon the plaintiff filed his bill, claiming that he was entitled to share in the fees for three years, that the items upon which he was entitled to a share of the fees numbered over one thousand, and that he had no means of shewing the amount due him except by a discovery from the defendant, and praying an account and relief consequent thereon. A demurrer thereto for want of equity was overruled; although, had the plaintiff seen fit to institute proceedings at law to enforce payment of his demand, the court of chancery would not have withdrawn it from that jurisdiction by granting an injunction to stay proceedings. Fells v. Poncell, 20 Gr. 454.

Garnishment.)—Where the garnishee (a deputy sheriff) after ten months applied to set aside an order to pay, upon the ground that when the garnishing order was made there was no such debt, and that he, the garnishee, was ignorant of the nature and effect of the proceedings taken against him, the application was refused. Gordon v. Bonter, 6 L. J. 112.

Selector of Jurors.]—It was held that a deputy reeve might act as one of the selectors of jurors, under s. 49 of 22 Vict. c. 100, but not the deputy sheriff. Regina v. F. J. L., 5 L. J. 19.

Witness.]—The deputy sheriff is, under 4 Ane c. 16, s. 20, a credible witness to the execution by the sheriff of an assignment of a bond to the limits. Whittier v. Hands, 19 U.
C. R. 172.

VII. ESCAPE.

1. Action against Sheriff for.

(a) Generally-Liability.

Arrest under Void Writ.]—Where a sheriff arrested under mesne process from a district court in an action of trespass, and afterwards suffered the debtor to escape:—Held, that he was not liable, the writ being void. Smith v. Jarvis, H. T. 3 Vict.

Arrest without Warrant. —A sheriff is not liable for an escape where a bailiff arrests without a warrant, although he has the writ in his possession; nor on a count for not arresting under such circumstances. Rigney v. Ruttan, 5 O. S. 707; Falconridge v. Hamilton, E. T. 2 Vict.

Attachment for Contempt.]—A sheriff is liable for the escape of a party attached for contempt in not performing an award, and the party need not be brought up and formally committed. Huntley v. Smith, 4 U. C. R. 181.

Attachment to Enforce Payment.]—
When the sheriff, upon an attachment to enforce payment of money, has the party in custody at the return of the writ, he must keep him safely in custody after the return of the writ, and until he is legally discharged. Savage v. Jarvis, S U. C. R. 331.

Discharge — Authority—Attorney,]—An attorney, merely as such, cannot discharge a defendant in execution—ertainly not without receiving the debt; and the sheriff so acting on his authority will be liable as for an escape. Brock v. McLean, Tay, 310.

A sheriff releasing from custody under a ca. sa. on the oral consent merely of the attorney, is liable for an escape. Davis v. Cunningham, 5 L. J. 254.

But the attorney may discharge the debtor upon receiving the debt and costs, Stocking v. Cameron, 6 O. S. 475.

Failure to Produce Certificate-Terms of Arrest-Stay.]—Held, under the facts stated, that the suing the sheriff for an escape because the certificate under 16 Vict c. 175 was not produced to the plaintiff within a month, was wholly inconsistent with the terms imposed by the Judge in chambers, and that proceedings must be stayed, but on payment of costs, as defendant had applied late. Cal-cutt v. Ruttan, 14 U. C. R. 33. See, also, S. C., 13 U. C. R. 220.

Failure to Produce Prisoner -- Limits.]-Where a sheriff refuses to produce a prisoner in his custody, twenty-four hours after notice, In his custody, twenty-rour nours atter nonce, it is an escape. And where, in debt for an escape on a ca. sa., the sheriff pleaded that he gave the prisoner the benefit of the limits, and that he never left them, &c., and the plaintiff replied that he did leave them:—Held, that the plaintiff shewed an escape under this issue, by proving that after the prisoner was admitted to the limits she was remanded back to custody, that the order remanding her was delivered to the sheriff, and that he received due notice to produce her body, but failed in doing so. Wragg v. Jarvis, 4 O. S. 317.

Irregularities - Jury - Costs-Judgment-Consideration.]-The court refused to set aside a verdict against a sheriff for an escape, upon the ground that the coroner's jury who tried the cause was the same as that returned by the sheriff; that the plain-tiff had produced the original ca, sa, instead of the copy; or that the judgment against the party escaping had been obtained without consideration. Payne v. McLean, Tay. 325.

Non-allowance of Bond-Insufficiency of Sureties - Assignment-Waiver.]-Plaintiffs sued the sheriff for the voluntary escape of M., taken under a ca, sa, at their suit; and, of M., taken under a ca. sa, at their suit; and, in a second count, charged that defendant took from M. a bond in a penalty not double the amount for which he was confined, and the sureties not being sufficient, as defendant well knew; and that the defendant fraudulently, wilfully, and corruptly released M. from custoder or security such bond. The nearlier tody on receiving such bond. The penalty was in double the amount of debt, costs, and tody on receiving such bond. costs of executions, but not including interest to the date of the bond or sheriff's fees; and there was no affidavit of execution or justification of the sureties with the bond. It appeared, however, that fourteen months after M. had been released by defendant, the plaintiffs took an assignment of the bond, which had not been allowed, and recovered yildgment on it in their own names against the sureties. The jury having negatived the scienter and fraud:—Held, that the plaintiffs had waived the objections to the sufficiency of the sureties, and to the bond, for they must have been aware of the objections to the bond when they took the assignment, and that it had not been allowed. Semble, that the omission to include interest, if essential, is a mat-ter to be considered by the county court Judge on the application for allowance, on which his decision is final. The omission of sheriff's fees was immaterial, for if he was liable for an escape the plaintiffs could not recover them unless they had paid them, which was not pretended here. Kerr v. McEwan, 27 U. C. R. 170. See S. C., 12 C. P. 241.

Limits.]-Held, that the fact of the bond not having been allowed within thirty days (20 Vict. c. 57) would not make the sheriff liable for an escape, when the debtor remained on the limits. Dougall v. Moodic, 19 U. C. R. 568.

Taking Bond—Bailiff—Rescue, 1—An action for an escape will not lie when a valid bail bond has been taken. Such action must be brought against the sheriff, and not against the bailiff, unless the act complained of amounts in effect to a rescue. Wilson v. Mc-Callough, 5 O. S. 680.

See McPherson v. Hamilton, 5 O. S. 490; Harkin v. Robidon, 1 Ch. Ch. 133, post (b).

Sec, also, Bail, I. 5.

(b) Damages.

[By R. S. O. 1877 c. 16, s. 30 (R. S. O. 1897 c. 17, s. 38) the sheriff is liable only to an action on the case "for damages sustained."]

Measure of Damages under the Old Law.]—See Savage v. Jarvis, 8 U. C. R. 331; Brown v. Paxton, 19 U. C. R. 426; Kingan v. Hall, 24 U. C. R. 248; Kinloch v. Hall, 25 U. C. R. 141.

Measure of Damages.] — Where the capias under which the sheriff arrested was indorsed to take bail for $150, but the plainin the suit obtained final judgment for $270:—Held, that the measure of damages was only the sum sworn to ($150) and costs, up to the time of the escape, not the amount recovered in the suit. Jonas v. Tepper, 28 J. Q. B. 85, followed on this point, in opposition to earlier cases. Taylor v. McEwan, 27 U. C. R. 126.

· Waiver.]-Costs were ordered to be paid, and in default an attachment issued (prior to 22 Vict. c. 33), under which the sheriff arrested defendant, and accepted to the limits, from which he escaped :- Held. that the sheriff was personally liable for the damage occasioned thereby, to be measured by the value of the custody. Held, also, that issuing a fi. fa. for these costs had not waived the plaintiff's right against the sheriff. Harkin v. Rabidon, 1 Ch. Ch. 133.

(c) Evidence.

Proof of Indebtedness of Prisoner.]-In an action for escape of A., arrested on a ca. re. at plaintiff's suit, the declaration aver-red "that he was indebted to the plaintiff in a large sum of money, to wit, &c., upon and in respect of certain causes of action before then accrued to the plaintiff against the said A.," &c. The defendant pleaded, denying that A. was indebted in manner and form, &c.:— Held, that the plaintiff would be entitled to recover if he shewed that any debt accrued to him against A. before he sued out the writ. O'Reilly v. Moodie, 4 U. C. R. 266.

- Judgment.]-In an action for a vol-Judgment. 1—1n an action for a vol-untary escape of M., arrested on a capins in-defendant had permitted M. to go, on his de-positing $175, and that the plaintiff had after-wards entered final judgment in the suit for his damages, assessed on judgment by default, and costs, about $270:—Held. that such judgment was evidence as against the sheriff of the debt due by M. to the plaintiff. Semble, that the plaintiff, under the C. L. P. Act, could proceed in the original suit to judgment after M. had escaped; but, if not, quære, whether the sheriff could raise the objection; and held, that while unreversed the judgment was at least prima facie evidence against him. Taylor v. McEwan, 27 U. C. R. 126.

of Warrant - Voluntary Absence Escape.]—The court refused to discharge a prisoner from custody upon the ground that the gaoler, having taken him before a magis-trate without warrant, had suffered a voluntary escape. Robinson v. Hall, Tay. 453.

Action by Sheriff against Debtor— Jury—Bar.]—Where a sheriff suffers a voluntary escape, he cannot afterwards sue the debtor for the amount which he has had to pay for his escape; but where in such an action the justice of the case was clearly with the sheriff, and the Judge charged the jury in favour of defendant, but they found a verdict for plaintiff, the court refused a new trial: -Held, that a submission by the sheriff to arbitration in an action against him for an escape could not bar his recovery from the debtor, and that it was not necessary for that purpose that he should have allowed the action against him to have proceeded to verdict and judgment. Ruttan v. Ashford, 6 O. S.

Neglect of Sheriff to Commit Defendant on Limits to Close Custody-No-tice of Special Bail-Time-Action as for an Escape—Stay of Proceedings.]—See Craig v. Ruttan, 2 L. J. 67.

SHERIFF.

Voluntary Escape-Proceeding in Action -Ca. Sa. |-After a voluntary escape from the sheriff of a prisoner held under mesne process, plaintiff may proceed with his action, and, semble, may issue a ca. sa. without affi-davit, if he has had a capias pending action, or an alias ca. sa., if the ca. sa, to fix bail had been returned non est inventus, and take had been returned non-est inventus, and take the defendant thereunder; and, at all events; plaintiff may have a ca. sa. issued on a new affidavit and re-arrest defendant. Quere, whether, after voluntary return of escaped prisoner, a plaintiff cannot accept such return and lawfully charge his debtor in execution, by merely delivering a ca. sa. tsheriff, Hesketh v. Ward, 17 C. P. 667.

VIII. EXECUTION, WRITS OF-DUTY AND LIABILITY ON.

1. False Return.

(a) Liability.

Abandonment of Executions.] - See EXECUTION, I.

Bankruptcy before Seizure—Return of Nulla Bona.]—Where before any actual sei-zure by the sheriff under the fi. fat. and before the return day, the goods of the debtor are seized under a commission of bankruptcy, and nulla bona returned to the writ, the sheriff is liable on such return to an action by the execution creditor. Decatur v. Jarvis, 3 U. C. R. 133.

Bill of Sale to Prior Execution Plaintiff—Bona Fides. |—On the 18th May the sheriff received A.'s plu, fi. fa. against B.'s goods, returnable on the 11th June (E. T.), upon which the goods were seized. On the 1st June following B. made a bill of sale to A., leaving out, however, a few small articles, of which no notice had been given to the sheriff. On the 27th July C.'s fi. fa. against B.'s goods was received by the sheriff :-Held, That upon these facts, supposing the bill of sale to be bonâ fide, C. had no right of action against the sheriff for not seizing B.'s goods against the sherili for not seizing 18.8 goods under his writ. Held, also, that the direction of the Judge to the jury to inquire if the bill of sale was made for valuable consideration and bona fide intended to pass the property, or whether it was merely colourableof which secrecy and the absence of change of visible possession and ownership afforded indications-and that if they sustained the bill of sale as valid, it operated as a satisfaction and discharge of A.'s fi. fa. from the day of its execution, and that then the plaintiff (C.) must fail on his first count, allegng the seizure of A.'s goods under C.'s writ, and that the only question would be on the second count, for not seizing the articles omitted from the bill of sale, as to which they were told that, in the absence of any direct notice to or knowledge in the sheriff of such goods, they must say whether he had as to them been guilty of any want of reasonable diligence in the ex-

Compromise—Estoppel.]—Where a fi. fa. goods was placed in a sheriff's hands and a levy made, but the plaintiff afterwards compromised with defendant, receiving payment by instalments, but giving no directions to the sheriff to discharge the defendant's property:—Held, that on a return of nulla bona several months afterwards, when defendant had absconded without satisfying the balance of the debt, the plaintiff could not sue for a false return, as he was precluded by his arrangement with defendant, Eccrarghim v. Leconard, 3 O. S. 121.

— Subsequent Return of Nulla Bona—Transfer by Debtor.]—Where, in an action against a sheriff for a false return to a write scientiff so a fetter was put in from the scientiff to the plaintiff's attorney saying that he levied under the execution on goods claimed by others, and that he had in consequence compronised and agreed to secure the amount of the execution in two instalments at early dates, but the sheriff afterwards returned "no goods," and on the trial the execution debtor and her son-in-law proved that the property had been transferred to the son-in-law but remained in the possession of the debtor, and the jury found a verdict for the plaintiffs, the court refused a new trial. Mead v. Hamilton, 2 U. C. R. 135.

Money Made—Return of Nulla Bona— Illegal Nale.]—A sheriff having sold shares in a steamhoat company under an execution, and received the money, cannot return nulla bona on the ground that they were not properly saleable under the writ. Hewitt v. Corbett, 15 U. C. R. 3°.

Notice as to Lands—Inquiru.]—The plaintiff in an execution against lands is expected to point out to the sheriff the property of the debtor, but his not doing so does not relieve the sheriff, if by reasonable inquiries be could have ascertained the fact. Where the deputy sheriff had notice of the debtor owning lands, it was held notice to the sheriff, although the latter had no personal knowledge on the subject; and he was held liable in an action for a false return. Hutchings v. Ruttan, 6 C. P. 452.

Notice to Sheriff of Property to be Seized, —A notice by the plaintil's attorney to a sheriff's clerk that A, and B, are jointly interested in certain goods, and pointing to a deed in his possession, which he says shews the joint interest of the parties, is not necessarily a notice which will blud the sheriff in executing the writ. If the plaintil's attorney give at different times two wholly inconsistent notices to the sheriff:—Semble, that the sheriff is not bound to obey either, O'Neill v. Hamilton, 4 U. C. R. 204.

Obtaining Return of Nulla Bona— Estoppel.]—A fi. fa. at the suit of one G. v. R. was placed in the sheriff's hands, with instructions not to enforce it until further orders, unless other executions should come in. No further instructions were received, and the plaintiff subsequently put in an execution with directions to proceed at once. The sheriff levied on both writs, and paid over the money to G., who had indemnified him. The plaintiff then obtained a return to his writ of nulla bona, which the sheriff said was the only return he would make, and sued out a ca. sa., on which R. was arrested:—Held, that the plaintiff, by taking such return, had not precluded himself from proceeding against the sheriff, and that he could maintain an action for a false return. Aitkin v. Moody, 13 U. C. R. 439.

Priority of Executions.]—See Execu-

Scizure under Prior Execution — Change of Sheriff.]—One K., a sheriff, on the 11th January, 1862, received for execution a fi. fa. against the goods of R, and M., at the suit of the plaintiff. An execution against the goods of R., at the suit of S., and another at the suit of O., had been previously placed in his hands, and while they were in force a seizure was supposed to be made on O.'s writ, and a return of goods on hand to the value of £200, and nulla bona as to residue was made thereon, and upon this return a ven. ex. and fi. fa. residue was sued out by O., and delivered to the sheriff for execution, on the delivered to the sherin for execution, on the 1st February, 1862. K, then ceased to be sheriff, and defendant was appointed, and the writs in K,'s hands were transferred by inden-ture to the defendant for execution. Upon an action for neglecting to seize the goods of R., the writs of S. and O., and the return to the latter, were pleaded in answer, and that defendant R, had no more goods and chattels whereof the amount could be made. the trial it appeared that defendant took the office of sheriff on the 12th April, 1862, and that no goods of R. or M. were delivered to him to be sold as goods on hand. It appeared, also, that S.'s writ was delivered on the 29th also, that 8.8 with was delivered on the 26th October, 1861, O.'s first writ on the 26th November, 1861, and his ven, ex, and fi. fa. on 1st February, 1862. It further appeared that the return of 4200 on hand on O.'s writ was false, there having, in fact, been no seizure :- Held, that the return upon O.'s writ being false, and the goods not being under seizure on that execution, it was defendant's duty to have seized them on the plaintiff's writ, which was delivered to the sheriff before O.'s alias writ; and therefore a verdict for the plaintiff was upheld. McKee v. Woodruff. 13 C. P. 583.

Ven. Ex. — Return Day — "Unable to Sell."]—The sheriff may sell the goods under a ven. ex. after return day. Semble, that where a sheriff returns to a writ of ven. ex. "that he is unable to sell," he may be liable to an action for false return, but he cannot be attached. Bank of typer Canada v. Mc-Farlane, 4 U. C. R. 399.

Distress for Rent-Parol Evidence of Demise.]—Upon an action against a sheriff for a false return upon a fi. fa. goods, his defence was a chattel mortgage on part of the goods, and a distress for rent to cover the remainder:-Held, that parol evidence was admissible to prove a demise by the landlord, so as to sustain a distress, although a memorandum had been drawn up as to the terms of the lease, but signed only by the tenant. Valentine v. Smith, 9 C. P. 59.

District Courts.]—The district courts, under 8 Vict. c, 13, s, 5, have no jurisdiction in an action on the case for a false return. Bell v. Jarvis, 6 U. C. R. 423.

New Trial—Surprise.]—In an action against a sheriff for a false return the judgment debtor testified to facts which defendant afterwards said took him by surprise. motion for a new trial :- Held, that defendant should have gone to trial prepared to shew all transactions with the judgment debtor in relation to the suit, and not having done so, or sworn on this motion to what he could prove, a new trial was refused. Young v. Moderwell, 14 C. P. 143.

Sale of Lands under Execution — Equity of Redemption—New Trial.]—In an action against the sheriff for a false return to a fi. fa. lands, it appeared that defendant, after the receipt of the plaintiff's writ, received another writ, at the suit of one S., and under this seized land owned by the debtor, upon which S. had a mortgage for rent, S.'s judgment being for arrears of rent secured by such mortgage. S. bought the land for the amount of his judgment, and paid the sheriff's fees. At the trial, however, it did not appear whether defendant sold only the equity of redemption, or the debtor's interest in the land, exclusive of the mortgage. The court set aside a verdict for defendant, and granted a new trial with costs to abide the event. Young v. Baby, 4 C. P. 537.

2. Landlord's Claim for Rent.

Effect of Goods of Third Person-Removal.]—Goods having been seized by the sheriff under execution, and claims having been made thereto by third persons, namely, chattel mortgagees, an interpleader summons was obtained by the sheriff. Notice was then given to the sheriff by the landlord of rent due, but no distress was issued or anything further done on his behalf. An interpleader order was made, and the claimants having failed to give the security required thereby, the goods were sold pursuant to the terms of the order, the landlord becoming the pur-chaser. They were never removed from the demised premises. The claimants were successful:—Held, that the statute 8 Anne c. 14, s. 1, only applies to the goods of the execution debtor, and not to those of third persons, against whom there must be a distress, notice to the sheriff not being sufficient; and that the sheriff selling incurred no liability, as he was secured under the interpleader of der. Held, also, that the sheriff is not liable when the goods have not been removed from the demised premises. The proceeds of the sale were therefore ordered to be paid out of court to the claimants. Clarke v. Farrell, 31 C. P. 584.

SHERIFF.

- Mistake of Landlord.]-The sheriff, having seized goods, received a written no-tice from the plaintiff that there was then due to him "one half-year's rent," not stat-ing when the rent fell due, nor for what period it was claimed. The plaintiff afterwards went to the sheriff, and, being asked when the rent fell due, said that he thought it would be on the following Monday or Tuesday. The sheriff thereupon ordered the goods to be removed and sold:—Held, that he was justified in so doing, as he was acting on reliance on the plaintiff's own declaration, and that he was not liable for any damages, although it appeared that the rent was in fact payable quarterly, and that one quarter was due at the time of the seizure. Tomlinson v. Jarvis, 11 U. C. R. 60.

paying over the proceeds of a sale under a ii. fa. goods against a tenant without satisfying the landlord's claim for rent. Galbraith v. Fortune, 9 C. P. 211.

Necessity for—Removal of Goods.]—Held, that a sheriff is not liable under 8 Anne c. 14 for the removal of goods off the premises in respect of which rent is due, unless at the time of removal he either had no-tice or otherwise received knowledge of the rent being due, and afterwards removed the goods without paying the rent. City of King-ston v. Shaw, 6 L. J. 280.

Sale of Goods—Pleading.]—It is sufficient in the declaration to allege that defendant had notice of the plaintiff's claim for rent before sale, though after the removal. It is a bad plea, therefore, that defendant had no notice before the removal. A plea that after the removal of the goods by defendant there remained sufficient to satisfy the rent in ar-rear:—Held, clearly baa. City of Kingston v. Shaw, 20 U. C. R. 223.

Seizure.]-Formal notice by the landlord that rent is due him is not necessary; but the landlord having made an illegal seizure for rent, notice of such seizure to the sheriff was held sufficient to render the sheriff liable. Sharpe v. Fortune, 9 C. P. 523.

Oral Notice.] - An oral notice from the landlord to the sheriff will be sufficient to save the year's rent; and if the sheriff knew of the rent being due, a formal notice would not be necessary. Brown v. Ruttan, 7 U. C. R. 97.

rent was due, and without satisfying the same after notice. The lease contained a proviso that if at any time within the said term the tenant should remove, or attempt to remove, his goods and chattels from off the said premises, without leaving thereon sufficient to answer the then current year's rent, or if by any writ of execution against him there should not be sufficient goods to answer the said writ, and pay the then current year's rent, the then current year's rent should immediately become due and the said term be forfeited, and this agreement is an express condition of this demise. It was contended there was a seizure of the goods in September, and that the rent did not accrue due until the 1st October, so that the goods were in custodia legis when the rent was due:—Held, that it was properly left to the jury to say whether there were sufficient goods to satisfy the current year's rent and execution when the execution was attempted to be enforced, and that under the evidence they were warranted in finding that there was: that the bailiff having merely made an inventory of the goods seized on the 9th September, leaving no one in possession, they were not in custodia legis when the rent ac crued due, and therefore could not be held against the landlord's claim for rent. Hart v. Reynolds, 13 C. P. 501.

Leaving Premises. —Premises were let for a year at a rent of $K75$, to be paid on the 1st May; and it was agreed that if the tenant should leave before the 1st May, then the rent was to become payable immediately. The tenant did leave on the Saturday before the 1st May, and on Monday the goods were seized under execution:—Held, that the landlord was entitled to his rent. Vance v. Rutton, 12 U. C. R. 632.

Evidence—Payment of Rent.]—In an action against a sheriff for the sale of goods, without paying rent:—Held, that the statement of the tenant in possession, made before the distress, that the first year's rent had been paid, was not evidence in the cause. Galbraith v. Fortune, 10 C. P. 109.

Failure to Seize—Notice of Claim for Reat.]—Where at the time of placing an execution against goods in the sheriff's hands there is a claim for unpaid rent, the sheriff cannot delay the seizure until the execution creditor first pays the rent. He must seize, but he need not sell the goods until the rent is paid, and if the execution creditor will not pay it he may withdraw from possession. In this case the sheriff abstained from seizing on receiving notice of the rent being due, of which the execution creditor was aware when he issued the fi. fa., and, before he seized, certain crops were removed, which would have sufficed to pay the plaintiff's claim;—Held, that the sheriff was liable. Locke v. Mc-Conkey, 26 C. P. 475.

Interpleader Issue — Relinquishment pending Attachment of Sheriff,]— Under an execution in Maclean v. Anthony, the sheriff, on the 19th April, 1883, having seized the defendant's goods, sold them to one Ferguson, there being at the time rent overdue to the landlord. Ferguson did not remove the goods from the premises. By agreement between the landlord, the sheriff, and Ferguson, the latter retained sufficient of the purchase money to pay the claim for rent. Subsequently Ferguson sold the goods to one English, when it was arranged that English should pay the old claim for rent, and a further instalment which had meanwhile fallen due. The defendant then surrendered his term, and English became tenant. On the 23rd April an execution in Slater v. Anthony was placed in the sheriff's hands, and he seized the same goods some time between the 21st May and 23rd June. lish having claimed the goods, the sheriff interpleaded, and an issue was directed, which resulted in favour of Slater. Pending the interpleader issue the sheriff allowed the landlord's bailiff, who also claimed the goods for arrears of taxes, to sell them and pay the rent and taxes in arrear. At the conclusion of the interpleader issue it appeared that the sheriff had taken no security for the goods, and that English, the claimant, was worth-less:—Held, that there being no claim either for rent or taxes which the sheriff was justified in acknowledging, he was liable to an at-tachment, on motion of the execution creditor, for disobedience of the interpleader order. Maclean v. Anthony, Slater v. Anthony, 6 O. R. 330.

Payment by Execution Creditor— Levy by Sheriff—Liabbility.]—Where an execution creditor has, under the statute of Anne, paid rent demanded by a landlord upon an execution against the tenant upon the premises of the former, and the sheriff levies as well for the rent as the execution debt, the sheriff becomes the debtor of the execution creditor for both sums, and liable to him in an action for money had and received; and so does a bailff under the Division Courts Act. Lockart v. Gray, 2 C. L. J. 163.

Prejudicing Claim — Conduct—Estoppet,]—The fact of a landlord having joined in a bond that the goods distrained should be forthcoming to be sold upon it. fa., will not prejudice his claim for rent; nor will his having distrained as landlord, and afterwards having abandoned the distress, nor even his bidding at the sale of the goods. Brown v. Ruttan, 7 U. C. R. 97.

Prior Seizure by Landlord—Custodiâ Legis.—Interpleader,]—When goods are under seizure for rent, they are in custodià legis, and the sheriff has no right to seize them under an execution. On an application by a sheriff for an interpleader order under such circumstances, the landlord's claim being taken to be boná fide, the legality of the seizure under the distress cannot be inquired into in chambers, and the sheriff's application for relief by interpleader was therefore refused. Craig v. Craig, 13 C. L. J. 326.

Rent Accruing Subsequent to Seizure—Goods Left on Premiera, 1—Writs of execution had been placed in the hands of the sheriff of Hastings, under which he made a levy on goods in Belleville and Madoc, leaving them on the premises in which he found them. After the seizure, which was on the 12th February, and while the goods were on the debtor's premises, two instalments of rent fell due, on the 1st March and June, which were paid by the sheriff:—Held, that this payment should not be allowed, because the goods might have been removed by him before the rent fell due, and being under soizure, they were not liable to distress, and there was nothing in the debtor's lease to accelerate payment of rent on seizure of his goods. Grant v. Grant, 10 P. R. 40.

—A sheriff, having in his hands a writ of fi.
fia, against the defendant's goods, on the 23rd June, 1898, went into the hotel of which the defendant was the tenant, with the execution, and informed the defendant that he seized his furniture and effects. He then made a pencil memorandum of a number of articles stated to be in the house, first notifying the judgment debtor that everything was under seizure, and accepting his oral undertaking to hold it for him. This course was pursued in accordance with instructions from the solicitor for the execution creditor, in order to endeavour to get the defendant to make payments on account of the execution. On the 8th August to be in the house, first notifying the judgment debtor that everything was under seizure, and accepting his oral undertaking to hold it for him. This course was pursued in accordance with instructions from the solicitor for the execution creditor, in order to endeavour to get the defendant to make payments on account of the execution. On the Sth August the landlords of the defendant put in a bailiff to seize the same furniture and effects for rent due on the 6th August. The bailiff spoke to the sheriff, who said that he would not undertake to sell the goods and pay the rent. Nothing further was done until the 6th October, 1898, when the landlords put another distress warrant into the bailiff's hands for rent since accrued. The sheriff was notified of this in writing on the 20th October, and other distress warrant into the bailiff's hands for rent since accrued. The sheriff was notified of this in writing on the 20th October, and other distress warrant into the bailiff's hands for rent since accrued. The sheriff was notified of this in writing on the 20th October, and other through the sheriff was not interpleader order, and in which he stated that he had remained in possession from the 23rd June until the time of application. Being cross-examined, he said that he was holding on till the landlords put him out of the place; —Held, upon the evidence, that the sheriff had been acting throughout in the interest of the elemants, and for this reason, as well as for his delay, was not entitled to an interpleader order. Flynn v. Cooney, 18 P. R.

Subsequent Seizure by Landlord.]—A seizure by a landlord of goods already seized on a fi. fa.:—Held, illegal, and consequently invalid. Sharpe v. Fortune, 9 C. P. 523.

Buying in—Leaving on Premises—Sale by Sheriff, 1—A sheriff, having selzed goods of a tenant upon a farm under a fi. fa., left them in possession of the tenant, taking a receipt from him and an adjoining farmer. The landlord distrained and sold the goods, and buying them in, left them on the premises under charge of his former tenant as a hired servant, his lease having expired. The sheriff, without any subsequent seizure, proceeded as if the goods were the original tenant's and sold them under the original fi. fa.:—Held, that he was liable to the landlord for the rent due at the time of seizure, of which he had notice, and for damages to the value of the goods over the rent due. Robertson v. Fortune, 9 C. P. 427.

3. Money Levied.

Accounting for Moneys Paid—Promissory Notes—Feex.].—H., a sheriff, seized and sold under execution goods to the amount of $3.823 12s. 2d. The terms were cash, but it was agreed that the purchaser might make such arrangements as he could with the execution creditors, all of whom required cash except the last ten, who agreed to give time, and take notes. In the settlement £2.762 was paid to the sheriff, and notes were given for £1.146, making in all £86 1s, more than the amount of the purchase. Upon an action brought against the sheriff for that amount, he proved that he had naid upon the executions all moneys received except £165 7s. 10d. and he claimed £442 2s, for fees and poundage:—Held, that he was not liable, not being shewn to have received more than he should have. Kennedy v. Moodie, 8 C. P. 544.

Assumpsit — Statute of Limitations — Pleading.]—To a plea of the Statute of Limitations in assumpsit, a replication that defendant was a sheriff, and that the amount claimed was an overplus remaining in his hands of money levied under a fi. fa.:—Held, bad on general demurrer, although the plaintiff might have evaded the statute had she declared in case, setting out the circumstances specially. Ruggles v, Beikie, 2 O, S. 370.

Attachment under Absconding Debtors Act.]—It is a good cause to shew to an attachment against a sheriff for not paying over money, that the money has been attached in the hands of the party not paying over, under the Absconding Debtors Act. Powers v. Scott, H. T. 3 Vict.

Claim against Plaintiff—Lien of Attorney.]—A sheriff will not be allowed to retain money made on an execution, on the ground that he has himself a claim against the plaintiff, who has absonded, when the plaintiff's attorney is the person entitled to it in consequence of advances made to the plaintiff. Burnham v. Meyers, 2 U. C. R. 94.

Costs of Rule to Return—Expenses of Demand—Interest.]—Held, that the costs of a rule to return the writ could not be recovered in this action against the sheriff for not paying over moneys levied, nor the expense of a messenger sent to demand the money returned as on hand. The court, acting as a jury, allowed interest to the plaintiffs on money levied and improperly withheld. Michie v. Reynolds, 24 U. C. R. 303.

Credit to Plaintiff's Attorney.]—Where in an action against a sheriff's sureties for money received by the sheriff on an execution at the suit of the plaintif, it appeared that the amount had been credited to plaintiff's attorney in an award between him and the sheriff, and that the attorney had accepted the award:—Held, that a verdict for defendants was right. Hall v. Hamilton, H. T. 4 Vict.

Surplus after Sale — Heir-at-law—Demand.]—The heir-at-law is entitled to recover from a sheriff the surplus of moneys arising from a sale of his ancestor's lands, on a fi. fa. against those lands in the hands of the exector. Ruggles v. Beikie, 3 O. S. 276, 347. In an action against a sheriff for the over-

In an action against a sheriff for the overplus of money levied under an execution, the plaintiff must prove a demand of the money before action brought. S. C., ib. 276.

Surplus after Satisfying Writ—Dehtor—Demand.]—In an action against the sheriff by an execution debtor for the surplus of money in his hands after satisfying a fi. fa., no demand before action is necessary. The last case distinguished. Ainstie v. Rapelje, 3 U. C. R. 275. 4. Negligence or Delay in Executing, Absence of Prejudice.]—Where, in an action for delay in selling lands, the jury found for defendant, saying that there had been unnecessary delay, but that the plaintiff had not been prejudied by it, the court refused to interfere. Markle v. Thomas, 13 U. C. R. 321.

Attempts to Execute—Due Diligrace— Jury.]—The court unheld a verdier for a sheriff sued for a false return to a fi. fa., holding that he could not be said, either in law or in fact, to have been guilty of culpable negligence in not executing the writ: he had tried several times before the return day to execute it, but could not gain admittance to the house. And the chief justice said he could not hold that a sheriff was bound to keep sentined day and night at a defendant's house, for several days or weeks in succession: he was bound to exercise due diligence, and it was a question for the jury. Finnigan v. Jarvis, 8 U. C. R. 210.

Destruction of Goods—Pleading.]—Declaration, alleging that there were goods out of which defendant could have made or levied the money indorsed on a fi. fa., but that he did not levy the same. Plea, that before he could by due diligence have levied the moneys, the goods were destroyed by fire:—Held, plea had, for levying includes seizure and sale, and consistently with the plea the goods might have been destroyed in defendant's custody after seizure, in which case he would be liable. Ross v. Grange, 25 U. C. R. 396.

Effect of Delay — Priority of Chattel Mortgope — Damages.] — On the 23rd July, 1808. M. recovered judgment against J. for 82.923.31, and issued fi. fa. goods, the execution of which was delayed until the end of the covered proving mouth by an application to amend. On the payable as year after date. J. defined mortgage, which was registered on the 6th One mortgage, which was registered on the 6th One mortgage, which was registered in the fit of the payable as year after date. The jury gave a verdict for 81.510 against the sheriff and in favour of all the other defendants. This verdict, being inconsistent with any view of the facts and exorbitant in amount, was set aside: costs to abide the event. McGiever v. McCausland, 19 C. P.

Measure of Damages in Action for Delay.]—See Nertich v. Malloy, 4 A. R. 430.

Security for Costs — Public Duty.]—A sheriff executing a writ of fi. fa. is not an officer or person fulfilling a public duty within the meaning of R. S. O. 1897 c. 89, s. 1, and is not, therefore, entitled to security for costs of an action brought against him for negligence in not making a seizure under the writ.

McWhirter v. Corbett, 4 C. P. 203 (as to notice of action), followed. Creighton v. Sweetland, 18 P. R. 180.

See Jones v. Paxton, 27 C. L. J. 596.

5. Payment into Court.

Effect of — Discharge.] — A sheriff who levies money under a fi. fa. must pay it over to the party entitled; he cannot return the writ to the Crown office and pay the money to the clerk of the Crown, and thereby discharge himself from liability to the plaintiff in the original suit. Shuter v. Leonard, 3 O. S. 314.

Improper Payment in —Costs—Payment over—Application—Forum.]—When the sheriff has improperly paid money into court, a Judge will not order him to pay the costs of such payment into court, but the proper application is for the sheriff to pay over the money returned by him as made, without reference to the payment into court. Quarre, should an application for an order on the sheriff to pay over money be made to the full court, or to a Judge in chambers. Crombie v. McNaughton. Marnock v. McNaughton, 5 L. J. 18.

Right of Sheriff.]—Held, that a sheriff has no legal right to pay into court money made upon a writ in his office. Gladstone v. French, 9 C. P. 30.

Taking out Money Paid in—Waiver.]
—Where a plaintiff obtained an order to take out of court money paid in by the sheriff, on condition that he should pay the master's charges, and was given to understand that he might either take it on these terms or sue the sheriff for it:—Held, that, having availed himself of this order, he could not afterwards recover from the sheriff the fees paid to the master on the ground that the money had been improperly paid into court. Crombie v. Davidson, 19 U. C. R. 369.

6. Place of Sale.

Defendant's Premises — Trespass—License. |—A sheriff having seized goods cannot lawfully sell them on defendant's premises without his permission, and any person going on the premises to purchase may be treated as a trespasser. McMaster v. McPherson, 6 O. S. 16.

A sheriff is a trespasser, if, after the seizure of defendant's personal property under an execution, he enters upon the premises and sells the property there. McMartin v. Powell, E. T. 3 Vict.

A sheriff under a writ of ven. ex. has no right to enter upon a person's land and sell his goods there by public auction; and a purchaser who enters at the same time as the sheriff is a trespasser as well as the sheriff. McMartin v. McPherson, H. T. 3 Vict.

Where a sheriff has seized goods under a fi. fa. and allowed them to remain on defendant's premises, on the understanding that they should be sold there on a future day if the money were not paid before, the license thus

SHERIFF.

7. Selling under Value or without Proper Notice.

Action for — Declaration — Xecessary Averments.]—In an action against a sheriff for not giving notice of the sale of effects taken in execution, at the most public place in the township:—Held, not necessary to set out the name of such place. Statements that defendant sold the goods without legal notice and for less than their real value, were not considered as distinct and independent grounds of action. Malcolm v. Rapelje, Tay, 361.

In case against a sheriff, for selling goods upon plaintiff's fi. fa. under their value, the judgment in the original action must be set out. Quere, also, whether the sheriff must not first be ruled to return the writ, and the action brought on the return. Billings v. Hamilton, 6 O. S. 113.

— Plea — Price Obtained.]—Where, in an action against a sheriff for not selling lands in execution for the best price that he could get for the same, but wrongfully and injuriously much below their real value, the defendant pleaded that he sold the lands for the best price that he could get for them:—Held, plea good. Watson v. McDonell, 6 O. 8, 450.

Evidence of Value - Agent for Sale-Misconduct.]-Action against a sheriff for not levying, although the debtor had a sufficiency of goods. Plea, not guilty: also, that debtor had not more goods than defendant had sold and not more goods than detendant had soul and returned. At the trial a verdict was found for the plaintiff for much less than he claimed. On motion for a new trial, which was granted:—Held, that defendant's statement to the insurance agent, that the goods, when seized, were worth $6,000, and his declarations to the different creditors that their claims were small as compared with the value of the debtor's goods, were evidence of value against the defendant; that his placing a stranger as his agent in possession of the goods, with authority to sell them in the shop as theretofore, who gave no satisfactory evidence of such sales, and who lost or mislaid or neglected to preserve the books of account which would have explained all these transactions, made him responsible for the consequences of his agent's misconduct; and that defendant was entitled to no advantage or consideration because the books could not be or were not produced. Hobbs v. Hall, 14 C. P. 479.

Sale of Equity of Redemption in Vessel. |—The plaintiff owning a stemmer mortgaged her to one Cotton, who assigned the mortgage to J. H. C. and others. She was afterwards purchased from the plaintiff's agent in his absence by a company, to run in opposition to a boat then owned by one G., in the bay of Quinte, but no legal transfer was made. £2,000 of the price was paid and the balance secured by notes of the company, which the plaintiff's agent assigned to J. H. C., to secure the sum due on the mortgage held by him. G. afterwards purchased the notes and mortgage, and sued out a writ of replevin to obtain possession of the boat, but before it was executed he procured D. & Co., who held a judgment against the plaintiff for about £50, to issue execution, and at his instance the sheriff sold the boat under it. G. saying that he thought the plaintiff had no title, but that he wished to unite whatever it might be with his own right under the mort-This sale was not advertised, except by two notices, put up on the door of the court house, and in the sheriff's office; there were only three or four persons present, including G., and the boat was sold for £10 to one of them, who a few days afterwards transferred G. then got possession under the writ of replevin, and laid up the boat, thus removing the opposition to his own steamer, which the admitted had been his object throughout.

The attorney of D. & Co. complaining that his clients had realized so little from their exhis clients had realized so little from their re-cution, G. afterwards paid their claim, and took an assignment of their judgment. The mortgage which he held had been paid in full by payment of the notes. In an action against the sheriff, for fraudulently and illegally selling the boat and furniture together instead of separately, and in the absence of a reasonable number of bidders, and for a sum grossly un-der value, the jury having found for defend-ant:—Held, that the verdict must stand; be-cause, whether the plaintiff's equity of redemption was saleable under the execution or not, the sale, made and published as it was, was not a sale in obedience to the writ, and there fore could pass nothing, so that the plaintiff sustained no legal damage by it; and because at any rate the plaintiff should fail on the plea denying his property in the vessel, for he owned only the equity of redemption; or because the equity of redemption was not saleable under the writ, and the sale therefore could not affect the plaintiff. Bethune v. Cor-bett, 18 U. C. R. 498.

8. Wrongful Scizure of Goods-Action for.

(a) Evidence.

Interference by Execution Creditors—Facts Shewing, I.—In an action against the sheriff and six others for seizing goods, the evidence as to four of them was that they were creditors of the execution debtor, and joined in the indemnity bond to the sheriff, and that they told the balliff to sell, and afterwards attended and bid at the sale:—Held, clearly sufficient to charge them. Gray v. Fortune, 18 U. C. R. 253.

Production of Warrant.] — It is not enough to call the bailiff who made the seizure, and prove by him that he had a warrant, without producing it or satisfactorily excusing its non-production. Loves v. Jarvis, 5 O. S. 134.

Proof of Execution—Bailiff—Adoption of Sale.]—In trespass against the sheriff and A. and B., plaintiffs claiming the goods under a bill of sale, it was proved that the sheriff's bailiff, under a fi, fa, at the suit of another creditor, seized the goods and sold them; and after paying the amount of that execution paid the balance to A. and B. on account of their execution:—Held, after verdict for plaintiff, that the execution creditors, A.

P. 486. See S. C., 7 C. P. 148.

Proof of Debt — Attaching Creditor— Froundment Sale. — In trespass against a sheriff for seizing plaintiff's goods under an attachment issued under the Absconding Debtors Act against the goods of a third party, by whom they had been sold to the plaintiff before the attachment:—Held, that, to support a defence that the sale was fraudulent and void against creditors, under 13 Eliz, c. 5, the sheriff must prove that a debt had been due from the absconding debtor to the attaching creditor. Grant v. McLean, 3 O. 8, 443.

Proof of Execution — Non Cepit—Replecius.]—In replevin against the sheriff for a seizure under execution made by his deputy:
—Held, that, as plaintiff was obliged to shew that the seizure was made under process in order to connect defendant with the act, it was not necessary to plend specially, but that under non cepit defendant might avail himself of 18 Vict. c. 118, which enacts that replevin shall not lie under such circumstances. Calcutt v. Ruttan, 13 U. C. R. 146; Clark v. Ruttan, 6 C. P. 97.

Proof of Execution and Judgment.]— In an action against a sheriff for seizing goods it is sufficient to prove that they were seized colore officii, without proving a writ of execution. Holt v, Jarvie, Dra. 190.

In trespass against a sheriff for seizing plaintiff's goods, the defence was that they were the goods of A., and had been seized under an attachment against him as an abscond-ing debtor, but had been delivered up at the time of seizure, on the plaintiffs entering into a bond for their production when required, and had been afterwards sold at the suit of the attaching creditor on a fi. fa., the plain-tiffs having given them up according to the terms of their bond, and the plaintiffs now claimed them as their own property under an assignment from A. prior to the attachment, which defendant contended was fraudulent and void as against creditors. Defendant proved no debt due to the attaching creditor, nor did he shew the judgment or execution, relying on ne siew the judgment of execution, reying on the bond as estopping the plaintiffs from dis-puting those facts; and the jury, under the direction of the Judge, found for the plaintiffs. The court agreed in the direction that the judgment and execution should have been shewn; but a new trial was granted. Powers v. Ruttan, 4 O. S. 58.

When a sheriff under a fi. fa. seizes goods in the possession of the debtor, and a third party claims them as his under a bill of sale, which is impeached as being merely pretended and colourable—the sheriff, when sued in trespass, may, upon a plea that the goods are not the plaintiff's, contest his right on the ground of fraud, without proving the judgment. Keeser v. McMartin, 3 U. C. R. 327.

But where part of the goods were claimed by a title independent of the assignor (the execution debtor), and the goods were not taken from the assignee's possession:—Held, that it was incorrect to hold the plaintiff bound to prove the fi. fa. and judgment. Culbert v. Conger, 7 U. C. R. 395.

Semble, following White v. Morris, 11 C. B, 1015, that the mere production of the fi. fa. will not enable the sheriff to shew that a deed which is good against all but creditors is void against the latter, but he must prove the judgment. King v. Macdonald, 15 C. P. 397.

Under a plea denying plaintiff's property, when the goods were not taken out of his possession, the sheriff may shew that an assignment under which the plaintiff claims is fraudulent; but he must prove the execution under which he seized, unless his warrant is produced reciting it. Roblin v. Moodie, 15 U. C. R. 185.

Proof of Judgment-Justification under Execution-Husband and Wife.]-In an ac tion by A., a married woman, against a sheriff for taking, under an execution against her husband, goods which she claimed as her separate band, goods which she callined as her separate property under the Married Woman's Prop-erty Act, R. S. N. S., 5th ser., c. 94, the sheriff justified under the execution without proving the judgment on which it was issued. The execution was against Donald A., and it was alleged that the husband's name was Daniel. The jury found that he was well known by both names, and that A.'s right to the goods seized was acquired from her husband after marriage, which would not make it her separate property under the Act :- Held, that the action could not be maintained; that a sheriff sued in trespass or trover for taking goods seized under execution can justify under the execution without shewing the judgment. Me-execution without shewing the judgment. Mc-Lean v. Hannon, 3 S. C. R. 706, followed, Held, also, that under the findings of the jury, which were amply supported by the evidence, the goods seized must be considered to belong to the husband, which was a complete answer to the action. Crowe v. Adams, 21 S. C. R.

Protection by Interpleader Order-Evidence of Seizure under Different Writ.]-Declaration, against the sheriff, for seizing goods under a false claim that they were liable to seizure to satisfy a claim of one S, against Plea, that the goods were seized under a E. Fica, that the goods were seized under a fi. fa. at the suit of one B. against E., and be-ing claimed by the plaintiff, an interpleader order was made, by which defendant was protected against any action for such seizure. New assignment-that the action was brought not for the cause admitted in the plea, but for seizing as in the declaration alleged under colour of the writ at suit of S.; on which the plaintiff took issue. The evidence shewed that both fi. fas. were sued out by the same attorney, and received by the sheriff at the same time, and that the bailiff, receiving the warrants together, seized under both on the 29th September, and remained in possession forty The interpleader summons in S.'s suit was discharged with costs against the sheriff, and the execution plaintiff protected from action :-Held, that the jury were warranted in finding that the goods were seized under S.'s writ, whether seized under B.'s or not, and a verdict for the plaintiff was upheld. Johnson v. McDonald, 23 U. C. R. 183.

execution out of his district, cannot question the right of the person from whose possession the property was taken, as that it was received under an assignment fraudulent as against creditors. Cook v, Jarvis, 4 O. S. 250.

True Ownership — Letter of Beblor.]—
In trespass for seizing plaintiff's goods, under an execution against the goods of A.:—Held, that a letter written by A. before any third party had an interest in questioning the right to the goods, was evidence to shew the footing on which the plaintiff and A. then stood with respect to the goods. Robinson v. Rapelje, 4 U. C. R. 289.

Presumption.] — There is no presumption that goods sold in one year continue the property of the vendee when afterwards found in the possession of a third party as owner; and the sheriff may shew that they belonged to such third party. Kissock v. Jarvis, 9 C. P. 156.

(c) Where Goods Subject to Mortgage.

Disobedience of Instructions — Countermand—Parties, I—The plaintiffs' attorney had directed the sheriff not to sell the goods of L., but to levy upon another defendant in the suit. That defendant having remonstrated and urged him to sell, he telegraphed to the attorney to know if he should do so, and in answer was told that he must act as he thought fit, according to his own judgment. He thereupon sold L. is goods—Held, that this answer was an abandonment of the first direction, Quare, however, whether the plaintiffs, claiming under a chattel mortgage from L., could have sued the sheriff for disobeying such instructions, they not being parties to the sitt. Boulton v, Smith, 17 U. C. R. 400.

Possession.]—Trespass will not lie against a sheriff for seizing goods subject to a chattel mortgage, but of which the mortgagors had possession. Street v. Hamilton, 5 O. S, 658.

B. mortgaged to plaintiff certain goods, with a covenant that in case of default in payment, or of B.'s attempting to dispose of the goods, the plaintiff might take possession and sell or retain them for his own use, but there was no clause authorizing B. to remain in possession until default:—Held, that the plaintiff had a sufficient right to possession to maintain trespass against the sheriff seizing under a fi. fa. against B., the jury having found the mortgage to be bonâ fide. Porter v. Flintoff, 6 C. P. 335.

Improper Remoral.]—If the sheriff under an execution against a mortgagor improperly removes the goods out of the possession of the mortgagee, his (the mortgagee's) remedy is against the sheriff, and not by application to a Judge in chambers. Swift V. Cobourg and Peterborough R. W. Co., 5 L. J. 233.

Right of Sheriff to Attack Mortgage —Attachment—Damages.]—A mortgagee, under a mortgage by a firm, having taken possession of goods, they were seized by the sheriff, under an attachment against one of the partners as an absconding debtor, and afterwards delivered by the sheriff to the assignee in insolvency of such partner: -Quære, whether the sheriff was entitled to question the mortgage on behalf of creditors, without proof of the debt on which the attachment was founded. In this case no such debt existed, for the note given for the debt was not due when the attachment issued. Semble, also, that the sheriff had no right to object that the notes secured the mortgage were not properly stamped. Held, also, that the sheriff had no right, either as representing the attaching creditor or the assignee in insolvency of one of the partners, assignee in insolvency of one of the partners, to take the goods out of the possession of the mortgagee; that he was liable for the full amount of the plaintiff's interest in them: and that his having handed them over to the assignee could form no ground for reducing the damages. But, a verdict having been renthe damages. But, a verdict having been rendered for that sum, it was made a condition on refusing a new trial, that the plaintiff should assign to the sheriff his interest in the mortgage, so that the sheriff might, if possible, recoup himself. Paterson v. Maughan, 39 U. C. R. 371.

Property — After-acquired Goods.]—The plaintiff, owning a stock of goods and some furniture and shop fatthers, sold out to one S., taking a mortgage in security, which was duly filed. S. continued to carry on business, bringing in other goods, till he became involved and absconded when the sheriff under an attachment seized all the property in the store:—Held, the property being distinguishable, that the sheriff was liable for trespass. Boys v. Smith, S. C. P. 248.

Satisfaction of Mortgage — Action by Mortgagor—Damages—Estoppel.] — Action against the sheriff for seizing and selling goods. Pleas, not guilty, and not possessed. It appeared that the plaintiff had mortgaged the property to one M., and executions came into the sheriff's hands both against the plaintiff, who was in possession of the goods, and the mortgage. The plaintiff told the sheriff that the goods were not his, but were under mortgage to M., and the sheriff seized and sold The sale prounder the execution against M. duced £312 5s., of which the sheriff applied £200 on the executions against M., being the amount due to him by the plaintiff on the mortgage, which fell due two days after, and the balance he applied on the writs against the plaintiff. Most of the property had been bought in by the plaintiff's brother-in-law, who gave his note for the purchase money, and left the goods in possession of the plaintiff, who afterwards paid the note. The jury found that the value of all the goods sold was £500, and of that portion which the plaintiff did not get back £200; and it was left to the court. drawing such inferences as a jury might from the evidence, to say whether the plaintiff's action could be maintained, and if so whether he was entitled to the one sum or the other:

—Held, that the plaintiff was entitled to a verdict, for his goods could not be sold, as they were, to satisfy the mortgagee's debt, and no justification was pleaded; but that he was not entitled to the £200, for that amount was applied by the sheriff on account of M., thus paying off M.'s claim on the goods, and relieving the plaintiff from his mortgage; nor to the remaining sum of £300, for the goods were bought in and never left his possession, and the purchase money was paid by himself, and applied on executions against him. The court, applied on executions against bim. The court, therefore, ordered a verdict to be entered for nominal damages only. Held, also, that the plaintiff was clearly not estopped from recovering, by having told the sheriff that the goods were not his, but mortgaged to M. Henderson v. Fortune, 18 U. C. R. 520. This industries was submarried. judgment was subsequently appealed from and a new trial ordered.

(d) Other Cases.

Assignment to Third Person—Completion—Assent, 1—Where A., being indebted to B. and C., and being insolvent, was about to leave the country, but desired to secure B., and so instructed his clerk, who after A.'s departure made an assignment of his goods to B. without B.'s knowledge or consent, and, before B.'s consent was received, the goods were seized by a sheriff on an attachment issued at the suit of C.:—Held, that the sale to B. was not complete until his assent was received, and that the sheriff therefore was not a trespasser. Barrett v. Rapelje. 4 O. S. 175.

Barrett v. Rapelje. 4 O. S. 175.

Division Court Attachment.]—Goods in the hands of a division court cleek under an attachment, are not protected against an execution issuing from a superior court before the attaching creditor has obtained his judgment. The sheriff therefore is justified in seizing such goods; but quere, if the seizure were illegal, whether an action on the case would lie at the suit of the attaching creditor against the sheriff and the plaintiff in the execution. Francis v. Bronen, 11 U. C. R. 558.

Division Court Execution. —A seizure of goods under a division court execution being entitled, under s. 266, C. S. U. C. c. 22, to priority over a seizure subsequently made by the sheriff, trespass will not lie against the latter for the seizure made by him, the goods being under the division court writ already in the custody of the law. King v. Macdonald, 15 C. P. 397.

Injury to Reversionary Interest.]—A. having a reversionary interest in goods leased to B., the sheriff seized the goods under an execution against B., but did not sell or remove them. A. sued the sheriff for an alleged injury to his reversionary interest.—Held, that if any trespass was committed by the seizure B, should sue and not A. Henderson v. Moodie, 3 U. C. R. 348.

Interpleader Order — Restraining Action.]—Held, on the authority of Carpenter V. Pierce, 27 L. J. Ex. 143, that a Judge has authority by interpleader order to restrain an action against the execution creditor as well as against the sheriff. Buffalo and Lake Huron R. W. Co. v. Hemmingway, 22 U. C. R. 562.

Jus Tertii—Not Possessed—Replevin.]—
In trespass for taking goods it appeared that the goods came to the plaintiffs' warehouse at Windsor, consigned to one P., and were seized there by defendant under a writ of replevin sued out against P. by one H. P. asserted that he had bought the goods from H., which H. denied, and the trial Judge found that the goods belonged to H.:—Held, that defendant, not being a mere wrongdoer, was at liberty to dispute the plaintiff's title, and set up the title of H., under a plea of not possessed, and that he was therefore entitled to a verdict on the finding. Great Western R. W. Co, v. MeEvan, 30 U. C. R. 550

Perverse Verdict — Damages.]—Where, in trespass against the sheriff for taking goods, the jury gave the full value of all seized, although the plaintiff had expressly claimed only a portion, declaring that the rest were not his, a new trial was granted. Roblin v. Moode, 15 U. C. R. 189.

Trespass by Ratification.] — When a sheriff, acting under a valid writ, as a servant of the court, seizes the wrong person's goods, a subsequent ratification by a party who, until such ratification, was a stranger to the taking, cannot make such party a trespasser by relation. Tilt v. Jarvis, 7 C. P. 145, 5 C. P.

See McLeod v. Fortune, 19 U. C. R. 98.

Trespass by Retaking—Bond,]—Where a sheriff's officer, actin under a warrant of a sheriff grounded out fi. f. gods in the sheriff shands, levied on the goods of a deer in possession of defendant, accepted a bond to have the goods fortheoming when required, withdrew from possession, and afterwards, the sheriff having received a ven. ex., proceeded to sell the goods, and in doing so was obstructed by the defendant, who closed the door on the bailff :—Held, that under the facts the sheriff nor procured should have had recourse to the bond, and that the sheriff and his officers were, under the circumstances, trespassers; and defendant, if guilty of no excess, justified in closing his door against them. Regina v. F. J. L., 5 L. J. 19.

to Disognovit I of the bankrupt law, and is therefore with all steps taken under it void, the nessignees of the bankrupt in bringing an action against the sheriff must be looked upon as contending for the interests of the creditors, and not merely as representing the person or estate of the bankrupt: they therefore will not be estopped, as the bankrupt might, from disputing the validity of the cognovit and subsequent proceedings on the ground of fraud. Ponton v. Moodic, 7 U. C. R. 301.

Authority to Sheriff to Bid at Sale.]

—The planiuff before the sale gave the sheriff a memorandum authorizing him to bid on his account to the amount of the debt and costs in the suit. Under this the sheriff, instead of bidding gradually, bid at once the full amount, and bought in the land:—Held, that the plaintiff had clearly no ground of action against him for so doing; and quere, whether the writing could be construed as more than an authority, and whether, if the defendant had disregarded it altogether, any action could have been maintained. Markle v. Thomas, 13 U. C. R. 321.

Certificate as to Executions—Obtaining by False Representations.]—Declaration against a sheriff for falsely certifying that there were no executions against the lands of one H. Plea, on equitable grounds, in substance, that the plaintiffs' agent duly authorized in that behalf, late in the day, and after defendant's office was closed, applied to defendant's clerk for the certificate on the street; that the clerk having declined to return to the office to make the requisite search, the plaintiffs' agent then represented to him that the plaintiffs were aware of their own knowledge that there were no executions, and would take the risk of there being any, and would not hold defendant responsible if such certificate should prove untrue, of which the agent said there was no danger whatever, and the clerk thereupon signed the certificate at the agent's request, in reliance solely upon such representations, and without searching as his duty required, and under the belief induced by such representations that there were no executions, and upon the understanding aforesaid that no responsibility should attach to defendant:—Held, on demurrer, a good de-fence, for it shewed that the certificate was obtained by the false representation of the plaintiffs' agent made by him at the time, for which the plaintiffs were responsible. Colonial Securities Co. v. Taylor, 29 U. C. R. 376.

Conveyance of Land Sold—Bill to Compet.]—Semble, that the court will entertain a bill for the purpose of compelling a sherifit to convey property sold under an execution; but to such a bill the execution debtor whose property has been sold must be made a party. Witham v. Smith, 5 Gr. 203.

Interpleader Order — Sale by Sheriff after — Default of Security — Neglect to Appraise — Estoppel.]—In trover for the value of a piano, sold by the defendant, as sheriff, under an execution, it appeared that an interpleader had been directed as to the piano, the plaintiff to give the usual security within twenty days for its value, to be appraised by defendant. The defendant, though applied to, neglected to appraise the piano until it was impossible for the plaintiff to give security within the resulted time. Security was, however, afterwards given, but the defendant Vol. III. D—202—63 nevertheless sold the piano, contending that he was justified in so doing, as the plaintiff had not complied with the terms of the order:— Held, that the plaintiff having been prevented by the defendant's neglect from complying with the order, defendant was estopped from saying that plaintiff's non-compliance therewith justified him in selling. Held, also, that the effect of the defendant's neglect was either to deprive him of the protection of the order or to operate as a waiver of the time thereby limited for giving security; that if the former, he was not justified by the order in selling; if the latter, he was not justified, after the bond was allowed and filed, of which he had notice; but whether he had or had not notice of the allowance and filing of the bond, his duty, under the circumstances, was to have ascertained whether the payment had been made or security given before selling, and, if so, to have withdrawn from possession. Black v. Reynolds, 43 U. C. R. 398.

Payment of Taxes without Distress.]

—A sheriff returned to a ven ex. and fi. fi., residue against goods, that he had made $50, out of which he had paid a collector of taxes $48.39 claimed by the collector as taxes due by defendant at the time of the seizure under the writ on land upon which the goods were, and of which the sheriff had notice prior to the sale, and that he had retained the balance towards his fees, &c. No distress had been made by the collector:—Held, that the sheriff must account to the execution creditor for the $50, because a distress by the collector is a necessary antecedent to obtaining the benefit of the statute. Adshead v. Grant, 4P. R. 121.

Purchase by Sheriff.]—A sheriff cannot in any manner become the purchaser of property sold under an execution. Doe d. Thompson v. McKenzie, M. T. 2 Vict.

Sale for Costs—Lien—Insolvency.]—The lien of a plaintiff for costs by virtue of s. 9 of R. 8. O. 1887 c. 124, under an execution in the sheriff's hands, against an insolvent, at the time of an assignment by him for the benefit of creditors under that statute, is not superseded by such assignment, and the sheriff is entitled to proceed and sell for the amount of such costs. If he does not do so, and the plaintiff loses his lien—Held, that he is not entitled to rank on the insolvent's estate as a preferential creditor; or, if so entitled, it could only be on the net funds available after payment of the proper charges incurred in the management of the estate. Gillard v. Milligna, 28 O. R. 045.

IX. FEES.

1. Administration of Justice in Districts and Counties.

Audit — Prerequisite to Recovery.] — To an action for the recovery of fees for services connected with the administration of justice within defendant's county, rendered by the plaintiff as sheriff, alleging that such fees had been duly audited by the county board of auditors under the statute, whereby the plaintiff became entitled to receive payment of the same, the defendant pleaded on equitable grounds, setting up that the right to such fees had been disputed and submitted to the court of Queen's bench, by a special case, and that the alleged audit was made under a misconception of the judgment, which the auditors erroneously understood to decide that the plaintiff was entitled to such fees, whereas the decision was to the context of t

Nessions, I—The fees of the sheriffs of the different districts payable by the districts for services rendered in the administration of justice, were to be audited and paid by the order of the justices of the several districts in sessions, and not under the direction of the district councils. In re Hamilton and Justices of London District, T. T. 5 & 6 Vict.

Payment—Mandamus.]—A mandamus to the treasurer of a district to pay the sheriff's account, audited by the justices in quarter sessions, was refused, and the sheriff was left to his remedy against the treasurer by indictment, for breach of duty. In re Hamilton v. Harris, 1 U. C. R. 513.

—Mandamus—Chairman of Sessions.]
—On an application for a mandamus to the chairman of the quarter sessions to sign an order on the treasurer for payment of the sheriff's account, which had been audited and passed:—Semble, that it could not properly be granted, for (1) it is not essential that an order of the quarter sessions should be signed by the chairman; and (2) he has no right to draw orders on the treasurer except when presiding in court, and then it is an order of the court, not of the presiding justice. The introduction in the affidavits of both sheriff and chairman of remarks impugning each other's motives and conduct, strongly disapproved of. In re Davidson and Miller, 24 U. C. R. 68.

against a county is payable as soon as audited by the county beyond of audit, and the county treasurer is not justified in witholding payment until the account had been allowed and paid by the government to the county. In research of Lincoln and County of Lincoln, 34 U. C. R. 1.

2. Bargaining of Fees by Sheriff.

Bond—Salary.]—A bond given to secure a sheriff a certain fixed salary or otherwise, to be paid by his deputy, is void. Foott v. Bullock, 4 U. C. R. 480.

Sale of Office—Forfeiture.]—The defendant, a sheriff, agreed, as the jury found, with one O., to give him all the fees of his office, except for certain services specified, in consideration of which O. was to pay him £300 a year, quarterly in advance, not out of the fees, but absolutely, and without reference to their amount:—Held, clearly an agreement prohibited by 5 & 6 Edw. VI. c. 16, and 49 Geo. III. c. 126, and that the effect of it was to forfeit the office upon conviction under a proceeding by scire facins. Held, also, that the evidence stated in the case warranted the jury in finding that the agreement was in the terms above mentioned. Regina v. Moodie, 20 U. C. R. 389.

3. During Vacancy in Office.

Right of Deputy Sheriff. | — The fees earned by a deputy sheriff while the office is vacant by reason of the death, resignation, or removal of the sheriff, of right belong to the deputy himself, and neither the representatives of the late nor the newly appointed sheriff have any right or claim thereto. In such a case where fees had been received by the deputy, which the bill alleged he had in error paid over to the executors of the late sheriff, and the deputy subsequently voluntarily assigned all his right and claim to such fees to the newly appointed sheriff, who filed a bill to compel repayment of the amounts to him, the court allowed a demurrer for want of equity. McKellar v. Henderson, 27 Gr. 181.

4. Poundage.

(a) Action against Execution Debtor for.

The sheriff cannot maintain an action against the execution debtor for his poundage. Thomas v. Great Western R. W. Co., 24 U. C. R. 326.

(b) On Ca. Sa.

Arrest—Amount of Execution.]—A sheriff upon arresting a judgment debtor upon a ca. sa, thereby becomes at once entitled as against the execution creditor to full poundage on the amount of the execution. McNab v. Oppenheimer, 11 P. R. 348.

Custody.]—When the sheriff has the party in custody on a ca. sa., he can claim poundage under rule of H. T. 10 Vict. Corbett v. Mc-Kenzie, 6 U. C. R. 605.

Surrender.]—Where a ca. sa. was delivered with instructions to return it "non est inventus" after four days, and the bail in the meantime surrendered the defendant:—Held. entitled to poundage. Gillespie v. Nickerson, 1 P. R. 305.

(c) On Fi. Fa. Goods-Right to Poundage.

Before Sale—Statute—Retroactivity.]—Where a sheriff, before 7 Wm. IV. c. 3, s. 32, levied on a defendant's goods, he was entitled to poundage, although there was no sale, that Act not being retrospective. Commercial Bank v. VanNorman, T. T. 3 & 4 Vict.

Writ Set aside.]—Where a levy had been made under a fi. fa., but before sale the writ and all proceedings thereon were set aside: — Held, not entitled to poundage. Walker v, Faurleid, 8 C. P. 95.

Money not Directly made by Sheriff.]

—On executions against person or goods, there must be a taking to entitle to poundage. If the money be paid before, this defeats the right to poundage, but if the money be forced right to poundage, but it the money be forced by the act of the sheriff, then, though it does not pass through his hands, his right to poundage accrues. Morris v. Boulton, 2 C. L. Ch. 60.

Quære, the right of the sheriff to poundage where money is apparently made by pressure of executions in his hands, but not made by or through him. Gillespie v. Shaw, 10 L. J. 100

Under C. S. U. C. c. 22, s. 271, a sheriff is not entitled to poundage unless he actually levies the money due under the writ in his hands; even though by the pressure exerted by seizure defendant has paid or otherwise settled the debt. Buchanan v. Frank, 15 C. P. 196.

Account.]-A sheriff is only entitled to poundage on the moneys actually passing through his hands. Where therefore the parties to a suit arranged outside the sheriff's office for the payment of $3,000 on account of an execution in his hands, and the plaintiffs in the cause paid his poundage on that amount as well as on the moneys actually paid to the sheriff, the court refused to allow them to charge the amount against the defendants. Hamilton and Port Dover R. W. Co. v. Gore Bank, 20 Gr. 191.

Allowance.] - The poundage of a sheriff cannot be taken to cover more than the risk and responsibility cast upon him when he seizes, retains, and sells goods and from this levy returns the money. If the sheriff's action be intercepted, so that he does not make this money, it is for the court to say what allowance shall be made to him in lieu of poundage. Wadsworth v. Bell, S P. R. 478.

Municipal Corporation.]—Held, that a sheriff is not entitled to poundage on writs against numeral corporations, unless he actually makes the money. Where a settlement is obtained by means of his pressure, he is entitled to reasonable compensation for services performed, although no special fee he assigned for such service in any statute or table of costs. In this case he was entitled to all his disbursements, all fees fixed by the tariff of costs, and half what would have been the amount of his poundage had the money been made, less the disbursements. Semble, a sheriff is entitled to poundage when he makes the money on a fi, fa, against a corporation, though he may under the Municipal Institutions Act, have levied a rate to collect the amount. Grant v. City of Hamilton, 2 C. L. J. 262. performed, although no special fee be assign-

Money not Made by Sheriff — With-drawal.]—Where, after seizure by a sheriff under an execution for $1,100, the execution was settled between the parties by the taking of promissory notes from defendant, and the sheriff was ordered to deliver up possession, but the writ was not withdrawn:—Held, that the execution was shtisfied so as to entitle the sheriff to something for poundage under 27 & 28 Vict. c. 28, and $10 was allowed. Mc-Roberts v. Hamilton, 7 P. R. 95.

Writ Set aside.] - Held, under the facts, that this case came within the provisions of R. S. O. 1877 c. 66, s. 45, and that therefore the sheriff was entitled to poundage.

Money Paid to Sheriff by Debtor.] The receipt of money by a sheriff under a fi. fa. is a virtual execution of the writ, although there has been no seizure or sale, and entitles the sheriff to his poundage and fees. The defendant requested the sheriff never to make a seizure upon receiving a writ of fi. fa. against him, promising that he would pay his fees as if a formal seizure had been made. Subsequently the sheriff notified the defendant of quently the sherin nothing the detendant of the receipt of a writ against him and issued his warrant, but did not levy, and the de-fendant paid:—Held, that the sheriff was en-titled to the poundage and fees. Consolidated Bank v, Bickford, 7 P. R. 172.

Money Restored to Defendant — Recovery from Plaintiff — Compensation.] — Semble, that under the facts set out in this case the sheriffs were not strictly entitled to poundage. Where money levied has to be restored to defendant, in consequence of something for which the plaintiff is answerable, the sheriff may recover his poundage from the plaintiff. Quere, whether the same principle applies when the sheriff is entitled only to compensation for his services under 9 Vict. c. 56, or whether defendant must pay in all cases. Henry v. Commercial Bank. 17 U. C. R. 104.

Sale of Goods of Claimant — Allow-ance.]—Where goods seized by a sheriff under execution, and sold under an interpleader order, were afterwards found to be the goods of the claimant therein and not of the execution defendant:—Held, that the sheriff was not entitled under rule 1233 to an allowance in lieu of poundage in respect of the goods seized. Turner v. Crozier, 14 P. R. 272.

Stay of Execution after Seizure.] The plaintiff had obtained a decree in this cause against the defendants, by which money was ordered to be paid, and on which the plaintiff issued execution and lodged it in the paintill issued execution and longed it in the hands of a sheriff. After seizure under the writ, but before the money was levied, the de-fendants moved for and obtained leave to re-hear the cause (see 1 Ch. Ch. 214) and a stay of the execution on the terms of paying the money into court, which was done:— Held, that the sheriff, not having actually levied the money under the execution, was entitled only to fees for services actually rendered. Winters v. Kingston Permanent Building Society, 1 Ch. Ch. 276.

Withdrawal from Possession.] --- Whe, the shcriff under a fi. fa. seized goods sufficient to cover the claim, and afterwards withdrew from possession, in obedience to a Judge's order founded upon an undertaking of defendant to credit the amount of the levy on an execution which he held against the plaintiff:—Held, entitled to poundage. Thomas v. Cotton, 12 U. C. R. 148.

Several Sheriffs.]-Where writs of fi. fa. are issued in two counties, and both sheriffs seize goods sufficient to satisfy the execution, and plaintiff and defendant afterwards settle, and the sheriffs are ordered to withdraw, both are not entitled to poundage. Brown v. Johnson, 5 L. J. 17.

Writ Superseded-Withdrawal- Allow. ance.]—A sheriff made a seizure under a fi. fa. against the goods of the defendants, but, learning that they were about to appeal, of Order Fixing Allowance — Finality—Rate of Remuneration.]—A Judge's order under C. L. P. Act, s. 27.1, fixing the allowance to be made to the sheriff where there has been a seizure, but no money levied, is final. in this case the sheriff rendered his bill, and the plaintiff obtained a summons to reduce it or determine who would be reasonable:—Semble, that the sheriff should have applied in order to authorize charges not sanctioned by the tariff. Semble, also, the Judge's duty is not to tax the sheriff's account, but to fix a rate for services rendered, leaving to the master to determine the amount in case of dispute. Guyme v. Grand Trunk R. W. Co., 24 U. C. R. 482.

expense to the parties, withdrew his officer in possession, and, the appeal having been subsequently brought, the execution was superseded. The appeal was dismissed, and the judgment debt and costs were afterwards settled by arrangement between the varties:—Heid, that the sheriff had not so withdrawn from the seizure as to disentitle him to poundage or an allowance in lieu thereof, and that, notwithstanding the superseding of the execution, he was entitled under rule 1233 to such allowance — the words "from some other cause" in that rule being wide enough to cover the case. Breckville and Ottawa R. W. Co. v. Canada Central R. W. Co., 7 P. R. 372, and Morrison v. Taylor, 9 P. R. 390, approved and followed. The court will not interfere with the discretion exercised by the master in fixing the amount of the allowance. Weegar v. Grand Trunk R. W. Co., 16 P. R. 371.

his own motion, and for the purpose of saving

(d) On Fi. Fa. Goods-Other Cases.

Amount of—Account—Costs.]—A sheriff had moneys properly applicable to certain executions in his office but the debtor, having otherwise arranged with the plaintiffs in the writs, obtained from them orders on the sheriff for payment of their amounts respectively, but the sheriff refused to pay unless the debtor would consent to pay his full poundage as on a sale, which he was not entitled to claim, and defended an action for the amount, in which he defeated the plaintiff. This court, on a bill filed against the sheriff, granted a decree for an account and ordered him to pay the costs up to the hearing. Davies v. Davidson, 14 Gr. 206.

— Computation.]—The usual mode of computing sheriff's poundage is correct, namely, to allow six per cent. on the first $1,000, and in addition thereto three per cent. on the amount over $1,000, and under $4,000; and in addition thereto one and a half per cent. on the amount over $4,000. Fleming v. Hall, 9 P. R. 310.

— Several Writs.] — Held, that the sheriff was entitled to charge poundage upon each of several writs though all were issued by the same solicitor and were placed in his hands at the same time. Grant v. Grant, 10 P. R. 40.

Apportionment—Costs.]—Where an interpleader issue, ordered upon the application of a sheriff who had seized certain goods under the direction of the execution creditors, was determined as to part of the goods in favour of the claimant and as to the remainder in favour of the sex of the sex of the sex of the sex of the result of the Heid, that the execution creditors should pay the sheriff his fees and poundage on the value of the part of the goods they were found entitled to, and his costs of the interpleader application and of a subsequent application to dispose of the costs, &c.; and that the execution creditors should have an order over against the claimant for one half of such costs. Ontario Silver Co. v. Tasker, 15 P. R. 180.

(e) On Fi. Fa. Lands.

Right to—Sale.]—Quere, if a sheriff is entitled to poundage on a compromise after advertisement, but before sale. Gates v. Crooks, 3 O. S. 286.

He is not, on a compromise after delivery of a writ to him, but before any thing done on it. Leeming v. Hagerman, 5 O. S. 38.

The right to poundage only begins with the sale, and the words "and made," used in the tariff, have reference to this act. Morris v. Boulton, 2 C. L. Ch. 60.

A sheriff has no right to poundage upon an execution against lands, unless there has been an actual sale. Merchants Bank v. Campbell, 32 C. P. 170.

A sheriff is not entitled to poundage under a writ of fi. fa. lands until there has been a sale under the writ. Merchants Bank v. Campbell, 32 C. P. 170, followed. French v. Lake Superior Mineral Co., 14 P. R. 541.

(f) On Other Writs.

Attachment—Coroner.]—A coroner is not entitled to poundage on an attachment against a sheriff. In re Duggan, 2 U. C. R. 118.

Estreated Recognizance.]—Where, on a levy on an estreated recognizance, the Crown discharges the estrent on payment of the sheriff's fees, he is entitled to poundage. Regina v. Vinning, H. T. 3 Viet.

Writ of Extent.]—Poundage is recoverable from defendant on a writ of extent; and other expenses also, on application to the court or a Judge. Regina v. Patton, 9 U. C. R. 307.

5. Summoning Jurors.

Certificate of Attendance — Micage—Audit—Mandamus—Copies of Panels.] — Under C. S. U. C. c. 31, ss. 105, 161, s.-s. 4, the sheriff is entitled to charge only for such certificates of attendance as are demanded by the jurors. He caunot prepare them beforehand and charge, whether they are asked for or not. The court can compel the quarter sessions to audit the sheriff's accounts; but, semble, such audit being a judicial duty, that it cannot review a discretion exercised upon a question of fact. The court refused therefore to interfere where the quarter sessions, a sher under 1877 own Domi R. 17 after examining the bailiff vivâ voce, had disallowed certain mileage for serving jurors, sworn to in his affidavit. The sheriff is entitled, under ss. 84 and 161, s-s. 2, to charge for four copies of panels for the court of assizes, 84, i.e., two copies of the panel of grand and petit jurors, respectively, one to be sent to each of the superior courts at Toronto; and 86 for copies of panels for the quarter sessions and county court, i.e., for two copies of the panel of grand and petit jurors respectively for quarter sessions, and of petit jurors for the county court. In re Datislon and County of Waterloo, 22 U. C. R. 405.

Double Panel. — Mitago,! — The sheriif of Haldimand, for many years, since 1853, had charged for the panel of jurors for both the county court and sessions, and mileage for summoring the court bone to his residence, without reference to the distance actually travelled to serve all:—Held, that the sheriff was entitled to charge for both panels, but only to mileage for the distance actually travelled to summon all the jurors. County of Haldimand v. Martin, 19 U. C. R. 178. See this case also as to the right of the county to recover back such fees.

Where the sheriff travels to summon grand and petit jurors at the same time, he is entitled, under C. S. U. C. c. 31, to charge only for the number of miles actually travelled in order to serve all the jurors. He is entitled, under s. 61, s.-s. 3, besides his mileage, to $12 for summoning the 48 petit jurors for the county court, and the same sum for the quarter sessions, though the same jurors are summoned for both courts, and served at the same time with both summonses. 6. Taxation.

Excessive Amount—Taxation Ordered.]
—The court expressed surprise at finding that on a sale of goods, producing in gross $\frac{8}{2}$ finding that the expenses amounted to $\frac{1}{2}$ 000, believing that such a charge would not be found justified by the tariff and the proper practice under it. The bill was referred to the master to tax what in his discretion was necessarily incurred in the care and removal of the goods. Michie v. Reynolds, 24 U. C. R. 303.

Observations on the exorbitant charge for fees and possession money made by the sheriff. Black v. Reynolds, 43 U. C. R. 398.

Items—Stock-Taking.] — The sheriff paid persons at Belleville and at Madoc for "taking stock" after the levy:—Held, that these payments should be disallowed, as they do not appear in the tariff, and the local master was precluded by R. S. O. 1877 c. 66, s. 51, from allowing anything to the sheriff which was not correct and legal. Grant v. Grant, 10 P. R. 40. See Morrison v. Taylor, 9 P. R. 390, post, Place of Taxation—Notice.]—Held, that a sheriff's bill of fees may be taxed on notice under s. 48 of the Execution Act, R. S. O. 1877 c. 66, either at Toronto or in the sheriff's own county, as the party taxing may elect. Dominion Type Founding Co. v. Nagle, S. P. Possession Money.] — It appeared that the deputy sheriff kep the keys of the store in Belleville, and went himself twice a day to see that the goods were safe:—Held, that the payment to him of $2 per day as possession money should have been allowed only if the master were satisfied that it was necessarily and actually paid, and the item was referred back for reconsideration, it being alleged that the only possession was locking up the store and keeping the key. Grant v. Grant, 10 F. R. 40.

Revision.]—Where a sheriff's fees have been taxed before a deputy clerk of the Crown under R. S. O. 1877 c. 65, s. 48, a revision of such taxation cannot take place before the principal clerk of the Crown, but the court may refer the bill back to the same deputy clerk for a revision of the taxation, where it appears that items have been improperly allowed. Hay v. Drake, S. P. R. 120.

Forum.] — Held, that the plaintiff properly applied to a Judge in chambers to review the taxation pursuant to R. S. O. 1877 c. 66, s. 52, as rule 447 applied only to the Toronto taxing officers appointed under rule 438, O. J. Act. Grant v. Grant, 10 P. R. 40.

Right to Taxation—Execution Set aside—Items—Stock tains.]—An execution and the judgment under which it issued were set aside on the ground of irregularity in obtaining the judgment:—Held, that the plaintiff was not entitled to have the sheriff's bill against him taxed under R. S. O. 1877 c. 66, s. 48, as the setting aside of the execution was not a "settlement by payment, levy, or otherwise," within the meaning of the Act, or under s. 47, as the plaintiff was not a "person liable on any execution"—Held, however, that a sheriff, as an officer of the court claiming fees by virtue of its process, is so far within its jurisdiction that his bill may be taxed under rule 447, O. J. Act. The item of 86 for taking stock was improperly allowed, not being incurred in the care and removal of the property within the tariff. Morrison v. Taylor, 9 P. R. 390.

7. Other Cases.

Application to Fix Fees—Costs.]—If, after a seizure, the parties settle, the plaintiff may apply to the court to fix the sheriff's fees, but he will not get the costs of the rule, though no cause be shewn. In re Home, 1 U. C. R. 412.

Appropriation of Money Made—Interest—New Writ.]—The master, in order to ascertain what, if any, money remained due upon a judgment against defendants, calculated the judgment and interest from its entry, on the 26th June, 1841; and thus, with the sums due for the execution issued, made the plaintiff's claim £185 12s. 3d., to which he added the sheriff's fees, and interest thereon, £25 11s. 4d., making the total amount charge-able against defendants, £211 3s. 7d. He then gave defendants credit for various sums on account, and sums levied by the sheriff on different writs, calculating interest on each sum from the date of its payment or being got by the sheriff, amounting in the whole to £250 16s. 3d.; so that, by this mode of computation, the plaintiff appeared to have been overpaid the sum of £39 12s. 8d.:—Held, that the sheriff's fees, poundage, &c., should have been deducted from the gross amount made by him on each writ, and the balance only be brought into account between the plaintiff and defendant; that the course taken by the master was not the correct one; that where the sheriff receives a writ indorsed to levy a named sum as that recovered, and interest from the time of entering the judgment, he must make the money generally, and pay over what he makes -fees and expenses deducted-on the writ generally; if insufficient to satisfy the execution, he returns nulla bona as to the residue, and the plaintiff is then entitled to a new execution; that on indorsing the new execution he is entitled to consider the interest up to the date of the levy as paid, and the principal as reduced by the balance of what he has received from the sheriff; and having so reduced the principal, to indorse his subsequent writ for such reduced principal, and interest thereon from the time of the former levy and payment. Cummings v. Usher, 1 P. R. 15.

Expenses.]—Held, that where a sheriff, acting in good faith for all concerned, agreed to pay for having grain threshed for the purpose of its better sale, the expenses of such threshing should be allowed him. Galbraith y. Fortune, 10 C. P. 109.

Lien for Fees—Assignment—Priorities.]
—Judgment creditors, having executions in the sheriff's hands, under which a seizure had been made, signed an agreement giving defendant an extension of time for payment on certain conditions therein mentioned. Upwards of thirty days afterwards defendant assigned under the Insolvent Acts, the conditions of the agreement having been so far performed:—Held, that the writs were not in the sheriff's hands for execution, and that the assignment took priority; and that the sheriff had no lien or claim on the goods seized for the payment of his fees. In re Ross, 3 P. R.
394.

Mileage.]—A sheriff is entitled to mileage only on going to make a levy, not on going to sell also. Burwell v. Tomlinson, H. T. 2 Vict.

X. INDEMNITY BONDS TO SHERIFF.

Action on Bond—Plea—Neglect to Appeal in Action against Sherift, I.—Action upon a bond of indemnity given by defendant for not selling goods, alleging a verdiet and judgment against the sheriff in a county court, which he had been obliged to pay. Defendant pleaded that he had defended the action for the plaintiff, and moved for a new trial, which was refused: that he then gave a bond to appeal, according to the statute, and applied to the Judge to certify the proceedings, but the plaintiff (defendant in that action), without notice to defendant, and against his will, paid the money, by means whereof defendant was prevented from prosecuting the appeal, &c. It appeared that no bond had been given until the fifth day after the judgment was entered, and that the Judge of the county court had on that ground refused to interfere:—Held, that the plen was not proved, for the appeal was not prevented by the plaintiff's payment, as alleged, but by the entry of judgment. Quarre, whether it formed a good defence. Ringsmill v. Weller, 16 U. C. R. 479.

Proof of Damage—Judgment.]—A sheriff, before he can recover upon a bond indemnifying him against all actions, suits, judgments, &c., must shew a judgment entered in proper form against him. Ruttan v. Conger, 9 C. P. 16.

- Proof of Damage - Pleading.] -Where to a plea of non damnificatus to an action brought by the executrix of a sheriff on an indemnity bond given by defendant to the sheriff, for seizing and selling goods as the property of A. on an execution of defendant against A., the plaintiff replied a judgment and execution against A. at the suit of the defendant; that the testator was about to return the writ "nulla bona," and that defendant gave the bond to the testator to seize certain goods as goods of A.; that the testator did accordingly seize and sell, and that he paid the money arising from the sale to defendant; that an action of trespass for seizing and selling the goods had been brought against the testator by their owner, and a judgment for £26 12s, 4d, recovered against him in the district court; and so he was damnified-the replication was held good on general demurrer, the court holding that the allegations were sufficiently certain; that the seizure had been made by testator on defendant's writ and before the return day; and that the district court must be presumed not to have exceeded its jurisdiction, without any averment to that effect. Hamilton v. McFarland, E. T. 3 Vict.

Protection from—Order of Court—Set-off, I—C, one of the obligors in a bond of indemnity to the sheriff under a writ of attachment against an absconding debtor, obtained a final order for protection from process. Judgment was obtained in an action against the sheriff subsequently to the filing of the petition and the bond, but was not referred to in C.'s schedule thereto:—Held, that, under 19 & 20 Viet. c. 93, C. was not discharged by such final order. Held, also, that the obligors were not entitled to set off against the sheriff's claim money which the sheriff had applied out of the proceeds of the sale under the attachment to pay certain executions in his hands prior to such attachment. Moodly v. Bull, 7 C. P. 15.

Sheriff's own Wrong.]—Where an indemnity bond was given to the sheriff by an execution creditor for the sale of the debtor's goods, and the creditor afterwards directed the sheriff not to sell, but, notwith standing, he went on and sold:—Held, in an action by the sheriff on the bond for damages recovered against him in consequence of the sale, that defendant was entitled to a verdict on an issue that the sheriff was damnified of his own wrong; and the jury having found for the sheriff, the court granted a new trial. McMahon v. Ingersoll, H. T. 5 Vict.

Claim—Costs of Postponement,1—Held, that under a plea that the plaintiff was damnified of his own warms the the plaintiff was damnified of his own warms the the the damn could not shew that the sheriff, incurred the damages complained of irrespective of the execution of the writ indemnified against. It is no defence to an action by the sheriff on an indemnity bond to shew that the sheriff, instead of paying the claim of the party indemnified against after he paid the execution creditor (the oblige in the bond to the sheriff), chose to pay the surplus proceeds of the sale to the assignee of the execution debtor, ince a bank-rupt, and so was damnified of his own wrong; the sheriff cannot be called upon to treat as valid, with respect to these partles, the very claim against which he has been indemnified. The sheriff is entitled to recover from the obligor in the indemnity bond the costs incurred in respect of putting off the trial of the cause against himself, on account of the absence of a material witness. Corbett v. Wilson, S. U. C. R. 22.

Effect of—Trespass.]—A person who indemnifies a sheriff for seizing goods, does not by that act become liable as a trespasser. McLeod v. Fortune, 19 U. C. R. 98.

Execution Debtor's Bond—validity—Sale—Estoppel.) — A sheriff, holding executions against defendant, took from him a bond reciting that the sheriff had seized the defendant's goods, and indemnifying the sheriff "against any loss, damage, or liability, which may be incurred by reason of the execution, wrongful execution, or non-execution of the said writ." The sheriff afterwards sold the goods contrary to defendant's wish, who informed him that they belonged to one G. G. brought trover against the sheriff and recovered the value of the goods. The sheriff then sued defendant on his bond:—Held, that defendant was not estopped by the recital from denying his property in the goods; and that the defendant, having expressly objected to the sale, would not be liable. And semble, that such a bond would at all events be void at common law, as being an indemnity to the sheriff for disobeying the command of the writ. Corbett v. Hopkirk, 9 U. C. R. 479.

Obligors—Defence of Action—Notice.]—
The obligors must save the sheriff harmless, by assuming the defence of any action against him; and judgment against the sheriff is conclusive against the obligors. Notice to the obligors by the sheriff of his being sued is not necessary to give him a right of action against them. Thomas v. Johnston, 4 U. C. R. 110.

Revocation of Covenant — Conditional Liability.]—A sheriff, having two executions against the same person, accepted a covenant from the execution creditors on one of the writs, indemnifying him against any seizure and sale by him. Before anything was done on either writ, defendants countermanded and revoked their covenant, with the assent of the sheriff, who afterwards, however, went on, sold, and was damnified:—Held, that these facts formed a good equitable defence to an action on the covenant, for the agreement to indemnify merely created a conditional liability.

ity, from which defendants were at liberty to withdraw before any act done or damage sustained, especially where the withdrawal was with the sheriff's assent. Grange v. Mills, 19 C. P. 398.

Right to Take Bond.]—A snerin, whenever there is an adverse claim to goods as between the execution debtor and a third party, may take an indemnity bond from either one or the other, or both the parties. Thomas v. Johnston, 4 U. C. R. 110.

Undertaking to Indemnify—Attorney—Procuring Bond—Conduct of Sherift,1—Upon the following paper having been given by A. and B. to the sheriff: "Q. B.—Wilson et al. v. Hastings. The plaintiff will indemnify the sheriff on selling goods of H. under ven. ex. A. and B., attorneys for plaintiff. Kingston, Feb. 24, 1847;" the court ordered, upon the application of the sheriff, that A. and B. should enter into by a day named, or procure two sufficient persons to enter into, a bond of indemnity to the sheriff, to be approved of by the master; otherwise that A. and B. should pay to the sheriff the damages, &c., he had sustained by reason of selling H.'s goods under the ven. ex. The court also held that the conduct of the sheriff etting his right to recover either in whole or in part on the bond, could not be urged as a reason for refusing his application for the bond, but must be left as a matter of defence to or mitigation of damages in a suit to be brought by the sheriff on the bond. Corbett v. Smith, 7 C. C. R. 13.

— Attorney—Writing,] — Sheriffs recommended to take precise written engagements from attorneys when they mean to hold them liable, in cases they have nothing to do with except professionally, though where the attorney has orally agreed to indemnify, the court, if the agreement is admitted, will enforce it. In re Corbett v. O'Reilly, Macdonelt v. Grainger, S. U. C. R. 130.

Attorney — Ratification.] — Held, affirming the judgment in 25 N. B. Rep. 196, that a promise of indemnity to the sheriff by an attorney is binding on his client, where the attorney had the conduct of the suit in the course of which such promise was made, and the subsequent acts of the client shewed that he had adopted the attorney's proceedings. Muirhead v. Shirreff, 14 S. C. R. 735.

XI. RETURN OF WRITS.

1. Amendment.

Arrest—Escape—Privilege.]—After an action for an escape in execution, the sheriff will not be allowed to amend his return to the writ by shewing that the debtor was privileged from arrest, so as to oblige the plaintiff to have recourse to the original defendant; but the court will direct that the plaintiff shall assign the original judgment to the sheriff, so that he may proceed in the plaintiff's name, first indemnifying him against damages and costs in consequence of the assignment. Hervey v. Sherveod, T. T. 3 & 4 Viet.

Fi. Fa.—" Goods on Hand"—No Seizure.]

—A sheriff returned "goods on hand" to a fi. fa., having made no seizure, and the plaintiff issued a ven. ex., but, discovering that there had been no seizure, issued another fi. fa., without a return to the ven. ex. The second fi. fa. was set aside with costs, which the sheriff was ordered to pay, and to amend his return to the first writ. Lemoine v. Raymond, 2 U. C. R. 379.

— Mistake.]—The sheriff had returned to a fi. fa., that the money had been levied upon another writ, having reasons so to believe, but it appeared that part had not been made. The court allowed him to amend. Lee v, Neilson, 14 U. C. R. 606.

Where a sheriff returned a fi. fa. goods null bona, his deputy thinking that a water power held by lease required to be sold under a fi. fa. lands, the court allowed an amendment on terms. Bull v. King, Boomer v. King, S.C. P. 474.

A sheriff, in his advertisement of sale of lands seized under a fi. fa., had described them as the lands of defendant, when they were the plaintiff's. The return was allowed to be amended. McCann v. Eastwood, 2 Ch. Ch. 182

Sale — Discontinuance — Interpleader.]—After seizure under a fi. fa. the sale was delayed until an interpleader issue was tried. The jury having found that part of the goods seized were defendant's, the sheriff on the 1st October proceeded to sell, but by plaintiff's consent discontinued the sale and returned a sale to the amount of £4, and goods in hand to £15. On the 26th, and after this return, an extent, at the suit of the Crown, against defendant's goods, and on the 15th November a ven, ex. in this suit were handed to the sheriff. The sheriff applied to amend his return by returning nulla bona in whole or in part, or by making a special return:—Held, that the rule must be discharged; and that the sheriff should convert the property seized into money, when an application might be made, either by the plaintiff or on behalf of the Crown, to direct him to pay it over. Ford v. Story, I. P. R. 18.

Ven. Ex.—Lapse of Time.]—Held, that the returns to writs of fi. fa. and ven. ex. lands could be amended so as to correspond with the facts that upon terms, although a sale had been made under them, and after a lapse of over ten years. Scott v. Burgess and Buthurt School Trustees, 5 P. R. 228.

2. Attachment.

(a) Application for-Forum.

Judge in Chambers.] — An attachment against a sheriff for not obeying the rule to bring in the body cannot be granted by a Judge in chambers. Regina v. Sheriff of Niagara, Dra. 331.

Quare, can a Judge in chambers pass judgment upon a sheriff for contempt, under 7 Vict. c. 33, after the object of the statute has been attained by the return of the fi. fa. Regina v. Jarvis, 6 U. C. R. 558.

(b) Non-return or Insufficient Return,

Ca. Re.—Cepi Corpus—Escape—Waiver.]
—The sheriff arrested defendant on an order to hold to bail, and returned the writ cepi corpus. Defendant afterwards escaped, but the plaintiff, notwithstanding, served the declaration on the sheriff, and, a plea having been put in, recovered a verdict.—Held, that he could not, after this, rule the sheriff to return the body, and attach him for default. Regina v. Sheriff of Perth. 2 P. R. 298.

Ca. Sa.— Cepi Corpus — Admission to Limits,]—Where a sheriff returned cepi corpus to a ca. sa., and did not comply with the terms of a rule to bring in the body, and plaintiff then obtained a rule for an attachment:—Held, a good answer to shew that the defendant was arrested under a ca. sa. and placed in close custody, and was afterwards admitted to the limits by virtue of a certificate from the clerk of the Crown, and had not since been committed to close custody. White v. Petch, 7, U. C. R. 1

Costs of Rule to Return.]— A sheriff cannot be attached for non-payment of the costs of a rule to return under 3 Wm. IV. c. 9, unless there has been a rule specially calling on him so to do. Marcey v. Butler, H. T. 2 Vict.; Doe d. McGregor v. Grant, T. T. 2 & 3 Vict.

Delay in Moving.] — Where the rule to return a writ of fi. fa. had been taken out and served in June, 1833, the court, in M. T. 5 Wm. IV., refused an attachment on the ground of delay. Loucks v. Farrard, 4 O. S. 5.

Indemnity—Refusal of—Several Executions.]—Where a sheriff had three executions against goods of a defendant, and having seized and sold had partly satisfied the first and third, when a stranger claimed the property, and the plaintiff in the second writ refused to give the sheriff an indemnity, and the sheriff did not return his writ, an attachment was granted against him for not returning it. Land v. Burn, T. T. 3 & 4 Vict.

Informality.]—Where there was an informal return, the Court refused an attachment in the first instance. Bayman v. Struther, Tay. 39.

Insufficiency.]—An insufficient return is no return, and the course is to move for an attachment, not to quash the return. Eastwood v. McKenzie, 5 O. S. 708; Regina v. McLeod, M. T. 3 Vict.; Smith v. Bellows, 2 P. R. 183.

sheriff's return to a writ of fi. fa. goods set forth that he was notified that the amount of the judgment to be executed had been attached by a judgment to be executed had been attached by a judgment tenditor of the execution creditor, and that the execution debtor (the garnishee) had thereupon satisfied the claim of the garnishor. In fact there was only an order to attach and a summons to pay over, but no order absolute:—Held, that the return was insufficient in substance, because it shewed that the writ remained unexecuted without legal excuse; a garnishee order absolute would have operated as a stay of execution, but not so the attaching order and summons; the duty of the garnishee was to pay the sheriff, ad

Where purchasers are not in question, the issue of a writ of execution gives a specific claim to the goods of a judgment debtor, which remains till satisfaction of the debt; and, therefore, the withdrawal of the sheriff did not preclude further action upon the writ. Genge v. Freeman, 14 P. R. 330.

Late Return—Costs.]—Where a sheriff conclosed the roturn to the clerk of the Crown three or four days after the rule expired, so that it was not found on search, but was produced in open court by the clerk, the court refused an attachment in order to make him pay the costs. Andrews v. Robertson, 3 O. S. 304.

Member of Parliament.]—An attachment was granted against a sheriff who was a member of Parliament, for not returning a writ parsuant to a rule of court. Bell v. Buchavan, M. T. 1 Viet.

Place of Return—Affidavit.]—A sheriff had been ruled to return a fi. fa., without stating to what office, and it appeared that the writ had been issued from the office of the deputy clerk of the Crown, and that the sheriff might have returned it to that office:—Held, that an attachment could not be granted against him on an affidavit stating that he had not returned the writ to the Crown office. Toronto. Scott v. Berson, 1 P. R. 32.

Premature Rule.] — An attachment will not be granted for not obeying the rule to return it, issued on the same day as the writ was returnable. Regina v. Hamilton, E. T. 2 Vict. See Regina v. Jarvis, 3 U. C. R. 125, post (d).

Retired Sheriff — Account of Sales.]—
The court will not attach a sheriff more than six months out of office before the rule issued against him, for not giving an account of sales made and moneys received from a defendant on writs against his lands, although the rule directing the sheriff to render such an account had before been granted. Ladd v. Burwell, E. T. 3 Vict.; Mott v. Gray, 1 U. C. R. 392, 2 P. R. 183.

Rule—Stay of Proceedings.]—A party who has ruled a sheriff to return a writ, and afterwards stayed proceedings for a certain time, cannot after that time proceed by attachment under the rule. Bergin v. Hamilton, M. T. 2 Viet.

