HUNDREDS HELP MAKE PRINCESS' WEDDING GOWN

Girls and Women Throughout United Kingdom Aid in Preparing Trousseau.

HAS WONDERFUL CLOAK

Bride-To-Be Makes Purchases for Evening Wardrobe in 25 London Shops.

London, Feb. 27.—(The Associated Press.)—Several hundred men, women and girls of the United Kingdom are proud of having had some small part in the designing and manufacture of various articles of Princess Mary's trousseau for her wedding tomorrow to Viscount Lascelles.

The trades and crafts they represent range from Irish colleen embroiderers, who helped make the lingerie, to gold miners of South Wales, who "panned" the metal from which the wedding ring was made.

Many articles of the bride's wedding apparel and travelling attire were tendered as gifts from various guilds and industries. Even the bride's bouquet is to be an evidence of good wishes from admirers; it will be presented by the Gardeners Company, one of the ancient City of London tradesmen's organizations.

Princess Mary's wedding gown, like those of her eight bridesmaids, will be of white silk ornamented with silver tissue. What form of head dress the bridesmaids shall wear has been a subject of much consideration. At former royal weddings the bridesmaids have worn veils. It has been suggested that those of the princess wear wreaths of flowers or bands of silver tissue.

Will Wear Old Veil.

Princess Mary will wear the wedding veil worn successively by Queen Victoria, Queen Alexandra and her mother, Queen Mary.

The bride has had a wonderful cloak prepared for the wedding day for wear as she drives to and from the Abbey. It is of pure white fur, and is modeled upon a similar garment worn by Lady Patricia Ramsay three years ago.

Surmise as to the bridal train was ended by the announcement that a bit of "The most beautiful cloth ever woven in England" had been delivered to the princess's dressmakers for use in fashioning this part of her gown. The surface is of satin smoothness, over a weft of finest silver, to which a backing of silk has been given that covers any slight roughness that the silver threads might offer to the touch.

This made a soft and pliant fabric that has a wonderful shimmer like that of clear running water under the light. The silver threads were spun in England, and the finest of China silk was used.

During the weaving of this triumph of the craft, a screen of white cotton was erected about the loom to keep all dust away. The weaver is one of the few craftsmen who have mastered the intricate art of weaving a three-pile velvet.

May Not Wear Jewels.

The famous Claricarde jewels have passed into the possession of Princess Mary, but it is unlikely that she will wear any of them on the day of her wedding, as they have not been worn since the early days of Queen Victoria's reign, and are, therefore, now hopelessly old-fashioned. The whole collection needs resetting in order to bring them into accordance with modern taste.

From his eccentric kinsman, Lord Clanricarde, Viscount Lascelles inherited £2,000,000.

The bride has accepted a pair of Norwich-made shoes, made by ex-service men. They are of fine cloth-of-silver brocade, with a true Louis XIV. heel, English hand-buffed leather soles and white kid lining. The buckle consists of a trefoil-pattern looped bow of fine seed pearls on a wisp of silver tissue.

From the Worshipful Company of Glovers, Princess Mary has received a "trousseau" of gloves—plain, full-length white kid gloves for the wedding, and an assortment of walking, riding, driving and hunting gloves of the finest skins, and made with the greatest of care.

Twenty-five London shops have received patronage from the bride in the completion of her wedding wardrobe. They embrace makers of afternoon dresses, evening dresses, coat dresses, evening coats, jumpers, handkerchiefs, shoes, hats and lingerie. In addition, homespuns for traveling suits, and lace and embroideries for lingerie have been obtained from Scotland and Ireland.

Lauds Aid City Newspaper Gives Pulpit

PASTOR FINDS GREAT ALLY IN SERMON PAGE

Rev. W. R. McIntosh Commends Devotion of Larger Space to Church News.

MAN ON STREET REACHED

Believes Conversions May Result From Reports of Gospel Messages.

That newspapers which publish reports of sermons are doing a great service, in that they reach the "man in the street," was the declaration of Rev. W. R. McIntosh, at King Street Presbyterian Church Sunday evening. He paid a tribute to this service, taking for his subject, "Do Men Read the Sermon Page of the Newspapers?"

"I hope so," commented Mr. McIntosh, explaining that in his opinion the reports would not be published if they were not read by subscribers. "If some men I know do not get it out of the newspapers, they won't get it at all. I see they are putting in sermons more and more."

The minister humorously remarked that he would not be surprised to learn that there was a reporter present at his service, "because reporters follow good sermons." He pointed out that although comparatively few people attended the Gypsy Smith services held here, practically every citizen was familiar with his teachings through the medium of the newspapers.

He even expressed the hope that conversations would result from the publication of sermons in the papers.

"Why shouldn't there be a new form of conversion just as there are new bonnets in the spring?" he queried. "A man needs the solitude of his own soul to be converted. There are lots of skeptics here, but there are lots of people reading the sermon page in the newspaper, especially if they are next to reality. We want sermons mixed with manhood."

Solve All Problems.

"Our teaching will solve all the public problems of the average man. Whether the pulpit can do it, I don't know, but the press and other great agencies can help. It would promote a brotherly feeling for fellow men in business, politics and everywhere. Some churches think they are getting along fine, keeping religion in the church. Our pulpits ought to flood the world with religion.

"As a matter of fact," continued the minister, "in my humble opinion the pulpit is not big enough to do it itself, and that's why I like to see the sermons in the newspaper. God bless the press. It has done a great service and had a hard time of it, and gives us a hard time of it, when they misreport us. But I am not one of those who call up and say: 'Take that back.'

"The reporter sitting in the back seat may be perplexed in getting a sermon down, but he gets it wonderfully right. They get the essence of it right. I want to say a word for the reporters that they may feel their power for Christ. God gave the newspapers the power to use all their agencies. The newspaper is the great vehicle of God if you can fill it with religion."

Mr. McIntosh related a conversation held with a member of his congregation, who stated that the sermon page of the newspaper is "the first thing I read when the paper comes to us, and if I do not see any blood and thunder on the front page I then read the sermons."

History to Repeat Itself.

In his opening remarks the minister stated that history is about to repeat itself and function through folks.

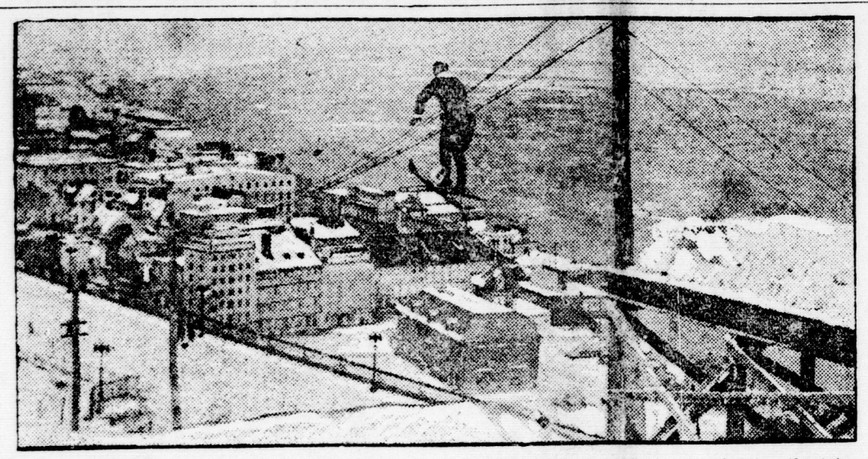

"Artists have done us a poor service," he asserted, "in picturing Christ with long hair and an aura."

"I do not think it right. Jesus was sunburned and a man among men: a plain man of the people. He was a radical in his time, and passed up the priests and scholars deciding to function through plain folks. By reason of this he revolutionized the world. It was part of his plan to make new appeals."

In illustration of this point, Mr. McIntosh explained that Christ has functioned through the ages by means

REPORT GROWTH OF INDIAN UNREST

Correspondents Emphasize Serious Conditions Which Have Arisen In Various Localities.

SIKHS BECOME HOSTILE

In Calcutta Region Tax Collectors Are Being Intimidated or Boycotted.

London, England, Feb. 27.—The serious conditions of unrest in India are emphasized by correspondents of the London Times from various localities in India. They pay particular attention to the growing hostilities of the Sikhs.

The correspondent accompanying the Prince of Wales, in a dispatch from Patalia last Friday, says it is notorious that the bitterness of the Sikhs has been largely fomented by Indians who have returned from America, "without whom, long before this, they might have been brought to see the unreasonableness of their animosity."

He says that the Punjab, though owing little allegiance to Mohandas K. Gandhi, is the most greatly disturbed and most mutinously-inclined district of the whole country. The extremists are showing rebelliousness under the restrictions of the resolutions of the national congress held at Bardolia, calling for a suspension of civil disobedience, and the Khalifatist mobs may at any moment become dangerous.

The correspondent at Allahabad, telegraphing on Friday, reports hostility to the Europeans as being manifest in towns and villages over large areas in the united provinces and in Bihar. He adds that scarcely a day passes without reports of riots.

A significant agrarian movement is progressing in the Calcutta region, says the correspondent there. The tenants have organized, the Zemindar tax collectors are being intimidated or boycotted and crops are being destroyed.

FULL MONOPOLY SOUGHT

British Columbia Would Bar Individual Importations of Liquor.

Ottawa, Feb. 27.—An amendment to the Canada Temperance Act, which would be of concern to every province that has control of the liquor traffic is sought by attorney-general Manson of British Columbia, who is now in Ottawa. He asks that where any province controls the sale of liquor, importation by individuals, shall be prohibited.

It is claimed that in British Columbia the success of the local act is threatened by the fact that the government lacks a complete monopoly. If such were the case it is claimed that conditions would be greatly bettered.

The argument is also put forth that the right of monopoly of the Quebec government is open to question if anyone should choose to challenge it and that it would be in the interests of that province also if the amendments sought were enacted.

SEE SIGNS OF EARLY SPRING

New York, Feb. 27. — Amateur weather prophets here were out today with claims of an early spring, reporting it on the authority of what is considered an infallible "sign." In New York the barometers appeared in the zoo in the persons of prairie dogs, who took the air all day yesterday.

PARIS NEWSPAPER SCORES FIVE-POWER AGREEMENT

Temps Claims Pact Lacks International and Permanent Organization.

Paris, Feb. 27.—Publishing the text of the five power treaty, signed at Washington on February 6, the Temps finds many points to criticize in the document, "and not one to praise." "What is deficient in the Washington treaty?" This is the heading which the paper uses in its editorial on the subject, then, summing up the work of the conference, it says: "It can be foretold that the treaty lacks international and permanent organization to adapt it to circumstances and to guarantee its execution. The Washington conference has wished, while entirely ignoring the league of nations alone could keep up. Thus the edifice is majestic, rather than solid. Its defect in solidity is even the sole excuse which its architects can invoke for the numerous means of outlet with which they have provided themselves."

SW ALLOWS POISON ON SEEING BRIDE

New York, Feb. 27.—Ida Friedman, 30, a garment worker, is battling for life in a Harlem hospital today following her attempt at suicide by swallowing poison at the sight of a passing unknown bride last night. Miss Friedman and Harry Rosenthal, with whom she is said to have been keeping company for five years, were walking homeward when they passed a taxicab to which shoes and gay ribbons had been attached in token that it bore a newly-married pair.

"I envy that girl in there," the young woman said.

To Rosenthal's query she answered she would like to get married.

"Wy don't you?" he is reported to have asked.

"Will you marry me?" she is said to have asked.

While Rosenthal was framing an answer she stumbled, throwing an empty bottle to the street at the same time.

"I have taken poison," she said. Rosenthal called an ambulance.

GRAIN STORAGE DECREASES.

Ottawa, Feb. 27.—(Canadian Press).—According to returns received at the Dominion bureau of statistics for the week ending Feb. 17, 1922, the quantity of grain in store at the different elevators throughout Canada has decreased by 2,634,145 bushels, made up as follows: "Wheat, 2,138,144 bushels; oats, 367,488 bushels; barley, 64,620 bushels, and flax, 63,893 bushels; rye indicates an increase of 21,606 bushels.

SOVIET TO GRANT GENOA REQUESTS

DESIRE FINANCIAL AID

Experts Attribute Attitude As Result of Famine Conditions.

Moscow, Feb. 27.—The soviet delegation to Genoa will carry instructions to grant all concessions demanded, provided a big reconstruction loan can be obtained. If this loan cannot be arranged, then, from the Russian point of view, the conference has only the moral value of recognition of the present government.

The basic reason for this attitude is the famine. It is only within the last few weeks that the leaders of the soviet have realized just how desperate is the food situation. So long as the famine starves to death the peasants and the remaining bourgeosie, though it be on a scale of millions, the soviet leaders are untouched and rather indifferent.

But the famine is now slowly but surely encroaching on and encircling their strongholds—Moscow—and soviet representatives from every part of Russia, sent to get food, report that there is less and less to be had, that beginning with March the favored red army will begin to starve, and that each succeeding month will be worse, until July, when harvests, more or less scant, may relieve the situation.

What may happen between now and the summer months is troubling the soviet leaders. If a big loan is arranged the situation can be saved. If not, the hundred million or so dollars in the soviet treasury will have to go for food, and even that may not save the country from anarchy.

STILL SEEK FOR SANDS

Police Believe Missing Butler Has Clue in Taylor Murder.

Los Angeles, Feb. 27.—Practically all other leads to a solution of the murder of William Desmond Taylor, film director here Feb. 1, have failed, the police declared today, as they prepared to concentrate their futher efforts upon a search for Edward F. Sands, Taylor's missing former butler-secretary.

It was planned to assemble new data on Sands, including even his mannerisms. It was said, and to compile a special bulletin for distribution to virtually every police officer in the United States. The police frankly state that they believe Sands can supply a clue to Taylor's murder.

Police Sergeant Jack Stelzreide was said to have gone to San Francisco to search for a woman to whom telegrams bearing on the Taylor case were reported to have been sent from here the night of the murder and the next day.

DISCREDITS FIELD'S STORY.

Seattle, Wash., Feb. 27.—Mrs. Lillie Fields, divorced wife of Harry M. Fields, held by Detroit police in connection with his declaration that he could clear up the Taylor murder case, declared here last night that Fields "always told wild stories about himself, and he is probably telling lies to the Detroit police."

Mrs. Fields, who is confined to a hospital here, said her former husband was a constant user of opium.

STOP BOTTLING OF MILK EXCEPT UNDER LICENSE

Board of Health Members Plan Revision of City Bylaw.

AFFECTS RURAL DEALERS

Proposed Amendments Call For Better Care of Herds and Supply.

An amendment is to be made to the milk bylaw of the city prohibiting the bottling of milk for sale in London on other than licensed premises.

The milk bylaw will be the subject of discussion at a special meeting of the board of health called for Tuesday afternoon. The whole bylaw will be thoroughly gone over and revised. The above amendment is the most important so far proposed.

The full effect of such a bylaw will be felt in the country, where a great deal of the milk sold in the city is now bottled.

Must Secure License.

Dairymen will not be allowed to bottle their milk in the country and bring it in the city to sell unless they secure a license, and the main conditions of this license will be strict sanitary laws in regard to bottling and the plant and equipment.

Dr. Tamlin, veterinary of the local board of health, has long advocated that the city should have all bottling done in properly equipped plants in the city.

The main argument advanced by the veterinary in support of this was that in the country proper sterilization of bottles could not be secured, and continued inspection was difficult. He declared that it was better to have the old tin can method of handling milk than unclean bottles. There might be one unclean can to a hundred unclean bottles.

Herds To Be Tested.

Copies of bylaws in force in many other centers have been received by Dr. Downham, M.O.H., and London's revision will take pattern from these bylaws.

Included in the amendments will be other points to make the bylaw proper for the sale of certified and pasteurized milk, after the testing of herds for tuberculosis.

The bylaw will not be put through completely Tuesday. It will likely be drafted and laid over for consideration. It must also be approved by the city council.

WILL NOT SUFFER PAIN ON GALLOWS

Chicago, Feb. 27.—Medical and physiological experts, who for thirty days have been watching the desperate effort of Harvey W. Church, double slayer, sentenced to hang on Friday, to cheat the gallows by starving himself, today declared that he had succeeded in committing mental suicide.

He is not insane, they say, but has reduced himself to such a state of self-hypnosis that he will feel no pain when the trap is sprung on Friday.

Church's hunger strike began more than 30 days ago. For the past two weeks he has been forcibly fed, but seems insensible to pins stuck into his flesh or any other efforts to rouse him.

DROWNS SON IN BATHTUB.

New York, Feb. 27.—Walter Liddle, 19, a clerk, confessed last night, the police said, that he drowned his 7-months-old son in the bathtub of his Bronx home yesterday afternoon, because his young wife refused to return to him. Pressed for an explanation he is said to have decided to "end it all by drowning the baby and having the state electrocute me."

He was arrested on a homicide charge.

INDORSE PREMIER'S ACTION.

Paris, Feb. 27.—Paris newspapers are today practically unanimous in heartily indorsing results achieved by Premier Poincare of France and Premier Lloyd George at their conference in Boulogne Saturday.

l'Humanite, with communistic tendencies, strikes the single discordant note, in its declaration. "French militarism and British commerce are still arrayed against each other quarreling about the advantages secured from their supremacy."

URGES CANADIAN RESEARCH BUREAU

Advisory Committee Asks Government to Aid Scientific Invesigation.

PROGRESS IS REPORTED

Financial Assistance Recommended the Toward Expenses of the Enquiry.

Ottawa, Feb. 27.—The government is being urged to provide for the establishment of a Canadian research institute, similar to those already established in other countries. The need of such an institution was one of the important subjects before the meeting of the honorary advisory council for scientific and industrial research, which concluded today, and in the interview with the premier and members of the cabinet the committee urged that such an institution be provided.

A report was received by the committee stating that progress is being made in the investigation into the deterioration of concrete in the alkaline soils of western Canada. It is estimated that thousands of dollars have been lost through this deterioration during past years.

The council recommended that financial assistance be granted toward the expenses of an investigation to discover the cause of soil corrosion of underground iron structures.

Change in the inland revenue regulations governing denatured alcohol are being urged by the committee. Reports were also received from the committee on nitrogen, committee of chemists, committee on engineering physics, committee on mining and metallurgy, air research committee and the food research committee.

An invitation was received from the British cotton industry association requesting that Canada be represented at the opening of their new research laboratories at Manchester, England, in March next.

HOLD FATHER RESPONSIBLE

Montreal Jurymen Return Verdict in Case of Child's Death.

Montreal, Feb. 27.—The tragedy of the death of Yvette Guillemette, 5-months-old daughter of Louis Guillemette, Jolliette street, who was suffocated on Thursday night while sleeping on a sofa beside her father, did not terminate with a verdict of accidental death at the inquest on Saturday, as was generally expected, but resulted in Guillemette being held responsible for the untimely demise of his child. Prior to the inquest, the case was investigated by an official of the coroner's court, who decided that the accused had been drinking and had subsequently been in a state of intoxication when he had laid down on the sofa beside the sleeping babe. Coroner McMahon, therefore, decided that he must have smothered the child during the night.

PAY TRIBUTE TO MEMORIES OF CITY VETERANS

Rev. William Beattie and Major-General H. A. Panet Officiate at Color Trooping.

MEDALS ARE PRESENTED

Royal Canadian Regiment Again Unfurls Flag Given by King.

Although many members of the second special service battalion of the Royal Canadian Regiment, which maintained traditions of the British army at Paardeburg in the South African campaign, have passed away since that glorious victory, their memory was eulogized today and homage done their deeds, when the banner presented to them by King Royal Canadian Regiment trooped the Edward VII. for services rendered in South Africa.

The Royal Canadian Regiment, with Captain A. K. Hamming in command, paraded to the armories and was drawn up inside the building, facing the main entrance. The King's banner was stationed at the western extremity of the drill hall, in charge of Lieut. W. S. Fenton, and escorted by Sergeant Rudee and Sergennt Hodge.

These non-commissioned officers then carried the banner to the commanding officer, who stood at the center of the troops. To strains of the regimental band, the soldiers paid their compliments to the banner as it was removed from its case. It was slowly unfurled by Capt. Hemming to the accompaniment of rolling of drums, the music of which swelled and died away in an impressive manner.

Banner Is Trooped.

The banner was then trooped in front of the regiment, being preceded by the band which slowly marched to the end of the armories and countermarched back, dividing its ranks between the ranks of the battalion and the banner going between ranks. Following the trooping of the banner Lieut.-Col. (Rev.) William Beattie, C.M.G., addressed the general public and the officers and men of the regiment.

Col. Beattie first delivered his remarks to the general public present saying that they should be filled with a spirit of gratitude towards the men of this battalion that had such a splendid tradition. "The British army is an army for defence and not for agression," said the colonel.

The speaker then gave a short history of the regiment from the time that it first went into action in the northwest rebellion until the Great War. "Read the records of this battalion the same as you would the records of the battalions that your own sons and husbands served with in the recent war."

Speaking to the men of the regiment the colonel said, "you are very proud of your selves and rightly so for you have a great tradition, you have a great tradition for toughness, not in the rough and rowdy kind but the kind that enabled you to undertake to long marches in the west and in South Africa, and which enabled you to stand firm under the withering fire in France. Besides these engagements you rendered valuable service in the Yukon territory, when the northwest mounted police were a small force and had a big question to deal with, when the scum of the earth all rushed to the one point, you rendered service then

RECALLS DAYS WHEN LONDON'S SONS LAID DOWN LIVES TO CAPTURE PAARDEBURG

The part played by Canadians in the South African war stands out, almost without parallel in the history of any colony, but the surrender of Paardeburg brought them more into the limelight than ever. It was the first fight of Lord Roberts' campaign, crowned with success and heralded all over the Empire as "the beginning of the end." It had been achieved by strategy, brilliantly conceived and as brilliantly executed. Of course, losses were suffered, and of those London's quota bore its share, in mute testimony of which, the monument stands in Victoria Park.

The surrender was the result of military operations following Cronje's flight toward Bloemfontein, an unlooked for contingency. It compelled the British army to make a forced march across country to overtake the Boers at Modder River. It seemed doubtful if the Boers could be overtaken, and it was only the superb marching of the British army which saved the day, marching, which called forth the admiration of military critics the world over. They marched four days over rough broken ground, choking in blinding stand storms, or again thirsting under a pitiless sun, sometimes going fifteen miles without water. Greatly suffering they held their way, and were able to reach the Modder River in time to prevent Cronje from crossing with his whole army, and reaching Bloemfontein.

Cronje's only hope now lay in getting reinforcements and he had chosen a splendid position in which to await them. Clinging to the river, upon whose waters he depended for existence, he formed his laager on the north bank, which sloped down to the water's edge, and had placed his whole force in the bed of the river. He was fighting with his back to the wall, and it was nine days before his surrender could be effected.

On Feb. 27, the ninth day, the anniversary of the defeat of Majuba Hill, the Canadians, accompanied by the Royal Engineers, the Gordons and the Shropshires, started at 2 a.m. to avenge the blot of defeat on the Empire's history. So magnificent was their charge, that at 4:45 Cronje sent a message to Lord Roberts offering complete surrender.

The Canadians had played their part. Men of a new nation, fighting in a strange country, under unspeakable hardships, they suffered mothing in comparison with regiments which had lasted through war and peace for hundreds of years, and whose traditions were as old as England itself.

Then as in the great war, Canada proved herself a nation, and in the part which Canada as a whole played, Londoners did a share, not by any means the least.

COMMITTEE OF HOUSE TO FACE IRISH BILL SOON

Winston Churchill Expected To Make Announcement on Result of Conference.

DE VALERA GETS OVATION

Hears People Ready to "Fling Away" Birthright of Nation.

BULLETIN.

BELFAST, Feb. 26.—James Hughes, 26 years old, was the victim of a fatal attack on Saturday night by three men who rushed out on him from a side street. The killing was witnessed by the young man's mother.

LONDON, Feb. 26.—The delegates of the Irish provisional government conferred for an hour and a half this afternoon at the colonial office with Winston Spencer Churchill, colonial secretary; Sir Hamar Greenwood, chief secretary for Ireland, and Sir Laming Worthington-Evans, secretary for war.

Both sides are reported to be taking a cheerful view of the situation. The discussions are said to have proceeded so smoothly from their commencement that Mr. Churchill was able to inform Premier Lloyd George, who had been in readiness for a call, that he need not disturb his week-end.

Arthur Griffith and his colleagues started on their return to Ireland tonight.

Mr. Griffith, after the conference, said he was satisfied that the British government was standing by the terms of the treaty. Both Mr. Griffith and Mr. Duggan seemed hopeful that a healthier atmosphere would prevail, because of the mutual recognition of each other's difficulties.

It is understood that Winston Churchill will make a statement in the House of Commons on Monday or Tuesday on the results of the conference, and announce that the Free State bill will be proceeded with at once in committee of the Commons.

GIVE DE VALERA OVATION.

BELFAST, Feb. 26.—Eamon de Valera, in continuing his electioneering campaign, was received last night at Ennis, County Clare, with enthusiasm. Ennis is Mr. de Valera's constituency. He was met at the station by a uniformed guard of honor and escorted by a procession to a hotel. The town was illuminated.

In acknowledging the reception accorded him, Mr. de Valera said he and his followers had heard strange things in Dublin—that 50 per cent of the Irish people were willing to fling away the nation's birthright.

ST. THOMAS BOYS RECEIVE SENTENCE

Two Given Indefinite Terms in Industrial School at Toronto.

THIRD OFFENDER FREED

Youthful Trio Arraigned for Stealing Robe and Attempting Auto Theft.

ST. THOMAS, Feb. 26.—Two of the three boys who were arrested Thursday last charged with stealing an automobile robe and attempting to steal a car belonging to O. R. Service of Norwich, were sentenced Saturday morning to indefinite terms in the Victoria Industrial School at Toronto, when they were arraigned before Magistrate Maxwell for sentence. The third member of the party was given another chance to go straight.

The third boy was liberated when his Kiwanian guardian who made a strong plea in the prisoner's behalf, stated that he was willing to continue his interest in the lad. He believed that there was much good in the boy, and felt confident that it could be developed.

The boys denied vehemently that they were members of the gang of boys who committed several robberies in this city a few months ago, although they were arrested along with members of the gang at that time and later were turned over to Kiwanian guardians.

Based on an estimated coal production of 43,955,000 tons last month, the death rate was 3.22 per million tons mined, compared with 4.13 for January, 1921.

Mayor Wedlake Takes Stand in Police Investigation at Brantford.

SURE RUM RING SHIELDED

Raney Furnished With Evidence Obtained by Citizens' Special Detectives.

Special to London Advertiser.

BRANTFORD, Feb. 25. — Mayor George Wedlake was the principal witness called at the police probe before Commissioner W. D. Gregory yesterday morning.

As to his candidature for mayor in 1920, witness recalled that there was a great deal of dissatisfaction in the city, and he was waited upon by a deputation of businessmen, representative citizens of Brantford, who stated that there should be a clean up. They wanted him to run. This deputation waited upon him in the fall of 1920.

One of his first acts was to send for Chief Slemin, who seemed very sympathetic in regard to all of the mayor's suggestions. The latter had told him about reports he had heard of Inspector Chapman and Detective Schuler. He recalled that at that time, In 1921, there were reports that Schuler was protecting bootleggers, and that Chapman was protecting the gambling places. Chief Slemin promised prompt action. He disclosed plans for raids which failed. The birds had flown. Chief Slemin could not account for it. Witness told him of his belief that advance information was being given out. He suggested that the chief give leave of absence to Chapman and Schuler for six months, and put in their places other men, to see if any improvement couldn't be made. To all his suggestions, he was met with invitations to bring on his charges.

Then the Spence burglary occurred, and there seemed to be enough evidence to ask for the suspension of the three officers, Chapman, Schuler and Stewart. When the motion to suspend the officers was brought up it was bitterly opposed by Magistrate Livingston.

The next witness was Mr. William P. Kellett, who said that he was president and general manager of the Dominion Steel Products Company. In his opinion the police commissions of the past ten years had apparently been under the influence of Louis Stander. He recalled that several meetings of citizens had been held with the idea of breaking Stander's hold at the police court.

It seemed to be the impression that Stander seemed to have an influence with Magistrate Livingston, he said.

It was believed that Stander was on very intimate terms with the mayor, and witness said that his influence thus extended over two members of the commission.

Mr. Kellett referred to a deputation, of which he was one, which went to Toronto to interview the attorney-general's department. Subsequently about $7,000 or $8,000 was raised by private subscription, and a firm of detectives was put on the job gathering evidence for a whole year. This mass of data was then turned over to the attorney-general's department.

PETITION NOT YET FILED

Move to Unseat Hon. W. R. Motherwell Still Only Rumored.

Regina, Sask., Feb. 27.—No petition has been filed in the courts here to commence action to unseat Hon. W. R. Motherwell, minister of agriculture.

When questioned with reference to the rumored action last night, R. M. Johnson, M. P. for Moose Jaw, said that he had not heard anything.

"I have seen the reports in the newspapers and that is all I know about ti," he said.

C. E. Gregory, K. C., counsel for the new national party political association, made similar comment.

"I know nothing about it," was all he was prepared to say.

It was reported from Moose Jaw on Sunday that the national political association had decided to take action to unseat Mr. Motherwell.

It was said that the action would be one of reprisal for the action taken in Moose Jaw to unseat R. M. Johnson, M. P.

BODY FLOATED AGAINST THE CURRENT

URGES FLOATING EXHIBITION.

Halifax, N. S., Feb. 27.—(Canadian Press).—Canada's principal need now being an increased export trade, it is being suggested here that the Canadian Government should fit out one of its idle steamers here as a floating exhibition of Canadian products, and send it on a voyage to the principal trading ports of the world. Such a floating exhibition could, it is pointed out, be fitted into the plan of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association to run a special train bearing exhibits of Canadian products through France.

