Presentation.

A very pleasant evening was spent on Friday evening, September 8th, when friends and neighbors to the number of fifty gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Reycraft, of Euphemia, to say good-bye to their daughter, Miss Bertha, who is leaving to take a course in music and art at Alma Ladies' College, St. Thomas.

Ward Leitch of Moss was chairman for the evening and very ably filled the place.

An interesting program was enjoyed by all present. The opening number was a selection by the Camerata choir, of which Miss Reycraft has been organist for the past four years. Solos were rendered by Miss Alberta White, Miss Ida Evans, Miss Katharine Morrison and Mrs. Alfred Morrison; duets by Miss Violet Plaine and Miss Jean McVicar and Miss Katharine and Robert Morrison; several selections by the quartette, and mouthorgan selections by Frank Evans, Robert Morrison, Neil Waterworth and George Goldrick; piano selections by Miss Bertha Reycraft; speeches by Neil Campbell, Neil Leitch and Joseph Reycraft. Miss Bertha Reycraft was then presented with a handsome gold wrist watch and ebony toilet case as a slight token of appreciation for her kindness as organist and choir leader, in which capacity she will be greatly missed. Mr. Reycraft, on behalf of Miss Bertha, in a few well chosen words thanked the many friends.

After a dainty lunch, served by her girl friends, the gathering dispersed, wishing Miss Reycraft a most successful future.

THANKSGIVING AND PRAISE

Advent of Prohibition Celebrated by Church Service.

The service in the Methodist church on Sunday evening was one of thanksgiving and praise on the coming into effect of the Ontario Prohibition Act. Appropriate music was rendered by the choir and included a special number, "Seven Glad Days," supplied by the W.C.T.U. and sung to the air of "Old Black Joe."

In a forceful address the pastor, Rev. R. Fulton Irwin, referred to the untiring and effective work of the Church, aided by the zealous effort of the W.C.T.U., for many years to bring about prohibition. He lauded the Government for their prohibition legislation, which was the best that had ever been introduced or passed by any political party, and called upon the temperance people to stand by such a Government, irrespective of party.

Strongly condemning the practice of some to support party rather than the principles involved, he stated that he himself was a man without politics. He had twice voted for the Ross Government, but his vote had helped to put the present Government into power and he had never voted against it until the Rowell policy came up, but the Government that had introduced and passed so excellent a prohibition law as has now come into effect would have his hearty good will. At the commencement of his address Mr. Irwin asked the temperance people to assist as far as possible the prohibition law as has now come into effect would have his hearty good will. At the commencement of his address Mr. Irwin asked the temperance people to assist as far as possible the prohibition law as has now come into effect would have his hearty good will.

Rev. Dr. Ford followed with a brief address, in which he urged the temperance people not to slacken in their work, but to use the utmost vigilance, as no doubt every effort would be made by the liquor interests during the next three years, during which prohibition would be on its trial, to bring its workings into disrepute so as to secure if possible its defeat in the referendum.

The meeting closed with the anthem "All Hail," the Doxology and the National Anthem. There was an unusually large congregation, all the pews being filled.

LAMBTON PEACH ORCHARDS

Half-day's Revel in the Fruit Section Around Forest.

Peter McArthur writes:—The editor asked me to give my impressions of Forest after a hasty visit, and I am going to try. I am glad he said "impressions" for when I travel about in an automobile an impression is about all I get.

Hoping to strengthen the impressions, I thought that before setting out to write I would eat one of Mr. Livingston's peaches. He told me distinctly that they had been picked a trifle green so that they would keep in being shipped and he advised me to eat them away for a few days until they ripened. I did so, but when I went to get one a few minutes ago I found that half of them were gone. Apparently they were ripe enough for roasting and eager appetites. I suppose I should hold a public investigation regarding the disappearance of those peaches but I am inclined to think that Sherlock Holmes methods will do better. I shall wait quietly until I see who develops hives from eating unripe peaches. Then I shall deliver the fine moral lecture the occasion demands. Incidentally I may say that I am sure that was quite ripe enough to eat and its rich flavor was entirely in keeping with its attractive coloring. If the Forest district can produce peaches of this kind as a steady thing it will take its place in the front rank of peach producers.

To get an impression of Forest I closed my eyes and tried to remember what I saw. I got my first glimpse of the town while bumping over the road from the south. I saw the gleam of houses through the foliage of many trees, so that I am sure that that is what I saw. I entered the town, and tree shaded streets stretched in every direction. More evidence that it deserves its name. But the citizens I met did not have the "rueful woodhead air" that should go with a place having such a name. They were up-to-date business men and they took hold of us and fed us and entertained us in a way that made us wish that we could live with them always and have them for neighbors.

Then they took us in automobiles through peach orchards where bunches laden with fruit brushed against our faces. We could reach out and gather fruit without leaving the car. In this respect the town reminded me of the old Darky's description of Jamaica. He said that on that delectable island a man could "lie in bed, or reach out the window, or pick oranges or pineapples and Jamaica rum right off the trees." Of course the similarity was not complete, for Forest was dry town even before the sixteenth. Anyway, Forest impressed me as being in the centre of one of the finest fruit and agricultural districts in Ontario. And the fact that, of which I got a hasty glimpse, shows that the people are right up-to-date with their business enterprises.

While whirling through the town I saw many fine houses and well kept lawns, as well as churches and schools, so I have an impression that Forest is a pleasant place to live in.

I hope that some day I may be able to visit Forest in a more leisurely way and learn something about it.

Death of John D. Campbell.

John D. Campbell, a well-known and highly esteemed resident of Ekfrid, died on Sunday, Sept. 10th, after an illness of several weeks. He was prominent in the work of the Presbyterian Church, being an elder of the church at Melbourne for many years. He is survived by his wife and a family of four sons and four daughters:—Robert and Miss Jennie at home, Russell, at the front; Stewart, Detroit; Mrs. McLachlin, St. Thomas; Daniel, Melbourne; Mrs. Lockwood, Ekfrid; and Mrs. Whitfield in the States. R. B. Campbell of Middlemiss is a brother.

The funeral was held on Tuesday to the Longwood cemetery. The service was conducted by Rev. R. Stewart, of Dutton, a former pastor of the deceased. The pallbearers were Gilbert Hyndman, Robert Alexander, Alex. Battin, Donald Fletcher, Allen McLaughlin and Duncan Campbell.

The Home Fair.

Don't allow the rural fall fair to take their places as thousands of people go to Toronto and London fairs simply for the outing and the special programs. The county or township fairs represent the improvement or decadence of the immediate locality and on its maintenance will depend much of the future history of the community. Everybody should boom the local fair and not let the maintenance of the fair be the responsibility of one or two or the secretary to shoulder the whole responsibility. If every society had a membership of 400 a great stride would be made toward improvement of the fair.