Second Attachment—Costs.]—A second attachment against a sheriff for not bringing in the body after a rule on a return of cept corpus, was refused, until the costs of setting aside a former one for irregularity were paid. Rex v. Ruttan, 5 O. S. 154.

Where an attachment against a sheriff had been set aside for irregularity with costs, the court delayed issuing another attachment to give time for the payment of these costs. Ib.

Title to Goods Questioned. —It is no sufficient ground against the atfachment that there is a question pending before the court respecting the title to the goods. The sheriff should apply to have the time extended for his return. Stull v. McLeod. 1 U. C. R. 402.

Ven. Ex.]—An attachment may issue for returning "goods on hand" to a ven. ex. Harper v. Powell, E. T. 2 Vict.

(c) Relief from.

Delay—Trial—Terms—Costs.]—A rule to return a ca. re, was issued in Trinity Term. In July following the writ appeared to have been in the hands of the plaintiff's agent, and in August the attachment issued. The court discharged it on paying costs up to the time it was returned, although a trial had been lost. Rex v. Sherwood, 3 O. S. 305.

Ofter of Terms—Payment of Debt and Costs.] — The plaintiff obtained an order to hold defendant to bail in an action for seduction for £50. Defendant did not put in special bail, and the sheriff was ruled to bring in the body, and an attachment issued against him. The sheriff applied on affidavit to be relieved on payment of the £50 and costs, but the application was refused. Semble, that the plaintiff, though the defendant will not put in bail, may go on with his action against him, and pursue his remedy against the sheriff at the same time. Regina v. Sheriff of Hastings, 1 C. L. Ch. 230.

Special Circumstances — Terms — Costs |—The court relieved a sheriff on payment of costs, bail being perfected, where he was in contempt for not bringing in the body, although a trial had been lost, it appearing that the sheriff was not in default for the loss of such trial, and it being sworn that the application was made solely on his behalf. Ward v. Skinner, 3 O. S. 235.

Stage of Proceedings, :- The court will sometimes relieve a sheriff by allowing a return even after motion to bring in his body, on the coroner's return of cepi corpus to the attachment against the sheriff for not returning the writ. Regina v. Jarvis, 1 U. C. R. 415.

Terms—Late Compliance.]—Semble, that when a sheriff returns a writ before the attachment, but not within the time limited by the rule, he can only be relieved upon payment of costs. Bank of Upper Canada v. Mo-Farlane, 4 U. C. R. 306.

(d) Setting aside.

Irregular Return — Costs.] — Where a sheriff, on being ruled to return an execution, returned it by post to the Crown office, where it was not filed because the postage was unpaid, and the plaintiff, with notice of these facts, obtained a rule for an attachment on the usual affidavit of search, the Court set the attachment aside, but only on payment of costs, as the sheriff was bound to have paid the postage, to make his return effectual. Regina v. Moodie, 1 U. C. R. 410.

Premature Rule to Return.] — The sheriff cannot be ruled to return a writ until the return day is past. Where an attachment has been issued on such rule, he should move to set aside the attachment, and not the irregular rule. Regina v. Jarvis, 3 U. C. R.

See Regina v. Hamilton, E. T. 2 Vict., ante (b).

Second Attachment—Irregularity.]—Where a sheriff returned cepi corpus, and the attachment for not bringing in the body was set aside for irregularity, and while it was in existence defendant in the action had been discharged by supersedeas, bail having been put in, but the rule of allowance was not served:—Held, that a second attachment against the sheriff on a second rule to bring in the body, issued eight months after the setting aside of the first attachment and the debtor's discharge, was irregular; and it also was set aside. Rev. Sheriff of Niagara, 2 O. S. 126.

Settlement—Costs.]—An attachment obtained for not returning a writ after a settlement of the plaintiff's claim before the rule was issued, was set aside, but without costs, as the sheriff shoud have come in and applied to set aside the rule. Petton v. Wells, 5 O. S. 485.

— Attempt.] — Where, after the delivery of a writ against lands to a sheriff, the plaintiff and defendant agreed to compromise, and after more than two years the compromise was not effected, the court set aside a rule for an attachment for not returning the writ. Urooks v. O'Grady, I U. C. R. 400.

(e) Other Cases.

Bail Perfected.] — Bail being perfected, the court would not order an attachment for not bringing in the body to stand as a security. Ward v. Skinner, 3 O. S. 235.

Summons for Attachment — Service— Name of Sheriff—Original Rule.]—Semble, that a personal service on the sheriff of the copy of a summons for an attachment, without shewing him the original, is sufficient. The summons should, strictly, name the sheriff who is in default, and not merely call upon the officer, for he may be changed. In order to attach the sheriff for contempt in not obeying the rule, it must appear that the original rule was shewn to him. Hilton v. Macdonell, 1 C. L. Ch. 207.

3. Rule to Return Writ.

Place of Issue.]—A rule to return a fi. fa. cannot issue out of the office of the deputy-clerk of the Crown in an outer district. Anon., Dra. 224.

Tender of Money Made—Costs.] — A sheriff sent his clerk to plaintiff's attorney before action brought, saying that certain moneys collected on an execution in favour of plaintiff were ready to be paid; the clerk had not the money with him, nor did he offer to go for it; but the attorney said he would not receive it unless the costs of a rule on the sheriff to return the writ were also paid;—Held, in an action for the sum so levied, that these facts would not sustain a plea of tender. Thomson v. Hamilton, 5 O. 8, 111.

Time of Issue—Vacation — Costs.] — A rule to return a writ may issue in vacation; and if the sheriff do not return the writ within the time limited by the rule, the court will impose the costs of the rule upon him, unless under very peculiar circumstances. McGowan v. Gilchrist, H. T. 7 Vict.

Time for Return.]—The rule to return a writ of fi. fa. should be a six-day rule. Hilton v. Macdonell, 1 C. L. Ch. 207.

Quære, can rules to return writs, since C. S. U. C. c. 22, s. 276, with a view to proceedings to bring the sheriff into contempt, be properly made four-day rules, as intended by the statute, or six-day rules, as required by rule No. 101, T. T. 1856? Semble, a four-day rule is perfectly regular. Sed quære, the effect of the decision of the court of Queen's bench, in this case, in refusing a rule nisi for an attachment on the sheriff. Clark v. Galbrath, 10 L. J. 296.

4. Other Cases.

Collusive Return to Fi. Fa. Goods— Heir of Deceased Debtor.]—Ouwere, whether the heir, devisee, or othe: claimant under a deceased debtor, or any person to be prejudiced thereby, may not justly complain if a wrongful or collusive return of nulla bona be made, while there is a sufficiency of goods, and the debtor's lands be seized to satisfy the debt. Ontario Bank v. Kerby, 16 C. P. 35.

Deputy Sheriff — Validity of Return.]— The sheriff is bound by the return to a fi. fa. made by a person who, though deputy sheriff when he signed the sheriff's name to the return, was not deputy until after the writ was returnable. Baby v. Foott, 4 U. C. R. 349.

Execution against Company—Sheriff a Director.]—A writ of fi. fn. against a railway company which was directed to a sheriff before he became a director in the company, was properly directed and returnable by him, and his becoming a director before the return of the writ did not invalidate it. Smith v. Spencer, 12 C. P 277.

— Sheriff, the President,1 — A sheriff, being president of a railway company returned a fi. fa. against the company nulla bona. Upon an action brought against a stockholder founded upon that return: — Held, that the writ and return were not of themselves a nullity on account of the sheriff (being president) executing them, and no application having been made to set the writ or return aside, the objection failed. Ray v. Blair, 12 C. P. 257.

Extension of Time.]—Where an interpender order is pending, the court will in its discretion enlarge the time for returning writs in the sheriff's hands. Walker v. Niles, 3 Ch. Ch. 59.

Fi. Fa.—Delay—Penalty.]—The court will not fix a sheriff with the debt merely because he has not returned a fi. fa, until after he has been ruled to do so. Regina v. Jarvis, 6 U. C. R. 558.

Form of Return—Surplusage.]—It is not improper to return to a fi. fa. that the sheriff has made the money and paid it over to the plaintiff's attorney, the words in italies being mere surplusage. Doyle v. Bergin, 5 O. S. 524.

Impertinent Matter.] - Impertinent matter in return to a writ is considered as a contempt. Jones v. Schofield, Tay. 610.

Incorrect Return.]—As a general rule, the sheriff is bound by his return to a fi. fa., but not after a verdict against him shewing it incorrect. Houlditch v. Corbett, G U. C. R.

Negligence-Nullity of Judgment.] - A sheriff sued for negligence in making a return sheriff sued for negligence in making a return to an execution from the county court can set up as a defence the nullity of the judgment. Jones v. Paxton, 27 C. L. J. 596.

Nulla Bona—Irregularity.]—A return of nulla bona, where there are goods, is only an irregularity to be excepted to by defendant, if the plaintiff is abusing the process of the court by proceeding against the lands before having exhausted the goods. Ontario Bank v. Kerby,

Sale of Shares — Nulla Bona.] — The sheriff, having sold shares in a steamboat company under execution and received the money, could not return nulla bona on the ground that they were not properly saleable under the writ. Hewitt v. Corbett, 15 U. C. R. 39.

Statute.]—Remarks upon the embarrassment resulting from the operation of 29 & 30 Vict. c. 42. s. 6, Gleason v. Gleason & Gleason V. Gleason, 4 P. R. 117. |The section is repealed by 31 Vict. c. 25 (O.) See R. S. O. 1877 c. 66, s. 14 et seq.; (1897) con, rules 844, 877.]

XII. SERVICE OF PAPERS.

Ca. Re.—Deputy Sheriff.]—A writ of care, not bailable must be served by the sheriff or his officer, though the deputy sheriff be a party to the suit. Ruttan v. Ashford, 3 O.

Process Generally.]—The process of the court can only be served by the sheriff or his officers. Whitehead v. Fothergill, Dra. 200.

Return—Notice of Motion — Papers not Process.]—In moving for an order upon a sheriff to return papers sent to him for service, the proper mode is to give notice of mo-tion; but quare, whether a sheriff can be compelled to serve any paper other than pro-cess issuing from the courts. Porter v. Gard-ner, 1 Ch. Ch. 15.

Subpoenas.] — Semble, that, subpœnas being mesne process under C. L. P. Act, c. 277, no fees can be allowed for mileage or service, if not made by the sheriff. McLean v. Evans, 3 P. R. 154.

Held, that service of the subpœnas made by one of the defendants could not be allowed unless such defendant held a warrant or written authority from the sheriff to act as his bailiff on the occasion. Ham v. Lasher, 24 U. C. R. 357.

XIII. SUMMONING JURIES.

Sheriff a Party.]—The court refused to set aside a verdict against a sheriff, upon the ground that the coroner's jury who tried the cause was the same as that returned by the sheriff. Payne v. McLean, Tay, 325.

It is no objection on the part of the sheriff, in an action against him, that a jury have been summoned by himself and not by the coroner. Ainslie v. Rapelje, 3 U. C. R. 275.

Sheriff of Toronto.] — Held, that since the Act separating the city of Toronto from York and Peel (24 Yict. c. 53), the sheriff of the county of the city of Toronto, not the high bailiff, is entitled to be selector of, and to ballot for and summon, the jurors for courts held in the city. In re Sheriff of City of To-ronto and Recorder of City of Toronto, 26 U. C. R. 346.

See ante IX. 5.

XIV. SURETIES OF SHERIFF-ACTIONS AGAINST.

1. Misconduct of Sheriff.

[See R. S. O. 1877 c. 16, ss. 3-25; R. S. O. 1897 c. 17, ss. 11-33.]

Acceptance of Bail-Irregular Arrest-Acceptance of Bail—Irregular Arrest—Estoppel.]—The declaration was in covenant against the sheriff and his sureties, under 3 Wm. IV. c. 8. The second breach stated, in substance, that, the sheriff having received a ca. re. to arrest one T., a person without any authority from the sheriff arrested T.; that T. went to the sheriff and gave him a bail bond for his appearance, which the sheriff, not bond for his appearance, which the seem, not knowing but that the warrant authorized the arrest, took. The second plea to this breach stated that the plaintiff having knowledge of this insisted, while the process was current, on the sheriff's making an effectual arrest:— Held, on general demurrer, that this piea was no answer. But held, that this breach did not shew such wilful misconduct by the sheriff not shew such wilful misconduct by the sheriff as to sustain an action against him and his sureties under 3 Wm. IV. c. 8. Quere, whether under the circumstances the court would not hold the bail precluded from denying an arrest. McIntosh v. Jarvis, 8 U. C. R. 530.

What is done at the plaintiff's own suggestion cannot be complained of as wilful misconduct. S. C., ib. 535.

Error in Judgment-Priority of Executions. |-The sureties of a sheriff are not liable tions.]—The sureties of a sheriff are not liable under their covenant, given in accordance with 3 Wm. IV. c. 8, as for wilful misconduct by the sheriff, where it consists in a mere error in judgment in deciding bona fide upon the priority of executions in his hands. Bradbury v. Adams, 1 U. C. R. 538.

False Return of Nulla Bona—Arrest.]
—Where a plaintiff declared, that on a fi. fa. against his goods a sheriff levied and made the debt, but falsely returned nulla bona: by reason of which a ca. sa. was issued and he reason of which a cit. sat. was issued and ne was arrested and again compelled to pay the money:—Held, that a sufficient damage was shewn to make the sheriff's sureties liable as for the wilful misconduct of the sheriff. Hezon v. Hamilton, 6 O. S. 115.

tiff's writ, under the circumstances, was such wilful misconduct as gave a right of action under the covenant. Clandinan v. Dickson, S. U. C. R. 281.

U. C. R. 281.
The sheriff having obtained an interpleader order, it was directed by the court that in the meantime the sheriff should sell the goods claimed, taking satisfactory security for the payment. The sheriff did sell, and took as security an undertaking from persons not resident within the jurisdiction, which he subsequently offered to assign to the now plaintiff, in whose favour the issue had been found, but it was declined. Being pressed by plaintiff to give him the benefit of his writ, he returned nulla bona:—Held, such wilful misconduct as rendered the sheriff and his surecise liable. S. C. 9 U. C. R. 296.

Mistake in Bail Bond.] — A sheriff's sureties are not liable for an accidental slip of himself or his clerk, in reciting in a bail bond that the action is in the county court, when it is in the common pleas. Nelson v. Baby, 14 U. C. R. 235.

Neglect to Return Writ.] — Neglecting to return a writ is misconduct for which the sureties are responsible. Nelson v. Baby, 14 U. C. R. 235.

Wrongful Sale.]—It is a good breach of the surety's covenant to shew that the sheriff sold the defendant's property for more than sufficient to satisfy the debt, and afterwards wrongfully sold it at a reduced price, causing a loss to defendant of the difference. Sanderson v. Hamilton, 1 U. C. R. 400.

2. Not Paying over Money.

Credit Given — Claim against Sheriff, —Semble, that if a sheriff, having an execution against a person to whom he is indebted, agrees with that person to assume the execution and pay it to the plaintiff, and receives from the debtor credit for so much on the debt due from himself, but does not pay over the money to the plaintiff in the writ, this is such conduct as the sureties will be answerable for. McMartin v, Gradam, 2 U. C. R. 365.

De Facto Sheriff—Receipt Colore Officit.]
—Defendant M., as sheriff, gave a bond, with the other two defendants as sureties, covenanting that M. should pay over all moneys received by virtue of his office as sheriff. On the 19th February, 1850, judgment was given for the Crown against M., on a sel. fa, brought to charge ever issued, and his no writ of discharge ever issued, and his cossor was not appointed until the 3rd better about the M.'s hands, at the suit of the two placed, in M.'s hands, at the suit of the two placed, the said M. received the amount indorsed on the said writ, but never paid it to the plaintiff:—Held, that M.'s sureties were liable, for
M. when he received the money was de facto in possession of the office, and the money was received by him colore officii. Kent v. Mercer, 12 C. P. 30.

Deposit in Lieu of Bail Bond—Insolvency.)—Held, that the statutory liability of a sheriff and his sureties under s. 20 of 27 & 28 Vict. c. 28, for not paying over moneys received by the sheriff, only applies to moneys acquired by the sheriff by virtue of his office, for the purpose of being paid over to a party to some legal proceeding. Where, therefore, M. having been arrested on a capias, the plaintiff, in lieu of a bail bond, deposited $550 with the sheriff, and obtained M.'s release, but, the plaintiff having subsequently rendered M. to the sheriff, he was again put in gaol, where he remained until, becoming insolvency:—Held, that the plaintiff could not sue the sheriff and his sureties on their statutory covenant for the omission or default of the sheriff in not paying over the above amount to the plaintiff. Quere, as to the effect of the insolvency proceedings on the plaintiff s right to the money. Kero v. Powcell, 25 C. P. 448.

Judgment in Action for False Return—Bar, I—Where the plaintiff had recovered indgment against a sheriff for falsely returning nulla bona after he had made the money:—Held, following Sloan v. Creasor, 22 U. C. R. 127, that he could not afterwards sue the sheriff and his sureties on their covenant, for not paying over such money. Miller v. Corbett, 26 U. C. R. 478.

Occasion of Receipt—Declaration.]—In an action on a sheriff's covenant, it is a good breach to state that he was indebted in a named sum for money had and received, without specifying how or on what occasion the money was received. Commercial Bank v. Jarvis, 6 O. S. 474.

3. Pleading and Evidence.

(a) Declaration and Proof.

Covenant — Profert.] — In a declaration against the sureties of a sheriff it is not necessary to make any profert of the covenant. McCrae v. Hamilton, 6 O. S, 159.

Default—Continuance of Liability.]—It must be shewn that the default sued for took place during the term for which the sureties were liable under the covenant. McMartin v. Graham, 2 U. C. R. 365.

False Return—Proof of Damage,]—A declaration against a sheriff's surrety set out a judgment and execution against the piaintiff in a former suit, and that the sheriff had levied the debt, but falsely returned nulla bona, by means of which return the plaintiff was obliged to pay the debt again:—Held, bad, on general demurrer, in-not shewing how the plaintiff was compelled to pay twice, the first payment having discharged the debt. Davis v. Hamilton, 6 O. S. 111.

Misconduct in Executing Writ—Judgment.]—In an action by a defendant in an execution against the sureties of a sheriff on their covenant under the statute, for misconduct of the sheriff in execution of the writ, the declaration need not set forth the judgment in the suit against himself. Sanderson v. Hamilton, 1 U. C. R. 460.

Non-payment of Money—Assignment of Breach.]—It is a sufficient breach of the covenant that the sheriff would pay over moneys received by him. "that he had by virtue of his office received certain moneys which the plaintiffs are entitled to. according to the true intent and meaning of the covenant, to wit, £50. within the four years mentioned thereby, but that he neglected and refused to pay them to the plaintiffs, although often requested so to do." Shuter v. Graham, 2 U. C. R. 164.

Continuance of Liability. —In covenant against a sheriff's surety, it is sufficient allege that money was received by the sheriff, as sheriff, without stating "by virtue of his office," but, if the plaintiff omit to aver that the receipt of the money by the sheriff was after the execution of the covenant by the surety, the declaration will be bad on general demurrer. Davis v. Hamilton, It. T. 4 Viet.; Summers v. Hamilton, 60, 8, 113.

— Continuance of Liability — Judgment.]—The declaration set forth the statutory covenant of sheriff and sureties, and alleged that the plaintiff caused a writ of hab. fac. and fi. fat. to be placed in the sheriff's lands, under which he had levied $151, which he had not paid over.—Held, bad, in not alleging any judgment to warrant the fi. fa., but that it was unnecessary to allege that the money was received while the covenant was in force. There being nothing to shew that the covenant sued on was qualified as to time, in the absence of such an allegation, the presumption was in favour of the continuance of liability. Robertson v. Fortune, 14 C. P. 444.

Non-Return of Fi. Fa.—Judgment.]—
In an action against a sheriff and his sureties, en their covenant, for not returning a fi. fa. and the money made thereon, it is necessary to set out the judgment. Bidwell v. McLean, 5 O. S. 630.

See Commercial Bank v. Jarvis, 6 O. S. 474, ante 2; Gilchrist v. Weller, 14 C. P. 404, post 5.

(b) Pleas and Proof.

Abatement.]—In an action against a sheriff and his sureties on their covenant, under 3 Wm. IV. c. 8, it is a good plea in abatement that another action for the same cause is pending against the sheriff alone. Commercial Bank v. Jarvis, 6 O. S. 257.

Denial of Negligence — Escape.]—In covenant against a sheriff's sureties, the breach assigned was, that the sheriff arrested a debtor and afterwards allowed him to escape. Defendants pleaded that the gaol was accidentally destroyed by fire and so the debtor escaped:—Held, bad, for not denying that the lire occurred through the negligence or default of the sheriff, or his deputy. Corkery v. Graham, 1 U. C. R. 315.

Money not Made — Return—Conclusiveness,]—The sureties cannot be relieved after the sheriff's return to a fi. fa. by shewing that the money was not in fact made, even although an issue be raised upon the pleadings whether the money was actually made or not. Phelp v. McDonnell, 6 O. S. 258.

Prior Execution — Return—Conclusiveness.] — The sureties are concluded by the sheriff's return to a writ of fi. fa. of money made, and cannot shew that there was a prior execution which ought to have been first satisfied, and was not. Shuter v. Graham, 2 U. C. it. 164.

Prior Payment on Covenant—Amendment.]—The court refused to relieve a sheriff's surety, after damages had been assessed against him, by allowing him to plead that he had already paid the amount of his covenant under the statute. Scott v. McDonald, 6 O. S. 238.

(c) Replication.

Variance.]—Where, in covenant against a sheriff's surety, the plaintiff set out a judgment on "a promise and undertaking," and a fi. fa. issued thereon, to which the sheriff had made a false return; and the defendant pleaded no fi. fa. on the judgment, to which the plaintiff replied setting out a fi. fa. thereon, which, however, recited a recovery on "promises and undertakings," and defendant demurred specially for the variance:—Held, that the replication was sufficient in this action; and that, as the sheriff could not have made the variance a defence after having acted upon the writ, his surety could not. Roy v. Hamilton, 6 O. S. 110.

4. Staying Proceedings.

Default Judgment—Prior Payment on Covenant—Costs. —The court will not stay proceedings against a sheriff's surety, who has suffered judgment by default, on the ground that he has already paid the full amount of his liability, unless such payment were after pleapleaded; and the costs of actions brought against the sureties cannot be included in making up the amount for which he is liable under his covenant. Hixon v. Hamilton, 6 O. S. 155.

Death of Sheriff—Recovery against Representatives.]—After the decease of a sheriff, the court will not stay an action against his sureties on their covenant for a default by the sheriff until a recovery shall be had against the sheriff's representatives, nor will they direct that the execution on the judgment against the sureties be indorsed to levy first of the property of the sheriff. Morris v. Graham, 1 U. C. R. 521.

Executions in Excess of Liability— Payment.]—Where several executions had been obtained against the sheriff's sureties, exceeding the amount of their bond, which was in £125 each, they were directed in chambers to pay the amount of their respective liabilities to the sheriff to whom the executions were directed, with the costs, and then, upon application to the court, proceedings against them were stayed. Sinclair v. Baby, 2 P. R. 117.

Judgment by Mistake—Substitution of Surety.]—Where the sheriff had substituted one surety for another under s. 6 of 3 Wm. IV. c. 8, after the notice had been given under 14 & 15 Vict. c. 80, but through negligence a judgment had been entered against the old sureties for subsequent defaults, relief was granted. Hutchinson v. Baby, 2 P. R. 126.

See, also, Craig v. Ruttan, 2 L. J. 67.

5. Other Cases.

Death of Sheriff-Deputu's Sureties. 1 Where a sheriff dies, and after his death his Where a sheriif dies, and after his death his deputy makes a false return to a writ, the remedy is against the sureties given by the deputy to the sheriff, and not against the sureties given by the sheriff himself. McLeod v. Boulton, 2 U. C. R. 44.

a sheriff's death his personal representatives.)—After a sheriff's death his personal representatives cannot be joined with his sureties, in an action on the covenant under 3 Wm. IV. c. S, for a default by the sheriff in his lifetime. Boutton v. Hamitton, H. T. 3 Vict.

Executors of Surety-Action on Judgnent—Revivor.]—Action against executors of well—Review, — Action against executors of the Wood a judgment obtained against F. as sheriff, and A. and W. as his sureties, Plea, that no fi, fa, was issued, indorsed to levy of the goods of the sheriff, in the first place, and in default to levy of goods of A. and W., as required by C. S. U. C. c. 38, s. 9. On demurrer:—Held, that the indorsement, if not in accordance with the Act, might be set aside, but the proceedings taken thereunder would not be void; and that there was nothing in not be void; and that there was nothing in the statute preventing an action being brought on the judgment sued on. Quære, whether the plaintiff on a judgment recovered herein would not be bound to indorse his writ to levy first of the goods of the sheriff, &c. As to the sufficiency of the declaration:—Held, that the judgment sued on was joint; that such judgment did not render the defendants there in don't contractors within 6.8%. in joint contractors within C. S. U. C. c. 78, s. 6; and that the action could not be maintained against the sureties as survivors, the plaintiff's remedy being by revivor or suggestion under C. S. U. C. c. 22, s. 312.  - I. AGREEMENTS TO RUN VESSELS.
- Owner and Charterer—Breach by Owner—Heasure of Damages].—By an agreement-under seal between plaintiff and defendant, defendant agreed with plaintiff to continue to run his vessel between two ports named, for six weeks, and at the time of the agreement plaintiff paid defendant $2,000, which the latter was to retain, subject to his continuing to run the vessel between such ports for the said period, and up to the $27th July then next, at his own risk and for his own benefit, and for a further period named, provided that during the six weeks the gross earnings of the vessel should not be less than $75 per running day, with the same proviso as to the further period; and provided, also, that upon plaintiff paying up any deficiency in said rate of $75, at his option, he might require said vessel to continue her running during said period. On the period of the first week are crede expiration of the first week action at plaintiff's suit for breach of his agreement.—Held, that the measure of damages which the plaintiff was entitled to recover was such proportion, being five-sixths of the $2,000, and that he was not obliged to prove his damages, as this was fixed by the agreement in question. Thompson y. Leach, 18 C. P. 148 C.

Owner and Railway Company—Account—Agent,1—Defendants agreed to advance money to plaintiffs to enable them to procure a steamer which was to run in connection with defendants' railway, and guaranteed them against loss up to a specified sum. The earnings of the vessel were to be shared as provided for; and it was agreed that defendants should name and pay a person to act as purser and keep an account of the receipts and expenditure. He was to be subject to their authority, and to mess with the captain at the plaintiffs' expense:—Held, that defendants were not liable to account to the plaintiffs for moneys received by him and not paid over, for he was accountable to the plaintiffs. Vancery v. Buffalo and Lake Huron R. W. Co., 20 U. C. R. 639.

Rival Owners—Settlement—Payment—Award.]—G. and S., the managers of certain steamboats running in opposition, S. having only one boat running and G. two, submitted to arbitration to determine the terms and conditions on which the opposition should be settled and made to cease. The arbitrators awarded that each party should run one boat at different hours, and that S. should pay G. £150. Afterwards G. and some of the owners of the steamer for which S. was agent, entered into an agreement respecting the two boats which by the award were allowed to run, which stated that the parties had agreed to settle the disputes between them as steamboat owners on the following terms, and then specified the hours and days on which the boats were to leave the different ports; but it was expressly declared that this agreement was without prejudice to any demand which G. might have upon S.:—Held, that G.'s right to the £150 awarded was not affected by such agreement. Gildersleeve v. Stewart, 2 P. R. 114.

II. CARRIAGE OF GOODS.

1. Bill of Lading.

Condition — Negligence — Liability—Exemption — Public Policy—Construction.]—A condition in a bill of lading, providing that the shipowners shall not be liable for negligence on the part of the master or mariners, or their other servants or agents, is not contrary to public policy nor prohibited by law in the Province of Quebec. When a bill of lading provided that glass was carried only on condition that the ship and railway companies were not to be liable for any breakage that might occur, whether from negligence, rough handling, or any other cause whatever, and that the owners were to be "exempt from the perils of the seas, and not answerable for damages and losses by collisions, stranding, and all other accidents of navigation, even though the damage and loss from these may be attributable to some wrongful act, fault, neglect, or error in judgment of the pilot, master, mariners, or other servants of the shipowners, nor for breakage or any other damage arising from the nature of the goods shipped," such provisions were held to apply only to loss or damage resulting from acts done during the carriage of the goods, and not to cover damages caused by neglect or improper stowage prior to the commencement of the vogage. Glengoil 8. S. Co. v. Fikkington, Glengoil 8. S. Co. v. Ferguson, 28 S. C. B. 146.

Construction—Owner—Risk.]—Where a bill of lading stated that the deck load was to be at the risk of the owners:—Held, that the construction of the bill was for the court, not the jury, and that the risk was to be that of the owners of the goods, not the owner of the vessel. Merritt v. Lves, M. T. 4 Vict.

Duties of Banks when Holders of, Bills of Lading as Collateral Security.] —See Banks and Banking, III. 2.

Evidence of Shipment—Owners—Consignees.]—33 Vict. c. 19, s. 3 (O.), making a bill of lading conclusive evidence of the shipment of goods as represented therein, does not apply to cases between masters of vessels and owners of goods, but only between masters and consignees or indorsees for value. Allen v. Chisholm, 33 U. C. R. 237.

Indoesement to Pledgee — Effect of — Condition of Natic—Possession—Property,—The Brockville and Ottawa Railway Company, by indenture dated 7th March, 1854, granted, hypothecated, mortgaged, and pledged to the municipalities of Lanark and Renfrey, Elizabethtown, and Brockville, o secure a loan from them, the lands, roads, depots, wharves, stations, terminal and otherwise, tolls, revenues, and all other property of the said company now or during the existence of the said mortgage to be acquired. 20 Vict. C. 144, s. 5, recites these loans, and declares that the said mortgage shall be valid, and that the Chattel Mortgage Act shall not apply to it. A quantity of iron was purchased for the railway, the vendors stipulating at the time of the sale in these words, "these rails to be laid down upon the Brockville and Ottawa Railway Company of Canada," to which the vendees assented. The iron was shipped to the vendees, who indorsed the bills of lading to the municipality of Lanark and Renfrew, who paid the shipping charges, insurance, freight, &c. out of moneys which formed part of the advances secured by the mortgage of the 7th March, 1854, and the nunicipality whing the iron in their possession at Brockville ready to be placed on the railway, it was seized under an execution against the railway company:—Held, that under the indorsement of the bill of lading to the municipality, who obtained possession of the iron by such indorsement, together with the stipulation of the vendors, and the assent thereto of the vendees, the plaintiffs acquired the possession and the property in the said iron. Proviso—Excess in Cargo—Right of Carrier—Custom.]—The N. and N. W. Railway Company and the G. W. Railway Company shipped on the plaintiff's vessel a quantity of wheat from Hamilton to Kingston, consigned to the Molsons Bank, in care of the defendants. The bills of lading contained the following provision: "All deficiency in cargo to be paid for by the carrier, and deducted from the freight, and any excess in the cargo to be paid for to the carrier by the consignee." The quantity described in the bills of lading was 15,358 10-60th bushels, while the actual quantity shipped was 15,858 10-60th bushels, and the discrepancy was shewn to have ocally the control of the carrier, claimed that he was cuttiled, for his own use, to the 500 bushels so shipped in excess:—Held, that the provision in the bill of lading did not give it to him, and that no custom or usage was proved, giving it such meaning. The defendants, who had accounted for such excess to the shipper, were therefore held not liable to the plaintiff. Murton v. Kingston and Montreal Forwarding Co., 32 C. P. 366.

Recital—Condition of Goods—Estoppel—Pleading)—The plaintiff, as assignee of a bill of lading which stated that the goods were shipped in good order and well conditioned, such for non-delivery of the goods at their destination in the like good order and condition. Defendant pleaded: (1) That the goods were not in good order and well conditioned when shipped. (2) That defendant did deliver them in the like order and condition in which they were shipped:—Held, on demurrer, first plea bad, it being no answer to the breach; second plea good. Semble, that the Bills of Lading Act. 33 Vict. c. 19 (O.), creates no estoppel as to the condition in which goods are when shipped. Chapman v. Zealand, 24 C. P. 421.

Terms — Custom of Port — Inconsistency.]—A trade custom, in order to be binding upon the public generally, must be shewn to be known to all persons whose interests required them to have knowledge of its existence, and, in any case, the terms of a bill of lading, inconsistent with and repugnant to the custom of a port, must prevail against such custom. Parsons v. Hart, 30 S. C. R. 473.

2. Deck Cargoes.

Usage—Liability for Loss.]—Where it is the usage of the trade to carry a deck cargo inland navigation, and such usage is known to the shipper, he cannot hold the master or owner responsible for a part of the deck cargo swept off in a storm, the bill of lading excepting the dangers of navigation. Stephens v. McDonell, M. T. 6 Vict.

Whether the shipowner will be liable for loss of deck cargo depends on the usage which prevails in respect to deck loading in the particular navigation. Paterson v. Black, 5 U. C. R. 481.

3. Delivery.

by the master at the port to which they were consigned, and notice given during the usual business hours to the consignee. McKay v. Lockhart, 4 O. S. 407, — Inability to Give—Duty—Pleating.]

—To an action for not delivering goods shipped on board defendants' vessel, to be carried to Thunder Bay, on Lake Superion and there defended by the Lake Superion and there defended by the Lake Superion of the saint of the late of the plaintiffs or their assigns, the to Thunder Bay, and there being no person there on the plaintiffs behalf to receive the goods, or to whom notice of their arrival could be given, and no means of notifying the plaintiffs, who lived at a distance, the defendants, having no warehouse of their own, and there not being any other warehouse there in which they could store the goods, after waiting a reasonable time, landed the goods at the only wharf there, where it was usual and customary to land goods, and placed them in charge of the person in charge of the whorf, so far as he would consent to take charge of them:—Held, that the plea constituted no defence to the action. Semble, that where, after inquiry, the consigness or indorses of a bill of lading cannot be found, the duty of the carrier is to retain the goods until they are claimed, or to store them prudently for the owner. Close v. Beatty, 28 C. P. 470.

Payment to Wharfinger—Custom—Notice—Pleading.]— Assumpsit for work and labour, &c., by plaintiffs, who were carriers by water. Plea, setting forth a delivery of the goods carried by plaintiffs to a wharfinger at Toronto, to whom defendants, "according to the custom and usage of forwarders and carriers at Toronto." paid the plaintiffs claim:—Held, plea bad, for not averring notice of the custom to the plaintiffs. Torence v. Hages, 3 C. P. 274, 2 C. P. 338.

Separation of Consignments — Owner—Charterer, 1—One H. had chartered defendant's schooner from Goderich to Chicago, and, not being able to fill the plaintiffs' agent that they might send 1,000 sair by her, paying the same rate as he did. This salt was accordingly shipped at Goderich, and the plaintiffs' agent signed a bill of lading, by which it was to be delivered to P. & Co., Chicago, care of the Chicago. Burlington, and Quincy R. R. Co., Chicago. It had also P. & Co.'s brand on the barrels. There were about 2,400 barrels of salt on board besides, consigned to H. On the voyage about 300 barrels of salt on board besides, consigned to H. On the voyage about 300 barrels of the deck load, not being part of the plaintiffs' 1,000 barrels, were washed or thrown overboard by stress of weather; and the captain, on arriving, told the freight agent of the railway that it was the plaintiffs' alt which had been thus lost. This freight agent employed one Haines, who was also the shipping clerk for the agents of H., to receive the salt at Chicago, and load it on the cars there; and H., being there, directed about 300 barrels of the plaintiffs' salt to be put with his own, thus making up his own quantity, while the plaintiffs' sol to be put with his own, thus making up his own quantity, while the plaintiffs, color of the vessel, and not H., was her owner for the trip, and the contractor with the plaintiffs. (2) That if the master delivered the salt on the dock as H.'s salt, when it was in fact the plaintiffs', defendant would be answerable; that there was some evidence of his having done so; and that a verdeter of the laintiffs the plaintiffs' therefore, should not be disturbed.

Stipulation in Contract-Authority of Agent—Shortage—Expenses.]—The plaintiffs having purchased 100 tons of iron from B. L. & Co., in Montreal, it was delivered by B. L. & Co. to McC., the defendant's shipping agent, & c.o. to Mct., the defendant's shipping agent, to be carried on a vessel of defendant (West-ern Express Line) to Toronto, and a bill of lading was signed by a clerk of Mcc., which contained the stipulation, "to be landed at Beard's wharf." This delivery was also shewn in evidence apart from this document. The iron was actually shimed as the Mcc. which iron was actually shipped on the Sth October, 1872, on the Dromedary, one of the said line, and the freight paid to McC. The iron, less half a ton, arrived at Toronto between nine and ten at night, and was delivered at Toronto, at a wharf some distance from the plaintiffs wharf, on the 10th October, and was taken away by plaintiffs. The defendant. who was on the vessel, said he sent first to the plaintiffs' wharf, who had no notice of its coming, but found no person there, and no light, and therefore delivered it as stated. He deand therefore delivered it as stated. He de-nied any right in McC, to make a special bar-gain for freight or delivery, and in McC's clerk to sign any bill of lading:—Held, that defendant, having accepted the freight paid by reason of the bargain with McC., could not deny McC.'s authority to make it. Held, also, too late to object that the document was signtoo late to object that the document was sign-ed by McCt's clerk, and not the master or purser, the master having accepted the cargo represented by it. Held, also, that the con-signees might properly sue in assumpsit for non-delivery of the goods, under the circum-stances of this case, independently of 33 Vict. c. 19 (O.) Held, also, that, as the contract was to be performed in Ontario, it was governed by the law of Ontario. Held, also, that the plaintiffs were entitled to delivery at their own wharf, and that defendant's excuse for not delivering there was insufficient. Held, also, that defendant was liable for the shortage in weight, though all put on the vessel was delivered, for it was shewn that the full quantity was delivered to McC., and it was not shewn that it had all been put on board the snewn that in had an been put of board we vessel. The plaintiffs, therefore, were held entitled to recover for the shortage, and for the expense of carriage from Milloy's wharf to their own. Beard v. Steele, 34 U. C. R. 43.

4. Deviation.

Notice to Agent.]-It is no defence for a forwarder deviating from his instructions as to the route, that after the deviation he told the plaintiff's agent he had done so, and no objection was made by the agent. Aliter, if he told the agent of his intention before the deviation, and could shew that the agent had discretion in the matter. Fowler v. Hooker, 4 U. C. R. 18.

Usage - Liability.]-Plaintiff shipped 90 barrels of flour at Port Credit, to be carried to Quebec, in a vessel of defendants capable of carrying 4,500. She proceeded to Toronto, where she took in 400 barrels more; and where she took in 4000 barrels more; and thence to Oswego, where 2,450 barrels were shipped for Quebec also. She was wrecked near Oswego. Defendant was held liable therefor, such deviation being beyond the es-tablished usages of trade. Wright v. Hol-combe, 6 C. P. 531.

Ontario Salt Co. v. Larkin, 36 U. | 5. Detention, Loss, and Non-delivery - Actions for.

(a) Generally-Liability of Owners.

Bill of Lading—Evidence of Receipt.]—A box was put on board the defendant's steamer, some of the men employed on the steamer assisting. It was not delivered to any officer of the boat, but as the steamer was starting a bill of lading for it was handed to sharing a bill of lading loss of the purser. No receipt was given, but it was shewn that this was not customary until the return of the steamer. The bill of lading was handed by the purser to the wharfinger at Port Credit, and on the return trip was handed back to him, with the information that the box had not been delivered there :-Held, that the defendant was liable; for the bill of lading was notice that the shipper considered the box as being on board, and it should have been ascertained how the fact was before landing at Port Credit. Howland v. Bethune, 13 U. C. R. 270.

Defence - False Invoices, 1-It is no defence to a common carrier by water for not carrying goods safely from a foreign country. or on a claim for general average, that the owner of the goods had prepared false invoices, to defraud the revenue laws of this Province. Grousette v. Ferrie, M. T. 6 Vict.

Delivery of Goods to Officer-Reward Negligence.] — Where a person delivers a parcel to carry to a person on board a boat not as to a servant of the owners, but to be carried by such person himself, either for reward or otherwise, the person so engaging to carry it is alone responsible for its loss. If, however, the parcel is delivered to the person on board to be carried, not on any private undertaking, but as an officer of the boat, the owners of the boat would be chargeable with the loss, though they were to have no reward or carrying; but then, to establish the liability of the owners, it would be necessary for the jury to find gross negligence in the owners or their servants, or at least a want of that ordinary care which a prudent man would take of his own goods. McLeod v. Eberts, 7 U. C. R. 244.

Exemption - Fire-Imperial Statute.] Declaration, that the defendant owned the schooner Elizabeth, and plaintiff at his re-quest loaded her with 1.634 barrels of flour-to be shipped from C. (in Canada) to O. (in the United States) to be safely and securely delivered — dangers of navigation excepted. Breach, that the flour was wholly lost through defendant's negligence. Pleas, (1) as to 400 barrels, that a fire happened on board of the schooner, without any wilful negligence of de-fendant, by which the schooner and flour were destroyed; (2) as to the residue-related the accident as in first plea, and averred that the said residue was rescued in a damaged state and delivered to plaintiff, who accepted it; (3) to the whole declaration—like the first, in substance:—Held, that the Imperial statute 26 Geo. III. c. 86, s. 2, is in force here. and exonerated defendant from his promise to deliver the flour, by reason of the accidental fire. Torrance v. Smith, 3 C. P. 411.

Rock—Warchousemen.] — Under a contract to that effect, the plaintiff, during the month of January, 1875, loaded defendants' vessel, which was frozen in the ice in Port Hope harbour, with a cargo of peas, to be carried in the vessel on the opening of navigation to Kingston or Oswego. While the goods were so on board, the vessel struck a sunken rock, unknown to all parties, at the bottom of the harbour, which broke a hole in the vessel's bottom, causing her to sink and damaging the cargo:—Held, assuming the defendants' lini-bility to be that of carriers, that this was a loss caused by the "dangers of navigation" within the meaning of 37 Vict. c. 25, s. 1, so as to exempt the defendants were responsible as carriers, or us warehousemen. Cluston v. Hickson, 27 C. P. 170.

(b) Generally-Right of Action.

Consignor — Action by—Property Passing.]—Three cases of goods exceeding $40 in value were orally ordered by L. at M. from plaintiff at T., through plaintiff's traveller, and were shipped, consigned to L., and carried by railway, and then by defendant's steamer to M. Two of the cases were received by L., one of which was in a damaged condition. The third case remained ou board the vessel, as the purser refused to deliver it up until the freight on these cases, as well as on a variety of other goods consigned to L. was paid. L. refused to pay until he had first an opportunity of checking over the goods. Before the dispute was settled the vessel left, and was subsequently wrecked and this case lost. An arrangement was made between plaintiff and L. whereby plaintiff allowed L. twenty-five per cent, on the value of the two cases received by L. The plaintiff then brought an action against the defendants to recover the twenty-five per cent, so allowed, and the value of the case lost:—Held, that there was an acceptance and receipt of the goods by L. so as to pass the property therein to him; and therefore the action should, under the Mercantile Amendment Act. R. S. O. 1877 c. 116, s. 5, s. s. 1, have been maintained by him and not by plaintiff. Friendly v. Canada Transit Co., 10 O. R. 756.

See Langdon v. Robertson, 13 O. R. 497, post 8.

(c) Damages.

Delay in Delivery—Measure of Damages—Increased Data,)—Defendant, a steambout owner, agreed to carry certain wheat of the plaintiffs from Oshawa to a port in the United States, by the 17th March, when, as the defendant knew, the reciprocity treaty would expire and an import duty be payable there. He failed to do so, and the plaintiffs, having sent the flour afterwards, were compelled to pay a large duty:—Held, that such duty was recoverable as damages for the breach of contract; and that it was immaterial that prices rose in the States soon after the day fixed for delivery, so that the plaintiffs actually made more, after paying the duty, than they could have done by selling it on that day. Gibbs v. Gildersleece, 26 U. C. R. 471.

Measure of Damages-Market Price — Measure of Damages—Market Price —Freight.]—The plaintiff, a dealer in grains, &c., in Canada, consigned to his correspondent in Liverpool, England, a quantity* of clover seed, and delivered the same to the agent of the defendant company at Waterford in On-tario, for the purpose of being carried to Liverpool, receiving from such agent the usual bill of lading. Before the seed had left the American frontier for the seaboard the plaintiff desired to change the consignee, and applied to one B., an agent of the company, resident in Toronto, for that purpose, who, on payment of the additional freight, granted a fresh bill of lading, agreeing to carry the seed to London. The change of destination was duly communicated by B. to the agent of the company at Black Rock, whose duty it was to have made the necessary changes in the instrument securing the passage of the goods duty free through the United States, but this he omitted to do, in consequence of which the seed went to Liverpool, so that, instead of being delivered in London on the 12th February, it did not reach there until the 23rd March, late for the sowing trade, so that the seed had to be sold at a heavy loss:—Held, affirming the judgment in 1 O. R. 47, (1) that the Toronto agent was authorized to make the change in the destination of the seed, and (2) that the defendants were bound to indemnify the plaintiff against the loss sustained by reason of the fall in the market value of the seed, together with the additional sum paid for the freight from Liverpool to London. Semble, that the same rule applies where the goods are not intended for immediate sale at their place of destination. Monteith v. Merchants' Despatch and Transportation Co., 9 A. R. 282, Delay in Transporting — Measure of Damages.]—On the 3rd October the plaintiff chartered the Erie Belle, a vessel owned by the defendants, to carry salt from Goderich to Milwaukee at seventy-five cents a ton. On the 11th October the defendants telegraphed informing the plaintiff that this vessel could not go, and requesting him to accept the services of another. Thereupon some correspondence ensued between the parties, the plaintiff insisting upon the defendants performing their contract, and they finally agreeing to do so. During all this time the plaintiff could have had the salt conveyed by other vessels at $1 per ton, but did not, preferring to wait for the defendants' vessel, which was loaded on the 25th November. Owing, however, to the ap-prehensions of the captain as to the weather, which deterred him from going out, the vessel was frozen up in Goderich harbour, and it was then impossible to forward the salt otherwise than by rail; and for the purpose of endeayouring to carry out a sale which the plaintiff had made, he did send several tons by rail, and paid his consignee the difference in price for salt which he had to buy in Milwaukee and that agreed to be paid to the plaintiff The difference in expense in sending by rail and that agreed to be paid to the defendants, amounted to $3.25 per ton:—Held, affirming the judgment in 46 U. C. R. 235, that the plaintiff was not bound, at the peril of losing all claim against the defendants for any additional loss, to have chartered another vesse at $1 per ton, on receipt of the telegram of the 11th October; and that, under the circumstances, the plaintiff was entitled to recover the difference paid to his consignee, as also the excess of freight. McEwan v. McLcod, 9 A. R. 239.

Injury to Goods—Nominal Damages.]— Quare, if in assumpsit on a contract to earry goods safely, with an averment of total loss, and a plea that the goods were carried safely, and no evidence given to shew any goods lost, but only that the cask in which they were backed was injured, and some of the goods damaged—the plaintiff is entitled to recover anything, or more than nominal-damages. Hancock v. Bethune, 3 U. C. R. 47.

Loss of Goods — Fire—Disobedience of Directions — Measure of Damages.] — The plaintiffs, living at Southampton, directed goods purchased by them in Montreal to be forwarded to Kingston, to the care of the schooner Regina. The captain of the Regina, being unable to wait for their arrival at Kingston, directed defendants, who were forwarders there, to send them on to Hamilton by the there, to send them on to Hamilton by the cheen the send them on the discount of the control of the co

Proof of Negligence—Storm—Onus.]—Where exception against loss by dangers of navigation is in a bill of lading, and the vessel is in fact lost in a storm, the evidence of negligence or improper conduct must be very clear in order to make the ship owner liable; and, although it lies upon the defendant in the first place to bring himself within the exception, yet this is sufficiently done by shewing a shipwreck from stress of weather; and the plaintiff is then called upon to establish that the loss would not have happened but from negligence or want of skill. Harnden v. Proctor, 9 U. C. R. 592.

Action for — Defence—Failure to Complete Carriage—Delay — Acceptance.] — Defendants shipped about 5,000 bushels of grain on the 4th December, on the plaintiff's vessel at Port Hope, to be carried to Oswego, at eight cents per bushel freight. She was driven by stress of weather into Presque Isle, where she was frozen in, and the plaintiff had to procure a tug to break the ice and tow her out. When on her way to Oswego a leak was discovered, in consequence of which they changed their course and went to Charlotte, at the mouth of the Genese river. The captain then telegraphed to V., who had shipped the grain for defendants, and who, after communications.

cating with defendants, instructed him to discharge the cargo, which was done. About the 1st April the plaintiff had the vessel ready to take the wheat on, but being a Canadian vessel the American government refused to let him carry it, after it had been unloaded, from one American port to the other. Defendants did not again ask him to take it on, but sold it at Charlotte in April, the price being less than they would have got for it in December, at Oswego, and considerable expense having been incurred by the delay. It was said that, after discharging about 1,200 bushels, the vessel was so lightened that the leak could have been repaired, and she might have gone on; but the found that the captain's conduct justifiable under the circumstances: - Held. that there was evidence to shew an acceptance by defendants of the grain at Charlotte, and that they dispensed with the further carriage of it; and that the plaintiff was entitled therefore to recover freight pro rata itineris. Held. also, that the loss caused by the delay, could form no defence to such claim, though it might be the subject of a cross-action. Wright v. Cluxton, 31 U. C. R. 246.

SHIP.

Defence - Negligence - Benefit-Division Courts.]—It is an established rule of English law that negligence or breach of duty cannot be set up as a defence in an action for the recovery of freight, where the de-fendant has derived a part benefit under the contract; but defendant must bring a crossaction for damages. Such rule must be taken to prevail in division courts, notwithstanding the provisions of the Division Courts Act enabling the Judge to decide according to equity and good conscience. A different rule prevails in several States of the neighbouring republic, and is highly convenient as calculated to prevent multiplicity of suits. Brown v. Muckle, Deduction from, for Shortage - Recovery-Request.]—The master of the defendant's vessel, on the transhipment, at Kingston, of a cargo of wheat, on its way from Owen Sound to Quebec, into the plaintiff's vessel, gave a receipt to the plaintiff for the lake freight, stating that the defendant's vessel and her owner were thereby held responsible for the wheat, weighing 5,934 bushels, at Que-bec. On arrival at Quebec, the cargo was found sixty-eight bushels short. The plaintiff allowed the value of that quantity to the consignee out of the river freight:—Held, that the plaintiff was not entitled to recover the amount deducted as money paid for the defendant, there being no request on the defendant's part express or implied. Waddle v. Mc-Intosh, 7 C. P. 49.

defendant to carry 11,622½ bushels of wheat from Toronto to Kingston, at 3¾ cents per bushel, the bill of lading being signed for the whole amount, and stipulating that the vessel was to deliver the quantity expressed or pay shortage. On the delivery to the consignees 181 bushels short, they, representing defen-dant, whose interest in the wheat continued, refused to pay freight :- Held, that defendant was liable for the freight, and had no right to deduct his claim for shortage, such claim not being a liquidated demand so as to form the subject of set-off against the freight.

Allen v. Chisholm, 33 U. C. R. 237.

Delay in Transport - Reduced Rate -

carrying coal late in the autumn of 1883, from to K., was damaged by stress of weather. The cargo was unloaded to repair the vessel, and the coal could not be delivered before the spring of 1884. The bill of lading stated the rate of freight to be $1.50 per ton, but, if the coal were not delivered in the season of 1883, the freight was to be at the going rates when the coal was delivered, "the dangers of navi-gation, fire, and collision excepted." On the arrival of the schooner at K., the master tenarrival of the schooner at K., the master ten-dered the coal to the consignees, who refused to accept it, disclaiming all title thereto, and contending that the consignor or insurers must take it. The master, too, refused to deliver unless upon payment of a larger rate of freight than that then prevailing. After ten duxed delay the coal was by consent of days' delay the coal was, by consent of parties, unloaded on the consignees' wharf, they receiving it as wharfingers. It was afterwards sold by consent of parties, and was purchased on behalf of the of the consignees:-Held, reversing the decision in 14 O. R. 170, that freight was payable only at the reduced rate, but holding that it was the duty of the defendants to tender the coal to the plaintiffs with a demand for payment of freight at the reduced rate, and that, not having done so, the sale was unauthorized, and the expenses in connection therewith could not be charged against the plaintiffs. The court also held that, for the same reason, the allow-ance of damages in the nature of demurrage could not be sustained, but that the defendants were entitled to some compensation (fixed at $100) for the delay of the plaintiffs in unloading the vessel, after the duty of unloading was actually undertaken by them. Canadian Locomotive Co. v. Copeland, 16 A. R. 322.

Lien for - Detention - Execution.]-Replevin for railway iron. It appeared that the iron had been imported from England by the Buffalo, Brantford, and Goderich Railway Company, and was shipped from Kingston to Port Colborne, subject to ocean freight and the freight by schooner from Kingston. On the freight by schooler from Kingston. On arriving at Port Colborne, no one being ready to pay, the iron was left by the master in defendant's charge, to hold subject to the freight, and was piled on a piece of ground belonging to government, where other iron owned by the company was also lying, but owned by the company was also lying, but separate from this. Afterwards the Buffalo and Lake Huron Railway Company, the plaintiffs, bought out the old company un-der 19 Vict. c. 21, and arranged certain writs of fi. fa. under which the sheriff seized this and the other iron; and they thereupon demanded the iron in question from defendant, who refused to give it up, claiming the ocean freight, which had in fact been paid, and the freight from Kingston, as well as demurrage. and some other charges not recoverable. The plaintiffs, however, refused to pay anything, and replevied:—Held, that the iron could not be considered as having been delivered to the old rallway company, when landed as it was at Port Colborne. (2) That 19 Vict. e. 21 did not take away the right of lien; nor could anything done by the sheriff have that effect. (3) That defendant having a clear effect. right to detain for the freight from Kingston, of which no tender had been made, his right was not prejudiced by having demanded more than was due. A lumberman had a lien on lumber for freight, and C. wrote saying, "I wish you would advise your agents in Quebec to deliver to J. A. Coumbe the sawn stuff on your rafts. I am to pay the river freight, and will thank you to take Coumbe's draft on me at thirty days for river freight, which I will pay:"—Held, that the effect of this letter was not such as to render C. liable to pay the freight until the lumberman had obtained Coumb's draft for the amount thereof. Sec The Cargo ex Drake, 5 C. L. T. 471.

Payment to Wharfinger — Custom — Notice—Agency.]—Assumpsit on the common counts for work and labour, &c., by plaintiffs, who were common carriers by water. Plea, setting forth a delivery of the goods carried by plaintiff to a wharfinger at T., to whom defendants, according to the custom and usage of forwarders and carriers at T., paid the plaintiffs. claim:—Held, plea bad, for not averring notice of the custom to the plaintiffs. Torrance v. Hayes, 3 C. P. 274, 2 C. P. 338, Declaration for work and labour by carriers by water. Plea, that a wharfinger, to whom the goods were delivered by plaintiffs for defendants, was agent of plaintiffs to receive payment, and that they paid him accordingly:

—Held, that from the course of dealing between the parties, as set out in the evidence, the wharfinger was such an agent. Held, also, that after delivery of the goods without exacting freight, the wharfinger still continued plaintiffs' agent to demand and receive the freight, till his authority was revoked, S. C., 3 C. P. 278.

Right to Recover — Negligence — Damages.]—The plaintiffs had undertaken to carry a cargo of stone in their schooner from C. to P., and had got as far as K., where she was injured by the negligence of defendants' servants in towing her. The stone was forwarded by defendants to P. In an action brought by the plaintiffs for the injury:—Held, that they could not recover as damages any part of the freight, for they might adopt defendants' act, and recover the whole from the consignees. Stevenson v. Calvin, 25 U. C. R. 102.

Special Rates—Agent—Payment.]—One C, entered into agreements with several persons to carry freights for them at certain named prices to be paid to the defendant—not mentioning any particular vessels in which the same were to be carried—and then agreed with the defendant, as part owner and master of vessels in which the plaintiffs had an interest, at rates considerably below the sums agreed upon. The defendant and C, both swore that the arrangement had not been made by C, as agent of the defendant, but for his own benefit:—Held, that the fact of the defendant having rendered an account in his own name and also sued for a portion of the freight, though aided by the other circumstances mentioned in the judgment, was not sufficient to countervail the positive denials of the defendant and C, that the contracts had not been made in behalf of and as agent for the defendant, freight being primā facie payable to the master of a vessel, and the cargo need not be delivered by him until the freight thereof is paid; although in any other transaction such conduct would have been strong evidence that the defendant was the principal contractor. Merchants Bank v. Graham, 27 Gr. 524.

See Langdon v. Robertson, 13 O. R. 497, post 8; Land v. Woodward, 5 U. C. R. 190; Lord v. Davidson, 13 S. C. R. 166.

7. Shipment.

Contract—Discretion.]—Construction of a contract entered into between the consignor and forwarder of goods, as to the discretion the forwarder may use in the time, mode, and place of shipping the goods. Forder v. Hooker, 4 U. C. R. 18.

Failure to Receive—Readiness to Ship-Evidence—Finding.]—The plaintiffs alleged and proved an agreement with the defendants that the defendants' vessel should proceed to B. and carry thence to C. a cargo of lumber: that the vessel did not go to B. as agreed and that in consequence the plaintiffs had to procure another vessel and pay a larger price than that agreed upon by the defendants. The defendants alleged that the reason they did not go for the lumber was, because the did not go for the lumber was, because the plaintiffs did not give them or send to the master of the vessel the necessary orders. The trial Judge found this allegation untrue, and gave judgment for the plaintiffs:-Held, that this court could not reverse the finding upon this question, as the view of the facts presented by the appellants derived no support from the documents in evidence, and the court did not see its way to taking a different view of the evidence from that taken by the Judge at the trial. Held, also, that it was suffi-ciently proved that the plaintiffs were ready and willing to ship the lumber. McKenzie v. Dancey, 12 A. R. 317.

False Representations — Pleading — Knowledge, —The plaintiff declared that defendant—by falsely pretending and representing to the plaintiff, that if the plaintiff would go with his vessel to Willie's bay, for the purpose of carrying a load of defendant's wood thence to Cobourg, he would be able, by reason of the depth of water in said bay, to approach within a convenient distance from the shore, and load the wood on his vessel with scows—induced the plaintiff to go with his vessel to the said bay for that purpose, and to incur great expense, &c., whereas the depth of water was not sufficient, &c.:—Held, on motion in arrest of judgment, (1) that the declaration was sufficient, without avering that defendant knew of the want of water. (2) That it sufficiently appeared that defendant induced the plaintiff to go for the wood by his false representation, though no contract to carry was stated. Harvey v. Walleze, 16 U. C. R. 508.

Mixing Goods—Recovery for Shortage— Owner,]—The plaintiff employed S. & H., who owned a warehouse, to purchase and store wheat for him. One G, stored wheat in the same warehouse, and, having a quantity to ship, wrote to defendants offering to load their vessel at certain rates, which offer was accepted, and in the meantime he saw the plaintiff, who agreed to ship 2,000 bushels of his wheat in the same vessel, and gave directions to S whea had H.. s to th own whea short plain that Wad to S. & H. accordingly. 5,653 bushels of wheat in all were shipped en masse, as it had been stored, H., one of the firm of S. & H. superintending the shipping, and stating to the captain at the time (according to his own evidence) that he was shipping plaintiff's wheat first. The plaintiff's wheat turned out short some 400 bushels:—Held, first, that the plaintiff was entitled to recover, and secondly, that the owners of the vessel were liable. Waddell w, Macbride, 7 C. P. 382.

8. Special Contracts.

Particular Route-Condition-Breach-Damages-Special Rates.]-The plaintiffs ordered goods from K. L. & Co., to be shipped to plaintiffs at Flat Creek, Manitoba, via the C. M., &c., Railway, by which line plaintiffs had an arrangement for a special rate of freight, of which they informed K. L. & Co. but did not notify them of the terms thereof. L. & Co. delivered the goods to C. & M. at Montreal, as agents of the defendants' line of boats, consigned to the plaintiffs, to be sent by the said line of boats to M., and thence by the C. M. &c.. Railway, and informed C. & M. of the fact of plaintiffs having a special rate. The bill of lading which C. & special rate. The bill of lading which C. & M. gave for the goods was prepared by a clerk of K. L. & Co., who stated that he attached thereto a ticket marked "ship our freight by C. M., &c., Railway: great bonded fast line: low rates." The goods were carried by defendants' vessel, not to M., but to D., and thence by railway to their destination, and were accepted by plaintiffs, but plaintiffs had to pay higher freight than if carried as directed. The goods were carried from D. as ected. The goods were carried from D. as quickly, or more quickly, than they would have been from M., and the freight would have been less had it not been for plaintiffs' special agreement with the C. M., &c. R. W. Co. The defendants' conduct in sending the goods by D. was proved to have been wilful:-Held, that there was a valid contract to carry via M., and that plaintiffs were entitled to recover for the breach thereof in not carrying therefrom: but held, that the plaintiffs could only recover nominal damages. Held, also, following Friendly v. Canada Transit Co., 10 O. R. 756, that the plaintiffs were the owners of the goods, and entitled to maintain the action. Held, also, that the contract for the low rate could not be assumed to be illegal, as being contrary to public policy, because lower than the ordinary local rates; for, even if it could not be enforced by plaintiffs against the comant. Held, that the fact of the bill of lad-ing having been made in the Province of Quebec, did not deprive plaintiffs of the benefit of R. S. O. 1877 c, 116, for not only was this not set up by the pleadings, but also it did not appear that the Quebec law was dif-ferent from that of Ontario; and in the ab-sence of proof it would be assumed to be the same. Langdon v. Robertson, 13 O. R. 497.

Place of Performance—Exemption from Liability Beyond the Line.]—The bill of lading containing the contract in question provided inter alia. "that the machinery in question is to be delivered at the port of Montreal unto the G. T. R. Co., by them to be for warded upon the conditions above and hereinafter expressed, thence per railway to the station nearest to Ottawa, and at the aforesaid station delivered to order . . freight . . to be paid by the consignees." "That the goods are to be delivered from the ship's deck, when the ship owner's responsibility shall cease. Through goods sent forward by rail are deliverable at the railway station any loss, damage, or detention of goods on this through bill of lading for which the carrier is liable must be claimed against the party only in whose possession the goods were when the loss, damage, or detention occurred:"— Held, that the bill of lading shewed no contract on the part of the defendants to deliver at Ottawa, or the nearest station to Ottawa; nor any contract, the breach of which was made in Ontario, because, if there was such a contract in the bill, force and effect could not be given to the stipulation in it that the ship owner's responsibility should cease when the goods were delivered from the ship's deck. And, again, if there was a contract, and its terms expressly exempted the defendants from any and all liability for damage for any loss, &c., arising beyond their line, no damage for a Sec., arising beyond their line, he damage for a breach in this Province would result to the plaintiff. Perkins v, Mississippi and Domin-ion Steamship Co., 10 P. R. 198.

Risk—Exemption from Liability.]—Assumpsit upon an alleged special contract to carry safely for hire certain goods of the plaintiffs, dangers of the navigation excepted. Breach, damage to the goods, through the negligence of defendants and his servants, and not by reason of such dangers. Plea, non assumpsit, Defendant proved that, although he undertook to carry for hire, he so undertook at the plaintiff's risk; and the jury so found:—Held, that the qualification as proved exempted defendant from any damage or liability in respect of the contract, Stevenson v. Gildersleece, 2 C. P. 495.

Case for negligence in conveying the plaintiffs goods. Pleas, (2) goods not delivered modo et formā; (3) that the defendants received the goods on an express agreement that they were not to be in any wise answerable for any loss or damage in the course of the carriage or delivery; and that the damages happened without any negligence or want of care on the part of defendants or their servants. It was proved that the loss was occasioned by collision on the lake, and that the plaintiff by his agreement was subject to the risks of navigation:—Held, that the second held denied only the delivery; but that on the third plea defendants were entitled to a verdict. Crafford v. Broznet, 11 U. C. R. 96.

9. Stowage.

Excepted Peril—Construction of Bill of Lading—Exemption from Liability.]—A bill of lading acknowledged the receipt on board a stemer of the defendants, in good order and condition, of goods shipped by T. (fresh meat) and contracted to deliver the same in like good order and condition . . loss or damage resulting from sweating . . decay, stowage. . . or from any of the following perils, whether arising from the negligence, default, or error in judgment of the pilot, master, mariners, or other persons in the service of the ship, or for whose acts the ship owner is liable (or otherwise howsoever) al-ways excepted, namely (setting them out): —Held, that the clause "whether arising from the negligence, default, or error in judg-ment of the master," &c., covered as well the preceding exceptions as those which followed, and was not limited in its application by the words "from any of the following perils," and the defendants were, therefore, not liable for damage to the goods shipped resulting from damage to the goods supped resulting the improper stowage, which was one of the excepted perils. Trainor v. Black Diamond Steamship Co. of Montreal, 16 S. C. R. 156.

Knowledge of Shipper.]—The shipper's knowledge of the manner in which his goods are being stowed under a contract of affreightment does not alone excuse ship owners from liability for damages caused through improper or insufficient stowage, Glengoil S. S. Co. v. Pilkington, tdengoil S. S. Co. v. Ferguson, 28 S. C. R. 146.

10. Transhipment.

Effect of-Liability.]-Fifty barrels of pysters having been shipped at Oswego for Toronto per defendant's vessel the "Junius, and the vessel having been obliged by stress of weather to go to Kingston, whence the goods were transhipped for Toronto by the goods were transhipped for foronto by the steamer Oshawa, where they arrived in a damaged condition: — Held, that defendant was the carrier throughout, that is, from Os-wego to Toronto via Kingston. McConkey v. Gorrie, 5 C. P. 430.

Expenses of — How Borne.]—A, having agreed with B, to carry goods from Liverpool to Hamilton for a certain sum per ton of 40 cubic feet (as per agreement set out in the statement of case) transhipped them at M., a port on the line of route where harbour dues were charged, and sent them by rail from Upon an action brought for the harbour dues thus charged and paid by A .: Held, that the contract being to deliver the goods at so much per ton, B. was entitled to have them delivered at that price free of all expenses. Edmonstone v. Young, 12 C. P. 437.

Option-Obligation-Perishable Goods.1-If a chartered ship be disabled by excepted perils from completing the voyage, the owner does not necessarily lose the benefit of his contract, but may forward the goods by other tract, but may forward the goods by other means to the place of destination and earn the freight. The option to tranship must be exercised within a reasonable time, and if repairs are decided upon, they must be effected with reasonable despatch, or otherwise the owner of the cargo becomes entitled to his goods. Quære, is the ship owner obliged to tranship? If the goods are such as would perish before repairs could be made the ship owner should either tranship, deliver them up, or sell, if the cargo owner does not object, and his duty is the same if a portion of the cargo, severable from the rest, is perishable And if, in such a case, the goods are sold without the consent of the owner, the latter is entitled to recover from the ship owner the amount they would have been worth to him if he had received them at the port of shipment or at their destination at the time of the breach of duty. Breach of Contract-Action in Rem.]-The plaintiff, for an alleged breach of a contract to carry him from Liverpool to St. Michaels and thence to the Yukon gold fields, took proceedings against the ship and obtained a warrant for her arrest:—Held, that, if the breach alleged were established, the plaintiff was not entitled to a lien on the ship. Conveying Travellers on Sunday.]— See Regina v. Daggett, Regina v. Fortier, 1 O. R. 537.

Liability for Luggage.]—See Dixon v. Richelieu Navigation Co., 15 A. R. 647.

Negligence in Landing — Death of Party—Survival of Action.]—Plaintiff was a passenger by defendant's steamboat from T. to N. Persons in charge of the boat refused to stop at the wharf at N. in the ordinary manner to land passengers, but ran the boat along close to the wharf, when plaintiff jumped ashore while the boat was in motion, and received serious injury by falling. The Judge charged that the defendant was responsible if he did not land the passengers in the ordinary and careful manner, but that the plaintiff could not recover if the injury to him arose from his own want of care in jumping or hurry in landing. The jury having found for defendant, a new trial was ordered, as the verdict was against the weight of evidence; and held, that a steamboat owner who departs from the ordinary and proper method of landing passengers is responsible for the increased danger of the method he adopts. Cameron v. Milloy, 14 C. P. 340.

After the commencement of the action de-fendant died, and plaintiff entered a suggestion on the record: - Held, that the action died with defendant, and could not be revived against the executor. S. C., 22 C. P. 331.

See Georgian Bay Transportation Co. v. Fisher, 5 A. R. 383.

IV. CHARTERPARTY.

Delay in Taking Cargo-Time-Condition—Repairs.]—By a charterparty of 11th December, 1878, it was agreed that plaintiff's vessel then on her way to Shelburne, N. S., should proceed with all possible despatch after her arrival at Shelburne, to St. John, and there load from the charterers a cargo of deals for Liverpool; and if the vessel did not arrive at Shelburne on or before 1st January, 1879. the charterers were to be at liberty to cance the charterparty. The vessel arrived at Sheburne in December, and sailed at once for St. John. At the entrance of the harbour of St. ante 5.

John she got upon the rocks and was so badly damaged that it became necessary to put her on the blocks for repairs. Although she was repaired with all possible despatch, she was not ready to receive her cargo until 21st April following, prior to which time, on 26th March, the charterers gave the owners notice that they would not furnish a cargo for her. The owners sued for breach of the charterparty. and on the trial defendants gave evidence, sul ject to objection, that freights between St. John and Liverpool were usually much higher in winter than in summer; that lumber would depreciate in value by being wintered over at St. John, and also as to the relative value of lumber during the winter and in the spring in the Liverpool market; and it was contended that the time occupied in repairing the damage was unreasonable and had entirely frustrated the object of the voyage. The Judge directed the jury that if the time occupied in getting the vessel off the rocks and repairing her was so long as to put an end, in a commercial sense, to the commercial speculation entered into by the ship owners and char-terers, they should find for the defendants. The verdict being for the defendants, the court below made absolute a rule for a new trial: Held, affirming the judgment, that, as there was no condition precedent in the charter that the ship should be at St. John at any fixed date, and as the time taken in repairing the damage was not unreasonable, and the delay did not entirely frustrate the object of the voyage, the charterers were not justified in refusing to carry out the contract. Carvill v. Schofield, 9 S. C. R. 370.

Employment of Vessel—Variance—Loss in Freight.]— Defendant, in June, 1855, agreed to employ plaintiff's vessel in carrying lumber from Bear Creek to Montreal, until the close of navigation. After some correspondence between plaintiff's and defendant's agent, she was sent for the last trip to Cleveland, and there took in a load of corn for Montreal, which brought £170 less freight than a cargo of timber from Bear Creek would have done:—Held, that the letters, set out in the case, contained no agreement on defendant's part to pay such difference; but that the plaintiffs' remedy was on the original contract. McPherson v. Cameron, 15 U. C. R. 48.

Failure to Take Cargo—Conditions Precedent.)—Where it was agreed that defendant was to send his vessel to Kincardine to load a cargo of salt for the plaintiffs, provided they would furnish a full cargo, at a stated price, or would guarantee 11½ feet of water in the harbour—Held, that the stipulations as to a full cargo, and as to the depth of water, were conditions precedent to the performance of the contract, and not merely collateral or independent stipulations; and that, as there was not the depth of water guaranteed, nor such depth of water as would permit the defendant to load a full cargo, the defendant was not liable for not taking the plaintiffs' salt. Gray v. Schooley, 43 U. C. R. 209.

Delay—Deviation for Repairs.]—In September, 1882, a vessel sailed from Liverpool, G. B., for Bathurst, N. B., to load lumber under charter. Having sustained damages on the voyage, she was taken to St. John, N. B., for repairs, and when such repairs were completed it was too late in the season to proceed to Bathurst. In an action against the owner for breach of charterparty the jury found that the repairs could have been made at Sidney, C.B., in time to enable the ship to go to Bathurst:—Held, that the jury having pronounced on the questions of fact, and their verdiet having been affirmed by the court below, the supreme court could not interfere with the finding, Held, also, that, under such finding, taking the vessel to St. John was such an unnecessary deviation from the voyage as to entitle the charterer to recover. Cassels v. Burns, 14 S. C. R. 256.

Indemnity—Exception—Time.|—Covenant to indemnify "generally and without exception" against a charterparty, which defendants had assumed:—Held, under the circumstances, to mean rather without exception as to the description of claim, than as to time; and that the defendants would be liable only for moneys accruing due under it during their co-partnership, and thence to the expiration of their charter by defendants. Jones v. Walker, 9 U. C. R. 136.

Liability for Loss of Anchor—Repair, 1—Plaintiff declared on a charterparty of a vessel, for nonpayment of the sum agreed to be paid, and because defendants did not deliver her up in as god order as when delivered to them, reasonable wear and tear excepted in this, that such mehor and chain belonging to hed. Defendants pleaded that the indenture contained a covenuant (setting it out) by which it was agreed that all repairs under $20$ should be paid by them and deduced from the price of the charterparty, and all over $20 by plaintiff; and they alleged that the costs of said anchor and chain amounted to more than $20, and that they were lost in the lake by tempest, and without any fault of defendants:—Held, on denurer, no defence, for the loss of the anchor and chain was not within the exception of reasonable wear and tear, nor was the plaintiff bound to replace it as a repair, under the covenant practice.

Liability on Contracts of Affreightment—Owner—Charterer.]—The chartering of a ship with its company for a particular voyage by a transportation company does not relieve the owners and master from liability upon contracts of affreightment during such voyage, where the exclusive control and navigation of the ship are left with the master, mariners, and other servants of the owners, and the contract has been made with them only. Glengoil S. S. Co. v. Ferguson, 28 S. C. R. 146.

Liability for Negligence—Demise or Hiring.]—The defendant hired a tug from the plaintiff by a contract signed by both parties in these words, "I agree to charter tug. to tow two barges from . for which I agree to pay . owner to supply engineer and captain . ." The tug on the voyage was run on a rock through the negligence of the captain:—Held, not a demise of the tug, but a contract of hiring, and that the defendant was not liable for the damage. Thompson v. Fowler, 23 O. R. 644.

— Demise or Hiring—Conditions—Repairs—Presumption of Fault—Evidence— Damages.]—The company chartered the tug Beaver from K., by written contract dated at Quebec, 22nd May, 1895, by which it was agreed that K. should charter the tug Beaver for not less than one month from date. If kept at $45 per day of twenty-four hours, longer than one month the rate to be $40 per day: K. to furnish tug, crew, provisions, oil, &c., and everything necessary except coal and pilots above Montreal; the tug to leave next morning's tide, and to be discharged in Quebec. The company took possession of the tug, put her in charge of their pilot (who assumed the control, employment, and navigation of the vessel), and used the tug for their purposes until 8th July, 1895, when, while still in their possession, the pilot took her, in the daytime, into waters at the foot of the Cornwall rapids, in the river St. Lawrence, where she struck against some submerged hard substance and against some submerger into submergers and submergers sank. She was raised a few days afterwards, towed to port, and placed in dock for repairs at Montreal. The orders were to make the necessary repairs, to put the vessel in the same condition as she was immediately before the accident, and on the 30th July K. was notified that the repairs were completed, that the tug would be put out of dock the following day, and he was requested to receive the tug at Montreal. K. answered that the disand he was requested to receive the charge was to be made at Quebec, that she was not in as good condition as when leased, and requested the company to join in a surrequested the company to join in a survey, which, however, they declined to do. The survey was made by a naval architect, who reported that, in addition to the repairs already made, it would cost $2,494.90 to restore the vessel to the same conditions as when leased to the company. On the 1st August K. took possession of the tug under protest. and brought the action for the amount of this estimate in addition to the rent accrued, with fees for survey and protest. The company admitted the rent due, and tendered that por-The superior tion of the claim into court. The superior court rendered judgment for the amount of the tender, dismissing the action as to the re-mainder of the claim on the ground that K. had been sufficiently compensated by the repairs which had been made by the charterers. The courts of review and Queen's bench in-creased the verdict to the full sum claimed, $4,909.90, by adding the amount of the surveyor's estimate and the fees :- Held, that the contract between the parties was a contract of lease; that the taking of the vessel, in the daytime, into the waters where she struck was prima facie evidence of negligence on the part of the company; and that, as the com-pany did not adduce evidence sufficient to rebut the presumption of fault existing against them, they were responsible under the Civil Code of Lower Canada for the damages caused to the vessel during the time she was controlled and used by them. Held, further, that the proper estimate of damages, under the circumstances, was the cost of the repairs, which should be assumed to be the measure of depreciation in value occasioned by the accident, and that no substantial error arose from regarding the condition and value of the ves-sel at the commencement of the lease as that in which she ought to have been discharged. Collins Bay Rafting and Forwarding Co. v. Kaine, 29 S. C. R. 247.

Loss of Vessel—Payment of Hire—Pleading.]—The plaintiff declared in covenant on defendant's agreement for the hire of a steamboat, for which certain sums were to be paid by instalments, and it was provided that defendant should employ an experienced and competent captain, officers, and men, and that if, from any other cause than carelessness or bad management on the part of the master or hands on board, she should be lost during the term, then the instalments should not further be paid; and the plaintiff assigned a breach in the non-payment of £1,250d, the instalment due on 1st December, 1842. Defendant pleaded that before that sum became payable, the steamboat, from a certain cause other than such carelessness or bad management, to wit, because she was run into by a schooner, was sunk and wholly lost, of which the plaintiff had notice, and the defendant was thereby discharged: — Held, plea bad, because the accident was not so described as to except the master and hands on board from being the occasion of the loss. Counter v. Hamilton, 6 O. S. 612.

Refusal to Load.—Delay,] — Where the plaintiff agreed that his vessel should with all convenient speed sail from Kingston to Dresden or Chatham, to take in a cargo of wheat for Kingston, and she took twenty-seven days to reach Detroit, but the delay arose from no fault of the captain or crew:—Held, that he had fulfilled his contract, and that the defendant was not justified in refusing to load her. Browen v. Lamont, 30 U. C. R. 392.

The plaintiff's vessel, then at Kingston, was engaged by defendant about the 24th October, 1889, to carry to Kingston a cargo of wheat, part of which was to be shipped at Dresden or Chatham, and the rest at Detroit. She left Kingston about the 27th October, and, owing to stress of weather, but to no fault of the plaintiff, did not reach Detroit until the 15th November, when it seemed improbable that she would have time to ship her cargo and get back to Kingston that season. The defendant on this ground refused to lond her, for which the plaintiff sued:—Held, that he could not recover; for defendant was not bound to ship his wheat unless the vessel arrived within a reasonable time, and, under the evidence, he was justified in his refusal. Brown v. Lamont, 32 U. C. R. 167.

Return of Vessel — Injury by Fire — "Bangers of Lake."]—Where a defendant had agreed to return a steamer chartered by him on a certain day in good repair "dangers of the lake excepted:"—Held, that damage by an accidental fire, not occasioned by lightning, did not come under the exception. Quere, whether a fire occurring in a steamer from some cause clearly connected with the use of steam, would come within "dangers of the lake." Larned v. McRee, 1 U. C. R. 99.

s were repairs terland — Market Value — Apportionment of Loss—Limit of Liability. — The owner of a ship wrongfully injured in a collision is entitled to have her fully and completely repaired, and if a ship is totally lost, the owner is entitled to recover her market value at the time of the collision. Where both ships are at fault, the law apportions the loss by obliging each wrongdoer to pay one-half the loss of the other. The provisions of s, 12 of R, S, C, C, 79, limiting the liability of the party at fault in a collision to a sum of $38.92 for each ton of gross tonnage, were applied to this case. The Heather Bell and The Fastnet, 3 Ex, C, R, 40.

Towage — Survey—Notice—Demurage.]—The plaintiffs were held entitled to rescover for the damage arising from the negligent navigation of a tug and her tow, to the amount of the actual cost of the repairs and also the cost of towage to the ship-yard. A survey of the damage done to their vessel was made at the plaintiffs' instance. Notice of intention to have a survey made was only given to one of the defendants, and that hy mailing a letter to his address on the day before the survey was made. Notice of the result of the survey was given to the defendants:—Held, that the cost of the survey was not chargeable to the defendants, because reasonable notice was not given to enable them to be present or to be represented thereat. Held, also, that demurrage should not be allowed, inasmuch as the vessel was lying idle at the time of the collision, and that as soon as the plaintiffs obtained a commission for her the vessel went to work, although repairs were not then completed—no loss of earnings occurring by reason of the accident. Charlton, v. The Colorado and Byron Terrice, 3 Ex. C. R. 263.

— Wages—Hire of Vessel—Profits.]—
In an action for injury to plaintiff's ressel caused by collision with defendants' steambeat:—Held, that the plaintiff was entitled to recover the cost of repairing his vessel, and for the permanent injury done to her, and the wages of his crew necessarily kept over during the repairs; but not for the sum expended in the hire of another vessel to take her place, nor for the profits which he would have earned by her employment. Semble, that in an action of trover for a vessel, the loss of profits may be recovered. Brown v. Beatty, 35 U. C. II. 328.

Loss—Apportionment of, 1 — Where both ships were at fault, the damages were ordered to be assessed and divided, each party paying his own cests. Ray v. Landry, 4 Ex. C. R. 94; Landry R. W. Landry, 10, 280. See McCallum v. Odette, The M. C. Upper, 7 S. C. R. 30; The Heather Bell and the Fastner, 3 Ex. C. R. 40; Ward v. The Yosemite, 4 Ex. C. R. 241.

Value of Cargo—Carrier.]—In a case of collision, the owner of the vessel not in fault may recover from the owner of the other vessel the value of goods on board not owned by him, but in his custody as a carrier. Irving v. Hagerman, 22 U. C. R. 545.

Value of Vessel—Mortgage.]—The mortgagor of a boat destroyed by collision may recover the full value against the owners of the other vessel, without abatement for the mortgage. Shaw v. DeSalaberry Navigation Co. of Montreal, 18 U. C. R. 541. 3. Proof of Negligence.

(a) Admissibility of Evidence.

Declarations as to Cause of Collision.)—Held, in an action for collision, that evidence of declarations made by the captain of defendants' vessel, as to the cause of the accident, on the day after it had happened, were inadmissible; but that the verdict should not be interfered with for their reception, as they appeared to have been only repetitions of what was said by him at the time of the accident. Shaw v. Desalaberry Navigation Co., 18 U. C. R. 541.

(b) Both Vessels at Fault.

General Rule, I—A defendant is not liable unless the whole fault can be attributed to his vessel. In this case it did not satisfactorily appear that all or any of the blame could be justly so attributed, and a verdict for the plaintiffs was therefore set aside. Bowen v. Ewart, 2 C. P. 542.

Particular Circumstances.] — On the 27th April. 1880, at Port K., on lake Eric, where vessels go to load timber, staves, &c., and where the Eric Belle, the respondent's vessel, was in the habit of landing and taking passengers, the M. C. Upper, the appellant's vessel, was moored at the west side of the dock, and had her anchor dropped some distance out, in continuation of the direct line of the east end of the wharf, thus bringing her cable directly across the end of the wharf from east to west, and without buoring the same or taking some measure to inform in-coming vessels where it was. The Eric Belle came in to the wharf safely, and in backing out from the wharf she came in contact with the anchor of the M. C. Upper, making a large hole in her bottom. On a petition filed by the owner of the Eric Belle, in the maritime court of Ontario, to recover damages done to his vessel by the schooner M. C. Upper, the Judge found, on the evidence, that both vessels were to blame, and held that each should pay one-half of the damage sustained by the Eric Belle. An appeal by the owner of the M. C. Upper and a cross-appeal by the owner of the Eric Belle, the surreme court of Candal, being equally divided, were dismissed without costs. McCallum v. Odette, The M. C. Upper, 7 S. C. R. 35.

By one of the general rules of the Quebec Yacht Club it is provided that while a race is in progress, boats, other than those in the race, shall keep clear of the competing yachts, and particularly that they shall not round any of the buoys that mark the course of the race. One of the conditions of the Ritchie-Gilmour cup race was, that "the yachts are to be manned entirely by members of the club, and sailed and steered by the owners or partowners." Two yachts, the B. and the M., started upon a certain race for this cup, the former being in every way aunlified to compete, the latter being disqualified from winning the cup by the fact that she was partiy manned by a professional crew. It appeared from the evidence that the owner of the B. was under the impression that the M. was really not in the race; but, on the other hand, the M. carried, a flag indicating that she was in the race, and in every way acted as if she was a competing yacht. The two boats rounded the first buoy, the B, leading, and after one or two tacks had been made beating against the wind, they came towards each other close hauled, the M, on the starboard and the B, on the port tack, Under the sailing regulations of the club it was the duty of the B, in such a case to give way, and that of the M. to continue her course. Instead of this, they both continued their courses until the B., when too late, attempted to give way, and then ran into the M., doing her considerable dam-Those on board the B. asserted that they did not see the M. until they were immediately upon her, and that when they did see her they thought she would keep out of their way Held, that those in charge of the B. had no right to suppose, under the circumstances preright to suppose, under the circumstances pre-ceding the collision, that the M. would act in any other way than a competing yacht would do, and that they were at fault for not giving way to her, as the sailing rules regiving way to her, as the same view of any rights which the M. might have with regard to the race. (2) That the M., not having compiled with the conditions of the race with regard to the character of her crew, was wrong in sailing the course at all, and was, therefore, also at fault for the collision. The damages were ordered to be assessed and divided, each party paying his own costs. Ray v. Landry, 4 Ex. C. R. 94, 280,

See The Heather Bell and The Fastnet. 3 Ex. C. R. 40; The Porter v. Heminger, 6 Ex. C. R. 208.

(c) Burden of Proof.

Conflict of Evidence—Findings of Trial Judge—Appeal.]—In this case there was a conflict of testimony on two questions of fact material to the decision of the case, both of which were found by the local Judge in admirally in favour of the defendants. The burden of proof being in each case upon the plaintiff, and there being evidence to support the findings, the court on appeal declined to interfere with the same. Inchmarce S.S. Co. v. The Astri, G.E.x. C. R. 178, 218.

Defence of Inevitable Accident—Vessel at Anchor.]—Where the defence is inevitable accident the plaintiff must begin. The fact of a steamer in motion colliding with a stationary vessel is, itself, primā facie proof that the accident was caused by the steamer's fault. The John Ouen, 5 C. L. T. 505.

Drifting Vessel.]—In an action against the owners of a steambeat for damage done to the plaintiffs' bridge, it appeared that the steamer was found drifting against the bridge one morning after a storm, and that the injury complained of was thus caused:—Held, sufficient prima facie proof of negligence, and that it lay upon defendants to account for the accident. Cathraqui Bridge Co. v. Holcomb, 21 U. C. R. 273.

Moving Vessel.1—During the early hours of the morning of 12th Aurust. 1801, a collision occurred between the nlaintiffs' vessel, lying moored to a dock in Windsor, Ontario, and a barge in tow of a tug. The defendants in their pleadings admitted the collision, but claimed that the plaintiffs' vessel was in fault, since there was no light on board and no stern line out, in consequence of which latter neglect she swung out into the stream as the tug and its tow were passing at a reasonable distance away from her, and that the collision was occasioned thereby. Upon the question as to who should begin:—Held, that the defendants, having admitted that their vessel was moving and the plaintiffs' vessel was at rest, and that a collision had occurred, must begin on the question of liability for the accident, with a right to reply on the question of the amount of damage, if it were necessary to go into that question. Charlton v. The Colorado and Byron Trerice, 3 Ex. C. R. 263.

Where a collision occurs between a moving vessel and one lying at anchor, the burden of proof is upon the moving vessel to shew that such collision was not attributed to her negligence. The Annot Lyle, 11 P. D. 114, referred to. Where a collision is attributable to negligence on the part of both vessels, the loss must be equally apportioned between them, notwithstanding the fact that the negligence of one contributed to the accident in a greater degree than that of the other. Ward v. The Yosemite, 4 Ex. C. R. 241.

(d) Contributory Negligence.

Facts Shewing.]—A railway company had the control of a swing bridge over a canal. The plaintiff's ship was navigating the canal when trains were about passing and repassing the bridge. Notice was given of the plaintiff's exsel being about to pass, by blowing a horn and hailing, and notice was given by the company's servants by signal that the bridge could not then be swung, and the plaintiff's vessel was injured by running against the bridge while it remained closed:—Held, that, as the requirements of the railway traffic compelled the bridge to be closed, the company were not then bound to open the bridge, and were not liable for such injury, to which the plaintiff had contributed by his own negligence. Turner v. Great Western R. W. Co., 6 C. P. 538.

About one-third of a mile above Snow Rapid on the Ottawa, there were two booms owned by the government, extending from the north and south side of and meeting at a capstan in the river, and another boom extended from the capstan down the stream to an island at the head of the rapid, thus dividing the river into two channels, of which the northern one was used by boats, and the other for running logs. The plaintiff had a pocket boom on the south side, into which he was running his logs, and he had nearly closed the government boom above mearly closed the government boom above it for this purpose, thus wrongfully obstruct-ing navigation. When defendants' steamer arrived at the south government boom on her way down, it was not sufficiently open, and she struck and broke it about forty feet from the end, by which a number of the plaintiff's logs, gathered above it, escaped and were lost. The plaintiff charged as negliwere lost. The plaintiff charged as negli-gence that the steamer came to within 150 yards of the boom before slackening speed, and then did not reverse her engine. On the other hand, it appeared that the defendants had sent notice to the plaintiff the night before that the boat would be down next day, being the 15th April, and the first trip of the season; that it was the custom to have the boom open for her without waiting, which she could not do safely so near the rapid: that when the accident happened the plaintiff was controlling easonable the boom with a rope attached, instead of letting it swing open freely; and that until the boat came in sight, half a mile off, the e collision question that the plaintiff did not begin to get the rope ready eir vessel by putting a chain on it to sink it under the el was at vessel :- Held that there was at least contrired, must butory negligence on the plaintiff's part, if infor the deed the whole blame was not his; and that he question could not recover. Quere, as to the correctness of a nonsuit upon one of two counts, Brace v. Union Forwarding Co., 32 U. C. R. re necesarlton Ex. C. R.

The owners of the tug B. H. sued the owners of the steam propeller St. M. for damages occasioned by the tug being run down by the propeller in the river Detroit:—Held, that, as the evidence shewed the master of the tug to have misunderstood the signals of the propeller, and to have directed his vessel on the wrong course when the two were in proximity, the owners of the propeller were not liable. Robortson v. Wigle, The St. Magnus, 16 S. C. R. 720.

Held, that it was necessary for the defendants to establish such negligene against the plaintiffs as would contribute to the accident, and that, as it was about daylight at the time of its occurrence, and the plaintiffs' tessel was admittedly seen by the tug when more than one hundred feet distant, the tow being at the time three hundred feet behind the tug, and further, since the evidence shewed that the plaintiffs' vessel was properly and securely moored to the dock, the absence of light did not constitute such negligence on the part of the plaintiffs as contributed to the accident. Charlton v. The Colorado and Byron Trerice, 3 Ex. C. R. 263.

Nature of — Proof of,]—Where a ship could with ordinary care, doing the thing that under any circumstances she was bound to do, have avoided the collision, she ought to be held alone to blame for it, although the other ship may have been guilty of some breach of the rules, not contributing to the collision. When the defence of contributory negligence is set up by the defendant in an action for collision, he must shew, with reasonable clearness, not only that the other ship was at fault, but that her fault may have contributed to the collision. The Porter v. Heminger, 6 Ex. C. R. 154, 208.

Necessity for Negativing—Ship's Course—Statute.]—To enable the owner of a vessel lost or injured by collision to recover, it must appear that the accident was not in any way owing to the negligence, misconduct, or want of skill in those navigating such vessel, and that the provisions of T Wm. IV. c. 22, as to the course to be taken, have been, as far as applicable, properly observed. Eberts v. Smythe, 3 U. C. R. 189.

(e) Lights and Watch.

Absence of Cause of Collision—Statute.)—Action for a collision. It appeared that the plaintiff's steamer had only one of the lights required by statute, which was not seen by defendants, and that the defendants steamer was properly provided with lights, which were discerned in good time. The Judge stated to the jury that he had no strong impression of the right on either side, and left it to them to say, upon the evidence, who was to blame. A verdict was found for the plaintiff:—Held, that sufficient weight had not been given to the fact that the plaintiff's boat was without the lights required; that the evidence tended to shew the accident to be in some degree attributable to such default; and that a new trial should be had to determine whether it was so or not, for if it were, the act should be conclusive against the plaintiff. Gildersleeve v. Bonter, 12 U. C. R. 480. See S. C., 13 U. C. R. 492.

SHIP.

Fallure to Discern—Cause—New Trial.]—In an action for collision between two sailing vessels, owned by the plaintffs and defendant respectively, it appeared that both vessels were running to windward close-hauled, the plaintiffs' vessel on the part tack. Defendant's vessel, it was admitted, did what was best as soon as the plaintiffs' lights were seen, but the complaint was, that he should have seen them sooner. This was explained by alleging that there was a haze on the water, which the plaintiffs' witnesses denied. The jury were directed that if defendant used every means in his power to avoid a collision after he saw the plaintiffs' lights, he would not be liable, nor if they believed it was simply an accident without negligence on defendant's part:—Held, under the circumstances, not a misdirection; but the jury having found for defendant a new trial was granted, on affidavits shewing the discovery of new evidence to prove that there was no haze at the time. Doveney v. Patterson, 38 U. C. R. 513.

Vessel at Anchor.]—When a vessel is lying at anchor not in a roadstead or fairway, and out of the course of ordinary vessels, she is not bound to keep an anchor watch. The John Ouen, 5 C. L. T. 565.

----- Negligence.]-A wrecking steamer was lying at anchor during the night over a was jung at anenor during the high over a sunken wreck in mid-channel, about a mile and a quarter north from Colchester Reef lighthouse, on lake Erie. The existence of the wreck was well known to mariners sailing the state of the lake. While the examples with upon the lake. While the steamer was work ing on the wreck, there was no light exhibited at that point by the lighthouse keeper, but it was his custom to put a light there during the absence of the wrecking steamer. Upon the night in question the wrecking steamer had a white light burning on the top of her pilot house. The night was clear with a light breeze from the north-north-east. The Porter a three-masted sailing vessel of seven hundred and fifty tons burthen, was pursuing her voyage, light, up the lake from Buffalo to De-troit. She had all her canvas set, and was making between two and a half and three and a half miles an hour, when she collided with the wrecking steamer so lying at anchor. It was proved that the wrecking steamer had no anchor watch on deck at the time of the collision, and there was some contradiction upon the evidence as to whether the light on the top of her pilot house was burning brightly at the time. It was also proved that the Porter was slow in answering her helm when light, and that the look-out on the Porter did not see the wrecking steamer until it was too late to so manœuve the Porter as to avoid a collision:—Held, that the wrecking steamer's light satisfied the regulations. maintain an anchor watch under the circumstances, and that the sailing ship was solely responsible for the collision, which was to be attributed to the negligence of those on board of her. Heminger v. The Porter, 6 Ex. C. R. 154, 208.

Wrong Lights—Common Error—Statute—Repeal.)—11 appeared that both vessels were carrying the lights prescribed by 14 & 15 Viet. c. 126, although that Act had been repealed three years before by 22 Viet. c. 19, which required other lights in different places:—Held, that, as the error was common, and neither therefore could have been misled by it, the case must be treated as if both were carrying the proper lights. Irving v. Hagerman, 22 U. C. R. 545.

See Charlton v. The Colorado and Byron Trerice, 3 Ex. C. R. 263; Inchmaree 8.8. Co. v. The Astrid, 6 Ex. C. R. 178, 218.

(f) Overtaking Vessel.

Lights — Rules.] — Hold, following The Franconia, 2 P. D. 8, that where two ships are in such a position, and are on such courses, and are at such distances, that, if it were night, the hinder ship could not see any part of the side lights of the forward ship, and the hinder ship is going faster than the other, the former is to be considered as an overtaking ship within the meaning of rule 20 of the collision rules in force before July, 1897, and must keep out of the way of the latter. No subsequent alteration of the bearing between the two vessels can make the "overtaking" vessel a "crossing" vessel so as to bring her within the operation of rule 16 in force before July, 1897. (See now rule 24 of the collision rules adopted by order of the Queen in council on the 9th February, 1897, and which came into force on the 6th July, 1897, I luchmarce S.S. Co., v. The Astrid, 6 Ex. C. R. 178.

(g) Passing Vessels-Rule of Road.

Dangerous Channel — Manwurres.] — Two steamers of considerable length and draught, the one entering and the other leaving the port of N., signalled to each other that they both proposed to take the same channel, which, though short, was narrow and tortuous. The one steamer being fully committed to the channel, it was, under art. 18 of R. S. C. c. 79, the duty of the other steamer to remain completely outside until the first had passed completely through. (2) Where a collision appears possible, but as yet easily avoidable, neither vessel has a right to adopt manceutres which place the other vessel in a position of unnecessary embarrassment or difficulty. The wrongdoor is solely responsible for damages from a consequent collision. The City of Pubella, 3 Ex. C. R. 26.

— Speed—Manawers,]—If two vessels approach each other in the position of "passing" ships (with a side light of one dead ahead of the other), where unless the course of one or both is changed they will go clear of each other, no statutory rule is imposed, but they are governed by the rules of good seamanship. If one of two "passing" ships acts consistently with good seamanship and the other persists, without good reason, in keeping on the wrong side of the channel: in starboarding her helm when it was seen that the helm of the other was hard to port and the neim of the other was hard to port and the vessels rapidly approaching; and, after sig-nalling that she was going to port, in revers-ing her engines and thereby turning her bow to starboard, she is to blame for a collision which follows. The non-observance of the statutory rule (art. 18.), that steamships shall slacken speed, or stop, or reverse, if necessary, when approaching another ship, so as to involve the risk of a collision, is not to be considered as a fact contributing to a collision, provided the collision could have been avoided by the impinging vessel by reasonable care exerted up to the time of the collision. Excusable man-ocurres executed in "agony of collision" brought about by another vessel, cannot be imputed as contributory negligence on the part of the vessel collided with. The rule that in narrow channels steamships shall, when safe and practicable, keep to the starboard (art. and practicable, keep to the starboard tart. 211, does not override the general rules of navigation. The Leverington, 11 P. D. 117, followed. Judgment in 5 Ex. C. R. 135 af-firmed. The Cuba v. McMillan, 26 S. C. R. 651.

