THE BOY AT HOME.

you wondered why it was that your boy, your only boy, seemed to have no love for his home. We were having one of those cozy chats that women love, when one after another all the little strands, that woven together make up the cable along which our lives run, were singled out and discussed. You had been telling me about your pretty little daughter, how well she was doing at school, how she excelled in music, your hand was something that you were making for her nest of a room. Evident-ly your little Florence satisfied every desire of your heart. And then 1 had

It is my weakness that a boy has a charm for me that no one else can poshad gone out of his face, and when he came back after a quarter of an hour, you answered. "He is well, and quite large for his age. Indeed it makes him awkward. In fact he is just at the awkward age, when he is all arms and legs. to talk to me, but he glanced uneasily at you, and had so evidently been brought up on the principle that boys, at any rate, "should be seen and not heard," that I forebore to trouble him You know how clumsy boys are when they get at that stage. But I feel quite worried sometimes when I see how little he cares for his home. He seems fond enough of us all; it isn't that he doesn't love us, but he is always restless when he is at home, and wants to be off some-where else spending his evenings."
"Where does he go?" I asked, with a in the house I did not wonder that your boy did not love his home. By the time I had been there a week I marveled at little anxiety.

"Oh, he is safe enough," and you laughed. "He goes to see his Sunday-school teacher, and I suppose he is just exactly as well off there, if not better, than he could be at home. I don't mind his being there. In fact, it is rather a the patience, the forbearance of the boy with you, his mother; I wondered that he tried so patiently to please you, when you were so hard to please, and being pleased, so often failed to express it; I his being there. In fact, it is rather a relief. It is only the knowledge that wondered that he wanted a love which could disguise itself so completely, and while lavishing itself upon your other he doesn't care anything about his home that troubles me. Mrs. Warren is very fond of boys, and all her class seem to child, withneld itself from the boy who strove so earnestly to be worthy of it.
For he loves you dearly, that boy of yours, and if he could give you a mo find the same fascination in being at her house that Harry does. I wonder some times how she can be bothered with ment's pleasure by staying at home, and knew that he could, I doubt if any magthem so much, but tastes differ of course. I confess that sometimes it is a great comfort to know that Harry is so well taken care of without any trouble that he did not entirely withhold his that he did not entirely withhold his confidence from you, that he kept on to me. Now when he got the photograph craze last winter, I just put my foot down on it. His uncle sent him a being snubbed mercilessly and invarito rig up some kind of a dark room for him. I knew just what that would amount to, stains and musses all over should ever run the risk of a rebuff the house, so I told him that if he had to have a dark room he must find some boy who had one and use his. He fretted over it for a day or to, and then discovered that Mrs. Warren would just and we sat down in the cozy sitting. as soon have him use her dark room as not, for she is quite an amateur photographer, and has everything of that kind ready for use; so he goes over room, where Florence could bring her dainty work, but his stamp album, his paste and mounts and photographs were forbidden, that he begged to go over there for his plates, and fusses over them, perfectly happy with his messing, and I am clear of it all. Boys are queer things. If he was only a girl now, I would enjoy him so much more. Ah, there comes Florence from school. You bothering her, and she must be thankful the reservoir of the second will net wonder at your pride in your graceful, pretty daughter who came sedately into the the room, knowing that I had arrived when she saw my umbrella in the hall rack. She spoke politely to me when her mother introduced by the sad area of the sad area duced her and sat down and began to talk with the ease of any grown-up woman. I did not wonder at her selfpossession and gracefully assured man good to hear. "I don't tire her. She likes me to come, and she likes to know were to her; how, underneath your love, about everything. That's why we go. We wouldn't go if she didn't want us to there was a recognition of her individucome so much.

"Well go along then, if you are so sure ality, her right to the courtesy that you would show to any stranger within your gates, a courtesy which is too often for-gotten or ignored. I was charmed with gates, a courtesy which is too often forgotten or ignored. I was charmed with your little daughter, but even beyond that I admired the wisdom and tact in the mother which had developed the child. She would not have expanded so naturally if there had not been an atmosphere of appreciation and symthat makes such perfect confide pathy about her continually.

Florence took me up to see her room tween your daughter and yourself. You do not want his boyish confidences now, for power to touch that heart which you after a while. On the way we passed a small hall bedroom. I had a whimsical on your bended knees pray, with tears, fancy that it was a convict's cell, it was so perfectly bars and cheerless. The walls were white and bare of ornament of any kind. There was a small iron bedstead, a chair, a table with the necessary toilet appurtenances upon it and a glass hanging over all. That was all, absolutely all. There was not even a pretense at beautifying it.

