Prof. Albert Bushnell Hart Havard University, predicted in an address before the Navy League at Washington, Monday, that within five years Mexico will be a dependency of the United States.

Officers' casualty lists for the month of February show that the British army lost 263 killed, 597 wounded and 25 missing, a totat of 875. This brings the aggregate loss since the beginning of the war to 23,962, of whom 7420 have been killed or have died of wounds, 14,755 wounded and 1,787 missing or prisoners of war.

The argument that every man in the present great crisis, should be guided by the dictates of his conscience is fully answered by Biship Fallon's declaration: "I make no ap-

British Women to Work on Farms A month has now passed since the English Board of Agriculture appointed ten women organizers to the work of seeing that every county down to its smallest village was organized. Already the work is well on towards completion. Village registers were opened and both women and farmers were made acquainted with them. The fact that farm labor can be "diluted" by unskilled women is being realized—there are openings for both trained and untrained women-and the farmers are better pleased when women do not claim to do everything. There are still men to do the plowing, and walking a furrow is not a woman's work.

In many counties the local education authorities are giving instruction in light farmwork and milking, and in some cases farmers are taking in the women as pupils. In Herefordshire, for instance, suitable women and girls are being taken on a farm for a course of six to 'eight weeks as milkers. A sum of money is allotted to them in the form of an exhibition or scholarship, and this covers the cost of instruction and provides 10s a week each for maintenance. The cowman gets 5s a week for the first pupil and 1s a week for every extra one. Similar ar rangements are being made locally for training in the care of calves, pigs and poultry.

All over the country women are registering for farmwork. Already 15,000 women are at work under the new scheme, and the registered women are forming a big reserve army. The Government armlet, a red crown on a dark green ground, has been authorized. The Government badge will only be given after a definite period of proved service on the land, and is likely to be much prized.

Mr. and Mrs. John Garroch, of Corunna, celebrated the 53rd anniversary of their marriage on Tuesday, April 11th, at their home at the above place. Wine presses driven by electricity are

Spring Fires

Midwinter is the most dangerous time in regard to fires in buildings but so far as our forests are concerned, spring is one of the worst periods. The dead as our forests are concerned, spring is one of the worst periods. The dead leaves of last season and the dead twigs and branches on the ground are more brittle and dry in the first few days of spring, just after the snow leaves, than at any other time in the year. Those who go into the woods for any purpose are, therefore, cautioned to be careful with their camp fires and with matches. They should also see that any cigar or cigarette stubs are dead out before they throw them away. Observance of these prethem away. Observance of these precautions will do more for conservation than many meetings and conventions ten years from now and this duty is urged on all patriotic citizens. The fact that Canada is at war makes this duty all the more important.

The pests are macerated in the stomach and pass away in the stools without being perceptible. They make an entire and clean sweep of the intestines, and nothing in the shape of a worm can find 'lodgment there when these powders are in operation. Nothing could be more thorough or desirable than their action.

Pasted on the window of a second hand Pasted on the window of a second hand book store was the sign, 'Porter wanted', and within the window against a stack of books the placard, "Dickens' works all this week for $3." He can work all the week for $3 if he wants to, but I'm a union man and I won't touch but I'm a union man, and I won't touch it. You'd better stick to Dickens."

A Soldier's Creed

"If you pray for us at all, don't pray so much that we will come back as that we will do our duty bravely, and that we never fail our country or comrades no matter what the odds. In my mind, death with the knowledge of a duty well done, is better than a long life with the recollection that a comrade or cause was lost owing to lack of courage or resourcefulness on my part. With God's help I intend to do my bit.'—Extract from the letter of a Canadian private at the front

The upper shoots of the bulbs will start to grow rapidly, and at this time it is a good plan to arrange a little moss to hide the upper surface of the corks, or, if preferred, however, grass or some other seed, such as cress, may be sown to provide a green covering.

There is nothing to do but to keep the bowl well supplied with water and change this now and again. Finally the flowers emerge, and then the effect is extremely pretty. The bulbs may be planted in this way any time up to early January, though naturally the sooner they are started the earlier they will bloom.—S. Leonard Bastin in St. Nicholas.

