A Child of Sorrow.

CHAPTER XX.

Maida's lips parted, but no sound came from them. The thought that the man was mad flashed through her brain: and yet, why was her father so crushed?

"Yes, he has robbed me as meanly as ever any man robbed another," continued Purley, not loudly, but as if he were borne away on the torrent of his righteous indignation and resentment. "Some months ago I was up a tree—in great distress—and I went to him to help me. He was the only friend I had in London, and I was cast adrift there. I relied on his old friendship as he might have relied on mine if he'd been in my place: he knows it! He lent me a little money, for which I was grateful enough, God knows; and that day I met a man who offered me a chance of a new life and a fortune—at any rate a small one—out in Australia. I wanted some money to enable me to take it, so I went to your father again to borrow it of him."

"And you had it," panted Carrington.

Purley cast a glance of passionate scorn at him.

"He says I had it. Yes, I had it; but at what a price! I had some shares, shares in a mine at Klondike—you may have heard of it; oh, no doubt you have—the Roaring Jane."

Maida started, slightly, and her white hand closed still more tightly on the chair.

Purley drew his hand across his brow, upon which the sweat stood in big drops.

"I held nearly all the mine, and I sold it to him for two hundred and fifty pounds." He laughed bitterly, and his hands closed spasmodically on his cap. "I thought they were worthless, and I was ashamed to offer them to him. But he knew better. He knew when he was taking them from me that they were worth a million—more! They had found gold, gold by the ton, and he knew it. Let him deny it if he can, here, to me and you!"

He glared at Carrington, and Carrington sat up and opened his white lips.

"I deny it!" he panted, but could get no further.

"Of course he denies it," said Purley, scornfully. "But it's a lie! I'm sorry to use such a word before you, miss, his own daughter; but I've got to speak out or burst; and I'm speaking the solemn truth. After he got those shares, he followed me about like a shadow; he got me intoxicated; he kept the newspapers out of my reach—oh, I remember everything, every little thing that happened that day. He shadowed me till he'd seen me on board the ship. He let me go to rough it out there in Australia, knowing that he'd robbed me of a million of money, of the money I had worked and sweated for, yes, sweated and nearly died for—Why, my partner did die!"

His voice grew thick and his lips quivered.

"If you'd known what Klondike was like, what a hell upon earth—but no matter, I earned that money with the sweat of my heart as well as my brow, and he robbed me of it; if he'd only given me a portion of it, half, ay, even a quarter, but he stole the whole of it; he let me go out there. It's a lonely place; it's a hard life out there in Australia—while I was working and toiling like a slave there, he was living like a prince on my money."

He looked round the room, with its costly decoration and furniture, its richly bound books in their handsome cases.

"He might have written to me, might have cabled, but he didn't; he stuck to it all. He'd got me hard and fast, for he insisted upon not making it a loan, but buying the shares right out."

He paused to catch his breath, an intense stillness reigned in the richly appointed room; a hand as chill as that of death was closing over Maida's heart.

"It is only by a chance that I heard the truth," continued Purley, doggedly. "A sundowner happened to leave a newspaper behind him, and I read—out there in those lonely places, you read every line of the paper, miss—that the Roaring Jane had struck it, that nearly all of it was owned by Mr. Carrington. The money article was full of it. I borrowed enough of my partner, and I took ship back. I only reached London yesterday; but I have had time to hear of the great Mr. Carrington, to find that he's a big swell in the city, one of their greatest men; a landed proprietor," he laughed again bitterly, "the director of ever so many companies; oh, the very greatest of swells. And it's all done on my money, the money he robbed me of! I come down here and I see this place, fit for a prince, with servants as gorgeous as peacocks, and no doubt horses and carriages like—like a lord mayor's. And all done with my money! He was poor enough before he got them shares. Oh, I've heard all about it. Why, the very diamonds—"

His fierce eyes flashed upon the diamonds—not her finest by any means—which shone on Maida's neck and arms.

"No, no, I beg your pardon, miss," he said. "You're innocent enough. I daresay. It ain't likely he'd tell you. I'm sorry I spoke about—about the diamonds. But my heart's sore. Sore, it's on fire! Your asking me what right I have here, set me in a blaze. Now I've told you."

There was silence again. Maida had not taken her eyes from the man for one instant. Her breath was coming painfully, she was growing cold, as if the chilly hand were closing more tightly on her heart. Her lips opened at last.

"Father!" she breathed, "is this—is this true?"

Carrington rose. His hands gripping each other, his pallid face set, his eyes fixed defiantly on Purley.

"And—if it is true," he said, hoarsely. "What has he got to complain of? He says I bought the shares. Well, I did. I bought them in the regular way. I am a business man; in business it's every man for himself—"

Maida shrank from him with a faint cry of horror.

"Father, father!" she panted. "Oh, you do not mean it! Then it is true, and all this"—she looked round the room with a kind of wild despair—"all this belongs to him—everything; even the dresses we wear? But we will give it back! Yes, you shall have it all back, every penny. My father did not mean to rob you; he is sorry—he will make restitution—we will all make restitution—we will give you everything at once—at once!"

She stood erect, her face white, her violet eyes glowing. Suddenly she put her hand to her neck and tore the diamonds from it and from her arms, and dropped them on the table with a shudder, as if they had actually burnt the white flesh.

"We will give you everything!"

Josiah Purley shrank back from the splendour of the figure, the nobility of the face, and opened his lips as if about to speak; but he was stopped by a cry from Carrington.

With a cry of mingled rage and despair he flung himself forward and grabbed at the glittering gems.

"No, no!" he gasped. "You shall not! They're mine—they're mine! Everything's mine—I bought 'em, bought 'em fairly! It's a lie—"

Then suddenly his manner changed, the words he had been pouring out thickly and almost incoherently died away in a guttural groan; his eyes turned from Purley to Maida with a wild despair and appeal.