'That is Harry's room," explained "Why don't you post a placard telling your customers how to drink milk?" said a customer to a milk dealer after a man Florence, and then she opened the door of the large sunny room over the porch, and I uttered an involuntary exclama-tion of delight. It was such a dainty that had just emptied his glass at two gulps had gone out. "Milk is food and should be treated as such," continued nest for a young girl. The walls were a delicate blue, and the dado was decorated with trailing vines of morning glories, painted by my friend's skilful hands I recognized her touch as soon as I looked at the graceful daintily-tinted bells. The little bedstead was an iron one, but it was painted with white the speaker. 'It should be drunk slov ly in small sips, so that the saliva shall be mixed with it. It is better, indeed, to eat something as one drinks, so as to excite the flow of saliva. When the doctors put their patients on the exclusive milk diet they recommend the use enamel and touched up with gold, while a pale canopy over it made it look like a of chewing gum during the continuance of the regimen. That is why all the makers of chewing gum advertise their wares as a cure for indigestion."—New Sleeping Beauty. I need not tell you all the trifles that went to make up the beauty of the room. With skill, taste and love, one does not need a very long purse to make a charming boudoir, It was in perfect order, and here and there were little corners where the child's individuality had asserted itself,

I admired it to her hearts content, but when we went downstairs again I could not help a little jealous feeling for the Sumatra means the "happy land." Hayti means "mountain country." son of the house, as we went past the cheerless slip of a room. "Oh, Harry doesn't care about his room." Florence said lightly, as I made some comment. "Boys don't, you know. I am so glad I am not a boy,

They are so different from girls."

My admiration of the little lady suddenly had a cloud pass over it as I noted a slight superciliousness in her tone. Was that the prevailing sentiment of the house? "Boys are so different," with the difference by no means in favor of the boy. If so it was not strange that when the special charm for the boy, we were sitting downstairs when a boy's whistle is so like a bird's song, and overflowing into music of content and joy in life. I always like to hear it, and it starts the blood through my veins with new energy as my heart throbs re-aponaisely in sympathy with the boy's pring time is no sweeter to me, than "That must be Harry. He is late to-day," you said, glancing at the clock. In another moment the gate was opened Arabia was so called from its inhabi the Arabs.

In another moment the gate was opened and shut vigorously, and a boy's step came bounding up on the porch. He dashed into the hall and came into the sitting-room with a rush which suddenly slackened as he saw a stranger there. Evidently he had forgotten that I had been expected, and had come in over-flowing with the stranger law till the stranger than flowing with some plan or bit of news.
"Harry, that isn't the way to comcharging into a room," you said, in an noyed tones, looking at the flushed face, and tumbled hair, which clung in soft curls about the boy's forehead. "Why didn't you go upstairs and make your-self presentable first?" "I didn't know there was anyone here." he answered, coloring vividly with embarrassment, and then, as he underwent what was evidently to him "the land of snow." Prussia was at first Borussia, the count

He had become con-scious of them, that was all, and found Costa Rica is a Spanish exp them in his way when he had no use for signifying "rich coast." As the boy turned to go out of the room, his foot caught in the edge of a large rug, and he nearly lost his bal-ance; throwing out his arms to steady himself, he knocked over a vase that stood on the edge of a small table. Poor A Wenderful fiesh Producer.

MR. AND MRS. TOODLES.

The supper had been cleared away and the hired girl was washing the dishes in the kitchen and singing at her work. The twins, anugly tucked in their little cradles, were smiling in their sleep. Mr. Toodles was quietly reading his paper by the sitting-room table. The light shone actily on his meek and benevolent face and illuminated the full moon on the top of his small but sensible head. Mrs. Toodles was knitting in her favorite rocking chair by the cheerful grate fire.

But something was on Mrs. Toodles' mind. She allowed the kitten to play with the ball of yarn dropped from her capacious lap without once stamping her substantial feet and crying 'seat."

Finally she laid her long, glistening knitting needles down and aimed her penetrating spectacles straight at her diminutive husband who, without seeing it, felt the influence of the steady glare and, moved unassily in consequence.

Are you, my dear?' he answered.

"Are you, my dear?" he answered, looking sweetly at her strong and rather masculine features, "where are you going to take them?"

"Right here in this house and right sway," she said, decidedly. "Mrs. Brown, does and she's bought herself already a sealskin sack, a new piano and lots of lovely furniture ont of the profits. You always say you can't afford those things, but I know better. Now I've made my mind up to earn them myself, and don't you dare oppose if. This house will be a palace before I'm through."

