Mr. T. S. SPROULE (East Grey). Naturally, I had some curiosity before speaking to know what position the government would take on this question, because, it being an amendment to a motion to go into Supply, it would be regarded under ordinary circumstances as a motion of want of confidence. But the government have not given any intimation of what they are going to do about it. If it was a motion regarding the embargo on cattle, of course they would regard is as a motion of want of confidence as they did a day or two ago. Are they going to place the Irish in the same position ? So far they have not given us any intimation of what they will do. I do not propose to talk at great length on this question, because I imagine no good purpose would be served by so doing. I wish to say a few words with regard to the hon. member for Victoria (Hon. Mr. Costigan), who introduced this question. He told the House that twenty years ago he had introduced a similar resolution, and had supported such resolutions at various times since, and had not changed his mind. Well, evidently twenty year's experience in this House has taught him nothing with regard to the wisdom or unwisdom of frittering away the time of this House to no good purpose. The hon. member said, when some evidence of dissent was given regarding his resolution, that he recognized it came from both sides of the house, that he did not regard with favour such sneers against the Irish people. I was watching very attentively at the time, and that was not the interpretation that I put upon the dissent that was offered from both sides of the House regarding this motion. There was no intention to sneer at the Irish people, nor to offer any insult to them, but the dissent was rather an expression of opinion of the unwisdom of the hon. member in introducing such a resolution into this House. The hon. member stated that parliament had expressed itself on several occasions regarding this question. It did, that is true ; but not always in the same direction. The history contained in the 'Hansard' shows that the question was before this House at different times, and was dealt with in various ways. It is true that the hon. member brought it up twenty years ago, and then, out of the generosity and kindness of heart of members on both sides of the House, they allowed the resolution to pass without much comment. At the same time many of them, doubting the wisdom of that action, came to the conclusion that if it did no good it would do no harm. But the reproof that was given to the Canadian parliament then, and which I will read later on, gave parliament a lesson which I am sure many of us have profited by ever since.

The hon. member went on to say: 'Has home rule become so unpopular in this House that the mention of it provokes dissent from the people?' It was not the question of home rule, or the wisdom or unwisdom of giving home rule to Ireland, that provoked dissent on the part of some members of this House; it was rather the unwisdom of introducing such a question into the Canadian parliament. The hon. member said later on: 'Gladstone said that the most important message that ever crossed the Atlantic was the resolution of the Canadian parliament regarding home rule.' I thought at the time it would be interesting if the hon. gentleman had read the reply given by one of Mr. Gladstone's colleagues in the cabinet, Earl Kimberly to the resolutions sent home in 1882, and if he had done so, it would have been a fitting answer to the allegations that the hon. gentleman made.

I have only to say that home rule, and analagous questions have been introduced into this House at various times and they have been discussed—I think unwisely introduced and unwisely discussed, because I have always regarded it as entirely out of the line of our duty, or of our right, or even of the part of wisdom that we should introduce and discuss these questions. It is neither our duty nor our right to advise the imperial parliament regarding the government of any portion of Great Britain or Ireland. That is the duty of the imperial parliament. We are not charged with that responsibility, we are not charged with that duty; we are here to legislate for the peace, order and good government of Canada and not for Ireland, and therefore I have always regarded it as very much out of place that we should deal with such questions here. I have a high authority, the authority of a very eminent man in England for saying so. I have the authority of the Earl of Kimberley for saying so in the answer which he gave to the resolutions which were sent home in 1882. But, before dealing with that I want to speak of other questions, because I put all of these vexed questions on a par, all these analagous resolutions which are of an inflamatory character and which tend to arouse animosity and discord between two classes of people in this country, between Roman Catholics and Protestants. What is the history of these resolutions? Let me refer to them for a short time. In 1869 the first resolution introduced into the Canadian parliament was in regard to the disestablishment and disendowment of the Irish church. That was a question which, like the home rule question belonged only to the imperial parliament and the imperial parliament was charged with the responsibility and duty of settling it and was endeavouring to settle it at that time. I notice that some of the present hon. members of this House took part in that debate. Looking back over 'Hansard' I see that some very pertinent remarks were made in reference to that discussion which I intend to refer to very briefly. I shall take those of the late Sir John Macdonald who was a very high authority. He went on to say that it was imprudent to introduce these questions and that it was wrong and proceeded:

> Now, surely, it was an extraordinary course on the part of the hon. member who had introduced the resolution——

That was the Hon. Mr. Holton who had introduced the resolution.

> —to ask the House to deal with a matter with which it had no concern, and render itself amenable to the answer that 'it should mind its own business.' The hon. member acknowledged that our parliament should not deal with such a matter, except in a case of supreme necessity.

And Sir John Macdonald said:

> There was no supreme necessity for the motion.

Then we have a statement by the Hon. Joseph Howe, a statesman whom I have always regarded as one of the very ablest men that Canada has produced. I shall read his remarks. He said:

> This House had lately been increasing its sphere of labours enormously, and its responsibility was now greater than ever rested upon any other one hundred and eighty men since representative institutions began to exist. When he looked at the work before them, at the responsibility they were about to assume he thought that if they did not want to make themselves a laughing stock before the world they should at least mind their own business. He did not hesitate to say that as an individual he favoured the measure now before the imperial parliament——

That was the measure for the disestablishment of the Irish church.

> —and in his own province he had always stood up for equal rights to all sects and all nationalities. If they, with all the responsibility resting upon them, with all the work before them, were to meddle with affairs across the Atlantic, they would exhibit a spectacle to the world that he would be very sorry to see. He did not doubt that the hon. gentleman from Chateauguay was actuated with a good motive in offering this resolution, but he believed the effect of the motion would be bad. He found in this country Protestants and Catholics dwelling together in accord, and he believed this motion was calculated to cast a fire brand among them.

Hon. Mr. HOLTON. Explain why; I deny that.

Mr. COWAN. What is the date of that?

Mr. SPROULE. That was in 1869. These words of wisdom are from one of the ablest men, I think, who ever occupied a seat in the Canadian parliament.

Mr. FRASER. The ablest.

Mr. SPROULE. In view of that and in view of the answer that we got to our resolution in 1882, I am inclined to the opinion that we do an improper thing to introduce these questions. When the hon. member for Victoria, N.B. (Hon. Mr. Costigan) made a statement that Mr. Gladstone said the most important question that had ever crossed the Atlantic was the Canadian home rule resolution, I said I would like then to have the reply of Mr. Gladstone's minister—no doubt concurred in by Mr. Gladstone himself—to the resolution moved by the hon. member for Victoria in 1882 when the House was—I was almost going to say—cajoled into passing it almost unanimously out of good nature so that it might not become a political question. In 1882 the reply sent to the Marquis of Lorne, the Governor General of that day, by the Earl of Kimberley reads as follows:—

My Lord,—I received and laid before the Queen the address to Her Majesty from the Senate and House of Commons of Canada, in parliament assembled, which was transmitted in your lordship's despatch of the 16th of May.

I am commanded by Her Majesty to request that you will convey to the Senate and the House of Commons, Her appreciation of the renewed expressions of their unswerving loyalty and devotion to Her Majesty's person and government.

Her Majesty will always gladly receive the advice of the parliament of Canada in all matters relating to the Dominion, and the administration of its affairs, but with respect to the questions referred to in the address, Her Majesty will, in accordance with the constitution of this country, have regard to the advice of the imperial parliament, and ministers, to which all matters relating to the affairs of the United Kingdom exclusively appertain.

These questions exclusively appertain to the imperial parliament and we are numbered amongst those who are excluded from dealing with them. That was the answer that came from Mr. Gladstone's cabinet to the resolutions that were sent home in 1882. Ever since that I regarded the rebuff which we got as well merited and I have ever since that opposed the introduction of such questions into the House of Commons because I thought that—

Mr. COWAN. Where could that statement be found?

Mr. SPROULE. That can be found in 'Hansard' in the debate on the home rule resolution in 1886. The impropriety of this will be apparent if we think for a moment that England ought to have as good a right, yes, even a better right, to give advice to us than we have to give advice to her. Let us suppose that England was to interfere in our business with her advice. There are a number of people in the province of Quebec, and outside of it too, who think that there are existing conditions in that province which do not tend for the welfare of the country. Suppose the English parliament should say: We think in the interest of the country that you should amend your system of government in Quebec. Let that advice from England refer to the church, and I merely mention this by way of illustration. I understand that there is a great deal of land and property belonging to the church in Quebec—I speak of the Roman Catholic Church and with no disrespect to it—that church has the right to take a tithe out of its own people and apply it to the wants of the church, and in other ways they have control over the people which a great many think is not for the best interest of the people of the province. Suppose that the imperial parliament should ask the Canadian parliament to amend that condition of things by legislation, how would the people of Quebec like it, or for that matter how would the people of Ontario like it. Would we not regard it as an unreasonable interference with the rights of the Canadian parliament? I might quote other examples but that will suffice. If we have a right to advise England with regard to what legislation she shall pass on Irish affairs and as to what form of government she should have, then I say that England has as good a right to advise us as to what particular form of government we should have in the province of Quebec, the province of Ontario, or any other province of the Dominion. Let us apply the same rule to England that we would like England to apply to Canada. And, could we not with equal propriety advise the government of Great Britain as to what form of government she should establish in the South African colonies. We do not interfere in that case because we know that it is the right of the imperial parliament and of the imperial parliament alone to be charged with that responsibility. So it is in the case of the government of Ireland. If we have the right to advise England as to her policy, then we have equally the right to advise the government of any other British colony as to what they should do, and I suppose that no one in this House would think it the part of wisdom to interfere in such a direction. I have always held the belief that we in this Canadian parliament should address ourselves to the duties for which we were elected, and which appertain to the government of the Canadian people. On different occasions this parliament has wasted its time debating questions analogous to the one before us. In 1869 Mr. Holton introduced a motion here with regard to the disestablishment and disendownment of the Irish church. That was to no good purpose for the imperial parliament dealt with the question and dealt with it satisfactorily quite regardless of anything which we did in the Canadian parliament. The wisest of our statesmen thought in 1869 that it was an impropriety for Mr. Holton to introduce that question here. In 1882 we had a home rule resolution introduced by the Hon. John Costigan and it was debated at great length. In the generosity of our hearts we allowed him to carry that resolution, and I am sorry to believe that it created the false impression on the mind of the imperial parliament that the Canadian parliament was unanimous on the question. I know as a fact that it was no such a thing, but out of generosity for the Irish people and the hon. member, and so as to prevent it being made a political question the motion was allowed to be carried almost unanimously. I do not regard this as a political question, Sir; I never did, never shall or never will. In 1884 another home rule resolution was introduced. In 1886 a similar resolution was introduced by the Hon. Edward Blake. I was glad to know that Mr. Blake has gone to that arena where his great powers and his great ability might be used to better purpose in advocating Ireland's wants than in the Canadian parliament, but I noticed that he has made few of the long speeches over there on that question that he treated us to in the Canadian parliament. There are some people who are uncharitable enough to suggest that at times this question has been introduced in the Canadian parliament for political purposes. I will not say that is the case, but I will say that it is most unfortunate that for that or some other reason it is constantly cropping up here. Again in 1887 we had a home rule motion introduced by the Hon. Mr. Curran who is now a respected judge. It was debated by the hon. member for Victoria, N.B. (Hon. Mr. Costigan) and there was a vote on it. After 1882 when we got that reply from Mr. Gladstone's cabinet there was always a dissent in this House to the discussion of such a question, and so in 1887, forty-seven members voted against it, and a great many more would have voted against it but for the fact that they thought a wrong construction might have been put upon their vote. This resolution in 1887 was sent to the High Commissioner in London, but whether it ever got to the imperial government we do not know, because it has never been resurrected out of the archives since. In 1889 the home rule question was introduced and debated here. The motion was defeated by an amendment, and it was not carried. In 1891 we had another proposal to debate such a resolution in this House, but accidently or for some unknown reason it was dropped, and very suddenly dropped at the time. That motion was introduced by Mr. Cook. Now for the sixth time we have it introduced again. Surely in the light of the experience of the past, we have reached that period in the history of the Canadian parliament when we should keep such questions out of the arena of this House. The rule was laid down in 1869 by Sir John Macdonald and by the Hon. Mr. Howe, that such questions as this ought never be imported into the House of Commons of Canada except on two grounds. One of these was, the supreme necessity at the time being, and as he declared there was no supreme necessity for it then. The other ground was the question of supreme importance to the empire, and in his judgment he thought it came within neither of these justifiable reasons. It was neither of supreme necessity nor of supreme importance.

In my judgment, such a resolution is especially inopportune just now, and why? Because at the present time the imperial parliament is dealing with the Irish question in a way that is commanding the respect and admiration of the world. The imperial parliament is prepared, in order to relieve Ireland of her embarrassment and settle her troubles, to grant $60,000,000 as a free gift to help one class of the Irish tenantry, and in addition to that is prepared to pledge the credit of Great Britain to the extent of $750,000,000 as an evidence of her good will and her desire to settle this vexed question in a way to make Ireland contented, loyal and happy. Great Britain is doing this at the expense of the British taxpayer, and she is doing it of her own free will and accord, without any pressure being brought to bear upon her from any quarter of the world. In view of that fact, am I not justified in saying that the hon. member for Victoria might well have let this question rest at the present time, and have waited to see whether this great measure which Great Britain is adopting would not result in satisfying the Irish people and making them loyal, contented, peaceable and happy, as she desires to have all her subjects in every part of the world.

I do not propose to enter into a discussion of the question whether or not home rule would be a blessing or otherwise for Ireland. I do not think it is germane to the purpose of this resolution. I am not here to debate that question. But I may say, in passing, that it is a debateable question; and the very fact that there are two sections of the community who hold views diametrically opposed to each other with regard to that question, ought to be sufficient to restrain this House from adopting any resolution of this kind. While one portion of the people of Ireland think home rule would be a blessing—and I am free to say that I think they are the majority—still I cannot shut my eyes to the fact that a very large and respectable minority hold that it would not be a blessing for Ireland to have home rule and prefer that it should be governed from Downing street. While a majority may say yes, a large and respectable minority will undoubtedly say no, and they hold this view because of what past history has taught them. Whether they are right or wrong, their conviction in this respect is very strong, and we ought to respect their conviction. The injustices which they claim were done to them when Ireland had home rule were such as to make them look with disfavour on a renewal of the conditions which then existed. They dread the return of those conditions, and can you blame them? I say we cannot. Each of these divisions of the Irish people have their adherents and sympathizers in this country. If I hold the view that home rule would not be in the best interest of Ireland, that is my right. If, on the other hand, my Roman Catholic fellow-countrymen hold that home rule would be in the best interest of Ireland, that is their right. I have no quarrel with them. But so long as these divergent views are held, and we are not charged with the duty of settling this troublesome question, we should not allow it to interfere with our work here. It is said that the minority are so small in numbers that their views should not be taken into account. What is the relative strength of these two sections of the people of Ireland? According to the returns of the last election, they are about 65 per cent to 35 per cent. About 65 per cent hold that home rule would be good for Ireland, and about 35 per cent hold that it would not, and these people have sent members to the imperial parliament to represent their respective views. It is not my purpose to inquire whether, in view of the seditious and disloyal utterances of many advocates of home rule, it would be right to entrust to them the power of governing Ireland. I refer to such men as Dillon, Redmond, O'Brien and Devlin. I do not refer to the Devlin who was once a member of the Canadian parliament, because I am bound to say that I never heard very much from him along that line; but I refer to the disloyal and seditious utterances of these other men when travelling in the United States. Whether it would be right to permit a class of men holding such seditious and disloyal views to govern Ireland, I am not going to say, but it is the view of some that it would not be right.

I say it is not the part of wisdom to import questions of this kind into this parliament. On the contrary, I hold that it would be the part of unwisdom, because they are disturbing questions which tend to divide the people instead of helping them to live in peace and harmony together. We desire to live in peace and harmony with our Roman Catholic fellow-citizens, and to see them work out the problems of life with their families in happiness and prosperity. We wish them success in all the pursuits of life; but it does not tend to promote that feeling of amity, friendship and goodwill between the two creeds in this country to be constantly introducing these vexed questions. Suppose that a member of this House were to be constantly introducing here certain questions in the interest of his friends in Ireland that were not agreeable to the Roman Catholics in Ireland or in Canada, what would our Roman Catholic friends say? They would say he was doing a very improper thing, and I am bound to say that their conclusion would be correct. Then, I ask them to apply the same rule to themselves that they apply to me. I say that if any Protestant in this House were disposed to introduce such a question, I would be inclined to tell him at once that he was doing a very improper and unwise thing. As far as my influence would go, I would endeavour to prevent his doing it, because I do not think it would tend to increase the harmony and good will which ought to exist between Roman Catholics and Protestants. Holding that belief, I am justified in condemning any man who is constantly importing these troublesome and vexatious questions into the House of Commons, questions which tend to excite acrimonious debate and weaken those feelings of amity and love which we are all anxious to see prevail. There are many people in Canada who share these views with me. I shall not say that the hon. member who introduced this motion was actuated by any political motive, because the rules of the House do not allow us to impute motives, but there are many people in Canada who, when they consider the circumstances and the manner in which this agitation is introduced from time to time, will be uncharitable enough to believe that there are political motives behind it, and will have consequently the less respect for the party who introduces such resolutions, no matter to what side of the House he may belong.

Some hon. members may ask me what does the minority see in home rule to be afraid of? I have already given my opinion on that point. They are afraid that it would not be home rule they would have to contend with, but rule from some other quarter of the world, which would not be the best kind of rule for the people of Ireland. Our desire is to live in peace and harmony with our Roman Catholic fellow-citizens and to see them enjoy to the fullest extent the blessings of a free country and a responsible government. May we not hope that they will join us in that ambition? We ought to have good ground for the hope, but I regret to say that all do not share with us in those opinions, and among them is the hon. gentleman who introduced the resolution. I am opposed to this resolution, and shall vote against it, and I ask those who oppose it for the same reasons that I do to give expression to their dissent. I am not asking any man to give a vote on the merits or demerits of home rule, but on the unwisdom of bringing that question into the House of Commons. If the imperial parliament should see fit to give home rule, that is their concern, and we have no complaint to make or advice to give, but I am opposed to this resolution because the introduction into this House of such vexed questions, with which we have nothing to do, disturbs the harmony and good fellowship which would otherwise exist between Protestants and Roman Catholics. I am opposed to this resolution because it is no part of our duty to advise the mother country as to what kind of government she should give Ireland or any other portion of the empire, nor have we any mandate from our constituents to fritter away the time of this House and spend the money of the country discussing such questions, with which practically we have no concern.

Mr. CHARLES MARCIL (Bonaventure). I quite agree, Mr. Speaker, with the last speaker (Mr. Sproule) in his remark that he would regret the introduction into this House of any question which would be of a nature to disturb the good feelings and relations that exist between Protestants and Roman Catholics in this country. Far be it from my intention now, in speaking in support of this resolution, to say one word which would tend to creating ill-feeling between the various elements of this country. The hon. member for East Grey (Mr. Sproule) seems to fear that because England has at last undertaken to mete out a measure of justice to one of the three countries constituting the union, there is danger that the good feeling which exists in this country among its various communities may be disturbed. I have no such fear, Mr. Speaker. The last census of Canada shows that there are in the Dominion at present 998,000 people of Irish origin, close upon one million, constituting almost one-quarter of our population. There is not a county, there is hardly a village in this Dominion in which you will not find citizens hailing from the old country or whose fathers came from Ireland. Our Canadian parliament represents that million of people. I have the honour in my own constituency of having 1,500 people who look to Ireland as their mother country, and in their name I know that I am fulfilling my duty when I raise my humble voice in support of this motion, and to congratulate the statesmen of the British empire on their having undertaken at last to carry out a measure of justice and fair play to the Irish race. Canada, Sir, owes a great deal to Ireland. It owes a great deal to the hundreds of thousands of Irish immigrants who came to this country. This confederation was largely brought about by the efforts of one of the greatest men Ireland ever sent to Canada. If our Canadian provinces are represented here to-night, we all know that that is largely due to the labours of the late Hon. Thomas D'Arcy McGee, who devoted his powerful and eloquent influence, energy and ability to bringing about union on this side of the water, and that union which exists in Canada we, as citizens of the British empire, wish to see established on the other side. We are, Sir, loyal subjects, we are loyal to the empire, we are interested in its progress and prosperity, matters are daily brought before us which tend to increase the prosperity and the strength of the empire. We have voted money in this House to send troops to South Africa in order to maintain the integrity of the empire. We have voted money to lay cables beneath the Pacific Ocean and are subsidizing steamers on the Atlantic—all for the purpose of strengthening and consolidating the empire. I claim that we have equally the right at this moment to congratulate the government of His Majesty King Edward VII. upon the measure of justice which that government has now submitted to the British parliament, and which has certainly commanded the approval of the whole civilized world. We are told that in 1882 the Earl of Kimberley informed the Canadian parliament that home rule was not a matter of our concern. Well, those views may have prevailed in England at that time, but twenty years have since elapsed. Barely three years after the Earl of Kimberley had written this famous despatch, the Right Hon. William Ewart Gladstone rose in the House of Commons to propose home rule for Ireland. And upon what did he rest his chief argument? Upon the resolution adopted in this House. Twenty years have passed since then, and in that time we have heard often in this House—I think I have heard it myself—that it is the admitted right of the colony to give an opinion upon any question which concerns the interests of the empire at large. And surely this question of the settlement of Irish grievances concerns the empire, concerns every subject of the King who takes an interest in the empire's welfare. Surely, this question which has been discussed for the last one hundred years should now be settled. And, if any action we can take can bring about a settlement, I believe there is no man in this House who will regret that he has done something toward so desirable an end. Events have advanced rapidly during the last two or three years. During the last two months we have seen taking place events undreamed of but a few years ago. The land conference which met in Dublin in December last was composed of landlords and of representatives of the Irish tenants. Such a conference would have seemed almost impossible twenty years ago. These men met, they discussed the land question and they arrived at a conclusion. That conclusion is known to the world to-day. Allow me to read a few words concluding the report, showing how a settlement of the land question can be brought about:—

We wish to place on record our belief that an unexampled opportunity is at the present moment afforded His Majesty's government of effecting a reconciliation of all classes in Ireland upon terms which, as we believe, involve no permament increase of imperial expenditure in Ireland; and that there will be found on all sides an earnest desire to co-operate with the government in securing the success of a Land Purchase Bill, which, by rapidly and effectively carrying out the principles above indicated, would bring peace and prosperity to the country.

Mr. Speaker, we as British subjects co-operate with the efforts the British government is making to bring about an amicable settlement of this question. We believe that this land question in Ireland once settled, the granting of local autonomy, as we have it in our own provinces, would follow as a matter of course. Canada has often been quoted as an example for British statesmen to imitiate in their dealings to Ireland. We had, in former years, a land question in the old Seigniorial Tenure. Fifty or sixty years ago that was settled very easily by a tribunal, much more easily than the Irish land question can be settled. The autonomy which was granted to us has certainly proved the wisdom of the British statesmen who granted it. So long as England follows towards her colonies the broad-minded policy she has followed towards Canada, she will have no reason to regret it. But danger will come if British statesmen revert to the policy which brought about the loss of the thirteen colonies to the south of us. So long as the broad-minded policy adopted toward Canada is carried out toward the Irish people, I am satisfied that the reign of King Edward VII. will be quoted in history as having brought about a consolidation of the empire which will add glory to his reign for all time to come.

Mr. Speaker, this question is now before the parliament of Great Britain. The Irish people have honoured us by electing some of our own men as some of their representatives. The former leader of the Liberal party now occupies a distinguished place in the ranks of the home rule party ; and the late member for Ottawa has been elected for Galway, being truly 'The man for Galway.' This is an honour that is done to the people of Canada, and I am sure that the majority of the Canadian people would be both satisfied and delighted if this question should be at last settled. I have no intention of entering into the merits of the case more than to state that a settlement of the land question would probably bring about the settlement of the political question by the granting to Ireland of a provincial parliament, and then the work which has been done during the last few years will have brought forth fruit, for Ireland will occupy in the empire the place to which she is entitled. I ask to be allowed to quote the last words of Right Hon. Mr. Gladstone in introducing his Home Rule Bill barely sixteen years ago, to show how prophetic that grand old man was when he took the stand he took in asking for Ireland the autonomy to which she is entitled :—

You have power, you have wealth, you have rank, you have station, you have organization. What have we ? We think that we have the people's heart: we believe and we know we have the promise of the harvest of the future. The ebbing tide is with you, the flowing tide is with us. Ireland stands at your bar, expectant, hopeful, almost suppliant. Her words are the words of truth and soberness. She asks a blessed oblivion of the past and in that oblivion our interest is deeper than even hers. We are asked to abide by the traditions of which we are the heirs. What traditions ? Why the Irish traditions ? Go into the length and breadth of the world, ransack the literature of all countries, find, if you can, a single voice, a single book—find, I would almost say, as much as a single newspaper article, unless the product of the day, in which the conduct of England towards Ireland is anywhere treated except with profound and bitter condemnation. Are these the traditions by which we are exhorted to stand ? No, they are a sad exception to the glory of our country. They are a broad and black blot upon the pages of its history : and what we want to do is to stand by the relations with Ireland, and make our relations with Ireland to conform to the other traditions of our country. So we treat our traditions—so we hail the demand of Ireland for what I called a blessed oblivion of the past. She asks also a boon for the future; and that boon for the future, unless we are much mistaken, will be a boon to us, in respect of honour, no less than a boon to her in respect of happiness, prosperity and peace. Such, Sir, is her prayer.

That, I believe, Mr. Speaker, is also the prayer of the majority of the people of this country. We ask for no disturbing scheme ; we ask only for justice for our fellow citizens. We remember what the generous Irish nation has done for the empire at large. We remember what she has done for Canada, to whom she has sent illustrious Governor Generals, great statesmen, men eminent in all ranks and walks of life ; and we hope that, at last, the boon which has been given to Canada will be extended to her, and that Irishmen, who have been so illustrious in the Senate, at the bar, and in the liberal professions, who have fought in the armies of Great Britain and have led her soldiers to victory in the dark days of trial, will at last attain the share of justice for which they have so long, so consistently and so patriotically laboured.

Mr. ANDREW BRODER (Dundas). Mr. Speaker, I do not intend to detain the House long upon this question. I think the present is rather a time for moderation than for agitation on the Irish question. In reviewing the past, in looking over the debate of 1882, I find that the Hon. Edward Blake, for instance, who made one of the strongest appeals in this House on the subject of home rule for Ireland, based his main argument in favour of home rule on the idea that it would settle the land question. Home rule is identified in the Irishman's mind with the settlement of the land question. Now the land question has been settled without home rule, and my hon. friend who is good enough to interject this vexed question into the arena of political discussion to-night, is not, in my judgment, working in the interests of Ireland. When we find the English people sitting down in council with the Irish people and coming to a conclusion as to what should be done to settle the difficulties that exist, it ill becomes this House to interject any question of discord into that attempted settlement in Ireland. What does this motion mean? It means that that is not what we want, we want something else. The hon. gentleman reminds me of a story I heard of a countryman of mine and his, who went to a prominent public man and said: 'I have a very serious grievance.' 'Oh,' says the public man, 'we can settle that, there is no trouble in settling your grievance.' 'But, says the man, 'I don't want a settlement, I want a grievance.' And I think my hon. friend from Victoria is more anxious to have a grievance than a settlement. We cannot look upon this action in any other light. Do we find the prominent men in Ireland, the leaders of the Irish people in regard to these questions, standing up there and saying: We want home rule first? If the hon. gentleman wanted to have a unanimous vote in this House and get a moral weight attached to that vote, he should have moved a resolution congratulating the authorities in England on the attempt to settle this vexed question. But what the hon. gentleman is doing is not in the interest of harmony, what the hon. gentleman is doing is in the interest of agitation. Sir, I hope the day will come when some man on the Irish horizon, either in Ireland or in Canada, will rise up with a view large enough to reach across the chasm that divides these people and bring them together on some common ground. That man would do more for Ireland and for the Irish people than all the home rule resolutions that can be concocted by the hon. gentleman. The Englishman has his St. George's day, the Scotchman has his St. Andrew's day, the Frenchman has his St. Jean Baptiste, and the Irishman has his saint as well. Now, why cannot they all get together on some common platform? But our hon. friend does not seem to want that.

Now, Sir, I wish to draw your attention to a very significant omission in the resolution, which the hon. gentleman moves to-night, in comparison with the one he moved in 1882. Let me say that when any hon. gentleman moves a resolution in the abstract which may involve legislation which we cannot possibly have before us, he ought to guard every interest that is affected by his proposition. I wish to refer to a very significant difference between the two resolutions. In the resolution of 1882, on page 1,034 of the 'Hansard,' we find this language—I will only read what is pertinent to the question:

> We venture to express a hope that if consistent with the integrity and well being of the empire, and if the rights and status of the minority are fully protected and secured.

Now, Sir, the hon. gentleman's resolution to-night has no reference to the interests and status of the minority. I have always stood up in this House and fought the battle of what I consider the interests and rights of the minority, when it was frequently against my political interest to do so; and I will not for an abstract resolution which might involve home rule, unless I am satisfied that imbedded in that resolution was a safeguard to the status and integrity of that large and respectable minority of Ireland. Sir, the hon. gentleman has not the interest of Ireland at heart when he omits that very important minority in Ireland. There is no attempt to say to these people that we wish to guard their interests that are sacred to the Irishmen of that country. There are interests other than those of home rule which should be guarded in Ireland.

Another thing I want to say is that the Irishman is able to work out his own problems if he is put in a proper position to do so. When you refer back to the Acts of parliament placed upon the English Statute Book in the interest of Ireland, the Land Purchase Act of 1885 and the Land Purchase Act of 1888, what do we find? That of 24,900 purchasers there were but twenty-two defaulters who did not pay what they agreed to pay. Under these two Acts the British parliament set apart over £1,900,000 as a guarantee that any debts which were not recoverable, should be satisfied by this amount, and in the Act of 1896 she took the money that had not been spent for that purpose and distributed it under the Act of 1896 for the purchase of the land instead of holding for guarantee purposes. Those people are able to take care of themselves under proper conditions—no danger about an Irishman, if you give him a fair chance.

Now, they talk about Gladstone, and you can go clear back to Fox's time, and you will find that the Liberals of England have professed to do a great deal for Ireland but they never have done much. Gladstone brought in a Bill that he knew could not pass the House of Lords, was satisfied it could not. What about Lord Rosebery? He said to the Irish: You have got to satisfy the dominant partner, you have got to convert him before you can get anything. And what does the present Conservative government say? They came into power on the ruins of home rule, committed to nothing so far as Ireland was concerned, and they have done more for Ireland than any other government for fifty years. They have given Ireland the Local Government Act of 1898, similar to the Act given in England in 1888. Then in 1896 there was the improved Land Purchase Act.

And what are they doing now—without agitation, without being committed to anything ? Our hon. friend is fond of agitation. Without agitation the English government of the present day has propounded this momentous proposition that startles the world, that could not be dealt with by any other people under the sun than the English and the Irish together. Now, Sir, let our hon. friend remember that the bird never flies to the top of the mountain with one wing. But that is the position he is in, trying to fly with one wing, nothing less than an agitation for home rule after the land question is settled. He is playing his harp—not the Irish harp. He is on the barn while the procession is passing by, playing his harp, but not the Irish harp. The Irish harp is being played over in the British parliament. I say that when people sit down to talk over their differences in a common sense, business-like way, that is what ought to commend itself to our favour instead of this resolution that the hon. gentleman has interjected into this parliament.

Now, Sir, I want to say that no man has a higher respect for Irishmen than I have. My ancestors for hundreds of years lived in Ireland. But if there is anything that I do not like to hear it is an Irishman referred to as a Scotch-Irishman. What kind of a product is that ? They will tell you about the Earl of Dufferin, for instance, whose ancestors lived for 200 years in Ireland ; fourteen of his ancestors were Irish, one Scotch and one English, yet they call him a Scotch-Irishman. It is time that Irishmen resented that. It is time that they proclaimed themselves Irishmen, whether they come from the north or the south of Ireland. Our hon. friend ought to work along that line ; if he did, he would do more good to Ireland, and to Canada too. Yes, that is a hint to every man as to what he ought to do, working along those lines.

Three-quarters—I was going to say—of the Irish element that our friends speak of are in the province of Ontario, Protestant and Catholic, and no man has a right to be prouder of what is done to work out the problems of this country than the Irishmen of Canada. The less of these questions we interject into the Canadian parliament that are foreign, so far as our being called upon to deal with them is concerned, the better for Canada and for Canadians. I believe that my hon. friend (Hon. Mr. Costigan) would have done his country a service, and not only Canada but Ireland, if he had moved a resolution of commendation of what is being done in England and Ireland—$600,000,000 proposed to be spent to settle the vexed land question in Ireland. I want to say further, before I sit down, that the English people, considering the burden they are already bearing of the tax imposed on them by reason of the South African war, in meeting this proposition, ought to have the commendation of everybody in the Canadian parliament. Sir, I have never been an intolerant man. It matters very little to this country or to the world whether I represent the county of Dundas or not, but it matters a great deal to Canada and the world whether the Canadian parliament stands upon the tolerant or intolerant side of any question. This resolution cannot have unanimous support. That feature of it is already significant in this House. The hon. gentleman has lost that opportunity of sending across the water a unanimous resolution which he would have had if he had moved the resolution he should have moved instead of the one he has moved. We knew very well that the proposition was looming up last session. We have a pretty good idea why it was not brought up, we have pretty good reason for believing that it was for political reasons. There was a particular election looming up in the province of Ontario then and it was considered inopportune. Now, we have this question raised just on the eve of this tremendous effort on the part of the English people to settle the land question in Ireland interjecting this side issue so to speak into the political arena and it can have no other effect than to that of producing discord instead of harmony.

Mr. N. A. BELCOURT (Ottawa). Mr. Speaker, a few years ago the Right Hon. Joseph Chamberlain, discussing the Land Purchase Bill which then engaged the attention of the British House of Commons and of the British people, expressed himself in these words :

> Perhaps I may be allowed to add a word or two as to my present position. I am afraid that the opposition which I feel to the proposals contained in the Land Purchase Bill cannot be met. I think the Bill is a bad one. I would sooner go out of politics altogether than give my vote to pledge the capital of the country, and the future earnings of every man and women in the United Kingdom, in order to modify the opposition of a small class of Irish proprietors to a scheme which, if it remains in its present form, will, I believe, infallibly lead to the separation of Ireland from England. I object in this case to the risk which we are asked to incur. I object also to the object for which we are asked to incur that risk. But as regards the Home Rule Bill, the Bill for the better government of Ireland, my opposition is only conditional.

Such was, a few years ago, the language of the Right Hon. Joseph Chamberlain, who, to-day, is probably the most prominent and most aggressive member of the Unionist government which has introduced into the imperial parliament the Land Bill and of the government, which, I have no doubt, will secure its adoption. The Land Purchase Bill which was the subject of discussion in the words I have quoted was a Bill in many respects similar to the present Land Bill. It was dissimilar in this that it did not afford anything like the large measure of relief that the Land Bill now proposes to accord to the Irish tenant. The change of opinion on the part of the right hon. gentleman, is indicative of the change of opinion that has taken place on this question throughout the whole of the British empire. No wonder then that the cherished hopes and legitimate aspirations of the Irish people have been revived and stimulated, and that those who for such a long time have so energetically, so heroically continued the struggle, begun shortly after the abolition of the Irish parliament in 1880, have seen their hopes renewed, and when this long cherished aim of the champions of home rule for Ireland shall have been accomplished, it will be found that outside of the granting of household suffrage to the inhabitants of the green isle, nothing will have contributed so much to its accomplishment as the present Land Bill, the adoption of which now seems very close at hand. The granting of the household suffrage, the recognition and sanction of the principle by which, to use the apt and expressive language of the Irish tenantry, a vote was conferred 'on every smoke' which has rendered the people supreme in parliament, and in the country alone has rendered permissible and possible the long continuous constitutional agitation, perhaps at times violent and offensive, but on the whole brilliant and legitimate, which has brought about the introduction of the Land Bill and which makes possible at a future date the settlement of the question of autonomy for Ireland. This constitutional agitation renders possible the settlement of the land question, which as I have said, is so close at hand and it will pave the way for a permanent and satisfactory measure of self-government for Ireland. The settlement of the agrarian question on the broad, just, humane and generous basis by the Land Bill which is now engaging the attention of the British House of Commons, will I am sure, produce the complete regeneration of Ireland. It will replace the unwholesome and unsound system of dual ownership by a just and true system of private ownership ; it will inspire thrift, it will promote a spirit of individual enterprise, it will stimulate improvement and produce contentment and prosperity, but most important of all, it will restore peace and harmony among all classes in Ireland. Distrust and hatred will give place to mutual confidence and a spirit of common pride and common interest in all that concerns the Irish people. Factions, feuds, the dissentions of centuries shall disappear and we shall see inaugurated in Ireland a reign of peace, contentment and prosperity. To some this may seem to be altogether too optimistic a view to take of the future, and it may be that I shall be taxed in some quarters with exaggeration. But, have we not in our own country the most conclusive proof that such will and must be the result of the settlement of these two great questions. Fifty years ago Canada was disrupted with racial dissensions; her people were discontented, disloyal, and in fact in open rebellion. To-day, Canada is contented, her people happy and prosperous from ocean to ocean. And why this change ? It is simply because the people of the Dominion of Canada and the provinces which compose it, have been granted that measure of home rule which has been so long, and so heroically demanded by the Irish people. What an encouragement, what a lesson, what an inspiration does not the introduction of this measure of justice and of generosity afford to the world, and more particularly to those who have practised and preached the principles of constitutional democracy, that to-day we see introduced into the English parliament a Land Bill which gives to the industrious peasantry who till the soil, the right to reap the full fruit of their labours. To the Liberal party of Canada this spectacle is especially gratifying, and does it offer an inspiration and an encouragement, because it has ever believed in, ever practiced and ever preached the efficacy, the virtue, the eternal right of self-government, and the encouragement of national sentiment and solidarity. For no pinciple has the Liberal struggled more resolutely and more constantly than for the recognition of the popular will constitutionally expressed and urged. No class of His Majesty's subjects will rejoice more sincerely and more thoroughly, Mr. Speaker, than the gentlemen who sit to your right, and with them the whole Liberal party of Canada ; that the day has at last come, when with the settlement of the agricultural question in Ireland, we soon shall see adopted a measure of self-government in respect to all matters of special concern to the Irish people. I have ventured into this debate, not with the delusion that I could add anything of value to what has been said in support of the resolution, but merely for the purpose of affirming and of emphasizing the incontrovertible truth, that the introduction of the Irish Land Bill and the hope of its speedy adoption, is the immediate result of Liberal policy. Although that measure has been introduced by a Liberal-Unionist government composed largely of Conservatives, yet Sir, the credit for the changed opinion of British statesmen and the British public, is due first and above all to the greatest of great Liberals, the illustrious Gladstone.

Some hon. MEMBERS. Hear, hear.

Mr. BELCOURT. What a pity that Gladstone is not to-day alive to witness the triumph of the cause which he so courageously espoused and which he so brilliantly and so enthusiastically advocated and defended on every occasion. What a pity that Gladstone is not alive to see the Liberal vindication and triumph of the great Liberal policy which he enunciated on these questions. But, Sir, I have no fear that history, which is not always just, will do full justice to that great statesman. But while we claim that the greatest share of praise is due to Mr. Gladstone and his followers for what we now see, yet we on this side of the House do not for a moment wish to minimise or to withhold from His Majesty's present advisers that share of credit to which they are entitled. We all recognize the spirit of generosity which has inspired the Land Bill, and the courage which was required on the part of the British cabinet to submit it to the imperial parliament. We accord to them full praise for this very wise, this very humane, this very just and very generous measure, and I take it, that is, the object, the very raison d'etre of the resolution now before us. This resolution is not a resolution of demand ; it is not even a resolution of advice, but it is a resolution of hearty congratulation and thankfulness that at last some measure of justice to the Irish people has been submitted for the approval of the British parliament. We express the hope that such a measure will be followed by one granting self-government to Ireland in all matters of special concern to the Irish people, and, Sir, our experience in Canada teaches us that such a measure will not only tend to the prosperity and contentment of the Irish people themselves, but that it will add to the peace and happiness of His Majesty's subjects throughout his wide Dominions.

Nor must it be assumed, Sir, that we on this side of the House are unaware or oblivious of the share of credit which it is generally believed is due to His Gracious Majesty personally. We on this side, by supporting the resolution, extend our congratulations to His Majesty's advisers, and while doing that, if it is permitted to do so, we also extend to the person of His Majesty humble and respectful thanks and congratulations that he has taken such a personal interest in the preparation and promotion of this great and generous measure of relief to the Irish people.

Such being my view of this resolution, and since we have on a recent and solemn occasion created a clear precedent for such an expression of opinion on the part of this parliament, I shall give it my cordial support.

Mr. M. K. RICHARDSON (South Grey). If the resolution were such as has been described by the last speaker, namely, to tender the congratulations of this House to the British government for introducing a measure with the object of allaying all disaffection in Ireland, I would have found myself in the fullest accord with it. I approve of some of the sentiments expressed in the resolution, but inasmuch as it affirms and endorses the language of former resolutions, from which I dissent, I cannot support the resolution now before the House. Much time has been spent to-night in expressing the pleasure which I believe is general throughout the House, that the Irish Land Bill has been submitted to the British parliament. I am sure that every lover of Ireland rejoices that such a generous and magnanimous step has been taken with a view of removing the disabilities which may exist in Ireland. We congratulate our brethren across the Atlantic that they have met this issue in such a noble spirit, but we naturally asked ourselves, what is the object of this resolution ? Can it in any way facilitate the legislation which is now before the British House. Can it in any way strengthen the hands of the true friends of Ireland in the imperial parliament. From our experience of resolutions of this kind in the past, I am of opinion that it is mischievous in its character, and that it may come back to us with a rebound as it did before. I yield to no one in this House in my admiration and appreciation of all that is great and noble and brave and chivalrous in the Irish character. We have seen it not only in Great Britain and in Canada, but all the world over ; we have seen Irishmen attain for themselves a name for everything that is great and noble. It is a pitiful thing that in the home of Irishmen, a land so dear to Irishmen and to others that are not Irishmen, things have been in such an unhappy condition in the past. But, Sir, I hold that the worst enemies of Ireland have been those of her own household. An unfortunate reference was made to that grand patriot, D'Arcy McGee, a Canadian Irishman.

When mention is made of his name, we naturally ask how did D'Arcy McGee meet with his tragic end ? From what source did it come, by what means, and through what organization ? I will not refer to that further than to say that it was an unfortunate reference. We have seen the sad spectacle in years past of men revelling in luxury at the expense of the peace and happiness and prosperity of Ireland. Not many years ago, when the Fenian organization was strong in the old country, I recollect a man of the name of Stephens, called the Head Centre Stephens, being sent over to this country. When he landed in New York, a reporter of one of the city dailies had an interview with him which went somewhat as follows : 'We found Head Centre Stephens at Delmonico's fashionable restaurant suffering the wrongs of Ireland on canvas-back duck and other delicacies.' It is sad to think that there have been too many of that class of men, not caring much for Ireland, the happiness of Ireland, the peace of Ireland or the prosperity of Ireland, but simply exploiting all these things for their own personal benefit and luxury. I will not impute any sinister motives to the hon. gentleman who has introduced this motion in the House to-day. I am bound to believe that it is the result of an exuberance of love to Ireland, for Irishmen and the Irish institutions. But I am also bound to say that the hon. gentleman has not a monopoly of that. Many of us who will be compelled to vote against his resolution have as much love for Irishmen and Ireland as he has, and we feel that the spectacle which is presented in the old country to-day is one of the most magnificent that has ever been presented in any British parliament anywhere in the world. We find our brethren across the sea, with all the heavy burdens resting upon them, with the enormous debt left by the South African war, facing this great problem, not in any niggardly spirit, or in fear or truculency, but boldly and generously, in the face of British securities dropping down from day to day. Under these circumstances, far from our taking any action in this parliament that will tend in the least to embarrass the mother country in the step she has taken, we should stand aside, and let her manage her own affairs in her own way as she is well capable of doing. I do not intend to occupy the time of this House at any length; but I will say that we find Englishmen everywhere turning to Irishmen and reaching out their fraternal hand and saying: 'We are your brothers, and there is not a cause of dissatisfaction, real or imaginary, in Ireland to-day that we are not prepared to meet in a generous, kind, and brotherly spirit'; and in the face of that, we in this parliament of Canada would stultify ourselves if we were to send across to the British parliament such a resolution as that which has been proposed. I hope the resolution will not be adopted, but will receive the fate it deserves at the hands of this parliament.

Mr. HENRI BOURASSA (Labelle). Mr. Speaker, I had no intention of taking part in this debate; but I feel that it is the duty of other representatives of the French Canadian element to express their views on this question, and their thorough sympathy with the motion that has been introduced by the hon. member for Victoria, N.B. (Hon. Mr. Costigan). If there is an element in the British empire which is especially entitled to speak in favour of self-government, which is able to present examples taken from its own history of the benefits of self-government and to prove what it is for a free people in the British empire. I think the French Canadian element is especially entitled to do so. Throughout the British empire there were, so to speak, three alien groups: the French Canadian element, the Boer element in South Africa, and the Irish element in the United Kingdom; and what is the common history of these three elements? Taking first French Canada, we find that the principles which have unfortunately obtained for too many years in Ireland obtained also in Canada, and what was the result? As my hon. friend the member for Ottawa (Mr. Belcourt) has eloquently said, so long as the principle of home rule was denied to Canada, there was discontent and rebellion. The consequence was not only the crushing down of a brave people, but a state of paralysis throughout the whole empire; for though the nation at stake was very small indeed if counted by numbers, yet in a free empire like the British empire, when freedom is at stake in any part of it, all the elements of good government are disturbed. I agree entirely with the gentlemen who have expressed their satisfaction with the measure now occupying the attention of the British parliament; but the resolution introduced today by my hon. friend from Victoria, N.S., is only the logical consequence of that measure, and by giving our support to the resolution we shall be giving our most practical support to the British government in the position they are now taking.

In South Africa the same state of things has existed for a long time that formerly existed in French Canada; and what do we find to-day? The hon. member for Ottawa has quoted the words of the Hon. Joseph Chamberlain on the first Land Purchase Bill. Mr. Chamberlain has just returned from South Africa, where he became thoroughly convinced that British rule was impossible unless home rule were granted to that country and due regard was given to the love of liberty on the part of the people living there. Therefore, I say that as the British government has found by its experience in Canada that self-government is the only way of ruling this part of the empire, and as the strongest man in the British cabinet to-day has found that the only way of ruling South Africa is to grant it self-government, so it will find before long that the only way of ruling Ireland and making it free, happy and prosperous, and keeping that noble people on their own soil instead of sending them all over the world, undoubtedly to gain for themselves renown and glory, but at the same time depriving the empire of a worthy part of her population, is to grant Ireland also self-government. Undoubtedly the present Land Bill is a happy move in British politics and will do much to settle the Irish question; but no country can enjoy the real benefits of self-government unless it has the direct control of the taxation taken from its own people and the direct control of the judiciary which administers its laws. Some years ago there were numbers of people who believed that the grievances of Ireland were kept up by the representatives of the Irish nation, but were not seriously felt by the Irish people themselves; but what do we see now? The Conservative party in England, the parliament of England, public opinion in England, have acknowledged that the Irish grievances are real, so far as the land question is concerned, and before long English public opinion will find out also that the grievances of the Irish people are equally real in so far as regards the administration of justice in Ireland and the taxation of the Irish people.

Some hon. members may perhaps say that my position is not quite logical in advocating an expression of the opinion of this House on a question which is not a Canadian one. Well, if it were my habit to use personal arguments, I might say that I was rather astonished to hear some gentlemen in this House arguing that we ought to confine our attention exclusively to Canadian affairs and who yet were most favourable to the intervention of Canada in South Africa. But hon. members will find that even when I was urging in the parliament of Canada not to interfere in South Africa, not to interfere in a quarrel between Great Britain and a foreign government, I at the same time declared what I here repeat, that as British citizens, as members of a free community, we in the parliament of Canada had the right to express our opinion concerning anything which affected the empire as a whole. In the sense that we are part of the British empire and are interested in everything concerning it, I am just as sincere an imperialist as any of those gentlemen who oppose this motion, and who voted for our intervention in South Africa.

I quite agree in many of the remarks that fell from the hon. member for North Norfolk (Mr. Charlton). If this were simply a question of British administration or British politics, I would say that it was no business of ours and would vote against the motion of my hon. friend ; but this motion is based upon the very principle of self-government and autonomy, and I hold that every time we affirm the principle of self-government and autonomy for any part of the British empire, we assert the right of Canada to autonomy and self-government. In this I am consistent with the stand I took on the South African question. As a Canadian and a British citizen, I am glad to vote for the present motion. I need not refer to some of the remarks made by the hon. member for North Norfolk regarding the self interest which some hon. members may have in flattering this or that vote in their constituencies. There are some Irish votes in my constituency but not sufficient to affect my position in this House. But I hold that we ought not to go to the extreme of trying to discover sinister or low motives for the attitude of any public man who rises in this House to discuss any public matter. If we were to act on that principle, we would find in the records of the speeches of many members of this House words pretty hard to explain unless they were intended for the sole purpose of catching votes. But I have no desire to introduce into this debate any spirit of animosity or excite any ill feeling between hon. members. The hon. gentleman who has just taken his seat (Mr. Richardson) has expressed his love and admiration for Ireland and the Irish people. I have no doubt as to his sincerity, but it seems to me that the most practical way in which the parliament of any free country can express its love and admiration for any other country is by giving expression to the wish that that country may enjoy the same rights, privileges and liberties that we do.

Mr. A. E. KEMP (East Toronto). I shall take up but very few minutes, Mr. Speaker, in continuing this debate. The hon. member for Bonaventure (Mr. Marcil) referred to the fact that according to the recent census there appeared to be about one million of Irish in this Dominion, and that suggested to me the conclusion that our census returns seem to have been taken from a very wrong standpoint in this respect. I cannot understand how in this country there can be one million of Irish people. If there be, there must also be a considerable number of English and Scotch. Where are the Canadians to come in ? It seems to me that the time has come when we should call ourselves Canadians and be prepared to be considered as such and not as Irish, Scotch, English, French or anything else. The hon. member for Labelle who has just taken his seat made a reference which I very much regretted. He referred to alien elements—the French Canadians in Canada, the Boers in South Africa and the Irish in the United Kingdom. I wish to resent that sentiment on behalf of my French Canadian fellow countrymen of English origin.

Mr. BOURASSA. The hon. gentleman has misunderstood me. When I spoke of alien elements I meant that at the time of their original entrance they were certainly aliens.

Mr. KEMP. I must have misunderstood the hon. gentleman and accept his explanation. At any rate I consider my countrymen of French origin just as much Canadians and just as much on a level with me and other Canadians as I do my fellow countrymen of English or any other origin.

Mr. BELCOURT. Thank you.

Mr. KEMP. It is not necessary for me to express my respect for the Irish or my loyalty to the British Crown to which this resolution refers. But it seems to me this resolution is inopportune, more especially because it comes in at this time when a Bill dealing with the Irish land question which is intended to settle the agitation for home rule is before the British parliament. This question of home rule has been debated many years, and there have been in the past great differences of opinions regarding it, and its discussion invariably gives rise to great divergence of sentiment. I am not going to discuss home rule on its merits at all. I think that we should not allow this question to be introduced into this House, and I think that I am expressing the sentiment of the rising generation in this country when I say that they are not in sympathy with this kind of thing. We have differences of our own to contend with without importing others, and we would resent very much the interference of Great Britain with regard to any of our local matters. But if we pretend that we can interfere in a question, which has to do entirely with the internal domestic economy of Great Britain, how could we resent any tendency on the part of British statesmen and parliamentarians to interfere and advise us regarding matters which particularly affect us and concerning which they are not in a position to know as much as we do? It seems to me that the British parliament has given the greatest evidence of a sincere desire to treat Ireland generously by bringing down this Land Bill, and it seems to me that we would be interfering in a most unwarrantable manner if we were to pass this resolution advocating home rule. Are we prepared to vote one dollar towards retaking the land and putting it again into the hands of the tenants of Ireland, and thus in a practical way show our sympathy with the Irish cause. This resolution does not state exactly what we are required to pass upon. It refers to resolutions which were passed as far back as 1882, to something which took place in this House twenty-one years ago. It seems to me that the hon. member who introduced the resolution should have been more explicit, and should have stated in the resolution exactly what he wanted. We cannot give Ireland home rule as they wanted it in 1882. It seems to me we should not look lightly upon this question. If we were empowered in this House to give Ireland home rule by our votes, I venture to say, there would be many who will cast their votes in favour of the resolution who, with power to actually give home rule, would give their votes the other way. That is why I say we are insincere in the course we are taking. I think the parliament of Great Britain will resent our action if we carry this resolution. We have great questions at issue between this country and Great Britain, and it is our interest to cultivate their good feeling and good will. I trust that this resolution will be withdrawn, that it will not come to a division. I feel satisfied that if it is passed it will be looked upon by the British people as a hollow mockery and will be treated by them with scorn as other matters of a similar kind have been treated by them in the past. I protest against the introduction into this House of these questions with which we have nothing to do, and I shall vote against the resolution.

Mr. THOMAS MURRAY (Pontiac). I only desire to say a few words, and to declare myself in sympathy with the resolution. I should be very sorry to see the resolution introduced, if it would create a spirit of religious acrimony or any feeling of that kind. I do not consider that the resolution is an absolute necessity. I am pleased to see the state of things now existing with regard to a settlement of Irish grievances. But I consider the resolution quite simple. I do not think it has the features it has been represented to have, or that it will be regarded as offensive by the English authorities. We merely express a conviction that a state of things exists in relation to the settlement of this vexed land question which never existed before. The hon. member for Victoria (Hon. Mr. Costigan) who introduced this resolution, has thought it consistent on his part to embody also the question of home rule, and so his resolution expresses a hope that home rule will follow the settlement of the land question. Well, we know how the question of home rule has occupied the parliament of Great Britain. We know the part that Mr. Gladstone took on that question; we know the part that Edward Blake is taking now that he is a member of the imperial parliament. We know that it is a question that enlists the sympathy of every Irishman in Canada, of every Irishman on the globe, or, at the very least a great percentage of them. The hon. member for East Grey appears to lay great stress on the minority. He has a fear that the interests of the minority will not be sufficiently protected. I think, if a measure of home rule is adopted by the English parliament, surely they will protect the minority. The hon. gentleman (Mr. Sproule) appears to ignore the majority. It is the great majority who are asking the attention of the English parliament to the question of home rule. I say I do not think that there should be dissension. I am sorry to see it. I approve of this resolution in all good faith, thinking, in fact, that it would receive the unanimous approval of the House. I am sorry to see there is such opposition. The gentlemen who oppose it are those who tell us that there should be unity; but I say that the stand they take is not consistent with their statements. Too many representatives of the people would rather cater to their constituents than look at these questions in a broad light. As I have already said, I would be very sorry to feel that a feeling of religious acrimony was raised in this House, and I trust this resolution will not have that effect. I was not prepared to make a speech, but simply give you a few of my ideas on the question before the House. I trust the discussion will go on in a proper spirit, with a view, not of creating disunion among ourselves, but of establishing a better condition of things in Ireland and in Canada. I am a Canadian of Irish descent, and I repeat would be very sorry to see anything arise in this House that would create disunion among us as Canadians. But I think I shall be borne out by others when I say that a great many of the Irish people who would have been in Canada to-day have been driven to the United States on account of the unhappy condition of affairs in Ireland. It is manifest that the Irish people have a grievance and have good reason to complain. But the land question once settled with a system of local self-government such as we have in Canada, the Irish will be a grateful, happy and prosperous people adding lustre to their race.

Mr. SAMUEL HUGHES (Victoria). I have listened with a good deal of interest to the addresses on this subject, especially to those in favour of the passing of this amendment, and I have yet to hear one solitary word, either by the mover of the resolution (Hon. Mr. Costigan), or my friend from Labelle (Mr. Bourassa), or my friend who has just taken his seat (Mr. Murray), or any other hon. member, attempting to point to a solitary grievance under which the Irish people labour. That has not been attempted, and could not be attempted successfully. The hon. member for Labelle said that they were aliens. I wish to say to my hon. friend that they are the same race, people of the same blood as are the people of England and Scotland. In the western part of Ireland we have the Celtic, in the northern, eastern and southern parts the people are Saxon or Scandinavian, except where the blood has undergone a mixture with the Celtic. It is the same blood that flows in the veins of the people of England and Scotland. I speak ethnologically. Hon. members opposite may wag their heads, but I am ready to prove before a committee of this House, or before a commission, that the blood flowing through the veins of the people of Ireland is the blood of the people of the other British islands. In discussing this question, we are apt to regard the British islands as a unit, and not as we regard the Dominion of Canada, as a series of disintegrated provinces. We hear a great deal about the Dominion of Canada being held up as a model for the people. A great many people living in Canada, regard the federal union of the provinces as a very serious mistake. What have we in the provinces to-day? There are no great issues dividing the people, and history tells us that where there are no great issues dividing the people oligarchies arise, corruptionists obtain control. And we find the people of the provinces debased from one end of the Dominion to the other, through the fact that we have federal union, instead of a legislative union with great county powers.

Now, I am ready to endorse any principle in this House or elsewhere—I do not take exception to the resolution on the ground that we have no right to discuss these things—I would endorse my principle by which the British government gave greater county powers, or what you may call provincial powers, to the various parts of the British empire, including Ireland. I think the time of the British parliament is taken up with a great deal of business that should be relegated to town councils and county councils. Had we in Canada given our counties or districts larger powers, and had no provincial parliaments at all, I believe that it would have been better for Canada. This Dominion would have been better off had we had, instead of a federal union, a legislative union with more powers for the counties. I again ask any hon. gentleman who may rise to defend this resolution to point out where are the Irish grievances.

I want to tell my hon. friends how this agitation in Ireland commenced. We find in looking over history, that the agitation against landlords in Ireland began years before the time when the landlords were Protestants and the tenants were Catholics; it began when all were Roman Catholics, it began away back in the twelfth century, when landlords were placed in that country in the time of Henry the Second. The consequence was that the tenantry then took a very strong stand against the landlords, and that agitation was continued all through the centuries until the period that all north-western Europe joined in the Reformation, and Ireland was the only country that stood out. Undoubtedly the great reason why Ireland did not follow the movement that spread over north-western Europe was largely on account of the influence, political and social, of the landlords, that is the reason Ireland did not swing in with the general movement. The landlords sided with the Sovereign and became Protestants, and from that time onward, as before, agitation in Ireland has been so-called religious as well as a landlord and tenant grievance.

But is the Irish tenant under any disability that the English tenant is not under? I beg to point out that in the city of New York alone, rich landlords, men who left the bogs of Ireland and came to America, have turned out on the streets of New York for nonpayment of rent, 29,000 people in one year. Under the law in that city, if the rent is not paid on the first of the month, the next morning the tenant is bundled out on to the streets with all his goods. That number of 29,000 in one year is ten times as many as have been evicted from Ireland in any five years of its history. In Ireland no tenant can be evicted from his property short of a year's notice, and even then he has to be paid for every improvement he has made upon the land. The Irish tenant is the most nursed man in the world. England has listened to agitators of this kind too long. The Canadian parliament has listened to agitators of this kind too long, men who have no other recommendation to bring themselves before the public than that they cater and bow to some Irish home rule Pope, or some Orange Pope, or some Roman Catholic Pope. We have had too much of that in this country and in other countries. It is time that we settled down and attended to our own business. I ask my hon. friends on either side to rise up and point out any grievance the Irish tenant has that the Scotch tenant, the English tenant and the Canadian tenant has not to a tenfold greater degree.

The hon. member for Labelle (Mr. Bourassa) says that Mr. Chamberlain had admitted that the trouble in South Africa was brought about by British tyranny over the Boers. Sir, Mr. Chamberlain has never given expression to any such idea. The trouble in South Africa was brought about by the determination of the British government to give British subjects in Africa the same rights as the Boers, to give every man in the Transvaal equal rights. That is the reason that war was begun. The policy of Great Britain was on the side of liberty and opposed to tyranny. I want to tell my hon. friend for Labelle, who seems to take pleasure in toying with race cries, all over the British empire, I want to tell him, and this House, and this country, that had Britain taken a firm stand with the Boers at the time of the emancipation of the slaves instead of pandering to the Boer people in her own dominions, in her own colonies, in Natal and other parts of South Africa, there would have been no Boer war. But she pandered to them, she truckled to them; and when she sent 5,000 Scotch colonists to South Africa, and the Boers resented their coming, in place of sending another 5,000 the next year, and another 5,000 the year following, she yielded to them, as she has done in all parts of her dominions. She has done too much yielding to fanatical cries. Britain has too often forgotten that five grasshoppers in a field will make more noise than 100 fat oxen that are peaceably grazing. That is the reason why we have so many agitations of this kind. I would be pleased to see a more extended principle of county home rule extended to Ireland as well as to England and to Scotland. I would be pleased to see Britain divest her present cumbersome parliament of a great deal of the details of business that properly belong to village, city and county councils. Then we might look forward to the day when representatives from all the colonies might assemble in one great imperial council, one great imperial parliament, where the whole British empire would stand united before the world.

I do not agree with the remarks made by one speaker who said that the election of the present member for Galway was a great compliment to Canada. I do not take it as a compliment to Canada that a county which elected Colonel Lynch, the late member, has elected a Canadian in his place. It is no compliment to Canada to have one of her sons returned from Galway at the present time. I had not intended speaking on this subject, but I wish to ask any hon. gentleman present to point out one solitary grievance under which the Irish tenant is suffering to-day which the English and the Scotch tenants are not equally suffering from.

Mr. A. A. WRIGHT (South Renfrew). I recognize the fact that it is about time that this little prayer meeting came to an end, therefore I shall not detain the House more than a few minutes. I think it is only right that a Canadian born, sitting on the colonial side in this House, should have his say, and what I am about to say comes from a disinterested source. I have no interest whatever in the Irish race except that I wish to see every nationality which lives under the British flag enjoying freedom and justice. Now we should recognize the fact that there was a time when we in Canada laboured under the same difficulties under which they now labour in Ireland, and as soon as we had home rule granted to us those grievances vanished entirely away. I believe it is only right and just that we should take this opportunity of expressing our wishes and views to the home government in order that they may, if possible, endeavour to relieve Ireland from that load which she has been carrying for so many years. Now we are told that this is a matter which does not concern us, that we are in fact acting impertinently in bringing our views before the home government.

Now I wish to say emphatically that this is a matter which concerns the Dominion of Canada in a most material way. You have heard it said that it is our business to try and bring immigrants over here and to settle them in the unoccupied regions of Canada and principally in the North-west Territories. I may say that had this difficulty not existed in Ireland which did exist, thousands and thousands of Irish immigrants that went to the United States would be living in the North-west Territories and living happy and contented lives. They had all these troubles in Ireland, they were discontented with the British government and the consequence was that they went to the United States. Politicians in that country, taking advantage of their presence, used every opportunity to secure their vote and maintain themselves in power there. It was owing to this fact very largely that we lost our trade relations with the United States. And I believe that if we had that difficulty removed the trade relations between Canada and the United States would be greatly improved. It would bring about harmony and good will between the two peoples and our interests would be promoted thereby. I just wish to say that I am heartily in sympathy with the resolution moved by the hon. member for Victoria, N.B., and I am pleased that I shall be able to support it and give it all the assistance I can.

Hon. Wm. ROSS (Victoria, N.S.) Mr. Speaker, I was going to say that I dislike the practice of rising before six o'clock. I was in this House in 1867, in 1872 and in 1874, and I never knew a single instance where the House has risen before the Speaker saw that it was six o'clock. This practice of rising before six o'clock is an objectionable one. Perhaps we will go back to half an hour before six and I think that instead of continuing this practice it is better to adhere strictly to the rule. When I was a boy, which, I regret to say, was very long ago, the pensioners that fought on the continent used to come to my father's house and with my father, who spent eight or nine years in Ireland during the troublesome time up to '98, would be running over their troubles and sufferings and I concluded as a child that the Irish people were everything that is bad. I happened to spend a winter in Newfoundland, or the part of a winter, and I came across a book called 'State Trials of Forty-eight.' I read that book with a great deal of interest. I read it with an admiration of the beautiful language that was used by those men in their own defence and I could only wish that I was capable of expressing my own ideas in as beautiful language as these men did in those days. If any person will take the trouble to read these state papers he would not dare say in this House that Ireland had no grievances. Ireland had grievances and has grievances to this day. Let me say a word to our young men in this House. It would be well for them to study the life and character of the great men who gave to Canada the freedom that they now enjoy. I have endeavoured to follow the history of these great men to some extent. I read the life of Daniel O'Connell the first session I came here. I am now reading his correspondence consisting of three most interesting volumes which are to be found in the public library here. I may be called, and I claim the right of being called, a blue blooded Presbyterian. I yield to no man in my respect for the Irish character and the Irish people and I yield to no man in my desire to see the grievances of Ireland removed as they will be gradually. I regret sincerely that this question has not been approached in a proper spirit, because, if it had it would have received the unanimous vote it deserves in this House. It was introduced by the hon. member for Victoria, N.B. (Hon. Mr. Costigan) in language displaying all the eloquence that is characteristic of his countrymen and without a single expression calculated to give offence to any one. Therefore, I had every desire that it would have been received in a different spirit. We may vaunt ourselves and praise ourselves for our love of the Irish people and our desire to do justice to the Irish people, but when we express dissent from giving Ireland home rule and from voting for this resolution I have some doubts as to the sincerity of these sentiments. There are a great many people who are saying we are taking up too much precious time. Why, there is more time occupied in committee over a paltry custom house, or a post office that is built in any part of the country, than is taken up with a question of such vast importance as is under discussion now. Then, we are told that we have not been sent here to take up subjects of this kind. We have been sent here to deal with every subject that comes properly before parliament and to exercise our own judgment upon it. I claim that freedom from my own constituency and I intend to exercise it as long as I have the privilege of being a member of this House. I thought Mr. Speaker, that having beside me my hon. friend from the riding of North Norfolk (Mr. Charlton), I had brought him within the traces so that he would think and act as I had done myself, but he steps out sometimes, and I cannot control him. I do not pretend to that high standard of Christianity professed by my hon. friend. If I honoured myself so much as to go to teach children at a Sabbath school I think I would have selected a very different subject from that relating to the corruption that takes place in high places in Canada on both sides of politics.

Some hon. MEMBERS. Hear, hear.

Hon. Mr. ROSS (Victoria, N.S.) I doubt much whether the intelligence of the Sunday school scholars could be brought up to the point of understanding that question thoroughly, but I would expect that my practical Christianity would lead me to teach the children how to conduct themselves properly at home in obedience to their parents and how to receive the instructions they would get from their parents supplemented by what they would be taught in the Sunday school. I hope that my hon. friend (Mr. Charlton) is not offended at this expression of my sentiment towards him, but I thought that the House was getting a little weary, and I thought that I might perhaps be allowed to create a laugh at his expense.

Mr. CHARLTON. I might correct my hon. friend (Hon. Mr. Ross) by informing him that it was Parents' day on the occasion that I made these remarks, and they were not made to children but to adults.

Hon. Mr. ROSS (Victoria). Very good. I hope that the parents and the children will profit by the instruction they received.

Mr. CHARLTON. I hope so.

Hon. Mr. ROSS (Victoria, N.S.) We must be all gratified at the prospect of the land question being settled by the Bill now before the imperial parliament. That is a step in the right direction, and it shows us that it is only now that the seeds that Gladstone planted are beginning to bring forth fruit. It is very often that the reforms propounded by great men come in to being only when their authors are dead. Our Saviour ascended into Heaven before the Apostles understood their mission. Wilberforce was on his death bed when the emancipation of the slaves became law in England, an object for which he had worked to attain for thirty-five years. Gladstone is dead and Ireland is to-day reaping the blessings of the policy he proposed for her. We may say what we like here, home rule for Ireland is going to come, and it will come whether or not we raise objections to it in this House or in this country. The settling of the land question is bound to bring home rule for Ireland within a shorter time than we perhaps expect. Why should we in this country deny the Irish people, or the people of Wales or of Scotland, the blessings that we ourselves enjoy. I have been a Liberal all my life and during the short time that Providence will permit me to live, I shall continue to be a Liberal and intend to die a Liberal, and being a Liberal I want to see extended to Ireland the same amount of justice and the same blessings of home rule that we enjoy in this Dominion. I might point out that the parliament of Nova Scotia was in advance of England when the great Daniel O'Connell forced them to admit Catholics to the Imperial House of Commons. Years before that, we had admitted a Roman Catholic from Cape Breton into the House of Assembly in Nova Scotia and it would do some of the men who are opposed to giving justice to Ireland, a great deal of good if they were to read the speeches that were made by Englishmen, Irishmen and Scotchmen, when, the Nova Scotia parliament declared that Cavanagh the Catholic from Cape Breton should take his seat in the Nova Scotia parliament. I said the other day that we in the lower provinces were in advance of Canada in many things, and this is one of the things that might be mentioned.

Some hon. MEMBERS. Hear, hear.

Hon. Mr. ROSS (Victoria, N.S.) I am afraid Mr. Speaker, that I have occupied the time of the House at too great length, and I know that great fault is found with those who trespass too much on your patience, but I think in justice to myself that I should express my opinions on this subject, and I will regret exceedingly if this House should forget itself so much as not to give a unanimous vote for the resolution that has been submitted.

Mr. E. GUSS PORTER (West Hastings). Perhaps all has been said on this motion that can be said with advantage to the House, and I venture to think that more has already been said in favour of this resolution than will be of profit to Canada. At the risk of not being able to contribute much that might be useful in the discussion, I yet desire to put myself on record and to advance some reasons why I shall vote upon this resolution as I intend to vote. The resolution as I have heard it read and as I understood it, is divisable into two parts. Part one of the resolution declares the unswerving loyalty of this parliament and of the people of Canada to Great Britain. I would like to know when it became necessary for the Canadian people to put in writing and transmit that writing to the British parliament, to convince the British people of the loyalty of Canadians. Have not the Canadian people within the last two or three years, by their acts which speak louder than words, convinced the British empire that at all times Canadians may be relied upon to show their loyalty to the mother country. It struck me when the resolution was being read that there was no necessity for that part of the resolution, and that the reason why it was introduced was simply as an apology for the latter part of the motion regarding home rule. And Sir, I do not think this parliament is called upon to support any resolution that requires an apology for its introduction. Now, I do not recognize any man as having a greater regard, respect, or admiration for the Irish people than I myself possess. I have the proud right to claim descent from Irish parents, and I have today living in that country some of my nearest relatives, who are I think in a position to judge fairly of the condition of things in Ireland.

I have had some personal experience with those people, having visited them on more than one occasion, and I am bound to say that on my last visit I could see, what is perfectly apparent to any one visiting the country, that a very great improvement has taken place in the condition of Ireland within the last ten years. I say I do not recognize any man as having a greater admiration for Ireland and the Irish people, than I have. Ireland is a country acknowledged to have great possibilities both from an agricultural and an industrial standpoint. The Irish people as a race are patriotic, hardy and intelligent, and possessed of a large-heartedness and a sympathetic nature which I regret to think are sometimes taken advantage of by agitators, not for the purpose of benefiting the Irish people, but for the purpose of advancing their own political or personal interests. Sir, at this distance and with the opportunities which we have at our command, it occurs to me that we are not in a position to view this question with such a degree of certainty that it is impossible for us to form a conclusion that may not be erroneous. We are liable, from a want of knowledge of the inner workings of this question, to make mistakes in our judgment. Many of the ablest statesmen in the British parliament have differed on this great question—parliamentarians who have given the matter most earnest and careful consideration, men who have been willing at all times to grant such relief as might be fair to Ireland or to any other portion of the empire; and is it any wonder that a difference of opinion should exist here where we have not the same opportunities of studying the question that these men have ?

A difference of opinion not as to the justice of redressing any real grievance but a difference of opinion as to the best mode of accomplishing it. The whole question is to my mind beset with such difficulties that it would be impossible for us at this distance to form a correct judgment upon it. There is the right of the landlord, and the right of the tenant; there is the right of the government and the right of those who are governed; there is the right of the native-born Irishman and the right of the people who have gone into the country and by their capital and industry have assisted in bringing about the better condition of Ireland that we see to-day; there is the right of the employer and the right of the employee; and there is also the differences among the people in religious sentiment. I hope this resolution has not been introduced and will not be discussed in a spirit that would be likely to widen the breach that now exists between those two religious bodies. Happily for this country and for the whole British nation, those two religious bodies have been approaching nearer together, and I would be very sorry to say one word or to hear one word uttered in this parliament that might have the effect of widening in the slightest degree that breach which is happily growing less. But apart altogether from that consideration, it strikes me that the question we are discussing is one with which we ought not to deal in this parliament. We are undertaking to accomplish something which we have no assurance that we shall be able to accomplish; we are voluntarily undertaking a responsibility that we have not the power or the authority of carrying out. While we may be most anxious, as I have no doubt every Canadian is, to see every real grievance in Ireland redressed, let us hesitate before taking this step for fear we may injure the cause which we most wish to advance. I am very glad to know that a flood-light of hope has been cast over Ireland and the Irish people to-day by the legislation emanating from the Conservative party in the British parliament. It is to my mind only one more evidence of the willingness, the readiness and the ability of the Conservative party, not only in England but in Canada, to stretch forth the hand of help to any of our people who may require assistance; and, Sir, it is the one element to which we, as Canadians, can point with pride as having built up this country and made our people happy and prosperous. I know, from my reading of some of the debates which have taken place in this House on similar occasions, that the right hon. First Minister has before now pointed out that resolutions of this kind carried on former occasions have been kindly received by the British parliament; but notwithstanding that fact, I think it is well for us to stop and consider before sending on another resolution. It is natural for the British race to grant pardon for a first offence; but a repetition of that offence is often visited with the severest punishment, and this may possibly be the time, when, if we interfere with something with which we have nothing to do, we may receive a rebuke from the British parliament. We have duties enough to perform in regard to our own country. We have a great and growing country with a diversity of interests; we are here representing the people of this country and supposed to devote ourselves to the business of this country, and if we discharge our duty in that respect, we shall have performed our duty well, without travelling outside of that duty and interfering with something with which we have nothing whatever to do. There is plenty of work affecting the interests of this country to engage the attention of this parliament for all the time it can afford, and it strikes me that we would be better fulfilling the duties cast upon us if we were to direct our energies into that channel and that channel alone. Let it not be said of us that we do those things which we ought not to do and leave undone those things which we ought to do. For these among other considerations I feel bound to pass my vote against the resolution, but I do so in no spirit of ill-feeling against the Irish people or Ireland. On the contrary, I entertain the warmest feeling for that nation and its people, and while I cast my vote against the resolution I at the same time say 'God bless Ireland.'

The PRIME MINISTER (Rt. Hon. Sir Wilfrid Laurier). Whether this motion be opportune or not, whether it be conducive or not to beneficial results, whether the time chosen be propitious—all these are questions which must have engaged the serious attention of my hon. friend the mover of this resolution, who has been in this House one of the oldest champions of the cause of home rule for Ireland. But whatever may be our views upon the opportunity of this motion it is now before us and for my part, convinced as I have been for a great many years that the settlement of the Irish problem would be a blessing not only to Ireland but to Great Britain, to Canada, to Australia, and to all parts of the British empire in which Irishmen are to be found, I feel called upon on this occasion to give this motion my most hearty sympathy, as I have done similar resolutions on former occasions. We are reminded that once, when the parliament of Canada passed a motion similar somewhat to that now before us, we were told in language polite but unequivocal that it would be far better and preferable for the parliament of Canada to apply itself to questions over which it has jurisdiction. But, Sir, time moves, new ideas germinate and bear fruit, and there is to-day, I am sure, a greater cordiality and solidarity among all the nations of the earth than there has been at any previous period of its history. It is fitting and proper that this feeling should exist in a larger degree within the communities which are members of the same empire, and every one must be glad to bear testimony to this fact, that at present the relations between Great Britain and her colonies are certainly closer than they were twenty-two years ago. So close have become our relations that now we can offer our own opinions and views to the British people upon questions of policy, which affect not only imperial affairs, but also domestic affairs, without any rebuke. It is scarcely more than three years ago when, on the 31st of July, 1899, the following resolution was moved in this House and adopted unanimously :

1. Resolved, that this House has viewed with regret the complications which have arisen in the Transvaal Republic, of which Her Majesty is suzerain, from the refusal to accord to Her Majesty's subjects now settled in that region any adequate participation in its government.

2. Resolved, that this House has learned with still greater regret that the condition of things there existing has resulted in intolerable oppression, and has produced great and dangerous excitement among several classes of Her Majesty's subjects in her South African possessions.

3. Resolved, that this House, representing a people which has largely succeeded, by the adoption of the principle of conceding equal political rights to every portion of the population, in harmonising estrangements and in producing general content with the existing system of government, desires to express its sympathy with the efforts of Her Majesty's imperial authorities to obtain for the subjects of Her Majesty who have taken up their abode in the Transvaal such measure of justice and political recognition as may be found necessary to secure them in the full possession of equal rights and liberties.

This motion was transmitted by the Speaker of the House of Commons, to the Colonial Secretary of State, and for this motion we were not rebuked. To this there came no rebuff. On the contrary it was quoted with approval all over the British empire. On the contrary the British people expressed their thanks and gratitude to the parliament of Canada for the action we had then taken. And if we could take that course with reference to the Transvaal, if we could do that for the people of the Transvaal, surely we are warranted ten times over in taking the same course for the benefit of our fellow subjects in Ireland. Now, Sir, it is a pleasant fact that at present there is peace in every part of the British empire, there is contentment in almost every part of the of the British empire, with one exception only, and that is Ireland. If we analyze the condition of things which exists in all these parts of the British empire where general contentment prevails, we must come to the conclusion that the one cause which has brought about this beneficial result is the fact that in every one of those communities the people have been granted a full measure of local autonomy and local self-government. Why should not the same measure be meted out to the people of Ireland ? Why should they not be granted the same measure of self-government which has been granted Australia and Canada ? Why should we not expect that what has made Canada prosperous and loyal would also make Ireland prosperous and loyal ? Why is it this course is not followed with regard to Ireland ? If we go to the root of things, we will find that the only cause can be summarized in the word 'distrust'—the distrust of the British people against the Irish people—that distrust which impels them to the conclusion that the Irish people, if they were granted home rule, if they were given the right to administer their own affairs, would abuse that power in order to work out the separation of Ireland from Great Britain. It is this distrust which has just been expressed by my hon. friend from East Grey (Mr. Sproule), when he said that if the people of Ireland were granted the power to govern themselves, they would be ruled by a foreign authority. Let me say to my hon. friend this : He and I do not worship at the same altar, but let me tell him that the Roman Catholics to-day, while they acknowledge obedience in spiritual matters to that foreign authority which he had in his mind, in temporal matters they recognize no authority but that of their own civil government. If the people of England be satisfied that the Roman Catholics in Ireland, as the Roman Catholics in Canada, will be true to the civil authority of the land, I am sure the next day home rule will be granted to Ireland. But, at the same time, this distrust exists. I may say—and I must say to my hon. friend (Hon. Mr. Costigan), the mover of this resolution—that some of the Irish leaders have acted very unwisely and have, unfortunately given cause of distrust against them. If I had the privilege of a seat in the House of Commons, I would say to my friends the home rulers : While I sympathise with you, while I am, as much as you are, in favour of home rule for Ireland, I want it to be understood, and I want to say here and now, that home rule does not mean separation; you should and you must be loyal to the Crown.

Mr. KEMP. They won't say that.

The PRIME MINISTER. Yes, they would say that ; for, other home rulers have said it before. Let me quote the words of one of the most distinguished home rulers of his day, Sir Charles Russell, afterwards Lord Russell of Killowen. In addressing his electors, the electors of Hackney, in November, 1885, he made use of this language, running as a home rule candidate :

The question of Ireland still remains unsolved. Its wise solution cannot fail to strengthen the position of the empire, and leave to the legislature here greater opportunity of dealing adequately with an increasing arrear of necessary legislation. I am absolutely opposed to separation; but, reserving imperial control in all imperial questions, I think Irishmen on Irish soil should have the power of dealing in the way that seems to them best with all questions that concern them.

This is the language of a home ruler. This is the view of the question which I am sure will prevail. But you will tell me that language has been used, which is very nearly, if not actually treason. We all know that the embittered heart will be made ungenerous. But if there is a way of making men, even with the intention of disloyalty in their hearts, loyal, that way is to trust them and give them the liberties which have been denied them. Look at the history of Canada here, when that great man, one of the greatest men of the last century, Lord Elgin, did not hesitate to put the fullest powers of self-government into the hands of a people who, a few years before had been in actual rebellion. Sir, this is the way that great men deal with such questions; and this is the thing I would speak for, if I had the privilege of a seat in the House of Commons. Nay, more, if I had that privilege, having spoken as I have just indicated to the home rulers, I would address myself also to the government of the day, and I would tell them that it was not sufficient to have a tentative policy upon this question. I would say: You have done a great deal for Ireland; you have sacrificed a great amount of money; you are to-day bringing in a measure which is a credit to the statesmanship of your government, which must involve the expenditure of a great deal of money, though I hope that, in the end it will be paid by the Irish people themselves, but it is not sufficient to deal out parsimoniously—I do not say in the matter of money, but in the matter of reform—measures of improvement. You must appeal to the heart and the imagination of a highly impulsive and generous people. Mr. Gladstone has done more by his attempt, by his abortive attempt, for home rule, than all the reforms, substantial as they have been, which have been worked by the present government. I have always been impressed by the words spoken something over ten years ago, by Mr. John Dillon. The occasion was a demonstration in favour of Mr. Dillon by the people of Cork, where he had just been released from jail, having been confined for violation of one of the numerous Coercion Acts which were the disgrace of the British government in the last century. This is the way Mr. Dillon spoke—and I appeal to the attention of my hon. friends, especially of my hon. friends on the other side who do not believe in home rule for Ireland—to consider these words:

But it is impossible for me to be blind to the facts that are forced upon my notice as regards the mighty changes which have come over the minds of the masses of the people of England, and remembering this, I think it is not wise to be impatient, because the delivery of Ireland is not to be accomplished in a day. I can see no cause for impatience, but cause rather for hope and even exultation. Coming now, as I do, from what was meant to be an insult and a degradation to me, and, as I hope, an honourable man, I can find within my heart not the slightest trace of bitterness against the people of England. I can recollect the day when the power and the name of Englishmen were hateful to my heart. It may be that I am demoralized by the countless acts of kindness I have received at the hands of Englishmen. But the feeling has now changed, and I cannot find it in my heart to regret that it is now passing away.

Let us pause and reflect a little on these words. 'I recollect the day when the power and the name of Englishmen were hateful to my heart.' Here is the accumulated bitterness of ages and centuries of oppression. That was the condition of John Dillon, that was the condition of the Irish people—bitterness of heart caused by the odious manner in which they had been treated for ages and centuries. But the fact that at that time a great party was ready to come to the relief of Ireland was enough to take away the bitterness from the heart of John Dillon. He was applauded by the people of Ireland. Therefore, I say, trust the people of Ireland, let them be treated kindly, let them be treated fairly, let them be treated justly, and the bitterness will pass away and they will become the most loyal subjects in the British empire. I am not taking too sanguine a view. There is example and justification of my words in the language I have just quoted from John Dillon. But, so long as you continue to give to the people of Ireland, from time to time, simply a scanty measure of what they would expect, you will not make them contented and happy. If there is on the face of the earth, a generous people, a warm-hearted people, never slow to resent an injury, but never slow to be grateful for a favour received, it is the Irish people; and, for my part—I do not wish to speak at length on the subject, for it has been well threshed out—I do not believe that if this question is to be solved, it can only be by giving the Irish people the measure of liberty that we have in Canada, and to give them, not the powers we have in the parliament of the confederation, but the powers we give to the provinces. Let there be a parliament on College Green. Let the heart and mind of the Irish people be appealed to, and Ireland, instead of being, as in the past, a thorn in the flesh of England, will become a tower of strength to the British empire.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN (Halifax). Mr. Speaker, before the vote is taken, I desire to say a few words. I regret that I was not able to hear the whole of the debate. It did seem to me that when my hon. friend from Victoria, N.B. (Hon. Mr. Costigan) gave notice of his resolution that this was a somewhat inopportune time to introduce it. What is regarded as a very liberal measure of relief with respect to one question which has agitated Ireland for some time, has been introduced by the English government. For that reason, possibly, the occasion for the introduction of this resolution is not of the happiest. Also, I think that the resolution is not very happily worded. I should have thought that my hon. friend from Victoria, N.B., might perhaps have couched his thoughts in the concluding clauses of the resolution in some happier terms. I think all of us in this House desire that every possible measure of relief be given to Ireland in respect of any grievance which she has sustained in the past or from what she now suffers; but at the same time we do not desire to place ourselves in a position which is not a dignified one. I would like to call the attention of my right hon. friend to the concluding words of this resolution:

> We have observed, may it please your Majesty, with feelings of profound satisfaction the evidence afforded in the debate of the House of Commons of the United Kingdom, and in the speech from the Throne, of a sincere desire on all sides to usher in a new era of lasting peace and good will.

I would like to submit to my right hon. friend whether after all it is a very dignified, not to say a pertinent, thing for us to discuss the tone of a debate in the imperial House of Commons. It does not seem to me that the resolution is worded in the best way in that regard. We might have it followed by a proposed resolution of this House with regard to the eloquence of some speech of a British cabinet minister, or of a member of the House of Commons, and we would not be going very much beyond the length to which we are asked to go in this resolution. However, that is a matter of form more than a matter of substance; and I would have been inclined, if I had been favoured to any extent with the confidence of the hon. gentleman who moved this resolution, to suggest to him, as well as to my right hon. friend who is responsible for the dignity as well as the proceedings of this House, that the resolution might have been amended in that respect and yet be just as serviceable to the cause of home rule.

Now the resolution seems to be somewhat unhappily worded in another regard. It refers to a measure which is about to be introduced into the British House of Commons. Well, since the notice was given, since the address was drawn up, that resolution has been introduced, and criticism might fairly be made I think on the terms of the resolution that it hardly does justice to the present circumstances.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax).

But apart from this, Mr. Speaker, I listened with a good deal of attention to the very able speech of my hon. friend from Norfolk (Mr. Charlton), and I thought there was a good deal in it worthy of consideration by all of us in this House. At the same time we cannot disguise from ourselves the fact that not only with regard to home rule in Ireland, but with regard to other matters of imperial concern, we have in the past taken upon ourselves to make suggestions to the imperial government. As to the wisdom of that course, there may be more than one opinion, as to the service or value of it, there may be more than one opinion. I really do not know whether the cause of home rule in Ireland, the redress of grievances under which Ireland has suffered in the past, has been materially aided by any resolution or by any action of the Canadian House of Commons. It is quite true that we passed a resolution unanimously some three years ago with regard to the cause of our fellow subjects in South Africa. But I think the House should not forget that that resolution was followed up by active and material assistance when the cause of our fellow subjects there came to be decided by the force of arms. It is a fair question for hon. gentlemen on both sides of the House as to what extent we should take upon ourselves to tender advice in imperial matters where we are not prepared to supplement that advice by some active and material assistance.

Now I would like to call the attention of my hon. friend the mover of this resolution to the fact that there are communities in Canada at the present time which are demanding that same measure of home rule which he is demanding for Ireland. I am referring to the people of the North-west Territories of Canada, who, by the unanimous resolution of their representatives in the territorial legislature, have called upon this government, nearly two years ago, to grant to them exactly the same rights which are possessed by the people of all the provinces of Canada. Perhaps it might be a fair matter of consideration as to whether those claims and those demands should not engage our attention during this session, and whether our time might not at least be equally devoted to them as well as to the claims of our fellow countrymen in Ireland.

With regard to what my right hon. friend has said respecting the cause of home rule in Ireland, I am happy to say that a great deal of it commends itself to my judgment, but I do not altogether think that the cause of home rule, or the success of home rule, will be reached in the way he appears to believe. I think that home rule, not only to the Irish people but to the people of all the British islands, will come in the future, and come perhaps in the very near future, from the very necessity of things. We know how utterly inadequate is the time at the command of the imperial House of Commons for consideration of the great subjects which come before that House. I myself have sat in the gallery of the House of Commons at Westminster and seen the affairs of India, a country of 300,000,000, disposed of in a single evening, and with not more than one-fifth of the membership of the House present. We know that during the past two or three years estimates, items amounting to $25,000,000, have been passed through the imperial House with a discussion of only an hour or two, for the reason that the time of the House was so taken up with a multitude of other matters that it was absolutely impossible to devote to these subjects the time they really demanded. Now, whether by an extension of the power of county councils in the mother country, whether by the establishment of district councils, or by the establishment of local parliaments of some kind, I believe that that condition of affairs must be relieved, and will be relieved in the very near future.

In the meantime, however, a very great measure has been proposed to the imperial House of Commons, a measure which is an object lesson to the whole world. A country that has spent hundreds of millions in asserting the rights of her subjects in South Africa, now presents to the world the spectacle of granting as a loan in the first instance $500,000,000 or $600,000,000, accompanied with a vote of $60,000,000 to $70,000,000 for the purpose of relieving a portion of the United Kingdom from a grievance which has existed for a great many years past. That is a great measure, it is a measure that is worthy of the parliament of a great country. Whether or not it will have all the success which most of us believe and hope it will have, certainly we must all recognize that it is an intelligent and sincere step in the direction of ameliorating the grievances from which Ireland has suffered in the past. Therefore, I say that all of us join with our fellow countrymen on the other side of the water in trusting that that measure may pass, and that it may have the result which we all hope for. That Ireland is worthy of an effort of this kind none of us will deny. My right hon. friend has said that he believes that Ireland will be loyal. I go beyond that; I say that I believe Ireland is and has been loyal to the British Crown, notwithstanding these grievances from which she has suffered in the past. When I speak of Ireland I speak of the great mass of the people of Ireland, and I have the battlefields of the empire to justify me in saying that Ireland has been loyal and devoted to the Crown of the United Kingdom in all of the years past. Go to the thousand battlefields of the empire, look where the charge has been fiercest in the hour of victory, or where the foe has pressed nearest in the hour of retreat, on every one of these battlefields Ireland may claim and has claimed her glorious dead, the dead who have fought and bled for the welfare of the empire. Not only has Ireland done this, but Ireland has given to the empire men in every rank of life who have contributed much to the upbuilding of the empire and to the cause of civilization. Therefore, I say, Mr. Speaker, that I do not accept the suggestion that Ireland will be loyal in the future; I say that the mass of the Irish people, the great body of the Irish people have been loyal in the past to the empire, and are loyal at present to the empire, and this I say to their credit, because, during all these years they have been oppressed with a sense of wrong and injustice, and they have felt that they have not been fairly treated. Notwithstanding that, they have stood side by side and shoulder to shoulder with their brethren in Scotland and England, and they have been devoted and loyal to the cause of the empire in every walk and department of life.

Now, there is another striking circumstance in connection with the present measure that has been brought forward in the House of Commons, and that is the fact, from which I draw a good omen for the future, that Irishmen throughout Canada, and I believe Irishmen throughout the United Kingdom, are impressed with the belief that the present attitude of the British government is to a large extent, to a considerable extent, at least, due to the personal influence of our most gracious Sovereign. I draw from that a very happy omen for the future, because the tie which binds Ireland, as well as Canada, to the empire, the tie of allegiance to the Crown, is only a technical tie, and while it is only a technical tie it has no very great strength. It requires something stronger and deeper than that. The belief that Irishmen entertain throughout Canada and throughout the mother country as to the effect of the personal influence of our Sovereign will, I believe, strengthen that tie so that it will become enduring and imperishable so that Ireland not only will remain loyal but will become the most loyal portion of His Majesty's dominion throughout the world. That, Sir, is a very happy circumstance indeed. That is a circumstance which we welcome on this side of the Atlantic, and a circumstance which, I am sure, will render the future of the United Kingdom of much happier omen than the conditions of the past might have justified us in expecting a few years ago. Now, I do not know that I have anything to add. As I said before, I think that the precedents that we have had introduced in regard to Ireland herself, and the precedent which we established in 1900 in regard to our fellow countrymen in South Africa, justify us in voting for this resolution, although I am bound to say that I would have preferred that it should have been introduced at some more opportune moment, and that it should have been couched in some happier terms. Therefore, for these reasons, by reason of the precedents of the past, in the hope that this may in some measure strengthen those in the United Kingdom who brought forward this measure, and in the belief that, acting upon these precedents of the past, we have no other course to follow at the present time, I, speaking for myself, now declare my intention of voting for this resolution.

Mr. J. SHERRITT (North Middlesex). Mr. Speaker, I do not wish to give a silent vote, nor do I wish to delay the House by the remarks which I have to make. I shall endeavour not to detain the House for more than a minute or two. I am not here to discuss the question of home rule for Ireland; neither am I here to say the Irish people have not a grievance, nor will I take up the time of the House in establishing the fact that I am in sympathy with Ireland. I am an Irishman myself, and it would not be a very difficult matter for me to establish the fact that I am in sympathy with Ireland, but when we consider that in 1882 we met with a rebuff at the hands of the imperial government, when a motion similar to that now proposed was sent to Great Britain, it does seem to me that we cannot, except that the conditions there have changed so materially in the twenty-one years which have elapsed since that time, that we will not leave ourselves open to receiving another such rebuff as we got at that time. I do not wish to put myself on record as being willing to invite a rebuff of that kind. Under these circumstances I intend to vote against the motion. It is not that I have any feeling against the Irish people, nor is it that I do not represent that class of people. I have the honour to represent a very large number of people of Irish parentage resident in my riding. I am glad to say that the people I represent are intelligent enough to know that any action we may take here will not accomplish very much in their behalf, remembering, as they do, the reception given to the resolution which was sent over twenty-one years ago. For that reason, and that reason only, I intend to vote against this motion if the mover and seconder insist upon the matter being brought to a vote.

Mr. JOHN D. REID (South Grenville). Mr. Speaker, I do not care to give a vote on this question without explaining my position. I remember that a few years ago I gave a vote in favour of the motion moved by the hon. member for Victoria, N.B. (Mr. Costigan). At that time, I was in favour of anything that could be done in the interest of Ireland, and I am in favour of it now. I am of Irish descent and I would like everything done that would assist that portion of the empire. But, Sir, at the present time I intend to vote against this resolution and I will give my reasons. It surprises me that I have not seen any agitation in this country by the Irish people either Protestants or Catholics asking for any resolution to be introduced in this House in favour of home rule for Ireland, and what is still more surprising to me is that the Irish people of this country of the same religion as the hon. member for Victoria, N.B. (Hon. Mr. Costigan), could not find some leading member of this House, a member of the government, who would introduce it and who would in my opinion add to the credit of the resolution. We have in this House the hon. Minister of Justice, a creditable Irishman, and if the Minister of Justice would introduce a resolution of this kind and explain it, I conceive that a great many more would support it. But here is the hon. member for Victoria, N.B., who has been travelling on this resolution since he was first a member of this House thirty or forty years ago. I believe that this resolution was introduced by the hon. member for Victoria, N.B. (Hon. Mr. Costigan) each and every time for the purpose of booming himself in the House and so far as I am concerned I do not intend to boom him any more. I believe that a great many men in this House have been speaking here to-night simply for their constituents; simply for the purpose of trying to put themselves in such a position that they may come back to the House again. I care not whether I come back or not, I intend to express my feelings as I am doing now. I do not believe that it is in the interest of the Irish people of Canada, I believe it was introduced in the interest of the hon. member for Victoria, N.B., and I shall not support any motion which is submitted here for the purpose of serving the ends of any one member. Under these circumstances I feel that I would not be doing myself or my constituents justice if I sat here without explaining the reasons why I shall vote against the resolution. I am sincere in what I say. Is it not a strange thing, Mr. Speaker, that in this House, where we have so many prominent Irishmen, men who are respected from one end of this Dominion to the other, that there is not one of them that will get up here and move the resolution except the hon. gentleman who has been playing with it so long. For that reason I shall vote against it now and every time so long as it is moved in the spirit in which it has been moved to-day.

The MINISTER OF JUSTICE (Hon. Charles Fitzpatrick). I venture to intrude in this debate, expressing the hope that nothing which I may say, will mar the effect produced by the very eloquent and statesmanlike utterance we have heard from the Prime Minister.

Some hon. MEMBERS. Hear, hear.

The MINISTER OF JUSTICE. In corroboration of what the right hon. gentleman has said, if I may call it corroboration, I would like to read to the House the words used by the Hon. George E. Foster at the time the Transvaal resolution was introduced here, and I think these words have a very close application to the subject now before us. Mr. Foster said :

These resolutions, I think, are timely, then, because they say to our own British fellow-citizens, who are Uitlanders in the republic, that they have the sympathy and the good will of the British empire as a whole, in all its parts, in their struggle for equal rights. No taxation without representation is a cry to which the world rises, and it will rise in the Dutch republic just as surely as the sun rises. Outside of that, I think, great good will come from the introduction and passage of a resolution like this in that it is another proof of the solidarity of the British empire throughout the world, that to-day, in these times of telegraph wires, and steamships, and quick transmission of intelligence, evokes a lively and sympathetic and deep interest in every part of the British empire in the local fortunes of every other part of the British empire.

It seems to me that this language may very well be taken to heart by hon. gentlemen opposite who are opposed to this resolution. I would ask them to realize that all we ask is that there may be extended to our fellow-countrymen in Ireland, that measure of sympathy and support that two years ago we were asked to extend to the Uitlanders in South Africa. Beyond that we do not go; beyond that, so far as I am concerned, I would not venture to go.

Some hon. gentlemen have taken it upon themselves to discuss the motives and the objects which my hon. friend (Mr. Costigan) had when he moved this resolution. I would be remiss in my duty, if, speaking here to-night, I did not say a word in support of that hon. gentleman, and give expression to the sentiments that I entertain for him. Let me say in this connection that I do not affect to speak for the Irish Catholics of the Dominion of Canada. I have no mandate; no authority to speak for them. I speak to-night, as has been my habit in the past, in the capacity of a Canadian representative of a Canadian constituency, but at the same time I cannot forget that I am an Irish Catholic, and I speak as one of that class (if not for them) when I say that no man in Canada deserves better of the Irish Catholics than the Hon. Mr. Costigan.

Some hon. MEMBERS. Hear, hear.

The MINISTER OF JUSTICE. The Hon. Mr. Costigan enjoys the exceptional advantage of having occupied a seat in this House continuously since confederation, and during that long record he has not done anything that we need blush for. On the contrary, we give our sanction and our approval to all that he has done in so far as Irish Catholic interests are concerned.

Mr. HUGHES (Victoria, Ont.) It is Irish interests he is looking after, not Irish Catholic interests.

The MINISTER OF JUSTICE. I did not quite catch what my hon. friend has said.

Mr. HUGHES (Victoria, Ont.) He is looking after Irish interests, not after Irish Catholic interests.

The MINISTER OF JUSTICE. Yes, he is looking after Irish interests, and that is what we are dealing with now. The attack made upon the Hon. Mr. Costigan was under the suggestion that his object here was merely to catch votes, and I am referring to the hon. gentleman (Mr. Costigan) with the object of refuting the statement that such is his object. My hon. friend from North Victoria (Mr. Hughes) was good enough to suggest that he would like to challenge any man in this House to say that there was such a thing in existence as an Irish grievance. Well, the answer to that challenge of his was given by the leader of the political party to which the hon. gentleman (Mr. Hughes) belongs; but if further answer be required, I could read from the speeches delivered by the Rt. Hon. Mr. Chamberlain as far back as 1885 and 1886. Here is one of the declarations that Mr. Chamberlain had to make on that subject :

It is not a new problem, this Irish question. Once in ten years ; once in twenty years it may be ; sometimes with sufficient warning, sometimes without the slightest preparation like a bolt from the blue sky, the Irish question is upon us. Every generation in turn for 400 years has had to deal with it. Each has disposed of it for a time according to its fashion, and each has had to bequeath it still unsettled to its successor. . . . . Force has been tried during all this period, and has failed. Nothing is more certain than that force, although it may temporarily have produced order and tranquillity, has left Ireland always as discontented as before, has left the problem still unsolved. . . . . The majority of the farmers of Ireland and their families are at the mercy of the ten thousand landlords in the country, and they have suffered much in the past. Well, I have nothing to say, and will not say one single word against the Irish landlords as a class. The proof that they have been, on the whole, just and even generous is to be found in the fact that they continue to exist. The occasional enforcement of their rights by an unjust and harsh landlord here and there was enough to cause alarm and indignation throughout the whole district, and was a constant and fruitful source of disaffection in the country ; and when the bad times came—when famine stared these people in the face, and when to every man was brought the possibility of eviction and expatriation—I say it is no wonder that under such circumstances a common danger united the people, induced them to listen to baleful counsels, and occasionally impelled them to criminal deeds.

Now, the question of Irish grievances, it seems to me, is not one that should be discussed here. We all know that Irish grievances have existed, and we know that some exist still. At the same time, I would not be true to my duty if I did not bear testimony to the fact that an honest effort has been made by the English people to remedy those grievances, and I am satisfied that the day is not far distant when the last of them will have disappeared. In the meantime, what are we called on to do? To express our continued belief in the advantages of the principle of self-government; to say, as the Canadian parliament said in 1882 and again in 1887, that in the light of the experience we have had in Canada, we believe that the principle of self-government when applied to Ireland will have the same result that it has had when applied to Canada. It is not necessary for me to go over the record and point out the advantages which we have enjoyed in Canada as a result of the application of the principle of self-government. It is not necessary for me to go over the records since 1837 and point out to this House, the majority of whom are more familiar with the details than I can profess to be, how a change has come over the spirit of our dream in Canada; how from a country in open revolt, we have come to be a country whose loyalty is unquestioned, and which is looked on to-day as one of the finest countries in the world. We have developed along the lines of self-government, and can it be pretended for one moment that, as the ties have lessened until to-day we have become a nation within a nation, the bonds have in any respect been weakened? On the contrary, as the ties have been lessened, as the principle of self-government has been developed, the bonds have become firmer; because we now realize what British constitutional liberty means; because we now realize that the British flag stands to us in Canada for liberty, self-government and justice—in a word, for all those things which in the past have been denied to the Irishmen in Ireland.

Now, a large and important portion of this country is interested in this question. It is all very fine for some hon. gentlemen to rise up in this House and say that they love the Irish, they admire the Irish, they recognize the services the Irish have rendered to the empire and to Canada; but that which is more important, it seems to me, than all that is that these hon. gentlemen should show their good will, not by words, but by deeds.

And I cannot agree with those who say that they vote against this resolution, not because of its intrinsic merits, but because it happens to be proposed by an hon. member who does not meet favour in their eyes. It has been suggested, I think by the hon. member for Dundas (Mr. Broder), that this resolution does not cover the same ground as the resolution of 1882—that it does not contain within it the same restrictions with respect to the rights of the minority in Ireland. My hon. friend never read the resolution, or he would understand that it is a mere reaffirming of the principles of the resolution of 1882, nothing more, nothing less.

On the other hand, some hon. gentleman has said: We do not wish to obtrude our opinions on the British House of Commons, because in 1882, when we ventured to offer some suggestions in this respect, we were told by the Earl of Kimberley practically to mind our own business. Well, so far as I am concerned, I deny to any British statesman, however eminent his position may be, the right to dictate to the Canadian parliament whether or not it has the right to pass a resolution or to petition. That is a right inherent in the Canadian parliament; and, as Sir John Thompson said, and as Mr. Edward Blake said in 1887, our duty is to deny the right of any English statesman to lay down such a doctrine. But independent altogether of this observation, I would like to say that I appeal to Mr. Gladstone, better informed in 1887 than he appears to have been in 1882. In 1882 he was the head of the government, and of course was responsible for what the Earl of Kimberley said when he wrote the letter that has been referred to in the course of the present debate. But Mr. Gladstone in 1887 received a resolution passed by the provincial legislature at Quebec in favour of his Home Rule Bill, and publicly thanked the legislature for having passed the resolution. We were told that we ought not to obtrude our views on the imperial parliament, because, forsooth, it might occur to the imperial parliament to give us advice—to say, for instance, that the tithe system existing in the province of Quebec should not be tolerated any longer, but should be altered. My hon. friends need not trouble themselves about that. The imperial parliament, if it desired to make any observations in that respect, would not limit itself to observations; it might to-morrow pass an Act to wipe out the whole of those restrictions. The British parliament has the inherent power to amend every line of the British North America Act, and to-morrow the whole British North America Act might be wiped out. But is it likely to occur? Is it likely, after England has had the experience which she has had of the development of local institutions in Canada, that the imperial parliament would venture to do anything of the sort? There is no use of creating bugbears for the purpose of putting an argument of that sort before this House.

Now, I would like to say one word as to the other branch of the resolution, that is, the branch that has reference to the question of land tenure in Ireland. I agree, and I am glad to bear testimony to the fact, that there is probably but one people in the world generous enough to deal with a question of this sort, as the English people are attempting to deal with it at the present time. But what are we asked to do? We are asked to congratulate them practically on what they are doing, to wish them success in their efforts, and bid them God-speed on the road on which they have entered. Now, is it not right that we should do so? Never has there been in the history of Ireland anything approaching the conditions that exist to-day. You have, on the one hand, Mr. Redmond, who represents the Nationalist party, rising in his place in the English House of Commons and saying:

> The situation in Ireland was very strange. It was so full of hope that it contained a menace of danger. Crime was unknown, coercion had been suspended, class animosities for the moment were at an end, and united Ireland stood at the bar of that House and asked for the concession of this great measure of justice and appeasement. To raise up the hopes of a whole people to the highest pitch of expectation and then dash them to the ground would be neither a safe nor a sane proceeding. Never in the history of that House had a government had a more blessed opportunity of carrying to fruition a great and blessed policy.

These are the words that fell from the lips of the leader of the Irish Nationalist party. What do we find on the other side? We find Col. Saunderson, who represents the north and who speaks for the landlord element, saying on the same subject:

> Ireland was ready to accept this gift, not only for its own benefits, but for the good of the state; and to disappoint the country in the matter would be, in his judgment a crime. He had always held that the purchasing out of the landlords of Ireland was not so much for the good of the tenants or the landlords themselves as for the good of the state in contributing to the general security of the British Empire, by restoring peace, prosperity and contentment to Ireland.

That is the measure we ask you to approve of. That is the measure to which this House is asked to wish Godspeed. It is a measure which has united all parties in Ireland as they never have been since the repeal of the Union. In the words of my right hon. leader, a unique opportunity has come to have this difficulty settled. If it was important for us to interfere in the South African matter, it is doubly important that we should interfere at the present juncture in connection with the affairs of Ireland. It is important that we should do so, not only from the standpoint of Canada, but of Ireland and England. Is it not important to have a contented and peaceful Ireland at the doors of England, is it not better to have that country a bulwark and a rampart of the empire, instead of having it as heretofore a hot-bed of revolution and rebellion? Any expenditure which will bring about that condition of things, will be an expenditure made in the interests of the empire. As the hon. gentleman who introduced the Bill said, it is an expenditure by which the English exchequer will be enriched, and which will effect a benefit, in so far as the external relations of the empire are concerned, that will have a far more reaching effect than any shadowy attempt to increase the militia or the army in England.

My hon. friend from North Norfolk (Mr. Charlton) spoke of the demagogues in the United States who played on the sentiments of the Irish people there. There again we find an additional reason for having this matter settled, because the demagogue would soon be out of business if there were no Irish grievances. He would soon cease to be able to twist the tail of the British lion if Irishmen in America were satisfied that England had done justice to their fellow countrymen at home. I shall not speak about the qualities of my race. Testimony has been borne to their good qualities to-night. But since the leader of the opposition (Mr. Borden) has been good enough to say that my countrymen have shown their valour on many a well fought field, I may claim that this should dispel any ill-will against Ireland aroused by its unfortunate manifestations of sympathy with the Boers. If you have this sympathy on the one hand, on the other hand you have the valour and the cheers of the Irish soldiers on the veldt in South Africa, which more than once turned the scale when victory trembled in the balance, and gave courage, sympathy and support to the English and Scotch soldiers on the same field. After all the law of compensation must tell, and it seems to me the time is opportune for us to set aside personal feelings, and not stop to consider whether the resolution has been introduced by one hon. gentleman or another, but simply look at the question from the standpoint of Canadians. We should only ask ourselves this question: Is it good for Canada that this resolution should be introduced and adopted? Is it good for the empire? Is it for the best interests of Canada and the empire that Ireland should be made peaceful, happy and contented? The descendants of Irishmen form an important element in this country. Whether our fathers or our grandfathers were born on the old soil, whether we belong to the second or third generation—and I speak as one of the latter—we feel as sincerely and earnestly for the cause of Ireland to-day as ever did our ancestors in the old land. Surely it is a remarkable and significant fact that men should carry through three successive generations the insatiable desire to have justice done the land from which they hail. We may have never seen the old land, our fathers may never have seen it, but still we hope for the day when all the grievances of Ireland may be settled, and when Irishmen at home will do for England what the Irishmen of Canada are doing for England in this Dominion.

Mr. E. F. CLARKE (West Toronto). I shall not occupy the attention of the House, Mr. Speaker, many minutes in the few remarks I have to offer on the amendment placed in your hands by the hon. member for Victoria (Hon. Mr. Costigan). But in view of what has been presented to the House on both sides of the question tonight, I feel that before a vote is taken I should give some reason why I am constrained to vote against the resolution. I listened with a great deal of attention to all that the hon. gentleman had to say, as well as to what fell from the lips of the hon. gentleman who seconded the resolution (Mr. Hackett), and I must sincerely congratulate both those hon. gentlemen on the moderation which characterized their arguments in its support. I am not one of those who find fault with the mover of the resolution for the course he has taken. In view of the diploma he has just received from the hon. the Minister of Justice (Hon. Mr. Fitzpatrick), according to which he is looked upon as the representative leader of the Irish people in Canada, he had the right to take the course he did. But I may be permitted to express an opinion, as an Irishman, not representing anybody but myself on this occasion, and an Irishman who belongs to the minority, or at any rate who comes from the stock of the minority in that country. And my opinion is that at this particular time, when a great effort is being made by Protestants and Catholics to solve one of the burning questions which has kept them apart in the motherland, it is highly inexpedient to introduce a resolution dragging this home rule business into the arena. The hon. gentleman knows that the minority in Ireland to-day are as strongly and as irrevocably opposed to home rule, as defined by those authorized to speak for the home rule party in the imperial parliament, as they were ten or even twenty years ago. I repeat, as an Irishman, earnest in his desire to see every grievance existing in the old land removed, this resolution is inexpedient. It will not promote the cause of home rule. It will not redound to the advantage of those who desire to see Ireland, north and south, east and west, united, happy, prosperous and contented. I regret exceedingly that this resolution has been moved and I regret it for these reasons. I regret it because, as the hon. Minister of Justice has pointed out, there is to-day a coming together, there is a meeting of the extremes upon the great measure which a Unionist government—a government which is the result of the attempt of Mr. Gladstone to pass a home rule measure through the imperial parliament—has had the courage, the temerity to bring forward as a solution of a much vexed question. I say I regret very deeply that, at this particular juncture, this unfortunate resolution should be brought in, because the representatives of the north have been shown by the hon. Minister of Justice as agreeing with the representatives of the south—Col. Saunderson agreeing with some other gentleman whose opinion was quoted —that everything should be done to secure the passage of that measure through the House of Commons. Now, let me say one word more with regard to the introduction of this resolution. Those who differ from the hon. gentleman (Hon. Mr. Costigan) have no right to complain of want of courtesy. They do not expect to receive more than a reasonable measure of courtesy or consideration from the hon. gentleman when he introduces his resolution. But we think, and we have a right to think from what has been said by the hon. member for West Prince (Mr. Hackett), that, though he is certainly as enthusiastic as the hon. member for Victoria in his advocacy of home rule for Ireland, he was treated with scant courtesy by the mover of this resolution. The hon. member for West Prince declared on the floor of the House that only one hour before he rose to move the resolution did the hon. member for Victoria intimate to him that he was expected to second it. Does not that give some force and effect to the suggestion offered here to-night that, probably—and I would not like to make the statement believing it to be true, but it has been made here —some other consideration than that of the best interests of Ireland moved the hon. gentleman in bringing in his resolution at this time and under these peculiar circumstances ?

It has been pointed out that resolutions were passed by this House dealing with this matter in 1882, 1886, 1897 and 1901. But it has not been stated that since these resolutions were passed, since the parliament of Canada first placed itself on record respecting the granting of a measure of home rule to Ireland, the matter has been dealt with by the imperial parliament, the parliament whose duty it is to legislate for England, Ireland, Scotland and Wales, the parliament best capable of dealing with the interests of the people of the United Kingdom. That parliament has dealt with this question of home rule on two occasions since 1882. The first occasion was in 1886, when the late Rt. Hon. W. E. Gladstone introduced a Bill. He was defeated, and he succeeded in breaking the Liberal party in two, and the pieces have not been brought together to this day. That right hon. gentleman introduced the measure again in 1893, carried it through the popular assembly, but it was defeated in the House of Lords. So, on the two occasions when the question of home rule came within the field of practical politics, when the representatives of the estates were given an opportunity to speak upon it, they declared against it. And I say—and I think I say it advisedly—that it ill-becomes us to offer an opinion and give advice when those whose duty it is to deal with this matter have, on two occasions, expressed their opinion and given advice to the Sovereign as to what is best to be done in the interests of the people of the United Kingdom. Sir, the present Unionist government owes its existence to the attempt on the part of the Liberal party, headed by that great statesman, the late Mr. Gladstone, to give home rule to Ireland. The Liberal party was smashed and the Liberal-Unionists withdrew because of their disagreement with their leader upon this question. But since this Unionist government came into power, whose members were pledged against home rule, they have given the strongest and best proofs that could be given to the Irish people, as well as to the Irish race all over the world, that they do not desire to see any real grievance in Ireland remain unredressed. They have given abundant proofs of their desire to remove every real grievance. They have passed two Land Acts since they came into power. They have passed a local government Bill which has practically revolutionized the social conditions of Ireland and given local control in local matters such as had not been known in a hundred years. There are three great questions before the Irish people, and this Unionist government—called into existence, as I repeat, because the Liberal party tried to pass home rule for Ireland—has dealt with two of them. First there was the question of the Irish university. The government appointed a commission of eminent educationists to inquire into the question and report. That report has been presented and, in due time, no doubt will be crystallized into law. They also passed a measure of local municipal government which will work out to the advantage of the people of Ireland and of the people of Great Britain. And to-day that government has presented a Bill in the Commons of Great Britain which will, for all time, redound to the credit of all those who are responsible for it, and which proves beyond peradventure the desire of the Unionist government, if there is a grievance in Ireland respecting land tenure, to remove that grievance and give the tenantry of Ireland, who have such an intense love for the native land that they desire to cling to its soil and to eke out an existence even on small holdings, an opportunity of becoming landlords, which no government in ancient or modern times ever attempted to give to a people in a position similar to that of the Irish tenant farmers. These are proofs of the patriotism and desire to do justice to Ireland presented to the world by the Unionist government of Great Britain. These are proofs that the interests of Ireland are not being neglected, that the Unionist government have the interest of Ireland at heart and are giving practical proofs of their sympathy with Ireland by passing legislation which will undoubtedly redound to the peace and prosperity of that part of His Majesty's empire.

Sir, the Minister of Justice, just before he took his seat, made an admission which, I think, will not be questioned by any hon. gentleman who knows the facts and occupies a seat in this House. He said that up to the present time Ireland has been a hot bed of rebellion, a hot-bed of revolution. I would ask the hon. gentleman, would he think it the part of wisdom, if such a state of things existed in such an important, such an integral part of the United Kingdom, to pass a measure of local self-government that would satisfy the aspirations of the majority of the people among whom such a state of feeling exists ? The admission he has made is satisfactory proof to me that the action, up to the present time, of the government of the United Kingdom, has been wise, judicious and patriotic in the extreme. The Minister of Justice has not told us nor has any hon. gentleman who has spoken in this debate—the right hon. premier himself (Rt. Hon. Sir Wilfrid Laurier) has not told us—of one disability, one grievance under which the Irish labour that the English and the Scotch and Welsh do not labour under as well. No hon. gentleman has pointed out a single disability existing in the south of Ireland that does not exist in the north as well. No hon. gentleman has pointed out one grievance that exists in Ulster that does not exist in Lancashire or in the counties north of the Tweed. There are no grievances in Ireland that are not common to the people of the United Kingdom. And where there are real grievances and they can be pointed out, the imperial parliament has proved its willingness and its desire to remove those grievances and to make the people united, contented, and prosperous, if it is possible to do so.

The MINISTER OF JUSTICE. The hon. gentleman says that there are no grievances. Will he permit me to interrupt him ?

Mr. CLARKE. Yes.

The MINISTER OF JUSTICE. Here is what Hon. T. W. Russell said a few days ago :

> Conditions in Ireland are : Coercion revived, constitution suspended, public men in prison, landlordism supreme in Dublin castle, higher education hung up, parliament hamstrung, legislation impossible, people rushing from the country in tens of thousands to seek bread in foreign lands.

Mr. CLARKE. Does the hon. gentleman endorse that statement ?

The MINISTER OF JUSTICE. The hon. gentleman says there are no grievances. Against his authority I put that of the Hon. T. W. Russell. That is all.

Mr. CLARKE. I should be very sorry indeed to set myself up as an authority against the gentleman whose opinion has been quoted. I do not know when that statement was made, or where it was made, but I will take the opportunity of reading a few lines from an official statement made by Mr. Russell before I take my seat. Now, Mr. Speaker, we have passed resolutions favouring home rule for Ireland on two or three occasions. I am not going to argue that matter now, because it has been argued in this parliament, which has passed these resolutions. I think, though, I might reiterate what has been said so well and so frequently during this debate, that we have quite a number of problems to solve ourselves, that we have a great deal to do in this parliament, and we ought to occupy our time as far as available in the discharge of our duties in representing the Canadian people. We have no mandate from our constituents to express an opinion upon this abstract question of home rule for Ireland. What do they know about it? They do not know any more about it than we do ourselves. Is it not rank impertinence, Mr. Speaker, in view of the fact that 600 men, the chosen representatives of all parts of the United Kingdom meet from year to year, who have Ireland's condition and Ireland's grievances under their eyes all the time—is it not rank impertinence on our part to be intruding and protruding ourselves into the affairs of the United Kingdom and asking these 600 men to pass a measure of home rule for Ireland? Don't you think they know their own business better than we do? It strikes me that it is reasonable to say they do. But let me go on. What have we done in parliament to aid Ireland by the passing of these resolutions, these empty, meaningless, impertinent resolutions? We got snubbed for the first one we passed, and very properly so, snubbed by the Secretary for Colonial Affairs in the administration of the late Rt. Hon. W. E. Gladstone, when we were told politely to mind our own business.

But, Mr. Speaker, a great deal of satisfaction has been taken in pointing out that since then we passed another resolution, practically unanimously, in 1899, I think, endorsing the imperial government respecting its action in the Transvaal and Orange River colonies. Is there no difference between passing this resolution favouring home rule for Ireland and our action in passing a resolution endorsing and approving the stand of the imperial government in demanding for British subjects in the Transvaal and Orange River colonies the rights that Irishmen enjoy in Ireland, and Scotchmen enjoy in Scotland? Is there not a marked difference between the two resolutions? In the one case we were re-echoing the sentiments which found a place in the breasts of 999,000 out of every million people of the British empire; we said to the mother land: We endorse your action, because you are demanding equal rights and fair play for the Uitlanders, which they do not get in a part of the world which is under the suzerainty of the British empire. Were we not right in taking that stand? Is there any parallel, under the circumstances, in protruding ourselves upon the British parliament and demanding that Irish aspirations should be gratified by giving an independent legislature to that country, and say nothing about England, Scotland and Wales—or Ulster, for that matter, at the same time? We have contented ourselves with passing these empty resolutions, while the imperial government has been at work, mitigating any wrong that exists, alleviating anything untoward that works harshly against the Irish people. What have we been doing? Passing a resolution about once every seven years. About once in seven years the hon. member for Victoria, N.B. (Hon. Mr. Costigan) bobs up serenely and moves a resolution in favour of home rule for Ireland; then we have a division on it, and prove that even the parliament of Canada is not a unit on this question, and he goes to sleep again for seven years. In the meantime the British government, this government that has been tyrannizing over Ireland for so many years, has been at work and we have been doing nothing.

Yes, Mr, Speaker, we have been doing something, and let me try to point out what we have done. We found that some time ago the imperial government placed an embargo on Canadian cattle, to the detriment of the Canadian producer and exporter. We did not stop to consider whether that embargo resulted advantageously to the Irish tenant farmer or not. We were so anxious to promote our own interests that we have been making representations to the imperial government asking that that embargo should be removed, asking that that keen competition, that fierce competition which the Irish tenant farmer has to encounter, encounter under great difficulties, encounter as a small holder of land, cultivating it under primitive methods—we are asking that that moderate measure of incidental protection which the embargo has given to the Irish tenant farmer should be removed, and that he should be obliged to meet us in open market in Liverpool, and compete with us for the sale of his store and fat cattle. If the hon. gentleman from Victoria had the interest of the Irish tenant farmer at heart, surely, Mr. Speaker, he would have raised his voice in favour of the maintenance of that embargo, and crown his life work in the promotion of Ireland's interests by securing for Ireland a measure of protection. I suppose that we will not hear the voice of the hon. gentleman raised in favour of the maintenance of that embargo during this session. I should hope that if he desired to secure for all time a record for consistency, he would insist that this embargo should remain where it is.

Let me say, Mr. Speaker, that I think the hon. gentleman has been both consistent and persistent. Through evil report and good report, for twenty years he has brought up this home rule resolution. I merely point to the fact that it has been an empty thing, and that while something for the practical advantage of the tenant farmer might have been procured in this House, the hon. gentleman has not taken advantage of the occasion to do it. If he would use his great influence with his new found political allies, perhaps he might be able to get a genuine measure of preference for the poplins, for the laces, for the linens, in the manufacture of which the Irish people excel. We have given them a so-called preference, and what does it amount to? We have only to read the record of the colonial conference to see what they think about the preference; and if we have any doubt after reading the interpretation which the imperial officials put upon the value of that preference, we have only to read the instructions which have been issued by the Minister of Customs to the various collectors throughout this country to see what a sham that preference is, so far as advantage to the green isle is concerned. Might I ask my hon. friend, Mr. Speaker, after we have disposed of this resolution dealing with home rule, to turn his attention to that question of the preference? Might I ask him again to use his influence, and I am sure he will have the co-operation of all Irishmen, whether they agree with him in regard to this resolution or not, in securing for the industrious workers of the Green Isle a real advantage, a real preference for their products in this fair land of Canada? He can do something practical for the Irish people by giving them a real and genuine preference for their products in the markets of the Dominion.

There is another way too, by which we might be of advantage to the Irish people. If we desire to show that we sympathize with them, if we desire to relieve them of a portion of the burden which rests heavily upon their shoulders, surely it would not be out of place in the day of our prosperity, in the day of our advancement, in this growing time for the hon. gentleman to propose that the time has come when it is expedient that this great young country of ours, full of boundless resources and having a future only limited by our appreciation of what we can make it should do something of substantial benefit for the Irish people. Surely we might expect from this hon. gentleman and those who sympathize with him that if they desire to be of real benefit to the Irish people, to the people of the north as well as to the people of the south, they would propose now that our coffers are overflowing, now that the money is pouring into the treasury of this Dominion of Canada—and we will support them in asking it—that a portion of that money should be sent to supplement the funds in the imperial exchequer for the maintenance of that peerless organization, the British navy, which protects our commerce in every nook and corner of the seven seas, that we might give a contribution towards the maintenance of the imperial navy which is to be found everywhere, and by such means we might relieve the Irish people of a portion of the burden which they are called upon to bear for the maintenance of that navy. I make these suggestions with all respect to the hon. member for Victoria, N.B., because these are practical ways in which he can benefit the Irish people, the minority as well as the majority, and he will find that if he makes a motion of this kind he will have the cordial support and sympathy of those who regret that they cannot concur with him in the amendment which he has placed, Mr. Speaker, in your hands. I am afraid that I have taken up altogether too much of the time of the House and must apologize for having done so. During this afternoon we had the statement from the hon. member for Victoria, N.B., that the feeling in favour of home rule was growing steadily. I, with my hon. friend from North Victoria (Mr. Hughes), believe that there is a great congestion of business in the imperial parliament. I often wonder how the imperial parliament discharges its duty as well as it does. I often wonder why it is that matters of detail, municipal matters, purely local matters are permitted to take up the time of the imperial parliament from day to day and year to year, and I hope to live to see the day come when some scheme will be adopted to relegate to the local authorities the right of dealing with these purely local matters. I want to see the Irish people given an opportunity, if they can agree upon the conditions, to govern, to a great extent, their local affairs, and I am satisfied that the people who are best qualified to bring about such a condition of things are the people of Ireland, of England and Scotland, represented in the imperial parliament, and I look upon our action in passing resolutions of this kind as rather a detriment than an advantage.

Just one or two words more before I sit down. I will only refer, very briefly, to what the hon. gentleman (Hon. Mr. Costigan) has said. I dissent from his proposition that the feeling in favour of home rule, as it is understood by those who speak for the majority, is growing in England. Lord Rosebery represented Mr. Gladstone's government in the House of Lords when the Home Rule Bills were before the imperial parliament. Speaking on the 14th of February, 1902, at Liverpool, Lord Rosebery said:

> The Irish leaders have demanded not what Mr. Gladstone was willing to give them, but an independent parliament in Dublin.

Hon. gentlemen talk about giving to Ireland the same measure of self-government as we have in Canada. Those who profess to speak for the majority of the Irish people do not want provincial autonomy such as we enjoy in the provinces of Canada; they want complete autonomy, they want legislative independence, they want that and they will not be satisfied with anything else. That is the opinion of Lord Rosebery, one of the members of Mr. Gladstone's cabinet who supported his leader in advocating and presenting that measure of home rule that met with disaster on two occasions in the imperial parliament. Let me repeat again what Lord Rosebery says:

The Irish leaders have demanded not what Mr. Gladstone was willing to give them, but an independent parliament in Dublin. Now, when you get there, I say, 'Halt'! I am not prepared at any time or under any circumstances to grant an independent parliament in Dublin.

I need not point out to hon. members on both sides of the House the prominent position which Lord Rosebery occupies in the public eye of the United Kingdom. He is a keen observer of current events and I think his opinion of the attitude, the demands and the requirements of the leaders of the home rule party is entitled to some consideration at the hands of the Canadian parliament; and I say that his statement that the home rule leaders have changed their position is a statement that cannot be successfully controverted by any hon. member of this House, if the leaders of the home rule party are held responsible for the public utterances they have made, or for what they say from day to day, from week to week and from year to year in addressing their constituents and the people of the United Kingdom. But, Sir, let me read the opinion of another hon. gentleman, a gentleman who is highly thought of and deservedly so, who is acclaimed by Irish Catholics and Protestants alike, a gentleman who speaks for the government of which he is a member, whose heroism, whose courage and whose patriotism in preparing and presenting the measure of land reform which is now before the imperial parliament has challenged the admiration of the British people. I refer to the Right Hon. Geo. Wyndham. In a speech made in March last, in Liverpool, I think it was, although I am not sure, he made this statement:

What are the facts that stand out from the midst of the constitutional problem involved in the Irish question? They are these: Mr. Gladstone's bills are dead—dead on their merits. They never had been accepted by England. They would have brought Ireland to bankruptcy within a very few years. In the second place, an independent parliament for Ireland is an impossibility; and in the third place, the common exchequer of the two countries will never be divided. . . . .

These are strong utterances from a responsible minister and a member of a powerful government that is proving its desire to help Ireland by the legislation which it has enacted and which it is enacting.

To sum up this constitutional argument which has recently been reopened, these two islands, by the inflexible ordinance of geography, of history and of finance are bound, and must ever be bound together by ties even closer than those which bind our colonies to the mother country.

These are the expressions of two men occupying prominent positions in the public life of the United Kingdom, and I take it that their utterances are worthy of some consideration and should have some value attached to them in the parliament of Canada. I promised the hon. Minister of Justice (Hon. Mr. Fitzpatrick) that I would read three or four words from the statement of a gentleman whom he quoted—Mr. T. W. Russell. I quote from the 'Daily Mail' Year-book. He says:

There is, first of all, what I may call the national demand for the restoration of rights taken away by the Act of Union. Historically, the demand has its origin in the fact that the Act of Union was carried by means which could not be adopted to-day. And the overwhelming majority of the Irish people take Lord Plunkett's view that the Act and the whole proceedings connected with it were ultra vires.

The British people, however, have had an opportunity of reconsidering the question. All the facts—thanks to Mr. Gladstone—were put before the public mind, and Ireland's demand for the restoration of a native legislature was refused. This refusal does not alter feeling in Ireland. It probably renders it more bitter.

I desire to draw the attention of hon. gentlemen to this particular part of the statement:

But it does remove the question somewhat out of the region of practical politics in Great Britain. Still the home rule question is far from being dead. And the people who imagine a vain thing may some day or other have a sudden and rude awakening.

This is the statement Mr. T. W. Russell makes with regard to the position which the home rule question occupies in imperial politics to-day. The right hon. leader of the House in his eloquent address to-night, pledging his support to the resolution, touched the crucial point when he observed that mistrust and lack of confidence was one of the main causes for the refusal of the minority in Ireland to agree to the establishment of a native parliament. Are the minority justified in holding that view? Are they justified in withholding their assent from such a measure? They are, Mr. Speaker, amply justified because the history of the past twenty-five years teems with evidence of the disloyalty of those who have been advocating home rule, and declaration after declaration has been made by these men; declarations that cannot be misconstrued; that the goal they are reaching for is not provincial autonomy such as we enjoy in Canada, but absolute separation and the establishment of a separate parliament for Ireland. Sir, I need not say to you or to any gentleman in this House, that that separate parliament cannot be granted. Certainly it never can be granted, as long as one-fourth of the people of the Green Isle, the minority—whose very existence, whose attainment of prosperity gives the lie to the statement that Ireland labours under disabilities and disadvantages—I say that this measure for a native parliament can never become an accomplished fact until the majority by their actions prove to the minority, that they have been saying what they do not mean; that they desire to live in peace and amity and concord with the minority and to give that minority absolute equality and every measure of protection that the majority desire for themselves. The right hon. the premier quoted from utterances given expression to by Mr. Dillon some years ago. Let me quote for the right hon. gentleman some of the language which Mr. John Dillon has used within the past twelve months. Speaking at Liverpool on March 12th, 1902, Mr. John Dillon said :

He promised Lord Rosebery and Lord Salisbury that as long as Ireland was denied that God-given right of freedom—a right for which men ought to fight if they could—they would never be loyal.

At Greenock on March 14th, 1902, Mr. Dillon said :

If they had the power to-morrow they would be the greatest cowards in the world to submit to English government if they were able to overthrow it with physicial force.

Does my right hon. friend wonder that the prosperous, the contented, the progressive minority in Ireland object to have their affairs administered by men who give utterance to such expressions ? Does the right hon. gentleman wonder that under these circumstances there is a sharp line of distinction drawn between those who are prosperous and loyal and those who are disaffected and discontented; and will not my right hon. friend admit that every vestige of suspicion, every vestige of mistrust that exists in the mind of the minority must be removed before any local government can be granted that will be workable in Ireland? I have quoted from the statements made by Mr. John Dillon. Let me quote from the statement of a gentleman occupying a still more prominent position in the home rule party. I refer to Mr. John Redmond, M.P. On the 20th of October, 1901, at Maryborough, Queen's county, on a Sunday, Mr. John Redmond made this statement :

I point to what is going on in Connaught as an example to the rest of Ireland. If only all over Ireland to-day we had as vigorous and—I won't mince words—as dangerous a movement as there exists at this moment in Connaught, we would make short work of the land question and short work, as I believe, of the English government of our country (cheers).

My one principle in public life is—in every department of the government, from the highest to the lowest—from the chief secretary in his back room in Dublin castle down to the landgrabber and the bailiff in the country town—to make every department of government in this country difficult and dangerous (cheers). That has always been my principle in public life. I have made no disguise of it. I have said it over and over again in the House of Commons.—' Freeman's ' Journal, October 21, 1901.

Does the right hon. leader of this House wonder, when the leader of the home rule movement within the last fifteen months gave expressions to such views as this, that he does not enjoy to the extent he ought to enjoy it, if home rule is to be a success, the sympathy and confidence of the minority of the people of the Green Isle ? Mr. Redmond came to America on a mission. Before he sailed on the evening of October 22, 1901, he arrived in Cork, accompanied by Mr. P. A. McHugh, M.P., and Mr. Thomas O'Donnell, M.P. Addressing a large gathering in front of the Victoria hotel, Mr. Redmond explained his mission to America. He said :

It means that the reunion which has taken place in Ireland has taken place also in America ; it means that those English statesmen—shallow, short-sighted men, who imagined that because we were torn with dissention here for the last ten years that the cause of Ireland was dead and buried—it means that these men will understand when they see this mission to America that they have to fight against a united Irish race who are simply united by one consideration to use whatever means are honourable and just in the sight of God, and who care nothing for English law (cheers), and who are prepared to say before the world that, rather than be held by force, as we are to-day, under the British empire, we would prefer to be linked with the meanest free country on the face of the earth.

I am going to our race in America to ask them for their sympathy, to ask them for their support, and to tell them that, in my honest belief, we are near the day when England will be weak and degraded (cheers), when oppressed nationalities will be strong, and when Ireland's support may be a matter of vital consequence to English statesmen and English parties (renewed cheering). But this mission to America has another meaning that I would commend to the minds of those English newspapers that are curious and anxious upon the subject. To-day England stands alone in the world ; to-day the public opinion of every civilized nation is against England ; and one of my objects in going to America is to prove to English statesmen that the public opinion of the world is against England and is upon the side of Ireland (cheers), that the whole public opinion of the American nation, of the leading statesmen, and of all political parties is in complete sympathy with Ireland's demand for freedom ; and that is another meaning of this mission. It will show to England that she will have to count in the future on a united Irish race of twenty millions throughout the world, backed by the public opinion, the sympathy, and the support of over seventy millions.—' Freeman's Journal,' October 23, 1901.

That extract is from the ' Freeman's Journal ' of October 23, 1901. But Mr. Redmond said something more, and I would not trespass on the time of the House at such length except for the prominent position he occupies in the home rule party. Several addresses including those from the Cork Eviction Tenants' Association and the Cork Trades Council were presented to Mr. Redmond just on the eve of his departure and in reply he said :

I have no hesitation in saying that the United Irish League stands to-day precisely on the same foundation as stood the Land League when Parnell declared he would never take off his coat in the movement if there was not behind the agrarian movement the national question (applause). This United Irish League is not merely an agrarian movement. It is first, last, and all the time a national movement (applause); and those of us who are endeavouring to rouse the farmers of Ireland, as we endeavoured twenty years ago in the days of the Land League to rouse them, are doing so not merely to obtain the removal of their particular grievances, but because we believe by rousing them we will be strengthening the national movement and helping us to obtain our end, which is, after all, the national independence of Ireland.

That is the statement of this gentleman, and he adds :

I desire to say to the tradesmen of Ireland that I hope they will not be led away by these enemies of the Irish movement who are endeavouring to induce them to think that this is a purely agrarian movement. It is nothing of the kind. It is a national movement, having for its first and last object the emancipation of Ireland as a nation.—'Freeman's Journal,' October 24, 1901.

I do not know whether the hon. gentleman meant what he said or not ; but if he meant what he said, do you wonder that those who desire for themselves and for those who come after them, a continuance of privileges which they now enjoy as British subjects, shall not have their interests confided to men who hold such sentiments as those I have read ? Do you wonder that a minority of the people of Ireland, who are contented and prosperous, desire that the status quo shall be maintained, rather than that they should be led into an enterprise that would bring them into opposition to England and Scotland, and to their sons and brothers across the channel ? Mr. Redmond was the principal speaker at a large meeting in the Rotunda in Dublin, when a letter from Mr. Wm. O'Brien was read, in which he said :

In thanking you for your kind invitation, allow me to express the hope that, if the English King carries out his threatened visit to Ireland next year, the United Irish League in Dublin will succeed in rousing such a spirit as will convince His Majesty from the hour he lands that he comes amongst a people discontented and disaffected to the core, who only need the arms and training of the Boers to testify their hatred of England's rule, with an eloquence equal to that of the unconquered South African Republics.

I leave these extracts from the speeches and letters of the men who are the leaders of this home rule movement, with hon. gentlemen on both sides of the House, and I ask them how they can wonder that the minority who have done their full share in maintaining the prestige and extending the influence and the power of the British empire, and whose sons have held their own in Ireland and everywhere else throughout the world, protest emphatically against the passage of any measure by the imperial parliament that would lessen or weaken the ties which now happily unite the people of Ireland with the people of England and Scotland. The minority in Ireland are able to take care of themselves ; they have always done so ; and the condition of the north of Ireland to-day proves conclusively that people may live in Ireland in contentment and prosperity under the rule that now exists. The prosperous condition of the city of Belfast and the districts surrounding it, teeming with an industrial population, employed at good wages, is a proof that there is nothing incompatible with progress and prosperity in Ireland for those who are industrious and willing to work and who will put their shoulders to the wheel to promote the best material interests of their native land. This minority have sent to Canada as their contribution to the public life of this country since confederation such men as Monck, Lisgar, Dufferin and Lansdowne. They have given to the empire their share of the empire's soldiers and sailors, and they have been proud to fight side by side and shoulder to shoulder with their fellow-countrymen who worship at a different altar. They desire to live on terms of peace, amity and concord with those who comprise the majority. They desire to unite with them cordially and heartily in promoting every measure which shall be for the advancement of their native land. They have the right to speak for Ireland as well as the majority. They comprise 1,150,000 in a population of 4,458,000 in Ireland. These people have a right to have their views considered by hon. gentlemen on both sides of this House. If time permitted, I could read resolutions passed in the chambers of commerce of Dublin and Belfast by the men who are foremost in promoting the industrial interests of Ireland, denouncing home rule and expressing their desire to continue to enjoy their full measure of citizenship in the British empire. I could read the memorials submitted to the Lord Lieutenant of Ireland by the representatives of the Church of England in Ireland, numbering 600,000, the Presbyterians, Methodists and other nonconformist bodies, aggregating 1,100,000 people, in the same sense ; but I do not wish to take up the time of the House. Putting the question on the lowest ground, I say that if these people who live under such happy conditions in Ireland thought that their personal and material welfare would be promoted by such a measure of home rule as is proposed, they certainly would be amongst the foremost to demand it. But they believe that they enjoy greater privileges, immunities and blessings, and have greater opportunities for preferment, by remaining an integral part of the empire ; and for that reason, and also because they have no confidence in those who represent the majority in Ireland, they have set their faces as steel against home rule. Have we in this parliament any right to pass this resolution without considering the position that minority occupy ? The difficulty and the dilemma which the minority may find themselves in to-day or to-morrow in Ireland because of the passing of such resolutions as that proposed by the hon. member for Victoria, may be the difficulty and the dilemma of the minority in Canada to-morrow. That minority only ask to be left alone. They live under less favourable conditions than the people of the southern and eastern parts of Ireland; yet they have proved their capacity to advance and prosper; and all we ask on their behalf is that their views shall be heard, and that this House shall not pass any resolution which will place the people of Canada and the people of Ireland in a false position. There are other ways in which we can give substantial assistance to the heavily-burdened taxpayers of England, Ireland and Scotland. Let us do something practical. Resolutions of this kind practically amount to nothing. They will not influence a vote in the parliament of the United Kingdom. The people in that parliament know their duty and are always prepared to do it; and instead of promoting the welfare and peace and integrity of Ireland, and the influence which Canada ought to possess in the councils of the empire, the passage of this resolution will place the people of Ireland and the people of Canada in a false light. I feel it my duty to record my vote against the resolution, because I think it is ill-timed and will serve no good purpose.

Mr. ANDREW B. INGRAM (East Elgin). I would not have said anything on this question, Mr. Speaker, had it not been for a remark that was dropped by the hon. Minister of Justice (Hon. Mr. Fitzpatrick) to the effect that those who vote against this resolution have no sympathy for Ireland. I wish to say that like the hon. gentleman I belong to a third generation of Irishmen. My forefathers, as far back as I can remember, have all been Irishmen, and I want to say that they have been loyal Irishmen. They have done in their day fighting enough, I think, to satisfy the next twenty generations of Ingrams in this country. One of my forefathers resided in the city of Quebec many years ago. He was sent to Canada by the British government with other soldiers to defend the flag at Quebec. Therefore, I do not take any back seat in regard for the interests of Ireland. Before coming to attend this session of parliament I was requested to support a home rule resolution that was to be introduced into this House. I asked by whom the resolution would be introduced. I was told by the Hon. John Costigan. I said immediately that I would neither support such a resolution nor any other piece of legislation which the Hon. John Costigan might introduce. I would oppose this motion or any other piece of legislation introduced by the Hon. John Costigan into this House. That may not be a very convincing answer, but I assure my hon. friend that it is eminently in fitting with the motives which prompted the mover of this resolution. I know that nothing would delight the hon. gentleman more than for hon. members of this House to heap on his head a great amount of abuse, but I want to point to a fact by which we can gauge the honesty of the hon. gentleman. He took occasion to take up a considerable time of the House in proclaiming his own honesty. Well, Mr. Speaker, it is a well known maxim that whenever a man boasts of his honesty, you should keep your hand very tightly on your pocket. This hon. gentleman has told us to-day that his honesty has been exceedingly great within the last twenty years. But he failed to dwell on a little incident to which I shall recall to the attention of the House. A few years ago, when the Conservative party were in power, there was a very live issue agitating the people and provoking considerable discussion in this House and country. I refer to the Manitoba school question. The hon. gentleman professed then, as he does now, to be the great advocate of the interests of the Roman Catholics of this country. He was a member of the Conservative government of that day, and then as now he was more useful once every seven years or so promoting a resolution of this kind than in doing anything else. What did he then do? He was then advocating remedial legislation. Some difficulty arose in the Conservative administration, Sir Mackenzie Bowell, the Prime Minister, resigned, and Sir Charles Tupper was called on to assume the leadership of the party. What did we find the hon. gentleman doing? When asked to take a seat in the cabinet under Sir Charles Tupper, he wrote a letter to Sir Charles, in which he used these words :—

In view, however, of the principle involved in remedial legislation, to which Sir Mackenzie Bowell's government was pledged——

Mr. BOURASSA. I rise to a point of order. On a motion in favour of home rule the hon. gentleman is not warranted in discussing the Manitoba school question.

Mr. INGRAM. I presume that I am as much in order as the hon. gentleman was when he brought us to South Africa. I am dealing with a question affecting Canada, which is more than the hon. gentleman did.

Mr. SPEAKER. I would call attention to the fact that we are now discussing the question of home rule, and would invite the hon. gentleman to confine his remarks to this question.

Mr. INGRAM. I shall try and do so. I was going on to quote this letter, and if you have no objection, Mr. Speaker, I will finish the quotation :—

——and in view of the fact that your government is to be formed to carry out the same policy, especially as regards the Manitoba school policy, I feel it my duty to say to you at once that you may count upon my assistance and services if you require them, as a member of your government, always presuming that the policy to reintroduce a remedial Bill at the first session of the new parliament will be clearly announced by you on behalf of your government.

What I wish to point out is that if the hon. gentleman had been honest then, he would not, after Sir Charles Tupper had gone to the country and been defeated on this very question, have turned his back on his leader and been the means of wrecking his government. Why, when a man for eighteen long years has been a member of the cabinet—I care not whether a Liberal or a Conservative government—and then takes the stand which the hon. gentleman did, I say that he can have no pretense to honesty or decency.

The PRIME MINISTER. Order.

Mr. SPEAKER. I must ask the hon. gentleman to withdraw the expression.

Mr. INGRAM. I of course shall bow to your ruling, Mr. Speaker. The hon. gentleman spoke of his unselfishness and his strong convictions, but it occurred to me that these convictions could not have been very strong at the time to which I refer. I would like to know from the hon. gentleman to-night whether it is not a fact that last session he was going to introduce his home rule resolution, and that the right hon. the First Minister persuaded him not to do so.

Hon. Mr. COSTIGAN. It is not a fact.

Mr. INGRAM. Will the hon. gentleman say who did ? If he wishes to be honest, I pause to give him an opportunity to reply. He does not choose to avail himself of that opportunity. Let me repeat that the hon. gentleman fully intended to introduce this resolution last session, but failed to do so. Why ? Because there was a likelihood of an election in the province of Ontario, and the introduction of that resolution last session would have been the means perhaps of defeating the government. My hon. friend was quite ready to kick this resolution around like a football so long as he could serve party purposes. Reference has been made to the cattle embargo. Well, not long ago on the motion to go into supply, an hon. member introduced a resolution respecting the cattle embargo in England. But he had hardly moved his motion when the hon. Minister of Finance called upon his majority to vote it down as a motion of want of confidence. Does not that prove conclusively that the hon. member for Victoria (Hon. Mr. Costigan) and the government have been in collusion on this question for the purpose of making political capital and nothing else. There is another question on which I desire to speak, because it is one that has some relation to home rule. A few years ago when in this House the question of provincial autonomy for the North-west Territories was being discussed, not one of the government supporters rose to assist the members of the opposition in their advocacy of provincial autonomy in the North-west. Not one of them rose to take an active part in that discussion. I am therefore justified in saying to them that if they would pay a little more attention to our own affairs in Canada instead of taking up this home rule question for the sole purpose of gaining political notoriety and support, they would be giving more evidence of sincerity and honesty than they are now doing. I do not intend taking up any more time. I simply rose to say that although I have in my time supported home rule resolutions and would support them again to-day, I will never support any resolution in favour of home rule so long as it is introduced by a gentleman whom I despise for his conduct in this House, and for the motives which actuate his present course. I am using strong language, Mr. Speaker, but not any stronger than the occasion warrants and demands, and I think the sooner the people of this country understand it the better. I should have been glad to support the resolution had it been moved by the Minister of Justice or some other Irishman in this country who is not trading in this class of goods for political purposes.

House divided on amendment (Hon. Mr. Costigan).

YEAS:

Messieurs

Angers,	Lavergne,
Archambault,	LeBlanc,
Ball,	Lemieux,
Béland,	Léonard,
Belcourt,	Logan,
Bernier,	Loy,
Bickerdike,	Macdonald,
Borden (Halifax),	Mackie,
Borden (Sir Frederick)	McColl,
Bourassa.	McCool,
Bourbonnais,	McEwen,
Brown,	McGowan,
Bureau,	McGugan,
Calvert,	McIntosh,
Carbonneau,	McIsaac,
Carroll,	McLennan,
Casgrain,	Malouin,
Clancy,	Marcil (Bagot),
Copp,	Marcil (Bonaventure),
Costigan,	Mayrand,
Cowan,	Meigs,
Demers (Lévis),	Mignault,
Demers (St. John),	Monet,
Desjardins,	Monk,
Dugas,	Morin,
Emmerson,	Morrison,
Erb,	Mulock (Sir William),
Ethier,	Murray,
Fielding,	Paterson,
Fitzpatrick,	Pope,
Fortier,	Préfontaine,
Fraser,	Proulx,
Gallery,	Puttee,
Gibson,	Reid (Restigouche),
Gould,	Riley,
Grant,	Ross (Ontario),
Guthrie,	Ross (Victoria),
Hackett,	Rousseau,
Harty,	Scott,
Harwood,	Stephens,
Heyd,	Stewart,
Holmes,	Sutherland (Essex),
Hughes (King's, P.E.I.),	Sutherland (Oxford),
Hyman,	Talbot,
Johnston (Cape Breton),	Tarte,

Johnston (Lambton), Tobin,
Kaulbach, Tolmie,
Kendall, Tucker,
Lang, Turcot,
Laurier (Sir Wilfrid), Turgeon,
Laurier (L'Assomption), Wright.—102.

NAYS :

Messieurs

Alcorn, Kidd,
Avery, Lancaster,
Barker, Lavell,
Bell, Lennox,
Bennett, MacLaren (Huntingdon)
Blain, MacLaren (Perth),
Boyd, Northrup,
Brock, Porter,
Broder, Reid (Grenville),
Bruce, Richardson,
Cargill, Robinson (Elgin),
Charlton, Roche (Marquette),
Clarke, Rosamond,
Cochrane, Sherritt,
Earle, Sproule,
Fowler, Taylor,
Henderson, Tisdale,
Hughes (Victoria), Vrooman,
Ingram, Ward,
Johnston (Cardwell), Wilmot.—41.
Kemp,

PAIRS:

Messieurs

Thompson (Haldimand and Monck), Carscallen, Blair, Osler,
Birkett, Wilson.
Lefurgey, Halliday,
Davis, Thomson (Grey),
Dyment, McCormick,

Amendment (Hon. Mr. Costigan) agreed to.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE (Hon. W. S. Fielding). I do not suppose the House would have any desire to go on with further business to-night, so I move that the House will, at its next sitting, go into Committee of Supply.

Motion agreed to.

On motion of the Prime Minister, House adjourned at 1.20 a.m. Wednesday.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.

WEDNESDAY, April 1, 1903.

The SPEAKER took the Chair at Three o'clock.

FIRST READINGS.

Bill (No. 67) to incorporate the Brockville and Western Railway Company.—Mr. Taylor.

Bill (No. 68) to incorporate the Lumbermen's Fire Insurance Company.—Mr. Charlton.

Bill (No. 69) to incorporate the Northwest Coal and Coke Railway Company.——Mr. Scott.

Bill (No. 70) to incorporate the Macleod, Cardston and Montana Railway Company.—Mr. Scott.

Bill (No. 71) to incorporate the Imperial Company.—Mr. Bickerdike.

Bill (No. 72) respecting the Bank of Montreal.—Mr. Bickerdike.

Bill (No. 73) to incorporate the Ontario and Quebec Power Company.—Mr. Talbot.

OFFICIAL REPORT OF DEBATES.

Mr. L. N. Champagne (Wright) moved :

That this House doth concur in the first report of the Select Committee appointed to supervise the Official Report of the Debates of this House.

Motion agreed to.

RAILWAY ACT AMENDMENT.

Mr. HUGH GUTHRIE (South Wellington) moved for leave to introduce Bill (No. 74) to amend the Railway Act.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). Will the hon. gentleman kindly explain the nature of the Bill ?

Mr. GUTHRIE. This is a Bill the main provisions of which were incorporated in a Bill which I introduced last session, but which, owing to the lateness of the date when it was introduced, was not read a second time. It is a measure for the purpose of safe guarding the interests of workmen and employees of railway companies which under existing legislation are somewhat jeopardized. During the recess I have received considerable information on the subject and have incorporated some new provisions in the Bill which I introduced last session. The grievances which the Bill seeks to remedy may be classed under three heads. Railway employees object that they are now, in many instances, compelled to become members of insurance and benefit societies merely as a condition or an incident of their engagement. They complain also that having regard to the amount charged against them by these societies, the amount of insurance which they receive in case of accident or death is entirely inadequate. I believe, however, that the main cause of their complaint is that on becoming members of such societies, they forfeit their common law rights in the case of injury resulting to them through the negligence of the company or their fellow-servants. I am free to admit that the law is not very clear upon the question of the liability arising out of the relations of a railway company to its employees in cases where particular contracts have been entered into between them. In the case of the Grand Trunk Railway, which employs something like 25,000 members, the company has formed, under the authority of special Acts of parliament, a benefit society to which their employees are bound to subscribe. On entering the employment of the Grand Trunk Railway, they are bound to join that society. One of its by-laws or rules, to which objection is taken, is by-law No. 15, which provides that in the event of accident from whatever cause the railway company shall be exonerated from all liability. Last year I understood that the Grand Trunk Railway was the only company which imposed such a condition on its employees. A good deal of litigation has arisen over that provision, both in Ontario and in Quebec, and probably also in other provinces. In the case of Holton versus the Grand Trunk Railway, tried in Hamilton, it was decided by the court of first instance that by-law No. 15 was an absolute bar to recovery by the employees. That case went to the Court of Appeal, but no decision was reached upon that particular point, as the decision of the first court was maintained upon the question of contributory negligence. In the province of Quebec the question was also brought into court in a case against the Intercolonial, which has a similar insurance or provident society and a similar by-law. The Exchequer Court held that the widow of a deceased employee could recover, but on appeal to the Supreme Court this finding was reversed. The Supreme Court of Canada held that a similar condition to that imposed by the Grand Trunk Railway was effective and protected the government of Canada from liability in case of accident. I admit that such findings, while they may be strictly in accord with the statute law of the country, are entirely opposed to the trend of all modern legislation, which is to give greater protection to the employees, and in the case of accident give him or his representatives proper redress where the accident occurred through the negligence, either of the company itself or his fellow-servants. The Bill that I have now introduced provides, not that there shall be any bar to the contracting out of liability, but that if any attempt be made by an employee to contract out of his common law liability, that contract shall be subject to the supervision of the court and shall not stand unless it can be shown that it was made upon proper consideration and is, in the mind of the judge, a reasonable contract. The Bill secondly provides that it shall be optional with an employee whether he become a member of such benevolent or insurance society or not. The Bill further provides that those workmen or employees, who are at present members of such societies, may upon reasonable notice withdraw from them. Fourthly, it provides that the provisions of this Bill shall apply to government railways. I make this provision because in the new Railway Bill introduced this session, there is a provision that it shall not apply to government railways.

Mr. GUTHRIE.

Motion agreed to, and Bill read the first time.

QUESTIONS.

LIGHTING OF CHAMBER.

Mr. CLARKE asked :

1. For what reason was the artificial lighting of this chamber changed or altered since last session ?
2. Were any complaints received last session against the artificial lighting of this chamber ? And if so, by whom ?
3. What was the cost of making the change in the lighting of this chamber, and who did the work ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS (Hon. Jas. Sutherland) :

1. To give the Canada General Electric Company, an opportunity to demonstrate, as they claimed, that their arc lamps were superior to the incandescent.
2. No complaints were made.
3. No expense attached, the same wiring was used and the company installed the lamps on trial.

DOMINION LANDS.

Mr. ROCHE (Marquette) asked :

1. On what principle are Dominion lands sold in Manitoba and North-west Territories ?
2. On what principle are prices fixed ?
3. Who has authority to fix prices and terms?
4. What is the average price received for lands sold since July 1, 1902 ?
5. Have any blocks of 10,000 acres or over been sold ? If so, in what district, to whom, and at what price, since July 1, 1902 ?

The POSTMASTER GENERAL (Hon. Sir Wm. Mulock) :

1. Generally speaking no agricultural lands are being sold, such lands at the disposal of the department being now held for homestead entry by actual settlers. In exceptional cases, however, where a settler is not entitled to homestead, or where he has missed the right of second entry by a technicality or a few days shortage in residence, or where first homestead is of such poor quality that he cannot make a living on it, land is sold to him subject to homestead conditions.

2. The regulations fix the price of coal at $7 (bituminous) per acre ; and $17 (anthracite); minerals (other than coal) $1 per acre; and surface rights on coal and farming lands $3 per acre. The regulations governing the disposal of Dominion lands give the Minister of the Interior authority under certain conditions to dispose of lands at not less than the minimum price of $1 per acre.

3. The Minister of the Interior.

4. $3.60 per acre.

5. Since 1st July, 1902, no blocks of 10,000 acres or over have been sold. An agreement, however, has been entered into with the Canadian North-west Irrigation Company by which, upon their fulfilling certain irrigation conditions, they will have permission to purchase a block of 500,000 acres. Price $3 per acre subject to a rebate for expenditure in irrigation not exceeding $2 per acre. The land is situated south-east of Lethbridge in the semi-arid district.

FREE LIST OR LOWERED DUTY.

Mr. CLARE asked :

Have there been any changes made in the tariff, by Order in Council, since January 1st, 1902 ? If so:

1. What articles have been put on the free list ?

2. What articles have been reduced in duty ?

The MINISTER OF CUSTOMS (Hon. Wm. Paterson) :

1. The following articles used as materials in Canadian manufactures have been transferred to the free list by Orders in Council since 1st January, 1902 :

Materials which enter into the construction and form part of cream separators when imported by manufacturers of cream separators to be used in their own factories for the manufacture of cream separators, until otherwise ordered.

Hemp bleaching compound when imported by manufacturers of rope, to be used in their own factories for the manufacture of rope, until otherwise provided.

Silver tubing, when imported by manufacturers of silverware to be used in their own factories in the manufacture of silverware.

Steel for the manufacture of cutlery when imported by manufacturers of cutlery to be used in their own factories in the manufacture of such articles.

Yarn of jute, flax or hemp for the manufacture of towels when imported by the manufacturers of jute, linen or union towels, to be used in their own factories in the manufacture of such articles.

Malleable iron or steel castings, in the rough, for the manufacture of scissors and hand shears, when imported by manufacturers of scissors and hand shears to be used in making such articles in their own factories.

Refined cotton seed oil (edible) for canning fish, until otherwise provided.

Bleached palm oil shea butter when for use as materials in Canadian manufactures.

2. His Excellency the Governor General, by and with the advice of the King's Privy Council for Canada, has been pleased, under the provisions of subsection 3, of section 16 of the Customs Tariff, 1897, to reduce the customs duty on news printing paper in sheets and rolls, including all printing paper valued at not more than two and one-quarter cents per pound, from twenty-five per centum ad valorem to fifteen per centum ad valorem.

INSOLVENT ACT.

Mr. LENNOX asked :

1. Is it the intention of the government to introduce an Insolvent Act at the present session of parliament ?

2. Has it been represented to the government that the enactment of a Dominion Insolvent Act would promote trade between Canada and the other parts of the empire ?

3. Has it been brought to the notice of the government that at a conference of all the boards of trade of the Dominion of Canada, held in Toronto, on the fourth, fifth and sixth of June, 1902, the following resolution was unanimously passed. viz.:—'Whereas trade is seriously handicapped by the difference of the provisions of the law in the different provinces, applying to assignments for the benefits of creditors, by insolvent debtors, and the uncertainty as to the security offered in business transactions, by the absence of an insolvency law in the Dominion. And whereas it is important that the Dominion parliament should enact an insolvency law at the earliest possible date, whereby that confidence which is necessary for the promotion of commerce between the different provinces, and with the outside world, be established;—Resolved, that the Dominion government be requested to assemble one or more commercial representatives of the various provinces and the territories, say in Ottawa, for the purpose of assisting in framing an Act, having for its basis the control and management of insolvent estates by the interested creditors, with the legal expenses reduced to a minimum.'

4. Have the government availed themselves of the assistance of such commercial representatives of the various provinces ? And if not, why not ?

5. Have the government replied to the proposal of said resolution ; and if so, in what way, and to what effect ?

6. What action, if any, have the government taken in the matter ?

The PRIME MINISTER (Rt. Hon. Sir Wilfrid Laurier). It is not the intention of the government to introduce an insolvency bill during the present session of parliament. Numerous representations have been made in the direction indicated in the question, but the government does not consider the time opportune, this session, to introduce such a measure.

POSTMASTER, BLOOMFIELD, N.B.

Mr. FOWLER asked :

Has any change of postmaster been made at the post office at Bloomfield station, King's County, N.B., or is any change now in comtemplation ? If so, who is to be the new incumbent ; and by whose recommendation is the change made, or to be made ? What, if any, charge has been preferred against the postmaster who has lately been removed, or who is to be removed, if the removal is not yet accomplished ? By whom has such charge, if any, been preferred ? Has any investigation been held respecting the said Bloomfield post office ? Was there any petition, signed by residents of Bloomfield, asking for such changes ? If so, by how many persons was said petition signed ?

The POSTMASTER GENERAL (Hon. Sir Wm. Mulock). The answer to the first question is, a change has been made. To the first part of the second question, B. C. Williams. To the latter part of the second question, I would say that it is not usual to state on whose recommendation appointments are made. In answer to the fourth question, there was no charge preferred. This answers the fifth and sixth. There was no petition.

INDIAN AGENTS AS GUARDIANS.

Hon. Mr. TISDALE asked :

Are the government agents in charge of Indian reservations, in the province of Ontario, appointed guardians or agents by the government of individual Indians, living on such reservations: or of the money, property or effects of such Indians ? Are such government agents permitted to act as such guardians or agents ?

The POSTMASTER GENERAL (Hon. Sir Wm. Mulock). Under the provisions of the Indian Act, Indian agents may be appointed by the Superintendent General, guardians of the persons and property of minor Indians ; but such agents are not ex-officio the guardians or agents of individual Indians.

BANKERS ASSOCIATION'S INSPECTION OF BANKS.

Mr. INGRAM asked :

1. What is the nature of the inspection of Canadian chartered banks, by the Canadian Bankers Association ?

2. At what dates do such inspections take place ?

3. Does the inspection involve a thorough examination of the assets and liabilities of the various banks, as well as of the securities upon which their loans are held ?

4. Is the report of the inspector communicated from time to time to the government ?

5. Do such reports indicate whether the loans are made to Canadian borrowers, or to persons residing or carrying on business in other countries ?

6. Has the government any information as to the amounts loaned by Canadian banks in the cities of New York and Boston, upon the security of stocks of incorporated companies ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE (Hon. W. S. Fielding). Replying to questions 1 to 4, whatever inspection takes place is a matter of voluntary arrangement among the members of the Bankers Association, and the government have nothing to do with it. Replying to questions 5 and 6, the government have no information respecting the loans of Canadian banks beyond what is published in the usual returns in the Canada 'Gazette.'

Mr. FOWLER.

MANITOBA AND NORTH-WEST VOLUNTEERS—LAND SCRIP.

Mr. SCOTT asked :

Does the government intend to ask parliament to make a grant of land scrip to Manitoba and North-west volunteers who served under arms in South Africa ?

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE (Hon. Sir Frederick Borden). The government does not intend to ask parliament to make a grant of land to the North-west volunteers who served under arms.

PROHIBITION OF CIGARETTES.

Mr. ROBERT BICKERDIKE (St. Lawrence, Montreal) moved :

That the object of good government is to promote the general welfare of the people by a careful encouragement and protection of whatever makes for the public good ; and by equally careful discouragement and suppression of whatever tends to the public disadvantage.

That the smoking of cigarettes has been proved by overwhelming testimony to be productive of serious physical and moral injury to young people; imparing health, arresting development, weakening intellectual power, and thus constituting a social and national evil.

The legislation licensing and restricting the sale of cigarettes has not proven sufficient to prevent these evils, which will continue while the public sale of the cause of the mischief is permitted to go on.

That this House is of the opinion, for the reasons hereinbefore set forth, that the right and most effectual legislative remedy for these evils is to be found in the enactment and enforcement of a law prohibiting the importation, manufacture, and sale of cigarettes.

He said : In rising to move this resolution, which is seconded by the hon. member for West Huron (Mr. Holmes), I cannot but feel that the motion would have been much better taken care of if placed in the hands of one of the eloquent members of this House. I shall only lay before the House a few of the many facts that have come into my possession to show the baneful effect of cigarette smoking upon the boys of this country. I believe that if the injury that is being done were known, there would be a unanimous vote of this House in favour of this resolution or of some similar measure. I hope I shall have the majority of this House at my back, for there are very few men who are fathers of boys but have had more or less cause to know the bad effects of this cigarette habit upon boys.

There is no young man or boy but wishes to succeed in life. All want to get along ; all want to better their position. Success in life, in these days of strong competition, means honesty, industry, temperance and economy. A boy or young man who has these, with good health, must succeed ; while, if he lacks them even moderate success will be impossible. I think, Sir, we are all agreed that the boy who is addicted to the cigarette habit cannot succeed in this country unless he has a very strong 'pull' somewhere, while the boy who is not addicted to that habit does not require any 'pull,'—all he wants is the push, and he succeeds in getting to the front. I have with me certificates from most eminent physicians, throughout the country, from the Atlantic to the Pacific, and all these documents go to prove that the cigarette habit, with the boys at least, is very, very injurious. I think there is no hon. member in this House who will say nay to that proposition. I would be the last man on the floor to attempt to interfere in any way with the rights of the subject. Once a boy has come to the age of maturity, he has a right to do as he pleases. All I wish to do is to introduce some measure that will protect the boys from this very bad habit of recent years—for, Mr. Speaker, it is only of recent years that it has taken such a hold on the country. The most eminent physicians pronounce cigarettes worse for boys than pipes or cigars, and paper cigarettes worse than all tobacco cigarettes—I suppose because it absorbs more nicotine. This pernicious habit leads to nervousness, and if continued long enough, results in insanity. Scores of boys, Mr. Speaker, are in the insane asylum in consequence of this habit, and even a greater number have been killed outright.

I would like to draw the attention of this House to what is being done in the United States. The plague invaded that land many years ago, but it is only recently that it has attained a strong hold in the Dominion. In forty-two states of the Union they have enacted anti-cigarette laws. Many states have passed prohibitory or restrictive laws. In 1899 a wave of education produced by attempts to secure legislation passed over the whole United States, and as a result more than one billion less cigarettes were sold in 1899 than in 1898. That was due not only to the legislation but to the fact that a great many prominent business houses in the United States, and a number of large railways, absolutely refused and still refuse to employ a boy under eighteen years of age who smokes cigarettes. They all recognize that a cigarette fiend is no use in any business establishment. To show what methods have been employed let me read the following:

Two states, Nevada and Montana, have cigarette license laws; the first is with, and the second without an age limit. One state forbids sale of cigarettes to those under 14 years of age; another to those under 15. Sixteen states forbid sale under 16 years of age; one under 17. The Indiana, Iowa, Georgia, North Dakota, South Carolina and Wyoming laws prohibit sale to 'minors'; while Maine, Nebraska, Nevada and Wisconsin put the prohibited limit at 21. Florida rules out the sale altogether, except under certain specified circumstances. Massachusets prohibits sale and manufacture, and Tennessee, which has no manufactories within its borders, caps the legislative climax by putting its bar upon sale and importation.

Now, Sir, if it has been found necessary in the United States to enact laws in so many states to protect their boys, why should not the Dominion of Canada enact a similar law? Not only are the legislatures all over the union moving in this matter, but as I said before, a great many large business houses refuse to employ boys who use cigarettes. The cigarette habit is a recent form of intemperance that is proving itself so destructive to bodily strength, mental keenness and moral character, that our educators, our business men, and our public officials, are declaring that their doors must be closed against cigarette boys.

Now, I would like to read to this House a few of the names of institutions, factories and railroads in the United States who will not employ boys who smoke cigarettes. I have several hundred names, but I will only read a few, for I am well aware that a good many hon. members desire to speak on this subject, and I do not wish to take up too much time.

The athletic clubs of the United States; several business colleges; the Union Pacific Railroad; the Omaha schools; Swift & Co., the largest packing house in the world will not employ a boy now who smokes cigarettes; Marshall Field, dry goods, Chicago; several life insurance companies; the Lehigh Valley Railroad. Boys who use cigarettes are debarred from the United States army and naval schools. Carson, Pirie & Scott, Chicago, close their doors against cigarette users; so do the Chicago Rock Island and Pacific Railroad, the Central Railroad, Georgia; three high schools in Chicago; Ayer's Sarsparilla Co., Chicago; Wanamaker's, Philadelphia, one of the largest stores in the United States will not allow a single boy to be engaged in their employment if he smokes cigarettes; Morgan & Wright Tire Co., Chicago; The Western Union Telegraph Co., the messenger service; the Burlington Railroad; the United States Weather Bureau; Heath & Milligan; Montgomery Ward & Co., Academy of Northwestern University, Chicago; Telephone Co., Cumberland; the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad; the Pittsburg and Western Railroad, the West Superior Railroad, Wisconsin.

All these railroads have found it necessary to instruct their managers that they must no longer employ cigarette smokers. The same may be said of school inspectors. I have letters here from most of the prominent medical men in the Dominion, all condemning the use of cigarettes by boys. I will mention a few of the names. Dr. Isaac Wood of Kingston, Dr. Lambly of Cookshire, Quebec, Dr. Stewart of Prescott, Dr. Macpherson of Prescott, Dr. James Stewart, lecturer in McGill University and head of the medical staff of the Royal Victoria hospital, Dr. Blackadar, head of the staff of the general hospital. All these medical gentlemen are unanimous in condemning the use of cigarettes. I have letters from nearly one hundred of them to that effect. Last, but not least, I had a communication from the late Dr. Christie, during his lifetime, who was for twenty years an honoured member of this House, and was one of the strongest opponents of the use of cigarettes by boys.

I do not know of any argument that can be urged in favour of this habit, although I presume a number will be urged here this afternoon. The great danger is that the editors of newspapers may take a wrong course on this matter. Heretofore many of the papers have been very generous in commenting editorially in favour of the movement against cigarettes. But now I notice that in some of them are appearing long articles stating that cigarettes are quite harmless, and really nourishing and beneficial. Of course there is no hint that these articles are advertisements, and that the space is paid for, probably by some one interested in the tobacco trust. One of the editors being asked about it, answered: Well, we get higher rates than we do for ordinary advertising matter. I would say also that school inspectors have done much to discourage the cigarette habit among school children. I must not forget to mention that Sir Wm. Hingston, of Montreal, Senator, is one of those who have come out very strongly in favour of this measure. I might mention other distinguished names, but I do not wish to take up too much time.

Now, I will give a few figures taken from the Blue-books of the Department of Inland Revenue. In 1898 there were 80,562,817 cigarettes manufactured in Canada and taken out of bond for consumption; in 1899, there were 101,143,328; in 1900, there were 116,061,522.

Now, I would like to call the attention of the Postmaster General to what is being done by the post office authorities in Chicago:

> At a conference of the Chicago post office authorities it was decided to hereafter employ no boy who smokes cigarettes or who is known to have been addicted to the habit.
>
> Heretofore there has been a rule in force that boys employed by the office could not smoke while working, but, believing that smoking has a demoralizing effect, and because of the need of the most intelligent and active boys, it is thought wise to make closer restrictions.
>
> An examination is soon to be held, when 700 youths will enter into competition for position in the post office, and the new order will have no small effect upon so large a number of applicants.
>
> The clause relating to cigarettes says: 'No small boys will be allowed to participate in the examination, since only the best-equipped boys, mentally and physically, are wanted in this service, and under no circumstances will a boy who smokes cigarettes be employed.' The service referred to is that of special delivery messengers, for which appointments are made from this examination.

There is just one more fact that I would like to lay before the House before taking my seat and it is this: It is a very startling statement and one that perhaps a great many hon. members will have doubt about but it is from a good authority. When I give the name of my authority I am sure that hon. gentlemen will all be satisfied that the statement is a bona fide one. A very startling suggestion was made in the English parliament as to why the United States beat Spain.

> Why did the United States beat Spain? It has been left, says the 'Westminster Gazette,' for Sir Brampton Gurdon, in his speech on the finance Bill, to supply the answer: 'The evil effect of the growing habit among boys of smoking filthy cigarettes could scarcely be exaggerated. Without doubt it was a habit which left the rising generation deteriorated in physique, and the result of such indulgence could be found in the miserable failure of the Spanish forces in their war with the United States.'

I do not think it is necessary to say anything more. I have laid the facts before the House and I am sure that a great many hon. members on both sides will stand up for this Bill, and I am sure that all will be proud of their action who cast a vote to exterminate the cigarette habit amongst our young boys. I will now leave the matter in the hands of my seconder, the hon. member for West Huron (Mr. Holmes).

Mr. R. HOLMES (West Huron). In seconding this resolution, Mr. Speaker, I desire to call the attention of yourself and through you the attention of the House to certain facts as bearing upon the question and to supplement, as far as lies in my power, the information that has been given to the House by the hon. member for Montreal, St. Lawrence (Mr. Bickerdike). I think it will be conceded at once that we are endeavouring to deal with an evil that is of growing proportions. We hear the argument advanced everywhere that this is an evil that should be stopped if possible, but the problem of dealing with or restricting the evil is apparently one that seems insurmountable. The various provincial legislatures have recognized the evil to the extent that they have placed restrictions upon the sale of cigarettes or the use of cigarettes up to a certain age, and while that legislation is restrictive to the extent of its powers it does not go far enough in order to cope with the evil because it does not prohibit the actual use of the cigarette. Therefore, we realize the necessity of some more stringent legislation that will put a stop to the evil that is assuming very large and very serious proportions. The mover of the resolution states clearly at the outset that the intention is to reach the young, so far as it is possible to reach those who are of immature years, those who have not attained their full physical development, those upon whom the evil effects of cigarette smoking are perhaps more apparent than they are on people of more mature years. In this connection a point to be borne in mind is that while we are endeavouring to reach the young we can only reach the young by reaching the old. We have no quarrel with those of mature years who smoke cigarettes or use tobacco under other circumstances, but when we are trying to reach the young we must also have legislation in connection with the old. The hon. member for Montreal, St. Lawrence, has quoted some figures from the Inland Revenue Department to show the increased consumption of cigarettes. Let me go a little farther than he went in that connection and show you that there are a great many more cigarettes smoked at present than there were a few years ago. He quoted the figures of 1900, which showed that 116,000,000 cigarettes were taken out for consumption in the Dominion of Canada. In 1901 the quantity had gone up to 121,000,000, while in 1902, the last year, it had increased to the enormous number of 134,000,000. In addition to that we find by the trade and navigation returns that the importation of cigarettes from other countries in 1901 amounted to 4,000,000, while, in 1902, the importation had increased to nearly 8,000,000, which is quite sufficient proof that the use of cigarettes is going on at a very alarming rate.

An hon. MEMBER. There has been an increase in population.

Mr. HOLMES. Yes, but the increase in the consumption of cigarettes is greater than the increase in population. It is impossible to say what proportion are consumed by children and what proportion are consumed by adults, but, it must be evident to the most casual observer, to all who use their powers of discernment, even on the streets of Ottawa, if nowhere else, that there is a large number used by children who are below the age limit, and I believe that what is true of Ottawa is true of almost all the towns and cities of the Dominion of Canada, that a large number of children beneath the age limit are making use of cigarettes. To supplement further the information produced by my hon. friend, so far as the evil effects of cigarettes are concerned, I want to quote also a number of authorities overlooked apparently by my hon. friend in his remarks. I contend that the use of cigarettes by children is injurious. We have not only to quote the opinions, as I will give them later on, of a number of medical authorities thereon, but I have taken the trouble to ask medical men myself since I have been in Ottawa and elsewhere as to the effect of cigarettes on children, and they assure me that their use is very detrimental indeed, detrimental both from the moral and physical standpoint, that it destroys the intellect and prevents the development of their physical nature. If we succeed in establishing the claim that the use of cigarettes is injurious, I contend that it is within the right and the duty of this House to provide in some form a remedy, because this House is the custodian of the people's welfare, and is called upon to provide remedies in various forms for evils when they are found to exist. This evil is one that is increasing and to my mind is an evil that is continuing. I want to quote the opinion of a medical man in connection therewith. Dr. Clinton, of San Francisco Board of Education, who has made a special study of the effects of cigarette smoking on the school children of that city, says :—

A good deal has been said about the evils of this habit, but one-half the truth has never been told; I say calmly and deliberately that I believe cigarette smoking is as bad a habit for boys as opium smoking. It sends boys into consumption, it gives them enlargement of the heart, and drives them to the insane asylum. I am not exaggerating, but speaking the truth that every teacher and physician knows.

My hon. friend referred to the opinion of the late Dr. Christie, who was for many years an honoured member of this House, and whose son, I am glad to say, has now succeeded to his seat. The opinion of the late Dr. Christie on this point is as follows :

I believe it is the almost universal opinion of medical men that the cigarette habit is most deleterious to the young, producing physical degredation, and the habit should be denounced in trumpet tones by all who have the welfare of humanity at heart.

Dr. Stewart, who is at the head of McGill College, Montreal, and Dr. Blackader, of the Montreal general hospital, both condemn the use of cigarettes by boys.

Dr. Broughton, of the Leslie E. Keely Institute, says :

More young men are led to the opium habit by cigarette smoking than by patent medicines. sixty per cent of all males treated at Dwight for opium, morphine or cocaine using, had been smokers of cigarettes.

Dr. Torrence, superintendent of the Illinois State Reformatory, says :

I am sure cigarettes are destroying and making criminals of more boys than are the saloons. Out of 278 boys confined there, 256 are cigarette users.

Mr. Samuel Grigg, a gentleman well known to the members of this House who comes from Western Ontario, as the former proprietor of the Grigg House in London, and who is now engaged in evangelistic work, makes this statement in a letter to the press, which has been published within the last few days :

I have lived to see many boys who were addicted to the cigarette habit, serving terms in the penitentiary ; they have gone from bad boyhood to worse manhood, and crimes of various kinds have been associated with their names. I can honestly say, after a varied experience of 32 years in the liquor business, that the cigarette habit bids fair to become a scourge greater than that for which the drink traffic is responsible.

I presume that those who know Mr. Grigg will admit that he is in a position to speak with authority upon a question of this kind. Mr. Ferrier, superintendent of the Mimico Industrial School, considers the use of cigarettes by boys the most pernicious habit of the day, and that it is responsible for many criminal acts. He says that boys who habitually indulge in the habit are treading the path that leads to a criminal life. Sir Brampton Gurdon, in a recent speech in the English House of Commons, went so far as to say that the deterioration of the French and Spanish soldier, as evidenced in recent wars, was easily traceable to the habit of cigarette smoking.

The Chicago 'News' says:

> Scores of boys are in the insane asylum from the cigarette habit, and an even greater number are killed outright annually.

Many leading business houses in Canada and the United States announce that they will not employ any youth under the age of 21 who uses cigarettes. I understand that the city council of the city of London, Ont., and the school board of that city have passed resolutions at recent meetings favouring the prohibition of cigarettes. I claim, Mr. Speaker, that the evidence we have quoted is sufficient to show that the cigarette habit is a very injurious one to the youth of the country. We may have differences of opinion on political questions; we may have differences of opinions on religious questions, and we may have differences of opinion on a variety of other questions, but it seems to me that there should be no difference of opinion as to the evil effects of cigarette smoking on the youth of our land. We are not arguing from the standpoint of those of mature years, but from the standpoint of the bearing of this question on the youth of Canada. The hon. member for Montreal (Mr. Bickerdike) also anticipated me in quoting the various States of the American Union which have passed laws of a very restrictive character in regard to cigarettes; laws that do not allow of their importation or use; laws that if properly enforced will produce a good effect in limiting the use of cigarettes. I have here the copy of a Bill introduced a short time ago in the Illinois State legislature dealing with this matter, but as I do not know whether the Bill became law or not, I shall not refer to it further.

We are sometimes told, Mr. Speaker, that it is not within the duty of the state to legislate in this direction, but to prove the contrary to be the fact, I shall quote you the action of our friends to the south with regard to legislation of an equally restrictive character to the legislation which we now propose. The United States congress at its recent session passed what is known as the Gillet-Lodge Act, which forbids citizens of the United States to sell either liquor or opium to people in any of the Pacific Islands, having no civilized form of government. We spent a good deal of time yesterday—and I think the time was profitably spent, because it developed a great many eloquent speeches—we spent a good deal of time yesterday in considering a resolution having for its object the alleviation of the wrongs of Ireland, and to-day we can properly spend some time in trying to remedy some of the wrongs of Canada. It may be argued by some, that a law of this kind interferes with personal liberty. That, I admit at once. But I do not consider an argument of that kind worth discussing because the quotations that I have cited with regard to the United States prove that personal liberty is interfered with by legislation. It is not necessary for me to do more than to allude to certain acts which are already on our own statute-books, and which are a direct interference with the personal liberty of some, as indeed all restrictive legislation must necessarily be. We have on the statute-book at the present time laws of a prohibitive character relating to sanitation and the preservation of the public health. They interfere with the personal liberty of the subject in that they do not allow a man to do as he likes with his own property. For the general good and the public well being, restrictive laws of that kind are enacted, and no one thinks of raising the objection that it is an interference with personal liberty. We have a law prohibiting the importation into Canada and the manufacture in Canada of oleomargarine. Some may say that is an interference with the liberty of the subject, and so it is; but it interferes with individual liberty in order that the great majority of mankind may be benefited by it. We have a law prohibiting the carrying of fire arms. A man may say that he has a perfect right to carry fire arms for his own protection, but in the interest of the public at large the law says that he shall not carry fire arms except under very stringent conditions. And so we have a law on the statute-book prohibiting, except under certain circumstances, the landing of the industrious and economical Chinee, and we have seen recent legislation introduced here raising the tariff against the Chinaman. It is therefore apparent that we interfere in a variety of ways with the individual liberty of the citizen. If undesirable immigrants come to our shores we have a restrictive enactment by which we turn them back, often with great hardship to them, and send them to their own land again. And yet, Sir, we tolerate with our eyes open, and we tolerate to a certain extent with our own consent, an evil that is doing more to sap the foundations of and to destroy and to injure the youth of our land than, perhaps, anything else I could mention. We may be told, and possibly we will be told in this connection, that in order to provide an effectual remedy against the use of cigarettes, we would also have to prohibit the use of tobacco, because boys will make their own cigarettes, and the evil will continue as great as at present under the free importation and manufacture. I contend, Sir, in the words of an honoured statesman : That we ought make it as easy as possible to do right and as hard as possible to do wrong. We know well that if we remove as far as possible the source of the temptation, there is not likely to be the same extended use of cigarettes that there is under the present condition. I am free to admit that the enforcement of the law will be somewhat difficult, and that boys may still be able to manufacture their own cigarettes, but I do not believe that under the circumstances the evil will be at all comparable in extent to the evil as it exists now. Now, Mr. Speaker, without taking up too much of the time of the House on this question, I want to allude to a matter that is perhaps a little personal. Since the attention of this House of Commons has been called to this question, it has been remarked to myself among others, that if some of the ladies who are behind this legislation were at home attending to their duties, they would be better engaged than they are in promoting this legislation.

An hon. MEMBER. Hear, hear.

Mr. HOLMES. Some hon. gentleman says 'hear, hear,' but I presume that he means that expression to be taken in a jocular sense. It may be true or it may be untrue, that these estimable ladies would be better engaged at home, but I think, Sir, it will be conceded that when the women of our land are willing to sacrifice their own comfort in trying to save the boys of Canada; when they are willing to do what they can to put a stop to the debasing, demoralizing and destructive habit of cigarette smoking by the youth ; when they are willing to forsake their own interests and undergo various forms of rebuff in order that they may place the youth of our land on a higher moral footing than at present ; it will be conceded, I say, that they are worthy of all commendation, and I for one shall very gladly accord them my commendation. Our effort in this direction is :

> To bless, not blight
> Our fellows who shall follow
> In earth's strife.
> The standard we shall raise
> Of wrong or right.

For the reasons I have briefly given, and a good many others which I might advance, I have very much pleasure in seconding the resolution before the House. I am not sufficiently sanguine to hope that all the members of this House will be so far convinced either by my eloquence or by the arguments of my hon. friend from Montreal (Mr. Bickerdike) as to give it their unanimous support; but I do hope there are sufficient independent members of this House to stand up for the protection of the youth of our land and to do their utmost to secure a law that will prevent the perpetuation of an evil that is doing so much to undermine the foundations of society for the days that are to come. We are frequently told that we are legislating in this House, not for to-day but for to-morrow, not for the present, but for the future ; that we are aiming to secure enactments which will be in the best interests of mankind, not alone for to-day, but for years to come; and I believe that if I were to ask for a personal expression of opinion from the members of this House, they would admit with me that this evil is one that ought to be grappled with in order that society in the future may be protected. We are undertaking to grapple with it in this form. It may be insufficient to reach as far as some think it ought to reach; but I am satisfied that if it is placed on the statute-book and a fair attempt is made to carry it out, it will produce a revolution in the habits of the rising generation, and be of great benefit to the world at large in the years to come. I have very much pleasure in seconding the resolution.