"No, it's true," he gasped, hoarsely. "I didn't mean it—at first. I was tempted—it was more than any man could resist. I wanted the money badly. It was of no use to him. It was for you—for you and Carrie! Forgive me, Maida; pity me—I'm your father—"

His voice ceased suddenly, he threw up his hands, letting the diamonds fall in a glittering mass on the floor, then, swaying to and fro like a drunken man, fell back in the chair with his clenched hands pressed against his heart.

Maida flung herself on her knees beside him and caught at his hands and pressed them to her bosom.

"Father! father! It is not too late, all is well! We will give everything back, everything, will we not? Say so, tell him so!"

Carrington's eyes opened, and resting on her, a faint smile flitted across his ashen face, he moved his head assentingly, then a shudder seemed to pass over him, his head fell back, his eyes closed.

Purley uttered a cry and sprang to the bell; then he bent over Carrington and raised his head. But he let it fall back a moment afterwards and staggered away from the prostrated man and leant against the mantel-shelf.

"My God! he is dead!" he said. "And I have killed him!"

CHAPTER XXI.

Maida uttered only one cry, but it rang through the house, cleaving the luxurious silence and startling the hearers with a sudden terror.

The library door was thrown open and Heroncourt burst in; he was followed by Lord Glassbury, and very quickly by the rest. He was at Maida's side in an instant; while Carrie, with a cry, threw herself on her knees beside the lifeless figure of her father.

"Maida, what is it?" Heroncourt demanded. "Your father is ill! Ricky go—"

Ricky did not need anything further but darted into the hall and ordered a dog-cart that he might fetch the doctor.

A rapid examination showed Heroncourt, as he bent over him, that Mr. Carrington was dead, and he straightened himself, his face white and full of tender, loving sympathy.

"Come away, dearest," he said, drawing Maida's arm within his. "It is all over—nothing can be done!"

"Oh, come with me; let her come with me," said Lady Glassbury, pitifully, but courageously struggling for calm. "Come with her, Carrie!"

But neither of the girls would leave their father, and they followed Heroncourt and Glassbury as they carried the dead man to his room and laid him on the bed, where Maida and Carrie knelt beside him; there Heroncourt and Glassbury left the girls to their solemn charge, and went down to the hall to wait for the doctor.

"I half suspected it," said Glassbury. "I had a suspicion that poor Carrington had heart disease. Men of his build don't faint unless there is something serious the matter with them; and I haven't liked the look of him lately. Poor Maida! poor girls! left alone in the world."

"Not alone," said Heroncourt, almost inaudibly.

"I beg your pardon, Byrne; of course not. Poor old chap, this is hard on you! It will put off the wedding indefinitely."

"I am the last to be considered," said Heroncourt. He looked at the library door thoughtfully. "There was a man there. Who is he?"

"Lord Glassbury shrugged his shoulders.

"I don't know. Some tenant, some man on business. Surely it couldn't have been important enough to have upset Carrington, to have caused his illness?"

They gave no further thought at that moment to the man; but paced up and down; Heroncourt now and again going half-way up the stairs, as if he longed to go to the silent room and comfort Maida. After what seemed an age, the dog-cart dashed up the drive and Ricky and the doctor sprang out and entered the hall.

"I am afraid that it is too late, that you can do nothing," said Heroncourt, gravely, as he led the way upstairs. The doctor bent over the still figure for a moment; then he shook his head and said to Lady Glassbury:

"He is quite dead—died instantaneously. Take them away."

But it was Maida who drew Carrie to her and led her to her own room—for Carrie was recovering from the shock and beginning to realise their loss, and was crying bitterly and moaning:

"Father! Father! Oh, father!"

But Maida did not weep now. She had shed tears as she knelt beside the bed, but she had fought against them and stifled the choking sobs, for she knew that she would have to comfort Carrie. And more: she knew that her father's death had come as a merciful release; that he had been spared all the misery and humiliation which would have awaited him had he lived. She murmured soothing words to Carrie as she held her in a sisterly, a motherly, embrace; as if she would, with her loving arm, shield her from the bitterness of grief.

YESTERDAY'S GAME.

Yesterday's exhibition game between the Canadian and travellers and the City nine was disappointingly slow though perhaps a surprise to many of the fans. The former were vanquished by the locals by a score of 17 to 6. For four innings the game was good and lively, until the Visitors' pitcher—Halg—got tired. He was replaced in the 6th by McAskill, which resulted unfortunately for them as 6 of the city boys crossed the plate before the side was retired in this inning. After this, the game was rather a burlesque. In the second inning the "Knights of the Grip" scored 3 runs practically on errors, though Duggan's two bagger was a beauty. Jenkins, who also played with them, got a two bagger. For the City, Ellis hit for three bags while Quick got a double sacker. Halg pitched well, allowing only a few scattered hits, and worked well with his battery mate Clouston. Two of the visitors' regular team could not play owing to suffering from charleyhorse, the result of too strenuous practice. The gate receipts which were for the Red Cross Fund netted a considerable sum. The game was in charge of Messrs. Chesman (St. J.) and Adams (V.) with Messrs. Outerbridge and Mullings scoring. The box score was:

TO-NIGHT'S GAME.

The fans are eagerly looking forward to to-night's game between the Wanderers and B. I. S. Carew, of the latter, who injured his ankle in Tuesday's game, is showing his gameness by going in the box with his bandaged foot, and will endeavour to last the whole game, though the strain on him will necessarily be quite severe. Opposite him will be Brazie who is doing such yeoman service for the team. The Wanderers are determined that the Irish must be stopped in their triumphal march for the pennant, and will make every effort to do to-night. Their oldtime battery—Brown and Ford—will be working, and their bunch is further strengthened by the addition of Hartnett who will play his old position at 1st base. The game will start promptly at 7 o'clock with Messrs. Chesman and Duff umpiring, and Messrs. Outerbridge and Mullings in the score box. The lineups will likely be:—

B. I. S.		WANDERERS.
Carew	Brown	Pitcher.
Brazie	Ford	Catcher.
French	Hartnett	1st Base.
Brien	Brien	2nd Base.
Doyle	Britt	3rd Base.

Protect our Property.