There are hundreds of farmers who are not linked up with the fall fair, which should be one of the most valuable features in the community. Get an exhibit ready and push the fair.

NEWSPAPERS RAISE PRICE

Middlesex and Lambton Publishers Hold Meeting at Forest.

A well-attended and representative meeting of the St. Clair District Press Association was held in Forest on Friday last. Owing to the increased cost of production, and the consequent requirement of more revenue, the Association unanimously decided to advance the subscription prices of the weekly newspapers of the counties of Middlesex and Lambton, from $1.00 to $1.50 per annum, the new rate to go into effect December 1st.

This action is in line with the movement throughout Canada for a minimum rate of $1.50 for rural weeklies. Over 100 rural weeklies and semi-weeklies in Ontario have already adopted the $1.50 rate or higher. It was reported to the meeting that in Bruce, Perth and Huron, and other Ontario counties where the new rate has already been put into effect, the public has reacted in a most reasonable manner, evidently understanding that the increase is fully justified.

A. R. Alloway of Toronto, Acting Manager of the Canadian Press Association, was present, and pointed out that similar action would be taken by the Essex, Kent and Elgin publishers before the end of the year.

Following the meeting a banquet was tendered the visitors by the Forest council and board of trade at the Roche House, after which the party took a trip through the peach district adjacent to Forest.

Automobiles for the trip were provided by J. D. Livingston, Dr. C. L. Huffman, J. N. Lansing, and members of the Association.

The pressmen were honored by the presence of Peter McArthur, the distinguished lecturer, writer and agriculturist, who addressed the gathering at lunch. Mr. McArthur drew a vivid realistic picture of the way in which the sorrows of the war are brought home to the country people. The rural press was doing more, he said, to mould public opinion than the daily press. The smaller weekly gave the intimate details of the sacrifice of the boys from the home town and touched the heart of the community as the big city papers cannot. The country editors must be alert to the need for live leadership and accept some responsibility for providing it.

W. P. McDougald, district representative of the department of agriculture, was another welcome speaker. The pressmen present were:—Wm. Dawson, Parkhill Gazette; Wm. Bryant, Theford Tribune; Thomas Harris, Watford Guide-Advocate; J. W. Kedwell, Ailsa Craig Banner; A. W. Lowery, Petrolia Advertiser; Errol Atkins, Courtright Outlook-Tribune; A. E. Sutherland, Glencoe Transcript; F. L. E. Evans and Ewart Evans, Strathroy Age; H. J. Pettipiece, Forest Free Press; G. E. McIntosh, Forest Standard; A. R. Alloway, assistant manager Canadian Press Association.

FAIR NEXT WEEK

Prospects Good for Moss and Ekfrid's Big Exhibition.

The annual exhibition of the Moss and Ekfrid Agricultural Society, to be held at Glencoe on Tuesday and Wednesday of next week, promises to be a bigger attraction than ever.

A keener interest is being taken by the countryside generally, and prospects are good for largely increased entries, especially in horses and other live stock and in the ladies' department.

The special attractions include a free-for-all trot or pace, purse $150, and a 250 trot or pace, purse $100. There will be a stock judging competition for young men, and music is being secured for the afternoon of Wednesday and a concert by first-class talent will be held in the evening.

Intending exhibitors should make their entries as early as possible, and to assist them in doing this the secretary will have an office in Glencoe at which he will attend on Saturday next.

About the House

Useful Hints and General Information for the Busy Housewife

Appetizing Cheese Dishes.

Cheese is a wholesome food that deserves at least an occasional place on the dining table. It would appear more frequently, perhaps, if the numerous attractive and unusual ways of serving it were more commonly known.

Cheese Salad.—Slightly warm one pound of cheese, then work it into crumbs. Add one quarter of a teaspoonful of finely minced onion, two hard-boiled eggs, finely minced, two tablespoonfuls of mayonnaise dressing. When you have thoroughly mixed all the ingredients, form the mixture into small balls, and serve them with lettuce leaves on individual plates.

Limpens Cheese (Belgian style).—Cut a small loaf of bread into slices and remove the crusts. Butter each slice, and cover it well with grated cheese, building up the slices one on another in two mounds in a deep baking dish. Boil a cupful of milk, and season it with salt, pepper and a dash of grated nutmeg; when the milk has boiled pour it over the bread; set the dish in the oven and let the mixture bake for a quarter of an hour, basting the bread frequently with the milk in the pan.

Fried Cheese Balls.—Mix half a cupful each of grated cheese and an equal amount of bread crumbs, add one well-beaten egg and a teaspoonful of a good relish. Roll the mixture into balls; dip them into beaten egg, then into very fine bread crumbs that you have lightly seasoned with pepper and salt. Fry the balls in deep hot fat. If you like high seasoning, add a dash of Cayenne pepper to the cheese mixture. With a lettuce salad the cheese balls make an excellent garnish for veal.

Savory Cheese Rusk.—These are particularly appetizing as a luncheon dish. Grate one and one-half cupfuls of strong cheese, add one teaspoonful of olive oil, one teaspoonful of dry mustard, and two tablespoonfuls of mild vinegar. Season it highly with a good relish and with salt and pepper. Add one eighth of a teaspoonful of soda and beat the mixture until it is very light and creamy. Spread it on rounds of rusks or on plain white bread and brown it in a very hot oven. If you wish, you can vary the recipe by using three tablespoonfuls of olive oil and only half a table-spoonful of the vinegar.

Cheese Rings.—Place one cupful of water, half a cupful of butter and half a teaspoonful of salt in a saucepan; when the water boils, add one cupful of pastry flour and stir the mixture until it leaves the sides of the pan. Remove it from the fire and allow it to stand until it is lukewarm, then add three eggs, one at a time, and beat each one thoroughly. Add half a cupful of stale grated cheese and place the mixture in a pastry bag that has a star tube. Line a biscuit pan with paper and shape the mixture into rings upon it. Sprinkle them lightly with grated cheese and bake them in a moderate oven until they are thoroughly done.

Making Use of Stale Bread.

Of all the left-over remnants of food from the kitchen bread is the most common, perhaps, and many pieces are daily thrown away, a little thought would turn to excellent use. If the left-over pieces are not utilized the same day, an excellent plan is to wrap them in pieces of waxed paper and store them in a stone jar. They will keep well for a week in this way.

Dried crumbs for stuffing and meat frying. Put the crusts and small pieces in a baking pan and dry in the oven without burning. They may then be put through the food chopper and stored in clean jars until wanted. They may be used as a basis for meat croquettes, poultry stuffing and other things.

French toast may be made from the whole slices of left-over bread. It is an excellent luncheon pick-up dish. Beat an egg and add a little milk. Dip the slices of bread in this and fry a nice brown in hot drippings. Serve with butter, jelly or marmalade.