Mr. SAMUEL BARKER (Hamilton). Mr. Speaker, I do not intend to occupy the time of the House in going over the various matters referred to by the mover and seconder of the resolution; but I perfectly agree with every statement contained in the first three paragraphs of the resolution. I do not think any language can too strongly picture the evil that is attempted to be struck at by this resolution. Those of us who live in cities or towns in Ontario cannot have failed to see boys not over ten years of age smoking cigarettes, and doing it habitually. I have no doubt that this evil exists to a great extent, and that it is increasing. There can be no question that this evil is largely due to the fact that tobacco in the form of cigarettes can be got very cheaply, which enables these youths to purchase cigarettes when perhaps they could not get cigars or tobacco in some other shape. For this reason it seems to me that the cigarette evil, particularly as it affects boys, is a thing to be especially considered and dealt with. I confess I have some doubt whether the method proposed in this motion will be effective ; but when we consider that for some years other means have been tried in the province of Ontario, such as prohibiting the sale of cigarettes to youths under a certain age, and that these have failed, we are driven to the conclusion that either some such remedy as is now proposed must be adopted, or that we must sit down and let the evil increase. For my part, I do not wish to interfere with the freedom of any person who enjoys a smoke. I do not use tobacco in any form, and I would be very sorry indeed to attempt to interfere with the freedom of those who do. But in view of the great evil that undoubtedly exists as regards boys, and I am told even young girls sometimes use cigarettes, the question is whether the grown-up men should not be willing to confine themselves to the use of tobacco in other forms, and give up the use of cigarettes for the benefit of the youths of the country. While I say I have some doubts about the effectiveness of the remedy proposed, still, when I consider that all the provincial efforts have failed, I am prepared to support the motion of the hon. member for the St. Lawrence division (Mr. Bickerdike), until some remedy more likely to be effective is presented to the House.

Mr. HAUGHTON LENNOX (South Simcoe). Mr. Speaker, the habit of smoking cigarettes has not been in existence in Ontario or in the Dominion of Canada for very many years. I think twenty years will cover the period since it began to be a habit in this country, and the extent to which it is likely to increase can be measured pretty fairly by the gigantic proportions which it has attained up to the present time. I am one of those who do not like, unless it is absolutely necessary, to invoke that drastic measure shown as prohibition; but seeing the proportions to which this evil has already increased, and seeing that the measures hitherto adopted have proven to be totally ineffectual, we are face to face with this proposition: If we are opposed to prohibition in this matter, what other effective remedy can we suggest? Now, after having given the matter some little consideration, though I admit I have not gone very fully into it, and bringing to that consideration a desire to do what is for the best interests of the youth of this country, I see no other alternative for us, if we really desire to put a stop to this great evil, than to adopt the resolution proposed to-day. Usually in this House we represent the free and independent electorate of this Dominion; but to-day I feel that we are representing something better still. In our advocacy of this measure, we are representing the homes of this country, and we are representing a band of devoted and noble women who, though having no direct voice in this House, are endeavouring to do something for the protection of the young men and in some cases the young women of our land. So we may be said on this question to be representing those who are understood individually, and therefore I suppose collectively, to be the 'better half' of the community. I am glad that the attitude of the House appears to be unanimously favourable to the resolution. I do not know whether we shall have the good fortune to pass it by a unanimous vote; but seeing that we are to-day dealing with a great moral question, and that these great moral questions will determine, even more than ordinary financial and political questions, what this country shall attain to in the future.

I should be glad indeed, regardless of all those matters which sometimes divide us, if on this great question we should by a unanimous voice give not only the sanction of the law to this great measure, but the weight of the representative opinion of this House in a strong and unequivocal way.

Mr. T. G. RODDICK (Montreal, St. Antoine). It is not my intention, Mr. Speaker, to make any lengthy speech on this occasion because I was not aware that the matter was coming up to-day. Otherwise I should have been prepared with some statistics and other information that might have been of service to the House. We are all indebted to my hon. colleague from Montreal (Mr. Bickerdike) for having brought this matter so ably before the House. I quite concur in all that he and the hon. gentleman who seconds this resolution, my hon. friend from West Huron (Mr. Holmes), but I am a little afraid that they are expecting too much. I am a little afraid when they ask for the prohibition of the importation, manufacture and sale of cigarettes that they are going too far. I think that we would do better to follow the example set us in the English House of Commons, where a measure has been introduced, but not yet discussed, dealing with this question. I have in my hand the last edition of the British Medical Journal, which treats of this very Bill, and it may interest this House to know what the British House of Commons contemplate doing in this matter:—

> The anti-tobacco and anti-nicotine league of England proposes the following Bill:
>
> No person under the age of 16 years shall smoke or use tobacco in any form and any such person so doing shall be liable to conviction and to a penalty not exceeding ten shillings for each offence. No person shall sell give or supply tobacco in any form to or for the use of any person under the age of 16 years, and any person so doing shall be liable, on a first offence, to a penalty not exceeding 20 shillings, and on a second or subsequent conviction to a penalty not exceeding 40 shillings. And in addition to the foregoing penalty the license, if any, held by such person for the sale of tobacco shall, in the case of a third conviction, become void and such person shall become disqualified for a term of five years from the date of such conviction from holding any such license.

Such a measure would be a very sensible one for us to adopt, but I would make the age limit seventeen instead of sixteen. Up to that age the human frame is being developed and it is in that period that the damage is done by tobacco. After that age we cannot declare, as medical men, that very much harm follows, and we know that if a boy does not smoke up to seventeen or eighteen he will probably not smoke at all. In that way therefore the end we all desire might be reached. I quite agree with all that has fallen from my hon. friend on this subject. Up to the age of seventeen or eighteen, the harm cannot be computed which is done by tobacco, especially to the nervous system. But that great harm is done has been demonstrated time and again in large schools for boys. In Yale university—and I give this as a single illustration—comparisons were made during eight years between smokers and non-smokers. As compared with the smokers the non-smokers gained twenty-four per cent in weight, thirty-seven per cent in height, forty-two per cent in girth, and 8·36 cubic inches in lung expansion. Other well known investigations have proved that the effect on the mind in the case of boys is very marked. During several months, twenty boys who were known not to use tobacco in any form and twenty known to be cigarette fiends, were closely observed by their teacher. The ages of the boys were from ten to seventeen, the average age being a little over fourteen. Of the twenty smokers, twelve have smoked more than a year and some several years. All the twenty used cigarettes and some also used pipes and cigars occasionally. The following effects were noticed in the smokers. Twelve of them had poor memories, and in ten out of the twelve the memory was reported as very poor. Only four had fair memories, and not one of the twenty had a good memory. Twelve were in poor physical condition, six being subject to sick spells and comparatively already physical wrecks. Eight were reported as being in fair condition, but in none was the condition excellent. These are remarkable facts, which have been proved conclusively by medical men and others who observed the boys. I quite agree that if the age limit could be made seventeen or eighteen we would be doing as much as it is possible to do. It is known that a cigarette properly made is not so injurious after all to grown persons. Properly made, it is the purest form in which to use tobacco. That is a statement I am obliged to make because it is well known and established. I have nothing further to say. I shall support the measure with great pleasure but hope that when this resolution be given effect to in form of a Bill, the modifications I suggest will be made.

Mr. H. J. LOGAN (Cumberland). I agree with the hon. member for St. Antoine Division of Montreal (Mr. Roddick) that if we could modify this motion, it could be so amended as to meet with the unanimous acceptance. In many of the statements made in support of this motion, I entirely agree. No one can deny that the smoking of cigarettes has been proven by overwhelming evidence to be a productive source of serious physical and moral injury. Every one knows that it impairs the health, arrests the development, weakens the intellectual power and thus constitutes a social and national evil. That is, I think, the unanimous opinion of this House. But I desire to call to your attention, Sir, that we cannot amend this motion as the hon. gentleman who last spoke (Mr. Roddick) has suggested we should do. We must adopt it in its entirety, and vote in favour of the prohibition of the manufacture, sale and importation of cigarettes. To those of us who have boys this is a serious matter. I do not think that any one can exaggerate the evil effects of cigarettes upon a growing boy. We see every day boy cigarette smokers with that deathly cigarette look. Cigarettes have been aptly termed the coffin nails for boys. But although I agree in all that has been said regarding the evil effects of cigarette smoking and although I desire as much as any one else to stop the smoking of cigarettes by the boys and girls of this country, yet I am of the opinion that this is not the proper place in which to deal with the question but that it should more properly be dealt with by a local legislature. In Nova Scotia, chapter 119 of the revised statutes of that province, provides as follows (and I would like to call the attention of the House to the great stringency of this law :

1. Any person who sells, gives or causes to be sold or given, any cigars, cigarettes, smoking or chewing tobacco, snuff, or any other form or preparation of tobacco or opium for smoking, to any person, having reasonable cause to believe such person to be under the age of sixteen years, shall be liable to a penalty not exceeding twenty dollars ; and in default of payment of such penalty, to be imprisoned for any term not exceeding thirty days.

2. Any person who,—

(a) Accepts any money or other valuable consideration to act as the agent of any person under sixteen years of age, in procuring for such person any cigars, cigarettes, smoking or chewing tobacco or snuff, or any other form or preparation of tobacco or opium for smoking or chewing, or

(b) Supplies to any person under sixteen years of age any cigars, cigarettes, smoking or chewing tobacco or any other form or preparation of tobacco or opium, for smoking or chewing, on the promise of any money or other valuable consideration, shall be liable to a penalty not exceeding twenty dollars, and in default of payment of such penalty, to be imprisoned for any term not exceding thirty days.

And our statute goes even further than that, for it applies even to the boy himself, the buyer of the cigarette. By sec. 3 it is enacted :

Any person under sixteen years of age who has in his possession, or smokes or in any way uses cigars, cigarettes, smoking or chewing tobacco or snuff, or any other form or preparation of tobacco or opium, shall be liable to a penalty not exceding five dollars, or to imprisonment for any period not exceeding seven days, and in default of payment of the money penalty to be imprisoned for any term not exceeding seven days.

That is the law upon the statute-book of that province. Yet, we ought to be ashamed to say that law is almost a dead letter at the present day.

Mr. HOLMES. Will my hon. friend from Cumberland (Mr. Logan) allow me to ask him a question ?

Mr. LOGAN. Yes.

Mr. HOLMES. Has the province of Nova Scotia or any other province the power to prohibit the manufacture or importation ?

Mr. LOGAN. It has no power to prohibit the sale of cigarettes completely. My hon. friend from Huron (Mr. Holmes) says that he wishes this to apply only to the boys. The mover of the resolution (Mr. Bickerdike) tells us that at maturity a man can do as he likes, but this resolution is not intended to apply to those who have reached maturity; what he seeks is a regulation of the traffic. If it is not to apply to those who have reached maturity the most we can do in order to accomplish the good end sought is to regulate the sale of cigarettes. But this is already done by the province of Nova Scotia. Yet, although this law has been upon the statute-books for ten years, it is almost a dead letter law at this day. I would rather a son of mine should smoke cigarettes than that he should lose respect for the laws of our country. By multiplying these legal enactments, we are likely to increase the number of laws that are not respected, that are broken every day and every hour of the day. I am told that in the province of Quebec also they have stringent legislation on this subject. I come now to the province of Ontario. By chapter 261 of the statutes of this province, it is enacted :

> Any person who either directly or indirectly sells or gives or furnishes to a minor under eighteen years of age, cigarettes, cigars, or tobacco in any form, shall on summary conviction thereof before a justice of the peace be subject to a penalty of not less than $10 nor more than $50 with or without costs of prosecution or to be imprisoned, with or without hard labour, for any term not exceeding thirty days, or to both fine with or without costs, and imprisonment to the said amount and for the said term, in the discretion of the convicting magistrate.

What more legislation do we need for the province of Ontario, what more stringent law could my hon. friend from West Huron desire than chapter 261 of the statutes of his own province, which imposes not only a fine, but imprisonment, and not only that but a fine and imprisonment with hard labour. It further provides :

> And in case of a fine, or a fine and costs being awarded and of the same not being upon conviction forthwith paid, the justice may commit the offender to the common jail, there to be imprisoned for any term not exceeding thirty days unless the fine and costs are sooner paid.

And one of the sections, which provides for the easier working of the law, says :

> A person who appears to the magistrate to be under eighteen years of age, shall be presumed to be under that age, unless it is shown by evidence that he is in fact over that age.

—giving the burden of proof in favour of the prosecutor of the law. Now, I believe, with others who have spoken this afternoon, that we owe a great debt of gratitude to the noble band of women who are endeavouring to purify the morals of the boys and girls of our land. I am not opposing the work of these ladies at all. But I speak in my own private capacity, when I say, that while they and I are working towards the same end, in my humble opinion they are upon the wrong track. We should endeavour to restrict the sale by prohibiting the sales to minors. By endeavouring to prohibit the importation, manufacture and sale of cigarettes in Canada we are endeavouring to put upon the statute-book a law that will be a dead letter and that will increase disrespect for the law throughout the length and breadth of the land. I do not desire to take up further time. I repeat that I think cigarettes are poisonous and dangerous to boys and should not be allowed to be sold to boys, and we have on the statute-books of the provinces laws which prohibit that sale, under penalty of fine or even imprisonment with hard labour against any man or woman who sells cigarettes to the boys of our land.

Mr. SPROULE. On what ground does the hon. gentleman contend that this motion cannot be amended ?

Mr. LOGAN. I think it is a matter for the provincial legislatures and does not come within the purview of this House.

Mr. SPROULE. But the provinces have not the right to prohibit the manufacture or importation. It is only this parliament that can control the importation.

Mr. LOGAN. If the hon. gentleman (Mr. Sproule) desires to substitute another motion, he can count on my support, if he seeks to prevent the sale to boys.

Mr. GEO. TAYLOR (South Leeds). Unlike my hon. friend (Mr. Logan), who has just resumed his seat, I have no boys. Therefore, it might be said that I have not much interest in the question. But I have a great interest in the boys of our country, because from the ranks of these boys must soon be filled the places in this House and all the places now held by men in this country in the professions, the pulpit, and everywhere else. Therefore, I think every person should take a lively interest in the boys of to-day, whether they have boys of their own or not. It seems to me that the logic of my hon. friend (Mr. Logan) is very bad. He said he would rather see his boys smoke cigarettes than lose respect for the laws of our country, and he quotes and advocates the statute of his own province of Nova Scotia, which, he says, has been on the statute-book for ten years and is practically a dead letter. The same is true in the province of Ontario—though the law is on the statute-book it is not respected by the boy.

But the resolution of my hon. friend is not like the law of the province. I am not a lawyer, of course, but I understand that to this parliament is relegated the power of dealing with matters affecting trade and commerce. And so it is this parliament and this parliament only that can pass a law to prohibit the manufacture and importation of cigarettes. If a law is passed by this parliament it has to be respected, because it will be enforced by the customs and excise departments. There will be no more importation and no more manufacture, then the boys of this country will have to quit smoking cigarettes. My hon. friend refers to the prohibition of tobacco. The resolution does not call for the prohibition of tobacco at all, but it calls for the prohibition of the manufacture and sale, which is in my opinion the only effective way of dealing with this evil. I think hon. gentlemen on both sides of this House, in the interests of the boys of this country, should unite in placing upon our statute-book a law prohibiting the importation, manufacture and sale of cigarettes in Canada. In doing so we will render to the boys of this country one of the greatest benefits that we can bestow upon them.

Mr. L. P. DEMERS (St. John and Iberville). (Translation.) Mr. Speaker, it seems to me that the resolution moved by the hon. member for the St. Lawrence division, Montreal (Mr. Bickerdike) is not acceptable. Such as it stands, it is undoubtedly within the purview of this parliament, but it is not logical. It is first stated in the resolution that the fact of smoking cigarettes is injurious to the health of children—and in the same breath it asks this House to enact a law prohibiting the use of cigarettes, not only by children, but by grown up men.

This is clearly shown by the resolution which concludes as follows :

> That this House is of the opinion, for the reasons hereinbefore set forth, that the right and most effectual legislative remedy for these evils is to be found in the enactment and enforcement of a law prohibiting the importation, manufacture and sale of cigarettes.

For many years past, anti-cigarette laws have been passed by several legislatures, prohibiting the sale of cigarettes to minors. I think it is quite evident that this House cannot be called upon to enact a similar law. On the other hand, we have heard it stated that those laws are a dead letter today. That such laws should have remained a dead letter, is no wonder, seeing that any legislature which interferes with the liberty of the subject never meets with popular favour.

We have proof of what I say in the many restrictive laws put on the statute-books of legislatures, which are not enforced.

Those laws are almost always evaded. A similar agitation arose a few years ago over the question of the prohibition of intoxicating liquors. Because a few people are addicted to the habit of drinking, attempts were then made to prohibit the general use of liquors. In this case again, we are asked to enact a law which would result in depriving the immense majority of the community of the use of anything which is undoubtedly lawful.

Mr. J. BUREAU (Three Rivers and St. Maurice). I think this resolution is rather sweeping. We all admit that the smoking of cigarettes by boys in our country is a great evil. But for my part I am not sure whether the evil exists only in the manufactured cigarette or in the cigarette that the boy makes for himself. I understand that the resolution of my hon. friend from Montreal (Mr. Bickerdike) aims at preventing the importation, manufacture and sale of cigarettes. Now if we want to do away with the evil of cigarette smoking by boys, it seems to me that we ought to adopt a suggestion which has just been made of prohibiting the use of cigarettes by boys under 17 years of age. Is this the right way to proceed ? I am inclined to think that the boys will smoke fewer cigarettes when they have to go to a tobacco store and give a dime or a nickle to buy a package of cigarettes, than they will when they are in the habit of rolling up the tobacco in paper and making the cigarettes themselves. I think under the circumstances it would be better, as stated by my hon. friend from Cumberland (Mr. Logan), to introduce into the Criminal Code, or somewhere else, a law making it a crime for boys under 17 years of age to smoke cigarettes. I do not believe that the proposed prohibition of the importation and manufacture of cigarettes will attain the object sought. Of what use will it be to prevent the importation of cigarettes ? The cigarette that the boy makes himself is not imported, is not manufactured, and it is not sold by any merchant. I think the resolution ought to be amended so that we can attain the object sought by some other means than a sweeping prohibition, which in my opinion, would make matters worse than before. We have seen the results of a prohibitory law in respect to liquor. We have laws now forbidding the sale of liquor to boys under 18 in our province, and it is a crime for a hotel keeper to sell liquor to a minor. Why not make a similar law in respect to cigarettes, if we desire to stop cigarette smoking by boys ?

Mr. C. B. HEYD (South Brant). I would like to ask some one who has made a study of this question whether the deleterious effects of cigarette smoking are brought about by the tobacco itself that is used in their manufacture, or by the drugs that are introduced to make the cigarettes more enticing. Now if these effects are brought about by the drugs and not by the tobacco, could not the object we are trying to attain be secured by preventing the importation, manufacture and use of cigarettes in which a drug is used either in the tobacco or in the paper ?

Mr. A. BRODER (Dundas). This matter is all in a nut shell. We do not want to have an analyst in every village to find out whether a cigarette is made with pure or adulterated tobacco. It is no matter to an old smoker whether cigarettes are prohibited or not, because as a rule he does not use them. I think there is no question but that boys are injured by the use of cigarettes. I doubt if there is a man in this House who has not observed in every village small boys on the street smoking cigarettes in the evening, boys from 10 up to 14 years of age. Now we have a law on the statute-book in Ontario that is evaded by the older boy over 18 years of age buying cigarettes and giving them to the younger boy. The trader sells them to the older boy to whom the law permits him to sell, and the latter goes out on the street and divides up with the younger boy, who has perhaps helped him to the cash to buy the cigarettes. Then there is the boy who is under better home influences, whose father and mother try to keep him away from the evil ; he meets a boy on the street who is not under good influences, and the latter gives him a cigarette. That is going on all over this country. Now the question is, if there is any hardship at all suffered by the older portion of the community, whether it is not worth their while to suffer that inconvenience in the interest of the boys of the country. No one who observes what is going on but must have noticed the effect of smoking cigarettes upon young lads who are using them. Now, perhaps there is no part of the community which will suffer from a prohibition of the importation than those frontier towns along the line of the United States where, if such a law is put upon the statute-book, cigarettes will be brought in from the villages on the other side of the line, and our own frontier villages will continue to suffer more or less in that respect. It seems to me that it is the sense of this House that it is an evil that should be dealt with, and if so the sooner it is dealt with the less hardship there will be to all concerned. I am not a constitutional lawyer, and I hope I never will be, in the interest of the country, but, I think most common sense men cannot fail to come to the conclusion that this parliament has the right to deal with this subject. We can prohibit the manufacture, we can prohibit the importation and we can prohibit the sale of what we consider detrimental to the public generally.

Mr. C. E. KAULBACH (Lunenburg). Mr. Speaker, I venture to say that a great deal of credit is due to the hon. mover and seconder of this motion in bringing forward a matter which is so important to the welfare of the young of this Dominion. The habit of cigarette smoking has been a growing evil for a number of years. It is a painful sight to see the youth of our country under the age of twenty-one years smoking cigarettes ; nay, tobacco in any form. I cannot agree with my hon. friend from Montreal, St. Antoine, (Mr. Roddick) when he suggests that we should make the age limit seventeen. I say make the age limit twenty-one. A young man has not arrived at the age of ripe young manhood until he reaches the age of twenty-one. Why it should be seventeen, I cannot understand. If a youth is affected by use of tobacco at the age of seventeen by the impurities that arise from the tobacco imbued or infused into the system, I conceive, that the same evil exists, perhaps not to the same extent, until he arrives at the age of twenty-one, and I still go farther and say that it even continues beyond the age of twenty-one. In fact, a young man does not possess strong moral courage until he arrives at the age of twenty-one.

That the smoking of cigarettes has been proved by overwhelming testimony to be productive of serious physical and moral injury to young people; impairing health, arresting development, weakening intellectual power, and thus constituting a social and national evil——

As this is indisputable, legislation should be enacted to prohibit the importation, sale and use of cigarettes is a suggestion which I heartily endorse. I conceive, Mr. Speaker, that it is within the purview of this Dominion to enact prohibitive measures and not for the legislatures of the respective provinces to assume this action. We have an Act upon the statute-books of the province of Nova Scotia, as has been shown by the hon. member for Cumberland (Mr. Logan), we have another in the province of Ontario and another in the province of Quebec. But, these Acts are completely ignored. In my own town may be seen boys who have scarcely arrived at the age of ten years smoking cigarettes. Nay, I will go farther and say that I have seen them smoking vile pipes and as such are offenders, and open to the most stringent measures that the law can possibly enact. I believe that the remark which fell from the lips of the last speaker (Mr. Broder) in respect to the manufacture of cigarettes, should be carefully considered. The intention of the mover and seconder of this motion is that the manufacture of cigarettes should be prohibited in this country, but a youth may purchase his tobacco in any form he pleases, use any kind of paper he pleases and manufacture his own cigarette. The motion should go further and say that it should be part of the Criminal Code of this country that any youth who is caught in the act of smoking a cigarette, whether made by himself or otherwise, should suffer the penalty of the law, and I would urge this amendment upon the mover and seconder of this motion. Perhaps I take a stronger view than many hon. gentlemen here when I say that the use of cigarettes is only an introduction to many other evils that human nature is heir to, and that if the suppression of the use of the cigarette was strictly carried out I believe that the other vices to which youths are liable and that human nature is subject to would be very quickly removed. I would strongly support the age limit of twenty-one instead of seventeen as my hon. friend (Mr. Roddick) suggests.

Mr. G. STEPHENS (Kent, Ontario). Mr. Speaker, I did not intend to speak on this question, but in view of the great importance which it is to the people of this country, not only at the present time but in the future to our young men who are growing up, I felt that I would not be doing my duty to the riding I have the honour to represent did I not stand up and say something in favour of this resolution. I am sure that any hon. member of this House who goes up and down the streets in any town or city in this country can see the evil effect which cigarette smoking has upon our boys, and I believe that there is no other way of stopping the evil unless the importation, sale and manufacture of cigarettes are prohibited. I therefore shall have much pleasure in supporting this resolution and I will conclude by expressing the hope that the government may find some way of stopping what is becoming a great evil amongst the boys of this country.

Hon. WM. ROSS (Victoria, N.S.) I think, Mr. Speaker, that all the representatives of the people in this House agree that this is a growing evil. It is an evil that was unknown in my early days, and I know from personal observation in Halifax that it is an evil that is increasing more and more every year. Now, the question is this: Are the parents showing the best example to their children in the use of tobacco in any shape or form? I give myself the credit of saying that I never used tobacco and if I had my way there would not be any person in this world that would use it. But, however, I am not vain enough to think that that reform will be carried out in this age. Now, we have this evil. This evil is increasing and this House is the only body that can deal with the question according to the resolution in its present shape. Therefore, let us not shirk the responsibility of doing what we can in the interest of the children that are going to be the men of Canada in a short time. If this evil is allowed to continue there will be very few that will grow to the age of manhood. They will not be men either in mind or in body, if they continue the practice of using tobacco in any shape or form under a certain age, because we cannot confine the evil of tobacco to cigarettes alone. The use of tobacco by our young boys must be injurious. Therefore I heartily endorse the resolution that has been submitted to this House and I would like that the House should assume the responsibility of dealing with it in a strong and vigorous manner. I do not intend to say more, only that when I was young I used to repeat something like this:

Tobacco is a stinking weed; it was the devil that sowed the seed
It drains your purse; it stains your clothes
And makes a chimney of your nose.

Hon. J. I. TARTE (St. Mary's, Montreal). There is no doubt whatever that tobacco and liquor have caused a great deal of evil. I agree with the hon. gentleman (Hon. Mr. Ross) that we should start by giving good example ourselves. If grown up people, like members of parliament, would smoke a little less than they do, perhaps our young people would not smoke so much. Be that as it may, I have never believed in coercion. I do not think that coercion has ever cured any moral evil. My hon. friend from Montreal (Mr. Bickerdike) asks us to prevent the smoking of cigarettes, but only a week ago I read in the 'Lancet,' one of the most important and influential medical newspapers in the world, that cigarettes are not quite as harmful as cigars. It would follow then, that if we ask that cigarettes be not manufactured or sold, cigars should be prohibited at the same time, and tobacco in all shapes and forms. This resolution would not go far enough, so far as I am personally concerned, but I shall not deal with that aspect of the case at all. I do not believe in prohibition of that kind. Let us regulate the smoking of cigarettes and of cigars and of tobacco and let us regulate the sale of liquor. Prohibition has not been very popular with us in Quebec. Not because we drink more than the people of the other provinces, but because we believe in freedom.

Some hon. MEMBERS. Hear, hear.

Hon. Mr. TARTE. If better education were given in the schools, if on the walls of the schools there were photographs showing the young generation the great evils of liquor and tobacco, it would go a great deal further to remedy the evil than any law we can pass here. Let us educate our young generation in the proper way, but don't let us enact laws which have proved a failure elsewhere. The prohibition of liquor has proved to be a failure almost everywhere it has been enacted, and the prohibition of the manufacture and importation of cigarettes would prove a failure and a dead failure. Any man of experience will agree with me on that. I do not speak from any interested motives on this question. I have never smoked, thank God; I am trying to give good example, and I hope to die without smoking.

Mr. CASGRAIN. You'll smoke when you die.

Hon. Mr. TARTE. Well, it will not make me less immortal than I hope to be. These are the views which I entertain on questions of this kind. It seems to me that a law prohibiting the importation and manufacture of cigarettes would be a failure and if such a law be enacted, then it should be extended to tobacco of all kinds ; a thing which I believe, is out of the question.

Mr. T. S. SPROULE (East Grey). I am heartily in accord with the resolution, although I am forced to believe that such legislation does not always accomplish the end aimed at. I can well believe that it is injurious both morally and physically that either boys or adults should smoke cigarettes. The hon. gentleman (Hon. Mr. Tarte) told us that he read in the 'Lancet' that cigars were worse than cigarettes. From the information I have that is not correct, because the cigarettes are saturated with stramonium and other narcotics which makes them more injurious in their effect than if they were made from tobacco alone, and cigars are usually manufactured out of tobacco alone. I hold, that provided you are able to prevent boys from smoking cigarettes up to the time of their majority, the danger would not be so great, and the best way to insure that is to make it more difficult to purchase cigarettes. If men take to the use of cigarettes in their mature years they are responsible for it and the evil will be confined to themselves alone. But when boys acquire the habit in their youth, it gets fixed and they are not able to give it up afterwards. I think it would be in the interest of the rising generation that we should prevent this evil from contaminating them. As that can only be done through this parliament, which controls importation and manufacture, I am in favour of the resolution. Although the provincial parliaments may pass laws to make it illegal to sell to a minor, still while it is easy for young boys to obtain cigarettes because of the freedom with which they are distributed throughout the country, the provincial law cannot be very well enforced. I am in favour of this resolution, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. DEPUTY SPEAKER (Peter Macdonald, East Huron). I am in favour of this resolution. I believe that if it is adopted by this House, and if a law is founded upon it, it will be one of the best laws that can possibly be conceived for the preservation of the young. I do not think that the tobacco contained in the cigarettes is more injurious than tobacco used in the pipe or the cigar, but I am informed upon good authority, that the paper in which the tobacco is rolled, contains ingredients which are injurious to the smoker. I have been informed that the cigarette paper is immersed in some solution of morphine which gives to the smoker a delightful sensation, and leads him from point to point until he becomes addicted to the cigarette habit. I am told also that the inhalation of the smoke creates a sensation such as opium would create, and therefore that it engenders in the young a desire to use it which it is almost impossible to restrain. Therefore, I think it would be wisdom on the part of the House first to pass the resolution, and then pass a law founded on that resolution. My hon. friend (Hon. Mr. Tarte) says that he believes in freedom. So do I ; but as the poet says :

> Freedom properly understood ; is a universal license to do good.

Too much freedom is almost as bad as tyranny. What we want to do is to keep our boys free from the temptations which are now thrown in their way, and if we do that there will be no tyranny about it. I trust that this motion will result in a Bill prohibiting the importation and manufacture of cigarettes.

Mr. W. R. BROCK (Centre Toronto). I merely rise to call the attention of the House to what is going on in this country, and in many other countries at the present time. That is, we are removing from the proper sphere the care of our children and the care of the morals of this country. I contend that the proper places in which to inculcate right principles into the minds of our children are the homes of the country.

Hon. Mr. TARTE. Hear, hear ; and the schools.

Mr. BROCK. More and more we have of late been throwing upon the legislatures and the courts those duties that should be attended to in our own homes. We are educating the children of this country free ; we are supplying them with books free ; we are throwing largely upon our churches the primary teaching of religion which it is the duty of every father and mother to give to their children. How often, when children go astray, do we find fathers and mothers looking to the laws to have them kept in the proper paths, instead of impressing upon their children in their own homes what their duties are. Why, Sir, in this country it is quite the exception to find religious instruction given to children in their homes. That is left entirely either to the churches or the Sunday schools. Fathers and mothers are neglecting it, because other means are provided ; and if you are going to pass laws of the kind proposed, the result will be that the children will be left entirely to the law, and parents will not exercise any influence over them. I would strongly urge that more attention be paid to the morals of children in their own homes, and that in the event of children going astray, their parents should be fined. As it is at present, children who smoke cigarettes are brought before a police magistrate and he punishes them, as well as the person who has sold the cigarettes if he can be got at ; but the sale is usually done in such a way that it is almost impossible to get at these people. I think this discussion will have done good if it directs the attention of parents to the importance of looking after the religious and moral instruction of their children in their own homes.

The PRIME MINISTER (Rt. Hon. Sir Wilfrid Laurier). I have listened with a great deal of interest to the discussion that has taken place on this somewhat important question. I would have preferred that the discussion had been even more general than it has been, because this is a question upon which the government itself has no policy to offer to the House, but desires to be guided by the sense of the House representing the community. In view of the discussion which has taken place, in view especially of the opinion which has been given to us by some gentlemen who are authorities on this subject, it seems to be undeniable that the use of cigarettes by young boys is very injurious. The same remark would apply, so far as I can see, to the use of tobacco in any form ; and for my part I am ready to believe that the use of tobacco, whether in the form of cigarettes or cigars or the pipe, is extremely injurious to young children and to youths in adolescence, whereas in the case of grown-up people, it seems to be a very innocent pleasure, if indeed it is a pleasure—it is not so to everybody. If the use of tobacco is an innocent amusement to grown-up people, I do not think they should be debarred from indulging in it by those who do not relish it. The point taken by the hon. member for St. John and Iberville (Mr. Demers) seems to me to be conclusive. The object of this resolution is simply to make it impossible for young boys to use cigarettes ; and a very drastic remedy is proposed, that is, that we should prevent the manufacture and sale of cigarettes. Of course, that would be a very effective way of protecting the youth of the country from a dangerous amusement ; but at the same time it would prevent men who derive no injury from it from indulging in that amusement. I agree with a great deal that has been said, and I agree with everything that has been said by my hon. friend from Toronto (Mr. Brock) to the effect that the best way to cure these evils is to attend more to domestic education and less to legislation. If we attempt, by way of restrictive legislation, to prohibit things which in themselves are not harmful, we may place upon the statute-book a class of legislation which will not be respected by the community. There are at present on the statute-books of the several provinces laws which, if observed, are sufficient to meet the evil in question ; but we are told that these laws are not observed. Well, if these laws are not observed, is it to be expected that a more drastic law will be observed ? I see boys smoking cigarettes in the streets every day, and it is always painful to me to see young children of ten or twelve years of age violating the law in this way, injuring their constitutions and impairing their mental powers ; but I do not turn informer and have them prosecuted. If I saw a boy committing a theft, I would not hesitate to call in a policeman to arrest him, and everybody would do the same. But if we put on the statute-book a more drastic measure on this subject than we have at present, I do not think we shall be doing any more to cure the evil, but we shall have simply added one more to those offensive laws which are enacted but not enforced. This is an open question, and everybody can vote upon the resolution as he likes ; but in my opinion the best way to cure the evil in question is the way indicated by my hon. friend from Toronto (Mr. Brock).

House divided on the resolution.

YEAS :

Messieurs

Alcorn,	Lewis,
Avery,	Lovell,
Barker,	Loy,
Beith,	Macdonald,
Bell,	MacKinnon,
Bennett,	Maclaren (Huntingdon),
Bickerdike,	MacLaren (Perth),
Blain,	Macpherson,
Boyd,	McColl,
Broder,	McCormick,
Brown,	McEwen,
Bruce,	McGowan,
Calvert,	McGugan,
Calvin,	McIntosh,
Campbell,	Marcil (Bonaventure),
Cargill,	Matheson,
Charlton,	Meigs,
Christie,	Monk,
Clancy,	Morin,
Clare,	Morrison,
Clarke,	Mulock (Sir William),
Cochrane,	Pope,
Copp,	Proulx,
Costigan,	Reid (Grenville),
Douglas,	Reid (Restigouche),
Earle,	Richardson,
Emmerson,	Robinson (Elgin),
Erb,	Roche (Halifax),
Fielding,	Roche (Marquette),
Fitzpatrick,	Roddick,
Fowler,	Rosamond,
Fraser,	Ross (Ontario),
Gibson,	Ross (Victoria, N.S.),
Gould,	Russell,
Grant,	Scott,
Hackett,	Sherritt,
Holmes,	Smith (Vancouver),
Hughes (Victoria),	Sproule,
Hyman,	Stephens,
Ingram,	Stewart,
Johnston (Cardwell),	Sutherland (Essex),
Johnston (Lambton),	Talbot,
Kaulbach,	Taylor,
Kemp,	Thompson (Haldimand and Monck),
Kidd,	Tobin,
Lancaster,	Tolton,
Lang,	Turcot,
LaRivière,	Turgeon,
Lavell,	Vrooman,
LeBlanc,	Wilmot,
Lefurgey,	Wright.—103.
Lennox,

NAYS :

Messieurs

Angers,	Léonard,
Archambault,	Logan,
Bazinet,	McCool,
Béland,	McIsaac,
Belcourt,	McLennan,
Bernier,	Malouin,
Borden (Sir Frederick),	Marcil (Bagot),
Brock,	Martineau,
Bureau,	Mayrand,
Carbonneau,	Mignault,
Carroll,	Monet,
Casgrain,	Murray,
Champagne,	Parmelee,
Cowan,	Porter,
Demers (Lévis),	Préfontaine,
Demers (St. John),	Puttee,
Dugas,	Riley,
Ethier,	Ross (Yukon),
Fortier,	Rousseau,
Haggart,	Seagram,
Harwood,	Sutherland (Oxford),
Heyd,	Tarte,
Laurier (Sir Wilfrid),	Tisdale,
Lavergne,	Ward.—48.

Resolution agreed to.

Mr. SPROULE. Might I ask the right hon. the First Minister when he intends to carry out these instructions from the House?

The PRIME MINISTER. I shall have to give up smoking.

AUTOMATIC GRAIN WEIGHERS IN NORTH-WEST TERRITORIES.

Mr. D. A. STEWART (Lisgar) moved for :

Return showing all correspondence between the Inland Revenue Department and manufacturers of automatic grain-weighers, used on threshing machines, in Manitoba and the North-west Territories. Between the Inland Revenue Department and inventors of automatic grain-weighers for threshing machines. Between the Inland Revenue Department and thresher men using automatic grain-weighers, in Manitoba and the North-west Territories. Also, copy of report of chief inspector and scale architect re the standard grain-weigher manufactured by the Globe Manufacturing Company of Winnipeg.

He said : I rise to move this motion in the interests of the threshermen of Manitoba and the North-west Territories, who are suffering under this great hardship of not being able to collect in the courts any account which they may have against a customer for work done. The present system of meeting the conditions of the west has been the result of gradual evolution. The thresherman began with a bushel measure which he emptied into his bags. The low bagger was then invented, to which the thresherman attached his bags, and these bags were filled automatically. From the low bagger, the high bagger was developed. The grain is elevated to a height of about 18 feet from the ground, weighed at the top of his high bagger, and thence loaded into wagons or bags. In Manitoba and the Territories the thresherman is paid according to the result of his day's threshing, but in Ontario I believe he is still paid, as was the system 24 years ago when I was in that province, by the day. In the province the charges per day run from $3 to $10, according to the size of this outfit, and it makes no difference whether the thresherman threshes 500 or 1,000 bushels in a day, his pay is the same. The Ontario thresherman only furnishes a crew of three men whereas the Manitoba thresherman finds all the hands necessary for the engine and threshing. His expenses per day will run from $32 to $41, and if he engages the necessary teams for stook threshing, his expenses will run from $68 to $81. This amount of wages he has to lose if he is dealing with a dishonest customer who refuses to pay. In Ontario, the threshing accounts are small compared with those in Manitoba. In Manitoba and the Territories anything below $150 is a small account, $200 is a fair account, and the accounts run as high as $700, $800 and $1,000. A threshing outfit costs from $2,000 to $4,000, and is usually payable in three instalments. You can, therefore, see that it is a very serious matter for a western thresherman, if he be unable to collect two or three of his accounts. The standard grain weigher manufactured by the Globe Company of Winnipeg gives satisfactory results, and the fact that there is a demand for that kind of a machine all through the west shows that they are a necessity for the handling of the crop. In all cases, where I have made inquiries, the farmers have invariably told me that they were satisfied with the weights they receive from these machines. It has a device for estimating the value of the job and is not used for buying or selling grain. To show you the amount of money invested in threshing machines in Manitoba and the Territories, let me give you a few figures. In 1902, there were 800 used in the Territories and 2,000 in Manitoba. These outfits would run in value from $2,000 to $4,000. Take an average of $3,000 as the value of an outfit, and you will find that the large sum of $8,400,000 is invested in this machinery in our North-west. The threshing accounts in Manitoba in 1901 were made on the following basis : 4½ cents per bushel for wheat; 3 cents for oats, and 3 cents for barley; and the total amounted to $3,116,875. In 1902, the threshing account for the crop, based on the last revised returns, would amount to $4,292,383. In the Territories, for 1902, the amount would be $1,051,521, or over $5,000,000 in both cases, not one dollar of which can be collected in court. I have brought this question before the House and the government in the hopes that they will advance with the times and that this government will devise some legislation which will give the thresherman, who is doing his best to bring the grain from the great fields of the west into the bins of the granary of the empire, the justice to which he is entitled and of which he stands greatly in need.

Mr. N. BOYD (Macdonald). I would just remind the House that this is not a new question here. Last session, and, I think, the session preceding it, this matter was brought to the attention of the Minister of Inland Revenue (Hon. Mr. Bernier). It was pointed out to that hon. gentleman that this was a matter of very great importance to the people of Manitoba and the North-west Territories. And, as has been shown by the hon. member for Lisgar (Mr. Stewart) it is a matter of great moment indeed that men may refuse, legally, under an Act of the government, to pay bills ranging from $100 to $1,000—and all because the department seem to think the matter so small as to be unworthy the attention which some of us hold that it should receive. We were promised last year by the Minister of Inland Revenue that something should be done. He took a number of members of Manitoba and the North-west Territories to his department and exhibited a machine which we believed, and which he seemed to think would meet the emergencies of the case. I understand that a report has been handed in to the minister by an officer of the Crown to the effect that this machine met the conditions imposed by the department and that it was accepted for verification. Since that time, a gentleman has been brought into the department, from Montreal, taken out of some scale factory there, part blacksmith, part scale manufacturer, and placed over the heads of five or six other men equally as good as he, and better prepared scientifically, better experienced in many ways. That gentleman has been placed over the heads of others, and, for reasons not yet explained to any person who has made inquiries, he has seen fit to discard this weighing machine that had been accepted by an officer of the Crown before. And so the matter stands at the present time. But, of course, it is a trifling matter, a matter of very little importance—to the minister who sits quietly by and permits his officers to do as they please. But it is a most important matter to the people of Manitoba and the North-west Territory. I read to the House last session, a case in which a man came to court and refused to pay. If we do not resort to the old busheller, with which twenty men would not take away the grain from the machines of the present day, a man cannot collect his accounts. Not a dollar can be legally collected for all the threshing done in Manitoba and the North-west Territories to-day. If there were not a special weighing machine already in use, if it were not a fact that an Order in Council could be passed any day to procure the same, there might be some reason for allowing this inconvenience to continue. If the minister would bestir himself sufficiently to go to Council with an order—which I am sure would be passed at once—authorizing these special weighing machines, as has been done in the matter of weighing coal, measuring syrup and in other things, the matter could be settled at once. I have seen the machine working to which I refer, and it is as near perfect as any machine that can be found. It comes nearer to being correct than the system by which grain is being weighed and measured in Manitoba to-day. As it is now, they use bags, or, in some cases, they have weighing machines accepted by both parties interested, who feel that they can trust each other's honesty. This machine is much better than any I have seen yet. But to humor the whim of an officer who, only a few months ago was brought in from outside and placed over the heads of men who, by their experience, are better qualified to give an opinion, this enormous trade throughout Manitoba and the North-west Territories must be left at the mercy of any dishonest men. I speak with some warmth, Mr. Speaker, but I do so because nothing else seems to stir the Minister of Inland Revenue to a sense of what is due to the public. If we were satisfied with flails and reaping hooks and cradles, I suppose we would come up to his ideas of how farming ought to be conducted. I call the attention of the Prime Minister (Rt. Hon. Sir Wilfrid Laurier) to this matter, and I expect him to see to it that things shall not be left in such a position that members from Manitoba and the North-west Territories must rise and complain, as we justly complain, of this gross neglect on the part of the Minister of Inland Revenue.

Mr. W. J. ROCHE (Marquette). This is a question that affects a very large portion of the community of the North-west who are engaged in threshing, and have a very great deal of money invested in this line of business. And when I refer to threshers, I do not wish to leave the impression that I refer to only a class of people who follow the avocation of threshing. There is a very large class of farmers who are interested in threshing and own threshing machines, and to whom the settlement of this question is as important as to those who own threshing machines and are not farmers. I believe you cannot purchase a modern machine for less than $2,500 or $3,000. This suggests the greatness of the amount invested in all the machines necessary to do the threshing in that great western country, which grew over one hundred millions of bushels of grain last year. Now many of the farmers have to mortgage their farms in order to purchase these machines, those of them who are owners of land. They have interest to pay on this money which they borrow, they have many risks to run, such as the drawbacks incident to bad weather; they have to pay their hands oftentimes during this bad weather. They meet with accidents sometimes and have to pay out a good deal of money for repairs. Therefore the interest of the threshers is a very material interest, and is well worthy of consideration at the hands of the head of the department under whose care such matters as this may come. They have to wait for months, and sometimes a year or more for the money which is coming to them for the grain which they thresh. When we take into consideration the drawbacks incident to their vocation, I say it is an impossibility for the Minister of Inland revenue to do too much towards meeting their wishes, insofar as no dissatisfaction is created in the other party to the contract.

Now, when we look at this Act as it reads at the present time, we find it says :

> Every person who uses or who has in his possession for use in trade any weight, measure, scale, balance, steel-yard or weighing machine which is false or unjust——

That is which has not the government stamp on it.

> —shall incur a penalty not exceeding $25 and not less than $10 ; and in the case of a subsequent offence, of $50. And any contract, bargain, sale or dealing made by the same shall be void, and the weight, measure, scale, balance, steel-yard or weighing machine shall be forfeited and shall be forthwith seized as being so forfeited.

Now, here we have a machine insisted on by the department which at the present time the threshers cannot use, they could not get through with their threshing and comply with the Act if they had such a machine. It would be impossible to do it in the one season of the year. Therefore the threshers who are engaged in that occupation at the present time, are doing so illegally, so far as the standard measure is concerned. As a matter of fact they use a weighing machine or a bagger, which, in the majority of cases is agreed upon by both parties. But there are a class of people who may object to it, and take advantage of that Act and beat the thresher out of his just dues, and it is to meet this class that legislation is desired from the Minister of Inland Revenue.

Last year I referred to the fact that decisions had been given by the courts wherein the farmers have been allowed to go scot free in refusing to pay their threshers. That is the class I have just referred to, and it is to protect them from that class that the threshers desire this legislation. This machine that has been referred to by my hon. friend from Macdonald would be, I think, mutually agreeable both to the farmer and to the thresher. The Minister of Inland Revenue said last year that some one had invented a machine and would bring it to the department, and he thought it would be acceptable and would be adopted universally. I am not aware that that machine has been universally adopted, I do not think it has been. But the machine that has been brought to the department, the machine which the hon. member has referred to, is one that I think would satisfy the farmer as well as the thresher. It has been accepted by an officer of the department, and then refused by the head of the department. I attended a meeting of the Thresher's Union in my town last fall, at which this matter was discussed, and where their grievances were laid before the farmers. Every person there, farmer as well as thresher, was convinced that there was just cause of complaint on the part of the threshers, and a grievance existed which ought to be remedied by the Department of Inland Revenue. I do not know that it is necessary for me to go into the discussion at any length just now, before these papers are brought down. But I would urge upon the Minister of Inland Revenue the necessity for adopting some machine that would be mutually agreeable to the farmer and the thresher, in compliance with the promise he made last session.

Some hon. MEMBERS. Six o'clock.

At six o'clock, House took recess.

After Recess.

House resumed at eight o'clock.

PRIVATE BILLS.

ATLANTIC AND LAKE SUPERIOR RAILWAY COMPANY.

On the Order for :

> Second reading of Bill (No. 36) respecting the Atlantic and Lake Superior Railway Company. —Mr. Ball.

Mr. G. BALL (Nicolet). Mr. Speaker, I would ask the House to allow this Bill to stand, for the reason which I will give. The parties interested in this Bill are absent. They were not aware that the rule of the House has been changed, and that the Bill would be discussed upon the second reading instead of in the Railway Committee. My hon. friend from Bonaventure (Mr. Marcil) took the opportunity the other day of proposing an amendment to the second reading of the Bill. He has just told me that he has a speech prepared.

Mr. DEPUTY SPEAKER. The hon. member (Mr. Ball) is not quite in order. There is nothing before the House.

Mr. BALL. I would ask the House to allow the Bill to stand on account of the interested parties not being present. They were preparing to be at the committee, and they just got the news that the Bill would be discussed in this House instead of before the Railway Commitee.

Order allowed to stand.

SECOND READINGS.

Bill (No. 43) to incorporate the Regina and Hudson's Bay Railway Company.—Mr. Scott.

Bill (No. 50) respecting the British Columbia Southern Railway.—Mr. Morrison.

Bill (No. 51) to incorporate the North-west Bank of Canada.—Mr. McCreary.

INQUIRY FOR RETURNS.

Mr. F. D. MONK (Jacques Cartier). Mr. Speaker, before the Orders of the Day are proceeded with, I would like to remind the hon. Minister of Finance (Hon. Mr. Fielding) that there are certain papers which were asked for some time ago and which have not been brought down yet. There are the papers relating to the colonial conference which have been promised to be laid on the Table and which have not been laid on the Table yet. There are the papers relating to the Bond-Hay treaty which have been promised. I believe the order was issued for these papers and they have not been brought down yet. There are the papers relating to the Alaskan boundary. I will send a memorandum over to the hon. Minister of Finance if he will allow me. I think it would be desirable that we should have these papers as soon as possible.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE (Hon. W. S. Fielding). Some of the papers are in course of preparation, but whether all are covered by the arrangements I am not quite sure. I will see that the attention of the right hon. Prime Minister (Sir Wilfrid Laurier) is called to it.

TRANSPORTATION COMMISSION AND TARIFF INQUIRY.

Mr. F. D. MONK (Jacques Cartier). Mr. Speaker, before you proceed with the Orders of the Day. I would like to ask the government if we may take as authoritative the statements which have been reproduced in the Montreal papers of the announcements in the city of Montreal by my hon. friend the Minister of Marine and Fisheries (Hon. Mr. Préfontaine). At a meeting held in the city of Montreal a day or two ago my hon. friend announced as follows. I am quoting from the Montreal 'Herald':—

> Minister of Marine speaks of the government's plans.
>
> Hon. Raymond Préfontaine announces the make-up of the Railway Commission and outlines work of the cabinet.
>
> Railway Commision to be composed of Sir Wm. Van Horne, president; Messrs Geo. Bertram, Toronto, H. Kennedy of Quebec, Transporation Commissioners; and Messrs. J. X. Perrault and Bell, secretaries.
>
> Possibility of a committee on tariff revision.
>
> The Atlantic port of the Grand Trunk Pacific to be on Canadian soil.
>
> St. James election to be held in May.
>
> End of session in July.

These are the announcements summarized, as the government organ has them summarized in its issue of yesterday. The announcement in regard to the composition of the railway commission is of some importance, Mr. Speaker, and I feel justified in asking the government if the announcement is really the pronunciamento of the government upon the composition of the commission? Speaking of a matter, perhaps of more importance, that is the revision of the tariff, the hon. Minister said thus:—

> Passing for a few moments to the tariff the minister said that the government was determined to do justice to all, and to give due consideration to all interests, industrial, commercial and agricultural. If it found that a revision of the tariff was necessary or that legitimate industries required protection, the right thing would be done.
>
> If it appeared that full justice could not be done during the session, the government might name a committee from the cabinet to secure the opinion of the country, as was done by the present ministry in 1897. . . It was proposed to have a second transcontinental line from the Atlantic to the Pacific, and entirely on Canadian soil. To this enterprise the government would no doubt grant a measure of assistance, in keeping with prudence and wisdom.

I think it is right and proper, Mr. Speaker, that we should ask the government, if these announcements which are of very great importance are really a declaration of the government's policy. If they be, then this House would be entitled to have known it at an earlier date. We should like to know if it is determined upon that the composition of this commission is as was stated by the hon. minister (Hon. Mr. Préfontaine). We should be informed also as to whether it is certain that the Grand Trunk Pacific will have its Atlantic port on Canadian soil; if the St. James election is to be held in May next, and if the prophetic vision of the minister as to the end of the session in July has any real foundation. We should know whether or not all these things form part of the government programme.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE (Hon. W. S. Fielding). I am afraid I shall have to repeat the observation I made on a previous occasion: That announcements not made in that valuable publication known as the 'Canada Gazette' are not to be taken as entirely authorized. I am unable to accept responsibility for statements appearing in a newspaper however worthy and reputable that newspaper may be. I agree with my hon. friend (Mr. Monk) that when announcements of an official character are to be made on these important subjects it will be proper that they should be made in the House of Commons, and I am quite satisfied that they will be so made.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN (Halifax). At the same time, I think that the Minister of Marine and Fisheries who is at present in the House, ought be in a position to state to the House whether or not these remarks as reported in a reputable journal supporting the government have really been made by the Minister of Marine and Fisheries. I do not think it is asking too much from this side of the House to request some statement as to whether or not these views have been expressed by a minister of the Crown, and whether the report is correct. It is quite true that various announcements of a certain character are made in the 'Canada Gazette,' but still announcements are sometimes made by ministers of the Crown at public gatherings and it would be very interesting indeed to know whether this announcement has been made or whether it is a complete forgery and misstatement which is contained in this journal. If these announcements have been made by a minister of the Crown, then it is right for us to know whether or not the government undertakes the responsibility for them—I do not see how it could avoid taking responsibility for them. If it does take responsibility for them, how does it happen that announcements of this character during a session of parliament are made by a minister of the Crown, not from his place in the House of Commons but are made by him at a gathering of this sort. I do not think that my hon. friend the Minister of Finance has quite discharged his duty towards the House and the country in stating what he has stated in regard to this matter.

Mr. BENNETT. May I ask the Minister of Finance: Whether the statements which were credited by the premier to the ex-Minister of Public Works (Hon. Mr. Tarte) appeared in the 'Canada Gazette' or in the newspapers ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. I really do not remember, I was absent from the country at the time.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES (Hon. Raymond Préfontaine). I have no hesitation whatever in giving the explanations that are required. I must state first, that the newspaper which has been cited has drawn conclusions from ordinary expressions that any public man would make under the circumstances. I was present at that meeting of the Laurier club in Maisonneuve division last Monday night and as a public man I said there, that from reviewing the political situation, I said that the program of the government as laid down in the speech from the Throne was a programme which attracted the attention of the people not only of Maisonneuve but all over the Dominion. Commenting on the different items mentioned in the speech from the Throne, I made allusion of course to the question of transportation and I said, this question having been referred to, that it having been decided that the question would be referred to a commission this proposition seemed to have received the approbation not only of the friends of the government, but of the opposition; that the question deserved to be studied and that in face of the names that had been suggested there was every guarantee that this question would be studied with due care and due consideration. I mentioned the names that had been published in the papers as having been suggested to be members of that commission. I never went any further than that. I added that it might be found necessary to have the commission composed of five instead of three. I never mentioned and it could not be inferred, that the commission had been appointed; that the names of the commissioners had been considered by the cabinet. I never said anything of the sort, and people who listened to me understood what I said perfectly well.

Now as regards the tariff, what did I say? I repeated exactly what I said during my election : That the government was disposed to do justice to every class of the community—I never said anything else—that if there were remedies to be applied, or if certain things had to be done towards certain industries I had no doubt that the government of the country would do what was right towards these industries. I never went any further than that.

Mr. MONK. Then, if my hon. friend (Hon. Mr. Préfontaine) will allow me, he did not state that a committee of the cabinet would be named to investigate the just claims of those who asked for a revision of the tariff.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. I said that whatever remedy would be applied, if it was not found satisfactory, it might be found possible for the government to proceed in the same way as they proceeded in 1897, and I said that without making any announcement on my responsibility or on the responsibility of the government. I was not authorized to do so. It could not be inferred from what I said that it was the laid down programme of the government to do one thing or the other. I was very guarded in everything I said and I do not understand how my hon. friend on the other side should take offence at anything I have said or the way I have said it.

Mr. MONK. I take no offence at all.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. As regards the trans-continental line, I repeated generalities. I said that everybody admitted that a second transcontinental line was necessary. Everybody seemed to have that opinion and of course if a transcontinental line was built it stood to reason the government would have to consider the claims of any company that would construct that line in the same liberal way as other lines had been constructed in the past. I did not go any further than these announcements, and these announcements were no secrets. They were known all over the country since the speech from the Throne was delivered at the opening of this session, and I do not see that there is any reason for making such a fuss about them.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). The announcement in the Montreal 'Herald' is, that the hon. gentleman made a ringing speech.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. I did.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). The hon. gentleman's speech to-night does not seem to have very much ring about it. Perhaps he can suggest to the House what portion of his explanation may be regarded as ringing; I did not notice it. This paper is either stating a fact or it is not. It states that it was announced by the hon. gentleman that Sir William Van Horne, president, and Messrs. John Bertram of Toronto and H. Kennedy of Quebec were to form this commission. The hon. gentleman either announced that or he did not.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. If the hon. leader of the opposition will allow me, I did not state anything else than what I have stated just now. I stated that from the reports in the papers the following names had been mentioned, and that if these gentlemen were to be the commission, I supposed they would offer a guarantee to the people of Canada so as to inspire confidence.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). The report is not that.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. Of course, I was not the reporter.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). This is a newspaper which is supporting the hon. gentleman—at least, it is supporting him now, and I thought probably it would have a correct version of what he said. It does not put it as the hon. gentleman does. It says that the commission is to be composed of these gentlemen. I gather from the hon. gentleman that he made no such statement—that the version given by this newspaper is incorrect in that regard.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. It may be an error in translation.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). An error in translation—yes. The hon. gentleman does, however, make one very important announcement to-night which I think might well have been made to parliament in the speech from the Throne. He not only announced in Montreal, but he announces here to-night, that the government does propose to give assistance to another transcontinental railway. I understood the hon. gentleman to say that distinctly to-night.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. I must say it in French.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). The hon. gentleman referred to other railways that have been built across the continent, and he stated in my hearing, as 'Hansard' tomorrow will show, that a transcontinental road is to receive the same assistance as other railways have received in the past.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. Due consideration.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). No, the same assistance. Whatever the hon. gentleman intended to say, I know what he did say, and that is that the government had come to a conclusion with regard to that.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. Due consideration.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). My hon. friend the Postmaster General is coming to the assistance of the Minister of Marine and Fisheries, and is interpolating a phrase which was not used by that hon. gentleman at all.

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. (Hon. Sir William Mulock). I think the hon. gentleman is in error. He is using an expression which I did not hear the Minister of Marine and Fisheries use. I did not hear him say that the government intended to extend the same liberal consideration to the new road as had been extended to other roads. I heard him make no such statement.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). I regret that the hearing of the hon. Postmaster General is so defective.

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. I regret that my hon. friend's understanding is so defective.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). That may be, but my hearing is better than the Postmaster General's evidently.

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. I prefer understanding.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). I think it is a somewhat serious matter, that an announcement of this kind should have been made by the Minister of Marine and Fisheries in Montreal, and repeated here to-night, as it has been in the presence of this House, while no announcement in the usual form has been made to parliament by the government. I would ask the Minister of Finance, in view of what the Minister of Marine and Fisheries has stated, whether or not the government is able to announce to the House any policy with regard to assistance to a transcontinental line. I think the House is entitled to that after the statement which has appeared in the public press, and after that statement has been corroborated as it has been to-night in the presence of the House by the Minister of Marine and Fisheries.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. I am unable to agree with my hon. friend that this is the precise moment for announcing policies on great questions, which are not at the moment before the House. The question is one of great importance, and when the government have prepared a policy on that question, they will not fail to communicate it to the House in the proper way.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). The fact that it is important is a very good reason why it should not be announced to the country in this indirect manner.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. My hon. friend the Minister of Marine and Fisheries says it was not announced.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). We will not quarrel about the words. I certainly understood them as stated by the Minister of Marine and Fisheries, that he announced to this great gathering in Montreal that a transcontinental line now proposed to be built would receive assistance of the same character as that which had been extended to similar enterprises in the past. You cannot get anything more nor less out of the announcement than that.

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. When my hon. friend reads to-morrow's 'Hansard,' I think he will find—and I know he desires to be fair—that the Minister of Marine and Fisheries did not use the word he says he did. He has twice said that the Minister of Marine and Fisheries alleged that the government would extend assistance. I say that the Minister of Marine and Fisheries did not, in my hearing use the word assistance.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). I will not quarrel with my hon. friend the Postmaster General about the exact word—whether it is aid or assistance or some synonymous word; but the impression which the hon. gentleman gave to my mind—and I am sure he gave the same impression to every man in this House—was that he had announced at this meeting in Montreal that the government had determined on some measure of assistance to a transcontinental line. I do not pretend to be able to quote the exact language he used, but I am perfectly sure of the exact impression he conveyed to my mind and to the mind of every hon. gentleman in this House who heard him.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS (Hon. James Sutherland). As the hon. gentleman challenges every member of this House, I may say that I was listening most attentively to the remarks of the hon. Minister of Marine and Fisheries, and they made no such impression on my mind, nor do I think they did on the minds of the majority of this House.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). What did the hon. Minister of Public Works understand the hon. Minister of Marine and Fisheries to say ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS I understood him to say that he thought a transcontinental line was desirable and that it was receiving the consideration of the government. That was all I understood him to say. I do not believe he used the word assistance or aid. However, it is a matter of impression. I am not particular as to the words, but, as the hon. leader of the opposition has challenged the House, I beg to state most candidly that the words made no such impression on my mind.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). I do not know whether the hon. Minister of Public Works heard the hon. Minister of Marine and Fisheries when he compared the merits of this transcontinental line with the merits of the lines built across the continent in the past, and I do not know whether he gathered from that portion of his remarks the impression that the government intended to give assistance. For my part, I could not construe his language in any other way. I could only construe it in the same sense as the words of the Minister of Marine and Fisheries, as reported in this paper.

> To this enterprise the government would no doubt grant a measure of assistance in keeping with prudence and wisdom.

Now, I do not understand the Minister of Marine and Fisheries, in making his statement here to-night, to depart in any way from his statement in Montreal, as reported in that paper.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES (Hon. J. Raymond Préfontaine). (Translation.) I am going to speak French, and in that way, I may possibly succeed in making my statement clearer and more explicit.

Let me read from 'La Patrie' of March 31, a report of the statement I made at the meeting referred to. Here are the very words I used upon that occasion, according to that report, and I am going to read them to the House in order to avoid any further misunderstanding on the matter, because, after all, it is only a tempest in a tea-pot. Referring to the new transcontinental line, I spoke as follows :—

> A new transcontinental line running from the Pacific to the Atlantic, for the forwarding of the grain and other products of the west through all-Canadian channels, and by the shortest way, under Canadian control. Under such circumstances, the duty of the government is plain. They should aid in the carrying out of that undertaking to the best of their ability, with prudence and caution.

Mr. MONK. (Translation.) Is that a correct report ?

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. (Translation.) Pretty nearly so.

Mr. MONK. (Translation.) That is just what we wished to ascertain.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. (Translation.) So much the better, then, if the hon. gentlemen opposite are satisfied with my explanation. These are the very words I used on that occasion and I do not see there was much wrong in speaking as I did. As to the question of establishing a Commission—not a company, as 'Le Journal' styles it—but a Commission on transportation, let me quote again from 'La Patrie.'

The name of Sir William Van Horne has been spoken of——

Now, Mr. Chairman, allow me to call your attention to the words 'spoken of.' As you see, I am not responsible for that piece of news, and I was merely repeating a current rumour in the country.

—the name of Sir William Van Horne has been mentioned as president of that commission, together with the names of Mr. John Bertram, of Toronto, and Mr. H. Kennedy, of Quebec, as assistants, and those of Mr. J. X. Perrault, of Montreal, and Ball, of Winnipeg, as secretaries.

Mr. MONET. (Translation.) Is that the opinion of the government?

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. (Translation.) That is altogether out of the question, and I once more draw your attention, Mr. Chairman, to the words 'spoken of' clearly. I was repeating what had been reported by the newspapers which had referred to the gentlemen I just referred to as about to be appointed members of that Commission. I do not see the use of quibbling in such matters.

As to what I said in connection with the prorogation as going to take place about the end of July, I take the liberty of quoting again from the report of 'La Patrie.'

(Translation.) All the forecasts point to an era of prosperity and progress. In the House of Commons, they are railroading parliamentary business. The opposition members, so far, have hardly indulged in any criticism worth mentioning and we are in hopes that, before the month of July next, the whole programme, as announced in the speech from the Throne, will have been disposed of.

This is, no doubt, the statement to which the hon. gentlemen opposite have taken exception, and yet, I had no more idea of wounding their feelings than the man in the moon. I am, indeed, very sorry to have offended my hon. friends opposite, when stating that, so far, they had not yet addressed themselves seriously to the task of criticising the government programme.

At all events, what I said in Montreal, I stated with a full knowledge of the facts, after having carefully weighed my words.

There is, then, in a nutshell, the whole matter; and the House now may realize that there is nothing in what I said that was calculated to be offensive to anybody.

Mr. MONK (Jacques Cartier). (Translation.) Let the hon. gentleman, I pray, keep cool and be serious in such matters. I want the minister to inform us whether it is a fact, as reported by the press, that he stated at the meeting referred to that there would be a readjustment of the tariff, if necessary, and that such readjustment would be made by a committee of the government, as was done in 1897. I want him to tell us whether that report is correct. We have, surely, the right to be informed whether the statement made by a member of the government is correct, chiefly in view of the fact that such statement was reported in the same way by all the French and English papers of Montreal. And when we ask the hon. gentleman to tell us whether in making that statement he was the echo of the government, he shelters himself behind the French language and refuses to give us a direct answer, but resorts to quibbles and jokes.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. (Translation.) Let the hon. gentlemen opposite also keep cool. Here is the statement referred to, as reported in 'La Patrie':

Should we find it impossible to do justice to all concerned, during this session, some means might be devised, as in 1897, whereby a subcommittee of the Privy Council would be appointed to hold an investigation into the complaints of manufacturers and workingmen.

Mr. MONK. (Translation.) Is that a correct report?

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. (Translation.) It is absolutely correct, but, I ask again, is there anything objectionable in that statement?

Mr. MONK. (Translation.) That is not the question; all we want to know is whether that report is correct or not.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. (Translation.) Absolutely correct. What do you find as being objectionable in that statement?

Mr. MONK. (Translation.) That is not in question; the question is this: is the report correct?

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. (Translation.) I repeat again, the statement is absolutely correct. I said that we could proceed in the same way as in 1897. If the hon. gentlemen are not satisfied that I have told the truth and that I have said something unreasonable, I cannot help it. I quite understand that the hon. gentlemen feel rather disappointed, but, again, I cannot help it.

Mr. W. H. BENNETT (East Simcoe). A short time ago, the attention of the House was called to the fact that the hon. Minister of Railways and Canals had committed the government, by an official utterance, to the policy of aiding the construction of a transcontinental line. It is quite true that when the ex-Minister of Public Works (Hon. Mr. Tarte) read the interview attributed to the Minister of Railways and Canals, that hon. gentleman promptly repudiated it. What then happened ? No sooner was the denial of the hon. minister published than the correspondent who had written up that interview, declared over his own name in the newspaper in which it appeared, that the Minister of Railways and Canals had given him the interview reported. From that day until this, the hon. minister has not dared to rise in his place and deny the statement of the reporter. What followed ? The right hon. the First Minister simply ignored the action of the Minister of Railways and Canals, although the statement made by him was one of an official nature and of great moment to the country. But that was not the only case of the kind. The hon. Postmaster General (Sir William Mulock) went to Toronto a week ago and there made a strong statement which is reported in the Toronto 'Globe' of March the 24th, with reference to the same matter as that concerning which the hon. Minister of Marine and Fisheries (Mr. Préfontaine) gave an interview in Montreal. It is true, if we are to judge by the report of the latter interview, that the Minister of Marine and Fisheries was more explicit, frank and plain-speaking than the Postmaster General. But none the less the Postmaster General led his audience in Toronto to believe this government stood pledged to aid some railway—he did not particularize it by its name—that was to be built from one ocean to the other. Let me read what the hon. Postmaster General is reported to have said :

> We have other railways built partly with public and partly with private moneys, but owned by private corporations, not by the state. Public opinion to-day appears to be more or less against subsidizing railways. Is there any prospect of capitalists out of their own capital alone building a line over the thousand miles of country to which I have alluded, which for many a year will fail to supply any reasonable return on the capital invested ? Capitalists are not philanthropists, but expect a return upon their investments. Shall we proceed to subsidize the various railways that are now proposing to extend their lines to Manitoba. . . . .
>
> Or shall we fold our arms, shrink from discharging our proper responsibilities and let the country drift ?
>
> There is the third, a more broad minded, progressive, enterprising and patriotic section of the people, and 'Onward Canada' party in effect, who, recognizing the unparalleled progress our country is making to-day, demand that instead of checking the movement by inaction we should take occasion by the hand and wisely and masterfully grapple with, and if possible successfully solve, the problems growing out of Canada's great and unprecedented development. One of the most serious of these problems is the railway question to which I have alluded.

What other inference can we draw than that the Postmaster General intended to impress his hearers with the belief that the government was going to assist one or more of these railway schemes now in contemplation.

Mr. BENNETT.

Mr. DEPUTY SPEAKER. Does the hon. gentleman intend to discuss this matter much further ? He is not in order.

Mr. BENNETT. I was about through, and as this discussion has been proceeding on the same lines, it seems to me that I am justified in making these references. However, if necessary I shall move the adjournment before I close. It must be clear to everyone that both the Postmaster General in Toronto and the Minister of Marine in Montreal intended to give fair notice to the Canadian public that subsidies would be granted by this government to some of these lines of railway. The only difference between the two is that the Postmaster General has perhaps shown a little more tact than did his colleague the Minister of Marine. In trying to explain away his interview, the hon. Minister of Marine said he was simply repeating the current gossip of the newspapers regarding the Transportation Commission. Well, it has no doubt been frequently reported in the public press that Sir William Van Horne was to be a member of the commission, but I challenge the hon. minister to produce a single newspaper which has given in that connection the name of Mr. John Bertram or Mr. Harold Kennedy.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. You have not read the papers.

Mr. BENNETT. I challenge the hon. gentleman to produce a single newspaper which gave, before this interview, the names of those gentlemen in that connection. As regards changes in the tariff, it is pretty evident that the hon. Minister of Marine and Fisheries, made a slip and an unguarded statement. The hon. Minister of Finance has endeavoured to side track the question by stating that anything not official is not to be charged to the government as a whole, that the government are not responsible for anything that appears in the press, except in the official publication of Canada—the Official Gazette. But the hon. Minister of Finance knows very well that the reason which his right hon. leader gave for dismissing the ex-Minister of Public Works (Hon. Mr. Tarte) from the cabinet was that he had read the reports which appeared in the different newspapers from time to time of the utterances of his ex-colleague. It will not do for the Minister of Finance to treat the matter in the cavalier way he has done. The fact of the matter is that the Minister of Marine and Fisheries was unguarded in what he said in Montreal the other night. He was among his friends, and he wished to show his friends that he knew something of the inner cabinet secrets—as no doubt he does—and he wished to show the other ministers too, probably, that he had leave and license to take more rope than has been allowed to the ex-Minister of Public Works (Hon. Mr. Tarte). That he has taken plenty is apparent, and that he has not hanged himself is also apparent. The cabinet cannot afford to dispense with the services of the Minister of Marine and Fisheries, and he is free to say what he will where he will. I will move the adjournment of the House.

Mr. A. E. KEMP (East Toronto). I would like to ask the hon. Minister of Finance a question. The report of the speech of the Minister of Marine and Fisheries in the Montreal 'Herald'—and I am informed that practically the same report appears in the French papers—says :

> If it is found that a revision of the tariff was necessary or that legitimate industries required protection, the right thing would be done. If it appeared that full justice could not be done during the session, the government might name a committee from the cabinet to secure the opinion of the country as was done by the present ministry in 1897.

I would like to ask the Minister of Finance whether this is the policy of the government or not ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE (Hon. W. S. Fielding). The policy of the government in tariff matters is usually announced in the budget speech, and I do not feel at liberty to make any announcement in advance of that.

Mr. KEMP. Then the Minister of Marine and Fisheries had no authority for making that statement.

Mr. T. S. SPROULE (East Grey). I extremely regret that the government have so far departed from the custom of that great type of parliaments and governments, the British parliament and the British cabinet, in making its announcements to the world. There are two channels through which announcements usually come, and one of these is by speeches made by prominent ministers at great public functions, at which they practically declare their policy to the world, and that announcement is regarded as quite as authoritative as though made on the floors of parliament. Now, if we believe the report to be correct, the Minister of Marine and Fisheries in this case did exactly what an English cabinet minister would do. And one great reason why we were justified in taking that as an official announcement of the government, is the fact that for several days, although that specific statement was made in a prominent daily paper in the great city of Montreal, a daily paper that was friendly to the present government, the hon. minister did not think it worth while to deny it or say that it was an incorrect version of his statement, until he was challenged here in the House. And now that that is done he takes shelter under the plea of an incorrect report. The whole public, in the meantime had come to the conclusion that the minister's statement was an official announcement of the government. I say it is very regrettable that the present government have so far departed from the well-understood methods that obtain in Great Britain, and that they tell the people of the country that the only thing we can believe with regard to this cabinet is what appears in the 'Canada Gazette' unless the statement is made by the Minister of Finance or the First Minister on the floor of the parliament. I am afraid that is rather discrediting the personnel of the cabinet and the cabinet as a whole, if we are not free to take the announcement of a prominent minister at a prominent function as indicating the policy which the government intend to follow.

TREATMENT OF IMMIGRANTS.

Mr. A. W. PUTTEE (Winnipeg). I wish to bring to the attention of the House and of the government a matter which I think is of some urgency. It is in connection with the immense movement now taking place, of settlers from across the ocean and across this continent to our North-west. It is a matter of gratification to us all, and more especially to those of us who come from the North-west, that the settlers now coming in there by thousands are practically all British. It seems that circumstances have brought about a change which even our own officials could not bring about. On Saturday last, there were no less than four ships discharging immigrants at the port of Halifax, and, during the next few hours eight special trains started across this continent to the North-west. They passed through and by Ottawa Monday last. I took occasion to devote the greater part of that day to seeing and questioning these immigrants and ascertaining what accommodation was being provided for their transport across this country. The conditions which they were subjected to were simply scandalous. Not only did I see this myself, but I may tell the Acting Minister of the Interior (Hon. Sir William Mulock), agents of whose departments are on the trains, that from communication with those agents, I believe they are aware of the facts, and are prepared to report that the treatment and the accommodation provided are simply not decent. On one train especially, that was here Monday, a train composed of eleven cars, there was not more than one car that was fit to travel in for twenty-four hours continuously. The other cars were borrowed from the Grand Trunk and the Intercolonial. The worst, unfortunately, were government cars, borrowed from the Intercolonial Railway. I am not seeking to criticise or find fault with the transportation companies. This is a public matter, altogether public. These cars were simply short trip day coaches, coaches with fixed, narrow seats, with no berth below and no berths at the top, without even so much as parcel racks. Passengers here were complaining very much. They told me that the aisles even had to be used the previous nights for sleeping, the seats not being movable at all. There was only one car on one of these trains where water was obtainable. I was so informed, and I believe it, for, reaching here where water was obtainable, the passengers proceeded to have a good wash. And the lavatory conveniences were used indiscriminately by male and female. This is not common decency. These people are a very superior class, compared with what our immigration has been at times. They are people who have come from good homes. They are not all young men ; there are families and a large proportion of women among them. And I say it is a reflection on our country and on our methods that they should be carried across the country in this style. When they left Halifax they had before them four, five or six days' travel. When they reached here they had been on the trains nearly two days, and they had nearly four days still ahead of them.

Now some remedy should be applied, some way should be found by which the immigrants that are coming to this country may be properly transported. Yesterday 2,000 people sailed from Liverpool, and the number is likely to be increased. The railway company may say that they have not rolling stock sufficient to convey them. No matter what the explanation is, the thing must be remedied. Although the company are transporting them across this country, the company is not responsible for their coming here, they are induced to come here by the representatives of this government. They were told that travelling in this country is far more easy, far more safe and comfortable, and far more luxurious than in their own country, and on this information they do not provide as they otherwise would for their journey. It is not until they get here that they find that this state of affairs exists. Now I am not prepared to take any reason as being final that provides for a continuance of this state of affairs. It is not sufficient to say that they are settlers, that they are being transported across this continent at a very low rate indeed. That may be, but at the same time it does not meet the case. The Immigration Department have officers on those trains who go along with the immigrants, with the idea, I presume, of obviating any difficulties they may meet with. I can understand that possibly the company could not be expected to have sufficient rolling stock on hand, and the probability is that they will not have next week, nor during the whole of the season. Now there is a tremendous immigration coming in this year. All the steamships sailing from Liverpool are practically booked up now away into the season, and if this trouble continues it means sending back to the old country the very worst reports. It means unfavourable criticism, it means dissatisfaction, it means demoralization, and is one of the worst things that could happen to people who have left their homes for this new country. Now in bringing this matter up, of course I have no purpose of finding any fault with the government, or with the company, but I do insist for the sake of these immigrants, for the sake of our own reputation, for the sake of that western country where they are going to settle, that something be done immediately to provide for their transportation and to obviate a repetition of these difficulties.

The POSTMASTER GENERAL (Hon. Sir Wm. Mulock). With reference to the remarks made by the hon. member for Winnipeg (Mr. Puttee) as to the defective arrangements for the transportation of immigrants arriving in this country for the North-west, I think the House will agree that that hon. gentleman has rendered a public service in drawing the attention of parliament and the government to the condition of affairs which he describes. It will be the duty of the government to use all means within its power to correct any abuses of this nature. We can understand that railways may have unexpected difficulties when confronted with such a large demand upon their rolling stock as is the case at the present time, owing to the increased volume of immigration, greater than the country has ever witnessed heretofore. Nevertheless I agree with my hon. friend that we must not accept excuses, but must bring every possible pressure to bear in order that the transportation should be creditable and suitable to the service required.

Mr. R. H. POPE (Compton). I am sure we all agree with the hon. member for Winnipeg (Mr. Puttee) in his effort to have the transportation facilities as perfect as possible for these newcomers from the other side. But that subject is one that has been engrafted into this discussion, and I think it is well that we return to the subject under which this adjournment was moved. It appears to me, Mr. Speaker, that the ministers from the province of Quebec, the ex-Minister and the present Minister of Marine and Fisheries, are somewhat in the position of the parrot, they talk too much and they get into trouble. Of course we might be asked to excuse the Minister of Marine and Fisheries, owing to the fact that he is young in the business and has not been properly trained. I would advise the First Minister to create a kindergarten of some sort where these ministers of his can be trained, in which some of the ambitious young men who are sitting behind the First Minister and who no doubt are looking forward to enjoying at an early day a front seat, with the salaries of a cabinet minister, may be put to school, and be properly trained, so that when they do rise to that position and are honoured by an invitation to a seat in front, this country may not be disturbed and excited, and will be able to judge from the public utterances of the cabinet ministers that he has a right to say what he did say. Now, Sir, I have been interested in the discussion that has taken place at various times in this House, and have taken some little interest during the last six or seven years in the welfare of hon. gentlemen opposite. I must say that I do not blame the Minister of Marine and Fisheries to the same extent that some hon. gentlemen on this side of the House might be inclined to do. In the first place he is young, and tender, and unsophisticated, therefore, I think we ought to look upon his faults with some leniency, and perhaps he will do better. Perhaps this will be his most serious violation of the great constitution of this country, because it is a violation of the constitution of Canada for any minister to make too pronounced a statement upon a public question. We see now sitting lonely opposite us one of the greatest leaders of the Liberal party since 1896, who also fell into this miserable trap of speaking too previously. Now he sits alone over there, because he violated the constitution of Canada, and jeopardized this whole confederation. And now we have a juvenile coming along who has succeeded him, and who is doing the same thing. Now, Sir, we see an old trained politician, a man who has been many years a member of this House and a member of this cabinet since its formation, a man who has recently received title and honour from his Sovereign, and as I look at the 'Globe' newspaper and find the utterances of the Postmaster General at that meeting in which he knew he was to be followed by one of these parrot gentlemen from the province of Quebec, I can understand that he did feel jealous, and he says now: 'I know that in days gone by I have been forestalled in this province by the ex-Minister of Public Works, who has cut more ice, so to speak, in my own native province than I have myself; consequently I think it is well that I should avail myself of this opportunity. He says that in the most diplomatic language, of course, but at the same time he intimates that he knows something of the cabinet of Canada. 'I have some appreciation,' he says, 'of the policy of the cabinet of which I am a member, and I will take the opportunity at this banquet of intimating'—I need not repeat what he said, it has been read here this afternoon. But the statement is intimated as plainly as language could do it, having regard for his position as a minister of the Crown with six or seven years of training.

Well, Sir, he spoke there and he laid the foundation for the hon. Minister of Marine and Fisheries to follow. He said: What shall we do? Shall we go backward or shall we go forward? Shall we aid these great transcontinental lines? Some of them have been built, but considering the country through which the new lines have to pass for a thousand miles—the country north of Lake Superior, I presume, he meant—can we expect any man to go and construct a road over that difficult country without assistance? So that it is not surprising that the hon. Minister of Marine and Fisheries at that meeting, where he was surrounded by those gentlemen, who have linked arms with him, and supported by newspapers, which, a short time ago, condemned him as one of those things that were not suitable to be Cabinet ministers, enthused by finding himself surrounded by new converts to his popularity, with all these surroundings and after having partaken of a luxurious dinner should have become possibly a little bit unguarded in his statements. That the hon. gentleman, the juvenile of the Cabinet, should have given utterance in very strong language to the policy of the government is not to be wondered at. We have the 'Globe' of to-night which says of the Transportation Commission:

> It may be taken for granted that Mr. Préfontaine's foreshadowing of the personnel of the transportation commission is authentic, and that it will be composed of Sir Wm. Van Horne, of Montreal; Mr. John Bertram, of Toronto and Mr. Matthew Kennedy, of Quebec.

The Toronto 'Globe' had never heard or any newspaper in Canada had never heard of it until the hon. gentleman broke forth on that unfortunate evening in Montreal. When we know that the hon. Postmaster General could fully appreciate the jeopardy in which he placed himself in Toronto, we can appreciate that the hon. Postmaster General felt anxious that this should be made public before this new man steps in from Quebec, because he said to himself: I have had as much experience as this other man. I have played a small part in a small game; the ex-Minister of Public Works that man whom they would burn in effigy in my province, has come up, notwithstanding all the sacrifices I have made for my native province, he has cut the ground from under my feet; I find another man coming from the province of Quebec and the only safe position for me to take is at least to formulate an idea and endeavour to convey some idea to the gentlemen who are listening to me that I, the Postmaster General of Canada, am in possession of the secrets of the cabinet and that these railway lines are to be subsidized. I do not say that there is anything wrong in a public man saying that great railway lines will or will not be subsidized but, after the severe lesson which has been taught the hon. ex-Minister of Public Works, after he has been without much ceremony practically driven out of the Cabinet on a great principle of the violation of the constitution of Canada, if this is to be the punishment that it is to be meted out to a man of his position and rank in the cabinet, I say, Sir, that the hon. Postmaster General and the hon. Minister of Marine and Fisheries ought to make way for some of those other gentlemen who are in the kindergarten preparing for the portfolios that are waiting for them on the front benches.

Motion (Mr. Bennett) withdrawn.

RAILWAY ACT AMENDMENT.

Mr. WALTER SCOTT (West Assiniboia) moved the second reading of Bill (No. 16) to amend the Railway Act.

Mr. MONK. What is the object of this Bill ?

Mr. SCOTT. Mr. Speaker, it may be sufficient at the present time for me to explain that this Bill is framed to effect an object which was discussed at some length on one of the last days of last session to provide that railways in the prairie country of the North-west shall be properly fire-guarded.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. I understand my hon. friend (Mr. Scott) wishes that the Bill shall go to the Committee on Railways and Canals where we shall have it fully examined.

Motion agreed to, and Bill read the second time.

SUPPLY—BUSINESS OF THE HOUSE.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE (Hon. W. S. Fielding) moved that the House go again into Committee of Supply.

Mr. T. S. SPROULE (East Grey). On our side of the House it was not expected that we would go into Committee of Supply to-night. It was thought that the evening would be taken up with these public Bills, and I may say, so far as I know, that we are not prepared to go on with supply. There are several Bills which we expected would be discussed but which have been allowed to stand.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. In view of the statement of the hon. gentleman, I will withdraw the motion for the House to go into Committee of Supply.

Motion withdrawn.

HOME RULE FOR IRELAND—PERSONAL EXPLANATION.

Mr. SAMUEL HUGHES (North Victoria). I rise to correct a misstatement that appears in the Ottawa Evening 'Journal' and the Ottawa 'Free Press' in relation to some remarks made by the hon. member for Victoria, N.B. (Hon. Mr. Costigan) last night, when some member of the House interrupted that hon. gentleman in his very learned and interesting speech, by interjecting the term 'rats.' The 'Journal' and 'Free Press' credit your humble servant with that interruption. It was not my interruption, and I ask these journals to make the necessary correction.

On motion of the Minister of Finance, House adjourned at 9.20 p.m.

Mr. POPE.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.

THURSDAY, April 2, 1903.

The SPEAKER took the Chair at Three o'clock.

FIRST READINGS.

Bill (No. 75) respecting the Canadian Pacific Railway Company.—Mr. Thompson (Haldimand).

Bill (No. 76) to enable the city of Vancouver to acquire certain lands and interests adjoining Vancouver harbour.—Mr. Macpherson.

SAFETY OF RAILWAY EMPLOYEES.

Mr. SMITH (Vancouver) moved for leave to introduce Bill (No. 77) to promote the safety of employees. He said:—This Bill is similar to the one I introduced last session. Its object is to compel railway companies to use certain safety appliances, such as automatic couplers.

Motion agreed to, and Bill read the first time.

MILITIA PENSION ACT.

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE (Hon. Sir F. W. Borden) moved for leave to introduce Bill (No. 78) to amend the Militia Pension Act. He said:—The object of this Bill is to amend the Pension Act in such a way that members of the civil service who become officers of the permanent force or militia, under the Militia Pension Act, will have their time counted for which they paid into the superannuation fund of the civil service. I may add that this amendment is precisely similar to the provisions of the North-west Mounted Police Pension Act passed last session.

Mr. SPROULE. Would that not be paying them double ?

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE. No.

Motion agreed to, and Bill read the first time.

QUESTIONS.

SCOTCH HILL STATION.

Mr. BELL asked :

1. Has a petition been received by the Department of Railways, through the minister or other official, asking that the station at Scotch Hill be made a booking station ?

2. What action has been taken by the department on the petition, if received ?

The MINISTER OF RAILWAYS AND CANALS (Hon. A. G. Blair). It does not appear that any petition has been received asking that Scotch Hill be made a booking station.

INVERNESS AND RICHMOND RAILROAD SUBSIDY.

Hon. Sir CHARLES HIBBERT TUPPER—by Mr. Taylor—asked :

1. What amount has been paid to the Inverness and Richmond Railway Company, Limited, for subsidy upon the line from Port Hawkesbury to Broad Cove Mines, up to the present time ?

2. What amount, if any, is now owing to the said company in respect of such subsidy ?

The MINISTER OF RAILWAYS AND CANALS (Hon. A. G. Blair) :

1. The sum of $311,375.53 has been paid to the Inverness and Richmond Railway Company, Limited, for subsidy upon the line from Port Hawkesbury to Broad Cove Mines up to the present time.

2. All the subsidy earned has been paid.

LIVES LOST IN RAILWAY ACCIDENTS.

Mr. CLARKE asked :

1. How many accidents involving loss of human life have taken place on the railways of Canada since the first day of October, 1902 ?

2. How many human lives were lost in such accidents, or as a result of such accidents ?

3. Has the government appointed any person, or instructed any of its officials to make a special and rigid inquiry and examination into, and report upon the causes which led to such accidents, including the system by which the traffic of the railways is operated ; the speed the trains were moving when the accidents occurred ; the condition of track and rolling stock ; the hours which the train men, station agents, telegraph operators, and other officials of the companies were on duty, in connection with the movement of the trains to which accidents occurred ; the wages paid employees; the sufficiency and qualification of the staff employed on the trains, and at the stations, telegraph offices, &c. ?

4. If such officer has been appointed, has he made any report to the government ; and if so, is it the intention of the government to lay the report before the House ?

5. Is it the duty of any public official, and if so, of whom, to inquire into and report to the government, upon all railway accidents which occur in the Dominion ?

6. If there is no such official, is it the intention of the government to appoint an officer for such purpose ?

The MINISTER OF RAILWAYS AND CANALS (Hon. A. G. Blair). Last session a return was moved for, I think, by the hon. member for South Lanark (Hon. Mr. Haggart), of the number of accidents which had occurred on the railways during the preceding three years. An effort was made by the department to obtain this information from the various railways, but without complete success, only a partial return being made. We have been promised from time to time that the information would be sent to us, but it has not yet found its way to the department. The question which the hon. gentleman (Mr. Clarke) asks is with respect to accidents occurring since the first October last. I have mentioned the point I first stated in order that the House might be aware that we are endeavouring to procure information extending over a very much longer period. I give the answer to the hon. gentleman's questions so far as the reports of the railways to my department since the first October, 1902 enable me to do so, as follows :

1st. There have been 142 separate and distinct accidents.

2nd. There have been 179 human lives lost in such accidents, of which 38 lost their lives in collisions between trains.

3, 4, 5 and 6. The matter is under consideration, but no action has been taken.

ABOLITION OF TONNAGE DUES ON CANALS.

Mr. SPROULE asked :

In view of the requests of vessel owners and shippers, in the interest of Canadian transportation, is it the intention of the government to abolish the tonnage dues on shipping passing through the canals ?

The PRIME MINISTER (Rt. Hon. Sir Wilfrid Laurier). There is a deputation coming to interview the government on this question. And we deferred consideration of the matter until we have received that deputation.

PROPOSALS FOR TRANSCONTINENTAL LINE.

Mr. MONK asked :

1. Have any definite proposals been made to the government in regard to the building of an additional transcontinental line of railway through Canada ?

2. Will the government lay these proposals before parliament previous to accepting any of them or making any final arrangement in regard to assisting in the construction of any such line ?

3. Is it the intention of the government to make a binding agreement with any company, syndicate, or any person, in regard to the construction of said line, without previously consulting parliament in regard to the same ?

4. From whom have proposals of the kind referred to above been received ?

5. What is the date of such proposals ?

The MINISTER OF RAILWAYS AND CANALS (Hon. A. G. Blair). It is impossible at present to answer any of the questions the hon. gentleman (Mr. Monk) has asked. The House has already been informed that communications, largely verbal, have taken place between the government and the parties on this subject. But it would be premature to make any announcement now. As soon as this can be done in the public interest, parliament will be informed fully.

CATTLE-GUARD COMMISSION.

Mr. LENNOX—by Mr. Léonard—asked :

1. The Minister of Public Works, having on Monday last stated in the House, in reply to questions, that 'there are a number of cattle-guards yet to be tested; and that George Robertson, Esq., M.P.P., is not now engaged in the work.' How is the Railway Cattle-guard Commission now constituted, and who are the members of the commission ?

2. When were the services of Mr. Robertson, as commissioner, dispensed with or discontinued, and for what cause ?

3. Who has been appointed in his place, and when ?

4. How many cattle-guards, or cattle-guard devices, are there yet to be tested ? Who are the persons who invented, or are producing, or offering them; and when and where are the tests to be made ?

5. When was the latest test of cattle-guards made ?

6. Has the Minister of Railways done anything to expedite the termination of the inquiry, and the making of the report ? And if so, what measures, and when were they taken ?

7. Has the minister taken any means to ascertain when the report will be ready; and if so, what has been done ?

8. Was any limit of time fixed for the making of the report ? What was the limit ; and has it been extended, and until what date ?

The MINISTER OF RAILWAYS AND CANALS (Hon. A. G. Blair) :

1. and 2. Mr. F. W. Holt, C.E., remains the sole commissioner in connection with the cattle-guard tests, Mr. Robertson having withdrawn from the commission on the 14th of February. The work was then supposed to be practically concluded, and a report prepared, which had been substantially settled upon between the two commissioners, which only remained to be put in form and signed.

Since Mr. Robertson retired, a number of persons have offered and produced cattle-guards which they wish to have tested, and Mr. Holt has been continued in the service, according them that opportunity.

3. No one has been appointed in Mr. Robertson's place ; it was not deemed necessary to do so.

4. and 5. There are 61 devices yet to be tested, and the following are the names of the persons who invented, or are producing or offering them :

William Baker,
Adolphe Larose,
P. J. Bois,
James Wood,
L. A. Lacount,
E. H. Graham,
W. H. Smith,
J. W. Kendall,
The Trackmans,
R. H. Pentecost,
J. E. Cole,
H. F. Service,
James Finn,
W. J. Henry,
W. Porter,
Thos. Logan,
M. Thibault,
T. Burgess,
The Positive,
M. McMillan,
F. X. Wade & J. R. Timothy,
A. R. Dansen,
Jno. J. Gartshon,
Wm. Holliday,
W. Cameron,
A. G. Bust,
Jas. Cavanagh,
Major Whitcomb,
D. McKinnon,
Joseph Webber,
W. F. Boardman,
Samuel H. G. Jones,
Thos. Logan,
R. C. Russell,
E. C. Smith,
A. Briggs & S.P. Densen,
Jas. McKinder,
Arthur Thom,
Walsh Bros,
Henry LaPlante,
E. Maimy,
E. B. Reid,
W. Lampman,
H.W.D. Armstrong, C.E.
Akers & Tennant,
D. P. Cosy,
Mr. Davis,
F. McEdwards,
M. C. Wilson,
Gideon Brown,
F. J. Irvine,
Peter Kenan,
Mark J. McGowan,
Jno. H. Stewart,
P. J. Tucker,
W. G. McLean,
S. C. Westro,
A. Baker,
Marshall, by Mr. Ross,

Mr. LENNOX.

The tests are being made at the exhibition grounds, Ottawa, every day, and from day to day. The latest is going on to-day, and the tests will be continued until the guards have all been tried.

6. and 7. Yes ; the minister has given orders to complete the work as rapidly as possible. The report will be ready as soon as the tests are completed—it is practically now ready, except as to these later devices.

8. Yes ; it was thought that the examinations might be made into the cattle-guards in use on the different railways in the United States and Canada, and inquiries made and information obtained, and the report ready in four months at the outside. The necessary and most important part of the inquiry has been concluded wherever cattle-guards were in operation. The time occupied in making the tests was much greater than it was supposed would be required, owing to the interest which people were taking in the subject in various parts of the country, and their desire to meet the commissioners and state their views to them, and a great number of meetings were held, particularly in the province of Ontario, at which the commissioners were present.

CORRESPONDENCE WITH NEW BRUNSWICK AND PRINCE EDWARD ISLAND.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). Before the Orders of the Day are called, I would like to ask when the correspondence with the law officers of the province of New Brunswick will be laid on the Table ?

The MINISTER OF JUSTICE (Hon. Charles Fitzpatrick). I hope to be able to lay it upon the Table this afternoon. I sent it over to my hon. friend (Mr. Borden, Halifax) a moment ago.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). And how about the correspondence with Prince Edward Island ?

The MINISTER OF JUSTICE. The papers I sent my hon. friend (Mr. Borden, Halifax) included both so far as we have them.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). Not the papers I received—I examined the file carefully.

The MINISTER OF JUSTICE. With New Brunswick the discussion was, I think, verbal. I do not think there are any letters. My recollection is that the Attorney General and the Prime Minister of New Brunswick called upon me, and the representations on the subject were verbally made. But if there was any correspondence with New Brunswick on the subject, I will produce it to-morrow.

REDISTRIBUTION BILL—SCHEDULES AND MAPS.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN (Halifax). Before the Orders of the Day are called, I would like also to ask the Prime Minister (Rt. Hon. Sir Wilfrid Laurier) whether or not he is prepared to lay upon the Table of the House, or to submit to us, the schedules that have been prepared for the purposes of the Redistribution Bill. It is currently stated in the press and throughout the House that schedules have been prepared for the purposes of the Bill, the attention of the government having been given to the matter for a long time. I am not at all disposed, at the present moment, to question the fairness of the government in making the proposition which they did the other day with regard to this Bill, but I wish to point out to my right hon. friend (Rt. Hon. Sir Wilfrid Laurier) that to prepare schedules and not hand them to us might result in the end, in very much less fairness to us than if they had been attached to the Bill in the first place. For instance, if my right hon. friend—I am merely suggesting this—has prepared schedules which it is intended to insist upon, there would surely not be much fairness in withholding them until the committee meets, giving us no opportunity to examine them. I am not at all suggesting that that is the course the government intended to pursue, but I am suggesting that, not only in fairness to us, but from the standpoint of making good progress when we do get to the committee, it would be only right that any schedules that have been prepared should be submitted to us in order that we may consider them now. The same is true of any maps that may have been prepared, because it is alleged that a map of the proposed constituences has been made and is now in the hands of the government. If any map of the constituencies, as proposed by the government has been prepared, it also should be handed to us. I think it is only right that I should bring this matter to the attention of the government at this early date, because I find in the columns of various well informed journals the assertion that the schedules have been gone into with great care, gone into in detail, and are now in the condition in which it is proposed to present them to the committee.

The PRIME MINISTER (Rt. Hon. Sir Wilfrid Laurier). I have to say to my hon. friend that I have received some ten, perhaps twenty, different schedules from different parts of the country, asking that the division of certain constituencies should take place on such and such lines. I would be much surprised if my hon. friend had not himself received similar schedules.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). No.

The PRIME MINISTER. Then he has not been so highly favoured as I have been, because I have received any number of them. But I have taken the ground that we would not commit ourselves to any details in advance. We intend to have this Bill fairly gone into and dealt with. Suggestions without number we have received, suggestions have been considered, but the government has not committed itself to anything whatever. We go into the Committee perfectly free handed, and not only so, but desirous of taking every county by itself so far as its division is concerned, and in this work we hope to have the assistance of my hon. friend and his friends. No maps have been prepared either.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). Of course I accept, under the circumstances, the statement of the right hon. gentleman that no schedule has been prepared, and that no work has been done on any schedule to put it into the form in which it is proposed to submit it to the Committee.

CORRESPONDENCE RE ALASKAN BOUNDARY, INTERCOLONIAL CONFERENCE, AND BOND-HAY TREATY.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN (Halifax). There is one other matter that I would like to mention to the hon. gentleman. Some weeks ago, shortly after the debate on the address, I drew the attention of the right hon. gentleman to the fact that the papers respecting the Alaskan boundary had not yet been brought down. I understood at that time that the fault was not on this side of the Atlantic but with the British government. I also referred to the papers respecting the colonial conference, and pointed out that no papers whatever with regard to that had been laid upon the Table of the House; and that members on this side were absolutely destitute of any information except such as they could obtain from documents laid before the imperial parliament. I also referred to the papers respecting the Bond-Hay treaty. I would like to know if the hon. gentleman can give us any information on the subject.

The PRIME MINISTER (Rt. Hon. Sir Wilfrid Laurier). With regard to the papers concerning the Alaskan boundary, I can assure my hon. friend that I am just as anxious as himself to bring them down. There are some despatches which are necessary to make other papers intelligible, which are secret despatches. We cannot publish them unless we have the authority of the Colonial office. We have asked for this authority more than ten days ago, and have not received an answer yet. But I intend to press again for the authority, and if we cannot get it within, say, the next month, we will have to bring down what papers it is permissible to bring, and leave the others to be brought down later on.

With regard to the Bond-Hay treaty, all the papers are now ready, and I think that I shall be ready to lay them on the Table not later than Monday. There is also in this treaty one secret despatch as to which we should have to ask the consent of the Colonial office. I see no difficulty at all in getting it. With regard to the papers concerning the conference, we have no other report than that which has been published by the imperial authorities. Perhaps it would be advisable to have this report brought before parliament and printed, and if that is acceptable to my hon. friend, we shall do so immediately.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). I thought possibly that this government, having sent representatives to the conference, would have some report of its own, some information of its own to bring to the House, in addition to that which has been made public in the mother country and the various colonies.

THE POSTMASTER GENERAL'S REPORT.

Mr. BELL. Before the Orders of the Day are called, I would like to ask when the Postmaster General's report will be laid upon the Table.

The POSTMASTER GENERAL (Sir Wm. Mulock). It was laid on the Table some time ago.

Mr. BELL. How is it, then, that it is not distributed ? There are no copies in the post office available for members.

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. I presume it will be found in the distribution office. It is not the practice to put them in the post office boxes. Has the hon. gentleman applied to the clerk of the distribution office ?

Mr. BELL. No.

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. That would be the proper place, I think, to apply.

Mr. BELL. I thought it was the practice to put copies of all the reports in the post office.

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. The clerk of the distribution office is an officer of this House, and if he has not complied with the usual practice, I suppose when his attention is called to it by the chairman of the Committee on Internal Economy, he will attend to it. Perhaps my hon. friend has not looked in the box.

Mr. BELL. Yes, I have made application at the post office, and was not able to get any copies there; for that reason I have called the attention of the hon. gentleman to this matter.

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. The clerk of the distribution office is not under my control, he is under the control of this House.

Mr. SPEAKER. I am under the impression that the report was distributed before the session. Perhaps that is the reason why it cannot be found in the boxes.

AUTOMATIC GRAIN-WEIGHERS IN THE NORTH-WEST TERRITORIES.

House resumed consideration of the following proposed motion for :

Return showing all correspondence between the Inland Revenue Department and manufacturers of automatic grain-weighers, used on threshing machines, in Manitoba and the North-west Territories. Between the Inland Revenue Department and inventors of automatic grain-weighers for threshing machines. Between the Inland Revenue Department and thresher men using automatic grain-weighers, in Manitoba and the North-west Territories. Also, copy of report of chief inspector and scale architect re the standard grain-weigher, manufactured by the Globe Manufacturing Company, of Winnipeg.—Mr. Stewart.

Mr. WALTER SCOTT (West Assiniboia). I regret that when the House was discussing this matter yesterday, the hour for recess arrived, and cut off the debate. A couple of minutes would have sufficed me to say all I wished to say in support of the contention of my hon. friend from Lisgar (Mr. Stewart). I regret also that the facts of the matter are such as compel me to endorse the remarks that were made by the hon. gentleman from Lisgar (Mr. Stewart) and the future remarks made even more vehemently by my hon. friend from Macdonald (Mr. Boyd). The question is one of considerable importance to the grain growing sections between Lake Superior and the Rocky Mountains. The fact is becoming emphasized in various ways that Canada is a large country. Western Canada itself is a large country, and the wheat growing industry of western Canada has become a very important enterprise. The grain products west of Lake Superior now exceed annually one hundred million bushels. This fact in itself is the testimony that the industry has become a very important one. The industry of threshing out these large crops of grain is also a very important one, and it is found that the method which has been employed in times past, the method of weighing or measuring the threshed grain has become obsolete and impossible. In Manitoba and the North-west Territories, the conditions have led to the invention of an automatic weighing device which to-day is a necessity, and although the device is not a legalized instrument for weighing or measuring, the threshers and farmers in that country are compelled to use it. The fact that this device has not been legalized, and the further fact that it has been necessary to use it for some years, have led to a considerable amount of litigation both in Manitoba and the North-west Territories. Cases have been taken in Manitoba by the threshers to collect accounts against farmers for threshing, and the decisions have been given to the effect that where this automatic weighing device has been used the threshers cannot legally collect their accounts. In reality all the threshers of that country are now dependent for their pay upon the honour and good faith of the individual farmer.

Cases have also been taken in the North-west Territories and the decision of one trial judge was similar to the Manitoba decision. But, last fall, I may say, the Attorney General's Department of the North-west Territories took up one of the cases and obtained a decision from the appeal court to the effect that if the grain was measured in a bin where the bin was so constructed that the cubic measurement could be obtained, the thresher could legally collect his bill from the farmer. Still that is only in a few cases practicable, so that in the North-west Territories and Manitoba, the automatic weighing device not being legalized, the threshers is at the mercy of the individual farmer for the collection of his account. As was stated yesterday afternoon, the representatives from Manitoba and the North-west Territories were, a year ago, invited to go over to the Inland Revenue Department to witness tests being made of this automatic weighing device, and I, with others from the west, was over on two or three occasions. The device was very thoroughly tested over there and tested to the satisfaction of all of us and we understood that it met with the satisfaction too of the officers of the Inland Revenue Department. Up to the present time the sanction of the department has not been given to the adoption of this automatic weigher. In asking that the department give legal sanction to the weigher, we are not asking anything which will endanger or harm any interest or any persons. The machine is satisfactory to the thresher and it is satisfactory to the farmer. It is approximately, and I believe absolutely, accurate. Farmers have told me that the results in the elevator, where there is a legalized weighing scale, tally aproximately accurately with the results given by the automatic weigher. I simply wish to join the hon. member for Lisgar (Mr. Stewart) and the hon. member for Macdonald (Mr. Boyd) in urging the matter upon the attention of the House and particularly on the attention of the hon. Minister of Inland Revenue.

The MINISTER OF INLAND REVENUE (Hon. M. E. Bernier). Mr. Speaker, at the outset I must say that I have no objection to bringing before the House all the correspondence and papers in any way relating to the facts as submitted in the motion of the hon. member for Lisgar (Mr Stewart). Last year I invited to the department some hon. gentlemen representing constituencies in Manitoba and the North-west Territories to confer with me on matters relating to the weighing of grain. In June last, as the correspondence will show, one of the officers of the department, Mr. Magness, of Winnipeg, inspector of weights and measures, wrote to the department, stating that he thought he had invented a machine which would be satisfactory to both the owners of threshing machines and to the farmers and that he thought this machine should be admitted to verification. I ordered immediately that Mr. Magness should come down to Ottawa, bringing with him the machine which he had invented. The machine was tested and I must say that after the trial one of the officers of the department, who had no special authority either to examine or verify, wrote a certain letter which will be brought down with the other documents. Later on, in order not to put farmers and owners of threshing machines to the necessity of engaging in new litigation, we brought here an expert, and I must say to my hon. friend from Macdonald (Mr. Boyd) that I think he is a little in error when he says that the gentleman who was then brought here as an expert and later on appointed as chief inspector of weights and measures, was half a blacksmith and half a scale manufacturer. Mr. Fyfe is well known throughout the Dominion as one of the best qualified men that we could find. He was strongly recommended not only by the scale manufacturers in the Dominion, but by many other people who had had the advantage of ascertaining his qualifications. I may say that in many instances I am told that large corporations, such as the Grand Trunk Railway and Canadian Pacific Railway companies, have invited Mr. Fyfe to act as their expert. After having examined the weighing machine in the presence of Mr. Magness he said that the machine was not in compliance with the law, and at that time Mr. Magness seemed to admit that it was true. I wish to state here that my hon. friend is again in error when he says that it was very easy for the department to change the law and admit to verification that weighing machine. I know he is not a lawyer, but he might have asked some lawyer, who might have told him that it was impossible for the department to change the law by Order in Council. That section was read and properly interpreted yesterday by my hon. friend from Marquette (Mr. Roche).

Mr. BOYD. Have you not verified special weighing machines in the department?

The MINISTER OF INLAND REVENUE. Yes, I will answer my hon. friend in a moment or two. I have not now, what I expect to have, three or four cases in which, for certain purposes, weighing machines were admitted to verification because they were in conformity with the law. That is my information, but I will be in a position in a few minutes, or later on, to give instances and show cases as they actually are. When that question was brought before the House last year I stated that Mr. Magness would be in a position later on to supply the market with a good weighing machine complying in every respect with the law. The hon. gentleman (Mr. Boyd) cannot expect that the head of the department or any officer of the department could of their own knowledge decide whether a machine should be admitted to verification or not. As to that we have to accept the decision of the chief inspector and I am glad to say that he has always spoken with authority. I have no doubt that my hon. friend (Mr. Boyd) and my hon. friend from Assiniboia (Mr. Scott) have faithfully represented the views of the farmers of the North-west and of Manitoba, and I believe myself that the difficulties of litigation with regard to the threshing of grain must be remedied as soon as possible. But I ask my hon. friend, if the position of the owners of the threshing machines and the farmers would be any better even if we had admitted to verification a machine which did not comply with the law. Had we done that, it would have increased the litigation because any body who had anything to do with a contract might go before the court and say to the owner of that thrashing machine: I will not pay because that machine is not in conformity with the law. Neither would the certificate be sufficient in such a case, because I know of one or two instances in which decisions have been rendered in the courts of the province of Quebec where the certificate was held not to be sufficient. The department has not been negligent in trying to secure a machine which would give satisfaction and at the same time put a stop to litigation. I understood my hon. friend (Mr. Boyd) to say yesterday, that the farmers and the owners of these machines had to use certain vessels pending the advent of a machine which would give satisfaction, but if they had been provided with a machine which did not comply with the law I imagine that the difficulties would have been the same. If the weighing machine was not a legal one, even though it had been approved and a certificate given, another litigation would have followed. I will not touch for the present at least on the political part of the speech of my hon. friend from Macdonald (Mr. Boyd). I am ready and the department is ready to give to the farmers of the North-west a machine which will be satisfactory, but hon. gentlemen will hardly contend that the department is bound to invent a machine. That must be left to the ingenuity of the individual, and at least credit must be given to the department for having in its service, Mr. Magness who has done his best to meet the wants of the people of the North-west. When Mr. Magness was here, and after he had talked with Mr. Fife, he made up his mind to make some changes which had been suggested to him by Mr. Fyfe. I presume that this has been done, and if my information is correct, a machine will be supplied to the farmers of Manitoba and the North-west for next season. Inquiries have been made by the department in several countries where such machines are in vogue, and if it is found impossible to get a machine which will comply with the terms of the law, then with the assent of my friends on both sides of the House, I will bring in a measure in order to relieve the just grievances of these people.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN (Halifax). I would like to ask the hon. minister: How long he has been looking for that machine, and how long he has regarded these grievances as just?

The MINISTER OF INLAND REVENUE. Since last year; before last session.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). Before last session?

The MINISTER OF INLAND REVENUE. Before last session. I think the matter was brought before me about a year ago or perhaps more. I do not know what happened during the time of my predecessor.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). The hon. minister ought be able to give us some information as to what happened in the time of his predecessor, because as far as public business is concerned, of course he realizes, that it does not all date from the commencement of his regime. The difficulty seems to be that at present the people engaged in threshing cannot carry on their business in a effective manner without violating the law and that, according to the minister's statement, has continued for more than a year. The hon. gentleman has not been able to tell us how much longer than a year it has continued because he only dates his information from the date when he assumed control of the department. Does the hon. minister really think that it is the people of Manitoba and the North-west Territories should be obliged, in order to carry on their business effectively, to violate the law? Does he think that a year or more is a reasonable time to allow that condition to continue. I am inclined to think that some greater activity than has been manifested by the hon. gentleman in the past should be manifested in the future; that he should bestir himself a little more about this matter and bring the existing condition of things to a very speedy conclusion. It is greatly to be regretted that the condition should have ever been created at all, but having once been created it is certainly most desirable that every means should be taken to bring it to a conclusion as soon as possible.

Mr. SPROULE. I would advise the hon. gentleman to apply to the Ontario government for a machine, only for the fact that their machines also violate the law.

The MINISTER OF INLAND REVENUE. I may explain that, to my knowledge, and according to the correspondence which I have in hand, there were verbal explanations. The correspondence began in June of last year. I do not want to be accused of negligence, and I hope the gentlemen from the province of Manitoba have confidence enough in the ability of Mr. Magness, so that they may use this machine. If Mr. Magness, or the Globe Manufacturing Company, which I understand has taken up his interest, is not in a position to supply a machine which will pass inspection, then I will ask parliament to pass a law which will enable us to verify these machines.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). I would not wish to accuse my hon. friend of too much negligence, but I would use the expression which he applied to my hon. friend from Macdonald (Mr. Boyd), and say that he is a little negligent, that is all. As to the details of the matter, I do not know much about them, but I understood from his statement that this condition of affairs had existed for about a year.

The MINISTER OF INLAND REVENUE. Yes.

Motion agreed to.

ELECTORAL CORRUPTION.

Mr. JOHN CHARLTON (North Norfolk) moved second reading of Bill (No. 3) to amend the Dominion Elections Act, 1900. He said : Mr. Speaker, in moving the second reading of this Bill, I may perhaps be permitted to make a few observations bearing upon what I conceive to be the necessity for some enlarged scope of the Elections Act as regards offences, and increased stringency as regards punishments. The necessity for preserving the purity of the electorate lies at the very foundation of the maintenance of the perpetuity of free institutions. A pure, patriotic electorate will ensure to a country the continuance of free institutions and good government. A celebrated American poet has said :

> The crowning fact, the kingliest act
> Of freedom is a free man's vote.

He does not refer to the man that keeps that article for sale; he does not refer to the venal vote, the purchasable vote; but he refers to the vote of the man who esteems his franchise a priceless heritage, and will exercise it according to his convictions and beliefs relating to public policy and the conduct of public affairs.

The necessity for the maintenance of this condition of things is one the importance of which we cannot overestimate. In this country there are being laid the foundations of a nation—a nation which may hope to attain great prominence in the affairs of the world in the future; a nation which may hope to have an enormous population, great resources, great wealth, and a first-class influence among the nations of the world. But our hopes as to the future can hardly be realized if we permit the virus of corruption to infect the blood of the people. If we permit this, we shall simply have entailed upon us the consequences that have invariably followed political corruption and the debasing of the electorate.

The expression is frequently used; we are devoted to measures, not men. But measures cannot be carried into operation without men. We must have men who are the incarnation of good government and good measures in order to carry these measures into effect; and we can hardly have that class of men under a condition of things where the vote of a country is purchasable. If an electorate is for sale, if it is a question of the amount of money expended as to who shall be elected as its representative, then the very foundations of the stability of our institutions are swept away. The man who so far forgets his duty as a citizen as to purchase his election by a lavish expenditure of money, is a man who is likely to take measures to recoup himself for the expense which he has incurred; and the electorate which has chosen such a man as its representative has no right to expect any other line of conduct.

Our future depends, I have said, on the purity of the electorate; and if the system of corrupting the electorate cannot be stamped out, of course the evil will grow rapidly in magnitude. If the lavish expenditure of money is to be a necessary feature of running an electoral contest, then it becomes a matter of primary importance to political parties to provide funds for election purposes, and there is an inevitable tendency to corrupt practices on the part of the government in power. We had an instance of this in 1872, when the government in power felt the necessity of securing a large sum of money for the approaching election contests of that year; and the method adopted by that government, the sale of a great public charter, was one of a most demoralizing character, which became a permanent blot on the history of this country. The influences which led to that violation of the proper rules of public conduct will be at work now and at all times in the future if we have a purchasable electorate and are unable to stamp out this evil; and these influences will naturally lead to actions on the part of governments that cannot be condoned or excused—the scaling of subsidies, rake-offs, methods which politicians do not need to be instructed in or to have alluded to: there will be a powerful incentive that will lead governments to resort to these means to obtain money. In order to secure purity of administration, we must have purity in the electorate; and in order to have purity in the electorate, we must adopt means absolutely to stamp out the influences and the evils that are growing in magnitude in this country day by day.

As to the extent of electoral corruption, I do not know how great it may be. As to whether it is a crime to increase this extent of electoral corruption, I have no doubt whatever. It is a crime of the first magnitude, and a crime that we ought to adopt methods, so far as we possibly can, to avoid. As to the extent of electoral corruption, I say I do not know how great it may be. I suppose I need not attempt to instruct any member of this House with regard to that matter. I dare say we are all well aware that it is an evil of considerable extent, if not of great extent, in this Dominion. I presume we are all aware that very many ridings are influenced in the elections by the corrupt expenditure of money—that there are ridings where the result of the election is merely a matter of how much money is spent, and which party will spend the most. There are ridings which ought to be disfranchised owing to the thorough, absolute corruption of the electorate. As to which of our political parties is the worst, naturally the Conservatives will say that the bulk of this work is done by the other side and naturally the Reformers will take the opposite view ; but I think it will be found that one is just as bad as the other. Each one spends all the money it can. Instead of vieing with each other in these corrupt practices, we had better vie in the attempt to put them down. If we study the question over we can find the means of doing so and thus confer untold blessings upon the country. At present the candidate who prosecutes his canvass on proper lines, who avoids the improper expenditure of money, is, in nine cases out of ten, heavily handicapped. He is clogged in the race and many a man who would refrain from this kind of work, is compelled to do it in order to meet similar influences which are working against him. Elections can scarcely be run under present conditions without the expenditure of money. What should be the object of our law governing elections ? Its primary object should be to put an end to these practices by adopting measures that cannot fail to do so. We should not hesitate to apply drastic remedies. We should increase the number of offences and the severity of sentences and punishments, and if we do so to a sufficient extent I believe we will succeed in stamping out the practices. So far as electoral corruption is concerned, I am informed that in most of the states of the American union it has been absolutely stamped out. That has been the case in the states of New York and Pennsylvania. Three weeks ago there was a trial in the city of Buffalo concerning the election of a sheriff. The sheriff was charged with having promised an office and some emoluments to a friend for his assistance in the election. He was liable, on conviction, to be sentenced to five years in the penitentiary, but escaped on a verdict of 'not proven.' The law of that state is now in such shape that it is perilous to indulge in any of these illicit practices. The man who pays a bribe puts himself at the mercy of the scallawag who takes the money. This is so perilous that the practice has ceased. I believe that we can reach the same result here. The present law does not go far enough, and I propose some amendments which will have the effect of giving it the requisite extension. Perhaps the promoters of that law intended it to go as far as necessary. But it has not put an end to corruption. On the contrary, corruption is spreading rapidly and the influence of this condition of things shows itself in other lines of public life. The best elements of the country are alarmed. Men of all parties deplore this condition of things and ask whether there is not some remedy. Can we not put an end to this evil which threatens the well-being and stability of our state. The amendment I am about to submit creates in the first place a few more offences. In that respect the original Act is not as comprehensive as it should be. It also increases the penalties to such an extent that infractions of the law, if the accused be convicted, involve not only a loss of money but loss of liberty. These are penalties which will make crime odious and cause every man to shrink from the consequences.

Without further general remarks let me call the attention of the House to the provisions of this Bill. Section 108, law 1900, relating to Dominion elections gives a number of offences in detail, as set out in subsection 'A' to 'I.' I propose to add three more subsections, 'J,' 'K' and 'L.' Subsection 'J' is as follows :—

(j.) Every person who by abduction, duress or any forcible or fraudulent device or contrivance, impedes, prevents or otherwise interferes with the free exercise of the elective franchise by any voter, or compels, induces, or prevails upon any voter to give or refrain from giving his vote for or against any candidate at any election ;

Subsection 'K' is as follows :—

(k.) Every person who, being an employer, pays his employees the wages or salary due, in pay envelopes, upon which there is written or printed any political motto, device or argument containing threats, express or implied, intended or calculated to influence the political opinions or actions of such employees, or within ninety days of a general election puts or otherwise exhibits in the establishment or place where his employees are engaged in labour, any handbill or placard containing any threat, notice or information, that if any particular ticket or candidate is elected or defeated, work in his place or establishment will cease in whole or in part, his establishment will be closed up, or the wages of his employees will be reduced, or other threats, express or implied, intended or calculated to influence the political opinions or actions of his employees ;

The following is subsection 'L' :—

(1.) Every person who, being an officer or employee of Canada or of any province thereof, directly or indirectly uses his authority or official influence to compel or induce any other such officer or employee to pay or promise to pay any political assessment, or—

(2.) Being an officer or employee of Canada or any province thereof, directly or indirectly gives, pays or hands over to any officer such officer or employee, any money or other valuable thing on account of, or to be applied to, the promotion of his election, appointment or retention in office, or makes any promise or gives any subscription to such officer or employee to pay or contribute any money or other valuable thing for such purpose or object,—or

(3.) Prepares or makes out or takes any part in preparing or making out any political assessment, subscription or contribution, or sends or presents any political assessment, subscription or contribution to, or requests its payment of, any such officer or employee;

These are the three subsections which I propose to add to section 108 of the law of 1900, and I propose to change the character of the punishment as follows :—

And every person so offending——

that is, committing any of the offences in this alphabetical list from 'A' to 'L'— ——is guilty of an indictable offence and liable to imprisonment for a term not exceeding two years, and shall forfeit a sum not exceeding five hundred dollars to any person who sues therefor, with costs, and shall be disfranchised for a period of seven years, or, in case the offence is committed by a corporation, it shall forfeit its charter.

Provided always, that the actual personal expenses of any candidate, his expenses for actual professional services performed, and bona fide payments for the fair cost of printing, advertising, bill posting and rent of halls or rooms for meetings, shall be held to be expenses lawfully incurred, and the payment thereof shall not be a violation of this Act.

The following section I have copied from the Penal Code of the State of New York, and upon it I would rely more than upon any other provision of the Bill for putting an end to the evils I am speaking of. This would be substituted for sections 134, 135, and 136. It would be a section general in its character, more comprehensive, more easily understood, terser and more epigramatical. It is to be inserted after section 108, and would be numbered 108a :

A person offending against any provision of the next preceding section of this Act——

—that is, against any of subsections 'A' to 'L' of section 108—

—is a competent witness against another person so offending, and may be compelled to attend and testify on any trial, hearing, proceeding, or investigation in the same manner as any other person. The testimony so given shall not be used in any prosecution or proceeding civil or criminal against the person testifying. A person testifying shall not therefor be liable to indictment, prosecution or punishment for the offence with reference to which his testimony was given, and may plead or prove the giving of testimony accordingly, in bar of such indictment or prosecution.

Now, under this section, the man who is bribed may bring an action against the briber, and the penalty is $500, or less at the discretion of the court, payable to the complainant, and any number of men who have been bribed may be subpœnaed as witness and may give their testimony under the provision of this Act which exonerates them from all consequences, civil or criminal in relation to this matter. It is found that, in the state of New York, under the provisions of this Act, the business of bribing men to vote—a business which is carried on with a certain degree of impunity under our laws—is one in which the consequences are so grave, the Act so perilous, the briber being so completely at the mercy of the parties who take his bribe, that parties conclude not to go into it. So the money is not forthcoming and the agents are not there to distribute it. In fact, the business cannot be carried on with safety, and there is an end to the whole thing. We have to adopt something of this kind if we are to cope with this evil in Canada. And if this section 108a is put in our law, it will absolutely put a quietus on the whole business of buying electors at the polls. The fine going to the informant, it will be an inducement to him to bring the briber to book. The briber will be so completely at the mercy of the bribed that there will be an end of the whole business.

4. Section number 126 of the said Act is repealed, and the following is substituted therefor :—

126. Any person who, while a candidate for the House of Commons either before or after nomination day, is guilty of bribery, fraud, or wilful violation of any election law, shall be for ever disqualified from holding an office of trust or profit under the government of Canada, and shall be disfranchised for the period of seven years next after his being so found guilty.

This is copied from the Penal Code of the state of Pennsylvania, and renders any candidate who is guilty of bribery or fraud ineligible for office for life.

5. Section 142 of the said Act is amended by substituting the words 'seven years' for the words 'one year' in the fifth line thereof.

The provisions of this Act will necessarily require consideration and argument in Committee. I shall not detain the House longer with arguments on the Bill the general feature of which I have attempted to put before the House. I beg to move the second reading of this Bill.

Mr. T. S. SPROULE (East Grey). I wish to say a few words on the general principle of this Bill before we go into Committee, as I probably should not be allowed the same latitude there. Personally, for a long time, I have held that what we required more than anything else in connection with the corruption at elections, is to bring to light, to disclose the facts and put on record the various devices that are resorted to for the purpose of bribery and then to punish the guilty parties. It seems to me that if that were done, there would be two beneficial results. One would be to leave it as a matter of history or record which could be for ever quoted as against the party that indulged in corruption extensively, and the other would be to direct public attention to it so that the sentiment of the country would frown down election corruption as it ought to do. Now, in my judgment, the present law providing for the purpose of punishing corruption at elections falls far short of present needs. Election trials are too expensive for private individuals to carry on. Not only have individuals not the means or the time to carry on the trials, but they do not wish to incur the annoyance and trouble that must necessarily be incurred in the trial of a controverted election. This should be done, in my judgment, by the state. It cannot be successfully done by private individuals, because the majority of men who are put forward as candidates for this House, whether they are or are not elected are not sufficiently wealthy to bear the cost of these trials. The present method of conducting controverted election trials results in shutting the door at the very threshold of inquiry where electoral corruption is being exposed. A petition is presented, the particulars are given and the election trial commences. The candidate against whom the petition stands finds that many acts of corruption have been committed, which, if brought to light, will assuredly result in unseating him; and the parties who are prosecuting him find that the trial is going to be a very expensive affair for them. They do not wish to go to the trouble, but they wish to void that election. The result is that a collusive agreement is entered into between the petitioner and the respondent. The respondent agrees to allow the election to be voided on the petitioner presenting one case and establishing one case of corruption to the satisfaction of the court. It is even said that they go further in this collusive corruption amongst themselves. They allow the respondent to select the case that is to be presented to the court; it may be one of a very trivial character, but so long as it will satisfy the court, he will throw up the sponge and allow the election to be voided. He selects his own case for the purpose of trying to convince the public that there was no extensive corruption, but that there was only some act of an insignificant character, or agent, or party whose agency may be established. Through the admission of the respondent, the court takes it up and voids the election.

Is there an inducement for the court not to go any further? I am told that there is an inducement, in the fact that a specific amount is paid the judge for the trial of an election petition, which amounts to $100; whether the time required for holding that trial is long or short, the same amount is paid to the judges. Therefore, it naturally follows that if an election is voided inside of one hour after the court is opened, the judge has less trouble, less labour, and he gets a larger amount for the work he has done. Therefore it is an object to him to void that election with the least possible delay and the least inconvenience to himself. The result is that many of these election petitions end in that way when only a single case of corruption is presented to the court, while the other cases which are never brought to light, a hundred times worse it may be, than the one which has been presented to the court. Everything is hid from the public, and we do not find that educative effect that would result from laying all these cases bare to the public; nor have we that moral influence that would be effected in the sentiment of the community against electoral corruption, because the community does not know anything about it.

Now I will point out what I consider should be the proper method to follow. The law provides that an election petition must be presented upon an affidavit that in the opinion, or actual knowledge of the petitioner, extensive corruption prevailed at that election. I contend that the affidavit should not be made without there are good grounds for it being made, in other words, it should not be colorably made. When that affidavit is made, it should be assumed that it was made honestly, and with all the force and effect of a solemn oath. Then, I say, the petitioner should be prepared to go into court and vindicate his own standing, vindicate his own oath, by bringing to light these alleged acts of corruption that he actually believed or actually knew took place. He should not be shut off at the threshold when he commences that inquiry. Now what is the excuse for his being shut off? He says: I am a poor man, it will cost several thousand dollars to prosecute this election petition, I am unable to pay it, I have no funds at my disposal, I cannot employ expensive counsel to prosecute; therefore after I have accomplished the first part of this petition, I will relieve myself of all the expense and worry incidental to prosecuting that election petition. That should not be the case. I say that petition should be prosecuted to the end, and it should either disclose the fact that corruption extensively prevailed, or establish the contrary; otherwise the petitioner would need to admit that he was misinformed, or that he was unable to establish the allegations set forth in that petition, and he should acknowledge it like a man. Let the candidate who was elected have the credit of its being known to the world that his election was conducted upon honest lines.

Now then what I think might be a remedy for this evil would be something like the following: If twenty-five electors in that electoral district, after an election took place, made application to the Crown by way of petition, to which a declaration was added that to their actual knowledge, or honest belief, from information, circumstantial evidence or otherwise, in their possession, they believed that extensive corruption prevailed, and they asked the Crown to appoint a commission of judges to go into that inquiry, then let the Crown grant their petition, pay the expense, and put at their disposal counsel so that they may present their evidence. Let that commission of judges go into that electoral district and conduct the inquiry as long as witnesses are offered to bring out the facts. Let the whole matter be laid bare, let a report be made to the Crown, and afterwards let the Crown deal with it. Now the benefits that would accrue from this system would, in my judgment, be two. First, we would bring to light the various methods of political corruption that are extant, so far as they could be brought to light. It would be a matter of record that could be cited against either political party, to their discredit. It would also result in educating the sentiment of the community up to the desired standpoint that corruption of that kind should be punished, should not be condoned in either political party, and should be frowned down by the respectable element of the community. In addition to that, it would go further. Instead of hiding these acts of political corruption, it would bring them to light, and the Crown could then go on and prosecute the guilty parties. I venture to say that I am within the mark in stating that ninety-nine out of every hundred acts of political corruption are never brought to light, and the country knows little or nothing about them. If the country did know there would be public sentiment so strong behind the law and behind the government, that no political party could continue in power for any great length of time which did not make a reasonable attempt to punish those acts of corruption. That is, in my judgment, the only proper method by which we can reach them. If all these acts of political corruption were brought to light the party or candidate guilty of them would be disgraced before the country, and a public sentiment would be created which would render them impossible for the future.

Now there is a system growing up rapidly at present that is a disgrace to any country in the world, I mean this collusive corruption between both political parties. They are both at fault, they are both to blame, they are both violating the law. In some instances, I regret to say, there is justifiable reason for believing that even the judges of the land are to some extent tainted by the custom which prevails at the present time. Need I point to the case of a judge in connection with the North York election, who corruptly took part, collusively took part, in the settlement of an election petition that must have otherwise come before the courts, made an agreement between the contending parties, stipulated what money was to be paid, kept it secret so far as to satisfy the parties to it, and afterwards gave it to the public when it satisfied his purpose to do so, in the interest of one party or the other? Is it not apparent to the world that notwithstanding the disgraceful condition of affairs in this country to-day in regard to election corruption, it is impossible to punish the evil-doers? The sooner we provide some new machinery of law to remedy this condition the better. The law which is proposed by the Bill of the hon. member for North Norfolk (Mr. Charlton) is all well enough so far as it goes, but it will be like the others; it will not strike at the root of the evil. It cannot bring to light what we desire shall be brought to light because it cannot result in punishing the guilty parties. It cannot effect the thing we desire to effect. We want something that will be an educative force, something that will educate public sentiment up to the condition that it will not condone corruption in elections on the part of either political party, and the sooner the present government set about to devise some means of accomplishing this the better it will be for the country. If the government do not provide a law for that purpose, I say that in the future they will be held accountable for their acts of omission if not for their acts of commission which will not redound to their credit. or to the credit of that political party, or to the credit of the country.

Mr. M. K. COWAN (South Essex). Mr. Speaker, I had no intention of taking up the time of the House discussing questions of political morality, but it does seem to me that the lecture which we have just received comes with very bad grace from the lips of an hon. gentleman who invaded the riding of South Ontario to call upon the Conservatives great and Conservatives small to rally round the standard of that self-convicted criminal, Mr. Billy Smith, after he had made the scandalous revelations in the witness box which he did make.

Mr. SPROULE. I wish to say in answer to the hon. member for South Essex (Mr. Cowan) that he makes a statement he is not warranted in making. Mr. William Smith never was a convicted criminal.

Mr. COWAN. A self-confessed criminal.

Mr. SPROULE. Let me say that Mr. Smith was a respectable member of the community when I went to his convention.

Mr. COWAN. And asked them to nominate him.

Mr. W. H. BENNETT (East Simcoe). Mr. Speaker, as a personal friend of Mr. Wm. Smith, I would not be doing my duty were I not to resent publicly, and in the most emphatic way I can, what has been said here to-day by the hon. member for South Essex (Mr. Cowan). I can tell the hon. member for South Essex, say what he will about Mr. Smith, that Mr. Smith stands to-day in the hearts of the people of South Ontario, irrespective of politics, as an honest and truthful man, at all events. Now, what was the position ? There was a keen contest being waged in the riding of South Ontario, on the Conservative side by Mr. Charles Calder, and on the Liberal side by Mr. John Dryden. I am not going to say here what has prevailed in elections in South Ontario, as conducted by Mr. John Dryden ; the courts prove that, they prove it distinctly and they prove beyond contradiction that Mr. John Dryden has never dared to face a court in Ontario or a judicial decision, because, when brought to bay, he has thrown up the sponge and confessed bribery wholesale throughout the whole riding. What was the position of Mr. Smith ? Mr. Smith, knowing that there was only one way of fighting fire, and that is with fire, on his own behalf, and with other independent men in the riding, irrespective of Mr. Calder, went to work to fight Mr. Dryden in South Ontario in the then ensuing elections. What was the result ? A fund was subscribed, and that fund is placed in Mr. Smith's hands. When Mr. Smith went upon the witness stand, with the fear of God on the one side, he told the truth of it, and what was the answer afterwards ? What was the answer, I ask the hon. member for South Essex ? Mr. Smith was a candidate in that riding during the last election, and he polled within seventy votes of the number polled by the hon. member (Mr. Ross, Ontario) who represents that riding, and when it is considered that Mr. Smith has always had narrow majorities in South Ontario, when it is considered that on that occasion a dead set was made against him in the riding, that the force of the McLaughlin Carriage Company, which in former elections had been almost passive in Oshawa, was on that occasion thrown against him, it is no matter of wonderment that Mr. Smith was defeated. In prior elections, owing to the fact that the McLaughlin Carriage Company had given a quiet support indirectly to Mr. Smith ; at least, it had not interfered against Mr. Smith, he was elected by narrow majorities, but owing to the fact that this Liberal government had protected the McLaughlin Bros. to a greater extent than ever before, McLaughlin Bros., with the men they command in the riding and with the other forces they control, went against Mr. Smith in the campaign, and the result was that Mr. Smith lost the election. I am not going to say that there were any improper means taken on behalf of the hon. member who represents that riding, but I believe that hon. gentleman will say that as far as Mr. Smith and his friends are concerned in the last campaign no improper or illegal means were resorted to on his behalf. Here was the position : Mr. Smith had made this honest confession under oath that there was a fund. Mr. Dryden had gone into the witness box and with sanctimonious mien had made out that he knew nothing of the means resorted to to secure his election against Mr. Calder on that occasion. Who were the men who brought about the election of Mr. Dryden ? Why, Sir, there was not a party hack from one end of the province to the other that was not in the riding. The Sullivan gang, who stand to-day hitched up with the Provincial Secretary, were on every highway and side line in South Ontario. I can recall the names of dozens of men brought into the riding, and here was Mr. Smith and the local workers putting up their hard earned money and fighting against this gang brought in there from outside. I have known Mr. Smith since I first came to this House eleven or twelve years ago ; I have known Mr. Smith as prominent in stock-raising in Ontario, and let me tell hon. gentlemen in this House that, in the business in which he is concerned, as a stock importer, Mr. Smith occupies one of the most prominent positions in this province, and any man who knows Mr. Smith knows that he is a man of sterling worth, a man of great honesty and one, who, when it came to a question of political preferment or of telling the truth, sank political preferment in preference to telling what was untrue. Mr. Smith is the darling idol of the Conservatives of South Ontario. Why should he not be ? He is a gallant and courageous fighter when up against odds, and after the fight, when it came to a question of truthfulness and honour, he was prepared to tell the truth even to the great hurt of himself and of his friends. Once again I resent the imputation cast upon Mr. Smith, and I beg to say that Liberals as well as Conservatives in their heart of hearts have more respect for Mr. Smith than for John Dryden in the riding of South Ontario.

Mr. A. B. INGRAM (East Elgin). I am very glad that the hon. member for South Essex (Mr. Cowan) has brought the matter before this House. I know it has been heralded broadcast throughout the country that Mr. Smith is a criminal. The hon. gentleman (Mr. Cowan) being a lawyer, I would like to have his assistance in getting the administration of justice to straighten out this tangle. The administration of justice throughout Canada is controlled by the Liberal government from Ottawa, and the Liberal government in Ontario have control of the administration of justice in that province. Now, if William Smith is a criminal, how can the hon. gentleman (Mr. Cowan) charge the Conservative party of Canada with negligence of duty in not prosecuting that criminal ?

Mr. COWAN. Does the hon. gentleman want an answer now ?

Mr. INGRAM. I will take my seat if you wish to speak.

Mr. COWAN. The reason why is expressed in the following statement of Judge Ferguson :—

I have some regret that this large offender Mr. Smith is not before us. I have nothing to say of him but that his evidence is the most glaring piece of corruption that I have ever heard.

The reason Mr. Smith was not before them was because they could not get him before them, however anxious they might be on account of the statute of limitations standing in the way.

Mr. INGRAM. Do I understand the hon. gentleman (Mr. Cowan) to say that Wm. Smith left the province in order to evade justice ? Mr. Smith resides in South Ontario and he has resided there ever since continually, and he gave this evidence himself.

Mr. COWAN. The court did not believe him.

Mr. INGRAM. I understand that the court believed him and condemned him on his own evidence.

Mr. COWAN. Will my hon. friend pardon me.

Some hon. MEMBERS. Order. Don't interrupt.

Mr. COWAN. I know that the hon. gentleman (Mr. Ingram) wants to be fair even if some gentlemen on the other side do not. This is the statement of Judge Osler :

I should not call Mr. Smith's manner candid. He showed a disposition to fence with the counsel. I should call it brazen, that is the word. I look upon the evidence of Smith as being a brazen, distinct, strong denial ; a denial that I do not believe.

Mr. INGRAM. I rose with the intention of being fair and I hope to have the hearing of at least gentlemen in this House who desire to be fair. If the hon. gentleman (Mr. Cowan) will carefully read the evidence in the South Ontario case he will find that Mr. Smith admitted having expending something like $1,200 during that election.

Mr. COWAN. Certainly.

Mr. INGRAM. That he collected a fund for that purpose and expended it.

Mr. COWAN. Not collected ; but he said he spent it.

Mr. INGRAM. He admitted in court that he handled the fund, and that was the evidence. Now, if Mr. Smith has done wrong and is a criminal, why is it I ask that the Department of Justice has not prosecuted him ?

Mr. COWAN. At the time the prosecution took place there had been no charge made against Wm. Smith, because the evidence was not brought out until the trial. They did not have him before them, and the statute of limitations then steps in.

Mr. INGRAM. Did not the judges have the power to imprison him ?

Mr. COWAN. No.

Some hon. MEMBERS. Yes.

Mr. INGRAM. I leave it to my hon. friend and the lawyers on this side of the House to settle that. But this much I do know, and it is that the Department of Justice has been lax in prosecuting offenders under the Election law. It does not lie in the mouth of any person to charge the Conservatives with not prosecuting that class of criminal. Let me say that Mr. Smith has been a highly respected member of this House. He had as good a record as perhaps any other member in this House during the time he was here, and more than that, I will say that Wm. Smith is not the only person in this country who could give evidence of that kind if they chose to be honest. It is notorious that those who administer justice in the province of Ontario have little to their credit for the manner in which they have administered the law against electoral corruption. In the county of Elgin to my knowledge, they have allowed criminals time and again to leave that county and go unwhipt of justice.

Mr. COWAN. Will the hon. gentleman permit me to ask a question.

Mr. INGRAM. Yes.

Mr. COWAN. I do not desire to bring out these post mortems, but the hon. gentleman must know that in the West Elgin case, when the warrant was issued against Pritchett, that warrant was got out of the possession of the constable, so Pritchett stated, by one of the hon. members now representing the city of Hamilton, and by Mr. O. E. Fleming, of Windsor, and that it was impossible for them to issue a second warrant upon that information and therefore the absence of a warrant allowed the fugitive to escape.

Mr. INGRAM. Mr. Pritchett resided in the city of London and the Liberal government dare not prosecute him. He had nothing to fear from the Liberal party. They dare not prosecute him. What else could he do but make his peace with the Conservative party in order to come back to this country. He had no fear of the Liberal party at all. The hon. member for Hamilton is here to speak for himself. We know perfectly well that this Pritchett was in South Ontario and that Thomas Lewis was there to, and to-day Lewis administers the license laws of the province of Ontario in the department of Mr. Stratton.

Mr. SAMUEL BARKER (Hamilton). I did not catch exactly the expression used by the hon. member for South Essex (Mr. Cowan), but I understand he quotes somebody as saying, that the member for Hamilton on some occasion got a warrant against the man Pritchett out of some one's possession and so prevented his prosecution. I do not know who said that, but it is an absolute falsehood.

Some hon. MEMBERS. Hear, hear.

Mr. BARKER. And any man who says it or pretends to assert that it is a fact, tells an absolute falsehood, Mr. Speaker.

Some hon. MEMBERS. Hear, hear.

Mr. COWAN I know that Pritchett swore to it on his oath and the hon. gentleman (Mr. Barker) has not so far as I know ever denied it before.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN (Halifax). It is somewhat unusual I think to make an attack of this character upon a gentleman who is not in the House, for the purpose of attempting to discredit an hon. gentleman (Mr. Sproule) who made a speech which certainly was not of a partisan character. However, I have heard my hon. friend from South Essex (Mr. Cowan) pursue tactics of that kind before and I cannot say that I was very much surprised at it to-day. If the hon. gentleman (Mr. Cowan) would look around, possibly he might find in the ranks of the Liberal party to-day gentlemen who had experienced the result of a trial in the election court. I do not propose to follow his methods and to make references that I could make if I desired to pursue the tactics of the hon. gentleman (Mr. Cowan). I would just suggest to him that possibly in the future some of his own friends would thank him, if he did not introduce matters of this kind; otherwise some references which might not be very pleasant will perhaps be made. My hon. friend the Minister of Trade and Commerce (Rt. Hon. Sir Richard Cartwright) has enunciated his views in regard to matters of this kind. Some eleven years ago he spoke with reference to these things, and I happen to have in my hand the expression of that right hon. gentleman's views with regard to one constituency in Canada. He said:

> He knew there was a large number of men in the country who wanted to be bought. He knew that because he had bought them twice when he was an unrepentant sinner.

I commend that expression of opinion to my hon. friend from South Essex (Mr. Cowan). I will also ask the Minister of Trade and Commerce to thank the member for South Essex for another quotation which I shall make. The right hon. gentleman (Rt. Hon. Sir Richard Cartwright) said this in the House of Commons:

> I am speaking a most lamentable, but at the same time a most certain truth when I say that as regards the 215 constituencies of this Dominion with the exception of a very small percentage, the balance of power under our system is practically placed in the hands of the most corrupt section of the community. I make this statement advisedly as I make it with very great regret, but it is so and to all intents and purposes the only practical difficulty which stands in the way of the party possessing the reins of power, and having at their disposal sufficient sums of money, is simply the difficulty of bringing these corrupt means into direct and actual contact with the great masses of the electors. Were that mechanical difficulty, as I might almost call it, overcome then I have no doubt whatever that the opposition in this country would be practically exterminated at any general election that might take place.

We have seen some of the efforts that have been made within the last few years to overcome this mechanical difficulty. We have seen gangs of men, outsiders, hired for the purpose, going into many constituencies for the purpose of overcoming the mechanical difficulty referred to by the hon. Minister of Trade and Commerce. No one who has weighed the evidence can have any doubt that the Hon. Peter White was elected at the by-election at Brockville, and there is equally little doubt that the Conservative candidate was elected at the by election in West Huron. Both of these elections were stolen, and the government accepted the stolen goods; and after the election courts revealed certain facts, the government, or the followers of the government at least, used every effort in their power to prevent an investigation notwithstanding certain promises which were made in this House; and when the motion to continue the investigation was made in this House at the following session, it was voted down, and there has been no investigation since, and Mr. Pritchett, the man who worked these elections, has not been prosecuted. After leaving the country, he came back and openly stated that he knew he would not be prosecuted, because the Liberal government dare not prosecute him, and he has continued to remain here, and the government not dared to prosecute him. I did not intend to bring these matters before the House at the present time; but when we see such tactics as those adopted by the hon. member for South Essex (Mr. Cowan) to-day, hon. gentlemen opposite will not take it amiss, I suppose, if I call to their attention certain matters—and the list is by no means exhausted—which have somewhat affected their status in days gone by.

So far as the merits of the Bill are concerned, I would not like to commit myself at present to every word or line of it; but certainly it is one which should go to a second reading and which should result in useful legislation. There is no doubt that means are employed in elections in this country which are altogether opposed not only to the spirit but the letter of the law. I am not speaking from a partisan standpoint; I am speaking of facts which we all know to exist, and while the law may quite properly be amended in the direction my hon. friend has suggested, I think the chief difficulty at the present time is that there are no sufficient means provided for enforcing the law. I am not sure that it may not be the duty of this government or of some subsequent government to make some provision for an officer who would have the same independence as the Auditor General, and whose duty it would be to look into any election in Canada where there is suspicion of any corruption, and to act as a public prosecutor, to see that those guilty of corruption and wrong-doing should be brought to justice. Another suggestion has been made, which I think deserves the attention of the government as well as of us who are sitting in opposition; I mean the suggestion that one possible remedy for bribery at elections might be found in the enactment of a law providing that any man failing to vote at an election without sufficient excuse should lose the right to vote for a certain period afterwards, say seven years. At present there are two great abuses with regard to men voting at elections. One is the practice of paying men to stay at home and not vote. That is a sure way of making the use of money effective. In that way you cut down the vote of the opposite side. Then, there is the corrupt man who stays at home and will not go to the polls at all unless he is paid. I for one would be inclined to give a measure containing the amendments I have suggested very careful and favourable consideration.

Mr. EDWARD HACKETT (West Prince, P.E.I.) Mr. Speaker, the Bill of the hon. member for North Norfolk (Mr. Charlton) meets with my full approval and support; but I would like to have added to it a clause that would compel the returning officer, in case of a recount, to deliver the ballot boxes to the judge of the county court. I have had experience of this need. We have been discussing to-day matters concerning the province of Ontario. I was elected at the last general election by a majority of three, and was declared elected. My opponent asked for a recount, and the ballot boxes were ordered to be taken from Alberton, in West Prince, to Summerside, where the judge resides. What happened in the meantime ? During their transit between Alberton and Summerside, one of the ballot boxes, in which I had a majority of thirty-five votes, was stolen from the car, for the purpose of preventing the ballots being counted and depriving me of the seat I hold in this parliament. It makes very little difference whether Smith, Jones, Brown or Robinson holds the seat; but it is important that the electors of Canada should be protected, not only in casting their votes on the day of election, but in having their votes placed in the custody of the proper authorities. I brought this matter up in this parliament in the session of 1901, and explained the facts. I said then, as I say now, that the Minister of Railways (Hon. Mr. Blair) was responsible for the safe delivery of those ballot boxes by the conductors and brakesmen in charge of the railway. These men are held responsible for the safe delivery of a barrel of flour or a barrel of sugar; yet they allowed the votes of a number of people in West Prince to be lost without making any effort to ascertain what had become of them. When the gentlemen who occupy the treasury benches saw that a hundred people in a polling division were being deprived of their rights and privileges as voters, why did they not make an effort to ascertain what had become of that ballot box ? But nothing was done. They allowed the transaction to pass without comment or action, simply because it was intended to deprive your humble servant of his place in this parliament.

Mr. JABEL ROBINSON (West Elgin). I would like to add a clause to this Bill, if the mover has no objection :

That any person found guilty of subscribing money towards an election fund with a view of bribing the electorate, shall be subject to a fine of not less than $500 and liable to six months' imprisonment.

Motion agreed to, Bill read the second time, and House went into Committee thereon.

On section 1.

Mr. BENNETT. Take this subsection (k) which reads :—

(k) Every person who, being an employer, pays his employees the wages or salary due, in pay envelopes, upon which there is written or printed any political motto, device or argument containing threats, express or implied, intended or calculated to influence the political opinions or actions of such employees, or within ninety days of a general election puts or otherwise exhibits in the establishment or place where his employees are engaged in labour, any handbill or placard containing any threat, notice or information, that if any particular ticket or candidate is elected or defeated, work in his place or establishment will cease in whole or in part, his establishment will be closed up, or the wages of his employees will be reduced, or other threats, express or implied, intended or calculated to influence the political opinions or actions of his employees.

It seems to me that if the hon. member for Norfolk (Mr. Charlton) will go back a few years, he will recollect when the great party to which he belongs had, as part of its stock in trade in the election campaign, a certain pictorial exhibit which would come under this clause. Or if he does not, the hon. Minister of Trade and Commerce (Rt. Hon. Sir Richard Cartwright) may recall that in the elections of 1891, his party made considerable capital out of a picture entitled 'putting the mortgage on the farm.' The artist depicted in that picture the worn out physiognomy of the wife, the sickly faces of the children, the pale features and tottering hand of the farmer as he was about putting his signature to the mortgage, and then the lesson was conveyed that unless the protective tariff were abolished in its entirety, foreclosure would inevitably follow. Surely the hon. member for North Norfolk is not going to prevent his party leader from putting before the public gaze once more pictures that may illustrate the effects of its policy. The particular picture to which I have referred may not be produced but there may be others. There may be pictures showing the prosperity of these manufacturers who have been given increased protection by this government. Now that the agricultural implements interest in this Dominion has been placed in a solid position by having two senators engaged in that business to represent it in the Upper Chamber, surely the hon. gentleman will not take from these two gentlemen the right to display illustrations in their establishments, showing how well the present tariff has worked in their interests. Surely he will not prevent the carriage manufacturers, who are benefited by a five per cent increased duty on cutters, depicting to an interested public the good effects of this increased protection given by the present government. I would ask the hon. gentleman to think over that clause, and perhaps out of gratitude to that old picture of the mortgage on the farm he may revise his opinion.

Mr. CHARLTON. The hon. gentleman has made a comparison which does not apply. I am not professing in this clause to deal with the legitimate methods of influencing public opinion. It is a legitimate method to publish articles in newspapers and pictures in newspapers and to disseminate information in a general way. This clause does not seek to interfere with the liberty of the subject in that effect. Its object is to prevent personal threats by the employers. It deals only with an improper exercise of influence by an employer over his employees. It deals with the attempt to intimidate them by threats, to influence their action, by threatening to deprive them of employment or reduce their wages—actions just as reprehensible as the purchase of votes or the purchase of electors to remain away from the poll, actions which the law condemns and which are quite distinct from attempts made in a general way, by arguments on the platform or through the press or by pictorial illustrations for general circulation, to produce an impression on the general public. This subsection is to prohibit an employer from approaching an employee with threats to deprive him of employment or reduce his wages.

Mr. CLANCY. If the hon. gentleman (Mr. Charlton) will permit me, I would like to ask him a question. Suppose that the employer of labour, instead of making these threats himself causes some one to circulate a report that the loss of employment or reduction of wages will follow the giving of voting in a certain way. This would be quite as effective as a direct threat. How does the hon. gentleman meet that ?

Mr. CHARLTON. Under the provisions of the law, that would be an improper influence.

Mr. CLANCY. It is not specified, and it might be a very difficult thing to trace. If the employer were charged with it he might say that it was merely a general rumour for which he was not responsible.

Mr. CHARLTON. What bearing has that upon this subsection ?

Mr. CLANCY. The hon. gentleman is attempting to remedy an evil, but there would be no remedy if the employer did not personally commit the offence—and, of course, he would take good care not to identify himself with such a threat, but would take equally good care that somebody else should make that threat for him. I would like to call attention also to this clause :

(j.) Every person who by abduction, duress or any forcible or fraudulent device or contrivance, impedes, prevents or otherwise interferes with the free exercise of the elective franchise by any voter, or compels, induces, or prevails upon any voter to give or refrain from giving his vote for or against any candidate at any election ;

Now, the hon. gentleman had in his mind the repeal of section 112, because this would be a portion of section 112. There are many other means of intimidation that could not come under the provisions of this Bill. I have a Bill myself on the same subject. In the province of Ontario, the hon. gentleman knows very well, there is no secret ballot. And he knows very well also that that fact is made use of at every local election in the province of Ontario—not openly, it is true, because then it would lose its effect—to intimidate the electors, and that electors are so intimidated from one end of the province to the other. Men are told that they need not hope to escape punishment if they vote against certain candidates, or, at least, that their only hope is in the mercy of the men who know just how they vote. I have a Bill providing that every person who declares that the Dominion ballot, which, as a matter of fact in a secret ballot, is not secret, shall be punished. Men who have told that the local ballot is not secret, and have no means of knowing whether it is or not, have been intimidated on more than one occasion by the statement that the Dominion ballot likewise is not secret. I have a Bill making it an indictable offence for any one to make that statement to intimidate voters. If you repeal section 112, which enumerates many actions which are offences under the law, you make it impossible to punish persons guilty of those actions. I am not a lawyer, but I venture to state that no lawyer drew the hon. gentleman's (Mr. Charlton's) Bill. It was drawn by a layman, I am sure, and it is quite as faulty as one would be that I might draw myself. I hope the hon. gentleman will not insist upon the form of his measure. And I am going to appeal to the Minister of Justice (Hon. Mr. Fitzpatrick) upon this point. I would suggest to that hon. gentleman that we should not consider his Bill without considering also the Bill that I have on the same subject. I do not know anything that would be more likely to open the door to the very evils that, I have do doubt, the hon. gentleman (Mr. Charlton) means to remedy than the changes he proposes—without considering the general effect of those changes. The hon. gentleman simply adopts a part of section 112 and repeals the rest of that section. I am sure the Minister of Justice will agree with me. And I would ask him, for he is a good lawyer, not to attempt to deal with this Bill without considering other Bills on the subject. I think we should not have gone into Committee on this Bill without having at least taken into consideration, other Bills the enactment of which might be prevented by passing this one.

Mr. INGRAM. I think the hon. gentleman's (Mr. Charlton's) Bill is in the right direction. But I do not know whether it is intended to refer to companies employing labour.

Mr. CHARLTON. It is.

Mr. INGRAM. It seems to me that it is for individuals rather than for companies.

Mr. CHARLTON. It applies to companies also, and the penalty for violation is that the company loses its charter.

Mr. INGRAM. I would like to quote an instance involving a point which this Bill should be made to cover. In the last provincial election in North Perth, a certain railway official used his influence on behalf of a certain candidate. When remonstrated with, he denied using his influence, and to square himself he issued a circular something like this: 'This is to certify that every employee of the company is at liberty to vote for John Brown without interference.' Now, John Brown happened to be the Liberal candidate. So, the employees were told that they were at liberty to vote for the Liberal candidate. We should have a section of the Election Act providing that any interference on the part of a superintendent or general manager or other official of a railway designed to influence the votes of employees of the company should be a violation of the law. This would be a section in the interests of all, for we must realize that managers of these institutions are not always Liberals, and that the Liberal government will not always have it in their power to use influence with the employees of railway companies or other large corporations.

Mr. CLANCY. I would like to read to the hon. Minister of Justice (Hon. Mr. Fitzpatrick) the provision of Bill (No. 15) and to ask him to say whether it is covered by the Bill we are now discussing:

1. Section 112 of the Dominion Elections Act, 1900, is amended by adding after the word 'loss' in the fifth line thereof, the following words: 'or makes use of any language to the effect that the ballot to be used or the mode of voting at the election is not secret.'

I ask the hon. gentleman now if section j of section 1, in the Bill of the hon. member for North Norfolk would include an offence such as I propose to punish in my Bill?

The MINISTER OF JUSTICE. I have carefully considered the hon. gentleman's Bill, and my impression is that his suggested amendment would be absolutely useless to effect the object he aims at. It would be useless, because his object is to reach the process of intimidation and to stop it. It is intimidation to say to a man: If you vote in this particular way I shall know it; I will know how you vote, because the ballot is not secret, and by the knowledge I have acquired, by the fact that the ballot is not secret, I will be able to injure you. There is a process of intimidation. Now section 112 says:

Every one who, directly or indirectly, by himself or by any other person on his behalf, makes use of, or threatens to make use of, any force, violence or restraint, or inflicts, or threatens the infliction, by himself, or by or through any other person, of any injury, damage, harm or loss——

Then the section goes on to say:

—or in any manner practices intimidation.

Now these general words are broad enough to cover the case suggested by my hon. friend, and it seems to me meets, as far as possible, the case he suggests. I think in drafting legislation of this sort it is always wise to make the words general enough to cover every case, instead of specializing a case, as suggested by his amendment.

Mr. CLANCY. The hon. gentleman will permit me to say that I have stopped far short of what he has read, and say 'any manner of intimidation.'

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). I hardly think, with all due deference to the opinion of the Minister of Justice, that the case comes within the term 'intimidation.' A voter might not like to have his manner of voting known, and yet might not be oppressed by any sense of fear, he might not desire to have it known for social or business reasons. The fact would remain, however, that he did not desire it to be known, and if he thought it would be known, perhaps he might not vote at all. In this view it would hardly be said to come within the meaning of the word 'intimidation.' Of course the principle laid down by the Minister of Justice is a good one, to use general words and not to specialize. To attempt to specialize and not specialize thoroughly, would result in more harm than good. But there is this to be said in favour of the standpoint of my hon. friend from Bothwell (Mr. Clancy): He is speaking of something that has occurred in his own experience, he is speaking of a particular evil, and it would be possible to accomplish his amendment by providing that the special provision proposed as an amendment to the statute should not in any way restrict the effect of the general words which are used. I would like to understand from the hon. member for North Norfolk (Mr. Charlton), why it is that he repeals section 112, and I would like him to point out to me whether all the provisions of 112 are included in this Bill, or if not, why he thinks they are not necessary?

The MINISTER OF JUSTICE. Perhaps it would be better to dispose of this clause in the form in which we have it now, and when we reach that repealing clause, 112, it can be discussed. There are some verbal changes in this clause which I think are necessary.

Mr. CHARLTON. In answer to the question asked by the leader of the opposition, I may say that the transfer of the section 112 to this place was due to the fact that I considered the section specified an offence in the same line as the subsection from 'a' to the one preceding this, and put it there for the purpose of having the provisions with regard to punishment on the next page, applicable to this as well as to the others. If this was condensed somewhat we might yet believe that it embodied all the provisions contained in section 112. But if that is not the case, section 112 as it stands upon the statute-book can be substituted for the language here. It was transferred here merely for the purpose of bringing it and the other offences under one general term.

The MINISTER OF JUSTICE. In the last paragraph there is considerable change in the penalty. Two years is substituted for 'six months,' a penalty of $500 to $200, and there is disfranchisement for a period of seven years under forfeiture of the charter. These provisions are entirely new. That clause will require careful consideration.

Mr. LANCASTER. I want to point out that this section from the very beginning of subsection 'j' would be much more effective if all the words after 'who' in the first line of subsection 'j' to the word 'impedes' in the second line, were left out. I do not see why we sholuld limit the impeding, preventing, &c., to any particular sort of interference. It says: 'Every person who by abduction, duress or any forcible or fraudulent device or contrivance, impedes.' Why should they impede at all? Why should they impede, prevent or otherwise interfere with the free exercise of the elective franchise by any voter, in any way at all? One can see at once that a dozen cases might arise which a court would have to decide did not come within these words. I think the Minister of Justice will agree with me that if we would make the law effective, as we ought to try to do, we ought certainly to strike out these words so that if any one is impeded, prevented or otherwise interfered with in any way whatever there ought to be a penalty, instead of saying that the impeding must be done by 'abduction, duress or any forcible or fraudulent device or contrivance.' Any lawyer will see that you are hedging the prosecution around with many insuperable difficulties. I submit it would be much more effective, and better legislation, and would accomplish the object we have in view, if these words were struck out.

Mr. COWAN. I think the House generally will agree that it is the desire of all parties to have an election law that is not only drastic, but one that will reach the various crimes that may be committed during, as well as prior to and subsequent to a political contest. There ought to be some provision that whenever a man, for any consideration, or under any promise, connives for an illegal purpose at getting information from another and in consideration of that information stifles the ends of justice, either in Canada or a foreign country, he ought to be punished. I find here that a case arose of that kind in the year 1899, and I propose to read to the House the evidence in order that the House may see the seriousness of the crime and the manner in which the information was procured.

Mr. INGRAM. Is it evidence?

Mr. COWAN (reading):

Mr. Watson next introduced the question of the Detroit affidavits, read by Mr. Whitney in the legislature. The first one was, the witness said, made by Judge Carpenter on December 29 last. It was prepared by Mr. Barker. It was prepared by Mr. Barker, a lawyer of Hamilton, a tall, thin man. The document was written in the hotel Cadillac. The parties met by appointment, a note being left with Mr. Spence, with whom witness was staying, fixing the place of meeting. Mr. Spence went with him; they met Mr. Barker and Mr. Fleming, of Windsor.

In reply to Barker, witness said he would make an affidavit under certain conditions.

Q. Under what conditions ?—A. That they would withdraw the warrant that was out against me ; they would protect me.

Q. How ?—A. By allowing me to go home ; have the warrant withdrawn and not prosecute me, or something to that effect.

Q. In consideration of what ?—A. That I would tell them what I knew about the West Elgin election.

Q. Have the warrants been withdrawn ?—A. So far as I know, I would not be here if they had not been.

Q. Have you seen the warrants since ?—A. I saw them once in Windsor in Mr. Fleming's office.

That statement was made by me a few moments ago ; I made it upon the authority of the man who had made the sworn statement. The hon. member for Hamilton (Mr. Barker) has used rather strong language against me, even going so far, I think, as to call me a deliberate liar in stating what Pritchett swore to that he met the hon. member in Detroit, while if the bargain made at that meeting had been made in this country, would have rendered the member for Hamilton (Mr. Barker) amenable to the criminal law.

Mr. BARKER. I said a few moments ago distinctly that any man who makes the assertion which I understand the hon. member for South Sussex——

Mr. COWAN. Pritchett swore to it.

Mr. BARKER. Any man, I do not care who or where he is, who makes the assertion that I ever promised to withdraw, or said one word to the effect that I would withdraw or procure the withdrawal of the warrant, or in any way interfere with the prosecution of Pritchett, or any other man, tells a deliberate falsehood. I saw the man Pritchett. He was about to make an affidavit and he did make the affidavit. He asked me in the presence of Mr. Fleming if, on behalf of the Conservative party, I would say that he should not be prosecuted. I told him distinctly half a dozen times that I would give him no such promise, that I could give him no such promise. I told him that the prosecution was in the hands of the Liberal party, that the county attorney of Elgin was a Liberal, and that if he wished to enforce the warrant he could do so.

Mr. COWAN. How did you and Mr. Fleming get the warrant in your possession ?

Mr. BARKER. That statement that we got the warrant into our possession is an absolute falsehood. I never saw the warrant. I never heard of it. How would we get the warrant ?

Mr. COWAN. From the constable ?

Mr. BARKER. I did not know who the constable was.

Mr. COWAN. The hon. member for East Elgin (Mr. Ingram) knows.

Mr. BARKER. I said that the matter was in the hands of the county attorney of Elgin—a Liberal.

Mr. COWAN. Not a Liberal.

Mr. BARKER. I say this to the hon. member (Mr. Cowan) that I did not promise to withdraw that warrant or any other warrant. I repeat it in the strongest language—I do not care who says it or who repeats it. It is an absolute untruth and there is not the slightest foundation for it.

Mr. COWAN. What I stated was——

Mr. BENNETT. Give us Cap. Sullivan and his gang.

Mr. COWAN. I do not know Cap. Sullivan, but apparently the hon. member for East Simcoe (Mr. Bennett) does.

Mr. BENNETT. I have seen the blackguard with your ministers.

Mr. DEPUTY SPEAKER. I think that as both hon. members have had their say we had better proceed with the consideration of the Bill.

Mr. COWAN. I have just had the first half of mine, Mr. Chairman. I want to be perfectly fair to the hon. member for Hamilton. All I can say is that Pritchett swore to it, that it was printed in every newspaper, that it was spoken of concerning the hon. member for Hamilton from many political platforms, and that it was brought up in this House. Yet, this is the first time that I have ever heard any contradiction of it. Pritchett swears that the hon. member for Hamilton prepared the affidavit and he swears that they had the warrant and had it at Windsor. However, I am prepared to accept the statement of the hon. member for Hamilton and to congratulate him that he is the first hon. gentleman on the other side of the House to join with us in saying that Pritchett was a liar, because, down to the present time, hon. gentlemen opposite have always declared that he was the most truthful gentleman that ever gave evidence.

Mr. BARKER. Mr. Chairman——

Mr. DEPUTY SPEAKER. I must urge hon. gentlemen——

Some hon. MEMBERS. Oh, oh; fair play, fair play.

Mr. DEPUTY SPEAKER. Order. My object is to bring the committee back to the work before it.

Some hon. MEMBERS. Go on ; go on.

Mr. BARKER. The hon. member for South Essex says that I never denied it. I denied it the first time the statement was ever made in my presence. He says further that the warrant was withdrawn in Windsor.

Mr. COWAN. I made no such statement. I said that Pritchett said that he afterwards saw the warrant in Mr. Fleming's office, who was the gentleman who was with you when the affidavit was drawn and when you made the promise, if a promise was made.

Mr. BARKER. I was never present in Mr. Fleming's office in Windsor and I cannot say whether that is true or not. I can only answer for what occurred when I was present. Pritchett was told positively that the warrant would not be withdrawn, that no effort would be made to withdraw it, and that if he returned to Canada he might be arrested so far as the Conservative party were concerned. I said: You will be arrested by the Liberals. He said: Oh, I will take the risk of being arrested by the Liberals. I dare them to arrest me.

Mr. SPROULE. They have not arrested him yet.

Mr. INGRAM. I would ask the mover of this Bill if section 'K' applies to companies or corporations, such as railway companies. There is very grave doubt as to whether it really applies to corporations and if it does not apply to them it is useless. It would appear that an employer may not do certain things but a foreman engaged by an employer might do all the things in this section and yet it would not apply.

Mr. CHARLTON. Look at the fifth line on the second page, ' or in case the offense is committed by a corporation it shall forfeit its charter.'

Mr. INGRAM. That would not apply to the case I have mentioned.

Mr. BENNETT. A great deal of this kind of legislation in Ontario is a laughing stock, and whether our federal legislation on this matter is going to follow suit remains to be seen. While the hon. gentleman who introduced the Bill is not a lawyer, the Minister of Justice is, and the Minister of Justice must be responsible to the people for such legislation as this. It would appear to me that the manager of a railway or even the foreman on a railway, being an employee, could not be got at under clause 'J.' I agree with the principle of the Bill because no one in this House suffers more from intimidation than the candidate in East Simcoe. There are two large public institutions in that riding and the grossest intimidation is practiced by the gentlemen who are in charge of these institutions under the local government. In addition, the lumbering concerns are as a rule adverse to the cause I represent. There should be a clause added to this Bill to meet such cases as that. I have known it to occur that on the day prior to an election the men were called before the mill at the dinner hour and were frankly told—this occurred in the local election—that owing to the numbers being on the ballots it would be known how they voted, that there would be an officer of the company in the poll to keep watch, and that in the interest of the company the men must support the Liberal candidate. That has also been done in the federal contest. The employer thinks that a more efficacious way than to issue a circular which might come up in evidence against him. If the hon. gentleman (Mr. Charlton) wants to meet such cases of intimidation as that he must amend his Bill. A deaf and dumb employer would be denied the privilege of suggesting to his men by letter or circular how he wishes them to vote, but the employer who is fluent of speech can intimidate his men into voting as he wishes. But there is another view of this matter. Surely the law will not say that the owner of a manufacturing concern must not in conversation with his men express his opinion as to how he thinks the tariff for instance might affect his particular industry. That would be hampering the right of the individual. If this Bill really carries out the view the hon. gentleman (Mr. Charlton) seems to have, he would have to provide for the punishment of a manufacturer who at a public meeting expresses his opinion as to what results a charge of tariff would have on the particular industry with which he is concerned.

Mr. INGRAM. I submit that the Minister of Justice should have some opinion to give on this Bill.

The MINISTER OF JUSTICE. I have been appealed to more than once but whenever I rose to reply some hon. gentleman had intervened to address the House. When this Bill was introduced I was under the impression that it met with general acceptance and I was anxious to hear what should be said in favour of it. I was anxious that it should get into committee so that we might hear the details discussed. So far as my opinion is concerned of any value to this House I would say that the clauses of this Bill down to clause 'L' provide for nothing that is not provided for by section 112, and that section 112 provides for many things that are not provided for by this Bill. The difficulty suggested about the employer, or the employee or the foremen would be met by section 112, and it is not met by this Bill.

Mr. INGRAM. That is a very good reason why in the case of Bills of this character the clauses which it is proposed to amend should be printed so that we know what we are doing.

The MINISTER OF JUSTICE. I did not intend this Bill to get out of committee without saying what I had to say about it. Some people pretended to be very virtuous when this Bill was introduced, and anxious that it should become law, and I was waiting until my time came to express an opinion about it.

Mr. INGRAM. It occurred to me that the Bill was in the right direction but whether it was not already provided for by law I was unable to say. I have had occasion to study the Election Act pretty frequently but I confess that I cannot carry out all its clauses in my head. If the clauses which it is sought to amend were printed we would know what we are doing.

The MINISTER OF JUSTICE. Some thing may be said in favour of subsections 'L' and 'N' of subsection 1, but that is all I think that would be useful in the Bill. The provision in subsection 2 is better met under the Canada Evidence Act. Section 4 goes too far and will fail entirely of the purpose my hon. friend (Mr. Charlton) has in view I expected to hear the Bill fully discussed in committee, and then to ask that the committee should rise and at a future date I might have some statement to make in connection with the Bill.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). To whom did the Minister of Justice refer to as being very virtuous and wishing the Bill to pass ?

The MINISTER OF JUSTICE. I would rather not pursue that matter any further.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). Our object on this side of the House is to make the Bill as efficient as possible. Some time ago I myself made the suggestion which the Minister of Justice has now made that subsections 'J' and 'K' do not embody all the provisions of section 112, I think that the Minister of Justice should be able to tell us now what is the policy of the government in regard to this. A public Bill of this kind is under the control of the government and should be dealt with by the government, and I expected that the Minister of Justice would place before us for consideration the amendments which he thought ought to be made. My hon. friend the Minister of Justice has not done that. I think he ought to do it as being responsible for legislation of this character. That is to say, he should come here with a suggestion of amendments which the government think ought to be made in this Bill and let the Committee have a chance of considering them. I fully agree that we cannot pass the Bill in just its present form, though I am not clear as to my concurrence in some of the suggestions which the hon. Minister of Justice has made. The Bill will require considerable amendment before it is passed. In saying that I am sincerely desirous of assisting the hon. gentleman who has introduced it in his very good intention of making the election law more effective. But I would like to know whether the government have had under consideration the two possible amendments which I suggested on the motion for the second reading of the Bill. One is the appointment of an officer to fill the position of public prosecutor under the election law, who should be placed in the same independent position as the Auditor General now ocupies. The other, which would be more pertinent as an amendment to the Franchise Act, is to provide that any man who does not see fit to exercise his franchise shall not have the opportunity of exercising it for some time thereafter. I think the two sides of the House might meet on common ground with regard to some of these matters, and do much to remedy a condition of affairs that is not creditable to either political party in Canada.

Mr. ROBINSON (Elgin). I would like, before the Committee rises, to have this added to the Bill :

That any person known to subscribe to an election fund shall be liable to a fine of not less than $500 and to be imprisoned for not less than six months, with or without hard labour.

The MINISTER OF JUSTICE. With reference to the remarks of my hon. friend the leader of the opposition, I always carefully consider to the best of my ability legislation of this sort before it is brought before the House. At the same time, I do not think it would be right or proper for me to express a final or settled opinion until I hear all that is to be said on the measure. I come here for the purpose of listening to the discussion. I have my opinions, but they are not, like the laws of the Medes and Persians, unalterable. I come here for light, and perhaps, after I hear further discussion, I may change some of my opinions. I wish to have the measure discussed by men who, from their experience in election courts, can give light on many of these matters; and when it is fully discussed, my intention is to ask the Committee to rise and report progress, so that I may have an opportunity of considering all that has been said, and, when the Committee meets again, I may have some statement to make to the House.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. My hon. friend's remarks have reference, and very properly, to this particular Bill. My own view, speaking for myself—and I do not think my colleague will dissent from it—is that the representatives of the people on both sides, by a special committee, ought to take into consideration the question how we might amend the electoral law so as to avoid those evils which have received so much prominence in the past. I am glad to hear the hon. leader of the opposition speak in the same sense to-day. It is not worth while for us to make recriminations across the House in regard to the conduct of elections. We must recognize, from the revelations of the election courts, that there have been manifestations in connection with elections which must be a cause of regret to men on both sides; and if we approach the subject dispassionately, with a desire to bring about some improvement, I think something might be done. One view I have held so strongly that it has been called a fad, is that the courts should themselves take cognizance of an election without waiting for a petition. The judges might investigate an election, say within one month or two months after it took place, while it is fresh in the public mind, and while men are ready to bring forward evidence if they have it. The present method of requiring a petition to be filed is open to objection. For instance, it is wrong to fine a man a thousand dollars before allowing him to file a petition. If there has been corruption in an election, we ought not to put difficulties in the way of an investigation, which is done as the law now stands. It might be difficult to get the judges to perform the duty I suggest; but after all, while some of the judges are overworked, a considerable number of them have ample time to undertake it. They would not wait for a petition, but the investigation would be compulsory. Then, when I went into an election campaign, I would go into it with the fact before my eyes that shortly afterwards my conduct would be investigated.

Mr. INGRAM. What does the hon. gentleman think of compulsory voting ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. Compulsory voting in the ordinary sense of the word we should hesitate to enforce; but such compulsory voting as has been referred to this afternoon is, I think, well worthy of consideration; that is, that if an elector does not think enough of the franchise to cast his vote, his name should be left off the list for some time afterwards. To that extent I would favour compulsory voting. Many of these questions present difficulties, but we are here to try to solve these difficulties, and I am persuaded that if hon. gentlemen on both sides, instead of fighting each other, united to devise the best remedy for the evils referred to, we could accomplish much good. With regard to the trading off of election petitions, it does seem a public scandal; but on the other hand one-half of the petitions are filed without any knowledge or information, and there is no great harm in withdrawing them. But with a proper administration of our election laws, we might save a great deal of scandal and trouble that now exists. We should make an attempt in a non-partisan spirit, and if our hon. friends opposite will receive the suggestion in that spirit, we would be glad to meet them in a committee and endeavour to bring about a reform in the law, not simply to the extent to which the hon. member for North Norfolk desires, but beyond that in other directions that may make for purity in elections.

Hon. Mr. FIELDING.

Mr. INGRAM. I would suggest that the government bring in a resolution for the appointment of a committee for that purpose.

At six o'clock Committee took recess.

After Recess.

Committee resumed at Eight o'clock.

Mr. CHARLTON. There seems to be a very thin House to-night, and just before recess the hon. Minister of Finance (Hon. Mr. Fielding) suggested the striking of a special committee for the purpose of considering the provisions of this Bill and also other features of the election law, and formulating, if possible, a complete measure. Perhaps under the circumstances it would be better not to proceed with this Bill now. Neither the Minister of Justice nor the Minister of Finance is here, and many hon. members who had participated in this debate are absent. The proposition made by the hon. Minister of Finance can scarcely be considered in his absence, and I think the better course would be to rise and report progress. I beg therefore to move that the committee rise and report progress and ask leave to sit again.

Motion agreed to, and progress reported.

SECOND READING.

Bill (No. 19) respecting drainage on and across the property of railway companies.—Mr. Cowan.

MOTIONS AGREED TO WITHOUT DISCUSSION.

Return of all goods of whatsoever kind entered by the Intercolonial Railway duty free, for use of said railway.—Mr. Fowler.

Copies of all Orders in Council, documents, and corespondence between the Government, or any Department, and Messrs. McKenzie & Mann, or the Canadian Northern Railway.—Hon. Mr. Tarte.

Copies of all judgments or opinions delivered by the Supreme Court of Manitoba, touching the alleged rights of exemption from taxation, claimed by the Canadian Pacific Railway Company, in respect of the land of the said company, in the North-west Territories, or in Manitoba.—Mr. Borden (Halifax).

INTERPRETATION ACT AMENDMENT.

Mr. F. D. MONK (Jacques Cartier) moved the second reading of Bill (No. 18) to amend the Interpretation Act. He said : Mr. Speaker, the Bill the second reading of which I have the honour to move was suggested to me by the sensation, if I may use such an expression, which was created in the province of Quebec at the time of the rendering of the judgment of the Privy Council in the case of Roy vs. the Canadian Pacific Railway Company. When I have stated the facts in that case as briefly as possible, the House will at once understand the object of the Bill under consideration. Roy was a farmer in the province of Quebec. His barn was in the neighbourhood of the Canadian Pacific Railway. The barn was consumed by fire, and Roy sought to recover damages from the Canadian Pacific Railway Company on the ground that his barn had been ignited by a spark from one of the locomotives of the company. He brought his action in the Supreme Court of the province of Quebec. The court of original jurisdiction rendered judgment in favour of Roy for the sum of $300. Mr. Justice Langelier, of the Superior Court, who heard the case in the first instance, and whose judgment, as well as the judgment of the Court of Appeals, which was rendered subsequently, can be found in the Law reports, appeals cases, 1902, at page 220, held that the fire had been caused by a spark from a locomotive of the Canadian Pacific Railway and one of his considerants or motives, reads as follows :

Considering that the circumstances unfolded in the case leave no doubt that the fire was kindled either by sparks escaping from the locomotive or by fire thrown in some other way from the train;

Considering that there thence results a presumption of negligence or carelessness on the parts of the defendant's employees in charge of the train, and that it was the defendants' duty to negative this presumption, which they have not done ;

Considering that the defendants were responsible for damages caused to the plaintiff by the fire ;

—and the judge gave Roy a decree as I have said, for the sum of $300. An appeal to the Court of Queen's Bench in the province of Quebec was taken on the ground that, in fact and on the finding of the court below, it was not shown that the fire was caused by any act on the part of the appellant or their employees and also that the complainant had not proved negligence and that they were not liable by law. The Court of Appeals of the province of Quebec held that the Canadian Pacific Railway was responsible in spite of its proof, which the Court of Appeals considered satisfactory, that, the Canadian Pacific Railway Company had adopted all the modern appliances necessary to prevent accidents by fire arising from sparks issuing from the smoke-stacks of their locomotives. In spite of this fact and of the argument, very strongly urged on the part of the Canadian Pacific Railway Company that, having proved that they had taken every precaution and having been authorized by parliament to run their trains, they were not responsible for damages caused by the running of their trains, the Court of Appeals of the province of Quebec, considering that the defendants while authorized to operate their trains, are, nevertheless, liable to damages which the exercise of this right may cause, and, that, in this regard they are subject to the rules of liability fixed in this province, by the civil law of this province, affirm the judgment of the Superior Court. I may say here, for the information of the House, that the Court of Appeals based its judgment on the following articles of our civil code for lower Canada :

Article 356: civil corporations constituting, by the fact of their incorporation, ideal or artificial persons, are as such governed by the laws affecting individuals; saving the privileges they enjoy and the disabilities they are subject to.

Article 1053. Every person capable of discerning right from wrong is responsible for the damage caused by his fault to another, whether by positive act, imprudence, neglect or want of skill.

Article 1054. He is responsible not only for the damage caused by his own fault, but also for that caused by the fault of persons under his control . . . Masters and employers are responsible for the damage caused by their servants and workmen in the performance of the work for which they are employed.

Now, let me quote the remarks of Mr. Justice Hall in rendering the judgment of the Court of Appeals in the province of Quebec, as reported in the law reports of appeal cases :

The appellants' argument is that as parliament has given to them the statutory power to use locomotives for hauling their trains, the necessary use of fire in them, and the occasional escape of sparks from them, must have been anticipated, and therefore, if every reasonable precaution is taken against such escapes the railway companies are relieved, in advance, of the consequence of any fire resulting from sparks accidentally escaping.

The appellants admit that at common law they would be responsible for damage to others caused by fires from their locomotives, irrespective of the question of negligence on their part, but contend that the statute, by authorizing the use of locomotives, has taken away the common law liability, and left them responsible only for the effect of negligence. The English authorities support this position, commencing with the case of Rex v. Pease (1), followed by Vaughan v. Taff Vale Railway Company (3), Fletcher v. Rylands (3), Smith v. London and Southwestern Railway Company (4), and lastly, the important case of Port Glasgow and Newark Sailcloth Company v. Caledonian Railway (5), with the report of which we have been favoured by Appellants' counsel, as found in 30 S.L.R. 587 (6), in which it was held : that the legislature by authorizing the use of steam engines on railways, has impliedly indemnified railway companies against the consequence of the use of such engines, provided they are of the best construction and that the proper safeguards are used for minimizing the risk of fire damage.

The same principle has evidently been followered in those provinces of the Dominion in which the English law has been adopted, and by our Supreme Court in cases which originated in such provinces.

Mr. Justice Hall proceeds as follows :—

The appellants have conclusively established, we think that the principle for which they contend is supported by English jurisprudence wherever that jurisprudence is in force, but in a matter pertaining to civil rights and liabilities in this province we are controlled by a different authority, which is binding upon us whenever it conflicts with the law of England, as it does upon this question, and under that authority we are of opinion that a different rule prevails. As Mr. Holt clearly puts the matter in his Canadian Railway Law, page 18: 'The French law, and consequently the law in the province of Quebec, is that the (railway) company is always responsible, notwithstanding the adoption by them of every means of precaution known to science. Upon such question it is our duty to refer to the French jurisprudence and text writers, not that that country dictates or enforces our laws, but because our civil laws were derived from France, and find therefore, its best exponents. Their jurisprudence is uniform and conclusive, and proceeds upon a principle derived from the Roman law which must commend itself to all as both equitable and just, namely, that no one may use his property in such a way as to injure that of his neighbour, 'Sic utere tuo ut alieo ne lædas' and the French authors carry this principle so far as to contend that even the legislature has not power to violate it, and that whenever it confers special privileges upon an individual or a company, the reserve in favour of the neighbours rights must be understood to have been intended.

Mr. Justice Bossé spoke very much in the same terms. I may say that the judges of the Court of Appeal in the province of Quebec, in delivering this judgment, referred at great length to our constant jurisprudence in the province of Quebec upon that very subject. The cases which they quoted are reported at length in our own report, but they are summarized in this very full report, the Law Reports of Appeal Cases, 1902, page 220, the case of Roy. I will endeavour to be as short as possible and not go more fully into what was held by the Court of Appeal, as I think the House sufficiently understands that point. The case was taken to the Privy Council on the ground, I suppose, that rights in future might be affected, because the amount of the judgment was only $300. The Judicial Committee of the Privy Council unanimously recommended that the judgment be set aside and the appeal maintained, and Roy's action was dismissed. It was dismissed without costs, because costs had not been asked for. The Lord Chancellor spoke as follows :—

The serious and important question sought to be raised in this appeal is whether the railway company, authorized by statute to carry on their railway undertaking in the place and by means that they do carry it on, are responsible in damage for injuries not caused by negligence but by the ordinary and normal use of their railway.

Both courts below have held that in the province of Quebec the railway company is so responsible and the question is whether that is the law.

The argument appears to be founded on the suggestion that Quebec has a civil law of its own, and that in that province all corporations like all other persons are responsible for causing damage to their neighbours by a fault—that is to say, any actionable wrong, whether imprudence or want of skill ; and another article of the Code provides that civil corporations constituting by the fact of their incorporation ideal or artificial persons are as such governed by the laws affecting individuals, having the privileges they enjoy and the disabilities they are subjected to.

If the immunity claimed for the appellant were simply claimed upon the ground that they were a corporation without reference to what they are authorized to do in that capacity, the argument would be well founded; but the fallacy of the suggestion lies in supposing that immunity is claimed because they are a corporation. If it were so, there would be no difference between the law of England and the law as so expounded in the province of Quebec ; but the ground upon which the immunity of a railway company for injury caused by the normal use of their line is based is that the legislature, which is supreme, has authorized the particular thing so done in the place and by the means contemplated by the legislature, and that cannot constitute an actionable wrong in England any more than it can constitute a fault by the Quebec Code.

