GIRL KIDNAPPED BY AUTO BANDITS

Forced to Get Into Robber's Car After Escort Had Been Held up and Robbed

Buffalo, N. Y., June 4.—Three men were held up and a girl kidnapped early to-day by auto bandits believed to be the same gang which staged fifteen highway robberies in Buffalo over the week-end. Details of plain clothes policemen armed with sawed off shot guns had patrolled the city all night in hopes of curbing the depredations. The gang's activities to-day ended with the wrecking in William Street, near the city line of their car the same one which police believe has figured in nearly all of the hold-ups since Saturday night.

Miss Dorothy Wilzewaka, 17 years old, was forced to get into the robbers' car after her escort had been held in Bailey Avenue and robbed of a small amount of cash and jewelry. After going through the man's pockets under cover of revolvers, the four men who comprised the party seized the girl and forced into the car. She screamed and was gagged.

Beyond the city line the driver of the bandit car, mistaking a car behind for a pursuing police machine attempted to turn into a side street at high speed and the bandit automobile toppled into a ditch at the side of the road. None of the occupants were injured. The bandits gave the girl the look-alike from her companion, took her to the trolley line and told her to take a Lancaster car home.

The wrecked bandit car was identified as having been stolen. Two other men were held up and relieved of $150 and jewelry.

SALVAGING LAURENTIC GOLD

The British Admiralty is finishing the most successful job of salvaging since the war in recovering almost the entire amount of gold that went down with the Laurentic when she was sunk off the north coast of Ireland in 1917, white coming to Halifax. The salvage work was continued with greatest persistence for the last seven years and in the face of many difficulties, and has resulted, the Long-bureau of the Sun says, in leaving with the wreck less than $1,000,000 of the sunken $25,000,000.

Before the world war the Laurentic was the largest steamship in the Canadian trade. It was transformed into an auxiliary cruiser, and at the time it was sunk by a torpedo from a German submarine it was bringing a consignment of gold to New York. Three hundred lives were lost in the disaster and the ship settled down in the sand off the mouth of Lough Swilly on the Donegal coast. An effort was almost immediately made to salvage the gold, but as the German submarine remained in the vicinity of the wreck, it was accompanied by considerable peril to the operators.

Despite this fact the first two years of the salvage work were the most fruitful in results. The divers in their early investigations found that the vessel was lying in such a position that the entry port to the hold where the gold was stored was easily accessible. In two days the divers brought up about $100,000 in gold. More than one quarter of the treasure was recovered in the first two years. In the next two years only $400,000 was brought up. Last October, when operations for the year had ceased, an official statement reported that of the shipment of $25,000,000 there remained $1,200,000 to be recovered.

At the time this report was made the Admiralty called attention to the fact that the wreck was rapidly disintegrating and that the salvage operations would soon have to be discontinued. The season is short, beginning in April and closing the last of August. The report brought in by the Admiralty ship indicates that this year's search has been successful. The recovery of this treasure has brought about the introduction of an almost entirely new system of salvage work. This was necessary in order to meet the problems with which the divers were confronted. The currents at this point are especially strong and uncertain, and the changing sands brought many shifts in the position of the wreck. A method was developed for protecting the wreck against sand when the divers were investigating it and also of lowering and raising the workmen from the depths of the sea and of safeguarding them while they were at work.

PRINCE HOPES TO VISIT E. P. RANCH

Anxious to Have Another Holiday in the open on His Ranch in Alberta

London, June 3.—In spite of all contradictions and details it is generally known in court and official circles that the Prince of Wales is most anxious to visit his ranch in Alberta once more this fall.

The only difficulty that lies in the way is the fulfillment of the multitude of engagements which have been made for him and this may prove the stumbling block to prevent the visit. The Prince not only wishes to see what progress has been made on the improvements designed and agreed to since his last visit, but also feels that a change to the free life of the open air on the ranch is essential after the tiring and harassing duties both social and official which a peculiarly brilliant London season have in store for him this summer.

Horses for Ranch. The thoroughbred horses purchased by Prof. Carlisle for the E. P. ranch are sailing by the Cunarder Canada. Sir Godfrey Thomas says that nothing has been definitely settled as yet regarding the Prince's proposed visit to the ranch this fall. The Prince of Wales is to have an opportunity to ride a typical Mexican cow pony.

United States "punchers" who are to participate with a number of crack riders from the Canadian west in the rodeo at the British Empire Exhibition in Wembley, England, have decided to present him with Tejana, one of the best mounts, according to Captain Thomas R. Hickman of the Texas rangers.

Tejana, born eight years ago in Chihuahua, is a spirited mustang 14 hands high with a sleek black coat and white hocks. The pony and the "puncher" called from New York last week. Outfits from Argentina and Australia in addition to the Canadian and United States riders will compete in the roping, bucking and bull dogging contests at Wembley.

BORDEN WILL NOT ACT AS CHAIRMAN

Former Canadian Premier Will Not Figure on Commission to Fix Boundary between Northern and Southern Ireland.

London, June 3.—Sir Robert Borden, former Canadian Prime Minister, will not be the chairman of the commission to fix the boundary between Northern and Southern Ireland, the London correspondent of the Manchester Guardian. The correspondence with Sir Robert on the matter of his appointment as chairman of the commission is closed, the same authority says, and Sir Robert strictly speaking Sir Robert may not have refused the appointment, he at any rate is not available thereof.

"Nor will it be any other dominion statesman who will be chairman of the boundary commission," says the Guardian correspondent for there is no other with the necessary detachment from active politics, especially from Irish affairs.

FLOODS CAUSE BIG DAMAGE IN ENGLAND

Inundations Which are Described as Worst in Forty Years Have Followed Heavy Week-end Rains

London, June 4.—Floods described as the worst in forty years have followed the heavy week-end rains in England, the inundations on the north of England suffering the most. Several persons are reported drowned, much live stock has been destroyed and the property damage is heavy, many farms having been inundated. The forecasters hold out little hope of immediate relief, indicating that more rain may be expected.

Worcester, however, suffered specially by the flood. The river Severn is twenty-two feet above normal and the famous cricket ground is completely submerged. The agricultural show which was being held at Worcester has been abandoned, the tops of the tents thereof alone cleaning the water. Scores of cottages are affected by the floods at Worcester, the lower rooms in many of them being rendered uninhabitable. The electric lighting works are stopped.

A congregation leaving a church after services at Lanchester, Durham, had to be carried to high ground by the plover, so quickly did the flood become serious there.

At Darlington, Durham, the flood in the west gate has been experienced in forty years. Crosses of stone mingle with big trees floating down the stream.

ANTI-DRYERS TO HAVE WORLD CONGRESS

London, June 4.—A two-day World Congress to throw rocks in the path of prohibition will open here on June 24.

Men and women, physicians, authors, scientists, politicians and political clubs, addressing delegates to the International Anti-Prohibition Congress, will combat alleged joys and benefits of moderate drinking with alleged gloom of life without liquor. From nearly every civilized country, delegations are expected to attend to prevent its spread.

A tea at the Savoy Hotel, the convention headquarters, will be the principal feature of the entertainment programme.

VIRGINIA SCHOOLBOY HAS MIRROR VISION

Peculiar Case of Boy Who Sees, Writes and Reads Backwards

Fairmont, W. Va., June 3.—Sam Tiana, a fourth-grade pupil in the public school here, has a mirrored vision. Sam sees backwards, reads backwards, writes backwards and even sees things coming towards him that are actually going away.

The boy moved here several weeks ago from Monongah and entered the fourth grade. Something seemed to be the matter with Sam, and an examination was arranged.

Sam turned in some home-work and all his letters were backwards, beginning at the right-hand side of the paper and going over to the left, so that it was unrecognizable, unless reflected in a mirror.

Instinct has taught the youth to take care of himself. When he is crossing a street he realizes that a car which seems to be going away from him is actually coming towards him. When Sam sees steps which seem to lead up, he steps down, or goes around them.

According to physicians who have examined the boy, there is no cure for mirror vision, but it is thought the child can be trained to read and write correctly.

Sam can copy writing exactly now, but when left alone he writes from the wrong side of the paper.

DUNLOP TIRES

30 Years in Canada

Many a man is driving a motor today who was not born when Dunlop Tires first appeared on the highways of Canada.

Thirty years is a long time in the tire business. It is the very history of the industry. 1888 saw the world's first pneumatic tire; 1894 saw the industry taking hold in Canada.

Doesn't it stand to reason, in view of the above facts, that we must be better equipped and better qualified to serve the exacting demands of tire users?

Knowing the past of the Tire Industry so well, we must have pretty good intuition regarding not only the needs of the present, but the possibilities of the future.

