CHAPTER XLVII.

The morning after Christmas Day, Lady Gladys Howard heard from her lover—he had written a long, happy letter—a letter that breathed hope and joy, and told her that he was coming to the abbey—that he would be with her before noon.

"Be of good cheer, my darling," he wrote. "God has been good to us, and the mists are rolling away under the touch of angel fingers. The future is fairer than Eden, and through golden vistas we will catch a glimpse of heaven!"

In all his letter, which covered many pages, there was the same glad tune, but there was nothing more explicit; he only told of joy to come, but he did not explain why or how.

She read portions of it to Lady Marcia, who listened with kindling eyes. "I have never lost my faith in God's mercies," she replied. "No one has ever heard me complain, or doubt that all would be put straight in His own good time."

"Dear auntie! Without you I could never have borne up. And papa seems now more resigned to his fate! He said yesterday that he preferred to face the worst at once. He sinned, and he is ready to suffer."

Until now the garish sunshine of the bright winter's morning had seemed to mock at her, for the Christmas had been a wretched one, and never had the old abbey been wrapped in such solemnity and gloom.

Half an hour later Lord Cecil rode up the avenue. He spent most of the time at the Abbey now. He could not rest at his own home, and he and Lady Stanhope had quarrelled outright.

"I hear that Mr. Gardner and Sir Charles are coming to-day," Gardner wrote to me, and asked me to be here."

His face was very pale, and there was a hunted, wild look in his eyes. He spent some time with the earl, who was fast recovering from his shock, and then wandered from room to room like a man distraught.

Later my lord sent for Lady Marcia and Gladys. He sent for them to prepare for the worst.

The steward had declared that he intended to denounce the earl and Lord Cecil that very day. He saw no reason for waiting. He did not press the marriage. He cared nothing for it now. All he desired was a large sum of money from both.

"I have no further interest in you," he wrote to his unhappy son; "miserable coward and unnatural villain you are. For you I have imperiled my very life, I have had but one dream, and that has been that you might be among the highest and the proudest in the land. My disappointment is keen, and I hate you for it. But I mean to make some use of you. I must have money. I must have a large sum in cash, while you have the power to use the funds of the Stanhopes. I must have it at once. Take a similar message to your friends, the earl, the murderer, or you shall both see the inside of a jail this day! Curse you both."

"I believe that he will act," said my lord, "because this letter shows a touch of insanity. His disappointment has affected his brain, but I am prepared to face anything now."

Gladys whispered words of comfort in his ear, but he sternly shook his head.

"No, there is nothing for it, but to face judge and jury," he said. "I have only the cowardice of twenty years since to thank for this. The day of retribution always comes—sooner or later."

Then Gladys went to an upper window that commanded a view of the sweeping avenue. There was a flush in her pale cheeks, a sparkle in her eyes. She was watching for her lover! The carriage had been sent to meet the train that reached Swinford at half-past eleven. It was now almost twelve, and her heart palpitated madly, when the ring of horses' hoofs beat with rhythmical music on the frost-brown earth.

The carriage swept into view, the horses snorting foam as they stepped proudly along. They seemed to know that they were freighted with joy—that their burden was one of peace.

Gladys ran downstairs, out into the hall, and found herself clasped in her lover's arms. She forgot the servants, the world—there was nothing but him!

Herbert Gardner led Lady Marcia away, and then Edgar Emden, looking pale, but happy, stepped from the carriage and followed Sir Charles to the earl's chamber.

It was difficult, this breaking the news, but where was the use of delay? Joy seldom kills, and sorrow had been master so long that a grand plan of a simultaneous dispersal had been arranged.

LADY IRIS' MISTAKE;
—or the—
Hero of 'Surata'

CHAPTER V.

He thought once that he might venture to ask Lady Iris if she liked drawing, but then he fancied it would seem as though the whole family had resolved on discovering the extent of her accomplishments; so he, usually dauntless, could only sit looking at her, and wish with an impotent rage that he had the face and the polished elegance that seemed to come naturally to men of good birth. Finding that he had nothing more to say, that idea which came to him was more or less absurd, he thought it best to make some move toward departure.

He rose from his chair, and the earl, remembering that he had hardly exchanged a word with the heir of Hynes Court, addressed some observations to him. That gave him time to recover himself. He stood talking to Lord Caledon, glancing occasionally toward Lady Iris. He hit his lip as he noticed the difference between his mother, his sister, and this daughter of a noble house. Money had purchased everything else for him and his; but it could not buy that intangible high-bred grace, that easy dignity. He sighed deeply, and came back from his reverie to find that the earl was looking at him curiously, and that a dead silence reigned in the room.

"We are waiting for you, John," said the calm voice of Marie Barton.

He stammered something like an apology, and they began to say "farewell." Marie was quiet and collected; but John Barton was dazed and bewildered with the loveliness of the earl's fair daughter.

"Hold with honor," he could not help repeating the words to himself, as he watched. She would hold any man's heart, love and life, with honor. "She shall so hold mine," he said to himself.

himself. "I swear it! The day shall come when she, with her peerless beauty and her noble name, shall be mine. I swear it! And let the man who comes between us look to himself!"

"Good morning, Mr. Barton," a sweet voice was saying to him; and again it seemed as though he had returned from another world. Lady Iris was looking at him with a smile, and that smile sent the blood coursing through his veins.

Love came that same morning to Sir Felix Clynards as a beautiful dreamy revelation of poetry and romance. It came to John Barton as a burning fever. He had not been many minutes in Lady Iris' presence before he felt that he would rather kill her with his own hand than see her married to any other man.

John Barton did not seem to recover himself until he was once more seated in the magnificent carriage which was one of the millionaire's boasts; and then, just as Lady Clynards had turned to her son, Mrs. Barton turned now to hers.

"John," she said, "the very desire of my heart is that you should marry Lady Iris."

"Is it, mother? I'm afraid it will be like many other desires—quite vain."