Make Nest Boxes Movable.

Everything in the henhouse should be movable—nests, roosts, dust boxes, etc. This gives an easy chance to fight vermin and also give the house a thorough cleaning. The old practice of nailing nests, roosts, and all fixtures to the building was a bad mistake, and there is no wonder that lice reigned supreme.

The above cut shows a novel nest method. Ordinary boxes are used. These are so placed that the lower box provides a platform for the upper nest, upon which the hens can easily alight. These nests are readily taken alight. These nests are readily taken outdoors and thoroughly cleaned. The illustration gives the idea very clearly.—Farm Journal.

POULTRY NOTES.

Better hens, better care. Better care, better egg yield. Better egg yield, better purse. Better purse, better farmer. Better farmer, better hens.

If your hens are not laying these days the one great desideratum that will make them commence is ground bone and meal. These are rich in alubumen, phosphate of lime, and phosphoric acid, which go to make eggs and shells. Too much leniency shown toward sick fowls and a failure to remove them from the rest of the flock in a hope of their ultimate recovery often lead to the inoculation of the entire flock and the ruin of the enterprise. Sometimes when a fowl is thick in the molt it will be seen constantly pecking at one particular place on its body. This may be caused by one or more of the new feathers failing to pass through the skin and causing great irritation. If a needle is passed under the covered end of the feather it will enable it to be drawn above the skin.

Do not allow the hens to get in the habit of standing around all day doing nothing. When they do this it is an indication that they are too fat, diseased, or fed in such a manner that they do not have to work for it. Activity and egg laying go together. To promote exercise a good plan is to hang up, about three feet high in the henhouse, pieces of meats, beets, cabbage or turnips for them to pick at.

Do Not Scare Fowls. Make friends with your poultry and thus do away with frightening the fowls, and you will get better service from them.

Should Plan Work. With the increasing scarcity of thor, planning your work is more labor, planning your work is necessary than ever this year.

The accumulation would have been enormous

The will was contested, but was held valid. In order, however, to prevent such a disposition of property in the future, parliament passed what was called the Thellusson act, or accumulations act, regulating and limiting be quests in such a way as to make great accumulations impossible.

When Peter Thellusson's last surviving grandson died, in 1856, a question arose as to whether the eldest male descendant or the male descendant of the eldest son should inherit the property, and this question was decided on appeal by the house of lords in June, 1859. The Thellusson will and GAIN or no gain the cause before the farmers of Canada is as clear as it was last year—they must produce abundantly in order to meet the demands that may be made, and I believe this to be especially true in regard to live stock, the world's supply of which must be particularly affected in this vast struggle."—HON. MARTIN BURRELL, Minister of Agriculture.

THE FOLLOWING STATEMENTS ARE BASED ON REPORTS CONTAINED IN "THE AGRICULTURAL WAR BOOK, 1916," PUBLISHED BY THE DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE, OTTAWA, ONT.

LIVE STOCK—The herds and flocks of Europe have been greatly reduced. When the war is over there will be a great demand for breeding stock. Canadian farmers should keep this in mind.

MEATS—In 1915 Great Britain imported 664,508 tons of beef, mutton and lamb, of which 364,245 tons came from without the Empire. Out of 430,420 tons of beef only 104,967 tons came from within the Empire.

The demands of the Allies for frozen beef, canned beef, bacon and hams will increase rather than diminish. Orders are coming to Canada. The decreasing tennage space available will give Canada an advantage if we have the supplies.

DAIRYING—Home consumption of milk, butter and cheese has increased of late years. The war demands for cheese have been unlimited. The Canadian cheese exports from Montreal in 1915 were nearly $6,500,000 over 1914. Prices at Montreal-Cheese: January 1915, 151/4 to 17 cents; January 1916, 181/4 to 181/2 cents. Butter: January 1915, 24 to 2834 cents; January 1916, 32 to 33 cents.

EGGS—Canada produced $30,000,000 worth of eggs in 1915 and helped out Great Britain in the shortage. Shippers as well as producers have a duty and an opportunity in holding a place in that market.