WANT RAILWAY RESTORED TO OLD-TIME BASIS

Maritime Members of Parliament Demand Intercolonial Road Be Recognized.

MAINTAIN ONTARIO AND QUEBEC HAVE ADVANTAGE

Assert Line Not Fulfilling Part Fathers of Confederation Intended.

HALIFAX, N. S., Feb. 26.—The demand of the Maritime members of Parliament for the restoration of the old Intercolonial Railway to the position it was intended to occupy by the fathers of Confederation may be regarded as part of a growing movement to resist the tendency to the centralization of the industrial, financial and business affairs generally of Canada. The growth of the industrial and financial activities of the central provinces, Ontario and Quebec, has been out of proportion to the development of similar activities in the Maritime Provinces, it is believed, and it is a common complaint among Maritime businessmen that the tariff and railway policies of Canada have in the past been more adjusted to the interests of the central provinces than to the needs of the Maritime Provinces.

With their strategic geographical position, their network of railways, free canals and waterways and their enormous water powers, Ontario and Quebec have obvious advantages which they have exploited with ability and energy, and the centralizing process has probably been inevitable. At the same time it presents a problem which demands public attention; political observers here declare that the overwhelming Liberal vote in the Maritimes in the last Dominion election was a protest against this centralizing tendency, and they regard the rise of the Progressives in the West as an endeavor to readjust the balance of economic interests between the center and extremities of Canada.

In view of the conviction of the Maritime businessmen that the industrial development of the three eastern provinces since Confederation has not fulfilled the promise of their pro-Confederation development, it is interesting to note that the proportionate increase in the value of the output of manufacturing industries of Nova Scotia between 1871 and 1917 was greater than that shown by the manufacturing industries of either Ontario or Quebec, according to the returns compiled by the Dominion Bureau of Statistics. Comparing the value of the product of the manufacturing industries for the year 1917 with the output for 1871, the first census year after Confederation, the following increases are indicated:

Nova Scotia	14.7 times
Ontario	13.2 "
Quebec	10.8 "
New Brunswick	3.7 "

However, 1917, was an exceptional year for the manufacturing industries of Nova Scotia, and a large part of the increase is accounted for by the development of her iron and steel-making enterprises.

When the value of raw material used is deducted the increases in values added by the manufacturing process itself are for the period in question as follows:

Ontario	14.3 times
Quebec	13.3 "
Nova Scotia	10.2 "
New Brunswick	3.2 "

According to the bureau of statis- values added by the manufacturing in 1917, as compared with 1871, showed the following increases:

Ontario	35 times
Quebec	29.5 "
Nova Scotia	22.8 "
New Brunswick	10.8 "

Notwithstanding the apparently large industrial development indicated for Nova Scotia, that province, as well as New Brunswick and Prince Edward Island, has seen numerous small industries pass out of existence, and there is a belief that they went down before the competition of the larger industrial enterprises of Ontario and Quebec aided by the low freight rates on the International Railway. Prince Edward Island's manufacturing industries have dwindled since she entered Confederation. In 1881, the island's manufacturing output was valued at $3,400,208; in 1891 at $4,345,910, and in 1917 it was $5,517,910, indicating, when the rise in prices is considered, a considerable decline in quantity production. In 1881 the number of persons employed in the island's manufacturing industries was 5,767; in 1891, 7,910; and in 1917 it was only 1,923.

While the increase in the number of persons employed in the manufacturing industries of Ontario from 1871 to 1917 was 1.7 times, in Quebec 1.7 times, and in Nova Scotia 1.6 times, in New Brunswick it was only 1.1 times. In 1917 and also in 1918 the number of persons employed in the manufacturing industries of New Brunswick was actually less than in 1900.

As a whole, therefore, the industrial development of the Maritime Provinces has been proportionate to that of the central provinces, and there are among the old generation many people who still argue that Confederation was a bad bargain for the Maritimes. Ambitions, aptitude and traditions, connected with sea enterprise, and the decay of the once important ship building and ship operating industries left whole communities in a state of uncertainty regarding their future. In this atmosphere numerous small industries which had been developed to supply local needs were unprepared to make the adjustments necessary to enable them to compete, even in their own markets, with the larger industries developed in Ontario and Quebec, under the impulse of protective tariffs. At the same time the adoption by the United States of high tariffs, to some extent shut off the Maritimes from their natural markets in New England, and put a period on the big development of the fishing industry, which has gone on during the lives of the old reciprocity and the Washington treaties.

Such Maritime industries as survived, or such new industries as have been developed, were mostly of a character demanding larger markets than are offered by the Maritime Provinces themselves, and the success of these industries, some of which compete with the centrol provinces in the far east markets, has not been unconnected with Maritime control of the policies of the Intercolonial Railway. The restoration of that control, therefore, presents itself as a matter of first importance to Maritime business interests. That was a condition of Confederation, and it is also the only thing that appears as a counterpoise to the strategic commercial position of the central provinces with their free waterways developed at the expense of the nation, or, to the uneconomic export rail rates which the western provinces enjoy on their principal products, and which entail a burden upon the whole country.

RECOVERS FROM STORM

Light, Power Lines Re-established in Stratford.

STRATFORD, Feb. 26. — With power lines into the city fully re-established and portions of the city supplied with light and power once more the city is getting back to normal once again following the storm. It wil be a week or more, however, before the light and telephone lines are fully repaired.

Today gangs of men are still at work. Saturday night night was scoured for the hospital for the first since Tuesday night. A city gang is clearing trees and branches from the wires, being followed by the hydro men.

The fire alarm system, which was badly crippled, is being gradually restored.

Both city newspapers were able to publish Saturday.

INDIAN INSURGENTS HEADED BY GANDHI

Made Dominating Figure In "Home Rule" Move By Act of Legislature.

HAS WIDE POWERS

National Congress At Ahmedabad Gives Leader of Radicals More Authority.

AHMEDABAD, India, Feb. 25.—Mohandas K. Gandhi has become a more dominating figure than ever in the Indian independence movement in consequence of the action taken in the annual session of the Indian national congress recently held here.

Not only did the congress appoint Gandhi as its sole executive authority, as cabled at that time, but it authorized him to appoint his successor in event of any emergency.

This action was taken when the congress voted to suspend all other activities in order to concentrate attention upon civil disobedience.

The resolution conferring increased powers upon Gandhi declared:

"This congress hereby appoints, until further instructions, Mahatma Gandhi as the sole executive authority of the congress and invests him with the full powers of the all-India congress commitee, including the power of convening a special session of the congress or of the all-India congress committee or the working committee, and also with the power to appoint a successor in an emergency.

"This congress hereby confers upon the successor and all subsequent successors appointed in turn by their predecessors all his aforesaid powers."

The congress not only stipulated however, that Gandhi should not be authorized to conclude terms of peace with the British or Indian governments without the previous consent of the all-India congress committee, but it also declared that the present creed of the congress was in no case to be altered by either Gandhi or his successors without first having obtained permission from the Indian congress.

INVADERS WENT VEILED AS WOMEN

Communists' Attempt To Take Teheran Was Real Joke.

BAKU, Azerbaijan, Feb. 27.—One of the recent Communist attempts to invade Persia and capture Teheran, its capital, had most of the elements of a good comic opera.

The little army of 200 Georgian invaders masqueraded as Persian women by wearing loose veils and other clothing of women over their uniforms.

The queer appearance of the expedition aroused the suspicions of the "cheka" when it reached Enzeli, a Persian sea, and the whole outfit was arrested and taken back to Baku for examination.

Released, the invaders set out afresh and advanced into the mountains half-way to Teheran, where the peasants arose against them and drove them out.

The exploit is celebrated even here among the many mad political and military adventures which characterized the struggle of the British and Russians to capture the Persian capital.

It was headed by Simoyak Phakadze, who conceived the brilliant idea of the masquerade, and who still maintans that his plan was a good one. He is a son-in-law of Rasputin, the once celebrated Russian monk who was murdered after having attained ascendancy over the Russian court.

A Georgian by birth, he was for a time a hanger-on at the Petrograd court, but joined the Communist movement in 1916, and thus escaped the fate that he might otherwise have suffered because of his favor in imperial circles.

He came here with the Red tide in the spring of 1920, helped to overthrow the Azerbaijan republic, and then undertook his wild scheme to invade and subdue Persia with a disguised army.

OPEN INVESTIGATION OF GIANT DIRIGIBLE CRASH

NORFOLK, Va., Feb. 26.—Formal inquiry by an army investigating board into the causes and circumstances surrounding the Roma disaster Tuesday, in which 34 men lost their lives, was begun at headquarters of the army supply base here Saturday. The inquiry is in the nature of a coroner's inquest, and it is the intention of the board to bring out every feature of the crash before the report is made.

Captain G. B. West, medical officer who examined the bodies, described the nature of the burns suffered by each victim. It was understood that other medical officers would testify that the great majority had met death from burns, some having been asphyxiated, and others being crushed to death by the steel girders and supports.

Following Captain West, officers and attaches of the army base testified as to the position of the Roma when she was first seen approaching the reservation from a northeasterly direction. Several described their impressions when they first saw the airship, and all agreed that they thought she was in trouble.

PLANS KITCHENER SHOW

Board of Trade Takes Hold of Matter.

KITCHENER, Feb. 26.—Kitchener will have a "Made-in-Kitchener" show this spring if the present efforts of the board of trade bring results. As a result of a letter suggesting an exhibit received by the board from the manager of a local daily newspaper, the council of the board has taken hold of the project, and is at present busy soliciting the various manufacturers of the city to back up the enterprise.

The proposition which the board of trade is outlining is that as the great electrical exhibit was vacated the spacious auditorium rink the "Made-in-Kitchener" show can be put on without necessitating the expense of rewiring the building.

The idea is already meeting with an enthusiastic reception from the various manufacturers, who are only too anxious to avail themselves of the trade possibilities which the show will create. It is expected that as a result of a meeting of the council of the board, which will be held within the next ten days, some definite announcement in connection with the date of the show will be made.

MANAGERS FACE CHARGES

Summoned to Court for Letting Audience Wait in Dark Theatre.

KITCHENER, Feb. 26.—For allowing a waiting audience to remain in the theatre on Thursday night last during the hydro interruption, Chief Guerin charged three local theatre managers with a violation of the regulations in police court here yesterday.

The theatres are alleged by the chief to have been in total darkness with the exception of one which he said was lit by gasoline lamps contrary to regulations. Three cases were adjourned.

URGES BROADER KIND OF SCHOOL AND HOME CLUB

G. A. Wheable Wants Fathers as Well as Mothers Among Members.

SECTION FOR EACH CLASS

Advocates Organization in Groups at Western Ontario Educational Convention.

Operation of the adolescent act.
Co-operation between home and school.
Special help for backward pupils.
Special help for unusually bright pupils.
Secondary school problems.
The value of technical training.
The necessity for vocational guidance.

The foregoing subjects, expounded and discussed, represented the wide field of educational activities covered by the educational convention for Western Ontario, held under the auspices of the London Union Mothers' Club, at the closing session on Saturday afternoon in the new Collegiate auditorium.

Notwithstanding a late start, the tactful presiding officer, Mrs. A. G. Calder, first vice-president of the Union Mothers' Club, was such a good timekeeper that she managed to get the program through a few minutes after the hour designated, five o'clock, affording many an opportunity of remaining for the tempting afternoon tea served by household science pupils of the Collegiate, under the supervision of Miss Mary Macpherson, supervisor of household science.

Offers Criticism.

One "mere man" had the temerity to offer criticism of "Mothers'" clubs, thereby provoking pointed replies.

Speaking on the subject of "The Home and School," G. A. Wheable, B.A., supervising principal of London Public Schools, took exception to the name "Mothers' Club" on the ground that it branded the organization as a woman's, thereby, through implication, shutting out the fathers who should, equally with the mothers, co-operate with the teachers for the educational welfare and building up the characters of the children. The name "Home and School" he considered preferable.

In the second place, he held that in even the most successful clubs only a small percentage of the mothers of the districts are represented.

Have Club Divided.

His idea of a mothers' or home and school club would be an organization divided into sections corresponding to the rooms in the school, each section made up of the parents of the children in a distinct classroom, the teacher to meet them in an advisory capacity.

While such an object as the War Memorial Children's Hospital made a strong appeal to mothers, as a general thing the speaker would take exception to bazaars for charitable or other purposes on the ground that the mothers' club, by whatever name it was called, should have as its chief aim the promoting of educational interests and co-operation between home and school.

With regard to subjects discussed in meetings, he had in mind one meeting he attended in which the program was largely devoted to consideration of the subject of the use of oleomargarine.

Mrs. F. W. Hughes, a former president of the London Union Mothers' Club, stated that so far as the local units were concerned the clubs were required to make the same response as other non-money making organizations to war time calls.

Defends Discussion.

The discussion of oleomargarine was a further wartime emergency measure relating to food conservation. The club locally, had served more as a community organization in the past, considering the whole environment of the child outside of school as an important factor in its development.

Mrs. A. C. Courtice defended a certain amount of money-making on the part of mothers' or home and school clubs, on the ground that this is frequently necessary in order to purchase equipment which advanced ideas on education deem important and which trustees are frequently loath to provide. While doing the same work, Mrs. Courtice agreed that the "Home and School" is a more comprehensive term than "Mothers'" Club.

Explains New Act.

Explaining the adolescent act, Inspector V. K. Greer stated that the main point in connection with it is to provide the type of education that will interest the adolescent and send him out to life better equipped for every-day living. His view was that the adolescent act should be more widely advertised in order that its provisions will be more generally understood.

Speaking on the subject of special classes for the child of superior talent or mentality, Miss M. Hay expressed the conviction that these auxiliary classes are just as necessary to give a fair chance as are auxiliary classes for backward children. In the past, the idea has prevailed that the exceptionally clever child can look out for itself, when in reality it requires more branches, more advanced work.

Children should be admitted to such classes by mental tests, she stated. No hard plodder should be taken in unless possessed of high enough calibre mentality for the extra work. Instead of making children conceited to be placed in these special classes, the opposite has been discovered to be the case. In the "super" classes the boy or girl is pitted against equally bright or brighter children.

A very encouraging story was told by Miss F. McDowell of her experience in auxiliary class work in this city, inaugurated only last September.

Attend Regularly.

"The children do not make trivial excuses to stay away from school," she said. "This week when the car service was disorganized we had practically 100 per cent of the usual average, notwithstanding the fact many had to come a long distance. The children are encouraged for what they can do; not scolded for work they cannot do. We find they are happier in the auxiliary classes.

"They do not feel they are making failures of their lives. They are fond of helping one another, and soon make friends more readily, and cooperate with one another in play and otherwise. If we can place these children later where they will best fit the work will not be in vain."

A couple of tables of clever handiwork told the story of what the children in London's special classes have accomplished in the way of handicrafts under sympathetic supervision.

Principal W. H. T. Mooney of the London Collegiate Institute named as the chief aim of the secondary school "producing a socially efficient individual," equal to carrying on his or her share of the world's work, helping others and getting enjoyment out of life.

This involved the four-fold development, physical, mental, moral, social.

So far as the social side was concerned, indirect reference was made to the controvery that has been waging with regard to amusements for high school pupils.

Direct Play Spirit.

"It is our duty as instructors," said Mr. Mooney, "not to try to prohibit or crush the play spirit, but to direct it." He held it folly for teachers to bury their heads in the sands of indifference and fail to recognize the trend of the times and what is going on in the world outside.

"Let us face the problem," he said, "urging the necessity for co-operation of parents with teachers if success is to be achieved in making the play side count in developing a 'socially efficient individual.'"

Principal H. B. Beal of the London Technical School lucidly explained the advantages offered by the Ontario type of technical school, which combines high school education with technical training.

While the high school technical school does not turn out "journeymen mechanics," Mr. Beal stated, "it gives training which, if properly built upon, insures success in industrial and commercial undertakings. If the technical schools had done nothing else, the speaker considered they had justified their establishment in taking the boys and girls who became dissatisfied early with the regular school subjects and giving them a training which fitted them to be skilled artisans instead of drifting into blind alley occupations and eventually becoming numbered among the unemployed.

LOANS 3,000 BOOKS ON SATURDAY

London public library loaned out in the neighborhood of three thousand books during the hours it was open on Saturday. This establishes the record for books given out in a single day, since never in the 25 years of the existence of the library were so many volumes taken to be read by the public.

Librarian Landon, in speaking of the Saturday record, declared that the public is reading as never before, and that the number of books loaned out has steadily increased since the close of the war.

3 PUPILS FAINT AT SCHOOL OPENING

Collapse During Impressive Services In New Victoria Building.

MANY WEEP QUIETLY

Children Urged by Chairman To Preserve Premises for Future Students.

The idea that modern schoil children are likely to undervalue their educational advantages would seem to be repudiated by the fact that at the opening of the new Victoria School Monday morning, Feb. 27, two girls and a boy of the senior classes fainted away, apparently overwhelmed by the solemnity of the occasion.

All pupils seemed to feel very keenly the impressive ceremony, and many were noticed crying quietly.

On the entrance of the students into the auditorium, after a moment of solemn silence, religious exercises were conducted, Rev. A. A. Bice offering prayer and reading the Beatitudes. Mr. A. McQueen, a former principal of the school, later read Psalm lxvii, following which the Lord's Prayer was sung.

Inspector Greer congratulated the students upon the opportunities which the new building offered and asked that they remember always that the importance of a school lay, not in the building itself, but in the spirit which pervaded it.

E. E. Smith, chairman of the board of education, in committing the school into the hands of its new occupants, impressed upon them their duty in taking care of it and preserving it for those pupils who were to follow and receive similar advantages from it.

ACCIDENTS TIE UP TRAINS AT THREE POINTS SUNDAY

Engine Break Holds International Limited in London Four Hours.

Three mishaps, two to locomotives and one to a box car, caused a series of delays on Grand Trunk lines Sunday night.

The International Limited, which leaves London around 9 o'clock, on account of a serious break to the monkey motion of the engine, was held in the city yards for four hours.

A wheel falling off a box car of a freight train on the Glencoe line held up passenger train No. 18, for about one hour.

As a consequence of this accident to train No. 18, the Stratford train, which leaves London at 4 o'clock was caused to await the arrival of the train from the Glencoe line for connections, thus entangling the schedule the more.

Finally, when the train for Stratford left and proceeded on its way a short distance, the locomotive breakdown occurred, due to defective parallel rods. This made the third minor accident.

SUSPEND SENTENCE ON TWO

Police Magistrate Warns Man He Must Not Molest Married Relative.

Suspended sentence was meted out to the man and woman in police court, Monday morning, bailed last week on a charge of immorality.

The woman's husband has been in the Ontario Hospital for 18 months, and being left there with five children, she secured a position as housekeeper with her uncle, a widower with two children.

"I have taken all my stuff away from the home and will help to support her," stated the uncle in police court on Monday.

"You better keep away," declared Deputy Police Magistrate P. H. Bartlett. "If you are ever found in the house again, it will go hard with you. I have decided rather reluctantly to suspend sentence on you, but Inspector Kelly and others have spoken in your behalf. I don't blame the woman as much as I do you.

Childhood Romance Begun In Greece Culminates In Happy London Wedding

From the old home town back in Central Greece there came to London, but a day or two ago, little Julien Pantos to marry Vios Zafirion, and the marriage ceremony performed Sunday evening terminated a romance that was started in childhood.

While Mr. Zafirion had not seen his prospective wife for many years, final arrangements for the event were made by the interchange of letters, and a week or so ago he journeyed to New York to meet the bride and bring her to London.

The bridegroom's home, 514 William street, was the rendezvous Sunday evening for the members of every Greek family in the city who were able to attend, while several friends and relatives of the happy couple were present from outside points.

Rev. Daniel A. Sharpas, D.D., of Toronto, officiated, while Hercules Papananonoles of Montreal, president of the Greek school in that city, delivered one of the several excellent addresses of the evening. The latter touched at some length upon the cordial relations that exist between Greece and Great Britain, and his remarks were warmly applauded.

Equally appreciated was the reply delivered by Alfred McGinley, who lauded the sterling characteristics of the Greeks of old, and held that the very same traits were still to be found today among the same people. He pointed out that the Greeks were to be numbered among Canada's best settlers of the present period, and trusted that the flow of immigration from that country would be continued in the years to come.

As best man, Philip Kostas executed his role to a nicety, while equally delightful in manner were the bridesmaids — Helen Harrys, Toula Mandas and Jennie Kostan.

Among the guests Sunday night were the groom's brothers—George, John and Constantine.

Mr. Papananonoles is touring Ontario, and upon his return to Montreal will undertake, with the approval of the government, the preparation of a Canadian history to be used in the schools of Greece.

GIVES FRENCH VIEW OF TREATY OF VERSAILLES

Toronto Professor Addresses L'Alliance Francaise of London.

"The Treaty of Versailles from the French Point of View," was the subject of absorbing interest and significance on which Prof. Saint?Elmo des Champs, of the University of Toronto, addresses the February meeting of l'Alliance Francaise at the Institute of Musical Art.

Having visited France twice since the end of the war, the speaker told of surprise on the part of the French over finding their own claims and rights to self protection disputed by the allies, "whose demands France had not contested, and to whom she had yielded practically all of the German colonies, ships and ocean cable." He told further of astonishment expressed by the French people that her allies in the war had so promptly resumed trade relations with a nation "still cherishing the Pan-German dream of conquest."

Three movements of the Saint-Saens concerto in G minor, played by Miss Madeline Simson, with Mrs. McHardy-Smith at the second piano, constituted a delightful musical feature of the program.

Town Topics.

A THOUGHT FOR TODAY

Cease to do evil; learn to do well. Seek judgment; relieve the oppressed; judge the fatherless plead for the widow.—Isaiah 1:16, 17.

THE sand of the desert is sodden red—
Red with the wreck of a square that broke—
The Gatling's jammed and the colonel dead,
And the regiment's blind with dust and smoke.
The river of death has brimmed its banks,
And England's far, and honor a name,
But the voice of a schoolboy rallies the ranks—
"Play up! Play up! and play the game."
—Henry Newbolt.

E. MORROW WILL ADDRESS BUSINESS HEADS OF CITY

Chamber of Commerce and Canadian Club To Hold Joint Luncheon Wednesday.

Ellis H. Morrow, B.A., M.B.A., director of extension work for Queen's University, Kingston, will address the joint luncheon meeting of the Chamber of Commerce and Canadian Club at the Tecumseh House Wednesday, March 1, at 12:30 o'clock.

Mr. Morrow, who is one of the leaders in the field of business education in Canada, has given this subject long and careful study, and is pre-eminently fitted to tell of its value and scope.

Much interest has been manifested in London in the possibilities resulting from a college education for business executives, and Western University is making a praiseworthy effort to link up business with education in London. A class in business administration commenced last year, now has an enrollment of 20 students. Mr. Morrow's address is calculated to stimulate still further interest in the relation between education and business, his subject being, "The College and the Factory," a topic which will be of great interest, not only to businessmen, but to all who are interested in the progress of education in London. Some of the topics which will be covered by Mr. Morrow's address are: "Business Training for the College Man," "What University Business Education Is," "How Business Is Taught in the University," "The Part the Businessman Can and Should Have in Under-Graduate Education," "The Graduate and the Job," "Where Business Benefits" and "The Finished Product."

While in London, Mr. Morrow will address a meeting of the bankers of the city on "What the Banker Should Know About a Factory."

TO PLAN FOR NEW GARBAGE SYSTEM

Special Committee of City Council Will Meet To Decide on Details.

FAVOR 5-YEAR CONTRACT

Authority To Call for Tenders Was Given at Last Meeting.

The special garbage committee of the city council, composed of the members of the board of works, will hold a meeting Tuesday night before the regular meeting of No. 2 committee, to decide on the specification details, before tenders are called for the collection of garbage in the city.

The calling for tenders was authorized at the last meeting of the city council, and the matter then sent back to the committee to have the details planned, which are to be laid down for contractors to figure on.

A knotty point which the committee will face will be in regard the life of the tender. Some would like to have the contract placed for five years, believing that there would be a better price secured. In fact, some of the aldermen have declared that no one will be willing to tender on a one year contract, as it will entail too much risk in the purchase of horses and equipment.

The technical point of whether or not the council can place a contract for a five year period will be raised, if this is proposed.

W. Boss, the first garbage contractor, had a five-year contract. He sold his outfits to the city and dropped his contract, when in the second year. It is understood that the city solicitor held that the council had not the power to bind future council's to the contract, and that had they cancelled the contract, the contractor could have placed the loss on the shoulders of the individual aldermen. Facing such a condition, it is said that the present council will be a little wary of a long term contract.

THIEVES ENTER Y. W. C. A. OFFICE

Thieves entered the office of the Y. W. C. A., on King street, sometime between midnight Saturday and Sunday morning, pried open the cash register and desk drawers and escaped with $15 in cash. Efforts were made to open the safe but were unsuccessful. The robbery was not discovered till 8 o'clock Sunday morning. Police officers, called in on the case, had nothing to report Monday afternoon.

Essery, K.C., for the mother.

WEDDING GUEST LANDS IN CELL

Wedding bells rang out loudly and clearly on the frosty air Saturday night, and after the festivities were over and one of the guests decided to depart hence to his own domicile, the gong on the old "Black Maria" rang out just as clearly and the wedding guest became the guest of the city over the week-end. He was fined $10 and costs in police court Monday morning.

"Were you drunk?" questioned Magistrate Bartlett.

"Well, I was a little," was the reply. "I went to report for duty Saturday night, and the boss left word that I was to come to the wedding, and I did. I only had one or two drops of liquor."

"You don't mean to tell me that one or two drops of liquor made you drunk?" asked the court in astonished tones.

"Well, you see I was sick since last Tuesday and it didn't take much," defended the late joymaker.

"You want to keep away from weddings," said Mr. Bartlett, with a smile. "I didn't know that they did such things at weddings these days. However, I will have to fine you the usual $10 and costs."

Brantford, Feb. 27.—Mayor George Wedlake at noon today was in a condition which showed much improvement over that of yesterday. "He is doing quite nicely," Dr. W. J. Robinson reported this morning. It will be remembered that Mayor Wedlake collapsed while giving evidence in the police probe on Saturday. He was taken home, where a hemorrhage was reduced, this being followed by a paralytic stroke, which affected his left side and brought about unconsciousness. Today the paralysis had left his left side, which he was able to move, and he was able to speak also. He has been ordered to keen entirely quiet, and no visitors will be allowed for some time.

Ontario Labor Official Finds Unemployment Still Prevalent

W. J. STEVENSON of the Ontario Department of Labor, was a caller on Mayor Wilson at the city hall, Monday morning. He is making a tour of this section, looking into labor conditions.

Fom the information he imparted, Mayor Wilson was unable to form any optimistic conclusions as to the labor situation. The peak of the trouble seems to have passed. "Marking time" is the order of the day, however, until the spring break-up arrives.

"We will be glad in London when that period is reached," said the mayor, "we will then be able to launch out on pavements and sidewalks, and help get the workers back into their accustomed fields of labor."

VOICES APPEAL FOR YOUNG PEOPLE

During the evening service at St. Paul's Cathedral, Rev. Denny Bright made a strong appeal for workers in behalf of the young people.

Opening his sermon, he drew attention to the vivid portraiture of the Old Testament scriptures, Adam and Eve, in the garden of Eden, the striking picture of Cain denounced as a murderer, the terrible destruction of the wicked cities of the plain, Sodom and Gomorrah, the plagues of Egypt, and finally the marvellous sight of Moses praying on the hill-top, while the army of the Israelites, freed from bondage, and delivered out of the hand of Pharoah, engaged in their battle with a strange people. The Israelites were being taught, and they learnt "hardly." God had led them out of bondage and now they were face to face with their first national foe. They were to work out their own salvation by means of prayer and works. To Moses had been given the performing of miracles and God had answered his prayers. Now, while Joshua commanded an army in the plain, Moses went to the hill-top and "his hands were steady until the going down of the sun."

From this text the speaker urged the need of not only prayer, but work in the modern church. As Moses of old, men's hands must be steady in prayer. Human energy should be developed to the utmost, and as the Israelites conquered by the power of the sword and the tenacity of their faith, the church must again conquer. Work is needed amongst the young people. They are being slowly, but surely, welded to the church by means of social life and friendly interest. The interest and co-operation of the congregation was needed in the various week-night services for the young people, and the good accomplished by these services could not be overestimated.

REPORTS LARGE DEMAND FOR BUILDING PERMITS

Inspector Piper's Department Has Busy Time in February.

The building figures for the month are making quite "a respectable spurt," to use the words of Inspector A. M. Piper, and February promises to close with a total considerably ahead of the same month in many previous years, though it will be only about one-third of the figure for February, 1921.

STRIKE SNAG IN WESTERN FAIR ADMISSION FEE

Members of New Board Have Vigorous Discussion at First Meeting.

CITY GRANT PROPOSED

The first meeting of the new board of directors of the Western Fair Association was held Saturday afternoon.

President J. H. Saunders occupied the chair and in opening the meeting said he hoped that the new members of the board would take part freely in all the discussions so that the Western Fair might be run in a manner that would benefit the public and the exhibition itself.

The office of the fair board was open at all times for the information of any of the members of the various committees, and it was the desire of the president that the members use it in all matters upon which they were in doubt.

The report of the estimates of the finance board was accepted together with the committees appointed by the executive.

The matter of providing a judging ring for the heavy horses and cattle was discussed and it was decided that one should be provided, but was referred to the grounds and building committee.

A request of the fruit and vegetable growers to obtain permission to remove their exhibits on the last Saturday afternoon was discussed, but no action taken on the matter.

It was decided that a meeting of all the chairmen of the various committees should be held a short time before the exhibition, and the question of appointing one or more supervisors to handle the horse and cattle exhibits was left to be discussed at that meeting.

Gate Admission Problem.