"Don't you like her, John?" asked his father bluntly.

"Yes, I like her," he answered, wondering that he had the power so to control himself and his words. "No one could help liking her."

"You should have a little more spirit, John," observed Mr. Barton, senior. "Women like flattery and compliments and all that kind of thing. I used to flatter your mother here by the hour together. You saw how pleased Lady Iris was with my little compliment. Why did you not try something of that kind yourself?"

John turned away with a groan. How was it possible to make his parents understand?

"Marie," he said, a few hours afterwards, as he sat with his sister in the gorgeous dining-room at Hynes Court, "women are quicker at taking notes than men. What do you think of Lady Iris?"

"That she is the most beautiful and graceful girl I have ever seen, John, but, at the same time, one of the proudest."

GETTING ON WITH MYSELF.

Getting on with myself is easy enough, getting on with myself is the bother.

I want to neglect the grim tasks I must do, for the pleasanter tasks I would rather; and live by my neighbour year in and year out with never occasion to grumble.

But I have to give battle each day to myself to force him to tasks that are amiable.

My neighbour is perfectly willing to do what is right without word or dissension.

I'm never compelled to force him to be fair or his little shortcomings to vanish.

But time after time I must fight with myself, as hard as an enemy could do.

To make myself see what is proper for me and make myself do it, I should do.

There are duties unpleasant which ought to be done, but unless I am eager for ease and the pleasures of life, but I find I'm not eager to earn them.

My neighbor with me is as fair as can be, with him it's jolly to be living.

But the thought often comes as I think of myself that I'm taking far more than I'm giving.

Getting on with my neighbor's no trouble to me. He is friendly and cheerful and kindy.

It's my ways which give me the greatest concern, my habits of doing it bitidly.

My neighbor and I have no troubles at all, his faults I give never a thought to.

But day after day it's a struggle with me to make myself do as I ought to.

At Gordon's Olympia.

Carter de Haven, producer of "My Lady Friends," is the owner of the smallest theatre on the Pacific coast. It seats just 34 people. Recently a young man, evidently of the West coast jennesse dore, approached a Western official of Associated First National Pictures.

"I am considering buying a motion picture theatre," he said, "and understand that Carter de Haven has one to sell."

The executive gently explained that Mr. de Haven's theatre was not for sale.

"My Lady Friends" will be shown at Gordon's Olympia Theatre this week.

With Seaplane and Motor Boat In Newfoundland and Labrador.

Extracts from the Diary of a Wanderer.

WITH THE ADMIRALTY.
Skipper James told us that it was the same spot in 1889 that H. M.S. was wrecked, and some eleven years were lost. On that occasion a shipman came ashore and asked for a man named Davis to be his guide to the wreck. On the occasion of the ship's misfortune Davis heard the brass guns, and when walking towards the Point was met by a midshipman from the Raleigh who made the same request to him as his predecessor did in 1889. We returned to our motor boat, and fixing up the gear went past the Raleigh, taking down as we did so. We were able to include a party of officers flying off a coffin in a boat lying off the shore. On our return, I called on the Capt. who was lying in Forteau Harbor, together with the Constable and the Secretary. The Capt. was lying in the Ward Room, I felt ready to face dinner in the "cuddy." The Admiral is a perfect host, and after a dinner that meant much to a wanderer like myself, we attended the concert on the Quarter Deck. I take of my hat to the sailor for all-round efficiency, that concert would have raised encores for every turn, in any first class place of amusement in the West End of London. I have learnt that the expression "The Spirit of the Navy," conveys a great deal. To see the Navy at work and at play, is to realise what a wonderful spirit has been handed down, from the days of Drake, Raleigh, and Hawkins, and not only is that spirit kept intact, but it is added to as the years go on. After a most enjoyable evening I returned to the Hawke, with a promise that the Admiral, the Captain, and the Secretary would have dinner with us on the Hawke tomorrow.

I AM ATTACKED BY FLIES.
Aug. 23rd 1922—Dull day with rain. We rooked at our moorings considerably last night owing to a heavy swell coming in from the Straits. In view of our important dinner party I decided to get some trout up the Forteau River. We shifted our anchor down to the mouth of the river, and I took the dingy and rowed up stream. After a trying time negotiating rocks just below the surface of the water, I arrived at the stream proper, and tying up the dingy, proceeded on foot. Wading out to some rocks in the bed of the river I immediately got into some good sea trout, and had great sport. As soon as the rain stopped I was attacked by millions of sand flies, and I had left my fly "dope" on the Hawke. The flies on Labrador must be seen and felt to be appreciated. They came in clusters, biting hard; every time I put my hand to my neck, I drew it away covered with blood and the carcasses of dead flies. I returned to the boat happy with my catch but smarting acutely from the effects of the flies. Never again will I be caught out through leaving my "dope" behind.

BORROW THE BOSS' CLOTHES.
Remaining in the Hawke I decided to get my own back by borrowing the Boss' clothes. By the time I had finished in the clothes I had stood up like me to the Capt. I walked up the gangway in a pair of the Boss' trousers that met under my arms, and I shivered in the wind, and a coat that fitted me like a sack, while I had some difficulty in keeping the Boss' shoes on my feet. On arriving on the Quarter Deck I was withered by the eyes of the officers of the Watch, who doubt thought that I was some sort of a ghost from the shore for tonight's concert. However a kindly word from the Secretary saved the situation, and bundling me into his cabin he arranged me in some of his apparel, and after "two gins and

REV. T. O. LIGHTBOURN, B.A.
According to a telegram received in town yesterday from the Rector, the Rev. E. C. Earp, B.A., the new Curate for St. Thomas's Parish will be the Rev. T. O. Lightbourn, Mr. Lightbourn, who is a Bachelor of Arts of Toronto University, served during the war as a Captain in the Royal Air Force, Mediterranean Squadron. He was ordained about two years ago and is at present Rector of Shanty Bay, a pleasant little summer resort about fifty miles north of Toronto. He comes to St. Thomas's very strongly recommended by Canon Cody and Principal McIntyre, who are all old and valued friends of Mr. Earp and with whom the Rector stayed while in Toronto. Mr. Lightbourn will not feel that he is quite a stranger to Newfoundland as he is a connection of the Whiteway and Outerbridge families in this city. He expects to take up his new duties early in November.