MR. AND MRS. JAMES CADWELL,—
DEAR FRIENDS:—We, your friends and neighbors have come to your home tonight, on the eve of your departure for your new home in town to spend an hour or two in a social way with you, and to express to you our regret at your removal from our neighborhood. You have spent many years in our midst and we can truly say that we have found you at all times most obliging neighbors, ready to rejoice with those who rejoiced and to sympathize with those in trouble. While sorry to lose you as neighbors we are pleased to know that you find it possible to retire from the active and laborious life of the farm to spend the evening of Life in peace and plenty. We ask you to accept these chairs, not for their intrinsic value, but as a slight token of our esteem for you and may they serve to remind you of the pleasant associations of the many years spent on the 6th line west, and it is the unanimous wish of your friends that you may be spared many years to enjoy the fruits of your honest labor and that finally when Life's day is done and the evening shadows fall that remember to remembe to your honest labor and that finally when Life's or two in a social way with you, and to day is done and the evening shadows fall that you may be gathered to your home where partings are unknown. # Jennie Hatch's Secret

Only One Other Person Shared It

By ESTHER VANDEVEER

Jennie Hatch was a sea captain's daughter and lived in New Bedford in the whaling days when ships went off on long voyages for oil. Jennie grew up almost as good a sailor as her father. When she was ten years old she could handle a pair of oars as well as her strength would permit and when she was fourteen would be seen any time in the bay on which she lived sailing a little boat with a leg-o'-mutton sail, skimming the water like a bird. She didn't seem to mind it when the wind was quite fresh and the waves were rather large for so small a boat,

True, on one occasion she was capsized by her main sheet getting caught in the tiller, but she clung to the boat till she was rescued and laughed at her rescuers as though she considered her ducking a good joke. It was that cheery disposition and absence of fear which made her popular with her neighbors, who were all amphibious, and, as for the few young fellows who were not at sea, they were all in love with her, to say nothing of those who were at sea and came ashore for short periods. When she came to a marriageable age her father wished that his first mate, David Larraway, should get the prize. Possibly David might have won her had he passed more of his time ashore. But a man who is gone on a two or three years' voyage, as sailors were in those days, was not very well situated to make love to a girl ashore. Besides, David was thirty when Jennie was seventeen, a matter of fact chap, steady as a rock and not at all demonstrative. Captain Hatch had been on the same ship with him for eight years and during that time had learned that he was as reliable in foul as fair weather. And that was the reason why he wished Jennie to be his

Jennie at this time was of an age in which a girl has not yet let go of boys to care for the attentions of

One day when the captain and his first mate were on their way back from a three years' cruise Hatch intimated to Larraway that if he could win Jennie it would be a relief to her parents. They feared she might take up with some worthless fellow who would make her miserable. Dave confessed to the captain that he had loved Jennie ever since she was passing from girlhood to womanhood. He had intended to speak to her as a lover before they had sailed from New Bedford, but some how he couldn't get out what he had to say. The captain laughed at him and told him to "heave the lead" when they returned.

Put when they brought the ship into port and went ashore they found a great change in Jennie. She was no only three years older, but all that sprightliness that had made her so attractive had gone out of her. Some thing had happened during their ab What was it? No one except herself seemed to know, and she told

Soon after her father had gone to sea on this voyage from which he was returning a young sailor named Baker had come into port and remained there several weeks while his ship was unloading her cargo and loading for another voyage. He was a handsome chap, with a devil-may-care way about him that was especially attractive to young girls. But he was dissipated at least during his stay ashore—and when he sailed left a number of pnpaid accounts behind him, mostly for liquor. Ned Baker paid some attention to Jennie Hatch. It was known that her mother had reproved her daughter for associating with him, but this was all. When his ship was about to sail he was carousing on shore with a num-ber of his messmates, and the party were carried on board by an officer and a boat's crew that had been sent for the purpose. This was town talk after the sailing of the ship, and Jennie's friends considered that if she had had any serious intentions with regard to Baker it was well for her that he had shown in good time what he was. Such a condition was not favorable to Larraway's attempting to win Jennie's hand. He did not attempt to do so, but he showed his great friendliness. This she accepted-indeed, seemed to need. Her father's ship—the Jennie Hatch, named for her—remained in port several months for repairs, and during this time Larraway saw a GILLETT'S LYE EATS DIRT reat deal of Jennie. No one seemed to consider their being together anything more than friendship, for they did not act like lovers. At any rate, Jennie's behavior toward Larraway seemed that of a woman toward an elder brother.