The Care of the Horse

Every sore, every injury, every abrasion on a horse's back is due to a definite cause, which, if removed, produces no further effect (says an expert). The fit of a collar or a saddle is as essential to the comfort of a horse as is the fit of a pair of boots to a man's comfort and temper. If a horse goes lame—look in the foot first! Take the shoes off and examine for corns, nails, etc. Sixty per cent. of lamenesses ditto—ditto.

Feeding whole grain to horses is useless. Eighty-five per cent. of it is undigested. Crush it and the position is reversed. Look to your horse's teeth. A horse with bad teeth is like a man with them. It cannot chew its food. Hence we get colic, etc.

The cause of broken knees generally is due to one of the following:—Bad action; animals being tired from over-driving or over-loading, especially when not in good condition; long toes or too thick toes, which have the same effect; saddle pressure from the bars or stirrups pressing out and interfering with the action of the shoulder blade. This shortens the stride and induces stumbling.

When the skin is broken the condition is not serious, but needs rest and antiseptic dressings. If joint oil escapes the condition is very serious, and such cases often do not recover except under skilled treatment. A constant stream of cold water should be kept running over the knees in these cases, and they should be syringed out with hydrogen peroxide. It is of interest to know that the real or anatomical knee of the horse is the tibia. The popularly named "knee" of the front limb corresponds with the wrist of a man.—Ottago Witness.

Butter And Cheese Grading Regulations

The amended regulations for grading butter and cheese for export are contained in the pamphlet "Acts, Orders and Regulations No. 14" of the Department of Agriculture at Ottawa. Four grades are provided both for cheese and butter. They are designated "Special," "First," "Second" and "Third" grade. The scores and definitions for each grade are given. The regulations provide that every cheese and every package containing cheese or butter, shall be marked at the factory with the vat or churning number, which shall run consecutively throughout the calendar year commencing with Number 1. A certificate for butter made from pasteurized cream is good for six weeks, and from unpasteurized cream, the certificate is good for three weeks only. Grading is to be done by officials in such a manner and in such officials designated places as to give the least inconvenience to manufacturers and exporters.

The Value of Milk As a Food

The dairy farmer should take pride in the fact that he produces such a splendid food as milk. He should consider this an unusual duty and take pride in doing that duty well.

When a big life insurance company, like the Metropolitan, devotes nearly a full page in one of the leading magazines to set forth the food value and necessity of milk, there can be no other conclusion but that it is the most important food for human beings. The Metropolitan Life Insurance Company in its advertisements makes in part:

"There are times, now and then, when we all feel a little below par. If instead of rushing off for a bottle of Dr. Bunkum's Tonic to brace us up, we would go to Nature herself for the greatest of all food tonics—milk—we would be a different lot of men and women."

"Milk is Nature's patent, the only food she ever made solely for food. It cannot be reproduced artificially. Only Nature herself can perfectly blend all the elements of a well balanced diet as she has in milk."

"Milk sounds like a patent medicine when its virtues are catalogued. It is the oldest prescription in the world. Nature's prescription for the building of strong healthy bodies, Nature's revitalizer, Nature's maker of rich, red blood, Nature's nerve quieter, Nature's antidote for that 'tired feeling'."

"If milk were put up in bottles of a different shape and size, if it were given a fanciful name and announced for what it really is, as 'the greatest body builder and health restorative in the world,' people would flock to buy it at fancy prices."

"Drink more milk and save money."

If the dairymen of this country had as much enthusiasm for their product as the writer of this advertisement, we would need more cows to produce an adequate supply of dairy products. Hoard's Dairyman.

C. P. R. TO EXTEND Will Construct Some 500 Miles of Branch Lines in Saskatchewan and Alberta

Winnipeg, June 2.—The construction of approximately 500 miles of branch lines in Saskatchewan and Alberta will be undertaken by the C. P. R. this year, it was announced here yesterday by D. C. Coleman, vice-president in charge of western lines. Considerable work has already been carried on on some of the branch lines.

Here and There

Shipments of grain from the Canadian Pacific River districts over the Hudson Bay and British Columbia Railways to the coast have totaled 4,711,200 bushels of wheat and 1,701,000 bushels of other grains.

The longest solid train of red oak logs, grain, supplies ever hauled by the Canadian Pacific Railway, from Vancouver, B.C. to Chicago and the Eastern States, several miles long, left the port of Vancouver on May 25. The train will be shipped in the near future by the Hasting Marit Lumber Company, by whom the consignment was forwarded.

A dispatch recently sent from London states that Professor G. H. of the B. P. ranch, is sailing for Canada shortly, taking with him a number of brood mares and other stock for the ranch. The Prince of Wales continues to evince the deepest interest in all the doings of the ranch and keeps in close touch with things there.

Approximately the same acreage as produced the West's bumper crop last year will be under cultivation this season. The outlook now is that over 14,000,000 acres of land will be ready for seed under generally favorable conditions. The estimated acreage to be seeded this year, by provinces, is as follows: Manitoba, 4,450,000; Saskatchewan, 8,854,190; Alberta, 3,472,815.

The value of boots and shoes exported by Canada during the year ended March, 1924, more than doubled the value of Canadian boots and shoes bought by other countries during the preceding year. Last year the exports were valued at $204,815, and for the preceding year at $109,034. The United States was the chief buyer, taking 2,827 pairs of Japan second, taking 1,823 pairs.

Concluding her round-the-world cruise, the palatial Canadian Pacific steamship "Empress of Canada" docks at Vancouver on May 24th. Reports indicate that this four-months pleasure voyage under the genial care of Captain Robinson, who of the Japanese disaster, has been a splendid success, the passengers being loud in their declarations of satisfaction.

During the fiscal year ending March 31st, 1924, Canada imported goods to the value of $295,554,911, an increase of $91,000,000 compared with the previous similar twelve months, while she exported $1,041,141,054, an increase of about $110,000,000. The total trade increased in that twelve-month period by about $20,000,000, compared with the corresponding period a year ago.

It is expected that negotiations between the British Government and the Dominion of Newfoundland will lead to the settlement of several long-standing issues. The Dominion of Newfoundland is to be a separate Dominion, but the Dominion will be provided with a constitution, which will be similar to that of the Dominion of Newfoundland, and will be subject to the Dominion of Newfoundland.

The Ministry of the penitentiary has announced that the Dominion of Newfoundland will be a separate Dominion, but the Dominion will be provided with a constitution, which will be similar to that of the Dominion of Newfoundland, and will be subject to the Dominion of Newfoundland.

WOULD MAKE A GOOD WIFE

A woman who can be a member of a church choir for ten years and even have a suitable world make a fine wife for any man.

It is estimated that over 50,000 people are now in the United States who are members of the Church of Christ, and that the number is increasing rapidly. The Church of Christ is a religious organization that is based on the Bible and the teachings of Jesus Christ. It is a church that is open to all people, and it is a church that is full of life and joy. If you are looking for a good wife, look no further than the Church of Christ. You will find a woman who is devoted to her faith, who is kind and loving, and who will make a fine wife for any man.

Alberta has maintained an average yield of spring wheat of 19 1/2 bushels per acre over a period of twenty-six years, according to a chart prepared by the Department of Agriculture. In addition, wheat has averaged over the same period 20.15 bushels; oats, 35.79 bushels; barley, 26.10 bushels; 27 1/2 bushels and flax, 8.71 bushels.

A feature of the annual banquet and convention of the officials of the Canadian Pacific Railway, which were held at Quebec on March 22nd, was the representation, in the banquet hall, of a full-sized locomotive of the latest type emerging from a tunnel. Built of wood at Angus Shops, Montreal, it was in all respects perfect. At a pre-arranged moment, the bell rang and the whistle blew, while the headlight became a moving picture projector.

Indications of a great season in immigration are seen by Canadian Pacific officials in the arrival at St. John, N.B. during the week-end of March 29-30, of 1,441 third-class passengers, aboard the Company's steamship Montserrat and Metagama. The Montserrat had on board 1,200 of these passengers, which constitutes a record for the season.

Out of a total production of 10,780,150 pounds of creamery butter in 1923, Manitoba exported $260,254 pounds, valued at $1,115,169. Shipments were made to Great Britain, New York, Chicago and Montreal. In addition, there were 800,000 pounds of butter fat were shipped to the United States.

In a speech to the higher officials of the Canadian Pacific Railway on the 29th of March, Mr. W. W. Beatty, President, pointed out that 95 per cent. of the passengers who are held in Great Britain are from Canada and 50 per cent. in the United States. He stated that the Corporation is absolutely controlled within the British Empire, and he added, that control is being appreciably strengthened as the years go by.