Question of Fact—Appeal.]—Action for damages to the plaintiff's schooner by a collision with the defendant's steamer in the Bay of Quinte. In the marine protest by the captain of the schooner, the cause of the collision was alleged to be that the steamer's wheel was put to port when it should have been put to starboard just before the collision. The action was twice tried. The judgment upon the first trial was set aside on the ground that the Judge, by adopting the opinion of assessors, had delegated his judicial functions (19 A. R. 298). The second trial resulted in a verdict for the plaintiff, which was affirmed by the court of appeal. The supreme court of Canada affirmed the judgment of the court of appeal.

Refusal of Uninjured Vessel to Assist.]—Under the provisions of s. 10 of the Navigation Act, R. S. C. c. 79, where a collision occurs, the ship neglecting to assist is to be deemed to blame for the collision in the absence of a reasonable excuse. Two steamships, the C. and the J., were leaving port together in broad daylight, and a collision occurred between them. The J. received such injury as to be rendered helpless. The C. did not assist or offer to assist, the disabled ship, but proceeded on her voyage. The excuse put forward by the master of the C. was that the J. did not whistle for assistance, although the evidence shewed that he must have been aware of the serious character of the damage sustained by her. He further attempted to instify his failure to assist by the fact that other ships were not far off; but it was shewn that these ships were at anchor and idle:—Held, that the circumstances disclosed no reasonable excuse for failure to assist on the part of the C., and that the consequences of the collision were due to her default. Held, also, that the C. was in fault under art, 16 of s. 2 of the Navigation Act for not keeping out of the way of the J., the latter being on the starboard side of the C. while they were crossing. Esquimalt and Xenoimo R. W. Co. v. The Cutch, 3 Ex. C. R. 362.

Charlottetown harbour, by tacking, according to the usual course of navigation. The L, a steamship, was on her way into the harbour. When the T, was first seen by the J. M., the latter was on a course of W.S.W., standing across the harbour, towards and to the northward and eastward of Rocky Point black buoy. From that time until a collision occurred between the two vessels, they were in full view of each other. While the J. M. was underway on the starboard tack and going about three knots an hour, the T. was coming straight up the harbour at nearly full speed. The latter did not change her course, nor execute any manoeuve, nor make any attempt by slackening speed or stopping or reversing to keep out of the way of the J. M. The bow of the T. struck the J. M. on the starboard side aft of the fore-rigging and nearly amidships, cutting her almost through from her hatches to her keel, and causing her to become a total wreck:—Held, that the T. had infringed the provisions of arts, 29, 22, 23, and 25 of the rules for preventing collisions at sea, and was responsible for the collision. Brine v. The Tiber, 6 Ex. C. R. 402.

Steering-gear-Speed-Question of Fact —Appeal.]—The steamship S. was proceeding up the harbour of Sydney, C. B., at a rate of speed of about eight or nine miles an hour. When entering a channel of the harbour, which was about a mile in width, her steam steeringgear became disabled, and she collided with the J., a sailing vessel lying at anchor in the roadstead, damaging the latter seriously. It was shewn that the master of the S. had not acted as promptly as he might have done in taking steps to avoid the collision when it appeared likely to happen:—Held, by the exchequer court, that, even if the breaking of the steering-gear-the proximate cause of the collision-was an inevitable accident, the rate of speed at which the S. was being propelled, while passing a vessel at anchor in a road-stead such as this, was excessive, and that, in view of this and the further fact that the master of the S. was not prompt in taking measures to avert a collision when he became aware of the accident to his steering-gear, the S. was in fault and liable under art. 18 of s. 2 of R. S. C. c. 79. Held, also, that the provisions of art. 21 of s. 2 of R. S. C. c. 79 should be applied to roadsteads of this character, and that, inasmuch as the S. did not keep to that side of the fairway or mid-channel which lay on her starboard side, she was also at fault under this article, and responsible for the collision which occurred:—Held, by the supreme court of Canada, affirming the decision of the exchequer court, that only a question of fact was involved, and, though it was doubtful if the evidence was sufficient to warrant the finding, the decision was not so clearly wrong as to justify an appellate court in reversing it. The Santanderino, 3 Ex. C. R. 378, 23 S. C. R. 145.

See Eberts v. Smythe, 3 U. C. R. 189.

(h) Speed.

Half-speed—Want of Fog-horn.]—In a collision between a steamer and a sailing vessel, in a fog, the steamer was going half-speed. Had she been going dead-slow she might have been stopped in time to prevent the collision:—Held, that the steamer was partly in fault, although the collision was no doubt due to the want of a fog-horn on the sailing vessel. The Zambesi and the Fanny Dutard, 3 Ex. C. R. 67.

" Moderate " Speed-Fog.]-Two steamers were approaching each other near a public harbour in a dense fog, those in charge having mutually learned their approximate whereabouts by an interchange of blast signals. Notwithstanding such proximity, and the fact that the courses they were steering were such as would have brought them across each other's bows, one of them maintained a speed of from three to four miles an hour, and was running with a tide, at flood force, of one and a half knots per hour; the other was steaming at a speed of about three knots an hour, and no effort was made to alter her course. A collision occurred:—Held, that both vessels had infringed the provisions of arts. 13 and 18 of the Imperial regulations for preventing collisions at sea, and were, therefore, mutually to blame for the collision.

(2) The word "moderate" in art. 13 is a relative term, and its construction must depend upon the circumstances of the particular The object of this article is not merely that vessels should go at a speed which will lessen the violence of a collision, but also that they should go at a speed which will give as much time as possible for avoiding a collision when another ship suddenly comes into view at a short distance. It is a general principle that speed such that another vessel cannot be avoided after she is seen, is unlawful. The Zadok, 9 P. D. 114, referred to. The Heather Bell and The Fastnet, 3 Ex. C. R. 40.

Rules of Navigation—Deviation from— Special Circumstances.]—Plaintiff sued defendants for running down his schooner while at anchor, by their steam tug with a raft in tow. It appeared that the schooner, while approaching Presque'isle harbour, which has a narrow channel, in a heavy sea and wind, became un-manageable, and grounded on the north side of the channel, the wind being southerly. De-fendants' tug, with the raft, followed soon after, keeping as near the south side of the channel as she could, and going at a fair rate of speed, but the raft was driven against and sunk the schooner, the captain of the tug not knowing that it was aground. The tug could not have stopped without risking the loss of the raft, and it was alleged that the tow rope could not have been shortened, or speed slackcould not have been seened. Plaintiff contended that defendants were liable, having violated art, 16 of s. 2 of the Navigation Act, 27 & 28 Vict. c. 13. which enacts that every steamship, when ap proaching another ship, so as to involve risk collision, shall slacken her speed :-Held, that it was a case within art. 19, which directs that in obeying the rules regard shall be had to all dangers of navigation, and to any special circumstances rendering a deviation from them necessary to avoid immediate danger; that it was a question for the jury. under all the circumstances, whether defendants had been guilty of negligence; and that the evidence warranted a verdict in their favour. Contravention of Regulations-Cause Action-Pleading-Negligence.]-The declaration set out certain regulations, made in pursuance of the statute, for the proper use of the Welland canal, directing that boats waiting to enter a lock should lie in single tier, and advance in the order in which they lay and that all vessels approaching a lock, while any other vessel going in a contrary direction was about to enter it, should be stopped and made fast as directed, and remain there until such vessel should have passed, under a pen-alty named. It then alleged that defendant's vessel, which was waiting to enter a lock with two other vessels, passed them out of its order, and endeavoured to enter first, and while it was so approaching, the plaintiff's steamboat, going in a contrary direction, was in the lock; but defendant did not stop or make fast his vessel, but wrongfully, and in violation of the regulations, went on and endeavoured to enter the lock, whereby it was driven against the plaintiffs' boat, which was forced against the side of the lock and injured:—Held, on demurrer, declaration bad, for the contravention of the regulations formed no cause of action, and no negligence on the defendant's part was alleged. Jacques v. Nicholl, 25 U. C. R. 402.

New Trial.]—In an action for injuries caused by collision of steamers, the court had set aside a former verdict given for the plaintiff, as being against law and evidence. On a second trial the jury found again for the plaintiff; and at the same assizes the defendant (in the common pleas) obtained a verdict in a cross-action for the damage done to his steamer upon the same occasion. The court, under these circumstances, granted a second new trial in the first case, with costs to abide the event. Gildersleeve v. Bonter, 13 U. C. R, 492.

VI. DEMURRAGE, DETENTION, AND DELAY.

Contract of Consignee — Transhipment —Responsibility,] — A. & Co. shipped some stone to B., in Ottawa, by vessel, to be transhipped and P. R. Co. A detention of eleven days took place at Prescott, through the rallway company, for which A. & Co. brought this action against B., claiming damages for the detention of the vessel. There being no evidence to shew that the consignee undertook more than to receive the stone at Ottawa:—Held, under the circumstances, that he was not responsible for the detention of the vessel. McGrevy v. Rathbone, 11 C. P. 186

Transhipment—Responsibility—Implication.]—Defendant, the owner of wheat, shipped it on board plaintiff's vessel consigned to Montreal. The bill of lading made the freight payable by the consignees, but contained nothing as to the days allowed for unloading or demurrage. The vessel was delayed at Montreal several days, in transferring the wheat into a ship, which the consignees ordered the plaintiff to put it on board of; and the plaintiff, having sued as upon a contract by defendant to receive the wheat from him within a reasonable time after arrival, obtained a verdict:—Held, that such a contract was to be implied from the bill of lading and evidence, and the verdict was upheld, Kemp v. McDougall, 23 U. C. R. 380, Unloading—Cause of Delay.]—P. N. & Co., brokers at Cleveland, shipped a cargo of coal on testator's vessel, consigned to defendant at Toronto, there being no stipulation in the bill of lading as to demurage. The vessel was detained four and a half days in unloading, for which it was sought to make defendant liable. A verdict having been found for the plaintiff, a new trial was granted, as the facts with regard to defendant having the facts with regard to defendant having the control of the property of the Contract of Consignor — Unloading—Responsibility—Implication.] — A cargo of wheat was shipped at Chicago by R, and T., "as agents and forwarders, for account and at the risk of whom it may concern," consigned in the margin "Order Bank of Montreal, for Messrs, T. & Co. (the defendants), care of G. J., & Co., Kingston." On arriving at Kingston the vessel was detained by G. J., & Co., as the jury found, an unreasonable time in unloading. Defendants paid the freight, enclosing it in a letter to G. J., & Co., in which they spoke of the grain as theirs:—Held, that there was evidence to shew that T. & Co. were both consignors and consignees, and that in the former capacity, though not in the latter, they were liable for the delay, as upon an implied contract to receive the wheat within a reasonable time. Barker v. Torrance, 30 U. C. R. 43, 31 U. C. R. 561.

Delay in Loading — Charterparty —Provisions of—Lay Days.]—By charterparty the appellants agreed to load the respondent's ship at Montreal, with a cargo of wheat, maize, peas, or rye, "as fast as can be received in fine weather," and ten days' demurrage were agreed on, over and above lay days, at £40 per day. Penalty for non-performance of the agreement was estimated amount of freight. Should ice set in during loading so as to endanger the ship, master to be at liberty to sail with part cargo, and to have leave to fill up at any open port on the way homeward for ship's benefit. The ship was ready to receive cargo on the 15th November. 1890, at eleven a. m., and the appellants began loading at two p. m. on the 16th November. After loading a certain quantity of rye in the forward hold, as it would not be safe to load the ship down by the head any further, the captain refused to take any more in the forward hold. No other cargo was ready, and, as the appellants would not put the rye anywhere except in the forward hold, the loading stopped. At eight a. m. on the 19th the loading recommenced and continued night and day until six a, m., Sunday the 21st, at which time the vessel sailed, in consequence of ice beginning to set in. When she sailed she was 214½ tons short of a full cargo. If the ice in the canal had not detained the barges having grain to had not detained the barges having grain to be loaded, the vessel would have been loaded on the night of the 19th. The respondent sued appellants because ship had not received full cargo, and claimed two and a-half days, 15th, 16th, and 17th November, and freight on 2141/2 tons of cargo not shipped. The appellants contended the delay was not due to them but to the ship in not supplying baggers and sewers to bag the grain; that the time lost on the first week was made up by night work; and that mere delay in loading could not sustain claim for dead freight:—Held, that, as there was evidence that the vessel could have been loaded with a full and complete cargo without night work before she left, had the freighters supplied the cargo as agreed by the charterparty, the appellants were liable for damages, and that the proper measure of the respondent's claim was the amount of agreed freight which would have been earned upon the deficient cargo. That the demurrage days mentioned in the charter were over and above the lay days, and had no reference to the loading of the ship. Lord v. Davidson, 13 S. C.

Express Contract - Pleading.] - The count for demurrage can only authorize recovery of a sum of money due on an express contract to pay demurrage eo nomine, not a recovery for demurrage for wrongfully detaining the vessel when nothing had been specified about demurrage. Brown v. Ross, 5 U. C. R. 469.

Lien for.]-The plaintiffs were owners of the schooner Lady Bagot, in which wheat was brought down lake Erie to the defendant, to be stored for Y. & Co. When it was brought to the defendant, the master of the schooner demanded £22 10s. for freight and £190 for demurrage, and said he had a lien on the wheat to that amount, and wished the defend-ant to pay it before he would deliver the wheat. This the defendant declined, but it was agreed between them that the defendant should receive the wheat upon giving the fol-lowing undertaking in writing: "I will retain 750 bushels of wheat, the property of Y. & Co. of Montreal, and part of the cargo of the Lady Bagot, until your claim for demurrage for detention for the schooner Lady Bagot at Sandusky is settled, also covering freight on amount retained." The plaintiffs subsequent-ly demanded the wheat from the defendant, who declined to give it up, saying that he was indemnified by Y. & Co., who refused to pay the plaintiffs' claim. The plaintiffs sued defendants specially upon the case, alleging their right to lien for freight and demurrage, then right to lien for freight and demurrage, then setting out the agreement, and assigning as a breach of the defendant's duty his delivering the wheat to Y. & Co. without payment of plaintiffs' lien:—Held, that the evidence did not support the count, as defendant still relating the goods. Held, also, that the plaintiffs' the state of the state tiffs under the circumstances had no lien for either freight or demurrage. Land v. Wood-ward, 5 U. C. R. 190. Vol. III. p-204-55

There is no maritime lien for freight or demurrage. The Cargo ex Drake, 5 C. L. T.

SHIP.

Obstruction of Navigation-Navigable Stream — Pleading.] — Declaration, that the plaintiff's vessel was lying almost loaded at the railway wharf at Toronto near the mouth of the river Don, with a tug to tow it into the harbour, and before the loading could be finished and the vessel towed out, the defendant's vessel came into the harbour and near the mouth of the river; that the entrance to the dock where plaintiff's vessel lay was narrow, and not wide enough to allow the plaintiff's vessel to pass defendant's vessel, if the latter entered the mouth of the river before the other went out, of which defendant had notice; and as defendant was about to enter the river plaintiff gave him notice that the river was too narrow, that the plaintiff's yessel was nearly loaded, and defendant would be delayed only a short time if he waited until plaintiff's vessel passed out; that defendant refused to listen to the warning and re-monstrance of the plaintiff, and wrongfully and injuriously brought his vessel into the Don, and kept it there three days after plaintiff's vessel was loaded, and the plaintiff, though ready to proceed with his vessel, was though ready to proceed with his vessel, was kept there that time idle, and was put to great loss and expense; and further, that defen-dant so delayed the plaintiff unnecessarily, and was during said time unable to load his (defendant's) vessel, and such delay was caused solely by the wilful and unnecessary act of defendant and his servants, from which defendant could reap no advantage :- Held, declaration bad, for want of an averment of the plaintiff's right to use the locus in quo, or that it was a navigable stream, and because it failed to shew an unreasonable obstruction of the stream after the defendant knew that the stream after the defendant knew that the plaintiff had his vessel loaded, and required him to remove the obstruction to enable him to pass out. Hall v. Ewart, 33 U. C. R. 491.

Time-Sunday.]-Held, that in computing demurrage Sunday is to be reckoned as one of the days to be allowed for. "Days" mean the same as running days, or consecutive days, unless there be some particular custom, days, unless there be some particular custom. If the parties wish to exclude any days from the computation they must be expressed. Gibbon v. Michael's Bay Lumber Co., 7 O. R.

VII. FISHING VESSELS.

1. Seal Fisheries-Imperial Statutes.

Duty of Master — Log-Penalty-For-feiture.]—By s. 1, s.-s. 2, of the Behring Sea Award Act, 1894, any ship employed in a contravention of any of the provisions of the contravention of any of the provisions of the Act shall be forfeited to Her Mnjesty as if an offence had been committed under s. 103 of the Merchant Shipping Act, 1854. Sub-section 3 enacts that the provisions of the Merchant Shipping Act, 1854, respecting official logs (including the penal clauses), shall apply to any vessel engaged in fur seal fishing. The penal clauses of s. 284 of the last mentioned Act merely subject the master to a penalty, in the nature of a fine, for not keeping an official log-book, and do not attach any penalty or forfeiture in respect of the ship:—Held, following Churchill v. Crease, 5 Bing. 189, that, inasmuch as the particular provision of the Merchant Shipping Act, 1854, indicting a fine only upon the master, was in seeming conflict with the general provisions of s.s. 2 of s. 1 of the Behring Sea Award Act, 1894, imposing forfeiture for contravention of the latter Act, such provision of the last mere excepting a contravention by omission to keep a log. Section 281 of the Merchant Shipping Act, 1854, enacts that every entry in an official log shall be made "as soon as possible" after the occurrence to which it relates:—Held, following Attwood v, Emery, 1 C, B, N, S, 110, that the words "as soon as possible" should be constructed to mean "within a reasonable time," and what is a reasonable time from the particular case in which the question arises. The Queen v. The Beatrice, 5 Ex. C. R, 9.

Firearms—Use of—Burden of Proof.]—
A vessel had on board, within prohibited waters, certain skins with holes in them which appeared to have been made by bullets:—Held, that this was sufficient reason for the arrest of the vessel, and that the burden of slewing that firearms had not been used was imposed on such vessel. The Queen v. The Aurora, 5 Ex. C. R. 372.

Forbidden Waters-Lawful Intention-Burden of Proof.]—By s.-s. 5 of s. 1 of the Imperial Act 54 & 55 Vict. c. 19, the Seal Fishery (Behring's Sea) Act. 1891, it is enacted that "if a British ship is found within Behring's Sea having on board thereof fishing or shooting implements or seal skins or bodies of seals, it shall lie on the owner or master of such ship to prove that the ship was not used or employed in contravention of this Oscar and Hattie, a fully equipped sealer, was seized in Gotzleb Harbour, in Behring while taking in a supply of water: Held, by the exchequer court, that the words "used or employed" are not to be confined to the particular use and employment of the ship on the occasion of her seizure, but extend to the whole voyage which she is then prosecuting; and if the ship is found in the condition described in the sub-section, she is liable to forfeiture unless the presumption therein raised can be rebutted by owner or master. Held, by the supreme court of Canada, affirmried, by the supreme court of Canada, and ing the judgment of the court below, that when a British ship is found in the prohibited waters of Behring Sea, the burden of proof is apon the owner or master to rebut by posi-tive evidence that the vessel is not there used or employed in contravention of s.-s. 5. Held, also, reversing the judgment of the court below, that there was positive and clear evidence that the Oscar and Hattie was not used or employed at the time of her seizure in contravention of s.-s. 5. The Queen v. The Oscar and Hattie, 3 Ex. C. R. 241, 23 S. C.

___Lawful Intention—Burden of Proof —Forfeiture — Fine.] — Held, that the Seal Fishery (North Pacific) Act, 1893, and the Behring Sea Award Act, 1894, being statutes in pari materià, are to be read as one Act. McWilliams v. Adams. I Macq. H. L. Cas. 120, referred to. (2) Held, following The Queen v. The Minnie, 4 Ex. C. R. 151, that, under the provisions of the above Acts, the presence of a ship within prohibited waters, fully manned and equipped for sealing, requires the clearest evidence of bona fides to relieve the master from a presumption of an intention on his part to violate the provisions of such Acts; and where the master offers no explanation at all, and such evidence as is produced on behalf of the ship is unsatisfactory, the court may order her condemnation and forfeiture, or may commute the forfeiture into a fine. The Queen v. The Shelby, 5 Ex. C. R. 1.

— Mistake.] — Under the Behring Sea Award Act, 1894, it is the duty of a master to be quite certain of his position before he attempts to seal. If he is found contravening the Act, it is no excuse to say that he could not ascertain his position by reason of the unfavourable condition of the weather. The Queen v. The Ainoko, 5 Ex., C. R. 366.

A master takes upon himself the responsibility of his position; and if through error, want of care, or inability to ascertain his true position, he drifts within the zone, and seals there, he thereby commits a breach of the Hehring Sea Award Act, 1894. The Queen v. The Beatrice, 5 Ex. C. R. 378.

— Mistake—Evidence—Log.]—Where the official log of a ship arrested under the Seal Fishery (North Pacific) Act, 1893, did not disclose the position and proceedings of the ship on certain material dates, an independent log kept by the mate was offered in evidence to prove such facts:—Held, not admissible. The Henry Coxon, 3 P. D. 156, referred to. (2) The mere presence of a ship within the prohibited zone, owing to a bona fide mistake in the master's calculations, is not a contravention of the Act. The Queen v. The Ainoko, 4 Ex. C. R. 195.

Order in Council—Judicial Notice—Examination of Foreign War Vessel—Protocol.]—The admiralty court is bound to take judicial notice of the order in council from which the court derives its jurisdiction, issued under the authority of the Act of the Imperial parliament, 56 & 57 Vict. c. 23, the Seal Fishery (North Pacific) Act, 1893. A Russian cruiser, manned by a crew in the pay of the Russian government and in command of an officer of the Russian navy, is a "war vessel" within the meaning of the said order in council, and a protocol of examination of an offending British ship by such cruiser signed by the officer in command is admissible in evidence in proceedings taken in the admiralty court in an action for condemnation under the Seal Fishery (North Pacific) Act, 1893, and is proof of its contents. The ship in question in this case, having been seized within the prohibited waters of the thirty mile zone round the Komandorsky Islands, fully equipped and manned for sealing, not only failed to fulfil the onus cast upon her of proving that she was not used or employed in killing or attempting to kill any seals within the seas specified in the order in council, but the evidence was sufficient to prove that she was guilty of an infraction of the statute and order in council. Judgment in 4 Ex. C. R.

Hlegal Sealing—Unintentional Offence— Nominal Fine.]—Where the owner of a ship employs a competent master, and furnishes him with proper instruments, and the master uses due diligence, but, for some unforescencause, against which no precaution reasonably necessary to be taken can guard, is found sealing where sealing is forbidden, the court may properly exercise its discretion and impose a nominal fine only. The Queen v. The Otto, 6 Ex. C. R. 188.

Infraction by Foreigner.]—The punitive provisions of the Behrin Sea Award Act, 1894, operate against a ship guilty of an infraction of the Act, whether she is "employed" at the time of such infraction by a British subject or a foreigner. The Queen v. The Viva, 5 Ex. C. R. 350.

Use of Evidence-Costs.]-Article 6 of schedule 1 of the Behring Sea Award Act, 1894 (57 Vict. c. 2 (Imp.)), prohibits the use of nets, firearms, and explosives in the fur seal fishing in certain waters mentioned in the Act, during the season therein prescribed. A vessel left the port of Victoria, B.C., on the Ith January, 1895, to prosecute a fur sealing voyage in the North Pacific, her equipment including a supply of firearms and explosives. The Behring Sea Award Act, 1894, came into force on the 23rd April, 1894. On the 18th June of that year, the master of such vessel received notice of the Act, with instructions to proceed to Copper Island for the purpose of getting his firearms sealed up. On the 27th July the vessel reported to the American custom house officer there, who informed the master that he had no authority to seal up the arms and ammunition, but, after making a manifest of the things on board, gave the master a clearance permitting his vessel to proceed to Behring Sea for the purpose of hunting for seals. The manifest shewed that the vessel had on board a certain number and certain kinds of loaded and empty cartridge shells. On the 2nd September the vessel was boarded by officers of the H.M.S. Rush, and afterwards arrested by them and taken Ounalaska, and there handed over to H.M.S. Pheasant as being guilty of an infraction of article 6 of the Behring Sea Award Act, 1894. The grounds upon which the arrest was based were: (1) the fact that among the 336 sealskins on board, one had a hole in it which might have been caused by a bullet or buckshot; and (2) that there was a less number, as well as another kind, of shells found on board the vessel when arrested than appeared in the manifest. At the trial it was not established beyond a doubt that the hole in the skin in question was produced by a gun shot, or, if so, by one fired by those on board the defendant's vessel. On the other hand, it could be reasonably inferred from the evidence that the number and the kinds of shells on board the vessel were incorrectly stated in the manifest. Although the evidence disclosed doubts as to a breach of the provisions of the Act, which the court resolved in favour of the vessel, yet it was held that the circumstances created sufficient suspicion to warrant the arrest, and no costs were given against the Crown in dismissing the petition. The Queen v. The E. B. Marvin, 4 Ex. C. R. 453. Wrongful Arrest—Dumages—Interest.] —Where a merchant vessel was seized by one of Her Majesty's ships, acting under powers conferred in that behalf by the Behring Sea Award Act, 1854, and such vessel was found to be innocent of any offence against the said Act, the court awarded damages for the wrongful seizure and detention, together with interest upon the ascertained amount of such damages. The Queen v. The Beatrice, 5 Ex. C. R. 160.

2. Other Cases.

Foreign Vessel — Three Mile Limit — "Fishing"—Forfeiture.] — Where fish had been enclosed in a seine more than three marine miles from the coast of Nova Scotia, and the seine pursed up and secured to a foreign vessel, and the vessel was afterwards seized with the seine still so attached within the three mile limit, her crew being then engaged in the act of bailing the fish out of the seine: —Held, affirming the decision in 5 Ex. C. R. 164, that the vessel when so seized was "fishing" in violation of the convention of 1818 between Great Britain and the United States of America and of the Imperial Act 59 Geo. III. c. 28, and R. S. C. e. 94, and consequently liable with the cargo, tackle, rigging, apparel, furniture, and stores to be condemned and forfeited. The Frederick Gerring Jr. v. The Queen, 27 S. C. R. 273.

Three Mile Limit—Inland Waters—Forfeiture.]—On the 21st April. 1894, the American steamer Grace was seized on Lake Erie by a Canadian government cruiser for an alleged infraction of R. S. C. e. 94, initialled "An Act respecting Fishing by Foreign Vessels." In an action for condennation it was found by the court that the vessel, when seized, was more than three marine miles from the shore, but clearly north of the international boundary line, between Canada and the United States of America: — Held, that the United States of the great of the great lakes between Canada the waters of the great lakes between Canada the waters of the great and the territorial limits of both countries are determined by the international boundary line, (2) An American vessel fishing without a license upon the Canadian side of the boundary line and condemnation under the provisions of R. S. C. c. 94. The Grace, 4 Ex. C. R. 283.

Three Mile Limit—Licenses—Burden of Proof.)—By s. 3 of R. S. C. c. 94 (an Act respecting Fishing by Foreign Vessels) fishing by a foreign vessel in certain British waters within three marine miles of the coasts of Canada, without a license from the governor in council, renders such vessel liable to forfeiture. Where the Crown alleged in its petition, in an action in rem for condemnation and forfeiture, that a certain vessel had violated the provisions of the Act by fishing in prohibited waters without a license, but offered no evidence in support of such allegation:—Held, that the burden of proving the license to fish was upon the defendant. VIII. LIEN ON SHIP.

1. For Necessaries.

Foreign Ship in Foreign Port—Ceners Domiciled out of Canada, under the provisions of 24 Vict. c, 10, s, 5, may entertain a suit against a foreign ship within its jurisdiction for necessaries supplied to such in a foreign port, not being the place where such ship is registered, and when the owners of the ship are not domiciled in Canada. Cory
v. The Mecca, [1895] P. 95, followed. Under the principles of international law, the courts of every country are competent, and ought not to refuse, to adjudicate upon suits coming before them between foreigners. This doctrine applies with especial force to commercial matters; and is declared in the provisions of art. 14, C. C. P. (L. C.) and arts.
27, 28, and 29, C. (L. C.). Goorty v. The George L. Caldwell, 6 Ex. C. R. 196.

Foreign Ship in Home Port.]—In the absence of a contract express or implied to build, equip, or repair within the meaning of s. 4 of 24 Vict. c. 10 (1mp.), the court cannot entertain a claim for necessaries against a foreign vessel, when such necessaries are supplied in the home port of the ship where the owner resides. Ship Owners' Dry Dock Co. v. The Flora, 6 Ex. C. R. 135.

— Payment.]—A claim for money advanced to a foreign ship to pay for repairs, equipment, and outlitting is a claim for necessaries, but where the work is done in the home port of the ship, the court has no jurisdiction, the same coming within the exception contained in s. 5 of the Admiralty Court Act, 1861 (24 Vict. c. 10 (Imp.)) Payment by the agent of the owner satisfies and discharges any lien in respect to the original claim of workmen or supply men to the extent of such payments. Williams v. The Flora, 6 Ex. C. R. 137.

2. For Negligence.

Personal Injury Done by Ship—durisdiction—Fellow-exchmen—Hospital Expenses.]—An engineer while working on a steamer was injured by the breaking of a stop valve:—Held, that the admiralty court has jurisdiction to try a suit for damages done by a ship to a person. Adequacy of construction is to be determined by the generally approved use at the time of manufacture, and the absence of the best possible construction is not of itself conclusive evidence of negligence. The officers of the ship as well as the men are fellow-workmen, and for the negligence of the one the steamer is not liable to the other. Improving machinery after an accident is not evidence of insufficiency of its former state. A seaman shipped in Canada injured in Canada has no claim for hospital expenses under the Merchauts Shipping Act, 1894. A plaintiff's claim is confined to the particulars indorsed on the summons. Wyman v. The Duart Castle, 6 Ex. C. R. 387.

3. For Other Matters.

Collusive Sale to Defeat Lien.] — A schooner was in tow of a tug, and through the fault of the latter collided with another vessel and was sunk. To defeat the lien for damage for which proceedings had been taken in a foreign court, the owner of the tug allowed the engineer's wages to run in arrear, and thus procured a petition to be filed in the maritime court and the schooner to be sold to a nominal purchaser:—Held, that the proceedings were an abuse of the process of the court. Held, also, that petition was the proper mode of proceeding. The Jerome, 6 C. L. T. 263.

IX. MASTER.

1. Wages and Disbursements.

Damages as Wages Jurisdiction—

Vessel Registered in Ontario] — The restriction of the jurisdiction in the case of master's wages to claims over £50 does not apply to masters of vessels registered in Ontario. Damages for wrongful dismissal may be sued for and recovered as wages. The W. B. Hall, S. C. L. T. Occ. N. 169.

Lien for—Detention.]—The master has no right against the owners to detain the ship or freight for wages, or any disbursements made by him on account of the ship. Land v. Malden, 5 U. C. R. 309.

Necessaries—Mortgage — Priorities—Power to Borone.]—The master of a ship registered at Windsor, Ontario, instituted an action for wages, or damages in the nature of wages, for alleged wrongful dismissal, for disbursements, and liabilities incurred by him for necessaries supplied and repairs done to the ship by persons in Ontario. The owner did not appear, but the claim was opposed by mortgagees of the ship, who intervened. During the time these liabilities were incurred by the master, his means of communication with the owner were limited:—Held, that the master was entitled to a maritime lien on the ship for his wages, and, as the power of communication by the master with the owner was not correspondent with the existing necessity, he was entitled to recover for disbursements properly made by him and for liabilities properly incurred by him on account of the ship. — Necessaries—Mortgage — Priorities — Power to Borrov — Home Pört.] — The object of 56 Vict. c. 24 (D.), intituled An Act to amend "The Inland Waters Seamen's Act," is to give the master of a ship navigating the inland waters of Canada above the harbour of Quebec a lien for disbursements made and liabilities incurred by him on account of the ship in all matters in which, prior to the case of The Sara, 14 App. Cas.
209, it had been held by the courts in England that the master of a ship had such a lien for his disbursements. (2) The master's lien for disbursements and liabilities of this character is preferred to the claim of a mortgagee taking possession after such disbursements had been made and such liabilities incurred. (3)
The rule that the master has authority to borrow money on the ship and to pledge the owner's credit whenever the power of communication is not correspondent with the existing necessity, applies as well to a case where a vessel, subject to the Inland Waters Seamen's Act, is in a home port as where she is in a foreign one. Third National Bank of Petroat v. Symes, 4 Ex. C. R. 400.

maritime lien cannot transfer the same, and the assignee of a claim for master's wages has no right of action in rem against the ship. (2) There is no distinction to be made between the lien existing in favour of common scamen and that in favour of the master of a ship in relation to the power to assign; and it has always been contrary to the policy of maritime law to invest a seaman with any capacity to transfer this remedy against the res to a third person. Rankin v. The Eliza Fisher, 4 Ex. C. R. 461.

Promisery Note—Power to Borrow—Mortgagee.]—The master of a ship sought to enforce a claim in rem for wages as well as for disbursements and liabilities assumed in respect of necessaries supplied the ship, for which he had made a joint note with the owner for 8250 under an agreement that the note should be paid out of the earnings of the ship. This agreement was made without the consent or knowledge of the mortgagee:—Held, that the master had a maritime lien for his wages, as well as for disbursements actually and necessarily made, and liability incurred in connection with the proper working and management of the ship, and that the limit of such liability would be to the value of the vessel and freight. (2) That the master did not exceed his authority in borrowing money on the note for the purposes of the ship, it appearing that the sum so borrowed had been duly and properly expended for the ship. Reide v. The Queen of the Isles, 3 Ex. C. R. 258.

The master of a vessel registered at the port of Winnipeg, and trading upon Lake Winnipeg, had, in the years 1888, 1889, and 1890, no lien upon the vessel for wages earned by him as such master. (2) Even if such a lien were held to exist, there was in the years mentioned no court in the Province of Manitoba in which it could have been enforced; and it could not now be enforced under the Colonial Courts of Admiralty Act, 1890, 53 & 54 Vict. c. 27 (Imp.), or the Admiralty Act, 1891, 54 & 55 Vict, c. 29 (D.), because to give those statutes a retroactive effect in such a case as this would be an interference with the rights of the parties, Bergman v. The Aurora, 3 Ex. C. R. 228.

Right to Wages—Jurisdiction of Court—by Master of Orders.]—When the master of a vessel by his wilful disobelience of the discertance of the owners cause the tessel to be. The maritime court of Ontario hardon was a court of Ontario has jurisdiction over all claims for master's wages, whether the vessel is "within the jurisdiction over all claims for master's wages, whether the vessel is "within the jurisdiction for the government" or not, and this jurisdiction is not ousted by any collateral agreement between the master and the owner, or an agreement for an increased rate of wages depending upon the amount earned by the vessel during the season. Objections to the jurisdiction of the court may be raised at the trial, though not taken in the answer. The Huron, 6 C. L. T. 127.

2. Other Cases.

Bottomry Bond-Essentials of-Broker's Commissions.]-The hypothecation of a ship tommissions. —The hypothecation of a saip is only justified when it is done to secure amounts due for necessary repairs to enable the ship to proceed with her voyage, or for necessaries or provisions required for the same Furthermore, in order to enable the creditor to benefit by the hypothecation, the following elements must be present in the transaction:—(a) The repairs must be performed and the necessaries or provisions supplied on the express condition that the claim is to be secured by a bond; (b) there must be a total absence of personal credit on the part of the owner or master; (c) before pledging the ship, the master should, if it was at all possible to do so, have communicated with the owner; and (d) there must not be sufficient cash or credit available to the master to pay the amount of the indebtedness so incurred. (2) A master gave a bottomry bond on his ship for repairs exceuted some time previous to the voyage he was then prosecuting, and which were done entirely on his personal credit at the time, and upon the distinct understanding that he would not be required to pay for them until his return from another voyage. It also appeared that the master had not communicated with the owners before entering into the bond, although means of communication were open to him; and it was, moreover, shewn that the ship had enough credit at the place where the bond was made to pay the whole amount of the claim :- Held, that the Selection of Crew—Delegation by Owners to Master, I—A muster may, among other duties, delegate to a superintendent or foreman the duty of selecting fellow workmen or commission in such a superintendent or foreman the duty of selecting fellow workmen or commission is limited to the workmen or commission in such a superintendent of the case in selecting a competent nerson for such purpose. In an action against defendants, the owners in an action against the duty of hiring the salions had been delegated by the owners to the captain, a competent person for such purpose, and that he had hired the men in question:—Held, that defendants were not liable. Wilson v. Hume, 30 C. P. 542.

See post XI.

X. MORTGAGE.

Account of Earnings of Ship.]—Semble, that a mortragee of a vessel, until he takes possession or does something equivalent thereto, is not entitled to an account of the money earned by the vessel for freight, &c.; but where, in a suit by the mortragees of a part owner of a vessel, the defendant, the owner of the other shares, admitted that he was sailing the vessel for the joint benefit of himself and the other owners, other than the plaintiffs, though previous to the institution of the suit he had only asked for evidence that the agent of the plaintiff really held the shares for them:—Held, that the fair inference was that the defendant was sailing for whomsoever might be the owners or entitled to the earnings; and that, having had sufficient information to acquaint him with the fact that the plaintiffs had acquired the shares either as mortgagees or owners, he had thus recognized their right to demand an account. Merchants Bank v. Graham, 27 Gr. 524.

Contract for Purchase—Breach—Damages—Deduction.]—In an action against the vendee, upon a contract to accept a deed of conveyance of a vessel, and to give a mortgage security upon it for the purchase money, the declaration, which shewed a delivery of the vessel by the plaintiff to defendant under the contract, alleged as a breach the refusal of defendant to accept such deed; and averred that by means thereof the vessel and its price had been lost to the plaintiff. At the trial the jury gave the plaintiff the whole value of the vessel, and the court refused to disturb the verdict. Phillips v. Merritt, 2 C. P. 513.

Merger-Purchase by Mortgagee at Wages Sale-Action on Covenant-Offer to Reconvey.1 - Declaration on a covenant to pay money. Plea, that the plaintiff sold a vessel to defendants, and that the deed containing the covenant sued on was a mortgage and reconveyance thereof to the plaintiff to secure the purchase money, and that while the plain-tiff was mortgagee, the vessel and all defen-dants' interest therein was sold, and the plaintiff became and is the absolute owner thereof whereby the said mortgage became merged and satisfied. Equitable replication, that the vessel was seized and libelled for wages due to her crew, and condemned and sold in Detroit. in the United States, under the admiralty law there, and the plaintiff purchased her for about $2,300; that she was sold without plaintiff's privity or consent; that by the foreign law the purchaser acquires an absolute and paramount title thereto, and purchased at the sale, as any stranger might, and thereby bought the same absolutely, and not merely the interest or equity of redemption of the the interest or equity of regemption of the defendants therein as in the plea alleged; and that he holds the same by title paramount, and not as a mortgagee having purchased the equity of redemption thereof; and that said mortgage did not thereby become merged and satisfied as alleged :-Held, on demurrer, that defendant was not liable, for that the mortgagee could not sue for the mortgage money. while asserting his right to the property mortgaged wholly independent of any title derived from the mortgagor, and without any right to redeem. Parkinson v. Higgins, 37 U. C. R.

The replication, having been amended, alleged that the vessel, being a British ship, was scized for wages due to the crew, and sold at Detroit, in the United States, solely through defendants' default; that by the law of the United States the wages formed a lien prior to the mortgage, and the plaintift, wholly to the mortgage, and so to take the state of the property of the mortgage and the plaintift, wholly to be offered and was always willing to reconvey and deliver her to the defendants on being paid the mortgage money and the sum paid by him at such sale, which defendants refused to pay; that the plaintiff, having possession of the vessel, insured her, and on her loss by the perils of the sea received the insurance money, which the plaintiff is and always has been ready to apply on the purchase money:

—Held, on demurrer, a good replication, and that the plaintiff, under the circumstances stated, was not precluded from recovering on the covenant. S. C., 40 U. C. R. 274.

Mortgagee — Lien-holder—Priorities.]—
Where the res is not of sufficient value to parthe claim of a lien-holder and a mortgagee in full, the lien-holder is entitled to apply all the proceeds in payment of his claim. Sidley v. The Dominion, Sidley v. The Arctic, 5 Ex C. R, 190.

The mortgagee of a ship who takes possession under his mortgage before the institution of an action in rem for the recovery of a claim which constitutes a maritime lien, does not thereby become a subsequent purchaser, within the meaning of s.-s. 5 of s. 14 of the Maritime Court Act, as against the lien-holder, although the lien may have arisen since the date of the mortgage. (2) In such an action the lien-holder is preferred to the mortgage. Sylvester v. The Gordon Gauthier, 4 Ex. C.

Merchants Bank v. Graham, 27 Gr. 524.

Registration.]-See post XII.

Right to Furniture in Vessel-Removal.]—Plaintiff was mortgage of sixty-four shares in a vessel belonging to defendant, and on the defendant's insolvency was allowed by the creditors and the assignce to take her as she stood at a valuation. Defendant had previously removed from the vessel a piano and several other articles, and had substituted stoves for steam heaters:—Held, that, in the absence of fraud, the plaintiff was concluded by the settlement with the assignce by which he took the vessel as she then stood, and could not recover these articles; and that the mortgagor, being in possession, was entitled to manage the vessel as he thought best, and to remove such articles upon substituting others for them. Semble, that a piano on board of a vessel would not pass to a mortgage under the words "with her boats, guns, ammunition, small arms, and appurtenances." St. John v. Bullivant, 45 U. C. R. 614.

Unregistered Mortgage — Freight and Capa—Exchequer Court.]—A mortgage under an unregistered mortgage of a ship has no right of action in the exchequer court of Canada against freight and cargo; and unless proceedings so taken by him involve some matter in respect of which the court has jurisdiction, they will be set aside. Strong v. Smith, The Atlanta, 5 Ex. C. R. 57.

XI. OWNERS.

1. Co-owners.

Account—Costs.1—In actions for account between co-owners the rule as to the incidence of costs followed by the courts of law in partnership actions may be adopted in a court of admiralty. (2) In an action of account, where there is a deficiency of assets, the court may order the costs of the proceedings to be borne countly by the co-owners. Sidley v. The Dominion, Sidley v. The Arctic, 5 Ex. C. R. 190.

Jurisdiction of Exchequer Court— Indorsement of Writ.]—The exchequer court has jurisdiction to hear and determine actions of account between co-owners of a ship. Semble, in an action by the manufing owner of a ship against his co-owner, that the inthere is any dispute as to the amount incountries of the semant of the court incountries of the court in-

Profits — Venture — Dissent.] — Quere, whether co-owners of a vessel have a share in the profits thereof earned in ventures to which they did not assent, as a majority of the owners can employ the vessel against the will of the minority, who, however, can compel the majority to give a bond to restore the vessel in safety or pay the value of their shares. In such cases the minority do not share the hazard, neither are they entitled to the benefit of the voyage. Merchants Bank v. Graham. 27 Gr. 524.

Running Expenses — Advance Charge— Trust.]—Where certain persons, including G., advanced money to complete the building of a yacht at Cobourg, to sail for prizes at New York and Philadelphia, and serip under seal was executed declaring that G, was to hold the yacht in trust as security for the advances; and G, incurred certain running expenses in taking the yacht to the race:—Held, that G, was entitled to a first charge on the proceeds of the sale of the yacht, for these expenses, as they had been incurred in prosecuting the enterprise for which the trust was created. Burn v. Gifford, S. P. R. 44.

Sale of Vessel by One—Trover,]—One of two joint tenants of a chattel is not liable in trover at the suit of his co-tenant, for a sale of his chattel not in market overt. The plaintiff and one F, being joint owners of a vessel, F, caused it to be registered in his own name, and sold and conveyed it to a purchaser, who disposed of it. The plaintiff brought trover against F, and his partner in business (who appeared to claim no interest in the vessel), and a verdict being found for both defendants against the Judge's charge, the court granted a new trial, costs to abide the event. McNab v, Houland, 11 C. P. 431.

See Baker v. Casey. 19 Gr. 537; Harrison v. Harris, 1 C. P. 235, post X. 3 (e); Weldon v. Vaughan, 5 S. C. R. 35; Rourke v. Union Ins. Co., 23 S. C. R. 344, post 4.

2. Evidence of Ownership,

(a) Actions against Owners.

Joint Contract—Parties—Certificate of Registration.]—Held, that the certificate of registration under 8 Vict, c. 5 is the legal evidence by which ownership can be proved: and upon an action on a joint contract against more than one defendant, the evidence failing in proof as to one, a nonsuit was ordered, the recent decisions under the English C. L. P. Act not permitting the striking out of a defendant's name in such case. Bochus v. Shawe, S. C. P. 391.

Negligence—Oral Evidence—Share List.]
—In an action against defendants, as owners of a steamer, for negligence in the carriage of goods, the captain of the vessel swore that they were shareholders, and that he salied her for them, and on their account:—Held, sufficient proof of ownership, without producing the share list. O'Neill v. Baker, 18 U. C. R. 127.

Price of Goods Furnished—Assignment of Interest—Registration.]—Assumpsit for goods furnished for a vessel. Defendant was called as a witness, and proved that he had subscribed £50 towards a line of freight vessels from Toronto to Quebec, and that he had never had anything to do with this boat, or

It appeared, too, that the vessel was registered:—Held, not sufficient evidence of ownership to charge the defendant. M:itland v. Harrie, 13 U. C. R. 118.

Price of Supplies—Shareholders—Certificate.]—In an action against several defendants for wood furnished to a steamer, the proof of ownership consisted of parol evidence that one defendant had taken stock in the vessel and paid for it, and had represented several stockholders at a meeting held after she had been lost. A certificate was also produced, signed by the collector of customs, stating the names of the registered owners, and the number of their shares:—Held, in sufficient. Quare, whether the certificate was admissible in evidence under 16 Vict. c. 10. Lynch v. Shaw, 17 U. C. R. 241.

Services of Disabled Ship-Parties-Striking out—Oral Evidence—Certificate of Registration.]—Defendants' vessel having got on shore, the plaintiffs' vessel, the Manitoba, took off her passengers and freight and conveyed them to their destination, upon an order to do so signed by the purser of defendants' vessel. In an action for the services so ren-dered, the plaintiffs proved orally that the four defendants sued owned the Manitoba. One of the defendants was then called, and swore that another defendant, W. B., had ceased to have any interest in the Manitoba when the services were rendered, though he was still a registered owner. The name of this defendant was then struck out. No cer-The name of tilicate of registration was produced:—Held, (1) that under the C. L. P. Act, s. 68, the amendment was authorized; and that the name of a defendant improperly joined may be struck out without his consent, and even against his express objection. (2) That the oral evidence of ownership was admissible, and that it was not necessary to produce the certificate; for, assuming that in actions by or against owners of a registered vessel as owners the ownership must be proved by the owners the ownership must be proved by the certificate, yet the mere ownership may not create a liability, and defendants may be liable apart from it under a contract made by their agent, as in this case by the purser. Semble, that the objection was not open to defendants after their proof, without production of the certificate that W. B. had ceased to be owner. Lake Superior Navigation Co. v. Beatty, 34 U. C. R. 201.

(b) Actions by Owners.

Collision—Oral Evidence—Deed.]—In an action for running down a ship it appeared that the plaintiffs were owners of the vessel at the time of the collision, and in receipt of the profits; and that there was a deed of partnership executed by some of the owners, but not by others, which provided for the mode of transfer—Held, sufficient as against a wrongdoer; and that it was not necessary to produce this deed. Sutherland v. Bethune, 10 U. C. R. 388.

Insurance — Mortgagor — Sale under Fi. Fa.]—In an action for insurance upon a vessel under the usual interim receipt:—Held, that the mortgagor of a non-registered vessel had not an interest saleable under a fi.

fa., s. 23 of 8 Vict. c. 5 only declaring that the registered owner, although a mortgagor, shall be considered the owner. Scatcherd v. Equitable Fire Ins. Co., 8 C. P. 415.

Replevin—Transfers.]—In replevin for a stemer:—Held, that, under the various transfers set out in this case, the plaintiff was the legal owner of the vessel. Gildersleeve v. Corby, 15 U. C. R. 150.

3. Liability of Owners.

(a) For Disbursements of Master.

Evidence-Guarantee.]-On a ship under charter being loaded, it was found that a sum of £173 was due the charterer for the difference between the actual freight and that in the charterparty, and, as agreed, a bill for the amount was drawn by the master on the agents of the ship, and also a bill of £753 for disbursements. These bills not being paid at maturity, notice of dishonour was given to V., the managing owner, who sent his son to the solicitors who held the bills for collection, to request that the matter should stand over until the ship arrived at St. John, where V lived. This was acceded to, and V. signed an agreement, in the form of a letter addressed to the solicitors, in which, after asking them to delay proceedings on the draft for £733, he guaranteed, on the vessel's arrival or in case of her loss, payment of the said draft and charges, and also the payment of the draft for £173 and charges. On the vessel's arrival, however, he refused to pay the smaller draft. and to an action on his guarantee he pleaded payment, and that he was induced to sign the same by fraud. By order the pleas of payment, and that he was induced to sign the same by fraud. By order the pleas of payment were struck out. On the trial the son of V, who had seen the solicitors swore that they told him that both bills were for that they told him that both clearly appear disbursements, but it did not clearly appear that he repeated this to his father. V. him-self contradicted his son, and stated that he knew that the smaller bill was for difference in freight, and there was other evidence to the same effect. His counsel sought to get rid of the effect of V.'s evidence by shewing that from age and infirmity he was incapable of remembering the circumstance, but a verdict was given against him:—Held, that the defence of misrepresentation set up was not available to V. under the plea of fraud, and, therefore, was not pleaded; that, if available without plea, it was not proved; that nothing could be gained by ordering another trial, as, V. having died, his evidence would have to be read to the jury, who, in view of his statement that he knew the bill was not for disbursements, could not do otherwise than find a verdict against him. Held, further, that the delay asked for by V. was sufficient consideration to make him liable on his guarantee, even assuming that he would not have been originally liable as owner of the ship. Vaughan v. Richardson, 21 S. C. R. 359.

on the part of the plaintiffs evidence was re-ceived, though objected to, that on other occasions, at different times and places, the screens were open, and cinders had escaped. The en-gineer and firemen on the boat, being after-wards called for the defendants, swore that the screens were closed, and had never on any occasion been left open. The Judge ruled, at the close of the case, that the evidence ob-jected to was admissible, particularly as touch-ing the credit of defendants' witnesses:—Held, that such evidence was inadmissible either to support the plaintiffs' case when it was tendered and received, or for the purpose for which it was afterwards admitted; and the which it was afterwards admitted; and the jury having found for the plaintiffs, a new trial was granted without costs. Edwards v. Ottawa River Navigation Co., 39 U. C. R. Evidence of Negligence—Sufficiency— Proof of Actual Negligence—License.]—Held, leaving the screens of the steamer open; and that the evidence in this case was sufficient to go to a jury to establish negligence in the management of the defendant's steamboat. management of the defendant's steamboat.

The owner of a steamboat navigating the inland waters of Ontario, without legislative authority, is liable for loss occasioned to propauthority, is hable for loss occasioned to property by fire communicated thereto by the steamer, without any proof of actual negligence. The fact that a steamboat has been granted a license by the inspector under the authority of the Act for the Inspection of Steamboats, 31 Vict. c. 65 (D.), does not remove, neither was it intended to remove, the common law liability of the owner of such steamboat to a person whose property is injured. Hilliard v. Thurston, 9 A. R. 514.

See Brown v. McRae, 17 O. R. 712; Cram v. Ryan, 24 O. R. 500, 25 O. R. 524.

(c) For Negligence.

Evidence-Onus of Proof.]-In an action to recover damages for death caused by alleged negligence, the onus is on the plaintiff to prove not only that the defendant was guilty of actionable negligence, but also, either directly or by reasonable inference, that such negligence was the cause of the death. Where, therefore, a man employed on the defendant's tug was drowned, and it was shewn that wood was piled upon the tug's deck in such a way as to make it dangerous to pass along the deck, but it was also shewn that there was a safe passageway on a scow lashed to the tug. and there was no evidence whatever as to the cause of the accident, the action was dismissed. Young v. Owen Sound Dredge Co., 27 A. R. 649.

Injury to By-stander-New Trial.]-In an action for negligence against the owners of a steamboat, for injuries sustained by the plaintiff in consequence of one of the fenders having broke loose from the steamboat while in the act of leaving a wharf, and striking and injuring the plaintiff, who was standing on the wharf; and it appearing that the plaintiff had received warning to stand clear of the formers, and that a person with ordinary care inight have escaped, the court set aside a verdet for plaintiff, and granted a new trial on payment of costs. Grieve v. Ontario Steunboat Co., 4 C. P. 387.

(d) For Obstruction to Navigation,

Information—Negligence—Expenses of Removal—Lighting.]—Where a ship had become a wreck and, owing to her position, constituted an obstruction to navigation, court held that it was not necessary in an information against the owners for the re-covery of moneys paid out by the Crown under the provisions of 37 Vict. c. 29 and 43 Vict. c, 30 for removing the obstruction, to allege negligence or wrongdoing against the owners in relation to the existence of such obstruction. (2) Under the Acts above men-tioned it is only the owner of the ship or tioned it is only the owner of the snip or thing at the time of its removal by the Crown who is responsible for the payment of the expenses of such removal. (3) The right of the Crown to charge the owner with the expenses of lighting a wrecked ship during the time it constitutes an obstruction was first given by 49 Vict. c. 36, and such expenses could not be recovered under 37 Vict. c. 29 or 43 Vict. c. 30. The Queen v. Mississippi and Dominion Steamship Co., 4 Ex. C. R.

(e) For Repairs.

Joint Owners.]-Where the plaintiff, at the request of A., the managing owner of a vessel, did certain repairs on the vessel, at vessel, and certain repairs on the vessel, at the time not knowing that she was owned by A. jointly with others:—Held, that all the owners were jointly liable to plaintiff. *Har-*rison v. Harris, 1 C. P. 235.

Part Owners-Contribution, 1-Part owners of a ship are tenants in common of the ship, and partners in the earnings only. part owner of a ship having taken possession of it, and expended in repairs more than the ship's earnings :- Held, that the other part owner was not bound to contribute to the pay ment of the difference. Baker v. Casey, 19 Gr. 537.

(f) For Supplies.

Order Given by Master. |-- Where a steamboat was mortgaged and in possession of the mortgagees, who navigated her for their own benefit to secure their advances, and she was tortiously taken possession of by the cap-tain, who received the profits arising from her, for his own use:—Held, that the mortgagor was not liable for goods furnished for gagor was not hable for goods furnished to the vessel while in the tortious possession of the captain. Fraser v. Flint, 4 O. S. 12. See, also, Wilkes v. Flint, 4 O. S. 19.

The master has no right against the owners to detain the ship or freight for wages paid, or any disbursements made by him on account of supplies for the ship. Land v. Malden, 5 U. C. R. 309.

In an action against defendant for goods supplied by plaintiffs to certain vessels, at the request of the masters thereof, there was the Fequest of the masters target in overdence of defendant having employed the masters, and, though the vessels appeared to have been transferred to defendant before the goods were supplied, the transfers were not registered until after, nor was any express contract with defendant proved :- Held, that defendant was not liable. Hawn v. Roche, 27 C. P. 142.

Order Given by Other Persons.]—The mere owner of a chartered boat is not liable for supplies furnished to the person chartering, or at the request of his agents, unless he is so liable by express agreement between himself and the charterer. Lyman v. Bank of Upper Canada, 8 U. C. R. 354.

Action for provisions furnished by plaintiffs to steamboats belonging to and run by defendants. It appeared that the steward of each boat was bound by contract with defendants to furnish these supplies, but there was contradictory evidence as to the plaintiffs' knowledge of this arrangement, and as to the eincunstances under which the goods were ordered and furnished. The jury having found for the plaintiffs:—Held, that upon the evidence set out in the case, a new trial was properly granted in the county court. (2) That no absolute rule can be laid down as to the liability of ship owners in such matters, but each case must depend on its own facts; and that here the jury should be asked, upon all the evidence, and considering the mature of the business, to whom was the credit given; were the persons ordering the supplies the defendants' agents for that purpose within the ordinary rules as to principal and agent, and was the natural inference of the defendants' liability sufficiently rebutted by the plaintiffs' knowledge of the true arrangement? Cloy v. Jacques, 27 U. C. R. 88.

In an action brought against the registered owners of a certain vessel for the value of goods supplied before they became such owners, not on the order of the defendants, but on the order of a third person, between whom and the defendants no relation of agency was proved:—Held, that the plaintiff could not recover. Held, also, that it was open to the defendants to shew that their real interest was that of mortgagees, though ostensibly registered owners. The fact that the vessel got the benefit of the supplies and necessaries did not make the registered owner liable. Nelson v. Wigle, 8 O. R. 82.

4. Ship's Husband.

Contract—Percentage of Earnings—Performance.]—In an action upon an alleged agreement by defendants, that if the plaintiff would purchase for them a certain vessel, and would perform the duties of a ship's husband in respect of her, they would pay him five per cent, on her gross earnings up to the time of the last voyage for which he should as such ship's husband prepare her:—Held, that, upon the evidence, the plaintiff's contract was not shewn to have been performed, and the jury having found in his favour a new trial was granted. Hall v. Duncan, 22 U. C. R. 602.

Conversion of Vessel—Joint Owners—Marine Insurance—Abandoment—Salavage.]
—A sale by one joint owner of property does not amount, as against his co-owner, to a conversion, unless the property is destroyed by such sale, or the co-owner is deprived of all beneficial interest. A vessel, partly insured, was wrecked, and the ship's husband abandomed her to the underwriters, who sold her and her outfit to one K. The sale was afterwards abandomed, and the underwriters notified the ship's husband that she was not a total loss, and requested him to take possession. He paid no attention to the notice, and the vessel was libelled by K. for salvage, and sold under decree of the court. The uninsured owner brought an action against the under-writers for conversion of her interest:—Held, that the ship's husband was agent of the uninsured owner in respect of the vessel, and his conduct precluded her from bringing the action; that he might have taken possession before the vessel was libelled; and that the uninsured owner was not deprived of her interest by any action of the underwriters, but by the decree of the court under which the vessel was sold for salvage. Rourke v. Union Insurance Co., 23 S. C. R. 344.

XII. REGISTRATION.

[8 Vict. c. 5, providing for the registration of inland vessels, was consolidated by C. S. C. c. 41, which was repealed by 36 Vict. c. 128 (D.); R. S. C. c. 72.]

1. Foreign Vessels.

Right to Register. |- Under the Imperial statute 12 & 13 Viet. c. 29, and previous statutes, foreign-built ships navigating our inland waters were entitled to be registered here. Smith v. Brown, 14 U. C. R. 9.

But under our statute 8 Vict. c. 5, and Imperial statute 17 & 18 Vict. c. 104, they cannot be. Smith v. Jones, 5 C. P. 425.

2. Recital of Certificate.

Necessity for — Bond for Transfer.] — Semble, that a bond given by third parties for the assignment of a vessel, but which is not intended to operate as an assignment, need not recite the certificate. Corby v. Cotton, 3 L. J. 50.

ss. 13, 23, 24 (C.), the certificate of registry of ownership must be recited in a transfer by way of mortgage or security (with power of sale in case of default), as well as upon an absolute or immediate sale; and if omitted the mortgage will be void. Watkins v. Corbett, 6 U. C. R. 587.

— Sale under Execution.]—It is not necessary that the transfer of a vessel by the sheriff upon a sale under execution should be registered or recite the certificate of ownership. Smith v. Brown, 14 U. C. R. 9; Smith v. Jones, 5 C. P. 425.

Sufficiency of — Mortgage — Identity of Vessel, —The following recital in an indenture of sale by way of mortgage of a vessel; The schooner —James Coleman of Dundas, the schooner —James Coleman of Dundas, and the sale of the statute in the sale of the statute in the sale of the statute in the sale of the sale of the sale with the sale with the sale vessel was registered at the custom bouse in the port of Hamilton the 8th day of April, 1847, and is of the burther of 232.70, and which sale certificate is under the hand of John Davidson, the collector in and for the said port of Hamilton, as on reference to the said certificate will fully appear: —Held, not a sufficient compliance with 8 Viet.

c. 5, ss. 2, 7, 13, and that therefore the indenture was void. The recital was held insufficient in giving the tonnage alone of the vessel, which could not be said, within the terms of s. 13, to be such a description of the vessel as to shew the identity of the vessel transferred with that described in the certificate of registry. Sherwood v. Coleman, 6 U. C. R. 614.

3. Other Cases.

Application of Statutes — Inland Weiters, —The Imperial Act 17 & 18 Vict. c. 104 does not repeal altogether 8 Vict. c. 5, but applies only to vessels proceeding to sea, and our statute remains in force as to all vessels navigating exclusively our inland waters. Scott v. Carveth, 20 U. C. R. 430.

Certificate—Indorsement on—Mortgage.]

—This court cannot relieve against the omission of a mortgage of a registered vessel, to have the proper indorsement of such mortgage made on the certificate of ownership. Coleman v. Sherwood, 2 Gr., 652.

Requisites.]—A certificate of ownership under S Vict, c. 5, s. 2, is not invalid because the additions of the owners are omitted, the statute on that point being directory only. Gildersteeve v. Corby, 15 U. C. R. 150.

Effect of not Registering — Action by Transferees.] — Plaintiffs, being registered owners of a vessel, transferred her by bill of sale, which the vendee neglected to register; and in an action by plaintiffs for injury, not of a mere temporary character, sustained by the vessel, the vendee came forward as a witness on their behalf;—Held, that the defendant could not set up the vendee's right to defeat the action, the plaintiffs under the Ship Registry Act still appearing as legal owners. Wilson v. Cameron, 22 C. P. 198.

Effect of not Registering—Promissory Notes—Title.)—Where an action was brought for refusing to sign certain notes, the sale and delivery to defendants of shares in a schooner being alleged as the consideration for the promise; and it appeared that the plaintiff had surrendered his interest to defendants, and that they had continued in exclusive possession of the vessel, but that no assignment had been made as the statute directs, and no transfers indorsed on the registry, nor any new certificate of ownership granted, the court ordered a nonsuit. But if defendants had given their notes, they could not have resisted payment on the ground that they had not received a valid title. Orser v. Mounteny, 9 U. C. R. 382.

Mortgagee—Rights of.]—Held, that the plaintiff, under the facts, was not prevented from asserting his right as mortgagee by anything in the Ship Registry Act, 8 Vict. c. 5. Cayley v. McDonell, 8 U. C. R. 454.

Necessity for Registration—Builder— Property Possing, 1—Held, that a builder of a ship is not compelled to have her registered before he can make a valid sale. Held, that a written instrument is not requisite to pass property in a vessel which need not be registered under the Act. Chisholm v. Potter, 11 C. P. 165. Place of Registration.]—Held, that under s. 4 some of the owners, living at Bath, might properly register the vessel at Kingston. Gildersleeve v. Corby, 15 U. C. R. 150.

Proof of Ownership by Registration.]

XIII. SALE AND TRANSFER.

Contract for Purchase — Specific Performance—Change in Position.] — A steam vessel owned by the members of a limited partnership was registered in the name of the general partner. During his absence from this country the special partners agreed for the sale of the vessel, and gave their bond conditioned to obtain a good and sufficient transfer thereof to the purchasers, within three months, and placed the purchasers in possession. Two years afterwards the vessel was sold under execution issued against the general partner, and was taken out of the possession of the purchasers by a writ of replevin, the purchasers giving notice of these proceedings to the special partners, who took no steps to prevent the removal of the vessel: and the purchasers thereupon proceeded at law against the obligors in the bond, and recovered judgment against them, after which they filed a bill for specific performance of the contract, and an injunction to stay proceedings under the judgment. The court, taking into consideration the great changes which had taken place in the position of the parties, and the depreciation in value of the steamer, refused specific performance, and dismissed the bill with costs. Cotton v. Corby, 7 Gr. 50, 8 Gr. 98.

Covenant against Other Sales—Notice to Purchaser—Injunction.]—The owner of several steamers, who was carrying on business as a forwarder, sold one of them to another forwarding firm, and upon the sale covenanted that he would not directly or indirectly have any interest in any vessel navigating the St. Lawrence below Ogdensburgh at any time thereafter; and also that he would not dispose of two other steamers then owned by him to any person or persons for the purpose of navigating the St. Lawrence below Ogdensburgh. The court held the purchasers from this firm, with knowledge of the covenant, bound by the covenant entered into by the original proprietors, and granted an injunction restraining them from navigating the river below Ogdensburgh with those vessels. Holcomb v. Nixon, 5 Gr. 278, 373.

Incumbrances—Covenant against—Action on — Effect of Notice to Vendee of Incumbrance—Equitable Defence—Payment of Purchase Money.]—See McDonell v. Thompson, 16 U. C. R. 154.

Lien for Purchase Money.]—The part owner of a British registered ship sold his shares therein on credit to defendant D., who having made default in payment of the balance of purchase money, an execution at law was obtained therefor, under which their interest in the vessel was sold by the sheriff to C., another defendant, and a bill was thereupon filed by the vendor claiming a lien on the vessel for unpaid purchase money. A demurrer thereto for want of equity was allowed. Baker v. Dencey, 15 Gr. 668.

Non-neceptance—Tender—Incumbrances—Pleading).—Special assumpsit for not accepting a schooner, which the plaintiff agreed to sell to defendant, together with the apparel, tackle, furniture, &c., and to convey free from all incumbrances, for a stated price. Upon special demurrer the declaration was held bad for not alleging that the conveyance tendered embraced the "apparel, tackle, and furniture," and because it was not inconsistent with all the avernments that the "apparel, tackle, and furniture" might not be free from incumbrances. Phillips v, Merritt, 2 C. P. 299.

Non-conveyance-Incumbrance - Application of Payments — Waiver — Pleading — Damages.] — Declaration on a bond conditioned to convey to the plaintiffs within three months a certain steamboat, and for quiet possession of the same from the making of the bond, assigning as breaches: (1) not convey-ing within three months: (2) an eviction by ing within three months; (2) an eviction by one O. S. G. under a mortgage derived from defendants. Plea, to the first breach, that said steamboat was mortgaged to J. H. C. at the time of the execution of the bond, for the same amount as plaintiffs had agreed to pay defendants, and that defendants had handed him the notes given by plaintiffs for the price; and the said J. H. C. held the mortgage only as security for due payment thereof, and plaintiffs thereupon discharged defendants from procuring such conveyance. The plea to the second breach, after stating a similar agreement, alleged a transfer of the mortgage from J. H. C. to O. S. G., and that the plaintiffs made default in their agreement by non-payment of one of the notes, whereupon O. G, took possession, claiming an equitable interest by virtue of said agreement with defendant and his assignees. Both pleas held bad on demurrer, the plaintiffs engaging to apply their payments towards an incumbrance not amounting to a waiver of their right to a conveyance from the vendors. Corby v. Cotton, 7 C. P. 209.

The question on a motion was (on the same facts and pleadings as above) whether the plaintiffs were entitled to the damages as assessed by the jury (£5,675), the defendants contending that the measure of damages should have been the amount necessary to redeem the steamboat. The court held that the damages were properly assessed. S. C., ib. 392.

Possession — Unpaid Purchase Money— Retaking—Removal of Machinery,—On an agreement for the sale of a steamboat, the vendor delivered possession to the vendee, and covenanted to transfer the vessel with her machinery and furniture to the purchaser absolutely, upon payment of the balance of purchase money by instalments; and on default in payment of any portion the vendor should be at liberty to resume possession of the vessel, with her machinery and furniture. The court restrained the purchaser from removing the machinery from the vessel, so long as any part of the money remained unpaid. Laughton v. Thompson, 7 Gr. 30.

Unregistered Lien — Notice.] — While under s. 57 of the Merchant Shipping Act.

1894, 57 & 58 Vict. c. 60 (Imp.), unregistered equitable interests can be enforced as between the parties immediately affected, the effect of s. 56 is that a purchaser from the registered owner takes a title free from unregistered equitable interests even though he has notice of them. Luffman v. Luffman 25 A. R. 48.

Warranty - Oral Evidence-Failure of Consideration — Surety.] — Assumpsit on a note made by defendant jointly with A. and B. Plea, that the note was given for the purchase money of a schooner sold by plaintiff to A. and B., defendant being their surety; that the plaintiff on such sale guaranteed the vessel to be sound, but she was not sound, but unsafe and rotten, as the plaintiff well knew, and the said A. and B., immediately after the sale, discovered the unsoundness, returned the vessel to plaintiff, and repudiated the sale. At the trial the written instrument was produced, from which it appeared that the sale was to defendant alone, and no such guarantee as alleged was contained in it. It was proved that A. and B., after keeping the vessel a fortnight, tendered her back to the plaintiff, but she was refused, and they went on using her:-Held, that oral evidence of the warranty stated in the plea was not admissible, Semble, that the facts did not shew a total failure of consideration, and therefore formed no defence. Semble, also, that the defendant could not shew on the face of the writing produced that the sale was to A. and B., and not to himself. Henderson v. Cotter, 15 U. C. R.

Warranty as to Class—Breach—Dumages.1—The defendants bought a vessel from the plaintiff, who, as the jury found, warranted her to class B. 1, and promised to get her insured in a company of which he was agent, for $1,400. She would not class as B. 1, and no insurance could be effected under that class; but defendants sailed her uninsured until she foundered and was totally lost. In an action for the purchase money:—Held, that the measure of damages to which defendants were entitled for breach of the warranty was not the $1,400 for which she might have been insured, but the sum which it would have taken to make her class B. 1, which it was for defendants to shew. La Roche v. O'Hagan, 10. R. 300.

XIV. SALVAGE, AVERAGE, AND CONTRIBUTION.

1. Contribution to Expenses.

(a) Occasioned by Stranding.

Lien—Pleading.]—Where a vessel carrying goods is stranded and lost by stress of weather, the master may, to save the cargo, employ another vessel to take it to the place of destination, and the owners of such goods will be liable for any extraordinary expense so incurred, in addition to the freight. Declaration against defendants as common carriers, charging that the plaintiff delivered to them goods, to be carried from Montreal to Cobourg, and there delivered to the plaintiff within a reasonable time, dangers of navigation excepted, and that they did not so safely carry or deliver said goods, although no dangers of navigation prevented, but through their negligence the same were wholly lost. It appeared that the goods were shipped at Montreal, with the goods of several other persons, on board defendants' vessel, which, without any negligence of the master, was driven on shore between kingston and Toronto, and became a total loss. The master, in order to save the goods, procurred another vessel, by which they were taken to Cobourg; and the defendants there, in addition to the freight agreed on, claimed from the plaintiff his share, upon an average, according to the value of the goods of the several freighters which were saved, of the charge of transporting his goods from the wreck to Cobourg. The plaintiff paid the charge for freight only, but refused to pay the extra claim or execute an average bond, and defendants detaining the goods, he brought this action:—Held, that the plaintiff was liable to such charge, and that defendants had a lien upon the goods for it. Rogers v. Hooker, 15 t. C. R. 63.

Towage.]—Where a vessel was dangerously stranded on our lakes by accident arising from the perils of navigation, and without fault of the master:—Held, that the expense incurred by the master in hiring a steamer to hand her off, and by which he was enabled to proceed to his destination, gave a claim for contribution against the owners of the cargo, upon general average. Grover v. Bullock, 5 U. C. R. 297.

Voluntary Stranding.]—The owners of a vessel have no right to average on account of expenses occasioned by stranding, when the stranding was not voluntary; and the mere steering a vessel to a less dangerous place for stranding, when she is inevitably driving to the shore, is not a voluntary stranding. Gibb v. McDonell, 7 U. C. R. 356.

Where a vessel was disabled by a gale near a lee shore, so that she could not work off, and after the anchors had dragged until she began to pound on the bottom, the master, with the view not of saving the cargo, but of enabling the crew to escape, headed her round to the shore, where she was stranded and abandoned by the crew, and the defendant, the owner of the cargo, afterwards got it out at his own expense:—Held, that the stranding was not voluntary, and that the cargo was not liable to general average. Dancey v. Burns, 31 C. P. 313.

Wages and Maintenance of Crew—Repairs.]—Held, that the plaintiff was not entitled to recover from the defendants for the wages and provisions of the crew while the vessel was stranded, and in endeavouring to get her off the beach, even though the damage done to the vessel was itself a ground for general average. Held, also, that defendants were liable for the value of the repairs rendered necessary by the stranding, whether it was a loss by perils of the sea. Held, also, that the plaintiff was entitled to recover from defendants the proportion charged against the cargo and freight, and was not himself obliged to collect the share, if any, of general average stated against the owners of the cargo. Steinland, Royal Canadian Ints. Co., 42 U. C. R.

See McCart v. Young, 1 L. J. 76; Phanix Ins. Co. v. Anchor Ins. Co., 4 O. R. 524; Western Assurance Co. v. Ontario Coal Co., 19 O. R. 462, 20 O. R. 295, 19 A. R. 41, 21 S. C. R. 383, (b) Other Expenses.

Rescue of Cargo and Hull-Lien.]-The plaintiffs in October, 1873, shipped 92 tons of pig iron on the defendant's vessel at Montreal, to be carried to Hamilton. She accidentally caught fire in the canal on her voyage and was destroyed, and the iron sank, The vessel was insured, but not the cargo, and the inspector of the insurance company, after consultations with the captain, made a contract for raising the hull, machinery, and cargo. The iron was piled up at the lock ready for shipping in the spring, and was then sent on, but defendant claimed a lien upon it for a portion of the expenses incurred in raising the hull and engine :- Held, that there was no such lien; that the services rendered could not be considered as in the nature of salvage services or general average, the iron not being in danger of destruction or loss; and that the master could not be considered as the plaintiffs' agent to make the contract, for there was no difficulty in communicating with the plainiffs and getting their instructions, and such implied agency only arises in case of necessity, Gurney v. MacKay, 37 U. C. R. 324.

Towage — Lien.] — Defendant's schooner was engaged to carry a cargo of timber from Spanish River to Chippewa. She left Spauish River with the timber on the 15th October, and anchored on that day at Bayfeld Sound, leaking badly, where she remained till the 10th November, and was then towed by a tug to Sarnia. There she got a steam pump, and with it on board was towed to the Welland canal, where she arrived on the 25th November, and being frozen up the cargo had to be unloaded. Defendant refused to give up the lumber unless, in addition to the freight, the plaintiff would pay his share for general average of: (1) £22 per she will be the plaintiff would pay his share for general average of: (1) £22 per she will be shown to be shown

2. Jettison.

Deck Cargo—Average.].—Where the usage is proved to carry a deck cargo, if that cargo be thrown overboard in a storm to lighten the vessel, the owner of the vessel is liable for average to the owner of the deck cargo, without proving the value of the cargo in the hold, and taking it into account. Grouselle v. Ferrie 6 O 8 454

See Stephens v. McDonell, M. T. 6 Vict., R. & J. Dig. 3580; Merritt v. Ives, M. T. 4 Vict., R. & J. Dig. 3586.

Contribution.]—The owners of goods stored under the deck, are not liable to contribute by way of general average to the loss of goods laden on deck and thrown overboard from necessity in a storm, and with the hope of saving the ship and cargo. Semble, that the ship owner would, in such a case, be liable to general average. Gibb v. McDonell, 7 U. C. R. 356.

— Contribution—Insurers.]—A marine policy upon a vessel described as a "steam barge" was warranted by the assured "to be free from any contribution for loss by jettison of property laden on deck of any sail vessel or barge." There was nothing else in the policy as to the vessel insured carrying a deck load:—Held, that the "barge" mentioned in the policy did not mean the insured vessel, nor did it refer to a steam barge. The vessel went ashore on Lake Huron, and was beached, after throwing out part of the cargo, as the only means, in the judgment of the captain, of saving all concerned:—Held, that the plaintiff was entitled to recover for the deck load as for general average, it not being excluded by the condition above mentioned, and there being evidence of a custom on the lakes for steamers to carry such loads, and to deal with them as subject to general average. Steinhoff v. Royal Canadian Ins. Co., 42 U. C. R. 307.

Contribution — Insurers — Bill of Ladius, 1—Defendants insured the plaintiffs' vessel by a policy containing nothing as to deck loads. A hold full and deck load of coad was shipped upon her at Cleveland for Toronto, by a bill of lading, which provided "all property on deck at risk of owners." She went ashore during the voyage, and the coal upon deck was thrown overboard in order to get her off and save the vessel and the rest of the cargo, which was threfby accomplished. It was admitted that the usage at the date of the policy, as well as at the time of the loss, was for vessels trading between Toronto and Cleveland to carry deck loads:—Held, looking at the special terms of the bill of lading, that the defendants were not liable to contribute to their share of the loss. Semble, however, that but for the bill of lading the defendants would be liable, for that the usage to carry deck loads being admitted, the jettison of such load, in the absence of any usage to the contrary, must be contributed for in general average. Spooner v, Western Assurance Co., 38 C. C. R. 62.

3. Lien for Salvage Services.

Crew — Agent—Release—Bar to Action.]
—A crew of a fishing schooner had performed certain salvage services in respect of a derelict ship, and gave the following power of attorney respecting the claim for such services to the agent of the owner of the schooner: "We, the undersigned, being all the crew of the schooner Iolanthe at the time said schooner rendered salvage services to the barque Quebec, do hereby irrevocably constitute and appoint Joseph O. Proctor our true and lawful attorney, with power of substitution, for us and in our name and behalf as crew of the said schooner, to bring suit or otherwise settle and adjust any claim which we may have for salvage services rendered to the barque Quebec recently towed into the port of Halfax. Nova Scotia, by said schooner Iolanthe; hereby granting unto our said attorney full power and authority to act in and concerning the premises as fully and effectually as we might do if personally present, and also power at his discretion to constitute and appoint, from time tq time, as occasion may require, one or more agents under him, or to substitute an attorney for us in his place, and the authority of all such agents or attorneys at pleasure to revoke:"—Held, that this instrument did not authorize the agent to receive the salvage payable to the crew or to release their lien upon the ship in respect of which the salvage services were performed. (2) That payment of a sum agreed upon between the owners of such ship and the agent, and the latter's receipt therefor, did not bar salvers from maintaining an action for their services. The Quebec, 3 Ex. C. R. 33.

Limitation of Action-Purchaser-Notice of Claim.]—An action in rem against a tug was brought claiming $800 for salvage under an alleged agreement made in the Province of Ontario with the master of the tug at the time the salvage services were rendered. Subsequently, but before action was brought, the tug was sold by the Quebec Bank, under a mortgage held by the bank, to a purchaser, who it was alleged had notice of the claim. The purchaser paid part cash and gave a mortgage on the vessel to the bank for the balance which remained unpaid. The action was not begun until after ninety days from the time when the alleged claim accrued. purchaser claimed in his defence the benefit of s. 14, s.-s. 5, of the Maritime Court Act, R. S. C. c. 137, re-enacted by s. 23, s.-s. 4, of the Admiralty Act, 1891, 54 & 55 Vict. c. 29, as a bar to plaintiff's claim:—Held, that, as against a bona fide purchaser, the plaintiff's claim (if any) was barred, and the lien on the vessel (if any) destroyed, even though the purchaser had actual notice of the claim at the time of or before his purchase. The C. J. Munro and The Home Rule, 4 Ex. C. R. 146.

Right of Charterers — Set-off—Costs.]
—A wreeking company chartered a steam tug from the owners, who insured themselves for all insurable risks over five per cent, the company to make good all repairs, losses, and damages not insurable under the usual policy, and all injuries, &c., up to five per cent. of the estimated value of the vessel. Through the negligence of the company's servants the vessel was sunk, and the company raised her:— Held, that they were entitled to a lien for the salvage; but, the company being largely indebted to the owners, no costs were given.
Held, also, that there is no set-off against a maritime lien except in the case of master's wages under the Merchant Shipping Act, 1854.
The Conqueror, 5 C. L. T. 332.

4. Nature of Salvage Services.

Blasting — Stranded Ship—Court.]—A ship was stranded on a rocky shore with a point of rock protruding through her hull. H. was employed to blast it, away and so free the ship:—Held, that this was not a salvage service. The Costa Rica, 3 Ex. C. R. 23.

th a H. e the serTowage — Other Services.] — A stranded ressel, abandoned by the owners to the underwriters and sold by them, was saved, and was brought by the purchasers to a shipwright for repairs:—Held, that the towage of the vessel from the place where stranded to the dry dock was a salvage service. (2) Claim for personal services not performed on vessel:—Held, not a salvage service. (3) Claim for personal services not performed on vessel:—Held, not a salvage service, (4) Claim for services of tug in an unsuccessful attempt to remove vessel:—Held, not a salvage service, Salvage is a reward for benefits actually conferred. The Gleniffer, 3 Ex. C. R. 53.

Towage and Salvage—Distinction.]—In a collision between a steemer and a sailing vessel, the latter immediately became water-logged and helpless, and in a position where, though safe for the moment, she might very shortly have been in great danger:—Held, that to rescue her was a salvage and not merely a towage service. The Zambesi and The Fanny Dutard, 3 Ex. C. R. 67.

Salvage means rescue from threatened loss No danger, no salvage. If the ship be in danger, then the rescuers earn a sal-vage reward, which, on the grounds of public policy, is to be liberal, but yet varies according to the imminence of the danger to the ship on the one hand, and the skill and enterprise and danger of the salvors on the other hand. (2) A small packet steamer, while per-forming one of her regular trips between certain points in thick weather, discovered a large steamship lying at anchor in such a position as to be in imminent danger of becoming a total loss. The latter signalled the former, and asked to be towed into port. This the packet steamer refused to do, wishing to pro-secute her voyage, but agreed to tow the ship out of her dangerous position to the open sea. and then give her captain directions to enable him to reach his port of destination. This offer was accepted and acted upon. In cononer was accepted and acted upon. In conducting the ship to the open sea the packet steamer performed the services both of a pilot and a tug, and shewed skill and enterprise, and incurred appreciable risk, while so engaged:—Held, a salvage and not a mere townge service. Canadian Pacific Navigation Co. v. The C. P. Sargent, 3 Ex. C. R. 332.

Yacht Dragging Anchor in Public Harbour—Jurisdiction of Exchequer Court—Amount in Dispute.]—A yacht, with no one on board of her, broke loose from anchorage in a public harbour during a storm, and was boarded by men from the shore when she was in a position of peril, and by their skill and prudence rescued from danger: — Held, that they were entitled to salvage. The plaintiffs claimed the sum of $100 for their services:—Held, that, inasmuch as the right of salvage was disputed, the provisions of s. 44 (a) of R. S. C. c. SI did not apply, and that the court had jurisdiction in respect of the action. Lakey v. The Manle Leaf, 6 Ex. C. R. 173.

See Hine v. The Thomas J. Scully, 6 Ex. C. R. 318, post XVIII.

5. Remuneration for Salvage Services.

Collision—Both Ships at Fault.]—Where two vessels in collision are both at fault, and one vessel renders salvage services to the other, when the value of such services is determined, it should be divided and the salvaged vessel only be required to pay one-half of the amount. The Zambesi and The Fanny Dutard, 3 Ex. C. R. 67.

Rule of Admiralty Court—Costs.]—
Hall, following the usual rule, that not more than a moiety of the value of the res at the time when saved should be awarded to salvors, there being no exceptional feature except the small value of the res. Costs of salvors awarded out of other moiety. Costs of arrest and sale and of bringing fund into court paid in priority to claims out of fund, in proportion to the value of the res at the time of delivery to a dry dock company, and balance of the proceeds of sale, which was not sufficient to pay claim of possessory lien holder. The Gleniffer, 3 Ex. C. R. 57.

Wrecking Company-Contract.]-A vessel being stranded on the northern shore of lake Erie, the master telegraphed to the manager of a wrecking company at Detroit for tugs and wrecking apparatus, to which the manager answered agreeing to furnish the They were accordingly sent and the vessel rescued and saved. The plaintiffs claimed to recover an amount exceeding the value of the vessel, made up of per diem charges for the tugs and apparatus:—Held, that in actions in the high court, salvors, in the absence of a specific or express agreement to the contrary, must be taken to render their services under and subject to the rule of the admiralty court limiting the maximum amount of salvage to a moiety of the value of the saved vessel, and cargo, if any, which rule is equally applicable to wrecking companies as to ordinary vessel owners; that the agreement must define a specific amount as to the salvage to be paid, or a rule whereby it may be determined; and that there was no agreement here, but merely a request to perform the services. Semble, that the master of a vessel cannot by express agreement bind the owners to pay salvage beyond the value of the vessel. International Wrecking and Transportation Co. v. Lobb, 11 O. R. 408.

Special Contract — Enforcement.] — Where an agreement for salvage services had been entered into between the master of a stranded ship and the master of a tug, unless it appears that the latter had taken advantage of the distressed condition of the stranded ship to make an extortionate demand, the court will enforce such agreement and not decree a quantum meruit. (2) In such a case the agreement is valid primā facie, and the onus is upon the defendant to shew that the price stipulated for was unjust and exorbitant, and the promise to pay it extorted under unfair circumstances. Connolly v. The Dracona, 5 Ex. C. R. 1466.

If an agreement for salvage service was just and reasonable when entered into, it will not be disregarded because something has happened subsequently, or some contingency, of which one party or the other has taken the risk, has occurred to make it more onerous on one or the other than was anticipated when it was entered into. The Stratgarry, 11895 | P. 264, referred to. The Dracona v. Connolly, 5 Ex. C. R. 207.

Petition of Right.]—A steamship belonging to the Dominion government went ashore on the Island of Anticosti, and suppliants rendered assistance with their wrecking steamer in getting her afloat. The service rendered consisted in carrying out one of the stranded steamship's anchors, and in taking a hawser and pulling on it until she came off For carrying out the anchor it was admitted that the suppliants had bargained for com-pensation at the rate of $50 an hour, but whether the bargain included the other part of the service rendered or not was in dis-pute. The service was continuous—no circumstances of sudden risk or danger having arisen to render one part of the work more difficult or dangerous than the other :- Held, that the rate of compensation admittedly agreed upon in respect of carrying out the anchor must, under the circumstances, be taken as affording a fair means of compensation for the entire service. (2) A petition sation for the chure service. (2) A periodic of right will not lie for salvage services rendered to a steamship belonging to the Dominion government. Couette v. The Queen, 3 Ex.

Vice-Admiralty Court.] — The vice-admiralty court has jurisdiction to award reasonable remuneration in respect of services to a stranded ship which were not strictly salvage services. The Watt, 2 W. Rob. 70. referred to. The Costa Rica, 3 Ex. C. R. 23.

Volunteer.]—Semble, while the court is disposed to confine the claims of professional pilots and tugs to the tariff scale for professional services, a volunteer ought to be allowed a more liberal rate of compensation. Canadian Pacific Navigation Co. v. The C. F. Sargent, 3 Ex. C. R. 332.

XV. SEAMEN'S WAGES AND EXPENSES.

Action in Rem — Jurisdiction of Ex-chequer Court—Personal Remedy—Owner— Purchaser—Bill of Sale.]—In the year 1887 A. sold a vessel to M. and S. under an agreement stipulating, among other things, the vessel was to remain in the name and un-der the control of A., until the purchase money was fully paid, and that, in the event of the terms of the contract not being per-formed by the condformed by the vendees, A. was entitled to take possession, and the vendees would thereupon lose all claim or title they might have to the ship or to moneys paid to them in respect of the contract. This agreement was not registered. For some time the vendees performed the terms of the agreement, but having failed to do so after a certain period. A. resumed possession of the vessel. In an action in rem for wages due to a seaman employed by the vendees and which were earned during their possession of the vessel:—Held, that the amount of the claim being below $200, the exchequer court had no jurisdiction under s. 34 of the Inland Waters Seamen's Act. (2) That the property in the vessel had not passed to the vendees under the agreement, and that whatever rights the seaman had in personam must be enforced against the persons who emmust be enforced against the persons who employed him and not against the vendor. (3) That the agreement was not a bill of sale within the meaning of the Merchants Shipping Act, 1854, s. 55. (4) That if summary proceedings had been taken as provided by the Inland Waters Seamen's Act, a direction might have been made to provide for the realization of the seaman's claim against the vessel, and she might have been tied up by the court on his shewing that the vendees who employed him were then the supposed owners of the vessel, and when the action was brought were insolvent within the meaning of s. 34 of the said Act. The Jessie Stewart, 3 Ex. C. R. 132.

Jurisdiction of Exchequer Court—Trifling Amount in Question — Costs.]—A seaman, the engineer of a tug, took proceedings in the exchequer court, admirally side, on the control of the cont action in rem for wages cannot be assigned. Rankin v. The Eliza Fisher, 4 Ex. C. R. 274, followed. Bjerre v. The J. L. Card, 6 Ex. C. R. 274.

Expenses of Seamen Left in Foreign Port—Liability of Unenr—Proof of Payment—Proof of Ounership—Certiorari—Appeal.]—An appeal lies to the supreme court of Canada from the judgment of a provincial court making absolute a rule nisi for a certiorari to bring up proceedings before a police magistrate under the Merchants Shipping Act with a view to having the judgment thereon quashed. Section 213 of the Merchants Shipping Act, 1854, makes the expenses of a seaman left in a foreign port and being relieved from distress under the Act and being relieved from distress under the Act and being relieved from distress under the Same from the master of the Ship or "owner thereof for the time being:"—Held, that the latter words each the same from the master of the hat certificate of the assistant secretary of the board of action brought. Held, further, that a certificate of the distribution of the same from the most of the second paid is sufficient proof of payment under the Act of the same from the provision in the Imperial Interpretation Act of 1889 that the repeal of an Act shall not affect any suit, proceedings under the Merchants Shipping Act of program of the properties of the remediate of the provision of the properties of the Act of 1889 that the repeal of an Act shall not affect any suit, proceedings under the Merchants Shipping Act of 1854 proof of ownership of a ship may be made according to the mode provided in the Merchants Shipping Act, 1894, by which the former Act is repealed. Under the Act of 1894 a copy of the registry of a ship registeried in Liverpool, certified by the registrar-general of shipping at London, is sufficient proof of ownership. Quarre, where the Merchants Shipping Act of 1854 provides that every order of two justices in an action for seamen's wages shall be final, will certiforarilie to remove the proceedings into a superior court? The Queen v. Sadling Ship "Troop" Co., 29 S. C. R. 662.

Right of Lien—Musician.]—In the absence of a contract to pay him wages a musician is not a "seaman" within the meaning of the Merchants Shipping Act, and therefore is not entitled to a maritime lien for his services. McElhaney v. The Flora, 6 Ex. C. R, 129.

Salesucoman.]—Held, that the word seaman "as used in s. 2 of the Merchants Shipping Act, 1854, and the Inland Waters Seaman's Act (R. S. C. c. 75), included a woman in charge of a confectionery stand on board a vessel, who was engaged by the owner of the boat to take charge thereof. Connor v. The Flora, 6 Ex. C. R. 131.

XVI. SEIZURE OF VESSELS.

British Bullt—Burden of Proof.]—Where a vessel is seized as not being British built, under the provisions of 7 & 8 Wm. III. the onus probandi lies upon the claimant, i. e., to recover, he must prove that the vessel in question was built at a British port. Rex v. Asch. Tay. 197.

Distress for Rent.]—Where a wharf has been leased, "with all the privileges thereto belonging," a vessel attached to the wharf by the usual fastenings cannot be distrained for rent. Sanderson v. Kingston Marine R. W. Co., 3 U. C. R. 168.

Execution—Title of Purchaser at Judicial Sale.]—A steamboat said to belong to one M. in this country, against whom defendent had an execution, was sold at Detroit while the writ was in the sheriff's hands, under a judgment of condemnation and sale in the admiralty court there, for certain claims which by their law formed a lien upon her. In an interpleader between the plaintiff, claiming under that sale, and defendant, the jury found that the vessel was not the property of M., the execution debtor. The court held that the evidence supported their verdict:—Held, also, that at all events the plaintiffs' title under the sale made upon the judgment in rem must have prevailed. VanEvery v. Genet, 21 U. C. R. 542.

Revenue Laws.]—If dutiable goods be brought by inland navigation to a port of entry and there entered, and the goods are afterwards landed without a permit, they are liable to seizure, but the vessel in which they were brought is not. McKenzie v. Kirby, 6 0, S, 422.

Replevin.]—A vessel seized for breach of the revenue laws having been replevied from the collector, the writ of replevin was set aside. Scott v. McRae, 3 P. R. 16.

Court—Mestitution of Vessel—Exchequer Court—Jurisdiction.]—The controller of customs had made his decision in respect of the sesizure and detention of a vessel under the provisions. The Customs Act, confirming such seizure, the customs Act, confirming such seizure, the customs Act, such activation of the Act, gave notice in writing to the controller that his decision would not be accepted. No reference of the metal are would not be accepted but the claimant present an index of right and a flat was granted. The town objected that the court had no jurisdiction controller to the court.—Held, that the word that the court had no jurisdiction for the controller to the court.—Held, that the word had jurisdiction. (2) Damages the controller to the court is the proposed of the court is seizing a vessel for a supposed infraction of the customs law, but the claimant is entitled to the restitution of the vessel. Julien v. The Queen, 5 Ex. C. R. 238.

XVII. STATUTES (IMPERIAL)—APPLICATION OF,

Insolvency — Assignee—Property Passing.]—Held, that the provisions of the Imperial Merchants Shipping Act did not prevent the property in the ship passing to the assignee under the Insolvent Act, 1876. Jones v. Kinney, 11 S. C. R. 708.

Limitation of Liability—British Ship—Registration—Collision.]-Held, that, as the tags in question were not registered as British ships at the time of the accident, their owners were not entitled to have their liability limited under 25 & 26 Vict. c. 63 (Imp.) That the limited liability under s. 12 of 31 Vict. c. 58 (D.) does not apply to cases other than those of the collision. Sewell v, British Columbia Towing and Transportation Co., 9 S. C. R. 527.

- British Ship—Registration—Injunction—Offers]—The defendant, as administratrix of her husband, who lost his life by the foundering of a steamer called the Waubuno, belonging to the plaintiffs, on which he was a passenger, sued the plaintiffs to recover damages under R. S. O. 1877 c. 128. The plaintiffs, who claimed limited liability under s. 54 of 25 & 26 Vict. c. 63 (Imp.), filed a bill under the Merchants Shipping Act, RS4, 17 & 18 Vict. c. 104, s. 514 (Imp.), to restrain the action, and prayed that it might be determined by the court whether they were liable for loss of life or merchandise, and, if so for what amount, and the persons entitled thereto:—Held, reversing the decision in 27 Gr. 346, that the Waubuno, not having been registered under 17 & 18 Vict. c. 104 (Imp.), was not a British ship within the meaning of that Act, by virtue of 36 Vict. c. 128 (D.), and therefore not entitled to take advantage of the limitation clause; and that, even if she were, the plaintiffs were not entitled to an injunction, as they did not admit their liability for damages to the extent mentioned in the Act, and bring into court or offer to secure the amount. Georgian Bay Transportation Co. v. Fisher, 5 A. R. 383.

Mortgagee—Alien.]—The mortgagee of a British ship is not an owner within the meaning of 17 & 18 Vict. c. 104 (Imp.), and there is no provision in that statute to prevent an alien being a mortgagee. Comstock v. Harris, 13 O. R. 407.

See Smith v. Brown, 14 U. C. R. 9; Smith v. Jones, 5 C. P. 425; Scott v. Carveth, 20 U. C. R. 430; Hearle v. Ross, 15 U. C. R. 259, and Torrance v. Smith, 3 C. P. 411, ante II, 5.

XVIII. TOWAGE.

Contract — Non-performance — Excuse.]
—Semble, that it is no defence to an action against the commander of a steamboat for not towing, &c., that he could not perform his contract by reason of his tow-boat being unavoidably frozen in the ice. Dorland v. Bonter, 5 U. C. R. 583.

Damage to Tow—Jurisdiction of Maritime Court—Demurrer—Costs.]— The maritime court cannot entertain a cause of damage to a tow, arising from the negligence of the towing vessel where no collision between vessels occurs. Instead of filing a demurrer the defendant raised the objection to jurisdiction by answer:—Held, that a demurrer should have been filed, and the court in giving effect to the objection made no order as to costs. The Sir S. L. Tilley, S. C. L. T. Occ. N. 156.

Delay-Contract with Government-Public Notice - Implied Contract with Ship Owner.]-Declaration, that defendants were owners of a line of tow-boats on the St. Lawrence river and canals, and received a schooner of plaintiff's to be towed from Lachine to Kingston for reasonable reward, &c., and undertook to use due diligence in towing said schooner. Breach, want of diligence and unreasonable delay, &c. Defendants had conreasonable delay, &c. Defendants had con-tracted with the government to tow vessels on the river. A public notice, signed by the sec-retary of the board of works, and containing regulations for towing, &c., also signed by de-fendants, appeared in a public newspaper at Kingston, and one of the defendants, examined as a witness, proved the contract with the gov-ernment. The plaintiff's schooner was taken in tow at Lachine by one of the line, and, through the tow-boat, was several times delayed before reaching the place of destination :-Held, that the contract with the government was sufficiently proved; that the line of tow-boats having been established according to the printed notices, such notices imported the basis on which future constructive or implied agreements with individual ship owners were to be rested; that the plaintiff's vessel, with a fixed and known destination, having been taken in tow by a tug of defendants, the inference must be that she was to be towed through to her place of destination with due and reasonable diligence according to the provisions in the public notice; and that without a special agreement she should not be dropped or deserted at the pleasure of the owner of the tug. Gaskin v. Caltin, 2 C. P. 527.

Extraordinary Services—Remuncration—Poid Contract.) — A ship, having been stranded, was set afloat again by her crew. She was leaking badly when boarded by the master of a tug, who made an offer to the mate of the ship to tow her into port for a specified sum. In making this offer to the mate the master of the ug was under the impression that the former was the captain of the ship, and in accepting the offer, without authority therefor, the mate allowed himself to be addressed and treated as such by the master of the tug. Apart from this suppressio veri on the part of the mate, he did not, although he was aware of it, disclose the dangerous condition of the ship at the time of entering into the towage agreement.—Held, that the agreement was void, and that the tug was entitled to be remunerated upon a quantum meruit for extraordinary towage services. Dunsmuir v. The Harold, 4 Ex. C. R. 222.

Negligence—Contributory Negligence—Costs.]—In an ordinary contract of towage the vessel in tow has control over the tug, and if the pilot of the tow negligently allows the tug to steer a dangerous course whereby the tow is injured, the tug is not responsible in damages therefor. (2) Where a very great part of the blame is to be attributed to the tug, the costs of the latter in defending the action may not be allowed. The Prince Arthur v. Jeccell (The Florence), 5 Ex. C. R. 151.