WE PHOTOGRAPH THE ADMIRAL.

Aug. 24th 1922—Day bright, sea calmer. Some stalwarts from the Calcutta came on board to fix our batteries and make various adjustments. Upon completing these we took them alongside, and I went on board to say good-bye to the Admiral. I was fortunate in getting him to agree to our taking a picture of him pacing his Quarter Deck with the Captain, which Stinks pulled off with quick dispatch. After saying good-bye, and declining an invitation to lunch as we were in a hurry, we steamed round the ship taking pictures, finally passing astern, and taking the Admiral waving good-bye. Turning our backs to Forteau we made towards Flower's Cove across the Straits. We were met by the last of the black and sorry to see the Capt. of Southern Labrador, barren coast of a more wild or desolate spot. Arriving at Flower's Cove at lunch time, I got through to Hawke Bay, and found that the Boss had taken the Mayor and flown off to St. John's in the "inside." So we decided to make for home immediately. Towards evening the wind and sea got up, and when passing St. John's Island we were hit by a squall, which called for the skillful handling of our engineer, under whose guidance we made the harbour on the Island. Later when the squall subsided a bit we were able to slip up to old Port aux Choix, where we rested at anchor that night, and the whole of the next day and night, owing to heavy weather.

50,000 Refugees Starving at Mudania - Germany Cannot Pay Debts.

FIRE DEVASTATES SMYRNA.
CONSTANTINOPLE, Sept. 14. Smyrna is burning and the population is in a panic. All women and children are being evacuated to Athens. The cause of the fire is unknown. Scores of buildings in the European section have been destroyed including the United States consulate. Allied soldiers formed a fire brigade, but the conflagration is beyond control. The property damage it is estimated will run into millions. The fire started in the Armenian quarter and is spreading rapidly.

GREEK SOLDIERS MASSACRED.

LONDON, Sept. 14. A despatch from Athens dated Wednesday, says the French steamer La Martine has arrived there with a hundred and fifty refugees from Smyrna, including a Greek journalist, who states the Kemalists massacred two thousand Greek soldiers and threw their bodies into the sea.

50,000 REFUGEES STARVING.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Sept. 14. A United States submarine chaser has arrived here with reports of an appalling situation at Mudania where the harbor is filled with bodies of refugees who starved to death when the last vessel departed before the Turkish occupation. Fifty thousand refugees without food or water lined the water front for miles in a boiling sun with arms uplifted pleading to be taken off.

PROTECTING NATIONALS.

ROME, Sept. 14. Italian ships are attempting to take off the Italian population of Smyrna, owing to the fire raging there, and Italy has despatched several ships there with provisions and hospital supplies. Instructions have also been issued to all Italian warships to concentrate in Smyrna waters and take care and provide shelter for Italian residents.

GERMANY CANT PAY.

PARIS, Sept. 14. Germany notified the Reparations Committee this evening that she was unable to pay the million and a half pounds due to-morrow as part payment to the pre-war private debt to the Allied nations.

CONFERENCE IMMINENT.

PARIS, Sept. 14. A new crisis developed to-day on receipt of Germany's refusal to give up the hundred million gold marks demanded by Belgium as a guarantee of the six months' note issue. This has decided the members of the Commission that the situation is beyond their control and is now a matter for the Allied Premiers, and a conference is imminent.

KING VICTOR ILL.

NAPLES, Sept. 14. King Victor Emmanuel is seriously ill, according to the newspapers which state the King contracted his illness on the journey to the Trentino Mountains.

NO REVOLT IN PALESTINE.

LONDON, Sept. 14. The Colonial Office has issued a denial of the rumors in circulation that a revolt is imminent in Palestine. It asserts the country is quite tranquil.

KIPLING'S DENIAL.

NEW YORK, Sept. 14. The denial by Rudyard Kipling that he expressed any such sentiments towards the United States as reported in an interview in the New York World by Clare Sheridan, has but served to redouble the fury with which that paper is attacking him. Kipling was quoted as saying that the United States entered the war late, and forced a premature peace. He was also quoted as saying with reference to the United States "they have got the gold of the world, but we have saved our souls." The World to-day refuses to accept the flat denial made by Kipling. The New York American, a Hearst publication, makes anti-British capital out of the matter. The Tribune attacks the World for what it terms "such a reckless and senseless perversion of the truth as it is now printing." The Wall Street Journal attributes the attack to the nearness of the elections. Events should have removed the necessity for catering to the Anti-British Irish vote, it says, yet it appears such is not the case.

MAY BE NO CHALLENGER.

GLOUCESTER, Sept. 14. The action of the Nova Scotia trustees of the International Fishermen's vessel trophy, in again barring the fisherman Mayflower, of Boston, from participating in the championship races, may result in no challenge being made from the United States a member of the American Race Committee was quoted as saying to-day.

EXECUTIONER ABSENT.

ST. JOHN, Sept. 14. The execution of Benjie, 50, who murdered his former sweetheart and her husband near Woodstock last spring, which was set for to-morrow, has been postponed until October 4th, owing to the failure of the hangman to keep his appointment.

ALLAN ON PAROLE.

MONTREAL, Sept. 14. The trial of Sir Montague Allan, former president of the Merchants Bank of Canada, was this morning fixed for to-morrow, for September 15th. Sir Montague was released on personal parole.

REBELS LOSE TOWN.

CORK, Sept. 14. Kenmare, in County Kerry, has been recaptured by the Nationalists from the rebels who took the town last Saturday when they surprised the garrison in the early hours of the morning, according to a wireless from Kenmare.