After awhile Larraway took on a serious look as well as Jennie. He saw her less often and seemed to be distressed about something. When his ship sailed, before going aboard he went to Jennie's home to bid her goodby, but no one except themselves knew what passed between them. On the voyage the captain wished to ask the mate some questions, but Larraway gave him no encouragement to do so. When the men returned to New Bedford the friendly intercourse between Larraway and Jennie Hatch was renewed, and this time their friends began to think there was something in the nature of a courtship between them. But Larraway sailed again without there being any evidence of an engagement between him and Jennie. and there seemed to be no prospect of an engagement.

When the Jennie Hatch returned to port again her captain decided to give up the sea and settle down on shore. Larraway was made master of the vessel. Shortly before he sailed again it was announced that he and Jennie were to be married and she was to sail with him. Much disappointment was expressed that the wedding was private, no one but the bride's family being present. It was noticed that Jennie did not act like a woman who had married the man she loved. The gossips had it that young Baker had taken her heart with him when he sailed, though he was drunk at the time, and she had married Larraway to please her parents.

However, the pair, being at sea and consequently out of hearing of what was said about them, were not affected by it. The sailors aboard the Jennie Hatch considered them lovers, though there was a seriousness about the wife that was inapplicable.

The Jennie Hatch had completed her work at sea and was returning when, after some very heavy weather, they came upon a wreck. That there were living persons aboard was evident from a distress signal. A boat was sent to the rescue and a crew twelve men brought aboard the Jennie Hatch, after which the wreck was scuttled. The rescued crew were in fair condition, except one man, who had been knocked down by a sea that had come aboard and received an injury on the head.

When the men from the wreck were coming aboard Captain Larraway and his wife stood on the quarterdeck looking down upon them. Suddenly Jennie clutched her ausband's arm. He turned and saw her eyes fixed on the injured man, who was being hoisted aboard. Her face was livid.

"What is it?" asked the husband anxiously. "Come below with me and I'll tell Larraway handed his wife down the companionway, and they disappeared in their cabin.

"It is he," said Jennie as soon as they were alone. "Baker?"

"Yes." During Edward Baker's stay in port several years before he had persuaded the girl who had fallen in love with him to a clandestine marriage. When instead of bidding his bride goodby before sailing he had chosen a sailor's spree ashore a great revulsion had sprung up within her. When Larra-way returned she needed some friend to sympathize with her, and when he asked her to marry him she revealed

During Larraway's last voyage with Captain Hatch, Jennie in looking over the shipping news in a newspaper had seen among the death notices the name of Edwin R. Baker. He had been killed at Valparaiso in a fight between a party of liberty men ashore and some citizens. Although the name was slightly different, Jennie believed that her husband of a few days was dead. On Larraway's return from his voyage she had told him of her supposed freedom, and Larraway persuaded her to take her widowhood for granted and marry him.

And now the man had turned up to mar the happiness of a loving couple, and aboard the same ship!

When Jennie had caught sight of the face of the man who was being carried on board he was looking directly at her. What surprised her was that he showed no recognition. She hoped that he would not remember her while they were cooped up in the same ship. For a time she preferred to keep to her cabin, where she would not meet him. But, curious to know if he had forgotten her and fearing that the sailors would blame her, the only wo-man aboard, for not visiting an injured man, she asked her husband to take her to see him.

When Baker looked at her he showed no sign of remembrance of her. It occurred to her that the blow on the head he had received had occasioned a loss of memory. She asked him some questions that confirmed the suspicion. The man did not remember his own name.

Larraway and his wife looked at each other meaningly and withdrew to their cabin. The secret that they alone knew was still theirs and would re main so until Baker recovered his memory.

