Are Relations Between United States and Turkey.

Constantinople, Nov. 28.—The relations between the United States government and the porte are becoming acute. Mr. Griscom, the American charge d'affaires, went to the Yildiz palace Sunday and had an interview with Tewfik Pasha, minister of for-eign affairs, and Tahsin Bey, first secretary of the palace. The Boer Rebellion-Kruger's Complaint About British Barbarism,

London, Nov. 28.—The Right Hon. Robert William Hanbury, President of the Board of Agriculture, addressing his constituents in Preston last evening, and referring to Mr. Kruger's complaint of "British barbarism," said:—"This is no time for paltaring with the delivery time for paltering with the dying embers of the Boer rebellion, for rebellion it now is, and it must be stampted out vigorously."

A BOER REFUGER

Talks About the British Generals-Boers Rare Kitche

New York, Nov. 27 .- "Commissary-General Simul Pearson, a Transvad refugee who arrived here yesterday, said during an interview, that Gen. Builder was by all odds the best of the Budde generals in South Africa. He added—If Roberts were taken out of command in South Africa the English army would mutiny to-morrow. They love him, but they hate Africa. The man most hated in South Africa, by the Boers, is Kitch-ener. There is not a man in our army who would not shoot him on sight. He is the man who butchered the negroes in the Soudan, and he would not give Botha half an hour at Colenso to take our women and child-ren away from the lines." "General" Pearson demed the characterization of their operations as guerilla war-fare, saying:—"we have always about 1,500 or 2,000 men and a train of baggage wagons. (The end of it all is they can never catch us." He considered Louis Botha the greatest man in the Boer army.'

The Chatham Boys Who Stayed to See

London, November 28. - Close upon three hundred officers and men of three hundred officers and men of the Royal Canadian Regiment of Infantry, including the commanding officer, Colonel Otter, will arrive at Southampton to-day on the Hawar-den Castle, from Cape Town. Along with the men from Canada, who have distinguished themselves with such marked credit, on the same vessel, are the celebrated and ever-consist. the celebrated and ever-popular Household Guards, and the two fine Household Guards, and the two fine bodies of soldiers, who have given their blood and their service to the Queen and the Empire in South Africa, will meet with a great reception when they debark at Southampton. A deputation of influential London citizens, headed by Lord Grey, one of the best friends possessed by the colonies, has been busy arranging to entertain the Canadians, and the program that is to be carried out is varied, and provides for plenty of entertainment for the home-coming soldiers.

By the Arrest of Two Men at Detroit Who Were Passing the Stolen Bills.

Detroit, Nov. 28. - The Dominion bank bills found on James Simpson, alias James Seaman, and Louis Matheis, who were arrested by Detectives Nies and Gill Monday night, and who were at first thought to be loaded with counterfeit money, are not counter-feits but are reported by the provincial police to be part of the $10,000 lot of unsigned notes stolen from the branch bank at Napanee, about three years bank at Napance, about three years ago.

The prisoners having waived extradition proceedings, were turned over to Provincial Officers Campeau and Mahony yesterday, and after appearing before Judge Bartlet at Windsor were locked up at the Sandwich jail. At the same time the Windsor authorities notified the bank of ficers at Napance of the arrest and the recovery of the bills. NITRO-GLYCERINE EXPLODED

Three Boys Killed and Fourteen In.

Wheeling, W. Va., Nov. 28.—At Leazerville, W. Va., twenty miles above Wheeling, on the Ohio river, a crowd of twenty boys had built a fire on the river bank from driftwood and were watching the rising waters. In a lot of driftwood one of the boys threw on the fire was a can partially filled with nitro-glycerine. Immediately there was a terrific explosion, and three boys were killed and fourteen wound-ed, of whom three may die.

THREATENING ENGLAND'S TRADE

The shipment of steel from Cleve land, Ohio, to England by water, using the St. Lawrence canal route, is a new departure, which may have most important results, as the shipment of Ohio coal to the Old Country by the same route is now being mooted. The first of the steamers carrying steel from the United States to the country which was once the especial home of steel manufacture to the exclusion of almost all other lands, has now come through our canals. It is the advance guard of a great fleet of the future. The steamers are partly loaded in Cleveland, and the balance of their cargo is placed in a barge which the steamer tows to Montreal, where, having passed through the canals, the barge load is transferred to the steamer, which then leaves for England. This marks a new epoch in the trade of the lake ports, and the experiment is being watched with no small interest by the world. A fleet of twenty or thirty steamers is being built for this business.

RURAL FREE DELIVERY.

The rural free delivery inaugurated in the United States and on tria there for the past three years is attracting much attention in Canada. The first assistant postmaster-general of the United States recently said of it::

"The carriers buy their own shoes and clothes, provide their own 'rigs' and horses, pay their own doctors' bills and vote as they please. Partisanship has been eliminated as far as

And the Toronto World further tells us that "The department merely regulates the pay of carriers and the length of proposed routes, having regard to the topography of the country and the condition of the roads through which the daily rounds of the rural postman are to be made. The pay of rural carriers is now fixed at $500 a year for full route and the length's of the routes average about 25 miles. Where the roads are exceptionally fine and level route may be 35 miles in length, and in a very rugged country, 17 miles is considered a good day's journey for the carrier.". Why not make a trial of this serwice in Canada?

SUASION, BUT NO COERCION.

The Planet is of unnecessary Sunday labor. So is the Lord's Day Alliance. Where we we differ is on this point-The Planet is satisfied to assert its views and leave the judgment to public opinion. The Lord's Day Alliance wants to bring its case into court and also be the judge. To be more explicit, a small number of conscientious and God-fearing people whose intentions are good have certain views. They want those views crystalized into a law which will govern a whole province, containing over two million inhabitants. A mere fraction want to think and legislate for the vast majority. No paper with democratic sentiments will ever consent to that. If the majority want to do wrong that is the country's misfortune. The remedy is to educate the people to the views of the minority. Then the minority will become the majority. But coercion by law should be avoided. In a campaign of education against . wide-open Sabbath, the Planet will cheerfully participate. In a campaign of coercion it must be counted out.