Bread custard pudding. Cut the bread in dainty shapes and butter liberally. Make a plain custard of eggs, milk and sugar. Put in baking dish and float the buttered bread on top. Sprinkle with grated nutmeg and bake in a quick oven until brown. This is excellent.

To make croutons for the various soups so much relished in summer cut the bread in cubes and fry in butter or dripping just before serving with the soup. Add five or six to each plate of soup. These are delicious with almost any soup.

Bread jelly for invalids. Scald the stale bread freed from crusts. Mash to a paste until of muslin consistency. Add a little sugar and flavoring, mold, chill and serve with cream.

Sterilized bread crumbs are especially valuable for the young children in the household. A jar should be kept filled with these. They may be heated when wanted and sprinkled in soft eggs, soups, milk, fruit juices and, indeed, anything eaten by very young children whose fresh bread is often positively dangerous. Dried bread is also valuable for mixing with various other foods for feeding the household pets.

Miscellaneous Recipes.

Green Tomato Sweet Pickles.—One peck of green tomatoes. One dozen large white onions. Six red peppers, coarsely chopped. One cup of sugar. One table-spoonful of ground cinnamon. One table-spoonful of ground mustard. One table-spoonful of whole cloves. Three pints of vinegar. Slice the tomatoes the day before pickling. Sprinkle them thoroughly with salt, but not too heavily. In the morning drain off the liquor. Have ready the onions coarsely sliced. Take a kettle and put in a layer of tomatoes, then a layer of onions, and sprinkle between each layer the sugar and all the spices. Pour over them the three pints of vinegar, or enough to cover the whole well and boil gently until tender. The onions can be left out if the flavor is objectionable as the pickles are equally good without them.

Pepper Hash.—Twelve large red peppers. Twelve large green peppers. Fifteen onions. Take seeds from peppers. Chop fine in food chopper and pour over boiling water. Let stand five minutes and then drain. Make a weak solution of vinegar to two parts water (three-fourths pint vinegar to one and one-half pints water for the above amount of peppers and onions. Put in the chopped peppers and onions. Let boil, then drain again. Add one pint of vinegar, two and one-half cups sugar, three table-spoons salt. Let all come to a boil, put in jars and seal.

Pickle Grapes.—Take ripe grapes, remove all imperfect and broken ones, divide large bunches. Put in earthen jar a layer of grapes leave (the tannin in leaves helps preserve the firmness of grapes). To four quarts of vinegar take two or three pints of white sugar, or more if desired, one ounce of cinnamon, half-ounce cassia and cloves, boil vinegar, sugar and spices together a few minutes, and when cold pour over grapes. By pouring the vinegar over the grapes cold you will avoid chocking them, and they retain their natural color.

Grape and Apple Jelly.—Take half-ripe grapes, stem and wash. To one quart of stemmed fruit add two medium-sized apples; core, but do not peel apples. Cover with water, and boil until mushy. Strain through jelly bag. Let juice stand overnight, as this prevents formation of tartaric acid crystals. To each cup of juice add one cup of sugar; boil, while boiling take out from time to time a small quantity of the liquid and set to cool, and repeat this process until the samples sets to the desired thickness. Put in glasses, and when cold cover the top with a thin layer of melted paraffin.

Household Hints.

Every tidy housekeeper would like to keep her cooking stove clean and new looking. She can do so if she will wash the stove while it is warm with a sponge dipped in soap and water.

Charcoal on the shelf of the refrigerator will keep the refrigerator sweet and pure. There is the silver that will tarnish. If the good housewife will lay a little camphor in the drawer where she keeps her silverware, she will at least help the trouble. In the event that she wishes to clean her silver, a mixture of equal parts of white and ammonia with a flannel cloth will do the work satisfactorily.

She will perhaps avoid falls when she goes to the cellar if she will paint the lower step white so that she can better see it. As to sweeping, let her soak a newspaper in water, unfold it and lay it in the center of the room. Much of the dust will be absorbed. A little milk added to the water will give a polish to an oilcloth. A little turpentine in closets and drawers will prevent moths. A little sweet oil in the scratch of furniture will improve the bruce.

When you iron, if you will place your iron on a hot brick while you are ironing it will stay hot longer. If your irons are not clean, rub them on emery paper. If you will keep a paraffin candle with a white lawn cloth over the end and rub over the iron occasionally, you will thereby add luster to your linen.

Played "Home, Sweet Home."

A soldier who has been twice wounded, on the last occasion of injury was in the trenches when suddenly a man by his side was hit in the wrist. Clapping his hand upon the wound, he exclaimed:

"Got it! I've been waiting for this since last August." Then, putting his left hand into his pocket, he pulled out a mouth organ and played "Home, Sweet Home."

Who but an English Tommy could or would do that?

THE ROMANCE OF AUSTRALIA

IT WAS ONCE CONNECTED WITH OTHER LANDS.

Island Continent Has Strangest Men and Animals in the World.

One of the oldest of all lands, Australia, is the youngest of all nations. She is the reality of two thousand years of wise men's dreams, the vast southern continent which they thought must be there to balance the land in the northern hemisphere. No one dared seek for her, for they thought that she was separated from the rest of the world by an equator of fire and demons and all-slaying mist.

She must be there, they said, and they drew fancy outlines of her on all their maps and globes, and showed her linked up to Africa and to America, and stretching unbroken to the South Pole. But when Drake staggered around the southern foot of Africa, the Magellan found his way through open water round the southern-most point of South America, and Drake, following, got blown away to the boundless Southern Seas beyond, and none found southern land until they gave it up, and struck Australia from the map. There could not be a southern continent after all, they said. But Australia was there all the time, with the strangest men and the strangest animals in the world, lying, as under a spell of enchantment, asleep within her borders of pearl and coral and her griddle of salt sea foam.

For long, long years Australia had lain preparing for the coming of man. Her history is written on—her wide bosom. Once she was part of greater land masses, connected, perhaps, by land bridges with Asia. Beneath the surface this vast continent was heaved and bowed by the forces of the earth. Burning mountains were heaved up and blew their heads off, and thousands of miles of lava and ash remain to tell the tale of her great volcanoes.

Where Were the Men?

But her fires died out, and more enduring mountains were formed, which, age upon age, epoch after epoch, have been attacked by heat and wind and rain, have been worn down lower and lower, their summits ground by the agencies of time into dust and powder. Their chemical properties, contained in the boiling lava from which they first solidified, were released with the slowly gathering debris, and this highly charged rubble of shattered rock and wind-lashed sand forms to-day, the barren deserts of Australia. But smiling verdure clad the greater part of these, and great forests grew. They sank beneath the sea, and more changed into coal. Gold and silver, tin and copper, diamonds and other valuable stores, formed in the rocks, and the precious metals tumbled from their beds as the mountains crumbled, forming the great nuggets that have since been found in the soil.