Obituary.

GEORGE MILLS.

The community received a shock a week ago when it learned that Mr. John Mills was in receipt of a message from St. John's acquainting him of the serious condition of his son, George at the General Hospital, and the subsequent message of the 4th inst. informing him of his death. George entered that institution early in May suffering from a bad leg, and while other means were being tried with no apparent success, we were hoping that amputation would at last prove successful. Evidently the disease had gone too far and after suffering from meningitis for a fortnight during which time his mother was with him, the end came. George was a promising boy of 15. He entered for Preliminary Grade in 1921 and 1922 and in both years on account of illness could not attend the examinations. Just at the time when his life was beginning to show the promise of the life of the community when he seemed to fill a place well and to create an influence for good, he was taken and we mourn his early death. The high hopes that have been dashed to the ground the promising earthly career ended so soon, the flower that gave promise of sweet fragrance blighted and withered in the morning are things that we cannot yet clearly interpret; but sometimes we expect to see that after all God's way was best. His remains were sent home for interment and on the Thursday following, in the beautiful little cemetery by the hillside theasket covered with wreaths, expressive of much sympathy, was lowered into the grave. Rev. W. W. Cotton officiating. The Sunday School, of which he was a devoted member, gathered round the grave and after each member had thrown in his sprig of evergreen, emblem of remembrance, they sang "Looking this way." Much sympathy is felt for the sorrowing parents and sisters and brother in their bereavement.

Inquiry Into

used to see her centre board come out of the water. It was blowing a strong breeze and a lot of three or four feet, but she was alright when she passed her. I returned to my boat at Manuels at 11.30 p.m. Before going I went to the telephone station and phoned the Inspector Hamilton and asked him if he would make arrangements for a motor boat to go out the next morning and he said he had arranged with the Minister of Shipping to send a steamer. So far as I know the steamer "Pawnee" came across from Carbonear at 2 a.m. and took on board Mr. Isaac LeDrew, James McKay and Captain Crow. James McKay had a motor boat and went out cruising around. When William Smith reported the matter to me he left and went to his boat. He told me he had no idea of going out to the scene of the accident. The wind was about southwest and cloudy, and the sun used to shine out sometimes. There was a strong breeze of wind blowing especially at the time of the accident. As far as I could see when standing on the beach there was a boat off in the Bay. It was a long boat near the Talville Stores and the nearest telegraph office is Manuels station, which is about a mile distant. The first thing that came to my mind after Smith reporting the matter of the accident to me was to go to Fox Trap, where I could get the windward, where I knew I could get a boat to run off before the wind would be able to go off from Manuels as I should have to beat to the windward. The reason why I did not go to the telegraph office at Manuels to report the matter was because Smith did not tell me that the boat was upset, he said she was in distress, and besides I would be losing time in trying to get a boat. By going off from Fox Trap before the wind, if we could get back we could bring up in Luce Cove or Bell Island pier. I do not know what kind of boats they were at Manuels. I had been three years bank fishing and in my opinion there was too much wind for ordinary fishing boats to go off from Fox Trap that day. There would not be too much wind, in my opinion, for Butler's boat at Fox Trap to go out to the scene of the accident, but there would be too much wind to come back. It would not be necessary to have the engine in working order to go out provided she had sail. There are some large cabin skiffs at Fox Trap, but they were hauled up on the bank having been hauled over the beach wind in my opinion, for the fact that it would be possible to launch one of these cabin boats provided you had a crowd of men, but these boats did neither sails nor oars and they had not been used since cabin seas, and the owners of some of these boats lived two or three miles away where they kept their gear. I have been out in a dory with a much wind and lap as there was that day. I would have gone out to the scene of the accident if I could get anyone to go out with me. I did all I possibly could to get someone to go out with me. There is no telegraph station between Manuels railway station and Kelligrews and I could not report the matter by telegraph until I got to Kelligrews. At the time of the accident the only boat at Kelligrews that was capable of going out to the scene of the accident was the one owned by William LeDrew, that is so far as I know. You could not go out in that boat unless the engine was working, as she was not provided with sails or oars and it would be necessary to have the engine working when you go to the scene of the accident in order to cruise around. These motor boats as a rule, are not provided with rowlocks and they depend upon the engine entirely. There are several men by the name of Greenish living at Long Pond and one of them did have a motor boat this spring, but I heard the engine was taken out of her early this summer and has not been replaced since. As I know, at the time of the accident it never came to my mind about his boat. At a meeting of the time of the accident I did not know he had a boat. It is since the accident I learned he has a boat. As far as I know no one went out in a boat to the scene of the accident on Saturday. A boat going out from Manuels would have to beat to the westward, and in my opinion there was too much wind for an ordinary fishing boat to go out. I did not know Mr. Anderson or Mr. Southgate. I never saw the boat that Mr. Anderson and Mr. Southgate were drowned from. I do not know that William Smith reported the matter to the operator at Manuels. The operator is the Winnie Duff of Topsail. She informed me that he reported the matter to her between 1.40 and 1.45 p.m. on August 14th. In my opinion there was nothing I could have done that day as regards reporting the matter by telegraph or getting a boat to go out to the scene of the accident other than I did. William Smith, of Manuels, lives about a mile and a half from my house and I cannot understand why he did not make some effort towards saving the men's lives instead of coming to me as he was losing valuable time and could do more than I could, as he had been there under his control and he knew more about the matter than I did, and had also witnessed the accident. I cannot understand the conduct of the two men Butler, the owners of the motor boat at Fox Trap, in not coming to the beach when I sent for them and they knowing that an accident had occurred and their brother William J. Butler had witnessed it. In making my investigation regarding this matter, I found that amongst others William James Kennedy of Long Pond witnessed the accident, and that he was standing near his house on the beach at the time the accident occurred. Mr. Kennedy has been a fisherman all his lifetime. I understand that Albert Smith of Manuels also witnessed the accident. That is all the information I can give on this matter.