"CHIVALROUS AT THE CORE."

An appeal to the magnanimty of the British people in behalf of the Boers is made by the N. Y. Sun, and while i may surprise some that the Surishould concede the existence of the tribunal to which it makes the appeal, they must confess the good tactics of its editor, and all will join in acknowledging the skill with which he discharged ed his delicate trust. An elaborate and able article on Kruger's mission, deploring the vanity of any hope of helpfor the republics from France, any of the continental powers or even from America, is thus concluded by the

As Lord Rosebery has lately pointed but, Lord Liverpool confessed to Castlereah that the existance of Napoleon Banoparte in the island of Great Britain, even as a prisoner, would have been a peril to the Tory administration, in spite of its huge majority in the house of commons The fallen emperor, he said, would be an object, first, of curjosity, next, of compassion, and, eventually, of admiration and devotion. It is unquestionably true that the English though cold upon the surface, are large-hearted and chivalrous at the core. They are capable of splendid unselfishness and of heroic abnegation. No man familiar with their history can tell what might be the effect of Mr. Kruger's appeal to them through their beloved sovereign, especially if it were supported by the touching proof of confidence that his personal presence would afford. This prediction, at all events, we risk-that never would the

Our esteemed contemporary, Binner-News, will now perceive that the advice of this great family journal not to get hysterical over those King street extras was good. It lost a lot of sleep worrying over a thousand dollar claim which has now been settled for less than $400.

The Banner-News is pushing Mayor Smith's suggestion for a monument to Private Donegan. In that idea we think the citizens will heartily concur. The B.-N. further suggests, however, that it should be made a chool children's affair. There we are to raise the money it means that they will have to be let loose to pester their parents in particular, which is not so objectionable, and the citizens at large, which is, to raise the funds. Now, we have enough of this kind of thing for the various school entertninments. There is no use adding to the agony. There is quite mough patriotism in adult Chatham to erect this monument without making it a kindergarten production.

THE PRINCE OF WALES' INCOME.

Temple Magazine The truth is that from the moment of his birth the Prince of Wales has been splendidly rich. He was born, as the Irishman would say, with sixty thousand wear in his pocket, and from that day to this the Duchy of Cornwall has yielded him that magnificent sum. At 22 the Prince married, and parkament gave him Marlborough House and a wedding present of £40,000 a year. That, too, has come to him regularly since 1863, year in and year out. In 1889, when the Prince's family ran away with his money, parliament once more came to his aid and nearly doubled the grant he had received since 1863. From 1889 the Prince has been relieved of the anxieties of a father for the financial welfare of his children by a special grant of £36,000 a year, which comes to him in quarterly instalments of £9,000. So that the public income of the Prince is £136,000 a year. That is what it is worth to be Prince of

THREE OLD SAWS.

If the world seems cold to you Kindle fires to warm it!
Let their comfort hide from view.
Winters that deform it.
Hearts as frozen as your own
To that radiance gather;
You will soon forget to moan.
"Ah! the cheerless weather!"

If the world's a wilderness,
Go build houses in it!
Will it help your loneliness
On the winds to din it? Raise a hut, however slight; Weeds and brambles smother; And to roof and meal invite Some forlorner brother.

Smile till rainbows span it! Breathe the love that life endean Clear from clouds to fan it. Of your gladness lend a gleam Unto souls that shiver; them how dark Sorrow's stream Blend's with Hope's bright river!

Remarkable Old Chester and What is to be Seen There.

The Old Walled Town-A Visit to Eaton hall and Hawarden Castle.

In continuing the diary of his trip Do:tor McKeough gives a most interesting description of the ancient and famous city of Chester, once one of the most important places in England. The description of the trip is continued from Saturday last, and through the kindness of Dr. McKeough further instalments will be published at short Queen's Hotel, Chester, Sept. 15. As we passed up the Mersey early this morning we obtained a fine view of Liverpool and Birkenhead, with their imposing series of docks and immense shipping interests, which gives one a satisfied impression of England's principal seaport.

One of the last duties one is compelled to attend to before leaving one's steamer is to fee a number of the servants. The conventional tips are ten vants. The conventional tips are tell shillings (English) each to your bed-room and table steward, from five to ten to the deck steward, according to the amount of attention you have re-ceived, the same sum to your bath at-tendant and half a crown to boots, amounting in the aggregate to about fifteen dollars for two persons. For fifteen dollars for two persons. For one's own comfort and happiness it is better to conform to the usual habit or tipping in Europe, but if properly observed and judiciously bestowed it does not add greatly to expenses. The tip is offered only to serving people and therefore not to cashiers in hotels, managers in restaurants or clerks in shops, and is given for services rendered personally. When one learns that it is really a matter of simple justice to confer these little gifts—as waiters, porters and cabmen frequently depend entirely upon them for their livelihood—one should give these tips ungrudgingly and as a matthese tips ungrudgingly and as a matter of course.

We were not long in Liverpool. Passing the customs was a very formal affair. Tobacco seemed to be the only part of a man's outfit the officers took any interest in. In bidding good-bye to our fellow passengers we instead of acquaintances of a week's dish aristocratic mansion almost enduration. We also lothfully said goodbye for a time to Mr. and Mrs. Gray, who were proceeding to Scotland, Chester being our first objective point.

