THE CARE OF THE WARDROBE!

Since, according to Shakespeare, the apparel proclaims the man, the care of the Clothing should engage the attention of every man, and still more of every woman. Strangers can only judge by appearances so that any person whose clothes are shabby, soiled or uncared for, will certainly suffer in the estimation of the world. On the other hand, a "well-groomed" smartly dressed man or woman commands respect at once.

If your garments are to look their best, and retain their smart appearance, you must employ the services of a Dry Cleaning establishment.

"BEAVER" FLOUR

is both a Bread Flour and a
Pastry Flour

The perfect flour is the one that combines the good qualities of Ontario and Western wheat. This is exactly what "Beaver" Flour does. It is a blend of best Ontario fall wheat with a little Western wheat to add strength. "Beaver" Flour is equally good for Bread and Pastry—it has the real home made flavor that western flours lack. CHAPTER VII.

"I do get so beside myself, so weary of it all; for this morning is only just like most mornings. I am always clumsy, always unlucky—at home. Whatever I arrange interferes with something. Not a single taste have I that mamma approves of. Where she is lavish, I should never spend. Where she is careful, I am not. If I could ever please her really, ever make her fond of me, I would try and try and never tire. But I can't, so I suppose I seem to give up, though I don't intend to do so. But please—lifting a sad pair of eyes so appealingly, the poor major felt quite a sympathetic haze over his own—"will you forgive me for saying all this? I now it's wrong to have complained, it's horribly bad taste and very idiotic of me, for it can't improve matters. But I never said one syllable about it before to anyone—not even Mary Dacie—and I will never again. If you can forget my grumbling I shall be most grateful. It's eased me ever so much, and perhaps—straightening herself with rather a poor attempt at a smile—"perhaps I shall behave better after it."

The major took her hand, and, with a kindly little pressure, drew it within his arm.
"I am sure you will, if there's need of it," he said, soothingly. "I dare say there are awkwardnesses for you all. But do your best, my dear, and you'll get into smoother waters before long. You'll not be always here, you know. It's not to be expected you should." (The nearest hint of married freedom he dared permit himself.) "But as long as you live together sail as close to your mother's wishes as you can. If you have to vex her with one thing, why, please her with another. Now, that letter business, I don't want to know whom it was from, of course; but couldn't you give in to her there?"

"No!" cried Sydney, with a jerk of the major's gouty arm that made him jump. "I do want you to know who wrote it. It was Jacob Cheene. My father—my father's one old true friend,

The only person here at St. Clair's I ever knew or ever saw who spoke kindly of my father to me. He came here eight years ago, just before—before—that June. And his coming was such a pleasure to papa! He was only a clerk, but they had known and trusted, and cared for each other for years and years. He asked me when he went home to write to him, and I said I would. I told papa I was going to write, and it pleased him, I know," cried Sydney, gazing with strangely flashing eyes into the blue sky far away, as if somewhere there a visible presence were animating her—"I know papa would never have me give up Jacob, so I won't! I know he would always have me keep true to his old companion, so I will! Please, Major Villiers," with a swift turn, and sudden pleading, "don't be angry with me, but papa and I must have our way in this!"

Then she picked up her trailing coil of wire, smiled a half-defiant, half-beseeching April smile, and ran of without bidding response or remonstrance, leaving her would-be mentor rather inclined to put his sympathies in the same scale with her rebellious decision, and meditating, as he strolled some half hour among espaliers and raspberry-canoe, how this high much-hampered spirit could be toned down admirably under tender influence, and make a wife out of a thousand and for his son Rupert.

CHAPTER VIII.

That morning's storm seemed to clear the sky. Possibly suspecting, and desiring no repetition of it, Mrs. Alwyn avoided dangerous topics; while amply contented with the opinion that he had formed, Major Villiers attempted no more interference between his sister-in-law and her daughters. By and by, when the girls were married and away, the frets and jars of daily contact all removed, the mother would perchance deal out more kindly justice to her younger child. If not—well, Sydney would be out of the way of any carping criticism, summing herself in more congenial atmosphere.

So, on the principle of by all means letting the sleeping dog lie, the major shirked any more tete-a-tetes for the remainder of his visit; steered clear of aught but very general conversation; led warily from the heat in India to the heat in town, and the advisability of his son getting out of it, and inhaling the cool breezes of St. Clair's; now and again, so the days went smoothly enough till the last of the major's visit was reached. Then the calm which Sydney, from a certain proud penitence at having opened her heart to a stranger, and Mrs. Alwyn, from a politic desire to preserve appearances, had set themselves to keep, was threatened with another upset.

It was the morning of a grand gathering at Oakleigh Place, for which the major had been especially persuaded to prolong his visit. An officer, pronouncedly a gentleman, and a good-looking man, was a most desirable escort. So his journey to town was postponed till the evening train, and arrangements made to suit his departure then.

"If you will excuse it," said his hostess, "you shall have a sort of cold dinner, that can be ready the moment we are back from Oakleigh. You will be sure, Sydney, to see that we are not kept waiting. A new parlor-maid is a great worry, major, which you are fortunate not to realize.

Sydney looked up perplexed and edging.
"I am to see about the servants, mamma?"
"Yes, if you've no objection."
"But—I thought I was going to Oakleigh?"

"And I thought," returned Mrs. Alwyn, "that as you generally care a little for these afternoon parties, and always prefer getting off them, you would be positively glad to stay a while."

"So I should," answered the girl frankly, "if it were anywhere else."

But the Dacies say the gardens here are glorious in July, and I had been looking forward to seeing them, mamma, as they invited me, too, that day."

"Let Sydney go instead of me," interrupted the major; "I don't care to draw for the gardens. That's an excellent amendment."
"Not to be thought of for a moment," said his hostess, peremptorily. "If Sydney cannot possibly attend to my wish and your comfort, of course she goes with us." But baffled in her project of letting Leonora shine undivided at Oakleigh, and warding off comparison between the ripeness of her elder child and the fresher attractiveness of the younger, Mrs. Alwyn assumed the heavy air of chronic dissatisfaction Sydney knew so well and chafed under.

"Indeed, mamma," she said now leperately anxious their kind guesses should not think her always an evil-dispositioned marplot, "I will show Phillips anything I can before we go and help her if you will tell me how may. But I was wanting to say that almost must go to Oakleigh, for I met Lady Comyngham yesterday, and she stopped her ponies and said she hoped I would certainly be there. And I said, 'Oh, yes, for I never imagine you didn't want me to—'"
"I must beg of you, Sydney, not to misinterpret me in that manner?" put in Mrs. Alwyn, irritably, more out of sorts than ever at this pointed politeness from the countess; "go, by all means! Pray go! I'm only afraid Major Villiers, you will find it awkward driving with four in the carriage."

"Not the least in the world," protested the gentleman, very willingly. "I prefer the quartet, I assure you shouldn't half enjoy myself if one were left out in the cold, you know," with a good-humored smile at Sydney, who, on the verge of answering, was stopped by Leonora, her mouth slightly sullen, her cheeks tinged with vexation.
"Mamma, we shall be intolerably crushed, two on the back seat. My skirt certainly won't look fit to be seen. I think I had better stay at home."
"My dearest—" began Mrs. Alwyn, but for once Sydney broke in vehemently.
"No, no, no, Norah; you know that couldn't be anyhow. And there is no need, for, mamma—I wanted to tell you last night, only Leonora was singing, and I couldn't speak—Dr. Dacie is not able to go, he doesn't get a bit better, and his wife will not leave him, of course; but they both so wish poor Mary to have the pleasure, for she has not been out all the summer. So I said I would ask if you would let her drive me, and then she could go in with our party. And may she?"

