INVICORATING SYRUP During the fall and winter of '9d and '97 I was greatly distressed with indigestion. I tried several remenies, each of which gave me no relief. I was advised to try your invigorating Syrup, which I readily did and have felt grateful ever since to the one who gave me such good advice. The very first dose helped me, and before half of the first bottle was used I was completely cured. I have not been troubled with the disease since. I have taken occasion to recommend your medicine publicly upon several occasions, and heartily do so now. You are at liberty to use this in any way you please.

This is his statement: "I suffered for five or six years with pains across my back, headaches, dizziness, and kindred kidney troubles. I got very bad, and when driving would often have to stop the horse, as the pains were so severe that I could not stand them. I tried a great many medicines, but they did me no good. I then got Doan's Kidney Pills at Watson's drug store, took them for one month, and am completely cured. I regard the cure as a remarkable testimony to the virtues of Doan's Pills, and am only too glad to recommend them to all sufferers from kidney trouble in any form."

CZAR'S LIFE ATTEMPTED.

When news of the trouble became known the white soldiers who were in the city gathered around the provost guards' headquatters and begged for guas and annualtien, crying like children became their requests were not granted to the scene of the battle. Mayor High ordered all saloons closed.

Several negro soldiers, one with a Springfield which had just been fired, were arrested and locked up, though it was with difficulty that the white soldiers and citizens were prevented from lynching them.

Berlin, Nov. 23.—A despatch from Elbing, the seaport of West Prussia, says an attempt was made upon the life of the Czar while his Majesty was returning from Copenhagen. Just before the Czar's special train crossed the bridge between Boehmonhoefen and Legern, a switchman discovered that the bridge had been barricaded. By almost superhuman efforts, as a result of which he is now in a hospital, the switchman succeeded in removing the obstacles, sufficiently to permit of the passage of the imperial train. An investigation which is being conducted in secret, is still proceeding.

found expression in these words:

Ellen Halloran with her baby in her arms. She didn't pay any attention to the music or the flags or the shouting. She was looking for her Mike, and she saw him, too, before I could have seen him with a telescope, and as she caught sight of him she pointed him out to the baby, saying:
"'There he is, alanna! D'ye see him there in the front rank? Oh, the brave lad! Give way, there, you, and lave me at him! Lave me at him! Mebbe I'll never see him again!'

"Well," said Maria, "what became of Halloran?" jogging her husband again out of his remniniscent dream.

"Yes, yes; excuse me, Maria. Well, I did not hear anything from Mike for three years. Then his regiment came back. Half of the men were left on the battlefield or in the hospital. I did hear that she was no await. that she ran away with some other man, but I never knew if the story was true. Anyway Mike enlisted and went away again. That was the second time I saw him. There wasn't anybody around there throwing forgetmenots or around there throwing forgetmenots on the graves, as I could see, Maria. My eyes ain't as good as they used to be, but I couldn't see no monuments reaching up to tell how them poor fellows had died. But in one of the paths between the gravestones I saw a sort of blackboard stuck up, and I put on my speed, and I read these lines, printed on the blackboard: Why, if you should strike me in anger, Janez, I should think the world would come to an end!"

"Yes, yes, my dear," replied the old man gently. "You might well think so, but ever since the world began men have fought with each other. Why, Cain killed Abel, according to Scripture, because of jealousy, and ever since that time murder has been committed for love, for hatred, for money and almost every other reason which you can imagine, Maria. It seems to be a part of human nature, this killing business. Why, I suppose that more men have been killed in the name of religion than for any other cause except perhaps for liberty. The very men who were driven out of England by religious persecution and who were the first white men to settle in this country—the Puritans—what do you suppose they did, Maria?"

"I dunno, Jabez," replied his wife. "What did they do?"

"They killed off all the Indians in New England, so that they could get possession of the land. The white men called it the survival of the fittest or some other high sounding thing like him?"
"That's just what I was a-going to tell you if you'll give me a chance," continued Jabez. "You see, just as I was a-going away I stooped down to see if there was any writing on one of the little wooden headstones, and when I scraped the moss away I saw these words: 'Michael Halloran, Joliet.'"—

"Dear, dear!" said the old lady in a flutter of excitement. "But tell me, Jabez, is that what the Americans are trying to do with the Spaniards?"

"No, Maria; this war is different. We don't want the land of the Spaniards. We have more than we know what to do with now. We are helping the Cubans to free themselves from the oppression of Spain. This is a war for humanity's sake, to save the lives of starving women and children. This, in my humble opinion, comes very near to being a genuine holy war. The Americans who die in it, whether from discase or violeages, are as much martyrs and each, but in the Elysian fields!"