Editor Evening Telegram.
Sir,—I would like to bring to the notice of the Department of the Government under whose control the public roads are, the fact that men are now engaged removing the sod from the side of the Quidi Vidi boulevard. This act is a violation of the law and unless authorized and done for purposes of repair should be immediately stopped and the parties prosecuted for the offence. Of all our suburban roads that around the lake is the most attractive to the public and to denude it of the green sward which now adorns it is an act of wanton vandalism which in any other country would be a serious and punishable breach of the law. There is no excuse on a plea of ignorance, for despoiling this particular spot as two or three caution boards have been erected to protect the lakside from similar destruction. These have been placed there by Messrs. Bowring and should be a warning to anyone that that roadside adjoining must also be free from their depredations. I hope the Government will act promptly in this matter and bring the guilty parties to justice.
Yours truly,
July 11th, 1917. PEDESTRIAN.

Wedding Bells.

HALL—HOARE.

A quiet but very pretty wedding took place on Sunday last, July 8th, at the residence of the Rev. T. J. Gough, P.P., Portugal Cove, when Kathleen, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Hall, Major's Path, Portugal Cove Road, was united in the holy bonds of matrimony to Harry L. Hoare, of Knowling's central store. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Fr. Gough. The bride looked charming in a dress of cream silk eolienne with hat to match, and carried a bouquet of carnations and maiden hair fern. She was attended by her sister Gertrude who wore saxe blue silk eolienne, while the groom was ably supported by Mr. J. Evans. After the ceremony the young couple drove to the residence of the bride's parents where a sumptuous breakfast was served. After breakfast they left by the express for Holyrood to spend their honeymoon. The groom's present to the bride was a gold bracelet and to the bridesmaid a gold brooch, and to the best man a gold stick pin. The bride and groom received many useful and costly presents. The Telegram joins with their many friends in wishing them many years of happiness on their matrimonial voyage.

In the Enemy's Camp

The stage which the war has now reached is, to say the least, decidedly interesting, with the interest not all confined to the battlefield. Particularly instructive is the news from Berlin, most of which maintains courageously the high German standard of truthfulness. Reading it, one is tempted to wonder whether the strange mental processes of the Teuton ever include a consideration of the deductions, most comforting to the deducer, which the other side must make from the obvious necessity he is under of issuing transparent falsehoods. Possibly they do, since he knows that the falsehoods are not transparent to those for whom they are intended, to wit the German public; but the Teuton mind is such a weird mechanism that nothing certain can be predicated of it. The Berlin despatches are eloquently silent concerning the Russian advance, easily the outstanding feature of the whole situation. But Berlin has too much to suppress at present to worry over the exact form of what it allows to escape. No doubt we owe the report of Major Morahit's latest oracular utterance to some Press agent who thought it interesting enough to include in the budget. He was right for once. The good Major tells us that the time for a German offensive is not yet. From which our knowledge of the enemy's methods enables us to conclude (if we did not know it already) that a great German offensive is under way. The said methods are plain. If the offensive falls—it has in fact already done so—Hindenburg and the rest can say that it was never made; if it succeeds—which it cannot—there will be no need to say anything. The plain truth is that Germany is making the nearest approach to a great attack in the West which she will ever be able to reach from now on to the end. A tremendous assault on the Chemin des Dames front and another at Verdun have failed dismally. Herculean efforts against the British have held them back momentarily, which is just what Haig really wants. An isolated success has been achieved near the Belgian coast which we need not take seriously. Details are yet lacking to show its real extent. The fact is, the Germans are making superhuman efforts in the West to offset the really great disaster that has overtaken them and their Allies in the East. They will inevitably come to naught, and the great steel spring will fly back again when the pressure is once more relaxed.

Something like a political earthquake is agitating Berlin. A Council of Empire has been held—a rare event, the Kaiser has visited Vienna, Hindenburg and Ludendorff have been in Berlin, and all sorts of things have been happening. The campaign against Bethmann has not yet reached fruition and it may never do so, but a general shaking up seems to be expected. We are cynical enough to believe that it is really General Korniloff who is doing the shaking. The true test, or one of the best, of the situation to the Allies will be the response to the latest War Loan. All the involved quarrels between the different factions resolve themselves into a disagreement over the policy to be pursued by a victorious Germany. As soon as some party emerges which will entertain the possibility, even an infinitesimal and remote one, of a defeated Germany, we shall take some interest in the dispute. Until then, we would welcome a victory for the pan-Germans, knowing that they can be counted upon the soonest and most effectively to bring about Germany's overthrow.

So "Die Zukunft" has been suppressed at last! Evidently the German powers that be are sufficiently hardened and have had enough of being told the truth. Harden himself is turned into a military clerk. It will become German ingenuity and make the punishment fit the crime if he is engaged in the intelligence department and made to assist in the daily compilation of lies. But the loss is the Allies', though not without its compensating significance.

The Premier states that "owing to the voluminous nature of the Charter" the House will not be able to deal with it this session. This is delightful, coming from the leader of a House which has consumed nearly six weeks in passing a few perfunctory acts, which no-one is interested in, and an array of Estimates which no-one outside the Government approves and no-one inside has made the slightest attempt to rectify! In the language of one of their amending acts, we might say: "For the words 'owing to the voluminous nature of the Charter' substitute (1) the urgent necessity of adjourning the House every hour or so to permit both parties to discuss the latest suggestions re the distribution of offices among the proposed coalition ministry; (2) the reflection upon the superior intelligence of the Legislature that would be contained in the too hurried adoption of the result of twelve months' work by a large number of ordinary citizens; (3) the undesirability of doing anything that can be of practical benefit; (4) the undesirability, for that matter, of doing anything at all."

S.S. Portia Back From the Westward.

Reports Bank Fishery Not Encouraging.