"Just another of those frequent cases where I do wish you would think before you speak, Sydney," answered

Stomach Troubles and Weakness of Kidneys Cured by Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills.

There is an enormous amount of suffering from liver and kidney derangements and stomach troubles that could easily be avoided by using Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. If you could only realize the scores of everyday ills that arise from a sluggish condition of the kidneys, liver and bowels, you would not be long in giving this medicine a trial. Mrs. Edward Stewart, New Richmond, West, Que., writes: "I want to tell you how thankful I am for using your Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills for stomach troubles and backache caused by weak kidneys. I was unable to wash any clothes for over two years on account of my back being lame. I read the Almanac and began using these pills. Two boxes made a complete cure. I can do my own washing and other work now, and want to say to lady friends that they do not know how much I appreciate Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills."

Automatic Conversation.

By RUTH CAMERON.

A friend who dropped in to call the other afternoon found me curled up on the couch with a touch of the gripe.

She expressed her sympathy, mentioned two of her friends who were also afflicted with violent colds, and then started me, and suspect herself, by saying "automatically" the words which had been on her lips when she first entered and which had been driven back by finding me on the couch. "Well, how are you?"

I relate this little incident as an example of the extent to which the automatic and the obvious dominate conversation among conventional people.

One of Margaret Deland's characters, an embarrassed young lover blurts out a remark in praise of the weather and then, suddenly remembering that it is raining hard, explains his praise by saying, "I mean it isn't raining quite so hard as it was yesterday."

Not being embarrassed young lovers, of course you and I would not be guilty of anything quite so absurd. But haven't you sometimes caught yourself making some automatic remark about the weather that didn't tally with actual conditions? I'm sure I have, and felt as foolish as I deserved to.

"Thinking is just what nobody wants to do," someone has said. And the average person proves this fact in his conversation both by the automatic and unthinking things he does say and the intelligent and the worth-

A Forgotten Explorer.

LITTLE KNOWN OF WM. BAFFIN BUT LETTERS ON MAP.

Brave Navigator and Geographer Who Sought the Northwest Passage Appears in the Records of Several British Expeditions as Pilot and Master—Was Shot During Engagement in the Orient.

The promoters of an English expedition now being fitted out believe that they possess information to justify a search for gold in Baffin Land, and that search is to be made during the coming summer.

All this recalls the man whose name is preserved in the geography of that sub-Arctic region, and that man is William Baffin, one of the first to navigate these northern waters, after whom the island was named. Baffin belongs to that band of fearless and able navigators whom the historian, Froude, calls "England's Forgotten Worthies"—such men as the Joneses, the Smiths, the Davises, the Drakes, the Gilberts, and later such men as Cook, Vancouver, Barker, and many others, whose names could be recalled.

William Baffin was an Englishman, probably a native of London, but nothing is known of his early life. The earliest mention of him is in the year 1612, a few years after the death of Queen Elizabeth, when James I. was on the united throne of England and Scotland. In that year Baffin was appointed pilot of the ship Patience, fitted out by James Hall, of Hull, for a voyage to Greenland, accompanied by a ship, the Heartsease, of which Andrew Barker was master.

On his return from America, Baffin entered the service of the Muscovy Company, which had for some years sent ships to catch whales near Spitzbergen. He made three voyages to Spitzbergen, and then he took service with the company for the discovery of a northwest passage that would enable vessels from Britain to skirt the northern end of America and so enter the Pacific Ocean by a route shorter than the long voyage around Cape Horn. That passage was long sought, and when found it was found to be impracticable for the purposes of commerce.

One of the ships of this expedition of 1615—almost three hundred years ago—was the Discovery, commanded by Captain Robert Bylot, with Baffin as pilot. An account of the voyage was written by Baffin, and the original manuscript with maps is in the British Museum.

As pilot of the Discovery, Baffin carefully examined Hudson Strait and the eastern coast of Southampton Island, which stands in the northern outlet of Hudson Bay. He passed up the great bay, which curve into the southwestern coast of Baffin Land, and is known as Fox Channel, but finding the land heading them and, he says, "very thick, pestered with ice, and the further we proceeded the more ice and shoal water with small show of any tide, we soon resolved there could be no passage in this place, and presently we bore in the helm and turned the ship's head to the southward."

In the following year, that is, in 1616, the ship Discovery, with Baffin still as pilot, again visited those northern waters, and discovered Lancaster Sound, along the north side of Baffin's Land, Wostenholme Sound and many others, and made a chart of the whole coast. Only a garbled report of his voyage was published without charts, and after a time wild statements were made respecting the shape and size of Baffin Land, so much so that the whole story came to be doubted.

Time, however, justified Baffin's work, for in 1818 Captain Ross discovered those Sounds, and without difficulty identified the localities Baffin had discovered and named.

The remainder of Baffin's life—only six years in all—was spent far from those sub-Arctic islands and waters which now form part of the geography of Canada. The closing events in the life of this brave old navigator took place in the East.

On the ship, Anne Royal, belonging to the East India Company, and commanded by Captain Andrew Shilling, Baffin spent the year 1613-15 in the Red Sea and the Persian Gulf, during which time he was engaged surveying and charting his observations, returning to London in September, 1615.

Early in the next year, Captain Shilling, in the London, a new ship, sailed for the East Indies in command of a company's fleet of four ships, and Baffin accompanied him as master. They arrived at Bombay in

Girl's Nerves Fully Restored

Was Never Able to Obtain Lasting Benefit Until Dr. Chase's Nerve Food Was Used.

Too many girls grow up with weak anaemic bodies and exhausted nervous systems. Indoor life and too much application in school are sometimes the cause.

The blood needs enriching and the nerves need strengthening by such treatment as Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. This food cure is doing wonders for many thousands of girls whose parents had almost despaired of their ever developing into strong, healthy women.

Mrs. J. Bagnall, 295 Woodville avenue, Toronto, writes: "My daughter suffered from nervousness since childhood, and any medicines she tried did not do any lasting good. We read in the papers about Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, and my daughter used it with wonderful results. This treatment has built up her system and so strengthened the nerves that she feels like another girl."

If you don't like Armada Tea the first time you try it don't blame the Tea. ARMADA is so much better than any other tea, and so different, that you should not decide about it with your first cup. The way and time it is steeped makes an enormous difference. The correct way is to steep from 5 to 6 minutes, according to taste, with freshly boiled water and then (this is most important) remove the leaves from the pot, other wise it will get strong and bitter. If you follow out these directions we have no hesitation in saying that you will find the best tea you ever tasted. ARMADA.

The "Avalonian Magazine" for March.

We thank the publisher of "The Avalonian" for a copy of the March issue. The Magazine is exceptionally interesting, containing numerous local and foreign stories. The two local serial stories which are running through it are worthy of comment. They were written specially for "The Avalonian" and are worthy of perusal, for the fact is shown that Newfoundland can boast of fiction writers who in a short time will compete with many well-known wielders of the pen. Mr. Penney deserves every praise and encouragement for he has given an opportunity to local writers to put their writings before the people, and that these writings show exceptional literary talent can be judged by a perusal of the stories.

"The Avalonian" is splendidly printed, profusely illustrated and is equal in literary value to any imported publication of this kind, and there is no doubt its sale will be great.