A sailing vessel in tow of a steam tug was passing up the St. Lawrence river. The pilot of the tow and the pilot of the tug were both at fault in not having the course changed after passing a certain point in the river. The pilot of the tow discovered the mistake and gave notice to the tug, by executing the proper maneuvre in that behalf, but not until it was too late to avoid an accident which befel the tow:—Held, that the owners of the tug. The Prince Arthur v. The Florence, 5 Ex. C. R. 218.

- Omission of Precautions-Joinder of Parties-Company-Powers.]-The B. C. Parties—Company—Poicers.]—The B. C. T. Co, entered into a contract of towage with S. to tow the ship Thrasher from Royal Roads to Nanaimo, there to load with coal, and when loaded to tow her back to sea. After the ship was towed to Nanaimo, under arrangement between the B. C. T. Co, and the M. S. Co. the remainder of the engagement was under taken between the two companies, and the M. taken between the two companies, and the M. S. Co.'s tug boat, Etta White, and the B. C. T. Co.'s tug, Beaver, proceeded to tow the Thrasher out of Nanaimo on her way to sea, Etta White being the foremost tug. Whilst thus in tow the ship was dragged on a reef, and became a complete wreck. The night of the accident was light and clear; the tugs did not steer according to the course prescribed by the charts and sailing directions; and there was on the other side of the course they were steering, upwards of ten miles open sea free from all dangers of navigation, and the ship was lost at a spot which was plainly indicated by the sailing directions, although there was evidence that the reef was unknown. Ordinary Services—Remuneration for— Owner-Payment into Court—Costs.]— The steam tug T. J. S., of 111 tons burn, bound from New York, U. S. A., to St. Johns, P.Q., was prosecuting her voyage off Cape Chatte. in the Lower St. Lawrence, when a slight accident happened to her boiler, in consequence of which her fires had to be extinguished so that the boiler might cool and allow the engineer to make the necessary repairs. At the time she was in the ordinary channel of navigation, and the weather was fine and the sea The accident happened at 8 p. m. Three hours afterwards, and before repairs could be made, the steamship F., of 2407 tons burthen, bound from Maryport, G.B., to Quebec, approached the tug, and at the request of her captain, took the tug in tow. The towage her captain, took the tug in tow. The towage covered a distance of some 230 miles, and continued for a period of thirty hours, during which neither ship was in a position of danger, nor were the crew of the F. at any time in peril by reason of the services rendered to the disabled tug:—Held, that, as the service to the disabled tug was rendered under the easiest distance the was reduced inder the easier conditions, without increase of labour or delay to the F., it was clearly a towage and not a salvage service. It not being a case of salvage, the officers and crew of the F. were not entitled to participate in the amount awarded for the towage, but it belonged to the owners The defendants having paid into of the ship. court an amount sufficient to liberally compensate the plaintiff for the service rendered, they were given their proper costs against the plaintiff. Hine v. The Thomas J. Scully, 6 Ex. C. R. 318.

XIX. MISCELLANEOUS CASES.

Assessment—Personalty—Place of Rating.]—A steamboat was held personal property, and properly assessable at one of the two places between which in summer it plied, and at which in winter it was laid up. In re Hatt, T. L. J. 103.

— Registration—Place of.]—K. resided and did business in the city of Halifax, and was owner of ships which were not registered at the city of Halifax, and which had never visited the port of Halifax. Under the authority of 37 Vict. c. 30, s. 1, and 27 Vict. c. 81, ss. 340, 347, 361, the assessors of the city of Halifax valued the property of K., and included therein the value of said vessels:—Held, that vessels owned by a resident, but never registered at Halifax, and always sailing abroad, did not come within the meaning of the words "whether such ships or vessels be at home or abroad at the time of assessment," and therefore were not liable to be assessed for city taxes. City of Halifax v. Kenny, 3 S. C. R. 497.

Bank—Mortgagec.]—The Bank of Upper Canada by their amended charter, G Vict. c. 27, s. 19, are disabled from holding ships as mortgagees. McDonell v. Bank of Upper Canda, T. U. C. R. 252. See also Lyman v. Bank of Upper Canada, S U. C. R. 254.

Contract — Steamship — Difference in Freight.]—Plaintiff undertook to build for defendants all the bridges on a portion of the Grand Trunk Railway, and furnish the iron, "same to be shipped on board steamships from Great Britain to Montreal, defendants paying the difference between freight and insurance by steamships and first-class sailing ships:"—Held, that they were bound to pay such difference on all shipments, not merely on those made at a time when sailing vessels could be procured. Coulson v. Gzovski, 22 U. C. R. 33.

Crown — Lien — Enforcement—Priorities —Writ of Extent—Costs.]—Where the Crown invokes the aid of a court of admiralty to enforce a maritime lien, it is in no higher position than an ordinary suitor, and its rights must be determined in such court by the rules and principles applicable to all claims and suitors alike. (2) Where the Crown sued the owners of a steamship for damages to a government canal occasioned by the ship colliding with the gates, but had obtained judgment subsequent in date to one obtained by the master of the ship upon a claim for wages and disbursements accrued and made after the time of such collision, the latter judgment was accorded priority over that held by the Crown.

(3) Where a party in an action in rem has incurred costs which have benefited not only himself but parties in other actions against the res, the costs so incurred by him will, if the proceeds of the property are insufficient to satisfy all claims in the various actions, be paid to him out of the fund in court before any other payment is made thereout. Semble, where the Crown pursues its remedy by writ of extent against the owners of a ship, it can only take under the writ of extent the property of the debtor at the time of the issue of the writ. If the debtor has assigned his propthe writ. If the debtor has assigned his property before that, the Crown can realize nothing under the writ in respect to the res. The Queen v. The City of Windsor, Symes v. The City of Windsor, 5 Ex. C. R. 223.

Government Canal — Accident to Vessel, —Under the provisions of the Exchequer Court Act, s. 16 (e), the Crown is liable in damages for an accident to a steamer and cargo while in a government canal, where such accident results from the negligence of the persons in charge of the said canal. McKay's Sons v. The Queen, 6 Ex. C. R. 1.

Injury to Sub-marine Cable. —By the regulation passed by the Quebec harbour commissioners in 1895, and subsequently approved by the governor in council and duly published, the commissioners prohibited vessels from casting anchor within a certain defined space of the waters of the harbour. Some time after this regulation had been made and published, the commissioners entered into a contract with the plaintiffs whereby the latter were empowered to lay their telephone cable along the bed of that part of the harbour which vessels had been so prohibited from casting anchor in. No marks or signs had been placed in the harbour to indicate the space in question. The defendant vessel, in ignorance of the fact that the cable was there, entered upon the space in question and cast anchor. Her anchor caught in the cable and in the efforts to disengage it the cable was broken:—Held, that she was liable in damages therefor. Bell Telephone Co. v. The Rapid, 5 Ex. C. R. 413.

Rescue of Sunk Vessel—Expenses—Liability—Insurers—Negligence.] — Defendants and another company had insured a vessel, which was sunk while being towed by the plaintiffs for her owners. An agreement was then entered into between the plaintiffs and the two insurance companies, by which, after reciting that the liability for raising the vessel was undetermined, the plaintiffs undertook to raise her for a sum named, and it was agreed to submit to arbitration by whom such sum and the other expenses of repairing the vessel should be borne. After this the owners sued the plaintiffs for negligence in sinking the vessel, and recovered. The defendants refused to arbitrate, and the plaintiffs then sued them for work and labour:—Held, that they could not recover, for defendants had agreed only to pay in the event of the arbitrators deciding that they were liable, and it was not certain whether the plaintiffs were entitled to be paid at all. The question as to the plaintiffs' negligence was left to the jury and found in their favour; but held, that such question could not be tried in this action; and semble, that on the evidence the verdict was wrong. Calvin v. Provincial Ins. Co., 27 U. C. R. 4608.

Sale of Part of Vessel — Conversion—Statute of Limitations.] — About 1857 the plaintiff purchased from the owner of a certain steamer the copper sheeting, &c., thereon, it being understood that he was to get it when a suitable time arrived, as by drydocking or hauling out the vessel. A yacht club soon after bought the hull, which they used as a club ship, having the same understanding with the plaintiff. Shortly afterwards the plaintiff with the consent of the club took off the sheeting to the waterline, when the club, thinking that the vessel was being injured, but without disputing the plaintiff's ownership, refused to allow him to take off any more, and the plaintiff desisted. In 1869 the club sold the vessel to one C., who gave a chattel mortgage for the unpaid purchase money, and on making default, judgment was recovered against him, and, under a fi. fa. goods thereon, C.'s interest was sold to defendant, the plaintiff being at the sale and informing defendant of his claim. It was proved that the vessel had become a total wreck, and useless as a ship. The defendant having refused to give up the copper after demand made, the plaintiff in December, 1875, brought trover therefor, when defendant insisted that plaintiff's right was barred under the Statute of Limitations, for that there was a conversion by the club's refusal to allow the copper to be taken off, or at all events by the sale to C.; and that six years had elapsed in either case before action brought: —Held, that the plaintiff was entitled to the copper, and to maintain trover for it, and that neither of the acts relied on by defendant amounted to a conversion or could be so set up by him, Keith v. McMurray, 27 C. P. 428.

I. Admission and Right to Practise.

1. Admission.

Admission — Scots Writer,]—A solicitor in the sheriff's court in Scotland is not entitled to be admitted on proof of service here for three years, under 7 Wm. IV. c. 15. In re-Macara, 2 U. C. R. 114.

Appeal to Supreme Court of Canada.]
—It was never intended that the supreme court of Canada should interfere in matters respecting the admission of attorneys and barristers in the several Provinces. In re Cahan, 21 S. C. R. 100.

See post III. 1.

2. Persons Prohibited from Practising.

County Court Judge — Profits.]—To a declaration against a county court Judge under C. S. U. C. c. 15, s. 5, as amended by 29 Vict. c. 30, to recover the penalty imposed for acting as an attorney and conveyancer, and preparing documents for one G, to be used in a court, the defendant pleaded that he did not practise in the profession of the law as an attorney for said G, or as such attorney prepare any papers or documents to be used in said court. The evidence shewed that defendant prepared gratuitously for G, who was a widow in poor circumstances, the petition, bond, and affidavits required to enable her to obtain administration to the estate of her late husband: — Held, that the second plea was proved, and a verdict was therefore entered for defendant on the leave reserved. The evidence did not bring defendant within the spirit of the Act, or the mischief against which it was directed, which was the doing the acts prohibited for profit. Allen v. Jarvis, 32 U. C. R. 56.

Local Master — Partnership.] — Local masters and deputy registrars of the court are not at liberty to practise in partnership with solicitors practising in the court of chancery, although they may not actually share in the emolument of suits. McLean v. Cross, 3 Ch. Ch. 432.

3. Practising without Certificate.

Crown Attorney.]—A Crown county attorney practising only as such need not take out a certificate. Re Coleman, 33 U. C. R. 51.

Member of Firm — Holding-out—Estoppel.]—M., a solicitor who had not taken out the certificate entitling him to practise in the Untario courts, allowed his name to appear in newspaper advertisements and on professional cards and letter heads as a member of a firm in active practice; he was not, in fact, a member of the firm, receiving none of its profits and paying none of its expenses, and the firm name did not appear as solicitors of record in any of the proceedings and paying none of its expenses, and the firm name did not appear as solicitors of record in suits and paying none of the special basiness. The Law Society took proceedings against M. to recover the penalties imposed on solicitors practising without certificate, in which it was shewn that the name of the firm was indorsed on certain papers filed of record in suits carried on by the firm: —Held, reversing the judgment in 15 A. R. 100 and 13 O. R. 104, that M. did not "practise as a solicitor" within the meaning of the Act imposing the penalties, R. S. O. 1877 c. 140, and that he was not estopped, by permitting his name to appear as a member of a firm of practising solicitors, from shewing that he was not such a member in fact. Macdougall value of the processing the penalties, R. S. C. R. T. Ames Society of Upper Canada, 18 S. C. R.

Penalty.]—The penalty of £4 for omitting to take out a certificate in proper time is payable in each court. Quare, as to the amount to be paid for his certificates, where the attorney has allowed the time specified for the courts of common pleas and chancery to pass, but not for the Queen's bench. Re Latham and Law Society, 9 U. C. R. 269.

cannot, without rendering himself liable to suspension, &c., under the provisions of ss. 22, 23, and 24 of the Act respecting solicitors, R. S. O. 1897 c. 174, practise as such, even in an isolated instance, and he is not relieved by the fact that he is interested in the subject matter of the litigation. Re Clarke, 32 O. R. 237.

II. AGENT OF SOLICITOR.

1. Service of Papers on.

Agent Entering Appearance—Service of Declaration.] — The fact that a man employed another to do a specified act for him at a particular time, raises no presumption whatever that the person so employed has authority to do a similar act at a different time. Where defendant's attorney, living at St. Thomas, sent an appearance to B. of London, whence the writ of summons issued, to enter there for him, which was done, and on the 24th January plaintiff's attorney served the declaration and demand of plea on B., which did not reach defendant's attorney till the 25th January:—Held, that, although B. had twice entered appearances in like manner for defendant's attorney, B. was not to be deemed his general agent to accept service of papers; and therefore that the time for pleading did not count till the 25th January, when the declaration and demand of plea was received by de-fendant's attorney, at St. Thomas. Held, also, that the receipt of the declaration and demand of plea by defendant's attorney from B. and sending a plea to him to be filed and served, was not a ratification of the service on B. as his agent. Smith v. Roe, 1 C. L. J. 154. See Workman v. McKinstry, 21 U. C. R. 622

A defendant sued in the county of Wentworth, but who lived in York, employed an attorney in Toronto to defend him, who instructed another attorney in Hamilton to en-ter an appearance; a declaration was then offered to the attorney in Hamilton, and declined. Interlocutory judgment was signed and damages assessed. A summons to set these proceedings aside was obtained, but it was not shewn that a copy of the declaration had not been served by affixing a copy in the county office:-Held, that on account of this omission, and for other reasons, the summons must be discharged. Hamilton v. Brown, 1 C. L. Ch. 257.

Agent in Cause.]—Service on the agent in the cause, though not the general agent, is good. Crooks v. Davis, 5 O. S. 141.

Dual Agency.] — A summons cannot be taken out by an agent for one attorney and served on himself as agent for another attorney. Ontario Bank v. Fisher, 4 P. R. 22.

Toronto Agent.] - See Prittie v. Lindner, 11 P. R. 313; Robinson v. Robinson, 13 P. R.

Entry of Name-Effect-Service by Posting.]-Where a solicitor has not entered the name of his agent in a county town, service of papers in an action where the pro-ceedings are being carried on in such county ceedings are being carried on in such costing town cannot be effected upon him by posting up copies in the office of the local registrar there, if he has the name of a Toronto agent duly entered. Con. rules 203, 204, and 461 considered. Essery v. Grand Trunk R. W. Co., 13 P. R. 221.

SOLICITOR.

- Notice - Time.]-Held, that the "two clear additional days to the time now allowed by law" for service on the agent of a country attorney under 34 Vict. c. 12, s. 12 (O.). means the allowance of two days between the day of service and the day of the happening of the event to which the notice relates. Nordheimer v. Shaw, 6 P. R. 14.

Notice of Trial-Setting aside-Time.]-Held, that an application on the part of an attorney resident in the country, made to set aside a notice of trial served on his Toronto agent as irregular, and made within eight days after such service, is not too late. Anderson v. Culver, 10 L. J. 159.

See Practice—Practice at Law before the Judicature Act, XV.—Practice in Equity before the Judicature Act, XXII.—Practice since the Judicature Act, XIII.

2. Other Cases.

Affidavit-Presumption.]-In applications of strict technical right it will not be assumed that an affidavit made by "the agent" of a person is by his professional Toronto agent, and that such person is a practising attorney, Leslie v. Foley, 4 P. R. 246.

Charges of Agent-Half-rates-Accounting with Client. |- In a certain suit D. acted generally as solicitor for H., who had been appointed administrator pendente lite. certain matters, however, in connection with certain matters, nowever, in connection was the proceedings, D. advised H. to retain an-other solicitor, deeming it improper to act himself for H. in respect to these matters, as he was also acting for another party. The he was also acting for another party. The solicitor thus retained by H. agreed with D. to do the work which he was retained to do for agency charges, of which he rendered D. an account. D. made up one bill of costs and rendered it of H., which included at full rates the services which the other solicitor had performed at agency rates. H. paid the bill with these charges to D.:—Held, that the master, on taking H.'s account with respect to the estate of which he had been appointed administrator, should have allowed the bill as properly paid so far as concerned the said charges, for there was nothing improper in the transaction. Beatty v. Haldan, 10 O. R. 278.

Lien of Agent - Papers - Payment by Client-General Agency Bill.]-The agent of a solicitor has a lien on the papers, or on a fund recovered, against his principal, and to the same extent against the principal's client, and such client is justified in paying the agent so as to discharge such lien and obtain his papers. Where the client has paid the To-ronto agent, who retained the bulk of the funds recovered on account of his agency bill, and offered the principal the balance, who refused it and issued execution against the client for the whole amount; such execution was stayed with costs. The agency charges in this case were wholly for work in the suit in which the client was a party; sed quære, would the solicitor's lien attach for the amount of his agency bill generally? Re Cross, 4 Ch.

Unpaid Agency Charges.]-See Re Ryan, 11 P. R. 127.

Payment of Money.]-Where money by an award is to be paid to the plaintiff, or to the plaintiff's attorney, the attorney cannot substitute another attorney under him to receive the money. Masecar v. Chambers, 4 U. C. R. 171.

Privity between Client and Agent-Payment—Account.]—W. & Co., attorneys in the Province of Quebec for B. & Co., there, requested the defendant, an attorney in the Province of Ontario, to sue a company there on a promissory note made by them, of which on a promissory note made by them, of which B. & Co., were the holders. Defendant issued a writ in the name of B. & Co., and indorsed his own name as attorney. He, however, never had any communication with them, treating only with W. & Co., who had sent him many similar claims to collect, and crediting them with the amount of the note when collected; —Held, that the plaintiff, who was the assignee of B. & Co., was entitled to recover from defendant the amount so collected; the rule that the town agent of a country principal is not accountable to a client for the latter not being applicable, as W. & Co. were merely the agents of B. & Co. to retain the defendant to act as their attorney, between whom and W. & Co. a direct privity of contract therefore existed. Ross v. Fitch, 6 A.

III. ARTICLED CLERKS.

1. Application for Admission to Practise.

Affidavit.]—A person was admitted upon his own affidavit of service, the attorney being absent from the Province. Ex parte Radenhurst, Tay. 138.

- Certificate.]-A certificate from the master, and an affidavit of the clerk "that he had during his clerkship done everything required of him." was held not sufficient. Exparte Lyons, Tay, 171.

Expiry of Articles.]—The time of a clerk articled after the 1st July, 1858, must expire fourteen days before the term of his admission. for the affidavit of service cannot be accepted at a later period. Where, therefore, M. was articled for a year on the 25th January, 1860, and Hilary term began on the 4th February, 1861:—Held, that he could not be admitted in that term. In re MacGachen, 20 U. C. R.

Loss of Articles. |-Where an attorney's clerk had lost his articles, he was sworn in on an affidavit of the loss, and producing the usual certificate of service. In re Loring, M. T. 2 Vict.

2. Discharge by Court from Articles.

Absconding Attorney - Service.] - A clerk articled to an attorney who abscends, will be discharged. Delivery of a copy of the rule nisi to the attorney's town agent, and leaving copies at the attorney's last place of residence, and at his office:—Held, sufficient service. In re McGregor, 15 C. P. 54.

Refusal of Attorney.] - The court ordered a clerk's discharge, the attorney refusing to release him or assign the articles. In re Patterson, 18 U. C. R. 250.

3. Service under Articles.

Absence Abroad.] - A clerk, having served four years, obtained his master's con-sent to go to Ireland for the benefit of his sent to go to fream for the benefit of his health, intending to return in six months, but his health still continuing bad, he with his master's permission remained six months longer. The court on his return admitted him as an attorney. In re Hagarty, 6 O. S. 188.

Absence-Business Elsewhere.] - Where an articled clerk carries on business in a place where the master does not reside, the time so spent will not be computed in his service. McIntosh v. McKenzie, M. T. 1 Vict.

- Engaging in Other Pursuits.]-H., having been articled on the 21st November. having been articled on the 21st rooman, 1854, for five years, was permitted to be ab-sent during 1855 for six months, under the sent during 1855 for six months, under the belief that that period would be allowed. This he spent at a grammar school preparing for the university. He was afterwards absent for eight and five weeks respectively in 1856, to prepare for his examination at the university:

—Held, that the six months could not be allowed, but that the other periods might be. In re Hume, 19 U. C. R. 373.

Illness-Costs.]-On an application for an attachment against an attorney for having improperly granted a certificate of actual service to A. B., an articled clerk, when he had been absent from his service on account of ill health for nearly two years, whilst he was under articles, and to strike A. B. off the rolls, on which he had been admitted more the roles, of which is an observation and the than two years before, the court refused both rules, on the ground of the long time that had elapsed since the clerk's admission as an attorney; but they made his master pay the costs of the application. In re Holland, 60. S. 441.

- Public Employment.]-An attorney was struck off the rolls, where it was shewn on affidavit that during the entire period he was under articles he was a salaried clerk attending a public office. In re Ridout, T. T. 2 & 3 Vict.

Absence of Attorney abroad — Rearticing to Another, I — The applicant, in 1847, articled himself to J. M., an attorney, then in partnership with E. J. In November, 1850, J. M. went to England and did not return: in February, 1852, his partnership with E. J. was dissolved. In March, 1852, the clerk articled himself, of his own accord, to T. G. for the residue of his five years— J. M. not consenting to this arrangement. J. M. not consenting to this arrangement. The court would not allow the time served with the last master. Ex parte McIntyre, 10 U. C. R. 294.

Agent of Attorney.]-An articled clerk can serve only one year with the agent of the attorney in this Province. In re Gilkison, H. T. 7 Wm. IV.

Bringing Action without Instruc-tions.]—See post IX. 1 (a). Costs.]-An action, brought by solicitors in the plaintiff's name, was dismissed to take him into partnership at the expiration of his articles, and that his share in the profits should commence from the date of his articles. The evidence did not shew that the clerk had been admitted. A separation took place, and an action was brought for com-pensation for services:—Held, within 22 Geo. II. c. 46, which is in force here, although repealed in England, and that the action was not maintainable. Dunne v. O'Reilly, 11 C. P. 404.

IV. AUTHORITY.

1. In Actions and Suits.

Agreement Not to Appeal. 1-An attorney ad litem has no authority to bind his client not to appeal by an agreement with the opposing attorney that no appeal would be Société Canadienne-Française de Construction de Montreal v. Daveluy, 20 S. C. R.

Appearance—Ratification — Disavorcal.] an action brought in 1866 for the sum of $800 and interest at twelve and a half per cent. against two brothers, S. J. D. and W. McD. D., being the amount of the McD. D., being the amount of a promissory note signed by them, one copy of the summons was served at the domicile of S, D. at Three Rivers, the other defendant. McD. D., then residing in the State of On the return of the writ, the New York. respondent filed an appearance as attorney for both defendants, and proceedings were sus-pended until 1874, when judgment was taken, and in December, 1880, upon the issue of an alias writ of execution, the appellant, having failed in an opposition to judgment, filed a petition in disavowal of the respondent. disavowed attorney pleaded inter alia that he had been authorized to appear by a letter signed by S. J. D., saying: "Be so good as to file an appearance in the case to which the enclosed has reference," &c.: and also prescription, ratification, and insufficiency of the allegations of the petition of disavowal. tion in disavowal was dismissed :-Held, that there was no evidence of authority given to the respondent or of ratification by the appellant of the respondent's act, and therefore the petition in disavowal should be maintained. Dawson v. Dumont, 20 S. C. R. 709.

Appointment by Court—Representation of Creditors—Repudiation.]—Where a solicitor had been appointed by the master to represent certain creditors as a class:-Held, that one of such creditors, who repudiated the act of such solicitor, was bound by the solicitor's proceedings. Held, further, that the solicitor was not only authorized to act for such creditors in the proceedings in the master's office, but also in proceedings arising out of or connected with these,—such, for instance, a motion in chambers on their behalf. Re McConnell, 3 Ch. Ch. 423.

Bail—Attorney for Principal.] — Semble, that bail are not bound by what the attorney for their principal may choose to do as such.

Mitchell v. Noble, 1 C. L. Ch. 284. any written retainer from the plaintiff, or any instructions from her personally, relying on instructions received from the plaintiff's hus-band, which she positively denied ever having given, and also on letters written to her, the sending of which was not strictly proved, and which she denied ever having received :- On a motion made therefor by the plaintiff, the judgment and all subsequent proceedings were and the solicitor ordered to pay the plaintiff's costs as between solicitor and client, and the defendant's costs as between party and party. Scribner v. Parcells, 20 O. R. 554. By a resolution of the council of a municiwith costs, and judgment entered against the plaintiff. The solicitors had acted without pal corporation, the mayor and clerk were instructed to grant a certificate under the corporate seal to the solicitors for the other plaintiffs authorizing them to join the corporation as plaintiffs in this action, upon receiving a bond, to the satisfaction of the mayor, indemnifying the corporation against all costs. A bond was accordingly handed to the mayor, who retained it, but the action was brought by the solicitors, and the corporation joined therein as plaintiffs, without the granting of any certificate under the corporate seal. After the action had been begun the mayor informed the defendants' solicitors that no certificate had been issued, and stated that he would not sign one until he had been properly advised by counsel:-Held, that the action was brought in the name of the corporation without authority; and that the defendants had the right to move to have such name struck out. Semble, that the corporation should have been parties to the motion. Held, also, that as the solicitors for the plaintiffs other than the corporation were not guilty of any intentional wrongdoing in joining the corporation as plaintiffs, they should not be made liable for the defendants' costs. Town of Barrie v. Weaymouth, 15 P. R. 95.

Solicitors who began an action in the name of a public school board and an individual as plaintiffs were retained for the board by a special committee appointed by resolution of the board, not under the corporate seal; the purposes of the appointment, as stated on the face of the resolution, embraced the commencement of any action respecting the matters referred to and the employment of counsel, the subject of the action being one of such matters :- Held, that this was not proper authority from the school board to the solicitors to bring the action, and the defendants had the right to have the name of the board as plainright to have the name of the board as plain-tiffs struck out. Town of Barrie v. Weay-mouth, 15 P. R. 95, followed. The solicitors having acted in good faith and under the belief that their retainer was sufficient, no costs were awarded. Barrie Public School Board v. Town of Barrie, 19 P. R. 33.

Judgment-Relief-Laches-Repayment of Moneys.]-A person who finds him-self a party plaintiff to proceedings which he has never authorized, is entitled to be relieved from liability in connection with them, whether the solicitor in fault be solvent or not; and the fact that an order dismissing the action has been issued before the applicant becomes aware that his name has been used, makes no difference in the rule. Nurse v. Durnford, 13 Ch. D. 764, followed. Delay in moving to set aside the proceedings from the 1st August to the 25th September:—Held, not a bar to relief, where no detriment had resulted to the defendants thereby. The sheriff having seized the plaintiff's goods under execution upon an order dismissing the action with costs, the plaintiff paid the costs to the sheriff, who undertook to hold the amount for ten days, "to be returned if writ set aside, and if not within that time, to be applied in payment of execution." After the lapse of more than ten days, during which the plaintiff took no step, the sheriff paid over the money to the defendants. The plaintiff having afterwards established his right to be relieved from liability:—Held that he was entitled to be repaid by the defendants. Morris v. Confederation Life Association, 17 P. R. 24.

Motion against Solicitor—Security for Costs.]—When planitiffs in an action repudiate the authority of the solicitor to take the proceedings, and move to set them aside, they cannot be compelled by the solicitor to give security for costs on the ground that they reside out of the jurisdiction. Re Percy and Kelly Nickel Co., 2 Ch. D. 531, followed. Where a charge of improper conduct is made against a solicitor, who is an officer of the court, by a person out of the jurisdiction, the court ought not to order security for costs, and thus prevent such a charge being investigated. Sample v. McLaughlin, 17 P. R. 490.

— Second Action.]—Upon an application by the defendant under rule 1243 for security for costs, upon the ground that the costs of a former action brought against him by the same plaintiff for the same cause, and discontinued. remained unpaid, the plaintiff contended that the former action, though brought by a solicitor in his name, was brought without his authority:— Held, that there should be no discussion as to the incidence of the costs of a prior action, known to the plaintiff, he not having taken the proper steps to get rid of these costs prior to the launching of the second action. Lea v. Lang, 17 P. R. 203.

Discharge of Defendant in Execution.—An attorney (merely as such is not authorized to discharge a defendant in execution, certainly not without receiving the debt, and a sheriff so discharging a debtor upon his authority will be liable as for an escape. Brock v. McLean, Tay, 398.

Sec, also, Stocking v. Cameron, 6 O. S. 475.

Indemnity to Sheriff — Adoption.]—A promise of indemnity to the sheriff by an attorney is binding on his client where the attorney has the conduct of the suit in the course of which such promise is made, and the subsequent acts of the client shew that he has adopted the attorney's proceedings. Muirhead v. Shirreff, 14 S. C. R. 735.

Instructions — Arrangement without — Bona Fides.]—Where a solicitor in good faith gives his consent and enters into an arrangement, even without instructions, the client cannot be relieved. Where the solicitor has acted fraudulently the case is different, Bailey v. Railey, 2 Ch. Ch. 58.

Arrangement without—Repudiation.]—An agreement by a solicitor that his client's suit should abide the event of another suit by the same plaintiff against another party, made without instructions from the client, who afterwards repudiated it:—Held, not binding on the client. Dewar v. Orr, Dewar v. Sparling, 3 Ch. Ch. 224.

— Disobedience to.]—Application for new trial where attorney had acted contrary to instructions. Williams v. Knapp, H. T. 4 Vict.

Matters of Practice.]—A client is not to be regarded as having a right to govern the conduct of his attorney, as to the degree of liberality he shall observe in his practice. Shaw v. Nickerson, Gillespie v. Nickerson, T. U. C. R. 541. See, also, Vail v. Duggan, T. U. C. R. 508.

Next Friend-Retirement-Withdrawal of Authority—Costs.]—Upon application to the court therefor, the next friend of an infant plaintiff may be allowed to withdraw, upon such terms as the circumstances of the case and the welfare of the infant may require. Solicitors began an action in the name of an infant as plaintiff by her mother as next friend, with the consent of the latter. After the action had been some time in progress, the mother wrote a letter to the solicitors revoking the authority to use her name, to which they replied that proceedings would not be stayed unless she paid costs up to date, and that if she did not do so they would assume that she intended them to continue the action. She took no notice of this, and they went on with some proceedings, where-upon the defendant, instructed by the mother, moved to dismiss the action on the ground that it was being prosecuted without authorand asked for costs against the solicitors: -Held, in staying the proceedings, that there was nothing to prevent the mother from re-nouncing her character of next friend, and withdrawing from the litigation, subject to her remaining amenable to the jurisdiction of the court as to liability for costs theretofore in-curred. As to costs:—Held, that the court reaches the solicitors of a plaintiff directly for the benefit of the defendant only where the plaintiff, as client, has a right to be recouped by the solicitor, and to the extent of that recoupment. The next friend here was liable to the solicitor for costs up to her letter, and the solicitor was liable to the next friend for costs subsequent thereto; and as the former costs exceeded the latter, and, as between the next friend and the defendant, the former was liable for costs so long as she did not make a direct application against the solicitors, no order could be made in favour of the defendant; but the next friend was entitled to be indemnified by the solicitors for costs incurred after her letter. Held, also, that it was competent for the defendant to move to stay the proceedings, although the normal practice is for the next friend to move. Taylor v. Wood, 14 P. R. 449.

Partner of Attorney—Notice of Trial.]

—A. and B. were in partnership as attorneys.

A. being the attorney on the record in this suit. Notice of trial was given in the name of B.:—Held, that the notice was irregular only, and not a nullity. Semble, a notice of trial given in the partnership name would not be irregular. Nor would a notice subscribed "the plaintiff's attorney," without giving his name. Macaulay v. Phillips, 9 C. L. J. 237.

Settlement of Action — Corporation — Parol. 1— As to the power of the attorney on the record to compromise suits against a corporation, and how far he may bind them by parol, when authorized under seal. Doron v. Great Western R. W. Co., 14 U. C. R. 403.

Instructions—Disobedience to—Consent Judgment—Setting aside.] — After the trial of an action had been postponed at the assizes and the defendant had left the assize town, his solicitor and counsel effected a settlement with the plaintiff, which was given effect to by the entry of a verdiet and judgment by consent. The solicitor admitted that he was not instructed, but relied on his client adopting the settlement, which was, in the solicitor's opinion, a favourable one. The client said that he had instructed the solicitor not to settle in the way he did:—Held, that the defendant was entitled to have the verdict and judgment set aside and a new trial, on payment of costs. Watt v. Clark, 12 P. R. 359.

Where counsel, acting upon the instructions of the plaintiff's solicitor, effected a compromise of the action not authorized by the plaintiff and contrary to the express instructions given by her to the solicitor, the compromise was set aside and the plaintiff allowed to proceed to trial, but, as the plaintiff and defendant were innocent parties, without costs to either against the other. Stokes v. Latham, 4 Times L. R. 305, followed. Benner v. Edmonds, 19 P. R. 9.

- Negotiations for-Withdrawal.]-If parties to an action authorize their solicitors to enter into negotiations for a settlement, and, while the negotiations are proceeding, one party, unknown to his own or to the opposite solicitors, writes to the other party personally withdrawing from the negotiations, and the respective solicitors, not knowing what has taken place between their clients meanwhile, conclude the terms of a settle-ment, such settlement will not be binding on the party who had thus withdrawn from the negotiations, because the other party had direct notice of his withdrawal. Semble, that if the principals had, between themselves, entered into an agreement, and the solicitors, in ignorance of what the clients were doing, had previously concluded a different agree ment, the agreement made by the solicitors would bind because prior in time. On the same reasoning where the two principals negotiate, and either perfect a contract or put an end to proposals for one before the delegated power to their agents has been fully exercised, the acts of the principals are the binding acts, and the subsequent acts of the agents are of no avail as against their principals. In this case, upon the letters and evidence:

—Held, that the defendant had not withdrawn his prior proposals and abandoned the been come to by the respective solicitors. Vardon v. Vardon, 6 O. R. 719.

— Provisional Settlement.]—The order of the master in chambers, 9 P. R. 220, staying proceedings on the ground that the action had been settled by the plaintiff's solicitor, was reversed because the evidence shewed that the settlement was a provisional one, and that the plaintiff himself had not adopted it. Mo-Boundly, Field, 12 P. R. 213.

Unpaid Costs-Beneficial Plaintiff -Collusion-Notice - Lien.] - A Montreal firm of solicitors brought an action for one arm of solicitors brought an action for one C. against H., the now plaintiff, which was settled for $3,700, of which H. paid $3,000, and gave the solicitors a note for $5,500 made and indorsed respectively by the defendants Griffith and Gimson, and held by H. as indorsee, out of which the solicitors were to take the $700 and their costs. They sent a clerk to Toronto, where defendants lived, to effect a settlement, but, being unable to do so, he left the note for collection with M. & Co., a Toronto firm of solicitors. After legal pro-ceedings had been instituted, plaintiff paid C. the $700. A settlement was discussed between the solicitors, which M. & Co. agreed to, provided their costs and the charges for the clerk's vided their costs and the charges for the clerk's expenses to Toronto were paid. Negotiation for a settlement had been going on between the parties themselves, and on the 2nd De-cember an agreement was entered into, that defendants should pay $5,000 clear of every-thing, to the plaintiff. On the 4th December defendants' solicitors were informed by M. & Co. of other parties, besides the plaintiff, being interested in the note. On 6th December the parties met and effected a settlement, by plaintiff accepting $5,000 in full of all claims under the action. The note which was held by M. & Co. was never delivered up to the defendants:—Held, that the action was not the plaintiff's, but that of C., or for his benefit, and that M. & Co. could proceed therewith, as C.'s solicitors, to enforce payment of their costs, and the Montreal solicitors' charges: that the settlement of a claim under a negotiable security without the security being delivered up, subjected the defendants to of which they had notice; or, semble, even without notice; that the effect of the agreement of the 2nd December was that the de-fendants should pay M. & Co.'s costs, and defendants afterwards on the settlement made not providing therefor, and leaving the note outstanding, was some evidence of collusion to deprive M. & Co. of their costs; and that the notice given not to settle without providing for M. & Co.'s costs, &c., gave M. & Co. an equitable claim to the interposition of the court. Hall v. Griffith, 5 O. R. 478.

- Unpaid Costs-Judgment-Absence of Collusion.]-A settlement of an alimony action after judgment for permanent alimony, upon which writs of execution were in the sheriff's hands, was effected between the parties without the intervention of the solicitors on the record. To carry out the settlement a third solicitor was instructed to withdraw the writs from the sheriff's hands, which he did without paying the costs of the plaintiff's solicitor, which he knew were unpaid. There was no collusion or actual fraud against the plaintiff's solicitor proved:—Held, that the plaintiff's solicitor had control of the writs in the sheriff's hands to the extent of his unpaid taxable costs, and that he was entitled to have the writs replaced, or new writs placed in the sheriff's hands at the expense of the solicitor who withdrew them and the plaintiff, or to an order directly against the defendant for payment of his unpaid taxable costs, and for the costs of the motion against the plaintiff and the solicitor who withdrew the writs: but that he was not entitled to an order for payment of his unpaid costs by the solicitor or the sheriff. This judgment was affirmed with this variation, that the solicitor who withdrew the writs was relieved from the payment of costs. Friedrich v. Friedrich, 10 P. R. 308, 546.

See TRIAL, XVI. 8.

Terms of Order — Abandonment.]—The court will not hold defendant to terms accepted by his attorney, at the suggestion of a Judge at chambers, when he immediately abandons the Judge's order. Young v. Shore. 2 O. S. 314.

Atteration of—Consent—Interlocutory Order,—Where solicitors properly representing the claimant and the execution creditors in an interpleader made an arrangement by which $4+11 of the claim made and provided for in the interpleader order was abandoned, and the sheriff, by the direction and consent of both the solicitors, in good faith distributed $4+11 among the creditors entitled, and paid only the balance into court, instead of the whole proceeds of the sale, as directed by the interpleader order, which was not amended:—Held, that the solicitors had authority to make such a variation of the order, and the sheriff was justified in acting upon it; and it made no difference that the interpleader order was a consent order, for it was an interlocutory order, and the variation did not affect third parties. Hackett v. Bible, 12 P. R. 482.

Agent of Solicitor.]—A rule for a reference in this cause was granted on reading the consent to refer indorsed on the record at nisi prius; it provided that the cause and all matters in difference between the parties should be referred to S. C., and among other things stated that the evidence as taken before the Judge at nisi prius should be read before the arbitrator, and that any question of law which should arise at the request of either party should be referred to the court, and costs of cause, reference, and of the award should abide the event. The order of reference, as made a rule of court, differed from the above memorandum in these among other things: memorandum in these among other things: (1) it directed that costs, &c., should be in the discretion of the arbitrator: (2) that the arbitrator should not be required to reserve any legal questions for the decision of the court. W. P. & B. acted throughout as agents for the defendant's attorney, all the papers in the suit being served upon them, and W., one of the members of the said firm, was compact for defendant is the said firm. was counsel for defendant in the cause, both at nisi prius and before the arbitrator. It was proved that on an undertak-ing of W., as counsel for defendants, not to raise any question of law, the terms of the reference were altered by consent of W., and of counsel for the plaintiffs. On motion to set aside the award and final judgment:— Held, that W. had power, either as counsel or as agent for defendants' attorney, in his discretion, in the matters of this suit, to bind the defendants; and the award was upheld. Wilson v. Counties of Huron and Bruce, 11 C. P. 548.

See Johnston v. Johnston, 9 P. R. 259.

2. In Other Proceedings.

Arbitration.] — See Wilson v. United Counties of Huron and Bruce. 11 C. P. 548, ante 1. — Agreement—Railway Crossing.]—In treating with the owner of lands for the right to cross the same by a railway, or in proceedings before arbitrators appointed between him and the company, with a view to ascertain the amount of compensation, the solicitor acting for the company at the arbitration is not qualified to enter into any special agreement binding the company to construct and maintain a crossing. Wood v. Hamilton and North-Western R. W. Co., 25 Gr. 135.

Mortgage—Notice Demanding Payment.]

—Where a mortgage provided that no means should be taken by the mortgage to obtain possession of the land until he should have given to the mortgagor one calendar month's notice in writing, after default made, demanding payment:—Held, in ejectment by the mortgagee, that a notice signed by the plaintiff's attorney, who was also his attorney in a suit brought upon the covenant, more than a month before this action, was sufficient, without any proof of authority. Keyworth v. Thompson, 16 U. C. R. 178.

3. To Receive Money.

Mortgage.]-M. applied to McM., a so citor, for a loan of $6,200 on his land. McM. got P. to advance the money. He then drew the mortgage, which was executed by M. and wife and left with him till P. came to pay the money. P. subsequently called on McM., and, upon his registering and delivering over the mortgage, paid him the money. McM. after this told M., on his calling on 6th March, that P. had not as yet been able to get the money, and on M. stating he required $400 at once. McM. gave him his own cheque for that amount. M. swore this was a loan, and was subsequently repaid. On 2nd April McM. absconded without having accounted for the $6,000. After his departure, two receipts were found among his papers, signed by M.. and dated 6th March, for $400 and $89.36, redated 6th March, for $400 and $89.36, respectively, as money received from McM. on account of the P. mortgage, and a memorandum from which it appeared that $205.55 had been paid out of the mortgage money by McM. to discharge execution debts of M.'s which he had instructed McM. to settle:—Held, in this affirming the judgment in 12 O. R. 702, that it must be shewn that either express or implied authority had been given McM. by M. to receive the money to justify McM. by M. to receive the money to justify P.'s paying it to him; that his possession of the mortgage with an indorsed receipt did not give such authority; but (in this reversing the judgment) that there was evidence of authority to receive to his own use, out of the mortgage money when paid, the above three sums sufficient to entitle P. to hold the mortgage as a security to that extent. McMullen v. Polley, 13 O. R. 299.

The onus of shewing that a solicitor who is in possession of a mortgage and collects the interest has authority also to collect the principal, is upon the mortgagor, and unless this onus is clearly discharged, the mortgagor and not the mortgagee must bear the loss arising from the solicitor's misappropriation of the funds. In re Tracy, Scully v. Tracy, 21 A. R. 454.

Episcopal 46; In re ormick v. Proof of Agency.]—Held, that, under the circumstances of this case, the solicitor could not be considered the agent of the plaintiff, so as to make a payment to the solicitor from the defendant a payment to the plaintiff. Proudfoot v. Murray, 7 U. C. R. 456.

Retainer to Collect.—The retainer of an attorney or solicitor to collect a demand, and to take such proceedings as he may deem proper to effect this object, gives him authority to receive the amount before or after suit, and to discharge effectually the party making the payment, unless the client restricts or terminates the authority given to his attorney or solicitor. Moody v. Tyrrell, 6 P. R. 313.

Right to Payment as against Client—Recovery of Judgment.]—When a solicitor has recovered a judgment on behalf of a client, he has a right to hasist on payment of the amount thereof to himself, and to issue execution in default of payment, and this although tendered a cheque payable to the client for the amount. Knowlton v. Fauquier. 11 C. L. T. Occ. N. 32, 72, 12 C. L. T. Occ. N. 32.

4. Other Cases.

Contract for Sale of Lands. |—The solicitor of a party has not, as such, any authority to contract for the sale of his client's lands. Cameron v. Brooke, 15 Gr. 693.

Payment of Interest - Fraud - Negliof Executor-Representation-Statute of Limitations.]—Executors, relying upon the word of a solicitor who had managed the testator's affairs in his lifetime, procured from him a list of mortgages alleged to have been taken by the testator, representing a trust fund of $5,000 set apart by the will for the widow, but without the actual production of the mortgages, and shewed it to her, informing her that the solicitor would pay her the in-terest. As a matter of fact the mortgages never had any existence, but the solicitor regularly paid her the interest up to the time of his death:—Held, that the executors had neglected their duty in not setting aside the $5,000 in money or securities, and that their duty in that respect could not be delegated. Held, also, that they had appointed the solicitor their agent for the purpose of paying the interest, and that statements and payments made by him were made in the course of the business for which they had employed him; that each payment was a renewal of the re-presentation that the $5,000 was still in their hands, invested for her benefit; and they could not be allowed to set up the Statute of Limitations in answer to the plaintiff's claim, or that the statements they made were not true; and that they were liable to make the fund good. Clark v. Bellamy, 30 O. R. 532. But see S. C., 27 A. R. 435.

V. CHANGE OF.

Alteration of Name in Proceedings— Authority, —J., an attorney, sued out a writ for the plaintiff, an infant. Next day it was agreed that B. should be substituted as attorney, and the plaintiff's agent, with J. and B., went to the Crown office, where, with the permission of the clerk, J.'s name was struck out and E.'s name inserted in the praceipe. The same change was made in the writ and copy before service:—Held, that the alteration was unauthorized, and that the copy and service must be set aside. *O'Reilly v. Vancery, 2 P. R. 184.

Death—Appointment of New Attorney— Notice,]—Where the attorney for plaintiff deid after service of replication, and before service of notice of trial, and a new attorney, signing himself plaintiffs attorney, gave notice of trial without a notice of the appointment of a new attorney having been previously given, the notice of trial was set aside with costs. Sted v. Manning, S. L. J. 167.

On the death of an attorney in a suit it is only necessary to notify the other side of his death, and the appointment of another in his place. Bank of Montreal v. Harrison, 4 P. R. 331.

Notice of Action—Declaration.]—It is no ground of objection to a notice of action against a magistrate, that the plaintiff declared by a different attorney from the one by whom notice was given and process issued. McKenzie v. Mewburn, 6 O. S. 486.

Notice of Trial—Partner of Attorney,]—Semble, that a notice of trial cannot be said to be irregular, because A., one of two partners as attorneys, signs the notice of trial as the plaintiff's attorney, although B., the other partner, appeared as the attorney on the record, there having been no order to change the attorney, Gamble v. Rees, 7 U. C. R. 406.

Order Changing—Affidavit.]—No affidavit is necessary to obtain a summons to change the attorney. Re Glasse and Glasse, 2 L. J. 213.

— Costs.]—The plaintiff had paid costs of a suit to A., of the firm of A. & B., his attorneys. A. & B. dissolved, B. retaining the suit. Application to change attorney to A. granted, without any condition as to payment of costs. Stater v. Stoddard, 6 P. R. 299.

The court will order a party's solicitor to be changed without any condition as to paying the solicitor his costs. Meyers v. Robertson, 1 Gr. 439.

— Necessity for.]—On an appeal from a master's report it was objected that the solicitors appealing were not the solicitors who proved the claims before the master:—Held, that the solicitor might be changed without order, that being the English practice in 1837, and there being in this Province no order to the contrary. Bailey v. Bailey, 2 Ch. Ch. 57.

Where a replication was filed several years after the filing of the answer, by a different solicitor from the one who had filed the bill, but no order changing the solicitor had been taken out, and no notice of filing replication given, the replication was ordered to be taken off the files and the bill dismissed. Rathbun v. Hughes, 3 Ch. Ch. 160.

Pracipe.]—The common order to change the solicitor is obtainable as of course on pracipe. In re Mylne, 1 Ch. Ch. 199.

Effect of, on Taxation.]—When conveyances are prepared under a special agreement, it will bind the master. In re McPeasley and Eccles, 5 L. J. 279.

The master in taxing a bill must decide as best he can, according to the contract expressed or implied between the parties. In re Eccles, 6 L. J. 59.

Non-liability — Taxation against Opposite Party,]—Costs of suits being in all cases the money of the client:—Held, that an attorney taking an annual salary in lieu of such costs, cannot tax more than disbursements (which by his agreement he was entitled to recover from his client) from a defendant, though all such costs were the property of the attorney by the arrangement. Jarvis v, Great Western R. W. Co., S C. P. 280.

Under an agreement between the defendants and their solicitor, he was to be paid a fixed salary, to cover all his professional services to the city, exclusive of counsel fees and other disbursements paid by him, but he was to have the right to costs from parties against whom the corporation should succeed, and be entitled only to disbursements when they should fail. In a case in which the defendants succeeded, judgment was entered against the plaintiff and the usual costs taxed. On motion for revision:—Held, following Jarvis v. Great Western R. W. Co., S. C. P., 280, that as under their agreement the defendants were not liable to pay the attorney the costs taxed except disbursements, all costs except disbursements must be disallowed. Stevenson v. City of Kingston, 31 C. P. 333.

Where, by the terms of an express contract, a party is not to be liable for costs to the solicitor representing him in an action, be cannot tax costs against the opposite party. Jarvis v, Great Western R. W. Co., S. C. P. 280, and Stevenson v, City of Kingston, 31 C. P. 333, approved, Decision in 16 P. R. 410 affirmed. Meriden Britannia Co. v. Braden, 17 P. R. 77.

See Scott v, Daly, 12 P. R. 610.

Payment of Annual Salary.]— The agreement to pay a solicitor a fixed sum as a yearly salary in lieu of paying items in detail, is neither illegal nor unusual, whether it provides for the past or the future. Falkiner v. Grand Junction R. W. Co., 4 O. R. 350. See Jarvis v. Great Western R. W. Co., 8 C. P. 280; Stevenson v. City of Kingston, 31 C. P. 333, supra.

Rate of Remuneration.] — No bargain between a solicitor and client, whereby the latter undertakes to pay more than the recognized fees for the work to be done, can be enforced. Where a solicitor's Toronto agent made a bargain with the client for $2 an hour for attendance in the master's office, such bargain was held not binding, although reasonable, the sufficiency or insufficiency of the amount being immaterial where the item is fixed by tariff. Re Geddes and Wilson, 2 Ch. Ch. 447.

Where an order was applied for for the taxation of costs incurred in suits in the common pleas, the county court, and division court, according to the terms of an alleged agreement as to the rate of renuncration, an order was granted with a direction to the master to ascertain whether any valid agreement existed between the parties. Re Wetenhall, 4 Ch. Ch. S2.

Lump Sum — Future Business,]—An agreement that the solicitors should retain $500 as commission for business done and to be done cannot stand in the way of the taxation of the solicitors' bill, for such an agreement is against the policy of the law, and solicitors cannot enter into any stipulation on the terms of getting a better benefit than they would get by the costs which they are entitled to charge. The agreement relied on in this case was void as being for business done and to be done, and upon the taxation it should be disregarded. Re McBrady and O'Connor, 19 P. R. 37.

Security for Costs Incurred—Retaining Fees.]—The solicitor acted for a client in ing Fees.]ing Fees.]—The solicitor acted for a client in defending him upon a charge of arson, and in prosecuting actions against two insurance companies to recover for a loss by fire. At the time the solicitor's services were required the client had no money and had no prospect of getting any, and, in consequence of the risk the solicitor ran of getting nothing and losing considerable sum for disbursements, the client offered him a retaining fee to be paid out of the insurance moneys when recovered, and it was agreed between them that such fee should be $150 for the two actions, the amount claimed therein being about $1,250. Subsequently, and when some costs had been incurred, the client made an assignment to a third party of the moneys due to him from the insurance companies, in trust, to pay the solicitor his costs, including the retaining fees sonction is costs, including the retaining reco-agreed upon, and to pay the balance to credi-tors. The client at a later date made a general assignment for the benefit of credi-tors:—Held, upon appeal by the assignee from the taxation of the solicitor's costs, that the first assignment in trust was a security for costs already incurred, a confirmation of the original agreement, and a quasi appropriation of the money; and, as it appeared that the client understood that the payment of retaining fees was voluntary, and that they could not be recovered from the opposite party, the retaining fees were properly allowed to the solicitor by the taxing officer: and under the exceptional circumstances of the case the amount was not unreasonable. Re Fraser, 13 P. R. 409.

Security for Future Costs.]—A security taken from a client by an attorney or counsel for costs to accrue in respect of services to be rendered to the client, is invalid and cannot be enforced. Hope v. Caldwell, 21 C. P. 241. Followed in Robertson v. Caldwell, 31 U. C. R. 402.

Mortgage — Part Validity.] —

Mortgage given by a client to his solicitor to secure costs to be incurred in the future, is absolutely void as being against public policy. A mortgage for $1,200 was created by a third party, who was indebted to G., in favour of a solicitor, as security for such costs as he might incur in carrying on a suit for G. The client afterwards consented to the solicitor assigning the mortgage to an amount not to exceed $500, which was done. In a suit afterwards instituted by the assignee of the security, to enforce payment of that amount, to which the solicitor was made a defendant:—Held, that the security was valid to the extent only of what was actually due to the solicitor for the costs at the date of the mortgage. And the assignee having failed to notify the mortgagor of the assignment, by reason of which a sum of $530 had been by the client allowed to be paid to the solicitor:—Held, that the assignee could only recover what might be found due in respect of such costs over and above the amount so paid to the solicitor. Atkinson v. Gallagher, 23 Gr. 201.

Promissory Note—Fraud.]—The plaintiff. who was a barrister and attorney, having refused to defend one H., who had been arrested for embezziement, in that and other matters, until satisfied as to his remuneration, arreed to do so on H.'s wife indorsing procured for the defendants, admitting it to be "all right" and agreeing to pay it to plaintiff. Subsequently, and after the plaintiff had performed some trifling services for H., defendants discovered that no value had been given for the note, but that it had been obtained by H.'s fraud, of which, however, the wife was immorant, and they then notified the plaintiff that they did not acknowledge any liability thereon, and would not pay it. In an action by plaintiff against defendants on the note:—Held, that he could not recover, for that, whether the note was received by plaintiff as security or as a payment in full for future services, the transaction was void as against public polley; and that this was a good defence available to the defendants under the plea that the plaintiff was not the lawful holder. Held, also, that the plaintiff, having become the holder after maturity, could stand in no letter position than the wife, who was bound by the fraud of her husband, who acted as ler agent in procuring the note to be made to her. Robbertson v. Furness, 43 U. C. R. 143.

"Solicitor's Fees" — Agreement not to Charge — Counsel Fees of Solicitor.] — An agreement between a solicitor and client by which the former agrees not to charge "solicitor's fees," but only disbursements, does not include counsel fees charged by the solicitor, who, being a barrister, acted as counsel. Re Solicitor, 17 C. L. T. Occ. N. 123.

See Re Malcolmson and Wade, 9 P. R. 242; Arnoldi v. O'Donohoe, 2 O. R. 322; Re C. & L., 15 C. L. J. 139; Re Beaty, 19 P. R. 271.

(b) Between Solicitor and Opposite Party.

Appropriation of Payment—Accounting to Client.]—The applicant, M., having a claim against one P., placed it in the hands of attorneys to prosecute the action, as she said, but to effect a settlement with P., as they alleged, and forbidding them to sue. P. agreed to pay $300 in full, including all costs. The attorneys alleged that $250 only of this was to go to M. according to her agreement with P., and the remaining $50 to them for the costs; while M. denied this, asserting that she was entitled to the $300, subject to their claim for costs to be taxed:—Held, there being a doubt as to the facts, that the general rule should prevail, that the attorney must account for all the money received and the client pay his costs. In re Attorneys, 41 U. C. R. 372.

—— Solicitor and Client—Costs—Party and Party.]—Where an attorney, having had for three years a judgment on confession for a large amount, gave defendants to understand that his charges against plaintiff were $200, which defendants understood to mean all his charges, which sum defendants paid, the attorney was not allowed afterwards to treat the $200 as paid for costs between attorney and client only, and to proceed for costs between party and party. Gillespie v. Shaw, 10 L. J. 100.

2. Moderation.

Administrator's Solicitor — Nature of Proceeding.]—On an appeal from a certificate of the master in which he held that under an order which directed him to "ascertain and state what amount (if any) is properly chargeable by J. H. against the estate of T. W. deceased, in respect of legal proceedings taken by the said J. H. as administrator pendente lite of the said estate in the courts or otherwise," the bills of costs of the solicitor of the administrator should be taxed in order to ascertain the amount due:—Held, that the master was wrong; that the bills should, it necessary, be subjected to moderation, and not taxation; that moderation is a well understood term, and is more liberal than taxation even as between solicitor and client. Beatty v. Haldan, 6 O. R. 715.

Executor's Solicitor—Payment of Bills —Nature of Proceeding.]—Bills of costs for services rendered to an estate after a testator's death, down to the date of an order for the administration of the estate, were paid by the executor after the order and pending administration proceedings: — Held, that there could be no taxation of the bills as against the executor at the instance of creditors, but that the bills should be moderated. So far as the solicitors were concerned, the payment by the executor was to be regarded as payment of the bills, and to obtain a taxation after payment a case would have to be made against the solicitors. Practically the moderation might be so conducted, if warranted by special circumstances, as to differ but little from a taxation. Re Hague, Traders Bank v. Murray, 12 P. R. 119.

3. Recovery by Action.

Cause not Concluded—Explanation.]—An attorney may sue for his fees in a cause which he does not conclude, if he can account satisfactorily for not proceeding. Ford v. Spafford, 5 O. S. 440.

See Smith v. Graham, 2 U. C. R. 138.

Costs of Action.]—Where the plaintiffs, sning as attorneys for the amount of a bill of costs, proceeded by an attorney, and not in person by attachment of privilege, and assessed damages at a sum under £10, the court refused to allow them full costs. Strachan v. Bullock, 2 U. C. R. 382.

Counsel Fees—Recovery from Solicitor.]
—On the trial of an election petition against the return of a member to the provincial legislature, which resulted in favour of petitioner, to whom the costs were awarded the defendant was retained by an association for prosecuting the petition, and acted as petitioner's attorney, and M., one of the plaintiffs, a firm of attorneys as well as barristers, acted as petitioner's senior counsel, under an agreement to that effect with defendant, neither he nor his firm heing retained by petitioner. The petitioner's costs were settled by defendant and the respondent's attorney, and defendant received $1,600, including $305 counsel fees to M., which M., proved became the property of his firm. The plaintiffs having brought an action against defendant to recover these counsel fees, as moneys had and received to their use:—Held, that they could not recover, for that the costs, including these fees, belonged to the petitioner and not to defendant as attorney. Miller v. McCarthy, 27 C. P. 147.

In this Province a counsel's right of action for his fees for services in the nature of advocacy, is against the client of the solicitor retaining him, and not against the solicitor, unless by special agreement, or when there is evidence of credit having been given to the solicitor alone, or of money in the solicitor's hands to answer the claim; and a solicitor so employing counsel has implied authority to pledge his client's credit for the payment of counsel fees. Armour v. Külmer, 28 O. R.

Delivery of Bill — Lapse of Month.]—
The month required by 2 Geo. II. c. 23 to elapse between delivery of the bill and action thereon, is a lunar, and not a calendar, month, and the day of the service of the bill is included. Berry v. Andruss, 3 O. S. 645.

— Lapse of Month—Burden of Proof.]
—Where an attorney served his bill on the 20th May, and the placita on the record were instituted as of Trinity term, which commenced on the 16th June—not a lunar month after such service—but a memorandum was added. sufficient, and that if the writ were issued too soon, defendant should shew it. McMartin v. Spafford, 4 O. S. 332.

Lapse of Time — Allegation — Demurrer.]—In an action by a solicitor to recover the amount of a bill of costs, the fact that he does not, in his statement of claim, allege that the bill was delivered a month before action brought, is not now, any more than before the Judicature Act, ground for demurrer, but only for defence. Though under R. S. O. 1877. c. 140, s. 32, the right of action on a bill of costs may be suspended pending a month from delivery to the party to be charged therewith, nevertheless the solicitor is a creditor, and may as such, before the expiration of such month, bring an action to set aside a voluntary conveyance as fraudulent and void. Scane v. Duckett, 3 O. R. 370.

— Plea of Non-delivery.] — A defendant is entitled to a copy of the bill according to the statute, even though he may have admitted the amount to be due. Where, therefore, to a declaration for fees, containing a count upon the account stated, defendant pleaded no bill delivered, &c.:—Held, plea good. Dempsey v. Winstanley, 5 U. C. R. 317.

Non-delivery of the bill is not a plea to the merits. Judgment for defendant, therefore, is no bar to a second action. Dempsey v. Winstanley, 6 U. C. R. 409.

Pleading non-delivery of a bill is not an issuable plea. A plea denying the retainer is. Eccles v. Johnson, 1 C. L. Ch. 93.

Plea of Non-delivery—Replication.]

-Action for services as attorneys. Plea, that though the plaintiffs did, before suit, to wit, on the 10th September, 1851, deliver to defendant a bill, yet that a month from such delivery had not expired before suit. Replication, that a month from the delivery of the bill in the plea mentioned had expired before this suit:—Held, replication good. Draper v. Steen, S U. C. R. 441.

In an action by an attorney for his fees, he must prove the delivery of his bill, although the defendant has suffered judgment by default. Ridout v. Brown, 4 O. S. 74. See also post 5.

Proposed Action — Judgment against Solicitors—Stay — Set-off,] — Defendants, as attorneys, delayed to register a mortgage to B., their client, by which the security was defeated. They then obtained another mortgage from the same mortgagor to B. on different land, subject to two prior incumbrances, and it authorized their proceeding to foreclose this mortgage, expressly without prejudies to his rights as against them. B. having died pending a suit against the defendants for negligence, his administrators obtained a verdict in it and issued execution. Defendants then applied to stay proceedings until they could obtain judgment for the costs taxed in the foreclosure suit, in order to set it off, B.'s estate being insolvent. In answer it was argued that the second mortgage and foreclosure (which turned out of no benefit), as Quantum Meruit—Services in Exchequer Court.1—In proceedings before the exchequer and supreme courts, there being no tariff as between attorney and client, an attorney has the right in an action for his costs to establish the quantum meruit of his services by oral evidence. Paradis v. Bossé, 21 S. C. R. 419.

Services in Exchequer Court -Agreement — Compensation — Champerty — Jurisdiction — Taxation.] — The plaintiff, a suppliant in an action brought against the Crown, by its permission, in the exchequer court of Canada, made an agreement with the defendants, a firm of solicitors, that they should conduct her case to judgment, and, in consideration of their doing so at their own expense, that they should be entitled to retain to their own use one-fourth of the sum which to their own use one-tourth of the sum which should be recovered, and she assigned her claim to them as security for the performance of the agreement.—Held, a champertous agreement, and not binding on the plaintiff. Ball v. Warvick, 50 L. J. N. S. C. L. 238, and In re Attorneys and Solicitors Acts, 1 Ch. D. 573, followed. (2) Although the services of the defendants under the agreement were performed in a Dominion court, a pro-vincial court had jurisdiction to entertain an action for an account against the solicitors in respect of moneys received by them from the Crown in satisfaction of the claim. (3) The services performed by the defendants in the exchequer court were not performed as officers of the courts of Ontario, and, with respect to such services and the remuneration therefor, the defendants were not subject to the Solicitors Act, R. S. O. 1887 c. 147, and could not be compelled to deliver a bill of costs. (4) In the absence of a tariff of costs between solicitor and client in the exchequer court, the defendants were entitled to a remuneration upon a quantum meruit, to be established by such evidence as would be apestimated by such evidence as would be appropriate in the forum of litigation. Paradis v. Bossé, 21 S. C. R. 419, and Armour v. Kilmer, 28 O. R. 618, followed. O'Connor v. Geomill, 29 O. R. 47.

An agreement by a solicitor to prosecute a claim to judgment at his own expense in consideration of his receiving one-fourth of the amount which should be recovered is champertous and void. A solicitor of the supreme court of judicature for Ontario who as such does business in carrying on proceedings for a client in the exchequer court of Canada is subject to the provisions of the Solicitors Act with regard to delivery and taxation of his bill of fees, charges, or disbursements in respect of such business, Judgment in 29 O. R. 47 reversed in part of Connor v. Gemmill, 26 A. R. 27.

Right to Bring Action—Partner.]—Defendant signed a written retainer of D. & E. as his attorneys, to prosecute one M. While the suit was pending, their partnership was dissolved, and E. retired, assigning to D. all his rights. D. alone appeared as plaintiff's attorney on the record:—Held, that E. might Vol. 111, D—206—57 sue alone for costs. Dougall v. Ockerman, 9 U. C. R. 354.

Set-off—Special Services.]—In an action by a firm of attorneys for costs due from clients, the defendants were not allowed to set off against the plaintiffs' claim a sum paid by one of them to one of the solicitors for special services to be rendered by him, there being no mutuality, and the payment not being for the general services covered by the retainer to the firm. McDougall v. Cameron, Bickford v. Cameron, 21 S. C. R. 379.

Statute of Limitations.]—In an action by an attorney against his ellent for costs of prosecution, it appeared that the claim was barred by the Statute of Limitations, but that the lands of the defendant in the suit had been sold under a fi, fa, sued out within six years, and bought in by this defendant under his own execution:—Held, that this would not revive the claim, by making the defendant accountable to the plaintiff as if he had then received the costs to his use, but that only the costs of the fi, fa, could be recovered. Jones v. Hutton, 11 U. C. R. 554.

The plaintiff, an attorney, sued in 1870 for bills of costs in suits brought for the defendant, in which suits judgments were entered, respectively, in 1860 and 1861, and executions, which were issued in 1863, had been renewed yearly, at defendant's request, until 1870:—Held, that the plaintiff could not recover for any costs incurred before the entry of the judgments; for he was entitled on the recovery of judgment to sue for his bill, and was barred by the statute, which then began to run. Harris v, Quine, L. R. 4 Q. B. 657, distinguished. Lizars v, Dausson, 32 U. C. R. 237.

Taxation during Action—Undertaking—Attachment—Payment—Judgment.]—The plaintiff, an attorney, sued defendant for costs as between attorney and client. Before appearance defendant procured an order for taxation, on undertaking to pay what should be found due. An attachment was irregularly issued upon this order, under the pressure of which defendant paid the amount taxed. The plaintiff also proceeded in the suit by signing interlocutory judgment. The court, under these circumstances, ordered that the plaintiff (as an attorney) should pay the money received by him into court: that the defendant should be relieved from his undertaking; that the interlocutory judgment should be set aside without costs; and that the plaintiff should pay the costs of this application, Regina v, McLeod, In re Miller v, McLeod, 10 U. C. R. 588.

Trial of Action—Disputing Items—Order for Taxation.]—A client, not having obtained a regular order for taxation before the trial, will not be allowed, by producing the master's allocatur at the trial, shewing a less sum taxed than claimed, to dispute the items of the bill. Brock v, Bond, 3 U. C. R. 349.

(a) Appeal from Taxation.

Local Master—Neview.]—When an order is obtained by a client referring the taxation of a solicitor's bill to the master in the county where the work was done, any review of the master's conclusions must be obtained by way of appeal to a Judge. In re Bleeker and Henderson, 9 P. R. 182.

Motion or Petition.]—The proper mode of appealing from the master's certificate of taxation is by motion, and not by petition. In re Ponton, 15 Gr. 355.

Notice of Appeal — Forum—Report.] — The certificate of a taxing officer upon a reference to taxation of a solicitor's bill of costs, at the instance of a client, is a report; and, under rules S48, S49, and S50, the appeal therefrom should be to a Judge in court upon seven clear days' notice. Re Crothers, 15 P. R. 92.

The report or certificate of an officer upon the taxation of the costs of a solicitor as against his client falls under the provision of rule 1226 (d) as to its confirmation, and is, for the purposes of an appeal, a report within the meaning of rules 848 and 849. Ford v. Mason, 16 P. R. 25.

Upon an appeal by the solicitor from the decision in 16 P. R. 423, rendered on appeal from the taxation of his bill of costs against his client, under the common order for taxation, the court was divided in opinion as to one of the grounds of appeal, viz., that the appeal was not properly before the court below; two of the Judges holding that such an appeal is regulated by the same rules and practice as apply to an appeal from a taxation of costs between party and party; and the provisions of rules 1230 and 1231 not having been complied with, an appeal could not be taken under rule 851. Re Robinson, 17 P. R. 137.

An appeal from the certificate of taxation of a bill of costs between solicitor and client is to the court, as if it were an appeal from a master's report. Re Moveat, 17 P. R. 180.

[The rules referred to in the above cases are the con, rules 1888, See (1897) con, rule 773.]

Notice of Appeal — Time.] — The notice of appeal from a certificate of taxation of a solicitor's bill of costs by a local master, must be seven days, as required by G. O. 642. Such a case is not within rule 449, O. J. Act. Exchange Bank v. Neucell, 9 P. R. 528.

Right of Appeal — Reference — "In a Summary Way."]—An action on a solictor's bill was stayed upon agreement providing for evidence to be given to an accountant named, and "in case of dispute, the matters disputed are to be referred in a summary way to — under R. S. O. (1897) c. 174 for decision:" — Held, that by "a summary way." the parties meant that the reference was to be without ceremony or delay, the words "under R. S. O. c. 174" merely introducing the procedure under that Act (the Act respecting Solicitors), and not to be construed as providing for an appeal. Sale v. Lake Eric and Detroit R. W. Co., 32 O. R. 159.

Supreme Court of Canada—Matter of Practice.]—See O'Donohoe v. Beatty, 19 S. C. R. 356; McGugan v. McGugan, 21 S. C. R. 267.

Time for Commencement.] — The time for appealing from a taxation of costs begins to run from the date of the certificate of taxation, not from the date of each ruling in the course of taxation. Re O'Donohoe, 12 P. R. 612.

(b) Applicants for Taxation — "Parties Liable"

Assignee in Insolvency — Prior Assignee's Cost.]—An assignee in insolvency employed a firm of attorneys to perform certain services in connection with the estate. Subsequently he resigned the position and gave these attorneys the moneys of the estate remaining in his hands, with instructions to pay their own costs first, and then hand the balance to the new assignee. This they did and rendered their bill of costs:—Held, that the estate of the insolvent was, within the meaning of C. S. U. C. c. 36, s. 38, the "party liable to pay," though "not chargeable as a principal," and the second assignee was entitled to have the bill taxed. In re A, & B., 6 P. R. 68

Cestui que Trust — Trustees' Costs.]—
Any one cestui que trust may, in the discretion of the court, obtain an order under the third party clauses of the Solicitors Act for the taxation of a bill of costs for business connected with the trust estate of a solicitor employed by a trustee. Sandford v. Porter, 16 A. R. 565.

Defendant—Agreement to Pay Plaintiff's Costs.]—Where, on a settlement of several suits between the parties, it was agreed that defendant should pay, among other things, all the costs of every kind, including retainers, for which the plaintiff was liable to his attorney, it was held that defendant, though he had not paid the bills, was entitled to have the bills referred to taxation on the usual terms. Quare, is such a defendant, a party "liable to pay," within s. 38 of C. S. U. C. c. 35? In re Greenwood, 10 L. J. 131.

Agreement to Pay Plaintiff's Costs—Account—Parties.]—All ex partie orders are periculo petentis. And where the defendants in an action had agreed with the plaintiff to pay the costs of his solicitors, and, being furnished with a bill of such costs, obtained on praceipe an order for taxation thereof, which order was drawn up as an order to tax upon an application by the client, and directed that the taxing officer should take account of all sums of money received by the solicitors for or on account of the applicants, such order was vacated with costs. The defendants were to be regarded as third persons liable to pay, and were entitled to an order for taxation; but they should have disclosed all the facts and applied for a special order; and the plaintiff should have been made a party to the proceeding under rule 1229, for the purpose of taking an account between him and the solicitors. Mortgagor — Mortgagee's Costs.] — The mortgagees of land having brought ejectment, and sold under the power of sale, their solicitor sent the surplus purchase money to the mortgagor, accompanied by a statement of the amount due, in which one item was for "solicitor's costs, 8143." The particulars being asked for, he rendered two separate bills, one of the ejectment, the other of the sale:—Held, that the mortgagor was clearly a person entitled to apply for taxation within C. S. U. C., 235, s. S. Ex parts Glass, In re Macdonald, 3 P. R. 138, 9 L. J. 111. See Re Moffatt, 12 P. R. 240.

Ratepayer — School Trustees' Costs.] — Held, by the court of appeal, reversing the decision in 21 O. R. 289, that an individual ratepayer of a school section is not, merely by reason of his having to contribute as a ratepayer, entitled to obtain an order for taxation of a bill of costs delivered to and paid by the board of public school trustees, either under R. S. O. 1887 c. 147, ss. 32 and 42, or under con. rule 1229. Upon appeal to the supreme court of Canada:—Held, that, assuming the court had jurisdiction to entertain the appeal, the subject matter being one of taxation of costs, the court should not interfere with the decision of the provincial courts, which are the most competent tribunals to deal with such matters. Held, also, that a ratepayer is not entitled to an order for taxation under said section. McGugan v. Mc

Residuary Legatees—Executors' Costs.]

—Residuary legatees may apply for taxation of bills of costs rendered to executors for services to the estate; for they come within s. 42 of the Solicitors Act, R. S. O. 1887 c. 147, as being "liable to pay," i.e., by the lessening of the amount of the residuary estate. Re Skinner, 13 P. R. 276.

(c) Costs of Taxation.

Application after Settlement.]—When after settlement the client applies for taxation, and nothing is found due to him, he must pay the costs of application. In re Francis v. Boulton, 6 L. J. 20.

Discretion—Absence of Client.]—Held, that the court has no discretion as to allowing costs of taxation, when the party chargeable neither obtains the order nor attends under an order obtained by the solicitor. In re Kerr, 2 Ch. Ch. 47, 2 C. L. J. 302.

Execution for.]—An order is not necessary in order to issue execution for the costs of taxing an attorney's bill. Re S. & R., 13 C. L. J. 200.

Liability for—Assignce for Creditors—Set-off.]—The parties who initiate and intervene upon the taxation of a solicitor's bill of costs become personally liable to pay the costs of taxation. And where solicitors rendered to the assignee of an insolvent their bill for services to the insolvent, and the assignee taxed the bill and had it reduced by more than one-sixth:—Held, that he had a right personally to recover from the solicitors the costs of the taxation, and that there should be no set-off against the amount coming to the solicitors from the estate of the insolvent as a dividend upon their bill. Re Rogers and Farewell, 14 P. R. 38.

Offer to Reduce Bill.]—Where a solicitor offered to make a deduction from his bill, the court held that the master should not charge the solicitor with the costs of taxation unless the bill had been reduced one-sixth independently of the voluntary deduction. ReFreeman, 1 Ch. Ch. 102.

Where a solicitor has offered to take in full settlement less than the amount of a bill of costs as rendered, and has made the offer in a manner unequivocal and binding upon him, then and not otherwise he is to be allowed the them and not otherwise he is to be allowed the reject it and proceed to tax the bill. He Freeman, 1 Ch. Ch. 102, and Re Carthew and Re Paull, 27 Ch. D. 485, considered and explained. Where the offer to make a reduction in the bill was not upon the face of it nor in any letter accompanying it, but was made orally and in the course of a conversation on the subject after the delivery of the bill—Held, that the offer was not of an unequivocal character made so as to be binding upon the solicitor, but left him free when it was not accepted to claim all he could get upon a taxation, and he was therefore not entitled to the benefit of it. Re Allison, 12 P. R. 6.

The solicitors rendered to a client ten bills of costs, amounting in all to 8428-83. The client obtained an order for taxation, reserving his right to dispute his liability to pay the bills, and reserving also the costs of the order and taxation. The bills were taxed at $329.76, more than one-sixth being taxed off; but the solicitors contended that they were not liable for the costs of the taxation under R. S. O. 1887 c. 147, s. 35, because of an offer made by them before the order but after service of the notice of motion therefor, to take $250 in full of all the bills, and a subsequent offer to take $250 in full of all but one. These were not offers to reduce the bills to the sums named, but were offers to take such sums if the bills were paid without dispute as to the client's liability upon them. The offers were rejected and the taxation proceeded with the above result. When the question of the liability upon the bills was still undetermined, the client applied for costs of the order and taxation:—Held, that the solicitors when their offers were rejected remained in a position to claim the full amount at which their bills might be taxed; and, therefore, such offers could not avail them; and they must pay the costs of the order and taxation. Re Allison, 12 P. R. 6, approved and followed, Re Cameron, 13 P. R. 173.

Preliminary Order for Delivery of Bin—Costs of.]—Held, where an order, silent as to costs, was made upon attorneys for the delivery of bills to a client, and the bills were afterwards delivered, and a subsequent order made for the taxation, costs of the reference to abide the event, that costs of the first order could not be taxed as part of the costs of the reference. Held, also, that no order could be made upon the attorneys by a Judge different to the one who signed the first order, for payment by them of the costs of the first order. Re Lemon, 1 C. I., J. 19.

Reduction on Taxation—Abandoment of Item.]—Where one item had been abandoned by an attorney after a summons taken out for the taxation, but before actual taxation, and one-sixth was afterwards struck off the whole bill, including such item:—Held, that the attorney was properly ordered to pay the costs of taxation. In reDucy, 5 P. R. 55.

Amended Bill.]—Where an attorney obtains leave to amend his bill after taxation commenced, it is improper to strike out any items in the bill. The charges alleged to be omitted should be added, and if one-sixth be taxed off the bill as amended, the attorney must pay the costs. In re Martin, 7 P. R. 90.

— Items not Tavable.]—In a bill rendered by an attorney and referred to the master, he is not to take into consideration—in determining whether one-sixth has been taxed off the bill, so as to make the attorney pay the costs of the reference—items which are not properly taxable items, such as sheriff's fees and witness fees, &c., not actually to be repaid to the attorney nor a part of his claim. In re Davy, 2 C. L. J. 70.

Security for Costs.]—Held, that the fact that a client, who has applied to have an attorney's bill taxed, is out of the jurisdiction, is not a sufficient ground for an order for security for costs, but, upon special circumstances being shewn, it may be. In re A. B., 6 P. R. 210.

See In re Crawford and Crombie, 2 Ch. Ch. 13; Re Green, 7 P. R. 89.

See Costs, VIII.

(d) Disputing Retainer.

Conflicting Evidence.]—Where a solicitor has no written retainer, and his retainer is disputed, and the evidence is conflicting, the court will give weight to the denial of the client as against the solicitor. In re Eccles and Carroll, 1 Ch. Ch. 263.

Praceipe Order—Suppression of Fact.]

—Where an order for the delivery and taxation of bills had been taken out on praceipe, on the application of the administrator of the client, and the fact that the solicitor disputed the retainer by such client was not brought to the notice of the court on the issuing of the order, but it was established that the administrator did not then know that the retainer was disputed:—Held, that there was no suppression of a material fact, and that the order was regular. In re Toms, In re Cameron, 2 Ch. Ch. 204.

Reference of Dispute.]—Where on an application by a solicitor for a taxation, the client disputed the retainer as to the whole bill, and also set up the Statute of Frauds, it was held that the court could refer these defences to the master. Re Bacon, 3 Ch. Ch. 79.

Where in an action upon a bill of costs the defendant denied the retainer, a motion for summary judgment under rule 80 was refused, and it was held that the question of liability could not be referred to the taxing officer, the Judicature Act having altered the practice laid down in Re Bacon, 3 Ch. Ch. 79. Macdonald v. Piper, 10 P. R. 586, Reserving Right.]—In referring to taxation, there is no authority here, without consent, to reserve the right to dispute the retainer. It exists in England under 6 & 7 Vict. c. 73, which differs in this from C. S. U. C. c. 35, s. 44. In re Totten, 27 U. C. R. 449. Sec. contra, In re Leuis, 9 L. J. S1.

Where one of two alleged clients, against whom solicitors seek to obtain a taxation of certain bills of costs, disputes the retainer, the usual order for taxation should be made against the unresisting client, such taxation to be on notice to the other, with liberty to him to attend and intervene, and to be conclusive against him as to the quantum of flability in case he is ultimately found liable in the dispute as to the retainer. In re Jones, 36 Ch. D. 195, In re Salaman, [1894] 2 Ch. 201, and In re Totten, 27 U. C. R. 449, discussed. Re Macdonald, 16 P. R. 498.

(e) Order for Payment.

When Granted.]—Where an order is made for taxation of an attorney's bill, as between attorney and client under R. S. O. 1877 c. 140, s. 49, a common law court has no power here, as it has in England, under 6 & 7 Vict. c. 73, s. 43, to make a summary order for payment of the amount found due from the client, except by consent. In re A. B. and C. D., S. P. R. 126.

An order for the taxation of a solicitor's bill, at the instance of the client, should refer the bill simply for taxation. A clause in such an order directing payment to the solicitor of the amount of the taxed bill, was struck out. Re Clarke, 9 P. R. 137.

Held, that by the O. J. Act, the former practice has been changed, and an order referring a bill of costs to a taxing officer, should not direct the officer to do more than ascertain the proper amount of it. Macdonald v. Piper, 10 P. R. 586.

Under the common order for taxation of a solicitor's bill of costs, form 136, O. J. A. a taxing officer has power to investigate and dispose of questions of carelessness, impropriety, and negligence in the conduct of the business to which the bill relates; and the officer's certificate is conclusive as to all matters within his jurisdiction. Where, therefore, after action brought upon a bill of costs there has been a taxation under such an order.

there is an end to litigation, and it only remains to enforce payment of what has been found due, which may be done upon a subsequent application by the solicitor. The original order for taxation may reserve questions of retainer and negligence in a proper case, but, if it does not the client should not be allowed a double chance of defeating the solicitor's claim, by proceeding to defend the action after the conclusion of the taxation. Re Clarke, 9 P. R. 197, and Macdonald v. Piper, 10 P. R. 588, distinguished. Millar v. Cline, 12 P. R. 155.

A solicitor who has obtained an order for traxation of his bill of costs against his client, and taxed his bill under it, is not entitled to a summary order for payment of the amount found due. Where the client obtains the order for traxation, he thereby submits himself to the summary jurisdiction of the court, and should be ordered to pay the amount found to be due to the solicitor. Semble, that the order for traxation under con. rule 443 should, under the authority of s.-s. (d) of that rule, where it is made upon the client's application, contain an order for the payment by him of the amount to be found due upon the reference, but when it is made upon the solicitor's application, should contain no such order. The solicitor should be entitled to add the costs of the reference to his claim only in the event of the client appearing upon the reference. Milar v. Clien, 12 P. R. 155, distinguished, and In re Harcourt, 32 Sol. J. 92, followed. Ke Washington, 12 P. R. 386.

(f) Place of Reference and Proper Officer.

Consent—Local Master.]—An order will not be granted for taxation before a master in an outer county even on a consent. Re Solicitors, 3 Ch. Ch. 90.

Local Master.]—Under 34 Vict. c. 12, s. 13 (O), where a month has elapsed since the delivery of a bill of costs, the solicitor is entitled to a reference for taxation to the master of the county in which the work was done. In re Solicitors, 7 P. R. 263.

Bills of costs between solicitor and client should prima facie be referred for taxation to the master of the county in which the work was done. Re Idington and Mickle, S P. R. 561

Taxing Officer—Business in Outer County—Agency Work.]—Held, affirming the decision in 13 P. R. 276, that a reference for taxation of bills of costs between solicitor and client may properly be directed to one of the taxing officers at Toronto, even where the business charged for in the bills, with the exception of agency work done at Toronto, was all done in an outer county. The words of s. 32 of the Solicitors Act. R. S. O. 1887 c. 147, "any of the business charged for in the bill," include business performed at Toronto by the agent of the principal solicitor. Re Skinner, 13 P. R. 447.

— Form of Order.]—On an application to tax a solicitor's bill, more than a month having elapsed since its delivery, an order was issued in the long form in use before the O. J. Act, instead of the form under rule 443, as the master is mentioned in that order, but the taxing officer is the proper officer to tax bills of costs under rule 438 of the Act. Re Solicitors, 9 P. R. 90.

(g) Procedure on Application for Reference.

Courts—Reference from Law to Equity—Abandonment of Order.]—A common law Judge in chambers may refer for traxition to the proper officer of the court of chancery a bill for services in that court. If such an order be waived or abandoned by the party who obtained it, it is necessary to move to set it aside. Whether it has or not can be properly decided in the court of chancery, especially in a case where one party treating the order as in force obtained from the master of that court a warrant for taxation under the order, and the other party, treating the order as waived or abandoned, obtained an independent order of that court for taxation. A common law Judge will, under such circumstances, decline to interfere. In re Wilson and Hector, 9 L. J. 132.

Ex Parte Order.]—On an ex parte application of a client by petition for taxation, the common order only can be obtained; if a special order is required, notice must be given. In re Atkinson and Pegley, 1 Ch. Ch. 187.

— Applicant — Joint Retainer.]

Where an order for taxation had been obtained ex parte at the instance of one or two clients who had jointly retained the solicitors, such order was set aside as irregular, Be Becher, 2 Ch. Ch. 215.

Dispute as to Facts—Affidavit—Scandal.]—An order to tax is not to be granted ex parte to the solicitor where there appear to be any facts in dispute between him and the client. He must make known such facts to the court, or the order will be set aside. Such motions for taxations should be on notice, and the reference should, as a rule, be to the master at Toronto. Where the affidavit, on which a motion to review taxation was grounded, contained allegations of misconduct on the part of the solicitor altogether unconnected with the dealings between the solicitor and the client, such allegations were held to be scandalous, and were ordered to be struck out of the affidavits. In re Fitch, 2 Ch. Ch. 288.

- Reference to Defences.]-An order of course for the taxation of costs is not to be discharged for the omission therefrom of any reference to defences of which the petitioners had no previous intimation. Re Bacon, 3 Ch. Ch. 70.

Forum.]-An order to tax between attorney and client must be made in the court in which part of the business is done, and the bill referred must be for professional services. In re Jones and Ketchum, 3 J. L. 203.

Intituling.]—An application to have a bill referred under 16 Vict. c. 175, s. 20 must be made in the matter of such solicitor. Duggan v. Cotton, 3 L. J. 15.

Praccipe Order.]-The common order to tax may be obtained by a client on practice; it is not necessary to apply to a Judge in chambers for it. In re Daniel, 1 Ch. Ch. 224.

- Lapse of Month.]-Where the bill had been delivered more than a month, the client must apply for taxation in chambers; cheff must apply for taxation in chalmets, otherwise the order can be obtained on pracipe. Re Boultbee, 2 Ch. Ch. 58.

See Re McCarthy, Pepler, and McCarthy, 15 P. R. 261, ante 4 (b): Re Moffatt, 12 P. R. 240; Re Fitzgerald, 10 P. R. 279.

 Dispute as to Facts.]—Where it is a matter of dispute whether there has or has not been an agreement between solicitors and client as to costs, an order for delivery and taxation should be applied for on motion and not on præcipe. Re C. & L., 15 C. L. J. 139.

(h) Revision and Retaxation,

When Ordered.]-A revision will not be ordered where the grounds of the original taxation have for any reason failed or become or been found invalid. In re Jones and Ketchum, 3 L. J. 203.

Rules 447-449 O. J. Act, are not necessarily applicable to a taxation had under 48 Vict. c. 13, s. 22 (O.), and where upon a taxation local officer these rules had not been complied with by the party objecting to the taxation, a revision was nevertheless ordered. the court thinking the bill so exorbitant as to shew special circumstances. Snider v. Snider, Snider v. Orr, 11 P. R. 140.

Defendant's costs not having been taxed with sufficient liberality as between attorney and client, a revision was ordered. Cameron v. Campbell, 1 P. R. 170.

A retaxation will not be ordered unless improper charges are specified and established. Eastman v. Eastman, 2 Ch. Ch. 325.

See Clarke v. Manners, Re Manners, 4 Gr. 432: In re Attorneys, 26 C. P. 495; Connors v. Squires, 2 P. R. 149: In re Jones and Ketchum, 3 L. J. 167, post (i).

(i) Subject and Scope of Reference.

Accounting-Determination of Dispute as to Agreement. |-- By an order, obtained by clients upon præcipe, a bill of costs was referred to taxation, and the taxing officer was directed to take an account of all sums of money received by the solicitor of or on account of the applicants. Under this the taxing officer taxed the bill and took an account of the moneys received by the solicitor, and in so doing inquired into and determined the validity of a disputed agreement in the na-ture of a compromise relating to some older bills of costs not referred to taxation, but which the solicitor now contended should be allowed at their face value against moneys received by him, and which the appli-cants contended should be allowed only at cants contended should be allowed only at the amount settled by the disputed agree-ment. The court of appeal was divided upon the question whether the officer had jurisdiction under the order to determine the validity of the agreement, and the de-cisions in 12 P. R. 612 were affirmed:—Held, by the supreme court of Canada, that the ofby the supreme court of Canada, that the officer not only had authority, but was obliged, to proceed and report as he did, and his report should be affirmed. It is doubtful if a matter of this kind, which relates wholly to the practice and procedure of the high court of justice for Ontario, and of an officer of that court in construing its rules and executive on order of reference made to be him is a ing an order of reference made to him, is a proper subject of appeal to the supreme court. Re O'Donohoe, 14 P. R. 317, O'Donohoe v. Beatty, 19 S. C. R. 356.

Agency Charges - Commission-Settlement.]-Charges by a solicitor who acted as agent for the principal solicitor, are subject to taxation, though the principal receives a commission. Upon such taxation a master should without special direction regard any settlement arrived at between the solicitors. Re Idington and Mickle, 8 P. R. 566.

Business other than Attorney's-Revision.]-Items not appertaining to the business of an attorney cannot be taxed. A reresision will be granted when the master, upon a reference of a bill "for fees and disbursements in his professional business," has allowed charges for other business. In redones and Ketchum, 3 L. J. 167.

Charges Adjudicated upon in Action.]—A solicitor sued his client in a di-vision court for the amount of his bill of costs. While the action was standing for judgment the client obtained from the master in chambers an order for taxation. Pending an appeal from that order judgment was given, which shewed that all the items in the bill which were in dispute were considered and adjudicated upon:—Held, that, considering the nature of the charges and the circumstances disclosed in the affidavits filed on the application, the order of the master was right. Re Burdett, 9 P. R. 487.

Claim for Costs in Winding-up Proceedings.)—In proceeding under a judgment for the winding-up of a company, the former solicitor of the company brought in a claim for bills of costs alleged to be due him. which the master referred to one of the taxing officers to tax:—Held, that the master had authority to direct such reference. On such a reference the taxing officer gives his opinion as to whether the fees and charges claimed as to whether the fees and charges chamed should be allowed or not, and on that opinion the master makes his adjudication. County Court Proceedings.] — On an application by a client for taxation of costs in a suit in chancery, and in another suit in a county court, his affidavit admitted a retainer in the latter suit, but denied one in the former. The solicitor making no claim for costs in the former suit:—Held, that the court of chancery could not order taxation between the client and solicitor. In re Cameron, 1 Ch. (556.

Funds—Lieu,]—Where a solicitor has funds of a client in his possession, or has papers over which he claims a lieu, this court will order delivery and taxation of his bills and payment of any balance, though the services for which he claims have been wholly in county court proceedings. Re Prince, 3 Ch. Ch. 282.

Part of Bill.]—The bill is an entire matter, and in taxation the client cannot separate certain charges for taxation and ask that they alone be referred. In re Davy, 1 C. L. J. 213.

Proceedings not in Court — Mortgage Sale,]—The mortgages of land having brought ejectment and sold under the power of sale, their solicitor sent the surplus purchase money to the mortgagor, accompanied by a statement of the amount due, in which one item was for "solicitor's costs, $143." The particulars being asked for, he rendered two separate bills, one of the ejectment, the other of the sale:—Held, that the two bills might be considered as particulars of the one item in the previous statement, and that the bill of costs in the suit drew with it the other bill, which would not alone have been subject to taxation; and both bills were therefore referred. Transaction of Business—Foreign Estate—Scope of Employment.]—Where the employment of a solicitor is so connected with his professional character as to afford a presumption that his character formed the ground of his employment by the client, the court will exercise its summary jurisdiction over him. Re Airkin, 4 B. & Ald, 47, followed. Solicitors in Ontario being employed to transact business in relation to a claim of their client upon an estate in England:—Held, that they were employed because they were solicitors, and the business was within the scope of the business of solicitors, and it made no difference that the estate was in England, for they were employed in Ontario, and the business was transacted there. Re McBrady and O'Connor, 19 P. R. 37.

Amendment — Leave — Mistake,]— If through mistake an attorney has delivered an erroneous bill, he may, upon special application, shewing clearly how the mistake has arisen, be allowed to amend it or deliver another; but not of his own mere motion. In re Davy, 1 C. L. J. 213.

Item Omitted—Leave to Supply—Costs.]
—An application for leave to add a counsel fee paid and omitted was granted, on payment of costs, such costs being set off against the taxed costs; but the adding of such item was not to affect the question of the costs of taxation. See Re Whalley, 2 Beav, 576. In re Crawford and Crombic, 2 Ch. Ch. 13.

Items Omitted—Special Circumstances—Time.]—A solicitor in delivering a bill of costs omitted to make any charges for "days employed in going to and returning from Ottawa" upon business for his clients. He stated that the omission was through inadvertence; and after taxation of his bill, but before the certificate was signed, applied for leave to deliver a supplemental bill, alleging that he would not have sought now to make these charges if the taxing officer had allowed him certain sums charged in the original bill for travelling expenses, but which were disallowed on the ground that he was travelling on a pass:—Held, that there was no clear evidence that the omission arose from mere accidence that the omission arose from mere accident or mistake, and that the court below could not be said to be wrong in holding that no special circumstances were disclosed for making the amendment. As a general rule, it is too late to make such an application after the result of the taxation is known. Judgment in 14 P. R. 571 affirmed. Re O'Donohoe, 15 P. R. 93.

See In re Malloch, 10 L. J. 327.

Substituted Bill—Undertaking.]—On an application to refer an attorney's bill to taxation, an amended bill of costs was allowed to be substituted for the bill delivered to the client; the attorneys undertaking to receive in full of their fees, charges, &c., the amount of the original bill or the amended bill as taxed, whichever might be the least. - Application within Year — Special Circumstances—Death of Solicitor—Terms.]
—A bill of costs rendered by a solicitor in October, 1888, was paid shortly afterwards, but upon the undertaking of the solicitor, contained in letters written by him, that the payment was to be subject to the taxation of the bill at any time. The solicitor died in May, 1889, and no application for taxation was made till the 2nd September, 1889, when an ex parte order was obtained from the master chambers for taxation, the letters of the solicitor not being produced nor any special circumstances shewn. Upon the application of the executrix of the solicitor to the master to set aside his ex parte order, the letters were produced :- Held, that the master was not bound to vacate his first order, although it was wrong: but, there being no imputation of bad faith, he was right in giving leave to amend the order so as to do substantial justice; and, notwithstanding the death of the solicitor after being paid, there was jurisdiction to order a taxation as against the representative, under the circumstances. The application, being within the year, came under s. 46 of R. S. O. 1887 c. 147; and "special circumstances" to justify a taxation existed in the fact of the letters having been written by the solicitor: but the delay of the applicants and the death of the solicitor were reasons for imposing terms; and it was ordered that upon the taxation the books of the solicitor should be prima facie evidence of the correctness of his charges, or if the books were not available that the bill should be so taxed as to throw the onus of impeaching any charges on the applicants. Re Baker, Re Macdonald, 13 P. R. 227.

been employed to conduct a suit, and otherwise rendered professional services. Without furnishing a bill be demanded £45, which a promised for the client's note for £40, which was renewed and ultimately paid. A motion by the client, after eleven months, for an order to furnish a bill and to refer it for taxation, was refused with costs. In re Fairbanks, 1 Ch. Ch. 222. — Lapse of Years.]—A bill settled for more than twelve months will not be ordered to be taxed, and if taxed by mistake taxation will be set aside. In re-Jones and Ketchum, 3 L. J. 167; S. Lapse of Years—Connected Charges —Agreement—Unsigned Bills—Delay—Overcharges.]—A firm of solicitors for about eight years acted for an estate in the collection of moneys and realization of securities relating to a block of land sold by the testator. During this period the solicitors from time to time rendered statements of account to the executors and paid them cheques for balances in their hands as shewn by such statements, and also rendered detailed bills of their costs for their services, in respect of different actions and proceedings taken, though not in all cases, such bills being paid by the retention by the solicitors, without objection on the part of the executors, of part of the moneys collected. Two or three of the larger bills were moderated by a taxing officer shortly after they were rendered. Upon an application by the executors for taxation of all the bills after the eight years :- Held, that this could not be regarded as one continuous dealing keeping the right to tax in suspense till the collection or exhaustion of all the securities. Held, also, upon the evidence, that there was no agreement between the solicitors that the right to tax generally should remain open to the executors. As to certain of the bills of costs said not to have been actually signed by the solicitors: -Held, that they were substantially sufficient, and, after being paid out of the funds collected, with the knowledge and sanction of the executors, they could not be treated as open to taxation, after years of delay and no specific overcharges being indicated. The month must be reckoned exclusive of the day of rendering the bill and presenting the petition. In re Morphy and Kerr, 2 Ch. Ch. 56.

Lapse of Several Years—Ex Parte Tazation.] — Where a solicitor had irregularly proceeded to tax as between solicitor and client, in the client's absence, the court, upon a petition presented seven years afterwards, ordered a taxation, treating the previous taxation as void, and ordered the solicitor to pay costs of the application. Clarke v. Manners, Re Manners, 4 Gr. 432.

- A petied over a s of overnces. In The court cannot refer a bill after it has been delivered twelve months, unless under special circumstances. The fact that an action is brought on a number of bills delivered during several years, while defendant was plaintiffs client, is not a "special circumstance," within the Act. Quare, is an overcharge, in the absence of traud, a "special circumstance," Read v. Cotton, 6 L. J. 114.

Where several bills were delivered by plaintiff to defendant, the first in January, 1854, and the last in January, 1859, and there were several applications for payment, and a payment made in January, 1860, and an action was commenced in respect of the bills in August, 1861, and no application made to refer them till 4th November, 1861, a summons to refer them was discharged. Read v. Cotton, 6 L. J. 414, approved. Ruttan v. Austin, 8 L. J. 47.

Where defendants, in 1860, in consideration of forbearance, promised to pay a demand of $290, which the attorney said he had charged to his clients, but which was not strictly in whole recoverable from defendants; it was held that it was too late in 1863 to call upon the attorney to deliver a bill of items for the $200, although such a bill was demanded at the time the note was given; and it was also held that the pressure of an execution against lands in 1860 was not a sufficient "special circumstance" to entitle the application to succeed, notwithstanding the lapse of time. Gillespie v, Shaw, 10 L. J. 100.

