CHAPTER VI.
(Concluded.)
"Yes," she whispered; "so am I. I did not care then—the other night."

When I am like that, in a passion, I do not care what happens, whether I kill myself or any one else. But now—

She looked round with a half-dazed expression, as if puzzled by some novel emotion.

"Now we have got to be friends, you're glad I came off scot-free," said Vane. "Is that it?"

"Yes," she whispered.

They walked along, he with the bridle over his arm, she by his side her head drooping.

"Well, I ought to consider myself an extremely lucky fellow," said Vane, after a pause. "Everybody is on the lookout for adventures nowadays, and I know half a dozen men who would give their heads to see what I've seen these last few days. By Jove! they would scarcely believe it all, if I were free to tell it. It's wonderful, incredible!" He looked at her, with a man's ready sympathy for youth and beauty in his eyes.

"But I wish you had let me stay a little longer and seen you through this business."

She shook her head.

"You mean that there is nothing I can do, as your aunt said? Well, I'm afraid there isn't much, but I'll give anything to help you. Shall I speak to Mr. Vane up at the Hall there? He seems to be your nearest neighbor, and may be able to help you in some way out of this trouble."

She shook her head.

"No," she said, "no. Aunt does not like any one to know where we live, or anything about us. Do not speak of us or think of us. Forget us."

"That's easier said than done," said Vane, rather gravely.

"Yes," she assented, with a little catch in her voice; "it is difficult to forget a person who has tried to kill you."

"I didn't mean that," he responded. "That's forgotten already. It's your kindness to me"—he was going to add, "your beautiful face," but he stopped himself in time—"that I shall find it impossible not to remember." He stopped to light his cigar, and then sauntered on as before. He was in no hurry to go to part with her. It was pleasant—more than pleasant—to have her walking beside him, her lithe figure, grace itself, as she paced along, her exquisite face softened by some reflection of which he was ignorant.

Every now and then she glanced at him from the corner of her eye, as if she were trying to fix the image of his face in her mind. Presently they came to an opening in the valley and to the verge of a fairly good road.

She stopped and pointed.

"That is the road," she said, in a low voice. "It goes straight to the Hall."

He sprang into the saddle and bent down and held out his hand. She put hers into it, and raised her face to his.

As she did so Vane started. He saw that her eyes were full of tears; wonderful, truly wonderful eyes they were, shining through the clear crystal; orbs to haunt the man who looked into their depths for many a day and night.

"Good-bye, Miss Nora," he said. "Don't—don't be upset about that—that accident, you know; for after all it was an accident. You took me for some one else, and no one's a penny the worse, and—there's an end of it. Good-bye, and remember: If ever you are in any trouble and want a friend, send or come to me; don't hesitate a moment. You'll promise, won't you?"

"I—promise!"

Her eyes looked up at him pleadingly, trustingly; so unlike the eyes that had flashed upon him the other night when she had let the bridge all, that they seemed rather the eyes of some other person.

Vane was but human, after all, and under the influence of her gaze he moved by an unfortunate impulse bent down, drew her closer, and put his lips to hers.

It was the first kiss Nora Trevanion had ever received, and it affected her terribly.

She started—a faint shudder ran through her, and her face grew instantly white.

Vane crimsoned.

"I—I beg your pardon," he said. "Confound it!" under his breath; "what made me do that? I beg your pardon—pray forgive me!" he said, aloud. "I ought not to have done it; but—but it was just to show that we parted friends, Miss Nora."

"Was that why?" she breathed, almost inaudibly. "Was that why?"

she breathed, almost inaudibly. "Was it because you quite, quite forgive me?"

"Yes, yes," he said; "that was it." Again she seemed to force herself to raise her face, and in accents that in their tense gravity were indicative of innocence itself, she murmured: "You may kiss me again."

Vane took off his hat, bent, bare-headed, and kissed her; then she broke from him, but not abruptly, and stood at a little distance.

"Good-bye," she said.

Vane touched the horse with his heel and rode on.

When he had gone a hundred yards or so, he looked back. She was still standing looking after him, her hand shading her eyes. He waved to her and called her name, but she did not move nor make any response. So she stood until he had disappeared; then she seemed to awake as if from a dream, and looked round her, pushing the hair from her brow with a hand that quivered.

A heavy sigh rose from her heavy bosom, and with an utter abandon she sunk upon the grass, and saif crouching, half lying, hid her face in her hands.

A dense darkness seemed to have fallen on her young life; her half-savage nature was cowed and weighed down by an emotion so utterly novel and strange as to amount almost to the ecstasy of pain. She felt as if something had gone out of her life—out of the world itself—and forever; and as if, for her, there never would be any more gladness or even peace.

CHAPTER VII.

About the same hour as that in which Vane Tempest rode on his way to his mysterious uncle, Senley Tyers was at work in his studio.

This studio was rather a remarkable apartment, and although it had only been in existence some three months, people—fashionable people—the people who make or mar one's fortune—were beginning to talk about it.

It was situated in Mount Street—which Theodore Hook said was the treet in London in which everybody would or ought to live. It is near the Park. It is quiet, and the house in it are convenient and roomy.

Senley Tyers could not have chosen a better locale for his studio than 101 Mount Street.

It was a long room, one end of which was divided from the rest by curtains of sea-green plush. The walls were clothed, not papered, with the right shade of terra-cotta, upon which hung a few cartoons in rough sketch, and one or two water-sketches. The light came principally from above, and was carefully toned so that there was no vulgar glare, excepting when the artist required it for his work, but a subdued, nicely balanced light which fell with a soft caress, as it were, upon the statues and busts which stood in striking relief against the terra-cotta walls and among the dull green, plush-covered furniture.

The floor was of parquet, with here and there a Persian mat thrown down with apparent carelessness—apparent because in reality there was nothing careless about any part of the place. Every inch of it was studied with due regard to effect. Behind the easel, and over a statuette of Venus Aphrodite rising from the waves, hung a trophy of arms, a pair of fencing rapiers being among them.

Although it was daylight, a small, red lamp was alight, and cast its soft glow around the corner in which it hung.

The fire-place was of carved oak, black oak, and the fire was of huge logs resting on brass dog-irons and surrounded by Dutch tiles. A Persian cat lay on the rug before the fire.

No one could enter the room without being struck by its grace, its artistic tent ensemble, and its comfort; for, alas! your artistic apartment is not always comfortable. In Senley Tyers' studio there was absolutely nothing to offend or weary the eye, which could rest anywhere with a delightful sense of repose. The chairs were all "easy" ones, with broad seats and sloping backs, which tempted one to sit and lounge in them. Mention must be made of a small oak cabinet which stood in a corner behind the lamp, and which was always kept locked, and then one can speak of the artist himself, who stood before his easel at work.

Seeing him in his loose velvet painting-jacket, with the soft light falling upon his pale face, with its dark eyes and long lashes, with its expression of dreamy melancholy, one would not have hesitated in calling his appearance striking, and, indeed, handsome. As a matter of fact, he looked at his best amid his present surroundings, and at his worst in such a place as, say, Treloarne, in the driving wind and rain.

A cigarette was between his lips, but he worked with evident care and anxiety, and every now and then paused and looked at the canvas with a strange expression of admiration and discontent. The picture was a half-finished portrait of a lady, a face beautiful to loveliness.

Cured Eczema Like Magic

Suffered for Years—Tried All Kinds of Treatment—Surprised at Results From Dr. Chase's Ointment.

You can soon tell when people are enthusiastic about medical treatment by the language they use. After experimenting with all sorts of ointments in a vain effort to obtain relief and cure, the writer of this letter was astonished at the quick and satisfactory results obtained by the use of Dr. Chase's Ointment.

"It worked like magic," she writes. Indeed, it is surprising the healing that is often effected in a single night by this great ointment. The stinging and itching are relieved at once, and cure is only a matter of time and patient treatment.

Mrs. Clements, 15 Strange street, Toronto, Ont., writes: "I have suffered from eczema for years, and after trying all kinds of ointments, at last tried Dr. Chase's Ointment. It worked like magic and proved a God-send to me. I would advise anyone suffering from eczema to try one box and be convinced." 50 cents a box, all dealers, or Edmanston, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto.