In a very short time after setting the surrounding park. In a very short time after setting foot on terra firma again we were in a Great Western Railway car on our way there. It was all accomplished so quickly and easily that we could so quickly and easily that we could scarcely comprehend we were in old England, but the beautiful country through which we passed soon brought us to a happy realization of the fact. All England seems a beautiful public park; the fields and trees have such an air of cultivation and perfection; the grass is so much greener, the lo-belias so much bluer and the gerani' ums so much redder than ours, and ums so much redder than ours, and the little hamlets with their pretty church spires here and there add much to the beauty of the scenery. Shortly after leaving Liverpool we pass rapidly through Port Sunlight, a very attractive, model village. The houses are all modern, artistic, clean and pleasant looking, and were built by Messrs. Lever for the people who work in their workshops and manufacture Sunlight soap.

AN ANCIENT CITY.

AN ANCHENT CITY. We were not long, however, in reaching our destination, the ancient reaching our destination, the ancient city of Chester, probably the most quaint and mediaeval looking town in England, with its long history co-eval with the 4th century. It is said to have been the last place in Britain quitted by the Romans, and also the last city that succumbed to Saxon rule. William the Conqueror gave the earldom of Chester to his nephew, Hugh Lupus, and a portion of the castle which the ancient earls built still remains. The old city is surrounded by a wall and a walk around the wall gives a visitor a good introduction to the city. and a walk around the wall gives a visitor a good introduction to the city. They were erected for its defence in remote ages and in no other city in Great Britain are the walls so entire and perfect as at Chester. The circuit of the walls is nearly two miles. The foot-path on the top is about four feet wide, from which admirable views of the city and country can be obtained. At various angles in the walls picturesque towers are built, which were formerly used as watch towers, and from one, known as Phoenix tower, the most interesting one remaining, Charles I: witnessed the defeat of his troops on Rawton Moor in 1645. At the foot of another tower is a little garden, beautifully kept, where are preserved a number of Roman remains, discovered at different times about the city. You get also excellent views of the cathedral and the ancient castle from the walls and several fine bridges crossing the Dec. One, the Grosvenor, a handsome, bold looking structure, makes our single span of two hundred feet look insignificant. The mills of the Dec, which have existed for upwards of eight hundred years, but which are now in a somewhat ruinous condition, are also from one, known as Phoenix tower, somewhat ruinous condition, are also

A UNIQUE FEATURE. The "Rows" are the most characteristic and unique feature of Chester, and we next made an inspection of them. Most of the houses are half timbered with ornamental gables of the sixteenth century, and they with the "Rows" render the streets, at once picturesque and curious. The Rows are continuous galleries or ar-cades occupying the first story of the house slining the streets, the ceiling of the ground floor forming the foot path while the upper stories form the roof. These covered passages are ap-proached from the street by flights of steps and contain a second row of proached from the street by flights of steps and contain a second row of shops similar to those underneath, there being a constant flow of pedestrians both below and above.

Some of the old timbered houses are specially singular and interesting. That known as God's Providence House bears the date 1652 and is so-called because when the plague devastated the city this was the only dwelling in which the inhabitants were immuned from the pestilence. Perhaps the most interesting house in Chester is that known as the Derby or Stanley Palace. It is said to be the oldest timbered house of importance in Chester, and was originally the town residence of the Derby family. The managers of the World's Fair endeavored to purchase it with the intention of to purchase it with the intention of taking it holus bolus to Chicago. The Earl of Derby, former governor-general of Canada, learning of the contemplated transaction, repurshase it himself from the Archaeological So ciety of Chester and it is now owner by him. The exterior of this build-ing is beautifully carved and orna-mented; portions of the interior are finely panelled, the ancient doors, bells and hinges are objects of interest. The room which was occupied by Charles the first, when a guest of the family, is pointed out, and one learns that ordinary mortals have more ca-pacious and better appartments now-a-days than kings had a few centuries ago. A subteranean passage leads from this building to the castle. We also visited St. John's church, originally built in 1076, ;No one visiting Chester should neglect seeing this beautiful specimen of early Norman architecture, so simple, yet so stately and impressive. Near the church is the "Anchorite's Cell," in which, according to tradition, King Harold lived as a hermit after the battle of Hastings, when he was wounded, and not killed as was generally supposed. We concluded our round of sightseeing in the ancient city by a visit to the Cathedral, which has been recently carefully restored. Our stay being somewhat limited, we had time simply to admire its beautiful proportions, the rich coloring, the handsome stained glass windows, some of the tracery and a few mosaics which have been recently added.

A FAMOUS PALACE.