Improvements Wanted
at St. Joseph's.

Editor Evening Telegram.
Dear Sir:--A mass meeting was held at St. Joseph's, Salmonier, to protest against the treatment we are receiving as regards the public service. Our principal grievances are roads, Ferry, and the lack of steam communication. Our roads are in a deplorable state, being scarcely safe to drive over. They require at least $4000.00 to put them in perfect repair. The Ferry which was the greatest convenience to the people of Salmonier while making her regular three round trips per day from the public wharf, and calling at various points has now been changed to a few trips per day, across the Arm from Mt. Carmel to King's Landing a distance of less than half a mile, and for which the contractor is receiving a salary of $1000.00 per annum or to be more accurate $1000.00 per six months as the Arm at this point is frozen over for six months of the year. This change of service is a disgrace and an insult to the intelligence of the people of Salmonier. With regard to steam communication, we are the most isolated people in the Dominion.

We may say the coastal boat was practically the only means of communication with the city and since the S.S. Portia was taken off the city means we had of getting to the city was over twenty-eight miles of a road which would be a disgrace to our forefathers one hundred years ago. We strongly protest against such treatment and demand that the Government put back the Ferry on her former schedule viz. three round trips daily from the Public Wharf calling at the various places and if the contractor cannot give this service for $1000.00 give him his former salary of 1800.00 and give us an efficient service. Otherwise put the contractor and see if the service cannot be done for $1000.00.

We also demand the instant sum of $4000.00 to put our roads in perfect repair. We say insignificant advisedly when we consider the cost of the motor road from the head of Salmonier to Placentia, and we also demand a steamship service twice a month regularly. We trust the Government will accede to these just demands and give us a square deal.

Signed on behalf of the people of St. Joseph's, Salmonier,
JOHN NORRIS,
P. J. McCORMACK,
RICHARD GOUGH.

Brilliant Titles in C. B. DeMille Photoplay.

THEY SERVE TO MAKE "THE AFFAIRS OF ANATOL" ONE OF SEASON'S BEST PICTURES.

Subtitles of epicrammatic brilliance are taken for granted in a Cecil B. DeMille production following the high mark set by the subtitles in "Way Change Your Wife," "Something to Think About," and "Whidder Fruit." However, "The Affairs of Anatol," the latest production of the famous producer which will be the feature at the Nickel Theatre next Monday, is said to excel all previous efforts in this respect.

Jeanie Macpherson, author of the story--suggested by Arthur Schnitzler's play of the same name--is responsible for these subtitles and for her goes the credit for their scintillating phraseology, thought and wit. "The Affairs of Anatol" is a searching analysis of the matrimonial and divorce problem handled with the mastery which is Cecil B. DeMille's chief distinction. He has developed a powerful story that deals in real truths, it is said, and to this he has added a sympathetic comedy note that serves to relieve the serious vein of the story without in any way detracting from the power of vividness of the central theme. Wallace Reid and Gloria Swanson head an all-star cast in this picture.

The effect of these subtitles is materially increased by the symbolic art work which decorates them. This art work is from the brush of Paul Iribe, the famous French artist and designer, who is now serving as art director for Cecil B. DeMille productions. His color on the screen is secured by the quadri-color process which is the exclusive property of Paramount Pictures and which has been developed under the direction of Lorin Taylor.

Turkish Forces Near Constantinople.

British Officials Reported Murdered in Smyrna—Fierce Fighting in Dublin.

ALL SMYRNA BLAZING.
SMYRNA, Sept. 15.—The fire which started in the Armenian quarter of Smyrna early yesterday afternoon has spread this morning to the Turkish sections of the city and was making rapid headway. The entire European section is in ashes and countless thousands are homeless. A United States destroyer sailed for Saloniki with a hundred refugees and another later cleared for Piraeus with four hundred persons.

FIGHTING IN DUBLIN.
BELFAST, Sept. 15.—Forces of the irregulars this morning attempted to seize various strategic points on the southern section of Dublin, according to despatches received here. The places attacked including Wellington and Portobello Barracks, the Telephone Exchange and the King's Bridge Station of the great Southern and Western Railway. Firing was particularly heavy and continued for three hours. Despatches make no mention of casualties.

TURKS NEAR CONSTANTINOPLE.
CONSTANTINOPLE, Sept. 15.—The Turkish Nationalist Army is now within thirty-five miles of Constantinople. The population is in a state of nervous tension and the entire city is rife with rumors about Mustapha Kemal Pasha's designs upon the capital. Rodosto and other points on the sea of Marmora are choked with refugees who are arriving by tens of thousands.

CABINET SUMMONED.
LONDON, Sept. 15.—The British Cabinet has been summoned for this afternoon with the principle object of discussing the near eastern tangle.

WARNING TO TURKS.
LONDON, Sept. 15.—The Admiral commanding the British squadron at Smyrna has warned the Turkish Authorities in that city that if massacres are continued the Turkish quarters will be bombarded, says an Exchange telegraph despatch from Athens. A Greek official Greek message from Athens says it is alleged that Turks carried off all the girls from the American girls school in Smyrna.

BRITISHERS MURDERED BY TURKS.
A United States destroyer arriving at Piraeus, reports that Turks entered the British consulate at Smyrna and murdered an official there, says a Reuter despatch. Postmaster Wilkinson is also said to have been murdered as well as other British nationals.