"His house win be a passes, before I'm through."

"How many boarders will the twins leave you time to work for, my dear," he gently saked, without surprise or losing the place he was reading, "and what rooms can you give them?"

"Hi get two to start with and give them, your room and put you in the attic on a cot. You like the air up there, you say, and think the view is charming, and as for the twins, Mr. Toodles, you'll be delighted to hold them when I'm busy, of course.

"And it won't cost a cent extra for the table, either. What feeds four will feed more when I'do the buying and serving. Oh! It takes a woman to manage those things. And then you'll have company to talk with at home, so you won't have to visit the 'club'—as you call it."

"Will your boarders amoke pipes, my dear, or eigarettee in our sitting room evenings? You can hardly bear a good cigar now, you know, and then the odor permeating the house might ossify the twins and lead them to love cigar.

"My boarders will not smoke if I don't like it—any more than you, Mr. Toodles," snapped the good lady.
"But you can't prevent them smoking in their room, my dear, and that is next to yours—and the twins."

Mes. Toodles more than you, Mr. Toodles now is happy in his quiet home.—H. C. Dodge, in Goodall's Sun.

Mrs. Toodles made no reply for swhile, but her woman's mind was shaken a bit.

"They can smoke with their heads out of a window. Maybe they won't use he vile weed at all. Every man isn't a thimney, puffing as if a ton of soft coal was burning inside of him," she vehem-

"No, indeed, my dear," blandly answered the husband, who loved a cigar next to his wife, "but who'll let the boarders in at night if they are out past our bedtime? You know you wouldn't want to trust strangers with a latch key to our home."

"Well, Mr. Toodles, if you ain't man

For a time all went on swimmingly, but soon even the twins in high chairs opposite Mr. Jack evinced surprise at the rapid disappearance of the food, and a pardonable fear lest they should starve a pardonable fear lest they sho in the midst of such a plenty.

Mrs. Toodles, in spite of her acknow-ledged fame as a hostess, showed signs of uneasiness, and soon became positively nervous at each fresh assault the new boarder made on the vivands, while her husband, pretending not to see her warning glances, kept on urging Mr. Easyman to eat.

At last when the staring twins themselves were in danger of being swallow-ed by the insatiable boarder to top of with, and when poor Mrs. Toodle: threatened to collapse entirely Mr. Easy-man pronounced himself satisfied—until breakfast!

She could scarcely see or breathe in the fog of pipe smoke they made, but she endured it bravely, for it wouldn't do to frighten the gay and apparently contented new boarder away by too suddenly disturbing his home comfort

But when the pair of rascals began a But when the pair of rascals began a heated political argument, each, of course, taking opposite sides, she commenced to see that keeping boarders wasn't as nice as her friend, Mrs. Brown, had cracked it up to be.

It was not a very important looking tter; just a small, square white en-clope addressed in an even business sary. He could not have made a more cloquent plea. He well knew that, for not missive for Miss Darrell had passed amined the writing closely.

Through the long hours of the evening while the neighbors had congregated in the little room there was a conflict in the postmaster's mind. Like the Danish prince, he was trying to solve the question: "To be or not to be." "To do or not to do." By twenty minutes to nine the little room was deserted. Securely fastening the outer door and the one communicating with the sitting-room of his sister's family, the postmaster removed the oil lamp from its accustomed place on the bracket on the wall to his desk in the corner and once more took up Millicent's letter.

The postmaster's life had always been ery prosaic. There was one thing in his remembrance that had ever shed a roseate glow over the commonplace, nis remembrance that had ever shed a roseafe glow over the commonplace, monotonous expanse of years he had lived through, and that was an unived through, and that was an universal of the state of the state for nearly six and the state of t avowed affection for Millicent Darrell. He had worshipped her from afar when they had gone to school together at the little red brick house at the foot of the hill. Time had but served to strength this childish devotion. Through youth and the first years of his manhood she were, fully as unapproachable as though she had in reality occupied a position in a world far beyond the sphere wherein