In the afternoon, in company with an American lady and gentleman, who were associate passengers with us on the Campania, we drove to Eaton Hall. The drive through the park was charming. There can be nothing more beautiful in the world than a duke's park. The roads were perfect, the weather delightful, our company interesting, and the scenery incom-parable. The oaks, elms, and haw-thorns were all rich in foliage and symmetrical in form. Herds of deer scattered here and there over the deer scattered here and there over the lovely meadows added to the pictur-sequeness of the views, numbers of rabbits and richly feathered pheasants would run into the shrubbery as we passed along. As the palace is only four miles from Chester, we were not long in reaching it. Eaton is the chief seat of the Duke of Westminster. and is a stately and magnificent the surrounding park. In the centre of the great quadrangle in front of the palace trian statue in bronze of Hugh Lupus the Duke's ance ter and namesake, representing a rough age and rude vigor of character. The interior is fit-bted up most have silly and quite beyond my powers of description. It contains numerous modern paintings and Sculpture.
The library was particularly interesting to me with its many elegant and richly bound volumes. It contains a famous picbound volumes. It contains a famous pic-ture interesting to Canadians, "The death of General Wolfe" on the Heights of Abra-ham, 17th Sept., 1759, whose victory at that time resulted in the bringing of the whole of Canada under British rule. Wolfe, who had been previously wounded in the wrist, is dying, struck down by a musket ball in the breast, and is being supported by a sur-geon and an officer. The picture is of the highest historical interest. Below on a bracket are a cannon ball and fragment of a shell picked up on the battle field and prebracket are a cannon ball and fragment of a shell picked up on the battle field and presented by the Marquis of Lorne when Governor-General of Canada to the Duke of Westminister. This noble room is about one hundred feet in length. At one end is a large organ. The book cases are constructed of American walnut and the ceiling is decorated with elaborate moulded beams of the same wood. The gardens are most extensive, and at present the bloom is rich and magnificent. In company with my American friend we were admiring the view through one of the windows of the palace. I had noticed for the past few hours he had ceased comparing everything he saw to something much superior in the United States. Now as he gazed at the beautiful scene in front of us he characteristically remarked quite gravely, "I don't see why we can't have something like this in see why we can't have something like this in America; we have the money to get it." From Eaton Hall we continued our drive to Hawarden (pronounced Harden) formerly the residence of the late Right Hon. W. E. Gladstone, but now unoccupied. It is about four miles distance. Before reaching the house we drove through a most picturesque park, undulating hill and dale, wooded with those fine old trees, which the grand old man was so fond of exercising some of his surplus energy upon. Through this park ran some pretty streams with a cascade here and there. On one of the hills is seen the old castle, a massive looking circular ruin—near by is Hawarden church in which Mr. Gladstone occasionally read the lessons. Our near by is Hawarden church in which Mr. Gladstone occasionally read the lessons. Our return trip to Chester continued interesting. We passed through several little old English villages, with their quaint houses, pot shops, pretty and tidily kept gardens and picturesque churches, Shortly after returning to Chester we started for Leamington our next stopping place.

A BUNCH OF ROSES.

The world is good to her and gay Quite beyond reason. I fain some little gift would send

My heart, its every throb and beat And breath and motion,

But this, alas, I dare not do My yearning passion— n hope to make her fair eyes scan "romance of a poor young man"
In friendly fashion!

But there's one thing I can and may Accomplish this bright festal day While earth reposes In peace and joy. I may and will Send her, and bravely foot the bill, A bunch of roses.

She'll wear them in her bosom sweet,

Where they the gaze of men may meet-

Dude, sage and scholar— But, whatsoe'er be gained or lost, She'll never dream that they have cost My bottom dollar! Then go, dear flowers, and tell her that,

Since courtly Paris wooing sat
In Helen's bower;
Since bold Leander cleft the wave
(A shallop's hire, no doubt, to save) To Hero's tower; Since Romeo of grief expired

And Abelard to pray retired, Oh, tell her duly, No girl was loved clean out of sight As she is, morning, noon and night, By hers most truly.

The Soothing Mosquito. This story comes from Weldon: A guest at a hotel wanted to meet an early orning train, and in order to be on time he must be awake at 4 o'clock. Uncle Jerry Washington, a well known colored man, volunteered to call the gentleman in time. About half past 6 o'clock, two hours after the train had arrived. Uncle Jerry put in his appearance, and when questioned as to why he was late he said the mosquitoes were se bad he could not wake up. DIVISION COURT CASE

At the Division Court yesterday, be-fore His Honor, Judge Woods, the case of Carswell vs. Park occupied the at-tention of the court all day and the trial resulted in favor of Mr. Park.

The case was an action brought by James Carswell, architect, against Archibald Park, The plaintiff claimed a balance of $37 for commission for professional services in preparing plans and specifications for and superintending the erection of the defendant's new residence on Dufferin avenue. The plaintiff alleged a contract between the defendant and himself, one of the terms of which was that the plans and specifications were to be used for the house intended to be built only. In support of this con-tention, he brought to the attention of the jury a clause in the specifications to that effect. In addition to this, evi-dence was adduced to establish the fact that it is the custom and well-established rule, among architects, that plans and specifications, prepared by them, are to be returned to them,

The investigation into the claims reditors of the defunct Banner Printing Co. tinues to drag out its weary length before Master-in-Ordinary Hodgins at the court house. A large number of the claims, however, were disallowed by the ruling of the master to the effect that personal accounts against the late manager of the Banner, N. W. Ford, could not be considered in these proceedings and must be collected personally from the parties contracting them. A. C. Neff, the liquidator, gave evidence that after crediting Mr. Ford with the salary usually allowed and also all moneys turned in to the insolvent company, he was owing the company in round figures $4,500.

By the throwing out of the private claims at this court, the greater percentage of the accounts was gotten rid of and not a few were dropped by arrangement owing to small contra accounts for advertising, etc. The claims originally went into the hundreds and it is said that Robt. The rent claim occasioned a lengthy argument Mr. Kilmer, representing the liquidator alleged that it was settled in full by contra account given by Matthew Wilson, acting as a landford on the mortgage of Nelson Stringer, on August 11 last. This the landlord and late manager claimed was given conditionally on Mr. Ford being able to arrange matters in Toronto thereby and was afterwards cancelled and the contra account applied on a personal loan by Mr. Wilson to Mr. Ford of $600, which the latter testified was given upon personal security, but with the understanding that Mr. Wilson was to give the Banner all his advertising and job work and was to throw

Him up While at Church.

London, Nov. 28.—According to a special edition of the Evening Standard last (Tuesday) evening, a plot to assassinate Lord Roberts, in which twenty foreigners are concerned has been discovered. It appears that the conspirators laid a mine which was designed to be blown up on Sunday while Lord Roberts was in church at Johannesburg, but the police frustrated the conspiracy. Ten men, mostly Italians, have been arrested.

The War Office publishes the following despatch from Lord Roberts, dated Johannesburgh from Lord Roberts from Lord Rob natch from Lord Roberts, dated J nesburg, Nov. 26:—"As reports of a plot against my life will probably reach you. I think you should know the facts. It is my belief that there was a plot in existence and five Italians, four Greeks and a French man were arrested Nov. 16, and are now awaiting trial. Their intentions were to explode a mine under St. Mary's Church during morning service held at 11 o'clock on

Want of a Seaworthy Life Boat At Point Pelee

Has Terrible Results-At Least Eight Lives Lost by the Sinking of The Maumee Vailey.