A vigorous discussion took place on the subject of gate admission. It was argued that the board must assure a good attendance at the fair if it was to be a success financially.

It was shown by previous years' figures that the addition of the gate fees for the three days in the middle of the week had not kept anyone away from the fair, and that those who did not want to pay 50 cents could, if they wished, go on the other days of the week, when the admission was only 25 cents, with Monday a free day for the children.

Ald. Watkinson, who is one of the representatives from the city council, suggested that the admission fees could be brought down to 25c if the city gave the fair board assistance by means of a grant to the association.

Geo. G. McCormick, chairman of the finance board, said that since the association had always been responsible for the financial end of the fair without any outside help that the assistance given would need to be in the neighborhood of $15,000, and then it would be possible to charge only 25c, which the fair board would only be too pleased to do if the money was forthcoming from the city council or other sources.

The committees for the year 1922 are as follows, with the first-named as chairman:

Executive—J. H. Saunders, A. T. Little, E. S. Little, W. E. Robinson, Geo. G. McCormick, John Pringle, Dr. G. A. Routledge, Wm. McNeil, Mayor Wilson, R. A. Carrothers.

Finance—Geo. G. McCormick, J. H. Saunders, A. T. Little, E. S. Little, W. E. Robinson, John Pringle, Dr. G. A. Routledge, Wm. McNeil, Mayor Wilson, R. A. Carrothers.

Attractions—Wm. McNeil, J. H. Saunders, Col. Gartshore, A. T. Little.

Everyone Is Welcome at Any of These Churches On the Sabbath Day

REV. LEICHLITER SPEAKS ON FOLLY OF EASY LIVING

It is estimated that more than 300 people were turned away before the opening of the evening service at Adelaide Street Baptist Church Sunday night. Every available pew in the church was occupied and as many chairs as the regulations would permit. Even the seat on the platform, which is reserved for the minister as a rule, was used, just leaving room enough for the pastor to conduct the service.

Rev. G. A. Leichliter preached on the subject "Our Girls at Night," taking his text from Proverbs, chapters 9, 17 and 18 and Revelations, chapters 20, 12.

"She saith, stolen waters are sweet and bread eaten in secret is pleasant, but the dead are there." "And the books were opened." The preacher, commencing his address, declared: You have come again to hear the word from this pulpit. To me it is a great privilege to preach to you, but to you a great responsibility comes. Some of you may go again, as often before, back into the world without God and without hope. Some of you may go with a resolution to do some definite settling with God ere the night passes and some to think nothing more of the matter.

I pray God that your hearts may be stirred, especially my young friends, before the evil days come or the years draw night when you shall say, they no longer give pleasure.

Offers Great Temptations.

Tonight we turn to the career of the young woman. To her the great city or the lesser city offers very great temptations as well as opportunities. She seeks to reach a position in her early life wherein she shall find those things so much sought after by most natural people. But have a care when the desire to have lovely possessions becomes a dominant feature of life, for very often evil awaits at that turn of the way.

Many of our noted and notorious parties of this city (and anyone can find where they are held) are little less than drunken orgies, and many a life that enters to sip the stolen waters and eat the secret sweets emerges blighted for a lifetime.

Reckoning Will Come.

What are our night scenes? Sleepy little London! The town in the woods! God save us from any more speed. God pity the generation to be if this city steps any livelier. Somethine a reckoning will come, and many a respected citizen will stand before God to answer for a diabolical deception that ruined a young life. Young person have a care. Now you are young and care-free. You are determined to have a good time, and have made up your mind that you will not be old-fashioned or out of date; you would see and enjoy all that life could give; trusting easily and quickly. Loving much and living as if your every affection were reciprocated. Then came the evil solicitation, your will crumbled, your faith failed, you slipped far and fast, and now it is all behind, written as if in fire, deep in the consciousness of your soul. Stolen waters are sweet, but they become gall and aloes and fire at your touch. Stolen waters are sweet, but the dead are there—dead hopes, dead ambitions, dead affections, dead future. All is dark. Have a care. Night has a thousand evil eyes, arms, hands, feet, together with a thousand burning passions. Night is full of fears and dangers, tempting and bewitching, and is dangerous with many toils and snares.

The preacher declaimed that the man who asks you to compromise your manner of life is your enemy. The man who will say to another's sister what he would be ashamed or afraid to say to his own is a cad, a coward, a mute and a molly-coddle, half ape and half snake. But death is there always. It never fails, Death to hope and happiness, Death to ambition and to every ideal that ever surged in the soul of man.

Carry Record of Life.

There is a sacred fact concerned with this discussion. The phrase, "The books were opened" seems a bit foreign, but in reality is one-half of the thought. While death lurks in the darkness about every defeated life, the books of God carry also the record of the life well spent in the fear of God.

What a wonderful day it will be when the books shall be opened and the names read. The book of sunlight, agleam with gladness and victory. When from the ends of the earth shall come the victors who "overcame by the blood of the Lamb and the word of their testimony." When the hosts of the redeemed came singing "Glory to the grace that ransomed us, the chief of sinners."

Mr. Leichliter said that when the Lamb's "Book of Life" was opened, the waif, the wayfaring man, the helpless, the homeless, the poor and the needy, who are all sons of the covenant and whose names are written therein, it would be seen that they have been cleansed and made whole.

CLAIMS MILLIONS WILL SEE KINGDOM

Canadian Head of International Bible Students Believes Millennium Near.

SETS 1925 AS BEGINNING

Tells Audience in Grand Theatre Earth Has Room for All.

Walter F. Salter, Canadian general manager of the International Bible Students' Association, Sunday addressed a large audience at the Grand Theatre on the subject, "Millions Now Living Will Never Die."

Mr. Salter stated that it seemed strange to his mind that people professing to be Christians do not realize the fact that the time must come sometime when millions living upon the earth will never die. Did not Jesus pray that God's kingdom might come and his will be done upon earth as it is in heaven, and have not Christians prayed that prayer for 1,900 years, he asked. They have, but apparently few with understanding, for while they have been praying for God's kingdom to come, many have had in their minds the thought that it would not be established upon the earth, but would be established somewhere in the heavens, he said.

The prayer is that God's will might be done upon the earth as it is in heaven. "What does that mean?" he asked, and then went on to explain: "it means that mankind will be keeping God's will perfectly, and when men keep God's law perfectly, they will have the benefit derived therefrom that is found in the promise, 'If ye do the things of the law, ye shall live thereby.' That is to say when men keep the law they no longer die, but live.

"The Jews for over 1,800 years endeavored to keep God's law, but failed; the reason being they were imperfect men, with an imperfect mediator. God, however, has promised to establish a new covenant, a new law with mankind, with a new mediator, even a perfect mediator, Christ Jesus. This new arrangement is to be established at Christ's second advent, when he comes to establish God's kingdom, and to bring about the condition long promised of 'peace on earth, good will to men.'"

Kingdom Near At Hand.

Mr. Salter maintained that the present conditions upon the earth are in fulfillment of prophecy and indicate the fact that God's kingdom is now being established, but prior to its being established the present order of things must be swept away. In evidence thereof, he submitted, the testimony of Daniel the prophet as recorded in the 12th chapter of the Book of Daniel. Therein Daniel states that the second coming of Christ, designated in that chapter as Michael, would be recognized by a time of trouble such as was not since there was a nation even to that same time.

This would be as a result of Christ's "standing up" or assuming control of affairs among men. When he would assume control the very first work would be as declared in Daniel 2:34 to break to pieces and consume all the Gentile order, and upon the ruins God's everlasting kingdom would be established—a kingdom of peace, prosperity, happiness, plenty for all, and last, but not least, mankind perfect mentally, morally and physically enjoying everlasting life here upon the earth, with the earth itself made a paradise.

"Now, I submit," he said, "that the present conditions upon the earth, wars, famines and pestilences, indicate that Christ has taken his power and commenced his reign.

Ends Gentile Times.

The year 1914 marked the end of the Gentile times and is clearly proven by Biblical chronology. As the evidence thereof is fully dealt with in the second volume of Studies in the Scriptures, by the late Pastor Russell, written some thirty years ago, and no doubt possessed by practically all the audience assembled here this afternoon. I will not take time to deal therewith now, further than to state that, God made a covenant with the people of Israel, which covenant they broke and were cast off from Divine favor in the year 606 B. C., in the reign of Zedekiah, who was dethroned and taken prisoner to Babylon by King Nebuchadnezzar.

"In the 26th chapter of Leviticus God declared unto the people of Israel that if they broke his covenant he would punish them seven times, or seven years—2520 days—and ts we are told in Numbers 14:34, that they were to bear their iniquities a day for a year, each day would represent a year, therefore a period of 2520 years.

Coming on down the stream of time now for a period of 2520 years it marks the year 1914 as the end of Jewish disfavor. Jesus testified saying that the Jews would be trodden down by the Gentiles until the Gentile times were fulfilled, signifying that Jewish disfavor and Gentile favor would synchronize, therefore consummate at the same point of time. Do the present physical conditions upon the earth indicate that the Jewish disfavor and Gentile favor is being withdrawn? Surely to all thoughtful, reasonable minds the answer must be, Yes. Do we not witness the Gentile nations breaking themselves to pieces, and the Jews flocking back to Palestine?

Purpose of Kingdom.

"The purpose of God's Kingdom in the earth is contained in a nutshell in His promise to Abraham. God promised Abraham that in his seed, sometime, somehow, He would "bless all the families of the earth." The families of the earth at that time, and still, are under the curse of death. A blessing signifies just the reverse of a curse, and therefore, in this instance it signified life. Abraham's seed, according to the testimony of the Apostle Paul, in Galatians 3:16, 27-29, is to comprise Jesus and His body members, spoken of as the church in the scriptures, Jesus being the head thereof. If that be true, and it is true, then the matter is very plain that the church, when completed, is to be used of God to bless mankind with life, and not only bless the living generations with life, but also in accordance with Jesus promise (John v, 27-29) to bring about the resurrection of all who are in their graves and give them also a full square opportunity to gain life in its fullness.

Work of Gospel Age.

"Jesus, according to the Apostle Paul, tasted death for every man. He died, a ransom for all, and from his death to the present time God has been doing the work spoken of by the apostle (Acts 15:14), gathering from among the Gentiles a number to comprise the church class, designated therein as "a people for His name." Our parliament is not supposed to curse us, but to bless us, so likewise Jehovah, God, has been selecting a great divine parliament, of which Jesus is the head or prime minister, and the church is His legislative body.

"When this parliament assembles, and it is about to so do, not upon earth, but in the heavens, they will bring about the blessings that God has in store for mankind. This work will not be done in a day, but according to the scriptures will require 1,000 years. During that 1,000 years, as above stated, all mankind, both living and the dead, "whosoever will," will be brought back into complete harmony with God, brought back into His likeness and image, will be made perfect mentally, morally and physically; the earth also will be made a paradise, and then mankind will be given a final opportunity to obey or disobey God.

"The record is that those who disobey will be cut off in death—the second death—from which there is no resurrection. Those who do obey will have fulfilled in them the promise as recorded in Psalm 37:29, 'The righteous shall inherit the land (not the heavens) and dwell therein forever.' The only exception thereto will be the Christians, those who have followed in the footsteps of the Master during the last 1,900 years. This class have been promised a greater reward, they are to inherit the heavens as joint heirs of Christ.

Room for All On Earth.

"Some ask the question, if all of Adam's posterity are to dwell on the earth where will there be room for all? And we answer, that you can give all of mankind, both living and the dead, standing room in less than one-half of the province of Ontario—a schoolboy can figure that out. Let them spread out now over the earth, bearing in mind, as the scriptures say, that the whole earth will be made a paradise, and we think all will agree you will find ample room for all. But then, some ask the question, how about the increase? We answer in the words of the Master, 'Ye do err, not knowing the scriptures. . . . for in the resurrection they neither marry, nor are given in marriage, but are as the angels of God in heaven'—propagation will cease. This is in accord with God's authorization to Father Adam to 'multiply and fill the earth'—not overfill it.

Sets 1925 As Date.

"Now, I submit to you in accordance with the Jewish jubilee and other Biblical evidence that the commencement of restoration will take place in 1925. With that year God's Kingdom will be established in Palestine, with that year those faithful prophets, Abraham, Isaac, Jacob and others of the Jewish dispensation will be resurrected perfect, mentally, morally and physically, and they as God's representatives in the earth will bring order out of chaos first in Palestine. Thereafter they will enjoy peace, joy, happiness, health and life. The record is that other peoples of earth will see the condition prevailing there and desire that condition also. The scriptures declare they will send their ambassadors and representatives to Palestine to receive instructions from God's messengers and official representatives. These instructions will be given unto them and they will take them back to their own people. As a consequence, and in accord with God's promise, "out of Zion shall go forth the law, and the word of the Lord from Jerusalem . . . . for the earth shall be full of the knowledge of the Lord, as the waters cover the sea."

Millions Will Not Die.

"It is because of where we stand upon the stream of time, the time when God's Kingdom is being established, and because of the fact that millions will pass over from the present order into the new order being established in 1925 and will keep the words of Jesus, that we can with assurance, basing our argument upon God's Word, declare unto you, "Millions now living will never die," said Mr. Salter.

"When one gains an appreciation of the purpose of God's Kingdom in the earth, one and all will surely pray in sincerity and truth and longing desire, "Thy Kingdom come, Thy will be done in earth as it is in heaven."

Frank Yeigh Outlines Activities of Presbyterians, Home and Abroad

Frank Yeigh of Toronto, spoke in two Presbyterian churches, Sunday. In King Street Church, Sunday morning, his subject was "The Biggest Business in Canada," which, he claimed, was the church, including all faiths, with fifteen thousand congregations and a membership including a large percentage of the total population. Its combined contributions ran high up in the millions, while its varied services and activities, at home and abroad, missionary, educational, medical and philanthropic, constituted the greatest existing agency for good.

The speaker asserted that the church even allowing for shortcomings and defects, never had so secure a place or exercised so great an influence, despite prophecies and statements to the contrary.

A large congregation attended First Presbyterian Church in the evening, when Mr. Yeigh gave an illustrated address with lantern slides, on "The Work of the Presbyterian Church in Canada," including mission work among twelve different nationalities; many social settlements; rescue and redemptive homes, school homes and mission hospitals. Over fifty missionaries are working among foreign groups, and over a thousand home mission fields are occupied in different parts of the Dominion, especially in the west.

Particularly interesting were the scenes depicting the foreign immigrant and the help given him. Other scenes covered typical western mission fields in Northern Manitoba, the Peace River County, the foothill section of Alberta and the Mountain regions of British Columbia, concluding with a set dealing with work among the Chinese in Canada.

A two-weeks' series of church and community conferences in the Presbytery of London, for the furtherance of the spiritual objectives of the forward movement, and the increased efficiency of the churches in the various communities of the presbytery opens Monday afternoon in Ilderton and Vanneck and in Thamesford on Tuesday night, with Mr. Yeigh as one of the speakers. On Wednesday night, London Presbyterian congregations will meet in St James Church, when Rev. W. G. Wallace D.D., of Toronto, will give an illustrated lecture on the home and foreign mission work.

REVIEWS LIFE OF JESUS CHRIST

Rev. J. Bruce Hunter, B.A., B.D., of Toronto, pastor-elect for 1923, occupied the pulpit at the First Methodist Church on Sunday. After a few introductory remarks, Mr. Hunter, taking his text from the 17th chapter of the Gospel of St. Luke, preached on the subject of "Sowing and Reaping." He dwelt on the significant history which was back of the beautiful poetry of the life of Jesus Christ.

Germany lately had a dream of a new universal religion, which was to replace the teachings of Jesus Christ, which they declared had become worn out and obsolete. The Roman Empire was strong and flourishing until Jesus Christ began to assert himself, after which it gradually fell apart.

The pastor declared that Moses typified the law, and Elijah typified prophecy, but Jesus Christ typifies everything. Moses typified the law, but law is only a protection, or a hedge used to hem us in from outside things. Laws are only fragmentary, for those which held good a century ago are impossible at the present day, and the present-day laws will be obsolete one hundred years from now.

Jesus personified life, and the law of life is love. There was a time when the people had great difficulty in determining the law of Jehovah, but Jesus came to them and revealed unto them the law of love, and the people began to understand the character and heart of God. This great revelation can only come through Christ, which when accomplished is what is known as the blessed atonement.

BEGINS SERIES OF LENTEN SERMONS

On Sunday morning in Robinson Memorial church the pastor, Rev. W. L. Hiles, preached the first of a series of Lenten sermons on "The Seven Words From the Cross."

Mr. Hiles said in part: "It is well for us to stand before the cross of Jesus and see there that most terrible reality in life, the monster "Sin" struggling against God and doing its very worst; to see there also the incarnate God "resisting unto blood, striving against sin." We would be different, did we look longer at the cross and wonder more. This is what the Lenten season is for. In our recoil against Romanism we have not made much of Lent. Because we have seen Lent observed in a superficial manner, by a change of diet, or the restriction of social activities for a little time is no reason we should not observe the forty days in spirit and in truth.

The 53rd chapter of Isaiah's prophecy will ever remain the best commentary on the dying of Jesus on the cross. "All we like sheep have gone astray, we have turned every one to his own way, but the Lord has laid on Him the iniquity of us all."

It is not very complimentary to us that our sins "nailed him to the tree," and so there is still with us "the offence of the cross." But the fact of sin and the fact of the guiltless suffering for the guilty are two of the most common facts of life. In each graveyard in France and Flanders, where our boys lie buried, there has been erected a "Cross of Sacrifice." The war has taught us something of how redemption is obtained.

The first word from the cross was a prayer for the men who drove through his hands and feet the cruel nails. "Father forgive them for they know not what they do." This is a characteristic word of Jesus, for he had laid great emphasis on the forgiving spirit. God is the Gol who delights in forgiveness. And we must be ready to forgive if we would be forgiven. This is the hard thing for us to do. "It takes strength to forgive; the God of hate is thin-blooded; the God of forgiveness has the iron of strength in his veins." That we may forgive we must be girded with the strength of the strong Son of God.

The prayer of Jesus is a prayer for forgiveness of those who sin in ignorance. "They know not what they do." How much comfort for us in this prayer! God knows how much light men have, and whether they are living up to their light or not. Still He pleads for those in heathen darkness, still he pleads for the children of the slums, who never had a chance; still he pleads for you and me, that our sins of ignorance may be forgiven. And the sins we commit in our ignorance should be enough to keep us humble and make us glad for our Saviour's prayer.

DECLARES HUMANS SEEK MORE LIGHT

John J. Flinn Speaks On Christian Science At Patricia Theatre.

PRESENT WORLD UNHAPPY

Asserts Recovery Can Only Be Made Through Spiritual Regeneration.

A very interesting lecture on Christian Science was given Sunday afternoon at the Patricia Theatre by John J. Flinn of Evanston, Ill., member of the board of lectureship of the Mother Church, Boston, Mass.

"For ages men have been engaged in an effort to get more out of life, to obtain a larger measure of liberty, and to find in the possession of both that ease, comfort, contentment and peace, which are supposed to make up the sum of human happiness," he said in the course of his lecture. "But the prizes sought have been elusive; they have lost their value even with seeming attainment, for the struggle to capture them has, in the main, been carried along on the theory that happiness is something material and, therefore, to be pursued by indulging the material senses and turning loose upon the chase the sensual desires.

"To judge by appearances, the world as a whole today is unhappy; never more so in all its history. If one were disposed to indulge in it, here would be an exceptionally tempting opportunity to satirize material prosperity. Prosperity and happiness, happiness and prosperity, as we all know, are almost invariably coupled in human thought and conversation. Humanity in general thinks of happiness as something largely if not wholly dependent upon, or certainly as a companion of, prosperity. In the opinion of the world, to be prosperous means to be happy.

Materialism Has Its Chance.

Never has materialism had its way more completely than in the last seven years. Never has its way been less obstructed. To have opposed its headlong career during the greater part of this time would have been to invite opprobrium and hostility. It dominated nearly everything and everybody. An opponent of its methods would be as one crying in the wilderness in the midst of a howling storm. Here was its chance, and it made the most if it. For years it had been impatiently awaiting the day when it would prove itself the greatest force on the globe. The opportunity coming at last, it proved only one thing, its ability to destroy. It upset the world, it halted progress, it stopped production, it unsettled the thoughts of men; it wrought havoc and scattered wreckage wherever its power or influence was felt. The world is still staggering from its thunderous explosions. It counted upon its big loans, big profits, high wages, great bank accounts—the setting in of an era of inflation and artificial prosperity—for justification. All of these were realized to the satisfaction of human craving, and with their realization came a period of luxury and extravagance such as history had never before recorded; but in conjunction with it all came experiences in popular disillusionment, popular disappointment, and, worse than all, in widespread moral degeneracy, from which no permanent recovery is possible save that which shall be brought about through spiritual regeneration.

Looking in Wrong Direction.

Outside of Christian Science, practically all are looking in a wrong direction for an acceptable and satisfying arrangement of the differences that are disturbing the world. It is generally hoped that by appealing to the individual and collective selfishness of men a basis of settlement may be found through territorial gifts, through some amelioration of indemnities, through resumption of trade relations, through preferential tariffs, or, when these, or any of them, fail of effect, through some kind of pressure. The thought of bringing about an understanding on a basis of good will, of unselfishness, of forgiveness and forgetfulness, of brotherliness, of the Golden Rule, of the Christly injunction that "ye love one another," is submerged by the false and foolish belief that behind every international treaty all the ancient geographical, racial, tribal, political and religious bigotries, prejudices and bitternesses must be preserved to meet possible or impossible emergencies.

Mary Baker Eddy, if the leaders of the peoples of the earth would see it, as some day they must and shall, has long since made clear the basis upon which world harmony can be secured; namely, through the understanding of the one great and only God, whereby the destruction of all false gods may be brought about.

A Blessing to All.

We have from our revered leader an unqualified indorsement of the axiom that the impossible never happens. We have learned from her what blesses one, blesses all. Most of us realize from our own experience that good manifested radiates beyond the bounds of our vision, even beyond the bounds of our imagination. Our reasoning faculties teach us, even if our spiritual intuition be dull, that if Chistian Science heals in one instance through the intelligent application of principle, there can be no limitations placed upon its healing efficacy. It needs only to be applied to government, to politics, to economics, to finance, to commerce, to sociology, to education, to the morals of the people, in order that it shall work marvelous changes in that potential power of democracy known as popular opinion.

There is no more efficacious agency than Christian Science for the promotion of better taste, higher aspirations and good will among all people. It is the most tranquilizing influence operating throughout the world today. Its doctrines have already transformed for the better the aspiration and character of millions of people in all parts of the globe, and every one of these is spreading its truth, expressing his gratitude, not so much by word of mouth, nor by indulging in religious controversy, as by letting his light shine. Through the reflection of life, truth and love, the omnipotent power of God is being more widely recognized now than ever before, and there is coming in to the consciousness of the nations, slowly but surely, an attitude of thought which will eventually weld the hearts as well as the interests of men.

Paramount Mission.

It must never be lost sight of that Christian Science is engaged first and last in the task of restoring to the world the Word and perpetuating the works given and carried on by Christ Jesus, and that its grandest mission and its greatest joy is to restore primitive Christianity and to perpetuate these works as the Master himself, were he once more among us, would direct. He came with healing in his thought, with healing in his voice, with healing in his touch. He went around everywhere doing good.

Christian Scientists make no stronger pretensions of belief in the Bible than do other professed Christians, but Christian Scientists go farther than mere belief: they trust, and strive to understand. And according to the measure of their understanding they make practical application of Bible truths and achieve demonstrations. One might believe in mathematics fervently, devotedly, unwaveringly, everlastingly, without ever getting further than belief. Mere belief would never solve a problem in figures. One must take chalk, or pencil or pen in hand and work the problem out in accordance with the principle of the science if anything is to be accomplished. Christian Scientists, following the instruction of Mary Baker Eddy, and adhering to the Principle which she discovered, prove the truths in the Bible through their understanding and their work as they go along, and bring realization of its prophecies and its promises into their daily experience.

An Intelligent Understanding of God.

Christian Science is not blind faith; it is an intelligent understanding of God and of man's relationship to the Supreme Being, the omnipresent, omniscient and omnipotent Creator. It is an understanding of God which admits of no limitation, question or doubt with regard to His all-seeing wisdom, His all-inclusive power, His all-embracing Love. It is complete acceptance of the Father-Motherhood of the Eternal. It is an absolute acknowledgment that the God of our Bible reigns, governs, controls the universe, and that there is none other beside Him.

A World Need Today.

Never has there been a time in all history when men were in greater need than now of that clearness of sight, that steadiness of purpose, that strength of character—that probity, perspicacity and unshakable moral stamina—which are imparted through spiritual discernment and spiritual understanding. It is the mission and purpose of Christian Science to bring the kingdom of God to earth, by dispelling the illusion that materialism, sensuality, money-grubbing, money-getting, money-spending, can satisfy the human desire for contentment, peace and happiness. The wreckage all about us of hopes, aspirations, ambitions based upon the attainment of mere worldly success, should constitute an impressive warning to the business and professional man as well as to the social striver of our day.

Wrong thinking is at the bottom not only of individual troubles and sorrows and sufferings, but it is the cause of all the harrowing evils that beset the family, the community, the nation and the world at large. Christian Science offers right-thinking as a corrective—as an obtainable, feasible, and, in fact, as the only possible cure for this stupendous evil. If the thoughts of humanity were in harmony with the divine mind, with the commandments, with the beatitudes, with the prophets, with the teachings of Christ Jesus and his disciples, with the principle of Christian Science, as revealed through and expounded and taught by Mary Baker Eddy, the world would be freed from ferment, confusion and tumult. Christian Science corrects, exalts and strengthens the thought of the individual, and the thought of the community, the nation and the world will be straightened, elevated and strengthened proportionately with the increase in the number of individuals who shall claim, and will their natural inheritance of light and who engage in the work of spreading it among their fellows.

Claims Spiritual Side of Religion To Be Chief Support of Morality

At the Sunday morning service in the First Congregational Church, the pastor, Rev. Mr. Kelly, spoke on the "Natural Man." In the course of his remarks he dealt with the lack of interest which, he said, the "unregenerated" man has in religious things.

The pastor's criticism was that the doctrinal side of religion deals with expressions that are mysterious and have no meaning, and on the side of experience his criticism was that one cannot use expressions that are unreal to him.

"Our desire," said the minister, "is to be fair to such men, although it is not always easy, for their position seems to be this, that they will believe nothing that they do not understand and at the same time they will not put themselves in the way of increasing their knowledge.

"Were we all to take this position, such a thing as secular education would be impossible. Every science and art has its own technical expressions, and while these may be meaningless to the uninitiated, who would say that they are meaningless?" said Rev. Kelly.

"Indeed, parents send their children to universities at great expense just to find out what these expressions mean, and the young people give some of the best years of their life, patiently and laboriously, studying just what these scientific expressions stand for," he declared.

"We have frequently," went on the minister, "met with people who at one time in life ignored religion, yet at another time in life these persons were free to admit that through some change that had taken place in themselves, the expressions of religion which previously had no meaning to them are now, to them, bursting with truth.

"One characteristic of the 'Natural Man' is that he wants to eliminate the spiritual side of religion. He does not always object to the ethical side of it, and for this we are thankful.

"But if you destroy the distinctively spiritual side of religion, the ethical side will in consequence suffer a like disaster. Eliminate God and Christ in prayer and worship, and you would soon see morality would suffer an eclipse," asserted Mr. Kelly.

"We must not allow the natural man to pull us down to his level. We must love him, but we must also convince him that he suffers from limitations, and that he can only enter a fuller life by entering through the door of faith into an appreciation of the very things he now despises," continued the minister.

"When a telescope is directed to some landscape it enables us to see what we could not see otherwise; but it does not enable us to see anything which has not a real existence in the prospect before us. It does not present to the eye any elusive imagery, neither is it a fanciful scene, that it throws open to our contemplation. The natural eye saw nothing but blue land stretching along the distant horizon. By the aid of the glass there bursts upon it a charming variety of fields and fields and woods and spires and villages. Yet who would say that the glass added one feature to this assemblage. It discovers nothing that is not there."

"It is so with religion as we exercise faith by the divine spirit. We imagine nothing, for there is a difference between imagination and faith. The Spirit of God helps us to see reality, and by his help we are able to see and appreciate what we could not see by our own unaided powers," said Rev. Mr. Kelly.

SEES SPIRITUAL IN MAN AS DIVINITY

"Man is the highest product of his own history," declared Rev. A. E. M. Thomson, at the Centennial Methodist Church, Sunday evening. "The discoverer finds nothing so grand or so tall as himself! The greatest star is at the little end of the telescope,—the star that is looking; not looked after, nor looked at. Why? Because man is more than body. Man is more than mind. Man is a spirit. His spiritual powers are the crown of his being. The spiritual man is the real man. The spiritual man is the eternal man. The spirit is not a part of man. It is man.

"You cannot measure a man by measuring his body, nor even by attempting to measure his mind. Neither of these is he. He is different to them both, and is master of them. We spend so much time on the body, which is only the house in which we live, or the machine by which we act, and transport ourselves from one place to another, that we almost forget that we are not the body but something far bigger and grander.

"There are two great universes, the material and the spiritual in this world. It is also a fact that in a certain sense man is of dual structure. There is a material man. In this he is a majestic animal, a superb machine. This is the baser self, and is of the earth, earthy. It is in the spiritual that we find the image of God. The image of God is not a matter of two-leggedness or of facial expression.

"The spiritual man is the divine within us. The spiritual man chafes under the limitations of the material, and is continually crying out, 'O, that I could see and know my God, whence I came, and what I am.' A few acres would be sufficient for his material needs, but not satisfied with this he draws on all the world for his sustenance, then explores the heavens with his telescope, and then standing on the edge of things, he cries out, 'Is this all?' and reaches beyond till he finds peace, satisfaction and life in God. God is for the soul, as the lungs are for air. God is the fountain, at which the spirit quenches its thirst.