Strength and Appetite Restored

This Brooklyn woman is now the picture of health, thanks to the wonderful restorative powers of Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey, and she cannot praise it too highly. Here's what she says:—

"About a year ago I was down with a very heavy cold and I had a bad pain under my shoulder blades. I was under the care of different doctors but did not improve. I was so weak I could hardly stand, and I could not keep anything on my stomach. A druggist near where I lived advised taking a tablespoonful of Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey with an egg in milk before meals, and after following his advice I found that I could eat; I overcame my weakness, and gradually gained in weight. I believe that Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey is a great thing, and I recommend it to my many friends in Brooklyn and New York. I cannot praise Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey too much."
—Mrs. Mary Carmody, 116 N. Elliott Ave., Brooklyn, N.Y.

Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey

is an absolutely pure, gentle and invigorating stimulant and tonic. When taken at mealtime it stimulates the mucous surfaces and little glands of the stomach to a healthy action, thereby improving the digestion and assimilation of the food and giving to the system its full proportion of nourishment. This action upon the digestive process is of great importance, as it brings to all the tissues and organs of the body the nutriment necessary to their sustenance and indirectly to the whole system strength and vigor. It is prescribed by doctors and is recognized as a family medicine everywhere.

If in need of advice write Medical Department, The Duffy Malt Whiskey Co., Rochester, N.Y., stating your case fully. Our doctors will send you advice free, together with a valuable illustrated medical booklet, containing rare common sense rules for health, which you cannot afford to be without, and some of the many thousands of gratifying letters received from men and women in all walks of life, both old and young, who have been cured and benefited by the use of this great medicine and who continue to enjoy good health. Sold by druggists, dealers and hotels, $1.25 a large bottle.

The Incomprehensible Sin.

BY RUTH CAMERON.

Portrait of Ruth Cameron.

For each one of us I think there are certain meannesses, certain sins, that are almost uncomprehensible. The two that pass my understanding are first, the meanness of the man who deliberately repeats a disagreeable thing which one person has said about another to the person attacked.

It is difficult for me to believe such people exist, but I know they do. Of course the first class is rather out of my province as a rule, but the one case I came into contact with branded the knowledge on my mind. I once knew a brilliant kind-hearted lovable young newspaper man whom the whole office loved so well that they banded together to help him fight his besting weakness. He had taken a liquor cure and had been doing splendidly for six months and then the word went round that he had fallen more violently than ever. I asked how it happened and was told that another newspaper man who knew perfectly well how hard this man was fighting and how much it meant to him to keep straight that particular time had actually asked, my urged, this poor boy to have a drink with him.

I wish I were a Dante to arrange a special hades for that man.

Travelling on the Engine of the Fastest Train in the World at 75 Miles an Hour.

(By G. Ward Price, in the London Daily Mail.)

In July and August the Gare du Nord is the most Anglo-Saxon place in Paris. A ceaseless tide of English travellers ebbs and flows through it half a dozen times a day. It is a holiday clearing house.

On every side you hear that clear, precise, high-pitched English female voice which becomes so startling a national characteristic as soon as English women are mingled with the more subdued-toned women of other countries. Even the porters themselves are infected with the prevailing English atmosphere. "London? Yes, all right!" they shout cheerfully as the taxicabs drive up. For the returning traveller, whether he be a week-end tourist or an Anglo-Indian home from a life's exile, the gate of England is the Gare du Nord.

Few of these gay home-coming English people who crowd the great station realize that the train in which they are actually to travel is the fastest train in the world—a train that reaches the speed of seventy-five miles an hour.

There are two trains each day from Paris that attain this speed during their journey of three hours and ten minutes to Calais. Their average for the 185 miles is fifty-seven miles an hour, but there are gradients to be mounted, there are checks at signals to be made up, there are junctions that must be passed through cautiously and curves to be rounded where the speed must drop to below

Twice Proven Cure for Nerves

Irritable, Hysterical, Sleepless, Dr. Chase's Nerve Food Restores Health.

There is a message in this letter for thousands of women who are suffering from broken-down nervous systems. Sleepless nights, much irritability over little things, spells of dizziness and nervous sick headaches are among the symptoms.

You may not realize the nature of your ailment until nervous prostration comes upon you. But in whatever stage you find yourself, Dr. Chase's Nerve Food is ready to help you.

Mrs. W. J. May, 88 Annette street, Toronto, writes: "Some years ago I suffered from nervous trouble, and took Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, which completely cured me. About six months ago I received a shock which again shattered my nervous system to such an extent that I was irritable and hysterical, and could not sleep nights. I began to use the Nerve Food again and was not disappointed. Improvement was apparent from the first box, and now I am entirely well."

Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, 50 cents a box, 9 for $5.00, 24 dealers.

shovelfuls of coal from the tender behind me, distributing them with a deft turn of the wrist evenly over the great bed of flame four yards long within. I counted those shovelfuls—337 of them during the journey, each holding as much as a drawing room scuttle. Four tons we used in going from Paris to Calais.

In front of the driver was the speedometer. Over his shoulder I watched the needle climb gradually up the arc. "Good," I shouted above the roar as the pointer reached the 60-mile an hour mark. "Nothing," I saw, his lips say in reply. "Uphill," he made an ascending gesture with his hand. Looking through the window I saw that we were mounting a gradual slope to a distinct skyline. A moment later we reached it. The begrimed engine driver touched me on the arm. "Now—look," he roared in my ear, pointing to the speedometer.

We were on a down slope. The din of the heavy train increased. The floor of the 85-ton engine swung from side to side. The thick steel rod to which I was holding quivered and jerked as if it was loose. The needle leapt up the dial in a series of convulsive little jerks. Fields on either side of the line were streaming giddily past us, with every feature washed out of sight till they looked like no more than a streak of green paint from a brush. The line stretched far ahead of us, a gleaming ribbon of steel, ceaselessly devoured by the roaring monster of a train.

Up and up went the pointer; 60—70—75 miles an hour. And at that speed it hung for ten minutes. During that time we shot through woods that we only saw when they were past; we tore across a viaduct from one hill to another at such a speed that I could have avowed we had leapt the valley clear. We shot past a local train on another line as a motor car overtakes a rabbit. We hurtled through tunnels black as a mine, where the roof pressed down on one till eardrums were fit to burst with the din, and where the sweating stoker, jerking open the white-hot cavern of a furnace, gleamed red as he swung his shovel, like a demon of Hades. Through the little window you could see the great green engine waving a feathering plume of grey steam in sheer pride of power. Through villages that never saw us; past stations that whizzed by, the Calais express tore on its way, until far down the line a signal barred the road. The driver swung a lever, there was a buzz of steam, and in the space of a few yards, it seemed, we were crawling along at four miles an hour. "Guigne," said the driver. "We shall lose four minutes."

"Can't you go faster than seventy-five?" I asked him.

"We could, but we are not allowed. There is a speed register. See," he touched a tiny official seal of lead. "The government inspector takes out our speed record for each journey. If we had gone above seventy-five miles an hour there would be trouble."

"How fast could you go?"

"Oh, 80—90—perhaps more. Pardon"—the signal had changed, and three minutes later we were at full heading speed again.

We made up the four minutes lost at the signal, and fifty miles further on were a minute ahead of time. "I like to be a minute ahead," said the driver.

And with that much in hand we drew up in Calais harbor alongside the steamer. It had taken 4 tons of coal and 140 cubic feet of water to take us there. Yet none of the passengers even glanced at the new $25,000 engine that had brought them on their homeward way at this wonderful speed.

The attention which I seemed to attract as I went on board the boat was explained as soon as I reached a mirror.

Bright scourgings with soap and hot water and one massage with cold cream has not yet completely freed me of my own coal consumption during that 75-mile-an-hour run.

If by accident you have made a mistake in marking linen, place the article immediately in cold water to which a little lemon juice has been added. Let this soak for about fifteen minutes, then soap the stained part and rinse.

"The Greatest Possible Advantages."

"If the political party with which I have the honour to be identified is entrusted with the conduct of public affairs, we shall devote ourselves, to the best of our ability, to the carrying out of a policy which shall ensure for our people the greatest possible advantages, through a prudent conservation and energetic development of the material resources of the colony."