But where were the men? The men were not ready. They had not emerged. But the animals had. Warm-blooded animals which suckled their young had appeared upon the earth, and, roaming far, had reached Australia from other parts of the world. Then came the breakdown of the land bridges from Australia to Asia. The animals were shut up in a continent which had become an island. The kangaroos and the wallabies, the bear-like koala, the egg-laying mammals, and many kinds of reptiles were imprisoned on the continent. These, and great birds which forgot how to fly, were the lords of this vast area.

A True and Pretty Story of a Sympathetic Queen.

THE other day, Queen Amelle of Portugal was visiting one of the hospitals for French soldiers. After having spoken with practically every man in the different wards, she was taken to a room in which a little "pollu" lay dying. The doctors and nurses were greatly worried, because the poor man was to have been decorated that day, and the officer who should perform the ceremony had not yet arrived.

The "pollu" might lapse into unconsciousness at any moment—what should they do?

The Queen, on being informed on the cause of their anxiety, asked simply: "Shall I decorate him, before it is too late, though it is not correct under the circumstances?"

The doctors decided in the affirmative and Queen Amelle speaking lovingly to the brave little "pollu" affirmed on the much coveted military cross. Then turning to the doctors asked if she might not also give him the "accolade." And gathering the dying man in her arms, she kissed him tenderly and lovingly on each cheek—and he died that same night—happy and smiling peacefully, for had not a Queen and above all, a mother, lightened his last hours of darkness? And the Queen? Well, on leaving the hospital she met the officer whom she had replaced officially for a few moments, and told him in frank and simple words what she had done. He, though at first surprised, was so charmed by her kind and sweet manner that he could only say "she had done the right thing, and that he was glad she had been there to do it."

of the earth. The animals remained the very lowest type—animals which carry their young in pouches, which have the smallest of brains. There was no competition, no hard struggle for life, as in the busier world with-out, no need to improve. They developed on the old lines. Some grew to be giants, as big as any elephant, and then died out. The smaller types survived, though, of these smaller ones, the great kangaroo is bigger than the tallest man.

The story of the Australian animals is one of the wonders of the world. The huge continent experiences in its different ranges three climates—tropical, sub-tropical and temperate, so that we might expect to find there animals resembling those of Africa as well as of Europe. But there is nothing of the sort. There are no lions or tigers, or wolves, bears, cats, weasels—indeed, not a single flesh-eater except a little so-called cat. There is that, and there is the wild dog, or dingoo, but he is a mysterious newcomer, not a native. There are neither apes nor monkeys; neither oxen, deer, nor antelopes; no elephants, rhinoceroses, pigs, camels, horses, hares or rabbits; no true mice, squirrels or porcupines; no hedge hogs or shrews. And yet, lacking all these creatures, Australian wild life is amazing.

A multitude of forms follow the kangaroo line of development; there are what are called kangaroo hares, kangaroo rats, kangaroo mice, simply because they suggest the forms of these originals in other lands. There were no flesh-eaters, other than the so-called cats, in Australia, before white man, and the domesticated animals arrived.

Wonderful Plant Life.

The plant life of the sleeping land was wonderful, too. The great feature here is the eucalyptus tree, of which there are 150 species, many of them unknown elsewhere. Like the animals, they took to being giants, and are often the tallest trees in the world, reaching from 400 to 500 feet. Their leaves stand upright, so that the sunlight passes between them and the trees yield no shade, but their properties are indispensable, and their wood is invaluable. They yield precious oils and gums, wood the white ant cannot destroy, wood that water will not rot and the deadly shipworm will not bore. Then there are the wonderful acacias, with their glorious blooms and perfume; and there is the famous bush or scrub which covers hundreds of square miles at a stretch.

There are trees whose blossoms are so brilliant that they seem to set hills on fire and can be seen miles out at sea. There are trees that have no leaves, and trees that are really giant grasses. There is a mahogany that makes railway sleepers and paving roads; there are palms and figs; there is a mistletoe which is not a parasite, like ours, but a true tree with blossoms of fiery scarlet. All these treasures of plant and animal life remained locked up in the enchanted land, waiting.

Then from somewhere, we know not from where, men appeared at last, naked, and cannibals. The lowest in the human scale, they lived, and still live, when away from white settlements, much the same sort of life as our old cave men lived in Britain hundreds of thousands of years ago. They had rough flint implements and tools, and their successors have them still; they do not possess houses, unless it be a rude, temporary shanty made of bark or twigs.

And yet these ancient savages made one of the most wonderful of all natural weapons, the boomerang—the curved piece of wood which, when cleverly thrown, circles strangely through the air, strikes dead a bird or an animal or, if it misses, returns to the thrower. And these boomerang men with their tools and flint and their fires made by friction, shared with the animals this continent of nearly three million square miles, stretching 2,400 miles from east to west and nearly 2,900 from north to south. With this primitive living host for her keepers, the great land slept on; she slept, like Sleeping Beauty, until the prince should come. —"My Magazine."

THE FASHIONS

A Forecast of the Fall Styles.

Before very long, thin summer frocks and light suits will have to be put away for the heavier fall garments to take their places. It often happens that the first chill winds catch us unprepared, and certainly there is nothing more upsetting than to realize that we had not given a thought to the coming of fall and were, consequently, not ready for the change in the weather.

The autumn styles are already well established, so no one need be afraid to make her selection in suits and gowns early, for there is no danger that they will not be in good style later. The suit models that have come over from Paris are as attractive as they can be. The coats are mostly three-quarter length and some of them are shorter. They reach to the hips, the fingers tips or the knees. The skirts are quite full; just as full as they were last fall, but not so flaring. The lines are straighter, as a rule, and the skirts just a trifle longer than they have been worn in the past seasons. Strictly tailored suits, of course, do not have very wide or long skirts. Among the coat styles there are some Russian effects seen, which most women will be happy to learn. One of the favored models is fitted above the waist and quite full below it, and there are many variations of this idea.

A suit that gives promise of being very well liked on account of its generally becoming lines is illustrated here. It has deep pockets which are cut in with the fronts of the coat, and a narrow belt going around the sides and back, but not the front. The skirt that completes this suit has pockets, corresponding in cut to those on the coat.

In the other suit shown here, there is a suggestion of the Empire style, the return of which we have been hearing so much about lately. It comes in a modified form, having a panel in the front and back, and is certainly most attractive.

A wonderfully smart suit from Paris was made of navy blue gabardine, with a very long, full coat. The skirt also was very full. It extended up above the normal waistline, where it was attached to a blouse of brown and black checked silk with small checks. The coat was lined with this silk, and when thrown open the effect of the whole costume was very striking.

