ment in all fluctuations, the constant force in all changes.

We raise no altar to the unknown. God. The unseen is not the unknown. The conception of the eternal God covers the case. He is the equivalent of all that has come, of all that can come. He is the sufficient fountain for all created streams. His power and wisdom, His righteousness and love, are a sufficient reuson for all the force and wisdom, for all the low and goodness, which appear in the works of muture or the progress of municind.—Congregationalist.

fortable in the enjoyment of maferial blossings and religious privileges? Is there an exercise of necessary admonition and discipline in the churches? Is there not too frequently seen a state of things which is a source of weakness and shame to the church and a scandal to those who are without? The matter could be regularly brought to the notice of the church through the clerk. The pastors and deacons should be first consulted, and should endeavor, we think, to settle the difficulty without bringing it before the church as a body. If they fail in this, the matter could come before the church in the same way as any charge of un-christian conduct against a member. The church could not, of course, make the brother pay the diebt, but they could make his doing so a condition of his remaining in fellowship with the church. If the church refused to consider the case, it would then become a matter between the creditor and the church, and his recourse, according to our polity, would be an appeal to the association with which the church is connected. The aggrieved brother, if he thought it worth while, could bring the case to the notice of the association which, if it deemed it of sofficient importance, could appoint a committee or a commeil to advise with the church as to its duty in the matter.

are put down as contributing nothing for the work of the body. A closer examination, however, shows that this is not as bad as at first appears. Some, I discover, have Aid Societies that have given, though nothing appears opposite the name of the church. This is the case with the Second Grand Lake and Manchester churches, and probably of a few others. Most of the non-contributing churches are very small and weak and have had little poatoral labor during the year. There are a few, however, that are neither poor or pastorless that appear as non-contributors., Only a Tew of the churches assisted by the H. M. Board last year appear in this list, and one, at least (the Rockland church), is there by the mistake of some one. The total contributions of these churches was $1.486, and had they been supplied with pastoral care during all the year the amount would have been greater. Could our H. M. Board have the men and money to keep all our mission fields constantly supplied with efficient.

fields constantly supplied with efficient ministerial labor they would soon be contributing $4,000 or $5,000 to the denominational funds. We get back into the several funds of the body about one third of what the Board gives in the way of aid to weak churches. Without this aid we should get but little from them. Examination and comparison shows that there was a marked falling off in. the contributions of some of the churches. As several of these are the larger churches and have been regularly supplied with pastors, such falling off is rather surprising. The case of some others can be explained by the removal of pastors and the consequent interrup-

Is it Scriptural for Women to take a Public Part in the Social Exercises of the Church ?

My chief object in writing on the above question was an attempt to reconcile two statements of the Apostle Paul, which are seemingly commadistory. And I think I was successful in getting hold of the spirit of his statements. However, in your issue of the 30th ult., Bro. Denovan comes forward and virtually asys that the attempt was a total failure. He is careful about quoting the prohibition in full, but equally as careful about suppressing the permission. All that he says is this: "What, then, can mean those directions given in the eleventh chapter of the same apostolic epistle about the covering of a woman's, head when she prays, or prophesies! They mean exactly what they asy." And then he goes on to matters-that are altogether irrelevant to the subject in hand, without giving us the least hint about what they do mean. What does Bro. Denovan mean by this expression which, he says, is within the domain of woman's usefulness: "What about friendly domestic 'calls' and visits, where even Christian ladies are apt to indulge in small talk' that cannot be called very profuble"? This is, it I understand it right, very "small talk" and an insult to our Christian woman-hood.

It is no exaggeration to say that fully one-half the foil and trouble of the world is directly traceable to want of system. The unsystematic person takes twice as many steps as are necessary to do her work and suffers tree-le-weariness as the result. In households where work is done by system and each duty follows the other in regular succession, there is no confusion, no unnecessary dishes used in the cooking, no catastrophes that wear out the nerves and physical strength. In such houses everything drifts along harmoniously. Servants remain for years, because they know what is expected of them and they are not called from their regular work to attend to a thousand and offs superfluous matters. It would be curious to estimate superfluous work that is done in careless families or the time and strength daily lost in repairing misfortunes caused by simple carelessness. Sometimes one thoughtless, selfish individual will keep a house in turmoif from sunrise to susset by the various ways she finds to trespase upon their patience and time. THE average coay yields about 450 gallons of milk a year.

A ppearance is an important factor in marketing eggs at this time. It is not only important that they should be fresh, but also that they should be fresh, but also that they should be fresh, but also that they should be clean and free from streaks or dark spots.

To clean soot out of a chimney get on the roof and dropa long chain into it. Now holding fast to the end, shake it and jerk it up and down un this side and on that, and the soot will be in a heap at the bottom in a lifty.

"A speaker at the Indiana daign meeting expressed a laundable sentiment of enmity to the stanchion, and described his humane substitute." It is indeed regretable that this cruel contrivance is not generally displaced by the various devices which admit of more freedom of movement for the stabled cattle.

"Clay floors are well enough in summer, or even in winter in a warm stable, but in many places a plank floor would be preferable to a bed of clay covered with an icy coating several days at a time." Certainly it would be hard-heaged to make an animal lie on a clay floor in a cold barn, unless thick by covered with litter fresh every day. au between the poultice and the other lothing.

There is usually a troublesome cough coompanying that may be relieved by syrup of onions made by slicing raw mions into a bowl in alternate layers with white sugar; cover and get in the wen until the pluce is extracted, but to wold waste squeeze onions, syrup and Il through a strong cloth until no more side is to be had. Give this syrup at mervals and there is no danger of giving too much, for it will do no more sarm.

Advertised by Oxen.

To-day I saw a gray-haired manploughing with what may well and fitly be called a "noble" yoke of oxen. The farmer was breaking up a large tract of rough, stumpy land, recently reclaimed from forest. As I was observing him from the by-road along which I was possing, the plough caught under a big root, the strong oxen gave an unlucky

a torm of curses and a rain of angry blows on the gentle, patient oxen. This ploughman raised mether voice nor whip in anger. He calmly turned the team around, attached the oxen to the cart near by, into which he loaded the broken plough and drove home. I looked over the many broad acres already subdued by his persevering labor, and green with newly sprouted rye, and in my heart gave honor to this grayhaired farmer for the work he had done and for the way he did it. "He that I know something of a stranger's disposition after I have seen him (when he didn't know I saw him) driving oxen.

If when the animals are trying their