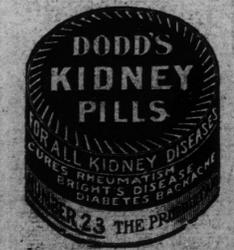

This is an extract from the 1908 Manifesto of Sir Edward Morris, and we have put it at the head of this article as it contains the gist of the pledges by which he deluded the electorate into returning his party to power in 1909.

It will be observed that he undertook to carry out a policy which shall ensure for our people the greatest possible advantages. His policy was to be for the people and not for the grabbers. That was the promise. How has that promise turned out? His Government has piled some seven millions of dollars on the backs of the taxpayer. His Government has been bleeding the country white by adding to taxation that was already overburdensome. Is the piling up of debt for the greatest possible advantages of the people? Or does it pay out mainly to "the greatest possible advantages" of the Reid contractors who are receiving the bulk of the money for the construction of these branch lines?

SOME MORRIS FIZZLES.

Morris had an Immigration Scheme which didn't come off. He was going to bring in the waifs and strays of London plant them on 50,000 acres of the best virgin land in Newfoundland. Give them a bonus for clearing land, etc. But it fizzled out.

Then he was going to do great things with cold storage. Friend Morris brought along two Americans who were going to export the whole of our West Coast winter catch of Codfish, Herring and Halibut to the States, and Canada and incidentally plant Gold Storage plants around the island. The Opposition and the Evening Telegram had something to say about an extraordinary Government guarantee by which the Company was to be insured against loss at the expense of the Government kept up by those who haul the fish out of the water, and advantages? Has this policy of paying the Reid contractors in gold panned out to the greatest possible advantages of the people? Is it not a fact that by the time the branch lines are built and paid for, the country will be mulcted in an extra half million dollars or more by this policy? The policy is panning out to "the greatest possible advantages" of the Reid contractors and not of the people.

Has the hundreds of thousands of dollars spent on the Blandford agricultural policy ensured for our people the greatest possible advantages? Or has it ensured the greatest possible advantages to the Downes, Devereaux, Simms, Bayleys and a host of others who obtained out of it salaries, stock-pickings, boars, bulls, rams and seeds?

Have appointments to the Civil Service been made to ensure the greatest possible advantages of the people, or have they reeked of nepotism. Were Walter Crosbie, Tom McGrath, John Gibbs appointed in the public interest or to please their relatives who stood high in political circles.

We now direct attention to the means by which Morris was to ensure to the people the greatest possible advantages. The mere recital of them will suffice for to-day. Here they are. Morris was going to work for the greatest possible good of the many "through a prudent conservation and energetic development of the material resources of the Colony." In the light of actual events, everybody knows that the means have worked out even more awry than the object itself.

FIRE EXTINGUISHED.

The fire in the Uranium's cargo was extinguished to-day, after the ship's hold had been flooded. The cargo was not removed before the water was poured in and will be a total loss. The Uranium will probably proceed on her voyage on Friday.

Special to The Evening Telegram. HALIFAX, Sept. 2. The fire in the Uranium's cargo was extinguished to-day, after the ship's hold had been flooded. The cargo was not removed before the water was poured in and will be a total loss. The Uranium will probably proceed on her voyage on Friday.

Special to The Evening Telegram.

TWILLINGATE, Yesterday. The news of Sir Robert's decision to respond to the Union's request to lead the Liberal and Union forces was received with great delight. The North will respond nobly. We do not need Sir Robert to canvass this District. We invite him to deliver a speech here but he need not trouble any further. Let him devote his time to the western and southern districts for where the F. P. U. is organized every seat is sure. Bond and his colleagues will be returned by the largest vote ever received in this District. George Roberts, Joe Roberts, Ed. The Prescott St. Falsehood Factory.

The falsehood factory on Prescott St. is running full blast these days. Not content with inventing and uttering falsehoods to the effect that non-sectarian schools was a plank in the forthcoming Liberal platform, and that Statute labor on roads was part of the policy of the Liberal Party, he invented a falsehood yesterday about some mythical row in the Liberal camp about the F. P. U. There is not a word of truth in it. It is only one of the daily lies which McGrath is circulating to keep up the drooping spirits of the "People's Party." Last week they were certain that Sir Robert Bond would not come out and that the Liberal and Union forces would not be united under him. Now when McGrath found himself badly left, he is reduced to trumping up lies about Sir Robert Bond being called to town to quell dissensions in the city. As McGrath is so much interested in dissensions he might tell the public all he knows of the loving relations between those cooling doves Morris and Gibbs.

Tries to Save Dog.

New York, Aug. 25.—Peter Kelly, a Brooklyn Rapid Transit motorman who was off duty, was riding over the Brooklyn Bridge in a rear seat of a trolley car smoking his pipe yesterday afternoon when he heard the yelping of a dog and saw a small animal, which apparently had dropped from one automobile and had been hit by another, limping to get away from succeeding automobiles. Kelly did not even stop to remove the pipe, but leaped from the car, and in reaching for the dog he slipped through the girders of the trolley track and plunged into the East River, 135-feet below.

Going down he made two complete somersaults and part of another, striking the water on the back of his neck, with the pipe still in his mouth. Martin Malone, foreman of a Dock Department crew at work beneath the Brooklyn pier, saw Kelly tumbling through the air, and by the time Kelly bobbed up to the surface of the water he and two of his men were in a row-boat. The tide was strong and Kelly was carried 200 yards upstream before he was dragged into the boat. He had lost his pipe. He was sent to the Holy Family Hospital, Brooklyn, where it was said he probably would recover. He told how he had tried to save the dog.

DUBLIN, Sept. 2. James Kier Hardie, M.P., who is here in connection with the street car strike riots, says: "I regard what has happened here as the most serious event the Trade Union movement has had to face for at least a century. The action of the authorities against the strike leader, James Larkin, and others sweeps aside the whole of Trade Union legislation, and restores us to the exact position we were in before Unions were legalized. It is a form of action against Unionism which is very common in America but which I did not expect to find in any law-abiding country like our own. Apart from the merits or demerits of the dispute the act of the authorities is so alarming that it must be checked at all costs." Employers in Dublin are considering the proclamation of a general lock-out.

KIRBY, Eng., Sept. 2. Fifteen persons were killed and 30 injured in a collision between two sections of the famous London-Scotland express to-day. Official reports point for nine known dead. The wreck occurred on the Midland Railway near Haws Junction. The two sections being bound South the first dived into the rear of the first, telescoping several coaches, which burst into flames. Many were trapped, and if not killed outright were burned to death. As many as 10 of the 30 injured or burned may die.

NEW YORK, Sept. 2. The White Mountain Express, first division, due at New York at 7.52 a.m. ran into the rear end of the second section of the Bar Harbor express due at New York at 7.36 a.m., one mile north of New Haven, this morning at 6.55. Two of the sleepers were damaged. Thirteen dead have been taken out of the wreck. The first section had stopped to get up steam for a sharp up-grade near Wallingford when the second section dashed into its rear, piling up the sleeping cars. Another disaster occurred near the spot in December, 1910, when eight passengers were killed and 25 injured.

LONDON, Sept. 2. "The Races With Power in Brains and Lungs are Attracting, Hoping, Forecasting, Locking Ahead."

This quotation is from one remarkable article which has been published by the Editor, Mr. G. Russell, who writes under the name "A. E." The article is entitled "Ireland our children will be" and calls for constructive men of vision—the men who see life as it will be in 1950.

"The Races With Power in Their Brains and Loins are Always Anticipating, Hoping, Forecasting, and Looking Ahead."

This quotation is from one of those remarkable articles which have made the Irish Homestead famous. It is by the Editor, Mr. G. Russell—the poet who writes under the initials "A. E." The article is entitled "The Irishman's children will live in," and calls for constructive work by men of vision—the men who can foresee life as it will be in 1950.

Magnificence in Dreams.

"If a nation is for ever brooding upon its past, one begins to feel that it has no future. The races with power in their brains and loins are always anticipating, hoping, forecasting, and looking ahead. Germany is bound to expand because it is a country filled with hope. Its public men do not talk so much of Germany's past as of its glorious future. Its empire is to be in the air on the sea, it is to spread into the countries of the Orient, and to stand in the sun. The American and the Canadian similarly are reaching out for magnificence in their dreams. The pioneers, while they are hewing down forests or breaking up virgin soil, are building cities in their imagination. They plan wide streets, and noble buildings in their thought."