Further on the Lord Chancellor says :—

This permission——

That is to say, the authorization of parliament to run a railroad.

This permission, of course, does not authorize the thing to be done negligently or even unnecessarily to cause damage to others. Much was argued by the learned counsel for the respondent as to the peculiar jurisprudence of Quebec, but in truth there is no such difference between the law of England and the law of Quebec in this respect as he seemed to suppose. The law of England, equally with the law of the province in question, affirms the maxim 'Sic utere tuo ut alieo ne lædas.' But the previous state of the law, whether in Quebec, or France, or England, cannot render inoperative the positive enactment of a statute, and the whole case turns, not upon what was a common law of either country, but what is the true construction of plain words authorizing the doing of the very thing complained of.

The legislature is supreme and if it has enacted that a thing is lawful, such a thing cannot be a fault or an actionable wrong. The thing to be done is a privilege as well as a right and duty, and it seems to the Lordships it comes within the expressed language of the code (article 356).

Now, Mr. Speaker, what I desire to call attention to is the fact that, as indicated by the remarks of the judges who delivered judgment in the Superior Court as well as in the Court of Appeal in our own province, there has never been any variance in our own province as to the principle hitherto prevailing there, namely, that persons or corporations, as in the present case, even when exercising a right, or doing something which has been expressly authorized by statute, if in the exercise of that right those persons or companies commit a wrong or cause damage, they are responsible for those damages. The jurisprudence in our own province has been uniform upon that point, and it sems to me, with all due respect to the judgment rendered by their Lordships in the Privy Council, and it has seemed to a great many lawyers and judges in our own province, that this is the correct interpretation of our own law. The judgments in our own province have been uniform, and they are based upon holdings of the French courts, the highest courts in France, which, as Mr. Justice Hall said, in delivering the judgment of the Court of Appeals, are not binding upon us excepting in so far as they serve to interpret the principles of a system of law which is the same as that which prevails in our own province.

Therefore, I say that the jurisprudence in France as well as in the province of Quebec is uniform upon this subject. The hon. Minister of Justice, in a very exhaustive and able article which was published in one of our legal monthly publications, 'La Revue Legale,' goes very fully into the study of the case of Roy vs. the Canadian Pacific Railway Company which, as I stated in the beginning, has created a very widespread interest among the legal fraternity and I might almost say among the general public in the province of Quebec. The hon. Minister of Justice in that article quotes the two judgments rendered in France which, to a very large extent, insofar as they are to be considered as precedents, or expositions of the system of law, which is our own to a very large extent, held precisely as our courts have held. The case which has frequently been quoted before our own tribunals is the case of the First Chamber of the Imperial Court of Bordeaux which reversed the judgments of the imperial courts in France and held, as it has been held in our own courts unanimously in the province of Quebec, that, even where a railway company in France is authorized to carry on the operations of a railway company, to run trains with all the danger that it entails, even when duly authorized in every respect and observing all the precautions possible to avoid accidents, if a railway locomotive sets fire to a building in the course of its operations the railway company is responsible. That is the decision of the Imperial Court of Bordeaux rendered in 1859. The second decision is the decision of the Tribunal of the Seine, also in 1859. I will not quote fully either of these judgments, though I intended to do so, but they hold absolutely the contrary of what was held by the Privy Council in this case of Roy. It is evident that in these cases the companies pleaded that they were exercising the right authorized by the supreme authority of the land and that they exercised that right with all due precaution; nevertheless, under the articles of the French code, very similar, if not absolutely identical to our own in reference to torts, they were held responsible. I will also quote from an author who is a very high authority; indeed, he is the highest on questions of damages—Laurent. Laurent, one of our best commentators, referring to the case of locomotives setting fire to buildings, exactly as in the case of Roy, says:

> Fire, or sparks which escape from locomotives often produce fires. Are companies in such case responsible? There can be no doubt as to the affirmative answer to this question when the accident is produced by faulty construction of the locomotive. When the locomotive is provided with proper appliances to prevent the issuing of sparks out of the smoke-stack the question is more doubtful.

And he proceeds to quote the decision of the Bordeaux Court. adding:

> One applies, in a case of this kind, the principles which regulate dangerous establishments. It would be useless for the company to invoke as an excuse the authorization which it has received to execute its works. The court will answer that the state has not conceded the right to cause damages.

My hon. friend the Minister of Justice, in this paper, seems to arrive at the conclusion, nevertheless, that there is no such authority in France as corresponds with our own parliament, particularly with the limitless authority which our parliaments have exercised, certainly, for a hundred years and as there is, according to the argument of the hon. Minister of Justice, no authority in France having the paramount strength which our parliament has, we cannot compare the jurisprudence of France with our own on a question of this kind. Well, the answer to that seems to me that although, as a matter of public law, if I say use that expression, the law making authority in France is not, in many respects, similar to the law making authority which we have here under British institutions, nevertheless, there is no doubt that in France railway companies, to exercise their rights, require the sanction of some supreme authority without which they cannot exercise those rights any more than railway companies can exercise them in our own country, and that, therefore, there is more analogy than this article of the hon. Minister of Justice would lead one to believe, there is more reason to give strength and value to the jurisprudence of France than at first sight one would think from the consideration invoked by the hon. Minister of Justice. But, at any rate, there can be no question as to what has obtained hitherto in our own country. The jurisprudence is all in the direction which I indicated as being the direction adopted by the Court of Appeals when it decided the case of Roy. I do not say, for my own part, that, even admitting that there is a difference between the absolute and paramount authority of our parliament, and the authority which the administration possesses in France, it makes any difference in regard to the responsibility in a case such as the case of Roy. because, the principle which the Court of Appeal of the province of Quebec adopted in the case of Roy, was: that under our civil law the relation between a private individual such as Roy and a company such as the Canadian Pacific Railway authorized to carry on its operations, is a relation which springs absolutely from our civil law—it is not governed by any principle of public law, but it is a relation which is governed absolutely by the principles of our civil code. And if we adopt these principles and adhere strictly to the doctrine of all our authors as to that relation ; even if the parliament of Canada has power to grant the most extensive privileges to a railway company or a telegraph company, or a company of any kind, nothing can disturb that relation as established by our Civil Code. Otherwise one would have to arrive at the conclusion that the civil relations which are entirely under the control of our provincial legislature, would be disturbed in every instance where the parliament of Canada has authorized the doing of certain things, and persons or companies enjoying the authorization of the parliament of Canada or of the Quebec legislature under this idea of a paramount authority, would be in a more advantageous position in regard to their civil relations with individuals than would ordinary persons who would not enjoy that special statutory advantage. That I think is contrary to justice and contrary to law. I am not going to attempt to discuss at length the question raised by the Minister of Justice in this interesting paper published by him; I shall not endeavour to establish before this House the principle, that under our law there was a civil responsibility in such a case as the Roy case. I proceed upon the principle that the interpretation given by our own courts to our own law is a proper interpretation, and that the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council if it held that it was not the law of our province, was mistaken ; which is a possibility which has happened already, because we know that in certain cases—rare cases it is true—the Privy Council has reversed its own decisions. Taking as the point of departure, that that is our law, this Bill is the solution which I have endeavoured to apply to this question. It is impossible, of course, and it would be improper, to seek to change the judgment rendered by the Lords of the Privy Council, but after consultation with many lawyers in my province and some judges, we have come to the conclusion that to avoid the happening of such things in the future as happened in the Roy case, it would be a proper thing to amend section 7 of the Interpretation Act, in order to emphasize the fact that in Canada property and civil rights are subject entirely to the jurisdiction of the province. I will quote the article of the Interpretation Act which this Bill is intended to amend, and I may say that in any event it seems to me that the amendment of the Interpretation Act can do nothing but good in the future. Article 7 says :

In every Act of the parliament of Canada, unless the context otherwise requires :—

(1.) The enactments apply to the whole of Canada.

(2.) No Act amending a previous Act which does not apply to all the provinces of Canada, and no enactments in any such amending Act, although of a substantive nature or form, shall apply to any province to which the amended Act does not apply, unless it is expressly provided that such amending Act or enactment shall apply to such province or to all the provinces of Canada.

The Bill which I propose amends paragraph 1 of section 7, and the section as amended would read as follows :

In every Act of the parliament of Canada unless the context otherwise provides : The enactments apply to the whole of Canada : Provided always, that no right, power or privilege conferred by an Act of the parliament of Canada, or by a charter granted under an Act of that parliament, shall exempt any person exercising that right, power or privilege, from any liability incurred by him under any Act of a legislature or under the common law.

This means that under section 7 as amended, there would be an affirmation in express terms, that no power granted by an Act of the parliament of Canada or by a charter, shall exempt any person exercising that right, power or privilege from any liability incurred under the law of the province relating to property and civil rights. That disposition of the Interpretation Act shall apply generally not only to railway companies, but to telegraph companies, electric companies and all industrial companies as to which there may be legislation in the future, and courts called upon to decide questions of tort or damage must take into consideration that clear indication in the law as amended, that whatever power the parliament of Canada can confer, it in no way interferes with the disposition of the law of one of the provinces under section 92 of the British North America Act, which reserves exclusively to the province the control as to property and civil rights. I do not know that it is possible for us here to go further than this. My hon. friend from St. John and Iberville (Mr. Demers) has an Act before the House which I suppose I may say has been suggested by this same case of Roy.

My hon. friend in that Bill proposes a different remedy which at first sight seems very acceptable to those who believe, as we in the province of Quebec, that railway companies, even when exercising a statutory right, are nevertheless liable for the damages which they cause. The enactment proposed by my hon. friend from St. John and Iberville is that the railway companies shall be absolutely responsible for fires caused by their locomotives. But what I submit to this House is that by an enactment of that kind we are invading the legislative domain which by our constitution is reserved absolutely to the provinces. We are enacting a law having reference to property and civil rights, and I question very much if that enactment would not be considered ultra vires of this legislature; and it presents this other feature, in that it imposes upon the other provinces a system of law as to tort and damages which has never prevailed there; because, I take it, although I am not familiar with their systems of law, that in the other provinces of this Dominion the rule of law laid down by the Privy Council in the case of Roy is the rule which prevails everywhere. It is only in the province of Quebec, under the system of the old Roman law and the French civil law, that we are in a certain sense exceptionally and advantageously situated in regard to fires such as happen in the case of Roy; and it is deemed important in our province that we should preserve that disposition of the law which requires railway companies to indemnify farmers and others whose barns are set fire to by the operation of the railways, whether they are exercising a statutory right or not. In other words, I have been induced to bring in this Bill in order to emphasize, if possible, the guarantee which our civil law gives in cases such as the one now under consideration. How far this Bill may succeed in preserving that privilege I do not know. I would be quite prepared to adopt any other remedy of a practical nature that might be suggested. But after careful consideration of the question, and after submitting that question to the consideration of a great number of persons in my province who are more conversant than I am with the intricacies of our law, they have come to the conclusion that the Bill now submitted to the House is the most effectual remedy that can be provided under the circumstances. At any rate, that Bill, by extending the provisions of the Interpretation Act, and by emphasizing the principle that any enactment of this legislature should not interfere with the enactments properly made of our own legislature, can do no harm. Therefore, I think the Bill ought to commend itself to the consideration of this House.

The SOLICITOR GENERAL (Hon. H. G. Carroll). The question has been raised in some quarters in our province, that this parliament has never the right to interfere where property and civil rights are concerned; but I was not prepared to hear the hon. member for Jacques Cartier (Mr. Monk) sustaining the same doctrine before this House to-night. There are some matters which are under the jurisdiction of this parliament, on which we could not legislate unless civil rights were affected by our legislation. This parliament has jurisdiction on every subject within its province, and if, when it legislates upon these subjects, civil rights are incidentally affected by our legislation, our jurisdiction is extended to those civil rights. Take, for instance, the question of bankruptcy and insolvency. These two questions are under the jurisdiction of this parliament. It is evident that if we legislate upon them, questions relating to property and civil rights will be affected by our legislation; but this is necessary in order to give effect to the legislation enacted by this parliament. Take, for instance, the granting of a charter to a railway company. It is evident, if the charter is granted and the railway is operated, that question relating to property will arise, and our jurisdiction is extended to those questions of property in so far as it is necessary to give effect to the charter we grant. This question came before the Privy Council in the case of Tennant vs. the Union Bank of Canada. In this case it was argued that property and civil rights, being assigned to the provincial legislature by section ninety-two of the British North America Act, the parliament of Canada was absolutely debarred from trenching on these subjects. But, says the judgment:

> Section 91 expressly declares that 'notwithstanding anything in this Act' the exclusive legislative authority of the parliament of Canada shall extend to all matters coming within the enumerated classes; which plainly indicates that the legislation of that parliament, so long as it strictly relates to these matters, is to be of paramount authority. To refuse effect to the declaration would render nugatory some of the legislative powers specially assigned to the Canadian parliament. For example, among the enumerated classes of subjects in section 91 are patents of invention and discovery, and copyrights. It would be practically impossible for the Dominion parliament to legislate upon either of these subjects without affecting the property and civil rights of individuals in the provinces.

The same principle has been affirmed in the case of Cushing vs. Dupuy, which is reported in the appeals to the Privy Council. In this case:

> An Act relating to bankruptcy, passed by the parliament of Canada was objected to as being ultra vires, in so far as it interfered with property and civil rights in the province; but, inasmuch as 'bankruptcy and insolvency' form one of the classes of matters enumerated in section 91, their lordships upheld the validity of the statute. In delivering the judgment of the Board, Sir Montague Smith pointed out that it would be impossible to advance a step in the construction of a scheme for the administration of insolvent estates without interfering with and modifying some of the ordinary rights of property.

Mr. MONK. I do not dispute that.

The SOLICITOR GENERAL. I understood that the hon. gentleman did dispute it. At all events, the whole trend of his argument was that we should not interfere with matters of property and civil rights, which should be left to the province. That impression has been created by the discussion which took place here last session, so much so that the Minister of Justice has been accused in the press of being an enemy of the French civil law of the province of Quebec.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). I thought that what the hon. gentleman has been stating is an elementary principle which has been well recognized for many years.

The MINISTER OF JUSTICE. It settles this argument if it is.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). It does not settle this matter of legislation, because this parliament can refrain from doing what it has the power to do.

The SOLICITOR GENERAL. The hon. gentleman has admitted that his Bill is the result of the judgment of the Privy Council in the case of Roy vs. the Canadian Pacific Railway. The Privy Council decided that when a railway company had taken all possible means to prevent fire, and when it was shown that there was no negligence on its part, the company was not responsible. This is not the first case in which this principle has been affirmed. It was affirmed in the case of Vaughan vs. Taff Vale Railway Company, the same principle was affirmed. The court held :

Although it may be true that if a person keep an animal of known dangerous propensities, or a dangerous instrument, he will be responsible to those who are thereby injured, independently of any negligence in the mode of dealing with the animal or using the instrument; yet when the legislature has sanctioned or authorized the use of a particular thing, and it is used for the purpose for which it was authorized and every precaution has been observed to prevent injury, the sanction of the legislature carries with it this consequence : that if the damage results from the use of any such thing, independently of negligence, the party using it is not responsible.

This is the same doctrine as that which has been laid down in the case of Roy vs. the Canadian Pacific Railway. The courts of the province of Quebec, however, have hitherto leaned towards the doctrine that railway companies are responsible irrespective of negligence, but my hon. friend must not forget that in France a law was passed in 1845 which, while of course maintaining the liability of railway companies, limits that liability. Article 7 of the Law of the 12th July, 1845, forbids the placing of less than sixty feet from a railway of thatched roofs or other deposits of an inflammable nature :

Section 7 of the Law of July 15, 1865, prohibits the placing, within a distance of twenty metres from the track of a railway, of thatched roofs, hay-stacks or any other materials of an inflammable nature.

Mr. LENNOX. Does that law affect us ?

The MINISTER OF JUSTICE. It affects the interpretation of our Quebec civil law.

The SOLICITOR GENERAL. It has been argued by the hon. gentleman and others that when a building is destroyed by a fire caused by sparks from a locomotive, it is just as much expropriated as it could be under the ordinary process of law, and it was only equitable that the proprietor should be given compensation, but is this contingency affected by the Bill now before the House ? The Privy Council has declared that when they give a charter to a railway company, that carries with it a privilege. Should the hon. gentleman's Bill pass, the right which the company enjoy under this privilege would remain absolutely the same.

Mr. MONK. Supposing we incorporate an electric company and in carrying out the powers granted to it by our parliament, observing all due precautions, that electric company causes damage, does my hon. friend not think that in an action to recover our courts would to a certain extent be guided by the affirmation of a principle contained in this enactment.

The SOLICITOR GENERAL. I am arguing the effect of the Bill of the hon. gentleman in the light of the judgment of the Privy Council. The Privy Council has decided that when we grant a charter we grant a privilege and the hon. gentleman's Bill provides :

(1.) The enactments apply to the whole of Canada : Provided always, that no right, power or privilege conferred by an Act of the parliament of Canada, or by a charter granted under an Act of that parliament, shall exempt any person exercising that right, power or privilege, from any liability incurred by him under any Act of a legislature or under the common law.

Supposing this law should pass, it will not affect the interpretation given those laws by the Privy Council. Our Quebec courts have decided that railway companies are responsible under our civil law, but the Privy Council has decided that they are not. It is wholly a question of interpretation, and even should this Bill pass the Privy Council will still decide that when we grant a charter to a railway company, we grant a privilege, and that privilege relieves the company of responsibility according to our civil law as it now stands. Of course if the legislatures change the law as to liability, then their legislation may clash with our legislation, and this may have serious consequences. I am in sympathy with the object of the hon. gentleman but I do not think that this Bill will accomplish it. I am rather disposed to think that the Bill of my hon. friend from St. John and Iberville (Mr. Demers) will be more effective. I am therefore of the opinion that the Bill of the hon. gentleman should not pass, but that the House should rather consider the Bill of my hon. friend from St. John (Mr. Demers).

Mr. L. P. DEMERS (St. John and Iberville). (Translation.) Mr. Speaker, I have placed upon the Order Paper a Bill, the object of which is similar to that aimed at by the Bill introduced by the hon. member for Jacques Cartier (Mr. Monk), which is under discussion. I may perhaps be allowed briefly to explain the reasons why I have introduced this Bill, notwithstanding the fact that the hon. gentleman's Bill was already on the Order Paper. As just remarked by the hon. Solicitor General (Mr. Carroll), the object aimed at by the hon. gentleman from Jacques Cartier is not likely to be reached by the measure which he has introduced. Indeed, this Bill enacts, that, notwithstanding any provision to the contrary, any Act of the parliament of Canada must be so interpreted that it shall not exempt any person from any liability incurred by him under any Act of a provincial legislature.

The Judicial Committee of the Privy Council has dealt with the matter. Had their Lordships declared that the laws of the province of Quebec did not apply, I grant that the amendment to the Interpretation Act, embodied in the hon. gentleman's Bill would attain the object sought. But the Privy Council have based their judgment on the Civil Code of the province of Quebec and they have said: 'The Dominion parliament grants a certain privilege to railway companies, and under section 356 of the Civil Code civil corporations, constituting by the fact of their incorporation real or artificial persons, are as such governed by the laws affecting individuals, saving the privileges they enjoy under their charter. Hence it follows that, under the Civil Code, the privilege granted railway companies to carry on their business and operate their railways by means of locomotives is recognized beyond a doubt, and I believe the Bill introduced by my hon, friend does not provide a remedy. The Bill which I have brought down does not apply solely to the province of Quebec, but its object is to provide a common law as to the liability of railway companies, which shall apply to all the provinces of the Dominion.

The common law says that if I set fire to my property I am responsible for damage to a neighbour's property. That is the common law in Great Britain, in the United States and in all the provinces of the Dominion as well. The judgment rendered by the Privy Council does not say anything to the contrary, and the reason why the decision of our courts was set aside, not that our common law conflicts with the English common law, but because the power of our parliament is paramount. A railway company which is empowered by its charter to operate its line and to use locomotives for hauling its trains, is responsible, in common law, for damages to others from sparks emitted from locomotive engines. Therefore, it is in virtue of its charter that the company may claim a privilege conflicting with the common law.

Now, the object of my Bill is to say which is the common law that shall apply to all the provinces. So, I submit that the Bill introduced by my hon. friend does not meet the case we are now dealing with.

I may perhaps be told that this has nothing to do with civil rights in the provinces. The answer to that objection is that the Railway Act embodies many provisions relating to property. For instance, you will find in the Railway Act provisions concerning land expropriations, which is beyond doubt a matter pertaining to civil rights. I may add that, during this session, we have had a Bill before this House, to the effect of providing compensation for owners of cattle, when there are no proper cattle-guards.

From session to session, within the last few years, we had this Bill before us, and I am not aware that any question as to whether it was intra vires of this parliament has ever been raised. From what I have said it follows that the only remedy is the one proposed in my Bill, namely, that recourse should be had to this parliament, within whose jurisdiction it is to remove all doubts as to privileges granted under charters obtained from parliament.

Mr. JOHN McGOWAN (Centre Wellington). I think this is a matter of very great importance, not only to the province of Quebec, but to all the provinces of the Dominion. And, if parliament has the power to deal with this matter, the sooner it passes some such law as is proposed, the better. Some time ago, I shipped a carload of goods by the Grand Trunk Railway. Every precaution was used in seeing that no fire should get near the goods. But they caught fire from a spark from the locomotive on the Grand Trunk and were seriously damaged. I went to a lawyer, a first class lawyer, and he told me that I had no redress against the Grand Trunk on account of the fire, unless I could establish that the locomotive was defective in some particular. Of course, I could not prove that—would not attempt it. The lawyer advised me to make some settlement with the railway company, and this I had to do. All through the province of Ontario, fire constantly arises in farmers' crops from the sparks thrown out by locomotives. Fire gets into a crop of hay, let us say, and not only burns up the crop, but burns down fences and everything else. There ought to be some redress for this. When the railway companies have goods in their own charge and those goods are damaged, it seems a great hardship that the party owning them cannot get redress. If this parliament has power to pass any law providing for liability on the part of the railway company, it ought to do so.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN (Halifax). It is, of course, clearly laid down and has been plainly announced not only by the Privy Council, but in parliament that, in those matters over which this parliament has control, as in bankruptcy or insolvency or similar matters, it has the right to make all necessary provisions for the purposes of carrying out its legislation. For instance, it provides the procedure in respect of bankruptcy, and makes other necessary provisions which will occur to every lawyer who has considered the matter at all. Then, it necessarily follows that, in dealing with matters of this kind you must interfere with civil rights and the jurisdiction of parliament to interfere with civil rights to that extent is undoubted, and has been so for a long time. It is quite competent for parliament to limit its legislation in that regard, as I suggested to my hon. friend the Solicitor General (Hon. Mr. Carroll), and, in doing so, to provide that the making of that enactment shall not extend beyond a certain limit so far as concerns its interference with civil rights. I do not think any person would doubt that. It would be competent for the parliament of Canada in making an enactment in regard to a railway or anything else to provide that the Act should not extend beyond a certain limit in its interference with civil rights. That is all I meant by an interruption to which the hon. Minister of Justice (Hon. Mr. Fitzpatrick) made some allusion. Now, the common law of England as announced in the recent decisions—that is, decisions within the last fifty years—is that the right to construct and operate a railway in a certain place is a bar against civil liability to any person injured by it, in the absence of negligence. And as the Solicitor General says, it must be shown to the court that the railway company has not employed the most improved appliances to prevent damage. That is not a principle applicable to railways alone, but to other similar works. A great many decisions during the last twenty five or thirty years have been given with regard to the erection of gas works. Very often the application of the principle depends upon the particular language of the statute. To every one who has had occasion to examine very closely the decisions with regard to this matter it will be plain on what very slight foundation the jurisprudence with regard to railways rested in the first instance. It depends very often upon the question whether the particular manufactory or railway is authorized in a particular place. A general power, for example, to erect a gas works does not necessarily give power to erect a gas works in a residential part of the city. But if you have power under the statute to erect a gas works or any other manufactory creating nuisance in a particular place, another result might follow. The criticism that might fairly be offered to the language of the Bill is not exactly, it seems to me, on the lines suggested by the Solicitor General? He does not seem to think that it is language that could amount to anything. On the contrary, it seem to me too comprehensive. It might have the effect of nullifying many Acts passed by this legislature.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax).

The MINISTER OF JUSTICE. Absolutely.

The MINISTER OF RAILWAYS AND CANALS. If it means anything it means that.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). It might be open to that argument, as I was suggesting privately to my hon. friend from Jacques Cartier (Mr. Monk). The hon. gentleman tells me that the Bill was drafted by other gentlemen and placed in his hands and his attention had not been directed to that. I think it is perfectly easy to deal with this matter from the standpoint of my hon. friend from Jacques Cartier, but I would be inclined to think, as I have suggested, that this may carry it too far.

The SOLICITOR GENERAL. All I said was, that so far as the Quebec law is concerned, the language of the amendment would make no difference—the law would be the same.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). I would not make any suggestion as to the Quebec law. I do not pretend to understand that. I do not know whether it would make a difference in the law of Quebec or not. But it seems to me it would have the effect of very materially altering the law not only for other provinces, but for Quebec also. A right or privilege may be given by statute but you come to the Interpretation Act and find it is taken away by this particular provision. For example, you find that an officer of the customs has a right to enter a house under certain circumstances and make a search. But you might find under this provision that he is not saved from the action for damages taken by the party whose house he has entered.

The MINISTER OF JUSTICE. And that which is declared by us to be a privilege might be an actionable wrong under the local legislature.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). Or under the common law.

The MINISTER OF JUSTICE. That would be an anomaly for which we ought not to be responsible.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). In dealing with the question whether this Bill ought to be passed or not, it is a question whether, assuming that it would be right to restore the law of Quebec to what it was supposed to be, this Bill would not require considerable amendment before it should pass the House.

The MINISTER OF RAILWAYS AND CANALS. I should be a little reluctant to express any opinion on this subject as raised by the hon. member's Bill, having had only a little while—since the discussion commenced—to turn it over in my mind. But I have been very much puzzled to find what limitations would be placed on the Bill of the hon. gentleman. So far as I have been able to get at the meaning and effect of the language, particularly in the concluding portion of the clause, it would seem that parliament would be recognizing that what it granted with one hand it was, in an indirect manner through its Interpretation Act, taking away with the other. It would seem that while parliament was endeavouring to regulate the liabilities which attached necessarily to the exercise of the privilege which it was conferring, it was at the same time, in explicit terms, recognizing that other liabilities which it had no hand at all in regulating, and which were necessary to the proper exercise of the privilege conferred, could be created by another legislative body or bodies, either to cut into or to supplement the liabilities which parliament itself, and the courts interpreting the Act of parliament, considered would only attach to it. I do not know whether I make myself clear, but it is very much in the line of the trouble which suggests itself to the mind of the hon. the senior member for Halifax (Mr. Borden). They say here that no authority or privilege conferred by parliament shall exempt any person exercising that law from any liability which the legislature may attach to its exercise, or which the common law would attach to its exercise. The legislature might make an enactment which would be in its operation and effect distinctly contrary to the intention of parliament. Parliament might say that under the railway charter a company might go on and expropriate lands under certain conditions; the legislature might say that if lands are expropriated by any railway company, and civil rights are interfered with, and property taken, such and such responsibilities must attach. I do not wish to speak too decidedly as to the proper meaning of these words, but it seems that you would absolutely leave the legislation of this parliament in such a maze of complications that no one could tell where they were, no one would care to accept any charter, and no one would ask for any privilege for fear he might find himself absolutely ruined by attempting to exercise it. I would think, off-hand, that if it is the opinion of parliament that the law as it stands to-day with respect to liabilities of railway companies in reference to such cases as my hon. friend has in his mind, ought to be changed, modified or reconsidered in some form, it would be equally within the competence of parliament to do it, and would more surely prove that the Act which my hon. friend from St. John and Iberville (Mr. Demers) has introduced would provide a remedy. I have not examined his Bill, but I heard what has fallen from hon. members who have spoken upon it, I do not know how far parliament ought to go in respect to that, therefore I reserve my opinion upon it. It seems to me that we can see where we are going in the case of the Bill of my hon. friend from Iberville, but we cannot see where we are going in the Bill of my hon. friend opposite.

The MINISTER OF JUSTICE. I considered when this Bill was first introduced that it was one of the most serious pieces of legislation that we were called upon to deal with. It is legislation fraught with the most serious consequences, if it were placed on our statutes. In effect, what is it that this amendment to the Interpretation Act asks us to do? It asks us to declare that when we confer upon a corporation that we have a right to bring into existence, certain powers and privileges, that corporation can only exercise those powers and privileges subject to the legislation of the provinces over which we have absolutely no control. Now to state the case in that way is to show the importance of the legislation.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). That is, so far as civil liabilities are concerned.

The MINISTER OF JUSTICE. Yes, that would be the anomalous position that we would take, the anomalous legislation we would be responsible for, if the parliament of Canada were to declare that a corporation should have a right to do a thing, or if we enjoined upon a corporation to do a certain thing, and then we were to confer upon a province a right to declare that that which we empowered the corporation to do, was an actionable wrong. One does not require to go any further than to state that. Take, for instance, the case of a railway company connecting two or more provinces together. In order that that railway company might get its charter it will be forced to come here and get legislation from us; and in our legislation we would say that they had a right to operate within these provinces. Our legislation provides as to the equipment of that railway, as to the mode of protecting of rights and property of the public which that railway has to adopt. But the very moment that railway company went into operation, if this Bill were passed into law, when that railway company operated in different provinces, each province would have a right to say: You shall not operate that railway except subject to the conditions we impose upon you. Where would that lead us? Is it conceivable that we would pass such legislation as that? I do not mean to discuss the matter any further than to show what the consequences of such legislation would be.

I said a moment ago, in answer to a remark that fell from the hon. leader of the opposition, that the moment you concede the right of the Dominion parliament in a proper case to interfere with civil rights in a province, that very moment you concede that the judgment of the Privy Council in Roy and the Canadian Pacific Railway was a proper judgment. And what is the reason for it? The code of the province of Quebec upon which so much reliance has been placed, is only a statute, and the provincial legislature can amend it in respect to those things upon which it has a right to legislate, it can amend it either by direct legislation or inferentially. And with respect to those matters over which we have control and with which we have a right to interfere, we can amend the code, and we are doing it all the time. When we give a railway company the right to operate in a province and say that that corporation shall be exempted from liability provided it complies with certain requirements, we are within our constitutional rights. I never could understand the reason of the judgment upon which the Court of Appeals—I say it with all due respect—rendered judgment in this case. They talk about sic utere tuo ut aliemum non laedas. That is a principle of law applicable to the common law of England as well as to our own, and if you are authorized to do a thing by this parliament, you cannot be held to have done that which will make you liable for damages. If this parliament authorizes the doing of a thing, and says to you: We confer upon you authority to do so and so, on what principle of law can you be held responsible for damages for exercising that right which we confer upon you? It seems to me I need not go further in the discussion of this case of Roy and the Canadian Pacific Railway. At one time that case was considered in our province as of the highest importance, far reaching in its consequences and as an infringement upon the rights of our provinces in respect to civil rights. Perhaps it may be impertinence on my part, but, not agreeing with that view, I ventured to write an article in one of our legal papers to which the member for Jacques Cartier (Mr. Monk) referred, so that I need not weary the House by repeating what I said there.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). In stating that there might be legislation which would remedy the condition of affairs brought about by this decision of the Privy Council, of course, I am not considering whether the Quebec decisions are right or wrong. What I venture to suggest and what I believe to be right is that the parliament of Canada in incorporating any railway company may say this: The company may build a line between two given points, it may operate that line, but in so far as the province of Quebec is concerned, if it creates any damage by fire through its engines it shall be responsible to the same extent as if it had not received the protection of this statute.

The MINISTER OF JUSTICE. There is no doubt about that.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). It can limit the extent to which the civil liability is incurred.

The MINISTER OF RAILWAYS AND CANALS. I do not understand my hon. friend (Mr. Borden, Halifax) to intimate that he would be taken as approving of any such legislation.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). I am not discussing the policy of the legislation. I am merely discussing the power of this parliament. In other words, I am stating what is the simple fact that this parliament, having power to go to the utmost extent in regard to civil rights, need not go to such an extent, but can go only half way, or not at all, and so the civil liability would still remain.

Mr. MONK. I may say that I have no special desire to see this particular Bill passed, but I do not think the legislation is of such an extraordinary character as the hon. Minister of Justice indicates. The point raised by the hon. Minister of Railways and Canals and by the hon. member for Halifax, strikes me as being a very important one; that is to say, that this legislation is too comprehensive. It is the first time that the point has been indicated to me. The hon. Minister of Justice has never mentioned or indicated it before, but I may say that just such legislation as my hon. friend from Halifax pointed out a moment ago as being within the purview of this legislature has already been enacted in this parliament. The Railway Act, to give an instance of it, section 288, speaking of the results of the inspection of railways as regards civil liability, says. I do not want to read the whole section:

> No inspection had under this Act—
> —in any manner or way to lessen such liability or responsibility of any such company, under the laws in force in the province in which such liability or responsibility arises.

That is an example of legislation which is, I think, quite within our powers exactly on the lines mentioned as possible by the hon. Minister of Railways and Canals, and if the Bill now under consideration in this House has a fault it is the fault of going too far, as has been indicated, but it is on the same lines as section 288 of the statute.

The MINISTER OF RAILWAYS AND CANALS. I agree with the hon. gentleman that it is on the same lines; yet, the extent to which that Act goes is clear. It states just exactly the ground it wants to cover and it stops there.

Mr. MONK. The effect of article 288 is exactly to produce the effect which the hon. Minister of Justice considered as an absurdity, because, that section, as I read it, says: Whatever may be the inspection made your liability as a railway company will remain what it ought to be under the civil law of the province.

The MINISTER OF JUSTICE. Read what the Privy Council says on that section at page 231 of the report of the Roy case.

Mr. MONK. I will in a minute. I am reasoning on the section as I understand it irrespective of what the Privy Council may have decided. I submit that under that section the province of Ontario, or the province of Quebec, by their legislatures, may impose any kind of liability on a railway. Is that not the case ?

The MINISTER OF RAILWAYS AND CANALS. I do not think so.

Mr. MONK. It may be within its sphere because the Privy Council decided a very long time ago in a case of which I forget the title at the present moment that there is a division of the field and that when the parliament of Canada is within its powers and exercises these powers it may exercise them to the fullest extent in order to carry out the object of its creation to a certain extent invading the provincial powers.

The MINISTER OF RAILWAYS AND CANALS. Does my hon. friend not see that the section is framed for the purpose of rendering it impossible for any party to contend that because there has been an inspection and that inspection has produced certain results, or certain conclusions have been arrived at, the fact of these conclusions having been arrived at—

Mr. MONK. Relieves him from responsibility.

The MINISTER OF RAILWAYS AND CANALS. No, it does not either enhance or diminish the liability that the railway company would be subject to if the inspection had not been made.

Mr. MONK. I understand that the object of that enactment in the Railway Act to which I refer is to stop the railway company from saying : We have been inspected, this is the result, and therefore, we are not liable to damages.

The MINISTER OF RAILWAYS AND CANALS. Yes, that is the object.

Mr. MONK. Well, on the same lines, in the case of Roy, the railway company said : We have been authorized by the statutes of the Dominion of Canada to operate this railway and whatever may be the law in the province of Quebec in regard to torts, or damages, this statute of the Dominion of Canada protects us. That is the way I understand it and the object of this Bill, although I admit it may be too comprehensive, is to declare that no enactment of the Dominion parliament will have the effect of exercising a right conferred by the Dominion parliament from liability under the common law of the province or any Act of the legislature within the powers of the legislature. Of course, if you suppose a case such as the hon. Minister of Justice supposed a moment ago of a statute of the province of Quebec nullifying an enactment of the Dominion parliament in respect to railways over which it has control, that enactment in the provincial legislature would be ultra vires, would be beyond its powers, because, under the Constitutional Act we have control here over certain railways in the matter of legislation. Under the decision of the Privy Council and which effect the jurisprudence of our courts in regard to railways to the fullest extent that might be necessary in order that we might fully exercise our powers under section 91 of the Confederation Act. But, we cannot go beyond.

I submit that we cannot enact in the parliament of Canada, the Bill which my hon. friend (Mr. Demers, Iberville) has before the House, because we would then be legislating the question of civil rights which is reserved exclusively to the provinces. If the Bill of my hon. friend should become law, there would be a different kind of liability in the English provinces for railway companies from what there is for individuals. There would be a special liability for railway companies enacted by this parliament, which would not be the civil law of the province. The difficulty I find in the Bill of my hon. friend is that it invades the provincial domain, although at first sight it would seem to be far the simplest way to remedy the evil. The judges of the Privy Council declared that the civil law of the province of Quebec applied in this case of Roy, but they interpreted it differently from the interpretation given to it hitherto in all countries which are governed by the principles of the old French law. There is no doubt in my mind that they were right in finding that the principle which must apply in this case is the principle of our provincial law, and if the legislation suggested by my hon. friend (Mr. Demers, Iberville) became law, it would be contrary to the jurisprudence of the Privy Council in the case of Roy, and the generally accepted jurisprudence, that it would be an invasion of the provincial domain of legislation. These are the words in this Act to which exception has been taken on the ground that they are too comprehensive:

> No enactments of the parliament of Canada shall exempt any person exercising a right, power or privilege under a Dominion statute, from any liability incurred by him under any Act of the legislature or under the common law.

It is certainly of a very general character, but I think that it must be understood in the sense in which it has been intended and has stood upon our statute-books for a very long time. Under section 288, of the Railway Act, nothing shall exempt a person holding powers from this legislature from liability under the common law of the province or any Act of the legislature, in so far as the common law will apply, or the Act of legislature is within the power of the legislature. No man would pretend that it would be in the power of the legislature to enact laws nullifying intra vires enactments of our parliament here. I do not think that any such Act of the provincial legislature would be considered constitutional. The difficulty is the division of the field of legislation between the two powers. If there was no division of the field, the Bill presented by my hon. friend (Mr. Demers, Iberville) would be a very much simpler way to remedy the crying evil which exists in the other provinces where there is no doubt whatever that the decision in the case of Roy would properly apply. But the difficulty in this case is that it is a question of civil law, and I submit that the furthest that we can go is to declare that no empowering enactment passed here; not only in regard to railway companies but in regard to any enterprise whatever which this parliament has the power to regulate, shall be construed as exempting the party exercising that power from the control of the legislature in so far as that control may be exercised, or from the common law of the province in so far as that common law may apply; and it can only apply as restricted by the provisions of our Confederation Act.

Motion (Mr. Monk) for the second reading of the Bill negatived on division.

The MINISTER OF RAILWAYS AND CANALS (Hon. A. G. Blair) moved the adjournment of the House.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). What business will be taken to-morrow?

The MINISTER OF RAILWAYS AND CANALS. I think our chief business will be the consideration of the estimates.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). What department?

The MINISTER OF RAILWAYS AND CANALS. We will continue the Public Work's estimates in the hope that we may be able to finish them.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. There seems to be some delay in the translation of the Bills, and we will likely have to go on with the estimates.

Motion agreed to, and the House adjourned at 10 p.m.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.

FRIDAY, April 3, 1903.

The SPEAKER took the Chair at Three o'clock.

OFFICIAL REPORT OF THE DEBATES.

Mr. L. N. CHAMPAGNE (Wright) presented the second report of the Select Committee appointed to supervise the Official Report of the Debates of the House during the present session, as follows:—

Mr. MONK.

The Committee recommend that Mr. S. A. Mackay whose appointment at the beginning of the last session as temporary substitute on the staff of translators of the Official Report of the Debates to replace the late N. H. Beaulieu until some permanent action was required to be taken, and which appointment was approved of by the House on the 24th March, 1902, be paid for his services at the rate of $4 per day, said remuneration to be computed from the date of the last payment made to him, viz.: 27th May, 1902 to the 3rd April instant.

(Sgd.) L. N. CHAMPAGNE,
Chairman.

VACANCY IN ST. JAMES DIVISION.

Mr. F. D. MONK (Jacques Cartier). Mr. Speaker, in accordance with the notice which I gave a few days ago, I beg to move, seconded by Mr. Léonard:—

That Mr. Speaker do issue his warrant to the Clerk of the Crown in Chancery, to make out a new writ for the election of a member to serve in this present parliament for the electoral division of St. James (Montreal), in the room of Joseph Brunet, whose election has been declared void.

Motion agreed to.

SECOND READINGS.

Bill (No. 79) to incorporate the Bank of Winnipeg.—Mr. Scott.

Bill (No. 80) respecting the Canada Northwest Land Company, Limited.—Mr. Thompson (Haldimand).

Bill (No. 81) respecting the Brandon and South-western Railway Company.—Mr. Morrison.

BUSINESS OF THE HOUSE.

The PRIME MINISTER (Rt. Hon. Sir Wilfrid Laurier) moved:

That from this date to the end of the session government orders have precedence on Thursdays, immediately after questions to be put by members.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). Has the Prime Minister considered the effect this will have on Private Bill legislation? I have not considered it, I am asking for information. It has been suggested by some hon. gentlemen that at least one more Thursday should be given for private legislation.

The PRIME MINISTER. I do not see why, because this motion does not interfere with the hour for private Bills on Thursday.

Hon. JOHN HAGGART (South Lanark). It interferes with the whole day on Thursday.

Mr. SPROULE. The translation of Bills is so very much behind that some of them have not been ready, and the time for private Bill legislation ought to be extended.

The PRIME MINISTER. I am reserving an hour after dinner for private Bills.

Mr. SPEAKER. Private Bills may be taken up on Wednesday and Friday night.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS (Hon. James Sutherland). It does not interfere with private Bills.

Hon. Mr. HAGGART. From this day to the end of the session it takes the whole of Thursdays. It takes the first Order of the Day on Thursday, and the questions to be put by members.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. After questions put by members.

The PRIME MINISTER. This is the order for Thursday:

Questions put by members, Public Bills and Orders. Notices of Motions, Government Notices of Motions, Government Orders.

This is the order for Wednesday.

Questions put by members, Notices of Motions, Public Bills and Orders, and from half past seven o'clock P.M., Private and Public Bills for the first hour.

There are no private Bills on Thursdays.

Motion agreed to.

REPRESENTATION IN THE HOUSE OF COMMONS—NEW BRUNSWICK.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN (Halifax). Before the Orders of the Day are called, I would like to draw the attention of the government to what has been said in the legislature of New Brunswick by the Attorney General of that province with regard to the question of redistribution which has been recently discussed in this House. I will read from a newspaper report:

Hon. Mr. Pugsley, replying to the leader of the opposition, said his attention had been called to the report of Sir Wilfrid Laurier's speech, but he had not been led by reason of these remarks to retract anything he had said in regard to this matter, or to have any doubts as to the strength of the position the government had taken. The statement in the speech from the Throne in regard to the reference of the question to the Supreme Court, was based on the following telegram from the Minister of Railways to the Premier :

Ottawa, Ont., March 23, 1903.

Hon. L. J. Tweedie,
Chatham, N.B.

You are warranted in stating that while the Dominion government has not agreed in opinion with views expressed on behalf of the provincial government on the subject we talked, it is prepared to co-operate with you in securing an early decision on the question from the Supreme Court. You may state this fact in any way you prefer.

(Sgd.) A. G. BLAIR.

Having received this despatch from the Minister of Railways the government was resting easy, confident that the promise made would be carried out. We are thoroughly satisfied that Mr. Blair would not have sent this telegram if the matter had not been settled and the Dominion government having agreed to the reference, will take the necessary steps to carry it out. While it is a matter of regret that Sir Wilfrid Laurier does not take the same view of this question as the provincial government, we need not feel alarmed at the difference of opinion, if there is a difference of opinion. Sir Wilfrid may have referred to the protest of Prince Edward Island, which is an entirely different case from ours, and which is based on the idea that a province, having gone into confederation with a certain number of representatives, can never have that number reduced. Sir Wilfrid says we must abide by the constitution, and we say the same, but we say also that under the British North America Act we are not entitled to lose any member because our population has not fallen since the last preceding census by one-twentieth as compared with the population of the four original provinces of Canada. He was not at all concerned because the authorities at Ottawa took a different view of this question from that of the provincial government. It had been their experience to have such differences with the Ottawa people, who after confederation took a very low view of the rights of the provinces. For instance, they maintained that our lieutenant governor was not the representative of the Sovereign and that we did not have the fisheries on our own territory. We have been going on fighting for provincial rights ever since then, and in most of the contests with the Ottawa government the provinces have succeeded. The mere fact that we live in a small province is not a conclusive argument against our being entitled to form an opinion as to the meaning of a statute. It would probably be found that Sir Wilfrid Laurier was not referring to our case at all when he spoke of the opinions that had been expressed by Sir John A. Macdonald and others. While in Ottawa we were told by the Department of Justice that the point raised by us had never been raised before.

Now, I mentioned this because it seemed to indicate that possibly there may be something more in the way of correspondence between the province of New Brunswick and the Dominion government. I mention it as a reminder to the Minister of Justice who said yesterday that he would bring anything further down. I also mention it because I think it is right that the House should be informed as to the attitude of the government in that regard, whether this despatch from the Minister of Railways and Canals correctly announces the attitude of the government, and if it does, what is to be done in that regard. We have had no intimation from the government that any doubt whatever existed in their minds respecting this matter, or in the mind of the legal adviser of the Crown. But you will observe, Mr. Speaker, and my right hon. friend will observe, that here is a definite and precise promise that the government will take any steps which are necessary for securing a decision upon this point from the Supreme Court of Canada.

The telegram, which I will again read, says :—

You are warranted in stating that while the Dominion government has not agreed in opinion with views expressed on behalf of the provincial government on the subject we talked, it is prepared to co-operate with you in securing an early decision on the question from the Supreme Court. You may state this fact in any way you prefer.

Of course, I am reading merely from a newspaper report, but, I assume it is a correct report. This is a very important statement of government policy, which, it seems to me, might have better been made in this House than through the medium of a telegram announced in a provincial legislature. A question of that kind was brought to the attention of the House the other day when my right hon. friend was not present. I think the House is entitled to know what the attitude of the government is in regard to this matter and to learn whether or not it is contemplated, if the provinces demand it, to grant a reference of this question to the Supreme Court, and if that is the case, how does it happen that my right hon. friend has made no announcement on this subject to the House, and that there is not the slightest reference to it in the Bill which has been introduced to provide for the redistribution.

The PRIME MINISTER (Rt. Hon. Sir Wilfrid Laurier). The information which my hon. friend (Mr. Borden, Halifax) desires is quite appropriate, and I will give him the fullest explanation it is possible to give. Some time, I think in the month of February, we received a delegation from the government of the province of Prince Edward Island, and also, I believe from the government of the province of New Brunswick, which made representations to the effect that they believed they should not lose the representation of population which it was stated they were to lose. We discussed the matter with them and told them very frankly that the government had no doubt at all, that the lines which had been followed in the previous redistributions of 1882 and 1892 were correct, and that, in so far as we were concerned, we had no doubt whatever that the province of Prince Edward Island would lose one member, Nova Scotia two members, New Brunswick one member and Ontario six members. New Brunswick and Prince Edward Island especially objected very strongly to this interpretation of the law. We told them that we could not alter our views, and after giving the matter our best consideration we still adhere to the opinion which we have expressed in the Bill. They asked us whether we would have any objection to having the matter referred to the Supreme Court. We stated that we had no objection at all, and that we would, in fact, co-operate with them if they would take the initiative, but in the meantime, having no doubt upon the matter, we could not delay proceeding with our Bill. I have had no written correspondence myself on the subjec with the government of New Brunswick. The hon. Minister of Railways and Canals (Hon. Mr. Blair) sent the telegram that was read before the House by the hon. member for Halifax. I have had some correspondence on the subject with the government of Prince Edward Island, and I have just given an order to have this correspondence brought down with the other correspondence which will be laid on the Table of the House, perhaps on Monday. While we will not take the initiative, if the subject is brought up we will be ready to co-operate with them so as to have the matter argued before the Supreme Court.

NAVAL DEFENCE.

Mr. E. F. CLARKE (West Toronto). Mr. Speaker, before the Orders of the Day are called, I would like to draw the attention of the right hon. leader of the House (Rt. Hon. Sir Wilfrid Laurier) to a statement which appeared in yesterday's Toronto 'Globe' respecting a proposed naval defence scheme of the government. The report says :

There is considerable speculation as to the nature of the measure for naval defence which the Minister of Marine and Fisheries will recommend in fulfilment of what was said at the colonial conference in London last summer. The idea has been expressed that it would probably take the form of a scheme for establishing gunsheds on the sea coast of Canada, where the fishermen may be trained in naval artillery. It seems probable, however, that, as in the case of Newfoundland, cruisers will be provided, in which those who are willing to undergo training would serve for a certain period of time. The cruiser 'Calypso,' which has been commissioned for this purpose in Newfoundland waters, is by no means a modern vessel, but is equipped with guns of the latest type. The men are paid 58 cents a day whilst on service, and also receive rations. It is stated with respect to Canada that Hon. Raymond Préfontaine has before him a scheme which involves the appearance of three third-class cruisers in Canadian waters, one off the Atlantic coast, the second at Toronto, and the third on the British Columbia coast. Presumably the British government would be willing to send vessels for this purpose, or, if the Dominion government approve of the scheme, suitable vesels could be acquired by them. The appearance of a war vessel in the upper lakes would seemingly be open to objection under the Rush-Bagot treaty, but against a mere training ship the United States could make no complaint, as they have themselves introduced vessels of this class. If this scheme goes through it is thought there would be no lack of recruits, seeing that at least 45,000 fishermen ply their calling on the coasts of the maritime provinces, and any number of smart mariners are to be found on the upper lakes.

I would like to draw the attention of the right hon. gentleman to this statement, and to ask if it is the intention of the government to introduce legislation in this direction ? It is a matter of the most vital importance, and I think some information should be given to the House at the earliest moment as to what the intention of the government is.

The PRIME MINISTER (Rt. Hon. Sir Wilfrid Laurier). The government has no information to announce to the House, because all these statements are premature and unauthorized.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). My right hon. friend did not take the point that it has not been in the 'Canada Gazette.'

The PRIME MINISTER. We will wait until the next issue of the 'Canada Gazette.'

THIRD READING.

Bill (No. 8) to amend the Expropriation Act.—The Minister of Justice.

CHINESE IMMIGRATION.

Resolution respecting Chinese immigration (the Prime Minister) read the second time and agreed to.

The PRIME MINISTER (Rt. Hon. Sir Wilfrid Laurier) moved for leave to introduce Bill (No. 82) to amend the Act respecting and restricting Chinese immigration.

Motion agreed to, and Bill read the first time.

DOMINION CONTROVERTED ELECTIONS ACT AMENDMENT.

On the Order for :

House again in Committee on Bill (No. 13) to amend the Dominion Controverted Elections Act.—The Minister of Justice.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). I do not want to object to the order of procedure, but we were told last night that the order of business to-day would be Supply.—Public Works.

The PRIME MINISTER. I was not aware of that, and if that be so, I will move that we go into Supply.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). I think that some hon. gentlemen who, perhaps, would like to be heard on this Bill, are away, under the belief that the House is going into Supply.

The PRIME MINISTER. The point is well taken. If the House is not prepared we will go into Supply.

Order allowed to stand.

SUPPLY—LABOUR TROUBLES IN BRITISH COLUMBIA.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE (Hon. W. S. Fielding) moved that the House go again into Committee of Supply.

Mr. RALPH SMITH (Vancouver). Mr. Speaker, before the motion to go into Supply is decided upon, I desire to take up the time of the House for one minute and especially to secure the attention of the hon. Minister of Labour (Hon. Sir William Mulock) in regard to the very serious condition of affairs existing at the present time and which has existed continuously for some time past in British Columbia. I refer especially to the serious conflicts in the province, interfering with the business interests of the province between capital and labour. At the present time and for some weeks past the great coal mines in the Crow's Nest Pass have been closed down through a conflict existing between the companies and their workmen. The cutting off of this coal supply has very seriously interfered with the supplying of fuel to the smelting industries of the great Kootenay country. For some time past a very serious strike has existed among certain employees on the Vancouver section of the Canadian Pacific Railway. On Vancouver Island, in the district which I have the honour to represent, some of the most important coal mines have been closed off. At the Crow's Nest coal mines, negotiations have been constantly going on between the men and the employers, and to some extent the same thing is true of the strike on the Canadian Pacific Railway. I want particularly, however, to call the attention of the minister (Hon. Sir William Mulock) to the very peculiar and extraordinary condition of affairs which exists in connection with the Wellington Coal Company's mines. The men employed in these mines made up their minds that they would have a trades union, that they would affiliate that trades union with the international union on the other side of the line. For this reason the owners of the mines discharged the officers of the union, closed down the mines, and they have disorganized a happy community of nearly 4,000 people, who were depending absolutely for their livelihood on the operation of these mines. I can quite conceive, Mr. Speaker, how very difficult it is when labour and capital is in conflict, and when negotiations are kept open between the two parties to the conflict; I can quite understand how difficult it is even for the government to intervene to bring about a settlement. But here is an instance in which, because a large number of men employed in a very dangerous industry thought it a proper thing to combine for the sake of their own interests, these coal mines were closed down by the owners and the working men deprived of their livelihood as a consequence. It is important, Sir, for more reasons than one that matters of this kind should be presented to this parliament. In the first place, attention ought to be called to them here because there ought be some authority in the government of this country whereby serious conflicts between labour and capital detrimental to the public interest could be put an end to by the government interceding between the two. When workingmen as represented by trades unions do unlawful acts; when, for instance, they attempt to break their contract or when they make unreasonable demands, you hear a great outcry from all quarters condemning these trades unions. Well, Sir, we ought just be as ready to condemn oppression and wrong-doing on the other side, and to bring to the public attention unwarrantable tyranny perpetrated by a corporation which prevents men from exercising their lawful right to combine in their own interest. Let me say here, Mr. Speaker, that there is not an industry existing in the wide world to-day where combination of labour is as necessary as in coal mining; there is not an industry operating to-day where men labour under such disadvantageous conditions as to their safety, as they do in the operation of coal mines. I am speaking on the floor of this House, from having a very extensive experience in coal mines myself. I know by practical experience all that it means. There is no industry in the world to-day that is so extensively regulated by government enactment as the operation of coal mines, and why? It is for the reason that there is no existing industry that has in its operation such dangerous elements, and that needs such strict regulation and supervision by government authority. Need I remind the House of this painful fact. In the operation of the Crow's Nest coal mine, less than a year ago over one hundred men lost their lives with one blast. Need I remind the House that less than two years ago, in one of the very mines closed down by the Wellington Coal Company, because the workmen wished to have a union; seventeen men were done to death and buried in the mine. It is unnecessary for me to remind the House that serious accidents have occurred in these British Columbia coal mines resulting in the death of hundreds of the miners. I repeat that there is no industry so dangerous as the occupation of the coal miner, and I say that there is no body of men who so badly need an organization to enable them to protest against oppressive regulations. If the men are to be prevented by the coal mine owners from having trades union organizations, then they would be debarred from complaining of the dangerous conditions that may exist in their surroundings. And, Sir, the day has gone, I think; the day ought to have gone when the right of workmen to combine should be questioned.

There is another reason why I believe that this important question should be dealt with on the floor of parliament. Let me point out that the enormous privileges possessed by this particular coal company on Vancouver Island were received from this parliament of Canada. Nearly twenty years ago, this company obtained from the hands of this parliament 1,900,000 acres of land on Vancouver Island with all the minerals in that belt, free of taxation for ever and with $750,000 in cash to build seventy-two miles of railway. And in spite of this grant; in spite of the enormous extent of this privilege, this government does not appear to hold one single particle of control over the carrying on of that extensive business. These people, who twenty years ago became the possessors of this vast wealth belonging to the people; these are the people who turn around to-day and say to the workingmen who have to risk their lives: You shall have no combination for your own protection. Although the men did not demand anything, never sought a single benefit, the only reason being that the owner objected to the international connection, it may be a matter of opinion whether the miners of Vancouver island are doing the very best thing in thier own interests by forming such a connection before they are united at home; but this is their own business, and as for the Wellington Coal Co., they have more than once interfered and discharged men because they desired and tried to affiliate with a Canadian union. Up to the time that these men made unreasonable demands it was an act of tyranny to interfere with their legal and moral right to combine. I direct the attention of the Minister of Labour to this condition of things. I say again that when two parties are in conflict and when the public interest is suffering, it is the duty and province of government to step in to protect the public right. In all the affairs of life this principle prevails. If two men on the main street of Ottawa were to come into conflict; were to question each others rights, were as a result to obstruct the public highway, the chief of police would never question the individual liberty of these two men, but would instantly invoke authority to make them settle their difference. That principle if it be right in such a local matter, is a hundred fold more needful when extensive public rights are being invaded. When the public interest suffers because of a conflict between capital and labour; because of the oppression of labour by capital, then it should be in the power of government to interfere to safeguard the public interest. I would like the Minister of Labour to look into this matter. I believe the condition of affairs is so serious that it necessitates immediate action, and I would like the hon. minister to take the matter into his immediate consideration and contrive some means of dealing with it, such as sending a commission to the province of British Columbia to take evidence under oath, ascertain the reasons for the present disastrous condition of affairs there, and lay the facts before the public.

Mr. JOHN CHARLTON (North Norfolk). In connection with this subject which has been brought up by my hon. friend from Vancouver (Mr. Ralph Smith), I think it would be well for the government to take into consideration the result of the great industrial struggle which took place in the United States last year, and which deranged the business of that country, caused an infinite amount of suffering, deprived millions of people of a supply of hard coal, and was in every respect most disastrous. That struggle resulted from the refusal of the operators or mine owners to recognize the labour unions, and it was fought out to the death. At last, the companies were forced to have the grievances of themselves and the unions referred to a commission appointed by the President of the United States. That commission visited the mines, examined the miners and the mine owners, took cognizance of all the facts bearing on the question, and have recently delivered their verdict. That verdict does not by any means exonerate the mine owners, but places on them practically the responsibility for that great struggle and the troubles which resulted from it. The result of that deliverance is that the trade unions are recognized, the hours of labour shortened, prices increased, and the mine owners placed in the unenviable position of being forced from the position they took at the beginning of the struggle. Of course, the labour unions were not faultless. There was the question of the employment of non-union men, and some violence was used to prevent them going to work. The commission recognized the right of non-union men to work as well as union men. But I rise to call attention to this great struggle and the deliverance of this commission, composed of eminent experts in many lines and one judge of the United States Supreme Court, for the purpose of directing the minister's attention to a source of information which will perhaps be of service to him in dealing with this matter when he takes it under consideration.

Mr. R. G. MACPHERSON (Burrard). I wish simply to accentuate, if possible, the remarks of the hon. member for Vancouver (Mr. Smith), because we have very few men in Canada who can speak as strongly or with as much authority on the subject of trades' unions and the actual working of trades' unions in connection with coal mines as that hon. member. But I do not wish to bring into the discussion any extraneous matters. We in British Columbia, as you are probably aware, are face to face with many labour troubles, which are practically threatening our existence as a province, and I trust that the Minister of Labour will see his way to appoint a commission to investigate the causes which have led to these troubles. I am in receipt of letters every day, from all classes of people and from all parts of the province, calling attention to the terrible state of affairs which exists there, and which, if it is not soon remedied, will have a very serious effect on the industrial life of that province. We had a strike on the Canadian Pacific Railway, which began in a small way in Vancouver, and I am told that strike was caused by the refusal of the company to recognize the right of the clerks to form a union. I do not wish to discuss the question of trades unions. I think we all recognize that men have a right to combine; and if the strike in question was brought on by the refusal of the company to recognize the union, I think there ought to be an investigation of it. Although the strike began in a small way, it may lead to very serious consequences, because a little leaven leaveneth the whole lump. The province of British Columbia is a province of great natural resources and is capable of sustaining a large population; but it is not going ahead in the way that it ought to do, and I think these labour troubles have a good deal to do with that fact. I do not suppose that it is necessary for me to say that if these labour disputes existed in the eastern part of Canada, the government would take immediate steps to settle them. Our whole province is practically upset because of them. We have strikes at Fernie, on Vancouver island, and on the mainland. I do not undertake to suggest a remedy; but I think that if a commission were appointed as suggested, to make an investigation and report to this parliament, some good might result. I am not speaking for any class or any company, but for the whole people of British Columbia, when I say that we must have some remedy, and the remedy must be applied at once.

Mr. A. W. PUTTEE (Winnipeg). The troubles which the hon. member for Vancouver (Mr. Smith) and his colleague, (Mr. Macpherson) have brought before this House this afternoon are of such vital importance to British Columbia and are creating such mischief out there as to demand the serious attention of this House. As to the proposal that a commission should be sent to investigate, probably that is the only thing that can be done immediately; but I cannot myself see that any good can be hoped from it. We have never had any explanation from the government as to why the commission of the Labour Commissioner who was in British Columbia two or three years ago was revoked about eighteen months ago. Since then there have been two commissions sent to British Columbia at great expense to this country; but here is a case in which I think all the information necessary would have been in the department and before this House now if that commission had been continued. But I also rise to call the attention of the hon. Minister of Labour to this one common feature in all these strikes, not only those now in progress in British Columbia, but some that hove occurred in eastern Canada; that is, the refusal of the employers to recognize the unions. The cause of the U.B.R.E. strike on the Canadian Pacific Railway, which has now, unfortunately, extended to Winnipeg, was the refusal of the company to recognize the Brotherhood of Railway Employees. The strikes at Fernie, British Columbia were due to the same cause. The last 'Labour Gazette' proves conclusively that the whole trouble is due to a stubborn refusal of the employers to recognize the union at all. Some time last month the Deputy Minister of Labour, Mr. Mackenzie King, went to Fernie to investigate into the causes of the strike there. He went to the company's office and in his report thus described his visit:

> The general manager had left on the day previous to attend a convention at Victoria, B. C., called for the purpose of forming a mine owners association.

And he proceeds to say that the manager had left word with his secretary to inform the Deputy Minister of Labour that the mine owners would not deal with their men as an organization. Here is a most remarkable state of affairs. We find these mine owners, who are combining themselves, denying to their men the right to do the same. As a matter of fact all the strikes in Canada to-day, and all those which have taken place within the last two or three years, have turned on the question of the absolute refusal of the employers to deal with organized labour. And that is the difficulty which we must first tackle. The hon. Minister of Labour has a Bill regarding disputes on railways, and I have given notice of a Bill the same as that which I presented last year, to strengthen the conciliation Act, but nothing in either of these Bills will touch this point, which is the critical point in all these troubles.

The POSTMASTER GENERAL (Hon. Sir William Mulock). The subject brought to the attention of the House by my hon. friend is most important and far reaching. Labour troubles are not confined to Canada, although perhaps the particular part of Canada referred to in this debate has been the special centre of industrial disturbance for some little time. Various governments have endeavoured to deal with this phase of the labour problem, but so far it cannot be claimed that much success has been achieved. We have in New Zealand what is called a compulsory arbitration law, which has been in force nearly ten years. But there are those who contend that it is about to break down. Certainly the employees, to a large extent, in New Zealand are reported as dissatisfied. That measure is one of a strictly compulsory character. The awards are dealt with by a board having legal jurisdiction to enforce them. There is only one tribunal that I am aware of where industrial disputes may be settled outside of legal compulsion, and that is the forum of public opinion. My hon. friend from Vancouver (Mr. Smith), I understand, wants us to appeal to that forum in the present instance by appointing a royal commission to inquire into all the facts and lay them before the public. He alludes to the powers and privileges granted to the company at Nanaimo. These lands, he says, were granted by the government some twenty years ago as a concession for the construction of a railway seventy-two miles in length, and he contends that in view of the liberality of the government the company ought to be fair and generous towards its employees. While admitting that contention, still it cannot be denied that if any rights should have been secured the railway employees, the proper place in which to have secured them was the charter granting the company its powers and privileges. But if these lands have passed from the Crown and the fee simple in them is now vested in the company, or in the individuals who are responsible for the trouble, the power of any government to confiscate the lands or apply any special remedy is gone, and we have to fall back upon whatever power parliament may be able to exercise generally. A year ago there was a strike at the Nanaimo mines in which 900 men took part. I sent out my deputy, and he was able in a few days to bring about industrial peace. He induced the parties to enter in an agreement providing for peace for a length of time, but apparently that truce has been broken, although we learn it now for the first time. Within the last couple of months the Department of Labour was asked to interfere in connection with the Crow's Nest strike, and the deputy minister proceeded to the locality. The company, however, declined to accept any intervention and there is no law to force them to do so. It is a question whether public opinion will approve of a compulsory measure of interference in the ordinary disputes arising between employers and employees. My hon. friend from North Norfolk (Mr. Charlton) very properly refers to strikes in coal mines as of a special character. In that I agree with him. Coal is a necessity of life, only to be found in very few spots, so that coal mining is an industry of a monopolistic character, and public opinion would perhaps approve of special legislation dealing with that industry, just as public opinion approves of parliament intervening to maintain the running of railways and prevent their operations being interrupted by disputes between them and their employees. We are only making a beginning in labour legislation. My hon. friend says that at one time there was a commissioner in Vancouver. Well, a commissioner was appointed there, I think in 1899, but not under any law. He was appointed simply, I think, by the Department of Justice to take note of matters in the vicinity of Vancouver, and later on parliament adopted a Conciliation Act based on the Imperial Act of the same name. That Act has been enforced with more or less effect for the past three or four years, but under it intervention is not permitted except with the consent of the parties. When the parties refuse, as they sometimes do, intervention is impossible. Whether public opinion would warrant our enacting a law which would give the right to the government to intervene in matters of dispute between employer and employee is a matter on which I would not venture to form an opinion. No doubt there is a conflict of opinion, but it seems to me that there is a gradual educational process going on, and that by degrees employers and employees will come to appreciate any measure that will favour the intervention of disinterested parties in order to prevent these industrial wars.

I am not perhaps at liberty to place on the Table the correspondence I have received from parties to industrial disputes, it is of a semi-private character. But I can say this without going into details, that since presenting the Bill now before parliament to provide a tribunal for dealing with railway labour troubles, I have received communications from employees outside of the railway world asking if a similar measure might not be with success extended to them. My view has been that it would be better to place the Railway Bill upon the statute-book, and then the industrial classes including of course employees could see for themselves the exact text of it, and have an opportunity of judging of its efficacy when put in force. Then if public opinion asked for an extension of the principle involved in the Railway Act to troubles in other walks of industrial life, I have no doubt parliament would accede to that demand. But it seems to me unwise to force legislation too rapidly. If we proceeded and applied the principle in the Bill now before parliament to disputes between private employers and their employees, forcing it upon them before they were ready for it, perhaps we would make less progress than by waiting. There is such a thing as going too fast, and I am of opinion that no labour legislation will be effective unless it carries with it the good will, largely, of the persons to whom it is intended to apply. Entertaining that view I have no hesitation in saying that my own feelings are altogether against the compulsory feature of the New Zealand Act. I believe that in this country where there is such a feeling in favour of freedom and manhood, the working classes would resent anything in the nature of the legal compulsion which is the feature of the New Zealand Act.

Now with reference to the particular trouble in British Columbia to-day, and especially that in the Wellington mines, I am not in a position to offer an opinion one way or the other as to the rights or wrongs of the dispute. My hon. friend has given a statement, which I presume is his explanation of the dispute. No doubt he has given it correctly, as he understands it, and it may be that he is absolutely correct. But it would be inexpedient to offer an opinion on one side of the case only being presented. As to what may be done to bring about a more satisfactory state of affairs, that is a most serious problem. There is no law by which we can compel an employer to give labour to his employees. We may have some control over companies having charters, and who are more or less under legislative jurisdiction, but when it comes to the relations between the private employer and a private employee, I know of no law that will compel an employer to employ or will compel any man to work. At the same time we must use our best offices to try and bring about harmonious relations, and endeavour to induce both contestants to moderate their views and to settle their disputes. It is in that spirit, I presume, that my hon. friend suggests that we should organize a commission to investigate the causes of all these various industrial disturbances in British Columbia. I can conceive of great good coming from such a measure. Whether the time is yet ripe is a matter for consideration. Whether the public opinion of British Columbia has reached that stage when it would welcome intervention of this character, is a matter for serious consideration.

Mr. SPROULE. You might as well extend it to political strikes out there.

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. Perhaps the hon. gentleman would like to interject political questions into this discussion, but I think never yet in this House have we had any political controversy over labour troubles. We have always endeavoured to proceed as a united body without reference to party, in the discussion of industrial troubles, and in this instance I hope there will be no exception. We are too much interested, the welfare of Canada is too deeply concerned in the labour question, to make it a political football. I have only to say, therefore, to my hon. friend, that the government will consider his suggestion at once, and consider it as a most urgent matter demanding early consideration. It is to be hoped that if we turn the light of public opinion upon these controversies, good may result.

As to the strike upon the Canadian Pacific Railway, when the Bill before parliament becomes law we will then have a legal right to intervene. It is not necessary for me to anticipate discussion upon that point, but that measure, as you perhaps are aware, contemplates giving the government a legal right to intervene, examine witnesses, take evidence, and submit the finding of the tribunal to parliament and to the country. It is hoped that when that state of affairs is attained, the parties to these controversies will respond to public opinion just as the parties to the coal strike in the anthracite regions of Pennsylvania responded to the demand of public opinion. They submitted that trouble to arbitration, and now, I presume, propose to abide by the result of the award. The government is fully alive to the importance of this question and will give it every possible consideration.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN (Halifax). I would remark to the Minister of Labour that there does not seem to be much of a remedy suggested by anything that he has said to-day. We gather from him that he considers the business of raising coal to be somewhat of a monopolistic character, which would justify government interference more than any other business in the country. At the same time he tells us that he is applying to the railways of this country a measure which he shrinks from applying to the business he has just named. I do not regard that as a very logical position. I am expressing no opinion at the present time as to whether it is advisable to adopt that course, but taking the statement the Minister of Labour has made to-day, certainly we are constrained to believe that there is much more reason for applying this principle to the case of a great corporation engaged in the business of mining coal than to any other class of corporations in Canada. The hon. gentleman has suggested that we turn on the light of public opinion, whatever that means. I do not know exactly how the government or parliament are going to turn on the light of public opinion any more than it is turned on at present. The light of public opinion is turned on through the press of this country probably as effectively as it could be done by any other means.

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. By getting at the facts.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). He does not seem to offer much comfort to the hon. member for Vancouver (Mr. Smith), who has brought this matter to the attention of the House. With regard to the strike in the United States, I am informed that there was a measure in the laws of the state of Pennsylvania providing for arbitration in case of such strikes, and that it proved absolutely ineffective in the recent strike. Has the Minister of Labour any information on that point ?

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. No.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). Perhaps the hon. member for Vancouver could give us some information with regard to that, because it might be of assistance in considering the matter which he has brought to the attention of the House. I know he is well informed on these labour questions.

Mr. SMITH (Vancouver). I am sorry that I have not got that information in my possession at the present time, but I will be very glad to procure it and to present it to the House.

Hon. WM. ROSS (Victoria, N.S.). A word about the compulsory New Zealand Act which has been in operation in that province for a number of years. There were only three cases submitted to that tribunal, two of them have given the greatest satisfaction To prove that that legislation is acceptable to the people of New Zealand, I may mention the fact that Mr. Seddon, the premier of that colony and of the government who introduced that compulsory Bill, was returned to power last November with a larger majority than he had before. I have among my papers not only the New Zealand Act, but the details of the trials that have taken place under it. Public opinion in the United States condemned the great strike that was so injurious not only to that country but to the Dominion of Canada, but public opinion was as helpless to deal with it as a parcel of children, until the President of the United States took it in hand himself. Public opinion condemns strikes, but then public opinion in Canada is quite helpless to deal with such matters under present circumstances. The remedy must be in the hands of the government, otherwise the people will be as helpless here as they were on the other side of the line

Motion agreed to, and House went into Committee of Supply.

Public Works—chargeable to income—public buildings, Ontario—Toronto Dominion public buildings, improvements, renewals, repairs, &c., $8,000.

Mr. CLARKE. When we were in Supply considering these items two or three days ago, the hon. Minister promised to bring down certain correspondence on the subject. Will he lay that correspondence on the Table ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS (Hon. James Sutherland). The correspondence has been prepared, and I will send it over to the hon. gentleman (Mr. Clarke).

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). I would suggest that this item be allowed to stand until the arrival of the hon. member for Bothwell (Mr. Clancy), who will be here in a few moments.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Very well, take the next item.

Item allowed to stand.

Toronto post office—alterations and additions, including elevator and fittings, $23,500.

Mr. SPROULE. Only $10,000 was voted for this last year. What does the hon. Minister propose to do with this money ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Representations have been made for some time that the accommodation in the Toronto post office was not sufficient, that the building was in a poor state of repair, and that considerable improvements were needed. A contract was let for this work amounting to $35,000, tenders being called for by advertisement. This vote is to complete the work. The total estimated cost of the work made by the chief architect was $34,413. But after consideration, they thought they could complete it for $33,000. This vote, with the $10,000 voted last year, will make up the amount.

Mr. CLANCY. Will the hon. Minister say if the contract was let to the lowest tenderer ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. It was not.

Mr. CLANCY. I shall have to ask my hon. friend (Hon. Mr. Sutherland) to lay upon the Table the tenders and the contract, as well as any other papers in connection with the Toronto post office improvements that he may have.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. There is no objection. If there is anything further, I shall be glad to furnish it.

Mr. CLANCY. I will let my hon. friend know if there is anything further.

Mr. DEPUTY SPEAKER. Carried.

Mr. CLANCY. No ; I understand that the item stands.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Last week the request was made that this item stand in the absence of my hon. friend (Mr. Clancy). I understood then that he wanted some information brought down. I do not know any reason why the item should stand again. Any information the hon. gentleman wants I am quite prepared to give.

Mr. CLANCY. My hon. friend will see, of course, that we are early in the session and early in the estimates ; and, since he himself states that the contract was not let to the lowest tenderer, I think we should have full opportunity to consider this item. No time will be lost, it seems to me, by letting this item stand ; on the contrary, it may facilitate the work very much if we have an opportunity to look at the papers.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. If the hon. gentleman requests it to stand I have no objection at all.

Mr. DEPUTY SPEAKER. Stands.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. What about the previous item ?

Mr. CLANCY. I should like both to stand because I understand they are both for the same purpose.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Yes.

Mr. CLANCY. It is the item for the Toronto post office alterations that I want particularly to stand.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Yes.

Mr. CLARKE. When the hon. Minister of Public Works was giving us some information respecting the work at the Toronto custom house he promised to bring down the correspondence. I understand from the hon. minister that there is no correspondence. What he laid before us is a memo. and a list of prices that are allowed the contractors who are doing the work. There is no correspondence to show who suggested the work should be done this way, or as to whether these prices are fair prices, or who assumed the responsibility of advising the hon. minister to do the work on these terms and conditions. Did the local architect, Mr. Curry, advise that these prices should be paid to Messrs Brown & Love to do the work under these conditions without asking for bids from other reputable contractors in the city ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. As I explained on a previous occasion, reports received in the department showed that this building was really in a very dangerous state. The chief architect himself went to Toronto, discussed the whole matter, made this arrangement and took the responsibility of it, and I endorse what he did. I believe everything is proper and that the prices are reasonable.

Mr. CLARKE. Did he have any consultation with the local architect up there ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Yes.

Mr. CLARKE. Is there any correspondence between the local architect and the chief architect ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. No, the chief architect was on the ground himself.

Mr. CLARKE. From whom was the report received as to the critical condition of the building ? Was it from the local architect ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Yes.

Mr. CLARKE. The local architect reported that the building was in a critical condition, the chief architect went up, and between them they gave out a contract to have the work done ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Yes.

Mr. CLARKE. Without asking for bids to do the work from other contractors ?

North-west Territories—Court house, lock-up and police accommodation, &c., $1,500.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). Where is this court house ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This is a general vote for the territories. The previous vote was $1,000 and it has been increased by $500. This is found necessary owing to the increased number of buildings, and these buildings, being of wood, the vote was not found sufficient to keep them in repair.

Dominion public buildings—renewals, improvements, repairs, &c., $5,000.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). What is the explanation of the increase ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. There is only one explanation ; we are asking $1,000 more because of the increased number of buildings in the territories. The $4,000 previously voted was found to be insufficient. Our property is being destroyed owing to the fact of our not having money enough to look after it and repair it properly.

Macleod court house, $10,000.

Mr. BENNETT. May I ask the hon. minister what public building there is now at Macleod ? There is a public building of some nature but whether it is owned by the territories or the Dominion I do not know; yet, when I stop to think it must of necessity belong to the Dominion.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. My information is that there is no public building except the one under construction now; that is the new court house.

Mr. BENNETT. I do not know whether Macleod is an incorporated town or not. I was only there once in my life. There is a brick building of fairly considerable size and I assume it must be a public building and a government building.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I know the building myself that the hon. gentleman refers to and it is a very good hall. It must belong to the municipality. The deputy informs me that we have no public building there except this one which is under construction. This building is under construction and under contract and this amount is to complete the contract.

Mr. BENNETT. If my recollection is right, Macleod was one of the first towns in the North-west Territory and it hardly seems conceivable that there have been no public buildings at that place for the transaction of public business outside of the buildings of the Mounted Police force. Can it be possible that in connection with the administration of justice there is no public building at Macleod ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. They had a rented building previously.

Mr. BENNETT. Which building was it that was rented ? Was it the public hall ?

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). There is a contract, I suppose for this work ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Yes.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). What is the total amount expended, and what will be the entire cost ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. The amount of the contract is $13,973, and printing and advertising, heating, furniture and fixtures, electric wiring, fencing, sidewalks, clerk of works and incidental expenses, bringing the total to $21,735. The chief architect informs me that this is quite sufficient to complete the whole building.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). The contract has been let ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Yes, the contract has been let to the lowest tenderer.

Red Deer—Court house, lock-up, &c., and land office, $10,000.

Mr. BENNETT. Has the contract been made for this building ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. The contract has not been let.

Mr. BENNETT. Has the site been purchased ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. The site has been purchased for $830. One of the causes of delay was that there was some question as to whether it would be a wooden or a brick building, and there may be a further report as to whether the building will be of wood or of brick. The chief architect thinks that a suitable building can be put up for this amount.

Mr. CLANCY. One would come to the conclusion that there should be a considerable difference between the cost of a wooden building and the cost of a brick building.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. The chief architect informs me that on a rough estimate there would be a difference of $6,000 or $7,000. This estimate would be for a wooden building but if it were decided to be in the public interest to put up a brick building we would have to ask a further amount of $6,000 or $7,000.

Mr. CLANCY. This is practically voting an appropriation in blank Neither the minister or the chief architect appear to have decided whether they will put up a wooden or a brick building. Now when we are voting money in this way we should know as nearly as possible what the character of the building is to be and what it will cost. I do not think that the minister himself will contend that the principle upon which he asks this vote is a proper principle.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. The hon. gentleman has misunderstood me. I said this estimate was made for a wooden building and the vote was for a wooden building, but there was a petition asking for a brick building. I told the hon. gentleman that a report had not been made on that, but if it were in the public interest to erect a brick building we would have to ask for a further vote. None of this money will be spent for a brick building without a further vote being asked and an explanation given.

Mr. CLANCY. Do I understand the minister to say that none of this money will be spent until he comes back to the House for a vote under the changed conditions.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I do not think it would be right for me to ask a vote for a wooden building and then if we decided to put up a brick building which would cost a great deal more, to make that change without informing the House.

Mr. CLANCY. Then I misunderstood the hon. gentleman.

Yorkton court house and jail, $5,500.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). Is this let by contract to the lowest tenderer ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. The work is under construction and it was let to the lowest tenderer at $8,760. The total cost is estimated at $14,529. There will be the heating to do and the furniture to put in and so on.

Mr. MORIN. I have already told the Minister of Public Works that the money of the people was not properly spent throughout the country and here is a case in point. You are asking a vote of $10,000 for a court house, lock-ups, &c., and land office at Red Deer; and $5,500 for a court house and jail at Yorkton. Now if you can afford to spend $10,000 to build a post office in a town like L'Assomption with a population of 1,605 and $10,000 in Thetford Mines, it would only seem reasonable that you should expend more money for these important public buildings in growing towns in the North-west Territories. There does not seem to be any system about the thing. The government does not seem to have any rule to guide it in these matters.

Dominion public buildings generally, $34,500.

Mr. FOWLER. What does this item apply to ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. It is to cover miscellaneous items of expenditure, chiefly in the architect's office in connection with public buildings throughout the Dominion.

Mr. FOWLER. Does any portion of this vote go to the armoury at Sussex in the county of King's, N.B. ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. If the chief architect had occasion to do any work in connection with that building, or to send any person to inspect it, that expense will be paid out of this vote. This applies particularly to the head office staff of the chief architect. The subject my hon. friend refers to will come up under another vote.

Mr. CLANCY. Has the $5,000 which was voted last year been spent ? If not, how much of it has been spent ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Last year there was a supplementary vote of $2,000. The total amount expended was over $7,000. We thought we might manage next year with $5,000.

Mr. CLANCY. Do I understand that there was an over-expenditure of $2,000 last year?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. A supplementary vote was taken to cover that amount. I cannot tell my hon. friend just what the amount of the expenditure for the present year is ; but a vote of $5,000 was taken, and I hope we shall be able to remain within that amount.

Mr. CLANCY. I am anxious to know the reason for the somewhat exceptional expenditure of last year.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. There seems to have been an increased amount required for telegraph stations, &c.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). I do not quite understand the reason for these different items : public buildings in Nova Scotia, public buildings in New Brunswick, public buildings in the maritime provinces, public buildings in Quebec, public buildings in Ontario, public buildings in Manitoba, public buildings in the North-west Territories, public buildings in British Columbia, and then public buildings generally. I suppose this arrangement is a relic of some old system ; but I would like to ask the Minister of Public Works whether he does think it a very business like way of bringing down the estimates. We might have half a dozen more items for public buildings in detail.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. My hon. friend seems to take the view I did myself when I came to look at these estimates. I suppose this arrangement was forced on the department by parliament wanting to know everything in detail. If one vote were taken, including all these items, there might be a feeling that some of the provinces did not receive the attention they were entitled to. That was perhaps the first reason for the system. There is also some advantage to the department in giving the items in detail. If the officials of the department were allowed to draw on a general vote, instead of being limited by these detailed votes, the expenditure might be thought excessive.

Mr. CLANCY. With regard to the item under consideration, the expenditure last year was $7,132.33. Out of this there was expended for stationery for the office $2,482.80. This does seem to me to be an extraordinary sum for stationery, and perhaps the hon. minister can give some explanation of it.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Not having been long connected with the department, I am unable to say whether that item is excessive or not. However, on consultation with the deputy minister, we think we can make the total for this year $5,000, instead of $7,000, and also for next year, for which this vote is asked. I may say that the stationery is all purchased through the government Stationery Department.

Mr. CLANCY. I can quite understand that the hon. gentleman, in the short time he has been in the department, may not have mastered all these details, but it seems to me that his deputy should be able to give him the reasons for this heavy expenditure.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). Over a thousand dollars seems a great deal for photographic supplies, and it seems a little strange that they should come under the head of public buildings generally.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. These photographers are all in connection with public buildings.

Mr. FOWLER. Are you making a collection of the photographs of public buildings ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. These photographs really save a great deal of expense and loss of time, as they save the copying of plans and also travelling expenses. The engineers and architects are photographers themselves and save the department the expense of sending photographers to do the work.

Mr. CLARKE. A local newspaper suggested, respecting the hon. gentleman's predecessor, that he was very active and ambitious and could do all the work of all the other departments, and the Toronto 'Globe' suggested that he thought his colleagues had nothing to do but sit in front of government buildings and have their photographs taken. Would there be any connection between that suggestion and this item ? We are certainly entitled to fuller information than we have had.

Salaries to resident clerk of works, $10,500.

Mr. FOWLER. Is the salary of Mr. McLean included in this ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This vote is for the resident permanent clerks. The gentleman my hon. friend refers to was only clerk of works while the work was going on, and he is paid out of a special vote.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). What are the duties of these officers ? Are they permanent officers of the department stationed at different points ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. There are three in Quebec, three at Ottawa, two in Manitoba, two in British Columbia, one in New Brunswick, and none in Nova Scotia. My deputy informs me that in Nova Scotia the chief engineer there acts as clerk of works. These men are practically the representatives of the department in these various provinces. They look after the public buildings and report and are held responsible for the different expenditures thereon.

Mr. CLANCY. Are these men sent about from place to place ? I understand that there are local clerks employed as well where public works are being done. If these men are not architects, their position would seem to be merely ornamental.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. These men act as agents for the department in the various provinces and besides there are local clerks of works who act as foremen and see that everything is done according to specifications, These men were appointed previous to this government taking office and no changes have been made, and my deputy informs me that they render valuable service. They are supposed to be practical men and well qualified for the positions they hold. As I have tried to explain, this does not refer to the clerks of works, foremen, or whatever you call them in charge of the works under construction. These are representatives of the department in the various provinces. I do not know that there has been any reason to find fault with the qualifications of these men.

Mr. CLANCY. The hon. minister will see that I was not finding fault,but trying to gain information with respect to representatives of the Public Works Department who may be necessary, as the hon. gentleman states, in places a long distance from the capital, and who stand between the engineer acting for the department and the clerks of a works locally. I simply asked if they were architects, and, whether, if called upon to discharge the duties of architects, they would be able to do so.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. The officers referred to are not architects. Of course, you could not engage architects at the salaries paid to these men.

Mr. FOWLER. I would like to know upon what principle these local men are appointed. Is a mason selected in the case of a building to be constructed of stone, a carpenter or master builder for wooden structure, and so on ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. The policy of the department has been to take practical men. I myself favour, as far as possible, the appointment of architects. But there is no fixed rule. The clerk of works is recommended by the member for the riding. Practical men are appointed, who are supposed to be qualified, to see that the specifications of the architects on which the contracts are taken, are carried out.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). Is there a resident engineer in each province where these clerks are at work ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. There are in the provinces several engineers in the different branches of the department, in addition to these men. The staff for which this vote is taken have duties altogether connected with building.

Public buildings generally—construction of armouries, $9,000.

Mr. FOWLER. Perhaps the hon. minister can tell me now whether any portion of this is being expended on the armoury at Sussex, and if so, how much, and for what purpose ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Yes, I find details of expenditure during the current year, 1902-3, amounting to $2,276.17.

Mr. FOWLER. Is that expenditure up to the present time ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. No, up to the 1st of January last.

Mr. FOWLER. Would the hon. minister kindly give me the details of that expenditure ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. The hon. gentleman (Mr. Fowler) can hardly expect the full details. If the hon. gentleman moves for a return, I will bring down all the details in the usual way.

Mr. FOWLER. Will the hon. minister allow this item to stand until that information is given ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I do not see any objection in allowing the item to stand.

Mr. FOWLER. I wish the opportunity to discuss this matter. There are some things in connection with it that ought to be brought to the attention of the department. If that had been done before perhaps these things might have been stopped.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I do not desire to prevent the hon. gentleman (Mr. Fowler) from having every opportunity now or on a future occasion of discussing this matter. But he will see that the expenditure he wishes to discuss is only a small portion of this whole item. When I bring down the details, the hon. gentleman will have an opportunity, for the item can be passed with that understanding. Besides there will be, in the supplementary estimates, a special item for the Sussex armoury and the matter can be discusssed on that item.

Mr. FOWLER. I do not see why the item should not stand.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I have tried to explain to my hon. friend—there are fourteen public buildings covered by the item we are now discussing ; hon. gentlemen on either side may wish information with regard to any of these matters and I am ready to give them all I can. It would be more convenient for the committee to give whatever information is required now and allow the item to pass. The hon. gentleman can reserve his right to discuss the matter on some other item of these estimates, or the item in the supplementary estimates will afford him an opportunity.

Mr. FOWLER. The only thing I desire is to bring to the attention of the department the condition of affairs in connection with the Sussex armoury.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I guarantee my hon. friend that he will have an opportunity to do so.

Mr. BLAIN. I would ask the hon. minister why the improvements in connection with the armoury in the public building in Brampton were not gone on with, as promised.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I have consulted the deputy minister, who informs me that the matter referred to by the hon. member for Peel (Mr. Blain) has not come to the attention of the Public Works Department. It may be an item in connection with the Militia Department, and perhaps my hon. friend the Minister of Militia (Hon. Sir Frederick Borden) may be able to answer.

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE (Hon. Sir Frederick Borden). I do not remember it.

Mr. BLAIN. I brought this matter up the year before last, and I will read what was then said for the benefit of the minister :

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I understand there is a proposal to fit up a room in a public building for the armoury.

Mr. BLAIN. Have tenders been asked for that purpose ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. It is a small work, and we shall not ask for tenders. I think it will cost about $1,000.

Mr. BLAIN. Will that be under the charge of the hon. gentleman's department ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. The request has been made to us.

So there must have been a request in the department for the expenditure of that money.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Is the expenditure asked for in connection with the public building there, or with the armoury ?

Mr. BLAIN. It is a joint building, partly a public building and partly an armoury.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. That will come up under another item, I will try and get the information.

Mr. BLAIN. Will the minister lay on the Table for a general discussion of armouries hereafter, a return to the request that was made to the department concerning the expenditure of that money ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I will bring that down on Monday.

Mr. FOWLER. Before this item passes, I want it distinctly understood that this return will be brought down containing this information, and that I may have an opportunity to discuss this question under any other item of the hon. gentleman's estimates.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I promise to give the hon. gentleman an opportunity of discussing it, after the report is brought down, on any other item in the estimates.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). The minister has mentioned that several armouries are under construction. Perhaps it would be well to tell us in a general way where they are, and the amounts expended.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I will give the names of all the places where the last vote has been expended, that is where the largest amounts have been paid. Small amounts under $100 are not referred to. Baddeck, N.S., $1,398; a small item for the Halifax drill hall; Middleton, N.S., $5,410; Sussex, N.B., $2,176; Woodstock, N.B., $780; Brockville, Ont., $3,150; a small amount for the Brantford armoury; St. Thomas, Ont., $496; Windsor, a small amount. Then there are new armouries; Kaslo, B.C., $3,504; Kamloops, $6,604; Nelson, $7,763; Revelstoke, $6,439, making a total of $37,126.

Mr. CLANCY. I would like the Minister of Public Works to give us some information as to the status of those clerks who seem to have permanent positions, but are not classified. The leader of the opposition asked a moment ago if they were permanent clerks. Now there are some cases where they seem to be in the outside service, and some of them are located in Ottawa, but they do not appear in the civil service list. We ought to know something of the positions they occupy.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. The hon. gentleman is right. I think under the Civil Service Act they are not recognized as permanent officials, but they are recognized as such in the departments. Most of them have held their positions for a long time. Not all of them are even appointed by Order in Council; but in the department they are considered as permanent, and some of them are responsible representatives of the department in the various provinces. It is in that sense that I used the words 'permanent employees'; but according to the Civil Service Act they would not come under that term.

Mr. CLANCY. It would be very convenient if these officials were classified in some manner so that we could know where to find them. I have no doubt the hon. gentleman is following the course adopted by a preceding government, but that is no reason why it should be continued. The hon. gentleman will see how inconvenient it is to find in the Auditor General's report that sums are being paid to these officers, while we find no mention of them in the civil service list; there is no means of tracing them, no means of ascertaining what position they occupy. There should be some class in which we would be able to find all the persons who have permanent employment in the department, whether in the inside service or the outside service.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I will take a note of the observations of the hon. gentleman, and see in what way these employees may be classified. When the returns are brought down, I will be able to show hon. members who these employees are, when they were appointed, and what their salaries are.

Mr. BENNETT. I would like to call the attention of the hon. gentleman to the building used as an armoury at Orillia. In that town two companies have their headquarters, and I find on reference to a local newspaper there, that the building is of such a nature that they are not permitted to store rifles in it, and instead of these rifles being at Orillia, they are kept at the town of Barrie, a considerable distance away. The result is a lack of interest in these rifle companies in the town of Orillia, and I suppose that condition and that result will apply all over the country. I think some system should be adopted of constructing, perhaps, cheap buildings, but such as will serve the purpose in different towns, particularly in places such as Orillia where two companies have their headquarters. May I ask the minister to consider seriously the question of the erection in the town of Orillia of a building that would meet the requirements of the local militia, and one in which they might store all their arms ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I have already had that matter under consideration. As I mentioned at a previous sitting of this House, I think it is a disgrace to the country that we have not better provision made for taking care of the rifles of the various companies. I am in favour of adopting a system of erecting a cheaper class of buildings at the various headquarters, buildings which would supply all the needs, and which would not cost a great deal. I think smaller buildings might be used, and yet be quite sufficient for the storing of rifles and other things.

Mr. BENNETT. Perhaps the hon. minister would permit me to read an article from a local newspaper of Orillia, which will give him an idea of the condition of things there :

The new rifles were issued some time ago, but they are all stored away at Barrie and it seems they are going to stay there. The rifles will be very useful locked away in Barrie, and in the meantime the soldiers here can become expert shots with peashooters, which will be very useful in time of war. They will likely parade on May 24th with a lath and a butter knife tied on the end for a bayonet.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). I think the minister read an item for an armoury at Middleton. What is it to cost ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. The amount spent is $5,501.74, and the total probable cost is estimated to be $8,400.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). Was there any difficulty about the construction of the building, or the taking of it over ? There was some statement in the public press that a difficulty had arisen in regard to it.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I do not quite understand my hon. friend. Does he ask if there was some difficulty about taking it over ?

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). About taking it over—some difficulty, either about obtaining the land or taking over the building. Has there been any correspondence on the subject ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I think, if my memory serves me rightly, the party we purchased the site from complained that he had not been paid, although the building had been erected. He was getting very angry, and wanted an increased price. The delay was in the Justice Department.

Mr. CLARKE. The man thought he was not getting justice.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. The matter has now been put through, and it is all settled up satisfactorily. There was some delay in getting the papers to the stage when we could get a certificate from the Justice Department to issue the cheque for the land.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). Is it a wooden or a brick building ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. A wooden building.

Mr. PORTER. I observe in the statement of expenditure read by the hon. Minister of Public Works of this sum of $37,126, that no portion of it has been set apart for the erection of an armoury at Belleville. I would like to ask the hon. minister whether it is the intention of the government to provide for that in the supplementary estimates ? I may, while referring to this subject, call the attention of the hon. minister to the fact, which, no doubt, has been represented to him, that within the last year it was found, upon inquiry, that the drill hall, or armoury, in Belleville, which had been in existence for a number of years and which had been occupied by the 15th battalion, had become unsafe, and in consequence of a promise made, the drill hall was demolished, torn down entirely, the battalion being led to believe that a new drill hall would be erected during the present year. I would like to ask the hon. minister whether any provision is being made for that ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. My hon. friend (Mr. Porter) is somewhat mistaken in stating that I referred to the expenditure during the year. An application has been made to the department. It is quite impossible for me to say whether or not there will be anything in the supplementary estimates. Speaking for myself, personally, as I know there is a good battallion and a good militia spirit in the city of Belleville, I would be very glad if my colleagues and the House could see their way clear to granting an appropriation for the erection of a building at Belleville.

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE. The hon. gentleman (Mr. Porter) was quite mistaken in saying that there was any condition in reference to the taking down of the old drill hall. There was no promise made. It was taken down because it was condemned by the architect as being unsafe, and it had to be taken down. The question of building a new drill hall is under consideration. I have no hesitation in saying, speaking from my point of view as Minister of Militia, that a new building should be erected, and I shall advise the hon. Minister of Public Works that as soon as it can be done, a new structure should be put up at Belleville.

Mr. TAYLOR. While the hon. Minister of Militia and Defence (Hon. Sir Frederick Borden) is in his place, I wish to draw his attention to the state of affairs that exists in Gananoque. We had a drill hall and armoury there, and it was taken down without being condemned. A new site was purchased, and we hoped to have had a drill hall and armoury erected on the new site. That was four or five years ago, but nothing has been done yet. A warehouse was rented to store the battery and arms in and they are stored in that building yet. I hope provision will be made in the supplementary estimates to carry out the promise that the government gave when they took down the old drill hall and purchased a site, and that a new building will be erected providing suitable accommodation for our battery and rifles so that the arms may be removed from the place in which they are now stored, because the warehouse is in the middle of a lumber yard and beside the railway track.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). There was some communication made to me two or three years ago in regard to some assistance towards an armoury and drill hall in the eastern part of the county of Halifax. I think the sum suggested was a very trifling one indeed. There are some companies organized, or proposed to be organized, in that part of my constituency. I suppose there must be some 25,000 people east of Halifax. The place to which I refer particularly is the Musquodoboit valley. I think some consideration might be given to this request, if there is any necessity, which I believe there is, for a place to store the arms of the men who are in the service there. I suppose that this armoury at Middleton is intended for the whole county of Annapolis ?

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE. For the 69th battalion.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). How much of it is in Annapolis ?

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE. Part of it is in Annapolis and part in Lunenburg.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). The population of Annapolis would be somewhat in excess of that of the district I have mentioned, but it would not be greatly in excess, and I observe that an expenditure of $8,000 is being made at Middleton. Middleton is only a small town of possibly a thousand population, I should think.

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE. I think about that.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). Of course, the armoury is intended not for Middleton, but for the whole district. Looking at the claims of the district of Musquodoboit valley, I think they might justify the expenditure of a moderate sum of money. I do not know whether the hon. minister has any recollection of the claims which were made by some of the people in that village for assistance. I think he will find some correspondence in his department in regard to it, and I would invite him to give it his attention, because I think it is well to encourage this spirit in the country districts. I know that companies organized in the Musquodoboit valley would be composed of as good material as you could find in Canada.

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE. I do not recollect having received any correspondence such as the hon. member for Halifax speaks of, nor am I aware that there is any military organization in the section unless it is connected, possibly, with the 78th regiment, which has its home partly in Truro and partly in Pictou counties. The city of Halifax has two battalions, the 63rd and 66th.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). And the Halifax garrison artillery.

Mr. TAYLOR.

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE. Yes. These are all city corps. I will look into the matter now that it has been suggested to me, and certainly my desire is, so far as possible, to provide everywhere a home, or a suitable headquarters for the different organizations of the militia.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). My recollection is that there was a small drill hall in Middle Musquodoboit, a number of years ago, which had fallen so much out of repair that it could not be used, and the claim which was made was that a small sum of money should be expended in putting it into such repair that it would be an encouragement for military organization in that district.

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE. I will look it up.

Mr. CLARKE. I was not present when the minister read the list of armouries on which it was proposed to spend this money and I did not hear how much he intended to expend in completing the armoury at Toronto. I see that the Minister of Militia and Defence is in his place and I am quite sure that with his co-operation there will be an item in the supplementary estimates to complete the Toronto armoury, if it is not provided for in this vote.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. The total of this vote is $9,000 and that would not go far in Toronto. There will be an item under which we can discuss the Toronto armoury.

Experimental farms—new buildings and renewals, improvements, repairs, &c., $10,000.

Mr. SPROULE. What new buildings are you putting up ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. There will be a new horticultural building at Ottawa to cost $2,500; repairs, Nova Scotia farm, $600; new barn Brandon farm, $2,500; repairs to buildings, $500; Indian Head, repairs, $500; Agassiz, repairs, $400; Total, $10,000.

Mr. SPROULE. This must be for an extension or addition to your present horticultural building at Ottawa. Where is the horticultural building on the experimental farm ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I do not know that I can describe where it is. It is one of the buildings on the farm. The hon. gentleman must have seen it.

Mr. SPROULE. You have a place for raising plants and flowers and I suppose this is an extension of that. You take a vote of $2,500 for a new barn at Brandon. I was looking at the buildings there last fall and I thought there was a fairly good building there.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This work is undertaken at the request of the Department of Agriculture as being urgently needed. The chief architect of the Public Works Department has no personal knowledge of the state of these buildings but in view of the remarks of my hon. friend (Mr. Sproule) I will make further inquiries.

Mr. SPROULE. I am not complaining of the expenditure if the buildings are needed and I presume they are. I sometimes thought that a more liberal expenditure should be made in the interest not only of the farmers but of the agriculturists throughout the country. I thought there was a fairly good building at Brandon when I saw it last fall.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I shall get the report of the Department of Agriculture and show it to the hon. gentleman.

Mr. FOWLER. Is it the intention of the department to erect any new buildings on the Nappan farm.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. We have no request this year from the Minister of Agriculture for new buildings.

Mr. FOWLER. Are these repairs done by day's work or by contract.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. All the repairs are done by day's work under the supervision of the clerk of works of the province.

Mr. SPROULE. You would not erect a new barn by day's work.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. A new building would be let by tender and contract.

Mr. BLAIN. Is there any change in the policy of the department as to the method of constructing public buildings and doing public work generally ? The hon. gentleman's predecessor took the ground that very many buildings should be constructed by day's labour, and I would like to know whether that is the hon. minister's policy.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. At the present time it is the policy of the department to let all public buildings to the lowest tender if it is satisfactory.

Ottawa public buildings, including repairs, ventilation and lighting, furniture, &c., $125,000.

Mr. BENNETT. As this is a large item, will the minister give us the details—the different amounts for the different purposes ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I shall be pleased to give the information as far as I have it. This covers general repairs and maintenance in connection with gas, power, lighting, heating, ventilation, closets and fire services. The buildings that have to be maintained are the parliament buildings, the eastern block, the western block, the Langevin block, the Supreme court, the geological museum, the printing bureau, the fisheries building, and the national art gallery. I suppose my hon. friend does not want the different amounts spent on the different buildings ?

Mr. BENNETT. I think the minister might state how much is for maintenance, how much for rents and how much for other services.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. The information given to me is not subdivided in the way the hon. gentleman suggests. The work, as my hon. friend knows, is generally done by day's labour, by the staff employed under the architect and the engineer of the department. I can give him the amount expended for wages and the amount for materials.

Mr. BENNETT. It was more a question of rents.

Mr. DEPUTY SPEAKER. The rents come in the next item.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. There is between $90,000 and $100,000 paid in wages, and about $35,000 for materials, which would include lumber, paints, oils, glass and some furniture. A good deal of the furniture is made in our own workshops by the carpenters and other mechanics. This item also includes the furniture purchased for the different departments.

Mr. FOWLER. What do you do with the furniture that is cast aside ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I understand that, under the supervision of the present architect, they are making very good use of the old furniture, by making it into new furniture. The policy is of course to collect the old furniture and sell it by auction.

Mr. FOWLER. You do not buy the furniture ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. We buy some. The repairs are largely done by our own men, and a good many tables and desks are made by the carpenters in the workshops.

Mr. BLAIN. I notice that there has been some change in the system of lighting this chamber. Perhaps the minister will give us a statement as to the cost.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. There is no cost for the change of light. As I stated yesterday, a request was made by the electric company to try the arc light instead of the incandescent. I gave them permission to make the test, and I would like to have the opinion of hon. members as to whether the change is more satisfactory or not. For one thing, the new light is very much more natural, more like daylight, than the other.

Mr. FOWLER. What change has been made in the system of ventilation ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. The architect says there is no change. It is the same system, but there is a different method of using the blower, the air being brought from the top.

Mr. FOWLER. What did that cost ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. The cost was merely nominal, the work being done by the staff of the department.

Mr. FOWLER. Did it cost $1,000.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. The architect informed me that the total expenditure for ventilation this year, for materials and wages, would be about $1,500. These little jobs are done by the workmen employed in the shops, and no separate account is kept of them.

Mr. CLARKE. How is it that the lighting of this chamber is sometimes so much better than at other times ? Sometimes, under the system you are experimenting with, we have a beautiful light, easy to the eyes and very natural, but at other times it is very dim. If we could keep it at the degree of excellence we have had it at times, it would be a great improvement on the lighting of last year and a very great improvement on previous years. Is the light on full now ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Yes, at present I can read very plainly. Of course, this new system is only in an experimental stage, and perhaps when the lamps are put in permanently it will be more satisfactory. But we will give it a little trial before adopting it. I think that the light is an improvement, and if perfected would be much appreciated by hon. members.

Mr. BENNETT. Is there any uniformity in the purchase of these fittings and furniture ? If not, it is high time that some little economy should be practised and not allow every gentleman who wishes to purchase such articles to get whatever may best seem to suit his taste. Who makes the purchases of office furniture and fittings ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. They are made by the deputy minister and certified by the minister.

Mr. BENNETT. It will be well to look into some of these items. I find, on looking over the Auditor General's Report, that there are some fearful and wonderful expenditures. At page 126—V, the Census department saw fit to buy last session two medicine chests at a cost of $6 each. Why should the Census department require these medicine chests. If we are to have medicine chests for every department, we had better buy a job lot at once and get them cheap.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. That item does not come under my department. I do not find any item of that kind under the heading of Public Works.

Mr. BENNETT. If the hon. gentleman will look at V—126 in connection with the Census department he will find that Mr. Valiquette bought, among a variety of other things, two medicine chests at $6. But if that item is not in the hon. Minister's department, here is one that is. I find that $19.50 worth of gray hair was bought. Was gray hair bought because it was cheaper than red ? That will be found on page V—131.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. That could hardly have been the Minister looking for gray hair.

Mr. BENNETT. I want to call the attention of the Minister to the expenditure of two of his colleagues. The Minister of Agriculture (Hon. Mr. Fisher) seems to be a mild mannered gentleman when disbursing the public moneys, for when he wants a desk for his department it only costs $40. But the Minister of Militia is extravagant in his tastes, for I find on V—129 that he purchased a desk—I presume it was for himself—which cost $155. I have out of my humble means bought a desk for myself and thought that an expenditure of $40 or $50 purchased a very fair desk. I have seen a $100 desk and thought it something to be envied. But I never saw a $155 desk. Perhaps the hon. Minister can describe the beauties of this article. But while the Minister of Militia has been extravagant, still greater extravagance has characterised another hon. Minister in the purchase of a desk, for I find that in this no less a sum than $165 for one. I know that the House will shudder when it hears who this extravagant minister was. It is no less a personage than the Minister of Labour and the Postmaster General. It is due to the House and the farmers of Ontario that he should explain how he possibly could have disbursed $165 of the people's money, drawn from the pockets of the farmers, to purchase a desk. Before the item passes, I would ask the Postmaster General to rise and give a realistic description of this desk that he purchased with the money of the people of Canada.

At six o'clock, Committee took recess.

After Recess.

House resumed at Eight o'clock.

PRIVATE BILLS.

SECOND READINGS.

Bill (No. 46) respecting the Kingston and Pembroke Railway Company.—Mr. Harty.

Bill (No. 52) to incorporate the Joliette and Lake Manuan Colonization Railway Company.—Mr. Bazinet.

Bill (No. 54) respecting the Canada Permanent and Western Canada Mortgage Corporation, and to change its name to the Canada Permanent Mortgage Corporation.—Mr. Osler.

Bill (No. 55) respecting the Central Ontario Railway.—Mr. Osler.

Bill (No. 56) to incorporate the Quebec, Saguenay, and Gulf of St. Lawrence Railway Company.—Mr. Girard.

Bill (No. 57) respecting the Niagara Grand Island Bridge Company.—Mr. German.

Bill (No. 58) respecting the Edmonton Street Railway Company.—Mr. Davis.

Bill (No. 61) respecting the Winnipeg Western Land Corporation, Limited.—Mr. McCarthy.

Bill (No. 62) respecting the Ontario and Qu'Appelle Land Company, Limited.—Mr. McCarthy.

Bill (No. 63) respecting the London and Port Stanley Railway Company.—Mr. McGugan.

Bill (No. 64) to incorporate the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway Company.—Mr. McCarthy.

Bill (No. 65) respecting the Mutual Life Assurance Company of Canada.—Mr. Bruce.

Bill (No. 67) to incorporate the Brockville and Western Railway Company.—Mr. Taylor.

Bill (No. 69) to incorporate the Northwest Coal and Coke Railway Company.—Mr. Scott.

Bill (No. 70) to incorporate the Macleod, Cardston and Montana Railway Company.—Mr. Scott.

OTTAWA VALLEY RAILWAY COMPANY.

Mr. SPROULE moved the second reading of Bill (No. 59) respecting the Ottawa Valley Railway Company.—Mr. Monk.

Mr. MARCIL (Bonaventure). I ask that this Bill be allowed to stand. It is not printed in French.

Mr. SPEAKER. Stand.

Order allowed to stand.

SUPPLY.

House in Committee of Supply.

Ottawa public buildings, including repairs, $125,000.

Mr. BENNETT. At page 131 V of the Auditor General's report, I find an item, 'Goldie & McCulloch safe with marble top, $185.57.' I have never yet had the pleasure of seeing a safe with a marble top. Will the hon. Minister of Public Works kindly tell us what is the necessity for a marble top on an ordinary safe, and if it added to the cost to any extent.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I have not the figures at hand giving the difference in cost between a safe with a marble top and a safe with an iron top. But the hon. gentleman having brought the item to my attention, I shall make inquiries among the officers of my department and will let the hon. gentleman know.

Mr. BENNETT. It seems that this recklessness of expenditure is to be found in every department of the government. The necessity of having a marble top on a safe, is something that never dawned on my mind until I saw this item. It seems to be about in keeping with the other expensive appointments of the department. This afternoon we had the expenditures on ordinary roller-top desks purchased by the departments. Some ministers, modest in their expenditures, will get a desk at $40 or $50, which, from experience I should think would be a very fine desk. But the Minister of Militia (Hon. Sir Frederick Borden), according to the public accounts, made an investment of $155 for a desk, and, not to be outdone, the Postmaster General (Hon. Sir William Mulock) it would seem, had invested $165 in a desk. I assume that that was one of the roller-top style also. I assume it to be only fair to the House and the country, as hon. gentlemen opposite, when in opposition, preached from the house tops that expenditure should be rational and altogether on the same basis as incurred in one's private business, that the Postmaster General should rise in his place and, at least, give a description of the desk, for many hon. gentlemen, like myself, may not have an opportunity for a few years at least, of gazing on that wonderful piece of furniture.

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. I inquired of my deputy since we adjourned at six o'clock in reference to this article of furniture. He informs me that it is not merely a desk, but that it has certain post office additions to it. It is a structure partly a desk and yet it is not a desk, because in addition to being a desk it is fitted up with drawers, files, and pigeon-holes set apart for the different officers of the department, and also for the work connected with the various countries that Canada is in communication with on post office business. The work is classified in these various departments, the respective officers of the department have keys and access to this structure, each going to the portion of it that contains the work coming under his particular charge. It is rather an elaborate structure, but there is great economy of time on the part of the officers, because, instead of having an officer detailed to distribute the various papers and documents to each of the branches which require attention, the papers are sorted and placed in these various compartments as in a post office and each officer has access to his compartment.

Mr. FOWLER. It is unfortunate that the hon. Minister of Militia and Defence is not here so that we could have a little explanation as to this very expensive desk which was purchased for his department. Perhaps it will be found that it has a whole set of accoutrements attached. The desk of the hon. Postmaster General has a post office attachment, and, therefore, it would only be natural to suppose that the hon. Minister of Militia and Defence, who is a close second in the matter of expenditure with the Postmaster General, have a regimental attachment to his desk. I would like to ask the hon. Postmaster General whether it is necessary to have all these particular accoutrements.

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. The hon. gentleman uses the word 'accoutrements.' I do not know whether he has reference to my colleague, the hon. Minister of Militia and Defence, or not.

Mr. FOWLER. Yes, I thought you might be able to give an explanation of the matter.

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. I know nothing about the organization of the Militia Department. If the hon. gentleman's question has reference to my own department, I think I have given the reason why these divisions are supplied. It is for the same reason that you would have compartments, or boxes, in a post office. Instead of having to have officers in attendance to hand out the documents, the documents are classified in these compartments and the various officers are furnished with keys to them and have access to them. In economy of time and the proper despatch of business this is considered a very ingenious and suitable method.

Mr. BLAIN. Where was this desk made ?

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. I am not able to inform my hon. friend (Mr. Blain) where it was made. We give a requisition to the Public Works Department, and they supply what is asked for.

Mr. FOWLER. I would like to ask the hon. Postmaster General whether, in consequence of this labour-saving machine, he has been able to dispense with any of the clerks in the Post Office Department. He has paid a very extensive price for this desk. Of course, if he has been able to save in the matter of the services of clerks and thereby reduce the amount paid in salaries, he might have some justification for purchasing this expensive piece of furniture.

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. I do not think my hon. friend is serious in presenting a question of that kind.

Mr. BLAIN. I notice that the desk was made by the Harris, Campbell & Boyden Furniture Company. Is that a Canadian company ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. That is the name of an Ottawa firm.

Mr. SPROULE. I was going to suggest that the sums paid for these desks would appear to be a little high, although they may be good value for the money, the hon. Postmaster General knows that he has under his charge postmasters, especially village postmasters, who complain that their salaries are remarkably low. I would also like to remind the hon. Postmaster General, who is something of a farmer himself, that if he goes into the county of Grey, or into the northern portion of York, the farmers will think that what is paid for a desk would make a fair payment on a farm. They would think this a little expensive.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I have made some inquiries in regard to the purchase of this article of furniture. It is only fair to say to the committee that the item as recorded in the Auditor General's report is somewhat misleading. What is described as a desk, is practically an office for the deputy postmaster general. I dare say the other desk in the Militia Department was for the deputy minister and for the better accommodation of the department in doing its business. This is not a desk, as we understand it—one of those roller-top desks. The hon. member for East Grey (Mr. Sproule) has said that we may have got good value. I think if hon. gentlemen saw the desk of the deputy postmaster general, they would say that it was a great convenience and facilitates very much the business of the department. Considering the size of the various compartments, and the convenience provided for the holding of papers and the saving of time, I think it will be found a very valuable improvement in the equipment of the department.

Mr. SPROULE. I was going to say, while this item was under consideration, that I have noticed several rooms around this House for the use of members, which seem to be rather luxuriously furnished. They have fine roll-top desks and everything convenient and comfortable, while in other rooms occupied by other members, there are few, if any, conveniences at all. I happen to occupy a portion of a room in which there are six or seven of us. There are three tables that would cost, perhaps, $2.25 apiece, there is not a place to lock up anything except within the drawers of the tables and the room is even without shelving of any kind. There are only three electric lamps for seven members and two or three chairs. I have applied to Mr. Speaker—I am sorry that he is not here to-night, because I am informed that he is responsible for this condition of affairs—for some additional furniture, and he says that the parsimonious economy insisted on by this government is such that he cannot afford to give me any more furniture.

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. An economical government.

Mr. SPROULE. Noticing the very handsome outfits which ministers have in their departments and in some of the rooms about this House—and I am not saying it by way of grumbling—I think we might fare a little better nevertheless if we do belong to the opposition. I asked Mr. Speaker if he could furnish a little cupboard or anything where we could put papers away.

Mr. COWAN. You want an ice box.

Mr. SPROULE. What is tickling the hon. member for South Essex (Mr. Cowan) now.

Mr. COWAN. You ought to have an ice box.

Mr. SPROULE. I have no doubt whatever that my hon. friend will profit very much by his advice if he will take it to himself, so that he will keep himself moderately under control. I think this is hardly fair. It does seem to me that when we are here to do the country's business we ought to have some more conveniences for doing it in our rooms than we have.

Mr. COWAN. You will be there for a long time. You ought to have more accommodation.

Mr. SPROULE. That is an argument in my favour. I am drawing the attention of the hon. Minister of Public Works to this matter because his predecessor was always very good to us. I know that when we applied to him for anything he always tried to meet our views, and I know his liberal and generous successor is quite equal to the late minister. I hope he will take note of this and that he will profit by this discussion.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I really think the accommodation provided for hon. members of this House is small enough. The members ought to be entitled to such furniture and lamps as the hon. member (Mr. Sproule) has referred to so that they can do their work with some comfort. I know it is a great advantage for a gentleman having to attend to correspondence and other business to have a desk which he can lock up and find his papers in order when he returns. If an application were made for furniture, such as the hon. member referred to, I feel satisfied that the House would be very willing that it should be granted by the department. I quite agree with what the hon. member says as to the desirability of having these conveniences for hon. members. Only one or two hon. members have come to me and I have only been too glad to supply their wants in that direction. There is, of course, a limit. The amount of the vote is based upon a fixed expenditure, but there is always a margin for the purpose of supplying these conveniences each year. I shall be glad to give every application I receive the consideration it deserves, and so far as I can, help to increase the comfort and convenience of the members.

Mr. BELL. What is done with this furniture which must be accumulating in large quantities in the different buildings ? Every year there seems to be extensive purchases, and still the members of the opposition find it impossible to get anything more than a plain table, in fact they cannot get a cabinet or a desk. I suppose there must be occasionally a cleaning out of these departments; what is done with this old furniture after the purchase of new furniture ? Is it sold at auction ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. The great bulk of this new furniture has been bought for the new buildings, new rooms that have been made during the last two or three sessions. There was no old furniture to store away. The business in the different departments has increased so much that we have to rent buildings outside, and some of the furniture has been used in them. As I stated before six o'clock, in case of a room that was refurnished, if there was an old table, or desk, or anything of that kind past usage, it was sold by auction. Latterly, as I explained, the man in charge of the carpenters has been taking some of the old furinture to the workshop and having it made over by the workmen under his charge. Any that is of no use is sold by auction. But these new purchases that are made, most of them, are to furnish some half a dozen new rooms that were opened during the last recess.

Mr. BENNETT. On referring to the Auditor General's Report of last year I find a startling state of affairs revealed. If the general public of this country were aware of it they would be filled with amazement when they are told that it costs every day of the year, on the average $300 for looking after these buildings. Referring to page V—120 I find that there was spent last year for labourers and carpenters about these buildings, $60,536. Turning to the next page I find that there was paid out for a staff to oversee these men, no less a sum than $8,220. Further down there is a so-called mechanical staff costing $20,410. It is a startling fact that it costs $100,000 a year for the maintenance of these buildings. I have not the figures of a few years ago, but I cannot believe they ever ran up to such immense amounts as this. It is about time that the pruning knife should be applied. As to furniture it must be plain to any man who knows anything about it that it must be a most extravagant desk that costs $165. You go on through this expenditure and what is revealed ? Chairs costing $12 or $13 a piece. I suppose it is the old story of having a good time for the first time in your life. That seems to be the rule followed throughout these departments. Every page of this Auditor General's Report shows that there is a most reckless and extravagant expenditure in every department of the government. This expenditure ill becomes gentlemen who for years made the burden of their song some little trumpery, trivial, petty expenditure that a decent man would have been ashamed to mention.

Mr. SPROULE. Is there any portion of this money being spent to fit up offices outside of the main building ? I understand there are several buildings in Ottawa rented for the use of the government; is this money being used to fit up those buildings as well ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. When a building is rented and furniture has to be procured for the staff, the Public Works Department is called on to furnish the necessary furniture for these rooms out of this vote.

Mr. SPROULE. What proportion of this was used for that purpose ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. About $35,000.

Mr. SPROULE. Was any portion of it used for the census staff ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. It would include repairs done by our own staff ?

Mr. FOWLER. On page V—131 I see an entry : 'W. C. Edwards Company, Limited, black walnut back for book case, $50.' Would the minister tell us what the front of that book case cost ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. The deputy minister informs me that he thinks that must be a misprint. It probably means a black walnut book case.

Mr. BELL. How are these supplies procured ? Are they bought from time to time on an order from the department, or is there an effort made to procure them all at once by asking for tenders for the articles required ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. In some cases when there are a number of articles to be bought, tenders are asked for them, but as a rule they are bought by the architect's branch from the different manufacturers and dealers as the case may be.

Mr. BELL. Are prices asked for ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Yes.

Mr. FOWLER. There seems to be a great number of desks and office chairs bought for the different departments. There is an account here for decanters and tumblers, and absorbent cotton even, which some years ago would have been made a text for a sermon by our friends opposite.

Mr. SPROULE. Since they have opened up the bar in the restaurant, and now that the temperance question has died out, and the referendum has been defeated, we must expect them to furnish the bar. We were exempt from those items for some years, but I suppose we must look for them in future.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. That must have been a mistake ; it must have been for a water bottle.

Mr. BENNETT. At page B—135, of the Auditor General's Report, there is an item for a 'pair of crutches with iron tips.' What member of the cabinet got the crutches ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. One of the carpenters was seriously injured, and the department thought it only fair to do something for him, and among other things he was supplied with crutches.

Mr. BENNETT. The minister promised us before dinner that he would explain that item for '$19.50 worth of gray hair.' Has the minister had any light upon it since the dinner hour?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. My hon. friend will have to take my word that the gray hair was not for the Minister of Public Works, but for some of the other members of the cabinet.

Mr. BENNETT. I will accept the explanation that it was for some of the bald-headed members.

Mr. CLARE. From year to year we have very extensive expenditure noted here for desks and office furniture, and stationery, and so on. I do not wish to say that there are any of these desks missing, but there should be some system of keeping track of all the materials which the departments buy. Is stock taken annually of the furniture and such matters in possession of the government ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. The system is to keep a regular list of everything that is purchased from time to time, and if anything is disposed of, which is not very often, that is entered.

Mr. CLARE. Is there any system by which the government take stock annually of the goods which they have on hand ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I do not think it has been the custom to take stock annually, but the books would show for a number of years, when an article was purchased, from whom it was purchased, and so on.

Mr. CLARE. An enormous quantity of these things has been purchased for the last five years, and there should be some system of tracing these articles and knowing whether they are on hand or not.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. We are constantly furnishing new buildings on account of the increasing business of the country. There may occasionally be an item for replacing furniture which has worn out, but the great majority of these articles were purchased to supply new offices to accommodate the increasing staff which is necessary to carry on the increasing business of the country.

Mr. BROCK. The business of the country is certainly growing at an enormous rate, and naturally you have to extend your buildings and you have to furnish them. Instead of having a few thousand dollars for this expenditure, as we had some years ago, we have now a few hundred thousand of expenditure. In view of this, it is not out of place to say that you should have some way of taking stock of the quantity of furniture and the enormous amount of stationery that you must have on hand. Thousands and thousands of dollars worth of stationery are used every year. An ordinary merchant would keep an account, not only of his stock in trade, but of his furniture and other assets as well, and why should not the government conduct its business in the same way ? It might give some trouble, but it would be a safeguard for the public, and it would be consoling for honest employees to know that they had the same furniture in their offices at the end of the year that they had at the beginning. The minister would do well to start a set of books which would show what furniture and what stationery is on hand. I do not know where all those beautiful fancy goods come from that are distributed among the members every year. I think perhaps that is an item that might be very well dispensed with. I do not like to find fault with it, because having taken them and kept them, I am possibly not in a position to do so, but there must be a great many thousand dollars expended in that way every year, and I think we might dispense with that. Under these circumstances, I think it would be well to keep stock of the quantity bought, the quantity disposed of, and the quantity on hand at the end of the year.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. My hon. friend's suggestion is quite proper, but I believe that each department has an officer for the special purpose of keeping track of the stationery. I know that in my department I could not get a lead pencil myself without applying to the officer in charge of the stationery. Honourable members will admit that one could not make an estimate of what it might cost to maintain and equip and keep in proper order the buildings which we have in Ottawa. I think it is a fair criticism, however, to say that we should see that we get value for what is expended; and if any purchases are not proper or the prices paid are not fair, I would be only too pleased to have them brought to my attention at any time. I have not had sufficient experience to say whether the system is as perfect as it might be; but I may say that there is nothing particularly extraordinary in this vote, because I find, on looking over the totals for many years back, particularly to 1879, that a great deal more had been voted in previous years than we have at the present time. But I will look into the matter and endeavour to see that proper books are kept, so that we may keep track of the purchases and avoid waste—so that we may see that only purchases are made of such articles as are required, and that we get value for the money expended. The cheapest article, as my hon. friend knows, is not always the most economical for a permanent institution, and due regard should be had for the service got out of it.

Mr. BROCK. Does the government insure all the furniture it has, or take the risk itself ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. None of the departments carry any insurance at all. The government carries its own insurance in all the departments, except in case of some special contract; but after the contract is delivered, we carry our own insurance.

Mr. BROCK. If you carry insurance, you would have to keep stock, otherwise in the event of fire you would have no way of establishing your claim.

Mr. FOWLER. As the Minister of Militia and Defence is now here, perhaps he will give us an explanation of this very expensive desk which he has purchased.

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE. I have not had an opportunity of looking up the matter, and was not aware of having purchased a desk of this kind. I have no doubt a requisition was made to my hon. friend the Minister of Public Works for a desk, and he probably thought that the importance of the Militia department and the excellent work that has been done there justified the purchase of a desk in accordance with the importance of the department. This is the first intimation I have had of what that desk really cost. I am not able to give a very full description of it. It is a desk and table combined, a very handsome piece of furniture, and I shall be very glad to have any of my friends on the opposite side of the House, or any others, call and see me there, and I will show them the desk. That is the only explanation I can give at the present moment.

Mr. FOWLER. It seems that we are to judge of the importance of a department by the gorgeousness of its furniture. According to that standard the department of Agriculture is a very mean department, because the desk of the chief officer there only cost $35 or $40. If the Minister of Agriculture were back from the east, it seems to me he would not be pleased with the explanation the Minister of Militia and Defence has given as to why his desk is so much more expensive and gorgeous than that of the Minister of Agriculture. I suppose it was not on account of the honours which have been showered on the Postmaster General and the Minister of Militia and Defence lately that they had to tone up their departments.

An hon. MEMBER. They had to oil up.

Mr. FOWLER. I am glad, however, that we have had some sort of explanation from the Minister of Militia and Defence.

Mr. BENNETT. I notice that the Secretary of State also seems to be indulging in luxurious appointments, because when he dangles his feet on the floor, they rest on a rug that cost $45. May I ask if the Secretary of State has shown a disposition lately to indulge in other extravagances, by making further requisitions ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I have not had any requisitions lately from the Secretary of State. I think he must be supplied now.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). What is the real necessity for spending such an enormous amount on labourers ? $90,000 seems to me a great deal of money to spend on labour in connection with repairs and maintenance.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Of course, the number of buildings that have to be taken care of is pretty large. They are the Senate, the House of Commons, the Governor General's Secretary's office, the Privy Council, the Department of Justice, the Auditor General's office, the Department of Finance, the Secretary of State's Department, the Department of the Interior, the Department of Indian Affairs, the Department of Militia and Defence, the Department of Customs, the Department of Trade and Commerce, the Department of Inland Revenue, the Department of Public Works, the Department of Railways and Canals, the Department of Agriculture, the Department of the Postmaster General, the Library of Parliament, the Supreme and Exchequer Courts. It is a pretty extensive institution to look after. I am not prepared to say that there are not more men employed than are really necessary. We keep a certain number employed from year to year, and at certain times we engage temporary help. The officers in charge of these men are all under the jurisdiction of the chief architect, in whom we all have a great deal of confidence, and I am sure that if he were aware that more men were employed than were necessary to attend to the work, he would report the fact to the department.

Mr. SPROULE. How many men are employed ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. There is in the neighbourhood of one hundred all the time in the employ of the department at Ottawa.

Mr. SPROULE. What is being done about lighting ? I have noticed that occasionally this session the lighting is very bad.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. As I explained before recess, the electric company asked for the privilege of making a trial of the arc light instead of the incandescent, and we have allowed it to do so. It is not going to cost the country anything. We have drawn the attention of the company to the fact that the lighting is not regular, but it has been very good the last few days. It is merely an experiment, and the great majority of the members think it an improvement.

Mr. SPROULE. What do the electric lights in the buildings cost ? Some years ago we went into that question at considerable length, but the plant then had not been installed, and we could not get definite information.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Two dollars per light of sixteen-candle power per annum.

Mr. SPROULE. That is a very high price for a number of lights. In many of our country villages, we pay very little more, and of course, use fewer lights.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I will have an inquiry made into the matter and see if we cannot make some reduction. The average price I find is about $4, but we have a contract for a number of lights at $2.

Mr. SPROULE. You can get lights at $3. In our village we only pay $2.25.

Mr. FRASER. In the town I come from it is not that cheap. It costs about $50 a year for eight lights.

Mr. BUREAU. It costs $3.75 per light per year at Three Rivers, where there is abundant water power.

Mr. SPROULE. They are sold right in our place at $25 per year for eleven lights of sixteen-candle power each. In some places the charge is even lower, and a portion of the time the electricity is supplied by steam. Throughout our part of the country, I could count up many towns where the charge is below $3.

Mr. PARMELEE. For a continuous light?

Mr. SPROULE. Not all night. Only until 12 o'clock, and then on again at 5.30 a.m., but we are offered an all night service for the same price by another company.

Mr. FRASER. Usually in small towns they pay by measure.

Mr. SPROULE. We pay a flat rate per light, and there is no meter at all. Will the hon. minister be good enough to tell us what he is doing about improving the ventillation ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. The ventilation will cost something like $1,500. There is no change in the system, but we have added some apparatus for pumping in fresh air, which I think is an improvement.

Mr. SPROULE. In some places about this building, you occasionally use gas as well as electricity. Is it the same company that supplies both ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. No, separate companies.

Rents—Dominion public buildings, $33,500.

Mr. SPROULE. Does this cover all the outside rents ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. $44,500 is the total amount for leased buildings. I think that out of that item the city of Ottawa is paying something over $30,000. Glancing the items over, I am pretty well satisfied that it runs over $30,000 in Ottawa. I shall have to ask a sum in the supplementary estimates. This is $33,500, but the total in the departments is $44,500.

Mr. CLARKE. Some announcement was made a short time ago of the policy of hon. gentlemen opposite as to the erection of another public building in Ottawa. It would be a good move to procure the necessary land and put up a decent building. The government would save money, instead of paying this enormous sum in rents every year. Has the hon. minister any statement to make as to the erection of a new departmental building ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Not at the present time. But I quite agree with the hon. gentleman (Mr. Clarke). Not only would we save money by putting up a new public building, but we should have far better facilities for conducting the public business than at present. Of course, I have been in the department only a short time and have had a good deal to do. But before the session is over, I hope that, with the assistance of the officials I may be able to prepare something to propose to the House to remedy the difficulty we are now labouring under.

Mr. CLARE. I hope the Minister of Public Works will carry out this resolution and lay before the House a plan for a new building. Every year for the last three years when this matter has come up we have had the same answer—that the matter would be taken into consideration. I find that, in looking over this list, for instance, that the building used by the census commissioner and his staff was to cost a rental of $3,000, according to the statement of the ex-Minister of Public Works (Hon. Mr. Tarte). A few days later, in bringing down his estimates, by some mysterious process, the rent had doubled, and was $6,000 instead of $3,000. The then Minister of Public Works called down his deputy minister for not having corrected his first statement. In looking over the expenditure, I find that this item has again increased and is $6,500, instead of $6,000. I notice other peculiarities about these rentals. For instance, here is an item for $2,000 paid to the Misses Thistle for two years rental. I cannot understand why rent for two years should appear in this account. In several instances this crops up.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. That was the rental of a building that was rented as a matter of urgency by the Department of the Interior.

Mr. BENNETT. Referring to the building used by the census department, may I ask the Minister of Public Works, in view of the fact that the department are not only paying $6,500 a year, but that last year they spent upwards of $10,000 in improving the building, is that $10,000 to be deducted from the rent or has any agreement been made under which that amount is to be paid back partly or altogether ? It seems almost incredible that the government while paying this enormous rent—for it is an enormous rent, for capitalized it amounts to $130,000—should expend about $10,000 in repairs and improvements.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Under the arrangement that has been made, improvements made by the department are not allowed for.

Mr. BENNETT. Can the hon. minister tell us how much longer they are going to use the building—how many years before the term for the lease will expire ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I am informed that the lease is terminable at the option of the department at the end of any year.

Mr. BENNETT. And, on the other hand at the option of the landlord also ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. The deputy minister informs me that he would have to bring down the lease to be sure of its terms. But it is terminable at the end of the year at the option of the department.

Mr. BENNETT. It seems strange that the department should conduct matters on this basis. In the first place an enormous rent is paid, and then $9,000 or more is spent in repairs. If I understand the items, and I think I do, the department have actually installed a system of hot water or steam heating—which is it ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. A system of hot water heating.

Mr. BENNETT. Can the minister tell us whether it is intended to make any more expenditures on this building ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. There is no intention of making any changes or improvements in this building. If repairs are needed during our occupancy of the building we are liable for them.

Mr. BENNETT. Were any repairs put on the Thistle building ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. No.

Mr. LENNOX. Why was the rent increased from $6,000 to $6,500 ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I may say that $6,500 is the amount of the rental under the lease.

Mr. CLARE. When this hot water system was put into the building, were there any arrangements made that at the end of the government's term of occupancy that system could be taken out again ? Surely it is not intended to present these people with a system of hot water heating in addition to this large amount of rent. I cannot imagine such an arrangement being made in a business matter. Some arrangement should have been made for taking out this hot water system. Second hand radiators are as good as new. If the system was to be put in, arrangements should have been made to allow of its being taken out again.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. There was no arrangement on the subject. The building had been occupied for a good many years and the system of heating, I understand, was suitable for the occupants of that time. The building was rented by the Department of Agriculture and fitted up by the Department of Public Works for the purpose for which it is used. But the heating was not satisfactory. Many of the rooms had not any heat at all. So, the department put in a new system of heating.

Mr. CLARE. I can well understand that, when men were working in these rooms the rooms had to be properly heated. There is no objection to that. But there should have been an arrangement that the government could take out the system when they left.

Mr. BARKER. Was it any part of the terms of the lease that the government should spend $9,000 in improving the property ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I understand that the terms of the lease provided that the government had to make any changes or improvements they required for their own purposes.

Mr. CLARE. And though not obliged under the terms of the lease the government have spent $9,000 in improving the property.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. No, they simply did this because they found it necessary in order to make the place suitable for the staff to work in.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). How long will these buildings be required for the purposes of the census ? Is it expected that the census will be completed before the next one is taken ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. I shall have to get the information from my hon. friend, I could not give it off hand.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). Is this building used exclusively for that purpose ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. So I understand. I have never had the pleasure of being in it.

Mr. FOWLER. I understand it is not the intention of the minister to renew the heating apparatus for this building. How about the furniture ? Will they leave the furniture in ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. The furniture comes under a different head. We will move that out, of course.

Mr. LENNOX. It would be interesting to know if the interest of the country has been preserved in another way. In the new Ontario Act there is a provision concerning landlords and tenants that if the lease is drawn in a certain way the tenant can, at the end of the term, remove all the fixtures. Perhaps the minister could inform us if there is a clause in the lease which will enable them to remove those fixtures at the end of the term ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I have not got the lease here, but I have not the slightest doubt that the interest of the public has been safeguarded in that direction.

Mr. LENNOX. Will the minister have the lease brought down ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I will have a copy brought down.

Mr. FOWLER. The other day we had a statement of the cost of the census up to date. Would the minister tell us if, in that statement, are included the rents that are paid for these outside buildings that are used exclusively for census purposes ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. They are not included in the cost. The rents are paid by the Public Works Department out of this appropriation, and would not be included in the expenditure of the other department of the census.

Mr. FOWLER. How much rent has been paid up to date for the use of these buildings for census purposes exclusively ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. During the three years that this building has been used for census purposes, the rent would now be about $19,500. That is the one building that we pay rent for which is used for the census.

Mr. BLAIN. Is that charged up to the item for taking the census ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. No, it would not be included in that.

Rideau Hall, including grounds, renewals, improvements, furniture and maintenance, $17,000.

Mr. WILSON. I am glad to see the Postmaster General in his place, because in 1895 or 1896, I think, he made a very strong speech about the extravagance of the government at Rideau Hall.

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. Get the speech and read it.

Mr. WILSON. I have read it, it is a very good speech, and it would have been very much in the interest of the country if this government had lived up to the sentiments of that speech. If they had torn down the old building and built a new one, it would have been in the interest of the country, because the buildings are not very ornamental, and I should judge are not nearly as comfortable as they ought to be for the money expended on them. I have been looking over the expenditure under this head for the last three or four years, and it has been almost enough every year to build a decent building. In 1899 we spent on that building in the way of furniture, additions, repairs, &c., $29,736 ; in 1900, $24,991 ; in 1901, $31,249.11 ; in 1902, $14,012. I see in the estimates for the coming year, $28,000. Now I think in one of these years they built a new addition to the hall at an expenditure of about $40,000. I think this is a very lavish expenditure, and something ought to be done to stop it. My hon. friend when in opposition took very strong ground against this expenditure. I believe he was acting Minister of Public Works during the absence of the late minister in the old country, and he was in charge when there was a very large expenditure. Had the hon. gentleman began when in office to carry out the principles he laid down when in opposition it would have been better for the country.

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. My hon. friend is confounding my views with his own. I do not think he will find that I ever discussed the expenditures at Rideau Hall. I did discuss a feature connected with the Governor General, but I did not, so far as my recollection goes, discuss the internal economy of that house. He suggests that the expenditure on Rideau Hall was especially high during the time I was acting minister. I was acting minister for a few months in 1900, and during that time it was my duty to carry out certain works, not originating during my temporary occupancy of the office, although I share the full responsibility for them. Those works consisted, among other things, of the thorough underdraining of the building. The hon. gentleman will be surprised to know that the drainage of Rideau Hall was so defective that the water lodged to the extent of several inches, and sometimes a foot, in the cellar, and it is a wonder that many lives were not lost. It became necessary to construct drains, much of them through rock, which made the cost very high. I saw myself the condition of affairs in the basement at Rideau Hall, and I am sure my hon. friend would have been one of the first to say that such a condition should not be allowed to continue. I presume, like others, he occasionally shares in the advantages that that institution affords. But when he presses us to be economical, I would refer him to his colleague the hon. member for East Grey (Mr. Sproule)—I was going to say the minister ; I hope some day he will be minister. It is only a few moments ago that that gentleman was complaining of our economy. He wanted us to spend more money.

Mr. WILSON. I was surprised at that.

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. I was surprised too ; nevertheless he shows that he is becoming more enlarged in his views, and I would commend his example to my hon. friend.

Mr. WILSON. I will undertake to furnish the speech made by the Postmaster General if this item is allowed to stand. I had occasion at one time in this House to quote extensively from it. I have a vivid recollection of the criticisms that he offered on that occasion.

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. I do not think I discussed Rideau Hall, but I have discussed the classes of expenditure the hon. gentleman is now discussing. I have explained that during my temporary occupancy of the department there was a large expenditure for drainage, and an additional building, which became necessary. If the hon. gentleman were to visit it, he would see the need of it, and the need of furnishing it. The late ex-Minister of Finance was familiar with all the circumstances connected with the furnishing and the expenditure, and he did not see anything in it to take exception to. He asked a question or two across the floor of the House, and when he learned how the expenditure was carried out, without so expressing himself, by his dropping the subject, he satisfied me that he was perfectly content with the expenditure.

Mr. WILSON. How does the hon. gentleman explain the next year? If they left Rideau Hall in such a good condition for $24,000 or $25,000 a year, why was it that the very next year there was over $31,000 spent on it?

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. I was not there then.

Mr. WILSON. No man can evade the responsibility of the government if he is a member of it. The expenditure was cut down next year to $14,000, but this year it has gone up to $28,000. My recollection is that the hon. Postmaster General did not only criticise the expenditure of Rideau Hall, but he also criticised the number of cabinet ministers and he also objected to the Governor General's salary. He made a comparison between the cost of the government in the United States and of our government in Canada showing that they had only eight ministers while we had fourteen. We have not heard him saying anything in that direction since he and his party took office.

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. It is a growing time.

Mr. WILSON. Yes, it is a growing time and I say that these hon. gentlemen are benefiting by the growing time, but that does not excuse them for having failed to carry out what they advocated while in opposition.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I do not know whether I have any sins to answer for, that were committed while I was in opposition. I had the same views then that I have now. There is a certain class of criticism that is legitimate, and it perhaps matters very little to the public who have to pay the bills what any hon. member has said either on the opposition or on the government side as to the actual facts of the money expended. What I want to draw the attention of the Committee to is that I have been looking into this matter a great deal and have gone back fifteen or twenty years. I find that for some reason the department has not been quite frank in regard to the expenditure on Rideau Hall. So far as I can find out it costs the country about $25,000 a year to maintain Rideau Hall and that from time to to time smaller estimates have been brought in than were required with the result that accounts have been running over and debts have been accumulated. I think that parliament and the people are entitled to know what the actual cost of maintaining and furnishing this place is. I do not, as a minister, wish to come here and submit an estimate pretending to maintain Rideau Hall for less than it is possible to do it. If, on carefully looking into the matter with the officials of the department, I think any saving can be made I am quite willing to try and make it. I am quite willing that any hon. member on either side of the House should point out the fact if he thinks that any undue or unnecesary expenditure has been made in this connection. As I have just taken charge of the department, I thought that I should come frankly to the Committee and tell them what it has cost the country for a great many years to maintain this place. It is my intention to ask the Committee for an additional expenditure to clean up the back debts that exist and I say it frankly to the Committee that the maintenance of Rideau Hall will cost about $25,000 per annum.

Mr. CLARKE. What has been expended on an average for 20 years on this ramshackle place?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. $25,000.

Mr. CLARKE. $25,000 will pay the interest on three-quarters of a milion dollars at 3 per cent. Surely it would be better to put up a building for $250,000 and stop this leak.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. You would have to maintain a larger building at greater expense.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This of course includes the cost of the maintenance of the grounds. It is not all for additions or improvements.

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. There is $8,000 for heating.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. No, not for heating.

Mr. CLARKE. A modern building would save half of that on the heating alone.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. There would be $3,000 for the maintenance of the grounds. I do not think they are kept up extravagantly in comparison with private grounds even in Canada and certainly not in comparison with public grounds in other countries. The grounds could not be kept in the state in which they are for much less than $3,000 a year. Hon. gentlemen in this House know from their own experience that much smaller grounds cost a great deal of money to maintain them properly. Unless there are other items in which some saving can be made I want the Committee and the country to know that it takes the sum I have mentioned to maintain Rideau Hall and it has taken that for a great many years.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). I think we are all agreed that Rideau Hall should be kept up in an efficient state or rather in such a state as will be creditable to the country as a whole. What my hon. friend from West Toronto (Mr. Clarke) has suggested is a subject that was passing through my own mind. The expenditures on additions and improvements and repairs to this building during the past twenty years must have aggregated an enormous amount. Is it not a fair question for the hon. Minister of Public Works to ask himself whether it would not be in the interest of the country to tear that building down and erect another that would not require so much money to maintain. It seems that $8,000 a year for lighting and heating a building of that kind is absolutely absurd. In my limited experience of such things I should consider it altogether out of the question, although I do not doubt it has been expended, and is necessary to be expended in the present condition of the building. If you have spent $100,000 in additions and improvements in the last ten or fifteen years, and I dare say you have expended that sum, that sum itself would put a good modern building which would not be so expensive to maintain as this one. I do not believe very much in this policy of patching up an old building and adding to it from time to time, and in the end having still an old building difficult and expensive to maintain.

Mr. BLAIN. I want to refresh the hon. Postmaster General's memory as to the statements he made in 1895—

> These sums are quite beyond the resources of the people of Canada. We have disbursed annually during 25 years an average of $21,785. and in addition $4,754 for furniture for Rideau Hall.

Perhaps the hon. gentleman would tell us how the resources of the people of Canada will stand an annual expenditure of over $30,000 which he will stand up and defend to-night while condemning a smaller expenditure under the administration of the Liberal-Conservative party in 1895.

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. My hon. friend (Mr. Blain) has read the answer in the light of the circumstances under which I made the observation. He says that in 1895 I expressed the opinion that $21,785 and $4,754 was too much for the then resources of Canada. I was speaking in 1895. We are now in the year 1903. Canada is a different country under a Liberal government from what it was in 1895.

Some hon. MEMBERS. Hear, hear.

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. I am glad that my views are concurred in by the hon. gentlemen opposite.

Mr. CLARKE. The patches on the farmer's trousers are as bright to-day as they were then.

Mr. BLAIN. Is this the policy that the hon. gentleman advocates that when the revenue of the country is larger the government propose expending more on furniture and other things at Rideau Hall ?

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. The hon. gentleman had better make his own speech.

Mr. BLAIN. I would like the hon. gentleman to give us an explanation how it was that he condemned in this House an annual expenditure of $25,000 when the Liberal-Conservative party was in office while now he stands up and defends an expenditure of more than $30,000 per annum for the same purpose.

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. I should think that the hon. gentleman (Mr. Blain) is an observer of the times and if he is he can supply the answer to himself. The condition of the country in these days was very different from what it is now. We then had an unprogressive party in power; they paralyzed the trade of the country and it was necessary to be economic at every point, even to the extent of hampering the public service. With the limited revenue of the country at that time you were plunging into debt—do you want me to make a campaign speech and explain it all to you. You know the state of the country and of its finances in those days and you know the state of the country and of its finances to-day. We can now afford to manage our affairs more in harmony with the requirements than we could then, and as long as the present administration is in office and its policy produces such happy results the country will be in a position to deal in a more progressive spirit all along the line.

Mr. CLARKE. The letter carriers will come in then.

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. The letter carriers and all classes will benefit. During my regime it has been a great pleasure to me to improve the status of the letter carriers over what it was when my friends opposite were in power.

Mr. BENNETT. It is refreshing to hear the Postmaster General talk about the condition of the country in view of the fact that in his own department they will sell you a postage stamp that you cannot use in the ordinary postage business. What did his department do to inflate his revenue. Some time ago they sold the jubilee stamps to a denomination as high as $10, and if to-day you take one of these $10 stamps to any post office in the country they would not even exchange it for two cent stamps. That is done to inflate the revenues of the Post Office Department.

Mr. CLARKE. It makes the country look like two cents.

Mr. BARKER. The Postmaster General has made a comparison between 1895 and the present day justifying large expenditure now because of the growing time. I take it that in 1895 this country was willing to pay whatever was necessary for the keeping up of Rideau Hall. The prosperity of the country or anything like that has nothing to do with it ; it was and is simply a question of keeping up that property in a fitting manner for the Governor General of Canada. The Postmaster General when he was in opposition complained that it took $21,000 a year to maintain the property in a fitting manner for the representative of our Sovereign, but he now spends $30,000 a year in doing that identical work.

Mr. CLARKE. And not doing it as well.

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. The hon. gentleman (Mr. Barker) has misapprehended my speech. If he will read the speech he will find that I spoke of nothing else except as to what the country could afford. Looking at a comparison of our revenues, the country could not afford to do then what perhaps it ought to have done in this matter. It can afford now.

Mr. CLARKE. The Postmaster General seems to misapprehend the situation entirely. The hon. gentleman from Peel (Mr. Blain) quoted from a speech of the Postmaster General a strong denunciation against his predecessors in office because of the expenditures in connection with Rideau Hall. When the Postmaster General came into office he found that the expenditure for a quarter of a century averaged $20,000 or $50,000 a year, but the Postmaster General and his colleagues who have been presented to us as a good business administration are spending $30,000 a year. If there was any business about them they would erect a modern building that would be much more economically maintained.

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. What price.

Mr. CLARKE. Say $500,000 if necessary, and at three per cent it would cost you $15,000 per annum. The Postmaster General now justifies an annual expenditure largely in excess of the expenditure made by his predecessors which he denounced at the time. I venture to say that if an examination of Rideau Hall were made to-day, it is in no better condition than when he came into office when it was maintained at a much less expenditure.

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. Oh, yes, it is. It is a different building altogether. It is the difference between white and black.

Mr. CLARKE. That old building ought be pulled down and a new building put up and if the hon. gentleman would advise the doing of that he would be saving money to the country.

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. Perhaps so.

Mr. CLARKE. It must be apparent to every one who has visited Rideau Hall that it is a waste of money to spend $30,000 annually in trying to keep up that aggregation of old apartments. It is my opinion that it is the duty of the government to make the necessary provision to put up a decent modern building.

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. Would we not be at the expense of maintaining that too ?

Mr. CLARKE. It certainly would not cost so much for maintenance as the old building does.

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. What is the cost of maintaining the city hall in Toronto ?

Mr. CLARKE. That is a different matter altogether.

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. It is expensive enough.

Mr. CLARKE. The city was obliged by the grand jury and by legal process to put up a court house and it was thought that a saving would be effected if both the court house and the city hall were under the same roof. That is an extravagant building but the city was forced to make the change because of the action of the grand jury and of the judiciary.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. There is not the slightest doubt but that if we had a new modern building a considerable saving would be made in the annual maintenance especially with regard to heating and lighting. I do not think there would be a very great deal of saving in other directions. It would be much more satisfactory as my hon. friend (Mr. Clarke) says if we had a building more creditable to the country. However, we are dealing with the item as it is before us and I felt it my duty, after an examination of the expenditures for some fifteen or twenty years to ask for a vote according to the expenditure in the past. These estimates were prepared two or three weeks after I came into office and I have since found that it will be necessary to bring a supplementary estimate equal to the average cost for the past few years. It is only fair to say that out of this amount some $3,000 was spent for maintenance of the grounds. I do not think that is extravagant ; I think that must be fairly well managed. The question of putting up a new building is one well worthy of consideration. It would give greater satisfaction no doubt to the occupants and to the people of the country. The maintenance could be reduced somewhat, not very materially, but perhaps about twenty-five per cent, unless that new building would bring around some new expenditures that we do not think at the present time. The aggregation of old and patched up buildings that are there now certainly cost more for maintenance than would a modern building. I wished the House to know what the actual facts have been and there is no use deceiving ourselves with regard to the maintenance of these buildings. As long as I occupy the office I shall invite criticism as to whether or not that money was properly expended. If I find that any reduction can be made I shall endeavour to make it, but the experience has been that for fifteen years it has cost about this amount to maintain the property.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). The sum of $33,500 is paid by the government every year for rents. I suppose some of that will be dispensed with when the census is completed, if it is ever completed.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. My hon. friend was not in when I gave the explanation of that. The total amount we pay in rents throughout the Dominion is $44,500. In the city of Ottawa we pay in round figures about $30,000.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). That represents, at the rate of interest which the government is obliged to pay, about $1,000,000. There were discussions during the past session as to the erection of another building; and it seems to me, if that were done, some economy might be effected. It has been suggested that there is some difficulty in regard to a site. I think the government has plenty of land for the purpose of another building without buying any more land. There is a site where the Supreme Court building is now, affording plenty of room between Bank street and the location of the conservatory for a very large and suitable building—a building that would be an ornament to the grounds, and would afford accommodation for many offices, besides having the additional merit of providing a suitable room for the Supreme Court, which is very badly housed at present, and suitable accommodation for the library of the Supreme Court, which is now in a disgraceful condition for lack of room. I would like the minister to take this into consideration. I know that a great deal of dissatisfaction exists on the part of members of the bar who come to Ottawa with the accommodation provided for the Supreme Court. In addition to that, I may suggest to the Minister of Public Works that we have really enough space in the buildings now at the command of the government to carry on the business of the country if that space were properly economized. I do not suppose it could be, because the buildings have been constructed in a different way. But my hon. friend has, no doubt, been in some of the great buildings in New York, such as the Produce Exchange, in the basement of which many clerks are provided with all the accommodation they require in a comparatively small space. If a building were constructed where I suggest, I believe the annual expenditure of the country could be reduced, and the Supreme Court could be housed and many offices provided, in such a way as would do credit to the country.

Mr. COCHRANE. When looking at the estimates this afternoon, I must confess that I was very much surprised at this vote of $30,000 for rent of extra offices. I do not require to go back a long way in my memory to recall the time when the members of the present government were sitting on this side of the House, and when they made the corridors ring with their shouts about the extravagance of the Tory party in filling all the public buildings in Ottawa from cellar to garret with civil servants, and when they used to picture to the farmers of the country how they were robbed to support such an extravagant lot of civil servants. They made them believe that the buildings here were so full of civil servants that they were almost forcing the roofs off. Are the buildings too full now? Yes; the census staff used to be in the Langevin block, but now it is in a large building by itself; then the models were moved out; and now the building is filled with officials from cellar to garret, and the government are paying $30,000 a year to rent other buildings. Can you say, you are another, you did it too? I recollect very well that a gentleman who is now relegated to a sublimer sphere—and we know what contempt the hon. Postmaster General used to have for members of parliament who accepted offices of emolument—used to visit my constituency and find fault with the extravagance of the Tory party for expending more money on Rideau Hall; he even complained of the cost of washing the napkins. Now the Postmaster General tells us the country can afford it. Is that the way a prudent farmer manages his business? When his finances are buoyant, does he not first take the mortgage off his farm instead of indulging in greater extravagances?

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. We can never afford extravagances.

Mr. COCHRANE. You just keep still. You told an hon. member to make his speech. I am making mine. I want to tell the hon. Postmaster General that he is there to answer questions that we ask, and not to put questions in my mouth. The hon. gentleman thinks he is the monarch of all he surveys, his right there is none to dispute; but I look on the hon. gentleman as the people's servant, and he should recognize that fact, and not attempt to dictate to me what I shall say. I am here to answer the very bold and extravagant charges which the Postmaster General used to make. What is his policy? The policy of the Conservative party, which he used to say was bleeding the people white. Now it is a buoyant revenue, and the extravagant expenditure is only a liberal one. How things have changed. I wonder that the hon. gentleman does not have remorse in his sleep, and wake up crying, 'The Lord have mercy on me for my hyprocrisy.'

Mr. LENNOX. In the expenditure for Rideau Hall, at page V—144 of the Auditor General's Report, I see this item: J. A. Teasdale, 12 pillows, at $3, paid twice, $72. This is an item that ought to be explained. I may say, with regard to the question of a new building, that if this matter had been looked at in a judicious way some years ago, before the expenditure referred to by the hon. Postmaster General had been made, it might have been wise to consider the question of pulling down the present buildings, and erecting more suitable ones. But in view of the fact that within very recent years, large additions have been made to these buildings, I do not think this is the time for us to consider the question of going into increased expenditures. I submit whether the reduction in the annual charges would be such as to justify our incurring an expenditure of a very large amount. In this account are a great number of items that would not be lessened by the putting up of new buildings. In fact I am inclined to think that if we went to the expense of erecting new buildings, that would involve the expense of new furnishings and fittings and a variety of expenses which we are not able to anticipate at present, and there would still be the ordinary annual charges as great, or perhaps greater, than they are to-day. It is to be regretted, whether we attribute it to the present government or preceding governments, that the advisability of putting up more modern and compact buildings was not considered years ago. But having regard to the large expenditures made in extensions within a few years. I do not think it is well to have the idea go forth that we are contemplating the expenditure of a very large sum to put up entirely new buildings.

Mr. INGRAM. The hon. minister has said that $44,500 is what is paid in rents, out of which $30,000 is paid in Ottawa. Will that $14,500 cover all the rents paid throughout the country? Does it include the various post offices for which the government pay rent?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. It includes all the department pays.

Mr. INGRAM. Does that mean post offices?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. If we rent any post offices it does, but I do not think we do.

Mr. INGRAM. There are several small towns where there are no government buildings and in which the department gives an allowance to the postmasters for rent. Is that included in the $14,500?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. The Public Works department have nothing to do with these post offices. This is for rent paid directly for public buildings throughout the Dominion.

Mr. COCHRANE.

Mr. INGRAM. I wanted to distinguish between what the Public Works department pays and what is actually paid by the government of the country.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I am not aware that the government of the country pay any other rent.

Mr. INGRAM. I certainly have not made myself plain. There are several post offices throughout the country, which are not government buildings, and for the use of which the department makes an allowance to the postmasters for rent. That, I presume, is not charged up in this $14,500, but comes out of the Post Office department.

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. We make an allowance to a postmaster for supplying the department with office accommodation. We have nothing to do with keeping it in repair. The postmaster supplies the boxes and collects the rents, and we make a rental allowance to him for supplying us with accommodation.

Mr. INGRAM. That is the point. But I do not want it to go forth that the government are paying only $44,500 for rents. I think it is much larger. Take the city of Ottawa. You have $30,000 charged for rents. Is that a fixed rent liable to last a number of years, or are the leases affecting certain buildings on which the government pay rent liable to cease soon, and thus the rents be decreased?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. It is likely to increase to meet the demands of the various departments for increased accommodation. I have refused in several cases, and tried to get along with the accommodation we have. In connection with the large immigration into Manitoba and the North-west, the business of the Department of the Interior has so increased that more place is urgently demanded to carry it on. I would not like to say that I see any prospect of decreasing the amount of rent unless we put up a building of our own.

Mr. INGRAM. The government should consider the advisability of erecting a building, because it is a well known fact that the high rate of rent paid to parties in Ottawa for the use of their buildings is altogether in excess of what it ought to be. Would it not pay the government much better to buy land and erect a building? Even if that should cost more to begin with, it would be a source of economy in the long run. That item of rent, instead of decreasing, is liable to increase, and I think it would be a proper policy for the government to erect public buildings of its own. I judge from the remarks made before recess that the government are considering the advisability of erecting some building.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. While I did not make any definite promise before six o'clock, I promised to bring in a report before the close of the session as to what I thought should be done in this direction. It will cost a considerable sum of money, and it is wise that we should have an opportunity of carefully considering the plans, &c., before making any recommendation. I think it is a matter we must deal with as quickly as possible.

Mr. COCHRANE. If we are ever going to have the census completed, the building in which that work is being done might well be dispensed with. I have always thought it was a most extravagant rent for the government to pay, namely, $30,000, for some ten years for that plain building, four stories high, on Medcalfe street. I do not think that it is nearly all occupied, and surely, if the census is ever to be completed, we might save that $10,000 or $15,000 rent we have to pay on that building.

Mr. DEPUTY SPEAKER. This item was passed half an hour ago.

Mr. COCHRANE. And I would draw your attention to the fact, Mr. Chairman, that the Minister of Public Works has been answering the questions we have asked on the subject.

Mr. DEPUTY SPEAKER. I know it. But the question under discussion is 'Rideau Hall, $17,000.'

Mr. LENNOX. Is the minister prepared to answer the question I asked with reference to the item paid twice? At the same time, I might call attention to another item of the same class—the eighth item on page V—114, two mats at $3.50 each, paid twice, $7, extended $14. It seems that there is some mismanagement in this affair. Apparently, the accounts have not been looked after carefully, when, on the same page we find in two places items which admittedly have been paid twice.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. A careful audit showed that these amounts were included twice and the amount was refunded. I will have a memorandum from the accountant's branch giving full information of how this occurred.

Rideau Hall—allowance for fuel and light, $8,000.

Mr. CLARKE. Surely the Postmaster General (Hon. Sir Wm. Mulock) will have something to say with regard to this.

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. I have always supported this item. I think my record is all right on this.

Mr. CLARKE. What kind of fuel do they burn there, Mr. Chairman? This is a dreadful expenditure.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. My information is that some years ago—I think during the incumbency of Lord Dufferin—an arrangement was made with the Governor, which has been continued ever since, that, instead of furnishing fuel and light, the government was to make an allowance of $8,000. We pay that over to the Governor.

Mr. CLARKE. I was not aware of that. This is a mere matter of book-keeping, then. As a matter of fact, His Excellency gets $8,000, and the amount is charged to heating and light.

Mr. BENNETT. Was that sum allowed when the Postmaster General moved his memorable resolution to reduce the salary from $50,000 to $35,000? I am not aware whether the Minister of Public Works voted for the resolution or not.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Could the hon. gentleman (Mr. Bennett) give me the date? According to my recollection, and to the information given to me now, this arrangement was made in Lord Dufferin's time.

Mr. BENNETT. I remember the vote. I voted against the Postmaster General's resolution. I think it was in 1892 or 1893.

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. This arrangement was made previous to that.

Mr. BLAIN. When was this agreement entered into to pay this sum of $8,000.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. During Lord Dufferin's time—twenty-five or thirty years ago.

Furniture—Dominion public buildings, $12,000.

Mr. FOWLER. Is this to furnish new buildings the government is erecting outside?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This is for furniture for all the public buildings throughout the Dominion.

Mr. FOWLER. Has it anything to do with the Ottawa public buildings?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. No. If the hon. gentleman cares to know how the amount is expended, I may give the summaries of expenditure for last year: Nova Scotia, $704; Prince Edward Island, $63; New Brunswick, $1,112; Quebec, $1,800; Ontario, $2,500; Manitoba, $847; North-west Territories, $423; British Columbia, $944. These expenditures are up to 1st January last, and make a total of $8,490.

Mr. INGRAM. As there is a small balance on hand, is it the intention to pay some of the accounts that are outstanding?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I should be sorry to know that there are amounts not paid. I am afraid that the departments, including the Department of Public Works are a little careless in paying accounts. This arises from the system of taking too small a vote and not having enough to pay for the services of the year. That I do not approve of—it is bad policy. If there is money to the credit of the account, I will pay outstanding amounts; if not I will ask for a supplementary vote and pay them.

Mr. INGRAM. There is a balance left unexpended?

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. There was on the first of January.

Mr. INGRAM. Is there any since?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. There is probably a small amount.

Mr. INGRAM. I should be glad to call attention to a small item or two that might be paid.

Mr. BENNETT. I should like to know when the salary of Mr. John Frawley, caretaker of the Orillia public building commenced at $300 per annum?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Would the hon. gentleman (Mr. Bennett) put that question when the item is under discussion under which that salary is paid? I will then give the information.

Mr. BENNETT. Very well. The comment I wish to make is this——

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. My hon. friend (Mr. Bennett) will excuse me, but we are soon to reach the appropriation out of which this salary is paid.

Mr. BENNETT. Very well.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). We have reached the foot of the page, and perhaps the hon. minister does not propose to go further.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. We are now at the general item No. 124. I think we had an understanding that so many nights having been passed on these votes, this one should be passed. This applies almost altogether to the Ottawa buildings.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). Of course, many hon. members are absent, this being Friday night.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I would be willing to reserve the right of any hon. gentleman to make any remarks he wishes regarding this, whether it passes or not. But there is no item here, so far as I know, that will not be included in the supplementary estimates for 1902-3. So, there will be the same opportunity for discussion that there is under these items. My hon. friend will notice that these items refer to the Dominion public buildings at Ottawa. But there are two or three items besides, upon which the discussion might be resumed.

Hon. Mr. SUTHERLAND.

Ottawa public buildings—heating, including salaries of engineers, firemen and watchmen, $67,000.

Mr. CLARKE. Does this include fuel purchased by public tender?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Yes, it includes fuel for the buildings at Ottawa alone.

Mr. CLARKE. What was the cost last year?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. The votes for many years past have been taken in a very unsatisfactory manner, one year's expenditure running into another year's expenditure. But so far as I can ascertain from the department, it costs about $85,000.

Mr. CLARKE. This business administration will lose its reputation if it permits this condition of affairs to go on much longer, allowing the cost of one year to dove-tail into others.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This is a somewhat serious matter, and I would appeal to the members of the Committee on both sides to treat it as such. The system has existed for a great many years. This government is perhaps just as responsible for allowing the system to continue, as was the preceding government for initiating it, that is, taking votes too small, and carrying the expenditure over into another year. I would like the assistance of hon. gentlemen on both sides in remedying this unsatisfactory condition of the accounts.

Mr. CLARKE. Under the circumstances, I would suggest that the Committee rise now, and in the meantime the minister can give his attention to this serious matter, as he admits it is. We have made substantial progress to-night.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I appeal to the hon. gentleman to allow me to put this vote through.

Mr. CLARKE. We should have to get all the particulars of the prices paid for this coal, to whom paid, and how much was bought, and how much is owing to each person now.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This item might be allowed to go through, because there woud be abundant opportunity for discussion on other items. I want the fullest investigation made into these accounts by the officials of the department; but they must have time, and hon. gentlemen must remember that the officials are here from three o'clock in the afternoon till all hours of the night. I assure the leader of the opposition that this matter will come up again, and can be discussed, and full explanations will be given. There is nothing to be gained by letting this vote stand.

Mr. CLARKE. I am sure we have no desire to interfere with the operation of the department by keeping the officials here to an unreasonable hour at night. In view of the statement made by the minister that before the final disposition of the estimates he will bring down all this information, personally I have no objection to the item passing.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). I think the minister could give us a good deal of this information now.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I was going to state to the House that I have conducted an investigation for a number of years, and I find that a special vote has not been taken to meet this item.

Mr. CLARKE. A regular slip-shod method.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Somewhat.

Mr. INGRAM. Do we understand the hon. gentleman is going to bring down the amounts paid, and from whom the coal was bought ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I am prepared to give that information now for the present year. I find this system has been going on for a number of years, taking a small vote and every year expending more than we have voted. There are two objections to that system. In the first place, we have not a clear knowledge of what we are expending for this purpose; secondly, we cannot do business in a satisfactory way without getting somewhat near a correct estimate of the vote that is required. The contract for the supply of coal for the present year was let to John Heney & Co. The prices were : Furnace coal, $6.45, egg coal, $6.50, stove coal, $6.50, blacksmith coal, $6.

Mr. INGRAM. In what season of the year were tenders asked for ? Because if you apply early in the year you are in a position to get your coal cheaper ; whereas if you wait till late in the season, it will cost more.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Last year the advertisements for coal were sent out in May ; this year the advertisements are out now. I do not think that it is necessary to make the contract earlier in the season than April or May.

Mr. CLARKE. Is this per ton of 2,000 pounds, or per long ton ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Per ton of 2,000 pounds.

Mr. CLARKE. The price seems to be a pretty long price.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. If my hon. friend had the responsibility of furnishing the coal under the contract he would not think so. I must say that the Ottawa contractor stuck to his contract, unlike dealers in other places in the Dominion and furnished the coal at the price at which he had agreed.

Mr. CLARKE. The coal would be ordered in the summer, I presume.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I do not know when it was ordered, but the contractor here has been delivering right along every week, or month, as it was required and is doing so yet at the price agreed upon.

Mr. BLAIN. What quantity does he supply under the contract with the government ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Six thousand four hundred and twelve tons were called for under the contract.

Mr. BLAIN. What system have you of weighing the coal ? Is it left in the hands of the company that sell it or do the government have an inspector ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. It is weighed on the government scales and checked by our own man.

Mr. CLARKE. There was some wood, was there not ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Yes, 276 cords of mixed hardwood at $4.75 a cord—very cheap.

Mr. CLARKE. Will the hon. minister read the prices of the coal again ? It was all anthracite coal, I understand ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. All anthracite coal.

Mr. CLARKE. Is there no bituminous coal used in the buildings at all ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. My hon. friend refers to the coal that is used in the grates. This grate coal costs $7.70 a ton. There is no bituminous or soft coal burned in the furnaces of this building ; that is all anthracite. We paid for grate or cannel coal $7.70 a ton.

Mr. CLARKE. And for the anthracite coal ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Six dollars and forty-five cents per ton.

Mr. CLARKE. And there was another item of $6.50 a ton.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. That was for 200 tons of egg coal ; soft coal, $6.50 ; blacksmith coal, $6. There were only twelve tons of that.

Mr. FOWLER. Would the hon. gentleman tell us when the contract was made ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. In May last.

Mr. FOWLER. May, 1901, or May, 1902.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. May, 1902.

Mr. INGRAM. This is an outrageous price to pay at that season of the year. I got my own coal for that and I did not put in a thousand tons of coal the same as the government did. Did you call for tenders in Ottawa to supply the departments with coal, and if so, what was the lowest tender ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. We called for tenders.

Mr. CLARKE. How many tenders were received ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I have not the names of the tenderers here, but six tenders were received last year.

Mr. CLARKE. And this was the lowest ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Yes.

Mr. INGRAM. I must say that the government is paying a pretty high price by contract for coal.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. We were fortunate in having a contractor who delivered the coal. I am sorry to say the tenders this year are much higher. We advertised in the public press for tenders. It is a nice large order, and I do not see why coal dealers in any part of the country should not put in tenders. My hon. friend is perhaps comparing the price we paid with the price at the place where there is a very much lower freight rate than there is to Ottawa. There is a very great difference in the freight rates between here and Toronto for instance ; that is from the anthracite field. We take only anthracite coal from Pennsylvania. If the hon. gentleman will compare the price we have paid with the prices of coal in other cities, he will see that it is a reasonable price.

Mr. INGRAM. I am prepared to admit that if you made the contract in May, 1902, and did not have it delivered until December of that year, the prices are all right, if the contractor carried out his agreement. I know that many dealers did not carry out their agreements throughout the country generally. If he carried out his agreement and he was to deliver the coal during the summer months, comparing the price with that in other places, then, the price is high. Of course, I do not know what the freight rates are. I am only judging the price from that prevailing in my own locality.

Mr. CLARKE. It is understood that we are to get all this information.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I will bring down all the information when I ask for the balance of this vote in a very short time.

Ottawa public buildings, elevator attendants, $9,000.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). What does this mean ?

Hon. Mr. SUTHERLAND.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. That is to pay the cost of running the elevators in the public buildings at Ottawa—in this building, the east block, the west block, in the Langevin block and the census building. In the parliament building there are four elevator attendants, and they get $45 a month each. They are striking for higher pay.

Mr. CLARKE. They are not getting too much if they are only getting $45.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I am glad to hear the hon. gentleman say that ; they have been bothering the life out of me. In the east and west blocks there are three elevator attendants, in the Langevin block one engineer, one fireman and six elevator attendants, and in the census building one elevator attendant.

Mr. CLARKE. How many are there altogether ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Fifteen.

Mr. BENNETT. I would like to ask the hon. minister if there is an attendant in connection with the elevator service in the Seybold block. What did it cost to install the elevator there ? Is it an electric elevator ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Yes, the department put in an elevator at a cost of about $2,000.

Mr. BENNETT. That gives us rather a shock. I did not find that in the other expenditures, and it will be a tribute to the department over which the hon. gentleman presides, that not only have they installed a hot water service, but that they have put in an elevator service for the owner of the building. Certainly this is a business administration.

Ottawa public buildings, gas and electric light, including roads and bridges, $24,000.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. After looking into this item I think that this sum of $24,000 will cover the lighting.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). Then the cost of maintenance of the Ottawa public buildings must be more than $200,000.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. The $125,000 was for installation and work in connection with ventilation and lighting; for materials used and work done.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). But still one is rather staggered at the aggregate of all these amounts. Leaving Rideau Hall out of the question I see the following items here : $125,000, $67,000, $9,000, $24,000, $7,000, $8,000, $5,500. There is nearly a quarter of a million dollars which seems to be pretty large for the mere upkeep of these buildings.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Since I came to the department I have been making every possible investigation with a view of finding out how the money was expended. I am anxious to make a saving if I can, and I wish the House to have full information as to the actual cost.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). What is the actual cost?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. In this particular item this will cover the cost.

Ottawa public buildings, telephone service, $7,000.

Mr. INGRAM. I do not know whether room sixteen has a telephone or not, but I think room six should have a telephone.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. There is no telephone in room sixteen; some think it is necessary but I do not think it is.

Mr. INGRAM. There is a telephone in the Liberal whip's room, but there is no telephone in the Conservative whip's room.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. When I had the honour of being whip along with the present occupant on the other side of the House, we always applied mutually for any advantage and I was not aware until this present moment that there was not the same privilege given to the opposition whip as to the government whip. So far as this House is concerned a grant to one party should be equally given to the other.

Some hon. MEMBERS. Hear, hear.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. If the chief whip of the opposition desires a telephone and the government whip has one I certainly shall feel it my duty to grant the request.

Mr. CLARKE. How many telephones are in use in these buildings.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. We have 223 telephones in connection with the departmental and parliament buildings.

Mr. CLARKE. I appeal to the minister if that is not an enormous number. Why, if you had one in every room I don't think that there are 223 rooms in all the buildings. Are there any outside?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. The following is the number of telephones: Department of Agriculture, 14; Auditor General, 3; Customs, 5; Dominion Police, 8; Finance Department, 3; Government House, 6; Geological Survey, 3; House of Commons, 14; Indian Affairs, 3; Inland Revenue, 9; Department of Interior, 19; Department of Justice, 16; Department of Labour, 1; Mounted Police, 3; Militia and Defence, 20; Marine and Fisheries, 8; Ottawa River Works, 3; Post Office, 8; Printing Bureau, 5; Parliamentary Library, 4; Privy Council, 10; Public Works, 38; Railways and Canals, 6; Secretary of State, 5; Senate, 4; Trade and Commerce, 5. Total, 223.

Mr. CLARKE. In the minister's own department there are thirty-eight telephones. Are they working overtime or how do you come to have so many? I cannot expect the minister to be familiar with the location of the telephones in the other departments, but perhaps he could tell us where the thirty-eight telephones in his department are located.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I have not made myself familiar with them, but I have been looking into the matter somewhat.

Mr. CLARKE. I think it would bear investigation.

Mr. BENNETT. Is it not a fact that many of these telephones are in the private houses of the officers of the department.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. That would apply to the ministers and deputy ministers and to the chief officers.

Mr. BENNETT. In the Privy Council Department not only has the minister's secretary got a telephone in his house, but the assistant to the secretary has one as well.

Mr. CLARKE. In a growing department like the Department of Labour there is only one telephone and in the important Department of Finance there are only three, and they seem to get along with that number. It seems unreasonable that we should have thirty-eight telephones in one department. It appears to me that it requires some explanation.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. In the Department of Labour there is one telephone and one chief officer, but the hon. member will admit that in the Public Works Department it is reasonable to expect that the deputy minister, the chief architect, the chief engineer and the engineers in charge of outside work should have telephones. I shall look into the whole matter. In fact the list is on my desk now and under consideration to see if there can be a saving made, but I cannot promise a saving because I do not know what the conditions are.

Mr. CLANCY. Out of the total of 223 telephones how many are in the public buildings and how many outside.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. There are 138 inside and eighty-five outside. It does not necessarily follow that they are in dwellings, but they are outside of these grounds. I will bring down a full list, so that the hon. gentleman may see them for himself. I may mention an application which I had to-day. We fitted up the third floor of the House of Commons. A great many members attend the Railway Committee on that floor from eleven to one; and it was represented to me that it would be a great advantage to the gentlemen, I think on both sides of the House, occupying the rooms on that floor, to have a telephone. I do not see how the minister can refuse that request. Some of these telephones are sessional.

Mr. CLANCY. I was not aware that gentlemen having rooms for their private convenience were asking for telephones. I was not aware that there were rooms for gentlemen belonging to both sides of the House.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I did not say that. I said that we fitted up these rooms, that they were occupied by gentlemen on both sides of the House, and that they applied for a telephone. However, that will come up when I submit the list.

Ottawa public buildings—grounds, $8,000.

Mr. CLARKE. Is that for the maintenance of these grounds ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Yes.

Mr. CLARKE. Are they maintained by contract or by day labour ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. By day labour. We have a foreman in charge.

Major's Hill park, $5,500.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). There is an increase here of $1,000. What is the reason of that ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. The increase has been asked for because it was found that the amount previously voted did not meet the expenditure. There has been a new building erected there, and perhaps the park is kept up better than it used to be. Half of the salary of the superintendent is charged to this account, $720 ; there are two gardeners at $40 a month, and seven labourers at $35 a month, for nine months ; new plants, seeds, water system, manure and contingencies ; making up the $5,500. I do not see very well how the park and the buildings can be maintained in the state they are in now at much less cost. I have looked over this item, and I think it desirable, while we have charge of the park, that it should be kept up in as good a state as at present ; and we ask this amount rather than overdraw the account.

Mr. CLARKE. I think that is the proper policy, and it does not appear that the gardeners and labourers are paid too much ; their salaries are very small. If there has not been sufficient money voted, where do you get the money to pay these accounts, or do you have to stand off the men until the money is voted by parliament ?

Hon. Mr. SUTHERLAND.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. That is the usual way, and it is a very poor principle.

Mr. CLANCY. Does the hon. gentleman get Treasury Board orders ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. No.

Salaries of engineers, firemen, caretakers, &c., Dominion public buildings, $99,000.

Mr. BENNETT. I would like to ask the Minister of Public Works when the salary of John Frawley, caretaker of the public building at Orillia, commenced at $300 per annum ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Will the hon. gentleman let me take a memorandum of that and give him the information on Monday? I have not the information here.

Mr. BENNETT. Then I will ask the hon. gentleman another question : Does he propose to pay to John Frawley $300 next year as the caretaker of that building ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Is he a new appointment ?

Mr. BENNETT. He has been there a year or so.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. The matter has not been brought to my attention before.

Mr. BENNETT. I have no fault to find with the payment of the salary ; but I wish to bring to the attention of the minister the whole matter of the caretaker of the Orillia public building. A man named Baskerville was appointed by the late government, about 1893 or 1894, to perform the duties of that office, I think at the same salary of $300 per annum. There was a by-election in East Simcoe in 1897, when the Postmaster General came into the riding and camped there with his camp followers ; and, smarting bitterly under the defeat administered to him by the electors of that riding, that hon. gentleman came down here bound to revenge himself on any person and every person who had assisted to bring about that defeat. It was shown to him that there was a caretaker in the Orillia public building who, in all probability, having been a Conservative, had voted for me ; and forthwith his decapitation was proceeded with. It was utterly impossible to show that the man had not discharged the duties of his office well, or that he had in any way interfered in the election beyond the exercise of his franchise as a free man. What happened ? He got peremptory orders that he was to vacate the building. When the matter was brought up here in the House of Commons, the then Minister of Public Works informed the House, as the debate at that time will show, that he had decided on a new line of policy in regard to the Orillia public building in accordance with the wish of one of his colleagues ; and the line of policy that he pursued was this, that the caretaker's services were to be dispensed with, and for the future the postmaster of the town would have charge of the building. That was simply a means to an end. Though it was utterly impossible to formulate against the man a charge of inefficiency or of having interfered in the election, he was thrown out by the Postmaster General's instructions—because he was the minister who had charge of that district, and to whom the then Minister of Public Works referred in very plain terms as the colleague whose instructions he was endeavouring to carry out. A little later, this Mr. Frawley—and I have nothing to say derogatory of him, because I believe he discharges his duty all right—was installed. And in order to give a little appearance of decency to an intolerably indecent transaction, he was kept down there for a limited time at the small salary of $10 a month. But when the hon. gentleman thought sufficient time had elapsed to work out his little scheme, without too great a shock to the public, Frawley was given the same salary as that paid the former occupant, Mr. Baskerville. If ever there was a miserable display of party spitefulness, it was this. Smarting under the defeat which he had met in the riding, he took this roundabout way to gratify his little vindictiveness and put this man out of his position. But this man is still alive and recording good Conservative votes in East Simcoe, and the minister's treatment of him will stand as a disgraceful monument of party spite and mean vindictiveness.

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. The observations of the hon. gentleman from East Simcoe, so far as I have any recollection of the matter, are utterly without foundation.

Mr. BENNETT. I would simply ask the hon. minister whether it is not the case that he was in that riding and conducted a campaign and that he came back smarting under defeat, and that the man whom he appointed to fill the office formerly held by Baskerville is receiving the same salary as Baskerville was paid. When I remonstrated with the hon. Minister of Public Works at the time in his own office, he asked me not to blame him, that it was too small a transaction for him to take in hand, but that orders had been given him from another quarter. That quarter I knew, however, was the quarter occupied by the Postmaster General himself.

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. It is hardly necessary for me to repeat my contradiction. I have no recollection of ever hearing of the existence of the man to whom the hon. gentleman refers. I do not think that the circumstance ever occurred such as the hon. gentleman describes of my having been a party to turning this man out of office. I do not think I ever heard of his existence before to-night.

Mr. CLANCY. I would like to ask the hon. the Postmaster General if, when dismissals are made throughout the country, as many have been, without any charge having been preferred, these dismissals are made with his knowledge or do his officers take it upon themselves to make them. I would like to know from the hon. gentleman whether in all cases these dismissals are made with his knowledge and approval. I am now speaking more particularly of cases where no charges were preferred, and the man was simply told that his services would cease on a certain day and some person be appointed in his place.

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. Is the hon. gentleman alluding to postmasters ?

Mr. CLANCY. Yes.

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. With regard to postmasters, it is my duty to know of every dismissal or removal from office. I have no doubt that I authorized every such transaction ; but whether I did or not, I assume the full responsibility. Occasionally, one of my colleagues has been acting in my absence, but I presume he would only do what I would have done myself if present. It may be assumed that I have authorized every removal which has taken place.

Mr. CLANCY. I am very glad that the Committee and the country should know the position which the hon. minister takes. But I fear he would scarcely stand on a crossroad in this country, and make the denial he has made to the hon. member for East Simcoe (Mr. Bennett). I know nothing about the particular case to which the hon. member for East Simcoe referred, but I know of other cases so small and so mean that I hesitated coming to the conclusion that the hon. minister had any knowledge of them. He says now that he has knowledge, or even if he has not, he takes full responsibility. Well, I know of many cases where men were receiving small salaries and were simply told to go. No complaint was made against them, their public service was good, but some persons conspired to turn them out and the minister dismissed them. The country will be shocked at the hon. gentleman's statement to-night. He takes full responsibility of these dismissals from one end of Canada to the other and then makes the most flat denial of a case of dismissal which occurred in East Simcoe.

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. My hon. friend asked me about post offices, and the case in East Simcoe was that of the caretaker of a public building. I take full responsibility for every removal from a post office. If the hon. gentleman desired to be fair with me, he would give me the cases to which he refers and discuss each case on its merits. He would then be able to judge whether I was warranted or not in the course I took I am prepared to justify every removal of a postmaster that has taken place. I think the hon. gentleman will find that I have protected the postmasters. He will find that his remarks will not have the sympathy of the Conservative postmasters, and that I have made very few changes in the vast army of postmasters who were in office when I took charge of the department.

Mr. CLANCY. I may say to the hon. gentleman that I intend drawing his attention to some cases concerning which I have the correspondence and which will bear out the statement I make to-night. The hon. gentleman has told us that the Conservatives have been very well treated because he has permitted them to occupy their positions. That is the substance of what he has said.

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. That is the return I get for treating them well.

Mr. CLANCY. All that the Postmaster has the right to demand of any postmaster, whether Liberal or Conservative, is a fair, and honest service, and if a postmaster, who has given this service is permitted to retain his position, he is simply getting just treatment. If any postmaster whether Liberal or Conservative is not doing his duty fairly, he should lose his office. But so long as he does his duty, he should not be discharged, and I do not see that the hon. minister is entitled to any particular credit for not having discharged such a man. He has told us that Conservative postmasters will say he has treated them well. Has he given them exceptional treatment ?

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. In many cases I have stood by them when I would be quite as well warranted in removing them from office. I have always given them the benefit of any doubt. I have always favoured the postmasters in office. I would like the hon. gentleman to inform me of any particular cases in which he thinks injustice has been done. The removals have been very few indeed. In the western provinces, the removals have been infinitesimal, and that I presume is the section of the country to which the hon. gentleman refers. There have been grounds for removal that were in my discretion ; and I think I have in all cases leaned to the side of those who were in office. My hon. friend has a neighbour who has had some experience of my practice.

Mr. FOWLER. Do I understand that the Postmaster General is prepared to discuss now the removals he has made ?

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. When the proper time comes—not now.

Mr. FOWLER. We will discuss it when the time comes.

Mr. INGRAM. As I have been referred to, and as I desire to do what is fair by both sides in the discussion that has arisen, I may say that my brother is postmaster in St. Thomas, he was suspended and a thorough investigation took place. He was reinstated and paid his full salary while out of office. I think the Postmaster General was fully satisfied that the complaint was not warranted, and for that reason he reinstated him. I think the Postmaster General did justice, and I am prepared to give him credit for doing justice after investigation. Also the postmaster of the city of Windsor was suspended. I do not know the details of the investigation, but I know that the result was that the postmaster was reinstated. Of course, I know that, when the government came into power in 1896, by a ruling they made, certain persons who were appointed to office within a certain period previous to the change of government were dismissed. In the town of Aylmer, in my own constituency, Mr. D. H. L. Price was appointed by the Conservatives as postmaster. He served several months under this administration, then he was dismissed and another put in his place. No fault was found with him, but the reason for his dismissal was the ruling which had been made, providing for the dismissal of those appointed within a certain time of the Liberals coming into office. These are the facts, and I state them candidly.

