CHAPTER VII.

"Then that settles the business, I should think," he said, with a covert sneer. "We couldn't think of intrusting important work to an amateur."

"I am scarcely an amateur," said Gerald, addressing the father. "I have done work and been paid for it. That removes me from the category of amateur, does it not?"

"What work?" asked Mr. Sapley.

Gerald mentioned his jalls and other buildings.

"Abroad, on the other side of the world!" said Mordaunt, lunging against the window and eyeing Gerald with an affectation of contempt.

"Have you done nothing in England?" asked Mr. Sapley.

"Nothing," said Gerald, quietly.

Mr. Sapley's face grew clearer, and his manner a little more pompous.

"I am afraid that we could scarcely give you the commission under the circumstances," he said. "We have

"Very good," said Gerald, and he rose. "I think you're acting quite reasonably and I don't complain of it. I am much obliged to you for having given me the chance. Good-night, gentlemen."

Mr. Sapley rubbed his chin and glanced at him hesitatingly, but did not speak and Gerald had nearly reached the door when it opened and Claire stood on the threshold. She looked very tall and statuesque in her white frock, and Gerald, as he drew back slightly, felt his heart give one throb of admiration. She looked from one to the other, then bowed to him. He noticed that she did not give him her hand.

"Good-morning," she said, calmly. "Is the business finished already?" and she looked inquiringly at Mr. Sapley.

"It is," Miss Sartoris, said Gerald, with a faint smile, which did not conceal his disappointment. "Mr. Sapley does not consider that I have experience, enough for this work—whatever it is, and I have no right to complain of his decision. It was very kind of you—him; he corrected himself quickly, "to send for me."

A faint color rose to Claire's face as she stepped into the room and stood by the table.

"There must be some mistake," she said, and she looked at Mr. Sapley with the expression of reserve which almost amounted to hauteur. "Have you told Mr. Wayne what is necessary to be done, what it required?"

Mr. Sapley drew his beetle brows and glanced at him hesitatingly, but did not speak and Gerald had nearly reached the door when it opened and Claire stood on the threshold. She looked very tall and statuesque in her white frock, and Gerald, as he drew back slightly, felt his heart give one throb of admiration. She looked from one to the other, then bowed to him. He noticed that she did not give him her hand.

"Good-morning," she said, calmly. "Is the business finished already?" and she looked inquiringly at Mr. Sapley.

"It is," Miss Sartoris, said Gerald, teration, repair!" she said, half interrogatively. "Had you not better see it before you decide?" and she turned to him.

"I shall be very pleased," replied Gerald.

"Very well, then!" she said, with a woman's impatience and impulsiveness. "It would be better for us to go and see it instead of wasting time talking of preliminaries."

Mr. Sapley's face darkened for a moment, then put on his obsequious smile.

"A very good suggestion, Miss Sartoris," he said. "I was just about to make it when you came in; but Mr. Wayne caught me up, so to speak. We will go and see the wing at once. This way, Mr. Wayne."

Claire passed out of the room, but paused in the hall.

"I will go with you," she said, and she went up the stairs for her hat.

The three men went out, Mr. Mordaunt—at whom Claire had not even glanced, bringing up the rear and eyeing the back of Gerald's head and beautiful-fitting riding suit, and as he regarded himself and compared his clothes with Gerald's well-worn ones he was filled with an amazed resentment that Claire should have bestowed all her attention on this stranger and left Mr. Mordaunt Sapley unnoticed. Who was the fellow? and why was she so friendly toward him? Why didn't she let the beggar take himself off?

"This is the wing," said Mr. Sapley, acidly, and pointing to it with a claw-like finger.

"It is a very fine specimen of early English," said Gerald.

"Yes," assented Mr. Sapley, insolently. "And ought not to be spoiled by ignorant patching."

"You are right," said Gerald, cheerfully, as he examined the weak places. I should think a great portion of it—from the window, say—ought to come down and be rebuilt. The old plan might be even improved upon."

Mr. Mordaunt sneered.

"That would require a first-class architect," he said.

Gerald nodded with a pleasant frankness, which was more indicative of his contempt for Mr. Mordaunt's opinion than any words could have been.

"Quite true," he said. "The question is—whether I am architect enough?"

As he spoke Claire came down the terrace and joined them.

"Well," she said, addressing no one of them in particular; but Gerald turned to her.

"A greater part of this wing should be rebuilt, Miss Sartoris," he said. "I cannot say how much until I have made a minute examination. I will do so if you wish, and I will make the drawing of the rebuilding I should recommend. If you approve of the plan, and desire to employ me, I shall be glad to do the work. If not—Well, there is no harm done, and Mr. Sapley can send for an architect of repute. There are plenty who would be delighted with such a commission as this."

He spoke pleasantly and frankly, but his tone was quite different to that with which he had talked to her two mornings ago. It was as if he wished to mark the difference between them, to indicate that he was sensible of the fact that she was his employer and he her servant.

Claire kept her eyes fixed on the building. She noticed the alteration in his manner.

"That is a very fair offer, Mr. Sapley."

"Oh, very fair," he assented, eagerly. "You bind yourself to nothing, of course, Miss Sartoris."

"Of course!" said Gerald, emphatically.

"It does not sound quite fair, after all," said Claire, still looking at the building. "If I should not like the plans, Mr. Wayne will have had all his work for nothing."

"I shall be quite content," said Gerald, quickly. "Frankly, I am hoping you will like the plans; anyway, I shall be delighted to seize the opportunity of studying the old work."

Mr. Sapley brows went up and down.

"Then that is settled!" he said, dryly.

"Yes," said Mordaunt, with his Oxford drawl. "Perhaps Mr. Wayne will have no objection to putting his proposal in writing."

The color rose to Claire's face and she seemed about to speak quickly, but before she could do so Gerald said:

Sir Edmund Gosse Reviews Recent Work of Dr. A. C. Hunter

PROFESSOR OF MEMORIAL COLLEGE DEALS WITH FRENCH AUTHOR SUARD.

The leading literary article in the Sunday Times (London), Nov. 29th, is a review from the pen of the great critic, Sir Edmund Gosse, of a recent book by Dr. A. C. Hunter, of the Memorial College. This book, written in French, deals with a French literary man of the 18th Century, Suard, who was instrumental in introducing English literature and thought to the French people of that time by his translations and writings. The reviewer begins by saying: "English literary history has been ungrateful to Suard, whose name has hitherto scarcely appeared in this country. At last a competent scholar, whose name suggests that he is at least of English extraction, has produced an exhaustive monograph of this remarkable and strangely neglected man."

"His biographer does not present Suard to us as a great writer. Mr. Hunter's moderation errs, if at all, in the opposite direction, since Suard was a remarkable person. For one thing, the immense length of his life, and his proficiency in authorship make him a link between the old world and the new; he stretches from Fontenelle to Alfred de Vigny, which sounds incredible. His private history during those long years was colourless and uneventful, with the exception of one great purple patch at the commencement. Jean Baptiste Antoine Suard was born at Besancon, on January 16, 1733; his father was secretary to the University. The young man was precocious in learning and athletics, and was preparing for the profession of a lawyer when the startling thing happened.

"He was only sixteen years of age and, for all we know, of the most harmless disposition, but he had a rowdy friend who quarrelled with an officer of the garrison; there was a duel, in which Suard was his friend's second and the officer was severely wounded. They thought he was dead, and they fled to the Swiss frontier, but Suard was caught and brought ignominiously back to Besancon. The wounded officer recovered, but unfortunately he turned out to be no less a person than the nephew of the Duc d'Angouleme, then 'War Minister,' and as Suard would not betray the name of the duellist who had escaped into Switzerland, the brunt of the fray fell upon him. He was pursued, poor fellow, as a criminal 'de la dernière escalade,' and condemned to imprisonment in the famous island of Salnte Marguerite. His family could do nothing against the revenge of a Royal favourite; he was hurried away to perpetual seclusion like some character in one of Dumas's novels.

"His solitude at first was complete; but presently the governor took pity on him, and allowed him two books; these were the Bible and Bayle's Dictionary, than which nothing better could have been suggested. Mr. Hunter unkindly suggests that the ignorance of the text of the Bible which Suard showed in later life proves that most of his study was given to Bayle. . . . One of his companions, 'an aristocratic brigand,' contrived to communicate with him, and seems to have suggested possibilities of escape, which, however, he achieved legitimately. After he had languished thirteen months in the Ile. Ste. Marguerite, he was allowed to leave the prison. We seem in this episode to be in full 'Monte Cristo,' but nothing sensational ever happened again to the sober and respectable Suard."

Suard went to Paris, learned English, and became a journalist. He translated Hume's works in part and devoted a good deal of attention to English poetry, by nature he was 'well adapted to appreciate and to interpret the funeral poetry of our country in the middle of the 18th century. Shakespeare and Milton were not quite unknown in France before 1750, and Pope, if little read, was respected. But Gray, Young, and Shenstone were still to be discovered, and they were discussed in the columns of the 'Gazette Littéraire,' which Suard conducted until 1766. He was also the first to introduce Ossian to the French.

"The career of Suard ceases to concern us after 1766. He lost his interest in English literature. . . . He was elected a member of the French Academy, and entered with assiduity into the business of that body. At the Revolution, he retired to a little country house he had bought at Pontenay-an-Rosay, and remained there till the end of the terror when, being denounced to the directors, he fled to Germany. In 1803 he came back to Paris as perpetual secretary to the reconstituted Academy. He died in 1817, almost unnoticed by a public which was too scornful of the bygone France to pay much respect to its last surviving representative."

WASHINGTON, Dec. 21. The House of Commons to-night approved the Government's Mosul policy in principle with only four adverse votes, the Prime Minister's motion seeking approval being adopted by 239 to 4. The Laborite members withdrew from the House after employing obstructionist tactics and obliging the Government to disarrange its business and delay prorogation by another day. In the course of his speech the Premier announced he would meet the Turkish ambassador to-morrow to begin negotiations covering the entire Mosul question.

MOSUL POLICY APPROVED.

LONDON, Dec. 21. The House of Commons to-night approved the Government's Mosul policy in principle with only four adverse votes, the Prime Minister's motion seeking approval being adopted by 239 to 4. The Laborite members withdrew from the House after employing obstructionist tactics and obliging the Government to disarrange its business and delay prorogation by another day. In the course of his speech the Premier announced he would meet the Turkish ambassador to-morrow to begin negotiations covering the entire Mosul question.

PEOPLE WHO LIVE IN GLASS HOUSES.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 22. Charge of "bad faith" was made by Great Britain to-day as the House opened an investigation of alleged manipulation of crude rubber by the British Colonial Government. The scope of investigations enlarged to include an enquiry into alleged monopolistic control of raw materials and including the clearance was taken of a "red" movement in Canada to have charge laid on the export of pulp.

ITALY NOT TO BECOME AN EMPIRE.

ROME, Dec. 21. A semi-official denial was given to-day to the report that plans were afoot to proclaim Italy an empire, according to the Stephan News Agency, which announced that it had been authorized to say the news was absolutely fantastic and spread with bad intentions.

THEN WHO WILL BE BLAMED?

LONDON, Dec. 22. A strong movement has been launched in England to supplement similar efforts made in France this summer to eliminate articles 231 and 227 from the Treaty of Versailles, articles in which Germany acknowledges her guilt for bringing on war, and which fix upon Germany the accusation of having committed offenses against international morality and the customs of war.