The Dead Past.

Ireland for a century has been impoverished in its character by the political necromancers, who have always been summoning up its dead past for council as the witch of Endor called up the shade of Samuel for Saul the King. We have been brooding a great deal on '98, even in these days when Irishmen ought to be brooding a great deal more on 1998 and on what is to come. We believe that the true source of the inspiration of the patriot is to be found in the future and not in the past. The only enthusiasms which really stir people to the depths are enthusiasms based on hope and not on memory. The only history worth keeping in mind is the history of great men, of the people who were greater than we are to-day, and of the civilizations which were higher than ours, and we should only keep them in mind because we ought to be angry at our lapses from those heights, because we ought to have a determination to excel all that has been done. Instead of our writers filling the country papers with articles about this and that episode in Irish history, about this and that dead patriot, they ought to be filling men's minds with anticipations and hopes. The best compliment to dead patriots is to carry on their work and to dream of the future of Ireland.

Dream of the Future.

"What we would like to see in Irish literature and Irish journalism would be efforts at an imaginative construction of an Irish civilization, something which the Ireland of to-day might grow into, something which would fire the imagination of youth and make it ardent and eager to work for that desirable life. What we would like Irish writers to do for us would be to imagine for us what an Irish countryside would be like in 1950, what kind of houses people would live in, in what way they would amuse themselves, what kind of a social order would exist, how would people be clothed, what they would read, what children would be taught in the schools, what place women would have in public life."

Will They?

"Would the post be carried by aeroplanes from the centres of population to the rural districts? Would our bogs be generating power for electric light? Would the electric light be in every cottage? Would the telephone be as essential to every house as windows or a chimney? Would every village have its theatre? Would the cinematograph be used in every school accompanied by gramophone reproductions of the voice of the educationalist of genius? Would this system replace the country

Popular Songs.

Popular songs are written by people poor song which doesn't ring in the schoolmaster? Would the latter simply be the caretaker of the school, the machine man, and the elucidator of difficulties in the pictures or lectures?

"What would have become of the present movements in Ireland? Would we be a Gaelic speaking people or bilingual? What would the co-operative movement have grown into? Would Ireland be co-operative from centre to sea? Would there be a living gombeen man left in some neglected island off the coast or on some obscure headland a relic of the bad times who would be discovered piling up the interest, as when Christianity had triumphed somebody found a very old pagan priest in a half-ruined temple sacrificing the last goose to Jupiter? Would our railways have given way to the monorail? or would our traffic be aerial? Would the creamery manager load the co-operative aeroplane with butter packages for the Continental market at noon and warn the driver to be back before five as there were more packages to be delivered in Belfast?"

Questions for Youth.

"These are the kind of questions the youth of Ireland should be considering, because whatever people have in their hearts imagined that same will inevitably be externalized. We have never had Home Rule because Irishmen have never imagined definitely what kind of Home Rule precisely they wanted. We have never made a success of the Union because we never imagined it as a success or thought about what might be made out of it. Let us, for Heaven's sake, imagine something definitely about the future of Ireland and work towards its realization, or Ireland will never have any future. It will always be a century hoping everything, a ragged tail to the soaring kite of humanity."

Perishing for Lack of Imagination.

"We would like to start people thinking about the future of Ireland. Empires yet unborn and nationalities in the womb of time are eyes as much more exciting than empires that have crumbled and thrones which were once glorious and neglected now in museums or have rotted into dust. The Irish people are perishing for lack of imagination about life, about their own life. Imagination in Ireland refuses to grapple with the stern wrestler, reality."

"If we look at our Irish villages we have to think what might be. There is nothing in Europe to compare with the loveliness of an Irish village. How rarely are there trees and flowers! How rarely does one see a house which is a pleasure to look at! The bare buildings, without character, without beauty of proportion, arise anyhow, as if the imagination of the architect or builder was dead and the mechanical mind could not rise beyond four walls with oblong holes in them for windows. We have exiled out of Ireland beauty, the most spiritual and ennobling of all influences. We have thousands of pot-houses reeking with the odors of the rinsings of drink, and there is hardly a library, a gymnasium, or public bath anywhere."

A Chance for Literary Men.

"Will our literary men not try to create civic patriotism by some image of what might be, of the rural community living in lonely villages gay with flowers, made beautiful by trees, with picturesque houses and public places of meeting, where the community works together as one being, buying, manufacturing, and selling together in one industrial brotherhood, and devoting year by year some of its wealth to public purposes? Will they not see about planting the hedges with fruit trees, with apple and pear and plum trees, with gooseberry bushes and currant bushes, and let the fruit be used by the poor families, by the laborers, or sold and the profits used for creating village halls, theatres, literature, gymnasiums? Is not this done already in many a Continental commune? Could it not be done in Ireland? Is the will of Ireland all gone to water that it never braces itself up for public labors? Is the soul of Ireland dead that it does not dream of beautiful life?"

Popular Songs.

The popular song is a trifling composition consisting of a feeble crime against the laws of harmony hooked to a misdeed in the form of original poetry. Some of these songs are worse than others, and the worse they get the more popular they are. Popular songs are written by people who strive to produce one hit and then retire from the public gaze with their ill-gotten gain. Little did Chas. K. Harris dream, when he wrote "After the Ball" and adorned it with a large photograph of the author in a boiled shirt, that it would bring $40,000 to him and a deep sense of settled melancholy to everybody else. Mr. Harris is a fertile producer of songs, with a factory output of twelve complete ditties per day, but he has not been good for anything but a bunt toward third base since writing that nefarious masterpiece.

The best selling popular songs start out with an uneasy tempo and close in strict waltz time. After a person has met one of these songs a few times he will not have to be introduced to any of the others, as they come by the bolt and are dressed a good deal alike. They always deal with somebody who proved untrue just prior to the ring service and then comes back and hangs over the front gate in a repentant mood.

The most overworked subject of popular song writing is the full moon. This word rhymes nicely with "spoon" and also with "loon," although the latter is seldom used. It is a mighty poor song which doesn't ring in the moon, several pangs of regret and the assurance that the undersigned will remain true until death or thereabouts.

Popular songs are used with much success to bridge a gap at moving picture shows, the bridging being done in a rigid tone of voice by amateur vocalists who pronounce the words backwards. They are also sung with considerable ecstasy in the front parlor, and succeed in keeping father and mother in a state of profane wakefulness.

Grate's Cove Notes.

The trap fishery is to a close and all the traps are taken up, except the Hart Cove traps. There are six deep water traps, they are out as yet but they are doing nothing since August, except Norris Brothers. They are getting a little daily. Their average is not very good. Charles Hodder, two traps, 140 qts.; John Hodder, two traps, 130 qts.; Azariah King, 2 traps, 230 qts.; John Doyle, 100 qts.; Joseph Benson, two traps, 130 qts.; Joseph Benson, 100 qts.; John Avery, 160 qts.; Eliezer Avery, 190 qts.; Joseph Duggan, two traps, 170 qts.; Peter Noes, 100 qts.; John Snelgrove, 100 qts.; Jacob John Snelgrove, 300 qts.; H. Snelgrove, 220 qts.; E. Vey, two traps, 130 qts.; E. Benson, 60 qts.; J. Cooper, 50 qts.; C. Martin, two traps, 250 qts.; H. Meadus, 550 qts.; Norris Brothers, 500 qts.

Hook and line men are not doing half as good as last year, owing to no bait since the can't-a left. The squid is scarce and there is no fish. Lots of men have sold two qts. of fish since August; came in and more with bait have not 5 or 6 qts. The fishery is a failure. The hook and line men to-day have got from 15 to 20 qts., most near 20 qts. That is far below last year. They had from 40 to 50 qts. at this time.

We had a visit from Mr. Coaker's steamer with coal. There was 140 tons landed. It burns well. Grate's Cove is all alive with Coakerism. All the talk is down with Crosbie and Whiteaway. Their day is done. Coaker is the man in Bay de Verde District this time. It is time to put down the Grab-all crowd. Out with Morris and his gang for their doings are ridiculous. All the people of Grate's Cove want is Polling Day. That will be the glorious day when the Coaker banner will float high in the air for the fishermen of Newfoundland.