To whom it may concern: This is to certify that I have used MINARD'S LINIMENT myself as well as prescribed it in my practice where a liniment was required and have never failed to get the desired effect.

Wishes.

If wishes were but horses, the beggar folk would ride, and there'd be free divorces for people badly tied. We'd a l i l be packing monies till spavined in the knees, if wishes were but ponies, and roubies grew on trees. "I wish," says little Willie, "I wish I had a gun; I'd shoot till I was silly, and have all kinds of fun." And then he starts wishing he had a patent pole, so he could do some fishing down by the swimming hole. And he might have in plenty the things he wants so hard if he could work like twenty young beavers in the yard. His father says, "There's many a chore, my lad, you shirk; and I'd pay you a penny for every day you work." Thus Willie might be raking in lots of dough, in tears; by saving all he's making for ten or seven years, he'd have his gun and tackle, from all incumbrance free; and he might sing and cackle in perfect ecstasy. "This thus with every growing, as 'tis with every boy. We think we'd chirp like robins, and strangers be to pain, it wishes were; but Dobbins, and money fell like rain; but grief would then enmesh us and 'aunt us through the years; for things are only precious that cost us toil and tears.

Trepassey Train Blocked.

The Trepassey train which left here at 8:35 a.m. yesterday, returned to the city at 8 p.m., having only reached a little beyond Waterford Bridge. The train heads report 12 feet of snow on the line, and as they had no plow they were unable to make any headway. The train left again this morning preceded by a plow, and as the recent rain has slackened the snow it is expected the train will get along alright today.

St. John's Technical School.

To the Editor and Friends Interested in the Young Men of Newfoundland:

The Trustees, Teachers and Students associated with the movement recently started to establish the above School on a firm basis, and which has been received with such gratifying results, wish, through the medium of your valuable paper, to thank all those who have, in any way, contributed to furthering the movement, which is making such splendid progress.

The undersigned was privileged, through the courtesy of the President of the Board of Trade, to deliver an address in the Board of Trade Rooms last Saturday, at which time the policy of the School was clearly outlined to a large number of representative merchants and others interested in such work. In part the speaker stated the object of the school was to give such technical commercial education to deserving young men of the city and island along the lines of their various occupations, regardless of denomination, so that they might better fit themselves to cope with the difficulties that present themselves daily in every walk of life.

At the present time the Classes are in active operation, covering mathematics, mechanics, hydrostatics, and mechanical drawing; and it is proposed, if sufficient students present themselves, to start classes in shorthand, typewriting and practical book-keeping. The subject of navigation and nautical astronomy may possibly be dealt with later on.

The budget for equipping the school with suitable furniture, text books, stationery, mathematical instruments, etc., for the first year is estimated at $600.00.

The trustees believe they have found in Professor D. James Davies, B.Sc., F.C.S., and Mr. James Mould the right men to deal with the subject outlined above. Other assistants will be engaged as necessity demands.

The School has been visited, and the students addressed by Sir William Horwood, Chief Justice of the Supreme Court; Rev. H. Uphill of St. Mary's Parish; Reuben Horwood, Esq., Superintendent Blackall of the Board of Education, with the other Chairmen of the different Boards, who have all expressed themselves very favourably in the plans laid down for the continuance of this work.

For the present year the work will be sustained as follows: Through the courtesy and generosity the following has been provided and made possible:

R. G. Reid, Esq., provides the salary for the Teachers, and Light and fittings for St. Mary's Hall, with the Prizes for the Examination, which was completed last evening.

Rev. H. Uphill provides free of rent St. Mary's Hall, where, for the present, the Classes are being held.

Supt. Blackall has assured the Board of Trustees that the members of the Church of England Board of Education will cheerfully grant permission, if required for the use of the room now occupied by St. Mary's School.

Jcs. Roper, Esq., has donated several sets of Mathematical Instruments.

The following contributions in money have been received, and go well towards making up the amount received to cover the estimated budget for the present year. The Board of Trustees, believing that there are many philanthropic citizens, who desire to assist this work, suggest that any so disposed send their contribution by cheque or otherwise to Capt. H. B. Saunders, Crosbie Hotel, so that the whole sum may be in hand before he leaves the City about the 10th inst.

The funds thus contributed will be carefully administered by the Board of Trustees, who are: Reuben Horwood, Treasurer; Walter E. Ladley and Capt. H. B. Saunders. The School and the Course of Study will be under the supervision of the Principal, Professor D. James Davies, B.Sc., F.C.S. The minor details of the School will be controlled by a special committee, appointed by the students, who are as follows: P. LeMessurier, President; E. Bradbury, Vice-President; Thos. Buckingham, Secretary-Treasurer; B. Forsey, Librarian; Wm. McGettigan, Assistant Librarian.

The funds of the School are deposited in the West-End Branch of the Royal Bank of Canada, St. John's, and cannot be used, except by special permission from two members of the Board of Trustees.

WASHINGTON IRVING born 1783. The first American author who obtained a European reputation merely as a man of letters. Among his best works are "The Sketch Book," "Rip Van Winkle," "The Alhambra."

MARILLO died 1682, aged 65. Great Spanish painter, whose chief works are altar-pieces and religious subjects. He also painted a number of marvellous studies of peasant life.

JOHANNES BRAHMS died 1897, aged 64. German musical composer of deserved eminence. His compositions are of a varied order, most classical in form and possess deep intensity of expression and poetic significance. The three great periods of musical history are the three B's—Bach—Beethoven—Brahms.

DEATH OF PRINCE ARTHUR 1203. Henry II. of England left five sons William, Henry, Richard, Geoffrey and John. Arthur was Geoffrey's son and was the next heir to the throne in 1216 but his uncle John seized the throne and imprisoned Arthur. He was either murdered by order of John or killed in attempting to escape from a castle. Shakespeare adopts the latter view.

He who has most of heart, knows most of sorrow. —Bailey.

A Word In Season.

"I think this eczema will drive me crazy some day; always itching, burning, painful; relief, not speak of cure, seems impossible. It will set me off one of these days."

It will not, if you follow my advice. Go to your druggist and buy a box of Zylex, and use it according to directions. Eczema cannot long remain when it is used. I've tried it myself, and you should wash with Zylex Soap. That will prevent its coming back again."

Zylex Ointment (50c.) and Soap 25c. can be bought at your druggist's.—ap3.eod.14

Appreciation Possibilities

Although it has only recently entered the revenue-producing period, the Sherbrooke Railway & Power Company is already earning more than sufficient to take care of its bond interest.

In addition to this showing three new power contracts, lately closed with Sherbrooke industrial concerns will bring in $2,000 more NET revenue annually. These contracts are with the Canadian Brakehoe Company, the Canadian Connecticut Cotton Mills and the Panther Rubber Company—amounting to 1250 H. P. altogether.

When the Company has disposed of all its power the net earnings should be in the neighborhood of 2½ times the bond interest. But long before then the Bonds will have climbed considerably above their present low figure of 78 p.c. and interest, which returns the handsome yield of 6½ p.c.

Special report and illustrated booklet may be had on request.

In The House.

The outline of His Daily Day Described by a Member of Parliament. St. Stephen's has been declared to be the most entertaining place on earth—the best club in the world. On the other hand, many members of Parliament say that the life is so exacting as to be practically intolerable to a man who has other business to which to attend. Still, it has many compensations—besides that distinction.