Plaintiffs acted as attorneys for defendants from 1854 to 1858. In 1855 they had a large claim for costs, which defendants settled on a reduction being made. They continued to act, and rendered full bills each half year, no objection being made to them until a short time before this action, brought by the plaintiffs in January, 1860. Defendants on being sued applied to have the bills taxed, not pointing out any particular error, but alleging generally that the charges were excessive:—Held, that no "special circumstances" were shewn, and the order was refused as to all bills delivered more than twelve months. Read v. Cotton, 3 P. R. 118.

On an application under C. S. U. C. c. 35, s. 30, for taxation of a solicitor's bill, after the expiration of twelve months from its delicery, the special circumstances relied upon by the petitioner to entitle him to an order must be specified in the petition, and must be proved by proper evidence. Where alleged overcharges constituted the special circumstances relied upon, and these were not specified in the petition, were not apparent by the production of the bill itself, and were not otherwise proved, an order for taxation was refused with costs. A payment within C. S. U. C. c. 35, s. 42, means a payment of the whole amount, or some specific portion of the amount claimed to be due in respect of the bill of costs, Re Gilderalecce and Walkem, 6 P. R. 117.

Where a client applies for taxation of an attorney's bill after the expiration of a year from its delivery, he should shew such special circumstances as would have justified a reasonable man in not previously seeking a taxation, or that he was prevented by some unavoidable cause. Where judgment had been sened against the client in an action on the bill during the pendency of negotiations for a settlement, this was held a sufficient reason for directing a taxation after a year. Pattullo v. Church, S P. R. 363.

On a sale of property under a power in a mortgage, the solicitors more than a year before this application, with the approbation of the agent of the mortgage (who was out of the country), retained out of the proceeds of the sale a lump sum for their costs, and delivered no bill:—Held, a special circumstance under R. S. O. 1877 c. 140, s. 44, entitling a subsequent incumbrancer to have a bill of costs in detail delivered to him upon payment of the costs of a copy. Re Malcolmson and Wade, 9 P. R. 242.

On 20th July, 1877. A. and B., a firm of solicitors, rendered their bill to C., also a solicitor, for professional services. On 30th May, 1878. C. wrote to A. and B. claiming a reduction of the bill, and allegting overcharge, and an agreement to do the work for half fees. No notice was taken of this letter, nor did C. take steps to have the bill taxed. On 8th July, 1882. A. and B. sued in a county court on this bill, and judgment was entered therein on 19th July, 1882, for default of appearance, and the step of the s

The rule requiring special circumstances to warrant the reopening or taxation of a bill of costs after twelve months, does not apply where the bill has been delivered after a company has been ordered to be wound up. Clarke v. Union Fire Ins. Co., Caston's Case, 10 P. R. 339.

The bill of costs in question was for professional services rendered the defendant in an investigation of his conduct as a public official before a commissioner appointed by the Ontario government. The special circumstance relied upon to enable the defendant to obtain the order for taxation after the lapse of more than a year from the delivery of the bill was, in the words of the defendant, that "there was a distinct understanding between me and the above named plaintiffs that the payment of the said bill of costs was to lie over to await the decision of the Ontario government, who were by both me and the said plaintiffs, as they stated, expected to pay the said bill of costs, I being one of their officers, and the charges against me having fallen through:"

Held, that the existence of the above understanding, if proved, was not a special circ

cumstance within R. S. O. 1877 c. 140, s. 35, to justify an order for the taxation of the bill after the lapse of a year from its delivery; but that the bill should have been taxed subject to such understanding. Fletcher v. Field, 10 P. R. 608.

After payment of a bill of costs, the court will not disturb it on the ground of overcharge unless it appears to be a case of gross and exorbitant overcharge amounting to fraud. But before payment it is enough if the items are unusual or more than ordinarily large so as to require justification; and if no explanation is furnished by the solicitor, upon whom the onus to do so rests, then taxation will be ordered. The following circumstances were held not to be special circumstances which would entitle the client to tax his solicitor's bills after a year from their delivery. because these circumstances could be as well considered at the trial of the action as on a reference to a taxing officer: (1) That the bills sued on contained certain items included in other bills paid by the client; (2) that some work was charged for which never was done: (3) that a payment of $200 on account by the client was disputed. Held, however, that the conjunction of the following circumstances, viz.: (1) that the relationship of solicitor and client was continued after de-livery of the bills; (2) that there was an offer by the solicitor to make a substantial deduction from the bills sued on; and (3) that there were items of apparent overcharge as to which no explanation was offered by the solicitor: would justify an order for taxation. Re Walker, Walker v. Rochester, 10 P. R. 400.

See Re Bethune & Co., 4 C. L. T. 251.

In this case the large amount of the bills, and the fact that retaining fees were charged by the solicitor, were looked upon as special circumstances. Re Skinner, 13 P. R. 276.

The solicitor defended an action of ejectment and prosecuted three actions for malicious prosecution on behalf of the applicants. On the 18th October, 1880, before the termination of any of the actions, the solicitor delivered to the applicants his bills of costs in them all up to that time. On the 29th April, 1890, he delivered further bills of costs in all the actions, which had then been brought to an end. Application for a reference of all the bills to taxation was made on the 20th November, 1890:—Held, that the applicantion was in time: for the retainer existed until the litigation ended; and the applicants had a full year from the delivery of the bills last delivered to apply for the taxation of all the bills. Held, also, that the "special circumstances" which, by s. 34 of R. S. O. 1887 c. 147, must exist to justify a reference to taxation after twelve months from delivery of the bills, are not confined to cases of actual fraud or gross overcharge and pressure. Re Norman, 16 Q. B. D. 673, followed. Held, also, that bringing three separate actions which might all have been joined in one, and charging exessive counsel fees, were special circumstances to be regarded in ordering a taxation after twelve months. Re Butterfield, 4 P. R. 149.

Where a bill of charges and disbursements rendered by solicitors was posted to the client on the 11th April, 1893, but did not reach the client till a day or two later:—Held, by the master in chambers, that an ex parte order for taxation made on the 11th April, order for taxaton made in the tax 1894, was made after the expiry of twelve months, and should be set aside. The bill was for services rendered and moneys expended in obtaining an Act of parliament for the divorce of the client from her husband:—Held, by the master, that it was a solicitor's bill, and as such taxable under the Solicitors Act. Quare, as to this. Held, by a Judge in cham-bers, that "special circumstances" justifying an order for taxation after twelve months from delivery of the bill must be proved by the affidavits filed upon the application, and where they consist of alleged overcharges, they should be plainly indicated by the applicant, on whom lies the onus of establishing them. And where the only overcharge indicated was the payment to a physician, who was absent from his business three days for the purpose of giving evidence before a parliamentary committee, of $50 and his disbursements, and it appeared that the solicitors had paid the amount in good faith, and the client had at one time assented to it, and it did not appear that the physician's attendance could have been secured for any lesser sun:—Held, that there were no special circumstances warranting an order for taxation after the lapse of twelve northe and for settle. of twelve months and after settlement of the bill by cash and notes, which latter had been paid in part and renewed from time to time. Using Name of Another—Instructions.]—The plaintiff, a solicitor, obtained a verdict for damages and costs in an action for libel, in which, although another solicitor appeared as acting for him in all the pleadings and proceedings in the suit, he actually did the work, and carried on the suit himself:—Held, that full fees and disbursements except "instructions," had been properly allowed to him, and that his acting as agent for the solicitor whose name appeared in the proceedings as his solicitor did not affect his right. King v, Moyer, 9 P. R. 514.

Charges where Negligence Alleged.]

The court refused to interfere with the discretion of the taxing officer in allowing certain costs to the solicitor of proceedings which had been set aside as irregular, and as to which negligence and want of skill were alleged. Gall v. Collins, 12 P. R. 413.

Commission on Money Paid out—Responsibility—Discretion.]—An English company agreed to purchase several thousand acres of land in Canada, and sent out to their attorneys here between $600,000 and $700,000, to be applied on such purchase, which the attorneys lodged in a bank to their own credit, but credited the company with the interest allowed by the bank. The business done by the attorneys was of an important and responsible nature, involving the investigation of many titles, the conducting of negotiations of proceedings before parliament, and the paying out $652,000 in thirty-four different payments, extending over several months. The master, in addition to the charges, including attendances to pay the money, &c., on each parcel, allowed the attorneys for their care and responsibility the sum of $851, being a commission of one-eighth per cent. on the $852,000. On a motion to revise the taxation and disallow this amount:—Held, that it was a matter entirely within the master's discretion, and the court refused to interfere. In re Attorneys, 26 C. P. 495.

Costs of Defence—Charge of Fraud.]— Fraud having been charged against a defendant, who was a solicitor, and the charge being wholly unsupported:—Semble, that it would have been proper not merely to deprive the plaintiff of her costs, but to allow such defendant all his costs. Freed v. Orr, 6 A. R. 690.

Costs of Infant's Guardian.]—A solicitor upon the plaintiff's application having been appointed guardian ad liten to infant defendants, and being unable to recover his costs from the plaintiff, or from the infants' estate, it was ordered that they be paid out of the suitors' fee fund. McKay v. Harper, 6 P. R. 54.

Costs of Unsuccessful Application-Costs Paid to Opposite Party—Counsel Fees.]
—By the judgment in an action it was ordered that the plaintiffs should recover against the defendant whatever amount should be found detendant whatever amount should be found due to them on the taxation of their solicitors' bills of costs of certain litigation, as between solicitor and client, and certain bills were referred for taxation between solicitor and client. Upon appeal from the taxation:

—Held, that it was to be treated as if it had been directed on an application, under s. 32 of the Solicitors Act, R. S. O. 1887 c. 147, by the defendant as the person chargeable, and was a taxation between the solicitors and their clients, the plaintiffs. (2) That the decision of the taxing officer allowing to the solicitors the costs of an unsuccessful interlocutory application, undertaken in the exer-cise of an honest and fair discretion, should not be interfered with. (3) That the pay-ment by the solicitors to the opposite party in the litigation of a sum for interlocutory costs which the plaintiffs were ordered to pay, while not properly such a disbursement as should be included in the bill of the costs of the action, was a proper payment on behalt of the clients, to which payments credited on the reference might have been applied, and should be treated as so applied. (4) That, notwithstanding the provisions of the tariff. the taxing officer was justified in taxing larger counsel fees upon this taxation than had already been allowed between solicitor and client for the same services, and that his discretion as to the amount thereof should not be interfered with. Re Geddes and Wilson, 2 Ch. Ch. 447, followed. Smith v. Harwood, 17 P. R. 36.

Costs of Taxation—Attachment for.]—Where on the taxation of a solicitor's costs, the master, without any order as to the costs of taxation, taxed them and included them in his certificate, and a subpena and attachment issued in due course for the whole amount included in such certificate, and the client remained in close custody for a considerable time under the attachment, before making any application in regard to the supposed error as to the costs of taxation, the court refused to set aside the subpena and attachment. McGill V. Sexton, 1 Gr. 311.

Counsel Fees.]—Fees paid to counsel at the trial are recoverable. Brock v. Bond, 3 U. C. R. 349.

Reference-Unnecessary Length Brief—Copies of Depositions.]—Upon appeal from the taxation between solicitor and client of a bill of costs for the defence of an action of redemption, in which, before the beginning of the sittings at which the action was entered for trial, an arrangement had been made between the parties that all the matters in question should be referred to a master, and accordingly no witnesses were subpoened, and reference was directed at the sittings :-Held, that the taxing officer had no discretion to allow an increased counsel fee with brief at the trial, as the action could not be said at the trial, as the action could not be said to be of a special and important character, nor to allow a fee for advising on evidence. The reference lasted for 137 hours, 18 of which were occupied in argument. Nearly the whole of the time was devoted to the main matter in contest, viz., whether the defendants should be charged with an occupation rent, and if so, at what amount. The master found that they were chargeable with a rent of that they were chargeable with a rent of $312.50. The taxing officer allowed the solici-for $302 for the time occupied in taking the evidence, and $47 for the argument:—Held, that the allowance of counsel fees upon a reference, under clause 107 of the tariff, should be exceptional, and made only when matters of special importance or difficulty are involved at some particular sitting; and also that the taxing officer should have taken into consideration the unreasonable time occupied over so small a matter, and have exercised his discretion by confining the solicitor to the minimum allowance of $1 an hour, under clause 104 of the tariff, for the argument as well as for the taking of the evidence. taxing officer allowed the solicitor $77.50 for brief upon appeal from the master's report; this amount included $67.80 paid to the master for copies of the depositions :- Held, that the solicitor had no prima facie right to order and charge for these copies, and, in the ab-sence of any authority from his clients, should not be allowed for them upon taxation. taxing officer allowed the solicitor $35 counsel fee upon the appeal, $12 for travelling expenses, and $10 counsel fee upon the plaintiff's motion for judgment, which came before the court with the appeal:—Held, that these allowances, though liberal, were not so clearly wrong as to justify the court in interfering. Re Robinson, 16 P. R. 423. See S. C. in appeal, 17 P. R. 137, ante 4 (a).

Increased Amounts.]—Solicitor and client taxations are distinct from party and party taxations, both as to the scope of the inquiry and as to the powers of the officer to whom the reference is made, in regard to the allowance of items. In solicitor and client taxations there is no power of intervention on the part of the taxing officer at Toronto in order to obtain an increase in amount under such items in the tariff as 104, 145, 150, 153; but the officer charged with the reference has power to exercise the discretion recognized by the tariff in increasing the amount chargeable for certain services, ordinarily exerciseable by the officer at Toronto in party and party taxations. Interest on Moneys in Solicitor's Hands, J—A taxing officer cannot charge a solicitor with interest upon moneys in his hands belonging to his client. Re O'Donohoe, 12 P. R. 612. See S. C., 14 P. R. 317.

Quantum of Costs—Inferior Court—Superior Court.]—Held, that a party who gave instructions to commence an action, specifying the court (the attorney not stating that he would expect him to pay the difference should the verdict be within the county court jurisdiction, and commencing the action in the superior court), was only liable for county court costs between attorney and client, the sum recovered being within the jurisdiction of the county court, and no higher costs being taxable between party and party. Scanlan v. McDonough, 10 C. P. 104.

Where a solicitor incurs useless and unnecessary costs by instituting in chancery a suit within the jurisdiction of the county court, the surplus of the costs in chancery over the inferior court tariff, will not be allowed to him against his client. Where in such a suit the costs in chancery had been disallowed in toto between the parties, the master allowed the plaintiff's solicitor county court costs, the client having derived some benefit from the suit. Re Hardy, Poole v. Poole, 3 Ch. Ch. 179.

Interior Court—Superior Court—Knowledge of Facts.]—On an appeal by the client from a local master's taxation, as between solicitor and client, of the solicitor's bill in an action against a bank, which was dismissed, and in which the real claim, if any, was on a deposit receipt, with interest amounting to $355, or the moneys secured thereby, alleged to belong to the plaintiff as administratrix, and in which action the facts, as set out in the report, only came to the knowledge of the solicitor and client after the action was brought, there being sufficient room for doubt whether a claim could be ascertained, after the death of the creditor, by the signature of the debtor, to warrant the bringing of the action in the high court; costs. of a young woman, one of two residuary lega-tees and devisees under a will, against the executors and trustees, for an account. Upon the pleadings, charges of negligence in getting in rents, &c., and of refusal to account, were made against the defendants, and it was stated made against the derendants, and it was stated that a release was obtained from the other residuary legatee in the absence of his solici-tor, immediately after his coming of age, by taking advantage of his necessities. At the trial judgment was given in the usual terms of an administration order, reserving further directions and costs; and by the judgment on further directions the plaintiff was given the general costs of the action against the defendants, saving, however, costs incurred by the plaintiff proceeding by writ of summons instead of by summary application for an administration order, and the plaintiff was ordered to pay the extra costs occasioned to the defendants by such proceeding:—Held, that no question was raised by the plaintiff which could not have been disposed of in the master's office; and, under the circumstances, in the absence of any evidence to shew that the client had, with knowledge of the practice of the structed the solicitors to proceed in the way they did, they could not tax against her any more costs than they would be entitled to had they proceeded by notice of motion instead of by writ of summons. Scanlan v. McDonough, 10 C. P. 104, specially referred to. Re Allenby and Weir, 13 P. R. 403, 14 P. R. 227.

Retaining Fee.] — A retaining fee paid by the executors to their solicitors in an administration suit may, under certain circumstances, be a perfectly reasonable disbursement. Chisholm v. Barnard, 10 Gr. 479.

A retaining fee of £5 was held not taxable in this case. Cullen v. Cullen, 2 Ch. Ch. 94.

No retaining fee will be allowed to a solicitor who is also counsel. In re McBride, Farley v. Davis, 2 Ch. Ch. 153.

Such a fee was allowed under exceptional circumstances. Re Fraser, 13 P. R. 409.

The solicitor, during the progress of the action in respect of which the costs in question were incurred, made a contract in writing with his clients for the payment to him of a retaining fee of $100, explaining fully to them the effect of the bargain, and that, in case of their success in the action and costs being awarded to them, they would not be able to tax against or claim from the opposite party the amount of this fee. The officer allowed the retaining fee on taxation, and reported that the contract was a fair and reasonable one:—Held, on appeal, that the contract could not be enforced against the clients. Section 51 of the Act respecting solicitors, R. S. O. 1887 c. 147, relates to matters of conveyancing, &c., and not to the conduct of an action in the ordinary way. Ford v. Mason, 16 P. R.

By the judgment in an action the defendant was required to pay the plaintiffs' costs of a former action, as between solicitor and client, to be taxed:—Held, that an unpaid retaining fee which the plaintiffs had agreed in writing to pay to their solicitors, over and above the costs of the action, could not be taxed against the defendant. Action—Reservation of Rights—Costs.]—
Where an action was brought on an attorney's bill together with another claim, an order was made referring the bill for taxation and reserving the right to raise any defence to the action, costs to abide the event of the taxation, not of the cause. Re Green, 7 P. R. 89.

Appeal from Order for Taxation.]—
The right of appeal from chancery is confined to orders or decrees made in a cause pending between parties. Where, therefore, an appeal was made to the court of error and appeal from an order directing the taxation of a solicitor's bill against his client in a particular mode, the court dismissed the appeal with costs. The respondent, although he may, is not bound in such a case to move at an earlier stage to quash the proceedings. Re Freeman, 2 E. & A, 109.

Certificate of Taxing Officer—Effect of.]—The taxing officer's allocatur is sufficient proof that the business charged for was done by the solicitor. Clarke v. Union Fire Ins. Co., Caston's Case, 10 P. R. 339.

Interlocutory Costs — Set-off — Discretion.]—Decisions in 15 P. R. 289, refusing to order a set-off of certain interlocutory costs against the amount alleged to be due to the solicitors upon bills in course of taxation, affirmed on appeal:—Held, that, as the taxation had never been completed, and the solicitors declined to proceed with it, they were not entitled to set-off. If the taxation had been completed, the fact of the interlocutory costs being ordered to be paid forthwith after taxation would not have prevented their being ordered to be set-off; but it raised an inference that it was not intended that they should be set off. Whether the costs in question should be set off or not was in the master's discretion, and, having regard to the fact that they had been assigned, and to the other circumstances before the court, it could not be said that an improper discretion had been exercised. Re Clarke and Holmes, 16 P. R. 94.

Mortgage for Costs—Foreclosure—Tazation.1.—In a suit of foreclosure on a mortgage taken by a solicitor from his client to secure advances and costs, the court refused to direct taxation, there being no overcharge pointed out, or any undue pressure shewn. Shace v. Drummond, 13 Gr. 662.

Refund of Amount Overpaid.] — An attorney may be ordered to return moneys which he has retained beyond the amount of his bill as taxed to the person at whose instance the taxation has taken place, under

C. S. U. C. c. 35, though such person be a third party who is liable to pay and has paid the bill to the attorney or party entitled thereto. In re Glass v. Macdonald, 13 C. P. 419.

An attorney received from his client a note for £50, the costs in three suits. The client, being sued upon this note in the name of one W., apparently a nominal plaintiff, paid £20, and gave a confession for the balance: the bills were afterwards taxed at £24; and the court then ordered the attorney to refund the amount overpaid. Ex parte Colborn, 1 P. R. 208.

- Taxation-Parties.]-In an action instituted by the widow of T. W. to set aside a will alleged to have been executed by him under undue influence, D. acted as her citor and obtained a decree as prayed. ing the pendency of such action one H. appointed by the court administrator, with the view of getting in certain debts due the estate before they should be barred by lapse of time. Numerous actions were brought by D. in the name of H., in some of which moneys aggregating a large sum were recovered, whilst in many no benefit whatever resulted to the estate, and costs amounting in the whole to $2,738.37 were incurred, which had been taxed as between solicitor and client, on H. passing his accounts before the master, and were paid to D. partly by H. out of moneys of the estate, and partly by funds coming into D.'s hands as such solicitor and retained by him. Sub-sequently a prior will of T. W. was duly proved by the executors named therein, who took proceedings to obtain an account of H.'s administration and a taxation of D.'s costs. These proceedings finally resulted in a dismissal thereof as against D., and an order on H. to pass his accounts, which he did, charg-ing the estate with the amount of costs so paid to D., but on a retaxation of D.'s bills the aggregate amount was reduced to $725.56, several of the bills having been disallowed in toto, on the alleged ground that the actions had been brought without the leave of the court, and H. was ordered to pay in the differ-H. was unable to do so, and thereupon he, as also the executors, by their several petitions applied for and obtained an order upon D. to repay the amount with costs, or in default be struck off the roll of solicitors. (29 Gr. 280.) On appeal the order was reversed, the court being of opinion that the taxation and all the other proceedings in reference thereto having been had in a proceeding to which D. was not a party, he could not be bound thereby. Wilson v. Beatty, In re Donovan, 9 A. R. 149.

Solicitors Act—Effect of—Inherent Jurisdiction to Order Taxation.]—The Act respecting solicitors does not deprive the court of its inherent jurisdiction over them as officers of the court, but that jurisdiction is expressly preserved by s. 56, and under it an order may be made for the taxation of a bill, although not in terms of that Act, Re Mc-Brady and O'Connor, 19 P. R. 37.

Third Party—Right to Intervene on Tazation—Interest.]—G., a judgment creditor of W. A. C., garnished a fund recovered by J. W. C., suing as the assignee of W. A. C.; G. disputed the validity of the assignment from W. A. C. to J. W. C., and an issue was directed to be tried between G. and J. W. C., as to the portion of the fund which would remain after satisfying the claim of the solicitor of J. W. C., who had a lien upon the fund for his costs incurred in the recovery of it. Upon appeal from the taxation of these costs, before the trial of the issue:—Held, that G. had the right to be represented upon the taxation and appeal, as in one event he had an interest in the reduction of the solictor's bill, and there could not be two taxations, one as against J. W. C., and the other against G. if he succeeded in the issue. Gall v. Collins, 12 P. R. 413.

5. Signing and Delivery of Bill.

Admission of Signature.]—The-month required by 2 Geo. 11. c. 23 for the delivery of an attorney's bill is a lunar, and not a calendar month, and the day of the service of the bill is included. A defendant having indorsed an admission of service on the bill produced:—Held, to have admitted that the copy received was signed by the attorney. Berry v. Andress, 3 O. S. 645.

Alteration after Delivery—Items.]—An attorney having once rendered his bill, cannot, after steps taken to have it taxed, add to it, or deduct from it, without leave of the court. If he has rendered his bill making charges in a lump sum, though he may perhaps make up items to shew it correct as to the amount, yet he cannot recover or tax more than this amount. In re Davy, 1 C. L. J. 213.

Attorneys' Firm — Sufficiency of Signature.]—The attorneys who commence the action must sign the bill delivered. Where, therefore, three attorneys composing a firm commenced the action, and only one of them signed the bill:—Held, insufficient. Sufficien v. Bridges, 5 U. C. R. 322.

Conditional Delivery—Reservation.]—
Solicitors delivered bills of costs, indorsing on each, "In the event of traxation, we reserve to ourselves the right of delivering another and more complete bill:"—Held, an absolute delivery. Delivery of Second Bill—Taxation of —Estoppel.]—An attorney, upon the request of his clients, on the 27th March, 1803, delivered to them a bill of costs. They afterwards, disregarding this, obtained an order upon him to deliver a bill of costs of all causes and matters wherein he had been concerned for them, which he did, including the services for which his former bills had been delivered. Necessity for Delivery — Set-off.]—An attorney's costs will be allowed as a set-off and as a debt, though no bill has been delivered. Macpherson v. Tisdale, 11 P. R. 261.

Necessity for Itemized Account.]—
In an action on a bill, where the costs were charged at one lump sum, although the costs as between party and party had been taxed at that sum in the original suit, and no bill of items had been delivered by the plaintiffs to their client:—Held, not a compliance with C. S. U. C. c. 35, s. 27. Stanton and Warren v. McLean, 9 L. J. 391.

See the Mowat, 17 P. R. 180.

Order for Delivery—Afidavits.]—A bill maxt be delivered before it will be referred for taxation. The first application should therefore be for delivery. Affidavits filed in support of such application must be intituled in the court, and, under the statute, "in the matter of A. B." In re Eccles, 6 L. J. 59.

— Business out of Court.]—An attorney or solicitor may be ordered to deliver a bill of his charges for business done by him as such, though the services performed were not in whole or in part for business done in court, as in this case, where the retainer was to investigate the title of and purchase property. In re O'Donohoe and Warmoll. 4 P. R. 293.

Nominal Plaintiff,]—A client who is merely a nominal plaintiff—being in this case the person in whose name an election petition had been filed, and who lent his name for the purpose of convenience, and was not held responsible by the attorney for his costs—is not entitled to an order on the attorney for delivery of his bill of costs, &c. Re Attorneys, 6 P. R. 319.

Payment — What Amounts to.] —
Solicitors retained out of moneys in their hands belonging to their client, sufficient to pay their costs, and handed the client a cheque for the balance. The client took the cheque but did not cash it until she had written to the solicitors stipulating that the cashing should be without prejudice to her right to recover a larger sum, if such was due her. After the lapse of a year from the receipt of the cheque, the client applied for an order for the delivery of a bill of costs:—Held, that the circumstances did not amount to payment of the costs, and the order for delivery was made. Re Sutton, 11 O. B. D. 377, distinguished. Schragg v. Schragg, 17 P. R. 218.

— Settlement—Costs.] — An attorney may be ordered to deliver his bill though it has been fully settled, and to give credit therewith for all moneys received. When after such an order he makes default in delivery, be will have to pay the costs of such order. In re Francis v. Boutton, 6 L. J. 20.

— Payment—Taxation.] — The jurisdiction granted by the provisions of the Act respecting solicitors, R. S. O. 1897 c. 174, to order the delivery of a bill of fees, charges, or disbursements for business done by a solicitor as such, is distinct from and independent of the jurisdiction thereby granted to order the same to be taxed; and there is power to order delivery of a bill whether it has been paid or not, and whether or not it is one which the court would have power to refer to taxation. Duffett v. McEvoy, 10 App. Cas. 300, Re West, [1892] 2 Ch. 167, followed. Re McBrady and O'Connor, 19 P. R. 37.

Order for Delivery and Taxation— Rusiness out of Court—Practipe Order.]— Upon a motion in chambers for an order for the delivery and taxation of a solicitor's bill of costs relating to certain proceedings under a mortgage:—Held, that the chancery practice of obtaining such orders on practice is the more convenient one, and should prevail in all divisions of the high court of justice. Order made with costs as of a practice order. Re Fitzgerald, 10 P. R. 279.

Upon the application of a mortgagor the mortgagee's solicitor was ordered, by a county Judge, to deliver to the applicant a copy of the property of the applicant of the control of the co

Payment—What Amounts to.]—
Where no bill of costs has been delivered by a solicitor to his client, there cannot be payment within the meaning of s. 49 of the Solicitors Act, R. S. O. 1897. c. 174, which refers to the payment of a delivered bill. And where one of the solicitors and their client, according to the solicitor's evidence together examined the sitems in the solicitors' dockets, which amounted to over $1,500, and the solicitor explained that certain entries had not been made which would amount to $300, and the client paid the solicitors $1,500 in full settlement:—Held, that this was not equivalent to the delivery of a bill and payment after consideration. Re Pinkerton and Cooke, 18 P. R. 331.

Stay of Proceedings.] — A Judge cannot by the same order direct the delivery and reference to taxation of a bill. Nor can he, in an action for such bill, stay proceedings until delivery and taxation; for, semble, that the right to restrain the action under the statute, only attaches on a reference of the bill to taxation. Quære, whether there may not be an order for delivery after action commenced; but, unless a very strong case is made out, defendant should be left to plead the non-delivery. Boomer v. Anderson, In re Boomer, 16 C. P. 103.

Service on a solicitor appointed by the one of several clients who had been active in the suit, and through whom instructions had been given, deemed sufficient. Re Morphy and Kerr, 2 Ch. Ch. 82.

6. Substituting Bill of Costs for Commission.

Administration Suit—Large Amount— Reducing—Notice.] — In an administration suit the estate was insolvent, the total assets being $72,000, the liabilities $138,475, and the creditors 180 in number. The commission of the solicitor who acted for all parties was allowed by the master, under G. O. Chy. 643, at $995. Eight creditors, at the close of the suit, and without notice to the solicitor until fourteen days before moving, applied for an order for the delivery and taxation of the soliorder for the delivery and that tool of the sen-citor's bill instead of the allowance of the commission, on the ground that the commis-sion was excessive:—Held, that the commission was not so exorbitant as to warrant the substitution of a taxed bill, and a probable reduction by that mode of payment, especially as the benefit to the creditors would be trifi-ing. The scope of G. O. Chy. 643 is merely to aid in fixing a solicitor's remuneration. It is not intended to do strict justice, but is only a sort of convenient expedient for fixing costs without taxation. liberal compensation in such cases is not per se a reason for reducing the commission, or directing the taxation of a bill in its stead, nor per contra, is a low or inadequate compensation a reason for increasing the commission, sation a reason for increasing the commission or directing payment by a taxed bill. Semble, in cases affected by G. O. Chy, 643, any party interested in the estate, who may desire that a solicitor should be paid in the particular matter or suit on the scale of a taxed bill in-stead of by commission, should give notice to the solicitor to that effect, and have the master note it in his book, at the earliest stage possible in the proceedings, but there is no practice authorizing the substitution of a bill of costs for commission at the option of any party. In re Stuebing, Anthes v. Dewar, 10 P. R. 236.

——— Small Amount—Increasing.] — See Wright v. Bell, 16 C. L. T. Occ. N. 193.

7. Unnecessary Proceedings.

After Offer of Settlement.]—The mere non-communication by a solicitor to his client of an offer of settlement does not prove that proceedings after the offer were unnecessary, and that the costs of them should be disal-lowed under con, rule 1215, unless it be shewn that the offer was an advantageous one, the acceptance of which the solicitor ought to have advised, and it can be fairly inferred that he refrained from communicating it and advising its acceptance merely for the purpose of putting costs into his own pocket, and without regard to the interests of his client. Re O Donohoe, 12 P. R. 612, 14 P. R. 317.

Multiplicity of Actions. — A solicitor, acting on behalf of three clients, brought three separate actions for malicious prosecution against the same defendant. The three causes of action all arose out of an information for action all arose out of an information for action all arose out of an information for action all arose out of an information the plaintiffs: — Held, that under rule 300 the three causes of action could have been joined in one action; that it was the duty of the solicitor to have so advised his clients; and that, not having done so, he could not be heard to say that his clients had instructed him to bring three separate actions. And upon taxation of his bill between solicitor and client he was allowed costs as of one action only. Booth v. Briscoe. 2 Q. E. D. 496, and Gort v. Rowney, IT Q. B. D. 525, followed. Appleton v. Chapel Town Paper Co., 45 L. J. Ch. 276, not followed. Re Butterfield, 14 P. R. 567.

Several Affidavits—Uscless Motion for Judgment.]—Two actions were brought by the same plaintiffs against different defendants to recover rent for different parcels of land, in which the defences were not identical. A compromise was effected, and it was agreed between the parties "that judgment shall be entered in each of the said actions for the amounts claimed therein by the plaintiffs, with costs of suit between solicitor and client." and judgments were entered accordingly—Held, that the plaintiffs were entitled to tax a separate set of costs for each action. The plaintiffs made six affidavits on production, either prompted by the action of the defence or by way of voluntary supplement to the original affidavit—Held, that they were entitled to tax the costs of one affidavit only, with extra folios for the additional matter contained in the subsequent affidavits. Held, that tupon the taxation "between solicitor and client" of the plaintiffs' costs, they were not entitled to the costs of a motion for summary judgment under rule 739, which was useless and not according to the practice, and was refused because the indorsement on the writ of summons claimed "interest on arrears of rent," and was, therefore, not a good special indorsement. Baldwin v. Quinn, Baldwin v. McGuire, 16 P. R. 248.

Proceeding by Action instead of Summarily — Relief against Solicitors.]—
The order and decision of Robertson, J., 13 P. R. 403, upon appeal from taxation of costs between solicitor and client, disallowing to the solicitors the additional costs occasioned by their bringing on their client's behalf an action for administration, where a summary application would have sufficed, was affirmed by the court of appeal. In the administration action the additional costs incurred by the defendants in that action were allowed to them by way of set-off against the costs awarded to plaintiff:—Held, that no relief could be obtained by the client, upon a proceeding for taxation of costs, in respect of the loss suffered by he in virtue.

Examination of Client as Judgment Debtor.]-A solicitor whose costs have been taxed on the application of the client and not paid, a fi. fa. having been returned nulla bona, is entitled to an order for the examination of his client touching his estate and effects. Re Blain, 1 Ch. Ch. 345.

Indemnity — Covenant — Solicitor and Client Costs.]—W. sold land to H., and covenanted to indemnify him against a mortgage thereon:—Held, that H. was not entitled to solicitor and client, but only to party and party, costs of an action on the covenant. Hutton v. Wanzer, 11 P. R. 302.

Insolvency — Preferred Claim—Opposing Lunacy Petition.]—A petition was presented by the husband of D. to declare his wife a the hearing of the petition D. assigned her separate estate for the benefit of her creditors. The court dismissed the petition. D.'s solicities tor presented a petition for taxation of D.'s costs, and for payment by the assignee in priority to the claims of the creditors :- Held, that the costs of opposing the petition might be classed as necessaries which the wife is liable to pay out of her separate estate, and for which that estate is liable in the hands of her assignee, but that they could not be put or assignee, but that they could not be put on the footing of maintenance. Such costs should be paid ratably out of the assets, and costs subsequent to the assignment should not rank in competition with creditors before the assignment, Re Dumbrill. 10 P. R. 216.

Judgment - Assignment to Solicitor Validity upon Insolvency—Restriction.] — G. recovered a judgment against D., and after-wards, though in insolvent circumstances, as-signed the same by two assignments to his atsigner the same by two assignments to his at-torney, one for costs due him by G. Afterwards C. obtained a judgment against G., and at-the the debt so due him by D., and gave to be described by the described of the attachment to D. before the as-signer of the attachment to D. before the as-torney of the attachment to D. before the asto G. by himself under an execution issued at the instance of the assignee of G.: -Held, that the solicitor of G. must be restricted to the costs incurred by him in the action brought by G. against D., and that R. must stand as an ordinary creditor. Davidson v. Douglas, 15 Gr. 347.

Lost Bill of Costs-Voucher-Secondary Evidence.]—On the reference in this case H. sought to use a certain bill of costs as a voucher of moneys properly expended by him in legal proceedings, and it was shewn that the said bill had been properly brought into the master's office on a former reference, and properly left there, and that search had been made for it, but without success, although there was no evidence that it had been removed, or that it had been noticed or seen elsewhere afterwards, nor of any occasion when it would pro-bably have been removed from the office:— Held, that the master should have admitted secondary evidence of its contents, and proceedings should have been taken in respect to it as nearly as might be the same as if H. had been able to produce it. Beatty v. Haldan, 10 O. R. 278.

Municipal Corporation-Councillor as Solicitor.]—A solicitor who is a member of a municipal council cannot recover from the corporation for services rendered them, he being a trustee under C. S. U. C. c. 54, s. 217, Town of Peterborough v. Burnham, 12 C. P. 103.

Uncertificated Solicitor-Payment to.] The defendant in this action was represent-—The defendant in this action was represent-ed by a firm purporting to be a firm of solici-tors, one of the members, however, not being a duly admitted or certificated solicitor. The plaintiff objected to the costs awarded the de-fendant in the action being taxed to him:— Held, that, in the absence of proof that these costs had not been paid by the defendant to the persons who acted as his solicitors, the ob-isation could not prevail: nor could it even if persons who acted is its solicitors, the operation outld not prevail; nor could it even if that proof had been given. Regina v. Cameron, Playter v. Cameron, 4 U. C. R. 165.

Fi. Fa. -Affidavit-Costs.]-On an application to set aside a fi. fa. vexatiously issued, the plaintiff's attorney was ordered to pay the costs of the application, he having stated im-pertinent and irrelevant matter in his affi-davit. Anon., 4 P. R. 242.

- Enforcement—Affidavit.]—Remarks upon the vexatious and oppressive conduct of an attorney in enforcing a levy for costs without any necessity, after an offer of payment in a reasonable time and manner; and upon the introduction of irrelevant and improper matter into an affidavit. Davidson v. Grange, 5 P. R. 258.

Enforcement in Several Counties-Costs.—Held, under the facts of this case, there being no ground for apprehension of losing the debt, that the conduct of the attorney in issuing and enforcing three executions to different counties was improper, and that his client's instructions could form no justification. The court, therefore, ordered him at once to refund to defendants the poundage retained by two of the sheriffs, and to pay the costs of the executions directed to them, and of this application. Henry v. Commercial Bank, 17 U. C. R. 104.

- Prompt Issue of.]-It is irregular to take out a fi, fa, the instant costs have been taxed, without allowing a reasonable time to the solicitor whose client has to pay them to communicate the result of the taxation.

Judgment-Omission of Credit-Excessive Scizure-Pleading.]-Held, that the secsive Secure—recamg.;—ried, that the sec-ond count of the declaration, charging defen-dants, as attorneys, with having entered judg-ment and levied on plaintiff for the full amount of a claim, without deducting a payment made, and the third count, charging a pays a levy on other goods after enough had been seized, were both good in substance. Reid v. Bull, 15 U. C. R. 568.

Penalty for Conduct-Costs.]-Quære, as to plaintiff's right under the circumstances of this case to costs as between attorney and client, to be paid by defendant's attorney, as a punishment for his vexatious conduct. Gore District Mutual Fire Ins. Co. v. Webster, 10 L. J. 190.

Refusal to Deposit Document-Costs.] —Where a solicitor adopts a course obviously unreasonable and perverse, he will be ordered to pay the costs occasioned thereby. Where, therefore, a solicitor refused to leave with the master a mortgage under which he claimed on behalf of a creditor, and the master disallowed the claim, the court refused to interfere with the master's finding, and made an order for costs against both the solicitor and client, But they gave the client, the creditor, a further opportunity of proving his claim, unless the solicitor should shew that he acted under express instructions. Brigham v. Smith, 2 Ch. Ch. 462.

(b) Other Cases.

Affidavit as Attorney before Appearance.]—Until after appearance a defendant has no attorney in the cause, and an affidavit by a person calling himself such was, therefore, held insufficient to support an application to change the venue. Hood v. Cronkrite, 4 P. R. 279. Commented upon in Attorney-General v. McLachlin, 5 P. R. 63.

Answer Sworn before Solicitor-Irregular Transmission.]—The fact that an answer had been sworn before a commissioner who had been formerly concerned as a solicitor in the cause, was not held to be ground for taking the answer off the files; but where an answer had been irregularly transmitted, it was ordered to be re-sworn within a given time, with costs against the defendants. Gordon v. Johnson, 2 Ch. Ch. 205.

Appearing as Attorney for Infant-Costs.]—An infant cannot appear by attorney, but must appear by guardian. If the appear-Dut must appear by guardian. If the appearance is by attorney, all subsequent proceedings are irregular. An attorney who appears for an infant, knowing his infancy, will be ordered to pay the costs of all subsequent proceedings, and of the application to set the same aside. Macaulay v. Neville, 5 P. R. 235.

Appearing for Parties not Interested -Costs.]--Where a solicitor appeared to represent parties who had been served with notice, being claimants in the master's office, but were not in the least interested in the question then at issue, and asked for costs, the court held that such conduct ought to be discouraged, and refused him costs, Simpson v. Ottawa R. W. Co., 2 Ch. Ch. 226.

Ascertainment of Facts before Suit. A solicitor before commencing a suit should examine the instrument on which it proceeds, examine the instrument on which it proceeds, or in case of its loss should use due diligence in resorting to the means of information open to him, and to which he is referred by the client. Roe v. Stanton, 17 Gr. 389.

Becoming Security for Costs.]-It is irregular for a solicitor to become security for costs for his client, Beckitt v. Wragg, 1 Ch. Ch. 5. See Re Gibson, 13 P. R. 359.

Breach of Undertaking-Dismissal of Suit.]—The court has jurisdiction to relax its general as well as its special orders, and will in its discretion do so to further the ends of justice, or to relieve a suitor against difficul-ties occasioned by a solicitor. Where a defendant moved to dismiss the plaintiff's bill, the plaintiff having failed to comply with an un-dertaking, such failure having arisen through a slip of the plaintiff's solicitor, the applica-tion to dismiss was refused. Devlin v. Devlin, 3 Ch. Ch. 491.

Carelessness-Costs. |- Where the plaintiff's attorney had conducted his proceedings with little care, the defendant's rule to set them aside was discharged without costs. Harrington v. Fall, 15 C. P. 541.

McFeeters v. Dixon, 3 Ch. Ch. 84.

- Replevin Bond.]-Semble, that the inability of the plaintiff's attorney in replevin to communicate with his client, not knowing where he was, affords no excuse for allowing two assizes to elapse, for it is the plaintiff's delay, not that of his attorney, which is a breach of the bond. Bletcher v. Burn, 24 U. C. R. 124.

Misleading Opposite Solicitor—Judgment—Costs.]—An attorney having received a declaration without denying that he was the defendant's attorney, and a plea having been requested from him several times, he not denying his character as attorney for the defendant, the court set aside interlocutory judgment, signed for want of a plea, without costs, but stated that they would on application against the attorney order him to pay the costs. Dobie v. McFarlane, 2 O. S. 285.

Mistake in Law—Relief—Pleading.]— An application was made to vacate a pracipe decree taken into the master's office, and to allow, instead of a disputing note, an answer to be filed setting up the Statute of Limita-tions. The application was held to be properly made in chambers, and was granted, it being shewn that the note was filed through a mistake of the solicitor in supposing that the defence of the statute was available under it. Cattanach v. Urquhart, 6 P. R. 287.

Neglect to Plead Unmeritorious Defence. —Semble, that an attorney would not be liable for culpable negligence, in not urg-ing for his client the defence that the agreement sued upon was made on a Sunday, as it is not part of his professional duty to take all dishonest advantages. Vail v. Duggan, 7 U. C. R. 568,

Proceeding for Costs after Settlement.]—When, after process served, the parties settled, and the plaintiff agreed to pay his own costs, but, notwithstanding, the attorney went on, thinking that the defendant should pay the costs, the proceedings were set aside for irregularity. Parent v. McMahon, Suppressing Facts-Motion on Irregularitics.]-Defendant moved against the verdict because no issue book had been served in time, seatise no issue book had been served in time, shewing by his affidavits that notice of trial was given on the 11th October, and that on the commission day an issue book, with notice of plaintiff's, but not of defendant's, title, was served. In answer it was sworn that with the notice of trial an issue book had been served, with which, for a reason explained, no copy of plaintiff's notice of title was given, and that, according to promise, such notice was given afterwards, to which a copy of the issue book was attached, to make it intelligible. The court severely censured the conduct of defendant's attorney in suppressing the fact of an issue book having been delivered with the notice of trial. Parsons v. Ferriby, 26 U. C. R. 380.

Taking Examination of Married Woman.]—The solicitor of the husband is not as such disqualified from taking the examination of a married woman for the conveyance of her land. Romanes v. Fraser, 16 Gr. 97, 17 Gr. 267.

Taking Instructions for Will-Pointing out Effect—Language.]—See Wilson v. Wilson, 22 Gr. 39.

Treating with Opposite Party.]—A solicitor should not treat with a party to a cause in the absence of his solicitor. Bank of Montreal v. Wilson, 2 Ch. Ch. 117.

Using Name of Clerk in Litigation.] —The practice of an attorney using the name of his clerk as nominal plaintiff, instead of the name of his client, is reprehensible. Dickson v. McMahon, 14 C. P. 521.

Withholding Notice of Objections-Subsequent Advantage—Costs.]—In this case the verdict, though irregularly obtained, was set aside without costs, as defendant's attorney had not raised the objection upon which it was set aside until after it had been obtained, and his conduct was wanting in candour in and its conduct was wanting in candour in not drawing attention to such objections to the procedure as he intended to insist upon until the day before the trial, although he might have done so some two months before. Cushman v. Reid, 20 C. P. 147.

2. Dealing with Client,

Loan of Money—Fraud—Want of Advice.] — The attorney (defendant) having made a loan to his client (the plaintiff), the court, under the circumstances of the case, court, under the circumstances of the case, refused to interfere on the alleged ground of fraud by the attorney, he having denied all the allegations of fraud set up by the plaintiff, the allegations of fraud set up by the plaintiff, and his statements being corroborated by the signature of the plaintiff to a memorandum prepared by defendant when the loan was effected, although the latter should have refused to proceed with the loan without the appointment of a solicitor to act on behalf of the borrower. Recs v. Wittrock, 6 Gr. 418.

Management of Estate—Trustees— Breach of Duty.]—See Taylor v. McGrath, 10 O. R. 669.

Obtaining Release for Another Client—Evidence.]—An old man, whose mental faculties had been somewhat impaired mental faculties and been somewhat impares by age, being in difficulties with his son, ap-plied for advice to the attorney of persons against whom he had recovered a judgment for one debt and a verdict for another debt; the attorney obtained from him a release of the two debtors without any consideration, and without his having any other advice in and without his having any other advice in regard to the transaction; and the only evidence of what had passed between the two was the evidence of the attorney himself, the client being dead:—Held, that the release could not be maintained in equity. Dewar v. Sparting, 18 Gr. 633.

See, also, McLean v. Grant, 20 Gr. 76.

Purchase of Land — Evidence of Fair Dealing — Impeaching — Time.] — Conveyances obtained by a solicitor from his client must state the transaction correctly; and the solicitor must preserve evidence that an adequate price was paid, and that the transaction was in all respects fair, and such as a competent and independent adviser of the client would have approved of. Where these obligations are neglected, the suit of the client must be brought within twenty years, but an unexplained delay of less than that period may, under circumstances, be a bor. Where nineteen years had elapsed, and the delay was accounted for, the heirs of the client were held entitled to relief. Oakes v. Smith, 17 Gr. 600.

—Fraud.]—On a bill filed by one of two infant plaintiffs in an administration suit (after attaining majority), seeking to impeach the proceedings therein on the ground of fraud:—Held, that the fact that the plaintiffs in that suit, as also the trustees and the executors, had been represented by one solicitor, the omission from the decree of any direction as to wilful neglect or default on the part of the defendants therein: a material difference between the decree and the decree on further directions as to the lands directed to be solid for satisfaction of debts; a purchase by the solicitor, so acting for the several parties, of a valuable portion of the estate did not of themselves evidence fraud and collusion. McDougall v. Bell, 10 Gr. 283.

Sale under Mortgage. — A solicitor of a mortgage cannot become a purchaser under a power of sale contained in the mortgage, though the proceedings for the sale were not taken in his name, and it was not shewn that any loss had occurred by reason of his being the purchaser. Howard v. Harding, 18 Gr. 181.

Purchase of Mortgage — Estate—Solicitor for Administrator.]— The widow of an intestate obtained letters of administration, and her brother, a lawyer, acted for her as a friend, not professionally, in the management and settlement of the affairs of the estate. While so employed, the brother with his own money purchased a mortgage which had been created by the intestate:—Held, that he was entitled to hold the mortgage for his own benefit. Paul V. Johnson, 12 Gr. 474.

Fiduciary Relationship.]—In a foreclosure suit the defendant alleged that the plaintiff, a solicitor, had been employed by him in April, 1878, to procure a loan of $1,400, which he required to pay off a mortgage for $2,000, on which there was due $2,120, and that, taking advantage of the information so acquired, the plaintiff had purchased the mortgage for himself at the price of $1,400. It appeared that the defendant had, in the spring of 1877, obtained a loan of $600 on a portion of the land in question, through the plaintiff acting as agent and legal adviser of a loan company; that in January following, the defendant had applied to the plaintiff, acting in the same capacity, to procure a small loan from the company on the property in question, which the plaintiff told him he could not recommend to the company; that afterwards one B., who held the $2,000 mortgage, tried to sell it to the company through the plaintiff, who, finding that the land comprised the company, wrote B, to that effect, and sub-sequently the plaintiff, who denied that the defendant had ever requested him to obtain the $1.400 loan, purchased the mortgage for himself for $81,625 - Held, reversing the decree in 27 Gr. 429, that the evidence shewel that the defendant had not applied to the plaintiff for the $1.400 loan, and that there was no confidential or fiduciary relationship existing between the parties which precluded the plaintiff from purchasing the mortgage. Kibburn v. Arnold, 6 A. R. 185.

Purchase of Securities from .|—An attorney purchasing securities from his client, taking no undue advantage, cannot be punished as for any violation of his duty. In re Bartlett v. Meyers, 1 U. C. R. 262.

Usurious Interest.]-In August, 1860, the plaintiff, being pressed for money, applied to defendant to purchase from him a mortgage, which the defendant agreed to purchase on such terms as would give the defendant fifteen per cent, per annum. In October of the same year the transaction was completed. In 1865 the plaintiff filed his bill. alleging that the defendant was his solicitor, and had taken advantage of his necessities. and praying that he might be relieved. The defendant did act as attorney for the plaintiff in 1854, but not from that time until February, 1860, when the plaintiff put two claims into the defendant's office for collection, one of which proceeded no further than issuing a writ. The money in the other had been collected and paid over to the plaintiff in June, 1860; the defendant knew nothing of either suit, and was never afterwards employed professionally by the plaintiff. The court, having reference to all the circumstances and the delay in instituting proceedings, dismissed the bill with costs. McLennan v. McDonald, 14 Gr. 61.

Purchase of Title Paramount—Resale—Trustees Notice—Account.]—An attorney, retained to recover an estate for the heirat-law of a former owner, bought up a title paramount to his client's, and obtained possession of the property, which he converse who subsequently sold portions of it of the value of the property of the property who subsequently sold portions of it of several purchasers, all of whom but one had not paid their purchase money, and that one had employed the same attorney in effecting his purchase. In fact the person in whose behalf the proceedings had been taken was not dead. On a bill filed for that purpose the purchasers were declared the trustees of the heir-at-law. Graves v. Henderson, S Gr. 1.

An attorney in the prosecution of suits to recover an estate for the supposed heir-at-law. A. buys in a paramount title for the heir-at-law, and subsequently conveys the estate to A., the supposed heir, who sells and conveys to divers purchasers. On a bill filed by B., the real heir, against the attorney and A., and the purchasers from them, the court—in this respect affirming the decree below, sub nom. Graves v. Smith, 6 Gr. 306—adiudged them to be trustees for B., although it appeared that the ancestor had long before his death conveyed away all his interest in the lands for value. But some of such purchasers having had a prior or better equity than the plaintiff, the court—varying the decree of the court below in his respect—directed that they should not be disffect, and subnied that the him to obtain mortgage for ersing the deidence shewed pplied to the nd that there y relationship ich precluded the mortgage.

Henderson v. Graves, 2 E. & A. 9.

Sale of Land—Fuilure of Title—Relief—Corenants.]—An attorney, selling property of which he was the apparent, but not the real, owner, acted for the purchaser, who had confidence in him and employed no other solicitor in the matter. The attorney did not disclose to the purchaser the true state of the title, but alleged it to be good, though without any fraudulent intention. The true owner having, after the conveyance was executed, recovered the property from the purchaser:—Held, that the purchaser was entitled to have his payment and expenditure on the property made good to him by his vendor, and the latter was not protected by having given only limited covenants for title. McRory v. Henderson, 14 Gr. 271.

— Taking Mortgage—Enforcement of Covenant—Assignee, —An attorney sold lands to his client at a most exorbitant price, and took back a mortgage on the estate sold and on other lands securing the purchase money. The court on a bill filed declared that the sale was fraudulent, and that an assignee of the mortgage, without notice of the fraud, was not at liberty to sue on the covenant for the mortgage money; although, as a bona fide purchaser for value without notice, he was entitled to hold the land in security. They, however, ordered the attorney to discharge the land from the incumbrance thus created. Dears v. Hautsk., 4 Gr., 394.

Sale of Security — Costs — Promissory Note—Reneval — Commission.]—An attorney assigned to his client a mortgage securing £175, with a payment of £50 indorsed, leaving £175 due. In reality nothing had been paid, but the £125 was the amount for which the attorney (the mortgage) had sold the land to the mortgage. had sold the land to the mortgage, Afterwards the attorney claimed certain costs from the client for proceedings taken upon this mortgage against the mortgager, and obtained his note for the amount. When the note became due, the attorney charged the client five per cent. commission, in addition to legal interest, on renewing it, on three several occasions. The court set aside the assignment of the mortgage, and directed an account of all dealings between the attorney and client, with costs to the hearing. Grantum v. Hawke, 4 Gr. 582.

Settlement—Acknowledgment—Onus.] — An atorney had for a long time advised his chent as to raising money and also got bills discounted for him. Upon an alleged settlement between them the client signed a formal acknowledgment of indebtedness in a large sum. The court, upon a bill filed impugning the bona fides of such settlement, refused to admit this acknowledgment as primā facie evidence in favour of the attorney. Davis v. Haulse, 4 Gr. 394.

Taking Conveyance from Solicitor— Breach of Trust—Redemption—Costs.] — An execution being in the hands of the sheriff against lands, the defendant applied to a solicitor to procure his services in obtaining a settlement of the demands against him. To enable the solicitor to raise funds for that purpose, the client, at his suggestion, conveyed his lands to him in fee, taking back a defeasance stating the object for which the deed was made, which was subsequently lost. To raise money the solicitor executed a mortgage for £245, and the mortgagee sold the same to another person for £150, which was handed to the solicitor, and thereout he paid the claims against the client, amounting in all to about £90. Afterwards the solicitor demanded from the client £245, and subsequently £300 as the price at which the client would be allowed to redeem; and, this demand not having been complied with, the solicitor sold to a third person for £125 over and above the mortgage, but the purchaser had notice of the claim of the client. The court declared the acts of the solicitor a plain breach of trust; that the client was entitled to redeem upon payment of what was actually expended on his behalf; that the purchaser of the mortgage was, under all the cir-cumstances, entitled to hold the land only for what he had actually paid, and interest; the excess of which over and above the amount expended for the client the solicitor was ordered to pay, together with costs of the suit to the hearing. McCann v. Dempsey, 6 Gr. 192.

Taking Conveyance in Name of Solieitor—Trust—Agreement—Promissory Notes— —Specific Performance.]—An attorney took a conveyance of property in trust for a client, but did not sign any writing acknowledging the trust. An oral agreement was subsequently entered into, that the attorney should accept the property in discharge of two notes which he held against the client:—Held, that this agreement was binding on the attorney, though not in writing. After making the agreement, the attorney put the two notes in suit, in the name of a third person, and obtained judgment by default:—Held, that the judgment was no bar to a suit by the client for specific performance of the agreement. Fleming v, Duncan, 17 Gr. 76.

Taking Crown Patent in Name of Solleitor—Mortpage—Account.] — A person in indigent circumstances, being entitled to a grant of land from the Crown, had consulted a solicitor with a view of obtaining it. In the course of their transactions the solicitor wrote, "I think I can manage for you so effectually that I can get your deed from government, probably through some assistance on my part." The client having executed an assignment, as he alleged, by way of security to the solicitor, and the patent for the land having been issued, the solicitor set up the transaction as an absolute purchase, in consequence of which the wife of the plaintiff, acting as his agent, took steps to assert her busband's claim, and procured the assistance of her brother. After repeated applications the solicitor agreed to reconvey upon being paid £170, asserted by him to be due. This the brother advanced, and took a conveyance of the property, said to be worth £800, in his own name, and then alleged he had purchased for his own benefit. The court declared the deed to the solicitor a mortgage only; that his assignce had in fact acted as agent of the plaintiff, and could not purchase for his own benefit; and directed an inquiry as to certain points left in doubt by the evidence before the court, and an examination of the solicitor's books: unless the purchaser would consent to reconvey upon receiving back the amount paid by him to the solicitor. McHroy v. Haucke, 5 Gr. 516.

Taking Security for Costs—Assignment of Leave—Parties, I—D, being indelted to the plaintiff for costs in some suits and other matters, by an instrument not under seal assigned to him a lease of certain premises made by D, to the defendant, together with all rent in respect of said lease and the term thereby created. In an action to recover from the defendant the rent which accrued due after the making of the assignment, the Judge charged the jury that, while plaintiff remained Dt's solicitor, he could not take any security for his benefit, and that he should have dissevered the connection between them, and let D, have independent legal advice: — Held, misdirection, for that the assignment, if not invalid in other respects, was valid so far as it was a security for costs already incurred. Held, also, that D, was mot a necessary party, Galbraith v, Irving, 8 O, R, 751.

Lien.]— Actions were brought by one G. against two insurance companies to recover losses occasioned by a fire. The actions were tried together, and it one the plains difference tried together, and it one the plains dismissed with costs. The defendants acted as G.'s solicitors in each action. By a special agreement, upon the faith of which each action was carried on, the solicitors were to have a lien upon the amount recovered in each action for the costs of that action and of the other. The insurance company against whom the unsuccessful action had been brought, attached the moneys due to G. by the company against whom G. had succeeded, and the defendants claimed a lien on the judgment which had been thus attached for all their costs in both actions:—Held, that, so far as the lien claimed by the defendants depended upon the agreement, it must fail, because that agreement was nothing more than an agreement to secure costs to be incurred in the future, and the general proposition that a solicitor will not be permitted to take a security for costs to be incurred, is established beyond controversy. Held, also, that the solicitors had no lien for the costs of the unsuccessful action upon the fund recovered in the other, that fund not having been recovered or preserved by means of the costs incurred in the action which was lost, and the two actions not being so intimately connected as to be regarded as one. London Mutual Fire Ins. Co. v. Jacob, 16A. R. 392.

Mortgage — Sale under Power — Notice.]—Plaintiff was a purchaser under a power of sale in a mortgage for $200 taken by a solicitor for costs, only $30 of which had been incurred at the date of the mortgage. The power was exercised to collect the full amount of the mortgage and interest. Before the purchase was completed the mortgage's right to sell was raised as a question of title by the plaintiff, who had become aware of these facts. Before the objections were removed, the property was sold again under a prior mortgage:—Held, that the mortgage was a valid security for no more than $30; that the plaintiff, having become aware of the vexatious user of the power, was justified in refusing to complete the purchase, and was entitled to recover back the deposit paid by him. Locking v. Halsted, 16 O. R. 32.

Termination of Relationship—Order.]—Although a solicitor may for sufficient cause, by notice to his client, terminate the connection between them, the court will not make an order for that purpose upon the exparte application of the solicitor. Bicker v. Ansell, 1 Ch. Ch. 367.

3. Other Cases.

Acting for Opposite Party.] — Where there were several plaintiffs in a suit, and a final order of foreclosure had been obtained by their solicitor:—Held, that their solicitor could not afterwards move on behalf of the defendants foreclosed to set aside the order for foreclosure, though two of the plaintiffs concurred in the application, and only the third objected. Boulton v. Don and Danforth Road Co., 1 Ch. Ch. 329.

Knowledge of Solicitor—Imputation of -tring for both Iendor and Purchaser.]
—Where such motives exist in the mind of a solicitor as would be sufficient with ordinary men to induce them to withhold information from the client, the presumption is, that it was withheld; and the uncommunicated knowledge of the solicitor is not imputed to the client as notice. Where the mortgagees sold the mortgage to defeat or delay their creditors, but the vendee- had no actual notice of the purpose, it was held that the circumstance of his having employed one of the mortgages as solicitor in drawing the assignment, did not make the knowledge of the solicitor notice to the vendee. Cameron v. Hutchison, 16 Gr. 526.

VIII. LIEN OF SOLICITOR,

1. Existence of Lien.

On Books of Account.]—Quere, as to the right of an attorney to detain books of account belonging to his client, on an alleged claim. McLean v. Maitland, 5 L. J. 279.

On Documents and Property—Agent of Solicitor.]—Held, that as against their principal, a country attorney, town agents have a general lien upon all documents, money, and articles coming into their hands in the course of their agency business, without regard to the nurpose for which they were received. Re A., B., and C., 14 C. L. J. 142.

On Fund Recovered—Cheque—Votice.]
—Where D., a solicitor, had recovered certain money for his client B., and another solicitor, acting on the instructions of B., had obtained a cheque for the amount payable to the order of B., and had parted with the control of the cheque without first giving proper notice to D.—he was held liable to D. to the extent of D.'s lien on the said money so recovered through him. McPhatter v. Blue, 15 C. L. J. 162.

On Insolvent Estate — Preferential Lien.]—Two actions were brought by a trader to restrain proceedings under a chattel mortgage against the trader's stock of goods, and interlocutory injunctions were granted, but posit paid by R. 32.

the actions were not carried further. The chattel mortgagee brought an action to recover the mortgage money and to restrain the mortgagor from selling the goods, whereupon the latter made an assignment for creditors, and, by arrangement in that action, the goods were sold by the assignee, and payment was made in full to the mortgagee for debt, in-terest, and costs of that action, after notice and without objection on the part of any of the creditors or of the solicitor who conducted the actions brought by the trader. The soli-citor asserted that by his exertions in these actions he had saved the goods from being sacrificed by summary sale, and brought this action to have it declared that he was entitled to a preferential lien for costs upon the estate in the hands of the assignee :- Held, that, even if it were shewn that stopping the sale under the mortgage was a benefit to the estate, there was no jurisdiction, without the direction of a statute, to charge the property recovered or preserved, and without a money fund there was no subject for a lien. Costs as of a successful demurrer only were allowed to the defendant. Tremeear v. Laurence, 20 O. R. 137.

On Judgment—Agent of Plaintiff in Person. |-Held. that the Toronto agents of a party suing in person have no lien for the costs incurred in the suit by such agents. Ross v. McLay, 7 P. R. 97.

On Promissory Note for Costs—Agent of Solicitor.)—An attorney sent to his Toronto agent a promissory note, given to such attorney for costs, to be used upon a taxation pending between him and the maker of the note:—Held, that the agent had a general lien upon the note for his agency costs, notwithstanding that the relationship of principal and agent had been dissolved by the agent; and an order to deliver it up was refused. Re Attorney, 7 P. R. 311.

On Title Deeds—Mortgage.]—A mortgager after foreclosure, having retained the title deeds, delivered them to a third party to whom he had sold, whose solicitor claimed a lieu as against such third party, and declined to deliver them to the mortgagee. On a motion for that puirpose, an order was made for their delivery. Stennett v. Aruyn, 2 Ch. Ch. 218.

2. Extent of Lien.

On Deed—Costs of Executing.]—A deed ordered to be executed under a decree was sent by the vendor's solicitor, after being executed by him, to the defendants to be executed by them, which they did before their attorney employed by them for that purpose:—Held, that such attorney was not entitled to a lien upon the deed beyond his disbursements and fer preparing the affidavit of execution. Grooks v. Street, 1 Ch. Ch. 220.

On Fund Recovered—General Costs.]—
The lien upon a fund recovered extends only to the costs incurred in the particular suit or proceeding, and not to the attorney's general costs against the client in other matters. Canadian Bank of Commerce v. Crouch, S P. R. 437.

Costs—Sale of Judgment.—Charging Order — Taxed Costs—Sale of Judgment.]—The power given by rule 1129 to make an order in favour of a solicitor for a charge upon a judgment recovered by his exertions, is a discretionary one; the right given by the rule is ancillary to the solicitor's right to be paid on his retainer. And where an infant recovered judgment for damages for personal injuries, the solicitor retained by his father was allowed a charge upon the judgment, but only to the extent of the costs taxed against the defendant; and the court refused to direct a sale of the judgment to enforce the charge. Nevills v, Ballard, 18 P. R. 134.

— Division Court — Garnishment.] — Where solicitors claimed a lien for costs upon a judgment recovered, the amount of which was the subject of a garnishee suit in a division court: —Held, that the Judge in the division court had power under s. 197 of the Division Courts Act, R. S. O. 1887 c. 51, to decide upon the proper sum to be allowed in respect of such lien, and was not bound to refer to it elsewhere. Davidson v. Taylor, 14 P. R. 78.

Solicitor and Client Costs — Other Actions. 1 — The plaintiff having recovered judgments against B. and his sureties on a replevin bond, B. moved to have satisfaction entered. The plaintiff's attorney claimed a lien on the judgments for his costs as between attorney and client, not only in these suits, but in other actions between the parties upon the same subject:—Held, that he was entitled only to the taxed costs as between attorney and client in the suits. Bletcher v. Marsh, 25 U. C. R. 92.

3. Loss of Lien.

On Deed—Costs of Preparation—Delivery for Engrossment.]—Property was sold under order in the suit, and the conveyance and a mortgage, which was to be given back to the vendor, were prepared at the purchaser's expense. After engrossment of the deeds by the solicitor for the purchaser, they were given to the parties for execution, and the conveyance (executed) was returned to the solicitor of the purchaser, the mortgage being retained by the vendor.—Held, that the solicitor by delivering the engrossment to the vendor for execution had lost his lien thereon for the costs of preparation, as against the vendor (the mortgages), and was bound to deliver it up to him:—Held, also, that the application to deliver was properly made in the matter in which the sale had taken place. In re Sproule, I Ch. Ch. 396.

On Documents—Assignment of Bills.]—An attorney has no lien on his client's papers after he has assigned his bills against him. Reesor v. Ella, 7 P. R. 371.

Waiver—Replevin.]—The plaintiff, a solicitor, claiming on the defendant's papers a lien for costs, settled with him, taking a note therefor payable on demand. He then went to the United States, leaving the note and papers with another solicitor as his agent. defendant, stating that he required the papers, or some of them, for use in his business, brought replevin proceedings in a division court, giving a bond to prosecute the suit with effect and without delay, or to return the property replevied and to pay the damages sustained by the issuing of the writ, and there was a breach of the bond in not prosecuting the suit with effect. Under the replevin the defendant procured some of the papers only, which were tendered back to the plaintiff and refused, the defendant stating that they were of no value, the agent having retained the valuable ones. In an action on the bond by the plaintiff to recover the amount of the note as damages he had sustained by the replevin:—Held, that, if any lien existed, which was questionable, by reason of the which was questionable, by reason of the taking of the note and departure from the country, it was not displaced by the delivery in the replevin suit : but the plaintiff had failed to prove any actual damage; and, though there might be judgment for nominal damages and costs, there would be a set-off of the defendant's costs of trial: and the action was dismissed without costs. Under the Division Courts Act, R. S. O. 1887 c. 51, s. 266, the whole matter could have been litigated in the division court. Quere, as to the amount of damages recoverable. The fact of the conditions of the bond being in the alternative instead of the conjunctive, remarked on. Ken-nin v. Macdonald, 22 O. R. 484.

On Fund Recovered—Revivor of Suit— Lien of Original Solicitor.] — The plaintiff's solicitor carried on a suit to wind up a partnership till a decree was obtained and some progress made with the reference thereby directed. The plaintiff became eraburrassed, and assigned to a creditor, in whose name, acting by another solicitor, the suit was revived, and a sum was ultimately found due to him:—Held, that the solicitor of the original plaintiff had not lost his lien for costs, but was entitled to be paid next after satisfaction of the costs of the solicitor of the plaintiff who had concluded the suit, out of the fund realized. Clark v. Eccles, 3 Ch. Ch. 324.

On Promissory Note — Constructive Change of Possession.]—The plaintiff, being the holder of a note made by F. S. and indexed by T. S., employed B., his attorney, to collect the semiconder of the process thereon. B. obtained pudgment against the maker, and failed against the ladorser. Another suit was afterwards brought in the name of this same plaintiff, by instructions of B., against T. S. upon an alleged promise to against T. S. upon an alleged promise to produce the property of the prop plaintiff was entitled to recover. English v. Clark, 12 C. P. 451.

On Title Deeds—Mortgage — Sale.]—A solicitor, having a lien on title deeds as against his client for costs generally, was employed by A. to prepare a mortgage from such client, when his professional connection with the mortgage ceased. A second mortgage was created in favour of another person. On default in such second mortgage, the mortgage sold under a power of sale in the mortgage.—Held, that the lien on the deeds in his possession, as against the mortgagor, continued as against the purchaser. Gill v. Gamble, 13 Gr. 169.

See Berneski v. Tourangeau, 18 P. R. 263, post 4.

4. Priorities.

As against Assignee of Fund in Court.]—An assignment was made by the mortgagor to a creditor of a portion of a fund in court, as to which litigation was pending between mortgagor and mortgagee as to their respective shares:—Held, that to the extent to which the solicitors of the mortgagor incurred costs in resisting and prevailing against the accounts brought in on behalf of the mortgage, to that extent their lien should precede the assignment. Yemen v. Johnston, 11 P. R. 231.

As against Attaching Creditor.]—An award for an amount, together with costs, having been made in favour of a party, the costs were taxed by consent, and the amount promised to be paid to the solicitor of the party ordered to receive such costs. A garnishee order was subsequently obtained by a third party, under which the amount awarded and the costs were paid over to such third party, with notice, however, of the solicitor's lien for the costs. Under these circumstances, a motion made to stay proceedings to enforce payment of the costs under the award, at the instance of the solicitor to whom they were payable, was refused with costs. McLean v. Beatty, 1 Ch. Ch. 138.

An attorney's lien for costs as between him and his client, the judgment debtor, will not be allowed to stand in the way of an attachment. Regina v. Benson. 2 P. R. 350; Bank of Upper Canada v. Wallace, ib. 352.

Upon the application of a solicitor having a lien in respect of a debt attached, the attaching order will be discharged as against him, but the party against whom such an order has been made is not entitled to its discharge on the ground of the existence of the lien in favour of his solicitor. Where an application for the discharge of an attaching order was made nominally by a plaintiff against whom the attaching order had been granted, but really by and for the benefit of his solicitor, who had a lien on the debt attached, leave was given to amend the proceedings by making the solicitor the applicant, and the order was discharged, but without costs. Cotton v. Vonsittart, 6 P. R. 96.

In garnishee proceedings a court of law will, as against the attaching creditor, protect an attorney's lien for costs of the action or suit in which or by which the debt attached has of law will, protect an on or suit ached has been recovered, where the garnishee has notice of the lien. A court of equity will restrain a creditor who has obtained an attaching order at law from enforcing it against a fund recovered by means of a suit in equity, to the prejudice of the attorney's lien for costs in that suit. Canadian Bank of Commerce v. Crouch, S. P. R. 437.

The lien of a solicitor upon a verdict recovered for his cilent will prevail against an attaching order obtained by a creditor of the client. Shippey v. Grey. 28 W. R. 877, followed. But in the circumstances of this case, where the defendant had paid over to an attaching creditor of the plaintiff sunder the full belief that he was obliged to do so, and that the plaintiff's solicitors had no right to prevent the attaching creditor from recovering the money, and the solicitors, being aware of the existence of the attaching order, had conduced to this belief by their neglect to enforce their rights, they were not allowed to claim payment over again from the defendant. Berneski v. Tourangeau, 18 P. R. 263.

As against Execution Creditor—Fund in Court — Stop Order — Defendant's Solicitor, |—A defendant's solicitor, |—A defendant's solicitor as well as a plaintiff's solicitor may have a lien for costs on a fund in court. A bill was filed by a purchaser against the vendor for rescission or specific performance of a contract for sale of lands in the county of Simcoe, made the 12th October, 1870, and registered in July, 1875, and by the decree made in October, 1876, the plaintiffs were ordered to pay certain overdue purchase money. C., a creditor of the defendant, having placed a fi. fa. lands in the hands of the sheriff of Simcoe in December, 1878, obtained a stop order in January, 1879, against the purchase money in court. The defendant's solicitor claimed a prior lien for costs of this suit but had obtained no stop order;—Held, on the application of the defendant's solicitors for payment of the fund to them, that their lien had priority. Part of the fund in court was a balance of purchase money paid into court by the plaintiff in March, 1879, pursuant to the decree on further directions made in October, 1878. C., seeking to attach this balance, in addition to his stop order obtained in January, 1879;—Held, that as to this balance the solicitors' lien had also priority. Wardell v. Trenouth, 8 P. R. 142.

As against General Creditors—Fund in Court—Agent of Solicitor. —The Toronto agents of a deceased solicitor were held entitled to a lien on a sum of money in court to the credit of this matter, to which the solicitor was entitled for his costs, to the extent of heir unpaid agency bill of charges in this matter, and it was ordered that their bill should be paid out of the fund in priority to should be paid out of the fund in priority to clean the control of the control of the collision. He Ryan, 11 P. R. 127.

As against Parties to Suit—Fund in Court.]—In a suit for construction of a will and administration of testator's estate, where the land of the estate had been sold and the proceeds paid into court, J. J. B., a beneficiary under the will and entitled to a share in the fund, was ordered personally to pay certain costs to other beneficiaries:—Held, reversing the decision of the court of appeal, 16 P. R. 325, that the solicitor of J. J. B. had a lien on the fund in court for his costs as between solicitor and client, in priority to the parties who had been allowed costs against J. J. B. personally. Held, also, that the referee before whom the administration proceedings were pending had no authority to make an order depriving the solicitor of his lien, not having been so directed by the administration order, and there being no general order permitting such an interference with the solicitor's prima facie right to the fund. Bell v. Wright, 24 S. C. R. 656.

See Taylor v. Robinson, 19 P. R. 31, and Orford v. Fleming, 18 C. L. T. Occ. N. 142, 241, post 7.

As against Subsequent Solicitor—Fund in Court,]—In an action for an account against a trustee, the plaintiffs changed their solicitor during the course of the action. Before the change the first solicitor obtained a judgment of reference, and, on the defendant's consent, an order for payment into court by the defendant of $250, which he paid in, after the change, subject to further order and to a claim for commission. Nothing was done by the second solicitor of the contract of the contract

5. Set-off-Effect of Lien on.

(a) Claims Arising in Different Actions.

Costs against Debt—Accrual of Lien—Injunction.]—A, having obtained a decree against B for payment of a large sum of money, issued an attachment to enforce payment, upon which B. was arrested. The attachment was afterwards set aside for irregularity, and an action for false imprisonment brought by B. against A. and his solicitor. An injunction to restrain the proceedings at law was granted, but A, and his solicitor were ordered to pay B. his costs of the action at law and of the motion for injunction. On an application by A. and his solicitor to set off these costs against the debt due by B. to A.:—Held, that the lien of the attorney at law for costs not having accrued, and as, by reason of the injunction, it never could accrue, and B.'s right to the costs being derived from an order of the court of chancery, A. was entitled to a set-off. Wilson v. Switzer, I.Ch. Ch. 75.

Cross-judgments.]—One of the several decendants in a cause, against all of whom a verdict had been recovered, was allowed, on a summary application after judgment, to set off the amount of a judgment which he had recovered against the plaintiff, against the plaintiff, sudgment against the plaintiff, sudgment against him and his codefendants, saving to the attorney his lien for costs. Fortune v. Hickoon, I. U. C. R. 408: Tippete v. Huacke, 1 P. R. 365. Sec, also, Reed v. Smith, 1 P. R. 321.

Damages and Costs.—There can be no set-off of damages or costs between the same parties in different actions, to the prejudice of the solicitor's lien; that is the effect of rule 1205. The lien is simply a right to the equitable interference of the court not to leave the solicitor unpaid for his services, and it exists if it is made to appear that the solicitor has not been paid his costs. Turner v. Drew, 1 F P, R, 475.

See Lynch v. Wilson, 3 P. R. 169; Canadian Pacific R. W. Co. v. Grant, 11 P. R. 208, post (b).

(b) Claims Arising in same Action.

Claim and Counterclaim — Cross-judg-ments. — Where indements were recovered in the same action by the plaintiff on his claim with general costs of action, and the defendant on his counterclaim with costs thereof, such claim and countern with a rising out of the same subject matter, in diagrant for counterclaim largely exceeding the former in amount, a set-off was allowed to so much of the money recovered by the defendent rainst the plaintiff on defendant's counterclaim at the plaintiff on the recovery of judgment against the plaintiff on his recovery of judgment against tiff on his recovery of judgment against tiff on his recovery of judgment again and the plaintiff's solicitors to a lien on the costs adjudged to the plaintiff. Quare, when a judgment, as in this case, has been framed without directing a set-off, whether a Judge in chambers has power to direct it to the prejudice of the solicitor, so as to vary the decree of the court. Brown v. Nelson, 11 Pt. 121.

The plaintiffs sued for freight for the carriage of timber, and the defendants pleaded a counterclaim for neglect and delay in the carriage of the timber. The judgment at the trial was as follows: "The verdiet will be for the plaintiffs for $2,122, and for the defendants upon their counterclaim for $1,420, and each party will be entitled to costs against the other, as if the statement of claim and counterclaim were separate actions, and I direct that judgment be entered accordingly:—Held, that the judgments recovered by the plaintiffs and defendants must be treated as judgments in separate actions, and therefore, that in setting off the judgments the claim for costs of the defendants' solicitors upon the judgment against the plaintiffs should be protected. Canadian Pacific R. W. Co. v. Grant, 11 P. R. 208.

Costs up to Hearing—Further Directions—Debt—Affidavit,]—By the terms of the judgment pronounced at the trial costs up to the hearing were to be paid to the plaintiff out of the fund in court, a reference was directed to take the accounts, and further directions and subsequent costs were reserved. The report of the officer to whom the reference was directed found the plaintiff indebted to the estate in a considerable amount, and a motion was made by the defendant Moffatt (pending an appeal from the report) to stay payment out of court of the costs of the plaintiff up to the trial until after the hearing on further directions in order that the amount found due to the estate by the plaintiff might be set off pro tanto against the costs awarded to the plaintiff:—Held, that the judgment pronounced at the trial gave the plaintiff and his solicitor a vested right to be paid out of the fund in court prior to the defendant's equity to ask a set-off, and no set-off should be allowed to the prejudice of the solicitor's lien thus arising. A solicitor's lien having been asserted at the bar during the argument, an affidavit proving it was allowed to be put in subsequently, following the suggestion of Strong, V.-C., in Webb v. McArthur. 4 Ch. Ch. 63. Daucson v. Moffatt, 10 P. R. 366.

Cross-judgments for Costs — Discretion.)—By the judgment in the action costs were awarded to the plaintiff against the chief defendant, and to the other defendants as assist the chief of the costs, and the plaintiff solution of costs, and the plaintiff solution of costs, and the plaintiff solution of the solution of costs awarded to his client against the chief defendant. The defendants all defended by the same solicitor:—Held, that, under rule 1204, the question of setting off costs was in the judicial discretion was rightly exercised by the officer in refusing to set off the costs ordered to be paid to the plaintiff by the chief defendant against the costs ordered to be paid by the plaintiff to the other defendants. Construction of rules 1204 and 1205. The older decisions as to set-off are not applicable since rule 3. Flett v. Way, 14 P. R. 312.

See, also, S. C., 11 C. L. T. Occ. N. 130.

Interlocutory Costs—Judgment—Order for Set-ofi.)—The costs of a motion, and appeals following, to discharge the defendant out of custody under an order for arrest before judgment, are properly interlocutory costs, though partly incurred after judgment; and where such costs are awarded to the defendant, they ought to be set off against the judgment which the plaintiff has obtained against the defendant in the action, and which the defendant is unable to pay. As against such a set-off, the defendant's solicitor has no lien on the costs which the plaintiff has been ordered to pay, and such costs may be ordered to be set off or deducted, as provided in rule 1165. In this case the order allowing the defendant costs was not made until after judgment, and therefore an application to the court for a direction to set off was necessary; had the order been made before judgment, the taxing officer would have made the deduction. Elije v. Butt. 18 P. R. 409.

Judgment for Costs—Subsequent Costs—Garnishment.]—Where judgment was given for payment by the plaintiff to the insolvent defendant of the costs of the action, and the defendant's solicitors were by an order of court declared to have a lien upon such judgment, and to have the sole right to control the judgment and execution to the extent of their costs between solicitor and client, and the plaintiff became entitled against the defendant to costs of garnishing proceedings upon the judgment, begun before the lien was

R. 34, that rule 1205 did not apply to enable a set-off of the costs to be made. Clarke v, Creighton, 14 P. R. 100.

Order-Discretion-Other Sources of Payment.]—The plaintiffs, having recovered judg-ments for large sums against the defendants, sought to set off such sums, pro tanto, against certain costs adjudged to be paid by the plaintiffs to the defendants, but the solicitors for the defendants asserted a lien for their costs upon the judgment for these costs recov-ered by their clients against the plaintiffs. The defendants themselves were worthless but there was another source from which it was probable that the defendants' solicitors would obtain payment of their costs :-Held, that this was not enough: if the solici-tors had a certainty of being able to recover their costs from another source, the set-off could be ordered, because the lien would then be unnecessary; but it being merely a probability, the set-off could not be ordered without its operating to the prejudice of the soli-citor's lien, for, should that source fail, the lien could not be replaced; and, therefore, under rule 1165, the set-off should not be ordered. Molsons Bank v. Cooper, 18 P. R. 396.

Statutory Set-off of Excess of Costs.] -Held, that the plaintiff's attorney, having advanced to the plaintiff the amount of the verdict, could have no lien so as to deprive the defendant of the benefit of 13 & 14 Vict. 53, s. 78, enabling him to set off the excess of his costs above division court costs against the plaintiff's costs. 6. Settlement of Action by Client.

Collusion to Defeat Lien - Notice -When Court will Interfere to Protect Solici-tor.]-If, after notice by plaintif's attorney to defendant, a bona fide settlement, or with out notice a collusive settlement, be made by defendant with plaintiff, the court will interfere to prevent the attorney being unjustly deprived of his costs. Langle v. Fetterley, 5 U. C. R. 628.

Where the defendant, an attorney, settled with the plaintiff after a fi. fa. had been put in the sheriff's hands, which the defendant must have known the plaintiff's attorney had issued almost wholly for costs, the court ordered the plaintiff's attorney's costs included in the execution to be referred for taxation, and the defendant to pay the sum to the plain-tiff's attorney, with the costs of the applica-tion. Griggs v. Meyers, 6 U. C. R. 532.

Collusion to deprive the attorney of his costs must be clearly made out to entitle him to proceed for them. Here the plaintiff informed his attorney that he intended to settle with defendant, and said that he would see the costs paid. No objection was made. nor any notice given to defendant not to pay the plaintiff; but several months after the settlement, the plaintiff being insolvent, the attorney issued a fi, fa, for his costs:—Held, that the writ must be set aside. Brown v. Count. 2 P. R. 208.

Scc. also, Plant v. Stone, 9 U. C. R. 458.

Defendant, having settled conclusively with the plaintiff, was ordered to pay the plaintiff's attorney his costs, and an application afterwards made to revise the taxation of such costs was refused. Connors v. Squires, 2 P. R. 149.

In shewing cause against a rule to set aside verdict, which was not moved on affidavit, the plaintiff's attorney irregularly filed an affidavit that the plaintiff owed him £80 when he instituted the suit, which it was agreed should be paid out of the money collected; that the plaintiff was insolvent; and that he had no doubt the defendant and he had colluded to deprive deponent of his claim and costs:—Semble, that, if these facts had been shewn on a proper application, the court might have protected the attorney in his costs, but that they could not have interfered with respect to his interest in the claim. Shipman v. Henderson, 21 U. C. R. 447.

Where a suit is commenced and carried on under instructions from a person who tells the attorney that he is agent for the plaintiff, but the attorney takes no trouble to ascertain the truth of this, and proceeds without any communication with the plaintiff, the attorney will not be protected as to his costs where a settlement is made between the parties which has the effect of depriving him of his lien, but will be left to an action against the plaintiff. Smith v. Thompson, 5 P. R. 156.

The plaintiff and defendants, without the knowledge of defendants' solicitor, compromised a suit for foreclosure, in which the usual decree of reference had been made, defendants releasing their equity of redemption for $200, which was paid by plaintiff to them :-Held, that there was no fund recovered by defendants' solicitor, and that no lien for his costs had ever existed. Brownscomb v. Tully, Re Fairbairn, 3 Ch. Ch. 71.

A settlement of an alimony action after judgment for permanent alimony, upon which writs of secution were placed in the sheriff's hands, was effected between the parties with-out the intervention of the solicitors on the record. To carry out the settlement a third solicitor was instructed to withdraw the writs from the sheriff's hands, which he did without paying the costs of the plaintiff's solicitor.
There was no collusion or actual fraud between the plaintiff and defendant proved:
—Held, that the plaintiff's solicitor had control of the writs in the sheriff's hands to the extent of he manal track! extent of his unpaid taxable costs, and that he was entitled to have the writs replaced or new writs placed in the sheriff's hands, at the expense of the solicitor who withdrew them and the plaintiff, or to an order directly and the plaintiff, or to an order directly against the defendant for payment of his un-paid taxable costs, and for the costs of the motion against the plaintiff and the solicitor who withdrew the writs. Friedrick v. Friedrick, 4 C. L. T. 450.

Where a compromise of the action has been effected between the parties without the in-tervention of the solicitors, in order to entitle the plaintiff's solicitor to enforce his lien for costs upon the fruits of the litigation, by means of an order upon the defendant, collusion must be shewn, or the act complained of must have been done after notice from the solicitor complaining. And where the parties made such a compromise, and the plaintiff's solicitor gave notice to the defendant's solicitor after the agreement but before payment of the money agreed upon:—Held, that this was sufficient notice. Sanvidge v. Ircland, 14 P. R. 29.

It appeared that the solicitor for the execution creditor had a lien for his costs upon the judgment obtained by his client, and also an assignment of the judgment, whereof the garnishor and garnishee both had notice:—Held, that the garnishor and garnishee should not have settled the amount garnished between themselves: and that the solicitor should have intervened, and had the attaching order set aside by disclosing the assignment to himself of the debt attached, Genge v. Freeman, 14 P. R. 330.

It is competent for a client to settle his action behind the back of his solicitor, notwith-standing that the solicitor has given notice to the client and to the opposite party not to settle except with the solicitor's consent. The equitable interference of the court cannot be invoked on behalf of a solicitor in an action settled in such a manner, unless there are fruits arising from such settlement upon which the solicitor's lien can attach; for there is no lien on the action. Upon such a settlement, unless where collusion between the parties to defraud the plaintiff's solicitor of his costs is clearly shewn, a defendant will not be ordered to pay the costs of the plaintiff's solicitors. Bellamy v. Connolly, 15 P. R. S7.

After judgment had been recovered by the plaintiff against the defendants for $550 damages and for costs, and while an appeal was pending, the plaintiff and defendants, without the knowledge of the plaintiff's solicitors, made an agreement for settlement of the action upon the plaintiff being taken into the defendants' employment and paid $150 in full of damages and costs. The plaintiff's solicitors asserted a lien for their costs, which were unpaid, and gave notice thereof to the defendants before any once was actually paid over to the plaintif:—Held, that the compromise made was not a collusive one, and the solicitors were therefore not entitled to an order upon the defendants for the payment of their costs; but, such costs amounting to more than $150$, that they were entitled to have that sum, for which the action was compromised, and which was to be treated as the fruits of the litigation, paid over to them in respect of their lien. Held, also, that a question arising between the plaintiff and his solicitors, as to whether they were entitled to taxed costs as between solicitor and client, or to a percentage upon the amount recovered, could not be determined upon the motion to enforce payment by the defendants of the plaintiff's solicitors' costs, but had to be determination of such motion. Walker v. Gurney-Hiden Co., 18 P. R. 274, 471.

7. Other Cases.

Appeal from Order Enforcing Lien.]
—An appeal does not lie to the court of appeal, unless by special leave, from an order of a divisional court made upon appeal from an order in chambers enforcing a solicitor's lien for costs. Leave to appeal from the decision of a divisional court (18 P. R. 274, ante 6) refused, that decision appearing to be in accordance with well-established practice. Walker v. Gurney-Tilden Co., 18 P. R. 471.

Charging Order—Recovery of Land—Rule 1129—Execution—Priorities.]—An action having been begun on the 3rd June, 1896, judgment was obtained therein on the 27th October, 1896, declaring the plaintiffs' right to an interest in certain lands. An execution against the plaintiffs' lands was placed in the sheriff's hands on the 29th April, 1897. On the 1st September, 1897, con rule 1129 was passed, by which the court was enabled to order that lands recovered by the exertions of a solicitor should be charged for his benefit:—Held, that the execution bound the plaintiffs' interest in the lands from the 29th April, 1897, and the subsequent enactment of the rule did not operate to divest this charge, or to postpone the claim of the execution creditors to the subsequently acquired equity of the solicitors in respect of their costs of the action. Taylor v. Robinson, 19 P. R. 31.

— Rule 1129—Judgment—Assignment—Implied Notice, 1—A judgment debt is "property" within the meaning of rule 1129. On an assignment of a judgment the assignee must be taken to have notice of the solicitor's lien for the costs incurred in obtaining judgment, and the implied notice would be notice within the rule. Cole v. Eley, [1894] 2 Q. B. 180, followed. Orford v. Fleming, 18 C. L. T. Occ. N. 142, 241.

On Documents—Delivery—Undertaking.]—Where a solicitor refused to carry on a suit unless money was advanced, or to deliver up the papers to a new solicitor until his costs in the suit were paid, the court ordered a taxation, and directed the papers to be delivered up to the new solicitor upon his undertaking to hold them subject to the lien, if any, of the former solicitor, and to redeliver them within ten days after he ceased to have occasion for them for the purposes of the suit. Ley v. Brown, 1 Ch. Ch. 179.

Production of.]—The rule that a solicitor is bound to produce documents subject to his lien, does not apply when the person asking for their production is the party to pay the amount claimed. Moodie v. Thomas. 1 Ch. Ch. 19.

See Crooks v. Crooks, 1 Gr. 57.

IX. PRIVILEGES.

Arrest—Contempt.]—An attorney has no privilege from arrest on attachment for contempt of court. Re McIntyre, 2 P. R. 74.

Plea in Abatement - Replication.] -Where to a plea in abatement of privilege as an attorney, the plaintiff replied process issued against him and others, under 5 Wm. IV. c. (restraining several actions on bills, notes, &c.), and that the others could not be served, &c., a demurrer to the replication was over-ruled. Richmond v. Campbell, M. T. 2 Vict.

Production of Documents-Confidential Communications.]—In an affidavit of a party on production of documents, a certain etter was described by its date and as being from a firm of solicitors to the deponent, who said that he objected to produce it, that it was a communication between solicitor and client, and was privileged:—Held, doubting, but following Hamelyn v. White, 6 P. R. 143, that the statement was sufficient to protect the document from production. In the same affi-dayit two other letters were described by their dates and as being from a solicitor to a firm of solicitors, and a copy of a letter written in answer to one of them was similarly de-These documents, the affidavit stated. were in the possession of the solicitors for the deponent and others in another action, and he objected to produce them and claimed privilege for them "on the ground that they are communications between solicitor and client and between my solicitors and others in the course of their conducting my business:"-Held, that these letters not being written to or by the deponent, there was no reasonable intendment that the deponent was the "client" referred to, nor that they were necessarily confidential because they were written by the deponent's solicitors to other persons in the course of their conducting his business; and the opposite party was entitled to a better affi-davit on production, in which the deponent might set up other grounds of protection. It is irregular to go into the merits upon an application for a better affidavit. Morris v. Edwards, 23 Q. B. D. 287, followed. Hoffman v. Crerar, 17 P. R. 404.

Witness-Advocate.]-An attorney canmot act at a trial both as an advocate and a witness, Benedict v. Boulton, 4 U. C. R. 96, See Cameron v. Forsyth, 4 U. C. R. 189.

Attorney for Party-Order to Leave Court-room—Examination of Witness—Conduct of Attorney.]—Re South Oxford Election, H. E. C. 243.

Witness to Deed. |-Held, that where a solicitor or counsel of one of the parties to a suit has put his name as a witness to a deed between the parties, he ceases, in respect of the execution of the instrument, to be clothed with the character of a solicitor or counsel, and is bound to disclose all that passed at the time relating to such execution. Robson v. Kemp, 5 Esp. 52, and Crawcour v. Salter, 18 Ch. D. 30, followed. Magee v. The Queen, 2 Ex. C. R. 304. X. PROCEEDINGS AGAINST AND LIABILITY OF.

1. Acting without Authority.

(a) Liability,

Appearance.]—See Practice—Practice at Law before the Judicature Act, 11. 2.

——— Costs.]—Where a defendant swore that no process had been served on him, and that an attorney had appeared for him without authority, the court ordered that the at-torney should file an affidavit accounting for his entry of appearance. Weir v. Hervey, H. T. 4 Vict.

And the court in the following term set the proceedings aside, and ordered the attorney to pay all costs. S. C., 1 U. C. R. 430.

Appearance—Pleading — Malice.]—Plaintiff sued defendant for having caused an appearance to be entered for the defendants in an ejectment, brought by plaintiff against them, for land assigned to plaintiff under process issued in an action of dower against this defendant, alleging that he had done so wilfully, wrongfully, and without the consent, knowledge, or authority of the defendants, but not charging malice or want of reasonable or probable cause:—Held, on demurrer, that the declaration was bad on this ground. Semble, that defendant and his attorney would, on such a declaration, be liable to the defendants in the ejectment suit; and that (the defendants therein being worthless) he would also be liable to the plaintiff for the costs of that suit, on a summary application to the court made therein. Fisher v. Holden, 17 C. P. 395.

Ejectment-Tenant.] - Defendant being tenant was served with a writ of eject-ment, which he handed to H., his landlord, and H. took it to his attorney, who, instead of getting leave for H. to defend, entered an appearance in defendant's name without his appearance in accident is name without his authority. A verdiet having been obtained against defendant, the Judge refused to inter-fere, but left him to his remedy against his landlord and the attorney. Moran v. Scher-merhorn, 2 P. R. 261.

Remedy-Solvency of Attorney-Removal of Appearance-Collusion. |-Where an attorney without authority appears for defendant, the court will not set aside the pro-ceedings if the attorney is solvent, but will leave the defendant to his remedy by summary application against the attorney. If the attorney be insolvent, the court may re-lieve defendant on equitable terms, if he has a defence on the merits. Where, however, it appears that the suit instituted against the defendant is brought by collusion between plaintiff and defendant to enable defendant to cheat his creditors, a Judge will not interfere summarily to remove the appearance, and thus assist the parties in the perpetration of a-fraud. Warely v. Poapst, 7 L. J. 294.

Bond-Execution.]-The court refused an order to an attorney to pay the costs of a suit on a bond to the limits, where he had signed the name of one of the obligors and executed the bond on his behalf on a mere parol authority. Leonard v. Glendennan, Dra. Bringing Action—Assignor of Chose in Action — Indemnity.] — Where an attorney without the knowledge or consent of plaintiff brought an action in his name, relying upon an assignment of choses in action from the plaintiff to the client of the attorney, and the right of the attorney under the assignment so to use plaintiff's name was very doubtful, an order was made to stay the proceedings until the attorney or his client should indemnify the plaintiff against costs. Ellison v. Ellison, 9 L. J. 243.

— Costs.] — Where an attorney had used the plaintiff's name without his consent, he was ordered to repay the plaintiff the costs which he had paid to defendant on failure of the suit. Henderson v. McMahon, 12 U. C. R. 288,

Where proceedings had been stayed until the attorney filed his warrant to prosecute, and the warrant was not filed, the attorney was ordered to pay defendant's costs of defence, and of staying proceedings. Smith v. Turnbull, 1 P. R. 88; Shaw v. Ormiston, 2 P. R. 152.

Where the plaintiff's solicitors made a person plaintiff without being instructed by him, his name was, at his instance, struck out of the proceedings in the cause as a plaintiff, with costs to be paid by the solicitors. Miller v. Mill. 4 C. L. J. 78.

Dourcy—Costs.]—Where a solicitor in chancery purchased a widow's right to dower in all the lands of which her husband was seised during her coverture, taking from her an assignment thereof, and a power of attorney to use her name in suing therefor, and six years after the death of her husband, and several years after the purchase, filed a bill in her name to have dower assigned to her in a particular portion of her late husband's lands, not noticing the sale to himself, the court, on the application of the widow, ordered the bill to be taken off the files, with costs to be paid by the solicitor. Meyers v. Lake, 1 Gr. 305.

Wrongful Act—Non-existent Plaintifts—Maltice—Want of Reasonoble Cause.]— Actions brought in the name of a road company against the present plaintiffs were dismissed with costs, on the ground that the company had never been incorporated according to law. The present actions were brought against four of the corporators of the com pany, three of them composing the firm of solicitors who had conducted the former actions on behalf of the supposed company, and all four having expressly authorized the bringing of the former actions, seeking to recover the costs of such former actions, execution therefor against the company having been returned rulla boni; the company having been returned rulla boni; the absence of malice and want of reasonable and probable cause in bringin actions on behalf of the against the defendants as corporators or as solicitors bringing actions on behalf of the plaintiffs which had no legal existence. Flatt
V. Waddell, Townsend v. Waddell, 18 O. R.

Special Wrongful Act—Pleading—Malive— Damage.] — Action for damages against solicitors for, as alleged in the statement of claim, "wrongfully and unlawfully without any instructions or retainer," issuing a writ of summons against the plaintiff in the name of a third party, by reason of which the plaintiff was injured in his occupation as a builder, suffered in his credit and reputation, and was hindered in the performance of his contracts, and had to borrow money at a higher interest than he would otherwise have had to do, and other creditors were induced to sue him, whose accounts he had to compromise and settle at great loss:—Held, on demurrer, that neither malice and want of reasonable and probable cause, nor special damage, both of which are necessary in such an action, were sufficiently alleged. Semble, that an allegation that by reason of the proceedings complained of the plaintiff was put into insolvency or bankrupte, if such a thing were possible in this country, might be a sufficient allegation of special damage. Mitchell v. McMurrich, 22 O. R. 712.