She may have been aware of the homage that was hers, but had given no encouragement to the admirer, who was too faint-hearted to give expression to his regard by word or sign, but who hopelessly waited for some one else to win the prize that he so much valued. But for reasons best known to herself But for reasons best known to herself alone Miss Darrell preferred a life of single blessedness to one of double wretchedness, and passed contentedly and comfortably into a state of old-maidenhood, and the postmaster settled down into a chronic, lovelorn melancholy, from which comatose condition he was martially aroused now and then he was partially aroused now and then by the thought that she might yet change her mind and honor some unfor-tunate being with her heart and hand. So that was the situation when Miss Darrell went down to the seashore one Summer to visit her brother. Silas Gardiner's heart was filled with mis-givings during her absence, lest what he had long feared should come to pass. It was about a week after her return, in the autumn, that the carrier brought the letter, the very appearance of which was sufficient to produce such agitation in his breast, and a perusal of which confirmed his instinctive belief in some entangling alliance. That night, as he read and reread the words that were intended for his shillicent's eyes

one, his heart grew heavy, for every line breathed forth an unmistakable devotion, which judging from the frequent allusions to future happiness, was not

It was near morning when he com-pleted his deliberations over the letter and carefully located it in a seldom-used compartment of his desk. The next day Miss Darrell drove over to the office with her niece and namesake, who had accompanied her on her return to Chelsea station, and inquired for mail.

During the next few weeks letters came for Miss Darrell on an average of once a day—letters whose tone ranged NYE ON IMAGINATION. through the various phases of human passion, from most tender affection to extreme anger at their failure to elicit a reply, and each, as it arrived, was read by Mr. Gardiner with a sort of grim satisfaction and deposited with its predecessors.

it mean?" "I'm not at all surprised. It's just as I expected." Miss Millicent answered. with a half-triumphant air. "Didn't I tell you so? Don't you remember what I said to you the first day I saw him about deceit and rascality being depicted upon his countenance? And I consider myself a pretty good judge of human nature. Of course he's never write to you. He's just been making a fool of you this

In the recesses of her heart Miss Darrell may have sympathized with her niece, but she only expressed contempt for such a romantic trust in the sincerity of the wooer who had been known but one summer, and the discussion ended there.
Charles Williams was puzzled and angry, decidedly so. To the best of his knowledge he had written thirty-five letters to Miss Millicent Darrell, the younger, in as many days, not one of which she had deemed worthy of an an-"She's just like the rest of 'em," he told his best friend when lamenting the "So innocent and true she seemed too. What a fool I was to believe her, She's nothing but a confounded flirt. I'll think no more about her."

Contrary to his declaration of forgetfulness, he thought more about her than ever, and the consequence was that he went down to Chelsea station the next day to investigate the case. The explanations which directly followed con-vinced each young person of the faith, fulness of the other, and Miss Darrell acknowledged her inability to interpret ne's nature from the physiognomy. But there was one question confronting them, and that was: "Where were hose letters?" Thirty-five epistles, all neavy laden with deepest feeling, could hardly have gone astray. The only pos-sible solution was that some one must have taken them, but who could it have been? Miss Darrell left the lovers disbeing the possessors of such an inconvenient article, but the worthy officials of the above mentioned point was an exception to the rule.

He went to his desk, and taking out the bundle of letters, gave them to her, saying: "Here they are. I pray you not to expose me. I did it because of my love for you. I could not bear—"

"MILLICENT GARDINER." THE NEW ARMENIAN PATRIARCH. Ismirilan a Brave and Talented Man Popular With the People. Mgr. M. Izmirilan was elected to the chair of Armenian patriarchate of Constantinople just a few weeks ago, after the resignation of Mgr. Ashikian, who was compelled to leave his high office, as he took up Millicent's letter.

He held it up to the light; he put it

With with which both ladies received the contents of box No. 13, a wave of repentance rolled over the postmaster's soul and the letter secreted in his private desk appeared before him like an accusing angel.

> HE TELLS OF A SPECIALLY FINE IN-STANCE IN WASHINGTON.

Crime and the Consequences-How Fresh Air Crank Enjoyed Sound Sleep in a Pullman Car.

Last summer a mysterious crime occurred in K street, northwest. Washington, D.C., which was never given to the public. On a sultry midsummer day a man might have been seen glancing furtively about in that neighborhood as if to see if any one might be observing him, while under his arm and partly concealed he carried an inanimate, cold and pulseless body.

The servant who saw him from the window of an upper story near by thought it looked like the body of a deceased dog. While she watched him from behind a closed shutter he dexterously concealed his burden beneath the shrubbery in the adjoining grounds and fled on swift pinions, so to speak, being soon lost to view. In a couple of days the neighboring servants began to complain of the odor and as the owner of the grounds whereupon the body had been deposited was away temporarily it was suggested that the boys who played on the adjoining grounds every day should get over the hedge and secure the remains, so that they might be entembed,

The boys crept up towards the shrubbery with patient clothespins on their noses, but could not approach nearer than twenty-five feet, though they could see the still, calm features of the little pet through the green leaves of the currant bushes. Evidently in life it had been a watch dog. and even in death it succeeded in keeping the boys away from the fruit. It was kind of touching to see the little dumb brute lie there so still in death, yet so eloquent withal that even his voiceless clay made people pay attention.