Mr. BENNETT. On the 24th April, 1899, I asked the question :

1. Who is the caretaker of the public building at Orillia ?
2. When was he appointed ?
3. Upon whose recommendation ?
4. What salary is paid to him ?

The Minister of Public Works of that time answered the questions as follows :

1. John Frawley. 2. Fourth November, 1898. 3. Frawley was the man employed by the former postmaster who was at the same time caretaker, to do the cleaning of the building. It was found that he performed his work very satisfactorily, and that was the reason why he was appointed caretaker. 4. $15 per month.

Now, every word in that bears out the statement I made a little while ago, that after the dismissal of Baskerville, who was the former occupant, the work devolving upon the postmaster, the Minister of Public Works appointed Frawley as caretaker at $15 a month. My recollection was that it was $10. No man of common sense will believe that the then Minister of Public Works had any animus against this man Baskerville, and I challenge the Postmaster General to show that there is in the Department of Public Works any complaint against him for having been derelict in the discharge of his duties. And I here say, and say without reservation, that the report of the debates will show that the Minister of Public Works, when endeavouring to explain why he had dismissed Baskerville, plainly intimated that it was by reason of political pressure brought upon him by a colleague. The Postmaster General will not deny that he was in that riding—as he had a perfect right to be, and as I have no doubt he will be again. Every one knows that each minister has a certain portion of the country of which he takes charge for campaign purposes, and these constituencies are in charge of the Postmaster General. I leave it to any man of sense on the other side to say whether it was vindictiveness and spitefulness on the part of the Postmaster General that brought about that dismissal of Baskerville, or whether it was because the then Minister of Public Works sitting in his office, knowing nothing about the matter, made up his mind, for the reasons for which nobody can divine, that Baskerville ought to be decapitated. I shall place the statement of the Postmaster General before the people of Orillia, and I do not think they will have a very high regard for his veracity.

Mr. INGRAM. Has the appointment of caretaker for the town of St. Thomas public building been made yet ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. No.

Mr. FOWLER. There is an increase in this item of $10,000. Why is that ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. The department is taking over the caretaking of post office buildings of Montreal and Toronto, and it also has six new buildings to take charge of during the coming year.

Mr. FOWLER. How was the caretaking for Toronto and Montreal paid for before ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I believe the caretaking was very unsatisfactory. It was done by the Post Office Department. We are in a better position probably to look after that sort of thing, having the clerks of works, who will hire the men and have the work done properly. Great complaints were made that the offices were not properly cared for.

Mr. FOWLER. By how much will that reduce the expenses of the Post Office Department ? The Postmaster General has been boasting of a surplus. He started with a surplus, but came out with a pretty heavy deficit before he got through with the Auditor General's Department and the Finance Department. His Newmarket story is pretty threadbare. How much would this reduce his expenditure ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I do not know exactly—a few hundred dollars.

Mr. FOWLER. Then I do not see how you account for this increase. You have only six new buildings, which, at an average of $300, would be about $2,000. But this is an increase of $10,500. Where does the other eight thousand dollars odd come in ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. My hon. friend (Mr. Fowler) knows that the vote has not been increased in accordance with the service. There were sixteen new buildings added to the list last year, and this year there were six. I am not prepared to say what the saving would be to the post office department in our taking over Montreal and Toronto. The complaint of the officials was, apparently, that the work was not done at all. Perhaps my hon. friend from West Toronto (Mr. Clarke) can speak about that.

Mr. CLARKE. I was going to ask the hon. minister if there were any complaints on file. I never heard of any complaints of dereliction of duty on the part of the caretakers. Have the officials complained ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Yes, there was a letter written by the post office inspector regarding the state of the building

Mr. CLARKE. That letter will be brought down ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Yes.

Mr. CLARKE. Who was the post office inspector who complained ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I don't remember now. It was done at the request of the department, on the complaint that he was not keeping the post office in a proper state.

Mr. FOWLER. I want to understand this thing. I understand the minister to say that a saving to the post office of about $200 was effected by the change.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. No.

Mr. FOWLER. Then how much could be saved by transferring this expenditure to the Public Works Department ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I am not prepared to say just how much it will cost to keep the post offices at Montreal and Toronto in a proper condition, perhaps a few hundred dollars a year. Some labour will have to be employed, some charwomen. We are not taking these over for fun. Representations were made officially to the department of the necessity of assuming this charge.

Mr. CLARKE. I do not want to object to the change being made if it will result in economy. But must there be a new caretaker and more persons employed in this post office at Toronto ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Some of these caretakers have been urgently requesting a little increase in salary. Many of them get less than $400. They complain bitterly that they cannot support themselves and their families on their present salary, and a small increase of $25 or $50 will be given to some who appear to be underpaid.

Mr. INGRAM. The caretakers appear to have almost absolute control over the public buildings, and this remark applies to the departments of Inland Revenue, Post Office and Customs. I think the caretaker in each building should be subject to the orders of the head of his department. They should receive instructions to keep their places in proper condition. In our district we have found that the caretakers will not take their orders from their superior officers.

Some resolutions reported.

On motion of the Minister of Finance, House adjourned at 11.20 p.m.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.

MONDAY, April 6, 1903.

The SPEAKER took the Chair at Three o'clock.

FIRST READINGS.

Bill (No. 83) to incorporate the New Canadian Company.—Mr. Lemieux.

Bill (No. 84) respecting the Quebec and New Brunswick Railway Company.—Mr. Belcourt.

Bill (No. 85) to incorporate the Berlin, Waterloo, Wellesley and Georgian Bay Railway Company.—Mr. Clare.

Bill (No. 86) to amend the Fruit Marks Act, 1901.—Mr. Smith (Wentworth) by Mr. Gourley.

VACANCY.

Mr. SPEAKER. I have the honour to inform the House that a vacancy having occurred in the representation of the electoral district of Russell, province of Ontario, by reason of William Cameron Edwards, Esquire, having been called to the Senate, I have accordingly issued my warrant to the Clerk of the Crown in Chancery to make out a new writ of election for the said electoral district.

ELECTORAL DIVISION OF ST. JAMES.

Mr. SPEAKER. I have also the honour to inform the House that in obedience to the order of the House of Friday last, April 3rd, I have issued my warrant to the Clerk of the Crown in Chancery to make out a new writ of election for the electoral district of St. James, Montreal.

YUKON TERRITORY—TREADGOLD CONCESSION.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN (Halifax). Before the Orders of the Day are called, I would like to inquire from the Prime Minister whether any communications have been received from the Dawson Board of Trade with regard to the concession known as the Treadgold concession. Some members of parliament have received a communication from the board of trade in which the following is alleged :

It is the wish of the Dawson Board of Trade, that you be forwarded a copy of a telegram sent this day to Messrs. the Hon. Sir Wilfrid Laurier, Premier of Canada ; Clifford Sifton, Minister of the Interior; William Mulock, Postmaster General, and James Hamilton Ross, member of parliament for Yukon, and which reads as follows :

Oppose any attempt to pass Order in Council or Act in parliament that will in any way confirm Treadgold concession. Are having monster petition signed and reliable data prepared to forward Ottawa asking government to aid in furnishing water for mining purposes. People are a unit in making demand and will insist upon government protection from monopoly of Treadgold octopus.

THE DAWSON BOARD OF TRADE,
H. C. Macaulay, President.

And it is the further wish of said board that your influence, help and co-operation in assisting the people of this territory to make the necessary recommendations to the parliament of the Dominion of Canada to prevent the passage through parliament of the Treadgold concession and water grant from Klondike river and Rock Creek such as is and has been contemplated.

The Treadgold concession and water grant as granted by an Order in Council and which when ratified by the parliament at its next session will become law is in the opinion of this board one of the most iniquitous measures that was ever inflicted upon the people, and (in the consideration of the Dawson Board of Trade) will work a great hardship upon the people of this territory since it will mean the virtual bankruptcy of all the property holders of Dawson and surrounding territory, and instead of the Klondike becoming the prosperous country we expect, it will virtually become the property of Mr. Treadgold and those who are associated with him in his scheme.

An immense petition to the Dominion parliament to cancel and disallow this measure is being prepared and circulated (a copy of which will be sent you) embodying the objections of the people of the Yukon to the granting of this measure and asking the government to provide water for the miners of this territory.

Then, the communication proceeds at great length to state grounds against the Treadgold concession, with which I will not trouble the House at this time. Accompanying it is a copy of a petition which, in the second paragraph, in referring to this concession, says :

That the benefits conferred upon the grantees are of incalculable value and involve an enormous exploitation of the public resources of this territory for the benefit of a few favoured concessionaires.

And in the fourth paragraph it says :

That the need of this territory is not the creation of monopolies but their prevention, and the encouragement of the individual miners by securing equal privileges and opportunities to all as far as the law and the administration can provide them.

It concludes by asking that the Order in Council of April 21, 1902, may be cancelled. I would like to ask the right hon. leader of the government (Rt. Hon. Sir Wilfrid Laurier) what the position of the government is in reference to the Treadgold concession, and whether this communication has been received by the government ? I would like any information as to the action of the government in future in regard to it which the right hon. gentleman thinks it proper to give to the House now.

The PRIME MINISTER (Rt. Hon. Sir Wilfrid Laurier). Mr. Speaker, I have received a copy of the paper which has just been partially read by the hon. leader of the opposition (Mr. Borden, Halifax). I do not remember if any other communications have been received by the government outside of that. But, as is frequently the case, there are probably two sides to this question ; there is the side of those who oppose the concession and the side of those who favour it. The government, about a year ago, amended the Treadgold concession in a manner which it was thought would be satisfactory to the miners of the Yukon. We certainly had no intention of creating a monoply, but we thought that by passing this concession, we were providing the miners of the Yukon with water for their mining operations. This view of the case has been controverted. There is another side to it, but no action has been taken so far, and it is not contemplated, at all events, at this moment to take any action. It may be that we will have to reconsider the action taken by the government if we find that the representations made have some foundation, but I am not prepared at this moment to say anything further to my hon. friend.

REPORT PRESENTED.

Abstract of Statements of Insurance Companies of Canada for the year ended 31st December, 1902.—Hon. Mr. Fielding.

CONSIDERED IN COMMITTEE—THIRD READING.

Bill (No. 27) respecting the Canada National Railway and Transport Company.—Mr. Campbell.

SECOND READINGS.

Bill (No. 24) to extend the power of Loan Companies.—Mr. Thompson (Haldimand).

Bill (No. 71) to incorporate the Imperial Company.—Mr. Bickerdike.

Bill (No. 72) respecting the Bank of Montreal.—Mr. Bickerdike.

Bill (No. 73) to incorporate the Ontario and Quebec Power Company.—Mr. Belcourt.

Bill (No. 75) respecting the Canadian Pacific Railway Company.—Mr. Thompson (Haldimand).

Bill (No. 76) to enable the city of Vancouver to acquire certain lands and interests adjoining Vancouver Harbour.—Mr. Macpherson.

Bill (No. 79) to incorporate the Bank of Winnipeg.—Mr. Scott.

Bill (No. 80) respecting the Canada Northwest Land Company, Limited.—Mr. McCarthy.

Bill (No. 81) respecting the Brandon and South-western Railway Company.—Mr. Morrison.

QUESTIONS.

TRANS-CANADA RAILWAY COMPANY.

Mr. MONK asked :

1. Has the government received any proposal from the Trans-Canada Railway Company, in regard to the construction of a new Transcontinental railway ?

2. Has the government invited the said railway company to offer its terms for the construction of said railway across the continent ?

3. Will it be a condition of any agreement for said construction that it should begin at its eastern terminus ?

4. Has any demand for financial assistance for said construction been made to the government ?

The MINISTER OF RAILWAYS AND CANALS (Hon. A. G. Blair). It is impossible to answer any of these questions at present. The House has already been informed that communications, largely verbal, have taken place between the government and other parties, but it would be premature to make any announcements now. As soon as this can be done in the public interests, parliament will be informed fully.

SOUTH AFRICAN WAR—GOVERNMENT EMPLOYEES AS VOLUNTEERS.

Mr. HUGHES (Victoria) asked :

1. What servants of the government, in permanent or temporary employ, went to South Africa in any of the 3rd, 4th, 5th, or 6th Canadian Mounted Rifles ?

2. Were the places of all these kept for them on their return ?

3. What ones were not reinstated ?

4. Who received Canadian pay while in service in South Africa, viz., the pay, or any pay for their office as member or employee in the Canadian civil service ?

5. Will those not yet reinstated in their positions be reinstated forthwith ?

6. Did any minister promise those in government service that their places would be retained for them ?

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE (Hon. Sir Frederick Borden). I would ask that the first four questions be put in the form of a motion. If the hon. gentleman will make a motion I will be very glad to bring down the information, which it is difficult to do in the form of an answer to a question. With regard to question No. 6, I am informed that no minister promised those in the government service who went to South Africa that their places would be retained for them.

Mr. CLARKE. What about question No. 5.

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE. I cannot answer that.

SOUTH AFRICAN CONSTABULARY.

Mr. INGRAM asked :

1. Have any documents been received by the Department of Militia and Defence, complaining of the treatment the Canadians received in the South African Constabulary ?

2. If so, has the department taken any action; or does the government intend to take any action in the matter; and if so, what action ?

3. Has the attention of the hon. Minister of Militia, or any officer of his department, been called to the following article, which appeared in the Montreal 'Star,' Monday, March 30, 1903 ?

CONSTABULARY BACK, TELL OF GRIEVANCES.

Allege That They Were not Well Treated in South Africa.

Reasons for Leaving.

When seen to-day by a 'Star' reporter, they somewhat reluctantly discussed their reasons for leaving the South African Constabulary.

Some of the Grievances.

The following are a few of their grievances. They allege :

That the British officers, in carrying out the government's order to reduce the strength of the constabulary from 10,000 to 6,000 men, attempted, without just cause, to dismiss most of the Canadians ;

That if a Canadian whom they wanted to get rid of, failed to purchase his discharge, he was dismissed from the service on the pretext of being unfit for duty in the constabulary ;

That such dismissal carried with it a certain odium, to the great disadvantage and injury of those thus summarily dismissed ;

That is virtually amounted to a bad conduct dismissal ;

That a person so dismissed was obliged to pay his own expenses back to Canada ;

That, when it was determined to dispense with the services of a Canadian, and when the Canadian refused to purchase his discharge, charges were trumped up against that individual, leaving him no alternative but to get out of the service ;

That, in the appointment of non-commissioned officers in the Canadian squadron of the constabulary, the Canadians were needlessly discriminated against, English sergeants invariably being appointed to the vacancies on the non-commissioned staff as they occurred ;

That, in some cases, Dutch officers and non-commissioned officers were given the preference over Canadians by the British officers in the matter of promotions ;

That, while the other British troops received their issues of clothing regularly, the Canadians were not so favoured ;

That, in many cases, the Canadians were obliged to either purchase certain articles of clothing, which the government should have supplied, out of their private funds, or suffer hardships and inconvenience ;

That, on an average, each Canadian was obliged to disburse out of his private purse upwards of £1 10s. each month in order to secure the actual necessaries of life ;

That attempts were made to convert the Canadians into mere military machines ;

That a show of independence on their part was regarded by the British officers as an act of insubordination ;

That the most trivial breaches of discipline on the part of the Canadians were rigorously punished, while similar infractions on the part of the troops belonging to the British columns were not noticed.

In discussing these grievances with a 'Star' reporter to-day, the men emphatically declared that nothing in the world would tempt them to return to the life they had but recently left in South Africa.

Only One Blanket Each.

Some of the men had received only one blanket each during the whole of their sojourn in South Africa. In order to sleep with any degree of comfort during the cold nights of the South African winter, they were obliged to fall back on the blankets—two per man—which they had brought with them from Canada.

Matter of Uniform.

In the matter of uniforms, bandolier equipment, belts and other accoutrements, the men allege that the Canadians were shabbily treated in comparison with the British Tommy.

When they left the constabulary, they each received a ticket to Durban. From Durban they had to pay their passage to England out of their own pocket money. The trip cost $60, or 15 guineas, per man.

The expenses of their passage from England to Canada were borne by Lord Strathcona.

4. If so, what course of action, if any, does the department, or the government, propose to take regarding these alleged serious grievances ?

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE (Hon. Sir Frederick Borden). To the first question the answer is 'none' and that answer will apply to the second question as well. To the third question the answer is : not until I read the article as quoted in the hon. gentleman's question. In this connection, I think it would be proper in further answer to the questions to say that extracts from an article published in the 'Mail and Empire,' two days after the article quoted here, might appear in the 'Hansard' alongside of the quotation in question. That article reads as follows :

CANADIAN TROOPERS.

Letters received from Canadians in the South African Constabulary indicate that there are those who are well satisfied with their treatment. One correspondent who signs himself: 'A Canadian Trooper' is quite indignant at the stories brought home by discharged men. He suggests that many of these have been 'kicked out as unfit for service.' Without expressing an opinion on this phase of the subject, it must be said that the correspondent speaks with apparent authority on other points. He explains that when the war ended the corps was twice as strong numerically as was necessary in times of peace. However, there was no effort made to reduce it immediately for obvious reasons. Now that the whole country has settled down the order has gone forth that many of the troopers are to be discharged. Our correspondent conveys the impression, complimentary to himself, that the very best men are being retained and the inefficient and dissatisfied discharged. As proof that all is well, he says, in effect. 'Behold me; I remain.' Canadians who have protested against the way they were treated, say, in effect, 'Behold us; we could not stay.' The public has little other evidence before it. The truth lies somewhere between the extreme statements: 'They ill-treat us because we are Canadians, and they are good to us because we hail from Canada.' It is hard to believe that any British officer would annoy a colonial trooper because he was a Canadian. The probability is that the opposite would be the case. The trouble is that many officers treat Canadians just as they would treat denizens of London, E.C. Londoners are used to it; Canadians are not, nor does the public opinion of this country demand that Canadians become lackeys for English officers. A Canadian trooper is a fighting man; he is not a soldier. Our correspondent does not touch on the question of the 'haw-haw' ways of the officers. He does, however, find fault with the men who complain that they were turned adrift penniless. He intimates that the card game and the canteen are responsible for this, and that the men have only themselves to blame. If there is truth in this suggestion it should silence the unmanly whining of the victims of the bob-tailed flush. This journal does not sympathize with this complaint. The troopers had their pay; that all have not arrived home penniless is evidence that this is sufficient, under certain circumstances. If they did not save it, no one will find fault, as long as they do not begin to lament. Thus the case stands. The final verdict will depend largely on the future conduct of the ex-constables themselves. If they acquit themselves like men in the new life that lies before them, they will be believed when they criticise the army. If not they will be discredited.

In reply to question No. 4 I may say: There does not appear to be anything for the government to do. The government is in no way responsible even if it were true that members of the South African Constabulary had been harshly treated.

COMMISSION FOR REVISION OF STATUTES.

Mr. SPROULE asked:

1. Of whom is the commission for the revision of the statutes composed?
2. When did the commission begin its work?
3. What progress has been made in the work of the revision?
4. At what date is it expected that the commission will complete its work?
5. Has the rate of remuneration to the members and officers of the commission been fixed; and if so, what is it?
6. What is the estimated cost of the proposed revision, when completed?

The SOLICITOR GENERAL (Hon. H. G. Carroll):—

1. The Minister of Justice and Solicitor General, members ex officio, the Right Honourable Sir Henry Strong, President; Edmund Leslie Newcombe, K. C., Deputy Minister of Justice; Wentworth E. Roscoe, K.C., of Kentville, Nova Scotia; Augustus Power, K.C., of the Department of Justice; Edward R. Cameron, K.C., Registrar of the Supreme Court of Canada; Henry Robertson, K.C., of Collngwood, Ontario, Barrister; and Louis Philippe Sirois, of Quebec, Notary Public; Hon. R. J. Ritchie, of St. John, and Horace St. Louis, of Montreal, Advocate, Secretaries of the Commission.

2. The commission began its work on 21st November, 1902.

3. The commissioners have held two meetings at Ottawa and a number of the statutes have been revised and printed by the individual commissioners. It is hoped to have all the work already printed passed by the commission about the end of this month.

4. It is too early to mention a date for completion of the work.

5. The following rates of renumeration have been fixed:

	per an.
The Right Hon. Sir Henry Strong ...	$ 3,500 00
Mr. Newcombe	1,500 00
Mr. Power	1,200 00
Mr. Cameron	1,200 00

The remuneration of the other commissioners and the secretaries has not been fixed.

6. No estimate has been made of the cost.

THE DOUKHOBORS.

Mr. BLAIN asked:

1. Has the government any information as to the alleged pilgrimage or expedition of the persons known as Doukhobors, during the months of November and December, 1902, in the North-west Territories and the province of Manitoba? If so, what is the information?
2. How many persons were engaged in such pilgrimage or expedition?
3. What was the alleged object of such pilgrimage or expedition?
4. Did the government take any steps to interfere with, or prevent the completion of such pilgrimage or expedition; and if so, what were such steps, and what were the means employed by the government for the purpose?
5. Under what law, or by what authority, did the government so interfere, and take such steps and measures, if any?
6. If the government seized and sold any horses, sheep and cattle, of the Doukhobors, in November and December last, by what authority, or under what provision of the law, was such action taken ?

The POSTMASTER GENERAL (Hon. Sir William Mulock). :—

1. The government received information from its officers that a number of Doukhobors intended to and did make a pilgrimage in the months of October and November last year.

2. Of the total of about 8,000 Doukhobors in the west about 1,800 men, women and children engaged in the pilgrimage as far as Yorkton. There were about 450 men and boys in it and these continued as far as Minnedosa.

3. Conducting a religious crusade.

4. The government through its officers advised the Doukhobors not to start on this pilgrimage and after they had started persuaded them to return. The women and children were taken back by special train and wagons or sleighs, the men partly by special train and the rest of the way by foot.

5. Under no specific law, as the action of the government did not require such.

6. No horses, sheep or cattle of the Doukhobors were seized and sold by the government in November or December, but in the month of October some cattle and horses which had been turned loose by the Doukhobors were, with their consent, sold by the government by public auction.

TRANSCONTINENTAL RAILWAY.

Mr. MONK—by Mr. Clarke—asked :

1. Until what date is the government prepared to receive proposals in connection with the construction of a transcontinental railway ?

2. Is the government willing to recommend that financial aid be granted by parliament to those who are ready to execute such construction ?

3. Will the government entertain a proposal for a land grant in favour of such enterprise ?

4. What are the principal conditions which the government will impose upon those who are prepared to undertake such construction ?

The MINISTER OF RAILWAYS AND CANALS (Hon. A. G. Blair)). It is impossible to answer any of these questions at present. The House has already been informed that communications, largely verbal, have taken place between the government and other parties, but it would be premature to make any announcements now. As soon as this can be done in the public interests, parliament will be informed fully.

IRISH IMMIGRATION.

Mr. CLARKE asked :

1. Has the Canadian emigration office at Belfast, Ireland, been closed ; and if so, for what reason, and on whose recommendation ? If the office is open, who is the officer in charge, and when was he appointed ?

2. How many Canadian emigration agencies are there in Ireland ; where are they located ; and who is the officer in charge of each such agency ?

3. How many Irish emigrants were sent to Canada by the government agents during the past departmental year ; and what was the expenditure made in connection with the maintenance and work of the Irish emigration agencies, salaries of agents, travelling expenses, &c.?

The POSTMASTER GENERAL (Hon. Sir Wm. Mulock).

1. The office at Belfast was closed for a few days, the minister having instructed Mr. O'Kelly, the agent there, to take the place of Mr. C. R. Devlin, who resigned his position as Canadian Emigration Commissioner at Dublin, on March 5th. The Belfast agency is now open, and is temporarily in charge of Mr. Kilburn, from 1st April.

2. Two. At Dublin and Belfast, Ed. O'Kelly, Dublin, Mr. Kilburn, Belfast.

3. One. All Irish emigrants arrived in Canada during the year ending 30th June, 1902, as a result of the work performed by the immigration agents in Ireland.

The total amount of expenditure for salaries, office, living, travelling and other expenses of the immigration agents in Ireland during 1902-03 was $14,173.60.

RAILWAY ACCIDENTS.

Mr. CLARKE asked :

Is it the duty of any public official, and if so, of whom, to inquire into and report to the government, upon all railway accidents which occur in the Dominion ?

The MINISTER OF RAILWAYS AND CANALS (Hon. A. G. Blair). No official in particular has been assigned to the duty of making inquiry into railway accidents, but since and owing to recent railway accidents, the subject has been engaging the serious consideration of the government.

"LE CANADA" AND L. J. LATOUR.

Mr. LEONARD asked :

1. Is the government aware that the following circular has been addressed to postmasters in different parts of the country, and especially in the province of Quebec ?

Montreal, March 24, 1903.

To the Postmaster.

Sir,—As you are aware, we are to commence in a few days the publication of the new Liberal organ, 'Le Canada.'

The management of the company directs me to write you, in the name of the good cause, to ask you to help us regarding our circulation (within the limits of the possible, be it well understood).

Needless to tell you that the postmaster fills an important role in his locality in regard to newspapers and can render great services.

We count upon your legitimate sympathies and on your co-operation for the 'Canada.' Your work will be recompensed.

We give you the following commission :—10 per cent on collections, and 25 per cent on the subscriptions, according to the list that you will prepare for us.

I venture the hope that these offers will be taken into consideration.

I close with thanking you in advance for all that you may do for the newspaper and for our undertaking, the success of which you doubtless have at heart.

Your ever devotedly,

L. J. LATOUR,
General Circulation Manager.

2. What position does the said L. J. Latour hold, or has he held, in the civil service at Ottawa ? What is his salary ? When was he appointed ?

3. When did the said L. J. Latour obtain six months' leave of absence, and for what reasons?

4. When did he draw his salary the last time, and what amount did he draw ?

5. Is it true that this L. J. Latour is at present replaced in the civil service by his young son, who is entirely incompetent to fulfil the duties of his position ?

6. What are the age and salary of young Latour ?

7. Is it true that L. J. Latour has collected, and collects, amongst his colleagues in the civil service subscriptions and contributions to the future new publication, 'Le Canada.'

8. Would the government take cognizance of this fact, a notorious one for those who live in Ottawa, and inform the civil service employees that they may retain their positions, even if not subscribing for the newspaper 'Le Canada,' provided they fulfil their duties in their respective positions ?

9. Does the government approve of those subscriptions ?

10. What means does the government propose to take to put an end to this state of things ?

11. Will it have the amounts of their subscriptions returned to those employees, or increase their salaries in consequence ?

12. Who are the directors of the new publication, to whom reference is made in the said circular ?

13. Which ministers of the present government, and which members of this House, are financially interested in the said newspaper ?

14. Is it not true that the said newspaper will be published under the ægis of members of the federal parliament and of the Quebec legislature ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS (Hon. Jas. Sutherland) :

1. No.

2. Departmental mail officer Public Works Department at a salary of $3 per day from 1st May, 1902.

3. On the 6th March, 1903, without salary.

4. On the 6th March last, at rate given above.

5. Mr. Latour has a son employed in the Department of Public Works who is considered competent to do his work.

6. Twenty-one years, salary $3 per day.

7, 8, 9, 10, 11. No information in reference to these matters.

12, 13, 14. These matters mentioned in these three questions have no official connection with the department and have not been brought to its knowledge.

ERNESTOWN STATION POST OFFICE.

Mr. WILSON asked :

Has a change been made of the postmaster at Ernestown station post office, county of Lennox ? If so, what are the circumstances under which such change occurred ?

The POSTMASTER GENERAL (Hon. Sir Wm. Mulock). The postmaster resigned and Mrs. Oriana Johnston was appointed in his place.

THE CATTLE-GUARD COMMISSION.

Mr. LENNOX asked :

1. The Minister of Railways and Canals having stated to the House on 2nd April instant, in reply to questions, that Mr. Robertson withdrew from the cattle-guard commission on the 14th of February last ; that the work was then supposed to be practically concluded, and a report prepared, which was substantially settled upon between the two commissioners, and only then remained to be put in form and signed, why has the report of the commission, as originally constituted, not been put in form, signed and returned to the department ?

2. Has Mr. Robertson any conection with the investigation tests, or proceedings, subsequent to the 14th of February last ?

3. What were the causes, or causes alleged, for Mr. Robertson's retirement ?

4. What is the cost of the commission down to the 14th of February ?

5. Was the retirement of Mr. Robertson voluntary, and solely of his own motion ?

The MINISTER OF RAILWAYS AND CANALS (Hon. A. G. Blair) :

1. Although the chief portion of the work of the Commission was done when Mr. Robertson withdrew from the Commission, the inquiries and investigations into the cattle-guards in use on the leading railways in the United States and Canada had been finished, and there only remained what seemed to be a few cattle-guards which had been apparently recent inventions to be tested. The number of these increased, and the delay in finally completing the report has arisen from that circumstance. It is thought better that the report should state whether any of the recent tests would show that any efficient cattle-guard had been designed.

2. Mr. Robertson has not been present at any of the tests since the 14th of February last.

3. Mr. Robertson asked leave to withdraw, considering it was his duty to do so, as he was about to engage in a provincial election contest.

4. The cost of this Commission up to the 14th of February last was $3,624.32.

5. Mr. Robertson's retirement was voluntary and solely of his own motion.

CANADIAN TOBACCO.

Mr. MONK—by Mr. Clarke—asked :

1. Has the government a written report from Mr. Blaise Dugas, of Saint-Jacques de l'Achigan, relating to his trip to Europe in connection with the sale of Canadian tobacco in foreign countries ?

2. What was the cost of that trip ?

3. What is the amount paid to Mr. Blaise Dugas, and does that sum cover all that is due to him ?

4. What has been the result of that trip ?

5. If there is a writen report from Mr. Dugas, will it be printed and laid on the Table of this House ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE (Hon. W. S. Fielding) :

1. Yes.

2. $470.25.

3. $470.25 paid for time and expenses of trip to Belgium; $146.25 paid for time and expenses collecting samples of tobacco and delivering lectures in Quebec; $36.50, still due for time and expenses delivering lectures in 1903.

4. Useful information has been obtained and published by means of lectures in the tobacco-growing districts of Quebec.

5. Yes.

IMPORTS OF OXIDE OF ALUMINUM.

Mr. ROBINSON (Northumberland) asked :

How many tons of oxide of aluminum (alumina ($Al_2 O_3$) was imported into Canada for the fiscal year ending June, 1902 ? What country or countries was it imported from ? What port or ports was it entered at, and what was the valuation for duty ?

The MINISTER OF CUSTOMS (Hon. Wm. Paterson). The officers of the department inform me that the article mentioned in this question is not specified under that name in the classification of imports in the Trade and Navigation tables, nor will they be able to get the information asked for without special examination of invoices at different ports of entry. If the hon. gentleman will specify the different articles, such as baroxite, corundum, emery, &c., on which he wishes to obtain information, they will endeavour to get it.

IMMIGRATION STATISTICS.

Mr. ROSS (Ontario) asked :

1. What has been the total immigration into Canada each year during the past ten years ?

2. What has been the total expenditure on immigration each year during the same period?

3. What has been the total immigration during each month of this calendar year ?

4. When did the first immigration, of which the department has a record, commence from the United States to Canada ?

5. How many settlers or immigrants have come to Canada from the United States during each year of which the department has a record ?

6. Of the total immigrants arriving from the United States, how many have declared themselves of Canadian origin ?

The POSTMASTER GENERAL (Hon. Sir Wm. Mulock). The return asked for would be rather voluminous, and perhaps my hon. friend would be good enough to make a motion for it.

P.E.I.—WINTER COMMUNICATION.

Mr. J. J. HUGHES (King's, P.E.I.) moved for :

Copies of all correspondence received by the government, or any department of the government, and the answers made thereto, concerning the winter navigation of the Northumberland Straits, during the season of 1902-03.

He said : Mr. Speaker, I desire to say a few words in explanation of this motion. When Prince Edward Island entered into confederation in 1873, this stipulation was set out in the agreement :

The Dominion government shall provide and maintain an efficient steam service between the Island and the mainland, winter and summer, thus placing the island in continuous communication with the Intercolonial Railway and the other railways of the Dominion.

There was no stipulation in the agreement that was considered so important by the people of Prince Edward Island and by the delegates appointed to negotiate the terms of union, as this. There was no stipulation that appealed with so much force to the people of Prince Edward Island as this, by which their isolation was to be a thing of the past ; but there is no stipulation that has been so much disregarded. The service during the last season was the worst that has ever been experienced during any year since we came into confederation. It has been all the worse comparatively speaking, because the trade of the island, as well as the trade of other parts of the Dominion, has greatly increased in the last few years, and therefore we felt it the more keenly and severely that that trade was interrupted during several months of the past year. During the last few years the trade of the country in the finished products of the farm has so greatly increased—and this will apply to all the provinces of old Canada lying east of the great lakes—that between 1890 and 1902, the exports of these products have increased $24,000,000 to a total of $80,000,000.

The farmers of Prince Edward Island have contributed their full share of this increase ; and they have besides supplied a largely increased home market. To prove this, I need only mention one item, that of cheese. During the term I have mentioned, the increased manufacture of cheese in Prince Edward Island has been 6,700 per cent. We have increased also in all the other lines of farm products—pork, bacon, ham, live stock, beef, sheep, eggs, butter, &c.—so that our trade to-day is very much larger than it was a few years ago, and consequently when the facilities for moving our products to the mainland come to a standstill, we suffer much more than we did. Not only has our trade in agricultural products largely increased, but we have established a large trade in frozen fish with the cities of Boston and New York. During the past season, we sent several carloads to Georgetown to be exported in the usual way, but we found we could not have them carried to the markets for which they were intended. They were held over at Georgetown several weeks, the warm season came on, and they had to be sold for the freight and carted out to the fields for manure. Not only with regard to these products, but others as well, tens of thousands of dollars were lost by the people of Prince Edward Island, owing to our inability to export them during the winter. Trade was diverted from the island, merchants who had endeavoured to fill orders could not do so, the orders went to other places, and our people incurred great loss. The extent of that loss I am not in a position to measure at the present, but no doubt it was very severe, and it was not only a loss to the island, but also to the mainland. I have been told by the representatives from eastern Nova Scotia that the products which they generally expect to receive from Prince Edward Island advanced largely in price. In fact it was difficult to obtain them at all. Last winter was of course exceptionally severe, but the difficulties of winter navigation were increased by the mistakes made by the department here in Ottawa. The Department of Marine and Fisheries made some years ago, and particularly last year, the mistake of taking advice from too many people on how to conduct winter navigation, and largely in consequence of that the experiment proved a failure. At present there is a movement on foot at Prince Edward Island to have the management of this service placed in the hands of a local committee. I wish to enter my strongest protest against any such idea. I believe that we will not succeed in having a satisfactory winter service until the hon. Minister of Marine and Fisheries takes the management of this service immediately under his own control. There are two good men now in command of the winter boats. There is no better man in the service than Captain Finlayson, who has had twenty-five years experience, and Captain Brown, in charge of the 'Stanley,' was an experienced navigator before he took charge and has had five years' experience since then. I would, therefore, advise the hon. Minister of Marine and Fisheries to consult these captains if he requires any more information. There are no men better calculated to give advice. Let him also consult the records of the department, and then make up his mind to place those steamers where the records show they can do really practical work. I would advise him to leave a good deal to the responsibility and judgment of these two captains, and with their assistance and the assistance of the officials he has in the island, he will be able to so conduct the service that it will in future give reasonable and satisfactory results both in the island and the mainland. There is another point which I wish to bring out. Last year there was some mismanagement in the railway service in connection with the winter service in the straits. Several times when the steamer arrived in Georgetown with a large quantity of mail and a large number of passengers, there was no special train to meet the steamer. Of course the steamer could not arrive on schedule time on account of having to meet adverse conditions, but in previous years there was always a special train to meet the steamer upon arrival. Last year, however, the arrangement was not carried out, and when the steamer arrived with mails and passengers, the train had gone and there would be no other for some twenty hours. The hon. members for West Queen's and and East Queen's, and, I think, the hon. member for one of the Prince's, had to put their hands into their pockets and deposit a sufficient amount to hire a special train in order to bring the mails and passengers to Charlottetown. That is a condition of affairs we never experienced before and which should not exist. On one occasion when a large number of passengers came to Georgetown—a sufficient number to warrant, under ordinary circumstances, the railway department in running a special train—the local management declined to do so. The hon. member for West Queen's went to see the superintendent of the railway and offered to guarantee him against loss, provided the number of passengers were not sufficient to pay the ordinary railway fare, but still the superintendent refused, and my hon. colleague had to put up the whole of the money himself. On another occasion a number of commercial passengers arrived, they were several days late, the mails were late, and they wanted to get a train. It was necessary that the mails should be moved by a special train. But even under these circumstances the local management refused to provide a special train until one of the men deposited sufficient money, that is a dollar a mile for the number of miles the train had to go, some forty-six miles, and then they refused to carry the mails, and the mails had to remain over for another day. So great was the inconvenience and loss sustained by the people that the indignation expressed on every hand was something unprecedented in the history of that province.

Now, I cannot for a moment believe that the Minister of Railways or the minister of any other department would wish the officials of their departments to act in that way. I am sure they wish their officials to take into consideration difficulties of this kind as they arise, and to give the people the reasonable accommodation they have a right to call for. I trust that if an investigation has not already been held into this matter, that one will be held, and that no such acts as I have related here to-day will ever be allowed to take place again; I would suggest to the Minister of Marine and Fisheries that he take this matter into his consideration and make such arrangements as will put these boats, the 'Minto' and 'Stanley' in a first-class condition. It is now stated that the 'Stanley,' on account of her age and the rough usage she has endured for several years past, requires considerable repairs. If that is the case, I would suggest to the Minister of Marine and Fisheries that he look into this matter during the summer, and that at the same time he examine the condition of the steamer 'Minto' and put both these steamers in as good a condition as it is possible for him to do. I would suggest that he take the advice of the officers of those steamships, the officers of his own department, that he be guided by the experience of the last thirty years, and that at the close of the navigation of the summer season he place such boats on that route as thirty years' experience has shown to be necessary and practicable. I would also suggest that he give to the captains of those boats a larger measure of discretion, and that he hold the local officers of his department responsible for successfully carrying out that service, and if these men do not give the people satisfaction, that he put other men in their places. I would also suggest to the Minister of Railways that an arrangement be made by which a special train shall meet the winter steamers on their arrival, whether at Georgetown or Charlottetown, to carry the mails and passengers from the port to their destination on the Island. I think he should make such arrangements during this summer as will ensure a service fairly satisfactory to the people. If these arrangements are made during the coming summer, I believe that the service will be satisfactory. I hope, when the minister makes these arrangements, that he will not allow himself to be influenced in any way by the local advice he may receive.

Now, I object to a local board or a local committee having charge of these steamers, because, as I said before, the difficulties we have had to contend with last year will be intensified. Local influence and local prejudice will be brought to bear upon this board, and the service will not be satisfactorily carried out. We Prince Edward Islanders contend, and we have a right to contend, that the Dominion government should carry out the terms of union, the agreement stipulated at the time of confederation ; and if the government places the management of these steamers in charge of a local board or a local committee, the people will hold the government responsible for the non-fulfilment of the service and the bad management that will ensue. I think the departments in Ottawa should now be in possession of sufficient information to enable them to carry out this service in a satisfactory manner, and if they do not do so, then we shall know where the responsibility lies. If the local officials are responsible for the trouble that arose last year, as I believe they were largely responsible, then the Ministers must look after their officials, and the people will look after the ministers. I hope and trust that we will not have a repetition of the trouble of last year, to the great annoyance and loss, not only to the people of Prince Edward Island, but to the people of the other provinces, particularly of Nova Scotia, with which we have so much business and personal intercourse. I have much pleasure, Sir, in moving the motion which stands in my name.

Mr. ED. HACKETT (Prince West, P.E.I.) I want to say a few words on this very important matter. The question of the communication between Prince Edward Island and the mainland is no new question in this House : it has engaged the attention of this House from time to time since confederation. Since I have had the honour of representing a Prince Edward Island constituency in this House. I have endeavoured on several occasions to impress on hon. gentlemen occupying the treasury benches the great necessity of paying more attention to this matter than they have done in the past. The hon. gentleman from King's, P.E.I. (Mr. Hughes), in just speaking to his motion, has corroborated what I have stated heretofore, and it is not necessary for me to enter into details at the present time. But, Sir, he has made a statement this afternoon that condemns the present administration of Canada in relation to this matter. He says that the service last season was the worst since confederation. After all the advice that we have endeavoured to give these hon. gentlemen who occupy the treasury benches, and after all our endeavours to get them to do something tangible in the way of keeping up this communication, we have now a statement from the lips of one of their supporters who represents a constituency of Prince Edward Island, that the service during the past year was the worst since confederation. His statement strongly confirms other statements that have been made in this House before. I have been a little backward this session about raising the question, because so much has already been said in this House in regard to that matter, and I hoped the government would take action without any more urging. But since we have heard such a strong condemnation of the government from one of their own supporters, I think I am justified in referring to the subject once more.

The hon. gentleman has spoken of the great importance of this communication. We know that it is important, not only to the people living in the smallest, yet fairest, province of Canada, the province of Prince Edward Island, but to the people of all Canada from Vancouver to Sydney. I shall not repeat what the hon. gentleman has said about the terms of confederation. The maintenance of steam communication between Prince Edward Island and the mainland was one of the great inducements held out to the people of Prince Edward Island in 1873, when they threw in their lot with the people of Canada. This was largely the cause of Prince Edward Island becoming a member of this great confederation. But that pledge has not been fulfilled. I am afraid from what I have seen of battling with the ice in the Straits of Northumberland, that it will never be successfully maintained, and that we shall be obliged to resort to the plan suggested some years ago by Senator Howlan, a gentleman representing Prince Edward Island, and build a tunnel from Prince Edward Island to the mainland. The distance is only about eight miles. We know what great engineering feats are being accomplished in these days, and we have the opinion of Sir Douglas Fox, an eminent engineer of England, that this tunnel could be built and operated for $12,000,000. We have spent $12,000,000 on our railways last year without a word of objection. And here you have a province, that, under the terms of union was guaranteed continuous steam communication winter and summer, and the people of Canada who made that pledge are bound by that compact to put their hands in their pockets and so provide that that communication may be maintained, and they can only do it effectually by building this tunnel under the Straits of Northumberland.

The hon. gentleman has spoken of the trade that has developed since the winter steamers were built there. He spoke especially of the frozen fish trade of last winter. That trade has become of great importance to the island. Our young men go on the rivers and coasts in the winter and catch large quantities of fish and freeze them, and they expect the means of transporting them to the markets of the continent. Last year, twenty carloads of these fish were delayed at Georgetown, in consequence of the want of this communication. On my way to Ottawa, I travelled on the train with a young man who, though not having a great deal of capital has plenty of energy and enterprise, and he told me that he had seven ton of fish delayed, and they were a total loss. And he said to me : 'Now, when you go to Ottawa, you have good material to work with ; you can show that Canada, that the government of the Dominion are not carrying out the promise made at confederation in 1873.' We do not speak of this in any rebellious mood. We have no desire for secession. We are not doing as an hon. gentleman from Nova Scotia, now on the treasury benches in this House did—demanding secession from Canada. We are acting in the spirit of loyalty to Canadian institutions. But we insist that, as there is now on the treasury benches a gentleman who advocated secession on the part of Nova Scotia at the time when there was not half the justification for it that there is for Prince Edward Island, he and his colleagues shall carry out the promise made to furnish this means of communication; otherwise we may have to follow the example given us by the Hon. Minister of Finance.

The hon. gentleman (Mr. Hughes, King's) speaks of the severity of the winter. It may have been a cold and severe winter. When I crossed the Straits of Northumberland in a little ice-boat, such as has been in use for a hundred years on the Straits of Northumberland in winter, I said to myself : Here am I going to the parliament of Canada, sent by the people of one of the districts of Prince Edward Island, and I find that we are back to the same means of communication that the people of Prince Edward Island had long before confederation. A great deal of hardship and difficulty is entailed in crossing in these boats in the winter season, and not only should every effort be made to secure the passage of mails and goods, but particularly means should be provided by which the people may be able to cross without this discomfort and inconvenience in the winter season.

The hon. gentleman has spoken of a local committee. I agree with him ; it would be wrong for the government of Canada to delegate its powers in this matter to a local committee in Prince Edward Island. The government of Canada are responsible for this communication, and the people of Prince Edward Island and of the whole of Canada will hold the government to account for it. Therefore, I would not have the government delegate its powers to any local committee. As the hon. gentleman says, local interests might divide the committee, and good advice might not be given.

The hon. gentleman speaks of the captains, and says that the department should consult those officers. As I understand the instructions, they are that the captain is held responsible for the safety of his ship during the winter season while the ice is in the gulf. And, if he is a man of judgment, the captain ought to be able to navigate his vessel in the ice, seeing that it is specially built for such navigation, as an ordinary ship could be navigated in an ordinary season. The hon. gentleman refers to Captain Finlayson and Captain Brown. I do not find fault with either of these gentlemen. But what do we see in the case of Captain Brown. A heavy north-west wind prevailed when he was about to leave Summerside harbour. Every one knows, who has observed the movements of the ice, that the wind has a great effect upon it. Captain Brown was advised by his pilot to remain in the harbour and not attempt to cross to Cape Tormentine on that day. But he left the harbour contrary to the advice of his pilot, and when he got around the light at Seacow Head he ran his vessel into the board ice so that it received the heavy impact of the ice coming down the strait, and so was frozen in. The pilot is accustomed to the conditions of the ice, and, if the captain disregards his pilot's advice, it is quite fair that he should be held responsible for his action. I have nothing to say with regard to the captains. I believe they are good men. The man who is in command of his ship is the one who is held responsible for the safety of ship and cargo. And I think it would be wrong to criticise the action or conduct of the captain.

Another thing the hon. gentleman referred to was the mail service. And, no doubt, he included in that the management of the service under the present Postmaster General, as well as the management of the steamships under the Minister of Marine and Fisheries. And what does the hon. gentleman tell us ? He tells us, after all these years of confederation for Prince Edward Island—and I can corroborate his statements, for I am aware of the facts—that the Postmaster General will not pay for a train to convey the mail from Georgetown or Summerside to Charlottetown. So the business-men must wait until a wedding or a funeral takes place and the parties engage a special train, or some noble minded man will come forward and deposit the amount to pay for running a special train.

This being the terrible state of affairs as regards the mails of Prince Edward Island, I most fully corroborate what has been said by the hon. gentleman in that respect. The citizens of Charlottetown, Souris, Summerside, Alberton and Tignish, and all over the province were deprived of their mails because of the penuriousness and meanness of the government, and especially the hon. Postmaster General in not providing a train to convey these mails to their destinations. In this respect the government have failed to carry out the terms of confederation guaranteed to us at the time of union. The hon. Minister of Railways and Canals would have readily granted that train if the hon. Postmaster General had been willing to pay for it. The hon. Minister of Railways and Canals has plenty of trains, he has numbers of men to operate the trains, and he would have performed the service, but the hon. Postmaster General was so penurious that he would not pay $20 to convey these mails from Georgetown or Summerside to Charlottetown, and thus they had to remain over for twenty-four hours until the regular trains were run. Coming on towards the end of the season, when the people all over Prince Edward Island became indignant, because this is not a matter of Liberals or Conservatives, but the indignation was general all over the province, a gentleman was sent down from Ottawa who remained there for a few days. As soon as he arrived at Charlottetown he telegraphed to Ottawa and a special train was provided. Although the season had almost passed, although the time of the greatest difficulty, the time when the people suffered most from the want of their mails had almost passed, when navigation was in sight, a train was put on to convey these mails. I fully agree with what the hon. member for King's has said in connection with the matter. As I said before it is not my intention on this occasion to speak on the subject. For the last two years I have endeavoured to bring the matter to the attention of the House to the best of my ability. I now speak because of the motion of the hon. gentleman and I am pleased to think, that, after the third session of parliament since 1900, we have a supporter of the government from the province of Prince Edward Island corroborating every word I said here during the past three years and condemning the government in stronger language than I can condemn it in connection with this matter.

Mr. A. C. BELL (Pictou). Mr. Speaker, I would like to say a few words on this subject, because I do not think it is well that the House should get the impression that this is altogether a matter that affects the province of Prince Edward Island or that it is a matter in respect to which the members of this House from the other provinces of Canada have any feeling of indifference. I would like to say a few words from the knowledge I have, living as I do upon the Nova Scotia side of the strait, and being interested in the maintenance of the service, to corroborate all that has been said by the representatives of Prince Edward Island who have been heard here to-day. I am aware that successive governments have been charged by the citizens of Prince Edward Island with failing to carry out one of the very important provisions of the Act of Union between that province and the older parts of Canada, and I know perfectly well that successive governments have endeavoured to give a satisfactory service across the strait. I think, from the local knowledge I have of the situation, that they have now succeeded in providing a service by two steamers which is as good as anything that could be provided, short of tunnel service of which the hon. member for Prince West (Mr. Hackett) has just spoken, and which would be the complete and final solution of this difficulty that affects the people of Prince Edward Island. The tunnel question has not been heard of for a long time in practical politics ; nevertheless, I have a strong impression that some day or other it will again come to the front and at a time when the greatly increased facilities for excavating tunnels and the advantage of cheap money will render the scheme a feasible one. We might expect to see the government of Canada in the position, if the rate of interest should continue to fall as it has been doing for a long time, of being able to undertake to give Prince Edward Island connection with the mainland by means of a tunnel. It would not be a very bad financial operation. The cost can be easily ascertained and in consequence of the great improvement that has taken place in the method of excavating tunnels and of the cheapening of money, the cost is something that is diminishing every day.

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. Is there an estimate of the cost ?

Mr. BELL. Yes.

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. What is the amount of the estimate ?

Mr. BELL. I think about $14,000,000 ; there were two or three estimates for tunnels of various sizes, but the one that would give a satisfactory passage to a modern locomotive would cost somewhere in the neighbourhood of $14,000,000.

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. What is the length of it ?

Mr. BELL. Nine miles. It is becoming every day more and more feasible. As far as the length of the tunnel is concerned, it is not unprecedented. At this moment, in Europe, a tunnel is nearing completion which is eleven miles in length, and it seems to have been constructed with comparative ease and with comparative absence of loss of life to the men employed. I think that the investigations made at the time that that question was to the front showed that the stratum through which the tunnel would be excavated would admit of comparatively easy work. I do not think that the government is prepared to consider at this moment a tunnel seriously, but they have, in my opinion, in steamship communication, the means of connecting almost perfectly Prince Edward Island and the mainland if the service be handled in a satisfactory manner. But, in the course of the past winter, the hon. member for King's, P.E.I. (Mr. Hughes) informs us, that we have had the worst service we have ever had since confederation. I do not think he is altogether right in that respect, because, during some of the years since confederation, people were confined to the old-fashioned mode of reaching the mainland, by the primitive ice-boat. Still, as steam communication has been adopted, I presume he meant to say that more difficulty has occurred in relation to steam communication during the past winter than in any other year. That is entirely owing to one circumstance. If no attempt had been made to keep up communication between Summerside and Cape Tormentine or, if that attempt had been abandoned when the increasing severity of the winter made it hazardous and the communication maintained entirely between Pictou and Georgetown by the two boats, giving every facility for passenger and freight communication, would have been in constant operation during the whole of the winter. It would not be fair to condemn the service simply because the experiment tried in response to the representations from a very important section of Prince Edward Island resulted in imprisoning one of the steamers in the ice floe, and because the attempt of one of the other steamers to get out of that difficulty resulted in breaking her propellor and the second steamer was incapaciated, thus nullifying the whole of the service for several weeks. Instead of diminishing the communication by the established route which time has proven to be a safe and satisfactory one, an experiment was made involving one of the steamers, imprisoning her in the ice and making her absolutely useless for the purpose for which she was placed in the service. The matter is perfectly obvious to any person acquainted with the conditions there that while Charlottetown and Summerside are the most important points, and while mail communication must be kept up uninterruptedly in the summer season when winter comes the conditions change and if there is to be a regular communication between Pictou and the mainland that communication must pass via Pictou and Georgetown. That has been satisfactorily and conclusively proven by the experience of the years in which our race has inhabited this country. I would not altogether go so far as to condemn the government for having yielded to the request of the people of the western part of the island to try the experiment, but I think they have sufficient warning in the experience of the past winter to prevent them from resorting to that experiment in the future. If they do adhere to the winter service route between Pictou and Georgetown with two such steamers as the 'Stanley' and the 'Minto,' we can count on having regular communication between Prince Edward Island and Nova Scotia in the winter season. It is true that this has been a severe winter; still, not so severe as some others I can recollect in my own life. It has been a severe winter, and yet I am quite satisfied it was not the severity of the winter which interrupted the communication—it was the fact of having sent the 'Stanley' to run into the port of Summerside where she was caught under unfavourable conditions and that accident resulted not only in losing her service to the country, but also the loss of the service of the steamer 'Minto' as well. There are reasons why it would be very agreeable to people living in Prince Edward Island that communication should be kept up with Charlottetown and Summerside direct, but it is impossible to do that in winter with any facilities that could be commanded by the government, no matter what the expenditure of the government might be in the shape of steamers or ice breakers. Across the mouth of these ports where the water is shallow the drifting ice gets in and under pressure of great weight there is a solid wall of ice formed through which nothing that floats can make its way. On the other hand the port of Georgetown is always accessible and the port of Pictou is comparatively accessible as well. If the government find itself, with means at their disposal to keep open a communication which is feasible and which has been proved in the past to be feasible, I do not think that the same interruption of commerce will result in any future winter. It is very deplorable, and every one regrets it, that our friends of Prince Edward Island have been subjected to such great loss, and one of the reasons for speaking to-day is to show that we in Nova Scotia have a great feeling of sympathy for our friends and brothers in Prince Edward Island and would like the government of Canada to do everything in their power to satisfactorily fulfil the terms of the Act of Confederation. There is one suggestion which I would make, and it is merely a suggestion. We have heard a good deal in the course of the discussion to-day from the two hon. gentlemen who have spoken, about the defectiveness of the railway service in Prince Edward Island, to the effect that trains were not ready at the moment the boats arrived to take the passengers and mails and freight. We have heard a good deal of censure applied to the hon. Postmaster General. No doubt he deserves a good deal of it and he is fortunately of sufficient stature and breadth of shoulder to bear his burden without feeling much affected by it. But it does strike me that the chief ground of complaint is, that there is some defect in the history of the organization of the whole of this service. These boats are run under the Department of Marine and Fisheries. Why should not this steamer service be treated as the service across the Straits of Canso, and these boats be regarded simply as a ferry; a portion of the Intercolonial railway; a part of the service connecting the Intercolonial railway with the government railway on Prince Edward Island. If such were the case you would have concerted action and there would be no excuse whatever for failure on the part of the railway controlling these boats to serve them at every landing place with trains and afford every facility for moving passengers and freight. Were that done it would give to the control of the service a large and competent staff of officials who are at Moncton and at Truro and Pictou. The railway men under the officers of the Department of the Minister of Railways and Canals are perfectly conversant with the conditions of weather, and to my mind they would much more satisfactorily and effectively control and regulate the movements of these boats than they will ever be controlled and regulated as long as they are under a department which has not any direct connection with the great system of railways which must serve to feed these boats, and which these boats must always serve in the capacity of ferries. I do not conceive for my part that the greater distance between Pictou and Georgetown, or Summerside or Cape Tormentine constitute any reason why these boats should not be regarded as ferry boats, and as a portion of the government system of railways just as are the ferry boats which to-day are carrying the traffic of the Intercolonial railway across the Strait of Canso. There are tremendous difficulties also at Canso and this last winter in order to overcome these difficulties, under the management of my friend the Minister of Railways and Canals, a special manager to take complete charge of the ferryage across that strait was put in charge, and the result has been very great efficiency. As every one who has travelled that route knows there are tremendous difficulties of ice and tide to be encountered in the Strait of Canso just as well as in the Straits of Northumberland. I would suggest that this matter be taken into careful consideration and it may be that the result will show that the concentration of the management of the whole service in one hand will result in giving far greater efficiency.

If there be any doubt in the mind of the department that now controls or that will hereafter control these boats as to the proper points for them to make in Nova Scotia or New Brunswick, all they have to do is to consult the experienced captains, pilots, and coasters; those whose business requires them to navigate these waters; to be satisfied at once and for ever that the proper points between which these boats should play, are, after the hard part of the winter comes, Georgetown and Pictou. Up to the end of the year, and perhaps in the month of January the water is so free from ice that even if there would be a somewhat great degree of frost there is no difficulty whatever in keeping up the navigation because at that time the water is perfectly clear and open as it is in summer. But when we have entered upon a new year—

The MINISTER OF RAILWAYS AND CANALS. It was in January that the 'Stanley' was caught in the ice.

Mr. BELL. It may be the first part of January but sometimes the whole month of January is free from ice. It is after we enter the month of January that the trouble comes. In the months of January and February we experience the great difficulties of that navigation.

The MINISTER OF RAILWAYS AND CANALS. The 'Stanley' first got into the ice on the 12th of January.

Mr. BELL. At Summerside, and she was then caught in the board ice, not in the heavy floe and drift ice which later on is found in the straits.

The MINISTER OF RAILWAYS AND CANALS. She was caught fast enough.

Mr. BELL. Up to the end of the year it may be possible to navigate between these points, but the real difficulties commence in the month of January and last through February and possibly a part of March. If this service is to be maintained in the proper way, I think it is absolutely essential that the government should make itself perfectly understood as having a decided opinion that the service must be continued by Pictou and Georgetown.

Mr. H. R. EMMERSON (Westmoreland). As I represent the constituency lying nearest to Prince Edward Island on the mainland, I hope I may be pardoned if I say a few words in respect to the motion now before the House. It seems to me that it is not so much a question of administration as it is a question of conditions. It may not be known to all the members of this House that until the year 1902 the only attempt at steamer navigation between the mainland and Prince Edward Island was by way of the ports of Pictou and Georgetown. During the season of 1902 an attempt was made to have winter communication between the port of Summerside in Prince Edward Island and Cape Tormentine on the New Brunswick shore. During that winter the 'Stanley' ran with very great regularity and the experiment was a success as an attempt to solve the problem of communication between Prince Edward Island and the mainland during the winter months. During the present winter the conditions which have prevailed practically made that route somewhat of a failure. I do not say that it has been demonstrated to be an actual failure but certainly under the conditions which have prevailed during the past winter it has not been a success. The difficulty prevailing with respect to winter communication with Prince Edward Island has been—the hon. members from Prince Edward Island will, I hope, pardon me for saying it—has been to some extent sectional. The people of the eastern section of the Island have been very desirous of having communication between the port of Pictou and Georgetown. The western people, that is, those living in the county of Prince, have been very anxious to have communication with the port of Summerside; hence the attempt during the past two seasons to have communication between Summerside and a New Brunswick port. Now, I think it has been demonstrated during the past winter that while boats could not successfully run from the port of Summerside to the port of Cape Tormentine, they could run every day of the year without exception between Cape Tormentine and what is known as Carleton Head or Carleton Point. It will be borne in mind that the distance between Georgetown on Prince Edward Island and Pictou harbour is somewhere in excess of thirty miles, and that the distance between Tormentine and Summerside is about eighteen miles, whereas the distance between Carleton Head and Cape Tormentin is about eight miles.

Now, the question may be asked, why did the 'Stanley' not run between Cape Tormentine and Carleton Head? At Cape Traverse many years ago the government of Canada built a breakwater, which is still there, a monument of a large expenditure of money; but it is impossible for a steamer of any considerable size such as the 'Stanley' to approach that point. The breakwater extends out into the sand bar, and is unapproachable. I do not know for what reason that breakwater was built; but if it were at Carleton Head, there would not be the slightest difficulty of running a steamer to that point every single day during the winter months, without exception—why? Because the action of the tides and the currents is such that twice during every twenty-four hours, or once during every twelve hours, there is an open sea between Cape Tormentine and Carleton Head.

It seems to me this is a matter of importance not merely to Prince Edward Island, but to the Dominion of Canada at large. The trade of that island is very large indeed, It is a very fruitful island and a rich one; and the people of the mainland must be deeply interested in having regular communication with the island, not merely during the summer months, but throughout the year. The matter of their daily mail must be one of supreme importance to the people of the Island. We on the mainland do not suffer in that respect, and in that respect alone this is perhaps exclusively an island question. If there were established at Carleton Head terminal facilities for the 'Stanley' or any other steamer, there is no question that there would be practically a ferry; if more than one service a day were wanted, I believe it could be had. But there can be no question as to the one service. I am warranted in asserting that, by reason of information which I have received from gentlemen who are in no way interested in this matter, who have no sectional views, and who are well informed as to the conditions which prevail in the seasons which are most severe, and are particularly familiar with the conditions that have prevailed during the months of January, February and March of this year.

Now, if the hon. Minister of Marine and Fisheries is desirous of taking into consideration this question, and will inquire into the conditions which I have described as existing at Carleton Head, I feel sure that having secured the necessary information and having provided the breakwater at Carleton Head, he will have solved the question of winter communication, without reference to a tunnel, which may come in the distant future, but which we must all admit cannot come within the immediate future. We who live on the mainland and who look at this matter dispassionately, are, I think, in a position to invite the people of Prince Edward Island, in considering this matter, to sink any sectional differences as to whether the eastern end or the western end of the island shall receive the greatest accommodation. If they have a daily communication between the mainland and the island at a point almost equidistant between Summerside and Charlottetown, their wants will be satisfied, and the requirements of the country will be satisfied. Until the unfortunate accident which occurred to the 'Stanley' resulting in her being frozen in the ice on the seaboard, commonly called board ice, there was almost continuous communication daily between Summerside and Cape Tormentine. Now, there was considerable complaint with respect to the mail communication, and I am bound to say that the arrangements made for the conveyance of mails between the Intercolonial Railway and the 'Stanley' were not satisfactory, for the reason that the mails coming from the west on the Intercolonial Railway and arriving at Sackville at about five o'clock in the evening, had to remain at Sackville, unless there happened to be a special train going, until one o'clock the following day, when they were shipped on the New Brunswick and Prince Edward Island Railway and conveyed to Cape Tormentine. The 'Stanley' leaves at about two o'clock in the afternoon; so that the mails arrive at Cape Tormentine about an hour and a half or two hours after the 'Stanley's' departure, and there they remain until the following day at two o'clock with the result that they do not reach Summerside until perhaps five o'clock on the succeeding day. Thus it takes forty-eight hours to convey the mails from Sackville on the Intercolonial Railway to Summerside; that is, assuming that the 'Stanley' was making her regular trips, and I am bound to say she did make her regular trips for a number of weeks until the accident happened to which I have referred. But, at least this can be said, that with open water for a distance of eight miles from board ice to board ice, every day during the winter months, there can be no question of the possibility of regular communication between Prince Edward Island and the mainland. I admit it is imperative that the representatives of Prince Edward Island should be united upon this one thing at least, as it is of vital importance to them to have daily communications with the mainland whether it be at Georgetown, Summerside or Carleton Head.

Mr. J. J. HUGHES (King's, P.E.I.) Just one word of explanation, Mr. Speaker. The information I have been able to obtain from seafaring men is not quite in accord with what the hon. gentleman states. He argues that where the straits are narrow, must necessarily be the best place for winter navigation. But seafaring men and others who have given some study to this question, say that where the straits are the narrowest, namely, between Carleton Head and Cape Tormentine, the ice has a tendency to pack, owing to the westerly and north-westerly winds which prevail during the autumn and early winter. Consequently where the straits are narrowest navigation is most difficult, but that is the best place for a small boat to cross because you can drag a small boat along on top of the ice. That is why the small boats, which keep up navigation when the steamers are not able to run, find between Carleton and Cape Tormentine the best crossing. My hon. friend says that every twelve hours the tide and the wind form a lake of open water between Carleton Head and Cape Tormentine, which steamers might cross if breakwaters were erected on which they could land their cargoes. But my information is that these lakes do not form always in the same place. It depends upon the winds and the tides, and this open water may be half a mile distant to-morrow from where it is to-day. Consequently a breakwater might be good to-day and be half a mile out of the proper place to-morrow. This is the information I have, and while I would not discourage investigation into the possibilities of navigating the straits between these two points, I think that the hon. minister would be well advised in acting slowly before committing his department to any large expenditure. The people of Prince Edward Island want this service kept up at the best place. On that point we are unanimous, but we do not want any more experiments. Twenty-five or thirty years experience has shown that between Georgetown and Pictou a fairly satisfactory and reasonable service can be maintained until we get another steamer. I believe the time has come when we shall require three steamers. Our trade has so increased that we require now a third steamer, nearly as much as we did a second steamer when the 'Minto' was built. I am sure that the rest of Canada will be glad to know that our interprovincial trade is so increasing that we require greater facilities for carrying it in. We are not sectional in this matter and are glad to see in every portion of Canada trade increasing. We have the greatest country under the sun, and development, not only in the younger but in the older provinces, is going on by leaps and bounds. This demand by Prince Edward Island for another steamer is an additional proof of what I say. There is another point to which I would like to call attention, and that is the fact that although we have a government railway system from Montreal to Charlottetown and from Charlottetown to Halifax, travellers cannot get through tickets or their baggage checked through. A person leaving Charlottetown for Halifax or Montreal has to buy a ticket on the Prince Edward Island railway, then another on the boats to Pictou, and then another to Halifax, Truro or Montreal. He has to get his baggage checked three times. That is a very great inconvenience.

The MINISTER OF RAILWAYS AND CANALS. That is not the case during the summer.

Mr. HUGHES (King's, P.E.I.) No, but it is during the winter. If the officials of the department will seriously consider this matter we could make a better arrangement. I think it is they who are wholly to blame, because we cannot expect the minister himself to attend to these small matters. But it is these small things which occasion so much trouble, inconvenience and annoyance to the travelling public.

The MINISTER OF RAILWAYS AND CANALS (Hon. A. G. Blair). I am very much surprised to hear that it has not been found possible or practicable by the railway officials to arrange for through tickets and checking of baggage to and from the island. I am aware that during the summer season, when we have to deal with a private corporation, there is no difficulty at all, and through ticketing and checking are gone on with without any trouble. No doubt the officials of Charlottetown, who are chiefly interested in this branch of the question, have been making every effort to remedy this, and I do not know why they have not succeeded in effecting some through ticket arrangement with the steamers under the management of my hon. friend the Minister of Marine and Fisheries. I shall have great pleasure in instituting inquiries at once and finding out where the fault lies. It ought to be an easy matter for the two departments or three—if three are concerned—to come to an understanding which will ensure the convenience of the travelling public. As regards what my hon. friend has said about the delays at Georgetown and the inability to secure train connections there, I can only say that this is the first time I have learned that trouble of that kind had arisen, either this year or last. I asked my hon. friend if he had previously communicated with my department, and he does not remember distinctly whether it was with mine or some other department that communications took place. My own pretty strong conviction is that it was not with my department, because I would consider it a very serious grievance to have mails and passengers delayed many hours in consequence of the failure of the steamer to arrive on time to make connection with ordinary trains. I think that the train arrangements on the island are made in such a way as to connect with the steamers, if they arrive on schedule time or nearly that time.

As anybody can see at once, a through train, which has brought passengers from some distance still further east, cannot be detained at the point of connection with the steamer. It is necessary that that train shall continue on its journey with as little delay as possible. No one would think that that train should be kept at the point of connection with the steamer until the steamer arrives, for the steamer may be many hours late. But, if while the passengers who have been delayed at Pictou and have reached Georgetown, should be detained there for many hours, I do not see why the mails which are brought to Georgetown for transmission and distribution throughout the island should be kept for many hours for the want or the absence of a train or the want of through connection. Of course, that is not a matter that I can deal with wholly within my own department. But I apprehend it could be settled without serious trouble between the hon. Postmaster General and myself. I am sure that he is alive to the necessity of furnishing all necessary facilities and accommodation to the public in the matter of train service. By co-operating, we could secure, and would secure that necessary accommodation. My hon. colleague would have a duty cast upon him, and I should be required to see that the trains were carried forward without delay, and so the duty would be cast upon me of considering any proposition he might make for the sending forward of the mail. Of course, he would not expect that the mail should be carried for nothing. But the exchange of reasonable views would lead to the settlement of a matter of that sort. I think it will be possible to avoid an occurrence of the kind referred to. I am not sufficiently informed of the advantages of the various routes offering communication between the island and the mainland to make any suggestion. I do, however, know this, and I think the travelling public feel it, that if it were possible to make the direct connection from Cape Tormentine to some point on the island a few miles distant—my hon. friend (Mr. Hughes, King's) says eight miles—it would be a convenience which would be much appreciated by the very great number of people who travel from and to the west. There are many passengers desiring to reach Prince Edward Island, a great deal of freight and much mail matter for distribution on the island, which now has to travel all the way round by Pictou, a distance, I should think, of somewhere between 150 and 200 miles further than it would go if it could make the short connection at Cape Tormentine. The people would receive their mails and travellers would reach their destination many hours earlier than under the present arrangements. So far as light has been thrown upon it, it seems that the way by Pictou and Georgetown is the easiest and safest mode of making communication. But I think the suggestion made during the discussion, that inquiry might be made whether or not a safe mode of crossing could be insured between Cape Tormentine and Carleton Point, is one which might well receive the consideration of the department.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES (Hon. Raymond Préfontaine). I have but a few remarks to make on the motion before the Chair. I have only to give, to a certain extent, the facts as they are contained in the correspondence that will be filed. Of course, this consists of letters and telegrams relating to instructions given to the officers in Prince Edward Island and on the steamers on the route. According to the information I have procured in the department, the instructions were the same as were given for the season of navigation for 1902. The experience in 1902 of having steamers on the two lines—this is before I came to the department, of course—had shown that this method was a success, according to what I am told. So, last fall, the 'Stanley' was placed upon the route between Summerside and Cape Tormentine. She became ice-bound on January 12, and was not released until March 17. The 'Minto' was placed, as on the year previous, on the route between Georgetown and Pictou. But when the 'Stanley' was caught in the ice, the 'Minto' was sent to her assistance. The ice being extremely heavy—it appears that in certain places it was as much as fourteen feet in thickness—the 'Minto' broke the blades of her propeller, and so was rendered helpless until the 'Stanley' got clear and towed her into Pictou. There is no doubt that, if an error was made, the department should not be blamed. The two ports to which the ferries cross had been fixed at the demand of the members for Prince Edward Island. The correspondence will show that, for years and years, those hon. gentlemen had been demanding that the line should be established between Summerside and Cape Tormentine. It stands to reason that, with the severe winter we had this year, when one of the boats was caught in the ice, there was nothing to do but send the other one to its rescue. And that is what was done, and it was the cause of the whole trouble. The correspondence will show there was no error on the part of the officers in charge of the 'Stanley.' And to save the boat, which is a valuable one, the officers of the department thought there was nothing to do but send the 'Minto' to her release. The 'Minto' did not succeed in releasing the 'Stanley,' on the contrary, she was herself disabled, and is now undergoing repairs. She is not seriously damaged, but she could not continue on the line. The service has been resumed since March 17, and it has given satisfaction. I shall make inquiries during the coming season in order to ascertain what is the best line to adopt. But it seems perfectly clear that the old line between Georgetown and Pictou was the best, because there was scarcely any interruption when the two steamers were put on that line. Since 1902 the officers of the department have been endeavouring to improve the service, and if, unfortunately, they did not succeed last winter, I do not think the department should be blamed for the accident that occurred. As regards the building of some other and stronger boats than those now employed, that is a very serious question. There is in the department correspondence to the effect that an iceboat of special construction, of somewhat the same kind as they have in Russia, on the Baltic Sea, might be put on that line. I am informed, however, that the conditions of the two places are not the same. In Russia, where they have iceboats running during the winter that go through ice from two to four feet thick, they do not encounter masses of ice like those in the Straits of Northumberland. According to the information that I have received, it is impossible to construct boats that will go through a pack of ice from ten or fourteen to twenty feet in thickness. Of course, I shall continue my endeavours to get all the information possible in order to be able to decide on the best course to pursue.

Hon. Mr. HAGGART. Is the ice ever fourteen feet thick between Georgetown and Pictou ?

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. No ; that was on the route between Summerside and Cape Tormentine. The fact is that the 'Minto' could have continued in crossing and giving the communication if she had not been called upon to go to the relief of the 'Stanley.' We tried to get some other steamers, we even tried to get two boats from Newfoundland, and the crew of one of these boats started to go to the relief of the 'Stanley' and discovered that it was impossible to reach her, packed as she was in the ice. All possible means were used. Men were sent out with dynamite who tried to break the ice pack, but they were quite unable to do so, and it was only when nature came to the rescue of the 'Stanley' that she was got out of that ice, otherwise she would have been obliged to stay there until spring. I have no objection whatever to the correspondence being brought before the House, because I think it will show all the facts to be as I have stated. I may say again that the department will make all necessary inquiries into the case, and during the recess I will personally visit Prince Edward Island and the maritime provinces and make myself cognizant of the situation.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). I would like to ask the hon. gentleman whether he made any investigation as to the conditions between Cape Tormentine and Summerside before changing the route, which, as I understand, was formerly from Pictou to Georgetown ?

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. We did not change the route, but we took two routes instead of one, in order to give the people of Prince Edward Island the better accommodation that they were asking for. In 1902 the service was divided. The 'Minto' was left on the old line between Georgetown and Pictou, and the 'Stanley' was put on the other line, which was considered last fall perfectly safe, because it had been in operation during the winter of 1902.

Mr. HACKETT. I would like the minister to explain how it is, if the same conditions do not prevail as regards the thickness of the ice between Pictou and Georgetown as between Cape Tormentine and Summerside, that the 'Minto' had to go to the rescue of the 'Stanley' between Pictou and Georgetown. Did the 'Stanley' take the field of ice with her or did the ice take the 'Stanley'?

Motion agreed to.

HAY AND OATS BOUGHT FOR THE IMPERIAL GOVERNMENT.

On the Order for:

Copies of all Orders in Council and all correspondence between the imperial government or any departmental officer thereof, and the government of Canada, or any department, or officer thereof; and all reports respecting the purchase in Canada, by or through the government of Canada, or any department, or officer thereof, of any horses, hay, oats, material, supplies, animals, or merchandise, for the imperial government, or any department, or officer thereof, during the years 1900, 1901, and 1902.—Mr. Borden (Halifax).

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). The other day this motion stood at the request of the Minister of Finance.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE (Hon. W. S. Fielding). If the hon. gentleman wishes to proceed, I am willing.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). I understood from the hon. gentleman that probably there were some papers that he would be willing to bring down.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. Yes.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). It might stand for the present, and in the meantime the hon. gentleman will indicate those that he is willing to bring down, so that I may come to a conclusion as to whether it is necessary to speak to the motion.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. If the hon. gentleman will make his motion now, I will state the view I have of it.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). I may require to speak upon it afterwards. Perhaps the hon. gentleman would indicate to me his views at some convenient time.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. I will do that personally.

Order allowed to stand.

EMPLOYEES OF PUBLIC WORKS DEPARTMENT.

Mr. LEONARD—by Mr. Borden (Halifax)—moved for:

Return showing:

1. The number of employees appointed in the Public Works Department since the 21st October, 1902.
2. Their names and their salaries.
3. The changes made amongst the employees; the names and the salaries of those who have been replaced or promoted, as well as the reasons for such changes.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS (Hon. James Sutherland). Mr. Speaker, I do not think there can be any objection to the motion. I do not think there have been any appointments, or changes, during the time mentioned. However, if there are, we will bring down the information.

Motion agreed to.

MOTIONS AGREED TO WITHOUT DISCUSSION.

1. The quantity of vegetables entered at the custom-house at Montreal, as imported from the United States, from the first of February, 1902, to the first of March, 1903.
2. The quantity of vegetables entered at the custom-house at Toronto, as imported from the United States, from the first of February, 1902, to the first of March, 1903.
3. The amount of duty levied and collected in each case respectively.—Mr. Monk—by Mr. Borden (Halifax).

Copies of all telegrams, reports, letters, photographs, and correspondence, of every description, between the Department of Agriculture and any person, or persons, whatsoever, relevant to the outbreak of hog cholera in the township of Yarmouth, Ontario.—Mr. Ingram.

Return of all papers, documents, and correspondence between the Department of Railways and Canals, the Department of Justice, the Treasury Board, and the Auditor General, or between any of them, relating to the promotion of Mr. F. A. Dixon to the rank of Chief clerk, at a salary of $1,800 a year; to take effect from July 1, 1902, and the payment of said salary; and including amongst other papers the report of the deputy head of the Department of Railways and Canals, as provided for by subsection (a) of section 15 of the Civil Service Act; the Minute or Memorandum of concurrence of the Minister of Railways in said Report; and a copy of the Order in Council creating such chief clerkship; pursuant to section 15 of said Act, and of the Order in Council in this matter of May 20, 1902; and including all papers, documents, letters and proceedings, in this matter, referred to on pages A—49, 50, 51, 52, 53, 54 and 55 of the Auditor General's Report for the year ending June, 1902.—Mr. Lennox.

Statement in detail of amounts paid for travelling expenses in connection with the Census of 1891, to any census commissioner, in the province of Quebec, since June 30, 1902; with names of officers to whom such travelling expenses were paid ; and the places such officer travelled to.—Mr. Monk—by Mr. Borden (Halifax).

Copies of all correspondence, representations, memoranda, Minutes or Orders in Council, appointments, instructions, papers and writings, in reference to or in connection with railway cattle guards or in reference to, or in connection with the selection or appointment of the cattle-guard commission, and the members thereof ; and their action and proceedings, including the retirement of Mr. Robertson, and the appointment of Mr. F. W. Holt, C.E., as sole commissioner, and his instructions and subsequent proceedings ; and including all interim reports by the original or subsequent commission, between the date of the report of the Railway Committee of last session on the Lancaster Bill No. 3 of last session, and this date.—Mr. Lennox.

RAILWAY SUBSIDIES.

House in Committee on Bill (No. 2) to amend chapter 8 of the Statutes of 1900, authorizing the granting of railway subsidies.—Mr. Charlton.

On section 1.

Hon. Mr. HAGGART. What is the length of this road and what is the total amount to be expended on it ? Why is it that you wish the sum reduced from $60,000 to $30,000.

Mr. THOMPSON (Haldimand and Monck). I may say to the hon. gentleman (Hon. Mr. Haggart) that there is no particular road mentioned. I believe it merely proposes the general principle of reducing the amount of the payment from $60,000 to $30,000 to meet the case of short roads where the expenditure is not sufficiently large to permit of an application as the statute stands. The matter was before the Railway Committee, discussed there and carried unanimously.

Hon. Mr. HAGGART. The old law was that the road must be completed in ten mile sections. It must be less than a ten mile section that you wish to apply this provision to. Why should not a short road of say 6, 7 or 8 miles be completed before the application is made.

Mr. THOMPSON (Haldimand and Monck). I am afraid my hon. friend has me somewhat at a disadvantage. I am moving this in a formal way in the absence of the hon. member who is promoting the Bill. It was discussed in committee but I have not the same familiarity with the matter which he has. Of course, if the hon. gentleman takes exception, it will have to stand.

Hon. Mr. HAGGART. I have no objection to the Bill, but I do not know to what it is proposed to apply this principle. This is to amend the principle which was introduced into the Railway Act only to give progress estimates in connection with the construction of railways where the amount earned is $60,000. This proposes to reduce the amount so as to enable the government to give a progress estimate on the amount of the subsidy earned when the amount is only $30,000. It is possible that the railway may be a very short one but that is all the more reason why the principle should be retained, and the subsidy should not be paid unless the whole road is constructed. I am opposed to the principle entirely. I think it is wrong to give progress estimates on a road a large proportion of which may not be completed and which may not be of any benefit to the country.

Mr. THOMPSON (Haldimand and Monck). I understood the Minister of Railways and Canals (Hon. Mr. Blair) to say during the progress of the discussion at the Railway Committee that progress estimates were very likely to be done away with before a very great while.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE (Hon. W. S. Fielding). There was a question as to whether or not it was wise to have the system of progress estimates at all. The view the hon. Minister of Railways and Canals took was that inasmuch as we had that principle in the Act at present he thought there would be no injustice in placing the amount at $30,000 which would enable smaller roads to obtain the advantage of the system, whereas, at present, it can only apply to large undertakings. There was some question in the minutes of the Railway Committee as to whether progress estimates were wise at all, but since we have them and since they apply to large enterprises only, it was thought, in the view of the committee, that there would be no injustice in allowing it to be made more favourable to the smaller companies which might receive $30,000 which they cannot receive as long as the sum is fixed at $60,000.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). That desire will be satisfied by an amendment providing that the amount should be reduced to $30,000 in case of railways not exceeding a certain length.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. I think practically that is the way it works out.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). The Act is of perfectly general application at present. Even if the road was fifty or one hundred miles long, this Bill would apply to it.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. Yes.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). What the hon. gentleman suggests has some force in it, perhaps, but I should think the proper way to amend the statute would be by stating that where a road is only of a certain length, where it does not exceed ten, fifteen or twenty miles, then you may make payments where the amount earned is $30,000. I do not know whether that view was suggested in the Railway Committee or not.

Bill reported.

DOMINION ELECTIONS ACT, 1900—AMENDMENT.

Mr. J. CLANCY (Bothwell) moved the second reading of Bill (No. 15) to amend the Dominion Elections Act, 1900. He said:—I would like to ask the Minister of Justice if he is prepared to adopt this Bill? The reason I ask the question is that there seems to be some difference of opinion between the hon. leader of the opposition and the hon. Minister of Justice as to whether the offence proposed to be dealt with in this Bill is covered by the present law. I take it for granted that if the present law does not cover the offence, the Minister of Justice will accept the remedy provided in this Bill.

The MINISTER OF JUSTICE (Hon. C. Fitzpatrick). My opinion still is that the provision of this Bill is already covered by the existing law. I believe that the words in section 112, 'in any manner practices intimidation on or against any person' are sufficiently broad to cover the evil which my hon. friend complains of.

Mr. CLANCY. The hon. minister will see that it was thought necessary to specifically state in section 112 what were the offences, and after having stated them specifically, then it concludes by saying 'or in any manner practices intimidation upon or against any person.' The offence that my Bill proposes to remedy is just as definite in its nature as any of those specifically mentioned in section 112, but it is not mentioned in that section. The offence I am endeavouring to remedy is as far-reaching in its effects as any already stated in the statute. I am not a lawyer, but taking a common sense view of it, it does seem to me that the existing law leaves the matter so indefinite that it would be difficult to prove in a court the particular intimidation spoken of in my Bill as an offence under the law. I am sure that the Minister of Justice will sympathize with our position in the province of Ontario. Every one knows that we have not a secret ballot in the local elections, and unfortunately that fact is used as a means of intimidation. Then, when the federal elections come on the voters are told that the Dominion ballot, like the provincial ballot, is not secret, and so voters are intimidated. That is the offence which I want to punish. Perhaps the language used in my Bill may not exactly describe the offence which I intend to punish, but if not the Minister of Justice can substitute such other words which will have the intended effect. Of course, if the Minister of Justice takes the ground that such an act of intimidation should not be punished, that is another story, but if he does admit that such gross intimidation should be prevented by the law, then I think he should accept my Bill.

The MINISTER OF JUSTICE. What does the hon. gentleman wish to punish by his Bill?

Mr. CLANCY. I have already explained and the language in my Bill is clear upon the point. It says: Or makes use of any language to the effect that the ballot to be used or the mode of voting at the elections is not secret.'

The MINISTER OF JUSTICE. Is it the intention to prohibit the use of these words, because they may be a form of intimidation?

Mr. CLANCY. Not 'may be,' but are, as a matter of fact.

The MINISTER OF JUSTICE. The answer to that question shows the absolute necessity of the position I take, and shows how absolutely useless are the words suggested in the amendment, because if they describe a form of intimidation, the statute brings it within the operation of the law.

Mr. CLANCY. It might be a question with the judge whether they were acts of intimidation. He might take a different view.

Mr. DEPUTY SPEAKER. This discussion is getting somewhat irregular at this stage. Would it not be better to allow the Bill to go to committee?

Motion agreed to, Bill read the second time, and House went into committee thereon.

On section 1.

Mr. INGRAM. The words that follow the word 'loss' in section 112 read: 'Or in any manner practices intimidation upon or against any person in order to induce such person to vote or to refrain from voting.' I think the contention of the Minister of Justice would be a very proper one if the offence were a means of intimidating any person to vote or to refrain from voting. That is not the complaint of the mover of the Bill at all. What he complains of is that by reason of being told that the ballot is not a secret ballot, the voter, instead of voting in the way he would have voted, is influenced on the opposite side.

The MINISTER OF JUSTICE. That case is covered by the provision against interfering with a voter in the free exercise of his franchise. Would it not be an interference with the free exercise of the franchise by any person to tell him that you know how he is going to vote?

Mr. HENDERSON. I think it would be a very serious interference with the rights of a voter for another elector to tell him that when the election was over he would know how he voted. The Bill of my hon. friend from Bothwell has a special application to the province of Ontario, and perhaps for that reason the hon. Minister of Justice does not see the great necessity for the change, he living in the province of Quebec, where there is an absolutely secret ballot for provincial electoral purposes. Unfortunately in the province of Ontario we have not such, nor have we had for a great many years. It is well known that in all provincial elections the ballot is not a secret ballot. The marking of the ballots is known to the party in power. They have the means of obtaining that knowledge, and without any doubt whatever they do examine the ballots after they are returned to the city of Toronto and are placed in the hands of government officials there. In that way they are enabled to mark the lists for the next general election. So that when an election comes on it is practically known to them just how every voter voted in the previous election. For this reason, we from the province of Ontario, feel that something ought to be done to prevent the intimidation which is practiced on voters in that province. As the hon. member for Bothwell has said, not only is this intimidation carried on in provincial elections, but it has come to be so well understood that it is now carried into Dominion elections, and voters are told, though not truthfully, that their vote will be known in Dominion elections the same as in provincial elections; and men who are not familiar with the election law readily believe that when their vote is known in one case, it is known in the other. It seems to me that the hon. Minister of Justice should do everything he can to assist us in the province of Ontario to remove the evil complained of. I do not say for one moment that the Dominion ballot is not an absolutely secret ballot. If the voter folds his ballot properly, I do not think it is possible for the returning officer to know how he votes; and certainly, after the ballot is placed in the ballot box, no one can find out how the voter has marked it. But I think the hon. member for Bothwell has made it plain that the Ontario ballot is not a secret ballot. In fact, the officers say, and the judges on the bench say, that it is not a secret ballot. I have heard Judge Armour say: 'In the province of Ontario we have not a secret ballot.' Under these circumstances, the hon. Minister of Justice can easily see how voters can be misled in a Dominion election, when they are told by some person, perhaps one having superior knowledge, that their vote can be discovered. I think that an offence of that kind, intended to deter a voter from voting for the candidate of his choice, should be a crime under the election law. I hope that the hon. Minister of Justice will allow the words proposed in the Bill to be added to the election law. It appears that the words in the Act are not sufficiently strong to meet the case. They are too general; let us make them more specific. I trust that the hon. Minister of Justice will lend us in the province of Ontario his assistance to do away with this species of intimidation, which does not prevail in any other part of the Dominion.

The MINISTER OF JUSTICE. I am absolutely in sympathy with every effort that can be made to prevent fraud in elections; but in drafting a statute it is a great mistake to attempt to specialize. The legal theory is to use words of general application, because the moment you commence to specify; you limit the scope of the Act, and the result is disastrous. So far as my information goes, the language of the Act is sufficient to cover the offence sought to be met by this Bill. But if the condition of things in the province of Ontario is such that it is necessary to meet that particular case, I am prepared to consider the matter, and I move that the committee rise, report progress and ask leave to sit again, for that purpose.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). Before the committee rises, I would like to suggest that so far as the word 'intimidation' is concerned, the hon. member for Bothwell might regard the offence in question as intimidation, but it does not necessarily follow that the court would so construe it. The words of the statute are: 'Any injury, damage, harm or loss, or in any manner practices intimidation upon or against any person.' But the mere statement that the ballot was not secret might not be considered as covered by these words or regarded as intimidation.

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. Perhaps the voter would not so regard it?

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). That is another observation in favour of the view of my hon. friend from Bothwell (Mr. Clancy) has advanced. As I understand the suggestion of the Postmaster General it is this, that you should have words which would be distinctly understood by people who are not lawyers. My hon. friend the Minister of Justice suggests that if this particular offence is not covered by the word 'intimidation' it would be covered by the words 'fraudulent device or contrivance.' Whether or not the mere representation that the ballot is not secret would be regarded as a fraudulent device or contrivance is open, it seems to me, with all deference to the opinion of the Minister of Justice, to some question. If there be a particular difficulty, as suggested by the hon. member for Bothwell, I think the Minister of Justice will agree that he might amend this statute so as not to interfere in any way with the general application of the words. For instance we could add a subsection providing that the words 'fraudulent device or contrivance' would include the offence in question. It is only in exceptional cases we should adopt legislation of this kind, but the case mentioned by my hon. friend from Bothwell seems to be one of these, and the difficulty mentioned by my hon. friend the Minister of Justice might be got over very easily in the way I have mentioned.

The MINISTER OF JUSTICE. I shall consider all the suggestions made. I move that the Committee rise and report progress.

Progress reported.

GENERAL INSPECTION ACT.

Mr. THOMPSON (Haldimand). In the absence of Mr. McCarthy, I beg to move that Bill (No. 48) to amend the General Inspection Act be read the second time.

Mr. HENDERSON. What is the explanation of the Bill ?

Mr. THOMPSON (Haldimand). I move that the debate be adjourned.

Motion agreed to.

At six o'clock the House took recess.

After Recess.

House resumed at eight o'clock.

SUPPLY.

House in Committee of Supply.

Public works—chargeable to income—rents, repairs, furniture, heating—heating Dominion public buildings, fuel, &c., $60,000.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS (Hon. James Sutherland). There is an increase here of $5,000. The increase is owing to the increased number of public buildings to be heated.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). Which new public buildings are these ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Public buildings at Granby, Quebec ; Deseronto, Sarnia, Cardiff, North-west Territories, court house ; Nelson, public building ; Rossland, public building. It was found that the item was a little short anyway. Last year was hardly a fair one to judge by, owing to the strike and the increased prices of fuel ; but, after a careful estimate, it was found that it will require about $60,000 to furnish fuel for the various buildings throughout the Dominion.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). How much is due to the new public buildings, and how much to shortage ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. It was thought that the item of $55,000 voted last year would turn out to be about $3,500 short. The balance, $1,500, would be for the new buildings.

Mr. BLAIN. Would the minister please tell us what is the policy of the government in the supplying of coal in the individual towns ? Do the government advertise in each town for supply or do they put in a general advertisement ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. We have an advertisement which reaches the dealers throughout the Dominion. They can tender for any building or for the whole supply. The practice is, besides that, to advertise for tenders in each place.

Mr. BLAIN. Why should not the government purchase the whole quantity, say $60,000 worth ? They could purchase this coal cheaper than any dealer. At least that is true of the province of Ontario.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. My hon. friend (Mr. Blain) will see that that would be impossible. The coal has to be delivered, in some places, in small quantities, and the buildings to be heated are situated all over the Dominion. A Toronto or Montreal dealer could not supply various places unless he had agents in the several towns, and, of course, none of the dealers have such an organization. The dealer in any town in Ontario applies to headquarters, the same as the dealer in the large city. Of course, they supply practically at the lowest prices.

Mr. INGRAM. Did the hon. minister bring down the statement that he promised on Friday evening with respect to contracts for coal for Ottawa buildings ? That would give us an idea what prices should be elsewhere.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I think that if my hon. friend (Mr. Ingram) will look at 'Hansard,' I think he will find that I gave all the information with regard to the principal tenders. It may be that there was a misunderstanding, and that there is further information to be given. There is no objection to the bringing down of fuller information with regard to prices, tenders, &c. But that information relates to the Ottawa buildings, while this item is for coal for public buildings throughout the Dominion.

Mr. CLARE. I think that if the hon. minister could give us an account of the coal bought in the different towns, and the prices paid, that information would be valuable.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I shall be very pleased to bring down a return showing the amount used in the different towns. Of course, I cannot be expected to have that here.

Mr. CLARE. No.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). My hon. friend from West Toronto (Mr. Clarke), who is not present at the moment, informed me at six o'clock, as I understood him, that there was some information to be brought down with regard to this.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. No, there were two other items which the hon. member (Mr. Clarke) asked to have stand until the information was furnished. I have a statement here which I will hand to him, and the other statement which he asked for will be laid on the Table tomorrow. The officials of the department could not get it ready to-day.

Mr. INGRAM. Could the hon. minister give me the figures showing the quantity of coal for the government building at St. Thomas, the price and name of the contractor ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I am not able to give the prices of each place, but, as I have said, I shall be pleased to bring down a return giving that information.

Lighting Dominion public buildings, $75,000.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). There is a very large increase here.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This year the committee is asked to vote $75,000, instead of $55,000 as last year. This provides the amount necessary for lighting the various public buildings. Last year we voted $55,000, and I think on the average we have put about $18,000 a year in the supplementary estimates. We thought it was better to have the whole amount stated here. The increase of $2,500 is to provide for the new buildings that have been erected. Last year the total amount voted was $73,000; this year it is $75,000.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). It is a marked improvement in the system to bring the expenditures down all in one item. We may conclude, therefore, that so far as this item is concerned, there will be no further vote asked.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Not with regard to this item. The object of the department will be to make a correct estimate of what will be required. The difference between the vote of $55,000 and what will be required will have to be brought down under a new estimate, but there will be no supplementary estimate for 1903-4. This is estimated to cover the full amount.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). The supplementary estimate to which the hon. gentleman refers has yet to be brought down for this year to cover the shortage of the current year.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. That has been the practice. But henceforth we are going to take an appropriation for the full amount required.

Water—Dominion public buildings, $16,000.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). Does this cover the water tax in cities for water supplied to government buildings?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. It is to supply water to the various public buildings under the control of the Dominion government. The officers of the department think that $16,000 will be sufficient. We had a small balance left over last year, when the sum was $16,000, the same as this year.

Electric and other power for running elevators, stamp cancelling machines, &c., Dominion public buildings, $8,000.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Electricity is used in the Montreal post office for stamp cancelling machines, freight and passenger elevators, $3,200; stamp cancelling machine in Quebec post office, $200; Toronto, elevator at the station in connection with the post office, stamp cancelling machine at the post office, elevator at the custom house, amounting altogether to $950; Ottawa, one elevator in the east block, two in the parliament building, one at the military stores, current for the fire pump, stamp cancelling machine in the post office, $2,270; Victoria, B.C., passenger and freight elevator, $920; Vancouver, stamp cancelling machine at post office.

Mr. LENNOX. Could the minister tell us what it costs to run the elevator in the Seybold building?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. That is not run by electricity. These items I have read represent the cost of electrical power.

Mr. INGRAM. Did we not have a power house at the foot of the hill here a few years ago? What was done with that?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. The machinery became obsolete and the plant was abandoned. The machinery is still there.

Harbours and river, Nova Scotia—Amagandus wharf, $2,000.

Mr. TAYLOR. Will the minister please explain where in the Auditor General's Report we will find the details of the expenditure at this place?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. None of the money voted was spent last year.

Mr. TAYLOR. Then why should you ask for a vote this year? I see that it has been voted for two years and nothing done. Perhaps, if it is not necessary, you might drop the item.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. In explanation I may say that it is quite right that this money has not been spent though previously voted, but the work is now under way. It is being done by day's labour, and it is intended to spend $1,000 during the current year, so that, we are revoting $1,000 and asking for $2,000 more as it is estimated that the cost of this work will be $4,000.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). What purpose is to be served by this wharf?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I find that this wharf is being built for the local trade principally. From the petition presented by the inhabitants of this district there are considerable shipments of fire wood and coal from this point. As other wharfs are a good distance from this place and the roads are very bad it was thought desirable in the public interest to serve these people by building this wharf.

Mr. COCHRANE. Is it a new wharf ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Yes.

Mr. INGRAM. When was this money expended on this wharf ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. The work is under way now. It is expected that $1,000 will be spent before the 30th June. We are asking for a revote of a $1,000 and $2,000 more to complete the work.

Mr. COCHRANE. What will be the depth of the water when the wharf is completed ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I am sorry I cannot give the hon. gentleman the information he asks for.

Mr. INGRAM. The Auditor General's Report does not show any expenditure on this work.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. No, none of this money was spent last year.

Mr. COCHRANE. So that the benefit will be from the landing of coal ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Coal and fire wood seems to be principally shipped from that point.

Mr. BLAIN. Does the department purchase the land or how do you secure it before commencing the construction of a wharf like this ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. In this case the proprietor of the land at the foot of the road where the wharf is to be built has made a free grant to the Crown of the site.

Mr. BLAIN. Is there any population in this town, or village ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This is just a scattered settlement along the coast of Cape Breton.

Mr. TAYLOR. What is the expected revenue from this wharf ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I doubt very much if there will be any revenue from this wharf.

Mr. LENNOX. Mr. Chairman, I want to call attention to this point which I gleaned from a statement by the hon. Minister of Public Works. I understand him to say that this is a local matter serving a few people in that neighbourhood. I have no objection at all to it because it is in Nova Scotia, but, I have noticed in other years that the public expenditure has proceeded upon the same lines, not in Nova Scotia alone, but in my own province and, I believe, in all the provinces of the Dominion. I may be wrong, but it appears to me that the practice of expending the money of the Dominion of Canada upon small undertakings which are in their nature local is not a fair expenditure of the money of the Dominion. It may be a perfectly legitimate expenditure by a province or it may be a perfectly legitimate expenditure by a local municipality. But, unless it serves the interests of Canada as a whole, it is not an honest or judicious expenditure of the moneys of this country. We should not, as a federal parliament, vote the moneys of the people of this country for the promotion of what is merely a local concern. Now, whenever an hon. member of one province opposes an expenditure of this kind, if it is in reference to another province, it is likely to be suggested that he is sectional in his tendencies. But I do so now because this is the first opportunity I have had this session of drawing attention to the matter. I speak of it not in reference to Nova Scotia, but I speak of it in reference to every province of the Dominion, and from my point of view—I do not know what the opinion of the committee is—unless it is shown that there is through traffic to be provided for and that this work in some way will serve the interest of the Dominion as a whole it is not a fair or honest expenditure of the public money and we as a parliament are not justified in sanctioning the expenditure.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I suppose there is a good deal to be said on both sides of this question. A fine distinction must be drawn to know whether the public interest is being served in each particular locality. On the one hand you have municipal corporations which are wealthy and where the people interested in doing business are wealthy, and a wharf is built at large expenditure to serve the trade of that place, while on the other hand you have a small place where the people are engaged, as in this instance, in fishing, farming and that sort of thing and who require wharf accommodation. It has been the policy of the Dominion parliament, probably ever since confederation, to construct these works. I am not prepared at the present moment to make any announcement as to a change of policy. There is no doubt very good service is done the country and that the development of the country is promoted by affording these facilities to the smaller places. We cannot forget that the fishing industry brings a large revenue to the country. It gives employment to a great number of people, although perhaps in an humble way, and it is quite open to discussion whether or not in a locality such as this a small expenditure is not perfectly justifiable. I am not prepared for myself and the government to announce a change of policy at the present moment. Parliament has already approved of these works and I do not think that we would be at liberty to stop their progress. The depth at this point is eleven feet at low water.

Mr. INGRAM. There was no discussion on this item last year. I do not know where this place is or anything about it.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I will have to send my hon. friend to school to learn the geography of Nova Scotia.

Mr. INGRAM. It would be pretty hard to find in any geography some of the places in Nova Scotia you build wharfs in.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. When my hon. friend (Mr. Ingram) is Minister of Public Works he will find that he has a good deal of geography to learn. This is situated in Cape Breton county.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). Is it let by contract.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This is built by day labour, under the supervision of the government engineer.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). Is it the duty of any particular officer to see that the wharfingers all over the country make returns of the revenue received from these wharfs, or whether, as I am informed, there is a rather lax system in regard to this.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. The system is that when a wharf has been transferred from the Department of Public Works to the Department of Marine, a wharfinger is appointed and he is bound to make returns and as a rule he does. From some of them there is a very small revenue. The system requires that returns should be made and I will call the attention of the Minister of Marine and Fisheries to the statement of my hon. friend.

Mr. COCHRANE. Is it not the law that where the expenditure is over a certain amount the work has to be let by contract.

THE MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. For eighteen or twenty years in the case of a work costing less than $5,000 it was supposed that it could be let by an Order in Council without tender. This was found to be ultra vires and now all works are let by tender unless done by day's labour under the department.

Mr. CLARE. It would appear that this wharf cannot be of very great importance because it is three years since we began to vote money for it and it has not yet been commenced.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. It has come under my notice that the delay in commencing these public works is sometimes caused by the difficulty in getting a site, and sometimes the estimated cost of the work turns out to be more than the vote and the work is not gone on with until we get a further vote.

Big Pond wharf, $3,100.

Mr. TAYLOR. Last year $900 was voted for this work, and according to the Auditor General's Report, none of that money was expended. Now we are asked for $2,500.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. The $900 was voted last year, but owing to the heavy storms and damage done it was found that it required $2,500 more to renew the superstructure and put it in proper shape. The $900 was spent, but not having been expended before the 30th of June last, it does not appear in this year's Auditor General's Report.

Mr. HACKETT. In what county is this.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Antigonish county.

Mr. LENNOX. Are we to understand from the hon. Minister of Public Works that he knows as a matter of fact that a storm swept away this pier and that this accounts for this very large additional amount being required; or are we to understand simply that may be a way for accounting for it?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. My hon. friend has drawn a little on his imagination. I did not say that the pier had been swept away. This is a large wharf, having cost some $35,000. Our information comes from the local engineers who made an estimate of the amount required to put it in repair, and I do not think he would report that it is necessary to repair it unless it is really so.

Bailey's Brook—breakwater wharf, $3,000.

Mr. TAYLOR. There was $2,000 asked for this wharf last year—a new wharf. That was the estimated cost at the time. I do not see in the Auditor General's Report any account of that $2,000 having been spent. Now my hon. friend asks for $3,000, I presume to complete the work.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Yes. As none of the $2,000 was spent previous to the 30th of June last, no account of it would appear in the Auditor General's Report of this year. This wharf breakwater is in Pictou county, Nova Scotia, and the estimated cost of the work is $5,000. $2,000 will be spent during the present year and we are asking for $3,000 to complete the work.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). What is the object of the proposed expenditure?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This wharf is on the southern shore of Pictou county. It is to provide accommodation for the fishermen and the people in that locality. There was a wharf there previously, but it was very much destroyed, and this expenditure will practically make a new wharf. It is at the mouth of the river, and really acts as a breakwater as well as a landing wharf.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). Is the work done by contract or by day labour?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. By day labour.

Mr. INGRAM. Do we understand that hereafter all new works are to be done by day labour ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. No. In almost every case except repairs and very small works, they are let by public tender. I would not say that in some cases repairs are not let by public tender. The policy of the department is to do most of the repairs and to build some of these small wharfs by day labour under the supervision of the resident engineer; but wherever a wharf can be built by tender, that is done.

Big Pond wharf, $3,100.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). Is this for a new structure, or for repairs ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. A new structure. The work has not been commenced. The estimated cost is $3,100.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). What is the purpose of it ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. A small wharf is being built for the accommodation of fishermen residing in that district. Their nearest railway station is Grand Narrows. Freight is forwarded from that station by steamer.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). Is there any anticipated revenue ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I can hardly answer that question. Some of these small wharfs yield quite a revenue and others do not give enough to pay the wharfinger's fees. It is difficult to know until the wharf is built and placed under the jurisdiction of the Marine Department.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). The hon. minister can no doubt tell us from his experience in the Marine Department something about the system of returns from these wharfs.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. When a wharf is completed it is handed over to the Marine Department and that department finds a wharfinger. In the case of these small wharfs, the wharfinger is generally allowed all the revenue up to $20. Where the revenue is more considerable, the wharfinger receives 25 per cent and makes a regular return to the department according to printed form sent him.

Mr. COCHRANE. Is this work to be let by contract ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This is a small work which will cost altogether $3,100, and will probably be done by day work under the supervision of the government engineer. It is divided up into a great many items and will probably be better done by days' work, under the supervision of the engineer, than by contract.

Mr. COCHRANE. Would not a small contract like this draw more competition than a large one as there would be more men capable of undertaking it ? In this way the work would likely be done cheaper by contract.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. We have to depend a good deal upon the advice of the local engineer. While it might appear to us that it could be done cheaper by contract, still in places distant from any village, town or settlement, and where the lumber has to be purchased and perhaps floated down during certain seasons of the year, on the whole, taking into account the delays, it would be better to have it done by day work under the supervision of our own engineer.

Mr. LENNOX. Is this $3,100 to be the total cost ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Yes, that is the total estimated cost.

Bridgewater, N.S., dredging, $5,000.

Mr. TAYLOR. Why was this money not spent last year ? I see it is a revote.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. The department has no dredge to do it, and I am sorry to say there is none to be hired. In a good many places like this, dredging is very much required, and it may be some time before the dredge now under construction may be completed. This is a matter that will have to receive the serious attention of the department.

Mr. LENNOX. Is there any chance of getting the 'J. Israel Tarte' dredge on this work ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. That dredge is doing important work on the St. Lawrence at present.

Mr. LOGAN. What preparation is the hon. minister making for increased dredging facilities in Nova Scotia ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. There is a large dredge under construction, but I regret that it could not be ready this season. The department will have to seriously consider what arrangement may be made for the present season as in many of these places dredging is urgently required

Mr. LOGAN. I trust the department will look into this matter of dredging very seriously, at once. In a large part of Nova Scotia dredging is absolutely necessary. I have in mind just now one harbour, the harbour of Wallace, where I have been endeavouring for two years to get the department to send a dredge. A part of that harbour is becoming absolutely unnavigable for the want of a small amount of dredging, and it is very important that entrance into the harbour should be improved as a considerable amount of shipping use it. The department would be justified in making extraordinary efforts to provide increased dredging facilities particularly for the harbours in the maritime provinces.

Hon. Mr. ROSS (Victoria, N.S.). No doubt the province of Nova Scotia is suffering for the want of dredges to do work absolutely necessary. There is a harbour in my county which was deepened in 1882 and on which $82,000 was spent, but which is now beginning to get shoaly for the want of dredging. During the last two years it has required dredging very badly. We were told by the ex-Minister of Public Works that a new dredge was being built, but from recent inquiries I am afraid it will take as long to build that dredge as it took to build the Temple of Jerusalem.

Hon. Mr. TARTE. All those who have followed with some degree of care the shipbuilding that has been going on in the world during the last couple of years, know that material has been very difficult to obtain. Railway men and ship-building men have been unable to get the material they require, and the department, no doubt, has been hampered by the same difficulty. When I left the department a large dredge was well under way at the government shipyard at Sorel, but some time ago I heard that it is not yet completed. I am not surprised, but I fully expected it would be completed in the month of July or August. Of course during the last five months I have not followed up matters in connection with our public works, but that dredge which is under way now in Sorel will have a greater capacity than any of the dredges working in the maritime provinces now. Just as the dredge that bears my name has a greater capacity than nearly all the dredges on the St. Lawrence. That dredge, with the changes that have been made, if I am well informed, will have a capacity of 1,000,000 cubic yards a month. There was never a dredge of that kind built in this country before. The dredge that was intended for the maritime provinces is a suction and also a dipper dredge. It will be a large, sea-going ship. So far, we have imported dredges for the maritime provinces from England. We are now building our own dredges with Canadian hands and on Canadian soil, and, as far as possible we are building them of Canadian material. But, unfortunately, we have not been able, up to this time, to secure Canadian steel plates; but I hope that the time is not far away when our country will be able to produce the plates. The reason why delays took place while I was in office was that we could not get material. We are not the only ones that have been delayed, however. All the railways, not only in this country, but in the United States, have been hampered in their work because they could not get material. We must take the times as they are—we are in the growing time, in every part of the world. But let me say that the Department of Public Works has built a good many dredges during recent years, and it will be necessary to build more, if we wish to grapple with the difficulties and progress with the times. Of course, this country cannot expect to build dredges without providing the money for them. I do not know what my successor's plans are, but I know very well what it is necessary to do in the public interest at this time. We should not hesitate one minute, in my humble opinion in providing all the money that is necessary to equip our waterways in first-class shape.

Mr. FRASER. There are a number of places in Nova Scotia—indeed in all the lower provinces—where, though the members from Ontario and the west may not understand it—it is absolutely necessary that dredging should be done and wharfs built. I have in my mind one instance in a county represented here not by a gentleman supporting the government, but by one on the other side of the House. I refer to the East river in Pictou county. From the harbour at Pictou up to New Glasgow, there are the large works of the Nova Scotia Steel Company. There is need of dredging there. And I trust we shall never assert the rule, that, simply because the county sends a man to support the opposition, therefore no public work shall be done in that county. I understand from those who know that in a number of places in Nova Scotia and in the lower provinces generally dredging can be carried on in winter. In northern Europe, I understand, excellent work is done in dredging during that season. The ice is cut and the material is taken up and put at some distance on the ice. It is carried away by the ice in the spring or sinks at the side of the channel. There are estuaries and rivers in Nova Scotia also, I believe, in Quebec, where work can be done all winter. What can be done elsewhere can be done in Canada, and I am told on very good authority that that work is done in Europe. I am informed that in this way a dredge could be utilized both winter and summer. There are many places where a dredge could not work in winter, for the dredging is carried on in harbours during the fine weather, but when the fall comes and the sea gets rough, nothing can be done. Thus a dredge could work all summer in the harbours, and then, in winter, be taken to East river or some similar place and be utilized all winter. We are only beginning what we have to do in this respect, for we need breakwaters for the security of their boats and we need the dredging in the interests of navigation. I would suggest to the minister that he make inquiries whether or not this winter dredging can be carried on.

Hon. Mr. TARTE. I am afraid that it would be very difficult to carry out the suggestion that has been made. My hon. friend

(Mr. Fraser) knows better than I do that most of the harbours in the maritime provinces are very much exposed. Particularly with the dredges that we have to-day, I think it would be very difficult to carry on anything of the kind.

Mr. FRASER. I am speaking of rivers.

Hon. Mr. TARTE. My experience is that in the months of fall, it is very difficult indeed to get the crews to do any work. In the St. Lawrence river, when November comes it is time to lay up the dredges for a rest. Permit me to say, Mr. Chairman, that it would be in the public interest to equip our country just now, with all the dredges that are necessary. If you look carefully at the reports showing the results of the dredging in the past, you will find that the modern dredges supplied by the government do their work for three or four and five cents a yard, work that, in the past, would have cost twenty-five, forty or fifty cents a yard. The dredge that bears my name, which is the most modern dredge that has been built in this country, during one of the months last season made 600,000 yards in a month. Well, that dredging did not cost much money.

Mr. CLARKE. That was working day and night.

Hon. Mr. TARTE. Yes. But the dredge has a greater capacity than that. With the changes that have been ordered, the capacity of that dredge is 1,000,000 cubic yards a month. Dredging in so large a quantity, with the same crew of twenty-four men, the cost per cubic yard would be very little indeed. For dredging in the port of St. John, we were asked $1 per cubic yard for dredging, if I remember well. That dredging will not cost us, I am sure, if it is made by one of the government dredges more than five cents or six cents a yard. It is particularly in the public interest to build dredges and to build them in the most modern way. And we must build them without any delay. There is no doubt that we have been late. I do not say that to throw blame on those ministers before me. Now, I may say that when I took office the Department of Public Works had scarcely any dredges worthy of the name. We had only two tubs. It is not then surprising that we are behind the times, that we have many ports that have not been dredged that should have been dredged. But, with the modern implements that we have, with the ship-yard that we have built in Sorel, with many other private ship-yards that we have in Ontario, we can make up for lost time. I would earnestly invite the Minister of Public Works to go on without any hesitation. The country will certainly support him. Our waterways must be equipped now, if we do not want to lose our trade. Our American friends are not losing time. I will not say any more now on this item, as perhaps we shall have another opportunity to discuss the great question involved.

Mr. LENNOX. How much is proposed to be expended on the building of the wharf ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I can hardly give the hon. gentleman an estimate as to the amount of dredging that may be required at that point. It was thought that $5,000, would do a great deal of useful work in the river, but I do not think it will complete all the dredging that will be required.

Cheverie, breakwater extension, $1,600.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. There was expended in 1901-02, $768, and in the succeeding year, $175. This amount is required to complete the extension. The cost altogether will be $5,243, including the present vote.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). What is the necessity of the extension ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. It is an extension into deeper water. It is also used as a landing pier as well as a breakwater.

Mr. COCHRANE. Why do you make a distinction between a breakwater and a wharf ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I have never been able to find out exactly where the distinction is made.

Mr. FRASER. There may be a breakwater and a wharf combined. Suppose you have 200 feet of a breakwater, you build that up with stone until you get out to a certain depth where schooners can come up. Then the stone is covered with cement or wood, so that you can go out upon it just as well as on a wharf. But it serves at the same time as a breakwater for the shipping. It serves as a wharf on which you can receive goods at the end of it and deliver goods. Sometimes the wharf is not used at all, because vessels can come inside of the breakwater, which prevent the dashing away of the vessels. But sometimes a breakwater is used to give a certain depth of water to the vessels.

Church Point, repairs to breakwater, $3,000.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Last year $1,800 was voted and spent on this work, which will require $3,000 to complete. It is in Digby county.

Mr. CLARE. Has the $1,800 been spent ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Yes.

Cow Bay (Port Morien), repairs to breakwater, $25,000.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This was originally built of wood, and the wood is to be replaced with concrete blocks.

There has been expended on that work, $334,000.

Mr. COCHRANE. Is this expenditure like those the hon. gentleman and his friends used to accuse us of making, to buy up constituencies with the people's money ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. This is a very old and expensive work. It was built many years ago, and has cost nearly half a million dollars. It will necessarily cost a considerable sum every year if it is to be kept up.

Mr. COCHRANE. Is it worth the money?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. I think it is. There is a large coal mining enterprise carried on in that region, with every promise of great development. I think the country could hardly afford to let the work go down.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). I suppose it answers some purpose in connection with coal mining now ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. Yes, the Newcastle Company are operating at that place, it is a service to them. It is a breakwater.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). Is that work let by tender, or is it done by day's work ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I think it is being done by day labour. 260 feet of this breakwater was carried away, and in order to have a permanent work there that would stand the storm, it has been decided to build it with concrete.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). Is there any reason why this should not be done by tender and contract ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. It is very difficult to make specifications on which to receive tenders for repairing an old work.

Mr. COCHRANE. Why should it be difficult ? If it was repairing an old wharf, I could understand it, but here you are providing for a new breakwater.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This is not a new work. A good deal of that was swept away and we are now going to repair the old pier. As I said, it is difficult to make specifications, because, until the wood work is torn away and uncovered, we do not know how much work will have to be done. In making the concrete, if it is properly looked after, the work ought to be done as cheaply by day's labour as by contract.

Mr. LENNOX. I did not quite hear the explanation that the hon. minister made when he first was dealing with this matter, but I understand that the $10,000 voted last year has not yet been expended. Is that right ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Part of it has been expended and the balance is now being expended. The estimate of the engineer is that it will be all expended before the 30th June next.

Mr. LENNOX. Then I assume that the expenditure has been since the 30th June last, because it is not in the public accounts. That is an expenditure of $10,000 last year and a contemplated expenditure of $25,000 additional this year. This is a very large expenditure. It may be quite justifiable, but it does appear to me that where there is an expenditure of probably $35,000 within two years, the suggestion that the work cannot readily be let by contract does not appear to be reasonable. It may be difficult ; all these public undertakings are difficult, more or less, but it is hard to conceive that it is impossible. When it comes to an expenditure so large as this, I think a very serious effort ought to be made to carry out the principle that we are endeavouring to work on in regard to the expenditure of public moneys for large public works in this country, that is, that the work shall be done by tender and contract. Although the hon. minister says that the work to some extent is patching or repairing, I cannot understand why it cannot be done by contract. Both parties to the work would understand it to a large extent. The engineer of the government would understand it on his part, the contractor would be able to estimate it on his part, and it does not appear to me to be a very reasonable ground for departing from what the true intention is, and to say that this work cannot be done by contract. With a work of the magnitude of $25,000 or $30,000 it seems to me it is almost quibbling with the law to say that it cannot properly be done otherwise than by day labour. It is very much like the case of some towns where they have fire limits. When a structure is destroyed you cannot put up a new one unless it comes within the provisions of the fire by-law, but if the structure is only partially destroyed, and you repair it, you may escape the provisions of the by-law. It seems to be a mere distinction in name, because repairs of such an extensive character as to cost $35,000 practically amount to a reconstruction, and they come within the spirit, if not within the letter of the law, which requires public works to be let by tender.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I can hardly agree with the hon. gentleman in regard to a work of this description. This work which is being carried on by day labour would give the department much less trouble if it were let by tender. On the report of the local engineer, approved of by the chief engineer at headquarters, this work is undertaken by day labour, because, in consequence of the peculiarity of the work, they cannot prepare specifications by which it can be let by tender. Any one who has had any experience of contractors, either in his own business or in connection with the government, will know the great difficulty of letting a work of this kind by contract. It is almost impossible to avoid difficulties and disputes, and when these arise with the contractor, we generally get a good deal the worst of it. There is not the slightest doubt that owing to the peculiar conditions existing at this particular work it can be much more economically carried on by day labour than by contract. I quite agree with the views of the chief engineer, after hearing the explanations which he has given me that the work can be carried on much more economically under proper supervision by day labour than by advertising for tenders and making a contract.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). I understood from the hon. minister that 260 feet have been completely carried away. One would suppose that would be a portion which might be reconstructed by tender as it was originally constructed, I suppose by tender.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. If it is decided to rebuild that 260 feet certainly the work shall be let by public tender. What we are doing now is repairing and replacing the concrete on the part of the pier which has not been carried away. A great deal of money has already been spent on this work, and in the opinion of the chief engineer, so far as he is able to judge, $25,000 will complete it.

Hon. Mr. TARTE. How much ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. $25,000.

Hon. Mr. TARTE. For what ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. For the portion that is being repaired, but not adding the 260 feet. That would cost $200,000 and $300,000.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). What is the length of the portion that has not been carried away ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. 1,374 feet is the length of the part now under repair.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). Is that portion servicable for the purpose intended ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Yes, I understand from the report that it renders great service.

Mr. INGRAM. I understand the hon. minister to say that the balance of this work will cost $200,000. Has that been stated ? Does the government intend to spend $200,000 ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. No decision has been come to in regard to extending this pier to the original length. with this vote it is hoped to complete the 1,374 feet.

Mr. INGRAM. With an additional expenditure of $200,000 would this pier be all right ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This pier will serve a very good purpose. I do not say that the breakwater will be as serviceable as if extended to the original length of 260 feet, but it will answer the purpose very well.

Mr. INGRAM. What trade is carried on there ?

Hon. Mr. TARTE. Coal.

Mr. INGRAM. Are large quantities of coal shipped from it ?

Mr. KENDALL. The amount provided for this work looks like a large amount but this work is one of the very largest we have in the maritime provinces and has during the last thirty years been of great service. Probably, a great many million tons of coal have been shipped at this point. A few years ago two of the mines formerly operated at this place were closed, and even after they were closed the breakwater was of great importance, because it is the only haven between Louisburg and Sydney, and is frequented by a large fleet of coasting and fishing vessels. During the last two or three years an English company has undertaken to develop the coal areas under the water in the bay, and at present they have driven levels to a distance of some 1,200 or 1,300 feet. It is estimated that by July they will have opened up a great submarine area of coal and will probably produce not less than 1,200 or 1,500 tons of coal a day or probably 300,000 tons a year. It has been demonstrated also within a short time, that certain coal seams which were not considered to be contiguous with the Cow Bay Basin coal seams, have been located on another point in this territory and it is quite likely that before long—I say this on the advice of scientific men—that several marine areas which we never hoped to be able to operate will be operated at a point not very far away. Although we are making these large expenditures now, I am afraid that we can scarcely assure the House that we shall not ask for more money than this. We must recognize the fact that the coal areas we have down in Cape Breton probably occupies the most commanding position of any coal fields on the whole Atlantic Ocean east or west. We are able to boast of the fact that we can put coal on the sea board for fifty cents a ton cheaper than any other colliery either in the American or Eastern hemisphere. To-day we see our coal going to Norway, Sweden, the Mediterranean, South Africa and West India, and we may look forward to a very great development in the coal industry. Astonishing as that development has been during the last few years, we expect a proportionate rate increase for the future. I may state that for many reasons I would prefer that this work should be done by tender and contract, but I believe that in this case it is impracticable for the reasons which have been stated, and for another which I shall add. That it is the face of the structure is so bad that even if estimates were made to-day for repairs, storms might occur and new gaps made that would have to be repaired during the season.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). Will the new enterprise of which the hon. gentleman speaks, have this harbour as its shipping place ?

Mr. KENDALL. Yes; no other.

Digby pier—renewal repairs, $2,000.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This is for minor general repairs to the pier and building.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). There seems to have been $3,700 spent last year. Was that for general repairs also ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Yes; it was very much out of condition and there had to be a great deal of work done on it.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). What is the total cost of these repairs likely to be ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This is the total cost so far as we know at the present time required for next year. During the present year there will be expended $3,700, and $2,000 is estimated to complete all the repairs necessary next year.

Drumhead breakwater, $4,500.

Mr. INGRAM. What is the estimated cost ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This work is now under contract. The total estimated cost is $7,000. Although there was $7,000 voted for this work last year I find that the contract price was $4,865, so that we are only revoting $4,500 of the $7,000 granted last year.

Mr. INGRAM. Is $4,500 the total cost ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. There will be a small amount this year to spend, and the total cost is estimated here at $4,500.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). What is the purpose of this pier ?

Mr. FRASER. It is altogether for the fishing boats small and large along the coast. They are going out now further than they did formerly and they are building in fact small schooners. This is a breakwater at Drumhead which is about six miles to the south-east of Isaac's Harbour and serves that whole district.

Mr. BELL. Is it near New Harbour ?

Mr. KENDALL.

Mr. FRASER. New Harbour is a good deal further east I may say for the benefit of the hon. member. It is between Isaac's Harbour and New Harbour and serves the fishing industry.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). It is a harbour of refuge.

Mr. FRASER. It will not be a harbour of refuge for large vessels but it will be for the large boats that go out fifteen or twenty miles deep sea fishing. However, it is largely in the interest of the inshore fishery and smaller boats.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). How far is it from New Harbour ?

Mr. FRASER. It is fifteen or twenty miles.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). Is it a wharf breakwater or a breakwater wharf ?

Mr. FRASER. It is a breakwater.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). Will it answer the purposes of both ?

Mr. FRASER. No, it will not be a shipping pier.

Mr. INGRAM. Last year the estimate was $7,000, and this year it is $5,500. What is the explanation of the difference ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. The only explanation is that the estimate of the department was higher than the lowest tender.

Mr. BELL. There was no work done last year ?

Mr. FRASER. No, it is under contract now, and will be done this year.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. During the present year we expect to spend $1,000.

Mr. INGRAM. I think this case demonstrates pretty well that there is no genuine system in the department of estimating the cost of these public works. The estimate of $7,000 was evidently simply a rough guess, because when the tenders were called for it was found that the work could be done for $5,500. In Nova Scotia we have some 49 different items of harbours to accommodate fishing smacks and such like, and in that number there are only five harbours calling for double figures. I think it should be the duty of the department, when petitioned for a harbour, pier or any other improvements, before asking for any money from this parliament, to have a proper estimate made so that the minister would be prepared to state to parliament what the total cost of the work would be. I want to know whether there was a systematic estimate made by the department of the cost of this work.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I can hardily agree with my hon. friend that there is any reflection to be cast on the engineer's branch of the department. In the large number of works that have to be constructed by the department, I think the estimates will be found to be fairly correct. If my hon. friend had experience, he would know that it is often very difficult to estimate the cost of a work, owing to the variation of prices in different localities. There is also a great difference in the tenders of contractors. It is true, we sometimes have a great deal of trouble owing to contractors undertaking to do work at too low a price. I think the minister should have more latitude to refuse contracts at figures which he knows to be lower than the actual work can be done for, because in such cases the public interests suffer in the end. But I do not think that, because in one particular case the estimate exceeds the costs, that should occasion a serious reflection on the ability of the officers of the department to estimate pretty correctly the cost of these works. I am sorry to say that in some instances the estimates of the officers have been below the cost. I have been encouraging them to be most careful in their estimates, and to give me the outside figures, because it is not in the public interest that we should ask an appropriation for a work, and when we came to take tenders we find that it costs a great deal more than we expected. It is better that our estimates should be on the high side, because if the money is not spent, there is no loss to the country.

Mr. INGRAM. I am not condemning the engineer's department at all. My remarks had no reference to him. The hon. gentleman said that if I had experience, I would know differently. I can guess the experience of the hon. gentleman, and I think it is something like this. A man who wants a pier or a breakwater in his constituency goes to the minister or takes with him a petition, and asks for the work. The minister asks him what it will cost. He says about $7,000. The minister says: 'Well, we will put $2,000 in the estimates this year, and that will do for a beginning.' I have no experience of it, but I can guess that the thing is done in that way. Now, before any work is done, I think the department should send the engineer to make a proper estimate of what the cost of the work will be. Then the minister would come here prepared to say, 'the engineer estimates that the work will cost so much, and we are asking for so much this year.' That would be the proper way, instead of taking the other plan simply to satisfy a supporter of the government.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. In every case before a work is advertised, a very careful estimate is made by the officers of the department.

Mr. CLARE. I see in the estimates for 1902-3 there was a vote for $2,000 for this very work, and now you ask for $7,000 more. That $2,000 has not been expended, and it was a revote.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I find that my hon. friend refers to the appropriations for 1901-2. Nothing was done that year, and the $2,000 was revoted with $5,000 more, making $7,000 for last year.

Mr. RICHARDSON. I would like to ask the hon. minister if there is any well-defined principle accepted for the guidance of the government in making these grants, distinguishing between public interests and private interests. I understand that while there is no revenue derived from these wharfs and piers, and so on, some of them may benefit some individual or private corporation to a very considerable extent. In some cases 90 per cent of the benefit derived from these wharfs will go to some private enterprise, as for instance the owner of a mine or quarry or mill or some other industry for which a wharf is required. The wharf may perhaps be of very little use to the general public. Upon what principle does the government act in calling on parliament to vote moneys for such public works? Has the political complexion or political pull of the parties mainly to be benefited anything to do with the policy of the government, or do the government proceed on any fixed principle of public utility ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. There is no question of party politics in this matter that I am aware of. These votes are asked for in the public interest, but of course while the work is in the public interest it is quite possible that some corporation may use it to a greater extent than the general public. But even in this case, as these large corporations give employment to a considerable portion of the community, indirectly the whole community is benefited. But in so far as any of these votes are concerned, I am not aware that there is any one of them which benefits any private corporation.

Mr. RICHARDSON. In the estimates last year, the attention of the government was called to the expenditure of a large amount of public money on a wharf which was particularly in the interest of some party or corporation that owned a mill in the vicinity. In this way an individual or corporation may owe a considerable part of its income to the expenditure of public money. There should be some guiding and distinct principle laid down defining what are public and what are private interests.

Mr. FRASER. So far as the item under consideration is concerned, it is for the benefit of fishermen irrespective of their political views. It is the fishermen whom this breakwater will serve. There is not a mill or manufactory of any kind in the vicinity. Take for example the vote for expenditure at Bridgewater, in that case the sum of $5,000 is voted to be spent in the county of Lunenburg which does not return a supporter to the government. I rose chiefly to say that the vote under consideration is intended to serve a large section of fishermen by providing them with a harbour for their boats and has nothing to do with their political views.

Mr. RICHARDSON. My inquiry had no special reference to this or any particular item but only as to expenditures of this character.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. As respects all these items we have had under consideration to-night, I can only recall one in which any corporation may be interested, and that is the item for expenditure in Cow Bay, where there is a coal mine. But in that case the work was done by our predecessors, who spent $200,000 there, and did so wisely and well. That is the only case where there is any large enterprise concerned. All the others are for the benefit of fishermen, who are not likely to have any trade union or corporation or anything of that sort which could be particularly interested. Whatever benefits there are from these expenditures are distributed among the poorer classes.

Economy, N.S., wharf extension, &c., $2,500.

Mr. COCHRANE. That is the first time we find economy in the estimates.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This $2,500 is for the purpose of extending the wharf 150 feet.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). What is the object of the extension ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. It is to give deeper water.

Fort Lawrence landing pier, $5,000.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. The estimated cost of this work is $13,500. The reason we are only asking for a revote of $5,000 is because the engineer does not expect that we will be able to spend more than that on the contract this year.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). Is it by tender ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Yes, by public advertisement.

Friar's Head, N.S., boat harbour, $500.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. The total cost of this is $3,252. This completes the work.

Glace Bay, harbour improvements, $10,000.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. There has not been any work done here yet. The specifications and contract are not fully completed. The estimated cost is between $50,000 and $60,000.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). Will the hon. gentleman be good enough to state what is the need of this expenditure.

Mr. FRASER.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. Glace Bay is the very centre of the coal mining district of Cape Breton. The town of Glace Bay and the neighbourhood immediately surrounding it, I suppose, contain now 10,000 or 12,000 people, and this centre serves a population of some 20,000. Some years ago it was an important shipping point, but when the Dominion Coal Company consolidated the mines and built a very large pier at Sydney, the operations at Glace Bay were suspended and the harbour has largely filled up. As there is a large local trade and the town has increased in numbers, a proposal has been made that the Dominion Coal Company might be induced to contribute something to the benefit of the harbour if the Dominion would do likewise. The town council had a deputation here recently, and I think it is their intention to make further representations in the hope that a scheme may be arranged whereby, with the co-operation of the government and the coal company, that harbour may be opened up and utilized for a smaller class of vessels. Sometimes there is a complaint that these smaller vessels cannot obtain attention at the great pier, and it is thought that by opening this harbour close by, they could do a good deal of the coal business as conveniently as at the pier at Sydney. And, with the large population to be supplied, there would be an advantage in obtaining supplies by water as well as by rail. The hon. Minister of Public Works has not committed himself as to how far he will go with the scheme. But, I think that if $60,000 were to be spent, a considerable sum would be contributed by the coal company. My hon. friend from Cape Breton (Mr. Kendall) is aware of the proposals that are made, and may have a few words to say on the subject. The government have not gone further than to say that the matter is a fair one for consideration; and, when it comes up in detail it will be fairly considered. But, we have no intention of spending $60,000 without giving the House further information about it.

Mr. BLAIN. When a town council contributes money to be expended in connection with the money of the government, would the government control the expenditure of the whole ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. In this case it would not be the town council that would contribute it. But the council are interested in inducing, if they can, the Dominion Coal Company to co-operate with the Dominion government in the matter. Part of the harbour, I am not sure but the whole harbour, is the property of the Dominion Coal Company, and that would make it necessary to enlist the co-operation of the coal company before the government would undertake the expenditure of the money.

Mr. BLAIN. Do they each spend their own money ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. No arrangement has been come to. The matter is only at the first stage. But it is only right that the House should be informed that a project of that kind has been brought forward, involving a considerable expenditure, a portion of which would be by the coal company.

Mr. BLAIN. Then the government expend money on private wharfs and in private enterprises ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. I am not aware of any such case. This would not be a private enterprise if the wharfs were constructed. It would be a public wharf, open to all who wished to use it.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). It is not a wharf, it is a harbour improvement ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. Yes.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). I was going to ask whether this was an experimental vote or something distinct from the expenditure of the $60,000 referred to by the Minister of Finance ? This is a vote of $10,000. Is it for a portion of the work, or is it a preliminary of the whole ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. If the work goes on as suggested, its total cost would be $60,000 I think. The hon. member for Cape Breton (Mr. Kendall) understands the project, and seems to think it could be finished for $50,000, but that would be divided between the government and the company. That view was expressed by the town council. I have no right to say that the coal company agreed to that. It is easy to make improvements in the harbour, but unless some such arrangement as I have suggested is made, it would be hardly wise to go on with the expenditure of so much money. The expenditure of this sum would furnish accommodation for the people of Glace Bay, and the government desire to co-operate to help them. I think it would not be wise to go on with the expenditure unless some arrangement were come to.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). Is this for dredging ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. For dredging and docks.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). I suppose it affords an opportunity to load schooners at once, instead of having them wait at Sydney. Steamers come first in loading at the pier at Sydney, I understand ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Yes.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). This would decrease the necessity for delay. Perhaps the hon. member for Cape Breton (Mr. Kendall) would give us a little more information about this. I am not criticising the item, but I want to get a little more information.

Mr. KENDALL. When the Dominion Coal Company opened its big piers at Sydney and Louisburg, it abandoned Glace Bay. This is simply an indentation, and the harbour is practically an artificial one, the only one of that kind we have on our coast. An enormous amount of money was expended there—I think some three or four hundred thousand dollars—in dredging and equipping the harbour. That was many years ago.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). Was this money spent by the government ?

Mr. KENDALL. No, mostly by the coal companies using the harbour. A small amount, was, I think, spent by the Dominion government in dredging. The Dominion Coal Company refused point blank to reopen the harbour. It fell into a state of disuetude, and the citizens complained that they were charged, as they thought, excessive rates on heavy freights such as lumber, hay, agricultural implements, building material and so on. There are twenty thousand people within three miles of Glace Bay, and my impression is that it would be in the public interest to have this work done. The Dominion Coal Company, through its agent Mr. Shields, has stated that if the government will make an appropriation of $25,000, the company will be prepared to give the same amount, and undertake to open the harbour and supply the improvements.

Hon. Mr. TARTE. We pay $25,000 and the company as much ; who would be the owner of the work ?

Mr. KENDALL. With the arrangement, as I understand it, the company will still own the property, but ample provision will be made to safeguard the interest of the town.

Hon. Mr. TARTE. Of course, I have not studied the question, but that seems to me a pretty doubtful thing. I recognize the difficulty the hon. gentleman (Mr. Kendall) speaks of ; but what would the hon. gentleman do in the situation ? Here are twenty thousand people who are suffering from the lack of accommodation, and, for a very moderate expenditure, considering the interest involved, provision could be made for safeguarding the public. The hon. gentleman (Mr. Kendall) asks me what to do. Of course, I am no longer responsibile for what is done on the treasury benches. But if it is really necessary to build a harbour there, I would rather build it and charge the Dominion Coal Company the usual rates. I do not believe it would be wise—of course I do not wish to be bound by what I say now, for I have not given much attention to the question—I do not think it would be wise to spend $25,000 in these works. It is a pretty doubtful arrangement. We have never done it before——

Mr. KENDALL. Oh, yes.

Hon. Mr. TARTE. I do not think we have done it before at any time.

Mr. KENDALL. Depot Harbour.

Hon. Mr. TARTE. No, in that case we did nothing of this kind. We simply did a piece of work which will be government property. I feel sure the hon. gentleman will not find a precedent for this, and I think it is a very doubtful arrangement.

Mr. KENDALL. I want to tell the hon. gentleman that it is impracticable for the government to get control of that harbour.

Hon. Mr. TARTE. Why ?

Mr. KENDALL. Well, the amount involved would be too large.

Hon. Mr. TARTE. How much would it cost ?

Mr. KENDALL. I do not care to state the reason openly, but I may say the amount would be very large.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). So far as the harbour improvements are concerned, I do not see any difficulty. It is impossible that the Dominion Coal Company or any other company should have such a control of the harbour as to interfere with the rights of navigation. This harbour is a navigable water. The Dominion Coal Company, by holding mining areas covering that country, cannot interfere with the right of navigation. This expenditure may be divided into two classes. One is the improvement of the harbour by dredging it so as to increase the depth of water. The Dominion Coal Company cannot have control over that. The other class of expenditure is for the wharf. So far as that is concerned, it depends altogether on the arrangements made with the Dominion Coal Company. Of course if you go and build a wharf on property belonging to the Dominion Coal Company, one result might be that the company would own the wharf. A matter of that kind must be covered by some arrangement with the Dominion Coal Company before the money is expended. The government ought to retain the ownership and control of the wharf but it would be justified in making a generous arrangement with the company as to its use. I would think that if government money is expended to the extent of one-half the whole expenditure on property of that kind, the property ought to remain under the control of the government, because otherwise the vote is made a means of granting a subsidy for a wharf which afterwards becomes the property of a private corporation.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. I am satisfied that no such proposal would be made. I quite agree with the hon. gentleman that any thing of that kind should not be allowed. I have been asked by the people of the district to interest myself in a friendly way in the matter. I agree with the general view expressed by the ex-Minister of Public Works as to the undesirability of a government being mixed up with a private enterprise of that character. But there are exceptions which prove the rule, and if we could make adequate arrangements with the company whereby they might use the property under a tariff of freights which would be fair and reasonable to all, there could be no objection. Assuming for a moment that that can be done, I do not suppose that any one would object under such conditions to dividing the expenditure between the government and the company ; although as a rule it is a bad practice, and to avoid trouble it requires to be carefully guarded. If any such arrangements are made they will also be made upon terms which will protect the public interest in every way.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). If government money is expended I would suggest that the control be retained in the Crown, at the same time granting to the Dominion Coal Company in a generous way the use of it for the purposes of the business, which is of interest to all in that community.

Hon. Mr. TARTE. I understand it would cost about $50,000 or $60,000 to build a wharf. I would not hesitate to say that the government should rather build that wharf altogether and remain the owner of it, than to contribute $25,000 to the Dominion Coal Company and not be the owner of the wharf. I think the House would sustain my hon. friend if he were to ask for the amount necessary to build the wharf there. Otherwise I think it would be a bad precedent indeed, it would be a subsidy in disguise. The Dominion Coal Company is too powerful a company to ask for a subsidy of that kind. Let us build the wharf and let us pay for it. The House will sustain my hon. friend in asking for $50,000 for that purpose. My hon. friend from Cape Breton (Mr. Kendall) tells us that there is a population of 20,000 or 25,000 to be served by that wharf. I would not hesitate, if the work is necessary, to ask for the money to construct this work and remain the owner of it.

Mr. KENDALL. The hon. gentleman is under a misapprehension. The Dominion government does not own this harbour, does not control it in any way. It was formerly dredged out and owned by the old coal companies, and that harbour was constructed by the old companies. It is an inland harbour altogether, built on land formerly owned by the coal companies. It does not belong to us.

Hon. Mr. TARTE. Then we are simply being asked to contribute $25,000 to build a work on a piece of property which is not our property. The case is worse. Let the Dominion Coal Company give us a deed for the land, a thing that is being done every day, and let us buy that piece of land. But it would be an unwise thing to spend $25,000 on that piece of property which does not belong to us, and over which we would have no control. It would be a bad precedent. I am sure that if the Dominion Coal Company was approached in a proper way they would consent to sell us the land. The government would then build the harbour works and would own them.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. I think that my hon. friend is mistaken about the absence of a precedent. But I do not want to raise that point. I think there are precedents, and that they have occurred even in his day. However, that is not the main point. I think the main point is that if any public money is to be granted for this enterprise we must take great care to safeguard the public interest. I would like to have it understood that the Dominion Coal Company are not seeking this work at all. They have not given it a thought, until it was brought to their notice by the municipal council of Glace Bay, who are doing their best to interest the Dominion Coal Company to some extent and the government of Canada to some extent. I have no communication from the Coal Company, but the representatives of the municipality have told me that they hoped to be able to induce the Dominion Coal Company to take an interest in it. I would not like the House to get the idea that it is a case of the Dominion Coal Company seeking a grant. They are not asking anything, and they won't care if we do not spend a cent on it.

Hon. Mr. TARTE. I would suggest that the Dominion Coal Company be approached and asked to give a deed of land to the government. Then if it is necessary to build a harbour there, let us build it and let us own it.

Mr. CLARE. If this money is voted and expended, we do not know whether the work will be the property of the Dominion government or of this coal company. From what the Finance Minister has said, an arrangement may be made with the Dominion Coal Company and the Glace Bay municipality. If that is the case, the money should not be expended at all until that arrangement is made. I would suggest that the estimate be withdrawn.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. If my hon. friend lived at Glace Bay he would not take that view. If we were to withdraw this item after what has occurred, it would be interpreted as an unfavourable act. I would suggest that the House let the item pass—we have had a full discussion—and hon. gentlemen may be assured that this money will not be spent except upon terms which will thoroughly safeguard every public interest.

Mr. WILSON. Do you own the land ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. No, it is owned by the Dominion Coal Company.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). We might let the vote pass on the understanding that if any arrangement is entered into before the close of the session it will be laid on the Table of the House.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. Certainly, that is fair.

Mr. BELL. If this is a private harbour and not under the control of the Dominion government, is there any possibility of the harbour owners charging dues and acquiring a revenue ? It must be a very extraordinary piece of property if it is a navigable water and is still a private property.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. I suppose a canal constructed by the company would be a navigable water, and still it might become a highway, yet remain private property. I would not like to answer my hon. friend's question, that would be a legal question. But it seems that this harbour was built, or was dredged and constructed years ago by some companies owning the mines in those days, and all the rights of those companies passed under the Dominion Coal Company. It is evident that they own the land.

Mr. BELL. What they did was to improve an inlet, if I am not mistaken. They excavated and dredged an inlet, but there must be some property vested in the government of Canada.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. The hon. gentleman may be correct.

Grand river—to improve entrance, $1,000.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This is a revote of $1,000 to complete the improvement of the present entrance of Grand river and to remove a large rock that obstructs the channel.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). Where is this Grand river ? There are several of them.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. In Richmond County, Nova Scotia.

Grand Narrows—repairs to wharf, $400.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This is just for small repairs.

Mr. BLAIN. Who owns that wharf ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. The Dominion of Canada.

Mr. BLAIN. What were the receipts from that wharf last year ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. These improvements are being made at the request of the Department of Marine and Fisheries, but I have no record of the fees received.

Grand Etang—bridge works at entrance to pond, $1,000.

Mr. HACKETT. May I ask what this is intended for ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This is intended to complete the work.

Mr. McLENNAN. The government, in opening out the harbour of Grand Etang, took away the highway bridge and it is therefore bound to replace it. It was thought by the resident engineer that $1,000 would suffice to repair the old bridge, but it was found on examination that it was of no use whatever, and the engineer, upon re-examination, came to the conclusion that it was necessary to have an absolutely new bridge. Hence, the $1,000 additional to build this bridge.

Mr. HACKETT. I come from a province where the people have to build their own bridges even when the government takes away a part of their rights. I think it is strange on this occasion that the people of Canada should be asked to supply a bridge where the government of Canada have taken rights away from the people of the province. At present, in the province of Prince Edward Island, the people are contributing $12,000 towards the construction of a bridge across the Hillsborough river where their rights have been taken away by the Dominion government and the property is owned by this government. I think it is strange that we should be asked to contribute towards the construction of a bridge across the Grand Etang in Nova Scotia. It is true that under the British North America Act where a bridge connects two provinces the cost of that bridge is borne by the Dominion government, but where it is a private and local matter the costs should be borne by the province and not by the Dominion of Canada.

Mr. McLENNAN. This harbour has become a public harbour and the bridge is stretched across the middle of the harbour.

Mr. COCHRANE. There is a bridge across one of the best harbours on Lake Ontario, Presque Isle, and the cost of that bridge was borne by the municipality. I have never given a vote against the expenditure of money properly by the Dominion government in any province of the Dominion. I do not care where the money is going to be expended as long as it is for the benefit of the Dominion of Canada, but it must be confessed, if I understand this matter aright, that we must have a large amount of the money of the people expended in wharfs that are not necessary or the government is defrauded out of the revenue from them. Looking over the province of Nova Scotia, I find that there are twenty-four wharfs that have been built out of the Dominion exchequer and that there is not one cent of revenue from them. You may take whichever horn of the dilemma you have a mind to. If the wharfs are necessary they must do some business, and if they are doing some business the government is receiving no benefit from the expenditure of that money. We are given to understand that the people require this expenditure because they are exporting the commodities and the produce of their farms, There must be some revenue if the people require these wharfs. I find by referring to the Auditor General's report that there are twenty-four wharfs in Nova Scotia that do not pay one cent of revenue and there are nearly a dozen wharfs that are only paying a few cents. I might read the list but I do not want to detain the committee. It will be seen at page P—172, 173 what the receipts of the government are from the expenditure of these enormous sums of money. To my mind there must be something radically wrong. I do not see how we can come to any other conclusion. If these wharfs are necessary, and I want to repeat it with some emphasis, because we have always been ready to believe that they were required for the use of the people, there would be some evidence that business was done upon them. I am not so narrow minded as to say that if there is a community that requires a wharf that because it does not benefit the Dominion as a whole there should not be some expenditure of money, but, in these cases to which I am referring, if the people exported or imported anything there must be a revenue and if there is no revenue it is quite evident to any fair minded man that this money was expended when it was really not necessary for the benefit of the community in which the money was expended. I would like an explanation of the fact to clear my mind of suspicion.

Mr. McLENNAN. I forgot to mention that this is merely the rebuilding of a bridge constructed by the late government supported by hon. gentlemen opposite. The bridge was constructed by the late government and taken over from the provincial government and the municipality. The present government in seeking to vote this money is merely rebuilding the bridge constructed by the late government across that harbour.

Mr. COCHRANE. I asked for information and that is no information at all. I was not talking about the bridge.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. That happens to be the subject under discussion.

Mr. COCHRANE. In the province of Ontario a bridge is built across Presque Isle harbour, one of the finest harbours on Lake Ontario, a bridge similar to the one we have under discussion here and it was built by the municipality of Brighton. In the Auditor General's report I find that the revenue of Avonport was $2, which was an increase of seventy-one cents; Bear Point, thirty-four cents; Canada Creek, $2.83; and Chipman's Brook, $1.26. I might go over a dozen like that and then there are twenty-four from which there is no revenue at all. If the people amongst whom these wharfs are built have anything either to import or export there must be a revenue, and if there is no revenue, it is plain to my mind that the wharfs are built at places where they are not necessary.

Hon. Mr. TARTE. I may be allowed to explain to my hon. friend (Mr. Cochrane), because I know he is in perfect good faith, that I have visited the maritime provinces twice and I have come back with the conviction that the fishermen are a class of men that deserve special attention. We must not expect that they will pay dues for the use of small wharfs we are building. They are carrying on a large and profitable trade for the Dominion, and it is because I acquired that belief after having visited the maritime provinces, that I am responsible for the very many wharfs that appear to-day in these estimates. If my hon. friend would give himself the pleasure of visiting the maritime provinces he would appreciate the importance of these works. The fishermen are carrying on a most profitable trade for the Dominion and they deserve to be encouraged. When my friends on the other side will be in power they will build wharfs as the present government is building them to-day. This is not a party question by any means; it is a large public question and I invite my hon. friend (Mr. Cochrane) to think twice over what I have said in my very humble way, before condemning that expenditure of money.

Mr. INGRAM. Nova Scotia seems to be well served in this matter. There are fishermen in my own constituency who have paid their licenses for years and have never received any assistance to improve their harbours. In fact, they have had to find the money for that out of their own pockets.

Hon. Mr. TARTE. That is wrong then.

Mr. INGRAM. They applied for $1,000 or $2,000 to enable their boats to go in and out of the harbour, but they were refused. I myself have applied to the Marine Department and was refused and told to go to the Public Works Department. The government issue licenses to the fishermen and if they can render the harbours serviceable at a reasonable cost they are doing right in making these expenditures. But what we complain of is that the government puts an item in the estimates the first year and then for several years afterwards they come down asking more money for the same work. That is not right. When we pass an appropriation here to commence a work we should know the full cost of that work so that we may understand what we are doing. The system of applying for these works is either by petitioning the department, or getting a member who supports the government to apply for the improvements. He is asked what the work will cost, and he says $5,000 or $6,000 or $7,000, and the minister says: I will put an item of $2,000 in the estimates this year and next year we can get some more. I quote the 'Hansard' of 1902, page 1002, to show that what I state in this matter is correct:

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. On several occasions votes have been placed in the estimates without the department having full information as to the cost of the work to be carried out; and I must say that that is so in this case.

Mr. SPROULE. Why should it be so?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. It is a little difficult to say why, to be frank. Petitions are put in asking for works, and then a certain amount is placed in the estimates. Any man who has passed through the Department of Public Works knows that we have so many works that it is quite impossible to have surveys in every case.

Some hon. gentlemen from Nova Scotia may go back to their constituencies and say that the opposition is objecting to all these items. We don't object to these improvements, but we object to the system pursued by the government, which keeps the House in the dark as to what the ultimate cost of these works will be.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I agree with the hon. gentleman (Mr. Ingram) but he must remember that in no case to-night were we unable to estimate almost in detail the total cost of any work we asked a vote for. I hope in future to stick to that rule. There may be exceptions to every rule, but so far as I am concerned, I think it is a good rule, and I shall have a report and an estimate made on every work for which we ask a vote when that is possible. It is quite probable that it may take more than one year to do certain works, but I believe that the House should be in possession of full information as to what the probable cost of a work will be before we undertake it.

Mr. TAYLOR. We are pursuing the rather unusual course here of voting money for a bridge, and I would ask my hon. friend from Inverness (Mr. McLennan) who is conversant with this matter, if this is a swing bridge.

Mr. McLENNAN. There is a draw on this bridge.

Mr. TAYLOR. My hon. friend stated that this bridge was originally constructed by the late government. In what year was the money voted for it.

Mr. McLENNAN. The money was voted in 1895 and it was built in 1896.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. The hon. gentleman has treated this as a bridge over a natural channel, and he cited the case of a bridge in Ontario which was constructed over a harbour, and where the municipality had to build it. I do not understand that in that case there was any interference with the natural conditions. In this case the Dominion government for its own purpose in making a harbour, cut through the public highway and rendered a bridge necessary where there was no bridge required before, or perhaps only a small culvert. If the Dominion government had not touched the place there would be no necessity for the local authorities to put in a costly bridge at all. But if the Dominion government cut through the public highway and made a waterway across, then there was the same reason why the Dominion government should build a bridge over that as they would over a canal. I happen to know something about this, because I was in the government of Nova Scotia when the question was raised between the Dominion and local authorities as to who should build that bridge, and after full discussion, it was concluded that inasmuch the need for the bridge was caused by the construction by the Dominion government of what was practically a canal, they were as much obliged to provide a bridge over that waterway as they would be to provide a bridge over a canal in any part of Ontario. That is the principle upon which this bridge was constructed by the Dominion government.

Mr. HACKETT. I am not quite satisfied about this bridge yet. This is called a pond, but we have many of these ponds in the maritime provinces which may be called harbours, and this bridge at the entrance to this pond is going to cost $1,500 for repairs. I cannot yet see for the life of me why the people of Canada should pay for the building of a bridge to the entrance of that pond. I have known cases in Prince Edward Island where the Dominion government by deepening the water have caused the local authorities great expense to build bridges to accommodate the travelling public. This is merely an ordinary traffic bridge. It is simply a local bridge. A good deal has been said with regard to the amount expended in Nova Scotia for these public works. I have no fault to find with that expenditure. I speak in no carping spirit of the money spent on these improvements, and I can appreciate the needs of the fishermen of Nova Scotia in prosecuting their precarious industry, but we have a right to have these matters fully discussed in parliament, and when we find the public money is being diverted from its proper use, to have it explained by the government.

Mr. COCHRANE. Do I understand the Minister of Finance to say that the channel which this bridge covers was excavated by the Dominion government? What does pond mean? In our section of the country it means a body of still water. Is it utilized for a harbour?

Hon. Mr. FIELDING.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. This channel was constructed into a harbour.

Mr. COCHRANE. What was it before?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. There was no navigable channel before.

Green Cove—boat harbour, $6,600.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). Will the minister explain this?

Hon. Mr. ROSS (Victoria, N.S.) That work is in the county of Victoria, and is now under contract. The object is to have a harbour for the shelter of fishermen's boats.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. The total cost of this work is $6,600. It is now under contract. The amount of the contract is $6,275.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). What sized boats will it accommodate?

Hon. Mr. ROSS (Victoria, N.S.) Sailing boats belonging to the fishermen who go out quite long distances from the shore when the navigation opens, and continue till the fall of the year. Formerly they could not use larger boats because they had to haul them up in stormy weather. When this is built, the boats will be comfortably moored from the beginning of the fishing season till the fall of the year.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). Will it enable the fishermen to use larger boats?

Hon. Mr. ROSS (Victoria, N.S.) Yes, that is the object of it.

Mr. BLAIN. What system of collecting these small amounts from wharfs do the government adopt? Have they officials for that purpose?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Whenever a wharf is completed and turned over to the Marine Department, they appoint a wharfinger who collects the fees and turns them over to the department. In the case of these small wharfs which are built to provide shelter for fishermen, I doubt very much if fees are collected. In some cases wharfs are not turned over to the Marine Department, but are kept under the control of the Department of Public Works.

Mr. BLAIN. For instance, at Avonport, there was a revenue last year of $2. How would that be collected?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. It would be collected by a wharfinger.

Mr. BLAIN. What salary would be paid to the wharfinger?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. The general rule is to allow the wharfinger 25 per cent of the receipts.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. My impression is that where the collections do not reach the amount which the wharfinger is to be paid for his services, he is not obliged to make a return, and that may be the reason why some of these wharfs do not appear to pay any fees. I would not be positive as to that, but even in such cases I think the wharfinger ought to make a return to show what he receives and what he keeps. That is worth looking into.

Mr. BLAIN. I notice a number of wharfs returning from 37 cents up to $2. Can the minister tell us how these fees were collected, and what percentage of salary was paid to the persons who made the collections ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. That is information to be obtained from the Marine Department. There is no doubt that the small return made to the department is the amount over and above the salary or percentage allowed to the wharfinger for collecting the fees and attending to the wharf.

Mr. BLAIN. Do I understand that the man making this return of $2 will receive a percentage on more that that amount ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. He may or he may not.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. That may be the net revenue after paying his fees. I will look into that.

Mr. HACKETT. What are the duties of a wharfinger ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. To take care of the wharf and collect the wharfage rates.

Mr. HACKETT. What do you mean by taking care of the wharf ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. His chief duty would be to see that every person who used the wharf would pay a proper wharfage rate. He would also see that no damage was done to the wharf.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). I agree with the Minister of Finance that in any case there should be a return made of the amount collected. When there is no return, you may assume that the wharfinger has not collected the amount of his remuneration, but you have no guarantee of that.

Mr. COCHRANE. What is understood by a boat harbour ? I understand that it means a harbour for fishermen ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. Yes.

Mr. COCHRANE. It would be convenient if that term were applied to all these harbours which are built solely for fishermen, so that when we came to them we would not expect any revenue. In several cases to-night we were told that a wharf was necessary. As I said before, I am prepared to vote the money if it is necessary, but it must be necessary for importing or exporting something, and if so there must be some revenue. Does the wharfinger take any of the receipts of the wharf for repairs?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. Not Without special order.

Mr. COCHRANE. If the wharf is necessary for the people in order to serve in the export for their commodities and the import of what they require, there must be a revenue from it, and that would appear in the Auditor General's Report. If there is no revenue then the wharf is not necessary or the wharfinger is pocketing the money.

Hawk Point Inlet, N.S., boat channel, $1,000.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This is to permit a larger class of boats going in than now pass through. This will complete the work.

Herring Cove, breakwater, $9,800.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). By tender, I suppose ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Yes, the work is let to the lowest tenderer. It is in Halifax county.

Janvrin's Island wharf, $2,000.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). Is this a new work ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Yes, the total estimated cost is $2,000.

Mr. CLANCY. Has anything been done up to this time ? It appears to have been standing some years and nothing spent.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. No, nothing has been spent.

Mr. INGRAM. What is the idea of voting this year after year and not spending the money ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. A considerable number of votes were taken for small works down in that province and the engineer in charge with his staff has not been able to look after them all.

Mr. INGRAM. It is not very pressing.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. The people there seem to think it is important. I shall try and see that it is attended to during the next few months.

Mr. CLANCY. What year was the first vote taken ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I have not the records.

Mr. CLANCY. Was it before the last election ?

Mr. MATHESON. The vote was taken last year.

Mr. CLANCY. I think the hon. gentleman is mistaken. If he will look at the estimates he will find that it was taken before last year.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. No, last year was the first time this vote was taken.

Judique, repairs, &c., to breakwater, $400.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). What is the total cost ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. $1,300.

Kingsport, reconstruction of pier, $3,000.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). What is the necessity for this ?

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE. This is a government breakwater which was constructed some twenty or thirty years ago and on which probably $30,000 of Dominion money has been expended. A year ago last autumn, as the result of a very severe gale, a portion of the pier was injured very seriously, and this money is for the purpose of repairs.

Mr. INGRAM. How long is the pier ?

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE. About 500 feet.

Mr. INGRAM. What proportion was torn down or blown away ?

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE. The upper portion of the pier was twisted over down to within a few feet of the bottom. It is a tidal pier and when the tide is out it is dry land, but there is about thirty feet of water when the tide is in. This storm came while the tide was in, and the force of the waves carried probably forty or fifty feet of the end of the pier over.

Mr. INGRAM. Will this put it in good shape and be all the money required ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. The engineer estimates that this will complete the work and put it in good shape.

Mr. TAYLOR. I see by the Auditor General's Report that last year there was expended on this work $9,208.70 and now we are asked to spend another $4,000. On page V—208 I find that Mr. Alfred Totter was conductor for 181 days at $2.50 per day and that Mr. Eben Cox was foreman for sixty-four days at $2.50 a day. I notice that on all these constructions of piers and wharfs there is a conductor at $2.50 or $3 per day, but in this case there were both a conductor and a foreman at $2.50 per day—and all for an expenditure of $9,000. What are their respective duties ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. The conductor is the man who buys the material and generally conducts the work. The foreman of construction is a mechanic who sees that the work is done properly by the men engaged.

Mr. TAYLOR. How much will the work cost altogether ?

Mr. CLANCY.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. The total cost will be $41,790.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). One would suppose that a practical man could both superintend the work and buy the material. That is merely a suggestion. Perhaps, for some reason he cannot do it.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. In some circumstances, that might be so. But this is a considerable work, and if he went away to look after material, leaving no one to take charge of the men, it might not be an economical arrangement.

Mr. COCHRANE. What is it built of ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Timber.

Mr. COCHRANE. In our section to do work with timber economically we would have the timber cut in the water, when it could be hauled cheaply and then built in the summer.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. That was done with many works.

Mr. COCHRANE. Then, you would not need two men. One man capable of buying timber would also see that the work was done.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. There are two men named, but they are not both on all the time.

Larry's river, breakwater, $14,250.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This work is under contract. The amount being $15,840. The contractors are Reid & Archibald, of Halifax.

Mr. INGRAM. What is this work and what constituency is it in ?

Mr. FRASER. In my constituency. This is a small fair harbour. Two years ago there came a terrific storm by which the mouth of the harbour was filled up.

Mr. COCHRANE. With suckers ?

Mr. FRASER. No, largely with rocks. The people there own quite a number of schooners, and this vote is to make a breakwater.

Mr. KAULBACH. How many schooners ?

Mr. FRASER. I do not know how many—but quite a number of schooners ply between there and Halifax and go to the fishing grounds. This is a very necessary work.

Mr. INGRAM. What did the hon. gentleman (Mr. Fraser) do in order to get the department to undertake this work ?

Mr. FRASER. Nothing, except to ask them to send the engineer. The need of the work was so apparent that the engineer reported in favour of it without another word from me.

Mr. INGRAM. Will the hon. gentleman say what time the engineer reported ?

Mr. FRASER. I think it was last year.

Mr. INGRAM. Before the session of parliament ?

Mr. FRASER. I am not sure of the date of my report. The first vote was given last session.

Mr. INGRAM. If the hon. gentleman (Mr. Fraser) will refer to page 1002 of last year's 'Hansard' he will see that the hon. minister says there was no report.

Mr. FRASER. There may have been no report at that time. The engineer was there. But I may say about the engineers in Nova Scotia—and I am speaking in the presence of the hon. minister—that last year I think I had four reports to be made in my county, and one of them is not made yet. The engineers have so little help, at least that is what they say, that they do not make reports. They were ordered to make this report before the vote. There was a report came in before any contract was made.

Mr. INGRAM. That is what we complain of on this side—that the department was induced to put a sum in the estimates last year without a report, for the minister was asked what the probable cost would be and he said he had no idea, for there was no estimate to show. Now, hon. gentlemen opposite can quite understand that we are justified in complaining about estimates so made. This is not a business way for a business administration to do—to bring down votes without preparing an estimate, so that both sides may know what they are doing.

Lingan, beach protection, $1,000.

Mr. INGRAM. Why is this money asked this year for this work ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This makes a total of $1,600 for this work—$600 last year and $1,000 this year. This is brush and stone work, to repair damage made in beach protection work.

Mr. INGRAM. But we were told that the $600 voted last year would complete the work.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This damage may have occurred during the interval. It may be that the $600 is for repairs then required, but that since then the necessity has arisen for spending this money.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). The hand of Providence seems to have been very hard on these works.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. It does seem to have been stormy in Nova Scotia.

Mr. INGRAM. But there must be some reasonable excuse for this vote if it is worthy of our consideration.

Mr. COCHRANE. In all seriousness, what is this vote for ? What do we understand by 'beach protection ?' There must be something inside the beach in which the public is interested in order to justify this work.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. As I understand it, these are small natural harbours which are injured by the waves of the seas, and, to protect them, brush and stone are put down to make a shelter to protect the points of beach from washing away. It is much cheaper than building wharfs.

Mr. COCHRANE. So this is to protect some point that might otherwise be washed away ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Yes.

Lunenburg, dredging harbour, $5,000.

Mr. KAULBACH. This is a revote of a sum that has been standing in the estimates for a number of years—and why it should be there, without being appropriated, I cannot understand. My friends say it is to please the people. My own opinion is that they would be better pleased with a vote of this kind if it were expended. I was told last year it was for the want of a proper dredge to do that work, as a large amount of work had to be done. The government is right in saying it is an immense work for it is required for the benefit of the shipping of these ports. I speak without boasting when I say that the ports of Lunenburg and Bridgewater are two of the most important ports in the whole province. Lunenburg owns a larger amount of shipping than the whole of Halifax. Bridgewater has a very large amount of shipping also, and of heavier tonnage going in and out of that port. And why both of these ports should be hampered in the way, and that for years for want of a proper dredge to do the dredging, I can not understand. The Minister of Public Works and the Minister of Finance were at these ports three or four years ago. They came in a steamer measuring about fifty tons.

They happened to be there at low tide, and had they remained fifteen minutes longer they would have been compelled to remain until the return of the tide, some twelve hours. The boat turned up the mud as they went out of the harbour, so shallow was the water near the pier, and that shallowness of water extended all over the harbour. The banks of the harbour are alluvial, and the wash from the repeated rains carry the debris into the harbour and fill it up from year to year. Now to show the necessity for that dredging, I will say that last year, had we not used smaller vessels, we would have been deprived of the opportunity of importing salt from across the ocean in large steamers for the want of a sufficient depth of water. We are compelled to confine ourselves strictly to smaller vessels in order to bring in that supply. The shallowness of water also deprives us of the industry of ship building of heavy tonnage. This year we built something like thirty odd vessels of a fair size, averaging from one hundred to three hundred and fifty tons, and they require a considerable depth of water to float them. Now these amounts have been in the estimates for a long time, and has not been expended, I would ask when is this going to end? By delay they are discouraging the industry of shipbuilding. I venture to say that the coming year there will scarcely be any vessels built, for they will not be able to come into those ports on account of shallow water. When that industry of shipbuilding is interfered with the consequence is an interference with the industry of the woodsman supplying the timber and the carpenters as well engaged in construction. It interferes largely also with the traders.

Now, when told last year that for the want of a dredge this money was not expended in either Bridgewater or Lunenburg, I took it for granted that I had an indirect promise that dredges were being built, and that in a little while these dredges would be in service, and would be placed at work in those two ports. A dredge was built, as I understand, and has been in use the past year. Will the Minister of Public Works say that there has been no dredge in Nova Scotia during the past year? I do not think he can say so, for I have learned that a lot of dredging has been done during the past year; but why Lunenburg and Bridgewater should be overlooked and other ports of less consequence cared for, I cannot for the life of me understand. I am here to represent the interests of the people, and I claim that work as a right. I feel satisfied that the government are doing themselves a serious injury, they are injuring the industry of ship-building, and are indirectly hurting other industries as well by not giving us those dredges. Bridgewater requires a large amount of dredging, because it is a navigable river for about twenty miles. The bar requires dredging as well as the upper parts of the river, where there has been a large amount of sawdust deposited as well as refuse from the banks of the river. But I ask the minister in all seriousness that he will not look upon this request as of small moment, but that he will give it the recognition it deserves. I hope that this year dredges will be placed in service at Lunenburg and Bridgewater and Mahone Bay, and I feel satisfied that if the minister will consider the case for a moment, he will be convinced of the absolute necessity of this work, unless he wants to stop the navigation of those waters entirely.

Mr. RICHARDSON. We passed a similar item to-night with regard to an appropriation for Bridgewater. We pass these appropriations from year to year and still we have no assurance that any work will be undertaken this year any more than it has been done in the past. I think we should have some assurance from the Minister of Public Works that something will be done, that these harbours will be dredged. It seems to be useless to pass these votes from year to year without we have an understanding from the Minister of Public Works that some progress will be made.

Mr. KAULBACH. I am waiting for an answer from the Minister of Public Works with respect to the request that I have made for an expenditure at those two ports.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. Before my hon. friend the Minister of Public Works answers, I want to say a word on the subject myself. If the presence of this vote in the estimates is offensive to my hon. friend from Lunenburg (Mr. Kaulbach), we will get over that matter very easily by striking it out. When he alluded a moment ago to the policy of keeping this vote on the book in order to deceive the people, and so forth, if he is serious, I think we will accommodate him by striking it out. But I venture to say that if we did strike it out he would be the first to complain, and to ask why we did not revote it. It is a fact that all along the Atlantic coast of Nova Scotia we are experiencing difficulties in the matter of dredging. We have one or two little dredges of an inferior pattern which are doing a little work, but we are not well equipped with dredging plant. In the case of the great lakes, where the government have no dredges available, it is sometimes found possible to hire private dredges. We are willing to hire dredges for the coast of Nova Scotia if they could be found. When I interested myself in the matter, and asked the late Minister of Public Works to make an inquiry whether we could obtain dredges, I know he did make an inquiry, and he was not able to obtain dredges from any quarter. They are not to be found, they are not available. We are now building a couple of dredges, but they are large works, and the construction proceeds slowly. But as soon as these dredges are completed, we hope that some of these important works can be attended to; but if we cannot get the dredges, if we cannot hire them or get them constructed in a short time, then it would be useless for us to make a promise to my hon. friend that we will do this work. I am as anxious as he is to have the work done. I appreciate the importance of Lunenburg and Bridgewater, and I heartily agree with him that Lunenburg is the most important point on the whole coast as regards the deep sea fishing industry. I sympathize heartily with him, but I do not think his case was as urgent as some other cases, for Lunenburg has a fine harbour. It is beginning to suffer, and I appreciate his desire that it should be dredged. If dredges are used in some other cases, it is because the work for the moment seemed more urgent. There are some cases where the work was more urgent for the moment, though not of more importance. Then with respect to Bridgewater particularly, there is no dredge that we have in the maritime provinces which is at all suitable for that work. If it is a question of transferring a dredge from one place to another, I am sure that I am correct in stating in the hearing of the late Minister of Public Works and of the present minister and of the engineers of the department, that we have not a dredge in the lower provinces which is capable of doing the work at Bridgewater. We do not want to withdraw the vote, my hon. friend would not desire us to do so. Even though we are not in a position to guarantee the doing of the work, we leave it there as an evidence of good faith ; and if we can buy, or build, or hire dredges, we are as anxious as he is that this work and other works along the coast of Nova Scotia shall be provided for.

Hon. Mr. TARTE. What is the depth of water at Lunenburg ?

Mr. KAULBACH. At low tide it would be little more than nine feet, and our smallest schooners draw that amount of water. In regard to the remarks of the hon. gentleman, I know he is inclined to be generous, but, still at the same time, I did not like to hear a remark made by him in regard to the withdrawal of the vote.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. I do not think my hon. friend is serious in pressing it.

Mr. KAULBACH. I did not refer to it in any disingenious way at all. If there is any difficulty in obtaining dredges for work of that description I will ask the hon. Minister of Public Works if he will permit me to get parties to construct dredges and place them at the service of the government at a certain rate per cubic yard. If so, I will be prepared to get parties to construct dredges that will do all the dredging required.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. I know the hon. Minister of Public Works does not hear my hon. friend's question as he is engaged in conversation at the present moment, and under these circumstances I will presume to answer it. I think my hon. friend is mistaken when he says that he can obtain dredges so readily. The construction of a modern dredge is not by any means so simple a matter as some suppose. I do not think my hon. friend can get any dredges, but if he knows anybody who has a dredge available and suitable to the work along the Atlantic coast and would place that party in communication with the hon. Minister of Public Works I am quite sure he will have ample employment at dredging at fair and reasonable rates. As to the particular places to which the dredge should go first, I am sure my hon. friend will agree with me that while he mentioned Lunenburg and Bridgewater they are not the only places that are complaining. If he knows anybody who is prepared to place a dredge at the disposal of the government on the Atlantic coast at a fair and reasonable rate, I am quite sure he will have an ample opportunity for employment.

Mr. KAULBACH. I am not anxious to encourage the introduction of dredges from across the border, but I can get dredges in the United States that will go to work in the course of a very little while and do the work necessary at so much per cubic yard and I think it can be done quite as cheaply as by constructing dredges by the government and employing parties to do the work. I do not approve of going across the border and bringing workmen or dredges here, but at the same time, I approve of the government insisting that this work shall be completed at the earliest possible moment.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). I think it is really unconstitutional to go into supply at all on Mondays but I have not objected to it. We had better stop now.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I am pleased with the progress we have made and I shall be glad to meet the views of the Committee.

Some resolutions reported.

ADJOURNMENT—BUSINESS OF THE HOUSE.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE (Hon. W. S. Fielding) moved the adjournment of the House.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). There were some papers to be brought down in connection with the Redistribution Bill—correspondence with the government of New Brunswick.

The MINISTER OF JUSTICE (Hon. Charles Fitzpatrick). I have the correspondence here but it is in such shape that I would hardly like to put it on the Table of the House. I will have it arranged and bring it down to-morrow.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). What business will we take up to-morrow ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. We may take several bills including, I think, the Rt. Hon. Prime Minister intended, the Redistribution Bill for the second reading, and if we get beyond that, Supply.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). The Rt. Hon. Prime Minister mentioned that matter to me personally. I do not know whether we will have these documents down sufficiently early to enable us to go on with the Redistribution Bill.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. Did my hon. friend mention it to the Prime Minister ?

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). I did, and he said that if any difficulty of that kind arose he would not insist upon it.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. Whatever arrangement the hon. gentleman has made with the Prime Minister will be carried out. In that case we may take some of the Bills on the Order Paper and then supply.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). We really want to look at this correspondence before the second reading, because, if any discussion arises in regard to this matter, it will be on the second reading. Therefore, we should have these documents a reasonable length of time beforehand. I hardly think at present we will be justified in going on with the discussion to-morrow.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. If my hon. friend has had an understanding with the Prime Minister I have nothing to add. It will be carried out.

Motion agreed to, and House adjourned at 11.35 p.m.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.

TUESDAY, April 7, 1903.

The SPEAKER took the Chair at Three o'clock.

FIRST READING.

Bill (No. 87) to incorporate the Vancouver and Coast Kootenay Railway Company.—Mr. Macpherson.

OFFICIAL REPORT OF DEBATES.

Mr. L. N. CHAMPAGNE (Wright) moved:

That the second report of the Select Committee appointed to supervise the Official Report of the Debates of this House during the present session, which recommends that Mr. S. A. Mackay be paid at the rate of $4 per day from the 20th May, 1902, to 3rd April, instant, for services rendered as temporary substitute on the staff of the translators of the debates be adopted.

Mr. HENRI BOURASSA (Labelle). (Translation.) Before this motion passes, I think it desirable that the chairman of the committee should give us a few words of explanation. Did this Mr. Mackay, who has been employed on the translating staff of the Debates ever pass his qualifying examination ? If not, I should like to know the reasons which have induced the committee to depart from the rule which has been so strictly adhered to within the last two or three years, in the case of the translators of our 'Debates.' If Mr. Mackay did not pass the required examination, why was he given employment in that capacity ?

Hon. Mr. FIELDING.

Mr. CHAMPAGNE. (Translation.) I think it will be sufficient in order to satisfy my hon. friend, to state to the House the facts of the case, such as they have been brought to the notice of the Debates Committee. The facts will show that the claim put in by Mr. Mackay is a just one. Let me, then briefly review the facts in connection with that claim. At the beginning of last session Mr. Mackay was engaged as a translator by the committee, at the rate of $4 a day. That appointment was necessitated by the fact that Mr. Beaulieu, one of the officers of the regular translating staff was incapacitated owing to his poor health, from doing his work. Mr. Beaulieu, as my hon. friend from St. John and Iberville reminds me, was the former chief of the translating staff. As I said, the committee, finding it necessary to employ temporary assistance, sceured Mr. Mackay's services and recommended that he be paid at the rate of $4 a day, which was equivalent for the work resulting from the session, to the sum of $1,000 which was the salary then paid to the officers of the regular staff. Later on, and while Mr. Beaulieu was still unable to discharge his duties, the position of the other officers of the permanent staff was changed, so far as their salary was concerned. Towards the close of the session of 1902, the House of Commons, acting upon the recommendation of the Select Committee appointed to supervise the official report of the Debates of this House, thought it proper to raise the salary of the officers of the translating staff from $1,000 to $1,500. Up to that time, they had received $1,000 per session ; but the House deemed it desirable to grant them a salary of $1,500 per annum, instead of $1,000 per session. But it was not within the power of the committee to interfere with Mr. Mackay's position so far as the payments for his work was concerned. That gentleman, therefore, continued being employed temporarily on the staff, as the Hansard Committee was in hopes that Mr. Beaulieu would soon recover his health and resume his former occupation. The fact is that Mr. Beaulieu died three months after the close of the session, in the month of August, I think. Mr. Mackay being engaged only temporarily, we did not think it within our power to increase his salary, as the House had deemed it proper to do, upon the recommendation of the committee in the case of the officers who compose the permanent staff, to whom the House had granted, for the future, a salary of $1,500. When the matter came up before the committee, and after the facts I have just referred to had been stated to them, namely, that Mr. Mackay had been engaged temporarily, they came to the conclusion that he was entitled to ask for the same remuneration as was paid to the other translators. After taking all the facts of the case into consideration, the committee deemed it but fair, and I think the House will agree with them, that Mr. Mackay should be put upon a footing of equality with the rest of the translating staff.

My hon. friend from Labelle was anxious to know whether Mr. Mackay had gone through the test of an examination, thereby calling in doubt the competency of that gentleman. I must say that Mr. Mackay did not pass the examination which has been required within the last few years from all candidates who aspire to an appointment on the regular translating staff. The reason why the committee did not deem it proper to enforce the rule with that rigour the hon. gentleman seems to take exception to, is that Mr. Mackay was only appointed as a temporary substitute on the staff, in order to fill the vacancy created by Mr. Beaulieu's illness. I may further say, for the information of the House, that the committee did by no means depart from the rigour they have brought, within the past three or four years, to the discharge of their duty, in the matter of appointing translators on the regular staff, to fill such vacancies as may occur in that office. As concerns those appointments, there was no change made at all. Now, in the case of Mr. Mackay, his appointment was but a temporary one, the committee did not think it necessary to insist upon his passing such an examination as is required from candidates who aspire to be appointed on the regular staff. As I just remarked, the committee was then in hopes that Mr. Beaulieu would soon recuperate his health, and that explains why a permanent appointment was out of question. Under such circumstances, we deemed it fair and reasonable, seeing that Mr. Mackay had been discharging the same duties and doing the same work as the other translators, to ask the House to grant him a similar salary.

Such are the explanations I wanted to give to the House, and I hope they will prove satisfactory to my hon. friend from Labelle (Mr. Bourassa). At all events, I may say that the members of the Debates Committee, after taking into consideration the facts I have just stated, have, without a dissentient voice, reached the conclusion that it was but fair and reasonable to make this recommendation to the House.

Mr. BOURASSA. (Translation). I may venture to suggest that, unless I am mistaken, when Mr. Mackay was appointed last year, as temporary substitute on the staff of the translators of the Debates during Mr. Beaulieu's illness, there were other candidates to that position who had passed their examination and had secured a certificate of competency. What I complain of is this, that the committee should have selected a man to fill Mr. Beaulieu's place who had not stood the test of an examination. I would be the last man to cast any blame upon the Hansard Committee for rigidly enforcing that rule, should they enforce it indiscriminately in every case. I may add that, whenever the committee stand in need of extra help for the translating staff, they should make their appointments from the ranks of those who have passed their examination, instead of going out of their way to select men whose only recommendation is that they have some pull and political influence at their back.

Mr. CHAMPAGNE. (Translation.) Let my hon. friend allow me to tell him that were the statement he has just made borne out by the actual facts, he would be fully justified in taking exception to such a condition of affairs, but the fact is that Mr. Mackay was engaged temporarily, before the committee had decided that any examinations should be held. In other words, Mr. Mackay was appointed on the translating staff temporarily, previous to the time when the examination was held. The examination only took place three or four weeks after Mr. Mackay had been appointed temporarily on the translating staff.

Motion agreed to.

BUSINESS OF THE HOUSE.

The PRIME MINISTER (Rt. Hon. Sir Wilfrid Laurier) moved :

That after the Easter Recess to the end of the session, government Orders have precedence on Wednesdays, immediately after questions to be put by members.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). While there is not a very large list of items on the Public Bills and Orders, still there are some measures of considerable importance and as the government has taken Thursday so recently it is hardly necessary to take Wednesday at so early a date. I would suggest to the Prime Minister that we should have one or two Wednesdays more, I would prefer two.

The PRIME MINISTER. If my hon. friend would agree, I would be willing to give him one Wednesday, and the motion will then read 'On and including Wednesday the 22nd inst.'

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). I have been considering the matter since I spoke to the hon. gentleman on the subject, and we would prefer to have two Wednesdays more.

The PRIME MINISTER. Very well. If it be the wish of my hon. friend I will amend the motion so as to read 'On and including Wednesday the 29th inst.'

Motion agreed to.

BUDGET SPEECH.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE (Hon. W. S. Fielding). Might I be permitted to say, that if nothing arises to make it inconvenient, I would expect the delivery of the budget speech to take place on the Thursday after the Easter recess.

EASTER RECESS.

The PRIME MINISTER moved :

That when this House adjourns on Wednesday next, it stand adjourned until Tuesday, the 14th inst.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). I suppose the members on both sides would like to know whether or not the usual practice will be followed of adjourning at 6 o'clock on Wednesday.

The PRIME MINISTER. I suppose we had better.

Motion agreed to.

DOMINION CONTROVERTED ELECTIONS ACT.

House again in Committee on Bill (No. 13) to amend the Dominion Controverted Elections Act.—The Minister of Justice.

The MINISTER OF JUSTICE (Hon. Charles Fitzpatrick). This Bill was considered in committee before and it stood to enable the hon. leader of the opposition to look into it.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). In one section of the present law the judges are empowered to extend the time of the trial of an election petition upon special grounds shown by affidavit. Possibly the first section of this Bill would mean that, but I would prefer to have it made perfectly plain that the grounds should be disclosed to the judge on affidavit.

The MINISTER OF JUSTICE. I have no objection to that. Perhaps if we added the words 'upon cause shown' that would meet the case. The committee might rise with the understanding that the amendment suggested by hon. friend would be made.

On section 2,

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). The ordinary powers which a judge has are extended to enable him to detain a witness in custody until the time arrives for him to give evidence ; that is the only change the clause makes in the present law.

The MINISTER OF JUSTICE. There may be a case in which such a proceeding is necessary. It appears that the necessity for such an amendment arose, because it was suggested to me by the chief justice of Manitoba.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). I do not see any objection to it.

Mr. EMMERSON. I would invite the consideration of the Minister of Justice, as to whether it would not be desirable to have the witness placed at times in the custody of a jailer rather than held by the officer. It may be that there would be an adjournment, and in the meantime it would not be desirable that the officer should continue to have the party in charge.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). It says 'or otherwise' in the statute.

The MINISTER OF JUSTICE. Upon the understanding that I shall have the Bill amended for the purpose of meeting the suggestion of the leader of the opposition, I would ask that the committee rise and ask leave to sit again.

Progress reported.

CIVIL SERVICE SUPERANNUATION.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE (Hon. W. S. Fielding) moved second reading of Bill (No. 49) to amend the Civil Service Superannuation Act. He said : This is a Bill based upon resolutions which we considered in Committee some time ago. It deals with fractions of a year.

Motion agreed to, Bill read the second time, considered in Committee, reported, read the third time and passed.

MILITIA PENSION ACT.

Bill (No. 78) to amend the Militia Pension Act, 1901 (Minister of Militia and Defence), read the second time and House went into Committee thereon.

On section 1,

Some hon. MEMBERS. Explain.

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFNCE (Hon. Sir Frederick Borden). The object of this Bill is to make the pension law for the permanent force similar to the law passed last year for the North-west Mounted Police ; that is to say, to enable a civil servant who is entitled under the Civil Service Superannuation Act to a pension, to participate in the benefits of the Superannuation Act for the time that he has been a member of the Civil Service and to the extent of the money which he has paid into the superannuation fund. It will be noticed that at the end of this proposed subsection 7, there is a reference to subsection 2 of section 5 of the Militia Pension Act. By that subsection it is enacted that in case an officer has not served the full length of time to entitle him to full superannuation, that is, in case he has not paid into the pension fund for the full length of 25 years, he will receive his pension subject to a deduction of 5 per cent per annum for the time he has not paid. This Bill provides that in case he has been a civil servant, he shall get the benefit of the 2½ or 3 per cent, or whatever the rate may be, that he has paid under the Superannuation Act for the time that he has been a member of the civil service. To illustrate : suppose a man has been a civil servant for ten years, and has paid into the superannuation fund regularly during that time his 2½ or 3 per cent, and is then appointed an officer in the permanent force or on the staff, where he becomes entitled to a pension under the Militia Pension Act. This Act will enable him to receive the full benefit of that payment for the ten years that he has been in the civil service, but he will be charged the difference between the amount he has paid into the superannuation fund and the 5 per cent charged under the Pension Act. The House passed precisely the same legislation last session in connection with the Pension Act for the North-west Mounted Police.

Hon. Mr. TISDALE. I understand that he does not get anything under the Civil Service Superannuation Act ?

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE. Nothing at all, and he would lose that but for this provision.

Hon. Mr. HAGGART. I did not clearly understand the hon. minister. Under the Civil Service Pension Act an official pays two and a half per cent per year. Under the military system he would have to pay five per cent per year. On retiring from the military service, he gets the benefit of his civil service and military service, provided he pays the difference between the two percentages.

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE. That is it.

Hon. Mr. HAGGART. But the government loses the interest on the payments of the extra two and a half per cent during ten or fifteen years.

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE. No, the government has the money.

Hon. Mr. HAGGART. At the end of the term, the official pays the difference between two and a half and five per cent. But if he had been all the time in the military service, he would have paid five per cent per year. Therefore, when he pays it in a lump sum at the end of the term, the government loses the interest, which may be quite a large amount.