The s.s. Portia, Capt. J. Kean, arrived back from the western route at 11.30 a.m. to-day, after a trip of foggy weather, bringing the following saloon passengers: Messrs. W. J. French, Power, C. Roberts, R. G. Ross, W. J. Dewey, J. Barnes, W. Cranford, J. Wiltshire, Geo. Piercey, L. Pike, C. Molloy, B. A. Brazil, Thos. Brenton, W. Holwell, Capt. G. Hearn, Lieut. Smith, Ensign Lodge, S.A.; Privates Forsey, Fatten, Hollett, Delaney, Dobbin, Power; Mesdames Butt, Quinlan and child, Rogers; Misses Squires, O'Toole, Roberts, Nicholle, Bennett, Poole, Jones, Quinlan and 10 second class.

We are informed by Capt. Kean that no fishing vessels were back to the home ports from the Grand Banks when the Portia was coming down the coast, but he heard reports that the fleet were doing poorly; also the fact that there no arrivals indicated that tankers were not catching much fish. The shore fishery on the whole, Capt. Kean reports, looks promising, particularly at St. Lawrence and vicinity, where the record catches are landed to date. When the steamer was at Salmonier the boat Rita C. McDonald, master, arrived with a load of cod from St. Mary's grounds.

Estimates.

I know a man I thought to be
A splendid chap in every way,
So fine, so strong he seemed to me;
And then—oh, just the other day—
His country called her sons; and so
I thought he'd be the first to go.

I met him recently, and he Does not expect to volunteer;
And he's dried up with the injury.
The ruin of his whole career,
(Or so he says), and cannot see
Why we should call this country free!

I know a man I thought to be
Just nothing but a handsome flirt;
A ruthless lady-killer he,
Careless of whom his nonsense hurt,
(Or so I thought), and at the call,
I never thought of him at all.

I learned from other lips than his—
He never even mentioned it—
Of his enlistment. "Yes, it is
A wrench, but I must do my bit."
(This when I spoke of it.) since then
I do not judge my country men!

Woman Injured.

Thrown from Wagon and Gets Three Ribs Broken.

While Bailiff Joseph English and his sister, Mrs. Fagan, were en route to Bell Island on Monday afternoon to visit their brother William, who was dangerously ill there, they had a narrow escape from a serious injury. In company with two men they were being driven to Portugal Cove by cabman Hibbs. When about a mile and a half from the Cove, the horse, frightened by the prancings of a foal, bolted. The carriage was capsized and the occupants, including the driver, thrown out violently to the roadside. The horse was later captured with the vehicle badly wrecked. The three male passengers escaped with slight bruises, but Mrs. Fagan and driver Hibbs were not so fortunate, the woman, who was very much frightened, having three ribs broken, whilst the driver was badly hurt around the body, over which a wheel of the carriage passed. On reaching Bell Island Mrs. Fagan was attended by Dr. Giovanetti. She is still there under surgical treatment and feeling well; her brother Joseph returned to the city last evening.

A Contract In War Parcel.

The Scotsman: It is interesting to compare with the number of food parcels sent to our prisoners in Germany the number received by German prisoners here. Since last year the number of the latter—military and civilian—in this country has risen from 40,821 to 58,113, but the average number of parcels received by them weekly has declined from 15,500 to 9,260, or practically one parcel per prisoner in every six or seven weeks, against two parcels per week for each British prisoner in Germany. For this marked difference there are two explanations. In the first place, we feed our prisoners and do not starve them, as the Germans do to ours. In the second place, food is becoming increasingly scarce in Germany, and there is little or no surplus for sending out of the country. It will be observed that although the number of German prisoners in this country increased by 18,000 in the last year—there was, of course, a body of prisoners retained for work in France—the number of parcels received by them declined by over 9,000. This is significant evidence of the increasing scarcity of food supplies in Germany, and the fact that while the number of parcels was halved the number of money orders was doubled is corroborated. Unable to send food, the friends of the German prisoners sent money instead.

New Municipal and Prohibition Bill

DISCUSSED BY LEGISLATURE

Considerable business was done at the House of Assembly yesterday afternoon.

The Colonial Secretary tabled report of the Permanent Marine Asters Fund.

The House went into Committee Resolutions dealing with Pilots Pilotage charges, providing an increase of fifty per cent in fees collected by Pilots.

The Premier then moved the Bill into Committee on the Municipal Bill which empowers the Municipal Council to collect the full city tax from owners, as heretofore owner and tenant were taxed separately, the in many instances evading the tax under the new Bill the owner is responsible directly to the Council and enabled to collect the tenant's portion by increasing the rental. The Bill also makes provision that by the terms of the tenancy, the lord has undertaken to pay all taxes, he shall not be entitled to the rental any such tax; and the lessee has undertaken to pay the taxes the owner shall be entitled to add to the rental the whole of tax. In the case of unoccupied houses the owner is to pay one of the regular rate of taxation. A clause was added to the Bill empowering the Council to raise funds building workmen's houses. The Premier, Colonial Secretary, Mr. Hill, Mr. Clift and the Leader of the Opposition spoke on the Bill, the Leader of the Government, who introduced the measure, stating that owing to voluminous nature of the City Bill it was impossible to deal with it this session.

The House then went into Committee on Supply, discussing the final Estimates for the ensuing calendar year, ending June 30th, next.

The Public Service Electric Company's Bill passed committee with slight amendments.

The Bill amending the Prohibition Act was read a second and elicited some discussion. In 1916 Bill patent medicines, toilet preparations, etc., which were also prohibited except such as exempted by the Governor in Council. The Prime Minister stated the Commission, consisting of Mr. D. Government Analyst; Dr. Brehm, Messrs. M. Connors and T. Mcdruggists and chemists, had been pointed to consider what patent medicines, etc., are intoxicating liquor to report from time to time, their report the Governor in Council will act. Under the amendment, Carnis, Beef, Iron and Wine such as are known to be used much for beverage purposes will be blacklisted. The amendment gives to the police power to search suspected houses. The Leader of Opposition said that the main trouble about excessive use of patent medicines as beverages was due to their report the Governor in Council notably in the famous Beef, Iron and Wine cases. The Premier and Colonial Secretary defended the Government in Council and said that there difficulties that had to be met. For instance in outpost settlements where there no doctors patent medicines were largely used. The House adjourned at 6 p.m. meet again at the usual hour tomorrow.

Family Catchwords.