The late Dr. Robert Wallace, the once popular member for East Edinburgh, used to say that, although the work was exacting to those who desired to get any recognition, it was amply repaid in the end. That is the opinion most generally expressed by those who have sat on the green benches and responded cheerfully and loyally to the summons of the party whip.

Of course, there is an everyday routine through which all members must go through if they are to discharge their duties to their constituents; and no one can expect to carry on his business at the same time. Yet that is what a great many hon. gentlemen attempt to do.

But it is only the strong man and arduous worker who can do this without detriment to himself. For, after all, mere attendance at the House for eight or ten hours, or perhaps longer, without a break involves a considerable strain on one when the same performance is repeated day after day through a long and arduous session.

Perhaps the heaviest part of the duties of a member of Parliament is the work he has to do in committee. Day by day, especially in the earlier part of the session, there are committees sitting in several rooms at St. Stephen's examining private bills, while public bills are examined by what are known as Grand or Standing Committees.

There are also select Committees for specific purposes, and the members composing these, as a rule, consist of fifteen members. Under a standing order, select Committees can sit during the sitting of the House, except while it is in prayer.

It is amazing to find how M.P.'s are inundated with letters, not only from their constituents, but from people of whose existence they know nothing.

Of course, attention must be given to those communications, and the number of hours that members spend in the writing-rooms can be gauged by the number of letters that are posted and delivered at the House, and also the amount spent on postage stamps.

Some M.P.'s open their mailbags with something like fear and trembling, but wealthy representatives make light of their bulky correspondence. They keep private secretaries, and, as being a member of Parliament is at once their occupation and hobby; they do not regard letter-writing as particularly irksome, or their correspondents as bores.

Having attended to their private correspondence, members have next to study the whips. Then the real work of the day begins. The duties of private members are, of course, by no means so onerous as those of Cabinet Ministers, and especially the Premier, who is expected to be in his place on the Treasury bench to lead debates, reply to questions, and attend generally to matters that may arise during the sitting.

Then the Prime Minister has to receive numerous deputations and listen to their grievances; he has also to interview his colleagues and attend to other calls that are made on his time and energy. Another important duty that used to devolve on the Premier, but which, it seems, is now to be discontinued, was to write a letter to the King every night when Parliament was sitting, giving a summary of the day's proceedings in the Commons. Nowadays, this duty is usually performed by one of his Cabinet colleagues.

It is the division lists, however, that bear the strongest evidence of the member of Parliament's devotion to duty, and it is to these that his constituents look.

It has become the practice in recent years for local newspapers, not only to publish the lists showing how many divisions the member for a particular district has taken part in, but to print details setting forth how he has voted for this or that particular bill.

Constituents are thus enabled to see whether their representative has been faithful to his promise, and to caecchibe him with confidence in regard to any measure in which he may have given a vote in opposition to their wishes.

The Great Ice Disaster 70 Dead; 47 Survivors

Missing Picked Up --- Bellaventure Ordered Home --- Mortuary for Dead Being Prepared --- Quarters for Rescued Arranged at Seamen's Institute.

Yesterday afternoon and night, the telegraph offices in the city were besieged with persons wearing expressions of profound regret and anxiety concerning the awful disaster that had befallen the crew of the Newfoundland during the blizzard of Tuesday last. In fact the sympathy of the whole community was aroused, and hundreds sought information from all possible sources in the hope of securing some definite news concerning the tragedy, which has had no parallel in the history of the seal-fishing of Newfoundland. The desire of all seemed to be centred on endeavoring to procure a list of the dead which would obviously relieve the awful suspense considerably, but all efforts in this direction proved futile, though the authorities and ship-owners made every possible attempt to get in communication with the Newfoundland but without avail. Many rumors were unfortunately circulated, which only served to increase the sufferings of those who were plunged in grief over the fate of their dear ones. Many of those whose breadwinners were involved in the awful catastrophe, wept with joy at the ray of hope that some chance remark brought to them, only to find a few moments later that the rumor was unfounded, and then grief was renewed, and a passionate burst of stifled sobs told of the emotions of some fond mother who wept for her boy, of a sister, whose fondest hopes of seeing her big brother return from the icefields, were damped.

At 4 p.m. yesterday, a wireless was received from Capt. Randell, of the s.s. Bellaventure, which was as follows: "Twenty-eight survivors of the Newfoundland's crew taken on board this forenoon. Two others on the ice who are alive. Believe that at least forty men are dead. The crew were on the ice since Tuesday morning. Hard work trying to get the men aboard, as they are unable to walk. The Bonaventure reports that there were one hundred men on the ice, of which thirty are alive, forty dead, and thirty not accounted for." The above message was communicated to the Colonial Secretary who immediately took the necessary steps for the care of the survivors on reaching here. The information was posted at the telegraph offices and the principal buildings of the city whether citizens thronged in eager expectancy to read the message which spoke volumes of grief to the friends and relatives of those on the Newfoundland. Many an eye that had been hardened by the adverses of the icefields, shed tears of general sympathy for the friends of the lost ones.

NASCOPHE STEAMER UP. Just before 8 p.m. a further message was received from Capt. Barbour, of the Nascope, by Job. Bros & Co., which read: "Just started the Newfoundland with five at half-mast. Trying our best to reach her with full steam up. It is very heavy and tight, and it is making slow progress. Will do all that is possible to rescue lives and recover bodies." The Nascope's message was also published, but did not tend to appease the anxiety of the relatives of those on board and only to increase their grief as the belief became general that a greater toll than at first reported, would be forthcoming. At 8 p.m. Mr. Gerald Harvey sent the following message to Capt. Randell, of the Bellaventure: "Collect all the survivors possible and do all possible for them; immediately you feel this has been done, send me word, with all possible speed. In a view to saving lives, telegraph news of living and missing if without causing delay; in latter event, instruct Bonaventure. How many hours do you estimate to reach St. John's; advise soon as possible." Towards night the people became more impatient, and at every place where the gruesome tragedy was the general topic of discussion, the ever anxious enquiry from all sides was "Is there a list of the dead?" The waiting rooms of the Postal Telegraph offices were thronged with anxious mothers and fathers, sisters and brothers who made heart-rending entreaties of the clerks for a list of the dead. The scene was a most pathetic one, and the occasional whisper heard concerning the families of those on board added to the sadness of the scene. The mention of these acts brought home to the anxious ones the appalling situation that confronted them. At 9:30 p.m. the clerk of the Postal Telegraphs, amid a breathless silence, posted up another message that had been forwarded from Fogo Station. After a few moments' silence the following was read: "On board the Bellaventure are fifty-eight dead and thirty-five survivors; on board the Florizel, five dead; on board the Stephano, one dead and two survivors." Tears stood on the cheeks of men who had often trod the frozen pans, and knew well the nature of an experience of a night on the ice, particularly during such a blizzard as that of Tuesday. Women gave expression to their grief by weeping, and could only with great difficulty be consoled at all. Shortly after the foregoing message was received, it was reported that the steamers Bellaventure, Stephano and Florizel were passing Cape St. Francis, and would arrive here about midnight. Hundreds vended their way to the waterfront, regardless of the weather conditions, and for several hours patiently watched for the coming of the ships. Hon. J. R. Bennett sent the following message to Capt. Joe Kean, of the Florizel, yesterday afternoon: "Please send me a complete list of the dead and the rescued of the Newfoundland disaster, and wire all particulars as quickly as possible." At 7 p.m. the following was received in reply: "Have two dead and one survivor Patrick Hynes, on board. Bellaventure reports having on board thirty five alive; unable to say how many dead she has on board. Impossible to get names at present."