Demand in Insolvency - Misconduct -Malice-Summary Procedure-Costs.] - L. & A., partners, dissolved partnership, it being understood that L. should pay the debts, &c. There had been ill-feeling and litigation between them, in which the attorney had acted for L. The attorney, being authorized to act for R. L. told him to use the names of K. & D. of Rochester, U. S., stating that they would agree to what he, L., said, On the 3rd May, 1873, the attorney served a demand on A. in the names of R. W. & Co. and K. & D., requiring them to make an assignment in insolvency, and on the same day he wrote to K. & D. asking for their sanction. They made no answer; and A., having gone to Rochester and settled their claim, applied to set aside the demand. The attorney thereupon abandoned the proceedings and paid A.'s On a motion to strike the attorney off the rolls for this, on affidavits attributing his conduct to malice:—Held, under the circumstances, malice being expressly denied, that the rule should be discharged; but, as the attorney had been indiscreet, he was directed to pay the costs of the application. In re Attorney, 34 U. C. R. 246.

Discharging Debtor from Custody— Damages.]—In an action against an attorney for discharging a debtor in custody on a ca. sa. without any authority from the plaintiffs, the damages are discretionary, and it is not incumbent on the jury to give the whole amount of the debt. Bradbury v. Jarvis, 1 U. C. R. 301.

(b) Production of Authority.

Necessity for — Settlement of Action— Proceeding for Cotts.] — A plaintiff and defendant having settled between themselves without paying the cost, he court refused to make the attorney produce his warrant in an action instituted against the bail to recover those costs. Shankland v. Scantlebury, Tay. 22.1.

Smith v. Turnbull, 1 P. R. 88; Shaw v. Ormiston, 2 P. R. 152.

In Equity.]—A defendant in equity has no right to call upon the plaintiff's solicitor to produce his authority for using a plaintiff's name; and particularly where no improper conduct in using such name is positively alleged and verified. Chisholm v. 8hcidon, 1 Gr. 294.

2. Negligence.

(a) As a Defence to a Claim for Costs.

Delaying Trial of Action—Benefit to Client—Pleading.]—In an action by an attorney for his costs, the jury having found for defendant:—Held, under the facts set out in the case, that the evidence did not support the verdict, for the defendant had obtained a judgment against M., which might yet produce the debt, and it could not be said that the plaintiff's services had by his negligence become wholly worthless to defendant. A new trial was therefore granted. Semble, that if defendant had lost all benefit from his action by its not having been tried in 1855, the court would not have interfered, for the attorney, in refusing to issue new subpeans under the circumstance stated, might be considered to have taken upon himself the risk of consequences. In an action by an attorney for his costs, negligence may set up as a defence under the general issue. Vidal v. Bonald, 20 U. C. R. 507.

Omission of Party to Action—Benefit to Ulient—Summary Order for Twastion.]—A mortgage instructed his solicitor to proceed on the mortgage. The solicitor omitted to make J., the owner of the equity of redemption in a portion of the property, a party to the suit. The remaining portion having been sold under a decree in that suit, the client was benefited to some extent by the proceedings therein, although his remedy against J. was gone. In taxing the solicitors bill under a common order obtained by the client, the master allowed the costs of these proceedings; and on appeal to the court this was upheld. The master, under such an order, has no authority to institute an inquiry as to loss sustained by the client through the alleged nedigence of his solicitor; and the costs of such inquiry cannot be charged to the solicitor. Thomson v. Milliken, 15 Gr. 197.

Omission to Examine Instrument—
Lucless Suit—Bona Fides, |— A solicitor before commencing a suit should examine the instrument on which it proceeds; or, in case of its loss, should use diligence in resorting to the means of information open to him, and to which he is referred by the client. Where this duty had been omitted, and the instrument had in consequence been set forth so incorrectby in the bill that the proceedings were useiess and had to be abandoned after decree, the solicitor (though he had acted in good faith) was held not entitled against his client to the cost of the suit. Roe v. Stanton, 17 Gr.

Proceedings Occasioned by Fault.]— On a motion to have the costs of an interpleader issue paid out of moneys in court, costs of the motion were refused, and the solicitor was not allowed to charge his client any costs, as the motion was rendered necessary by his fault or oversight. Macdonald v. Carradi, 1 Ch. Ch. 145.

Proceedings Occasioned by Mistake—Pleading.]—Where services charged for by an attorney were required only in consequence of his own mistake or neglect, which a careful person would not have been likely to fall into, and not arising from a reror in judgment in a matter affording room for doubt or difficulty, he cannot recover; and such a defence is available under the general issue. Burnham v. Burns, 21 U. C. R. 349.

Summary Order for Taxation — Disabswance of Bill.)—On the common order by a client to tax his solicitor's bill, the master may consider alleged negligence of the solicitor as having occasioned the suit or rendered it useless, and therefore a ground for disallowing the whole bill, or as affecting and a ground for disallowing parts. Thomson v. Milliken, 13 Gr. 194.

See In re Toms and Moore, 2 Ch. Ch. 381; In re A. B., 8 C. L. J. 21; Lynch v. Wilson, 3 P. R. 163; Scanlan v. McDonough, 10 C. P. 104; Re Kerr, Akers, and Bull, 29 Gr. 188, post (b); O'Donohoe v. Whitty, 2 O. R. 424, 20 C. L. J. 146, post (b).

(b) Conduct of Causes and other Proceedings.

Delay in Issuing Execution—Loss of Priority—Conflict of Duty and Interest.]—The plaintiff, in his second count, stated that, having retained the defendants to prosecute an action against one G. for a debt, they took a confession of judgment, and delayed to issue execution thereon for some months, whereby the plaintiff was damnified. Third count, for money had and received. The evidence went to shew that between the time when the plaintiff was entitled to execution, and when it was issued, a writ of one B, against G, was placed in the sheriff's hands, and settled. It was also shewn that G, had, during the same period, made chattel mortgages on his property, of which defendants were aware. One of the defendants, on being called, stated that G. having recovered a judgment against one K .. garnishee proceedings were instituted in the suit of plaintiff against G., and of defendants against G., and J. & L. against G., in respect of K.'s debt: and that orders under garnish-ment proceedings were made in all these suits ment proceedings were made in all these suits against K., but by mistake of one of the de-fendants' clerks the plaintiff's execution was placed first in the sheriff's hands. The lands of K. were duly advertised by the sheriff in the suit of G. against K., and in the garnish-ment proceedings, and subsequently he was in-structed by defendants to withdraw the adver-structed by defendants to withdraw the advertisement and take no further steps, as K. had settled the amount due. The plaintiff's writ on the garnishee order against K.'s lands was returned expired, during the currency thereof, no instructions having been given to the sheriff. A receipt for $20, signed by defendants, was put in, intituled in the suits of plaintiff against G. and defendants against G.—K. was put in, intituled in the suits of plaintiff against G.—K. and defendants against G.—K. garnishee. A verdict having been found for plaintiff on both counts:—Held, that there was evidence to go to the jury to shew that, if defendants had issued execution as soon as the plaintiff was entitled thereto, he might have recovered his debt; and, the defendants knowing that G. was disposing of his property by chattel mortgage, &c., it was a breach of their duty not to issue plaintiff's execution. (2) That, as defendants obtained and had the benefit of the settlement of K.'s elebt, and as it was admitted that the plaintiff's writ had priority, it was the duty of defendants to see that he did not lose his priority; and if their duty conflicted with their interest, they should not be allowed to sacrifice the former to the latter. Succetman v, Lemon, 13 C, P, 534.

Delay in Issuing Order — Constructive Abandonment—Advice of Counset.] — Where an attorney, being employed to get a judgment of non pros. signed against the plaintiff set aside, applied through his town agent for an order for that purpose, which was granted on the 16th June, but the agent neglected to take out the order until the 22nd October following, in consequence of which delay the order was set aside and the judgment allowed to stand:—Held, that this was negligence for which the attorney was responsible, and that it was no defence that he acted under the advice of counsel. Herr v. Toms, 32 U. C. R. 423.

Failure to Instruct Counsel.]—A. retained B., an attorney, in Kingston, to defend him in a suit to be tried at Perth, and before the trial A. went to Kingston, where B. told him that he could not go to Perth in this one suit, but that C., a barrister at Perth, would attend to it, and that A. had better see him. A. made no objection, but went to Perth, and instructed C., who conducted the suit at the trial. A nominal verdict was given against A. No complaint was made that C. mismanaged the cause in any way:—Held, that B. was not liable for negligence at the suit of A, in not himself making up a brief and delivering it to C. Kenny v, Armstrong, 4 U. C. R. 196.

Faulty Conduct of Trial-Solicitor as Counsel. 1-The plaintiff sued an attorney for negligence in conducting a suit for him, alleging that defendant pleaded an improper defence, neglected to subpoena witnesses, or to instruct counsel, but acted as counsel himself, and did not apply for an amendment required. or offer to prove payment. Defendant pleaded as to the allegation that he did not instruct counsel, but acted as such himself, that he was counsel, but acted as such himself, that he was a barrister, and that the plaintif never ob-jected to his so acting; and he demurred to the allegation that he did not while so acting apply to amend, or offer to prove payment, on the ground that for his conduct as counsel no action would lie. Plaintiff demurred to the plea as no answer:—Held, that the plaintiff was entitled to judgment, for the defendant by acting as counsel himself could not escape liability for neglecting as an attorney to give proper instructions. Quære, whether, considering the union of the professions in this Province, and the right of counsel in some cases to recover fees, the same exemption from liability can be claimed here as in England, even when the same person does not act in both capacities. Leslie v. Ball, 22 U. C. R. 512.

Failure to Obtain Confession of Judgment.] — Case against attorneys employed by the plaintiffs, for not taking a confession of judgment from L., their debtor. Plea, that after the retainer, and before the alleged default of defendants, the plaintiffs, without the consent of defendants, with other creditors, made an arrangement with L. by which he assigned all his effects to B., one of the plaintiffs, and another person, to be disposed of in paying such creditors as should concur in this: — Held, on demurrer, plea good. Held, also, that in the declaration the retainer of defendants and the damage sustained by the plaintiffs were sufficiently stated. Benner v. Burton, 13 U. C. R. 387.

Failure to Obtain Price of Land—Sale under Execution—Discharge of Sheriff, 1—Declaration, that the plaintiff employed R, & J, the defendants, as attorneys, for reward, to prosecute a certain action against one W,; that judgment was recovered, and the plaintiff then retained defendants to issue execution; that the lands of W, were sold under such execution by the sheriff to J., one of the defendants, yet that defendants did not require J, to pay the purchase money to the sheriff, although at their request the sheriff conveyed the land to him; but, as such attorneys, discharged the sheriff from said money, which had not been paid to the plaintiff:—Held, that a good cause of action was shewn. Phillips v. Dempsey, 18 U. C. R. 4173.

Failure to Procure Attendance of Witnesses.] — Plaintiff obtained a verdict against attorneys for negligence, in not having procured the attendance of witnesses stated to be material at a trial between plaintiff and another, in which plaintiff failed. It did not appear, however, that the evidence of such witnesses would have produced a different result, and defendants! leading counsel at the trial in question had decided upon proceeding without such evidence. On these grounds a new trial was granted. Wade v. Ball, 20 C. P. 302.

Failure to Search Release of Judgment — Issue of Execution—Interference by Client—Damages.] — The plaintiff employed defendant to ascertain whether an old judge released, and if not, to issue execution. Befendant issued the execution without having made a sufficient search, though the plaintiff had in fact released the judgment, whereby the plaintiff was subjected to an action for damages at the suit of W. Before the sheriff had seized, he informed the plaintiff that W. asserted that the judgment was released, and plaintiff told him to go on with the levy:—Held, that these instructions by plaintiff were not necessarily a discharge of defendant, but were only a matter in mitigation of damages. O'Beirne v. Wilson, 6 C. P. 366.

Failure to Urge Dishonest Defence.]—Semble, that an attorney would not be liable for culpable negligence, in not urging for his client the defence that the agreement sued upon was made on a Sunday, as it is no part of his professional duty to take all dishonest advantages. Vail v. Duggan, 7 U. C. R. 508. See, also, Shaw v. Nickerson, 7 U. C. R. 541.

Faulty Conduct of Motion—Damoges.]

—Where an attorney was retained to apply to release a sheriff from an attachment, and the presence of the sheriff from a place of the sheriff of the properties. Held, that he was liable to nominal damages, atthough the special damage laid was not proved. McLeod v. Boutton, 3 U. C. R. 84.

Discharge of ice.]-B., an attorney, was employed to prosecute a suit against M., who was arrested and discharged without bail, and the writ of capias and all proceedings set aside for irregularity. Upon an action against B. for negligence:—Held, that the production of the order of the Judge setting aside the capias was not sufficient evidence to sustain the action; but that the negligence must be gross, and evidence of it must be given. Chapman v, Bouttbee, 13 C. P. 372.

Irregular Service of Notice of Mortgage Sale — Costs of Service — Burden of Proof.] — Where F., a solicitor, on behalf of his client served a notice of sale under a mortgage made pursuant to the Act respecting short forms, R. S. O. 1877 c. 104, at what he believed, after diligent inquiry, was the last place of residence of the mortgagor in this Province, and did so on the instructions of his client, who was fully ad-vised as to the inquiries and their result, and bona fide deemed such services sufficient: Held, that F. was entitled, as against his client, to tax the costs of the proceedings under the power of sale, although it appeared that the mortgagor really was, at the time of such service, within this Province, R. S. O. 1877 c. 104 permits substitutional service at the residence, though the mortgagor may be within the jurisdiction. But, even if such is not the proper construction of the statute, it is a matter so doubtful that the solicitor who bona fide acted on that view of the statute should not lose his costs of so effecting service. not lose his costs of so effecting service. Where services are rendered by a solicitor at the instance of a client, possessing the like knowledge of the matters of fact as the solicitor, the onus is on the client to establish negligence, ignorance, or want of skill, by reason of which alone and entirely the services have been utterly worthless, if he resist the taxation of costs incurred by such services. O'Donahoe v. Whitty, 2 O. R. 424, 20 C. L. J. 146. See Gall v. Collins, 12 P. R. 413.

Loss of Instrument Sued on-Failure to Account for-Costs-Terms.]-A note having been given to an attorney to collect, he commenced a suit upon it, which was afterwards referred, and the note sent to Cobourg where the arbitrators met; no award was made, and the note was not afterwards to be found. The attorney then proceeded in the action, and on the trial, the note not being produced, or evidence given to prove its loss, a verdict was taken for the plaintiff, subject to the opinion of the court, who directed a new trial on payment of costs; but, as the costs were not paid, the rule for a nonsuit was made absolute:—Held, that the attorney was liable as well for negligence in not producing the note, or not having evidence prepared to account for its absence, as for the damages and costs incurred by the plaintiff by reason of the nonsuit. In this case the court discharged the rule for a new trial, upon the plaintiff's atrule for a new trial, upon the plaintiff's attorney undertaking that the plaintiff should give the attorney authority to proceed on the note in his (the plaintiff's) name, on the former undertaking to indemnify the latter against the costs of such action, Grover v. Gamble, 6 O. S. 561.

Mismanagement of Defence — False Advice—Collusion—Retainer.]—C., who was in active practice as a lawyer, and the author of several useful legal treatises, had obtained a mortgage on a valuable leasehold estate, and Vol. III. D—208—59 having taken such proceedings as resulted in a forfeiture of the mortgagor's term, procured from the owner of the property a renewal of the lease to himself. The mortgagors instituted proceedings to redeem, but C., asserting that he was absolute owner of the interest, instructed solicitors to defend the suit. They expressed to C, some doubt as to his right to resist the claim of the mortgagors, whereupon he, with one of the solicitors, went to a coun-sel of note, who, without having time to give set of note, who, without having time to give the case full consideration, orally advised them that the suit should be defended. C. drafted his answer, his solicitors adding one clause. Counsel retained for the hearing told C. he would undoubtedly fail in the litigation, and subsequently the usual decree for redemption was pronounced, C. being ordered to pay such costs as had been occasioned by his resisting redemption. It was alleged against the solicitors that they had advised C. that he would be entitled to costs in any event; that they had refused to consider or submit to him an offer to pay the mortgage money and costs on the ground, as they alleged, that C. claimed about three times the sum offered; that they about three times the sum onered; that they had colluded with the mortgagors solicitor in having proceedings instituted, which they had wrongly advised him to defend; and that he had a good defence, but the same had been negli-gently managed. There was a written retainer which did not express any special arrangement as to costs or the terms on which the defence was to be conducted. The court, being of opinion that C. had failed to make good his charges against the solicitors, affirmed an order reversing the finding of the taxing officer that the solicitors were not entitled to recover the costs of the litigation. Although in a simple case of a distinct assertion and a distinct denial of a fact at the time of a client retaining a solicitor, which thus forms a part of a contract, it may be a proper rule to say that in such a case the solicitor has himself to blame when any difficulty arises, as he might have protected himself by having his retainer in writing, there is not any authority for extending that rule to facts arising after the retainer and during the progress of the litigation. In any event the rule applies only where it is simply oath against oath, not where there is other evidence direct or circumstantial in support of the solicitor's. Re Kerr, Akers, and Bull, 29 Gr. 188.

Neglect to Sue on Note—Instructions— Security.] — Where a promissory note was given to an attorney to get the amount of it secured, and the attorney subsequently said he would pay the amount in a few days, and an action was afterwards brought against him for negligence in not suing on the note, with a count for money had and received: — Held, that neither count was supported by the evidence. Drennan v. Boutlon, 3 U. C. R. 72.

See Re Hardy, Poole v. Poole, 3 Ch. Ch. 179.

(c) Investigating Titles.

Purchase of Land—Tax Sale.]—Plaintifi in 1854 employed defendant to examine the tifitle to certain lands, and took a deed. Afterwards it was discovered that in 1851 a portion had been sold for taxes, but when the plaintiff purchased he had still a year to redeem. In 1857 the sheriff made a deed to the purchaser: —Held, that the defendant was not liable. Ross v. Strathy, 16 U. C. R. 430.

See Peters v. Weller, 30 U. C. R. 4, post (d).

(d) Investment of Money upon Insufficient Security,

Damages—Costs.]—A solicitor, intrusted with moneys to invest, did so on property of insufficient value, and his client, shortly after the loan, desired him to realize the amount advanced, which the solicitor endeavoured to do by getting the owner to effect another loan from a building society. He desired his client to release his mortgage for the purpose, under taking to obtain security on chattel property for any deficiency before acting on the release. The society refused to advance more than $800, which it was stipulated should be paid to the client, thus leaving a balance due him of about $150. The solicitor procured from the mortgagor a chattel mortgage on cattle, &c., variously valued at from $100 to $130 such security being made out in the name of the client, and only requiring his affidavit of bona fides to have it registered. This the client refused to accept, and instituted pro-ceedings against his solicitor for the surplus of his claim; and judgment for $177 was given against the latter. On appeal, the court, being of opinion that the plaintiff had of his own wrong lost the benefit of the chattel mortgage, reduced the judgment by $117, thus limiting the verdict to $60, with division court costs, but refused to either party costs of the appeal. O'Callaghan v. Bergin, 11 A. R. 594.

Evidence of Instructions—Damages,]—In an action against solicitors for investing money on insufficient security, one of the defendants, having made an entry or memorandum of his instructions in the presence of the plaintiff and H., offered it as evidence of the transaction—Held, that it was properly rejected. A new trial was granted in this case, on the ground of excessive damages. Phelps v. Wilson, 13 C. P. 38.

Partner of Solicitor—Liability of,1—R., a practising solicitor. was retained by the plaintiff to manage her business affairs, and he obtained from her and invested large sums of money in mortgage securities. A year afterwards R. entered into partnership with the defendant W., and the firm carried on business as solicitors and conveyancers and had in their hands several estates to manage. It was agreed when this partnership was formed that W. should have no interest in the plaintiff's business, which continued to be managed entirely by R., but the entries in connection therewith were made in the books of the firm, moneys received on the plaintiff's account were deposited with the firm's moneys, and from time to time reinvested by the firm, or paid to the plaintiff or to R. by cheques of the firm, and charges paid by borrowers went into the profits of the firm. Losses occurred owing to the insufficient value of some of the mortgaged properties: — Held, affirming the judgment in 15 O. R. 662, that under the circumstances, particularly because of the money having been actually received by the firm, and again paid out by them to the borrowers, both partners were liable for the negligence complained of. During the partnership, the plaintiff, acting on R.'s advice, allowed him to invest moneys in the purchase of lands in Dakota, it being agreed that he was to pay her interest on the moneys so invested, and that any profits were to be divided between the plaintiff and R. W. had no knowledge of this transaction. The moneys so invested were lost:—Held, reversing the judgment in 15 O. R. 662, that this was a transaction clearly outside the scope of the partnership business, and that W. was not liable. Thompson v. Robinson, 16 A. R. 175

Want of Care — Value—Title.]—Where an attorney received money to invest in real estate security:—Held, that he was liable for the want of reasonable care as regarded the value of the security, not merely in the examination of the title. Peters v. Weller, 30 U. C. R. 4.

See Taylor v. Magrath, 10 O. R. 669.

(e) Registering Instruments.

Judgment.]—A solicitor is liable in damages to his client for neglecting to obey instructions to register a judgment and thereby precluding the client from recovering the amount of his judgment debt. Hett v. Pun Pong, 18 S. C. R. 290.

Mortgage — Discharge pendente Lite — Damages.]—An autorney, having been employed to register a mortgage of £250, withheld the mortgage till he recovered a judgment of £16 against the mortgager, under which the fall against the mortgager, under which the land mortgaged was subsequently sold:—Held, that an action for such neglect, being substantially for a breach of contract, was maintainable without shewing actual damage, and a nonsuit tierefore could not be entered. While the case was pending, the plaintiff, upon payment of $300, discharged the mortgage on registry, and thereby prevented the court from doing substantial justice; a new trial was therefore ordered to decide as to the mala or bona fides in obtaining the discharge. Quare, would not the amount of the judgment with interest, costs, &c., be the measure of damages? Doon v. Warren, 11 C. P. 423.

Neglect of Client to Furnish Fees-Accord by Stranger.] - Declaration for neglecting to register a mortgage for ten months. and until the mortgagor had executed a subse quent mortgage to other persons, which was recorded before that to the plaintiff. Defendants pleaded, (1) that the registrar was by law entitled to certain fees before recording any deed, as the plaintiff well knew; that he any deed, as the plantill well killed, the never furnished them with any money to pay the same; "and so the defendants say that the said mortgage was not registered by the registrar or by the defendants for the default of the plaintiff in not providing the defendants or said registrar with any sum of money to pay the said registrar the fees allowed to him law for registering the said mortgage. (2) That after breach the plaintiff accepted from D. another mortgage on other land of D. as security to the plaintiff for £750, in full satisfaction and discharge of defendants' pronise, and all damages accrued to the plaintiff from the breach thereof :- Held, on demurrer, second plea good, it being no objection that the accord was by a third person, a stranger to the action. The court being equally divided, no judgment was given on the demurrer to A Viet negli Assignment in Insolvency. |-- Under 8 Vict. c. 48, the right to sue an attorney for negligence vests in the assignee of an insolvent Alexander v. A. B. and C. D., 5 U. C. R. 329.

Assignment of Claim for Negligence.] Assignment of Claim for Negligence.)

—A claim by a client for negligence against a firm of solicitors in directing the distribution of moneys in the sheriff's hands was assigned by him to another, and by the latter to the plaintiff:—Held, that the claim did not, by virtue of R. S. O. 1887 c. 122, s. 7 (O.), pass to the plaintiff so as to enable him to maintain an action therefor in his own name; but in any event no negligence was proved. On appeal to a divisional court the judgment was affirmed on the ground of the absence of any proof of negligence. Laidlaw v. O'Connor, 23 O. R. 696.

Pleading.]-A declaration is sufficient in stating generally that by defendant's negligence the plaintiff lost his cause. Vail v. Duggan, 7 U. C. R. 568.

See Benner v. Burton, 13 U. C. R. 387.

3. Sheriff-Liability to.

For Fees.]-An attorney is liable to the sheriff for fees on executing writs, and for services rendered for him in causes of his clients, without any special undertaking. clients, without any special undertaking, Jarvis y. Washburn, Dra. 163; Fraser y. Fellowes, 7 L. J. 131.

For Poundage.]-But not for poundage upon an execution which the attorney has placed in his hands to be executed. Corbett v. McKenzie, 6 U. C. R. 605.

Upon Undertaking - Bail.]-H. having been arrested, his attorney gave the sheriff an undertaking to put in bail, which was not On the application for an order to compel the attorney to pay the debt and costs:-Held, that the facts set out in the case formed no excuse. In re Baby v. O'Connor, 2 P. R.

 Indemnity.]—Sheriffs recommended to take precise written engagements from attorneys when they mean to hold them liable in cases they have nothing to do with except professionally, though the court, where the attorney has orally agreed to indemnify, if the agreement is admitted, will enforce it. In re Corbett v. O'Reilly, 8 U. C. R. 130.

4. Summary Proceedings.

(a) For Contempt of Court.

Insulting Language — Master's Office— Punishment—Apology—Costs.] — If a solici-tor, who is also a barrister, while in a master's office use improper or insulting language to another solicitor while acting in the conduct of proceedings under a reference, he will be or proceedings under a reference, he will be held guilty of contempt of coart, and upon a certificate of the facts from the master, the court may preclude the offending party from court may preclude the onendin party from again appearing before the court of in any of the offices of the several masters of the court. Nicholls v. McDonald, 4 L. J. 259.

Upon the making of a suitable apology, and upon payment of costs, the offending party may be allowed to appear before the court as if such order had not been made. Ib. See, also, 15 C. L. J. 303.

(b) For not Paying over Moneys - Attachment or Committal.

District Court - Action in.]-An attorney of the Queen's bench practising in a district court, may be attached for not paying over money received for his client. Carruthers v. —, Tay. 243.

Enforcing Order for Payment — Absence of Fraud.] — The proper proceeding against an attorney for mere non-payment of money pursuant to a rule of court, where there are no special circumstances shewing fraud or dishonesty, is by judgment and execution under C. S. U. C. c. 24, s. 15, and not by motion to strike him off the rolls, nor by attachment, Under the Imperial Act 32 & 33 Vict. c. 62, 4, s.-s. 4, attorneys ordered to pay money in that character are excepted from the general rule and may be attached as before. There is no such exception in our Act. Re Campbell, 32 U. C. R. 444.

Lapse of Rule.]-Where a rule nisi for an attachment for non-payment of money had lapsed, the court refused to renew the rule without a fresh affidavit. Roy v. DeLay, Tay. 9.

Loss of Money — Accident.]—An attachment was refused to compel an attorney to pay over money which had in fact been forwarded, but lost by accident. Radcliffe v. Small, Tay. 308.

Money Received as Agent. |- The court will not attach an attorney for not paying over will not attach an attorney for not paying over money received by him as agent, and not in his professional character; but if from the circumstances it appear that he is not trust-worthy, he may be struck off the roll. In re O'Reilly, 1 U. C. R. 392; S. C., 2 P. R. 198. See Re Carroll, 2 Ch. Ch. 323, post (c);

Re Walker, ib. 324.

Mot on for Attachment——Demand-Affidavit.]—Where a rule required that the money should be paid within a month after service, an attachment was refused, no copy of the affidavit of the execution. Motion for Attachment-Requirements of the power of attorney under which the money had been demanded having been served, and the affidavit of non-payment stating only non-payment within the month, but not after. Brewster v. McEwen, E. T. 3 Vict.

Payment out of Court—Order for Repayment—Disobedience—Contempt.]—A solicitor in an action had obtained an order for the payment out to him of certain moneys in court, and upon such order obtained the moneys. Subsequently an order was obtained rescinding the above order and directing the solicitor to forthwith repay the said moneys into court, and to pay the costs of the application. On his non-compliance therewith a motion was made for his committal:—Held, that the order for committal should go, for what was sought by the motion was the punishment of the solicitor for his contempt in disobeying the order of the court; and that con, rule 867 had no application. Pritchard v. Pritchard, 18 O. R. 173, 178.

Time for Granting Rule.]—A rule nisi for such an attachment should not be granted on the last day of the term, but if so granted it may be acted upon afterwards. In re O'Reilly, 1 U. C. R. 392, 2 P. R. 198.

(c) For not Paying over Moneys—Order for Payment.

Agent of Solicitor — Demand upon — Them for Correspondence.] — Thompson v. Billing, 11 M. & W. 361, remarked upon; and the practice therein allowed as to proceeding on a demand of money from the town agent for a country attorney without giving time for correspondence between them, thought to be unreasonable. In re Robertson, 5 P. R. 132.

Aid of Garnishment.]—The court will not order an attorney to pay over money which has been attached in his hands as the property of an absconding debtor. Clark v. Stover, T. T. 3 & 4 Vict.

Costs—Reut—Set-off.]—A, being indebted for costs to an attorney who owed him for rent, it was agreed to set off the rent against the costs. A, afterwards sued in a division court for the rent, but was defeated, and he then obtained a rule nisi on the attorney to pay over the net amount. The rule was discharged with costs. Elliott v. Baines, 1 P. R. 64.

Enforcing Order—Judgment and Execution—Absence of Fraud.]—See Re Campbell, 32 U. C. R. 444.

Fees of Commissioner—Receipt from Client—Non-payment,]—A solicitor included in his bill of costs rendered to his client the fees of a commissioner appointed to take evidence, and received payment of such bill, but neglected to pay the commissioner's fees. On the summary application of the commissioner he was ordered to pay over the fees within a month, and in default to be struck off the rolls. Anom., 12 C. L. J. 204.

Forum—Partnership—Survivors—Partics.]
—The referee in chambers has no power to exercise summary jurisdiction over solicitors. Such jurisdiction can only be exercised on an application to the court. Semble, when one member of a firm of solicitors has died, the summary jurisdiction of the court can no longer be exercised over the survivors, because such an application may necessitate the taking of the partnership accounts, and the representatives of the deceased partner are necessary parties. Re L. and M., 6 P. R. 21.

Interest—Investment—Statement of Solicitor,)—When an attorney received money belonging to a client before it was due, and the client swore that he would not have taken it but for the attorney assurance that he had an investment ready for it, and that the attorney afterwards told him that it was invested on mortgage with funds of his own:—Held, in the absence of explanation by the attorney, that he must be assumed to have invested it as he stated, and was chargeable with interest at six per cent. Re Attorney, 7 P. R. 321.

Loan to Solicitor—Evidence of—Relief from Order—Forum,]—The fact as to whether moneys collected by an attorney had been afterwards lent to him by the client was disputed; but an undertaking was produced, signed by the attorney, to the effect that he held the moneys for investment:—Held, that if the transaction was afterwards turned into a loan to the attorney, he must be prepared with the clearest evidence of the change in the erleation, otherwise the usual order against the attorney must be made; and in this case the evidence was held to be insufficient. Where an order directing a reference to the master has been made in chambers, in such a case, and the reference completed under it, an application for relief therefrom must be made to the court. In re Attorny, 8 P. R. 102.

— Undertaking.]—Quere, as to the effect of lending to an attorney money in his hands for his clients. Where the fact of such loan is disputed, an undertaking signed by the attorney to hold the money as of a certain day, consenting to an order to pay it over, will be a forced against him, and the usual order will be made, In re Harrison v. A, and B,, 6 L. J. 91.

Money Received as Agent.]—A solicitor is liable to account for moneys or securities on summary application, although they may have come to his hands as an agent for the owner, and not strictly as solicitor or attorney, or involve any duty as such in the holding or possession of them. Re Carroll, 2 Ch. Ch. 323.

See, also, Re Walker, 2 Ch. Ch. 324; In re O'Reilly, 1 U. C. R. 392, 2 P. R. 198, ante (b).

Loan to Solicitor.]—Money given on attorney was held, upon the affidavits set out in the case, notwithstanding his denial, to have been received by him in his capacity as attorney to invest, not as a broker or agent; and not to have been lent personally to the attorney. In re Attorney, 7 P. R. 174.

Money Received from Client—Money and Costs Lost through Solicitors.] — The court of chancery will order solicitors to pay over moneys of clients in their hands. Where, therefore, it was shewn that a client had paid his solicitors $1.800 to carry out an agreement to purchase entered into by him, which they untruly informed him they had paid into court, they were ordered to pay the amount in ten days. It being shewn, also, that a bill for specific performance filed by them as his solicitors to enforce said agreement, had been dismissed with costs for want of prosecution, owing to the default of said solicitors, the costs so paid were not included in the above-mentioned order, but the client was left to his action. So also with respect to the money paid to the vendor and lost by the negligence of said solicitors, and money paid to them on account of their own costs. In re Toms and Moore, 2 Ch. Ch. 381.

Money Received in Proceedings not in Court. |—A Judge in chambers may interfere summarily against the attorney, by ordering him to render an account of and payover such moneys, although there is no little on the court of the money was received. In re Attorney, 7

Overpayment — Refund.]—An attorney received from his client a note for £50, costs in three suits. The client being sued for this note in the name of one W., apparently a nominal plaintiff, paid £29 and gave a confession for the balance. The bills were afterwards taxed at £24, and the court then ordered the attorney to refund the amount overpaid. Exparte Colborn, 1 P. R. 208.

Partner of Solicitor.]—Mortgages were deletion, and the money collected. A dispute arose as to whether such solicitor was alone responsible to his brother, or whether the solicitor was alone responsible to his brother, or whether the solicitor's partner was responsible also. On petition of the client for payment, the court refused to make an order against the partner, holding that the petitioner should be left to sue. In re Toms and Moore, 3 Ch. Ch. 41. See Re McCaughey and Walsh, 3 O, R. 425.

Privity — Agent of Solicitor — Division Court, 1—Where T., having a claim in the division court against a resident of Belleville, sent it to McM., an attorney in Toronto, for collection, who sent it to A. & B., attorneys in Belleville, and the clerk of the latter collected $20 on account and sued for the remainder in a division court, and afterwards B. arranged with a third party for the payment of the balance, it was held that T. could not make a summary application against A. & B. for the payment of the money, but that McM. must apply. Taylor v. A. & B., 1 C. L. J. 300.

Rule Nisi—Misnomer in.]—A rule nisi having been obtained on an attorney to pay over to Charles Edward Hatherley a sum of money, it was objected that the name was not Charles Edward, but Charles Edmund:— Held, that the objection must prevail. In re Latham, 1 P. R, 91.

See Pritchard v. Pritchard, 18 O. R. 173, ante (b); McLean v. Grant, 20 Gr. 76, post

(d) For not Paying over Moneys—Striking off Roll.

Costs.]—Ordered that a solicitor should be struck off the roll unless by a named day he should pay an amount found by the report of a taxing officer to be in his hands, the moneys of a client, together with the costs of the taxation and of the motion to strike him off the roll. Re Knoveles, 16 P. R. 408.

Partner of Solicitor.]—To justify an order to strike a solicitor off the rolls there must be personal misconduct; it is not enough to shew that his partner has been guilty of fraudulent conduct, from whici, a constructive liability to pay money may perhaps arise. The court is not in the habit of exercising even the lesser jurisdiction of ordering payment in a summary manner against a solicitor to whom personally no blame is attributable, though he may be responsible for his partner's acts. St. Aubyn v. Smart, L. R. 3 Ch. 646, distinguished. Re McCaughey and Walsh, 3 O. R. 425.

Disputed Account.]—Upon a summary application by a client for an order for payment over by three solicitors of moneys of hers alleged to be in their hands as a firm, and in default for an order striking them off the roll:—Held, that no professional misconduct being suggested against two of them, one of whom had left the firm before, and the other of whom was ignorant of, the receipt of a large sum of money by the third, the summary order asked for could not be made against the two, although they might be liable in an action. Re Toms and Moore, 3 Ch. Ch. 41, and Re McCaughey and Walsh, 3 O. R. 425, followed. And, it appearing that the third solicitor had a sum of money in his hands against which he alleged that he had a claim for costs, an order was made for delivery and taxation of bills of costs and for an accounting, and for payment by him of the balance, if any, found due. Bu; as he denied that any balance was due:—Held, that it would be unfair to add to the order a provision that in default of payment his name should be struck off the roll. Re Bridgeman, 16 P. R. 423, distinguished. Re Ross, Cameron, and Mallon, 16 P. R. 482.

Procedure — Forum—Costs.]—Where a client applies to strike the name of a solicitor off the roll for misconduct in neglecting to pay over the client's money in his hands as solicitor, the first application should be made to a Judge in court, whereupon, in a proper case, an order will be made requiring the solicitor to pay over the money by a named day, and in default that his name be struck off. Upon default, no further application is necessary, except an application to have the roll brought into court for the purpose of having the name struck off, and this should be on notice to the solicitor. Rulling of a taxing officer that costs of the first application should be taxed as of a chambers motion only, reversed on appeal. Re Bridgman, 16 P. R.

Restoration to Roll—Practice.]—On the presentation of a petition to restore a solicitor to the rolls, who had been struck off by an order of the 1st September, 1874, for non-payment over of a client's money, evidence was required as to his good conduct since the making of the order, and notice to the Law Society of the application, and on this being compiled with he was restored, but the order was not rescinded. Re Macnamara, 9 P. R. 497.

Waiver of Right—Issue of Execution—Misconduct.]—Upon the taxantion of solicitors' costs against their client, it was shewn that large sums of money belonging to their client had reached their hands, and after deducting the amount of the costs a considerable balance remained due to the client, for which he had, under the order of taxation, issued an execution, but the sheriff had been able to realize only a small portion of the debt; and thereupon a motion was made to strike the solicitors off the roll in default of payment of the amount remaining due. The court, however, in view of the fact that the client had treated the claim as a debt from the solicitors to himself, and proceeded to a sale of all that he could seize under execution, was of the opinion that he could not fall back on a right which he had had and might have exercised, unless, in addition to the non-payment of the money, misconduct on the non-payment of the money, misconduct on the part of the solicitors could be shewn that would warrant the interference of the court; and refused the application with costs. Hlegal Charges.]—Where an attorney of the Queen's bench practising in an inferior court has charged and the Judge has allowed costs clearly not sanctioned by law, the Queen's bench will punish by fine or attachment. Rew v. Whitchead, Tay, 476.

Indictable Offence — Affidavits.] — The court will not proceed summarily on a complaint of matters for which (if the charge were true) the attorney might be indicted; especially where the affidavits are contradictory. Re Patterson v. Milter, 1 U. C. R. 256.

Malpractice.]—The court will not attach on a charge of malpractice, where the alleged conduct has been merely inadvertent, and the party complaining has a remedy by action. In re Stuart, 5 O. S. 70.

(f) For Other Misconduct—Striking off Roll.

Absence while under Articles—False Certificate—Costs,]—Application to strike an attorney off the rolls who had been admitted two years, for being two years absent while under articles, and for an attachment against his master for having improperly granted a certificate of actual service. Both rules refused on the ground of delay, but the master made to pay the costs of the application. In re Holland, 6 O. S. 441.

Insulting the Court.]—An attorney, who had been ordered to pay the costs of setting aside proceedings in an action attended to the he had acted without authority, attended wrote a highly improper and unjustifiable letter to the chief justice, impugning his motives in the judgment which be had given and stating that he was actuated by personal and private feelings of dislike towards him. The court directed that a rule nisi should issue to strike him off the rolls; and no proper nor sufficient apology having been made, the rule was afterwards made absolute. In re Hervey, M. T. 5 Vict.

Malicious Conduct.]—See In re Attorney, 34 U. C. R. 246.

Malpractice — Professional Character—Costs.1—C., a solicitor, held a mortgage against B., which he agreed to release and take a mortgage on another lot conveved on exchange of lots by W. to B., all the conveyances being prepared by C. C. never did discharge the first mortgage, although B. paid the full amount thereof and obtained a discharge of the second mortgage. Several years afterwards, and after the death of W., his representatives were called upon by the representatives of one J., to whom the first mortgage had been assigned, to pay the same, and, in a suit brought thereon, the lands so conveyed by B. to W. were ordered to be sold. On a proceeding to strike C. off the roll of solicitors for malpractice:—Held, that C. in the transactions acted professionally for W. and B.; his being the holder of the mortgage from B. was an accident which did not affect the professional character in which he acted. (2) That, whether he was acting professionally or not in the matter, he was, being a solicitor, amenable to the summary jurisdiction of the court; and, under the circumstances, an order was made to strike him off, the roll of solicitors, and pay the costs of the proceedings against him for that purpose. In re Curric, Gilleland V. Wadstorth, 25 Gr. 328.

Procedure on Application.]—A certificate of the clerk of the court, on which an application under the rule of court is made to have the attorney struck off the rolls in another court, should show the ground on which he was struck off. The application should also be for a rule to shew cause, and should not be made on the last day of term. In re Tremapne, 14 C. P. 257.

Procuring Money to Influence Jury.]—It was charged against T., a solicitor, that one W., being about to be tried for a criminal offence, was induced by T., as her solicitor, to pay him $200 for the purpose of influencing the jury. The court, upon the facts stated in the report, being satisfied that the charge was proved, an order was made striking him off the rolls. The petitioner having made a prima facie case, and being unable from want of means to proceed with the application, a solicitor was appointed by the court to take the matter up. Re Titus, 5 O. R. 87.

(g) For Other Misconduct—Other Proceedings.

Censure—Defeating Attaching Order.]— An attorney, knowing the issue of an attaching order, advising his client how to defeat it, censured. Carr v. Baycroft, 4 L. J. 209.

Injunction — Mortgage — Execution—
Costs.]—The solicitor of a mortgage in a suit of foreclosure, after a decree of absolute foreclosure, purchased the mortgagor's interest in the premises; the decree so pronounced was subsequently set aside, and a decree nisi directed to be drawn up directing, inter alia, a sale of the mortgaged premises, and that all judgment creditors should be served with the decree and made parties to the suit; notwith-standing this, however, the solicitor, who was also a judgment creditor of the mortgage, proceeded upon his judgment and was about to sell the mortgaged premises under execution. The court, upon a motion made in the cause, restrained the solicitor from proceeding with his execution, and ordered him to pay the costs of the application. Goodwin v. Williams, 5 Gr. 178.

Investigation of Conduct—Suspicion.]

—The court will sua sponte, where the circumstances appear to warrant it, take notice of the conduct of solicitors, and investigate matters in which their acts seem open to suspicion. In re Toms, In re Cameron, 3 Ch. Ch. 204. See In re Solicitor, 27 Gr. 77, post (th).

Order for Costs—Bond.]—The court refused to order an attorney to pay the costs of a suit on a bond to the limits, where he had signed the name of one of the obligors, and executed the bond on his behalf, on a mere parol authority. Leonard v. Glendennan, Dra. 232.

Striking out Plea — Statute of Limitations.]—Semble, that the court may prevent an attorney pleading the Statute of Limitations to defeat a client's just claim; but not his executors. Dougall v. Cline, 6 U. C. R. 546.

Suit in Equity — Lecree for Payment— Costs—Fraudulent Conduct.]—The plaintiff, being owner of land, after having created a mortgage thereon, emigrated to Australia, and subsequently remitted money to his agents subsequently remitted money to his agents in this country with which to pay off the in-cumbrance; but, instead of doing so, they ap-plied the money to their own use. Subsequently the holder of the mortgage, to whom it had been assigned, instituted proceedings in this court to foreclose, to which suit an answer was put in on behalf of the plaintiff, but without his knowledge or consent, admitting the allegations of the bill, and that the full amount of principal and interest was due; whereupon a final order of foreclosure was, in due course, obtained, and the plaintiff in that suit conveyed to the defendant A., for the consideration of $1,002, the value of the property; and on the same day the defendants S., as attorneys of the plaintiff, conveyed the premises to A., who was ignorant of any fraudulent practices in the matter. The plaintiff, having returned to this country, and ascertained the frauds which had been practised upon him, filed a bill against his agents and the purchaser, A .: - Held, that the plaintiff, so far as the purchaser was concerned, was bound by the statement in his answer. and was not entitled to relief as against him ; that the fact of the purchaser having heard before his purchase that the plaintiff had remitted money to pay the mortgage was not sufficient to charge him with notice that the foreclosure was wrongful; but, in view of the fraudulent conduct of the attorneys, the court made a decree against them for the amount realized on the sale of the land, and directed them to pay the costs of the suit, including the costs of the purchaser. (h) Rule to Answer Affidavits.

Absence of Retainer—Application for Account.] — Upon an application to compel attorners to deliver a bill for payments and charges in relation to a certain lot of land, and to answer the affidavits filed in support of the rule, it appeared that there was no retainer of the attorners, or either of them, as such:—Held, that the court, therefore, could not grant the first part of the rule; and that courts will not call upon attorners to answer affidavits upon an application such as this, the course to be pursued being to dispose of that which relates to the suit, and then, if the circumstances warrant it, to move to strike the attorney off the roll. The rule was therefore discharged. In re Keys and Smith, 13 C. P. 262.

Evidence as to Relationship-Misconduct-Delay-Preference - Costs.]-On an application against an attorney to answer the matters in affidavits, the court, upon the affidavits, was not satisfied that the relation of attorney and client ever subsisted between the attorney and the applicants, though he had acted as attorney for a firm of which one of them was a member, nor that there was such professional misconduct as to require further action; there had been also a long delay in making the application, which was not satisfactorily accounted for; and the rule, therefore, was discharged. It appeared, however, that while acting as attorney for the assignee in insolvency of the firm, he had attempted as a creditor of the firm to secure a preference for himself. Such conduct was strongly censured, and the rule under the circum-stances discharged without costs. The authorities and practice as to such applications reviewed. In re Attorney, 39 U. C. R. 171.

Order of Court ex Mero Motu.]—
Where at the hearing matters are brought to the notice of the court which affect the character of one of the parties, a solicitor, the court will, of its own motion, and without being applied to by any other party, call upon such solicitor to shew cause why he should not be called upon to answer these matters. In re Solicitor, 27 Gr. 77. See In re Toms, In re Cameron, 3 Ch. Ch. 204, ante (g).

Untrue Statements — Disbursements.]—
The attorney in this case was called upon to answer affidavits charging him with untrue statements as to disbursements for payments to and procuring money for witnesses. The court, under the special circumstances stated in the case, discharged the rule, but ordered the attorney to pay the plaintiff's costs of the application. In re S., In re McLean v. Campbell, 14 C. P. 323.

(i) To Enforce Undertaking.

Next Friend — Costs—Affidavits.] — A partiff's solicitor to allow his name to be used as "next friend," on the assurance that he would not be rendered liable to costs. This the solicitor denied. It was considered that such a fact could not be established by ex parte affidavits. Burgess v. Muma, 2 Ch. Ch. 43.

Non-professional Capacity — Surety— Indemnity.]—The court will not summarily compel a solicitor to perform an agreement interunced e nisi alia, at all h the withwas tagee, ut to ition. ause, with or undertaking, merely because he is a solicitor; if it was not given by him in his professional connection with the suit or matter, the party to whom it is given will be left to his action. Where M., a solicitor, unsuccessfully prosecuted a petition against the applicant at his own expense, in the name of one H., agreeing to indemnify H. against costs, M.'s interest being merely as surely on a bond for H., a summary application to make M. pay the costs of the petition was refused, Wilson v. Beatty, Re Donovan and Morphy, 12 A. R. 522.

Stay of Action.]—Where a declaration in ejectment had been served on a wrong party, and the plaintiff's attorney wrote to the attorney of the person who ought to have been served, that if he would go to trial no action for mesne profits should be brought against his client, if the plaintiff should be successful—the court stayed such an action afterwards brought by the attorney, and ordered the attorney to pay the costs. Stephenson v. McCombe, 1 U. C. R. 456.

See In re Attorney, 8 P. R. 102; In re Harrison v. A. & B., 8 L. J. 91.

5. Other Cases.

Action by Bailiff's Assistant—Indemnity.]—The attorney for an execution creditor, who indemnified the bailiff who executed the fi. fa., is not responsible over to an assistant whom the bailiff employed, for damages recovered against such assistant by a person who claimed the goods seized, Eadus v. Hougalt, 14 C. P. 452.

Action by Client—Amount Received— Set-off—Malicious Arrest.]—A plaintiff's attorney, acting as plaintiff's agent, and arresting a defendant on his own affidavit, on a verdict being rendered against him for a malicious arrest, cannot deduct the amount of the verdict against himself from the amount received by him from the plaintiff. In re Boutton, Renaud v. Broom, 1 P. R. 68.

—— Defence—Fraud.]—It is no defence in an action against an attorney for money received by him on account of his client, that the judgment on which the money was paid was obtained through fraud of such client. Williams v. King, E. T. I Wm. IV.

Erroneous Opinion.]—An attorney is not responsible as for a fraudulent breach of duty, for an erroneous opinion on a will. Alexander v. Small, 2 U. C. R. 298.

Action by Executors of Client — Defence. 1—One W., suing in his individual capacity, obtained a judgment against M., and the defendant (his attorney) after W.'s death received the money. W. was the administrator of A., and this judgment was for rent of A.'s land. W.'s executors having sued defendant for the money so received, persons interested in A.'s estate notified him not to pay:—Held, that, having received the money as W.'s attorney, he could not resist payment to his executors. Charteris v. Miller, 14 U. C. R. 62.

Action by Judgment Debtor — Excess.]—Held, that the second count of the declaration, charging defendants, as attorneys, with having entered judgment and levied on plaintiff for the full amount of a claim, without deducting a payment made, and the third count, charging a levy on other goods after enough had been seized, were both good in substance. Reid v. Ball, 15 U. C. R. 568.

Bill of Complaint - Creditors-Preference—Sale — Administration — Lien — Petition—Intituling.]—W. C., having filed a bill to administer the estate of his father, obtained an injunction enjoining several judgment creditors who had placed executions against creditors who had placed executions against lands of the deceased in the hands of the sheriff, from proceeding thereon until a decree for administering the estate could be obtained. After this, W. C., by the advice of his solicitor, sold part of the estate, and the greater portion of the purchase money was retained by the solicitor, upon which he claimed to have a lien for his cover. A core was afterwarks obtained in costs. A decree was afterwards obtained in the cause, making the injunction perpetual, after which the solicitor advised the convey-ance of a large portion of the estate to his (the solicitor's) partner, upon certain trusts, whereby the eldest judgment creditor was entirely excluded from all benefit. The agent of the solicitor advised a conveyance of another portion of the estate to one of the creditors, and obtained from this creditor a power of attorney to sell, under which he contracted to sell several portions of the lands so conveyed and received moneys on account thereof, which he had also applied to his own use, with the exception of certain parts paid to his client. exception or certain parts paid to his cheut. One of the defendants, upon these facts, filed a petition under the 163rd order, praying that it might be referred to the master to inquire and report if the sales had been beneficial to the estate; and if the master should be of that opinion, then that the proper parties might be ordered to pay the amounts received into court:—Held, that the proper order to make would be for a reference to inquire and report; and if the sales were adopted, then that the money remaining in the hands of the solicitors should be forthwith paid in, without prejudice to the creditor's rights to get rid of the con-tracts. Held, also, that, had the petition given notice to the parties that that relief would be asked, sufficient appeared on the affidavits to warrant the court in making an order for imwarrant the payment, pending the inquiry before the master, and that the solicitors could not claim any lien for costs. Held, also, that suffi-cient was not shewn to enable the court to proremains any judgment as to the liability of the principal for the acts of his agent. The affidavits and petition were intituled in the cause, omitting any mention of the solicitors:—Held. that the intituling was sufficient. Semble, that where from the nature of the facts upon which a petition to the court is founded, they cannot be sworn to, it is not sufficient to make use of the short form given in the 163rd order, but that such facts should be stated in the petition, so that the respondents may be made aware to what extent and on what grounds relief is sought against them. Crooks v. Crooks, 1 Gr. 57.

Demand of Plea—Judgment—Irregularity—Motion—Time.]—A demand of plea in an action against an attorney must still be served in term, or within four days afterwards, notwithstanding the 10th of the new rules, and he cannot be compelled to plead in vacation to plea were served in vacation, and interlocutory judgment was signed and notice of assessment given on 21st September for the assizes to be beld on the 10th October, and the attorney did not move in chambers against the proceedings, but gave notice of his intention to move in court in the following term on the 11th October, and moved accordingly, it was held that his application was too late, and his rule was dicharged. Haigh v. Boulton, 1 U. C. R. 340.

Irregularity.] — Where a bill had been filed against an attorney in the office of an outer district, and proceedings had thereupon to verdict and judgment, the court refused to set them aside for irregularity. Mitchell v. Tenbroek Tay, 168.

Irregularity—Costs.]—When all the proceedings against an attorney subsequent to filing the bill had been set aside, and the plaintiff afterwards proceeded without serving a copy of the bill anew, the court set aside subsequent proceedings for irregularity, but without costs, thinking the objection had little merit in it. Fraser v. Boulton, 3 O. S. 19.

— Time to Plead.]—Where a bill was filed against an attorney in vacation, he had four days in the next term to plead. Macanady v. Foster, Dra. 479.

Costs — Opposite Party—Undertaking.]—An attorney will not be ordered to pay costs due by his client to the opposite party, unless he has positively engaged to do so. Ross v. Calder, 3 U. C. R. 180.

District Court—Issue.]—Under 8 Vict. c. 13, s. 51, a writ may go to a district court to try an issue in which an attorney is a defendant. Martin v. Gwynne, 5 U. C. R. 245.

Penalty — Action for—Conviction.]—To subject a person to the penalty of 22 Geo. II. c. 46, for suing out process, &c., the attorney allowing his mane to be used must first be convicted. Rex v. Bidwell, Tay. 487.

Solicitor's Clerk—Counsel Fees.]—H., a barrister and attorney, agreed with D., an attorney, to render D. his services at D.'s office, without confining himself to any particular branch of the business, at a weekly salary. During such employment he acted as counsel at the hearing of two chancery suits, and in a common law suit, and some arbitrations, and after his employment had been terminated by D. he sued him for the counsel fees in these matters:—Held, that D. was not liable, the presumption being that the services sued for were performed under H.'s employment. Gordon v. Adams, 43 U. C. R. 203.

in an office of Trial.]—A managing clerk in an office has power to bind his principal by accepting a notice of trial as of an earlier date than it was actually delivered, unless the principal promptly repudiate the acceptance, and give notice thereof to the opposite party. Orr v. Stabback, T. T. 3 & 4 Vict.

XI. RETAINER.

Absence of.]-See ante IV. 1.

Appointment by Court — Class Suit— Liability—Ratification.]—During a reference in an administration suit the master appointed the solicitor for one of the unsecured creditors of the estate in question to represent the gen-eral body of unsecured creditors. The Imperial Bank were unsecured creditors of the estate; they sent in a claim to the administrator in answer to the statutory advertisement for creditors, but did not prove their claim before the master. The nomination of the one solicitor for the unsecured creditors was an ex parte proceeding, of which the bank were not notified till a year afterwards :-Held, that, in the absence of contract or of an order of the master made under conditions contemplated by G. O. 218, the solicitor could not recover from the Imperial Bank any portion of the costs incurred on behalf of the unsecured creditors. Held, also, that the doctrine of ratification by silence or inaction did not apply to a case like this. Hall v. Laver, 1 Ha. 571, fol-lowed. Re Monteith, Merchants Bank v. Monteith, 12 P. R. 288.

— Winding-up.] — It is preferable to have the proceedings under an order for winding up a company under 45 Vict. c. 23 (D.), conducted by solicitors who are totally unconnected with the company to be wound up. Re Joseph Hall Mfg. Co., 10 P. R. 485.

In a proceeding for the winding-up of a company, a solicitor who is acting for claimants whose claims must be contested by the liquidators, cannot obtain the sanction of the court to his acting also as solicitor for the liquidators. Nor will the court sanction the appointment of a special solicitor to act for the liquidators in the matter of the contested claim. The winding-up must be prosecuted by one disinterested solicitor, whose services will not be divided by the assertion of antagonistic claims. Ro Stark Co., 15 P. R. 471. See, also, Re Druy Nickel Co., 16 P. R. 525.

By Assignee in Insolvency -Liability—Evidence.]—The defendant's testa-tor was a sheriff and official assignee under the Insolvent Act of 1875. The plaintiff was solicitor for the City Bank, and also for one B., upon whose petition one G. F. was placed in insolvency. The official assignee became creditors' assignee. At the first meeting of creditors, B. being chairman, the plaintiff, representing the City Bank, whose claim amounted to nearly the whole indebtedness, moved a resolution to sell certain goods of the insolvent, that the assignee should take the necessary proceedings to realize the assets, and recover certain property alleged to belong to the insolvent, and for that purpose to retain counsel, if necessary. B. became inspector of the estate, and consulted with the plaintiff, and on his advice instructed the assignee to defend and bring actions. The assignee was obliged to pay costs and damages in an action brought against him to recover goods wrongfully taken by him; and he also paid the plaintiff some costs, whereby the assets of the estate were exhausted, and a small sum in addition paid by the assignee out of his own funds. The defendant's testator was subsequently removed from the office of assignee, and a new assignee appointed, whereupon he presented a petition to the insolvent court, in which he alleged that he had retained the plaintiff, and had been put to great expense in bringing and defending suits as assignee, and had become liable to pay large sums of money in respect thereof, and prayed payment by the new assignee, which was refused. The plaintiff delivered his bills to the defendant's testator in Termination of—Discontinuance—New Action.]—Where a solicitor had instructions io defend a suit, which was discontinued and a new one for the same cause of action was commenced:—Held, that the original retainer to defend continued in the new suit. Clarke v. Union Fire Ins. Co., Caston's Casc., 10 P. R. 339.

Judgment — Subsequent Proceedings.]—It is no part of an attorney's duty, under the ordinary retainer, to issue an execu-ings.]—It is no part of an attorney's duty, under the ordinary retainer, to issue an execution and collect the money; his authority ceases with the judgment. Where, therefore, the plaintiff laid as a breach of the defendant's undertaking to prosecute an action, &c., that he delayed to issue execution, without avering any special retainer to do so:—Held, declaration bad on general demurrer. Searson v. Small, 5 U. C. R. 259.

Under the ordinary retainer to collect a debt, an attorney is not bound to re-register the judgment which has been obtained by him and put on record:—Held, that the evidence in this case shewed no special retainer for that purpose. Semble, that the common retainer imposes no duty to pursue any collateral remedies, such as to register the judgment in the first instance, or to examine the defendant, or to attach debts due to him. Darling v. Weller, 22 U. C. R. 363.

A solicitor retained to collect a debt is not entitled to interplead without a further retainer for that purpose, but being so retained he has the ordinary rights of solicitors as in other contested cases. Hackett v. Bible, 12 P. R. 482.

A retainer to prosecute an action does not terminate when the judgment is obtained, but makes it the duty of the attorney or solicitor, without further instruction, to proceed after judgment and endeavour to obtain the fruits of the recovery, including the making it by registration a charge on the lands of the judgment debtor. Hett v. Pun Pong, 18 S. C. R. 290 his lifetime. After the death of the testator the plaintiff wrote a letter to one of his sons about the costs, in which, in relating the facts, he stated that he was attorney for the bank. The plaintiff now sued the personal representative for his unpaid costs of the proceedings carried on by him. The trial Judge found that the retainer was not a personal one that the retainer was not a personal one of the benefit of the creditors, and was in fact their solicitor:—Held, affirming the judgment, that it was a question to be determined on the evidence whether the retainer was acting merely on the instructions of creditors; that upon the evidence the plaintiff was solicitor for the creditors and not for the assolicitor for the creditors and not for the assolicitor for the creditors and not for the assolicitor.

signee personally; and, notwithstanding the admission contained in the assignee's petition, he had not incurred any personal liability for the costs. Butterfield v. Wells, 4 O. R. 368.

By Company—Authority of Manager.]—
The general manager of a company had authority of do acts which occasionally required legal advice:—Held, that he had implied authority to retain a solicitor whenever, in his judgment, it was prudent to do so, but that such authority ceased on the suspension of the company. Clarke v. Union Fire Ins. Co., Caston's Case, 10 P. R. 339.

— Necessity for Seal.]—Where the directors of a company have power to appoint officers and agents and dismiss them at pleasure:—Held, that their appointment of a solicitor need not be under the corporate seal. Clarke v. Union Fire Ins. Co., Caston's Case, 10 P. R. 339.

By Corporation — Necessity for Seal— School Board — Resolution — Good Faith— Costs.]—See Barrie Public School Board v. Town of Barrie, 19 P. R. 33.

Joint or Several Retainer—Severance of Defence—Appartionment of Costs.]—Not-withstanding that the retainer of a solicitor by two persons is in form a joint one, the court will look into the facts of the case to discover the real nature of the transaction, and will determine the rights of the solicitor and clients accordingly; such a retainer does not necessarily make the persons signing it joint debtors to the solicitor to whom it was given, but it may be taken distributively. And, upon the facts of this case, the client whom the solicitor sought to charge with the whole costs of the defence to an action conducted up to a certain stage jointly on behalf of this client and another, two of the defendants in the action, and afterwards on behalf of this client alone, and by a new solicitor on behalf of the other, was held liable for only one-half of the other, was held liable for only one-half of the other, was held liable for only one-half of the other, was held liable for only one-half of the other, was never expresented by the same solicitor, but thereafter for the whole of the costs reasonably and properly incurred by such solicitor. Re Cameron and Lee, 18 P. P. R. 176.

Partnership — Death of Partner—Continuation.]—It a firm, consisting of two or more partners, are retained, and one die, it will be assumed that the retainer continues to the surviving partner or partners. Alchin v. Buffalo and Lake Huron R. W. Co., 2 Ch. Ch. 45; Dougall v. Ockerman, 9 U. C. R. 354.

Sufficiency — Evidence.]—Held, that the evidence of defendant's retainer, set out in the report of this case, was clearly sufficient. Herr v. Toms, 32 U. C. R. 423.

the money being received by a solicitor who acted for both parties. The purchase not having been carried out, the plaintiff desired to have the mortgage discharged, whereupon the solicitor, who had misappropriated the moneys, paid the mortgage and fraudulently procured from her an assignment of the mortgage to himself, which he assigned to the defendant P., who advanced the money thereon in good faith and without any knowledge of the fraud:—Held, that the plaintiff was entitled to a reconveyance of the property released from the mortgage, and that the loss must be sustained by the defendant P., who took nothing under the assignment to him, for, the mortgage being paid off, the solicitor acquired no beneficial interest, being at most but a trustee of the legal estate, and could pass no better title to his assignee. McCormick v. Cockburn, 31 O. R. 436.

Limitation of Actions — Trustee Limitation Act.]—Executors, relying in good faith on the statement of their testator's solicitor that he had in his hands securities sufficient to answer a fund which they were directed by the will to invest for an annuitant, distributed the estate. Subsequently it was found that before the testator's death the solicitor had misappropriated the money given to him by the testator to invest, and had, in fact, at the time of the representation, no securities or money in his hands:—Held, that the executors were protected by the Trustee Limitation Act. R. S. O. 1807 c. 129, s. 32. Held, also, that payments made from time to time by the solicitor to the annuitant, ostensibly as of interest received by him from the fund, did not keep alive the right of action against the executors. Judgment in 30 O. R. 532 reversed. Clark v. Bellamy, 27 A. R. 435.

Judgment Debtor—Examination of Solicitor on a Transferree — Employee.]—The solicitor of a judgment debtor who had absconded transferred property of the judgment debtor to a purchaser under a power of attorney, and received the consideration money, $4,000:—
Held, that the solicitor was a person to whom a transfer of the debtor's property and effects to the extent of $4,000 had been made, for the possession of that sum had been transferred to him by the debtor, and the solicitor was liable to examination under 49 Vict. c. 16, s. 12 (O.) The solicitor was also an employee of the judgment debtor within the meaning of the section. Govans y. Barnet, 12 P. R. 330.

Partnership — Promissory Note — Firm Name—Mutual Authority.] — In an action azainst B. & S., a firm of solicitors, on promissory notes indorsed by B. in the name of the firm, it was proved that on other occasions S. had indorsed in the same manner, and, as the witness believed, with B.'s knowledge, but it did not appear what the consideration was for the indorsements sued on, or that S. knew of them:—Held, sufficient evidence to go to the jury of a mutual authority: and a verdict having been found for the plaintiff, the court refused to interfere. Workman v. McKinstry, 21 U. C. R. 622.

The plaintiff, knowing that the defendants were a firm of solicitors, advanced to one A. money upon a joint note signed by him and by one of the defendants in the firm's name, without the knowledge or consent of his partner. No usage or general mutual authority to sign notes in the name of the firm was proved, and it was admitted that the plaintiff had no knowledge of the transactions relied upon to shew such authority:—Held, that the plaintiff could not recover against both defendants, but that the defendant who signed the note was liable. Wilson v, Broven, 6 A. R. 411.

Payment into Court—Deposit—Default— Effect of:]—Where the plaintiff's solicitor made default in payment into court of the ten per cent, paid to him at the time of sale, under the conditions of sale:—Held, that the other parties entitled to the purchase money should not suffer thereby, but that the plaintiff's share should be charged with the deficiency. Mulkins v. Clarke, 11 P. R. 350.

Scrivener's Business.]—Semble, that in this Province the business which is called "scrivener's business" is part of the ordinary business of a solicitor. Thompson v. Robinson, 15 O. R. 662.

RVICES,

PERTY,

WITH 6699. I. GENERALLY,

Discretion—Conduct.]—The exercise of the jurisdiction to order specific performance of a contract is a matter of judicial discretion, to be conversed, as far as possible, by the property of the conduct of the contraction of the conduct of the person conducts. In the exercise of the remedy much courard is shewn to the conduct of the person seeking relief. Harris v. Robinson, 21 S. C. 13 330.

Executory Agreement — Execution in Part.] — According to the principles upon which a court of equity acts in enforcing such contracts and agreements as are properly the subject of its jurisdiction, it will always execute the whole or such parts of the agreement as remain executory; but, if the parties have before action carried out any of the terms of the contract, such executed portions will not be disturbed. Peck v. Powell, 11 S. C. R. 494.

Good Faith—Nature of Bargain.]—The court must see its way clearly before decreding specific performance, and it must be satisfied of the integrity and good faith of the parties seeking its special interference. Where incapacity and inadequacy go band in hand, the court may refuse to enforce a contract, although the purchaser was guilty of no greater fault than making a hard and unconscientious bargain. Gough v. Bench, 6 O. R. 639.

New Rights—Construction of Contract.]
—The court, in adapting itself to the exigencies of mankind as they arise, will deal with new subjects so as best to effectuate the intentions of the parties, and will not allow rules and principles amplicable to a different state of circumstances, to interfere with the exercise of its jurisdiction when it can be usefully exercised; and where money has been expended upon the faith of an agreement, which otherwise the court might not have enforced, it will not entertain objections to the form of the contract when it can execute it, and in doing so will construe the agreement liberally. Ledyard v, McLean, 10 Gr. 139.

Oral Agreement — Executed Consideration.]—The court will enforce an oral agreement, although it is to do an act which is not to be performed within a year from the time of making the agreement, where the consideration therefor has been executed. Halleran v, Moon, 28 Gr. 319.

Origin of Action — Discretion — Conduct! — The origin both of the action for specific performance and of the action for relief against re-entry for non-payment of rent is in the equitable jurisdiction of the court; the compelling performance in the one and the granting relief in the other is in the judicial discretion of the court; and in each the court has regard to the conduct of the party seeking to compel such performance or to obtain such relief. Coventry v. McLean, 22 O. R. 1.

Pleading.]—" Not guilty by statute" cannot be pleaded to an action for specific performance of a contract; and the defence of "not guilty" irrespective of statutory authority is not admissible under the Judicature Act.
Toten of Peterborough v. Midland R. W. Co.,
12 P. R. 122.

II. AGREEMENTS BETWEEN LESSOR AND LESSEE.

1. Agreement for a Lease.

Injury to Property—Reason for Nonperformance.]—An agreement by letter was entered into to take a lease for years of a house, and that the rent agreed upon should be increased according to the amount which might be expended by the owner in improvements. The party entered into possession, and paid rent according to the stipulations in the letters. The numicipal authorities afterwards constructed a bridge near the property, which the tenant asserted injuriously affected his occupation:—Held, notwithstanding, that defendant was bound to accept a lease in the terms agreed upon. Dennison v, Kennedy, 7 Gr. 342.

Purchase with Notice — Ejectment—Performence of Services,] — Where, under a parol agreement for a lease made between defendant and plaintiff for ten on the terms of the plaintiff (elering or paying a rental either in clearing or in money, the plaintiff entered into possession, and after he had cleared a certain number of acres defendant sold the lot, and the purchaser ejected the plaintiff—Held, that the plaintiff could not recover under the agreement, not being in writing; nor under the common counts for the value of his services, for the clearing of the land was not the primary service for which the lease was, after the performance of the work, to be given as a mode of compensation; but the lease was the primary thing contracted for, and the work was reserved as a rent from year to year. Semble, that the plaintiff's remedy, if any, was by suit for specific performance of the agreement against the purchase, who had purchased with notice of the plaintiff being in possession. Draper v. Holborn, 24 C. P. 122.

Res Judicata—Injunction—Cross-suit.]—An agreement for a lease provided for the building of a barn by the tenant. The assignee of the owner, considering that a barn which the tenant had begun was not such as the agreement required, filed a bill for an injunction, and for specific performance of the agreement, generally. The answer insisted that the barn was such as defendant undertook to build. The court, being of opinion that the injunction was the real object of the suit, and that the plaintiff was not entitled to an injunction, dismissed the bill:—Held, that this decree was no bar to a subsequent suit by the tenant for a specific performance of the agreement for a lease. Simmons v. Campbell, 17 Gr. 612.

Reservation—Notice.]—The owner of an oil well lot, on which was also situate a black-smith's shop, which was known not to be the property of the owner of the land, agreed to lease the oil well and lot for a term of years without any express reservation of the blacksmith's shop. The intended lessee insisted on obtaining a lease without such reservation, but his bill for that purpose was dismissed with costs. Morris v. Kenp, 13 Gr.

Short Term — Remedy at Law.] — The court will not entertain a bill for specific performance of a contract for a lease of real estate for a year; and where a tenant in possession contracted to assign his possession, and with it his right to a renewal of his term for a year, the court refused specific performance, the remedy at law being sufficient. Mara v. Fitzgerald, 19 Gr. 52.

Trustees—Notice.]—Where two of four trustees agreed for the lease of certain property to the plaintiff, but without the knowledge of the other two, to whom notice of the agreement could not be imputed, specific performance was refused. McKelvey v. Rourke, 15 Gr. 380.

2. Lease with Right of Purchase.

Condition Precedent — Performance of Terms.]—Where, by the terms of a covenant to sell, the option to purchase is entirely with the covenantee upon certain specified terms, the contract rests upon a wholly different footing from an ordinary contract for sale and purchase of land; and the party entitled to the option must shew that he has performed all the terms, upon which alone he is entitled to exercise that option. A lessee with a right of purchase neglected to pay the rent and perform the conditions specified, and his land-lord wrote stating that the lease was void, and offering him other terms. Twenty months after such letter the lessee filed a bill to enforce the contract in the lease, or for a conveyance on the terms set forth in the letter, which the tenant alleged he had accepted, but the evidence wholly failed to establish that fact. The court dismissed the bill with costs. Forbes v. Connolly, 5 Gr. 657.

Cross-action — Covenant.] — The owner of vacant land leased part of it for nine months at a nominal rent. The lessees covenanted to sink, during the term, a test well to the depth of 1,000 feet, for oil; and it was provided that at any time during the term the lessees should have the ontion of purchasing, and the lessor should convey to them, on request, any five acres of the demised land at $12 a lot; and that at the end of the term they might purchase the residue at the same price. The machinery broke after they had reached a depth of 5.30 feet, and they were in consequence unable to complete the well during the term, though they expended as much as, but for the accident, the well would have cost to complete; and the work had enabled the lessor to sell a large number of his other village lots at advanced prices. There was no charge of any want of good faith or diligence or skill on the part of the lessees. They gave notice, before the end of the term, that the lessees were entitled to a specific performance of the covenant as to the five acres, notwithstanding the non-completion of the well to the stipulated depth; without prejudice to any action by the lessor on the covenant. Hunt v. Spencer, 13 Gr. 225.

Construction of Agreement—Absolute or Conditional Right.]—A lease contained an agreement that "the said lessor hereby agrees to give to the said lessor hereby agrees to give to the said lessor hermises at any time within four years from the date hereof, at the price of $1,000, payable in five yearly instalments:"—Held, that there was an absolute agreement to sell, which the lessee had a right to enforce at any time within the period named, and not a qualified agreement to sell on the terms mentioned, only in case the lessor desired to sell. Casey v. Hanlon, 22 Gr. 445.

Laches — Tender.] — A lease was made, with a right to purchase at a price fixed, being such a sum as the rent reserved would form the interest of. The lessee paid no principal or interest, abandoned the possession, and left for the United States, and the lessor, being unable to ascertain the lessee's residence so as to put an end to the contract, obtained possession by writ of hab, fac, poss, in ejectment brought upon a vacant possession. The lessee, after a third instalment of interest fell due, caused a tender to be made of it, which was refused, and about a year afterwards filed a bill to enforce specific performance of the contract. The laches of the plaintiff was held such as to disentitle him to relief, and the bill was dismissed with costs. Young v. Boven, 6 Gr. 402.

3. Other Cases.

Covenant to Build—Selection of Site—Injunction.]—A lease provided that the lesses (defendant) should erect a barn of certain specified dimensions, but was silent as to the exact location or site of the barn. The lesses commenced to erect a barn on a site with which the lessor was dissatisfied, and thereupon filed a bill, alleging that such a site was unsuitable, and that it had been selected by defendant from improper motives; that another site had been agreed on between them; and that the building itself was faulty in its construction; and prayed an injunction against allowing the barn to remain in its present position; and by amendment sought to enforce specific performance. The evidence failed to establish the material allegations of the lease the plaintiff had not the right of selecting the site of the barn; that it was not a proper case for specific performance, or to award damages in lieu thereof, but that the plaintiff must be left to his remedy at law. Campbell v. Simmons, 15 Gr. 506; Simmons v. Campbell, 17 Gr. 612.

Lease on Faith of Oral Agreement—Right of Entry — Injunction]—Declaration, for breaking and entering the plaintiff's close, and cutting and carrying away the grain. Equitable plea, that the plaintiff held the land under an indenture of lease from defendant, on the negotiation for and execution of which it was orally agreed between them, and the true agreement was, that defendant should have the right to enter and harvest the crop then in the ground sowed by him; that when the lease was executed, a reservation of such right in it was suggested, but omitted on the plaintiff's assurance that it was unnecessary, as the agreement between them was well understood, and defendant would be allowed to take the crop; and that the entry, &c., in pursuance of such agreement, is the trespass complained of: — Held, plea good, for the independent oral agreement made in consideration of defendant signing the lease was good as an agreement, though defendant, by s. 4 of the Statute of Frauds, night be prevented from suing on it; and, as equity in such a case would decree specific performance, there was ground for a perpetual injunction against this action. the plea was not also a justification at law, as under an agreement which was valid to protect the defendant, though he could not have enforced it by action. McGinness v. Kennedy, 29 U. C. R. 93.

Lease with Right of Renewal.]—
Where the lessor covenants for a renewal of the term, or in default for payment of improvements, the option rests with the lessor either to renew or pay for the improvements; and the lessee cannot compel a specific performance of the contract to renew. Hutchinson v. Boulton, 3 Gr. 391.

III. AGREEMENTS FOR EASEMENTS.

Right of Way - Perpetuity-Consideration-Evidence.]-An agreement to grant an easement will not necessarily be for an easement in perpetuity. Specific performance of an agreement to grant an easement may be an ingredient to grant an easement may be enforced in equity. An oral agreement was entered into between the owners of two adjoining half lots, that each should give a strip of equal width from his land for a lane from the public highway to the clearing which they should make upon their respective lots, the agreement not being expressly limited as to time. A rail fence accordingly was built by each on their respective sides of the lane, which they used in common for fifteen years, until the death of one of the parties. Upon a bill filled to restrain the defendant from closing up the parties. fendant from closing up the portion of the lane situate on his land, it was proved that the greatest part of the lane was on defen-dant's land; and that there had been no cante land; and that there had been no expenditure on the plaintiff's land, or on the lane, upon the faith of this agreement:—Held, reversing the decree in 24 Gr. 573, that specific performance could not be enforced, as the site of the fence and the user of the included land could not be referable to the original agreement; but, even if the lane had been formed of equal portions of the land of each party. on agreement to keep it open in perpetuity could, under the circumstances, be presumed, Quare, whether the defendant's agreement could properly be said to be founded upon a valuable consideration. Leave to adduce fur-ther evidence refused, where the expense would be wholly disproportionate to the value of the subject matter in litigation. Craig v. Craig. 2 A. R. 583.

Voluntary Oral Promise.]—A person about to purchase land stipulated orally with another, who had been accustomed to use a road over it, that in the event of the purchase he would be allowed to continue the use thereof, but afterwards refused to carry out such agreement:—Held, that this promise was merely voluntary, and as such, insufficient to found a bill for specific performance. Barr v. Hatch, 9 Gr. 312.

Right to Overflow Land—dssignment of Bond.]—The plaintiff purchased from one C. a mill privilege, with a right to overflow land belonging to defendant, and abstained at defendant's instance from obtaining from C. an assignment of a bond securing the right so to flood defendant's land. In a proceeding afterwards taken by plaintiff to compel defendant specifically to perform the contract contained in the bond:—Held, that the want of a formal assignment of the bond could not be raised as an objection to plaintiff's right to recover. Ritchie v. Drain, 25 Gr. 322.

See, also, post V. 5.

IV. AGREEMENTS FOR SALE OF CHATTELS.

Peculiar Value—Saw Logs—Diligence.]
—Saw logs cannot be said primâ facie to be of "peculiar value:" but they are more likely to be so than other chattels; and specific relief may be given with respect to them in more instances than almost any other sort of chattel property. The relief, however, must be applied for promptly. Flint v. Corby, 4 Gr. 45.

The court will decree specific performance of a contract for the manufacture and sale of saw logs, where they are capable of being identified and possess a peculiar value for the purchaser. Siccenson v. Clarke, 4 Gr. 540; Fuller v. Richmond, 2 Gr. 24; S. C., 4 Gr. 657; Farucell v. Walbridge, 6 Gr. 634.

Vessel—Delay—Changes—Depreciation—Partnership.]—A seam vessel owned by the members of a limited partnership was registered the name of the general partner. During the name of the general partner. During in absence from this country the special partnership in the partnership was registered for the sale of the vessel, and gave to greed for the sale of the vessel, and gave the sale of the purchasers within three mouthers an placet them in possession. Two years are placet them in possession. Two years are placet the purchasers which the vessel was sold under execution with the purchasers by replevin, the purchasers giving notice to the special partners, who took no steps to prevent the removal of the vessel, and recovered judgment against them, after which they filed a bill for specific performance of the contract, and an injunction to stay proceedings under the judgment. The court, considering the great changes which had taken place in the position of the parties, and the depreciation in value of the steamer, refused specific performance, and dismissed the bill with costs. Cotton v. Corby, 7 Gr. 50, 635.

- V. AGREEMENTS FOR THE SALE OF AND RE-LATING TO LAND.
- 1. Compensation or Abatement of Purchase Money,

Alienation of Property — Exchange — Chattels.]—The plaintiff agreed in writing to sell to the defendant certain lands for $3.500, of which the defendant should pay $500 on the date of the agreement, to be represented, however, by two horses and two organs which he was to deliver to the plaintiff. The defendant, however, sold the organs and parted with one of the horses. On the plaintiff subsequently bringing this action for specific performance, the court ordered the defendant to pay $500 in lieu of the horses and organs. Jones v. Dale, 14: O. R. 717.

Notice—Amount of Compensation— Inquiry.]—Where a purchaser died after paying three-fourths of the purchase money, leaving an infant heir, who was entitled to a specific performance of the contract; and the vendor, at the instance of the administratrix, conveyed the property, which had greatly increased in value, to a third person, and it afterwards passed into the hands of persons without notice:—Held, that the heir could sue the vendor in equity for compensation. With a view to fixing the amount of compensation, inquiry was directed as to the condition of the estate left by the deceased purchaser, and whether the plaintiff or the estate received the benefit of any part of the purchase money on the subsequent sale of the property. Forsyth v. Johnson, 14 Gr. 639.

Default of Possession — Application — Formul.] — A motion for compensation for want of possession in a specific performance suit, should be made in court and not in chambers. O'Dea v. Simott, 2 Ch. Ch. 446.

Deficiency in Property Sold.]—A parcel of land, surveyed and laid off into building lots, was offered for sale by auction, when M. purchased two of such lots at an aggregate sum of £70. The plan by which the property was sold, stated in the margin that it was drawn upon a scale of four chains to the inch; in reality the scale was three chains to the inch; but this was not discovered until after the conveyance had been executed, and the purchase money paid. The purchaser, M., filed a bill praying repayment of a proportionate amount, or a conveyance of a sufficient quantity of the adjoining land to make up the deficiency. The court, under the circumstances, considered that the plaintiff was not entitled to the relief asked, and dismissed the bill with costs; but semble, that if the conveyance had not been made, or the purchase money not fully paid, he would have been entitled to relief. McCall v. Faithorne, 10 Gr. 324.

The plaintiff sold to defendant a lot. The contract did not mention the number of acres; the conveyance stated it to be 200 acres, more or less; the covenants did not warrant the quantity. Part of the purchase money remained as a lien on the land, and many years afterwards, but before it was fully paid, the vendee discovered that there was a deficiency of 24 acres in the supposed contents of the lot:—Held, that he was not entitled to compensation from the plaintiff for deficiency as against the unpaid purchase money. Follis v. Porter, 11 Gr. 442.

The advertisement of sale of a farm described the property as being "96 acres cleared and cultivated, a good log house, and frame barn 69 by 32 on the premises; also, driving shed." Upon a survey of the property being and, it appeared that the quantity of cleared land was 74% acres under cultivation and fenced in, and 12½ acres of pasture land. with some girdled trees standing, and a few logs lying upon it, which had never been cultivated, and could not be until the logs should be removed. The dimensions of the barn were 50 feet by 30, and there was no driving shed upon the property. On a bill filed by the vendors for specific performance of the contract: -Held, independently of a stipulation in the conditions of sale providing for errors in the advertisement, that these differences were such as entitled the purchaser to be compensated therefor; and the vendors, having disputed the purchaser's right to such compensation, were ordered to pay the costs of the suit. Canada Permanent B. and S. Society v. Young, 18 Gr. 566.

Sec Osborne v. Farmers' and Mechanie' Buuding Society, 5 Gr. 326; Stammers v. O'Donohoe, 28 Gr. 207, 8 A. R. 161, 11 S. C. R. 338; Cleaver v. North of Scotland Canadian Mortgage Co., 27 Gr. 508; Curran v. Little, 8 Gr. 250; Moorhouse v. Hewish, 22 A. R. 172.

— Eusement, |—Where a purchase was made of 300 acres, "more or less," and upon a survey being made of the lands, they were found to contain only 244 acres;—Held, that this was such a difference as entitled the purchaser to compensation; and the fact that the lands were alleged to be of but comparatively small value, could not affect the right of the purchaser to an allowance for the deficiency. The purchase was of a mill site and mill. Subsequently it appeared that the vendor had previously sold the right to take water for the purpose of floating logs, which fact was not communicated to the purchaser on negotiating for such purchase:—Held, that this also was a subject for compensation. Wardell v. Trenouth, 24 Gr. 465.

Delay in Bringing Suit for Compensation — Infancy.] — There was a lapse of fourteen years after the vendor's conveyance, before the bill for compensation was filed, the heir having been a minor all this time:—Held, that the vendor having caused this delay by his own arrangement with the infant's relations, which deprived the infant of their protection, this lapse was no bar to the suit. Forsyth v. Johnson, 14 Gr. 639.

Delay in Conveying-Exchange - Boot Money—Interest.] — The plaintiff contracted to convey to defendant a lot in B., for which the plaintiff was to receive a lot in S., paying $150, with interest, in four annual instalments, as the difference in value. The plain-tiff conveyed the lot in B. accordingly, but defendant did not convey the lot in S. his claim to the lot being under a contract with the Crown, there being default in paying the purchase money, and another person claiming to be entitled to the patent. Defendant ultimately, however, obtained the patent, thoug years :- Held, that the plaintiff after several was not entitled to a decree for the payment in money of the difference in the value of the two lots, but only to a conveyance of the S. lot, the time for his paying the $150 to count from the date of the decree. Gray v. Keesor, 16 Gr. 614; S. C., 15 Gr. 205.

Dilapidations.]—A vendor who contracts for the sale of property of which he has not taken possession, is necountable to the purchaser for dilapidations by those in possession before the vendor takes possession from them. Fisken v. Wride, 11 Gr. 245. See S. U., 7 Gr. 598.

A vendor in possession is, in general, responsible for dilapidations that take place, before he shews a good title, where they are such as a prudent owner, or his tenants, might have prevented. Where buildings are torn down after a contract for sale, and before the nurchaser takes or was bound to take possession, the vendor is prima facie accountable for the loss. S. C., 11 Gr. 245.

Dower Outstanding.]—A party agreeing to convey is bound to do so free from dower, or if the wife will not release, then to convey subject thereto, with an abatement in the purchase money. Kendrew v. Shewan. 4 Gr. 578; VanNorman v. Beaupre, 5 Gr. 599.

greeing dower, convey in the . 4 Gr. 99. An owner of real estate who alone enters into an agreement to sell will be required to procure a bar of his wife's dower or abate the purchase money in the event of her refusal. Van Norman v. Beaupre, 5 Gr. 599, followed. Loughead v. Stubbs, 27 Gr. 387.

Application — Forum.] — An application by a purchaser in a suit for specific performance for abatement of purchase money, on the ground of outstanding dower, should be made in court, not in chambers. Shinners v. Gruham, I Ch. Ch. 212.

Improvements—Vendor Unable to Complete.] — Semble, that the court can decree compensation for improvements where the vendor is unable to complete the title, but such a decree will not be made where specific performance can be compelled. Where the owner of an estate was present and permitted a third person to agree for the sale of his land, and the purchaser was let into possession, made improvements, and, being afterwards ejected by the owner of the property, filed a bill for payment of the value of those improvements, the court allowed a denurrer for want of equity. Davis v. Snyder, 1 Gr. 134.

Misconduct of Agents—Delay.]—A purchaser from the defendants at a public auction, filed a bill for specific performance, injunction, and compensation, alleging misconduct of the defendants' agents at the sale and otherwise, and consequent damage to him, which allegations were partly disproved by the evidence. However, as the delay in completing the title was owing in a great measure to deed and the court made a decree for specific performance and injunction; but without costs or compensation. Mossop v. Trust and Loun Co., 11 Gr. 204.

Misrepresentations-Costs.]- Although a vendor is allowed great latitude in the statements or exaggerations he may make as to the general qualities and capabilities of land he is about to offer for sale, still he will not be permitted to make direct misstatements and misrepresentations as to matters of fact which would naturally have the effect of inducing persons resident at a distance to bid for the property. Therefore, where an advertisement of property about to be sold described it as being "a farm of eighty-one and a quarter acres, twenty acres cleared and fenced," on the faith of which the plaintiff purchased, when in fact there was not any clearing or fencing made upon the premises, the court, in pronouncing a decree for specific performance at the instance of the purchaser, directed a reference to the master to make an allowance in respect to the master to make an allowance in respect of the matters misrepresented, and ordered the vendor to pay the costs of the suit. Stammers v. O'Donohoe. 28 Gr. 207; see S. C., S.A. R. 161, 11 S. C. R. 358.

Partnership Land—Refusal of one Partnership to Convey.]—Where a contract is made by one partner for the sale of partnership lands, to which the other partner refuses to consent, the purchaser cannot insist upon taking the share in the lands of the contracting partner with a proportionate abatement in the price, Judgment in 22 O. R. 519 reversed. Crain v. Rapple, 20 A. R. 291.

See Carroll v. Williams, 1 O. R. 150; Coates v. Coates, 14 O. R. 195.

Church—Condition as to Congregation— Contract becoming Absolute — Change of Faith.]—The owner agreed to sell a site for a burjal ground and church in connection with the Free Church of Scotland, if a congregation thereof could be brought together. A church was built thereon, and the congregation assembled and divine service was performed therein. Several years afterwards the great body of the congregation abandoned their connection with the Free Church; and they, in conjunction with the vendor, assumed to exclude such of the members as continued to adhere to the Free Church. On an information filed in the name of the attorney-general: Held, that, although at first conditional, the contract, by reason of a congregation having assembled, had become absolute; and that, so long as even one member remained to claim the site and church on behalf of the Free Church, the right of that body continued, notwithstanding the change of opinion in the body of the members; and any further interference with such right was restrained, and specific performance of the contract decreed with costs. Attorney-General v. Christie, 13

Expenses of Sale—Offer—Acceptance.]—C. R. S., being the owner of certain lease-hold property, wrote E. E. K., a land agent, a letter in these words: "Please call on J. J. R. He keeps a small shop. He resides in my house on P. street, and has been wanting to purchase it for some time. Tell him if he gives me $235 cash at once I will send the papers to you for him, and he can pay over the money to you. Please write me by return mail." On the following day E. E. K. wrote J. J. R. as follows: "Mr. S. of Meaford wishes me to say that if you desire to purchase some property he owns on P. street, that if you give him $235 cash he will send the deeds to me and deliver them to you. Your early reply will very much oblige." About a month after an acceptance was indorsed on the latter letter in these words, "I hereby accept the above on the understanding that I pay no expenses," and it was signed by J. J. R. in an action for specific performance by J. J. R. against C. R. S.—Held, that the letter from C. R. S. did not contain authority to E. E. K. to enter into a contract for the sale of the property. Held, also, that, even if there had been no question as to the authority of E. E. K., the insertion of the words "on the understanding that I pay no expenses" in the acceptance prevented it from being considered an acceptance of the offer said to be contained in the letter of E. E. K. Ryan v. Sing, 7 O. R. 296.

Fencing and Building.]—A vendee covenanted to fence the land forthwith, and to build a house within a limited time; and the vendor agreed to convey upon payment of the purchase money and the due fulfilment of all the vendee's other covenants. The vendee, without waiting for the time appointed for payment, and without either fencing or building, tendered the purchase money and interest, and his deed being refused he filed his bill for specific performance of the agreement to convey. The bill was dismissed with costs. Allen v. Bonn, 4 Gr. 439.

Mortgage—Discharge—Renewal of Lease —Ordnance Lands.]—The plaintiff, lessee of some ordnance lands, assigned his interest therein to defendant in 1847, the latter agreeing in consideration thereof to pay off an execution against plaintift, and if the Ordnance department would give defendant a deed in fee of the lot or a lease renewable in perpetuity at the then rent, to release a mortgage he had against the plaintiff on other land. The department refused to do either, but eleven years afterwards sold the land to defendant at a price greatly exceeding the sum of which the rent would be the interest at six per cent. The bill was for the discharge of the mortgage, and the decree of the court below dismissing the bill was affirmed on appeal. McKenzie v. Yielding, 13 Gr. 259, 11 Gr. 406.

Railway-Providing Crossings.]-The owner of lands over which the Grand Trunk Railway would pass, offered to convey a portion thereof for a station house upon certain conditions, which offer was rejected. Afterwards he agreed in writing with the solicitor of the contractors to convey a quantity of land not to exceed ten acres, upon condition that the station should be placed upon it. He refused to convey unless the contractors would secure to him three crossings over the track, and brought ejectment to turn them out of possession of the land so agreed to be conveyed. The court decreed a specific performance of the agreement to convey, and stayed the ejectment, though defendant swore that the condition upon which he agreed to convey was that the crossings should be secured to him. Jackson v. Jessup, 5 Gr. 524.

— Providing Culcert,]—The owner of land agreed to convey part to a railway company, the consideration for which was paid, on which the company would make a culvert man and the company would make a culvert man as used embankment. The building of the railway passed into the hands of another company, who built the embankment, but made no culvert, they having had no notice of the condition. Upon a bill filled by him for the specific performance of the covenant to construct such culvert:—Held, that it would be a hardship to compel the company to build the culvert, the cost of which would be very great, and that the parties ought to be placed in the same position as before the agreement, in order that the company might proceed under the Railway Act; the court retaining the bill until such proceedings were taken, giving either party any costs. Hill v. Buffalo and Lake Huron R. W. Co., 10 Gr. 506.

Timber Limit — Contemplated Reservation.]—A., the lessee of a timber limit, had an interview with B. as to the sale to him of part of it. A. offered to take $400, and letters passed which amounted to a contract at law to sell at that price. A.'s offer, however, had been made in contemplation of a reservation and condition spoken of at the interview, but not mentioned in the letters:—Held, that the purchaser was not entitled to a specific performance, without the reservation and condition. Needler v. Campbell. 17 Gr. 592.

Title—Approval of.]—It was agreed by and between a vendor and purchaser, that so soon as a title satisfactory to the solicitors of the vendee could be afforded him, the vendee should purchase the land for $4.000 cash:—Held, that, in the absence of mala fides, the approval of the title by the solicitors of the vendee was a condition precedent to the right of the vendor to call for a specific performance of the agreement. Boulton v. Bethune, 21 Gr. 110. See S. C., ib. 478; Dewitt v. Thomas, 7 C. P. 569.

Completion of—Offer—Acceptance.]
On the 26th January, 1882, McL. wrote to H. as follows: "A. Mcl. agrees to take $35,000 for property known as McM. block. Terms—one-third cash, balance in one year at eight per cent, per annum. Open until Saturday 28th, noon." On the same day H. accepted this offer in the following terms: "I beg to accept your offer made this morning. I will accept the property known as McM. block, being the property known as McM. block, being the property on M. street, for $35,000, payable one-third cash on completion of title, and balance in one year at eight per cent. You will please have papers and abstract submitted by your solicitor to N. F. H. Esq., 22 D. block, as soon as possible, that I may get conveyance and give mortgage: "—Held, that there was no binding unconditional acceptance of the offer of sale, and therefore no completed contract of sale between the parties. McIntyre v. Hood, 9 S. C. R. 356.

See Cameron v. Wellington, Grey, and Bruce R. W. Co., 28 Gr. 327.

 Damages where Specific Performance Refused.

Purchase at Auction—Absence of Memorandum.]—An intending purchaser attended an auction sale of lands and bid off the property, but no memorandum or agreement was signed evidencing the contract. The purchaser having filed a bill for specific performance:—Held, not a case in which the court would, on refusing specific performance, direct an inquiry as to damages under 28 Vict. c. 17, and that the plaintiff should pay the costs of the suit. O'Donnell v. Black, 19 Gr. 629.

Vendor and Purchaser—Rights under Agreement—Breach by Both Parties,]—Under s, 32 of the A. J. Act of 1873, the court of chancery has cognizance of all the rights of all the parties arising out of an agreement; and if either is entitled to damages, the court ought to ascertain them. In this view, in a suit for specific performance, to which the plaintiff was found not entitled, a reference was directed to inquire as to damages sustained by the purchaser by reason of breach of the contract, and also as to damages sustained by the vendor by reason of breach of covenants in the instrument constituting the agreement. Casey, V. Hanlon, 22 Gr. 445.

Measure of Domages.—On a bill filed to rescind a contract for the sale of land, the defendants asked by way of cross-relief to have the same specifically performed. On a rehearing the court refused specific performance or rescission, but, having regard to the finding of the Judge at the trial, that no actual fraud had been proved against the defendant, the purchaser, though it appeared that to a certain extent he had overreached the plaintiff, an old woman, when making the contract, they ordered a reference, following Casey v. Hanlon, 22 Gr. 225, to ascertain the amount.

The master found defendant entitled to $11.05, his costs of investigating the title, but refused to allow him $1.000, which was the difference between the contract price and the value of the land; and on appeal the report was confirmed. 4. Default, Delay, or Laches.

(a) In Carrying out Contract.

Consideration — Performance of Work—Request.]—On a sale of land it was agreed that the purchaser might pay the price by doing certain chopping on other land of the vendor's. No time was fixed for this work.
On a bill by the purchaser for specific performance:—Held, that he was not to be treated as in default, so as to lose his right to specific performance, without proof of having neglected to do the work after request.
Brand v. Martin, 16 Gr. 556.

Time not of Essence—Notice to End Contract.]—Semble, that when one party to a contract in which time is not of the essence) desires to put an end to the contract, in consequence of the laches of the other party thereto, the proper mode of doing so is to give notice that unless completed within a period to be fixed, the contract will be considered at an end. O'Kecfe v. Taylor, 2 Gr. 95.

Reasonable Time.]—The purchaser under contract for sale of land is not entitled to a decree for specific performance by the vendor unless he has been prompt in the performance of the obligations devolving upon him and always ready to carry out the contract on his part within a reasonable time, even though time was not of its essence; nor when he has declared his inability to perform his share of the contract, Wallace v. Hesslein, 29 S. C. R. 171.

Time of Essence—Endeavour to Perform Contract—Dies nons—Pender.]—In an action for specific performance, even when time is of the essence of the agreement, if the party in default has done what in him lay to perform the contract, the court may, in the exercise of its discretion, grant the relief elaimed. And where, by such agreement, the conveyance was to be tendered by the plaintiff to the defendant and the transaction closed on the 'first day of June,' which fell on Sunday, when no tender was made, and the conduct of the defendant on the following day was such as to exclude a tender on that day, in an action for specific performance the plaintiff was held entitled to judgment. Cudney v. Gives, 20 o. R. 500.

agreement was that defendant should advance money on the purchase of the land, and that the plaintiff should have the right to repurchase the same by a certain day, upon payment of the amount so advanced, and interest, together with what was paid by defendant for improvements and insurance, and it was expressly stipulated that time should be of the essence of the contract:—Held, that, although the court, as a general rule, will hold a party to perform such a contract within the time limited, yet it may and will admit him to shew a good and valid reason for non-performance within such time, and in that case may order specific performance. MoSweeney v. Køy, 15 Gr. 432.

Presumption from Circumstances.] —The defendant G. agreed to sell to the plain-tiffs certain timber limits for $25,000, stipulating that they should have a certain named time to inspect the property and arrange for payment of the price. Subsequently, on the 20th August, the plaintiffs wrote excusing themselves for not having carried out the purchase and asking for an extension of time for their accepting or refusing "your limits— one or two weeks if possible." In answer, G. suggested that it was not necessary to make any extension of time for the acceptance of the offer by the plaintiffs, and that they should write stating they were satisfied with the timber, the quality and the price, and that they only wished the extension of time to make their financial arrangements, adding, "and if you do this you can consider this letter au-thority for the additional time." The plainthority for the additional time." The plain-tiffs wrote accordingly, and the further time asked for expired on the 10th September, but they failed fully to complete the purchase at they failed tany to complete the purchase at the time named, and G. sold to the other de-fendant:—Held, that, looking at the nature of the property, the subject of the contract, time would, without any stipulation in respect thereof, he regarded as essential; and it was intended by the parties that it should be so. and understood by them that it was so; and the subsequent correspondence shewed it to have been expressly made so, and, therefore, that the plaintiffs were not entitled to a specific performance of the contract. Crossfield v. Gould, 9 A. R. 218.