HEAVY FIGHTING IN CHINA.

LONDON, Dec. 21. After a twenty-four-hour artillery duel, ending Sunday night on Yangtun front, the fighting ceased, says the Daily Mail Correspondent with the Chinese armies. Feng Yu Hsiang, head of National People's army, apparently made a final attempt to force the positions held by the troops of General Li Chang Ling, Civil Governor of Chihli province, but failed. Feng losses are described as tremendous; the plains being covered by dead.

"Locked Doors" Has Strong Cast

BETTY COMPTON AND OTHERS IN FEATURED ROLES IN WILLIAM DE MILLE PRODUCTION.

In "Locked Doors," a farcical picture which comes to the Majestic Theatre to-night, William de Mille has assembled what at a glance proves the strongest cast that has ever appeared in any of his productions. Betty Compton, Theodore Roberts, Kathay Williams, Theodor von Eltz and Robert Edison are featured in the principal roles of the picture, which is a screen original by Clare Beranger.

Elmo Billings, eleven and freckled, has a prominent role in support of the principal players. The cast also includes James Winton of "Follies" fame and many others.

The story is one of a young wife of an architect, who is many years her senior. While fishing at a mountain lodge she meets and falls in love with a young fellow who later proves her husband's best friend.

Complications? That's not the half of it!

Note: The admission nightly is twenty cents. Matinee every afternoon this week when popular matinee prices will prevail.

Paper, Boards and Boxes From Waste Lumber

New uses found for shorts and scraps—the ordinary waste from lumber—promise to save thousand of dollars in the lumber industry. Recent experiments in Cloquet, Minn., a little town of forest-fire fame, have found value even in branches and tops of trees—everything down to three inches in thickness. Mills now burning lumber waste under their boilers, it is predicted, soon will look for less valuable fuel.

Three new ways have been found to utilize waste formerly considered not worth hauling away from the forests. These are the manufacture of a new kind of paper, balsam wool, and artificial boards.

The triumph in paper making was the discovery that poplar and Jack pine, thought unsuitable for this purpose, could be used for making bond and other grades of paper. Both kinds of trees have a natural reproduction, and a simple forestry scheme, it is claimed, will insure a perpetual supply of raw material for paper mills.

The leftovers from the paper mill in Cloquet are used to make balsam wool, a new fire-resistant insulating material. It can be supplied to houses, ice boxes, fireless cookers, refrigerator cars, and many other purposes.

When wood fiber is passed through the screen of a paper mill, a certain knotty substance, known as "rough screenings," will not go through. This mass of fiber, when used in the manufacture of balsam wool, is put through a sulphite process, fireproofed and ground. It is treated to give it adhesion, and finally is brought out in the form of a sheet of light insulating board.

Box factories, having discovered a way to cut tongue and grooves on small boards, now are turning to use many boards of sizes too small for filling in lumber yards, that is, material three inches in width or under, and from 12 to 47 inches in length. The boards are glued together to make boxes. A box factory in Cloquet now is using 11,000,000 feet of such shorts.

Mysterious Gift Arrives in Rain

RECTOR FINDS NEW GATES FOR HIS CHURCH ONE MORNING.

London.—People in the scattered village of Cold Worton, Essex, are puzzled over a mysterious gift to the church made by an unknown benefactor on a rainy day.

No one was more astonished than the rector, the Rev. F. L. F. Millard, who arrived at the church entrance to officiate at an early morning service, to find two handsome new gates erected in place of the old ones. "Well, this is a pleasant surprise," he said, almost abashed with astonishment.

The benefactor did his work quite openly in the broad daylight, but he chose a rainy day because he thought there would be few people about, and he also planned his surprise for a day on which the rector travelled to London.

Done in a Day.
"It seems some workmen came over from a neighboring village, removed the old gates and completed the job before dusk," the rector's wife said. "Our church council decided to try to raise the fund for the renewal of the gates, which had dated from about 1845, when the church was rebuilt."

"It is suggested that the person who made the gift intended the gates to be a memorial to a relative who lies in the churchyard. This is not the first anonymous gift to the church. Some time ago we received a cheque for £50 from an unknown donor."

The church stands a little off the beaten track about a mile from the rectory. The gates are stoutly built of Australian wood, beautifully panelled, and have massive bolts. Mrs. Millard stated that she and her husband now had an inkling as to the benefactor, but his secret would never be divulged.

Navy Man to Head Police

LONDON, England, Dec. 15.—The appointment of Captain Charles William Rawson Roys, R.N., who was a member of the late Robert Falcon Scott's first South Pole expedition party, as assistant Commissioner of the Metropolitan Police will certainly arouse some resentment among the 20,000 members of the force. Captain Roys has had a distinguished career in the Navy and is a gallant officer, but he has had no actual police experience.

Don't Put Too Much Faith in the Gyro Compass, Says PERT.

Washington, Dec. 16 (A.P.)—Development of the gyrocompass led "to a regrettable lack of understanding of the magnetic compass," says Captain Edwin T. Pollock, Superintendent of the Naval Observatory, in his annual report.

While not going into details of the question, the report referred to a "tendency" to neglect the magnetic compass as "a dangerous device."

"On the smaller vessels, such as destroyers and submarines, which are equipped with gyrocompasses," said, "there is a decided tendency to neglect the magnetic compass to place entire dependence on gyrocompasses. This is a dangerous practice from the navigational point of view and efforts are being made to improve this condition."

"Reports also show that some of the younger officers are not familiar with the deviation of the magnetic compasses and to correct this condition it is urged that more officers should take the course. The compass school at the Naval Observatory has been available at all times for officers desiring to take the compass course but during the fiscal year only one officer took the course and has partially and hurriedly."

"Excellent results" are said to have been obtained in sending signals by radio from the observatory during the summers of 1924 and 1925 for longitude determination Alaska, the Mississippi Valley, the western Alaskan Islands, were sent at the request of the Canadian Government and the United States Coast and Geodetic Survey and were also of value to other territories in Mexico, New Zealand, Australia.

The observation of the eclipse of January 24, 1925, from dirigible, Los Angeles, off Longland was pronounced "very successful," while plans are said to be completed for sending a party from the observatory to observe the solar eclipse in Sumatra, next May, 14.

Photographs taken of the sun now said to be made with reference to the period of activity which is developing. "It is likely," the report says, "that with the progress of the toward the sun spot maximum, disturbances on Western Union Telegraph Company and other lines become more frequent and of greater intensity."

Curious Pipe Devised for a Clean, Sweet Smoke

From the land of pipes comes an ingenious idea to keep your pipe clean and cool. A British inventor has made a new pipe with a tin lining. The pipe stem is elongated running past the bottom of the bowl. Fitting to this is a small metal perforated at the bottom and covered with a wooden tube.

A tubular chamber screws into the bottom of the wooden tube and this chamber flows all the nicotine and saliva. Because it is kept away from the pipe bowl, the nicotine is claimed, cannot be drawn into the mouth, for it would have to traverse the length of the small metal tube and be drawn through the small perforations.

A No-Hat Hanging

By order of the counter-revolutionary court at Sivas (Asia Minor) Turk who wrote a pamphlet against the recent order making the wearing of hats compulsory in place of the turban has been hanged.

Another riot arising from opposition to the decree has occurred in Marash (Anatolia) where a mob tore down a sacred flag in a mosque and set it on fire. "We don't want the flag," the rioters shouted. "We don't want the flag," the rioters shouted.

A cheque is not good until it is certified. All Wilson's Bacon guaranteed—we give a money guarantee.

We see many varieties of the hat. They turn down in front or up in the back or they may turn both front and back. Some are simply trimmed, while others are very elaborate.

End War Only by Public Opinion

MR. JUSTICE MACDONALD URGES
YOUNG CANADIANS TO AID FORMATION.

"War is the vampire of humanity and invariably leads civilization to ruin and destruction," declared Mr. Justice M. A. Macdonald, of the Court of Appeal of British Columbia, when he addressed the Young Men's Canadian Club on "Public Opinion," in the Windsor Hotel recently.

The wealth of literary material and legend, which had for its base the supposed pomp and glory of war had so formed the public opinion of the world that humanity really desired war, and had not yet realized the terror that international strife always left in its wake, he said.

When the people of the world finally woke up to the fact that there was nothing glorious about battle, and stripped the legend of its false trappings then there would, he said, be no more war. Public opinion alone would end war. When humanity really began to dislike it, it would end.

The development of a sane and sound public opinion was of the utmost importance to Canada. The creation of national opinion of this kind would open the doors to prosperity and greatness.

A well defined public opinion or state of mind must precede every great movement towards better things. Therefore the way for Canadians to attain the heights was by creating honest and good national thought. Proper public opinion could be formed only if national organizations, professions, the church, statesmen, and the law lay down the correct principles.

The sentiments of a nation, when agreed upon and accepted by the component parts, would develop opinions which would throw off the undesirable thoughts and retain the worth while ideals.

Public clamor, the result of misguided and insane opinion, often caused inestimable harm to humanity and should be guarded against. Though spectacular while it lasted it invariably burned out after it had caused the harm.

The Great War was caused by perverted public opinion in Germany. Nearly all war was caused in the same way. To their cost they had found out what it meant to pollute the wells of the enlightened opinions of mankind.

International law was founded on public opinion. Without sound thought on the part of the greater nations of the world international justice and law would find itself unsupported. There was no police force to enforce international law as national law was enforced, but public opinion was fully capable of accomplishing the desired result. A police force without public opinion behind it was useless. For the same reason an international police force, such as the one suggested by sponsors of the League of Nations, would not do a great deal of good until public opinion was really crystallized against war. When that day came there would be no need for a super-state such as the League of Nations wanted to become because peace would be preserved by the pressure of public opinion. Montreal Star, Dec. 12.

Blood Thicker Than Water

No one country has ever had so huge a stake in another as the United States has to-day in Great Britain. It was a colossal undertaking on the part of England to pledge payment in gold of sums aggregating one-half of our national debt. But appreciation of even that magnificent commitment palls before the gratitude we should feel for her upholding the standard of integrity among nations, whose maintenance as an essential factor in the development of civilization is now, at the beginning of our new career as the banker of the world, more vital to the continuing prosperity of our people than to that of any other. Our debt to England for proving the fidelity of our race, as distinguished thus far from others, to recognition of just obligations, is no more measurable in dollars than here in honor. No doubt, as we are told persistently, it is our duty to help "the world"; but even obligations have degrees. Our first duty is to the one great country that has established all Anglo-Saxons, our people no less than hers, as deservedly and unmistakably pre-eminent in financial integrity among the races of the earth. It has become a cardinal principle of Great Britain, under the avowed headship of the King, to do nothing that might by any possibility impair the friendliness of, or give offence to, the United States. In honor, no less than in consideration of our own material welfare, we should respond in kind and make fidelity to our race second only to loyalty to our country.—George Harvey in

The Irish Boundary

Free State Parliament, left Kingstown for London accompanied by Mr. D. O. Heagarty, Secretary to the Executive Council.

There is good reason to believe that the question of Irish finances has now entered into the considerations surrounding the ultimate settlement of the future boundary.

The main question at issue is whether the existing boundary between Ulster and the Free State should be retained or the findings of the Boundary Commission be promulgated, thereby automatically defining a new frontier.

Free State Proposal

It is understood that the Free State Government has suggested that the existing boundary should be retained on the ground that to accept a new boundary making no substantial concession to the Free State would result in the downfall of the Free State Government.