By RUTH CAMERON.

RUTH CAMERON

"That's a family phrase," explained my neighbor when her husband used some queer little expression, "one of those phrases that are a kind of family catchword."
This neighbor belongs to a family which isn't just a collection of blood relatives, but really a family. You know what I mean.
It was typical that they should have such family catchwords. It is typical of any real family.
I am proud to say we have some in our family. Let me quote some to show you just what I mean.
We Quote It To People Who Talk Big
One is, "That did have a great influence at the time of the civil war." It was originally said by a member of the family who wasn't alive at the time of the civil war and wasn't in a position to know just what did and what didn't have an influence then. Her elderly, didactic way of saying it brought down the derision of the house and we quote it now whenever anyone makes a lordly statement about something he has no particular knowledge of.
He Simply Laid It Down.
"I simply laid it down," is a favorite phrase of one of the male members of the family. It refers to any paper or magazine which in the course of human events has been removed from the table and which the male member is seized with a desire to consult again. He thinks it outrageous that it should have disappeared. "I simply laid it down," he says, "and now it's gone." If we let all the papers and magazines that he simply laid down for a week we shouldn't be able to move about. (Have you a male member like that in your home?)
"Don't you feel cold right here?" is a favorite of my mother's. "Right here" is the chest. She very much disapproves of the way the young folks of to-day leave their chests unprotected and frequently makes that anxious inquiry when she sees them about to risk the elements. Sometimes we save her the trouble by saying it for her.
Do You Say "Silver" In Your Family?
"Silver" is another family word. It means apparently "to rush" and carries with it an invidious sense. For instance my mother says that "it's no wonder the maid doesn't get her work half done when she stivers up stairs right after lunch."
That's enough to show what I mean by "family phrases," words or sentences to which family usage have given some peculiar flavor. No family is complete without them.
Maybe you'll find it interesting to make a mental collection of yours.

Voile—striped, flowered or figured—is charming for the simpler summer frocks.
Fine tucks, hemstitching and touches of lace mark the dainty French blouses.
An apron which is practically a slip-over dress is a great convenience for a small girl.

The Name of "Anzac."

(Australia Has Lost 24,106 Men Killed in the War.)

No weather stone, engraven with noble name.
And dead, is worthy to record the part they played. Some better tribute we should give.
Their lives within the nation's life should live.
Their deeds be graven on the nation's heart—
Their spirit burn within us like a flame.
Recall the courage that could calmly face
The unknown danger, when upon the shore,
Among the morning mists that veiled the place,
Death, waited for their coming, and they saw
His outspread wings that blotted out the sun.
As drawing near he claimed them, one by one.

The patient strength; the unshaken will
No loneliness, no sufferings could bend
From his high purpose, that, unconquered still,
Was steadfast, faithful, to the very end.
Until the final sacrifice was made,
And life itself on duty's altar laid.

Upon this pattern let us make our men,
Engrafting all these qualities sublime.
So shall the men of "Anzac" live again
And proudly stand to meet the eyes of Time.
Their lives, their deeds shown forth in us will be
The highest tribute to their memory.

WALT MASON

Keep out of debt and save the dimes till they are red and rusted, and so when come the fiercer times, they will not find you busted. But do not pare and hoard and skimp like some jim-twisted miser; by doing that you'll be a simp, and comfort Bill, the kaiser. A lot of panic stricken jays at us are daily shrieking, to starve ourselves in forty ways, and end all costly leaking. I don't admire the frenzied bore who jaws us in the journals; a slump in trade would hurt us more than losing many colonels. We want to see the wheels go round, the forges brightly burning, to see the workmen saw and pound, their wages briskly earning. When commerce sags and men are fired and coin no more is flowing, oh, then, the pinch that makes us tired we surely will be knowing. Economy is always wise, and waste's a sinful doin', but we may all economize to our eternal ruin. Don't let the war's colossal strain your brainpan be upending; oh, friends, be moderate and sane in saving as in spending.

TO-DAY'S Messages.

U. S. COAL FOR CANADA.
 WASHINGTON, To-Day.
 Directions were issued by Secretary Redfield to-day that every effort be made to expedite the licensing of coal cargoes destined for Canada under the export control provisions of the Espionage Act. The Dominion is suffering from a coal shortage and the fear has been expressed that there will be no restriction on coal shipments to Canada and ordered that telegraphic application for licenses be accepted.

PAPER FROM SEAWEED.
 COPENHAGEN, To-Day.
 A Danish inventor, it is announced, has discovered a process for making newsprint from seaweed. The new process is said to entail half the cost of making paper from wood pulp.

ANOTHER SINN FEIN MEMBER.
 ENNIS, County Clare, Ireland.
 To-Day.
 Scenes of wild excitement followed the announcement of the result of the Parliamentary election in East Clare. Prof. DeValera, the successful candidate, addressed the crowd and said it could no longer be alleged that the Irish people did not want independence. The new member headed the crowd of Sinn Feiners who marched through the town carrying Republican flags.

THE POLITICAL CRISIS IN BERLIN.
 COPENHAGEN, To-Day.
 Despatches from Berlin to-day indicate a pause in the development of the political crisis, while the parties are waiting for the decision of the Crown in regard to ministerial recognition and the question of peace terms. The parties have reached no agreement in regard to the resolution which it is proposed to place before the Reichstag in regard to war aims. With little news of political affairs on hand, the Berlin papers speculate on the outcome, each according to its desire. The Conservatives, National Liberal and Pan-German organs assume that the Chancellor will surely go. The Radicals and centre papers expect him to remain, but to jettison various ministers.

QUARRELLING AMONG THEMSELVES.
 COPENHAGEN, To-Day.
 The coalition of the various elements in the German Reichstag now arrayed against the Government seem determined not to vote the war credit asked until the political crisis is settled. The attitude of the opposition (opposition) elements has excited the Conservative papers to recriminatory comment.

IN MACEDONIA.
 LONDON, To-Day.
 An official on the situation on the Macedonian front issued to-night says: British airplanes bombed the enemy communications. The health of the British forces compares very favorably with that of last year.