TAX COMPARISONS

Officials at Ottawa have worked out some comparisons between the federal income tax in Canada and in the United States, following the introduction of the new American taxation legislation which makes very extensive reductions as compared with former conditions. In illustrating how much higher the Canadian income tax is now than the American, particularly on the smaller incomes, this table is given. The figures are for a married man with out children:

Income	Canada	United States
$3,000	$40.00	$7.50
4,000	80.00	22.50
5,000	120.00	37.50
6,000	178.50	57.50
7,000	238.50	87.50
10,000	418.50	157.50
20,000	2,089.50	1,017.50
50,000	9,649.50	5,137.50
1,000,000	696,349.50	429,616.50

The comparison, so far as it goes, is rather striking. Also, there is this to be considered. In Canada earned income and unearned income are treated alike, whereas under the American law there is now a twenty-five per cent. reduction on earned income, and all incomes up to $5,000 are considered earned.

Ottawa dispatches say that the American taxation changes with respect to income are being studied with interest in political circles because it is felt that the income tax in Canada must, in the course of time, be gradually brought approximately to the level of that in the country alongside us, but while it is agreed that constant agitation will force down the income tax in Canada, some are asking how the loss of revenue will be made up. Conservative newspapers are pointing out that the customs and excise collections during April and May show a very heavy decrease, much more than was anticipated because of the reduction of the tariff and the changes in the sales tax. Imports have been falling off, but it is obviously unwise to try to predict the year's income from two months alone. In government circles it is argued that to recognize that before another session comes the agitation for a lower income tax is likely to be both widespread and strong.

DANGER TO AVOID
The embargo on our pulpwood exports is an axiom recognized by all economists, and one that is self-evident, logically and through experience. The raw materials which as at Home and Maritime Made movement owners are the necessary and safest elements for its economical development, and consequently every nation must be careful to retain the advancement of the Dominion as a whole.

Here's an anonymous definition clipped from a newspaper: "A man who is clean both inside and out, who neither looks up to the rich nor down to the poor, who can lose without squealing and win without bragging, who is considerate of women, children and old people, who is too brave to lie, too generous to cheat and who takes his share of the world and lets other people have theirs."

It must be noted that the embargo, if applied practically and fairly, implies some consideration having as their object the safeguarding, as much as possible, of the legitimate interests of the wood merchants.
The matter seems a rather easy one, because on the one hand the Canadian industries are evidently in a position to pay the same price for pulpwood as their American competitors who have to beat, in addition, heavy transportation charges, and who, on the other hand, are interested in securing this wood from individuals, in order to preserve their own reserves. They will thus be able to carry on a wise and methodical exploitation of these reserves which constitute the whole future of their industry.

So from whatever angle the proposed embargo on the exploitation of our pulpwood is considered, it is well to adopt it courageously.
Recently a Canadian who was passing through St. Petersburg, Florida, was astonished to find that one of the newspapers of this small town of some 25,000 inhabitants, the "Times", was getting its newsprint supply from a paper mill in Abitibi, and that one single edition contained one hundred and twenty four pages. How much also could be said of the publications in the large cities of the United States which get their pulpwood from the Province of Quebec, and make their newsprint therefrom. They are doing their share in the systematic devastation of our forests, whilst they are thus protecting the forest reserves of their own country. It is a known fact that 85 per cent of the pulp produced in Canada is exported to our neighbors of the great Republic.

It is not time to call a halt to this dilapidation of our forests. We must at all cost safeguard our national heritage.
THE "BUY AT HOME AND MARITIME MADE" CAMPAIGN
Organization work in connection with the "Buy at Home and Maritime Made Campaign" is well under way and the Campaign Prospectus has been endorsed by several of the Maritime Boards of Trade. The Retail Merchants Associations of Nova Scotia and New Brunswick have also declared strongly for the movement. The organizers will shortly go before the Board of Trade and Retail Merchants of Prince Edward Island. It is expected that in about three weeks the whole of the three provinces will have been covered. A special effort is being made to have every organized body in the Maritime Provinces endorse the campaign.

As soon as organization work is completed the campaign will commence and, by newspaper advertisement, lectures and pamphlets, the citizens of these three provinces will be urged to buy at home and ask for Maritime Made goods.
It will be pointed out that the key to the key to prosperity, and that an effort should be made to reach Maritime money within our reach instead of, as is the case at present, sending out seventy per cent of it out of the Maritimes as fast as it is earned.
By buying at home we help to create business for local industries. All this means more employment and, consequently, greater prosperity. It is one of great potential benefits. By getting behind the "Buy at Home and Maritime Made" movement, maritime people will truly be helping to develop their section of Canada and, incidentally, making a worth while contribution towards the advancement of the Dominion as a whole.

DEFINING A GENTLEMAN
Here's an anonymous definition clipped from a newspaper: "A man who is clean both inside and out, who neither looks up to the rich nor down to the poor, who can lose without squealing and win without bragging, who is considerate of women, children and old people, who is too brave to lie, too generous to cheat and who takes his share of the world and lets other people have theirs."

The philosopher who says no new crime has been invented in a thousand years hasn't heard many of the new popular songs.
Every man exerts an influence for good or bad, but only the few get money for it.
A reformer is a man who wishes to make you as good as he would like to be.
Well, why shouldn't speech be free? Very little of it is worth anything.
It frequently happens that the finishing touches on friendship are touches for loans.

MAKE SURVEY FOR NEW SETTLERS

D. S. C. R. to Begin Work at Moncton—Room for For 50,000
There is room for 50,000 more settlers in the Maritime provinces, declared Col. B. Innes, of the Soldiers Civil Re-establishment who was in the city yesterday enroute to Ottawa on departmental business. These people could be located on farms which have been vacant through death and which are still of high value, and on surplus land owned by farmers who possess more than 100 acres, there are ten thousand such in these provinces. Col. Innes said, and they have far more than they will ever be able to work profitably.

Of Interest to Women

Taking Care of Kitchen Utensils

The proper care of kitchen utensils is a distinct and, indeed, an important phase of housekeeping and the thoughtful wife and housekeeper is always on the alert for helpful hints regarding this department of her daily activities.

To clean a FRYING PAN rub with a hard crust of bread, and wash with hot water and washing soda.

To clean enameled or GRANITE UTENSILS whose contents have been allowed to burn, fill with cold water, and a piece of washing soda the size of an egg, and heat to boiling point.

SAUCE PANS and baking dishes should be filled with cold water immediately after use, so as to prevent the fragments clinging to them.

THE TEA KETTLE: Never use water which has been standing overnight in the tea kettle.

THE CARE OF THE REFRIGERATOR is of great importance. It may be regularly and thoroughly washed with hot water in which a piece of washing soda as large as an egg has been dissolved.

RUSTED IRONWARE or stoves may be cleaned by smearing thickly with fat or grease, and then covered with powdered quicklime and left for several hours.

To restore the color of IVORY handled knives after they have become yellow, rub them with fine emery or sand paper.

COFFEE POTS should always be bright on the inside to insure good coffee. By occasionally boiling soap

Some New Recipes For the Dessert

Meat Puddings

BEUF SUET PUDDING 1-1/2 lb. beef suet 4 large spoons flour 1 egg half-pint milk Chop suet very fine. Mix with the flour; beat egg well and put with the milk; then mix all together; wet your cloth in boiling water, flour it, tie rather loose to allow pudding to swell; put in boiling water and boil one and one-quarter hours.

Steamed Pudding 2 cups stale cake crumbs pressed lightly into bowl for steaming 1/4 cup molasses 1/4 cup milk 1/4 cup butter 1/2 cup flour 1 tsp. soda, pinch salt. Add cinnamon, clove, nutmeg and raisins to suit taste.

Ice Orange Pudding Cook 1-2 cup rice in 1 quart rich milk with 3/4 cup sugar, and chop, rind 1 orange, until rice is soft, then add juice of 1 orange 1-2 teaspoon of vanilla, 1 teaspoon of orange-flower water, yolks of 4 eggs, 1-2 cup heavy cream.

Belmont Pudding Six tablespoons flour, 2 eggs, little salt, 1 small teaspoon baking powder, 1 pint milk. Make batter as you would for pancakes. Place in dish and put under the broiler for few minutes.

BRASS KETTLES: Do not use a brass kettle for cooking until it is thoroughly cleaned with salt and vinegar.

THE STOVE should have a cleaning inside and out every two weeks. Many times it is blamed for not drawing well when it is clogged with ashes.

For Bridal Showers

The bridal shower is a most delightful way of showing your affection for your girl friend who is about to be married and will be an occasion always remembered with pleasure by her.

The centerpiece may be made from a round cardboard box or even a deep pie tin covered with yellow crepe paper.

Now for an appropriate receptacle for the shower gifts. How do you like the idea of a clothes basket covered with rose petals cut in strips and pasted on to a plain crepe paper foundation?

A shirtwaist box may be used transformed into a bed of twisted petals. Wires wrapped with strips of crepe paper are fastened to sides of box to form handle, which is elaborately trimmed with heart cutouts on ribbons and ribbon bows.