THE REAL SPORT.
It's easy to laugh when the battle's fought
And you know that the victory's won;
Yes, easy to laugh when the prize you sought
Is yours when the game is done;
But here's to the man who can laugh
When the blast of adversity blows;
Of adversity blows; he will conquer

For the hardest man in the world to beat

CHAMPIONSHIP GAME MONDAY.
It has been decided that the B.I.S. and Cadets will again play off on Monday evening. The game will start promptly at 8.15 with Referee Hunt in charge. Madigan, the star Cadet player, is out of the game for keeps, as the X Ray at the Hospital yesterday showed a fractured fibula about three inches above the right ankle, which is now encased in plaster-of-paris. How he managed to stick in the game on Wednesday night and play as hard as he did, is evoking the wonder and admiration of the medical fraternity. He will be replaced on Monday evening by Charles Spurrell, who, though out of the game for two seasons, has lost none of his old time speed. Dr. Fox is suffering from a broken nose, but it is likely that he will be able to play with the B.I.S. Burke's condition is such that it is thought that the five day's treatment at the General Hospital will condition him sufficiently for the final clash.

A GOOD IDEA.
In order to avoid congestion at the gate on Monday evening, the Football League has very wisely decided to issue general admission tickets which will be on sale to-morrow at the following centres:—Cash's, Trainor's, Wadden's, Peddigrav's, O'Mara's, (Rawlin's Cross). All ticket holders will be admitted by the big gate, but as no money will be received there it behoves all those who are wise to purchase their tickets before hand and thus avoid being held up in the

"KILTIES" RE-ORGANIZE THEIR CORPS.
The Newfoundland Highlanders have lately established themselves in new quarters and the work of re-organizing the corps and putting it on a sound basis is progressing rapidly. There are now over 130 of all ranks and drill is proceeding regularly.

The Brigades' new quarters are in the old Parade Bink which is being turned into a well-equipped and comfortable armory. The corps will be equipped with new uniforms which will consist of the Gordon Glenngarry, kilt, and hose tops, with regulation army khaki tunics and spats. The new uniforms will arrive on the next steamer. The present officers of the corps are Lieut.-Col. L. Paterson, M.D., Officer Commanding; Major Will H. Herder, Second in Command; Capt. Hector Ross, Adjutant; Capt. W. Angus Reid and Harold Mitchell, O.C. Companies; Capt. Hector McNeil, Quartermaster; Capt. G. Oke, Pa-

Nascopie from Baffin Land.

BRINGS LIVE POLAR BEAR.

S.S. Nascopie, Capt. Smellie, arrived in port this morning after a summer's trip to the Hudson Bay posts. The Nascopie left Port Burwell, Ungava Bay, on Monday last coming direct. A splendid passage was made despite foggy weather. The ship brought along some 12 passengers, amongst whom are some of the H.B.C. post managers who are returning to civilization after an absence of from four to five years. The passage to St. John's was made very enjoyable and amongst the items which contributed to make it interesting was a sweepstake arranged by 3rd officer Watts. Last year the Nascopie brought a herd of reindeer for the northern country, and also six Eskimoes with their wives and families. One of the Laps and the wives and children of the others are being brought back to their native land, and they were an object of curiosity to a large number of people who visited the ship. The reindeer are reported to be doing well in their new home, but they suffered some casualties during last winter. The ship has as a mascot a live polar bear about six months old and it proved an attraction for quite a number of boys who were kindly allowed on board ship to see it. The animal is being shipped to Canada. The Nascopie will proceed direct to England with her valuable cargo of furs, etc. She left Montreal early in July for the Hudson Bay posts and although so late in the season many of the posts could not be approached on account of ice.

How Glass Falls Sick.

Until recently glass was thought to be the most enduring of all substances. Iron, steel, and other metals are destroyed by rust; rocks crumble away under the action of weather, but glass was affected by none of these destroying forces.

But not long ago an alarming discovery was made. The electric street light glass windows of York Minister, many of which are six centuries old, were found to be in a sad state. Some unknown disease had attacked the glass, causing it to flake away until it became as thin as paper. Prompt measures were taken, and the old windows were saved by covering them with protecting sheets of plain glass. Then it was found that other cathedrals in various parts of the country were suffering in the same way. The mysterious disease was rapidly eating away their old windows. No one knows for certain the cause of the acid contained in soot, of which the air of our modern towns is always full.

Here and There.
SAPPER SAILS.—S. S. Canadian Sapper sailed for Montreal this afternoon taking two passengers, Messrs. M. J. Kean and R. B. LeDrew.
FISH AT LAMALINE.—A message to the Marine and Fisheries Department from C. C. Pittman gives the approximate catch for the district as 20,000 quintals. The message adds that there is splendid fishing to be had when bait is procurable.

More Criticism.
Sports Editor, "Telegram."
Your strictures last evening on the disgraceful bungling of the League in handling the grandstand on Wednesday evening were not only timely but very much to the point. Why a bunch of jackpots and older ones who should know better, should be permitted to deliberately stand up in front of ladies and children who had paid for seats and possessed their souls in patience for a whole hour previous to the game, and obstruct their view is decidedly not good enough. Surely the genial secretary, who I note is always on the job, should be able to decide when a sufficient number of persons have been let on the stand, and then stop the sale of tickets. I would like to point out to Mr. Harris that no one has any objection to enthusiasts sitting on the touch lines, but certainly no one should be allowed to either stand up or sit on the small fence in front of the grandstand. A police officer is all that is required. Get busy, please, and give us a chance to see the play-off.

WHY NOT ENVY YOURSELF!

"How I envy the R-R!" I heard a woman say the other day. "They have a lovely home and with that money she never need to worry about it." The lady, because it had been a breath of confidence, but I happen to know that they are not perfectly happy. On the contrary, they are not satisfied with their lovely home because they wish they had chosen another location. The lady who has inherited money is not happy. And though they are both fond of music they are not of each other's ability. Finally she wants her mother to come and live with them and she isn't willing to have her mother stay in the little house just a few of the little obstacles that stand between them and happiness. The very same kind of obstacle you and I have had experience with. And yet these people seem to be perfectly happy.

The Eternal Will of the Wisp.