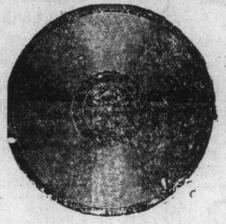

WAR REVIEW.
 LONDON, To-Day.
 Having broken the strong Austro-German line in the vicinity of Halicz, the Russians are pushing forward from Halicz towards Lemberg, the capital of Galicia, from Stanislaw south of Halicz westward towards the line of the Dniester. After the capture of Halicz, on from Halicz to Zolotvina, about 30 miles to the south, General Korniloff forced the Austro-Germans to continue their retreat. In their advance from Halicz the Russians forced the fleeing enemy across the Lemnica and occupied two towns on the western bank of the river. The next natural barrier is the River Stoka, about six miles west of Lemnica. South and west of Stanislaw the Russians have reached the Bosicz-Lestivka-Karmax line, the central point of which, Lestivka, is four miles west of the River Seritza. This line is about seven miles east of Kaluz, the nearest large town west of Stanislaw and which is situated in the bend of the Stoka River. The extension of the Russian fighting line to Kolotvin brings the battle ground into the foothills of the Carpathians. On Tuesday the Russians captured 8,000 more prisoners and 30 guns, bringing the total captured from July 8 to 10 to more than 10,000 officers and men, and 80 guns. A large amount of machine guns and war material was also taken. Berlin gives no details of Tuesday's fighting in Galicia and merely says that "Movements south of the Dniester have been executed until now as planned." On the Belgian coast east of Dunkirk the British and Germans are fighting again along the Yser, the scene of many hard fought battles. By destroying the bridges across the Yser between Nieupert and the North Sea coast the Germans were able to advance and occupy isolated sections. Berlin claims the capture of 1,850 prisoners in the penetration of 600 yards along a front of 1,400 yards.

11.00 A.M.
 LONDON, To-Day.
 The Admiralty announces that while on patrol to-day five naval machines met and engaged a formation of ten albatross scouts and three large two-seater machines southwest of Nieupert. Three enemy scouts were driven down completely out of control, the report adds, while two others were driven down; one of our machines is missing.

A SET-BACK IN IRELAND.

LONDON, To-Day.
 The election of Edward De Valera, member of Parliament for East Clare, and the third Sinn Feiner to be returned for Parliament, of late, by the unexpectedly large majority of nearly three thousand in a constituency which for years has returned the official Nationalist candidate unopposed, has caused the greatest surprise and disappointment in Nationalist circles and misgiving among politicians generally as to the prospects of the Irish convention. The most sanguine Sinn Feiners only hoped for a majority of from one thousand to fifteen hundred. This revelation shows how deeply Ireland is permeated with a repugnance of the Irish policy of the Government and with objection to Nationalist co-operation in the ministerial attempt to secure an Irish settlement, and is regarded as a bad omen for the success of the Convention.

PLAIN WORDS FROM THE PRESIDENT.

WASHINGTON, To-Day.
 President Wilson appealed to the country's business interests to-night to put aside every selfish consideration and give their aid to the nation as freely as those who go out to offer their lives on the battlefield. In a statement addressed to the coal operators and manufacturers he gave assurances that just prices will be paid by the Government and public during the war, but warned them not to attempt to extort unusual profits which will be tolerated.

GOOD AIRPLANE FIGURES.

LONDON, To-Day.
 (Via Reuter's Ottawa Agency.)
 The Minister of Munitions in an interview to-day gives some reassuring figures with regard to the production of aircraft. He states that thousands of factories are manufacturing airplanes and that the output is increasing by leaps and bounds. The number of aircraft is now more than three times what it was last year, and by the end of the year would be double that of last April. The monthly output of airplane engines had been more than doubled in 1917, and the present output would be redoubled before the end of December. The Ministry's airplane program, he added, was one of maximum production.

FORESHADOWS COALITION IN GERMANY.

AMSTERDAM, To-Day.
 The Catholic organ Germania of Berlin says that the Catholic centre in the Reichstag has decided by an overwhelming majority to support Matthias Erzberger, who last week attacked the pan-Germans and advocated peace without annexations or indemnity. Herr Erzberger's object, the newspaper says, is to induce the Reichstag to make a declaration of war aims in the sense that Germany has not gone to war with the desire for conquest, but merely to defend its freedom and preserve its territorial possessions, in order to nullify definitely any impression on the part of the Entente that Germany's peace terms would be dictated by the Prussian military caste. The Reichstag is asked to set forth with unmistakable clearness the German aims. The Entente would then realize, it is contended, that it is waging war with the entire German people. The Germania adds that the Chancellor has accepted the idea and the formation of a coalition ministry is being prepared. Thus, it says, unity ger, leader of the Centrist Party in the Reichstag, had with the Austrian Emperor Charles is a pure invention. The Crown Prince arrived in Berlin on a special train from the front, and yesterday at noon attended the Crown Council, at which the Emperor presided.

SUFFRAGE REFORM IN GERMANY.

PARIS, To-Day.
 A despatch from Basel to the Havas Agency says that Emperor William has addressed to Chancellor Von Bethmann Hollweg a rescript under the terms of which a bill to be submitted to the Prussian Diet as a complement to the Imperial message of April 7th must be drawn up on the basis of equal voting rights.

LATEST!

COMMENT ON SINN FEIN ELECTION.

LONDON, To-Day.
 The election of Edward De Valera as member of Parliament for East Clare, the third Sinn Feiner to be returned to Parliament of late, is treated as an event of great political consequence by the newspapers, which devote considerable space to the victory. The tendency of the Unionist press, reflecting their advices from Belfast and Dublin, is to emphasize what it always contended, the folly of the Government in liberating the Sinn Fein prisoners and retaining to deal with revolutionary talk and acts as such would be dealt with in England. These papers regard the situation as gravely threatening, for they see nothing in the Sinn Fein movement but rebellion. The Liberal press also is alarmed, but rather for the position of the official Nationalist party and for the prospect of the establishment of constitutional Home Rule.