REAL SUCCESS

A man who knew a lot about human nature died in an eastern town the other day. His will showed that he knew folks, and young folks especially. He was wealthy but he left little to his children. His will is full of ideas. He says things in it that are worth listening to.

For instance: "I desire that my children shall be strong and sturdy and courageous; that my boys strive for honor, fame and a reasonable competency; rather than great fortunes; that they serve women; that my daughters may have the ambition to be loving wives; helpful, true and loving wives and to take their husbands men of character, thrift and industry, rather than of fortune and title."

But beware of harsh cleansing methods. They injure skin. Wash thoroughly with Palmolive Soap—each night before retiring. Rub the creamy, foamy lather well into the tiny pores. Rinse — and repeat the washing. This rinses again.

Then—if skin is dry—apply a little cold cream. That is all. Skin so cared for is not injured by cosmetics, by wind and sun, or by dirt.

NEWCASTLE FIRM WILL RE-BUILD

J. D. Creaghan Enthusiastic Over Business Outlook For Coming Summer

J. D. Creaghan & Co. will rebuild their store at Newcastle. Plans for rebuilding are now under way and just as soon as the debris can be cleared away, the work of construction will be started.

According to J. D. Creaghan, senior partner of the firm, the loss has not been so great as anticipated, and there has been very little interruption of business as they had been able to draw on their other stores at Chatham and Moncton for supplies while getting a new stock into Newcastle. The night of the fire three stores had been "bused" and these would be used until the new building was complete.

Mr. Creaghan is enthusiastic over the outlook for business in general in Newcastle and said a banner summer was looked for there.

AMERICAN FLYERS

IN ROUGH WEATHER U. S. Aviators Swam to a Destroyer to Spend Night in Comfort.

Kushimoto, Japan, June 8.—Arriving here in a heavy storm on Sunday afternoon, the American round-the-world flyers, were unable to proceed immediately to Kagoshima, their last stopping place in Japan, as they had planned.

So high were the waves at Kushimoto that the Americans were not able to refuel their planes, nor to board the boats sent out to meet them. Tying their machines to some nearby buoy near Ohimo, they plunged overboard and swam to a destroyer on which they spent the night.

The world flyers flew from Kasumigaura early Sunday, arriving here at 10.22 a. m.

Off For Shanghai

Nagasaki, Japan, June 8.—The United States airmen on a round-the-world flight arrived at Kagoshima, Island of Kyushu, at 7.02 o'clock this evening from Kushimoto. They left Kushimoto at 12.50 this afternoon which they had reached at 10.22 Sunday morning. They made the 850 mile flight from Kushimoto, fifty miles north of Tokio, which point they left at 6.07 Sunday morning, in four hours and twenty five minutes.

The fliers hope to hop off today from Kogohima across the Yellow Sea to Shanghai, a distance of 500 miles.

SAYS MALE SPECIES MORE BRAINY THAN FEMALE

Philadelphia Physician Gives Address on Significance of Brain Weight —Tall Persons Have More Brains than Short People

Philadelphia, June 9.—The male species is more brainy than the female, Dr. Henry P. Donaldson, this city, last night told the American Neurological Association in an address on the significance of brain weight. However, Dr. Donaldson explained there were exceptions, as the effect of brain weight mentality was responsible for a group rule and did not hold good for every individual. In general, the speaker declared, tall persons of both sexes have more brains than short persons.

"As a group," Dr. Donaldson said, large headed people are capable of more work and clearer thinking because their brain cells are larger. There is a difference on the average of twelve per cent in the weight of brains of men and women."

Unpopular Habits.

"Those new neighbors of ours aren't liked very well."

"What's the trouble?"

Reports from England state that it has been universally conceded that Canada's pavilion was in the best condition when the King opened the British Empire Exhibition at Wembley on April 23rd. "It was the Canadian building," the reports said, "which stood up and complete to the last nail that led all others in the race to the finish in time for to-day's official opening."

Over 3,000 settlers left Liverpool for Canada on April 26th. That the Indian village of Hopelogan, which stood on the site of the present city of Montreal, was a place of about fifty wooden houses having a population of some 4,000 souls when Jacques Cartier sailed up the St. Lawrence, was the assertion made by Dr. W. D. Lighthall before the Antiquarian and Numismatic Society of Montreal recently. Dr. Lighthall was able to give the boundaries of the village and described it as resembling the home of Cedric the Fox, in "Ivanhoe."

EXCITING CHASE AFTER RUM-RUNNING CRAFT
New London, Conn., June 11.—
Three men including the captain of the rum-laden yacht Vergein, of New York, were wounded, one severely, when the coast guard cutter Seminoles fired on the vessel which attempted to escape capture eight miles southeast of Block Island last night. The crew were held for trial before United Vergein was brought in here early today in custody of the Seminoles. John Stack, 25, of Brooklyn, N. Y., a member of the crew, was removed to a hospital here, suffering from a bleeding wound on his right leg which was caused by a bullet from the Seminoles. The captain and another member of the crew were treated for injuries sustained by the Seminoles. The captain and thirteen members of the crew were held for trial before United States Commissioner Mathewson today. All refused to give their names.

The Vergein sailed out of Newport early yesterday taking a cargo of rum. She was sighted by the Seminoles at 11:30 p. m. at Montauk Point, according to reports from members of the crew. When spotted by the Seminoles she was apparently headed toward the Connecticut shore.
Ordered to stop by Captain Philip H.
Stack, she was fired on and the Seminoles went alongside.

full speed ahead, taking a zig-zag course. A blank shot failed to halt and four solid shots failed to hit the mark.
Two shells were then fired by the Seminoles which were seen to burst near the Vergein. The Seminoles was seen to fire a shot which struck the deck with bang on the bridge. A second shot hit the pilot house, causing injury to Stack, the captain and one other man. The shots halted the rum-laden craft and the Seminoles went alongside.

SOME FIGURES ON CANADA'S WEALTH

Interesting Statistics Shown in Report by Dominion Bureau Which Has Concluded Survey of Resources.

Ottawa, June 10.—Canada's national wealth in 1921 was $29,155,000,000 according to a report issued by the Dominion Bureau of Statistics which has concluded a survey of the national wealth of the Dominion in that year by the inventory method. In the tabulation, agricultural wealth comes first with $7,283,871,126, nearly thirty-six per cent of the total and about $908 per head of population. Of the provinces, Ontario ranks first with an estimated aggregate wealth of $7,283,871,126, which is thirty-three per cent of the total wealth. Quebec comes next with $5,541,519,267. Saskatchewan is estimated at $2,845,842,000; Alberta at $1,950,873,000; Manitoba, $1,659,495,000; British Columbia, $1,365,896,000; Nova Scotia, $753,897,986; New Brunswick, $677,586,000; Prince Edward Island $119,921,000 and the Yukon, $16,886,000.

The Yukon led with $4,668; Saskatchewan was last $3,757; Alberta, $3,517; Manitoba, $2,705; British Columbia, $2,604; Ontario $2,507; Quebec, $2,347; New Brunswick, $1,541; Nova Scotia $1,437; Prince Edward Island, $1,258.

For the whole Dominion the aggregate per capita wealth was $2,625. Next to agricultural wealth and urban real property, Canada's investments in steam railways and their equipment is the highest factor, being estimated at $2,169,219,000, the valuation of urban property based on reports of municipal assessors being $5,761,500,000. The value of forests is placed at nearly two billions, the manufacturers at $1,972,000,000 (including machinery, stocks on hand, etc.) and household furnishings, clothing, automobiles, etc., at $1,344,900,000. The specie held by chartered banks and estimated for public holdings was $202,000,000.

Value of Canada's mines was estimated at $559,214,000.

The Wooden Ship and The Coming of the Railway —Where Captain Kidd Sailed—An Old Indian Prophecy—A Quaint Town Resplendent in Scenic Beauty and Rich in Legendary Lore—Written by Kate Simpson Hayes in The Winnipeg Mirror.

Not only to Dalhousie readers, but to those throughout the North Shore district as well as many former residents now located in far countries the following article will have a dual interest because it comes from the pen of a former Restigouche girl who has become one of Canada's foremost women journalists. Because of this fact the Graphic takes pleasure in presenting it to its readers.—Ed.