FIFTY-EIGHT DEAD ON BELLAVENTURE. Yesterday afternoon the sealing steamers got out of communication with the Marconi station at Fogo and for several hours, despite strenuous efforts, every conceivable means being resorted to, no information was forthcoming as there was no way of getting in touch with the steel fleet that except via Cape Race and that station had been thrown out of kilter by the recent blizzard and temporary repairs that were being made were expected to be completed sometime today. Eventually through the instrumentality of Mr. A. Montgomery, Manager of the Furness Withy Company, Mr. A. B. Worsley, wireless operator on the S. S. Eagle Point, which is lying at the Furness Withy pier and which has an apparatus capable of speaking a distance of fully five hundred miles, got in communication with the S. S. Bellaventure. Capt. Randell, of that ship, was asked by Colonial Secretary Bennett for further particulars. The reply was: "Out of touch with Fogo previous to the ice being smashed for return. We have thirty-five survivors who are alive only. We have fifty-eight dead. Numbers of others not yet accounted for. Fear they have got into the water. It will certainly take two days under existing ice conditions to reach St. John's. Tell Mr. Harvey to send any further instructions by way of Cape Race." Additional messages through the same source were received a few hours later from the Stephano and Florizel. The Stephano's could not be properly deciphered. It read in effect that she had two dead bodies and two survivors on board. The Florizel had three dead bodies on board and one survivor. The Eagle Point picked up another message that was being sent to Cape Race. It read: "Thomas Mullins, John Mullins, Thomas Reeves, H. Groves, Cecil Mullins, Thomas Rollings, James Holloway, A. Conway, Thomas Peyton, William Howlett, James Donovan, Bill Leary, Chas. Martin, William Lundrigan, Ben. Peary, Thomas Dawson and eight others." These were the names of those who survived and were on board the Bellaventure. The message was received in parts and further said that nine other men returned to the Newfoundland yesterday morning. On receipt of the first message from the Bellaventure yesterday afternoon a meeting of the Executive Council took place, Hon. J. Harvey, Messrs. G. Harvey and A. D. Brown, Directors of the Bellaventure S. S. Co., were present. It was then decided to carry home the Bellaventure with the dead and dying on board whereby the latter could be given surgical and medical care and proper nursing. Provision was also made to have the survivors carefully, properly and as humanely as possible looked after. In this connection Acting Premier Bennett and Dr. Campbell arranged with Manager Jones, of the King George the Fifth Seamen's Institute to have a portion of the building reserved as a Mortuary Room were also engaged to be occupied by the survivors, while Dr. Campbell, Quarantine Officer, effected arrangements for the use of the surgical ward at the General Hospital, which will accommodate about thirty persons. Immediate amputations of frozen members of the body will take place at the Hospital and an extra staff of doctors is being provided for. BELLAVENTURE ORDERED HOME. It was decided upon that all the steamers which had dead bodies on board, would berth near the King's Wharf, after coming out of the quarantine grounds. This would greatly facilitate matters as the sealers, who were sufferers from the disaster, could be quite near the Seamen's Institute or temporary hospital where they were to be removed. A staff from the St. John's Ambulance Brigade under Dr. Macpherson and assisted by a squad from H. M. S. Calypso besides a supply of stretchers were engaged. The services of a half dozen nurses were also availed of. Just before last midnight, when crowds of people were walking up and down the streets eager and anxious to hear the latest news of the awful tragedy, even though at such a late hour, a rumour was given currency that the Bellaventure and two other ships had passed Cape St. Francis and would reach port two hours later. Even the authorities gave credence to the report, and doctors, nurses and other interested were on the scene until three o'clock this morning awaiting the arrival of the steamers, but they did not turn up because the report that they were coming was untrue. Many weeping women and men who had loved ones on board the Newfoundland remained up all night, while a contingent of police, under the command of Chief Constable, carried out the laws of discipline and order.

ROLL CALL EXPECTED THIS MORNING. This morning Messrs. Bowring Brothers furnished us with the following message from Capt. Abraham Kean, of the S. S. Stephano. The message runs as follows: FROM S. S. STEPHANO. "Very sorry to report worst disaster known in connection with seal fishery. The Newfoundland's crew were caught out on Tuesday and Wednesday. Have wanted to give you full particulars, but owing to tight ice we could not get around. Think we have picked them all up. Forty-seven were rescued alive. About seventy dead. We (Stephano), Bellaventure and Florizel are all forcing our way towards the Newfoundland, when we shall call the Roll and send you full particulars late to-night or early to-morrow. The Captain of the Newfoundland is frantic with grief. Have been forwarding letters all day to console him as best I can. Captain Randell (of the Bellaventure) has done noble work in rescuing men with stimulants, blankets and fires lit and saved lives that would have succumbed in a few minutes later. The Barometer gave no sign of the storm." This message was received from Capt. A. Kean at 2 a.m. to-day and would be sent last night. Capt. Kean expected to send lists early to-day. Communication is difficult, owing to the steamers being out of touch with Fogo, Cape Race wireless being damaged and a glitter hampering the land lines. Everybody is doing the best to get information through. MESSAGE FROM MR. A. J. HARVEY. This morning Mr. Gerald Harvey received from his father who is the head of the firm of A. J. Harvey & Co., who manage the Newfoundland the following message: "Deeply grieved by calamity. If I can help you, I will return immediately. Keep me advised. A. J. HARVEY." Survivors. ON BOARD BELLAVENTURE. At 10.15 a.m. 13-14 Mr. G. Harvey received the following message via Cape Race from Capt. Randell, of the Bellaventure: Following survivors on board: Alfred Hayward, Bonavista. FRIDAY, April 3, 1914.

RELIEF NEEDED.

We are glad to find that the Hon. J. R. Bennett, Acting Premier, and his colleagues are acting with promptitude and on a scale to deal properly with the emergency which has arisen in connection with the "Newfoundland" disaster. They are also sending the s.s. Kyle to search for the Southern Cross, which has not been heard from since it was reported by the s.s. Portia. The anxiety on her account despite the intensity of the present feeling of the depressed, it is pleasing, however, to note that our societies are bestirring themselves to give what they can in aid of those bereft of their breadwinner. A noteworthy instance of generous feeling is the cable of $500 from Vancouver, a Drigung man resident there. The disaster is of such magnitude that every one should do all they can.

From Mayor W. J. Ellis.

To-day Mr. W. O'D. Kelly received the following message from Mayor Ellis, who is at present in New York:—"Newspapers report disaster worse than your message indicates, which I hope is unfounded. Newfoundlanders here feel keenly. I think that an appeal towards relief fund would result well. Consult Messrs. Harris, Robinson and Hepburn of Marine Disaster Fund Committee. I send heartfelt sympathy to the bereaved ones in affliction. Keep me advised."
"W. J. ELLIS, Mayor."

Resolutions of Sympathy From Star of the Sea.

President Jackman summoned an emergency meeting of the Star of the Sea Society last night, at which the awful tragedy that befell the crew of the Newfoundland, was discussed, and the following resolutions were adopted:—
Whereas an appalling calamity has befallen the sailing crew of the s.s. Newfoundland, resulting in the death of our fellow countrymen;
And Whereas, in the face of this great disaster we bow in humble submission to God's Will, and offer our prayers to His Throne for the afflicted mothers, widows and orphans, who are bereft of their breadwinners;
And Whereas under similar circumstances in the past, our countrymen nobly responded with monetary aid to help those thus bereft of their breadwinners;
Be It Resolved that this Society place on record its profound sympathy for the brave men who lost their lives, and for the widows and orphans who are left behind to mourn the loss of husbands and fathers.
Be It Further Resolved that a collection list be opened in our rooms for the surviving relatives of the disaster, and also that all games and amusements be temporarily suspended as a tribute of respect to the memory of our deceased fellow-countrymen.