Amherstburg, Nov. 28.-A heavily blown ashore near Point Pelee Sat urday and lay hard aground in a less condition. Her black hull was plainly visible from the shore oppoite until the weather became too thick, the high wind of Saturday drove her to the middle ground, but for a time her anchors held. Then the wind and pounding seas drove her upon and over the ground, her anchor picking up and breaking the telephone cable, thus destroying all communication between Pelee Island and the mainland. Saturday night the schooner began to settle, and Sunday morning her decks were out of sight and her cabin evidently washed away.

While there were fully fifty boats of various size in shelter here none of them dare attempt the work of rescue. The tug Home Rule went to ing, but Capt. Harkett could not get within two miles of the wreck. With his glass he could count what he believed to be eight men lashed in the upper rigging. He then tried to get the life saving crew to go out from Point Pelice but he was informed that there was no boat in condition to float in such a sea. Alt daylight in the morning many anxious watchers who had waited to see the spars of the wrecked schooner on the midde ground, saw no sign of the men who were supposed to have been lashed in the rigging. (The high sea which made it impossible to send help to the wrecked schooner had gone down considerably, and the weather will soon be such that a wrecking

The fact that there was no life sav ing boat fit to be sent out has created no end of fault finding with the Can-adian life saving system. The govadian life saving system. The government keeps no paid crews, as does the United States. Instead the government is supposed to furnish a boat and volunteers are picked up whenever a call is made for assistance. Because of there having been but little call for their luse, the life boats along this shore have been neglected, and when wanted in this instance the lone here was found to be in such a one here was found to be in such a condition that it meant death to any crew which might attempt to put out through the surf to the relief of the night. Arriving there Sunday morning, the sailors on the foundered vessel were discovered clinging to the rigging, the vessel having gone down in shallow water, and the masts stood above the surface of the lake. The water around the boat was shallow and a heavy sea was rolling, so that the Home Role could not be taken near enough to the wreck to help the men off. The Home Rule then went to the life-saving station at Point Pelee to get a boat, but the lifeboats all leaked like sieves when they were put in the water, and this plan had the begiven up. The weather was freezing cold, and it is thought the men were exhausted by cold, hunger, and exposure, and dropped into the water one by one during the last night, for when the tug returned to the spot to-day, they had all disappeared. No name can be seen on the boat, but from the description of the spars and rigging, the captain of the Home Rule thinks it must be the Maumee Valley. all leaked like sieves when they were

ALDERMEN. To the Electors of Chatham.

Ladies and Gentlemen: At the urgent request of several representative citizens, I have consented to offer myself as a candidate for alderman for 1901.

I would like your support. Yours, W. F. SMITH,

To the Electors of the City of Chatham.

Ladies and Gentlemen: It is my intention to again offer my services as Alderman for 1901.

I trust that my record as alderman during 1896 and 1897, and as chairman of the finance committee in the latter year is such as to entitle me to your confidence. If elected, I will, as before, strive to look after the city's interests to the best of my ability, and I respectfully solicit your support.

Where He Proposed to Marty

They were no longer very young, but they had an air of irresponsible happi-ness that made the drivers of the strange vehicles that ply in Jackson and com-pete for their favor. The man looked over the democratic wagons, wetorias and broughams that stand at the northern entrance of the park, while the various drivers fell upon him. They believed him to be a bridegroom, and the bridegroom is ever the victim of the designing ones of earth.

A young man who drove a prehistoric rictoria sidled up to them. "I always drive the new married folks," he said. "I'm just married myself. Guess you better take me." The woman smiled at the man. "Take him," she said. The driver looked even more knowing than before. "I can always spot 'em," he said. This amused the man and wom-an so much that they both laughed aloud as they climbed into the victoria.

Aside from its romantic associations the victoria had no recommendations.

The cushions seemed to be stuffed with railroad ballast, and the springs had long ago sunk under their burdens. The horses were discouraged old beasts that had forgotten they were ever colts. The only cheerful thing about the equipage was the driver. He beguiled the way with sprightly conversation.

After he had passed the Field museum

After he had passed the Field museum he turned to his clients, sitting on the back seat. "Love's a queer thing, isn't it?"

The man answered that he believed it "And the queerest thing about it that it makes you care more for one per-son than for another. You don't care if they have got freckles on their nose or can't cook or can't keep a tune. You don't love 'em because they're better looking or smarter or nicer than other folks. You hardly know how it starts either, but some day you wake up and feel that if you can't marry Mary you'll call the game off. At least that's the way I felt." He cast an inquiring glance at the back seat.

"And how did Mary feel?" the woman The driver straightened himself and gave a pat to his red necktie.
"Well," he said, "I'm not bragging, but Mary didn't let me go by. Still," he said, turning again, "I must say that it took her a long time to light. She changed her mind four or five times between me'n Joe Freeman."

He whipped the horses into a feeble burst of speed when he reached the road that runs along the beach. "Would you like to see the bench where I asked?" he The man expressed a polite willing ness to see the bench, and the woman ness to see the bench, and the woman laughed. "It makes it seem historic," she said. "It's like those places abroad where somebody was beheaded or somebody else was crowned."

"Yessum," the driver said, "it was on that bench that me'n Mary began making history, as the papers say. I won't ever forget how that measly old bench looked that Sunday afternoon. It's over there," He pointed to a road that branched off a bit further along. "Shall

I drive over?"
"By all means," the man said. "But you're taking this rig by the hour, you know?" the driver said cau tiously. "Oh, that's all right! Go ahead." The man looked at the woman and whisper ed, "It's worth while." The driver took them up a quiet ro and stopped close by an old ben.