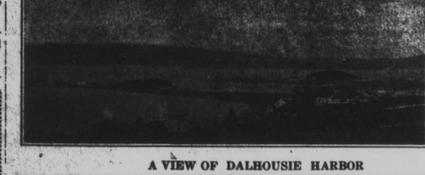

My old-fashioned Canadian town has for two centuries hidden itself in a cleft in the New Brunswick hills. It has high cliffs and a bonnie bathing beach than runs for many merry miles along the Restigouche river, where the salt sea spray splashes gave brain and brawn to the building of newer towns. None but the old were left at home. A blight fell upon the land and the only remainder left of the good old days was the mail coach, drawn by relay horses all foam-flecked, galloping along the highway, drawing up at Bathurst to take on the odd passenger for Black Landing—loosing of a mail bag at Belledune, to race by Nash's Creek and pretty Charlie where the foaming horses drew up at Dickie's tavern, where a hurry-scurry meal was obtained before resuming a flight along the winding valley and over the big bridge till it reached the hill that looked down into Dalhousie, my little old-fashioned town.

scholars that fished and carried in lively competition. That was a time when trade and commerce with foreign lands prevailed—when man reckoned their earnings in pounds, shillings and pence—it was in the proud days of the wooden ship—for New Brunswick held great forest lands and ship-building was at its height. Godly ships they were, fashioned out of the native timbers and oak, with black hulk and plow. To see the new timbers take shape and form, to see the skeleton frame, outlined one day against the blue sky—the next to witness it burst into living, breathing life as it left the stanchions to glide gracefully into the deep water, as the swallow leaves its nest; to hear the humors of the builders and the shouts of the townfolk, drowned out by the joyous yell of the school children "let out" for a holiday in honor of the launching, for alas! the day of wooden ships has passed forever.

The sturdy New Brunswick settler found lumbering a paying occupation in those primitive days. All winter of the axe-tracked woods falling timbers filled the land. The deep-cruiser, the river-driver, the pilot (the his and water) they were these figures and filled the small stage of life with swagging gait in those historic days. Seeing the log-drive was a wonderful sight. The logs were floated for hundreds of miles and came down stream noisily, the water was broken at some point for the "jam" had been broken—at some cost of life, perhaps—and now float-

But the merry schoes died out when the wooden ship went out of fashion. Then came panicky days for the doughty little province and its struggling sons. A business depression ensued. The forest seemed to hold its breath—the camps grew silent—the sawmills ceased their whirl of wheels, and the youth of the land, shouldering its bundle, went west to

WORKMAN DROWNS AT EDMUNDSTON

Another of Fraser Companies Employees Badly Injured at Their Mill

Edmundston, N. B., June 9.—A man named Gamache, employed by the Fraser Companies, Limited, here, who was injured while at work in their mill, was said by officials of the company to-day to be recovering. He was reported to have been drowed or dying.

Fred Martin, employed with a crew of men at the Fraser Companies' booms, was drowned when he fell into the millpond and could not be rescued. He was a married man and a family survivor.

It was always by design of Providence a restful place for the weary one of earth. That is why, after a triple decade the little old-fashioned town is coming into its own in 1924: for the railway conscience has been stirred into repentance at last? It is expected that a summer hotel will be built. Summer cottages are to be erected along the sea front. Golf and tennis courses are available. Boats to visit salmon weirs and the lobster traps are to be provided summer guests, a plan of country drives will be formed by a tourist association determined to make my old-fashioned town a quite up-to-date watering place.

But I feel that no innovations will ever do away with the old-time charm of that "pleasing land of drowsy dreams" whose blossoming lanes of fragrant sweetness leads to hills that are crowned by the Canadian maple. They lead on to forest depths where rises a temple not built by hands. Those who go there for recreation will find rest superlative. There is magic in the place which is beautiful beyond all comparison, and its magic comes from the hearts of a people whose hospitality is like its shores, open, ready, free!

CHAPTER I

The trouble from which great events were to come began when Everard Dominey, who had been fighting his way through the scrub for the last three quarters of an hour towards those thin, spiral walls of smoke, urged his pony to a last despairing effort and came crashing through the great slender shrub to pitch forward on his head in the little clearing. It developed the next morning, when he found himself for the first time for many months on a truckle bed, between linen sheets, with a cool, bamboo-tinted roof between him and the relentless sun. He raised a little in the bed.

"Where the mischief am I?" he demanded.

A black boy, seated cross-legged in the entrance of the banda, rose to his feet, mumbled something and disappeared. In a few moments the tall, slim figure of a European, in spotless white riding clothes, stooped down and came over to Dominey's side.

"You are better?" he enquired politely.

"Yes, I am," was the somewhat brusque rejoinder.

"Where the mischief am I, and who are you?"

The newcomer's manner stiffened. He was a person of dignified carriage, and his tone conveyed some measure of rebuke.

"You are within half a mile of the Irtwari River, if you know where that is," he replied.

"Without a doubt."

"And you are German?"

"I have that honor," Dominey whistled softly.

"Awfully sorry to have intruded," he said.

"I left Marlinstein two and a half months ago, with twenty bags and plenty of stores. We were doing a big trek after lions. I took some new Asakaris in and they made trouble for the stores one night and I was obliged to shoot one or two, I was rebuffed to them, and I'm nearly a hundred miles out of my bearings. You couldn't give me a drink, could you?"

"With pleasure, if the doctor approves," was the courteous answer. "Here, Jan!"

The boy sprang up, listened to a word or two of brief command in his own language, and disappeared through the hanging grass which led into another hut. The two men exchanged glances of rather more than ordinary interest. Then Dominey laughed.

"I know what you're thinking," he said.

"It gave me quite a start when you came in. We're devilishly alike, aren't we?"

"There is a very strong likeness between us," the other admitted.

Dominey leaned his head upon his hand and studied his host. The likeness was clear enough, although his advantage was all in favor of the man who stood by the side of the camp bedstead with folded arms. Everard Dominey, for the first twenty-six years of his life, had lived as an ordinary young Englishman of his position—Eton, Oxford, a few years in the Army, a few years about town, during which he had succeeded in making a still more hopeless muddle of his already encumbered estates; and then a blank. Afterwards ten years—at first in the cities, then in the dark places of Africa—years of which no man knew anything. The Everard Dominey of ten years ago had been, without a doubt, good-looking. The finely shaped features remained, but the eyes had lost their lustre, his figure its elasticity, his mouth its firmness. He had the look of a man prematurely to be, wasted by fevers and disipation. Not so his present companion. His features were as finely shaped, cast in an even stronger though sterner mould. His eyes were bright and full of fire, his mouth and chin firm, speaking a man of deeds, his tall figure lithe and supple. He had the air of being in perfect health, in perfect mental and physical condition, a man who lived with dignity and some measure of content, notwithstanding the light gravity of his expression.

"Yes," the Englishman muttered, "there's no doubt about the likeness, though I suppose I should look more like you than I do if I'd taken care of myself. That's why I tried to chuck my life away and pretty nearly succeeded, too."

The dried grasses were thrust on one side, and the doctor entered—a little round man, also clad in immaculate white, with yellow-gold hair and thick spectacles. His countryman pointed towards the bed.

"Will you examine our patient, Herr Doctor, and prescribe for him what is necessary? He has asked for drink. Let him have wine, or whatever is good for him. If he is well enough, he will join our evening meal. I present my excuses. I have a despatch to write."

The man on the couch turned his head and watched the departing figure with a shade of envy in his eyes.

"What is the doctor's name?" he asked the doctor.

The latter looked as though the question were irrelevant.

"It is His Excellency the Major-General Baron Leopold von Ragasteln."

"All that?" Dominey interjected. "Is he the Governor, or something of that sort?"

"He is Military Commandant of the zone," the doctor replied. "He has also a special mission here."

"Dammed fine-looking fellow for a German," Dominey remarked, with unthinking impudence.

The doctor was unmoved. He was feeling his patient's pulse. He concluded his examination a few minutes later.

"You have drunk much whiskey lately, so?" he asked.

"I don't know what the devil it's got to do with you," was the curt reply. "But I drink whiskey whenever I can get it. Who wouldn't in this peculiar climate?"

The doctor shook his head. "The climate is good as far as treatment goes, but the whiskey does not do you any good. I shall drink whiskey whenever I can get it."

"The cook is preparing you some luncheon," the doctor announced, "which it will do you good to eat."

"Send it along," was the enthusiastic reply.

"What a constitution I must have, doctor! The smell of that cooking is making me ravenous."

"Your constitution is still sound if you would only respect it," was the comforting assurance.

"Anything heard of the rest of my party?" Dominey enquired.

"Some bodies of Asakaris have been washed up from the river," the doctor informed him, "and two of your ponies have been eaten by lions. You will excuse, I have the wounds of a native to dress, who was bitten last night by a jaguar."

The traveller, left alone, lay still in the hut, and his thoughts wandered backwards. He looked out over the bare, scrubby stretch of land which had been cleared for the camp, and following the tracks along which he had travelled to the marshy bush and following the mountains fading into the mist beyond the face of his host had carried him back into the past. Puzzled reminiscences tugged into the strings of memory. It came to him later on at dinner time, when they three, the Commandant, the doctor and himself, sat at a little table arranged just outside the hut, that they might catch the faint breeze from the mountains mean of the east-falling dunes. They were the only things that kept the river, from behind which the sun comes up every morning like a world on fire.