One opinion seems common among all parties, namely, that the prospects of the Convention in Ireland to consider Home Rule are seriously impaired if not entirely doomed. Another view is that the election is an irreparable disaster for the Irish Nationalist party, which many Irish people complain held the country for years in the dead hand of a rigid machine policy.

SAYS BETHMANN RESIGNED.

BERNE, Switzerland, To-Day.
 The Vossische Zeitung of Berlin says the German Imperial Chancellor has resigned. Emperor William, the newspaper says, has postponed his decision whether to accept the Chancellor's resignation.

NO SUB. BASE THERE.

RIO JANEIRO, To-Day.
 The report that a submarine base has been discovered near Santos is denied by naval officials. A decree has been sanctioned, declaring the wireless telegraph and telephone service the exclusive property of the Federal Government.

PROGRESS OF RUSSIANS.
PETROGRAD, July 11 (Official.) Our troops advancing on the Bogorodchan-Zolotivina front, having broken down the resistance of the enemy, have reached the line of Poleszcz, Lesluka Kosmacz. In the course of the day we captured more than 2,000 prisoners and about 30 guns. Altogether in three days' battle, from the eighth to the tenth, in the direction of Dolina we took prisoners more than 150 officers and 10,000 men. Our captures also included about 80 guns, 12 of them of heavy calibre and a large number of trench mortars, machine guns and a large quantity of engineering material and military stores. On the remainder of the front there has been artillery firing which was more intense in the direction of Zlochoff and south of Brzezany. On the Rumanian and Caucasian fronts the situation is unchanged. On the Baltic Sea on Monday a squadron of enemy hydroplanes carried out three flights over Arburg and the region of Therelia, dropping about thirty bombs on the roadsteads, batteries and various structures without result, causing no loss or damage. On Sunday a Zeppelin flew over the southern extremity of the Aland Archipelago.

PURSUIT OF THE ENEMY.
PETROGRAD, July 11. According to a telegram received from the General Staff the pursuit of the enemy in Galicia continues. The capture of Halicz, the strategic key to Lemberg is confirmed, the Russians taking prisoners and more than thirty guns.

AUSTRIANS ADMIT DEFEAT.
LONDON, July 11. Admission by the Austrians of defeat at the hands of the Russians is contained in a message from the Austrian War Press Headquarters, as forwarded from Amsterdam by the Central News. It says, for two days our troops repulsed strong Russian attacks in trenches which had been destroyed by artillery fire. One division defended itself against attacks of superior Russian columns, but with fresh Russian reserves brought into action, our troops were compelled to retreat and give up their first line.

A WEEK'S SINKINGS.
LONDON, July 11. The sinking of fourteen British merchant ships of more than 1,600 tons is reported in the weekly summary of shipping losses issued today, and three of less than 1,600 tons; seven fishing vessels were also sunk. Arrivals were, 2,895; sailings, 2,798. British merchantmen unsuccessfully attacked, including four previously reported, 17; British fishing vessels, including one previously sunk, 7. The increasing effective measures against the submarines which is being carried out by British and American warships, is shown in the record of last week. With one exception the number of merchantmen sunk is lower than in any week since the British inaugurated in March the system of giving out weekly reports. The report of March 11th showed 17 merchantmen sunk, the same total as shown in last week's summary. The preceding report gave sinkings as 15 vessels over 1,600 tons and five under that size. In two earlier periods the totals were respectively 28 and 32. This compares with the sinking of 40 large merchantmen in one week and 38 in another at the height of the campaign, in April, and in the week which ended April 21st, 53 vessels in all were sunk.

AUSTRIAN TOWN OCCUPIED.
ROME, July 11. The Austrian town of Bolina, north west of Salo, on the Carso front, was occupied by Italian troops yesterday.

BOMBS DROPPED ON TURKISH FLEET.
LONDON, July 11. An air raid on the enemy fleet off Constantinople was announced in a statement by the British War Office today Bombs were dropped on the Turkish cruiser Yvus Sultan Selim formerly the German cruiser Goeben. The extent of the damage to the vessel is not given. The war office at Constantinople also was attacked by the British who returned without casualties.

BOMBING ATTACK.
LONDON, July 11. According to a brief telegraphic account of the bombing operation at Constantinople, received here, the attack was one of the most successful of the kind carried out during the war. The British aviators confined themselves strictly to military objectives. The airplanes were over the city for nearly half an hour, carefully picking out their marks, and descending to an altitude less than 300 yards to release their bombs. The Goeben, which recently was annoyingly active against the Russians, was the centre of attack, with entirely satisfactory results, and it is safe to assume that she will be out of action for several months. The War Office which occupies a commanding position on a hill and is visible from all directions, was also an easy target. Among the damaged enemy ships was the converted liner which was used as the headquarters of the German staff.

GERMAN FIGURES FALSE.
LONDON, July 11. (Via Reuter's Ottawa Agency.)—The figures given in yesterday's German communique of air losses in the month of June are entirely false. On the British front alone 121 machines were destroyed and 99 others driven down uncontrollable, while the French account for 45 and the Belgians for 4, making a total of 279 instead of 68 admitted by the enemy. It is impossible to give the total of French machines brought down, because no such record is ever issued, but as the number of British machines reported lost by Field Marshal Haig was 78, and as the heaviest fighting was on the British front, it is obvious that the German figure of 220 is absurd.

MAJOR MORAH'T'S OPINION.
COPENHAGEN, July 11. Major Morah't, military correspondent of the Deutsches Tages Zeitung, asks in press articles whether the moment has arrived for an offensive by Germany and concludes that for the present it is inadvisable. All Germany, he says, longs to hear the charging yell of the German armies in a big drive, but it is doubtful whether the necessary numerical superiority can be concentrated against any particular front to secure real success. Partial success, Major Morah't says, is costly and useless and the general staff therefore is well advised in not attempting a big attack on the western front.