At a meeting in Exester hall Bishop of the first and each, but in the Elysian fields!"

"Well," was the reply, "I feel that I am dead, but in the Elysian fields!" At a meeting in Exeter hall Bishop Wilberforce spoke eloquently, and at the close of his address the people began to go away. A gentleman, who, accord-ing to the programme, was to speak as if they died at the stake. There will be a long list of those heroes, Maria, at the judgment day—men who died in order that ignorance and superstition and oppression might be killed. 'Tis a shame, Maria, that the blood of noble men must be shed, but there seems to ing to the programme, was to speak, said to the bishop: "I need not speak. I hardly think they

In every part of activity of the brain, the the American continent except the frig- spinal cord and the nerves. id regions of the extreme north the earliest settlers found the turkey in its wild state. The species of fowl which was regarded as so toothsome at the first American Thanksgiving was the bird of today in his unenlightened condition The pioneers of all parts of the United States where there were extensive tracts of forest found wild turkeys in great abundance, and even in the days when deer were plentiful no hunter scorned this bird as unworthy of his prowess. Wild turkey hunting was and yet is a royal sport wherever the bird exists. He is considered noble game and, like the deer and the buffalo, has rapidly disappeared from many of his former baunts before the march of civi-lization. He is now seldom found in his rifle. The methods of taking the turkey all require the exercise of ingenuity.

Within the memory of many sports men turkey nunting was considered great sport in southern Indiana and Illinois, and the writer, who is "one of the trade," has brought down more than one of the proud birds by the skillful use of his father's ancient, long barreled Sweet Gir!—He hasn't any.

The bird is timid and regards man as his natural enemy. It is and has been since the turkeys of the country first observed that a man with a gun produced great noise and much slaughter among them impossible to get near nough to render a shot certain of results without approaching the game un-

native state except in the larger foreste territory and the jungles of semitropics

When turkeys were plentiful in the great wooded tracts of the Ohio and the Mississippi valleys, the hunters in the daytime sought for their roosts, which wero easily found by means of the fæces. Then he concealed himself within easy range of the place and awaited sunset, when a large flock would approuch the place and one by one fly up Take a Laxa-Liver Pill before reti to the almost horizontal branches on to the almost norizontal branches on or gripe, and make you feel better in the which the birds prefer to roost. The hunter must wait until the last of the flock has mounted the perch he gathers up his game and goes home to return long before the cock crows, for at break of day his turkeys will leave that roost never to return If he is careful, he may get two more of the lock as a result of his early morning er, by the skillful exercise of which he may he able to inveigle two or three noro of the turkeys to their death. In be wing of each turkey is a hollow bone that can readily be transformed into a whistle, the note of which, when properly blown, very closely resembles the call of a turkey Not far away and well concealed lies the "daylight murderer's accomplice." As soon after their flight from the perch as the turkeys dis-cover that all has become quiet and the gobblers have mustered up a little courage, they begin calling for the purpose of collecting the remnant of the flock preparatory to a permanent departure from the scene of the massacre. The second hunter softly answers with his whistle, and the chances are great that he will by often responding to the in-quiring cry lure the turkey within range of his gun. A sharp report, re-peated over and again by the echoing hillsides, a flutter of wings in a death struggle on the ground, and the forest is again wrapped in silence.

After an hour of waiting the hunter counds his call, then listens for a faint response. If none is heard, he ventures again. A third effort is likely to elicit an answer unless the turkeys have be-come so terrified by the last shot that by common impulse they have fled pre-cipitately alone or in very small groups. If they have hidden themselves in clumps of bushes or the tops of fallen trees to which the withered foliage is still clinging, the hunter may get another shot. The third method is to entrap the birds. A strong peu of logs or rails is erected in the wood, and a trench with an easy descent beneath the foundation piece is dug deep enough to admit the largest turkey without crowding In the trench a little corn is strewn, and the turkeys walk along cating or locking for something to eat as they go until all of them are within the pen. Then they become alarmed and go tearing around the inclosure with their heads erect and chirping as loudly as

He followed her, found her struggling against tears in the dining room, and, going straight to her he told his story. Lucy listened with an expression of unutterable anguish, tried time and at length broke away from his tentative embrace and fled back to the parlor.

For one painful moment Wilson remained where he was. Then upon his astonished ears came the sounds of that most beautifully melancholy nocturne played, it seemed, with more perfection of technique and feeling than he ever heard it. He tiptoed his way into the parlor and listened there, while he watched Lucy wring from the justrament the expression of her wealth of wos. Presently she stopped in the mid-dle of a passage, put her face in her hands and mouned, "Oh, I am so