It has been generally understood that Sir James Craig would be willing to agree on behalf of Ulster to some such arrangement providing the Free State clearly undertakes to negotiate minor adjustments of the boundary in friendly spirit and not to reopen the boundary question in any way for a definite number of years.

Chicago's First Doubled Decker Street

NEARING COMPLETION
CHICAGO, Dec. 12.—Chicago's first double-decker street is nearing completion as a $3,000,000 hardware plant, the last building in its path, gives way to a wrecker gang.

When completed the street, located on the south bank of the Chicago river, will be known as Wacker Drive and will represent an expenditure of $20,000,000 for the one mile of its length.

Christopher May Have Been About 700 Years Too Late

RECENT FINDS IN ARIZONA LEAD TO SUPPOSITION THAT DISCOVERY WAS MADE BY ROMAN JEWS.

TUCSON, Arizona, Dec. 15.—A disconnected story in Latin and Hebrew inscriptions on leaden crosses and implements of war, believed by some to date back to the eighth or ninth century may tell of a discovery of America some 700 years before Columbus' renowned voyage—but many scientists are skeptical of the find.

Grand Old Lady Author's Widow

AULESTAD, Norway, Dec. 12.—"The Grand Old Lady of Norway" was the unofficial title conferred upon Karoline Bjornstjerne Bjornson, following her nineteenth anniversary.

The widow of the famous Norwegian author, Bjornstjerne Bjornson, picked the Valley of the Gudbrandsdalen as the spot for her birthday celebration.

It was here that her famous husband wrote many of his works. He was noted as a political leader, as well as for his writings.

Items From Bonavista South

Things are moving along as usual in the last writing. The Roman Catholic people of the Bonavista South section of King's Cove were delighted to receive a letter from our esteemed Parish Priest, Fr. Scully, who motored from Bonavista on Friday, Dec. 11th, and held Mass at Open Hall on Sunday, the 13th. Fr. Scully has been in charge of the extensive parish of King's Cove for upwards of 20 years, having succeeded the late Rev. Fr. Lynch.

King's Cove Parish is a very large parish comprising 9 or 10 settlements and is located some distance from the shore. A sick call on a stormy night winter through blinding snow is a trying but pleasant, but Father Scully always arrives at the sufferer's bedside to bring the consolation that the Minister of God can bring. The fine buildings are to be seen in the Parish since Fr. Scully assumed

Kemal Bluffing

Mustapha Kemal is too astute a statesman and too clever a soldier not to know that though his army is prepared for war and its morale good enough to affront any western nation, it does not possess enough of the sinews of war to hold out beyond a month or two. Any campaign lasting longer than that period he could not possibly finance. I believe, therefore, that the Turkish attitude regarding Mosul is one-quarter iron resolve and three-quarters bluff, and that our statesmen and people would do well to recognize it as such instead of increasing the nervousness which they seem to possess whenever their responsibilities—under the mandate—otherwise are called in question.—Dudley Heathcote, in the London Fortnightly Review.

"Beauty Prize" Big Hit for Viola Dana

METRO-GOLDWYN STAR SCORES WITH PRETTY GIRLS AS OPPOSITION.

Viola Dana has scored again. The little Metro-Goldwyn star once more proved she is the premier comedienne of the screen when she appeared in her newest picture, "The Beauty Prize," last night at the Nickel Theatre.

Last night's audience was pleased, not only with Miss Dana, but also with the beauty contest, which showed how the winner of the national title, "Miss America," is selected.

The story is an excellent mixture of comedy and drama, combining these elements to splendid effect. The star plays the role of Océane DuBois, a New York manicurist, who is mistaken for a society girl when her mother takes care of a wealthy home during the owner's trip abroad.

A Broadway sheik acquaintance induces her to enter a state beauty contest in order to get money so that her ailing father may have expert surgical attendance. Her sweetheart back home objects to this, but Connie goes right ahead. She wins the state title, and enters the national contest.

Her spirit broken, she disappears to avoid publicity, and works as a manicurist in a nearby city. She is recognized and is invited to a Chamber of Commerce dinner just about in time to keep from starving. But she is first led to the radio to give a speech, and is able to do nothing but call out for George, the home town lover, and he, in the transmitting room, hears her.

Youth, 19, is Killed by Friend

JUST GOT NOTION TO KILL HIM.

NEW YORK.—The slaying of George Nye, 19, was the climax of a "children's booze party." District Attorney McGeehan said in announcing that Nye's chum, Gordon Pirie had confessed the killing.

Pirie walked into a Bronx police station shortly after midnight and surrendered himself as the slayer of Nye, whose battered body was found under a bed in Pirie's home by the latter's 16-year-old sister, Margaret. Pirie was arrested on a charge of homicide after he had made a confession at the residence of Violet Schmidt, a friend of the "victim," she begged and Pirie told the district attorney how he had smashed his friend's skull with an axe, had robbed his pockets of $500 and had taken a girl to the movies a few hours later.

"I just got the notion to kill him," the district attorney quoted Pirie as saying.

All Principals Minors. All of the principals in the case are minors, including half a dozen girls who had been to parties with the men.

"Aside from the murder phase of the case," said Mr. McGeehan, "it gives me an insight into the lives of the young people of this city. They are beyond parental control. Young girls go around without selecting their company."

They take taxi rides with men with whom they are only slightly acquainted and they associate with those who carry flasks. "This case is certainly a sad commentary upon home life."

After a party, Saturday night, Nye and Pirie went to Pirie's home for the night. Nye's body being found under a bed Sunday. Pirie, according to the confession, killed Nye as he slept and wrapped his head in bur-lap bagging.

Life in Prison May Make Man a Millionaire

SAN FRANCISCO, Dec. 12.—Prison life may make a millionaire of C. L. Skinner.

Sentenced to San Quentin Penitentiary from Los Angeles on a bad check charge, Skinner has told in the prison work shop on an invention designed to prevent the loss of valuable tools in the drilling of oil wells.

Frank J. Smith, warden of San Quentin, is authority for a statement that a half-million dollars for patent rights to his invention. The convict refused it because he thought the device worth more, Smith said.

Skinner has another year to serve.

Huge Vacuum Cleaner Now Unloads Cargoes

From the South Sea Islands every year hundreds of tons of copra—dried meat of coconuts—are unloaded at the San Francisco docks. A giant "vacuum cleaner" recently installed, now does the work of unloading, taking the place of crews of 25 laborers. It handles from 30 to 40 tons an hour. With it three men can do the work.

Fashions Men's Evening Wear

A certain set of would-be fashion leaders in Paris have made a very big endeavour to introduce colored materials for men's evening wear this season, but so far have failed.

This is only a sequel to the efforts made in the same direction in London some years ago, but a campaign of this sort is always doomed, because women do not approve of men wearing colours. They claim that this is their privilege, and if men wore anything but black it would be necessary for the smart women to ascertain what particular colour evening suit her escort intended wearing; otherwise her own dress might not tone in with it.

The rage for the tailed evening coat is fading, as the smart restaurants and dance clubs the tailed coat, white waistcoat, and white tie are as much in evidence as the smoking. The fashion for the narrow sleeve becomes more pronounced, and in Paris to-day, in order to get the desired effect, it is necessary to thread the links through the cuffs after the shirt has been put on.

Talking of cuffs, the best-dressed men are favouring the double one, but this is followed closely by the single variety but with rounded corners.

The newest evening shirt fronts carry horizontal stripes patterned in the white batiste or marcella, and are quite good-looking worn with plain evening waistcoats.

Britain Holds Her Own

LONDON, Dec. 12.—The report of the Balfour Committee on British industry and trade has an optimistic tone. It shows that the British share of the world's export trade was 14 per cent. in 1923 against 13 per cent. in 1913.

It states that Britain is maintaining her hold in the world's markets, though the world volume is smaller due to the waste of war losses, and to the fact that prices are down generally.

LORD MONTAGU OF BEAULIEU AND "SAFETY FIRST"

"It is better to be a pioneer than a postman," declared Lord Montagu of Beaulieu, presenting prizes to students at the Northampton Polytechnic Institute, Clerkenwell, E.C. Passages from his speech were:

"Safety first" is a silly phrase. It may be all very well when you are crossing the road and find a tramway-car on one side, an omnibus on the other, a motor-cyclist behind, and a cart full of apples in front, but it is a rotten phrase to instil into the minds of the public and of youth. Nothing ventures, nothing wins.

Don't be content with a safe job that can be got easily in this country. If there is no opening in this country, don't be afraid to go to the Colonies. Nothing big was ever done without risk.

Keep some romance in life and work upwards toward an ideal. The man who is always looking for half-pennies in the gutter is a miserable creature.

Bishop Feild College Speech Day

CROWDED AUDIENCE ATTENDS ANNUAL PRIZE DISTRIBUTION AND CLOSING EXERCISES.

Last night a large and enthusiastic audience of parents and friends filled the Casino Theatre to witness the Speech Day programme of Bishop Feild College and the distribution of prizes to the students.

Among those present were His Lordship the Bishop of Newfoundland and Mrs. White, together with the Directors of the C. of E. College, the College staff and representatives of the other Educational institutions in the city.

The dramatic performance presented by the students was Shakespeare's Richard II, in which the caste of characters was as follows:—

- King Richard II. W. Tucker
John of Gaunt, Duke of Lancaster S. Wood
(The King's uncles.)
Edmund of Langley, Duke of York A. Lumsden
Henry Bolingbroke, Duke of Hereford, son to John of Gaunt; afterwards King Henry IV. E. Cook
Duke of Aumerle, son to the Duke of York E. Perlin
Thomas Mowbray, Duke of Norfolk R. White
Earl of Salisbury R. Duder
Earl of Northumberland, J. Canning
Henry Percy, surnamed Hotspur, his son G. Canning
Sir Pierce of Exton J. Harnum
Lord Marshal B. Rowe
Captain of a band of Welshmen W. Canning

Queen to King Richard G. Rennie
Duchess of York J. Watson
Ladies attending on the Queen F. Stirling, G. Winter
Heralds, Officers, Soldiers, Gardeners, Keeper and other attendants:—Edgar House, W. Macklin, M. Levitz, Edwin House, S. Rosenberg, J. Nichols, H. Mossell, W. Chard, D. Smith, H. J. Harnum, N. Wood.

Throughout the five acts the students sustained their various roles in a manner which did them the greatest credit. The elocution was splendid, and the absence of self-consciousness and the talent shown both in the interpretation of the play and in the acting, made it almost impossible to believe that the characters were sustained by students who for the most part had never before appeared before the footlights.

To W. Tucker who impersonated King Richard, and to E. Cook, S. Wood, and R. White who appeared respectively as Bolingbroke, John of Gaunt, and the Duke of Norfolk, a special word of praise is due. The parts called for long and careful preparation, and the success of these students in the different roles was indicated by the enthusiastic applause with which they were greeted by the audience.

G. Rennie as Richard's Queen, J. Watson as the Duchess of York, and G. Winter and F. Stirling as the Queen's Ladies in Waiting each looked the part and played the part in a way that must have caused their sister students to conclude that after all it could not be very difficult for boys to effect their ways and mannerisms, for so faithful were they to these parts that a stranger might easily have been misled into the belief that they were in fact of the sex they represented.

In addition to the play the following musical programme was rendered by the College Choir:—
I Saw Three Ships Come Sailing In—An Old English Carol. College Choir
Gently Falls the Winter Snow—Carol—Solo and Chorus—S. Godfrey and College Choir.