Happiness is a will of the wisp. It is over there to the right, if it is just beyond you. It is in your neighbor's garden, it is everywhere but here. You are sure you could be perfectly happy if . . . You know someone else must be perfectly happy. And all the time someone else is doubtless envying you and thinking you perfectly happy. And perhaps someday you will be envying yourself as you were when you thought you could be perfectly happy if . . .

Cheer-Up, They Aren't.
 A cynic has said that half the unhappiness in the world comes from envying that other people are happier than we are.
 Cheer up, they aren't!
 And again, cheer up. They think you are.
 Someone is envying you this very moment, your home or your husband or your children or your job, or your freedom, or your talent, or your health, or your career. And perhaps someday you will be envying yourself. How much better it would be if you forestalled that and envied yourself right now.

Joining Wool.

Wool may be joined quite easily without tying a knot in this way. Thread the end of the piece being knitted through a darning needle. Now take the new piece and run the needle right through the middle of the new wool, carrying the needle thru for several stitches. Finally pull the needle right out at one side and cut off the wool closely, and you will have an excellent joint.
 During Dr. Jones' absence his surgery at Avondale will be attended every Wednesday. Parties desiring the visiting Doctor to call at their homes will please have their calls in before noon on that day.—aug22,St.J

Wedding Bells.

MED—ASTBURY.

St. Andrew's Chapel, St. Thomas's Church, was the scene of a very pretty little wedding on Monday evening last, the contracting parties being Mr. Charles Bird, of Cartwright, Labrador, and Miss Amy Astbury, formerly of Liverpool, England. Both bride and groom have been for the past two years connected with the Labrador Public School, the former as Matron and the latter as Outside Manager. The officiating clergyman was the Rev. Henry Gordon, M.A., Missionary at Cartwright and Warden of the School. The bride was given away by Captain Major, his daughter, Miss Oliver Major, being bridesmaid, with Mrs. Gordon as matron of honor. The best man was Mr. Stanley Lindsay, of Montreal, brother of the late Mrs. Marguerite Lindsay who recently disappeared under such tragic circumstances and who was closely associated with the bride in the work of the school. The wedding reception was held at the residence of Captain Major, among the guests being Mrs. Earp, Rev. H. and Mrs. Gordon, Mr. and Mrs. Haviland and two teachers at the school now here on furlough—Miss Bright and Miss McKenney. The bridegroom is a native of Labrador but has lived some years in Canada, while the bride, who is a trained nurse, came out from England two years ago. Mr. Gordon speaks very highly of them both and states that they have been of invaluable assistance to him in connection with the school. The happy couple left by the Meigs for their future home, taking with them the best wishes of many friends in St. John's.

Why Everyone Seems Better off Than we are.

Life has a shop, and into it we all rush, headlong, intent upon buying the biggest bargain that we can get for our money. And most of us come out dissatisfied and weary, having spent our gold, and having bought dross for it.
 Some of us choose wealth, or success, or careers, or position. We all ignore the humble little portions that life itself would mete out to us, and which alone are life's best.
 There is not one of us who do not look with pitying eyes upon our own portion, saying: "If we had been so and so," "If we had their chances," or "their start!"
 What we never realize is that there are people, and plenty of them, who are comparing our own individual lots with theirs, and finding ours the more favorable.
 We all have very similar chances, although some of us are too blind to see them, some too deaf to hear, and a very great many too feeble to grasp them.
 Other people's destinies will always seem better than our own, simply because we do not realize the skeletons in their cupboards. We know our own skeletons too well, and dwell on them far too much.

 Life's biggest bargain, without a doubt, is that of a contented mind, and life is perfectly willing to sell it to us one and all, if only we will buy. But we won't.
 Because we are always out for what we think are the bigger bargains, because we are so eager to grasp the bigger things in life, we scorn the smaller things, and therefore lose what are, in reality, the greater.
 The small workman, in his tiny dwelling, though he may be poor, and he is unpretentious, though life has apparently denied him its greatest roses, has more, far more, than the millionaire in his castle—if he has only that priceless gift of all, contentment.
 And it is in the grasp of us all. Life is perfectly willing to give it to us, it is ourselves who are to blame.

The Camel-Walk.

Officially called the "American Walk"—unofficially the "camel walk"—a straightforward walk, without a wriggle or a shake, is the dance step for London for the coming season, says the London Evening News.
 It is presumed to have been brought over by the army of American visitors this summer. Paris has been doing it since June, and London is quickly following its slow, fascinating march-glide. It is danced to fox-trot music and is, indeed, a development of the fox-trot.

QUEENS OF LOVE.

Josephine, Who Awoke Undying Love in the Heart of the Great Napoleon.

(Pearson's Weekly.)

A woman with the manners of a kitten and the morals of a cat—that is how Josephine, the woman who fascinated Napoleon Bonaparte, has been described.

Not a clever nor a beautiful woman, Josephine was one of the most fascinating women who ever lived, won love, but gambled with it, and, like most gamblers, she lost.

Josephine was born in the Island of Martinique, in the West Indies, in a hot, moist climate, where white people are obliged to live a more or less languorous existence, and which causes women to develop more rapidly than in any other part of the world.

She fell in love when she was only ten years of age, and although one might smile at this, and put it down to foolish "puppy love," the great fact stands out that Josephine never forgot. She always cherished most tenderly the memory of her boy lover.

He was an English lad, the son of an exiled royalist, William by name, but the surname remains a mystery. He is always written as "William de K." For three years these two children loved each other in idyllic fashion. They were happy, but Josephine's parents were watching, and they did not intend that their daughter should make the mistake of marrying a nobody, for as such they regarded William de K. Exactly what happened we do not know, except that the boy had to go away, and with tearful eyes and grief-stricken hearts these two children held each other's hands and swore to be true.

Josephine meant it. Her rebellious little heart beat fast, and she swore to her English lover that she would wait for him, and he swore to return to her and make her his bride.

He meant it, too. He was loyal to Josephine all his life, and he never forgot his first and only love.