"As God is love, and the soul finds its life in God, so the soul hungers for love. God in Christ was love stooping so low that it might lift so high. Even if there had been no cross the incarnation was necessary in order to understand God. It was a demonstration of the character of God. The drops of blood from Christ's hands and feet did more to bring man to God than all the sacrifices of Jewish altars slain. As they saw Him heal their diseases, they said, 'He loves our bodies,' and as He taught them of purity and righteousness they knew He loved their souls.

"The power of this love is beyond any other power in the world. For it, men have suffered martyrdom and death. Other great men as John Peter, Knox or Wesley, have bowed humbly before Him. If we would be remembered we must carve our name deep on the life of the age in which we live. It may bring deprivation or death, but it is the way of liberty and victory."

PASTORS DELIVER LENTEN MESSAGE

Wednesday of this week is Ash Wednesday, the opening of Lent, which lasts until Easter Sunday, April 16.

The period of Lent, which commemorates the Passion of Jesus Christ, is generally regarded as a time of fasting and abstinence, and in many churches is marked by special week day services.

This is especially true of the Catholic Church, and at the masses in the different churches Sunday the Lenten instructions were read to refresh the minds of the congregation as to their obligations during this period.

Father Pocock the speaker at St. Peter's Cathedral, exhorted his hearers to make Lent a period of prayer and mortification. He pointed out the significance of Lent, to commemorate the Lord's passion and death, and urged all to attend the services during the week. Wednesday evening there would be beads, sermon and benediction. The congregation would hear the work of God.

Friday there would be the stations of the cross, the congregation would follow him through his passion. If we had a full realization that Christ suffered and died for us we should show our appreciation. Let us do so by attending regularly to our duties during this holy period," urged the speaker.

Announces Regulations.

The Lenten regulations as announced in the different churches are the same as the last couple of years, including the slight modifications recently made. All days are days of fast, and Wednesday and Friday, and the Saturday of Ember and holy weeks are days of abstinence.

Sunday was Quinquagesima Sunday, and Father Pocock at St. Peter's spoke on "Charity," having reference to the epistle of the day, St. Paul to the Corinthians.

The speaker, in his opening remarks, gave it as his opinion that if the distinguishing characteristics of the Christian today were charity, many would be found numbered among the heathens and infidels. Christian charity was the very basis of Christianity, and without charity one could not be a true Christian, he contended.

"Charity, defined as a divine virtue, has two essentials," he said, "Love of God for ourselves, Love the Lord thy God with thy whole heart, with thy whole soul, with all thy mind, and love of our neighbor for God.

"Love thy neighbor as thyself," quoted Father Pocock, adding that without the love of God nothing will prevail to salvation for as St. Paul says: "If I should distribute all my goods to feed the poor, and if I should deliver my body to be burned, and have not charity, it profiteth me nothing." The speaker then quoted the Lord as saying: "If you love me, keep my commandments," and "Any one that keepeth my commandments, loveth me."

Must Love Enemies.

Contending that good works were not acceptable to God until one was at peace with his neighbor, the speaker exhorted all who had differences with others to become reconciled to them before the beginning of Lent. It would not have to be for the neighbor's sake, but rather for their own and God's, as Our Lord says: "Love your enemies, do good to them who hate you."

"Let fraternal Christianity become universal during the approaching period of prayer," urged Father Pocock in conclusion. "Forgive from the depths of your heart those who have injured you. Put Christ and his love for mankind before you as an example, he has said: "Love your neighbor, even as I love you," for said the speakr, Christ lived a life of charity, even up to the time when he was dying on the cross when he cried out: "Father, forgive them. They know not what they do."

KING AND QUEEN VISIT SCENE OF MARY'S WEDDING

Preparations for Royal Marriage of England's Princess Nearing Completion.

DECORATE HISTORIC ABBEY

Triangular Pillars of London Thoroughfares Draped With Blue Banners.

LONDON, Feb. 26.—King George and Queen Mary rehearsed yesterday in the parts they will take at the wedding of their daughter, Princess Mary, to Viscount Lascelles, Tuesday.

Shortly before noon their majesties arrived at the door of Westminster Abbey in a big limousine and were met by the dean. They spent an hour in examining elaborate arrangements made for the accommodation of the great assemblage of wedding attendants and in being conducted through the positions they will take during the ceremony.

Their visit was a surprise to scores of curious persons who came for a last peep at the scene of the wedding of England's princess. When they were asked by the abbey verger to leave, the sight-seers reluctantly clustered about the doors and a little later they were rewarded by the arrival of the king and queen, whom they cheered enthusiastically.

The queen smiled and the king raised his hat in acknowledgment of their greeting.

Hundreds of craftmen and decorators have been busy for a fortnight in regaling Parliament Square, the end of Victoria street, the broad sanctuary of Whitehall and the exterior of the abbey itself for the great event and their majesties seemed pleased with the now almost completed work.

Bear Monograms.

The principal pillars of this neighborhood are triangular in shape and they have been draped in blue banners bearing the monograms "M" and "H." Viscount Lascelles' christian name is Henry.

From masts surmounted by gilt crowns fly flags of the empire. Projecting arms bear on either side of the pillars flags of the heraldic lozenge of Princess Mary and the coat of arms of Viscount Lascelles.

These masts, 15 yards apart, alternate with simple pillars twenty feet high topped with capitals carrying gilt-edged ball heads. The heads of the pillars are linked to the mast heads by ropes, while floral garlands seven inches in diameter, carry large gilt lilies. One one intermediate mast is an oval medallion bearing in relief the superimposed heads of the princess and bridegroom-to-be. Draping the medallions are festoons of rose leaves with sprays of roses.

Erect Two Arches.

The bridal party will drive under two arches made of motto banners. One of these is near Trafalgar Square at the top of the Mall, and the other in Parliament Square. They are 35 feet high, with thirty-foot spans, carrying large gold-fringed banners with the mottos:

"May Your Path Unfold In Brightness,"

and

"Westminster Wishes All Happiness to the Bride and Bridegroom."

In the central garden inclosures of Parliament Square two stands, capable of accommodating hundreds of spectators, have been erected. Others have been erected in front of Westminster Abbey and also in front of the abbey's west doors. Similar stands, in front of Buckingham Palace, have been reserved for wounded soldiers, in accordance with the wishes of their majesties.

On the balcony above the west doors of the abbey several pilasters have been cut away to assure the seatholders in the stand a clearer view of the arrival and departure of the wedding party. The bridal party will step from carriages and motor cars onto a great red carpet, which extends from the altar steps to the west door and thence, under a long red and white striped canopy with closed sides, to the sidewalk. Its straight line is broken only where it diverges to the right to avoid passing over the unknown warrior's grave.

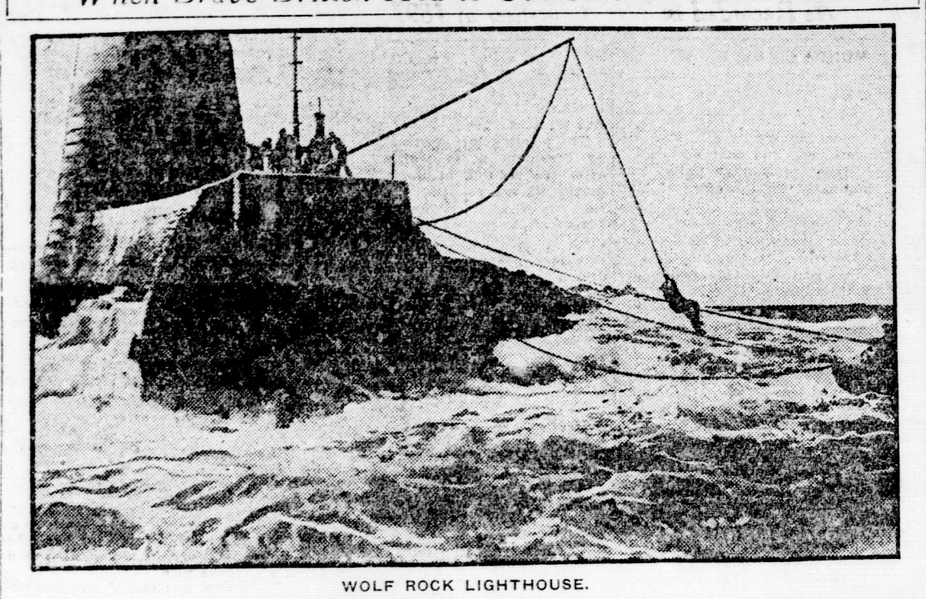

Erect Rows of Seats.

Inside the abbey rows of seats twelve deep have been erected on either side from the central aisle to the walls of the nave, extending almost to the sacrarium. There have been ingeniously built around the pillars and over the stalls these rows. There are passages beneath, through which the wedding guests will proceed to their seats, as none but those composing the three royal processions to the altar may pass through the central red carpeted aisle.

The framework of the stands has been coated with gray paint, making them harmonize with the ancient stone walls.

The order of ceremonial, prepared by the state chamberlain and issued this afternoon, constitutes the official guide for the movements of all those participating in the wedding service. It specifies who shall occupy the dozen state carriages and the precedence of those composing the three royal processions. Officially it is termed "The ceremonial to be observed at the marriage of Her Royal Highness Princess Victoria Alexandra Alice Mary, daughter of Their Majesties the King and Queen, with Henry George Charles Viscount Lascelles, D. S. O."

FARM VALUES STILL SLIDING

$63 Is Average Worth Per Acre of Agricultural Land in Ontario.

WAGES OF HELP LOWER

Ottawa Reports Cattle Are Cheaper Than in Pre-War Days in Canada.

OTTAWA, Feb. 25.—The average value of the occupied farm lands of Canada, which includes both improved and unimproved land, together with dwelling houses, barns, stables and other farm buildings, is returned to the bureaus of statistics as $40 per acre, as compared with $48 in 1910, $46 in 1919, $41 in 1918, $38 in 1917, $36 in 1916 and $35, in 1915.

By provinces the value for 1921 is highest in British Columbia, viz., $122. In the other provinces the average values of farm lands per acre are reported as follows: Ontario, $63; Quebec, $59; Prince Edward Island, $46; Nova Scotia and Manitoba, $35; Saskatchewan, $29; New Brunswick and Alberta, $28.

For the year 1920 the average wages of farm help were the highest on record. For 1921 the returns show a very substantial reduction. For the whole of Canada the average wages per month of farm helpers during the summer season of 1921, were, for men $67, and for women, $42, including board, the average value of which was $22 per month for men, and $18 for women. In 1920 the corresponding averages were: $86 for men, including board value $26, and $47 for women including board value $20.

Not only do the average values for all descriptions of farm live stock show an extraordinary decrease as compared with 1920, but they are also below the values which were ruling before the war.

For horses, the values are the lowest on record since these annual returns were begun in 1900. For Canada as a whole, horses under one year average $38, as against $49 in 1920; horses one year to under three years, $79, against $102; and horses three years old and over, $123, as against $151.

Cattle under one year are $12, as against $20; cattle one year to under three years, $26, as against $45; cattle three years and over, $39, the average value per head for Canada is, for horses, $83, as against $106 in 1920; for milch cows, $51, as against $80; for other cattle, $28, as against $47; for all cattle, $37, as against $59; for sheep, $6, as against $10; and for swine, $14, as against $23. For swine per 100 lb. live weight the average is $10, as against $15 in 1920.

The per capita values are the nowest of any during the last seven years, 1915 to 1921, except that for swine the value in 1915 was $14, as in 1921.

For Canada the average values per head of each description of farm poultry are returned as follows: Turkeys, $3.39, as compared with $4 in 1920; geese, $2.42 against $2.80; ducks, $1.25, against $1.50; other fowls, 90 cents, against $1.08.

Alleged Moonshiner Asks For Time and Is Jailed Over Week-End.

KITCHENER, Feb. 26.—Beating his wife, getting drunk and running a moonshine still were the charges laid against a man named Ready in police court yesterday. The man had just enough moonshine left in him to think the matter a joke when he was arraigned before the magistrate on the charges. He importuned the magistrate to be patient with him as he had been dragged out of his bed by a couple of officers, and was feeling a little bit off. He was taken to jail to sober up over the week-end. A large basin still and two large demijohns of moonshine adorned the front of the magistrate's bench during the hearing. They were obtained at the man's place.

STEAL TILL FROM ST. THOMAS HOTEL

Thieves Break It Open in Yard So Guests Won't Be Disturbed.

OBTAIN BRAND-NEW CAR

Enter Garage Show Room After Dark and Drive Away With Auto.

ST. THOMAS, Feb. 26.—Thieves, breaking into the Wabash Hotel in the early hours of Sunday morning, showed so much consideration for the sleepers within the building they carried the cash register to the backyard to open it for fear the ring would disturb the slumbers of the occupants. Fifty dollars in cash rewarded their efforts.

Some time after midnight a thief or thieves entered the building through the front door of the hotel, which always stands unlocked. With an ordinary key they gained admittance to the office, where the cash register was kept unlocked.

Their entrance had been unnoticed by the night watchman, and so, not caring to attract attention by the slight ring which results when the drawer of the register is opened, the thieves carried it out the way they came and to a lumber pile at the rear of the building. Here they rifled it at their leisure.

The robbery was reported early Sunday to the police who are now working on the case.

Not less audacious was a second robbery when a new six-cylinder Studebaker car was stolen from the International Garage and Salesroom on Talbot street sometime Sunday morning.

The thieves entered the front door of the garage and drove a car which was on display from the building. The car was recovered Sunday morning on Dundas street in London little the worse for its strange maiden trip. Robert Coffee, proprietor of the garage, brought the car home in the afternoon.

An attempt was made also to rob the office of the Steel Manufacturing Co. on Elm street. The door of the building was broken open and an attempt made to smash the door of the safe with a sledge hammer. When their efforts resulted in nothing but several dents, they gave up.

A night watchman at the plant saw or heard nothing until he found the wrecked office early Sunday morning.

KIWANIS TO AID NURSE

Ingersoll Club Will Assist Public Health Work.

INGERSOLL, Feb. 26.—Financial assistance will be given by the Kiwanis Club in the movement to have the services of the public health nurse continued during the year. At the municipal election the bylaw to continue the services of the health nurse was defeated.

The board of education, however, at a recent meeting decided to continue the services of the nurse for at least three months, and the Kiwanis members have gone on record as willing to assist the board.

With the board of education and the Kiwanis Club there is the feeling that important work was done by the health nurse last year.

GENOA PARLEY MEETS APRIL 10

Lloyd George and Poincare Agree to Postponement After Reaching Agreement.

TROTZKY FEARFUL OF WAR

Britain's Premier Expected to Propose Ten-Year Truce When Conference Opens.

BOULOGNE, Feb. 26.—Agreement to a postponement of the Genoa Economic Conference until April 10 was reached by Premier Poincare of France, and Prime Minister Lloyd George of Great Britain, at their conference here last night. The Genoa Conference originally was called to meet March 8.

Mr. Lloyd George said after the conference there would be no necessity for a further discussion of the Franco-British pact as both parties were entirely agreed as to all its essentials. The pact would be ready for signature in a few days, he added.

The question as to whether disarmament would be discussed at Genoa was not mentioned. Both premiers expressed great satisfaction at the results of their talk.

The official communique issued after the conference read:

"Messrs. Poincare and Lloyd George met tonight in a four-hour talk, during which they examined in a most cordial spirit a certain number of problems, particularly relating to Genoa.

"They agreed on the political guarantees to be secured in order to prevent encroachments either on the rights of the League of Nations or on the treaties signed since the peace for the rights of the Allies in reparations.

"The experts of the different powers will meet in London soon and the Italian government will be asked to call the Genoa Conference for April 10.

"A complete understanding was reached, and the two premiers carried away with them the certainty that the entente may confidently be expected to produce the best results, and that there are no difficulties of a political character that stand in the way of the two nations working together."

TROTZKY FEARS WAR.

MOSCOW, Feb. 26.—Leon Trotzky, Soviet minister of war, speaking before the Moscow Soviet in connection with the red army anniversary, declared Russia's scale of fate is now balancing over Genoa. "If the coming Genoa conference should not result satisfactorily for Russia," he declared, "it might be necessary to tip the balance with blood, perhaps this coming spring.

It is necessary for the proletariat to be ready, then, to face a blow in the spring, if such a situation should be forced on us. Each week of postponement of the Genoa conference must be a week of fortifying the red army. The time we may lose on the field of diplomacy we must and shall gain in the field of activity in fortifying and developing the army. We are fully decided, on our fourth anniversary, to prepare ourselves for a new struggle, because the finish fight between Capital and Labor is far from a decision."

PLANS 10-YEAR TRUCE.

PARIS, Feb. 26. — Great interest was displayed in French official circles yesterday at reports that Prime Minister Lloyd George of Great Britain intends to propose at the Genoa conference a 10-year truce in Europe to afford opportunity for reconstruction. It was stated, however, that the British government had not suggested any plan of this character to France.

Foreign office quarters would not comment on the reported proposition, but it was indicated that further details would be eagerly awaited.

In unofficial circles, however, it was argued that such a plan as was suggested, involving a radical reduction of the army, would have to be coupled with adequate guarantees of reparation payments before France could join.

STATE MAY NOT PRESS FOR BULLOCK'S RETURN

Believe Carolina Authorities Fear Lynching Might Be Result.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 25.—If the Hamilton court refuses to grant extradition in the case of Matthew Bullock, who is wanted in North Carolina on a charge of attempted murder, no further effort will be made to get him back to his native state. This is the view held by North Carolina persons in official circles who, while they have not taken an active part in the Bullock case, have been watching the details of the controversy closely.

The belief has been strong here from the first that the North Carolina state authorities have not been very anxious to have Bullock returned to the state because of the danger of lynching To guard against this would be a serious responsibility for the governor.

SAYS SCHOOLS NOT GODLESS

Woman Inspector Addresses Educational Convention on Education and Citizenship.

FIRST DUTY SELF-SUPPORT

Problem of Education Today Problem of Citizenship in Fullest Sense.

Much difference of opinion exists as to how we are to educate for the character which produces the highest type of cititzenship. Some say religion in our school.

"I am of the opinion that there should be some organized form of religious education in our schools, but I repudiate the charge of "godless schools,'" said Dr. A. E. Marty of Toronto, Canada's first woman school inspector, in the course of an inspiring and informing address on "Education and Citzenship," delivered at the noon hour luncheon on Saturday in St. Andrew's Hall, in connection with the educational convention for Western Ontario, under the auspices of the London Union Mothers' Club.

"Religious ideas are daily being inculcated in the history and the literature lesson, and in the teaching of civics," continued Dr. Marty. "Some believe that the introduction of the Bible as a text book would be the solution. We must not forget that the Bible and catechism were taught in the schools of Germany with great assiduity in that generation before the war, when the ideals of the German people were transformed to the 'will to power.'"

Much eagerness was manifested to secure tickets for the luncheon and to hear Dr. Marty on the part of delegates, members of the teaching profession and parents, who filled to overflowing the long tables temptingly spread in the gymnasium by St. Andrew's Ladies' Aid.

Further, with regard to the subject of education and citizenship, the woman inspector said:

"The public mind is today thoroughly possessed of the importance of education.

"Indications of this conviction are such conferences as this one under the auspices of the Mothers' Union; the activity of the educational committees of our great national organizations, viz., Daughters of the Empire, National Council of Women and Women's Institutes; and the rapid growth in the provinces of home and school clubs and trustees' associations, both of which will soon become national organizations.

Has Had Lesson.

"Why is public attention today centred on education as never before? The world has had an object lesson on the mighty influence of education in shaping national life and ideals, or in other words, in making citizenship. The influence of the school and college with its doctrine of 'will to power' transformed the ideals of the German people in one generation. The same training has been going on in Japan, we have reason to believe.

"The thinking public, seized of this fact, asks: 'What may we accomplish in the cause of good citizenship if education will concentrate on directing the minds of the youth towards the importance of the spiritual values in life as against the material?'

"The problem of education today is the problem of cittizenship in its fullest sense—citizenship in the community, in the provinc, in the nation —and also in the empire and the great family of nations. Not on the school alone should fall the responsibility of shaping the citizenship of tomorrow, but on the school in cooperation with all the home and religious forces of the community.

"There are two factors involved in citizenship. There is on the one hand the practical, the utilitarian, the economic side. On the other, the ideal, the spiritual side, which springs from character.

"The first obligation of citizenship is self-support. The school should help the child to find himself in life, that he may become an economic unit. It should give the preliminary training which will form the best basis for his future specialization. How far the school has done this would be matter for an entire address.

"Today it is generally admitted that all the people, not merely the professional class, have a right to a liberal education; and that it is the part of wisdom to have an intelligent, highly-trained democracy. 'For every soul, denied the right to grow, beneath the flag shall be its secret foe.'"

Culture Not Limited.

"It is also generally accepted that any subject may be made the basis of culture. The gradual widening of the university curriculum to include the departments of commerce and banking, mines, agriculture, household economics, etc., is an admission on the part of the university.

"The ideal and spiritual side of citizenship embraces character from the standpoint of the individual. That part of the individual which reacts on his own personal and private life. The aim of education in this regard is to develop those personal qualities of self-reliance, self-control, self-respect and self-denial which the poet has so beautifully summed up in the lines:

'Self-knowledge, self-reverence,
self-control,
These three alike lead life to sovereignpower.'

"But the ideal and spiritual side of citizenship does not stop here. It embraces the wider duties of citizenship, viz., service to the community, to the nation, to the empire, and last of all to the great family of nations. The larger duties of citizenship come within the scope of our education.

'That man's the best cosmopolite,
Who loves his native country best.'

"Much depends upon the character of the teacher; but the most highly and spiritually endowed teacher cannot accomplish the desired result without the co-operation of the social factors in the community. That is one reason why I welcome the educational conference, the home and school club, the trustees' association, and any other organization that seeks to co-operate in the cause of education."

Seated at the head of the table with Mrs. A. G. Calder, the presiding officer and Dr. Marty were Mrs. J. Gemmell, former president of the London Union Mothers' Club and Mrs. G. F. Edwards, president of the Ontario Women's Institute.

A vote of thanks to Dr. Marty was moved by Miss E. Yeates who declared that the women teachers of Ontario regard Miss Marty as "the teacher who has arrived." Mrs. Charles Turner seconded the resolution. Mrs. H. T. White, seconded by Mrs. Benson, moved a vote of thanks to the Ladies' Aid of St. Andrew's for the tempting meals of Friday evening and Saturday noon and the quick and pleasing manner in which these were served.

TAKE SALTS TO FLUSH KIDNEYS

Eat Less Meat If You Feel Backachy or Have Bladder Trouble.

Meat forms uric acid which excites and overworks the kidneys in their efforts to filter it from the system. Regular eaters of meat must flush the kidneys occasionally. You must relieve them like you relieve your bowels; removing all the acids, waste and poison. Else you feel a dull misery in the kidney region, sharp pains in the back or sick headache, dizziness, your stomach sours, tongue is coated and when the weather is bad you have rheumatic twinges. The urine is cloudy, full of sediment; the channels often get irritated, obliging you to get up two or three times during the night.

To neutralize these irritating acids and flush off the body's urinous waste get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any pharmacy; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine and bladder disorders disappear. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to clean and stimulate sluggish kidneys and stop bladder irritation. Jad Salts is inexpensive; harmless and makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which millions of men and women take now and then, thus avoiding serious kidney and bladder diseases.—Advt.

Seeing Week-End Market With Aunt Maria's Eyes

Which contains the most vitamines, a pound of butter or a dozen eggs? With both exactly the same price at the week-end market on Saturday, 45 cents, here was a problem made to hand to set the food faddists fussing.

If only butter and eggs happened to be patent foods, what a magnificent opportunity would be afforded the advertising expert. Better still if one were patent, the other mere natural, what scope for the artist to present an argument to the eye by means of a pair of scales, eggs on one side, butter on the other, the scales tilted not according to weight, however, but superior or inferior number of calories.

Calories and vitamines may be all right in theory, and even in practice, but the homemaker and house-husband who go to market apparently aren't so concerned about these as stocking the larder with the best quality for the money when it comes to staples.

Assurance doubly sure was given on all sides that the eggs in every case were laid within the week, even the eggs which a certain country woman was willing to sell late in the morning for 35 cents, because she was anxious to get away home.

Pound rolls and crock butter alike were offering themselves for 45 cents. When the question was asked of one woman, "How is it you are selling your crock butter for the same price as the rolls?" her answer was, "Because the butter was all churned yesterday and the crocks packed the same time the rolls were made up."

Not for many a moon has there been such a uniformity of price on the old market. Even the woman who always commands a few cents more for "extra special quality" was letting her plump brown eggs and tempting butter go for 45 cents, dozen or pound.

Cabbage Gets Snobby.

While the cost of living is said to be dropping in the majority of food lines, there is one vegetable at least which has seized an opportunity to be original and do some social climbing at a time when its ascent is the more spectacular because of contrast. The whilom lowly cabbage can no longer be snubbed as common and plebeian. It is entirely too expensive for that, very much, in fact, in the new-rich class.

A market gardener was overheard admitting to his customers that his old cabbages (no insult meant in this case, but to indicate the 1921 model) were expensive at ten cents for a very small one, fifteen, twenty and twenty-five and thirty-five cents apiece.

"This time last year," he said, "I was selling a whole load for two dollars and thinking it a very good price."

At that moment he caught sight of Aunt Maria, and he quickly added: "Don't put in the paper I'm selling cabbages for two dollars a load now. Be sure and get it in the $2 was the price a year ago."

Cabbages have become such exotic plants that one vendor, indeed, waxed quite poetic about them. And the public was real enthusiastic about him, by the way. There was a very good reason. That reason was the price.

While new friends may be merely silver and the old pure gold, it was taking just about as much money in some quarters to buy old cabbage as new. The new, distinguishable by the delicate green of its dress, was well represented "amongst these present" of the vegetable kingdom. The 1922 cabbages had traveled all the way from Florida, which constituted, no doubt, a good excuse for selling them at twenty cents apiece, for very small ones.

But the poetic vendor, whose stock led all the rest in quantity, was doing the "honest weight" act for the benefit of buyers. His price, too, led the rest in point or reasonableness. He asked but seven cents a pound, which, he explained, was a very tiny margin over the wholesale price.

Bring Aroma of South.

That doubtless explained why he was having very few lulls in trade. He did find one interlude, however, in which to remark that the February climate was very different where the cabbages came from.

"Guess they got a kind of surprise when they arrived here in the storm the other day," he said. "Just got a letter from my niece in Florida who lives where these cabbages were grown. She was writing out in the garden, under the shade of a tree, with the sun shining up above, the flowers blooming and the birds singing all around her." And so the new cabbages brought to the sombre basement of the market house the sunshine of sunny southern skies and the fragrance of flowers. Doubtless they had their own peculiar odor and flavor when they were cooked on Sunday.

A dollar and fifty cents a bag was asked for one of a very few lots of potatoes in the open square.

Poultry was decidedly scarce. A plump turkey was first cousin to the phoenix, where its own species was concerned. The price still being asked at noon was $8.

Apparently nobody was thinking of having a birthday party.

Onions, evidently, are attempting to out-plutocrat even the cabbages. They were twenty-five cents a quart or six dollars a bushel.

Crates of birds for breeding purposes made their appearance, old reliable Plymouth Rocks at $5 for three pullets or $3 a piece for roosters, and Rhode Island Reds, claimed to be "pure bred" for $1.50 each.

Selling While Selling Good?

Honey was unusually plentiful. What was the big idea? Cultivating a sweet tooth in view of the imminence of the maple products season, or selling while the selling was good before the delicious syrup and sugar from the wild wood actually appeared?

One young lad had more varieties of honey than were familiar to some marketers at least. If the boy in the case wasn't a born salesman, like some other young lads that have been discovered at the week-end market, he has been very industrious in acquiring such a finished technique.

The prices and varieties were displayed that all who had any eyesight worth mentioning at all might read. There were fine-pound pails of clover for 85 cents; ten-pound pails of "mixed early honey" for $1.50, and ten-pound pails of "capping" honey for $1 only.

"But what is mixed early honey?" asked Aunt Maria.

"Made from apple blossoms and clover," answered the young salesman promptly, whereat one when overheard remarked. Sounds much more interesting than just clover or buckwheat."

The mystery which surrounded the name "capping" was quickly and clearly explained.

"After the honey is extracted from the comb," said the boy, "there is always some left in the wax. We take and boil the wax to get the honey out and that gives it a brown color. It is good honey, but, of course, it hasn't the same color and flavor after it is boiled, so that is why it is so much cheaper."

The young salesman isn't sure that he is going in for "bee-farming" like his father, who has over 300 hives, but he has the advantage of knowing all about his commodity and how it was produced before attempting to offer it for sale.

Cynthia Grey's Mail-Box

THE ROYAL BRIDE.

And Tuesday is to be the wedding day of England's fairy princess, Her Royal Highness the Princess Mary, only daughter of their Royal Highnesses King George and Queen Mary. Has she been wise, as she has proved in other things, in "naming the day" in the last winter month of the year? (Or do royal princesses "name the day" like just ordinary mortal brides, if such exist?) In any case, the winsome Princess Mary, who, after one more day becomes the bride of the gallant Viscount Lascelles, has had a narrow escape from being a March bride and changing all the auguries. Married on the 28th, however, she will still be a February bride. If the old prophecies are true, this is what Fate has in store for her:

"Married in February's sleety weather, Life you'll tread in tune together."

and

"When February brides do mate
You may wed, nor dread your fate."

Tuesday's bride, "marries for wealth," and England's fair princess undoubtedly is marrying a rich man, even if her heart goes with her hand.

Side Effects Now Popular

BY MARIAN HALE.