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE. That may be.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). I do not quite understand how the concluding words of this section. 'Subject to the provisions of subsection two of section five,' can apply.

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE. Take two cases. Suppose an officer has served twenty-five years, fifteen of which were before there was any Pension Act. During those fifteen years he paid nothing, but he will get his pension for the twenty-five years less deduction made of the premiums during the fifteen years, when he did not pay anything. Take another case. An officer has paid during ten years two and a half per cent into the civil service superannuation fund. During the next fifteen years he has paid five per cent into the military service pension fund. Under this Bill, the intention is only to charge him the two and a half per cent during those ten years instead of the five.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). The difficulty is this. Subsection two of section five of the present law provides for the case of an officer who in years gone by had no deduction whatever made from his pay. You strike an average of his pay and then make a deduction from his pension of five per cent on that average for every year during which he paid nothing. But how can you make this subsection apply to the present case, for you are not making a deduction of five per cent but only of two and a half per cent. You are applying a clause which deals specifically with one case to another and a different case.

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE. I see the difficulty now, and will consider the matter. The five per cent is mentioned; and therefore, I think it would be desirable to draw up a clause long enough to state exactly what is intended.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). I think that would be the safer course.

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE. I move that the Committee rise, report progress and ask leave to sit again.

Hon. Mr. HAGGART. Before the Committee rises, I would like to understand the practical use of this amendment. I cannot understand a civil servant who has been eight or ten years in the service getting an appointment on the staff or going into the permanent corps. Is it intended to have some ex post facto effect ? Is it to cover the case of some officer who has been in the department?

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE. No. No particular case is aimed at, but I will give the hon. gentleman (Hon. Mr. Haggart) a case such as would be covered by this. It is intended, in the near future, to transfer the stores branch of my department to the military side, making it an ordnance branch and putting it under military supervision. Now, we have in the stores branch civil servants who have been paying for years to the civil service fund. For instance, there is the head of that branch; and it would certainly be manifestly unfair to deprive him of the benefit of the money he has paid into the superannuation fund.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). What was passing through my mind was the question whether the converse will happen, and some officer will go from the permanent corps to the civil service ?

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE. Not likely. The Pension Act is very much better here.

Progress reported.

SUPPLY—ACCOMMODATION FOR IMMIGRANTS.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE (Hon. W. S. Fielding) moved that the House go again into Committee of Supply.

Mr. NATHANIEL BOYD (Macdonald). Mr. Speaker, before you leave the Chair, I wish to draw your attention, and the attention of hon. members, to a matter that I believe, is of great importance and one to which the House should give very careful consideration. I refer to the immigration which is now coming into Manitoba and the North-west Territory. I have here a copy of the Winnipeg 'Telegram,' of Saturday last. There is an item in that paper which, together with the headings, is as follows :

SLEEP ON FLOOR OF WAITING ROOM.

Hundreds of Immigrants Here Without Accommodation—Facilities Inadequate.

The Canadian Pacific Railway depot and the immigration offices were crowded all day yesterday with hundreds of new arrivals.

Everything appeared inadequate for the requirements. The Canadian Pacific Railway depot is lined all round with trunks, valises and packages of every description of the incoming immigrants, the waiting rooms were crowded, and the immigration offices were far too small to accommodate the inquirers at the counters. Some of the officers were outside, and others surrounded at their desks giving information to the anxious inquirers.

So great was the number of arrivals on Thursday night that it was impossible for them to secure accommodation in the immigration hall or at the hotels. The Canadian Pacific Railway officials threw open their waiting rooms and hundreds slept on the floors.

The second section of the transcontinental express brought in 615 immigrants, and this made up for the number that had been sent out during the day to their locations throughout Manitoba and the west. The situation was not, therefore, relieved in any way.

Now, Mr. Speaker, I think you will agree with me that that is a rather sad condition for the country to be in to receive settlers at this time of the year, in a climate such as ours. Some provision should have been made to receive these people and take care of them. It cannot be said that this rush has come upon the government unexpectedly. It is not that the government have not been warned of what is likely to occur. For, Sir, I have but to refer to the reports of the Department of the Interior of 1900-01 and 1901-02 to show the contrary. In the report of 1900-01, Mr. Smith, the immigration agent at Winnipeg, spoke of the influx then anticipated in this way. I quote from page 127 :

Over 5,000 American visitors attended the Winnipeg fair on Americans' day, and those presenting themselves at our information bureau at the fair were freely supplied with literature which has undoubtedly helped towards securing the increased immigration of United States citizens apparent during the fiscal year.

And he goes on, further down on the same page :

Nothwithstanding the increased convenience and shelter for immigrants at the East Selkirk building, the demands upon the accommodation of the hall here are very great, and are almost continuous. Large numbers of people daily visit the office on all conceivable kinds of business, and innumerable inquiries upon a great variety of subjects are answered by the staff of officials.

In the succeeding report of the department, that of 1901-02, we find Mr. Smart, the deputy minister speaking of the anticipated immigration. This is the report made by him on his return from England. At page 40, he said :

I may say that from all I have been able to gather I feel satisfied that the present year will see a very largely increased number of people remove to Canada from Great Britain and Ireland.

And in that same report, at page 125, we have Mr. Smith reporting as follows :

With the very large increase in the number of people passing through the hands of the staff connected with this office the duties of each official have been very materially increased, and I am pleased to know that the work has been carried on efficiently. With the possibility of a much greater increase of work, I beg to recommend the immediate erection of much larger office premises, and improvements in the buildings at Winnipeg, which are required to enable us to carry on our work with accuracy and rapidity.

So, Mr. Speaker, as far back as two years ago the reports of the officers of the department showed that they anticipated this influx of people into Manitoba and the North-west. And yet, what do we find ? Were any improvements ordered or any preparations made to receive these people ? Was any vote put in the estimates to provide money for buildings for their accommodation ? Why, Sir, in the estimates voted last year you will find that for public buildings for Manitoba there is the sum of $5,000. The votes for some of the other provinces are as follows : Nova Scotia, $61,500; New Brunswick, $33,000; Quebec, $103,000; Ontario, $222,800. And just $5,000 for public buildings for Manitoba, notwithstanding that officers of the Crown who were passing from one part of the empire to the other inducing people to come here, and notwithstanding that that officer of the department told the government what might be expected and warned them of what would be required to accommodate the people. Here the influx is upon the government, and the new-comers have to lie upon the floors of the station in Winnipeg.

I would ask you, Mr. Speaker, who I have no doubt sympathize with these people, if you consider the government have done what they should do in this matter, if you think they have placed a sufficient sum in the estimates for public buildings in Manitoba, under those conditions. I think, Sir, you will agree with me that the members of the government who are responsible for this, when they lie upon their downy beds sleeping the sleep of the just and the righteous—whatever opinion we may have of them on this side of the House—I think you will agree with me that they must feel some remorse when they think of these poor people whom they are inducing to come into that country, and whom we are anxious to see come there; and that they should have made some provision for them instead of allowing them to lie on the floor. I think the government should have some regard for these men and for their wives and children, and have made some better provision for their accommodation in the estimates, instead of spending so many thousands in various parts of the Dominion, largely for political purposes. Now, I think I am justified in bringing this matter to the attention of the government. I look across the House and see the premier sitting there, who, I believe to be a conscientious man, and who, when it comes to a matter of his fellowman, can be depended upon; I believe I can appeal to him to see to it that whoever is responsible for this condition of affairs will immediately take steps to remedy them. People are coming into our midst by the thousands, and I think it would be well for the premier, or for the minister who is responsible for that department, to see that his officers do everything that is possible to make these immigrants comfortable, so that we who come from the west may not have to make such complaints. We are delighted to see so large a number of people coming there, and we are going to do all we possibly can to make it pleasant and profitable for them. But we do not think that the government, under the circumstances, have done what they should have done, and we now lay the case before them and make a demand that they should meet the emergency and treat these people as they deserve.

Mr. W. J. ROCHE (Marquette). The question that has been brought to the attention of the House by my hon. friend from Macdonald (Mr. Boyd) is, I think, one of very great importance, and one that cannot be too strongly pressed upon the attention of the government. The Minister of the Interior (Hon. Mr. Sifton) and the members supporting the government, have taken a great deal of credit to themselves for their so-called vigorous immigration policy, and have endeavoured to leave the impression throughout the country that it is largely owing to some new features in their policy that we have had this large influx of people coming to our shores the last two or three years. Now, every intelligent man is aware of the fact that this influx is largely owing to the splendid crops with which Providence has blessed that country during the last few years, it is largely owing to the fact that over one hundred million bushels of grain have been raised in that western country during the year 1902. These things have done more to give our country a world-wide reputation than all the immigration agents in the service of the government. If the government are so anxious to take to themselves the credit of these people coming into Canada, they must also bear whatever blame attaches to them if these people are not properly looked after and afforded proper accommodation for their necessities. As my hon. friend from Macdonald has pointed out, the influx of people coming to our shores was not unexpected, and therefore the neglect of making proper accommodation for them is inexcusable. My hon. friend has pointed out that the Deputy Minister of the Interior, in his report, one or two years ago, anticipated this large immigration to Canada; the minister himself in his speeches has declared that although we had been blessed with a large influx of population the last year, it was nothing compared to the population that would come in, not only from the United States but from the British Isles, during the coming year. The deputy minister has been visiting Great Britain during the past winter, and in interviews reported in the public press of this country, papers irrespective of politics, we have been led to believe that a very large population would flock into Canada during the present year. I say therefore there is no excuse for the government in neglecting to make ample provision for their accommodation. Already in the beginning of the season we see 5,000 per week going into that western country, and we who live in the west are aware that the hotel accommodation in the city of Winnipeg is entirely inadequate to meet the demands of the travelling public for the last year or two. People have been turned away night and day at the hotels and boarding houses, all places of accommodation have been more than filled; and now we find these people compelled to sleep in the waiting room of the Canadian Pacific Railway Company.

The hon. member for Winnipeg (Mr. Puttee) brought to the attention of the House the other day another matter of prime importance in connection with the accommodation afforded for these people in the railway cars in which they are travelling through western Canada. He did not blame the Canadian Pacific Railway Company for that condition, but he largely blamed the government of the day. The Canadian Pacific Railway Company are, in this instance, deserving of every credit, no blame can be attached to them, they have done their utmost to accommodate their travellers, and have thrown open their public buildings. The blame therefore rests entirely on the Department of Immigration and the minister who is at the head of that department. Now, it is stated that we may expect this immigration to continue for weeks and months. I understand that the deputy minister, who has just returned to Canada from England, states that passages have been booked for hundreds and thousands of immigrants for the next five or six weeks. It is evident that the government should have made some preparation for these people, but when we look at our estimates for the present year we find for the whole province of Manitoba a sum of only $5,000 for public buildings. Now we have had evidence of money being spent in other parts of the Dominion, thousands and thousands of dollars are being voted for public buildings in every other province of the Dominion. We have seen L'Assomption, a little village whose post office revenue is only $964, given a post office to cost $15,000; whereas in the whole province of Manitoba only $5,000 is voted for public buildings. This is something that should not be, especially in the important city of Winnipeg, the gateway of the west, the headquarters and distributing point of all these immigrants. Something should have been done to erect public buildings, especially immigration halls, where these people would have had proper accommodation. I noticed an article in a paper the other day which stated that the Winnipeg correspondent of the London 'Mail' had sent over word that there was also a great congestion in the town of Saskatoon, in the North-west Territories. While that has been denied by Mr. Preston, who was not on the ground and knows nothing whatever of the circumstances, still even if there were no truth in that report, there certainly is a congestion in Winnipeg, as evidenced in all the papers of that city irrespective of politics. We have been spending some half a million dollars for immigration purposes to attract people to our shores, and there is nothing that will leave a worse impression on the incoming immigrant than the treatment that is accorded to him on his arrival, and which has been mentioned by my hon. friend from Macdonald. I trust that action will be taken by the government in order to provide these people with proper accommodation, immediate action for the present year, as well as some provision in the supplementary estimates for providing public buildings for their accommodation in time to come.

Mr. W. F. McCREARY (Selkirk). I would like to endorse the remarks made by the hon. member for Macdonald (Mr. Boyd) and the hon. member for Marquette (Mr. Roche). I regret very much to have to criticise the action of the government which I am supposed to support; at the same time in this matter I believe they have been neglectful of their duty. What the hon. member for Macdonald has said is true enough, that this is not a new thing, it is not something that has come to the notice of the government for the first time. They have known that we were likely to have a hundred thousand people coming into the west this year. The prediction was made four or five years ago that the increase in the population of that country would double from year to year, as it has done in the United States, until possibly we should receive each year two hundred and fifty thousand people. I made that prediction myself some four years ago, and I said that it would come to pass within ten years. I still adhere to the prediction that within ten years from the date of that prediction we will have not less than 250,000 immigrants every year coming into Manitoba and the North-west Territories. The United States got this year alone, nearly 800,000 people, showing that the prediction I made is justified. When this was called to the attention of the government, a sum should have been put in the estimates to see that better accommodation was provided for these people when they arrive. The citizens of Winnipeg and of the province of Manitoba have to undergo a great deal of expense in connection with immigration. I left Winnipeg last Saturday. On Friday afternoon I attended a meeting of the general hospital board in the city of Winnipeg, and I found that on that day there were thirteen applications for private wards and many applications for the general wards of the hospital, which could not be granted, as there was not accommodation for the patients who desired admission. That institution is largely supported by private contributions by the people of Winnipeg and of Manitoba. The legislature of Manitoba a few days ago voted $25,000 for the purpose of erecting a new wing to the hospital, and the work will be commenced within the next few days. A large part of the immigration is of no great benefit to Manitoba; it merely passes through to the Territories, and the people of Winnipeg should not be called upon to take care of these immigrants. In one children's ward there were six small cots. I found that five of the occupants of these cots were foreigners, Icelandic, German, Polish, Russian and Scandinavian, who had been in the country but a short time. The support and care of those who are taken ill at the city of Winnipeg are being provided for by the city of Winnipeg and the province of Manitoba. It is the duty of this government not only to take those people there, but to care for them after they arrive. There is nothing that will so quickly put a stop to this movement of immigration into Canada as to have the people write back to England that when they arrived on our shores they could find no place to rest their weary bones when illness came upon them. We are likely to have in the near future a very large influx of people from the British Islands. Those people who come from England especially, in my opinion, make poor pioneers. They are first class settlers, but they are poor pioneers in a new country. They are accustomed to the comforts of a settled country, you will find them very headstrong and slow to adapt themselves to the conditions that they will find on the prairie. It is expected that quite a large percentage of the immigrants who will arive will be English colonists, and we are anxious that their first impression shall be favourable. Poor accommodation has been provided for these people as far as hospitals are concerned; in fact scarcely anything has been done by the government. It is true that although the government have somewhat neglected the matter, they are at the same time not entirely to blame. We know that as a matter of fact other institutions, other corporations and private individuals have not been equal to the emergency that has taken place. We know that there is scarcely a wholesale man in the city of Winnipeg who has accommodation for the transaction of the business which has come to him. I left Winnipeg last Saturday, and on Friday I looked around the city and I found a great many cellars being blasted out preparatory to the erection of warehouses. Such firms as Greenshields, Son & Company, of Montreal, which had no confidence in the west in years gone by, are there to-day, and in order to get ready for business as quickly as possible, they are having new cellars taken out by dynamite, and they are facilitating the work in every way. These corporations admit that they are not ready for this great rush of immigration, and it is therefore no wonder if the government find themselves in this position. The railway companies have been doing all they could to cope with this immigration, but it has come upon them with more rapidity than they anticipated. If this debate will bring out all the facts, it will have a good effect, and we will forgive the government if they have been guilty of some dereliction in the past. I think it is the duty of the right hon. Prime Minister (Rt. Hon. Sir Wilfrid Laurier) to find out what steps have been taken by the officials of the Interior Department to care for these people after they have arrived, to see that there shall be no distress among them; to see that the sick shall be properly looked after, to see that every one upon arriving will be able to write a letter back home saying that he has been well treated. The policy in the city of New York, in years past, was, that whenever a certain number of immigrants of a desirable class had arrived there a guard was put in charge of eight or ten, and as long as they remained in New York city they were well cared for, and they were immediately asked to sit down and write a letter home to the village they came from describing the treatment they had received on their arrival in New York. If some of the immigrants who have arrived at Winnipeg were to write back home twenty-four hours after their arrival, I do not think they would write very cheerful or encouraging letters or letters which would induce many immigrants to come out. This has been the condition of affairs, but it should not be allowed to continue. The movement is now upon us. There is a very large military hall in the city of Winnipeg, and I submit that the hon. Minister of Militia and Defence (Hon. Sir Frederick Borden) should be asked to give that hall, which will hold 400 immigrants, and which should have cots placed in it, and there should be a bus ready to convey immigrants from the depot to the hall. When I left there last Saturday I saw a large number of immigrants around the streets, who could not get work on account of the cold weather, as work had not begun, who could not get west, and who had no place to sleep. They went to the police station, they filled the wards of the station, and the Canadian Pacific Railway did what they never had to do before, they opened up their station and allowed them to sleep, not only in the ladies' and gentlemens' waiting rooms, but in the corridors, between the offices upstairs. I trust that the government, if they have not already done so, will take some steps to look after the 100,000 people which I expect will come to the west within the next four or five months. It is a very interesting calculation to know exactly the amount of rolling stock it is going to take to convey that number of people into that country within the next four or five months. If you will calculate the number of people to each car, say fifty to each, then calculate one carload of settlers effects for each family of five, then calculate that it requires from 7,000 to 10,000 feet of lumber to build each settler's house, then calculate the amount of food stuffs required for the year, as they will probably not raise food stuffs for the first year, you will find that they will require as many cars to handle these people as have been necessary to haul out 35,000,000 bushels of wheat during the past five months, which means that the whole of the transportation facilities of the Canadian Pacific Railway and the Canadian Northern in the west will be brought into requisition to transport 100,000 people within the next four or five months. So that the situation, if it is figured out in detail, becomes rather serious unless we get aid from some other quarters. I shall not say anything further at the present time upon the subject. Perhaps later on I shall go a little more fully into the figures, but in the meantime, I trust that the right hon. Prime Minister and the acting Minister of the Interior will give this subject their attention, and see if they cannot suggest some means of dealing with the situation as it has arisen.

Mr. A. W. PUTTEE (Winnipeg). Mr. Speaker, I agree with what has been said by the three previous speakers during the debate. It is a week since I drew the attention of the government to the matter of the transportation of immigrants, and since that time those who were then in transit have arrived at their destination. The conditions which prevailed at that time were not improved during any part of the journey. They continued right through. At the end of this week there comes a second large contingent, and I hope that the hon. acting Minister of the Interior (Hon. Sir Wm. Mulock) will be able to inform us whether anything practical has been done, whether any engagements have been made on behalf of the railway company to remedy the matter so that it will not occur again in the transportation of these immigrants who are arriving at Halifax this week. I have before me a copy of the petition that has been forwarded to the hon. acting Minister of the Interior, the hon. Finance Minister (Hon. Mr. Fielding), and the Hon. Secretary of State (Hon. Senator Scott) from the hospital board of the city of Winnipeg, calling attention to the absolute urgency of getting some assistance from this government to enable them to take care of the patients. It states :

A large number of its patients are from those who have recently arrived as immigrants in the province of Manitoba. Many of these come direct to the hospital from the immigration buildings in the city of Winnipeg.

2. For a long time the Dominion government made payments to the hospital in respect of immigrant patients on the basis of sixty cents per day for the time each patient was in the hospital and the government still requires the returns to be made out by the hospital in the same form but the grant that has been received for several years past is very much less than the amount so computed.

As a matter of fact, the amount paid by this government to the hospital per capita is growing less and less. Now, an appeal has been made for a substantial grant to help in the erection of a new building immediately. The case is urgent. There must be more hospital accommodation for these immigrants during the next few months, and as this petition has now been before the government for ten days or two weeks, I am in hopes that the acting Minister of the Interior will be able to tell us what conclusion has been come to in regard to it.

The POSTMASTER GENERAL (Hon. Sir William Mulock). The subject which has been brought to our attention now, is one of very great importance and is deserving of the best consideration of both the House and of the government. If I heard correctly the contents of the article which my hon. friend from Macdonald (Mr. Boyd) read from a newspaper, it described the state of affairs at the Winnipeg station. That portion of it wherein it described the busy scene, the quantities of baggage, the number of immigrants inquiring for information ; all that is very gratifying. It is also gratifying to find that our country is so attractive to-day, but it is to be regretted that, as in many other instances, there is a fly in the ointment, that the service is perhaps not adequate to the requirements.

My hon. friend from Winnipeg (Mr. Puttee) has referred to the state of the hospital accommodation, and also to the facilities for railway transportation between Halifax and the west. I may say that I only to-day received the petition with reference to the hospital. I did not receive it ten days ago, but only about noon time to-day, and it took considerable time to read it. I have only this moment therefore been able to inform myself as to the nature of the demand made in that petition. The petition, which is dated, I think, on Friday last, asks for a grant of $50,000 towards the immediate erection of, I suppose, additional building, and also for some additional per capita allowance for patients in the hospital. That subject will at once receive the attention of the government.

The hon. member for Winnipeg (Mr. Puttee) called attention a few days ago to the inadequate facilities afforded by the Canadian Pacific Railway for the transportation of the immigrants. I immediately put myself in communication with the Canadian Pacific Railway authorities, and I am bound to confess that there was very substantial foundation for many of the statements made; apologetic explanations have been offered, but they are not adequate. I am in hopes that, with the arrival of the president of the Canadian Pacific Railway in Canada, all preventible oversights will disappear. At all events, after the Easter vacation, if there is any further ground of complaint, it will be my duty to make a frank statement to this House as to where any responsibility rests. I take no exception on this occasion that my hon. friend from Macdonald (Mr. Boyd) has called the attention of the House to the alleged shortcomings of this government. It is his duty, and he is performing a public service. But he thinks that because in former years it was stated in the report that a large influx of American immigrants was expected, that therefore facilities should be on hand to-day to meet that anticipation. I have been in this parliament for twenty years or more, and I can remember anticipations of immigration yearly held out to us that were not afterwards realized. I have more confidence in our own anticipations now, but perhaps even those will not be realized. My hon. friend from Selkirk (Mr. McCreary) anticipates 100,000 immigrants this year. I trust that his anticipations may be realized, but he tells us that his prophesy was for a period of ten years ; and if so, how does he account for it having been realized five years in advance ?

Mr. McCREARY. My prophesy was 250,000 immigrants within ten years, and it is coming to it each year.

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. I see. It is very safe to prophesy what will happen five years hence. As to the lack of foresight on the part of the government, I have this to say: All the gentlemen who have spoken pointed out that others besides the government have failed in foresight. We are told that the business people of Winnipeg have not the facilities for transacting the business that has been thrown upon them by this immense immigration; that the hotels are inadequate; that the boarding houses are inadequate; and we know that the railways are inadequate. Well, perhaps some little allowance may be made if the government is not wiser than those people to whom my hon. friends have referred. I am not able to speak by the book, except it be the blue-book of the Public Works department. I am not able to speak in detail as to whether the department has or has not anticipated this immigration. I am not familiar with the details of the working of either the Public Works Department or the Interior Department, and so I can only offer my explanations from such material as is to hand at the moment, and such as it is I will venture to offer it to the House by way of extenuation at least, and to show that we have not been absolutely wholly indifferent. I have here the report of the Minister of Public Works, which shows an expenditure of $1,700 during the fiscal year on immigration buildings in Winnipeg; the erection of an immigration building at Calgary; the erection of an immigration building at Lethbridge costing $4,000, another item of $1,400 for the erection of an immigration building at Saskatoon, and $1,500 for the erection of an immigration building at Strathcona. I presume that these are buildings for the purpose of meeting the requirements of the increased immigration. Therefore, some thought has been given to the future by providing these necessary buildings. I entirely sympathize with my hon. friends who urge that immigrants shall be furnished with every possible reasonable accommodation for their comfort, so that they may, with the least inconvenience, be able to start well in their new venture in life. It is of the utmost importance that these immigrants should receive a good impression of the country, and that they should find that the country, and the government representing the people, are not indifferent to their needs, but are ready to welcome them with open arms and extend to them excellent treatment. That is the duty of the government so far as it is possible to achieve it, and that duty the government will endeavour to perform. Until the House met this afternoon I was not aware that my hon. friend would bring this matter up. He was good enough to tell me of it a few moments before he took the floor, but that did not enable me to make any inquiries in the department of the Interior as to what arrangements are being made at the present time for the proper carrying on of the immigrant business. I shall make it my duty to at once take steps to inform myself on these points; and what is more, I shall endeavour in all possible way to see that the immigrants are properly cared for. I am sure the whole resources of the country will be cheerfully placed at our disposal by parliament to do whatever is necessary to meet this large demand upon us; a demand which is perhaps more than was expected. Indeed, I saw it stated in the papers yesterday that during the last week not less than 8,000 immigrants had arrived in Winnipeg—is that correct?

Mr. McCREARY. Yes.

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. That is a very large number; it is over a thousand a day. Of course they are not going to stay in Winnipeg. An effort is made to distribute them. They come with more or less definite points of the country in view. They arrive at the sea ports; they perhaps rest there for a few hours, then they are carried by rail to the west. Some of them may get off by the way and become residents; but the great bulk are pushing on to the prairies. When they reach Winnipeg, the great mass of them, as the hon. member for Macdonald (Mr. Boyd) says, stop there only as transients, their ultimate object being to settle on the prairies. So that the facilities required at Winnipeg are only such as are necessary to meet the present occasion. It may be that the railways have not been able to carry the arriving streams of population as promptly as is desirable, and that this has caused a temporary congestion at Winnipeg, and possibly at other points. That is incidental to our receiving such a large army of people as are now coming into the country. So that, while the government do not seek to avoid any criticism, they expect that hon. gentlemen and the public generally will take a reasonable and fair view of the situation, and not give a black eye to the movement by overstating what may be taking place. We are told that many of the immigrants who have arrived at Winnipeg have not been able to find beds, but have been obliged to sleep on the floor; and also that the hospital accommodation is inadequate. These are features of the situation to be regretted. Whilst I would not compare the hardships of the past with those of to-day, or suggest that these immigrants are having a softer time than our forefathers had, it is always well to bear in mind that there is always more or less discomfort connected with the movement of people from one country to another. I do not offer that as an apology for anything that is taking place, but as an explanation of these incidents which are more or less inseparable from the movements of people. Nevertheless, we must do all we can to afford reasonable shelter and comfort for these people, and reasonable facilities for them to get to their holdings; and that I pledge the House that the government will endeavour to do.

Mr. JABEL ROBINSON (West Elgin). Mr. Speaker, I fear that the hon. Postmaster General has too much on his hands. He has to take charge of the Minister of Agriculture's Department—

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. No.

Mr. ROBINSON (West Elgin). And several other departments, and he has too much to do. But I would like him, when immigrants are coming in so fast just now, to direct some of them to the province of Ontario. In that province the farmers have not sufficient men to help them to do their work. The stream of immigration seems to be all directed towards Manitoba and the North-west. Some hon. gentlemen say that the city of Winnipeg will get no benefit from the people who are going to the North-west. I think Winnipeg will get benefit from every one of them. Therefore I do not think the people of Winnipeg ought to object to putting up temporary buildings for these people. But what I would like the minister to do would be to help the farmers of Ontario to get some of this immigration. From 50,000 to 100,000 agricultural labourers could find employment and comfortable homes with the farmers of Ontario. We have great respect for Manitoba and the North-west; but they are not the only places in the world, and we expect the government to do something for us in Ontario.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN (Halifax). Mr. Speaker, of course there may be conditions in the present situation which the government could not very well foresee; but I have not been able to gather from the remarks of the hon. Postmaster General that the government have done anything at all to provide for the condition of affairs which is now apparent at Winnipeg. The hon. gentleman states that there may have been some misgivings in the mind of the government as to the immigration that would flow into that country this year. We know that a very large immigration went in last year; and the government have officers there, and must have reasonably anticipated that there would be an enormous immigration both from the United States and from Europe during the current year. Any one who is familiar with the conditions in the west knows that delegations of farmers from the United States were going all through the western country last year for the purpose of locating lands with the idea of immigrating to this country; and in view of the magnificent crops of the past two years, a very large immigration should have been anticipated. Now, what have the government done according to the statement of the hon. Postmaster General, to meet the probable congestion in the city of Winnipeg? Have they done anything at all? Have they exercised ordinary business foresight? Take the people of any city where a large number of people are expected because of any unusual event, such as a great fair; we find them making provision to accommodate the people who are expected to come. Have the government done anything of this kind at Winnipeg? I do not gather anything from the statement of the hon. Postmaster General to indicate that they have. It seems to me that it would have been a very easy matter for the government to have anticipated some considerable congestion at Winnipeg, and to have made arrangements through their officers, so that people need not be lying in police cells, in railway stations, and around the streets, at a time of the year when, according to my hon. friend from Selkirk (Mr. McCreary), the weather is very inclement, and these people must have suffered considerably. A great deal depends on the impressions that are made on people who are coming in such large numbers to the country. If these people write to their friends in the countries from which they have come and detail the discomfort, the inconvenience and the suffering which they have experienced, it will counteract a great deal of the work of the immigration agents, and a great deal of the splendid impression which has been made throughout the world as to the future of that country, by reason of the great crops of the past two or three years. I agree with my hon. friend the Postmaster General in regard to one thing, and that is that it is the urgent and imperative duty of the government to remedy this state of things at once; they should have done so before. While my hon. friend has been very frank in admitting the faults of the corporations and people that he is not concerned with, I think I may, on behalf of the government, admit that they are to a great extent responsible for the present condition of affairs. While it may be true, as my hon. friend says, that the conditions faced by these people may not be so severe as the conditions which were faced by the pioneers of this country a hundred years ago, that does not as an argument amount to very much at all. What we have to do is to compare the conditions which the immigrants of to-day have to face not with the conditions of one hundred years ago, but with the conditions in the United States, our great competitor. I am very glad the matter has been brought to the attention of the House. We have a magnificent opportunity at the present time to people the North-west country with the best class of settlers, and it will be a most regrettable thing, in the interest not only of the west but of the east, if anything should happen in the slightest degree to put a temporary check on the immigration now flowing into that country.

Motion agreed to and House went into Committee of Supply.

Margaree, N.S.—improvements, $800.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). Will this complete the work ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Yes.

Mr. INGRAM. I see in the Auditor General's Report, page V—211 that a wharf was built at Margaree Island. Are those works close together ?

Mr. McLENNAN. They are twelve miles apart and separate works.

Meteghan Cove—restoration of breakwater, $2,300.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). What is the proposed total expenditure ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Five thousand three hundred dollars.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). Will this be done by day's work or by tender ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. By day's work.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). Why not by tender ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Because it consists of general repairs, which can better be done by day's work.

Mr. COCHRANE. How are the materials obtained ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. By the foreman of the work under the superintendence of the engineer.

Mr. LENNOX. Where is the resident engineer ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. The resident engineer is at Halifax.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). You have all through the system a conductor and a foreman. What does the conductor really do ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. He buys the material and generally oversees the work.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). He is down in the accounts for one hundred and fifty-nine days and the foreman is down for one hundred and twenty-two days. It would not take the conductor one hundred and fifty-nine days to buy the materials.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I explained yesterday that the conductor bought the material and had charge of the whole work and kept the time, &c.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). Is this a new system ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. No, that has been the system ever since our present engineer has been in office. So the chief engineer tells me.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). Does the chief engineer report that it is necessary to have a conductor as well as a foreman ? To an ordinary layman it would not seem that they were both necessary.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. The chief engineer thinks it necessary to have a practical man continually at the work.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). What is the conductor doing all the time.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. He is time-keeper, and he has to purchase materials. There are a great many different kinds of materials required in these repairs, and the purchase of these, with time keeping and general charge and superintendence of the work should keep him pretty busy. He makes his report to the local engineer, who holds him responsible for the general condition of the works.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). I should think the foreman, the practical man, would be held responsible for the conduct of the work. So, outside of the purchase of the material, I should think the foreman would have nothing to do but smoke or engage in some light occupation of that kind. Possibly there may be something else he has to do, but the minister seems to be as much puzzled to tell us what it is as we are to conjecture.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Seriously speaking, I think that probably the man put in charge of the work is a practical man, probably a carpenter. He could not be away from the work for the necessary time looking after men, and also purchasing the various materials required for these repairs, and, also act as foreman. Of course, if the local engineer resides there, he could do this. But the man in charge of a work like this could hardly be the foreman, unless he had also a business capacity, and then the work would probably suffer by his absence when buying material. I have had no experience, but the chief engineer tells me that it has been the practice of the department for many years to conduct these works in this way. I shall be pleased to look into this matter. If two men are unnecessary, there is no reason why one should not be dispensed with.

Mr. INGRAM. Who is the representative of the constituency in which this work is ? I am afraid the hon. gentleman has been taking some lessons in Ontario.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I think it is the leader of the opposition (Mr. Borden, Halifax).

Mr. INGRAM. Oh, no ; take that back.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I beg the hon. gentleman's (Mr. Ingram's) pardon. This is in the constituency of the leader of the opposition. If that hon. gentleman has been taking lessons in Ontario, I hope they have done him good.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). I do not know what the hon. minister refers to: I have been talking about Meteghan for the last ten or fifteen minutes.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. That was passed.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). No, Mr. Chairman, you called 'passed' just as I rose. You call 'passed' whenever there is an interval of five seconds, as it is your duty to do. But I have been reading from the Auditor General's Report about Meteghan, and that is what I have been discussing.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. There is a misunderstanding, then. In that case, I would say in answer to the hon. member for East Elgin (Mr. Ingram) that the work is in Digby county.

Mr. INGRAM. The vote of last year $3,000, and the vote of this year make a total of $5,300 for this work. According to the Auditor General's Report there is a conductor, 157 days at $2.50, and three foremen at $217.53; labourers, $1,437. No one will pretend to say that it requires three foremen and a conductor to carry on the work of that character.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. No doubt, our engineer at Halifax allowed some men ten, fifteen or twenty-five cents a day more than the ordinary workmen making them foremen. But if on investigation we find that men are paid for services which they do not render, it may be well for us to consider whether we should not get somebody else to look after the work. I have not the slightest doubt, however, that the men called foremen in the accounts are practical men and give a faithful day's work for every day's pay they receive.

Mr. INGRAM. But we have an expenditure of over $2,000 say for foremen and labourers out of a total expenditure of $5,000. Will the hon. minister say that it requires that much?

Mr. COPP. There is no such thing as three foremen on this work. The representative of the county has nothing to do with the payment of the foremen. The engineer fixed the charges and appointed the men. The representative of a county has nothing to do with the wages. I have never interfered with the engineer. He fixes the wages and pays the foremen what they are entitled to. At Meteghan, there is only one foreman, Mr. Robichaud. There is also a Mr. Deveau on the work, and they give him a little extra pay and call him a foreman of the men on the work. But I think the hon. gentleman (Mr. Ingram) is entirely mistaken about three foremen.

Mr. INGRAM. If the hon. gentleman will refer to page V—213 of the Auditor General's Report he will see the figures. If there is any fault, it is with the blue-books, not with us.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). It is probable that one foreman was employed when the other was not.

Mr. COPP. Oh, yes. There were two different men—one left and the other took his place.

Mr. INGRAM. Is this work in the hon. gentleman's (Mr. Copp's) constituency?

Mr. COPP. Yes. This work has been going on for four or five years. It is an immense breakwater. The former breakwater went to destruction in a storm.

Mr. INGRAM. Has the hon. gentleman any idea when it will be completed?

Mr. COPP. I believe it will be completed next year. I think it will require only about $3,000 more to build the work—that is about $3,000 more than what there is this year.

Mr. INGRAM. Why not get the total sum in this year?

Mr. COPP. Because you could not spend it within a year. You can spend only about $3,500 or $4,000 on such a work as this within a year. You can only employ a certain number of men at one time.

Mr. LENNOX. There has been an explanation as regards the number of overseers, the explanation being that different men were employed at different times. But there is a matter that has not yet been explained and it is this. At page V—213 of the Auditor General's Report, we find that there has been a total expenditure on this work of $3,199.93. Of that total expenditure, $610 is spent for overseeing, independently of anything paid to the engineer. Is this a fair proportion having regard to the total expenditure, and having regard also to the amount expended on material and the amount expended on labour? Does it not come back to this proposition which we had before, that works carried on by day labour under the superintendence of the department cost vastly more than they would if the requirements of the statute were carried out and the work was let by tender? I have heard the explanation more than once on this subject of repairs. The case may be just as stated, but I must admit that I am not at all impressed as yet, with the argument that it is impossible to let these works partaking of the nature of repairs by tender. And I do submit that, these matters cropping up from time to time, whatever the department may have thought before, it is time they took this, as we say, into their serious consideration to see whether the time has not arrived when they should reconsider their position and adopt the spirit as well as the language of the statute and let these works by public tender.

Mr. INGRAM. Will the hon. gentleman tell us how many workmen are employed on this work ?

Mr. COPP. I think about twenty or twenty-five men at one time.

Mr. INGRAM. Would the hon. gentleman state about how long they would be employed constantly ?

Mr. COPP. They go to work as early as they can in the summer after the vote is passed, and work until about Christmas, or until cold weather. Twenty-five men are not working every day.

Mr. BELL. I observe when I come to contrast the expenditure of overseeing and the labour with the cost of the material supplied, that the percentage of cost is enormously large in proportion to the amount of material used. The material for the breakwater cost $1,152.90, the overseeing and the labour cost $2,047.03. Now, as the work was all of the roughest possible character, handling cheap material in the cheapest fashion, it seems extraordinary that it cost $1.50 to use up a dollars worth of material. There is evidently something very far wrong.

Mr. COPP. They had to tear down the old work before they could repair it. In some places they have to go down seven or eight feet in the mud in order to make a foundation. It costs as much, and in some cases more, to tear down the old work than to build up the new. That is the reason why the labour costs more than the material.

Mr. INGRAM. What is the length of this work ?

Mr. COPP. It must be 1,200 or 1,400 feet long. I think they only tear down about eighty feet at a time. There is a tremendous tide there, and they can only take out a portion of the work at a time and build it up as fast as they take it out; otherwise they would lose all their work.

Necum Teuch—wharf, $3,000.

Mr. BORDEN Halifax). Is this being done by tender ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. No, by day labour.

Hon. Mr. HAGGART. Why do you do it by day labour, contravening the statute ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I do not see that it is contravening the statute.

Hon. Mr. HAGGART. Does the Minister of Public Works not know that there is in an Act of parliament a provision that requires all works costing $5,000 or over to be tendered for ? And there must be an Order in Council to the same effect.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I do not think my hon. friend, who ought to be well versed in the Act, is quoting it correctly. At the time this work was started there was a provision by Order in Council for expending amounts under $5,000.

Hon. Mr. HAGGART. I understood the minister to say that he is asking for $5,000 for this year.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. $3,000.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). The total is $5,000. There seems to be some new theory about the interpretation of the statute. Perhaps we might as well have it from the hon. gentleman.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. As I understand the law, I think there is a provision in it that if the officers of the department think a work can be more advantageously done by day labour than by tender, it can be done by day labour. The Order in Council to which I refer was, I think, in existence for eighteen or twenty years, but two or three months ago it was referred to the Justice Department and declared ultra vires. So we do not take advantage of that Order in Council any more. Perhaps if it is found in the public interest to have some provision made for expending small amounts, there will have to be some amendment made to the Act. There is a provision in the Act under which the technical officers of the department are to carry on works of considerable extent by day labour, so far as they can do so in the public interest.

Hon. Mr. HAGGART. There is no such a thing in the statute. The statute provides that in an extraordinary case, where, for instance, the banks of a canal burst away and it is impossible to let out work by tender, it may be done by day labour under the charge of the department, and the minister, on a report of council, may get authority from council to do the work by day labour in an exceptional case like that. But the statute and the Order in Council apply to all work costing over $5,000.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. The hon. gentleman is a practical man, and no one in this House knows better than he does the difficulty of carrying on work similar to the one discussed a few minutes ago, a wharf 1,500 feet long, requiring two or three thousand dollars to repair it, where it has to be thrown down in order to find out what is wrong. That could not be done by contract.

Hon. Mr. HAGGART. Why does the hon. gentleman argue contrary to the law ? Parliament in its wisdom passed a statute by which it is requisite that all sums over a certain amount should be expended in a certain manner. That law must be obeyed until it is changed.

Mr. COCHRANE. We had better have that point settled by the Minister of Justice, so that we may not go on spending so much of the people's money without knowing what we are doing. It used to be generally understood when hon. gentlemen opposite were in opposition, that the law required all sums over $5,000 to be expended by contract. Now that they are in control, there is an 'if' about it. If there is an 'if' about it, I think that we should have it understood before we go any further. To my mind it is absurd to say that you cannot get material by contract. You have a gentleman perambulating the country at a time when it is utterly impossible to get timber and material for repairing a dock at the price you could get it for if the work was let by contract, and in a season when the timber was available. That is what a business man would do in the section of the country where I live. But instead of that, as I understand the hon. gentleman, you have a gentleman running around the country buying material at a time of the year when it should be on the spot and when the work should be progressing. If it is necessary for you to get your timber by contract, the engineers must know pretty nearly what is required, and if the amount is not quite sufficient it is easy to procure the balance. But I am satisfied in my own mind that it is a wrong principle to have a man running round the country buying timber when the timber could be got out by contract and on the spot. Why has that change come about in the hon. gentleman's mind? I see the Minister of Trade and Commerce sitting there complacently. He don't say a word. He used to be very loud in his denunciation of the way money was being expended without contract when he was on this side of the House. How things have changed! He sits there complacently and sees the law violated without saying a word. His hand is not lifted with holy horror now, we hear none of those thundertones we used to hear when he was in opposition, everything now is lovely, although they are violating a statute just as flagrantly as they said the Conservatives used to do when a Conservative government was in power.

Neil's harbour—breakwater, $4,000.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This is in the county of Victoria. The total cost of this breakwater is $18,000, and this sum will complete the work. It is a new work, now under contract.

Hon. Mr. ROSS (Victoria, N.S.). The contractors belong to the city of Ottawa, Heney and Smith.

Hon. Mr. HAGGART.

Mr. BLAIN. I find that this harbour was up last session and that $14,000 was voted for it. The hon. Minister of Public Works said it was then under contract for $14,000. What is the explanation of the further vote of $4,000?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. There must be some mistake, because the amount of the contract was $16,600. It was made on the 29th November, 1901. There may have been a mistake in taking down the figures in 'Hansard.'

Mr. INGRAM. Perhaps the hon. member for Victoria will tell us something about that work.

Hon. Mr. ROSS (Victoria, N.S.). Neil's Harbour is one of the most important fishing stations in my county. A large number of fishermen came over from Newfoundland and settled in that place, bringing a larger class of boats with them than our fishermen used to have. They have to go to deep water to get the cod-fish and the great trouble was that when stormy weather would come on they would have to throw out their ballast, get all the men they could together to get their boats hauled up on shore and wait until the stormy weather would be over. This breakwater is not yet completed. I used to growl considerably because the contractors were not asked to complete the work within the time which was specified in the contract, but when completed it will be of immense value to a large number of fishermen in that locality. They will be able to moor their boats inside this breakwater during all seasons as safely as if they had been in the shelter which is in the Ottawa river. It will be of immense benefit to that class of people. I may say in connection with contracts that except in perhaps one or two instances where repairs have been made, I have insisted in every case that everything in my county should be put up to tender and contract. It is a great relief to myself and, I think, in the end more satisfactory to every one.

Mr. BLAIN. Would the hon. minister give us the date of the contract and the amount?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. The 29th November, 1901, is the date, and the amount of the contract is $16,600.

Mr. BLAIN. We get from that an explanation of how this money is expended. Last year the hon. minister came down and asked for $14,000. It appears that at that time he had already let a contract which was to cost $16,600. That is an explanation to the committee. The policy of the government seems to be that after they have let a contract for $16,600, they will come to the House and ask for $14,000, and the House expects naturally that that sum will complete the work; yet, the government know that they have already let a contract that will cost $2,600 more than they asked the House to vote. Surely that is not good policy. That accounts for these extra votes. We voted $14,000 last year and now the department comes forward and asks the committee for $4,000, when they knew last year what the contract price was.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. That has not been the policy of the government, and it will not be in future. It may be that the hon. minister explained when he was asking for the $14,000, that that was all he expected to spend during the fiscal year. There can be no reason why full information should not have been given at that time in regard to this vote, because the contract was then made.

Hon. Mr. HAGGART. We will have it out with the hon. Minister of Public Works in reference to the meaning of the statute as to his power to have work done by day labour :

The minister shall invite tenders, by public advertisement, for the execution of all works, except in case of pressing emergency——

Such as a canal being broken down.

—in which delay would be injurious to the public interest, or in which, from the nature of the work, it can be more expeditiously and economically executed by the officers and servants of the department.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. Hear, hear.

Hon. Mr. HAGGART. That only applies to the staff you have on the work. Suppose the Lachine canal staff were employed all winter for the purpose of making repairs on the ground that it could be more economically and expeditiously done; that would be in keeping with the application and the sole application of the statute. You have no right to employ for a work costing over $5,000 a staff outside of the department or to hire men for the purpose of doing it. That is in direct contravention to the statute.

The MINISTER OF JUSTICE. Where does my hon. friend (Hon. Mr. Haggart) get the limit of $5,000 ?

Hon. Mr. HAGGART. That is mentioned somewhere in the Act.

The MINISTER OF JUSTICE. No, it is not.

Hon. Mr. HAGGART. The limitation is in the Order in Council.

The MINISTER OF JUSTICE. Which was illegally passed.

Hon. Mr. HAGGART. This statute applies to all work. It has no limitation at all. There is an Order in Council; I suppose that the hon. gentlemen at present governing the country have come to the conclusion that it is ultra vires, that it has no application at all, and not binding on the government. However, this clause applies to all work, it has no limitation. The limitation of $5,000 was probably in the Order in Council but the application of the clause in the statute is general.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I think after the hon. member (Hon. Mr. Haggart) has read the Act, those who have listened to it will agree that I gave a very fair explanation of what the Act meant. I still hold that the interpretation I put upon it is correct and that in doing work, such as most of those which have been under discussion, the day's labour plan is the only practical business way in which it can be done.

Hon. Mr. HAGGART. We are not arguing that part of it. We are arguing the meaning of the statute.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. My hon. friend takes one view and other hon. gentlemen take another view.

Hon. Mr. HAGGART. I would like to know the other hon. gentlemen, in addition to myself, who take that view. Does the hon. Minister of Justice agree with it ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. The Minister of Justice agrees with me. What I want to point out to the hon. gentleman is that when people differ as to the interpretation of an Act of parliament they must depend on the highest court of appeal and the hon. gentleman will find that the Auditor General takes that view and we will have to abide by his decision. If he comes to the decision that my hon. friend puts the proper interpretation on the statute we will then have to have legislation.

Mr. LENNOX. I think if the hon. Minister of Public Works will look at the overrulings of the treasury report in the Auditor General's Report, he will find that the Auditor General does not take that view.

The MINISTER OF JUSTICE. The Auditor General was acting on an ultra vires Order in Council.

New Campbellton—ballast wharf, $5,000.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This is a revote. The coal company owns a wharf there which is in a very bad state of repair and it was represented that the department should repair that wharf. The department would not spend money on the property unless it was transferred to the Crown, and as that question was not settled no expenditure was made. I understand that now the manager of the company is willing to transfer the old wharf to the Crown if we will take charge of it.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). What will be the total expenditure ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. The chief engineer estimates that to put the old wharf in good shape it will cost $11,500.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). What is the necessity for the work ?

Hon. Mr. ROSS (Victoria, N.S.). This is a large coal shipping station and the practice of vessels coming there has been to throw out their ballast in places where it was calculated to injure the harbour. This ballast wharf will not only give deeper water but it will afford a good deal of shelter and will enable vessels to put their ballast in the pier. Something of that kind was done at North Sydney a year or two ago.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). It would seem rather to be an expensive way of preventing vessels throwing out ballast in improper places. In most ports, vessels in discharging their ballast, are subject to a harbour by-law and are punished for violating that law. Is there a real necessity for this work for the purpose of shelter.

Hon. Mr. ROSS (Victoria, N.S.). As a rule this is a fair harbour, but in south-east and southerly winds this pier will afford shelter to a small class of vessels which would be on the inside.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). Are there coal mines near there ?

Hon. Mr. ROSS (Victoria, N.S.). There are coal mines there in active operation and they have been shipipng for years.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). Is this work being done by tender and contract ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. No action has been taken yet, but it will be done by tender.

New Harbour—breakwater repairs, protection slopes, &c., $1,500.

Mr. BENNETT. It is hardly to be expected that the minister can supervise every expenditure in a large department like that of Public Works, but the Auditor General's report shows that this is a case that out Herod's Herod, and one that is calculated to make the members of the Ontario government feel ill at ease in thinking that other people can surpass them in this kind of thing. The Auditor General tells us that there was an expenditure last year of $3,700, and that it cost $368 for overseers and timekeepers to supervise an expenditure of $1,200 in wages. There were about a dozen workmen on the job. We first had Mr. Patterson engaged for 47 days at $3 a day, to overlook these dozen men, and as if Mr. Patterson was not enough, a gentleman named Gillis was appointed to help him as overseer. One would think that these two could look after the dozen workmen, but it would seem that the department wanted a third man to superintend the other two superintendents, and so a gentleman named Sangster was brought in as book-keeper. But that is not all. There was a small quantity of material to be purchased, and a gentleman named Kirk was commissioned to do that.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. If the hon. gentleman (Mr. Bennett) will look into that account he will probably find that these gentlemen were not all occupied at the same time.

Mr. BENNETT. The Auditor General's report shows that Mr. Patterson is a foreman and that Mr. Gillis is a sub-foreman, so that there could be no conflict of authority between the two, and one gets paid for 47 days and the other for 44 days. Mr. Sangster was also occupied for 44 days, so that the evidence is that the three were occupied at the same time. The whole thing seems to have been carried out on a scale that would do credit to a Tammany ring. There was a foreman, a sub-foreman, and a time-keeper to watch twelve workmen, and as if these three men could not find time to buy the materials, Mr. Kirk got a commission of 5 per cent to do so. In what riding is this ? Who represents it ? Who is this Jack the Ripper or Dick Turpin of Canadian politics who is making such raids on the public exchequer ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. The criticism of my hon. friend is hardly fair. I am willing to admit that probably it is difficult to explain the items as they are given in the Auditor General's report. If any such state of affairs existed in the carrying on of these works as the hon. gentleman describes, it is time we had a change in the men who had charge of this department. I am satisfied that it is quite a mistake. The work is in the county of Guysborough.

Some hon. MEMBERS. Oh.

Mr. INGRAM. The only gentleman who came to the rescue last year in connection with this vote was the hon. member from Guysborough. Here is what the Minister of Public Works said on this matter then, and it is interesting :

MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. We had some little doubt about this place a couple of years ago. I must admit it was difficult for us that night to put our finger on the very point where New Harbour was located. The coast of Nova Scotia is very wide and long and my colleague and myself had some trouble before we could lay our finger on that spot, but we found it easily after the money was voted and spent.

Mr. BENNETT. There ought be some explanation of this. There is no doubt that from the Auditor General's Report the two foremen and the time keeper were employed at the same time and practically during the same number of days. Here we have a cost of $7 a day for superintending the expenditure of $20 a day in wages. Surely one of these men might have been spared to go and purchase $1.80 worth of galvanized buckets or five kegs of nails and spikes; yet the department employed this man Kirk specially to make these little purchases. I think the minister should tell us that he intends to keep both eyes on this riding of Guysborough this year. It was only two years ago that an expenditure was to be made in this same riding, and they were unable to find the place; and you have the fact staring the House in the face to-day that about as many men are employed to look after the employees as the men employed.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. My hon. friend will see that there was a good carpenter employed at $2 a day, though he is called a sub-foreman.

Mr. INGRAM. Is it the policy of the department to pay five per cent on these purchases ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. No commissions are allowed.

Mr. INGRAM. The hon. minister will find, at page 214 of the Auditor General's Report, that commissions have been paid.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. It would not be an unreasonable rate of commission if this man was employed to purchase something for the department and turn it in at cost price. But certainly that is not the general policy of the department.

Mr. BENNETT. It does not appear that this is the case at all. I assume that the prices for the things purchased were fair and reasonable. I do not know who this Mr. Kirk is; but his purchases extend from buckets to cement and spruce, so that if he deals in all these things he must be engaged in a large way in business. The inference is that he purchased them and was allowed five per cent commission on them.

Mr. FRASER. I will explain the matter. Mr. Kirk lives in the county of Antigonish, about sixty miles from the place where the articles were to be delivered, and it is difficult to get them delivered at this point, which is on the sea coast. I have no doubt the department got this man to make the purchases, that they were made at as low a rate as they could be got at, and that they allowed him a commission of five per cent.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). I suppose that what took place was that certain articles were purchased from Mr. Kirk, and that he purchased a number of articles which he had not in stock, and was allowed five per cent upon them. I know that what my hon. friend says is correct, that Antigonish is at a considerable distance from this point.

Ogden's Pond—to complete channel protection work, $650.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). Does this complete the work ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Yes.

Petit de Grat—reconstruction of protection work and dredging, $5,000.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). Does this complete the work, and is it let by tender or contract ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. We have just advertised for tenders for this work; it will be done by contract. The estimated cost is $6,600.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). What is it—a work to make the harbour more efficient and more sheltered ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. It is a new channel to be opened up, protected by cribwork, instead of the present channel. It is a protection harbour, principally for fishing boats.

Poirierville—wharf, $3,500.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This work is now under contract. The amount of the contract is $4,388. This vote will complete the work. It is to provide a safe harbour for a thickly-settled district.

Port George—breakwater, $3,500.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). Is this a new work ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. It is not a new work. It is an extension of the pier and breakwater. It is done by day labour.

Port Hastings—wharf, $4,000.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This is a revote. No site has been procured yet. The question of a site has been under negotiation. The work will be done by tender and contract.

Port Hawkesbury—wharf, $8,200.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). As to both of these wharfs, the one that has just been passed and this one, I would like the minister to state why it is necessary for the government to build these wharfs.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This harbour is open very much longer in the year than any others on that side of Cape Breton. It is frequented during the season by seventy-nine sailing vessels on an average, averaging 80 tons each.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). Are there not private wharfs at both these ports ?

Mr. McLENNAN. There are no private wharfs at Port Hastings. I may say that that is the only point where large steamers along the eastern Nova Scotia coast can at all seasons secure bunker coal. A case in point is that of the steamship 'Bruce' on the Newfoundland and Sydney route, which was obliged to come all the way around eastern Cape Breton, leaving the Sydneys and Louisburg, and come to Port Hastings in order to secure bunker coal at the Inverness Railway Company's terminus. At such a port the public would naturally seek wharf accommodation. There was but an old government wharf there, built by the government of Nova Scotia before confederation. The Dominion government took this wharf over, but when the Inverness Coal and Railway Company was building its terminals at this point, it very largely covered over this wharf, and practically rendered it useless to the public. This rendered imperative either the extension of this old wharf or the construction of a new one. Hence the present vote. With regard to Port Hawkesbury, this is also a most important port. It is frequented by a large amount of shipping, both foreign and domestic, being a most capacious harbour. There are private wharfs at Port Hawkesbury, but very large steamers frequent the port, such as the Plant Line, which cannot properly be accommodated at any of the private wharfs now available. The public, therefore, have urged upon me to impress upon the government the necessity of building a public wharf, which would not only accommodate the public, but also this very important line of steamers which make Port Hawkesbury their only port of call from the time they leave Halifax until they reach Charlottetown, P.E.I., and further I believe that the revenue to be realized from that wharf would more than repay the government for the interest on the cost.

Mr. BLAIN. What would be the probable revenue from the wharf ?

Mr. McLENNAN. Between $700 and $800 a year. There would be $500 from that line of steamers alone.

Mr. BLAIN. How much revenue was there last year ?

Mr. McLENNAN. The wharf is not built yet.

Mr. BLAIN. I understood from the hon. gentleman that one of these wharfs was owned by the government and that it was taken possession of and covered up by a railway company. Is that correct ?

Mr. McLENNAN. Very largely.

Mr. BLAIN. Did the government collect from the company anything for the filling up of that wharf ?

Mr. McLENNAN. No doubt the Department of Railways and Canals will see to that matter.

Mr. BLAIN. Have they already done so? Did the government allow a railway company simply to come in and cover up a government wharf without any arrangement having been previously come to between that company and the government, or if any amount was paid to the government, when was it paid and how much?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I have no information with regard to any claim against the company. Probably this wharf had not been kept in repair and was not very valuable.

Mr. BLAIN. I understand that the government purchased a wharf, and expended a very large amount of money on it and then, after some years had elapsed, simply allowed a railway company to come and take possession of it and fill it up. The hon. member for Inverness made that statement.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. My hon. friend said that the province of Nova Scotia, previous to confederation, had a wharf there. I did not understand him to say that this government had ?

Mr. BLAIN. I understood him to say that the Dominion government took the wharf over.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I shall have an inquiry made into the matter and bring down all the particulars.

Mr. INGRAM. Perhaps the hon. member for Inverness will repeat what he did say.

Mr. McLENNAN. I said that the government of Nova Scotia had built this wharf before confederation, and that the Dominion goverment took it over, and that subsequently Messers Mackenzie and Mann built their railway and terminals over and across the wharf, and thus rendered it useless to the public.

Mr. INGRAM. Is this in the hon. gentleman's constituency ?

Mr. McLENNAN. Yes.

Mr. INGRAM. Did the hon. gentleman draw the attention of the department to what this railway has done ?

Mr. McLENNAN. I considered that the Department of Railways and Canals would no doubt see to that matter.

Mr. INGRAM. Then the hon. gentleman did complain to the department ?

Mr. McLENNAN. I did not say that I complained to any department, because I did not, but I said that I had no doubt the Railway Department had entered into some negotiations with this railway company.

Mr. BLAIN. Then the railway company went in and took possession of government property without any arrangement at all between it and the government, and after that had been done, the hon. member representing the county drew the attention of the government to the fact. Is that what happened ?

Mr. INGRAM. The hon. gentleman has said that he has no doubt the department will make the railway company pay for the damage they have done to this wharf, but he says he did not report the matter to the department. How then can he say he has no doubt as to what the department will do ?

Mr. McLENNAN. The Department of Railways had steam communication between Mulgrave and that wharf, and in fact had this wharf as one of the terminals of the Intercolonial Railway until the Inverness and Richmond Railway was built, and I have no doubt that before the Department of Railways allowed this wharf to go to any private corporation some consideration was secured.

Sandy Cove—breakwater, $13,200.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This work is under contract. The amount of the contract is $13,000 and the contractors are Hayden & Oliver, Digby. It is estimated that the work will cost $14,300.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). What is the necessity for this work ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. These are piers for the benefit of the fishing people of the district. It is well known that this is one of the best fishing districts in the province, and there are many men with a large fleet of boats engaged in this industry. The bait freezer has been erected at this place recently.

Short Beach—breakwater, $8,000.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This is in Yarmouth county. The work is under contract for $8,095. The total cost is $9,000.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). Is this for the purpose of creating a harbour of shelter ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Yes. A harbour of shelter for fishermen.

South Ingonish—wharf, $1,800.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This work is under contract for $2,485. The total estimated cost of the work is $2,800.

Three Fathom harbour—restoration of beach protection works, $1,200.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). What county is this in ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. Halifax.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). Will this complete the work ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. It is estimated that this will complete it.

Tiverton—breakwater, $17,000.

Mr. BENNETT. Was the lowest tenderer accepted in this case ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Yes, this was let to the lowest tenderer.

Washabuck Centre—wharf, $5,500.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This is a new wharf. The amount of the contract is $5,860 and $6,500, it is estimated, will complete the work.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). What is the necessity for the expenditure ?

Hon. Mr. ROSS (Victoria, N.S.). This wharf is built for the convenience of a large class of farmers on the Bras d'Or lakes. The steamer passes up and down in front of this place three times a week, from Whycocomagh and Baddeck to the Sydneys. This will enable the farmers to have a port of call there for the steamer, to ship their produce and receive the goods that they get in. This has been promised them for many years, but I happened to be the one who was able to bring the promise into effect.

West Baccaro—boat harbour protection and channel, $3,500.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). What is this for ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. For the protection of shipping.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). What is the channel ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. It is to have a depth of three feet.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). What does it connect with ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. It connects with the Atlantic Ocean.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). I know; but what does it connect the Atlantic Ocean with ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I am afraid my knowledge of the locality is somewhat limited, I shall have to ask the member for the riding to explain.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. All along that coast there are small ponds shut off by beaches from the sea, and by making channels you are able to let the fishermen take in their boats and so assure them of protection during the storms. This is a fishing settlement a short distance from port Latour. The whole district is a fishing district. It is some years since I was there, and the young men pointed out the disadvantage they laboured under owing to the destruction of their boats during the storms. For a small sum of money, you can give them protection for their fishing boats.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). Has any investigation been made as to the depth of the pond with which the channel is to connect ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. I presume that the engineers must have a report.

Mr. HACKETT. Is this a local work intended for the protection of local boats ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. Yes, fishing boats.

Mr. HACKETT. Why not apply the same principle all over the maritime provinces and build local works for the protection of local boats wherever required ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. Wherever any case of that kind——

Mr. HACKETT. I made out some very good cases in this House. And I contend that where you build a harbour for the protection of local fishermen in the province of Nova Scotia, you ought to do the same in the province of Prince Edward Island or New Brunswick.

Mr. LEMIEUX. Or Quebec.

Mr. HACKETT. Yes, or Ontario or any other province. The case I have made out in this parliament was of ponds or lakes around the coast of Prince Edward Island that would afford accommodation not only to the fishermen of the locality, but also the fishermen of Nova Scotia or New Brunswick plying their avocation on those shores. But I think it strange that a sum of money should be voted by parliament for the purpose simply of making a harbour for local fishermen.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. I agree that there should be no sectionalism in the matter. If this is a sound policy in any place, it is equally sound in any other. There is nothing new in the case. We are doing here a work such as has been done in Nova Scotia for many years, and it is a most useful class of work, notwithstanding what hon. gentlemen may say to the contrary. In no way can you render more useful service to the fishermen along the Atlantic coast than by providing them with harbours for their boats. If we neglect this these men will be driven away from the coast and will be unable to carry on their operations. My hon. friend from Lunenburg (Mr. Kaulbach) who represents a great fishing county, understands the matter well, and I am sure he will agree with me. Of course, if there is any other portion of the coast under similar conditions in any other province, it has the same claim and the same right to consideration.

Mr. BENNETT. There seems to be varied requirements in the maritime provinces. As I understand it, in the province of Nova Scotia, if a pond is adjoining the ocean it is deemed advisable to make a strait or canal to connect the two so that it may be made a harbour of refuge. When you come to the adjoining province of Prince Edward Island we find directly the reverse, because we find at Cascumpec harbour that an opening through the beach is closed. It would seem that in Prince Edward Island there was a pond inside, but there was the wild raging ocean outside, so the department are going to close up the breach so that the rough tide cannot get into the still waters.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. Both these cases are eminently proper. In the one case a break in the beach would do great harm, and you close the beach in the interest of the protection of the people who are engaged in fishing. In the other case, owing to the storms, you need to cut the channel to allow boats to have access to shelter. Both cases are right and reasonable.

Mr. INGRAM. There is one case, Port Bruce, where they have asked for the same favour and were refused.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. I have never heard of such an application ; of course it would not come before me. All I can say is that in my judgment there should be no sectionalism. If there is a case of a similar kind in any part of Canada where we can protect our fishermen and keep them at home, these improvements should be made in their interest. If these small expenditures will help to make their lives easy and help them in their business, I am in favour of making them.

Mr. INGRAM. The fishermen at Port Bruce are paying a license to the department, and when they asked for this improvement the Public Works Department tell them, 'No, go to the Marine Department.' It is not a benefit for the accommodation of the fishermen only.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). Would the minister say whether there has been any investigation made to ascertain the depth of the pond ? Of course it would be of no use to cut a channel to this pond unless you know something about the depth of the water.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. A memorandum furnished me says there are three feet of water.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. Three feet of water will carry fishing boats easily.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). Is that at high tide or low tide ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. At low tide.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). That seems pretty small but I suppose it may be of some little service.

Mr. KAULBACH. I agree with the Minister of Finance regarding expenditures of this kind. Along the shores of Nova Scotia particularly, there are places of this sort where expenditures like this are needed for the protection of boats. I know that along the shore of Halifax county with which

I am familiar, as well as in my own county and the adjoining county, there are places of this sort.

Mr. HACKETT. With regard to Cascumpec harbour, I wish to say that it is the resort of shipping from all parts of the gulf of St. Lawrence and from the Atlantic ocean. It is a deep water harbour. This channel opening through a sand hill was made by freshets and high tides, and the engineer no doubt felt it his duty to have this closing filled up in order that a greater volume of water might flow through the main channel. Cascumpec harbour is one of the most important harbours on the north shore of Prince Edward Island. It does not accommodate merely the people of the locality, but as I say, is a resort for shipping from all parts of Canada and the world.

At six o'clock, the committee took recess.

After Recess.

Committee resumed at eight o'clock.

Belfast pier—dredging, $1,750.

Mr. HACKETT. This is a revote. May I ask the hon. minister why this amount was not expended last year ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. The reason this work was not done was that there was no dredge available. There is one small dredge which the department has for that purpose, but it was working in another part of the island, I understand, all last season. We hope we may be able to go on with this work.

Mr. HACKETT. Will the dredge be placed there next year ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I do not know whether I will be able to give the hon. gentleman (Mr. Hackett) a definite promise, but I hope to be able to arrange for the work going on during next year.

Cascumpec harbour—closing opening through beach, $1,500.

Mr. HACKETT. I would like to ask the hon. minister what has been done in that connection within the last year, or what is going on now in regard to the closing of the outlet from the main harbour to the ocean.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. The work is now going on, the materials have been procured and it is proposed that this work shall be completed before the 30th June next.

Mr. HACKETT. Is it being done by contract or by day labour ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. It is being done by day labour.

Mr. HACKETT. Who is the foreman of the work going on now and what is the quantity of material which has been placed there—how many loads of brush and stone ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I have not the name of the foreman, but I shall be very pleased to bring down a statement showing who the foreman is who is in charge of this work.

Mr. LENNOX. I think this is an item which does not come under the class of work described as repairs. The hon. minister ought to be in a position to explain to the committee why it is that this cannot be let by tender. It looks to me as if it could be very well let by tender.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. There are two openings here, and it is desirable to close one of them. The hon. member for Prince West (Mr. Hackett) will know the locality and the reasons for this expenditure better than I do myself. I have the report of the engineer of the department and it shows that this work is necessary to provide better harbour accommodation.

Mr. LENNOX. Is this the total estimated expenditure ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This finishes the work. It is all to be completed, we hope, before the 30th of June next.

Mr. HACKETT. We have had the same statement for some years and yet the thing is going on. I suppose the hon. minister is quite sincere in his statement now that this will conclude the work, and that before an election takes place there will be nothing going on in this direction. My experience has been that around election time we will find work of this kind going on. We have the money voted year after year, there is nothing done until just about election time when the money is placed in the hands of parties who will carry out the desires of the government. I think this is wrong especially in the province of Prince Edward Island where these works are of a very important character. They should be attended to without party spirit or party influence of any kind. I trust the hon. minister will see that this work at Cascumpec that has been hanging on for so many years will be completed in a short time.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. It may be possible that governments are guilty on some occasions, but I do not think on this particular occasion they are guilty of using this work for political purposes. That appropriation, I think, was made for the first time after the election in my hon. friend's county so that it could not have been to purchase his support there. I am speaking from the report of the engineer of the department. The material has been purchased, the work will be proceeded with and the greater part of it will be completed, I have no doubt. I have no reason to believe that statement is not correct.

Mr. HACKETT. This matter has been under consideration for a number of years. We have discussed it here before. This opening through the sandhills from Cascumpec harbour occurred some years ago and an estimate was made for closing up the channel. Year after year we have been discussing the necessity of closing this channel and I trust now that the hon. minister will see that the matter will be concluded and that we will have no more of this difficulty.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I will try to see that the work is proceeded with quickly.

Cove head harbour—improvement of entrance channel, $4,000.

Mr. HACKETT. What is the meaning of that ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This is a revote of $4,000 of the previous vote and with the amount to be expended before the 30th of June it will make the total cost $7,300. This work is now under contract.

Mr. INGRAM. When was this contract let ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. It was let on the 13th of March last.

Mr. INGRAM. This is an entirely new work ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Yes.

Creosoted timber for piers and breakwaters, $2,000.

Mr. HACKETT. I would like to ask the hon. minister where these piles are purchased, what they cost and who provides them ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This is a general vote for creosoted wood required for piles throughout the province of Prince Edward Island. The wood is purchased at Norfolk, Virginia.

Mr. INGRAM. What amount was purchased last year ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. There was no creosoted timber purchased for Prince Edward Island last year.

Gaspereaux—harbour for fishermen in Graham's Pond, $500.

Mr. HACKETT. What is the meaning of this ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This is for necessary repairs to the harbour during the year.

Mr. HACKETT. What kind of a harbour is it ? It is for local fishermen ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Yes, it seems to be for the use of fishermen particularly.

Mr. HACKETT. What is the value of the improvements made there ? Have you improved the harbour very much by the expenditure provided by this parliament ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Does my hon. friend mean the public expenditure to date, or the amount that we require now ? This $500 is all that we are asking for

Mr. HACKETT. Did you not spend an amount there before ? There was money spent there before.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I find that $500 was spent there during the past year and this $500 completes the work.

Mr. HACKETT. What is the improvement made by this ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. It is to protect the channel opened from the sea to Graham's pond, to permit the fishing boats to enter the pond at all times of tide.

Mr. LENNOX. The total expenditure on this work will be, I understand, $1,000. I submit that this is not the class of work that this parliament should engage in. When a work is of such trifling character as only to amount to $1,000 it cannot be within the province of this parliament to expend that money.

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. You must not expend anything as small as $1,000.

Mr. LENNOX. Probably not, and I will explain it from my point of view, which may not be that of the Postmaster General. I submit I will have the judgment of the majority of the people of this country; the people who ought to be our masters; the people who contribute the money for us to expend, when I say that a trifling work like this, is a matter for the municipality, or at most, for the province, if it is a public work at all. Where is the line to be drawn ? If we are to pick out here and there through Canada trifling little works in which any man of enterprise would engage as a private venture upon his own capital, where are we going to draw the line, in asking the parliament of Canada to vote for such works If this be the rule, then there are thousands, nay, there are hundreds of thousands of spots in this Dominion which are entitled to the expenditure of public money, and it would be better, far better because it would be far more honest if the federal government would in that case take upon itself the entire expenditure of all the moneys that are required by the people of this country. Surely there is some line of demarcation between what is the duty of the provincial legislature and what is the duty of the federal administration. That is the point I want to make notwithstanding the interjection of the Postmaster General.

These small works, if they are of a public nature at all, must be within the expenditure of the local municipality or within the expenditure of the province. I do not mean that federal works must permeate every part of the Dominion, but they must be, to some extent, of that large national character, as distinguished from a local character, before they can be entitled to draw contribution from the people of this entire Dominion. Notwithstanding the jocular interjection of the Postmaster General, I submit that such an expenditure as this is not justifiable. When this matter comes to be considered as it will be considered; when it comes to be discussed as it will be discussed on the hustings, it will be the almost universal voice of the people of Canada regardless of political affinities that that is the true basis upon which we must proceed as trustees of the money of the people of this country.

Mr. HACKETT. This pond is one of great importance I believe to the fishermen. About the year 1900 operations commenced there for the opening of the harbour, and at the same time the operations commenced at Skinner's pond in Prince county a month before the election, and a large number of men were employed. The Skinners pond work has been dropped because the people there voted against the government. I now ask the minister is it his intention to continue the work at Skinner's pond in Prince county, the same as at Gaspereaux, in King's county, or is it the intention of the government to let it lie until the election approaches ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Skinner's pond has not been brought to my attention and evidently there was no work done there previous to the election. I can hardly agree with my hon. friend (Mr. Lennox) about these small works, because they must be of great importance to the community or else representations would not be made by the people and their representatives in these districts to have these works carried out. It is not fair to say that they are private works because as a matter of fact they are for the benefit of the fishing community who are engaged in an important industry in this country. If my hon. friend were to visit the maritime provinces I am quite sure he would change his views. I am not prepared to say that because we spend $100,000 or $200,000 on a pier to accommodate extensive shipping, that the fishing industry of Canada should not be provided with facilities to carry on its business. It is necessary to afford shelter along the shores of Prince Edward Island, Nova Scotia and New Brunswick, and it is the province of this parliament to provide for that.

Mr. LENNOX. Let me point out the fallacy of that argument. The revenue of the fisheries has been given to the provinces by decision of the Privy Council. No doubt the minister is perfectly correct in saying that this work is of great importance to the fishermen in that locality, but where is there a public work of which it cannot be said that it is of special importance to a particular class of the people. It would be of great importance to a large section of the people of Toronto if a pier was built there, and I am told there is no government pier in Toronto. Now, I would argue against doing such a work in Toronto in the same way, if it could not be shown that the influence of that expenditure extended beyond the city of Toronto. The moneys which this parliament administers are to be administered in the interests of Canada as a whole, and when you talk of a work being of vast interest to a particular body of fishermen, you are speaking only of a number of people in a small locality. When you talk of this being of advantage to a body of fishermen, you speak of a work for a small locality just as you would speak of a work for a township or a county. I submit that if the benefit of an expenditure does not extend beyond the radius of a small community, even though it is somewhat densly settled, there is no justification for it. Go to the city of Hamilton or the town of Barrie or the village of Bradford, which is represented by the hon. Postmaster General. There are many people in the village of Bradford and in the locality of Lake Simcoe who would be vastly benefited by the dredging of the Holland river. They would tell you that it would serve a large number of farmers on either side of the lake, and that it would increase the commerce of the thriving village of Bradford. We have not had any request for such an expenditure. Whether we shall, on the eve of an election, God only knows ; but we have not had it yet, and I submit that an expenditure would be as justifiable in the one case as in the other. I will not trouble the committee any more on this question for the present; but I have endeavoured to point out that there is a broad distinction between an expenditure which may be said to be in the general interests of the people we represent, and those purely local concerns which should be aided and assisted, if at all, by the local government.

Mr. HACKETT. What is the distinction between Skinner's pond and Graham's pond ? In the year 1900 there was a vote for improvements at Graham's pond, and in the same year certain improvements were made at Skinner's pond without any appropriation, but after the election nothing more was done. Now, I find that the government are prosecuting the improvement of Graham's pond while leaving Skinner's pond without any appropriation at all. What is the reason of this ? Is it because the people in the neighbourhood of Skinner's pond returned an opponent of the government, while the people in the neighbourhood of Graham's pond supported a man to uphold the government ?

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. We would not do anything like that.

Mr. HACKETT. I am sure you did. The work was commenced about a month before the election of 1900. When I found in going through the country that the work was commenced, I was astonished, because there was no appropriation for it by this parliament; but I was told that the money was taken from the general appropriation for public works. I had to fight against that. The government purchased many votes by this work. But after the election, the work was dropped, and no work has gone on since at Skinner's pond. I ask, in the name of the people of Prince county, that the government will prosecute the work at Skinner's pond just as they are doing at Graham's pond.

Higgin's shore pier—works of reconstruction and repair, $1,000.

Mr. HACKETT. May I ask the hon. minister to explain this item ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This is a revote. It is for the purpose of repairing the wharf.

Mr. HACKETT. Why was the money not expended last year ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. There were some representations made in regard to the change of site, but the engineer thought it best that the old pier should be repaired. That is the cause of the delay.

Mr. HACKETT. I want to say in all seriousness that the expenditure of $1,000 on the old pier would be simply a waste of money. A new pier should be built about 100 yards east of the old pier, and I would ask the hon. minister if, in addition to this vote, he will place an appropriation in the supplementary estimates to build a completely new pier.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. On the report of the engineer it is estimated that this $1,000 will put the work in good shape. We have a detailed estimate of what is required. But, in view of the representation made by the hon. gentleman, I will ask the engineer to make a further report on the work.

Mr. HACKETT. Has the hon. minister received a petition from that part of Prince county on this subject ? If he wants to give satisfaction to the people of the locality he will build a new pier.

Lower Montague—Aitken's wharf, $2,800.

Mr. HACKETT. What is being done there ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This is for completing the work. The total estimated cost is $4,500.

Mr. HACKETT.

New London—repairs to breakwater, &c., $500.

Mr. INGRAM. I would like to draw the minister's attention to page V—225, which states that the contract here is completed. If so, what do you want this money for ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. My hon. friend will see that this vote is for repairs required during the next year. In reply to the hon. gentleman I beg to say that the engineer estimates $500 will be required for the repairs of this pier and that is why we are asking the money. Every hon. gentleman must know that these piers are liable to injury through storms and ice and so on, and require considerable repairs to keep them from going to pieces.

Mr. INGRAM. Last year this breakwater appears to have been thoroughly repaired and there would seem to be some particular cause for this new expenditure.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Some $446 were spent on repairs on this wharf last year, and the engineer reports $500 are required to keep it in repair for the coming year.

Mr. INGRAM. There were spent last year $5,761.61 for completing the work.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. That was for building the breakwater.

Mr. INGRAM. No, for repairs.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. That must be a misprint.

Mr. HACKETT. If the work were built last year why should it require repairs this year ? That appears to be too quick altogether. It may be that the expenditure last year was for repairs, as the structure was standing some years, but if we built a new work last year we should not be called on to repair it this year.

Mr. LANCASTER. I desire to point out that this work last year was all repairs, as the hon. minister will see by referring to V—225 of the Auditor General's Report. It is headed 'repairs to breakwater, &c.' and includes $5,493 paid T. B. Cullen to complete contract, but that was a contract, not for building but for repairs. Then there are payments to the inspector of work and for advertising, &c., and the total is carried to page V—7 under the heading 'repairs to breakwater, New London.'

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. If my hon. friend will look on page 62 of the report of the Public Works Department, he will find a full explanation of this work. This $500 is for repairs necessary owing to damages done to the pier by storms since the reconstruction was completed.

Repairs to piers and breakwaters, Prince Edward Island, $6,000.

Mr. INGRAM. Will the hon. minister give us some idea of these repairs ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This is the annual vote for general repairs. It has been the practice of parliament for many years to vote $6,000 for general repairs to piers and breakwaters in Prince Edward Island, not provided for by special vote. Up to the first of March, 1903, we spent $1,240 of last year's vote. This money of course is not expended unless absolutely required to keep the piers and wharfs in repair, which are not otherwise provided for by special vote.

Mr. INGRAM. The Auditor General's Report shows that last year there was spent out of the $6,000, $1,554.63. This year the hon. minister tells us that $1,240 has been spent so far. That would leave the difference between $1,240 and $6,000 to be still expended.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. That $4,760 lapses on the 30th June if not expended.

Mr. INGRAM. Perhaps the members from Prince Edward Island may ask for works in the meantime to be done, which will absorb this money.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. You cannot expend this money except for the purposes for which it is appropriated, and the department will not expend it unless it be really necessary for repairs to piers and breakwaters.

Mr. HACKETT. I may say that this money which was voted last year should be all expended because those piers belonging to the government are falling into disrepair. Hon. gentlemen may think it is a great thing to vote $6,000 and expend only $1,200 out of that vote, but the piers and wharfs along the shores of Prince Edward Island which belong to the government, are falling into disrepair because money is not expended on them to keep them in good order. I have every confidence in Mr. Hogan, the engineer down there, but no doubt his instructions are to save every dollar he can for the government. But the government are in this respect too saving. They vote the money and make the people believe that they are spending it, but instead they spend it in some other part of Canada and the island has its piers and breakwaters falling to pieces. I would like to ask the hon. minister if he intends spending the whole of this vote of $6,000 this year on the wharfs and breakwaters in Prince Edward Island.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS As I have explained, this money is spent upon the report of the engineer. I am pleased to know that we have an economical man, but sorry to hear that he would allow these works to go to pieces when the money is voted to keep them in repair. It is not likely that the engineer who represents the department in Prince Edward Island would allow the state of affairs to exist which my hon. friend represents, especially when he knows that the money has been voted to make the repairs required. If we only spent $1,600 the year before and $1,240 so far this year, it was not because the department was not willing to spend the money but because no reports came to us from the engineer that the work was necessary. The money voted for this purpose could not be spent in any other part of the island or of Canada for any other purpose. It simply lapses and is not spent at all.

Mr. INGRAM. But suppose the hon. gentleman from West Prince (Mr. Hackett) went to the department and asked to have this work done, the hon. minister might say there was no money for the purpose. But when we find that there is an unexpended balance of $6,000 that would be hardly a fair statement of facts. Perhaps the hon. gentleman would say whether he applied to the department and was told there was no money for the purpose.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I do not think so.

Souris, Knight's Point — strengthening of breakwater, $10,000.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This is for the placing of large stones on the seaward side of the breakwater at Knight's Point, filling in with ordinary sized ballast, depressions in the body of the cribwork, and making general repairs, &c. There will be needed two thousand cubic yards of large stone, and one thousand cubic feet of ordinary ballast. The general repairs to the cribwork will cost over $1,000; in all $10,000.

Mr. TAYLOR. Is this under contract, awarded after calling for tender ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Yes.

Mr. LENNOX. What is the contract price?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Seventy-four cents per cubic yard. The contractor is J. Lanigan.

Tignish--rebuilding northern breakwater, $700.

Mr. HACKETT. Will the hon. gentleman explain the meaning of this item ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This is to be applied to the building up of a block on the breakwater which has settled about three feet.

Mr. HACKETT. This Tignish breakwater has been but lately completed, and why are we now asked to spend this amount ? And is it the intention of the government to call for tenders, or will this be done by day's work ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I suppose that this work being in the hon. gentleman's own constituency, he would be familiar with the conditions. A report was received from the engineer, of whom I have no personal knowledge, but whom I understand to be a very good man. I have already explained what is to be done with the money. If this work is not done the block will be very seriously affected in a short time.

Mr. HACKETT. What kind of work is intended ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. As I understand, this is for rebuilding the superstructure of the cribwork, which originally cost $4,500.

Mr. HACKETT. Is it the intention to drive piles around the breakwaters ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. No, stone.

Mr. HACKETT. Before leaving the Prince Edward Island items, I would like to ask the Minister of Public Works what is being done in Summerside with regard to the works prosecuted there some years ago, and on which operations were being carried on up to a very late date ? And have the contractors been paid off ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I shall be obliged to look into that matter. There is no vote here for Summerside, and I have no particulars at hand. I would rather bring down full particulars for my hon. friend than attempt to speak from memory. I believe there is some difficulty about the matter, for I remember the subject being brought to my attention some time ago. I will have a memorandum made of the particulars and bring it down for the information of the hon. gentleman (Mr. Hackett).

Mr. HACKETT. About what time may we expect that ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. The hon. gentleman may have it when the supplementary estimates are under discussion or during next week.

New Brunswick—Anderson's Hollow—improvements and repairs to wharf, $1,800.

Mr. LENNOX. What about this ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. There was an appropriation of $6,500 for this work. The work is now under way and nearing completeness. We are asking a revote of $1,000 on the former vote and the new vote of $800 to complete the work.

Mr. TAYLOR. Was it not let by tender ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. No, this has been done by day's work.

Mr. INGRAM. Was there not an estimate of cost for this work of $2,500 for last year ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Not likely, because there was a vote of $6,500 last session.

Mr. INGRAM. But when that vote was asked for the minister said :

This vote is applied for to make provision for repairing the present pier, the estimated cost of which is $2,500 and also putting in a groin to overcome an accumulation of sand and gravel, estimated to cost $4,000.

So, the former estimate does not complete the work.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. It was short by $800.

Bay du Vin—to complete reconstruction of wharf, $500.

Mr. WILMOT. What is the total cost of that work ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. The total is $12,847.64. This $500 will complete the work.

Mr. WILMOT. Was that done by contract ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Yes.

Campbellton wharf—extension and repairs, $18,000.

Mr. BENNETT. May I ask the minister if this work has been commenced, and have tenders been asked for ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I find that the late government had spent a sum of money on this property. It is private property, and belongs to Mr. Shives. It has been thought best by the department to purchase the property, the right of way, and have full control of this wharf. It is an important point, a great deal of shipping comes there, and it is necessary to maintain the wharf. There has been public money spent on this property previously, but I do not know how much.

Mr. INGRAM. When ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. A sum of $31,000 has been spent on this property previous to 1896, I cannot say now in what years it was spent. No money has been spent since 1896. The work now requires extension and improvements, and it is thought better to take the whole property over and have it vested in the Crown.

Mr. LANCASTER. I find in the Auditor General's Report, page D—229, that $2,251 was spent on this work last year, apparently it was spent for odds and ends in the shape of labour, machines, pieces of timber and so forth. Now I think we ought to know whether a contract is going to be let, and whether this whole $18,000 is going to be spent in the same slipshod manner.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. My hon. friend does not understand me. I said that an extension or addition had been built to this wharf at considerable cost. The amount expended since 1896 has been for keeping the wharf in repair, that part belonging to the government. It is very unsatisfactory to have the adjoining property belonging to a private individual, and we propose to acquire that property.

Mr. LANCASTER. What is he going to do with the $18,000, how is it going to be handled ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. $15,000 of this will be devoted to purchasing the property belonging to Mr. Shives, the wharf and approaches belong to him. The $3,500 is for repairs.

Mr. LENNOX. Has the property been acquired from this man yet ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. No, there have been negotiations about the purchase, but we cannot make the purchase until we have the money voted. If the gentleman who owns the property will not transfer it to the Crown, of course the money will not be spent. The engineer thinks there is no binding contract, but there have been negotiations with the owner.

Mr. INGRAM. In what constituency is this ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. In the county of Restigouche.

Mr. ROBINSON (Elgin). Will there be any revenue derived from this expenditure?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. There will be considerable revenue, but we are not depending so much on the revenue as on the advantage this wharf will be to the public.

Mr. INGRAM. Will the hon. gentleman tell us what this land is worth, and how much, if any, Mr. Shives himself has expended on it.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. We are negotiating for the purchase of that portion of the wharf that belongs to him.

Mr. INGRAM. We can get very little information about this whole transaction. There is no doubt the government have expended money on this property, and now they are buying it and paying a larger sum for it by reason of having expended money on it themselves. The property has been made more valuable by reason of the government money expended on it.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Whether the previous government made a good or a bad expenditure of money on this wharf, I believe it is good policy now to keep the work in repair, and to purchase the property if we can get it at a reasonable price.

Mr. LANCASTER. Will the minister tell us what certificate or what evidence he has that the price is a reasonable one ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. The department have certificates from their officers and reports as to the value of this property and the public necessity for it. We are certainly not buying it blindly. We are not asking for a vote for the purpose of buying it because it is not in the public interest. It is because part of the wharf belongs to the Crown and part to Mr. Shives—and it is desirable that this should be made public property. That is the object in negotiating for the purchase.

Mr. INGRAM. The hon. gentleman stated that the last government expended money on this property though the government did not own it. I inferred that from the hon. gentleman's remarks.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. That is correct.

Mr. INGRAM. And now this government intends making an expenditure of money on this approach, and they intend to buy it.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Not on the approach, but on the part that has been previously built by the government.

Mr. LANCASTER. How much land altogether is to be purchased ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. The land is only the approach to the wharf.

Mr. TAYLOR. What quantity of land is in the approach ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. The wharf is built in front of a street in the town. It is not the land that we are purchasing; it is the wharf. The wharf was built by private enterprise, and it is owned by Mr. Shives. What we want to do is to secure the approach to the government wharf; that is to the wharf owned by the government previously. The hon. gentleman will see that the government having built an extension of the private wharf they cannot get over to their own property without going over the property of Mr. Shives.

Mr. INGRAM. Is it absolutely true that the late government paid money out to improve Mr. Shives' property without having any control over it, or is it not the fact that the last government expended money on the property that belongs to the Crown, and not on the approach ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. There is no object in keeping anything back about this matter. There is no object in misrepresenting it. I did not tell the hon. gentleman that they spent it on the wharf that Mr. Shives had already built. I said that they had built an extension. I am only speaking from the information given to me by the officers of the department, and I explained to the hon. gentleman that they had built an extension of this wharf at an expense of $31,000, and that the approach to this part of the wharf Mr. Shives owned and it still belongs to him. We want to purchase that and have the whole property vested in the Crown and make the repairs for which we are asking $3,100.

Mr. INGRAM. Has the hon. gentleman a plan of this work ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Yes, in the department.

Mr. INGRAM. Will the hon. gentleman have any objection to laying it on the Table ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I will be very pleased to bring down the plan.

Mr. LENNOX. I think we understand it as far as the facts are concerned. There is a wharf built by the government. Between that and the land there is an approach owned by a private individual.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. A wharf.

Mr. LENNOX. There is an approach in which a private individual is interested. Does this Mr. Shives own the whole of the approach or only a portion of it ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. He owns it all.

Mr. LENNOX. Now, I think it is very easy for the minister to tell us what land is covered by that approach ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I will be pleased to bring down the plan to show the extent.

Mr. LENNOX. Cannot the hon. minister at present give us practically the dimensions of it ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Perhaps the engineer has some information. The structure is 294 feet in length, 24 feet in width and there are 11½ feet of water at low water.

Mr. LENNOX. Is the portion that belongs to Mr. Shives 294 feet in length and 24 feet in width and for which there is asked the sum of $15,000 ? I have not made it up myself, but I am told that that is less than one-fifth of an acre of land. Is this a large city, or a town ? What kind of a place is it ? Do you know the population ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. It is quite an important place. I have tried to explain that we are not buying land, but the wharf—the structure.

Mr. LENNOX. I do not know what the hon. minister means, when he makes a distinction between buying land and buying the structure, that the structure, which is called the approach, was an expensive structure to build, but I would say that when we hear of $15,000 for a work for which up to the present time we have had no claim made by Mr. Shives, it does suggest pretty strongly that this is a matter, at all events, requiring a good deal of looking into. We have had some trouble in dealing with the Expropriation Act and I think that the hon. minister ought to take very careful means of investigating this before he decides to put $15,000 into it and be very sure as to the title of Mr. Shives.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I may say as to the title, that that goes through the Department of Justice. I find that they are pretty strict about having a complete title.

Mr. LENNOX. I am told that the population is 2,000.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. As to the value, I may say that in our experience in the past we have found, if we could make a fair arrangement according to the valuation put on property by our own officials, from the best information they could gather, that it has been preferable to going to the court and instituting expropriation proceedings. The experience of the Public Works Department is that by the time we pay the award, the lawyers fees and all the costs it would have paid us two or three times over to take the value put on the property by the officers of the department. The officers of the department have no object in the world in over-valuing these properties. They have no object in procuring them except in the public interest. If we think that a property is valued too high we can proceed under the Expropriation Act and refer it to the court. Unless we get property at the valuation put upon it by our own officials, appointed to value it, we generally apply to the court under expropriation proceedings.

Hon. Mr. TARTE. How much has this property been estimated at ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Fifteen thousand dollars.

Hon. Mr. TARTE. Have you the valuation there ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. The reports are in the department.

Mr. TAYLOR. If I understand the hon. minister correctly this pier or wharf is beside the water, so that there is no land to be acquired at all, and Mr. Shives now owns the piece of the wharf extending out into the ocean. At the end of his wharf the late government, I understand from the hon. minister, built an extension. Are we to assume that the late government went on and expended a lot of money building an extension to a wharf owned by a private individual ?

Hon. Mr. TARTE. Yes, it did.

Mr. TAYLOR. This is a matter which requires investigation. Did Mr. Shives own this property when the late government made the extension.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. It was formerly owned by Mr. Ferguson, then by Mr. Mowatt and now by Mr. Shives, who I think has owned it for 20 years or more.

Mr. TAYLOR. Who was the owner when the late government made the extension ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I would have to bring down a return to show all these dates. I have merely the facts given me by the department.

Mr. INGRAM. Will the minister allow this item to stand until we get the plan of the wharf.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I have no objection at all.

Hon. Mr. TARTE. I visited this place and I know something about it. There was an existing wharf belonging to a private owner and the late government built a cross wharf at the end of that, but unfortunately they forgot to make arrangements with the owner of the wharf, so that in order to reach the government wharf you have to cross on private property.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. They complain they are charged exhorbitant rates.

Hon. Mr. TARTE. Yes, I tried several times to settle it and my recollection is that when I left office there was a report to council in favour of arbitration.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I understand that is the least price they will accept, and it is a question as to whether we should expropriate and pay perhaps a higher price and all the costs. We know from past experience what that means.

Hon. Mr. TARTE. Yes, I know it.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I should think that after the explanation given the House will see that it is in the public interest that we should secure this property. The people complain that they have to pay exhorbitant rates to get to the government wharf and as there is a great deal of shipping done at this port it is desirable that this work should become the property of the Crown. None of this money will be paid until we have secured a proper title.

Mr. TAYLOR. I would certainly like to see the plans of the dock, because I can hardly imagine that the late government made an expenditure there without having some arrangement with the then owner of the property that the people should have a right to use it.

Hon. Mr. TARTE. I have investigated that point and I can assure my hon. friend that there was no arrangement made at the time. However, as to the price let me say that I think that it is pretty high.

Mr. INGRAM. I think so too.

Hon. Mr. TARTE. It is pretty high. The wharf belongs to Mr. Shives now who bought it some five or six years ago, and we are at his mercy to a large extent because our wharf cannot be used without passing on his property. For a time I contemplated building a wharf elsewhere but I found it would have cost more and so I resolved to go to arbitration. It was the last act I did on that question.

Mr. TAYLOR. The hon. gentleman (Hon. Mr Tarte) throws some light on this subject which confirms my opinion and bears out what I have heard. Mr. Shives acquired this property some five or six years ago. I am creditably informed that Mr. Shives is a strong supporter of the hon. gentlemen opposite and the ex-minister says that he thinks that it is a very big price to pay Mr. Shives. I think so too. This $15,000 will build an extension from the dock erected by the late government into the street, and he will have nothing to pay to Mr. Shives. I have a strong suspicion that the late government made an arrangement with the then owner of this property or they would not have been so foolish as to spend this money. It is said that in order to reach this government wharf the people have to pay toll. There is nothing extraordinary in that, for it is the case in connection with almost every wharf in Ontario. In my own town of Gananoque, if we want to ship anything we have to pay the Rathbun Company to get on their wharfs to do our shipping. Why should the government to give free wharfs in one place and make the people pay for their wharf accommodation in another. Why, the revenues of some of these wharfs in the lower provinces is not sufficient to pay the salary of the wharfinger. In some cases we do not get $2 a year from wharfs which cost us thousands of dollars. Before this item passes I want to see the plan of the property, and who was the owner at the time the late government made this expenditure.

Hon. Mr. TARTE. I am perfectly sure that no arrangement was made by the late government. As to that there is no possible doubt. A mistake was made. I am of the opinion that this wharf should be acquired by the government because the wharf we have built is of no use unless we make some arrangement with Mr. Shives. But I am at the same time of the opinion that $15,000 is a very high price indeed. I know the value of the work, I have been there, and I have declined to pay it myself.

Mr. INGRAM. Would an arbitration declare that price to be unreasonable ?

Hon. Mr. TARTE. That I do not know. We are at the mercy of Mr. Shives. Before I left office I made a report suggesting that expropriation proceedings be taken. If we are compelled to pay $15,000, I suppose we shall have to pay it. In arbitration cases, the government usually does not get the best of it. All the same, I think an expropriation would be the safest course. Of course, my hon. friend may have new information since I left office.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. No, the matter stands very much as my hon. friend left it. As my hon. friend from Leeds (Mr. Taylor) did not seem to think the information I gave was correct, I will say that I have no personal knowledge of the matter myself. I have had no personal interview with the owner and do not know him. The only information I have is what has been furnished to me by the department. It only came to me as a departmental matter. The information given to me by the department is that in 1889-90 a wharf 140 x 35 feet by some 35 feet in height was built at a distance of about 110 feet from the eastern end of the return at the outer end of Mowat's (formerly Ferguson's) wharf, the outer or channel faces of the said wharfs being kept in one and the same line ; the main object being to provide a place where vessels frequenting the Restigouche river could conveniently deposit their ballast instead of throwing it into the river to the detriment of the harbour of Campbellton. In 1892-93 the ballast wharf, which is now about filled up, was connected by the Dominion government with Ferguson's or Mowat's (now Shives') wharf, by building up the gap between the two with cribwork, thus effecting a junction with the shore and the Intercolonial Railway, a branch line of which extends to Mowat's wharf. In the petition transmitted by Mr. McAllister, a supporter of the government at that time, on February 16th, 1896, the citizens of Campbellton represent that it is impossible to use the government ballast wharf as a landing pier without passing over Mowat's wharf, and that the charges for using the latter add considerably to the expense of the port, and they therefore ask the government to purchase the Mowat wharf and make it public property. That is a very concise and clear statement of the whole affair as furnished by the department. I agree with my hon. friend that it is in the public interest that we should purchase that property. As to the price, when the matter came before me, I could not do anything about it until authorized by parliament. The sum named is the lowest price the owner would put on the property, and it is for the department to consider whether they will enter into an arrangement to take the property at that price, or expropriate it. I may say that our experience teaches us that if our own officials and experts in the valuation of properties consider that the price asked is not too high, I would prefer to purchase by agreement rather than go to court, because the probability is that we would have a larger amount to pay and a great deal of costs. However, that may be, the passage of this vote does not at all preclude us from the right to arbitrate or expropriate if we think the price too high.

Hon. Mr. TARTE. Mr. Shives and myself had several interviews. The reason Mr. Shives is asking so much is because he says he derives a yearly revenue of about $1,000 from his wharf. The wharf itself is not worth $15,000. I believe it is not worth more than perhaps $6,000 or $8,000. There is a valuation in the department by some of our officers to the effect that the work is not worth more than that and perhaps less. Mr. Shewen made a statement which was lower than that, but which I thought was too low. The fact remains that Mr. Shives is the owner of this piece of property, and is deriving a revenue of $1,000 from it every year, and he says, 'I do not see why I should be obliged to give you my property when I am getting so much out of it.' That is the real position of the matter.

Mr. LENNOX. This, I think, shows the great importance of having a pretty full investigation of these matters. The ex-Minister of Public Works has just told us that according to his recollection, there is in the Public Works Department an estimate by the officers of the department that the total value of this structure is not $15,000, but $6,000 or $8,000, or possibly even less. Now, I am quite satisfied, that if the present Minister of Public Works had the opportunity of investigating the affairs of his department that he will have in the future, until we come into power at the next election, probably in a year or so, he would probably have ascertained that fact, and would have told it to us just as candidly as he has given the other information. But this emphasis the importance of getting more information than we have been geting on these estimates from time to time. The Minister of Public Works said just now, as I understood him, that there were just two questions to be considered : whether the department should accept the property at the amount that was asked for it, or expropriate it. From what has been divulged, I venture to say that there is a third and very serious question, that is, whether we should have anything to do with it at all or not. We are told that the matter has been hanging since 1896, or longer, that it is not a new proposition, that a large revenue has been derived by Mr. Shives from his portion of the structure, but that a very small revenue has been derived by the government from their part. The inhabitants of the town or village where this wharf is situated have something to do with this matter. The government is putting up a wharf there which will be available for the people of that locality. It is true the people will have to pay something by way of fees for the approach. But that happens in many instances, and I submit we should consider seriously whether we ought to make the purchase at all. But that can be considered more deliberately when we see the plans and finally pass on the item.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This is giving a revenue of 1,000 and over and if we go to arbitration we will probably be stuck for a good deal more than we would be by an agreement because the courts as a rule base the value on the revenue.

Mr. INGRAM. The hon. minister should bring down a plan before this item is voted.

Hon. Mr. TARTE. If my hon. friend would agree to have an expropriation proceeding, the House might let the item go.

Mr. FRASER. Is there any way of getting at the originators who built the wharf without getting the property ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. They have been punished.

Hon. Mr. ROSS (Victoria, N.S.) Mr. Shives asked $15,000 and the Minister of Public Works of that day, being a conscientious, honest man, refused to pay it. Now the government want a title to this property. Would it not be better at once to face the music and expropriate the property at once and be done with it ?

Mr. INGRAM. We will see later on.

Item allowed to stand.

Caraquet wharf, $55,000.

Mr. RICHARDSON. This is a large sum. Has the contract been let ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Yes, this work is under contract. The contract was let in March, 1902.

Mr. RICHARDSON. Has any work been done and any money expended ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. No doubt.

Mr. RICHARDSON. The committee would like to know for what purpose this is required ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. No doubt parliament, when it authorized the vote, took full information and considered the matter fully. It is rather late now, after the money has been voted and the contract entered into, and the work under way and $10,000 already paid out, to stop the work.

Mr. LANCASTER. When was the land purchased ? Last year we had the statement of the ex-Minister of Public Works that the land was not purchased and the site not finally located.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I do not find that we have to pay anything for the site.

Mr. LANCASTER. Was the site given free ? There was trouble last year with regard to where the land was to be got and what we were going to pay for it, and the ex-Minister of Public Works said that before the contract was awarded he would see that the deed for the land was in his hands.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. The contract was signed the 1st of March, 1902, long before that session was over.

Mr. LANCASTER. For the purchase of the land ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. The property belongs to the Dominion. I do not see that there was any land to be purchased. $20 was the cost of the right of way from the shore to the highway.

Mr. LANCASTER. Last year Mr. Ganong asked the then Minister of Public Works (Hon. Mr. Tarte) who owned the land on which he was spending this money, and the answer was that it belonged to James Blackhall. Does Mr. Blackhall own the land or do we own it ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I do not find anything in the memorandum of the department regarding the land except $20 for the right of way. That must be the land referred to.

Mr. LANCASTER. The then Minister of Public Works said distinctly that Mr. James Blackhall was the owner of the land.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. He was merely referring to the right of way from the shore to the highway. That was conveyed to the Crown.

Mr. LANCASTER. That is the right of way, but that is not where we are spending our money.

Mr. INGRAM. This parliament is entitled to a businesslike statement before we undertake work of this character. Here is an expenditure of $55,000 and if any hon. gentleman wants to know why it is being expended, there is nothing to show the reason. It is time that the department, when asking for money for any particular purpose, should come down in a businesslike way and state what public purpose the work is supposed to serve, what amount of money will be spent on it this year, and how much is the estimated cost. But we cannot get this information, and when we go out to the country we are told that we are to blame because we did not properly criticise these items. I know that the hon. the minister is new to the department and I am not holding him strictly responsible for this, but in the case of any new work a proper estimate should be brought down, and it is the duty of the opposition to refuse to allow any vote to go through until a full explanation is given.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. No new work has been voted this session regarding which I have not given the fullest information. As far as this work is concerned, it is now under contract. I am satisfied that no vote has gone through this session concerning which I have not given every detail. I think that parliament is entitled to this information, and I would not ask the House to vote any money unless I were prepared to give it. I think that is one principle that ought to be adhered to. Whatever the work is, it is the duty of parliament to make inquiries before committing itself to it. Parliament did commit itself to this work by giving a grant of money, and I suppose they received the information necessary at that time. The total estimated cost is $65,000.

Mr. TAYLOR. This is under contract ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Yes.

Mr. INGRAM. What is the present contract price ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. It is $59,990.

Mr. INGRAM. Why, then, does not the minister ask for the total cost of the work $65,000 ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. That is exactly what I am doing—$65,000 asked for this year, and $10,000 of last year's appropriation expended.

Mr. INGRAM. Who will own the wharf after it is built ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. The Dominion of Canada.

Mr. BENNETT. There must be something on the file which the minister has before him to prove who owns the land. Does Mr. Blackhall own it or does the Dominion government own it ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I have already explained that the government own it.

Mr. BENNETT. From whom did they purchase it ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. They purchased the right of way for $20. That is all the land we had to purchase, according to the information I have from the officers of the department.

Mr. BENNETT. Last year, when the then Minister of Public Works (Hon. Mr. Tarte) was asked: 'who owns the land ?' he answered: 'Mr. James Blackhall.' Surely nothing could be plainer than that.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. On the information given me by the officer of the department I believe that refers to the right of way which, I have explained, we bought.

Hon. Mr. TARTE. I may explain the circumstances. Of course the work is completed from the shore. But between the shore and the highway there is a small piece of land, and it is for that piece of land, I stated last year, $20 had to be paid. It is the right of way. No other property was purchased, it was not necessary to acquire any for the work itself, but only to acquire means of communication with the main road.

Mr. BELL. What is the size of the right of way ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I have not at hand the description of the right of way. It is a small piece of land.

Mr. TURGEON. It goes through a piece of land of about an acre.

Mr. INGRAM. Has the piece of land been acquired by deed ?

Mr. FRASER. Oh, oh.

Mr. INGRAM. The hon. member for Guysborough (Mr. Fraser) seems in a jocular mood Is he satisfied that the government has the deed of the land ?

Mr. FRASER. Most decidedly. The hon. gentleman might as well ask if the deed is signed or if there is a seal to it. The government own the foreshore, and all they needed was a piece of land from the street to the wharf. The minister says that the money was paid and the deed got and that the government own the land.

Mr. INGRAM. Did the hon. gentleman (Mr. Fraser) hear that ?

Mr. FRASER. Certainly I did.

Mr. INGRAM. Will the hon. minister say that now ?

Mr. FRASER. He has said it.

Mr. INGRAM. Will he say it now ?

Mr. FRASER. The hon. minister as I understood him—

Mr. INGRAM. Oh, oh.

Mr. FRASER. Just wait. Hon. gentlemen are like a jack in the box jumping up every minute. The hon. minister, as I understood him, stated that the Dominion government owned the place where the wharf was built that they needed a right of way from the street, and they bought it and got a deed of it. Is not that plain ? The deed specified the number of feet in the right of way and what difference does it make whether it is twenty or thirty feet ? I am bound to assume that they got the regular right of way.

Mr. INGRAM. Will the hon. minister tell us whether he has it or not ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I am informed by the officials that we have. I have given strict instructions that where we are doing work on property, the deed must be acquired, and, of course, I assume that the officials of the department will see to it that, in such a case as this, a proper right of way is acquired before the money is expended.

Great Salmon river—Groyne and breakwater combined, $4,300.

Mr. WILMOT. Where is this point ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I move to strike out this item.

Mr. INGRAM. Will the hon. gentleman state why the item was put in the estimates ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Representations were made that this was a necessary work, and I believe it is. But the property is reported by the department to be private property. I do not intend to ask for the money until this is arranged. If it is arranged, I can bring down a supplementary estimate.

Mr. INGRAM. In what constituency is it?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. St. John.

Motion agreed to.

Lord's Cove (Deer Island)—completion of wharf, $500.

Mr. WILMOT. What amount has been expended on this wharf ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. $2,774.19.

Mr. WILMOT. Does the government own the approach to the wharf ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Yes. This completes the work.

Richibucto, to complete protection and extension of north pier, &c., $2,500.

Mr. INGRAM. How long is this work ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. It is 703 feet in length. The amount of the contract was $22,900. Previous to this there has been spent on that work $155,000.

River St. John, including tributaries, $16,000.

Mr. WILMOT. Will the minister give some explanation of that vote ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. It has been customary to vote $16,000 for work on the St. John river. Last year $6,000 was spent, and this is a revote of $10,000 to make up the usual vote.

Mr. WILMOT. There is a great necessity for work being done there in the way of dredging, in order to facilitate navigation. The traffic is very heavy and increasing, and the public suffers a good deal of inconvenience. I would especially direct attention to Oromocto Shoals.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I will see that everything is done there which we have means of doing.

River St. John and tributaries—to provide for contribution to local government, not to exceed one-half the first cost of wharfs built by them in tidal waters, $3,000.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This is the amount claimed by the provincial government under some old arrangement. The matter has been adjusted, but the Auditor General was not satisfied with the conditions on which the money was voted. This vote is asked for in order that we may pay the local government the sum due under the agreement made with them.

Hon. Mr. TARTE. I had some trouble about sums of money previously placed in the estimates. The provincial government had built some small wharfs and then sent us the bill, asking us to pay half the cost. I was never able to find out what kind of an agreement had taken place in former years ; but I remember that in 1899 or 1900 I wrote to the provincial Minister of Public Works telling him that unless the plans were submitted to the department previously to building their wharfs, we would not entertain the payment of that work. New Brunswick is the only province in which this government pays for work of that kind. I do not object, but I do not think it is a very good principle. I do not see why we should be obliged to help the provincial governments in building wharfs of that kind.

Mr. LENNOX. Will the minister explain on what principle it is that the Dominion government in this instance is to provide one-half the cost and the local government to provide the other half ?

Hon. Mr. TARTE. And we do not own the work.

Mr. LENNOX. Would the minister explain the peculiar circumstances which make it right for the Dominion government to pay one-half the cost of this work ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. An arrangement was made by the late government at the instance of the Hon. Mr. Foster, and agreed to by parliament, to vote one-half the cost of the work undertaken by the provincial government, on a certificate from the resident engineer that this work had been done at a fair price. As my hon. friend the ex-minister has explained, we took exception to this method. However, a vote of $5,000 was taken, but the Auditor General would not pay the money to New Brunswick, taking exception to the way the money was voted. This vote is asked for to carry out the obligation assumed under that agreement. Since my hon. friend took exception to the method in which the account was rendered and the work was done, they have furnished us satisfactory evidence of the expenditure of the money on a certificate of the engineers, to the satisfaction of the department as well as of the Auditor General. We have to ask the revote of this money, and we do it in this way, so that it may be paid to the proper parties.

Hon. Mr. TARTE. I really think we should not go on with such a practice. I took exception to it and the House will take exception to it with me, I am sure. I have seen these wharfs, they are very small wharfs, costing $300, $400 or $500. They are for local purposes and these works are very near to one another. I took exception to that kind of work. The record is there and it will show. I told them that in future I should not recommend to my colleagues the payment of one single dollar unless the plans of these wharfs were submitted to us. I suppose accounts that have been incurred in the past must be paid but I would suggest to my hon. friend not to allow that practice to be continued.

Mr. BROCK. I must say that I am rather surprised with the argument made by the hon. Minister of Public Works that the practice should prevail with the present government because the Finance Minister of the government some seven years ago made certain arrangements. When so many arrangements made by the government have been completely upset why carry on this particular arrangement ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Can the hon. gentleman (Mr. Brock) point out any obligation of the old government that this government has not carried out ?

Mr. BROCK. Yes, I think I can remember some appointments to the Senate that were made by the late government that this government upset. What about the steamship service ? There is another point. The government of the Dominion are expending large amounts of money in the various provinces and, to keep to the items in the province of New Brunswick, there is an immense expenditure in that province for wharfs. I think we should go into the building of wharfs from a business point of view. I do not suppose the government build wharfs merely for political purposes but I take it for granted they are built because the business of the country requires it and if the business requires it the expenditure should have some kind of proportion to the amount that is earned by these wharfs. They should not spend money if it costs more to collect the tolls than the tolls amount to.

Hon. Mr. TARTE. In these cases we do not collect any tolls because these wharfs are not our own property. We simply contribute the money towards these wharfs which is worse.

Mr. BROCK. All the more reason why we should be careful in our expenditure of money, but even if we do get a revenue from it we should not expend $65,000 upon a wharf that probably will not bring in $500 a year of net revenue. Therefore, I contend this whole thing is wrong and I do not think anybody is more convinced of it than the Minister of Finance (Hon. Mr. Fielding) and the members of the government themselves, but they keep on and the reason given by the hon. Minister of Public Works is that this was a practice commenced by Mr. Foster the late minister of finance.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I never said that.

Mr. BROCK. I understood the hon. minister to say that this was an arrangement made by Mr. Foster.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I was speaking of this particular arrangement with the provincial government which was made on the recommendation of Mr. Foster. It was adopted by the government of that day, approved of by parliament and the government in good faith expended this money. That is the reason I am asking parliament to pay it.

Mr. BROCK. This government should not consider themselves bound to carry out any bad arrangement no matter by whom it is made. This is a very immoral and unbusinesslike arangement and it should be put a stop to at once.

Hon. Mr. TARTE. A stop has been put to it. I put a stop to it myself.

Mr. BROCK. Why do we find it here still ?

Hon. Mr. TARTE. Because the amount that is placed in the estimates is to pay an old debt. This amount, I am sure, upon investigation, it will be proved is to pay debts that have been accumulating for four years. But, Mr. Foster never made any permanent arrangement so that in the future we are perfectly free.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. It is hardly fair for the hon. member for Centre Toronto (Mr. Brock) to suggest that Mr. Foster made this arrangement for political purposes. I want to be fair to my predecessor in office and to defend him against this attack made upon him from the other side of the House.

Mr. BROCK. I do not think the hon. gentleman is sincere.

Mr. GIBSON. Mr. Chairman, I do not see why the hon. gentlemen opposite should get their backs up because $3,000 is to be expended on the St. John river. The provincial government have agreed to pay half of this expense, but I do not think they would be awfully put out if this government paid the whole of it. We have not had all the expenditure that we have asked for dredging and for wharfs in New Brunswick. I think the government should pay for some of this work and I think the hon. gentlemen opposite should be a little more lenient in their criticisms of items of this kind.

Mr. LENNOX. There is another point that we want to have cleared up before we carry this item. It is a matter that arises out of what the ex-Minister of Public Works (Hon. Mr. Tarte) said. The hon. gentleman gives us to understand that this is for the payment of an old debt, that is overdue some years, that it is not for something in the future, and therefore, if that is the case, I should like to have that explicit statement from the present hon. Minister of Public Works.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This is for an old debt for work already completed.

River St. John—wharf at Oromocto, $6,000.

Mr. WILMOT. I would like to know whether that work will be proceeded with at once ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. It is the intention of the department to proceed with this work at once. Tenders have been advertised for and the work will be commenced at once.

St. John harbour—Negro Point breakwater, $20,000.

Mr. INGRAM. What is the explanation of this ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This vote of $20,000 is to make good serious damage done to Negro Point breakwater by storms, chiefly those of the 9th and 10th of November, 1900, the object being to save the lighthouse at the outer end of the breakwater which will certainly be destroyed if no steps are taken to rebuild its foundations in a more permanent manner with large blocks of granite and concrete. I may say to the Committee that I had an important deputation from the city of St. John making representations in reference to this breakwater. It seems from the representations of the leading citizens of that city that the harbour is almost useless without this breakwater and they are urging the expenditure of a very large sum for the purpose of extending it. There is some difference of opinion between the engineers as to how best to go on with this work. The total expenditure upon this breakwater up to the 30th of June last was $601,173. It is situated in a very bad place and the storms wash away the wood work frame. The work we are doing now is to maintain the wharf and to protect the light house; it is of concrete and granite and will be more durable.

Mr. INGRAM. Will this expenditure prevent the wharf from being washed away ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Judging by the discussion I have had with the engineers and the deputation which waited on me, I am afraid I cannot guarantee that. The whole thing is a big work and will have to be considered most carefully.

Mr. INGRAM. Did the deputation suggest any kind of work that would be permanent ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. That was left an open question. They wanted the engineers to have a consultation and I have asked for a report.

Mr. CLANCY. Is it proposed to replace all the wood with concrete ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. The report in the department shows that it would cost at least $200,000 for a revetment of concrete to protect this work in a permanent way. It is estimated that it would cost $500,000 to carry out the work asked by the deputation which was to carry the breakwater clear across to Partridge Island. Some of the shipping people have taken objection to that and the matter will have to be gone into more carefully and a report made before I will recommend it to the House. This is for the maintenance of the existing work.

Mr. CLANCY. Is it to be done by contract ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. It would be impossible to do this work in any other way than day labour.

Mr. CLANCY. It seems to me that this concrete work is usually done under contract.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This is repairing work and I do not think it would be possible for any engineer to make an estimate or specification. It is done under the direct supervision of Mr. Shewen, the engineer who has his headquarters in St. John. We would rather do it by contract if we could, because the present system takes up the time of our engineer and gives the department a great deal of trouble.

Mr. WILMOT. Do I understand that the minister is considering the advisability of closing up the western channel and extending the breakwater.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. That has been suggested.

Mr. WILMOT. What will be the total cost of that work ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Nearly $500,000.

Mr. WILMOT. I know that a great many people in St. John are in favour of that being done.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. And a great many objections are taken to it also.

St. John harbour—repairs and extension of protection work at base of Fort Dufferin, $3,500.

Mr. WILMOT. Last year the Minister of Public Works told us that a large dredge would this year be in operation in the harbour of St. John. There is now a great deal of difficulty experienced at the entrance of the harbour near the Beacon. Several delegations have awaited on the government urging the necessity of this work. What has become of the dredge that was promised ? Will it be at work this spring ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. My hon. friend (Hon. Mr. Tarte) was in good faith when he expected this dredge to be ready, but I cannot give any promise at the present time much as I regret it, seeing that there is such pressing work to be done. The dredge will not certainly be ready this season but we will take steps to have it completed as soon as possible.

Mr. WILMOT. Now that St. John harbour is becoming one of the great winter ports of the Dominion, it is urgent that that work should be done as soon as possible. Has the minister's attention been directed to dredging Grimross Canal, St. John river? This is an important work, and would not entail any great cost. I would strongly urge this work being carried out.

Shippegan harbour—repairs to protection work, &c., $1,100.

Mr. CLANCY. Was the money voted for this last year expended ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This vote is to make provision in connection with a wharf 990 feet long reaching a depth of 31 feet 4 inches at low water. It is being built under contract. The amount of the contract is $12,000 and the total estimated cost $14,350. This will complete the work.

Mr. CLANCY. Is there a large amount of shipping at this place ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. It is a very important fishing centre in Gloucester county, New Brunswick.

Mr. CLANCY. Do anything but small boats go there ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Boats of 14 and 15 tons.

Mr. CLANCY. I understood the minister to say that the depth of water was 14 feet.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. The depth of water there is not necessary for the shipping, but the work being done in deep water it makes it more expensive.

Mr. CLANCY. Why has the hon. gentleman provided for a class of ships that do not go there ?

Mr. TURGEON. At this very wharf large ships have been coming since last fall, as well as a number of fishing boats. There are from $5,000 or $6,000 paid in bounties to fishermen in that locality, and there are large business firms curing and bringing fish and bringing ships from the ocean to carry out the products of the fishermen. Last fall, during the month of October, three large ships came there to load fish to take away to the European markets. These ships generally come late in the season.

Mr. CLANCY. Perhaps the hon. gentleman's observation throws some light on the subject. One of the reasons he gives is rather novel, that is, that a large sum is paid out in fishing bounties. I was not aware before that it was necessary to build wharfs to pay out these fishing bounties. I thought that as soon as the bounties were earned, there would be no difficulty in finding the earners of them.

Mr. TURGEON. The large amount of the fishing bounties paid in the locality is an evidence of the large extent of the fishing industry there.

Mr. INGRAM. How far is Shippegan harbour from Shippegan wharf ?

Mr. TURGEON. About five miles. Shippegan harbour, or Shippegan gully connects the Gulf of St. Lawrence with the Baie des Chaleurs. A few years ago Shippegan harbour, by the special works which have been carried on, was dredged to a sufficient depth to enable the Caraquet fleet, consisting of some 200 or 300 vessels, going to the fishing banks, to pass that way, instead of going around Mascou Island, and thus to save some fifty miles. This is a great saving of time and hardship to our fishermen in carrying on their most patriotic industry, and the amount of money spent is nothing compared with the advantage it confers. I think this parliament never votes any money of greater public advantage than the money voted for the improvement of our coasts in the maritime provinces.

Mr. INGRAM. Did I understand the minister to say that the contract for this work is $13,000 ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. The contract price is $12,000. The total cost of the work is estimated to be $14,350, the sum over the contract being for superintendence and contingencies.

Upper Salmon river—Alma pier, $4,000 .

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This work is under contract. The total cost is $5,750. We only expect to pay out during the present fiscal year $1,750, so we are asking a revote of $4,000. The contract was let on the 6th August, 1902.

Harbours and rivers. Maritime provinces generally—generally repairs and improvements, $20,000.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I find that the usual vote of $15,000 for the maritime provinces is too small as it has obliged men to go without pay and accounts to be carried over to the next year. I think it is better to ask for the amount really required, and for that reason I ask that the vote be increased by $5,000.

Mr. CLANCY. What class of work is intended to be done ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This is for emergency repairs on the report of the engineers, caused principally by damage from storms—unforeseen accidents of one kind and another, which my hon. friend will know are very general in those waters.

Harbours and rivers, Ontario—Amherstburg—dredging, $5,000.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This is a revote, for the same reason that exists in some other cases, that we had no available dredge.

Mr. INGRAM. Where is this dredging done ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. It has not been done because we had no dredge to do the work. This year we hope to have a dredge.

Mr. INGRAM. Where in the Detroit river do you propose to do the work ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. From the main channel into the wharf at Amherstburg.

Hon. Mr. TARTE. And it is a work of great importance.

Mr. CLANCY. I understand the hon. gentleman to say that this is a revote, because the department has not been able to get a dredge to do the work. But there is a very good dredge which could be had and which did work last year and the year before for the Department of Public Works. The Chatham Dredging Company have a dredge which did good work at the mouth of the Thames and also at Rondeau harbour, and I think there is little doubt that it can perform the work satisfactorily. And the company are prepared to do it cheaper than the department can have it done for by its own dredges.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I am pleased to have that information. We will have the matter inquired into and ascertain whether the dredge which the hon. gentleman refers to is capable of doing the work.

Mr. CLANCY. This same dredging company did work very satisfactorily at Rondeau and at the mouth of the Thames. I appeal to the ex-Minister of Public Works whether that was not the case.

Hon. Mr. TARTE. No doubt the dredge referred to did good work, but I am not quite sure that it would be capable of doing the work at Amherstburg. I think that the bottom there is very hard. The American government are carrying out large dredging work in the river just opposite Amherstburg. I may say that Amherstburg has lost a very important coal trade because the depth of the water is not sufficient, and I would urge upon my hon. friend the Minister of Public Works the great importance of having this dredging done. There are American dredges available, but when the government employ American dredges reproaches are levelled against it. I think, however, that when a work is urgent we would be justified in employing foreign dredges and admitting them in bond. Of course the work to be carried out at Amherstburg would cost a larger amount of money than the $5,000 in the estimates. I would ask my hon. friend the Minister of Public Works to give his special attention to this Amherstburg work. I have visited the place and know the facts well.

Mr. CLANCY. I would like the Minister of Public Works, in view of what the ex-Minister of Public Works (Hon. Mr. Tarte) has said, whether he has a report of the engineer as to the character of the soil or the material to be removed.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Clay, hard-pan, boulders and rock. This work my hon. friend says will cost $25,000.

Hon. Mr. TARTE. I think that $14,000 or $15,000 would dredge the channel along the wharfs and be sufficient for the needs of the moment, but to complete the work and make it a good job, it would be necessary to spend $25,000 to $30,000.

Mr. INGRAM. Has anything been done to remove the boulders spoken of last year.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. No.

Barrie, Ont.—construction of wharf, $3,000.

Mr. LENNOX. This is an item which has been in the estimates for a number of years. I am not going at all to discuss the policy, but I wish to call the hon. minister's attention to this fact. The town of Barrie is not in the riding I represent, and I see that the hon. member for North Simcoe (Mr. McCarthy) is not present, but I have what appears to me good and sufficient reasons for calling not only the attention of the hon. Minister of Public Works, but incidentally the attention of the ex-Minister of Public Works to this item. About a year ago there was a good deal of correspondence between the mayor of the town of Barrie and the hon. member for North Simcoe on this question. I do not mean to say that many letters passed between them, but such letters as did pass and were published in the press were long and moderately warm, and the position was this. Each one was blaming the other for the delay that had occurred. I think I am entitled to rise to a question of privilege upon this matter, because I was dragged into it also. In my innocence of parliamentary procedure, having an office in the town of Barrie and having been a ratepayer in the north riding of Simcoe for many years, and having been asked frequently by a number of residents in the town, with reference to this wharf, I ventured to write to the then Minister of Public Works (Hon. Mr. Tarte) asking him to have it built in the near future. In that hot and fiery correspondence which passed between the mayor of Barrie and the hon. member for North Simcoe, I noticed that the hon. gentleman considered that I should not have taken the course I did of asking when we might expect this wharf to be built. But I consider it my duty to say now, in the absence of the hon. member for North Simcoe, to the Minister of Public Works that I think it is certainly time, if that work is to be done at all, that it should be carried through. A difficulty appears to have arisen as to the point at which the wharf should be constructed—whether at Bayfield street, or at the foot of Metcalfe street. Whether that be the only difficulty or not, I do not know, but it was also suggested that there is a difficulty about the title to the land. I know as a matter of fact that the council of the town of Barrie wrote the department saying they were ready to vest the title in the government if it was not already vested. And I can say, speaking from current report in the town of Barrie, that the almost universal feeling in the town is that the wharf should be constructed at the foot of Bayfield street. That is not the unanimous opinion. But the current of opinion is very strong in that direction. This is borne out by several resolutions that have been carried in the town council. I am not sure whether resolutions have been carried in the board of trade. Copies of the resolutions, I understand, have been sent to the department. So without at all receding from the position I have taken with regard to these local public works, I submit to the government, that, if this work is going to be carried out at all, it should not be left until another general election. I believe it figured in the last general election, and I do not know whether it figured in the one before that or not. But, if it is going to be carried out, it should be carried out now.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. The difficulty in carrying out this work, so far as I know, is that we are waiting for the municipality to transfer the property at the foot of Bayfield street to the Crown. When that is done, the wharf will be built without delay.

Mr. LENNOX. Does the hon. minister understand that that has not been done ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I am so informed.

Mr. LENNOX. I certainly understood from the mayor of Barrie and also from what I heard some months ago, that that transfer had been made. At all events, it is understood by the department is it not, that they are quite ready to make the transfer ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I understood that a resolution of the council had been passed. But I stated some time ago that the principle on which I wished to proceed is that we must have the title of the land before we start spending the money. We will start to-morrow if they will confer the title.

Bayfield—extension of southern pier, $5,000.

Mr. CLANCY. Why has not that work been done ? There is a revote here of $1,600. What condition is the work in, that it has not been gone on with ? This is not dredging, is it ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. No, the cribbing is completed, but the superstructure is not yet completed. The total contract is for $6,440. This vote is expected to complete the work.

Mr. CLANCY. Is there much business done at that wharf or is this one of the skeletons that we are keeping alive ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. No. The work is nearly completed.

Mr. CLANCY. But it will be pretty near dead before it is completed, will it not ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Which ?

Mr. CLANCY. The wharf and the business.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. My hon. friend (Mr. Clancy) committed himself to the vote one or two sessions ago. That was the time to criticise.

Mr. INGRAM. Has the department any idea of doing dredging there ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. It is not provided for in this vote.

Mr. INGRAM. There is no boat of any depth that could pass there—not even a fishing boat. This is another case of resurrecting works for which there is no real demand.

Mr. CLANCY. Has there been a report as to the work on this pier not being completed without dredging being done ? Has the hon. minister some comprehensive plan with regard to the harbour to justify the expenditure of this money ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. The work is under contract and is nearly completed. I did not go into the details myself personally, and the matter was in this state when I entered the department.

Mr. CLANCY. Has there not been a report as to the depth of the water ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. There ought to have been at the time it was asked for. The officers of the department inform me that they have a full report and surveys.

Mr. CLANCY. What would be the cost of dredging to make the pier more valuable ? There is no use in building the pier, unless there is water to enable the vessels to come in.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I cannot understand the object of building a wharf where there are no vessels. Of course, I have no personal knowledge of the matter. But I shall be pleased to bring down the report regarding it, made before the work was undertaken.

Mr. CLANCY. The opinion I have is that this money is being expended on a pier on which there is not water for even a small draught vessel to get in. And, even if the work is completed, no captain would think of bringing a vessel there. If that be true, surely the hon. minister is not warranted in asking this House to spend a single dollar until some solution of that difficulty has been found.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. The money has been spent. And I see by the report that the work is going on in sixteen feet of water. So, there appears to be some mistake in the hon. gentleman's (Mr. Clancy's) information. I speak on the information before me. Parliament voted this appropriation, and the work is under contract and almost completed.

Mr. INGRAM. That sixteen feet was when the original pier was being built.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. No, the present work. Of course, I will not undertake to say that there is sixteen feet of water there.

Mr. DEPUTY SPEAKER. I have left the Chair, Mr. Chairman (Mr. Campbell) to give information in this matter. I do not live in this riding, but in the next. But I know Bayfield as well as I know my own home. Some years ago there were very good wharfs there, but, unfortunately a storm carried most of them away. A few years ago, Mr. McMillan, who represented the riding, urged upon the government to build a wharf. This is quite a fishing centre of Lake Huron. Owing to the storms the opening was filled up with a sand bar; and this pier was commenced two or three years ago and partly constructed, and sunk to about fourteen feet of water. When this is completed the dredging of the sand bar which now prevents the fishing boats from coming in will make it possible for fishermen to reach the dock. I think it is a work very much in the interest of the fishermen. Sometimes a schooner comes in but hardly any large vessels come in there. This is quite a fishing centre, but, if the fishermen have no place to shelter their boats in a storm, it would be impossible to carry on that industry.

Mr. CLANCY. Then, according to the hon. gentleman's (Mr. Deputy Speaker's) statement, we have a pier intended for the fishermen, yet the fishermen cannot get at it until the bar is dredged. But there is no money for dredging purposes.

Mr. DEPUTY SPEAKER. I understood the minister to say that the dredging would take place as soon as the wharf was finished.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. No, I was not asked that. However, we have a general dredging appropriation, and now that the pier is there the dredging can be done.

Mr. INGRAM. If the hon. minister is going to build wharfs and do dredging for the fishermen of Bayfield, I can draw his attention to Port Bruce which is quite as important. We have just as many fishermen at Port Bruce as they have, and I question if we have not more, and the revenue is probably larger.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. It is always calm weather at Port Bruce.

Mr. CLANCY. We all know that a good many works of this kind were commenced under very different conditions from those which prevail now, at a time when there was a considerable shipping business at these points. We must recognize that many of those works have fallen into disuse, and I think no more money should be spent on them. I acknowledge that both parties have offended in that respect. But this is a notable case, and I appeal to the hon. gentleman whether we should enter upon a course of that kind in view of the increasing demands from all quarters of Canada for public works far more necessary. It is a question whether we should spend any more money in keeping up breakwaters and docks that were built many years ago, when the original need of constructing those works has entirely ceased to exist. Of course there will always be a pressure to keep them up, and there will always be these recurring accidents of the harbours filling up with sand, and small fishing vessels may still require to come into those harbours. But I submit that we have reached the period when we might consider on both sides of the House whether it is wise in the interest of the country, to continue to build works of that sort. I suppose the hon. gentleman will be prepared to tell the House what it will take to dredge out that pier and make it of some use. What sum will be required in addition to the sum already spent in the construction of this pier ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I will ask for a report in regard to the dredging of the river.

Mr. CLANCY. Had not the hon. gentleman better let this stand ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. What is the use of allowing it to stand ? When you make an appropriation and enter into a solemn contract with a man, and he has done the work, you must pay him for it.

Mr. CLANCY. It would be better to pay him incidental damages then to commit the country to finish that work and the additional work that will be necessary.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. The incidental damages would be a good deal more than the $16,000 that we are now asking to complete.

Mr. INGRAM. I understood last year that the object of spending this money was to extend the pier so as to accommodate the fishermen, and that the dredging would not be necessary.

Belle Rivière—repairs to sheet piling, $1,400.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). How far do you intend to go ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. Let us finish this vote for Ontario.

Mr. CLARKE. We will establish a bad rule if we sit later than eleven o'clock.

Mr. CLANCY. I think we have made very good progress. It would be unreasonable to expect these items to pass without some information in regard to them.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I desire to furnish all the information it is possible to get. The next vote is a vote which is under contract; the total amount is $9,310.75. This is simply a balance.

Mr. INGRAM. What is the necessity for Belle Rivière?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I think last session a full explanation was given of the necessity for this work. It is a very serviceable work. The contract has been let and the work is nearly completed.

Mr. CLANCY. We can scarcely be expected to carry in our minds just what was said last year. No doubt the hon. gentleman satisfied the House last year that the work was justifiable; but he is asking for an additional sum this year for this work. It may be entirely meritorious. But the hon. gentleman should be patient and give the information that he is asked for, instead of saying: Well, the vote was taken last year, and that should be an end to it.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I never said that. I did say that an appropriation was made by parliament, that a contract had been entered into, and the work was almost completed, and under those circumstances we were unable now as a parliament to go back on that work. There may be a difference of opinion as to the expediency of undertaking this work in the beginning, but after the work is done it must be paid for. Of course the Committee is entitled to all the information, and I am ready to supply all the information at hand.

Mr. INGRAM. We are not complaining of the courtesy of the hon. gentleman at all. But last session several of these items passed without any discussion or question, the Committee, so to speak, gulped a lot of these items down without any explanation, but I do not think that we ought to do so at this stage of the present session. We ought to get information about this Belle Rivière business, I think we are quite within our rights in asking for more information about it.

Mr. TAYLOR. Blind river.

Mr. INGRAM. Bell river.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS No, Blind river.

Mr. INGRAM. I must confess that I do not know whether there is very much necessity for doing this work or not.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS It is Blind river.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. We do not want to be responsible for leading hon gentlemen on the other side of the House astray by late hours, and therefore I move that the Committee rise, report progress and ask leave to sit again.

Some resolutions reported.

On motion of the Minister of Finance House adjourned at 11.10 p.m.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.

WEDNESDAY, April 8, 1903.

The SPEAKER took the Chair at Three o'clock.

REPORT PRESENTED.

Report of the Department of Public Printing and Stationery.—Rt. Hon. Sir Wilfrid Laurier.

BROCKVILLE AND NORTH-WEST RAILWAY COMPANY.

Mr. CALVERT, on behalf of the hon. member for Algoma (Mr. Dyment), I beg for leave to introduce Bill (No. 89) entitled an Act to incorporate the Brockville and North-west Railway Company.

Mr. TAYLOR. I beg leave to call to your attention, Mr. Speaker, that the petition for this Bill was only presented to-day.

Mr. SPEAKER. I think everything is all right. The Bill has been reported.

Mr. TAYLOR. The petition was just read now.

Mr. SPEAKER. I have a note from the Examiner of Private Bills that everything in connection with this is correct. I take it that the petition has been duly received.

Motion agreed to, and Bill read the first time.

FIRST READINGS.

Bill (No. 88) respecting the Mutual Fire Insurance Company of the city of Montreal and to change its name to the Montreal Fire Insurance Company.—Mr. LaRivière.

Bill (No. 90) respecting the Niagara Welland Power Company, Limited, and to change its name to the Niagara Welland Power Company.—Mr. Guthrie (by Mr. Calvert).

Bill (No. 91) to incorporate the Dominion Gas Improvement Company.—Mr. Belcourt, by Mr. Campbell.

Bill (No. 92) respecting the Dominion Burglary Guarantee Company, Limited, and to change its name to the Dominion Guarantee Company.—Mr. Bickerdike.

Bill (No. 93) to incorporate the Shipping Federation of Canada.—Mr. Bickerdike.

Bill (No. 94) respecting incorporated Companies.—Mr. Bickerdike.

CONCILIATION ACT AMENDMENT.

Mr. PUTTEE moved for leave to introduce Bill (No. 95) to amend the Conciliation Act, 1900.

Mr. INGRAM. Explain.

Mr. PUTTEE. The Bill is similar in all respects to the Bill introduced by myself last session, and explained then. It simply seeks to increase the utility of the Conciliation Act of 1900.

Motion agreed to, and Bill read the first time.

HOME RULE FOR IRELAND.

The PRIME MINISTER (Rt. Hon. Sir Wilfrid Laurier). A few days ago the House adopted a resolution which requires some further proceedings in order that it may be transmitted to the proper quarter. I therefore beg to move :

That the Address adopted by this House on Tuesday, the 31st ult., to His Most Gracious Majesty the King be engrossed.

Motion agreed to.

The PRIME MINISTER moved :

That an Address be presented to His Excellency the Governor General, praying that he will be pleased to transmit the Address adopted by this House on Tuesday, the 31st ult. to His Most Gracious Majesty the King, in relation to affairs in Ireland, in such manner as His Excellency may see fit, so that the same may be laid at the foot of the Throne.

Motion agreed to.

The PRIME MINISTER moved :

That the said Address be engrossed and be presented to His Excellency by such members of this House as are members of the Honourable the Privy Council.

Motion agreed to.

QUESTIONS.

FISHING RIGHTS IN JAMES BAY OR HUDSON BAY.

Mr. LANCASTER—by Mr. Taylor—asked:

1. Who are the parties to whom exclusive fishing rights in any portion of James Bay or Hudson Bay were recently granted ?
2. By whom was the application for such privilege made to the government or any department thereof.
3. What is the date of the first application ?
4. What is the date of the lease or privilege ?
5. What is the duration of such lease or privilege ?
6. What is the rental to be paid by the lessees.
7. Has the said lease been transferred. If so, to whom ?
8. When was the transfer of the lease consented to or sanctioned, and by what department ?

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES (Hon. J. Raymond Préfontaine) :

1. Archibald McNee.
2. Archibald McNee.
3. 22nd February, 1900.
4. 13th November, 1902.
5. Twenty-one years.
6. Ten dollars per annum.
7. No information.
8. 28th November, 1902. By the Department of Marine and Fisheries.

OROMOCTO SHOALS, N. B., LIGHT-KEEPER.

Mr. WILMOT asked :

1. Has Miles McMonagle been dismissed from the position of keeper of Beacon Light, Oromocto Shoals, N.B.? If so, when, and for what cause ? Is it known to the department that Inspector Kelly stated that McMonagle was the most efficient light-keeper on the river St. John ?

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES (Hon. J. Raymond Préfontaine). Mr. McMonagle was superseded by Mr. Robert Brennan, on the 25th March last, as he took an active part in the elections. The department is not aware of any report made by Inspector Kelly in regard to Mr. McMonagle being the most efficient light-keeper on the River St. John.

Mr. WILMOT asked :

Who recommended the dismissal of Miles McMonagle, light-keeper, Oromocto, N.B.?

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES (Hon. J. Raymond Préfontaine). In this department all such recommendations are made by the Minister of Marine and Fisheries, as usual.

AYR POSTMASTER.

Mr. CLARE—by Mr. Taylor—asked :

Did Michael Robson, formerly postmaster of the village of Ayr, resign, or was he dismissed? If dismissed, why ?

The POSTMASTER GENERAL (Hon. Sir Wm. Mulock). Mr. Michael Robson resigned the postmastership of Ayr.

THE TREADGOLD CONCESSION.

Mr. BELL—by Mr. Taylor—asked :

1. Has any member of the government received the following telegram ?

Oppose any attempt to pass Order in Council or Act of parliament that will in any way confirm Treadgold concession. Are having monster petition signed and reliable data prepared to forward Ottawa asking government to aid in furnishing water for mining purposes. People are a unit in making demand, and will insist upon government protection from monopoly of Treadgold octopus.

THE DAWSON BOARD OF TRADE.
H. C. Macaulay, President.

2. Is the government aware that a petition, a copy of which is hereinafter given, is being forwarded ?

PETITION.

To the honourable the House of Commons in parliament assembled;

The petition of the undersigned residents of the Yukon Territory humbly showeth :

1. That by Order in Council of April the 21st, 1902, certain privileges are granted to Malcolm Orr Ewing, A. N. C. Treadgold and Walter Barwick, in connection with the proposed establishment by them of a system of water supply for washing out gold-bearing gravel in the district therein described, including the Klondike river, Bonanza, Bear and Hunker Creeks and their tributaries.

2. That the benefits conferred upon the grantees are of incalculable value and involve an enormous exploitation of the public resources of this territory for the benefit of a few favoured concessionnaires.

3. That in the opinion of your petitioners, the accumulation of extraordinary powers in the hands of a single corporation, such as is effected by the above Order in Council, will lead to the paralysis of the independent commercial and industrial life of the community, and will prove in the highest degree oppressive and injurious to the public welfare, since the grantees are thereby enabled to crush out competition and to reduce to a position of practical servitude the individual miners in the extensive district affected, which includes the richest portion of the Klondike.

4. That the need of this territory is not the creation of monopolies, but their prevention, and the encouragement of the individual miners by securing equal privileges and opportunities to all as far as the law and the administration can provide them.

5. That for the promotion and development of the mining industry of the Yukon a cheap, abundant and effective water supply, furnished at a minimum of cost by the government at the earliest possible moment, is absolutely essential.

Your petitioners therefore pray :

(1.) That the Order in Council of April 21st, 1902, may be cancelled completely, and that no special privileges shall hereafter be granted within this territory with respect to wood, mining, water or any other class of rights affecting the general public ; but that all persons shall be restricted in such matters to the rights conferred upon every member of the community by the mining regulations.

(2) That the supply and distribution of water for general mining purposes within this territory shall not be controlled by any private person or corporation, but either that it shall be undertaken by the Dominion government as a public work, or that power shall be given to the commissioner of the Yukon territory in Council to construct such a system and to raise the necessary funds by bonds guaranteed by the Dominion.

And your petitioners will ever pray.

The PRIME MINISTER (Rt. Hon. Sir Wilfrid Laurier) :

1. Several members of the government have received this telegram, amongst others the Prime Minister, who answered that there would be no attempt to pass an Order in Council or Act of parliament in the manner suggested in the telegram.

2. The government has been informed that such a petition, or one similar to it, is to be addressed to the government. I may say, in addition, that this matter has been brought to the attention of the government by the hon. member for the Yukon (Mr. Ross) ; but all consideration has been suspended until this petition has been received.

NESBITT, MANITOBA, POSTMASTER.

Mr. ROCHE (Marquette) asked :

1. Is the government aware that Mr. John Watson, postmaster at Nesbitt, Manitoba, is the president of the South Lambton Liberal Association ; and the Liberal candidate for that constituency in the ensuing elections in that province ?

2. Will his services be continued by this government while he is engaged in party politics?

The POSTMASTER GENERAL (Hon. Sir Wm. Mulock). The department has no information whatever as to whether Mr. John Watson is the President of the South Brandon Liberal Association or the Liberal candidate for that constituency in the ensuing elections in that province.

LAND SUBSIDIES TO RAILWAYS.

Mr. DAVIS asked :

1. What is the total amount of the lands granted in Manitoba and the North-west Territories to railway companies by way of subsidies to date ?

2. Were any lands granted by way of subsidies to railway companies since 1896 ?

The MINISTER OF RAILWAYS AND CANALS (Hon. A. G. Blair) :

1. Total area authorized by parliament to be granted by way of railway subsidies, 56,087,072 acres.

Total area earned on account of construction to date, 29,986,826 acres.

2. No.

MONEY SUBSIDIES TO RAILWAYS.

Mr. DAVIS asked :

What is the total cost (capital account) of the Intercolonial and other government railways ? What is the total amount of money paid by the federal government as subsidies to railways in each of the following provinces :— Prince Edward Island, New Brunswick, Nova Scotia, Quebec, Ontario, Manitoba, North-west Territories, and British Columbia, since confederation ?

The MINISTER OF RAILWAYS AND CANALS (Hon. A. G. Blair) :

The total cost (capital account) of the Intercolonial and other government railways to February 28th, 1903, is as follows : Intercolonial Railway, $69,418,275.54; Prince Edward Island Railway, $5,112,435.27.

The total amount of money paid by the federal government as subsidies to railways in each of the following provinces since confederation to the 28th of February, 1903, is as follows :

Prince Edward Island.... ..	Nil.
Nova Scotia....	$ 1,872,503 83
New Brunswick....	1,292,783 57
Quebec..	10,091,552 63
Ontario..	18,750,228 48
Manitoba..	3,259,150 00
North-west Territories.. ..	7,457,500 00
British Columbia..	9,682,251 00

CAPITAL EXPENDITURE ON PUBLIC WORKS.

Mr. DAVIS asked :

What is the total amount of money spent by the federal government (capital account) on public works of all descriptions, not including canals, from the year 1892 to 1902, respectively, in the provinces of Ontario, Quebec, Nova Scotia, New Brunswick, Prince Edward Island, Manitoba, North-west Territories and British Columbia ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS (Hon. James Sutherland). I would ask the hon. member to move for a return.

MR. S. JONASSON.

Mr. ROCHE (Marquette) asked :

1. Is Mr. S. Jonasson an employee of the Department of the Interior, in the province of Manitoba, as forest ranger, or homestead inspector ?

2. If so, is the government aware that he is the Liberal candidate for the constituency of Gimli, in the ensuing provincial elections ?

3. Will his services be continued by this government while he is engaged in party politics?

The POSTMASTER GENERAL (Hon. Sir William Mulock):

1. Yes.

2. The government has no information that Mr. Jonasson is a candidate for Gimli.

3. If he is a candidate, he will not be continued as a salaried official of the department.

BANANAS IMPORTED.

Mr. ROBINSON (Elgin) asked :

What quantity of bananas were imported into the Dominion during the year 1902 ? What was the value of the bananas imported during the year 1902 ?

The MINISTER OF CUSTOMS (Hon. William Paterson) : 765,767 bunches of bananas, valued at $738,168, were imported into Canada during the fiscal year ended 30th June, 1902.

RAILWAY SUBSIDIES.

Mr. SCOTT asked :

1. What is the total sum of money which has been paid as subsidies to aid construction of railways in Canada, between Lake Superior and the eastern boundary of British Columbia ?

2. Was such sum wholly paid on capital account ; and if so, what is the annual interest charge paid by the Dominion on the amount ?

3. What is the total sum paid by the Dominion, since confederation, to aid railway construction, including the Canadian Pacific Railway ?

4. What is the interest charge annually ?

The MINISTR OF RAILWAYS AND CANALS (Hon. A. G. Blair):

1. The total sum of money paid as subsidies to aid construction of railways in Canada between Lake Superior and the eastern boundary of British Columbia is,— $12,465,341.

2. Railway subsidies are charged in the public accounts as a special item. It is not designated as a capital account but practically it amounts to such, inasmuch as it is not charged against the ordinary income of the year.

3. The total sum paid by the Dominion since confederation to aid railway construction, including the Canadian Pacific Railway, is $152,922,163.25.

4. There is no special rate of interest applying to railway subsidies. They are paid out of the general treasury. Moneys are not specifically borrowed for railway subsidies. Loans have been issued from time to time, part of which have gone into railway subsidies. The rates of interest have varied.

B.C. FISHERIES REPORT.

Mr. EARLE. Before the Orders of the Day are called, I would like to ask the hon. Minister of Marine and Fisheries when we may expect the report of the commission appointed to investigate into the fisheries on the British Columbia coast.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. In a few days.

CATTLE-GUARDS.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). Will the hon. Minister of Railways and Canals inform us when the report of the commission respecting cattle-guards may be expected ?

The MINISTER OF RAILWAYS AND CANALS. The tests are going on from day to day as rapidly as possible, but I do not think any report can be made for ten or twelve days. There were sixty-one devices to be tested on Thursday and one or two more have come in since.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). I was under the impression that the commission had been disbanded and that some members had retired from it, and that was why I thought a report might be expected.

The MINISTER OF RAILWAYS AND CANALS. The commissioners have travelled over the principle railways in the United States and Canada and have examined the cattle-guards in use. After their return to Ottawa, the commission disbanded, and Mr. Holt was to carry on the tests. At that time there were only a few guards to be tested, but a number of others have been brought forward and the tests have been continued from day to day.

TRANSPORTATION COMMITTEE.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). The announcement is made in the press of the appointment of a commission on the transportation question, mentioned in the speech from the Throne. Has the right hon. gentleman any announcement to make ?

The PRIME MINISTER. Not to-day. The commissioners have not yet been appointed.

RAILWAY SUBSIDIES.

Mr. J. CHARLTON (North Norfolk) moved the third reading of Bill (No. 2) to amend chapter 8 of the statutes of 1900 authorizing the granting of railway subsidies.

Hon. Mr. HAGGART. The third reading was postponed the other day. Is this Bill intended to apply to any particular road ?

Mr. CHARLTON. It will apply to any road which happens to have a total subsidy of less than $60,000. The object is to place roads of that category on the same level as larger concerns. A road with less than a subsidy of $60,000 might be almost completed, and might be better deserving of the payment of a subsidy than the larger concern; but it is barred by the statute as it exists. It is for the purpose of correcting this discrimination, if we may term it so, against the smaller road that this is introduced.

Hon. Mr. HAGGART. I thought it had some application at the present moment, as the Minister of Railways and Canals said he was seriously contemplating bringing in a Bill to abolish that clause from the Railway Act.

Mr. CHARLTON. This Bill would not be before the House if the provision of the law had been abolished.

Motion agreed to ; Bill read the third time, and passed.

ELECTORAL CORRUPTION.

House went into committee on Bill (No. 3) to amend the Dominion Elections Act, 1900.—Mr. Charlton.

On section 1.

Mr. CHARLTON. Mr. Chairman, we considered the subsections of this section as far as 'L' when the House was in committee on this Bill before. I would suggest that you read from subsection 'L.'

Mr. INGRAM. Oh, no.

Mr. CHARLTON. However, it is immaterial to me—read all the subsections.

The PRIME MINISTER (Rt. Hon. Sir Wilfrid Laurier). My hon. friend the Minister of Finance (Hon. Mr. Fielding) made a suggestion the other day which seemed to be received with very general acceptance that a committee should be appointed representing both sides of the House to consider the whole of the election law. The government intend to proceed upon this suggestion after the Easter recess. Perhaps the hon. member for North Norfolk (Mr. Charlton) would allow this matter to stand until the committee is struck, when the whole matter can be considered.

Mr. CHARLTON. I shall be most happy to accede to the request of the Prime Minister (Rt. Hon. Sir Wilfrid Laurier). This disposition of the matter will exactly suit my views. I had thought, however, of saying a few words on the portion of the Bill which was not discussed when we were in committee before, and, with the permission of the committee, I will deal very briefly with the portion after subsection 'L.' The Minister of Justice (Hon. Mr. Fitzpatrick) raised the objection to some portions of the Bill previously discussed that it was merely a repetition, in point of fact, of provisions already contained in the election law. I shall not refer to that now, as we are not to take final action on the Bill at the present time. Subsection 'L' is designed to deal with the question of political assessments, an evil which has not attained any great magnitude in Canada, but has become a very great evil in the United States, a method which was most effectual in securing election funds, but which inflicted great hardship upon civil service employees. This subsection puts this offence in the same category as the others, and makes the offender subject to fine and imprisonment. At the conclusion of subsection 1, after subsection 'L,' provisions are made with regard to punishment and the provisions of the law in that respect are changed. All of these offences--and subsection 112 is embodied in this list of offences—are made punishable by a maximum term of two years' imprisonment, and a fine of $500. The penalty is within the discretion of the trial judge. Of course there will be varying degrees of turpitude and variations of guilt in connection with these matters ; and, it must be, I imagine, left to the discretion of the judge. It is the intention of the law that the fine shall be, either entirely or in part payable to the informer ; and reliance is placed upon this feature of the Bill to secure information and put an end to this nefarious system of corruption by purchase of votes. I think that, perhaps the most important feature of the Bill, the feature that we may most rely upon to end these practices, is section 108a. This is copied, I may say, from the penal code of the state of New York. In that state, many years ago, the evil of bribery of electors was a very great one, and good men there at that time, as good men now in Canada, felt that it was an evil that must in some way be coped with and stamped out. It was found very difficult to reach it. Finally, this provision was adopted, making it the right of any person to inform, and placing before that person the inducement to inform of sharing the fine. When the information is laid, any person can be subpœnaed, and testimony given by the informer, or by any witness, exonerates the person giving it from all legal proceedings. He can plead the evidence given in this regard as a bar to indictment or proceedings at any time in the future. The operation of this section is to place every man who is handling election funds and buying voters, at the mercy of the scalawags and electoral prostitutes with whom he deals ; and the business is so perilous that no man of common sense will engage in it. It has put an end, in the state of New York to this practice. In contrast with this condition of things in the state of New York is the condition existing in some of the smaller states, where no law of this nature exists. I noticed the other day an article in one of the American magazines upon political corruption in the state of Rhode Island. There are no laws there for the suppression of bribery, and bribery has become so general that it is deemed by a very large proportion, probably more than half the voters in the state, a legitimate and welcome source of revenue. And public opinion is so strong in favour of the practice that it would be worth a minister's position as pastor to denounce it from the pulpit. On one occasion in the last election in the state of Rhode Island, at a place called North Smithfield, the 'floaters'—the floating vote—were manipulating and balancing for the highest bids from the managers of the two parties ; and, finally to settle the question, the whole batch was put up at auction at a place near the steps of the city hall and bid off at $25 a head. The price received by the voters in Rhode Island, I think, has been exceeded by some in Canada at some of the late elections. We have not arrived at the stage where a public auction of votes is held, but we have private competition which is as effective. The tendency of things in this country is rapidly approaching that position when public virtue, the sense of the sanctity of the ballot and the deep obligation resting upon the citizens in the exercise of the franchise will be dissipated and gone. We require some legislation in this country, some method by which an end may be put to this practice ; and I rely upon this section 108a to accomplish this work perfectly. In addition to this, we must have better provisions for enforcing the law. It ought not want to be as expensive as it is now. The probability is that the committee that is to be struck may decide upon some official to act as public prosecutor in the ridings, whose business it will be to look after violations of the electoral law and acts of electoral corruption, in which case the law will be in such a shape that justice can be speedily administered, and we will get rid of the mockery of saw-offs and all these arrangements which make a mockery of the law with regard to electoral corruption. I shall not detain the House further in a discussion of this question than to again express my belief that the section incorporated here from the penal code of the state of New York, looking at the effect it has had there, will be surely effectual in putting an end to this practice.

Hon. Mr. HAGGART. Do I understand the hon. gentleman to say that he has adopted some penal clause of the election Act of New York

Mr. CHARLTON. Yes, I will read it to the hon. gentleman. It is copied from the Penal Code of New York.

A person offending against any provision of the next preceding section of this Act——

That is, a provision against the purchase or sale of votes.

—is a competent witness against another person so offending, and may be compelled to attend and testify on any trial, hearing, proceeding, or investigation in the same manner as any other person. The testimony so given shall not be used in any prosecution or proceeding, civil, or criminal against the person testifying. A person testifying shall not therefore be liable to indictment, prosecution or punishment for the offence with reference to which his testimony was given, and may plead or prove the giving of testimony accordingly in bar of such indictment or prosecution.

Now, they have had several years experience of this law in the state of New York, and the result of it in practice is that that class of persons who handle the funds to purchase voters lay themselves absolutely at the mercy of that conscienceless class of men with whom they deal. There is no statute of limitation to one year or three years, it is an offence that never outlaws.

Mr. FRASER. Does not the hon. gentlemen think that there ought to be a correlative punishment, and that the man who took the bribe should be punished as well as the man who gives it ?

Mr. CHARLTON. The man who takes the bribe is equally liable to punishment, unless he happens to be in the category of persons turning state's evidence.

Mr. FRASER. I thought he said the man who took a bribe might go and lay the information and go scott free.

Mr. CHARLTON. Any person that has taken a bribe or given a bribe is liable to punishment.

Hon. Mr. HAGGART. I understood that in the Weldon Act, which was embodied in our Election Act, the party who took the bribe was liable to a punishment as severe as the man who gave it. I do not understand that he could go into court after the lapse of time and make a prosecution.

Mr. CHARLTON. The section as it stands leaves the matter open for any person who has offended in any particular against the law, either by paying bribes or receiving bribes, any person who has violated the law, to enter a prosecution and give evidence. However, those are matters of detail to be looked into after we come to the consideration of the Bill. I do not know what the intention of the government is, whether it will strike a committee now or to do so after the Easter recess. But I desire to express my concurrence with the views expressed by the Prime Minister and by the Minister of Finance as to the method the government deems proper to adopt in dealing with this question.

Progress reported.

MOTION AGREED TO WITHOUT DISCUSSION.

Statement showing the amount expended each year since the 30th June, 1890, on public works of all kinds in Toronto, including Toronto harbour ; showing the nature of each class of work in respect of which such expenditure has been made.—Mr. Grant.

ADJOURNMENT—BUSINESS OF THE HOUSE.

The PRIME MINISTER (Rt. Hon. Sir Wilfrid Laurier). I move that the House do now adjourn. If it is convenient for my hon. friend the leader of the opposition, I intend, when the House resumes next Tuesday, to take up the Redistribution Bill.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). I think that will be quite convenient.

Motion agreed to, and House adjourned at 3.55 p.m.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.

TUESDAY, April 14, 1903.

The SPEAKER took the Chair at Three o'clock.

FIRST READINGS.

Bill (No. 96) respecting the Kettle River Valley Railway Company.—Mr. Thompson (Haldimand and Monck).

Bill (No. 97) respecting the Manitoulin and North Shore Railway.—Mr. Dyment.

Bill (No. 98) respecting the Bruce Mines and Algoma Railway Company.—Mr. Dyment.

MESSAGE FROM THE GOVERNOR GENERAL.

The PRIME MINISTER (Rt. Hon. Sir Wilfrid Laurier) delivered a message from His Excellency the Governor General.

Mr. SPEAKER read the message as follows :

Gentlemen of the House of Commons—

I thank you for the Address which you have adopted in reply to the Speech with which I opened the session of parliament.

Government House,
Ottawa, 11th April, 1903.

THE LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR OF ONTARIO.

Mr. W. F. MACLEAN (East York). Before the Orders of the Day are called, Mr. Speaker, I wish to bring before the House a matter of public importance, and in order to put myself in order I shall conclude with a motion. The matter to which I wish to draw the attention of the House, and especially of the right hon. gentleman, the Prime Minister, is the serious condition of his honour the Lieutenant Governor of Ontario. I have already brought this matter before this House, and my motives have been impugned. Hon. gentlemen opposite, by their derisive cheers, certainly impugn my motives now. It may be that I am wrong. It may be that I am doing something improper, or that I am lacking in good taste. But on this I take issue with hon. gentlemen opposite. I am here in the public interest and to speak for the people of my own province. A great political crisis is existing in Ontario to-day. The lieutenant governor of that province is unable to discharge the duties of his office. That statement I made some weeks ago. What I said then was true, and according to the news of yesterday, I can make that statement with still greater force to-day. I have not the slightest intention of reflecting on the venerable old man who occupies the position of Lieutenant Governor of Ontario. He is venerated in this country from one end of it to the other. But we have a constitution, and under it there is a constitutional duty which should, in the circumstances, be performed. I am one of those who believe that in our system of government, the representative of the Crown is no figure-head. The ministers of the Crown are responsible to him as the representative of the Crown. Their political conduct is subject to his revision. In view of the situation existing to-day in the province of Ontario, I believe that we ought to have a lieutenant governor in office there competent to discharge his duties. I say this purely from the constitutional point of view, and I ask the right hon. gentleman, the Prime Minister, what the government intend doing, in view of the situation existing in Toronto, with regard to the office of lieutenant governor. In one of the evening newspapers published in Toronto, I find this statement last evening:

> It is very probable that the patent to Chief Justice Moss to act as administrator, with power to give assent to Bills, will be immediately amended to give him power to perform the other duties of the officer, sign lieutenant governor's warrants, &c. Sir Oliver had all official documents signed up to Saturday last, but there are some now waiting for signature, and delay will prove a considerable inconvenience to the government.

I believe that this describes the actual situation. The lieutenant governor is unable to discharge his duties and a serious political crisis exists. The constitutional duty, therefore, devolves on hon. gentlemen opposite of living up to the constitution and seeing that it is properly administered. And, out of respect—and purely out of respect—for the constitution and of the duties of the government, as I view them, I ask the Prime Minister to take the House into his confidence, and especially to take the province of Ontario into his confidence, and tell us what he intends to do in the matter. Of course hon. gentlemen opposite have taken the position—at least some of them have—that the lieutenant governor is simply a rubber stamp. If that is the case, he being their representative, they assume his duties. They are entitled to do so, but if they do so, it is their duty to see to it that there is a lieutenant governor fully able and competent to discharge the duties of the office.

In conclusion, I have only this to say—in no way do I desire to reflect on the venerable old man who is now Lieutenant Governor of Ontario; but simply out of regard for the public interest do I raise this question. If hon. gentlemen opposite continue to make charges that I am doing this from political considerations or that my words are in bad taste, I can only tell them that a countercharge is liable to be made, that countercharge being to the effect that men in office whose conduct is called in question before the country are sheltering themselves behind the infirmities of the venerable old man in a high position. I do not wish to make that charge; and I do not think it will be made in the country if the government discharges its political responsibilities in this matter. I move that this House do now adjourn.

The PRIME MINISTER (Rt. Hon. Sir Wilfrid Laurier). I have nothing to add to what I said a few days ago to my hon. friend (Mr. Maclean) upon a statement similar to that which he has made to-day, which he then thought it his duty to bring to the attention of the House. At that time I told my hon. friend that if he had given me notice of his intention to bring this matter forward, I would have been able to produce a letter from Sir Oliver Mowat wherein he informs me that he is quite able and competent to discharge the duties of his office. My hon. friend has given Sir Oliver Mowat a character which we are all happy to find in my hon. friend's mouth, for it is in the mouth of everybody else. As he has voluntarily paid this tribute to Sir Oliver Mowat, I think he will, from henceforth, be satisfied to leave this matter alone until such time as we have information from Sir Oliver Mowat himself that he does not feel equal to the discharge of the duties with which he is intrusted. Sir Oliver Mowat yesterday met with a painful accident, but that is no reason for bringing this matter to the attention of the House to-day. When Sir Oliver Mowat who, as my hon. friend himself admits, is a man of exceeding candour, respectable in every possible way, informs the government that he no longer feels equal to the discharge of the duties of his office, the government will feel called upon to appoint his successor, and not until then.

Mr. T. S. SPROULE (East Grey). I respectfully submit that the answer given by the Prime Minister (Rt. Hon. Sir Wilfrid Laurier) will hardly be satisfactory to the country. If we are to believe the information contained in the newspapers yesterday concerning the lieutenant governor, the venerable old gentleman, who has reached the ripe old age of eighty-three years, accidently, in getting into bed or falling out of bed, we are not informed which, fractured his thigh bone. Now, if this accident happened in so simple a way and without some more especial reason than appears in the information given to the public, I can only conclude that the infirmities of age have crept upon him to a great degree and that he is very feeble. If he is physically so feeble, he must be mentally feeble as well. The hon. premier tells us: When I am informed by the lieutenant governor himself that he is unable to discharge the duties of his office I shall be prepared to act. But if the infirmities of age have so affected the lieutenant governor that he is not in possession of his mental faculties as well as of his physical powers, he is incapable of giving that information. To a medical man the premier's position is most unreasonable. If the information is correct that we get from other sources—and I am rather inclined to believe it is—that it is largely because of the infirmities of age that the lieutenant governor is physically and mentally in that condition, he cannot be expected to perform his important duties satisfactorily as a representative of the Crown. To say that the premier will act only when he is instructed by the lieutenant governor himself that he is no longer able to discharge the duties of his office is to give the country an assurance with which it will not be satisfied. If he had said that he would act when he received such information from the responsible ministers of the Crown acting under the lieutenant governor, or from some other source of that kind, his answer would be much more satisfactory. But I repeat what—as a medical man I said the other day—that a man is not always the best judge of his own infirmities when he reaches the period of life attained by the lieutenant governor.

Motion (Mr. Maclean) negatived.

REPRESENTATION IN THE HOUSE OF COMMONS.

The PRIME MINISTER (Rt. Hon. Sir Wilfrid Laurier) moved the second reading of Bill (No. 66) to readjust the representation in the House of Commons.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN (Halifax). I think it well, before this motion carries, to call to the attention of my right hon. friend (Rt. Hon. Sir Wilfrid Laurier) one or two points respecting the character of this Bill concerning which, it seems to me, there is some misapprehension in the country, and, possibly, in the mind of my right hon. friend. The exact meaning of the Bill may not be quite understood.

We were told by the Prime Minister on the first reading of the Bill, that this proposal is the same as that which was made in Great Britain in 1884. I wish to point out to the House that what was proposed in Great Britain in 1884, was something entirely different. In saying so I do not put it by way of criticism on the present action of the government nor do I say now that what the government has proposed is lacking in fairness. I simply want to have in the mind of the House and of the country a clear idea of what the position of the government is at the present time. In 1884, in the British House, there was a conference between the political parties before the Bill was introduced at all. The conference was not a formal one; the members were not appointed by the House and had no duty of reporting to the House. Their work was altogether of an informal character. It was, in fact, a conference between the two political parties. Mr. Mills, now Mr. Justice Mills, who was in this House in 1892 made that very clear in his remarks. He said, referring to the British measure:

> The measure was submitted to parliament after the leaders of the two parties had agreed upon it. . . . The English government entered into a conference with their political opponents on the character of a measure which they were to submit to parliament, and to assume the responsibility for, and that was done prior to the submission of the Bill to parliament for discussion.

In the Annual Register which was referred to at that time there is a history of the introduction of the English measure which makes this abundantly clear. This history can be found at pages 252 and 253 of the Annual Register of 1884—at page 252 we find:

> During the next fortnight——

—that is while the conference was going on—> —the process of arrangement was steadily pursued. Lord Salisbury and Sir S. Northcote attended the meetings of the cabinet, and conducted the negotiations with the specially selected delegates of that body. Naturally there were rumours of misunderstandings more or less serious, but as time wore on, it was clear, from the public utterances of those in a position to know the real facts, that the basis of the compromise was never in jeopardy, and that the ultimate decision on all questions of detail would have to be left to parliament.

And then, at page 253 it is said:

> At length after a week's adjournment, both Houses reassembled, and Mr. Gladstone, in a very brief speech altogether without rhetorical display and sympathetic enthusiasm, presented to the House of Commons the results of the negotiations, and moved for leave to bring in a Bill dealing with the most crucial party rights and susceptibilities which had been settled outside the arena of parliamentary conflict.

There is another fact which I would like to point out to my right hon. friend, and it is this—the conference of 1884 in Great Britain simply settled the principles to be applied in the work of redistribution, and left those principles to be carried out in the delimitation of the constituencies by a boundary commission. A boundary commission was appointed, composed of eminent men, including among its members several officers of the Royal Engineers whose technical knowledge was supposed to be valuable in such work. It is true that the Bill provided that in Yorkshire, Glasgow, Birmingham and other large boroughs, a certain number of members should be allowed, just as our constitution allows a certain proportion of members for Ontario, Nova Scotia and the other provinces. But, except for this, the entire work of the delimitation of the constitutencies was left to the commission. Moreover, the present proposition does not seem in line with the position taken by my right hon. friend (Rt. Hon. Sir Wilfrid Laurier) in 1882. His motion on that occasion, to which he has drawn attention is as follows :

That Bill (No. 76) an Act to readjust the representation in the House of Commons be referred to a conference or committee to be composed of both political parties, to agree upon the lines or principles on which a Redistribution Bill should be drawn.

My right hon. friend was more in line with the English precedent at that time than he is at the present time, because his proposal then was that a committee should be appointed composed of both political parties to agree upon the lines or principles upon which a redistribution Bill should be drawn. I may say that that motion as interpreted by a prominent member of his own party, now Mr. Justice Davies, of the Supreme Court, was understood to be a motion that the committee should merely settle the lines or principles, and should leave it to the House to settle the boundaries of the constituencies themselves ; because Mr. Davies, in speaking on the second reading of the Bill, and speaking after my right hon. friend, used the following language :

My hon. friend's motion is based exactly upon that section of the constitution.

I may say in passing, that Mr. Davies was arguing very strenuously that parliament itself had no right to delimit the constituencies, but that that duty should be imposed by parliament upon some independent body. So Mr. Davies continued :

He says——

That is referring to my right hon. friend, then the leader of the opposition.

He says let us come together now and agree upon these lines, and when we are agreed upon the lines and upon the manner, then let us legislate and enact a law, and when we have carried the principle into law, let us appoint the authorities who are to apply the principles to the condition of the country and carry them out. I say that in principle, and from historic precedents, and by the legal construction of the British North America Act, this proposition of the leader of the opposition is one which I think must commend itself to the minds, at any rate, of the legal members of the House. I cannot see, based as it is upon justice and equality, how it can fail to commend itself not only to the sense of fair play, but to the common sense of all the members of this House.

Then I would like to point out to my right hon. friend that his present proposition is not in line with the view which he took in 1899, for he then said :

Whenever a county has to be divided into ridings, whenever a county which up to that time is entitled to one member, becomes entitled to two or three members, the division should take place by judicial decision and authority.

That is the second principle upon which he based the Bill that he then introduced to the House.

Therefore I submit with all deference to the Prime Minister that the proposal which is now before the House is not the same as the English proposal of 1884, it is not the same as the proposal of the right hon. gentleman in 1892, and it is not the same as the proposal of the right hon. gentleman in 1899. However, it must be admitted, Mr. Speaker, that it does not at all follow that this is not a perfectly fair proposition. All I am desirous of pointing out at the present time is that it is not any one of the proposals which have been made on the three occasions to which I have referred.

Well, what have we to say about the Bill which is before us ? In the first place, I may say a word to those who have thought it remarkable that the members of the Conservative party have not burst out into a chorus of congratulation to the government upon the introduction of this Bill. I want to point out to my right hon. friend that one very good reason why we should restrain our congratulations at the present time is that we have not the real Bill before us. As was well said by Mr. McCarthy in 1892, the whole force, the whole vitality of a Bill of this character is to be found in the details. Now we have the mere skeleton of a Bill at the present time, we have nothing except the bare formal parts of the Bill, and we are not prepared to pronounce any opinion at all upon that which we have not yet seen. I admit that a government desiring to introduce a perfectly fair Redistribution Bill—and I accept in the fullest sense my right hon. friend's assurance of that desire—I say that a government desirous of introducing the fairest possible Redistribution Bill, might adopt this course : and I say also that a government which desired to introduce a Bill that was not fair in the ordinary sense of the term, might adopt exactly the same course, and place before the proposed committee schedules which might just as well have been attached to the Bill itself. I am not suggesting that that is the intention of the government, but I am pointing out that at the present time we have not in the Bill anything but a mere skeleton, and we do not know whether the proposal of the government will be a fair one or an unfair one until their proposal has been placed before the committee, and we have had an opportunity of judging.

Now, I think what I have said was emphasized in a very striking manner by Mr. McCarthy in 1892. In referring to the proposal made at that time by my right hon. friend he said :

> Even if there had been a conference in that way I do not see what particular benefit could have resulted because the conference, representing as it was suggested it should, the majority and the minority according to numbers in this House, would, unless they agreed, have merely reproduced the scheme of the majority. It would merely have reproduced the scheme which the government have now presented and which this House, representing in the same way the same proportion of numbers, will ultimately adopt.

That is the criticism which I would make upon this proposal in so far as it contemplates a conference or committee. If it is intended to produce an agreement such as was arrived at in 1884, if it is proposed to adopt the same principle which was acted on by the English government at that time, it seems to me that the proposal of my right hon. friend should have been a proposal for a committee composed of an equal number of members from each side, a proposal which would not reflect the numerical strength of either party in this House, instead of the present one which in the end must merely result, or might merely result in reproducing to the House the scheme of the majority, as Mr. McCarthy remarked in 1892. Now my right hon. friend has assured me that no schedules or maps have been prepared, or at least that they have not been finally prepared. Of course we have heard a great many rumours to the contrary, some of these rumours appear to be well founded ; but again I say I accept, as far as my right hon. friend is concerned, in the fullest sense his assurance, nor am I making any reservation in a parliamentary sense.

Now there is another observation I would make, which is that no principle whatever has been announced by my right hon. friend in introducing this Bill, beyond this. He says :

> The guiding principle in this redistribution should be that county boundaries should be preserved, that the municipal representation of the county ought to be the basis of the parliamentary representation.

My right hon. friend has not made any reference whatever to equality of population, although he laid a good deal of stress upon that in his speech of 1892. I would like to point out to him that in Great Britain in 1884 very full rules were laid down, and among them were these : In the first place equality of population ; in the next place retaining in the divisions any particular portion of the population which was of an urban character, that is in the divisions of boroughs ; in the third place, compactness of divisions with respect to geographical position ; in the fourth place, community of interests. I think some of those, at least, require to be regarded to a considerable extent in the work of the committee, and perhaps it would have been better if my right hon. friend had introduced some of these principles into this Bill or into his speech.

There is another principle which was laid down by my right hon. friend in 1892, and to which I would invite his attention now. In speaking upon the second reading of the Bill at that time, he said :

> What I propose to the sense of justice and every man in this House is that this application of the law should be made in such a manner that both parties shall remain with the same advantage they now possess.

I am not at all clear how it would be possible to work out a principle of that kind in framing schedules for a Bill of this character, but at all events it is a principle upon which my right hon. friend very strongly relied in 1892, and it is one which it is proper for me now to bring to his attention.

Now, I have one more remark, and it is in respect of the criticism which my right hon. friend made of the Act of 1892. In speaking on the first reading of this Bill, he named forty-two constituencies in the province of Ontario which, he said, had elected twenty-five Conservatives and only seventeen Liberals, and notwithstanding that fact, the vote for the seventeen Liberals was greater in number than the vote for the twenty-five Conservatives. My right hon. friend seems to regard that as a complete argument to show that the Bill of 1892 was unfair to the Liberal party. Well, now, I have been furnished with a list of certain constituencies in the province of Ontario which produce an exactly opposite result. Take the constituencies of West Bruce, South Brant, South Essex, Glengarry, Haldimand, East Huron, West Huron, South Huron, Kingston, West Lambton, West Middlesex, South Middlesex, West Northumberland, South Ontario, West Ontario, Ottawa, South Oxford, South Perth, East Peterborough, Prescott, North Renfrew, South Renfrew, North Simcoe, Wentworth and Brant, North York—Here you have twenty-five constituencies with a popular vote for the Liberal party of 52,098 which returned twenty-five Liberal members at the last general election. Now, take seventeen Conservative constituencies which returned Conservatives at the last general election. Cornwall and Stormont, East Elgin, East Grey, Hamilton, Hamilton, Middlesex East, East Toronto, West Toronto, Centre Toronto, East York, West York, East Lambton, Lincoln and Niagara, Muskoka and Parry Sound, North Perth, East Simcoe, South Waterloo—Here you have constituencies which returned seventeen Conservatives by a popular vote of 53,962, or some 1,900 more than the total number of votes cast for twenty-five Liberal members.

Where I have dealt with constituencies like Ottawa, or, like West Toronto which returned two members I have taken half the vote for the successful Conservative candidates which I think is a very fair way to do. Let me also point out to my right hon. friend the result in his own province. He was very strong in the position he took that the Bill of 1892 was unfair to the province of Quebec. He dwelt on that to the extent of two or three columns of 'Hansard.' I do not think that my right hon. friend, looking at the result in his own province to-day, can fairly regard it as a gerrymander in the interest of the Conservative party at least. I have been looking at the figures and I find that in the province of Quebec at the last general election the popular Liberal vote was 133,121 and that fifty-eight Liberal members were returned while the popular Conservative vote was 104,522 and that seven Conservative members were returned. Each Liberal member represents on an everage 2,300 Liberal electors while each Conservative member represents on an average 15,000 Conservative electors. I think my right hon. friend will not be inclined to rely upon the position he took in 1892 when he regarded the province of Quebec as having been gerrymandered in the Conservative interest.

There is another matter I would like to bring to the attention of the House and it is this. My right hon. friend has not said a word about the very important legal point which was raised by two of his colleagues in 1892—Mr. Davies and Mr. Mills. These were very eminent men in their profession, so eminent that they have since been appointed by this government to positions on the bench of the highest court of appeal in this country and both of these gentlemen, in 1892, laid down the position unequivocally, stating that they had no doubt upon it, that parliament was not competent to do this work at all, that it must appoint an independent authority to deal with the subject. I shall not weary the House by reading from their speeches but any hon. gentleman who has paid any attention to the debate of 1892 knows that what I say is absolutely correct, Mr. Davies as well as Mr. Mills professed himself to be without any doubt whatever on the subject, and on the Conservative side of the House, the late Mr. Dalton McCarthy, a gentleman very eminent in his profession, none more eminent in Canada at that time, professed himself to be in agreement with Mr. Mills and Mr. Davies. Now, under these circumstances, would it not be worth the attention of the government to consider whether or not that point should be referred to the Supreme Court for their decision. That is not a point that can be laughed out of court when we have in support of it Mr. Davies, now a judge of the Supreme Court, the highest court of the country, Mr. Mills an eminent constitutional lawyer, now occupying a seat on the bench and when we have also in support of it the opinion of the late Mr. Dalton McCarthy. It is something that you will not dismiss with a smile, I imagine, it is something that you will not dismiss with a shrug or a laugh, it is something that you will regard as serious when gentlemen of the standing and ability of the three gentlemen I have named have taken the position which these gentlemen did take in the House of Commons.

Now, Mr. Speaker, there is one other matter about which I would like to say a word and it is in regard to the legal question which I drew to the attention of the House on the first reading of this Bill. I have been very kindly favoured by the hon. Minister of Justice (Hon. Mr. Fitzpatrick) with a copy of the memo. which he presented to council and I am bound to say that I think he has with his usual ability made the very best possible case that he could for the position of those who think that there is no ground for the contention which has been raised by the law officers of the Crown for the province of New Brunswick. I have had a great deal of doubt in my own mind as to what the true answer to the question is. At one time when I first examined the question, I was very strongly impressed with the opinion which has been given by the hon. Minister of Justice although I reached the conclusion by a somewhat different mode of reasoning. It seemed to me, looking at the provisions of sections three and four of the British North America Act that you might say that Canada was as much constituted under the British North America Act when it had seven provinces as when it had four. That at first blush seemed to be the true solution of the case for the reason that the Dominion of Canada was not formally constituted by the British North America Act, but it was constituted under the British North America Act by the Queen's proclamation, and inasmuch as section three gave power to the Queen to proclaim the four provinces to be one union and as section 146 gave power to the Queen, upon certain conditions precedent having been complied with, to make a similar proclamation in regard to other of Her Majesty's colonies in North America I was inclined to think at first that the words 'as constituted under this Act' in section four would be just as much applicable to Canada at the present time as they were in 1867. I do not say that there is not some force in that answer to the argument which has been put forward by the law officers of the province of New Brunswick. But, let us look at the preamble of the British North America Act, which is as follows :—

Whereas, the provinces of Canada, Nova Scotia and New Brunswick have expressed their desire to be federally united into one Dominion under the Crown of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, with a constitution similar in principle to that of the United Kingdom :

And whereas such a union would conduce to the welfare of the provinces and promote the interests of the British empire;

And whereas on the establishment of the union by authority of parliament it is expedient, not only that the constitution of the legislative authority in the Dominion be provided for, but also that the nature of the executive government therein be declared;

And whereas it is expedient that provision be made for the eventual admission into the union of other parts of British North America.

Then follows the enacting part. Then, in section four provides:

The subsequent provisions of this Act shall, unless it is otherwise expressed or implied, commence and have effect on and after the union, that is to say, on and after the day appointed for the union taking effect in the Queen's proclamation; and in the same provisions, unless it is otherwise expressed or implied, the name Canada shall be taken to mean Canada as constituted under this Act.

That is rather an important provision it seems to me which is contained in the first part of section four. The subsequent provisions of this Act are to 'commence and have effect on and after the union' and it seems to me that the expression gives a certain key as to whether or not you are to regard the words 'Canada as constituted under this Act' as having the meaning which I have already indicated. Now, another important section is section eight to which I think attention was not drawn upon the first reading of the Bill.

In the general census of the population of Canada which is hereby required to be taken in the year one thousand eight hundred and seventy-one, and in every tenth year thereafter, the respective populations of the four provinces shall be distinguished.

I would rather be inclined to think that there is ground for the contention taken by the law officers of the province of New Brunswick—I understand this to be their argument—that Canada as constituted under this Act meant in the first place the four original provinces, or rather the three original provinces of Canada, Nova Scotia and New Brunswick and not Canada as it might be constituted from time to time. If you once grant that, it seems to me that a very serious question arises. I am not insensible of the force of the argument which might be and which has been made by the hon. Minister of Justice, and it seems that he has overlooked one point to which he might have drawn attention and that is that the words 'parliament of Canada' at the commencement of section fifty-one must obviously mean Canada as constituted from time to time, because it is the parliament of Canada as constituted from time to time that must make these provisions. My hon. friend the Minister of Justice has in his memo. gone very fully into the question of the statutes and the addresses, and in particular he has referred to the imperial legislation following the admission of Manitoba into the union. The hon. gentleman places very great stress indeed upon the statute which deals with the province of Manitoba. He says:

The terms of union and the Manitoba Act are to be looked upon and construed as in effect imperial Acts amending the British North America Act, 1867. It will be observed that in each of them it is provided that the provisions of the British North America Act, 1867, except these answering a certain description which section 51 does not answer, shall be applicable to the new province in the same way and to the same extent as they apply to the other provinces of the Dominion, and as if the new provinces had been one of the provinces originally united by the said Act.

Of course, one can see at once the force of that argument, but it does not seem to me to be as conclusive as the Minister of Justice supposes, because it might possibly be that the new provinces must be compared with the total population of Canada for the purpose of regulating their representation, and yet it would not necessarily follow that the very distinct language contained in section 51 must be so modified so far as the other four provinces are concerned. That seems to me to be the whole crux of the argument of the Minister of Justice. If you once concede that 'Canada' in section 51 means 'Canada' as it was originally constituted, then that section being regarded in the light of a treaty between the four provinces—in fact the whole Act must be regarded in the light of a treaty between the four provinces—you must have something very distinct indeed in any subsequent statutes or addresses if you are to modify the language of that section. I do not know that I would be inclined to go so far as my hon. friend the Minister of Justice, in holding that you do find what is sufficient for that purpose in the addresses and the statutes to which he has called attention. Indeed, I do not observe anything in the memo. of the Minister of Justice which indicates his reasons for supposing that the population of the Territories must be taken into consideration—I do not know whether the Minister of Justice goes so far as to hold that the population of the Territories ought be taken into consideration.

The MINISTER OF JUSTICE. It ought not to be.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). My hon. friend thinks that it ought not to be.

The MINISTER OF JUSTICE. Whether it is or not, it does not affect the result.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). I did not know whether it affected the result or not.

The MINISTER OF JUSTICE. It is a question that ought be considered some time; it must be considered.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). I agree that it is a question which ought be considered some time; not only so far as the Territories are concerned, but I think so far as Canada is concerned. Even if the argument of the Minister of Justice were more convincing to me than it is—and I am bound to say that I appreciate its weight—nevertheless we have on the other hand the opinion of the law officers of the province of New Brunswick, and all who are acquainted with the Attorney General of New Brunswick (Hon. Wm. Pugsley), and all who have met him at the bar, realize and recognize his eminence in the legal profession. Therefore, so long as there is a question with regard to it, I think it would be right that it should be submitted to the Supreme Court. It ought to be submitted not only to the Supreme Court, but it seems to me necessary or at least desirable that provision should also be made for having the opinion of the Privy Council upon the question. I say that for this reason: Suppose the parliament of Canada should pass this Act in its present form, and a question should afterwards be raised—and it may be raised before the courts—as to whether this parliament had jurisdiction, and the case so raised should go not only to the Supreme Court of Canada, but to the Privy Council, a very awkward condition of affairs may come to pass. It seems to me that it would be impossible to separate in such an Act as this, that portion which upon the assumption that I have made, would be good, and that portion which would be bad. May I make my meaning a little plainer—I am trying to address myself more particularly to my hon. friend the Minister of Justice. Here is a statute which undoubtedly contains provisions which this parliament may pass—there can be no doubt that we can deal with the revision of constituencies throughout Canada. While that revision or redistribution of constituencies throughout Canada is part of the statute, it contains, let us say, a provision which is absolutely ultra vires of this parliament; namely, the reduction of the representation of Ontario to eighty-six and the reduction of the representation of the other provinces by one or two members. In construing a statute of that kind it may be held by the court eventually: That not only that portion which deals with the representation of the province of Ontario is bad, but the whole is bad, because the two things are so much dependent on each other and so absolutely joined together in the Act, that you cannot separate in it that portion which is good from that portion which is bad. Therefore, it seems to me that we should have an adjudication upon this question and we should not only have the adjudication of the Supreme Court of Canada upon it, but we should also have the adjudication of the Privy Council by way of appeal as well.