"That's the very"— he began; then stopped dramatically. "That is not bench. It must have been moved down nearer the convent." Then began the search for where he had proposed to Mary. He said he knew it was somewhere in the park, and if they really wanted to see it would find it if it took all summer. "Our initials are cut on the seat," he said, "so I can't miss it."

The man told him to go ahead. They drove from one end of Jackson park to the other. The driver left his seat and examined many benches. The man and the woman sat on the cast iron cushions and encouraged him. The shadows lengthened and the golf players went home, while they still searched for the historic bench. They saw hundreds of benches that rese it, but the veritable one seemed to have disappeared from off the face of the

Certain Dogs When In Pain,

A foxhound, as every sportsman knows, if caught in a trap or suffering pain from an injury, is most dangerous to approach. Even if you assist him out of a difficulty -say, from a pit or hole where, but for you, he would probably be drowned—he will show his gratitude by biting you. Pointers, setters and spaniels, though not quite so ready with their teeth, will, under similar circumstances, bite not only strangers, but their own masters withou

The flat coated retriever is totally dissimilar in this respect and can be handled without the slightest risk. I have got them out of all sorts of difficulties and never once met with injury. In do and never once met with injury. In doing so you may fearlessly let their head rest on your shoulder or lie against your face. Quite recently a valuable dog of mine got hung up in a wire fence, and a dislocation of the stifle or some serious injury seemed imminent. Running up, I lifted him bodily, struggling and terrified as he was, yet the idea of biting occurred neither to the helper nor the helped.—

Its' Your Nerves.

It's the Condition of Your Nerves That Either Makes Your Life a Round of Pleasure or a Useless Burden.

To many women life is one round of sickness, weakness and ill health. To attempt even the lightest household duties fatigues them. Many of the symptoms accompanying this state of decline are: a feeling of tiredness, waking, faintness, dizziness, sinking feeling. palpitation of the heart, shortness of breath, loss of appetite, cold hands and feet, headache, dark circ'es under the eyes, pain in the back and side and all other accompaniments of a run down and weakene doonstitution.

All these symptoms and conditions are simply the result of a poor qual-ity and defective circulation of the blood, with a wasting away of the nerve forces.

By feeding the system with

And a little after that all four of the And a little after that all four of the babies were kicking their fat little legs on a shawl spread on the neat little Branhild lawn. And it turned out that after all there was nothing haughty about the mother of the brown eyed babies any more than there was about the mother of the blue eyed babies, or about little Mrs. Branhild herself, for that matter.

The shawl on the lawn is now almost regular afternoon institution. You can see it any time you may happen to go down the street, with the two mothers and Mrs. Branhild in attitudes of adoraand Mrs. brannes in attention at the edges, while Uncle Fred smokes his pipe on the porch and looks benevolently down on them. Nevertheless, there was no infantile dis-order for which the little woman did not have a sovereign remedy, and her diagno-ses were unerring. She could talk the language that babies understand with a fluency and expression that mothers of six might have envied, and the most obstreperous little brats that ever murder-ed midnight sleep would, under her gen-tle ministrations, become simply cheru-

Mr. Branhild was interested in the twins simply because they would have in-terested anybody. As they were wheeled fresh, plump and enticing as two pink cherries on a stalk, the most chronic misanthrope would have felt an impulse to arrest their progress until be should to arrest their progress until he should have pinched their soft, round cheeks and coaxed the dimpled fingers into clinging touch of his. They were dark eyed twins, with quite a profusion of soft brown hair, considering their age, and the girlish looking woman who wheeled them had the same eyes and hair. They always passed at about the same hour in the afternoon, and they never came back the same way.

"I wish I knew who she was." said Mrs. Branhild to her husband one evening. "She looks so dignified I'm afraid to speak to her, but I must hold those dear little things if I have to put a tollgate across the sidewalk. Aren't they dear,

HUMOR GERMS HE WON THE REWARD

The Dutch settlement of Zwart Kon in South Africa was all in a stir of excitement; and on every side there was nothing to be heard but "De spook

HE WON THE REWARD

The Dutch settlement of Zwart Kop in South Africa was all in a stir of excitement; and on every side there was nothing to be heard but "De spook leven!" (the ghost-lion).

That it must be killed every one agreed, but how and by whom was not so easily settled. If it was a ghost-lion, guns would be useless, traps were equal-ly useless, and there seemed nothing that could be done to stop the pest unless it was to frighten it away, and how to do that was a question not easily

Many of the settlers really thought that it was a ghost, and one or two who had fired at it and missed it loudly declared that if it had been a mortal creature their bullets must have brought it down. So, whenever people talked of the large reward offered for the killing of the troublesome lion, these fellows would look knowingly at each other, and say:

"Wait a bit! The man who wants that reward has got to earn it first." Whenever two or three farmers met, there was sure to be some talk of the lion and his misdeeds. One man had lost a fine ox, another a valuable dog, a third had almost been eaten up him self. And at last, early one morning, a Hottentot herdsman came into the village with a story that made every one look grave.

He and another native had been watching some cattle not far from the village itself, and about midnight he had lain down to sleep, it being his comrade's turn to stand on guard. Pre-sently he was awakened by a strange loise. He called out, but the noise had ceased, and all was silent. He shouted to his comrade, but there was no answer. Then a sudden horror fell upon him and he ran away into the bush and climbed a tree, where he remained all night. When he returned to the fatal spot, at daybreak, there was no trace of the lost man but a few shreds of the sheepskin cloak and a pool of blood. When this news got abroad, levery one began to look rather uncomfortable, and those who had declared the lion to be a something more than an ordinary wild beast were seen to nod their heads meaningly.