McGrath's Dirty Tactics

Yesterday McGrath made another bold break of the kind which has made his name a by-word and reproach in the community, and which prompted the Plaiddealer on Saturday to declare that "McGrath's name politically stands for everything that is lowest and basest in our public life" and to warn the People's Party leaders that "the less he is heard of in this campaign the better for the Government."

Obituary.

MRS. MARGARET STACK.
The death occurred yesterday at Petty Harbour of an estimable person. This was Mrs. Margaret Stack, wife of Mr. Thomas Stack, of that place. Mrs. Stack was formerly Miss Hoffmann, and was a sister of Mr. Martin Hoffmann, and was about 65 years old at the time of her death. Mrs. Stack had been failing health for some years and was for a while treated in the General Hospital. Besides her husband, Mr. Thomas Stack, who is so well and favourably known, there are left the following children to mourn her: Mrs. Augustus Chate, Petty Harbour; Mrs. Louise, of Arkon, Ohio; Mrs. Gertrude, of Canton, Ohio; Mr. John Stack, at Cobalt, and Thomas, Leo and Joseph, all now at Petty Harbour. To the bereaved father and relatives the Evening Telegram extends its sympathy.

Mr. Dooley's Reply.

Editor Evening Telegram.
Sir.—Answering J. M. Browne's letter in your issue of yesterday, I wish to state that I employed Mr. Browne as advertising solicitor out of pity as he gave me to understand that he was in needy circumstances. He was to work on a commission basis. He had no authority to collect a cent of the money due for advertising. He was dismissed for good and sufficient reasons which I do not care to state here. I did not need Mr. Browne's services, but I was willing to give him a chance to earn a little money as his condition was pitiable. If Mr. Browne thinks that he has been unjustly treated, he can easily find redress in the courts.

Yours sincerely,
W. M. DOOLEY.

MINDARD'S LINIMENT RELIEVES NEURALGIA.

Bay Roberts Ready for the Fight.

Editor Evening Telegram.
Dear Mr. Editor.—The few supporters of the Picnic Party in this town have received a rude shock. During the last fortnight they were consoling themselves with the thought that Sir R. Bond would not accede to the requests of his numerous friends and re-enter the political arena. Mr. Coaker and the Fishermen's Union have been painted in the worst possible colors ostensibly for the purpose of prejudicing the mind of Sir Robert Bond and his associates. Their devices have failed. Sir Robert, after due consideration, has responded to the call and stands to-day acclaimed as the incorruptible parliamentarian of our country.

Excitement ran high when it was known that Sir Robert's decision would appear in Saturday's Telegram, and considerable impatience was manifested by the opponents of the present Government. The train came, bringing the word that we all so anxiously sought. To the casual observer, however, was apparent that the holeders knew of Sir Robert's decision before the Telegram came, for floodings and despondency were depicted on the countenances. The glad tidings, however, quickly spread from one to the other, until Bay Roberts as a whole was in possession of it. Many wended their way to their homes with a feeling of safety and satisfaction, because this decision meant the finish of the worst Government since Newfoundland has been a self-governing Colony. Sir Robert Bond's name stands here for what is fair and right, and his candidates will receive such a measure of support as will astonish the whole country. From the end of the district to the other there comes the oft-recurring saying, "The Grabbals must go." Dissatisfaction and disgust are in evidence on all hands, and many of the People's Party supporters openly declare that it is no longer to oppose the Bond-Coaker combination.

The District of Harbor Grace has been badly neglected since Morris took office, and his candidates will have a hot time of it this autumn. Only a few days ago a Harbor Grace man, who strongly supported Piccott and Parsons last election, was prepared to bet that they would not be allowed to speak on the hustings Nominating Day.

The streets through Bay Roberts were never in such a deplorable condition. Rocks that were deeply placed as their foundations are protruding and smothering raising their heads. The people want to know where the road grants have gone. There is nothing to show that the grants have been expended for the last two or three years. Perhaps the "wise guys" who really "do things" here are keeping the road grants to expend this autumn for the purpose of catching our votes. The bait is stale and the Union has taught its members to shun it. We can see through the vanishing. Even the most illiterate man in this town can see and name the few who have who have prospered here under this Government. The few claim, and with good reason, that "this is the best Government for them," but the rank and file are only waiting for the day to turn the leaders and job-seekers about their business. The Union and Liberals here are agents of victory. We are sure, as the Fisherman's Advocate declares that "We Can't Lose." Last election the supporters of the Tory party indulged in tactics that were characteristic of rowdies and ruffians, and the Liberals stood it calmly, by restraining themselves. So completely did the latter keep themselves in hand that the former grew insolent and regardless of law and order to a reckless degree. We serve notice, however, that such tactics will not be

More Of It!

A GLARING ACT OF INJUSTICE.
It is said that the present ill-omened Government have committed another glaring act of injustice in the Postal Department, by the appointment of a noted West End heeler to the position so ably filled by Mr. Cox, who has spent many years of life in the postal service. Mr. Cox is appointed to a place provided for him upstairs in the building where there is "but little to do, to make room for the man with the Apostolic name, at $800 a year, while the faithful Mr. Cox is to suffer some reduction. The Government have from time to time been warned against making promotions and appointments that cannot now be duly authorized. This we learn has been done solely on the Premier's authority. It is further said that this concession was bestowed by the threat of defeat. We cannot see how such an egregious blunder could have been committed by the Premier, which perhaps will help as much as anything else to curtail his votes and lose his election.

Carbonear Hails Sir Robert Bond.

Dear Sir.—Carbonear is delighted over the fact that Newfoundland's greatest statesman, the Right Hon. Sir Robert Bond, has decided to lead the Opposition forces on to victory at the polls in November next. We are depending on him to put an end to graft and graballism. It is an undisputed fact Carbonear has suffered more in that particular than any other district in the country since the present Government was elected to power. Graft favoritism and family appointments has been their policy, while every-thing pertaining to the public welfare has been neglected. Carbonear is sick of paid patriots and placemen which is the make up of the Morris Party. Come on, Sir Robert, victory is yours. We congratulate you on the noble stand you have taken, your name stands for all that is noble and true.

Public Notice

PATSY, McGRATH, FAITHFULLY PORTRAYED.
Remember, men of the East, West, North and South, that one of Morris's own supporters in the Plaiddealer charges "that the name of P. T. McGrath stands for all that is low and base and vile," and yet this is the man who is the most unscrupulous individual who endavors to blacken others and to act in defence of clergymen in relation to whom some paragraphs in the Advocate have been wilfully and villainously misquoted and misapplied. No wonder that one of the Morris supporters faithfully warned him against any recognition of support from the clergymen's friend! I wonder if the professions of McGrath or the mysterious union existing between him and Morris, which it has been said cost the Colony about $10,000 during the past four years.—Com.

Contemptible!

Editor Evening Telegram.
Dear Sir.—One does not expect pearls from swine, but the article in last night's Herald in reference to Mr. Herder, is so excessively disgusting that Tories and Liberals alike are one in denouncing McGrath as a contemptible and unprincipled fellow, who has once more outraged all sense of decency in holding up a private transaction, perfectly ordinary, honest and straightforward in itself, and giving it publicity with a coloring that can only emanate from a disappointed, jealous and inferior mind.

Single-handed, Mr. Herder has made the Telegram what it is to-day: a slightly the greatest and best newspaper in Newfoundland. Unaided by Government patronage, we have seen its circulation going up by leaps and bounds during the past four years, and by its columns we have seen that business people recognize that as an advertising medium it outclasses all others.

Patsy in Banger!

Sounding the profoundest depths of corruption in journalism. There are thinking people—great minds in this colony at the present time, men who are too noble minded to resort to abuse for any purpose and the man who intends to profit by abuse of others and who conducts that abuse must be safely left to work out his own destiny without any very great effort on the part of an outraged electorate.

Was Jeffries Really Drugged.