BRITISH LINES PENETRATED.
LONDON, July 11. The enemy have penetrated British positions in Belgium on a front of 1,400 yards to a depth of 300 yards, says a statement issued by the British War Office to-day. In their advance the Germans reached the right bank of the Yser near the sea. The attack followed 24 hours' bombardment in which the defences in the Dunes sector near the coast were levelled. The sector was isolated by the destruction of the bridges over the Yser.

ENEMY REPULSED.
PARIS, July 11. The Germans made an attack last night in the Woivre, north of Flery. To-day's official announcement says they were repulsed.

EARTHQUAKE AND TIDAL WAVE.
MELBOURNE, July 11. A despatch received here from Suva, Fiji Islands, says damage has been caused in the Samoan Islands by a severe earthquake and tidal wave. The Friendly Islands also have experienced the earthquake.

FRENCH AVIATOR SAFE.
PARIS, July 11. Sergeant Major Antoine Paillard, one of the French aviators who participated in the bombardment last Friday of the Krupp factory at Essen, Germany, and who failed to return, has, it is now learned, landed safely in Holland.

SWEDEN PROTESTS.
STOCKHOLM, July 11. The Government has instructed the Swedish minister at Berlin to protest against the torpedoing of Swedish fishing boats by German submarines.

HARDEN'S PUBLICATION SUPPRESSED.
COPENHAGEN, July 11. The Dizakunt, Maximilian Harden's publication has been suppressed for the remainder of the war, according to the Berlin Tageblatt. Herr Harden has been mobilized under the auxiliary civil service law and will be employed as a military clerk. The Government some time ago planned to take this action but lacked courage.

THE EMBARGO AND ITS EFFECT.
LONDON, July 11. Lord Rhondda, the Food Controller, in a statement on the embargo proclamation of President Wilson, said the comprehensive and effective character of the President's latest action is typical of the way in which the United States has thrown itself heart and soul into the war. It seems to me that additional pressure which will thereby be brought to bear upon our common enemies should go far towards bringing this struggle to an earlier termination, especially in view of the fact that in applying an embargo on provisions the President will have the advantage of Mr. Hoover's unequalled knowledge of conditions in the neutral countries.

REPUBLICAN TROOPS ENTER PEKING.
WASHINGTON, July 11. The entry of Republican troops into Peking was announced in a despatch to the Chinese Legation to-day, indicating that the monarchical coup d'etat has come to a complete failure. The despatch was the first in two weeks to come through direct from the Peking foreign office. The second and final abdication of the Manchurian Emperor Hsun Tuang is said to be expected momentarily, along with the arrest of Gru Chang Haun, a military adventurer who is responsible for the coup, and who has been ordered to be taken into custody by the new President.

VALUABLE SHIP AND CARGO SUNK.
NEW YORK, July 11. The American steamship Rangan, carrying a crew of fifty men, has been sunk presumably off the French coast. Four of the crew were missing. The vessel was valued at $3,000,000. She carried a cargo of flour and other foodstuffs together with 4,000 tons of steel valued at $2,000,000 which was consigned to the French Government.

THE OSTRICH.

The ostrich is a tropical bird with a collapsible neck and a tungsten steel digestion. It is manufactured for the sole purpose of producing willow plumes, and on that account is looked upon with suspicion and distrust by every right-minded husband.

Men who have made a close, personal study of the ostrich and have observed his lack of table manners tell us that he is not supplied with the brains that ordinarily accompanies the domestic cabbage. All the ostrich knows how to do is to moult and shed willow plumes, which are then run through a dye vat and sold to women who are too proud to wear the wing of a defunct turkey. After a fond husband has paid for enough willow plumes to ornament a four-foot picture hat, he will not be able to approach an ostrich without a shudder.

We are taught in our physiology that the man who invented the seamless garden hose secured his inspiration by watching the ostrich take down his neck just before retiring and find it around his person. It is a fascinating sight to see a tame ostrich open the top valve of his neck and swallow some lumpy article of food, like a can of sardines or a discarded coffee grinder. This causes us to inquire why it is that the ostrich never chokes to death, while a baby which bites into a soda cracker with its first teeth can throw the entire family into a nervous fit.

The appetite of the ostrich has never been sounded up to the present writing. The nearest approach to this appetite known to scientific research is that of the winner of a pie-eating contest. It costs more to put flesh on an ostrich with his surging, funnel-shaped appetite than it does to buy a few hours of sleep at a New York hotel. This is why the genuine willow plume roosts so high in the department store advertisements.

If there is anything the ostrich is good for except to tantalize reluctant husbands with the price of its wearing apparel, nobody has ever discovered what it is. Nobody would think of eating an ostrich for Sunday dinner, and it has a sour and highly inflammable temper. If it should become suddenly and irrevocably extinct, nobody would mourn except the milliners.

Your Boys and Girls.

"Do mothers realize that children get homesick, just the same as grown ups," said a friend of mine. She was unfolding as she spoke a pretty blue and white table cover that always draped the sitting room table at home; and there was a little pile of articles—some cushion covers into which the bed pillows were easily slipped, a patch work crib quilt, a gay striped afghan, and a brown linen creeping rug with the animals outlined in red cotton. There were even a few pictures slipped out of their frames so as to be carried easily.

"I frame these sometimes with cheap frames," she explained, noticing my glance, "but usually, simply mount them on carriage paper." I tell the children the pictures are on a vacation, too. By the by, they will go back to their gilt and wooden houses and shut the glass door—that always pleases the baby. Oh, yes, children like changes and novelty, but nights and rainy days, they want something they're used to. Many a time when people call children cross they are just plain homesick."

The Gas Range!

The Gas Range means comfort for the housewife; shorter kitchen hours for her, and a cleaner kitchen. It is a great mistake to think that cooking with gas is expensive.

Whenever a woman becomes used to gas for cooking, thoughts of a coal or wood stove fill her with gloom. A Gas range is so much easier to operate, so efficient for all kinds of cooking, and so much cleaner, that the idea of going back to the old style methods is decidedly unpleasant. Yet in winter many housewives think they must use a coal or wood stove, because there is no other way of heating the kitchen. THERE IS ANOTHER WAY AND IT IS FAR BETTER THAN THE OLD.