The chorus singing was thoroughly appreciated by the audience, and the solo by S. Godfrey was delightful. A cold from which he was suffering prevented the full power of his voice from being exercised, but its sweet tones captivated the audience and the applause which followed at the conclusion of his song showed unmistakably how thoroughly it was enjoyed.

HEADMASTER'S REPORT.
Between the first and second acts the Headmaster, Mr. R. R. Wood, B.A., read his report of the work of the College during the past year. Mr. Wood expressed his regret at the absence of His Excellency the Governor, which was due to the fact that during the period of mourning for the late Queen Mother he could not attend public functions. Dealing with the work of the College in the past year, the Headmaster said that it was gratifying to report that the attendance of pupils was greater than it had ever been with the exception of that of 1921, and for the first time there was a surplus of income over expenditure. In the C.H.E. Examinations 78 candidates had gained diplomas, 2 in the Senior A.A. 1 with honours; 10 in the Junior A.A. 2 with honours; 19 in the Intermediate, 4 with honours; 27 in the Preliminary, 5 with honours, and 20 in the Primary grade. In referring to students from the outports Mr. Wood spoke in the highest terms of the splendid work they performed, but regretted the fact that they commenced the school year under a considerable handicap, as in most cases they had to break new ground so far as foreign languages were concerned. This difficulty, he hoped, would in course of time be overcome.

The Headmaster dealt at some length with the question of homelessness, and urged the parents to give their children every possible facility for such preparation. He felt that none of them need be under any apprehension on the question of overwork, as in the arrangement of the school hours particular care was taken with a view of guarding against it, and as an instance of the effectiveness of the system, he stated that he was unaware during the whole of his time as Headmaster of a single instance where a boy's health had suffered through such cause. The hockey season was a time, he said, when the temptation to neglect home work was greatest, and he trusted that the parents would cooperate with the school as fully as possible to see that the work was not interfered with.

Touching on the athletic side of the work, Mr. Wood said that the College team had won the Rugby Championship, and had given a good account of themselves both in the hockey and association contests.

One of the chief objects, said the Headmaster, of a college training should be the development of character, so that the students turn out citizens who are an asset to the community, and who in all respects are worthy of the name of Christian gentlemen. In this respect he felt that the College had reason to be proud of what it had accomplished, and was next referred to the dilapidated condition of the College building, and said that the position was so serious that no time should be lost in dealing with the problem of erecting another. The Feildian Grounds Association, he was glad to say, were already actively engaged in the construction of an athletic field, and the Ladies' Association were working energetically in co-operation with the F.G.A., and also with the idea of helping towards the erection of new buildings. He trusted that before another Speech Day came round that project would be well in hand.

Mr. Wood referred with regret to the resignation of Mr. I. J. Samson from the staff, to take up the work of Assistant Superintendent of Schools, and spoke with feeling of the efficient and devoted service he had rendered during his association with the school for twenty-five years. To Mr. A. Chantwood, B.S.C., who had taken his place a warm welcome was extended. Revs. J. Brinton and J. E. Elliott were heartily thanked for the work performed in connection with the religious training of the students, and to the older members of the staff Mr. Wood expressed his gratitude for their loyalty and valuable work. He also thanked the parents for their co-operation with him in all matters, and trusted that the sympathetic relationship would long continue.

THE BISHOP'S ADDRESS.
The programme concluded, His Lordship the Bishop took his place on the stage with the Headmaster and staff and the College Directors, when the prizes were distributed by him. The list of the winners together with the names of the donors follows later.

The Bishop in a brief address warmly congratulated both the students and the staff on the excellent work which had been done in the College during the year as outlined in the Headmaster's speech. He appreciated, he said, the Headmaster's optimism with regard to the new building in which to house the school, and trusted that it would not be long before practical steps in that direction were taken. In connection with the construction of playing grounds, he expressed his gratification that the work had passed beyond the stage of discussion, was well in hand and gave every indication of being carried to a successful conclusion. Emphasizing the necessity to provide a new College in the near future, His Lordship remarked that in the same way as Britons we had certain traditions to preserve, so too as Feildians we had inherited great traditions which it was our duty to hand down intact to posterity, and he trusted that when the time came to proceed with the building programme, all who had the interests of the College at heart would rally with that spirit of loyalty and devotion for which the old school had always been noted, and erect an institution worthy in all respects of the great name. In conclusion he wished the students, staff, parents and Directors a very happy Christmas.

A vote of thanks to His Lordship for presiding was proposed by Hon. Mayor Cook, seconded by Rev. A. B. S. Stirling and carried by acclamation. The captain of the school, S. Wood, then proposed cheers for His Lordship, the Directors, the staff, Spencer College, and the Holidays, and they were given with right good will, particularly the latter. The National Anthem closed the proceedings.

Great British Film Has Arrived.
'Reveille' Ready For Showing At The Nickel Thursday.
'Reveille' the latest of the better British films to be brought to Canada, and in which the favourite, Betty Balfour, is being starred, is a drama of the great world war as its foundation, but the plot is more concerned with the after-effects of the war rather than with the actual fighting. Such brief battle scenes as are shown are vividly realistic; but it is life on leave, hectic, almost hysterical days, and the wild carnival of Armistice night, which compose the first part of the story.
The second part of the drama shows the difficulty in obtaining employment for so many of those who fought. It is a very finely conceived story that is human without any excess sentiment.
The cast is an exceptionally strong one. Beside Betty Balfour there is a long list of favourite screen actors. 'Reveille' will be shown at the Nickel Theatre, starting Thursday.

Investiture of Mr. Charles Hutton

WITH INSIGNIA OF KNIGHT OF ST. GREGORY.

On last evening, at the R. C. Palace, there took place the official ceremony of the investiture of Mr. Charles Hutton with the insignia of the Knighthood of Saint Gregory. His Grace, the Archbishop, presided over the ceremony, and there were in attendance the Right Rev. Monsignor McDermett, V.G., Monsignor Kitchin, many of the Clergy, representatives of the Christian Brothers, members of the family of the recipient, and the full body of the Cathedral Choir.

The address of the Archbishop, to the Assembly, was a masterpiece of eloquence, graced by an erudite sentiment, as he made touching reference to Mr. Hutton's well-earned fifty years of faithful service in the Cathedral Choir.

His Grace, first, briefly referred to the origin of the order as follows:—
"The Order was created by Pope Gregory XVI in the year 1831—nearly one hundred years ago. It was not named after this Pope, but it takes its name from St. Gregory the Great, one of the greatest Popes that ever graced the Papal Throne. The opening words of the brief of the investiture which the Pontiff had in creating this noble Order in the Church, in the same brief, the dress and insignia of the Order are clearly described. The insignia consists of an octagonal Cross of gold with a red surface, in the middle of which is a medallion or small medal of Pope Gregory the Great. On the reverse side of the medal is the name of Pope Gregory XVI who instituted the Order, "Pro Deo et Principe"—"For God and the Prince," but which by a free translation would mean "For God and Country." To a subsequent brief, in the year 1834, the number of Knights who might be enrolled in the Order was limited to three hundred; the reasons being that the more select and restricted the number of recipients, the greater would be the honor conferred. This is, then, in brief, the distinguished Order or Degree, that has been accorded by the Holy See to Mr. Hutton."

Referring to Mr. Hutton's services and traits of character which obtained for him such distinguished recognition from the Holy See. His Grace said, in part:—

"In recommending Mr. Hutton for this mark of recognition from the Holy Father, I was influenced by many considerations. In the first place, by his many services to the Church. Mr. Hutton has given the best years of his life to the service of the Church. It has been myself connected with the Cathedral, in one way or another, for nearly forty years. Just thirty-six years ago, I entered St. Bonaventure's College, and since that time, I have had relations with the Cathedral, directly or indirectly, throughout all the changes that have occurred in that period. During all that time, Mr. Hutton has given freely of his time and labour to the services of the Church. In fair weather and in foul, in storm and calm, in rain and sunshine, Mr. Hutton has been always found at his post. I am sure that to-night, in retrospect, his memory goes back to those venerable figures of the past, with whom he was so intimately connected—the courtly and stately Bishop Power during whose Episcopate he entered upon his duties; the late lamented Archbishop who had a very great esteem for Mr. Hutton; the venerable Administrators of the Cathedral—Archdeacons Foster and Monsignor Scott, and many generations of Priests. All these figures must pass before his fancy to-night. In fact, I may say that Priests and Prelates, Administrators, Bishops, and even Archbishops have come and gone but Mr. Hutton is with us yet. I think he might well apply to himself, the words of the Poet:

"I feel like one who treads alone
Some banquet-hall deserted—
Whose lights are fled,
Whose garlands are decayed,
And all but he departed."

"Mr. Hutton's standing in the musical and dramatic circles of the community is well known; I know that on this point you have more knowledge than I myself. The mere fact that Mr. Hutton's name was associated with any production, was a guarantee of its excellence, and a guarantee of its success. We know well that Mr. Hutton's assistance in any charitable undertaking, has never been asked for in vain. During all these years he has given freely of his time, labour and talent to assist any and every worthy charity whether it appertained to his own Church or not. I think this fact is well realized by citizens generally, and I feel sure that the congratulations which Mr. Hutton has received from members of the other denominations, in number and sincerity, almost equal those which have come to him from members of his own church.

"We have, then, assembled here this evening, for the purpose of conferring the insignia of Knighthood on its worthy recipient, Mr. Hutton's career merits for him the very highest honour which it is in the power of the Church to confer upon a Catholic layman, and no honour could be too great for such faithful and life-long service as he has rendered."

His Grace then read short extracts from the Motu Proprio of Pope Gregory XVI instituting the Order of Knighthood of St. Gregory the Great, and concluded by stating that he would invest Mr. Hutton with the insignia of his honour, after the reading of the Papal Brief containing the appointment. Rev. P. J. Kennedy, then read a translation of the Latin Brief, after which Mr. Hutton kneeling before the Archbishop, received from him the golden Cross of his Order.

After the investiture, Mr. Hutton made the following graceful reply.

Your Grace, Monsignors McDermett and Kitchin, Rev. Fathers and Brothers, ladies and gentlemen:—

There are some incidents in every man's and every woman's life—"Red Letter Days," that appeal to them personally; and I have had a few in my otherwise uneventful life. But I can safely say that this "Red Letter Day" overshadows them all, for the fact, and it is a singular coincidence, this day forty-four years ago, I took charge of the organ in the Cathedral; and my association with the members of the choir, has always been most harmonious. Therefore, it is quite in the fitness of things that you, past and present members, through His Grace's courtesy, should be here to help celebrate, what to me, is a most unique occasion.

My reward for any personal services was the artistic, and of course, the financial results of the objects for which they were intended. I never hoped, personally, for anything more, so you can readily understand my feelings of gratitude this evening, when His Holiness, through Your Grace has bestowed upon me a gift, one of the most coveted—the Knighthood of St. Gregory.

In the first place, I wish to respectfully thank His Holiness through my Lord Archbishop his distinguished representative, and Your Grace personally, for all the nice things you have said about me this evening; and to especially thank you since, when you could have cabled the news, you did me the honour of bringing it yourself and were the first to hail me as "our new Knight."

My heart is too full to say anything more. I want you all to pray for me that I may live quite a little while to enjoy this honour; that I may live to celebrate my golden jubilee and live to prove myself more worthy to wear this distinguished insignia, and the high privilege of being addressed a Knight of St. Gregory.