LONDON, Feb. 26.—Hats have taken tremendously to side effects! One sees, on a tour of the smart shops and smart avenues, scarcely a chapeau which doesn't wear a pompom, a huge flat bow or a tassel at the side. Vastly swagger are these side effects.

This Idaire hat of black crepe edged with fine milan, dares an exceeding sweep at the side and accentuates it with a feather ornament which quite touches the wearer's shoulder. Tassels of silk and feathers which reach to the shoulder or venture below, are quite the thing this season.

The black crepe de chine, which takes on some of the characteristics of the tricorne, slants a bunch of cellophone grapes over one eye.

The Reboux model, the inevitable tam, pulls its entire crown over the right eye and then to rather balance the thing and escape a too rakish air it flirts an ostrich tip at the side.

Mrs. A. C. Courtice, organizing secretary for the province, and Mrs. George Payne of the provincial executive of Home and School Clubs, have returned to Toronto much delighted with the educational convention held last week under the auspices of the London Union Mothers' Club.

Miss Grace Blackburn was a visitor in Chatham this past week-end the guest Saturday evening of the Travel Club, when she gave a lecture on "Brixham, the Painter's Klondike." The 20th Century and Macaulay Clubs were invited by the Travel Club to meet and hear Miss Blackburn.

Mrs. H. Ferguson (formerly Miss Helen MacCallum of this city), returns to her home in Toronto Monday after attending the meeting of the executive of the Ontario Federation of Home and School Clubs and the Western Ontario Educational Convention. She has been the guest while in the city of her cousin, Mrs. John MacArthur, Piccadilly street.

Mr. and Mrs. W. F. Wachsmith, Ridout street south, have decided to make their home in California, where they have been for some time, Mr. Wachsmith having purchased a business in Exeter, Southern California. Mrs. Wachsmith is expected in town this week for a farewell visit to friends here, and will make her headquarters with her daughter, Mrs. Roy Davis.

Former students of Brantford Ladies' College, a leading girls' school of Canada some years ago, are planning a reunion to be held in Toronto in the near future to take the form of a reception in honor of Mrs. Cockshutt, wife of the Lieutenant-Governor of Ontario, previous to her marriage a member of the college staff in the musical department. The Toronto committee, which has taken the initial steps in the matter, has asked the co-operation of graduates living in London and other points in Western Ontario in making the reunion a success.

Mrs. Lew Summers entertained at a delightful card party and tea at her new home in McKenzie avenue last week, when bowls of daffodils and narcissi added to the attractions of the living-room. Mrs. R. J. Wilson assisted the hostess at the tea hour. Those present included: Mrs. Leonard Sage, Mrs. Richard Balfour, Mrs. C. Atkins, Mrs. Harry Bell, Mrs. Alma Egelton, Mrs. Charles Johnston, Mrs. Fred Buskard, Mrs. Percy Robinson, Mrs. Wilbert Scott, Mrs. E. Geoghegan, Mrs. A. Dilborough, Mrs. Bert Summers, Mrs. W. Clark, Mrs. A. Callaghan, Mrs. Fred Johnston, Miss Dorothy Johnston. Mrs. Summers welcomed her guests, wearing a smart frock of navy charmeuse with corsage of violets.

Mrs. Newton MacTavish, Toronto, president of the Toronto Federation of Home and School Clubs, who attended the meeting of the Ontario provincial executive and the Western Ontario educational convention in the city last week, went on to St. Thomas Saturday evening, in order to be present at the annual reception of her alma mater, Alma College, Monday evening. Her young daughter, Miss Maxine, joined her in London Saturday evening, and is having the interesting experience of seeing for the first time on a gala occasion the college from which her mother graduated. Mrs. MacTavish and her daughter are guests of Mrs. Duncan MacTavish in St. Thomas, and will pay a brief visit to London friends Tuesday before going back to Toronto.

A number of school girls on Saturday afternoon enjoyed the hospitality of Mrs. Ralph Millar, when she entertained at tea for her daughter, Clara. The guests were invited from 3 to 6 o'clock, spending a happy afternoon in games, music and dancing. Mrs. Jack Gunn and Mrs. Gordon Tennant presided over the pretty tea table, centered with a silver candelabras with pink candles, and further adorned with vases of pink and mauve sweet peas. Misses Dorothy McCann, Ethel Millar, Renwick (Thamesford), and Jean Waugh assisted in serving.

The girls present were Jean Campbell, Ruth Barbour, Ruth Lawson, Helen Beck, Mary and Katherine Green, Margaret Evans, Ruth McConnell, Eulalie Murray, Mary Buchner, Grace Rath, Lorna and Audrey Spittal, Mary Thompson, Mary and Jean Watson, Margaret Hamilton, Phyllis Butchart, Enid Coleridge, Isabel McCrimmon, Annabelle Smith, Elsie Sumner, Jean Waide and Helen Chapman.

In the evening Mrs. Millar entertained for the assistants.

Dr. A. E. Marty of Toronto, Canada's first woman school inspector, was the charming guest of honor of a dinner party on Saturday evening, held by the London Women's University Club at Wong's, when Mrs. A. C. Courtice of Toronto, provincial organizer of Home and School Clubs, was also a special guest of the occasion.

Miss Mary Macpherson, first vice-president, performed the duties of hostess in the absence, owing to illness, of the president, Miss Helen Grange.

The tables were most attractively adorned with clusters of daffodils. A sheaf of the golden spring flowers, presented to Dr. Marty by the club, formed an effective contrast to the black lace of her smart dinner gown. Mrs. Carr-Harris, in a graceful little speech, introduced the special speaker of the evening. Dr. Marty, who claimed the same alma mater as her own, Queen's University. In the course of her address Dr. Marty impressed the need in the world of reverence for truth and accuracy of statement. Standing for these principles she held that women university graduates should have wide influence in making them of more general application.

Among other speakers were Mrs. K. P. R. Neville, representing the Western University; Miss Bessie McCamus, Toronto University and the teaching profession; Miss Helen McMillan, journalism; Miss Helen D'Avignon, social service; Mrs. Macklin, Johns Hopkins University and medical profession; Mrs. Albright, the legal profession.

The successful way for the city dweller to water plants is to put them in the bath tub and pour a quantity of water over them. They should be well soaked, especially the under surface of the leaves, for it is there that the insects are found.

MARY PICKFORD IN A PARISIAN EVENING GOWN.

THIS is the fifth of six articles on styles for girls, written by Mary Pickford.

BY MARY PICKFORD.

I CALL this Lanvin creation my Water Lily dress and it seems to describe it better than any words we can find.

It is all of shimmery silver green silk with bands of silver lace and a silver ribbon around the waist, tying a bow at one side and hanging nearly to the bottom of the uneven hem line.

And speaking of hem lines, this is the Parisian verdict on the length of evening gowns.

HAD BAD COUGH AND SORE THROAT

Never neglect a cough or cold, however slight. If you do, it can have but one result; it leaves the throat or lungs, or both, affected. A single dose of will help to stop the cough, soothe the throat, and if the cough or cold has become settled on the lungs the healing virtues of the Norway pine tree, along with the soothing and expectorant properties of other excellent herbs, roots and barks promptly eradicates the bad effects, and the persistent use cannot but help to bring about relief.

Mr. Albert Marsh, Lower L'Ardoise, N. S., writes: "About a year ago I contracted a cold, accompanied by a very bad cough and sore throat. I sent for the doctor, but what he prescribed did me so little good I began to get discouraged. A friend came to see me and asked me if I had ever used Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup. I told him I had not and sent him right away to get me a bottle. I started using it, and after a couple of days I found I was getting relief, and after taking two bottles the soreness in my throat seemed to be leaving me, so I resolved to continue its use, and after I had used five bottles both my sore throat and cough were gone. I would not be without "Dr. Wood's" for any money."

Price, 35c and 60c a bottle; put up only by The T. Milburn Company, Limited Toronto, Ont.—Advt.

Canada and Its Railway Problem.

TORONTO Saturday Night gave last week the first of a series of outstanding articles on Canada and its railway problems, by our former well-known able townsman J. LAMBERT PAYNE. It promises some light on a problem little understood, and will disclose the amazing losses we face. MR. PAYNE was formerly the statistical expert of the department of railways and canals. He is an able writer, and is writing on a subject he thoroughly understands.

His first sentence is: "The net debt of Canada was increased during the fiscal year 1921 by $69,862,971. In other words, it was advanced from $2,303,210,013 to $2,372,572,984." We take one other extract:

"Last year the minister of railways announced to Parliament that the deficit on the government railway system was $70,331,735. It was, as has been said, nearly twice that by correct accounting. It left out charges that were just as genuine and just as necessary as any of those which made up that big sum. But, in order to show just what it meant to the people of Canada, it is only necessary to do a little sum in arithmetic which would be quite within the capacity of any school boy of twelve years.

"To pay this $70,000,000, Canada had no surplus from revenue with which to do it. The money had to be borrowed. It cost the country a little more than 7 per cent to borrow money last year. Therefore, when the accounts for 1921 came to be paid, they included $4,900,000 of interest on the $70,000,000 borrowed in 1920. At the same time, another $70,000,000 had to be taken care of in 1921, because the railways again fell short by at least that amount; so we would have $70,000,000 added to the debt, plus interest on $74,900,000 for the preceding year. Assuming that the deficits would not average more than $70,000,000 per annum for the six years between 1920 and 1925, and charging but 6 per cent interest after 1921, this is the way the thing would work out:

	Interest	Amount of Debt
1920 .....$		$ 70,000,000
1921	4,900,000	144,900,000
1922	8,694,000	222,694,000
1923	13,381,640	306,075,640
1924	21,364,538	398,340,178
1925	23,900,411	492,240,589

"The accretive power of the financial snowball grows alarmingly with each year, and the question which each citizen must ask himself is simply this: 'How many revolutions can this ball make before we shall be at the ultimate limit of our power to pay?' Could we stand it for ten years? Possibly. Could we stand it for fifteen years? It is very doubtful. Could we stand it for twenty years? We could not."

These extracts are sufficient to show the magnitude of the problems discussed by one who knows. They should be read by everyone. The future of Canada depends as much on how its railway problems are solved as on any other question.

Windsor's Civic Affairs.

MAYOR WILSON of Windsor believes that the present is a time for curtailing in civic expenditure. Discussing this point at the request of THE ADVERTISER, he points out that "1922 must be a year of retrenchment in the matter of public improvement, and this course is being adopted in so far as is consistent with the rapid growth of Windsor. Our debenture debt has increased approximately three million dollars within the last two years—that is, nearly doubled. This is chiefly due to the number of local improvements constructed—such as sewers, pavements and street openings—of which the city at large is obliged to assume a portion averaging about one-third of the whole cost. It is difficult to curtail these works, as the property owners immediately benefitted in nearly all cases petition for the work. Another reason for the large increase in our debenture debt is the recent construction of two public schools at a cost of about half a million dollars each."

MAYOR WILSON of Windsor is not committed to the idea of paying any great part of civic expenditure out of the year's taxes. "It is not, in my opinion," he says, "feasible to adopt the pay-as-you-go plan of meeting expenditures when the life of the work covers years to come. It is not logical in the case of local improvements, and, of course, quite out of the question in the erection of schools and other public buildings. It might, perhaps, be good policy to purchase fire apparatus and public works machinery out of the taxes of one year, but we have not tried out the plan in the event of the cost of a piece of equipment being in excess of $10,000."

This question faces every municipality, and it cannot be claimed that in any place it has been solved. Unless the rule is adopted that debentures to be issued in any given year must not exceed the amount of existing debentures retired by maturity, the debenture debt of any city is going to keep on increasing year by year. In other words, unless there is a stop some place, the tax rate is going on growing each year.

There is probably not a municipality in Ontario that is not now faced with the problem of financing very large expenditures made in the past four or five years. Conditions of trade for a time were abnormally good, and the buoyancy of the times was reflected in the undertakings of the municipalities. Work was plentiful, wages good, and it was not a serious matter for the people to meet the tax levy. These latter favorable conditions for the present have departed, but the load to be carried remains.

Windsor's chief magistrate also brings out a point experienced by every man who has ever participated in civic life, viz., that the council, the body looked to to keep the expenses within reach of the people, have very little control over the tax rate of the year.

"In 1921 the school rate of Windsor, according to MAYOR WILSON, was 12.267 mills, and the general rate 15.733 mills. Our police expenditures are heavy, the per capita rate being $3.65, and for this reason we are asking the Legislature to amend the act so as to place on the police commission two members elected by the ratepayers, in addition to the mayor, county judge and the police magistrate. As the law now stands, the council, while responsible to the electors for the expenditures of the city, has very little control over same—less than ten mills, after deducting schools, general debentures and park fund rates, and this 10 mills included the police expenditures which last year were $139,000, or slightly over 3 mills."

It is hardly likely that the Windsor council actually controls 10 mills of the tax rate. This 10 mills probably includes the civic payroll, over which the council exercises only nominal control, because it can hardly cancel the expenditure or even reduce it to any great extent. Its function becomes one largely of simply approving of an expenditure which, of necessity, must be made.

The mayor of Windsor also takes occasion to point out that the financial condition of the city is sound, and gives as evidence the fact that debentures recently sold brought a most satisfactory figure. Since the street car system has been operated under the present management there has been an improvement; factories are employing more men than a year ago, and on that account it was not necessary to open up relief work on any extended scale during winter months. Improving conditions give grounds for well-founded and reasonable optimism.

Spending Money.

WORD FROM Fredericton, N.B., indicates that, owing to a slump in the lumber industry, new sources of revenue will have to be tapped if the provincial finances are not to suffer seriously.

The Dominion is likely to offer a new loan to take up some of the outstanding bonds which fall due this year, not being able to provide for their retirement at the present moment.

Municipalities face much the same problem in many places. They have been, in the boom years, committed to certain programes of expenditure, based upon the paying ability of a whole community working at good wages, as they were a few years ago.

The wise legislator, whether in parliament, school board or council, is one who can sense and appreciate the ability of a people to pay the levy made.

The continued demand for more revenue by public spending bodies is a sign to reach for the axe and the pruning hook.

Farm and City.

THE CHATHAM Planet, discussing the way in which farmers have been quitting the land in recent years, claims that the "farmers have merely been experiencing an unfortunate depression which comes every little while to people in other lines of business as well as farming. In fact, there are people in Chatham, especially in the manufacturing line, who can produce evidence to show that business in many ways besides farming has been none too good during the past couple of years. This has been shown by the lack of employment in the cities, which has given rise to a situation every bit as serious a problem as the depopulation of the farms."

The Planet is inclined to bring the matter to the door of the DRURY government, claiming that "we were told, prior to the last provincial election, that agriculture had been neglected in the past, and that the farmers themselves were going to take a hand in the management of public affairs. They have had their chance, but still the farmers are leaving the farms, and conditions in a great many ways are not even as good for the farming communities as they were under the former administrations.'"

There is an interesting point that would make a splendid debate. Were we to accept the ruling of the Chatham paper, we would be committed to the belief that a government's power is greater than the effect of world conditions.

Getting back to the first principles, it is more essential to the life of the nation that agriculturists in Canada shall be prosperous than that the same condition should reach any other class. The farmer is our chief and almost only source of new wealth, and when he prospers the rest of the country comes along with him. When he goes flat we go flat with him. That is a fact, proved by experience, and to which there can be no successful contradiction.

SOMEHOW SHE JUST CAN'T GET STARTED TO SET.

And now comes a new scientist with a serum that will grow hair on bald heads. A few squirts of this juice and a barren dome will become like a field of twitch grass in an orchard.

In United States there were in 1919, according to the official statistics of that time, 7,739,159 telephones in use. That is an average of one telephone serving about thirteen people. In the same year the statistics showed that Canada had 779,000 telephones. In Britain there is one telephone to about fifty persons.

L'Evenement (French) points out that PREMIER KING has a big task ahead of him, finding the country with many contending interests. It goes on to say: "Add to this the fact that the public treasury is practically empty, that the administration dare not dream of creating additional levies, but must make both ends meet by the practice of the strictest economy, and one begins to get some idea of the difficulties MR. KING and his colleagues have to face. Obviously, MR. KING is carrying very heavy responsibilities on his shoulders. However, strong men like to measure their strength against obstacles."

The collapse of the United States dirigible Roma was followed by explosions of hydrogen from the gas employed. The same thing occurred in Britain a short time ago, when United States officers were preparing to fly a similar vessel purchased there. Experiments with lighter than air machines in United States alone have thus far resulted in disasters which have cost about $20,000,000 and in the neighborhood of 100 lives. Any suggestion that the cost of helium is greater than the cost of hydrogen and that therefore hydrogen should be used loses all force in the light of those facts. In Western Canada there are unlimited supplies of helium gas going to waste 24 hours a day.

It means—instructive, aiming to teach, conveying a moral lesson.

It comes from—Greek "didaskein," to teach.

TO THE EDITOR

EXTRAVAGANT BOARD.

Editor Advertiser:

Sir.—I see by Friday's paper where Inspector Greer says the board is not extravagant. I am gald he thinks so, for he is the only one outside a few of the board who is of that idea. He says there is an overcrowding in the class rooms, and gives figures, 103 rooms with enrollment of more than 40; in 37 of those an enrollment of more than 45. That is only for 103 class rooms. He does not say anything about other rooms. There are lots of class rooms in this city that have only half their allotment, and he knows it, and so do the taxpayers.

It is all rot about having so many in a room. How about the country schools, and the schools that we went to in our school days? We did not have quarter the room and received as good an education, if not better, than they do now, and were far healthier also.

I think it is pretty near time for the ratepayers to get together to put a stop to it, or where will it end? It seems once they are elected they do as they please.

Their promises are like pie crust, easily broken. This does not mean the whole board, as there are some who understand a little better than others, but they are few. I myself think that if the board were composed of women the ratepayers would have a better show, and we would not be paying a good rent in taxes every year.

Let all ratepayers get together, if they go ahead, and decide what we will do.

We have men with better judgment working on our streets.

PEOPLE NOT SATISFIED.

Editor Advertiser:

Sir.—With reference to the letter from your correspondent, M. P. J., I am sure that the good citizens of London must fully agree with the writer that it is time to call a halt in the mad orgy on which our local board of education has embarked. I fully believe that it is one of the most important things of our earthly existence to provide a good education for our boys and girls, yes, but an education without frills, not such as appears to be the evident desire of our local governors, namely, to incorporate the up-to-date principles of all the schools on the American continent in our dear little city of London with a population of about 60,000, and whose slogan evidently appears to be: "We'll have the fun, let the people pay."

By the way, would some trustee kindly explain who paid for the luncheon held in the Technical School about a month ago, when the entire board of education was present? Another expense to the taxpayer, I suppose. Who ever suggested the luncheon had evidently a keen sense of wisdom. The trustees, after having dined and feeling in the best of spirits, as humans usually are after a good repast, were conducted around the building, and, being in high good humor, a dollar or two of the taxpayers' money didn't amount to anything anyway, so let's have an auditorium, swimming pool, gymnasium and a few class rooms. It looks as if the individual trustees expressed a wish for something, and same was immediately agreed to.

Chairman E. Smith is evidently a good psychologist. When one considers the magnanimous public spirit he exhibited about two weeks before the election, when he denounced all favoritism and extravagance, and then after his election he turns around and condones the largest expenditures for schools the city has ever attempted. Possibly it is a case of the present board building a few monuments to keep alive the memory of their administration.

READ YOUR CHARACTER

(By Digby Phillips.)

NO. 147—THE PUMPHANDLE HANDSHAKE.

You've run into the pumphandle handshake often, no doubt, most people have. But did it ever occur to you to draw any inferences from it?

First of all, you must realize that this type of handshake may signify either one of opposite characteristics. Its obvious and popular significance is breezy sincerity, cordial good-will and strength and decision of character.

But for the very reason that this is the popular significance attached to it, the "characterologist" does not accept it as a final indication of these things, but proceeds to check up on the other signs of cordiality and straightforwardness to make sure.

The reason is clear, if you but stop and think. This type of handshake is cultivated by the man who wants to appear to have these qualities; and if he wants to simulate them, that's pretty good evidence that he realizes he hasn't got them. In this case you can't spot the false pumphandle as you can the false stare of candor, but you have to check it up by other signs of character.

But whether true or false, the pumphandle handshake never indicates refinement or keen sensibilities—quite the opposite of these qualities.

COMMON SENSE WAYS TO KEEP WELL

Beware of "Flu" as You Would a Mad Dog

BY DR. R. H. BISHOP.

AN epidemic of influenza has broken out which, while not of the frequency or severity of the epidemics of the last several years, is still no less dangerous in that unless it is checked quickly it will spread far and wide.

The great epidemics of this disease taught people to beware of "flu" as they would of a mad dog.

People are learning, perhaps slowly, that the sneezer is dangerous and the cougher as bad, that the open window in the street car is absolutely necessary to keep the air fresh.

It is necessary to keep the body in the highest condition of resisting ability during the winter that it may throw off all poisons and germs.

To keep the skin and circulation in proper condition, people must wear light weight but warm clothing, have fresh air in the bedrooms and beware of fatigue.

A cold spray about the neck and chest usually renders the skin resistant even to draughts. Wet feet and thin-soled shoes are cordial invitations to influenza.

Overwork to the point of fatigue, overeating and constipation should be avoided.

Alcohol "cold cures" and heavy doses of whiskey and quinine should also be avoided.

Overheated and overcrowded houses which lack sunlight and fresh air are ideal places for influenza to get a foothold and spread. One should carefully watch the thermometer and never let the temperature rise above 70.

It is more healthful to have the temperature between 65 and 68.

If you have a bad cold or even suspect influenza, call a physician.

JUST WAITING.

"I hear that young Jimson is practicing law now."

"Well, he has opened a law office, but he isn't practicing anything but patience as yet."

CATARRH OF THE STOMACH FOR EIGHT YEARS

The cause of this trouble is the fermentation of food in the stomach which generates a gas that is very frequently belched up. There is also a rumbling of the bowels and a discharge of gas therefrom, there is constant retching, and the meals are frequently vomited. There is a burning pain in the stomach, the appetite is fickle, the tongue coated, the breath bad, constipation is generally present and the sufferer becomes weak, nervous, depressed and exceedingly miserable.

The blame lies with a sluggish liver, as it holds back the bile which is so necessary to promote the movement of the bowels, and when the bile gets into the blood a badly disordered condition of the stomach, liver and bowels will surely follow.

Keep your liver active and you will always enjoy good health.

Mrs. Agnes Gallant, Reserve Mines, N. S., writes: "I had been a great sufferer for eight years, from catarrh of the stomach. I tried several, so-called, catarrh remedies without relief until a friend advised me to try Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills, which I did, and four vials completely relieved me. That was six years ago, and I have had no return of my old trouble."

Price, 25c a vial at all dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Company, Limited, Toronto, Ont.—Advt.

SAGE TEA KEEPS YOUR HAIR DARK

When Mixed With Sulphur It Brings Back Its Beautiful Lustre at Once.

Grey hair, however handsome, denotes advancing age. We all know the advantages of a youthful appearance. Your hair is your charm. It makes or mars the face. When it fades, turns grey and looks streaked, just a few applications of Sage Tea and Sulphur enhances its appearance a hundred-fold.

Don't stay grey! Look young! Either prepare the recipe at home or get from any drug store a bottle of "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," which is merely the old-time recipe improved by the addition of other ingredients. Thousands of folks recommend this ready-to-use preparation, because it darkens the hair beautifully, besides, no one can possibly tell, as it darkens so naturally and evenly. You moisten a sponge or soft brush with it, drawing this through the hair, taking one small strand at a time. By morning the grey hair disappears; after another application or two, its natural color is restored, and it becomes thick, glossy and lustrous, and you appear years younger.

FIELDING FIRM IN RESOLVE TO CUT HUGE DEBT

Canada's Finance Minister Opposes Expenditure To Burden Voters.

FINDS TREASURY BARREN

Premier Facing Problems of Dominion's Mercantile Marine Deficit.

Special to London Advertiser.

OTTAWA, Feb. 26.—Satisfactory progress is being made by Premier W. L. Mackenzie King's government in the preparation of its program of legislation for its first session of Parliament, and in the paring down of estimates so that expenditures may come within the limits of probable revenue collections.

The new government has inherited a condition of things at which the most courageous of administrations might quail. Political expediency and not the national weal was the consideration upon which the predecessors of the King government based their policies, and as a consequence Hon. W. S. Fielding, the new finance minister, who in 1911 left the treasury in splendid shape, comes back to find it sadly depleted, and the country saddled with a national debt two billions in excess of that existent in 1911.

In all fairness, of course, it must be admitted that the war was very largely responsible for this condition of affairs, but, on the other hand, had the late government been as anxious to conscript wealth as it was to conscript men, there might have been less borrowing for posterity to pay, and the cost of the war might have been defrayed to a greater extent as it went along.

Demands Are Heavy.

The demands upon the present government from various quarters for further expenditure in various directions are heavy.

Hon. W. S. Fielding, however, has set his face firmly against any expenditure which cannot be calculated to be immediately productive.

He does not believe in adding to the present taxation burden upon the common people generally in order to satisfy the ambition of any particular locality for public works, docks, etc.

Among the problems to be solved by the new government is that of the Canadian Mercantile Marine, which this year promises to show a deficit of ten million dollars, without taking into account replacement costs.

The program of building was gone ahead with in the face of strong opposition by the Liberals, and the last appropriation was forced through by closure. But the ships are on Canada's hands and cannot be disposed of without great loss. An extension of trade under Liberal administration may prove some solution of the difficulty.

Kennedy At Work.

Hon. W. C. Kennedy, minister of railways, is working assiduously but quietly on the railway problem. He is saying nothing even to his most intimate friends, and it may be said that in the solution which he will find he will make up his own mind.

Impatience is evidenced in certain quarters that the new government does not at once proceed toward the consolidation of the National and Grand Trunk system. In this connection, however, it may be recalled that the consolidation act was passed in 1919, and that Hon. Arthur Meighen took no steps to implement it during the term of his regime. The problem is one of the most important of all Canadian problems. Mr. Kennedy will not be stampeded into hasty action.

In the meantime, Premier King holds that the new Parliament is entitled to the first announcement of the government's policies on the issues of the day. Mr. King is working on an average of fourteen hours a day, but looks to be in splendid physical shape to meet Parliament on March 8.

Skate Twelve Miles on Crust of Snow to Witness Game.

OWEN SOUND, Feb. 26.—For the first time within the memory of some of the oldest residents there has been skating on the ice formed on the top of the snow. The rain and sleet of Thursday morning was solidly frozen on the snow. Friday and yesterday the children of the city have been skating on the ice formed. Friday night twelve people from Hepworth, 12 miles from here, skated in to see a hockey match here. The time taken was a little over two hours. The ice crust will quite easily support a person, and in places is strong enough to hold a horse.

ATTORNEY TO VISIT ASYLUM IN LONDON

Port Huron Official Will Investigate History of Anthony Scully.

DENIES RESPOSIBILITY

Prisoner Claims He Killed His Aged Father in Accident.

SARNIA, Feb. 26.—In order that there will be no international issues involved and heading off any attempt of a hue and cry that he is attempting to railroad an insane man to prison for life, Henry Baird, prosecuting attorney of Port Huron, announced here this afternoon that he will visit the London asylum officials and may also visit Stratford in an effort to unravel the mystery that shrouds Anthony Scully charged with the murder of his aged parent, Cornelius Scully.

Scully appeared before Judge Tappan in the Port Huron circuit court late Saturday afternoon, but no plea was taken and he will again appear in court following Attorney Baird's return from London.

Asked if he had anything to say, Scully replied that at the time he struck down his father he was not responsible for his actions and that it was all an accident.

Prosecuting Attorney Baird sprung a surprise during the court hearing when he intimated that he was ready to show letters as evidence that three weeks prior to the murder, Scully had written a letter to his sister stating that he would get rid of his "dirty old father" who had robbed him of all his money.

Prosecuting Attorney Baird will likely visit London on Monday as Scully is scheduled to appear in court during the ensuing week.

ENGAGE EXTRA LINEMEN.

INGERSOLL, Feb. 26.—Several days will elapse before this town and district have recovered from the conditions brought about by the storm of last week. It has been learned that some 50 lines of the Ingersoll Telephone Company were affected to the extent that between 200 and 300 subscribers have been without the service. Beginning tomorrow extra linemen will take up work in the rural districts and it is hoped to shortly have the service restored.

TRADERS WANT BUDGET RAISED

United Exporters Urge Government Grant to Commercial Intelligence Branch.

TO PRESENT RESOLUTION

Director Poussette Backs Scheme at Saturday Session in Windsor.

WINDSOR, Feb. 26.—The United Exporters of Western Ontario in session here yesterday afternoon unanimously declared that the Dominion government should be urged to grant the commercial intelligence branch of the department of trade and commerce a more extensive budget to allow that department to carry out a wider program of Canadian export research work. Through the Canadian Manufacturers' Association, and the various export clubs of Ontario.

The resolution will be presented to the government at an early date. The grant for this year, which amounts to $240,000, was referred to as "utterly pitiful" by F. M. Sclanders, Border Chamber of Commerce commissioner, who, during a brief address compared the enormous expenditures of the United States for export trade promotion to that of the sums granted by the Canadian government.

H. R. Poussette, director of the commercial intelligence branch at Ottawa, admitted that with an additional grant yearly his department would be in a better position to handle the many important phases of the work, especially with regard to instructional and experimental work, among which was the much-needed department for instructing manufacturers as to the proper method of packing goods for shipment abroad.

Can Beat New York.

"We do not have to take our hats off to the port of New York or any other United States port. As a matter of fact, we can beat the port of New York in the fast handling of any commodity offered, regardless of heavy lifts," so declared G. C. Cochlan, district freight agent, C. P. R. Company, Detroit, during the course of an address on "Export and Transportation," which followed after the luncheon, served to the delegates at noon.