The man who was the legal husband of Jennie and the man who was her husband in all except a legal sense re-mained aboard the same ship till she reached port. Then Captain Larraway settled upon the injured man enough to keep him from want, but left his future in the hands of his comrades. What they did to discover who he was Larraway never knew, for he never asked. Once a month a certain bank paid on Larraway's account a sum to the person charged with Baker's care. All that Larraway or his wife knew of what became of him was that several years after this unfortunate meeting Larraway was notified by the bank through which the payments were made that no more funds were required—the man was dead.

Before the Jennie Hatch had picked up the shipwrecked crew Mrs. Hatch had given birth to a boy, and it was this serious fact that influenced Larraway and Jennie to keep their secret and make no change in their relations.

British Papers to be Smaller

In consequence of the serious shortage of paper, at higher prices, which England is facing, the daily newspapers are asked to be ready to make a reduction of 40 per cent. in their pre-war size. It is even hinted that the Board of Trade may force a cutting down of the supply to publishers. The latter possibility is creating alarm in the English literary world.

WATFORD ASTONISHED BY SIMPLE MIXTURE

Watford people are astonished at the INSTANT action of simple buckthorn bark, glycerine, etc., as mixed in Adleri-ka. ONE SPOONFUL removes such surprising foul matter it relieves almost ANY CASE constipation, sour stomach or gas. Because Adler-i-ka acts on BOTH lower and upper bowel, a few doses often relieve or prevent appendicties. A short teatment helps chronic stomach trouble. Taylor & Sons Prog. stomach trouble. Waterproofing Matches A waterproof matchbox is good for emergencies, but not for a smoker's daily supply. I waterproof the matches selves by dipping them half length in shellac varnish thinned with alcohol and laying them out separately on a newspaper to dry. Shellac is better than paraffin or collodion because it does not wear off, and it is itself inflammable, like sealing wax. Matches so treated can be left in water a long time without spoiling .- Outing.

A Royal Snake Slaughterer. The "secretary bird" is one of the most precious birds in South Africa. It is royal game, and any person destroying one is liable to a fine of £50. Majestic looking birds, they stand about three feet high and generally go in pairs. They are of drab color, with black, feathery legs, and are valued for their propensity for killing snakes. Where the secretary bird is seen there are sure to be many reptiles about The bird beats down its adversary first with one wing and then with the other, at the same time trampling on it with its feet until the snake is sufficiently stunned to catch it by the head with its claws. Then the bird rises far up in the air and drops its victim to the ground to be killed. By this means thousands of venomous reptiles are destroyed.-London Scraps,

Silver Sword of Hawall. One of the most curious plants in the world and one of the greatest interest to all botanists is the silver sword. This exceedingly rare plant, with its magnificent silver spines and handsome crest, may still be found in profusion in the upper part of Kaupo gap, the southern outlet of the vast extinct crater of Haleakala, on the island of Maui. It flowers from July to October and occurs hardly any where else in the world. Even stranger is the variety known as the green sword, which occurs only in Haleakala crater and is unknown to exist else-

-Run-down? Tired? -Weak?

Every spring most people feel "all out of sorts"—their vitality is at a low ebb. Through the winter months shut up a great deal in heated house, office, or factory, with little healthy exercise in the factory, with little healthy exercise in the great outdoors—eating more than necessary—the blood becomes surcharged with poisons! The best spring medicine and tonic is one made of herbs and roots without aleohol—that was first discovered by Dr. Pierce—years ago. Made of Golden Seal root, blood root, with glycerine, it is called Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. Ingredients on wrapper. It eliminates from the blood disease-breeding poisons. It makes the blood rich and pure, and furnishes a foundation for sound, physical health.

For sale by druggists; or send Dr. Pierce, Invalids' Hotel, Buffalo, N. Y., 10c. for trial package.

Sick people are invited to consult Dr. Pierce, by letter, free.

Peterboro, Ont.—"Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery has been beneficial to me. I have taken this medicine as a 'spring tonic,' to 'spring tonic,' to tone me up and take away the lan-guid feeling one sometimes has in spring-time, and I found it to be very good.