MESSAGES OF CONDOLENCE FROM THE GOVERNMENT.

April 3, 1914.
Dear Sir:—
The members of the Executive Council were called together at 4.30 yesterday afternoon in extraordinary session in order to take the necessary action in respect of the sad occurrence which has plunged the whole colony into mourning. So far as possible arrangements were made to give attention to the survivors as soon as they arrived, and also to care for the dead.

The members of the Government feel very deeply for those who have been so suddenly stricken, and also for those in the homes from which the breadwinner has gone out to return no more. I would desire, through the medium of your paper, to express to the people of the North and to those living more nearly St. John's, whose breadwinners were on the s.s. Newfoundland, the sincere and heartfelt sympathy of the members of the Government, with them at this time. While the Government and the people will, no doubt, do much in the endeavour to comfort and assist the widows and the fatherless, it is realized that nothing can take the place of the brave fellows who have gone out of their homes forever. Our men, hardy and courageous in their calling, are continually wrestling their bread from the very jaws of Death, and occasions arise when Death conquers in the struggle. While we are proud of the intrepid spirit of our men, at such a time as this the hearts of the Government and of all the people are bowed down with grief, and all are united in expressing to the bereaved ones the fullest measure of sympathy and consolation.

No Report of Southern Cross.

BELEIVED TO BE DRIVEN OFF TO SEA—MUCH ANXIETY FELT FOR HER—U. S. PATROL STEAMER SENECA AND S. S. KYLE WILL SEARCH.

Nothing has been heard of the southern Cross since she was reported off Cape Pine on Tuesday last, and the general opinion is that she was driven far off to sea. Various reports were afloat in the city last night, one in particular that she passed Cape Race yesterday afternoon, but upon making enquiries this and the other reports were unfortunately found to be untrue. The report is thought to have emanated from the reply to an enquiry made by wireless from the s.s. Eagle Point after reaching here yesterday. The operator got in communication with the Florizal hoping the latter may find out from Cape Race if the Cross had passed there. The reply received stated that the Cross was nowhere bound. It is quite evident that it was thought the question was asked as a matter of ordinary news, and from the tenor of the reply the Florizal was unaware of the anxiety felt for the Southern Cross.

At 5.30 p.m. yesterday the Anglo got in communication with Cape Race and learned that she had not passed the Cape, neither was she at Trepassay. A message from Capt. Connors of the Portia said that she was not in St. Mary's Bay. A wireless message was sent by the Government to the U. S. patrol steamer Seneca, which is in the vicinity of Cape Race, asking her to search for the Cross. The s.s. Kyle will also be sent to-night to make a diligent search for her and it is hoped that something will soon be heard from the overdue ship, as anxiety for her safety is increasing hourly. If she has been driven off to sea, which is the general opinion expressed by experienced seamen, it would take her some days to make land again. The ship is heavily laden and cannot steam at a great speed.

Message From H. M. the King to Administrator.

I have received with profound regret the news of the great calamity which has befallen the crew of the steamer Newfoundland. The Queen and I deplore the great suffering and the loss of life involved and wish to express our sincere sympathy with the families of those distressed.

Awful Suspense.

Those who had fathers, brothers, husbands, friends and companions on board the s.s. Newfoundland, must remain in unbearable silence and awful suspense until a complete list of the dead and the survivors is received. Even though that tragic intelligence will create many heart-breaking scenes; even though it will throw many homes into deep mourning, leave wives husbandless and children orphans, yet the torturing mental strain will be somewhat relieved.

CITY IN MOURNING.

To-day business was practically stagnated. Everybody seemed unable to work while they sympathized with their less fortunate brethren who have perished on the icebergs of the north. The Board of Trade Rooms, where the different wireless messages received are being posted, is crowded all day with citizens, all of whom showed on their faces symptoms of grief and sympathy because many of them were men who trod the frozen pangs, and therefore know how to join in mourning in the truest sense the loss of other mortals.

NEWFOUNDLAND COMING WITH BELLAVENTURE.

As will be seen elsewhere the Bellaventure will not be able to reach here to-day. She is jammed and owing to the impetuous ice barrier's may not get here before a couple of days. We are told by Mr. Harvey that the Newfoundland will likely accompany the Bell. Both ships will land their dead and surviving at the King's Wharf, from which place they will be transferred to the King George V. Institute.

SPLENDID PROVISION MADE.

At the Institute the arrangements are perfect in every particular to receive the corpses and for those who survived the ordeal. The arrangements certainly could not be better and redound to the credit of Manager Jones and his energetic assistants, who were up all last night making the necessary provision. The corpses will be placed in the Grenfell Hall where they will be wrapped in linens for identification. The dormitories on the upper flat of the building are thrown open for the maimed and suffering.

ONE BOY ON BOARD.

There was one boy who left here in the Newfoundland. His name is Wesley Watts, aged 14, belonging to Signal Hill, St. John's East, who stowed away. It is not likely he

A word to those who wear "Twenty-five cent Glasses." Do you realize that by so doing, you virtually admit that twenty-five cents is the value you place upon God's greatest gift to you? There is no law to prevent you from injuring your eyes by using such glasses excepting, perhaps, the law of common sense. Of course you don't know why cheap glasses play such havoc with your eyes, and health generally, nor does the man who sells them to you know. An eyesight specialist can tell you, and if you would interest yourself to the extent of asking him to explain, you would never look through a pair of them. Anything more perfect or beautiful than the human eye would be impossible for man to conceive. Then, why, when physical aid is needed to enable it to perform its functions with greater ease, do you use cheap glasses or submit yourself to persons of questionable ability to suit you? When your eyes cry out for assistance, go to R. H. Trappnell, the Eyesight Specialist who will faithfully examine them and give you none but the best quality glasses if glasses are needed at all. Thousands are ready to testify to the great benefit received at his hands.—mar 18, eod, 14

AMBITION.

Ambition is a nondescript term. It may be bad or it may be good. If you say a man is ambitious, you will think of a man that is eager to excel in some department of life. In most cases you will commend him for it, even before you know what his ambition is, and rightly so, for the spur of excellence (not competitive) is at the root of a lot of mankind's progress from the savage. But this man's ambition may be to become a clever swindler; or his ambition may be to have great knowledge and to become of benefit to his fellow-men. No one will hesitate to say that the latter ambition is certainly more commendable. But still the ultimate Ambition can be realized in various ways, and here we are faced with the absolute proof of Ambition's greatness, whether it be good or bad. No man justifies improper means. The man who deviates from the straight road, and zig-zags his course for temporary advantage, may by these means get to the top, but the same characteristics of his pathway are with him on Ambition's height, and act as he will, he will always be an example of that "vaulting ambition which o'erleaps itself."

There is a "sacred hunger of ambitious minds," that, reaching out always to the Highest, the Noblest, the Best, develops character and consequently Power. No temporary or transitory power, but a power of knowledge of self that knows no indecision, that follows the Path of Right unquestionably. No question of expediency is ever allowed to influence a man of this ambition. And his actions need no persuasion of words. He is, and men are content to trust him.