"In the first place," he said, "we must not overlook the fact that our Canadian ports afford first-class steamship services, both Atlantic and Pacific Oceans, and Canadian exporters should by all means show a preference to such ports." He compared the time taken for Pacific Ocean trips from Vancouver to the Far East with the time necessary to ship via New York and the Panama Canal.

Mr. Cochlan pointed out that while the rail freight rates from points in Western Ontario are lower to Atlantic ports than to the Pacific, the ocean rates from Pacific ports are lower. Where it had been found that the combination of rail and ocean rates figure lower via the Atlantic rates are adjusted to meet this competition, so that as far as the through rates were concerned, there was no advantage in shipping via the Panama Canal.

SUFFERS $60,000 FIRE

Swift Canadian Packing Company Plant Badly Damaged.

TORONTO, Feb. 26.—Fire which started in the men's dressing-rooms, damaged the plant of the Swift Canadian Packing Company this afternoon to the extent of $60,000.

The fire destroyed the dressing-rooms, cooperage and hog floors, and badly damaged the ice-making plant and the runway for hogs.

The cause of the fire has not yet been ascertained.

MARGOT ASQUITH VISITS TORONTO

TORONTO, Feb. 26.—Fresh from a lecture tour of the large American cities, Mrs. Margot Asquith, wife of the former premier of Great Britain, arrived in this city today from Rochester.

Mrs. Asquith received several callers tonight at the King Edward Hotel, and expressed herself as greatly impressed with the quiet Sunday atmosphere of Toronto.

It was restful to her, because the change from the hustling and bustling crowds of the American cities she had visited served to relieve the monotony of strenuous traveling and lecturing.

SEEK TO UNSEAT W. R. MOTHERWELL

MOOSE JAW, Feb. 26.—From a source which is regarded as authoritative, the Evening Times here was informed Saturday that the new National Political Association has decided to take action to unseat Hon. W. R. Motherwell, minister of agriculture and Liberal candidate elected in Regina at the recent general election.

It was stated that the measure would be one of reprisal for the action taken in Moose Jaw to unseat R. M. Johnson.

What effect the action would have was not discussed, although it was pointed out that Mr. Motherwell had since that time received an acclamation at Regina City.

SIR ADAM BECK LEAVES HIS BED

ASHEVILLE, N. C., Feb. 26.—(By Canadian Press.)—Sir Adam Beck, who has been confined to his room at a local hotel with an attack of bronchitis, was up today for the first time, and was able to enjoy lunch in the dining-room. He will probably be allowed to be out in the open tomorrow. Relatives announce they probably will remain in Asheville for another week at least.

Lives of Chatham People Imperiled Watching Schooner Flounder in Flood

CHATHAM, Feb. 26.—The Thames river breaking in the city during the night with an enormous amount of heavy ice coming down caused more anxiety than it has caused during the last 30 years. Huge ice blocks passed underneath the city bridges and at times nearly blocked the passage of the smaller cakes.

Excitement was at high pitch when it was learned that the three-masted schooner "Hattie Hut" had been thrown from its moorings onto a North Chatham dock. Hundreds of people assembled on the Third street bridge to watch the vessel pass ropes across the river to the docks of the C. W. and L. E. railway and to every place of vantage in the neighborhood. A securing hawser was even thrown up on the Third street bridge in order to stay the vessel which was listing badly.

Crowding, in order to get a better place from which to see and endangering their own lives should the vessel suddenly give way, the crowds were finally ordered off the bridge by the police. At a late hour motor pumps were installed and it is believed the vessel will be floated before nightfall. At 5.30 o'clock the water was fourteen feet over mean summer level and showed some signs of abating.

MAKES APPEAL FOR UKRAINIANS

Rev. Paul Crath of Toronto Points Out Need of Aid.

THOUSANDS STARVING

TORONTO, Feb. 26.—(By Canadian Press).—"My friend, Paul Crath, I am starving. By the time you read this letter I may be dead." The letter is written from Vienna by a former minister of railways in the Ukrainian government. Mr. Crath knew him as a young student. It is but one of dozens of poignant appeals which Rev. Paul Crath, B.A., minister in charge of the Presbyterian Ukrainian Church in Toronto, is receiving from Ukrainian compatriots now interned in Poland or scattered over Western Europe. "I am torn in pieces," he said to the Canadian Press. "I have my own mother and sisters over there. I am a Presbyterian minister, yet they have heard I am rich, and that maybe I can help them in their dire distress, these old friends of mine."

Mr. Crath went on to tell of the dire straights of Ukrainian intellectuals, especially artists. "I want to plead," he said, "with the artists of Canada to come to the rescue of their fellow craftsmen and help them keep alive until such time as Russia comes to sanity and welcomes her best back. Some of these men, once among the famous painters of Europe, have literally not a cent. If they had but the wherewithal to paint and canvas they might still make some kind of a living. One of the most celebrated, George Mahalevsky, whose works obtained prizes in Moscow and Petrograd art exhibitions, is starving in Poland. In a letter to me he says: 'Living in exile I could paint much to preserve for history events of the Ukrainian struggle for freedom, pictures of the people's life, landscapes, etc. I have no paint—nothing. I have not even the means of existence. Would you appeal to Canadian painters to help me? As soon as I paint a picture and sell it I will give the money back with great gratitude.'"

Peter Kholodny, former minister of education in the Ukraine, now living in Poland, could support himself—as he is so well known, if he had paints or canvas. In the town of Klisz, Poland, there are something over 5,000 Ukrainian Cossacks of General Petlura's army interned. Of these there are 19 who are painters, and 34 students; also there are woodcarvers and artists in pottery, etc. They have no crayons, no paper. Barefooted, without a cent, how should they buy anything but food, if they could buy? They are existing on peas and margarine, and, in that camp, dying like flies in autumn. From that camp of death comes a voice, that of Col. Michael Dorkach, asking me to send the painters from $300 to $500 that they may buy artists' materials.

In Lemberg there is a group of painters such as Mrs. Olga Kulchitzka, Julian Pankevich, D. Sichynski, and among them the most famous one, Alex. Novakivsky. He has a picture called "The Ukrainian Madonna" which has been estimated by experts to be worth $20,000, but if sold there now it would fetch a mere trifle. In Vienna there is also a group of artists, wood-carvers, etc., and there is a group of students under masters in Berlin.

When these men fled from the fury of the Bolshevik invasion—they were among two million of the Ukrainian middle class who found a refuge in Western Europe—some of them had been putting up a stubborn fight—a forlorn last hope. Poland does not want them, but they have no money to go anywhere else. The little money that the other refugees took with them has long been exhausted; Western Europe is in a bad way herself. These men are the intellectuals of the nation that was once Russia. They are slowly dying, and they are the only hope of their country's civilization. The Prophet Amos in his vision was asked by God what he saw, and he said: "A basket of summer fruit." And he cried: "The end has come upon my people." So I have said what I must say.

"Could not the artists of Ontario organize an Ukrainian Arts exhibition, the painters and artists sending work already done, of which a large quantity could be collected, and in the meantime could they not help their brothers in distress by sending some hundreds to help them to buy paint and canvas? Any communications from those interested will reach me at 175 Shaw street, Toronto."

WANTS ACT REPEALED

W. Kent Legislature Member Resents Gas Ruling.

Special to London Advertiser.

CHATHAM, Feb. 26.—R. L. Brackin, K.C., member for West Kent in the Ontario Legislature, stated yesterday that he intends to give a formal notice of his intentions to introduce a bill for the repeal of the natural gas act.

During the past few months there have been ample indications that many municipalities are desirous that existing gas legislation be struck off the books.

JAIL FLORENCE MEN FOR MANUFACTURING LIQUOR

Lambton County Officers Discover Still and Quantity of Mash.

SARNIA, Feb. 26.—Clarence Garrell and Edgar Cameau of Florence are in jail at Sarnia following a conviction in Florence police court of illicitly manufacturing liquor. The two men were fined $200 and costs and 30 days in jail, and in the alternative of the fines not being paid, six months in jail. They pleaded guilty.

High County Constable Scott, with County Constable William Lindsay and Mr. Edward, inland revenue officer at Petrolea, made the arrests on Thursday. A still was discovered with several barrels of mash and preparations were all in readiness, it is stated, for the manufacture of 50 gallons of whiskey.

DIES AFTER OPERATION

Shooting Accident Victim Unable to Survive Amputation.

CHATHAM, Feb. 26.—Following an operation at the Stratford General Hospital, the death took place of James Scott of Thedford. He was brought to the hospital Jan. 18 suffering from a bullet wound in his leg, which he accidentally received at his home the day previous while attempting to chase some cats from the house. Mr. Scott had been out hunting.

At the time he was carrying his gun. In some manner the weapon was discharged and a bullet grazed his heart, then went into his leg, and this injury along with an attack of pneumonia hastened his death. He is survived by his wife and eight children, all at home: May, Ada, Edna, Alvin, Bruce, John, Russell and Milton; his father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. S. T. Scott, Ailsa Craig; Mrs. H. Hodgins, Granton; Clarissa, at home; W. W. Scott and Aaron Scott, Ailsa Craig. The late Mr. Scott was born in McGillivary Township, Middlesex County, 47 years ago, and had spent most of his life there.

SUFFERS SEVERE BURNS

St. Thomas Man Hurt Extinguishing Blaze in Home.

ST. THOMAS, Feb. 26.—While attempting to extinguish a fire in his kitchen, Edward Smith of 26 Flora street, this city, was severely burned about the arms and body Saturday morning.

The blaze started when Mrs. Smith upset a can of coal oil near the stove. Mr. Smith, who is employed as night watchman at the Y. M. C. A., was in bed when he heard her screams. Rushing to the kitchen he extinguished the fire, but not before his clothing was burned off.

Mr. Smith will be confined to his home for some time, it is expected.

MOTOR TRUCKS TO BE FEATURE

CHATHAM, Feb. 26.—A feature of the third annual motor show of the Chatham Automotive Dealers' Association, which will be held in the Kent Regiment armories on March 8 to 11 inclusive, will be a splendid array of motor trucks. Of the motor shows held thus far commercial cars and trucks have been barred, but the Chatham dealers feel this is a great future for motor trucks in this section of the province, and as a consequence this section will receive a good deal of attention.

There are still a few exhibition spaces left, but it is expected that these will be taken up by Monday or Tuesday of this week.

3 MORE JAILED IN MAIL HOLP-UP

Long-Sought Suspect in Essex Border Robberies Arrested in Detroit.

WAS WALKING WITH WIFE

Russell Graham Held in Connection With Tecumseh and Petite Cote Crimes.

WINDSOR, Feb. 26.—Wanted in connection with the holdup and robbery of Herbert Jacobs, postmaster at Tecumseh, the theft of $15,000 from the Petite Cote branch of the Merchants Bank of Canada, and shooting George Meloche, turnkey at the Essex County jail at Sandwich, Russell Graham, alias Drouillard, 20 years old, 3920 "A" street, Detroit, was caught Saturday by Detectives Fraley and Dresden in Detroit.

Graham was picked up on Farmer street while in company with his wife, Marion, and their 2-year-old son. The arrest was made at the request of the Windsor police, who have been searching for him since July of last year, when the Petite Cote bank was held up and robbed.

Two Others Arrested.

As a result of information obtained Friday night by Sergt. Edward Lankin of Windsor, William Lesperance, 26 years old, 652 West Pitt street, and Percey Deneau, 24, 1345 Howard avenue, Windsor, were jailed early Saturday by Sergeants Lankin and Pero and Detective Larriviere. They made statements, the police say, implicating Graham in the attempt to hold up the Amherstburg interurban last Monday morning at the Sandwich "loop," when Turnkey Meloche was shot in the leg when he refused to obey the robbers' command to throw up his hands.

Graham, the police say, is one of the men who held up and robbed the Tecumseh postmaster last week. He was named, the police said Saturday, by Severin Laforet, bank teller, who has confessed, it is said, to planning the theft of the mail pouch.

In addition to Laforet, the police are holding Manuel Parent, William Ducharme, Jerome Massey, F. Cascadden, all border youths, on charges of conspiring to rob his majesty's mail. They were remanded Saturday for eight days, bail being denied. Cecil Drouillard, Sandwich East youth, is charged with receiving part of the money alleged to have been taken by Graham and another man who still is at large.

The robbery of the Petite bank took place last July. Russel Robinson and Samuel Bornorosky are both serving terms in the Kingston penitentiary for participating in this.

Strength

Strength of muscle does not indicate strength of nerves. On this account many people who look healthy enough suffer from nervous troubles and cannot understand what is ailing them. Sleeplessness and irritability are among the early symptoms. Indigestion and tired feelings soon follow.

Read this letter from an Ontario man:

Mr. W. L. Gregory, Charles St. E., Ingersoll, Ont., writes:

"I had been troubled for quite a while with indigestion. At times there would be a twitching of the nerves of my stomach; and I also found it difficult to get a good night's sleep. I am a moulder, and owing to the nature of my work my system became run-down. I took a treatment of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, and found great benefit from this medicine. They did me a great deal of good. I have not been bothered at all with indigestion since, and can sleep much better. I have recommended Dr. Chase's Nerve Food to many of my friends, as I think it splendid for anyone run-down and needing a tonic."

"I Had to Hear Your Voice To-Night!"

Mother had never used the Long Distance telephone — she had no idea how to go about it. She longed to hear her daughter's voice; but she was so far away — she was afraid she would never be able to hear her.

But she could wait no longer. "I must speak to my daughter in Kingston" she told Central. A few minutes later she heard, "Ready with Kingston!"

"Is that you, Alice?"

"Why mother, where are you speaking from?" came the familiar voice she had so longed to hear.

"I'm at home in Hamilton, I just had to hear your voice to-night--Icouldn't wait any longer!" And so mother and daughter, separated by many miles, had a virtual reunion that night.

It's a weekly affair now, those fond, intimate talks. Distance rolls away, and for a few minutes every Thursday night the familiar voices tell the little family gossip that both are so eager to hear.

Ask "Long Distance" to get the absent one on the telephone for you. Your telephone can bridge the gulf that separates you.

The Greatest Novel of the Present Decade

BY A. S. M. HUTCHINSON

(Copyright, 1922, Little, Brown & Co.)

The houses of Penny Green carried out the Kate Greenaway effect that the Green itself established. Along the upper road of the tilted high were the larger houses, and upon the lower road mostly the cottages of the villagers; also upon the lower road the five shops of Penny Green: the butcher's shop which was opened on Tuesdays and Fridays by a butcher who came in from Tidborough with a spanking horse in front of him and half a week's supply of meat behind and beneath him; the grocer's shop and the draper's shop which, like enormous affairs in London, were also a large number of other shops but, unlike the London affairs, dispensed them all within the one shop and over the one counter. In the grocer's shop you could be handed into one hand a pound of tea and into the other a pair of boots, a convenience which, after all, is not to be had in all Oxford street. The draper's shop, carrying the principle further, would not only dress you; postoffice you; linoleum, rug and wallpaper you; ink, pencil and notepaper you; but would also bury you and tombstone you, a solemnity which it was only called upon to perform for anybody about once in five years Penny Green being long-lived—but was always ready and anxious to carry out. Indeed in the back room of his shop, the draper, Mr. Pinnock, had a coffin which he had been trying (as he said) "to work off" for 22 years. It represented Mr. Pinnock's single and disastrous essay in sharp business. Two and twenty years earlier Old Wirk had been not only dying but "as good as dead." Mr. Pinnock on a stock-replenishing excursion in Tidborough, had bought a coffin, at the undertaker's, of a size to fit Old Wirk, and for the reason that, buying it then, he could convey it back on the wagon he had hired for the day and thus save carriage. He had brought it back, and the first person he had set eyes on in Penny Green was no other than Old Wirk himself, miraculously recovered and stubbornly downstairs and sunning at his door. The shock had nearly caused Mr. Pinnock to malify for the coffin himself; but he had not, nor had any other inhabitant of suitable size since demised. Longer persons than Old Wirk had died, and much shorter and much stouter persons than Old Wirk had died. But the coffin had remained. Tap-ended and neatly fitted with shelves, it served as a store cupboard, without a door, pending its proper use. But it was a terribly expensive store cupboard and it stood in Mr. Pinnock's parlor as a gloomy monument to the folly of rash and hazardous speculation.

VI.

Penny Green, like Rome, had not been built in a day. The houses of the Penny Green Garden Home, on the other hand, were being run up in as near to a day as enthusiastic developers, feverish contractors (vying one with another) and impatient tenants could encompass. Nor was Penny Green built for a day. The houses and cottages of Penny Green had been built under the influence of many and different styles of architecture; and they had been built not only by people who intended to live in them, and proposed to be roomy and well cupboarded and stoutly beamed and floored in them, but who, not foreseeing restless and railwayed generations, built them to endure for the children of their children's children and for children yet beyond. Sabre's house was of grey stone and it presented over the doorway the date 1667.

"Nearly two hundred and fifty years," Mabel had once said.

"And I bet," Sabre had replied, "it's never been better kept or run than you run it now, Mabel."

The tribute was well deserved. Mabel, who was in many ways a model woman, was pre-eminently a model housewife. "Crawshaws" was spotlessly kept and perfectly administered. Four living rooms, apart from the domestic offices, were on the ground floor. One was the morning room, in which they principally lived; one the dining-room and one the drawing-room. They were entered by enormously heavy doors of oak, fitted with latches, the drawing-room up two steps, the dining-room down one step and the morning room and the fourth room on the level. All were low-beamed and many-windowed with lattice windows; all were stepped into as stepping into a very quiet place, and somehow into a room which one had not expected to be there, or not quite that shape if a room were there. Sabre never quite lost that feeling of pleasant surprise on entering them. They had moreover, whether due to the skill of the architect or the sagacity of Mabel, the admirable, but rare attribute of being cool in summer and warm in winter.

The only room in the house which Sabre did not like was the fourth sitting-room on the ground floor; and it was his own room, furnished and decorated by Mabel for his own particular use and comfort. But she called it his "den," and Sabre loathed and detested the word den as applied to a room a man specially inhabits. It implied to him a masculine untidiness, and he was intensely orderly and hated untidiness. It implied customs and manners of what he called "boarding-house ideas"—the idea that a man must have an undidily comfortable apartment into which he can retire and envelop himself in tobacco smoke, and where he can have his own things around him," and "have his pipes and his pictures about him," and where he may wear "an old shooting jacket and slippers"—and he loathed and detested all these phrases and the ideas they connoted. Above all, he loathed and detested the vision which the word "den" always conjured up to him. This was a vision of the door of a typical den being opened by a wife, and of the wife saying in a minoting voice, "This is George in his den," and of boarding-house females peering over the wife's shoulder and smiling fatuously at the denizen who, in an old shooting jacket and slippers, grinned vacuously back at them. To Mark this was a horrible and unspeakable vision.

VII.

Mabel opened the kitchen door. "The master's come to see how nice the kitchen looks."

Two maids in black dresses and an extraordinary amount of stiffly starched aprons and caps and streamers rose awkwardly and bobbed awkward little bows. One was very tall, the other rather short. The tall one looked extraordinarily severe and the short one extraordinarily glum, Mark thought, to have young men. Mabel looked from the girls to Mark and from Mark to the girls, precisely as if she were exhibiting rare specimens to her husband and her husband to her rare specimens. And in the tone of one exhibiting pinned, dried, and completely impersonal specimens, she announced, "They're sisters. Their name is Jinks."

Mark, examining the exhibits, had been feeling like a fool. Their name humanized them and relieved his awkward feeling. "Ha! Jinks, eh? High Jinks and Low Jinks, what?" He laughed. It struck him as rather comic; and High Jinks and Low Jinks tittered broadly, losing in the most astonishing way the one her severity and the other her glumness.

Mabel seemed suddenly to have lost her interest in her exhibits and their cage. She rather hurried Mark through the kitchen premises and, moving into the garden, replied rather abstractedly to his plans for the garden's development.

Suddenly she said: "Mark, I do wish you hadn't said that in the kitchen."

He was mentally examining the possibilities of a makeshift racket court against a corner of the stable and barn. "Eh, what in the kitchen, dear?"

"That about High Jinks and Low Jinks."

"Mabel, I swear we could fix up a topping sort of squash rackets in that corner. Those cobbles are worn absolutely smooth—"

"I wish you'd listen to me, Mark."

He caught his arm around her and gave her a playful squeeze. "Sorry, old girl, what was it? About High Jinks and Low Jinks? Ha! Dashed funny that, don't you think?"

"No, I don't. I don't think it's a bit funny."

Her tone was such that, relaxing his arm, he turned and gazed at her. "Don't you? Don't you really?"

Some instinct told him he ought not to laugh, but he could not help it. The idea appealed to him as distinctly and clearly comic. "Well, but it is funny. Don't you see? High Jinks alone is such a funny expression—sort of—well, you know what I mean. Apart altogether from Low Jinks," and he laughed again.

Mabel compressed her lips. "I simply don't. Rebecca is not a bit like High Jinks."

He burst out laughing. "No, I'm dashed if she is. That's just it!"

"I really do not see it."

"Oh, go on, Mabel! Of course you do. You make it funnier. High Jinks and Low Jinks! I shall call them that."

"Mark." She spoke the word severely and paused severely. "Mark. I do most earnestly hope you'll do nothing of the kind."

He stared, puzzled. He had tried to explain the absurd thing, and she simply could not see it. "I simply don't."

And a vague and transient discomfort shot through him.

VIII.

Sabre awoke in the course of that night and lay awake. The absurd incident came immediately into his mind and remained in his mind. High Jinks and Low Jinks was comic. No getting over it. Incontestably comic. Stupid, of course, but just the kind of stupid thing that tickled him irresistibly. And she couldn't see it. Absolutely could not see it. But if she were never going to see any of these stupid little things that appealed to him—? And then he wrinkled his brows.

"You remember how he used to wrinkle up his old nut," as the garrulous Hapgood had said.

A night-light, her wish, dimly illumined the room. He raised himself and looked at her fondly, sleeping beside him. He thought, "Dash it, the thing's been just the same from her point of view. That den business. She likes den, and I can't stick den. Just the same for her as for me that High Jinks and Low Jinks tickles me and doesn't tickle her."

He very gently moved with his finger a tress of her hair that had fallen upon her face. . . . Mabel! . . His wife! . . . How gently beneath her filmy bedgown her bosom rose and fell! . . . How utterly calm her face was. How at peace, how secure, she lay there. He thought, "Three weeks ago she was sleeping in the terrific privacy of her own room, and here she is come to me in mine. Cut off from everything and everybody and come here to me."

An inexpressible tenderness filled him. He had a sudden sense of the poignant and tremendous adventure on which they were embarked together. They had been two lives, and now they were one life, altering completely the lives they would have led singly: a new sea, a new ship on a new, strange sea. What lay before them?

She stirred.

His thoughts continued: One life! One life out of two lives; one nature out of two natures! Mysterious and extraordinary metamorphosis. She had brought her nature to his, and he his nature to hers, and they were to mingle and become one nature. . . . Absurdly and inappropriately his mind picked up and presented to him the grotesque words, "High Jinks and Low Jinks." A note of laughter was irresistibly tickled out of him.

She said very sleepily, "Mark, are you laughing? What are you laughing at?"

He patted her shoulder. "Oh, nothing."

One nature?

CHAPTER III.

One nature? In the fifth year of their married life thoughts of her and of the poignant and tremendous adventure on which they were embarked together were no longer possible while she lay in bed beside him. They had come to occupy separate rooms.

In the fifth year of their married life measles visited Penny Green. Mabel caught it. Their bedroom was naturally the sick room. Sabre went to sleep in another room,—and the arrangement prevailed. Nothing was said between them on the matter, one way or the other. They naturally occupied different rooms during her illness. She recovered. They continued to occupy different rooms.

The sole reference to recognition of permanency in this development of the relations between them was mad when Sabre, on the first Saturday afternoon after Mabel's recovery —he did not go to his office at Tidborough on Saturdays—carried out his idea, conceived during her sickness, of making the bedroom into which he had moved serve as his study also. He had never got rid of his distaste for his "den." He had never felt quite comfortable there.

At lunch on this Saturday, "I tell you what I'm going to do this afternoon," he said. "I'm going to move my books up into my room."

He had been a little afraid the den business would be reopened by this intention, but Mabel's only reply was, "You'd better have the maids help you."

"Yes, I'll get them."

"No, I'll give the order, if you don't mind."

"Right!"

And in the afternoon the books were moved, the den deprived of them, his bedroom awarded them. High Jinks and Low Jinks rather enjoyed it, passing up and down the stairs with continuous smirks at this new manifestation of the master's ways. The bookshelves proved rather a business. There were four of them, narrow and high. "We'll carry these longways," Sabre directed, when the first one was tackled. "I'll shove it over. You two take the top, and I'll carry the foot."

In this order they struggled up the stairs, High Jinks and Low Jinks backwards, and the smirks enlarged into panting giggles. Halfway up came a loud crack.

"What's that?" said Sabre, sweating and gasping.

"I think it's the back of my dress, sir," said High Jinks.

"You know, Low, you're practically sitting on the dashed thing. You've twisted yourself round in some extraordinary way—"

Agonizing giggles.

Mabel appeared in the hall beneath. "Raise it up, Rebecca. Raise it, Sarah. How can you expect to move, stooping like that?"

They raised it to the level of their waists, and progression became seemly.

"There you are!" said Sabre.

There was somehow a feeling at both ends of the bookcase of having been caught.

II.

Sabre liked this room. Three latticed windows, in the same wall, looked on the garden. In the spaces between them, and in the two spaces between the end windows and the end walls, he placed his bookshelves, a set of shelves in each space.

Mabel displayed no interest in the move nor made any reference to it at teatime. In the evening, hearing her pass the door on her way to dress for dinner, he called her in.

He was in his shirt sleeves, arranging the books. "There you are! Not bad?"

She regarded them and the room. "They look all right. All the same, I must say it seems rather funny using your bedroom for your things when you've got a room downstairs."

"Oh, well, I never liked that room, you know. I hardly ever go into it."

"I know you don't."

And she went off.

III.

But the significance of the removal rested not in the definite relinquishment of the den, but in her words "using your bedroom": the definite recognition of separate rooms.

And neither commented upon it

After all, landmarks, in the course of a journey, are more frequently observed and noted as landmarks, when looking back along the journey, then when actually passing them. They belong generically to the past tense; one rarely says, "This is a landmark"; usually "That was a landmark."

IV.

The bookcases were of Sabre's own design. He was extraordinarily fond of his books and he had ideas about their arrangement. The lowest shelf was in each case three feet from the ground; he hated books being "down where you can't see them." Also the cases were open, without glass doors; he hated "having to fiddle to get out a book." He liked them to be just at the right height and straight to his hand. In a way he could not quite describe (he was a bad talker, framing his ideas with difficulty) he was attached to his books, not only for what was in them, but as entities. He had written once in a manuscript book in which he sometimes wrote things, "I like the feel of them and I know the feel of them in the same way as one likes and knows the feel of a friend's hand. And I can look at them and read them without opening them in the same way as, without his speaking, one looks at and can enjoy the face of a friend. I feel towards them when I look at them in the shelves,—well, as if they were feeling towards me just as I am feeling towards them."

The first book he had ever bought "specially"—that is to say not as one buys a bun but as one buys a dog—was at the age of seventeen when he had bought a Byron, the Complete Works in a popular edition of a very great bulk and very small print. He bought it partly because of what he had heard during his last term at school of Don Juan, partly because he had picked up the idea that it was rather a fine thing to read poetry; and he kept it and read it in secrecy because his mother (to whom he mentioned his intention) told him that Byron ought not to be read and that her father, in her girlhood, had picked up Byron with the tongs and burnt him in the garden. This finally determined him to buy Byron.

When he had laboriously read thirty-six pages he decided that it was not a fine thing to read poetry, and he moved on to Don Juan, page five hundred and thirty-three. The rhymes surprised him. He had no idea that poetry—poetry—rhymed "annuities" with "true it is" and "Jew it is." He turned on and numbered the cantos,—sixteen; and then the number of verses in each canto and the total,—two thousand one hundred and eighty . . . Who-o-o! . . . It was as endless as the seven hundred and eight pages had appeared when he had staggered as far as page thirty-six. He began to hunt for the particular verses which had caused Don Juan to be recommended to him and presumably had caused his grandfather to carry out Byron with the tongs and burn him in the garden. He could not find them.

But as he was putting it away, his eye happened upon two lines that struck into him—it was like a physical blow—the most extraordinary sensation:

The isles of Greece, the isles of Greece
Where burning Sappho loved and sung.

He caught his breath. It was extraordinary. What the dickens was it? A vision of exquisite and unearthly and brilliantly-colored beauty seemed to be before his eyes. Islands, all white and green and in a sea of terrific blue. . . . And music, the thin note of distant trumpets. . . . Amazing! He read on. "Where Delos rose and Phoebus sprung! Eternal Summer gilds them yet." Terrific, but not quite so terrific. And then again the terrific, the stunning, the heart-clutching thing. On a different note, with a different picture, colored in greys.

The mountains look on Marathon—
And Marathon looks on the sea.

Music! The trumpets thinned away, exquisitely thin, tiny, gone! And high above the mountains and far upon the sea an organ shook.

He said: "Well, I'm dashed!" and put the book away.

V.

It was years after the Byron episode—after he had come down from Cambridge, after he had traveled fairly widely, and luckily, as tutor to a delicate boy, and after he had settled down, from his father's house at Chovensbury, to learn the Fortune, East and Sabre business that he began to collect the books which now formed his collection. His intense fondness for books had come to him late in life, as love of literature goes. He was reading at twenty-eight and thirty literature which, when it is read at all, is as a rule read ten years younger because the taste is there and is voracious for satisfaction—as a young and vigorous animal for its meals. But at twenty-eight and thirty, reading for the first time, he read sometimes with a sense of revelation, always with an enormous satisfaction. Especially the poets. And constantly in the poets he was coming across passages the sheer beauty of which shook him precisely as the Byron lines had first shaken him.