Josephine, alas! believed him false, for she never received his impassioned letters, pleading with her to remember their idyll. They were all intercepted by Josephine's mother.

Madame was planning for her daughter to marry the son of the Marquis de Beauharnais, who had been Governor of Martinique. The Marquis was a courtly old gentleman. In his veins flowed some of the bluest blood of France, but he was poor—like many more of the old nobility of that time—and the parents of Josephine were rich. So the "marriage of convenience" pleased all—except poor little sixteen-year-old Josephine. Alexander de Beauharnais was of very good birth and education, a man of very different calibre from Josephine. He was clever, and, after the rather brilliant women of Paris, with whom he had been accustomed to mix, there is no doubt that he found Josephine a welcome change.

She, however, having really loved, hated the idea of marrying him, but, like a well-brought-up daughter of France of that period, the idea of disobeying her parents never entered her head. She obeyed—as all French girls were trained to do—especially in the matter of marriage. It is fortunate for young girls of France that to-day conditions are changing!

Then William returned to the island, wondering why he had not heard from his girl-sweetheart. To his dismay he found she was betrothed to another man. The lovers met, Josephine discovered how her mother had intercepted William's letters, but this did not alter her. Her boy lover pleaded, caressed, cajoled, but all in vain. She was a French girl; she must obey her parents. That was final.

He never saw her again, after he left Martinique broken-hearted, but William never forgot her—and never allowed himself to lose touch with her. When, years afterwards, he heard she was dying, the English lover hastened to her side to say good-bye to the one love of his life, but he arrived too late.

The girl was married soon afterwards, and went with her husband to Paris—which made a very welcome change to her after her island home. The city of luxury filled her with delight, and, as is usual with those who have lived in lonely places all through early life, she quickly became very extravagant. She flattered about, a gay butterfly, loving ease and luxury; and the young officer, finding that his brother officers admired his young wife, admired her all the more himself. Josephine had a way of attracting attention and holding it. Her father-in-law, the old marquis, became her devoted slave, her mother-in-law loved her, and the young Alexander thought he saw in Josephine a woman who would help him rise in life.

But Josephine was like a cat. She adored ease, loved to bask in the sunshine, and was not at all inclined to exert herself. So when her husband outlined his plans and thought to win her aid, she merely smiled and held her peace. She was not going to exert herself to lift her man to power, she might be a seductive woman, but she was inclined to use her arts only for her own ends.

So the two drifted apart, as they were bound to do, having nothing in common, and with no love to bind them. And Alexander began to neglect his home and his wife.

The old marquis was indignant at his son's conduct, and, later on, when Alexander added insult to injury by accusing Josephine of faithlessness, her father-in-law espoused her cause. And rightly, for Josephine had been a faithful wife. But Alexander had grown tired of her, and finally, after he had vainly tried to establish legal proceedings against her, Josephine returned to Martinique.

Back there she thought wistfully of her childhood's love, but all was in vain now, and she had to make the best of her broken life.

News from France reached her after a time—swift news. The Revolution had begun. Paris was gay Paris no longer. It was bathed in blood. The awful guillotine was at work, and anyone with noble blood was not likely to escape its knife. De Beauharnais was of blue blood, and Josephine felt a shadow of fear creep over her as she heard what was happening. For although he had been a bad husband, he was still her husband.

In Paris Alexandre looked back over the annals of his past and was very sorry for the way he had treated his wife. Perhaps Alexandre felt he was doomed. At all events, he wrote a pathetic plea to Josephine for forgiveness and a reconciliation. She had suffered but she hurried back to France to stand by his side as his wife. She was helpless to save him, however, and he perished by the guillotine in 1794.

Those were dreadful days. A fury, a thirst for blood, possessed the mind of the people, who had revolted after years of oppression. Thousands of suspected persons were crowded into prisons, and every afternoon, carts laden with unhappy men and women, who had been condemned for imaginary offences, trundled along the street to the place of death.

Josephine herself only narrowly escaped, but, being a woman, and possessed of charm, and a knowledge of how to fascinate men, she was saved, and her new life began. She tasted all the full, yet life was never safe in those hazardous times, even when the life of a woman depended on the whim of a man who held himself to be a patriot.

But reaction came at last. France turned. The leaders of the revolution were sent to the scaffold, and the reign of terror ended. Napoleon Bonaparte, "the little general," was made Commandant of Paris. He ordered disarmament; and all citizens were bound to give up every weapon they possessed. Amongst the rest came young Eugene de Beauharnais, son of Josephine, carrying the sword of his dead father, to whom he had been deeply attached.

The Corsican commandant, who had his romantic side, saw the lad's tears as he gave up his father's sword, and understood. He gave back the sword, and "by special order of the commandant" young Eugene was allowed to keep it.

Next day Josephine came in person. The Corsican commandant, who had immediately fell in love with her. She, worldly wise by this time, sated with so-called men's love; weary of caresses, but calculating to the last degree, saw that she had awakened passion in this man, and although she did not return that passion, she pretended to care, and she managed to deceive Napoleon into believing his love was returned. Their marriage took place before a Paris registrar on March 9th, 1796, and Josephine found herself the wife of one of the greatest men the world has ever known.

To him Josephine seemed the sweetest and most desirable of women, beautiful and true. He was in love, deeply, passionately in love, and his letters to her breathe devotion in every line. Written by the camp fire, when absent from her, they reveal a strong man's love, wonderful, compelling, fiery, yet very tender. He was a great man—one of the greatest who ever lived—and what he might have been and what he might have done had he had a good woman to help him one can only vaguely surmise.

It is true he forgave her everything and she was crowned Empress of the French, but he was a bitterly disillusioned man, and he never forgot. Then Josephine began to understand the greatness of his nature, the splendour of his passion. Too late she learned to love the man she had played with all these years. He had to choose between dreams of Empire and the woman he loved, and Napoleon chose Empire.

Josephine had borne him no child, and Napoleon needed an heir to carry the name.