"You talk foolishly," Von Ragasteln protested.

"If there has been tragedy in your life, you have time to get over it. You are not forty years old."

"Then I must be kidding you," Dominey retorted, "for I feel altogether his friend's remark."

"You are only my age, and you look ten years younger. Your muscles are hard, your eyes are as bright as they were in your school days. You rise at five every morning, the doctor tells me, and you return here, worn out at dusk. You spend every moment of your life drilling these dirty blacks. When you are not doing that, you are prospecting, supervising sports, home, trying to make the best of your few millions of acres of fever swamps. The doctor worships you but who else knows? What do you do for my friend?"

"Because it is my duty," was the faint reply.

"Duty! But why can't you do your duty in your own country, and live a man's life, and hold the hands of white men, and look into the eyes of white women?"

"I go where I am needed most," Von Ragasteln answered.

"I do not enjoy passing the years of an outcast from the ordinary joys of human life. But you may as well do as you are doing on the serious side—but you're a man of principle, I'm a glaciator."

"The difference between us," Von Ragasteln pronounced, "is something that is insculpted into the youth of our country, and which is not inculcated into yours. In England, with a little money, a little brain, your young men expect to find the world a playground for sport, a garden for love. The mightiest German noble who ever lived has his work to do. It is work which makes fibre, which gives meaning to life."

Dominey sighed. His eyes, nearly closed though it had been, were cold between his fingers. That perturbed darkness, illuminated only by the faint gleam of the shaded lamp behind him, his face seemed suddenly white and old. His host leaned forward and spoke for the first time in the kinder tones of his youth.

"You hinted at tragedy, my friend. You are not alone. Tragedy things have entered my life. Perhaps it things have been otherwise, I should have found work in more joyous, less desolate, rows came to me, and I am here."

"A quick flash of sympathy lit up Dominey's face."

"We meet trouble in a different way," he explained.

"CHAPTER II

Dominey slept still late the following morning, and when he awoke at last from a long, dreamless slumber, he was conscious of a curious delirium in the camp. The doctor, who came in to see him, explained it immediately after his morning greeting.

"His Excellency," he nodded, "had received important despatches from home. He has gone to meet an envoy from Dar-es-Salaam. He will be away for three days. He desired that you would remain his guest until his return."

"Very good of him," Dominey murmured. "Is there any European news?"

"I do not know," was the stolid reply. "His Excellency desired me to inform you that if you cared for a short trip along the banks of the river, southward, there are a dozen good places where you might find a few lions and rhino may be met with at one or two places which the natives know of."

Dominey bathed and dressed, sipped his excellent coffee, and lounged about the place in unquiet mood. He unburdened himself to the doctor as they drank tea together late in the afternoon.

"I am not in the least keen on hunting," he confessed, and "I feel like a horrible sponge, but all the same I have a queer sort of feeling that I like to see Von Ragasteln again. Your silent chief rather fascinates me. The doctor. He is a man. He has something which I have lost."

"He is a man," the doctor declared, "and he sets his mind to do things."

"I suppose I might have been like that," Dominey sighed, "if I had had an incentive. Have you noticed the likeness between us, Herr Doctor?"

The latter nodded.

"I noticed it from the first moment of your arrival," he asserted. "You are very much alike, very different. The resemblance must be due to some more remarkable in your youth. This has dealt your features according to your genes."

"Well, you're a good-looking fellow," Dominey replied with unfeigned calm. "I speak the truth. If you had been possessed of the same more staid features, His Excellency, you might have preserved your health and the things you did."

"You mean that I am a better specimen of my race than you are?"

"I mean that you are a better specimen of your race than you are."

"His Excellency," he nodded, "had received important despatches from home. He has gone to meet an envoy from Dar-es-Salaam. He will be away for three days. He desired that you would remain his guest until his return."

"Very good of him," Dominey murmured. "Is there any European news?"

"I do not know," was the stolid reply. "His Excellency desired me to inform you that if you cared for a short trip along the banks of the river, southward, there are a dozen good places where you might find a few lions and rhino may be met with at one or two places which the natives know of."

Dominey bathed and dressed, sipped his excellent coffee, and lounged about the place in unquiet mood. He unburdened himself to the doctor as they drank tea together late in the afternoon.

"I am not in the least keen on hunting," he confessed, and "I feel like a horrible sponge, but all the same I have a queer sort of feeling that I like to see Von Ragasteln again. Your silent chief rather fascinates me. The doctor. He is a man. He has something which I have lost."

"He is a man," the doctor declared, "and he sets his mind to do things."

"I suppose I might have been like that," Dominey sighed, "if I had had an incentive. Have you noticed the likeness between us, Herr Doctor?"

The latter nodded.

"I noticed it from the first moment of your arrival," he asserted. "You are very much alike, very different. The resemblance must be due to some more remarkable in your youth. This has dealt your features according to your genes."

"Well, you're a good-looking fellow," Dominey replied with unfeigned calm. "I speak the truth. If you had been possessed of the same more staid features, His Excellency, you might have preserved your health and the things you did."

"You mean that I am a better specimen of my race than you are?"

"I mean that you are a better specimen of your race than you are."

"I mean that you are a better specimen of your race than you are."

mean of the east-falling dunes. They were the only things that kept the river, from behind which the sun comes up every morning like a world on fire.

"You talk foolishly," Von Ragasteln protested.

"Then I must be kidding you," Dominey retorted, "for I feel altogether his friend's remark."

"You are only my age, and you look ten years younger. Your muscles are hard, your eyes are as bright as they were in your school days. You rise at five every morning, the doctor tells me, and you return here, worn out at dusk. You spend every moment of your life drilling these dirty blacks. When you are not doing that, you are prospecting, supervising sports, home, trying to make the best of your few millions of acres of fever swamps. The doctor worships you but who else knows? What do you do for my friend?"

"Because it is my duty," was the faint reply.

"Duty! But why can't you do your duty in your own country, and live a man's life, and hold the hands of white men, and look into the eyes of white women?"

"I go where I am needed most," Von Ragasteln answered.

"I do not enjoy passing the years of an outcast from the ordinary joys of human life. But you may as well do as you are doing on the serious side—but you're a man of principle, I'm a glaciator."

"The difference between us," Von Ragasteln pronounced, "is something that is insculpted into the youth of our country, and which is not inculcated into yours. In England, with a little money, a little brain, your young men expect to find the world a playground for sport, a garden for love. The mightiest German noble who ever lived has his work to do. It is work which makes fibre, which gives meaning to life."

Dominey sighed. His eyes, nearly closed though it had been, were cold between his fingers. That perturbed darkness, illuminated only by the faint gleam of the shaded lamp behind him, his face seemed suddenly white and old. His host leaned forward and spoke for the first time in the kinder tones of his youth.

"You hinted at tragedy, my friend. You are not alone. Tragedy things have entered my life. Perhaps it things have been otherwise, I should have found work in more joyous, less desolate, rows came to me, and I am here."

"A quick flash of sympathy lit up Dominey's face."

"We meet trouble in a different way," he explained.

Dominey slept still late the following morning, and when he awoke at last from a long, dreamless slumber, he was conscious of a curious delirium in the camp. The doctor, who came in to see him, explained it immediately after his morning greeting.

"His Excellency," he nodded, "had received important despatches from home. He has gone to meet an envoy from Dar-es-Salaam. He will be away for three days. He desired that you would remain his guest until his return."

The Great Impersonation

A stirring story of love and adventure. By E. PHILLIPS OPPENHEIM. One of the famous author's best. Published by arrangement with The British & Colonial Press Limited.

CHAPTER I

The trouble from which great events were to come began when Everard Dominey, who had been fighting his way through the scrub for the last three quarters of an hour towards those thin, spiral wisps of smoke, urged his pony to a last despairing effort and came crashing through the great everlast shrub to pitch forward on his head in the little clearing. It developed the next morning, when he found himself for the first time for many months on a truckle bed, between linen sheets, with a cool, bamboo-twisted roof between him and the relentless sun. He raised a little in the bed.

"Where the mischief am I?" he demanded.

A black boy, seated cross-legged in the entrance of the banda, rose to his feet, mumbled something and disappeared. In a few moments the tall slim figure of a European, in spotless white riding clothes, stooped down and came over to Dominey's side.

"You are better?" he enquired politely.

"Yes, I am," was the somewhat brusque rejoinder.

"Where the mischief am I, and who are you?"

The newcomer's manner stiffened. He was a person of dignified carriage, and his tone conveyed some measure of rebuke.

"You are within half a mile of the Iriwari River, if you know where that is," he replied, "about seventy-two miles southeast of the Darawaga Settlement."