Presumption from Circumstances—Waiver of Condition. 1—Held, by the Queen's bench division, that although, where the property in a contract for the sale or exchange of lands is of a speculative character, the presumption is that time is of the essence of the agreement, such presumption may, as when a time is expressly fixed, be rebutted by the parties treating the contract as still subsisting after the time fixed for its completion. The Held, by the supreme court of Canada, affirming in this respect the judgments below that time was originally of the essence of the contract, but there was a waiver by the defendant of a compliance with the provision as to time by entering into negotiations as to the title after its expiration. Robinson v. Harris, 21 O. R. 43, 19 A. R. 134, 21 S. C. R. 300.

(b) In Commencing Suit.

Purchaser and Persons Claiming under him—Possession—Payment—Sufficiency of Delay to Disentitle.]—The vendor at the time of entering into the contract received one-fifth of the purchase money, the balance being payable in four annual instalments, and the vendee took possession and continued to occupy the land, but made no further payment, nowithstanding frequent applications.

About three years after the contract the vendor resold and conveyed the land to another person, who had notice, and the purchaser brought ejectment against the first vendee, who filled a bill for specific performance of the contract against the vendor and such second purchaser:—Held, that the delay was not sufficient to disentitle the plaintiff to the relief sought. Semble, that the peculiar condition of real property in this Province, and the peculiar practice which has grown up in relation to sales, may require a modification of English cases, with regard to the doctrine of laches as affecting the right to specific performance. O'Keefe v. Taylor, 2 Gr. 95.

Where the purchaser is not let into possession, what delay on his part in taking steps to enforce his contract will disentitle him to specific performance, considered. Hook v. McQueeu, 2 Gr. 490, 4 Gr. 231.

In this country a much less delay will, in many cases, be sufficient to bar specific performance than would be sufficient in England, S. C., 4 Gr. 231.

A person in possession of lands contracted, in IS48, for the purchase thereof, and about a year afterwards, having paid nothing, absouded from the Province, leaving his family in possession. In June, 1850, the owner obtained possession by ejectment, and in January, 1851, sold the property to another purchaser, who remained in possession until September, 1853, and laid out large sums in improvements, when the original vendee assigned his agreement to the plaintiff, who thereupon filed a bill for specific performance of the agreement. The court dismissed the bill with costs. Van Wagner v. Terryberry, 5 Gr. 324.

The vendor let the purchasers into possession, but some years afterwards, on default in payment of the purchase money, the vendor obtained nossession by ejectment. Subsequently the purchase money was tendered and refused, and the purchasers took no steps for eighteen years to enforce their claim, during all which time the vendor remained in possession as owner; the property, during the interval, having increased very much in value. A bill filed by the purchasers, and subsequently revived by their representatives, was dismissed with costs. Crawford v. Birdsall, 8 Gr. 415.

In 1850 the owner of 100 acres of land, with the view, as was admitted, of retaining his son upon the property and settling him in life, agreed to convey to him in fee 50 acres, worth at least £150, upon payment of £50, in six years without interest, and executed a bond for that purpose. After this, the son went to work about the country, and resided some years in a distant part of the Province, sometimes returning when out of employment and residing with the other members of his father's family, and during such residence assisting in the usual work of the farm. Nothing was ever paid, although it was alleged that the son was entitled to a credit for services rendered. After about ten years the son filed a bill to enforce a specific performance of the contract evidenced by the bond, and obtained a decree. Upon appeal this decree was reversed, and the bill dismissed with costs, unless the plaintiff should within one month deliver up the bond to be cancelled; in that event the dismissal to be without costs. Evans v. Evans, 2 E. & A. 156.

The intestate contracted with defendant for the purchase of a village lot in Bothwell, and paid part of the purchase money. The vendor afterwards agreed to build on the premises, for which the purchaser was to pay by instalments, and the vendor was to hold possession and receive the rents meanwhile on account. The purchaser, having made default, died intestate, leaving no other means. The heirs having lain by for a number of years, until oil was discovered near Bothwell, and property had risen in value, their bill to enforce the purchase was dismissed with costs, on the ground of laches. Walker v. Brown, 14 Gr. 237.

In 1846 defendant contracted to sell a building lot in Toronto to the plaintiff's father (one of defendant's workmen) for $500, payable in eight annual instalments. chaser built two small houses on the lot, and died in 1856, intestate. The plaintiff, his only child, immediately afterwards enlisted and left Canada, leaving a power of attorney with one A. to manage his affairs; he was not quite of age at this time. In February, 1859, defendant brought ejectment, and A. in the following March filed a bill in plaintiff's name for specific performance of the contract. Defendant asserted that there was about $800 due thereon, and the claim appeared to be confirmed by a book produced by a bookkeeper of defendant, who was examined as a witness. The value of the property at the time was about $700. A., believing defendant's representations, agreed with him to dismiss the bill with costs, and gave up possession to defendant. Some years afterwards the plaintiff returned, and discovered that not one-half the amount so claimed by defendant was due at the time of dismissing the bill, and thereupon filed a bill for specific performance, and proved this state of the account from entries in the books of defendant and otherwise:— Held, in view of the misrepresentations of the defendant and the absence of the plaintiff, that the plaintiff's right to a decree was not barred by lapse of time. Larkin v. Good. 17 Gr. 585.

In a suit for specific performance of an agreement by the devisee of land to convey to P., it appeared that the agreement of sale to P. was executed in 1884, and the suit was not instituted until four years later. P. was in possession of the land during the interval:—Iteld, that, as the evidence clearly shewed that P. was only in possession as agent of the trustees under the will and caretaker of the land, and as by the terms of the agreement time was to be of the essence of the contract, the delay was a sufficient answer to the suit. Porter v. Hale, 23 S. C. R. 265.

Vendor's Heirs—Possession—Doubtful Contract.]—A contract in writing for the sale of land had not been acted on during the vendor's life. Possession was afterwards taken by the vendee, but no improvement made. In a suit for specific performance brought by the vendor's heirs against the vendee's heirs after the latter had come of age, the evidence given threw considerable doubt on the contract:—Held, that the doubt, coupled with the delay, was sufficient to prevent the contract being enforced. (c) In Prosecuting Suit.

Excuse—Poverty.]—Quere, whether delay in the prosecution of a suit for specific performance may be a bar to relief at the hearing. There having been delay in bringing the suit, and great delay in prosecuting it, at the hearing a reference was directed to the master to inquire as to the cause of the latter delay. The master reported that the cause was the plaintiff's poverty. On further directions the bill was dismissed. McMahon v. O'Neil, 16 Gr. 579.

(d) Other Laches.

Abandoning Possession - Subsequent Resumption—Estoppet—Ejectment—Equitable Defence.]—In ejectment defendant set up an equitable defence, that he had been induced to work and serve the plaintiff and manage his affairs for many years, by plaintiff's representations, promise, and agreement to give him the land and the immediate possession thereof, as a reward immediate possession thereon, as therefor; that defendant was put into posses-sion accordingly and worked the land and made improvements, &c.; that subsequently, in furtherance of such representations, &c., and in consideration of such work and services, plaintiff signed a written agreement to give defendant the land, thereby confirming him in possession; and defendant thereafter made improvements and was assessed and paid the taxes; that defendant had paid the full consideration and performed all conditions to entitle him to hold possession of the land and to all the plaintil's rights therein. At the trial the equitable defence was proved, the agreement mentioned having been signed in 1865; but it was urged that because defendant, being out of possession, had in 1874 procured being out of possession, had in 1874 procured one E., the plaintiff's tenant, to give him pos-session, informing him of his claim, and had paid the plaintiff 870 rent due by E., he was estopped from denying the plaintiff's title; and further, that defendant, having been out of possession for nine years, was estopped by his laches:—Held, that under the Administra-tion of Justice Act defendant was entitled to his licenes:—Heid, that under the Administra-tion of Justice Act defendant was entitled to hold possession, and to have the agreement specifically performed, though before that Act he must have filed his bill for specific performance, and for an injunction restraining the ejectment; that neither the manner in which he obtained possession, nor his laches, could defeat his right to specific performance of the agreement, which had been fully executed on his part. The verdict for defendant was therefore ordered to stand, and a decree made for a perpetual injunction against the ejectment, and for a conveyance of the land. Westgate v. Westgate, 28 C. P. 283.

Enforcing Claim at Law.]—Mere delay of a party to enforce his claim at law, furnishes no ground for the court of chancery interfering with his legal right, although it might be a good answer were he seeking specific performance of the contract. Allan v. Newman, 13 Gr. 364.

Objecting to Title.]—See Nason v. Armstrong, 22 O. R. 542, 21 A. R. 183, 25 S. C. R. 263.

Repudiating Agreement for Fraud— Delay as Ground for Enforcement.]—See Livingstone v. Aere, Wallace v. Aere, 15 Gr. 610, post 7.

5. Defects in Subject Matter of Contract.

Sale for Particular Purpose — Knowledge of Unifuses, I—Defendant agreed for the purchase of a factory near a small stream, intending to carry on there his occupation of scap and candle manufacturer. Afterwards defendant discovered that he would not have a right to throw the refuse of his factory into the stream, and without this privilege the property would be useless for his intended purpose, of which the vendors were aware when making the contract:—Held, that the vendees was bound to complete the contract, although the vendors had not pointed out this fact at the time of the sale. James v. Freeland, 5 Gr. 302.

Defendant agreed to purchase a piece of land, "with a water privilege attached," for the arowed purpose of erecting a mile on the land, and storing or booming the logs for his mill in the water adjoining:—Held, that this did not bind the vendor to retain the water in its then state for the purpose of securing to the defendant the benefit of such booming or storage; and, notwithstanding the loss of the water privilege by reason of one of the dams having fallen into decay, defendant was bound to perform the agreement. Hickson v. Clarke, 25 Gr. 173.

See Commercial Bank v. McConnell, 7 Gr. 323

6. Exchange of Lands.

Land out of Ontario—Jurisdiction.]—
The plantiff, a resident of Buffalo, United States, agreed in writing with the defendant to exchange certain land situate in Buffalo for land of the defendant situate in Ontario; and brought this action for specific performance of the contract: — Held, that the plaintiff having brought his action in this court, thereby submitting to its jurisdiction, the court would decree specific performance. Montgomery v. Ruppensburg, 31 O. R. 433.

Powers of Executor,]—An executor or administrator cannot, having regard to R. S. O. c. 108, s. 9, and 54 Vict. c. 18, s. 2 (O.), make the lands of the testator or intestate the subject of speculation or exchange by him in the same manner as if the lands were his own. The court refused to decree specific performance of a contract by an executor to exchange lands of his testatrix for other lands, as the purpose of the exchange could not have been the payment of debts or the distribution of the estate, and it was shewn that the beneficiaries objected to the exchange, and it did not appear that the official guardian had been consulted. Tenute v. Walsh, 24 O. R. 309.

See McRae v. Froom, 17 Gr. 357; Cudney v. Gives, 20 O. R. 500; Robinson v. Harris, 21 O. R. 43, 19 A. R. 134, 21 S. C. R. 390; St. Denis v. Higgins, 24 O. R. 230; Moorhouse v. Hewish. 22 A. R. 172; Gray v. Reesor, 15 Gr. 205, 16 Gr. 614.

7. Fraud or Misrepresentation.

(See ante 1.)

Absence of Consideration-Mental Incompetence—Purchasers for Value—Equities—Laches, |—The defendant, a man of weak intellect, was fraudulently induced to execute a quit-claim deed of certain land without consideration. The land was afterwards conveyed to the plaintiffs for value, against whom, more than fifteen years, defendant brought ejectment, and it was decided that the legal title had not passed by his deed. plaintiffs thereupon filed a bill to reform defendant's deed, or, treating it as a contract only, for a specific performance thereof :-Held, (1) that, though the plaintiffs had equities as purchasers for value, yet defendant had an equity to set aside his deed; and that his equity being the elder, and having the legal title, the court could not give the plaintiffs relief; and (2) that, though the laches and acquiescence of the defendant might be a reason for refusing him relief if a plaintiff, still they were not a ground for granting the plaintiffs the relief sought; and the court dismissed the bill with costs. Livingstone v. Livingstone v. Acre, Wallace v. Acre, 15 Gr. 610.

Advertisement — Misrepresentations,]—
Property held by a building society in security was described in the advertisement for sale as rented for £72, and with forty acres of it a dense forest of pine. In reality it was rented for £50 only, and the pinery had no existence.
The purchaser filed a bill for specific performance of the contract with an abatement of the price, and declined to accept performance without compensation. The court dismissed the bill, but without costs. Oxborne v, Farmcrs' and Mechanics' Building Society, 5 Gr.
326.

By the advertisement of an intended sale of land in lots, it was stated: "The soil is well adapted for gardening purposes, and a considerable portion of the property is covered with a fine growth of pine and onk, which will yield a large quantity of cordwood, and the remainder is covered with an ornamental second growth of evergeen and various other kinds of trees." A purchaser at the sale, which took place upon the property, set up as a defence to a suit for specific performance, that this description was untrue:—Held, that these representations, having been in respect of matters which were objects of sense, and as to which an intending purchaser ought in prudence to have examined for himself, formed no ground for relief from the contract. Crooks v. Davis, 6 Gr. 317.

Contemplated Resale to Third Person—Fede Representation as to.1—The plaintiff negotiated with the defendants for the purchase of the lands in question, and at different times obtained from them writings giving him the option to purchase for $20,000. Defendants set up that these negotiations were had with the plaintiff, as their agent, with a view of effecting through him a sale to a society, at the same or a higher price to the defendants. After these options had been given to the plaintiff, he on the forenoon of the 17th February, 1882, agreed to sell to the society for $25,000, and afterwards on the same day he went to the defendants and offered to purchase for $19,500 in lieu of the $20,000 previously named. He was asked by the defendants whether the sale to the society was off, to which he replied that it was, and in the same conversation informed the defendants that he could not sell the property for $20,000, as a reason why he should get it for $19,500, for if sold to another, he, the plaintiff, would be entitled to a commission of $500; and the defendants thereupon agreed to sell to plaintiff for $19,500. Subsequently on the same day plaintiff entered into a contract in writing to sell to the society for $25,.000:—Held, that, without reference to the question of agency to sell, the evidence shewed that a sale to the society was in contemplation of both parties and was the foundation of the transaction, and that the misrepresentation of the plaintiff in regard to the sale to the society, was such as disentitled aim to a decree for specific performance. Walmsley v. Griffith, 10 A. R. 327.

Exorbitant Price—Intoxication of Purchaser—Failure to Sheve Fraud—Costs.]—The vendee set up that he had been led into drink by the fraudulent contrivances of the vender, and while intoxicated had been induced to sign the agreement, in which the price stipulated was most exorbitant. It was clearly shewn that the purchaser had executed the contract while intoxicated, and that the price was exorbitant, but the court exonerated the vendor from any fraud, and therefore refused defendant his costs on dismissing the bill for specific performance. Schofield v. Tummonds, 6 Gr. 508.

"Puffing" at Auction Sale - Failure to Prove Injury.]—A sale by auction being about to take place, an intending purchaser was told by a person who had previously purchased a portion of the same property, that he intended buying more; that he expected the property would fetch about £70 or £80 an acre, and that he was prepared to go £100 per acre for what he intended to buy. It was shewn that, by an arrangement with the owner of the estate, this person was to have the lots desired by him at the same price as he had paid for his first purchase, no matter at what price they might be knocked down to him; and they were accordingly bid off by him at a rate much higher than that formerly paid by him :-Held, that this was not puffing, although it might mislead the intending purchaser, who swore that he relied on the opinion of this person, but, as he did not swear that he had been influenced by his example or the information thus given by him, the court decreed specific performance of the contract for the purchase of certain portions of the estate bid off by him at the auction. Crooks v. Davis, 6 Gr. 317.

Representations as to Value — Exchange—Cuveat Emptor.]—A. and B. had each a wild lot, and negotiated for an exchange. A. asserted that his lot was worth $500; B., that his was worth $500. They ultimately agreed to exchange. B. to pay

8. Inability of Purchaser to Perform Contract.

Speculative Purchase.]—The court will not encourage speculative purchases. Where, therefore, it was shewn that a purchaser could not pay for the property, and, after several demands upon him to complete the purchase, the vendor sold to a third party with the knowledge of the original purchaser, who appeared to acquiesce in it; but afterwards, when, by reason of the construction of a railway, the land had increased very much in value, filed a bill for specific performance, the court dismissed the bill with costs. Langstaffe v. Mansfield, 4 Gr. 607.

Third Party—Assignment of Security by 1—By the contract the property was agreed to be paid for, in part, by an assignment of a mortgage, to be obtained from a third party. Afterwards the purchaser alleged the refusal of the mortgages to assign. The court refused to decree specific performance at the instance of the vendor, but directed an inquiry, whether or not the mortgage was still willing and able to assign the mortgage. Arnold v. Hull, 7 Gr. 47.

See Wallace v. Hesslein, 29 S. C. R. 171, ante 4 (a).

9. Inadequate or Exorbitant Consideration.

Ignorance of Rights—Small Price.]—A contract to be specifically performed must be equal, fair and certain in the man and founded on good consideration. Whee, therefore, a woman, under the impression that she held a life interest in two acres, when she was entitled to the fee and also an annual allowance of £10, partly in cash and partly in preduce, charged upon other lands, agreed to sell her interest in such two acres to the owner of the other lands, in consideration of his paying her the £10 all in cash, the court refused specific performance. Earley v. Mc-till, 11 Gr., 75.

Inequality of Parties—Absence of Advice—Improvidence—Pleading,]—The plaintiff, an old woman of eighty-six, sued for rescission of a contract for the sale of land, and the defendant by way of cross-relief asked for specific performance. The evidence shewed that at the time of contract there was inequality between the parties in that the plaintiff was not so well able to protect her own interests, as was the defendant to protect his; that she had capriciously-and improvidently rejected the advice of her solicitor, who tried to persuade her to accept an offer more advantageous; that she was illiterate, and her capacity (weak at best) was affected by her extreme age, by her distress from want of money, and by drink; that the price offered by defendant was clearly inadequate; that, though it did not appear that the defendant was guilty of fraud, yet that probably the paintiff did not clearly comprehend the terms of the bargain;—Held, that under these circumstances, though no sufficient reason existed for interfering with the decision of the Judge below in dismissing the plaintiff's bill, specific performance of the agreement should not have been decreed. Held, also, that, inasmuch as all the evidence that could throw light upon the case had, admittedly, been given, the fact that the issue of improvidence was not raised on the pleadings was immaterial. In such a case it is a mere matter of form to adapt the pleach, 6 O, R. 699. Gough v. Bench, 6 O, R. 690, C. 600, C. 600,

Interest on Purchase Money—Compounding.]—Where, by a contract for sale of land, it was stipulated that, in the event of interest on the unpaid purchase money being unpaid at the end of ench year, the same should be added to the principal, the court refused to decree specific performance by the vendor on payment of the principal and simple interest only, or except upon payment of the interest according to the agreement; and semble, that the vendee would in like manner have been bound to pay this amount, if the bill had been filed by the vendor, seeking to enforce the sale, Henderson v. Dickson, 9 Gr. 379.

Marriage—Bond for Deed by Wife's Father, —The owner of land promised the plaintiff's father that if the balantiff would marry the owner's daughter the owner would give the plaintiff fifty acres of land; and after the marriage he did execute a bond to him for a conveyance thereof, recting the payment of $300 as the consideration therefor. The bond also contained a rectal that the obligor desired that the land should go to the male issue of his daughter and her husband. The obliges having died, a suit to compel the specific performance of the agreement was filed by his infant heiress, to which the obligor set up the defence of want of consideration; as also a denial of having executed the bond. The court refused to allow a supplemental answer to be filed setting up a defence as to the estate agreed to be conveyed; and, being of opinion that there was an adequate consideration, made a decree for specific performance of the agreement with costs. Body v. Shouldice, 22 Gr. 1.

Purchase for Special Use—Delay in Completion—Change of Circumstances—Lurge Price.]—A person agreed to purchase for £200 a small piece of land, worth intrinsically not more than £7 10s., to use it as a millpond, and in order to protect himself against suits at the instance of the owner; but, owing to a dispute as to the metes and bounds of the land, no deed was ever executed until after the purchaser's mill was destroyed by fire, when the vendor tendered the deed, but the vendee, not then requiring the use of the land, declined to complete the agreement. The court refused to enforce the contract, and dismissed the bill of the vendor, filed for that purpose, with costs. Blackwood v. Paul, 4 Gr. 550; S. C., 3 Gr. 334.

See Schofield v. Tummonds, 6 Gr. 568, ante 7.

10. Incomplete Contract.

Resale by Vendor before Completion—Notice to Second Purchaser—Rights of Original Purchaser.]—A lot of wild lands were sold on credit to plaintiff in April, 1845, and by a subsequent arrangement a deed and mortgage were to be executed in April, 1846, and by a subsequent arrangement a deed and mortgage were to be executed in April, 1846, the vendor not producing his title deeds as he had promised. No further communication passed between them, and in August, 1846, the vendor resold to B., who was aware of the plaintiff's purchase, gave B. a deed and took a mortgage. In the same month, or the next, B. went into possession and made considerable improvements, and, as he asserted, with the knowledge of the plaintiff. No communication passed between the purchasers until February, 1847, when the plaintiff called on B. and told him that he meant to claim the property under his contract; in August following he filed a bill for specific performance. The cause was brought on for hearing in 1850, and specific performance was decreed, with costs. McDonald v. Elder, 1 Gr. 513.

A purchaser, when informed that the subject of his purchase has been resold, may, although his contract is not ripe for execution, institute a suit to recover possession; still it would seem that all that is necessary for him to do is to notify the second incumbrancer that he intends to insist upon his rights when the proper time arrives. Where a purchaser, in consequence of the resale, filed a bill for specific performance before his contract was ripe for execution, the court on that ground dismissed the bill without costs, prefacing the order of such dismissal with a declaration of the rights of the parties. Towers v. Christic, 6 Gr. 159.

See post 18 (b).

11. Infants-Rights of.

Benefit of Infants—Inquiry—Consent— Laches.]—In a suit for specific performance, where there were infant defendants, the court held that the plaintiff's laches precluded him, but directed an inquiry as to whether it would be beneficial to the infants to affirm or annul the contract. If found beneficial to affirm it, the plaintiff might excuse his laches; but, semble, all the parties beneficially interested must consent to the inquiry. Chevallier v. Strong, 8 Gr. 320.

Inquiry—Salc.]—The holder of a mortgage on real estate and of a judgment against the mortgagor, agreed, after the death of the mortgagor, with his widow and two of the heirs, for the release, on certain terms, of the equity of redemption, and for the conveyance to him of another portion of the real estate in discharge of the mortgage and judgment debt. On a bill to enforce this agreement, it appeared that other children of the mortgagor, who were infants, were interested in the estate. The court refused the relief prayed, but directed a reference to the master to inquire if it would be more for the advantage of the infants to adopt the agreement, or that a sale of the estate should be made under the decree of the court. McDougall v, Barron, 9 Gr. 450.

Contract Made on Behalf of Infants —Enforcement—Prayer for General Rediet,]
—The widow and infant heirs of C. were entitled, subject to a mortgage to E. By agreement between the widow, E., and W., the premises were conveyed to W., upon an oral understanding that he should retain a part of the premises, equal in value to the sum due on E.'s mortgage, which he was to assume, and that he should convey the remainder of the land to the widow, for the benefit of herself and children. The conveyance to W. having been made, the widow and infant heirs filed their bill, seeking a specific performance of the agreement to convey the portion agreed on to them:—Held, following Graham v. Chalmers, 9 Gr. 239, that the specific relief sought could not be decreed, but that under the general prayer, and the case stated, the plaintiffs were entitled to some relief; and a demurrer was therefore overruled. Clark v. Eby, 11 Gr. 98. See S. C., 13 Gr. 371.

Costs—Infant Defendants—Heirs of Vendor.]—A decree for specific performance against the infant heirs of vendors should be without costs. The same rule as to the costs of a solicitor appointed by the court guardian ad litem to infant defendants in suits for specific performance seems applicable as in mortgage cases; but where the purchase money has not been paid, the court will direct the payment of the guardian's costs from it. Commander v. Gifrie, 6 Gr. 473.

— Infant Plaintifs—Heirs of Vendor.]
—The vendor had died before execution of the conveyances, and his infant heirs sued for specific performance of the contract, which defendants (the vendees) expressed their willingness to carry out but for the obstacle created by the death of the vender leaving his heirs-at-law infants. The court decreed specific performance, but without costs to either party: the costs of the infants to be defrayed out of the balance of nurchase money payable by the defendants. Weihe v. Ferrie, 10 Gr. 98.

Fraud of Infant — Sale—Acquiscence after Majority—Estophel.] — D's father died in 1847. His will, purporting to devise all his real estate to his wife in fee, was not duly executed, and D. became entitled as heir-at-law. Three months before D. came of age he agreed with P. for the sale to him of the real estate for value. A conveyance to P. was prepared by D., and executed by his mother, the devisee under the father's will. D. being a witness to it. P. afterwards sold and conveyed his interest, and D. brought ejectment against the purchaser. D. had at various times acquisesed in the sale after he became of age:

—Held, that D/s conduct with reference to the sale to P, was fraudulent, and was to be considered as an assertion that his mother was entitled as devisee in fee, although he was then not of age; and that such conduct, and his subsequent acquiescence after his attaining majority, estopped him from denying the validity of the sale; and he was enjoined from proceeding with the ejectment, and ordered to convey to the plaintiff, the vendee of P. Leary v. Rose, 10 Gr. 346.

of the contract; and the vendor, at the instance of the administratrix, conveyed the property, which had greatly increased in value, to a third person, and it afterwards passed into the hands of persons without notice:— Held, that the heir could sue the vendor in equity for compensation. of fourteen years after the vendor's conveyance before the bill for compensation was filed, the heir having been a minor all this time:—Held, that the vendor having caused this delay by his own arrangement with the infant's relations, which deprived the infant of their protection, this lapse of time was no bar to the suit. With a view to fixing the amount of compensation, inquiry was directed as to the condition of the estate left by the deceased purchaser, and whether the plaintiff or the estate received the benefit of any part of the purchase money on the subsequent sale the property. Forsyth v. Johnson, 14 Gr.

Sale of Infant's Estate—Approval of Court—12 Vict., c, 62.]—Where a contract for the sale of an infant's estate had been approved of by the court, it was held unnecessary for the purpose of obtaining a decree for specific performance, either to allege or prove that the sale was a proper one under 12 Vict. c, 62. McDonald v. Garrett, 8 Gr. 290.

Suit by Representatives of Vendor—Infant Parties—Amendment.]—Where, in a suit by personal representatives of a vendor for the specific performance of the contract of sale, an infant heir was joined as a coplaintiff, the court refused to make a decree, although the bill had been taken pro confesso against the defendant, the purchaser, and ordered the case to stand over, with a view to the plaintiffs amending their bill, by making the infant a party defendant, in order that the contract might be established against him. Hamilton v. Walker, 12 Gr. 172.

Sec. also, Dalton v. McBride, 7 Gr. 288; Van Wormer v. Harding, 14 Gr. 167, post 15 (a): Airey v. Mitchell, 21 Gr. 239, 510, post 15 (a).

12. Interest.

Purchase Money—Arrears of Interest— Period—Possession—Charge, 1—n a suit for specific performance, even where a purchaser has taken possession of the premises, as a general rule he is only liable for arrears of interest for a period of six years prior to the filing of the bill. Where the purchaser dies, the rights of no incumbrancer intervening, the vendor is entitled to a charge on the land in the hands of the heirs for a period beyond the six years, in order to prevent circuity of action. Airey v. Mitchell, 21 Gr. 510, 239.

Conveyance—Delay—Possession.]—
Under a contract of purchase of real estate providing that "if from any cause whatever" the purchase money was not paid at a specified time, interest should be paid from the date of the contract, the vendor is relieved from payment of such interest while the delay in payment is caused by the wilful default of the vendor in performing the obligations imposed upon him. A contract containing such provision also provided for the payment of the purchase money on delivery of the conveyance to be prepared by the vendor. A conveyance was tendered which the vendee would not accept, whereupon the vendor brought suit for rescission of the contract, which the court refused on the ground that the con-veyance tendered was defective. He then refused to accept the purchase money unless interest from the date of the contract was paid. In an action by the vendee for specific per-formance:—Held, affirming the decisions in 19 A. R. 291, and 21 O. R. 562, that the vendee was not obliged to pay interest from the time the suit for rescission was begun, as until it was decided the vendor was asserting the failure of the contract, and insisting that he had ceased to be bound by it, and after the decision in that suit he was claiming interest to which he was not entitled, and in both cases the vendee was relieved from obligation to tender the purchase money. By the terms of the contract the vendor was to remain in possession until the purchase money was paid and receive the rents and profits :- Held, that up to the time the vendor became in default, the vendee, by his agreement, was precluded from claiming rents and profits, and was not entitled to them after that time, as he had been relieved from payment of interest, and the purchase money had not been paid. Hayes v. Elmstey, 23 S. C. R. 623.

Conveyance — Default—Delay.]—A person in possession of land under a contract for purchase by which he agreed to pay the purchase money as soon as the conveyance was ready for delivery, and interest thereon from the date of the contract, is not relieved from liability for such interest unless the vendor is in wilful default in carrying out his part of the agreement, and the purchase money is deposited by the vendee in a bank or other place of deposit in an account separate from his general current account. vendor is not in wilful default where delay is caused by the necessity to perfect the title owing to some of the vendors being infants, nor by tendering a conveyance to which the vendee took exception but which was altered to his satisfaction while still in the hands of the vendors' agent as an escrow and before it was delivered. A provision that the purchase money is to be paid as soon as the conveyance is ready for delivery does not alter the rule that the conveyance should be prepared by the purchaser. Judgments in 19 A. R. 591 and 21 O. R. 642 reversed. Stevenson v. Davis, 23 S. C. R. 629.

See Gould v. Hamilton, 5 Gr. 192, post 13; Gray v. Reesor, 15 Gr. 205, 16 Gr. 614, ante 1; Henderson v. Dickson, 9 Gr. 379, ante 9.

13. Mistake or Misunderstanding.

Bond for Conveyance—Omissions and Defects—Possession.]—A person contracted to sell land, whereupon the purchaser was let into possession, and the vendor executed a bond intended to be conditioned for the conveyance of the land as contracted for; but, by mistake, the number of the lot was omitted, and the bond was otherwise defective. On a bill being afterwards filed by the vendor against the heir-at-law of the purchaser, the court considered that the plaintiff was entitled to rely upon the parol agreement partly performed, and that the bond which had been executed might be used by him to aid in proving the terms of the contract in pursuance of which the purchaser had taken possession. O'Neal v. McMahon, 2 Gr. 145.

Contract to Accept Mortgage—Interest—Omission—Parol Evidence.]—A vendor executed an agreement to convey certain premises and receive back a mortgage for part of the price payable by instalments, but omitted to say that the mortgage should be made payable with interest. In a suit brought to enforce specific performance of the agreement, and to compel the vendor to accept a mortgage without interest, parol evidence was admitted to shew that the real understanding of the parties was, that interest should be made payable by the mortgage. Gould v. Hamilton, 5 Gr. 192.

Contract to Exchange—Misdescription of Lot.1—The owner of the west half of a lot, supposing himself to own the east half, not the west half, contracted to exchange the east half for other lands, and conveyed it accordingly. He filed a bill to compel the other party to accept the west half, and perform the contract by conveying the lands agreed to be given for the east half, alleding mistake in the insertion of east instead of west. It appeared that the two halves were of about equal value, and that defendant had no personal knowledge of either; but, as the mistake was that of the plaintif alone:—Held, that the west could not be substituted for the east laif; and relief was refused. Cottingham v. Boulton, 6 Gr. 186.

Mutual Mistake—Reservation of Minerals.]—The defendants executed an agreement to sell certain lands to plaintiff, who entered into possession, made improvements, and paid the purchase money, whereupon a deed was delivered to him, which he refused to accept, as it reserved the minerals on the land, while the agreement was for an unconditional sale. In an action for specific performance of the agreement the defendants contended that in their conveyances the word "land" was always used as meaning land minus the minerals:—Held, reversing the judgment in 6 B. C. Rep. 228, that the contract for sale being expressed in unambiguous language, and H. having had no notice of any reservations, it could not be rescinded on the ground of mistake; and he was entitled to a decree for specific performance. (Leave to appeal to privy council granted.) Hobbs v. Esquimalt and Nanaimo R. W. Co., 29 S. C. R. 450.

Provisions of Contract — Misunderstanding—Bona Fides.]—The court, when it is satisfied that there is a bonâ fide misunderstanding on the part of one of the parties to a contract as to the provisions of an agreement, will not decree specific performance of it. Mc-Donell v. McDonell. 21 Gr. 342.

Terms of Contract—Difference of Understanding—Cash or Credit, 1—R, wrote to O.: "I have considered the matter of our conversation, and offer you $800 for the property." O, replied: "I have your favour offering $800 for the property (describing it). I have concluded to accept your offer." The evidence shewed that at the prior conversation referred to in R.'s letter, R, was seeking to buy the property in question on terms of five or seven years' credit.—Held, that, as the acceptance by O, was as of a cash offer, while R, did not intend to make any such offer, the contract could not be specifically enforced, the parties differing in their understanding of it. Omnium Securities Co. v. Richardson, 7 O. R. 182, 185.

14. Pleading.

Answer—Statute of Frauds.]—See post 18 (b).

In a suit to compel the acceptance of a mortgage for part of the purchase money, without interest, defendant in his answer thereto swore: "I have always said that I was ready and willing and have offered to complete the sale of the said property to the plaintiff, provided interest on the unpaid purchase money was included in the mortgage." And also: "I submit and insist that unless the plaintiff will consent to pay interest on the unpaid purchase money aforesaid, he is not entitled to any rellef in this court." The court treated these statements as submitting to a decree for specific performance, with interest reserved by the mortgage, and made a decree accordingly. Gould v. Hamilton, 5 Gr. 132.

Bill—Omission of Offer—Objection at Hearing.]—In a suit for specific performance an objection that the bill does not contain an offer by the plaintiff to fulfil the agreement on his part, is too late when taken for the would have been given to such objection if it had been taken by demurrer. Wardell v. Trenouth, 24 Gr. 465.

— Prayer—Foreclosure—Amendment.]
—A vendor sued upon the covenants of a bond and obtained judgment. He then filed a bill setting out the agreement, and praying foreclosure:—Held, that the bill was improperly framed, but that he might amend on payment of costs. Quarre, was his action at law a waiver of his remedy by specific performance? McAcoy v. Simpson, 6 L. J. 94.

Statement of Claim—Sufficiency of Contract — Demurrer—Parties.]—Where a demurrer is raised to a statement of claim for specific performance on the ground of no sufficient agreement, it is enough if, in any aspect of the case, the plaintiff may be entitled to some relief. In this case it was held, on the statement of claim, that a concluded contract was shewn, and that defendant was liable. Misjoinder of parties is, since the Judicaure Act, no longer a ground for demurrer. Young v. Robertson, 2 O. R. 4334.

See Clark v. Eby, 11 Gr. 98, ante 11; Gillatley v. White, 18 Gr. 1; Town of Peter borough v. Midland R. W. Co., 12 P. R. 127; Stuart v. McVicar, 18 P. R. 250; Simmons v. Campbell, 17 Gr. 612.

Defendants' Costs inter se -Vendor and Second Purchaser—Dismissal of Bill.]—
Whatever may be the rule in England, the court of chancery in this Province has jurisdiction to make a defendant pay costs in a suit for specific performance, though the bill be dismissed, if the circumstances be such as to warrant doing this. Hence, in such a suit, brought by the purchasers of certain lands, against the vendors and a subsequent purchaser, where the Judge of first instance dismissed the action without costs, but gave the subsequent purchaser his costs against his co-defendants, although no issue was raised between the defendants :-Held, that he had jurisdiction to make the order, in his discretion, and having exercised such discretion, the court would not interfere. McMahon v. Barnes, Order Book No. 9, fol, 730 (not reported), followed. Church v. Fuller, 3 O. R. 417.

Defendants Severing-Vendor and Secand Purchaser.]-In a suit for specific performance by a vendee against his vendor and a person to whom he had sold after agreeing a person to whom he had sold after agreeing to sell to the plaintiff, the defendants may sever in their defence, and employ separate solicitors, and each is entitled, on dismissal of the bill with costs, to tax a se Barrett v. Campbell, 7 P. R. 150. separate bill.

Delay in Asserting Rights-Defence-Rescission. |-Where defendants set up a de-fence to a bill, which if tenable would have formed sufficient ground for their having taken steps to set aside the transaction which it was now sought to enforce, but they had not done so, although twelve years had elapsed since the act was done which they questioned, and which it was shewn they had all the while been aware of, the court ordered them to pay the costs of the suit. Miller v. Ostrander, 12 Gr. 349.

Heirs of Vendor-Refusal to Convey-Personal Representatives.] — A purchaser of real estate paid a portion of the purchase money during the lifetime of the vendor, and the balance to his personal representatives. The heirs-at-law were all of age, but they refused to convey to the purchaser, who filed a bill against the real and personal representatives for specific performance. The conduct of the personal representatives was shewn to have been correct, and the court, in making the decree asked, ordered the plaintiff to pay them their costs; but gave the plaintiff his costs of suit against the heirs-at-law; not against the estate of the vendor. Addaman v. Stout, 13 Gr. 692.

Infant Defendants-Guardian-Rehearing. |—On a rehearing the decree was affirmed, but the court, being of opinion that the guardian of the infant defendants, who reheard, was justified in raising the question for the determination of the full court, directed his costs to be paid out of the fund after satisfaction of the plaintiff's claim. Aircy v. Mitchell, 21 Gr. 510, 239.

Infant Heirs of Vendor-Personal Re-"csentative.]-The vendor of real estate having died before the conveyance, leaving infant heirs, the purchaser proceeded at law to recover back the purchase money paid, partly to the vendor and partly to his administra-tors; whereupon a bill was filed by the representatives of the vendor, to restrain the action and for specific performance. The court made the decree, and ordered defendant to pay costs up to the hearing. VanWormer v. Harding, Objection to Jurisdiction-Raising at Hearing.]—Where a bill prayed specific per-formance of an agreement, and for an injunction against waste, and an account of waste committed, and the court thought the plain-tiff's remedy, except as to the injunction, was at law, the decree was made without costs; the objection to the jurisdiction appearing by the bill, and not being raised until the hearing. Raven v. Lovelass, 11 Gr. 435.

Objection to Title -Manner Raising.]—Although the plaintiff, the vendee, had not, by his conduct and delay, waived his right to object to the title, yet, as he had not raised the objection in the proper manner, he was entitled to no costs of his action for specific performance or rescission. Nason v. Armstrong, 22 O. R. 542, 21 A. R. 183, 25 S. C. R. 263.

- Subsequent Acceptance.] — Before the time for the payment of their purchase money the vendees became dissatisfied with the title as it anneared on registry, and, without any communication with the vendor, filed a bill to rescind the contract, or to have it specifically performed, if the vendor could make a good title. On the hearing the plain-tiff (the vendee) expressed his willingness to accept the title, and the court, with the consent of defendant, offered the plaintiff a decree for specific performance on payment of costs, or that the bill should be dismissed with costs. Currah v. Rapelje, 2 Gr. 542.

Out of Estate - Vendor's Title under Will.]—The rule which authorizes the payment out of the estate of the costs of all parties interested in obtaining the construction of a will, does not apply to a case where a purchaser refuses to complete his purchase land from a person claiming title under such will. In such a case the purchaser, if the question is decided against him, will, as in ordinary cases, have to pay the costs of the litigation necessary for obtaining the decision of the court upon the question of title. Smith v. Coleman, 22 Gr. 507.

Prior Proceedings at Law - Bar to Relief.]—Where a vendor brought ejectment and turned the heirs of the purchaser out of possession, he was held to have disabled himself from coming to the court for specific performance, and could only do so in order to bind their interest in such a manner as to render the property saleable. Under such circumstances, the plaintiff having placed himself in a false position by reason of the proceedings at law, the court deprived him of his costs up to decree, but gave him his costs subsequent thereto. Hawn v. Cashion, 20 Gr.

Scale of Costs-Value of Land-Improvements.]-A bill was filed for the specific performance of a contract for sale of land, for a sum less than $150. Before suit the plaintiff the vendee, had entered upon the land, and made improvements upon it, which increased its value to more than $200:—Held, that the "subject matter involved" in the suit was more than $200, and that the plaintiff was therefore entitled to costs according to the higher scale. Kennedy v. Brown, 6 P. R. 318.

Value of Land-Injunction-Railway.]-In a suit to enforce the specific performance of an agreement by a railway company for the purchase by them of the right of way over the plaintiff's lands, a decree was made for that purpose, and a reference directed to the master to ascertain the amount due by the defendants in respect of purchase money and interest; and also for damages for not constructing fences and crossings, as agreed upon, and to tax the plaintiff his costs. The master found due to the plaintiff for pur-chase money, &c., $187.24 only. It appeared that the defendants had constructed the fences and crossings after the institution of the suit. and that an interlocutory injunction had been obtained during its progress. Under these cirobtained during its progress. Under these cir-cumstances, the master taxed the plaintiff's costs on the higher scale:—Held, on appeal, that he was right. Brough v. Brantford, Nor-folk, and Port Burwell R. W. Co., 25 Gr. 43.

Successful Defendant - Depriving of Costs. | - Costs withheld from the defendant because he had misled the plaintiff as to his power to make the exchange, and declined to perform his contract on grounds some of which were untenable, and also alleged fraud which he failed to prove. Tenute v. Walsh, 24 O. R.

Title—Demand of Abstract—Other Issue-Result.]—The general rule in England is, that where an abstract of title has been demanded, and the vendor only makes out a good title after bill filed by him, he will be ordered to pay the costs of the suit; but where the question really in issue between the vendor and purchaser was one other than of title and was decided against the purchaser, the court gave the vendor the costs of the suit, although a good title had not been shewn until after bill filed—no abstract having been demanded previously. Haggart v. Quackenbush, 14 Gr. 701.

— Master's Office—Misrepresentation

Other Issues—Result.] — In a suit for specific performance, the defendant set up that the reason he had refused to complete the agreement was, that he had been induced to agreement was, that he had been induced to enter into it by certain misrepresentations of the plaintiff, which he entirely failed to prove. Although the master reported that a good title was first shewn in his office, the decree on further directions ordered the costs to be paid by the defendant, notwith-standing that the bill contained certain statements which, it was alleged, were not true, and had not been proved, the court being of opinion that such statements had not any opinion that such statements had not any material bearing upon the case, and that a suit would have been necessary without reference to the question of title. Platt v. Blizzard, 29 Gr. 46.

Master's Office-Possessory Title-Knowledge of Purchaser.]-In an action for was, to the knowledge of the purchaser, a possessory one of long standing, in conformity with a family arrangement, ample proof there-of having been offered before action, the venor may need of neared before action, the ven-dor was held entitled to his costs of action and of proving his title in the master's office. Games v. Bonnor, 33 W. R. 64, followed. Brady v. Walls, 17 Gr. 699, and Re Boustead and Warwick, 12 O. R. 488, specially referred to. Dame v. Slater, 21 O. R. 375.

Objection to—False Answer,] — Where a purchaser objected to the title offered, and refused to pay the balance of the purchase money, but remained in possession, and the vendor brought ejectment, falsely denying the payment of part of the purchase money, the purchaser was held entitled to the costs of a suit to restrain the ejectment, and compel or a suit to restrain the ejectment, and comper specific performance, notwithstanding that the vendor made a good title when required by the court. Healey v. Ward, 8 Gr. 337.

Objection to - Subsequent Admission.]—Where a purchaser filed a bill alleging that his vendor could not make a good title, but at the hearing waived a reference as to title, admitting it to be good, the court ordered the plaintiff to pay costs. Tisdale v. Shortis, 10 Gr. 271.

(b) In Master's Office.

Objections to Title. |- When on a sale of lands the contract provided that the purchaser should be allowed ten days to make requisitions on title, and time was made of the essence of the contract, and the purchaser made certain objections within the ten days, and the answers not being satisfactory refused to complete, whereupon the vendor sued for specific performance and obtained the usual judgment:—Held, that the purchaser could not raise in the master's office fresh objections not raised within the ten days mentioned in the contract. Imperial Bank of Canada v. Metcalfe, 11 O. R. 467.

By an agreement for the sale of certain land, the vendor was to give a good marketable title of which the purchaser was to satisfy himself at his own expense, and was not to call for any abstract of title, deeds, or evid-ences of title other than those in the vendor's possession. Subsequently on a reference in a suit by the vendor for specific performance, the defendant filed three objections to the title having reference to a small portion of the land, which were answered by the plaintiff, and the reference was proceeding, when the defendant applied for and obtained from the master leave to file other objections:—Held, that the master had no jurisdiction to grant that the master had no jurisdiction to grant such leave, but on a subsequent application to the court the leave required was given on terms. Clarke v. Langley, 10 P. R. 268.

Settlement of Mortgage-Terms-Refusal to Execute.1—In a suit by a vendor for specific performance, where the vendor is ordered to execute a deed, and the vendee to execute a mortgage:—Semble, that it would be improper to insert a power of sale in such mortgage, and quære, if the deed merely contains qualified covenants, whether the mortgage should contain any others. Where a mortgage has been settled by a master, and the party ordered to execute it objects to its form, it is not a proper mode of raising such objections to refuse to execute such mortgage, and to execute a mortgage differing from the one settled. McKay v. Reed, 1 Ch. Ch. 208.

(c) Parties.

Assignee of Lease—Parties to Contract.]
—The general rule is, that only the parties to the contract should be parties to a suit for specific performance. The vendor, after contracting with the vendee, had leased with the right to purchase. It did not appear whether the option had been exercised, or the time for exercising it had arrived. The lease had been assigned, and defendant, the vendee, objected that the assignee should be a party to this suit: but the court overruled the objection. Crooks v. Glenn, 8 Gr. 239.

Assignee of Purchaser—Costs.]—A purchaser agreed, before conveyance, to assign his interest. In a suit by the vendor for specific performance, the assignee was made a defendant, and a decree was pronounced against him, with the costs occasioned by making him a party, in the event of his co-defendant (the purchaser) failing to pay the general costs of the suit, which were awarded against him. Denison, v. Fuller, 10 Gr. 498.

Execution Debtor — Suit against Sheriff.] — Semble, that the court will entertain a bill to compel a sheriff to convey property sold under an execution; but the execution debtor must be made a party. Witham v. Smith, 5 Gr. 203.

Heir-at-Law of Purchaser—dbsentec.]
—The eldest son and heir-at-law of a person who had, in his lifetime, agreed to purchase land from the Canada Company, left this country without attempting to complete the purchase. The other children of the purchase paid the balance of the purchase money, and sold the land in portions to three several purchasers. In a suit brought by these several purchasers against their vendors and the company, it appeared that the heir-at-law had not been heard of for upwards of twenty-five years. The court ordered the conveyance of the several portions to the purchasers, without requiring any administration of the estate of the heir-at-law, the company not objecting.
Burns v. Canada Co., 7 Gr. 5ST.

Heir-at-Law of Vendor-Infant.]—See Hamilton v. Walker, 12 Gr. 172, ante 11.

Husband and Wife—Dourress.]—When his wife joins with the owner of real estate in the contract of sale, and the purchaser institutes proceedings to compel specific performance thereof, the wife must be joined as a party defendant; and the fact that the bill alleges that her, only interest is that of an inchoate dowress forms no ground for dispensing with her being so joined. Loughead v. Stubbs, 27 Gr. 387.

Mext Friend.]—A husband and wife may jointly maintain one bill for specific performance of a covenant made by them for the sale of the land of the wife; but the wife must sue by her next friend. Jessop v. McLean, 15 Gr. 489.

Next Friend—Amendment.]—Where the vendors, the plaintiffs in an action for the specific performance of a contract for sale of land, were married women, and their husbands were joined as co-plaintiffs, and the defendant denurred ore tenus, on ground of misjoinder of parties, leave was given to amend by making the husbands defendants, or by adding next friends for the married women as coplaintiffs. Young v. Robertson, 2 O. R. 434.

Personal Representative of Purchaser.]—In proceeding against the heir-atlaw of a purchaser for specific performance or rescission of the contract, the personal representative of the decased is a necessary party, even though an executor de son tort is a defendant, and though letters of administration had not been issued before the filling of the bill. O'Neat v. McMahon. 2 Gr. 145.

Quere, where it is clear that a purchaser has paid in full, whether, in a suit for specific performance against the heirsart-law of the vendor, the personal representatives must be parties to the bill. Semble, sufficient to add them as parties in the master's office. Addman v. Stout, 13 Gr. 692.

Third Parties—Title.]—In an action for specific personance by a vendor against a purchaser the question raised by the defence, whether a first person has a title to the whole or part of the person has a title to the whole or part of the person has a title to the whole or part of the person has a title to the whole or part of the person has a person of the person o

Trustees — Conveyance to Cestui que Trust.].—A vendor devised his estate to trustees, and, on a division among the cestuis que trust, the trustees conveyed to one of them the sold property. These facts appeared on a bill by the purchaser against the grantee for specific performance. Defendants set up by answer that the executors and trustees were necessary parties. The objection was overruled. Butler v. Church, 18 Gr. 190.

(d) Payment of Purchase Money.

Decree—Time for Payment—Costs—Setoff.1—In decrees for specific performance of a contract for purchase, a time for payment should be limited, or in default the bill dismissed. And the decree should direct a set-off between the unpaid money and the costs.
McDonald v. Elder, 3 Gr. 244.

Time for Payment—Rescission.]—
There is no fixed rule in England as to the time to be given by a decree for paying purchase money before the vendor is entitled to a rescission of the contract for the default.
Tylee v. Landes, 15 Gr. 99.

Time for Payment—Rescission—Extension.]—When the decree in a vendor's suit for specific performance directed payment in a month, the court, on a subsequent application to rescind the contract, gave defendant four weeks more to pay after service of the order: and ordered on default a rescission. Carroll v. McDonald, 15 Gr. 329.

some of the instalments of purchase money being not yet due: Held, that under the circumstances, though there could not be a decree for specific performance, the purchaser was entitled to a declaration of right to specific performance, and an inquiry as to title; the overdue instalments of purchase money being paid into court. Wardelt y. Trenouth, 24 Gr. 465.

— Undertaking — Payment of Instalments into Bank—Payment out.]—W. contracted for the purchase of property, the price being payable by instalments; and the vendor was property to the price of a mortgage on the property not due. A decree was made, at the suit of the vendor, for specific performance, on the undertaking of the plaintiff, recited in the decree, to procure a release of the mortgage; and the overdue instalments were ordered to be paid into the bank subject to the further order of the court. On a question subsequently arising as to the effect of this undertaking was not a condition precedent to the paying in of the money, but was to its being paid out. Robson v. Wride, 13 Gr. 419.

Payment into Court—Reference—Title.]—In a suit against the purchasers for specific performance, the court refused to order the purchase money into court pending a reference as to title. Darby v, Greenlees, 11 Gr. 351.

Production of Promissory Notes—Condition Precedent.]—Where promissory notes had been given in payment of the purchase money of land, and several years afterwards a bill was filed by a vendee of the original vendor against the heirs-at-law of the original preclaser:—Held, that the notes must be produced or satisfactorily accounted for before the purchase money would be ordered to be paid, even although a good title were shewn. Crooks v. Glem. S Gr. 239.

Proof of Payment—Reference—Leave to Apply,]—Where the bill was filled against the heir-at-law for specific performance of his ancestor's contract, stating that all the purchase money had been paid, which was not proved at the hearing, the court referred it to the master to receive proof of payment, reserving leave to the personal representative to apply in case any part remained unpaid at the decease of the ancestor. Farquharson v. Williamson, 1 Gr. 93.

Rescission of Contract — Application as the Application as unit by a vendor for specific performance a decree for a sale has been made, with a proviso that if the sale prove abortive, the contract is to be rescinded, and the sale proves abortive, and an application is made to rescind the contract, it must be shewn that the purchase money has not been paid. Grange v. Conroy, 1 Gr. 198.

Terms of Payment — Amendment of Bill. — In a suit for specific performance, the evidence having clearly established the bargain as alleged by the plaintiff, though his bill omitted to state the terms and mode of payment as agreed upon, the court offered him the alternative of taking a decree for specific performance, with payment of purchase money in hand; or to amend his bill, setting up the exact terms of the bargain. Gillattey v. White, 18 Gr. 1.

(e) Other Cases.

Interlocutory Judgment — Subsequent Delivery of Statement of Claim—Assessment of Damages.]—See Stuart v. McVicar, 18 P. R. 250, post VIII.

Order for Possession.] — Order 32 of 1855, authorizing an order for delivery of possession, does not apply where the bill in a suit for specific performance is dismissed at the hearing. Macety v. Montgomery, 1 Ch. Ch. 21.

General Order 464 applies only to mortgage cases, and not to suits for specific performance. An order for delivery of possession was refused. Chisholm v. Allen, 2 Ch. Ch. 411.

Service of Bill by Publication.] — Section 8 of G. O. IX., of June, 1853, does not apply to any cases other than those for foreclosure or specific performance of an agreement. Bank of Montreal v. Hatch, 1 Ch. Ch. 57.

16. Rescission of Contract.

Conditional Rescission—Re-establishment—Action at Law—Injunction.]—In 1850 8. agreed in writing with M. to purchase 100 acres. S. having paid part of the purchase money, offered the remainder, and required his conveyance. M. then stated that he had no title, and offered to pay back the money, and allow S. to remain in quiet possession of the land. This was done, and the contract was given by 8. to M., to be rescinded. M, then conveyed to his son, who, with knowledge of these facts, brought ejectment against S. At the trial the agreement was held to be an admission by S. of the title of the plaintiff at law, and the plaintiff had a verdict. On a bill for specific performance and to stay the action at law:—Held, that the rescission of the contract was only conditional, M. then undertaking not to disturb the plaintiff in possession; that the use made of the contract at the trial at law re-established it as against M, and his co-defendant; and that the plaintiff was entitled to specific performance, and to a perpetual nijunction against the action at law. Stuart v. McNab. 10 Gr. 234

Proposal for Abandonment—Terms—Costs.]—After contracting for the purchase of land, the vendee discovered a deficiency in the quantity sold, and insisted upon an abatement of price. After negotiations in respect of title as well as the deliciency, the purchaser proposed to waive the contract upon the vendor paying the costs incurred by the purchase, and interest on the purchase morey from the time of the contract, which was acceded to by the vendor. After some weeks, a bill of charges was furnished to the vendor's solicitor, but he tendered the amount less three items, to which he objected, amounting in all to about £4 or £5. A few days afterwards he offered to pay the full amount of the costs, but this was also refused, and a bill was filed for specific performance:—Held, that there was no abandonment of the contract, and that the plaintiff was entitled to have it specially performed. Treating Contract as at an End—Conduct of Lessee,]—A, having agreed to accept a lease of land, insisted pertinaciously upon a stipulation being in the lease which it was shewn he had no right to, and which he altimately waived; but, having previously declared he would never accept a lease which did not agree with his interpretation of the contract, the owner of the land treated the greenent as at an end, and proceeded to erect a valuable building on it. A, thereupon filed a bill for specific performance of the agreement according to the interpretation of the lessor, and the court decreed it, but without costs, Gray v. Springer, 5 Gr. 242. But, on appeal, the decree was reversed, and the bill dismissed, with costs. S. C., 7 Gr. 276.

See Grange v. Conroy, 1 Ch. Ch. 198; Fisken v. Wride, 7 Gr. 598; Tylee v. Landes, 15 Gr. 99; Hobbs v. Esquimalt and Nanaimo R. W. Co., 29 S. C. R. 450.

17. Sales by Agents.

Husband and Wife—Pleading—Amendment.]—In a suit by the purchaser for specific performance of an agreement for the sale of a married woman's land, the plaintiff was allowed to amend his bill after replication, by stating that her husband had signed the agreement as agent for his wife, without swearing that the amendment was true, although the wife had denied its truth under oath. Jackson v. Robertson, 7 P. R. 148.

Instructions to Agent — Payment in Cash—Sale on Credit. |—A, having authorized his agent to sell his estate for $500 cash, the agent accepted bills from the vendee, drawn on the vendee's agent in Europe, which bills the agent applied to his own use:—Held, that A, was not bound by such acts of his agent; that this was not a payment to A.; and that until he received the purchase money in cash, he was not bound to convey. Brown v. Smart, 1 E. & A, 148.

Reservation of Timber-Neglect to Make—Remedy.]—The owners of several lots of land employed an agent to sell them, and delivered to him blank agreements executed by them, leaving it necessary for the agent to insert only the name of the purchaser, the property sold, and the purchase money; at the same time orally instructing the agent to reserve all pine timber fit for saw logs. The agent sold one of the lots, and delivered to the purchaser one of the agreements, without any reservation of timber; and the vendors re-fused to adopt the sale without such reservation, and commenced felling timber upon the Upon a bill filed by the purchaser for a specific performance of the contract before the time limited for its completion, the court declared that the writing contained the true agreement between the parties, leaving the vendors to their remedy against their agent for breach of their instructions; and ordered defendants to pay the value of the timber removed by them, with the costs of the suit. Jury v. Burrows, 9 Gr. 367. Affirmed on rehearing, 16th February, 1864.

Revocation of Agent's Authority — Death of Principal—Sales since Death.]—A testator devised his real estate in trust for sale. Shortly after his death a friendly suit was instituted in chancery in England for administration of the estate. In this suit the trustee was a defendant, and an order was made for the appointment of a receiver to collect the assets in Canada, and sell the lands there. After the death of such receiver, the agents of the trustee in Canada, who had managed the estate for the deceased receiver, continued to collect the assets and malke sales, with the knowledge and concurrence of the trustee and the parties in England:—Held, that such sales were not void, and would be enforced or not, as, in view of the circumstances, seemed to be proper. Stickney v. Tylec, 13 Gr. 193.

 Stipulation as to Deed.]—The owner of land, in January, 1864, wrote to an agent requesting him to find "a purchaser" for it at $600 cash, or $800 on a specified credit. December, 1865, the property having risen greatly in value, and the owner having re-ceived an offer for the timber, he wrote to the same agent informing him thereof, and asking his opinion as to what "he (the owner) should take for the lot altogether." In February, 1866, the agent, without further communication with the owner, contracted in writing to sell the property for $600, "to be paid on the execution of a good and full warranty deed, clear of all incumbrances." The court, considering that the letter of December, 1865, was a revocation of any authority to sell contained in that of January, 1864, refused to enforce the contract. Quare, whether the letter of January, 1864, gave power to sell; but if it did, the agent had no authority for agreeing to give a deed such as that stipulated for. Anderson v. McBean, 12 Gr. 463.

See Ryan v. Sing, 7 O. R. 266; Walmsley v. Griffith, 10 A. R. 327; McCarthy v. Cooper, 12 A. R. 284; Harris v. Robinson, 21 S. C. R. 390.

18. Statute of Frauds.

(a) Part Performance.

Allegation in Bill—Answer.]—When the plaintiff, by his bill, sought to compel specific performance of a contract, which plainly appeared from the bill to have been created by parol, and relied on acts of part performance to take the case out of the statute:—Held, that the defendant need only claim the benefit of the statute, without alleging that there had not been a note in writing. Townsley v. Charles, 2 Gr. 313.

Evidence of Part Performance—Intention.]—Where a vendor files his bill for specific performance against a purchaser on a contract partly performed, the evidence of the contract must be clear and unmistakable, and the acts done must be such as cannot be referred to any other than the contract as alleged, nor done with any other intention than in part performance of such contract. Section v. Skell, 6 L. J. 94.

Exchange of Easements—User.]—A bill was filed by the owner of a mill, alleging an oral agreement with the proprietor of land adjoining, for the right to pen back a stream running through his land, which was used for driving the plaintiff's mill, in consideration of which he was to open up a road across his farm, for the use and convenience of such land owner; but no writing was ever drawn up avidencing the agreement. The owner of the land instituted proceedings against the mill owner for damages by penning back the water, which overflowed a considerable portion of his land. The evidence being positive as to the agreement to permit the penning back of the water, and the road across the plaintiff's farm having been used by the proprietor of the land, and his vendee, the court decreed a specific performance of the parol agreement, but, under the circumstances, without costs. Xicol v. Tackaberry, 10 Gr. 199

Execution of Deeds.] — A parol agreement in reference to land, partly performed by execution of deeds, was enforced. Shennan v. Parsill, 18 Gr. S.

Payment of Purchase Money.]—Payment of the whole amount of purchase money, in pursuance of a parol contract for sale, will not operate as part performance to take the case out of the Statute of Frauds any more than payment of a portion of the price. Johnson v. Canada Co., 5 Gr. 558.

Joint Possession—Parent and Child.1 -A father and son lived together on the same farm, of which they obtained a lease in their joint names, the son having for several years, owing to the infirm state of his father's health. the entire management of the farm; and any moneys he received from the sale of the pro-duce thereof, he was in the habit of handing he was in the habit of handing over to his mother for safe keeping, thus forming, as it were, a common fund. Subsequently he effected a purchase of the farm in his own name, when he paid $1,000 on account of the purchase money, derived partly from private funds and partly from the fund held by the mother, and gave a mortgage with the usual covenants for the residue of purchase usual covenants for the residue of purchase money, on which he subsequently made a payment of $1,520; $1,000 of which he bor-rowed from his wife, the balance being made up partly of funds of his own, partly of funds obtained from the common purse. The father claimed that the purchase had been made for his benefit and the benefit of the son and his brother, and filed a bill to enforce such claim; the son answered, denying having made the purchase in the manner alleged, and claiming to be the sole owner of the property, subject to the support of his father and mother out of the same:—Held, that, in the absence of any writing signed by the son, nothing was shewn to take the case out of the Statute of Frauds; and even if the defence of the statute were not set up, sufficient was not shewn to entitle the father to a decree on the ground of contract, or on the ground of a resulting trust in his favour, by reason of his being paid a portion of the purchase money. Wildo v. Wildo, 20 Gr. 521.

Possession.]—See Crain v. Rapple, 22 O. R. 519, 20 A. R. 291.

—A, by power of atorney, authorized his wife to sell and convey certain lands upon such terms as she should deem suitable, and immediately afterwards left the Province, and died abroad. The wife employed B, who sold to the plaintiff for a certain price, payable by instalments, with interest, upon payment whereof he was to receive a conveyance, and B, gave his own bond for a deed containing the terms of sale. The wife subsequently ratified the bargain, and B., with her consent, let the purchaser into possession:—Held, not a contract in writing, within the statute, but that sufficient appeared to authorize the decree of specific performance of a parol contract upon the terms of the hond, as being partly performed and within the terms of the authority. Farydarason v. Williamson, J. Gr. 33.

- Agreement between Relatives-Services-Corroboration after Death.]-The provision of the statute that requires corroborative evidence to be adduced, where one of the parties to an alleged contract is dead, is not that the evidence of the party setting up the claim must be corroborated in every particular; it is sufficient if independent support is given to the party's statements in so many instances that it raises in the mind of the court the conviction that such statements may be depended on even in respect of those matters in which there is no corroboration, C., the owner of real estate, promised his brother. A., that if he would abandon his intention of leaving this Province and remain and support their mother and sister, he (C.) would convey him a portion of the land on which A. was then residing and assisting in their sup port. In consequence of such request and promise, A. did remain and assumed the whole charge of the support of his mother and sister: -Held, that this was a sufficient part performance to take the case out of the Statute of Frauds. McDonald v. McKinnon, 26 Gr.

Character of Possession.] — Continued possession by a tenant, coupled with acts inconsistent with tenancy, is sufficient part performance to let in parol evidence of a contract of sale. Butler v. Church, 16 Gr. 205.

— Character of Possession—Contradictory Evidence—Costs.]—On an appeal from a decree for specific performance of a parol contract, it appeared that defendant denied any contract for sale, and alleged that the plaintiff was in possession as tenant merely; that the contract sworn to by the plaintiff switnesses was not the contract alleged by the bill, and the evidence of there having been any contract was contradictory; and the Judge who pronounced the decree had intimated considerable doubt as to the evidence. The decree was reversed, and the bill ordered to be dismissed, but without costs. Grant v. Brown, 13 Gr. 256, 12 Gr. 52.

Defect in Written Contract.]—A person contracted to sell a piece of land; the purchaser was let into possession; and the vendor executed a bond intended to be conditioned for the conveyance of the land; but, by mistake, the number of the lot was omitted, and the bond was otherwise defective. On a bill filed by the vendor against the heirat-law of the purchaser, the court considered that the plaintiff was entitled to rely upon the parol agreement partly performed, and that the bond might be used by him to aid in proving the terms of the contract. O'Neal v. McMahon, 2 Gr. 145.

— Guarantee—Lease—Delay.]—An undertaking as surety must name the person to whom it is given. Where a guarantee did not sufficiently comply with the statute, but the transaction related to an interest in lands

-An unrson to did not but the lands for one year, and the principal had taken and retained possession under the contract:—Held, that the contract was binding on both principal and surety, on the ground of part performance. In such a case, some of the sureties, some weeks after possession was taken, refused to sign a formal lease. No proceedings were taken to enforce their undertaking until the vear had expired, and the principal had given up possession, a defaulter in respect of his rent:—Held, that the delay was no bar to the suit. County of Huron v. Kerr, 15 Gr. 265.

Improvements.]—Where a person already in possession of property, contracted with the agent of the owner for purchase, and it was the intention of both parties that the purchaser should go on making improvements, and he did so, with the knowledge of the agent, without objection on his part, the improvements were held such an acting on the contract as would take the case out of the statute. Jennings v. Robertson, 3 Gr. 513.

— Improvements—Unexcented Lease.]
—A contract was entered into for a lease, and the intended lessee on the faith thereof entered into possession, paid rent, and made improvements. Both parties died without executing any writing, and before any dispute as to the bargain arose. On a bill by the representatives of the intended lessee for specific performance, the parol evidence was not alone sufficient to establish clearly the terms of the transaction; but there was found among the papers of the intended lessor ta county court Judge! an unexecuted lease in his own hand-writing, which the court was satisfied contained the terms of the lease bargained for. A decree for specific performance was affirmed on appeal. McFarlane v. Dickson, 13 Gr. 203.

Parent and Child-Promise-Devise.]-The owner of real estate, who was old and enfeebled, had, to induce his son to relinquish his own farm and reside with and take care of the father during his life. promised the son to give him the farm upon which he (the father) was residing, and the son removed with his family to reside with the father. After remaining in the house for a few days, the son's wife and family, during his temporary absence, removed from the house of the father in consequence of disagreements with him, and before the son returned the father died. It was alleged that the father had made a will devising the property, but no trace of any will could be discovered, nor was there any satisfactory account given of it. A witness of the alleged will gave evidence of its execution by testator, but it was not shewn that there had been a second witness to it, nor were its provisions shewn:—Held, that there was not such an act of part performance as would take the case out of the statute. Black v. Black, 2 E. & A. 419, 9 Gr. 403, rices.]—On a motion for an injunction to stay ejectment brought by the devisees of plaintiff's father, the plaintiff's case was, that his father had orally agreed to give him the land for work which, after coming of age, he had done for his father; that two years afterwards the plaintiff, on his marriage, went into possession with his father's permission, but subsequently to his father Vol. 111, D=210-61 having refused to give him a deed, or to part with the control of the property; and that the plaintiff remained in possession, to his own use, for eight years, when his father died, having devised the property to the defendants:— Held, that the plaintiff could not enforce the alleged agreement; and an injunction was refused. McKay v. McKay, 15 Gr, 371.

A father and son entered into mutual bonds, the father agreeing that just before his death he would convey his farm to the son in fee; and the son agreeing that he would, during his father's life, work the farm in a good and farmer-like manner; and would consult his father in all things rensonable. Quarrels took place; the son treated his father hadly, though he did nothing which at law would be a breach of the condition of his bond; and ultimately the father left the farm, the son retaining possession until ejected at the father's suit;—Held, in a suit by the son against his father, that the contract should not be enforced against the father. McDonald v. Rose, 17 Gr. 657.

The father of the plaintiff died, leaving widow and nine children, the plaintiff, the eldest son, being then sixteen years old and he continued to reside with and work for his mother on a farm which she owned, for about six years, when, becoming dissatisfied with his position, he informed his mother thereof, and that he had determined to leave the farm and work for himself; whereupon his mother urged him to remain, work the farm, and assist her in bringing up the family, and she would give him the south half of the farm, and the other half to a younger brother, on condition of the plaintiff supporting her during her life. The plaintiff, in consequence, remained with the family, and erected a brick dwelling on the south half of the farm, of which house he agreed to give and did give his mother a certain part for the use of herself and a granddaughter, whose mother had died some years previously. The brothers and sisters of the plaintiff were all aware that the plaintiff claimed under this alleged agreement or promise, and the south half of the lot was always designated as his. The plaintiff continued to fulfil the terms stipulated for until the death of his mother, about seven years afterwards; but she died without having executed a deed to the plaintiff. Eighteen years afterwards, a brother of the plaintiff, having bought up the shares of four of the co-heirs. instituted proceedings in ejectment against the instituted proceedings in ejectment against the plaintiff, claiming to be absolutely entitled to five undivided ninths of the whole property. Thereupon the plaintiff filed a bill seeking to restrain such action, and to enforce a specific preformance of the allowed effects as proceeding to the control of t to restrain such action, and to enforce a spec-fic performance of the alleged agreement with the mother:—Held, that what had occurred could not be treated as an agreement to convey, but was at most to be looked upon only as a promise or expectation held out by the mother to the son to induce him to remain with her, and, as such, was not capable of being specifically enforced in equity. Orr v. Orr, 21 Gr. 397.

The plaintiff alleged that, having remained at home working for his father until he was of the age of twenty-five or twenty-six years, he then told him he must have wages, whereupon the father agreed that he would purchase a certain farm, and that, if plaintiff would remain at home and work until the land was paid for, he would convey the same to the plaintiff; that the plaintiff accordingly remained with and worked for his father until the farm was fully paid for, and the father then put the plaintiff in possession. In answer to a bill for specific performance, the father positively denied the agreement alleged, although he admitted that he had bought the land intending to devise it to the plaintiff, and that he had executed a will so disposing of it, and alleged that he intended not to alter the disposition thereby made thereof. The court, under these circumstances, refused the relief prayed, and dismissed the bill with costs. The last case remarked upon and followed. Jibb v. Jibb, 24 Gr. 487.

The defendant in 1871 wrote to his son, who had left home to work for himself, that if he would return he would give him fifty acres of his farm and a share of the cattle and sheep when the plaintiff got married, but if he stayed away he would sacrifice his own and his father's interests. Upon receipt of the letter the plaintiff returned and remained on the farm working it with his father, except at certain times when he went to work for wages himself. It was proved that the father had pointed out the fifty acres which he intended to give his son, and the son entered and erected a house thereon with his father's approval, and occupied it with his family, he having married in 1879 :- Held, that the plaintiff was entitled to specific performance of this agreement. Garson v. Garson, 3 O. R. 439.

Services — Ruying in Title — Share of Land.]—Defendants, who had some interest in gold lands, having discovered the owner of an outstanding title, employed the plaintiff to buy up the same; agreeing to give the plaintiff to one fourth of the land for his trouble, on his paying one-fourth of the consideration; and to reconvey to the owner of such title another one-fourth part. The title having been bought up, the defendants did reconvey the one-fourth to the owner, but refused to carry out the agreement with the plaintiff:—Held, that the agreement wis such as this court would specifically enforce, there having been part performance. Bogart v, Patterson, 14 Gr. 162.

Staying Former Action-Procuring Releases—Compensation.]—A. brought an action against B. for the rents and profits of certain lands which had belonged to their father who had died intestate, which lands B. had taken and held possession of for several years. On the action being entered for trial, an agreement of settlement was arrived at. by which the action was to be stayed upon B.'s granting and releasing to A. his interest in the lands, and on B. undertaking to obtain certain releases, &c. B.'s counsel appeared in court when the case was called for trial, and stated that it was settled, and an entry was made in the court minute book that the case was settled out of court. Subsequently B. required A. to procure certain releases, and, although these had not formed part of the settlement, A, agreed to do so, and at great trouble and As agreed to so, and at great rotative and expense procured the execution of the same ready to be delivered to B. Certain of the releases to be procured by B. were to be executed by married women and infants, which he was unable to procure. In an action to compel B. to carry out the settlement, B. set up as a defence the Statute of Frauds; and his inability to obtain the releases :-Held, that, the staying of the action was a sufficient part performance to take the case out of the Statute of Frauds. An option was given to A. to take a judgment for specific performance, with a reference as to compensation, if B. was unable to procure the releases; or a judgment for an account of the rents and profits, the subject of the former action. Coates v. Coates, 14 O. R. 195.

(b) Pleading the Statute.

Necessity for: —Quere, whether where a defendant denies an alleged agreement of which a plaintiff seeks specific performance, defendant must claim the benefit of the statute in order to exclude parol evidence of the contract. Butler v. Church, 18 Gr. 190, 16 Gr. 205.

A party is entitled to set up the Statute of Frauds as a defence to a suit to enforce a parol agreement respecting an interest in land, although the statute has not been specially pleaded. Wilde v. Wilde, 20 Gr. 521.

See Townsley v. Charles, 2 Gr. 313, ante (a); Cleaver v. North of Scotland Canadian Mortgage Co., 27 Gr. 508, post (c).

(c) Sufficiency of Writing to Satisfy.

Deed-Execution by Vendor-Refusal to Deliver.]—In pursuance of an oral agreement for the sale of lands, the purchase money being payable by instalments, to be secured by mortgage on these and other lands owned by the purchaser, a deed and mortgage were drawn up, which were signed and sealed by the vendor and mortgagor respectively-neither strument referring to the other, and the deed expressing that the purchase money had been paid. The vendor and mortgagor took away the respective instruments signed by them, for the purpose, as alleged, of procuring the ex-ecution thereof by their respective wives. The vendor subsequently refused to perfect transaction, and on a bill filed by the purchaser for specific performance:—Held, that the conveyance so executed by the vendor was a sufficient contract of sale within the dor was a summer that the presumption on the face of such instrument was that the purchase money had been paid, which being admitted by the plaintiff to be incorrect, the purchaser was entitled to a decree for specific performance, paying the price in hand. Gillatley v. White, 18 Gr. 1.

Letters—Incomplete Contract.]—Upon a bill filed for specific performance:—Held, that the letters and correspondence amounted together to a complete contract for the sale by defendant to plaintiff of the lands in question; and held, upon a certain letter written by defendant to plaintiff's agent, that defendant was not bound to pay off the mortgage referred to out of the purchase money; that he was bound to transfer it to the A. property and any other property he had, if the mortgages would consent to the exchange, and if they refused he was bound to indemnify the plaintiff against the mortgage. Incomplete Contract—Evidence— Correspondence on Title—Conveyance.]—A., whose wife owned a certain freehold property wrote to B., the owner of a certain leasehold property, with reference to the said properties. as follows: "If you will assume my mortgage, as follows: "If you will assume my mortgage, and pay me in cash, $3,700, I will assume your mortgage of $5,000 on the leasehold:" and B. replied: "Your offer of this date, for and B. replied: "Your older of this date, for the exchange of my property on King street for your property on St. George street, I will necept on your terms: "-Held, affirming the judgment in 2 O. R. 609, not a sufficient judgment in 2 O. R. 609, not a sufficient memorandum of the contract to satisfy the Statute of Frauds. Held, also, in an action by B. for specific performance of the above contract, that correspondence between the soli-citors of the parties of date subsequent to the date of the above letters, as also the requisitions respecting titles which passed between the solicitors, were inadmissible in evidence. Held, further, that the fact that A.'s wife had signed a conveyance of the land in question to B., which conveyance had never been delivered, and did not, by recital or otherwise, set forth the contract relied on, could not assist B. in the action for specific performance. McClung v. McCracken, 3 O. R. 596.

Offer to Purchase—Vendor not Named—Acceptance.]—Where an offer, signed by the defendant, to exchange a stock of goods for land did not in any way designate the person to whom it was supposed to be made or for whom it was intended, and such person could not be ascertained without extrinsic parol evidence adding to the memorandum:—Held, not to be an agreement in writing within the statute so as to entitle the plaintiff to specific performance. Held, also, that an acceptance of the offer beneath the defendant's signature, signed by the plaintiff's assignor, did not cure the defect. White v. Tomalin, 19 O. R. 513. See Moltnosh v. Moynihan, 18 A. R. 237.

Reference to Non-existent Survey—Sketch—Parol Evidence to Explain.]—An agreement for sale of lands referred to them as certain lots in "Stretton's Survey." No survey had in fact then been made, but a rough sketch of the proposed survey was in existence:—Held, that such sketch could not be considered as the survey referred to in the agreement; and, as parol evidence was necessary to shew the particulars as to size and position, without which such sketch was unintelligible, the court refused to enforce the agreement, but offered to make a decree, without costs, for performance of the agreement admitted by the answer or dismiss the bill without costs, the defendant having improperly denied the agreement alleged by the plaintiff, which was clearly established by the evidence, though incapable of being enforced owing to the defence of the Statute of Frauds. Stretton. V. Stretton, 24 Gr. 20.

Terms-Mortgage - Incomplete Written Agreement, 1—L. signed a document by which he agreed to sell certain property to W. for $42,500, and W. signed an agreement to pur-chase the same. The document signed by W. stated that the property was to be purchased subject to the incumbrances thereon. this exception, the papers were, in substance, this exception, the papers were, in substance, the same, and each contained at the end this clause "terms and deeds, &c., to be arranged by the Ist May next." On the day that these papers were signed, L., on request of W.'s papers were signed, L., on request of w.s. solicitor to have the terms of sale put in writing, added to the one signed by him the following: "Terms, $500 cash this day, $500 on delivery of the deed of the Parker property, $800 with interest every three months until the $6,500 are paid, when the deed of the entire property will be executed." The property mentioned in these documents was, with other property of L., mortgaged for $36,000, W. paid two sums of $500, and demanded a deed of the Parker property, which was re-fused. In an action against L. for specific performance of the above agreement, the defendant set up an oral agreement that, before a deed was given, the other property of L. was to be released from the mortgage, and also pleaded the Statute of Frauds:—Held, that there was no completed agreement in writing to satisfy the Statute of Frauds. Williston v. Lawson, 19 S. C. R. 673.

Unilateral Agreement - Admissions in Answer—Statute not Pleaded.]—Although the 4th section of the Statute of Frauds requires any agreement for the purchase or sale of land to be evidenced by a note or memorandum thereof to be signed by the party sought to be charged, yet where lands were sold by a trading corporation, under a power of sale contained in a mortgage, and the purchaser at such sale signed an agreement to purchase, and afterwards filed a bill seeking specific performance with compensation for the loss of crops which were advertised with the land, but actually belonged to third parties, and the defendants (the corporation) answered the bill admitting the fact of their being mortgagees, and proceeded with sundry state-ments such as, "when the plaintiff bid for ments such as, when the plaintiff bid for and was declared the purchaser of the lands . . the sum bid by the plaintiff was a low price . . that the plaintiff was not in fact the real purchaser of the lands at the said sale . . that the company was not bound to put the plaintiff in possession, but never did any act to prevent her taking possession, and that possession was taken by the plaintiff," and the answer claimed no benefit from the statute, and did not deny having made the contract; neither did it raise any objection to the want of the corporate seal:—Held, that this sufficiently admitted the agreement to sell, and, no protection of the statute having been claimed, that the plaintiff was entitled to a decree, with competsation for the loss of the crops, and with costs. Cleaver v. North of Scotland Canadian Mortgage Co. 27 Gr. 508.

Variation of Written Contract — Waiver of Right to Withdraw — Unsigned Memorandum]-A. made a contract with B. for the purchase of land, and both parties signed the contract. Some delay occurred in delivering an abstract, and A.'s solicitor wrote to B.'s solicitor, declining to complete the contract unless the abstract was delivered by a certain day. Subsequently, negotiations were entered into by the parties for a variation of the terms of payment, and two propositions, in writing, but unsigned, were made by A. for B.'s acceptance. B. accepted one of them, and so informed A, or his solicitor; but after a little time, A., on the advice of his solicitor, declined to carry out the contract as varied, relying upon the former letters. Upon a bill filed by B.:—Held, that the defendant could not rely upon the letters fixing a time for the delivery of the abstract, as by his subsequent dealing with the plaintiff he waived his right to withdraw from the contract. (2) That parol evidence could be admitted to connect the unsigned memorandum with the signed contract. (3) That there was sufficient evidence to shew that the proposition of the defendant had been accepted by the plaintiff. Martin v. Reid, 8 L. J. 186.

See Carroll v. Williams, 1 O. R. 150; Barton v. McMillan, 20 S. C. R. 404.

(d) Other Cases.

Absence of Writing—Sheriff's Salc.]—
Where a sheriff had sold property under an execution at common law, but, before any deed was executed by him, a settlement was effected by the debtor with the execution creditor, who thereupon desired the sheriff to crefain from completing the sale, and the sheriff accordingly refused to convey the property to the purchaser at sheriff's sale, who thereupon filed a bill against the sheriff to comple him specifically to perform the alleged contract; but it appeared that no memorandum evidencing the sale had been made or signed by the sheriff;—Held, that the contract must be in writing under the statute. Witham v. Smith, 5 Gr. 203.

Conveyance on Faith of Promise.]— Lands were conveyed to W. upon the express understanding and promise that he would reconvey a certain portion thereof:—Held, that W. was bound to reconvey. Clarke v. Eby, 13 Gr. 371.

The plaintiff, having occasion to raise $3,000 to pay a society for a lot which he had leased and improved, and which was $4,000 to $1,000 to $1,0 some evidence of confidence between them, and the negotiations between the two were private. The court inferred from the whole evidence that the intention had been expressed during the negotiation between the plaintiff and defendant, and that the plaintiff had conveyed on the strength of it:—Held, that it constituted an agreement which the court would enforce. Metcod v, Orton, 17 Gr. 84.

Parol Contract-Merger in Written Contract - Amendment - Notice. | - In 1858 a parol contract was entered into for sale of one acre of land, the consideration was paid, and the purchaser went into possession and built upon it. Afterwards, and in the same year, the vendor executed by way of security a life lease to another person of 50 acres, including the acre so sold. In 1860 a bond was executed by the vendor to the wife of the purchaser for conveyance of the acre to her. In 1862 the lessee for life purchased the 50 acres in fee, and the conveyance to him was duly registered; the bond for the acre was never regis-tered. The purchaser of the acre having filed a bill for a specific performance of the parol contract, the court refused such relief, the parol contract having become merged in the written contract or bond; but offered the plaintiff, at the risk of costs, permission to amend by alleging the written contract, and to give further evidence to establish direct notice of the bond, reserving the question of costs until after the inquiry; if this refused, the bill to be dismissed without costs, defendant having falsely asserted his title under the lease to have been absolute, and not by way of security merely. McCrumm v. Crawford, Trust — Conveyance — Subsequent Oral Agreement—Judgment.]—An attorney took a conveyance of certain property in trust for a client, but did not sign any writing acknowledging the trust. A parol agreement was subsequently entered into, that the attorney should accept the property in discharge of two notes which he held against the client:—Held, that this agreement was binding on the attorney, though not in writing. After the making of the agreement, the attorney put the two notes in suit, in the name of a third person, and obtained judgment by default:—Held, that the judgment was no bar to a suit by the client for specific performance of the agreement. Fleming v, Duncan, 17 Gr. 76.

B., with others, had at the same time an independent interest in at the same time an independent interest in the one acre, and obtained a decree ordering A. to convey it to him and the others. A, then filed a bill for specific performance of the contract with B.:—Held, that B. must pay the whole of the purchase money upon re-ceiving a clear title to the remaining forty-mine acres. Curran v. Little, 8 Gr. 250.

Possession-Bond for Purchase Moncy-Costs.]—A purchaser executed a bond for payment of purchase money of land, and was let into possession; but having made default payment and refused to accept the title, the vendor brought an action at law on the bond; whereupon the purchaser filed his bill for specific performance of the contract, if a good title could be shewn; or, if not, for an injunction restraining the action, and that the bond tion restraining the action, and that the bond might be delivered up. Upon a reference, the vendor failed to shew a good title, and the court decreed the other branch of the prayer, but (the court being divided in opinion on the question of costs) without costs. Morin v. Wilkinson, 2 Gr. 157.

Want of Title-Agreement for Vendor's Title-Misrepresentations. 1 - Where the vendor sells only such title as he has, the purchaser will be compelled to complete his pur-chase, although the vendor does not shew a good title, or although the title appears to be not good. But where a vendor bound him-self to convey only as good a title as he coul-dobtain from his vendor, and it was shewn that neither of these parties had any title whatever, nemer of these parties had any title whatever, and that the vendor had misrepresented the state of the title, and had induced the purchaser to give the full value of the land, the court refused to enforce the agreement, but dismissed the bill without costs. Leslie v. Preston, 7 Gr. 434.

(b) Objections to Title.

Conditions of Sale—Time.]—See Nason v. Armstrong, 22 O. R. 542, 21 A. R. 183, 25 S. C. R. 263.

Conveyance to Vendor by Lunatic-Notice.]-Before the court will compel a purchaser to accept a title, it must be shewn to be reasonably clear and marketable, without doubt as to the evidence of it. Where, therefore, the deed to the vendor was executed on the 14th February, 1854, and in December of that year a commission of lunacy was issued against the grantor in that deed, under which it was found that he was insane, and had been so from the month of February or March previous, the court refused to enforce the contract. The vendor alleged as an answer to the objection of lunacy that it was shewn that The vendor alleged as an answer to the had purchased fairly, and without notice of the lunacy; but, as the fact that the vendor had purchased without such notice was one which from its nature was incapable of proof. and notice on some future occasion might be clearly shewn, the court allowed the objection and dismissed the vendor's bill with costs. Francis v. St. Germain, 6 Gr. 636.

brance only, the purchaser has a right in equity to compel its removal, or to have specific performance of the contract, with an specine performance of the contract, with an abatement in the amount of the purchase money in respect of such incumbrance. Van Norman v., Beaupre, 5 Gr. 559; Kendrew v. Shevan, 4 Gr. 578. See Loughead v. Stubbs, 27 Gr. 387.

- Fraud-Costs.]-The court refused to enforce a contract for the sale of land until an outstanding claim for dower was removed; but, defendant in his answer having set up charges of fraud which were not established, withheld from him his costs of the suit. Chantler v. Ince, 7 Gr. 432, observed upon. Thompson v. Brunskill, 7 Gr. 542, approved of. Gamble v. Gummerson, 9 Gr. 193.

- Refusal to Bar - Sciting apart Fund.]—Where in a suit for specific performance the wife of the vendor refuses to join in the conveyance for the purpose of barring her dower, the proper mode of protecting the purchaser is, to set aside a sufficient portion of the purchase money to indemnify him against the claim for dower in the event of the wife subsequently becoming entitled thereto by surviving her husband; the interest during the joint lives of the vendor and his wife to be paid to him, and also the principal set aside on her decease. Skinner v. Ainsworth, 24 Gr.

Incumbrance.]—A person, after contracting for the sale of land, mortgaged it, and then filed a bill for specific performance. The then filed a bill for specific performance. mortgage not being due, the court on the hearing directed an inquiry whether the plaintiff could make a good title free from incum-brance, and reserved further directions and costs. McDougal v. Müller, 15 Gr. 505.

- Dower - Demand of Abstract -Costs.] — In a suit at the instance of a vendor of land for the specific performance of an agreement to sell, the defence raised was, that the land was to be conveyed free from incumbrances, but the same was subject to the dower of one M. and to a mortgage, and therefore that a good title could not be It was satisfactorily shewn that the dower had been sufficiently barred, and the report of the master stated that the price agreed to be paid for the land was $3,500; that $1,-800 was due on the mortgage; that the pur-chaser had paid only $100 on account of his purchase; "and that the non-completion of the contract (was) attributable to the desire of the purchaser to recede from the contract. The defendant, down to the bringing of the decree into the master's office, had not de-manded any abstract or made any objection to the title. The court, on further directions, made a decree ordering defendant to specifically carry out the agreement, and pay to the plaintiff the general costs of the cause. Graham v. Stephens, 27 Gr. 434.

Non-production of Deed-Tax Certificate.]—On an inquiry as to title the vendor was unable to produce one of the deeds, or to shew that a receipt was indorsed thereon for the purchase money, but the deed was more than sixty years old, and the memorial of it than sixty years old, and the memorial of it was produced: — Held, no objection to the completion of the contract. Held, also, that the non-production of a certificate of no taxes in arrear, was no objection to the title. Thompson v. Milliken, 9 Gr. 359.

Outstanding Equity.]—A supposed equity in a person who died in 1808, where the possession since that time has been enjoyed by another, claiming it as his own, and having a perfect legal title, is no ground for refusing to enforce an agreement in which the condition precedent was, that a party should "shew, make, and complete a perfect legal title," as, even if such equity existed, a court of equity would not enforce it under the circumstances. Decuitt v. Thomas. 10 Gr. 21. See, also, Decuitt v. Thomas, 7 C. P. 565.

Purchase en Blee—Closing up Streets—Want of Poucer,]—Upon an agreement for sale of real estate laid out into building lots, the purchaser's agent signed a memorandum to the following effect: "The purchase is to cover the entire property of the C. estate, within the original boundaries, except that sold off, with appurenances and privileges, so that the purchaser may make arrangements with the purchasers of lots to close the streets laid out, if desirable." The purchaser ne-fused to complete the purchase, on the ground that without the power of shutting up one of the streets his object in the purchase would be frustrated, which object he had communicated to the agent of the vendors:—Held, notwithstanding, that the purchaser was bound to complete the contract. Commercial Bank v. McConnell, 7 Gr. 323.

Sale of Road Allowance—Public User—Closing up.]—The owner had permitted for many years a public road to be used across his land, which he subsequently agreed to sell. No by-law had been passed by the municipality for closing up this road, although a resolution of the council had been passed for the purpose:—Held, that a good title was not shewn. Kronsbien v. Gage, 10 Gr. 572.

See Healey v. Ward, 8 Gr. 337, ante 15 (a); Brown v. Pears, 12 P. R. 396.

(d) Repudiation or Rescission for Want of Title.

Time for Repudiating—Knowledge of Want of Title—Conveyance from True Owner,]—Where the plaintiff, at the time he entered into a contract with the defendant for the exchange of lands, had no title to the lands he proposed to exchange, which were, to the knowledge of the defendant at the time of the contract, tested in the plaintiff whife:
—Held, in an action for specific performance, that the defendant could not withdraw on the ground that the plaintiff had no title, at any rate before the time fixed for the completion of the exchange; and the plaintiff, having tendered a conveyance from his wife before action, was entitled to succeed; for the defendant, having entered into the contract knowing that it did not bind the estate, but only the person, of the plaintiff, must be taken to have relied from the beginning upon the promise of the plaintiff to procure the concurrence of the owner, and could not set up that the plaintiff was not the owner. Dictum of Kekewich, J., in Wylson v. Dunn, 34 Ch. D. 569, not followed. St. Denis v. Higgins, 24 O. R. 230.

H. and R. agreed to exchange land, and the agreement, which was in the form of a let-ter written by H. proposing the exchange, the terms of which R. accepted, provided that the matter was to be closed in ten days, if the matter was to be closed in ten days, it possible. R. at the time had no title to the property he was to transfer, but was ne-gotiating for it. Nearly four months after the date of the agreement the matter was still unsettled, and a letter was written by H. to R.'s solicitor notifying him that unless something was done by the next morning the agreement would be null and void. Prior to this there had been several interviews between the parties and their solicitors, in which it was pointed out to R, that there were difficulties in the way of his getting a title to the land he proposed to transfer; that there was no registry of the contract which formed the title of the man who was to convey to him; and that the lands were subject to an annuity.
R., however, took no active steps to get the difficulties removed until after the above letter was written, when he brought an action against the proposed vendor and obtained a decree declaring his title good. He then brought suit against H. for specific performance of the contract for exchange :- Held. versing the judgments in 19 A. R. 134 and 21 O. R. 43, that the action could not be maintained; that R. not having title when the agreement was made, H, could rescind the contract without giving reasonable notice of his intention, as he would be bound to do if the title were merely imperfect; that the letter to the solicitor was sufficient to put an end to the bargain; and that, even if there had been no rescission, the conduct of R. in relation to the completion of the contract was such as to disentitle him to relief by way of specific performance. Harris v. Robinson, 21 S. C. R.

Triul—Reference.]—A purchaser of land may, on discovering that the vendor has no title; repudition on that ground; but attempted repudition on that ground does not keep this right alive mother a purchaser, who, in an action by the vendor to compel specific performance, set up in his defence that the contract was void because of fraudulent misrepresentations as to value, attempted at the trial to repudiate also on the ground of want of title in the vendor, he having known of this want of title for some time, and having because of it obtained an order for security for costs, it was held that there could not then be repudiation on that ground, and that it would be sufficient for the vendor to shew title on the reference. (e) Shewing Title after Suit Begun.

Abstract—Demand—Costs.]—Held, in an action for specific performance, that shewing title is the manifestation on the abstract of all matters essential to a good title, and that, as the defendant had demanded no abstract before action, he could not complain that title was first shewn thereafter, and he was ordered to pay the costs thereof. Bridges v. Longman, 24 Beav, 27, cited and followed. London and Canadian L. and A. Co. v. Graham, 12 P. R. 657.

Unpatented Lands—Purchase Money—Interest — Costs.]—Plaintiff and defendant agreed to exchange lands, the plaintiff conveying 100 acres to B. upon which there was a mortgage for $1,300, and defendant agreeing to convey to the plaintiff whichever of two lots—one in T., the other in S.—he should select. In the event of his selecting the latter, it was to be assigned to him, subject to the payment of $150 in four equal annual instalments, with interest at seven per cent. The plaintiff selected the latter, but it appeared that defendant had not yet obtained a title thereto, although he was entitled to call for a patent from the Crown on making certain payments, and procured it the day the cause was heard. The court—as defendant had all along had a title to the lot, and was at the time able to carry out his agreement, and submitted to do so—directed that the contract should be completed by conveyance of the lot in S., and that the time for payment of the $150 should date from the hearing, from which time also the interest should be computed; but refused to give to either party the costs of the litigation. Gray v. Recsor, 15 Gr. 205; S. C., 16 Gr. 614.

See ante 15 (b).

(f) Waiver of Purchaser's Right to Have Good Title Shewn.

Conditions of Sale—Limiting Proof of Title.]—A clause in the conditions of sale that the vendors shall only produce certain title deeds and an abstract of the register, and that the purchaser shall not be entitled to call for any other proof of title, does not exempt the vendors from shewing otherwise a good title. Canada Permanent Building Society v. Wallis, S Gr. 368.

Possession — Clearing—Cropp.]—A purchaser, before the time appointed for the completion the control of the sale of land, and while the investigation to the sale of land, and while the investigation (the same were upon and cleared a portion (the same were three acres) of the land sold, and sowed the same with turnip seed, which it was necessary to do at the time or lose the whole season; he did not, however, harvest the crop, but abandoned the possession entirely in consequence of objections to the title not being removed:—Held, no waiver of the purchaser's right to an inquiry as to title. Mitcheltree v. Irvein. 13 Gr. 537.

Irvin. 13 Gr. 537.

The mere taking possession by a purchaser is not necessarily a waiver of the right to an inquiry as to title. The court will not hold it to be so unless satisfied that it was the intention of the purchaser to take the land without such inquiry; or without its being made to appear that the conduct of the purchaser has been such that it would be unjust to the vendor under the circumstances to put him to prove his title. S. C., ib. 542.

— Delay—Payment into Court.]—Possession and user of the premises do not deprive the vendee of his right to have a good title shewn; but where unreasonable delay has occurred in requiring tile to be adduced, the court will order the purchase money to be paid into court, pending the investigation. Crooks v. Glenn, S Gr. 239.

perty.]—Where a contract for sale of building lots provided for immediate possession, and for the payment of the purchase money in eight annual instalments:—Held, that the erection of two workshops on the lots by the vendees was no waiver of their right to examine the title; nor was the division of the property between them, when they dissolved their partnership, nor the acceptance of a conveyance at another time of another lot said to depend on the same title. Darby v. Greenlees, 11 Gr., 351.

— Improvements—Want of Title—Onus.]—In May, 1860, a purchase was made by parel of a lot of land, in addition to three other lots previously bought by the same purchaser from the same vendor. The purchaser went into possession and erected thereon a coach-house and stable, and the other portion of it was used as a lawn to the house which he had erected on the other lots, which had been duly conveyed to him. In 1860, and again in 1863, the purchaser repeatedly asked for a deed, offering to give the vendor his note for the purchase money, but which he refused to accept:—Held, that the purchaser, by his conduct, had waived his right to compel the vendor to make out a good title, but that he was at liberty to shew that the vendor had no title, in which case he would be entitled to get rid of his contract; the onus of proof under the circumstances being shifted. Denison, Fuller, 10 Gr. 498.

— Repairs—Improvements.]—The purchaser waives any objection to the title of the vendor if he takes possession of the property and exercises acts of ownership by making repairs and improvements, Wallace v. Hesslein, 29 S. C. R. 171.

See Tisdale v. Shortis, 10 Gr. 271, ante 15 (a).

20. Uncertainty as to the Land.

Appurtenances—Mill Privileges—Costs.]
—Specific performance will not be decreed where the terms of the contract signed are uncertain, nor where it is plain that there was a misunderstanding. The intending purchaser wrote, "We will give you for your mill privilege in Laxton, with all the improvements, including the saw logs, and your claim on the land you applied for, viz., the north half of 6 in the 11th, and the north half of 7 in do., lots Nos, 6 and 7 in the 10th concession, $4,000." &c. In reality the premises mentioned comprised two mill privileges, but the vendor insisted that only one was embraced in this agreement, and filed a bill to enforce specific performance according to this construction; whilst defendant by his answer insisted that both were included in his offer to purchase. The court dismissed the bill.

but without costs; defendant insisting upon the case being heard by way of motion for decree, pursuant to a notice given by the plaintiff, from which he afterwards desired to withdraw. McLauchlin v. Whiteside, 7 Gr. 573.

