This is a Lecture in which ladies almost invariably take particular interest, coming out sometimes in great numbers, in the most inclement weather, and frequently in delicate health, to atterd it , and they are often kind enough to assure me that they do not regret the oxposure, and that they would not have missed the Lecture for any consideratlon. To all sueh, however sensitive in the Lungs, I would say that comfortably clad and with dry feet and a light woolen muffer upon the mouth, so as to breathe through it only, as a respirator, while out doors, there is no danger, while there may be much pleasure and profit in attending the Lecture. Commences at 8 o'clock, P. M., and continues just one hour.

OFINIOINE OE MIFXE HEREEE

Prof. O'Larary.-Although he has an Irish name, he is a good specimen of the Massachusetts Yanke, of the best type. He is almost as uraphic as Gough--bumorous at times, and sometimes severe; but not a foolish, trite, or trifing expression escaped liis lips. Being auply provided with illustrations, both natural and artificial, he is able to make his subjeet perfectly oomprehensible to the commonest understanding.
Those who pre in search of practical knowlelge of the laws of health and adantation will do well to attend; and even those who have no bigher aim than the enjoyment of a few evenings of rational amusement, will be well compensated --Pittshurgh (Pu.) Gazetic.