"The devil! Then I am in German East Africa?"

"Without a doubt."

"And you are German?"

"I have that honor," said Dominey whistling softly.

"Awfully sorry to have intruded," he said. "I left Marlinton two and a half months ago, with twenty boys and plenty of stores. We were doing a big trek after lions. I took some new Akarika in and they made trouble—looted the stores one night and there was the devil to pay. I was obliged to shoot one or two, and the rest deserted. They took my compass, damn them, and I'm nearly a hundred miles out of my bearings. You couldn't give me a drink, could you?"

"With pleasure, if the doctor approves," was the courteous answer. "Here Jan!"

The boy sprang up, "Hestered to a word or two of brief command in his language, and disappeared through the hanging grass which led into another hut. The two men exchanged glances of rather more than ordinary interest. Then Dominey laughed.

"I know what you're thinking," he said. "It gave me quite a start when you came in. We're devilishly alike, aren't we?"

"There is a very strong likeness between us," the other admitted.

Dominey leaned his head upon his hand and studied his host. The likeness was clear enough, although the advantage was all in favor of the man who stood by the side of the campstead with folded arms. Everard Dominey, for the first twenty-six years of his life, had lived as an ordinary young Englishman of his position—Eton, Oxford, a few years in the Army, a few years about town, during which he had succeeded in making a still more hopeless muddle of his already encumbered estates—a few months of tragedy, and then a blank. Afterward ten years—at first in the cities, then in the dark places of Africa—years of which no man knew anything. The Everard Dominey of ten years ago had been, without a doubt, good looking. The finely shaped features remained, but the eyes had lost their lustre, his figure its elasticity, his mouth its firmness. He had the look of a man run prematurely to seed, wasted by fevers and disipation. Not so his present companion. His features were as finely shaped, cast in an even stronger though similar mould. His eyes were bright and full of fire, his mouth and chin firm, breathing a man of deeds, his tall figure lithe and supple. He had the air of being in perfect health, in perfect mental and physical condition, a man who lived with dignity and some measure of content, notwithstanding the light gravity of his expression.

"Yes," the Englishman muttered, "there's no doubt about the likeness, though I suppose I should look more like you than I do if I'd taken care of myself. That's the devil of it. I've gone the other way; tried to chuck my life away and pretty nearly succeeded, too."

The dried grasses were thrust on one side, and the doctor entered—a little round man, also clean in immaculate white, with yellow gold hair and chest spectacles. His countryman pointed towards the bed.

"Will you examine our patient, Herr Doctor, and prescribe for him what is necessary? He has asked for drink. Let him have wine, or whatever is good for him. If he is well enough, I present my excuses. I have a despatch to write."

The man on the couch turned his head and watched the departing figure with a shade of envy in his eyes.

"What is my preserver's name?" he asked the doctor.

"The latter looked as though the question were irrelevant.

"It is His Excellency the Major-General Baron Leopold von Ragastain."

"All that?" Dominey muttered. "Is he the Governor, or something of that sort?"

"He is Military Commandant of the Colony," the doctor replied. "He has also a special mission here."

"Damned fine-looking fellow for a German," Dominey remarked, with unthinking insolence.

The doctor was unmoved. He was feeling his patient's pulse. He concluded his examination a few minutes later.

"You have drunk much whiskey lately, so?" he asked.

"I don't know what the devil it got to do with you," was the curt reply, "but I drink whiskey whenever I can get it. Who wouldn't in this pestilential climate?"

The doctor shook his head.

"The climate is good as it is treated," he declared. "His Excellency drinks nothing but light wine and seltzer water. He has been here for five years, not only here in but the swamps, and he has not been ill one day."

"Well I have been at death's door a dozen times," the Englishman rejoined a little rebelliously, "and I don't much mind when I have in my checks, but until that time comes I shall drink whiskey whenever I can get it."

"The clock is preparing you some luncheon," the doctor announced, "which it will do you good to eat. It cannot give you whiskey at this moment, but you can have some hock and seltzer with bay leaves."

"Send it along," was the enthusiastic reply.

"What a constitution I must have, doctor! The smell of that cooking is making me rave."

"Your constitution is still sound if you would only respect it," was the comforting assurance.

"Anything been heard of the rest of my party?" Dominey enquired.

"Some bodies of Askaria have been washed up from the river," the doctor informed him, "and two of your ponies have been eaten by lions. You will excuse, I have the greatest of a desire to dress, who was bitten last night by a jaguar."

The traveller, left alone, lay still in the hut, and his thoughts wandered backward. He looked out over the bare, scrubby stretch of land which had been cleared for this encampment: the mass of bush and following shrubs beyond, mysterious and impenetrable save for the rough, olive-latte white, with yellow gold hair and chest spectacles. His countryman pointed towards the bed.

"Will you examine our patient, Herr Doctor, and prescribe for him what is necessary? He has asked for drink. Let him have wine, or whatever is good for him. If he is well enough, I present my excuses. I have a despatch to write."

His countryman pointed towards the bed.

"Will you examine our patient, Herr Doctor, and prescribe for him what is necessary? He has asked for drink. Let him have wine, or whatever is good for him. If he is well enough, I present my excuses. I have a despatch to write."

The man on the couch turned his head and watched the departing figure with a shade of envy in his eyes.

"What is my preserver's name?" he asked the doctor.

"The latter looked as though the question were irrelevant.

"It is His Excellency the Major-General Baron Leopold von Ragastain."

"All that?" Dominey muttered. "Is he the Governor, or something of that sort?"

"He is Military Commandant of the Colony," the doctor replied. "He has also a special mission here."

"Damned fine-looking fellow for a German," Dominey remarked, with unthinking insolence.

The doctor was unmoved. He was feeling his patient's pulse. He concluded his examination a few minutes later.

"You have drunk much whiskey lately, so?" he asked.

"I don't know what the devil it got to do with you," was the curt reply, "but I drink whiskey whenever I can get it. Who wouldn't in this pestilential climate?"

The doctor shook his head.

"The climate is good as it is treated," he declared. "His Excellency drinks nothing but light wine and seltzer water. He has been here for five years, not only here in but the swamps, and he has not been ill one day."

"Well I have been at death's door a dozen times," the Englishman rejoined a little rebelliously, "and I don't much mind when I have in my checks, but until that time comes I shall drink whiskey whenever I can get it."

"The clock is preparing you some luncheon," the doctor announced, "which it will do you good to eat. It cannot give you whiskey at this moment, but you can have some hock and seltzer with bay leaves."

"Send it along," was the enthusiastic reply.

"What a constitution I must have, doctor! The smell of that cooking is making me rave."

"Your constitution is still sound if you would only respect it," was the comforting assurance.

"Anything been heard of the rest of my party?" Dominey enquired.

"Some bodies of Askaria have been washed up from the river," the doctor informed him, "and two of your ponies have been eaten by lions. You will excuse, I have the greatest of a desire to dress, who was bitten last night by a jaguar."

The traveller, left alone, lay still in the hut, and his thoughts wandered backward. He looked out over the bare, scrubby stretch of land which had been cleared for this encampment: the mass of bush and following shrubs beyond, mysterious and impenetrable save for the rough, olive-latte white, with yellow gold hair and chest spectacles. His countryman pointed towards the bed.

Quebec's Drink Bill
For the year ending April 30, 1924, the drink bill for our Province was $18,501,127 for beer and $18,501,127 for liquor. (Increase of $3,500,000. Increase of $11 in 2nd year of Act.) A surmise is that this is a consumption as during 1923 $127,500 worth of beer was consumed (increase of $21,500,000 per month—what it was when the act force.)

Of course it is urged and must be borne in mind that vast business the governa profit of $4,200,000, which passed to be spending for good. QUEBEC LIQUOR LAW AT WORK

Quebec's Drink Bill
For the year ending April 30, 1923, the drink bill for our Province is $19,696,770 sold in government stores and $13,801,127 for beer and wine, total of $33,497,897. (Increase of $4,485,971 in 2nd year of Act.) The presumption is that this is for Quebec consumption as during same year only $127,500 worth of beer was exported. ($21,800,000 per month—10 times what it was when the act went into force.)

Of course it is urged and in fairness must be borne in mind that on this vast business the government had a profit of $4,869,876, which it is supposed to be spending for the public good. But it is difficult to profit, as in fairness, should be done, there were charged against the business all the economic loss, domestic misery, maintenance of jails and asylums, the cost of law enforcement and the enormous inquiry done, the government report would show what it ought to show that the net result is appalling loss.