Quantity - Purchase - Possession -Fences—Payment.]—One K. in 1835 purchased from defendant part of lot one, being a portion of a block of land owned by the latter. and two years afterwards agreed for the purchase of fifty feet additional land, and then erected his fences, enclosing on the north twenty-seven feet, on the west six feet, and on the south a quantity of land, which could not be defined, additional to the original purchase. Of the land so enclosed K., and those claiming under him, remained in undisputed possession for about ten years, with the knowledge of defendant, who acted as agent for some years in respect of this property, and was constantly in the habit of visiting it whilst the fences were in the course of erection. The plaintiff, having purchased this property from K., afterwards purchased from defendant the remainder of a lot situate on the south thereof, whereupon he removed the southern fence that had been erected by K., in order to put all the land into one parcel. On a plan of the property, made by defendant, a lane had been laid out on the south of the original purchase seventeen feet wide, and on the west another lane, six feet whereof were comprised within the limits of lot number one. K.'s fences enclosed the six feet on the west, and were supposed to have embraced west, and were supposed to have embraced the seventeen-feet lane on the south, which, together with the twenty-seven feet to the north, made in all fifty feet. The vendor subsequently sought to recover possession of the strips of land to the north and west, where-upon the plaintiff filed a bill to restrain the action at law, and for a conveyance of the land. No place could be assigned to the fifty feet, unless the twenty-seven feet and six feet formed part of it; and it having been established that the purchase money for the fifty feet had been paid, the court made the decree prayed, with costs. Howcutt v. Rees, 3 Gr.

— Selection.]—R, gave a bond to B, to convey to B, a water privilege on lot 17, and to convey also so much land as he might require for the purpose of making a raceway or for erecting buildings on the lot, at the rate of £10 per acre:—Held, that the selection of such land must be made during the lifetime of both obligor and obligee. Quere, whether a bill would lie for the specific performance of such a contract, Burnham v, Ramsay, 32 U. C. R. 491.

Unascertained Portion—Premature Action.—It having been ascertained that a rail-way company intended to have a station on the defendant's land, he contracted to sell to the plaintiff a quarter of an acre next to the railway station as soon as laid out. The company having afterwards located the station ground, but not the position thereon of the intended station house:—Held, that the plaintiff's parcel could not be ascertained until the locality of the station house was determined, and that until then a bill to enforce specific performance was premature. Carroll v. Casemore, 20 Gr. 16.

See Stretton v. Stretton, 24 Gr. 20, ante 18 (c); Ledyard v. McLean, 10 Gr. 139, ante I. 21. Unpatented Lands.

Registry Laws—Prior Contract.]—The Registry Acts do not apply to instruments executed previously to the grant from the Crown. Where, therefore, the locatee of land executed a bond to convey, and after the issuing of the patent sold and conveyed the property to a third party, who again sold and executed a conveyance to a purchaser for value, but before either had paid his purchase money, the holder of the bond, having registered the same, filed and served a bill for specific performance:—Held, that neither vendew was in a position to plend a purchase for value without notice, and that the plaintiff was entitled to specific performance with costs. Casey v. Jordan, 5 Gr. 467:

Prior Contract—Notice.]—A. bargained with B., the locate of the Crown, for the purchase of an unpatented lot free from incumbrances, obtained a bond for a deed, and paid B. the full consideration. B. afterwards borrowed money on the lot from C., who took out the patent, and conveyed the lot to B., and received from him a mortgage, without notice of A.'s claim. After the loan had been agreed to, but before it was carried out, A. registered his bond. A bill by A. against C. for specific performance of the contract was dismissed with costs. Holland v. Moore, 12 Gr. 206.

Statutes—18 Vict, c. 124—Chancery Act—Cause of Action—Possession,]—18 Vict, c. 124 applies only to cases where the cause of suit arose before the passing of the Chancery Act (1837). The locatee of lands of the Crown, in 1824, contracted to sell a portion thereof, the consideration for which was paid, but he continued to hold possession of the lands until the year 1855, when the heirs of the bargainee filed a bill to enforce specific performance of the contract, the patent from the Crown having been issued in 1830. The court dismissed the bill. Silcox v. Setls, 6 Gr. 237.

Voluntary Agreement-Purchaser for Value-Notice-Denial-Costs.]-The locatee of lands from the Crown executed a bond in favour of one of his sons, for the conveyance of fifty acres, to procure his marriage with a particular person, which, however, never took place, and the son afterwards married another woman, having, in the meantime, been allowed to retain the bond. The father subsequently conveyed, for value, to another son, who had notice of the bond; and he hav-ing obtained the Crown patent for the land. a bill was filed to compel specific performance of the bond :-Held, that as against defendant, a purchaser for value, the bond was voluntary and could not be enforced; but defendant having by his answer untruly denied all knowledge of the existence of the bond, the court dismissed the bill, without costs, and without prejudice to filing another, if the plaintiff should be so advised. Osborne v. Osborne, 5 Gr. 619.

Default-Waiver.]-In June, 1869, D. agreed to sell and convey to H. 278 acres of land for $2,780, payable by certain instalments, at certain specified times: the agreement signed certain specified times; the agreement signed by the parties expressing that time was "to be of the essence of the bargain." In Janu-ary, 1871, H., by a similar instrument, agreed to sell to the plaintiff 100 acres for $1,000, to be paid to D., upon the terms contained in the said recited agreement; and the plaintiff then paid D. $60 on account. Both H. and the plaintiff were admitted into possession of their lands, on the execution of the respective agreements, and so continued until 1874. In ebruary of that year both H, and the plaintiff were in arrear, nothing having been paid since 1871, and D. complained to H. of this, and of the manner in which the premises were managed, and it was then agreed between D. and H. that D. should bring an action of ejectand all arrears of purchase money, together with an increased rate of interest. Ejectment with an increased rate of interest. was accordingly brought by D. against H. and the plaintiff; but before the summons was served, or the plaintiff was aware of the proserved, or he plantin was aware of the plantin was aware of the plantin ceeding, he paid $100 to the attorney of D., who indorsed a receipt for the amount on the agreement between H. and the plaintiff as a payment "on within agreement." H. took no steps to defend the ejectment, and D. recovered judgment therein, although the plaintiff appeared, and tried to defend for his 100 acres; and a writ of possession was issued, and delivered to the sheriff, with directions to give possession to H. for D., which was done accordingly, and H. was continued in possession under an arrangement for an extension of the time for payment of principal and in-terest. On a bill filed by the plaintiff against H. for specific performance:-Held, under these circumstances, that the receipt by D. of the $100 after default had waived the condition making time of the essence of the contract; but, by reason of having omitted to set up these facts in defence of the ejectment, or because, having so set them up, they did not form an answer to the proceeding, the court refused to open up the question after the adjudication at law, and dismissed the bill with costs. Demorest v. Helme, 22 Gr. 433.

Subsequent Suit—Binding Rights of Purchaser—Gosts, I—Where under the terms of the contract the purchaser is let into possession, but on his default the vendor canplectment and turns him out, the vendor cannot afterwards obtain specific performance, but he has a right to come into this court, in order that either the contract may be specifically performed or the purchaser's rights so bound as to enable the vendor to dispose of the property, O'Noal v. McMahon, 2 Gr. 145.

Where a vendor brought ejectment, and turned the heirs of the purchaser out of possession, he was held to have disabled himself from coming to the court for specific performance, and could only do so in order to bind their interests in such a manner as to render the property saleable. Under such circumstances, the plaintiff having placed himself in a false position by reason of the proceedings at law, the court deprived him of his costs up doctree, but gave him his costs subsequent thereto. Hawn v. Cashion, 20 Gr. 518.

Title—Costs.]—Upon a contract for sale the purchaser was let into possession; the vendor, instead of complying with his vendee's demand for an abstract, brought ejectment, so as to compel payment of the purchase money; and the purchaser defended that action, and did not proceed in chancery until the vendor had recovered judgment. On investigating the title it was found to be bad. The court, although it gave the purchaser relief, so far as restraining the proceedings in ejectment, refused him his costs of his defence at law, but gave him his costs in chancery. Winters v. Sutton, 12 Gr. 113.

23. Other Cases.

Appurtenances—Water—Use of Dams.]
—A vendor agreed that the purchaser should have sufficient water to drive a saw mill and other machinery. In a suit by the vendor against the purchaser, the court decreed specific performance of the contract, treating the water and the use of the dams and booms as sold with the land; the decree to provide for this, with liberty to the parties to apply from time to time. Hincks v, McKay, 14 Gr. 233.

Arrest—Purchaser.]—A writ of arrest will not be granted against the purchaser in a suit for specific performance, unless it be shewn by affidavit that the vendor's lien is insufficient. Nelson v. Dafoe, 8 P. R. 332.

Consideration for Conveyance—Personal Services—Other Enforceable Consideration. —The plaintiff II, being in possession of land belonging to defendant and entitled to retain it for another year, the defendant, to obtain immediate possession, agreed that in consideration thereof he would give another piece of land to the plaintiffs, husband and wrife, for the life of the wife, the husband further agreeing that he would look after and take care of the former property whenever defendant was absent, and would, during winter, see to defendant's cattle and stock, Possession was accordingly delivered of the respective parcels, and the husband rendered some services, being all that was required of him. The defendant having afterwards brought ejectment against the plaintiffs:—Held, that the agreement was enforceable, notwithstanding the stipulation as to personal services to be rendered, which the court could not directly enforce; and an injunction was granted. Hevoit v. Bronn, 16 Gr. 670.

Contract by Stranger—Owner—Estoppel.]—Where the owner of an estate stands by and allows a third person to appear as owner, and to enter into a contract as such, the owner will be decreed specifically to perform such contract. Davis v. Snyder, 1 Gr. 194.

See Leary v. Rose, 10 Gr. 346.

Crown — Expropriation—Agreement for Compensation.]—The defendants entered into a written agreement to sell and convey to the Crown, by a good and sufficient deed, a certain quantity of land, required for the purposes of the Cape Breton Railway, for the sum of $1,250. At the date of such agreement the centre line of the railway had been staked off through the defendants property, and they were fully aware of the location of the right of way and the quantity of land to be taken from them for such purposes. Thereafter, and within one year from the date of such agreement, the land in dispute was set out and ascertained, and a plan and description thereof duly deposited of record, in pursuance of the provisions of R. S. C. c. 39. Upon the defendants refusing to carry out their agreement, on the ground that the damages were greater than they anticipated, and the matter being brought into court on the information of the attorney-general, the court assessed the damages at the sum so agreed upon. Quere, is the Crown in such a case entitled to specific performance? The Queen v. McKenie, 2 Ex. C. R. 198.

Deficiency — Description — "More or Leas.")—Where a city building lot was described in an agreement for exchange as having a depth of "130 feet more or less," and had in fact a depth of only 117 feet with a lane in the rear 12 feet wide, specific performance at the suit of the owner was, under the particular circumstances, refused. Moorhouse v. Hensish, 22 A. R. 172.

Foreign Lands — Exchange — Plaintiff Submitting to Jurisdiction.] — See Montgomery v. Ruppersburg, 31 O. R. 433.

Inability of Vendor to Convey-Want of Privity—Mortgage—Priorities—Statute of Limitations—Improvements.]—The bill was filed to enforce specific performance of an nied to enforce specific performance of an agreement to sell certain land, made by one R., since deceased. The original agreement was cancelled, and on the 22nd May, 1866, another agreement for sale, contained in a lease of the land from R. to the plaintiff, was substituted therefor. In November, 1865, when the original agreement was entered into R., who held two mortgages on the land in question, thought he had obtained an absolute vitte thought he had obtained an absolute litle thereto, by proceedings in a foreclosure suit on these mortgages. It afterwards, how-ever, appeared that long prior to the first of these mortgages held by R., the mortgagor, T. H., had, by a voluntary deed, conveyed 50 acres of the land to his son, E. H. Subse-500 acres of the land to his son, E. H. Subsequently to the first mortgage to R., and prior to the second mortgage, E. H. mortgaged the 50 acres to one A. E. H. was not node a party to the foreclosure suit, but A. was served with notice of the proceedings in the master's office, and not having appeared, he and the mortgagor were declared foreclosed. Soon after the above agreement for sale in September, 1866, R. filed a bill against T. H., E. H., and A. for the foreclosure of his two mortgages against all these defendants, when a decree was made declaring the deed to E. H. to be void against R., and that A.'s mortgage was subject to the first mortgage, but had pri-ority over the second mortgage held by R., and he was directed to pay into court a certain sum as the price of redemption, which payment was made at the appointed time. It appeared that the plaintiff had actual notice, of E. H.'s outstanding equity of redemption of E. H.'s outstanding equals of the standard before he made any improvements; and that he made them in reliance upon R. holding him harmless:—Held, that the plaintiff was not entitled to specific performance against the representatives of R., as they had no control of the plaintiff was not entitled to specific performance against the representatives of R. power to convey, nor against A., because there was no privity between him and the plaintiff, and no equity to make him bound by the agreement. Held, also, that the plaintiff was not entitled to a lieu on the land for his improvements. Held, also, that the plaintiff had not acquired any rights by virtue of the Statute of Limitations, inasmuch as his possession was that of a tenant and was not exclusive of the mortgagor. Russell v. Romanes, 3 A. R. 635.

Insolvent Vendor — Partnership.]—The fact of the vendor being a partner in a mercantile firm who, since the execution of the contract, had made a composition with their creditors, is not an objection to the claim to specific performance. Fisken v. Wride, 7 Gr. 598.

Oil Lands-Construction of Agreement-Working of Wells—Assignment of Contract— Parties.1—The owner of land demised fifty acres for fourteen years at a nominal rent, for the purpose of boring for oil, and at the same time agreed to convey at any time a roadway from any wells the lessee might dig or bore to a certain road, and "also sufficient land for the working of such well or wells," the lessee agreeing to pay "$100 for the first the lessee agreeing to pay "$100 for the first well he might work for oil, and $50 per acre for the land necessary for working such oil well on said roadway," and "the sum of $50 for any oil well he shall work after the first one, and $25 per acre for any land necessary for working said well or wells and the road-The lessee, having divided a portion of the fifty acres into acre lots, having a frontage of from eighty to one hundred feet sold his interest in one such acre to a third party, who opened a well, erected an oil re-finery with the necessary tanks and works, and declared his option of purchasing within the time specified. The owner of the fee hav-ing sold his interest in the whole fifty acres, his vendee objected to convey the acre except upon terms not warranted by the agreement, and subsequently refused to convey more than in his opinion was absolutely necessary for working the well in its then state, the produce of which had become greatly diminished, and filed a bill asking to have the agreement construed, and an injunction against continuing the refinery, which occupied about one twenty-fourth of the acre. The court was of opinion that under the agreement the pur-chaser was not entitled to space for a refinery, but, it appearing that the sinking of another well within such acre would tend to injure the well already sunk, and that an acre not too large for the purposes contemplated, refused the injunction asked for; and the purchaser by his answer having asked crossrelief by way of specific performance of the agreement, a decree was made accordingly; the deed to be prepared under such decree to provide for payment of the sums stipulated for in the event of the opening of any future wells upon such acre, but in such a case the party so claiming specific performance to be liable to pay for any other well or wells opened and worked upon the whole fifty acres, by other persons; the assignee in this respect standing in no better position than his assignor, the oriand the contract not containing any stipulation or agreement for the laying off of the fifty acres into subdivisions. master having required a list of all persons who had opened and worked wells upon the property with a view to making them parties in his office, and taking an account of what they owed respectively, in order that they might be bound thereby, and that the defendant might thus acquire a lien on their portions of the land for the sums so to be paid by defendant:—Held, on appeal from this direction, that such other purchasers were not proper parties; nor could the defendant thus Al lie ha Le tie fo tie pa bo to sp ed co pr me De Omission of Part of Agreement from Writing—Insertion in Decree.]—In an action for specific performance of an agreement for the sale of lands, it appeared that the parties intentionally omitted from the writing a part of the agreement, as to the tenor of which both parties agreed; and the defendant asked to have this inserted in the judgment for specific performance, but the plaintiff objected :-Held, that, on the principle that he who comes into equity must do equity, it was proper that the omitted portion of the agreement should be inserted as claimed. Jones v. Dale, 16 O. R. 717.

Penalty — Damages for Non-performance of Contract — Repudiation—Incumbrance,]— Upon a contract for sale of an estate subject tpon a contract for sale of an estate subject to a mortgage, it was stipulated that the ven-dor should execute a bond to indemnify the purchaser against the incumbrance, and a sum of 5500 by way of liquidated damages for non-performance by either party was to be paid to the other. The court held that this did not analyse ither party was to be paid to the other. The court held that this did not enable either party to repudiate the contract upon paying £500; and in a suit by the vendor a reference as to title was directed, but without the usual declaration that the plaintiff was entitled to specific performance, reserving a right at the hearing on further directions to refuse specific performance, in the event of the vendor failing to effect or the event of the vendor fairs arrangement with the mortgagees, which the vendor alleged he could make. Fisken v. Wride, 7 Gr. 598.

Repairs and Improvements — Allow-ance for.]—On taking an account of what was due to a plaintiff in possession, who claimed under a vendor of real estate in a specific performance suit, the master allowed certain repairs and improvements, some of which were made after the commencement of the suit. On further directions, the court expressed the opinion that the only repairs made after suit commenced, that could be allowed, were such as it was the plaintiff's duty to make in order to save the premises from Hawn v. Cashion, 20 Gr. 518. deterioration.

Restriction against Selling - Special Act—Compliance with.] — Land was devised to N. with a provision that he should not sell or mortgage it during his life, but might devise it to his children. N. having agreed to sell the land to V., it was held, upon a petition under the Vendors and Purchasers Act, that the will gave N. the land in fee with a valid restriction against selling or mortgaging: Re Northcote, 18 O. R. 107. N. then applied for a special Act, which was passed, giving him a special Act, which was passed, giving him power, notwithstanding the restriction in the will, to sell the land, and directing that the purchase money should be paid to a trust company. Prior to the passing of this Act, N., in order to obtain a loan on the land, had made a lease of it to a third party, which lease was mortgaged, and N. afterwards as-signed his reversion. In an action by V. for specific performance of the contract, N. set up that the contract was at an end when judg-ment was given upon the petition, and submitted that if performance were decreed, the amount due on the mortgage should be paid to him, and only the balance to the trust company:—Held, that it was not open to N. to attack the decision on the petition; but, even if it were, and that decision should be over-ruled, V. would be all the more entitled to specific performance; that the evidence shewed the lease granted by N. to have been merely colourable and an attempt to raise money on the lands by indirect means; and that there should be a decree for specific performance with a direction that the whole of the purchase money should be paid to the trust company. Northcote v. Vigeon, 22 S. C. R. 740.

Sheriff's Sale-Equitable Interest. 1-The equitable interest of an assignee from the purchaser of a contract for the sale of lands, is chaser of a contract for the sale of lands, is exigible under a writ of fieri facias against the lands of such assignee, and the purchaser at a sheriff's sale of such interest is entitled to specific performance of the contract. Re Prit-tic and Crawford, 9 C. L. T. Oec. N. 45, de-clared to have been inadvertently decided or reported. Ward v. Archer, 24 O. R. 650.

Substituted Agreement-Evidence-Reconveyance—Costs.] — In a suit for specific performance it was shewn that the plaintiff had agreed to convey to the defendants certain lands, in consideration of his being paid onenands, in consideration of his being paid one-third of the sum for which defendants should be enabled to sell the same. This agreement was subsequently cancelled on the defendants undertaking to pay plaintiff $2,000, one-half by a note, the other half by the conveyance of certain town lots at an ascertained valuation; and this second or substituted agreement the plaintiff sought to enforce. The defendants set up that, in consequence of their ascertaining that plaintiff had not a title to the land conveyed to them, a fresh agreement was en-tered into to the effect that the defendants should be at liberty to sell the land, and pay to plaintiff one-third of the net proceeds, which they asserted they had done. At the hearing the court, being satisfied that the defendants' account of the transaction was cor-rect. refused the relief claimed, but offered the plaintiff a reconveyance on payment of costs, which the defendants assented to, or a decree upon the footing of the third or last mentioned agreement upon payment of costs; or rehearing, this decree was affirmed. Rutherford v. Sing, 29 Gr. 511.

Summary Procedure in Lieu of Action.]—If under R. S. O. 1877 c. 109, the court adjudicates upon a question of title between vendor and purchaser, and directs the purchaser to carry out the contract, and the purchaser then fails to carry out the contract, it is unnecessary to bring an action for speci-fic performance of the contract, and the requisite relief may be had on notice of motion for payment of the purchase money or in de-fault a resale. Re Craig, 10 P. R. 33.

Tenants in Tail-Joint Tenancy-Partition—Statute of Limitations.]—Specific performance will be decreed against a tenant in tail. A joint tenant in tail executed articles of agreement for a division of the property, and each went into possession and for thirtysix years continued to enjoy the portion allot-ted to him, when a bill was filed to enforce the agreement:—Held, that defendant could not

VI. AGREEMENTS FOR WORK OR SERVICES,

Construction of Railway-Acceptance -Approval of Engineer-Delay-Inspection - Reference.1 - Two incorporated trading companies agreed, under seal, the one to con-struct certain works for the other, which on completion were to be inspected by engineers on behalf of each, whose finding was to be conclusive; and upon the engineers approving of the works, and reporting them as com-pleted, they were to be accepted. The parties to perform the work having, as they alleged. completed it, notified the others thereof, calling upon them to appoint an engineer, stipulated for, which request was not complied with, and subsequently a portion of the works contracted for (a bridge) was destroyed. On a bill filed to compel an acceptance of the works, the court thought that the delay of one of the contracting parties, until after such destruction, to name an engineer, as stipulated for by the agreement, did not preclude the other from obtaining an inspection of the works; but that such inspection and approval must, under the circumstances, be had by a reference to the master. Great Western R. W. Co. v. Desjardins Canal Co., 9 Gr. 503.

Covenant to Repair. —The action was brought in the chancery division to obtain specific performance of a covenant to repair, or for damages: —Held, that it was really a common law action, for specific performance of such a covenant could not be decreed. Bingham v. Warner, 10 P. R. 621.

Covenant to Supply Goods — Demurrer. — Where the planning science specific performance of a contract to supply them with milk for a cheese factory upon certain terms, and in the alternative damages, and the defendant asked for rectification of the contract, a jury notice was struck out. Held, that where a party seeks equitable relief to which he is not entitled, the opposite party should, unless in a very clear case, demur, instead of attacking the pleading indirectly by asking to have a jury. Bingham v. Warner, 10 P. R. 621, commented on. Fraser v. Johnston, 12 P. R. 113.

Erection of Building - Agreement to Give Covenant-Value of Building.]-In an agreement for the sale of land from R, to P., the terms were inserted in these words: "Price $1,000, $200 cash, and balance in five yearly payments, interest at the rate of seven per cent., and covenant of P. to build house worth not less than $4,000, to be commenced in a year from date and finally completed in two years . . ." The $200 was paid down. two years . . ." The $200 was paid down, and R.'s solicitor prepared and tendered the deed (in which was inserted a covenant to build) and the mortgage to P. for execution. P. refused to execute them, and R. brought an action for specific performance, which P. defended on the ground that the covenant to build was too vague and would not be enforced by the court:—Held, that the plain-tiff was clearly entitled to the performance of the defendant's agreement to give a covenant to build a house of certain value within a specified time. Wood v. Silcock, 50 L. T. N. S. 251, distinguished. Robertson v. Patterson, 10 O. R. 267.

- Equitable Grounds for Relief.]-Equity does not, as a general rule, enforce specifically a contract between a landholder and a builder for the erection of a house or the like; but specific performance of agreements to execute works is enforced where the plaintiff shews a sufficient ground of equity to entitle him to that relief. A bill alleged that the plaintiff contracted with defendants to lease to them certain lands, and to erect thereon for their use a stone building according to plans and specifications furnished by defendants; that accordingly the plaintiff had expended $4,000 on the building, under defendants' superintendence and according to plans furnished by them; that he had done everything which defendants had directed; and that defendants had accepted the building and taken possession of part of it; but it appeared that the machinery was not completed in all respects: - Held, that the allegations of the bill, if proved, would entitle the plaintiff to relief. Colton v. Rookledge, 19 Gr. 121.

Railway Stations-Maintenance-Covenant.]-In consideration of a bonus granted by the plaintiffs to the defendants, the latter agreed (1) to bring their railway from Ingersoll to some point on the line of the Canada Southern Railway not more than half a mile east of the present passenger station of the Canada Southern Railway at St. Thomas, and (2) to run all their passenger trains to and from a small station on Church street. defendants performed the first part of the defendants performed the first part of the agreement, and also the second, so long as the Canada Southern R. W. Co. permitted the use of their line from the point of junction to the small station on Church street; but, on the refusal of the other company to continue this privilege, the defendants discontinued the performance of this part of their agreement: —Held, affirming the judgment in 7 O. R. 332. distinguishing Lytton v. Great Western R. W. Co., 2 K. & J. 394, and Wallace v. Great Western R. W. Co., 3 A. R. 44, that this was not a case in which the defendants should be directed specifically to perform their contract as to the Church street station, but that the plaintiffs were entitled to a reference as to damages for breach thereof. City of St. Thomas v. Credit Valley R. W. Co., 12 A. R.

In consideration of a bonus granted by the plaintiffs, the Wellington, Grey, and Bruce R. W. Co. covenanted "to erect and maintain a permanent freight and passenger station" at G. Shortly afterwards the road was leased, with notice of this agreement, to the defendants, who discontinued G. as a regular station, merely stopping there when there were any passengers to be let down or taken up:—Held, affirming the decree in 25 Gr. 86, that the mere erection of station buildings was not a fulfilment of the covenant, and that the municipality was entitled to have it specifically performed. The decree, which enjoined the defendants from allowing any of their ordinary freight, accommodation, express, or mail trains, other than special trains, to pass without stopping for the purpose of taking Remedy at Law.] — The owner of land granted to a railway company the privilege of crossing his property, in consideration of which the company agreed, amongst other things, to pay him $400 a year, to carry flour for him on certain favourable terms, and "to bottom out his present mill race from its present unfinished point:" — Held, that the court should not decree a specific performance of, or damages for breach of, such a contract, but leave the plaintiff to sue on it at law. Dickson v. Covert, 17 Gr. 321.

The plaintiffs contracted with defendant that he should clear for them, in a husband-man-like manner, certain swamp lands which they owned, and that he should take the timber as compensation. Defendant cut down and removed the timber, but did not clear up the land. 'The plaintiffs thereupon filed a bill for specific performance. A demurrer thereto was allowed, the work in question being the sole object of the suit, and the remedy at law being adequate. Ashton v. Pryne, 19 Gr. 56.

Work which Court cannot Superintend — Covenant of Railway Company to Construct Station, 1—See Bickford v. Toren of Chatham, 10 O. R. 257, 14 A. R. 32, 16 S. C. R. 235.

dants to keep their cars running over the whole of their line of railway, during the whole of each year, in accordance with the terms of the agreement between them set in the schedule to 56 Vict, c. 91 (O.) :-Held, that the agreement was one of which the court would not decree specific performance, because such a decree would necessarily direct and enforce the working of the defendants' railway under the agreement in question, in all its minutiae, for all time to come. Bick-ford v. Town of Chatham, 16 S. C. R. 235, followed. Fortescue v. Lostwithiel and Fowey R. W. Co., [1894] 3 Ch. 621, not followed. To grant an injunction restraining the defendants from ceasing to operate the part of their line in question would be to grant a judgment for specific performance in an indirect form. Davis v. Foreman, [1894] 3 Ch. 654, followed. Nor was there any object in making a declara-tion of right under s. 52, s.-s. 5, of the Judi-cature Act, 1895, where the terms of the contract were plain and were confirmed by statute, and the only difficulty was that of tute, and the only difficulty was that of enforcing them. City of Kingston v. King-ston, Portsmouth, and Cataraqui Electric R. W. Co., 28 O. R. 399, 25 A. R. 462.

nor.]—— Parties to Suit—Insolvent Assignor.]—A railway company entered into a contract for the construction of their road, which was to be completed and in perfect running order by the 1st January, 1875; and to be paid for partly in cash and municipal bonds, partly in bonds or debentures of the company, and partly in guaranteed shares or stock of the company; and the contractors entered upon the construction of the work, but owing to financial difficulties they were obliged to Johnson v. Mont-real and City of Ottawa Junction R. W. Co., 22 Gr. 290.

VII. AGREEMENTS TO BEQUEATH PROPERTY.

Adopted Child-Agreement with Father Services of Child - Right of Action. When a father enters into a contract whereby he parts with the custody and control of his child with a bona fide intention of advanc-ing the welfare of the child, there is nothing in such a contract illegal or contrary to public policy, and although, where such a contract is executory on both sides, the court cannot decree specific performance by reason of the want of mutuality, yet where the contract has been faithfully performed, so far as the father and child are concerned, so that their status has become altered, the court will if possible enforce in specie the performance of the contract by the other party to it. Where the parents of the plaintiff agreed with H. and his wife to give up to them their daughter, the plaintiff, then six years old, to bring up as their own, and make her sole heiress of their property at their death, and when it appeared that the agreement was bona fide intended by the father for the ultimate benefit of the plaintiff, and that the plaintiff had remained with H. and his wife for twenty years, rendering them efficient service, and it appeared H. intended her to have his property, and regarded the agreement as binding, so that he considered it unnecessary to make a will:-Held, that the agreement could be enforced against H.'s representative, and that it must be decreed accordingly. Held, also, that, inasmuch as, if the parents of the plaintiff had brought a suit upon the agreement in this case and recovered, they would be trustees for the pro-ceeds for her, the plaintiff might maintain the suit in her own name. Roberts v. Hall, 1 O.

Grandchild—Consideration—Services—Uncertain Contract — Implied Contract — Wages.]—Where a contract on the part of a testator, founded upon a valuable and sufficient consideration, that he will leave by his will to the other contracting party a sum of money as a legacy, is clearly made out, the representatives of the testator may be compelled to make good his obligation. But where the testator, the grandfather of the plaintiff.

promising that if she would remain with him until his death or her marriage, which ever event should first happen, he would provide for her during that time, and would make the same provision for her by will as he should make for his own daughters, took her from the home of her parents at the age of twelve, adopted her, and maintained her, while she worked for him, for nine years, but, although he made his daughters residuary devisees, left the plaintiff nothing by his will, and paid her nothing for her services, and she sued his executors for specific performance of the contract or promise and in the alternative for wages:—Held, that the case did not fall within the rule; the promise made and the con-sideration for it being both of too uncertain a character to entitle the plaintiff to come to the court for specific performance; but that the circumstances gave rise to an implied contract for the payment of wages, and took the case out of the ordinary rule that children are not to look for wages from their parents, or those in loco parentis, in the absence of special contract, whilst they form part of the household. Walker v. Boughner, 18 O. R.

S, a girl of fourteen, lived with her grandfather, who promised her that if she would remain with him until he died, or until she was married, he would provide for her by his will as amply as for his daughters. She lived with him until she was twenty-five, when she married. The grandfather died shortly after, leaving her by his will a much smaller sum than his daughters received, and she brought an action against the executors for specific performance of the agreement to provide for her as amply as for his daughters, or, in the alternative, for payment for her services during the eleven years. On the trial of the action it was proved that S, while living with her grandfather, had performed such services as tending cattle, doing field work, managing a reaping machine, and breaking in and driving wild and ungovernable horses:—Held, diffirming the decision in 21 A, R, 542, that the alleged agreement to provide for S, by will was not one of which the court could decree specific performance. Held, further, that S, was entitled to remuneration for her services, and $1,000 was not too much to allow her. Metiugan v, Smith, 21 S, C, R, 263.

Stranger-Evidence of Promise-Renuncration for Maintenance-Implied Promise-Arcuras-Statute of Limitations.]—The plainiff sought to recover from the executors of the will of a deceased person the whole of his estate, upon the strength of an oral agreement which she alleged was made between her and the deceased. Her evidence was that he said: "You give me a home as long as I live, and when I die you have what is left;" to which she answered "all right;" and he then said, "That is an agreement." The same story was repeated by the daughter and sonin-law of the plaintiff, who said they were present when the agreement was made. Two other witnesses swore that the deceased told that he had agreed to leave the plaintiff his property when he died. He was maintained by her for eight years after the alleged agreement was made, but made his will in favour of other persons:—Held, that, apart from the Statute of Frauds, the evidence was not such as the court could act upon by decreeing specific performance of the alleged agree.

ment in substitution for the actual will of the deceased, duly executed, and admitted to probate without objection from the plaintiff or any one else. Such an agreement must be supported by evidence leaving upon the mind of the court as little doubt as if a property executed will had been produced and proved before it. Held, however, that the plaintiff was entitled, under the circumstances, to remuneration for the board, lodging, and care of the deceased for six years, as upon an implied promise to pay a reasonable sum per annum. Such a promise was not a special promise to pay at death, and did not give the plaintiff a right to recover more than six years' arrears. Cross v. Cleary, 29 O. R. 542.

See Smith v. Smith, 29 O. R. 309, 26 A. R. 397.

VIII. OTHER AGREEMENTS.

Alimony Agreement—Sums Paid as Interim Alimony—Costs — Set.off.)—In May, 1875, a deed of separation was executed between defendant and plaintiff, husband and wife, by which defendant was to pay the plaintiff 8100 a year, quarterly, as maintenance. Afterwards in September, 1875, the plaintiff slopeting to the security offered, filed a bill for alimony, and defendant served a notice agreeing to allow her $100 a year, quarterly, for interim alimony. The plaintiff accepted the notice, and defendant paid this alimony until May, 1876, when a decree was made for specific performance of the agreement, but the plaintiff was ordered to pay defendant's costs:—Held that the plaintiff must give credit for the sums raid as interim alimony; and execution issued for the whole sum, payable under the agreement, were set aside; the costs payable by plaintiff were also ordered to be set off against the allowance, though such set-off was not asked for in the notice of motion. Maxwell v. Maxwell, 7 P. R. 63.

Award—Compensation for Land.]—Held, that the plaintiff was entitled to specific performance of an award giving him damages for his lands taken by the defendants; that the sum awarded was not so excessive as to shew any fraudulent or improper conduct on the part of the arbitrators; and quere, whether, if shewn, it would be a defence in such a proceeding. Norvall v. Canada Southern R. W. Ca., 5 A. R. 13.

Personalty, I—P. being the owner of certain lands, was served by a railway company with notice of expropriation and tendered a sum of money for right of way and damage, which he refused. Subsequently, on the application of the company, and with the consent of P.'s solicitor, the county Judge made an order fixing the amount of security to be given for damages, and the price of the land, and giving the company possession upon their paying the amount of security into a bank to the joint credit of P. and the company. The money was paid in pursuant thereto. An arbitration was then proceeded with, and the compensation to be paid for the value of the land taken and the damage to the remainder was fixed by the award in separate sums. Proceedings and appeals as to the costs kept the matter open, and the money remained to the credit of the joint account until P. died, after making his

The defendants were appointed trustees in place of the trustee named in the will. Upon a special case for the opinion of the court as to whether the plaintiff as executor of the personal estate or the defendants as trustees of the testator's land, was or were entitled to the sums awarded or any part thereof:—Held, that notice to treat having been given, and a claim made by the land owner, and refused by the company, and the money having been paid into court and possession taken by the company, these circumstances, under the authority of Nash v. Worcester Improvement Commissioners, 1 Jur. N.S. 973, would entitle the land owner to have specific performance against the company, and that therefore the land was converted into money, and the plaintiff as executor was entitled to the sums awarded. Hoskin v. Toronto General Trust Co., 12 O. R. 480.

Compromise of Suit — Answer — Crossrelief.]—A compromise of a suit having been entered into before answer, defendant may set up the compromise in his answer, and pray, by way of cross-relief, that it be specifically performed; and if plaintiff does not diligently proceed with the suit, defendant is entitled to move to dismiss for want of prosecution. Small v, Union Permanent Building Society, 6 P. R. 206.

Husband and Wife - Separation Deed.1-Held, that a married woman can not only bring an action against her husband in her own name, but she can also compromise it, or deal with it as she pleases, just as any other suitor can; and if the plaintiff and defendant have agreed to certain terms of settlement of such a suit, such contract can be enforced against the defendant, by the plaintiff suing in her own name without a next friend. And so in the present case, where, by way of compromise of such a suit, the parties to it agreed that the plaintiff should execute a proper deed of separation containing certain covenants by her, in return for which the defendant should convey to the plaintiff certain lands and pay certain moneys:-Held, the plaintiff was entitled to specific performance of this agreement; that it was not the separation which was being enforced, but the performance by the defendant of his contract. Vardon v. Vardon, 6 O. R. 719.

Covenant — Indemnity — Default Judgment.]—To an action by a legatee against the executors and residuary devisees of a testator, alleging an express agreement by all to pay interest upon a legacy, which by law was not recoverable, the executors pleaded, and judgment was given in their favour; but judgment went against the residuary devisees by default, and they afterwards filed a bill against the executors, claiming specific performance of a covenant by the executors to indemnify against the claim of such legatee:—Held, that their own default having been the cause of judgment passing against them, there was no ground for the residuary devisees coming into equity for indemnity. Crooks v. Torrance, 8 Gr. 220; S. C., 6 Gr. 518.

Restraint of Trade—Time.]—On the removal to other premises of the plaintiff, to whom the defendant had sold the goodwill of the business as an innkeeper, the owner of the property induced defendant to accept a new lease and to resume business, and agreed to save defendant harmless in respect of his obligation to the plaintiff not to carry on business there. The new lease was made on the 1st October, and between that date and the 17th November defendant provided new furniture. The plaintiff had some knowledge of the defendant's intention to resume business, and of his proceedings for that purpose. On the 19th November the plaintiff filed a bill to enforce defendant's obligation:—Held, that the lapse of time was not such as to be any defence. Mossop v. Mason, 17 Gr. 360, 18 Gr. 453.

Delivery of Promissory Notes—Remody at Laws.]—The purchaser of land paid a certain sum, gave a mortgage on other property of his formation proportion, and for the balance four notes were portion, and for the balance four notes were given, made by the purchaser and "such other given, made by the purchaser and law of the notes was delivered;—Held, that specific performance could not be obtained, the agreement for delivery of the notes being such as the court of chancery could not execute, and the remedy being at law for breach of the contract. DeGear v. Smith, 11 Gr. 570.

Judgment-Agreement to Assign-Damages-Interlocutory Judgment-Statement of Claim.]-The writ of summons was indorsed with a claim for specific performance of an agreement to assign a judgment "and for damages for breach of the said agreement." The defendant not appearing, interlocutory judgment was signed against him on the 16th April, 1898, for damages to be assessed. On the 12th May following a statement of claim was delivered, and on the 16th May the damages were assessed by a Judge of the high court at a sittings for the trial of actions: Held, that the interlocutory judgment was irregular; the plaintiffs, upon default of appearance, should have delivered a statement of claim, and, if no defence delivered, proceeded to judgment by motion. Held, also, that the plaintiffs had no right to treat the statement of claim delivered by them as nugatory, and proceed to assessment of damages on the writ of summons as forming the reon the writ of summons as forming the re-cord. Semble, that the plaintiffs could prop-erly claim specific performance, and, in the alternative, damages for breach of the agree-ment. Stuart v. McVicar, 18 P. R. 250.

Order in Council.] — The court cannot enforce against the Crown specific performance of an order in council. Simpson v. Grant, 5 Gr. 267.

Patent Rights—Interest in Partnership.] See Powell v. Peck, Peck v. Powell, 26 Gr. 322, 8 A. R. 498, 11 S. C. R. 494.

Railway Pass—Consideration for Conveyance of Land.]—The rector of Woodstock filed a bill against the Great Western R. W. Co, for specific performance of an alleged contract for a free pass for himself and his successors, as the consideration for certain rectory land conveyed by him to the company. The court of appeal, not being satisfied with the evidence of the alleged contract, and also deeming the contract to be open to various objections, reversed the decree, and ordered the bill to be dismissed with costs. Bettridge v. Great Western R. W. Co., 3 E. & A. 58.

Railway Working Arrangement-Confirmation — Bondholders.] — Held, that the votes of registered bondholders of a railway having been rejected, the arrangement made in this case, though confirmed by two-thirds of the actual shareholders present, or represented, was nevertheless not properly confirmed within the meaning of the statute, and an action to compel specific performance of the agreement was dismissed. Hendrie v. Grand Trunk R. W. Co., Trank R. W. Co., V. To-ronto, Grey, and Bruce R. W. Co., 2 O. R. 441.

Sale of Stock—Deficiency in Number of Stock—Render's Right to Specific Performance.1 — See Ganda Life Assurance Co. v. Peet General Manufacturing Co., 26 Gr. 477.

Security—Agreement to Give—Insolveney—Lien.]—The plaintiff, a bookkeeper and accountant, entered into the following agreement with the firm of R. & Co., in the form of a letter addressed to himself: "In consideration of you advancing us the sum of $5,000, we agree to give you collateral security, and to pay you interest on the same at the rate of eight per cent. per annum." The plaintiff advanced money for the benefit of the firm of R, & Co., but before he had received any security the firm made an assignment for the benefit of receitors. The plaintiff now sought to have it declared that he had a lien on the assets and effects of the firm, real and personal, and to have them assigned to him:—Held, that the agreement was incapable of specific performance by the court, for the reason that the terms were too vague and uncertain to be entertained. No kind of security was specified in the agreement, and parol evidence could not be given to supply the deficiency. The plaintiff was, however, entitled to have judgment at law against the firm of R. & Co. for $1,900 and interest and costs of action. DeGear v. Smith, 11 Gr. 570, followed. Foster v, Russell, 12 O. R. 136.

Statutes.]—See Attorney-General v. International Bridge Co., 6 A. R. 537.

IX. INJUNCTION IN CONNECTION WITH SPECI-FIC PERFORMANCE.

Allenation—Restraining.]—In a suit for the specific performance of an agreement for sale of lands, or to set aside a conveyance for fraud, the plaintiff is not of right entitled to injunction to restrain allenation, unless it is alleged by the bill and proved that the holder of the land threatens and intends to convey it. Kerr v. Hillman, 8 Gr. 285.

Building—Restraining—Dismissal of Bill—Subsequent Suit—Bur.]—An agreement for a lease provided for the building of a barn by the tenant. The assignce of the owner, considering that a barn which the tenant had begun to build was not such as the agreement required, filed a bill for an injunction, and for specific performance of the agreement generally. The answer insisted that the barn was such as defendant undertook to build. The court, being of opinion that the injunction was the real object of the suit, and that the plaintiff was not entitled to an injunction, dismissed the bill:—Held, that this decree was no bar to a subsequent suit by the tenant for specific performance of the agreement for a lease, Simmons v. Campbell, 17 Gr. 612.

Interpleader.]—Where money was placed in defondants' hands by plaintiffs, in pursuance of an agreement between plaintiffs and A., to be paid over by defendants to A., in whole or in part, on his making up certain accounts and performing his agreement with plaintiffs, but plaintiffs sued defendants for the money before they had come to any decision as to A.'s claim, which they were not determine upon:—Held, that they were not entitled to an interpleader. Cotton v. Cameron, 2 P. R. 62.

— Costs.]—A stakeholder allowed to retain, out of the moneys in his hands, a sum sufficient to cover his costs of an interpleader brought to try the right to the stakes. Gillespie v, Robertson, 14 C. L. J. 28.

Payment into Court.]—Although the rule of equity is, that money in the hands of a stakeholder held for others, whose rights are to be disposed of by the court, will usually be ordered into court, still it must be clear that some of the parties litigant are entitled to the fund or a portion of it. Where, therefore, the proceeds of a policy of insurance had been deposited with the attorney of a bank, to be held in trust for such bank, to pay off the liabilities to the bank of the party making such deposit, and were still in the hands of the attorney, and the depositor, without shewing what amount was due the bank, applied to have the money paid into court by the attorney, the court, under the circumstances, refused the application. Corbett v. Meyers, 10 Gr. 36.

Sum in Hand—Costs.]—Where a building society by their answer stated a sum of money to be in their hands as stakeholders, which was smaller than at the hearing they were willing to admit, the court refused them their costs of the suit. Graham v. Toms. 25 Gr. 184.

I. Generally.

Code—Reference to Earlier Law.]—An appeal to earlier law and decisions for the purpose of interpreting the provisions of a statutory code, can only be justified on some special ground, such as the doubtful import or previously acquired technical meaning of the language used therein. Robinson v. Canadian Pacific R. W. Co., [1892] A. C. 481.

Ejusdem Generis.]—When an Act of parliament begins with words which describe things of an inferior degree and concludes with general words, the latter shall not be extended to anything of a higher degree. Williams v. Town of Cornwall, 32 O. R. 255.

Expressio Unius — Application.]—See Dain v. Gossage, 6 P. R. 103; Re Lincoln Election, 2 A. R. 324.

Imperial Acts—Decisions on.]—The decision in Humberstone v. Henderson, 3 P. R. 40—that a plea that the land was not the plaintiff's raised the question of title to land, and that the plaintiff was therefore entitled to full costs without a certificate—being upon a point of practice, was adhered to, though placing a construction on our statute different from that put upon substantially similar language in the English Act. Coulson v. O'Connell, 29 C. P. 341.

Held, in so far as the Government Railways Act, 1881, re-enacts the provisions of the Lands Clauses Consolidation Act, 8 & of the Lands Clauses consonation Act, o & 9 Vict, c, 18 (Imp.), and the Railway Clauses Consolidation Act, 8 & 9 Vict, c, 20 (Imp.), where the latter statutes have been authoritatively construed by a court of appeal in England, such construent by a court of appeal in England, such construction should be adopted by the courts in Canada. Trimble v. Hill, 5 App. Cas. 342, and City Bank v. Barrow, 5 App. Cas. 664, referred to. Paradis v. The Queen, 1 Ex. C. R. 191.

The phrase "injury done" in 31 Vict. c. 12, s. 40 (D.), is commensurate with and has the same intendment as the phrase "injuriously affected" in 8 & 9 Vict, c. 18, s. 68, the Imperial Lands Clauses Consolidation Act, and, in so far as the similarity extends, cases decided under the Imperial Act may be cited with authority in construing the Canadian statute. McPherson v. The Queen, 1 Ex. C.

Language Used in Parliament.] -Quere, as to the admissibility, with a view to the construction of a statute, of the language used by the secretary of state for the colonies in introducing it in parliament. Smiles v. Belford, 1 A. R. 436.

Act—" Railway." |—The word "railway" as used in (free) item 173 of the Tariff Act of 1887, 50 & 51 Vict, c, 39, does not include street railways. (2.) In construing a revenue Act regard should be had to the general fiscal policy of the country at the time the Act was passed. When that is a matter of his-tory, reference must be had to the sources of such history, which are not only to be found in the Acts of parliament, but in the proceedings of parliament, and in the debates and discussions which take place there and elsewhere. This is a different matter from construing a particular clause or provision of the Act by reference to the intention of the mover or promoter of it expressed while the bill or resolution on which it was founded was before the house, which cannot be done under the rules which govern the construction of stat-utes. Toronto Railway Co. v. The Queen, 4 Ex. C. R. 262.

New Rights-Specific Remedies.]-Where new rights are given by a statute with specific remedies for their enforcement, the remedy is confined to those specifically given. And where a wife obtained a magistrate's order under 51 Vict. c. 23, s. 2 (O.), for payment by her husband of a weekly sum for her support :- Held, that her remedies were limited to those given by the statute, and that an action in the division court for arrears of payments under the order could not be maintained against the husband. Re Sims v. Kelly, 20 O. R. 291.

Obsolete Act—Non-user.]—See Marmora Foundry Co. v. Murray, 1 C. P. 29.

Procedure Acts - Conferring Jurisdiction.]-Statutes regulating the practice and procedure of a court apply only to matters within its jurisdiction, and cannot be called in aid to give jurisdiction where it is in question. Ahrens v. McGilligat, 23 C. P. 171.

Statutory Remedy.]-As to when a right given by statute may be enforced by action, and when a particular remedy given by the and when a particular remedy given by the statute excludes the right to sue. Strict or Liberal Construction—Dedication of Land. |—It is the duty of the court where it finds legislation intended to legalize the dedication of property to laudable public purposes, to construe the Act so as to enlarge rather than limit its operation. Butland v. Gillespie, 16 O. R. 486.

- Disqualification for Municipal Office —Liquor License,]—The Act disqualifying a licensee for the sale of liquor from holding municipal office should be construed strictly, and should not be extended to the partner and should not be extended to the partner of a person lawfully holding a license in his own name. Regina ex rel. Brine v. Booth, 3 O. R. 144, 9 P. R. 452. See Regina ex rel. Clancy v. Conway, 46 U.

C. R. 85.

Intoxicating Liquors.]-R. S. O. 1887 c. 194, s. 122, which imposes a liability in certain eventualities on innkeepers who give liquor to persons who thereby become intoxicated, is a remedial measure, and should receive a liberal construction. Trice v. Robinson, 16 O. R. 433.

Registrars' Fees, |-The sections of R. S. O. 1877 c. 111, relating to registrars' fees, being in derogation of the rights of registrars as they previously existed under the common law, must be construed strictly. Re Ingersoll, Gray v. Ingersoll, 16 O. R. 194.

companies for neglect to carry goods, &c., but the Act does not apply to the Great Western R. W. Co., the defendants. By s. 5 of 34 Vict. c. 43 (D.), this sub-section "is here-by amended by adding thereto the following words: 'From which action the company shall not be relieved by any notice, condition, or declaration, if the damage arises from any negligence or omission of the company or of its servants';" and by s. 7, "the provisions of this Act" are made applicable to every rail-way company:—Held, that the sub-section of the earlier Act, as thus amended, did not apply to defendants; but that the effect of the ply to detendants; but that the effect of the later Act was merely to add the newly enacted words to the sub-section; and "the provisions of this Act," therefore, did not include the amendment. Allan v. Great Western R. W. amendment. Allan y Co., 33 U. C. R. 483.

Earlier Lease — Forfeiture—Computation of Time.]—By R. S. N. S., 5th ser., c. 7, the lessee of mining areas in Nova Scotia was obliged to perform a certain amount of work thereon each year on pain of forfeiture of his lease, which, however, could only be effected through certain formalities. By an amendment in 1889 (52 Vict. c. 23), the lessee is permitted to pay in advance an annual rental in lieu of work, and by s.-s. (c) the owner of any leased area may, by duplicate agreement in writing with the commissioner of mines, avail himself of the provisions of such annual payment, and "such advance pay-ments shall be construed to commence from ments shall be construed to combine from the nearest recurring anniversary of the date of the lease." By s. 7 all leases are to con-tain the provisions of the Act respecting payment of rental and its refund in certain cases, and by s. 8 said s. 7 was to come into force in two months after the passing of the Act. Before the Act of 1889 was passed a lease was issued to E. dated 10th June, 1889, for twentyone years from 21st May, 1889. On 1st 1891, a rental agreement under the amending Act was executed, under which E. paid the rent for his mining areas for three years, the last payment being in May, 1893. On 22nd May, 1894, the commissioner de-clared the lease forfeited for non-payment of rent for the following year, and issued a prospecting license to T. for the same areas. E. tendered the year's rent on 9th June, 1894, and an action was afterwards brought by the and an action was atterwards brought by the attorney-general, on relation of E., to set aside said license as having been illegally and improvidently granted:—Held, that the phrase "nearest recurring anniversary of the date of the lease," in s.-s. (c) of s. 1. Act of 1889, is equivalent to "next or next ensuing anni-versary," and, the lease being dated on 10th June, no rent for 1894 was due on 22nd May of that year, at which date the lease was de-clared forfeited, and E.'s tender on 9th June was in time. Attorney-General v. Sheraton, Nas in time. Attorney-General V. Sneraton, 2S N. S. Reps. 492; approved and followed. Held, further, that, though the amending Act provided for forfeiture, without prior formalities, of the lease, in case of non-payment of rent, such provision did not apply ment of rent, such provision did not apply to leases existing when the Act was passed, in cases where the holders executed the agreement to pay rent thereunder in lieu of work. The forfeiture of E.'s lease was, therefore, void for want of the formalities prescribed by the original Act. Temple v. Attorney-General for Nova Scotia, 27 S. C. R. 355.

Effect of—Addition of New Sub-section— Provise in Earlier Sub-section.] — By the Municipal Act of 1866, 29 & 30 Viet. c. 51, s. 349, municipal corporations were authorized to pass by-laws to take stock in or aid rank-way companies, but by s., s., 4 of that section, no corporation should subscribe for stock or incur any liability for these purposes, nuless the by-law should receive the assent of the electors. By 34 Vict. c. 30, s. 6 (O.), a sub-section was directed to be added to s. 349, to pass by-laws to take stock in or aid railsection was directed to be added to s. 540, authorizing the corporations to pass by-laws for granting bonuses to any railway and to any persons establishing manufactures, and to issue debentures for raising money to meet such bonuses:—Held, that the additional subsection could not be read as coming after s.-s. 4, so as to exempt by-laws under it from requiring the assent of the electors. Regina v. County of Wentworth, 22 C. P. 300.

- Time for Commencing Proceedings under Earlier Act-Railway Arbitration.] The mandamus nisi set out certain of the provisions of 18 Vict, c. 180, and 20 Vict, c. provisions of 18 Vict. c. 180, and 20 Vict. c. 146, by which the prosecutors claimed the right to have an arbitration to settle the amount of their claim against the Great Western R. W. Co., by the erection of a permanent bridge over the river Humber. The company returned to the writ, that the prosecutions of the province of the pro cutors had not commenced proceedings to entitle them to a reference within six months after the passing of the first Act. The prosecutors demurred, contending that the provisions of the first Act had been altered and extended by the second Act, and that they had done all that the second Act required of them to establish their claim to an arbitration:— Held, that, under 18 Vict, c. 180, the prosecutors would have been barred, not having commenced proceedings within six months commenced proceedings within six months after the passing of that Act; that 20 Vict. c. 146 having extended its provisions much beyond those of 18 Vict. c. 180, and extended the rights thereunder beyond those tended the rights thereunder beyond those explained in s. 1 to be within the meaning of the words "private rights," the rights defined in 20 Vict. c. 146 were not restricted by the provisions of 18 Vict. to those only who had commenced proceedings within six months of the passing of the latter Act; that the notice required to be given within three months after the passing of 20 Vict. was the only condition precedent to the prosecutors' right to recover. Regina v. Great Western R. W. Co., 14 C. P. 462.

III. CROWN, WHEN BINDING ON

Attachment of Debts.]—The garnishee clauses of the C. L. P. Act do not extend to the Queen. The Crown cannot, therefore, proceed under them to attach a debt. Regina v. Benson, 2 P. R. 350.

Clause 46 of s. 7 of the Interpretation Act, R. c. 1, whereby it is provided that no provision or enactment in any Act shall affect in any manner or way whatsoever the rights of Her Majesty, her heirs or successors, un-less it is expressly stated therein that Her Majesty shall be bound thereby, is not limited or qualified by an exception such as that menfromed in The Magdalen College Case, 11 Rep. 70b, "that the King is impliedly bound by statutes passed for the general good or to prevent fraud, injury, or wrong." The Queen v. Pouliot, 2 Ex. C. R. 49.

IV. EXPRESSIONS IN STATUTES - MEANING OF.

"And "-" Or."]-Although, by the words of the provincial statute 51 Geo, III. c. 9, s. 6, against usury, contracts, bonds, &c., are declared void only when usurious interest is deciared void only when usurious interest re-reserved and taken, yet the court will con-strue "and" to be "or," particularly as 7 Wm. IV. c. 5, s. 3, declares in the preamble "that by law all contracts and assurances whatever for payment of money made for an usurious consideration are utterly void;" and therefore a plea to an action on a promissory note, that the note was given to secure a debt and was for an usurious consideration for forbearance, was held good, although it did not state that the usurious interest was paid or received. Boag v. Lewis, 1 U. C. R. 357.

"As Soon as Possible."] — See The Queen v. The Beatrice, 5 Ex. C. R. 9.

"Herein Contained "-Section or Statute.]—Held, that the words "herein contained," in 16 Vict. c. 183, s. 11, must be applied only to the clause in which they occur. and not to the whole Act-that being in this and not to the whole Act—that being in this case the reasonable, and in general the more obvious, though not the inevitable, construction. McGill v. Counties of Peterborough and Victoria, 12 U. C. R. 44.

V. FORMS AND SCHEDULES.

1. Generally.

The court will not be punctilious in adhering to the letter of the statute where there is reasonable accuracy and no possible prejudice resulting from literal inaccuracy in the frame of a warrant to sell for arrears of taxes. Fitzgerald v. Wilson, 8 O. R. 559.

2. Particular Cases.

Administrator's Bond - Surrogate Rules.]—The Surrogate Courts Act, C. S. U. C. c. 16, requires a bond from administrators, "conditioned for the due collecting, getting in, and administering the personal estate of the deceased," and enacts that such bond shall the deceased, and enacts that such bold shall be in the form prescribed by the rules and orders referred to in s. 18 of the Act. These rules were those made under the Surrogate Courts Act, 1858, which by the section refer-red to "are hereby continued;"—Held, that such rules being thus sanctioned by the legislature, a bond in accordance with the form prescribed by them must be held sufficient, though it was alleged not to comply with the statute. Bell v. Mills, 25 U. C. R. 508.

Affidavit - Attachment - Division Court.] -Semble, as there is a material difference between the enacting clause and the form of an affidavit given by the Act as to the conditions on which an attachment may issue from the division court, that the former must govern. Boyle v. Ward, 11 U. C. R. 416.

Production of Documents - Chancery Orders.]-Where an affidavit was a printed copy of the form in schedule K. to the orders, and referred to documents in the various schedules annexed, but no documents were set out in the schedules, the affidavit was directed to be taken off the files with costs. Rogers v. Crookshank, 4 C. L. J. 45.

Conviction - Liquor License Act.]-On demurrer to an avowry justifying under a conviction for selling spirituous liquors without license, and a distress warrant issued thereon: -Held, a sufficient answer to the objections suggested, that the conviction followed the form prescribed by C. S. C. 103, which was intended as a guide to magistrates and to prevent failure of justice from trivial objections. Reid v. McWhinnie, 27 U. C. R. 289. 6709

Conflict of Provisions.]—The conviction and warrant of commitment imposed hard labour, in addition to imprisonment, which was not authorized by either the Temperance Act or 37 Vict. c. 32, for the first offence; but it was awarded for the first offence by the forms in the schedule of 40 Vict. c. 18, although there was no mention of it in any part of that statute, and s. 36 of that Act enacts that the forms in the schedules shall be sufficient in all cases thereby respectively provided for:—Held, that the imposition of hard labour was not warranted by its mere insertion in the schedules, but that the conviction and warrant could be amended by striking out these words under 40 Vict. c. 18, s. 23 (0.) Regina v. Lake, 7 P. R. 215.

Declaration — Bills and Notes.] — The form of declaration given in 3 Vict. c. 8 must be adopted with reference to the mode in which the several parties to the bill or note make themselves liable. Bank of Upper Canada v. Grupnne, 4 U. C. R. 145.

Diversion of Water.]—The form of declaration given in the C.L.P. Act. 1856, for diverting water from plaintiff's mill, is applicable only when the evidence will sustain the claim in that form. Tucker v. Paren, 7 C. P. 269.

Indictment—Arson—Intent.]—An indictment for arson is sufficient without alleging any intent, there being no such averment in the statutory form; but an intent to injure or defraud must be shewn on the trial. Regina v. Cronin, 36 U. C. R. 342.

Mistake in Schedule — Seigneuric—Recognition—Prescription.] — In an action of ejectment by the Crown, it appeared that the appellant company derived title through a grant made in 1691 by the French government, which gave no seigneurie over the land in dispute, but only a right to make establishments for hunting and fishing within certain limits; that an Ordonnance in 1733, together with the action of the French Crown thereunder, did not create or recognize any title in the heirs of the grantee to such seigneurie; that down to 1854 there was no evidence of either its creation or recognition by the British Crown; but that in 1854 the Canadian Act 18 Vict. c. 3 (amended by subsequent Acts) recognized that there was a seigneurie of Mingan, being part of the disputed land, the boundaries whereof were conclusively established by a schedule authorized by this Act:—Held, that the court below was right in dismissing the suit as regards the scheduled lands. If a mistake had been made, the legislature alone could correct it; a court of law must give effect to the enactment as it stands. The law of prescription did not apply. Labrador Co. v. The Queen, [1893] A. C. 104.

Mortgage — Short Form—Covenants— Numbering.]—Held, that the provisions and covenants were not deprived of the meaning given to them by the Act respecting short forms of mortgages, because they were not numbered as in the schedule to it. Northey v. Trumcnhier, 30 U. C. R. 426.

Recognizance — Appeal — Quarter Sessions.]—The form of recognizance to try an appeal to the quarter sessions given in the schedule to C. S. C. c. 103, is sufficient, though the condition differs in form from that provided for by c. 99, s. 117. In re Wilson, 23 U. C. R. 301.

Warrant for Tax Sale.] — See Fitzgerald v. Wilson, S O. R. 559.

VI. IMPERATIVE OR DIRECTORY.

Assessment Act.]—Considerations as to what requirements of the Tax Acts are imperative, and what are merely directory. Cotter v. Sutherland, Stephens v. Jacques, 18 C. P. 337.

Delivery of Roll to Collector.]—Section 120 of the Assessment Act, R. S. O. 1887 c. 193, provides that the clerk shall deliver the roll to the collector on or before the 1st October, or such other day as may be prescribed by a by-law of the local municipality; but no by-law was passed, and the roll for 1886 was not delivered by the clerk to the defendant until about 1st January, 1887:—Held, that the provisions of s. 120 are directory, and not imperative; and the omission to deliver the roll within the prescribed time had not the effect of preventing the collector from proceeding to collect the taxes mentioned in the roll as soon as it was delivered to him, or of rendering such proceedings invalid. Lewis v. Brady, 17 O. R. 377.

By s. 119 of the Ontario Assessment Act, 55 Vict. c. 48, provision is made for the preparation every year by the clerk of the municipality of a "collector's roll," containing a statement of all assessments to be made for municipal purposes in the year, and s. 120 provides for a similar roll with respect to taxes payable to the treasurer of the Province. At the end of s. 120 is the following: "The clerk shall deliver the roll, certified under bis hand, to the collector on or before the lst October:"—Held, affirming the decision in 21 A. R. 379, that the provision as to delivery of the roll to the collector was imperative, and its non-delivery was a sufficient answer to a suit against the collector for failure to collect the taxes. Held, also, that such delivery was a successary in the case of the roll for municipal taxes provided for in the previous section as well as that for provincial taxes. Town of Trenton v. Dyer, 24 8, C. R. 474.

— Delivery of Roll to Treasurer—Arroars.]—The provisions of s. 135 of the Ontario Assessment Act (R. S. O. 1887 c. 193) in respect to taxes on the roll being uncollectable, providing for what the account of the collector in regard to the same shall shew on delivery of the roll to the treasurer, and requiring the collector to furnish the clerk of the municipality with a copy of the account, are imperative. Judgments in 26 A. R. 459 and 30 O. R. 16 affirmed. City of Toronto v. Caston, 30 S. C. R. 390 S. C. R. 390.

— Entries on Roll — Copies — Certificates.]—The provisions of s. 121 of the Consolidated Assessment Act as to entering on the roll, by the clerk of the municipality, opposite to each lot or parcel all the rates or charges with which the same is chargeable, in separate columns for each rate, is imperative, and non-compliance therewith renders such roll a nullity. And where the amount of such rates or taxes for one year was entered on the roll in one sum, and the roll was so transmitted to the treasurer of the county, a tax sule founded thereon was held invalid. The provision of s. 144 of the said Act, which requires a true copy of the lists returned by the assessors to the clerk to be furnished to the county treasurer, certified to by the clerk under the seal of the corporation, and that of s. 142, which requires an assessor's certificate to each list, are also imperative. The principle of the decision in Town of Trenton v. Dyer, 21 A. R. 379, followed. Love v. Webster, 26 O. R. 453.

Tax Collector—Bond.]—Section 60 of 13 & 14 Vict. c. 67, requiring the collector to give a bond, as required by by-law, is directory, and not so imperative as to make the collection of the taxes illegal where a bond from the collector's surely had been given to the treasurer instead of the town by its corporate name, and no by-law had been passed by the corporation under that section. Judd v. Read, 6 C. P. 362.

Tax Salc — Duties of Assessor— Clerk.] — The duties of an assessor and a township elerk under R. S. O. 1877 c. 180, ss. 109, 110, and 111 are imperative, not directory merely, and their performance is conditional to the validity of a tax sale. Donovan v. Hogan, 15 A. R. 432.

Tax 8atc—List of Lands Liable.]—
Where a township trensurer had neglected to furnish the clerk of the municipality with a list of lands liable to sale for taxes, and no such list or copy thereof was delivered to the assessor, as provided by s. 108 of R. S. O. 1877 c. 180, the court set the sale aside. Mc-Kay v, Ferguson, 26 Gr. 236.

By s. 128 of the Assessment Act, 32 Vict. c. 36 (O.), the warden is required to return one of the lists of the lands to be sold for taxes transmitted to him, &c., to the treasurer, with a warrant thereto amexed, under the hand of the warden and seal of the county, &c.:—Held, that the section was merely directory, and was sufficiently complied with by the list being embodied in the warrant, instead of being annexed thereto. Church v. Fenton, 28 C. P., 384.

See S. C., 4 A. R. 159, 5 S. C. R. 239.

Tax Salc—Warrant—Patented and Unpatented Lands.]—Held, that 16 Vict. c. 182, ss. 55 and 56, C. S. U. C. e. 55, requiring the county treasurer in his warrant for the sale of lands to distinguish those patented from those under lease or license of occupation, is compulsory; and that sales effected under a warrant omitting such particulars are void. Hall v. Hüll, 2 E. & A. 569, 22 U. C. R. 578.

Boundary Line Commissioners—Piling Decision.]—Section 2 of 3 Vict. c. 11. which provides that every judgment and final decision of the boundary line commissioners shall be filed with the registrar of the county where such boundary shall be situate, is directory only, and the omission to file will not affect the validity of the judgment. Regina v. Rose, 12 U. C. R. 637.

Canada Temperance Act — Previous Conviction.]—The provisions of s. 115 of the Canada Temperance Act are directory only. Regina v. Brown, 16 O. R. 41. Company—Subscription Books,]—Action for calls under 1 Wm, IV, c. 12, arainst defendant as a stockholder:—Held, that the said Act was not obsolete for non-user; and that the clause of the said Act requiring the books of subscription to be opened within two months is only directory. Marmora Foundry Co, v, Murray, I C. P. 29.

Customs Act — Regulations — Order in Council—Drawback,]—By the Customs Act, 1877, 40 Vict. c. 10, s. 125, clause 11, it was enacted, inter alia, that the governor in council might make regulations for granting a drawback of the whole or part of the duty paid on materials used in Canadian manufactures. In 1881, by an amendment made by 44 Vict. c. 11, s. 11, the governor in council was further empowered to make regulations for granting a certain specific sum in lieu of any such drawback. (See also the Customs Act, 1883, s. 230, clause 12, and R. S. C. c. 32, s. 245m.) By an order of the governor-general in council, dated the 15th May, 1880, it was provided as follows: "A drawback may be granted and paid by the minister of customs on materials used in the construction of ships or vessels built and registered in Canada, and built and exported from Canada unada, and built and exported from Canada under governor's pass, for sale and registry in any other country since the 1st January, 1880, at the rate of 70 cents per registered ton on iron kneed ships or vessels classed for 9 years, at the rate of 65 cents per registered ton on iron kneed ships or vessels classed for 7 years, and at the rate of 55 cents per registered ton on all ships or vessels not iron kneed." By an order in council of the 15th November, 1883, an addition was made to the rates stated "of ten cents per net registered ton on said vessels when built and registered subsequent to July, 1893:"—Held, that a petition of right would not lie upon a refusal by the controller of customs to grant a drawback in any particular case. Semble, that the provision in an order in council that the drawback "may be granted" should not be construed as an imperative direction; it not being a case in which the authority given by the use of the word "may" is coupled with a legal duty to exercise such authority. Matton v. The Queen, 5 Ex. C. R. 401.

Ditches and Watercourses Act-Award—Appeal, I—The provisions of s. s. 6 of s. 22 of 57 Vict. c. 55 (O.), the Ditches and Watercourses Act, 1894, which require the Judge of the county court to hear and deternine an appeal from an award thereunder within two months after receiving notice thereof, are merely directory. Exchequer Court Act—Duty of Judge of Supreme Court.)—Where a petition of right has been demurred to and judgment obtained on such demurrer before a Judge of the supreme court, acting as Judge of the exchequer court, prior to 50 & 51 Vict. c. 16, it was held to be a case fully heard and determined, and not one coming within the class of cases referred to as being "partly heard" in s. 50 of that statute: and the Judge who heard the demurrer refused a motion to amend the petition, made after the passage of such Act, on the ground of want of jurisdiction. Inquest-Consent of Crown Attorney.]-Held, that the meaning of s. 12 (2) of R. S. O. 1897 c. 97 was that the coroner should not, without the consent of the Crown attorney, direct a post-mortem examination for the pur pose of determining whether an inquest should be held, but only where the coroner had determined to hold an inquest and gave the direction as part of the proceedings incident to it; but if the provision should be read differently, it was at all events merely directory, and did not render an act done by a surgeon in good faith, under the direction of a coroner, unlawful because the coroner had neglected to obtain the prescribed consent, where the act would be lawful if the consent had been ob-Semble, also, that if the verdict for tained. the plaintiff had been allowed to stand, the amount of damages assessed, $600, was excessive. Davidson v. Garrett, 30 O. R. 653.

Joint Stock Companies Act—Calls.]—An otherwise valid transfer of shares allotted to the transferor, upon which he has not paid anything, no calls having been made at the time of transfer, is not invalid because the ten per centum upon allotted stock, directed by s. 45 of the Joint Stock Companies Act, R. S. O. 1887 c. 157, to be "called in and made payable within one year from the incorporation of the company," has not been paid. The last mentioned section is directory merely, Ontario Investment Association v. Sippi, 20 O. R. 440.

Justice of the Peace—Adjournment.]—Semble, that the provisions of s. 46 of 32 & 33 Vict. c. 31 (D.), that no adjournment shall be "for more than one week," are directory merely. Regina v. French, Regina v. Robertson, 13 O. R. 80, distinguished and not followed. Regina v. Heffernan, 13 O. R. 616.

Law Society—Inquiry—Procedure.]—R. S. O. 1887 c. 145, s. 36, giving power to the benchers of the Law Society of Upper Canada to examine witnesses under oath, is not imperative. Hands v. Law Society of Upper Canada, 16 O. R. 625, 17 A. R. 41.

Liquor License Act—Time for Granting Licenses, 1— The New Brunswick Liquor License Act, 1887, provides that "all applications for license, other than in cities and incorporated towns, shall be presented at the annual meeting of the council of the municipality and shall then be taken into consideration, and in cities and incorporated towns, at a meeting to be held not later than the first day of April in each and every year." The interpretation clause provides that in the city of St. John the expression "council" means the mayor, who has the power given to a municipal council. It is also provided that when anything is required to be done at, on, or before a meeting of council, and no other date is fixed therefor, the mayor may fix the date for doing the same in the city of St. John:—Held, that the provision requiring licenses to be taken into consideration not later than the first day of April is directory only, and licenses granted in St. John are not invalid by reason of the same being granted after that date. Danaher v. Peters, O'Regan v. Peters, 17 S. C. R. 44.

Municipal Act — By-law—Registration.]
—Section 351 of R. S. O. 1887 c. 184, which requires a by-law creating a debt by the issuing of debentures for a longer term than one year to be registered within a fortnight from the final passing thereof, is merely directory, Re Farlinger and Viltage of Morrisburg, 16 O. R. 722.

The provisions of s. 351 of the Municipal Act, R. S. O. 1887 c. 1844, are imperative, and not merely directory; and if a local improvement by-law is not registered within two weeks after its final passing, a ratepayer may shew that it is invalid, and successfully resist payment of the local improvement tax. Succeny v. Corporation of Smith's Falls, 22 A. R. 429.

— Local Improvement Debt—By-law.] —See Ward v. Town of Welland, 31 O. R. 303.

Road Company—Notice of Commencement of Work—Pleading, |—The clause in 16 Vict, c. 190, s. 3, that "no company formed under this Act shall commence any work until thirty days after the directors have served a written notice upon the head of the municipality, in the jurisdiction of which such local or other work connected therewith is intended to pass or to be constructed, "&c., is directory and not compulsory. And in this action against a road company by plaintiff for compelling him to pay toll on their line of road:—Held, on demurrer, that defendants were not obliged to plead the giving of notice directed by the statute, but that the plaintiff was obliged to reply the same if he wished to dispute the right of defendants to compel the payment of toll. Couse v. Hunnan, 14 C. P. 26.

Ship—Certificate of Ownership.]—A certificate of ownership of a vessel under 8 Vict. c. 5, s. 2, is not invalid because the additions of the owners are omitted, the statute on that point being directory only. Gildersleeve v. Corby, 15 U. C. R. 150.

Telegraph Company—Evidence of Debt—Signature.]—The statute under which a telegraph company was incorporated, enacted that all evidences of debt issued by them should be issued and signed by the president and treasurer:—Semble, that this was directory merely, and that, even if the secretary, who signed in this case, was not the treasurer as well, it would be sufficient. City Bank v. Chency, 15 U. C. R. 400.

Voters' List — Certificate.]—The list of voters required to be posted to various persons under 37 vict. c. 4 (0.), was prepared and certified by the clerk of the municipality, ready for transmission on a certain day, but he died before that day came, and they were in fact transmitted by his successor without any alteration in the certificate. They were regular in every respect, with this exception:

—Held, that, as s. 3 of 37 Vict. c. 4 was only directory, and as the object of the statute was fulfilled to all intents and purposes, the list was sufficient to give jurisdiction to the county Judge to revise it. In re Goderich Voters' Lists, 6 P. R. 213.

Description of Property.] — The right of a voter, whose name has been entered on the voters' list, to exercise the franchise, is not destroyed under 32 Vict. c. 21, ss. 5, 7 (O.). by the want of a sufficient or any description of the real property on which his qualification depends. The provision requiring such description to be inserted is directory only, and does not make it essential to the right to vote; and this, notwithstanding the enactment in s.-s. 3 of s. 7, that the time therein mentioned should be directory only, the maxim expressio unius, &c., not being applicable. Re Lincoln Election, 2 A. R. 324.

See St. Michael's College v. Merrick, 1 A. R. 520; Mitchell v. Mulholland, 14 C. L. J. 55; Shaw v. Crawford, 4 A. R. 371.

VII. IMPERATIVE OR PERMISSIVE.

Assessment Act — Time—" May."]—By s. 52 of the Assessment Act, R. S. O. 1887 c. 193, where the assessment in cities, towns, &c., is made by virtue of a by-law passed under that section, in the latter part of the year, such assessment may be adopted by the council of the following year:—Held, that "may," as used here, is permissive only, and that the council of the following year are given the option of having a new assessment. Overwhelmingly strong reasons of convenience in favour of having one assessment instead of two might justify the court in giving to "may" the force of "must." Re Dwyer and Town of Port Arthur, 21 O. R. 175.

Canada Temperance Act—Penalty—"May."]—There having been numerous convictions of the respondent, with accumulated penalties amounting to $1,400, for having on various occasions sold intoxicating liquor, and thereby committed offences under the Canada Temperance Act of 1804. a certiorari was granted in one case by the superior court, on the ground that, by the true construction of s. 17, which provides that two or more offences by the same person may be included in the same complaint, a penalty of $100 was sufficient for all offences under the Act during the limitation period of three months prescribed by s. 15:—Held, that, in the absence of express words to that effect, s. 17 must be construed as permissive merely, and not imperative. Wentworth v. Mathicu, [1900] A. C. 212.

Interpretation Act—Declaratory Section—"Shall."]—The Interpretation Act, 31 Vict. c. 1, s. 6, s.-s. 2 (O.), enacting that the word "shall" is to be construed as imperative, does not introduce any new rule, but is declaratory only of that established by judicial decision. Re Lincoln Election, 2 A. R, 324.

Municipal Act—By-law — Passing.]—In s. 111 of the Manitoba Municipal Act, 1884, which provides that municipal corporations may pass by-laws in relation to matters therein enumerated, the word "may" is permissive only, and does not prohibit corporations from exercising their jurisdiction otherwise than by by-law. Bernardin v. Municipality of North Dufferin, 19 S. C. R. 581.

The words "may convey," in 36 Vict. c. 48, s. 426, are compulsory. Cameron v. Wait, 3 A. R. 175.

Railway Subsidy—" Shall be Lawful"— Crown—Discretion.]—Where money is granted by the legislature, and its application is prescribed in such a way as to confer a discretion upon the Crown, no trust is imposed enforceable against the Crown by petition of right. The appellant railway company alleged by petition of right that, by virtue of 51 & 52 Vict. c. 91, the lieutenant-governor in council was authorized to grant 4,000 acres of land per mile for thirty miles of the Hereford railway; that by an order-in-council dated 6th August, 1888, the land subsidy was converted into a money subsidy, the 9th sec-tion of said c, 91, 51 & 52 Vict., enacting that "it shall be lawful," &c., to convert; that the company completed the construction of their line of railway, relying upon the said subsidy and order-in-council, and built the railway in accordance with the Act 51 & 52 Vict. c. 91, and the provisions of the Railway Act of Canada, 51 Vict. c. 29, and they claimed to be entitled to the sum of $49,000, balance due on said subsidy. The Crown demur-red on the ground that the statute was permissive only, and by exception pleaded, inter alia, that the money had been paid by orderin-council to the sub-contractors for work necessary for the construction of the road; that the president had by letter agreed to accept an additional subsidy on an extension of their line of railway to settle difficulties, and signed a receipt for the balance of $6,500 due on account of the first subsidy. The petition of right was dismissed:—Held, that the statute and documents relied on did not create a liaand documents reflect on the documents reflect a hability on the part of the Crown to pay the money voted to the appellant company enforceable by petition of right; but, assuming it did, the letter and receipt signed by the presi-dent of the company did not discharge the Crown from such obligation to pay the sub-sidy, and payment by the Crown of the subsnoy, and payment by the Crown of the sub-contractors' claim out of the sub-sidy money, without the consent of the company, was a misappropriation of the sub-sidy. Hereford R. W. Co. v. The Queen, 24 S. C. R. 1.

Water—Diversion—Prejudice of Rights of Others.]—Wherever, according to the sound construction of a statute, the legislature has authorized a proprietor to make a particular use of his land, and the authority given is in the strict sense of law permissive merely, and not imperative, the legislature must be held to have intended that the use sanctioned is not to be in prejudice of the common law right of others. Metropolitan Asylums District v. Hill, 6 App. Cas. 193, approved. The legislature of British Columbia authorized the defendants to irrigate their soil by the diversion of water from an adjacent stream, by conveying it over lands which did not belong to them, subject to provision for compensation:—Held, that the privilege was not meant to be imperative, nor intended to exclude all right of action by neighbouring proprietors for injury done to their lands, save in the case of negligence. Canadian Pacific R. W. Co. v. Parke, [1889] A. C. 535.

STATUTES.

VIII. IN PARI MATERIA.

Behring Sea Award Act, 1894—Seal Fishery (North Pacific) Act, 1893.]—Held, that the Seal Fishery (North Pacific) Act, 1893. and the Behring Sea Award Act, 1894, being statutes in pari materià, are to be read as one Act. McWilliams v. Adams, 1 Macq. H. L. 120, referred to, The Queen v. The Shelby, 5 Ex. C. R. 1.

By s. 1, s.-s. 2, of the Behring Sea Award Act, 1894, any ship employed in a contraven-tion of any of the provisions of the Act shall be forfeited to Her Majesty as if an offence had been committed under s. 103 of the Merhad been committed under s. 103 of the Mer-chants Shipping Act, 1854. Sub-section 3 enacts that the provisions of the Merchants Shipping Act, 1854, respecting official logs (including the penal clauses) shall apply to any vessel engaged in fur seal fishing. The penal clauses of s. 284 of the last mentioned Act merely subject the master to a penalty, Act merely subject the master to a penanty, in the nature of a fine, for not keeping an official log book, and do not attach any penalty or forfeiture in respect of the ship:—Held, following Churchill v. Crease, 5 Bing. 180, that, inasmuch as the particular provision of the Merchants Shipping Act, inflicting a fine only upon the master, was in seeming conflict with the general provisions of s.-s. of s. 1 of the Behring Sea Award Act, 1894, imposing forfeiture for contravention of the latter Act, such provision of the last mentioned Act must be read as expressly excepting a contravention by omission to keep a log. tion 281 of the Merchants Shipping Act, 1854, enacts that every entry in an official log shall enacts that every entry in an omena log snale be made as soon as possible after the occur-rence to which it relates:—Held, follow-ing Attwood v. Emery, 1 C. B. N. S. 110, that the words "as soon as possible" should be construed to mean "within a reasonable time;" and what is a reasonable time must depend upon the facts governing the particular case in which the question arises. The Queen v. The Beatrice, 5 Ex. C. R. 9.

IX. INTERPRETATION ACT.

Holidays—Election Petition — Computation of Time.]—The Interpretation Act of Outario, 31 Vict. c. 1, s. 6, s. s. 13, enacts that in construing it, or any Act of Ontario, certain days specified, including Good Friday and Easter Monday, shall be included in the word "holiday." and the Controverted Elections Act of 1871, s. 52, enacts that in reckoning time for the purposes of that Act any day set apart by any Act of Ontario for a public holiday shall be excluded:—Held, that the effect of the Interpretation Act alone, independently of any other statute, was to make the days mentioned in it holidays; and if it were not so, that when the other statute used the word holiday, such days would by virtue of the Interpretation Act be included in it. Held, therefore, that, in reckoning the twenty-one days after the return allowed for presentation of a petition, Good Friday and Easter Monday must be excluded. The decision in chambers in this matter, 5 P. R. 394, affirmed as regards the computation of time. Re West Toronto Election, 31 U. C. R. 409.

Judge—Division Court—New Trial.]—A suit in a division court having been tried on the 18th July, before a deputy Judge duly appointed, on the 22nd defendant applied for a new trial, by which, under rule 52 of the division courts, proceedings were stayed. The Judge died on the 26th; the deputy Judge before whom the case had been tried did nothing in the matter; and the new Judge was not appointed until October. In January following he ordered a new trial:—Held, that he was authorized to do so, under s. 197 of the Division Courts Act, C. S. U. C. c. 19, and the Interpretation Act, C. S. C. c. 5, s. 6, s.-s. 23, taken together. In re Appelbe and Baker, 27 U. C. R. 486.

Judicial Notice of Public Acts—Pleading.)—Held, reversing the decision in 25 Gr, 403, that the demurring defendants were not restricted to the statements in the bill, of the Acts under which the company was incorporated, but that they could refer to the statutes as printed in the statute book. Kiely v. Kiely, 3 A. R. 438.

Upon a covenant to pay interest at 10 per cent, made while 16 Virt. c. 89 was in force, and before 22 Virt. c. 87:—Held, the court being bound to notice the startino more than six per cent, could be recovered, although non est factum only had been pleaded. Girdlestone v, O'Reilly, 21 U, C, R, 499.

"Persons Signing"—Bill of Lading,]—Semble, under the Interpretation Act, 31 Vict. c. 1, s. 7, s. *s. 9 (0), the defendants, though a corporation, would be "persons signing" the bill of lading in this case, if signed by their authorized agent, Royal Canadian Bank v, Grand Trank R. W. Co., 23 C. P. 225.

X. OPERATION ON CONTRACTS.

1. Between Railway Companies.

Union—Statute Validating Deed—Rights of Others.]—The Act authorizing the union of two incorporated companies declared that any deed the companies executed under the Act should be valid to "all intents and purposes in the same manner as if incorporated in the Act:"—Held, that this enabled the companies to bargain together in respect of the rights which each had, and to make such arrangements as their union rendered necessary; but gave them no legislative authority over the rights of other persons. Cayley v. Coburg, Peterborough, and Marmora R. W. and Mining Co., 14 Gr. 571.

McCallum v. Buffalo and Lake Huron R. W. Co., 19 C. P. 117. Sec. also, Holmes v. Grand Trunk R. W. Co., 27 U. C. R. 595.

Confirmation by Statute-Liability on Bonds.]-The Buffalo and Lake Huron R. W. Co., being liable upon certain bonds secured by mortgage, entered into an agreement with the Grand Trunk R. W. Co., confirmed by 29 & 30 Vict. c. 92 (C.), by which firmed by 29 & 30 Vict. c. 92 (C.), by which the latter company were to undertake the working of the former company's railway, the net receipts of the two companies to be divided between them in specified proportions:—Held, that the effect of 19 Vict. c. 21 was to make defendants liable upon the bonds given by the Buffalo, Brantford, and Goderich R. W. Co. as if originally given by defendants. Quere, as to the meaning of the proviso to s. 1 of 29 & 30 Vict. c. 92, confirming the agreement. Town of Brantford v, Buffalo and Lake Huron R. W. 2. Between Railway Company and Individ-

Bonds-Union of Companies - Confirmation by Statute.]—A statute gave the bond-holders of the Cobourg and Peterborough R. W. Co. an option to convert their bonds into stock, and enacted that this "converted bond-ed stock," and any new subscribed stock, should be preferential to the ordinary stock, and be entitled to dividends of eight per cent. per annum in priority to any dividend to the ordinary shareholders. By a subsequent Act the company was authorized to unite with another company, and it was declared that the two companies, and those who should become shareholders in the new company under the Acts relating to the Cobourg and Peterborough R. W. Co. and under the deed of union, should constitute the new company:—Held, that the union did not extinguish the right of the bondholders to elect. Cayley v. Cobourg, Peter-borough, and Marmora R. W. and Mining Co., 14 Gr. 571.

Debts of Insolvent Company-Statute Regulating Distribution. |—A railway company having become insolvent, an Act was passed estimating the claims of creditors for land taken by the company at $30.000, and the value of the whole railway property at $100,000, and directing that $30,000 should be applied on debts for land and the balance of the $100,000 divided pro rata among the other creditors. The $30,000 proved more than sufficient to pay the land debts in full, and the company claimed the balance; but held, that the other creditors were entitled to it. In re Cobourg and Peterborough R. W. Co., 16 Gr. 571.

Lease of Railway - Construction of Branch-Confirmation by Statute.] - To obtain the means of constructing a branch line from Peterborough to Millbrook, the Port Hope, Lindsay, and Peterborough R. W. Co. agreed to lease their railway to T. and F., under the preamble to 27 Vict. c. 60, and the branch line was accordingly constructed by T and F., and by defendants as their assignees: that the construction of the branch —Heid, that the construction of the branch line under the authority of the company had been sanctioned by this Act, which had also confirmed to the lessees the right to maintain and use the road under the franchise of the company. Hamilton v. Covert, 16 C. P. 205.

It appeared that the iron had been imported It appeared that the iron had been imported from England by the Buffalo, Brantford, and Goderich R. W. Co., and was shipped from Kingston to Port Colborne, subject to ocean freight and the freight by schooner from Kingston. On arriving at Port Colborne, no sea being wade to pay the iron was left by one being ready to pay, the iron was left by the master in defendant's charge, to hold subject to the freight, and was piled on a piece of ground belonging to government, where other iron owned by the company was also lying, but separate from this. Afterwards the Buffalo and Lake Huron R. W. Co., the plaintiffs, bought out the old company under 19 Vict. c. 21, and arranged certain writs of fi. fa. under which the sheriff had seized this and the other iron; and they thereupon demanded the iron in question from defendant, who refused to give it up, claiming the ocean freight from Kingston, as well as demurrage, and some other charges not recoverable. The plaintiffs, however, refused to pay anything, and replevied:—Held, that the iron could not be considered as having been delivered to the old railway company, when landed: that 19 Vict. c. 21 did not take away the right of lien; nor could anything done by the Fight of lien; nor could anything done by the sheriff have that effect. Buffalo and Lake Huron R. W. Co. v. Gordon, 16 U. C. R. 283. See, also, Buffalo and Lake Huron R. W. Co. v. Brooksbanks, ib. 337.

Lien for Price of Land Sold—Absorp-tion of Company by Statute.]—19 Vict. c. 21, incorporating the Buffalo and Lake Huron R. W. Co., with power to purchase the railway therein mentioned, did not deprive unpaid owners of any lien they had for the price of land theretofore sold to the old company. Paterson v. Buffalo and Lake Huron R. W. Co., 17 Gr. 521.

Bond-Condition-Breach-Relief by Statute. |-The Woodstock and Lake Erie Railway and Harbour Co. gave a bond to the town council of Woodstock, reciting that the council had agreed to lend them £25,000 to assist in constructing their railway, and conditioned that the company should not expend the loan, nor begin to construct their road, until the whole sum necessary to complete it from Woodstock to Port Dover, should be obtained: —Held, that there was nothing in 19 Vict. c. 74 to relieve defendants from liability for a previous breach of this condition. Liability of Municipality to Crown Release of Company by Statute. 1-Where a township municipality advanced a large sum of money to a railway company under the provisions of the Consolidated Municipal Loan Fund Act, and some of the stockholders of the company were afterwards released from their liability by an Act of the legislature, passed nearly eighteen months after the works on the road were stopped for want of funds, and new companies were formed under that and subsequent Acts of the legislature, which released the new corporations from the construction of the original line of road, until a new line had been constructed, and it appeared that there was no immediate prospect of such a result:—Held, that the municipality were not released from their liability to the Crown. Norwich v. Attorney-General, 2 E. & A. 541.

Mortgage — "Other Property" — Validating Act—Chattels.] — The Brockville and Ottawa R. W. Co., by indenture, mortgaged to a municipality to secure loans, the lands, roads, depots, wharves, stations, terminal and roads, depots, wharves, stations, terminal and otherwise, tolls, revenues, and all other prop-erty of the said company now or during the existence of the said mortgage to be acquired. 20 Vict. c. 144, s. 5, recited these loans and declared the said mortgages valid; that said intended railway and all stations, buildings, carriages, engines, and other prop erty belonging to said railway, were thereby mortgaged to said municipalities according to mortgaged to said municipanties according to the terms of said mortgages; and that the Chattel Mortgage Act should not apply to them:—Held, that, as the mortgages covered chattel as well as real property, the words "other property" in them were not restricted to real property, for the statute placed a legislative and different construction on the mort-gage. Counties of Lanark and Renfrew v. Cameron, 9 C. P. 109.

Between City and County Municipalities—Maintenance of Court House and Gaol—Law Reform Act.]—In consequence of the separation of the city of Toronto from the county of York for judicial purposes, a deed was executed between the respective corporations, in which the city covenanted to pay the county a certain annual sum for the use of the court house. The deed also contained other agreements as to the use of the gaol. This arrangement was to continue in force until arrangement was to continue in local and twelve months' notice to determine it should be given. By the Law Reform Act, which came into force in February, 1869, the city was re-united to the county for judicial purposes, and on 21st March, 1869, the city gave the county the stipulated notice as to intended discontinuance of the use of the gaol, stating that as to the court house the action of the legislature had virtually terminated the provision respecting it, and that no further payment would therefore be made: -Held, that the city had been released from its covenant to pay for the court house by the Law Reform Act. County of York v. City of Toronto, 21 C. P. 95

Between Company and Shareholder Statute Increasing Powers - Release of Shareholder. 1-To an action for calls alleged to be due by defendant to the Canada Car and Manufacturing Company, the defendant pleaded, on equitable grounds, that he subscribed for the shares and became a share-holder in a company, called "The Canada Car Company." incorporated by letters patent for certain specified purposes, and not otherwise that afterwards, and without the assent and against the will of defendant, that company applied to the Dominion legislature and obtained an Act constituting the shareholders therein a body corporate, under the name of the Canada Car and Manufacturing Company, the now plaintiffs; that by the said Act greater powers were conferred upon the plaintiffs than were possessed by the Canada Car Company, and the nature of the business was varied and extended, and the undertaking rendered more hazardous than was contemplated by the Cannazardous than was contemplated by the Cathada Car Company or the defendant when he became a shareholder thereof; and that the defendant never agreed to become a shareholder of or invest his money in a company possessing the powers of the plaintiffs—whereby defendant is relieved from liability: Held, plea clearly bad, for the Act was binding on all the shareholders, whether assenting or not to the application for it; and the court had no jurisdiction to relieve defendant from a liability which the statute expressly declared that he should continue to be subject to. anada Car and Manufacturing Co. v. Harris, 24 C. P. 380.

XI. PENAL ACTS.

Construction.]-A penal statute is to be construed according to its spirit and the rule of natural justice, not according to its very letter. Rex v. Mackintosh, 2 O. S. 497.

Doubt.] - In penal statutes questions of doubt are to be construed favourably to the accused. North Ontario Election (Prov.), McCaskill v. Paxton, H. E. C. 304.

Member of Parliament — Appointment to Office—Change of Office—Failure to Re-sign Scat—Evasion of Statute.]—Defendant, while a member of parliament, was appointed to the office of postmaster-general, and again re-elected for the same constituency. On the 29th July he resigned that office, and within a month was appointed president of the council, which office he resigned on the same day, and on the next day was re-appointed to his old office of postmaster-general: — Held, that this was authorized by 20 Vict. c. 22. The penalties imposed by that Act apply to members of the Assembly retaining their seats without re-election after acceptance of office, and not only to persons absolutely ineligible. The exemption contained in the seventh clause is not confined to one resignation and acceptance of office, but allows the change to be repeated, and the person may thus go back to the same office which he first resigned. It was stated in the pleadings that the ministry, of which defendant as postmaster-general was a member, all resigned office on the 25th July, and on the 2nd August were succeeded by the opposition, who resigned on the following day; that on the 6th the old ministry were re-appointed, but took different offices from those which they before held, and on the 7th resigned again and were re-appointed to their old places; and it was alleged that the appointment to a different office in the first instance was colourable, and made only to enable defendant to resume his original appointment without going back for re-election:—Held, that, although such a proceeding was probably not contemplated by the Act, it was allowed by it; that the court could not look at defendant's motives, or strain the construction of the statute so as to impose a penalty; and that whether the course taken was or was not consistent with the system of political government established in this Province, was a question which they could not take into consideration. McDonell v, Smith, 17 U. C. R. 310.

See, also, Macdonell v. Macdonald, S C. P. 479.

Municipal Elections—Personation—Conviction—Repagnance, 1.—Where a clause in a statute prohibits a particular act and imposes a penalty for doing it, and a subsequent clause in the same statute imposes a different penalty for the same offence, which cannot be reconciled either as cumulative or alternative punishment, the former clause is repealed by the latter. This principle being applied to sea, 167 and 210 of the Consolidated Municipal Act, 1892, a person convicted of personation under the former clause was discharged as illegally convicted on a return to a habeas corpus. Robinson v. Emerson, 4 H. & C. 352, and Michell v. Brown, 1 E. & E. at p. 275, followed. Regina v. Rose, 27 O. R. 195.

XII. PRIVATE ACTS.

Character — Recital.] — As regards the character and construction of a private Act and the effect of a recital therein. See City of Quebec v. Quebec Central R. W. Co., 10 S. C. R. 563, at p. 580 et seq.

Gas Company — Act of Incorporation — Municipal By-law—Privilege—Confirmation—Parties to Contract.]—In 1881 a municipal by-law of 8t. Hyacinthe granted to a company incorporated under a general Act (C. S. C. c. 65) the exclusive privilege for twenty-five years of manufacturing and selling gas in said city, and in 1882 said company obtained a special Act of incorporation (45 Vict. c. 79, Q.), s. 5 of which provided that "all the powers and privileges conferred upon the said company, as organized under the said general Act, either by the terms of the Act itself or by resolution, by-law, or agreement of the said city of 8t. Hyacinthe, are hereby reaffirmed and confirmed to the company as incorporated under the present Act, including their right to break up, &c. the streets... and in addition it shall be lawful for the company, in substitution for gas or in connection therewith, or in addition thereto, to manufacture, use, and sell lectric, galvanic, or other artificial light, and to manufacture, store, and sell heat and motive power derived either from gas or otherwise... with the same privileges and subject to the same liabilities, as are applicable to the manufacture, use, and disposal of illuminating gas under the provisions of this Act."—Held, that the above section did not give the company the exclusive right for twenty-five years to manufacture and sell electric light; that the right to make and sell electric light with the same privilege as was applicable to gas did not confer such monopoly, but gave a new privilege as to electricity entirely unconnected with the former purposes of the company; and that the word "privilege" there used could be referred to the right to break up streets, and should not, therefore, be construed to mean the exclusive privilege claimed. Held, also, that it was a private Act, notwithstanding that it contained a clause declaring it to be a public Act, and that the city was not a party nor in any way assented to it; and that in construing it the court would treat it as a contract between the promoters and the legislature, and apply the maxim verba fortius accipiuntur contra proferentem, especially where exorbitant powers are conferred. Compagnie pour L'Eclairage au Gaz de St. Hyacinthe v. Compagnie des Pouvoirs Hydrauliques de St. Hyacinthe, 25 S. C. R. 168.

Persons not Named. — The rule in respect to private Acts of Parliament is, that the interests of persons not expressly named in them are not affected by the provisions thereof. Re Goodhue, Tovey v. Goodhue, Goodhue v. Tovey, 19 Gr. 396.

Railway Company - Act of Incorporation-General Railway Act-Application of.] -Where a company is incorporated by special Act, and there are provisions in the special Act as well as in a general Act on the same subject which are inconsistent; if the special Act gives in itself a complete rule on the subject, the expression of that rule amounts to an exception of the subject matter of the rule out of the general Act. When the rule given by the special Act applies only to a portion of the subject, the special Act may a portion of the subject, the special Act may apply to one portion and the general Act to the other. The probable intention of the legislature is important in considering a matter of such a character. By the General Railway Act, R. S. O. 1877 c. 165, which was by the plaintiffs' special Act incorporated therein except as varied by the latter, ten per cent. of the capital of the railway was by s.-s. 5 of s. 36 required to be expended within three years, and the railway was to be completed within ten years of the passing of the special Act, in default of which the corporate existence of the company ceased, and by s. 4 of the general Act, ss. 4 to 36 thereof inclusive of the general Act, ss. 4 to 36 thereof inclusive were to apply to all railways authorized to be constructed by any special Act of the Province, and to be construed therewith as forming one Act:—Held, that s. 4 of the general Act did not apply to the plaintiffs, and that s. 23 of their special Act must be read in substitution for s.-s. 5 of s. 36 requiring the expenditure of ten per cent. of the capital within the three years. Ontario and Sault Ste. Marie R. W. Co. v. Canadian Pacific R. W. Co., 14 O. R. 432.

Act — Act of Incorporation — Municipal Act — Bonus.] — The Act incorporating a railway company contained provisions respecting bonuses granted to it by municipalities, not found in the Municipal Act.—Held, that such special Act was not restrictive of the Municipal Act, and it was only necessary that the provisions of the latter should be followed to pass a valid by-law granting such a bonus.
