ANSWER THIS. It won't do for Canadian free traders to arn their heads the other way and preend that they don't hear when we are getting by cable such items as the following: A meeting of a joint committee of cotion spinners, manufacturers and operators of Lancishire was held in Manchester re-day (25 h), to consider the depressed condition of the cotton trade and to arrange a scale of wages. The market is suff-ring from over production. The masters propose to reduce the wages; the workmen oppose this, and suggest that the producction be curtailed by working shorter time The meeting resulted in the adoption of an agreement by which the operatives resume work forthwith pending further negotiations. Those who argue that protection is the cause of short time in Canadian cotton mills are bound to explain what it is that is causing the same thing in England, on an immensely larger scale.

O BLE COMPETICION. The probabilities of competition in the cable business appear to be improving. We hear now from London that Ald. Hadley's company has a ready secured five million iollars of its required capital of seven and a half million dollars, and that the balance is guaranteed by California Mackey and other American capitalists. Before long the new ompany will have its cable, or cables rather, laid across the Atlantic; and the ssurance is given that the rate will in no ase exceed twenty-five cents per word. It will probably be even less than this, for undoubtedly the Anglo-American will begin cutting against its new competitors, and the cutting will go on until a compromise is arrived at. The new cable can do little without and connection, and this it is expected will be furnished by the postal telegraph company, of which Mackey lately became pre sident, and which is now preparing for United States. It appears therefore that we are likely to have lower cable rates ere

THE CANADA LIFE ASSURANCE COMPANY. The thirty-sixth annual meeting of this company, and the first held in the new premises, marks the 25th of September, 1883, as a red letter day in its record. The progress of the Canada Life during these years has really been wonderful for this new country. As the pioneer life company of Canada, and in the comparative magnitude of its operations, it parallels in ne branch of business what the Bank of Montreal is in another. What the latter is mong Canadian banks, the former unquestionably is among Canadian life assurance companies: it holds unchallenged the first place. Mr. Ramsay had fitting occasion, and very properly used it, to recall ing reminiscence of the company's history, and to cite some figures showing its remarkable rise and proress. Of the twenty original founders of the company (in 1847), only four survive to day; and two of these-Mr. Nehemiah Merritt and Mr. James Osborne-are still on the board of directors. With a happy application of arithmetic to the facts of the case, Mr. Ramsay divided the thirty-six years of the company's existence into three 12-year cycles, and quoted the following figures, showing income for one year and aggregate amount insured at the end of each one of the three periods, thus:

These figures put a very remarkable record within small compass: but more striking still is the company's present rate of progress, as shown in the fact that annual me, assets, and amount assured, are now nearly double what they were respectively six years ago. In other words, the company has gained as much business during the last six years as it did during the thirty years preceding. If the actuaries will permit us, we will say that this seems to show an advance, not in arithmetical, but in geometrical progression. And very evidently the advance is still going on. We refer our readers to the full report of the meeting, which will be found in another column.

With justifiable pride Mr. Ramsay referred, also, to the splendid and substantial building in which the annual meeting was held this year for the first time. For solidity of structure, architectural style, and adaptation to such purposes as intended for the Canada Life company's building is positive'y unmatched in Canada. And people from other places visiting Hamilton might find much interest in examining and seeing with their own eyes the very complete and elegant arrangements of its interior.

The Christian Guardian believes there is no foundation for the report going the rounds of the American methodist press to the effect that Rev. Dr. Douglas of Montreal theological college, has accepted a position as president of Hobart college.

When a California man thinks of setting out for Chicago or New York he says that he is going "to the States." It is not surprising, therefore, to find the Victoria, THE CANADA LIFE ASSURANCE COMPANY, HAMILTON, Aug. 7, 1883. In coming before the shareholders in the company's new premises, on the occasion of their 36th annual meeting, the directors offer their hearty congratulations upon its completion and occupation. It affords the extended office accommodation which the company's largely increased business requires, and supplies the best class of fireproof vaults, necessary for the protection of the company's books and records. It will, moreover, give satisfaction to the shareholders to know that a most perfect burglar-proof strong room has been provided, to contain the debentures and other valuable securities in which the larger proportion of the company's funds and assets are invested, in place of the previous inefficient provision for them, which had long given the directors much cause for anxiety and apprehension The convenience and eligibility of that portion of the building not at present necessary for the company's own purposes have led to its being readily leased, upon terms which make it a fair and prudent investment, and the attractions of the structure itself have called such a degree of attention to the stability and advantages of the company, as have greatly contributed to make the business of the past year the largest and most successful it has ever

Mr. Ramsay then said: GENTLEMEN: Upon the occasion of your first meeting is the company's new premises, it seems a fitting opportunity to glande very briefly at the history and progress of the institution gives its stablishment.