At the conclusion of his reply, Mr. Hutton received the congratulations of the assembled guests, with whom we join in expressing the wish that the worthy Knight may long continue to enjoy his well-merited and distinguished title.

A very beautiful and artistically decorated translation of the Latin Brief the work of the talented Sister Josephine of the Presentation Convent, was also presented to Mr. Hutton and evoked the admiration of all the guests.

Chloroform is Used by Bandits

Staubenville, Ohio, Dec. 15. - Sheriff's deputies Monday, after an all day search, were without clues as to the identity of robbers who yesterday invaded the village of Bradley, near here, chloroformed 25 persons and escaped with money and jewelry valued at $1,300. The robbers confined their activities to five families. At the home of David Landers five were chloroformed; six in the house of Dewey Lyons; four in the home of Joseph Daranek; three in the home of Julius Legross. Details last night were continuing their investigation of places where the bandits might have obtained the chloroform. Entering the homes the robbers put their victims under the influence of the anesthetic and for several hours deliberately and systematically ransacked the five houses. A number of the homes were entered by means of skeleton keys. Some of the victims recovered consciousness around noon and notified officers here, who proceeded to the mining village. A number of those put under the anesthetic still were sleeping when officers arrived. All the victims had fully recovered yesterday, reports said, and had suffered no ill effects. The robbers in each home opened windows so as to insure recovery from effects of the chloroform. At the Legross home Mrs. Legross told officers she saw a strange man standing over her bed with what she termed a fumigator. She soon became unconscious, she said, and was unable to give any description of the man. At other homes, persons said they had seen robbers enter their homes, but before they could leave their beds they were put to sleep with towels saturated with chloroform.

Noted Criminal Makes Escape

New York, Dec. 15. - "Bum" who started troubling the police years ago as a juvenile delinquent and whose criminal career had spanned his life, was arrested in this city, escaped from the police and taken to Sing Sing to serve his term. Charged with extortion, assault, robbery, Rogers, heavily armed, was aboard a train bound for Oneonta when Edward Beckwith, a guard, saw him. Beckwith, who was on the guard's skull and Ruggles, his confederates, stepped from the train, ran down the steps and were swallowed up in a bush.

This was "Bum's" second escape from a long prison term. In 1924, while serving an indeterminate sentence at Welfare Island, he and two companions crawled through a window only partly protected by a sill down a clothes line, dropped to the ground and walked away in freedom. Rogers was captured by patrolman Casey on the opposite side.

Can Eyes

Assuredly! and again with operations in support of the new eye. By some means or other some value from a fairly good blind one, would come value from physical appearance, asserted, however, has been restored. Paul Bequerel's Litteral (Paris) case. Eye-trouble. storator of Y. place. Written. "A research in biological statistics, part, reported he had succeeded eyes of various mice and rabbits in their sockets. animals of the eyes, he asserted, summed their animal continuity. "These results able that man any attempt to less. Nevertheless, Dr. Nichol assisted-Koppert terminated to him. He kept up his and the results, which in the ology. This on fresh-water fowls. "Thus, he was 400 fish. In placed in them, en were anatomical the graft was of these cases. "The eyes of the transferred to the uals of the species. The great nineteen cases, day after the came solidly back and the vessels of the eye-ball. As he healed, the cornea lens became of pigment and frequently clear. The same was humor. "A month and eration, the eye and the pupil in the normal state. The nerve proved its functions. "Under these necessary to eye-grafted eyes still was solved by experiments. "Thus, when a beam of light was into the aqueous were frightened, confusion for those that had those with great quiet. "Observation ed that when their bodies were eye, while the first times to the left, always. Now the fish eye case like the latter. In wise, if fished, were thrown in, perceiving them. On the contrary, those with grafted eyes, and often made. "Finally, illust with two grafted remarkable property color of the skin of the bottom. "Light was brought were black as light was kept the. "All these facts, sent any possible grafted eyes of the eye. "The lack of success, was more difficult two cures in ed slightly. "The pupil of the eye, when it is exposed, continues to grow, immediately. "The restoration of the eye was not shown. "This was the first case. "With the eye, were transplanted. "The eye, in a whole. "To sum up, the transplanted fish eye, of the problem, not completely so. "HARDY'S BIRD

Can Eyes Be Transplanted?

Assuredly! It has been done again and again with animals. When the operation is successful, the eye grows in the new socket and the patient recovers. But—and this is a matter of some moment—the grafted eye does not see! Of course, neither does a glass eye. The possession of a fairly good-looking real eye, even a blind one, would, of course, be of some value from the standpoint of physical appearance. It has been asserted, however, that normal sight has been restored in the case of grafted eyes. More recent and careful tests show, we are assured by Paul Bequerel, writing in Les Nouvelles Littéraires, Artistiques et Scientifiques (Paris), that this is not the case. Eye-transplantation with restoration of vision has not yet taken place. Writes Mr. Bequerel: "A research worker in the Prater biological station in Vienna, Th. Koppányi, reported, some time ago, that he had succeeded in removing the eyes of various mammals, notably mice and rabbits, and replacing them in their sockets or in those of other animals of the same species. These eyes, he asserted, took root and regained their natural functions. The animal continued to see. These results seemed so remarkable that many naturalists regarded the attempt to verify them as worthless. Nevertheless, a Viennese scientist, Dr. Nikolaus Blatt, who had assisted Koppányi in his work, determined to repeat his experiments. He kept up his efforts for two years, and the results have just been published in the Archives of Ophthalmology. This naturalist operated on fresh-water fishes, rabbits and owls.

"Thus, he removed the eyes from an owl. In 60, the eyes were replaced in their own sockets and seven were anatomically cured; that is, the graft was perfectly successful in these cases. The eyes of the 340 other fish were transferred to the sockets of individuals of the same or some other species. The graft was successful in thirteen cases. In these, at the fourth day after the operation, the eye became solidly attached to its socket and the blood-circulation was completely reestablished between the vessels of the socket and those of the eye. As soon as the wound had healed, the cornea and the crystalline lens became again transparent. The cornea often showed some spots of pigment and the crystalline was frequently cloudy around the edge. The same was true of the vitreous humor. "A month and a half after the operation, the eye had lost its pigment, and the pupil, which is always red in the normal eye, was completely bleached, its vessels containing no more blood. The retina and the optic nerve probably had not resumed their functions. Under these circumstances it was necessary to ascertain whether the grafted eyes still saw. This problem was solved by very curious experiments. "Thus, when during the night a beam of light was suddenly thrown into the aquarium, the normal fish were frightened and swam about in confusion for several minutes. Only those that had lost their eyes, and those with grafted eyes, remained quiet. "Observation of one-eyed fish showed that when swimming they turned their bodies away from the remaining eye, while the blind fish swam sometimes to the right and sometimes to the left, always with lowered heads. Now the fish that had one or both eyes transplanted swam in the former case like the one-eyed fish and in the latter like the blind ones. Likewise, if flies or crumbs of bread were thrown to normal fish, these, perceiving them, darted forward and swallowed them at the first attempt. On the contrary the blind fish and those with grafted eyes approached unskillfully; they swallowed by chance and often missed. "Finally, like the blind fish, those with two grafted eyes lost the remarkable property of adapting the color of the skin and scales to that of the bottom. Whether the bottom was black or white, whether the light was bright or subdued, they always kept the same grayish tint. "All these facts show—alas!—without any possible doubt, that the grafted eyes of the fish do not perceive images of the outside world. With the rabbits there was the same lack of success, but the operation was more difficult. There were only two cures in 80 subjects treated. "The pupil of the transplanted eye is slightly and slowly retracted when it is powerfully lighted, but this continues only for three or four weeks immediately following the graft. In the two cures, the restoration of the retina and optic nerve was not shown, and the pupil remained bleached. "With the 40 fowls whose eyes were transplanted, no cure was observed; that is, the graft did not take, in a single case.

"To sum up, grafted eyes in mammals, fish and fowls do not see, and the problem of transplantation is not yet completely solved."

Brothers to Stand Trial for Murder

EDWARD AND PATRICK McGUIRE WERE COMMITTED BY QUEBEC JUDGE.

JOLLETTE, Que., Dec. 15.—Edward and Patrick McGuire, of St. Gabriel de Brandon, were to-day committed for trial on the charge of murdering Robert Tyhurst, branch manager of the St. Maurice Paper Company, Ltd., who was shot and instantly killed on December 4, in the company's bungalow. The commitment was made by Judge Dubreau, who presided over the preliminary hearing.

Late this afternoon the accused appeared for voluntary statement, heard the charge of murder read against them and declared that they had no statement to make, and the Judge committed them to appear at the next session of the King's Bench, due to be held in Jollette next September.

Before the commitment, Alban Germain, K.C., for the defence, urged that nothing had been proved in the evidence put before the court at the inquiry.

"Never have I seen such weak evidence put before a court in support of a criminal charge," he said.

"It is true we have a phantom automobile, just as we had a mysterious woman, but what has been proved?"

"There has not been a single witness to show that the two accused men had ever been in St. Michael de Sauts on the night of the murder. The nearest they had been seen to there was about midnight, when they were found a dozen miles away with a car in a ditch."

"There was not enough evidence before the court to justify their being ordered to face trial on the murder charge," and he demanded their liberation. Mr. Germain was supported by J. J. Denis of the defence counsel.

Phillippe Brails, K.C., replied to the defence, urging that there was ample evidence to justify a commitment. Judge Dubreau rendered his decision at once, that the evidence justified a commitment.

Job lot! Women's Boots, only $1.50. Our Rubbers to fit for only 75c. the pair, at SMALLWOOD'S.—dec17,14

WALT MACH. Turn just a hundred years ago, according to the calendar, when this well-known world of woman came to be a star. Then she grew up to be a bard, or bardess, if there's such a word; she turned out poems by the yard, around the world her voice was heard. There was a time when Tennyson with envy looked upon her name; each year some triumph new she won, immortal seemed her stately name. Charles Dickens hailed her as the queen of all who chanted wildly well; since Sappho there was never seen a bard more prone to ring the bell. Best sellers were her books for years, the delectable products of her mind; despairing poets viewed through tears the trail of smoke she left behind. Our ancient grandees can recall when Addis's poems gave them thrills; it was agreed by one and all her glory would outlast the hills. Cheap scribblers of the Browning breed would shortly journey to the dump; pale Tennyson would go to sea, but Adelaide would never slump. She was not strong, perhaps, on Art—she had a better graft than that; her verses searched the human heart, and inside the reader wove his hat. Ah, what's become of her renown? She's now unknown, who once was great; they tried, last month, in Lunnon town, her natal day to celebrate. But when they tried to raise some funds, to make the roundup one of glee, the people rent their cummerbunds, and asked, "Now, who in heck was she?"

Parents Oppose Daughter-Students Smoking

Mildred Nicotine has received a knockout wallop at Boston University. Dean T. W. Lawrence Davis, of the university's college of practical arts and letters, announced that early returns from the parental referendum, which he is conducting, showed amazingly strong opposition to the use of cigarettes on the part of girl students.

The dean recently distributed 700 ballots among his students' parents. Two hundred of these have been returned and thus far not one has favored the lifting of the "no smoking" ban at the college.

BAIT FOR WOULD-BE SCREEN STARS.