New York, Aug. 24.—The direct statement that James J. Jeffries after his defeat by Jack Johnson at Reno sought and secured direct proof that he had been drugged before the battle with the negro is made in a signed article written by a New York sporting editor and published in an evening paper. The statement follows in part: "Jeffries hired one of the greatest detective agencies in the world to run down the facts. The details gathered make up a complete story of the most sordid plot that ever turned fair sport into a sure thing gamble. Possibly Johnson would have won in any case, but the clique that handled the betting made it a certainty by drugging Jeffries with the help of men who were in his confidence and who had the run of his camp. They cleaned up a fortune through betting commissions stationed in many cities. In Paris alone they wagered $24,000 and won $40,000. In Reno and San Francisco and Los Angeles and New York their gains went into the hundreds of thousands.

"The tip for the big killing was received by the waiting commissioner less than 24 hours before the fight when the gamblers knew that Jeffries was 'safe.'"

"The first plot was broached in a back room; the last man, necessary to its success, accepted his part in a meeting in Reno alley two nights before the fight, after having learned that he could make no more money with Jeffries and that he could win thousands by turning Judas. One man whose available cash was also secretly wagered on Johnson smilingly posed as a friendly adviser of Jeffries during the fight."

Importance of Waterplanes.

(London Daily Mail.)
The waterplanes will in the future become what the light cruiser were in the past, the eyes of the fleet. If only for that reason our navy must have them in abundance. Their importance and their tactical value are now understood by the Admiralty. Great efforts are at last being made to acquire a large number of waterplanes and to obtain delivery of them with all possible speed. But here, unfortunately, past obtuseness is hampering our authorities. The aircraft industry in this country has not been encouraged, and consequently it is not organized on such a scale that it is able suddenly to increase its output.

The Royal Trousseau.

All-British Materials for the Duchesses of Fife.

Much satisfaction is being expressed on all sides at the placing of the order for the trousseau of the Duchess of Fife, Princess Arthur of Connaught's bride elect, with all-British firms. Our own looms are already busy at work on the lovely silks and satins, which, later, will be developed into garments for the young Duchesses in British workrooms.

In Scotland, where the bride-elect has spent most of her life, and in Ireland the peasants are weaving linen and household fabrics for the home of the Royal household, and homespuns which she favours, like Queen Mary, are being woven in the same lands. Wales, too, is contributing its share for the household and personal adornment of the bride.

The Duchess of Fife favours an extremely simple style of dressing, and has never been seen in the collarless scanty gown fashionable among the women of to-day. Since childhood her dresses and those of her sister have not only been alike in fabric, but every detail of the make-up has been carried out in duplicate.

The two sisters throughout the season which is now at an end have been notable figures, attired exactly alike at the various functions which they attended in company with their mother, the Princess Royal, who also dresses in the simple style, invariably carried out in black.

The Royal wedding comes at a time of the year when society people are either abroad or on a round of country house visiting. The various functions which will take place right up to the event of the ceremony will bring back many people much earlier than usual, and it is expected that they will remain in town for the winter season, and a boom in trade is anticipated.

As the wedding will be a semi-State ceremony, the invitations being sent out by the Lord Chamberlain's office in the name of the Princess Royal, and as it is expected that the German Emperor, the German Crown Prince and Princess, the King and Queen of Norway, the Crown Prince and Princess of Sweden, the King and Queen of Spain, and, of course, all the English Royal Family will be present, dressmakers will be busy for weeks on the gowns for evening and day receptions, and as the bride is choosing all-British fashions, women will, no doubt, follow suit, as they did at the wish of Queen Mary at Coronation time. The principal entertainment, it is stated, will be an evening party at Clarence House before the wedding, but the Royal breakfast will provide an occasion for the display of beautiful English dresses.

Very good doughnuts can be made from sour milk. Take three-fourths cup of sugar, one egg, one-teaspoonful melted lard, one-half teaspoon of soda, a little cinnamon and nutmeg and use as little flour as possible.

AGAINST HEADACHE there is no remedy so active as Mathieu's Nerve Powders which contain no opium, morphine or choral. 25 cents per box of 18 powders.

What is a Gentleman?

Lord Roberts's Definition to a Hackney Audience.

The Eton Boys' Club at Hackney Wick, particulars of which were given in yesterday's Daily Graphic was formally opened by the president, Lord Roberts, last night.

Lord Roberts, who was enthusiastically received, said that he thought that a club of that kind had all the advantages of home without, perhaps, the difficulties of keeping it up. Surroundings in early life did more than anything to make a fine character, and character was, after all, the attribute which we should endeavour to gain, because, however clever one might be, if one had not character it was scarcely possible to get on in the world. His character meant behaving as a gentleman, and when he used the word 'gentleman' he meant not merely a gentleman by birth, but a gentleman by nature. (Cheers.) "I mean," continued Lord Roberts, "a man who is gentle, who is honest, who is truthful, and who is kind to all those with whom he is associated—a man who never behaves in a way which he would be ashamed of before his father and mother."

Our Empire did not come to us by accident. It came by the courage, fortitude, and enterprise of our forefathers, and it would have to be maintained. "I have been for some years," said his lordship, "endeavouring to awaken the country to the necessity of always being prepared for anything that may happen against us. We are a very small island and we have to depend upon ourselves for our own safety."

There ought to be a national army—an army of all the able-bodied men in the country, who would only be called upon to serve their own country in times of danger, and he asked the men and boys there to close their ears to all the "bogey" talk about "militarism" and "conscription."—Daily Graphic, July 1.

When to Cry.

There are millions of children in the world who want to do just the right thing and the very best thing, but they do not always know what just the right thing is, and sometimes they cannot tell the very best thing from the very worst thing.

Now I have often thought that there are children who cry, now and then, at the wrong time, and I have asked many of the older people, but none of them could tell me the best time to cry.

But the other day I met a man older and wiser than any of the rest. He was very old and very wise and he told me:

"It is bad luck to cry on Monday. To cry on Tuesday makes the eyes red.

"Crying on Wednesday is bad for children's heads and for the heads of older people.

"It is said that if a child begins to cry on Thursday he will find it hard to stop.

"It is not best for children to cry on Friday. It makes them unhappy.

"Never cry on Saturday. It is too busy a day.

"Tears shed on the Sabbath are all and bitter.

"Children should on no account cry at night. The night is for sleep. They may cry whenever else they please, but not at any of these times, unless it is for something serious."

I wrote down the rules just as the old man gave them to me. Of course they will be of no use to the older boys and girls. The wise man meant them for the little ones—the millions of little children who want to do the right thing and the very best thing.—St. Nicholas.

The Accursed Thaw Money

(New York World.)

Was there ever a greater curse than the Thaw money? It has been an affliction to its possessors from the first. It has burdened society with profligacy, scandal and crime. For several years it has been shamelessly used to defeat justice, to nullify law and to corrupt the authorities of a great State. If Harry Thaw had been born poor he might to-day have been a worthy man. It was not heredity that made him what he is. It was money. Money caused him to be an idler; money led him into evil associations; money distorted his views of right and wrong; money enabled him to contaminate others; money at last gave him the vices which unhinged him and added murder to the long list of his offences. Having ruined Thaw and others and carried him into the very shadow of the executioner, the Thaw money then cursed and degraded the State of New York at two trials that brought justice into contempt and scandalized our courts throughout the world. It was the Thaw money that saved him from the death penalty; it was the Thaw money that maintained a protracted contest in the courts to overthrow the judgment of insanity by which his life had been saved; it was the Thaw money that schemed ceaselessly for a release which could not be had by legal means. In the escape from Mattewan has the Thaw money gained one more triumph over law? Is the Thaw money to go hand in hand with the fugitive into remote States and countries, always at war with decency, always in conflict with society, always tempting, buying and debauching the weak and the vicious?

There ought to be a national army—an army of all the able-bodied men in the country, who would only be called upon to serve their own country in times of danger, and he asked the men and boys there to close their ears to all the "bogey" talk about "militarism" and "conscription."—Daily Graphic, July 1.

Saving the Babies.

(Providence Journal.)

A noteworthy and cheering piece of news comes from New York to the effect that the baby death rate in the city is lower for the first two weeks of July than it has been for several years. As the weather has been quite as warm as usual at this season on the lowered death rate is indicative of real progress in the care of the helpless little beings who have in the past been almost literally murdered by ignorance, carelessness and poverty. The better conditions are undoubtedly due to two sources. One of these is the spread of knowledge concerning the care of babies; the other is the campaign for better milk. It is probable that the average kindly intentioned person who has no expert knowledge or profound interest in civic improvement scarcely realizes what a tremendous fight has been carried on, often against seemingly insurmountable obstacles, by a few brave workers.