I do not desire, Mr. Speaker, to detain the House further. There is, however, one matter which I forgot to mention and which I know has impressed itself upon the mind of my hon. friend the Minister of Justice: That is the fact which seems to have been taken for granted in 1892: That British Columbia came into the union under such conditions that her representation although it may be increased cannot be decreased. It would seem to me that this is quite as incongruous as to the point to which the Minister of Justice has referred; namely, that under the contention which he controverts certain provinces in Canada are to have their representation increased or diminished according to the population of four provinces and not the population of the whole of Canada, while so far as the rest of Canada is concerned the representation of the different provinces is dependent, not upon the population of the four provinces, but upon the population of all the provinces of Canada. Therefore, Mr. Speaker, I think it would be a wise course for the government to have that question, which has been raised by the province of New Brunswick, submitted to the courts; and not only to have it submitted to the Supreme Court but to have the question determined by the highest court of appeal to which any judicial matter can be carried in this country.

The PRIME MINISTER (Rt. Hon. Sir Wilfrid Laurier). I am happy that my hon. friend the leader of the opposition and I have been able to agree on so many things, even if we cannot agree on everything. It was not to be expected that we should have an absolute love feast and that we should see eye to eye on every question, but on the whole I am glad that the Bill has received the approval of my hon. friend, and that we shall have his concurrence in making it as perfect as possible and as fair between party and party as it is possible to make it. I have a brief reference to make to one or two observations of my hon. friend (Mr. Borden). He has referred to the view held at one time in this House by two eminent friends and subsequent colleagues of mine, then Mr. Louis H. Davies and Mr. David Mills, both of whom are now members of the Supreme Court. I remember very well the occasion upon which these two gentlemen strongly expressed the view that the parliament of Canada was not competent to deal with the Redistribution Act, but that the parliament of Canada could create—not only that it could create but that it should create—a power to make the redistribution although it could not do the work itself. This view was held by these two gentlemen and it was strongly supported, but as my hon. friend knows this view was not generally accepted. I do not notice that my hon. friend (Mr. Borden) himself expresses an opinion, and he no doubt has one, upon this question. Whatever may be his view I shall not press to know it at the moment, but I will point out that the government thought that upon this question, though perhaps the question may not be free from doubt—I would not go so far as that probably—though the contrary view is held by eminent authorities, we thought the safest course was to follow the practice which has hitherto been accepted and have the redistribution made by parliament itself. I have no doubt that parliament can create a power to do the redistribution, but the power is also vested in parliament, and all governments up to the present time have interpreted it in that way. I believe it was more in accordance with the public interpretation of popular government to have that supreme power carried into effect by parliament itself. The other question to which the hon. gentleman (Mr. Borden) has referred is a far more serious one; namely, the method of counting the votes and distributing them. My hon. friend has stated, and rightly stated, that upon this point we are absolutely bound by the British North America Act; we are not at liberty to assign so much to this province or so much to the other province; we must follow the results of the census, according to the terms laid down in the British North America Act. But there can be a way of counting the votes and ascertaining that proportion. We have received a very strong appeal from some of the provinces, particularly from the province of New Brunswick, and my hon. friend the Minister of Justice has taken the precaution to have this matter referred to the Supreme Court and to have as speedy a decision as possible. Whether or not it would be advisable to carry it to the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council is a matter on which it is premature to pronounce. I suppose that in this we will be guided very much by the judgment of the Supreme Court. If that judgment be of such a character as to leave no doubt, either one way or the other, there would be no necessity to push the matter further. Perhaps it may be advisable to do so, but the government are not prepared to decide that point definitely at present. My hon. colleague the Minister of Justice, has taken steps to have the matter referred to the Supreme Court and have a decision as speedily as possible, and I hope that in a few weeks we will be able to announce that decision.

Mr. W. B. NORTHRUP (East Hastings). In rising to make a few comments on the Bill, Mr. Speaker, I wish to express my entire accord in the remarks of my hon. leader, when he said that he accepted the statements of the right hon. gentleman, the First Minister, as unreservedly as they were made. I sincerely believe that the right hon. gentleman intends by the Bill before the House to give the people a fair redistribution measure, and speaking for myself, I say in all sincerity, that when the right hon. gentleman's biography comes to be written —and I am sure it is gratifying to every hon. member on both sides to realize that that day is apparently growing daily more remote—the brightest page in that biography will be that one on which is recorded the promise of the right hon. gentleman to give this House and country a fair measure of redistribution. But while expressing my appreciation of the intentions of the right hon. the leader of this House, it seems to me that the time is inopportune for the passing of such a measure as that submitted to us. The right hon. gentleman has pointed out that the government has decided to submit to the Supreme Court a reference on the question raised as to our right to reduce the representation of any of the provinces. But practically what difference can there be in submitting the case to the Supreme Court, and submitting it to a board composed of county court judges, other than the intrinsic merits and abilities of the members of the respective courts? We know that if legislation be based on the decision of the Supreme Court and if the constitutionality of that legislation be disputed before the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council, that body would be in no way bound by the decision of the Supreme Court. In a matter of such importance, not only as affecting the present, but as laying down a precedent and doctrine for future redistributions, it seems to me that the least the government should do would be to obtain the best opinion possible in order that in whatever we may do, we may be acting on no uncertain ground, and have every assurance that our legislation will be unassailable. I do not intend to argue that the construction of the British North America Act given by the government is wrong, although my own opinion would lead me to that conclusion. But I do not take this ground because, in the first place, it is not necessary for the argument I intend making. What I wish to point out is that if it be doubtful that this House has a right to reduce the representation of any of the provinces, if nobody can say with certainty that we have the power to pass such legislation, we ought certainly to obtain the most authoritative opinion we can before proceeding to pass any enactment. In the second place, I do not propose to argue that the government is wrong in its contention, for if I were to do so, I would be submitting to this House an argument which would be more properly made in a court of law, as this House is not so constituted as to be the proper forum before which to argue an intricate question of law. I would prefer that such a question should be argued before the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council.

On looking through the written opinion of the hon. Minister of Justice, and speaking with all deference to his high legal attainments, if I can find statements of fact in that opinion which are inaccurate quotations of law that are erroneous if I can find arguments which are fallacious and other arguments which followed to their logical conclusion would bear out the contentions of the provinces, I think I will be justified in concluding that an opinion based on such data cannot be so clear and free from doubt as to warrant our passing an Act which later on might be declared invalid.

Looking at the opinion of the hon. Minister of Justice, and without pretending to dissect it thoroughly, let me call attention to a few facts which may throw some light on the conclusion he has come to. On page 4 I find this sentence :

> The province of Manitoba has been carved out of Rupert's Land by legislation of the parliament of Canada, which also, by virtue of provision of the British North America Act, 1867, has practically the force and effect of an imperial statute.

That is a statement with regard to an important fact. But is it a fact that the province of Manitoba was carved out of Rupert's Land by legislation of the Dominion of Canada ? I find in Hodgins on Dominion and Provincial Legislation, page 9, that a predecessor of the hon. gentleman, the Rt. Hon. Sir John Macdonald, Minister of Justice of that day, in a report approved by His Excellency the Governor General of Canada in Council, on the 2nd of January, 1871, thus speaks of the question raised as to the power of parliament to pass an Act giving the new province the right to representation in the Senate and the House of Commons of the Dominion :

> The general purview of the British North America Act, 1867, seems to be confined to the three provinces of Canada, Nova Scotia, New Brunswick, originally forming the Dominion.

And on the strength of that and the other statements in this state paper, the Minister of Justice of that day came to the conclusion that inasmuch as it was doubtful whether the parliament of Canada had the power to carve out a province from Prince Rupert's Land, it was wise to have imperial legislation to legalize what the parliament of Canada had done.

The MINISTER OF JUSTICE. And imperial legislation was passed.

Mr. NORTHRUP. Certainly.

The MINISTER OF JUSTICE. Where then is the argument ?

Mr. NORTHRUP. It is this, that the imperial parliament, a year or two later, passed an Act to legalize what the parliament of Canada had done, and what the hon. gentleman says the parliament of Canada had a right to do without any imperial Act. If the statement be true that the parliament of Canada had the power to carve out the province of Manitoba from Rupert's Land, the Rt. Hon. Sir John Macdonald and the officers of the Crown of that day were wrong in applying for an imperial Act, and the imperial parliament and the law lords were wrong when they passed an Act of the statute to legalize what the Dominion had a right, of its own accord, to do without any imperial legislation.

The MINISTER OF JUSTICE. But we are speaking of the present time. What was done at that time was legalized subsequently.

Mr. NORTHRUP. I am speaking of the statement in the report of the hon. gentleman that the province of Manitoba had been carved out of Rupert's Land by legislation of the parliament of Canada. But on referring to the record, I find that while the parliament of Canada had attempted to do so, the Minister of Justice of that day doubted its power, and the imperial parliament passed a piece of legislation, which was not at all necessary except on the ground that the parliament of Canada had not the power to do what it professed to do. I am justified, therefore, in my contention that in an important statement of fact the hon. gentleman is not accurate, and that when he says that the province of Manitoba has been carved out of Rupert's Land by legislation of the parliament of Canada, he should have qualified that statement by pointing out that so doubtful was the power of parliament to do this considered, that an Act was passed by the imperial parliament to legalize what the Dominion parliament had done. Therefore, I submit that is not a fact on which the conclusion arrived at by the Minister of Justice can be based. Further in this report of the hon. Minister of Justice, he says, that British Columbia and Prince Edward Island came into the union under the same section 146 of the British North America Act, and that they were admitted into the union with practically equal rights. On page 6, these are the words he uses :

> Where new partners are admitted into the union with practically equal rights, one would expect to find the relation of the population of each province to that of the whole Dominion to govern this representation in the popular Chamber.

But as a matter of law is it the case that British Columbia and Prince Edward Island were admitted into the Dominion with practically equal rights ? In this very state paper of the hon. Minister of Justice I find on page 5 :

> British Columbia is entitled to be represented in the Senate by three and by six in the House of Commons, the representation to be increased under the provisions of the British North America Act, 1867.

And I find that, according to the same paper, page 5 :

> The terms of union with Prince Edward Island contain a provision to precisely the same effect as clause 10 of the terms of union with British Columbia and the following provisions as to representation :—
>
> That the population of Prince Edward Island having increased by 15,000 or upwards since the year 1861, the island shall be represented in the House of Commons by six members ; the representation to be readjusted from time to time under the provisions of the British North America Act, 1867.

But in the case of British Columbia, the representation was to be, not readjusted, as in the case of Prince Edward Island, but increased. It will hardly lie in the mouth of the hon. gentleman to say that the two expressions 'readjusted' and 'increased' are synonymous terms, because in 1892, when the last Redistribution Act was before the House, hon. members opposite, including the present leader of the government, admitted that under the terms of union, the representation of British Columbia could not be decreased below six. It was not contended then that the representation of Prince Edward Island could not be increased or decreased according to this method of readjustment. And therefore, Sir, we find that, as a matter of fact, as a matter of law, of the two provinces, both of which came in under orders in council, in the case of one it is guaranteed that the number of its members can never be less than six, while the other may be reduced to one or none. And yet, the Minister of Justice, in this report on so important a question, a report which if followed, may lead to a state of affairs never contemplated, and which never could be desired, says that these new provinces were admitted to the union with practically equal rights. I submit to this House could anybody on either side contend for a moment that when one province comes in with six members which number cannot be decreased, and another comes in with six members which can be decreased, it is not a mere abuse of language to say that the two provinces came in with equal rights ?

And I would refer to another part of the report of the Minister of Justice. At the beginning of his report he refers to the contention on the part of the parliament of New Brunswick that Canada under the 51st section, is Canada as originally constituted by the British North America Act, and he shows, on the other side, the contention which the government supports, that Canada means Canada as it exists to-day. We know what Canada means under the British North America Act—the original four provinces. And we know what Canada means as it exists to-day, stretching from the Atlantic to the Pacific. And the difference between the province of New Brunswick on the one side and the Dominion of Canada on the other is which of these interpretations is correct. The fourth subsection of section 51 is the clause which is under discussion and concerning which the question arises whether it means Canada as it was constituted under the British North America Act, or Canada as it exists to-day. I find, in this statement of the Minister of Justice the clause which bears on this point and gives the information on it. He said :

> The terms of union and the Manitoba Act are to be looked upon and construed as in effect imperial Acts amending the British North America Act, 1867. It will be observed that, in each of them it is provided that the provisions of the British North America Act, 1867, except those answering a certain description which section 51 does not answer shall be applicable to the new province——

And the words following are underlined :

> —in the same way and to the same extent as they apply to the other provinces of the Dominion, and as if the new province had been one of the provinces originally united by the said Act.

And it goes on :

> Section 51 is also in each case specially declared to be applicable, subject to the exceptions which for the present purpose are immaterial.
>
> The words underlined——

Those to which I have just referred.

> —seem to dispose of the suggested view as to the construction of the Act as untenable. Suppose one of the colonies had been one of the provinces originally united, how must section 51 have then been read and construed. In the opening paragraph 'four provinces' would have been 'five provinces'; the word 'province' throughout the section would be applied to the supposed additional province as well as the other, and can it be doubted that the word 'can' in paragraph 4 would have included all five provinces.

So the hon. gentleman's argument is that as these provinces came in from time to time they became part of the Dominion on the same terms as did the original provinces, and therefore the British North America Act should be read, as each came in, as though it had been part of the Dominion when the British North America Act was passed. Then, let us see, this being admitted, how clause 5 of the British North America Act will read. Making the amendments necessary for the hon. gentleman's argument it would read as follows :

> Canada shall be divided into seven provinces, named Ontario, Quebec, Nova Scotia, New Brunswick, Prince Edward Island, Manitoba and British Columbia.

I think the hon. gentleman (Hon. Mr. Fitzpatrick) will admit that that is a fair reading of clause 5 of the British North America Act as amended by his argument, that as each new province came into the Dominion it acquired all the powers of the original provinces, and that the clauses of the Act were to be read as if it had been admitted as part of the Dominion originally. But this would make Canada consist only of the seven provinces enumerated. If I had not had the pleasure of meeting the hon. gentleman in the North-west Territories last fall, I would have thought that he was under the impression that a person stepped from Manitoba directly in to British Columbia. Under his argument, the North-west Territories form no part of the Dominion of Canada, for Canada consists only of the seven provinces. Under that argument, when we seek to find what each province should be arrayed against in order to calculate its representations, we find that it would be Ontario, or whatever other province may be considered, against seven provinces, not against the Dominion of Canada. So, admitting for the purpose of argument—which I do not as a matter of fact—that the hon. gentleman's argument is correct, he has simply proved himself out of court, because he begins in the first page of his report to prove that Canada means Canada as it exists from the Atlantic to the Pacific, and he has proved that it means only the seven provinces, the territories not being included. So, when we seek to find against what part the representation of Ontario should be calculated, we find that it is only against seven provinces and not against the Dominion of Canada including the territories. What the practical effect of that would be I am not prepared to say. I do not know that it is material, for, in dealing with the law it is a question of right and wrong. However, I have had two calculations made showing the effect under each contention. Not being a mathematician, I cannot say whether they are right. But one calculation made by a competent person shows that, if the territories were excluded and Ontario were calculated against seven provinces, we should not have any reduction. The other made by a department in the city shows that, by a paltry decimal of twelve, Ontario would lose six seats, if the territories were brought into the calculation. While I believe the first figures to be correct, I am not going to commit myself to them. It is a question of the construction of the statute, and, if it does not affect us to-day it might affect us at some other time. We are entitled to a fair rendering of the statutes, and we are entitled to know whether the minister bases his argument on the ground that seven provinces constitute the whole of Canada before we are called upon to accept a calculation based upon such data.

I notice, also, that on page 6 of the hon. gentleman's report, it appears that the provinces came in with equal rights as compared with the others. Let us see how that would work out with regard to the other provinces. I have spoken of the fact that it is clear that British Columbia has greater rights than Prince Edward Island. See how section 51 would work out from the standpoint of the old provinces in the light of the hon. gentleman's contention. Section 51 provides what is to be done on the completion of the census—that Quebec shall have a fixed number of sixty-five representatives, and we understand how the other provinces have proportionate representation. If the contention of the hon. gentleman is right, when we come to read section 51, it applies not only to the four provinces, but to the seven.

The MINISTER OF JUSTICE. No, not to seven provinces, but to Canada.

Mr. NORTHRUP. And the hon. minister has shown by the argument I have referred to it means the seven provinces. I am taking the hon. gentleman's report, and not at present giving my own views. He has proved to his own satisfaction that Canada consists of the seven provinces. How then would you work out this 51st clause? If he wishes to change his opinion and make the section mean the whole of Canada, how would he work out the 51st clause according to his contention? Whatever portions compose Canada this clause provides for equal treatment. But what would you do when you come to British Columbia? Can you apply section 51 to that province? In view of the fact that its representations is never to be decreased below six members, how is it possible to apply this section to that province? Then, how about the territories, if, as the hon. minister contends, Canada consists of the whole country from ocean to ocean? It is settled law that we have the power, under the imperial statutes, to give the territories as large representations as we see fit. We can give them ten or fifty or an hundred members, as we please. So section 51 clearly does not apply to the territories. According to the hon. gentleman though, section 51 applies to the whole of Canada, it does not apply to the North-west Territories, the largest division of Canada, or to British Columbia, which is the largest province. I do not pretend to be very familiar with the geographical facts, but, if you subtract from the whole area of Canada the area of the North-west Territories and British Columbia, I am inclined to think that you will find that the greater part of Canadian territory is outside the operation of section 51, and we know that the time is not far distant when the North-west Territories and British Columbia will be, in population, the greatest part of the Dominion. So, the hon. gentleman has led himself into a difficulty there.

I only wished to call attention to a few points in the report of the Minister of Justice to argue that, when a gentleman of his attainments at the bar, and with his talents—talents which we all admire—looking into this matter and preparing a state paper, commits the inaccuracies I have pointed out, and comes to such conclusions as I have shown, the ordinary humble member of this House, such as myself and those who sit about me, may well say that this question is not so beyond doubt that we should be justified in proposing legislation until the best opinions that we can obtain have been obtained.

Now referring for a moment to the contention on the other side, is there nothing to be said for the contention of New Brunswick? I see New Brunswick's contention submitted to the Dominion government is very brief. It does not descend to argument, it merely states the case of New Brunswick. But is there anything to be said on behalf of the contention of New Brunswick? I think a great deal can be said. It has been laid down by one of the Supreme Court judges, Mr. Justice Strong, quoted in Lefroy on the Constitution, page 42 :

> We are not only entitled, but bound to apply that well-established rule, which requires us, in placing a meaning upon descriptive terms and definitions contained in statutes, to have recourse to external aids derived from the surrounding circumstances and the history of the subject-matter dealt with, and to consider the enactment by the light derived from such source, and so to put ourselves as far as possible in the position of the legislature whose language we have to expound. If this rule were rejected and the language of the statute were considered without such assistance from extrinsic facts, it is manifest that the task or interpretation would degenerate into mere speculation and guess work.

So we have the authority of one of the judges of the Supreme Court to say that we have a right to look at all the surrounding circumstances, and to consider what light can be shed by them on the legislation that has been passed. In the debates before the imperial parliament, when Lord Carnarvon was introducing the British North America Act, he spoke very clearly as to the language of the enactment, and laid down that the British North America Act was the result of a treaty made between the various powers every clause of which was a compromise; and because every clause of that treaty was a compromise he refused to allow the House of Lords to amend any clause of it in any respect. Now then if every clause of that treaty was a compromise, perhaps it would not be out of place to inquire into the circumstances under which this particular clause 51, in which we are so deeply interested, came to be put in the statute. On reference to Pope's Confederation Documents, page 67, we find the debate on the clause giving the number of representatives that the various provinces should be given. We find Mr. Galt saying :

> We have supposed that the population of Lower Canada being tolerably equable in its character, would afford the best basis. But having respect to the rapid increase of Upper Canada, we think the lower provinces should not be reduced if they do not increase in the same ratio. Therefore, the lower provinces would have the same as they have now unless in the very improbable case of any one falling off five per cent or more,—that is a decrease relatively to the whole federation.

Which then began with four provinces. The Hon. Geo. Brown whose name is greatly revered by hon. gentlemen opposite, speaking on the same subject, says on page 67 :

> The practical result will be that while Lower Canada certainly will not be less and the lower provinces may increase in population, they cannot decrease in the number of representatives. It keeps the House within a reasonable limit. It is now to start with one in 17,000. It will afterwards vary.

Then on page 68 the debate goes on, and it is stated that the number of representatives then given was not accidental, but was given because one member for each county and one for each city would give exactly the number agreed upon. The delegates found that they could so divide up the representation of the Dominion that the figures agreed on in the British North America Act would afford what they considered a fair basis for the representation of each province, and it was evidently understood by the representatives at that time when they so provided that unless there was a falling off of one-twentieth in the population of a province there should be no decrease, that practically they were insured against any decrease. Now the provinces have gone into the Dominion on that basis, and the British North America Act being an imperial Act, I submit it is beyond question that the terms of the British North America Act, every clause of it being, as Lord Carnarvon said, a compromise, must stand precisely to-day as they were then, except insofar as those clauses have been modified by imperial legislation. We must not forget that no matter what legislation this parliament might profess to pass or attempt to pass in derogation of imperial legislation, we would be exceeding our powers and our legislation would be utterly void. Now, I would ask the Minister of Justice what legislation has ever passed the imperial parliament that in any way affects clause 51. Probably the answer will be : The other provinces came in under Orders in Council. True, they did come in under Orders in Council, and if the Minister of Justice will read the imperial Orders in Council under which Prince Edward Island, British Columbia and other provinces came in, he will find that in each case the Order in Council provided that in pursuance of the 146th section of the British North America Act they came in subject to the provisions of this Act, for in fact an Order in Council would have no power to vary the British North America Act, it would be as invalid as an Act of this House, except for clause 146 which provided that on an address from a province, with a similar address and on similar terms, from this House, the Queen in Council might approve of their addresses and allow that province to come in on the terms agreed upon, but in every case subject to the provisions of that Act. So that when British Columbia or Prince Edward Island came into the union, they came in subject to the provisions of the British North America Act. The imperial Order in Council has no power to vary that, and whatever its provisions were, they had to accept them.

Now the Minister of Justice seemed to think that if there were four partners, and two or three others came in, they must come in on equal terms. Surely no wilder statement of law than that could be imagined. One can understand four gentlemen owning a business each holding a one-quarter interest; and they decide to take in, we will say, their head clerk. There is nothing to prevent them giving each one his share of one-eighth, or one-sixteenth or one-thirty second, or any interest they like, to that clerk. It is wholly a matter of contract between them, and even if that clerk had ten times the brains of the original four, and contributed ten times as much to the success of the business as the original partners, when he came to claim his share of the profits, he would have to abide by the terms on which he came in. If the Minister of Justice will look at the terms on which these provinces came into the union he will find that there was a provision that they should have the benefit of certain terms from the old provinces, they were given a benefit here and there, but there is not a single word to show that the old provinces lost the rights they had already acquired by imperial legislation. It would be easy for any one to infer that the provinces should have equal rights, but they did not get equal rights, as is shown by the exceptional representation given to British Columbia. Therefore we find that the provinces have come in with different rights between themselves. Now, if they have come in with different rights between themselves, why should it be argued that they would necessarily come in with equal rights as against the old partners ? I venture to submit that the true view of the British North America Act is that laid down by Sir John A. Macdonald in his state paper of 1870, when he said that the purview of the British North America Act was evidently confined to the original four provinces. That Act was framed by the ablest statesmen of Canada. They were building wisely and well, and they knew the country was liable to have an unlimited expansion; they knew it was impossible to foresee the possibilities of this country, and therefore, in providing for the present, as far as possible they provided for the future in general but not in details. They provided that other provinces might come in, but the details they left to be arranged while the original partners of the British North America Act secured imperial legislation, a charter which they hold to-day. I will not say anything further on this point than to claim that in view of the circumstances under which this clause was inserted in the British North America Act, in view of the guarantee of the charter that the provinces have under the British North America Act, in view of the fact that not one word is to be found in any Order of Council or in any address on which an Order in Council is issued, leading to the conclusion that the original provinces were divested of any powers they had, whereas on the contrary they have been given new powers, certain specified powers, it seems to me that the case is not free from doubt, and this is as far as it is necessary to go for the purposes of my argument. But if the question be not free from doubt, admitting that the right hon. gentleman wishes to do what is fair, is it the part of a practical man of business to obtain an opinion from an inferior court when he could obtain one from a superior court ? Is it wise to obtain an opinion that has no intrinsic value beyond the value that may be given to it from the personal standing of the judges when, if the case be referred to the Privy Council, we shall then have an authoritative decision which will be beyond question. Therefore I hope that the right hon. leader of the government, considering that this is only the third session of this parliament, that the parliament is still in its infancy, that there is ample time to secure the decision of the Privy Council and pass this legislation long before this parliament comes to its natural end, will not cause the money of this country to be expended and the time of hon. members perhaps, to be wasted in fruitlessly discussing legislation which the decision of the Privy Council, a few months later on, may show to be utterly abortive.

The MINISTER OF JUSTICE (Hon. Charles Fitzpatrick). Mr. Speaker, of course my hon. friend (Mr. Northrup) is not unaware of the fact that there is no provision for any reference to the Privy Council and that the only provision which we have in our statutes is that which provides for a reference to the Supreme Court of Canada.

Hon. Mr. HAGGART. Is there not a provision for an appeal from the Supreme Court ?

The MINISTER OF JUSTICE. We are not dealing with appeals ; we are dealing with references. I assume that when hon. gentlemen argue legal questions, they mean what they say. As I understand it, the obligation is imposed upon the government after each decennial census to provide for the redistribution of the representation of the different provinces of the Dominion. That is an obligation which is imposed on parliament. There is no discretion that can be exercised by the government in respect to that redistribution. The charter under which we live, under which we are governed, the British North America Act, provides for the manner in which that redistribution is to be made, and section 51 of the British North America Act operates automatically without reference to the government in any manner or form. Now, in respect to the apportionment of representation in each province, there parliament is supreme. When you have determined that in respect to the province of Quebec sixty-five members are to be allotted, or rather when the British North America Act has decided that sixty-five members are to be allotted to the province of Quebec, then, within the limits of the province, parliament is absolutely supreme. Parliament can determine how these members are to be allotted, to which portion of the province they are to be allotted, or generally in any manner that parliament chooses. The principle upon which we proceed in this Bill in respect to the redistribution of the constituencies in the provinces, a principle which was laid down by the right hon. leader of the government (Rt. Hon. Sir Wilfrid Laurier), as I understood him when he presented this Bill, is that we should maintain county boundaries, and that after having settled the principle that in so far as it is possible county boundaries should be maintained the subdivision of any county is a matter that parliament should deal with and that subdivision is to be made by a committee of the House, as stated by him when he introduced the Bill. In respect to the principle that was laid down by the right hon. the leader of the government that we would adhere to municipal or county boundaries, I would like to say to the House that that principle was laid down by the late Sir John Macdonald in 1871 at the time of the first redistribution, and that it was acquiesced in by the then leaders of the opposition, Hon. Mr. Mackenzie and Hon. Mr. Blake, and was concurred in by Sir Charles Tupper, who also spoke upon that question. Therefore, the question of adhering to county boundaries may be considered as a question that was determined by the leaders of both political parties in 1871. It is true that for purposes to which it is not necessary to refer now that principle was departed from in 1882, but it was not departed from by the Liberal party, and in so far as we are concerned our position to-day is the position we occupied in 1871, that we should maintain county boundaries. Having stated that much, I now proceed to submit to the House the method of reasoning adopted by me in support of the proposed redistribution of seats. This matter is to be referred to the Supreme Court of Canada; it will be argued there, and in so far as I am concerned I will be content to state now the position I take without adding any argument in support of it. It seems to me the time to argue this abstract legal question will be when we come to submit the matter to the Supreme Court, because it would be to some extent forestalling the judgment of the Supreme Court if we were to argue it here to-day. I will be content at present to leave it to the House to appreciate how far my conclusions flow from the position I lay down. My hon. friend who spoke last said the fathers of confederation provided for the then present. So far as I am concerned, as I read the Confederation Act, the intention was to provide for the then present and to provide for the future, and it is because I maintain that the British North America Act provided for the future that I have reached the conclusion to which I will have occasion to refer by and by. Am I right when I say that the British North America Act provided for the future, and that when the British North America Act was passed it was then in contemplation that we should have a Canada as we have it to-day? Let me read the preamble. The preamble of the British North America Act says:

> And whereas, it is expedient that provision be made for the eventual admission into the union of other parts of British North America.

There we find that at the time the British North America Act was passed provision was made for the condition of things we have to-day. But, we have more than that. We find that section 146 enacts:

> It shall be lawful for the Queen, by and with the advice of Her Majesty's Most Honourable Privy Council, on addresses from the Houses of parliament of Canada, and from the Houses of the respective legislatures of the colonies or provinces of Newfoundland, Prince Edward Island and British Columbia, to admit those colonies or provinces, or any of them, into the union, and on addresses from the Houses of the parliament of Canada to admit Rupert's Land——

That is the province of Manitoba.

> —and the North-western territory, or either of them, into the union, on such terms and conditions in each case as are in the addresses expressed.

That is to say, that provision is made under this section for the admission of those provinces that existed at that time and also for the admission of the North-west Territories and Rupert's Land on conditions to be expressed in the addresses. I will have occasion in a few moments to refer to the conditions upon which these provinces were admitted. Take for instance the case of Manitoba—

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). There are other words which will have to be taken into consideration in connection with this section.

> Subject to the provisions of this Act.

The MINISTER OF JUSTICE (reading):

> On such terms and conditions in each case as are in the addresses expressed and as the Queen thinks fit to approve, subject to the provisions of this Act; and the provisions of any Order in Council in that behalf shall have effect as if they had been enacted by the parliament of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland.

The first province that came in was the province of Manitoba. In 1870 an Order in Council was passed in respect to Rupert's Land, in which I find the following:

> It is hereby ordered and declared by Her Majesty, by and with the advice of the Privy Council, in pursuance and exercise of the powers vested in Her Majesty by the said Acts of parliament, that from and after the fifteenth day of July, one thousand eight hundred and seventy, the said North-western territory shall be admitted into and become part of the Dominion of Canada upon the terms and conditions set forth in the first hereinbefore recited address, and that the parliament of Canada shall from the day aforesaid have full power and authority to legislate for the future welfare and good government of the said territory. And it is further ordered that, without prejudice to any obligations arising from the aforesaid approved reports, Rupert's Land shall from and after the said date be admitted into and become part of the Dominion of Canada upon the following terms and conditions, being the terms and conditions still remaining to be performed of those embodied in the said second address of the parliament of Canada.

Rupert's Land came in under the name of Manitoba, and when it came in certain doubts were expressed in respect to the power of the Dominion of Canada to carve out—I use the expression again which I used in the opinion which I gave—to carve out of Rupert's Land the province of Manitoba. Certain doubts were expressed by the late Sir John Macdonald and other members of his government, and as a result the Order in Council, to which my hon. friend referred, was passed. Then, what happened? We find that we have what is known as the Doubt Removing Act; that is to say, the British North America Amendment Act of 1871, in which it is provided that:

The parliament of Canada may from time to time establish new provinces in any territories forming for the time being part of the Dominion of Canada, but not included in any province thereof, and may, at the time of such establishment, make provision for the constitution and administration of any such province, and for the passing of laws for the peace, order, and good government of such province, and for its representation in the said parliament.

The Dominion parliament shall have the right to pass such laws as it deems proper for the representation in parliament of the provinces of Canada. Then, we have, in addition to that, section 5:

The following Acts passed by the said parliament of Canada, and entitled respectively: 'An Act for the temporary government of Rupert's Land and the North-western Territory when united with Canada,' and 'An Act to amend and continue the Act thirty-two and thirty-three Victoria, chapter three, and to establish and provide for the 'Government of the province of Manitoba' shall be and be deemed to have been valid and effectual for all purposes whatsoever from the date at which they respectively received the assent, in the Queen's name, of the Governor General of the said Dominion of Canada.

That is to say, the Act passed by the Dominion carving Manitoba out of Rupert's Land in 1870, is declared by this Imperial Act as having been properly passed, and the Act of 1870 is now to be construed as if it had been an Act of the imperial parliament. Acting on this theory, that this Act here confirms the first Act and made it imperial legislation, I ventured to make the statement that the Dominion of Canada did carve Manitoba out of Rupert's Land. My hon. friend (Mr. Northrup) cavils with that statement. I say that the Imperial Act of 1871 says that what we did in 1870 was good, and that it gave to the Act of 1870 absolutely the same effect as if it were done by the imperial parliament, and my hon. friend says it is an incorrrect statement in law to assert that Canada had carved out of Rupert's land the province of Manitoba. I am willing to accept his criticism.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). Would the Minister of Justice permit me to ask a question now—if it would interrupt his argument I shall do so later.

The MINISTER OF JUSTICE. I prefer it now.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). I merely ask for information. Under what statute is it that we get power to provide for the representation of the North-west Territories. Is it not under section four of the Act to which the hon. gentleman has just referred.

The MINISTER OF JUSTICE. Yes.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). Does the hon. gentleman not observe a marked difference between section four and section two. Section two dealing with provinces (therefore not applying to the territories) provides specially for representation in addition to providing for laws for the peace, order and good government; whereas section four provides for the making of laws for the peace, order and good government of the territories but not for representation.

The MINISTER OF JUSTICE. I cannot see the distinction.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). The distinction is that in one case there is express provision for representation and in the other there is not.

The MINISTER OF JUSTICE. There is a provision to provide for representation, and that is what we have done.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). I do not see it just in that way.

The MINISTER OF JUSTICE. The Manitoba Act of 1870, thirty-three Vic. Cap. three, section two, which is now, mark you, imperial legislation, provides:—

On from and after the said day on which the Order of the Queen in Council shall take effect as aforesaid, the provisions of the British North America Act, 1867, shall, except those parts thereof which are in terms made, or, by reasonable intendment may be held to be specially applicable to, or only to affect one or more, but not the whole of the provinces now composing the Dominion, and except so far as the same may be varied by this Act, be applicable to the province of Manitoba in the same way, and to the like extent as they apply to the several provinces of Canada, and as if the province of Manitoba had been one of the provinces originally united by the said Act.

That is to say, in 1870, as a result of imperial legislation, it is provided that Manitoba comes into confederation, and is to be dealt with in so far as the British North America Act is concerned, as if it had been originally one of the provinces that came into the union in 1867. Not only is that to be the case but section four goes on to say :

The said province shall be represented, in the first instance, in the House of Commons, by four members, and for that purpose, shall be divided by proclamation of the Governor General, into four electoral districts, each of which shall be represented by one member : provided that on the completion of the census in the year 1881, and of each decennial census afterwards, the representation of the said province shall be readjusted according to the provisions of the fifty-first section of the British North America Act, 1867.

That is to say, that we have this Act which provides for the admission of Manitoba into confederation; we have this Act making all the conditions and all the terms of the British North America Act applicable to Manitoba ; and we have moreover special provision made that there shall be a readjustment of the representation of Manitoba after each decennial census subsequent to the year 1871, and that with respect to that redistribution or readjustment, section fifty-one of the British North America Act shall be made applicable, section fifty-one being the section which applies to the other provinces.

Now, so far as Manitoba is concerned, after the Act was passed, what is the condition of affairs ? Is the Act of 1867 not to be read and construed by the light of the subsequent amendment of 1870, and are you not bound to give effect to all the terms and conditions of the British North America Act with respect to Manitoba; and are you not bound in so far as the redistribution of Manitoba is concerned by the terms of section fifty-one ? My hon. friend (Mr. Borden) says that you have got to be careful, and you have to watch scrupulously the effect of each word contained in the British North America Act; that the British North America Act is a treaty between the different provinces. I agree with that. It was so stated at the time the British North America Act was introduced by Lord Carnarvon in the House of Lords, and it has been since stated on two different cases by the Supreme Court of Canada. But what is the effect ? The British North America Act is a treaty as between the four provinces which were parties to it at its inception; but it is also a treaty with respect to the provinces which came in afterwards, and if the four provinces which were parties to the British North America Act originally, accept other partners in the concern, they are bound by the terms and conditions upon which the other partners come in. They were free to modify the treaty. A treaty could not be modified by outside parties, but by those who were parties to it, and these parties can agree to modify the terms as they choose. Therefore, when the four original provinces say to Manitoba : We agree to your coming into confederation, and you are to be governed by the same stipulations that apply to us, and with respect to your representation you are to be governed by section fifty-one of the British North America Act, what is the conclusion ? The conclusion is : After that Act was passed section fifty-one of the British North America Act must be read in the light of the amending Act, and so is thereafter to read instead of 'four provinces' 'five provinces;' and instead of 'Quebec, Ontario, New Brunswick and Nova Scotia;' 'Quebec, Ontario, New Brunswick, Nova Scotia and Manitoba.'

Now, we are free so far as Manitoba is concerned. And what do we find after that ? We then find British Columbia coming in. British Columbia comes in on an address from the Legislative Council of the province of British Columbia to the parliament of Canada. The parliament of Canada, the House of Commons and the Senate, also passed addresses. The addresses of the House of Commons and of the Senate are in terms identical with the address presented on behalf of the Legislative Council of British Columbia. These addresses from the House of Commons of Canada and from the Senate of Canada and from the Legislative Council of British Columbia are sent over to England. There an Order in Council is passed and the Order in Council takes in the terms of the addresses that were presented, and says in effect : That the province of British Columbia is admitted into confederation on the terms and stipulations provided in the addresses. Let us see what these addresses are. You find for instance with reference to British Columbia, that in the Order in Council of the 16th May, 1871, it is represented :—

And whereas by addresses from the Houses of the parliament of Canada and from the legislative council of British Columbia respectively, of which addresses copies are contained in the schedule to this order annexed, Her Majesty was prayed, by and with the advice of Her Most Honourable Privy Council, under the one hundred and forty-sixth section of the hereinbefore recited Act, to admit British Columbia into the Dominion of Canada, on the terms and conditions set forth in the said addresses.

What are the terms and conditions ?

British Columbia shall be entitled to be represented in the Senate by three members, and by six members in the House of Commons. The representation to be increased under the provisions of the British North America Act, 1867. . . . .

The provisions of the British North America Act, 1867, shall (except those parts thereof which are in terms made, or by reasonable intendment may be held to be specially applicable to, and only affect one and not the whole of the provinces now comprising the Dominion and except so far as the same may be varied by this minute) be applicable to British Columbia, in the same way and to the like extent as they apply to the other provinces of the Dominion, and as if the colony of British Columbia had been one of the provinces originally united by the said Act.

There you have British Columbia coming in subject to all the terms and conditions of the British North America Act, and with a special stipulation that with respect to the representation of British Columbia, that shall be governed by section fifty-one of the British North America Act.

Now, let us take the province of Prince Edward Island. The same formality was complied with there. You had your addresses from both Houses of parliament here, and you also had an address from the parliament of Prince Edward Island. What do we find in the addresses? We find the same terms as in the case of British Columbia.

That the population of Prince Edward Island having been increased by fifteen thousand and upwards since the year 1861, the island shall be represented in the House of Commons of Canada by six members; the representation to be readjusted, from time to time, under the provisions of the British North America Act, 1867.

There is further provision:

That the provisions in the British North America Act, 1867, shall, except those parts thereof which are in terms made, or by reasonable intendment, may be held to be especially applicable to, and only to affect one and not the whole of the provinces now composing the Dominion, and, except so far as the same may be varied by these resolutions, be applicable to Prince Edward Island in the same way and to the same extent as they apply to the other provinces of the Dominion, and as if the colony of Prince Edward Island had been one of the provinces originally united by the said Act.

Now, we have reached the last one of the provinces, and what is the position? You have the British North America Act in the preamble providing for the admission of these provinces into confederation; you have section 145 of the British North America Act which makes provision for the way in which they are to be brought in; you have got the arrangement which contains specifically the words; that they stipulate that their representation is to be readjusted under the British North America Act, and that they specially provide that they are to be dealt with in all respects as if they had been part and parcel of the original provinces when the Confederation Act was first passed. They say you shall deal with us absolutely on the same terms and subject to the same conditions as those in which we came in. What was the result of that? How was their representation to be readjusted? The British North America Act provides for readjustment by section fifty-one.

On the completion of the census in the year 1871, and of each subsequent decennial census, the representation of the four provinces shall be readjusted by such authority, in such manner, and from such time, as the parliament of Canada, from time to time provides subject and according to the following rules.

Where are they? If my construction of the Act be not correct, if we are to be held to the words of the British North America Act, without any regard to subsequent legislation, there is provision made here for a readjustment of the representation of the four provinces and nothing else. If that Act has not been amended, you have simply four provinces, the representation of which you can readjust. What an absurd conclusion that would be. The only sensible logical view is that what you are called on to readjust is the representation of the provinces of Canada existing at the time such readjustment must be made. That is to say, hat the British North America Act, like every other Act, has always to be construed as if it were passed at the time you are seeking to put it into operation. It is consequently necessary, under section 51, to make to-day provision for the readjustment, not of the four provinces, as they stood when the Act passed, but of the seven provinces composing confederation to-day. This has never hitherto been questioned. In 1871 provision was made for readjustment in more than four provinces, also in 1881, and in 1891 a readjustment was made of the representation of all the seven provinces. Where did the parliament of Canada get authority to readjust the seven provinces in 1891, if not in section 51? Have all those eminent men, who took part in the legislation of those years, been entirely at fault? Is it possible that they were so blinded, so ignorant, so absolutely incapable as not to understand where they got their authority to pass the legislation they did?

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). It is contended that if you take the four provinces, as they originally stood, there would be, under present circumstances, no decrease in the representation of Nova Scotia, New Brunswick and Ontario. Does my hon. friend say that any change has been accomplished with regard to that?

The MINISTER OF JUSTICE. I am not arguing that point now, but will come to it in a minute.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). I thought that my hon. friend had come to that.

The MINISTER OF JUSTICE. I am discussing section 51 and refer my hon. friend to subsection 4.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). My hon. friend says that it has been amended by these addresses and the Queen's proclamation. I am not criticising his argument, but wish merely to understand it. Would he be prepared to go this far? If in each of these cases, it had been provided that hereafter the representation of the province of Quebec should be 64 instead of 65, would the hon. gentleman say that the British North America Act had been amended by means of these addresses and proclamations? And if it could not be amended in this way, how could it be amended as he has suggested it has been?

The MINISTER OF JUSTICE. I entertain absolutely no doubt whatever that if addresses had been presented in the form suggested by my hon. friend and if an Order in Council, which has the effect of an imperial Act, had sanctioned these addresses and given the effect of law to them, it would follow that the British North America Act was amended. The imperial parliament can amend at any time any Act which it has passed.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). That is a perfectly fair answer. Would not the words 'subject to the provisions of this Act' have a controlling influence in that regard ?

The MINISTER OF JUSTICE. Not if, as my hon. friend said a moment ago, it was in the address stated specifically that the representation was reduced to 64.

Mr. FRASER. Would that be true also, without any reference at all to Quebec ?

The MINISTER OF JUSTICE. The British parliament can undoubtedly amend the Act at any time. As to whether they would or could constitutionally exercise the right is another question ; it is extremely doubtful. I am replying simply to an abstract legal question. If the parliament that has power to pass an Act continues to exist, it must necessarily have power to amend or repeal it. That is an elementary principle in constitutional law. And as the result of the subsequent action of the imperial parliament, section 51 was amended so as to make the first clause read 'seven' provinces instead of four. That, I submit respectfully, concludes the matter, because if the representation of the seven provinces is to be readjusted, it must be readjusted by the parliament of Canada. What is the parliament of Canada ? It is the parliament which has control over the seven provinces to be readjusted, and in which those provinces are represented ? Canada must of necessity mean the whole of the provinces as they exist at the time. What is the result ? The result is that, section 51 being applicable, you have, when you proceed to readjust your provices, to be governed by it. The province of Quebec shall have a fixed number of 65 members. That province is of course out of court, but it is the pivotal province. It is by the population of Quebec that the whole redistribution of the country is to be settled.

Subsection 2 of section 51 provides :

> There shall be assigned to each of the other provinces such a number of members as will bear the same proportion to the number of its population (ascertained at such census) as the number 65 bears to the number of the population of Quebec (so ascertained).

What is the result ? The unit of representation is 25,367 and a fraction, Ontario having a population of 1,648,898, the population of the Dominion being 2,182,947, the representation of Quebec being 65. The Act works automatically. It is a mere question of proportion—as 1,648,898, the population of Ontario, is to 2,182,947, so is 65 to x. The result is 86·05, and we find that readjusted, the represention would be in this House :

Ontario	86
Quebec	65
Nova Scotia	18
New Brunswick	13
Manitoba	10
British Columbia	7
Prince Edward Island	4

The question naturally arises, how do you justify the decrease in the representation of the provinces of Ontario, Nova Scotia, New Brunswick and Prince Edward Island. I may say at once that with respect to Prince Edward Island, there is no necessity for any argument, because whatever view you take, whether or not you construe the term 'Canada' in subsection 4 of section 51 to include only the four original provinces or to mean Canada as it is to-day, the island is, in either case, out of court. But with respect to the provinces of Ontario, Nova Scotia and New Brunswick, if you construe the term 'Canada' to mean only the four original provinces, then their representation would not be reduced, but if you take it to cover all the provinces then their representation will be reduced to the figures I have given. The only question to be determined therefore is what is the meaning of the word 'Canada' in that subsection 4. I say it must of necessity mean Canada as it is at present and not merely the four original provinces. I shall not attempt to argue that question out now, because it seems to me that it would be to some extent unseemly that I should present here a legal argument which should be more properly submitted to the Supreme Court. I wish merely to state the position I take. But I should state to the House that this question is, of course, one that the House is free to discuss—I am not arguing that the House is not free; it is a matter of taste. But I say that this question is one to which I have given considerable thought. At the same time, as I had occasion to say once or twice before, I am not absolutely infallible ; and I thought it was proper for me to get the opinion of some outside counsel on the question, and I did do so. I thought I could not do better than get the opinion of so eminent an authority as Mr. Christopher Robinson, who entirely agrees with the views I take. He says :

> In my opinion, 'Canada' in section 51, subsection 4, means Canada as now constituted.

And he goes on to say :

> I do not agree with what I understand to be the contention of Nova Scotia and New Brunswick that for the purposes of readjustment it means only the four original provinces.

Now, that is the case as I want to put it; that is the case as I understand it; and that is the case as I am prepared to argue it in the Supreme Court. I hope the matter will be disposed of there. I think it is a case that ought to be argued, not because I have any doubt whatever of the soundness of the view I take, but for the simple reason that, when you are taking from a province a political right, when you are depriving a province of a certain number of representatives, it is proper that every possible facility should be given to make it clear that, if they have rights that are being interfered with by parliament, those rights will be construed by a proper tribunal. We want to have a fair redistribution; we do not want to take from any province what it has. On the contrary, we are of those who believe that every constitutional right vested in a province is to be construed as sacred and is not to be lightly interfered with, is not to be interfered with unless it is absolutely certain that, under the operation of the Act, it is necessary that we should do so. For that reason, and not that I have any doubt, the matter is to be referred to the Supreme Court.

Mr. S. BARKER (Hamilton). I do not propose to occupy the time of the House in following the legal arguments that have been advanced by hon. gentlemen on this side of the House or by the Minister of Justice (Hon. Mr. Fitzpatrick). But I do propose to adopt the words of Sir Henry Strong, quoted by my hon. friend from East Hastings (Mr. Northrup), in which he said we were entitled, in such a case as this, to refer to the history of the matter, to look at the circumstances of the time and see what was intended by those who, as delegates from the various provinces, sought to frame confederation. I may say a word or two as to the Minister of Justice, not for the purpose of following legal argument, but to show the House wherein our position differs from the argument he has advanced. The hon. minister says that it is the duty of parliament to redistribute after each census. I do not know that that is questioned. I take it that it is as the hon. minister says. But the hon. Minister of Justice will not dispute—I am sure he will admit—that where the readjustment of representation comes in question that readjustment must take place before you can redistribute; and it is a question of the law as to the readjustment of the numerical representation of the provinces that we are really now discussing, not the redistribution of the constituencies. Now, with regard to that, the Minister of Justice has referred to the Manitoba Act as if that was inconsistent with the position taken by the leader of the opposition (Mr. Borden, Halifax), and by my hon. friend from East Hastings. I think that, perhaps, the Minister of Justice has overlooked the exception in the Manitoba Act which brings the Manitoba legislation into practically the same position with the introduction of provinces under Orders in Council. The second section, which has already been referred to says that :

> On and from such a day aforesaid——

—That is the day on which the Order in Council shall introduce Manitoba as a province—

> ——the provisions of the British North America Act, 1867, shall, except those parts thereof which are in terms made or by reasonable intendment may be held to be clearly applicable to or only to affect one or more but not the whole of the provinces.

Now, there is an exception preserving, according to our contention, the very provision we are talking about. The fifty-first section and the eighth section, according to our contention, provides for readjustment of the four provinces originally united, and these two provisions especially relate to one or more provinces and are therefore expressly excepted from the provisions of the Manitoba Act.

The MINISTER OF JUSTICE. Were there other provinces at that time ?

Mr. BARKER. There were other provinces brought in. I am going to deal with that in a moment. That is another point rather in favour of our contention. The other provinces brought in by Orders in Council, after addresses sent to England by the provinces and the Dominion, come under clause 146 of the British North America Act, and that section of the Act expressly provides that when addresses are sent by the incoming provinces and by the Dominion stating the terms and conditions on which the incoming provinces propose to enter, they shall, upon the Order in Council being passed in Great Britain, become members of the union, subject to the provisions of the British North America Act—subject, that is, to the very same condition put into the Manitoba Act that the special provision relating to one or more provinces shall not be affected by what appears in the addresses. So that no matter what province you take that may have become part of the Dominion, whether under the Manitoba Act or under Orders in Council, you find that the addresses pursuant to section 146 in the one case and the Manitoba Act in the other, are expressly subject to the special provisions of the British North America Act, as to the relative representation of the original four provinces. In other words, the addresses are subject to the conditions of the British North America Act. Provinces may enter the Dominion on any terms and conditions that they and the Dominion may agree upon, no matter what they are ; but, whatever these terms and conditions may be they shall be all subject to the special provisions of the British North America Act as to any one or more provinces ; and, as we contend, no matter what their agreement may be as to representation or anything else, they are admitted according to the bargain they have made ; subject, however, to this : that that bargain or agreement shall not interfere with the special provision made in the original Act respecting the readjustment of the four original provinces. That, Mr. Speaker, is our contention. Now, I do not propose to go on and take up the time of the House in arguing that question, because, as the Minister of Justice says, it is more properly a question for the court. But I wish to point out that the Minister of Justice has dealt with clause 8 and clause 51 as if these clauses read not the four provinces but each of the provinces of the Dominion. He treats the four provinces for this purpose as if at the time the words 'each of the provinces' were inserted. Now, I propose to show, by taking the resolutions of the conference which framed the Act, that the delegates deliberately avoided using the words 'each province,' that they, on occasion, used those words and then struck them out and substituted the words which appear in the Act to-day. For some reason which they well considered, no doubt, seeking to provide for the readjustment of the representation of the four original provinces—they did not want to use words which might leave any doubt. I would refer to the original resolutions prepared by the conference and presented in London, as found at page 101 of Pope's Confederation documents. Clause 20 of that document, with some change, became section 51 of the Act; and it reads thus:

> Immediately after the completion of the census of one thousand eight hundred and seventy-one, and immediately after every decennial census thereafter, the representation from each province in the House of Commons shall be readjusted on the basis of population, such readjustment to take effect upon the termination of the then existing parliament.

Then follow as separate sections the other provisions that now form the subsections of section 51. Now, we go on, and at page 126 we find what is called the rough draft of the Act that was to be submitted to the British House of Commons. We find in that rough draft the same words are followed, 'from each province,' instead of 'the four provinces,' as they now appear in the Act.

The clause is in these words:

> 18. The House of Commons shall be constituted upon the basis of representation by population, and shall consist of 181 members distributed as follows: To Upper Canada, 82; Lower Canada, 65; Nova Scotia, 19; and to New Brunswick, 15; and after the decennial census of 1871, and every decennial census thereafter, upon the determination, by dissolution or otherwise of the parliament then existing, the representation from each province shall be readjusted, and for that purpose Lower Canada shall always be assigned 65 members, and to each of the other provinces at such readjustment shall be assigned the number of members to which it will be entitled in the same ratio of representation as Lower Canada will have.

Then on page 147 we have what is called the first draft. It is marked 'Confidential, 23rd January, 1867. Draft of a Bill.' There we find the same clause in section 25.

> On the completion of the official census of the population of the united colony in the year 1871, and of each subsequent decennial census, the representation 'of the four provinces' shall be readjusted by such authority and in such manner, and from such time, as any Act of the parliament of the united colony from time to time directs, according to the following rules:

There for the first time we find the words 'of the four provinces,' after twice using the words 'each province,' which would follow the construction the Minister of Justice is seeking to put upon the present Act. Now it is singular that in the third draft of the Bill they come back to the words 'from each province.' That clause is number 34, and evidently during the hammering away at this Bill and trying to meet all the difficulties that existed in confederating these provinces, they first in the resolutions, and then in the other draft of the Bill, use the words 'each province'; next, in what is called 'first draft,' they use the words 'four provinces'; then in another draft of the Bill they go back to the words 'from each province,' and finally in the last draft and in the Act itself use the significant words, 'of the four provinces.' I do not dispute for a moment that if they had adhered to 'each province,' both in the 8th clause and in the 51st clause, there would be a great deal in the argument of the Minister of Justice. But they deliberately abandoned it. In the final draft and in the Act which was passed they come back to the words that we are now discussing, 'the four provinces,' the four original provinces.

Now, Mr. Speaker, what is the meaning of all these changes? These changes were being discussed by statesmen who were sent from Canada as the delegates of four provinces to arrange the terms of confederation. The delegates were settling these provisions with regard to existing difficulties between the provinces. They were negotiating the conditions of confederation. We all know the difficulties that existed at that time between Lower Canada and Upper Canada. There was the burning question of representation by population, and there were difficulties between the provinces down by the sea and ourselves. There was a divergence of interests. At the first meeting two years before, there were six provinces represented; Newfoundland and Prince Edward Island were represented and took part in the first discussion. Newfoundland dropped out, and then the five provinces attempted to settle the difficulties. The first difficulty arose because Prince Edward Island wanted more than its share of representation, and the other provinces would not agree. Prince Edward Island candidly admitted that they could not argue that they were entitled to six members, but they said: There is no use talking to us about coming into confederation if you insist upon our having only our proportion according to population; you must give us six or we cannot come in. The four would not agree to it, and Prince Edward Island dropped out. Then the four got together at Westminster, and having discussed all the difficulties that existed between them, the statesmen who had lived all their lives amidst political difficulties, set to work, and the thing that seems to have received the most consideration from them was the wording of this very 51st clause. They started with the very words that would suit my hon friend, 'from each province'; they put them in twice or three times, then abandoned them. They were dealing with the troubles and divergent interests of four provinces, Upper and Lower Canada, Nova Scotia and New Brunswick; those are the provinces they were dealing with in that 51st section; and it is rather singular that you find, when they use the words 'the four provinces,' they for the first time make the other provisions relating to readjustment of the numerical representation a mere subsection of 51. When they come to deal with this whole subject, confining the subject-matter to the four original provinces, they make the connected provisions subsections of 51 so that there might be no difficulty with the details, and that that word 'Canada,' that comes in subsection (4), should be understood as limited to the subject of the main part of the section, the four provinces. Now I refer for a moment to clause 8 of the Act. This is not the clause that I read from the resolutions, it is a clause that does not seem to have come in until they were framing the Act.

8. In the general census of the population of Canada which is hereby required to be taken in the year 1871 and in every tenth year thereafter, the respective populations of the four provinces shall be distinguished——

Why distinguished? Why did they want the respective populations of the four provinces to be distinguished when, as the Minister of Justice says, they were contemplating a Dominion consisting of many provinces? If they were looking to a general provision in that section, why did they not say 'of each province of the Dominion' or 'of each province'? But they deliberately use the words "four provinces', just as in 51 'each province,' was struck out and the particular words 'four provinces' substituted. Section 51 reads:

On the completion of the census in 1871 and of each subsequent decennial census, the representation of the four provinces shall be readjusted by such authority and in such manner and at such time as the parliament of Canada from time to time provides, subject and according to the following rules:—

The following rules are the five subsections that were in the old resolutions as independent sections.

Now allusion has been made to the words 'parliament of Canada.' Well, that phrase has a clear and distinct meaning. Clearly it implies here something more than a parliament of the four provinces, because there can be no parliament of Canada except the parliament of the whole Dominion. There can be no difficulty about the construction of that phrase.

Here I may refer to another matter. Whether the parliament of Canada has power itself to distribute or readjust as has been considered settled, because it has been argued that the parliament can itself do what, under this section, it was empowered to authorize others to do. But I would call the attention of the Minister of Justice to the fact that if the construction that we are now putting forward is to have effect, it may be necessary to reconsider whether that view of its authority is correct. It might be that if the minister's view that section 51 applies to the whole Dominion, was correct, the parliament of Canada might possibly be argued to have power to do what it could authorize somebody else to do. But a different construction might be reasonable and proper if the parliament of Canada is only to authorize somebody to adjust the representation of these particular four provinces. It does not at all follow that the parliament of Canada would be a proper body to adjust the representation of a particular province. I should doubt very much whether, if we took the view that I am now putting forward, parliament has authority at all to distribute, or whether it is not bound to depute that authority to somebody else, as the section reasonably seems to have intended.

The MINISTER OF JUSTICE. My hon. friend will admit we have been all wrong since 1871.

Mr. BARKER. Possibly, but the hon. gentleman must not forget that this is the first time since 1871 that this question has arisen.

The MINISTER OF JUSTICE. Oh, no.

Mr. BARKER. There has been no time, as I understand it, when such a readjustment of the population was necessary as would raise this contention. This is the first time that it has ever come before parliament, so that nothing turns upon the statement that the hon. gentleman makes.

The MINISTER OF JUSTICE. I understand my hon. friend to say that we have no power to do ourselves that which we have authority to confer upon another to do, that we have no power to readjust ourselves, but that we might authorize some one else to do it.

Mr. BARKER. I think a great deal might be said in favour of the view taken on that point in the past provided parliament was dealing with the readjustment of the whole of Canada, but when it is dealing with only a section of Canada I think there may be a grave doubt as to whether other authority has been given to it than to depute somebody else to do that particular work. I think the question is worthy of consideration, but it is not up at the present time. The important section is subsection 4, of section 51, in which the word 'population of Canada' occurs :

> On any such readjustment the number of members for a province shall not be reduced unless the proportion which the number of the population of the province bore to the number of the aggregate population of Canada at the then last preceding readjustment of the number of members for the province is ascertained at the then latest census to be diminished by one twentieth part or upwards.

The contention of the hon. gentleman, I know, is very plausible. I think there is very grave doubt as to whether it is correct, and nobody can positively say at the present time that the other contention is absolutely wrong. But we find in the 4th and 5th sections of the British North America Act what the word 'Canada' means where there is no expression to the contrary and no implication to the contrary, and we have the word 'Canada' here without any expression to the contrary, and I contend that the only implication of the meaning of 'Canada' here is the four provinces, because it is used in the subsection of the main section, which refers only to the original four provinces called 'Canada.' I would like to point out that the consideration we are urging is a reasonable one. The four provinces had peculiar reasons for maintaining a certain ratio of representation as between themselves. The men who were settling the terms of confederation were not able within human foresight to see what might be necessary for other provinces. They had had before them the case of Prince Edward Island, and they were unable to agree upon the terms upon which that province should come in. Were they likely to settle for one hundred years to come upon what terms the balance of the provinces would come in ? Surely it was a reasonable thing for them to agree upon terms and conditions as to representation, readjustment, and otherwise, of the four provinces, the circumstances of which they were fully aware of and to leave the terms and conditions upon which the other provinces should come in to be settled under section 146 at the time when these provinces might wish to come in. They could, under section 146, make any terms they pleased. It was competent for the Dominion, when a new province came in, to agree that the incoming province should have a fixed representation, not merely for ten years, but for twenty years or fifty years. It was competent for them to agree that they should have a representation which would increase and not decrease, to agree to any terms they saw fit, subject always to one condition expressed in section 146, that its admission should be 'subject to the provisions' of the British North America Act. Among these were special provisions that were made between the four provinces in relation to each other and which therefore cannot be affected by any terms that the incoming provinces obtain under the addresses or Orders in Council. The matter strikes me as a reasonable one. A number of delegates met to try and settle the differences between the four provinces existing and which they represented. They had in view the admission of other provinces and territories. They knew that we had a vast territory in which at that time, I believe, there were only 12,000 inhabitants. How could they foresee the terms upon which it would be reasonable for provinces as yet unborn to come in ? Would it have been sensible for men in their position to attempt to do more than they did, which was to settle the terms and conditions between the existing provinces that were confederating and to leave the incoming provinces in the future to make whatever conditions they saw fit to make at the time and which the Dominion should see fit to grant to them? That is our contention, and it seems to be a perfectly reasonable one. It seems to me to be what any business men would agree upon who sat down to meet the difficulties that presented themselves when these provinces attempted to confederate. There is another feature, and I would like to point it out, because it shows further why it was reasonable that the word 'Canada' in the 4th subsection should not include the population outside of the four provinces. Suppose that in 1901, before this census was taken, that there had been a proposition for Newfoundland to be brought in, what would have been the effect of it ? Ontario, New Brunswick and Nova Scotia would immediately begin to calculate what the probable populations were, and what effect the incoming provinces would have upon the proportion of representation, and if Ontario, for example, saw that the addition of the proposed new province to the aggregate population of the Dominion might have the effect of placing her outside the one-twentieth limit and subject her to a loss of six members, the natural consequence would be that Ontario would say : We will vote against Newfoundland coming in. That will be the result of the contention of the hon. Minister of Justice as to subsection 4. But if the calculation is confined simply to the aggregate population of the four provinces which constituted Canada as defined in the Act, no trouble can arise. What had the population of British Columbia, what had the population of Manitoba or the North-west Territories to do with the question of the readjustment of the representation of the four provinces? Those populations were factors quite outside the subject matter. The four provinces endeavouring to readjust, as between themselves, their relative representation would naturally want to know what was the population of each province and what was the aggregate of the four provinces. That gave them all they wanted to know, and if you interpret the word 'Canada' to mean more than it is defined to mean by sections 3, 4, and 5 of the British North America Act you make it impossible to foresee what the future relative representation of the four provinces may be. In the next twenty-five years we may have a million people in the far west. No man can see what effect that will have upon the representation, and the fact that one-twentieth was put as the margin of stability shows that the framers of confederation were not considering so wide a field. They were confining themselves to the four old provinces whose population was fairly well settled, and the whole of the provisions show that they were framing these words in reference to it. If you take section 51 you will see that it clearly refers in explicit terms to the four provinces, not to the provinces of the Dominion, but explicitly to the four provinces. When we take subsection 4 of that very section we can have no doubt that the word 'Canada' means the four provinces there referred to. Why should you go beyond it? It seems to me a clear and reasonable reading of the words in the main section to use the word 'Canada' as defined by the Act itself. If you go outside of these four provinces, you introduce a disturbing element. What had these people, dealing with the readjustment of their own representation, to do with the people that might come into Manitoba or British Columbia? How did that concern the question between themselves? If Ontario and Quebec were jealous of each other, were nervous about the effect of the future upon their relative representation, what had they to do with the number of people that might come into British Columbia, the North-west Territories or the Yukon? These were elements quite outside of the calculation. The definition of the word 'Canada' by the Act is consistent and reasonable with what they were driving at; that is keeping their relative positions, in so far as they could be provided for by Act of parliament. I repeat what other hon. gentlemen have said, that nobody would, especially in the face of the opinion which the hon. Minister of Justice has read, say that there was no doubt upon this question.

There certainly is such a doubt that it would be extremely unsafe to go on and provide for a parliament upon a new basis of representation, perhaps elect a parliament, and leave the question in such a condition that hereafter—when Acts have been passed and corporations created and all sorts of interests dealt with—that we might find that under an appeal of private parties to the Privy Council, that, the highest court, decided that all our procedure was irregular? Where does the need for haste arise? This Act cannot have force until the end of this parliament. This parliament has two or three years to run yet. What is the difficulty about getting the opinion of the highest court in the empire to definitely determine this question so that we shall know where we are. We are asked now to discuss this Bill before we get the opinion of the Supreme Court as if there was some urgency that we must deal with it at this moment or not at all. It seems to me that we are putting the cart before the horse. It would be far better for us to first find what the law is. I presume the Minister of Justice would not refer the question to the Supreme Court unless he thought there might be some doubt about it. After we know the law, let us pass an Act in accordance with our authority. But to go on discussing this Bill, before we know what the decision of the court will be, seems to me to be farcical.

At six o'clock, House took recess.

After Recess.

House resumed at eight o'clock.

Mr. E. A. LANCASTER (Lincoln and Niagara). I desire, Mr. Speaker, to say a few words on this very important measure, and to give the reasons why I feel constrained to oppose the second reading of this Bill. It must be conceded that if this Bill is read a second time, then every principle contained in it is endorsed by this House. If it were not that I have other reasons, I might well content myself with the reasons given by the Minister of Justice this afternoon as a justification for opposing the second reading of this Bill under the existing circumstances. The Minister of Justice told us to-day as clearly as he could state it in language, that the measure is not ripe for second reading, for he declared that there may be some doubt concerning the rights of the parties as declared by this Bill. In view of that statement made by the chief legal adviser of the government, I was somewhat surprised that the right hon. the Prime Minister did not withdraw his motion, and acting upon the advice of his Minister of Justice postpone the second reading of the measure until the rights of the parties were defined by the courts. We are in this position now. We have a very serious constitutional question brought before us. This parliament is asked to legislate in regard to a serious interference with what has been up to this moment the right of four provinces to a certain representation in this House. We are asked by this Bill to say, without any more ado about it, that a change in the representation of these provinces shall be made to their detriment and made at once, and we are asked to declare that, in face of the declaration of the Minister of Justice on the floor of the House: That it is a question which should be decided by the highest court in the land before it is concluded by this parliament as to whether that principle is right or wrong. As has been said by the hon. member for Hamilton (Mr. Barker) : This is putting the cart before the horse. But that is not the worst of it. While the Minister of Justice says that he does not think we ought go far in discussing what the decision of the Supreme Court may be ; we are at the same time told by him that we should go ahead and by giving this Bill a second reading anticipate the decision of the Supreme Court in favour of the Minister's contention. It seems to me that if that were done the Supreme Court would be in a proper position to say to us : Parliament has already decided on the principle of the Bill and why appear idly before us now and ask us whether you did right or wrong. But Mr. Speaker apart from that I have a stronger opinion on this question than even the Minister of Justice has. It is not to be wondered at that two lawyers should not agree ; it is perhaps customary that lawyers, when they are engaged on the opposite side of a case, should not agree ; it is also probable that a Conservative lawyer may not agree with the Minister of Justice in a so called Liberal government. However I do agree with the Minister of Justice that there is not much doubt about this question, but I disagree with him as to where this doubt is. I have given considerable attention to this Bill and I have gone into the Acts and into the history of this matter, and I have been obliged to come to the conclusion that this Bill provides for a wrong principle, and that a reduction in the representation in this parliament of the provinces of Ontario and New Brunswick and Nova Scotia is not warranted by the law as it stands today. I therefore believe that this Bill ought not be read a second time upon its merits, and I believe that, apart altogether from the doubt which the Minister of Justice has said he is going to get the Supreme Court to decide upon, I shall have to ask the indulgence of the House if I again call attention to the provisions of the British North America Act. The first part of the Act to which I shall refer is the one headed 'Union' and bearing the figures II in Roman numerals, being a subdivision of the Act. The heading 'Union' applies from section 3 to section 8 both sections inclusive. Now this heading 'Union' and this subdivision of the Act under that heading, is of considerable importance. The first part provides :

> On and after a day therein appointed, not being more than six months after the passing of this Act, the provinces of Canada, Nova Scotia and New Brunswick shall form and be one Dominion under the name of Canada ; and on and after that day those three provinces shall form and be one Dominion under that name accordingly.

It goes on to say :

> The subsequent provisions of this Act shall, unless it is otherwise expressed or implied, commence and have effect on and after the union, that is to say, on and after the day appointed for the union taking effect in the Queen's proclamation ; and in the same provisions, unless it is otherwise expressed or implied, the name Canada shall be taken to mean Canada as constituted under this Act.

It seems to me with all due deference to the Minister of Justice, that under this British North America Act there is for the purposes of this Act no other constitution of Canada than the province of Ontario, Quebec, New Brunswick and Nova Scotia—the two provinces Ontario and Quebec being known as Canada at that date. It seems to me to be begging very hard for some argument to say that these positive and distinct words 'Canada as constituted under this Act' can mean anything else than what is stated in subsection 3, which says that Canada consists of the four provinces.

We have to ask ourselves what is the next step to take in determining whether this term Canada is to apply to the whole of Canada or to the four provinces for arriving at the number of members for each province. There is one thing which strikes me very forcibly, and which has not yet been referred to. Why does this Act at all say what shall constitute Canada ? What would constitute Canada if this section were not in the Act ? Why, it would simply be, as the hon. Minister of Justice says, whatever Canada may be at the time. But the difference between the Minister of Justice and myself is that I contend that when these words were put in the Act, they were inserted for some purpose. The effect would be altogether different had they been omitted. No lawyer of any experience will say that the putting in of these words was a mere surplusage or meant nothing. If they do not mean what we say they do, they would not be in this Act at all, and then Canada would mean exactly what the hon. Minister of Justice says it does. Canada might mean four provinces or five or six or seven, according to the changing circumstances. But what I submit is that the very fact that these words are put in show a special attention to give a special meaning to the word 'Canada.' It shows that the parliament which passed this Act did not intend that the term 'Canada' should bear the ordinary meaning, but that it should apply for the purpose of readjustment to the four original provinces. Has that been changed or repealed by any proper authority ? There are other provisions in this Act which show that the term Canada is only intended to cover the four original provinces. Take for instance section thirty-seven :

> The House of Commons shall, subject to the provisions of this Act, consist of 181 members, of whom 82 shall be elected for Ontario, 65 for Quebec, 19 for Nova Scotia and 15 for New Brunswick.

And section forty provides :

Until the parliament of Canada otherwise provides, Ontario, Quebec, Nova Scotia and New Brunswick shall, for the purposes of the election of members to serve in the House of Commons, be divided into electoral districts as follows.

The Act does not say that until parliament otherwise provides, the number shall be so and so, but only that the electoral districts shall be so and so. Special power is given to provide for the rearranging of those districts, but no power is given to interfere with the number that shall be elected from each province. Section fifty-one provides that :

On the completion of each decennial census the representation of the four provinces shall be readjusted by such authority in such manner and in such time as the parliament of Canada from time to time provides, subject and according to the following rules.

No language could be stronger. And one of these rules, subsection four, is :

On any such readjustment the number of members for a province shall not be reduced unless the proportion which the number of the population of a province bore to the number of the aggregate population of Canada at the then last preceding readjustment of the number of members for the province is ascertained at the then latest census to be diminished by one-twentieth part or upward.

It is conceded on both sides that if that be applied to Canada, as originally constituted, three of these provinces are entitled to a different representation than is provided for in this Bill. According to section fifty-two :—

The number of members of the House of Commons may be from time to time increased by the parliament of Canada, provided the proportionate representation of the provinces prescribed by this Act is not thereby disturbed.

Thus there is provision for increasing the number of the members. But if a reduction were contemplated, why did not the Act provide that the number should be 'increased or reduced.' There is not a word about any reduction, so that we find on all hands corroboration of the contention put forward by this side of the House, that subsection four of section fifty-one applies only to the four original provinces, and not a word to warrant a different construction being put upon the Act than is to be found in the wording of the Act itself. What has happened since that Act has passed ? Has anything been done by the imperial parliament to disturb the effect of the British North America Act as it applies to those four provinces ? It is contended that addresses have been presented and Orders in Council passed in some cases, and Acts of parliament in others, bringing new partners into the concern. But there was not a word in any of these to show that subsection four of section fifty-one has been amended. Yet if these addresses and Orders in Council were to have the effect claimed for them, subsection four of section fifty-one would have to be amended, and there is no way of amending it except by saying so in the usual and ordinary way. And if the imperial parliament do not see fit to amend section four or to say anything more than that an agreement is made as regards new provinces coming in, how can these addresses and Orders in Council be construed to mean that the original arrangement between the original provinces was to be disturbed in the least ?

The last part of section 146 must be borne in mind in order to keep us right in this matter. It says :

It shall be lawful for the Queen, by and with the advice of Her Majesty's Most Honourable Privy Council, on addresses from the Houses of the parliament of Canada, and from the Houses of the respective legislatures of the colonies or provinces of Newfoundland, Prince Edward Island and British Columbia, to admit those colonies, or provinces, or any of them, into the union, and on address from the Houses of the parliament of Canada to admit either of them, into the union, on such terms and conditions in each case, as are in the addresses expressed and as the Queen thinks fit to approve, subject to the provisions of this Act.

Again 'subject to the provisions of this Act ?' The Act says you can make a bargain with these new provinces and let them in on such terms as you may provide, but always subject to the provisions of this Act, and the provision standing out before everybody is that you shall not reduce the representation of these four provinces except it falls under the condition regarding the one-twentieth part, provided in subsection 4 before quoted.

The hon. Minister of Justice argued that chapter twenty-eight of thirty-four and five Victoria was a doubt removing Act. That is probably not an inapt expression. But what doubt did it remove? It did not remove any doubt upon the question we are debating. I did not pretend to say, for instance, that this subsection 4 would no longer apply. It removed a doubt as to the particular matter being dealt with in the Act. The very fact that it had removed that doubt showed that there was a doubt even then with the authorities in Great Britain as to whether the parliament of Canada had power to do that which compared to what we are being asked to-day to do was a very small matter. I do not think that Act does anything but indirectly strengthen the case made here for the non-reduction of the number to be elected from the three provinces of Ontario, New Brunswick and Nova Scotia. The last section of what the minister calls the doubt-removing Act, says :

Except as provided by the third section of this Act, it shall not be competent for the parliament of Canada to alter the provisions of the last mentioned Act of the said parliament insofar as it relates to the province of Manitoba, or any other Act hereafter established in new provinces in the said Dominion.

Will it be contended that when this says : You shall not, except as provided in the Act and in respect of the small matter with which it deals, interfere with any rights heretofore existing in regard to the province of Manitoba or the new provinces, it impliedly allows you to make ducks and drakes of the legislation bringing into confederation the four provinces of the Dominion of Canada as it at first existed ? It could not, even by the utmost stretch of imagination, be made to accomplish such a result. The parliament of Canada has never asked the imperial parliament to repeal or amend section 4, therefore, we are not in a position to say whether they would or would not repeal it if we asked them. But we know that nothing else that they have been asked to do in regard to the other provinces have they ever done except upon the address of the legislature of the province affected.

I understood the Minister of Justice to say, in answer to a question by the leader of the opposition (Mr. Borden) that, under the Order in Council that had been passed it would be competent for the representation of the province of Quebec to be reduced to any number. If that is so, if he can, by an Act of parliament approved by Order in Council by the imperial government, reduce the representation in the province of Quebec, why cannot he do the same thing under the statute which gives power for the entry into confederation of the territory known at that time as Prince Rupert's Land ? The only difference is in the heading, and that cannot affect the case—let it be called Prince Rupert's Land or Quebec, the effect is the same. There is another thing which, I say with all due deference, the Minister of Justice forgot when giving the opinion which was spoken of in the House this afternoon. He forgot the well-known rule of law with regard to the repeal of statutes. Every lawyer who has studied the matter knows, when the question rises whether a subsequent statute repeals a former one you must 'lean against repugnancy'—you must assume that there is no repeal, unless it is expressly so stated or unless there is no construction which can be found consistent with the belief that there has been no repeal. Let me quote, for the benefit of he Minister of Justice and also for the benefit of the laymen as well as the lawyers of the House, the words of Sir Peter Benson Maxwell, who is acknowledged to be one of the greatest authorities on the construction of statutes. In his latest work, this great writer says—I quote from page 134 :

To impute repugnancy is to impute ignorance or carlessness of expression or confusion of thought ; and not only therefore is repeal by implication not favoured, but any construction involving it is to be rejected in favour of any other which the language will rationally bear.

Mr. LANCASTER.

And he gives several decided cases as authority for this view. At page 136, he says :

When the latter enactment is worded in affirmative terms only without any negative it does not take away the earlier law. The governing principle in all these cases is to construe the Act if possible as reconcilable, and capable of co-existence.

Now, with the indulgence of the House let us apply this principle to the case before us. Here we have an Act showing how the calculation of representation is to be made as between these four provinces. The Minister of Justice says that this is by implication repealed. He does not contend that there has been an express repeal, nor does the right hon. mover (Rt. Hon. Sir Wilfrid Laurier) of the second reading of the Bill. But, because certain Orders in Council, which have the effect of statutes as provided for in the Act, have, or are said to have a certain effect, therefore, you must, by implication read into section 4 'seven' instead of 'four,' and apply it to seven provinces instead of four, or you are not giving the smooth and easy construction required for the purposes of this Bill. But the authority I have quoted makes it clear that if we can find a construction of the two which is consistent with the non-repeal of the earlier statute, we must accept that interpretation. That is why we say that the Act must have the meaning that we give it. We preserve intact the provision with regard to the one-twentieth, and we give full force and effect to the Orders in Council which the minister refers to. The fact is, there was a business going on with these four provinces as partners. The other provinces wanted to come in, and were asked to come in. An arrangement mutually satisfactory was made for them to enter the partnership. It is contended, therefore, that there should not be the same construction of the bargain among the four as between themselves that there would have been if the others had not entered. The better interpretation of the law is that the new provinces should be held to the bargain that they made, leaving the other bargain intact, and so there was no repeal.

Now, with regard to what the Minister of Justice has said as to reducing the representation of the province of Quebec. When the hon. gentleman was speaking I thought : Oh ! shades of provincial rights, where are you. When we hear a minister in the Liberal government contending that the province of Quebec could have its representation reduced by a mere Act of this parliament, and this with the statutes before him showing that the British parliament has refused to make any changes affecting a province without an address from the legislature of that province—

The MINISTER OF JUSTICE. I suppose the hon. gentleman (Mr. Lancaster) does not mean the House to take him seriously when he attributes such a statement to me.

Mr. LANCASTER. I am replying to what I think the result of the hon. gentleman's argument.

The MINISTER OF JUSTICE. I did not understand that.

Mr. LANCASTER. The argument of the Minister of Justice, as I understand it, was that this could be done. I may point out that these new provinces were not allowed by the imperial government to come into confederation except on address from the legislature of the province as well as of the Dominion. But the logical result of the Minister of Justice's argument is that you could interfere with the existing arrangement of the four provinces without an address from the legislature of those four provinces or consulting them in any way. I think the conclusion that we must come to with regard to the whole matter is that, interpreting the British North America Act as we must interpret it, it is not only doubtful, but I am constrained to say that it is clear to me that you have no right to interfere with the arrangement under section 4, you must apply that proportion of one-twentieth to the four provinces. That being so, then, on the merits, this Bill should not be read a second time, but the order should be discharged, the existing arrangement should be left undisturbed and, applying properly this proportion of one-twentieth to the four original provinces, Ontario, Quebec, Nova Scotia and New Brunswick, none of them should be reduced in the number of representatives they send to this House.

Mr. L. P. DEMERS (St. John and Iberville). (Translation.) I desire, Mr. Speaker, to say a few words, in reply to some remarks fallen from the hon. gentleman (Mr. Lancaster) who has just taken his seat. Clearly, my hon. friend has not caught the exact meaning of the statement made by the hon. Minister of Justice (Hon. Mr. Fitzpatrick). I think the question as to whether the representation of the province of Quebec could be reduced by an Act of this parliament has never seriously been raised by any member of this House.

I agree with the hon. gentleman that the Liberal party has always championed provincial rights. I wish also to express my entire accord in his remarks, when he said that the provinces having entered into partnership, the British North America Act is a treaty which ought to be fairly carried out by all those who were parties to it.

The province of Quebec agreed that she should have a fixed representation of sixty-five members, provided that the representation of the other provinces should be reduced in the event of their population becoming proportionally less considerable than the population of Quebec. In 1872, as also in 1882 and in 1892, the province of Quebec has cheerfully concurred in the enforcement of the compact it had been a party to in 1867. It is most regrettable that the hon. gentlemen opposite should seek to put a different construction on that Act, now that it becomes incumbent upon parliament to reduce the representation of a sister province. As the hon. Minister of Justice explained this afternoon, the soundness of the view taken by the government cannot be questioned. Section 4, upon which hon. gentlemen opposite have dwelt at length with such evident relish, is not so obscure as they pretend. The last part of that section provides :

> And in the same provisions, unless it is otherwise expressed or implied, the name Canada shall be taken to mean Canada as constituted under this Act.

Now, I appeal to any hon. gentleman who has read the British North America Act whether, in any part of this Act, the word 'Canada' does not cover all the provinces that may join confederation ? But let us look at the preamble of the Act, which is as follows :

> Whereas the provinces of Canada, Nova Scotia and New Brunswick have expressed their desire to be federally united into one Dominion under the Crown of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, with a constitution similar in principle to that of the United Kingdom.

Clearly, sir, in this peamble of the Act, Canada means only the province of Ontario and the province of Quebec which were then known, in virtue of the Union Act, under the name of the province of Canada. Prior to confederation, the term Canada applied only to Ontario and Quebec. But under section 4, the word Canada has a much wider meaning as shown by the concluding words of that section :

> Unless it is otherwise expressed or implied, the name Canada shall be taken to mean Canada as constituted under this Act.

That is to say, the union formed under the new constitution. When the word Canada does not cover that union, it means Canada such as is understood in the preamble of the Act.

Then, in section four, it says :

> The subsequent provisions of this Act shall, unless it is otherwise expressed or implied, commence and have effect on and after the union, that is to say, on and after the day appointed for the union taking effect . . . . . .

Section 146 enacts that the provinces, which have later on joined confederation, may be admitted into the union, subject to the provisions of this Act. Now, from the very moment those provinces were let in, it was under section 4 that they came in. True, there was a special treaty entered into between those provinces, but apart altogether from such treaty, supposing, for instance, that the entry of Manitoba only had been provided for, section 4 says that that province may be admitted into confederation subject to the provisions of the British North America Act; and therefore it came in under section 4. Sections 4 and 146 should be construed as forming a whole.

Now, with the indulgence of the House, I shall urge but one objection to the arguments advanced by the opposition. They pretend that a contract or partnership has been entered into, but the province of Quebec was also one of the contracting parties. It should be borne in mind that the province of Quebec agreed to having a fixed representation of sixty-five members, but it is but fair that it should be given a compensation, and that the other provinces should have their representation reduced. It is a policy of give and take. That was a well understood principle from the very outset, as shown by subsection 2 of section 51 which says :

> There shall be assigned to each of the other provinces such a number of members as will bear the same proportion to the number of its population (ascertained at such census) as the number 65 bears to the number of the population of Quebec—(so ascertained).

So, if there was anything in the minds of the fathers of confederation it was that representation was to be based on population. Such was the principle adopted at the time. Quebec was to have sixty-five members and the other provinces were to be given a proportionate number. Such was the system adhered to by the framers of confederation.

The hon. member of Lincoln (Mr. Lancaster) has also referred to the interpretation of treaties. But he should not forget that treaties must be interpreted as against the stipulating party. Now, it is agreed that as the province of New Brunswick has not the required population, it cannot rightly claim more members than the number which the government contemplate allotting to the province. Were the matter open to doubt the province should not be given, the benefit of the doubt ; but, on the contrary, the treaty should be construed conformably to common law, that is to say, in favour of the main clause of the contract, instead of the exception.

Hon. JOHN HAGGART (South Lanark). It is with a good deal of diffidence that I approach the discussion of this question. The right hon. gentleman stated in introducing this Bill that it was his intention to bring in a measure which would be submitted to both parties in this House to agree upon. He stated that he was following English precedent, and especially the doctrine laid down by him and his followers when they were in opposition, when they declared that if they had an opportunity of introducing a Redistribution Bill it would be drawn on those lines and would be perfectly fair, a Bill which ought to be acceptable to all parties in the House. The Bill introduced by the right hon. gentleman and his statement in introducing it led me to believe that the Bill would be submitted to a committee, a majority of which would have an opportunity of framing and reporting the Bill to the House. The principle adopted in England has been set forth by my hon. friend the leader of the opposition. He has shown that the English Bill was the result of a conference, which consisted on behalf of the opposition of Lord Salisbury and Sir Stafford Northcote. They met time and again in the Privy Council. The question that arose was as to the number of members which should be assigned to England, the number to Scotland and the number to Ireland. They also had to decide the principle as to whether a suburban population should be attached to a rural population, and they decided the principle that a suburban population should be attached to the cities and an urban population should remain with the counties. The conference decided upon all the leading principles of the Bill, they fixed the unit of representation for England, for Scotland and for Ireland, the unit for the counties and the unit for the cities ; all the leading principles of the Bill were agreed upon by the conference, and then it was referred to the committee for the purpose of delimiting the various ridings. As my hon. friend the leader of the opposition stated, that committee consisted of gentlemen from different sections of the country. They had as asistants officers of the Royal Engineers, and they made a delimitation to which no objection could possibly be taken. If I understand the right hon. gentleman, he intends that a conference, composed of members whom he may select and whom the opposition may select, should settle the principles which should be adopted in the delimitation of the different constituencies. That is perfectly fair, we were perfectly willing to accept that proposition. Viewing the conference as representing the principles laid down by the opposition in 1892, as interpreted by the Hon. Mr. Davies, by the Hon. Mr. Mills and by Mr. Dalton McCarthy, it was to be a conference designed to come to a mutual agreement, the same as the English conference in 1884, which settled the principles upon which the delimitation was to take place. The right hon. gentleman in introducing this Bill is fixing the number of representatives for the different provinces. I suppose he does not intend on the second reading to include that principle. As I understood him, the question as to whether we are to have a reduced representation in Ontario is to be left with the Supreme Court to decide.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). Ontario and the maritime provinces.

Hon. Mr. HAGGART. I understood that the question as to whether Ontario, New Brunswick and Prince Edward Island were to be affected in their present representation was to be left to the Supreme Court to decide ; that is, the interpretation of clause 51 and the correlative clauses was to be left to the Supreme Court. If that is the case, he cannot expect us to approve of the principle of the Bill, and to say that Ontario should have a certain number of representatives, and the same with the other provinces except Quebec. He cannot expect us to vote for the second reading of the Bill affirming the principles which the Minister of Justice says are the governing principles in the Redistribution Act, on which we take issue, and which we understand from the right hon. gentleman are the questions that are to be submitted to the court. But if these clauses fixing the number of members are eliminated from the Bill, I do not see that we can have any objection on this side of the House to a second reading, providing that the Bill does not become law until the Supreme Court has decided whether Ontario, New Brunswick and Prince Edward Island must submit to a decreased representation.

The British North America Act is the charter and constitution of this Dominion. We have no power to decide whether any Act of ours infringes upon it. The parties who are the custodians of that Act are the imperial authorities and their representative here, the Governor General. He has exercised that authority already on the Oaths Bill. When any question arises as to whether the legislation of this parliament is ultra vires of the British North America Act, I consider that it is the duty of the Governor General to consult the law officers of the Crown in England. For these reasons, I feel a double security. I feel a security in the promise which the right hon. gentleman has made to us that the question will be submitted to the Supreme Court; I also feel a security in the fact that the imperial authorities and the Governor General of Canada are the custodians of the British North America Act, who are to decide as to whether any legislation of ours is outside the corners of that Act.

Now let me refer to the question which is particularly before the House as to whether there is the right to deprive Ontario or New Brunswick of the number of members which they at present send as representatives to this House. I do so with a good deal of diffidence. I am of the opinion of the hon. Minister of Justice that when the British North America Act was passed it contemplated the present and it contemplated the future, but I will ask the hon. Minister of Justice what is the meaning of clause 8 in that British North America Act in which it states that the four provinces of Canada shall have a separate census taken and then I shall deal with clause 51 of the Act. My contention is that clause 51 of the British North America Act has no application to any of the provinces which might be in future added to the Dominion, that its application is solely and only to the four provinces and that if an Act of parliament is passed by the imperial authorities on addresses from this House and addresses from the different provinces asking that the provisions of the Act shall apply to the different provinces coming into confederation clause 51 would not apply at all. I doubt very much if the Supreme Court, or any lawyer throughout the country, would give the opinion that unless clause 51 is especially mentioned it would apply in connection with the redistribution after any decennial census to any province or territory added to the Dominion of Canada. Let us read the wording of the Act. Clause 51 says:

> On the completion of the census in the year one thousand eight hundred and seventy-one, and of each subsequent decennial census, the representation of the four provinces shall be readjusted by such authority, in such manner, and from such time as the parliament of Canada from time to time provides.

What is the meaning of 'Canada' in that Act? I will admit the correctness of the opinion of the hon. Minister of Justice that it is Canada as constituted at the time of the passage of the Act. There is no doubt whatever about it that the parliament of Canada could not mean the members of this House representing the four provinces of the Dominion, but that it must apply to the whole 'Dominion of Canada.' Then, we have this governing clause:

> On any such readjustment the number of members for a province shall not be reduced unless the proportion which the number of the population of the province bore to the number of the aggregate population of Canada at the then last preceding readjustment of the number of members for the province is ascertained at the then latest census to be diminished by one twentieth part or upwards.

The hon. Minister of Justice says that 'Canada' within the meaning of that clause refers to Canada whatever it is at the time the readjustment is made and to back up his opinion he reads the opinion of Mr. Christopher Robinson, of Toronto. On that point I would remind the hon. Minister of Justice of the delicacy that he had in arguing the question when he said that he did not like to discuss the question in full because he did not like to lead the Supreme Court upon the question. But, he has no delicacy in reading the opinion of Mr. Christopher Robinson in support of his contention and it never struck him that he might possibly lead the Supreme Court into forming an opinion in reference to the matter.

The MINISTER OF JUSTICE. Not at all.

Hon. Mr. HAGGART. On that point the whole argument of the hon. Minister of Justice is that 'Canada' comprises the Dominion as at present existing between the Atlantic and the Pacific. Unfortunately for his argument he admitted that the North-west Territories did not come within the meaning of the word 'Canada.' Why does not 'Canada' comprise the North-west Territories? The application of this clause was intended to the four provinces of Canada and 'Canada' under the meaning of the clause could not mean anything else than the four provinces at that time. The parliament of Canada may redistribute the representation of the four provinces and if my argument is correct unless clause 51 of the British North America Act is specifically mentioned as applicable to the provinces or territories coming in it would have no application at all. The application is solely and only to the four provinces mentioned and the strongest support of my contention is the statement of the hon. Minister of Justice that the North-west Territories did not form part of Canada as at present constituted. The hon. gentleman risks his reputation; he says that he has no doubt as to the opinion of the Supreme Court in the matter. He fortifies his position with the opinion of Mr. Christopher Robinson. I, a layman, perhaps, should not speak particularly of the interpretation of an Act of parliament or statute, but I am clearly of a different way of thinking. I understand the meaning of the English language, I understand the meaning of the surroundings of the British North America Act. This was a bargain between the four provinces entering into confederation and the representation either increased or decreased, was to be governed by a proportion between them. The hon. Minister of Justice says that on addresses from this House and on addresses from the provinces or territories coming into confederation, the governing power in England, the King, can, by Order in Council, within the four corners of the British North America Act, or if nothing is contradictory or against the tenor of the British North America Act, admit these provinces into the Dominion. That is true, and it becomes as solemn as an Act of parliament can be but when he was faced by the question of my hon. friend the leader of the opposition (Mr. Borden, Halifax): Supposing there was a bargain with Newfoundland for the purpose of securing her admission to the confederation by which Newfoundland would have an abnormal representation could he make it a part of the bargain that the representation of Ontario and of Quebec and of New Brunswick should be decreased ?—the hon. Minister of Justice said 'yes.' It becomes, he said, in fact, an imperial Act of parliament and if upon an address from us an imperial Order in Council is passed and receives the sanction of the King we can reduce even the representation of Quebec three or four members. I contend there is no such power vested in the imperial authorities.

The MINISTER OF JUSTICE. Oh.

Hon. Mr. HAGGART. The hon. gentleman gives a power to the imperial parliament which would never be submitted if the imperial parliament had that power. He says that as a matter of law the British North America Act could be altered from time to time by the imperial parliament. It may be so but when a constitution is once given to a country the imperial parliament will not interfere. I doubt very much if they have the power of doing it unless when a rebellion, or a revolution or a reconquest of the country occurs. I heard that doctrine laid down long ago by as able a lawyer as the hon. Minister of Justice, the Hon. Ed. Blake in this House and he held that once a constitution is given to a country there is no power, even under the imperial authority, to diminish or lessen that constitution without the consent of the country to which the authority is given.

Hon. Mr. TARTE. Hear, hear.

Hon. Mr. HAGGART. And the power to limit such a constitution is only exercised in the most extreme cases such as for instance in the case of a revolution. I am glad to say, although possibly the reports in the newspapers may have been wrong, that when there was a question in the old country in regard to doing away with the constitution of Cape Colony all the representatives at the colonial conference protested against anything of the kind being done for the reason that they did not know when it would perhaps occur to themselves. The principle I lay down is that although the power may be there I doubt very much if it can be exercised except under extraordinary circumstances, that once they grant a constitution to a country they have no power to revoke it without cause. I contend that the clause in regard to representation has no effect upon or no application to any province or territory which is admitted into Canada unless it is specially asked for. The imperial authorities on an address from this House, admitted Rupert's Land into the Dominion. They passed an imperial Act of parliament giving it representation in the Dominion parliament. Does the Minister of Justice contend that they could pass an Act of parliament limiting the representation of Canada under the British North America Act, or increasing the representation of Rupert's Land, without the consent of Canada. If he admits that principle, then if ever we think that Quebec has too much influence in the Dominion, all we have to do is to pass an address to the imperial authorities asking for an Act of parliament to reduce the representation of Quebec. The Minister of Justice seems to have set aside the legal opinions in his department altogether. In support of my view in reference to clause 51 having no application to provinces or territories afterwards admitted into the Dominion I wish to read a couple of clauses from an Order in Council passed by Sir John Macdonald and on which the Imperial Act of 1871 was passed. It says :

The general purview of the British North America Act of 1867 seems to be confined to the three provinces of Canada, Nova Scotia and New Brunswick originally forming the Dominion. In the constitution of the Senate, the Dominion was divided into three divisions, each division having equal representation in that body. In like manner the clauses of this Act relating to the constitution of the House of Commons give a certain proportional representation to the provinces originally constituting the Dominion, and make no reference to the increase in numbers or any addition to the territorial domain. There is in the Act no provision whatever for the representation in the House of Commons of Rupert's Land or the North-west Territories or British Columbia.

The Minister of Justice argues that because we pass an address to the imperial authorities, with respect to a new body coming into the Dominion, be it a province or be it a territory; the conditions of the address being approved by His Majesty the King, it becomes part of the British North America Act, and so they may reduce the representation set forth in the agreement between the original four provinces. Do I understand the Minister of Justice rightly in that?

The MINISTER OF JUSTICE. I do not quite understand my hon. friend (Hon. Mr. Haggart). Of course he realizes that there is a difference between the case of a territory which has no representative institutions, and the case of a province. In the case of a territory the Dominion parliament has jurisdiction to bring the territory in. With respect to a province having representative institutions, it is entirely different. In that case there must be an address from the province that seeks entrance into the Dominion and there must be an address from the Dominion parliament. Both these addresses from the province coming in and from the Dominion parliament must go to the imperial authorities, and there by Order in Council sanctioning the address the province is allowed in upon the terms fixed in the address. The address of course must be in the same terms from the province and from the Dominion. In these terms the imperial order is passed, and has the effect of imperial legislation. My hon. friend (Hon. Mr. Haggart) was good enough to give us his opinion a moment ago with respect to imperial legislation, and perhaps he will allow me to read from Jenkins, who is something of an authority on this point:

> The legislative supremacy of parliament over the whole of the British domain is complete and undoubted in law.

And there is no lawyer in parliament who would say to the contrary.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). There is no doubt at all as to the technical power of the imperial parliament; there is no doubt as to the technical power of the King of Great Britain and Ireland to disallow a Bill, but the Minister of Justice knows that constitutional writers distinguish between the technical power and the constitutional right. Therefore, it is said that although the King of Great Britain has the technical power to disallow Acts of parliament he has not the constitutional right; and his doing so after the lapse of 200 years might provoke a revolution in a great emergency. Therefore, while the imperial parliament might exercise its power to make a tariff for us to-morrow, because it has the technical power to do so, that is a different thing altogether from the constitutional right; and it was on the question of constitutional right that my hon. friend from Lanark (Hon. Mr. Haggart) was addressing himself. While I am on my feet, I might with the indulgence of the House mention to the Minister of Justice a consideration which has been addressed from this side and which he has perhaps not fully appreciated. He has said that it would be quite possible, by means of addresses passed by the provinces and by this parliament upon the admission of these provinces, to so far alter the effect of the British North America Act as to reduce the representation of the province of Quebec which is definitely fixed and stated in that Act. Now, I submit to the Minister of Justice that that would lead to a very extraordinary condition of affairs, if his argument is pursued to its logical conclusion, and for this reason: So far as Rupert's Land is concerned there is to be no address from Rupert's Land because Rupert's Land possesses no representative institutions. Rupert's Land was to be admitted on an address from no other body than from the House of parliament of Canada. The statute says:

> And on address from the Houses of parliament of Canada to admit Rupert's Land and the North-west Territory.

Then the British North America Act of 1886 was passed giving power to this parliament to deal with the representation of Rupert's Land; and the point to which I invite the attention of the minister is this—he says that by means of this address, coupled with the Queen's proclamation you can cut down the representation of the province of Quebec. I do not agree with the Minister of Justice at present; I may change my mind upon further consideration; but if his argument is correct, does it not lead to this inevitable conclusion: You have so far as Rupert's Land is concerned the address of the Houses of the parliament of Canada plus the Imperial Act of 1886 giving power to deal with the representation of that territory. Therefore, the address of the Houses of the parliament of Canada, which made no provision for representation of the Territories and Rupert's Land, plus the Imperial Act of 1886, should place this parliament in the same position as that which the Minister of Justice has already indicated. In other words, it seems to me it would logically follow from his argument that this parliament, under the imperial statute of 1886 in providing from time to time for the representation of the North-west Territories, could deal with the representation of Ontario or Quebec or the maritime provinces. It seems to be that that would logically result from the argument of the Minister of Justice with which, however, I do not agree. I say this, because the addresses with respect to Rupert's Land, plus the Imperial Act of 1886, are exactly equivalent to the address from the Dominion and from the province of Prince Edward Island for example, plus the Queen's proclamation. I would think that possibly the argument which the Minister of Justice made in that regard may lead to a very awkward result if carried as far as I suggest.

The MINISTER OF JUSTICE. I do not think that we can debate the question quite fully at the present time. We will have occasion to debate it before the Supreme Court, and I will have to discuss it in the House of Commons again, but I do not wish to be misrepresented on any statement of law.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). I certainly have no desire to misrepresent the hon. gentleman.

The MINISTER OF JUSTICE. What I said was that the legislative supremacy of parliament was undoubted. That is what I said, and when my hon. friends come to look up 'Hansard' they will see I guarded myself by saying that it was extremely doubtful if any attempt to legislate in that direction would be made. The right to legislate is undoubted. That is the statement I made, and that is the statement I repeat, and that is the statement that no lawyer will venture to doubt.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). I do not know whether I am a lawyer or not, but I would venture to doubt it.

Hon. Mr. HAGGART. My argument was from the constitutional point of view, that the imperial authorities had no right at all to interfere with our constitution. The Minister of Justice said they had, and the application of his argument was that when the addresses and Order in Council received the sanction of the Queen, they became part of the British North America Act or the imperial law and affected our position to that extent. I pointed out that addresses from the different provinces coming into the Dominion and the addresses from the Dominion to the imperial authorities, if approved by the Sovereign, might alter the representation of the four provinces under the bargain which we make with a new province coming into the union. I state here, and it cannot be contradicted, that if it were not for the admission of the North-west Territories and Manitoba into this Dominion, the number of representatives in this parliament from the province of Ontario would not be diminished at all. Therefore our representation is affected by the bargain which we make with the different provinces entering into the Dominion. I say that there was no such intention in the British North America Act. That Act bears no such meaning. Section 51 applies solely to the four provinces which originally constituted confederation and it is solely to the readjustment of the representation of these provinces to which that section applies. Then what can be the meaning of the term 'Canada' so far as this clause 51 is concerned? As regards the readjustment of the representation of these four original provinces, the term can be held to cover but them alone. Notwithstanding the argument of the hon. Minister of Justice and the opinion of the eminent lawyer, Mr. Christopher Robinson, of Toronto, I am still convinced, following the opinion of my old leader, the late Sir John Macdonald, that this clause 51 in the British North America Act has no reference at all to the future new provinces of Canada, and that unless it is specially provided in the Acts authorizing the admission of new provinces into the Dominion, that this section 51 shall apply to them, it must be held to be restricted to the four original provinces.

The right hon. gentleman the First Minister in introducing his Bill the other day, said, in reply to my hon. friend (Mr. Borden), who drew his attention to a telegram from the hon. Minister of Railways to the legislature of New Brunswick, that he intended to press the Bill, that he had no doubt as to the law on the question, and that he was only following the principles laid down in 1882 and 1892. But there was no such principle at issue in 1882 or in 1892 as we are contending for now. The question then was not raised. It did not enter as an issue at all. It could not have any application at all, and the right hon. gentleman cannot take any authority from anything that was done in 1882 or in 1892, inasmuch as the one-twentieth provision in subsection four of section fifty-one did not affect the position of any of the provinces at that time.

I have looked very carefully into the provisions of the British North America Act. I was at first impressed by the opinion of the Minister of Justice that subsection four of section fifty-one referred to Canada as it is constituted at present, but looking at all the surroundings of the Act and having regard especially for the opinion cited by my hon. friend from Hamilton (Mr. Barker) of Sir Henry Strong on the subject, I am convinced that section fifty-one was not at all intended to apply to the provinces or territories to be subsequently admitted. The principles which are laid down by Sir Henry Strong, I think, apply particularly to that clause :—

In construing this enactment, the British North America Act, we are not only entitled but bound to apply that well established rule which requires us, in passing upon the descriptive terms or definitions contained in a statute, to have recourse to the external aid derived from the surrounding circumstances and the history of the subject.

The history of the subject and the surrounding circumstances. Mr. Speaker—that opinion of Sir John Macdonald and his memo. to council upon the subject—point clearly to the conclusion that section fifty-one of the British North America Act was intended to apply only to the four provinces which originally constituted confederation. It is true that by special arrangement with the new provinces entering confederation and forming now part of the Dominion, section fifty-one is made specially to apply to them, but in every address, enactment and Act of parliament governing their admission, it is specially provided that the rule laid down in section fifty-one shall apply to their representation, except in the case of British Columbia, one of the conditions of whose entrance into the Dominion was that in no event was its representation to be reduced. But what I protest against most of all is that by an address of this House, or of this House and any of the provinces combined, to the imperial authority, power should be given to the British parliament to reduce the representation granted by the solemn compact, under which they formed confederation, to the provinces of Quebec, New Brunswick, Nova Scotia and Prince Edward Island.

Mr. A. A. LEFURGEY (East Prince, P. E. I.) The hon. Minister of Justice has said that viewing Prince Edward Island from the contentions put forward this afternoon regarding Nova Scotia, New Brunswick and Ontario, she was out of court. But, Mr. Speaker, we contend that Prince Edward Island's case is a special one and a much stronger and entirely different case from that put forward by the other provinces.

Mr. Speaker, we object to the principles of this Bill insofar as it does not remedy the wrong done to the province of Prince Edward Island in violating the special compact under which she entered the union and taking away, contrary to the special terms, the status of representation of six members given at that time and treating her as coming in under the general terms of representation as applies to provinces entering under the British North America Act of 1867.

At the time of redistribution of 1891 a false interpretation was put upon the clause re our representation, and we object against that being recognized in this Bill and still further wronging her in again reducing her representation in giving her four instead of the original six with which she entered and perpetuating an erroneous and unjust principle which will eventually take away the entire political entity of a province that before confederation enjoyed to the full the principles of a self-governed colony.

The objection to the principles of representation by population as regards Prince Edward Island, except as I shall hereafter point out, is general throughout the Island and maritime provinces by parties of both political leanings.

At the opening of the provincial legislature on March 19, 1903, the Lieutenant Governor referred to this matter of representation as follows :—

> The claims of this province that its representation under British North America Act, in the Dominion House of Commons should not be reduced below the number of members conceded to it at the time of our entry into confederation, have been pressed upon the federal government by my premier and representatives of my administration, and I feel confident that the province will be given an opportunity to establish its rights in this respect.

And the mover of the address in reply to the speech from the Throne spoke strongly on this matter. His opening remarks were:—

> We now come to the question of representation, this is to-day a most important question. In the very near future the Dominion parliament will be called on to discuss a redistribution Bill, and the House would be derelict in its duty if it should allow the central government to perpetrate another such error as inflicted on this province in 1891 without the strongest protests.
>
> A false interpretation was put upon our terms of union by the Dominion government, the words : 'the representation to be re-adjusted from time to time, under the provisions of the British North America Act 1867' were torn from their context and made to do duty as law. Mr. Speaker, these words do not apply, and never have applied to this province by right—it was an iniquity and we should deny it and defy it.
>
> What, Sir, are the principles laid down in the various Acts of confederation ; is there one essential principle or are there two distinct standards of representation, let us see. In 1864 a basis of confederation was adopted by the Quebec conference, in which the principle of representation was laid down, that principle was accepted after a time by the provinces of Ontario, Quebec, New Brunswick and Nova Scotia, but it was not accepted by us. We stood out for another standard and after a long fight we succeeded in securing a representation of six members for 95,000 of a population; this, Sir, is quite another rule, and it is a rule or principle that has been acknowledged, accepted and applied to other provinces before and since that time, notably to Manitoba and British Columbia. One of the greatest obstacles to the scheme of confederation with this Island was the insistence of the Canadian statesmen that representation by population should be part of the terms, while our people were quite as isistent on having not less than six members regardless of population.

In the first place, I do not believe that the principle of representation by population is found within the four corners of the confederation document. And, so far as regards the reduction of the representation of Prince Edward Island, this was not intended if Prince Edward Island maintained the population with which she entered confederation—95,857. And I think this clause giving her representation of six members and the interpreting clause fully carry out this idea. To follow the unit of representation as in Quebec with 65 members would render the whole scheme with regard to Prince Edward Island absurd. Because, if Quebec were as thickly populated as Prince Edward Island, we should have 65-152 of a unit of representation, because Quebec is 152 times as large as Prince Edward Island. We would not have half the population to make up one unit of representation, and so we should be deprived of representation altogether. It is absurd to suppose that such a thing could have been intended when Prince Edward Island entered confederation. Then, there are the reports of the Quebec Conference and the speeches in the local legislature repudiating representation by population; and, finally, we have a telegram, just before the close of the conference, admitting Prince Edward Island to the union and confirming a representation of six members as its representatives had been asking for. It was five years after the formation of the union of the provinces of Upper and Lower Canada, New Brunswick and Nova Scotia, that Prince Edward Island joined the union, having remained out up to that time for causes to which I shall refer later. Prince Edward Island came in under section 146 of the British North America Act, which provides the terms under which Prince Edward Island, Newfoundland and other provinces might enter—that is, on addresses by the province and the Dominion, and the passing of an imperial Order in Council which would have the effect of law.

The clause of the British North America Act reads as follows :

It shall be lawful for the Queen, by and with the advice of Her Majesty's Most Honourable Privy Council, on addresses from the Houses of the Parliament of Canada, and from the Houses of the respective legislatures of the colonies or provinces of Newfoundland, Prince Edward Island, and British Columbia, to admit those colonies or provinces, or any of them into the union, and on address from the Houses of Parliament of Canada to admit Rupert's Land and the North Western Territory, or either of them, into the union, on such terms and conditions in each case as are in the addresses expressed and as the Queen thinks fit to approve, subject to the provisions of this Act ; and the provisions of any Order in Council in that behalf shall have effect as if they had been enacted by the parliament of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland.

The Order in Council admitting Prince Edward Island was passed on the 26th of June, 1873, declaring that Prince Edward Island be admitted and become part of the Dominion of Canada upon the terms and conditions set forth in the addresses. The clauses in these addresses of the different Houses to the Sovereign regarding representation is as follows :

That the population of Prince Edward Island having been increased by 15,000 or upwards since the year 1861, the island shall be represented in the House of Commons by six members ; the representation to be readjusted from time to time under the provision of the British North America Act, 1867.

This plea is made on the belief that, under this clause Prince Edward Island is justly entitled to retain the six members with which it came into the union, and given under this clause, and that the reduction in 1892, and the further contemplated reduction now, are contrary to the direct terms under which the island came into the union. I think this will be very clearly seen upon an intelligent interpretation of the Act, and from the manifest intention of the parties negotiating the terms, which intention, to my mind, should weigh greatly with this House, particularly when it comes to unjust interference with such paramount rights as the representation of a province in the House of Commons in Canada which will create and I know is creating, a great deal of dissatisfaction among the people of Prince Edward Island.

Now, to go back to the Quebec conference of 1864, where the different representatives of different provinces met to discuss the terms of confederation we find that the insurmountable difficulty in the way of Prince Edward Island entering the union was the matter of representation. The position which our delegates took at that convention was firm and decided. They realized what that union might mean in the matter of representation to a small province and one very thickly populated in proportion to the rest of the Dominion, as Prince Edward Island was at that time. They insisted that the system of representation by population should not be applied to so small a province with no territory to enlarge her borders, no mines, and cut off from the mainland by a barrier of ice which would interfere with the development of manufacturing industries on the island. They insisted on six members as a status before Prince Edward Island should enter the union. They further contended that Prince Edward Island, having three counties should have two members for each county. These counties had been established for many years, and each had its own institutions and should have equal representation in the House, two members for each. In proof of what I am saying I shall take the liberty of reading from Joseph Pope's Confederation Documents, extracts from the speeches of our representatives to the Quebec conference. At page 68 of the documents, I find the following :

Mr. HAVILAND. Prince Edward Island would rather be out of confederation than consent to this motion. We should have no status. Only 5 members out of 194 would give the island no position.

Mr. TILLEY. That is rather a singular ground of objection, for they have objected to the basis of representation by population. Now it was fully understood at Charlottetown that those who came to the conference expected representation by population. Some difficulty might have arisen on those points, but not on this.

Mr. PALMER. Representation by population is not applicable when a certain number of provinces are throwing their resources into one confederation and giving up their own self-government and individuality. When a colony surrenders that right she should have something commensurate in the confederation. The debt of Prince Edward Island is nothing. Our taxation is vastly below that of other provinces. Our trade and revenue are rapidly increasing. Why give up so great a certainty for an uncertain benefit where we have only a feeble voice ? Looking first at the larger provinces, Canada has secured for herself a greater number of representatives than she had before. . . . Not even two or three more members could induce me to give my consent to the scheme. I never understood that any proposition at Charlottetown was to be binding by representation by population. It was there made by those from Canada and I do not think it necessary to remark on it as it was a mere suggestion then thrown out by Canada for consideration.

Mr. WHELAN. I do not think, however, I could say that I was satisfied with the representation of five in the federal House of Commons. We are in an isolated condition. Our resources are large and our people would not be content to give up their present benefits for their representation of five members. It may be said that the confederation will go on without Prince Edward Island and that we shall be eventually forced in. Better, however, that, than that we should willingly go into the confederation with that representation.

COLONEL GRAY. I am instructed by my co-delegates to say that the provision of five members is unsatisfactory. Prince Edward Island is divided longitudinally into three counties, each returning ten members. But they are always opposed to change of representation. We cannot divide the three counties into five members.

Mr. COLES. Mr. Galt had proposed six members for Prince Edward Island. I approved that rather than Mr. Brown's motion, because it allows us to give to our three counties two members each.

Mr. POPE. I agree in all that has been said by Colonel Gray and Mr. Coles. But the circumstances of Prince Edward Island are such that I hope the conference will agree to give us such a number as we can divide amongst our three constituencies. Nature as well as the original settlement of the island has made three counties and would give rise to much difficulties and if we had to adjust five members to the three counties. I cannot ask it as a matter of right but one of expediency and one without which it is impossible for us to carry the measure in Prince Edward Island.

Mr. HAVILAND. I fully agree with Mr. Pope. It would be an insuperable difficulty with us if we had not six members.

Now, will any hon. member of this House deny that the plain intent of these delegates was that the island should be represented by six members as a condition precedent to entering the union ? And is it not perfectly apparent that their intention was to safeguard the interests of the province by a representation in the House of Commons that would not fall below six members so long as we retained the status of 95,000 population ? The asking for two for each county was not intended as a temporary arrangement until the next census, but that they should always be represented by two. The arguments used then have greater force at this time as regards giving us a respectable status in the House. A small province with a stationary population in a large and growing confederacy, our voting power becomes less; and I contend that the principles for which our people fought so long, standing out from 1864 to 1873, should not be so easily filched from us to-day. These terms of union were discussed in the local legislature in several sessions following. To show the members of this House that the delegates at the conference had the full approval of the local legislature, I shall again take the opportunity of quoting from some of the discussions. I apologize to the House for taking up its time, but this is a matter of paramount importance to Prince Edward Island, and I think it necessary that the intention of the parties to confederation should be well known in order that the government may be guided thereby before they finally adopt such a principle as that laid down in the Bill. Speaking on a resolution introduced by the Colonial Secretary in favour of the Quebec terms, and which was overwhelmingly lost on division, the Hon. J. C. Pope said :

It is proper to notice some of the objectionable features of the report. Without admitting the principle of representation according to population under all circumstances to be sound, it is, in the opinion of this House, particularly objectionable as applied to this island in connection with Canada, taking into consideration that the number of our inhabitants is, and must continue comparatively small, owing to the fact that we have no Crown lands, mines, minerals or other resources sufficient to induce immigrants to settle here, and that we never can expect to become to any extent a manufacturing people, in consequence of our navigation being closed for nearly half the year, and all trade and communication with other countries stopped. Under this principle, the city of Montreal alone would at the present time, have a representation greater than the whole province of Prince Edward Island, and under the provisions of the convention which regulate the mode of readjusting the relative representation of the various provinces at each decennial census, looking at the rapid increase of the population of Upper and Lower Canada heretofore—particularly the former—and the certainty of a still greater increase therein in the future, over that of the population of this island, it follows as a certain and inevitable consequence, if a federation of the provinces were consummated upon the basis of the said convention, that the number of our representatives would, in the course of a comparatively short number of years, be diminished to a still smaller number than that allotted at the outset to us.

It seems to me that it is a perfectly plain statement from the leader of the government and shows that the concession of six members was a condition precedent, and could only have been six in perpetuity, for Mr. Pope fully realized that at the next census our representation according to population would be reduced, as has been actually the case. Mr. Pope further said :

Among these objections I may mention the principle of representation by population.

Speaking of Quebec he says :

Its statistics warrant the belief that in a few years the population will be so increased by the influx of the tide of immigration that the island would lose in the halls of legislation even the small voice which she might raise at her entrance into the union.

The Hon. Mr. Howland, speaking on the same subject, said :

In the seventeenth paragraph of the report we are told, 'The basis of representation in the House of Commons shall be population, as determined by the official census every ten years; and the number of members at first shall be 194. Of this number Upper Canada is to have 82, and Lower Canada 65—in all for Canada 147. The remainder of the 194 is distributed as follows : Nova Scotia, 19; New Brunswick, 15; Newfoundland, 8; Prince Edward Island, 5—in all for the lower provinces, 47. By this arrangement it will be seen that Canada will have 100 representatives in the House of Commons more than the aggregate of all the other colonies. Representation by population might be very well for Canada herself, but in a general union of the colonies it would operate injuriously for the maritime provinces, as they could not expect to protect their interests when they would have to contend with 100 of a clear majority over their own representation. This principle would give the city of Montreal with its 101,000 inhabitants one representative more than this island. Quite different is the representation of Great Britain, for while London has about the same population as Scotland, that city has only 16 members in the House of Commons, while Scotland has 53. But it may be argued that as our population increases our representation will increase. This is very doubtful. Indeed under the operation of the twentieth and twenty-first clauses of the report it seems probable that we might lose our representation altogether. Lower Canada is always to have 65 members, and the representation of the other colonies is to be arranged every ten years so as to give each the same ratio to population as she will then possess. Now, should the population of Lower Canada increase more rapidly than that of this island, which is almost certain to be the case, our representation would decrease, and we would be left perhaps without a member at all. To show at least that it is much more likely that our representation will decrease than increase, I will read the Hon. George Brown's opinions on the subject, as given in the Toronto 'Globe.' In treating of the probable effect of these two clauses of the report to which I have been alluding, on the representation of the maritime provinces, that journal says :

'The fact is best shown by illustration. Prince Edward Island with a population say of 85,000 is, it is said, to have five representatives at starting. Suppose she increase at the rate of twenty per cent each ten years, at the end of twenty years her population will be 126,000. But at the same rate of progress the population of Lower Canada would be 1,596,000. Divided by 65, this would give one representative to every 24,550 of her people ; so that the island would not be able to claim an increase of membership.

Mr. Duncan, speaking on the same question, said :

The five representatives allotted to us in the lower House would not give this colony much influence there ; but as our population will not increase so rapidly as that of Canada, there is a prospect, through the operation of one clause in the report, that our five representatives would dwindle down to three. Taking all those points into consideration, therefore, it is clear to me that we have nothing to gain but much to lose by adopting the Quebec scheme.

Those speeches were made in 1865. In 1866 the debate upon these resolutions was resumed. Speaking on a resolution introduced by the leader of the government, the Hon. J. C. Pope, against confederation on the terms submitted, Mr. Duncan said Nothing could be more unjust to Prince Edward Island than representation on the basis of population, as laid down by that scheme, according to which the Canadas would have 100 representatives in the House of Commons, more than the aggregate of all the colonies, the number assigned to us being only 5. Representation on this basis might do very well for Canada ; but as respects Prince Edward Island, it would be nothing but mere mockery.

The Hon. Mr. Longworth said :

Another objection which I had to the union was that according to the scheme laid down in the report, representation in the House of Commons is to be based upon population. Representation on that basis is as objectionable as applied to those other two provinces, does not render less so to Prince Edward Island. Upper Canada is a growing country and her population will rapidly increase ; and as that increases, so, according to the Quebec scheme of representation, her representation in the federal House of Commons would increase, whilst that of Prince Edward Island would decrease. And, in fact, if the increase in the population of Nova Scotia and New Brunswick does not, in the future, grow more rapidly than it has in the past, they will also, if the plan be strictly carried out, be losers instead of gainers as respects legislative representation. Thus, as respects representation on the basis of population, the scheme appeared to me to be unjust to us, and I was therefore prepared to go against it ; and the result of our deliberations upon it in this House was its rejection by a large majority. I, for one, am not changed. I entertain the same objections to the scheme which I entertained then, and I am therefore glad to presume that the resolutions just submitted by the hon. the leader of the government harmonize with the views on that question of a majority on both sides.

The Hon. J. C. Pope said :

Representation by population is not fair as regards this country. Where there are large towns there are not so many different interests as there are in a country like this. Therefore, I do not believe in it as a principle. It is not favourably looked upon by reformers of the present day. Even Earl Russell does not believe in representation by population. As was said here last year, by that rule London would have more representatives than Scotland. If I had acted as a delegate when the delegates from Canada were here, and when they laid it down that they would not entertain the question at all, unless representation by population were acceded to, I would have stopped there and said, no, I will not agree to it, and I blame the leader of the opposition and those other delegates who agreed to it ; they should not have done so, for it is one of the strongest objections to that scheme.

The Hon. Mr. Coles said :

The hon. the leader of the government said that the delegates should not have consented to the principle of representation by population. They did not consent to it ; for, after the Canadian delegates came here and stated their case, the first delegation ceased, and another was appointed. Therefore it was for the government to consider the matter.

Now, Mr. Speaker, it seems to me that these speeches in the House of Representatives of Prince Edward Island show very clearly that the principle of representation by population was not accepted by the legislature of that island. She contended that special terms should be conceded to her, that she should enter with six members, and as a matter of fact, I have pointed out that Prince Edward Island remained out of confederation until 1873, and then only consented to come into the union when this final point of six members was conceded, notwithstanding anything in the British North America Act as to representation by population. When the final arrangements were being completed, in reply to an inquiry from Governor Robinson, Mr. Haviland, one of our delegates wired in reply. 'Six members conceded.' The clause again reads :

That the population of Prince Edward Island having been increased by 15,000 or upwards since the year 1861, the island should be represented in the House of Commons of Canada by six members.

Now, let us look at the facts, taking the first part of the clause. This would give us an alleged population of 95,857. On the basis of population at that time, under the general terms, got by dividing sixty-five into the population of Quebec, we get the unit 18,330, and by dividing this into the population of Prince Edward Island we get five and a fraction, 4,207. Thus, on the basis of population, we were only entitled to five members. But there is no sense or reason in the clause for giving us six unless six as a status. For any other construction would be ridiculous, after stopping out ten years, and knowing that the next census would deprive us of one, if the representation was to be by population under the general terms.

Our contention simply was this : We have a population of 95,857, and we want six members regardless of any unit of representation for other provinces. I consider, Mr. Speaker, that this ground is perfectly tenable, that we were given six members on a status of entering union with 95,857 population and that we were to have six in perpetuity. I repeat again that the reasons advanced then are more potent today in the history of events, and what a representation by population under the general terms would mean as regards Prince Edward Island, as I shall illustrate to the House later. Now as to the balance of the clause :

The representation to be readjusted from time to time under the provisions of the British North America Act.

This, in my opinion, can only refer to an increase of population in the event of our population increasing more rapidly than Quebec, and from the foregoing no other construction seems applicable, or in the case of a reduction of our population below the population we had on entering the union. This construction is also strengthened by the cases of British Columbia and Manitoba, both coming in after confederation and upon special terms. British Columbia came in in 1879, having a population of 10,586, which would give her under the general terms one member, yet she was given six. The clause reads as follows :

British Columbia is entitled to be represented by six members, the representation to be increased under the provisions of the British North America Act.

In 1881 she was entitled by population to two, yet she retained six ; in 1891 her population would entitle her to four, yet she kept six. The rights under the Prince Edward Island clause are certainly the same as the British Columbia clause, except that the language in the latter is possibly clearer. British Columbia has a right to enforce her special terms, and in fact it was never seriously questioned, and in the event of her population not having increased as it has, could any hon. member of this House question her right to retain six members ?

I can turn to the 'debates' of 1892, when we had the right hon. leader of the government speaking of this matter of the representation of British Columbia. He says :

But, at the same time, I am myself taken by surprise at the objection raised, for it has always been understood that British Columbia was entitled to six members.

Again he says :

We have always understood that British Columbia was entitled to six members until such time that she was entitled to a larger number, but that she should not be represented by a less number than six. For my part I would be sorry to come to any conclusion which would deprive British Columbia of that which the people suppose themselves to be their right.

I consider that Prince Edward Island is in exactly the same position as British Columbia ; the language of the clauses are practically the same. In the one case it says 'readjusted' and in the other case 'increased,' but, as to the intention of the framers of these clauses and of the contracting parties at the time of the union, it cannot be successfully contradicted that the meaning and purpose was the same. There was the status under which these provinces should come in, there was a special provision under which small provinces should enter the union, and both of these provinces came in under this special provision. Mr. Davies, of Prince Edward Island, speaking at that time, said :

I beg to assure my hon. friend that so far as the individual members coming from British Columbia are concerned, we entertain nothing but kindly feelings towards them personally. I am in thorough accord with my leader that this is a matter of good faith. I think it would be a breach of faith on the part of parliament to alter those terms if they could do it, but the point before the House is a purely legal question.

Sir John Thompson contended at that time that there was no need of an appeal to the Privy Council. I think the present right hon. leader of the government (Hon. Sir Wilfrid Laurier) suggested at that time that as it was a legal point and that it should be handed over to the Privy Council or to some other authority to give effect to the intent of the contracting parties. Sir John Thompson considered that even that was not necessary, that the plain intent of the Act was sufficiently expressed that British Columbia should have her six representatives until such time as the number might be increased by an inflow of population. I consider that Prince Edward Island is in the same position as British Columbia was at that day, and I think her rights should be safeguarded by this government.

Manitoba came in under an imperial Act and upon special terms. Her population in 1879 was 10,586, and under general terms would entitle her to one member, yet she came in with four. In 1881 her population would give her three, yet she still kept four. The section referring to representation in her case reads as follows :

Provided that on the completion of the census of 1891, and of each decennial census after, the representation of the province shall be readjusted according to the provisions of section 51 of the British North America Act.

Why should Prince Edward Island be treated any differently from other provinces. Their special terms were manifested better than those of Prince Edward Island and yet they were not disturbed.

There is another section of the Prince Edward Island terms to which I wish to draw attention. It reads as follows :

That the provisions of the British North America Act, 1867, shall, except those parts thereof which are in terms made, or by reasonable intendment may be held to be specially applicable to and only to affect one and not the whole of the provinces now comprising the Dominion, and except so far as the same may be varied by these resolutions, be applicable to Prince Edward Island in the same way and to the same extent as they apply to the other provinces of the Dominion, and as if the colony of Prince Edward Island had been one of the provinces united by the said Act.

The qualifying words, 'except so far as the same may be varied by these resolutions,' are important. Clearly the 51st section of the British North America Act, which provides for representation by population was so 'varied' when with a special reference to our population, it was declared that the island shall be represented by six members, such six members being in excess of what we would then be entitled to by our population.

Let us point out the position this province would be in taking the general terms of the British North America Act to apply. We will take the figures of the census of 1871 and compare the growth with the recent census of 1901, thirty years later, and for convenience let us make four groups to get the relative growth of the east, centre and west. For the purpose of this study we shall group the three maritime provinces together, take Quebec and Ontario each singly, forming the fourth and last group of Manitoba, British Columbia and the territories, organized and unorganized, that are outside the provincial boundaries. The comparison will show very unequal growth as we shall see. The western group, including Manitoba, British Columbia and the territories had in 1871 a population of 109,475. In 1901 the population of the group was 624,970, showing a gain of 515,495 in the thirty years, or 470 per cent. Ontario in 1871, had a population of 1,620,851, and in 1901 this had increased to 2,182,847, showing a gain of 562,096 or 34¼ per cent. Quebec, with 1,191,516 in 1871, and 1,684,898 in 1901, gained 457,382 in the thirty years, or 38¼ per cent. The maritime group of three provinces had a population of 767,415 thirty years ago, and 893,953, according to the last census, showing a gain of 126,538 or 16½ per cent.

Here then we have four different rates of growth, 16½ per cent in the maritime section, 38¼ per cent in Quebec, 34¼ per cent in Ontario and 470 per cent in the great west. This comparison covers not a year or a ten year period merely, but the period of a generation. It indicates conditions that may operate for a generation to come. The rapid growth of the great west was a thing to be expected. What was not expected was that neither Ontario nor the maritime provinces have kept place with Quebec. And what is especially disappointing is that the increase in the population of the maritime provinces in the thirty years has been less than one third of the increase that has taken place in Quebec, the pivot province on which our representation in parliament turns.

To see whither we are drifting let us project these ratios of increase forward thirty years into the future, and note the results. We add 38¼ per cent—the past rate of increase—to the present population of Quebec and we find that province may have in thirty years from now 2,279,601 people. We add 16½ per cent to the present population of the maritime provinces and we find they may then have 1,041,455 people. Assuming that Quebec has a population of 2,279,601 in the year 1931 the unit of representation in the Commons will be found, if we divide that number by 65—the number of members permanently allotted to Quebec—to be 35,070. Dividing the unit of population into the prospective population of the maritime provinces in 1931—that is 1,040,455—and we find the maritime provinces would then be entitled to but 30 members at the most instead of the 43 we had when Prince Edward Island entered the union. And where will Prince Edward Island be in the matter of representation after 1931, if our ratio of increase should be no better in the thirty years to come than it has been in the thirty years past? This is a simple matter of calculation. Our increase has been less than 10 per cent in the thirty years since 1871. Add a full 10 per cent of gain in the thirty years forward and in 1931 we may count at most on a population of 113,585. Divide this by the unit of representation as it will then be, that is by 35,170 and it will be seen that we shall then be entitled to but three members—that is, if the terms of the British North America Act are applied to us as is at present proposed by those in authority at Ottawa. Half our representation as it was in 1873 would thus be swept away. It may be seen in the fact that just as soon as the province of Quebec becomes as densely populated as Prince Edward Island, we would not be entitled to any representation at all, which would be an absurdity, for the 22nd clause of the report of the Quebec conference declares that 'no fractional part of the unit of representation shall be considered, unless when exceeding one-half the number entitling to a member.' Quebec being 152 times our area, and the number of representatives limited to 65, we must need be more than twice as thickly populated as that province in order to have even one member. But Prince Edward Island has not during the last decade nor is it likely to increase to the same extent as in the thirty years past. We came in with a population of 47 to the square mile and now have 51. Where will the representation of Prince Edward Island be when Quebec population is even 40 to the square mile. Our province will be politically obliterated. Now, Mr. Speaker, these are well defined reasons why our representation should be the same as when we entered confederation.

1. The very wording of the terms and the qualifying clause that the British North America Act shall apply 'except were altered by these resolutions.'

2. To take any other interpretation would render us in time entitled to no representation which would be an absurd and invalid contract.

3. There are the demands of our delegates at the Quebec conference, the speeches on the Quebec terms in our local legislature, and the telegram announcing the granting of six members, the admission of a status of representation for a small self-governed province and varying the general terms—and the admission of British Columbia and Manitoba on the same principles and the stronger wording of British Columbia clause, is a good proof of our claim.

If the government should persist in holding that the representation of our province shall be reduced it will put in a very false position the men who made the confederation bargain, and who may be accused of not safe-guarding the interests of the people of Prince Edward Island whom they represented. All these things make a strong case why this government should not take from a small province the rights and privileges to which it is justly entitled. Speaking of the province of British Columbia in 1892 the right hon. the leader of the House said: That the intention of the parties should be considered, and British Columbia was in no different position than Prince Edward Island is to-day. If the right hon. gentleman is still of that opinion I would ask him that the intention of the contracting parties be given effect to and that our province should be given its six representatives in this parliament. I ask the right hon. gentleman to see that the rights of our small province down by the sea are not lightly cast aside.

Mr. T. S. SPROULE (East Grey). The representatives of the province of Ontario in this House are confronted with the serious question as to whether the representation of their province in the Dominion House of Commons shall in future be reduced by six members. I regret that the government of the province of Ontario seems to have taken no steps to insure proper representation in this parliament for that province, as the governments of the provinces of New Brunswick and Nova Scotia have done.

Mr. COCHRANE. They are busy looking after Gamey.

Mr. SPROULE. I presume they are, but they have exhibited a careless indifference in this matter sadly in contrast with the energy of the governments of New Brunswick and Nova Scotia, who are endeavouring to secure justice for their provinces in this respect. And not only is the provincial government of Ontario negligent in its duty, but we see here ministers of the Crown from Ontario and Ontario members supporting the government sublimely indifferent, and making no effort to safeguard the rights of their province. Ontario has been growing during the last few years; we are told by the local government that New Ontario is increasing in wealth and population, and in view of this, is it to be said that the premier province of the Dominion shall lose six of its representatives. Where are the Ontario ministers and where are the Ontario members supporting the government ? Why do they not protest ? Why is it left to New Brunswick and to Nova Scotia to secure that the question as to provincial rights should be submitted to the Supreme Court ?

The PRIME MINISTER. And Ontario also.

Mr. SPROULE. It is the first time I ever heard that Ontario has taken any part in this matter.

The MINISTER OF JUSTICE. All the provinces in the Dominion have.

Mr. SPROULE. It is the first time we have ever heard it mentioned here that the province of Ontario has taken any such action as that taken by New Brunswick and Nova Scotia to have her rights defined under subsection 4 of section 51 of the British North America Act. With this question pending before the Supreme Court it does seem to me that it is not the part of wisdom for the government to force this Bill through the House. This parliament has yet a long lease of life if it expires by eflux of time, and there is plenty of time left to us yet to legislate on the matter. In view of the dissatisfaction created in the provinces whose representation it is proposed to reduce, it does seem to me that it is of the highest importance that the question should be first settled as to the constitutionality of reducing the representation of the provinces. From the point of view of a layman it would seem that very serious question may arise. Suppose we should illegally reduce the representation of any of the provinces, and suppose the legality of one of our enactments is brought before the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council, and it should be decided that we were not a properly constituted parliament, what would be the condition of affairs then ?

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. It would have no bearing on any legislation.

Mr. SPROULE. I am told that the same question has arisen in the United States, and it seems to have a very important bearing on legislation there. I take it that if an analogous condition of affairs arose here some very troublesome question might result. In view of this it occurs to me that it would be a wise thing to delay this measure until such time as the government has obtained the opinion of the Supreme Court of Canada and of the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council as well, if that be possible. Did I correctly understand the Minister of Justice to say there was no provision whereby this question could be carried from the Supreme Court to the Privy Council ?

The MINISTER OF JUSTICE. I did not say that. There must be a reference to the Supreme Court and then the judgment of the Supreme Court is final unless there is a special application made to grant leave to appeal from the Supreme Court to the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council.

Mr. SPROULE. I thought that the contention was that they could not appeal except a suit at law was actually brought, and that we were only applying to the Supreme Court for its advice. There is then all the stronger reason why we should ask delay. It seems to me that as the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council is the highest court of the empire, we should if possible submit the case to it before going any further. That, I think, would satisfy the provinces which are going to be deprived of part of their representation, and would satisfy the other provinces as well. We would then be sure of our ground and we would be going a long way towards destroying that feeling which is growing up to-day against the contention that the province of Ontario should have its representation reduced in this House by six members. Holding these views, and in view of the facts that there is no urgency, inasmuch as we are not near the end of the present parliament, I am disposed to move for delay. I therefore beg to move in amendment :

That the Bill be not now read the second time but that the second reading thereof be deferred until after a judicial determination has been had with respect to the numbers of members to which the respective provinces are entitled under the census of 1901.

I do not think that any harm can result from the delay as we are not near the end of the present parliament, unless the government see fit to recommend to His Excellency the Governor General to dissolve the House much earlier than we anticipate.

The PRIME MINISTER. I have to say to my hon. friend that the government cannot accept this amendment, and I think that, on reflection, he will agree with me it is not advisable we should. I would call his attention to the fact that we are bound by law to pass a Redistribution Bill immediately following the taking of the census. Parliament can be dissolved under our system at any time. Circumstances may arise at any moment which may make it advisable for His Excellency the Governor General to grant a dissolution, and the law makes it imperative that there should be a redistribution immediately, after the census, because, in the event of a general election, that general election must take place according to the representation to which every province is entitled. Let me cite section 51 of the British North America Act once more, merely in order to illustrate the point I now make, that we are imperatively called on to pass a new Redistribution Bill. Section 51 provides:

On the completion of the census in the year 1871, and of each subsequent decennial census, the representation of the four provinces shall be readjusted.

It does not say 'may,' but 'shall.'

Mr. SPROULE. The census is not completed yet.

The PRIME MINISTER. The number of our population has been ascertained, so that all the information required for the purposes of redistribution is before us. If there were a very serious doubt as to whether or not the proposition advanced to-day is one which can be seriously entertained, I think it would be well perhaps to stay our hands. We have agreed to refer the question to the Supreme Court, not because we have any doubt, but simply in deference to the views held by some people in the different provinces, and in order to have their minds set at rest. But we think it is better to proceed at once with the Bill and have the committee, which the House will appoint, get to work at once. We propose to have the decision of the Supreme Court at a very early day. Should that decision be adverse to our pretention, we might fairly consider the proposition to stay our hands, but in the meantime I see no reason why the committee should not go ahead with the measure while the Supreme Court is considering the point we have submitted to it. If we find our views affirmed, I see no reason why the Bill should not become law. But if the Supreme Court should hold the view advanced by some hon. gentlemen opposite, then its decision would be a matter for consideration at the proper time. I submit that all the arguments advanced this afternoon against the proposed measure do not lead to the conclusion sought to be derived from them. It is admitted on all sides that when confederation was organized, it was not intended to be restricted to the four provinces originally constituting it, but it was intended that other provinces should be allowed to come in later. It was contemplated that other provinces should be carved out in the west and also that other provinces might come in from the east. It was contemplated that Prince Edward Island should come in, and British Columbia and Manitoba, as they have done, and also that we would be prepared to admit Newfoundland, and that in the course of time other territories would be admitted as provinces into the full citizenship of the Canadian confederation. No one will contend that when this view was in the minds of those who framed confederation, of which we are all proud, it could have been intended that the law which was then enacted was to apply only to the four original provinces and not to all the provinces which were to come in later and form the Canadian family. It would not be reasonable to suppose that a certain law was framed to apply only to the original constituent members of the confederation and another law was to apply to those provinces which might come in later. At present we have not four but seven provinces, next year we will have eight, and in a few years we shall have more, and the proposition, I believe, will be accepted by everybody, even by the hon. members for Lanark (Hon. Mr. Haggart), Hamilton (Mr. Barker), and Lincoln (Mr. Lancaster), that the same law should apply to all these provinces, and that there should not be one law for four of them and another law for the rest. If there was anything in the minds of the framers of the constitution, it was that representation was to be based on population. That principle certainly was in the minds of the people at that time. It had been the subject of a long and very ardent controversy in two of the provinces. The province of Upper Canada had been insisting for a long time that there should be representation by population. The province of Quebec did not object but insisted that there should not be representation by population unless there were substantial guarantees in favour of the minority in the confederation. Representation by population was therefore certainly strong in the minds of the fathers of confederation, and in expecting that other provinces would come in later, it was certainly understood that when they did enter the same rule of representation and the same readjustment at every census should apply to them. But what do we hear to-day? We hear hon. members argue that we should have one rule for the four original provinces and another rule for the others. We are told that while it has been enacted that the province of Quebec should be the pivot around which the representation of all the other provinces should revolve, still this enactment is not to apply to the provinces of Ontario, Nova Scotia, New Brunswick and Prince Edward Island.

Mr. SPROULE. That the saving clause should apply to them.

The PRIME MINISTER. I shall show that there is no saving clause. My hon. friend does not dispute that Quebec is to be the pivotal province. What is the population of the province to-day? It is little less than two million souls. My hon. friend does not dispute that the unit of representation in province of Quebec is 25,367. Now, the contention which we hold on this side of the House is that this 25,367 is to be the unit for all the provinces, not for the province of Quebec alone, but for the province of Ontario, the province of Nova Scotia, the province of British Columbia and the others. And, if that rule is to be applied and 25,367 souls is to be the unit of representation for the province of Quebec, does my hon. friend from East Grey (Mr. Sproule) contend that the same rule should not apply to the province of Ontario ? Would he contend that there should be for that province a different unit of representation ? If the unit for the province of Ontario is to be the same as the province of Quebec then the province of Ontario is not entitled to ninety-two members, but only to eighty-six members. Will my hon. friend, considering this aspect of the case deliberately say that the same unit of representation is not to prevail in the one case as in the other ?

Mr. SPROULE. But it does not apply to all the provinces.

The PRIME MINISTER. Yes, it will apply to all.

Mr. SPROULE. Prince Edward Island is an exception.

The PRIME MINISTER. Not at all; the same rule will apply to Prince Edward Island, and under the application of the rule, Prince Edward Island must lose one member. But what is the view expressed by the hon. member for South Lanark (Hon. Mr. Haggart) and the hon. member for Hamilton (Mr. Barker) ? It is that the unit of population for Ontario should not be the same as for Quebec, but that the province of Ontario should be entitled to ninety-two representatives, that while it will require 25,367 to send one member to this House from Quebec, it will require only 23,777 to send one from the province of Ontario. Was that ever contemplated at confederation ? Will any one contend that that is a fair rule to apply ? The compact at confederation stipulated that there should be a way open for other provinces to come in. The province of Manitoba comes in. The population of that province has increased according to the last census, so that it gains three members. British Columbia will gain one. The province of Quebec will remain the same. This is the only basis upon which the operation could be carried on. Does any one suppose that the provinces of the west increasing their representation and the provinces of the east not decreasing proportionately to their population, the province of Quebec, which is the pivotal province would submit to such a state of things ? I do not pretend that the province of Quebec would not submit to it if it were the law—it would undoubtedly. But if representation is to be based on population it must be that there is a balance swinging upwards and downwards—this province will lose, not having kept pace with the province of Quebec, and the other will gain having gone on more rapidly than Quebec. Therefore, it cannot be stated that the position we take is unreasonable. That is the reason why we thought it would not be advisable, under present circumstances, to wait until we have a judicial interpretation of the law on this question. We proceed on this occasion as has been done on former occasions, and the argument in court is to allow no room for misunderstanding. In deference to the provinces that lose, we have agreed to follow them into court and argue the matter there. I would like to say a word in answer to my hon. friend from Prince Edward Island (Mr. Lefurgey) whom I regret not to see in his place. That hon. gentleman has appealed to me. But the government is not a free agent in this matter, we have not a will of our own. It is not through caprice or whim or any other motive of that kind that we introduce this Bill; it is in deference to the imperative mandate of the law. But if the hon. gentleman (Mr. Lefurgey) believes that the province that he represents should be kept in the position, as to representation, that it now has, I can only say to him that we have told the representatives of the province that we are ready to follow them into court—not that we have any doubt on the subject, but because they have doubt, and as good comrades and fellow citizens we should be glad to have the matter authoritatively adjudicated. On the 6th March I received a letter from the premier of Prince Edward Island, which I will read :—

Charlottetown, P.E.I.,
March 6, 1903.

Dear Sir,—When the delegation from our province, consisting of Mr. D. A. MacKinnon, M.P., Hon. Benjamin Rogers, Hon. Mr. Whear and myself waited upon your government in Ottawa a short time ago, with regard to the question of the representation of this province being maintained as it was at the time of confederation, namely, six members, the matter, as you know was discussed by myself and Messrs. Whear, Rogers and MacKinnon, and your honourable board seemed to take a contrary view to the one which I and my colleagues held ; that is, that at the time of confederation there was a contract expressed or implied, that this province should never have a less representation than six, as long, at any rate, as the population did not decrease below 95,000, which was the population we had when we entered confederation, and, upon which population we were granted six representatives.

The reasons given at the time for granting those six representatives were not on the ground of the population or the question of the unit of population, but, on account, as was expressed in the correspondence, of the peculiar situation of the island, and it being divided into three counties, rendered it almost impossible or very inconvenient to divide the province into districts for less than six. Upon this and other grounds, we contended and still contend that we were and are entitled to six representatives. However, as I have stated, your honourable board took a contrary view to the one taken by us on this point.

The delegation then requested your board, if you were fully convinced that we were not entitled to six representatives, to permit the province of Prince Edward Island, under the provisions of the statute to state a case to the Supreme Court, if they thought proper, setting out all the correspondence and such other matters as might be deemed advisable for the decision of the Supreme Court, as to whether or not, under the terms of union, Prince Edward Island was and is entitled to six members ; and if you recollect, which I have no doubt you do, your answer to me was that you had no objection to a case being stated and I thought your attorney-general, Mr. Fitzpatrick, concurred in the matter and raised no objection.

Now, our legislature meets on the 19th of this month, and I would like to be in a position to have some written statement from you or your government bearing out these facts, and that you are willing that this province, if it thinks proper, should state a case to the Supreme Court. I do not think that you can have any objection to giving this assurance in writing, that your government is willing that this province shall take this course, if it deems advisable.

This application by our government to have a case stated to the Supreme Court will of course be understood by your government to be without prejudice to any right that we may have to any other course which may now be open to us to insist upon this right.

Yours faithfully,

(Signed) ARTHUR PETERS.

The Honourable
Sir Wilfrid Laurier,
Ottawa.

To this I replied :—

Privy Council, Canada,
Ottawa, March 10, 1903.

My dear Peters,—I beg to acknowledge the receipt of your favour of the 6th instant. At the interview to which you refer I stated, with the concurrence of my colleagues then present, that we would have no objection to a case being submitted to the Supreme Court upon the question which you brought to our attention.

I am sorry to have to inform you that the consideration, which we have since given to the arguments which you presented to us, has not changed our opinion in any way, as to the merits of the representations which you made to us. But we are still of the same mind as to your desire of having the matter referred to the Supreme Court, and whenever you take the initial steps in that direction, we will he happy to facilitate the proceedings.

At the same time, I have again to confirm what I stated at our interview, that our Bill of redistribution has to be proceeded with without any delay.

Believe me,
Yours very sincerely,

(Signed) WILFRID LAURIER.

The Hon. A. Peters,
Charlottetown, P.E.I.

Mr. SPROULE. Would the right hon. gentleman kindly give us the objection raised by the province of Ontario if he has the correspondence ?

The PRIME MINISTER. I think it will be raised by the Supreme Court, if it is raised at all. But I may say to my hon. friend (Mr. Sproule) that I believe that the province of Ontario, now represented by the Liberal government there, will not agree—I shall be surprised if it does agree—to have the province of Ontario entitled to representation on the basis of a unit of population of 23,000 when Quebec is represented on the basis of a unit of 25,000. Ontario, which has been the champion of representation by population, will insist upon that principle even when the principle works to its own disadvantage.

Mr. SPROULE. Ontario raises no objection.

The PRIME MINISTER. I believe it has agreed to follow the other provinces into court; but it has not taken the initial step, for it has, perhaps, the most proper ideas on the subject of representation by population of any of the provinces. But, I suppose, the hon. gentleman (Mr. Sproule) would insist upon this demand even to the detriment of the other provinces of the Dominion. He is of those who, opposed representation by population before, and he is true to his record. But I appeal to every Liberal member and also to many Conservative members, that the unit of representation should be the same for all provinces whether they lose or gain; and this is the principle upon which we proceed at the present time.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). On behalf of the Liberal government in Nova Scotia, I must resent the imputation which is cast upon it by the right hon. gentleman (Rt. Hon. Sir Wilfrid Laurier), and I do the same on behalf of the Liberal government of New Brunswick—for I believe it calls itself Liberal at the present time. I resent on behalf of my own province the invidious comparison the right hon. gentleman has made between the Liberal government of that province and the Liberal government of the province of Ontario. The right hon. gentleman seems to have very peculiar ideas about this legislation. He says the unit of population in Nova Scotia, or Ontario, as the case may be, would be smaller if you applied section 4. Well, is not the statute before us ? Does the right hon. gentleman deny that the statute would have that operation if no other provinces had come in, and would not what he claims to be an evil have existed in that case by the very terms of the statute ? Assuming that no other province had joined Canada up to the present time, and assuming that the four provinces had increased as they have during the past ten years, then the very thing which the right hon. gentleman says is a scandal would have happened under the terms of the statute. Well, is it wrong to ask that the constitution should be observed ? In the case I have suggested, surely it should not be attributed as blame to those provinces that they have asked that the constitution should be observed. There is no necessity for heat on the part of my right hon. friend, when these provinces are asking for the opinion of the court as to whether this provision still remains intact in the constitution, although other provinces have come in. That is all they are asking, and is any blame to be cast upon them, is any insinuation to be made against them, for simply wanting to have the court determine whether or not that which admittedly was constitutional before the other provinces came in, is still constitutional notwithstanding that these other provinces have been added? Why then should my right hon. friend seek to raise with regard to this question the matters which he has seen fit to bring to the attention of the House to-night? I am sure there is no harm in adhering to the constitution. My right hon. friend has always been a great admirer of the constitution. Then if we desire to adhere to the constitution, surely there is no harm in asking the courts to have that question determined. That is all that any one has asked up to the present time, so far as I am aware.

My right hon. friend points to the unit of population. Well, the unit of Prince Edward Island, British Columbia and Manitoba, when those provinces came in, was not at all the same unit as prevailed in the other provinces. The right hon. gentleman knows that as well as I do, every member of the House knows it. Under this very Bill the unit of population in the North-west Territories is not the same. I am not finding any fault with the Bill in that regard, because I do not think that too great a representation is being given to the North-west Territories. But still the unit of population there is smaller than it is in the other provinces. The unit of population for the North-west Territories under the last census would be less than 16,000, whereas in the other provinces it is between 25,000 and 20,000.

Now what is to be gained by going on while this matter is sub judice? It is practically sub judice at the present time, because the Minister of Justice is taking steps, as I understand, to have ths matter referred to the Supreme Court, under a provision in the Supreme Court Act. Suppose that we go on in the meantime and delimit the constituencies in the provinces where changes have to be made, the work of our committee will be all for naught in case the decision should be against the view which has been expressed by the Minister of Justice. I have every possible respect for the opinion of my hon. friend the Minister of Justice, as I said before; but although he is strong on this point, he very candidly admits to the House that he is not infallible. None of us claim to be infallible, and it may happen that he is mistaken. I have not a very pronounced opinion myself, I have not a pronounced opinion against that of the Minister of Justice; but I can see that a strong argument can be made on the other side. I can also see that the argument of the Minister of Justice leads to some extraordinary conclusions. For example, he based his argument almost entirely upon the opinion that under the provisions of section 146, the addition of other provinces to Canada had resulted in amending the provisions of section 51. He was willing to make the admission that in section 51 the word Canada originally meant only the four provinces, as the right hon. gentleman himself has stated. Well, suppose you had had in the addresses under which those different provinces were admitted, a provision that their representation should be such as the parliament of Canada might afterwards determine, it would logically follow from the argument of the Minister of Justice to-day that the parliament of Canada would have, by reason of the power so given in the addresses, the right to alter the representation of Ontario, and Quebec, and the maritime provinces. I submit to the Minister of Justice, that this would be the logical result. It seems to me, with all deference to the opinion of the Minister of Justice, that if the argument cannot be based upon a higher ground than that, there is good cause for referring this matter to the Supreme Court. As I said before, we might simply be wasting our time by going on now and dealing with this matter while the question is sub judice. Therefore, I think the right hon. gentleman who leads the government might well consent to the amendement of my hon. friend from Grey, and allow the second reading of this Bill to stand until the court shall have given a judicial determination with regard to this question, which has been discussed at such great length in the House to-day.

House divided on amendment (Mr. Sproule).

YEAS:

Messieurs

Alcorn,	Johnston (Cardwell),
Ball,	Kaulbach,
Barker,	Kemp,
Bennett,	Lancaster
Blain,	Lavell,
Borden (Halifax),	Lefurgey,
Brock,	McGowan,
Bruce,	McIntosh,
Calvin,	Northrup,
Cargill,	Pringle,
Carscallen,	Reid (Grenville),
Clancy,	Richardson,
Clarke,	Roche (Marquette),
Cochrane,	Sherritt,
Earle,	Sproule,
Haggart,	Taylor,
Halliday,	Vrooman,
Henderson,	Wilson.—37.

NAYS:

Messieurs

Angers,	Lemieux,
Bazinet,	Logan,
Bernier,	Macdonald,
Bickerdike,	Mackie,
Bourassa,	MacLaren (Huntingdon),
Brown,	Macpherson,
Calvert,	McCarthy,
Campbell,	McCreary,
Carroll,	McEwen,

Champagne,	McLennan,
Christie,	Marcil (Bagot),
Copp,	Marcil (Bonaventure),
Costigan,	Martineau,
Cowan,	Matheson,
Davis,	Mayrand,
Delisle,	Meigs,
Demers (Lévis),	Monet,
Demers (St. John),	Morrison,
Dugas,	Mulock (Sir William),
Erb,	Oliver,
Fielding,	Paterson,
Fitzpatrick,	Power,
Galliher,	Préfontaine,
Gauvreau,	Proulx,
Geoffrion,	Puttee,
Gibson,	Ross (Ontario),
Gould,	Rousseau,
Harty,	Schell,
Harwood,	Smith (Vancouver),
Heyd,	Stephens,
Holmes,	Sutherland (Essex),
Lang,	Tobin,
Laurier (Sir Wilfrid),	Tucker,
Laurier (L'Assomption),	Turcot,
Lavergne,	Turgeon,
Law,	Wright.—72.

PAIRS :

Ministerial.	Opposition.
Thompson (Haldimand),	Ingram,
Cartwright,	Tupper,
Hyman,	Gilmour,
Dyment,	McCormick,
Johnston (Lambton),	Simmons,
Emmerson,	Fowler,
Parmelee,	Hale,
Borden (Sir F. W.),	Rosamond,
Fraser,	Bell,
Charlton,	Tisdale,
Guthrie,	Porter,
Blair,	Hughes (Victoria),
McColl,	Ward,
Beith,	Avery,
Douglas,	Boyd,
Ethier,	Culbert,
Farquharson,	Broder,
Fisher,	Ganong,
Fortier,	Gourley,
Gallery,	Hackett,
German,	Kendry,
Grant,	Kidd,
Hughes (P.E.I.),	LaRivière,
Johnston (Cape Breton),	Morin,
Kendall,	Maclaren (Perth),
Lewis,	Léonard,
MacKinnon,	Maclean,
McCool,	Robinson (Northumberland),
McGugan,	Clare,
McIsaac,	Pope,
Ross (Victoria),	Osler,
Ross (Yukon),	Lennox,
Russell,	Smith (Wentworth),
Scott,	Robinson (Elgin),
Sifton,	Monk,
Stewart,	Birkett,
Sutherland (Hon. J.),	Roddick,
Talbot,	Thompson (Grey),
Tarte,	Seagram,
Tolmie,	Tolton,
Wade,	Wilmott,
Bureau,	Casgrain,

Amendment (Mr. Sproule) negatived; motion agreed to, and Bill read the second time.

The PRIME MINISTER (Rt. Hon. Sir Wilfrid Laurier) moved :

That the said Bill be referred to a special committee composed of Messrs. Fitzpatrick, Sutherland (Oxford), Hyman, Davis, Borden (Halifax), Haggart and Monk, with instructions to prepare schedules to contain and describe the several electoral divisions entitled to return members to this House.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN (Halifax). Mr. Speaker, for reasons which I have already stated and which I shall not repeat now, I think, if this proposed tribunal is to be of the nature of a conference, such as has been described, it should be composed of an equal number of members on each side of the House. My right hon. friend (Rt. Hon. Sir Wilfrid Laurier) in introducing this Bill laid down the principle that it was to be a conference, as I understood it, although I think he also used the word 'committee'—a conference designed for the purpose of agreement. A committee such as is now suggested is simply an ordinary committee representing as far as may be the numerical strength of each side of the House, and therefore it cannot be in the nature of a conference but will be altogether in the nature of a committee to represent the views of the majority of the House. However, I do not want to take up the time of the House at this stage in repeating what I have already said this afternoon. I again renew the suggestion I made to my right hon. friend at that time that if it is really intended to be a conference it should be composed of an equal number of members on each side of the House.

There is one further suggestion I have to make in regard to the motion and that is that the committee shall be given power to examine witnesses on oath and to send for persons and papers. I have already mentioned that matter privately to my right hon. friend, and he thinks it is not necessary that that provision should be made now. I desire to reserve my right to make a motion to that effect if it should afterwards become necessary. I mention this, because, otherwise, it might be taken as an admission on my part that I considered the motion in its present form as absolutely sufficient for all contingencies which might hereafter arise.

Motion agreed to.

On motion of the Prime Minister, House adjourned at 11.15 p.m.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.

WEDNESDAY, April 15, 1903.

The SPEAKER took the Chair at Three o'clock.

FIRST READINGS.

Bill (No. 99) respecting the Canada Central Railway Company.—Mr. McCreary.

Bill (No. 100) to incorporate the Bank of Canada.—Mr. Calvert.

Bill (No. 101) to incorporate the London Loan Company of Canada.—Mr. McGugan—by Mr. Calvert.

Bill (No. 102) respecting the Red Deer Valley Railway and Coal Company.—Mr. Cowan.

Bill (No. 103) respecting the Royal Trust Company.—Mr. Casgrain—by Mr. Taylor.

Bill (No. 104) to incorporate the Brockville and Sault Ste. Marie Railway Company.—Mr. Dyment—by Mr. Calvert.

Bill (No. 105) to confer on the Commissioner of Patents certain powers for the relief of The Standard Car Truck Company.—Mr. Lavergne.

ALIEN LABOUR ACT AMENDMENT.

Mr. JOHN CHARLTON (North Norfolk) moved for leave to introduce Bill (No. 106) to amend the Act to restrict the importation and employment of aliens, chapter 11, statutes of 1897. He said: Mr. Speaker, I think the English system of setting forth the provisions of a Bill on the first reading is a good one, and therefore I take this opportunity of saying a few words with regard to this measure. The Act, chapter 11 of 1897, provides that it is permitted to import skilled labour in or upon any new industry not established in Canada. The Bill I now submit proposes to eliminate these words 'in or upon any new industry not at present established in Canada,' and to permit the importation of skilled labour for established industries. The operation of the existing law has been found by parties engaged in manufacturing to work most disastrously to their interest; and I can see no reason why a new industry should be permitted to import skilled labour and an industry which is already established in Canada should not be permitted to do so, if such labour is not obtainable in Canada.

Now, the manufacturers, as I have said, find that the operation of this Act inflicts upon them a great hardship. The importance of rendering our manufacturing interests effective, the importance of affording to them every facility and all necessary means to lead to their successful prosecution, do not need to be enlarged upon. If we are to build up the maufacturing interests of Canada it is unwise in my opinion, to handicap those interests by a restriction of this kind, a restriction which may prevent them entirely from obtaining the skilled labour necessary in the prosecution of their business. If we propose to transfer American manufacturing interests to this country, as we are doing, and as we will do to a still greater extent if our tariff is changed in the direction of protection, it will be necessary in such cases to permit these American manufacturing interests to import skilled labour, and why we should impose this handicap under existing circumstances upon our manufacturing interests, I am at a loss to understand. Of course it should be our aim and object to develop the resources of Canada, to increase its wealth, to increase all lines of business in the country, and especially manufacturing business; and it strikes me as being a line of action that can scarcely be defended, if we wish to encourage immigration to this country, to increase its population, to develop its resources—it is a line of action, I say, that can scarcely be defended to apply this restriction, to deny the right of coming to this country to a particular class of immigrants who prove to be the most valuable. The Bill provides for eliminating that provision in the statutes of 1897, and provides that manufacturers and all established interests in Canada should have the right to import skilled labour if that labour is not obtainable here.

Mr. CLARKE. Who is to determine that matter?

Mr. CHARLTON. The statute lays down the conditions upon which that kind of labour should be admitted. It strikes me that our trades unions, in taking the step which has crystallized in this provision of the Act, are acting against their own interests, they are acting in a way and adopting a course that will prevent the development of industries in this country, and will indirectly operate injuriously upon there own interests in this regard. I know as a manufacturer myself, and through the experience of other manufacturers with whose operations I am acquainted, that this provision is a hardship that handicaps their operations, and in my opinion it does not work in the interests of the country. I see no reason why we should exclude from Canada a desirable, intelligent and skilful class of immigrants who wish to come here and settle, and engage in the development of our manufacturing industries. These, briefly, are the reasons that have led to the introduction of this Bill, which, I may say, will receive the support of the entire manufacturing interests of the Dominion.

Motion agreed to, and Bill read the first time.

QUESTIONS.

PROVINCIAL AUTONOMY FOR THE NORTH-WEST TERRITORIES.

Mr. BOYD—by Mr. Taylor—asked:

Is it the intention of the government to introduce during the present session a measure granting provincial autonomy to the North-west Territories? If not, why not?

The PRIME MINISTER (Right Hon. Sir Wilfrid Laurier). That matter is under consideration.

SENATORS FOR MANITOBA AND THE NORTH-WEST TERRITORIES

Mr. BOYD—by Mr. Taylor—asked:

Is it the intention of the government to increase the number of senators for Manitoba and the North-west Territories, in proportion to their increased representation in the House of Commons ?

The PRIME MINISTER (Right Hon. Sir Wilfrid Laurier). That matter is also under consideration.

THE TOBACCO COMBINE.

Mr. MONK asked :

1. Did the commissioner appointed to make an inquiry into the question of the tobacco monopoly or combine make a report to the government ?

2. When will the said report be laid upon the Table of the House ?

The SOLICITOR GENERAL (Hon. H. G. Carroll). The commissioner has made a report, which I now beg to lay on the Table of the House.

A CANADIAN CHAMBER OF COMMERCE IN PARIS.

Mr. MONK asked :

1. Has the new Canadian Chamber of Commerce, established in Paris, been authorized by, or else is it under the protection of the Canadian government ?

2. Is there any correspondence, regarding the establishment of that chamber, with the government ?

3. Has the government contributed anything to the establishment of that chamber ?

4. Does the government officially know of the organization of that chamber ?

The PRIME MINISTER (Right Hon. Sir Wilfrid Laurier). The new Canadian Chamber of Commerce alleged to have been established in Paris has not been authorized by the government, nor is it under the protection of the Canadian government. There is no correspondence regarding the establishment of such a chamber of commerce. The government has contributed nothing towards the establishment of such a chamber of commerce, and does not know anything officially of such an organization.

POSTMASTER AT LIME ROCK, NOVA SCOTIA.

Mr. BELL—by Mr. Taylor—asked :

1. What salary is paid to the postmaster at Lime Rock, Pictou County, Nova Scotia ?

2. Has his salary been increased lately ?

3. If so, on what grounds ?

The POSTMASTER GENERAL (Hon. Sir William Mulock). 1. $12. 2 and 3. No.

I.C.R.—TRACKMEN'S WAGES.

Mr. KENDALL—by Mr. Calvert—asked :

1. What increase of wages has been granted to the trackmen of the Intercolonial Railway since the last session of parliament ?

2. What other increases have been made to the Intercolonial Railway trackmen during the past six years ?

The MINISTER OF RAILWAYS AND CANALS (Hon. A. G. Blair). In July 1902, and since the last session of parliament, the track-foremen were increased from $1.65 to $1.75 a day, and the under-men from $1.20 to $1.30 a day. In January 1900, the track-foremen were increased from $1.60 to $1.65 a day, and the under-men from $1.15 to $1.20 a day. I may add that the increases last year took place since the last session of parliament.

NAVIGATION ON THE ASSINIBOINE AND RED RIVERS.

Mr. BOYD—by Mr. Taylor—asked :

1. Has the Minister of Public Works received the following communication from the Winnipeg Board of Trade :—

Winnipeg, 18th March, 1903.

The President and Council,
Winnipeg Board of Trade.

Your committee, appointed to report on the Assiniboine river as a navigable stream, beg to report as follows :—

1st. That all the bridges now existing on the Red and Assiniboine rivers, east of Portage la Prairie, have been constructed with swing spans.

2nd. That the population along the banks of the Assiniboine is becoming dense enough to provide traffic on the river.

3rd. That with the completion of the St. Andrews locks and dam, it is believed that an impetus will be given to river traffic.

4th. That the extra cost of providing for a swing span is inconsiderable.

5th. Therefore, the committee recommend that the board should use every means to have the Assiniboine and Red rivers retained and held as navigable streams ; and to that end, that representations be made to the Minister of Public Works.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

ANDREW STRANG,
Chairman.

2. If so, is it the intention of the government to provide for the improvements necessary to make the said Assiniboine river navigable ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS (Hon. James Sutherland) :

1. Yes, on 7th April instant.

2. Matter will be given due consideration.

WHARF AT BLIND RIVER.

Mr. BIRKETT asked :

1. What are the names of the parties who tendered for the wharf at Blind river ?

2. What was the amount of each tender ?

3. What is the name of the party, or parties, to whom the contract was awarded ; and the amount of said contract ?

4. Were any changes made in the plans or specifications of the said work, after the tenders were advertised, or since the awarding of the contract ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS (Hon. James Sutherland):

1. Messrs. Robert Grant; Moodie and McDermid; David Porter; Green and Mackinnon; David Conroy; W. H. Lewis; F. J. Sullivan; F. E. Fortin.

Robert Grant..	$ 9,310 73
Moodie & McDermid..	9,375 00
David Porter..	10,900 00
Green & Mackinnon..	10,995 00
David Conroy..	11,000 00
W. H. Lewis..	11,848 00
F. J. Sullivan..	12,300 00
F. E. Fortin..	14,975 00

3. (a) Robert Grant, (b) $9,310.73.
4. No.

OTTAWA AND GEORGIAN BAY CANAL.

Mr. THOMAS MURRAY (Pontiac) moved for:

Copies of all engineers' reports, plans, specifications, estimates, and correspondence in reference to surveys made on French river and Lake Nipissing.

He said: With the consent of the House, I desire to add to my motion:

Also copies of all reports and surveys recently made on the Ottawa and Culbute rivers.

My object in bringing this motion before the House at the present time is to endeavour to get, if possible, some announcement from the government as to what they propose doing, and what their policy is in regard to this matter, also to get an expression of opinion from the representatives of the people of Canada in this House on this most important question. I need not remind the House of what has been said in that connection by representative men, the heads of the government of this country in years gone by. Take, for instance, the late Sir John A. Macdonald who, early in his political history, in referring to the construction of this particular canal, made this statement which is contained in the report of one of the engineers, Mr. Marcus Smith:

The Ottawa ship canal and the Pacific Railway must be constructed, and no voice would be raised against the great national work, which would open the western states and colonies to the seaboard.

He says that no one would raise his voice against that great project which is going to do more to build up Canada than any other project that has been proposed. We have also the statement of the hon. Alex. Mackenzie. He says:

I am perfectly satisfied that the Ottawa valley presents the greatest facilities of any route upon the continent for the transportation of the products of the North-west to the Atlantic ocean.

I think hon. members will bear me out when I say that this question has been brought before parliament time and time again. It was brought before parliament by Sir James Grant when he sat in the House of Commons representing the city of Ottawa, by the Hon. Peter White, who was then representing North Renfrew, by the hon. member for South Lanark (Hon. Mr. Haggart) who I am pleased to see sits opposite. I believe he is as strong an advocate of the project to-day as he was then. It was also brought up by the hon. member for Ottawa (Mr. Belcourt), Mr. Poupore and others. There has been a great deal of talk about this project, but the time has arrived when some action should be taken. There have been engineers' reports one after the other. The first was prepared in 1858, when the late Mr. Walter Shanly prepared a report in reference to the construction of the Montreal, Ottawa and Georgian Bay canal. His idea then was that a ten or twelve foot depth of water way would be sufficient, but, of course, later examination and the development of the trade of the country have shown that a twenty foot depth of water will be required. Mr. Shanly made a survey of the route and he reported most favourably. He said that the approximate cost for the depth of water which he proposed would be only about $24,000,000. Other engineers have reported upon the project, Mr. Clarke, Mr. Macleod and Mr. Marcus Smith. I think the latest survey of the whole route was made by Mr. Marcus Smith. He estimates the cost of the canal to be about $80,000,000. It may be contended that that would be a large sum for this country to undertake to expend, but when the great advantages to be derived from the project and when the great necessity of it are taken into consideration, it will be admitted that $80,000,000 is only a drop in the bucket. This natural waterway is considered to be more nearly an air line than any other stretch of water navigation in the known world.

The cost is not excessive when it is considered that this is the shortest route, the least expensive to construct, and that it will result in the development of our resources, of our great mineral deposits which we know this country possesses which are undeveloped, as no other project will. Before the construction of the Canadian Pacific Railway, I am sorry to say, few people appreciated the resources of the country through which that railway passes. When first, as a young man, I went to the Ontario legislature, in 1869, as the representative of North Renfrew, I met many people from western Ontario who knew nothing at all about the northern part of the province or about the Ottawa valley. They said: What kind of a country is it? Who lives there? There are only a number of Indians, squaws and a few lumbermen in that country. That was the impression then, and I regret to say that there are many hon. members of this House to-day who do not know very much about the Ottawa valley. The hon. member for Montreal, St. Mary's (Hon. Mr. Tarte) was enraptured with the grandeur of that country when he made a personal inspection of it. I accompanied him to Arnprior and he said to me: We do not know what we possess.

We do not realize the grandeur of the Ottawa river, or the value of the water powers which we have all along that route. It is estimated that there are 750,000 horse power of water power on the route alone. Taking each water power at a minimum value of $10 per horse power, that means $7,500,000. Capitalize that at 3 per cent, and you have a value of $250,000,000. The construction of that great work would bring thousands of people into the country. It is considered that it will take five years to construct the canal and the result would be that instead of people coming in hundreds and thousands to the North-west Territories, the influx would be quadrupled. You will not be able to put up buildings sufficiently large to accommodate them. Our great North-west Territories are capable of sustaining fifty millions or sixty millions of people. I am not a young man, but I hope to live with all who are listening to me to see the day in the near future, if this canal is constructed, that instead of having a handful of people, comparatively speaking, we will have a population of eighty to one hundred millions that Canada is capable of sustaining; we will have an enormous influx of settlers. You are going to bring these people here by providing the country with such transportation facilities, as I am drawing the attention of the House to now. I am favourable to railways, I am favourable to this transcontinental railway, I am favourable to building railways in isolated provinces, and of giving to the North-west Territories the advantage of good transportation facilities. I noticed a short time ago that a deputation of farmers waited on the government to oppose the subsidizing of any more railways. I venture to say that these very farmers came from a section of the country where they have railway facilities. We should look at the question in a patriotic spirit, free from local or sectional consideration. Although I am an Ottawa valley man, I have only wakened up, having been attending to my business, to the necessity of this great undertaking. I had never studied the question until recently, but I have made a close examination of the engineers' reports and an inquiry into the whole question. I may say that we have a report from the Senate—the Senate that I do not take much stock in, but I will give them credit for one thing they have done. They went into that question thoroughly, and they had before them men of eminence to give their opinions in regard to it. Amongst others they had a gentleman by the name of Thompson, an eminent engineer from Duluth. This gentleman said all that could be said in favour of the project. I need not draw the attention of the House to what the Americans are doing now. They have only lately voted $100,000,000 for the improvement of canals in order to facilitate trade and increase the traffic which passes through these canals from Canada. Are we going to allow that diversion of our trade to continue? We must bestir ourselves if we are going to build up our country and keep our own trade. Mr. Thompson stated before the Senate that this waterway transportation would mean a cost per ton of one dollar as compared with $27 by rail. It will be readily seen what a great advantage will accrue to the people of Canada by the construction of this waterway. I do not want to dwell on the subject at any great length. I do not think it is necessary. I trust that hon. members of this House will take part in this discussion. All I wish to do is to draw the attention of the government and to draw the attention of the country to the necessity of carrying out this proposition.

I say, Sir, that this undertaking is within the means of the people; I say that it is an actual necessity for the country at large, and I say further that we cannot move too soon to initiate it, and when we once have commenced it to carry it on to completion. Surveys have been made by the government of Canada at considerable expense, and the present government has made a survey of the French river, the reports on which I have asked for as well as the approximate cost of the work. The French river work is all right enough so far as it goes, but what I advocate is that the whole scheme shall be carried out. I understand that the ex-Minister of Public Works (Hon. Mr. Tarte) meant to have a survey of the French river with the object of ultimately carrying on the whole work, and he promised that he would report to parliament on the approximate cost. That was a businesslike way of handling this scheme. I give the Hon. Mr. Tarte the credit that he generally took a business proposition in hand in a businesslike way. I have every faith in the right hon. the Prime Minister and his present colleagues in the Cabinet that they will also grapple with the question. I had the pleasure of attending a deputation that waited on the government a short time ago from North Bay and Port Arthur and places in the vicinity, in favour of this project, and I am glad to be able to say that the answer given to that deputation by the government was satisfactory. I hope that the government has now arrived at the conclusion that there is a necessity for grappling with this important project in a businesslike way. The country has been put to considerable expense in getting engineers reports and surveys and things like that. That must mean something. They were surely not doing it for fun, and if it does mean anything then it is the bounden duty of the government to go on with that work immediately, provided of course that the reports will justify them in doing so, and I verily believe that these reports will furnish ample justification to the government. As a matter of fact there is practically no canalling to be done on the French river and not more than thirty miles on the whole route, so that the work is easy enough from an engineering point of view. In face of the advantages which will accrue to the nation at large, is there an hon. member here who will object to the construction of this great national waterway ? I hope there is not. I hope that the unanimous opinion of this House will be that this work should be commenced and commenced at once. I say, Sir, that no scheme which we can devise, will tend so much to enrich the North-west and to develop its enterprise and increase its population. It will give Canada such a prestige as it never had before. The country demands the Georgian Bay canal from a military point of view, from a commercial point of view, from every point of view. This is a business proposition, and I bespeak the support of hon. members for the government in carrying it out. I might go into further details, but they have all been referred to before, and to do so would be taking up the time of the House unnecessarily. In conclusion, Sir, I repeat the hope that every member of this House will be in sympathy with the motion and that it will receive unanimous and hearty support.

The PRIME MINISTER (Rt. Hon. Sir Wilfrid Laurier). The subject which has been brought before the House by my hon. friend from Pontiac (Mr. Murray) is not exactly new to us. We have discussed it on more than one occasion in past years, and I do not know that there is anything to add to the declaration which has been made by the government on previous occasions. My hon. friend (Mr. Murray) is aware that a company has been chartered by this parliament to take power to construct what is called the canalization of the Ottawa river and the French river from Georgian Bay to the waters of the St. Lawrence. I think that I may say that it was never expected that this company would be able to perform such a gigantic task unassisted. I may say to my hon. friend (Mr. Murray) that the company which was last organized has on one or two occasions approached the government with a view of obtaining assistance to enable it to carry on the scheme which they have power from parliament to undertake, but the proposals which were made to the government were of such a nature that they could not be entertained. The assistance which they asked was of such a character that the government did not feel justified in asking parliament for the aid that was sought. When the papers are brought down my hon. friend (Mr. Murray) will see what was the character of the assistance which was required from the country at large, and I think he will agree with me that the proposal that was made to us was of such a character that the government was quite justified in taking the position which it did. For my part I think that the country would justify a moderate expenditure—a reasonable expenditure of money—with the view of providing another means of communication between the east and the west. The route of the Ottawa river is undoubtedly the natural channel of communication between the east and the west. It was the route followed by the old voyageurs in the early days of the colony. When the North-west produced nothing but furs it was the route followed by the fur traders to bring the products of the west to the eastern shores. That trade has now become a thing of the past; settlement has gone into the North-west; immense quantities of products are being sent from that fertile portion of Canada and they grow larger and larger as time develops. We are all aware that new methods of communication have been found, but nevertheless we know that undoubtedly one of the easiest and cheapest routes would probably be the canalizing of the Ottawa river. Whenever a company is prepared to approach the government asking for what I would call reasonable assistance, I think the government would be prepared to hear the application favourably and to ask parliament for that reasonable assistance. But if my hon. friend (Mr. Murray) expects that the government should assume such a gigantic work I am not prepared to say that that subject has yet received such consideration as to enable me to answer in the affirmative. I do not think that at this moment the country is prepared to expect that the government should ask parliament to undertake this work out of its own resources. I rather think that the opinion is that it had better be left in the hands of private enterprise. When the hon. member for St. Mary's (Hon. Mr. Tarte) was my colleague in the government, he had rather thrown out the idea that the government might very properly undertake the work of canalizing the French river from the waters of the Georgian Bay to the waters of Lake Nipissing. That is a project, which speaking for myself personally, rather commands my sympathy and my favourable consideration. I think there is a great deal to be said in favour of that project. I am not prepared to say that the government is ready to endorse it at this moment. The matter has not yet been considered by council, and I give only my own expression of opinion upon this subject, and I do so very guardedly, but it seems to me that there is a great deal to be said in favour of the view taken by my late colleague (Hon. Mr. Tarte) in favour of the government itself undertaking the full development of the French river from the waters of Georgian Bay to Lake Nipissing. If that were done it would be a means of having another port on the lakes, and it would undoubtedly contribute to solve the problem of the transportation of the products of the North-west to the seaboard. More than this I am not prepared to say at this moment. The government will have great pleasure in bringing down all the papers asked for by my hon. friend (Mr. Murray).

Mr. JOHN CHARLTON (North Norfolk). Mr. Speaker, I was just on the point of rising when the premier rose, and I presume that the government desire, now that this question is before the House, that the views of members should be expressed, where members hold views on the question. The statement made by the right hon. leader of the House, that a company had been chartered, and that the demands of that company on the government for aid have been of a character that the government could not accede to, leads me to believe, as I always have believed, that if the construction of the Georgian Bay canal is to be undertaken, it will hardly be done by a company. The state of New York, as we are aware, has just appropriated $101,000,000 for the enlargement of the Erie canal. This is done as a state work. It is done for the purpose of cheapening the cost of transportation and securing for the great seaport of New York the business of the west. The Panama canal was undertaken by a company, and that company failed, and that canal is now being constructed by the United States government. A work of the character of the Georgian Bay canal is one which I think we can scarcely anticipate will be constructed by a company; and it is better for us to face the question with the point in view whether there are reasons which would warrant the government in undertaking this work. We are confronted with transportation problems of vast magnitude. One shrinks almost appalled at the money needs of the near future for the opening up and development of the north-west, the settlement and production of which will increase rapidly; and if we are to keep pace with that settlement and production we must provide ample transportation facilities.

With regard to the construction of a canal to Lake Nipissing, I have never looked with favour on that project, unless it were to be taken up as a part of the general project of a Georgian Bay canal. I could not see the force of establishing a seaport on Lake Nipissing. It would benefit the Canadian Pacific Railway, of course; but as a project standing by itself, I could not see that it would be good for the country, while as a part of the general scheme of a Georgian Bay canal, it would of course be commendable.

We can scarcely comprehend the prospective transportation needs of the north-west. Our American friends are fully alive to the probable increase of business to be derived in the near future from that vast region; and the enlargement of the Erie canal simply means that the United States intend to compete for that trade, and to compete for it under conditions more favourable to success than exist at the present time. It is proposed to enlarge that canal to a depth of 12 feet, making it a barge canal. One of the most reliable experts on canal construction is Major Simons, who has charge of the construction works at Buffalo; and that gentleman, in an exhaustive report made a year or so ago, took the ground that a barge canal to the Hudson river, capable of passing vessels of 1,000 tons burden, would be more economical than a ship canal of 21 feet of water. He stated that a vessel capable of navigating the great lakes must, when entering the canal, reduce her speed to one-fifth of her speed on the lakes, while keeping her whole crew. By a carefully prepared tabulated statement he arrived at the conclusion that the barge canal would serve the purposes of transportation better and cheaper from the lakes to New York, while the handling of the grain by elevating it from vessels to barges was calculated to put it through to its destination in better condition.

In view of this position taken by Major Simons, and in view of the fact that after careful consideration for years the state of New York has adopted his views and will construct this barge canal, if the referendum on that subject results favourably, we must see the propriety of examining carefully into the reasons which have led to the adoption of this course. If we were to construct a barge canal of 12 or 14 feet of water from the waters of Lake Huron to the St. Lawrence river, the grain of the west would then be shipped to the mouth of the French river; from that point it would be put through by barges to Montreal or Quebec, and there elevated to elevators and transferred to ocean going vessels. If the reasons which have led to the determination to construct a barge canal in the state of New York are well founded, the same reasons will apply to the construction of a canal by the Ottawa valley. These are points that require careful consideration, for we are confronted by a problem of great magnitude and involving the interests of that vast country to the west, the very heart and seat of power of this Dominion. We want to approach this question, not in a party spirit at all, but from a business standpoint, and give to it the consideration which its importance requires. There is one consideration that has had much to do with the proposed enlargement to the Erie canal—the question of competitive rates and the regulation of rates. The Erie canal is to be constructed, not because the railways cannot transport the produce of the west, but for the purpose of regulating rates and preventing a combination for the purpose of taking from the producers exorbitant freights. The same reasons would apply to the construction of the Ottawa river canal, the source of whose business would be derived from the waters of the great lakes, from Duluth, from Chicago, from Fort William, from the wheat fields of the north-west, Illinois, Iowa, Minnesota and Wisconsin. There would be low vessel rates to the mouth of French river, and barge canal rates from that point to Montreal or Quebec. A low rate of freight would be held over the competing railways not as a menace, but as a condition of things that would compel them to give vastly lower rates than they would give if this competition did not exist. We want to divert that trade to our own ports of Montreal and Quebec. I have always believed that Quebec was the true competitive point to aim at in sending our grain to the seaboard.

For these reasons, I believe that this question should receive exhaustive consideration and discussion. The government naturally have no policy on this question. It is not a party question. The government are asking in the first place what the wishes of the country are, and in the second place what the interests of the country are, and the decision of the government will naturaly be determined by the answers to these questions. The day has not yet arrived for asking what the policy of the government is with regard to the Ottawa valley canal, but it is a good time to discuss the question. We want to accumulate the data on which we can, later on, found our decision with regard to this matter. My own belief is that we must make up our minds to confront very great expenditures; we must make up our minds to draw upon the future. We must enter into obligations which the future must discharge, obligations for the benefit of the future, for the benefit of the untold millions who will people the north-west, but who, without transportation facilities will not people the north-west with the rapidity that will characterize the filling up of that country if those facilities are provided. And these great expenditures, vast as they may seem, if made honestly and with due regard to economy, will bring an adequate, a rich reward. I rose to present these few remarks upon this question because I feel, and feel very deeply, that the government now in power desire to consult the interests of the people, desire to do that which the requirement of the future demand, yet, at the same time, naturally shrink from undertaking vast obligations, and wish to be satisfied first that the demands of the country require that these obligations shall be incurred and that the expenditures will be justified by the results.