"This won't do," cried a sturdy farmeaningly. mer: "we shall have him coming right into the village next, and eating us up

"Well, if he does," rejoined a hard-faced old Dutchman with iron-gray hair, taking a big silver-mouthed pipe one by one." out of his mouth as he spoke, "I only hope he'll begin with that black bull of mine."

At this there was a general laugh;
for Mynheer Van Ripper's bull was well known throughout the entire settlement -and many people were almost as much afraid of it as of the lion himself. Afraid of it as of the lion himself.

It was a huge, black, savage brute, with horns long and sharp enough to have bored a full-grown buffalo; and the story went that it had once bunted Mynheer Van Ripper himself right across his own pasture land, and finally driven him was a store to the line with the line was the land. driven him up a tree, where he had to sit quaking for more than an hour, with the bull pawing and bellowing below, servants came to the rescue.

"Well, neighbor Hans," said one his friends, "why don't you shoot that rascal of a bull of your, and have done

"Ah, it is easy to say 'shoot?" " replied Van Ripper. "But while the beast is alive, look you, he may always be worth something, and when he is dead he is worth nothing at all. No, I will not shoot him just yet." Now, there was one man there who had laid carefully to heart the fate of the poor Hottentot killed by the lion, and that one was a Bushman, Black Klass by name, who was one of Far mer Van Ripper's servants. It happened to be his turn to keep watch that night over the herd, in which was the vicious bull, and this herd grazed in the meadow a good way from the village, just the sort of place where the l'on might be expected to make his appear

But, whether the lion came or Klass was determined to be on the safe side. As soon as it grew dark he climb ed a tree, and fixed himself snugly in the fork, so that he might not slip down even if he happened to fall asleep which there was not much chance of

It was a black and dismal night Even when the moon rose, the clouds made her light little better that total darkness. At first all was deathly still, but presently the savage's quick car caught a rustle among the bushes below, which was quite enough for True, it might be only a stray or but the Bushman thought otherwise, and the next moment showed that he was right. The moon broke through the clouds, and revealed the long, gaunt body, tawny skin, and huge, shaggy head of the shost-lien.

Klass instantly gave the alarm, with a screech loud and car-splitting enough to awaken everybody within half a mile. It was answered by a deep hourse bellow of rage from the black bull, which stood pawing the earth in the open part of the meadow. As the lien sprang at him, with a rear that shook the air, the moon plung-ed behind the clouds once more, but the growling, snorting and gasping rose up through the gloom showed the fight was a fierce one.

The herder's cries had arous people in the settlement, and the men rushed to the meadow, while the women huddled together in the houses. The hardy settlers were determined to prove whether or not the beast was really ghost or not, and if not were prepared to rid themselves of it if at all possible. "This way!" shouted Mynheer Van Ripper's well- known voice, as he and a dozen of his men came up, with guns and torches. "Ha, what's this?" The red torchlight fell upon a vast,

The red torchlight red upon a valt, confused mass of black and yellow, lying quite still. The death-grapple was ended. The lion's powerful jaws had broken the bull's neck, but as he sprang, the terrible horn had pierced through his side to the very heart. "Did I not do well not to shoot that bull?" cried Van Ripper, with a fat chuckle. "Now we are rid of both lion and bull, and, as it was my bull that killed the lion, I ought to get the re-

THE MOULTING SEASON

No Other Time of the Year Do Hen The most critical period of a hen's The most critical period of a hen's life is during the moulting season, from July to December. It takes biddy about 100 days to take off her old coat and put on a new one. Some commence moulting much sooner than others and get through long before winter sets in. This is very desirable, as hens seldom lay during the moult, or the larger part of it; therefore if they commence early it wills fore if they commence early it will be a decided gain, for then they could be a decided gain, for then they could be got in a laying condition before cold weather. If this is not done they will pass the winter without amounting to anything as layers. The feathers are composed largely of nitrogen and mineral matter. The first process is the locening stage. first process is the loosening stage, when the feathers loosen and drop out, at times leaving the bird almost naked, and exposing the body to the influencee of the weather. Should they be late in moulting they should be carefully housed during cold, damp weather. When the new feathers begin to come in it causes a great drain upon the hen's system. The foods best adapted to the season are the nitrogenous foods such as grass bugs, worms, clover, meat, etc. At this period the hens should have unlimited range, sa that they can gather a good supply of such articles as they need.

During this period it may be well to add a tonic to the drinking. water. A tea made of white oak bark is good. Add enough to color, the water. Some time before the moulting season the hens should be fed up and put in good condition, for poor hens are usually slow at moulting. Give them in addition to the regular soft feed linseed meal, cottonseed meal, fresh meat and fresh cut bone. The object is to supply the fowls with feather forming material. Keep this up through the entire moulting season. If the fowls are too fat withhold the grain and their fat will diminish. Their sys-tem cannot be at prime if too fat. Oats may be used sparingly and bran will be found excellent. Above all things rid the fowls of lice. It is impossible for a hen to renew coat rapidly and run a boarding house for parasites besides. Should any be late in moulting, it would be well to kill or sell them, for, if they are not through in time to lay in the winter season, they will be a dead expense. (All hens should be entirely through by December. Some fowls seem to lose their feathers in a few days, while others drag along all through the moult. This is largely due to greater or less degree of temperature of the fowl's body. The hearty eating warm blooded bird is the first one to moult. Wire N ails and Old Nails. Careful experiments are said to show that, first, cut nails are superior to wire nails in all positions; second, the main advantage of the wire nail is due to its possessing a sharp point; third, if cut nails were pointed, they would be 30 per cent more efficient in direct tension; fourth wire nails without points have but one-half their ordinary holding power; filth, the surface of the nail should be slightly rough, but not barbed. Barbing decreases the effiefficiency of cut nails about 32 per The pointed end enables the nail to enter wood without breaking its fibre excessively, thus preserving its grip. A serious defect of wire nails is their readiness to rust. They are made generally of a sort of soft steel, and steel rusts more readily than some other forms of iron. In parts of the country, it is said, shingles put on with wire nails drop off after six or eight years.—Baltimore Sun.