But there is another ambition which is "the mind's immodesty." This is the ambition that insists on ruffling the surface waters in order to be seen and known. The ambition that is vulgar in its actions and that endeavors to make notoriety stand for eminence, and for the pure advertisement of self joins every Benefit Club, Lodge and Society that is possible.

Our acting Minister of Justice (for from no standpoint can it be said that he holds his position properly or according to the spirit of the Constitution) is an ambitious man. So far that description has been his greatest asset. He has talked, but distinctive action has waited till this time, and he has now made a decision that is not to his credit. The positions of emolument held by Ministers of the Government have always been and are always intended to be filled by the choice and by the will of the People. The Bonavista Manifesto of the Tory Party displayed prominently the sentiment of "Government by the People," etc., and here we have these two men R. A. Squires and S. D. Blandford wilfully tearing the motto to pieces and flinging the pieces in the face of the people. Never has the opinion of the people been so outraged, and the two men who have allowed themselves to be the "puppets" in Morris's game have taken a step that can never be forgotten nor repealed. The opportunity was theirs to do the Straight thing, the Honest thing, but with the feebleness of morality characteristic of the Party with which they are associated, they have decided ignobly.

If they have a particle of self-respect, can they read without a blush of the strong and noble stand of Premier Asquith? He takes a position of emolument, practically only a transfer from another, and immediately, at a critical time, goes to the people for its confirmation. Squires and Blandford not only hold their positions unapproved by the people, but in defiance of them, because they were defeated five months ago at the Polls, and further, the Government of the day represents a minority of the electors in the Colony. Wake up, Newfoundland! No justification of Mr. Morris's action in filling these positions has been given by any of his papers, but every word of praise they give Asquith for his brave stand is a condemnation of Morris's weakness. Morris's advance is solely by reason of his cunning.

It is apparent often in his inability to answer a question or an argument in a direct manner. He has "got away" from the question so often now that he deceives no one. Nor does a pull on the lapel of his coat work any more. John Ruskin says that "cunning is the interest rendering of vulgarity, absolute and utter, with which I am acquainted."

THEOBALD. St. John's, March 21, 1914.

The One to Own if You Can Own But One.

That is what a critical user of a "Globe-Vernicle" cabinet says of his equipment. Another says "It leaves nothing to be desired." Another says "So complete yet so concise." Another "Perfection as a filing arrangement." Another "It is really indispensable." Another "A surprising advance in handling records." Another "A welcome improvement in office conditions"—and so on. The extensive sale of "Globe" filing cabinets in St. John's is by no means as remarkable as the abundant evidence that it is on merit alone that these devices have earned such generous appreciation. For certain when you become a user you will be well contented with your adaptable and reliable outfit. Mr. Percie Johnson has your catalogue ready for the asking as well as other necessary details.

He Hires Five to Help Spend Wealth. Hammond, Ind., March 17.—Mathias Constance, who received a letter from Greece saying he is only heir to an estate of $7,000,000, left to-day for Chicago with his five close friends, hired at a salary of $5,000 each a year to help him spend the money.

That is all they will have to do. Word of the estate came to Constance Saturday. He obtained credit for everything he wanted and exclaimed as he read the letter: "What will I ever do with so much money!"

When he went to work at $175 per diem to-day he told his five warm friends of his luck. They accepted his offer to go all over the world with him and help him spend his money.

"If we may accept the report cable, the feeding bottle referred to by Lord Charles was not the only bottle discussed during the afternoon."

Sir, what is the inference? We may not all agree with Lord Charles Bessford, but we may fairly resent an attack on his moral character, implied if not openly stated.

The second matter I wish to speak about is the reference made by Mr. Downey, M.H.A., to Dr. Lloyd. It reads as follows:—

"I am not prepared to state, sir, that the hon. member for Trinity left his country for his country's good, neither am I prepared to say that we have derived any material benefit from his residence here."

This, sir, is not what we expect from gentlemen in the House of Assembly. Dr. Lloyd has done a great deal of good for, and in his native land he would occupy a prominent position to-day. In England, where "green" or "rude," or otherwise, while in this country to-day there are many Englishmen who have sacrificed home, friends, and position, and who live isolated lives without hope of earthly reward.

I believe Dr. Lloyd is "a stranger, a man from England," and I believe he is "perhaps the most highly educated man" in the House of Assembly. Yours truly, Resents Downey's Attacks.

Editor Evening Telegram. Sir.—Allow me as an Englishman to protest against the article on Lord Charles De La Poer Bessford in the Daily News of March 20th, 1914; and also against the expressions used by Mr. Downey, M.H.A., as recorded in The Free Press of March 17.

I can assure the editor of the Daily News that "Poor Lord Charles," as he is pleased to call him, is not "collapsing down" the ladder. One need only glance at the record of this brave seaman to realize what an important part he has taken in naval affairs. He was in command of the Condor at Alexandria in 1882; commanded the naval brigade at the battles of Abu Klea, Abu Kru, and Tetumnah. The steamer Salia was taken by him to the rescue of Sir Charles Wilson and his party. He was naval A. D. C. to King Edward VII. when the latter as Prince of Wales went to India.

No, Lord Charles is no "timidly fallen," but a man loved by thousands, and admired by all who are fairly minded. Whether yawning is a sign of the lack of civility or not is not the point. Nor can we say why the First Lord was absent, but the editor of any paper has no right to imply that a gentleman has been indulging too freely because he makes reference to his long career in the British Navy.

Your readers may not have read the words I complain of, and I give them here so that they may judge my protest fairly.

The Crocodile.

By GEORGE FITCH.

Author of "At Good Old Slwash."

The crocodile is a saurian, but this is the mildest epithet that is ever applied to him. He lives in moist hot countries, such as Egypt and the Nile, and is about as extensively admired by the population as is the ice trust in New York during a warm summer.

The crocodile is a heavily armored cruiser with four legs and mouth profusely furnished with teeth. The mouth extends from the end of his snout about four feet back and is so curved as to give him a grim sardonic smile which exactly fits his temperment. Nothing pleases the crocodile so much as to close his mouth over the leg of a swimming native and then to sink placidly to the bottom of the river bearing the leg with him, it being still attached to the native.

The crocodile is about twelve feet long as a rule, though large specimens measure twenty feet, including snout and tail. He has four legs which he uses in an awkward, inefficient way for crawling and a huge scaly tail which he manages as skillfully as Hans Wagner manages a bat. With one sweep of his tail the crocodile can convey a small native within reach of his jaws. He is thus a sweeping misfortune to all who meet him.

The crocodile lives in the water, breathes with lungs and is hatched from an egg, though he doesn't look like it. When floating on the water the crocodile looks like a decayed and decrepit log and many a man has stepped upon such a log on his way to shore only to have it rise up and open a pair of jaws which look like a clamshell dredge.

The skin of the crocodile is made of thick plates from which a bullet bounds harmlessly. The best place to shoot a crocodile is in his large horrid eye. The best place from which to shoot one is on the deck of a sea-going battleship with steam up.

The crocodile's skin is valuable, and he is being slaughtered in vast numbers. But there are plenty of them left—so many that life insurance companies refuse to do business with any one who bathes in the Nile or the Ganges. The crocodile is second cousin to the alligator, but has far ruder manners.

A Happy Child In Just A Few Hours

When cross, constipated or if feverish give "California Syrup of Figs" then don't worry.