Mr. A. A. WRIGHT (South Renfrew). The position in regard to this matter is one which should be discussed and thoroughly understood before we go any further. It should be understood that we are not asking the government to appropriate a large sum of money for the construction of this canal. What we ask is that a proper survey shall be made of the whole route, that we may know with reasonable exactness what the work will cost before we undertake it. We believe this is one of the greatest routes on the continent for the transportation of the products of the North-west to the seaboard If that is the case, the country should have knowledge of that fact; and, if the cost will be too great for our means, we ought to know it in good time. The state of New York, one state alone, is preparing to spend $101,000,000 to improve the Erie canal. If they take the matter so seriously, surely we should do the same with regard to this great water route through our country. If we can shorten the route to the seaboard by 340 miles, as I believe we can, surely that is something that we should know and understand; but, if the cost of construction is to be too great, we ought to know that also. We contend that this is not properly a canal, it is merely the construction of a certain number of locks, the work of this character to be done covering a distance of fifteen miles. There are thirty miles altogether, but in reality fifteen miles is already constructed and in operation, and the construction of the other fifteen miles would shorten the distance from Chicago and Fort William to the seaboard by no less than 340 miles. That is a most important item. There are parties now in the North-west who are face to face with the serious problem of how they are to get their products to market. This canal will greatly increase the facilities for the transportation of those products. It should not be forgotten that the earlier the crop of wheat can be marketed, the more valuable it is. Every month, every week, and even every day that it is retained in the owner's warehouse makes it less valuable, for delay means more shrinkage and more loss in every way. What the people of the North-west want is to get out their crops as early as they can, in order that they may get the best return for it. We contend that if this canal were constructed, it would materially assist the Canadian Pacific Railway in getting out the crop. The great difficulty with the Canadian Pacific Railway is not that they have not a sufficient number of cars, but that they have not sufficient engine power to take the cars away. Last winter, train after train stood dead on the tracks in the North-west because the road had not the engines to move the cars. It is impossible for the Canadian Pacific Railway to construct the engines fast enough; nor can they purchase them in this country or in the United States. So, we wish to assist them to make the most out of the motive power in their possession. If the Canadian Pacific Railway were to double track their road between Fort William and Winnipeg—and we understand that they have already let the contract for that work—they would treble their capacity for taking out grain. See what an important thing that is. We do not wish them to use their engines to bring that grain down to the seaboard but merely to take it to Fort William, where facilities would be provided for taking cheaply to the port of shipment. In that way, we can get vastly larger amounts of grain out of the North-west early in the season than we can get otherwise. Some tell us that the days of canals are past, that canals have done their work, and that to-day nothing but the railway is practically useful in the work of transportation. But the experience of the world goes to show that canals are most valuable in assisting railways to do their work. There is a certain class of traffic which, if the railways handle they must handle it at a very small rate of profit, or, sometimes, almost at a loss. I refer to the carriage of raw material, such as grain, stone, iron, coal and other things of that sort. Now, if this work were done by the canal the railway would be free to carry the freight that is most profitable. In all cases where canals have run alongside of railways they have been found to be of great assistance to the roads. In fact, railways which were run alongside canals that were not worked have been run without profit, but when the canals were put in shape and began to work, the railways have paid a dividend. The reason is that the canals carried the rougher class of freight on which the railways' profit was little or nothing and they made traffic by building up factories and bringing in people, and so giving the railways more of the better kind of traffic to do. So we say that if this canal were constructed, it would be of great assistance to the railways as well as to the country generally. It is not my intention to go into the subject at greater length, but what I wish is to urge upon the government to take this matter up and give us the desired information, so that we may know the cost of this work and may be able to calculate whether our means will justify us in undertaking it, or whether it is too great for us at present. With the information before us we shall know just what we have to do.

Hon. J. ISRAEL TARTE (St. Mary's, Montreal). Last year, when those who had received a charter at the hands of the late government, applied for its renewal, I made as strong objection as I could. But it was represented to us that there were vested rights, that these men had spent pretty large sums of money in making surveys and trying to organize a company to make the enterprise go. I reluctantly consented to the renewal of their charter. But my colleagues were all of the same mind, after having discussed the question thoroughly, that the French river should be excluded from the charter, and it was. A complete survey of the French river has been made by the department of Public Works. My hon. friend from Pontiac (Mr. Murray) forgot to mention that survey. The engineers of the Department of Public Works deserve a great deal of credit for the complete, intelligent and thorough survey they have made of the French river—in point of fact it is the only complete and thorough survey that has ever been made. That survey is available with its maps and charts. The report which will be laid on the Table of the House will show that for the small sum—I call it a small sum—of five millions of dollars, the French river can be improved and made a waterway twenty-one feet deep from its mouth to Lake Nipissing. My hon. friend from North Norfolk (Mr. Charlton) said a moment ago that the improvement of the French river should be undertaken only on condition that it would form part of the whole project. There must be a beginning to everything in this world. If we construct this first part it will be the first step towards the completion of the whole great project. There has never been any complete survey of the Ottawa river and nobody knows what will be the cost of that work. I have gone over the Ottawa river, but I am not in a position to say, or even guess, what will be the cost of that great work. It will cost a large amount of money.

Mr. CLARKE. How much ?

Hon. Mr. TARTE. I cannot say. I do not like to give figures on questions that neither I nor anybody else has studied thoroughly, but as far as we are able to know, the project—I speak of the canalization of the Ottawa river from Lake Nipissing down—would cost, judging by the information we have, in the neighbourhood of $80,000,000. That is a large amount of money. I do not say that this country has not the means to spend $80,000,000, but I doubt very much whether we are prepared to do so now. We have so many large enterprises to promote that it is necessary for us to pause when we have to face such a large expenditure. I altogether share the view expressed by my hon. friend from North Norfolk (Mr. Charlton) a moment ago, when he said that the country should undertake itself works of that kind. You can always build railways, there is plenty of room on this Canadian soil to locate railways, but there are only one Ottawa and one French and one St. Lawrence river, and I earnestly urge my right hon. friend, the Prime Minister—who, I may say, has given a great deal of thought and consideration to the views I have often laid before him—not to commit himself to any plan by which the Ottawa river would be made a private enterprise. If that ever should be done, we will have practically no control over it. My hon. friend from North Norfolk has said that if the French river project only be carried out, it will benefit the Canadian Pacific Railway. My hon. friend perhaps has been a little unwise in saying that. It is no use prejudicing the public mind against Canadian enterprises. The people of this country have spent in the neighbourhood of one hundred million dollars to build the Canadian Pacific Railway. We have built that railway ourselves. It has rendered us immense service. There are few works of waterways improvements that will not benefit the railways. Where would we be to-day if we had not the Grand Trunk Railway and the Canada Atlantic Railway and their ports on the lakes? Midland is a great port to-day because the Grand Trunk Railway has its terminal there. Depot Harbour is a great port also because it is a terminal of the Canada Atlantic Railway. It would be the easiest thing in the world to build another railway paralleling the Canadian Pacific Railway to North Bay if necessary. We have plenty of area to do so. If the French river project were carried out, it would place Montreal in a better position than New York. From Buffalo to New York by rail are 445 miles; and from North Bay to Montreal the distance is only 360 miles. It would place the St. Lawrence in a better position to handle the western trade than the route via Buffalo and New York and other American ports. Let us open as many avenues of trade as we can within our means and we will not have too many. It is no use in my saying more to-day, but before I take my seat let me beg again the right hon. gentleman, who has all the responsibility of the government of this country to-day, not to alienate great national property for the benefit of promoters. We have been giving too much to promoters. Let us keep at least the control of our national properties—national properties that we cannot duplicate. We can build other railways, but let me say again we cannot have another Ottawa river. To give the Ottawa river to a private corporation would be just as bad as if we were to give up our canals. It is represented that our canals do not pay. For my part, I am surprised that they have done so well. We have not equipped them, we have done nothing at both ends of our canals. Let us equip our canals. We are doing that now, but doing it pretty slowly. When the St. Lawrence is equipped as it should be, when our canals are equipped; when we have harbour facilities as we should have at Quebec, Three Rivers, Montreal, Port Colborne, we will see what advantages we will then enjoy. Railways cannot carry the trade of the country in the summer in competition with waterways. It is very important indeed that such questions as this should be always discussed without party bias. As my hon. friend from North Norfolk says, this is not a party question, but an undertaking of national import.

Hon. JOHN HAGGART (South Lanark). It is not my intention to go fully into the question at present before the House. Every member of this House, who has been here a couple of years, knows my views on the subject. I believe that the undertaking which is advocated by my hon. friend from Pontiac (Mr. Murray) is one of the most important in the interests of Canada that ever was propounded before this House. I have not altered my views on the subject. If we are ever to become a great nation, if Montreal is to become the great port nature intended it to be, and if our country is to receive the development it deserves, it depends upon the people themselves; and one of the most important undertakings to achieve that desired result is the building of the canal advocated by my hon. friend from Pontiac. I never had any other view on the subject. The undertaking is one which must some time be done, in the interests not only of this country but of the whole population surrounding the great lakes to the west of us. There is no use talking, it is proved mathematically, it is beyond all doubt that carriage by water is cheaper than carriage by rail. There is no probability in the future that that will be overcome. We are placed then in a position where we undoubtedly have the advantage in the carrying of the immense products of the west to the east. These must eventually pass over our territory, and it depends entirely on our people themselves whether we shall secure all that trade in our generation or leave that to be done by future generations. I am not going to discuss the question fully to-day, because probably a better opportunity will come later. I intend to go fully again into the question when the government announce its policy with regard to the commission for the purpose of inquiring into the transportation question. I think perhaps that that will be the better time to discuss the subject now before us. But we have the important announcement from the right hon. gentleman who leads the government that several propositions have been made by a company for the purpose of building this undertaking from the Georgian Bay to the port of Montreal, and that they were unreasonable and that the papers will be brought down and will justify the action of the government. He is favourable to the scheme as propounded by the ex-Minister of Public Works, and says it is a necessity for the country to complete the canal from Georgian Bay to Lake Nipissing. That may be the commencement of a great undertaking, but it would not be, in my opinion—and I have read all the articles on the subject—worth the expenditure of a single cent if the undertaking were to be completed in the manner proposed by the hon. member for Norfolk. He stated that big vessels can be carried on a twelve-foot navigation cheaper than on a twenty-one-foot navigation. The navigation of the western lakes by American boats down to Buffalo is on a twenty-foot navigation. The proposition of the ex-Minister of Public Works is the correct one, namely, the continuation of a channel of that depth of water down to Montreal, or, if we are going to use Lake Nipissing as part of the scheme, to have a twenty-one-foot navigation as far as Lake Nipissing.

Hon. Mr. TARTE. And there are only 61 feet to overcome.

Hon. Mr. HAGGART. That is all the difference between the Georgian Bay and Lake Nipissing, a rise of 61 feet. I may remark that I think all through navigation in the future should be made a depth of twenty-one feet, the depth which is adopted as a standard by the Americans between Lake Superior and Lake Michigan, and down the St. Mary's river to Buffalo. What an absurdity it would be to load boats at Port Arthur, bring them down to the mouth of the French river, reload them into barges drawing twelve feet of water, and carry them up a few miles to and through Lake Nipissing, then unload them again on a railway and carry them to Montreal. The case needs only to be stated to show its absurdity. The reason that our navigation on the St. Lawrence has not been utilized, up to the present time, to the extent it should be, is simply the fact that all vessels loading on the great lakes of the west are built for a navigation different from that which we have adopted on the St. Lawrence river. If we are to divert that traffic from the west to the east through our own waters, we must have a navigation the same as theirs. Perhaps I am going too fully into the subject.

I may say that I was gratified with the statement of the Prime Minister. He sees the importance of constructing that work. He agrees with the ex-Minister of Public Works as to the importance of extending the navigation into Lake Nipissing. The reason he rejected the proposal of the company was on account of its unreasonableness ; but he is prepared to consider, and perhaps enter into, an arrangement with a company that offers a more reasonable proposition. I am not going to discuss the question which the ex-Minister of Public Works has raised as to whether it would be better in the interests of the country that the government should retain absolute control of the canals, or whether it would be better to enter into some favourable arrangement with a company for the purpose of building that work up to Lake Nipissing. That is a question which should be considered entirely upon its merits. Some of the most important canals, doing the largest business in the world, are owned by companies, and that fact does not interfere with the benefit of the nations who are users of those canals. Possibly the company's proposition was an unreasonable one ; possibly we should adopt the argument of the ex-Minister of Public Works, who says that we should not part with any of our franchises in the manner that it is proposed to give them to companies. But that is beside the great project itself. I believe a Georgian Bay canal will do more for the development of this section of the country than any other scheme that has been proposed. I am in favour of its extension to Montreal. I am cosmopolitan enough to favour the scheme that was propounded by the Hon. John Young, when he was a member of this House for Montreal, who advocated the extension of that canal, with a depth of twenty-one feet, to the city of New York. He was of the opinion that that scheme, besides benefiting New York, would benefit this country and benefit particularly the port of Montreal. My hon. friend from Pontiac (Mr. Murray) says he does not expect to live to see this undertaking completed ; for myself, I hope to live at least to see it commenced. I believe that the future of this country depends greatly on the development of the natural advantages which we possess for the carriage from the west to the east of the immense quantity of products which is bound from year to year to increase.

Mr. T. S. SPROULE (East Grey). The hon. member who has just taken his seat made one statement with which I cordially agree, that if that canal was built it would be of immense value to the locality through which it runs. I do not think any one will disagree with that statement. It might be of great value to the country as a whole as a great highway of commerce ; I should neither affirm that nor deny it. But the gigantic undertaking itself is what interests me, in view of the very imperfect knowledge we have of it. Why, we cannot even discuss it intelligently, because we are entirely without any knowledge as to what it would cost the country. We have had that scheme before this House for several years. I remember distinctly that when it was brought before this House for the first time it was contended that the canal could be built and equipped for less than nine million dollars. I believe at that time it was intended to make it with a navigation of eighteen feet. The cost afterwards crept up to $15,000,000. I believe the next time it was discussed in this House we were told that we could have completed an eighteen feet navigation for an expenditure of $15,000,000, provided the country would raise part of the money and that a company could be found to raise the balance, and who would engage to build the work. The estimated cost was afterwards raised to $25,000,000, and it was said that undoubtedly the scheme could be completed for $25,000,000. The next time it was debated in this House the cost still remained an unknown quantity, because we were told that it might be anywhere from $25,000,000 to $60,000,000, but there was no doubt whatever that it could be done for $60,000,000. Now, it must be apparent to this House, as it is to the country, that the parties who are dealing with this scheme know very little about it. They have given us no intelligible data upon which to estimate the cost of this canal, nor can we judge even approximately what it is likely to cost. The ex-Minister of Public Works says that we do not know much about it, that we have very little definite information, but we do believe it would cost at least $80,000,000 to complete it. I have no doubt that next year the estimate will reach $100,000,000.

Now, I say that in view of this uncertainty, even if we were confronted by no other difficulties in regard to this undertaking, it behooves us to go slow, to move with great caution, until we get more correct data upon which to estimate the cost of that great undertaking. The hon. ex-Minister of Public Works said in reference to the hon. member for North Norfolk (Mr. Charlton) that he regretted the statement he had made that providing navigation between Georgian Bay and Lake Nipissing, or improving it, would benefit the Canadian Pacific Railway more than anybody else. The hon. ex-Minister said: I regret to see the disposition to create a prejudice against one of the great Canadian enterprises. It is not, in my judgment, with any desire to create a prejudice against that Canadian enterprise, but what I understood the hon. member for North Norfolk to intimate was that if the expenditure took place as contemplated last year it would be of more benefit to the Canadian Pacific Railway than it would be to the Canadian people. Therefore, he was justified in drawing attention to the matter. If the undertaking is engaged in under any consideration, it ought to be for one purpose principally and for one purpose alone, and that is for the purpose of making a great highway of commerce, a national highway of commerce, which would be valuable to the Dominion of Canada more than to any private enterprise in the Dominion of Canada.

Now, we have been informed, during the present session, that the government contemplate the appointment of a transportation commission to make inquiries, and to take into consideration the feasibility of different routes. I presume the object of the appointment of this commission is to get information as to the cost of these routes, the value of them when they are provided, the advantage they will be to the country as highways of commerce in and in view of that fact I say that we would be doing a very improper thing if we were to make any move towards committing the country to an undertaking of this nature before that commission had time to make ample inquiry and report to this House. If the merits of this route are as great as its advocates claim, that commission will undoubtedly find it out and so report to this House, and when we take up that project, if we ever do, it will be done more intelligently and with better information than the House is possessed of to-day. We have practically no information in regard to the cost of the undertaking. It seems that it is the merest guess work. Are we prepared to justify the Canadian parliament in commencing an undertaking that will cost anywhere from $60,000,000 to $150,000,000 or $200,000,000 ?

Mr. SPROULE.

Mr. MURRAY. May I ask the hon. gentleman a question ? Has he ever read the report of the Senate on the question ?

Mr. SPROULE. Yes, I have.

Mr. MURRAY. The information is given there.

Mr. SPROULE. I must frankly confess that I think the information given there is based on very imperfect data. It seems to me that it is the merest guess work in the world and as evidence that it is guess work, I may say, that when intelligent engineers have gone over the ground years afterwards, they have declared that the work will cost upwards of three times as much as that report shows it will cost. Is that not evidence that the information contained in that report is not based on reliable data, and is not such as we would be justified in accepting as even approximately indicating the cost. As year after year new men look into the enterprise, they report that a larger and a larger expenditure will be required to complete the work than previous engineers have estimated it at. That in itself is sufficient to show that the data is quite unreliable. I agree with the ex-Minister of Public Works in one thing in toto, and that is that if the enterprise is ever gone on with, it should be as a public work belonging to Canada and not be put into the hands of any private corporation. I think it is a great mistake to lock up our highways of commerce, or to leave them in the hands of private corporations that can tax the trade of the country, that can handicap the trade of the country on one route as compared with another, or that can place a tax upon commerce, thereby interfering with the freedom of commerce as a private corporation would undoubtedly do provided they were allowed to build that canal, because they will place a tax upon the commerce so as to get a return upon their money afterwards.

Another question which has interested me a good deal and in regard to which I cannot agree with the hon. ex-Minister of Public Works, and it is in regard to the great benefit that would accrue if we have the navigation between Georgian Bay and Lake Nipissing made good. Why, when we get to the port of Lake Nipissing, the nearest port to Montreal, we are no nearer to Montreal than we are at Midland or Parry Sound. What great advantage would it be to have the navigation made complete between Georgian Bay and Lake Nipissing if we reach no closer to Montreal at the end of the route than we are already by two or three very good routes of navigation so far as the Georgian Bay goes ? The navigation to Midland Harbour and to Parry Harbour, because the difference between Midland Harbour and Montreal and Parry Harbour and Montreal and the port of Lake Nipissing and Montreal are practically the same. We were told here last year that it would cost about $5,000,000 to make good the navigation between the Georgian Bay and the port of Lake Nipissing, yet, if that expenditure were made we would be no nearer Montreal than by the present lake navigation, either by way of Midland or of Parry Harbour. That being the case, it does seem to me that we are not justified in undertaking that heavy expenditure for making a route by way of Lake Nipissing that will be no better when it is finished than routes we have at the present time.

There is another thing that I have often thought and I think it should not be lost sight of, and it is that the history of the past has taught us a very important lesson that no matter how cheaply transportation is carried on by water, the railway companies nearly always manage to compete with it during the season of navigation. We have evidence of that in the trade between Buffalo and New York. They have a canal which affords some nine feet of navigation, but the railways carry grain over the same distance for about the same cost and they compete with the canal there. It does not necessarily follow that because railways will carry products the same distance for the same cost during the season of navigation we should not incur expense to build canals, because there is another very important element which comes in and that is that canals are a guarantee of low transportation as long as we have them and they hold the railways in check. If the canals do nothing more than this we should have these highways of commerce. Now, I am not arguing against the feasibility of this route as a great highway of commerce, provided we have twenty-one or twenty-two feet of navigation. I agree with the hon. member for South Lanark (Hon. Mr. Haggart) that if we ever have that route we must at least have twenty-one feet of navigation. I do not agree with the hon. member for North Norfolk (Mr. Charlton) that navigation can be carried on as successfully with a canal where there is only fourteen or fifteen feet of water as with a canal where there is twenty-one feet of water.

Hon. Mr. TARTE. Is the hon. gentleman quite sure that we can have twenty-one feet of water from Lake Nipissing right down ?

Mr. SPROULE. I am not questioning that because I do not know anything about it, but what I say is that if it is to be a very great commercial waterway, for the whole of the Dominion of Canada, the best results can only be obtained by making it at least twenty-one feet, because the whole trend of the times is to have vessels of larger and larger capacity every year. The other day a vessel came to Midland laden with 350,000 bushels of grain, and day after day vessels come to Meaford, Collingwood, Midland, Parry Harbour and Georgian Bay ports carrying 250,000 bushels, whereas a few years ago 20,000 bushels was considered a large cargo. When such large vessels get to a fifteen-foot navigation they would simply have to tranship and the cost of transhipping once would equal the cost of transporting a thousand miles by water. This shows the importance of having twenty-one-foot navigation if the results that will accrue to Canada generally are to be at all commensurate with the expenditure. Let me say in conclusion that we should make haste slowly. I do not underestimate the value of waterways, but I do say that in face of the imperfect information we have ; in the absence of any definite information as to what this scheme would cost ; in view further of the fact that we have a commission appointed now to inquire into these things, the scheme should be left in abeyance for the present. We should get all the information possible for this House and then let parliament exercise its judgment as to whether or not it would be in the interest of the country for us to undertake this gigantic scheme.

Mr. N. A. BELCOURT (Ottawa). Whenever this great project has been under discussion in this parliament the hon. member for East Grey (Mr. Sproule) never misses an opportunity to tender advice and to impress upon us that we should go slowly. He generally supports that advice with the statement that we know nothing about the subject, and that he himself in particular knows nothing about it. If the hon. gentleman (Mr. Sproule) wishes to enlighten himself on this subject ; if he wishes to know something about it, I would advise him to look up the very valuable information published by the company which at one time contemplated the construction of this work.

Mr. SPROULE. The ex-minister (Hon. Mr. Tarte) told the House a few minutes ago that we knew little or nothing about this scheme, and I based my statement on his remarks. If the hon. gentleman (Hon. Mr. Tarte), who has considered the matter carefully, has to admit that he knows nothing about it I do not need to apologize.

Mr. BELCOURT. I take the statement made by the hon. member (Mr. Sproule) that he personally knew nothing of the subject. I know he must be open to conviction, and I suppose that he wishes enlightenment, and therefore I invite him to read the pamphlet which was published by the company to which I have referred.

Mr. SPROULE. I have read every word of it.

Mr. BELCOURT. I am sorry the hon. gentleman has so soon forgotten it.

Mr. SPROULE. You may tender that advice to the ex-minister (Hon. Mr. Tarte).

Mr. BELCOURT. I am afraid I will have to assume that the hon. member (Mr.

Sproule) has made up his mind against the project, or otherwise he would not be so prone to tell us how little we know about it, and how much less he knows about it. I would ask him to read the report of Mr. Wisner, who is one of the most prominent engineers on this continent, who has travelled from the Georgian Bay to Montreal, who has examined the surveys which have been made and who has given his emphatic opinion that the improvement of the river Ottawa on the lines suggested is not only feasible, but that it is also to be a great commercial success. It has been my pleasure on many occasions, Mr. Speaker, for years past, both in this parliament and elsewhere to urge as strongly as I could in my humble way the canalization of the Ottawa river from the Georgian Bay to Montreal. I do not propose at this hour, when other business is so pressing, to go over the whole ground at length, but it is my duty to emphasize one or two points. First of all, I wish to say that the improvement of the Ottawa river is a work which does not, as some people imagine, interest only a few constituencies which border upon the Ottawa river. It must be apparent to every member of this House as it is to the commercial community of Canada that the construction of the Georgian Bay canal is of the vastest importance to every portion of Canada.

Some hon. MEMBERS. Hear, hear.

Mr. BELCOURT. It may be that it does not directly benefit the riding of East Grey, and for that reason the hon. gentleman (Mr. Sproule) may be opposed to it; but there is no doubt in the world that it will be of vast advantage to Canada as a whole. The tremendous immigration to western Canada; the enormous development of our wheat fields, as well also as the development of coal mining and the steel industry in the east, all point to the construction of this route as a public necessity in order that the products of the east may be brought to the consumers in the west, and that the products of the west may be carried to the seaboard. For my part, I believe that the construction of the whole of the canal from Georgian Bay to Montreal is a necessity. So far as I am concerned, I do not believe that it should stop at the deepening of the French river. I believe that the deepening of the French river alone would not be for the benefit of Canada as a whole, although it would undoubtedly bring the grain to North Bay, so that the Canadian Pacific Railway would unquestionably derive the greatest benefit from that work. If the Ottawa river is going to be improved, as I am sure it will be, it must be improved all the way from the Georgian Bay to Montreal. It has become manifest to all who have studied the question of water transportation as against railway transportation, that the former is undoubtedly the cheapest means of transport. On that score I shall read to the House an extract from the report of M. de Freycinet, President of the French Senate, who in a report recently sent to the Senate said :

It is conceded that waterways and railways are destined not to supplant, but to supplement each other. Between the two there is a natural division of traffic. To the railroads goes the least burdensome traffic, which demands regularity and quick transit ; to the waterways gravitate the heavy freights of small value which can only be transported where freights are low. Waterways, by increasing traffic, are rather the auxiliaries than the competitors of railroads. In procuring for manufacture cheap transportation for coal and raw materials, they create freights whose subsequent transportation gives profit to the railroads.

This seems to me to sum up the question in a very practical and lucid way, and shows that the construction of the Ottawa ship canal will not in any way antagonize or interfere with the railways of Canada. On the contrary, I think that the improvement of the navigation of the Ottawa river will actually benefit the railways of Canada.

One reason which to my mind has made the deepening of the Ottawa river a greater necessity than ever, is the recent decision of the state of New York to construct the Erie barge canal at a cost of $101,000,000. In connection with that project, I would like to cite to the House what is thought of the Georgian Bay canal by no less an authority than the 'Engineering News,' which published last month a very exhaustive article, from which I will quote one or two passages. It says :

We presented last week a comparison of the New York barge canal and the federal deep waterway as economic transportation routes to the seaboard ; and showed, we believe, the great superiority of the larger project. We now have to suggest to the legislators of New York and to the New York commercial organizations which are pushing the barge canal scheme, that they inform themselves as to the waterway which Canada has on foot.

It will be noticed that this American publication is far removed from the ignorance which has been admitted by the hon. member for East Grey (Mr. Sproule), because it gives the particulars of the surveys, the cost of construction, the manner of construction, and so on, of the Ottawa and Georgian Bay canal. It goes on :

We do not refer now to the 14-foot navigation via the Welland canal and the St. Lawrence, although that is by no means to be ignored. What we desire to point out is that if New York should decide to spend $80,000,000 on a barge canal, it might be rendered obsolete long before its completion by the construction of a Canadian deep waterway to the sea big enough for any of the vessels now navigating the lakes.

We respectfully submit to the New York barge canal promoters the question how their barge canal could hope to compete with such a route. Indeed, we may make the question a broader one, and ask how any route to the seaboard which requires transhipment could possibly compete with a route which takes freight on board a lake steamer at upper lake ports, and delivers it at tidewater without breaking bulk.

Again it says :

From an engineering point of view, disregarding for the moment political boundaries, there can be no doubt that the Ottawa route is by far the best for a deep waterway from the upper lakes to the sea. So far as export traffic from the north-west to Europe is concerned, it offers by far the shortest possible route, and practically its only drawback is the dangers of navigation of the St. Lawrence gulf.

Here is an American paper admitting that the Ottawa and Georgian Bay canal is, to use its own language, by far the shortest possible route and consequently the best route to the seaboard. In view of the fact that the people on the other side of the line are realizing the importance of informing themselves on the question of our deep waterways, and that they are very much concerned over the prospect of our building this great route, and are going to spend $101,000,000 to build a barge canal for the purpose of competing for the traffic of the west, it is not plain that we should not, in the words of an hon. gentleman, go slow on this question. I am not contending that the government should this session go ahead and provide money for this work; but I say that if a company comes prepared to give the government a sufficient guarantee of its ability, financial and otherwise, to construct this canal, the government should give their fullest consideration to the proposal, unless they think that public opinion would warrant them in undertaking the work themselves. I am not concerned whether it is done by the government or by a company. My preference would be to have it done by the government, because I think it would tend greatly to check railway competition and exorbitant railway rates. In the meantime, I think the government should at the earliest possible moment fully inform themselves on this great project, and not allow valuable time to go by, while our competitors on the other side are doing all they can to take the traffic from us. The construction of the Erie barge canal means keener competition than ever for our transportation route. It means that another strong effort is going to be made to divert the traffic from the St. Lawrence via Montreal to New York via Buffalo. I believe this subject must be taken up seriously without delay, and given the very best consideration its importance deserves.

Mr. THOMAS MACKIE (North Renfrew). Mr. Speaker, in regard to this Georgian Bay canal, I do not call it a canal, but a great stretch of lakes with narrows between them. These narrows are very short in places, and it should not cost very much to make them navigable. This work will give us a great waterway all the way from Montreal to the Georgian Bay. I know probably as much about this route as any other member of the House. I have driven timber from North Bay into the Georgian Bay, and down by the great lakes and the St. Lawrence to Quebec, and I have taken timber from four miles east of North Bay down the Ottawa and St. Lawrence to Quebec, without any difficulty. If the hon. member for East Grey (Mr. Sproule) had gone over this route, he would know better what he is talking about. I notice that the hon. member for East Grey (Mr. Sproule) is always ready to oppose anything required for eastern Ontario, but is always ready to support any proposition in the interest of western Ontario. I am sure that any one who knows the Ottawa river route will come to the conclusion that there is a great waterway there. It will cost money to open it up, of course; but it costs money to open up any route. I do not believe, however, that it will be necessary to construct more than twenty miles of canal to provide a twenty-one-foot channel all the way from the Georgian Bay to the St. Lawrence river. I hope the government will look into the matter. I am opposed to the canal ending at North Bay; I would like to see it go through. I do not care whether the work is done by the government or by a private company so long as it goes through.

It is the cheapest and quickest route by which grain can be brought from the North-west. We cannot get railways into the North-west for a number of years, but we could get by this route to North Bay in one year, and our railways would be able to carry all the grain from the North-west. I hope that the government will look into the matter, and I am sure they cannot fail to come to the conclusion that they will have to build without delay at least the first portion to North Bay. Although I am opposed to the work being done piece-meal, I would rather see it come in that way than not attempted at all, and then in a few years we will have this route completed to Montreal at a cost which, I believe, will be far less than many people imagine. There have been some very complete surveys of the Ottawa river made in the old days and the estimated cost did not figure up to anything then like what is estimated now. I trust that the hon. members of this House will not oppose the project but give it their support, and I am satisfied it will be a success in the long run.

Motion agreed to.

MOTIONS AGREED TO WITHOUT DISCUSSION.

Copies of lease made between the superintendent general of Indian Affairs and S. G. Holbrook and Adam S. Benn for the south half of lot number twelve, concession two, township of Tuscarora, county of Brant, also of lease made by said superintendent general to one Gibson for south half of lot number five, in said township, for better identification both said half lots belonging to or for the benefit of Indian locatee, Robert S. Sawyer ; also of lease or agreement for or in reference to one of said half lots made (previous to said leases to Holbrook and Benn and Gibson) by said superintendent general, or the late Indian agent, Captain Hugh Stewart, to or with one R. Brant ; also of all indorsements made on the said leases, or any of them ; also of all other agreements or writings made by or between said superintendent general, or Indian agent Daniel J. Lynch, and said Holbrook and Benn in reference to the said lease to them ; also of all receipts or acknowledgments made to the department having charge of Indian Affairs, or the said Lynch, of or for rent or other payments made by the said Holbrook and Benn, or either of them, under or in connection with the said lease to them, or having reference to or in connection with the lands mentioned therein; also of all letters or correspondence between the said department or Indian agent, the late Captain Hugh Stewart and Daniel J. Lynch, and the said Holbrook and Benn, Gibson and Brant, or either or any of them, or from or to either or any of them to the other of them, in reference to or in connection with any or either of the matters or things above mentioned, or in reference to or in connection with a certain order for ten dollars, dated the third of April, nineteen hundred and one, made by said Sawyer on Hugh Stewart, late Indian agent, in favour of said Holbrook ; also copies of all letters or correspondence between said department and said Indian agent, Daniel J. Lynch, or by or from either and each to the other, in connection with or in reference to any or either of the said matters or things ; also statement in detail, showing all moneys received by the said department from said Indian agent, Daniel J. Lynch, for or on account of any of the said matters and things aforesaid, with dates, items and amounts, and for which, and what ; and also to or for what, and for and by whom, such money was paid out or applied ; also of any petitions, or writings in the nature of petitions, in reference to Indian agent Daniel J. Lynch, and the names of those signing the same ; also of all other documents, papers and writings in connection with or in reference to all or any or either of the matters aforesaid.—Hon. Mr. Tisdale.

Copies of all corespondence and Orders in Council relating to or concerning the leases issued to Robert Anderson, J. J. Doyle, et al., Messrs. Bronson and Ray, C. A. Matson, et al., and Joseph W. Boyle, respectively, and to all other leases now in force, issued to other parties for hydraulic mining locations, in the Yukon territory.—Mr. Ross, Yukon.

Return of the contract entered into between the government and the Canadian Construction Company, for enlargement and improvement of the Farran's point canal, and the profiles, plans, drawings, and specifications in conection therewith ; all accounts and claims made by the said contractors, for extras or damages under or in connection with this contract ; and particularly claims Nos. 3b, 9 and 10, made by the contractors. Copy of the Order in Council of February 5th, 1900, authorizing the payment of $70,309.74 to the construction company. And a return of all papers, documents, letters, memoranda, Orders in Council, and rulings of the honourable the Treasury Board in reference to the items 8b, lock foundation on rock, $9,588.50; 9, extra unwatering of prism, $7,534.28, as referred to on pages A—24 to A—36, inclusive, of the Auditor General's report for the year ending 30th June.—Mr. Lennox.

Mr. MACKIE.

TRANSPORTATION COMMISSION.

Hon. Mr. TARTE moved for :

Copy of the Order in Council appointing Sir William Van Horne, Mr. John Bertram, and Mr. Harold Kennedy, members of the commission on transportation ; and of other documents and papers, relating to the appointment of such a commission.

The PRIME MINISTER. There is no Order in Council yet passed but there will be one in a few days, and it will be brought down.

Motion agreed to.

GERMAN DISCRIMINATION AND THE BOND-HAY TREATY.

Mr. A. E. KEMP (East Toronto). At the beginning of the session, the right hon. the First Minister promised to lay on the Table all correspondence between this government and Germany and the imperial authorities regarding German discrimination, but so far that correspondence has not yet been brought down. I would also ask when the correspondence between Canada and the government of Great Britain with regard to the Bond-Hay treaty will be laid on the Table.

The PRIME MINISTER. The correspondence with Germany will be brought down to-morrow. With regard to the correspondence between Canada and Great Britain on the subject of the Bond-Hay treaty, we are at present communicating with the imperial authorities in order to have power to bring down certain despatches which form part of this correspondence, and the authority to do so has not yet come.

CRUELTY TO ANIMALS.

Bill (No. 39) to make further provision for the prevention of cruelty to animals and to amend the Criminal Code 1892 (Mr. Brock) read the second time, and the House went into Committee thereon.

On Section 1.

The PRIME MINISTER (Right Hon. Sir Wilfrid Laurier). Will my hon. friend (Mr. Brock) please explain the object he has in view in this Bill ?

Mr. BROCK. The Bill is a very short one, and has been drawn up to meet cases arising in the actual experience of those interested in these matters. The object, in the first place, is to provide that cars used for the transportation of cattle shall be provided with fodder, that they shall be properly clean and kept clean, and that where cattle are unloaded for the purpose of resting, watering or feeding, the car shall be cleaned out and reprovided with proper bedding. I may explain that in our cattle market in Toronto, cattle arrive from a distance in a most shocking state with dirt, having been put in a car where they are shipped hundreds of miles away, brought down, changed at times to be watered or rested and returned to the same filthy car. This Bill provides that where they are unloaded for the purpose of resting, water or feed, that the car should be cleaned out—that is, wherever possible—exception being provided for cases where the dirt is frozen solid and the cars cannot be cleaned. It also provides that the cars must have proper feed and bedding.

The MINISTER OF RAILWAYS AND CANALS (Hon. A. G. Blair). Has the hon. gentleman (Mr. Brock) before him the statute he seeks to amend ?

Mr. BROCK. I have not it before me, but it is quoted in the Bill—subsection 5, section 514 of the Criminal Code. The most important provision of the Bill, probably, is that in the next subsection, which reads :

5a. No smaller animals shall be confined or carried in the same car, van or vessel with any larger animals of different species, unless a suitable and substantial partition, securely fastened to the car, van or vessel, is placed and maintained, and is sufficiently strong, to keep the smaller animals securely separate from the larger animals.

A year ago, I was sent for to go to the cattle market in Toronto to inspect a carload of animals that had been sent in from some distance. Lambs and sheep had been driven in under the larger cattle, and many of them arrived in Toronto in a most shocking state. The lambs and some of the sheep had been trampled and some were disembowelled. The railway company stated that they had no responsibility in the matter, the responsibility being with the shipper. It is difficult to get at the shippers as they may be at a great distance and hard to find. We thought, therefore, that we should have an Act of this kind by which we could get at the railway in case cattle should arrive in such a state. The last section of the Bill provides for right of entry and is as follows :

The right of entry provided for in section 515 of the said code may be exercised in or upon any car, van, truck, vehicle, cockpit, vessel, place or premises in which any police officer or constable has reasonable grounds for supposing that any breach of sections 512, 513 or 514, as hereby amended, is taking or has taken place.

That is the whole Bill.

The MINISTER OF RAILWAYS AND CANALS. I may explain that this is the very first moment that my attention has been called to this Bill and that I learn that it deals at all with the question of railways. That being the case, I am quite unable, at the moment, to give such consideration to the clauses of the Bill as would enable me to pass upon them with any satisfaction to myself or with any advantage to the committee. I think that the Bill is one that might very properly be referred in the ordinary way to the Select Standing Committee on Railways. It has a very important bearing on railways, and should be threshed out by that committee. I have no doubt at all that the hon. gentleman (Mr. Brock) is proposing a very proper remedy for very serious grievances. I have no opinion at all against this Bill, and it is not with the view of offering the slightest opposition to it that I make the suggestion that this committee rise and the Bill be referred to the committee on Railways, where the matter can be better dealt with.

Mr. BROCK. I have no objection whatever to the suggestion of the hon. minister (Mr. Bair). But the hon gentleman and the House will see that this Bill applies not only to railways, but to farmers who bring cattle into market, as they often do, in large vans. It also has reference to the loading of cattle aboard vessels.

The MINISTER OF RAILWAYS AND CANALS. Of course, it is not limited to railways, but it has an important bearing upon the operation of railways. Will my hon. friend (Mr. Brock) move that the committee rise, so that the reference to the railway company may take place.

Mr. BROCK. I am quite willing to take that course, as I take it that it is the quickest way to reach the object I have in view, which is to have this Bill made a law as soon as possible.

Mr. MONK. This is a Bill to make further provision for the prevention of cruelty to animals and to amend the Criminal Code, 1892. It can be only incidently—I think very incidently—that it would require the consideration of the Railway Committee. I understand that it may be necessary for the hon. minister to look into the Bill but there is something ominous in the reference of the Bill to the Railway Committee. I was about to suggest to my hon. friend from Centre Toronto (Mr. Brock) that the Bill might be allowed to stand for the consideration of the minister instead of being referred to the Railway Committee.

Mr. BROCK. I simply wanted to have the Bill made law, and if the best way is to allow it to stand for the present, I am willing to allow it to stand.

The MINISTER OF RAILWAYS AND CANALS. I would suggest that my hon. friend (Mr. Brock) should move that the committee rise, report progress and ask leave to sit again. I do not know why my hon. friend from Jacques Cartier (Mr. Monk) should speak as he does about the reference to the Railway Committee. I do not think that he has anything that would justify the suggestion that Bills referred to that committee receive anything but the fullest and fairest consideration.

Mr. MONK. I have found such a reference to be the death of a Bill.

The MINISTER OF RAILWAYS AND CANALS. And why not ? What is the use of having a committee, unless it has full power to express its judgment upon measures referred to it ?

Mr. MONK. I think mine is the experience of a great many members of this House.

The MINISTER OF RAILWAYS AND CANALS. I do not agree with my hon. friend (Mr. Monk). The reference to the committee is simply for the better guidance and management of our legislation. There is no such object in view as the hon. gentleman suggests. I move that the committee rise, report progress and ask leave to sit again.

Hon. Mr. TISDALE. When a minister asks that such a course should be followed, we take it as equivalent to an assurance on the part of the government that the Bill shall not be delayed, but shall come back to the House in good time. Otherwise it would not be fair to the hon. mover of the Bill to take such a step. But assuming that the motion is equivalent to the assurance I speak of, I do not know of any better place for the consideration of these clauses with regard to the shipment of animals than the Railway Committee. That is the proper tribunal. But, if the minister does not agree that the Bill shall go there with the understanding I have mentioned, it might be equivalent to the death of the Bill. He will see that we have a chance. I think that is the best course to adopt.

Progress reported.

OTTAWA VALLEY RAILWAY COMPANY.

Mr. MONK moved the second reading of Bill (No. 59) respecting the Ottawa Valley Railway Company.

Mr. C. MARCIL (Bonaventure). I object to this Bill being taken up in place of Bill (No. 36) respecting the Atlantic and Lake Superior Railway Company. Some nights ago when Bill (No. 36) came up, the hon. member for Nicolet (Mr. Ball) moved the second reading, and he was asked to allow it to stand. I object to Bill (No. 59) being read, because it is connected with Bill (No. 36). I have just allowed Bill (No. 36) to stand at the request of the member for Nicolet. I do not want Bill (No. 59) to go on now, because it forms part of Bill (No. 36). I want both Bills to stand, or else I wish to proceed with Bill (No. 36).

The PRIME MINISTER (Rt. Hon. Sir Wilfrid Laurier). Stand.

SECOND READINGS.

Bill (No. 60) respecting the Huron and Ontario Railway Company.—Mr. Ross (Ontario)—by Mr. Calvert.

Bill (No. 68) to incorporate the Lumbermen's Fire Insurance Company.—Mr. Charlton—by Mr. Calvert.

Bill (No. 84) respecting the Quebec and New Brunswick Railway Company.—Mr. Belcourt—by Mr. Lemieux.

Bill (No. 85) to incorporate the Berlin, Waterloo, Wellesley and Georgian Bay Railway Company.—Mr. Clare—by Mr. Lancaster.

Bill (No. 87) to incorporate the Vancouver and Coast Kootenay Railway Company.—Mr. Macpherson—by Mr. McCreary.

Bill (No. 89) to incorporate the Brockville and North-western Railway Company.—Mr. Dyment—by Mr. Dyment.

Bill (No. 90) respecting the Niagara-Welland Power Company, Limited; and to change its name to the Niagara-Welland Power Company.—Mr. Guthrie—by Mr. Calvert.

Bill (No. 91) to incorporate the Dominion Gas Improvement Company.—Mr. Belcourt.

Bill (No. 92) respecting the Dominion Burglary Guarantee Company, Limited; and to change its name to the Dominion Guarantee Company, Limited.—Mr. Bickerdike.

THE NEW CANADIAN COMPANY, LIMITED.

Mr. LEMIEUX. A mistake has been committed. Bill (No. 83) to incorporate the New Canadian Company, Limited, which stands in my name, has been passed over.

Mr. DEPUTY SPEAKER. It has been called.

The PRIME MINISTER (Rt. Hon. Sir Wilfrid Laurier). He can move it now.

Mr. LEMIEUX moved that Bill (No. 83) be read the second time.

Mr. MONK. When the hon. gentleman's Bill (No. 83) was called, it was I who asked that it stand, because I think it is connected with the two other Bills which have been ordered to stand.

The PRIME MINISTER. Stand.

Order allowed to stand.

SHIPPING FEDERATION OF CANADA.

Mr. BICKERDIKE moved the second reading of Bill (No. 93) to incorporate the Shipping Federation of Canada.

Mr. SPROULE. It will be well to have an explanation of this Bill. I see some intimations in the press that this is rather far reaching in its nature.

Mr. BICKERDIKE. There is nothing very far reaching about the Bill. The shipping firms of Montreal wish to incorporate themselves into an association similar to the bankers association, or the butchers association, or any other association for mutual protection. I do not think there is anything outside of that in the Bill, but if there is, I will explain it to the hon. gentleman (Mr. Sproule). I know there is nothing in it other than an ordinary association of steamship companies just on the same principle as the bankers or any other association now exists.

Mr. SPROULE. From the press reports it would seem that it is a combine of the shipping people of Montreal, and if that is so, it might be a very far reaching and injurious Bill, and it still seems so from the limited explanation that the hon. gentleman has given as to the aim of the Bill.

Mr. BICKERDIKE. If it were such a Bill I would not have introduced it.

Motion agreed to, and Bill read the second time.

SUPPLY—RAILWAY ACCIDENTS.

The PRIME MINISTER (Rt. Hon. Sir Wilfrid Laurier) moved that the House again go into Committee of Supply.

Mr. E. F. CLARKE (West Toronto). Mr. Speaker, before you leave the Chair I desire to draw the attention of the right hon. First Minister (Sir Wilfrid Laurier) and the hon. Minister of Railways and Canals (Hon. Mr. Blair) to the return which was brought down to the House the other day as to the number of railway accidents which have occurred in the Dominion of Canada during the past six months, and the enormous attendant loss of life. The return brought down covers the period from the first of October last to the first of April, and during that period of six months no less than 142 accidents took place in which, or as a result of which, 179 human lives were lost. It is a matter profoundly to be regretted that even since the first of April there have been other railway accidents. Several have occurred since that time in which, or as a result of which, many human lives have been lost. There seems to have been an epidemic, if I may use the expression, of accidents during the past eight or nine months. From the information obtained from the government, it appears, Mr. Speaker, that there is no public official under the control of the Department of Railways and Canals, or of the Minister of Labour, whose duty it is to make inquiry at once into the cause which has led to these accidents, to make inquiry under oath to ascertain all the particulars antecedent and leading up to an accident, to ascertain any steps that might be taken to avoid a recurrence of a similar accident, to ascertain what was the condition of the road bed and rolling stock, to make inquiry as to the number of hours employees on these railways are on duty, to make inquiry as to the efficiency of the train crew, as to the sufficiency of the station help, as to the hours the station masters are supposed to be at work, and also to make inquiry as to the experience and efficiency of the telegraph operators. I think it must appeal to hon. gentlemen on both sides of the House that in view of the number of accidents that have happened during the past six months in the conduct of our railways and in view of the fact that these railways are operated under a code of rules which have to be submitted to and approved by the government it is in the public interest that some official should be appointed at once by the government and given full power to make inquiries as to these accidents and to endeavour to ascertain their causes and put a stop to their recurrence in the future. We learned recently from the hon. Minister of Railways and Canals that there was no official whose duty it was to make such an inquiry. At present, all the information that the public obtain as to the cause of an accident, is gleaned from the finding of the coroner's jury, but I am sure I am within the sense of this House when I say that these juries do not obtain all the information that is necessary for the public to form a judgment as to the causes which have led to the accident. It seems to me that there is something wanting in the method adopted by coroners' juries to obtain this information. It seems to me that it is necessary in the public interest that an official should be appointed to make these inquiries, not only that a more searching investigation may be made into the causes of accidents, but also that the employees of the company who may be called to give evidence may have the protection which such an official could afford them in giving evidence before a jury or making a statement to him. I believe that in the United Kingdom there is some public official whose duty it is when a serious railway accident occurs involving a loss of human life to proceed at once to the scene of the accident, make a full and complete inquiry and report to the government. I am sure it is so self evident that it is desirable to have an inquiry of this kind instituted and a report made to the government that I only need to draw the attention of the right hon. First Minister and of his colleagues of the government to the situation which exists in Canada, to have them take definite action in this matter at the earliest possible moment. We have the Department of Railways and Canals and we have also a Department of Labour. It would surely be the function of an official of one or other of these departments to act in the manner suggested. I believe that the Department of Labour has an official whose duty it is to inquire into the number of hours, work performed, the wages paid, and so on, on works with which the government is identified. I think under these circumstances the powers of this officer might be enlarged, or some officer might be appointed from the Department of Railways and Canals to make an investigation such as I have suggested and to make a report. I saw it stated in one of the English papers recently that during the year 1902, notwithstanding the many millions of passengers carried by railways in the United Kingdom, not one human life was lost. It is deplorable and regrettable that the public of Canada have had to read from day to day and month to month during the past six or eight months of accident succeeding accident with daily regularity and with attendant loss of life and property. I think if such an officer as I have suggested were appointed the result would probably be greater care upon the part of all concerned in the management and operation of railways. Railway companies have been given great privileges and great powers; they ought to be held responsible by the people for the way in which these privileges and powers are exercised, and it seems to me that if a rigid inquiry were made whenever an accident occurs in which human life is lost, and if those responsible were held strictly accountable for the loss of human life, much greater care would be exercised than at present in the operation of these roads, and the result would be that in future we would have fewer accidents and less loss of life. I ask the Prime Minister or the Minister of Railways and Canals, or the Postmaster General or whatever minister is to answer: What is the policy of the government with respect to this matter? Has the attention of the government been called to these frightful accidents which are growing constantly more frequent from one end of the country to the other? Is it the intention of the government to take some decisive action to have an inquiry on oath as to the cause of these accidents? Is it the intention of the government to hold the company responsible, or the employees responsible, if dereliction of duty is shown? I am sure, Sir, that the matter is of sufficient importance to justify me in drawing the attention of the House to it at the present time. I know that the people throughout the country are commencing to fear very much, are in fact becoming nervous because of the frequency of these accidents.

The MINISTER OF RAILWAYS AND CANALS (Hon. A. G. Blair). I have no complaint to make at all that my hon. friend (Mr. Clarke) has brought the subject up this afternoon. He was good enough to drop me a note a few moments ago telling me that he would call attention to it when the House would go into Supply.

Mr. CLARKE. I did not expect the House to go into Supply for some hours yet.

The MINISTER OF RAILWAYS AND CANALS. I understand. Had I had a little more time it would have enabled me to bring down some information which might have a bearing upon the subject, but perhaps a subsequent opportunity may offer. The hon. gentleman (Mr. Clarke) is no doubt impressed, as others have been, with the extreme gravity of this subject. It is startling to think that so many lives have been lost in railway accidents within the short period of six months, and unless we had the actual figures one would have scarcely thought it possible. Immediately these facts were brought to my notice I submitted the subject for the consideration of my colleagues, and we have been considering it since at every spare moment which has been available to us. We are considering very seriously what is the best course for us to take. It has not escaped our attention, and I can assure my hon. friend that we are not indifferent in the matter. But it is a much easier thing to say that action should be taken than to determine upon the nature of the details of such action. In my own department there was an accident recently which it was possible for me to deal with without getting formal authorization from the Governor in Council, and I confess that I have not yet been able to find an individual possessing the precise qualifications that would be necessary to enable him to conduct such an inquiry in an efficient manner. You need a man who has practical experience in the operation of railways, who is familiar at least with the regulations in a general way, and who knows from having worked on railroads in what manner these accidents are likely to occur, so that he can press his investigation in the most effective way. Up to this time I have not been able to select a person who I think possesses the necessary qualifications for that purpose. The Railway Act contains ample power to authorize the Governor in Council to appoint an officer and to endow him with any powers which may be necessary for the purpose of conducting a thorough inquiry; authorizing the summoning of witnesses, the compelling of them giving testimony, the production of books, papers and documents, and all evidence that may throw light upon the question. I think the present legislation is ample in that respect. However, I would point out that that law has been on the statute-book for a very long number of years, ever since confederation, and it has never been acted upon so far as I am aware of. It may be that in a special case a person has been appointed to hold a particular individual inquiry, but there has been no official named or charged with the duty of holding inquiries whenever accidents upon railways occur, entailing loss of life or of property. I apprehend that there have been very grave accidents in the past; as disastrous no doubt to life and property as any that have recently occurred, so that the subject must have been oftentimes under consideration, but for one reason or another no official has been appointed. I am not authorized definitely to say just what action the Governor in Council will take upon this subject, but the House and the country may rest assured that we will endeavour to reach a wise conclusion in the premises, and if it shall appear to us that the appointment of an official for such a purpose would tend to produce good results, that course will be determined upon.

Mr. CLARKE. What is the practice in the old country ?

The MINISTER OF RAILWAYS AND CANALS. There is an official in the old country who has general authority to make on his own motion inquiry into any railway accidents and to report his conclusions to the Home Office or to the Board of Trade, or to some department of the imperial government. It may be that we would do well to have an official similarly equipped with power and appointed by the government of Canada. My hon. friend (Mr. Clarke) has alluded to the remarkable freedom from loss of life on railways in the old country. It is a very striking fact, but it does not mean that loss of life has not taken place to a very considerable extent in connection with the operation of railways. It merely refers to the fact that the lives of passengers have not been lost. The accidents referred to in the return brought down the other day are not accidents to passengers alone. A very small proportion of them involved loss of life to passengers on railway trains. We know, unfortunately, that some very serious casualties have occurred whereby passengers have lost their lives, but the great majority of deaths and permanent injury on railways occur in the shunting yards to employees, and not when the trains are on the line in the ordinary course of travel. The men get a carelessness bred by familiarity with the habit of jumping on and off shunting engines. They are fully alive to the danger and hazard of what they are doing when they are committing an indiscretion, but before they know what they are about, they are run over by a train and life is lost. So that it is not possible to organize any regulation which will protect the men to a complete extent, or to a much greater extent than the present regulations, against the consequences of their own negligence and folly. We had an accident of a grave character on the Intercolonial Railway the other day, one of the gravest that has occurred for a long time. It is almost impossible to form a judgment as to why or how that accident came about. I have had the very fullest reports from the officers of the department on the spot. There is no question at all but that every provision which has been ordained for the purpose of ensuring safety to trains coming and going which are liable to meet one another, had been observed, so far as regulations could do it. The conductors and engine men on both trains received their orders where the crossing of these two trains took place —at Windsor Junction; and they both acknowledged receiving them. The train which is entirely to blame for the collision came to the point at Windsor Junction where it ought to have stopped. There was the semaphore signal forbidding that train going out; yet, notwithstanding that the engine driver swept through, and within two miles and a half of where he should have stopped his train, it collided with the other.

Mr. INGRAM. How long was that engineer on duty ?

The MINISTER OF RAILWAYS AND CANALS. Only three or four hours ; he had just come fresh to his train. That officer was one of the best and most experienced men we had ; he had been thirty-two or thirty-three years in the service without a mark against him. It appears that he did not lose his life, and he has made the statement that he must have lost his senses, which is the only explanation he can make. He knew he was to stop, and was apparently thoroughly alive to the duty of his stopping the train until he came near to the point where it was to stop, and then the mental machinery failed to work. Now, I do not think, if we had an investigation of the fullest and amplest character, it would give us any more evidence as to the facts ; but I thought it was desirable, and I concluded that if I could find some suitable person who would go there and have everybody who knew anything at all about the matter give his evidence, I would have the matter thoroughly looked into. I do not know that we can get any more light, but it will be a satisfaction to know that every effort has been made to trace out all the facts and to see whether there is any fact that we do not know. I can only say to my hon. friend that we realize the full gravity and importance of this subject. We shall not treat it with indifference, but will deal with it in such a manner as we deem conducive to the protection of life and property.

Mr. A. E. KEMP (East Toronto). I am sure the members of the House will be gratified to know, from the statement of the hon. Minister of Railways and Canals, that the government have under consideration this very serious matter to which my hon. friend from West Toronto (Mr. Clarke) has referred. I was somewhat surprised a few days ago to learn that the government had not in their possession any statistics of the number of fatal accidents that occur on railroads, or the number of persons injured in railway accidents.

The MINISTER OF RAILWAYS AND CANALS. We are providing for that in the new Bill.

Mr. KEMP. I was going to suggest that the matter might be covered in the new Bill. The Minister of Railways and Canals has announced that under the law as it exists a person can be appointed to make an inquiry into an accident. In the past the public has been ignorant except in the case of fatal accidents, as to the cause of railway accidents, or where the responsibility rested.

It seems to me that we have arrived at a time in this country when the government should obtain under the Railway Act all the powers that are necessary, if they do not at present possess them, to investigate railway accidents, and also to see that the railway companies carry out the rules and regulations which are submitted to the government for approval. I am informed that sometimes there is a laxity in carrying out these rules and regulations, through overwork, the great pressure of traffic, and that sort of thing. I think it is the duty of the government to inquire into all these matters. However, I am very pleased to learn that the government have this subject under consideration, and all I would urge is that they try to put some machinery into operation as soon as possible with the view of minimizing and diminishing railway accidents, and somewhat approaching the state of perfection that exists in Great Britain, where my hon. friend states that during the year ending March 31st, 1902, there was not a single fatal railway accident.

The MINISTER OF RAILWAYS AND CANALS. Among the passengers.

Mr. KEMP. The memorandum which is taken from the newspapers, does not say that, but I accept that as correct.

Mr. A. B. INGRAM (East Elgin). I do not think there is so much fault to be found with the rules of the companies. I do not think the trouble lies there, but it is due to the management of the railways doing their utmost to cut down their operating expenses. To this end they discharge old reliable men and put into their places younger and inexperienced men. The cause lies in that more than in anything else. When freight becomes congested it takes the trains longer to pass over the lines, and the men are kept longer on duty. As a result of being a long time on duty accidents occur due to that reason, the employees not being as alert as they would be if they worked only ordinary hours. I think the greatest curse of all is this system of cutting down expenses at the cost of efficiency. The loss of life, not only of employees but of the travelling public, is a result of the experimenting by railway companies to reduce the cost of operating their lines. I think that the government would take a step in the right direction if they would appoint some first-class man who, in case of accident, would have full power to fairly investigate. These investigations held by coroners' juries are not reliable and in many cases do not bring out the actual facts. As one having some railway experience, I am in a position to say that the despatchers in railway offices frequently send orders which they refuse to O. K. If they carried out the rules of the company, they would O. K. these orders, but they have refused and what has been the result? The result has been that when the operators at the stations were asked to produce the O. K. they could not because the despatchers had refused to give it to them. So that an operator, although he had been doing his duty, had no proof to bring, because the despatcher refused to give the O. K. order. I know myself of a serious accident which was visited on a man who was perfectly innocent.

Mr. MONK. I would like to ask the Hon. Minister of Railways if he has taken any steps towards having an investigation generally into the frequency of these accidents during the past few months, and into the cause of the accident on the Intercolonial Railway?

The MINISTER OF RAILWAYS AND CANALS. I have said that nothing has been done in the way of appointing any official to pursue inquiries of this kind since the law has been on the statute-book, and that although I have power as minister, in connection with the Intercolonial Railway, to have an investigation on my own motion without getting authority by Order in Council, into the accidents which occur on the Intercolonial Railway, none have yet been investigated except by officials in the ordinary way, but that I was quite resolved to have, if I could find a suitable person, an official appointed for that purpose in connection with the Intercolonial Railway. I further stated that I would have an investigation into the recent accident.

Mr. MONK. What I asked the hon. gentleman was whether he had taken any steps of any kind to investigate into the cause of the frequency of these accidents during the few past months. We have had a discussion in which it has been urged that the accidents are nearly always due to the desire of railway companies to reduce the cost of operating their lines, and I wish to know if any steps had been taken at any time, of any kind, to investigate into this matter.

The MINISTER OF RAILWAYS AND CANALS. No.

Mr. G. BARKER (Hamilton). I am very glad to hear that the hon. Minister of Railways proposes to consider the question of making an inquiry through a proper official into the causes of accidents. This inquiry should not be made merely after an accident occurs but should be in the nature of a general and continuous inspection for the purpose of preventing accidents. I do not know, and I do not very much care to discuss whether the troubles we have had so frequently this year have been due to any one or more of the particular causes referred to in the House to-day. But whatever the cause, whenever a serious accident happens, you will find that there are two or three officials of one class or another implicated, each of whom has neglected some rule or order of the company, and that if any one of them had observed the rules and regulations approved by the government, the neglect of another would not have caused the accident. Nearly always you will find a combination of two or three errors causing an accident and that if one of the men had done his duty, no trouble would have occurred. I think that indicates a very general neglect to carry out the rules adopted by companies and approved by the government. Those who know anything about the railway rules are convinced that if they were observed, an accident would be almost impossible except from some defect of machinery or appliance. In nearly every case there are two or three officials, one checking the other, and if any one of them did his duty there would be no accident. The difficulty is rather this, that a man working year after year without anything happening, becomes convinced that some particular rule is not essential to the safety of the train, and he neglects complying with it, and of course, when no accident occurs, nothing is ever heard of the neglect of the rule. That is due to the very natural reluctance of one employee to peach on his fellow employee. The officials of the railway companies probably never hear of the neglect until some lives are lost, or there is some destruction of property. Then an investigation takes place, and they learn that for months, and perhaps for years, some particular rule never has been observed. The inspector, of which the hon. member for West Toronto has spoken, should be a man in continuous employment, and not one sent out simply when the minister hears of some dreadful accident. He should be on duty as inspector from the beginning of the year to the end, travelling continually over the railways and seeing that the rules provided for the safety of the public are being observed. If a competent official of that kind were appointed I am satisfied that many of these accidents would be avoided, and we would have less need for investigating the cause of destruction of life and property.

At six o'clock, House took recess.

After Recess.

House resumed at eight o'clock.

Mr. J. B. MORIN (Dorchester). Mr. Speaker, I ask leave to say a few words on the subject of wrecks and loss of life upon the railways, which was under discussion before the House rose for recess. These disasters seem to have been especially frequent since the last of December; the losses since that time have been quite remarkable. It is time steps should be taken to prevent the continuance of this great evil. We are sent here by the people to represent the people and to protect them, and this is an occasion that calls for action on our part. We have before us, in the person of the hon. Minister of Railways (Hon. Mr. Blair) the man who should take the first step in this matter. Of course, unless that hon. gentleman moves, other managers and presidents of railways will say : So long as the government remains inactive, we will do the same. And in so saying they will be quite right. The Minister of Railways is the proper man and the only man to set this reform in motion. We were told in 1896 that this government would be a government of reform and a government of example. Let the government set the example and bring forth a proper measure of reform. What I wish to say is this—for I will speak but a few moments and would like to be well understood—in the first place the Minister of Railways must be aware of how his own men are worked on the government railways. I cannot speak so well about the government railways, but speaking of railways that I do know, I can tell the House that drivers—engineers, as some call them, but they call themselves 'drivers'—firemen, conductors and telegraph operators work too many hours at a stretch. Often, you see these men go on duty in the morning with instructions to remain on duty until they are told to quit. Sometimes they will be ten, twelve and even fifteen hours on duty. The result may be that a wreck takes place and there is a loss of life. And when the question is asked by the public how the accident occurred, they are told : It was on account of the operator. But there is somebody behind, and the operator is not always to blame. Those who give instructions to the operator are often to blame. When the men in responsible positions tell an operator or an engineer, or a conductor, to stay on duty until he is told to quit, they are the men who are to blame, and the only ones. The Minister of Railways, being at the head of the government in these matters, should make the first move, and provide that drivers, conductors, firemen and telegraph operators shall be allowed to work only so many hours out of the twenty-four. Understand me well—when I say they should be restricted to so many hours, I do not mean to say that you should go to the extreme. To say that one of these employees shall not work more than fourteen hours or sixteen hours would not do. Take a driver who runs an express at the rate of forty, forty-five or fifty miles an hour, and sometimes even at sixty miles an hour, at the risk of his life—such a man should not be on duty more than four hours at a time, say four out of sixteen or twenty. Working for such a length of time, these men will be fit, and it will be safe to entrust to them the lives of passengers. The same way with the conductors, and the same way with the telegraph operators. A telegraph operator, let us say, is ordered on at six o'clock in the morning; and at eight o'clock in the evening or nine or ten o'clock, his hours of duty not ended, he becomes tired and goes to sleep. A train may pass by which should be stopped by the operator, but he, tired with overwork, is sound asleep, how can he stop the train? The result is that there is a wreck ahead and loss of life. The government may say that it will be too expensive to give these men short hours. But there are two ways of looking at it. Suppose that it should cost the government $20,000 a year extra to employ the additional staff necessary to give this class of employees such short hours. Why, in one wreck you will lose fifteen or twenty or sixty or even a hundred thousand dollars. But that is not all, nor is it the worst. It may be that five or six or even ten or fifteen lives are lost. Who will restore those lives? The people are dead and gone and that is the last of them for this world. The Minister of Railways, if he would but say the word could prevent all this; and to him the people look to take the first step. And if the hon. minister is kind enough to adopt the necessary measures, he shall have my support. It will be the duty of everybody to support him cordially. I was coming up on the Canada Atlantic Railway to-day. Some people asked: Why do not you go by the Canadian Pacific Railway, for there is a strike on this road? There is one example. A number of employees have stopped work, and we are even told that signals have been tampered with. Of course, it may be said that the government is not to blame. But all this goes to show the dangers that are involved and that should be overcome as far as possible. My hon. friend (Hon. Mr. Blair) must travel a great deal by the railways. Should he lose his leg in a railway accident—would not that be a loss that could not be made good to him by $50,000? And should he happen to lose his life, of course, there is no money that would redeem that. Therefore, this House has a right to call upon the hon. minister to take steps before more disasters occur, to secure greater safety to those who operate or travel by the railways.

Mr. M. K. RICHARDSON (South Grey). Mr. Speaker, the subject which is before the House, and which was discussed for some little time before recess is of more than passing importance. It is one that has awakened keen and lively interest in the public mind. I am not at all in sympathy with the kind of propaganda which would unnecessarily excite the public mind against railway companies or unnecessarily embarrass those companies with legislative enactment. We know that the duties of railway managers are of a very onerous character. On one hand they have the lives of people committed to their care in very large numbers. On the other hand, they have the interest of the public who have invested their money in their railways, and the managers are naturally desirous of running their roads so that they may pay some decent dividend on the capital invested. It may be that there has been too great a tendency towards economy in the running of railways, which may be to some extent responsible for the large number of accidents that have occurred in this country during the past six months. This is a matter of national interest and of national importance. It is not merely a question of loss to the railway companies, or even a question of a loss of life, but it is a matter of national importance, because if the statistics in Canada should show that life is much more imperilled on railways here than in other countries, it would be detrimental to the settlement of this country, it would be detrimental to the investment of capital in this country, and in a number of ways it would hinder that progress which we have a right to expect and which we are all looking for.

As I said before, I am not in favour of legislative enactments that would unnecessarily embarrass the operation and management of railways, but I think we owe it to the public and to our constituents to bestir ourselves and to prove that we are alive to the public interest in view of the deplorable loss of life that has recently occurred in railway accidents. I understand that the railway companies have very strict rules for their employees, which are intended to safeguard the travelling public, but these rules are not always implicitly obeyed. For instance, I understand they have very strict rules with regard to the use of intoxicants while their men are upon duty. Now from what I can gather from remarks that I have heard, I believe that in many cases the men are worked over hours, whether from compulsion or whether from a desire to work longer hours in order to get more pay, I do not know. But certain it is that evidence has come out to show that men have been kept on duty fifteen or sixteen hours in the twenty-four. Now it is not in human nature to bear up under such a strain, nor ought the lives of the travelling public to be committed to men who work such long hours. From what I can gather they resort to stimulants in consequence, and from information had I believe that engine drivers and their assistants are in the habit of using intoxicants to stimulate them under weariness and exhaustion in performance of arduous duties for long periods. I was recently with a man who said that he had frequent opportunities of riding upon one of the engines belonging to a line of railway that I know very well. He had been himself in the employment of the company, and he stated that having the confidence of the engine drivers he frequently rode with them, and he knew for a fact that they were accustomed to take stimulants with them, and were frequently under the influence of those stimulants. More than that, we know that men who work very long hours and become wearied have been known to fall asleep on their engines, when they were travelling at the rate of forty or fifty miles an hour. We can form but a slight conception of the immense danger to the travelling public which must ensue when they have entrusted their lives to men in this condition and under these circumstances.

I understand that this motion has for its object to bring this matter to the attention of the government so that some means may be taken to safeguard the travelling public and lessen the danger of railway accidents which have been so frequent recently. Compared with the record of European countries and compared with the record of Great Britain, our record for railway accidents, during the last six months especially, is of an unenviable character. I do not know how it compares, as to mileage and population, with the record in the neighbouring republic, where accidents have been considered more frequent than in any other part of the world. But I am sure we are acquiring an unenviable reputation in that respect. I hope that this discussion will lead to some appointment by the government which will reassure the people, and will at least show that the government appreciate the importance of this matter. The railway companies have been given large privileges in their charters, and we have a right to exercise supervision over their management by the appointment of some commission of inspection which will tend to lessen the frequency of accidents which have been so appalling during the last six months.

Mr. H. LENNOX (South Simcoe). I think it proper to draw the attention of the Minister of Railways and Canals to one branch of this case which, I think, judging from the remarks he made this afternoon, he has failed fully to appreciate. I refer to a feature of the case that was clearly brought out by the hon. member for West Toronto (Mr. Clarke) and also by the hon. member for Hamilton (Mr. Barker), that is, the question of prevention rather than the question of investigation after the difficulty has arisen. I understand from watching what has happened in the last six months, and from taking note of the accidents that happened before that time, that there is a necessity for taking preventive measures, or such means of supervision being adopted as will lead to a diminution of the danger of accidents in the future. That this can be done, I think will be admitted by any person who has given any attention to the matter. When these accidents occur we have had evidence from time to time that in many instances they result, not from the want of stringent regulations made by the railway companies, but from the failure of the company to put those rules vigorously into operation. In many cases accidents have undoubtedly resulted from the fact that the companies were endeavouring to carry on their operations with too small an expenditure of money, or were imposing upon their employees more duties or greater responsibilities than they could possibly discharge. Now this afternoon the member for Hamilton, I think, referred to the fact that the railway companies, while they make regulations and obtain the proper sanction of those regulations, still in many instances have failed to carry them out. I know an instance that occurred between the town of Barrie and the city of Toronto not many months ago, where the regulation as to the passage of trains at a certain point had been deliberately ignored for, I think I am safe in saying, a year, if not to the direct knowledge of the head officials of the company, at all events to the knowledge of many of their prominent officials. While no trouble arose, they virtually winked at the infringement of their own rules. But, unfortunately, not long ago an accident occurred, and what then happened? All the officials that could be charged with responsibility were immediately dismissed. The company would not take as an excuse that the company itself had long been aware that the rule was being broken. The answer was: You are bound to obey the rules, and when an accident occurs you must stand the consequence. This is only one instance of many which point to the fact which the Minister of Railways and Canals entirely ignored in the remarks he made this afternoon. What the public needs is the appointment of some official of the government whose duty it would be to see that proper regulations are made and enforced to insure the safety of the travelling public, to make himself familiar with the actual working of the various railways, and to see that these regulations are efficiently carried out. What the hon. minister says in regard to the fact that there is a statute in force which enables us to appoint some one to investigate the causes of accidents after the accidents have occurred indicates a very ineffective remedy, but if an active official of the government is charged with the duty of seeing from time to time that certain necessary rules are being carried out on the various railways, then, there is no doubt at all that great good will result and the number of accidents will be greatly diminished. This, I hope, will be sufficient to draw the attention of the hon. Minister of Railways and Canals to this important matter and to enable him to act and to act now. I cannot but feel that it is a very regrettable circumstance that whilst everybody in this country has been shocked by the number of accidents that have occurred, whilst every public man, every intelligent man, has had full knowledge for months and more than months of the absolute necessity of some action being taken by the government to lessen the number of fatal accidents that are occurring, the hon. Minister of Railways and Canals has not been in a position to-day to tell the House that he has adopted some effective measure already to advance the remedy and prevent the recurrence of these disastrous accidents.

BUSINESS OF THE HOUSE.

Mr. F. D. MONK (Jacques Cartier). Mr. Speaker, before you leave the Chair to go into Supply, I would like to draw the attention of the House to what I consider a very reasonable grievance. We have now been sitting for a month and I think I am right—

The POSTMASTER GENERAL (Hon. Sir William Mulock). I think the hon. gentleman (Mr. Monk) has spoken on the motion to go into Committee of Supply.

Mr. MONK. No, I only asked a question.

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. Only a question ?

Mr. MONK. We have been sitting for a month and I think I am right in saying that with the exception of some very trifling legislation, there has been very little done beyond the passing of estimates and the furnishing of supplies. In this I think we have acted very generously; we have voted, if I mistake not, several million dollars and we have shown a disposition, at least every time I have been present in this House to go into Supply, and I think I may claim that we are doing it unduly at the present moment. I have no desire for my own part to retard in any way the work of Supply. I know that it involves considerable labour for the minister in charge of the department, and for my own part, in order to advance the work of the session, I want to assist the minister as much as possible when the estimates of his department come up to pass these estimates, because we have quite enough work without creating obstruction in the slightest degree. For my own part I disclaim any idea of creating obstruction, but what I would submit to you, Mr. Speaker, and to hon. members of both sides of the House respectfully is that we are not proceeding in the regular way. We have grievances to redress and the voting of supplies ought to be preceded by the redress of grievances. Now, I will just enumerate to the House some of the important questions that are before us this session and which, according to my view, create the question of grievance. I will not speak of the tariff, Mr. Speaker, because we have the announcement of the budget speech for to-morrow; still, I do not suppose there is throughout the whole country a single person, however indifferent that person may be to the great political issues of the day, who, if asked, what is the question that is disturbing the public most at present, or which is creating an interest in politics, will not answer at once : It is the question of the tariff. Well, we have been over a month here and we have had no opportunity for the discussion of this most important question upon which there are so many different opinions throughout the Dominion. We have remedies to apply to the Election Act. Hon. members on this side, and hon. members on the other side of the House have introduced measures to remedy serious grievances in the electoral law. Why cannot we take up these grievances and remedy them before we continue voting money day after day as we are doing at present. At the very opening of the session we had the announcement of the Redistribution Bill. What is that but a grievance ? The right hon. leader of the government (Rt. Hon. Sir Wilfrid Laurier) said, when introducing his Bill, that it was intended by that Bill to remedy a grievance, but going outside altogether of the question of party in respect to that Bill, the taking of the census and the result of that census now before us creates a grievance and before proceeding any farther with Supply we should apply ourselves strictly and absolutely to remedy that grievance. That is what I submit to you, Mr. Speaker, and to the House, in respect to the Redistribution Bill.

We have had the announcement made to the public and I think it was confirmed in this House that we are going to have a transportation commission. That was foreshadowed in the speech from the Throne. What is the scope of that commission ? Is it designed by that commission to remedy the serious ills that are indicated in the speech from the Throne. What will the work of the commission be ? Is it going to take away from the government and the House the mission of defining and establishing a policy upon that great question, perhaps the most momentous one we have to decide during the present session ? What will be the cost of the commission ? Is it a machinery which will meet with the approval of the House ? Why cannot we, in accordance with our constitutional duty, keep Supply back until these grievances have been set right ? Why cannot these questions be discussed before we get to work to vote the money required for the next year ? We have the Railway Bill; we have a voluminous document set before us, the object of which is to remedy a grievance. We have divided opinions as to the nature of the remedy afforded for existing ills. We have to discuss the question of the railway commission whether, here, again, that commission will undertake the responsibility of curing the evils which have been time and again set before the House by hon. members from the far west, by hon. members from the province of Ontario and from the other eastern provinces. We may be divided upon this question; we may be divided irrespective of the question of politics, but what I submit to the House and the government is that if we proceed regularly and constitutionally we ought to take up a measure like that one and see it through before we are called upon to vote supplies. I believe there is to be a militia Bill ; we have had a foreshadowing of great reforms in our militia system which must entail considerable public expenditure. Our representatives at the conference in London stated what would be done in this respect when they returned to Canada. Where is that militia Bill ? Are the increased expenditures for these reforms to be brought in at the end of the session, or are we going to have them before proceeding to the duty which we must accomplish en connaissance de cause, when we are called upon to vote supplies for the coming year. Again there is the question of the new transcontinental line which has been discussed throughout Canada for many months passed, and yet all that we have heard with regard to this most important subject is what the newspapers have published of statements made by ministers outside of this House. We have heard nothing in this House which would indicate to us what extra expenditure will be laid on the public by reason of this great transportation problem. Is it unfair that we in our role as critics of the government, should ask that before we be requested to vote supplies that we should know what the nature of that measure is going to be. Should the House go into Supply to-night we will be asked to vote money for the building of wharfs, and the construction of breakwaters, and are we not entitled before we go into this voting of supplies to know what is the policy of the government in respect to that transcontinental scheme which will call upon the people of this country to make very great additional sacrifices of money ? After all, under the modern understanding of the constitution, the government is nothing else than a committee of this House, and the government should make known to this House its policy on such an important matter as this. I was through a by-election just before this session opened, and one of the important questions discussed there was the reorganization of the departments of the government. The electorate of Maisonneuve were told that if the Department of Public Works had been taken from the province of Quebec where it had been for many years, it was with a good object. It was stated that in view of the great works which are to be executed on the lower St. Lawrence, it might be better that the Department of Public Works should remain vested in one who knew the immediate requirements of the navigation of the lower St. Lawrence, and we were told by the ministers there, as we have been told in the speech from the Throne that a Bill would be introduced which would place in the hands of the Minister of Marine and Fisheries the control of the works on the St. Lawrence from Montreal to the sea. Where is that measure ? If it was a grievance during the election in Maisonneuve it is a grievance still. Is it right that we should be asked to vote money for public works before an attempt is made to remove that grievance as the government promised it would be made ? There is also a Bill, which has the character of a public Bill, to change the constitution of the Supreme Court. That Bill is in the hands of my hon. friend from St. Jean and Iberville (Mr. Demers). I venture to assert that the hon. gentleman is ready to proceed with that Bill which he claims is destined to remedy a grievance, but I venture also to assert that the hon. gentleman has been requested to leave that Bill in abeyance, just as he has been requested to leave in abeyance the Bill designed to remedy what we in my province consider a grievance, namely the existing state of the law as interpreted by the highest tribunal in the empire in regard to the protection of private property from fire caused by the operation of railways. All these and many other important matters involving questions of policy, questions of grievance, are put aside and this House is asked to go into the voting of supplies. Under these circumstances it is not only our right but it is our duty to call attention to this state of affairs. Unless we have some absolute assurance from the government as to the policy which is going to obtain in regard to these great questions, which are really the questions of the session, we will righteously incur the blame of the people of Canada for consenting to this unconstitutional method of conducting public business, and when we have voted supplies, then we will be left without any adequate remedy to insure the removal of public grievances. I protest against this manner of conducting public business. We have seven or eight important questions ; the only questions of the session that really interest the public, and the constitutional and proper method for us to pursue is first and foremost to apply ourselves to the solution of these questions and then take up the voting of supplies. I say this frankly to the government. I have no desire to obstruct business in any way ; it is not in accordance with my feelings to be compelled to have recourse to the system of discussing at length item after item. But it seems to me, Sir, that we are varying the good old rule of the British parliament that first and foremost we must proceed with the settlement of measures which are for the good of the people and for the settlement of which we are here, and that we should keep back the furnishing of the supplies until those measures are satisfactorily settled. Having said this, if the government call upon us to proceed with supply this evening, I am quite ready as I was when we were called on to go into supply several weeks ago to go on; but I felt that I would not be performing my duty if I did not call your attention, Sir, and the attention of the House to what I consider an important point.

The POSTMASTER GENERAL (Sir Wm. Mulock). Mr. Speaker, I am glad to have the assurance of my hon. friend from Jacques Cartier (Mr. Monk) that his observations are simply based on a deep conviction on his part as to what should be the procedure rather than upon any desire to delay the legitimate work of parliament; but he has to-night laid down a new practice, and one without a parallel either in the mother of parliaments or in the parliament of Canada. I have yet to learn that it has become a practice, either by rule or by practice itself, that parliament shall not proceed with the great work of the session in such order as may be most convenient for the government and parliament and most in the interests of the country. It has never yet been the rule that great public measures introduced by the government shall always be disposed of before the voting of supplies. My hon. friend has perhaps forgotten the advanced state of work when parliament met this session. I have had twenty years or more of experience in this House, and I think I am correct in saying—and every hon. member who has been in parliament during that time, will agree with the statement—that never before did a government meet parliament better prepared with its work than did the government at the present session. When the speech from the Throne was disposed of—and it was disposed of with gratifying business alacrity—the departmental reports were immediately laid on the Table, and we were prepared to render an account of our administration during the last fiscal year. A few days afterwards we laid before parliament some of the important legislative measures now engaging the attention of the country. On the Order paper I find, among government Bills and Orders. Bill No. 21 an Act to amend the law respecting railways. My hon friend would argue that we must dispose of that measure before we proceed with Supply. Is that his argument? That Bill was introduced on the 20th of March. It is of a very far-reaching character. No government ever introduced a measure of this kind into the parliament of Canada before; it affects great interests; it is a measure the country is greatly interested in. Does it not seem becoming that the details of that measure should be a reasonable time before the country before parliament proceeds to convert it into an Act of parliament? We do not possess all the wisdom of the country—

Some hon. MEMBERS. Hear, hear.

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. I include hon. gentlemen opposite in that observation. The aggregate wisdom of parliament itself does not perhaps represent all the wisdom of the country; and I hope that before that measure becomes law many of the citizens of Canada who are deeply studying it will offer valuable suggestions towards its betterment, if it is not perfect already. Is it not becoming that a measure of such importance, and one so novel in its character in this country at least, and which relates to the interests of every class in the Dominion should not be proceeded with with undue haste? My hon. friend complains that we are not proceeding to improve the harbour of Montreal or the river St. Lawrence. I find by the estimates that my hon. friend the Minister of Public Works is about to ask parliament to assent to a vote of $500,000 for the improvement of the St. Lawrence ship channel. This is not a new work, but one to which parliament has already committed itself. My hon. friend complains that we are not proceeding with the improvement of the St. Lawrence channel, and yet he will not let us get into committee in order that we may vote the money required for that purpose. He argues that this work must stand over and that we must not go into Committee of Supply until we dispose of these important Bills, including the Bill for the establishment of a railway commission. I ask this House is it the right procedure to stop the voting of supplies until we pass that Bill? Have we all the wisdom that the country possesses on that measure? Would we not be chargeable with proceeding with undue haste if now, at the conclusion of the first month of the session, and before the Bill has been before the public twenty days, we took it from the people and converted it into an Act of parliament to-night?

Mr. LENNOX. Practically the same Bill was introduced last session and has been before the country ever since.

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. Then it will be all the better for the careful consideration it has had during that time. Then my hon. friend argues that we should proceed with the budget speech before we vote the supplies. The budget speech is fixed for to-morrow. Was a budget speech ever presented at an earlier date? I trust it will be an exceedingly gratifying one to hon. gentlemen, as I think it will be to the country; and inasmuch as that speech is to be delivered in a very few hours from now, what public good would be gained by deferring the public business to-night and idling the time of parliament? Hon. gentlemen will remember that this is not government day. This is a private members' day, and I think I am correct in saying that never before in twenty years has the Order Paper been as free of matters introduced by private members as it is at this moment. We were able, with the common consent of parliament, to take Thursday as a government day, simply because private members' work had been exhausted, and to-day, before six o'clock was reached, all the private members' work was exhausted, we had the option of adjourning or proceeding with government business. As a working government we deemed it our duty to do our work instead of adjourning at six o'clock. My hon. friend complains that we should stop the voting of supplies until the hon. member for St. John and Iberville (Mr. Demers) proceeds with two measures, forgetting that these two measures were called for this afternoon and were not proceeded with. Consequently the Order paper was exhausted and we had the option of adjourning or taking up Supply. I think the country will admit that we are pursuing the right course when we proceed with the business of the country. My hon. friend complains that we are not going on with the Redistribution Bill, and he claims that till we do, Supply should not be voted. But the Redistribution Bill has been referred to a special committee. Does my hon. friend say that the whole proceedings of parliament should stand over, that nothing should be done, that Supply should not be voted until the committee on the Redistribution Bill have made their report? It is only necessary to mention my hon. friend's suggestion to show how absurd it is. My hon. friend is in a hurry to see a new transcontinental railway policy introduced. But how long did it take the former parliaments to formulate a policy for the transcontinental road we now have, the Canadian Pacific Railway? Was that policy introduced at as early a period in the session as the present? This scheme of a new transcontinental road is a large one. It would have far-reaching importance. It has been discussed in the public press, and many different opinions have been advanced. The hon. member for East York (Mr. Maclean) not long ago advocated the construction of such a road by the government, other hon. members favour giving aid to a private company to build it, and others protest against the adoption of any such policy at all. My hon. friends from St. Mary's division, Montreal (Hon. Mr. Tarte) and Pontiac (Mr. Murray) argue that the most important feature of transportation which can engage the attention of the country is not a transcontinental railway, but a canal connecting the Georgian Bay waters with the Ottawa river. All these different views and considerations must be well weighed before the government can be called on to decide on a policy. Yet my hon. friend argues that all these measures must be disposed of before we go into Supply, and supposing the government should say that it was not in favour of any of these policies, then, according to my hon. friend's argument, no Supply should be voted and the King's business should be allowed to fall into confusion. Our practice hitherto has always been that Supply should take up the time at the disposal of the government for that purpose on every government day, and on private members' days the time not required for private business. We are economizing time by proceeding in this way. It has never been the practice in any parliament to do what my hon. friend suggests, and I think that before this parliament inaugurates a new policy and procedure, it should take a little more time to consider it than can be had in this off-hand way of giving advice just on a motion to go into Supply. My hon. friend was not here when we adjourned last night or he would know that the hon. member for East Grey (Mr. Sproule), who was then leading the opposition, asked what business would be taken up to-day, and my right hon. colleague, the Prime Minister, announced that we would proceed with the Orders of the Day and if time were still left, we would take up the Public Works estimates. With regard to those estimates, let me point out that they do not involve any new public works, but are merely for the carrying on of public works, to which the country has already committed itself, and I am sure that my hon. friend from Jacques Cartier will see that whatever force his contention would have if we were inviting the House to vote expenditures on entirely new works, it can have no application when we are simply asking the House to deal with public works to which parliament has long since given its sanction.

Mr. MONK. Does the hon. minister apply that remark to the Quebec estimates?

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. I am speaking of the Public Works estimates we are about to proceed with.

Mr. T. S. SPROULE (East Grey). The pyrotechnical display which the hon. gentleman who is now leading the House has just given us, may have been interesting to the hon. gentlemen on that side, but it did not throw much new light on the situation. The hon. minister started out by saying that my hon. friend from Jacques Cartier was introducing some new principles. What new principles? The principle he enunciated is as old as the British parliament, and that is the redress of grievances before Supply is granted. The hon. minister says that we have an important Bill before us, the Railway Commission Bill, a new measure, and that it has been before us for twenty-five days, but that measure, as he was reminded by an hon. member from this side, is only the Bill revamped which was before the House last year. It has been discussed by the press at different times throughout the year, but we have no substantial information from the government as to how that commission will be organized, what it will apply to when organized, what will be the scope of its powers, how it is likely to prove beneficial in redressing the grievances under which our people are labouring or in improving the transportation problem. These are questions on which the government has given practically no information. Is it improper that we should desire information as to the policy of the government on this important measure before we vote Supply? No doubt it would suit the government to have the Supply voted as early as possible, because once the Supply Bill is passed the government can dispense with our services. But it is for the purpose of having public measures considered as they should be, that the supplies are held back until we know the details of the government's policy and the lines of action they propose to carry out. The government have not given us that information. True they have announced their measures, but they are all like the Redistribution Bill, practically in blank form. The House has as yet no information as to how redistribution will take place. We are told that it is to be regulated by a committee, and the right hon. the First Minister has said to us: 'When we appoint the committee we will hand in our schedule and you will do the same with yours.' And then, forsooth, we are likely to vote through ours whether you like it or dislike it. We are told that this is practically representation by population, but we are told in the next breath that county lines are to be observed. If you have one, you cannot have the other. That was clearly pointed out years ago by the late Rt. Hon. Sir John A. Macdonald. He declared it was impossible to have representation by population if you observe the county lines. But you have the anomaly in this House that the government is going to observe county lines and yet is going to grant representation by population.

Mr. COWAN. Are you opposed to the observance of county lines?

Mr. SPROULE. I am not saying whether I am opposed to it or not. I am simply showing what the information the government has given us about it, and expressing our desire to know more. Then, there is another very important question mentioned by my hon. friend from Jacques Cartier (Mr. Monk) in which the country is vitally interested and on which we have no information. I refer to the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway. There are two or three transcontinental lines before the government and the country to-day, yet we are in the dark as to the policy the government intend to adopt with regard to them. We desire information. we wish to know what the government's policy is so that we may be able to judge for ourselves whether it is right to grant them these supplies or not. But, after we have granted these supplies, they may turn to us and say: You may go home we have the supplies and do not care for your opinions on other matters. This is the reason why we wish to know their policy with regard to these great matters now under discussion, before we grant them these supplies. The Commission Bill I have already referred to. It is a very important one, but we know nothing yet as to what its scope is to be, what the powers of the commission will be, what railways the measure will apply to or how far it is likely to be useful to the railways or to the country. From the very first it seems to have been the aim of the government to get the supplies voted. The hon. member for North York (Hon. Sir William Mulock) upbraids my hon. friend (Mr. Monk) with being unwilling to vote the supplies necessary for the works in the great port of Montreal. Why, last session we voted supplies for this work up to the 30th of June next. The government have money enough to go on with, and there is plenty of time between now and the 30th of June to vote any supplies that may be needed for the ensuing fiscal year. So, no question arises as to whether it is right or wrong to prevent the government from getting the supplies at the present time. My hon. friend (Mr. Monk) in my judgment was entirely right; the position he takes is in harmony with the well understood principles of constitutional government. He only asks that the government should place their policy before parliament and before the country so that the opposition may have an opportunity of criticising it, and the country an opportunity of understanding it, before supplies are voted to enable them to carry on the affairs of the country. That is the position that has always been taken by parliament, and we are only doing our duty to parliament and the country, when we demand to know what the government's policy is on these various lines, before we grant them the supplies they are asking for.

Motion agreed to, and House went into Committee of Supply.

Public works—chargeable to income, harbours and rivers—Ontario—Bowmanville, to complete repairs to breakwater, $1,000.

Mr. CLARKE. Is this work on private property?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS (Hon. James Sutherland). I find that parliament has been expending money on this for a number of years. The property was originally vested in the municipality, I believe.

Mr. CLARKE. Is it in private hands now?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I believe it is the property of private individuals.

Mr. CLARKE. It would be interesting to have the names of the owners of the property. Some of the hon. minister's supporters may be able to give us the information. It is extraordinary to vote public money to be spent on private property. The hon. minister ought to give us other information.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I only investigated the matter to-day, and was somewhat surprised to find that parliament was spending a good deal of money from time to time on some of these harbours that are not vested in the Crown. I must say, that although I have been in the House for a long time, I was not aware that this was so generally the custom as I find it to have been. I find that there has been a total expenditure of $29,000 on this work by the Dominion government covering a number of years. So, this is not extraordinary, I may say. My hon. friend (Mr. Clarke) has taken part, like other members of the House, in voting more or less to this work. There was a vote of $4,000 last session, and this is a vote of only $1,000 to complete the work.

Mr. CLARKE. I understand that it was only to-day that the hon. minister became aware of the fact that this was private property. Would it not be as well to give the hon. minister an opportunity to further pursue his researches, and, for this purpose, to let this item stand for three or four days? He may be able, within that time, to get fuller information as to the owners of this property on which public money is being expended.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I am willing to give the hon. gentleman (Mr. Clarke) all the information at my command. I understand that this property is mainly in the name of a Mrs. Raines, a widow of Montreal.

Mr. CLARKE. Is Mrs. Raines the sole proprietoress ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Almost the sole proprietoress. There are other small shareholders.

Mr. CLARKE. Who are they ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. A part of the stock is held by a widow lady in Bowmanville, a Mrs. Galbraith, and another of the proprietary is Mrs. McClellan.

Mr. CLARKE. Are we to understand that the sole proprietors are these two widow ladies ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Three. And there are other very small stockholders.

Mr. CLARKE. The hon. gentleman (Hon. Mr. Sutherland) says that he can give us all the information. Will he not tell us who are the others in addition to these three widows ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I do not pretend to have this information in the department. That which I have given, I have obtained from the member for the riding (Mr. Beith). This vote is only a small balance of $1,000 to complete the work.

Mr. CLARKE. A sort of a widow's mite.

Mr. SPROULE. It is very interesting and amusing, no doubt, to see the bachelor Minister of Public Works looking after the interests of the widows. Of course, he would be reluctant to interfere with them. But there is involved in this vote a principle, a principle we have fought against for many years. We fought against it in the case of a dock at Sault Ste. Marie, in the case of another dock at Port Arthur, and, I think, in the case of a dock at Bruce Mines, and others. That principle is the expenditure of public money upon private docks. Some of these docks we have had to buy from their owners at high prices, and in buying, we had not even the advantage of a reduction in the price to the extent of the money we had put into them. That is where the principle comes in, a principle which, in my judgment, is entirely wrong, namely, to put public money into private docks which we may afterwards be obliged to buy, and to pay a higher figure for than their actual value.

Mr. HUGHES (Victoria). Is this harbour owned by the government, and is the hon. member for West Durham looking after it and constituting himself the guardian of the three widows, owners thereof ? How much money has been spent there ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. $9,210.

Mr. HUGHES (Victoria). Is the government taking over the Oshawa harbour ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Yes.

Mr. HUGHES (Victoria). How much money has been expended on it ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I have not got that information at the moment.

Bronté, harbour improvements, $2,700.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Last year there was an appropriation of $3,000, most of which has been expended. This appropriation will complete the work.

Mr. TAYLOR. When is this money to be expended ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Right away.

Mr. TAYLOR. I understand it cannot be expended before the 30th of June.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. As soon as it is available.

Mr. TAYLOR. I ask this question because the Postmaster General, a few minutes ago, stated that if we blocked the estimates we blocked the carrying on of the improvements. Last session we voted all the money that the government asked for up to the 30th of June, and we do not block any improvements in this country if we pass the estimates before the 30th of June. I understand that this money is not available until after the 30th of June of the present year, therefore the statement of the Postmaster General was altogether incorrect when he told my hon. friend from Jacques Cartier (Mr. Monk) that if we blocked supply in any way we blocked the improvements of Montreal harbour, because there was in the estimates of the Minister of Public Works a large amount for improvements in Montreal harbour, and that money cannot be touched until after the 1st of July.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I think my hon. friend misunderstood the Postmaster General. What he said was that the appropriation the House was being asked for was to continue works that parliament had already authorized. My hon. friend is perhaps technically right in saying that this money cannot be spent until after the Supply Bill has been assented to. But he will remember that it is one of the misfortunes of conducting public works that if time is lost, if we are compelled to wait before beginning them, they may cost considerably more. After this vote passes it is quite within the right of the department to go on with the work. After parliament has assented to these votes, although the Supply Bill may not have passed, where the works are under contract, we feel ourselves authorized to go on and spend the money.

Mr. COCHRANE. Was the $3,000 voted last year expended ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Yes, $2,875 was expended up to the end of the year. The work was done by a government dredge.

Mr. HENDERSON. This work has been going on for several years. I would like to ask the minister if the $2,700 now asked is likely to complete the dredging and the construction of the wharf, or will a further sum be required another year ? I may say that the people there are anxious to have this work fully completed, and I hope the minister will be able to tell us that the appropriation now asked for will complete the work.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. The estimate submitted by the chief engineer is that $1,500 will complete the repairs to the pier, that $1,200 more is required for dredging the harbour to a depth of eight feet. He estimates that this will complete the work for the present.

Mr. HENDERSON. So that no further sum will be required after the present year ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Not for the present work.

Mr. HENDERSON. Whilst this estimate is before us, there is another matter I would like to draw attention to. I regret that the Minister of Marine and Fisheries is not in his place. It is to be regretted that whilst these estimates for public works are going through that that hon. gentleman should continually absent himself from the House, because there is so much connection between the two departments. I understand these wharfs are usually handed over to the Marine Department, that lighthouses are constructed by the Marine Department, so that there is a certain connection between the work done by the Public Works Department and that done by the Marine Department. Now, we have no person here to answer for the Marine Department. I drew the attention of the minister a year ago, I think, to the fact that the people were promised, in 1900, that a lighthouse would be constructed on this wharf. Such a construction would be very desirable. There is a considerable amount of fishing done on the lake extending some ten or fifteen miles from this port, and a lighthouse would be very desirable for the benefit of the fishermen. Sometimes in dark nights the men lose their way, and they have no signal to guide them to the port. If the department did nothing more than construct a lighthouse, it would be a great benefit. I was told last year, I think, that the government had no record of the promise that was made for the construction of a lighthouse. I can understand that. I think the promise was only made by the candidate who opposed me for the purpose of securing a few extra votes. I do not suppose he had the authority of the government, nor do I suppose that he has any intention of seeing that the promise is carried out. But the promise was made to these people, and I am one of those who believe that every election promise of that kind ought to be carried out. In the case of Bowmanville, a public building was promised in the last by-election, when it was announced in the papers, 'Vote for Mr. Beith and you will have a public building.'

Mr. HUGHES (Victoria). He denies that.

Mr. HENDERSON. There is no necessity for denying it, it was published in the press at the time. The government did supplement the promise made to the electors at that time, when they were asked to vote for Mr. Beith and secure a public building ; and I think it is only fair that the government should supplement the promise made to the electors in the present case. The electors gave my opponent a good vote there, a great many more than he was entitled to. They have done their share of the contract, they have done their part, and now they want the job completed. I hope the Minister of Public Works will see that this work is given to them that they were promised. I say again, I regret that the Minister of Marine is not in his place. It is important that he should be here whilst these estimates are going through, so that we may get some statement from him about it, because, apart from all other considerations, whether it was intended to be done at the time or not, or whether it was merely to influence an election, I say there is a necessity for it, and it will be in the public interest to erect it. I hope the hon. Minister of Public Works will be able to influence the hon. Minister of Marine and Fisheries, if he has not the power within himself, to supplement that pledge, or at any rate to give the people there what they have been led to expect they would get.

Mr. HUGHES (Victoria). In support of the position taken by the hon. member for Halton (Mr. Henderson), and to show that the government in certain places are carrying out their ante-election pledges, made by some of their speakers—I regret very much that the Minister of Marine and Fisheries (Hon. Mr. Préfontaine) is not in his place—I will read from the West Durham newspaper, the 'Canadian Statesman,' of January 8th, 1902, previous to the election of the then candidate and the present hon. member for West Durham (Mr. Beith), to show that these gentlemen did make promises on that occasion and that they are now fulfilling them. On January 8th, 1902, the 'Canadian Statesman' said:

Conservatives in this town know that Robert Beith can get government favours for this town if any man can, and that Mr. Thornton would be unable to accomplish anything. We want a new post office and customs house, don't we? Other ridings have received new public buildings. We want our share of patronage but can only get it by sending a government supporter to ask for it. Return Mr. Beith to parliament and Bowmanville will get these necessary public buildings.

I am glad to see that the Postmaster General (Hon. Sir Wm. Mulock) is carrying out the ante-election pledges of the Liberal party. In another instance this paper says:

For 18 years the Conservatives were in power at Ottawa. Millions of dollars were dispensed for public buildings and otherwise during that period, but not a dollar for West Durham till the Liberals got into power, then necessary grants were made to keep Newcastle and Bowmanville harbour piers from being washed into the lake. Millions of bushels of grain have been shipped from time to time from these harbours for West Durham farmers and will still be in years to come. Further assistance is needed. Bowmanville badly needs a new post office and custom house and Robert Beith can get these also. Vote for him and see what he will do.

I am delighted to see that the hon. Postmaster General is carrying out the bribe—I beg pardon—the pre-election pledge, as I had better put it, made to the electors of West Durham and Bowmanville. On December 25th, in the same paper, I find this:

There is also the matter of patronage and legislation in the interests of West Durham. Does any one suppose for one moment that Mr. Thornton could get any favours for us from this government? To imagine such a thing would be the height of absurdity. Few people know what Robert Beith has already done along these lines. At this very time the rubber factory is supplying goods to the government railways on orders secured through Mr. Beith's influence. Then we have got to have a new post office and custom house. There must no longer be any ifs or buts on this public necessity. This town needs a new post office and must have one very soon and Mr. Beith is the one man who can get it if any man can. We have waited patiently for better times, now we have the good times and Bowmanville wants a new building suited to the requirements of a post office and a custom house. We believe that if Robert Beith is elected we shall get it—in short order too. We are not urging this as a reason altogether for supporting Mr. Beith,——

Not altogether; of course they had some other things.

But if we want a public building, we are not as likely to get it if we send a man opposed to the government as if we sent one to support it.

I am delighted, when quoting these statements in support of the position taken by the hon. member for Halton, to see that the hon. Postmaster General and Minister of Labour is carrying out the pre-election bribe offered to the people of West Durham. The reason I have read these statements is that on an occasion, not very long since, the hon. member for West Durham positively denied that an appeal was made to the electors of West Durham along those lines. I have quoted from the Liberal paper statements made on the eve of the election there, and now the hon. gentlemen opposite are delivering the goods.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I may say to the hon. member for Halton (Mr. Henderson) that I will be pleased to call the attention of the hon. Minister of Marine and Fisheries to the subject that he has mentioned. However, he will have an opportunity when the estimates of that department come before the Committee to urge the importance of having a light at that point. I think something should be done in the matter. It occurred to me when the hon. member for Victoria (Mr. Hughes) was speaking that he must have been supporting the hon. member for West Durham (Mr. Beith), because the statements he quoted reminded me very much of his own writing in his spicy paper the Lindsay 'Warder.' However, my hon. friend must know that it is only on the merits of the case that I have asked for this vote.

Mr. HUGHES (Victoria). As reference has been made to myself, I may say that I stand, I presume, the only man in Canada that never asked a man for a vote. I have never yet stooped to offer any public, personal, or private bribe to any elector. I would commend this to the attention of the hon. Postmaster General and to the hon. Minister of Public Works, but especially to the hon. Postmaster General when he goes up around the methylated spirits manufactory where he gets good rake offs, and I would suggest that we might have a committee or a commission at Ottawa as well as at Toronto.

Burk's Falls, Magnetawan river—wharf, $4,000.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This is for building a wharf at Burk's Falls. There is an extension of the Grand Trunk Railway which renders available thirty or forty miles of navigation, and people bring down a great deal of material to be transshipped at that point. The Committee knows this is a newly settled part of the country, needing assistance. I think the money is well expended. The pier is under contract, the price being $5,400.

Mr. CLARKE. Is that the total cost?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. The total cost will be about $6,000.

Burlington channel piers—works of renewal and repair under contract, $50,000.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This work is under contract. The vote of $50,000 is required to make provision for completing the works, for the renewal and repairs under contract in connection with the reconstruction of the pier on the south side of Burlington channel. The total amount of the contract is $96,700.

Mr. BRUCE. May I ask the hon. minister if the work on the Burlington piers will be completed this summer?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. The expectation is that this work will be completed this summer. I have had representations made urging that it is necessary that this work should be completed, and instructions have been given to proceed with the work as quickly as possible. There has been some delay, but a great deal of material is on the ground and the work is proceeding very much more quickly than for some time past.

Mr. BRUCE. The work has been going on very slowly since the first appropriation was made, and if this appropriation is going to be expended on the same principle we are not likely to finish it within the next ten years. I notice that on an expenditure of $1,500 over $700 has been spent for advertising. I do not think we can build piers very quickly under these conditions.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. The report of the engineer just received says that the work is proceeding very much more expeditiously than it has been in the past.

Mr. BARKER. I think it is proper to call the attention of the hon. Minister of Public Works to an item that appears in the expenditure of last year in reference to the estimate now asked for—Burlington channel, repairs to piers. The present item is to cover repairs to piers, and in the Auditor General's Report of 1902, page V—263, we find $1,521.15 expended on repairs to piers of which $733.22 are for advertising. There seems to be too much advertising for the amount of work done there.

Depot Harbour—breakwater, $75,000.

Mr. SPROULE. How much was spent on that work last year?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I must say that this work has not proceeded very rapidly. It was let at a season of the year when the class of timber which had to be ordered and cut in special sizes could not be obtained. However, I do not regret the delay because since looking into this work with the engineers, I believe we can make a change in the construction that will be much in the public interest and it is my intention to recommend that change. It will cost just about the same as the work under contract, but it will give greater accommodation to the public. The present contract is for a breakwater 1,700 feet long by twenty feet wide, and it is proposed to reduce the length of the breakwater to 500 feet, which will be sufficient to protect the present wharf but to make it very much wider so that two railway tracks can be laid down, and also afford a wharf for the accommodation of the general public. This is one of the very best harbours in the province. It is the only harbour I know of that requires very little work in the way of dredging after the piers are erected. A great deal of business is carried on there and it has been represented to me that a great deal of lumber is being brought down to this harbour to be shipped to different parts of Canada and also for export to the New England States especially. I believe that without increasing the amount of the estimate we can provide a great deal better accommodation for the public.

Mr. SPROULE. What was the amount of the contract for the present work?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. It was let by contract for $195,000.

Mr. SPROULE. How much has already been spent?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. About $8,000 or $10,000.

Mr. SPROULE. Was it let to the lowest tenderer?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Yes. I may say that my intention is to recommend the continuation of the present contract; it is doubling up the work instead of continuing it out as I have explained.

Mr. SPROULE. What explanation does the minister give as to the changes he proposes to make?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. The present contract provides for a pier 1,700 feet long and twenty feet wide. I find that the pier can be shortened so as to give sufficient protection, and widened to eighty feet, on which we can put two tracks of railways. The water is deep and boats can unload on both sides of the wharf. When a boat arrives with lumber it is very desirable to have accommodation to land that lumber, because you cannot always land it from the boat into the railway car. We hope that the trade of that port will grow so that perhaps in the future the wharf and pier may have to be extended, but at all events we are dealing with the present now.

Mr. INGRAM. Was not the contract let to Mr. Davis.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. The contractors are Davis, Haney and Millar.

Mr. INGRAM. Was the contract not let for $157,500 ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. The contract for the crib work is for $157,500, but there is $37,500 for rip-rap.

Mr. KEMP. What revenue will the government derive from this wharf which is going to cost $200,000 ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. It is impossible to tell exactly what the direct revenue will be, but every one who has studied the development of that district will know that the indirect benefit to all Canada will be very great. Something like 15,000,000 bushels of wheat were shipped through Depot Harbour last year, and this will give increased facilities for shipping not only grain but lumber and other commodities as well.

Mr. SPROULE. How does the minister propose to adjust the account, because his contemplated changes will apparently alter the nature of the whole work. Who makes an estimate of what the difference in the cost will be ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. There is no change made at present but I thought it my duty to tell the House that I had those changes in contemplation. The estimates are made by the chief engineer of the department. It is not so difficult to get at the details after all, and before the work is proceeded with I shall submit to the House the plans proposed by the chief engineer.

Mr. SPROULE. The suspicious thing about it is this : That the departmental engineer gets out a plan for a certain work, recommends that as suitable for the locality, a contract is let for a large sum of money, $10,000 is spent and then the engineer changes the whole plan. It would indicate that the first plan was made on poor judgment and imperfect knowledge, or otherwise there would not be any necessity for changing it so very soon. The next question is how to make even an approximate estimate of the difference in the value of the work now as compared with the original contract. There is always an amount of suspicion attached to a transaction where a radical change is made in a work shortly after a contract is let, and an arrangement is made privately between the minister and the contractor as to what shall be paid for the work. The practice, I think, is very bad. It might be, if the minister invited tenders for the work he proposes to do now, that he would receive tenders for doing it at a very much lower figure than it is likely to cost. At any rate, the public have had no opportunity of tendering for this new work.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. My hon. friend is altogether mistaken. It is quite true, perhaps, the minister might have made this change without consulting parliament, but I am not in favour of doing business in that way. I thought it my duty in making the change, to submit the recommendation to parliament. Neither is it correct to say that the chief engineer exercised bad judgment under the existing conditions when he recommended this pier to be built as it is. I am the one responsible for looking into the work, advising the recommendation, and asking parliament to endorse my recommendation. If there was anything suspicious about it I would be very sorry to be accused of anything of the kind, and I certainly would not submit a proposition to make a change which I did not think warranted in the public interest and likely to receive the endorsement of the members of this House. My view of the matter at any rate is that a great deal more public benefit can be got for the expenditure by the changed plan. As to calculating the price, my hon. friend will know that for the same class of work there are so many cubic feet to be done under contract, and by the change there will be no advantage to the contractor and no disadvantage to the public.

Mr. SPROULE. The minister says the work can be estimated, but in one instance you have two face walls, 1,700 feet long with 25 feet between them and in the other two face walls 500 feet long with 80 feet between them, and you must fill in between them. That kind of work can be done very much more cheaply where there is a wide space between the walls than where there is a narrow space.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. My hon. friend will see that there are so many cubic feet of timber work, stone work, or earth work, as the case may be. We are not going to pay any more than will be paid for the same class of work under contract. However, I am not asking for any change, but I have taken the first opportunity to intimate to the House what I thought would be in the public interest. If, when I submit the proposition and the plans to the House, it does not receive the endorsement of the House, I will carry the work out as it is. But I feel so confident that it will receive the unanimous endorsement of the House that I propose to make the recommendation.

Mr. COCHRANE. Will this work when completed belong to the government ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Yes, this is a government work.

Mr. COCHRANE. Of course, I do not object to the expenditure of the money, but it appeared to me that a breakwater was quite a different thing from a wharf. I have always understood that a breakwater was built for the protection of a harbour. I think that is in the public interest; but I do not think it right that the government should build a wharf from which they will receive no revenue, simply for the benefit of some corporation. I think that is an important harbour, and that it is in the public interest that it should be improved; but I do not think it necessary to double up the breakwater and provide space for railway tracks for the benefit of some individual corporation to make money out of at the expense of the public. That is the way it strikes me.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I may say to my hon. friend that the very opposite is the case, and I know that I shall have his endorsement. This is not for the benefit of any corporation. A breakwater is often used as a landing pier, and there is no reason why it should not be, and by making this change we shall get a very much needed wharf which will be of great advantage to the public. I am sure that when I bring down the plans the hon. gentleman will agree with me.

Mr. SPROULE. The hon. minister says that when we see the plans we shall be perfectly satisfied; but the very few moments that we have to look at plans which are laid on the Table at the very time the item is voted, afford little opportunity to obtain any information, or to exercise a judgment on the matter in hand. I am not saying that this work is wrong; it may be all right; I am only objecting to the principle of making radical changes in an important work like this after the contract is let. I still contend that the party who does the work could do it very much cheaper by filling up a space of 80 feet wide than by filling up a space of 25 feet wide, because in the larger space we could use almost any kind of material. Then, letting a contract for a certain kind of work, and telling the House that is what is needed, and the House accepting that information as correct and voting the money on the strength of it, and the next year coming back and practically changing the whole plan, at least arouses a suspicion in our minds that the matter could not have been well considered in the first instance, or that there must be some special reason for making so radical a change, and we want to know what it is. Then, the other question comes up which we have often debated in this House, of changing large contracts on the recommendation of the engineer and putting it into the hands of the contractor and the government to manipulate the figures between themselves as to what shall be paid for the work.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I will bring down the plan and lay it on the Table, so that my hon. friend will have an opportunity of examining it before I make any recommendation.

Mr. INGRAM. Did the government build Depot Harbour ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. There has been a lot of work done by the Canada Atlantic Railway at Depot Harbour in the way of wharfs and elevators for its own purposes, but this is for the shipping interests, and I do not know of any work the government has undertaken which is so much in the public interest as Depot Harbour.

Mr. INGRAM. I understand that Mr. Booth has spent about $750,000 on this Depot Harbour.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. That would be on wharfs and elevators in connection with his own work, but not in connection with this.

Mr. INGRAM. If this is a breakwater protecting the harbour, what part of this harbour does the government own ? Does the government own it all or does the Canada Atlantic Railway or Mr. Booth own any part of this harbour which the government is now protecting ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This work is for the benefit of the harbour and for the advantages of shippers outside the railway and is under the complete control of the government.

Mr. INGRAM. Therefore the interests of Mr. Booth and those of the government will not conflict in any way ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Not at all.

Mr. SPROULE. Will the hon. minister bring down the tenders received for that work ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Yes.

Mr. CLARKE. Is the work going on now?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. The contract is let, the timber has all been got out, and the change can be made at present without loss to the country. I will bring down the plan and submit the change I propose to the House, and if the House does not approve, no change will be made.

Mr. CLARKE. I do not desire to dispute the statement of the hon. minister, but would it not be a more business-like proposition to bring down the amended plan before asking us to pass the item ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. The House is already committed to the contract. It is a legal, binding contract, and the only question is whether the change I propose would commend itself to the good sense of the House. If not, we will go on with the work as originally contemplated.

Mr. CLARKE. It seems to me that this is rather an unusual proceeding, but I am going to accept the statement of the hon. minister, and he says we will get full information when the plan is brought down.

Georgian Bay, Point au Baril route—improvement of the Devil's Elbow channel between Parry Sound and Killarney, $3,000.

Mr. SPROULE. What improvements are you making there ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This is a vote to provide for the improvement of the channel. It is being pressed by the navigators and is very necessary. It is for the removal of a shoal that is very dangerous to shipping.

Mr. SPROULE. That is by dredging ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Yes, and blasting too.

Mr. SPROULE. Are you doing it with your own dredge or by contract and day's work.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. We have no dredge there to do the work and will have to make arrangements for a dredge at the usual terms.

Mr. CLARKE. What are the terms ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. It depends altogether on the size of the dredge and its capacity for work—$8 to $12 per hour, if by the hour, and if by contract, so much per yard.

Mr. SPROULE. What do you pay per yard ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. The average price would be about thirteen cents.

Mr. SPROULE. How do you do the blasting work ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Under the supervision of our own engineer and not by contract. It is very difficult in a small work like this in a channel to make any specifications. It would take the appropriation to make them.

Goderich harbour works, $16,000.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This is for renewing the original portion of the old superstructure of the pier. The total cost of repairing is $16,000.

Mr. CLARKE. How is the work to be done ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. It would be somewhat difficult for me to pledge myself without further information, as to whether this would be done more advantageously under the supervision of an engineer and by hiring labour, than by letting a contract. If specifications can be prepared, I prefer to let a contract, but if not we will have to hire our own labour and buy material.

Mr. KEMP. Does this constitute all that the people of Goderich demand from the Department of Public Works ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. No, demands have been made, not only from Goderich, but the whole of the district and from Toronto West, that a breakwater should be built at that port. I myself believe it is a matter of necessity, if we are to have the benefit we should have on Lake Huron. At present mostly all the shipping goes up the American side of the lake because we have not any harbour of refuge on the Canadian side. There are in addition splendid facilities already erected there in the shape of an elevator and other improvements at the harbour. I am very much impressed with the representation that a great deal of the grain of the west might be taken care of here if we had the proper facilities. However, the discussion of that matter will come up more properly when I ask the House to consider an appropriation for the purpose of improving Goderich harbour. I do not think it is a local work, but national in its nature, and the shipments to Canadian ports depend a great deal on our being able to take care of the grain which comes to these lake ports. Larger vessels could come to Goderich than to many of the other places. I am informed by the Grand Trunk that they would be prepared to take care of the grain and that perhaps from fifteen to twenty millions of bushels could be easily handled if there was a very moderate expenditure on the harbour.

Mr. KEMP. Goderich is not a harbour of refuge in any sense at the present time.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. For want of protection to the boats coming in, it is almost impossible, I am informed, to take a vessel into the harbour. I am informed by lake captains that if, following the experience of some of the ports on the American side, a pier were built out to break the rolling of the sea, a vessel might enter the harbour with some safety, and they could use it as well as they do the harbours on the other side of the line.

Mr. KEMP. Would the breakwater be an expensive undertaking ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I think not. I intended to look into the matter more fully and have a further report from the engineers as to the character and cost of the work. I think that at least a test might be made at very moderate expense. Representations have been made to me that the cost of a breakwater such as would make this a first class harbour of refuge is in the neighbourhood of a couple of hundred thousand dollars.

Mr. MACLAREN (Perth). I have many communications from that part of the country with regard to the harbour, and they say that for two hundred miles along the shore of Lake Huron there is not a safe harbour for steamers to enter in case of storm. The grain men and millers all through that part of the country are very anxious to have the harbour put into proper shape. I may say also that I have a resolution passed by the Board of Trade of Stratford, and letters and telegrams from Mitchell, Seaforth, Goderich and all along that line; and I think the government should do something to put the harbour into proper shape. So far as I am concerned, I will do everything in my power to help them.

Mr. BENNETT. Is this $16,000 to be spent on the two jetties that run out there, or on some work in the bay ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. It is to be spent on the pier on the south side of the entrance channel.

Mr. CLARKE. Speaking about the contemplated expenditure for the purpose of a breakwater, I understand that the hon. gentleman does not consider that to be a work specially for the benefit of the harbour of Goderich, but one of national importance that must be undertaken by the government—to provide a harbour of refuge and put the harbour into such shape that large grain carriers can come in.

Mr. BENNETT. Who owns the dock inside ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. It is government property.

Mr. BENNETT. Is the elevator on the government pier ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I am sorry to say that I am not sufficiently familiar with the locality to be able to say whether the elevator is on that pier or not. I do not think it is.

Mr. MACLAREN (Perth). With the permission of the Committee, I will read a brief extract from the letter of the mayor of Goderich :

> Buffalo handled 12,000,000 bushels of Canadian grain in 1902. Goderich has an elevator capacity of slightly over 20,000,000 bushels a season, but we handled only three millions and a-half bushels last year because our harbour cannot be entered in the fall after bad weather.

That gives an idea of the business that might be done.

Mr. KEMP. The mayor of Goderich, over his own signature stated that $730,328.70 had been spent on the Goderich harbour. Can the minister inform us in what way this was spent ? Was it in dredging, in breakwaters, or how ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. The amount given by the department is $713,341.43, much the same as the amount stated by the mayor. This covers the expenditure from 1850. The money was spent in dredging, building wharfs, making repairs, &c.

Mr. INGRAM. There was a breakwater there at one time, has it gone to pieces ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I think the present pier was swept away, but it was rebuilt. It is not the protection we are speaking of—which, of course, has nothing to do with this vote, but the hon. member for Toronto (Mr. Kemp) brought it to the attention of the Committee.

Mr. INGRAM. But what I am asking about is the breakwater which was once there—a very good work. There was a good deal of shipping in Goderich harbour at one time. It seems to me that the difficulty with regard to Goderich harbour and the Maitland river is that when the ice thaws in the spring and the water comes down, the sand is carried out between the piers and prevents vessels coming in. It seems to me if they had a cut and a breakwater such as they had before, it would put the harbour into such shape that shipping could come in as before.

Mr. BENNETT. Is there any revenue from this dock ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I cannot answer my hon. friend. As he knows, that is another department, and would come under another head.

Mr. SPROULE. I notice that, according to the report :

> The timbers are in a very much decayed condition, in some instances it being difficult to find sufficient sound old timber to spike the new timber to, and these remarks will hold good with reference to the south pier as well. Some slight repairs should be made to both north and south piers as well as to the checkwater. . . . These repairs will be only temporary, as the timbers of both piers are so badly decayed their superstructure should be completely renewed within two or three years, or breeches will be washed through into the newly dredged channel.

Evidently, the works are not in very good condition. I noticed in the letter advocating this being made a harbour of refuge, which, I suppose every member got, it is stated that we have spent a very large amount of money already. Perhaps as much as three-quarters of a million in that harbour and that if we did not spend more the work would be of no use. But this would suggest either that the expenditure has not been wisely carried on or that the harbour is a very difficult one to make. And, if we make further heavy expenditure, we may find we are still without the harbour of refuge. As to making the harbour fit for grain carriers to come in, I think that should be done, but whether we should spend so much in making a harbour of refuge is another question. On the basis of the information we have, it seems a very doubtful question whether it would be well to do that.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. That is hardly under consideration now. At the same time, I may say, I am having further information collected with regard to the question. I have consulted some of the captains of the vessels in those waters, who, after all, are the practical men. They gave their experience with regard to similar works erected in places on the American shore. They know something of the advantages of breakwaters such as is proposed for Goderich. Of course, conditions vary in different places. It may be to some extent an experiment, but I think that, from the experience on the American shore we should be perfectly safe in making the improvement I speak of. It would not require a very extravagant expenditure to make the trial. As to what effect the breakwater would have in making this a harbour of refuge, I have asked the engineer to prepare a plan of the shortest breakwater that could be built there that would have the desired effect of allowing ships to enter the harbour. In that way—of course, I may be mistaken; it was an idea of my own—I think it possible that we might, for a very reasonable expenditure, learn what the effect of the larger one would be at that point.

Mr. SPROULE. Are you proposing to repair all these docks ? What interest have we, for instance, in the Grand Trunk dock ? I see that is very much out of repair, and is a menace to both life and navigation.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I have no doubt the Grand Trunk Railway will repair their own dock. I may say that they joined a deputation in making representations to the minister in favour of an appropriation. But none of this vote is to be spent on the property of the Grand Trunk Railway, or on any other property. It is for the improvement of government piers.

Mr. CLARKE. Is it not possible to have specifications prepared and tenders called for this work ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I am not prepared to pledge myself, but I may say that I prefer to let this work by contract if the specifications can be prepared.

Mr. SPROULE. I can understand how the Grand Trunk Railway would desire to press upon the government the expenditure of a large sum of money ; but I think private docks should be kept up by private corporations.

Harbours, rivers and bridges—general repairs and improvements to $15,000.

Mr. INGRAM. Where does the hon. gentleman propose to spend the largest part of this item ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I find that last year $15,000 were spent at Beaverton, Burk's Falls, Goderich, Huntsville, Hawkestone, Marksville, North Bay, Port Findlay, etc. For the current year small sums were expended at Bruce Mines, Kingston graving dock, Lancaster, North Bay, Presqu'ile, Summerston and Sydenham river, &c.; and generally a sum of $7,000 for different works throughout the province.

Mr. THOMSON (Grey). Is some of this money to be expended in repairing the dock at Presqu'ile ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Yes, $144.

Mr. THOMSON (Grey). Does that property belong to the government or to a private corporation ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I have not the information. I was reading out the items that were spent.

Mr. THOMSON (Grey). I would like to know why the Minister of Public Works should expend money on that work. It does not belong to the government, it is owned by a private party. It seems strange that the government should spend money there on a work from which they receive no revenue whatever.

Mr. INGRAM. If the principle is to expend this money on private docks as well as on government docks, we want to know it. Some of us have private docks in our constituencies, and we might approach the hon. gentleman with the view of getting some money expended on them.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. At a previous sitting of the House I said that I was surprised to find that so much money had been spent in previous years on this class of works. I am rather surprised that the hon. member for Elgin (Mr. Ingram) should have supported for so many years a government in voting money to be expended on private docks. I am not prepared to say at the present moment that there might not be a justification, in the public interest, in spending money on a wharf which, though not owned by the government, might be used by the public at a nominal charge. But generally speaking, I think it would be much better that properties on which public money is spent should be vested in the Crown. It is also true that through municipal assistance private companies have built works on the lake shore and at other points, and it seems that the government has been aiding them on the ground that they were of public utility.

Mr. INGRAM. My experience with the Conservative party has not been such as the hon. gentleman intimates. A number of years ago I asked for a small amount of money for Port Stanley harbour. It was owned by the London and Port Stanley Railway, the Grand Trunk Railway Company had it leased, and the government refused to spend any money on that harbour until it was transferred to the government, and after it was transferred to the government, then I was able to obtain a small amount for that harbour.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. What evidence has the hon. gentleman that that harbour was transferred to the government ?

Mr. INGRAM. I myself held the documents some years ago relating to the transfer. But my principal reason for rising was to remind the hon. gentleman that in my constituency there is a harbour which is contributing towards licenses. Their money is being paid into the hands of the government, and while the government is willing to receive money from the fishermen at that port, they are unwilling to expend any towards fixing up the harbour for the benefit of the fishermen. The fact that by a recent judicial decision the license fees from the fishermen are now handed over to the Ontario government should be no reason why these men should be deprived by this government of the enjoyment of a proper harbour.

Mr. TAYLOR. Is any part of this $15,000 to be expended in the harbour at Gananoque ? When the late Minister of Public Works visited that town I think he promised the deputation who waited on him that something would be done. While speaking on this point I would ask the hon. minister if he would kindly have an engineer from his department go up there and see the work that is going on now. The Rathbun Company are rebuilding a dock over 300 feet long. It was originally built with timber and filled with stone. They have taken the timber down below the water line and they are renewing the whole work with concrete. It will cost a very large sum of money but when they get the dock completed they will not have sufficient water outside to allow vessels of deep draft to approach laden with coal. I presume there are more arrivals, as you will notice by the report of the customs department, at Gananoque than at any other port on the Canadian side of the lake. I think the least the government can do is to make a fair appropriation for the necessary dredging before public docks. Not a dollar has ever been spent by the government on the dock at Gananoque; indeed, all the docks have been built by private parties, but unfortunately we have not a sufficient depth of water. I think it would be in the interest of the country generally if, in place of renewing docks and piers with timber as the government are doing, they should commence doing as all towns are doing, that is, putting down permanent sidewalks, doing away with the wood and putting in concrete. I think it would be well if the hon. minister would send one of his men to inspect the work that is now nearing completion at Gananoque.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. The matter mentioned by the hon. member for Leeds (Mr. Taylor) has been brought to my attention and it is under consideration to make provision for dredging at the point he has mentioned as well as at Kingston. We have to realize that the larger boats now in use make deeper dredging necessary. I have asked for an increase of $5,000 in that province for this general work of dredging. Considering the size of the province and the number of harbours that have to be dredged it is a very small amount and I think that after the estimate is made up we may have to ask for probably an increase of $5,000, because, I believe, a great deal of satisfactory work can be done by the government dredges if we had sufficient money to do a lot of work that we now let by contract. It costs so much to move these private dredges from place to place while if there is a bar filling up, such as the hon. member for South Leeds refers to at Gananoque, the government dredge can be sent without any extra expense being incurred because the employees are under pay, and good effective work can be done at these various harbours. I agree with the hon. gentleman as to the advantage of concrete over wooden work, especially now that we cannot get the class of timber that was formerly available. I have been pressing on the engineer's department my own personal view in regard to this matter and the superstructures of many of the new works we are undertaking, or rather the works that parliament is committed to and which were only commenced since I took office, are being made of concrete. With modern machinery and the improved method of making concrete you can build a concrete work of a considerable size for the same price as a first-class timber work and it will wear a great deal longer.

Mr. TAYLOR. The Rathbun's who are large lumber dealers claim that they can put in a concrete wharf cheaper than a timber one. The large steamers owned by the Richelieu and Ontario Navigation Company and plying between Toronto and Kingston refused to call at Gananoque because of the insufficient depth of water.

Mr. SPROULE. I am surprised to hear the statement of the hon. Minister of Public Works that they had not money enough to keep the dredges going. I always thought the contention was that the government had not dredges enough to do the work. Parliament has never been niggardly in voting all the money required to keep the government dredges going. We have always heard the complaint that we could not use up the money by employing government dredges and that we had to hire private dredges.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. We have not had dredges at points where there has been considerable work to do. At some places the dredging has been in deeper water than the dredges we had in Canada are able to work. There are many such places not only in Ontario but especially in the lower provinces. I find that we have another vote for general dredging out of which I propose to have this work done at different points, where it is required.

Mr. SPROULE. You do not intend to have dredging done to any great depth at Gananoque. I presume you could not dredge very deeply there because otherwise you would undermine the concrete wall, so that there could not be any very deep dredging there. I did not know there was on the Georgian Bay very much deep dredging required to be done.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. No, I was speaking generally.

Mr. SPROULE. I want to ask the hon. minister if he can give us any idea of the number of private wharfs upon which we are spending government money and the number of wharfs belonging to the country.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I will be very pleased to have a statement prepared.

Mr. SPROULE. And where they are ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Yes, where they are located and the number. There is quite a number.

Mr. SPROULE. I know there is and I always thought the principle a bad one. I can understand that in the early history of the country where private enterprise would construct a dock that was valuable to the country it might be justified, but I never could understand the wisdom of spending large sums of money on building up private property, the revenue of which went entirely to the individual. There are examples of this at Sault Ste. Marie and Bruce Mines. I see you have a dock at Hawkestone in the county of Simcoe. The government can have no interest in that.

Mr. BENNETT. A boat called there last summer.

Mr. SPROULE. Was there one ? Well, that is a revelation. I was not aware that any but row boats called there. I hold that the principle is wrong. Where private individuals reap the rewards of our expenditure and the country receives practically no benefit from it beyond the convenience of shipping over the dock, it does seem to me that we are not justified in carrying this practice to the length we have done for many years. Two years ago, I understand, it was proposed to buy that Presqu' isle wharf. Now, I am told that that dock has not been in use for years and years and it is of no value to the public. The government made some kind of a preliminary contract to buy this dock which was of no use to the public, and the purchase of which would be beneficial to no one except the estate which owned the property.

Mr. CLARKE. The minister has stated that the practice has prevailed for a great many years of expending public money on private docks, and he asks for money tonight to continue that policy. He has promised the hon. member for Grey (Mr. Sproule) that he will bring down a statement showing the number of private properties on which public money has been expended. I would ask the minister what is his own opinion in respect to this policy ? Does he intend to continue to ask the House for votes of this kind in the future ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. These small votes are in order to complete works already under way. I may say to my hon. friend (Mr. Clarke) that I am not in favour of the policy. So much is that the case that I asked the other night for a vote to purchase a wharf instead of spending money in improving private property, but hon. gentlemen opposite, acting within their right, thought that I should not be trusted to take over that property until they got further information. Generally speaking, I am not in favour of this policy, and I do not think I shall come down with a new vote asking for such an expenditure unless I am able to give special reasons that will commend themselves to parliament. I am pleased that the hon. gentleman made the suggestion that we should have a list of such works owned by private parties or corporations; so that we will see what reason, if any, there is for continuing the expenditure of public money on such works. I find that the owners put a very high estimate upon some of these works, and there is a conflict between the government and the private owners as to their value. Generally speaking, I am in favour of spending public money only on the property of the Crown.

Mr. HENDERSON. I notice that the Minister of Customs and the Minister of Marine are absent, and I again am compelled to lodge a complaint against these ministers for their lack of attention to the public business. I want to submit a question to the Minister of Public Works which I presume could be better answered by the Minister of Customs, with reference to the transaction of public business on these private wharfs. What I desire to know is : How does the government protect the revenue of the country against the importation of goods through harbours and docks of this character, as I understand that there are no wharfingers or public officers in charge of them ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I think the answer to that is simple. You ship subject to duty or in bond, and notice is sent to the customs officers, and if any parties are trying to smuggle they would be detected on a private wharf just as well as on a public wharf or anywhere else.

Mr. BLAIN. We voted at the last sitting $9,000 for the Blind river wharf. Was that property purchased by the Crown, and if so at what price ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. The property was purchased at $400, speaking from memory.

Mr. BLAIN. Last year the Minister of Public Works told us that the price fixed for the property was $250. How did it come to increase ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. That was probably the estimated cost, but the price was $400 about.

Mr. BLAIN. I wish to make a brief statement in respect to some money that was proposed to be expended on Port Credit harbour in the county of Peel, and which harbour is owned by private individuals. Some years ago this matter was brought to the attention of the government and there was considerable correspondence with the council of the township in which that harbour is situated. The township council was told distinctly that the policy of the government was that they did not expend any public money upon harbours owned by private individuals. It seems surprising, in view of that statement, that at that time and up to the present large amounts of money are being expended by the government on harbours owned by private individuals. I direct the attention of the minister to the fact that Port Credit harbour is a very important harbour for that section of the country, and the expenditure of money there would be in the interest of the public generally. Last winter the cost of coal was a very important consideration to the farmers, and it would be in the interest of the people there if money were expended on these harbours upon that part of Lake Ontario, so that the people would have the opportunity of competing in coal by reason of the fact that coal laden vessels could come there. The pier of that harbour is in a very bad condition, and the harbour requires dredging.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Is that harbour under municipal or private ownership ?

Mr. BLAIN. It is partly private and partly municipal ownership. I am surprised that the government should continue the policy of expending money on private harbours in face of the statement made to the township council to which I have referred. Perhaps I could get the minister to say that out of this vote of $15,000 which is to be expended on harbours partly owned by the government and partly by private individuals, that he would send his engineer up to look over Port Credit harbour, and to report to him if something could not be done.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. As I said, I am personally opposed to spending money on private harbours. In this case, municipal ownership makes the work somewhat in the public interest, and I shall be pleased to grant the request of the hon. gentleman and have a report made upon it, and see how it stands.

Lake Temiscamingue—wharfs, $5,500.

Mr. SPROULE. Is this a new wharf ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This is for two wharfs for the accommodation of the people of that district. One will cost about $9,000 and the other about $1,500.

Midland harbour—dredging, $12,000.

Mr. CLARKE. Where is Midland harbour ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. My hon. friend must know that Midland is going to be the Buffalo of Canada. It is one of the most important harbours of Ontario.

Mr. CLARKE. I notice that a vessel was aground there the other day. What is the depth of water ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. It varies from fifteen to twenty-one feet. It is the intention to make a channel a uniform depth of twenty-one feet.

Mr. BENNETT. I would like to ask the minister if the warehouses and the dock, for which the town paid $10,000, have been deeded to the government, have they been rented, who has rented the dock and who the warehouse, and what rental is paid ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. These matters have not been attended to yet. We only got the deeds a short time ago, and this week is the first opportunity I have had of asking the chief engineer of the department and one of the principal officials to visit the harbour. As soon as I receive the report I shall be able to give information on this and other matters.

Mr. BENNETT. I may say that there is one large warehouse and two smaller ones, and also an excellent dock at which boats now land. All these being now the property of the Dominion, I think it would be in the public interest and in the interest of fair play that the department should ask for public tenders for the use of them, and that they should not be given to any person without competition. May I ask the minister if he promises that that will be done ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Yes, that will be attended to.

Mr. BENNETT. I may say that they have been rented, I understand, for $500 a year, which I think is a small rent.

Oakville—repairs to pier, &c., $6,000.

Mr. HENDERSON. Will this vote put this dock in a thorough state of repair ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. The report of the engineer shows details indicating that this will complete the work and put it in good shape.

these fears were unnecessary. The prosperity of that time has continued. Each succeeding year has shown an increasing record, and we find ourselves to-day with an outlook that is in every respect encouraging and satisfactory. I take up the affairs of the fiscal year ending the 30th of June last, the accounts of which have been before the House for some time. I am sure that hon. gentlemen will agree with me when I say that the exhibit made for that year in the public accounts is a very gratifying one.

Some hon. MEMBERS. Hear, hear.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. In some respects the results surpassed the conservative estimate which I ventured to submit to the House in the last budget speech. My estimate of the revenue was $56,800,000 and my estimate of the expenditure chargeable to income was $51,000,000, leaving a probable surplus of $5,800,000. So far as the expenditure was concerned the estimate proved to be a very close one, the actual expenditure being $50,759,391, but on the revenue side the last months of the year proved to be so very prosperous that our revenue exceeded the expectation by a very considerable sum. The revenue reached the sum of $58,050,790, being greater than my estimate by $1,250,790, and greater than the revenue of the previous year by $5,536,088. It too often happens that increase of revenue is accompanied by a corresponding increase in expenditure, but in this case it was not so. The expenditure, as I have shown, was very close to the estimate which I formed; it proved to be somewhat less. But while my estimate of the expenditure was a close one, the revenue as I have already pointed out exceeded my estimate by a considerable sum; the result being that instead of a surplus of $5,800,000 which I estimated, we closed the year with an actual surplus of $7,291,398. If I except the surplus of our own showing of two years earlier, this is the largest surplus that has ever been recorded in the public accounts of Canada. The increases of revenue will be found in nearly all departments. I have here a statement giving a comparison of the receipts in the various branches for the years 1901 and 1902. That statement is as follows:

DETAILS OF REVENUE—COMPARISON WITH 1900–1.

Service.	1901–2.	1900–1.	Increase.	Decrease.
	$	$	$	$
Customs	32,191,978	28,425,284	3,766,694
Excise	11,197,133	10,318,266	878,867
Post Office	3,918,415	3,441,504	476,910
Railways	5,918,997	5,213,381	705,616
Dominion Lands	1,227,976	1,517,319		289,342
Miscellaneous	3,596,288	3,598,945		2,656
	58,050,790	52,514,701	5,828,088	291,999
Net increase			5,536,088

The chief increases of revenue over the previous year arose in customs, but there were also large increases in excise, post office, and railways. In this statement which I have read, the item of Dominion lands includes royalties from the Yukon gold fields, and the falling-off is due to the reduction that took place in the rate of royalty. The increase in customs can be ascribed to the general activity of trade in all departments. Increase of revenue is shown under nearly all heads of the customs business, and only in the case of a few articles was there a falling-off. In excise, too, the increase was general, as appears by the following statement, which gives the quantity of goods and the duties accruing thereon.

EXCISE.

Article.	QUANTITY.		DUTY.		Increase.
	1900-1.	1901-2.	1900-1.	1901-2.
			$	$	$
Spirits Galls.	2,863,950	3,123,430	5,178,275	5,618,113	439,838
Malt Lbs.	64,723,616	71,440,519	970,855	1,071,608	100,753
Cigars No.	141,096,889	151,780,516	822,738	881,597	58,859
Cigarettes "	121,383,584	134,236,034	362,626	400,035	37,409
Tobacco and snuff Lbs.	11,330,345	11,569,632	2,308,460	2,433,355	124,895
Raw leaf, foreign "	9,848,803	10,704,961	1,026,265	1,137,279	111,014

y prosperous that our expectation by a very he revenue reached the )eing greater than my ), and greater than the )us year by $5,536,088. hat increase of revenue corresponding increase this case it was not so, have shown, was very e which I formed; it at less. But while my enditure was a close
I have already pointed nate by a considerable that instead of a surhich I estimated, we an actual surplus of pt the surplus of our 'ears earlier, this is the as ever been recorded s of Canada. The in-ill be found in nearly ave here a statement of the receipts in the the years 1901 an t is as follows:

)—1.

Increase.	Decrease.
$	$
3,766,694
878,867
476,910
705,616
.....	289,342
.....	2,656
5,828,088	291,999
5,536,088

de in all departments
s shown under near-ms business, and only articles was there a too, the increase was y the following state-ie quantity of goods
ng thereon.

TY.	Increase.
1901-2.
$	$
5,618,113	439,838
1,071,608	100,753
881,597	58,859
400,035	37,409
2,433,355	124,895
1,137,279	111,014

The increasing revenues and improved condition generally of the finances of the post office is worthy of special note. The following statement covering the expenditure usually given under the head of post office, and including all except civil government, is interesting:

POST OFFICE.

Year.	Revenue.	Expenditure.	Deficit.
	$	$	$
1896.....	2,964,014	3,665,011	700,997
1897.....	3,202,938	3,789,478	586,539
1898.....	3,527,809	3,575,411	47,602
1899.....	3,193,777	3,603,799	410,021
1900.....	3,205,535	3,758,014	552,479
1901.....	3,441,504	3,931,446	489,941
1902.....	3,918,415	4,023,636	105,221

The actual amount of surplus or deficit in the post office has been the subject of much discussion. There is, however, no room for any misunderstanding on the subject. The Postmaster General has made a statement, in which, for the purpose of comparison with the figures of former years, the service in the Yukon and Atlin districts is omitted, and leaving this out there was a small surplus on last year's operations. Considering that in previous years of comparison there was no charge at all for a service in the Yukon and Atlin, it is perfectly fair to make a comparative statement in this way. But if we put this aside and compare the expenditure of the Post Office Department of to-day with that of former years, we have before us the gratifying fact that while there was in 1896 a deficit of over $700,000, in the last fiscal year, 1901-1902, this deficit was reduced to $105,000.

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. The deficit in 1896 was $781,000.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. The figures I have here are $700,997, but I will look that up. However, the result is the same. In 1896, the last year under the former administration, the deficit in the post office account was upwards of $700,000. My hon. friend the Postmaster General has not only been able to carry on the service generally in a very efficient manner, but he has extended it, especially in the Yukon and the Atlin districts at a considerable cost, and he closes the year with a deficit of only $105,221. Even if this were the whole story of the post office, this statement would be a most gratifying one, of which the Postmaster General might well be proud. But the statement becomes immensely better when we consider the great reduction of taxation which has at the same time taken place in the Post Office Department. When we remember that under previous administrations the domestic rate of postage was three cents, and that under the present administration this has been reduced by one-third, and when we remember the great reductions that have taken place in the postage rates to Great Britain and the colonies, we must all feel that the financial results of the present post office administration have been remarkably satisfactory. It is a record of administration which the government and the Postmaster General (Hon. Sir William Mulock) particularly, may point to with satisfaction.

Some hon. MEMBERS. Hear, hear.

Mr. SPROULE. Is that deficit reduced out of the revenue of the post office?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. So far as I am aware, it was. I do not quite see the point of my hon. friend's question.

Mr. SPROULE. Simply this, if I may be allowed to explain. I understand that the old deficit of $700,000 was wiped out by an item put in the estimates for that purpose, but it was not revenue from the post office.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. I do not quite see the difference; the fact remains that at the close of the year 1896 there was a deficiency of some $700,000. Just how it was paid is of little consequence; and if under the circumstances which I have described, my hon. friend has reduced that to $105,000, I think that is a record which even my hon. friend from East Grey (Mr. Sproule) should receive with satisfaction.

In the Department of Railways, also, there is a large increase of receipts. We have been spending a great deal of money on the Intercolonial Railway, the returns for which we expect in some degree through increased receipts, but also to some extent, as in the case of the canals, not through direct dividends, but through service rendered in the general development of the business of the country. Nevertheless, it is gratifying to know that the volume of business on the railways has been greatly increased, as appears by the following statement of the revenue, expenditure, and surplus or deficit for a series of years:

REVENUE AND EXPENDITURE—CONSOLIDATED FUND—INTERCOLONIAL RAILWAY.

Year.	Revenue.	Expenditure	Expenditure greater or less than revenue by
	$ cts.	$ cts.	$ cts.
1890.....	2,928,080 92	3,481,472 97	+ 553,392 05
1895.....	2,940,717 95	2,950,300 91	+ 9,582 96
1900.....	4,552,071 86	4,431,404 69	— 120,667 02
1901.....	4,972,235 87	5,460,422 64	+ 488,186 77
1902.....	5,671,383 91	5,574,563 30	— 96,820 61

Thus, on the Intercolonial Railway proper for the last year there was a surplus of $96,820.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). Does the hon. gentleman include the Prince Edward Island Railway ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. I said the Intercolonial Railway proper. But the Railway Department has to deal also with the Prince Edward Island Railway, which is commonly associated with the Intercolonial, but is a different road, with a different gauge and operated under different conditions, and under a distinct account. The Windsor branch is also owned by the government, but is leased to the Dominion Atlantic Railway Company on conditions under which the government keeps up the track and receives a certain part of the earnings ; and that railway yielded a surplus for the year of $33,228. But against these two surpluses, on the Intercolonial and on the Windsor branch, there was a deficit on the Prince Edward Island Railway of $72,150. So that taking the operations of these three railways together we find that there was a net surplus for the year of $57,898.

RAILWAYS—CONSOLIDATED FUND—COLLECTION OF REVENUE—INCLUDING INTERCOLONIAL RAILWAY; PRINCE EDWARD ISLAND RAILWAY AND WINDSOR BRANCH.

Year.	Revenue.	Expenditure.	Surplus.	Deficit.
	$	$	$	$
1896....	3,140,678	3,254,442	....	113,764
1897....	3,066,784	3,195,959	.....	129,175
1 98. ..	3,313,847	3,508,648	.....	194,801
1899....	3,945,817	3,696,612	249,205
1900....	4,774,162	4,665,228	108,934
1901....	5,213,381	5,739,051	.. . ...	525,670
1902....	5,918,997	5,861,099	57,898

So far I have been dealing with the expenditures of the year 1901-2 on consolidated account, that is, the expenditures chargeable to income. There were, of course, other expenditures, chargeable to capital and special account, which have to be considered. The following is a comparative statement of our expenditures for 1901 and 1902, covering not only expenditure on consolidated fund account, but also all the items of capital and special expenditure, thus showing our total outlay for the two years :

TOTAL EXPENDITURES 1901–2 COMPARED WITH 1900–1.

Service.	1900-1.	1901-2.	Increase.	Decrease.
	$ cts.	$ cts.	$ cts.	$ cts.
Consolidated Fund.....	46,866,367 84	50,759,391 97	3,893,024 13
Capital—
Railways	3,914,010 50	5,102,838 99	1,188,828 49
Canals	2,360,569 89	2,114,689 88	.....	245,880 01
Public Works.....	1,006,983 39	2,190,125 09	1,183,141 70
Dominion Lands.....	269,060 90	370,837 97	101,777 07
Militia	135,884 79	299,697 43	163,812 64
Canadian Pacific Railway	8,978 87	448 70	.....	8,530 17
Total Capital	7,695,488 34	10,078,638 06	2,383,149 72
Special—
Railway Subsidies..	2,512,328 86	2,093,939 00	.....	418,389 86
South African Contingents and Halifax Garrison	908,681 42	247,741 45	....	660,939 97
*Bounties on Iron and Steel	.....	791,089 38	791,089 38
Total Special.....	3,421,010 28	3,132,769 83	.....	288,240 45
Total Capital and Special.	11,116,498 62	13,211,407 89	2,094,909 27
Total Expenditure of all kinds.... ...	57,982,866 46	63,970,799 86	5,987,933 40

* Previously paid out of Customs receipts.

The expenditures on capital account for railways, canals, public works, Dominion lands, militia and Canadian Pacific Railway amounted in 1901 to $7,695,488.34, and in 1902 to $10,078,638.06. Special expenditures, such as railway subsidies, South African contingents and Halifax garrison, and bounties on iron and steel, show a total in 1901 of $3,421,010.28, and in 1902 of $3,132,769.83. Our total expenditure of all kinds in 1901 was $57,982,866.46, and in 1902, $63,970,799.86.

Coming now to the affairs of the fiscal year 1902-3, we find an even more satisfactory state of our finances. The revenue from the 1st of July to the 10th of April was $48,348,125.67, against for the corresponding period last year $43,169,658.04, showing an increase in the nine months of $5,178,467.63. I feel confident that the remainder of the year will show a further increase, and I anticipate that the revenue of the year will come very close to, if it does not reach $65,000,000. Our revenue last year was a little over $58,000,000, so that the House will see I am counting on an increase of revenue this year amounting in round numbers to seven million dollars. Our expenditure for the current year up to the 10th of April was $32,870,204.95, and for the corresponding period last year $31,946,181.16, showing an increase this year of $924,023.79. It will be observed that while during these nine months our revenue has increased over $5,000,000, our expenditure, chargeable to income, for the corresponding period has increased less than $1,000,000. I anticipate that this favourable condition will continue to the end of the year and that our expenditure chargeable to income for this year will be about $51,650,000, against a similar expenditure last year of $50,759,391.97, showing a probable increase of expenditure for the year chargeable to income of only $890,608.03, while at the same time I am counting on an increase of revenue of $7,000,000. Since I am estimating the revenue at $65,000,000 and our probable expenditure chargeable to income at $51,650,000, it follows that at the close of the year, as between our ordinary expenditure chargeable to income and our revenue, we shall have a magnificient surplus of $13,350,000—a surplus far and away above any previous surplus in the financial history of our Dominion.

Associated with a question of this character there is always of course the question of our public debt.

An hon. MEMBER. Hear, hear.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. 'Hear, hear' says my hon. friend opposite, and I am delighted to be able to assure him that upon that point also I have a statement to make as to which we need not fear any comparison. I have here a statement of the increases and decreases of the public debt, as they have occurred from time to time. Those increases and decreases in our net public debt are as follows:

NET DEBT—STATEMENT FOR SEVEN YEARS

	Increase.	Decrease.
1897	$ 3,041,163
1898	2,417,802
1899	2,317,047
1900		$ 779,639
1901	2,986,196
1902	3,349,085
1903		5,650,000
	$14,111,296	$6,429,639
	6,429,639
Net increase, 7 years	$ 7,681,657
Average per year	1,097,379
Average of 18 years, 1878-1896	6,563,075

For the current year we do not anticipate any increase of the public debt. Last year we added $3,349,085 to our debt, which was considerably less than I expected. In the statement I presented a year ago, I anticipated a considerable increase of our public debt as we had large capital expenditures going on then, the outcome of which it was difficult to closely estimate. But happily the outlay on capital account proved less than my estimate and the revenue very much greater. The result was that we added to our public debt at the close of the year only the moderate sum of $3,349,085.93, which was considerably less than I expected. At the close of the present year, after providing for all our charges against income and our expenditures on capital account, which will be $10,000,000 or a little more, I anticipate that we shall not only add nothing to the public debt, but make a reduction of that debt to the amount of $5,650,000. If my expectation as to the favourable outcome of the present year be realized—and I think we may count with considerable safety on its being realized in the main—we shall find that in the course of seven years, we shall have increased the public debt by $7,681,657, being an average of a little over $1,000,000 per annum, or to be exact, $1,097,379 under the present administration. And against this, we have the fact that our predecessors increased our public debt during the eighteen years of their administration from 1878 to 1896 by $6,563,075 per year.

That, Sir, is a statement made to the close of the current year, when we shall have had seven years of financial administration by this government, showing that the average increase of the public debt during these seven years was but $1,097,379 per year. But making a statement for four years only, I find this result. That in the course of the last four years, including the present, we shall have increased our public debt $6,335,282.73 in the years 1900-01 and 1902 and shall have increased it by the amount of $6,429,639.71 in 1900 and 1903. The figures are as follows:

NET DEBT—STATEMENT FOR FOUR YEARS.

	Increase.	Decrease.
1900		$ 779,639 71
1901	$2,986,196 80
1902	3,349,085 93
1903		5,650,000 00
	$6,335,282 73	$6,429,639 71

So that taking these four years, during which we have certainly made liberal appropriations for the public service, during which great public works have been carried on, and during which our hon. friends opposite have even charged us occasionally with extravagence, we shall have paid our expenditure on consolidated account, on capital account, on special account, and every other account, and will not have added one cent to the public debt of Canada.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). I did not catch the hon. gentleman's figures for the estimated reduction of the public debt.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. $5,650,000. Now with regard to reduction of public debt, it may be well to notice that it is very seldom the lot of a Finance Minister of Canada to be able to speak of a reduction of the public debt. Some hon. gentlemen, who may not have followed this matter closely, may be surprised to learn that prior to the advent of this government, only twice in the history of the Dominion of Canada was there a reduction of the public debt. Once in our time, prior to the present, have we had a reduction of the public debt, amounting to upwards of $700,000, and now, in the present year, we have this large reduction to which I have referred. While presenting these figures, let me frankly say that I do not think any Minister of Finance of this country should be expected to show often a reduction of the public debt. In a new country like Canada with a great many public works requiring to be assisted, with many demands on the treasury, it would not be surprising that each year we would not only be obliged to spend our ordinary revenue but to incur some debt in order to carry on our great public works.

That, Sir, has been the experience of Canada during the greater part of its history. Where we have had surpluses—and we have had many of them—almost invariably they have been absorbed by the expenditures on capital account. Only four times in the history of Canada have there been reductions in the public debt. That is to say, there have been only four years in which the Dominion was able to provide for all its expenditures and have a balance wherewith to reduce the debt. Twice in the time of our predecessors these reductions were made, and twice in our time. And, if there is anything in making the calculation, I may say that the reductions in the seven years of our administration, were nearly twice as great as the reductions made by our predecessors during the whole of their time. However, while I call attention to these reductions and regard them as a very gratifying feature of the financial statement, I do not hesitate to say that, as a rule, a Minister of Finance will not be able to show reductions of the public debt, and it will be no discredit to him if he is not able to do so.

I have prepared a statement of the public debt per capita, this, of course being the fairest way to make the comparison. It is not to be supposed that the public debt will remain at a standstill; but, as the country grows in population it is able to bear an increased amount of debt without increasing the weight of the burden upon the people. Beginning with the year 1891, we find that the debt per capita has been as follows:—

NET DEBT PER CAPITA.

Year.	Population.	Net Debt.	Per Capita.
1891	4,833,239	$237,809,030	49.20
1892	4,877,748	241,131,434	49.43
1893	4,923,818	241,681,039	49.08
1894	4,971,536	246,183,029	49.52
1895	5,021,005	253,074,927	50.40
1896	5,072,341	258,497,432	50.96
1897	5,127,220	261,538,596	51.01
1898	5,184,373	263,956,398	50.91
1899	5,243,950	266,273,446	50.78
1900	5,306,113	265,493,806	50.04
19[illegible]	5,371,051	268,480,003	49.98
19[illegible]	5,438,915	271,829,089	49.97
1903	5,509,000	266,179,089	48.31

The statement I have just given might be made even more favourable. In the estimates of population I have followed the method of calculation usually followed in the census office, by which they add a certain percentage from year to year during the interval between the times of census taking. But I have no doubt, taking into account the large increases in population during the current year, that a correct statement if one could be made, would show a much larger population for the present year than in the estimate I have made. It will be seen that I estimate the population for the present year at 5,509,000 and the net debt at $48.31 per head, as against $50.96 per head, the rate when this government came into office.

On the question of surpluses, which is always an interesting question, I have here a statement which gives the surplus or deficit for each year from the year 1897 up to the present time. It will be remembered that, while this government was in power during 1896-7 it had to carry on the financial affairs of the country under conditions which in the main, came to it by way of inheritance from its predecessors. It was not in a position to control the expenditures wholly; in fact the estimates for that year were prepared by my predecessor, and, coming into office when there was no time to revise them, we were glad to accept them, in the main, and act upon them for that year. It will be seen that, for that year, there was a deficit, but that for every year since there has been a surplus :—

SURPLUSES—1897 TO 1903.

	Surplus.	Deficit.
1896-7		$519,981 44
1897-8	$1,722,712 33
1898-9	4,837,749 00
1899-1900	8,054,714 51
1900-1	5,648,333 29
1901-2	7,291,398 06
1902-3 (estimated)	13,350,000 00
Total for 7 years	$40,904,907 19	$519,981 44
	519,981 44
Total net surplus for 7 years	$40,384,925 75

Average, $5,769,275.10.
Average for 18 years, 1878-1896, $544,539.61.

The general condition of our country is so prosperous that, it is not necessary to quote any statistics for the purpose of showing that it is so. The figures I am about to give are not quoted for the purpose of proving prosperity which is apparent to all, but because the Budget Speech is a sort of financial library in which you can file a few documents of this character and which will be found useful and interesting for future reference. First, we have a statement of the deposits of the people in the chartered banks of the country. I give the figures for five year periods :—

DEPOSITS BY THE PEOPLE IN THE CHARTERED BANKS, JUNE 30.

Year.
1868	$ 33,317,879
1870	54,074,460
1875	61,094,860
1880	76,244,065
1885	95,030,429
1890	128,631,455
1895	182,688,227
1900	277,256,716
1901	315,775,429
1902	344,949,901
Feb. 28, 1903	366,682,122

A statement of the discount of the chartered banks is a measure of the business of the country. These figures for five year periods are as follows :—

DISCOUNTS—CHARTERED BANKS, JUNE 30.

Year.	Discounts.
1868	$ 51,966,120
1870	67,107,167
1875	136,771,679
1880	111,956,858
1885	162,847,002
1890	195,987,402
1895	224,507,301
1900	316,634,620
1901	318,240,549
1902	348,690,611
Feb. 28, 1903	382,225,338

The total trade also is one of the means whereby we measure the prosperity of the country. I have here a statement of the total exports and imports :—

TOTAL TRADE.

Year.
1868	$131,027,532
1870	148,387,829
1875	200,957,262
1880	174,401,205
1885	198,179,847
1890	218,607,390
1895	224,420,485
1900	381,517,236
1901	386,903,157
1902	423,910,441

These figures include total exports and total imports which in turn include coin and bullion.

My next statement is one showing the imports for consumption and the exports :—

STATEMENT OF MERCHANDISE IMPORTED (FOR HOME CONSUMPTION) AND EXPORTED.

Year.	Imports.	Exports.
1868	$ 67,090,159	$ 49,739,998
1870	66,902,074	62,608,814
1875	117,408,568	74,628,212
1880	69,900,542	83,336,197
1885	99,755,775	84,263,164
1890	111,682,573	91,387,295
1895	100,675,891	106,013,394
1900	172,506,878	177,776,044
1901	177,700,694	194,509,143
1902	196,480,190	209,970,864

These figures include merchandise only, (coin and bullion excluded). Equally satisfactory is a statement of our exports confined to home products.

TOTAL EXPORTS—HOME PRODUCE.

Year.
1868	$ 45,543,177
1870	56,081,192
1875	67,490,893
1880	70,096,191
1885	76,183,518
1890	82,335,514
1895	99,528,351
1900	163,510,790
1901	177,431,386
1902	196,019,763

In connection with the statement of surpluses which I have read, I think, having reference to some criticism which occasionally appears in the press, that I should offer a further observation. It ought not to be necessary to make any explanation concerning these surpluses, but sometimes we see in the public press, and even in journals from which I would expect greater intelligence and greater fairness, the statement that the surpluses which the government have been able to set forth, are unreal, because they do not cover all classes of expenditures. Now, it ought to be well understood by hon. gentleman, and it will be understood by the older members of the House, that the distinction which is observed in our public accounts between capital expenditure and expenditure chargeable to income, is not a discovery which I have made.

It is not an invention of mine. It has existed in the public accounts from the beginning, it has properly existed; and I hope it will be clearly understood that in that respect there is no change. The public accounts in this respect are kept as they always have been kept. There is a proper distinction. Sometimes it may be difficult to draw the line, but as respects the greater part of our expenditures on capital account there is a properly drawn line between capital expenditures and expenditures chargeable to income. However that may be, we have simply carried on the same method of keeping accounts that our predecessors have followed.

An hon. MEMBER. Except the bounty on iron.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. I am glad my hon. friend has reminded me of that, but I would have spoken of it in any case. If you look at the statements which appeared under the head of capital and the statements to-day, you will find that the only new item of any considerable amount is that respecting the bounty on iron. Now, the former method of dealing with that bounty was one with which we need not fear a comparison. What was the former method of keeping accounts with regard to the bounties on iron? We had the moneys deducted from the customs revenues, they were classed as a refund of moneys. Considering that not a penny went into the treasury, it would be difficult to understand how they could be properly classed as a refund. There never was any money paid into the treasury in this connection; but year after year the payment of these bounties, for some reason that I have never been able to understand, was made out of the Customs Department and stated as a deduction from revenue. I think any business man on either side of the House will acknowledge with me that that was not a proper way of keeping the accounts. You do not find anything about the bounties on iron in the public accounts, as a rule. If you looked into the Auditor General's Report, you might discover that in his analysis of the work of the Customs Department account was taken of the fact that certain moneys were paid as a refund, or something of that kind, for bounties on iron. Well, so long as the sums paid for bounties were not very large, this perhaps was not a very serious matter, though, whether the sum was large or small, it was not a sound method of bookkeeping. But when it came to our knowledge that under this bounty arrangement we were likely to pay large sums of money running up perhaps to millions of dollars a year, then it became necessary that we should treat the matter properly and put it in some other place in the public accounts, and so we began to treat it in the same way as we treat a railway subsidy. Therefore we have charged these bounties on iron and steel to what is called a special expenditure, which is practically a capital account. I think that is justified. But I want to say, Mr. Speaker, that whether that is justified or not, does not affect my argument. As regards the total of the surpluses the bounty on iron and steel is a very small item, and if you strike out of the account the money which we have paid in the shape of bounties on iron and steel, and if you charge that to some other service and deduct it from our surplus, you will still have substantially the same record as that which I present to you, a record of a series of handsome surpluses to the credit of the Liberal government.

Now, Mr. Speaker, there are persons who sometimes wonder why, in a year, in which we say that finances are very prosperous, we are still borrowing money. There are people who cannot understand how that should be necessary. But even in private enterprises there are occasions when the most prosperous business requires loans to meet immediate obligations. So it is with the nation. There are times when the inflow of revenue into the treasury is greater than the outgo of expenditure, and then we accumulate a considerable balance. But there are other times when the revenue, though still flourishing in comparison with the revenue of corresponding periods, is insufficient to meet the demands. At such times temporary loans are resorted to for short periods, and in that way we have had some temporary loans during the past year. On the 1st of January last, we had outstanding treasury bills amounting to £1,250,000 sterling. These bills were renewed in London for a term of six months at 3⅞ per cent interest. That is a somewhat higher rate than in former times we had to pay. But as every business man is aware, the conditions of the money market for some time past have been very stringent, and having regard to these conditions, the rate was a fair one.

During the last month or two our revenue has increased so rapidly that we have found ourselves able to redeem some of these treasury bills in advance of their maturity. At the time we raised the money, of course we could not have foreseen the increased revenues that have come in. But we have been able to redeem some of the treasury bills already, so that we have reduced the amount of the treasury bills outstanding to £950,000. These will mature on the 1st of July, and our expectation is that we shall be able to pay off the balance of these on the 1st of July out of our accumulating revenue.

I come now to the question of loans which are maturing. If we had only to consider the question of current expenditure we would not require to go upon the London money market for some considerable period, except for occasional temporary loans in the way I have spoken of. We have to consider, however, not only the question of our current expenditures but also the question of outstanding loans, issued many years ago, which will from this time forward begin to mature. I have a statement of those maturing soon, which I present to the House.

LOANS MATURING SOON.

Date of Maturity.	Rate of Interest.	Amount.	Sinking Fund.	Balance.
In London.	Per cent.	£	£	£
Oct. 1, 1903	5	500,000	None.	500,000
" 1, 1903	4	1,500,000	969,500	530,500
April 1, 1904	4	300,000	205,000	95,000
May 1, 1904	4	4,000,000	1,024,500	2,975,500
		6,300,000	2,199,000	4,101,000
In Canada.		$	$	$
Nov. 1, 1903	4	2,852,000	None.	2,852,000

As the House will see, one of these loans, which will mature on 1st November next, is a domestic loan, amounting to $2,852,000, which was issued in 1883 and bears interest at 4 per cent. My expectation is that we shall be able to refund this loan in Canada at a saving of one-half per cent interest. A few years ago we looked forward to more favourable terms than this. But for several years the condition of the money market has been one of considerable stringency, and the present indications are by no means favourable to cheap money at an early day. Under these circumstances I have thought it well to provide for this loan by issuing a domestic loan for a short period. The proposal is that the holders of this loan shall receive new stock, running only for ten years at 3½ per cent. I have no reason to doubt but that this will be regarded as a fair offer, and that the holders, as a rule, will be glad to renew the loan on these terms. If in any case they are not, I am satisfied that we can easily place the new stock in other quarters at the rate mentioned. I have spoken of a domestic loan which will mature in November in Canada. On the 1st of October we have two loans maturing in London, one a five per cent loan for £500,000 sterling against which there is no sinking fund, therefore, the whole amount of it will have to be provided for. The other is a four per cent loan of £1,500,000 against which we will have a sinking fund of about £1,000,000 leaving a balance of about £500,000 to be provided for. I feel hopeful that by the 1st of October we can, out of our revenues, provide for the five per cent loan of £500,000, and for such portion of the four per cent loan as may then be outstanding. But, if we should not be able to provide for the whole of it we can cover the balance by a small issue of treasury bills which will carry the transaction over into the next year, when we shall have to take into consideration other obligations arising, and at which time we hope for a more favourable state of the money market.

From this time forth, for some years, we shall receive considerable sums from a new source, money which we shall receive virtually as trustees, but which, will, for the time being, be available for our own purposes. I refer to sums which may be derived from the sale of lands by the Canadian Pacific Railway. The first mortgage upon these lands, given in 1881 to secure an issue of $25,000,000 of bonds, has been practically all paid off. The moneys hereafter realized from the sale of Canadian Pacific Railway lands become available for the payment of an issue of $15,000,000 of 3½ per cent fifty year bonds issued in 1888. The government guaranteed the interest on these bonds and the Minister of Finance became one of the trustees under the mortgage. It is provided that all moneys realized from the sale of these lands, after the payment of the first mortgage, shall be paid in to the Dominion government. The government allow 3½ per cent interest upon the money in accordance with an arrangement made by our predecessors, which is the rate which the company have to pay to the bondholders. So soon as the fund accumulated in this way is equal to the principal sum, the company shall be released from all liabilities. The government, with the money in hand to protect itself, will become liable to the bondholders for both principal and interest. We have not yet received any money under this mortgage, the transactions connected with the first mortgage having only recently been closed. But in view of the great demand for lands in the Northwest there is every probability that we shall receive a large sum from this source in the early future. It is difficult to make an estimate of the amount. Probably $2,000,000 per annum will not be an excessive estimate. As I have already pointed out, it is not a case in which the Dominion profits by the transaction. We shall have to repay ultimately to the bondholders all money which we shall so receive. But in the meantime the government will have the use of the money at the rate of 3½ per cent per annum and to the extent of sums coming into the treasury in this way we shall be relieved from the need of borrowing.

A very interesting feature in connection with the enormous development of business in Canada, and a feature which must have attracted the attention of some of my hon. friends opposite who are interested in large financial concerns, is that this great development of business has been carried on in the Dominion with a comparatively small increase of banking capital. When we look back we find that in 1895 the paid up capital of the chartered banks of Canada was $61,685,329, and we find that the increases from year to year have been as follows:

CHARTERED BANKS—PAID UP CAPITAL.

31st January,	1895	$61,685,329
"	1896	62,196,496
"	1897	61,756,813
"	1898	62,292,614
"	1899	63,284,043
"	1900	63,734,845
"	1901	66,436,767
"	1902	67,621,011
"	1903	72,856,125

It will be observed that for a long period there was practically little or no change in the volume of bank capital, but while that was the fact, trade and commerce continued to expand in a remarkable degree and the banks were able to handle all these transactions. The explanation, of course, is to be found in the fact that owing to the increased wealth of the people, the bank deposits have been greatly increased, and that in this way banks have been provided with ample funds for carrying on the increased business of the country. For a long time this worked out satisfactorily and there has been no difficulty in supplying the necessary amount of bank circulation to carry on business, but during the past year, owing to the great development in business, some of the banks began to be anxious as to whether or not they would be able to supply the necessary amount of bank circulation. The law provides that a bank is permitted to issue its own notes up to an amount equal to its paid up capital. Most of the banks have, in times past, found themselves with ample note circulation for their business. But during the past year, with the great increase in the trade of the country, there began to be a fear that the banks' resources in this respect might be insufficient. Several of the banks at all times had a safe margin to work on, but many of the others found their circulation running close up to the limit of their paid up capital. Several schemes have been suggested with a view to increasing the power of the banks to issue notes. We have not felt justified in encouraging any departure from the principle now recognized in the Bank Act, namely, that paid up capital shall be the only basis for the bank circulation, and although, at one stage, one or two of the bankers were inclined to take another view, I think there is a general agreement that this is the soundest and safest rule. A number of banks, realizing that they should have, not only a sufficient circulation for immediate requirements, but also a safe margin to meet the development of business, have taken steps to increase their capital, and, of course, with the increase of actual paid up capital there comes an increase of circulating power. In this way, it is fully expected that during the present year, even with the great development of trade which is going on, the banks will be in a position to provide amply for that part of the currency system of the Dominion which depends upon them.

While the banks of the country furnish a considerable portion of the notes for circulation, another portion of the requirements of the country is met by the issue of Dominion government notes. There has been no change in the law respecting the issue of these notes for quite a long period. Under the Act as it now stands the government are authorized to issue $20,000,000 of Dominion notes with a reserve of 25 per cent which reserve must take the form of either gold or debentures guaranteed by the imperial government, which are practically the same as gold. For all notes issued in excess of $20,000,000, the government hold dollar for dollar in gold. It will thus be seen that under this law the government are permitted to issue $15,000,000 of notes unsecured; that is to say $20,000,000 being allowed on the basis of 25 per cent reserve, the $5,000,000 of the issue was protected by a deposit of gold, and $15,000,000 were issued upon the general credit of the country. I think it will be generally admitted that if Canada at that time was justified in issuing $15,000,000 of notes on the general credit of the country, the great advance that has taken place in the revenue and wealth of the country will justify the issue of a larger sum to-day. I propose to ask parliament to amend the Currency Act by providing that instead of $20,000,000 to be issued, with a reserve of 25 per cent, the amount shall be raised to $30,000,000, the reserve still to be, of course, 25 per cent. For all issues over $30,000,000—and our circulation is already considerably above that figure—we shall continue to hold in gold dollar for dollar. The effect of the proposed change will be, that, whereas, under the present Act, there are $15,000,000 of notes unsecured and resting upon the general credit of the country, under the new proposal there may

Some other hon. MEMBERS. How does that suit you for a cheer ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. The country is prosperous ; our manufacturing industries have, on the whole, enjoyed, and are enjoying, great prosperity.

Some hon. MEMBERS. Hear, hear.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. Where there are exceptions to this rule, it must not be hastily assumed that these exceptions are due to tariff causes. There may be some cases in which that is debatable, but I think it will be found that in many cases where complaint is made, if that complaint is well founded, that the causes of difficulty are not to be found wholly in the tariff. Indeed Sir, the manufacturers themselves who have communicated with us, have rather based their claim for changes, not so much upon the present condition of affairs as upon the probability, as they think, that we shall soon have less prosperous times. I think, Sir, that most of the manufacturers to-day are suffering, not from want of orders, but for lack of sufficient hands and factory space to enable them to supply the demand.

Some hon. MEMBERS. Hear, hear.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. I am far from saying that there are not exceptions to this, but I think it is not too much to say that subject to some possible exceptions, the general condition not only of the country at large, but of the manufacturing interests of Canada in the main, is highly prosperous. We know that all classes have prospered in Canada of late years, and it is an interesting fact that manufacturers have shared in the largest degree of that prosperity, for they have held their home markets to a large extent ; they have all or nearly all been busy, and their shipments to foreign markets have been constantly increasing. Therefore, even from a manufacturers point of view, we think the situation is not so bad. There may be a necessity at some early date to make further tariff changes than those which I now propose, but if so the extent to which these changes should be made and the character of the changes may be in a considerable degree dependent upon the attitude of certain other countries towards Canada ; certain countries as to which we are not to-day in a position to say exactly what they may be disposed to do now or in the early future. I suppose it will be generally admitted that while we are anxious to improve our trade relations with the world at large, there are two countries with which we naturally have or would like to have intimate trade relations. The one, it goes without saying, is our mother country ; the other is the neighbouring republic, because they are so near to us and so closely identified with us in many things that we must desire to have close and friendly relations with them.

Mr. HENDERSON.

Now with regard to the trade relations with the mother country. We decided several years ago to grant a preference to the mother country in the markets of Canada. There has been a desire among both parties, among all classes of the people of Canada, that that preference should be reciprocal. We do not differ in that. All will admit that if that could be brought about, it would be a desirable thing for Canada, and we hope for the mother country as well. But we have had different ideas as to the best means of accomplishing this. We have been criticised by hon. gentlemen opposite because we gave a preference to the mother country without demanding something in return. We have thought that our view was the better one. We thought that under the circumstances in which we were then placed that it would not only be useless but harmful to have pressed a demand upon the British government for a return of the preference.

In this, Sir, we were not speaking our own views alone. Members of this government had the opportunity to communicate with able, experienced and influential men in the imperial parliament, and the conclusion we reached, after such communication, was that the time was not favourable for pressing a claim of that character. At the same time we quite realized that these are days in which changes rapidly occur; and in the discussion of the question in this House, we have repeatedly said that it was quite within the bounds of possibility, and even probability, that at no distant day some change might be brought about in the attitude of the British government and the British people on that subject. Hon. gentlemen opposite have frequently endeavoured to assure themselves and others that the imperial authorities were ready and willing to give us a preference. We remember how it was stated that Mr. Chamberlain had practically offered us a preference, and that we had declined to have it. We remember how it was said that the Duke of Devonshire had also practically offered us a preference, and we had refused it. All these things, however, were mere fancies. Mr. Chamberlain made no such offer, and the Duke of Devonshire, when appealed to, flatly denied the views attributed to him. It was quite evident that we had nothing to expect in that way; but a change might come, and it did come sooner than we had reason to expect—not a change, however, which took the form of any preference to the colonies. In the midst of a great war, in a time of financial strain upon the imperial treasury, which still continues, the British government adopted the policy of a tax on breadstuffs. That change on the part of the imperial government produced a new situation of which we have not failed to take advantage. It was one thing to propose, as our opponents did in 1897, that the British government should tax the food of their people for our benefit, in order to grant an exemption of Canadian goods from the taxation. It was too much to expect that the British taxpayer, in the then state of public opinion, would be willing to adopt the policy of preference. It was a very different thing, however, to propose to the British government, not that they should tax the food of their people for the sake of the colonies, but that they should take off taxation by granting a preference in favour of colonial products. We have not failed to press these views upon the imperial authorities from time to time, and in various ways. When the duties were imposed, representations were made, but without success. We resolved to carry the question into the colonial conference to be held in London in connection with the coronation; and at that conference this subject occupied a great deal of attention. It will be remembered that in a speech by Mr. Chamberlain at the beginning of the conference, he expressed the opinion that the preference granted by us, while of value as a mark of the good-will of Canada, and much to be appreciated as a matter of sentiment, was nevertheless not of much material value; and he added that if the question of granting a preference in the mother country could be entertained at all, it would have to be by the granting of some further substantial preference on the part of Canada. While we regretted that Mr. Chamberlain took that view, we felt that we should not on that account fail to press our views on the other side. This statement of Mr. Chamberlain is very interesting, however, as an evidence of his attitude on the question. For a long time it was commonly represented by our opponents in this country that Mr. Chamberlain had been making speeches avowing his readiness to grant a preference, and similar claims had been made with respect to the Duke of Devonshire. But what do we find? We find that not only was Mr. Chamberlain never disposed to grant us any preference, but he has now said that before he could consider the question of a mutual preference to be within the realm of practical policy, we in Canada would be obliged to consider whether we would not give a further preference to British goods. It is therefore perfectly clear that the impression which some hon. gentlemen opposite have had for years regarding Mr. Chamberlain's attitude on this question is an entire delusion. Perhaps in some respects it is to be regretted that the full proceedings of the conference were not made public. However, there were good reasons for the course that was pursued. It was understood from the beginning that the proceedings were to be confidential, and some of the gentlemen present, relying on that, discussed matters with the freedom of confidential negotiations. To have published all the speeches after that understanding would of course have been a breach of faith. In a conference of that character there are always arising not only national but international questions, and it would not be proper for matters of that kind to be made public unless it were so understood from the beginning. There is no room, however, for any misunderstanding as to what happened on the question of preferential trade, or as to the position taken by the Canadian government. Not only was the subject discussed again and again in the conference, but we had frequent opportunities of discussing it with the British ministers individually, and particularly with Mr. Chamberlain and Mr. Gerald Balfour, the president of the Board of Trade. We contended, as appears in the blue-book containing the proceedings of the conference, that the preference was not only of sentimental value but also of great material value to the British trader and manufacturer. While we contended that the preference already granted was of more value to Great Britain than the British officials had been disposed to admit, we told them that if the imperial government were prepared to adopt the preferential policy and give our products exemption from the duties now imposed or hereafter to be imposed on foreign goods, we would be prepared to grant some further preference, subject to certain conditions which were clearly laid down. We frankly stated that we could not undertake to give that further preference in a manner which would operate to the disadvantage of our own industries. As between the British manufacturer and the Canadian manufacturer, we thought we had gone as far in the way of reduction of duties as we could. But we pointed out that Canada consumed a large quantity of goods imported from foreign countries; and in return for the preference which we sought for Canada, we were prepared to so rearrange our tariff as to give Great Britain a further preference, not over the Canadian manufacturer, but over the foreign competitor.

Some hon. MEMBERS. Hear, hear.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. The views of the Canadian government on that question are referred to in the memorandum submitted to the conference by Mr. Gerald Balfour, president of the British Board of Trade, which appears on page 35 of the conference report, and reads as follows:

PREFERENTIAL TRADE.

Memorandum by Mr. Gerald Balfour, President British Board of Trade.

As a result of the communications which have taken place, it is understood that the representatives of the colonies hereinafter mentioned are prepared to recommend to their respective parliaments preferential treatment of British goods on the following lines:—

CANADA.

The existing preference of 33⅓ per cent, and on additional preference on lists of selected articles—

(a) by further reducing the duties in favour of the United Kingdom;

(b) by raising the duties against foreign imports ;
(c) by imposing duties on certain foreign imports now on the free list.

The rest of the memo. refers to Australia, New Zealand and the Cape, and I need not detain the House by reading it.

Now, the result of the whole discussion, so far as the record shows, is a resolution found on page thirty-six :—

The general resolution that was finally adopted as covering the principle underlying the several proposals comprised in Mr. Balfour's memorandum, was as follows :—

1. That this conference recognizes that the principle of preferential trade between the United Kingdom and His Majesty's dominions beyond the seas would stimulate and facilitate mutual commercial intercourse, and would by promoting the development of the resources and industries of the several parts, strengthen the empire.

2. That this conference recognizes that, in the present circumstances of the colonies, it is not practicable to adopt a general system of free trade as between the mother country and the British dominions beyond the seas.

3. That with a view, however, to promoting the increase of trade within the empire, it is desirable that those colonies which have not already adopted such a policy should, as far as their circumstances permit, give substantial preferential treatment to the products and manufactures of the United Kingdom.

4. That the Prime Ministers of the colonies respectfully urge on His Majesty's government the expediency of granting in the United Kingdom preferential treatment to the products and manufactures of the colonies, either by exemption from or reduction of duties now or hereafter imposed.

5. That the Prime Ministers present at the conference undertake to submit to their respective governments at the earliest opportunity the principle of the resolution, and to request them to take such measures as may be necessary to give effect to it.

It will be observed that Mr. Balfour's memo. speaks of an increased preference to be granted to Great Britain by Canada, but does not make any reference to any preference to be granted by Great Britain to Canada. That, however, means nothing, because the reciprocal character of the arrangement was well understood and so expressed in the other documents. The conclusion of the whole discussion was that this additional preference which we were debating was only to be granted to the mother country for and in consideration of the preference we had asked for the products of Canada in the markets of Great Britain. That is made abundantly clear in the memo. of the Canadian ministers, which is filed on the subject. That memo. is a little lengthy, yet I must ask the House to bear with me while I read it, because although it was published some months ago, its nature may be forgotten. As it is a statement not only of our views, but of the views which were expressed by Mr. Chamberlain on behalf of the British government, and was published with his authority, I think we shall do well to give its terms our consideration :—

MEMORANDUM OF CANADIAN MINISTERS AT COLONIAL CONFERENCE.

This subject has frequently engaged the attention of the conference. At an early stage Mr. Chamberlain suggested that the question could most conveniently be considered by the representatives of each colony placing themselves in communication with the President of the Board of Trade, Mr. Gerald Balfour, and the officials of that department. Accordingly the Canadian ministers had several protracted interviews with these gentlemen, and discussed the whole subject very fully. Opportunity was also taken to present the Canadian view to Mr. Chamberlain. Now that the conference is drawing to a close, it is desirable that the course of the discussion, and the conclusions reached by the Canadian ministers, should be outlined and placed on record.

From the beginning of the proceedings the Canadian ministers have claimed that in consideration of the substantial preference given by Canada for some years to the products of the mother country, Canadian food products should be exempted in the United Kingdom from the duties recently imposed. Representations to this effect previously made through the High Commissioner for Canada were supplemented by the ministers, both in writing and in the personal interviews with the imperial ministers.

Mr. Chamberlain, on behalf of the imperial government, was unable to agree to the proposals of the Canadian ministers. He represented that the imperial government, while highly appreciating the good feeling manifested by Canada in the granting of preferential treatment, did not think the material results to the trade of the United Kingdom were as great as the Canadian ministers claimed. He further said that the change desired by Canada would be an important departure from the established fiscal policy of the Kingdom, and that if the proposals could be entertained at all, as to which he was not prepared to commit himself, it would be necessary for Canada to offer some material tariff concessions beyond those which she had already voluntarily given.

The Canadian ministers, therefore, submitted a memorandum on the subject of the advantages already received by Great Britain from the Canadian preferential tariff, with a view to showing that these were of much value, and entitled to weight in the consideration of the whole subject.

While urging that the benefits of the preference were such as to entitle Canada to the desired exemption from the duties on food products in the United Kingdom, the Canadian ministers stated that within certain limitations they were prepared to consider the request of Mr. Chamberlain for further concessions in return for the desired preference in the markets of the United Kingdom. While it was not deemed necessary to enter into questions as to the wisdom or unwisdom of the policy adopted by all governments in Canada, of raising the revenues chiefly from customs duties, the Canadian ministers pointed out that under that policy large industries had grown up which had to be considered in connection with proposed tariff changes. Large reduction of duties had been made in recent years, especially on British imports. It was feared that in some lines of importance further reductions might create a disturbance of trade which would not be conducive to the welfare of the country. But the Canadian ministers pointed out that the Canadian tariff was by no means prohibitive, that large quantities of goods were imported, and that a great proportion of these came from foreign countries. In any lines in which it appeared that the goods would be manufactured in Great Britain it might be possible to so readjust some duties as to give an additional advantage to the British manufacturer, and thus turn over to him a volume of trade which at present is held by the manufacturers of foreign countries.

The Canadian ministers stated if they could be assured that the imperial government would accept the principle of preferntial trade generally, and particularly grant to the food products of Canada in the United Kingdom exemption from duties now levied, or hereinafter imposed, they, the Canadian ministers, would be prepared to go further into the subject, and endeavour to give to the British manufacturer some increased advantage over his foreign competitors in the markets of Canada.

Meanwhile the Canadian ministers determined to present to the conference a resolution affirming the principle of preferential trade, and the desirability of its adoption by the colonies generally, and also expressing the opinion of the Prime Ministers of the colonies that His Majesty's government should reciprocate by granting preferential terms to the products of the colonies, in the markets of the mother country. The Canadian ministers desired to have it understood that they took this course with the strong hope and expectation that the principle of preferential trade would be more widely accepted by the colonies, and that the mother country would at an early day apply the same principle by exempting the products of the colonies from customs duties. If, after using every effort to bring about such a readjustment of the fiscal policy of the empire, the Canadian government should find that the principle of preferential trade is not acceptable to the colonies generally, or the mother country, then Canada should be free to take such action as might be deemed necessary in the presence of such conditions.

London, August 11, 1302.

Surprise has been expressed in some quarters—I have heard it expressed, I think, in this House—that the colonial conference did not produce some more definite result. I think that that is the result of some misapprehension. The colonial conference was not a legislative body; it was not what could be called an executive body; it was at the best merely an advisory body. All it could do was to consider the various subjects brought before it, and to express the conclusions which might be reached by the gentlemen comprising it, leaving to all the governments concerned the duty of taking up the matter later on if it should be deemed necessary. That is exactly the position in which this matter of preferential trade stands to-day. The end is not yet. We are not prepared to say at this moment what may be the answer of the British government with regard to the view we have placed before it.

We are aware, Sir, that Mr. Chamberlain, the able Colonial Secretary, whose interest and support we would naturally desire and hope to obtain, has been for some months absent in South Africa, where he has rendered very valuable service to the empire. While we are glad that he was there to render that service in the pacification of South Africa, his absence has, perhaps, to some extent, been a loss to us, inasmuch as, had he been in London during these six months, we might have had his valuable help in the consideration of this matter. The budget speech of the new Chancellor of the Exchequer, Mr. Ritchie, has not yet been delivered. We are so close to it, that it may be too much to expect that this subject would be dealt with in it. But, however that may be, this much at least may be said—that, as we were invited by Mr. Chamberlain to express our views on this subject, as he took an interest in the matter, and as there are others in the imperial parliament who take an interest in it, some of whom are prepared to express themselves more freely than Mr. Chamberlain himself was prepared to do, the least that the British authorities can expect is that we shall allow a reasonable time to elapse before anything further is done. But if, after further consideration, they come to the conclusion that our request is not a reasonable one, if, owing to their adherence to certain views they cannot grant us the preference, we shall be free to take our own course. Whether, in such a case it would be wise, in the interests of Canada, to modify or change the preferential tariff, would be a question to be considered. But, putting aside other considerations, if the British government and people do not show any appreciation of the value of the preference, then, so far as the British government and people are concerned, they cannot complain if we see fit to modify or change that preferential tariff. Of course, Sir, there would still remain the more important consideration, how far, if at all, that tariff could be changed with due regard to the interest of the masses of the Canadian people.