Taste in Presents. "Some people, men especially, ac quire reputations for excellent taste in selecting presents, when in reality they haven't the slightest ides what is being sent," said a salesman in a fashionable street jewelry store. They just don't want to be bothered with making a selection them selves. Several regular customers who have accounts here invariably come to me when they receive wedding invitations or have to give presents of any kind, and tell me to use my own judgment in making a selec-tion. Of course, they tell me how much they want to spend, give me the name and address, together with a cord to be enclosed, and go about their business. They haven't the slightest idea of what their gift is until they receive a note of thanks. -Philadelphia Record.

Origin of the Chinese Queue.

The custom of Chinamen wearing pigtails is not ancient, considering the period that China has existed as a nation. It dates from 1627, when the Manchus, who then commenced the conquest of the celestial empire, enforced this fashion of doing the hair as a sign of degradation. The average quein is three feet long save average queue is three feet long, says the Golden Penny, and, reasoning that the adult Chinamen number 200,000,000,000, we get a united pigtait measuring 113,636 miles long, sufficient to go four and a half times round the earth!

A Wicked Whip.

The sjambok, which is frequently nentioned in despatches from Africa, is a long whip, made from rhinocerous hide, and polished till it looks almost like amber. It is very tough and durable, and is used 'by the Boers upon animals and natives, and also for the chastisement of cri-The crack of the sjambok minals. The crack of the sounds like a pistol shot wice Paised but Again Resumed by the Boers-A Heroic Little Garrison.

Cape Town, Nov. 27.—The resident correspondent of the Cape Times at Schweizer Reneke, in the Western Transvaal, sends details of the siege of that township by 1,250 Boers, under Commandant De Beer, which commenced at the beginning of August and was still in operation when the despatch left on November 17. The garrison consists of 250 men, under Colonel Chanier. The troops comprise garrison consists of 250 men, under Colonel Chanier. The troops comprise drafts from the Royal Artillery, Somersets, Scottish Fusiliers, East Lancashires, Yeomanry and Cape Police, with two five-inch guns. The garrison was rationed for 35 days, but had cattle sufficient to last till Christmas. Colonel Chanier erected splendid de-Colonel Chanier erected splendid de fences, and the whole place was pro-tected by a six-foot wall with gun-turrets. Colonel Settle called at Schweizer Reneke a month ago, when the Boers fled. He continued his march to Christiana five days later, when the siege was renewed. Fighting had taken place every day, but the walls afford splendid protection, and the defenders had only one killed and two wounded. The Boers twice demanded the surrender of the twice demanded the surrender of the garrison, but it was scornfully rejected. The enemy once seized the native village, three and a quarter miles distant, but Colonel Chanier ousted them immediately. The Boers are looting the district. The correspondent, Mr. Salomon, who owns a store a few miles distant, says the Boers burned the place at midnight while his wife and children were in bed, and they had a narrow escape from suffocation. The garrison will hold out at whatever cost, but Lord Methuen and Col. Settle are supposed Methuen and Col. Settle are supposed to be within a few days' march. The siege, or rather the loose in-vestment, of Schweizer Reneke by the Boers, is one of the oddest incidents of the war. The village, which is in the Transvaal, thirty-six miles from Vryburg, first attracted the notice of enemy at the beginning of Sep-aber. On September 22 it was announced that the garrison had been relieved by Colonel Settle. With the departure of the relieving force the departure of the relieving force the investment (was resumed, only to be interrupted again a month ago by a second visit from Colonel Settle. He appears to have made only a short stay, and his retirement was the signal for the Boers to return to the attack. Their tactics appear to resemble those of the Greeks during the siege of Troy, and to be characterized by the same want of method. The siege of Schweizer Reneke may last, at this rate, till the end of the war.

West Lorne, Nov. 28 .- A terrible accident happened on the town line, about three miles east of the village, on Saturday afternoon, as a result of which a fifteen-year-old lad, named Calcott, will, in all probability, lose his life. The Calcotts were cutting wood upon the farm of Mr. Jas. Ross, and the afternoon being rather stormy, work was abandoned, and the boy prepared to go out for a hunt. It seems that the boy stopped to rest, leaning upon the muzzle of the gun, the but being placed upon a log, when the weapon, slipping off, discharged, nearly blowing off his entire shoulder. A doctor was hastily summoned, and it was found necessary to amputate the arm This lad still lives, but he is in a very precarious about three miles east of the village, lives, but he is in a very precarious state, the physicians having no hope whatever of his recovery.

ABOUT HEART DISEASE.

From Poor Digestion.

Real organic heart trouble is incur-

Real organic heart trouble is incurable, but scarcely one case in a hundred is organic.

The action of the heart and stomach are both controlled by the same great nerves, the sympathetic and pneumogastric and when the stomach fails to properly digest the food and it lies in in the stomach fermenting, gases are formed, which distend the organ causing pressure on the heart and lungs. ing pressure on the heart and lungs, causing palpitation, irregularity and shortness of breath.

The danger from this condition is that the continued disturbance of the heart sooner or later may cause real organic heart trouble and in fact frequently does so. Furthermore, poor digestion makes the blood thin and watery, and defi-ficient in red corpuscles, and this fur-ther critates and weakens the heart.

The most sensible thing to do for heart trouble is to insure the digestion and assimilation of the food. This can be done by the regular use after meals of safe, pleasant and effective digestive preparation, like Stu-art's Dyspepsia Tablets, which may be art's Dyspepsia Tablets, which may be found at most drug stores, and which contain the necessary digestive elements in a pheasant, convenient form.