Suit Fabrics and Colors.

There are charming suit materials for fall, which will perhaps make it difficult to decide on what to get. Besides the old stand-by, serge, there is its staunch companion, gabardine; then there are wool pralin, wool velours, broad-cloth, cheviot, mixtures, and many fancy twills and suitings. For dressy wear, velvet, velveteen and satin will be very much in the foreground. The checked wool velours are very stylish in two tones, as, for instance, black and brown, tan and brown, and gray and brown. They are most practical, too, for they wear very well. The fashionable soft tones are navy blue, dark brown, green, taupe, gray, burgundy, and black.

Fur for Trimming.

Did any woman fear that the fur on her suit last winter would not be fashionable this year? If so, let her fear be turned into joy, for fur is to be used even more lavishly than it was last winter. The bands of fur on the skirts are wider, the fur collars on coats just as high and the cuffs on the sleeves just as deep. Rabbit and skunks are the fur most commonly used, and there are also Hudson seal, beaver, fox, lynx, mink and ermine, all of which were used last winter.

And not only on suits and cloaks is there to be an abundance of fur trimming, but also on evening gowns. Even the very sheerest fabrics, such as net, Georgette crepe and chiffon, are to be decorated with fur. A very stunning evening dress of net had the skirt edged with a deep band of fur. The dress itself was elaborately beaded. Beaded fabrics, metallic embroidery and sequins are extensively used on evening gowns. The wonderful effects and beauty of these under the lights can readily be imagined.

Ten Sons Serving.

Mr. and Mrs. Sullivan, of Foster road, Walthamston, England, have ten sons serving their country. Married forty-one years ago, Mrs. Sullivan has had a family of seventeen—fifteen sons and two daughters. Thirteen of the boys are alive. The oldest is over forty, the youngest has gone to work in the coalfields till he is old enough to join up.

Selling Enemy Goods.

Mr. Hughes states that enemy goods imported into Australia before the war are still being sold. The Government has decided that wholesale houses must not sell such goods after September 30, nor retail houses after November 30.

OPEN DOOR IN THE DOMINIONS

SIR RIDER HAGGARD REPORTS ON EMPIRE TOUR.

Free Land and Warm Welcome Await British Soldiers After the War.

Sir Rider Haggard's report on his tour of the Overseas Dominions, for the purpose of ascertaining what facilities these were prepared to give as regards land settlement and employment to ex-soldiers and soldiers domiciled in the United Kingdom, has been issued by the Colonial Institute, on whose behalf the mission was undertaken, says the London Times. It contains a full account of his discussions and the text of his correspondence with responsible Ministers, in the various self-governing States of the Empire, and the mass of information thus collected at first hand as to the prospects overseas should do much to facilitate the solution of a difficult problem.

Summing up the results of his investigations, Sir Rider Haggard states that, although for various reasons nothing can be expected from the Union of South Africa, and the letter from the Government of New Zealand is less definite than those received from the various Governments in the other parts of the Empire, on the whole the Institute's efforts have met with considerable success.

Depends on the Man.

Indeed, I imagine I shall scarcely be going too far if I say of the self-governing parts of the Empire at large that everywhere there is now an open door for the British ex-service-man, who for the most part will be admitted on terms practically of equal advantage to those which they determine to accord to their own citizens. Wherever he may choose to settle he will, I am convinced, receive the warmest of welcomes and much the same assistance that each State or Dominion ultimately decides to give to its own returned soldiers.

"The rest is in his own hands. If he justifies the hospitality extended to him as a fellow-subject of the Crown who has fought for the common cause, he and his family can do well, and possibly rise to affluence, whether he selects Rhodesia, Australia, New Zealand, or the vast and wealthy Dominion of Canada as his future home. If, however, he lacks character or shrinks from effort, success cannot be promised to him. In the end everything depends upon the man himself, and, I may add, upon the man's wife.

Group Settlement.

"I have not, either in this report or elsewhere, attempted so much as to adumbrate any scheme of overseas land settlement for soldiers. It has seemed to me that to do so would be foolish and even impertinent. The agricultural conditions in Africa, Australia and Canada differ widely; of ten, too, they vary very much in the different States and provinces of those huge dominions. This means, of course, that no one plan can be made to serve for all the parts of the Empire that I have visited; it is probable, indeed, that the same plan could not be utilized without variation in any two places throughout all that noiseless area. Each country must design and use its own.

"Moreover, in every instance this should be formulated, not in England by an individual or committee, but by the local experts of that country who are familiar with its peculiarities, needs, and systems. It is true that, so far as I am aware, this has not yet been done anywhere, at any rate in detail, except perhaps in the instance of the Canadian Pacific Railway. Steps are, however, being taken in that direction.

Equal Terms.

"Perhaps, however, I may be allowed to express a hope that the authorities in them will give consideration to the group system of settlement. I am convinced that it would not be wise to take men from home and put them down by themselves in strange and unpeopled neighborhoods, where loneliness would produce its natural effect both on the men themselves and on their wives and families, and probably, in the end, drive them into the cities.

It will be noted that in sundry instances the Governments throughout the Dominions also promise equal terms to the British ex-service man as regards employment. This point is more important than may at first appear. Not all immigrants will desire to settle on the land, and many would, in the end, benefit greatly if they could have the advantage of working for a while under the direction of others acquainted with local conditions, especially at the high wage obtainable everywhere in the self-governing portions of the Empire, cut of which they can save money."

MILLIONS OF SHOES FOR WAR.

British Manufacturers Make 25,000,000 Pairs for Allies.

Orders for 25,000,000 pairs of shoes for the British, Serbian, French Russian, Italian and Belgian armies have been received by British manufacturers since the outbreak of the war.

One-fourth of the total, or more than 10,000,000 pairs a week, have been supplied by the workmen of Northampton, the chief seat of the English shoe manufacturers, an hour's train ride northwest of London. The manufacturers of this place are turning out a total installment of 3,000,000 pairs of footwear for the Russians, this time boots known as "Cossacks."

Owing partly to the preoccupation with army contracts, partly to depletion of their staffs of male operatives, and partly to restrictions imposed by the Government on the disposal by tanners and merchants of leather suitable for army purposes, boot and shoe manufacturers are finding considerable difficulty in supplying the demands of the civilian market.

Wallacetown Fair will be held on Thursday and Friday of next week. This fair is always a big attraction and will be none the less so this year as we notice the prize list and special features are on a more extensive scale than ever.

John Barleycorn made a quiet exit in Glencoe. Those who anticipated a big jubilee on Saturday evening were disappointed. In fact the hotels were sold out of their stocks of ardent spirits the day before and you couldn't even get a "smile" on Saturday.