VI.

Here, in the effect upon him of beauty and of ideas communicated to his mind by his reading—first manifested to him by the Byron revelation —was the mark and label of his individuality; here was the linking up of the boy who as Puzzlehead Sabre would wrinkle up his nut and say: "Well, I can't quite see that, sir," with the man in whom the same habit persisted; he saw much more clearly and infinitely more intensely with his mind than with his eye. Beauty of place imagined was to him infinitely more vivid than beauty seen. And so in all affairs; it was not what the eye saw or the ear heard that interested him; it was what his mind saw, questing behind the scene and behind the speech, that interested him, and often, by the intensity of its perception, shook him. And precisely as beauty touched in him the most exquisite and poignant depths, so evil surroundings, evil faces dismayed him to the point of mysterious fear, almost terror—

On a Sunday of his honeymoon in London he had conceived with Mabel the idea of a bus ride through the streets—"anywhere, the first bus that comes." The first bus that came took them through South London, dodged between main roads and took them through miles of mean and sordid dwelling houses. At open windows high up sat solitary women, at others solitary, shirt-sleeved men; behind closed windows were the faces of children. All staring—women and men and children, impassively prisoned, impassively staring. Each house door presented, one above the other, five or six iron bell-knobs, some hanging out and downwards, as if their necks were broken. On the pavements hardly a soul. Just street upon street of these awful houses with their imprisoned occupants and the doors with their string of crazy bells.

An appalling and abysmal depression settled upon Sabre. He imagined himself pulling the dislocated neck of one of those bells and stepping into what festered behind those sinister doors; the dark and malodorous stairways, the dark and malodorous rooms, their prisoned occupants opening their prisons and staring at him —those women, those men, those children. He imagined himself in one of those rooms, saw it, felt it, smelt it. He imagined himself cutting his throat in one of those rooms.

At tea in their hotel on their return, Mabel chattered animatedly on all they had seen. "I'm awfully glad we went. I think it's a very good thing to know for oneself just how that side of life lives. Those awful people at the windows!"—and she laughed. He noticed for the first time what a sudden laugh she had, rather loud.

Sabre agreed. "Yes, I think it's a good thing to have an idea of their lives. I can't say I'm glad I went, though. You've no idea how awfully depressed that kind of thing makes me feel."

She laughed again. "Depressed! How ever can it? How funny you must be!"

Then she said: "Yes, I'm glad I've seen for myself. You know, when those sort of people come into your service—the airs they give themselves and the way they demand the best of everything—and then when you see the kind of homes they come from—!"

"Yes, it makes you think, doesn't it?"

"It does!"

But what it made Sabre think was entirely different from what it made Mabel think.

VII.

"Puzzlehead" they had called him at his preparatory school — Old Puzzlehead Sabre, the chap who always wrinkled up his nut over things and came out with the most extraordinary ideas. He had remained, and increasingly become, the puzzler. And precisely as he ceased to share a room with Mabel and carried himself with satisfaction to his own apartment, so, by this fifth year of his married life, he had come to know well that he shared no thuoghts with her; he carried them, with increasing absorption in their interest, to the processes of his own mind.

An incident of those early school days had always remained with him, in its exact words. The exact words of a selectly famous professor of philosophy who, living the few years of his retirement in the neighborhood of the preparatory school, had given —for pure love of seeing young things and feeling the freshness of young minds—a weekly "talk on things" to the small schoolboys. And whatever the subject of his talk, he almost invariably would work off his familiar counsel:

"And a very good thing (he used to say), an excellent thing, the very best of practices, is to write a little every day. Just a little scrap, but cultivate the habit of doing it every day. I don't mean what is called keeping a diary, you know. Don't write what you do. There's no benefit in that. We do things for all kinds of reasons and it's the reasons, not the things, that matter. Let your little daily scrap be something you've thought. What you've done belongs partly to someone else; often you're made to do it. But what you think is you yourself; you write it down and there it is, a tiny little bit of you that you can look at and say: 'Well, really!' You see, a little bit like that, written every day, is a mirror in which you can see your real self and correct your real self. A looking-glass shows you your face is dirty or your hair rumpled, and you go and polish up. But it's ever so much more important to have a mirror that shows you how your real self, your mind, your spirit, is looking. Just see if you can't do it. A little scrap. It's very steadying; very steadying. . ."

And his small hearers, desiring, like young colts in a field, nothing so little as anything steadying, paid as much attention to his "jaw" as to any precept not supported by cane or imposition. They made of it, indeed, a popular school joke' "Oh, go and write a little every day and boil yourself, you ass!" But it appealed, dimly, to the reflective quality in the child Sabre's mind. He contracted the habit of writing, in a "bagged" exercise book, sentences beginning laboriously with "I thought today —." It remained with him, as he grew up, in the practice of writing sometimes ideas that occurred to him, as in the case of his feelings about his books and—much more strongly —in deliberately thinking out ideas.

"You yourself. The real you."

In the increasing solitariness of his married life, it came to be something into which he could retire, as into a private chamber; which he could put on, as agarment; and in the privacy of the chamber, or within the sleeves of the garment, he received a sense of detachment from normal life in which, vaguely, he pondered things.

ADVENTURES OF THE TWINS.

THE CLOTH OF DREAMS

[By Olive Roberts Barton.]

Instantly he forgot that he and Nancy were on an errand for the Fairy Queen.

NICK looked after Nancy, whom the gypsy woman was leading into the cave. Then he looked at the great chocolate cake that had been set out to cool.

Some way he felt that things were going all wrong.

Just then something dropped out of his pocket. It was the note the Magical Mushroom had left in the orchard.

"I'd better not lose that," thought Nick, and he stooped to pick it up.

But lo and behold, the writing had changed from blue to red! He opened it and read: "Don't go into the cave. The gypsy woman is Twelve Toes the Sorcerer."

"Nancy," he screamed. "Come back. Don't go in there. Come back and we'll start on our journey over the Seven Mountains."

But Nancy didn't hear. Only the gypsy woman turned and leered at him, a queer crooked smile.

No wonder the little girl didn't hear, for the cloth the woman had given her to wipe up the spilled icing was the Cloth of Dreams. Whoever held it forgot everything and believed whatever he was told.

"Nancy, Nancy!" Nick kept calling, running after his sister. He intended to rescue her if he could before it was too late.

"Come, come, little master," said the gypsy woman sweetly, stopping suddenly and holding out her hand. "The more the merrier, "We'll have quite a little party."

Before he knew what was happening, she had taken Nick's hand and placed the other end of the cloth in it that Nancy held, the Cloth of Dreams, you know, my dears, and that was the end of poor Nick, or his memory. Instantly he forgot that he and Nancy were on an errand for the Fairy Queen. Forgotten were the Diddyevvers, the Korsknotts and the lost record of Longhead the Wiseman.

POLLY AND PAUL AND PARIS

CHAPTER XXXII.—"RO-BAN-SONNG."

By Zoe Beckley

SUDDENLY Polly remembered where she had heard of Robinson —pronounced in the French way, "Ro-ban-sonng." Barray had mentioned it the day she had lunched with him.

"You ought to see it. It's a bit touristy, but we'll go sometime," he had said, and Polly replied that she'd love it.

Now that Paul suggested going for the week-end, she objected a little. Why? She couldn't explain it even to herself. So she gave herself a mental shake, and to Paul's questioning glance at her hesitation, answered promptly:

"Monsieur Barray told me about Robinson that day at luncheon."

"Didn't say anything to knock it, did he?"

"No, not a thing. I only thought —I don't know what I thought. I'm a goose. I want to go."

Paul staged an elaborate look of patience-on-a-pedestal and whistled the ancient couplet to the effect that you never can tell about a woman: "Two never think alike any one time; one never thinks alike twice." Polly ignored him and packed her bag.

It was curious, she told herself with a little half-smile as she folded and stowed her things, how the thought of George Barray always gave her that odd tang of exhilaration! She wondered if it was because he was the first worldly man who had shown her marked interest.

It would be thrilling to have a man like that care for you—a little. It would be marvelous to have power over him—lead him on, hold him off, pique his interest, throw it little sops, laugh, be serious—and run away.

"What are you chortling at, madam? May I respectfully request you to get a move on? We've only 40 minutes to catch the train. You don't have to take a trunk, you know. Come on Pussycat, depechez-vous, vite, wake up! If we don't get there before 7, all the top branches of the dinner trees will be complet—and we've got to find an inn to bunk in for the night, too."

Polly gave a final flip to her bag, slapped on her hat, looked at Paul—and suddenly ran to him.

"You adorable, darling old lamb, how I love you! Paul—tell me regularly every ten minutes that you love me, no matter how silly I am!"

SISTER MARY'S KITCHEN

HOT SANDWICHES

TRY serving hot sandwiches for luncheon. They are easily prepared and make use of many a left-over in an attractive fashion.

These hot sandwiches can be made and then toasted or just the hot filling put between bread and butter.

The sandwich may be closed or served open. The sandwich that is made and toasted, filling and all should be served closed, but any other hearty sandwich can be used as desired.

Hot Cheese Sandwich.

Three-quarters cup milk, 2 cups grated cheese, ½ teaspoon salt, 2 eggs, ⅛ teaspoon pepper, paprika, rounds of toast.

Scald milk. When very hot add cheese and cook over boiling water until cheese is melted. Stir constantly. Season with salt and pepper and add the beaten yolks of the eggs.

Remove from fire and fold in the whites beaten till stiff and dry. Serve as an open sandwich on toast. Sprinkle with paprika and garnish with sprigs of parsley.

One cup cooked oysters, ¼ cup minced cooked bacon, ¼ cup minced celery, mayonnaise to moisten, triangles of hot buttered toast.

Mix celery and bacon. Add oysters chopped. Toss together and add mayonnaise to moisten. Put between triangles of hot buttered toast and serve. The oysters may be fried or creamed and drained from the sauce, or any cooked oyster.

Hot Ham Sandwich.

Broiled ham, squares of hot toast, spiced sauce.

Have the ham cut not more than one-quarted inch thick. Cottage ham can be used. Broil lightly first on one side and then on the other. Put between squares of toast and pour over the sauce.

Spiced Sauce.

One cup boiling water, 1 cup grape juice or 1½ cups boiling water, ½ cup cider vinegar and 1¼ cups brown sugar; ½ cup brown sugar, 1 teaspoon ground cloves, 2 teaspoons cinnamon, ⅛ teaspoon pepper, 1 tablespoon cornstarch.

Add graps juice and the one-half cup brown sugar to boiling water, bring to boiling point and add cornstarch dissolved in a little cold water. Add seasoning and boil till clear. It will take about 20 minutes to boil the dressing.

Toasted Sardine Sandwich.

Split sardines and remove bone. Sprinkle with lemon juice and a tiny bit of paprika. Put between thin slices of bread and butter. Press firmly and toast in a very hot oven or under the flame first one one side and then on the other.

A delicious sandwich is made by spreading white bread lightly with butter and using a filling of thinly sliced cream cheese.

Pin these together with toothpicks and dip each sandwich into one egg beaten with one cup milk seasoned with one-half teaspoon salt and one-quarter teaspoon paprika. Do not let the bread become saturated with the egg mixture. Saute the sandwiches in butter and bacon fat.

The bread crisps on the outside and is deliciously creamy inside.

SPRING will bring muddy weather. Then the youngsters are likely to track mud into the house.

A way to avoid this is to take an ordinary piece of tin and nail it tight to the end of a front porch step. It is easy, then, to scrape the dirt off your shoes without marring the step.

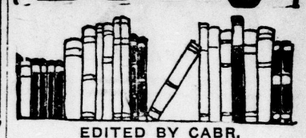

MINERS' TROUBLES BREWING.

London, Feb. 25.—(Canadian Press Cable.)—Critical conditions are again prevalent in connection with the strike of miners in and about Johannesburg, according to Reuter's correspondent. Many cases of intimidation have been reported. Johannesburg would have been without coal during the last two or three days had it not been for the use of non-union labor. The strikers made vigorous protests, and at the time of cabling there were evidence of further serious trouble in prospect.

HANDKERCHIEFS.

Colored handkerchiefs are still very much in vogue. A new touch is a pin striped interior with a white border.

BOOKS

EDITED BY CABR.

THE PARLOR BEGAT AMOS. By Arthur S. Hildebrand. Harcourt, Brace & Co.

HERE in London, as in all the larger cities, the modern tendency of life has all but banished the parlor.

Yet not only in the vilage and the small town, but even in the city itself there are still places where the parlor still holds sway—such parlors as the one at 7 Elm street, in the mill town of Wilton, which Isabel Enday and her husband, Phanor, created to their pride and infinite satisfaction.

There were in it a large rubber plant, a "square" piano, "like the monstrous offspring of a pair of degenerate tables," and chairs with crocheted cushions, and a gold clock that didn't and wouldn't go.

The wallpaper had a pattern of red roses with silver ribbon; the carpet repeated the red roses, adding dogs and birds.

Such was the parlor that in 1874 Isabel Enday began to furnish, the room little Amos, born a year or two later, carried always imprinted on his life. The influences which had made the parlor molded him and his existence, though very much against his will. The parlor was a place of safety. "It sat prim and secure in its fancy draperies, defying thought and inspiration and joy, praying God that nothing would ever happen."

The book is a cleverly-written, often penetrating study of small town life, as well as of a certain familiar type of character.

Phanor Enday and his wife Isabel, never really thought about anything; they only worried. They taught their only son Amos "to fear uncertainty and experiment and failure." He fought against their teaching as well as he could.

Most of the story is the story of his efforts to reach out to a life free and beautiful and adventurous, without the least idea of how or where to find it, either in the world or in himself. And there was no one to help him, no one to encourage his struggles or to appreciate the true worth of his vivid imagination. And he had started out with the parlor "as an inspiration and as a guide."

He had sworn never to become the sort of man his father was, rut-bound, inconsequent, without sympathy or logic. But he soon learned to doubt himself and his own abilities. He saw failure under a particularly tragic aspect, and it terrified him. What seemd to him fine and inspiring, his parents had either laughed at or deplored.

Little by little, they—and the parlor—sapped his powers of risistance. So, when at last his real chance came, when he needed to be free and called on himself for courage, he had none. A way of safety lay open before him, a way which was, so they assured him, the way of opportunity. He took it, and the door of the parlor closed upon him, shutting him in forever, apart from the real life he had caught glimpses of and longed for.

The people in the book are clearly drawn. Mr. Hildebrand avoids caricature, showing a real gift for character portrayal, as well as for deft phrasing. There is a something of sameness in the novel, with its repeated accounts of Amos's struggles and defeats, but this would seem unavoidable in a realistic chronicle of such an existence as his. There is a good deal that is well worth considering to be found in "The Parlor Begat Amos."

DRAPING.

Paris has gone draping mad. Scarcely does one see an imported model which is not much draped or much be-panneled. The latter invariably extend below the hem line of the skirt.

CHEESE.

Sprinkle grated cheese on the canned pears and serve them on a lettuce leaf with mayonnaise. They make a delicious salad, thus treated.

Costumes of "Good Old Days" Shimmer on Screen

BY JAMES W. DEAN.

NEW YORK, Feb. 26.—Old clothes are still the vogue in the movies. The costume play promises to scent the screen with the atmosphere of lavender and old lace for several months to come.

Doug Fairbanks, after his success with "The Three Musketeers" (exhibited at the Grand Theatre in London, Ont.), is now coming right back with another costume play. It is temporarily called "The Spirit of Chivalry," and is set in the Ivanhoe period when Crusaders were rampant.

Doug will play the part of a legendary character, and his make-up will be much like that in "The Three Musketeers."

Maurice Tourneur is filming "Lorna Doone" at the Ince studio, and Norma Talmadge is starring in "The Duchess of Langeais." Both of those are costume plays.

Foreign films recently completed for exhibition are also in costume.

Lady Diana Manners will be seen in "The Glorious Adventure," the film done in colors by J. Stuart Blackton. It deals with a story of early English history.

The German film now being photographed in the royal palaces at Berlin and Potsdam portrays the life of Frederick the Great and is costumed in that period.

"The Loves of Pharaoh," Lubitsch's latest film, is also in costume.

Dust will soon be brushed off the copies of "Lorna Doone" in public and private libraries. That, because Maurice Tourneur is filming the story.

Total sales of "The Three Musketeers" and entire sets of Dumas in the few months that followed the release of the picture were as great as in the previous three years combined.

When Tourneur filmed "The Last of the Mohicans" there was a revival of interest in the works of James Fenimore Cooper.

Douglas Fairbanks and Enid Bennett in a scene from "The Spirit of Chivalry."

me about the premiere of Lady Diana Manners' "The Glorious Adventure," treats the events as a social function. It probably was that.

The showing was at Covent Garden. The star, with her parents, sisters and other relatives, attended in a front tier box. Following the screening there was a reception at Belvoir Castle, the country seat of the star's parents.

Prince Henry was the guest of honor. The guest list included lords and ladies, marquises and marchionesses, earls and countesses, viscounts and cabinet officers.

That may be of passing interest, but what was the biggest surprise in the report was that Margot Asquith, now lecturing in the United States, tried to get six seats for the showing of the movie, and was told "the house was sold out."

KITCHENER JUNIORS HOLD AURA LEES TO 3---3 TIE BUT LOSE ROUND

MADE BIG BID ON FOREIGN ICE

Had Whole Play of Last Two Periods.

GAME WAS ROUGH

TORONTO, Feb. 25.—Aura Lee went into the next round of the junior O. H. A. competition this afternoon, when they held the green-shirted youngsters from Kitchener to a tie, three goals all, winning the round 6 goals to 4.

At times the game was fast, and contained some real strenuous hockey. There were several occasions when a few feathers as a head-dress and a tomahawk in place of a stick would have been a more appropriate costume. Referee German had a hard game to handle, but was offered a lot of advice by Bill Marsden.

Aura Lee had the best of the first period when they scored three to Kitchener's one, but they were outscored 2 to 0 in the second, when Kitchener had the better of the play.

Both teams started off slow, and there was more shinny than hockey in the first few minutes. Finally the lads settled down to better hockey and play ranged from end to end, Denford and Cotton doing well for Aura Lee with Hemphill and Molson standing out for the visitors. Moore was given a few hard shots to handle. After five minutes Cotton went down the left boards alone and beat Farrell from the side. Kitchener came back strong, and after having a slight edge Trushinski evened the count. Scott increased the Avenue Road'er's lead when he passed out after being worked into the corner and Farrell helped the cause along by letting the rubber, slide in off his skate. Aura Lee commenced to show a superiority, the forwards checking back and showing far more team work on the attack. Kitchener depended more upon individual rushes, and as a rule these did not take them very far. Shortly before the period ended Denford scored on a pretty shot from the right wing. First period over.

Second Period.

The period opened a little faster, and Kitchener more at home in their surroundings, put up a better argument and gave the Aura Lee defence a lot to do; Moore turning away a lot. Trushinski was the best man on the ice and received good support from Hemphill. White came out in place of Molson and immediately went down and scored. This spurred the visitors to greater efforts, and for a while Aura Lee looked like selling platers. They could not get out of their own end of the rink, and Moore was kept on the hop stopping the shots. The Green Shirts showed no respect for the locals' beef trust defence, and stepped right into them. The checking became heavy and the referee became cross-eyed, trying to watch everything. Breen went off and was followed by Dinsmore and then McKay. Spills were frequent, and the locals ragged as much as they could with two men on the penalty bench, but finally Trushinski obtained and evened the score. Kitchener is much the better team and had it over the locals in almost every department, and Moore in goal saved several scores. The game was delayed for five minutes, while Referee Germain had a cut on his head patched up. He sustained the cut when he stopped Dinsmore's stick. The rest helped Aura Lee pull themselves together, and for the rest of the period the play was even. Second period over. Score—Aura Lee 3, Kitchener 3.

Third Period.

Play commenced as it left off, and ranged up and down with neither team having much of an advantage. Both defences were strong, and the forwards checked back persistently. Breen went off, and McKay followed for slashing. Trushinski is again the best on the ice, and gives Moore a lot to do. Penalties reduced Aura Lee to four and Kitchener to five players. Aura Lee ragged until the teams were even. Kitchener lost a good chance when they had the advantage by not sending everyone up. Denford and Applegath were both through, but Farrell made two nice saves. Towards the end of the game Aura Lee assumed the upper hand, but their individual rushes met with little success. The game ended a tie, three goals each, Aura Lee winning the round, 6 to 4.

The line-up:

Kitchener.		Aura Lee.

Hemphill	"	McKay
Hass	Centre	Denford
Molson	Right	Scott

WAITING FOR PAN-DRIEDS.

ST. THOMAS, Feb. 26.—There is still hope that the Tillsonburg collection of intermediate puck-chasers will consent to a play-off either in St. Thomas or in London. Manager Arthur Barrett was in touch with them on Friday evening, and he said they expressed a desire to settle the dispute. Tillsonburg promised to telephone their answer before Saturday, but by Saturday afternoon no word had been received.

Local fans are very anxious to see the deciding match, and if the game were staged in St. Thomas the Granite Rink would be bulged out with spectators. The Granites, the working material of the club, are eager to get back at the Pan-Drieds, and are confident that they could net a won. What is worth while seeing is worth while waiting for.

PARIS JUNIORS PLAY C. A. C.

PARIS, Feb. 25.—The Paris juniors will play a sudden-death game with the Hamilton Catholic Athletic Club juniors in Paris on Tuesday night. A good fast game is expected, as the C. A. C. have one of the fastest junior team in Ontario. Paris will have the usual line-up.

Canadian Rugby Rules For 1922 Will Be Changed But Slightly

STAFF IS CHAMPION

Chicago Skater Won Canadian Title at St. Johns Handily.

ST. JOHN, N.B., Feb. 26. — Arthur Staff of Chicago easily won the professional skating championship title of Canada yesterday, the closing day of the professional meet which was held here on a ten-lap track at the east-end outdoor rink. He had won all three events on Friday, and on Saturday he won three and took second place in the fourth, totalling 200 points. Edmund Lamy of Saranac Lake, N.Y., was second with 100; Bobby McLean of Chicago was third with 70, and Everett McGowan of St. Paul totalled 50. Donald Baker of Brooklyn, who acted as pacemaker, did not score. The finishes were close.

CELTIC DEFEAT IS SOCCER SURPRISE

Beaten at Their Home Park by Hamilton, 3. to 1.

Eight teams enter the fourth round of the Scottish Association Cup competition as a result of Saturday's games when a decision was reached in each match. Several surprises featured the games, the most notable one being the defeat of the league leaders, Celtic at home by Hamilton. It was thought that the game at Parkhead would be a mere matter of routine with Celtics winning by a decided margin, but the Academicals came through with a 3 to 1 victory and broke the hopes of the Celtic supporters that they would go through and win both the league and cup.

Six of the home teams won, and the trio representing the Second Division have no further active interest in the event, Allea Athletic, Bathgate and East Stirling all failing to score against their opponents. The defeat of the latter club by Queen of the South was a surprise, as it was expected the sole representative of the local leagues would be eliminated. The fourth round finds seven first division clubs and Queen of the South remaining.

Hearts had one of their frequent off days at Tynecastle and the Rangers had an easy win by 4 goals to nil. It was hoped by the Hearts that they would be able to give the Rangers a great argument, and this game was expected to be the tit bit of the day.

St. Mirren are still in the running and disposed of Airdrieonians 2 to 0. The winners have been coming well of late, and their victory was expected. The results were:

St. Mirren 3, Airdrieonians 0.
Aberdeen 3, Dundee 0.
Morton 4, Clyde 1.
Motherwell 1, Alloa 0.
Partick 3, Bathgate 0.
Hearts 0, Rangers 4.
Queen of the South 2, East Stirling 0.
Celtic 1, Hamilton 3.

There were few changes in the standings in the Old Country leagues, as a result of Saturday's games. Liverpool and Aston Villa both won, while Burnley and Bolton, who were tied for third place, met at Burnley, and the homesters scored the two goals of the game. Cardiff City lost by the orphan goal against the Pensioners at Chelsea. Of the eleven games, eight were won by the home clubs, one was a draw, and in the other two the visitors took the full points. West Bromwich, who were knocked out of the cup competition last week, journeyed to Preston North End and disposed of their hosts who still survive in the cup series. Of the six first division clubs remaining in the cup competition four lost their league engagements, Tottenham and Villans being the only ones to win.

While the standing in the second division is unchanged. Stoke gained slightly on Notts Forest as a result of the latter's draw at home against Fulham, while Stoke was taking a 4 to 2 decision at Derby County. The leaders' margin, however, is great enough to prevent any worry as to their position.

Plymouth Argyle steps to the head of the list in the Southern section of the Third Division, as they won at home against Brighton and Hove, while Southampton was defeated by the orphan goal at Swansea. Plymouth now has a two-point lead, but Southampton has played three games less.

The league results were:

C.R.U. HAD GOOD YEAR IN 1921

Meeting Saturday Approved New Rules.

LIMIT OF EIGHTEEN MEN

TORONTO, Feb. 26.—The 26th annual meeting of the Canadian Rugby Union was held Saturday afternoon at the Ontario Athletic Commission's rooms, Richmond street west, with President W. Foulds, Toronto, in the chair.

In the morning the rules committee held a meeting and discussed a number of suggestions made in regard to the rules from the Intercollegiate and Interprovincial Unions.

Present at the meeting were: President Foulds, Vice-President R. P. Isbister, Hamilton, and F. C. P. Roberts of Montreal; Secretary John De Gruchy, Toronto; Ben. L. Simpson, Hamilton; W. Lindsay Malcolm, Kingston; Dr. J. C. Maynard, Toronto; G. E. Reid, London; Dr. Lorne Montgomery, Montreal, and W. A. Hewitt, Toronto.

It is likely that next year teams will be strictly limited to 20 men in uniform and 18 players to participate, and that teams will not be allowed to use more than that number of men in any game. Last year teams used more players than 18 by mutual consent. This new rule will be a protection for the smaller clubs who have not large squads of players.

College Suggestions.

The college suggestions were outlined by Dr. Montgomery as follows:

Compulsory scrimmage on the 25-yard line after a rouge or safety kick.

Player may recover fumbled ball himself and forward pass in such cases not penalized.

Definite duties of referee and assistant referee (new name for umpire). Referee inflicts penalties, but otherwise officials have equal powers.

Head linesman to have additional authority and to be a regularly appointed official. He is to call the "3-yard" interference rule. The head linesman is to be obligatory in senior games and optional in intermediate and junior series.

Substitutes to report to the penalty timekeeper instead of the nead linesman. A record is to be kept of all substitutions.

Legalizing the "shift play," by which the ball may be snapped by any player on the line of scrimmage, not necessarily the snapper-back.

Running interference is illegal on the line of scrimmage or in any part of the field whether the offender is offside or not.

The intercollegiate divided equally on the proposition to increase the interference from 3 to 4 yards on the line of scrimmage. They will accept the Canadian Union's decision on this point.

The Big Four Suggestions.

Mr. Simpson introduced two suggestions from the Interprovincial Union as follows:

1. Favor allowing a fake kick on the third down, irrespective of the fact that the players going down are beyond the 3-yard limit.

2. Favor reversion to the old rule which gives the side recovering the ball of a blocked kick on the third down possession, and calling a first down.

The views of the Quebec Union were expressed in the following comment: "Many visitors from the U. S. have expressed themselves as being greatly impressed with our game, and further revision of our code should be discussed with caution."

The suggestions, after discussion, were referred to the incoming rules committee for final decision. No radical changes are suggested.

It was announced that University of Toronto would have a senior team in the O. R. F. U. next year.

At the meeting of the union Saturday afternoon the treasurer's report was presented, and showed a cash balance on hand of $1,307.95. Grass receipts were $2,364.46, and expenditures $1,056.510.

Secretary DeGruchy, in his annual report, told of the difficulties surmounted by the union during the year, and of the success that rewarded their efforts; the adoption of uniform rules and the benefit it had been generally to football throughout the Dominion. Mr. DeGruchy added:

"Another sure barometer is to judge by the number of those attending the games. Take, for instance, the attendance at the three final games, which were played under the most disagreeabel weather conditions. These attracted a paid attendance of 29,711. This applies in a general way to the many games leading up to the C. R. U. finals. May we not assume from this a fairly satisfied public?

The Success Achieved.

"As to the critics it would be but natural that with the advent of a new set of playing rules considerable criticism might arise. Before the opening of the playing season we did meet with some criticism, but am sorry to say not of a constructive character. However, your executive and rules committee were content to wait until after the playing season was over and stand or fall on the result. Perhaps the best vindication for those who advocated these rules is borne out by the fact that for the first time:

1. In Canadian rugby every union played under uniform rules.

2. That not an official in charge has suggested any radical change.

3. That none of the unions at their meetings have advocated any material changes in the rules.

4. That the public have shown absolute approval of the game as now played."

The following officers were elected: Honorary president, W. Foulds, Toronto; President, R. T. Isbister, Hamilton; first vice-president, Percy Roberts, Montreal; second vice-president, C. E. Chown, Winnipeg; third vice-president, John DeGruchy, Toronto; secretary-treasurer, R. W. Hewitson, Toronto.

PAL MORAN IS GOOD AGAINST LEONARD

Had Best of Two Rounds and Held Champ Even for One.

NEW ORLEANS, Feb. 26.—Benny Leonard, lightweight champion of the world, had the better of Pal Moran of New Orleans in their ten-round, no-decision bout last night. Moran made a remarkable showing, sticking his chin out to the champion on several occasions, and rushing the champion at times. He had the better of two of the rounds, and held the champion even in another.

Leonard fought most of the battle with his left hand. He said after the bout he had injured his right hand by hitting Moran on the head in the first round. He seemed fresh after the bout. Moran seemed strong, but a little tired. The weights were announced as: Moran, 134½; Leonard, 139.