Next to Great Britain, the country with which, in the past, we have been accustomed to say we desire to deal, is the United States. I suppose it is not too much to say that, for some years, our friends across the border have not been too well disposed towards the admission of Canadian products into their markets. While from one point of view, we have been disposed to regret their attitude, there are other considerations which would dispose us to modify very much any expressions of dissatisfaction. When the people of Canada discovered, after frequent efforts, and after ample time given for consideration, that there was a strong hostility on the part of the United States authorities to granting liberal trade arrangements, they ceased to grumble about the matter but, like sensible people, made up their minds to seek for markets elsewhere. And they sought and found them. I think that the proposition that these peoples, living side by side, should enjoy a greater freedom of reciprocal trade, is as sound to-day as it ever was. But it is the simple truth to say that we no longer feel the need of reciprocity as keenly as we once did. There will be no disposition, I am sure, on our part to clamour for reciprocity with the United States. But there can be no doubt that while, in the past, the tendency of the Americans generally have been adverse to reciprocity, there have always been in the United States a number of very able and thoughtful men who have been well disposed toward better trade relations. I think that that class of people is now increasing and that there is a manifest growth of public opinion in favour of better trade relations between the United States and Canada. That growth of opinion in favour of reciprocity has been manifested in several ways, one of them being an approach on the part of an authorized representative of the United States government to the government of Canada, that the Joint High Commission, which met several years ago, first at Quebec and afterwards at Washington, shall be again convened. The fact that such an approach has been made is well known, of course, for it has been announced in the public press. I thought that, perhaps, the House would desire to know exactly how the matter stands, and so I asked the Prime Minister to give me the correspondence which, if the House does not object to receiving it in this manner, I will read. The first letter from Senator Fairbanks to the Prime Minister is as follows :

United States Senate,
Washington, D.C., February 13, 1903.

My dear Sir Wilfrid,—The matter between the boundary between Alaska and Canada having been transferred to a special tribunal by our respective governments, I presume that no obstacle remains to the reassembling of the Joint High Commission. I write, therefore, to inquire when it will be agreeable to you to have it reconvene. Any date after the middle of next month will suit the convenience of the commissioners of the United States.

The progress we had made in the consideration of the subjects of the protocol at the date of our adjournment gives warrant for the hope that we can determine many if not all of them.

I have the honour to be,
My dear Sir Wilfrid,
Very sincerely yours,
(Sgd.) CHARLES W. FAIRBANKS.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier,
Ottawa.

To this the Prime Minister replied :

Ottawa, 17th February, 1903.

My dear Senator,—I duly appreciate your thoughtfulness, and I hasten to give you my reply. It is a great satisfaction that, at last, the Alaska boundary is in a fair way to be honourably settled. This makes the course clear for the settlement of the other questions with which the High Commissioner had been entrusted. I am sorry to say that, as far as we are concerned on this side of the line, it would not be possible to reassemble the commission before the end of next summer. The session of congress will close on the 4th of March, but our own session will not commence before the 12th of the same month, and it is expected to last at least four months, and as three members of the commission on the Canadian side are also members of our parliament, it is a fatal objection to the early summoning of it.

Moreover, I think it would be unadvisable to have the commission to meet officially, unless we are pretty sure in advance of being able to come to some conclusion on some important points. If you will permit me a suggestion ; as soon as our parliament has been prorogued, I will take an opportunity of asking you for a private interview, where we could survey the ground again and fix a date for the commission to meet again.

Believe me, my dear Senator,
Yours very sincerely,
(Sgd.) WILFRID LAURIER.

The Hon. Senator Fairbanks,
Washington, D.C.

The next communication from Senator Fairbanks was as follows :

Washington, D.C., March 4, 1903.

My dear Sir Wilfrid,—I observe that the next session of your parliament is near at hand and that it will not be prorogued early enough to enable us to reconvene the Joint High Commission before the close of the summer.

It is quite well enough that we should arrange for a private interview, after your parliament is prorogued, and, as you suggest, so that we may consider the work before us and agree upon a date for reassembling.

The Senate is called to meet in extra session to-morrow. When it adjourns I shall return to Indianapolis, to remain indefinitely.

I have the honour to remain,
My dear Sir Wilfrid,
Very respectfully yours,
(Sgd.) CHARLES W. FAIRBANKS.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier,
Ottawa.

As the correspondence indicates, we are not in a position to form any decided opinion as to what may be the outcome of the proposed negotiations. The letter of the Prime Minister to Mr. Fairbanks points out that it is hardly worth while to summon the High Commission if we are to meet with the same difficulties as before; and I am sure I am right in interpreting the Prime Minister's letter to mean that, unless a preliminary discussion gives us some reasonable hope that the outcome of another meeting will be fairly satisfactory, there will be no desire on the part of this government to have the High Commission resume its sittings. But, Sir, while we should assume a dignified and proper attitude, while we could not again approach our American friends with a request for reciprocity, yet, if they are disposed, in the light of recent events, to take a more liberal view of the trade relations between the two countries, and manifest a desire to have the High Commission reconvene for the purpose of trying, in good faith, to bring about a better state of affairs in this respect, it is due to them as well as to our own self-respect that we should meet them in a fair and generous spirit, and join in any reasonable effort to bring about such readjustment of the relations between Canada and the United States as will be honourable to both countries and advantageous to the interests of the people. While not too confident as to the results which may flow, either from our application to the imperial government with regard to preferential trade, or from the possible negotiations with the United States in respect to reciprocity, I think it is not too much to say that in both these matters there is enough to require us to stay our hands and to see what will be done as respects these two important matters before we enter upon any extensive change in our tariff.

Throughout this whole tariff question we have endeavoured to avoid extremes. The policy of the government on the tariff has been a policy of moderation and stability. There are extreme views held on questions of this character. There are extreme protectionist views, there are those who seem to insist that we should make things at home, and who do not always stop to consider what the cost will be. Sometimes, if you endeavour to ascertain from the gentlemen who advocate these views what are the duties which they wish us to impose in order that we may make these things at home, we discover that they are not very frank; sometimes they are only willing to give us their views on that matter in confidence, and not always then. I think, Sir, I may say that while there is a widespread, a universal sympathy for home industries, while every man in this Dominion ought to be proud of our home industries and desirous of giving a preference to our home manufactured goods, still there is in all these matters a question of cost; and when the manufacturers come to us, as they sometimes do, and desire to have duties which will go up as high as 50 per cent, 60 per cent, and even 70 per cent, on the cost of the goods, then I say there will be many in this country to question whether or not we can afford to carry protection as far as that. There are extremes of that kind to be avoided. Then there are extremes on the other side. There are people who, relying upon the sound principles of free trade, sound enough in their proper place, are disposed to carry them to a point which takes no account of the conditions. They seem to adopt a theory, and they say: You must carry out that theory regardless of what may be done elsewhere: Fix your own tariff policy, and never mind what is done elsewhere. Well, Sir, I am sure we cannot go as far as that. Commercial questions are every day occupying more attention in the field of public affairs. There is great rivalry among the nations; nay, there is commercial war, and in a contest of that character it is not enough to have a good old theory; you must understand the methods whereby your opponent plays the game, so that you may be able, if necessary, to modify your views.

Some hon. MEMBERS. Hear, hear.

Mr. MACLEAN. You are coming to it.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. I am delighted to have my views endorsed by my hon. friends opposite. It is not only necessary that we should take account of the way our opponent plays the game, but once in a while it may even be necessary, in exceptional circumstances, to meet him with his own tactics. If that doctrine meets with the approval of my hon. friends opposite I am not disposed to complain. In a country of such vast extent as ours, a country of great territory, it is inevitable that there shall be wide differences of opinion on questions of this character. There will be conflicts of opinion, and there will be conflicts of interests. There will be the extreme view on the one side, and the extreme view on the other. We hold that it is the duty of the government not to yield to these extreme views on either side, but to endeavour to reconcile these views, in the hope that we may bring about a common action which the whole country can accept—a compromise, if you care to call it such. We appeal to the people of the different sections, each one to yield up something in order that we may reach a ground upon which all can act in harmony.

Our manufacturing friends have expressed a desire that the tariff should be kept out of politics. Sir, how are you going to keep the tariff out of politics if some of our manufacturing friends insist upon duties so high that they are sure to antagonize great masses of the people? Especially should we consider these things when we observe what is happening in our great west. The seed that has been sown in the last few years is bearing fruit. When we see immigrants flowing into that country from all parts of the world, we cannot fail to observe the signs of the times. The power of control is passing from the east to the west. Great as is the prosperity of eastern and central Canada, greater still is the prosperity of the vast region lying west of Lake Superior. Ontario and the maritime provinces are losing members, the west is gaining members. That great population in the west is going to be a greater power in the future than it is at present. These western people, producing articles that depend for their value on the open markets of the world, would chafe under a system of high protective duties, and would unquestionably organize against it. Is it not better to meet these people in a spirit of compromise, and ask them to join us in a moderate tariff, rather than, by the adoption of a high tariff policy, array them against the manufacturing interests of the east? I say it would be in the interests of the manufacturers themselves to take account of these things. The best way you can help the manufacturers of Canada is to fill up the prairie regions of Manitoba and the Northwest with a prosperous and contented people, who will be consumers of the manufactured goods of the east. But if, through the adoption of an extreme policy of protection which they would regard as burdensome to themselves, you were to undertake to impose rates of duties so excessive as to challenge the hostility of these people, then I say there will be an antagonism between the east and the west, and the result will be unfavourable to the upbuilding of Canada. Let us rather hold out the hand of encouragement to these people who come in and open up new homes in that land, let us adopt a policy under which the expenses of living will not be excessive, under which, in fact, living shall be as cheap as possible. As I have said, there have been extreme views on both sides, and we have tried to avoid them. We have endeavoured to give the country a tariff of stability, a tariff which, in so far as a tariff has any relation to prosperity, has been an important factor in the development of Canada the last few years. The efforts we have made to compromise conflicting interests, the willingness we have manifested to meet opposing interests and endeavour to reconcile them, affords the best guarantee that, in any future changes which may have to be made, the question will be approached in the same spirit and, let us hope, with the same happy results.

I suppose, Sir, that next to Great Britain and the United States, the countries in which we naturally feel the most interest, both in trade matters and in other respects, are France and Germany. With regard to France, we have a treaty existing for a number of years which covers, unfortunately, only a small list of articles, and which is not quite satisfactory to us in its terms; we think it is perhaps a little one-sided. However, if it has not been very successful in the development of business, that treaty has done something, and we hope it will prepare the way for better things. During the past year, when several ministers of the Crown were in Europe, we availed ourselves of the opportunity of going into this question of trade with France, and with the approval of His Majesty's government, we entered into negotiations with the French government at the Foreign Office in Paris. I am glad to be able to say, though I am sure it is not necessary to say it, that the French authorities met us with every possible courtesy and consideration, and manifested a very warm desire to extend their trade relations with Canada. Unfortunately the time would not permit us to follow up the negotiations to a conclusion; but I feel very hopeful, from the encouragement that we then received, that at no distant date we shall be able to extend very considerably the scope of our present commercial treaty with France.

I come now to Germany. Prior to July 31, 1898, we had a treaty with Germany, or to be more exact, we were participating in a treaty between Great Britain and Germany under which we, as well as the mother country, received the benefit of what is called the favoured nation treatment. That was the condition of affairs for many years. But that treaty, while satisfactory as far as favoured nation treatment was concerned, contained one clause that was very obnoxious to the people, not only of Canada but of the colonies generally. That treaty contained a clause that the duties imposed upon goods coming from Germany should not be higher, not only in Canada but throughout the empire, should not be higher in any case than the duties imposed on goods coming from Great Britain. Favoured nation treatment deals with the giving to one nation of as favourable treatment as you give to any other nation. This treaty went beyond that. It required that we should give Germany not only favoured nation treatment but the same treatment we were giving the mother country. This clause in the old treaty was a very objectionable one and was frequently the subject of comment and protest on the part of the colonies. But, all our protests were unavailing. However, in 1897 Canada rather forced the issue by asserting in her tariff of that year her right to grant a preference to the goods of the mother country over the goods of any foreign nation. That right was questioned and after a legal argument that right was denied. It was held that we were bound by the terms of the treaty, that we must give to the products of Germany the same tretatment that we gave to the products of the mother country, and it followed that if we gave it to Germany then the so called favoured nation treaties with other countries came in and we had to give it to the other countries as well; so that practically the preference to the mother country was for the moment cancelled. But, while the imperial government felt bound to take that view, they immediately realized that that was a condition of affairs that should not continue and they gave notice that after the 31st of July, 1898, the treaty would cease and determine, and it did. Then, a new question arose. Shortly before the expiry of the treaty negotiations were opened by the imperial government for a new treaty. It was explained that the German government were not prepared to make a permanent treaty with any country at that time, but that they were making provisional treaties to tide over a few years, and they made a provisional treaty with Great Britain whereby Great Britain was to continue to have the benefits of favoured nation treatment, but they specifically excluded Canada from the benefits of that treaty.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). Great Britain and the colonies.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. Yes, they extended it to Great Britain and the colonies generally but they particularly excluded Canada. So soon as that became known we entered a protest against it. Communications passed between our government and the High Commissioner in London. The treaty did not expire until the end of the month of July, 1898, and on the 11th of July, 1898, shortly before the treaty actually expired, Lord Strathcona addressed a letter to the Under Secretary of State for the Colonies. We shall lay on the Table of the House all the correspondence on the subject, but for the purpose of my speech I will read one or two letters which will put the House in possession of the essential facts.

RELATIONS WITH GERMANY—LORD STRATHCONA'S LETTER.

17 Victoria Street,
London, 11th July, 1898.

Sir,—I beg to acknowledge Mr. Cox's letter of the 5th instant with a copy of the note from the German ambassador to the Marquess of Salisbury, communicating the decision of the Bundesrath on the question of provisional commercial relations between the German empire and Great Britain and the colonies, on the expiry of the present treaty.

The Dominion government, I am advised, have observed with much regret that Canada is to be excluded from the grant of the most favoured nation treatment which is to be extended by Germany after the 31st instant to imports from the United Kingdom, the British colonies and the foreign possessions of the empire.

It is true that the Dominion is granting to the United Kingdom and to certain British possessions a preferential tariff after the 31st instant, but that is a matter of purely domestic policy as distinct from foreign policy. And in this connection I may state that Canada proposes to extend to Germany the same privileges that are accorded to all other foreign powers. It will be gratifying to the Dominion government if it is possible to continue this policy so far as Germany is concerned. And all that Canada asks in return is the same treatment that is being extended to Germany. No suggestion has ever been put forward that the exports from the Dominion should be placed in Germany on the same footing as goods exchanged between the different states that form the German empire.

There is one other point I may mention. It is that though in the French, Spanish and Portuguese colonies preferential rates of duty are conceded to imports from the metropolitan countries, I believe I am correct in stating that imports into Germany from these colonies are not refused most favoured nation treatment.

I have been requested by the government of Canada to ask Her Majesty's government to represent the matter to the German government, and with all respect, I venture to express the hope that the German government will find it possible to reconsider its decision and thus prevent a disturbance of the commercial relations between Germany and Canada which must otherwise result to the disadvantage of both countries.

I am Sir,
Your obedient servant,
(Sgd.) STRATHCONA.

The Under Secretary of State for the Colonies,
Colonial Office.
Downing Street, S.W.

We have been criticised in this House for not having adopted retaliatory legislation towards Germany. I admit that there was very much in the circumstances to tempt parliament to take such a course. However, the view which we took was that in matters of an international character we should not adopt any hasty or ill advised legislation, but that we should endeavour by patient representations to impress our views on the German government, in the hope that a better understanding would be brought about, and so, from the beginning, as shown by Lord Strathcona's letters under instructions from the government, we made these representations. Unfortunately, all our efforts in this direction have proved unsuccessful. Representations were made through the diplomatic channels of the British government, but without sucess. In the fall of the year 1901, and particularly in November, we concluded that as the usual form of diplomatic negotiations through the imperial authorities had not proved successful, we would avail ourselves of opportunities to discuss the subject with the gentleman who holds the very honourable position of Imperial German Consul in Montreal, Mr. Bopp. He was good enough to meet us in a friendly spirit and gave us the use of his official channel of communication to express our views. Of course, representing the German government, in our conversations with him, he was by no means ready to accept our views, but we thought that we should press the matter upon the German government through him, as well as through the more official channels of the colonial office. Thereupon, in the month of November, 1901, after a conference held by the right hon. leader of the government (Rt. Hon. Sir Wilfrid Laurier) the hon. Minister of Customs (Hon. Mr. Paterson) and myself with Mr. Bopp we prepared the following memorandum :—

RELATIONS WITH GERMANY—MR. FIELDING'S MEMORANDUM FOR THE GERMAN CONSUL AT MONTREAL.

The undersigned Minister of Finance, having in conjunction with the Right Honourable the Prime Minister and the Honourable the Minister of Customs, had an interview at Ottawa with Herr Franz Bopp, His Imperial German Majesty's Consul at Montreal, on the subject of the trade relations between the German empire and the Dominion of Canada, submits for the consideration of council the following observations thereon.

Prior to 31st July, 1898, Canada, as a portion of the British empire, received the most favourable tariff treatment in Germany, under the terms of the treaty which had long existed between that country and Great Britain. On the date named, that treaty, having been denounced by the British government, ceased to have effect. Provisional agreements have since been entered into from time to time between Great Britain and Germany. Canada, however, has been excluded from the benefit of such agreements. The products of Canada are no longer admitted into Germany on the favoured terms known in the German tariff as 'conventional duties,' but are specially excluded therefrom and made subject to the higher duties of the general tariff. The reason assigned by the German government for this discrimination against Canada is the enactment by the Dominion of legislation granting preferential tariff rates to the products of Great Britain. The undersigned desires to point out that the policy of the Canadian government was not designed to give any foreign nation more favoured treatment than was to be allowed to Germany. The Canadian policy has been confined to a readjustment of the commercial relations of the Dominion with the British empire of which it is a part, a domestic affair which could hardly be open to reasonable objection by any foreign government. It would, therefore, seem that the action of Canada afforded no just ground for complaint by Germany. The undersigned is of opinion that there has been some misconception of the Canadian policy in this respect, and hopes that upon further consideration the German government will see that Canada, in taking the step referred to, did not forfeit her claim to the advantages accorded by Germany to the most favoured nations.

Apart, however, from the purpose of the Canadian policy in question, the undersigned invites attention to the fact that the trade between the two countries, which was largely in favour of Germany under the treaty, has continued to be equally favourable since the treaty ceased to exist. Canada was and still is a large purchaser of German goods, while Germany was and still is but a small purchaser of the products of Canada. The following statistics will clearly show how largely the balance of trade is in favour of Germany :

IMPORTS FROM GERMANY INTO CANADA FOR HOME CONSUMPTION FOR THE FISCAL YEARS ENDING JUNE 30.

1896	$5,931,459
1897	6,493,368
1898	5,584,014
1899	7,393,456
1900	8,383,498
1901	7,021,405

These imports it is believed have been substantially all of German origin.

TOTAL EXPORTS OF CANADA TO GERMANY DURING THE FISCAL YEARS ENDING JUNE 30.

1896	$ 757,531
1897	1,045,432
1898	1,837,448
1899	2,219,569
1900	1,715,903
1901	2,141,552

A portion of these exports was not Canadian but merely passed through Canada in transit. The following statement shows more accurately to what extent Germany is a buyer of Canadian goods :—

EXPORTS OF THE PRODUCTS OF CANADA TO GERMANY DURING THE FISCAL YEARS ENDING JUNE 30.

1896	$ 606,919
1897	764,589
1898	1,419,096
1899	1,310,373
1900	1,128,163
1901	1,374,616

In view of this evidence that the trade between the two countries continues to be very largely in favour of Germany, the purchases from that country being more than five times greater than Germany's purchases from Canada, the undersigned thinks that the German government may be fairly asked to give the products of the Dominion the most favoured treatment in the German markets.

The fact that Canada, while so largely a purchaser of the goods of Germany, is treated unfavourably by the tariff laws of that country, is regarded by many in the Dominion as evidence of unfriendliness and has led to demands for retaliatory tariff legislation. The Canadian government have not yielded to such demands, deeming it better to place the facts before the German government in the hope that the present discrimination against the products of Canada may be removed.

The Canadian government would at a convenient moment be prepared to consider the general question of trade relations between Germany and the Dominion. The undersigned understands, however, that it is not the policy of the German government at present to make any commercial treaties extending beyond the year 1903, it being desired that at that time all commercial arrangements with foreign nations shall be subject to revision. It would therefore be inexpedient for the Canadian government to enter into negotiations at this moment with a view to a general treaty with Germany. Negotiations of that character necessarily occupy considerable time and it is probable that before any arrangement satisfactory to both countries could be reached the period for which the German government are disposed to agree would almost have expired.

The undersigned therefore submits that, reserving for further consideration the question of a treaty to take effect after the year 1903, it is desirable that a friendly temporary arrangement be made with Germany. In view of the figures already presented, showing how largely the balance of trade is in favour of Germany, it would not be unreasonable to ask the German government to take that important fact into consideration and extend to Canada the tariff advantages from which the Dominion is at present excluded.

The only matters in which the products of Germany are at any disadvantage in the Canadian markets as compared with the products of other foreign countries are those which arise out of the arrangements made between France and Canada by the commercial treaty of 1894. The advantages of that treaty were extended to Germany and were only withdrawn after the adoption by the German government of the adverse policy which is the subject of this memorandum. In the event of Germany agreeing to allow favoured nation treatment to the products of Canada the benefits which are granted to France under the treaty of 1894, should, of course, be extended to Germany, thus placing German goods in every respect on equal terms with the goods of other foreign countries.

The making of a formal treaty would require the appointment of plenipotentiaries by His Majesty the Emperor of Germany and His Majesty the King of Great Britain on behalf of Canada. But while recognizing this fact, the undersigned is of opinion that a friendly exchange of views between members of the Canadian government and Herr Bopp, representing the government of Germany, may be very useful in bringing about a better understanding, and therefore it is recommended that a copy of this memorandum be furnished confidentially to Herr Bopp. If Herr Bopp should be able to intimate at an early date that the suggestions herein made are received with favour steps could then be taken to have the matter dealt with more formally through the proper treaty-making channels.

(Sd.) W. S. FIELDING,
Minister of Finance.

Department of Finance,
Ottawa, November 18, 1901.

The figures in this memorandum are brought down to the end of the fiscal year ending 30th June, 1901. The figures for the following year sustain the position taken as to the large balance of trade favourable to Germany. In that year, 1902, our imports from Germany for home consumption were $10,823,169, while our exports to Germany of the produce of Canada were only $1,298,654. Sir, I regret to have to say that unfortunately all these efforts to bring about a better understanding with Germany have failed. We have patiently, as it will be acknowledged, for the long period of five years endeavoured to bring about such an understanding—a longer period than some hon. gentlemen opposite were willing to wait, for they criticised us, and perhaps with reason, because we did not make some hostile movement in previous years. However, Sir, we do not think that we can afford to let the matter stand in its present position any longer.

Some hon. MEMBERS. Hear, hear.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. After these five years of careful, patient negotiation, we think it is our duty to place all the facts before the parliament of Canada and to take such steps as will assert the right of the people of Canada to make arrangements, either as respects their trade or any other matters, with the mother country or any part of the British empire, without admitting the right of any foreign nation to interfere in the matter in any shape or form.

Some hon. MEMBERS. Hear, hear.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. Our German friends have given us some idea of how we may deal with a matter of that sort. We have not any legislation in our tariff at present which would enable us to deal with such an exceptional condition. Our German friends have shown us, however, how the thing may be done if we care to follow them. I have in my hands an extract from the new German tariff. This is the tariff law which was recently passed but which I think is not in operation at the present time. It is to be brought into operation by order later on. But it is the latest German tariff law. It says:

Dutiable goods proceeding from states that treat German ships or products less favourably than those of other nations may without prejudice to the tariff duties, be burdened with a surtax ranging up to 100 per cent of the tariff duty imposed on such goods, or even with a surtax equivalent to the total value of the goods themselves. Goods free of duty in virtue of the tariff may under the same conditions be taxed with a duty not exceeding 50 per cent ad valorem.

Germany would hardly be able to complain if we should copy that clause into our tariff.

Some hon. MEMBERS. Hear, hear. Put it there.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. But still with that policy of moderation which has always to be observed——

Some hon. MEMBERS. Hear, hear.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. We may learn a useful lesson from foreign countries without going too far in the matter. We do not propose to interfere, as the German tariff proposes to do, with free imports. In their proposal and the power they take in their tariff, they can impose a duty on free goods; goods which would otherwise be free but which in this particular case would be dutiable. We do not propose to do that. But we do propose that as respects the dutiable goods we shall insert in our tariff a clause to the effect that when any foreign country treats the imports from Canada on less favourable terms than the imports from other countries; then in such a case there may be imposed on the goods of such foreign country, a surtax over and above the duties expressed in schedule A of our tariff, which is commonly known as the general tariff, such surtax to be one-third of the duty so expressed in schedule A of the general tariff. This clause the House will observe is general in its terms and may be applied at any time to any foreign country which treats Canadian products unfavourably. But we propose to apply it immediately to the case of Germany and it will take effect as respects all German goods in all the customs-houses of Canada to-morrow morning——

Some hon. MEMBERS. Hear, hear.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE—Subject, however, to this reasonable qualification that it shall not apply to any goods which have been actually purchased by any corporation, firm or person in Canada prior to this moment for immediate transportation to Canada. With that qualification, at every custom-house in Canada to-morrow the surtax will be imposed on German goods. One effect of this I suppose will naturally be to diminish our imports from Germany and to lead our importers to send their orders to countries which are more disposed to buy from us, and I suppose one effect will be to give a further encouragement to the trade with the British West Indies. If that should happen that also would be of some advantage.

There are two or three other tariff matters to which I wish to invite the attention of the House. While we have desired to meddle as little as possible with the tariff schedules, there are a few items which stand in peculiar circumstances. For the past year the manufacture of rails has been carried on to some extent in connection with the great enterprises at Sault Ste Marie. The government, recognizing that industry as one deserving of encouragement, gave the company a large order for rails, which it was only able in part to fill. We have not been unwilling to view with favour a proposal to extend to this manufacture the same degree of tariff encouragement which is enjoyed by most of our industries. But we have hesitated to do that in this case, because we were not satisfied that the mill at Sault Ste. Marie was in a position to supply either the quantity or the quality of rails required by the Canadian railways. It has seemed to us that the imposition of a duty under such conditions would not serve its purpose. We have decided that while we should not be justified in imposing a duty now, we may reasonably ask the House to agree to a duty, to take effect when there are rail mills, either at Sault Ste. Marie or elsewhere, in a position to turn out rails of proper quality and in reasonable quantity. We, therefore, ask that power be given to the Governor in Council to impose by Order in Council a duty of $7 per ton on steel rails, provided, however, that such order shall not be passed until the government are satisfied that there are rail mills in Canada making the best quality of rails, and in a sufficient quantity to meet the reasonable demands of the market. This duty, when imposed, will, of course, be subject to the British preference as usual.

Another industry on whose behalf urgent representations have been made to us, is the lead industry of British Columbia. We find, however, that the duties which the people interested in that industry desired to see imposed would necessitate a readjustment of other duties, involving considerable increases which we are not prepared to entertain. Therefore, so far as tariff changes are concerned, we find ourselves unable to agree to the proposals. Nevertheless, we appreciate the importance of the lead industry and realize the desirability of encouraging it, and we are willing to consider whether the situation may be met by some readjustment of the law respecting bounties on lead. Further than this we are unable to go at present.

Another industry which occupies a peculiar position is that of binder twine. In 1897 we placed binder twine on the free list. It was said by many people that that was the death blow of the binder twine industry. Strange to say, however, there are more binder twine factories in Canada to-day without a duty, than there were with a duty—another instance showing that theories and facts do not always come together.

Mr. MACLEAN. We have seen a lot of those theories to-day.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. I am looking at my hon. friend. I see the whole World when I look at him.

Mr. MACLEAN. It is not a bad looking world either.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. Oh, the world looks very pleasant. With a good government and a good tariff, it is not such a bad world. With respect to the binder twine industry, up to a certain point it seemed to flourish on a free trade basis ; but a peculiar position has arisen owing to the legislation of the American government with respect to the Philippine Islands. That government has imposed an export duty of three-eighths of a cent per pound on manilla exported to all countries, with the proviso that where the manilla goes to the United States and is used in manufactures, the manufacturer shall be allowed a rebate equalling the amount of the export duty. This practically amounts to a bounty to the American manufacturer to the extent of that duty. In the case of the binder twine manufacturer in Canada, this works a particular hardship. While he has no advantage whatever in our tariff, his American competitor, besides being aided by this bounty, has free access to our market. This is a condition of affairs which we admit calls for some action ; and though we are not dealing with it in the tariff resolutions, the government will introduce, before the session closes, some legislation whereby the binder twine manufacturers of Canada will be compensated for the disadvantage under which they suffer as respects the export duty on manilla imposed by the American government.

There is an item in the tariff which imposes a duty upon foreign-built ships when entered for registration in Canada. We found that some persons evaded the provisions of that law by taking foreign-built ships to Newfoundland, registering them as British ships, and then bringing them as such into Canada. To prevent this evasion, we provided by legislation last session for the imposition of a license fee upon all foreign-built ships engaging in our coasting trade. That Bill did not at once become law, but was reserved for the consideration of the imperial government. It has since been confirmed by His Majesty's government, and is now in force. We did not repeal the duty on ships last session, so that as the matter stands at present we have both the duty and the license fee, which, of course, was not the intention of parliament. We therefore propose to repeal the tariff item which imposes the duty, and leave the matter to be regulated by the license fee.

We have for some time past granted exemption of duty on machinery imported for the manufacture of beet-root sugar. That exemption expired on the 1st of April. We propose to renew it for another year up to the 1st of July, 1904.

With a view of encouraging alluvial gold mining in the Yukon district, we propose to ask the House to place on the free list until the 30th of June, 1904, machinery and appliances of a kind not made in Canada for exclusive use in alluvial gold mining.

I think I have now stated all the changes to be made in the tariff.

Mr. MACLEAN. Woollens.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. There is one other change which is not included in my resolutions, but which will come later. There is a provision in the Customs Act that we may admit free of duty certain articles for the use of manufacturers. I suppose the principle should hold that the greater includes the less; and if we could take the duty off altogether, it would seem to be a sensible inference that we could take off part of it. However, the Act is not so interpreted. If we want to give the manufacturer absolute freedom of duty, we can do it; but if we think that this is too much and want to give him something less it is held that under the present Act we have not power to do it. There are some curious things in connection with the administration of our tariff laws. There are cases in which it is found that the raw materials which have to be imported from a foreign country are charged a higher duty than the manufactured article made from such materials which comes in from Great Britain under the preferential tariff. With the view of meeting such a case, we propose to amend the Customs Act so that we shall not only have the power in such a case to abolish the duty, but to reduce it.

There is another matter, perhaps somewhat outside the line of the budget, but nevertheless of much importance, as to which I desire to make a short statement.

The Dominion has spent a vast sum of money in the construction of canals and in the improvement of our waterway from the great lakes to the ocean, by way of the St. Lawrence river. Some years ago, these canals had but little depth of water. It was deemed wise to enlarge and deepen them, at a very heavy cost to the Canadian treasury. The canal system is now about complete, and we are looking to it, as well as to our railways, to carry the great volume of traffic which must pass between the western and eastern portions of Canada. Those who are most closely associated with the operation of the waterways are naturally anxious that every possible obstacle may be removed and every reasonable encouragement given for the transportation of our products through these channels to Montreal and other ocean ports. A large deputation of gentlemen interested in the traffic recently waited upon the government and urged that, with a view to giving greater encouragement to the business, canal tolls should be abolished, and the inland waters made as free to ships as the ocean is. The government have given the subject very careful consideration. There is room for some doubt whether the tolls that are charged are large enough to be a serious obstacle to the traffic.

But while these doubts exist, we do not feel that they are such as should prevent us giving the proposal a trial. The revenue involved, though considerable, is not large enough to prove a disturbing factor in these days of prosperous Canadian finances; and we would gladly yield up this item of our receipts if we could feel assured that it would have the great effect anticipated by the gentlemen who comprised the deputation. We desire to reserve our right as to future action, which may depend upon the results of the experiment which we intend to make. Subject to that reservation, I now announce that the government have determined for a period of two years to suspend the charges for tolls and make the entire canal system of Canada absolutely free to all.

This, as I have said, we will try as an experiment. We hope it may be justified, and we reserve our right as to what may be done at the end of the two years. We think that a trial of that kind will be all that those more particularly interested in this matter can ask us to do, and we do it with the desire that our great waterways shall carry the traffic which nature has destined they should carry.

I am sure, Mr. Speaker, that every member of this House and every good citizen of Canada will rejoice over the happy conditions which enable me to make such a gratifying statement of the affairs of the Dominion. We have every reason to view the progress of our country in the past with pleasure. We have even more reason for looking forward with hope and confidence to the great future that is before those whose privilege it is to dwell on this northern half of the American continent. We may differ in many respects, but not in our gratification that prosperity in a large degree has visited our country. Never in any previous period in our history was the future so full of promise. Never before in her history did our country loom so largely in the eyes of the world. We have ourselves long been aware of the magnificent resources of our vast territories, but our efforts to make these resources known and appreciated abroad have sometimes been less successful than could have been wished. But whatever may be said of the past in that respect, we have nothing to complain of now. In the mother country, on the continent of Europe, and even in the republic to the south of us, the story of Canada's advancement, Canada's wealth of resources, and Canada's splendid future is engaging the attention of the people, and many thousands of immigrants of the best class are crowding the steamships and the railway trains in their haste to reach the new country. We have every reason to welcome these people. We are glad to know that they are casting in their lot with us. Let us, to whom, as members of parliament, is given the high privilege of directing the affairs of this Dominion, fail not in anything that is within our power to give assurance to our new citizens that the land to which they have come is one that will reward intelligent and faithful labour with the blessings of peace, happiness and prosperity. I beg to give notice of the following resolutions :

That it is expedient to further amend 'The Customs Tariff, 1897,' to the following effect :—

That the following sections be added to the said Act :—

The Governor in Council may by Order in Council direct that a duty of seven dollars per ton shall be imposed in Schedule A on all iron and steel railway bars, or rails in any form for railways, imported into Canada ; and from and after the publication of such Order in the 'Canada Gazette' such duties shall be levied, collected and paid on all such rails ; and thereafter item 238 in Schedule A and item 585 in Schedule B shall be repealed.

Provided, however, that such Order shall not be passed until the Governor in Council is satisfied that steel rails of the best quality, suitable for the use of Canadian railways, are being manufactured in Canada, from steel made in Canada, in sufficient quantity to meet the ordinary requirements of the market.

Articles which are the growth, produce or manufacture of any foreign country which treats imports from Canada less favourably than those from other countries may be subject to a surtax over and above the duties of Schedule A, such surtax in every case to be one-third of the duty as fixed by such Schedule A.

Such surtax shall apply to any article, the chief value of which was produced in such foreign country, although it may have been improved or advanced in value by the labour of another country, notwithstanding the provisions of the British preferential tariff and regulations thereunder.

Any question arising as to any foreign country or goods coming under the operation of this section shall be decided by the Minister of Customs, whose decision shall be final.

The Minister of Customs, with the approval of the Governor in Council, may make regulations for carrying out the purposes of this section.

Such surtax shall not apply to any goods actually purchased on or before the 16th day of April, 1903, by any corporation, firm or person in Canada, for immediate transportation to Canada.

That the period of exemption from duty of machinery of every kind and structural iron and steel for use in the construction and equipment of factories for the manufacture of sugar from beet root be extended to the 30th day of June, 1904.

That item 409 in Schedule A, respecting duty on ships and other vessels built in foreign countries and applying for Canadian register, be repealed.

That machinery and appliances of a kind not made in Canada for exclusive use in alluvial gold mining be added to the free list until June 30, 1904.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax) moved the adjournment of the debate.

The PRIME MINISTER. I can have no objection to the request of my hon. friend, but have to tell him that if we do not proceed with this debate at present, he will have a little difficulty to settle with his neighbour (Mr. Sproule) because that hon. gentleman objected yesterday that we had nothing to go on with but the estimates.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). On occasions of this kind it is usual to adjourn the debate, and my chief reason for not wanting to go on to-day is that I am suffering from severe hoarseness and am afraid that I shall not be able to make myself heard by the House. I may also state to my hon. friend that we extended a similar courtesy to my hon. friend the Minister of Finance, as we are always glad to do, by waiting a half hour in our seats for the House to open.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. It was worth waiting for.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). There may be two opinions about that. The hon. gentleman is quite sure of it, other hon. gentlemen may not share in his opinion.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. I apologize to my hon. friend.

Motion agreed to, and debate adjourned.

At six o'clock, House took recess.

After Recess.

House resumed at eight o'clock.

SUPPLY.

House again in Committee of Supply.

Public works—chargeable to income—harbours and rivers—Ontario—Port Elgin, dredging and repairs to landing pier, $4,000.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS (Hon. James Sutherland). This is to complete these works. The dredging will give a depth of fourteen feet at low water.

Mr. SPROULE. Would the Minister of Public Works please furnish the statement which he promised to give us showing the docks owned by private individuals on which we are spending public money ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. We have not been able to have that statement prepared yet. There is a good deal of labour connected with it. There is no list in this form in the department, and all the items have to be gone over and the facts looked up. I hope to lay the statement on the Table to-morrow.

Port Hope—repairs to pier and dredging, $7,500.

Mr. SPROULE. It was stated that the amount appropriated last year would complete this work, but I see we are now asked this large sum in addition.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This is for the renewal of the superstructure of the east pier, for a length of one hundred feet by thirty-four feet and six feet high. I imagine that when they came to do the work, they found the pier in much worse condition than had been anticipated. It is an old pier.

Mr. SPROULE. Is this a private dock or a government dock ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. A government dock.

Mr. LENNOX. Is the work being done by day labour or by contract ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. By day labour.

Mr. SPROULE. Will this complete the work ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Yes.

Rivière aux Puces—repairs to pilework, $1,800.

Mr. SPROULE. The minister has had this money for two years. How is it that no work was done last year ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I have received a petition lately showing that this is a very necessary work. It is to renew 200 feet of piling work on the west side and 130 feet on the east side. The total estimate is $1,800, so that this will complete the work.

Mr. SPROULE. Where is this work ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. In Essex county.

Mr. SPROULE. There is no dredging ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. No, only piling.

River Ottawa—improvement of narrows at Petewawa, above Pembroke, $4,000.

Mr. SPROULE. Is this part of the Ottawa and Georgian Bay canal ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I suppose it is.

Mr. LENNOX. This appears to be a revote. When was the appropriation first made ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Some work seems to have been undertaken there some years ago. There is a rocky shoal which obstructs the steamboat channel through the narrows above Pembroke, and this money is to be expended in making a channel 100 feet wide, with a depth of eight feet at low water. I have not the information at hand to show when the appropriation was first made. But this is a very necessary work, as this shoal is an obstruction to navigation.

Mr. LENNOX. Has there been a considerable amount of money spent up to the present time on this work ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Three thousand dollars.

Mr. LENNOX. Why was not this money spent last year ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I am not able to give my hon. friend (Mr. Lennox) that information. The information furnished to the department is that about 4,000 feet of this rocky shoal has to be removed.

Mr. LENNOX. How long has it been under contract ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I cannot say.

Mr. LENNOX. I consider that the principle of these revotes is a very bad one. It is not right to apply for an appropriation in advance, before there is any definite scheme proposed, or any contemplation of an immediate expenditure. We cannot close our eyes to the fact that appropriations of this kind are, in some instances and by some governments, held dangling before the eyes of the electors for the purpose of influencing votes. I think I may say that in some cases that has been done by the present government. I protest against the principle as a bad one.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. There might be such instances, but this is not one of them. It does not affect any constituency or any vote.

Mr. LENNOX. I can tell the hon. gentleman that there are some.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. There may be. But this is for the purpose of removing a rocky shoal in the Ottawa river, for the benefit of boats that ply north of Pembroke.

Mr. LENNOX. When I say that appropriations are frequently put in the estimates for the purpose of influencing votes, I do not mean to say that the present one may be wholly improper. No doubt it is intended to kill two birds with one stone. It may be intended both to serve a public purpose and to influence votes at the same time. This may be also for a proper purpose, or it may not be; but generally there is an ulterior purpose.

Mr. SPROULE. Why was the money voted last year not expended? It could not have been for the want of dredging.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I have given all the information at my disposal with regard to this item, and if any further information is required, I will ask that the item stand until further information is brought down.

Mr. SPROULE. We had better let it stand. We voted the money last year and none of it was expended. If the work was required at all, and we furnished the money, the government should have expended it.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I think this item had better stand until we find out in what position the work is.

Mr. CLARKE. Is the work to be done by day labour?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. No, it is let by contract. My impression at present is, speaking from memory, that this contract was let at the time the Hon. Mr. White represented that constituency. Let the item stand.

Item allowed to stand.

River St. Lawrence—dredging steamboat channel through shoal at foot of Wolfe Island, $3,000.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. The information I have from the chief engineer is that $3,000 will complete a channel 300 feet wide and 16 feet deep. It will complete the work.

Mr. SPROULE. Is that being done by government dredge?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. By a hired dredge. Randolph & McDonald are the contractors.

Rondeau harbour—improvements to piers and dredging at entrance, $6,000.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This is to make provision for protecting the west side of the west pier for 1,000 feet in length, also the east pier around its northern end for a distance of 100 feet. The estimated expenditure is $2,100. Nineteen thousand cubic yards of dredging require to be done to make a channel through the bar 1,000 feet long and 19 feet in depth. The chief engineer reports that this amount will be required. There has been already an expenditure of $6,308.35.

Mr. SPROULE. What will be done with the $10,000?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. We ask for a revote of $6,000.

Mr. LENNOX.

Mr. SPROULE. It is not marked here a revote; it is a fresh vote in addition to the $10,000.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. The $10,000 will be all spent before the end of the year.

Mr. SPROULE. Is this work done by contract?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. By the government dredge 'Ontario.' The piling is done by day labour.

Southampton—improvement of harbour, $10,000.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. There has been a good deal of money spent at Southampton. This revote of $10,000 is to be applied to extending the present landing pier in a northern direction for 560 feet, leaving an opening between it and the land for a breakwater of 210 feet, dredging the area thus inclosed to a depth of 17½ feet at low water. The depth is 13 feet. Work does not seem to have been carried on there last year. Ten thousand dollars was voted and I do not know why the work did not go on last year.

Mr. SPROULE. How much money altogether has been spent in the Southampton harbour?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Since confederation $47,000 have been spent, and previous to that period, about $10,000.

Mr. SPROULE. I would like to say with reference to this work, that I have always noticed, whenever there is an election up there, that it is considered very important that there should be some work done at that harbour. The local member, who lives there, is always a very active canvasser, and he assures the people of the importance of sending to Ottawa a supporter of the government in order that money may be spent on that important work. There is nearly always money in the estimates or money on the tapis somewhere or other. If it is necessary to make an expenditure there it should be done. We have had this hanging on year after year. There is no election just now but if there should be one next year it will be a very valuable item to have in the estimates, because it will be made use of—not that I am suggesting that an improper use of it will be made by the department in the way of spending the money—but it will be made use of in the way of influencing the people as to the man they should send down to parliament, because it is desirable to have money spent in this place. Has the government any reasonable expectation of spending the money this year?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. As far as I am concerned I can assure the hon. gentleman (Mr. Sproule) that if the money is not spent this year and if there is not a sufficient excuse to satisfy every hon.

member of this House I will not ask the House to revote it. For the want of this pier this harbour has been filling up all the time and boats drawing thirteen or fourteen feet of water cannot get in. It is reported by the chief engineer that if this work is done there will not be the danger of filling up that there has been in the past.

Mr. SPROULE. Why was the money not spent last year ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I cannot answer that.

Mr. SPROULE. I have heard it said that even if this pier were placed there the harbour will always fill up. I do not know if that is correct or not.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. The engineer is satisfied that this will prevent it.

Mr. SPROULE. How do you propose to do this work ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. It is to be done by contract.

Mr. SPROULE. What dredges have you in the Georgian Bay between Parry Harbour and Wiarton, or Southampton ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Speaking from memory I think there are three or four firms that have dredges there. There is the firm of Porter & Bowman.

Mr. SPROULE. But these are not government dredges ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. No, they are not government dredges. We have no government dredges up there just now.

Mr. LENNOX. Before that item passes I would like to say that I quite appreciate the fact that the hon. Minister of Public Works is somewhat handicapped by not having been very long in the position he is now in, but all the same I think there must be some means of getting a sufficient amount of information to reasonably satisfy this committee. I do not think it will be any excuse to our constituents to go back and tell them that we have not got the information that we should get merely by reason of the fact that there has been a change of portfolios. I am not casting any reflection upon the hon. minister, but speaking in the interest of my own constituents and speaking upon the lines from which the people of the country will judge us, I do say with every confidence, although I have not had a long parliamentary experience, that we of the opposition are bound to get more information than we have been getting before we proceed with these estimates. What position are we in ? The hon. minister tells us candidly night after night virtually that he does not understand the position of these matters that come up for us to pass upon. We ought to have the information. It is true there has been a change of portfolio, but the staff is the same. There is a chief engineer, and if I understand it all correctly, that chief engineer knows a great deal as to the details of the office and as to what is transpiring from time to time. In reference to the matter that is now before us the chief engineer, or some one in the department, surely can tell why it is that it has been delayed. This is of the same class of items as I was speaking of a few moments ago. The hon. minister comes to us and tells us that there was a vote last year that was supposed to be for the immediate requirements of the country then, that the money has not been expended and if there is nothing done I submit to the good sense of the committee on both sides, that it is not sufficient to tell us that it is not known to the department why the money was not expended. The money must be expended because it must not be appropriated unless it is required in the interests of the country. It must be expended or the hon. minister must be prepared to give us some reasonable ground why it has not been expended or to present some exceptional circumstance that has arisen which could not have been foreseen and which has prevented this expenditure. I speak of this item but I could speak of many of the same class and I submit that we of the opposition, who are supposed to be on the alert, who are supposed to watch the expenditure of the administration—and it requires a good deal of watching—are bound, whatever courtesy we wish to extend, to require fuller information than we have been afforded in reference to this item.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Mr. Chairman, I have no desire to be excused because I have not been long in the department from furnishing all proper and necessary information. I wish that to be clearly understood. It may be possible that a question may be unexpectedly asked in regard to any work that even the officers of the department could not answer without referring to the papers and books. No minister would be expected to know every possible detail, but as to the general information in reference to this and other votes I think it is unfair to say that I have not furnished the information with the greatest possible detail and if I have not been supplied with all the details by the department I have been willing either to furnish any further information afterwards or to allow the item to stand, as I did in the case of the previous one when I was not satisfied myself that the fullest information had been given. One who has been only a few weeks in the department cannot be as familiar with all these works as a minister who has had them before him on a great many occasions, but at the same time, no matter how long a minister may have been in the department, he could not be familiar with every detail without reference to the papers and books. I do not think there have been any questions in reference to this item which have not been fully answered excepting the one as to why the money was not spent last year. The officials of the department have too much to do to go on with all the works they have under their care. In some cases it has been explained that they could not procure the necessary appliances, especially in the case of dredges, to go on with the work. In other cases the reason for delay is that at certain seasons of the year they cannot get people to enter into contracts and they cannot get timber out. I have no desire that any hon. member of the opposition should allow an item to pass without receiving an answer to every reasonable question put to me because it is the duty of the department to furnish all the information. If the hon. gentleman (Mr. Lennox) has any questions to ask in connection with the item, other than the one he has referred to, I will be pleased to answer it. I think it is fair to say that I have given the fullest possible information why this vote is asked, what is intended to be done with the money and what object is to be gained by building this pier and continuing the dredging at that point.

Mr. SPROULE. There is good cause for complaint because I notice, looking back over the estimates, that this money was voted in 1901-2 and was not spent, and that it was voted in 1902-3 and not spent. Now, we are voting money for 1903-4 and up to the present there has been no expenditure. There seems to be something wrong there.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Since I took office a complaint has been made by the municipal council of the district, but it would appear that the department was not able to cope with all the work it had on hand. This work is undertaken on the report of the engineer that it is urgently necessary, and I pledge myself that it will be proceeded with as quickly as possible.

Sturgeon Falls—wharf, $4,500.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This wharf is under contract, the contract price being $2,800 and the contractor is Robert Grant, of Toronto.

Mr. SPROULE. Is this the Grant that is figuring in the Stratton case ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I think this Mr. Grant is a contractor and an honest man.

Mr. BENNETT. Has the town provided the site?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. The right of way was purchased by the municipality and transferred to the Crown free.

Mr. BENNETT. What was the value of the land ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I do not know what they paid for it.

Mr. BENNETT. Is this on the river or on the lake ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. It is on Sturgeon river and quite a business is done there.

Mr. LENNOX. Does this wharf serve a local purpose only; is there any navigation up and down the river ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. It must be largely for local shipping. The information furnished me is that twelve or thirteen steamboats use this wharf, the largest having a draft of eight feet and Sturgeon river is navigable for vessels of that size a distance of four miles to Lake Nipissing.

Mr. SPROULE. What is the ordinary line of business which Mr. Grant is engaged in ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I have not a personal acquaintance with Mr. Grant, but perhaps the hon. member for Toronto knows him. I understand he is a contractor of considerable experience.

Mr. SPROULE. I thought he was a lawyer.

Mr. LENNOX. All the better if he were.

Mr. CLARKE. There is a gentleman Robert Grant, a contractor in Toronto. There used to be a gentleman of that name having contracts with the city. I do not know much about him.

Mr. SPROULE. When we have painters and newspaper men and lawyers turning up as government contractors it looks rather suspicious. They often farm out the business and have a rake off. I thought perhaps that might be so in this case. Was there more than one tender ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I think there were seven. There is a good deal of competition in these small works. Mr. Grant was the lowest tenderer. I am informed this vote will complete the work.

Thornbury—repairs to harbour works, $1,500.

Mr. SPROULE. Are you doing any dredging here? I understand that some dredging is required, but if you have to repair the pier out of this vote as well, there will not be much left for dredging.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. The department did some dredging there last year.

Mr. SPROULE. I am informed that some dredging is required there yet.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I expect there will be and if so I will have to get another vote.

Mr. SPROULE. I may say with regard to this vote and the vote for Meaford that a much larger expenditure is necessary than you have provided for in the estimates. Do you intend to ask a further sum in the supplementary estimates ? I know that you can expend money to good advantage there and the people would not be displeased if there was a much larger expenditure than you apparently contemplated.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. The mayor and the municipal council of Meaford have made strong representations to me by petiton and the chief engineer is now up there examining the place. I will be governed by his report as to what further work shall be done there this year.

Toronto harbour—works at eastern entrance, $14,000.

Mr. KEMP. The Postmaster General is probably much interested in this work, and if it is agreeable to the minister I would ask that this vote be deferred until Sir William Mulock is in the House.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This work has no connection with the matters to which the Toronto deputation made reference recently. I had a communication from the council this week pointing out that this work is very pressing.

Mr. KEMP. Will there be another item for Toronto ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I hope so.

Mr. KEMP. Then we could discuss that question on that other item. If that is understood I will not object.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Yes, the matter can be discussed on any item for public works. I am furnished with the following information with regard to this particular work. This is for the construction of two groynes to protect the island shore at an estimated cost of some $3,000; rebuilding and stone ballasting breakwater, $3,500; repairs to superstructure of eastern channel piers, $4,000. My hon. friend will notice that these are small works which if neglected would cost a great deal more a few months from now.

Mr. KEMP. Is this work being done by contract or by day labour ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. All by contract.

Mr. KEMP. I notice by the Auditor General's Report for 1901-2, at page V—273, that one of the foremen on this work is Frank J. Sullivan. Is this the Sullivan who is under suspicion at the present time in connection with the Stratton-Gamey investigation ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I have no information as to that, but I shall be pleased to make inquiries and let the hon. gentleman know.

Mr. KEMP. The entry is : 'Frank J. Sullivan, foreman, and nine men, one half day, putting government derrick scow in water, $15.' I am informed it is the same man who was in the employ of the government and recently resigned.

Trenton dredging—Trent river, $5,000.

Mr. COCHRANE. I would like to ask the minister where this dredging is to be done ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This is a revote for the purpose of removing small stones and gravel and providing a channel of sufficient depth. The reason of the delay was that the department could not secure a dredge to go on with the work.

Mr. COCHRANE. How is it that the public works of this country are so delayed for the want of dredges ? There was a time in the history of Ontario not long ago when there were plenty of dredges. Is it because there are some parties the government do not want to employ to do the dredging ? I know that it used to be said that shoemakers got contracts for dredging, and then hired somebody to do the work and made a rake-off. I never knew that there were not dredges enough to do the work, yet we have thousands of dollars voted and not expended because we are told there are not enough dredges.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I may say as a matter of fact there are no dredges procurable, though at some points there may be too many. We have a dredge almost completed which will, I hope, early this season be placed on this section to complete this work.

Wendover wharf, $1,000.

Mr. LENNOX. The minister is asking for $1,000 this year, and last year we voted $3,000. I would ask him if the contract has been let, and how the work is being done ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. No, this was done by day's labour under the superintendence of one of the engineers of the department.

Mr. LENNOX. How much was spent last year ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Three thousand and eighty dollars has been spent in the current year.

Mr. LENNOX. I find at page V—273 and 274 of the Auditor General's Report that there was expended on the Wendover wharf last year $6,502.22. Was this the beginning of the expenditure, or was there an expenditure before that ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. That was the first work done.

Mr. LENNOX. Where is Wendover ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. On the Ottawa river.

Mr. LENNOX. Does the minister know anything about the population of the place, or whose riding it is in ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This wharf affords landing and shipping facilities to the residents of Wendover and the farmers of the vicinity. The nearest communication by rail is nine miles.

Mr. BARKER. I desire to call attention to this subject because it raises a question that was very much discussed last year. The minister last year obtained an appropriation of $3,000, and expended more than double the money authorized by parliament. We were assured that that would not occur again. The subject was discussed in the Public Accounts Committee, and the Auditor General said that he had brought the attention of the government to it, and that it would not occur again. I think parliament is entitled to more consideration from the departments than that. A department brings in an estimate to cover the cost of a particular work, a vote is taken for it, and then, utterly regardless of the amount authorized by parliament, the department spends more than double the amount authorized, and then comes back in the following year and asks for more money. I do not think that is treating parliament in the way in which it is entitled to be treated.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I think the hon. gentleman has overlooked the fact that the first vote for this work was taken in 1901-2. The vote for 1902-3 was $3,000. That amount has been spent, and now, to complete the work, $1,000 is required. I do not see anything irregular in the expenditure. I am not aware what estimate was given by the minister at first. There may have been an under estimate, but it is not a very serious one, because according to the report of the engineer this $1,000 will complete the work.

Mr. BARKER. The hon. gentleman may not think it is a serious difference when the expenditure is more than 100 per cent above what was authorized, but I do consider it a serious difference. Three thousand dollars was all the minister was authorized to spend at Wendover. He spent $6,500 there, and now he is asking for another $1,000.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. My hon. friend is mistaken as to this vote. He must be referring to the vote of 1901-2.

Mr. BARKER. I am reading from the hon. gentleman's estimates. He wants a thousand dollars for this year. He states in the other columns that the amount authorized last year was three thousand dollars.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Yes.

Mr. BARKER. That is for the expenditure last year. Yet according to the Auditor General's Report, he expended $6,500.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. My hon. friend has made a slight error. The fiscal year ends the 30th of June next.

Mr. BARKER. I am aware of that.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. The Auditor General's Report refers to the appropriation expended in the year 1901-2. The $3,000 was voted for the year 1902-3. I have not at my hand just now what the amount voted for 1901-2 was.

Mr. BARKER. The Auditor General's Report is for the expenditure of the year ending 30th June, 1902.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. That was for the appropriation voted for 1901-2. It does not refer to this $3,000 at all.

Mr. COCHRANE. We have for the year 1902-3 the sum of $3,000. If the hon. minister is correct quite a sum will be spent on this work. Where is the village of Wendover and why should such an amount be spent upon a wharf which can only accommodate local traffic. I know of no stretch on the Ottawa so important that we should have that amount spent upon it from year to year.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. My hon. friend must see that during the session of 1901-2, parliament must have voted at least $7,000 to begin this work. In the session of 1902-3 parliament voted $3,000 more, making $10,000.

Mr. COCHRANE. Has that been spent ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Yes, and I am asking for $1,000 to complete the work.

Mr. COCHRANE. How was that $3,000 spent—by contract or by day labour ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. By day labour.

Mr. COCHRANE. How many foremen had you there ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Only one. It was done under the superintendence of the resident engineer.

Mr. LENNOX. As I have already pointed out, there was an expenditure for the year 1901-2, as recorded in the Auditor General's Report, of $6,500. The hon. minister explained that that would not touch the $3,000 appropriation which we voted last year; but looking at the estimates for the year 1901-2, there does not appear to be any appropriation at all for Wendover in those estimates. Will the hon. minister tell us that it is in the supplementary estimates, because otherwise there would not appear to be any appropriation at all.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. There must have been a vote at least of $6,500 or the department could not have spent the money in 1901-2, and the Auditor General would not have sanctioned the expenditure.

Mr. BARKER. Last year we found over and over again that money was expended away beyond the estimate without the authority of parliament at all.

Mr. LENNOX. What the hon. gentleman says is begging the question. He says that as we do not find the item in the general estimates and we do not find an expenditure of $6,500, it must follow that the vote was in the supplementary estimate.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I did not say that. I said that there must have been an appropriation or the department could not have spent the money, and the Auditor General would not have passed upon the expenditure.

Mr. LENNOX. We ought to know whether there was a vote for this expenditure or not, especially in view of the fact, to which my hon. friend from Hamilton has drawn attention, that time and again we have found expenditures which have exceded the appropriation.

Mr. BARKER. I have here the supplementary and the general estimates for 1901-2 and this place does not appear in either.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. If my hon. friend will look at the Supply Bill on page 41 he will find a vote of $6,500.

Mr. BARKER. Is that in the estimates ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. It is in the statutes on page 41. I think that I am perfectly right in saying the Auditor General would not account for an expenditure of $6,500 unless the money had been spent and gone through the regular channels.

Mr. BARKER. Perhaps the hon. minister is not aware of what has been done in some of the departments. I can only tell him an actual fact, that last year the Public Accounts Committee investigated a case where $8,000 had been granted to parliament for a particular work and more than double that sum had been expended, and the Auditor General said he would see that it would not occur again. We are justified in seeing that such unauthorized expenditures are not still going on.

Mr. BLAIN. I notice that this item is in three different parts—ice-breakers, storehouse and waiting room. How is it divided? What proportion will be spent on ice-breakers ? What is the size of the waiting room, and what will it cost ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. The ice-breakers are for the protection of the wharf. The waiting room is a small part of the warehouse partitioned off for the accommodation of the people waiting for the boats.

Mr. LENNOX. I would like to have from the Minister of Public Works an expression of opinion as to the policy of such items as this. Leaving aside, for the moment, the question to which I have directed attention more than once in this committee the undesirability of building local wharfs all over the country. I would like to know if it is the policy of the administration to build not only wharfs but warehouses, and not only warehouses, but waiting rooms for all the hamlets and at the mouths of all the small streams in the country. I understand from the hon. minister that this place is nine miles from a railway station. That may be a reason why the public of that neighbourhood require a wharf and a store house and a waiting room. But there is a great distinction between ascertaining that that is necessary for the accommodation of the people of the locality and coming to the conclusion that it is the duty of the government of the Dominion, at the expense of the whole of Canada, to supply that local accommodation. If this is the policy of this government, I protest against such a system of spending the public money of the Dominion. It may be a perfectly legitimate expenditure of money for some authority, but it is an unjustifiable expenditure, I submit, of the money of the Dominion of Canada.

Mr. SPROULE. It is not customary to build warehouses on these wharfs, I believe. Will the minister please explain the necessity for it in this case ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I believe that on most of the wharfs the government puts up a warehouse or some kind of shelter for goods. As to the waiting room, it is merely a part of the warehouse partitioned off.

Mr. SPROULE. I thought that the warehouses were usually built by the locality. On the Georgian Bay at Thornbury, for instance, while the dock was built by the government, the warehouse was built by the municipality. I think the same is true of Meaford.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. There is no rule in the matter. In many cases private individuals have their warehouses alongside the docks, but in small places like this the government builds, in connection with the dock a small, cheap frame warehouse.

Mr. SPROULE. There ought to be some rule that would apply equally to all places. Otherwise, you do too much for one place and not enough for another.

Mr. COCHRANE. Is there a village where this wharf is ? Is there a post office there ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. There is a small village. I have not a memorandum of the population. The wharf is quite a little distance from the village.

Mr. INGRAM. When this item was first introduced, what was this work supposed to cost ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I cannot answer that, as the estimate is not before me. The estimate of what it would cost should have been given three years ago when this vote was first taken.

Mr. INGRAM. I have examined the records, and I find no account of them.

Mr. COCHRANE. I confess I cannot see why the Dominion should furnish not only a wharf, but a warehouse and a waiting room at a point where the population is so small that, if we may trust the Postmaster General's Report, there is not even a post office there. It appears to me that there must be something behind this vote that is not honest. I feel convinced of that. I do not think the Minister of Public Works himself feels easy in his conscience in making this expenditure.

Mr. KEMP. Who is in charge of this storehouse and waiting room ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. The Department of Marine and Fisheries always appoint a wharfinger to take charge of these public wharfs.

Mr. KEMP. Who owns this wharf ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. The government.

Mr. KEMP. How can we find out who is appointed to take charge, for the Minister of Marine and Fisheries (Hon. Mr. Préfontaine) is not here ?

Mr. LENNOX. The Minister of Public Works, I must say, is usually pretty candid in telling us what he intends to do in future in regard to these matters. Already during the discussion of these estimates I think he has upon more than one occasion indicated that there will be a substantial improvement in the conduct of the department in the future, that better methods will be adopted. I was in hopes that he would tell us that, whether the larger improvement I have been urging, the total abandonment of this system of local improvements at the expenses of the exchequer, was to be adopted or not, at all events, we might look for such an improvement as would prevent, in the future, expenditures for waiting rooms. If the minister will tell us that, it would be some assurance that matters would be improved. Now, assuming that it was proposed to put up that little building at the expense of the township in which it is situated, to accommodate people within a range of seven, or eight, or nine miles, could it be contended that it was a proper expenditure of the money of the township or of the money of the county ? I think that could not be contended, much less, then, could it be contended that it is proper to expend the money of the Dominion of Canada for the same purpose. I say it should be observed as a principle that we should not have any longer this system of expending public money. The hon. member for Grey spoke of it as an injustice ; I say it is more than an injustice, I say that this money cannot be expended at Wendover for the purpose of building a warehouse and be an honest expenditure of the money of this country. I contend that when the work is so local in its character as not to justify the expenditure of money by the municipality, it is manifest that an expenditure of money by the Dominion for the same purpose is much less justifiable.

Mr. KEMP. This is certainly a surprise to me. I was aware that a great number of new wharfs were being erected in various towns and small villages throughout the country; but I never knew before that either this or any former administration erected storehouses and waiting rooms for the benefit of private individuals. According to the information before us, this storehouse and waiting room have been erected, and we cannot find out now who is in charge of the property. Property of that kind left without some one being in charge, will soon become useless. It seems to me we should have more information in regard to this particular case. I do not think the minister is prepared to say that he has any precedent for this kind of thing. Certainly, I do not know of a single instance where this or any other administration has expended public money in erecting storehouses and waiting rooms of this character.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. There are dozens and dozens of precedents for this expenditure, ever since confederation. It is usual to erect warehouses for the accommodation of the produce of people at these wharfs.

Mr. KEMP. Who is responsible for the safe keeping of these places, generally ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. As I explained, when a wharf is built by the Public Works Department it is transferred to the care of the Marine Department, who appoints the wharfinger. But that cannot affect the expenditure in any way. If my hon. friend wishes to know the name of the wharfinger, he can get it when the Marine estimates are under consideration.

Mr. McCORMICK. Will the minister inform us who is the gentleman that asked for this work to be done ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This House authorized an expenditure on this work three years ago, and all the information should have been furnished then. A year ago we had a vote of $3,000, and I am now asking, on the advice of the engineer, for $1,000 for the purpose of building this work. If it were a new work, that I was asking for, of course the responsibility that would devolve upon me of giving the information would be very different from what it is now. Parliament has committed itself to this work, and the money has been spent, with the exception of a small amount.

Mr. CLARKE. Did the engineer recommend this work in the first place ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Surely parliament did not allow the item to pass three years ago without this information.

Mr. INGRAM. Questions were asked when this vote was brought down, but no information was given. That is the trouble we have had right along. When there is any reference to the past record we cannot find any information in it.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I have said on previous occasions that I disapproved of parliament being asked for a vote without full information of the probable cost. I am no more accountable for this than the hon. gentleman, and perhaps not so much. I agree that the officers of the department should furnish the minister and he should furnish parliament with an estimate of the total cost of any work before it is undertaken. Any over estimate or under estimate would have to be accounted for to the satisfaction of parliament. In this case, if that was omitted, I suppose we are all responsible.

Mr. INGRAM. I draw attention to the fact that we have no record of what the work has cost or any other information about it. The hon. gentleman himself is not in a position to give us the information.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. The hon. gentleman for the first time, probably, has got the information. I have given him now full information as to the cost.

Mr. INGRAM. The estimated cost of the work ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. No, the actual cost, what has been spent and what it will take to complete. The hon. gentleman has not been paying attention to the discussion.

Mr. INGRAM. The minister forgets that when this item was brought in at first there was nothing to show what the original estimate was. That is what we are asking the hon. gentleman for.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. There was none.

Mr. INGRAM. No original estimate for this work ? That is a bad give-away for the department.

Mr. CLARKE. Is there no report from an engineer or some official recommending it, showing a public necessity for this work? The minister might give us that information.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Mr. Michaud, one of the engineers, did make a report in 1901, estimating the cost of this work at $7,000.

Mr. CLARKE. That information, apparently, was not given to the committee at first.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Apparently not.

Mr. CLARKE. On what ground was the work recommended ? Was there any clamour for it among the people living down there, any public demand for the construction of this work ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I will be pleased to look over the files of the department for the past three years and see what applications were made and if there were any petitions from the people there, or other papers, in connection with this work. With the permission of the committee we might go back to the item of $4,000 for the improvement of the Narrows at Petewawa above Pembroke. I have the information now that the work costs about $7,000. The work has been done and the money was to be paid under the contract on the completion of the work. The reason it was not paid was that there was a dispute between the contractor, Mr. W. J. Poupore and the department as to the completion of the work. The hon. member for East Grey (Mr. Sproule) asked me why that item was revoted. There is a dispute between the contractor and the department as to whether the work has been completed according to the contract or not. That accounts for revoting the money.

Mr. SPROULE. Have you come to a settlement yet ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Not yet.

Mr. REID (Grenville). I would like to ask the hon. minister if the work of dredging along the River St. Lawrence, at Wolfe

Island, and other places is to be done by day's work or by tender ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. That work was done by contract. The dredge which did the work was the property of Mr. Macdonald.

Mr. REID (Grenville). At what rate was it engaged ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. At $8 an hour.

Mr. REID (Grenville). Does that include tugs and scows ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Yes.

Mr. REID (Grenville). Is that a fair charge ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. It is supposed to be a fair charge. It has been the charge for several years in the department. I do not know whether we will be able to continue that. Applications have been made for increased wages and the cost of everything has been increased. That has been the price for a great many years for a dredge of the minimum capacity of 600 cubic yards.

Mr. CLARKE. I suppose there is a fair wage officer to look after all these things ?

Mr. REID (Grenville). That is for a small sized dredge.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. The report of the department shows that that is a dredge of the capacity of 600 yards a day.

Mr. REID (Grenville). What rate do you pay for a large sized dredge ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. From $10 to $12 per hour and as high as $15.

Mr. REID (Grenville). Is that the highest price that the department has paid for a dredge ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. So far as the memory of the deputy minister goes he thinks that $15 is the highest.

Mr. REID (Grenville). Is that for a large sized dredge ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Yes.

Mr. REID (Grenville). And that includes scows, tugs and all complete ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. That includes all the apparatus.

Mr. BLAIN. What was the contract price for that work at the narrows at Petewawa ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. $7,000.

Mr. BLAIN. Was there any more money expended on it than the contract price ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Nothing has been paid by the department yet.

Mr. SPROULE. Will that finish the work ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. There is a dispute between the contractor and the department as to this work. The contractor claims that it cost him a great deal more to do the work.

Mr. SPROULE. How did he do it ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. By blasting and dredging.

Mr. BLAIN. Was there a signed contract ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Yes.

Hon. Mr. TARTE. Is that work completed now ? I do not think it is.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. It is a question in dispute between the contractor and the department as to whether it is completed or not.

Hon. Mr. TARTE. The work is not completed. I was there last year. There is no use saying it is. The work is not completed.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. If the hon. member (Hon. Mr. Tarte) had been present he would have known that was what I explained.

Hon. Mr. TARTE. I would like to know if it is completed or not.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Not according to the contention of the department.

Hon. Mr. TARTE. There are not two ways of interpreting that contract. The work is not completed. The contractor had made a contract with the late government for a certain sum of money. He has been going on very slowly indeed. I was there last year and I say it again the work is not completed. But of course I may say immediately that the work cannot be completed for the sum for which it was agreed to do it. It is out of the question. The work is worth, I believe, about twice as much as the price of the contract. These are the facts of the case. The work is not done. There is only part of it done.

Mr. REID (Grenville). I would like to ask the hon. minister what it costs per day to run one of his dredges. What does it cost to run one of the large sized dredges like 'J. I. Tarte' for instance ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. That is an important matter not connected with this work and when the vote for dredging is up I would rather bring down the figures and furnish all the information. Roughly, I should say about $200 per day.

Mr. REID (Grenville). In an off-hand statement of that kind I suppose you include tugs, scows, dredges, coal and wages ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I do not think they have any scows with that dredge.

Mr. REID (Grenville). You must have scows to take away what you dredge ?

Hon. Mr. TARTE. No.

Mr. REID (Grenville). Take one of your large dredges in connection with which you use scows—do you include scows, tugs, coal and everything connected with it ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. It would not be nearly as much for one of the smaller dredges.

Mr. REID (Grenville). But take one of your chief dipper dredges with which you use scows and tugs—roughly, what would it cost per day to handle a dredge of that kind ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I would not like to speak from memory.

Mr. REID (Grenville). The officer of the department knows roughly.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Perhaps from $100 to $125 per day.

Mr. REID (Grenville). That would include everything ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Yes.

Mr. BLAIN. Returning to that Pembroke dredging item the hon. ex-Minister of Public Works (Hon. Mr. Tarte) gives the committee some light by making the statement that it will cost double the amount of the contract. Will the hon. minister tell the committee if it is the intention of the government to go on and complete the work, if they make a settlement with the contractor ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I should not be bound by what I say here, because the matter was only brought to my attention a few days ago. The contract was made by the previous government with Mr. Poupore according to the specifications. The officers of the department claim that this work has not been completed under the specifications under which he took that contract. It will cost no doubt a great deal more money to complete this work according to specifications. He has furnished accounts to the department already for some $14,000. If the shoal is so removed as to furnish at low water a sufficient depth for boats to navigate there, I am inclined to think it would be better to make a settlement with Mr. Poupore than to go on spending money on this work. One of the engineers of the department has recently reported to the effect that there is eight feet of water at the shoal.

Hon. Mr. TARTE. Which engineer made that report ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Mr. Fraser.

Hon. Mr. TARTE. When did he make the survey ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Within the last two or three weeks.

Mr. SPROULE. We have no information as to what kind of a contract this was. Was it a contract to give a certain depth of water; was it to take out so many cubic yards, or was it to remove the shoal ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. The late governmet made a contract with Mr. Poupore to do this work.

Mr. SPROULE. What kind of a contract?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. As I understand it, he undertook to remove this shoal for $7,000. There has been a dispute ever since between Mr. Poupore and the department as to whether the work has been done according to contract.

Mr. SPROULE. What were the specifications ? It might take $100,000 to remove a shoal and it might only take $5,000. Surely the contract must have been let in some intelligent way.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. There was a plan furnished by the engineer, and the contractor undertook to do the work for $7,000.

Hon. Mr. TARTE. The hon. gentleman (Mr. Sproule) can move for the papers and get all the information. It was so much money for so much work to give us so many feet of water. The truth of the matter is that the contractor sent in a tender which was far too low, and the contract has been dragging along for eight or ten years. That is the whole thing in two words. The price he tendered at was twice too low, and he cannot complete the work for the money. There is about eight feet of water now, and it is considered by certain parties that that is enough, but nevertheless the contract has not been carried out. It would take $15,000 instead of $7,000. The question came before me, and I had nothing else to do than to tell the contractor to carry out his contract, and when the work was completed I would pay him. The work was not completed when I left office and I did not pay him.

Mr. SPROULE. Well, that gives us some additional information, but surely before the department let the contract it had an engineer's estimate, and it would not let a work at less than half the actual cost. There was something wrong about the department or the engineer, or they would not get into a tangle like that.

Hon. Mr. TARTE. The contractor claims that when he did tender he did not receive from the department all the information he should have had. He thinks there was a mistake made, but at all events he has acted in good faith.

Mr. SPROULE. The hon. gentleman (Hon. Mr. Tarte) says that if I want the information I can move for the papers. It is the duty of the minister who is asking us to vote money to provide us with all necessary information which would satisfy us whether it is wise or not to vote the money, and it is not our business to go around the departments looking for information. This item should stand until we get this information.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. What information does the hon. gentleman want ?

Mr. SPROULE. I want to know what kind of a contract was made with Mr. Poupore. I have not been able to ascertain yet what kind of a contract it was.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I thought I had given all that information, but probably it would be better to strike the item out. This is a disputed account between the department and Mr. Poupore. It arose under the late government, and when the matter came before me some time ago I was inclined to think that it would be better to come to some conclusion on it. Mr. Poupore claims he has done the work as he understood it, but the engineer reports differently to the department, and the ex-minister says he went on the engineer's report and he would not pay Mr. Poupore. My suggestion under these circumstances is to strike the item out, and I will bring down all the papers in connection with it, and if that is satisfactory to the House we can put another item in the estimates. If there is sufficient water for the boats that navigate the river there we might probably pay Mr. Poupore what the officials think would be fair for the work he has done. I do not suppose that any member of this House wants a contractor to do work for nothing. I think that will be the better way. I move that this item be struck out, and I will bring down a vote in the supplementary estimates for the settlement of this matter, and will then give full particulars to the Committee.

Hon. Mr. TARTE. I do not see why the item should be struck out, because there is certainly more money now due for work done than the amount in the estimates.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I agree with my hon. friend, but I think this is the better way to deal with the matter. It is an old claim, the work has been done, but the engineers think not according to the contract.

Motion agreed to, and item struck out.

Mr. SPROULE.

Manitoba—harbours, rivers and bridges—general repairs and improvements, $3,000.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This is a general vote for extraordinary repairs.

Mr. SPROULE. One of our members who wished to be here when these items on Manitoba went through is away, and if it would not be interfering with the order of work too much, I would suggest that the hon. minister take some other items and leave one for discussion.

Mr. McCREARY. Leave the particular item the hon. gentleman refers to, and pass the balance of the estimates.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I think the suggestion of the hon. member for East Grey (Mr. Sproule) is the better one. It is a small vote, and we will pass all the items except one, on which any item can be discussed.

Gull harbour, St. George's bay—extension of wharf, $1,500.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This is a revote to pay for the extension of this wharf 50 feet.

Mr. SPROULE. Is this work done by contract ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. No, by day labour.

Hnausa—wharf extension, $1,500.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This is to complete this work.

Mr. SPROULE. Is that being done by day labour as well ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Yes. This is a wharf of considerable size. It was originally built by contract, but these repairs are being done by day labour.

Lake Dauphin—lowering of, $5,000.

Mr. REID (Grenville). Is this work done by dredging ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. There is no provision made for a dredge there yet. The intention of the department is either to build or acquire a small dredge to go on with this necessary work.

Mr. SPROULE. How much land do you expect to reclaim by lowering the waters of that lake ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. The report of the engineer does not give the quantity of land. It is estimated that the total cost of the work will be $9,000. We have not yet been able to procure a dredge, and the engineer is now building a small one for this work.

Mr. McCREARY. The water overflows the land for a distance of six or seven miles from the lake shore. On this account many settlers had to leave there some years ago.

Mr. SPROULE. I understood that if this lake were dredged, a large acreage of land which is now practically useless, would be reclaimed and made available for agricultural purposes. I have no doubt the money is needed and it is desirable to do the work, but I think the department ought to provide some way of doing it. We do not want this money to be voted from year to year for a quarter of a century without the work being done.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. My information from the engineer is that he is going to do the work this season.

Lake Manitoba—additional outlet via Fairford river, $5,000.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This vote is to be applied to the removal of boulders from the bed of the river in order to regulate the flow from lake Manitoba.

Mr. SPROULE. Did you do any work last year ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. No, there has been no work done there, owing to the very high water during the summer of 1902 and the want of a suitable dredging plant. The engineer reports that for $3,000 we could build a dredge.

Lake Francis outlet, Manitoba—construction of piers and dredging, $6,000.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Orders have been given to go on with this work and make provisions for a permanent outlet for Lake Francis on the eastern shore of Lake Manitoba. We expect to do that work between now and the 30th of June.

Mr. BARKER. Has the hon. minister obtained any statement from the engineer that this money will complete the work.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. We have a report from Mr. Miall, the engineer for the department, that $8,500 will do this work.

Mr. BARKER. Complete it fully ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. That is the report of the engineer. Of course in large works covering such an area, the minister must depend on the report of his engineer. That is the only information that in most cases the minister and parliament can have to depend upon.

Mr. BARKER. No doubt the minister must be guided by his engineers and nobody will find fault with a trifling discrepancy between the engineer's estimate and the cost of the work when finally completed. But we find frequently the department entering on a large work without the slightest idea of where it is going to land them. Thousands of dollars are spent beyond the original estimate when, if parliament knew at the beginning what expenditure was involved, parliament would never have authorized the undertaking. The minister should always be able to show that he has his engineer's written report, stating what the whole work will cost from beginning to end. Whether that report be thoroughly reliable or not is another question, but he ought to have it.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I quite agree with my hon. friend, and my policy is to submit these reports on all occasions before a work is begun.

Selkirk, Manitoba—extension of wharf, $3,000.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This is to complete the 300 feet addition to Selkirk wharf. The work was begun in 1902-3, and will cost about $6,000 altogether Wharf at Lake Winnipeg at Gimli—to complete repairs, $1,250.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This is to complete. The total cost is $4,946. It is being done by day's work.

White Mud river—dredging at mouth of, $3,500.

Mr. SPROULE. Have you a dredge there?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Yes, and the work is going on this season.

Mr. SPROULE. What is the full cost of the work ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. The total expenditure so far is $29,578, and the report of the engineer is that $3,500 are necessary to continue the work this year.

Mr. HUGHES (Victoria). Where is White Mud river ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. In Macdonald county.

Mr. HUGHES (Victoria). Is this place navigable ? And how many vessels approach that wharf ?

Mr. McCREARY. There are many vessels plying on Lake Manitoba, and they have great difficulty in finding shelter. By dredging this river, vessels will be able to find a harbour some three miles up from the lake. The Northern Pacific put on a steamer at the foot of the lake, when they completed their road, and both steamer and wharf were entirely washed away.

North-west Territories—harbours, rivers and bridges, including approaches—general repairs and improvements, $5,000.

Mr. HUGHES (Victoria). Surely the minister is going to ask for the appropriation of more money than this for the territories ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This vote is only for extraordinary cases of repairs and so on. There will be separate votes for other works.

Mr. HUGHES (Victoria). This has nothing to do with the territorial vote ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. No, it is a general vote.

Mr. HUGHES (Victoria). Though it does not relate to the item immediately under discussion, I would like to take advantage of the opportunity to draw attention to a statement that appears in the Montreal 'Star' to-night, to the effect that a great many of the colonists going out to the Rev. Mr. Barr's settlement will suffer great hardship in travelling the road from Saskatoon to their settlement. As a matter of fact, the road referred to is better than most of the streets in Ottawa, better than most of roads in England. These settlers will suffer no hardship so far as the roads are concerned over which they must travel to their colony. I think it very unfortunate that erroneous statements such as this to which I refer should appear in the press. Settlers who came into Ontario in the old days suffered greater hardships in two miles of road than these Barr colonists will have to undergo in their whole journey.

British Columbia—Anderson and Kennedy lakes—clearing outlets, $2,500.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This is to complete the removal of boulders and other obstructions at the outlets of these lakes.

Mr. CLARKE. How is this work to be done ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. By day labour.

Columbia river, above Revelstoke—removal of obstructions to navigation, $6,000.

Mr. CLARKE. Where is this ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This is to be applied in continuing the work of removing dangerous points of rocks, reefs and boulders from the bed of the river over a distance of fifty miles between Revelstoke and Death's Rapids.

Mr. CLARKE. How is the work to be done, by contract ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. It is to be done under the supervision of the resident engineer for British Columbia.

Mr. CLARKE. Who is he ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Mr. Keefer.

Mr. CLARKE. I would like to draw attention to correspondence which was printed in the 'News Advertiser' on the 30th of November, 1902, respecting the treatment meted out to Mr. D. Sinclair, who had been in charge of some work in British Columbia under the Public Works Department.

Mr. GALLIHER. Will the hon. gentleman (Mr. Clarke) allow me to say that that was not in connection with the works now under discussion. That will come up under an item later on.

Mr. CLARKE. I asked the minister how the work under discussion was to be done, and he informed me it would be under the supervision of the resident engineer, Mr. Keefer. I was going to read for the information of the hon. minister and the committee a letter alleged to have been written by the resident engineer to a gentleman named Sinclair.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I have no objection, but if Mr. Sinclair was doing work in connection with another vote, perhaps it might be more properly discussed under that vote.

Mr. GALLIHER. That was on the Salmon river, which will come up later. Perhaps the hon. gentleman (Mr. Clarke) will take it up when we reach that item.

Mr. CLARKE. Where is the item for work on the Salmon river ?

Mr. GALLIHER. I find that there is no special vote for the Salmon river.

Mr. CLARKE. I shall be delighted to defer to the wishes of the hon. gentleman (Mr. Galliher) if he will tell me under what item I shall bring this matter up.

Mr. GALLIHER. Right here, if the hon. gentleman (Mr. Clarke) wishes it.

Mr. CLARKE. That will be quite satisfactory to me. I bring this forward because I wish to know under what system the public works in British Columbia are being carried on. I cannot vouch for the accuracy of the statements in the article I refer to, but it is only right that I should let the hon. minister and the representative of the district have an opportunity of saying whether these statements are correct or not. This is what is represented to have appeared in the 'News Advertiser' on the 30th of November, 1902 :

KAMLOOPS.

Abuse of a Bad System.

Kamloops, Nov. 27.—Mr. D. Sinclair, who has been in charge of the Dominion improvement work at Salmon Arm, has been dismissed because, as correspondence shows—not having received any such instructions from his chief, Dominion Resident Engineer Keefer—he did not discharge some of the good workers he had employed and substitute for them nominees of a man named McGuire, who acts as secretary of the Liberal Association at Salmon Arm. The letter of dismissal ran thus :

New Westminster, B.C.,
October 3, 1902.

Sir,—I regret that, at the request of Mr. W. A. Galliher, M.P., I have to request that you hand over the charge of the work of improvement of Salmon river to Mr. G. McLeod. I do not know what the trouble is, but my instructions from Ottawa are to defer to the wishes of the local member in the appointment of men on the government work in their respective districts, and in the purchase of supplies. As far as I am aware, your work of last year was well done, so it is not on the score of incompetence that you are superseded.

Yours faithfully,

G. A. KEEFER,
Resident Engineer.

Mr. D. Sinclair, Salmon Arm, B.C.

I would like to ask the minister whether instructions were issued from the department to Mr. Keefer respecting the discharge and employment of men under the department in British Columbia, whether the statement I have quoted is a truthful one and whether instructions were issued to discharge this gentleman who, as Mr. Keefer himself alleges, had done his work faithfully and in a competent manner and to employ only men nominated by the member for the district? Is it the policy of the government and is it the intention of the minister that work in British Columbia or any other province shall be done in this way? I think we should have a statement from the hon. minister on this subject.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This matter has never been brought to my attention. The deputy minister tells me that he knows nothing about it.

Mr. CLARKE. We might have the correspondence brought down.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I think it would be better. I have not seen the article that the hon. gentleman (Mr. Clarke) has quoted, nor do I know anything about it.

Mr. CLARKE. Perhaps the hon. gentleman (Mr. Galliher) who represents the district might explain the matter.

Mr. GALLIHER. As the representative of that district, I know the facts. Also, I am responsible, if any one is responsible, for having Mr. Sinclair discontinued as foreman of that work. The circumstances are these: There was an appropriation in 1901 of $2,500 for clearing out this river. I recommended Mr. Sinclair as foreman for 1901, and he acted as foreman in clearing out that river in 1901. In 1902 there was a further appropriation of $2,500 for clearing that river, and a foreman was appointed for that year. The resident engineer, Mr. Keefer, asked Sinclair to go to work without consulting me—I don't blame him, because I suppose, as there was no kick about Mr. Sinclair's work for the preceding year, he probably thought it would be all right to continue him for the second year. But Mr. Sinclair had no appointment from the government or anybody else for the second year. That letter was written by Mr. Keefer to him. Now, along that river there are a number of settlers, men who are trying to hew out for themselves a home in that valley along the river. It was my desire that the benefit of any moneys expended on that river should be given to these settlers rather than to men whose occupation was loafing around town. I was informed that Mr. Sinclair was taking charge of that work for the second year, that is for 1902, and that he was not carrying out my wishes in that respect. I telegraphed to Mr. Sinclair asking him to follow my instructions, as it was my desire that the settlers who were there as bona fide settlers should receive the benefit of that money, and I drew no distinction between friends and enemies in that respect. Mr. Sinclair treated my telegram very cavalierly, saying he was not taking instructions from Mr. Galliher. The result was that in two days he was not taking instructions from anybody, somebody else was attending to that work.

Some hon. MEMBERS. Hear, hear.

Mr. GALLIHER. I ask any hon. gentleman on that side to say if he would have acted differently.

Mr. BARKER. I would think it was an impertinence to act in that way.

Mr. GALLIHER. Well, your ideas and mine differ. Those are the circumstances of the case, the circumstances under which that man was dismissed, because he was not rightly there for the year 1902. He had taken over that work, he was assuming to act there as foreman without having received an appointment from the department. His appointment was not a continuing appointment while that river required clearing, his appointment was only for the year 1901.

Mr. CLARKE. Might I ask the hon. gentleman when the work commenced in 1902?

Mr. GALLIHER. Some time in the fall.

Mr. CLARKE. The letter is dated 2nd of October, I think.

Mr. GALLIHER. Some time in the fall. I know I went up on the work myself in November, while it was continuing.

Mr. BARKER. Perhaps the hon. gentleman would tell us whom he employed instead of this man, and what he paid him.

Mr. GALLIHER. Instead of this man I recommended that a Mr. McLeod be apointed, and his pay was exactly that of Mr. Sinclair's.

Mr. CLARKE. I would draw the attention of the committee to the fact that we were told by the minister that the work in British Columbia was done under the directions or instructions of the resident engineer, Mr. Keefer. Now I have presented to the House his letter to Mr. Sinclair. Of course, I am bound to accept the statement of the hon. member from Cariboo (Mr. Galliher) but there seems to be discrepancy between the statement of the minister and that made by the hon. gentleman. I was aware of the fact that Mr. Keefer has no authority, unless instructions are received from the department or from the representative of the district, to employ the men. He makes the statement that Mr. Sinclair's work was satisfactorily done in 1901.

Mr. GALLIHER. No dispute about that.

Mr. CLARKE. And that he was dismissed because instructions had been received from the local member to dismiss him. Is that practice going to prevail in the future in British Columbia or elsewhere ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. It has always been the practice, when the chief engineer is asking for the appointment of a foreman, to take the recommendation of the member for the riding. I do not think there is anything wrong in that.

Mr. INGRAM. Did he take his instructions direct from the hon. member ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Certainly not. The hon. member explained that he did not recommend this man, and did not consider that the chief engineer had any right to appoint him.

Mr. REID (Grenville). But the hon. member ordered his dismissal, and he was dismissed within two days.

Mr. GALLIHER. If the hon. member will pardon me—I made a distinction when I said that for 1902 he was not appointed foreman by the department. Therefore he was not dismissed as a matter of fact.

Mr. REID (Grenville). The hon. member made the statement that Mr. Sinclair was on duty, and he recommended Mr. Sinclair as the man in charge.

Mr. GALLIHER. I did not.

Mr. REID (Grenville). He wrote to Mr. Sinclair giving him instructions what he was to do as concerns the engaging of the men, and Mr. Sinclair replied that he was not taking orders from him, and that within two days he was not taking orders from anybody. Therefore, I would understand that he issued instructions that this man must be dismissed, and that the department acted accordingly.

Mr. GALLIHER. When I received word that Mr. Sinclair was not carrying out my wishes in the matter with regard to the employment of settlers on this work, I then took objection to his being foreman for the year 1902. Mr. Sinclair was not appointed foreman by the department for the year 1902 ; and although, as I say, the resident engineer, presuming perhaps that he was right in doing so, presuming that because his work had been satisfactory in the year before, it would be all right to continue him for 1902, asked him to go to work. Yet I did not consider that as an appointment, it was not an appointment by the department.

Mr. CLARKE. The hon. member overlooks the statement made by the minister a few minutes ago. When asked how this work was done in British Columbia, he said it was done under the instructions of the resident engineer, who had control of it.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Under his supervision.

Mr. GALLIHER. A very different thing. The work is done under the supervision of the engineer, that is, the engineer has the right to say how, where and when that work should be done. That is what I understand by the supervision of the engineer. I do not think it is the engineer's duty to appoint the foreman, or to hire the men, either.

Mr. REID (Grenville). I consider this man was an officer of the department and was appointed by the department, since they paid him. Now this man was foreman during 1901, at least, he was paid regularly and monthly by the department. Then he must have been appointed by the department.

Mr. GALLIHER. That is true for 1901.

Mr. REID (Grenville). Then he must have been recognized by the hon. member as the officer in charge.

Mr. GALLIHER. For that year and no other.

Mr. REID (Grenville). The point I am getting at is this : I would like to know from the hon. member the day he was dismissed. The hon. member says the department dismissed him on his telegram, he was dismissed within forty-eight hours.

Mr. GALLIHER. I did not say forty-eight hours.

Mr. REID (Grenville). The hon. member said within two days.

Mr. GALLIHER. I should have said a few days.

Mr. REID (Grenville). I think the minister should tell us how this man was dismissed, because this is a very important matter as regards appointments elsewhere. Here is a man doing his duty, the hon. member admits that he did his work satisfactorily and honestly during 1901 ; and simply because he was not carrying out his instructions, but was carrying out the instructions of the department, he is dismissed promptly by a telegram or a letter from the hon. member. Now the minister should tell us what word he received from the hon. member and why he dismissed this man.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I was not minister when this happened and I have no information from the department regarding it, but if I had been minister and an hon. member from any riding had made the same complaint——

Mr. HUGHES (Victoria). You mean a Liberal member ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Well, a Liberal member, if my hon. friend

(Mr. Hughes, Victoria) prefers it—that a foreman was acting in the same way as this man was doing in employing unworthy and improper men instead of good men I certainly think he would have been asked to give an explanation. In reference to these matters, as far as I am concerned, we always ask for a report from the engineer as to the facts. But on such a request as this I think any hon. gentleman in this Committee will admit that it is worthy of investigation and if the statements are found to be correct, this man ought to be dismissed.

Mr. CLARKE. Probably it is not reasonable to expect from the present hon. Minister of Public Works an explanation respecting these matters. I think the letter which I read to-night was dated before the hon. minister assumed control of the department of Public Works, but we are fortunate in having in the House his predecessor in office and if that hon. gentleman would not be revealing any departmental secrets we would like to know from him if he issued any instructions respecting the dismissal of men in British Columbia.

Hon. Mr. TARTE. So many things have passed through my brain since that time that I cannot really remember the details of that story. All I remember is that I heard that name 'Sinclair' before. There was something that was not agreeable to my hon. friend (Mr. Galliher). The facts I believe are these: Sinclair was appointed in 1901 on the recommendation of my hon. friend. Assuming that he was still persona grata, the resident engineer, Mr. Keefer employed him to continue the work he had been employed upon. Some friction took place. I speak from memory. I asked Mr. Keefer what was the matter and the next thing I heard was that Mr. Keefer had dispensed with the services of Mr. Sinclair, no doubt at the request of my hon. friend here, as he said. The appointment of foremen gives the minister a lot of trouble and I am very glad to have got rid of that.

Mr. HUGHES (Victoria). I think it is due to the Committee that the hon. member (Mr. Galliher), who claims to have been instrumental in dismissing this officer, should give us the reasons why he was not satisfied with his conduct. Who were the men that Sinclair was employing and who were the men the hon. member wished to have him employ?

Hon. Mr. TARTE. If I remember aright, I left the whole matter in the hands of the resident engineer which is the only safe way to do. British Columbia is very far away and unless the minister gives the resident engineer as much of his confidence as is possible, trouble will certainly come. If I had any friendly advice to offer the hon. Minister of Public Works I would urge him to strengthen the hands of the resident engineers as much as he is able to do. Otherwise, improper parties will be forced upon him.

Some hon. MEMBERS. Hear, hear.

Hon. Mr. TARTE. Well, politics are politics, as my hon. friends know. Members of parliament are exposed to a great deal of pressure and to save them from that pressure the best thing to do is to instruct the resident engineers to employ only safe and honourable men. I have always endeavoured to do so and Mr. Keefer has carried out my orders with great care in the past.

Mr. KEMP. He is a very competent officer.

Hon. Mr. TARTE. He is a good officer. He was recommended to me by hon. members on both sides of the House.

Mr. HUGHES (Victoria). I would like to ask the hon. ex-Minister of Public Works (Hon. Mr. Tarte) and also the present hon. Minister of Public Works what the custom is in relation to the treatment of these engineers. For instance, if the hon. member for Yale-Cariboo (Mr. Galliher) wished to dispense with the services of Mr. Sinclair was it not his bounden duty to communicate with the Minister of Public Works and then let the minister issue his instructions to the resident engineer. I understand from a statement made by the hon. member himself that he simply took the bull by the horns and compelled Mr. Keefer to dismiss this man.

Hon. Mr. TARTE. No, not by any means.

Mr. HUGHES (Victoria). If the hon. ex-Minister of Public Works is responsible for this dismissal it is not much wonder that the right hon. Prime Minister asked for his resignation.

Hon. Mr. TARTE. I would not like to discuss that question again now; We will see later on. As to the Sinclair business it did not take place as my hon. friend (Mr. Hughes, Victoria) believes it did. There was a complaint made to me——

Mr. CLARKE. When was that complaint made—recently?

Hon. Mr. TARTE. No, there was a complaint made before he was dismissed. There was a complaint that something was going wrong, that Sinclair did not act agreeably to my hon. friend (Mr. Galliher) in the appointment of men. I simply referred the matter to Mr. Keefer giving him to a very large extent carte blanche, and the next thing I heard was that Mr. Keefer had dispensed with the services of Sinclair and appointed another man in his place.

Mr. CLARKE. Mr. Keefer seems to have placed the responsibility of the dismissal upon the shoulders of the ex-Minister of Public Works. He had no option apparently if the letter I read is correct. I have no doubt it is as Mr. Keefer has just received such a high certificate of character from the former head of the department. Mr. Keefer, in his letter, states that he received instructions from Ottawa that he was to take his instructions from the hon. member for Yale and Cariboo. Did the hon. ex-minister give those instructions to Mr. Keefer ?

Hon. Mr. TARTE. As I remember the facts, speaking of Sinclair alone, I simply referred the complaint of my hon. friend (Mr. Galliher) to Mr. Keefer and the next thing I heard was that the services of Sinclair had been dispensed with. I would be very glad indeed to have the whole of the correspondence brought down but I think it will confirm the facts as I state them now. In other words there was an agreement between my hon. friend and Mr. Keefer as to dispensing with the services of Sinclair. I do not believe that I gave an order to dismiss Sinclair. I simply referred the whole thing to Mr. Keefer.

Mr. HUGHES (Victoria). I have asked for an explanation from the hon. member for the riding as to what persons Sinclair was employing that were objectionable, why they were objectionable and what ones were sought to be employed and why they were sought to be employed.

Mr. GALLIHER. I have already stated that on that river that is being cleared there were a number of new settlers who had gone in who had taken up homesteads and who were hewing out homes for themselves along that river. I thought, as I believe any fair-minded man in this House would think, that where money was expended the benefit of that money should go to those settlers along the river rather than to men in towns who have no landed interest there and who have no homesteads there.

Mr. HUGHES (Victoria). What town ?

Mr. GALLIHER. The town of Salmon Arm.

Mr. HUGHES (Victoria). What is the population of that place ?

Mr. GALLIHER. I could not tell the hon. gentleman. He has travelled through there, I have no doubt. It is a very small town in the west around which you cannot find a few hangers on.

Mr. HUGHES (Victoria). A town of four houses ?

Mr. GALLIHER. My hon. friends need not be so much exercised over this because Sinclair is no friend of theirs. I thought they might be under the impression that some friend of theirs was being very hardly dealt with.

Mr. CLARKE.

Mr. HUGHES (Victoria). No, it is injustice to a poor Liberal.

Hon. Mr. TARTE. The hon. member (Mr. Galliher) recommended him ?

Mr. GALLIHER. I recommended him myself in 1901. The whole crux of the case is right here; that man was not a foreman for 1902.

Mr. CLARKE. The ex-minister suggests that in order to refresh his memory the whole correspondence should be brought down.

Hon. Mr. TARTE. I did not mean that, but if the hon. gentleman wants the correspondence I suppose there is no objection to it, but the item should be carried all the same.

Some resolutions reported.

CORRESPONDENCE ON THE GERMAN TARIFF.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. By command of His Excellency I lay on the Table correspondence in relation to the German tariff.

Mr. SPROULE. I wish to make a remark as to certain correspondence that was read to-day by the Finance Minister, and some of which was three or four years old. It seems extraordinary that this correspondence was not brought down to the House before to-day. I think it was asked for several times, and yet the first we heard of it was when the Minister of Finance read it to-day. I do not think that is treating this House with the courtesy to which it is entitled.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. I have no recollection of the correspondence having been asked for. If any motion were made and passed for an Order of the House for that correspondence, it certainly would have been brought down.

Mr. SPROULE. A motion was not made, but a request was made across the floor of the House.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. It does not always follow as a rule that it is wise to bring down correspondence on matters of that sort. However, I have no recollection of any motion having been passed or of any request even having been made. I expected to be able to lay this correspondence on the Table at 6 o'clock, but I may say that I have sent a copy of it to the leader of the opposition.

Mr. KEMP. In 1901 I asked for this correspondence, and last year the hon. member for Jacques Cartier (Mr. Monk) moved for it in the House and there was quite a debate upon it, but it was refused by the government.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. That is another matter. If a motion was made and refused, of course it was refused for good reasons. It is not always wise to bring down correspondence, especially in matters of an international character; but I think considering all the circumstances, that it is open to debate whether any good purpose would have been served by bringing down the correspondence. The time was spent in an effort to come to an understanding with the German government, but I am not sure that it would have been promoted by bringing down the papers and broadening the scope of the discussion.

Mr. SPROULE. But this correspondence is four years old.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. There is plenty of correspondence over four years old that has never been brought down.

Mr. MORIN. And never will.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. And never will, as my hon. friend says, for a good and sufficient reason, that the public interest would not be advanced by bringing it down.

Mr. SPROULE. I do not think that reason could be advanced in this case. The correspondence was read to-day, and there is no justifiable reason why it should not have been placed before the House. It all stopped years ago.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. My hon. friend is mistaken in saying that it stopped years ago. He will see from the papers which I have laid on the Table that it extended down to a very recent date. It began years ago, but did not stop years ago.

On motion of the Minister of Finance, House adjourned at 10.50 p.m.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.

FRIDAY, April 17, 1903.

The SPEAKER took the Chair at Three o'clock.

OFFICIAL REPORT OF DEBATES.

Mr. J. A. C. MADORE (Hochelaga). (Translation). I present the third report of the Select Standing Committee appointed to supervise the Official Report of the Debates of the House during the present session, which is as follows :—

Your committee recommend that the sum of $250, being the equivalent of a gratuity of two months' salary, usually allowed to widows of officials under the Civil Service Act, shall be paid to the widow of the late N. H. Beaulieu, who, during his life-time, was a member of the staff of translators of the Official Report of the Debates.

FIRST READINGS.

Bill (No. 110) respecting the Canadian Northern Railway Company.—Mr. Davis.

Bill (No. 111) respecting the Edmonton, Yukon and Pacific Railway Company.—Mr. Oliver—by Mr. McCreary.

Bill (No. 112) to incorporate the Canada Industrials Corporation (Limited).—Mr. McCarthy—by Mr. Thompson (Haldimand).

Bill (No. 113) to incorporate the Sault St. Louis Light and Power Company.—Mr. Campbell.

Bill (No. 114) respecting the Nipissing and James Bay Railway Company.—Mr. McCool—by Mr. Erb.

WAYS AND MEANS—THE BUDGET.

The House resumed adjourned debate on the proposed motion of the Hon. Mr. Fielding :

That Mr. Speaker do now leave the Chair for the House to go into Committee to consider of the Ways and Means for raising the Supply to be granted to His Majesty.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN (Halifax). Mr. Speaker, I must in the first place congratulate my hon. friend the Minister of Finance (Hon. Mr. Fielding) on the very excellent speech from his standpoint which he delivered yesterday. That the hon. gentleman always makes the best of the situation we will all acknowledge, and while yesterday he had even a larger number than usual of very sharp corners to turn, he on the whole accomplished it as well as could be expected. And, whenever he did upset he gathered himself up quickly again and he went on in as smiling a way as ever. Now, while the speech was received by the House in a very appreciative and attentive manner, I was astonished to see what a singularly soporific effect so good a speech had on some of his colleagues. I noticed that there was not the attention given to it by some of the members of the cabinet which we might have reasonably expected. In fact, I do not think that I have ever before witnessed in this House a budget speech of interest delivered while four of the Finance Minister's colleagues were sound asleep; and one of them enjoyed it so much that he woke up at six o'clock to protest against the debate being adjourned.

Some hon. MEMBERS. Hear, hear.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). My hon. friend the Finance Minister congratulates the country upon its prosperity. We, on this side of the House, shall not be behind hand in congratulating the country upon the prosperous conditions at present existing, and in that respect we offer a somewhat different spectacle to that which was presented in days past, by the Liberals when in opposition, some of whom were good enough to offer not only to this country but to the mother country a style of literature which was found very useful indeed by American immigration agents.

Some hon. MEMBERS. Hear, hear.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). The Minister of Finance did not quite so strenuously as on some past occasions argue that our prosperity is due to the government, he treats of that phase in very moderate terms indeed. In fact, the terms of his speech in that regard are in very strong contrast to a recent deliverance of the Minister of Marine (Hon. Mr. Préfontaine) in Montreal in which he remarked that the prosperity of Canada was entirely due to the Fielding tariff. Coming from a gentleman of the position of the Minister of Marine and Fisheries, that was hardly a worthy statement —it partakes more of the character of a patent medicine advertisement than of the utterance which we might hope to hear from a gentleman occupying the high position of head of one of the departments of state in Canada. It is perfectly evident that in the view of the Minister of Marine, the right hon. Mr. Chamberlain has taken an entirely erroneous view of the condition of affairs in Canada. At the recent colonial conference Mr. Chamberlain referring to the prosperity of Canada and the increase of Canada's trade from 1896 to 1902 spoke in this way :

> The total imports of Canada increased in that period 14,500,000 pounds sterling, or at the rate of 62 per cent. That shows the enormous increased prosperity in the Dominion ; it shows how the energy of its inhabitants is developing its trade.

And when you come to think of it, I suppose some credit is due to the business capacity and energy of the people of this country. For my part I have never been able to find out the exact nature of the changes in the tariff of 1897 to which the prosperity of Canada during the past few years has been due. I have inquired as to that across the floor of the House on a great many occasions and I have never got a definite or satisfactory reply. I believe that the people of Canada are entitled to some of the credit for the increased trade and the increased prosperity of this country during the past six years, although it is quite true that speakers on the other side of the House, both in this Chamber and throughout the country affect to believe in an entirely different reason for our prosperity. If the government does not adopt my view on this question; if their friends do not adopt that view; if they do not agree with the hon. member for North Norfolk (Mr. Charlton) who said that the prosperity of Canada was due to causes beyond the control of any government; if they do not believe in that, then Sir, they are altogether too modest, because while they have increased the trade of Canada by $184,000,000 since 1896, look what the Fielding tariff has done for the world. The following table shows how the trade of other countries has increased during the same period.

	Increase.
1896 to 1902, Great Britain	$800,000,000
1896 to 1902, United States	700,000,000
1896 to 1900, New South Wales	60,000,000
1896 to 1900, Victoria	35,000,000
1896 to 1900, New Zealand	35,000,000
1896 to 1900, Australian Commonwealth	145,000,000
1896 to 1900, West Australia	20,000,000
1896 to 1900, Argentine	40,000,000
1896 to 1900, Chili	134,680,000
1896 to 1900, France	680,000,000
1896 to 1901, Germany	552,000,000
1896 to 1901, Mexico	40,000,000
1896 to 1902, Canada	184,885,084

I do not suppose, speaking in sober reality, that any of these gentlemen across the floor claim that the increases in these different countries are due to the tariff brought down in 1897 by the Hon. Mr. Fielding. But may it not be truly claimed with regard to these different countries, that the advent of the Canadian Liberals to power in 1896 is as much responsible for the improved condition of trade in the whole civilized world as for the prosperous condition which fortunately has prevailed in Canada from 1896 to 1902.

Let me make one more observation to my hon. friend the Finance Minister. He seems to take it for granted that as the imports to this country have increased to an enormous extent since 1896, we are to find in that a necessary indication of prosperity. Sir, I take issue with my hon. friend on that point. I say that increased imports may accompany but do not necessarily indicate increased prosperity. Look at the condition of affairs in Canada to-day. We produce from $750,000,000 to $800,000,000 of manufactured goods, counting everything as a manufacture in the production of which motive power is employed. The long delayed census returns have not yet furnished us with a statement of the annual value of our agricultural products. If our home production should be decreased by $50,000,000 in any year, that might result in increasing our importations by twenty-five, thirty or forty million dollars. To this extent the manufactures and products which are now furnished by the Canadian people would be brought in from foreign countries. Would not my hon. friend the Minister of Finance stand up in the House and point to the increased revenue resulting from that condition of things and say : Look, the trade of Canada has increased, not $184,000,000, but $225,000,000, and our surplus is not $13,000,000, but $25,000,000. And yet, is there any hon. gentleman in this House who would say that such a statement would indicate a healthy condition of affairs in this country ?

My hon. friend has gone very fully into what I may call the business returns of this country, and I will endeavour, in my figures I give to the House, not to duplicate those which he has furnished. I have some documents to present in a tabulated form, and, with the permission of the House, I will follow the example of my hon. friend the Minister of Finance, and hand them to the reporters without reading them in full.

In the good old days, when my hon. friend the Minister of Trade and Commerce (Hon. Sir Richard Cartwright) led the attack on the fiscal policy of the government of the day, there were great laments over the burden of taxation imposed upon the people of this country. My hon. friend the Minister of Trade and Commerce was very warm indeed on that point ; he was more than warm, Mr. Speaker, he was almost tearful when he spoke of the sorrows of the farmers and the burden of taxation laid upon them by an extravagant and corrupt government. I will present to the House a comparison of the taxation during the past six years with that of the previous six years under Conservative administration ; because I think it is right, when statements of large trade and abundant revenues are laid before the House, that we in the opposition should show the reverse side of the shield.

TOTAL RECEIPTS FROM TAXES.

1891	$30,314,151	1897	$28,648,626
1892	28,446,157	1898	29,576,456
1893	29,321,367	1899	34,958,069
1894	27,579,203	1900	38,242,223
1895	25,446,199	1901	38,743,550
1896	27,759,285	1902	43,389,112
	$168,866,362		$213,558,036

In 1891 taxation under Conservative government was	$30,314,151
In 1896 taxation under Conservative government was	27,759,285
Decrease under Conservative government	2,554,866
In 1902 taxation under Liberal government was	$43,389,112
In 1896 taxation under Conservative government was	27,759,285
Increased taxation under Liberal government	$15,629,827
Total taxes collected from 1897 to 1902 inclusive under Liberal government	$213,558,036
Total taxes collected from 1891 to 1896 inclusive under Conservative government	168,866,362
Increased taxation in six years of Liberal government	$44,691,674
Average annual taxation during six years of present Liberal government	$35,593,006
Average annual taxation during last six years of Conservative government	28,144,394
Average annual increase under Liberal government	$7,448,612

I might point out to my hon. friend the Minister of Trade and Commerce, as a culmination of this statement, that according to the estimate of the hon. Minister of Finance we shall have imposed on the people of Canada during the present year no less than $47,520,160 of taxation. My hon. friend the Minister of Trade and Commerce when he contemplates these figures, should really, for very decency's sake, pump up a few of the briny tears which he shed in the old days.

A few years ago the hon. gentleman contributed a very strong article to the 'North American Review' on the subject of protection and free trade, in which he said :

> In 1878, the actual taxation of Canada was $17,841,938, though, as there was a deficit in that year, the necessary taxation might be placed at $19,000,000. In 1889 the actual taxation was $30,613,522, being an increase of $11,613,522.

Let us pursue the comparison. In 1896 the actual taxation was $27,759,285, in 1902 it was $43,389,112 ; being an increase of $15,629,827, or considerably more than fifty per cent of an increase. What was the comment of the hon. gentleman when he wrote this article on the melancholy condition of affairs in 1889 :

> Comment is hardly necessary, nor, indeed, does space permit me to point out the enormous mischiefs which result in a young and poor country from absorbing so large a proportion of the earnings of the people, in defraying the charges of the federal government, as is now being taken in Canada.

Well, if no comment was needed then, is it not needed now, upon an increase in taxation of between $15,000,000 and $16,000,000 in six years ? I trust that when the hon. gentleman comes to address the House on this occasion he will give his views on the question of taxation, and explain wherein they differ from the views he held at the time he wrote this article. I referred to this same article last year or the year before, but my right hon. friend was not good enough to make any allusion to it, in the speech he then addressed to the House. I thought I might possibly have been mistaken in the identity of the gentleman who wrote the article. Although it purported to have been written by one Sir Richard John Cartwright, it might possibly have been some other gentleman than my right hon. friend who occupies the position of Minister of Trade and Commerce.

There is another consideration which I would like to present to the House. If, as members of the government claim, the present tariff is a revenue tariff, why is the taxation continued at so abnormal a figure? Why does the government take from the people, for example, $1,000,000 more in excise duties on tobacco and $500,000 more in customs duties on sugar than would have been taken under the tariff before 1896? And why does the Minister of Finance retain the duty on breadstuffs which he regarded as so unjust and oppressive that while premier of Nova Scotia he moved the following resolution with regard to it:

> That while it is as a rule inexpedient to deal with Dominion questions in this House, in view of the obnoxious character of the duty on breadstuffs, the House must firmly protest against the imposition of such duties.

And the same view was entertained by the Minister of Trade and Commerce who, referring to Sir Leonard Tilley's surplus in 1882, said:

> I asked how it was got. $1,100,000 was derived from two of the most odious and oppressive taxes which were ever imposed in any civilized country before, under similar circumstances at least, the taxes on breadstuffs and fuel. If he really wants to relieve the people, let him remove the taxes on breadstuffs and coal.

My hon. friend the Minister of Trade and Commerce sits unmoved in his chair while a surplus of $13,000,000 is announced in this House, and forgets the commiseration he expressed some years ago for the condition of the people of this country labouring under two of the most odious and oppressive taxes which were ever imposed in any civilized country.

Now, Mr. Speaker, the revenues have indeed been abundant during the past six years. There has been an increase of more than $60,000,000 over those of the previous six years, but let my hon. friend the Minister of Finance bear in mind that if the duties on tobacco, sugar, coal and breadstuffs had been removed, the condition of affairs would be very different. If my hon. friend had the courage to carry out his financial convictions, his boasted surplus would not exist by a good many millions. In making this point I do not wish to be understood as advocating the removal of the duties on these articles, but as merely contrasting the present position taken by the Minister of Finance with the former professions of himself and colleagues and asking them at present what they have to say about those promises and professions made in days gone by. I think I am warranted in putting that question by the language used by my hon. friend the Minister of Finance. I have here a statement of his views with regard to the pledges and promises of public men, which I think will commend itself to the judgment of the House:

> If a public man can hold one set of principles out of office and another set in office, responsible government is a farce.
>
> You have the right to hold the politician to his pledge, just as much as you would the man of business. The man who obtains goods from you under false pretenses is a cheat and swindler. What should you call the men who obtain votes by means of pledges which they never intended to keep? I say again, if you are prepared to overlook these things then you have no right to ask for fidelity from any man who hereafter represents you.

I credit these words to my hon. friend the Minister of Finance. I am told that he uttered them in days gone by. But whether he uttered them or not, I do not think he will challenge their soundness, and I ask him to apply those words to the record of himself and his political friends during the past six years as contrasted with the promises and professions which they held out to the people during the eighteen years they were in opposition.

The total expenditure of the country is a matter about which, standing on this side of the House, I think I should have a word to say. The total expenditure during the six years, beginning with 1891 and ending with 1896, reached the sum of $251,682,027. During the six years beginning with 1897 and ending with 1902, it amounted to $314,520,785, or an increase during that period of no less than $62,838,758 over the previous six years.

The figures are as follows:

TOTAL EXPENDITURE.

1891	$ 40,973,208	1897	$ 42,972,756
1892	42,272,136	1898	45,334,281
1893	40,853,728	1899	51,542,635
1894	43,009,234	1900	52,717,467
1895	42,872,338	1901	57,982,866
1896	41,702,383	1902	63,970,780
	$251,682,027		$314,520,785

The expenditure during the past year amounted to $63,970,780. During the last year of the late administration, 1896, it was $41,702,363, showing an increase in 1902 over 1896—the last year of the present administration over the last year of Conservative administration—of $22,268,397.

The average annual expenditure of the present Liberal government during the past six years, amounted to $52,420,131. Compare this with the average annual expenditure of the previous Conservative government, which amounted to $41,947,005, and you have an average annual increase under Liberal administration of no less than $10,493,126.

When I presented similar figures to this House last year the right hon. Minister of Trade and Commerce was shocked and astonished that any one should so endeavour to mislead the House as to contrast the total expenditures during these two periods. Let me give my right hon. friend the Minister of Trade and Commerce an authority which I am sure he will not call in question, an authority which I am sure he respects more highly than any I could cite. Let me cite to him his own authority, as contained in an article published by him in the 'North American Review' some years ago. In that article he made the following contrast :

In 1845 the population of the United States was (by estimate).. 20,000,000
The taxes of the United States were..$27,531,630
The total expenditure was.. 22,935,828

Then by way of comparison, to show how Canada was going to ruin, as compared to the United States, he went on as follows :

In 1889 the population of Canada was perhaps.. 4,800,000
The taxes of Canada were.. .. .. ..$30,613,522
The total expenditure was 36,917,854

And he made a pitiful comparison between the position of Canada and that of the United States, based on that standpoint. Is it not fair, taking the right hon. gentleman on his own statement, to make a similar comparison to-day. Let us see how such a comparison will work out :

In 1845 the population of the United States was (by estimate).. 20,000,000
The taxes of the United States were..$27,531,630
The total expenditure was.. 22,935,828
In 1902 the population of Canada was (so far as we can ascertain from the census).. 5,410,000
The taxes of Canada were.. .. .. ..$43,389,112
The total expenditure was.. 63,970,780

I could not get my right hon. friend the Minister of Trade and Commerce to pay the slightest attention to that celebrated article when he addressed the House two years ago. Might I not ask from the hon. gentleman the favour of passing reference to that published statement of his. Might I not ask him to make a comparison between the figures of our present exependiture and that which he denounced in those days, and especially draw attention to the fact that he attributed all the wretchedness and misery and maladministration in Canada to what do you think. To the fact that in Canada at that day protection existed. Of course we know that, according to the right hon. gentleman's view, no protection exists in the present tariff, and I think we are entitled to some other argument from the right hon. gentleman to show that that which was food for comment and criticism so severe in days gone by, is now a matter of indifference to the hon. gentleman, even though it is exaggerated a hundred fold.

Let me now, Mr. Speaker, deal with the expenditure on a per capita basis. I am not objecting to fair and even liberal expenditure. We have a young and growing country, which needs to be developed, but I must say that a good deal of public money in this country is not used for very wise purposes and not expended in a very statesmanlike way. In making the comparisons which I do to-day, I wish to be understood as not carping at fair and reasonable expenditure, because I am always willing and ready to support the government in its expenditures, so long as they are made on some systematic plan and for some wise purpose, in the true interests of our country. But it is only right that I should bring to the attention of the country, in these times of growing trade, increasing revenues and prosperity, the fact that our expenditure is also increasing by leaps and bounds ; and we may well bear in mind the words which my hon. friend the Minister of Finance, uttered only two or three sessions ago, that we cannot always expect to have these prosperous times, but must look for lean years in the future, years when the public revenue will not be by any means abundant. Now, the per capita expenditure, computed from the year 1896 to the present time, shows as follows. And I may say in passing, that the estimate of population for the several years has been based upon a comparison of the census of 1891 with the census of 1901, by methods which, I think, give fair and accurate results :

PER CAPITA EXPENDITURE.

Year.	Population.	Expenditure.	Per Capita.
1896..	5,070,000	$41,702,383	$ 8 22
1897..	5,120,000	42,972,756	8 39
1898..	5,175,000	45,334,281	8 76
1899..	5,230,000	51,542,635	9 85
1900..	5,285,000	52,717,467	9 98
1901..	5,340,000	57,982,866	10 88
1902..	5,410,000	63,970,780	11 82

The result of this is that, under the Liberal administration, our expenditure has increased about 53 per cent, our per capita expenditure, about 44 per cent and our population about 6½ per cent. What a text this would have been for my right hon. friend the Minister of Trade and Commerce (Rt. Hon. Sir Richard Cartwright). How he could deal with this subject now if he were inspired with the same sentiments he expressed so vigorously from 1878 to 1896. I have to express again the regret to which I have given voice before, that we could not have the right hon. Minister of Trade and Commerce come across the floor—just temporarily, of course, just for a couple of hours—and deal with the circumstances which face us to-day as he used to do in other times.

It will not be out of place for me to do as I have done before and to give to the House and the country an analysis of the increase of the expenditure of the various departments of the government from 1896 up to the present time. In every instance we find a substantial increase, and, in some cases at least, we find an increase, which I think, should give to some of us, and especially to economists like the right hon. Minister of Trade and Commerce, food for very much thought :

COMPARATIVE STATEMENT OF EXPENDITURE ON ACCOUNT OF CONSOLIDATED FUND FOR 1896 AND 1902 RESPECTIVELY, WITH INCREASES.

——	1896.	1902.	Increase.
Interest on debt	$10,502 430	$10,975,935	$ 473,505
Administration of Justice	758,270	943,230	184,960
Civil Government	1,396,628	1,497,369	100,741
Fisheries	427,251	548,895	121,644
Geological Survey	134,368	224,015	89,647
Immigration	120,199	494,842	374,643
Quarantine	95,247	264,738	169,491
Indians	880,408	1,057,131	176,723
Insurance superintendence	10,039	13,500	3,461
Lighthouse and coast service	466,058	696,311	230,253
Mail subsidies and steamship subventions	534,917	624,956	90,039
Militia and Defence	1,136,714	2,060,979	924,265
Miscellaneous	172,364	1,146,121	973,757
Mounted Police	533,014	948,216	415,202
N.W.T. government	330,703	491,924	161,221
Ocean and river service	181,452	496,191	314,739
Penitentiaries	385,228	438,073	52,845
Police	22,703	60,241	37,538
Public Works	1,299,796	4,221,294	2,921,498
Railways and Canals	126,444	272,296	145,852
Superannuation	311,232	338,764	27,532
CHARGEABLE TO COLLECTION.
Customs	896,332	1,176,024	279,692
Dominion lands	119,908	158,844	38,936
Inspection of staples	2,577	13,510	10,933
Post Office	3,665,011	4,023,637	358,626
Public Works	159,460	498,513	339,053
Railways and Canals	3,826,226	6,508,477	2,682.251
Weights and measures, gas, &c	97,295	109,672	12,377
CHARGEABLE TO CAPITAL.
Dominion lands	82,184	370,838	288,654
Intercolonial railway	260,396	4,626,841	4,366,445
Public Works	114,826	2,096,334	1,981,508
Public buildings, Ottawa	Nil.	93,790	93,790
Prince Edward Island railway	Nil.	475,998	475,998

I do not pretend for a moment that these increases are all unjustifiable. On the contrary, I regard some of them at least as entirely justifiable; indeed I should be glad to see the increase larger in some cases. I should be glad to see a larger increase for the lighthouse and coast service, for I think that if there is a department of the public service which has been neglected more than another during the past six years it is this one. I should be glad also to see a greater increase in the expenditure for the government of the North-west Territories. Judging by the accounts I heard of the inadequacy of the public revenues for the purposes of the country during my recent trip to the west, I think that the grant that is made for this service might very well have been supplemented. But I bring this table before the House because I think it is right that the House and the country should know to what extent the various departments of the public service have increased the public expenditure during these growing times.

As to the public debt, my hon. friend the Minister of Finance has dealt with that very fully in his speech. It is quite true that he shows a very good record so far as reduction of debt is concerned, if we are to conclude that his sentiments of fifteen or twenty years ago are absolutely wrong, and the sentiments he expressed only yesterday are absolutely right. But, if any importance is to be attached to what he said about surpluses in the old days, he cannot congratulate himself as much as he felt at liberty to do on the handling of the public debt by the present government. Considering the marvellous prosperity of the country, and of the whole world in which Canada has fortunately participated, an examination of the growth of our net debt does not present any gratifying features. The increase of the debt for the last twelve years is shown by the following figures :

NET DEBT.

1891..	$237,809,031	1897..	$261,538,596
1892..	241,131,434	1898..	263,956,399
1893..	241,681,040	1899..	266,273,447
1894..	246,183,029	1900..	265,493,807
1895..	253,074,927	1901..	268,480,000
1896..	258,497,433	1902..	271,829,090

Net debt, 1902.. .. .. $271,829,090
" 1896.. 258,497,433

Increase in net debt under Liberal rule.. .. .. $ 13,331,557

In connection with this, it should be pointed out that the total revenue of the country from 1891 to 1896 was $220,681,395, and from 1897 to 1902 it was $286,719,524, an increase of more than $66,000,000. The details for the several years are as follows :

TOTAL REVENUE.

1891..	$ 38,579,311	1897..	$ 37,829,778
1892..	36,921,872	1898..	40,556,510
1893..	38,208,609	1899..	46,743,103
1894..	36,374,883	1900..	51,031,467
1895..	33,978,129	1901..	52,516,333
1896..	36,618,591	1902..	58,042,333
	$220,681,395		$286,719,524

Average revenue for 6 years, 1897-02.. $47,786,587
" " " 1891-96.. 36,780,233

Average annual increase during last 6 years.. .. .. $11,006,354
Revenue last year Liberal government (1902).. .. .. $58,052,333
Revenue last year Conservative government (1896).. 36,618,591

$21,433,742

It will thus be seen, Mr. Speaker, that during all these years of the present administration there has been an enormous increase in revenue. My hon. friend the Minister of Finance, in making his comparison in this regard, will bear in mind that if the Conservative government from 1891 to 1896 had had the same revenue which the hon. gentleman has enjoyed from 1897 to 1902, the public debt of this country could have been decreased by no less an amount than $45,000,000. My hon. friend thinks he is able to congratulate himself because, up to the end of last year, it was increased $13,000,000, and by means of the so-called surplus of the present year he will decrease it, I believe, by about $5,000,000, leaving a net increase of some $8,000,000.

Now, my hon. friend the Minister of Finance was, as I said, particularly jubilant over the fact that he had a surplus, and I have no doubt that my right hon. friend the Minister of Trade and Commerce shares that jubilation to the greatest possible extent. Would it be out of place, Mr. Speaker, for me to call to the attention of this hon. gentleman some utterances of by-gone days that seem to have in them possibly a spark of good sense, and to invite the Minister of Trade and Commerce, when he comes to address the House, to tell us what he thinks of these utterances of the old days, and whether he is prepared to take the same view which he held from 1876 to 1896. I am afraid that my right hon. friend the Minister of Trade and Commerce, in the touching words of the old ballad, will have to say :

> I cannot sing the old songs I sang long years ago.

Now, the editorial utterances of my hon. friend the Minister of Finance, who was almost as good an editor as he is a Minister of Finance, are also worthy of attention. In the columns of the Morning 'Chronicle' some years ago he made this criticism of a Conservative administration :

> If these surpluses were created by the government in some magic way there may be in them a cause for thankfulness to Sir John Macdonald and his followers, but when it is considered that every dollar of the surplus is money taken out of the pockets of the people without a shadow of an excuse, money not required even by the reckless expenditure of the government, there is not much cause for rejoicing.

Now, would my right hon. friend the Minister of Trade and Commerce do his best to digest the utterances of his colleague, and let us know, when he comes to address the House, what he really thinks of the views which were then entertained. But that is not all. My hon. friend the Minister of Finance broke out in the following year, when there happened to be another surplus, and this is the way in which he bewailed the unhappy lot of a country that was afflicted with a surplus :

> That millions of dollars should be unnecessarily taken yearly from the consuming classes of the country, and this without being absolutely necessary, is a cardinal principle of the Finance Minister, to which even his best friends do not unreservedly assent.
>
> They see that a surplus of millions at the capital is just so much money withdrawn from the trade of the country. How long can the Dominion stand the drain ? Certainly not many years longer.

There were no cheers, of course, because it was a newspaper article, but we can well understand how the cheers resounded, we can even remember how the cheers resounded, when sentiments of this kind were heard on every public platform of the country. But, Mr. Speaker, let me not neglect my right hon. friend the Minister of Trade and Commerce, because I am always pleased when I quote any utterance of his; he has so terse and vigorous a way of expressing himself that it is really delightful to hear him, because he puts in half a dozen words these matters more forcibly and more eloquently than most of us could do by speaking fifteen minutes. This is the way the right hon. gentleman expressed himself in the old days :

> Taxation is an evil that nothing but the requirements of government can justify.

And the requirements of government this year do not justify the present taxation by some $12,000,000 or $13,00,000. Yet my right hon. friend the Minister of Trade and Commerce seems to be pleased with the announcement of his colleague. I do not know how he will look upon it when he comes to address the House on the subject. But it seems to me, Mr. Speaker, that there is considerable force in the views of the Minister of Finance, which I have read to the House, as well as in the very terse statement which the right hon. gentleman the Minister of Trade and Commerce gave to the House and to the country years ago, in the single sentence I have read from his utterances. Is there not some attraction to a certain class of people in this country when a surplus of $12,000,000 or $13,000,000 is announced ? There are people in this country as well as in every other, whose chief concern about the public revenue is to appropriate some of it to their own use under the guise of a parlamentary vote. We had an instance of that not many years ago. The acting Minister of Public Works, in the absence of my hon. friend the member for St. Mary's (Hon. Mr. Tarte) in Paris, sent a circular around the country to his political supporters urging them to put in their demands for public work in their various localities, because it was apprehended that a general election might at no distant date be upon the country. I believe it had wonderful results. The announcement of this surplus by my hon. friend the Minister of Finance partakes of somewhat of the same character. Is it not good sense after all to look at the situation somewhat in the light in which it was presented to the country so forcibly by my hon. friend the Minister of Finance and my right hon. friend the Minister of Trade and Commerce, and to ask ourselves whether it is wise, to so arrange our fiscal system that we shall come down to the House of Commons and say to the people of the country : Look, here are $12,000,000 or $13,000,000 that the government do not really require, and all you who have any demands upon the government, all you who have been talking about public works which are not in the public interest but are in some private interest, come forward now, because the government has this money on hand, and it is a good time to put in your applications, and they will receive all possible attention.

Now, Mr. Speaker, I wish to turn to the trade returns which have been adverted to by the Minister of Finance, and to say that there is one matter which I think he might very well have referred to in his speech, which perhaps by accident he omitted, and that is the fact that our imports from the United Kingdom make a considerably better showing this year than they did last year. My hon. friend did not refer to that. I call attention to it, because I think that last year I called the attention of the House and the country to an opposite condition of affairs. Trade with the mother country does look better this year, I think it has increased about $6,000,000. But I wish to draw attention at the same time to the condition, as far as trade relations are concerned, which prevails between this country and the United Kingdom as compared with that which prevails between this country and the United States. Taking the imports for home consumption, and omitting coin and bullion, you find the position of affairs in 1902 to be as follows : Our imports from the United States were $114,744,696, our exports to the United States were $47,829,730, leaving a balance in favour of the United States as against Canada of $66,914,966. Taking the United Kingdom we find precisely the opposite condition of affairs. The imports from Great Britain in 1902 were $49,022,726, exports to Great Britain $117,381,221, leaving a balance in favour of Canada as against the United Kingdom of no less than $68,285,495.

IMPORTS—HOME CONSUMPTION.

(Less Coin and Bullion).

1902.

Imports from United States..	$114,744,696
Exports to United States*..	47,829,730
	$66,914,966
Imports from Great Britain..	$ 49,022,726
Exports to Great Britain*....	117,381,221
	$68,285,495

* Less gold-bearing quartz, silver concentrates, coin and bullion.

Now, this is not perhaps a very happy condition of affairs. I do not say that it is a condition of affairs which can be remedied altogether by the efforts of any government, but I do say that, adopting the argument of the right hon. Minister of Trade and Commerce (Sir Richard Cartwright) it is a 'genuine practical discrimination' against Great Britain. Thus, to show the terse way he has of putting things, I will read what that hon. gentleman said in 1897.

> These returns show that, in the very last year of their term of office, we exported to England, apparently, $66,000,000 worth of our products, we exported to the United States, $44,000,000, we bought from England $32,000,000 and from the United States $58,000,000 worth. There, if you will, is a genuine practical discrimination to an enormous extent, against England and in favour of the United States, under the policy of hon. gentlemen opposite.

Does not the right hon. gentleman see that the discrimination is increased one hundred per cent to-day ? What has he to say about it? Why does he not remedy it? If this was a ground of criticism upon the policy of the late government what is he doing as Minister of Trade and Commerce that he does not endeavour to alleviate this condition? Let us read his story of 1897 as applied to the conditions of to-day.

These returns show that in the year 1902, we exported to England, apparently $109,347,345 worth of our products, we exported to the United States $66,567,784, we bought from England $49,022,726, and from the United States, $114,744,696 worth. There, if you will, is a genuine practical discrimination to an enormous extent, against England and in favour of the United States, under the policy of hon. gentlemen opposite.

Compare our imports from Great Britain and the United States and other countries from 1896 to the present time and observe and consider the result, in view of the fact that when they came into office they apparently wished the country to understand that they had given up their old theory of preferring the American dollar to the British shilling. They became very much attached to the interests of the mother country, they became very desirous of promoting our trade with the mother country and yet the condition of affairs prevails in the present year of which I have spoken. I will point out to the House by means of a table how it has continually progressed in that direction from 1896 up to the present time. Now, the table which I propose to give to the House shows the imports, including coin and bullion, for home consumption from the United States and Great Britain and from other countries from 1896 to the present time, and I distinguish therein between free and dutiable goods. I shall not read all the details, but I will avail myself of the same privilege that I requested before and ask to have this statement placed on record in 'Hansard.'

IMPORTS HOME CONSUMPTION, INCLUDING COIN AND BULLION.

FROM THE UNITED STATES.

—	1896.	1897.	1898.	1899.	1900.	1901.	1902.	Percentage of increase 1902 over 1896.
	$	$	$	$	$	$	$
Dutiable	29,101,646	30,482,509	38,063,960	44,471,824	53,897,561	53,600,278	60,181,808
Free	29,472,378	31,166,532	40,641,630	48,535,342	55,946,817	56,884,730	60,625,242
	58,574,024	61,649,041	78,705,590	93,007,166	109,844,378	110,485,008	120,807,050	106·25 p.c.

FROM GREAT BRITAIN.

Dutiable	24,366,179	20,217,422	22,556,479	27,521,508	31,561,756	31,701,654	35,062,564
Free	8,613,563	9,194,766	9,944,438	9,538,615	13,237,974	11,316,510	14,151,198
	32,979,742	29,412,188	32,500,917	37,060,123	44,789,730	43,018,164	49,213,762	49·22 p.c.

OTHER COUNTRIES.

Dutiable	13,771,934	15,520,834	14,004,649	17,439,840	18,887,478	20,667,824	23,413,124
Free	15,261,780	4,711,958	5,486,850	6,544,464	7,282,730	7,066,992	9,357,659
	19,033,714	20,232,792	19,491,499	23,894,304	26,170,208	27,734,816	32,770,783	70·59 p.c.

We see that the imports from the United States increased over one hundred and six per cent, from other countries nearly seventy-one per cent, and from Great Britain only a little over forty-nine per cent. I would gather from this that the Right Hon. Minfact that when they came into office that the alleged efforts of this government to promote trade between Canada and the mother country as compared with trade between Canada and other countries has not been very successful, to say the least.

There is another aspect of the case which might be put before the country. From 1867 to 1902 our average importation from Great Britain, excluding coin and bullion, was $42,549,216, in 1902 our importation was $49,022,726, or an increase of $6,473,510 over the average. During the same period our average importation from the United States was $51,608,862, and in 1902 it was $114,744,696, or an increase of $63,135,834 over the average. What is the cause of the enormous increase in our trade with the United States and the comparatively small increase in our trade with the mother country? It may be and very likely is due to some causes over which the government cannot possibly exercise any control. We know that we are in close proximity to the United States and merchants can get goods more quickly from the United States than they can from the mother country. Then again, the American manufacturer perhaps caters a little more to the requirements of the Canadian market than the British manufacturer, but after all, you will observe that comparing the rates of duties, even taking into consideration the preference which prevails, as between ourselves and the mother country, and as between ourselves and the United States, the United States have practically the same rates as Great Britain, if you only take into consideration dutiable goods, and taking into consideration all classes of goods they have very much the advantage indeed. The rates on goods imported from Great Britain are: dutiable 24·03 per cent, dutiable and free 17·18 per cent; from the United States, dutiable 25·18, dutiable and free 13·20 per cent, or 4 per cent less than the average rate dutiable and free as applied to goods from the mother country; from all other countries, dutiable 27·26, dutiable and free 16·46 per cent.

	Great Britain.	United States.	All Countries.
Dutiable.. ..	24·03	25·18	27·26
Dutiable and free..	17·18	13·20	16·46

Thus, taking the average rate on dutiable and free goods, we see that Great Britain, even taking into consideration the preference, pays a higher rate than any other country and a very considerably higher rate than the United States. The hon. member for North Norfolk (Mr. Charlton) was interrogated about this condition of affairs in a reciprocity convention in the United States, I think, two years ago and he made the following very straightforward answer :

> The Canadian tariff against England has a rebate of 33⅓ per cent, but the goods imported from the two countries are dissimilar and the rates of duty on the goods from England happen to be higher than the rates of duty on the class of goods coming from the United States, and the net result, the total duty, is almost the same.

I was somewhat amused at my hon. friend's use of the word 'happen' in that regard. I think we all pretty well know what was done ; goods coming to us from the mother country had the duty increased upon them in 1897, and then the merchants of the mother country were presented with a preference which left the rate of duty practically the same as that which is paid on the imports from the United States, even if you take into consideration dutiable goods alone.

Mr. Chamberlain brought this matter to the attention of the Canadian ministers at the colonial conference, and as the Minister of Finance has read a portion of the answer to Mr. Chamberlain's remarks it is perhaps only right that I should place before the House what Mr. Chamberlain said on that occasion. At pages 7 and 8 of the report, speaking on the British preference, Mr. Chamberlain said :

> But in Canada, before the conference of 1897, the Canadian government had decided to give us a preference which then amounted to 25 per cent, and this subsequently was increased to 33⅓ per cent. This was a preference voluntarily accorded by Canada on British taxable goods imported into the Dominion. Canada has therefore anticipated the general proposal of the premiers, and the time which has elapsed has been sufficient to enable us to form a judgment of the effect of an arrangement of this kind, and I have to say to you that, while I cannot but gratefully acknowledge the intention of this proposal and its sentimental value as proof of good will and affection, yet that its substantial results have been altogether disappointing to us, and I think they must have been equally disappointing to its promoters.
>
> I shall circulate to you another paper which contains very fully the whole of the statistics showing the course of trade in Canada since 1897, and the results of the preferential tariff. But I may give you in a word or two the most important conclusions. I am comparing now the import trade of British goods into Canada in the year 1896-97, with the last year for which I have the returns—1900-1901. The total imports of Canada increased in that period £14,500,000, at the rate of 62 per cent. That shows an enormously increased prosperity in the Dominion ; it shows how the energy of its inhabitants is developing its trade. Fourteen and a half millions and sixty-two per cent ; if you will kindly bear in mind those figures as showing the total result of all the import trade. Of that the free trade, upon which no duty is levied and upon which therefore no preference is given to British goods, increased £6,250,000, or at the rate of 67 per cent. The general trade, that is the trade from foreign countries which came under the general tariff, also increased £6,250,000, or at the rate of 62 per cent. But the preferential trade—the trade upon which this advantage had been given to British goods, only increased in the same time £2,000,000 and only at the rate of 55 per cent. So that the rate of increase under the preferential tariff was actually less than under the general tariff and also under the free tariff. Or taking it in another way, the total increase of the trade of Canada with foreigners during the period named, this is including both the trade subject to the tariff and also the free trade, was 69 per cent while the total increase of British trade was only 48 per cent. . . . .
>
> But now I want to point out another thing which I think will be of great importance, and which I am sure the government of Canada must have taken into their serious consideration. What return has been made to them by the foreigner for the advantage which the foreigner has derived from their tariff ? The exports from Canada to foreigners have decreased 40 per cent, while the exports from foreigners to Canada have, as I have said, largely increased. On the other hand, in spite of the tariff, in spite of everything in the natural course of trade and communication, the exports to the United Kingdom have increased 85 per cent in fifteen years, and the net result, which I desire to impress upon you, is that in spite of the preference which Canada has given us, their tariff has pressed, and still presses, with the greatest severity, upon its best customer, and has favoured the foreigner who is constantly doing his best to shut out her goods.

Of course it is only right that both sides of the question should be presented, and it may be said in reply to Mr. Chamberlain that while the imports of Canada from the mother country are only 29·62 per cent of the aggregate trade between the two countries, nevertheless the imports of the United States from Great Britain are only 23·20 per cent of the aggregate trade between those two countries. In other words, Great Britain buys from the United States nearly four times as much as the United States buys from the mother country. This has continued year after year, notwithstanding the opinion of some that you cannot sell to any nation from which you do not also purchase. The experience of these two countries does not bear out that argument. The trade relations between Canada and the mother country are much more favourable to the latter than are the trade relations of the mother country with the United Sates, and yet we receive, notwithstanding the preference, exactly the same treatment as the United States does in the British market. This is a circumstance which we have urged upon the attention of this House over and over again. On this subject the Finance Minister has scoffed at our views in his speeches of days gone by, but they are views which according to his speech of yesterday he is prepared to take into more serious consideration than ever he did before.

There is another aspect of this matter which Mr. Chamberlain did not bring to the attention of the Canadian ministers, and which shows in even a more striking manner than the figures which he presented, the trade relations as between the mother country and other countries as compared with Canada. Let us look at the statement of the exports from the United Kingdom to foreign countries and to Canada during the past ten years. In preparing this table I have taken the latest returns that were available. I could not get returns later than 1899 for some of these countries and with regard to others I was not able to get the returns for the year 1890, with which I started the comparison. But giving the House the comparison as it is, here is what we find :

STATEMENT OF EXPORTS FROM THE UNITED KINGDOM TO FOREIGN COUNTRIES AND CANADA.

——	1890.	1896.	1900.	Percentage of Increase 1900 over 1896.
	£	£	£
France	25,175,280	20,424,280	26,986,320	32·19
Holland	23,634,667	21,304,250	24,024,334	12·77
Italy	12,802,240	9,195,560	14,350,760	56·06
Belgium	8,517,680	8,224,720	12,034,240	45·10
Spain	7,783,120	6,188,360	9,973,000	61·16
Sweden	6,048,278	5,490,778	9,805,778	78·58
Norway	3,673,778	3,500,950	5,742,778	64·03
Portugal	2,984,092	2,739,825	4,308,983	57·27
Mexico	2,133,750	1,976,250	2,620,750	32·67
Switzerland	2,094,960	2,068,280	2,493,120	20·54
	1891.
German Empire	28,258,050	27,565,650	35,959,500	30·45
	1890.		1899.
Russia	9,334,000	11,130,900	13,601,313	22·19
			1900.
Denmark	3,753,389	4,348,000	6,005,167	38·11
Canada	8,928,033	6,785,956	9,215,994	36·00

Canada stands eighth in the percentage of increase and ninth in actual increase among these fourteen countries, notwithstanding the preference which has been so much relied upon by hon. gentlemen opposite as a means of creating better trade relations between Canada and the mother country. None of these countries gives to the mother country any preference ; they stood on the ordinary trade relations, and yet taking these fourteen countries, we find that so far as percentages are concerned, Canada stands eighth, and so far as actual increase is concerned Canada stands ninth.

Now, Mr. Speaker, I want to come to one or two matters that were dealt with by my hon. friend (Hon. Mr. Fielding) in his speech, and the first thing I desire to touch on is the post office revenue. The Minister of Finance told us that the Postmaster General in a recent speech which he delivered in Toronto, made a perfectly fair comparison of revenue and expenditure when he omitted the Yukon. Why did not the Minister of Finance omit the Yukon when he made comparisons of trade returns? If it is a perfectly fair thing for the Postmaster General to omit the Yukon in post office comparisons, surely it is a perfectly fair thing for the Minister of Finance to omit the Yukon in trade comparisons. The Minister of Finance spoke of the decrease in letter rates which the Postmaster General has made, but why did he omit to mention the fact that upon almost every other class of mail matter the Postmaster General has increased the rates? Was it not well to bring both these matters to the attention of the House? And why does not the Minister of Finance say something about the wages which the Postmaster General pays to his post office employees and to his letter carriers. I have to go down nearly every session to the Postmaster General's office attending deputations of post office employees from all over Canada, who point out that their wages have not been increased for the last twenty or thirty years, and that they really have not enough now to keep body and soul together.

Some hon. MEMBERS. Hear, hear.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). The Postmaster General boasts of a surplus. Why, two of his mail drivers were fined in the city of Montreal yesterday because they were driving horses that were not in a fit condition. Why does not the Postmaster General invoke the services of the fair wage branch of the Labour Department? Why does not the Postmaster General call in the Minister of Labour to assist him in giving a fair rate of wage to the post office employees?

Mr. KEMP. Where is the Postmaster General to-day?

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). I am sorry that the Postmaster General is not in his place to-day. I have long thought that the services of the Department of Labour could not better be employed than in endeavouring to do something for the post office officials from one end of Canada to the other, who are complaining that while the necessaries of life have increased from 25 per cent to 50 per cent during the past six years, their wages have remained the same in order that the Postmaster General may boast to this House and to this country. that by leaving a portion of Canada out of consideration he really could pretend that he had a surplus in the year 1902.

Then the Finance Minister referred to the government railways. He told us that there is an alleged surplus—No, he did not say that there was an 'alleged' surplus; he said that there was a surplus, but I would prefer to call it an alleged surplus. Every one knows that the mode of arranging charges as between capital account and revenue account in the Railway Department has been changed by this government; and if the Minister of Finance appreciates so much the methods adopted by the Postmaster General, why did he not give us a comparison of the railway accounts on the former basis? Let us look at the way he got his surplus of last year. He charged no less than $4,626,841 to capital account, and then claimed a surplus of $57,898. And my hon. friend the Minister of Trade and Commerce thinks that a most gratifying exhibit of the railways of this country for the year 1902.

The hon. Minister of Finance told us what the government had done with regard to trade matters during the past six years. They had had trade negotiations with the mother country, and the net result of these negotiations, Mr. Speaker, you will regret to learn, is nothing. They have had trade negotiations with France, and you will also regret to learn that up to the present time these have resulted in nothing. They have had trade negotiations with the United States, and these negotiations up to the present time have resulted in nothing, except the interchange of very polite letters between the Prime Minister and Mr. Senator Fairbanks. Then, they had certain negotiations during the past six years with Germany. We bitterly complained last year and the year before that the papers relating to these negotiations had not been brought down. The year before last I went to the papers which were laid on the Table of the parliament of the Australian Commonwealth, and I got information there which should have been laid on the Table of this House. We were told that the papers were of a confidential character. They were brought down at the conclusion of the speech of my hon. friend the Minister of Finance last night, and we do not find anything very confidential in them. I am not sure that they have all been brought down; I shall ask my right hon. friend about that perhaps, on a subsequent occasion; but I do say that there is nothing on the face of the documents brought down which in any way could justify the government in voting down the motion of my hon. friend from Jacques Cartier (Mr. Monk) when he asked last session that those papers might be laid on the Table of the House. They began negotiations with Herr P. Hatzfeldt, I think; they continued them with Graf Von Posadowsky; but during the past two years they have been negotiating altogether with Herr Bopp, and the communications with Herr Bopp have been laid on the Table; and really, Mr. Speaker, the attitude of Canada in these negotiations has been a most remarkable one. We urged the government two years ago by a resolution which we proposed in this House, to take some stand with regard to this matter. We urged them again last year. Two years ago when I moved a resolution on the subject I spoke very strongly with regard to the treatment of this country by Germany. That resolution, which the government voted down, was as follows :

This House is of opinion that equivalent or adequate duties should be imposed by Canada upon the products and manufactures of countries not within the empire in all cases where such countries fail to admit Canadian products and manufactures upon fair terms, and that the government should take for this purpose all such available measures as may be found necessary.

Strong language was used on the subject by members on this side of the House, but with no effect on the government. Indeed, the hon. Minister of Finance, so far as one could understand his language, seemed inclined to justify the attitude of Germany. The attitude of this government with regard to Germany reminds me very much of that well known play 'The Private Secretary.' You remember that when the old Indian colonel comes home and meets the poor littlte curate, the private secretary, and mistakes him for his nephew, whom he expected to find no milksop, he addresses certain questions to him. The young man gives very weak replies in very effiminate tones. By and by the old gentleman gets so exasperated that he seizes him by the back of the head, cuffs him and kicks him about the room, beats his head against the wall, and generally uses him very roughly. The young gentleman makes no response, but submits to it all, until after receiving an incredible amount of ill-usage, he braces himself up and says : 'now, look heah, if you do that again, 'Ill get weal cwoss with you.' That is about the attitude of the Canadian government towards Germany during the past six years. Germany has been excluding our products from her markets by imposing upon them an enormous tax, while admitting the products of other countries under her minimum tariff ; and all we have been doing during these years has been to say to her, 'if you do this again, we will get real cross with you.' Now, we are getting really cross with her, because we are going to impose a surtax against her. That may be a very good thing ; but, in the first place, I think action of that kind should have been taken by the government four or five years ago, instead of voting down resolutions which we proposed, and refusing the House any information on the subject. In the second place, so far as this surtax is concerned, I think we are getting too much government by Order in Council in this country. Practically the whole tariff is in such a position that the government can deal with it by Order in Council—can deal with it on the eve of a general election. If we are going to deal with Germany, we had better put the Act on our statute-book, and deal with her at once. I am willing to stay here all summer, if necessary, or any reasonable time, for that purpose. But if the surtax is to be imposed by Order in Council, why does the hon. gentleman deal with it in such a way that he will have to come to the House by and bye and have it made more elastic? In his speech he pointed out the necessity of making the tariff more elastic with regard to the importation of raw materials used in manufactures, and one would have supposed that in dealing with the surtax, he would have taken a similar course, instead of applying it to all products alike ; and if he gives the Governor in Council power to impose a surtax——

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. There is nothing about the Order in Council. The surtax is imposed directly. It is in force to-day, subject to the qualification that the Order in Council may make regulations with regard to it.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). It is dealt with now ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. It is dealt with now.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). If that is the case, I am glad to know that it is in line with what we on this side of the House have advocated. But if the tariff on German goods is to be dealt with during the present session, it would be well to make the surtax elastic, because there may be goods imported into this country from Germany upon which it would be unwise to impose a surtax of 33⅓ per cent, while on other goods it might be wise to impose a very much larger amount.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. Who is to determine the difference ?

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). This House, I think, ought to determine the difference ; and we will have an opportunity of dealing with that question when the hon. gentleman's resolution comes up for discussion. I think the House ought to deal with these matters instead of leaving them to be settled by Orders in Council. Certainly there is a number of instances of this practice in the resolutions.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. No.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). Are there not some instances of this in the resolutions which the hon. gentleman proposes ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. Not with relation to Germany.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). I am dealing with the general subject of Orders in Council and with regard to materials for manufacturing steel rails, my hon. friend has adopted that system, which, I think, is an unwise one.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. That has been in the statute for years.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). It has been followed in this country to some extent, but my hon. friend seems inclined to increase it, and that is what I am objecting to.

Now, the attitude of the government with regard to preferential trade is a most extraordinary one. I do not propose to deal with the question of preferential trade by any resolution which I will submit at this juncture, because I think it should be dealt with by itself at a future period. But I think I should say a few words with regard to the attitude of the government on this subject. This preference to the mother country was inaugurated in 1897 or in 1898 by the singing in this House of the national anthem and my right hon. friend the premier went across to Great Britain and told the people of the mother country why Canada had seen fit to make this preference. He told them that Canada was giving it as a free gift and did not want any compensation. I shall not read his language as it has been quoted to the House many times, but I cannot refrain from quoting these words :

It is a free gift. We ask no compensation. Protection has been the curse of Canada. We would not see you come under its baneful influence—for what weakens you must weaken us.

The Cobden Club arose in the purity of its free trade principles, and presented my hon. friend with the Cobden Club medal. Then he came back and we discussed the matter in this House and country. We were told, from one end of the country to the other, that Canada, by means of this 33⅓ per cent preference, had already obtained a preference in the British market. We were told that Canada had already a substantial preference in the British market. We on this side moved resolutions which are almost identical in terms with that finally adopted by the representatives of this government at the colonial conference. And these resolutions were voted down time after time by the government and its supporters. Let me read one of the resolutions which we moved in this House. Sir Charles Tupper moved in the sessison of 1901 :

That this House is of opinion that a system of mutual trade preference between Great Britain and Ireland and the colonies would greatly stimulate increased production in and commerce between these countries, and would thus promote and maintain the unity of the empire and that no measure of preference which falls short of the complete realization of such a policy should be considered as final and satisfactory.

Well, Sir, resolutions were adopted with regard to this matter at the conference. Let me read the first clause of the resolution in which the representatives of this government concurred :

This conference recognizes that the principle of preferential trade between the United Kingdom and His Majesty's dominions beyond the seas would stimulate and facilitate mutual commercial intercourse and would by promoting the development of the resources and industries of the several parts, strengthen the empire.

There is a difference in the language of the two resolutions, but none whatever in the meaning, yet my right hon. friend called on his followers, in the year 1900, to vote down the very resolution which he subsequently proposed to the colonial conference. In all the debates in this House on this subject we were told that we had a preference in the British market, and that we were not to approach the mother country in any huckstering spirit. The hon. Minister of Agriculture, in addressing more than one gathering on the other side, told his hearers, with the sanction, no doubt, of his colleagues, that Canada wanted no compensation for the preference given. Mr. Speaker, who is doing the huckstering now ? Who is not only huckstering now, but, by the somewhat undignified threat in the memorandum handed the imperial government, and expressed more broadly yesterday by the Minister of Finance is telling the British government that unless we get some compensation, the preference will be repealed. I wonder if, in such an event, we shall stand up and sing 'God Save the King,' or what action will we take. Perhaps when this preference is repealed, my hon. friends on the other side will get up and sing the 'Star Spangled Banner.' We were told that Canada had a substantial preference in the British market. If it had, why are my hon. friends demanding anything from the British government at present, and why are they threatening to repeal this preference ? Look at their whole attitude. Only two years ago my right hon. friend, in answer to myself, said that it was perfect folly to discuss the question of preferential trade unless Canada was prepared to adopt free trade. If the right hon. gentleman doubts my word, let him send for 'Hansard.' Last year my hon. friend the Minister of Finance told us that this one-sided preference was a good thing, not only for the mother country, but for Canada. Well, Sir, if it is a good thing for Canada, why are hon. gentlemen opposite huckstering about it ? Who are the hucksterers now ? My right hon. friend told us on one occasion that we had the attitude of those who were willing to wound, but afraid to strike. Who are willing to wound but afraid to strike now ? Who are making undignified threats ? Did you ever, Sir, in all the course of your parliamentary experience, see a more extraordinary exhibition of somersaults than that which the government has given us ? The fact is they began with Great Britain, as with the United States, by giving up everything. They gave Great Britain a preference with a great hurrah. They told the mother country that we gave it in return for the splendid freedom we enjoy, that we wanted no compensation and did not want to see Canada cursed with protection. Five years afterwards they went to the colonial conference, and getting down upon their hands and knees, they asked for a preference in the British markets, and threatened, if refused, to take away from Great Britain that preference in our markets, which they said we had given to the mother country without desire for compensation and as her due. Let me point out that these gentlemen who were so merry about a certain resolution which I proposed to this House last year and also the year before, had better turn their jests on their own leader now. I was told then that protection to Canadian industry was absolutely inconsistent with the idea of mutual preferential trade. Yet here in black and white, in the records of the colonial conference, is the very proposition which I put before the country then.

I said to the people of this country that, as between the British manufacturer and the foreign manufacturer, we might, and we ought, to give a preference to the British; but that in doing that we should always safeguard the interest of the Canadian manufacturer. Here in this book we have the very self-same argument which was then so jeered at, placed by the Canadian representatives before the colonial conference :

> But the Canadian ministers pointed out that the Canadian tariff was by no means prohibitive, that large quantities of goods were imported, and that a great proportion of these came from foreign countries. In any lines in which it appeared that the goods would be manufactured in Great Britain it might be possible to so readjust some duties as to give an additional advantage to the British manufacturers, and thus turn over to him a volume of trade which at present is held by the manufacturers of foreign countries.
>
> The Canadian ministers stated that if they could be assured that the imperial government would accept the principle of preferential trade generally, and particularly grant to the food products of Canada in the United Kingdom exemption from duties now levied, or hereafter imposed, they, the Canadian ministers, would be prepared to go further into the subject and endeavour to give to the British manufacturer some increased advantage over his foreign competitors in the markets of Canada.

But I do not dwell upon this, having a number of other matters, perhaps of more importance in connection with the trade question, to deal with before I conclude, and I do not wish to impose upon the patience of the House.

My hon. friend the Minister of Finance says that this is not an opportune time to make any revision of the tariff. He talks to the protectionists and the free traders of this country very much as he did in 1897 and 1898. The time is not opportune to do certain things. He has put into his speech as much of protection as he thought his free trade friends would swallow, and as much of free trade as he thought his protectionist friends would support; and he has extended to the manufacturer this year the same invitation which he gave before and to which he referred in his speech—'call again.' There was a little bit of controversy between the Minister of Finance and the hon. member for St. Mary's (Hon. Mr. Tarte) as to what was said to the manufacturers last year. The ex-Minister of Public Works (Hon. Mr. Tarte) is not usually regarded as a very stupid man. Some people in this country have occasionally considered him as a man of very acute intellect. Yet that hon. gentleman failed to grasp what the Minister of Finance meant when he was talking to the manufacturers last year. If the hon. gentleman's (Hon. Mr. Fielding's) colleagues were deceived, it is probable that the manufacturers were deceived also. The Minister of Finance tells us that he invited them to call again because he knew they could call again in any case, not only this year, but next year and the following year. So, he considered there was no implied promise in saying: We will do nothing for you this year, but come next year. But the manufacturers might understand it differently. What was it we had the year before last? Oh, yes, the Joint High Commission. It had escaped me for the moment. It was because of the meeting of the Joint High Commission that we had no revision of the tariff in 1901—and I do not go further back than that year. In 1902, it was the Colonial Conference. This year it is a combination of both—the result of the Colonial Conference coupled with the possible resumption of the Joint High Commission. Now, of course, every one will regard that as highly satisfactory, and, in some quarters it will be applauded as very ingenious. The government holds these gentlemen off by threatening to repeal the British preference, and also by telling of another meeting of the Joint High Commission. The Minister of Finance tells them in effect: We do not know that it will amount to much; and, if it does not, we will take the tariff of other countries into consideration. This will be very pleasant for the gentlemen who are interested in this matter. In fact, they are told to call again next year for perhaps something may happen in the meantime to enable the government to grant them what they ask. We make no promises, says the Finance Minister; it may happen that a free trade sentiment will spread over the country, in which case, we can tell you to go about your business, for we have made no promises—but you had better come back and see us next year. And, no doubt, these gentlemen are very highly pleased with the position of affairs; and the Minister of Finance, no doubt, will accomplish the result which he intended by putting his speech in that highly diplomatic form.

The character of our imports has something to do with the question, whether or not there should be a revision of the tariff this year. We all admit the necessity, as I have already said, of a liberal public expenditure for Canada and of a tariff which will produce a liberal revenue. But look at our tariff, and then also consider whether we have in Canada any resources which can be developed, any raw material which can be utilized in order that some considerable proportion of the commodities which we are buying from foreign countries may be made by our own people. I have here a statement giving a comparison of our imports from the United States in a number of lines. I do not confine it to articles imported for home consumption as I find that it would be too difficult to make the consumption owing to the way in which the returns are made up :

IMPORTS FROM THE UNITED STATES.

	1896. Free.	1896. Dutiable.	Total.
Fisheries.. .. ..$	52,819	$ 318,674	$ 371,493
Forest..	2,054,423	.....	2,054,423
Animals and products	3,811,278	1,482,114	5,293,392
Agricultural products	2,672,895	8,045,580	10,718,375
Manufactures. ..	8,354,635	19,742,117	28,096,752
Fisheries.. .. ..$	31,380	$ 494,706	$ 526,086
	1902.	1902.
Forest..	4,038,722	.....	4,038,722
Animals and products	4,573,595	3,838,859	8,412,454
Agricultural products	7,967,462	11,544,604	19,512,006
Manufactures. ..	25,532,647	46,885,102	72,417,749

In this table I have dealt with total imports. I would ask my hon. friend the Minister of Finance whether he thinks increases of that kind are necessarily indicative of increased prosperity in the country. But I have gone a little more into detail and have prepared a statement of dutiable imports from Great Britain and the United States —and I am dealing with total imports—so as to show a comparison between 1896 and 1902 :—

STATEMENT OF PRINCIPAL DUTIABLE IMPORTS FROM GREAT BRITAIN AND UNITED STATES, 1896 AND 1902. (TOTAL IMPORTS.)

	GREAT BRITAIN.			UNITED STATES.
	1896.	1902.	Increase.	1896.	1902.	Increase.
	$	$	$	$	$	$
Animals	6,069	22,323	16,254	206,999	1,124,874	917,875
Breadstuffs	79,983	167,890	87,907	6,023,992	8,663,871	2,639,879
Fruits	.....	.....	.....	1,114,180	1,947,974	833,794
Hay	.....	.....	.....	28,832	121,624	92,792
Hops	13,923	23,631	9,708	37,733	89,196	51,463
Provisions	25,711	30,147	4,436	1,177,848	2,462,865	1,285,017
Vegetables	12,709	32,804	20,095	171,097	342,468	171,371
	138,395	276,795	138,400	8,760,681	14,752,872	5,992,191
Carriages	.....	.....	.....	1,246,633	1,356,891	110,258
Cement	123,436	148,818	25,382	22,642	588,510	565,868
Cotton and manufactures	3,366,502	5,078,587	1,712,085	1,076,081	1,603,917	527,836
Drugs, &c	250,689	643,531	392,842	510,667	780,531	269,864
Earthen and chinaware	381,495	684,912	303,417	55,892	241,135	185,243
Electrical apparatus	8,581	15,745	7,164	309,911	1,350,505	1,040,594
Fancy goods	916,933	1,058,683	141,750	230,988	389,990	159,002
Flax, &c	1,414,404	1,780,837	366,433	64,125	82,681	18,556
Glass and manufactures	215,344	388,504	173,160	419,179	523,820	104,641
Hats and caps	805,426	842,929	37,503	404,050	872,598	468,548
Leather and manufactures	117,315	257,750	140,435	1,024,285	1,466,382	442,097
Iron, steel, metals and manufacture of	2,733,860	5,135,622	2,401,762	6,395,765	17,681,776	11,286,011
Brass, copper, gold, silver and manufacture of	.....	.....	.....	555,589	813,852	258,263
Agricultural implements	.....	.....	.....	414,933	2,634,385	2,219,452
Paints and oils	597,686	736,829	139,143	1,215,534	2,262,437	1,046,903
Paper and manufactures	249,139	360,094	110,955	673,875	1,042,663	368,788
Wood and manufactures	.....	.....	.....	767,993	1,407,808	639,815
Wool and manufactures	6,970,010	8,881,941	1,911,931	208,430	354,621	146,191
Rubber and manufactures	118,657	217,812	99,155	211,669	525,218	313,549
Silks	1,901,627	2,414,599	512,972	.....	.....
	20,309,499	28,923,988	8,614,489	24,568,922	50,732,592	26,163,670

Thus it will be seen that of the articles I have mentioned our imports from Great Britain increased between 1896 and 1902 by no less a sum thna $8,614,489 and during the same period the increase in our imports of the same articles from the United States amounted to $26,163,670, making a total increase during this period of six years of no less a sum than $34,778,159.

Now, Mr. Speaker, is there any reason why a very considerable portion of these articles might not be produced in Canada ? Is it wise to delay a revision of our tariff, even under present conditions, if, by a judicious and thorough revision of the tariff, we could produce or manufacture in Canada a very considerable portion of the articles to which I have called attention ? Now, I will give another tabulated statement which shows this increase in a more striking way.

The following is a statement of certain dutiable goods imported into Canada from Great Britain and the United States, which shows a large increase for the year 1902 over 1896 :—

	Increase 1902 over 1896.
Animals	$ 934,129
Breadstuffs	2,727,786
Provisions	1,289,453
Cotton and manufactures	2,239,921
Drugs	662,706
Earthen and chinaware	488,660
Electric apparatus	1,047,758
Flax	384,989
Glass and manufactures	277,801
Hats, caps, leather and manufactures	1,088,593
Iron, steel, metals and manufactures.	13,687,773
Brass, copper, gold, silver and manufactures of	258,263
Agricultural implements	2,219,452
Paints and oils	1,186,046
Paper and manufactures of	479,743
Wood and manufactures of	639,815
Wool and manufactures of	2,058,122
Rubber and manufactures of	412,704
Silks	512,972
	$32,596,686

The MINISTER OF CUSTOMS. What was the heading of that last table ?

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). That was the increase of the total imports of certain dutiable goods imported into Canada from Great Britain and the United States in the year 1902 as compared with the year 1896. I will send it over to my hon. friend if he desires to see it. I have endeavoured to make these statements with the utmost possible accuracy, and they have been gone over more than once. Possibly my hon. friend may find some trifling inaccuracies in some of them ; if so, of course, they are altogether unintentional, and I will make any explanation about them. It is difficult, as the Minister of Customs knows very well, to pick out these items from the various portions of the trade and navigation returns. A great deal of time has been spent upon them, and I think the table has been prepared with a fair degree of accuracy. In addition to these, in looking at the free list, I find the following striking increases in 1902 over 1896 :—

Breadstuffs	$2,387,318
Iron, steel, metals and manufactures of	8,794,842
Cordage	1,683,772
	$12,865,932

These figures deal altogether with increases, and do not take into consideration imports from countries other than Great Britain and the United States, the imports from which are comparatively small. Now, having regard to the enormous increase in our imports of many commodities and articles which should be produced or manufactured in this country, is it a matter of congratulation that we should have so largely increased the volume of our importations ? Would it not be more in the interest of Canada if these articles to the extent of $25,000,000 or $30,000,000 had been produced in Canada instead of being imported, and if the 50,000 Canadians who are said to have gone into the state of Massachusetts between 1895 and 1900 had remained in Canada ? Is it not apparent that, with regard to a great many of these articles, a very considerable portion of them might, and indeed ought to be, produced in Canada ? Why should Canada import :

Breadstuffs to the amount of	$11,731,268
Provisions and vegetables	2,981,109
Iron, steel and manufactures of	33,681,625
Woollen and cotton goods*	20,938,719
Electrical apparatus	1,373,022
Hats, caps, leather and manufactures of	3,835,119
Agricultural implements	2,654,000
Paints and oils	2,181,426
* Raw cotton not included.	$79,376,288

The aggregate of these articles which I have enumerated is the enormous sum of $79,376,288 worth imported into Canada in 1902, a good deal of which I think we could have, and a good deal of which I think we ought to have, produced in Canada. My hon. friend says : We are not going to revise the tariff. We have not time to revise the tariff, we have something else on our minds which will prevent us from revising it this session ; and therefore we will invite our friends to call again, and we will content ourselves with making the trifling changes in the tariff which have already been referred to. Sir, it seems to me that our policy in Canada should be to accomplish the following objects :—

1. To so arrange our tariff that all legitimate industries at present established in this country should be so protected as to insure as far as possible permanency under conditions of depression as well as in times of commercial expansion.

2. To invite capital and attract labour to the establishment of other industries which the resources and raw material of our country amply justify.

3. To preserve by means of an adequately protective tariff our own home market for our own people and to have the policy of the government so declared and understood.

4. In framing our tariff to have regard solely to the interests of Canada which have been committed to our charge although recognizing that in consulting our own interests we must not be unmindful of the tariffs raised against us by other countries.

5. To so frame our fiscal policy that labour in Canada shall be paid a fair living wage remembering always that our labouring classes and therefore our producers and manufacturers cannot be expected to compete on even terms with countries in which the condition of life among the labouring classes is altogether different. We do not desire to reduce our labouring population to the low standard of living, to that hard fierce struggle for existence which prevails in many countries. We do not want our labouring classes to compete without protection against the pauper labour of any country.

6. To utilize the labour of our own people in conversion of our own raw material into finished products required for use in our own country. It is surely bad policy to export our raw material, to send our labouring classes abroad to another country to find work in its manufactories and to send after both our money to pay for the finished product which we require.

Canada is bound to become a great agricultural country and her farmers are entitled to every possible protection and assistance. But we have enormous and varied resources the reasonable development of which will build up, not only in the east but in the west as well, great industrial centres of population which will afford a home market better than any foreign market for very large portions of our agricultural products. We know now that one of the matters of regret among the Americans who are coming by thousands into our great North-west is that they do not have in the west of Canada the home market which they had in the United States by reason of the great industrial centres which have been built up in the Western States. I believe that by a policy of adequate protection, such as the Liberal-Conservative party has advocated, is advocating and will advocate in this country, we will build up, even in the west of Canada, great industries and great industrial centres. The value of our home market cannot be placed too high. We know the value which has been placed upon it in the United States of America. We know that the United States have always carefully guarded their home market and it is apparent from the utterances of her public men and leading business men that they propose to preserve in the future. Those of them who have discussed measures of reciprocity with other countries have always declared that any system of reciprocity upon which they would enter must be of such a character as not to harm a single American industry and not to deprive a single American labouring man of one day's work. One of the latest pronouncements on the subject is that of Mr. Shaw, secretary of state for the United States. In dealing with the policy of the United States in the future he made the following very frank declaration :

> We say that it matters very much who produces that which the American people consume. American people shall have the first opportunity to supply the American market. Therefore adjust your tariff so as to give the American labourer, artisan and farmer the first opportunity to supply that which we can consistently. Then we have a surplus. What will we do with it ? We will sell it abroad. Higher than we sell it at home ? Yes, if we can. Cheaper than we sell it at home ? If necessary. Sell it for what you can get and we will have a large balance of trade, which brought in will make us all comfortable.

The following extract from a letter recently written by a leading manufacturer in the United States to the public press of that country is interesting. I refer to a letter, written by Mr. G. H. Seabury, of New York, in January, 1903 :

> The commodities that are undersold in foreign markets include steel, iron, machinery, locomotives, agricultural implements, sewing machines, cotton goods, pharmaceutical preparations, patented wares, furniture and minor manufactures that are produced in every section of our country. If these surplus exports were not sold at small margins of profit we would be unable to secure and hold our foreign trade.

As I have said before in this House, Canada, since entering upon her period of commercial development, finds herself peculiarly situated. She lies 4,000 miles alongside the greatest manufacturing and agricultural country in the world. She has a sparse population spread over an enormous area. She lies alongside of a country which protects by an almost prohibitive tariff its own home market. Canada, with 5,500,000 people lies alongside of the United States with a population of 80,000,000 and a home market absolutely protected. What is the result ? Look at the enormous manufactures of the United States; look at the enormous agricultural production of the United States. In times of great commercial expansion the home market of the United States takes nearly everything that is produced in that country ; at all events, the amount they export, although absolutely large, is relatively very small. They exported in 1900 only three and one-half per cent of the manufactures and eight, or nine, or ten per cent of the agricultural products. Well, things will go on all right during a time of commercial expansion when the home market is capable of absorbing nearly the whole product, but when a time of depression comes, when the consuming power of the people of the United States is decreased, what will happen? A good deal will happen. Canada lies alongside of the United States, Canada is her best customer in manufactured goods, as the hon. member for North Norfolk truly says. Canada is her third best customer in all classes of goods. When the surplus of the United States comes to be dealt with, where will it be dealt with ? It will be dealt with in Canada and Canada may reasonably expect in the first instance to be the dumping ground of the American surplus. Canada, to some extent, is the dumping ground of that surplus at the present time. It is argued gravely by some people in this country that it is a good thing for the people of Canada that Canada should be the slaughter market for the manufactures and agricultural products of the United States. The argument seems to be this : It is said that if these goods are sold in Canada at less than the cost of production we get them cheap and therefore, upon the old free trade argument of years ago, it must be a good thing for the Canadian people to buy these goods in the cheapest market. What if the advent of these goods into the Canadian market closes up Canadian factories ? What if Canadian farmers leave their farms and go to the United States and find the employment which they cannot find at home ? I believe that for another reason a policy of free trade such as was advocated years ago can never be an acceptable policy in Canada. Free traders in Great Britain, possibly men who might be described as doctrinaires so far as this country is concerned because they do not realize the conditions which prevail here, regret that Canada has not followed the example of the mother country and adopted free trade. It seems to me that these gentlemen really do not know that of which they speak. If Canada had adopted the policy of free trade and opened her markets to the United States, our trade relations, bad as they are with the mother country, would be far worse and further than that, I believe that the commercial supremacy of the United States which would undoubtedly then have prevailed in our markets would have been coupled eventually with political supremacy. Therefore, I do not think, looking at our situation, that we can ever have anything like a policy of free trade in Canada, and if we are going to adopt the policy of protection, let us have a declared and pronounced policy so that the people may know what to expect and let us adopt a policy which will adequately protect all the interests of the country.

During the past six years the government of the country has not declared its fiscal policy as it should have done. We have had no definite statement ; no pronounced and declared policy. The Finance Minister, in 1897, told the people of this country that eternal vigilance was the price of protection. The Minister of Trade and Commerce (Rt. Hon. Sir Richard Cartwright) said that the ship's head was now turned towards the sea of free trade, and he was glad of it. The Prime Minister folded his arms in dramatic fashion since the commencement of this very session, and he told the people that he was glad that, having commenced his political life as a protectionist, he had now become a pronounced free trader. It is true that the Minister of Marine told the people of Maisonneuve two months ago that the Prime Minister was a protectionist, but still two months have intervened and the right hon. gentleman may have changed his opinions since. Cabinet ministers and their followers have given conflicting views from time to time on the question. Last session the Minister of Finance made an announcement which was regarded by some of his followers as a declaration that the tariff would be raised this session. The hon. gentleman from Alberta (Mr. Oliver) distinctly stated in this House that that was his construction of the remarks of the Finance Minister, and he was not corrected by any member of the government at that time. The Minister of Trade and Commerce (Rt. Hon. Sir Richard Cartwright) made last session one of the most pronounced free trade speeches he ever made in his life. It would be well perhaps that I should refer to some of the language which he used then, in order to show his words, by way of contrast with those of other ministers. The Prime Minister congratulates himself that he has assembled in his cabinet men of every variety of opinion with regard to fiscal matters. Well, he certainly has a very strong contrast in some of them. Listen to what the Minister of Trade and Commerce said last session, and we will know when he gets on his feet now whether or not he is of the same opinion.

> I do not mean to say that a government may not be corrupt and yet not protectionist. That may be. But I do say that human nature being as it is, it is almost impossible for a government to be protectionist and escape being corrupt.

But the Minister of Trade and Commerce, according to ideas of gentlemen on his own side of the House, is in a protectionist government at present, and he says it is difficult to be in a protectionist government and not be corrupt. Of course, if he insists upon it, we are bound to take him at his word. The Minister of Trade and Commerce thus continued his remarks :

> And I will add this further ; I will add that while I think protection and corruption are practically inseparable ; I will add that I likewise believe for my part, that protection and true freedom are all but absolutely incompatible. On that I will give you words of another more eloquent than any I can utter. Here are some remarks which are very much indeed to the purpose. The gentleman whom I quote says :

'I come to expose to you the policy of the Liberal party. Let me tell you that policy may be resumed in the good Saxon word 'freedom' in every sense of the term ; freedom of speech, freedom of action, freedom of religious life and civil life, and last, not least, freedom in commercial life. . . . .

In the American Republic you have the line of cleavage which exists between the Liberal party and the Conservative party—the question of free trade. We stand for freedom, they stand for restriction ; they stand for servitude ; we stand for freedom.

I denounce to you the policy of protection as bondage ; yea, bondage, and I refer to bondage in the same manner in which the American slavery was bondage ; not in the same degree perhaps, but in the same manner. . . . In the same manner the people of this country, the inhabitants of the city of Winnipeg especially, are toiling for a master, who takes away, not every cent of profit, but a very large percentage, a very great portion of your earnings for which you toil and sweat. . . . .

I do not tell you that we must have no taxation, but I do say that the government has no right to take a cent from you or me except for the necessities of the revenue, and if the government takes from you any portion of your earnings, whether the portion be large or small, to give to somebody else that government is as much a robber as the highwayman who puts a pistol to your forehead and says : "your purse or your life."

Admirable sentences, admirably expressed with that force and eloquence with which my right hon. friend (Rt. Hon. Sir Wilfrid Laurier) usually puts the case before his audience.

Mr. BROCK. See them smiling.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). After the session the Finance Minister went to Yarmouth, and he spoke there ; the Finance Minister at Yarmouth, the Minister of the Interior (Hon. Mr. Sifton) in his organ and in personal interviews, the Minister of Agriculture (Hon. Mr. Fisher) and the Minister of Customs (Hon. Mr. Paterson) in Argenteuil, the Postmaster General (Hon. Sir William Mulock) on the public platform and in his organ, the Minister of Inland Revenue (Hon. Mr. Bernier) at St. Hyacinthe, the Minister of Railways and Canals (Hon. Mr. Blair) in New Brunswick, the member for Guysborough (Mr. Fraser), the member for Hants (Mr. Russell) in Yarmouth, and many other members on the government side of the House have proclaimed their adherence to free trade, and have denounced any attempt to increase the tariff. On the other hand, the Prime Minister, through the mouth of his Minister of Marine, announced in Maisonneuve that he was in favour of legitimate protection to Canadian industry, and the Minister of Marine appeared on the platform before his electors as a protectionist. The member for West York (Mr. Campbell), the member for South Wellington (Mr. Guthrie), the member for West Huron (Mr. Holmes), the Prime Minister of Ontario, the Attorney General of Nova Scotia, the Hon. James McMullen, and a great many other very prominent gentlemen in the Liberal party have proclaimed themselves in favour of increased protection to the industries of this country, and they have supported the position of my hon. friend from St. Mary's (Hon. Mr. Tarte), and have said that the government should have adopted the policy which had been advocated by that hon. gentleman (Hon. Mr. Tarte) before he left the present administration.

Now, Mr. Speaker, what really are we to make of the attitude of the Liberal party in that regard ? I leave it to you, Sir, if, after carefully digesting, as I know you have done, the speech of the Minister of Finance yesterday, you are one whit the wiser as to what the policy of the Liberal party is with regard to protection and free trade. I know, Sir, that by the usages and custom of the House you are debarred from making any answer to my question, and, of course, I put the question only in a formal way, but I am quite satisfied, Mr. Speaker, that if you were at liberty to answer you would be just as dumb as you are at present.

Some hon. MEMBERS. Hear, hear

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). Now, Mr. Speaker, the Conservative party believes in a policy of adequate protection ; a policy of such adequate protection as will maintain and strengthen Canadian industries ; such a policy as will give our own market to our own people That policy we have declared in all parts of the country. We believe that such a policy is in the interests of all parts of Canada and of all classes of the community. I think that word 'adequate' attracted the attention of my hon. friend from Haldimand, and I will give him a very good authority for the use of that word by and by. In the western states the policy of protection has found favour with the farmers, because they see built up in all that western country great industrial centres ; because they feel the advantage of a protected home market, and because they know that without the protection of that home market they would get very much less for their products than they do at present. As I said before, I believe that the farmers in the western part of Canada will have the same experience, and that they will learn, even more than they do at present—and they do very largely realize it at present—the advantages of our home market ; the advantages to this country of the protection of the home market so far as all classes of the people are concerned.

It is sometimes said that the farmers cannot be protected. My hon. friend the Minister of Trade and Commerce took that ground last year. He said the only way in which you could protect them would be by giving them a bounty. I want to point out to my hon. friend that there are people in this country whose claims have been denied by this government—I refer to the lead miners of British Columbia—who look on this matter in a somewhat different aspect. During my visit to the western part of this country I found that they complained bitterly that the tariff fails to give them any protection whatever, while the farmer has a very considerable protection. After enumerating a number of implements upon which a duty must be paid by the miner, they proceed as follows :

Wheat protected by a duty of 12 cents per bushel ; oats protected by a duty of 10 cents per bushel ; hay protected by a duty of $2 per ton ; potatoes protected by a duty of 15 cents per bushel ; eggs protected by a duty of 3 cents per dozen ; poultry protected by a duty of 20 per cent ; cattle and sheep protected by a duty of 20 per cent ; hogs protected by a duty of 25 per cent ; fruits protected by a duty of 25 per cent ; condensed milk, canned at Truro, Nova Scotia, protected by a duty of 3½ cents a pound ; pease, corn, beans, canned, protected by a duty of 2½ cents per pound ; apples, pears, peaches, canned, protected by a duty that averages over 100 per cent ; preserved meats protected by a duty of 25 per cent ; ham and bacon protected by a duty of 2 cents per pound ; cheese protected by a duty of 3 cents per pound ; butter protected by a duty of 4 cents per pound ; and so on.

It will be observed that the lead miner of the west entertains an entirely different view from that expressed last year by the Minister of Trade and Commerce, as to the possibility of protecting the farmer. I am not suggesting that the protection to the farmer is too high; I think it is not high enough. I believe that upon many agricultural products the duty ought to be increased, so that a country like Canada, possessing agricultural capabilities second to none in the world, should not be handicapped in competition with the United States and should not be obliged to import from that country nearly $28,000,000 of agricultural and animal products. The farmer is protected in this country to a certain extent. He should be protected to a greater extent, and the Conservative party will be prepared, upon attaining power, to give him a further measure of protection which in its opinion the interests of the country demands.

The tide of industrial expansion seems to be at its height on this continent. It has been expected that its ebb would come before this. It has not yet come, but it will come as surely as the ebb follows the flow of the ocean tide. All business men are agreed on that. When it does come, the protection afforded to Canadian industries by the present ad valorem tariff will decrease with the decrease in prices. In many respects it is insufficient at present. It will be utterly insufficient then, when the time comes that we shall have to face the slaughtering in the Canadian market of goods from the United States. Have we no suffering industries at the present time ? The hon. gentleman says that the time is inopportune for making any change in the tariff. What about our woollen industries our cotton factories, our iron and steel industries ? Do these not feel too keenly the stress of foreign competition ? We have the lead mining industry of British Columbia crushed by the united effects of an American combine, an American prohibitive tariff and a non-protecting Canadian tariff. The most magnificent mining country in the world is practically paralyzed for the want of protection, while my hon. friend says that we have not time to deal with this question at this session—we have more pressing and weighty matters in our hands, and these gentlemen had better come another year. Would it mean nothing to the immigrants who are pouring into the North-west to have 100,000 people added to the population of British Columbia, engaged in the lead mining and other legitimate industries which ought to be built up in that province ? An example of the value of a home market is found in the North-west at the present time. The people are pouring into that country, and we are finding there for the manufactures and agricultural products of eastern Canada a better market than they had before, while at the same time various industries in British Columbia have been stimulated by the fact of that immigration. These movements react on each other.

What is our position with respect to the United States ? We buy from them about $72,000,000 of manufactured goods, and we sell to them $6,024,000. We buy from them $28,000,000 of agricultural products and products of animals, and we sell to them of the same articles less than $8,000,000. All our producers and manufacturers are confronted in that country by a practically prohibitive tariff. I maintain that the Finance Minister does not take the proper view of the situation when he says that we had better postpone the revising of our tariff until after we have negotiated on trade matters with the United States. Their tariff is practically double ours, and we with a tariff half as high as theirs are going to negotiate with them. What is the objection to putting our tariff on a better and fairer basis first, and then going to negotiate with the United States ? Why do we have to wait until my hon. friend the Prime Minister gets further letters from Senator Fairbanks in reference to resuming those negotiations which I thought from the right hon. gentleman's remarks in Montreal about a year ago had come for ever to an end ? I say it is bad policy first to give to the United States such concessions as we gave in 1897, to continue these concessions to the present year, and then to say that we will avoid touching our tariff at all in order that when we come to negotiate with the United States we may go there handicapped. No, the stronger policy is the better one. Let us first deal with our tariff from the standpoint of our own interests, recognizing that in doing so we must have regard to certain conditions existing in other countries. Then, having dealt with our tariff in a strong and bold way, if the United States desire to negotiate, we can inform them that we are at their service and ready to take up the matter at any time they may desire.

Sir we propose at this juncture to renew our declaration of policy of last year with regard to the tariff. As I have already said, the question of preferential trade will be dealt with later. The resolution which I wish to move is as follows :

That all the words after the word 'that' in the proposed motion be left out, and the following substituted therefor :—

This House, regarding the operation of the present tariff as unsatisfactory, is of opinion that this country requires a declared policy of such adequate protection to its labour, agricultural products, manufactures and industries, as will at all time secure the Canadian market for Canadians ;

And that the financial policy of the government should include a measure for the thorough and judicious readjustment of the tariff at the present session.