There will, undoubtedly, be a falling off in the number of entries in grain, seed, fruit, roots, vegetables, plants and flowers at the local fair, owing to the unfavorable season. Those who have the interest of the fair at heart should, therefore, "dig up" what they can, and assist in making the showing in these classes as large and varied as possible.

CANADIANS' REAR SHELLED.

Wounded Canadians Say British Artillery is Heavier Than foe's.

LONDON, Sept. 19.—Members of a party of wounded Canadians who arrived at a hospital near London Monday night narrated incidents of the Somme fighting, illustrating in a measure the different nature of the warfare in which Canadians are now engaged from that to which they had been tied down for the previous twelve months.

As already reported, the Germans are confining their artillery now-days against the Canadians mostly to high explosives.

Three Canadians lying in one ward had pretty much the same tale, although each man was laid out at a different time and place. One private from Vancouver had no fewer than ten wounds in his legs. The Germans, he said, were putting in shells fast. Like the rest of his comrades, he was then in the front line standing in a trench. A shell came close back of the trench and buried two of his nearest comrades. One of the two was completely covered and the other buried up to the neck.

A corporal began digging for the men completely buried," he went on, "and I went for the man whose head was just out. I had to scrape and dig while lying on my stomach and got him pretty well out. A stretcher bearer was right behind me waiting to attend him when another shell laid out the stretcher bearer completely, and laid me out with these wounds in the leg. I had to give up digging and lost myself for a bit. When darkness came, I crawled off and managed to reach the headquarters' dressing station half a mile away. After daylight I was carried away under a white flag with other Canadians, who had had a similar experience.

"The Germans land only one shell in the front line for ten that go now into the supports, presumably to stop reinforcements being sent forward. The enemy artillery is heavy but ours is five times heavier."

His General Lord Brooke, of the 10th Canadian Brigade, who recently went to France and was wounded, is not in a dangerous condition. Major Cecil Critchley of the Strathcona Horse has been received by the King at Windsor and invested with the insignia of the Distinguished Service Order.

Hon. Walter Scott, Premier of Saskatchewan, who has been suffering for the past two weeks from asthma, is reported much better and is improving daily.

George Wilson, living about a mile west of Wardville, had his house destroyed by fire Sunday evening, Sept. 10th. Most of the contents were saved. A defective chimney was thought to have been the cause.

Henry Washington, probably the oldest man in Canada (at any rate reputed to be 118 years old), Kingsville's only colored resident, died a few days ago. He was at one time a slave in the south, but made his escape to Canada.

At Petrolia an action for damages was brought by a man named Taylor against a farmer named Boyle. Taylor's auto had been damaged when it ran into a steer, the property of Boyle, which was pasturing along the highway contrary to law. The judge dismissed the action with costs against Taylor.

THROUGH THE DARK SHADOWS

Or The Sunlight of Love

Early for him, on the following morning he was aroused by a loud knocking at his front door. Now thoroughly sobered, he hurriedly dressed, stumbled down the rickety staircase, and opened the door, to find himself confronted by Miss Ada Lester.

Her face was flushed, and the angry light of Jasper Vermont had called up by his sneers at her vulgarity the previous evening still shone in her dark eyes.

"Where is the gal?" she asked abruptly.

"The gal?" he repeated, staring at her in stolid amazement.

"Yes—Jessica!" retorted Miss Lester, her jewels flashing in a chance ray of sunlight which had found its way through the dingy court. "Where is she?"

"She is not at home," said Mr. Wilfer. "She and Martha have gone out for the day to Greenwich. If you'd wrote a-sayin' you was join' to call I'd have made 'em stay till you came."

Miss Lester looked at him keenly. "If you don't believe me," said Wilfer, "go upstairs and look at her room."

Ada ran past him up the stairs, and quickly returned.

"It's locked," she said.

"Of course; she's quite the lady—keeps the keys herself," sneered Johnna. "Look 'ere, 'ere's her hat and coat; there's one of 'er boots, so she must be comin' back afore long."

Miss Lester appeared convinced. She breathed more freely, as if a weight had been taken off her mind.

"Here," she said, putting some gold coins in his hand, "is something to make up for my troubling you. But I was real anxious to know if everything was right with the gal."

Wilfer—debauched and demoralized by drink—was disposed to look at the worst side of things; and from this point of view thought she meant the reverse of what she said.

"Would you be very much cut up," he said slyly, "if she wasn't able to trouble you any more, or answer awkward questions, miss?"

She turned on him with a fierceness that made him recoil.

"If anything happens to that gal," she shouted, "I'll turn the police on you. For, mind my words—I mean them—I shouldn't have cared yesterday very much, if I had learnt she was dead, but now I want her. Do you hear? I want her, and you take care she's alive and ready when I come for her."

Then, without vouchsafing any further information, she flounced away, leaving Mr. Wilfer staring blankly after her, and wishing for once that he had stayed his hand, instead of driving the girl into the miseries and dangers of the streets.

Little did Wilfer or Miss Lester imagine that Jessica had found safety and refuge in Adrian Leroy's chambers.

CHAPTER VI.

Love is the universal epidemic, infectious in all climes and conditions; there is no inoculation that will secure exemption from its influence; only given a warm human heart, and there is the natural susceptibility.

So it is from high to low. The little blind god takes no count of difference in fortune or rank in life. Dynasties fall, thrones totter to the ground, crowns tumble to dust on kingly heads; but love rules and lives on, immortal, triumphant, unconquerable.

Jessica had never heard of Romeo and Juliet, of Faust and Marguerite, or King Cophetua and the beggar maid. All she knew was that she loved, was conscious only that for a kind word from the lips of the man who had befriended her, for a glance from those dark eyes, she would have gladly given up all the other glories of her arrival, absent, engaged on business concerning the sale of the faded picture to Mr. Harker, and Martha was still away; so Jessica, pausing at the door of the living-room to a certain that it was empty, softly ascended the stairs leading to the garret which served as her special apartment.

It was as small and as squalid as all the other rooms in that crowded court; but it was different from them in one respect—it was clean.

A miserable chair—instead of the chequer kind, covered with a threadbare quilt; a chair with the back broken off; a washstand on three legs, and a triangular piece of silvered glass, the remains of a cheap mirror, composed the furniture.

This peculiarly-shaped piece of common glass reflected the girl's beautiful face in all manner of distorted forms. The quilt just kept her from perishing with the cold. But yet the mirror, the bed, and the room itself were precious to her, for they were her own. Beyond its sacred threshold Johann or Martha never passed. She had a key to it; and to enter now she unlocked the door.

After the luxury of Adrian's rooms the mean quality of her own apartment struck the girl more forcibly than usual, and sinking upon the bed, she covered her face with her hands and gave way to a flood of tears. But the weakness did not last long; and after a moment or two, with a sudden gesture, almost Italian in its intensity, she flung back her head and rose from her crouching position.