Mothers can rest easy after giving "California Syrup of Figs," because in a few hours all the clogged-up waste, sour bile and fermenting food gently moves out of the bowels, and you have a well, playful child again. Children simply will not take the time from play to empty their bowels, and they become tightly packed. Liver gets sluggish and stomach disordered.

When cross, feverish, restless, see if tongue is coated, then give this delicious "fruit laxative." Children love it, and it cannot cause injury. No difference what ails your little one—if full of cold, or a sore throat, diarrhoea, stomach-ache, bad breath, remember a gentle "inside cleansing" should always be the first treatment given. Full directions for babies, children of all ages and grown-ups are printed on each bottle.

Beware of counterfeit fig syrups. Ask your druggist for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," then look carefully and see that it is made by the "California Fig Syrup Company." We make no smaller size. Hand back with contempt any other fig syrup.

Bruce Reported.

At 6 p.m. yesterday the Reid Nfld. Co. received a message from Capt. Taylor, of the S. S. Bruce, as follows:

Special to the Evening Telegram.

LONDON, April 2.

The movement towards a peaceful settlement of the Home Rule controversy on the basis of a scheme for the federation of the British Isles continues to receive a good deal of attention in Parliamentary circles. Carson, who will re-open the Home Rule debate Monday may be trusted to state Ulster's attitude towards the Federal solution. The Nationalists do not consider there can be any question of yielding up Ireland under any federal scheme. In their opinion Ireland must be treated as a unit. British Unionists are divided on the point. There is certainly a strong body of Unionist members opposed to federalism, and, on the whole, there is little likelihood of any immediate agreement, although it is true that there is now a greater volume of opinion in favor of a settlement of some sort than ever before.

Unionists are unlikely to oppose Premier Asquith's re-election. The matter will be settled at a meeting of the Unionist executive committee to-day.

General Sir Charles Douglas, G.C.B., Inspector General of the Home Forces since 1912, has been appointed as Chief of the Imperial General Staff in succession to General French, resigned.

LONDON, April 2.

There is a division of opinion over the King's action, both in army circles and among the equestrians and nobles in waiting, who are mainly recruited from navy and army officers. Two equestrians have already resigned, and it is rumored that there are others, who regard the King's action as unconstitutional, and who say that he should not have directed officers who resigned, to be allowed to return to their regiments. A special summons to attend at Buckingham Palace next week has been sent to a number of equestrians, with the object of ascertaining their views on the King's action. Those who do not fully support His Majesty will be asked to resign.

M. C. I. Annual Meeting.

The annual meeting of the M.C.I. took place last night, and closed the 47th session of the Institute. The reports from the Secretary and Treasurer showed satisfactory progress. The Institute showed its sympathy in the appalling disaster that has overtaken so many of our seafarers, and made a vote of $25 towards any fund that may be established for the relief of those who are deprived of their breadwinners. The election of officers resulted as follows:
President, Mr. J. S. Currie, re-elected.
1st Vice-President, Mr. W. White, re-elected.
2nd Vice-President, Mr. Thos. Pope, re-elected.
Secretary, Mr. Owen W. Steele, elected.
Asst.-Secretary, Mr. Geo. Taylor, elected.
Treasurer, Mr. W. Butt, elected.
Asst.-Treasurer, Mr. A. Edgcombe, elected.
Librarian, Mr. Harold Macpherson.
Committee, Messrs. H. E. Cowgill, S. P. Whiteaway, C. C. Pratt.

G.F.S. QUARTERLY MEETING.

The quarterly meeting of the G.F.S. Friendly Society took place last night when the Rev. A. Clayton gave an address on the riches of the body, mind and soul. It was decided to hold the annual festival on the 30th inst.

How the Naval Authorities Fail to Cultivate Sound Economy.

Whether it is necessary still further to increase the Navy or not, one thing is certain—that much of the money spent on it might, as far as the taxpayer is concerned, just as well be pitched into the sea.

Three feet pumps were ordered for the docks at a cost of £495. So much delay took place in delivering them, owing to the frequent alteration of design, that when they were finished they were not wanted, as the old ones had been repaired and made fit for service. Ultimately the pumps were appropriated to Gibraltar at an estimated cost of £180.

Brazen Losses.

For some years the ashes from the brass foundry and rolling mills of a certain establishment were issued to another department for making roads. Some were then sold to contractors, first at 1s, and afterwards at 2s. 4d. a ton. On the police reporting that large quantities of scrap and splashes of metal were being sold to marine store-dealers, the authorities suspected that they were giving something away. They consequently had a sample sold by auction. It fetched 26 a ton!

Enormous sums are lost, again, through the inefficient supervision of stocks. A few years ago four stewards at one of the naval depots were found to have received £666 from contractors for ready-made clothing. And, owing to this system, faulty goods which ought to be condemned are frequently passed as perfect.

The result is a scandalous waste of public funds. Out of six million rounds of ammunition, for instance, about five proved to be useless, and bang—metaphorically—went £20,525.

Through the same cause—inefficient supervision of stocks—goods which are no longer required, instead of being sold at once, are kept till their market value is greatly depreciated. A special investigation of naval stocks a few years back showed an estimated loss of no less than £29,000 simply through keeping.

Leakages from the Store.

There is, too, a remarkable amount of "leakage" from stock. Vast quantities of public property disappear utterly. From one store vanished £223 worth of clothing; from a dockyard went a large quantity of timber; from another were missing 1,551 coal bags. And what became of all this property? Beyond doubt it was stolen.

To the uninitiated, this may seem impossible, because no vehicle is allowed to enter or leave a dockyard without a written pass, which is issued specially for the purpose, and which has to be handed to the police. But property is brought past these guardians in all manner of ways.

One night a number of men belonging to a certain dockyard were discussing "leakages," when the quietest member of the lot said he could easily bring a small anvil through the gate of that establishment. A bet of £5 was then made that he could not do so without detection. The result was that a few days later a policeman found an anvil against the dockyard wall, not far from the gate, which had evidently been brought outside, and then abandoned. In fact, the bet had been won.

Pensic Punishment.

How had the article been smuggled from the dockyard? The man who made the bet suspended the anvil from his neck with a rope, so that it dangled between his legs, and then some confederates got round him. When the party reached the gate, they "rushed" the policeman, and so brought out the anvil safely. The thing was then thrown down near the dockyard wall, as the police might have noticed it had it been carried through the streets.

In general, however, the property stolen from dockyards is brought out by men when they leave work. An old-dodge of experts is to wear boots of the half-Wellington type, covering the legs, of course, with their trousers. Inside the legs flies and other tools, as well as more valuable articles, can be easily secreted.

A trusted workman, owing to being betrayed by a comrade, was once caught bringing out a small paint-brush, value about 3d., in this way. As a result, he was prosecuted, lost his situation, and—greatest punishment of all—forfeited his superannuation, which was nearly due.

So, in one way or another, a good deal of the huge sum that John Bull spends on his Navy, is absolutely wasted.—Answers.

Celebrated Norwegian Jigger!

Fishermen should use these Jiggers and rig them with swivel's same style as in Norway, then the Jigger acts like a minnow and when spinning attracts the fish, so that instead of jiggering they really snap the Jigger and in this manner you never fail to catch them. Ordinary leads can be used, but the Norwegian style seems more simple and easily made. Our fishermen should try this great Norwegian fish killer.

Manufacturers of the celebrated Key Brand Fish Hooks, Dappers, Dogfish and all other kinds of hooks used in deep sea fishing.