Household Notes.

To dry parsley, first wash it and shake well, then spread in a bake pan and put in a rather cool oven. When it becomes crisp, cool it and pack tight in glass cans.

Clean the teeth in the morning with powder; in the evening with an antiseptic mouth wash, and after every meal with cold water, to which you have added half a teaspoonful of salt.

Stain from hot dishes or wet flower vases will come out if rubbed with a rag dipped in linseed oil, then hold an iron two or three inches above the table. You will find the stain will disappear.

New shoes are sometimes difficult to make shine. Try brushing off the dust and dirt thoroughly, then rub them with lemon juice; after this has dried in, black and polish them in the usual manner.

A good sauce to serve with croquette is made in the following way: To one cup of drawn butter, add just before serving one-quarter cup of diced cucumbers and one teaspoon chopped parsley.

To make an oiled duster, cut cheese cloth the desired size, saturate it with whatever cleaning polishing oil you use, wrap the cloth in a compact bundle and leave it to saturate the entire piece of cloth.

To split a shortcake without burning the fingers, fill the pan half full of the batter, then spread it over with a teaspoonful of melted butter; then put the rest of the batter in. When the cake is baked it will split easily.

THE IMPERIAL OIL CO. LTD.

Gentlemen,—With reference to POLARINE OIL, we desire to say that we operated six Winton Six-Cylinder Cars on the Caribou Road in 1912, and these Cars travelled 22,430 miles during the season.

We used POLARINE exclusively, and found it superior to any other oil which we had previously tested, and while the cars were operated under all sorts of climatic conditions, we were so well pleased with the results obtainable from the use of POLARINE OIL that we propose to use nothing else on the eight Winton Cars which we will operate this year.

A Wife's Memorial Destroyed.

John Rosetter was summoned at Shoreham for maliciously destroying a memorial to the dead in the local cemetery. The defendant objected to a memorial placed on the grave of his wife, and it was alleged that he took it off the grave, threw it down, and broke it. He told the magistrates that his wife did not wish any flowers to be placed on her grave. The magistrate ordered the defendant to pay 7s. costs, and as no conviction was recorded against him, he was bound over to be of good behaviour for six months.

Since their arrival in Richmond three years ago, the Mayor writes in a letter to the Press, King Manuel and Queen Amelie have shown an active interest in all the social and philanthropic work of the town.

A $10,000 Housing Scheme.

The Corporation of Hartlepool has in contemplation a housing scheme which is estimated to cost about £10,000. There exists in the middle of the town a slum area between four and five acres in extent. This it is proposed to clear completely and to lay out and build streets of modern dwellings. The plans provide for the erection of about 70 houses of various sizes.

A Dumb Boy's Speech Restored.

A Leeds boy named Fred Denton, who became dumb ten years ago after a severe attack of influenza, recovered his speech last week while playing cricket with some companions at a crippled children's camp. The boy had been under Dr. Barnes at the Leeds General Infirmary, and the doctor, it is stated, had predicted the restoration of his speech.

A Child With an Adult's Brain.

Medical evidence at a Lambeth inquest showed that Arthur Edward Hedger, aged four years, son of parents living in Southville, Wandsworth road, S.W., had an adult's brain, weighing 47 ounces. The child died from acute bronchitis and pneumonia, and the jury returned a verdict accordingly.

Christian Scientist Charged With Manslaughter.

An enquiry into the death of Nora Annie Jewell, daughter of Benjamin Jewell, was concluded at Hornsey recently. The girl died on July 20, and at the previous hearing the parents admitted having relied on Christian Science treatment instead of calling in a doctor. Dr. Bell, who made a post mortem examination, said there were diphtheria germs in the girl's throat. The jury found that a doctor should have been called in to attend the child, and that death was accelerated by the want of medical aid, whereupon the Coroner formally committed the father for trial on a charge of manslaughter.

Be Vacationers.

The come back from the mountains, the cooling springs and fountains, the woodland, shore and crag, and of the ways they wandered, and of the days they squandered they stand around and brag, "While folks at home were steaming we lay in comfort dream-land," thus boastfully they cry; "we sailed upon the waters, while you, with swishing swatters, pursued the pesky fly. We climbed the hills, where vision is had of views elysian, of fields and streamlets wet; we roamed in gay savannahs while you, with cheep bandanas, were mopping off the sweat. We strayed in pleasant meadows, we basked in soothing shadows, we bathed in waters sweet, we did our gallivanting while you at home were panting in forty kinds of heat." Thus speak the jays returning, to us who have been burning, who have not ceased to broil, to us, who bore the burden, who stayed at home to gird on our armour and to toll. Their jawbones should cease wagging, and we should do the bragging, if bragging must be done; while they were idly straying, in pleasant places playing, we worked and earned the mon-ey down to our tanks we buckled while gallivants chucked o'er two-cent fish they caught; we toiled while friends were fooling around the woods or tooling an imitation yacht.

To clean a vinegar crust, put a teaspoonful of lye in it and then fill it with water. Let it remain in it for a few days, then rinse the crust out thoroughly. It will be perfectly clean.

Sky-scraper 901 Feet.

Pan-American States Association Plans Building.

New York, August 23.—A sky-scraper whose topmost tower will rise 901 feet above the curb is planned by the Pan-American States Association. Unless plans miscarry it will be built in this city, constructed wholly of material from the Latin-American republics, will wrest from the Woolworth building the distinction of being the world's tallest habitable structure, and will be ready for occupancy with the opening of the Panama Pacific exposition in California in 1915.

Francis H. Kimball, designer of notable down town skyscrapers, made the plans. The estimated cost of the structure will be $9,000,000. The site has not yet been selected. It is intended to erect the building as an enduring monument to Pan-American industry. The Woolworth building is 750 feet high, the Metropolitan, its nearest rival, 700 feet.

Your Duty.

Nothing to do with the Custom House, good friend, its only reference just now is to yourself. Let us suppose that you are a man of family with sufficient of the world's goods to keep them in comfort. Very well, you did not reach this satisfactory state of affairs without care and labour—few men do. Suppose you are awakened some night with shouts of alarm ringing in your ears. Too late then to talk of prudence; too late then to say: "If I had only, etc., etc." That "if" means too much to many forgetful people. Is it not always the duty of a self-respecting citizen to protect his home and thus provide for those within it. Is it any more than his duty to those depending on him to protect them as far as possible? Can you call your property your own when it is not insured? The answer to this argument is to carry insurance with Perle Johnson's agency, the most popular office in Newfoundland and the least expensive.

Duchess is Very Wealthy.

On the day of her marriage the Duchess of Fife will come into an income of $50,000 a year. Upon the death of her mother she will inherit Mar Lodge, the beautiful home of the Fife family, as well as the Princess Royal's house in London, and will have a total income of about $200,000. She is a quiet, refined girl, very fond of outdoor sports. As a child she was a familiar figure in Kemp town, Brighton. Every morning she and her sister, with their governess, in attendance, could be seen bowling their hoops in Sussex Square. Often they would play with the other children. One young man-to-day relates with pride that the Duchess of Fife first taught him to bowl his hoop. Few people realized that the two plainly-dressed, fair-complexioned little girls were the grandchildren of Queen Victoria.

Ralph Connor, Winnipeg, Inaugurates Up-to-Date Ideas in Social Service.

Winnipeg, Aug. 26.—To-morrow, Rev. C. W. Gordon's (Ralph Connor), congregation of St. Stephen's Presbyterian Church, will open their new building, which has been built with the object of providing something far in advance of any idea carried out by Presbyterians in Canada in the direction of social service work.

It is a beautiful, commodious structure adjoining the church, and cost $100,000. It contains a moving picture theatre with a beautifully fitted-up apparatus, pool and billiard rooms, reading rooms for both sexes, kitchen, banquet hall, and gymnasium.

In connection with the latter provision is made for all suits, etc., worn in gymnasium to be sent to the laundry every twenty-four hours in the interests of sanitation.

In the kitchen provision is made for young people preparing everything used in hot dinners.