"I will not think of the beautiful place, I will not think of him," she told herself passionately. "But, oh! will he be sorry that I ran away, or will he laugh, and ask that proud servant to see that I haven't stolen anything?"

She shook her head mournfully at her own distorted reflection in the cracked mirror, then she sighed and went downstairs.

Johann had returned, wonderful to relate, still fairly sober; but this was probably due to the necessity of maintaining at least the appearance of sobriety in his transaction on behalf of the gang concerning the sale of the picture.

He was counting the coins on the table, some of them gold—for Jessica's quick eyes caught the shimmer of it—and he looked up half fiercely, half contemptuously as the girl entered.

"Well, where have you been? You're like a cat, or a policeman—never to be found when you're wanted. There was a fine lady came to see you this mornin'—a real swell, my girl."

He laughed coarsely. "But, of course, you were out of the way. Where had you got to?"

"Anywhere, nowhere," replied Jessica, who did not fear him when he was sober, though she hated him always.

"Ah, that's the style! The swell lady ought to have heard you talk like that. She'd say I was bringing you up well. Come here and let's have a look at you."

Jessica did not move, but stared at him steadily.

"What! You won't come?" he said with a grin. "Well, there's something for your obstinacy, you little mule!"

He flung a half-crown across to her, and Jessica took it up, then looked him questioning in the face.

"You're thinking I'm mighty generous, eh? So I am, my girl—doubtless generous." He laughed mockingly.

"Well, what do you say if all the lot's for you, eh?"

"All for me!" repeated the girl stopping short in her task of making the mantelshelf neat; "all for me!"

"Yes, when you get it, little cat! All for you, indeed! Not it's for me; and I've a good mind to take the half-crown back. A fool and his money's soon parted; but he's more idiotic to part with other people's. I'm going out. I shall want some grub when I get back—arf a pound of steak, an' a pot of porter, an' don't forget the gin."

"Mind you remember now, or I'll break every bone in your body." With which forcible admonition the man shuffled out.

After a few hours he returned, not blindly drunk, but spiteful, ill-tempered, and stupidly brutal.

About the same time on that day Adrian Leroy was making his way in the new car through the crowded thoroughfare of Oxford Street.

"Soho? Yus, sir. Crackell Court, just turnin' on the left. I'll show yer, sir," piped the ragged urchin.

whose heartfelt interest Leroy had purchased, along with his quiver, by means of a shilling.

Cracknell Court was small, evil-smelling, and teeming with children. Bidding the chauffeur wait at the entrance to the court, Adrian, to whom dust, noises, and evil smells were things of absolute pain, entered one of the dens and asked for Mr. Wilfer.

"There he is," said another urchin; and Leroy turned to face that individual, who was leaning against an open door.

"Am I speaking to Mr. Johann Wilfer?" he asked courteously.

"You are," returned Wilfer, taking the begrimed pipe from his mouth, and staring with bloodshot eyes at the handsome, high-bred face before him.

"Can you tell me if a young girl named Jessica returned to you safely this mornin'?" Leroy inquired.

The Farm

Importance of Good Feeding.

To the man who looks after his live stock nothing is more remarkable than the cumulative effects of good feeding. All of the grand pedigree herds have been built up quite as much by foods as by selection, and yet a well-bred animal will thrive on the food which will scarcely maintain a common one.

The fact that an animal has never been poor from its birth transmits to its descendants a greater aptitude towards fattening. When that has been continued for several generations the results become very marked. In feeding cattle there is no one dietary that is superior to all others. In countries like England feeding is a different matter to what it is in this country, where animals have to forage very much for themselves. It is possible to get an animal fat on a dietary where carbohydrates predominate, and equally so where proteins are in excess.

Animals fed with a preponderance of albuminoids are firmer and weigh heavier in proportion to measurement than when fed largely on carbohydrates. The great art of feeding is to fetch up the albuminoids at the lowest cost, remembering always that the bulky farm foods—hay, straw and roots—are always deficient in albuminoids and are not economically fed alone.

There must be sufficient bulk to fill the animal, as well as the more concentrated food to furnish the highest nutrition. For this purpose any sound clean fodder will do, and wheat straw chaff is far better than inferior mouldy hay.

While good feeding is the only way to success, the particular foods used must always be decided upon by the individual, and their selection is one of those fine problems, the solving of which makes the business of the farmer so attractive, and on which depends a successful year or otherwise.

The root crop has done much for sheep, providing winter food, but there is a strong prejudice against roots for breeding ewes. This is not altogether warranted, for, under certain conditions where grass land is scarce, a very high percentage of lambs is obtained from ewes which are very largely maintained on roots, particularly on swedes. It is quite possible that the prejudice arises from want of a better system of management.

Naturally, a ewe cannot maintain herself, and develop her lamb on swedes alone. She should have plenty of dry food. It is very important where sheep are put almost entirely on roots that dry food should be given at once. It is not necessary to give very rich dry food early. Almost any dry food will do so long as the sheep will eat it, and it is helpful and not expensive.

As a rule, the more nitrogenous matter the food contains the better. In cold weather there should be no sparing of food, especially to sheep in exposed places. If the sheep are in good condition at lambing all the better, but good condition does not imply flabby fat. The ewes should be in hard muscular condition and the blood strong from nitrogenous food.

After the Day's Work.
During the rush of the harvest season, when long hours are spent in the field and the teamsters come in unusually tired at night, there is a strong temptation to hurry through the chores. Water and feed is considered by many to be all the attention the team requires. The horse that is not thoroughly cleaned to remove dirt and perspiration from the skin soon begins to show the effects of it. Lack of proper attention to the horse's comfort is responsible for more thin horses than is feeding too small an oat ration.

If a horse comes to the stable wet with sweat very little cleaning can be done with the comb and brush although the use of the curry comb aids in opening the pores of the skin. All harness marks should be sponged off and some horsemen go over the whole animal with a damp sponge to remove as much dirt as possible. It is not advisable to wash a horse at night although some drivers do so. Many stables are so hot during the summer months that a horse sweats if left in them at night, and under these circumstances cannot well stand the next day's heat. After being fed and cleaned the horse is fresher the next morning if turned on pasture at night throughout the summer. However, it is not always possible to do so, and when the stable is hot the next best thing to do is to tie the horse outside with some bedding under him. The hay can be fed in the open as well as in the stable. To keep up with the farm work the teams must be kept as efficient as possible and in condition to do a full day's work.

For two or three months during the year flies torment the horses and make it more difficult for them to do their work. Some horses are protected against the pests, but others are left to fight these tormentors themselves. Fly-nets made of heavy cord or leather laces were commonly used at one time and afforded a degree of protection. A light cotton or hurlap sheet also serves the purpose of protecting the back and sides against flies, but is more heating than the netting. Some drivers rub a little fish oil around their horses' ears, neck legs and other parts where flies

Work the Colt.