Of the twenty original founders of the company at that time, there are to-day, I serret to say, only four alive; but I am happy to add that we have the good fortune to have still two of these gentlemen connected with it, as directors. I allude to Messrs. Nehemiah Merritt and James Osborne.

When the company was originated, 36 years ago, it was then, I believe, the only Canadian Life office which had been attempted, and the public, very naturally deeming it an experiment of which the success was very far from certain, was alow to give it support and countensuccess was very far from certain, was slow to give it support and countenance. Its success was consequently in its early years, although sound and substantial es far as it went, but very limited and gradual, as a glance at the figures of each of the three 12 yearly cycles since 1847 indicates. These show that in 1859, after twelve years' efforts, the income was but $127,727, and the sums assured $3,105,401. In 1871, after 24 years, the income had become $355,437, and the sums assured $8,309,111, while now in 1883. after 36 years, the income reaches $1,150,338, and the sums assured $30,139,095.

The early figures of the business well indicate the difficulties with which a new institution of the kind had then to contend in inducing persons to appreciate the benefits of life assurance and in inspiring that public confidence in a novel Canadian enterprise, which was essential to make it successful. Your directors, however, felt that patient perseverance in a careful and prudent management, combined with strictly just and liberal dealings with its assurers would in due time secure its success, and would in due time secure its success, and the figures I have already given you amply prove that they have not been mistaken nor disappointed. In the past upon 137 lives, under 163 policies, for the sum of $329,735.72, while the mortality exits income and sums assured to about twice sum of $329,735.72, while the mortality expected and calculated upon was for an amount of $400,035.

The company's assets have been increased during the year by the large sum of $553, 617,632, or in these six years to about double what they were at the end of the 30 years and the assets are to day raised to $5,617,632, or in these six years to about double what they were at the end of the 30 years referred to. These details prove the high degree of public confidence enjoyed by the company and we cannot doubt that a continuence of the same principles and prac ices, which have already produced such during the year, at the rate of 15 per cent successful results in the past, will yet further add to them in the future. Since the commencement of the company it has paid to the families and representatives of deof the proprietors account the balance of $101,818.90, as at April 30 last.

In accordance with the company's charter the following gentlemen whose names stand first on the list of directors, retire from the hoard, but are eligible for re-election: John Stnart, Esq., Dennis Moore, Esq., William Hendrie, Esq., all of Hamilton; Geo. A. Kirkpatrick, Esq., M. P., Kungston; and A. G. Ramsay, Eso., Hamilton. cash value of $788,834, making a total cash profit allowed to policy holders, amounting to $1,770,507.

The report and accounts before you contain, I think, such a clear expession of the business of the past year as to render it unnecessary to trouble you by any lengthened remarks as to them, but there are some points in the progress of the year to which I may draw your attention, more especially as during it the company's success has so greatly exceeded that of any similar period.

You have been informed by the report that the year's new assurances resched the large amount of $4,534,734. Such results indicate a most gratifying measure of success attained by the energetic labors of your acents and officers who are thereby your agents and officers, who are thereby adding to the business of the company at the rate of over $12,000 per day. These new assurances produce a corresponding new premium income of $142,376.51, and thus add a larger sum to the income in that single year than the whole amount of income which had been secured at the end of the first 20 years. The total income of the past year was state total income of the past year was $1,150.337 72, or more than $3000 per day, and $558,425 68 were added to the assets, bringing them up to a total of $5,617,632.33. The death claims last year were, as might be expected, in excess of those of as might be expected, in excess of those of the previous year, but they were largely under what was anticipated and provided for, and I may mention that during so much of the current year as has already elapsed since May 1 last, the claims by much of the current year as has already clapsed since May I last, the claims by death have been remarkably light, being just about one-half of what they were at the same date for the corresponding period last year. Of course it is quite likely that such an extremely favorable state of matters in that respect may not continue to the end of the year, but it is in the meantime as favorable feature of which you will be pleased to learn. It is satisfactory to be able to point to the gradual decrease of the percentage of the company's expenses. It is already of quite a moderate amount, and it will continue to be further reduced from time to time, so far as that can be done consistently with the efficient conduct and extension of the business and the company's best interests. The next division of the profits takes place in 1885, and while I desire to speak with great caution and hesitation as to the probable result of that, avoiding any prediction as to it, for like the profits of any other business they may be affected one way or the $5,844,854 76 will continue to be further reduced from time to time, so far as that can be done consistently with the efficient conduct and extension of the business and the company's best interests.