Charged with Theft of Pair of Black Foxes.

Portland, Me., Aug. 25.—Lemuel E. Coughlin, who was detained by the police last night at the request of a Prince Edward Island constable, who had a warrant charging the larceny of a pair of breeding black foxes valued at $18,000 each, was released to-day. In the opinion of the chief of police and the country attorney, there was insufficient evidence to warrant holding the prisoner.

At an informal hearing held before immigration commissioner Elliott, it was decided that in the absence of a request from the Canadian authorities no action could be taken on the question of deporting.

Old-Time Hermits.

Hermits, of whom, according to recently published statistics, there are 990 in modern Italy, were a century or more ago regarded as a picturesque feature of English country homes. Samuel Rogers records that "Archibald Hamilton, afterward Duke of Hamilton, advertised for a hermit as an ornament to his pleasure grounds; and it was stipulated that the said hermit should have his beard shaved but once a year, and that only partially." Mark Powyss, an English squire, offered £250 a year for life to any man willing to live as a hermit on his estate for seven years. He was to be well supplied with provisions, books and other comforts, and in return had to abstain from straying around his heritage and from cutting his hair, beard or nails. The offer was accepted by a man who abode by the conditions for four years and then threw up the job.

Minimise The Loss.

Practically farmers may easily minimise the loss, due to a backward and cold season, by the judicious use of Sulphate of Ammonia as a fertilizer.

Sulphate of Ammonia contains over 20 per cent of nitrogen, as against 15 per cent in Nitrate of Soda, and is therefore more than 25 per cent better than nitrate of soda as a means of quickening and increasing the growth of crops.

The use of Sulphate of Ammonia has increased enormously of late years and it is recognized to be the most valuable fertilizer obtainable. By its judicious use the production of root crops per acre may be doubled, and the growth of late crops stimulated.

We invite the attention of Farmers to our special pamphlet on the best methods of using Sulphate, copies of which will be forwarded free to any address on application.

The price of Sulphate is moderate, and our terms are accommodating.

ALWAYS MASTER OF THE ROAD.

Look for the Dunlop Traction Tread trail on asphalt and on mud. It's the "V" line to comfort. No chains; no skidding.

A WEATHERABLE TIRE.

It is just weather like we get here in Newfoundland that gives Dunlop Traction Tread Tires a chance to show their class—and motorists who have them know it.

Created because of the insufficiency of the so-called non-slip or "buttoned" tread.

Marketed only after the most exhaustive tests ever given to an anti-skid tire.

Proven itself the only real anti-skid tire obtainable—bar none. That's OLIVER CROMWELL died 1658, aged 59. He was as great a statesman as he was a general, and although his constructive policy at home left no permanent trace on English History, which has developed on far other lines than he approved, yet his destructive work in safeguarding English liberties, both civil and religious, has been permanent. Under his rule England was prosperous at home and successful abroad. He was one of the greatest of Englishmen, long execrated as a regicide, now revered as a hero, saint and demigod, guilty of many mistakes, but animated by the highest ideals of religion and liberty.

Does a man speak foolishly?—suffer him gladly, for you are wise. Does he speak earnestly?—develop such a man's mouth with sound words that cannot be gainsaid. Does he speak truly?—rejoice in the truth.

—Cromwell.

SOPIA, Sept. 2. General Savoff, former Commander in chief of the Bulgarian army, and M. Tocheff, former Bulgarian Minister at Belgrade, have been appointed delegates to assist the former Bulgarian foreign minister in negotiations between Bulgaria and Turkey.

MANCHESTER, Sept. 2. The first business of the Trades' Union Congress to-day, was the adoption of a resolution denouncing the virulent terms of the Lord Lieutenant of Ireland in prohibiting the meetings and straggling free speech in Dublin; also condemning the brutality of the police. James Sexton, who moved the resolution, declared that anything done by James Larkin, one of the arrested strike leaders in Dublin, was white as compared with the blackness of the Irish Unionist leader, Sir Edward Carson and his associates. He expressed indignation that such treatment could be meted out to workers in a city like Dublin, with a Nationalist Council.

PRESCRIPTION "A."

Very Highly Recommended by An Outport Man.

Please send me by mail 1 large bottle of Stafford's Prescription "A". Enclosed you will find 50 cents, also 10 cents for postage. You sent me a trial size a few days ago and it almost cured my wife. Another 50 cent bottle will make a cure. I have tried doctors and all kinds of medicine, but I don't believe that there is any medicine that can cure a bad stomach like STAFFORD'S PRESCRIPTION "A". I am more than thankful that ever you advertised that medicine. Please forward as soon as possible, as I am waiting anxiously for it.

Drunk on Codliver Oil.

When Henry Weaver, of Chatham Township, Ont., appeared in the County Police Court recently to answer to a charge of being drunk while on the interdicted list, he stated that while he may have been intoxicated on that particular day he became so by using a certain preparation of cod liver oil. He confessed to having taken in all eighteen bottles of the remedy during the past few months. A bottle of the mixture shown in court and printed on the label, "24 per cent alcohol."

The Habit of Being Good-looking.

Are you known by your acquaintances as a good-looking young woman? Do they call you a pretty girl? Or do they say of you, "She is so homely!"

Go and look in the mirror, and ask yourself frankly if you are as nice-looking as you could be. If your hair is thin, it is no excuse for your twisting it up in a little tight knot on the top of your head. If your skin is sallow and full of blackheads and pimples, you have been neglecting yourself. If you are too fat, or too thin, or your clothes do not look pretty on you, do not give up hope. What you really need is a cold shower bath to awaken you to activity. You can be as attractive and charming as the friends you envy.

But perhaps you think attractiveness and charm are not a part of beauty. They are so much a part that they are beauty in themselves. Frequent bathing, clean and pretty clothing, glossy and becomingly arranged hair, a clear, rosy complexion, bright, happy eyes, these charms are yours if you are willing to try for them.

Let me whisper a few secrets in your ear. But to be perfectly frank with you, they are not secrets, because every one has heard them over and over so much we do not consider them seriously.

If your hair is thin, give your scalp a good massage every day, and use a good hair tonic. Study to arrange the hair in the most becoming fashion. Brush it often, and keep it clean. An article will appear in the near future giving a few suggestions on dressing the hair.

If you have pimples and blackheads, perhaps you are not getting enough exercise, enough fresh air and out of doors. Maybe you are not eating enough fruits, and too much meats and pastries. Wash the face thoroughly clean before going to bed. Green soap is a wonderful cure for pimples and blackheads.

You can acquire good habits, you know, as well as bad ones. Brush your hair and comb it every evening. Give your scalp a good massage, and give it a sun and air bath often. Take a few minutes each day to manure your finger nails. You can do it yourself, with a little practice, and it is these little attentions that make up the really good-looking woman.

Take a tepid warm bath every day and if you are strong enough to bear the shock, a cold shower after the warm bath will be like a tonic to you. These things give you energy, and put you in a good humor, and that is a big factor in looking pretty. Study your defects, and build them up, smile and laugh all you can. They are wonderful beautifiers. The real secret of it all is that being charming, being attractive, well dressed, and even good-looking, are habits. You may have to school yourself, and be persistent to acquire these habits, but they are worth while. Try it yourself, and you will agree with me. Get yourself and others used to thinking of you as a charming and good-looking woman.—Mme. Jeanne La Place in Woman's World for September.

Try It.

Angus Carney, who has announced that he is his own grandfather, has his neighbors doing mental arithmetic which makes the age of Anne a mere primary problem. He has compiled the following: "I met a widow with a grown daughter and I married the widow. Then my father met my step-daughter and married her. That made my wife the mother-in-law of her father-in-law, and made my step-daughter my step-mother. My father became my step-son.

"Then my step-mother, the daughter of my wife, had a son. That boy was, of course, my brother, because he was my father's son. But he was also the son of my wife's daughter and therefore my grandson. That made me grandfather of my wife's grandson.

Then my wife had a son. My mother-in-law, the step-sister, is also his grandmother, because he is her step-son's child. My father is the brother-in-law of my child, because the step-sister is his wife. I am a brother of my own son, who is also the child of my step-grandmother. I am my mother's brother-in-law. My wife is her child's aunt. My son is my father's nephew and I am my own grandfather."