Choosing as his victims girls who had ambitions of achieving film fame, a stalwart, stoutly-built rogue, with a glib tongue, reaped a rich harvest in Toronto until he fell into the hands of the police. Convicted on three charges of theft, fraud and false pretences, this man, Sydney W. Bracey, 41, an actor, formerly of King's Kerawall, Devonshire, will spend the next three years in Kingston Penitentiary, Canada. Bracey's victims were three English girls, Miss Leslie Jarvis and Miss Christina Swan, formerly of London, and Miss Nettie Anderson, formerly of Edinburgh. Bracey, robbed Miss Anderson of £220, the bulk of her savings from a small business she conducts in the city of Toronto. Misses Swan and Jarvis were more fortunate, only losing £20 each to the rogue. Bracey's operations were somewhat akin to those used by two young Englishmen about

Delay War by Being Prepared

Major-General MacBrien Says Useful to Believe War Ended.

Ottawa, Dec. 15.—"It is useless to deceive ourselves into believing that there will not be another war," said Major-General J. H. MacBrien, to the members of the Anglo Fellowship club here last evening.

General MacBrien stated that the cause for this next war to come might well be the adjustment of frontiers in the European countries.

"The most efficient way of delaying this war," continued the Chief of General Staff, "is to be prepared by up-to-date knowledge of modern war methods and by readiness in point both of training of military officers and of possession of latest scientific devices and equipment."

General MacBrien gave it as his opinion that there would be two comparatively safe places to be. One was in the air, the other was in the army.

One significant point stressed in the General's address was that the latest aeroplanes had been brought to such a pitch of perfection that they could bomb any point from an altitude of five miles, and that after carrying out their raid they could return in safety to their base without having been seen by the enemy.

ated to some extent the story told by Miss Anderson. They, however, had signed to take secretarial positions with the firm. All that they received in exchange for their money was a very elaborate "agreement," which was not worth the paper it was written on. When Bracey, after a lapse of several weeks, failed to communicate with his victims, Miss Anderson became suspicious. She called at Bracey's office, only to find it closed and Bracey gone. So she informed the police. Det.-sergt. Tuft, of Toronto police headquarters, was detailed to the case. He visited Bracey's home, but found him gone. Eventually, Bracey was traced to Montreal and apprehended. Another deluded victim of his had taken him there in his motor-car, only to be deserted by Bracey later, and to find, when he sought to take his car out of the garage, that Bracey had obtained a loan of £5 on it.

Rope Jumping Religious Rite

Moscow, Dec. 15.—Rope jumping has been forbidden as part of the religious ceremonies of the people of the Bambak-Lory district of Armenia. A four-day orgy of rope jumping which exhausted everyone in the village and disturbed the work of attending crops and animals caused the prohibition. Self-appointed priests of this cult told worshippers that the best way to show one's respect for God was by jumping the rope. The longer a person could continue the exercise the more holy he was supposed to be. One woman skipped for two days and nights without stopping.

Little Jack Rabbit by David Cory

Wasn't Professor Jim Crow about to read something from his Wisdom Book to the little rabbit as your Uncle Dave finished the last story? Certainly he was, and I'm glad to say he has waited patiently until I sat down at my typewriter. So here is what he said to the wondering bunny boy. "You asked me where the snow came from, didn't you?" questioned the wise old bird, brushing a snowflake off the end of his beak. "Yes, I did," replied the bunny boy. "Look carefully at the freshly fallen snow," advised Professor Jim Crow solemnly. "Do you see a lot of tiny, star-like crystals." "Yes," laughed the little rabbit. "Hold some of these tiny crystals in your paw," went on the wise old bird. "I have a handful," shouted the bunny boy. "Now breathe on them until they melt into a little drop of water," laughed Professor Jim Crow. "There, you have a little drop of water, showing you that snowflakes are only frozen raindrops." "Hurray," shouted the little rabbit. "I must hop home to tell mother." "Wait a minute, if you please, Goodness me! I'm going to sneeze," choked Professor Jim Crow, holding his handkerchief to his nose. "Now, I'm all right," he cawed, tucking the handkerchief into his feather coat pocket. "During the cold weather the particles of water, instead of clinging together in a round drop, though still clinging fast to one another, spread in all directions into little light feathery figures, which fall upon sleeping plants, keeping them warm and comfortable." Then, with a snap of his bill, the wise old crow closed his Wisdom Book and smiled down at the amazed little rabbit. "Don't sweep away the snow from your mother's flower bed," advised that wise old bird, as he fastened his feather muffer around his neck. "Why not?" asked the curious little bunny. "Because the flower roots might freeze," answered the old crow. "Don't interfere with Loving Mother Nature's plans." "Oh, I won't," cried the little rabbit. Then away flew Professor Jim Crow to his pine cone bungalow in the Tall Pine Tree, and the little rabbit? Well, he didn't fly away. But he went almost as swiftly, clipperty clip, lipperty lip toward the dear old Bramble Patch to

"Oh, dear, how cold it is," he gasped, as he sped along. "I'm glad all the trees have covered up their little beds in layers of warm bark to keep them safe until spring comes. Some of the plants I know grow little downy hairs to keep out the cold." And in the next story you shall hear what happened after that.

DRASTIC DECISIONS BY MEDICAL COUNCIL

SECRET FORMULA FOR A CONSUMPTION CURE.

During the past two weeks the General Medical Council has demonstrated its power by investigating charges of "unprofessional conduct" against doctors and ordering the names of several well-known members of the profession to be struck off the Medical Register. Among the latest to come under the ban of the council are

Dr. Joseph Stenson Hooker, 72, of Spanish-place, London, who has many degrees to his name, and has been in practice since 1877, for the last 21 years in London, and

Dr. William Lloyd, of Brook-street, London, who holds four medical degrees, and is a well-known nose and throat specialist.

The charges against Dr. Hooker related to a "cure" for consumption, known as the Newell treatment. It was alleged that Dr. Hooker sought to attract patients by associating himself with advertising and canvassing, through the medium of articles in a weekly paper, by circular letters, and by endeavouring to induce practitioners to use a medicament of whose properties they were ignorant.—Mr. Hempton, for the Medical Defence Union, stated that in the articles a claim was made for "nothing less than a certain cure for phthisis."—Dr. Hooker, denying the charges, stated he was given the formula under a solemn pledge of secrecy. Investigations yielded 90 to 95 per cent. of successful results. Information for the articles was given on the strict condition that no names of medical men engaged in it were divulged. The discoverer consented to give the formula to the General Medical Council, provided it was given through the offices of a certain journal. The council replied that the suggestions did not come within its statutory functions.—Council mentioned that Dr. Hooker believed a "miraculous" cure for tuberculosis was at hand.

"Intoxicated By His Enthusiasm, he lost his head."—Interviewed after the decision of the council to strike his name off the Register, Dr. Hooker remarked: "I shall do everything in my power to further the Newell treatment. It will be a little time before we get the really perfect cure, but I am tremendously enthusiastic about the possibilities. I shall be a free lance now." Dr. Hooker is well known for his advocacy of the simpler life, one of his books being "How Not to Grow Old." He has lectured on food reform and on religious and occult subjects, being also the originator of a "character ray" theory.—The charge against Dr. Lloyd was brought by the British Medical Association, who stated that he sought to obtain patients and to promote his own professional advantage by means of an article. In a letter to the registrar of the General Medical Council, Dr. Lloyd mentioned that a patient of his, a distinguished journalist, had asked permission to incorporate in an article some information which he had imparted relating to the treatment for hay fever. To that he had raised no objection, providing that his name was not disclosed. It appeared, however, that his name was disclosed to a few persons who made inquiries, and, apparently, owing to a misunderstanding by his secretary, appointments for him to see these persons were made. At the inquiry Dr. Lloyd declared that he had no need to seek professional advantage. His practice ran into many thousands a year. Dr. Lloyd, by the way, has applied for a re-hearing of his case.—Colonel Woodcock, Unionist member for Everton, is to ask the Health Minister if the General Medical Council is now composed wholly of medical members, and whether, seeing that the statute does not require that the Council should be composed exclusively of medical men, he will, in nominating members of the Council, take steps to add members representing the public.

Friend of Egypt's King Dismissed
CAIRO, Dec. 12.—Egypt's unofficial King has been dismissed by the legal sovereign, although much against the will of both.
British pressure compelled the rupture of relations between King Fuad and Hassan-Nasrallah Pasha, who, in the position of chief of the cabinet, has been the rump of the country, dictating policies and naming the King.
Lord Lloyd, the British High Commissioner, said two visits to King Fuad and finally compelled the dismissal, by virtually stating that Britain no longer would tolerate Nasrallah's power.
His opponents describe Nasrallah as the black shadow and the evil genius of Egypt. He is wealthy, handsome, a nobleman and a lawyer, and

Women Walkers Win Their Bet

VANCOUVER.—(Canadian Press.)—Mrs. Annie Rovrik and Mrs. Sam Johnson, of Prince Rupert, B.C., travelling more than a thousand miles on foot in Canada averaged 19 miles a day and covered the distance in two months. They won $100 from Mrs. Rovrik's brother, who said the thing could not be done.
Their packs weighed from 20 to 45 pounds, consisting chiefly of food and sleeping bags. Sometimes they cooked their own meals and on other occasions they enjoyed the fare of cook cars or railway and road gangs and in the homes of hospital people along the way. Their beds at night were often in haystacks, sometimes in hotels and frequently on the side of the tracks under shelters made by piling up railway ties.

SONG OF A DELETED WARDROBE.

I am in a dreadful way,
Should I purchase socks to-day?
Very sadly she will say,
"What is left for Christmas, pray?"
Should I buy myself a tie?
Very sadly she will sign,
"Wear it is a foolish buy,
When the Christmas time is nigh."

I should like a shirt or two,
But do buy would never do.
"Wait," she mutters: "Auntie Sue
Has some Christmas shirts for you."
All my handkerchiefs are torn,
Sadly I said and so I mourn,
But to buy would not to scorn

Model American Home

IS SHIPPED TO FRANCE.

"Houses of painted wood? How strange!" or "No servants? How do you manage?" These are typical remarks of Frenchwomen when American women tell them something of their homes in the United States. Soon they will have a chance to see just what a modern American house looks like.

A 10-room house, considered representative of the typical American home, was erected recently in Brooklyn, N.Y. Then it was dismantled completely and placed on a ship with its furnishings and equipment to be taken to France for exhibition in February at the American Section of the International Exhibition of Household Appliances and Labor-Saving Devices.

The two-story shingle house maintains the Colonial atmosphere throughout. The furnishings and decorations are all authentic copies from period pieces. Comfort and livableness in the interior are emphasized. The house is equipped with running hot and cold water, electric lights, gas service, and has every device that modern inventive ingenuity has provided to chase drudgery from the home.

When they all see the rebuilt home, Frenchwomen will be astonished by the amount of housework that can be done by pressing a button. For vacuum cleaners, washing machines, drying machines, electric irons, cookers and refrigerators are unknown to most Frenchwomen.

After the International Exhibition is closed the American Home is to be given to the French cities who has made the greatest contribution to humanity in recent years.

Proposes by Wireless to Girl on Atlantic

SOUTHAMPTON—A wireless proposal to Miss Catherine Forbes, of Portland, Oregon, on the steamer Leviathan in mid-Atlantic by John L. Stewart, of Detroit, who was at Cherbourg, culminated in acceptance and the marriage of the couple.