Last spring I had three good horses and a two-year-old colt, and decided that the work of the old horse could be made easier with benefit to the colt. Early in the winter the colt was broken and used at light work. In the spring when doing my farm work I made a four-horse evenner from a piece of 2 x 4-inch elm, the end holes being five feet apart, the centre hole two feet from one end and three feet from the other.

The best team was given the short end of the evenner or three-fifths of the load. On the other end was put the colt, and the third horse, having two-fifths of the pull, but the colt's end of the doubletree was 22 inches long, against 11 inches for the other horse. This gave the colt four-thirtieths against eight-thirtieths for his mate, the other horses each pulling nine-thirtieths of the load.

As the colt became accustomed to the work the doubletrees were changed till he pulled about two-thirds as much as each of the others. This helped the other horses and was not harmful to the colt.—Wm. Hardy, in Farm and Home.

Salt For Sheep.

Let the flock clean up the rough places. They will eat right down to the roots of the weeds and exterminate them.

Be sure that the salt box in the sheep pasture is kept filled. The flock will not thrive if deprived of salt. Remember, that while you are feeding your flock you are feeding for quality and quantity of wool, as well as for the future lamb crop.

Flat turnips can be sown now and a crop raised for the sheep. Roots are essential for the successful handling of the flock.

A flock of uniform quality is a joy and inspiration as well as a sure profit.

Penmans Underwear

THERE are certain words in our language which sum up a number of qualities, and express them tersely. "Class" is one, "Efficiency" another, "Penmans" still another. This last one when applied to underwear means all the good things you want in the underwear you buy for yourself. Don't forget Penmans.

PHONE GIRLS KNOW LATIN.

France Has Provided For Even This Emergency.

That the telephone operators of Paris are well versed in foreign languages is a thing which many visitors to this city have found occasion to discover, but a most striking proof of this versatility is told by a Swedish Catholic priest now visiting there.

The priest, who does not speak a word of French, was received at the station by a French colleague who did not know Swedish, but who was to be his guide, so the two priests arranged to carry on their conversation in Latin. The following morning the visitor, who lives at a hotel, was called up on the telephone by his colleague.

He had barely started speaking when he was interrupted by the operator at the exchange, who told him that because of the war he must not use a foreign language. The French priest explained the circumstances to her, and she assured him that matters might be arranged. In a moment the two priests heard a new young voice in the phone, addressing them in the most perfect Latin. What she said, translated into English, meant that although it was forbidden to use a foreign tongue, the operator should be very pleased if the two fathers would speak in Latin, and it would then be her duty to listen to their conversation.

LOBELIA AS A DRUG.

Indians Gathered the Plant for Their Medicine Chests.

American Indians found one plant growing in damp woods, handsomely adorned with pale blue flowers, which they used as medicine.

When the white man came the same plant won the favor both of the apothecary and the gardener, but the gardener has paid more attention to its cultivation than has the apothecary. Hence we know it more as a flower than as a drug. It's the lobelia, named for Matthias Lobel, a Flemish physician and botanist.

The medicinal substance in the plant is called lobelin, an alkaloid, although the Indians probably didn't know it. The common use of the plant among the aborigines led the early settlers to call it "Indian tobacco."

When it is cultivated for commerce the seeds are scattered on the surface of the ground late in the Fall or early in the Spring. They germinate early in April and send down roots.

When the flowers are blooming the plants are cut and dried in the shade. An acre of good soil will yield 1,000 to 1,200 pounds of herbs.

Here is a wonderful opportunity for your daughter to win for herself a Free Course in Domestic Science at the famous Macdonald Institute, Guelph. All she has to do is to bake one double loaf of bread and enter it in the contest at the fair according to the conditions explained below and more fully told in the folder we will send you on request. The loaf must be baked with the hard wheat flour guaranteed for bread.

This is a splendid flour which makes the biggest, bulging loaves—whitest, lightest and most wholesome bread you ever baked. Is this not a splendid opportunity to interest your daughters in breadmaking?

Here are the Splendid Prizes offered for the best loaf of bread baked with Cream of the West Flour. The following are offered at each local fair:

1st Prize—1 paid-up subscription to "My Magazine" for 1 year. This magazine is full from cover to cover every month with articles suitable for young girls. It is published in England. Value $2.50 per year.

2nd Prize—6 months paid-up subscription to "My Magazine" Value $1.25.

This is a wonderful little publication issued every month in England. Its eight pages are packed with highly engaging information and stories relating to history, nature study, animals, bird life, etc.

Important—The winners of 1st prizes at the fairs automatically become competitors for the Provincial Prizes. The second half of the double loaf is sent to Ontario Agricultural College, Guelph, by the district representative in special containers provided. The judging is done by Miss M. A. Purdy of the Department of Breadmaking and Flour Testing at the College.

Conditions of the Contest

Every girl may compete at the rural school fair in her district, whether or not she attends school, providing that her 12th birthday occurs before November 1st, 1916, or her 17th birthday does not occur before Nov. 1, 1916. One loaf of bread must be submitted baked in pan about 7 x 5 inches and 3 inches deep, and divided into two loaves so that they may be separated at the fair. The loaf must be baked with Cream of the West Flour. One half will be judged at the fair. The other half first prize loaf will be sent to Ontario Agricultural College, Guelph, to compete in the Provincial Contest. Last week-end was celebrated freely by those who evidently thought it was their last chance for a drink. It is to be hoped that the citizens of this village will now be through hearing vile language and witnessing acts not fit to look upon caused by the liquor traffic.

GREAT MEDICINE—Tonti, one of the pioneers of French Canada, lost a hand and was unable to work. He was in the habit of boxing the ears of refractory Indians with this iron hand, and they have remarked that it was great medicine. Dr. Thomas' Electric Oil is great medicine. It takes hold of pain with an iron hand and knocks it out of the system.

Miller's Worm Powders will not only expel worms from the system, but will induce healthy conditions of the system under which worms can no longer thrive. Worms keep a child in a continual state of restlessness and pain, and there can be no comfort for the little one until the cause of suffering is removed, which can be easily done by the use of these powders, than which there is nothing more effective.

NOT A NAUSEATING PILL.—The excrement of a pill is the substance which enfolds the ingredients and makes up the pill mass. That of Parmelee's Vegetable Pills is so compounded as to preserve their moisture, and they can be carried into any latitude without impairing their strength. Many pills, in order to keep them from adhering, are rolled in powder, which prove nauseating to the taste. Parmelee's Vegetable Pills are so prepared that they are agreeable to the most delicate.