DEMONS, WITH HALF TEAM, GIVE HOBBS SIX FRIGHT

Misunderstanding Sends Half Demons Home Thinking Game Off.

Hobbs Gold Medalists won their second tilt with the Tiser Demons 7—1 on Saturday. Due to a misunderstanding several of the Demons did not turn up when the scene of battle was switched from De la Salle Rink to Victoria Park. The Demons were forced to pick up a youngster for goal who had intended to spectate, and this beat them, for all the Hobbs goals were never meant that way. Fitzmaurice notched one for the Demons in the first period, while Brichner and Gordon put Hobbs ahead with a goal each. In the second verse, Hobbs got only one counter, but in the third Stewart, shooting from center, tallied four times. The lineup:

Hobbs—Sasche, Carfrae, Gordon, Kay, Brichner, Stewart, McKerlie, Blinkhorn.

Demons—Dalton, Bell, Blay, Love, Fitzmaurice, Penny and Ashton.

"Mooney" Gibson Leaves London To Join His Pittsburg Pirates

MAYBE that red-breasted, fat little warbler known as the robin is the harbinger of spring, as far as some people are concerned, but the average baseball fan knows that spring is just around the corner when Manager George Gibson of the Pittsburg Pirates leaves London to prepare his athletes for the grueling grind of the National League pennant chase.

Therefore, according to Hoyle, spitely spring is just in the offing, for Manager Gibson and William Haddon of this city left on Saturday night for Pittsburg, proceeding to West Baden on Wednesday, where the pitchers and catchers of the Pirates will report for the yearly "boiling out."

On March 10 the squad will journey to Hot Springs, where they will be joined by all the regulars and rookies for a further whack at the waters that help fat tummies to vanish like snow before the summer sun.

Mooney Optimistic.

Interviewed by The London Advertiser just prior to his departure, Manager Gibston stated that the Pirates looked pretty good to him, fully as strong as they were last spring. He states that if a couple of deals at present hanging fire went through, the Pirates would be right up at the top, and whooping right along.

"However, I don't like to say too much about the boys until I see them in action. I have a pretty good bunch, and I think they will do well," he concluded.

There was a large crowd of friends at the L. and P. S. R. station to see Manager Gibson and his friend off, and if good wishes count for anything, the Pirates have the world series sewed up right now.

Mr. Haddon will stay with the Pirates right through the training season, and will take the baths at West Baden and Hot Springs. Although more prominently identified with the hockey and Rugby teams of the city, being president of the London Rugby Club in 1914, when they won the junior championship of Canada, Mr. Haddon has always been interested in baseball, especially those teams with which his friend George Gibson was connected.

Mr. Haddon will renew his acquaintance with Pittinger and Neitzke of the Boston Americans, who played with the London Mint League champions in 1920, as the Red Sox are scheduled to pay an exhibition game with the Pirates in the Sunny South.

BAPTISTS BEAT TECK 9 TO 0 IN FIRST CLASH

Londoners Faded in the Third Period After Holding Well.

WOODSTOCK, Feb. 25.—London Technical School and Woodstock College teams met at the arena Saturday morning in the first of their home-and-home games in the Interscholastic semi-finals. The Woodstock sextet won by a score of 9 to 0, applying the whitewash in a decisive manner.

In the first two periods the Londoners held the local outfit fairly well in check, the second spasm ending 3 to 0. However, in the last period the Purple and Gold opened up and ran in six goals, while the visitors were held helpless. McQuaig, Day, Elliott and Lycett did the scoring. The return game will be played in London next week.

The line-up:

Dutton	Defence	Camelford
Atkins	Defence	Lycett
Smith	Center	McQuaig
Slater	Wing	Day

56 Scoreless Frames Is His Best Stunt

BY WALTER JOHNSON.

WHAT do you regard as your best pitching performance?

Most pitchers when asked such a question would probably refer you to some no-hit game they had worked, if fortunate enough to have broken into that class.

I made my debut in the American League in 1907. It was not until 1920 that I was lucky enough to turn in a no-hit game. When I say lucky, I mean it.

In the long stretch between 1907 and 1920, I had many times threatened to break into the no-hit class, only to have my record spoiled at the last moment, a couple of times after two men were out in the ninth.

However, I do not regard that no-hit game as my best pitching performance.

It is a rather interesting fact that I pitched my no-hit game after I had been on the shelf for several weeks with a sore arm, and a few other ailments.

In fact, the no-hit game bobbed up at a time when a lot of experts were predicting that I was through.

In 1919, Joe Wood and I hogged the limelight for a considerable part of the season with strings of sixteen straight victories, which, by the way, is an American League record.

I pitched good ball during that long run, but was favored by the breaks and excellent assistance from my teammates.

It really is rather hard for me to decide what I regard as my best performance.

I am in doubt between the 56 scoreless innings I pitched in 1913, when I started the opening game of the season on April 10 with a shut-out, and went to May 15 before being scored on, or when I pitched three shut-out games on successive days against the New York Club in 1908.

I am inclined to think the 56 scoreless innings I pitched in 1913 was the best twirling effort of my career.

VARSITY CO-EDS CHAMPS.

MONTAGNARDS WIN.

BERWICK, Ont., Feb. 26. — Montagnards of Ottawa defeated the home team here on Saturday night by 6 to 3, winning the Allan Cup district semi-finals on the round by 24 to 8.

HABITANTS KEEP PACE WITH IRISH

Beat the Tigers in Listless Affair; St. Pats Won.

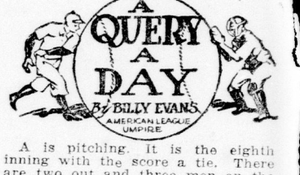

MONTREAL, Feb. 26. — Canadiens kept in time with Toronto St. Patricks on Saturday night by winning easily in their fixture with Hamilton by a score of 6 to 1, while the Toronto team was winning from Ottawa, but there is little solace in that to the Habitants, for the season is growing too short, or rather, there are too few games to be played in which to beat out St. Patricks for second place and the right to play off with Ottawa for the title.

Saturday night's game here was a listless affair and productive of little excitement to the attendance of about 2,500 that witnessed the game. The Canadiens had little difficulty in defeating the Tigers, who at no stage of the game showed the brand of hockey displayed by the locals, who outskated and outchecked them and gave a much better exhibition of team work. Lockhart was the star of the visitors, and the fact of his fine work in the net and some wild shooting by the locals kept the score down.

A REAL TEST.

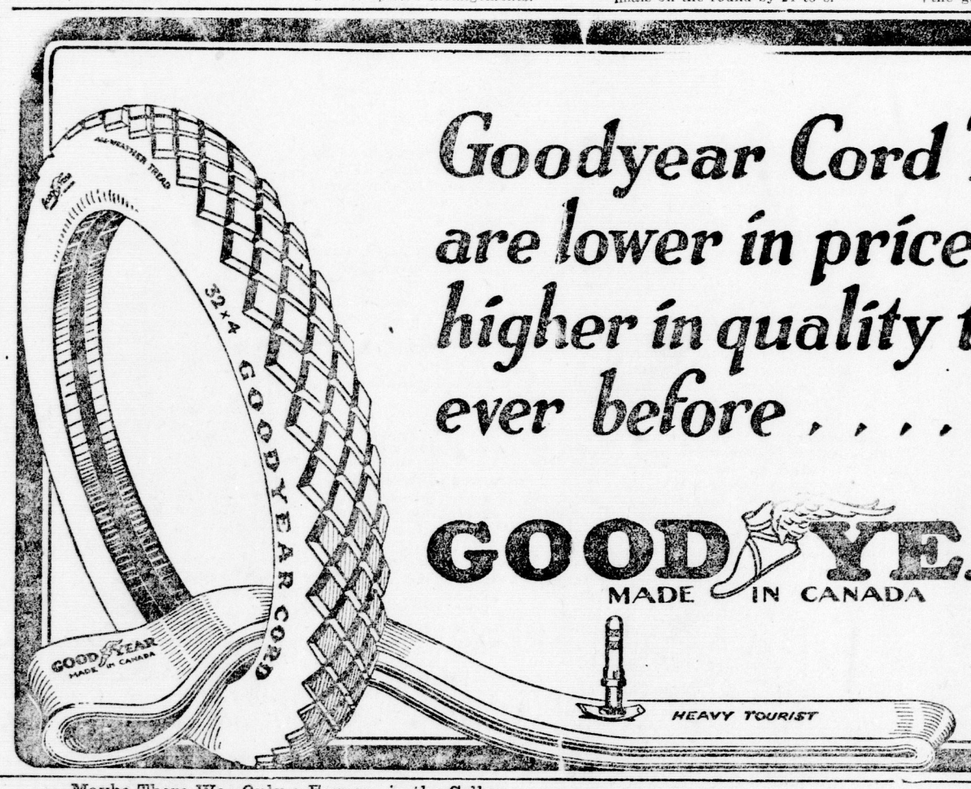

TORONTO, Feb. 26.—St. Patricks defeated the champion Ottawa Senators on Saturday night by 7 to 5, after a game which was productive of some of the best hockey seen here this season. On the night's play the locals deserved the victory, although it must be admitted that there was something lacking in the work of the visitors. It might have been caused by the absence of George Boucher from the defense, although that is hardly likely, as young Clancy turned in a good game that was better than anything played by Boucher here this season; it may have been that with first place certain, they didn't extend themselves to the limit and rested up to a certain extent for the play-offs. While the visitors did not seem at their top of their form the way that the locals were going would have them go at their best to defeat the Irishmen.

A is pitching. It is the eighth inning with the score a tie. There are two out and three men on the bases when A is relieved. The next batsman doubles, scoring three runs. The next batter strikes out, retiring the side. The visiting team in the first half of the ninth, scors two runs, but the three runs scored on the two base hit, gave the home team enough runs to win by a margin of one tally. Who is charged with the defeat, A or the pitcher substituted?

THE defeat is charged against A. He put on the bases the three runners who scored the runs that were necessary to win as it later proved. Invariably the defeat in such cases is charged against the pitcher who put the runners on, provided the scoring of such runners decided the outcome of the game.

FIND REMAINS OF EARLY RACE

Peabody Museum Explorers Name Ancient People "Post-Basket-Weavers."

CLIFF-DWELLERS LATER

Older Inhabitants of Southwest Grew Corn and Lived in Caves.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Feb. 26.—(The Associated Press.)—The discovery of the remains of an ancient people who once inhabited the American Southwest and were intermediate in development between the Basket-Makers, the earliest race known to have lived in this region, and the Pueblo Cliff-Dwellers, whose remarkable stone villages along the Arizona cliffs have attracted wide public interest, has been one of the results of explorations made during the past year in the Marsh Pass region of Northeastern Arizona by the Peabody Museum of Harvard University. The "Post-Basket-Makers" is the name given the newly-discovered people.

The Harvard expeditions to this semi-desert region, over 100 miles from the nearest railroad, were begun in 1914 by A. V. Kidder and Samuel J. Guernsey of the Peabody Museum staff, and were later continued under the sole direction of Mr. Guernsey. Prior to 1914 commercial collectors had found traces of the Basket-Makers, but facts about these earliest people of the region had never been secured by trained archaeologists until the Harvard expeditions began. These expeditions have not only contributed a mass of information concerning the Basket-Makers, but now show the existence of a people who followed the Basket-Makers in point of time, but preceded the Cliff-Dwellers.

Were Later Race.

The "Post-Basket-Makers" resembled the Basket-Makers in many particulars, but were clearly in a later stage of development. The Basket-Makers had no permanent dwellings, whereas these later people had stone houses in caves and in the open. They also had pottery, crude in some respects, but with the beginnings of decoration, and some of it was fired. This is the earliest pottery known to have been made in the Southwest.

Instead of burying their dead in caves, as did the Basket-Makers, they seem to have lived in the caves and to have conducted their burials in the open. Their more settled life is attributed to their success in agriculture. They grew corn of a primitive variety.

Skeletons found in the course of the excavations show that both the Basket-Makers and these successors had rather long skulls, whereas the Cliff-Dwellers who followed them were a round-headed race, and always had the back of the skull artificially flattened by the hard board head-rests of the cradles in which the babies were placed. The relationship of these various peoples is still a matter of doubt.

Heads Shaped Differently.

It is believed that the Post-Basket-Makers discovered during the Harvard explorations were descendants of the Basket-Makers, but whether they in turn were ancestors of the Cliff-Dwellers is not certain. It seems doubtful, on account of the marked difference in the shape of the head, even aside from artificial flattening.

The Basket-Makers had dogs. The mummied remains of two were found during the Harvard explorations, and are now on exhibition at the Peabody Museum, along with a quantity of other objects illustrative of Basket-Maker life. One was a long-haired animal about the size of a small collie, the other a smaller black and white dog resembling somewhat a terrier, with a short shaggy coat, erect ears, and a long, full-haired tail. These were clearly genuine dogs, and not bred from coyotes or other wild animals of the region.

Many of the objects found in the dry caves of this region are in an extraordinary state of preservation, on account of the dryness of the climate, despite their great age.

GUELPH HAD CLOSE CALL

Save New Hamburg Cup By One Shot Against Stratford.

GUELPH, Feb. 25.—A rink of Guelph Union Club curlers successfully defended the New Hamburg challenge cup against a Stratford quartet skipped by J. The match was played on keen ice, and as the result, it would indicate, was very close and exciting throughout. Embro are the next challengers.

HERSCOVITCH OFF FORM.

NEW YORK, Feb. 26 (By Canadian Press.)—Moe Herscovitch, the Canadian welterweight champion, was off form in his bout with Barney Adair of Harlem last night at the Commonwealth Sporting Club, and after twelve gruelling rounds of boxing the judges declared Adair the winner.

Although Barney outpointed Moe in the earlier rounds, the latter made a game comeback and his showing in the latter rounds should have earned him a draw, but the judges couldn't see it that way.

TAIT WON ON POINTS.

PHILADELPHIA, Feb. 26.—Clonie Tait of Canada last night outpointed Mickey Donley of Newark in a fast eight-round bout, according to the consensus of the newspapermen at the ringside. Tait weighed 137 pounds, and Donley 136.

CHICAGO HURLERS IMPROVE.

Chicago, Feb. 27.—Reports from Catalina Island, Cal., where the Chicago Nationals are training, indicate that excellent progress is being made by members of the pitching staff, although some have been at work a week only. Pitches from Marlin Springs, Texas, where the Chicago Americans are located, show that cold and rain have kept the men from having any more than a workout since their arrival.

DURLAY'S CONDITION.

Vancouver, B. C., Feb. 27.—While there has been very little change for the better in the condition of Robert Durlay, Toronto, piano manufacturer in the last few days, his illness does not seem likely to prove fatal, it was announced yesterday. Mr. Durlay was removed to the hospital on Feb. 16, suffering from pneu-

CANADIAN DOLLAR HITS HIGHEST LEVEL IN YEARS

Discount Rate On Currency Now Being Quoted 1.87 Per Cent.

New York, Feb. 27.—Canadian Press.—The discount rate on the Canadian dollar fell today to 1.87 per cent, the lowest quotation since December, 1918. Saturday Canadian currency was quoted in New York at 2.62 per cent discount.

The Canadian dollar gained strength through the improved position of foreign exchange bills on London, Paris and Milan, which were today at the highest quotation in several years, presumably the outcome of Saturday's conference between the British and French premiers at Boulogne.

Demand bills on London rose to $4.43 3-8 during the morning, a gain of 2c from last week's final price.

Paris demand bills rose 14 points to 9.21 1-2, and the Italian rate gained 18 points at 5.35. The German mark was depressed, however, selling at .45.

The steady improvement in the position of the Canadian dollar in the New York market, luring the past few months is expected to be maintained, and the concensus of opinion in financial circles is that the current year will witness the return of Canadian money to a par basis.

LONDON PASTORS HONOR DEPARTING ASSOCIATES

Major A. Graham and Rev. G. M. Young Guests of Honor at Luncheon.

Major A. Graham and Rev. G. M. Young were the guests of honor at a luncheon given in the De Luxe Cafe, by the Monday Club, an association of Presbyterian ministers, Monday, Feb. 27.

SEES INEQUALITY IN INCOME TAXES

Commissioner Grant Claims Exemptions Unfair to Some Wage Earners.

DEFEAT END INTENDED

Ward Two Residents Commence Filing Reports On Earnings.

Residents of Ward Two are now receiving their call from the city assessment department to file their income returns with the city. They have until March 10 to comply.

Income forms for three have already been sent out. Wards Four and Three went out in the order named. The large majority of these have been returned, but there are still some delinquents and action against them may be taken any day, according to assessment department officials.

No 1 ward remains untouched as yet.

There are inequalities in the income assessment measure, stated Commissioner Grant Monday, when he accepted a return from a man whose exemptions were much greater than his income.

"The exemption was intended to relieve the wage earner, but few wage earners receive $2,000, consequently they have no exemption. Another man may earn $2,800," pointed out Mr. Grant, "and having four children, he is entirely exempt, while the man earning $1,200 or $1,300 may have six children and must bring them up as best he can. But worst of all, the exemption the other man has increases the taxes on the man earning under $2,000."

REGRETS ADVISING DOUKHOBOR ACTION

Peter Veregin Apologizes For Theoretical Advocacy of Massacre.

PROTEST AGAINST TAXES

Christian Communists Claim Government Has Collected Exorbitant Revenues.

Nelson, B. C., Feb. 27.—(Canadian Press.)—Expressing the hope that he may escape lynching at the hands of the women of Canada for his theoretical advocacy of massacre of the Doukhobor children and aged, and pledging his influence against the throwing of children into the Columbia River, Peter Veregin, president of the Christian Community of Universal Brotherhood, the Doukhobor organization in Canada, has personally taken his pen in hand and written to the Daily News, giving his account of the astonishing movement which he sponsored.

Mr. Veregin apologizes to the Canadian public, especially the women, for his cruel expressions and states that the Doukhobors have been greatly surprised at the seriousness with which the letter of Manager Koftinoff, reporting the Doukhobor mass meeting at Brilliant, B. C., on the economic situation, has been taken. The Doukhobor chieftain gives an account of Thursday's interview between the officers of the Dominion and provincial police, and 3,000 Doukhobors at Brilliant, B. C., in question and answer form.

He states that the Doukhobor children are deprived of milk because all the milking cows were sold in 1920 to pay taxes and last year the fruit crop went for the same purpose. Collection of $4,000 in taxes from the community, he declares, "contradicts the king's law," the earnings of individual members all being far within the exemption limit.

Specifically, Mr. Veregin asks for a commission of inquiry and that the province reimburse the community for the roads it built, including a $30,000 bridge, which was the community's invested capital, and also that a loan of $50,000 be provided for irrigation.

of priests, artists, poets and sculptors, "those wonderful men of Italy. It is a wonder to me how some men have the nerve to speak of young Italians here as "dagos" and "hunkies."

Accomplished Great Work.

"All these agents did a mighty work for God. Let us admit it with no criticism. It is my opinion that the day has struck again, and history is to repeat itself by every day folks—corn beef and cabbage folks. If we cannot make an appeal to the men in the street, or who reads the newspapers 'Ichabod' is written on Christianity. We want a simple religion to function through folks.

"I want to say," concluded Mr. McIntosh, 'that no matter how many sermons you read in the newspapers you do not get an ideal." He urged his congregation to obtain this ideal in what he characterized as the only way—public worship. The service was in charge of boys of the congregation, and selections were rendered by the young people's orchestra.

OTTO F. SCHNEIDER PASSES

Respected Owen Sound Citizen Dies From Poisoning.

Special to London Advertiser.

Owen Sound, Feb. 27.—Otto F. Schneider, a highly-respected citizen of Owen ound, died Saturday evening as a result of poisoning. He was a lumber inspector for the North American Furniture Company here, and was regarded as one of the best employees of the company. He was at work as usual on Friday, but on Saturday he was not feeling well. A doctor was called, but it was then too late to save his life. Coroner Rutherford viewed the remains yesterday, and decided that an inquest was unnecessary. Mr. Schneider was in his usual health, and no reason for his action can be given. He was born in Bruce County 44 years ago. He leaves a wife and two small children.

Chicago, Feb. 27.—New high price records for the season were attained today in the wheat market, May delivery at the opening jumping within ½c of $1 50 per bushel, the goal to which bulls some time ago had directed their efforts. Corn and oats ascended with wheat to the highest prices yet this season. After opening unchanged to ⅞c up, the corn market scored moderate gains all around.

Oats started ¼c to 1½c higher, and later went further upgrade.

Life and Character Reading

FEBRUARY 27.

People of this birthdate have three formidable faults which they must try to conquer if they wish to be successful in life. These are worry, anxiety and a diseased imagination. Some of these people beat their hearts out with imagining fears, and are constantly expecting accidents and unpleasant tidings. This anxiety makes them prematurely old. These folks rarely ook for dishonesty; on the contrary, they are prone to trust everyone, and have too much confidence in the words and promises of those they love.

These Pisces people are always very magnetic, and there are some splendid healers to be found among them. Their one gift, which is peculiar and sacred, is the laying on of hands. In this beautiful work their great desire to help often causes them to give too much, and the consequence is to deplete and injure themselves.

Sheet metal workers, engineers and jewelers will find splendid assistants through using the Want Ads.

ROYAL BRIDE WILL PROMISE TO OBEY HUBBY

Princess Mary's Wedding Service To Follow Church of England Prayer Book Order.

PROVIDE FOR 2500 GUESTS

LONDON, Feb. 26.—(The Associated Press).—Although a daughter of Great Britain's sovereign, Princess Mary will promise to "obey" her husband when she is married to Viscount Lascelles in Westminster Abbey tomorrow. The wedding service will follow the Church of England prayer book order, but the "revised exhortation" will be used. This has received the sanction of church authorities. Its wording, in some particulars, is regarded as in better style than the old version.

Abbey authorities are finding themselves in the curious position of having no precedent for the forthcoming ceremonial. The last marriage of a child of a reigning monarch in this abbey, that of Edmund Crouchback, second son of Henry III., to Aveline of Lancaster, took place 653 years ago. The customs of that time are deemed inappropriate for today.

It is expected the arrangements for the ceremony will closely follow this order; the 2,500 guests will begin to arrive at 10 o'clock, so that all may be seated before 11. The king's gentlemen ushers will receive them, the foreign ambassadors and ministers being received by the master of ceremonies. Members of the royal family will arrive at about 11.10 o'clock, officers of the king's household conducting them to their seats.

Drive in Open Carriage.

At 11:15, Viscount Lascelles and his groomsmen will arrive. At the same time Princess Mary will leave Buckingham Palace in an open carriage, weather permitting, and, accompanied by the king, will drive by way of the Mall, Admiralty Arch, Whitehall and Parliament Square to the west door of the Abbey.

Five minutes before the arrival of the bride, which is timed for 11:30, the queen, accompanied probably by the Duke of York, will have reached the Abbey.

The order of the royal processions inside the abbey affords some idea of the spectacular side of the ceremony. The first will be that of the members of the royal family, led by the Queen-Mother Alexandra, who, it is expected, will have the Duke of Connaught for her escort. Then will come the procession of Queen Mary, escorted by the Duke of York and Prince Henry. The third procession will be that of the bridegroom and his attendants, and lastly will come Princess Mary on the arm of King George, followed by her bridesmaids.

Choir Will Lead.

The procession of the bride to the altar will be headed by the choir, and will include the gentlemen ushers, the state chamberlain, master of the household, Princess Mary, King George and the bridesmaids.

After the ceremony, for which Princess Mary will use a beautiful prayer book, specially printed and illuminated for the purpose, the register will be signed in the historic ancient chapel of Edward the Confessor.

The bride and bridegroom will leave the abbey by the west door, the king and queen following.

From the abbey, the viscount and "Her Royal Highness Princess Mary Viscountess Lascelles," as she will thenceforth be known, will drive by way of Parliament Square, Whitehall, Admiralty Arch and the Mall to Marlborough Gate, whence they will detour through St. James' street, Piccadilly, Hyde Park Corner and Constitution Hill to Buckingham Palace. There a private reception will be held.

No invitations for the wedding were sent to royalty abroad. Should members of foreign houses be visiting England at the time of the wedding, which is considered improbable, it is likely they will be bidden to the ceremony.

In addition to the king and queen, members of the royal family expected to be present at the abbey include Queen-Dowager Alexandra, Princess Victoria, the Princess Royal and her daughter Princess Maud, the Duke of Connaught and Lady Patricia Ramsay, the Duke of York and Prince Henry, Princess Alice and the Earl of Athlone, the Marquis and Marchioness of Cambridge, Princess Christian and her daughters, Princess Louise Duchess of Argyll and the Duchess of Albany.

Will Be Best Man.

Major Sir Victor Audley Mackenzie, D.S.O., of the Scots Guards, will be "best man." He entertained King George when Prince of Wales at his Scottish home, and was also an intimate friend of the late King Edward. He commanded a battalion in France, and was wounded in 1916.

Viscount Lascelles' brother, Edward Cecil Lascelles, was to have been groomsman, but he has not sufficiently recovered from an accident while in the hunting field some months ago to permit his attendance.

Eight bridesmaids will attend the princess. They are: Princess Maud, the king's niece; Lady Victoria Cambridge and Lady May Cambridge, two of the queen's nieces; Lady Rachel Cavendish, daughter of the Duke of Devonshire; Lady Doris Gordon-Lennox, daughter of the Earl of March; Lady Elizabeth Bowes-Lyon, daughter of the Earl of Strathmore; Lady Mary Thynne, daughter of the Marquis of Bath, and Lady Diana Bridgeman, daughter of the Earl of Bradford.

Their ages range from 14 to 28, and all of them are blondes except the latter two, who are brunettes.

The Earl and Lady Harewood, parents of Viscount Lascelles, arrived in London ten days before the date of the wedding.

Eager to Attend.

Authorities have been beseiged by all sorts of people eager to attend the ceremony, but it is stated that after the guests have been accommodated, very little space will be available for the public.

The grave of the unknown warrior is near the west door through which Princess Mary will enter the abbey. The aisle carpet will deviate so that it will not cross the grave.

The scheme of floral decorations at the abbey is to be quite simple in character. The decoration of the altar will consist of choice white blooms from the royal hothouses at Frogmore, with shrubs and flowering plants on either side.

The state apartments at Buckingham Palace are, however, to be lavishly decorated with flowers and plants for the subsequent family reception there.

The nave of the abbey has been closed to the general public for some days in order to permit of the erection of seats for more than 2,000 guests. Two great stands have arisen, one on each side of the nave. Along the broad path that lies between the bridal procession will pass.

Joint Choirs to Sing.

The joint choir of the chapel royal and the abbey, one hundred strong, will be assembled for the ceremony.

Workmen have replaced the 14th century stained-glass windows at the abbey, which were removed for safety during the air raids.

The Westminster council does not intend to decorate Parliament street for the wedding, as the government offices on either side of this thoroughfare will do all that is necessary by flying their own flags.

The intention is to concentrate on Parliament Square. A floral arch, bearing a greeting to the bride, may be placed at the entrance to Broad sanctuary, supported by columns twined with national flags, flowers and greenery.

Expect Delorme Will Get Secret Hearing on Murder Charge Tuesday

MONTREAL, Feb. 26.—The preliminary hearing of Rev. Adelard Delorme, who is charged with the murder of his half-brother, Raoul Delorme, whose body was found seven weeks ago with six bullet wounds in the head near Snowdon Junction, will take place on Tuesday, it is learned on the best of authority today.

The public will likely be excluded from the court rooms for the hearing. This, it is explained, is on account of the limited size of the court rooms, and the great number of the curious who are forever hanging around the court house. This crowd swells noticeably when any famous trial is on.

Orders have been issued to Sheriff Lemieux that Father Delorme is to be treated like any other prisoner. This means that he will have to journey to and from Bordeaux jail in the "Black Maria," which makes daily trips between the Montreal court house and Bordeaux jail. All classes of prisoners are brought in this car and the nationalities represented are legion.

In the event of enough evidence being presented by the crown, the presiding magistrate will commit Father Delorme to formally stand his trial before a jury on the murder charge. Should, in the opinion of the examining magistrate, there be not enough evidence to connect Father Delorme with the crime, he will be released from custody.

ROW 200 MILES WHEN SHIP SINKS

ST. JOHNS, Nfld., Feb. 26.—The crew of the Newfoundland fishing schooner Howard Parke, rowed 200 miles in an open boat after their vessel had foundered, and reached Barbadoes yesterday. Advices of their arrival received here today said the vessel had been driven far to the southward by contrary winds before she sprang a leak.

U. S. SENATE APPROVES THREE ARMS TREATIES

Pacific, Five-Power Naval and Submarine Pacts Win Favor of Washington.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 6.—The first step in pushing the world disarmament conference treaties through the United States Senate was accomplished Saturday when the foreign relations committee, meeting behind closed doors, ordered three of the seven pacts favorably reported to the Senate.

These were:

(1). The four-powered Pacific treaty, replacing the Anglo-Japanese alliance.

(2). The five-power naval treaty between the United States, Great Britain, France, Italy and Japan.

(3). The submarine and poison gas treaty between the same five powers, abolishing the use of gas in warfare and limiting the usages of submarines.

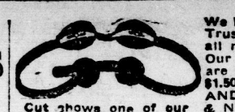

A compromises reservation to the Pacific treaty, agreed upon by President Harding was adopted by a vote of 10 to 3.

The vote to report the naval limitation and the submarine poison gas treaties was unanimous. No reservations were attached to them, the reservation to the Pacific treaty being the only one adopted.

The supplemental agreement to the Pacific treaty, taking the Japanese homeland out of it, was also unanimously ordered reported.

Senator Lodge announced that as soon as the Chinese treaties were ordered reported, which he expected would be done early next week, he would report all seven treaties together to the Senate.