"Will you marry me on the Leviathan?" said the message.

"Yes," came back the reply.

Mr. Stewart joined the Leviathan at Cherbourg, and while the vessel was coming to Southampton he said Miss Forbes were married recently by Captain Herbert Hartley of the steamer. The captain had breakfast served in his cabin and also surprised the couple by producing a wedding cake for their benefit.

New Giant Bomber

Capt. S. Wilcockson, R.A.F., Imperial Airways pilot, has been carrying out flying tests during the past few days from the Cricklewood Aerodrome, N.W., with a huge new Handley Page aeroplane, driven by Napier engines developing just on 1,000-h.p., which has been designed for the Air Ministry as a high-speed night bomber.

Despite its size, the giant craft is capable of rushing through the air at more than 100 miles an hour, and even when heavily laden it will climb rapidly to a high altitude and fly long distances without needing to refuel.

Externally the new machine, of which a number are now in construction, is treated with a peculiar kind of green dope which, experiments have shown, is likely to render it least visible when in flight at night.

An Eerie Mountain

PROFESSOR'S FLIGHT FROM "BIG GREY MAN."

Dr. J. Norman Collie, professor of public chemistry at University College, Gower Street, W.C., speaking at Aberdeen recently, said that he had had many adventures when mountain-climbing, but he experienced the most terrifying fear of his lifetime when, 35 years ago, he was climbing Ben Mac dhuil, Aberdeenshire, which is 4,256 feet high and the second highest mountain in Great Britain. He was returning from the summit in a mist when he heard sounds as of footsteps behind him.

He listened and heard the noise again, but could see nothing. As he walked on and the eerie "crunch, crunch" sounded behind him he was seized with the most tremendous terror. He took to his heels and ran staggering blindly among the boulders for four or five miles. On no account would he ever venture to the top of Ben Macdhuil alone.

He had since learned that another climber once saw a man who looked to be almost 10 feet high wandering round the top of the mountain at midnight.

A man who lived on the slope of the mountain, when told the stories, replied that "it would have been the big grey man they had seen."

WHEN WE HAVE TO MARK TIME.

Is there any move which we know would show a greater than the ability (or lack of ability) to mark time gracefully and calmly? Of all the hard things we have to do in life there are none so hard to most of us as the things we don't do. The periods when we are not asked to march but rather to mark time.

When We See So Much To Be Done. Periods of convalescence when we see a million things that we want to be done in the home or the office, and yet know that if we rise up and do them we shall only set ourselves back.

Periods of anxiety when the illness of some loved one is dragging a long and uncertain course and there is nothing to be done but wait for the outcome.

Times when we are waiting for some important letter and a dozen times a day have to conquer the temptation to write and ask why it doesn't come—a weakness we cannot afford to show.

Periods when we know that something is wrong with someone we care for and yet also know that we must keep our hands off if we really want to help and not hurt.

Times when we have sown seed of one kind or another and can only mark time while we wait to see if it will come up.

To most of us the most strenuous marking isn't so hard as marking time.

Hard On Everyone. We do it when we have to but with an ill grace and a sour face. It is hard for us and for those who live with us.

Or, if we do manage to achieve an exterior of calm, it is only an exterior. Inside we rage and tear ourselves to pieces with fretting and impatience. To really mark time successfully there must be a measure of real calm, of relaxation, of patience, of real acceptance of the fact that Theodore Cuyler once voiced when he found himself impatient because some one of his schemes for human betterment did not move as fast as he wanted it to. "I know what the trouble is, God isn't in a hurry and I am."

You Can't Hurry The Infinite. God isn't in a hurry. Nature isn't in a hurry. Time isn't in a hurry. When you are, you are out of tune with the Infinite and it is more effective for you to slow down than to try to hurry up the minute.

Teach yourself to mark time with as much patience and courage as you can command and you will have learned a lesson that shall help you in a hundred hard places.

Times when we have sown seed of one kind or another and can only mark time while we wait to see if it will come up.

To most of us the most strenuous marking isn't so hard as marking time.

Hard On Everyone. We do it when we have to but with an ill grace and a sour face. It is hard for us and for those who live with us.

Or, if we do manage to achieve an exterior of calm, it is only an exterior. Inside we rage and tear ourselves to pieces with fretting and impatience. To really mark time successfully there must be a measure of real calm, of relaxation, of patience, of real acceptance of the fact that Theodore Cuyler once voiced when he found himself impatient because some one of his schemes for human betterment did not move as fast as he wanted it to. "I know what the trouble is, God isn't in a hurry and I am."

You Can't Hurry The Infinite. God isn't in a hurry. Nature isn't in a hurry. Time isn't in a hurry. When you are, you are out of tune with the Infinite and it is more effective for you to slow down than to try to hurry up the minute.

Teach yourself to mark time with as much patience and courage as you can command and you will have learned a lesson that shall help you in a hundred hard places.

And if some day there shall come that period when you can only mark time and wait for "one clear call" you will have the character to do that marking time also with patience and cheer and serenity.

Guides Amazing Boat by a Beam of Light

The well known English inventor, H. Grindell-Matthews, creator of the famous "death-ray" machine, recently announced another startling product of scientific research—a boat that, he claims, may be guided from a distance of more than five miles by a beam of light. The beam striking an instrument on the conning tower of the boat, will operate the engine, steer the boat in any direction the inventor says, and also will fire a small gun mounted at the stern. For coastal defence in time of war, such a boat might prove exceedingly effective.

Walter O'Toole Canadian Welter-weight Champion

AND AL RINGLING MAKE A BIG HIT.

Large audiences attended the popular Star last evening as it was expected that Professor Sealey would make his appearance to meet Walter O'Toole to the challenge issued by the latter in this paper last evening, and the unanimous opinion of the audience was that though the Professor by his absence admits defeat yet he was well advised in not appearing, as to all appearances he would have been but a toy in the hands of Mr. O'Toole. It may now be stated that Mr. O'Toole is the welterweight champion of Canada and during his career has met amongst others Jim Smart who is well known here from his engagements with Otto Oppelt. Mr. O'Toole has also met and defeated George Nedoff, Dan Macdonald and others who have visited here, so Professor Sealey MADE GOOD by failing to attend.

Mr. Ringling then went on and gave a very interesting bout, and by so doing showed himself to be the real sportsman and show man that he is. Mr. Ringling is perhaps one of the best groomed athletes we have yet seen perform here, and in his hand balancing, Fringing, etc. last evening he was roundly applauded. By request they will remain over for tonight when they will positively make their final appearance, and those who were unable to attend last evening should make an effort to see it.

Peculiar Problems of Street Car Service

Confused Hamilton Electors Create Predicament by Adverse Vote.

Hamilton city faces a problem because of the electors having turned down the proposal to purchase the street railway from the Dominion Power and at the same time refused to approve of terms of a new franchise. The result was that immediately after the vote the company gave the city notice that it would withdraw service forthwith. A temporary 60-day agreement has been reached, and in the meantime the city and company will get together to try and reach a permanent agreement.

St. Thomas, which has been losing heavily on its street car system for years, has voted to abandon the system and give bus franchises.

Peterboro is not yet ready to take the street railway off the hands of the Hydro-Electric Commission. The proposal was that the city pay $150,000 for the system, and spend $70,000 in fixing it up. The city council agreed that Hydro should fix up the system and put it on a paying basis before the city would buy. They want Hydro also to demonstrate the feasibility of a combination of street cars and buses.

Hydro Commission is asking Windsor to buy buses from the city streets, and when this is accomplished, will place buses in operation in certain districts with free transfers to cars. London Street Railway is making plans to approach the city for a new franchise.

Fox-Trot as Divorce Issue

BELFAST, Dec. 12.—Gipsy Smith, the evangelist, made a bitter attack on dancing at a Belfast mission meeting.

Here are a few of his comments:— "If you did in the drawing-room without music what you do in the dance room, husbands would sue for divorce."

"You tolerate in the dance room what you would not tolerate anywhere else in the world. That is why lots of people like it, because it gives them licence."

The jazz craze is putting the musical taste of the British Empire back fifty years.

Scientists Probe Discovery of Old Tomb in Sahara

FIND OF GREAT INTEREST TO ARCHAEOLOGISTS.

PARIS, Dec. 12.—(C. P.)—The discoveries made in the Hoggar country of the central Sahara by Count Byron Kun de Prorok and his college expedition came before the Academy of Inscriptions of the French Institute yesterday and aroused more interest among members of that body than the scheduled election of a new member of the academy.

Prof. Stephane Gsell, of the College of France, an authority on North African archaeology, read his report on the discovery of the tomb which Count de Prorok believes is that of Tin Hanan, the legendary ancestor of the kings of the Tuaregs, the strange white race of the central Sahara.

The discussion showed a division of opinion among the scientists as to the antiquity of Tin Hanan's tomb, although all agreed on its importance to archaeology. Solomon Reinach, conservator of the national museum of St. Germain called it the "greatest discovery and richest tomb ever found in North Africa outside Egypt."

He placed the date of the tomb about 500 B.C. The Abbe Chabot, noted Orientalist, however, said it dated from about the time of Christ.

M. Gsell, who said he had been misquoted by newspapers said the tomb could not have been made earlier than 1,000 B.C. because of the iron objects found in it, but said he thought it more likely that it dated from the ninth or tenth century of the Christian era.

(Dispatches from Paris quoted M. Gsell as saying that Tin Hanan lived in the Fifteenth or Sixteenth century of our era). His report referred to the "rich harvest of archaeological and linguistic documents brought back" by the expedition.

Libyan Venus
The so-called "Libyan Venus," which Count de Prorok and his aides thought belonged to the Aurignacian epoch (about 1000 B.C.) found near the tomb has been set aside for study by the Academy of Inscription, which will make an official report within two or three weeks. Other materials from the tomb also will be gone over carefully by this learned body.

M. Reinach, on behalf of the academy, asked for the privilege of making casts and replicas of many objects. M. Gsell admitted the resemblance of the "Libyan Venus" to paleolithic figures found in France but added, "The resemblance is natural, but valuable only for its style and not for dating the epoch."

He recalled a passage from the Greek historian Herodotus (484, 425 B.C.) describing the goatskin garments worn by Libyan women in his time. "Ostrich plumes decorating the head are in keeping with a very old Berber custom," he said, "for we have seen these worn by Libyan chiefs from the time of the first Egyptian dynasty to Byzantine days." In any case, the tomb has absolutely nothing of the Islamic character and must antedate the Islamic conquests in the Sahara (Eleventh Century A.D.) M. Gsell added that he had no doubt that Tin Hanan was a woman, this being proved by measurements of the skeleton found in the tomb.

M. Reinach, examining the bracelets found with the skeleton which Count de Prorok had claimed closely resembled in workmanship the products of ancient Carthage said they not only were like the Carthaginian workmanship with antimony mixed with gold and silver, but they also resembled jewellery found in the ruins of ancient Babylon.

Quebec May Put Tax on Pulpwood

QUEBEC, Dec. 12.—Rumors are current here that the Government may impose a new tax on the pulp and paper industry or perhaps on the development of water-power to enable an additional expenditure of about $200,000 on education in the rural district. What extent this taxation, if any, will reach cannot be ascertained, but it is most likely that some move will be made to get revenue for education, which will allow some of the leading industries of the province to co-operate to a larger extent towards the public instruction.

A tentative project now under way by the Provincial Government is expected to bring an expenditure of about $400,000 for the rural school in addition to the $7,000,000 already spent for the benefit of the sons of farmers.