Last year's Commission from Scotland consisting of two clergymen, a lawyer and an editor, spent some time carefully investigating the working of liquor laws in Canada and the U. S., answering the question: "Has prohibition proved a success in Canada and the United States?" They replied with an emphatic and unqualified "Yes." Their judgment is upheld even a casual acquaintance with the improvement in social conditions wherever prohibition has been tried. In the U. S., under the Volstead Act, the amount spent on elementary and secondary schools rose from $768,678, 000 to $1,000,000,000. From every part of the nation come reports of changed conditions. 60 per cent. of the poverty caused by the drink removed from the country $74,000,000 formerly spent on victims of drink released for charitable purposes. The death rate of children in New York city dropped 87 per cent. since prohibition was adopted. Savings Bank deposits increased last year over $1,000,000,000 and 80 per cent. of new accounts were opened by people who never before had a dollar in the bank. Manufacturers of shoes report that 75 per cent. of the large increase in their business is among people who heretofore were unable to buy new shoes. In 56 American cities there has been an increase in the consumption of milk of 17 per cent. In Brooklyn a number of old saloons have been turned into kindergartens. Distilleries and breweries have been converted into useful industries. In St. Louis into a shoe factory. In Cincinnati, a clothing factory. In Golden, Colorado, a milled milk factory. Salt Lake City, a candy factory. At Flint a brewery was bought by a Methodist Episcopal Church which used it for a while for church work, increased its membership 300 per cent., and sold it to an advertising company. Other breweries all over the land are being turned into food factories, cotton mills, etc. In Mass. 5 of the 21 county jails and houses of correction have been closed since prohibition.

Prohibition in Ontario
A large manufacturer in Ontario stated the other day that Prohibition in Ontario had increased the efficiency of his staff over 50 per cent. The reports of the Chief of Police of Toronto show that for 1921, under prohibition, convictions of drunkenness as compared with 1914, before prohibition, had declined from 14,247 in 1914 to 4,737 in 1921, a decrease of almost 60 per cent.

According to Dun & Co., 36 per cent. of all business failures in Canada in 1923 were in Quebec and our 38 per cent. involved liabilities of about $31,000,000. The assurance of the Provincial Government that Government Control would bring great prosperity are not supported by the facts. Quebec with less than 18 per cent. of our population and a drink bill of almost $33,500,000 has 38 per cent. of the failures, involving 47 per cent. of the liabilities of all failures in Canada for 1923. In British Columbia business failures during the three dry years, 1918, 1919 and 1920, were reported at 46, 42 and 94. In the three wet years following, failures jumped to 125, 162 and 162. There are, of course, many other causes to be considered in estimating business failures but the fact remains that they are most numerous and most serious where Government Control has been in operation.

Only on the supposition that liquor contributes to human betterment can it be given a recognized moral and legal standing in the life of a people. Social science shows that it is one of humanity's worst enemies. While admitting that liquor is an evil, our government had placed it in the category of things permissible and encouraged responsibility for the consequences of this system is unescapable. All the wrecks and misery and sorrow of the trade are multiplied and are liability against any vast financial surplus. (To be continued.)

The Rev. F. E. Boothroyd and Mr. John Reid of Campbellton attended a meeting held in the Methodist Church last week at Ecumenical Flats. Miss Eva Keays has returned from New Carlisle after visiting there. Miss Violet Ray of New Carlisle spent a few days in Ecumenical last week the guest of Mrs. J. H. Gaudin. DR. ANGLIN BOASTS ADVERTISING

Medical Man Says Home Concerns Should Advertise More

The secretary of the "Buy at Home and Maritime Made" campaign is writing the various public institutions throughout the Maritime Provinces, asking their officials to give fair consideration to goods of Maritime production, and it is interesting to note that the "Buy at Home" spirit is already showing itself in the various replies received.

The superintendent of this institution states that on several occasions he has wished to place business with producers of commodities used by his staff and "large family" and has been compelled to make many enquiries before he could locate home concerns with whom he could do business. He cites instances where he has gone to the extent of asking members of the government for the names of various local concerns who would be in a position to supply the needs of the hospital.

Dr. Anglin states that whenever possible, goods of home production are used in his hospital, and concludes his letter with the following sentences: "From this it seems to me that what is wanted is better and more continuous advertising by the home concerns."

OVER 1500 TO WRITE N. B. EXAMS

Larger Number of Students Anxious to Enter Normal School and Universities

At least 1,500 students will write the annual departmental examinations in New Brunswick this year, according to an estimate made yesterday morning by the Chief Superintendent of Education.

Last year 1,434 students wrote the Normal School Entrance, Matriculation and High School Leaving examinations, and judging from the rate at which applications are being received it is possible that the total number of candidates will be nearer 1,600 than the estimate 1,500.

The total number of applications which have already been received is 1,441, including so far 970 applications for Normal School Entrance. Last year there were 1,069 candidates for entrance and advance of class. A large increase is already shown in the applications for Matriculation, 352 candidates already been received as compared with 308 last year. There are 78 applications for High School Leaving while in 1923 the number was 67.

Man Mountain, Tired of Existence, Jumped into River at New York

New York, June 9.—Anthony Whitman of New Haven, a miserable mountain of a man, plodded down East 21st street toward the river. He stopped every one he met to announce that nobody loved a fat man. From the last person he stopped he demanded not only sympathy but a cigarette.

Lighting the cigarette he walked out on the pier and jumped into the river. Several boys saw him, and one of them, William McDonald, threw him a rope. This evidence of affection so moved the mountainous Whitman that he seized the lousy Whitman and McDonald, with the help of Patrolman Karhins, hauled him to the pier. He was taken to Bellevue Hospital.

MOTHER NEVER GETS A VACATION
A man's work is from sun to sun, but a woman's work is never done. So runs the old saying. New Hampshire checks it up and discovers that the average woman on its farms works 4,000 hours a year. That is about eleven hours a day, Sundays included. Mother never gets a real vacation. Did it ever occur to you what would happen if she struck for an eight-hour day?

BEST YEAR SINCE WAR, SAYS BEATTY

Greater Progress to Real Stabilization in Canada He

Minneapolis, Minn., June 9.—Conditions throughout Canada point to a year of widespread agricultural and industrial prosperity, with greater progress toward real economic stabilization than in any year since the war. E. W. Beatty, president of the Canadian Pacific Railway, said yesterday. Mr. Beatty arrived at noon and spent the afternoon with officials of the Soo Line, which is affiliated with the C. P. R.

In his party were Sir Herbert Holt, F. W. Molson, and General H. H. McLean, of St. John, N. B., former M. P. The four are en route to Montreal by way of Sault Ste. Marie. "Crop prospects all over Canada are excellent," Mr. Beatty said. "We have had a good spring, with plenty of rain, you know. The financial situation appears to be showing steady improvement. Business everywhere has a healthy tone, industry on the whole is on the upgrade and the manufacturing situation in several lines is entirely satisfactory."

BEAR AND MOOSE IN GRIM BATTLE

Sportsmen See Thrilling Contest in New Ontario

Port Arthur, Ont., June 7.—On a lake back of Lion, last Sunday, was enacted a thrilling and dramatic battle between a moose cow ready to give up her life for her calf and a ferocious grizzly bear equally determined to satisfy his hunger.

Men from Port Arthur were paddling along the lake when they saw the cow accompanied by her calf. The grizzly bear was seen to be pursuing the bear. The spectators saw the moose land, helping her calf to shore, where both stood quietly evidently to recover from the recent exertion. By this time the bear had made land a short distance above. He immediately made for his quarry. The moose quailed, he called, throwing it into a thicket. The bear, thus disposed of, her offspring, however, was not so easily disposed of. The bear charged down the shoreline at full speed. The bear faced the oncoming grizzly animal, but failed to ward off the blow delivered by head and hoof. The renewed battle lasted but a short time. The bear showed a pair of fangs, the grizzly moose, and heeded into the woods, presumably in search of easier prey.

ACTRESS FOLLOWS LOVER'S SUICIDE

22-Year-Old Beauty Takes Poisons After Death of Film Director

Los Angeles, June 10.—Heart-broken over the suicide of Lew Mason, a motion picture director, she had expected to marry, beautiful 22-year-old Cecil Werner, an actress, followed Mason along the path known as "the easiest way out."

Cecil took poison. Her body was found in a little room she had occupied since her arrival here a few weeks ago to enter motion pictures. In the note which Mason wrote just before he died, and which was found near his body after the police broke into his gas-filled room, the movie director said: "It's too much, much too fast."

The hours that followed the suicide of Mason, Cecil Werner, the girl who had loved him, likewise reflected on the swift sequence of events which followed her brief romance with the director, and just before she ended her life she wrote a note, a portion of which read: "It's too much for me—not worth the ending."

"It all seems so futile to me. I'm not the least bit afraid."

Clearly after she received the news of Mason's suicide Miss Werner shut herself up in her room. She refused to be comforted. She refused to eat. She spent hours weeping.