The boys came back to report that dog seemed to crave that part of Washington mostly for himself, and that he was ed most of it for his own use. By and by the neighbors got uneasy about their health. Washington gets pretty hot in summer, and even a moder-ate-sized dog under the genial rays of an August sun will attract more adverse cri n sometimes than the Administration This one did.

So a lady on the corner, whose house and grounds are next door to where the dog seemed to be taking place, sent word to the Police Department, asking that a cart and a good offhand memorial orator be sent up to K street, Meantime the owner returned to hi mesidence, and the lady who lives next do came along from the garden with a life-sized china dog.

"There," said the father, "I thought I had concealed that china dog in the cur-rant bushes, where it wouldn't be found

"Is that the dog that has been there in the bushes the past two weeks?"
"Yes."
"Well, the police will be here after it in a few minutes "Why?"

"Well, we thought we could smell it a good deal lately, and people threatened to move away if the police didn't do something with it. Some of my friends said that the odor kept them awake nights. One family whose home is at Constable Hook, N.J., and who are used to the clover-scented air of Elizabeth and the Standard oil works, moved away yesterday.

Standard oil works, moved away yesterday on account of it."

And soon afterwards the police did come along to relieve the neighborhood of the poisonous and pestilential odor of a china dog. This is a true story told me by one of the victims.

Imagination is a great thing. I have seen a fresh-air crank, after hours of restlessness on a Pullman car at night, raise a window and sleen sweetly all night, forlessness on a Pullman car at night, raise a window and sleep sweetly all night, forgetting that it was a double window.

Thirty years ago I wrote a composition upon "The Powers of Imagination," and I then said: "The powers of imagination are certainly many and wonderful." Pungent and radical as this statement seemed to me at the time, I can say now truly, even after the flight of years, that I see no reason for changing my mind.

THE GREAT SOUTH AMERICAN

Stomach Liver Cure The Most Astonishing Medical Discovery of the Last One Hundred Years.

It is Pleasant to the Taste as the Sweetest Nectar. It is Safe and Harmless as the Purest Milk. This wonderful Nervine Tonic has only recently been introduced into this country by the proprietors and manufacturers of the Great South American Nervine Tonic, and yet its great value as a curative agent has long been known by a few of the most learned physicians, who have not brought its merits and value to the knowledge of the

This medicine has completely solved the problem of the cure of indigestic dyspepsia, and diseases of the general nervous system. It is also of the greatest value in the cure of all forms of failing health from whatever cause. It performs this by the great nervine tonic qualities which it possesses, and by its great curative powers upon the digestive organs, the stomach, the liver and the bowels. No remedy compares with this wonderfully valuable Nervine Tonic as a builder and strength ener of the life forces of the human body, and as a great renewer of a broken-down constitution. It is also of more real permanent value in the treatment and cure of diseases of the lungs than any consumption remedy ever used on this continent. It is a marvelous cure for nervousness of females of all ages. Ladies who are approaching the critical period known as change in life, should not fail to use this great Nervine Tonic, almost constantly, for the space of two or three years. It will carry them safely over the danger. This great strengthener and curative is of inestimable value to the aged and infirm, because its great energizing properties will give them a new hold on life. It will add ten or fifteen years to the lives of many of those who will use a half dozen bottles of the remedy each year. IT IS A GREAT REMEDY FOR THE CURE OF

tion. When there is an insufficient supply of nerve food in the blood, a general state of debility of the brain, spinal marrow, and nerves is the result. Starved nerves, like starved muscles, become strong when the right kind of food is supplied; and a thousand weaknesses and ailments disappear as the nerves recover. As the nervous system must supply all the power by which the vital forces of the body are carried on, it is the first to suffer for want of perfect nutrition. Ordinary food does not contain a sufficient quantity of the kind of nutriment necessary to repair the wear our present mode of living and labor imposes upon the nerves. For this reason it becomes necessary that a nerve food be supplied. This South American Nervine has been found by analysis to contain the essential elements out of which nerve tissue is formed. This accounts for its universal adaptability to the cure of all forms of nervous de-

Tangement.