Anglican Laity to Choose Vicars

NEW MEASURE CURTAILS POWER OF BISHOPS TO OVERHIDE PEOPLE.

LONDON, Dec. 11.—The Bishop of London lost the patronage of twenty-five livings in less than five minutes during the autumn session of the Church Assembly, held during the autumn session of the Church Assembly, held during the past week at the Church House, Westminster. The Assembly set itself to reform the anomalies and abuses which have existed under the present chaotic conditions of ecclesiastical patronage.

The Assembly also agreed that no change in the patronage of a living shall be made without the consent of the Parochial Church Council.

The Assembly also resolved that a Patronage Board should be established in each diocese, upon each of which two laymen are to sit. These laymen are to be chosen by the Parochial Church Council of the parish to which an incumbent is being appointed by the board.

These patronage boards are to have the power of vetoing the presentation of a living in their diocese to any clergyman whom they do not consider suitable to the needs of the parish concerned.

The resolutions concerning patronage show a new spirit in the Church, said a well-known cleric to a representative. "For the first time the laity of a parish are to be consulted as to who shall be their vicar or rector."

A committee has been appointed to consider these patronage resolutions and to frame a measure, which will be discussed at the Assembly's next session.

This measure, when agreed upon, will be sent up to the House of Commons.

CONFEDERATION LIFE—Bright Colors Mean Little to the Peacock

We may be misjudging the peacock and rooster when we call them vain birds. For Dr. H. Erhard, of Munich, who has been experimenting with the eyesight of birds, says the shimmering colors in plumage probably mean nothing to the feathered creatures. At least, they do not appreciate colors as we do, if indeed they even distinguish one color from another.

Birds that fly by day, Doctor Erhard says, see everything in a bright red-orange light, being very slightly sensitive to the short waves that make up blue and violet. Night birds, on the other hand, never see red, but do see blues and violet. Tiny globules of oil in the retina of the eyes act as color screens and determine the birds' color sense, according to Doctor Erhard.

Ocean Fares Back to Pre-War Level

CUT FROM $86 TO $15 EXPECTED TO STIMULATE FLOW OF IMMIGRANTS TO CANADA.

OTTAWA, Dec. 18.—A striking illustration of the influence of the North Atlantic Steamship Conference on rates in recent years is held here to be furnished by the Department of the drastic reduction in ocean rates for immigrants to Canada. By cutting from $86 to $15 the rate is now stored to the pre-war level when the tide of immigration to Canada flowed strongly.

It is believed that, while the British Government is to a small extent indemnifying the steamship companies for this cut rate, most of the reduction is being absorbed by the companies themselves. Especially before the special House Committee on ocean freight rates last session the steamship companies insisted that with the $86 rate they had struck rock-bottom, that this rate represented the actual cost of carrying the immigrants.

High hopes are entertained that this unusually low rate will greatly stimulate the influx of immigrants to the Dominion. It has been recognized for at least ten years that the greatest obstacle to increased immigration was high transportation charges. These, together with the seriously reduced buying power of European money, made it extremely difficult to get immigrants.

Further details of the new Empire Settlement plan entered into between the Canadian and the British Government and the steamship and railway companies are likely to be disclosed at the coming session of the Dominion Parliament. W. J. Egan, Deputy Minister in charge of this work, is now in London completing the plans, but is expected here in a short time.—Morning Chronicle.

Elephant's Night Out

RIOTOUS CONDUCT IN A STARTLED VILLAGE.

Still a "baby," though now eleven years of age, an Assam elephant, known as "Bunty," created a reign of terror in the Hertfordshire village of Whetstone, near Barnet. "Bunty" was being taken at night from Messrs. Chapman's zoo to the London Docks for shipment to Buenos Aires. At nine o'clock she had reached Whetstone High-road, and there a motorcar's headlights so startled her that she threw the Indian mahout from her back and charged him down. While passers-by were assisting the mahout to a neighbouring surgery a crash of glass told them that Bunty had dived into the big plate-glass window of Messrs. Pope's garage. They next saw her gallop in a circle in the road and disappear up a side street. Police and civilians who followed came to a village held in a new fence, which suggested that Bunty was charging down on the rear of the police station. Every available policeman forthwith joined in the pursuit. Noises of heavy crashes from the windows told where Bunty could be found. Followers saw her dash through a hedge, bowl over a water butt, snap off an upright post, and then, to their horror, make for the fence that partitioned the road. She went, however, through the gate. She went, however, through the gate. She went, however, through the gate. She went, however, through the gate.

Girl Centre of Turmoil 5 Years

REAL MOTHER'S FIGHT FOR CHILD SHE GAVE AWAY.

TOPEKA, Kan., Dec. 12.—Another chapter has been written in the life of Marian Bleakley, the "incubator baby," involved in one of the longest and most bitter lawsuits this country has ever had.

Miss Bleakley was recently married to Dewey Brown, son of a merchant of Holton, Kansas. It was a romance of their days in Washburn College, at Topeka, and the young couple will live at Holton. For more than five years Marian Bleakley was in constant turmoil. She was too young then to remember much about it, but she led a most hectic life during her first five years. Her early childhood was in an atmosphere of commotion, fear and hatred, brought about by bitter animosity between two sides that caused long litigation, three kidnappings and other unsavory incidents.

Seamen's Union Officials Are Set Free

SYDNEY, Australia, Dec. 13.—The high court here has ordered the release of Tom Walsh and Jacob Johannesson, respectively president and secretary of the Australian Seamen's Union, who were arrested on Nov. 20 and held for deportation, because of their activities in connection with the unofficial strike of British seamen at Australian ports.

It is believed that the high court's decision that Walsh and Johannesson should be released from custody was made on the view that the section of the act under which the deportation proceedings were conducted is obnoxious to the legal power of authority of Parliament, and contrary to the Australian constitution. While the application for the release of the two men was made under a habeas corpus writ, the chief justice said this was unnecessary.

Vote Against British Films

EXHIBITORS' BALLOT AND AMERICAN CONTROL. The result of a ballot taken throughout the country among kinematograph proprietors as to whether they were for or against being compelled to screen a certain percentage of British films, on the lines of a scheme suggested by the Board of Trade, was announced last night from the headquarters of the Cinematograph Exhibitors' Association of Great Britain and Ireland, Pantion Street, Haymarket, S.W., as follows:

Against 679
For 609

Majority 70

The ballot was conducted by circularizing the 2,600 proprietors throughout the country—members of the association—but not all voted. The decision will be put before the General Council of the association, who will discuss the matter. It means that there is complete disunion in the trade on the question of showing British films, because the other sections of the association—manufacturers, renters, and distributors of films—are in favour of a scheme for showing a certain percentage of British films.

It was announced early this month that Mr. Bert Feldman, the publisher of the popular songs, had arrived in New York to arrange for the sale of 40 British picture theatres to the Famous Players-Lasky Company. Many London theatres have already passed under American control.

BATTLING SIKI TO BE GIVEN

Christian Burial at His Wife's Request.
NEW YORK, Dec. 17.—Battling Siki, born a Mohammedan and reared a slave in Freetown, will be given a Christian burial in New York's Harlem tomorrow.

The huge bronze body of the fighter, stricken by two bullets from a murderer's revolver on Monday, to-day lay in an undertaking establishment, while his widow and two Senegalese friends searched "Speak-Easies" for his slayer.

Police seek a bootlegger as his murderer, because Mrs. Louis Phal, Siki's wife, told them her husband was threatened by a man to collect a $20 liquor debt a few days ago.

Although his friends had tried to persuade the widow to bury him as a Mohammedan, she said that he had lived as a Christian and would be buried as one.

HOCKEY RULES AND PROBLEMS.

(By LOU E. MARSH.)
In facing the puck off to start the game, or after a goal, offside or stoppage, the puck must hit the ice before it may be played, but the C.A.H.A. is the only code which specifies that the players must stand with their left shoulders toward their opponents' nets. In other words, the C.A.H.A. code gives the right-handed stick-wielder the preference at the face-off. If a centre man is left-handed, he must face-off right-handed. He cannot demand that the other fellow turn around and face off left-handed even for half of the time.

In the two pro. codes no stipulation is made as to how the centre men shall stand in a face-off, but the custom is to make them face off right-handed.

Players who persistently bat the puck before it hits the ice may be fenced after warnings. So many players who leap into each other at the face-off. A player who hits his stick into his opponent's face at a face-off may also be fenced, even though the stick does not touch his opponent. The practice some centre men make of blocking their opponent's stick with their foot at a face-off is also against the rules of fair play, and may draw a penalty if persisted in.

I have had instances where centre ice players persistently committed petty fouls on the face-offs that I have been compelled to order other players to remember them. Tuesday night down at Boston in an N.H.L. game, which I refereed, Neil Stewart, the Montreal centre man, and Norman Shay, the Boston centre, pestered each other so persistently at the face-offs that I chased them to the wings, and had two wing men face the puck off.

The amateur rule distinctly states that players must have the blades of their sticks on the ice when the puck is dropped. Both pro. rules say that no player must come within five feet of the players who are facing off. There is no such rule in the C.A.H.A., but the O.H.A. referees have always insisted on players standing at least six feet away from a face-off.

The C.A.H.A. instruction to referees is the puck must be faced off where a foul occurs and particularly points out that this applies to a foul committed in front of the goal. That, of course, refers to a foul by the defending side. It would be unfair to face a puck-off right in the mouth of a goal for an offside, kick, or any illegal play committed by the attacking side. That would be giving the side offended the worst of it. The pro. rule prohibits a face-off within ten feet of the goal for any reason.

Hooking.
Hooking is prohibited by every hockey code in existence. Hooking causes more fights and squabbles on the ice than any other form of checking except cross-checking.

Do not get the "hooking" which I am discussing here mixed up with "hooking the puck." Hooking the puck is a perfectly legitimate play. A player is said to hook the puck when he comes from behind a player carrying the puck and hooks it off his stick, with a sweeping motion, in which he drops his stick at arm's length and as close to the ice as he can get it. The puck is hooked away from the puck carrier by the hook or back of the stick, hence the term "hooking the puck."

Hooking, which is prohibited by the regulations, consists of checking a player's advance by hooking him around the body or face with the stick or by hooking up under a puck carrier's arm for the purpose of pulling his stick away from the disc. A hook across the body seldom injured a player in anything except temper. Across the face, of course, almost invariably causes injury and starts many a fight. A hook-up under the arm is a dangerous check for the puck carrier in trying to free his arm may get the point of the stick in the face, and sustain a serious gash if not the loss of an eye or some teeth. A player has a right to hook a man's stick away from the puck, but the instant that hook engages any part of the arm or body it is a foul.

The rule against hooking is—or it should be—rigidly enforced in amateur hockey. The O.H.A. instructs its officials to give a player a minute for the first hook and two minutes for subsequent offenses of the same nature.

In pro. hockey the officials do not check the players up quite so closely on hooking up as far as the elbows, but players who hook up under the shoulder or across the body are warned for the first offense, if it is not to flagrant and penalized for the second.

Policies Withdrawn

Our Special Accident Policies known as S.P., have been withdrawn, and no new policies will be issued in this series, as the premium is not sufficient for the very large benefits.

However, those already in effect will not be cancelled, but if allowed to lapse, they will not be reinstated.

S.P. Policyholders should make certain of prompt remittance of premiums, when due.
